Unconfirmed Report of the Sultan's Assassination-Typan's Extradition Demanded.

ALLEGED ASSASSINATION OF THE

SULTAN. London, Sept. 21.—The Weekly Dispatch published reservedly an undated rumor that the Sultan has been assassinated. It is thought that the rumor was concocted from the Vienna dispatch to the effect that seven men had been killed within the last few days while attempting to reach the Sultan's apartments in the Yildiz Kiosk, with the object of assassinat-ing him.

TO SEND ARMENIANS TO

AMERICA. Sept. 21.-Lady Henry Somerset writes from Marseilles an appeal to the Daily News to collect funds to send the refugee Armenians to America. The Daily News this morning also prints an appeal from Miss Frances Willard to her sisters in America on the same subject, and in an editorial the same journal rejoices to be able to assist in such a project.

MORE MASSACRES. London, Sept. 21.-A dispatch from Constantinople says that the American legation in that city has received news from one of the American consulates that a fresh massacre, in which a large number of Christians were killed, has taken place at Ehin, in the vilayet of Kharput.

Constantinople, Sept. 21. - Details received here regarding the massacre at Egin, in the villayet of Kharput, show that it occurred on the 15th and 16th of the present month. The Kurds attacked the Armenian quarter, killed a large number of the inhabitants, and pillaged and burned their houses.

Many Armenians escaped to the mountains. According to the accounts of the Turkish Government, six hundred Armenians were killed at Egin, and these advices also state that the outrage was provoked by the Armenians firing into the Turkish quarter. It is feared here that the bloodshed at Egin is the beginning of a fresh series of massacres in Armenia.

BAD BLUNDER.

London, Sept. 21.-A special dispatch from Berne, Switzerland, says that George F. Curtis, one of the assistant librarians of the Congress of the United States, residing at the Arno, Washington, D. C., had been arrested by two detectives at the hotel where he was staying at Grandewald, 35 miles from this city. He was thrown into jail at Interlaken, was searched, all his money and papers were seized, his baggage was ransacked, and he was kept in prison until late at night, when a director of police arrivnight, when a director of police arriv-ed, and Mr. Curtis was released. The city was found to be deserted by warriors, and the steamers at once landed a force of infantry to hold it until the arrival of the main body of the expedition. At the time the dispatch was sent the Dervishes were approaching Dongola overland. and scouts reported that they were carrying many of their wounded with them. Included among the wounded are some of the most noted chiefs. It is expected that as the Dervishes are without food or other stores, that they will make a most desperate attempt to again get possession of Dongola. London, Sept. 21 .- The correspondent of the Daily News, who is with the Soudan expedition, telegraphs that in the attack on El Hafir the Dervishes mitting the gunboats to stop at the cessation of smoking, to which the old man will not agree.

The building here, as in other cities, will differ from the ordinary Y. M. C. A. headquarters, in that it will serve the purpose of a hotel for the members, where lodgings and meals may be had.

Mr. McHattie, locomotive foreman, has received a letter from D. A. Budge, secretary of the Montreal Y. M. C. A., concerning the matter. Mr. Budge and another gentleman were sent over the field from Montreal to Chicago about a month ago to report on the outlook, number of men, whether suitable buildings could be obtained, etc., at the various railway centers, and the outcome of their reports is that Manager Hays decided to institute a Y. M. C. A. branch at once in Toronto. London and Niagara Falls will be the next places. In the meantime a provisional committee will be formed here so that the work may be proceeded with as rapidly as possible when the time comes. # DIED ON THE DEEP.

Death of Mrs. (Ron.) Adam Brown, of Hamilton-Well-Known in London.

The sad and unexpected death of Mrs. Adam Brown, the wife of Hamton's genial postmaster, and mother of Mrs. E. Brown-Smith, of this city, will be heard of with regret by many in London who knew the deceased. A dispatch from Quebec, dated Sunday, reads as follows: "The steamship Sardinian, which arrived up from Liverpool shortly after midnight, had on board the body of Mrs. Adam Brown, of Hamilton. The deceased lady was in her usual health when she boarded the vessel with her daughters at Liverpool. Death, which took place three or four days ago, was due to heart disease. Capt. R. Myles, of Toronto, who was second in command of the Shoeburyness team, and was a passenger by the same vessel, came up by train from Rimouski, and arrived several hours before steamer to break the news to Brown, who has been here since Friday to meet his wife. As soon as Capt. Myles told him in the Chateau Frontenac that he had come off the Sardinian, where he had seen Mrs.

Ball Player.

His Right Hand Lost Its Cunning and He Committed Buicide.

Buffalo, Sept. 20 .- A special to the Express from Rochester says: Edward N. Crane, an old-time baseball player, the hero of many a noted pitchers' battle, and at one time the ideal of the baseball enthusiasts all over the country committed entitles. country, committed suicide at Congress Hall Saturday night. His body was found this morning in the room he had occupied at the hotel for several weeks past. An empty vial that had contained chloral, found on a chair beside the bed, a drinking glass in which was a small quantity of the diluted poison near by, and a thin coating of the drug on the dead man's lips and mustache, told the story of his death. In a fit of despondency he had taken his life.

Crane was born in South Boston 32 years ago. "Ned" joined the Boston Union Association in 1884. He played behind the het at that the behind the bat at that time, but he soon developed into a speedy pitcher, and when he went to Providence in 1884 he had acquired considerable distinction as a twirler. He played with Boston in 1886, and went to Toronto in 1887. The Canadians won the pennant that season, and it was generally conceded that it was owing to Crane's conceded that it was owing to Crane's good pitching that they captured the flag. He played on the New York Brotherhood team. He pitched for the New Yorks in the World's series against the St. Louis Browns, and aided or cartly in winning the series. ed greatly in winning the series for his team. The New Yorks won the pennant twice while he was a member of the club, and it was well under-stood that his pitching was largely responsible for it. He toured the world with the Spalding All-American team in the fall of 1888. During the trip he did excellent work. He pitched for Toronto early in the season of 1895. Then he came to Rochester and pitched a few games. When the season opened this year Crane was not in good condition. He was fleshy and clumsy, and showed plainly his years of dissipation. Springfield gave him a trial, but he lasted only two weeks. He played with Providence six weeks, but he was unable to get into condition, and was released. Then he came to Rochester and pitched a few games about the country. He then secured a position as an umpire in the Eastern

League, but could not leave whisky alone, so he lost that position after a two months' trial. Crane spent most of Saturday in his room at the hotel. Saturday night the proprietor told him that as he owed nearly $70 at the hotel, and did not seem to be making any effort to pay, he would have to give up his room. Crane said that he would pay. He went to his room at the usual hour Saturday night. At 10 o'clock this morning, when one of the chamber-maids at the hotel reported at the office that she was unable to get into Crane's room, a bell-boy was sent to the room. He looked over the transom and saw the man lying on the bed. The door was then unlocked, and it was found that Crane was dead. Crane had a wife and one child in Chicago. They have not been with him for over a year. Besides Crane's record on the diamond he made a record on the Cincinnati grounds Oct. 12, 1884. On that date he threw the ball 135 yards 1 foot 1 1-2 inches. This record has never been beaten.

The Swiss and Their Politics.

