port to the stone. It is also probable that a knife was used in an attempt by the attacker to slit Payne's throat, but he must have beat him off, as it was not deep enough to cause death. The broken finger and the badly-bruised left hand would go to show that Payne slashed out viciously before being overpowered, and that the murderer must carry some marks of the fight to the death in the lonely wood.

After searching the dead man, the murderer. It is believed, carried him about 20 yards, intending to hide his gruesome work in the sugar shanty. LIND GIRL'S REMOVAL HAS CAUSED A ROW the Reidy Is Taken From Victoria Home to Mount Hope Orphanage.

WILLING, SAYS PRIEST

Irs. Harrison Declares That Charge Left Under False Pretences.

The removal of a blind young woman, Ethel Reidy, from the Victoria home for incurables, the Mount Hope orphanage, has caused a row. The charge left under false pretences, Mrs. Harrison, in charge of the social department of the Victoria home, declared today.

Says She Asked Change. Mrs. Harrison said that the girl was taken to Mount Hope at her own request, after she had visited the orphanage and that an attempt was being made to place her in the Victoria home. She said that the girl was taken to Mount Hope absolutely of her own will, and that anyone who was free to do so, and that she was free to return to the Victoria home at any time.

Says She Made Request. Mrs. Harrison said that both at Victoria Hospital and at the Victoria home, she had complained that she did not want to see any priest, and that at one time when Father Richards called at the home, she told him that she did not want to see him. She said that she was free to do so, and that she was free to return to the Victoria home at any time.

On Saturday afternoon, May 26, a young woman came to the home, and asked if she could take Miss Reidy to the Victoria home. She said that she was free to do so, and that she was free to return to the Victoria home at any time.

ONTARIO TYPOS IN SESSION EXTEND HANDS TO QUEBEC

Invite Unions of Sister Province to Join Society.

TRIP TO THE LAKESIDE Dinner at Loney House Is Tendered to the Visiting Delegates.

That the Quebec typographical unions be invited to join with the Ontario unions in forming an association was the substance of a motion passed yesterday by the annual conference of representatives of the typographical unions held in Hyman Hall. This will make the conference doubly strong, and will result in much benefit to the unions.

The morning session was largely devoted to routine business. President Doughty, General, read his annual address, dealing largely with the condition of the trade. It was found that the thing was satisfactory, and that working conditions were first-class for the most part. The question of sanitary improvement in the printing industry was also taken up, and it was decided to hold a convention in the future to deal with this question.

Factory Inspector Heard. Chief Factory Inspector Burke, Toronto, also addressed the conference, outlining the plans of the department to improve sanitary and working conditions in all factories, and asked for the cooperation of the convention in making these conditions as satisfactory as possible.

Dr. Doughty, international organizer, Montreal, was introduced to the convention, and delivered a brief address. It was decided to purchase $5 worth of flowers from the donors of the banquet to be donated to some charitable institution to be decided later. Secretary-Treasurer Myland of Peterboro presented his report, showing the financial condition of the organization to be in good shape.

The party left at 1:30 p.m. over the Ontario and Quebec Railway, with Aid J. Dyer and City Clerk Sam Baker in charge of the outing. The trip to Port Hope was made in good time, and the visitors were shown the improvements recently made.

At 2:30 o'clock dinner was served in the Loney House, an excellent meal being prepared. There were many songs sung, and the delegates were very much pleased. The delegates were the guests of the city and the local union in the afternoon, and had a most lively time. The weather was not exactly ideal for the trip to the lakeside, but it was not as bad as one would imagine.

HAVE DONE FINE WORK Since Early in War Misses Cheetham, Doidge and Thomson Have Been Active.

Three members of St. John Ambulance Brigade Nursing Division No. 4, in the persons of Misses Elizabeth Cheetham, 72 Byron Avenue; Minnie Doidge, 886 Queen's Avenue; and Nellie Thomson, 38 Riverview Avenue, have volunteered for overseas service and will proceed to England some time after the 26th of this month. All three have been prominently identified with the work in teaching, nursing and rendering first aid.

