Alder Blossoms.
A wild wind of the spring
And a cloud that thangeth low!
But I'll hie me to the brook,
Down where the alders blow.
Down to the brook,
Down where the alders blow,
Where the quivering shivering alders blow.

Robies under the rocks,
Pearls hiding in the sea,
But gold fangd down in showers
From many a brown old tree.
Down in the brook,
Down where the alders blow,
Where the quivering shivering alders blow.

A blackbird's rollicking trill,
A voice from over the hedge,
A rustle in the bare hedges,
A hint, a mystery,
Down in the brook,
Down where the alders blow,
Where the quivering shivering alders blow.

The scent of a rose alder,
The breath of a lily rare,
All odors of flowers to be
Stealing into the air,
Down by the brook,
Down where the alders blow,
Where the quivering shivering alders blow.

The step of a coming joy,
A flutter of gleets that go,
And oh, to hie by the brook,
Down where the alders blow!
Down by the brook,
Down where the alders blow,
Where the quivering shivering alders blow.

How a Bashful Editor Won a Bride.

BY PAUL THEVELAN.

Eva Austin was a spoiled child; her parents' hearts had been wrung too painfully by the death of her brothers in early life for them to resist in the slightest degree her wishes or her whims; and if she was not possessed of a considerable stock of common sense, there is no knowing to what an extent her follies might not have extended. She had control of $2,000 per year, which, for a Madison avenue belle, was none too much for her necessary expenditure upon dress, jewelry and eatables. She was the recognized leader in her own circle of acquaintance, both as regarded style, beauty and audacity; in consequence Eva Austin had a host of admirers, whose homage she took good advantage of, but for any one of whom she had yet failed to evince marked preference. Of course, she flirted desperately with the more eligible gentlemen of her set, but her heart was whole, at least what there was of it, and it was with a feeling of incredulity that she read of the falling in love process.

On a balmy June evening, in 187—, she was reclining upon an ottoman in the parlour of the steamship Drew, with a lady friend named Clara Hastings. They were en route to Saratoga to spend a few weeks of the summer season, and with their friends formed two large social parties.

The conversation of the two young ladies ran very much as such conversations do—from the latest fashions to the last ball; from the new novel to picking holes in the character of some lady member of society, and to the discussion of the peculiarities or merits of some male acquaintance.

"I declare he's the most peculiar gentleman that ever came into our drawing-room," said Miss Hastings. "As to figure, certainly he has one; but it's not fashionable, for his shoulders stick out like two wings, and his coat—oh, dear, such a coat! it had two fearful wrinkles in the back at last Wednesday's reception; it was fully a size too large for him; his boots were not polished, and when he was walking with Miss Everdon, he trotted upon her toes, bringing tears to her eyes, and then he hopped back on Charley Clayton's heel while he was conducting me to a seat. Then he whirled round excitedly, and with a red face, apologized to old Smithers; the putting of whose wheezy breath inside the 'stupid' imagine that the old gentleman was his victim. We did laugh, and I was cruel enough to say to him, in the midst of his confusion, that I should be unable to dance a polka he had me engaged for." "Dear me, Miss Hastings," he stammered, "mistakenly seem to come together this evening; I—I—hope—" then he paused as if collecting some of his wandering senses, and desperately wound up by saying: "Won't you have an ice with me, Miss Hastings?" "Oh, dear, no!" I replied, laughing. "I must decline, Mr. Banger, for I am quite cool enough"—and collected, roguishly chimed in Charley Clayton. Then poor Banger glanced savagely at Charley, and, striding off, made himself miserable in the alcove with a comic almanac.

"Clara, do stop telling me about Banger," interposed impulsive Eva. "His boorish bashfulness only too vividly recalls to me some trying scene I was compelled to become an actress in at the Spa, last summer. Such a dreadful grouping together of unfortunate events in a few minutes I never before witnessed. It was really awful, Clara.

Pa, you know, owns several farms at Eagle's Crag, back of Ballston, and appointed the editor of the village paper his agent. The editor was one of those nervous, high strung, but exceedingly bashful young men, who have not the slightest self-esteem and who, when they lose their little self-control, are perfectly beside themselves. Well, we were at the Spa hotel one afternoon and had telegraphed for Geo. Flint, (that's the young editor's name, to come over and have a business talk with him. After that he invited Mr. Flint to dine with us, and I afterward learned that he pleaded hard to be allowed to return as he had already eaten a dinner at noon, but he was inexorable, and that evening the quiet little party of seven at our table was increased to eight.