"The Swiss and Their Politics" is the title of a very interesting article in the Journal of Sociology. In it the writer gives a graphic account of the way in which the Swiss make history thing will be done shortly towards the real. The thing that has impressed establishment of a Y. M. C. A. branch me most in Switzerland, he says, is here in connection with the G. T. R. the deep seriousness of their sentimensystem. This movement will be of the tal patriotism. In America we think greatest importance to railway men we do well if we spend a part of one here, as it means a boon to them that day in the celebration of our independence. And those whom we call This work has been going on for our more serious people are inclined some years in the Republic to the south, and has spread over the order waste of time. During the two months of my stay in Geneva, six days and six nights, that is, one-tenth of the entire time, was devoted to patriotic celebration, and that, too, not on the part of the light and frivolous members of society, but of the most serious members of the community. In 1602, on the night of the 12th of December, a poor washerwoman who lived on the wall of the city was making soup, when she discovered some soldiers of the Duke of Savoy in the act of scaling the wall. She hurled her soup on them, and raised the alarm, and the city was successfully defended. This gave rise to the three days' Festival of the Escalade, beginning Dec. 11. For days preceding the date there began to appear in the shop windows soup kettles done in choco late and wood and all sorts of materials bearing the date "1602." Shop windows were filled with masks of all imaginable shapes. Costumes were displayed, some of them very elegant and expensive, others cheap and fantastic. On the evening of the 11th I went to the circus, where, with about eight thousand other people. I sat for three hours in a freezing atmosphere witnessing patriotic performances. I paid 60 cents for my seat, and I think it was an average price. Leading citizens of Geneva took part in the exercises, which consisted in short addresses, songs, marches, dances, while some of it resembled an Iowa College "winter gym." In one scene cer-tain Austrians appeared, and strutted up and down the stage in full armor. An equal number of Frenchmen also appeared in shining array. A little later the Swiss came in, whose stalwart muscles were covered only by natural skin and armed only by real war clubs. All performed together a la Indian clubs. By a strange coincidence the Austrians and French were surrounded by the Swiss, thrown upon their backs, their arms wrested from them, and they demurely march ed out under the yoke. Another exercise well represented the spirit of the occasion. First, three athletes appeared, and one on the shoulders of the other two held aloft a card, having on one side in large characters the date 1291, and on the other the word "Alliance." The three men were the original cantons of the confederation of 1291. Next appeared five other athletes, and the eight threw themselves into a ladder displaying a new card with the same word and the date of 1352. Then are more men appeared, and with the aid of parallel ropes the thirteen lifted a man tow-ard the roof with the charmed word and the date 1513. Then five more, and the eighteen lifted a man above the supporting cable with the card and the date 1798. Finally the whole 22 lifted a man to the apex of the roof waving aloft "Alliance" and the date 1813. Then was brought in on a plat-form borne by four of these same stalwarts, a lady of Geneva who had con-sented to pose as Switzerland The four tenderly bore her up, and the eighteen took their positions around her in the four historic and impressive groups. As these lifted their their strong right arms in the attitude of defense the assembled thousands held their breath fill "Switzerland" and her defenders passed from the arena, and then they broke forth in loud applause.

The men implicated were La Framboise, of Montreal; Kelly and Buckley, of Toronto; Biddle, of Kingston, and a Hamilton man. La Framboise, who had struck another man, was sent to the dungeon and searched, and from the articles found on him a general search ensued, and the plot was uncovered.

SIR CHARLES DILKE. Sir Charles Dilke says: "Whether we can interfere in Turkey, as well as denounce, depends upon an accurate ascertainment of the facts. What we are asked to do is, in the first place, to act through a European concert. As to this there can be no difference of opinion. It is the next step, which is more doubtful, viz., that failing decisive action by the powers, Great Britain should intervent by force. In-tervention at Constantinople by force would mean forcing a passage through the Dardanelles-an operation which successfully carried through her Majesty's Mediterranean fleet but probably not without tremendous The loss of a first-class British ironclad is equivalent, as regards our position in the world, to the absolute lestruction of a French or German corps, with all its guns. The forcible passage of the Dardanelles might also conceivably bring about a general war, for which we are wholly unprepared, and in which our very existence as a power would be at stake. Forcible action elsewhere than at Constantinople by the seizure of material guarantees, so far from sufficing to prevent a massacre at Constantinople, might possible aggravate it. It would having the remarkable age if 130 years, be likely, whether exerted in the ar-chipelago or Arabia or Smyrna, to bring about that partition of the Otis still thriving and bearing fine-flavorgood health, not one of whom but has taken Scott's Emulsion, in which my wife has boundless confidence."

England must, in plain language, remain absolutely inert, no matter what happens in Turkey, or she must boldly face the risk of being compelled to

MENT. A series of Cabinet councils will begin about the middle of October, continuing, with needful intervals, till sleeps as peacefully as a child until the end of November. Parliament, according to Ministerial arrangements, made prior to the recess, will resume on or about Jan. 10.—The measures, which the Ministers have to discuss in council, include a revised education bill, a military works bill, and probable an Irish Local Government measure. The prevalent notion in political quarters is that the Government does not mean to touch crucial Irish questions until the last session of the present Parliament in 1901, when they would readjust Irish representation, reducing the number of Irish memthat part of Scotland is in something | bers to the Imperial Parliament, and generally weakening, as far as possible, the Nationalist strength in Parliament. GETTING READY. The completion and rearming of the British horse and field artillery is an important feature of the preparations now going on for an emergency The former, which is said to be the finest artillery force in the world, is now at its war strength of ten batteries, of six guns each, with a reserve of eight guns, while three army corps have been provided with fortyfive batteries, of six guns each, with large reserves. It is said also that the Woolwich arsenal at present is turning out a certain new and powerful shell, at the rate of 3,000 to 4,000 a week.

THE QUEEN WANTS TO KNOW. The Queen, according to accepted report in court circles, has asked the German Kaiser to explain how her communication to fate Emperor Wiliam, protesting against Bismarck's projects for the conquest and partition of France came to be published. Never before have the German naval maneuvers, either in the Baltic or in the German Ocean, been conducted with so much secrecy as during the autumn of the present year. These maneuvers, which lasted three weeks, were ended on Tuesday last at Heligoland. The eventuations there commenced on Sunday and consisted of an attempt upon the part of seven ships, including three huge ironclads, to effect a landing. At one period the ironelads Sachsen and Wurtemburg, favored by a dense fog, approached within two miles of Heligoland, but were driven off after shelling the island for hours by the effective fire from a battery of howitzers placed there last summer by command of Emperor William. The long range Krupp fortification guns were also satisfactorily tested by Commodore Subenrauch, the commander of the island. It was shown that a single shot from one of these big guns at a distance of over a mile can instantly disable the most powerful ironclad. On Tuesday night the fleet was declared hors de combat.

The Burns exhibition at Glasgow, which recently opened, has just been enriched by several contributions from her Majesty. One of these is a perfect copy of the first Edinburgh edition of Burns' poems. Another is a unique armchair made of oak taken from the rafters of Alloway Kirk. On a brass plate, fixed into the back of the chair, is engraved the poem of

Of medium height and delicate constitution, Nicholas II. will never be chief of any army or master of any sport. He delights to shut himself up in his study to read, to write, to think over State affairs and to attend promptly to matters brought him by the daily couriers from St. Petersburg. After dinner he smokes a few cigarettes and then generally plays billiards for an hour. At 11 o'clock he retires for the night, and

The dismissal of employes of the Krupp factories, which has attracted considerable attention, was in the cannon department. It appears that some of the employes sold to a representative of the Austrian Government the drawings of the new gun which can be moved laterally in every direction without moving the carriages.

