Nervous Headache, Neuralgia, AND SCIATICA.

Is ONE of the best preparations now before the public for the cure of those distressing complaints that have baffled the skill of physicians for ages past. It is perfectly safe and reliable, being prepared from the prescription of a surgeon in the British army, who own-pounded it for the cure of those Nervous Diseases existing in the regiment to which he was attached, and by this Remedy he was enabled to effect a positive cure in every case. Wherever it has been used according to directions, it has never faited to produce the most satisfactory resuring.

For instance, we saw a piebald pig grunting and snorting in his pen, a quarreling member of a quarrelsome family. Now, what happened to the porker was this: He was suddenly seized by the hind leg and jerked up on a small crane. This swung him swiftly to the fatal door through animals before bringing them permanently into the yards and stables.

The amount in, dispute is $2,500,000. There are ten defendants, who make separate defences and employ separate counsel. Three counsel are engaged for each defendant; and the plaintiff, a well-known company, has five. The company's leading lawyer has $5,000 marked on his briefs, and the others on both sides from $2,600 down to $1,500. The pleadings up make a large folio volume. As Sir James Bacon is 85, it is likely to finish him.

THE COMMON EXPRESSIONS. "I feel so lragged," "My food don't digest," "I do not feel fit for anything," which we so often hear during the Spring and early Summer months, are conclusive evidence that the majority of people require at that season especially a reliable medicine that will strengthen the organs of digestion, stimulate the circulation of the blood, and "tone up" the debilitated constitution. Hanington's Quinine Wine and Iron, and Tonic Dinner Pills, taken according to directions, produce buoyancy of spirits, vigor of mind, and give lasting strength to the whole system. Beware of imitations. See that you get "Hanington's," the original and genuine. For sale by all druggists and general dealers in Canada.

Proud stream, thou may'st well be styled,
The Rhine of this fair land,
Where nature lavishly has piled
Her gifts on every hand—
Whether beheld in calm or storm,
Thou art all lovely in thy form. Still in thy pristine granduer drest, Unchanged, thou art to view, Since first the Indian o'er thy breast, Propelled his bark canoe; Ere foot of civilized man had trod New Brunswick's fertile forest sod.

What wondrous tales you could relate
Were speech on you conferred,
Secrets of love, revenge, and hate,
The world has never heard—
Though we would fain, we cannot wrest
Those hidden treasures from thy breast.

THE TRAVELER'S STORY.

One day in the latter part of 1864, I was in the city of New York, preparing for a journey to the far west.

My employers names were Boggs & Griffiths. Boggs was the principal of the firm, and it was he I found in the office. "I sent for you this afternoon," he said,
"ostensibly for the purpose of giving you instructions regarding the firm's business, with.

"Can you keep a secret?" he asked;

"My dealings with you and your partner could answer that question."

"Pardon me—I know you have kept the firm's secrets very well, but this is another affair. It may be a crime I have to confide. It is a secret that if known here, would stain my honor and injure my business."

"Then I can tell it with safety. It will involve you in no great trouble, and will greatly benefit me. If I remember right you have been in our employ over ten

But the worst was to come.

"In our dispute about Clark's seachest we had neglected to put the necessary quantity of provisions on board, and the terrible dangers of starvation began to appal us. We had eaten all but a quantity of salt meat and bread, while our supply of fresh water was entirely exhausted. When the bread gave out we had nothing left but the salt meat, and the inevitable consequence was sourry. Clark was the first one attacked by the loathsome disease, and the poor fellow widn not long survive.

There were four men in the room. The men were seated around a table in a corner of the room engaged at cards. They were all young, savage-looking fellows.

As I turned the handle of the door and boldly entered the room the men turned slightly, but immediately resumed their occupation. Pretending not to notice them I called the landlord aside and inquired if I could obtain a night's lodging.

He replied that I could have lodgings and a supper, too, if I had money to pay for it, whereupon I requested that some a gony of supplication.

I pointed to a revolver that was lying on the dressing stand.
"Then you may be able to defend yourself. Hark!" she whispered, glancing suspiciously back toward the stairway; "there is a stelthy step. If I am discovered it will be my ruin, and yours too."
She was gone before I had time to thank her for the kind service she had done me. I closed my door and locked it.

I den't know how long I slept. I had a terrible dream. It is distinct now, but I remember I awoke up in a fright. It was sometime before I again realized where I was, and the danger I had apprehended. I listened intently. There was a noise—a creaking at the end of the room where I notice the panel. Creak! creak! The noise of the opening of a door, the hinges of which had grown stiff and rusty from disuse. I sat up in bed and seized my revolver. In an instant I comprehended the situation. The panel was a secret door. There was a light from a small lantern which one of the intruders held, and by it I distinctly recognized the features of my crimson-headed landlord. I raised my revolver and pointed it at him. Horror! my revolver.

headed landlord. I raised my revolver and pointed it at him. Horror! my revolver would not work! I should fall a helpless victim to the ruffians. Three of them had already entered.