"Eva," said pa, "this is Mr. Flint, editor of the Eagle's Crag Illuminator." The editor first made an abrupt and most ungraceful bow, blushing simultaneously, and then, imagining that he should have shaken hands, he rushed round the table with his sunburnt palm extended at the exact moment he had commenced my plate of soup. He drew his hand back as if it had been stung, when he took the situation, and kept getting redder and redder in the face. "Take a seat, Mr. Flint, shouted pa; 'now make yourself just as much at home as if you were at your own board.' The young editor awkwardly got into his chair, remarking that the weather was hotter, or something to that effect, and when the waiter brought him a plate of soup, his hand actually trembled as he raised the spoon to sup it; he reached for his bread and his fingers grew stiff—really, Clara, they seemed to have a fit, and when he took the first mouthful, a crumb went the wrong way, and he coughed vehemently behind his napkin, which until that moment lay neatly folded on the table instead of being spread across his knees. Such a livid red as his face was then I never saw the like before. At first I decided to enjoy myself at the poor fellow's expense, but his suffering seemed so great that I began to pity him. He had a well-shaped head, and it was no doubt as full of knowledge as the average editor's head is, but he could impart none of it to us. His voice was thick and quavering, and he, tremblingly, answered in reply to a question of mine, that Eagle's Crag was a quiet place, and I raised plenty of sleep. I had to smile at that, and then in his extremity he added, 'here's a copy of my paper,' pulling out a blurred and crumpled sheet from his breast pocket. As he reached it over the table to me he clumsily upset a bottle of salt oil which ran down all over my amber silk; then, in desperately attempting to restore the bottle to its upright position, his coat sleeve went into the butter and he scooped up about half a pound of it; he then drew his elbow back nervously and knocked his glass of water into his lap, the glass falling upon the floor and breaking, which caused him to jump up so suddenly as to overturn a waiter who was bringing in a dish of beef gravy, which copiously anointed the fallen domestic and the now thoroughly horrified editor. He gave vent to his agony of feeling in a loud, 'Oh, my,' which immediately attracted the attention of the 150 diners, some of whom smiled very audibly, upon which Flint rushed away recklessly into a passage among the servants asking for a wash-bowl and looking as if he had just escaped from an earthquake. I rose, with my amber dress ruined, and retired. Pa soon after came up, vowing energetically that we would never allow another editor to dine at our table, even if it was James Gordon Bennett himself. He also told me that a most ridiculous story was going the rounds downstairs that Flint was an old rejected country lover of mine, who had flung a crust-stand in me because of some fancied slight and that he then rushed into the servants' apartments and attempted suicide.

"At the hop that evening I was quite a heroine, and my friends persisted in congratulating me on. Such a narrow escape from that lunatic! Frank Keller, the young lawyer, told me he had seen the little episode; he knew Flint well, and he was a most sensible young fellow, but extremely bashful, and in Flint's name begged my pardon, which I granted, of course, and which Keller conveyed next day, like a Good Samaritan, to Eagle's Crag."

At this moment dainty Mr. Keller came straggling down the steamer's saloon and was heartily received by the young ladies.

"Mr. Keller," said Eva, "do you recollect that scene at the Spa in which I took rather a prominent part?"

"Most vividly," said Keller, laughing; "but I'm afraid you ladies make no allowance for a man's imperfections and weaknesses, and persist in looking solely at them, while his noble traits of character are ignored. Why, poor Flint, the hero of the salad oil tragedy, is one of the most intelligent, shrewd and persevering young men in the State. He is neither vain or stupid, and his principal defect is his excessive bashfulness. I go on a fishing excursion with him every summer and have his letter in my pocket now arranging for a three day excursion near Glen lake, and, ladies, if you wish to be just, if not generous, you should pay our camp a flying visit and see the bright side of the country editor. Banger, who I know you affect to despise, is one of the party, but as Mr. Clayton will likewise be present I am sure, Miss Austin, you will feel a slight inducement to come."

"Not the slightest," replied Miss Austin. "I will go solely from a sense of duty, to see if your judgment in regard to the editor is a correct one."

"Won't you come, too, Miss Hastings?"

"Really," replied she, "I feel like declining to spend a whole day in the company of two such barbarians as Banger and the luckless editor."

"That remark, Miss Hastings, is heartless, and bears out what I said a few moments ago; because two gentlemen are unfortunate in not having their paths strewn with roses in their youth, and in not being able to benefit by the instructions of the dancing master and private tutor, and whose generous natures shrink from aping the hollow civilities, toperies and eccentricities, to use no harsher terms, you must forsooth term them barbarians."

"Yes," replied Miss Hastings, sarcastically, "barbarous enough they are. There is not one excusable point about them except that they are men."

"It is not of my own safety I am thinking, so much as that of those in the other boat," she replied. "See, it is out of sight. Do let us get out on these rocks and then go back to their help, Mr. Keller?"

Mr. Keller, however, knew that brave Eva's wish was not echoed by any other lady in the boat, and so he kept on to the open beach. Just as the boat's keel grated on the stones the storm burst in all its fury; heavy banks of clouds seemed to settle upon the black cliffs of the Point, and the wind roared with startling fury. The ladies in Keller's boat were hastily conducted to the shelter of an old fish shanty, but Miss Austin seemed careless whether she was wet or dry.