The German army maneuvers, just completed, were unusually prolific of fatal and serious accidents, owing to the weather and the bad roads. Count Van Kanitz, of the Fourth Dragoons, had a fatal fall during a charge, and seven other cavalry officers were seriously injured.

MR. CHARLES JENKINS. the Crude Oil and Tanking Company, who has been a resident of Petrolea for many years, supplied some very interesting information. "One great advantage that accrues to the people of Canada under our system of collecting taxes on oil," said Mr. Jenkins. "lies in the fact that we have a uniform system of inspection. While in the United States, every State has its own fire test, which may or may be efficient, we in Canada have a fire test uniform in its application from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and in every case made by competent Government officials. Thus the safety of the public is looked after, and explosions from low grade oil are unknown here, though plentiful elsewhere. Even in Great Britain, they are away behind us in this respect. In that country they have allowed the the seller and buyer. If the last named was satisfied with low grade, semi-explosive oil well and good, the Government did not interfere. WHY CALLED COAL OIL. "Very much might be said about this great mining and commercial industry. Do you know how it got the name of coal oil? When this class of oil replaced that obtained from the whale, it was the product of shale—an oily coal—mined in the Lothians, Scotland. But when oil was found in liquid form in the rocks of Pennsylvania, then it was called petroleumrock oil. That is the kind of oil we

That is not so. thousand derricks there Long before 1878, the oil business had the consideration of the Government as an article upon which a tax could fairly be raised for revenue purposes that would reach every section of the nonopolizing company, as people equally. In 1859, I think the Government of Canada needed money, and non-resident owners. had set the example at a terrific rate. When our neighbors in the States saw that there were large deposits of oil in Canada, and that there was danger of our producers sending oil to lessen the demand for American and will continue to exist oil they imposed a prohibitory tar-iff on the commodity. They put on a duty of 20 cents per wine gallon on have contended that crude, and 40 cents per gallon on re-fined! The Canadian Government was much more moderate. It only imposed a revenue tax of 10 cents a wine gallon. By and bye, at Confederation, our Government needed been misrepresented. To let leet 5 cents excise per gallon for that toll men speak for themcustoms tax on imported oil-bringing state of affairs existed for a number of years. Meantime, there had been some very rich discoveries of oil in tax. A GREAT FALL IN PRICE. "Oil in Canada has been gradually other centers of oil production. They cheapened, as new discoveries relating are well set forth in the interviews to treatment were made. Do you recollect when oil was 50 cents to $1 per gallon? It is not so very long ago. At | ing, and many millions were invested that time, our oil supply was imported entirely from Scotland, where it was produced from shale. Then shale country to keep control of the production of the works were established at Albertine, in New Brunswick, but they went down before the petroleum supply. A quarter of a century since, oil was selling for 30 cents a gallon. Then it fell to 25 cents, and it really was dirt cheap at that price, when compared with any other illuminant offering. Changes in the methods of manufacture, and a better knowledge of the business, have effected a steady reduction in its price, until it is now very low.

"The Canadian public is really consuming all the oil which is being produced now. So cheap has oil become that its consumption has vastly in-creased in recent years. I believe I am within the mark when I say that three times the oil used twenty years ago is now consumed, and the increase of the population has not been nearly so great.

give evidence. Individual interests differ in their desires. The manufacturers of oil from the shale, who have their works in Scotland, want the test to be very high: but dealers wao import from the United States prefer it low. It is highly probable that the private testing of oil will receive severe condemnation by this independant commission. Its members recognize that the Canadian test is absonize that the Canadian test is absonize that the Canadian test is absonize the company is not at all scruplous that as to morrow, what would happen? The only market open to our people would be the United States, now practically under the control of the Standard Oil to $80,000 worth of petroleum by-products were sold in Canada. And so it is in the manufacture of many other articles of commerce. Then let it not be forgotten that many thousands of dollars are annually spent in the foundries of our cities and our towns for supplies for the wells and refineries, and it is equally notorious that as

MR. J. H. FAIRBANKS.

One of the best informed men in the West is Mr. J. H. Fairbanks, ex-M. P. for East Lambton, whose headquarters have for many years been in Petrolea. For over 35 years, Mr. Fairvelopment of the oil industry, and he is a recognized authority on all questions affecting it. "I recognize as an unassailable position the attitude taken up by the late Hon. Alexander Mackenzie with regard to this and every other industry in the country," said Mr. Fairbanks. "Mr. Mackenzie held that when consideration of duties imposed by Parliament took place, due care must always be exercised to preserve the interests which had been created. The establishment and development of the oil industry has been sanctioned by the whole people of Canada, as represented by different Governments, Liberal and Conservative. It has been a benefit to the Government and to the people of Canada. It has been one of the chief means of radicing the price of light means of reducing the price of light-ing at the rate of $1 to 10 cents. From the refined oil point of view alone Canada has been a great gainer, without taking into account the benefits resulting to the country from the pro-duction of lubricants of every dethe numerous other bye-products of the industry. It is an industry greater than any other industry in the country. Its products represent labor expended almost entirely. As long as we were in a position to expent to the we were in a position to export to the United States, the legislators of that country took most excellent care that we should not do it. They raised their tariff on oil to a prohibitory "The statements in relation to what it costs Canada to have these indus-tries carried on are invariably false representing three degrees of falsity to one of truth. The public have at all times been utterly misled on this point. MANY ADVANTAGES TO CANADA "Canada has reaped many incidental advantages. The oil region has been practically a great mining school, educating hundreds of mining experts, who have gone out into the world and given Canada a better name than any other institution established in it. These Canadians are today to be found in good paying positions in many parts of Europe—in Austria, in parts of Europe—in Austria, in Galicia, and in India, Burmah, Java, Ceylon, Algiers, Peru, and other parts of South America, It is easier to say where these mineral experts are not than where they are. These men did not sever their connection with the Domin-Many of them leave their families here, and many return to settle among us, having made as great a name for Canada as have her yachtsmen, oarsmen, riflemen and athletes.

is a tax upon Canada. Supposing our off industry were blotted out tomorrow, the thousands of men dependent upon it for a living ruined, and sent adrift, and United States oil used instead of our own, at the close of the year our people would have paid out more money than they do new.

"The oil industry of Canada is established by the consent of all parties. It is not an industry in which a few people alone are interested. There are hundreds of awners of wells who have hundreds of owners of wells who have their all invested in the development of this natural industry. It can never be the policy of this country to play ducks and drakes with the vast interests of the people who are striving to build it up."

A VIEW FROM SARNIA. While in Sarnia, The Advertiser rewith a prominent business man, who looks at the oil industry from a broad, national standpoint. The development of mining for oil has been proceeded with purely as a matter of resent the industry as a huge mon opoly, earning enormous profits at public expense. Thousands of men and women have, from time to time, put money into oil wells or refineries. A number have made interest on their investment, but many have made nothing out of the speculation. Today there are hundreds of men and women who have their all invested in oil wells, and they are making no more tian a bare living. To impose new furdens on them would be to render their labors unprofitable, and compel them to shut down and leave their holdings. Of those who have prospered in and around Petrolea, I am bound to say, that if they had exercised the same pluck and energy, and invested as much capital in other occupations they would in all probability have made as much money.

