It was sitting in an open window, and when Mrs. Calvary closed the sash it caught the cat's tail. Infuriated, the animal sprang at her, biting and clawing her face. An artery was severed in her forehead, and Mrs. Calvary lost so much blood before tearing the cat off and making her way to a neighbor's that doctors feared she might not recover.

Glencoe Soldier Wounded.

George Bechill received a telegram from Ottawa on Thursday stating that his son, Pte. Cecil C. Bechill, of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, had been wounded in the knee by gunshot and was admitted to the Third General Hospital at Oxford on June 4th. The nature of the wound and the fact that he was in condition to be moved across channel would indicate that his injury is not of a serious nature.

Pte. Bechill was employed as a printer at the Transcript office up to January, 1915, when he enlisted in the Third Canadian Contingent at London. He has been at the front since early last fall.

A town is like a large family. We are interested in each other's welfare, or should be. A cut-throat, every-man-for-himself policy means ruin for any community. The first lesson that any family must learn is that to be happy and successful is unity and mutual assistance. The same applies to the business life of a town and the more generally it is obeyed the more abundant will be the town's prosperity. Stand by each other and patronize the home folks.

Victory for Canadians.

Yesterday's war news states that the Canadians recaptured 1,500 yards of trenches southwest of Zillebeke which were taken by the Germans June 23.

The British official statement describes the Canadian victory as a "gallant and successful assault." In spite of a severe shelling by the enemy's guns, the Canadians held the position won.

Heavy losses were inflicted on the enemy, and three officers and 123 men were captured by the Canadians. For several hours after gaining the position the Canadians were heavily bombarded, but the British artillery in the rear took up the challenge and enabled the victorious Canadians to consolidate their gains. The German infantry made several attempts to counter-attack, but were prevented by the British guns.

Coming so soon after the heavy losses suffered by the Canadians when the position was captured on June 2, the recapture of the trenches will be welcome news throughout the Dominion.

Ekfrid Old Resident Dead.

Mrs. McDonald, widow of the late Archibald McDonald, died at the homestead in Ekfrid on Friday, June 9th, in her 85th year.

Mrs. McDonald was born in Nova Scotia and came to Ekfrid with her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. John Campbell, when quite young. She and her husband were among the industrious pioneers of that time, and after marriage resided continuously on the farm where she died, her husband predeceasing her nine years. Of her brothers and sisters only one is now living, John Campbell, of Middlemiss, now in his 91st year.

The funeral was held on Monday from her late residence to Oakland cemetery, service being conducted at the home by Rev. Stuart, of Dutton.

Glencoe Horse Show, postponed from June 3rd on account of unfavorable weather, will be held Wednesday next, June 21st. The program originally prepared will be carried out, including parade by the 135th Battalion band and officers and soldiers of D company, and military maneuvers. There will be the usual concert at night.

Dinner to County Council.

Officers of the "Pride of Middlesex," 135th Battalion, tendered a dinner to the members of the Middlesex county council in the officers' mess, at Carleton Heights, and for several hours the officers and the county councillors sat together and enjoyed a lengthy program of impromptu speeches, songs and toasts. The councillors plainly showed that they are back of their battalion, and that they are proud of the men who are at its head.

Major D. E. M. Stuart, as chairman of the officers' mess, presided. Lieut. Col. Bart Robson, officer commanding, proposed the toast to the county council and expressed his personal pleasure at having the members his guests. Warden Turnbull replied.

Councillor McIntyre gave an original song of his own composition, and Capt. T. E. Robson also sang. J. C. Elliott, M. P. P., replied to the toast "Provincial and Dominion Parliaments." The National Anthem was sung in closing.

Baseball League.

At a meeting held at the McKellar House on Tuesday evening, representatives being present from the surrounding towns, it was decided to form a league for baseball for the coming season. The teams will consist of Thamesville, Bothwell, Alvinston, Appin and Glencoe. Schedule will be prepared and announced next week.

The following officers were appointed:—Honorary presidents—Dr. Martin, M. P. P., Alvinston; W. R. Ferguson, M. P. P., Thamesville; J. C. Elliott, M. P. P., Glencoe; president, Rev. Dr. Boyd, Thamesville; vice-president, F. Huston, Appin; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Davidson, Glencoe; representatives—D. Livingston, Alvinston; R. McRae, Bothwell; J. Milne, Thamesville; F. Huston, Appin; Geo. Parrott, Glencoe.

The meeting was very enthusiastic, and prospects are good for some real fast baseball during the season.

All "Settled" But the Weather.

The officers and men of D Company are expected to arrive at ten a. m. Wednesday, June 21st. After giving an exhibition of military maneuvers at the grounds they will be entertained by the ladies of Glencoe, Mosa and Ekfrid.

The occasion will be a reminder to the boys that the sacrifice they are making for home and Empire is not forgotten by the ones at home who will endeavor to make the occasion one that will not be forgotten by their guests.

Dinner will be served to soldiers and civilians (civilians being charged 25 cents in aid of the Red Cross). Every citizen is asked to contribute either food or cash, and show some practical sympathy for an undertaking that should have the approval of every man and woman.

Death of Mrs. Doull.

The community was greatly sorrowed to learn on Tuesday morning of the death the night before of Mrs. Doull, wife of E. M. Doull, manager of the Royal Bank at Glencoe. Mrs. Doull was taken ill while assisting in a dramatic entertainment at West Lorne on June 2nd. Symptoms of appendicitis developed after her arrival home, and on the Sunday following she was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, London, where an operation was performed.

The case was found to be a very serious one, complications having set in, and despite the best efforts of the surgeons and hospital staff, she was unable to regain vitality and passed away about eleven o'clock on Monday night. The remains were brought to Glencoe on Tuesday evening, and the funeral will take place today at Oakland cemetery, service being at the house at half-past two o'clock.

The deceased, Margaret Charlotte Doull, was a daughter of the late Thomas G. Matheson, crown attorney of Halton county, and was born at Simcoe, Ontario, August 19th, 1885.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Doull lived at different places in Ontario, where Mr. Doull was engaged in the bank, and came to Glencoe from Embro. Other than a sister, Miss Jessie, she lived with her, Mrs. Doull had no relatives in Ontario. Her mother and a brother live in Honolulu and a brother in British Columbia.

During her brief residence in Glencoe of a little over a year Mrs. Doull made many friends and took a prominent part in Red Cross and other patriotic work. Besides her bereaved husband she leaves a family of four children of tender age.

Record Prices for Shorthorns.

Elora, June 12.—Seventy head of cattle averaging $900 each were sold at J. A. Watts' sale here Saturday. It was one of the biggest Shorthorn sales held in Canada, record prices being realized. Many buyers were present from across the line. Hon. Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture for Alberta, was a buyer. The highest price was realized for Clipper, the Fourth, a two-year-old, owned by J. M. Gardhouse, Weston, which brought $1,125. Four or five cows over $1,000 each were carried on despite a heavy rainstorm.

The Shorthorns were the property of Messrs. J. A. Watts, Elora, J. H. Gardhouse, Weston, and Robert Miller, Stouffville.

Bothwell Man Killed.

George McMaster, liverman, of Bothwell, was instantly killed Tuesday afternoon when struck by a Wabash train on the G. T. R., east of that town. He was driving an automobile and apparently did not notice the approach of the train. The train struck the auto with much force and McMaster was thrown beneath the wheels. He was 27 years of age and survived by a widow and two children.

Siddall and Crawford.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Crawford, "Ash Grove Farm," Lobo, on Wednesday, June 7th, when their daughter, Christina Isabel, was united in marriage to Wm. Glenn Siddall, M. D., of Watford, Ont. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert McCullough, of Ivan, beneath a bower of bridal roses and lilacs, prettily decorated with flags, of which a large Union Jack formed a very appropriate background.

And the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Ada O'Neil, of London, the bride entered and was given away by her father, Mr. Peter A. Crawford. She looked most charming in a gown of Duchess satin with trimmings of Georgette crepe and pearls, wearing a bridal veil with coronet of orange blossoms and seed pearls, and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and maiden-hair fern.