This division is the first of its kind in Western Ontario, and the fourth in the Dominion. Misses Cheetham and Doidge volunteered for overseas work in August, 1914, immediately after the outbreak of war, but as they were deemed too young to be sent to the front, they were retained upon to remain until the present time.

Miss Thomson volunteered in August, 1915. Only one member, Miss Cheetham, between the ages of 15 and 50 is left, all the others being engaged in the service of

ARTISTIC RECITAL BY ROY DAVIDSON

Roy Davidson, artist-pupil of Mrs. McHardy Smith, was heard last evening in the Masonic Temple in piano recital, playing entirely from memory a program of exceptional interest, and at the same time one bristling with difficulties.

The originality and fire which characterized his work from the time he first appeared before the public, was still there, but, guided by trained judgment and made more effective, while none the less captivating.

REV. S. W. MUXWORTHY IS NEW PRESIDENT OF LONDON CONFERENCE

Asks for Support of Laymen's Evangelistic Campaign.

THE PASTORAL ADDRESS

Many Vital Matters Touched Upon by Rev. D. N. McCamus.

Rev. S. W. Muxworthy of Exeter was elected president of the London Methodist Conference by an overwhelming majority at the first session of the annual meeting in Dundas Centre Methodist Church yesterday afternoon. Mr. Muxworthy was a runner-up for this honor a year ago, and his appointment proved a most popular choice.

The new president clearly defined his position in regard to the evangelistic movement inaugurated by the Laymen's Association in his brief introductory address, commending it to the conference and appealing for support of the campaign.

Many Nominations. Among those who received a number of votes for president of the conference were: Rev. J. E. Holmes, chairman of the London district; Rev. W. E. Millson, St. Thomas; Rev. J. W. Hilbert, Wingham; Rev. J. E. J. Millard, Listowel; Rev. P. E. Sawyer of London was elected secretary, and named Rev. Byron Snell and Rev. Leonard Bartlett as second and third assistants.

The pastoral address of the president, Rev. D. N. McCamus, of Blenheim, delivered in Dundas Centre Methodist Church, introduced the business of the 24th annual session of the London Conference of the Methodist Church.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: I see by the London Free Press of June 7 that notice of a bill to provide for the introduction of daylight saving plan was given by Sir George Foster in the House. It states that it simply enacts that clocks throughout the Dominion shall be put ahead one hour on a date to be announced by proclamation. In view of the fact that the workers of this country turned it down in nearly all the cities, I think it nearly time that their wishes should be considered.

REACHES HOLLAND BORDER IN EFFORT TO LEAVE GERMANY

Lieut. Gerald Greene Almost Wins to His Liberty.

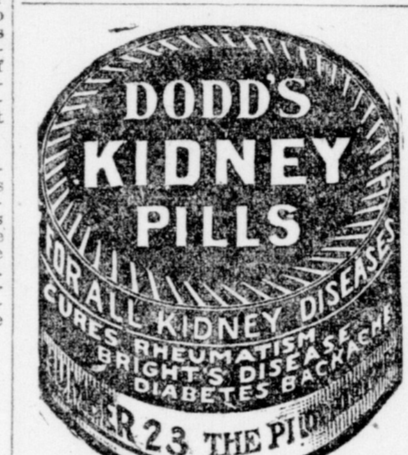

PUNISHMENT IS SEVERE

Solitary Confinement for Many Months Meted Out to Hume Elliot's Nephew.

Lieut. Gerald E. D. Greene, Toronto, nephew of Hume B. Elliot, K.C., and of the Misses Elliot, Dufferin avenue, a prisoner in Germany since the second battle of Ypres, some time ago made an effort to escape, and succeeded after two days and nights in getting to the Holland border. He was just crossing the stream which would mean liberty to him when he was captured and taken back to Germany. He is now undergoing punishment for his offence.