HON. A. MACKENZIE'S VIEWS. "I have lived in this country for over 40 years, and I have met and conversed with the late Hon. Alex Mackenzie, and with prominent men on both sides of politics on this ques tion. They all recognized that this oil business was an exceptional industry, inasmuch as it was nurtured into be tion of its own illuminating agency. Those of us who have read the investigation before the Interstate Commerce Commission know that the Standard Oil Company now virtually controls the oil production of the world outside of Canada. Some day it may try to get hold of Canada's supply also; but while we can, our duty to ourselves should move us to keep out of its octupus grip. We know that so long as it does not control a market, the Standard Company is willing to sell oil cheaply, as it does now when its oil is bought for Canadian delivery; but so soon as it has killed off a competitor, up goes the price higher than ever.

HELPS MANY OTHER INDUSTRIES to this oil question is the interdependence of oil mining and refining with Colored Glass Windows, other industries. Few people have any idea of the manner in which the by-products of petroleum now enter into the commerce of Canada. Let me give you one instance that came un-der my notice recently. At Capelgive you one instance that came un-der my notice recently. At Capel-ton, in Quebec Province, the are cop-per mines, and in conjunction with these the manufacture of sulphuric acid is carried on. Last year, I am told, to produce this acid from $75,000 to $80,000 worth of petroleum by-pro-ducts were sold in Canada. And so all of which aid in the circulation of money, first among the workmen in these factories, and afterwards among the farming community in exchange for supplies.

NO MONOPOLY. "Those who think that the country, by its tariff policy, has given too favorable consideration to the oil industry received no such aid at the start. It owed its inception to the energy of its promoters, and as its blotting out would mean ruin to thousands and incidental loss to many persons throughout Canada, while merely putting us into the hands of a United States monopoly, I hold that cur legislators cannot too seriously consider the question. Suppose today someone were to come allong and say to the Government at Ottawa: 'We have a business project to invest over $20,000,000. We will employ many thousands of men. We will develop one of Canada's resources. We will give incidental aid to many others. We will rescue you from force. We will rescue you from foreign monopoly prices, and give you a good home-made article at a moderate price. We ask no bonus; all we desire is merely reasonable consideration. When you collect your revenue, collect it so as to give us a fair deal in our own market with this monopoly. In other words, prevent it from wiping us out.'
Would not the Government of the day -I care not for its political affinitiesjump at such an offer? Today in the oil industry we have a business of this description already established with the co-operation of the people of Canada, with the active assistance of both political parties. No same Fin-ance Minister would seek to put an end to it. I am satisfied that this industry will get fair play from the new Administration." Our representative would have interviewed several other leaders in the oil region, but they were not at home when he called.

Again Captured and Wilson Lodged in Jail.

Confined as a Lunatic, He Broke Loose and Made His Way to the Scene of the Killing of His Sweetheart.

A special dispatch from Sarnia to The Advertiser announces that Albert Wilson, the Warwick township murderer, who escaped from the Toronto Asylum for the Insane last week, now lies in the Lambton county jail, awaiting the coming of officers to take him back to a place of safekeeping. It will be remembered that Wilson, in a jealous fit, met his sweetheart at the church door a year or two ago She dropped dead at his feet, and he scampered off to the girl's home and set fire to the straw stacks in order to distract people from pursuing. He made his way down the G. T. R. track to Port Huron, and managed to cross the river unobserved. Then he went west to Saginaw, and went into the lumber woods and worked under an assumed name. He remained in hiding there for eighteen months. He drove a milk wagon on the streets of Saginaw and loaned money in small sums at high interest, so that on his arrest he had saved a very considerable sum of money. He was an Orangeman, and on the 12th of July he went to Saginaw to participate in a celebration. As he walked, he was spotted by a former Lambton man, but he denied his identity. He was, however, placed under arrest, extra-dited and brought back. All the time he was in Saginaw the police had circulars describing him and asking for his arrest, but he managed to keep out of their clutches. When placed on trial, there was absolute proof of his having shot his sweetheart, but this evidence was combatted by the testimony of lunacy experts that he committed the deed while emotionally insane, and B. B. Osler, Q.C., his counsel, made a strong plea in favor of saving him from the hangman. It succeeded. The jury rendered a verdict that the crime was committed while the man was insane, and he was sent to the Asylum at Toronto. Last week Wilson managed to elude his keepers, scaled the walls, and got clear. It was at first believed that the man had again escaped to the United States. If he had done so he could not have been brought back. as there is no charge under which his extradition could have been demanded. he having been acquitted of the charge of murder at the trial. On Saturday afternoon, however, the runaway was found making his way toward his old home in Warwick. He was taken in charge by the county police, and conveyed to Watford station, and thence by G. T. R. train to Sarnia. A very strong impression has always prevailed in Lambton county that Wilson was not crazy when he commit-ted the crime, and that the jury at the trial were too easy with him. His conduct in coming back to the scene of the tragedy when he could have escaped from the country and secured his freedom, thus making it easy to send him back to confinement, may modify the views entertained by many in regard to this matter.

The Coronado shaft house and machinery are in ashes, and four innocent householders are houseless, as the result of an attack by parties, as yet unknown, upon the Coronado and Emmet mines, in the dark hours of the early morning.

The Coronado is in the city, only half a dozen blocks from the postoffice and surrounded by residences. The Coronado shaft house was built on a large embankment, inclosed by logs, and the machinery is 50 feet above the street level. A heavy plank barricade was erected around the machinery and shaft house when the mine resumed operations last month, and the house was well stocked with provisions, Winchesters and ammunition. About one o'clock this morning a few bullets struck the barricade, and the men on guard prepared for action. Suddenly, after 25 minutes of firing, a sheet of flame burst out, followed by a terrible detonation. The attacking party were using dynamite. East of the engine house were several tanks of fuel oil, and the attack was concentrated on this point. Armed men held the firemen at bay. When the marshal and his men were getting ready for action, three men appeared from around the corner and compelled the firemen, with leveled rifles, to stop work. Meanwhile the flames grew flercer and fiercer. The men in the shaft house were finally driven from their fort, but fought to the last. As they ran over the high trestle work a dozen shots were fired, but the men reached the dump in safety and escaped. By this time a large crowd had gathered, but were held at bay by the rioters and firebugs, who were concealed near the building. The firemen, however, rallied, for by this time nundreds of citizens, armed with rifles, appeared and guarded the fire department and volunteers, but in spite of every effort four dwellings on East Eighth street were destroyed.

