But while Buffalo Bill's Wild West was unable to reach the city yesterday, so efficient were the under-studies who put on the wild west show at Queen's Park, and so realistically were all the details carried out, that everybody was as fully satisfied as if they had seen a performance by the great scent himself and his company of cowboys and Indians.

It was with no thought of impending trouble and misfortune that a Jolly settler had come to the boundless prairie to find a new home. With his handsome wife (formerly Miss Hughena McLean), and his adopted daughter, the beautiful Wilhelmina Ward, he had established his log cabin with its straw-thatched roof, on the track-less wilderness, far from the haunts of men. But as the occupants of the humble home were engaged in their peaceful avocations, a cloud appeared on the horizon in the shape of a wagon surrounded by a hay rack filled with stalwart braves in all the point and circumstance of war paint, feathers and gleaming weapons. With the stealth and caution which distinguishes the crafty redman in Fenimore Cooper's novels, the wagon with its load of concentrated diabolicalness was driven up to the house. The redskins attacked it with great fierceness and blank cartridges, and a furious fusillade followed. In the frightful scene of carnage only one man was fearless and dauntless, and he was the director of ceremonics, who leaned gracefully and unconcernedly against the corner of the building, regardless of the leadless bullets which The were not flying around him. dusky fiends had slain the brave number was astonishingly large in pioneer and were carrying off the view of the fact that the day was not lovely maiden, when help appeared a holiday, and that many of the visit-from an unexpected quarted. wounded or taken prisoner. On one of the latter, Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Jewelry-Store-Being-Robbed, the dis-tressed Wilhelmina Ward swore a horrid oath of vengeance for her wrongs, and with her own fair hands she scalped him. His body was then hanged high as Haman, and riddled with bullets, while the same treatment was meted out to Big Chief Bobbenette. The scene closed with the removal of the corpses on an Indian sled for interment in the Indian fashion, which means burial twenty feet high in the air. The actors in the border drama were: Cow-boys-Walter Bartlett, Dr. Fred Wood J. W. McIntosh, Dr. H. R. Abbott, John M. Daly, George N. Weekes and Wm. A. Carrothers. Indians—Mayor Rumball, ex-Ald. THE CAKEWALK.

The grand fancy dress cakewalk was next put on. It was soberly announced ed by Starter Jones, and the people looked for a contrast to the farsical performance just ended. Something elegant and graceful was looked for. In a minute or so a pink poke bonnet showed shyly above the platform. When the wearer advanced the crowd roared with laughter, for the dainty creation rested above face of E. J. MacRobert. Then he crowd knew what was coming. Miss Ejaymack's costume was just too lovely for anything; but it was a sight in itself to see Billy Small, Tom Wester and other residents of chaste Chicago stealing sly glances at the coy damseel's neat little foot. The people laughed at her, but they screamed when her partner was finally found. Jimmy Herrick was her man, and what a partner he was. Jimmy always was a wise boy. Now people know why he's been toying with furnaces and eight-oven ranges all these years. His tight trousers and blouse, and the towering form of his Lady Lou helped to obtain the effect of ludicrous insignificance that he courted. Miss Robina Been—it blushed as pink as her hosiery when Jeff Wood would have her dance with as much spirit as Jim McCormick said she must. After a while she shed her shyness, till Jim hid his modest face behind the stand. Many others took part, but the kittnish movements of Miss Eejaymack so delighted everybody, and her partner's maneuvers were so majestic ally grave and dignified that they were awarded the prize.

AFTERNOON CALLERS. During the afternoon, Old Ben, well known to all the old-timers, called upon the visitors. The old hack was driven by Hugh Sharkey, sen., and three old colored residents, Henry Chrystler, Moses Brennan and Richard Smith, sat in it. Old Ben Fieldhouse was a city character long ago, and the appearance of the outfit was rated by many of the more ancient enlookers as one of the most original things on the programme.

Uncle Eben and Aunt Sally were two happy old people who shall be nameless, who paid the Old Boys a visit.
Their appearance was important, more for the reason that Sal's costume suggested so many ideas to the young woof a score years ago was. Sally and her man afterwards took part in the cakewalk, and danced with alarm ing agility.

THE PRIZE DANCING. The prize cakewalk was seriously enjoyable, more particularly that of the Grayson tots, who wore the red stockings. Dell and Wesley Wood were fine too, and were loudly applauded. Mr. Wm. Logan and Miss Martha Logan

CONCERT IN THE PARK. Several thousand people enjoyed the concert in Victoria Park in the evening, and those who attended had provided for them a rare musical programme consisting of just sufficient popular old-time familiar tunes to infuse enthusiasm. The Cleveland City Railway Band furnished the first hour's music, which constitled both classical and popular The frequent encores accorded the visitors by the blg crowd were deserved, for the shot pregramme was splendidly rendered. There were over two hours of continuous music and each number was a treat. The circle surounding the band stand was closely, packed, and the cloud of dust raised by the mov-ing mass of people was very uncomfortable, a nuisance that could easily be abated were the watering carts put on a couple of hours previous to the concert. The weather was delightful. "Keep off the grass" signs were disregarded entirely, and people, both old and young reclined on the green sward in all parts of the ground, enjoying luxurious ease. A SETTLEMENT OF TRAPPISTS

Winnipeg, Its Bracing Climate and the Future of Manitoba.

An Interesting Settlement of Medieval Monks-Their Pastoral Life-Strange Religious Customs-Self-Denial.