"Oh, save them, Mr. Keller," she cried. "I know you are brave and humane; do try, for life is precious."

"For your sake, Miss Austin—Eva," he passionately responded, "I will risk even my life itself."

"Well, then," replied she, quite haughtily, "you need not delay to say more."

Keller sprang to the small boat lying on the beach, but the combined efforts of himself and friend could not launch it against the violence of the waves.

Eva stood statue-like upon the sands, straining her eyes toward the point, the rain pelting down upon her beautiful face, and the gale tossing her golden hair back from under her gypsy hat. But, alas! the missing boat came not, and she involuntarily shuddered.

"Come into the shelter," urged one of the ladies in the shed; but Miss Austin heard her not. At that instant she saw far out, floating at the summit of a huge wave, a gentleman's hat, and with a shriek she fell fainting upon the strand. "Drowned, drowned, and lost to me," were the words she muttered, on regaining consciousness; but meanwhile some farmers on the opposite side of the point, seeing the perilous position in which Flint's boat was, had gallantly started to the rescue, and in a short time brought the hatless editor and his drenched companion safe to shore, but the intervening cliffs prevented Keller's party from knowing this, and they gave themselves up to gloomy despair, as the luckless editor's hat bobbed up and down on the waves. Keller, in a desperate effort to launch his boat and seek Flint, had stove her in on the rocks, and was now walking about, wringing his hands in anguish, when a cheery voice from the hill above shouted: "We're dripping wet, but all safe. It was Flint's." "Thank God!" fervently ejaculated Miss Austin, her color going and coming, as if she were about to have a second fainting fit. When Flint clambered down to them he tried to assume a jaunty tone as he greeted Miss Austin, but the look in her beautiful eyes, as she raised them to his, revealed to him that with his life, as he had tossed about in danger of drowning, was bound up that of fair Eva Austin's. He stammered and reddened as after a pause she said, tenderly and reverently: "My prayer was answered." Keller did not hear what she said, but the troubled sad look on his handsome, manly face showed that he divined the cause of Miss Austin's emotion. His greeting to Flint was none the less warm, but there was a deep sighing void in his heart. It was a silent party that returned to Ballston Spa. Miss Austin did not care to joke and laugh as of old, nor did the editor speak to her except to offer the shelter of his great coat to "keep off the dew," and she most graciously accepted it. Keller's urgent legal business took him away to New York next day, and he left Eva with a cool "good-bye," which she knew covered up the throbbings of a great love for her. Flint's delicate, bashful style of wooing—so different from the ball-room audacity of blue city men—charmed the fair girl, and she allowed the happy day to be fixed before even her father knew of what was going on. He stormed awhile and forbade the editor to call on Eva again, but when she coolly told him that being of age, she would take Flint and bear poverty for the sake of the man she loved, he relented, attended the wedding like a good father should, and bought Flint an interest in the Albany Daily Spectator.

CHAPTER II.

About a month afterward the young ladies with their male friends found themselves one lovely morning upon the shore of Glen lake, which sits like a beautiful gem in the heart of the verdure-clad hills. Two fishing boats bore them to a lovely little isle at the foot of the lake, and here for the first time the claims of the oar to respond to the remarks of his lady friends. Miss Hastings seemed to get on much better with him than Miss Austin, and he soon began to give to the former a vivid description of an autumnal stroll, which he had encountered upon the lake. With much elegance of diction, grace of manner and earnestness did he proceed with his narration, and gradually all the other members of the party became absorbed in his conversation. Miss Austin was gazing intently into his handsome face. So intent was this look that young Keller happened to notice it, and as he watched her he found himself fastening with curiosity, lovely and talented New York belle had actually found something to admire in the young editor, or was her heart as true to him (Keller) as she fondly believed it must be. These questions were destined to be answered in a very convincing manner before nightfall. The party had fished, strolled over the ferny isle and picked flowers, and were leisurely preparing to re-embark for the mainland, when Mr. Flint conveyed the unwelcome intelligence that a heavy thunder-storm, which had been brewing during the last half hour, was now advancing much more rapidly than he had expected—was, in fact, likely to burst upon them in a short time.

"And you never told us before," said Miss Austin, half reproachfully.

"If I dared explain," promptly replied the editor of the Illuminator, "I might give a very satisfactory reason why I didn't."

"Do tell us," said Miss Hastings. But Mr. Flint found that a crisis had arrived, not only in his history but in the state of the weather, and he hastily, with his male companion's aid, got the boats ready for the return trip. He had intended all along to secure Miss Austin's passage in his own boat, but as he was about to ask her to occupy the stern sheets, Mr. Keller interposed, saying: "We've no time to lose, Miss Austin," hurried her into his boat, and away the party went.