But more terrible than the flames was the loss of life. Jerry O'Keefe, foreman of hose No. 2, was shot in the side. He is mortally wounded, and dying in a hospital. An unknown man was taken to 612

East Eighth street, dead, blown to pieces by dynamite. John Mahoney, a miner at the Big Four, was shot in the stomath, He died in the arms of his compations. At 3:30 a.m. an attack was made on the Emmet. There were over a hundred shots fired, but a telephone message from the mine states that the attack was repulsed and that no lives are known to have been lost there, no damage to property had re-

The strike, which began on June 10. has paralyzed business, caused hunger and suffering in hundreds of families, and has cut down the mineral output of the camp more than one-half. Last night's bloody battle is be-lieved to be the last desperate one of the radical element of the strikers to force the stoppage of all mines that are not paying the increased scale of wages demanded. Many of the strikers have asserted all along that they would "Clean out the State," and even Government troops if here, rather than see outside labor come to the camp. The mine managers, who at first refused to recognize the union, finally offered a compromise, but this was rejected, and all efforts by citizens and others to terminate the strike since then have

London, Sept. 21.-The St. James Gazette this afternoon publishes a dispatch from Milan, Italy, stating that the Secolo of that city says the departure of the Italian flying squadron for the Levant is the first step towards forcing Turkey to grant the reforms demanded in the case of Armenia, and that it is taken by Italy, supported by the United States and Great Britain. The Secolo adds that in the event of the Sultan's refusal to grant the reforms he will be deposed. A dispatch from Rome to the James Gazette says that the Romau states that the Italian ships will cooperate with those of Great Britain and the United States.

York, Sept. 21 .- A special to the World from Buda-Pest, Hungary, says: A cable message, signed by delegates of the International Agricultural Congress called at Buda-Pest by the Hungarian Minister of Agriculture has been sent to the Democratic candidate for President of the United States, Mr. William Jennings Bryan, wishing him success.

The message styles Bryan's campaign "a struggle against the domination of the creditor class, which during the past 23 years has secured both in America and in Europe monetary legislation, destructive of the prosperity of your farmers and others," and says: "Should you be victorious in November we pledge ourselves to spare no effort to bring immediate miles long, and carry nearly 5,000 pressure upon our respective Govern-hooks. ment of your great nation in restoring silver to the world's currency. We believe that, waiting such restoration, the gold premium throughout all Asia and South America will continue to the farmer, equally of America and of Europe, of all rewards for his toil, and that your election may avert from Europe serious agrarian and so-cial troubles now impending."

Sir Oliver Mowat has been criticis ed for providing that the ad hoc judges to be appointed to the Supreme Court shall not be eligible to hear election appeals. If a quorum is not present at the January term to hear election appeals then they cannot be heard, and the next session would be held with men occupying seats which the lower court had declared forfeited. The condition of the Supreme Court is very unsatisfactory. A law should at once be passed declaring a judge ineligible to continue to sit on the bench after he has reached the age of 75. Mr. Justice Gwynne is 82 or 84 years of age, and Chief Justice Strong is 72 or thereabouts. The ad hoc judges are to be selected from among the Superior Court judges, and the reason advanced in the Senate against allowing ad hoc judges to sit in election cases was that they would have political bias; and, strange to say, those who are ondemning the Governor-General for pointing out that the bench was filled from the ranks of one political party are the very ones who raise the objection that the judges to be appointed under Sir Oliver Mowat's bill are disqualified by partisanship from hearing election appeals.

BABYLON'S ROMANCE.

Written Ten Thousand Years Ago.

The secrets of the ages are no longer to be hid; and one by one they raise their hoary heads and speak. The span of life is said to be threescore years and ten; and yet man, who lives snort a life, has just rolled back the curtain of time for at least 2,250 years from which hitherto no spoken. The magician is Prof. Hilprecht, an American who occupies a foremost place in everything relating to Babylonian archaeology. Eight years ago a firman authorizing the Americans to explore the mound of Nippur was granted, and the professor has been telling the Daily News' Constantinople correspondent what has been the result of his extraordinary re-

"The first and most notable result of the excavations," writes the correspondent, "is that the history of the Babylonian people as recorded in cuneiform writing on tablets is carried back at least 2,250 years further than it had yet been known. In other words, there is now abundant written evidence that the Babylonian people existed, and were civilized enough to be able to write, at least 7,000 years before Christ. In conversation with the professor, who in all matters of archaeology is cautious. I asked whether he could say that the written records did not go further back. He re plied that in his judgment they probably went back as far as 8,000 years before Christ, but that in his published records he was unwilling to print anything which could not be amply borne out by evidence. To have push written history at one stroke by 2,250 years is, however, enough to make a reputation. In reply to my inquiry how it happened that his predecessor had not found the many objects be longing to this early period, he explained that Dr. Peters, to whom he attributed great credit for the manner in which he had opened out the great mound at Nippur, had worked down to a certain floor or platform which he and others had taken to be the ground level of the ancient city. One of the party, however, suggested that this level should be penetrated and digging continued until rock or virgin soil was reached. This suggestion was adopted, and to the delight of all concerned it was found that what had been taken for the level of the ancient city was only the level of a comparatively modern city, built over the ruins of an older one or a succession of older ones. The excavations above the level or platform had gone through 39 feet of debris. They were now continued to a depth of 30 feet below it. The excavations above the platform discovered remains which covered a period of 4,000 years of Babylonian history. Below the platform to the virgin soil was an accumulation of drains, preserved and broken pottery, and various other ob-jects of interest. Twenty-three feet below the platform Mr. Haines came upon the most ancient keystone arch known, an arch which Prof. Hilprecht before Christ. Last summer Mr Haines, who has spent the last three years in continuous work at Nippur, excavated the lower part of the marvelous wall of the city. Its foundations were found to be sixteen feet bewas another of unknown height. These walls were built of bricks twenty inches square—probably the largest bricks ever used. The most valuable upon broken vases, bricks, tablets and other objects, and from these it is confidently predicted by Prof. Hilprecht that a continuous history of Babylonism will be able to be written."

ROMANCE OF THE HEAVENS.

How the Discovery of Neptune Was Brought About, Sir Robert Ball reminds us in the Strand Magazine that it is just 50 years since the planet Neptune was discovered; and he retells in his interesting way the story of that great discovery. It standard almost alone in its remence and is one of the most its romance, and is one of the most stupendous results of arguing from effect to cause, revealing the wonder-ful capacity of the human mind. The story begins with the discovery of Uranus in 1781; and it is an extraor-dingry feet that till its discovery dinary fact that, till its discovery, no planet had been discovered since the time when history commenced. Jupiter, Saturn, Mercury, Venus, and Mars had been known to observers of the heav-ens prior to the very earliest ages of Bath. Hitherto astronomers had regarded it as a fixed star, and recorded its place with thousands of undoubted stars. It was those records—made so unknowingly—which led to the discovery of Neptune. For by them we were able to learn the track along which Uranus was moving during the century which preceded its discovery. If house in Ottawa, and intends making a planet pursued its movements with-his residence here in future. forces, so that it was guided solely by the supreme central attraction of the sun, then the orbit of the planet would subsequent thereto, was compared with the track which the same planet was pursuing in those earlier years before Herschel's time, when it was unwittracks did not agree! When it appear ed that Uranus was performing move-ments which indicated that the planet was affected by certain perturbatio attempts were made to account for them by showing that they were the consequences of the attractive power of the other known bodies in the solar system. It was, however, found that there were certain discrepancies beween the places actually occupied by the planet discovered by Herschel and the places in which calculations seemed to locate it. The belief in the univensal validity of the laws of gravitation was so well founded that it suggested the possibility that the pertubations of Uranus must be due to the attraction of some other planet quite unknown. This it was that gave rise to one of the grandest intellectual problems which the mind of man has ever undertaken to solve. These circumstances led Le Verrier in France, and Adams in England, to investigate the whereabouts of a conceivable planet which should be capable of producing precisely those disturbances in the motion of Uranus which had actually been observed. The solution of this question naturally involved refinements of mathematical research only to be understood by specialists. Both of the illustrious astronomers, each pursuing his researches independently of the other, came at last to the conclusion that it was quite possible to determine the whereabouts of the unknown planet from the study of its action reflected, so to speak, in the movements of Uranus. When they found that this hypothetical body did exercise precisely that kind and degree of attractive power upon Uranus which would pronecessary explanation of its perturbations, their confidence that the hypothetical (body must have a veritle existence rose to absolute certainty. Le Verrier's calculations having been completed, he not only ascertained the track in which the unknown