The bridesmaids, Miss Kathleen Crawford, sister of the bride, wore a becoming gown of corn-color silk with overdress of embroidered net, and Miss Clarice Siddall, sister of the groom, was attired in shell pink taffeta with bodice of lace, who carried bouquets of pink roses and carnations. Little Misses Helen and Virginia Clarke, nieces of the bride, made a delightful little flower girl and ring bearer, the former wearing a dainty white embroidered frock, the latter a pale yellow silk with overdress of real lace, each carrying a basket of flowers.

The duties of the best man were performed by Mr. Harvie Siddall, brother of the groom. The groom's gift to the bride was a very handsome gold wrist watch, to each of the bridesmaids pretty gold pins set with pearls, to the flower girl and ring bearer signet rings, and to the groomsmen a gold watch fob. During the signing of the register Miss Mary Shoebottom, of London, rendered a pleasing solo, "The Crown," in a most acceptable manner.

After congratulations the guests partook of a sumptuous repast. The presents were numerous and costly, including cut glass, silver, cutlery, china, oil paintings, and also several cheques.

Dr. and Mrs. Siddall left on the evening train to Toronto, Niagara Falls and points east amid showers of congratulations and good wishes of their many friends.

The bride's travelling suit was of green taffeta silk with touches of black pan velvet with French pattern hat of pale pink.

Nearly one hundred and fifty guests were present from Jackson, Mich., Toronto, London, Watford, Glencoe and Lobo. On their return Dr. and Mrs. Siddall will make their future home in Watford.

KITCHENER LEFT HAMPSHIRE BUT THE LIFEBOAT UPSET

Survivors Too Exhausted To Tell Anything Concerning the Disaster.

A despatch from London says: Various short reports regarding the loss of Lord Kitchener and his staff on the cruiser Hampshire continue to emanate from northern ports. One states that Lord Kitchener and his staff embarked in a small boat and cleared the ship, but that the boat was swamped in the heavy seas. The disaster has now been located at two miles from shore, between Marwick Head and the Brough of Birray, on the north-west coast of the Island of Pomona, the largest of the Orkney group. The disaster occurred only an hour after Earl Kitchener and members of his staff had embarked on the cruiser. A patrol ship in the neighborhood ascertained that it had sighted the warship afloat, and then that it seemed to blow up, but the gale prevented hearing the sound of the explosion. Other ships instantly went in search, but found no trace of the Hampshire, nor for some time any bodies. The captain's gig was dashed ashore on the Orkneys empty. The twelve survivors were flung ashore clinging to a small inflated raft, battered and exhausted. Two or three told those who helped them that Lord Kitchener was aboard, then dropped asleep. Between 70 and 80 bodies were found, but apparently the vessel had lost nearly all their finger nails and toe nails trying to clamber up the cliffs. It is reported that some reached shore alive, but died of exhaustion. A big lifeboat has been washed on the rocks near Thurso, on the mainland. Seven feet of the stern of the craft was torn away, and the boat had prevented hearing the sound of the explosion. Other ships instantly went

GERMANS CARRY BIG WAR VOTE

Two Socialists Oppose New Credit of $3,000,000,000

A despatch from Berlin says: The Budget was passed by the Reichstag on Wednesday, the only opposition being the Socialist votes. There was almost complete unanimity in providing the new war credit of $3,000,000,000, only two Socialists casting their ballot against it. Dr. Helfferich, Minister of Finance, told the Reichstag that the war expenditures from January to May, 1916, were approximately $500,000,000 a month. This, he declared, was extraordinarily small in view of the enormous quantity of munitions that has been provided to carry out the Verdun offensive.

The opposition of the Socialists when the vote was taken on the Budget had no bearing upon the war. The Socialists have been agitating for years for a new system of taxation to relieve the workingman. They have, without exception, voted against the Budget on these grounds. The new war credit will not be drawn upon, it is estimated, until September. Ample funds to carry on the operations until then are on hand from the last loan in February, when more than $2,500,000,000 was obtained.

BRITISH TRADE GROWS.

Imports and Exports Show Equal Increase in May.

A despatch from London says: The Board of Trade returns for May shows that imports increased $12,213,000. The increase was represented principally by food products, grain, flour and chemicals. Imports of cotton, however, decreased $2,750,000. Exports increased $13,405,000, the increase being chiefly in iron, steel, cotton and wool manufactured products.

FRENCH AIR SQUADRON BOMBARDS HOBOKEN.

A despatch from London says: An allied air squadron has successfully bombarded the wharves at Hoboken, near Antwerp, according to a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Maastricht. The Germans are said to have been building destroyers at Hoboken. The squadron was fired on by German batteries, but returned to its base safely.

MUNITIONS OF WAR ACT APPLIED TO LIVERPOOL.

A despatch from Liverpool says: An official announcement given out here on Thursday says the Government has decided to apply to the Liverpool docks that section of the munitions of war act which provides that no employer may declare a lock-out and that no employee may go on strike.

FRANCE HAS ADVANCED CLOCKS ONE HOUR.

A despatch from Paris says: Following the example of Germany, England, Italy and the Scandinavian countries, the Senate on Thursday adopted the daylight saving bill, advancing local time by one hour.

There's a lot of fun in not having money. You can always sit down and plan what you would do if you had plenty of it.

The Late Lord Kitchener entering St. Paul's Cathedral at the recent celebration of "Anzac" Day, in honor of the Australian Colonial troops.

PARCELS FOR CANADIANS IN THE BRITISH SERVICE.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Postoffice Department has received information that gifts sent from Canada to soldiers from Canada serving in British regiments stationed in Great Britain, and to naval reservists and others from Canada serving in the navy, are exempt from customs duty, provided they are addressed in care of the Canadian War Contingent Association, Army Postoffice, London England. Arrangements have been made for this association to act as a central authority for the distribution of such parcels from Canada, and free customs entry is restricted to such parcels as are sent through the association.

GOVERNMENT OF NORWAY RESTRICTS LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

A despatch from Christiania says: On account of the general strike, the Government has passed a law prohibiting the sale or importation of strong liquors, wines and beer and the shipment of liquors throughout the country. The police also have been ordered to prevent the serving of wine and beer in restaurants.

RUSS SINK THIRTEEN BIG TURK SHIPS.

A despatch from Odessa says: Russian torpedo-boat destroyers have sunk thirteen large Turkish ships laden with merchandise, off the Anatolian coast.

RUSSIANS BLOW BREACH IN THE AUSTRIAN FRONT

All Five of the Teuton Armies on the Eve of a General Retreat. It is Reported.

A despatch from London says: Special despatches from Petrograd express the belief that the Russian successes against the Austrians are far more important than appears from the official announcements.

The Daily Telegraph's correspondent ventures the assertion on the authority of a prominent Russian expert that "all five Austrian armies are on the eve of a general retreat, and that Lemberg is in great strategic danger." On the same authority it is asserted that "a strategic breach 100 miles wide has been blown in the Austrian front, involving the armies of General Count von Bothmer and General von Boehm-Ermolli, and part of that of Archduke Joseph Ferdinand."

According to other despatches, the Russian success is largely due to the unprecedent use of artillery, surpassing in intensity any previous efforts on either side on the east front. The retreat of many Austrian trench detachments was completely cut off by a curtain of shrapnel through which it was impossible for any living thing to pass, and the Austrians were thus compelled to surrender en masse.

The Times estimates the Austrian losses at 200,000 men. The Volhynian fortress of Lutsk, 30 miles from the Galician frontier, fell into Russian hands last Tuesday, the first important capture by the Czar's forces since the great Spring drive on the 250-mile front from the Pripiet to the Rumanian border begun.

The fall of Lutsk was announced by the Russian War Office on Thursday night.

New Invasion From North.

