VEGETINE
—WILL CURE—
SCROFULA,
Scrofulous Humor.
VEGETINE will eradicate from the system every taint of Scrofula and Scrofulous Humor. It has permanently cured thousands in Boston, and vicinity, who had been long and painful sufferers.
The marvelous effect of VEGETINE in case of Cancer and Scrofulous Humor challenges the most profound attention of the medical faculty. Many specimens are prescribing VEGETINE to their patients.
Cancer, Cancerous Humor.
The marvelous effect of VEGETINE in case of Cancer and Scrofulous Humor challenges the most profound attention of the medical faculty. Many specimens are prescribing VEGETINE to their patients.
Cancer.
VEGETINE has never failed to cure the most intractable case of Cancer.
Mercurial Diseases.
The VEGETINE meets with wonderful success in the cure of this class of diseases.
Salt Rheum.
Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, &c., will certainly yield to the great alterative effect of VEGETINE.
Erysipelas.
VEGETINE has never failed to cure the most intractable case of Erysipelas.
Pimples and Humors on the Face.
Reason should teach us that a blotchy, rough, or pimply skin depends entirely upon an internal cause, and no outward application can ever cure the defect. VEGETINE is the great blood purifier.
Tumors, Ulcers, or Old Sores
Are caused by an impure state of the blood. Cleanse the blood with VEGETINE, and these complaints will disappear.
Catarrh.
For this complaint the only substantial benefit can be obtained by VEGETINE. It is the great blood purifier.
Constipation.
VEGETINE does not act as a cathartic, to debilitate the bowels, but cleanses all the organs, enabling each to perform the functions devolving upon them.
Piles.
VEGETINE has restored thousands to health who have been long and painful sufferers.
Dyspepsia.
If VEGETINE taken regularly, according to directions, a certain and speedy cure will follow its use.
Faintness at the Stomach.
VEGETINE is not a stimulating bitter, which creates a febrile appetite, but a gentle tonic, which assists nature to restore the stomach to a healthy condition.
Female Weakness.
VEGETINE acts directly upon the causes of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the whole system, acts upon the secretive organs, and always inflammation.
General Debility.
In this complaint the good effects of the VEGETINE are realized immediately after commencing to take it, as debility denotes deficiency of the blood, and VEGETINE acts directly upon the blood.

Selected Literature.
A CURE FOR MOTHS.
We were examining our wardrobe after the summer and found, to our surprise and grief, many of our clothes in a state of decay, and aged by the moths. In the midst of our trouble and the discussion as to the modes of protection against moths, one of our friends handed down by tradition, Aunt Julia's case in. "Aunt Julia, how do you keep your winter clothing from the moths?" We both asked eagerly, as that old lady proceeded to lay aside her handsome shawl, which looked as fresh as ever after seven years' wear.
"I used to suffer from moths as much as any one," replied Aunt Julia, taking her knitting from her little basket and sitting down, "but I found a recipe in an old-fashioned book, which has relieved me of much suffering on the subject. It was many years before I could be persuaded to try it. In my young days, money was not quite so plentiful as now, but provisions were cheap, and a farmer's daughter began her married life better supplied with linen, blankets and bed-quilts than many a jewel-decked city belle. As I was an only daughter and was not married too young, a noble pile of blankets, feather-beds, bed-quilts, &c., became my portion. For many years after we removed to the city I used to dream my summer work of airing beds and packing home-made blankets and quilts stuffed with the softest down. I tried stuff, tobacco, camphor, pepper and cedar chips and yet, as we changed our place of residence several times, some colony of moths, old squatters among the beams of the garret or in some unobserved scrap of woolen cloth, would encamp on my choicest possessions."
"Why, Aunt Julia, I thought you had a cedar chest."
"Yes, when we moved into our new house; but by that time my closet was too small for my increased wealth, and till I used this recipe I seldom passed a year without some moth holes; but now I have not seen one in nine years."
"What was it, aunt? Have you the book—or can you repeat it from memory?" It is too late to save these things, but I will write it down and try it next spring." So saying, Aunt Julia took out her little recipe book and pencil, while Aunt Julia prepared to recall the moth preventive.
"The book was an old one with the title obliterated and the title-page torn out by some careless child; but the directions were these:

"Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moths and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal. But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt and where thieves do not break through and steal."
"O, Aunt Julia, is that all?" How does that help the matter?"
"Wait, Anna, and hear my story out. One day, as I was mending over my choicest blankets, eaten by the moths, and airing my down bed-quilt and feather beds, which had been rendered obsolete by the introduction of spring mattresses—as I stood ready to try with vexation to see my choicest articles eaten in the most conspicuous places, as you have experienced to-day—my eye rested on an old Bible, which lay on the top of a barrel of pamphlets in the garret. I opened it and almost unconsciously read the recipe for avoiding moths which I have given you to-day. I then recollected that they seldom troubled the clothing in frequent use, and that the articles which caused me so much care were not needed twice a year. I then thought of Sophy Baxter, with her large family in the garret, and an old-fashioned 'coverlid' that very day; and two more blankets I despatched to a poor old rheumatic neighbor whose destitution had never occurred to me before. I then began to breathe freely, and before another week two more blankets were gone to comfort tired limbs and aching hearts. The cast-off coats, cloaks and shawls, and pieces of carpeting which had long lain in my garret, were given to the deserving poor. A bag of woollen stockings and socks which I had been saving for my dear little son, were sent to a charity institution, never again to become a temptation to the moths. I inquired particularly the next year and found the beds and blankets in such excellent preservation that I cheerfully laid out more of my surplus property 'in heaven' and out of the way of moth nibbles. The Bible doth and trunks hold all I wish to preserve, and when they begin to run over, I commit more articles to the keeping of my widowed and fatherless acquaintances.
"But, Aunt Julia, yours is a peculiar case. You had the home-made outfit of a rich farmer's daughter and could not expect to make use of it; but I do not think I can encourage you to waste your goods extravagantly."
"I do think the Bible leads to what is called the extravagant side. The content of the chapter following the verse which I have quoted gives little encouragement to much forethought, either in food or raiment, and in another place says, 'He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none.' This rule leaves very little to pack away in cedar chests. In my opinion, God's Providence is far from encouraging extensive accumulation either of money or of possessions, especially among Christians. Fire and flood, drought, mildew and moth, stand ready to rebuke that spirit of covetousness which the Lord abhorreth."
"Surely, Aunt Julia, you wouldn't have me give away the new furs you gave me yourself last winter?"
"No, my child; but let us examine for a moment this moth-eaten pile. Here are three coats of your husband's which he never could wear again."
"Those are for fishing, aunt."
"How many does he fish?"
"Once in four or five years, perhaps," said Anna.
"Well, here is a bag of outgrown, shrunken socks and stockings and these old pieces of Adie's and these overcoats of the boys that I heard you say were unfit for wear, even in the playground; and besides, I think you remarked that the whole difficulty consisted in an old carpet which had been harboring moths many years, when it might have been out of harm's way upon some poor widow's floor."
"Well, aunt, I believe you are half right."
"Try my rule, Anna; not after your property is ruined, but when you find your case in the Bible at the risk of sending some of your treasure to heaven before you have obtained all you could from its use. Many an old garment have I known to be infested with moths, and I have seen many a pair of valuable articles, when the whole evil might be traced to an old coat or carpet selfishly or carelessly thrown away by the poor. Wait even until the next day of my account. We are God's stewards, and our luxuries are not given us to feed a covetousness which is idolatry, but are talents which may be increased ten times before the great day of our account. When people ask me how to prevent moths, I always long to say, 'Lay up your treasures in heaven;' because I have learned from experience, it is a sure and convenient way."
"Well, aunt, I own I never thought much about it before as a matter of Christian duty. I will try, before another year, to confine my care to the articles I need, and shall hope for better success."
The War Correspondent.