At last he felt so confident that this planet could now be detected by the telescop that on the 18th of September, 1846, Berlin Observatory, requesting him to direct his telescope on a particular spot of the sky, which was carefully indicated, "and there," said Le Verrier, in effect, "you will see a planet which I have not seen, but which, neverthe-

From the tip of his snout to the root of his tail he measured exactly four inches. He could go to sleep comfortable in the hand of a child. In canine parlance he was a toy terrier. His appetite was always delicate, but at his last din-ner he ate too much tripe, and indigestion was the consequence. His physician thought he could pull him through, and nobody expected a catastrope; but the unexpected arrived. Now he has glass eyes and a skin full of stuffing; and in this condition Sir Archibald has presented him to the London Zoo. It now only remains for us to wait in patience for the coming poem from the pen of the poet laureate on "La Mort de Tiny."

"Weel, Joris, we'll hae no quarrel anent the question. You are a Dutch-man and hae practical ideas o' things in general. Honor is a virtue that canna be put in the Decalogue, like idolatry, and murder, and theft.'

Say you the Decalogue? It's yea and nae are enough. Harder than any of God's laws are the laws we make for ourselves. Little I think of their justice and wisdom. If right was Neil, if wrong was Hyde, honor punished both. A very foolish law is honor, I think."

"Here comes Neil, and we'll let the question fa' to the ground. There are wiser men than either you or I on Joris nodded gravely, and turned to welcome the young man. More than ever he liked him; for apart from moral and prudential reasons it was easy for the father to forgive an unreasonable love for his Katherine. Also, he was now more anxious for a marriage between Neil and his daughter. It was indeed the best thing to restore her to the social esteem of her own people; for by making her his wife, Neil would most emphatically exonerate her from all blame in the quarrel. Just this far, and no further, had Neil's three months' suffering aided his suit-he had now the full approval of Joris, backed by the weight of this social justification.

But in spite of these advantages he was really much farther away from Katherine. The three months had been full of mental suffering for her, and she blamed Neil entirely for it. had heard from Bram the story of the fight; heard how patiently Hyde had parried Neil's attack, rather than returned it, until Neil had so passionately refused any satisfaction less than his life; heard also how, even at the point of death, fainting and falling, Hyde had tried to protect her ribbon at his breast. She never wearied of talking with Bram on the subject; she thought of it all day, dreamed of

And she knew much more about it than her parents or Joanna supposed. Bram has easily fallen into the habit of calling at Cohen's to ask after his patient. He would have gone for his sister's comfort alone, but it was also a great pleasure to himself. At first Miriam often, and when he did, life became a heavenly thing to Bram Van Heemskirk, And though latterly it was always Cohen himself who answered his questions, there was at least the hope that Miriam would be in the store, and lift her eyes to him, or give him a smile, or a few words of greeting. Katherine very soon suspected how matters stood with her brother, and gratitude led her to talk with him about the lovely Jewess. Every day she listened with apparent interest to his descriptions of Miriam as he had seen her at various times; and every day she felt more desirous to know the girl whom she was certain Bram deeply loved.

But for some weeks after the duel she could not bear to leave the house. It was only after both men known to be recovering that she ventured to kirk; and her experience there was not one which tempted her to try the streets and the stores. However, no interest is a living interest in a community but politics, and these probably retain their power because change is their element. People eventually got weary to death of Neil Semple and Captain Hyde and Katherine Van Heemskirk. The subject had been discussed in every possible light, and when it was known that neither of the men was going to die, gossipers felt that they had been somewhat defrauded, and the topic lost every touch of speculation.

Also, far more important events had now the public attention. During the previous March the Stamp Act and the Quartering Act had passed both Houses of Parliament; and Virginia and Massachusetts, conscious of their dangerous character, had roused the fears of the other provinces, and a convention of their delegates was appointed to meet, during October, in New York. It was this important session which drew Neil Semple, with scarcely healed wounds, from his chamber. The streets were noisy with hawkers crying the detested Acts, and crowded with groups of stern-looking men discussing them. And with the prospect of soldiers quartered in every home, women had a real grievwace to talk over; and Katherine Van Heemskirk's love affair became an in-

It was during this time of excitement that Katherine said one morning at breakfast, "Bram, wait one minute for me. I am going to Kip's store for more than."

"It is a bad time you have chosen, Katherine," said Batavius. "Full of men are the streets, angry men, too, and of swaggering British soldiers, whom it would be a great pleasure to the up to a halter. The British I hate oullying curs, every one of them!"
"Well, I know that you hate the British, Batavius. You say so every

"Katherine!" "That is so, Joanna."

Madame looked annoyed. Joris rose, and said, Come, then, Katherine, thou shalt go with me and with Bram both. Batavius need not then fear

His voice was so tender that Katherine felt an unusual happiness and exaltation, and she was also young enough to be glad to see the familiar streets again, and to feel the pulse of their vivid life make her heart beat

At Kip's store Bram left her. She had felt so free and unremarked that she said, "Wait not for me, Bram. By myself I will go home. Or perhaps I might call upon Miriam Cohen? What dost thou think?" And Bram's large handsome face flushed like a girl's with pleasure as he answered: "That I would like. And there thou could rest until the dinner hour. As I go home I could call for thee."

So, after selecting the goods her mother needed at Kip's, Katherine was going up Pearl street, when she heard herself called in a familiar and urgent voice. At the same moment a door was flung open, and Mrs. Gor-don, running down the few steps, put her hand upon the girl's shoulder.
"Oh, my dear! This is a piece of good fortune past belief! Come into my lodgings. Oh, indeed you shall! I will have no excuse! Surely you owe Dick and me some reward, after the pangs we have suffered for you."

She was leading Katherine into the house, as she spoke, and Katherine had not the will, and therefore not the power, to oppose her. She placed the girl by her side on a sofa, she took her hands, and with a genuine grief and love told her all that "poor Dick" had suffered and was still suffering for her sake. "It was the most unprovoked chal lenge, my dear, and Neil Semple behaved like a savage, I assure 'you. When Dick was bleeding from half a dozen wounds, a gentleman would have been satisfied, and accepted the mediation of the seconds; but Neil, in his blind passion, broke the code to pieces. A man who can do nothing but be in a rage is a ridiculous and offensive animal. Have you seen him since his recovery? For I hear that he has crawled out of bed again."