The capture of Lutsk threatens the Austrian with a new invasion of Galicia from the north. Vienna despatches express the fear that the abandonment of Dubno, the apex of the Volhynian fortress triangle, will become automatically necessary, and the fall of that stronghold would compel the Austro-Hungarians to retire within the Galician border.

The Russians, according to Petrograd, secured another notable success in the last 24 hours. Pushing forward in massed formation, with an unprecedented outpour of artillery, they pressed the Austro-Hungarian troops defending the "doors of the Bukovina" to the River Strypa, taking strong positions on the Tribuchowice-Jaslowice front. Both places lie a few miles from one another west of the Strypa and south of the important city of Buczac. This success, if followed by further progress, menaces the Bukovina crown land with invasion and the whole Austro-Hungarian army defending it—estimated at from 250,000 to 300,000—with being cut off.

The Russian official report asserts that the total number of prisoners taken in the new offensive has been brought up to 54,000.

A despatch from London says: The Russian invasion of Austria grows apace. Town after town has fallen, according to the Petrograd official reports, and the advantage of the Czar's troops has developed into a continuous pursuit of those of Francis Joseph.

The Volhynia fortress of Dubno has been captured by the Russians, and the Governor of the great fortress of Lemberg has been ordered by the Austro-Hungarian authorities to prepare to leave the city.

The Austrians, on Vienna's admission, have been driven across the Strypa; the Russians have crossed the Strypa above Lutsk, and a strong development along the Dniester have taken Buczac and another army of prisoners has been captured. Buczac is a most important railway town on the lower Strypa, and is regarded as the strategic gateway to Bukovina.

In an effort to stem the Russian flood, 45,000 Austrians have been withdrawn from the Italian front.

It is said that the evacuation of Czernowitz has been ordered, and that there is a panicky feeling in Vienna, which is crowded with fleeing Galicians.

The capture of Dubno means the passing into Russian hands of the famous Volhynian triangle of forts. Lutsk fell on Thursday, and Rovno never really passed into Russian hands.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN.

Chances of Fame and Fortune Missed by the Unobservant.

How many times in the days of our childhood were we told that we should keep our eyes open, and how often do we miss golden opportunities by failing to use them?

How many of us, for instance, can, at a moment's notice, describe the pictures in the various rooms of our own homes, or tell the position in which they are hung? And yet, through observation of little things, fame and fortune have been won.

There is an old story told, for instance, of Watt, who, sitting in his mother's kitchen when a boy, noticed that the lid of the kettle jumped about when the water boiled, and in finding out the reason, he learnt the power of steam—knowledge that he afterwards applied to the making and perfecting of steam-driven engines.

Sir Isaac Newton, while reading under an apple-tree, was struck on the head by a falling apple. Noticing the force of the blow in comparison to the exceeding smallness of the fruit, his curiosity was aroused as to the reason, and he eventually evolved the wonderful theory of gravitation.

And to the observation of men whose games are unfamiliar to us we owe many of the common things which surround us to-day.

A French bread-maker of the name of Jaquin, once observed that water in which certain small fish, called ables, were washed was covered with fine, silver-colored particles. Allowing the sediment in this water to settle, he obtained from it a most beautiful powder which had the lustre of a pearl. This gave him an idea, and, after many experiments, he cented the inside of small glass globules with the powder, and thus manufactured the artificial pearls which are so popular at the present day.

Glass, it is said, was first discovered by a party of merchants who once camped near a river which rises in Mount Carmel. Having no stones at hand on which to rest their kettles, they used some pieces of nitre. They noticed that the heat of the fire gradually dissolved the nitre, which, mixing with the sand, caused a transparent substance to flow, which was nothing more or less than glass.

Felt—of which hats are made—was discovered by a man who, to keep his feet warm, once put wool in his shoes. After some little time he noticed that the moisture which the wool contracted and the action to which it had been subjected between the sole of the foot and the boot, combined with the natural heat of his body, had caused the wool to mat together, and thus suggested to him the idea of making that particular kind of woolen fabric known as felt.

TEUTONS ADMIT MORE SEA LOSS IN THE NAVAL FIGHT

Battle Cruiser Lutzow and the Rostock Destroyed—New Reports on Fight.

A despatch from London says: There was much satisfaction expressed at the Admiralty on Thursday over the publication of the admission by the German Naval Department of the loss of the battle cruiser Lutzow of 26,000 tons and the armored cruiser Rostock of 4,900 tons. British reports of the naval battle off Skagerrack had accounted for these German ships among others, which the Berlin statements had steadfastly omitted. The official admission that the loss of these vessels was withheld "for military reasons" impugns the veracity of the German claim as to the results of the battle generally, in the opinion of attaches of the Admiralty. Further admissions confirming the British reports are looked for.

COCKSURE OF VERDUN.

Germany Claims She Will Occupy Town on Date Arranged.

A despatch from Berlin says: The German General Staff figured that Verdun would fall in five months. German military experts now express the view that all expectations will be over surpassed. In quarters, where facts, not feelings, acts, not assertions, count, it is confidently predicted that Verdun will be in the hands of the Germans in the first week of July.

VICTORY BY RUSSIANS WITHOUT A PARALLEL

Matters Begin to Look Serious for the Whole Enemy Line in Russia.

A despatch from London says: "The victory won by the Russians is without a parallel in military history," says a Petrograd despatch to Reuters Telegram Company. "The Russians now occupy the whole triangular fortified positions of Kolki, Lutsk and Olyka.

"Military writers dwell on the great strategic importance of this triangle, which includes some of the best Austrian communication lines, and connects the centre between Poliessie, Volhynia and Poland and the roads to Galicia and Bukovina.

"The Russians fought their way to Lutsk, a distance of twenty-five miles, in three days, through forests and marsh lands and over battered defences, the invincibility of which the Austro-Germans had been boasting throughout the winter and spring. There is still no response to the Russian thrust, and military writers de-

ENEMY LOSSES 6,800

Total Number of German Sailors Killed is 800.

A despatch from London says: The Copenhagen correspondent of The Daily Mail learns from Kiel that the first unofficial estimate of German losses in the North Sea gives the number of killed at 800, of wounded at 1,400 and of missing at 4,000. A Central News despatch from Copenhagen says that the Swedish steamer Vanda passed the wreck of a gigantic warship on Saturday, the nationality of which it was unable to ascertain. Hundreds of bodies were floating around the wreck and for three hours the Vanda steamed among dead sailors. Near the spot where the derelict was encountered the wreck of a big sailing vessel, apparently an innocent victim of the Jutland battle was sighted.

NEWFOUNDLAND TO REPLACE MEN LOST IN NORTH SEA.

A despatch from St. Johns, Nfld., says: To help make up for the losses suffered by the British naval forces in the recent North Sea battle, Newfoundland authorities began making plans on Friday for a special recruiting campaign. An effort will be made to send forward one thousand men as the colony's share.

YPRES SALIENT MUST BE HELD DESPITE LOSSES INVOLVED

Canadian Authorities Communicated With the British General Staff Concerning Its Abandonment.

A despatch from Ottawa says: In view of the heavy losses sustained during the past two weeks by the Canadian forces in defending the position known as the Ypres salient enquiry has been made by the Canadian authorities of the British general staff. The information obtained in reply is that the position is an important one, and that notwithstanding the serious loss incurred, it is thought necessary to defend it.

attacks, according to the information communicated, have been greater than those of the Canadians, and at other points on the British line where the Germans have attacked the losses on both sides have been no less serious. No additional details of the fighting have been received by the Militia Department, but an eye-witness account is expected to reach Ottawa from Sir Max Aitken in a few days. The losses, according to the latest official statement, have been over 6,000 of all ranks.

ON CRUISER INDEFATIGABLE

The picture is a deck view of the British cruiser Indefatigable, which was sunk. The German Admiralty reports the ship was only 100 survivors and that they were rescued by German ships.

ENEMY LOSSES EQUAL.

Canadian Batteries Stood to Continuously for Two Days.