An interesting illustrated article appeared recently in the Toronto Saturday Globe, headed "Winnipeg in April." The sketch of this interesting western city is from the pen of Hon. Judge John A. Barron, K.C. Mr. Barron will be well remembered as the Liberal representative of North Victoria in the House of Commons, a position he continued to hold until 1891. After a successful law practice he was promoted to the bench. Mr. Barron possesses the literary gift, and is a strong and graceful writer. Reference is first made to the pellucid atmosphree of the capital city of Manitoba, the city of the shining sun. So favorably effected are the people by their climatic surroundings, that they never tire of singing the song of preference for their own clime. The extreme cold of winter, together with the dry air, tends to produce in the inhabitants of Winnipeg and the rest of the province as well a sort of hardi-

Winnipeg will grow and grow and continue to grow, more rapidly perhaps than any other city in Canada, but it will be a long time before any other large town or small city in Manitoba will get out of pantaloons. The province is, "par excellence," a for railroads, and promoters land seem to know it. The iron rail is reaching out in all directions, and soon there will be as many roads as trails. He who tills the soil is the body, backbone and sinew of the country and is thought to be neglected unless every ten miles or so elevators are within his reach. The railroads many remarks were heard to the effect that it was the best concert given by that organization for a long grain. When they might adopt a smokeless furnace, Londoners suffer a sulphurous black fog to stifle them. Perhaps the city cannot hope to escape watery mists of greater or less density, but only the rampant use of bituminous coal makes possible the hideous vapors which render the London winter a tercoal smoke at £3,000,000 annually, while 1 the ravages on buildings involve a loss beyond computation.

For manufacturers we demand a smokeless furnace, and for domestic grates the substitution of anthracite or oke for the bituminous coal now used. Special coke ovens should be erected to supply fuel to private houses, and it could shortly be sold at a price which would drive coal out of the market. The difficulty of lighting coke fires eculd be obviated by placing gas jets wider the hearth.

The weekly organ of the manufacturers resent the sweeping statements of Sir Charles Cookson and Sir William Richmond.

The Ironmonger asserts that all the principal metropolitan steam raisers use smokeless fuel, and their furnaces are smokeless or employ gas firing charges. Private consumers burn the greater portion of bituminous coal used in London, but, says this journal, we emphatically dispute the assertion that the dear, dirty, wasteful, open English fire corrupts the morals of the metropolis, directly or indirectly. Coal makes smoke, to be sure, and smoke intensifies fog, but the sentiments and in oil, water-color, pastel and other superstitions clinging round this fire do more good to the nation, promoting the love of home and family affection. Smoke does harm in polluting the atmosphere, but let us keep our coal fire and bear with the gusty indignation of these mighty moralists."

report of the board of examiners for the Part I. junior leaving or public school leaving examination. The results at all the examination centers in any county will be found under that county. The figure 5 indicates that the candidate has passed in the five subjects of the examination; the figure 3 indicates that the candidates who are exempted from the composition and geography have passed in the remain-Silk Ribbon, for neck wear, in kitchen use, at 25c, 40c, 49c, 59c ing three subjects of the examination. The certificates of successful candidates will be forwarded within three weeks to the high school principals, and in the case of centers other than high schools to the public school in-spectors concerned. Under no conditions will candidates obtain certificates or copies of marks at the education department. In order to avoid unnecessary trouble and expense unsuccessful candidates are recommended to obtain the advice of the principal after receiving their marks before making an appeal. The results of the other July examinations will be issued in about ten

Unity of the Empire.

The Empire Review contains a very thoughtful article on "Helps and Hindrances in the Matter of Unity of the British Empire," from the pen of the Hon. David Mills. Minister of Justice of Canada. Sentiment, vague and Indefinite as it may have been in the colonies a quarter of a century ago, is at present strongly in favor of imper-

The constitution of England is well Buited to territorial expansion, and many of the large additions that have been made to the Empire possess forms of government similar in principle to that of the mother country. British institutions served as models for the colonies. The same disposition to participate in the government which rules them characterizes all who dwell under the aegis of the Union Jack in distant parts of the world.

Contrasting ancient with modern states in the matter of territorial acquisition, the writer makes an important observation. In early times the extension of empire was largely a matter of conquest. Subjugation was the rule, and in many instances the more influential portion of the inhabitants were sent into exile. The city states of the Greeks and Romans were entirely different from modern political organizations. Rome, for instance, was a city state possessing exclusive power and influence, and independence, so far as the adjacent territory was concerned. Emigrants from such cities went abroad, and founded new colonies wholly independent of the mother state One great cause of the downfall of ancient their lack of unity.

From the charters granted by the Sovereigns of England to earlier adventurers, it would seem that these discoverers expected to find wealthy states. whose inhabitants might be put under the yoke and the wealth confiscated. Notwithstanding the discoveries of English navigators near the end of the fifteenth century, it was not until one hundred years later that efforts were made to establish British colonies on the North American continent. The first great impetus to colonization then was the desire to escape the jurisdiction of the Established Church, and to establish communities where there would be an air of religious freedom. Then followed, in England, that struggle between the crown and the parliament, which only served as a stimulus to expatriation.

"This struggle between the crown and parliament gradually led the English people to accept the doctrine of the omnipotence of parliament, a doctrine well designed to place parliamentary supremacy at home upon a secure basis. but hardly to give settlers in Britain's dependencies the same security for their liberties as those remaining at home possessed. Englishmen who went to America claimed to carry with them as much of the law and constitution of the parent state as was suited to their interests and their circumstances; and among these common law rights they claimed that of representation in their own local parliament, and the right to be taxed only by the body in which they were represented. But the doctrine of the omnipotence of parliament, well suited as it undoubtedly was to maintain the rights of parliament against the pretensions of the crown, in England, where the English population was represented, gave no corresponding security to the rights of those who had gone out to the colonies, so that, in theory at least, the constitution, as interpreted by parliament after the English revolution, gave to British colonies no inherent right, and no constitutional security for their liberty. This doctrine left no legal barrier by which those liberties were protected.' The colonists maintained from the first that they were possessed of complete powers for local self-government. While claiming such powers for themselves, they admitted that the parliament of the mother country should possess the right of dealing with international relations, but repudiated any attempts of the imperial parliament to override the local legislature of a province in matters pertaining exclusively to local affairs. This principle so strenuously upheld by the colonies is now recognized. "The crown," says the writer, "where no power has been conferred by imperial statute, has no general power to legislate in a colony by settlement without the aid and advice of a representative assembly. It has no more right to tax the inhabitants of such a colony than it has to tax the inhabitants of the United Kingdom?"

