MANURE FOR GRASS LAND.
I was anxious to know what quantity of grass could be produced by stimulating manures by experiment. This experiment has been made on a hundred superficial yards of grass land; and manuring after every crop I have mowed five times, and have had each time as much grass on the land as there usually is when persons allow for hay. The manures I made use of were pounded charof manure, and a liberal use of lime powder, chalk, mill dust, muriate of ammonia, sulphate of magnesia, and pyroligne of soda. The salts were put on in a liquid state, 2 oz. to each yard. I mowed the fifth time on the 10th of August. The land is by no means good land on which this experiment was made, and which his experiment was made, and which is not yet completed. These manures will give to very poor land the appearance of very good land, as long as their effects last.—[C. A. A. Lloyd, Whittington, Oswestry.]

—As soon as you find your horse is foundered, bleed him on the neck in proportion to the greatness of the founder. In extreme cases you can bleed him so long as he can stand up

Then draw his head up as is common in branching, and with a spoon put far back on his tongue strong salt, and you get him to swallow one pint. Be careful not to let him drink too much. Then anoint round the edges of his hoofs with spirits of turpentine.

A founder prevades every part of the system of the horse. The steam arrests it from the blood; the salt currents it from his stomach and bowels; and the spirits of turpentine arrests it from the tendons and limbs.

Once rode a pitted horse ninety-nine miles in two days, returning him at night the second day; and his owner would not have known that he had been foundered if I had not told him, and his founder was one of the deep-kind.

I once on a travel of seven hundred miles foundered my horse three times, and I do not think my journey was retarded more than on day by the misfortune, having in all cases observed and practised the above prescription - I have known a foundered horse turned in night on green feed; in the morning he would be well, having been purged by the green feed. All founders must be attended to immediately.—[S W Farmer.

husband in striking her; that although a wife had no right to destroy the goods and chattels of a husband, a rum bottle was an exception; that a wife was perfectly justifiable in seizing her husband's rum bottle whenever she could.

On this instance the defendant did go more than what a sensible woman ought to have done. The jury rendered a verdict in accordance with this sound opinion. Rum bottles may therefore, from this date, be considered with

By JOHN TALLIS & CO. OF LONDON
Duke of Wellington:
By Lieut. Col. Williams; (a Companion in Arms, of the Great War)

ADDRESS.
The earthly career of Arthur Duke Wellington has closed; one of the greatest men of the nineteenth century, the foremost military commander of any age, has paid the debt of nature. The time has now arrived for giving to the world a History of the Great Captain—the Events of his Life and Time—a life marked by patriotism, probity and honour, and events the greatest which have ever agitated the civilized world, and whose influence will be felt upon society till the end of time. Such a work must appeal to the best and proudest feelings in the heart of every Briton—the glory of his country, the honour of its name and position among the nations—may his own existence as a freeman, as recorded and engrained in the annals of the "well fought fields," and the deadly imminent breaches, the immortal battles and the glorious sieges in which Wellington and his Companions in arms gathered undying laurels, placed their country's honour and renown on the highest pinnacle of fame and glory, and tore the victor's wreath from the brows of heroes decorated with the trophies of Italy, Egypt, and Germany.
