 CRANIOLGY AND PHYSIOGNOMY.

Short cuts to a knowledge of mankind are very tempting. There can be no mode imagined, for ascertaining characters in this physical way that will not attract attention and become more or less popular for a time. But it is much to be feared, or rather much to be hoped, that some of them will succeed. It would be inconvenient for even the best of us to be rendered legible in this summary manner to be compelled

"To wear our hearts upon our sleeves
 For days to peck at."

and to have an impertinent eye discover in the curl of one's nose some villanous propensity that we ourselves had been unable to discover at the bottom of our hearts. The consequence of such a gift of universal penetration would be, that the world would go masked; the "human face divine" would be no more visible, but would remain encased behind some screen capable of defying the interior brood of physiognomists and craniologists forever.

But though we may justly dread to see these arts arrive at perfection, the partial cultivation of them is very amusing. They form an exhaustless fund of conjecture, experiment and system quite as useful, and much more innocent, than dabbling in metaphysics. To cast no faith in them, but merely to catch and enjoy coincidences will furnish delightful subjects for cogitation for many a vacant hour, which besides can be most easily practiced at times when vacancy is most distressing—in disagreeable company—in theatres before the curtain rises—in mobs, that with noise and odour leave no sense but the eye at liberty—in political meetings when S— is on his legs. In short, this habit of observation, with a view to a certain system, is a pocket companion, that serves to amuse and occupy when every thing else fails.

Nor is this moral tendency of these studies to be overlooked. See, for instance, how much the indulgence of a morbid feeling is combated by the discovery that the organ of melancholy is the same with that of cowardice. And Lavater's doctrine, that the habitual thoughts and propensities of the mind become depicted in the countenance, has to my own knowledge, arrested youth in an unreflecting career of licentiousness. Few people are conscious how just the opinion is, and how little the accurate observer is deceived; many that pretend to good behaviour show their faces without fears, nor suspect that they are at all betrayed by the eye. "Round which the word rake is written in most legible black letters." It is difficult to reconstruct the argument of the alternative influence of the mind upon the features with the well known story of Socrates and the physiognomist, or with the rules that assign certain propensities to the immutable parts of the face. We cannot suppose that all the mortification of Ly Trappe would fill up the dangerous dimple of a luxurious chin, or that any degree of humiliation could break the bridge of a Roman nose. For original character the stationary features must be consulted—the forehead, the nose, the chin, for acquired we must peruse the mutable ones—the eyes and mouth. Poets have abused the eyes for being notorious traitors; they certainly seem eminently formed for expression, yet I think we are apt to bestow upon them too much credit, as we are apt to do on all pretty instruments. They are the centre to which the motion of every muscle is referred; and after scanning the various parts of the face, we seek in them for the sum. And thus they obtain the reputation of disclosing what in reality was elicited from the several other features. Take an eye by itself, distinct and separate, and what can you read in it? Unconnected, it is the most insignificant of the features; from a nose, a chin and a mouth, you can conjecture something, but from an eye alone, leaving the socket out of consideration, not one inference can be drawn. What can painters make of an eye?—Nothing; yet it is there that the expression of the picture is centered. In short this piece of animal mechanism is nothing but a little mirror—taken by itself merely bright—but owing all its beauty and expression to the object it reflects.

The lips seem to me the most interesting and intelligent contemplation. There is more diversity in them than in any other feature, their outline is capable of marking all shades from the highest degree of sensibility to the lowest of brutality; and being the most flexible and the most agitated, they undergo more changes than any other part of the visage. The nose is not of such consequence—by it we are to judge of a passing face—of one at a distance, it consequently expresses the common attribute of character, the only one we have need to perceive. But the mouth presents itself to the inspection of intimacy and friendship, and therefore is calculated to mark the nice shades of character and temper, which it imports them to become acquainted with who live much together. The best way to judge of a friend is from his own mouth—he can have no objection to the mode. In people of great sensibility, it is the lips that first feel internal agitation; the feeling of anxiety or anger, the pallor of fear or despair are communicated earlier to them than they are visible to the eyes. People of strong feelings, too, are compelled to acquire dissimulation, and it is over the eye and muscle of the cheek that they exert it; the calm face and blank eye contradict emotion, the tremulous lip betrays it. But let me not proceed farther in these minutiae, lest the reader should suspect I am making mouths at him.