It seems a reasonable contention that colonies by settlement have, under the common law of England, an inherent. though subordinate right of self-government. The King is the head of their local executive government. He essential part of their legislative assembly. It is essential to a proper understanding of the powers of self-government in the dependencies to rightly appreciate the consequences which flow from the doctrine that the powers of the legislative assemblies are not delegated, and that the King is an integral part of their legislature.

In a conquered colony the right of granting or withholding representative institutions rests with the crown; the case is otherwise in a colony formed by settlement, in which case the inhabitants have a right to be governed by English law. Nor can such a settlement colony be taxed by the crown as a conquered colony may be. "It is," says Mr. Mills, "but the principles of the constitution applied to a settlement of Englishmen, within certain dominions of the crown outside of England.

The writer, in his article, refers to the relation of Britain to the colonies prior to the American revolution. The British colonies in America had extended their territory until it embraced the whole region from Hudson Bay to the Gulf of Mexico. The capture of Quebec was the coping stone in the territorial acquisition. Both the colonies and the mother country had become elated over the result. But it seemed that this period of great imperial unity had to be also one of great peril. The colonists and the mother country entertained very diverse views on the subject of constitutional powers of the mperial parliament, and of the constitutional rights of colonists. The British Government claimed the right to levy taxes, and to legislate for the colonies without restriction. The colonies would not stand it. An attempt was made to exercise an arbitrary jurisdiction over them, with the result that half a continent was lost to the mother country.

The safeguard to imperial unity, we see, then, lay in the extension of the rights to the colonies which Britain herself exercises in the matter of selfgovernment: the danger will arise from any attempt to curtail those rights. The Minister of Justice concludes with the following paragraph:

"Again, there is abroad in the Empire a strong feeling in favor of permanent unity. And I earnestly nope that the growth of this feeling may not service. In the words of Whittier: be hindered or delayed by undertaking to determine at the outset an imperial constitution, instead of permitting it to grow up, by slow degrees, in the way the public exigencies may point our. Enduring political constitutions are the outcome of the national life acting upon the affairs of state as they arise, and we must be content to give them free play, and await patiently the result. and so an imperial constitution may arise in the course of years as strong as flexible, as that under which, at the present time, the United Kingdom is governed."

Letters to the Editor.

Every daily paper throughout the land receives numbers of letters for publication. Many of the writers prenationalities was their exclusiveness, fer that their compositions should appear under noms de plume. Whether this is owing to characteristic modesty or the desire to shelve responsibility, it would be hardly fair to judge. The following incident is related of a person who had a grievance to air against a fellow-man. The discontented one went to the editor of a certain daily newspaper, and outlined his plans of attack. Upon reading the letter, the editor handed it to his correspondent for his signature. But the visitor objected to signing his name; he wished the newspaper to shoulder the onus of ROBBERS GOT the attack!

A certain number of "Letters to the Editor" are of this nature. Such people thoughtlessly presume that a newspaper has no honor to maintain. They forget, or evidently do not realize, that the modern newspaper is a large concern, impersonal in a sense so far as individuals connected with it are concerned, but possessing a distinct personality as well as a certain policy. It expresses opinions, endeavors to instruct, and to act as a wise counselor. according to the best light it has. In this respect it takes on the nature of a person, and is amenable to all the privileges and duties of a private cit-

It is, we maintain, however, perfectly legitimate for the public to write on any conceivable topic, subject, of course, to the approval of the editor, provided the writer sign his name, thereby holding himself responsible for the views he wishes to see in print.

There is a certain halo about a good name which we blame no man for protecting. We have long since noticed the tendency for young authors to shelter their own name under some sobriquet. They launch their literary ventures on the vast sea of uncertainty, and in case of a disaster escape with slight injuries to their reputation. The same tendency is discerned among the large amount of correspondence sent for publication in the daily press, but as such correspondence is only occasional we see little reason why the writers should be so solicitous in refraining from personal indorsation. There is a difference of journalistic opinion and usage as to admitting letters over fictitious titles; and no doubt there are cases and subjects in which it matters little one way or the other; but it seems clear that it is derogatory to the dignity of the press that it should be allowed to become a screen from behind which one man can personally assail another without respon-

Floriculture.

The florist branch of the Canadian Horticultural Association, which has recently met in convention in this city, the London Horticultural Society much credit is due for the general floral improvement in many of the homes of our city. There is always something ennobling and refining in the contemplation of flowers, appealing as they do, not only to the sense of smell by their fragrance, and to the sight by their delicately tinted foliage, but to a still higher sense: for has not the poet said that to the sensitive soul "the meanest flower that grows can bring thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears." A flower is the nearest approximation to perfection that we have: "to paint the lily, or to throw perfume on the violet would be wasteful and ridiculous ex-

Flowers or something analogous have been chosen as emblems by the more important nations of the world. France has selected the lily, England the rose, Ireland the shamrock, Scotland the thistle, and Canada the maple leaf. A story is related of members of the three branches of the United Kingdom each extolling his national emblem; the rose and the shamrock had received due credit from their devotees. when in turn the Scotchman attempted to put in a word for his national emblem. "Your rose," said he, "is beautiful; the shamrock is certainly fine; but I'll defy any one of you to sit on the thistle."

There is a deep significance in the use of the flower or plant as a national emblem. Such an emblem arouses feelings in the human breast akin to the sentiment that forms a halo around our flag. We should let this token of natural purity be also a sign of national purity. It is gratifying to note that in many schools, flowers are to be seen, and it is hoped that the tendency to surround children with such influences will continue. As much in this direction can be done in the schools as in the homes.

The person who fosters a love for plants and flowers is performing a real "Give fools their gold and knaves their

BIG BOOTY !

Looted Smelter Works of $340. 000 in Gold Bullion.

Dug a Tunnel From 'Frisco Bay Through Loose Sand, Stole at Night and Got Away.