A Chat with Mr. Archibald Forbes on his Experience in many Campaigns.
(From the New York World.)
Mr. Archibald Forbes, the famous war correspondent of the London Daily News, was greeted by a World reporter aboard the human steamer City of Richmond at Quarantine at New York, and the following conversation took place:
"The steamer's deck, as she made her way to the pier, about his experiences in the field and the plaus for his lecture season. Mr. Forbes is of the middle height, with a strongly built and erect figure. His face is so youthful that, notwithstanding the gray in his short-cropped hair and heavy mustache, one at first would guess his age to be ten years under forty-two, and, on further scrutiny and a second gaze, at still less. Everything about him is strikingly suggestive of muscular force and decided will, and that his career has been remarkable for energy and enterprise will surprise no one who sees him."
"Have you never before been in New York?"
"No; that is, only a few minutes—a day or so. When I was twenty-one years old I left Canada to return to England, and then I came by way of

New York. That was twenty-one years ago. I came to America when a wild young fellow. I had some means, and I said that I was going to settle down in New York, and grow up with my new home, and that sort of thing. But I was thinking at my heart only of my pleasure, and I had been only a little while in Montreal and had not yet had time to get settled here, you see, was not under such critical conditions as this one. On my return to England I enlisted in a regiment of dragoons as a private."
"Did you rise to the commission?"
"No, I became a non-commissioned officer, but tried to go no higher. I might have succeeded had I made the effort. I turned my attention to other things."
"How did you happen to become a correspondent?"
"My literary work began while I was in the dragoons. I had written a few stories and fugitive pieces were published in the Cornhill Magazine, of which Thackeray was the editor, and I was asked to contribute to it. I was sent to a charity institution, never again to become a temptation to the moths. I inquired particularly the next year and found the beds and blankets in such excellent preservation that I cheerfully laid out more of my surplus property 'in heaven' and out of the way of moth nibbles. "But, Aunt Julia, yours is a peculiar case. You had the home-made outfit of a rich farmer's daughter and could not expect to make use of it; but I do not think I can encourage you to waste your goods extravagantly."
"I do think the Bible leads to what is called the extravagant side. The content of the chapter following the verse which I have quoted gives little encouragement to much forethought, either in food or raiment, and in another place says, 'He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none.' This rule leaves very little to pack away in cedar chests. In my opinion, God's Providence is far from encouraging extensive accumulation either of money or of possessions, especially among Christians. Fire and flood, drought, mildew and moth, stand ready to rebuke that spirit of covetousness which the Lord abhorreth."
"Surely, Aunt Julia, you wouldn't have me give away the new furs you gave me yourself last winter?"
"No, my child; but let us examine for a moment this moth-eaten pile. Here are three coats of your husband's which he never could wear again."
"Those are for fishing, aunt."
"How many does he fish?"
"Once in four or five years, perhaps," said Anna.
"Well, here is a bag of outgrown, shrunken socks and stockings and these old pieces of Adie's and these overcoats of the boys that I heard you say were unfit for wear, even in the playground; and besides, I think you remarked that the whole difficulty consisted in an old carpet which had been harboring moths many years, when it might have been out of harm's way upon some poor widow's floor."
"Well, aunt, I believe you are half right."
"Try my rule, Anna; not after your property is ruined, but when you find your case in the Bible at the risk of sending some of your treasure to heaven before you have obtained all you could from its use. Many an old garment have I known to be infested with moths, and I have seen many a pair of valuable articles, when the whole evil might be traced to an old coat or carpet selfishly or carelessly thrown away by the poor. Wait even until the next day of my account. We are God's stewards, and our luxuries are not given us to feed a covetousness which is idolatry, but are talents which may be increased ten times before the great day of our account. When people ask me how to prevent moths, I always long to say, 'Lay up your treasures in heaven;' because I have learned from experience, it is a sure and convenient way."
"Well, aunt, I own I never thought much about it before as a matter of Christian duty. I will try, before another year, to confine my care to the articles I need, and shall hope for better success."
The War Correspondent.