It is surprising that physiognomy as connected with the arts has not been more studied. Theorists are in the habit of contemning portrait painting, and esteem all representations of the face as portraits, consequently, their researches have been directed towards the rules of general outline and the combination of colour. There is little to be hoped from enquiries, where the only foundation of anything like a principle is in appeals to a refined and rare species of taste. Lavater's physiognomical researches are far less fanciful, but they are more laughed at, because to perceive their gist is easy. Any doctrine or philosophy that is obscure, should take care to be so in all its parts—it will then at least be respected, for when people absolutely know nothing, they must be silent. But let them comprehend the smallest particle, they think themselves entitled to form a judgment, and an aspect and simplicity and candour is sure to incur the ridicule of the many.

YOUTH AND MARRIAGE.—Youth is easily attracted and decided soon. It forgets that the fanciful preference of a moment may not safely determine the prospects of life. It is unmindful that, looking to this world merely, occasions will come for which the graces of the Ball room are no sort of preparation. It rashly takes the eye which can sparkle in their morning brilliancy, for those which will weep meekly in sorrow, and kindle with a steady encouragement in the midst of care, and hold a light which can cheer, when all other light on the earth was waxed dim. It is so wild as to mistake the flutter of the hour, for the same being who will be the ministering angel of sickness and decline. It needs to be reminded, that if there is any engagement in life, which is not to be founded under the arbitration of caprice, it is that which is not dissolved, till the parting shall come at the tattered, and the open grave. It must be conjured to remember that if there is any step in life which requires beyond others to be made reverently, discreetly, advisedly, soberly, prayerfully, and in the fear of God, it is that step which, day by day, is the most inconsiderately taken.—Halfway's Selman.

TRADITION OF THE FOX INDIANS.—During the time of Frontina's government of the Canadas, the French occupied a post at Green Bay, nearly opposite the point on which Fort Howard now stands. Two young Menomines of those days killed two Winnebagoes. The officer in command of the post demanded a surrender of the murderers: The surrender was promised. But Indians are proverbially slow, except in the chase or fight; in all matters concerning life and death they counsel and delay to act. Pending the interval between the promise of surrender and the time of its fulfilment, the French officer, becoming impatient, armed himself with a rifle, and taking a servant with him, went to the lodge to demand the instant surrender of the two young Menomines. He found the Indians in council: a negotiation was pending. There had arisen a difficulty: the two murderers were the adopted sons of an old Fox woman, who was loath to give them up.—Hope was entertained, however, that her consent would finally be obtained. Thereupon, exasperated at the delay, at what he perhaps suspected was Indian cunning, he levelled his rifle at the chief, when another chief rising and interfering, "It was the delay to act that killed the chief, and not the officer." They owed what had happened to themselves. The party gave back, when the officer again demanded the instant surrender of the two young offenders. An answer was given—"We expect to get the old foster-woman's consent soon." The officer having charged his rifle, shot down the speaker, whereupon a young Indian standing by seized his gun and shot the officer.

The news flew—the French camp was presently in motion. War and revenge was resolved on. Reinforcements came in aid of the French, from the then powerful Chipewas and Menomines bands. An immediate march was taken up, and the Fox Indians were now doomed to stand alone against the United power of the French, the Chipewas, and Menomines. The parties met on that beautiful piece of table land, in nearly the centre of which stands "Le petit Butte des Mors." The Foxes were surrounded and a desperate fight was fought, which resulted in the killing of vast numbers on both sides, but in great havoc among the Foxes. The survivors retreating farther up and along the shores of Lake Winnebago, were overtaken and made another stand on the ground on which now stands "Le grand Butte des Mors." Here the parties fought to desperation, but the Foxes were literally cut to pieces. The tradition says all were slain but about twenty, and these, flying before their blood thirsty pursuers, were overtaken at La Prairie du Chien, and made prisoners.

No people regard with more holy feelings the rites of sepulture than the Indians. It became the first duty of the survivors, under the influence of this feeling, after the contents to collect the bodies of the slain that lay scattered over these two battle fields; and, as is the Indian custom of those regions to this day they were piled one upon another, with layers of earth between, and covered up. The French named these mounds "Le petit" and "Le grand Butte des Mors." The first because it is the smaller of the two, and doubtless because there were fewer slain on that spot.