San Francisco, Aug. 7 .- About $340,-000 worth of gold bullion was stolen from the Selby Smelting Works at Vallejo during the night. Access to the strong room, where the bullion was stored, was secured through a tunnel which the thieves had bored from the edge of San Francisco Bay to the building, some distance from the water's edge.

It is supposed that the thieves took their plunder away by boat. The Selby smelter is the largest on the Pacific coast. Ores are sent there from all parts of the western slope for reduction.

The works are located near the bay shore, about 30 miles from San Francisco, and through the clever device of tunneling through the loose sand the robbers secured a princely sum, the loss of which was not discovered until after the works resumed operations today.

THIEVES FORGOT A BAR OF

GOLD. A. J. Ralston, president of the company, says the thieves excavated a long tunnel from a point near the railroad tunnel and under the strong room connected with the works, and secured bars of bullion aggregating in value over $250,000. They transported the gold to a boa in waiting near the company's wharf, but in their hurry to get away left one

The robbers took the unusual precaution of strewing their tracks with red pepper, presumably to prevent bloodhounds from taking up the trail. Each bar of bullion was numbered and a description is now in the hands of the detectives. The robbers cannot dispose of the plunder without having it remelted and mixed with other metals. They may bury the gold or sink it in the bay, awaiting a convenient time for its removal.

At the Selby works the gold is kept in a steel-lined strong room. The rob bers tunneled until they got directly under the room, and then cut through The tunnel was a skillfully constructed work which it must have taken many days to complete. Once in the strong room, the thieves had only to help themselves. The tunnel that the robbers excavated was about three feet in dimeter.

and gave them plenty of room in which to work. It is supposed that the dirt from the tunnel was taken out at night and droped in the bay. First reports stated that the tunnel was two or three hundred feet long, but according to the late advices, it is only about ten feet in length. One of the officials of the Selby smelting works said: "We find that the plotters were aided by some one thoroughly familiar with the system employed at the works, and one fully informed as to the construction of the vault. Last night one of the watchmen employed about the pre-mises heard noises inside the vault, and informed his fellows that the devil or ghosts were inside the vault. They laughed at him, and made no investigation, and thus the robbers were left unmolested at their work."

THREE KILLED; SEVEN INJURED

By Unexpected Explosion of Blast in a Rock Cutting.

Three-Year-Old Child Fell Into a Par of Hot Water and Was Scalded to Death.

Winnipeg, Aug. 7.-Reports from Port Arthur say that three men were killed and seven injured by the unexpected explosion of a blast in a rock cutting on the Canadian Northern construction near Sturgeon Falls.

CHILD SCALDED TO DEATH. Richmond Hill, Ont., Aug. 7 .- The 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Bovar, near Richmond Hill, was scalded to death by falling in a pail of hot water. Her mother was washing and the pail of hot water was standing on the floor. Mrs. Boyar removed the clothing from the child immediately, but could do nothing to save its life. The child died before a doctor arrived. CHILD DROWNED.

Orangeville, Ont., Aug. 7.-Caledon Lake, a resort about three miles from this town, was the scene of a distressing fatality, last evening. Little Nora Orillig, the 3-year-old daughter of H. H. Orillig, manager of the Bank of Hamilton, at Niagara Falls, was playing about one of the boat houses with some other children, and her nurse missed her. The little one was found lying in the water in front of the boat house, life being extinct. It is supposed she fell in while playing on the landing in front of the boat house.

KILLED HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW. Montreal, Aug. 7.-A murder is reported from Morin's Flat, near St. Sauveur, Terrebonne county. On Sunday last a farmer named Blaes got into an altercation with his brother in-law, a man named O'Flaherty. Words led to blows, and it is alleged that O'Flaherty pulled a revolver on Blaes, who succumbed shortly afterwards to his injuries. Coroner Mingault was notified and went to the place and will hold an inquest.

TRAIN WRECKING ATTEMPTED. Smith's Falls, Ont., Aug. 7 .- What appears to have been an attempt at train wrecking was made here yesterday morning about 1 o'clock. The Montreal express was coming in, preceded by an engine running light, when just as the latter had reached the edge of the town an explosion occurred, raising up the front of light engine and tearing off one of the drive wheels, but otherwise doing very little damage. A short time ago sever al pieces of iron were placed on the track near the same place. The air is full of surmises, but has not yet been discovered who committed these out-

In the states of the Missouri valley the severe and protracted drought has been very largely relieved, but to the eastward of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio River, only partial relief has been afforded by insufficient showers, the drought conditions in the upper Ohio valley being more serious than at any previous time this season. The east gulf and portions of the South Atlantic States and Texas also need rain. In the Middle Atlantic States and New England and throughout the Pacific coast districts the week has proved generally favorable. In the great corn states, late corn and fortunately a much large proportion than usual of this year's crop was planted late, has experienced a general, and in some cases, a decided improvement, but the early corn has been practically ruined."

LIVE STOCK MARKETS. TORONTO, Aug. 6.—As usual after a holiday business at the cattle market to-day was dull. Almost the only line in which energy was made was that of which energy was made was that of choice butcher cattle, the supply of which was shorter than for several markets past. There were plenty of common butchers to more than satisfy all demands; choice butchers were worth $4.35 to $4.60. The export trade was very slow; the prices were not materially affected, Mr. Jesse Dunn paying $5.20 for a very choice lead. Average good export sold Mr. Jesse Dunn paying $5 20 for a very choice load. Average good export sold at $4 75 to $4 90 and $5; stockers, 400 to 800 lbs, brought $2 25 to $3 25. The sheep trade was dull and prices were easier. The runs of late have been too heavy, and the selling is a forced operation. Lambs are worth $2 50 to $3 25. Hogs are unchanged. Crawford & Hunniset bought of 5 loads of exporters at $4 75 to $4 90, and a load of butchers at $3 60. NEARLY HYPNOTIZED BY A McConnellsburg, Pa., Aug. 7.-The ower of a snake to charm was proven by an incident near here on Thursday. Miss Lavinia Long was returning from here to her home, west of the Ridge, and as she became tired walking she sat down upon a rock beside the turnpike, between the farms of J. K. Tritle and Mrs. Summers. In a few minutes a large blacksnake of the racer species, came down off the high bank along the road and approached to within a couple of yards of her, and erecting the fore part of its body stared her straight in the eyes, its head gently swaying to and fro. Miss Long says she became almost helpless, a benumbed feeling took possession of her; she was scared, but did not seem to be able to move and could not take her eyes away from the gaze of the reptile, which became immovable and made not a sound. With a strong effort the young woman arose and got upon a fence, the racer stealthily following her, its eyes fixed on hers and its tongue darting in and out in a bewildering manner. Just as Miss Long began to feel dizzy and drowsy, fairly hypnotized, a team approached, and at the noise the snake glided off. Miss Long nearly lost consciousness when rescued, and since her experience has been so nervous that it is almost impossible for her to The men in the team saw the snake, but could not catch it. LIVE WIRE CAUSED DEATH. Chicago, Aug. 7 .- Lawrence McGriskin, aged 50 years, a teached in the Gallistel school, South Chicago, was killed last night by a live electric wire, which fell from a post and struck him.