A Toronto dispatch has the following to say of his attempt: "Lieut. Gerald E. D. Greene, 3rd Battalion, who was taken prisoner at the second battle of Ypres, and who was caught at the Dutch border in an attempt to escape, tells in a letter home the rigors of the punishment meted out to him for his breach of the etiquette that ought, in German eyes, to govern a prisoner in Germany. Lieut. Greene states that his offence was at one time termed a 'simple escape.' If a man under a strict guard got away, then he was rather clever; if he was caught, he was given six days' confinement. But the German officials decided that England had concluded that simple escape was a serious offence, and therefore the offender should get a long term of solitary confinement."

"The letter was written March 23, and in it Lieut. Greene states that he will be placed in solitary confinement for many months. German officials tell him that if they get assurance from England that their prisoners are not similarly treated for a like offence, they will relax the punishment. They are allowing those affected by the rule in Germany to write to their relations so that pressure may be brought in England. Lieut. Greene seems to think it a fair proposition, as he says that he is kept in a very small cell, which reminds him of the scene in Provostore. He says that his confinement will last for five months."

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

IT NOW seems assured that Canada is to have a Dominion-wide daylight-saving law operative this summer, under which all clocks in the country will be advanced one hour. The fact that the law is to be general indicates that it will eliminate the objectionable features so prominent last year. The idea of daylight saving was to allow everyone an extra hour of daylight in the evening to garden, to play games or to employ in any way which seemed desirable to the individual; it was primarily conceived to benefit the workman or the working woman. Curiously, it was this class who found it most burdensome when worked under a local bylaw. For instance, the railway workers did not change their time, while the schools did. The result was that in many households two meals had to be prepared instead of one, as the children had to have their dinner between 12 and 1 o'clock, now time, while the father was obliged to have his between the same hours, old time, or an hour later. The same muddle occurred in sleeping hours and the time for arising, and altogether it cannot be denied that the scheme was a failure.

Under the new plan, railways, post-offices and all other institutions make the change, and the disadvantages will disappear. It is, therefore, probable that the act will be welcomed by the great majority, especially as so many want to snatch every possible minute of daylight to work for food production this year.

AIR RAIDS AND RESULTS.

SATISFACTION is expressed in the British because at least eight of the eighteen aircraft which raided parts of England were brought down by anti-aircraft guns and British aviators, and the satisfaction is expressed in the results of British raids on German-held territory are noted. For several days consecutively, British aviators have been bombing the (so-called) naval bases at Zeebrugge, Ostend and points in between. Great damage is believed to have been done, and destroyers have been forced to leave their lairs and steam out to sea, where they met with a warm reception by a British fleet. All this has been accomplished with little or no loss, in spite of the fact that the places attacked are heavily fortified, supplied with big guns and every defence which German ingenuity can devise.

Some impatience was expressed when raids were made on England and the attackers managed to escape. People were prone to think it was evidence of stupidity on the part of those responsible for defensive measures. What must the Germans be thinking? They see their aircraft shot down during every raid, but the Allies are scattering explosives all over their strong and important military positions, and getting away safely. It may dawn on them that they are not, after all, too secure even in the heart of Germany. If the Allied fleet decide to visit them.

MAKE HONORS REALLY CANADIAN.

LIBERAL and Conservative newspapers have united in protesting against the creation of peerages and a hereditary title class in Canada, even the most ardent supporters of the movement demanding that the practice cease before it goes any farther. There is no public support for this effort to establish an aristocracy in the Dominion and little approval of even knighthoods.

The Canadian nation is young, democratic, and desirous of honoring merit wherever it is found. Why should it not institute a truly Canadian order of honor, membership in which would mark a man or woman one of the Dominion's most eminent citizens? In Britain there is the Royal Society, and he who is elected a member must have done something which stamps him as a leader in his own particular sphere. He may be an explorer, a scientist, a doctor, a writer or almost anything else, but must earn, by outstanding achievement, the right to have F.R.S. (Fellowship of the Royal Society) written after his name. Nothing that his father did, no amount of money spent for political purposes, will gain him admittance to the exclusive circle. No one who has so been honored by his fellowmen would exchange his F.R.S. for any of the empty titles granted by the crown, whether knighthood or peerage.

Canada has her eminent men, yes, and women, too. There is no good reason against the formation of a Canadian society, having the prestige in the Dominion that the Royal Society enjoys in the old land. Membership would be an honor worth striving after; an inspiration to the youth of the nation.