This tradition, if true, makes, out a hard case for the Foxes. But who can put his finger on a place in Indian history, or who can tell a conflict of the Indian and the white man, in which the proof is not found that the white man was the aggressor? I assert that, from the leading of our fathers at Plymouth and Jamestown down to the Black Hawk war, as far as we have authentic materials, this is capable of demonstration.—Knickerbocker.

From an Album.
 To Miss L. E.
 I would twine for thee a fadless wreath;
 Immortal as the essence of thy mind,
 A wreath o'er which Time's desolating breath
 Might ineffectual sweep from earthily droop refined.
 Thine be the heart, whose bliss hath ever been Derived from that pure genuine east of thought,
 Which knows no envious ill; unself, unseem,
 By wayward fancy, to existence wrought.
 The faithful, steadfast mind, whose soaring flight,
 Above the trivial cares of time, looks down,
 Tranquil and calm—as does the Queen of night,
 Upon the dark earth's lowering, gloomy frown:
 The noble soul alone, whose lofty aim,
 Aspiring, strives at Virtue's heavenly shrine,
 Eternal blessing's fount of bliss to gain,
 As fadless wealth of love and grace divine.
 And may thy earthly lot, be richly blest,
 With all of good to mortals ever given;
 And when the grave receives thee to its rest,
 May thy pure spirit, wing its flight to heaven.

TIME IS MONEY.
 Few know that time is money. Time well improved will earn money, or it will procure that which money will buy, and therefore we may say, time is money.

Often remember therefore, reader, that time is money. Time is money to yourself. When you lay in bed in the morning, beyond the hours necessary for sleep, the body is weakened by indulgence, and the noxious effluvia and moisture, that have been thrown from the skin, are absorbed again, and the health is injured; and time is lost besides, and money is lost. You suffer, and your family suffer. Your door-yard is not so neat. Your wood is not so well cut. Your tools are not in so good order. Your clothes are not so well mended. Your walls and fences are not up so well; and then you are not on so good terms with your neighbors. If you lay in bed half an hour needlessly in the morning, most likely your Bible is not read, and your duty to your Maker is forgotten or neglected. Up then, slumberer, time is money, and more than money.

Do you smoke? Remember that time is money. It is well to know and use figures. Let me see. Ten minutes smoking before breakfast; ten minutes after; ten minutes at dinner time; ten minutes when a pedler calls; ten minutes when you call at a neighbour's; ten minutes when a neighbour calls; ten minutes at night. Seventy minutes each day in smoking. Time is money. Seventy minutes is worth at least 10 cents to a man. Ten cents a day is thirty-six dollars and fifty cents a year. If you smoke, very probably, you, your family and the community lose the value of thirty-six dollars and fifty cents each year by your smoking.

Time is money. Let this enter your calculations: you mean to be saving, and you make a wooden latch to your door; and spend in labor one third of a day, and find yourself, and tools and stock; and all this we may call twenty-five cents; when you might buy an iron latch for half the money. Or you are more economical still; and you get neither an iron or a wooden latch, but open and close a door just as you can, and then all your family lose, in one year, time equivalent to one dollar, or even two, three, or four dollars.

Time is money to your neighbours. You employ a mechanic, and you owe him; and if, when you call for your work, you would bring a bushel, or half a bushel of corn, time would be saved. But you make him call on you just when he is out of bread. He has to look round for a horse and wagon, and then look after you, and get your corn, and he loses about half a day, and his tools, shop and work stand idle, and time, which is money, is lost.

Time is money. When you stand still, does the sun stand still? Does time stand still? Do the expenses of a family stand still?

Does the season stand still? Does life stand still? You complain that you are poor. You can't take a news paper. You can't read the papers; you can't buy and read any books. The reason is you do not know that time is money.

But time is more than money. If time is lost, information is lost; good moral habits are lost; high attainments in religion are lost; opportunities to help our neighbors are lost; and finally if time is lost, even the soul may be lost.—Maine Farmer.