The wind had risen, and the little chopping waves began to throw the spray over the sides of the boats.

"Row hard, friends," shouted Flint to Keller and his companion at the oars; "because if we do not round your point before the coming squall breaks upon us, our safety is endangered."

The two skiffs now fairly spun through the troubled waters; but just as Flint was about to change the course of his boat, so as to round the point, one of his oars broke, and the craft now lost half her headway under the impulse of but one pair of oars.

"Shall I stand by you?" shouted Keller, as his boat crossed the wake of Flint's.

"No," replied Flint; "your time is too precious; we have but to persevere now, and will try to get round the point before the storm commences."

Soon the overhanging rocks of the precipitous point were left in the background by Keller's boat, and it was in comparative safety; not till then did he note the pale and anxious face of Miss Austin.

"Don't be alarmed, Miss Austin," said he, soothingly; "I shall land you all safe in another ten minutes."

The little three-year old child of Mr. William Murray was sitting on a stile, in Pearson county, N. C., feeding chickens when a large eagle swooped down the chickens, scattering them in all directions. As the child was moving off the eagle made a second swoop, catching the child in its talons. With its prey it rose in the air, but the child was too heavy, and the eagle managed to flutter a short distance to the limb of a decayed oak. Its talons were so entangled in the clothing of the child that it could not get loose, and the weight soon made it creak down to the ground. The frightened father of the child came up and killed the eagle. The child, however, some deep scratches, was uninjured.

The sad effects of gambling were illustrated in a New York court one day not long ago, when Jasper G. Eaton, a clerk nineteen years old, was arraigned on the charge of robbing his employer. He pilfered from the money-drawer, and being once forgiven resumed the practice to get money to gamble. During the time the case was being heard a middle-aged woman, dressed in black, stood outside the iron railing. This was the young man's mother. When the magistrate decided to hold her son she gave a long sigh, and called him to her. She fell on his neck and asked: "Has it come through gambling, you are ruined by cards. My boy! my boy!" and she buried her face on his shoulder. The young man was so overcome that he, too, broke down, and was led away to the cells, weeping. The mother became semi-unconscious, and had to be carried out to the open air.

A missionary of the American Sunday-school union, in Kansas, who four years ago organized a Sunday-school in the Modoc camp in the Indian Territory, writes of a recent visit to the same camp. He found the Indians singing "The Ninety and Nine" in a large frame building. Stambot Frank, a licensed preacher, erect, tall, well formed, in a suit of clerical black, white cravat and all, welcomed the missionary. Bogus Charley, the chief, made an address, in which he said: "I don't drink whisky, play cards or swear. I left off these like I take off my coat. We done bad. 'Tis hard work. We'll do best we can. I been tried in my heart. Twenty-six years ago I know'd Shag-Nasty-Jim. We good friends. Now we bad friends. I pray God make my heart better." Then he walked over and shook hands with Shag-Nasty Jim, and the tears ran down the two Indians' cheeks.

On Thursday and Friday, December 4 and 5 of last year, Mrs. Anson Daho, a German woman, living six miles southeast of the village of Topeka, Ill., gave birth to four well-developed living female children. The first was born at 3 o'clock p. m. on Thursday; the second at 10 o'clock a. m., the third at 11 o'clock a. m., and the fourth at 12 o'clock m. on Friday. Very unfortunately the mother died on Saturday. Mrs. Daho was married in 1876 and had five children previous to the quadruple birth. Mr. Daho is a poor, hard-working farmer, who could not long sustain his infant family without aid. In view of this fact the board of supervisors of Mason county have appropriated $50 per month, to be used for paying nurses and other expenses; besides this, the curious visitors who almost continually throng the premises contribute quite liberally to their support. The babies are all well at this time, and are entering upon their third month with as many chances in their favor as any children of their age.

The Moniteur, of Martinique, prints an interesting story about the finding of an anchor belonging to the ship upon which Christopher Columbus sailed on his voyage of discovery to the new world. On the night of August 1, 1498, says the Moniteur, the small fleet had come to an anchor at the southwestern extremity of the island of Trinidad, to which the navigator had given the name of Arenas Point. Washington Irving relates that Columbus, who was a very poor sleeper, suddenly heard a frightful noise, apparently coming from the south. Rushing on deck he saw rolling toward him a wave as huge as a mountain, which threatened to submerge the fleet. All hands thought their last hour had come, but the only damage sustained was the loss of one of the anchors of the admiral's ship. The big wave was caused by the sudden swelling of one of the rivers that empty their waters into the gulf of Paria, the existence of which was unknown to the discoverer. The incident is mentioned in the narrative of the voyage bequeathed to us by Ferdinand, Columbus' son. This historical anchor has been found after all these centuries by Senor Agostino, the owner of Arenas Point. It weighs 1,110 pounds, and is of decidedly primitive form. Senor Agostino found it while making some excavations in his garden. This garden, upon a careful examination, appears to occupy the precise spot where rode the ships of the great mariner in 1498. The finder at first took his treasure trove for a Phœnician anchor, but upon attentive examination he found the date of 1497 on the stock.