FUNERAL OF DOWAGER EMPRESS

Members of Royal Family Leave for Homburg Friday.

Resolution of Condolence and Sympathy Adopted by the British House of Commons.

London, Aug. 7.-King Edward, Queen Alexandra, Princess Victoria and Prince Nicholas of Greece, who is the guest of their majesties, will start for Homburg Friday to attend the funeral services of Empress Frederick, to be and navy only, value at $2, now sellheld in the presence of the family next CONDOLENCE.

A resolution providing for an address of condolence with King Edward and sympathy with Emperor William on the death of the Dowager Empress Frederick, their sister and mother, respectively, was unanimously adopted in the House of Commons today. Mr. Balfour, the government leader, in moving the resolution, highly eulogized the exemplary life of the daughter, wife, and mother, who throughout her life, strove to the utmest to promote mutual comprehension and sympathy be tween two great nations, upon which so much of the future of civilization REAL LOSS depends. REMAINS EMBALMED. The remains of the dowager empress have been embalmed by Prefessor Renvers, and lie embedded in a mass of tube and la France roses.

NATIONAL MOURNING. Berlin, Aug. 7. — A special edition of the Reichstag Zeitunger contains an imperial cabinet order giving notice of the death of Empress Frederick and or dering six weeks' national mourning, beginning today. The order also directs that all public amusements, including and theatrical performances be suspended until after the funeral. SIMPLE SERVICES.

In accordance with the expressed wishes of the deceased, the funeral services will be simple as possible under the circumstances. The bedy will remain on the bed where she died until ready for the coffin. The roses in which it is almost buried are from her private garden, many of the blooms being from bushes cultivated with her own hands. No one will be allowed to view it except the members of the immediate family and household.

On Thursday the royal family will attend the funeral service in the castle at which the Bishop of Ripon, who was summoned by the Empress, will officiate. Only the immediate family will be present. On Saturday evening the coffer will be accounted from Frei Sunday afternoon a funeral service will be held in the presence of the family of the Empress, her household, a few of her friends and other priviledged persons. It is expected here that King Edward will be present. The royal family will go to Potsdam Sunday evening, and the body will be taken there Monday evening. The funeral service in the mausoleum at Friedenskirche, Potsdam, will be held Tuesday. As is was be no state ceremony, the service will not be attended by all the German royal personages. It will be as simple as possible. Emperor William has received a telegram of sympathy from the Pope.

PRESIDENT McKINLEY'S MES-SAGE.

Washington, Aug. 6.—President Mc-Kinley has sent the following message to Emperor William, of Germany: "State Department, Washington, Aug. 6.-His Imperial and Royal Majesty Wilhelm II., German Emperor, Berlin, -I learn with deep sorrow of the death your majesty's beloved mother, the Dowager Empress and Queen Frederick. Her noble qualities have endeared her memory to the American people, in whose name and in my own I tender to your majesty heartfelt condolence.-William McKinley."

TO BE BURIED ON TUESDAY. Berlin, Aug. 7.-It has been definitey decided that the funeral of the Dowager Empress Frederick will take place Tuesday next, Aug. 13. The remains will be deposited in the Freidenskirche Mausoleum, near Potsdam. Emperor William has issued a decree. ordering the army to go into mourning for six weeks, and giving minute details as to how the mourning emblems are to be worn. There will be no military music for eight days. Court circles have been notified as to how the ladies and gentlemen of the court must dress till Nov. 5. The ladies are to wear full mourning until Aug. 26, medium mourning until Sept. 23, and minor mourning until

Nov. 5. REMINISCENCES The Hamburger Nachrichten (Prince Bismarck's old organ), draws upon its editor's reminiscences by saying Prince Bismarck repeatedly asserted in private conversation that it was quite untrue that the Empress Frederick caused him great obstacles during Emperor Frederick's reign, adding that on the contrary there was no time in his entire career in which he was freer from friction than during the "Ninety-nine days."

The Berliner Neustenachrichten, an influential conservative organ, which also cherishes Bismarckian traditions, has repeatedly denied that Empress Frederick took part in the intrigues which caused Prince Bismarck's downfall, saying "She was much too shrewd a woman to do so." CABLE NOTES.

> THE "OPEN DOOR" POLICY IN CHINA.

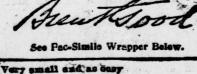

London, Aug. 7.-Lord Lansdowne, the foreign secretary, replying in the House of Lords to a question of Earl Spencer (Liberal) said the Chinese negotiations had recently made rapid and satisfactory progress. The in-demnity question was disposed of, with the exception of a few minor points. There was still some question whether the matter of the commercial facilities in China had not better be transferred to some other than Pekin, and to some less wieldy body than the present conference. Great Britain was still in favor of the open door throughout China. The foreign secretary also said that the final strength of the legation garrison at Pekin will probably be 1,000 men, and that an additional force of 3,000 men would be distributed at important points along the route to the sea. The secretary regarded the Anglo-German and the Anglo-Russian agreements as satisfactory, and as tending to the maintenance of China's territorial integrity.