TRIAL FOR PIRACY.
 (From the Boston Atlas, of Saturday.)
 An interesting trial came on yesterday in the Circuit Court—before Judges Story and Davis. John Baptiste of New Bedford, mariner, was brought up to plead to an indictment charging him with the commission of piracy upon the Coast of Africa. To the indictment the prisoner pleaded not guilty. From the testimony in the case it appears that Baptiste sailed from New York in July 1834, in the brig America, a vessel belonging to the Messrs. Hainaway, Messrs. Swain, and Mr. Grinnell of New Bedford. The America was bound to St. Helena or a market, and sailed under the command of Captain Miller, who was recently tried in New York on the charge of kidnapping a couple of negro children and acquitted. The America did not touch at St. Helena as was intended, on account of the unfavorable winds, but proceeded directly to the coast of Africa, and first touched at Loanda, or St. Paul de Loanda, the Capital of the Portuguese possessions in this section of Africa—a city of some extent, and with a population variously estimated from 3000 to 18,000. Here the America remained about three weeks, when she sailed south to Nova Redondo, and finally New Benguela, or St. Philippe. From this port she sailed to St. Helena, and after again touching at the ports above mentioned, arrived at Nova Redondo, where for the first time she received on board twelve negro slaves as passengers.

These negroes were brought to the ship handcuffed, and chained together, attended by two negroes, a Portuguese and a soldier. Their fetters were then taken off, and they were carried aboard the America—without making any resistance. The negroes were young the youngest being about fourteen years of age. That afternoon they sailed for St. Philippe, and arrived next day between 2 and 3 o'clock. The harbor Master then came on board, and the usual custom house regulations of the place were complied with. The slaves, with some goods, were landed the next morning in one of the boats of the brig: the captain and mate going with them. The America then sailed South to Fish Bay, and returning to St. Philippe and Nova Redondo, made some traffic, and procured a quantity of ivory. Thence she sailed to Old Benguela, where she took in 14 negroes—who were also brought in irons to the shore, attended by a crowd of the natives, among whom was a king of the tribe. Baptiste again assisted in removing the fetters, and receiving them on board the brig.

They left Benguela the same evening, and sailed for Loanda, where the negroes were landed: Baptiste and the captain being both present at the delivery. Remaining a fortnight at Loanda, they next sailed to Old Benguela, where they took in wood and fowls; and where the brig next touched, they took in 19 negroes, whom they received at the shore in boats; at Old Benguela, in the same manner they received 21 more negroes—in the month of December, or January. On reaching Loanda they discharged this cargo in two or three boats—one of which went to the shore, and another was lost sight of among the Portuguese shipping in the harbor. All were delivered, with the exception of a little girl, taken in at Nova Redondo, who was afterwards brought by Captain Miller to New York, for which place the America sailed. After once more touching at each of the ports above named.

The America took out the usual cargo, and sold it in the usual barter trade for gun and ivory. The ports at which she touched are under the Portuguese jurisdiction, and Portuguese custom house officers and soldiers were on board during the whole time of the brig's remaining in any port. The fact of receiving the negroes at the time and places stated is not denied; and it was attempted to prove that Baptiste had aided or assisted in kidnapping, or making them slaves. The defence set up is that the negroes were slaves at the time of receiving them on board; that they were received merely as passengers—that the ship was not engaged in the slave traffic, and that the ship's crew were only guilty of transporting for "freight and passage money" men who were already slaves from one port to another—with the view of obliging the slave dealers, and facilitating the sale and purchase of a cargo.

The life of a prisoner, then depended on the construction of the statute of 1820, under which he was indicted. The portion of the statute having reference to the present case runs as follows—"that if any citizen of the United States, being of the crew or ship's company of any foreign ship or vessel, owned in whole or in part, or navigated for, or in behalf of any citizen or citizens of the United States shall land from any such ship or vessel, and, on any foreign shore, seize any negro or mulatto, not held to service or labor by the laws of either of the states or territories of the U. States; with intent to make such negro or mulatto a slave, or shall decoy, or forcibly bring or carry, or shall receive such negro or mulatto on board any such vessel, with intent aforesaid, such citizen or person shall be adjudged a pirate; and on conviction thereof before the Circuit Court of the United States for the district wherein he may be brought or found, shall suffer death.

As we understand the case, it at present rests on the word "make;" in the statute. It is contended that the negroes being slaves before they were received by the America, were not so received with the intent to make them slaves.

The case will be argued this morning by Daniel Webster, Esq. for the defendant, and Mr. Attorney Mills for the Government.