I sprang from my bed and seized the foremost villain by the throat. But it was three to one. My useless revolver, which I was using as a club, was wrenched from my hand and turned upon me. I fell to the ffoor, and the ruffians held me down.

While they were debating whether I should be killed or not, there came the loud talking or shouting of many voices, the tramping of heavy boots; there came blows on the door, as by an axe, and my persecutors left the room by the secret door quicker than they had come into it.

"In early life I received a good education and was immediately afterward put to a trade. But the trade did not suit me; I longed for a sailor's life; so I shipped before the mast on board a Pacific whaler, and on her visited some of the remotest nations of the globe.

"One of the sailors, who happened to be my messmate, and whose name was Clarke took a great fancy to me, though I never did him. He was a plain, rough, honest fellow, while I was his very opposite, both in regard to manners, and, I fear honesty. That man loved me, if ever one man loved another. Why, sir, he would follow me about the deeks almost as any spannel would have done and always wished to be in my society. Ilow scape from the house, and taken to a lonely place near by and executed.

With a greatful heart 1 arrived at the house of the Widow Clarke and executed my mission. Of course she was greatly surprised and greatly pleased when 1 handed her the money, and said "she was thankful as I could be, that I hadn't been robbed and murdered." I was no at all surprised to hear this.

A TERRIBLE TRIAL.

One day, as I sat musing in my hiding-place, I heard voices near. One of them I recognized as Marion Stuart's. A glance through the bushes revealed the owner the opposite bank," said Marion; "I wish we were over there to get them." "Nothing can be easier," her companion answered. "See here is a boat."

"A very little and crazy-looking one,"
Marion's voice replied.

"It will safely carry one of us, at least," returned the other. "Remain here, and I will go after the flowers."

supper might be served. I was shown into a back parlor, and seated myself at a table, waited patiently for my supper to arrive.

My supper was brought by a pretty damsel of eighteen, who wore such an innocent good-natured face, that I was surprised to find her in a house of so bad repute.

The supper proved a good one, and as it was getting late, I told the landlord I would like to be shown to my room. Without replying, he led me up to a room situated in the second story, near the front of the house, and, leaving a lamp on the dressing-stand, he slouched out. I was just about to prepare for bed when I distinctly heard footsteps out in the hall. Presently there came a knock. "Who is there?" I demanded.

"Don't speak so loud," a woman's voice answered, or they will discover me; open the door, I want to speak to you."

I opened the door. It was the young lady who had served me my supper. She was standing in the hall all of a tremble, and her face blanched with fear.

"Why my dear girl," I asked, "what is the matter?"

"Your life is in danger," she replied.

"The men down stairs meditate wrong to you. You cannot leave the house now, but pray be on your guard. Are you armed?"

"I have come to reward as well a thank you," he began.
"I desire neither reward nor thanks," I answered, roughly.
"The thanks may be valueless, but the

"To offer it is an insult!"
"Even if it be Marion's hand?"; done me. I closed my door and locked it.

The light began to burn very low. I dare not go down stairs for another lamp. I must meet my foes in the dark, if they chose to visit me.

"Even if it be Marion's hand?';
I looked at him inquiringly.
"She has told me all," he continued, "and I have released her from her vow. I have released to the come yours. To-morrow I resume my travels. May you prize the treasure I resign as highly as I would have done."

I seized his hand and pressed it. After

The following countries, it is said were originally named by the Phonicians, the greatest commercial people in the world. The names in the Phonician language, signified something characteristic of the places which they designate.

Europe signifies a country of white complexion; so named because the inhabitants were of a lighter, complexion than those of Asia and Africa.

Asia signifies between or in the middle, from the fact that the geographers placed it between Europe and Africa.

Africa signifies the land of corn or ears. It was celebrated for its abundance of corn and all sorts of grain.

corn and all sorts of grain.

Siberia signifies thirsty or dry—very characteristic. Spain, a country of rabbits or conies. It was once so infested with these animals that it sued Augusta for an army Italy, a country of pitch, from its yielding great quantities of black pitch.
Calabria, also, for the same reason.
Gaul, modern France, signifies yellow-haired, as yellow hair charectarizes its in habitants.

The English of Caledonia is a high hill. This was a ruggid mountaineous provinc in Scotland.

in Scotland.

Hibernia is utmost, or last habitation; for beyond this westward the Phoenicians never extended their voyages.

Britain, the country of tin great quantities being found on it and adjacent islands. The Greeks call it Albion, which signifies in the Phoenician tongue either white or high mountains, from the white-ness of its shores or the high reals of the western coast. Corsica signifies a woody place. Sardinia signifies the footsteps of men which it resembles. Syracuse, bad savor, so called from the unwholesome marsh on which it stood. Rhodes, serpents or dragons, which it produced in abundance.

Sicily, the country of grapes.