A Chat with Mr. Archibald Forbes on his Experience in many Campaigns.
(From the New York World.)
Mr. Archibald Forbes, the famous war correspondent of the London Daily News, was greeted by a World reporter aboard the human steamer City of Richmond at Quarantine at New York, and the following conversation took place:
"The steamer's deck, as she made her way to the pier, about his experiences in the field and the plaus for his lecture season. Mr. Forbes is of the middle height, with a strongly built and erect figure. His face is so youthful that, notwithstanding the gray in his short-cropped hair and heavy mustache, one at first would guess his age to be ten years under forty-two, and, on further scrutiny and a second gaze, at still less. Everything about him is strikingly suggestive of muscular force and decided will, and that his career has been remarkable for energy and enterprise will surprise no one who sees him."
"Have you never before been in New York?"
"No; that is, only a few minutes—a day or so. When I was twenty-one years old I left Canada to return to England, and then I came by way of

New York. That was twenty-one years ago. I came to America when a wild young fellow. I had some means, and I said that I was going to settle down in New York, and grow up with my new home, and that sort of thing. But I was thinking at my heart only of my pleasure, and I had been only a little while in Montreal and had not yet had time to get settled here, you see, was not under such critical conditions as this one. On my return to England I enlisted in a regiment of dragoons as a private."
"Did you rise to the commission?"
"No, I became a non-commissioned officer, but tried to go no higher. I might have succeeded had I made the effort. I turned my attention to other things."
"How did you happen to become a correspondent?"
"My literary work began while I was in the dragoons. I had written a few stories and fugitive pieces were published in the Cornhill Magazine, of which Thackeray was the editor, and I was asked to contribute to it. I was sent to a charity institution, never again to become a temptation to the moths. I inquired particularly the next year and found the beds and blankets in such excellent preservation that I cheerfully laid out more of my surplus property 'in heaven' and out of the way of moth nibbles. The Bible doth and trunks hold all I wish to preserve, and when they begin to run over, I commit more articles to the keeping of my widowed and fatherless acquaintances.
"But, Aunt Julia, yours is a peculiar case. You had the home-made outfit of a rich farmer's daughter and could not expect to make use of it; but I do not think I can encourage you to waste your goods extravagantly."

AN OLD COUNTRY BUTCHER ON CANADIAN BEEF.

The Guelph Mercury has been handed the following extract from a letter from Mr. Alexander Johnston, a leading butcher in Edinburgh, to Mr. James Miller, butcher of Guelph, in which he gives his opinion on the best kind of stock to ship from Canada to the old country market.

What an Old Farmer Says. This is the advice of an old man who has tilled the soil for forty years: I am an old man, upwards of three-score years, during two scores of which I have been a tiller of the soil.

During the passage of the steamship Howick from Montreal to St. John, three days after leaving port, the starboard hull became choked, so that no water would pass through.

The Proof of the Pudding.

The National Policy has now been in operation for nearly two years, a sufficient time certainly to enable the public to form a reliable opinion upon its merits.

The Value of One Improved Animal.

In Mr. Bonner's barn we noticed a good Shorthorn bull, two years old last spring, thoroughly bred, registered, that cost $150, we believe.

Broken Limbs of Animals.

An idea prevails with many persons that broken limbs of horses and other quadrupeds cannot be cured, owing to the difficulty of keeping the part sufficiently at rest during the time necessary for a broken bone to heal, or acquire sufficient strength to support its share of the animal's weight.

Fighting in Manitoba.

LETTER TO A WINNEPEG ROMAN CATHOLIC PRIEST ABOUT THE INDIAN HOSTILITIES.

The Rev. Father Lacombe, parish priest of St. Mary's Church, Winnipeg, has given to the newspapers the contents of a private letter received from the West, which gives the particulars of the Indian hostilities on the frontier, or else a different version of the recent fight, as follows:—On the 6th of September a party of Indians, thirty strong, mounted on horseback, attacked a small camp of the inhabitants of the mountain. The camp was composed of six lodges only, inhabited by White Bear, Wabimaska, and Sioux Assiniboines of the Totomikak band.

Running in Debt.

I dwell on this point, for I would advise others, entering the place of commerce, with many old enough to know better, would go into business—that is, into debt—tomorrow, if they could. Most poor men are ignorant as to envy the merchant or manufacturer, whose life is an incessant struggle with pecuniary difficulties, who is driven to constant "shining," and who, from month to month barely evades the insolvency which sooner or later overtakes most men in business; so that it has been computed that one man in twenty of them achieves a pecuniary success.

Aquatics.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 5.—The race between Elias Laycock, a sculler, and Thomas Blackman, of Dulwich, for £100 a side, over the Thames Championship course, four miles and two furlongs, took place yesterday afternoon. Laycock was the favorite at 5 to 4 on him.