What subtle power in nature has made the snowflake so different from the raindrop, yet substantially the same? Science easily solves that question. It is magnetism, that almost unknown agent, so wonderful in its operations, and whose mysteries are being daily revealed to us.

The collection of Chinese works in the British museum includes 30,000 volumes.

THE OLD HOME.
I have gone—I cannot always go, you know;
Best 'tis so—
Home across the distant leagues of the years,
With my tears;
And the old house, standing still on the old
ground,
There I found.
In the parlor, in my fancy, I could trace
Father's face;
And my mother, with her old accustomed air,
Sitting there;
While beside them brothers, sisters, true and good,
Silent stood.
Through the stillness swam the song of summer
bird,
And there stirred
On the wall the leaf-flecked sunshine; and its glow
Faded slow;
But from all the loving lips I watched around—
Not a sound.
Of the breaths that stirred the draperies to and fro
Long ago;
Of the eyes that through the casement used to peep
Out of sleep;
Of the feet that in these chambers used to run—
Now are none.
Of the sunshine pouring downward from the sky,
Blue and high;
Of the leafage and the ancient garden plot,
Brown and hot;
Of the streamlet, and the shingle, and the tide—
These abide.
But beyond its azure vaulting overhead
Are my dead;
Though their graves were dug apart in many lands,
Joining hands,
They have gathered and are waiting till I come.
That is home!

Mr. Comstock, who discovered the Nevada mine of wonderful wealth, died in privation in the wilds of Montana.

Parasols, in their present form thought differently constructed, were used by the ancient Egyptians. The idea was borrowed from the East.

Benjamin Franklin was the youngest son and the fifteenth child of a family of seventeen children. He was born in Boston, January 17, 1706. His father emigrated to America in 1682.

The New York Herald and Telegraph, both owned by James Gordon Bennett, recently made a contract for white paper which will cost them nearly $1,000 a day more than they paid last year.

Mrs. Grossman, of Berlin, Canada, is twenty-six years old, and has been married seven years. But she is the mother of twelve children, which might be appropriately described as two solitaires, two sets of twins, and two sets of triplets.

There are thirty-four persons in the United Kingdom who are owners of over 100,000 acres each. The Duke of Buccleugh owns 450,350; Breadalbane, 373,979; Elph, 257,652; J. Matheson, 224,560; Argyle, 175,114, and Athole, 194,640.

American Newspapers.
George Augustus Sala, the pleasant-tongued correspondent of the London Telegraph, now on the Pacific slope grows enthusiastic over the newspapers of the United States, and puts his admiration into enduring type, thus: "I admire the newspapers of the United States for the wonderful diversity of their intelligence, and for the versatile ingenuity with which the items of that intelligence are strung together. Since my arrival in this country I have not set eyes upon a single English daily newspaper; yet I venture to think that, thanks to the wonderfully developed system of telegraphic communication of which the conductors of the newspapers are enabled to avail themselves, and the equally wonderful skill displayed by the gentlemen who attend to the scissors and paste department, I am not so very far behind hand touching what has occurred in my native land, and on the continent of Europe, since I left Queens-town in the middle of November last. The astonishingly copious salmagundi of odds and ends served up every day in the columns of the American papers makes them the most diverting reading in the world. They are as entertaining as the Paris Figaro and Gazette, without the indecency of the boulevard papers."

VISITORS to ST. ANDREWS and travellers generally, will be pleased to know that Mr. ANSON KENNEDY has opened the building formerly called the "International," on Water Street, opposite the Manchester House. The hotel has been newly painted and papered, and a large ell erected, which affords increased accommodation. As usual, this house is supplied with the best from Provincial and United States markets. The popular character of KENNEDY'S HOTEL will be maintained, and the genial disposition of its proprietor, will render his house as deserving of patronage as heretofore, as he spares neither pains nor expense to accommodate his guests. my21-1y.