"Him I have not seen. "Gracious powers, miss! Is that all you say? 'Him I have not seen.' Make me patient with so insensible a creature! Here I am, almost distracted with my three months' anxiety! And poor Dick, so gone as to be pass ed knowledge-breaking his true heart for a sight of you-and you answer me as if I had asked, 'Pray, have you seen the newspaper today?

Then Katherine covered her face and sobbed with a hopelessness and abandon that equally fretted Mrs. Gordon. "I wish I knew one corner of this world inaccessible to lovers!" "Of all creatures, they are the ridiculous and unreasonable. Now, what are you crying for, child?' "If I could only see Richard! Only see him for one moment!" "That is exactly what I am going to propose. He will get better when he has seen you. I will call a coach and we will go at once."

"Alas! Go I dare not! My father

"And Dick? What of 'Dick? Poor Dick, who is dying for you!" She went Dick, who is dying for you!" to the door and gave the order for a coach. "Your lover, Katherine? Child, have you no heart? Shall I tell Dick you would not come with me?"
"Be not so cruel to me. That you have seen me at all why need you say?" "Oh, indeed, miss! do not imagine yourself the only person who values the truth! Dick always asks me, 'Have you seen her?" 'Tis my humor to be truthful, and I am always swayed by my inclination. I shall feel it my duty to inform him how indifferent you are, Katherine; put on your bonnet again. Here also is my veil and cloak. No one will perceive that it is you. It is the part of humanity, I assure you. Do so much for a poor soul who is at the grave's mouth."

Great Gale on the Lakes, Accompanied by Snow and Hail.

Steamer Stranded at Cleveland - Many Vessels in Danger

heavy frost did serious damage through this section, melon and tomato men suffering the most. Peaches were badly nipped. The damage will figure several thousand dollars.

Marquette, Mich., Sept. 21.—When off Big Bay Point in the storm Friday night, a steam pipe on the Alaska burst. Nothing could be done to re-pair it until the steam was exhausted. The vessel lost her headway, fell into the trough of the sea and experienced the roughest handling in her history, as a terrible sea was running. Th entire cargo between decks, consisting chiefly of paving cement, cocoanut oil, molasses and patent medicines, was ruined, filling the deck with a thick and viscid mixture. The machinery was slightly damaged by the breaking of small pipes and connecting rods. The bulwarks were knocked out by the rolling barrels of cement, and the forward rail had to be cut away in order to drop the starboard anchor, while laying to to repair the burst pipe.

Terrific storms were raging on Lake Superior, accompanied by snow and hail. The gale was from the northwest, and as there was little warning of its approach, considerable anxiety was naturally felt for the safety of much shipping caught out on the lake. Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 21.-A special from Ogden says: One of the most destructive storms ever witnessed in this vicinity passed over this city Friday night and Saturday, leaving devastation in its path. Fortunately there was no loss of life, but the damage amounts to $100,000. Great damage was caused by wires being blown down. The smokestack of the street railway power house was blown down and the city left in darkness. Camps at the power house south of Ogden were torn to rags. The roof of the large machine shop was car-ried away and other damage done. Scarcely one of the large buildings of the city escaped without damage. The city presents a pitiable spectacle. The thoroughfares are strewn with debris of every imaginable description. At noon the storm subsided after a 24 hours' hurricane. The great machine shops in the canyon above Og-den have been blown down. The build-ngs are a complete wreck. Niagara Falls, N. Y., Sept. 21.-A furious wind storm was raging here Saturday night. Passengers who came over from Toronto on the steamer Chicora, of the Nuagara River Navigation Line, report the trip as one of worst they ever experienced. The sea was running high and the waves were constantly dashing over the boat. The steamer suffered a broken side and took in lots of water. The Corona started out from this side, but obliged to put back. Fears are entertained for the safety of some of the smaller craft known to be on the Several disasters resulted from the storm, and vessel men and passengers were badly scared, but no lives were lost. The tug Gregory, which went to assist the Yukon, was disabled and had to be towed ashore. Capt. Vosburg, of the Gregory, was at the wheel and had his arm broken. The yacht Matt B. was rescued by the life-saving crew, and two more boats were saved from disaster.

Detroit, Sept. 21.—Edward F. Radiagn, aged 18, was run down by a Fort Wayne and Belle Isle Railway car Saturday evening and fatally injured. He and J. E. Vermette, a young man of his own age, living at 24 Foundry street, were riding on bicycles behind a westbound car on Fort street, and just at Thirteenth street the car slowed up. Radigan turned to his left on the other track, not ed to his left on the other track, not noticing an approaching car, when eastbound car No. 80 struck him with such force that the glass in the vesi-bule windows was broken. Radigan was picked up still alive, but died in a few minutes. Acting Coroner Tea-gan will hold an inquest Wednesday. Radigan had been in the city only short time, and was employed at the Favorite Restaurant on Atwater street. His parents live at Galt, Ont. and an uncle, Wm. Davis, lives at 121 Nineteenth street.

ATTACKED BY CRANES.

Birds Made a Concerted Attack on an Amazeur Naturalist.

San Francisco., Cal., Sept. 21.-Ralph Hamilin, a bridge tender and amateur naturalist, was attacked by cranes on the Alameda marshes at daybreak. As he emerged from his hut at Bay Fargisland bridge, he noticed a sort of blue haze hanging over the marsh south of the island, which appeared to be rising and falling. Armed with a shotgun he proceeded to investigate the phenomenon, and much to his surprise saw that the wavering blue line was an immense flock of cranes, most of which were dancing with outstretched wings and fencing with their bills. His curiosity overcame his discretion. Hamlin drew closer to the birds, but being attacked by two of the largest was compelled to use his gun in self-defense. Immediately after having discharged the weapon the whole flock rose as one bird and circling around made a concerted attack upon him. After clubbing his assailants with the butt of his gun without apparent effect he made a dash for his hut, which he finally reached without further injury than a few painful jabs from the mear-like bills of his pursuers, which hovered round for some time after he

WHAT IT MEANS

London is learning it. Learning it fast. Proof not lacking. Everybody has it. That tired feeling. Don't know what it means. Keeps you awake at night. Destroys daily comfort. Wearies the body, worries the mind. You would shake it off. You would be healthful and strong. So you can. If you get at it right.

First learn what it means. Some say it is bad blood. Others say it is a lazy liver. They're all wrong. Tired feeling means tired kidneys. Just as lame back means lame kidneys. And backache means kidney ache. How do we know it? Because Doan's Kidney Pills cure it. And they are for kidneys only. How can we prove it? Because London people say so.

Here is a case in point: Perhaps you don't know Mrs. Chas. Cooper, of 93 Horton street, London, Ont., and perhaps you do. That is neither here nor there in what we have to tell. This is the story as she tells it. It is worth reading:

"My husband got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills from Strong's drug store, and from the time I first commenced taking them the improvement in my health was rapid and constant. I am very decidedly better and stronger in every way. They have removed my back and side trouble, and my appetite is good. I sleep well and am rested. My nervousness is almost entirely gone. ### Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Osgood,

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful nts down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves.