OVER THERE.

A GENTLEMAN who has felt the stress of the long drought in Ontario, since last September 18, heard a glad gospel the other day at last. His friend had been reading Sir Oliver Lodge's "Raymond," and in conversation on the subject made the startling communication that one of the "messages" from spirit land spoke of beer, cigars and whisky sodas to be had over there, "just the same as in England, only better and cheaper." "Well, and is that a fact," exclaimed the sufferer in this vale of prohibition, "it's the best tidings I've heard in many a moon. I'll just wind up my affairs and strike right out for Paradise."

The new book of Revelation which promises a bar in heaven, spirits to the spirits, seems likely to be the subject of dispute and disagreement. It is most revolutionary revelation, a doubtful doctrine. Crossing the bar will be from the closed side in Ontario to a wide open side yonder. And yet the novelty, like other novelties, resolves itself on a little consideration into a renewal of an old belief. The Greeks held for nectar on Olympus and the ruler Goths revelled in fancies of mead-drinking in their heaven, the heroes draining fathomless cups forever and ever. Browning's Rabbi ben Ezra looks forward to a merry sort of hereafter:

"The festal board; lamp's flash and trumpet's peal,
The new wine's foaming flow."

Now old fancies find a confirmation, it might seem, in the reply of the spirit to Sir Oliver's medium. An objector may here arise and ask, "But was this beer-drinking, cigar-smoking spirit in heaven? Is he not rather to be located elsewhere?" The conclusive answer is that he seemed to be quite happy and enjoying himself. Smoking a cigar is a very different matter from being yourself lit and smoked as a moment's cheroot by Lucifer or his men.

Such drinking in Elysium as smoking and drinking may suggest an ending continuance of the fight for prohibition, not only in this world but in the next. But doubtless these material pleasures are conceivable as divested of any harmful, earthly associations. As there will be glorified bodies, so it may be believed that the joys of the flesh will be proportionately glorified, being purged of the thousand ills that mere mortal flesh is heir to. The wine, too, the whisky, and the rest of it, will be more spiritual than spirituous, possessed of all the exhilarating effects without the poison. Oh, yes, it is easy to explain the difficulty. As at Canada, the best wine was reserved to the last, so "the best is yet to be" in yet another life, as Rabbi ben Ezra would say. It will be innocuous! And yet, and yet, all will that please air. Will it not be a grapeful paradise after all, if there be not one drop of poison and wickedness here and there in pipe or bowl?

HOTELS MAKING MONEY.

A LONDON HOTELKEEPER is quoted as saying that his business was never so good as it is now, and that he is more successful without a license to sell intoxicants than he was in "the good old days" when he could dispense whisky, etc., freely.

What is the secret of this success? Strict attention to business, judgment in selection of his refreshments and a determination to cater to the trade which has been lost. Summer is coming, and with it the almost universal desire for cooling and thirst-quenching drinks. There is a decided probability that standard hotelkeepers will be granted a monopoly of the sale of temperance beers and similar drinks, and this special privilege, which it is only fair they should enjoy, will give them a great advantage and opportunity. By judicious advertising, cleanliness in the barrooms and side rooms, and a little enterprise, hotelkeepers may work up a trade in the next few months which will astonish them, especially if they keep in mind the fact that there is now a wider field for custom among the fair sex.

The bottom did not drop out of everything with the enactment of prohibition. There is still money to be made in Ontario, and there is nothing to prevent hotelmen getting at least their fair share.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Hon. Robert Rogers declares his reputation has been injured by Mr. Justice Galt's charges. Is that possible? Ten million young Americans registered for service. There's another "contemptible little army" for Wilhelm to abuse.

Berlin, reporting on the air raid on England, says: "Good hits were observed." Certainly; every occupant of the six craft brought down observed them with pain and sorrow.

The leading spirits in New York's "No Conscription League" are Emma Goldman and B. Reimann. Can it be they are not in sympathy with the Allied cause, when they have these names?