The door is opened by one cassocked in a coarse brown robe, which distinguishes the lay brother from the monk, whose robe, on the other hand, is of pure white felt-like cloth, with the addition of a black scapulary falling over the shoulder both in front and back, forming, too, a capot-shaped hood as a covering for the head in bad weather. The loose flowing robe is held about the waist by a woolen girdle, although in the case of the abbot a large, heavy buckled black belt was substituted. The meagre, coarse, ill-fitting dress of the Trappist is strongly in contrast with that of the Cluniac monk. The latter maintained that nothing could be too rich or costly for divine service, and this of the room is a lectern in sympathet difference of opinion, little by little, drove the two orders farther and farther apart. While the Cluniacs indulged their taste for the beautiful, cultivated the aesthetic, acquired a taste for architecture, and lived in comparative luxury, their neighbors, the Trappists, went more and more to the other extreme. The former soon discovered that luxury and idleness are close companions, while the latter, with almost pharisaic pride, devoted themselves to worship, to penance, to contemplation and to cultivaunder St. Bernard between the laborer enjoying the spiritual comfort of this community and the villain-service condition of the neighboring serf, who passed with the soil to each new master, like a steer or hound, caused the chiefs, ages ago, to debate their legalized oppression and to regard the man for whom Christ died-that man whose claim to live exempt from all control, has never been forfeited.

brother receives the visitor in silence, but with a graceful, courteous bow, which at once indicates a welcome. In front, as you enter, is another closed door, on which one reads 'cloture.' To the left is the reception room, about 15x20 feet. Plain chairs of the commonest kind are placed against the walls. A plain pine table and a plain wooden cupboard, containing, under lock and key, numerous Christain symbols and historical relics of the great St. Bernard. Abbe de Clairvaux, whose life is commemorated at different stages by equally plain pictures in equally plain frames, hung upon equally plain bare, white walls. The withdrawal of the lay brother is followed, after a few minutes, by the entrance of the Rev. Pere Lewis, the abbott of the monastery. He is a grandson of General de Beaumont, who is not unknown to Canadian history. He came direct from France, some eight or nine years ago, and it would be interesting to know just how he felt when dumped down at the junction of La Salle and Red River, on a spot destitute of everything except land, trees, water and-climate. He is, one would guess, about 40 years of age. He stands considerably over six feet, is stout. but all necessary flesh is worked off. if any was ever on, by his rigidly austere life. He evidently is enormously strong. When in repose his face is fixed and rigid and terribly determined, but when he speaks and smiles, and he often smiles in conversation, his face lights up, and smooths away its deep-set lines, the austere expression like the quickly passing shadow giving place to light and happiness, and then one sees, and seeing enjoys, the delightful cheerfulness and sympathetic bearing of the French courtier. Like a certain Felix in a certain book, 'he seems as simple as sunshine, yet as deep as a

THE FLOWER SHOW.

The flower show that is being held in Cronyn Hall, under the auspices of the London Horticultural Society, is one of the most successful in the his- Enthusiastic Send-Off Given Themtory of the society. The variety is larger and the quality better than was seen in connection with former exhibits, which may be looked upon as strong indication of the progressive work which has characterized the society since its inception. Probably the best evidence of this is the testimony of the delegates who were in attendance at the Canadian Florist convention. The consensus of opinion among these experts was that the present exhibit been a success. With this afternoon's was one of the best from most every proceedings closes the most expectation. point of view that it has been their pleasure to inspect. The arrangement of the flowers is most happy. Five tables support their beautiful burden. A bank of greenhouse plants are lo-cated in the further end of the hall. The arrangement from the point of view of neatness and attractiveness can hardly be excelled.

Departure of the Detroit and Toronto Old Boys.

Final Features of the Most Successful Reunion Yet Held.

London has done its best to give the visiting Old Boys a good time and, judging by the expressions of satisfaction heard on all sides, the effort has proceedings closes the most successful of the four annual reunions held by the International London Old Boys' Association. When the visitors depart it is to be hoped they convey with them the determination to be present at all hazards at the next reunion, which is set for August, 1993. The Old Boys go away secure in the knowledge that the welcome accorded them on their next visit will be as sincere and as cordial as on former occasions, and the longer interval between the reunions will give the home guard the opportunity to surpass even former efforts at furnishing novel and pleasing forms of entertainment for the city's

At 2:30 this afternoon the visiting Old Boys and their friends met at the city hall, and boarded trolleys for the ride around the city. After enjoying a view of London's handsome business and public buildings and beautiful residences as seen from the street cars, the party went to Springbank, where a band concert was given by the 7th Regiment Band, and a vaudeville entertainment provided by the street railway company's artists. The enter tainment will be repeated tonight. The city is somewhat quieter today, for the boys and girls from Toronto, Detroit and Windsor left for home last night, the former going at 1:40, G. T. R., on a special and the Detroit and Windsor contingent leaving on the tinue the injunction the plaintiffs con-tended that the school board was nev-bidding of farewells as the time for proceedings of the trustees were ir-separating approached. After their regular, and that they had no power part of the concert in Victoria Park had been finished the Cleveland band marched to the headquarters of the Detroit association, where the latter were serenaded, and later on about a dozen of the 7th Band joined in the jollification, and the procession, comprising Delray, 7th and Cleveland bands, headed by Bert Leys and others moved towards the C. P. R. station, followed by a big crowd of cheering people, who bid the boys a good-bye. The great crowd at the depot gave the boys a big send off.

As a good portion of the Toronto party had left in the afternoon by regular train, there was not such a crush on the G. T. R. platform, but the farewells extended were of that hearty character which indicated the strength of the friendship that exists in the hearts of Londoners for former residents, and many were the invita-Several of the Toronto band who re-mained till the last, furnished music that was more abundant than beautiful, but it was enjoyed all the same. "I am glad to know it," said Constance, simply, her own concern in the matter almost forgotten in her sympathy with him. "I wish I could have known her. She was very beautiful, Sir Kenneth told me."