The chief meals—dinner and supper—were taken in the hall, both by the old English and the Normans for the parlor did not come into use until the reign of Elizabeth. Breakfast did not become a regular meal until quite lately, and Dr. Murray in "The Oxford Directory," gave 1463 as the date of the earliest quotation in which the word occurred. The meal did not become recognized until late in the seventeenth century, for Pepys habitually took his draught of half a pint of Rhenish wine or a drachm of strong waters in place of a morning meal of the day, and from the accession of Henry IV. to the death of Queen Elizabeth, the dinners were as

The English were essentially meat eaters, and it was not until the time of the Commonwealth that pudding attained its extraordinary popularity; indeed, the first mention of pudding in the menu of the "Buckfeast" at St. Bartholo mew's Hospital did not occur until 1710, and in 1712 is an item of 5s. for

HUNDREDS TURNEDAWAY

From the Dundas Center Church - The Organ Has a Teak.

The noted Toronto divine, Rev. W. F. Wilson, preached to two immense congregations in the Dundas Center Methodist Church yesterday. In the evening not only was every seat filled, but scores stood throughout the sermon, and hundreds were turned away for want of even available standing room. Before the service the electrical apparatus in the organ startled the audience by beginning operations on its own account, producing music more spirited than spiritual, without human said, Mr. Wilson's morning discourse aimed at the necessity of personal testimony of faith, as exemplified by John in the exclamation, "Behold the Lamb of God." was it that great numbers are not swept into church; how was it that great numbers are not continuously swept up to the Lamb of God; how was it that the kingdoms of the world were not becoming inheritances of God how was it? Because the of the day is lacking in that experience, in that testifying power that made Elijah before Ahab; that made Paul before Nero; that made Luther Wesley irresistible before the and Lord Jesus Christ. If the church could only be aroused so that everywhere she would echo the words of John, then the dawning century would see such results for Christ as the world has never seen before. The special choir music at both services was very fine.

CARPETS.

Have you a new house to furnish? Are you getting a new carpet for the bedroom? Do you want a piece of oilcloth to put under the coal stove and save your carpet? If so, you will undoubtedly save your hard-earned dollars by remembering that Kingsmill has the largest carpet warehouse in Canada—and low prices go hand in hand with big buying.

TWEEDS.

The password of Fashion this season is "Tweeds." You will see them everywhere. And Kingsmill has now in stock the pick of the best looms of either continent. Good strong honest Canadian Tweeds at a quarter that a few years ago would have brought three times that price. And remember that we cut all cloth free of charge.

DRESS GOODS.

Forehandedness for fall has placed on our shelves the most complete and stylish stock of Dress Goods ever shown in London; elegant costumes from France and the land of the heather. And with the goods we can give you hints on the styles for the coming season. Our buyer got the choicest choice from the finest mills, and the prices are such as only Kingsmill's methods can make.

THE CASTAWAYS.

Sensation That Comes to Those Who

Are Wrecked on a Barren Rock. They lay upon a barren rock that uprose sharply from the sea-three men, wrought by the hand of famine into creatures almost without likeless to the form that they had borne. Close at their feet tossed a few timbers that alone remained of the shin that had gone down-how long before they could not tell, for through the mist of anguish it had grown to seem a happening of the dreamlike past. The chaplain of the ship, her humblest satlor, and a passenger—a judge of honorable note—they wore one semblance now, and that of horror. Upon their bodies and the rock be-neath, the sun's strength beat in its With what life was yet within, they lifted constantly to their lips the water they had saved from the ship's stores. No other object broke the desolation of that narrow sland. Food there was none nor had They waited only death, and yet—they hoped. rescue would come—that, the location of the rock assured them-if only they could live a little yet. But without food the hope was but another of starvation's tricks of torture. Food! Whence in that ghastly desert should it come? They lay with souls as self-consuming as their bodies. And then took place a thing beyond our knowledge of men's minds. The eves of these three, horrible already as they glared upon each other through their suffering, filled all at once with monstrous new significance. There was no speech, yet each became possessed of one unspeakable conception. Whether was his own or subtly thrust upon him by another's wish, the thought was there in each.

A hideous convulsion seized the sailor's countenance as he struggled to cast off the unsought suggestion. The chaplain made a low ejeculation of prayer.

There was silence, and then grew-taunting, tormenting. At last the judge spoke, his voice unnatural in horror, yet his words strong, subtle, fearless, their meaning clear with unsupportable distinctness. He plead for Not for his own or theirs but that, through sacrifice by one man of his portion, that miracle and mystery we call life should be preserved He ceased, and the chaplain mut-"But the sin-iniquity past pardon!"

"Were the sin less," replied the judge, "that three lives perish or that two be saved?" "Ay," groaned the sailor, "there'll be rescue soon, and why should three be rotting on this cursed rock? Ill take my chance of living."

"God's mercy on our souls!" the chaplain said and thus it was agreed. Then, " stay," he cried again, "there's no need to cast lots. I freely give my life, and thus will yours be spared, and I delivered from worse than "Not so; no, we take our chances," they answered each, and so cast lots.

And it was upon him who desired it that the lot fell. They gazed upon the rigid face beween them, and saw how he lay tortured no longer by starvation, thought each within himself: "It

Selling Their Charms in the . Church.

The Union Signal. The effect of Trilby is not confined to theaters and gay society. The church is one of the greatest institutions of the world and spreads its net over all classes of society, so it con-stantly has its evil influence from within as well as from without. As in the middle ages, the church converted the magnificent barbarian chiefs and brought them within its pale and ther had constant warfare to keep them from ruling and ruling, so today the most dangerous enemies to the cause of Christ are sometimes they of the fold. It is generally supposed, how-ever, that the church has a trusty "old guard," a saving few among the mature heads and pious hearts which shuts out the stream of worldliness which the young and thoughtless sometimes seek to turn upon it. But what shall we say when even the guard goes to sleep and allows Trilby to ply her charms within the sacred altar of the church for gold? Imagine the chapel of an Episcopal Church crowded, the front seats full of young men-to see what? A screer or cuntain falling to within eight inches of the floor, underneath which the bare feet of the young women are to be shown, the highest bidder among the men to have the honor of escorting to supper the one whose feet appeals most strongly to his sense of the beautiful. Loud applause is said to have greeted this announcement and in a moment a pair of little feet and shapely ankled framed about by delicate embroidery appeared under the hem of the curtain. Bids were made, and $5 won her. One pair of feet succeeded another. The bids went on. The church was being enriched, and the young men were becoming bankrupt. "Then came a pair of feet whose insteps an Andalusian maid might envy. 'Ten dollars to start with,' shouted a youth who seemed more enthusiastic than should be one who simply opens his hand and purse to charity.

'Twelve,' from a corner of the second row of seats. 'Fifteen,' from the first bidder, who, turning to his competitor, exclaimed, 'There's no use for you to bid against me. That young lady will take supper with me if I have to bid all night and take supper at breakfast time. I bathed with her at Atlantic City last summer.'

Was not this simply an appeal to the sensuous nature? If we are amazed that young ladies were found willing to pander to the lower nature of the young men for the express purpose of squeezing money out of them, willing to thus debase and degrade themselves, what shall we say of sober, elderly people who could not make the plea of the uninformed, unthinking, unsophisticated, allowing such things? Were such performances common in the church, there would be little hopes of saving our young people from the dance hall and the brothel, to say nothing of inciting them to an ideal manhood and wo-manhood; from which should come an ideal civilization, representing the highest, the purest, the best possibilities of mankind. Let such entertainments continue, and we might expect in time a renewal of the worst phases of the Greek Eleusinian mys-