PARLIAMENT AND THE PRESS.
 The following extracts from an article in the Montreal Star, upon members of Parliament commenting on the Press, are timely and to the point:

"What a Parliamentary majority thinks for example, of the sentiments expressed by a newspaper, is really a matter of little concern; we know how party lines are drawn, and we know that, upon any political question, it is the voice of party that speaks—a voice, it cannot be too fully understood, totally destitute of moral authority. When, therefore, Mr. Robertson, M. P., called the attention of the House of Commons to an article in the Globe newspaper, of which he disapproved, he took a course which could not possibly lead to any useful result, and which, in the eye of the country, which demands above all things a free press, could only be regarded as Parliamentary impertinence. The article in question was one in which the Globe attempted to show that the N. P. was driving our people into exile; and was in fact just such an article as one might expect to see in a strong party journal. To a nonpartizan the conclusion pointed at might appear extravagant, and the reasonings by which it was supported extremely weak, but in the House of Commons an assembly of men devoid of party prejudice? Is it not simply a collection of the most prejudiced men to be found in the country, men who have fought the battle of a party, and whose interests are all engaged on one side or the other?—Common sense might have suggested to Mr. Robertson that, considered as a tribunal, none less fit than the House of Commons to pronounce an impartial opinion could possibly be chosen. * * * Parliament is elected for the specific purpose of making laws and controlling the public expenditure, and these functions supply ample occupation for its talents and energies. We want nothing more of it than a faithful performance of these duties and we shall be abundantly satisfied with even a fair approximation to faithful performance. * * * We do not hesitate, therefore, to say that when Parliament sits in judgment on the Press, it sits in judgment upon that which is stronger than it, and which it would be madness to attempt to control. If the Press errs it is responsible to its readers and to the Courts of law, but decidedly not responsible to Parliament; and the sooner our respected legislators understand it thoroughly the better."

Hon. Senator Brown is much worse. His symptoms are regarded with grave fears.
 A cable to the New York Tribune says Gladstone, on consideration, will accept the premiership if offered him.
 Tom Hughes is to visit America.
 Destructive fires are reported along the line of railway between Lynchburg and Norfolk, Va. Much timber has been destroyed. Late advices say the fires have become uncontrollable, and people are busy escaping with their lives.

The St. Andrews Standard.
 SAINT ANDREWS, APRIL 21, 1880.

THE LIBERAL VICTORY.
 The result of the elections in Great Britain, will, without doubt, be pleasing to lovers of freedom and progress, and should not be surprising to any one who read Mr. Gladstone's powerful addresses in England and Scotland, and who intelligently watched the current of events. No one doubted Earl Beaconsfield's ability, as it is undeniable. He won position by sheer force of talent, which goes to prove that the avenues to exalted prominence, even under a monarchy, are open to the humblest from whose ranks, the peerage at various times has been recruited by persons of merit.

Lord Beaconsfield's investiture, of which he is master, and his arrogance to opponents, made him enemies; he also carried out his own ideas without regard to supporters or opponents; in fact his government was mainly personal. His own party frequently distrusted him, and bore with him rather than believed in him; besides he was sensational and not at all ways consistent or reliable, and it was difficult to get at his meaning. Neither his home rule or foreign policy was satisfactory, indeed the latter was such as almost to isolate England from other European powers; and had it not been for the protests of Mr. Gladstone and the Liberals, he probably would have declared war against Russia on the Eastern question; indeed the country was tired of his foreign complications. Like most conservative rulers he was lavish with the public money, and running up debt. He calculated rather too confidently of success, from two late elections in England. Parliament would at any rate have expired this year. The liberal majority is 103 over the conservatives, and 56 against them and the Home rulers combined. Parnell's boast that his party held the balance of power has been cast to the winds, and was like many of his other assertions—gasconade.

A United States exchange appositely remarks:
 But what gives a touch of splendor to the Liberal victory is that whole races in the East have seen it as a great light. To every Christian still groaning under Turkish rule it means speedy help and deliverance. To the Christians lately emancipated and to the Greeks it means the consolidation and maintenance of their freedom and independence. To the Hindus it means government for their own sake and not for the gratification of foreign pride. For the Afghans it means a cessation of pillage and slaughter in aid of a "scientific frontier." To the Turk it means that he must be clever and honest and industrious, or die. These things must sweeten their triumph to the English Liberals, and would make it precious even if they did not know that it had probably put an end to the last effort that will ever be made on English soil to set up personal government and restore the mystery of Statecraft.

THE FISHERY AWARD.—If there is any point beyond others, upon which the Maritime Provinces feel aggrieved, it is the decision of the Ottawa House of Commons upon the Fishery Award. By a majority of 126 to 30, it decided that the money must form part of the general revenue and should not be divided among the lower Provinces. The members of the Cabinet from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, voted against their just claims. Of course the Ontario vote was a united one adverse to them, notwithstanding the unanimous opinion in the Maritime Provinces that the Award was intended for them, as expressed by their Legislatures, and the press of each party. How very correct the opponents of Confederation were, when they predicted that when the interests of Ontario were adverse to the Provinces by the sea, they would be left out in the cold.—Ontario parties differ among themselves but when a question arises between them and Maritime Province people, they unite and our people are outvoted. The Anti-Confederates were wise in their generation. The Award will clear off the deficit of $2,000,000 on the Finance Minister's hands and help to cover up the extravagance on the Pacific Railway, and make things easy for a time for the Cabinet, but the end is not very distant. A more august and powerful Cabinet in England, went down a few days ago on appeal to the electors, and although it had a sweeping majority, in Parliament, it did not prevent its down fall. The handwriting is on the wall.