The Boston Transcript of Saturday evening says—This morning the jury, after a consultation of ten minutes, rendered a verdict of Not guilty.

ENGLISH WOMEN.—The modesty and beauty of the English Ladies have become proverbial throughout Europe as a national characteristic; and it does not decrease in the least on a closer examination,—the affectionate attachment of wives to their husbands,—their attention to all that regards domestic comfort and economy, and their care and tenderness to their children, are truly worthy of admiration, and eminently exemplary. The apparent liberty which is conceded to ladies in England, forms a source of reflection to a foreign observer, and undoubtedly proceeds from the modest purity and reservedness of their character and habits, and causes them to command that respect, to obtain which in other countries a greater sacrifice of liberty is required. The society of women in England is in my opinion, more sweet, more natural, and more affable than is generally met with in other nations. The candour and goodness of their disposition, united to the extraordinary care bestowed on their education, gives to their conversation great interest and unutterable attraction. To those who wish to see all the harmony which nature can display in a human soul, I would venture to say, go to England, and converse with a well educated lady, of which there are so many there; and after this proof, if you are not delighted and satisfied, I assert, without fear or contradiction, you have no heart, or that the object of your search is beyond the limits of mortality.

Mothers and Daughters.—It was a judicious resolution of a father, as well as a most pleasing compliment to his wife, when, on being asked by a friend what he was going to do with his girls, he replied, "I intend to apprentice them to their mother, that they may learn the art of improving time, and fitted to become like her—wives, mothers, heads of families, and useful members of society."—Equally just, but bitterly painful, was the unhappy husband of a vain, thoughtless, dressy slattern. "It is hard to say it, but if my girls are to have a chance of growing up good for anything, they must be sent out of the way of their mother's example."

IS AMERICA LITERARY?—We have been told, in the face of all this evidence, with pertulance and pride, that the Americans have no literature, and are not literary people. Not literary land yet they have done more for literature than any people ever did in similar circumstances. Not literary! and yet they have made more extensive grants in favor of universal education than any other country. Not literary! and yet not only the common school but the Academy and the college, are travelling over the breadth of the land, and are sometimes found located in the desert, in anticipation of a race that shall be born. Not literary! and yet in the more settled states, a fourth part of the people are at school; and in the state of New-York alone, apart from all private seminaries, there are 8,600 schools sustain at an yearly expense of 1,126,482 dollars! Not literary! and yet there are, in this new country, fifteen universities, forty-six colleges, twenty-one medical schools, and twenty-one theological! Not literary! and yet they circulate seven hundred and fifty millions newspapers a year, this is twenty-five to our one; and all our best books commonly run through more and larger editions there than they do at home.—Visit to the American Churches.

EDUCATION.—New York has one in four of her whole population at school; but Scotland has only one in ten; England has only one in twelve; Wales only one in twenty. While France, the very pink of refinement, has four millions of children untaught, and entire population unable to read, state, or cipher! Europe has nothing, except it be in Prussia, that will compare with the state of things we are now contemplating with admiration. It may be well, if what she suffers by the comparison may induce her though late to ask for a remedy.—Ed.

THE GENTLEMAN'S VADE MECUM.

SPORTING AND DRAMATIC COMPANION INTERFERED WITH A MULTITUDE OF ENGRAVINGS, INCLUDING Portraits of Celebrated Winning HORSES, Philosophical and Natural Phenomena, Ledger-omain &c.

It is now six months since this publication was commenced in Philadelphia—and although the publishers have used no extraneous means to circulate a knowledge of its merits, yet such is the satisfaction manifested by that portion of the Public who have been made acquainted with its character and contents, that it will eventually become one of the most popular among the numerous excellent periodicals which issue from the American press. No exertions will be spared to establish its permanent reputation more extensively; and if the liberal sanction of those for whom it is especially designed shall warrant its future improvement—both as regards topographical measures and embellishment—will be materially advanced.