A despatch from London says: A former Canadian Pacific employe at Toronto now with the artillery, who has just arrived in London on leave, told a correspondent of the strenuous experiences of the last week-end, when his battery stood to, continuously, for two days. "Although the Canadians suffered severely," he asserted, "the enemy suffered at least equal losses owing to the combined efforts of our artillery and our infantry. As usual, it was with lachrymose gas shells that the Germans fought, but our heavy artillery, including a certain brigade of which one battery is made up of Montreals, did most effective work in backing up the bombing attacks of our infantry. The ammunition columns kept up a good supply. The German artillery aim is fairly accurate, but we have several battery commanders who excel in keeping the enemy ignorant of their location."

The Justice Accepts Unanimous Nomination of Republicans.

Chicago, June 11.—Charles E. Hughes has the unanimous nomination of the Republicans, has resigned from the Supreme Court and entered the campaign with a bank, and Theodore Roosevelt has declined, for the present at least, the whirlwind nomination tendered by the Progressives at virtually the same instant Hughes was named at the Coliseum. Charles W. Fairbanks, Vice-President from 1904 to 1908, was nominated for the Vice-Presidency again. These extraordinary developments came rapidly on Saturday, and seem to solve the campaign difficulties of the Republican hosts.

YOUNG FOLKS

Francie's Queer Ride.
"You may take Francie up on Steep Hill with you," mother said, "but you mustn't forget her in your play, Elsa. She is very little and I count on you to care for her."
Elsa blushed. She remembered, she knew that mother had been many times when Francie had been forgotten. She took hold of the little, sager hand. "I'll keep her in mind every single minute, this time," she promised.

So off to Steep Hill they went. Elsa in a big hurry because great plans were afoot, Francie running to keep up with her sister's quick walk. Francie was a part of the plan, but she did not know it; she knew only that it was lovely to be going up to the hill with Elsa and Sally and Rob. She made up her small mind that she would try to be as much like a big girl as possible, so that they would always let her go.

At the top of the hill Rob and Sally were waiting. "The horses are ready," Rob cried, "and I see you have the colt!" He led the way to a little clump of trees at the very top of the hill. "Yes, the horses are still standing," he said. "Elsa, here's yours, and there are mine and Sally's."

He pointed as he spoke, and Francie looked hard. She could see a few slim little trees, but no horses, and no colt, and her eyes grew big with wonder.

They grew still bigger when she saw Rob catch a sapling by one of its branches and bend it nearly to the ground. "Here, Elsa," he said, "I'll help you do it." Elsa took her seat on the bent-down end of the little tree and caught hold of two little branches, and she was ready. Then Rob let go and the tree sprang high. Elsa bent forward and came down, then rose again, shouting and laughing. It was wonderful! In a moment more, Sally and Rob were doing the same thing on other trees. Then Francie knew what they meant.

"My horse!" she cried. "Where is my horse?"
The riders looked down. "Oh, we forgot!" Rob said. "Francie is the colt, you know. Run round, colt, and kick up and jump." Then they went on riding like the wind.

Francie did not want to be a colt. A big lump rose in her throat. "But I must not cry," she thought, and began to run round among the saplings. She did not know exactly how a colt ought to act, and by and by she stopped and held up her hands.

"Why, the poor little thing!" said Sally. "Elsa, you have the willingest horse; take her up behind you."

So in a minute more Elsa had stopped her fiery horse and was holding its head while Francie scrambled on. The horse reared a good deal, but Francie got well into the saddle, all smiles, and was holding tight, when suddenly Elsa spied a four-leaf clover.

"That makes five this week!" she cried, and made a sudden reach for it that caused her to drop the reins. The sapling horse reared again, higher and more swiftly than anyone had ever seen him rear before, and he did not come down. Francie gave a little shriek, for she found herself very up in the air, clinging to the slender tree with all her might.

"Oh! oh!" cried Sally. "Look what you've done, Elsa Ball!"
Elsa was already looking, and wringing her hands as she looked. "How did it happen?" she cried. But she remembered very soon.

"Keep still, Francie! Rob called, getting quickly off his own horse. "Don't move an inch!"

Francie kept very still and very quiet. She did not cry even when Rob decided that he had better not try to get her down himself, for the slightest jolt might make her fall. "I'll run for Uncle Phil," he said.
But Elsa caught hold of him. "No, I'll go myself," she said. "You're stronger than I am; you stay here to catch her if she falls."

So she ran as fast as her feet would carry her, through thorns and brambles without end, on a short cut to Uncle Phil's. When she found him, and they came hurrying back, Francie was still holding on.

"What a brave girl to be sure!" said big, tall Uncle Phil, as he stood on a log and lifted her down in his long arms. Francie laughed, and Rob and Sally clapped their hands, but Elsa hung her head.

"Poor legs!" Francie said, pointing to the scratches the briars had made on Elsa's legs.
"Don't pity them," said Elsa, seizing her. "They ought to hurt."
Uncle Phil bent the tree horse down again and swung Francie into the saddle. Then he stood beside her with one hand on the horse's back, and she had a beautiful ride. She rode until her cheeks were pink again and her eyes shining.

"I'll never forget her again," Elsa was thinking.
And Francie whispered into the tree horse's green ear, "I'm so glad I didn't cry!"—YOUTH'S COMPANION.

WARRIOR FROM INDIA.

Sir Partab Singh Has Returned to the West Front.

Sir Partab Singh, the famous soldier of India, wants to die in the trenches if he has to die, and although the Indian troops have gone from France to other fighting zones, Sir Partab has returned to the western front at his own request. This veteran Indian fighter, 71 years of age, comes of the mighty Rajput warriors, and since youth has followed the life of a soldier. An Indian writer in one of the London newspapers in telling the story of Sir Partab, says:

"Thirty-eight years ago Sir Partab went to Kabul as a member of the mission that was sent there. Nineteen years later he accompanied the Mohmand expedition as extra aide-camp to Gen. Buller. The next year he served in the same capacity with Gen. Lockhart in the Tirah campaign on the Indian north-west frontier. While serving in the last campaign he received a wound in the hand, which fact, with his characteristic stoicism, he hid from everybody until the Gen. noticed it and ordered the doctor to attend it—just in time to avoid blood poisoning."

"When the Indian troops were being sent to assist in quelling the Boxer Rebellion in China Sir Partab persuaded Lord Curzon, then Viceroy and Governor-General of India, to let him accompany the expeditionary force. While serving in China the Maharaja learned to hate the Prussians, who went out of their way to treat him and other Indian rulers as 'coolies.'"

"Sir Partab is as good an administrator as he is a soldier. His administrative genius has been demonstrated by the work that he did in Jodhpur—a state more than three times the size of Belgium and with about as many inhabitants as Denmark—during his two terms of Regency and another as Prime Minister of that state. His rule over Idar, a state in the Bombay Presidency, 2,000 square miles in area, extending from 1902 to 1911, was also progressive and enlightened. He voluntarily abdicated the gadi (throne) of Idar in favor of his adopted son in order to assume the Regency of Jodhpur."

"CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS."

Britain to Enrol Them in Non-combatant Engineering Corps.

The British Government has found a place in the army for the conscientious objectors, men called up for service under the Derby recruiting scheme who had conscientious scruples against fighting and who were excused from enlisting. There were thousands of such and to give them a chance to serve their country, although at the same time cater to their little vanity against bearing arms, the War Office announced the formation, for the period of the war, of the "Noncombatant Corps." The officers and noncommissioned officers will be selected from regular officers personnel not fit for general service, but fit for service abroad on lines of communication.

Companies of the new corps will be trained in squad drill without arms and in the use of the various forms of tools used in field engineering. The privates will be equipped as infantry, except that they will not be armed or trained with arms of any description. Pay will be that of infantry of the line, but the men enrolled in the new corps will not be entitled to draw working pay, nor the proficiency pay given to others for professional skill in arms. Officers and men transferred to this corps from other regiments will receive infantry pay, together with proficiency and service pay.