RAILWAY STATISTICS.
 The railroad statistics for 1878-79 have been received and show that on 30th June last, the total railway mileage of the Dominion was 8,022 miles, out of which 6,984 were actually in operation. This shows an increase over the preceding year of 311 miles in operation and a decrease of 224 miles under construction. There are 392 miles of 5 feet 6 inches gauge and 686 of 3 feet 6 inches, the remainder being the standard 4 feet 8 1/2 inches. The nominal capital raised for the railways of the Dominion on the 30th of June, 1879, was—$273,826,181.
 The capital per mile of railways completed and under construction is $45,135. The total increase of capital during the year was $1,468,951. The number of passengers carried was 8,228,810 against 7,883,472.

GHOSTS.
 Not Col. Ingersoll's "aristocracy of the air," but real human ghosts. Ghosts that were once healthy men and women, but are now simply the "ghosts of what they once were." As we meet them, and inquire the cause of all this change, they repeat the old, old story, "a cold," "neglected cough," "catarrh," "overwork," or "dyspepsia," "liver complaint," and "constipation," with unsuccessful physicians and remedies. In offering his Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Purgative Pellets for the cure of the above affections, Dr. Pierce does not recommend them as a "sure cure" in all stages. For if the lungs be half wasted away, or there be a cancerous complication, no physician or medicine can cure. The Discovery is, however, an unequalled pectoral and blood-purifier. It specially cures the most aggravated cough, or cold, and in its early or middle stages, consumption. By correcting all irregularities of the stomach and liver, it readily cures blotches, pimples, scrofulous ulcers, "bunches," or tumors. Hundreds testify that it has restored their health, after eminent physicians had failed.—For constipation use the Pellets. As a local remedy for catarrh, use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

The Legislature.
 (Special Correspondence.)
 Dear Standard. The passage of Supply which was finished on Friday, does not furnish me with many interesting items, and I may say at the outset that I do not purpose giving you a very extended letter. Could I step ahead a few days, and look back on the discussion which will probably ensue on the bringing down of the supplementary estimates, I might have more interesting gossip to relate. The passing of the regular items was not attended with nearly so much noise and demonstration as is usual, and was consequently not as interesting as it might have been. The Government have shown that they desire to practice economy by lopping off here and curtailing there, but of course the districts and people affected by their action, will "hardly see, it in that light." The official reports given in the daily papers, supply the details so well, that I consider the task of repeating them superfluous. The item "unforeseen expenses" was skipped in the programme, and under this head in the "supplementary," the amount to be voted for new buildings for which every one is on the watch, will doubtless be named. When that item is disposed of, the Assembly might as well sit with closed doors for the remainder of the session, as far as the ordinary spectator is concerned, for from that moment his interest will depart. The remaining estimates will be brought down in a day or two, and it is said the House will rise this week, but I imagine the amount of business on hand will detain them a few days longer.

The claim of Mrs. Lucy Jones (who by the way is perhaps known to many of your readers) for an indemnity or retiring allowance after many years school teaching, was disposed of by a Committee last week, and found after a misinterpretation of a promise made her by one of the School Trustees in this city, and having no relation to the Government whatsoever. This phantom claim has made its annual appearance for several years, and the committee were determined to get at the bottom of it and evidently succeeded.
 There is a general feeling of satisfaction here amounting in some instances to rejoicing, at the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada, on the constitutionality of the Temperance Act. Its effects are already being seen in the fining of one liquor dealer and the closing up of every bar room in the city. A drunken man is a rare article now, and let us hope the sight of one in the capital is a thing of the past.
 Next week I shall probably inform you of the close of the session, and the doings in the mean time, and till then will bid adieu to your readers.

MANHOOD.
 We have recently published a new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY of the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, impediments to Marriage, etc. resulting from excesses.
 Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.
 The celebrated author in this admirable Essay clearly demonstrates, from thirty years successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured, without the dangerous use of internal medicine, or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
 This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and man in the land.

EQUITY SALE.