The different PLAY and FARCES that will appear in the course of the year, of themselves, will be worth more than FOUR times the amount of subscription. The following is a list of those which have already appeared: Miss Mitford, R. P. Smith, J. S. Kneller, J. R. Parke, F. Reynolds, C. A. Somerset, T. Morton, R. P. Smith, J. S. Kneller, Thos. Holcroft, Wm. E. Burton, Mrs. Inchbold, Ben. Webster, F. M. Reynolds, Planché & Dance, W. T. Moncrieff, M. G. Lewis, J. R. Parke, H. M. Milner, Mrs. Inchbold, R. B. Peake, W. Barrymore, James Kenner, The MSS. copy of the IRISH AMBASSADOR, the favourite and highly interesting Drama in which TYRONE POWER so successfully amused the Public as SIR PARRICK O'LENNY, has been obtained by the Publishers, and will be published forthwith.

The Sporting Intelligence (at home and abroad) occupies a considerable portion of our columns, and is collected from the most authentic sources—Among the Portraits of celebrated Winning Horses which have been given, are—The American Trotting Horse, EDWIN FOREST, The Imported Racing Horse MESSENGER, The favourite Racing Mare, ARIEL, and her FOAL by ECLIPSE, Bond's celebrated Trotting Horse, NORFOLK PHENOMENON, The well known English Race Horse, TOUCHSTONE, A correct PICTURE OF A RACE COURSE, exhibiting the width of its columns.

Among a variety of other Embellishments of subjects of interest which have been published, are the following: A complete treatise on RIDING, with FOURTEEN ILLUSTRATIONS, for the Improvement of Ladies, that most healthy of all exercises. Explanation of the ATLANTIC CHESS PLAYER, illustrated by ELEVEN ENGRAVINGS.

The subjects which are particularly embraced in the VADE MECUM will be more distinctly understood from the following summary of them: The Turf and all matters connected therewith. On the structure and character of the Horse. On the improvement of Hired Carriage. Rules for Novices in Shooting. Methods for Feeding and Training Dogs. Biographies of celebrated Horses, with their Portraits. Hunting, Fishing, Fowling, &c. Approved Games, from Hoyle and others. Criticisms on Plays and Actors. The most popular Songs, set to music. The Art of Loggrolling Illustrated. A variety of Recipes adapted to Domestic Economy. An Epitome of important passing events. Gentlemen's quarterly Review of the Fashions.

The Vade Mecum is printed on large imperial paper, of a beautiful white texture, and is published every Saturday, at Three Dollars per annum, in advance. Orders from abroad postage paid, will be promptly attended to, and the paper carefully packed to prevent its from rubbing by mail.

The Modern Acting Drama, a volume of about 300 pages—containing the PLAYS, FARCES, &c. which appear in the Vade Mecum, neatly printed, and bound in elastic covers; for transmission will constitute a set, of one year's subscription, the terms for which is three dollars, payable in advance.

Subscribers to the Vade Mecum are entitled to a deduction of one third. An order for four sets will be thankfully received, and the work forwarded to any direction, by enclosing a ten dollar note—postage paid.

A Premium consisting of two volumes, 500 pages each, of the Novelist's Magazine, containing eight different Novels, by the most popular authors, will be presented to the Agent who shall procure four names to the Modern Acting Drama or the Gentleman's Vade Mecum, and send remittance of one year's subscription or each.

Persons wishing to subscribe to either of the above works, will address CHARLES ALEXANDER, No. 3, Athenian Buildings, Franklin Place, Philadelphia.

GENTLEMAN'S VADE MECUM.

A Large and Splendid Engraving of A Celebrated Race Course, OCCUPYING a considerable portion of an entire page, and unequalled in size and execution by any which has been hitherto presented to the public in the Sporting Journals of this country, was published on the 13th instant in the GENTLEMAN'S VADE MECUM; or THE SPORTING AND DRAMATIC COMPANION. This beautiful and exciting picture has been the labor of several weeks, and cost the publishers nearly ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS. The engraving patronage of the Gentleman's Vade Mecum, will be an inducement to the proprietors to continue their exertions in beautifying their work with subjects calculated to advance the reputation which it has already acquired.—The contents of this number will be varied and interesting; the popular Comedy of the RENCONTRE, which has never before appeared in print, will be given entire. The official accounts of the proceedings of the different Races Course throughout the country are regularly inserted, and a great variety of Miscellaneous articles, embracing every subject deserving attention from the reading community.

Subscriptions received by Smith & Alexander, No. 3 Athenian Buildings, Franklin Place, Philadelphia. Terms, three dollars per annum, payable in advance.