Sawdust by-products. Neglect to Utilize It Involves Tremendous Waste.

Few persons have ever given much thought to the sawdust problem. And yet—

"Experts of the New York State College of Forestry estimate that 11 per cent. of the lumber cut in the United States every year is wasted in the form of sawdust. That is to say, in the sawing the lumber, 11,000,000 feet of perfectly good timber is ground up and left to rot."

Of course, it is impossible to saw up logs without making sawdust. But lumbermen are just beginning to appreciate the fact that there is value in this by-product, and that neglect to utilize it involves tremendous and unjustifiable waste.

A little of the sawdust is used in the form of "wood flour," in making stucco, molding, etc. There is opportunity for the development of big industries along these and similar lines. Vast quantities of the wasted sawdust might be used for the manufacture of wood alcohol. Many kinds of sawdust could be used, too, for paper pulp. All such adaptations of this supposedly worthless material not only serve to create wealth directly, but help to conserve our timber supply.

Future generations may find sawdust heaps more profitable than gold mines.

IMAGE A PEACE BAROMETER.

French Exports' Figure's Fall to Mark End of War.

High overhead above the ruined and desolate streets of Albert, in France, the great gilded figure of the Virgin with the infant Christ still hangs from the tower of the Church of Notre Dame de Brebieres. For more than a year she has hung thus, at an angle of some fifteen degrees below the horizontal, facing downward to the street below, holding the infant out above her head.

In local French belief the day when the holy figures fall will see the end of the war. The German shell which throws down the Blessid Virgin of Brebieres will shatter the throne of the Hohenzollerns, it is maintained.

During the last week of two the immediate region of Albert has been one of the most active on the whole front. From the neighborhood of Fricourt, by La Boisselle, to Authuille and beyond there have been almost nightly raids and blowing up of mines.

Bee Rearing in Denmark.

A careful study of the rearing of bees began in Denmark about 1864. The number of hives that year were estimated at 78,000, but in 1865 the total had increased to 139,000. The great advance in the number of hives was due to the new methods introduced, the most important being the so called Dzierzonke, by which the honey is gathered without injury to the bees.

After 1865 the culture of bees made no progress and on June 15, 1914, there were only 97,000 hives. Some 28,000 persons are engaged agriculture chiefly in connection with some other employment.

Made in Canada.

Not for a few pennies, but for a considerable number of francs.

The Ham Fair, which is joined to the Old Iron Fair, is also a typical Paris market, and this year was marked by many strange features. The sale of sausages, for which it is noted, was ostentatiously free from anything suggestive of German production, and one noisy war stood by his stall in a fantastic costume and called attention to the notice over his head which ran: "Taisevous, melez-vous, les produits ennemis nous degoutent."

The turning of M. Millerand's famous warning to talkative people in public places to suit his purpose pleased the hum merchant and his customers enormously.

The old iron and the curio mongers also did a fair trade this spring. Although the foreign artists who generally throng there to find studies and valuables were noticeably few, several soldiers on leave stood guard over motley collections of rubbish.

TO PROCURE PURE WATER.

A French Scientist Tells How to Make a Filter.

A good filter that will find favor with those who find it necessary to procure pure water from streams has been devised by a French scientist.

An ordinary tin box is soldered to the bottom of a metal water pail. The floor of the box is perforated with rows of wholes, which extend through the pail bottom. A coiled spring attaches the cover of the box to the bottom and is made to pass through a tin tube in the center of the box. Alternate layers of powdered charcoal and well-packed cotton wool are now placed in the box, and the pail is suspended in a stream.

Gradually, as a result of air pressure, the pail will fill up with filtered water. Then, by loosening the chain, the spring cover drop back on the box, and the pail, full of water, may be lifted out of the stream. The water may be further sterilized by adding a few crystals of potassium permanganate.

In most cars the details of control seem to be planned with an eye for convenience in assembling the various parts.

But the Overland control was arranged just as you would arrange it if you were designing a car for your own convenience.

You control the electric magneto, the electric lights, the electric horn, with your finger tips, without bending forward.

To start the motor you merely touch a foot button in the floor.

A woman or girl can drive the Overland in safety. Its control is easy and instinctive.

The Crisis of the War.

With the tremendous successes of the Russians in smashing the Austrian front, and the stubborn defence of the French at Verdun, many have been led to revise the views of the present able duration of the war. Even Lord Kitchener is reported by Mr. A. G. Gardiner to have said shortly before his death that while he had estimated three years at first, the length of the war he now looked for an earlier close. Mr. J. L. Garvin, another prominent journalist in London, sums up British opinion as contemplating not only an early, but an almost immediate crisis.

It is difficult to see how Germany can face the ruin of the Austrian armies in Galicia, and retrieve these losses while still holding fast to Verdun and the Finnish lines. All the fronts have been robbed to keep the Verdun action going. But this has been emptying the German forces into a bottomless pit. To cease this attack is to admit defeat, and yet the Austrian breaches must be stopped unless the Russian advance to Vienna is to be admitted, with a certain cessation of Austrian operations.

Nor can Germany cease the attack upon Verdun without admitting defeat to her people at home, and if this be done, they can only be a short space between the knowledge, and either revolution or submission. Besides, if the Germans slacken at Verdun, the French are ready to follow up their advantage, and an advance up the valley on Metz would be a blow against which Germany could not easily stand.

The allies are ready to attack at every point where weakness develops, and their armies and munitions are at the maximum, while Germany's are decreasing. The attempts of the German navy to demonstrate its usefulness and importance seemed to be a last, despairing effort to make an impression. The only impression that can be made in this war must take the solid form of men and guns and victory.

Germany has made advances but she has gained no victory. Her aggressive warfare has reached its limit. There may be an early collapse as some observers believe. But there should be no slacking on this account, for opinions do not make facts.

There may be another year of defensive war on the part of Germany, withdrawn to frontier lines, and all the resources which we have accumulated and all the men which we may yet be able to enlist may be needed to end the strife. There should be no relaxation of any effort to bring our forces to the necessary fullness and perfection. The cause is too great a one to risk, it may be, at the very moment of success.

Artillery Battle Verified.

Troopers H. F. Walker and C. C. Beechill, formerly of the 7th Canadian Mounted Rifles, that was raised in this district and quartered in London, have sent the following verified account of an artillery battle. Both troopers have since been reported wounded:

As we sat there in our dugout,
And Belgium's shells did rattle,
"Zip" was once a while bang,
Bang, bang, bang, bang,
We were sitting round our fire,
Each one looking for some tea,
When a double-buzzed our position,
But that sixty-pound "H. F."
We hit the trench for safety,
With our men in full view,
For we weren't for being buried,
Where our dugout used to be.
They burst around like thunder,
But we stood and tried to out,
When a three-ounce piece of shrapnel
Hit the back of our dugout.
But then our "heavies" opened,
And the rear of shells and guns
We knew were in the trenches,
On the front line of the Hun.
And when the shells had ceased to come,
The rain came in their train,
And we returned to shelter.

The full strength of the extract is secured in this form and do their work thoroughly.

"TOBY, M.P."

Stories of Sir Henry Lucy and His Famous Parliamentary Comment

For nearly thirty-five years Sir Henry Lucy has contributed the Essence of Parliament to Punch, in the character of "Toby, M.P.," which he created, and by so doing has established a journalistic record of which he has every reason to be proud. Sir Henry's Parliamentary experience goes back nearly half a century, and no man has a greater fund of political stories. He considers that Gladstone is the greatest man he has ever met, and tells an amusing story as an example of his persuasive oratory.

The G. O. M. once dined with the Lucys, and held forth in his finest vein. Among the guests was Du Maurier, a notoriously red-hot Tory, but when Gladstone had gone he turned to his host and declared, with an emphatic bang on the table, "Well, I'm going to be a Liberal for a fortnight."