There will be sold at the Weigh Scales, in the Market Square, St. Andrews, in the County of Charlotte, in the Province of New Brunswick, at twelve o'clock noon, on FRIDAY the twenty-eighth day of May next, pursuant to the decretal order of the Supreme Court, in Equity made on the twenty-seventh day of January last past, in a certain cause therein pending, wherein Joseph Hamblett and Eliza Hamblett are Plaintiffs, and Warren DeWolf, Magistrate B. DeWolf, Emma DeWolf, William B. Hammond and Louisa Hammond his wife, Benjamin F. DeWolf, Lucy L. DeWolf, Charles B. DeWolf, Kate B. DeWolf and Annie Mable Porter DeWolf are Defendants, with the approbation of the undersigned Registrar, the following mortgaged lands and premises described in the Plaintiffs' bill:

1. A certain piece or parcel of Land, situated lying and being in the Parish of St. Andrews in the County of Charlotte aforesaid, bounded and described as follows—being the South East part or moiety of the Berrington farm, so called, commencing at a cedar post placed on the dividing line between land owned by Thomas Barry, and the Southeastern part of said farm at a distance of seven rods in a southerly direction, along said line to the North-east corner of the said Thomas Barry land, thence in a South Easterly direction along said line, thence in a North Easterly direction along said line, thence in a North Easterly direction, crossing the Railroad to low water mark, thence following the course of the shore at low water mark, to the south-eastern line of land owned by Richard M. Andrews, Esquire, and thence along the said last mentioned line to the place of beginning; together with all the buildings and improvements thereon, subject however to certain covenants and reservations with regard to a road, made and to be made through the said piece of land to the railroad, contained in a deed made by Richard M. Andrews to the said Howard Trenholm, bearing date the twenty-seventh day of May in the year of Our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and fifty seven, as by the said deed reference thereto being had, will more fully appear. With the exception of that portion thereof conveyed by deed bearing date the fourth day of March, in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and fifty eight, by Howard Trenholm and Elizabeth his wife, to Wellington Hatch, and described therein as:

"All that piece or parcel of Land or Water-Lots and privileges, situated at Katy's Cove, so called, in the Parish of St. Andrews, bounded as follows: Commencing at the Northern extremity of Katy's Cove Bridge, so called, thence Easterly to low water mark, thence Northerly following the shore of Passamaquoddy Bay at low water, until it meet the prolongation of the dividing line of land owned and in the possession of the said Trenholm and Richard M. Andrews, thence Easterly along said line until it strikes the line of the St. Andrews and Woodstock Railway, and thence South westerly to the place of beginning aforesaid; said premises hereby conveyed, to include all the Water Lot land and privileges lying to the eastward of the Railroad line aforesaid."

For terms of Sale and other particulars, apply to the Plaintiff's Solicitor, Dated 19th February, A. D. 1880. GEO. S. GRIMMER, Barrister. BENJ. R. STEVENSON, Plaintiff's Solicitor.

HOLD ON!

We will surprise you with the NEW AMERICAN SEWING MACHINE, THE ONLY SEWING MACHINE WHICH HAS A Self threading Shuttle, being ready to work as soon as the bobbin is placed in it. If the machine accidentally turns backwards it does no harm, and breaks no thread or needles. The construction of the shuttle and shuttle race is such, that no wear comes on the shuttle as in other machines; consequently, the shuttle does not wear sharp and cut the thread. Also the wearing points of the machine are adjusted on steel centres, thereby avoiding friction, and adding greatly to its durability.

EFFICIENCY.

The feed can be quickly raised or lowered to adapt it to thick or thin material; also the length of stitch can be regulated from above, while the machine is in motion. The tensions are easily, evenly, and perfectly adjusted, the under tension being self-regulating, and no threading up required in the shuttle. The underthread is drawn from a short, deep bobbin, giving a perfectly even tension, never breaking the thread, making the Lock-Stitch, the strongest and best. It runs lightest of any shuttle machine. Makes the least noise. Has self setting needle. Has the most room under the arm. Never skips stitches or breaks threads. Is most easily learned. Can be instantaneously adjusted to work from No. 300 to No. 10 cotton. Is thoroughly made in all its parts of the best material, and every machine is warranted by the Company and its Agents.

IT IS SOMETHING WONDERFUL,

Attractive and useful. Beautiful in design, simple in construction, and perfect IN OPERATION.

Examine these celebrated machines before purchasing elsewhere. They possess more good points than any other machine in the market; in fact, they are just what we claim for them.

BEST IN THE WORLD.

These machines may be seen in J. M. HANSON'S Shoe Factory. L. A. GUILD, Manager.

Health and Dress.

Dr. Richardson delivered a lecture in London on "Health and Dress." The object of the lecture was to show that reforms were most required in order that dress might minister to health.

New Styles in Parasols. A distinguished feature of parasols is the reduction in the number of the ribs—twelve now being used in place of sixteen, as last year.

Spanish Shooting. These fish often run to a great size, one having been killed which was estimated to weigh over a ton. The natives in Achill are accustomed to fish in boats made of tarred canvas, called "corraich."

Wash Dresses. Very picturesque dresses are made of the gay cotton goods now so fashionably worn throughout the summer.

First Steps in Civilization. Men's first steps in civilization may be traced almost directly in their efforts to clothe themselves; and their first essays in skilled labor are made in the adaptation of the materials which nature has furnished them to use for dress.