"Yes," was the dreamy answer; then came back to Douglas Lancaster's mind a little Puritan maiden with fair, flushed face and lustrous eyes as he spoke. "Yes, she liked him," he went on, after a moment. "Miss Staveley, you will not think me impertinent, my child, I am many years older than you. Are you aware of the value of the heart you have won?"

"It does not matter if I do," she said, petulantly, keeping her face from him to hide the tears upon it; but Hugh was quick to notice the change in her voice. "What is the matter, my child?" he said, changing his tone to tenderness. "Are you ill? Are you unhappy? What has vexed you, Kathie?"

He drew near her with an anxiety which, had Kathie been less agitated, would have betrayed the real state of the case to her, but her own feelings prevented her from seeing the depth of his. "Nothing," she said, passionately. "One may be miserable without telling it to the whole world."

"I wish I thought I represented the whole world to you, Kathie," he said,

Kathleen was too shamefaced to face Kathleen was too shamefaced to face anyone that night, so she ran through an adjoining room and escaped up to her own. As she disappeared two figures, who had been crouching behind the heavy velvet hangings at the window in the room, rose up and prepared for flight. "But come, then, madame," said Euphrasie, in a fever of excitement, trepidation and fear. "An adventure is dear to a Frenchwoman's heart. We shall be discovered."

Andree, with one last loving look to-wards the dear brother who stood on the balcony looking up at the stars, and meditating on the bliss which had fallen to his lot tonight, left the room. "No-no-no!" cried Andree, in a de-lirium of terror. "I am not that! Oh! Mr. Graham, do not betray me, for pity's Mr. Graham, do not betray me, for pity's Bake!"

"I will do nothing without your permission." he answered, when the first surprise was over: "but I must speak to you. How are you here? We thought—we feared—"

"I dare not stay now," she said, piteously. "Only, for the sake of old times, be true to me now."

"I will yow not to betray anything," he answered, taking her hand: "but I will ask a price for my secrecy—your friendship. The friendship you were cruel enough to deny to me in the past you will give me now?"

Will write."

He held her hand closely, and, hearing footsteps approaching, drew her quickly across the landing, opened a door, made her enter, and locked it after him.

"You are safe here." he said, as she sank, panting and breathless, on a couch. There was a silence them. He was watching her closly, marking the changes in her, and feeling the fierce passion he had once entertained for her returning as he looked. Two vears and more had passed since he had seen her, but in all his travels in distant lands he had seen no woman who had touched his heart as Andree Marchmont had done: and if a pure, unselfish, disinterested affection were impossible to the blase man of the world, he loved her well in his manner.

Looking up she met his bold dark eves, and hers sank. Then hurriedly she told him that he must forget that he had seen her, that he must forget that he had seen her; that he must think as they did, that she was dead. She thanked him for the offers of service he made, but declined them. She was well, not unhappy.

and know for himself that she was well and happy.

"Do not judge me by the rest," he said, with genuine passion. "They, even he, your husband, may forget vou—he, who possessed such a treasure of your affection, may sun himself in the smiles of another"—she shivered, and he saw it —"but I cannot forget; you spurned me, but I have come back to kiss the hand which smote me. I do not ask much, Andree—only to see you sometimes, to watch over you at a distance, if need be,"

It sounded very noble and chivalrous, but Andree saw the beld, evil glance in his eyes, and mistrusted him; but she fall that there must not be war between them. At any price, peace must be maintained for her husband's sake, for Douglas, that he might not be obliged to relinquish the happiness she fancied he had found that evening as he sat in earnest converse with Constance Staveley.

"I do not ask much," he went on; "only to see you sometimes—to be convinced that you are happy and considered. Nay, I would not betray you, Andree. It would be cruel," he added, with a sneering smile, "to mar his happiness—his pleasure in the smiles of yonder insipid girl. You, in your noble self-sacrifice, would never forgive me if I did. Surely you can grant me the little I ask; only to be allowed sometimes to rest my eyes upon your face, to touch your hand. She saw it was her only means of escape, so she submitted wearily, told him whom she was staying with, and her assumed name; but prayed him to ignore her existence during their stay in Rome. "The Lancasters are going to winter here," he said, musingly. "I shall be here a few weeks longer. I must see you sometimes, but be careful. Only today Miss Stavely was wondering who that stately veiled lady was with Mr. Fenwick. Your companions are unfortunate, for Mr. Fenwick is too well known to escape notice even here."

NORTHERN HEAT VERSUS SOUTHERN.

Idvantages of the North Will Continue To Be Recognized as Superier.

The southern people are said to be considering as to whether they do not make a mistake in going north to escape the effects of heat in the summer season, says the Boston Herald. Some of them think they find more extreme heat in the summer here than at home. Those who have lived in the hot spells of the present season at the north will not be so ready to deny this, in view of their experience, as they might be in theory. The probability is that extremes of heat in New England and further west, if not equal to anything encountered elsewhere in this country, are fully as uncomfortable. A gentleman who had lived many years in Hindostan once said to us that he had never found a day of heat quite so oppressive there as some days that he had experienced in Massachusetts. The difference in the tropics is that men become inured to heat there. It is steady; they expect it, and they adapt them-selves to what they expect. Our occupations at the north are not so arranged as to count upon its coming, to recognize hot weather, and to succumb to it to the extent of lessening active employment while it is upon us. Yet to the class who devote the summer to rest and recreation, it strikes us that the advantages of the north will continue to be recognized as su-

The History of Character.