There is no man in the House of Commons whom Sir Henry does not know, and an example of his wit is provided by the story of a new member who went up to Sir Henry one day and said, "I know your face quite well, but I cannot remember where we have met. Pray tell me what place you represent. I cannot bring it to my mind." "I am a member for Barksbire," said "Toby, M.P.," alluding, of course, to his canine cognomen.

Apart from his Parliamentary work, Sir Henry has had many varied experiences as a journalist. As a boy he seemed to be marked down for a commercial career, for he was apprenticed to a Liverpool merchant. When he was nineteen, however, he joined the staff of The Shrewsbury Chronicle as chief reporter, afterwards migrating to London, where he quickly established himself as one of the most able journalists in the Metropolis. In his fascinating autobiography, "Sixty Years in the Wilderness," Sir Henry relates that, as a pressman, he went down a coal-mine in South Wales, a silver-mine in the United States, has voyaged in a submarine boat, and seen two men hanged.

One of his reminiscences is in connection with the execution of Henry Wainwright, for what was known as the Whitechapel tragedy. Calcraft was the executioner, and many years afterwards he called upon Henry Lucy in London, and in the latter's absence from home left his card. "In the circumstances," says Mr. Lucy, "I had observed with relief the notification that he had retired from business."

Queen Victoria's Favorite Premier. It is generally believed that Queen Victoria regarded Disraeli as her greatest Premier. Judging, however, from a story which Mr. John Murray, the famous publisher, tells, this is scarcely correct.

"A man still living," says Mr. Murray, "who was in the intimate councils of Queen Victoria, in conversation with Her Majesty on one occasion when Lord Beaconsfield's name came up, said, 'I suppose you regard Lord Beaconsfield as the greatest of your Prime Ministers?' The Queen replied quickly and emphatically, 'No, no!' Lord Beaconsfield was an extremely able man and a great friend of mine, and one for whom I had a great personal regard, but he was not my greatest Prime Minister. Sir Robert Peel was a greater Prime Minister than Lord Beaconsfield, but we now have a greater than either of them. The Queen referred to the late Lord Salisbury."

"Unearned Increment." As an example of Manchester wit, this story told by Dean Weldon of Manchester, in his Reminiscences, would be hard to beat.

"It happened," says the Dean, "that a certain candidate for Parliamentary honors, whom I will call Mr. C., had begun life in humble circumstances—with a monosyllabic name; then upon his marriage with the daughter of a wealthy manufacturer he assumed a double-barrelled name and became Mr. C. D. In one of his electioneering speeches, when he was attacking what was then the Chancellor of the Exchequer's favorite doctrine of the unearned increment," he insisted upon the difficulty of defining and distinguishing the various increments of property.

"What is unearned increment?" he cried. "I defy anybody in the hall to tell me what unearned increment is."

"From the back of the hall came at once the crushing rejoinder, 'It's the 'ypen between C and D.'"

Their Day is Gone. The unprecedented spectacle of some of the most famous clubs in London actually advertising in the newspapers for members is one of the results of less than a year and a half of war. Clubs on Pall Mall and Piccadilly that for years have had waiting lists so long that members rushed round to enter their sons' names immediately after the christening have abolished entrance fees and are clamoring for candidates.

Some of the well-informed in clubdom declare that the day of the London club has gone never to return. Golf and motoring have decimated club attendances and club finances. The war has completed the havoc by giving many a member the excuse to hand in a resignation that was timidly pondered for years.

The Badge of the King's Messenger. Captain Stanley Wilson, M.P., at the time of his capture on board ship by the enemy was carrying despatches as a King's messenger. In the bad old days when it was all in the game to steal despatches the messengers ran the risk of murder, but now, apart from war conditions, they make their journeys like ordinary travelers, except that their baggage is exempt from search at frontiers. At one time King's messengers wore uniforms, but now their only badge of office is a silver greyhound carried round the neck, but not always displayed. They receive a salary of £400 a year, with an allowance of £1 a day when on duty.

The foundation is not the most important thing

True, you can't have a good barn without a good foundation, but don't forget either that the roof has to stand most to the punishment. Upon it falls the burden of resisting the destructive influences of weather and changing seasons.

Now, the question is "Where am I going to find a roof which will meet these conditions?" Certainly not in wooden shingles which have rapidly deteriorated during the past few years. Not in anything so perishable as wood, nor yet iron, which lets in driving rain, but rather in a permanent mineral composition such as Brantford Roofing.

Now, let us look at a section of Brantford Roofing. First, you notice it has a pure, long-fibered felt base. This is thoroughly saturated with a filler coat of asphalt or mineral pitch. Then it is given another coat. Finally, the surface is thickly covered with crushed slate. You can imagine what a job rain, snow, fire or heat would have penetrating a roof like that. As for comparing with shingles on the score of permanency, or protection, or appearance, or even economy, there is no comparison. You put a Brantford Roof on once, and it will last as long as the building; it will always look well and it will never need repairing.

Why not let us send you samples, also a copy of our booklet which explains how Brantford Roofing is "always on the job." Or, if you will give us the dimensions of your barn or house roof we will gladly submit estimates without charge or obligation.

TRACED IN FIRE.

Glow Pictures Are Spectacular and Easy to Make.

To make glow pictures forty parts of saltpeter are added to twenty parts of gum arabic, and the whole is dissolved in two parts of water. An ounce or two of this mixture will be sufficient to prepare a good many pictures. A few sheets of white paper should next be secured, and this should be rather thin, similar to that which is used for typewriting.

Now take a clean pen and draw the picture on the paper, using the solution, which should be slightly warmed by standing the bottle in hot water. Anything may be delineated, the only essential point being that all the lines must connect. The final line should be drawn down to the corner of the sheet, and this spot may be indicated with a pencil cross. Hang the sheets up to dry, and when the process is complete the lines are practically invisible.

To bring up the picture first of all turn down the corners of the sheet of paper in such a way that it is raised above the surface which will not be injured by the slight smoldering of the paper. Get a match and light it, placing the glowing end of the point where the pencil cross was made on the sheet.

A trail of red fire will at once start down the picture, following the lines which have been drawn. No other part of the design catches on fire save that which has been treated with the solution. Finally the picture stands up in strong black lines, and the effect is very curious. There is absolutely no danger from fire in this little experiment.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

INTENSIVE WHEAT GROWING.

Starting Results Claimed For a Russian Method.

Some years ago, says an English publication, a Russian farmer discovered a method of increasing the yield of wheat in so startling a manner that no one believed he was telling the truth. The Russian declared that it was possible to get seventy pounds of grain from one seed and to make an acre carry forty-five tons.

That does sound like a miracle, and we do not vouch for it, but here is the method, and if any farmer has the patience to try it he will certainly be surprised at the result.

Each grain is planted separately in a sunken bed about fifteen inches deep and three and a half feet in width.

As soon as the grain sprouts the little blade is covered with a thin layer of earth about an inch and a half in depth. The result is that you get three stalks instead of one. At the end of three weeks the hoe comes into use again, and the three stalks being covered with earth, turn into nine stalks. This process on being repeated a third time results in twenty-seven stalks, and the Russian in question reported it ten times in all, so that at last each grain produced 69,049 stalks. If the seed is first sown in the ordinary fashion and then transplanted to the pit before mentioned you get an even stronger growth, so that after only eight coverings more than 105,000 stalks have been produced from a single grain.—Youth's Companion.

Mythical Horses.

Pegasus ("born near the source of the ocean") was the winged horse of Apollo and the Muses. Bellerophon rode this animal when he charged the Chimera.

Sleipnir ("the black horse of Odin") had eight legs and could carry his master on sea as well as land. This animal is believed to typify the wind, which blows from eight different points.

Al Borak ("the lightning") was the horse commissioned by Gabriel to carry Mohammed to the seventh heaven. He had a human face and the wings of an eagle. Every step he took was equal to the farthest range of human vision.

According to Thessalian legend, the first horse was miraculously brought forth by Neptune striking a rock with his trident.

A Voracious Monster.