Hon. Albert Severyn denies any intention of resigning because of the recent election. That is between him and his conscience. He knows whether he intended to do wrong; the public can only judge by appearances.

It's some little tribute to Britain, as the ruler of the seas, when she is expected to man the German ships seized by a nation of 100,000,000, while she is providing the greater part of the world's merchantmen and carrying on a war.

A man on the street swore that the bad weather would continue with a new moon sliding in on its back. It was a rotten moon," he said. But moons standing up, lying down or on the silt can be exactly predicted, just like eclipses, years or centuries ahead, if it were worth while. Why do we pay for probabilities when the moon with an absolute certainty?

"Down with the capitalists," shout the Russian extremists. This is like the cry of Jack Cade's men in Shakespeare's play. "The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers." But the capitalists are a much wider class than the lawyers. In our country, at any rate, the "haves" are much more numerous than the "have-nots." It will take some time killing or robbing all the capitalists, first the big and then the lesser, in Russian cities.

The Advertiser's Daily Short Story

(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"SOMEBODY'S MOTHER."

By Dorothy Mather.

Gen. Goodwin sighed as he turned his back upon the little Devonshire village. The jagged rocks and the sea seemed more wonderful than ever, but his backward glance was not at either sea or rocks. Instead, his glance was riveted on a tiny vine-clad cottage with roses climbing in at the casement windows and a sweet little white-haired lady dwelling within.

At least the general supposed her to be sweet. He felt sure that one whose eyes met the passer-by with so friendly an expression could not be otherwise. Roses and birds evidently found her gentle and kind, for they haunted every available nook of her small property.

The general had found no way of meeting the little lady during his stay in Lee, and it was with heartfelt regret that he made his way back to London. But even Gen. Goodwin, in his sixtieth year, was not free to travel for fortune's path. In his own pleasure. He was inspecting troops for the new armies while his only son was fighting in France for the glory of king and country. The general was less lonely the little lady within the garden of the vine-clad cottage might not have set him to thinking of the wonderful possibilities yet in store for him. As it was, his mind dwelt persistently on a small home in a quiet street, a tiny little white house with a face framed in silver hair to make home a real home.

But the train went Londonward, and with it went the general. It was at the London railway station that he made the daily papers, but was not until he had reached his own library that he saw her picture in the "Sketch."

His eyes lit up with frank amazement, so unlike was the coincidence. A number appeared each day in the paper of the picture of the little lady, a picture or found on the persons of brave soldier laddies.

The picture of the little lady in the cottage by the sea was called "Somebody's Mother," and a message beneath it asked the readers of the "Sketch" for information. Gen. Goodwin winced at the thought of the pain perhaps a story he had fallen on the battlefield. He had been taken to see a doctor, and his knowledge of the fact. There were not many people who would recognize the face, and the picture was only a small shot, and had been taken in the casement window at which the general had often looked.

He lost no time in telephoning to the office of the daily paper. When he hung up the receiver there was a glad smile in his eyes. The soldier boy in whose pocket the precious picture had been found was being taken to see a doctor, and he had been taken in the casement window at which the general had often looked.

It was with this hope in his breast that Gen. Goodwin made the journey back to Devonshire, to the village beside the sea. He had seen to the boy's comfort before leaving London by having him removed from the hospital to his own home, where he was to receive the best of care.

The general's heart was not to receive steady as he approached the family cottage, and went in at the whitewashed gate.

"Somebody's Mother" opened the door herself and the general thought he detected the very faintest rose hue in her cheeks as she saw who her visitor was. But a look of fear had leaped into her eyes. A stranger and a military man, the very news of her son.

He is a soldier, the general said swiftly, anxious to save his son's moment's worry. He knew that his mind would jump to the thought of his son's safety. Her smile was wonderful to behold, and it left the general slightly awkward to speak. It was more difficult than he had imagined, this speaking with the little lady upon whom his mind had dwelt so persistently. She was a soldier's daughter, and he gave himself a jerk and told her all that he knew.

"It was through this photograph," he said, "that I have been able to locate the boy. I knew then that she blushed so. 'If I had not looked enviously in upon you among your roses and birds I would not have known that 'Somebody's Mother' was you.'"