Lapse, alternation, fluctuation, now earnest and now slothful, now faithful and now neglectful, now up and doing, now doing nothing, now stirring with religious enthusiasm, now sunk down into the world-such history is the defeat and the denial of character. But may not one who has had such a history, hope? Yes; but be careful not to repeat it. For, when there is fluctuation the character gets its reputation and also its real na-ture from the lapses and not from the general conduct. It is the weakest spot in the iron that measures the strength of the bar. The rope will hold only the weight that the frayed and chaffed strands can endure. It seems a hard and harsh verdict that character is adjudged by its faults and vices and not by its virtues, but "the wise world" that "is mainly right" so believes, and justly. We may be charitable and forgiving and forbearing, but in the clear, cold light of reason, character stands or falls according to its vices and not its virtues, because the vice blackens the virtue, but the virtue does not whiten the vice. Name it then by the real color. The world does not go amiss in this matter. A man is drunken once a month—sober otherwise, but all call him a drunkard. A man is honest for the most part, but cheats at intervals under stress; what is his reputation?
A man pays nine-tenths of his debts and shrinks the rest; what is his credit? No! if a man in any way, in any department of life, lapses, often from a general habit, he will be known and marked by the lapses, because there is the germ of weakness that will extend throughout. Unfaith in aught is want of faith in

FLORISTS' OUTING AT SPRINGBANK.

Delegates of the Canadian Horticultural Society Are Entertained by Members of the London Society.

Yesterday the president and directors of the London Herticultural Society entertained the delegates attending the Canadian Horticultural convention. The forenoon was spent in a trolley ride through the city in a special Springbank don, placed his wife's pocketbook for car, which was profusely decorated with safekeeping in his hip pocket, from flowers and maple bows. At 11 o'clock the party proceeded to Springbank and partook of luncheon at the pavilion. There, surrounded by the green hills and favoring airs of London's favorite resort, the place seemed happily chosen for an outing, especially by florists, sort, the place seemed happily chosen for an outing, especially by florists, whose duties bring them so closely in contact with the beautiful in nature.

After the dinner was over, Mr. R. W. Rennie, secretary of the London Horticultural Society, acted as toast-master. The programme was as follows:

"The King." "Our Country," coupled with the name of Very Rev. Dean Innis. Song, "The Men of the North," by Mr. Stevenson. Toasts, "The London Horticultural Society," responded to by Messrs. Balkwill and Hamilton; "Canadian Horticultural Society," by President J. H. Dunlop, of Toronto, Messrs. Ivey, of Brantford, and Johnston, of Kingston. Song, by W. J. Lawrence, tenor soloist of Central Methodist Church, Toronto. Toast, "Our Guests," replied to by Rev. Canon Dann, Messrs, Manton and Robinson; "Our City," by Mr. Fred Darch, and Mr. W. Cammage; "The Ladies," by Mr. Simmers, of Toronto. At the close all drank to the health of the chairman, Mr. R. W. Rennie.

The best of good feeling prevailed, and a very favorable impression of our city and of the hospitality of the London Horticultural Society was expressed by many of the visitors. Hopeful references were made to the progress of floriculture in Canada. Great progress had been made within the last few years, and there was a marked tendency towards this aesthetic means of improving ago, and she presented him with a halfdozen pairs of socks she herself had knit. When he returned to the United States he paid no duty on them.

When four pairs were in need of repairs he packed them up and mailed them to his mother. They were darned and returned by parcel post. When they had been opened in the customs office a duty of $1.75 a pair was assessed, and paid under protest.

SUICIDE OF A SERENADER.

New York, Aug. 7.—John Hall, a professional singer, cut his throat last night under the window of the young woman he had asked to be his wife, and who had rejected his suit. He had gone to the young woman's house to serenade her, but she ordered him away. He walked a few steps, sang a bar of the song, "Because I Love You," and then slashed his throat with a rasor. He will probably die.

HOT WEATHER FOOD.

The selection of food for hot weather is an important question. We should avoid an excess of fats, cut down the butter ration and indulge more freely in fruits and food easy of digestion. One meat meal per day is sufficient during hot weather. An ideal breakfast food is Grape-

Nuts, treated with a little cream (which, by the way, supplies the neessary fat in a very digestible form), cup of Postum Cereal Food Cuffee, hot, or if cold, it should have a little lemon juice squeezed in; then some fruit, either cooked or raw; also perhaps two slices of entire wheat bread with a very thin spread of butter. A breakfast of this sort is so perfectly adapted to the wants of the system that one goes through the heat of the day in comfort as compared with the sweaty, diagreeable condition of one improperly fed. George Jackson, pastor the Centennial Methodist Church, of which Mrs. Liddicott was an active member for some years

Monday afternoon Byron C. Simmons of Toronto, was united in marriage to Miss Lizzie Irwin, the bride being given away by her mother. Mrs. S. A. Bennett. The ceremony took place on the lawn at the home of the bride, 64 Euclid avenue, and Rev. J. W. Holmes officiated. The bride was supported by her sister Florence M. Irwin, and Win.

Legate, Toronto, cousin of the bride, acted as groomsman. Flowers were carried by little Misses Bertha and Gertie Legate, and Master Gordon Bennett, and the Wedding March was played by Miss Annie Legate. The bride was handsomely attired in cream silk, trimmed with baby ribbon and chiffon, white slippers and carried bridal roses. Her and traveling dress was a crushed strawberry serge, trimmed with cream lace and insertion, black picture hat. The bridesmaid wore a white organdie trimmed with valenciennes lace, with cream sash and collar, and carried pink roses. After the ceremony dinner was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Y. Legate, 70 Byron avenue, at which a large number of guests were present. The happy couple were the recipients of many valuable and useful presents. Monday evening they left for Maple Hill, the home of Mr. A. W. Marritt. On their return they will spend a few days with friends in and ground London, after which they will go to their future home in Toronto.

If you have tramped all day long showing your friends the sights and are repaid by one of those annoying headaches, take a Hutch. One gives instant relief.

The army worm is essentially a grass-eating insect, though it often feeds upon other plants, and is said to prefer oats to corn.

WE HAVE NO HESITATION in saying that Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhea, cholera and all summer complaints, seasickness, etc. It promptly gives relief and never fails to effect a positive cure. Mothers should never be without a bottle when their children are teething.

Two hundred new designs in penny toys are brought out every week in Whitechapel, London.

One day recently a swarm of bees took possession of the letter box at Kirkbride, Ireland, and the rural postman was not able to collect the letters, as the new tenants strongly resented any interference.