The most voracious of all marine beasts of prey is the orca, or killer whale. It reaches a length of twenty-five feet, and its jaws bristle with teeth from four to six inches long and as sharp as a dirk knife. Its digestive power is proportioned to the tremendous efficacy of its jaws. It seems also to be an atrocious glutton, as one specimen mentioned you get an even stronger growth, so that after only eight coverings more than 105,000 stalks have been produced from a single grain.—Youth's Companion.

A Boomerang.

"Call that art!" exclaimed a would-be critic, pointing to a painting in a studio. "If that daub is a work of art, then I'm an idiot!"

"The latter part of your statement," rejoined the artist calmly, "would seem to furnish conclusive proof that it is a work of art."

A Lovers' Quarrel.

She (turning at the door)—I think you are just hateful, and I'm never going to speak to you again, so there's no use coming into the music room after me, because I'll be on the rustic bench at the far end of the conservatory.

Drowned His Voice.

Teacher—Tommy, I asked you to spell cinder. Why don't you do it? His Sister—Please, miss, his mouth's watering so he can't talk.

It is better to begin a good work in the evening than not at all.—Old Saying.

"We'll tie the horses here, and wait a bit. When we can pretty nigh see our sights, we'll begin our sneak. They're a blanked sight nearer than I thought they was."

As he spoke his words were justified. The black belt of gloom which surrounded the hollow in which they lay, was suddenly started in a dozen places by quick red jets of flame, and the silence shattered by the ringing reports of as many rifles, after which the darkness came back again and the silence, but for the screaming of a wounded horse.

"Guess they beat us on the sneak," muttered old Al coolly. "Get into cover, boys, quick."

Probably no white man but Al could have led the ranch posse through those woods at night as silently as he had done. They had stirred no heavy beast to precede them and carry a warning to their foe. There had been no fluttering of disturbed wings in front of their advance, except that once; but a warning need not be printed in large type for an Indian to see it.

Ever since Dan "broke that tree" the stalkers had been stalked without suspecting it.

When the volley was fired Dick Rolt had had his eye on the exact spot in which one of the red stars of light had burst. He had heard the bullet sing past him, and for a fraction of a second had seen the prone figure of a man who fired the shot. But he had not replied to it.

The brilliance of the momentary flash had accentuated the darkness for him, and taken away from him all idea of locality, so that to have replied would only have been to waste a shot and betray his own hiding-place.

He was lying now behind the dead horse waiting to snap at the next star which should appear or to meet the rush which might have followed had the attacking party consisted of white men.

He had no notion how close his fellows were. He could not hear them, nor see the outline even of the nearest bush. It was still pitch dark on the ground.

Suddenly a hand closed round his ankle, and a voice whispered:

"We've got to wriggle out of this. Don't lift your head, but just slide round on your belly and snake it after me. There's no hurry. I'll show you."

"But the horses?" asked Rolt.

"Yours is dead, ain't it? If they want to shoot the others we can't stop 'em, blank them. Come," and Rolt who by this time had his head near old Al's heels, saw these draw quietly away from him.

Imitating his companion, Rolt squirmed on his belly through the bush which closed over him, so that it was only with the utmost difficulty and half by instinct that he managed to follow. Al, of whose tortuous progress he could see but little, even when he was within arm's length of him.

He knew that he was going down hill, and that the ground under him was growing softer and softer, until at last he might almost as well have been swimming, but he could see nothing.

"Euchred them so far," panted Al, cheerfully, "and now I guess we'll take some killing. Out with your jack knives, boys, and I'll show you a trick as I learned of the Crees," and he began to hack down the boughs and young trees all round him, building with them a kind of "wickie up," or small circular booth, such as Indians use for bath houses. Over the top of this he threw his blanket, which he had carried strapped to his back until then, and over that again he piled loose soil and soda, keeping a nervous eye all the time on the edge of the timber.

"Chuck your coat over your sticks if you haven't got a blanket," he said to Rolt, "and then fix it this way," and he went down on his knees and began to scratch with his knife like a dog who is going to bury a bone.

All the while he took out a pipe upon the blanket, throwing with it moss and leaves and small boughs, until he had finished with it it looked like a great ant heap just sufficiently within the cover of the brush to save it from detection.

Then he lent Rolt a hand with his mouth, ordering the boys to do the same at their respective corners, and "Shove boys; shove like hell, if you ever want to eat bull beef any more. They ain't here yet, but they can't be long now."

When men are working for their lives it is marvellous how much can be done in a minute, and these men, knowing how much depended upon their speed, had their shelters finished when a low "hiss" from Al sent them all into their holes like rabbits into their burrows.

There was no sign of Indians that Rolt could see, but as Al lay motionless he limited him, and for a full fifteen minutes almost held his breath in his burrow.

At the end of that time he heard a voice behind him, and turning, saw Al lying at full length in the scrub, calmly whittling a pipeful of tobacco.

"They can't see me here," he said, "I'm too far back in the scrub. I see you got your bury good and deep. Keep a whittling of it out so as you can lie low and the bullets'll go over you. Savvy? I'm agoin' out now to take a passer and see if them fortifications look natural."

"Dan" for such a fool, commanded the Boss.

"I ain't no fool, Boss. No Injun ever hit a man at a thousand yards, and I've got to know how our little shell will strike the gallery. Likewise I'm anxious to know if we have a full house, and so saying, he struck a match and wandered out into the open.

In the most unconcerned way in the world the old fellow strolled along straight towards the timber, smoking as he went, and looking back occasionally at his handiwork, and for about three hundred yards he went unmolested.

Then a shot was fired, the dry earth was kicked up a hundred yards in front of him, and his hat fell on the ground whilst his rifle went to his shoulder, and his own shot was echoed by two more from the cherry patch, under the cover of which tiny volleys he ratched back to his lair.

"All right," he said, as he crawled under his mound, "the seats is all took and the curtain's up. It's just three hundred yards to where I dropped my cap, and now I'm goin' to put in time diggin'." If I was you I'd do the same. It's goin' to be safer and easier than up a tree by and by," and after that for a long time the Boss saw no more of Al.

CHAPTER XX

The Chinook wind which had been blowing before midnight had dropped, and in the last hours of darkness it had been succeeded by a crisp clear air with more than a suspicion of frost in it, so that when the dawn came, it spread through skies of such rare lucidity as are never seen except in high northern lands.

Along the horizon the light grew gradually, until in the east the heavens were of a pale lemon color, so clear, so utterly fine and transparent, that the gloom of the rigid barrier of pines hid the eye with its contrast of stiff solidity.

The pine belt itself was not quite-proof against the dawn. The tops of it were touched with a pale glory and, though, the gloom of the black boughs swallowed up the light that struck them, a hole here and there was caught by it and brightened with a wash of tenderest golden grey.

But the prairie welcomed the dawn, which flooded its frost-touched sage brush, so that it rolled in sheets of sparkling silver, from the pines to the cherry patch and away beyond as far as the eye could see towards the still shadowy bed of the Fraser.

The dawn had made all things plain, had emphasized every outline, the peace of it called attention to every least sound which might break the holy stillness of the wak'ng day, and yet Rolt, listening in his burrow, could not hear so much as the breaking of a twig, or see a sign of life in the direction from which he had fled.

The Farm

The Value of Good Stock.

Eight years ago a certain dairyman had a herd of ten grade cows that averaged between six and seven thousand pounds of milk in a year. This herd was considered to be the most profitable one in the district, as it produced about 100,000 pounds of milk than other herds of the same size. A pure-bred bull of a dairy breed was being used and the heifer calves from the most promising cows were raised. However, the owner was not satisfied, and, as a good deal was being written about the milk yield of pure-bred cows it was decided to purchase a cow and a couple of heifers. The three animals cost $400. This was not a high price, as prices for good animals in a run, but it was considered in that neighborhood to be an enormous figure to pay for a cow and two heifers, when the average cow was selling around $75. This cow dropped a heifer which grew to be a big-framed cow that gave over 10,000 pounds of milk, testing four per cent. fat, her first year in milk. One of the heifers purchased gave over 12,000 pounds of milk in one year, and the other one 7,500 pounds as a two-year-old, and came up to 1,000 pounds for 316 days as a four-year-old. The investment turned out to be a profitable one, as these animals gave milk enough to pay for themselves in one year, if it had been sold at the present market price. Besides this, $50 was refused for the heifer calves the day they were dropped, and the half-bred sold from $75 to $100 a piece, when a two-year old. The sire used in this herd is from high-producing, high-testing cows, and as a result many of the heifers have proven more profitable than their dams. In eight years the pure-bred females have increased in number from three to nineteen. The standard in this herd is set high and the cows not qualifying are not allowed to remain.

Not only is the present herd more profitable than the grade herd previously kept, but it is much more interesting working with stock that have some breeding behind them. The expense of securing foundation stock does not keep pure-bred animals. However, it is not necessary to purchase a whole herd in order to go into the business. One or two good females are sufficient for a start, and cows that are giving a large flow of milk can be purchased for about one-half that the ordinary grade cow is selling for at sales. True, many grade cows will give as much milk as pure-breds, but they are the exception not the rule. It costs no more to keep pure-breds than it does to keep grades, but they usually produce more milk and butter fat and their offspring commands a higher price than the ordinary calf. Good stock is within reach of every dairyman. Although it costs a little more to secure such animals than it does grades, the extra cost is made up many times by the increased production.—Farmers' Advocate.

How We Grow Potatoes.

Our soil is a sandy loam. The variety of potatoes that we grow is the Dooley. As a general rule we follow potatoes after fall wheat, or clover. We plow the wheat stubble after harvest and give lots of cultivation. We apply the manure directly from the stalls, 20 to 25 loads to the acre and work directly into the soil. We harrow frequently during the spring and seed about May 24.

We use good, sound seed of medium size, and have each seed piece the size of a hen's egg. Our method of planting is to plow the ground and seed every third furrow, running the furrows five inches deep. We spray with Bordeaux mixture to control blight, and expect extra bushels of yield for every extra cultivation we give the crop.

We regard seed selection as most important in keeping up yields. Before the general digging we go over the field and turn out the most likely looking hills and select seed tubers from the best of these. We take no of the plants; some are stockier and bushier than others. These are preferred, as we believe that such plants resist disease best and they can be cultivated longer.—Alex. Lomont in Farm and Dairy.

Stockers and Feeders.

1. Best purchasers of stockers and feeders on all markets either refuse to purchase horned cattle or buy at 40 to 50 cents. cwt. less.
2. Feeders have better results from cattle without horns, for the following reasons:
 - (a). Dehorned cattle are more docile, easier handled, less wild or nervous.
 - (b). Dehorned cattle are more thrifty and show better gains.
 - (c). Dehorned cattle ship better and sell better when finished.
 - (d). Dehorned cattle cannot gore and maul one another.
3. Young calves should have the benefit of caustic. Properly applied, this prevents growth of horns.
4. Horned cattle result in enormous losses, in meat and hides a waste which Canada must eliminate.
5. Horns on cattle are absolutely without use. The day is past when horns were a protection from one another.

Machine Gun "Deserted."

Italian Lad Decorated as Result of Unique Adventure.

How a machine gun was forced to desert the German army is recounted in the story of the heroism of a 16-year-old Italian volunteer in the Russian army—Constantino Zepolli—whose part as the leading figure in the episode earned one of the two St. George crosses he has won.

Overhearing his commander expressing a wish that some one "would silence or capture" a gun which was stationed at troublesome proximity to the Russian trenches, Zepolli, on his own initiative, crawled on his stomach for a hundred yards, located the position of the gun, returned from the danger zone and conferred his trench fellows, and crept forth once more, this time dragging a coil of stout rope. Reaching the gun, he tied one end around it without being discovered, and again reached his own lines, with the free end of the rope in his clutch.

Presently the Germans were astonished to observe the gun disappearing toward the Russian trenches. It was successfully dragged from their possession, a number of Germans being killed in an effort to prevent its departure.

Feeding Young Chicks.

A mistake, that even a great many experience, poultrymen make, is the feeding of the chicks too soon. When the chick leaves the shell, it comes into the world with a sufficient supply of nourishment, in the form of egg yolk, to last it for several days. Therefore, what a chick requires at that stage of its existence is not food, but warmth and rest. It is not wise to be dogmatic about feeding, as given strong, healthy chicks every system will prove successful, but the following may be used as a guide. When the chicks are removed to their brooding quarters, there should be some coarse sand or fine chick grit scattered where they can have free access to it. They should then be left until they show positive signs of hunger, which would be between two and three days after hatching. They may then be given some bread crumbs that have been very slightly moistened with milk; this may be scattered on clean sand or chick grit. If being brooded by a hen, she will see that no food is allowed to be around, but if in a brooder, feed which the chicks do not pick up in a few minutes should be removed, as nothing in feeding causes so much trouble as leaving food of that nature around until it is sour. The chicks should be fed five times a day. The following system may be adopted or altered to suit conditions: First feed, bread crumbs moistened with milk; second, finely cracked mixed grains; third, rolled oats; fourth, moistened bread crumbs; fifth, finely cracked mixed grains. Too early to rest the chicks out on to the grass at once, green food should be supplied in the form of young lettuce, sprouts, greens, or any other tender, succulent food that is acceptable. After the chicks are ten days to two weeks old, coarser foods may be allowed; all chances should be made gradually. The infertile eggs may be boiled and mixed with meat food and the bread and milk discontinued. Hoppers in which are placed cracked grains, dry mash or rolled oats should be easily accessible to the chicks. As soon as they become accustomed to the mash feeds, and if the chicks are on range it will be found that after a time they will get careless about coming when called; it may be dropped and dependence placed entirely upon the hopper feeding. Place grit, water, also, if possible, a dish of sour milk, where the chicks will have free access to it. Nothing provides animal food in better form than does milk; the chicks like it and thrive on it.—F. C. E. in Canadian Farmer.

FARTHEST NORTH RAILROAD.

Russia Will Have a New Outlet to the Ocean.

"A railroad farthest north, tapping the polar seas beyond Archangel, its whole length running through a region of intense winter cold, is one of the most important constructive results of this destructive world-war," says a statement prepared by the National Geographic Society at Washington. "Stimulated by an imperative war necessity for a port nearer the west and the long battle-line than Vladivostok, this new railway has been driven north with the same fierce energy as that called forth by the dash for enemy positions. Finland, Lapland, Russians, alike, have labored unremittingly to fasten a permanent way of steel between Petrograd and Semenovka, the latter city far beyond the Arctic circle, on the northern shore of Finland, near Norwegian Nord Kap. Work upon the new line began a few months after the outbreak of the war, and it has been pushed forward, as a means of over-reaching the blockade by land and sea that isolates Russia in the west.

"The undertaking required the building of more than 650 miles of railroad through an unfavorable country, in many places water-soaked, crossed by low-banked rivers, filled with countless lakes, large and small, and, through a great part of the year, frozen numb and buried under feet of snow. Construction has gone forward from the north and from the south, but there still remains a considerable middle section to be laid before the completion of the project.

"Semenovka may not be the warm water port that the Muscovites have been steadily demanding through the years of his empire, but, nevertheless, it is a port on ice-free water; navigation finds an open way usually around Nord Kap for several score miles down the northern coast.

"The building of this new port, giving Russia a city on open, western water, the construction of the new railway into the heart of the north, and the building of a naval station here, beyond the domination of any river power forces together by far the most important effort of the whole war to date."

Sifting the Blame.

The trouble with you is the same as with Mr. Brown," said the doctor. "He was worrying himself to death about his prostate bill. Now he is cured." "But how did you cure him?" asked the patient. "I told him to stop worrying, and he has," replied the doctor. "I know," was the sad reply. "I know he has; but I am his grocer."

After a man gets about so full he can make himself believe that other than a think he is perfectly sober.