The little lady looked back at him with a charming frank look of happiness in her eyes.

"My boy is everything to me," she said. "I want him down here when he can be moved. Perhaps his memory will come back in the scenes of his childhood."

"The sight of his mother would do it," the general said with a firm conviction. "Just a mother can do anything by the mere touch of a gentle hand or the glance of love-lit eyes. I will go up to London tonight and bring him down to you—if you like," he suggested, knowing well that when the boy was beside her she would have more happiness than she expected and that he, the general, had helped to give it to her.

"Would it not trouble you for too much?" she asked, gazing questioningly with those wonderful blue eyes right at the general.

"Just you know," he said, "that it will give me as much pleasure to bring your brave son down here to you as it would give you to bring him back to me. Put yourself in my place," he added gently.

With that the little lady of the cottage smiled and put out the slim white fingers that touched the roses and birds so tenderly. General Goodwin grasped them and raised them to his lips, for after all they both realized that the future was holding out to them.

It was as the general had hoped, "Somebody's Mother" brought memory back to her son. His first rational words were "Mother—mother, mine."

Down by the sea and the rocks "Somebody's Mother" and the general paced slowly along the cliff. It was a quiet week since the boy's return but, after all, they both knew.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

REV. DR. SILCOX'S SERMON CRITICISED.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: I have had laid in your paper a report of Rev. Dr. Silcox's sermon last Sunday night, in which he strongly condemned the conscription of young men to ask your indulgence for space to make some remarks on the same. I am not acquainted with the reverend gentleman, but have frequently read reports of his sermons that I admired, and am surprised that he could make such a bold statement to his flock when he certainly could not have given much thought or investigation to the phenomena of spiritualism, which itself is without an investigation, because it is contrary to the dogmas of the present so-called orthodox churches.

Twenty years ago I was as much an unbeliever as he is now, but finding it cropping up amongst the members of a Bible class I was teaching in this city, I made it my business to investigate the matter, and write it up as a delusion and a fake as I believed it to be. For three years I went, at considerable expense to investigate it in different cities under test conditions. During the time I found fakes and other impostors, but I found that there was a reality in the phenomena.

The reverend doctor states that the talk of the spirits of the so-called dead coming back to men here has absolutely no interest from Christ and his apostles, and uses the parable of Lazarus and Dives, where Dives, he says, was told that he could not send messages to his brethren. Here I take issue with the reverend doctor, and assert that the Old and New Testaments are full of instances of the appearances of angels and spirits to those on earth. That in the time of Christ and his apostles the matter was thoroughly understood as spiritualists now claim.

Throughout the Bible the words "Lord," "Angel of the Lord," "Angels," "Sons of God," "Spirits," "Man of God," and occasionally "Gods" and "Men" appear to be used synonymously.

Indiscriminately and interchangeably with little difference intended or implied in the interpretation of the expression. In Isaiah it is stated, "He maketh his angels spirits." Luke quotes Jesus as saying, "When man dies he is equal with the angels and are the children of God." The Lord appeared to Moses at different times, and spoke to him audibly, and promised once that he would give him an angel to guide him. Three angels appeared to Abraham, and ate with him. They were also called men. Two angels appeared to Lot and were also called men. In the New Testament there are about many instances of the appearance of angels or spirits to those on the earth. An angel appeared to the shepherds, and took two of his disciples up on the mountain, and there appeared unto them Moses and Elias.

The Lord appeared to Saul on his way to Damascus. An angel appeared unto Cornelius. Paul said: "There stood by me an angel of the Lord." In Revelations, John fell at the feet of an angel to worship him, when the angel said: "Do it not, for I am of thy brethren."

Paul, in reciting the gifts given to man, quotes the gifts of prophecy and of discerning spirits.

John says: "Believe not every spirit." "The spirits, whether they speak of God." All of these substantial spirit phenomena, which the reverend doctor in his sermon admits that there is a continuity of life and that everyone, after so-called death, retains his personality, but are separated into good and bad, going to their respective places of reward or hell, and that there is no repentance from hell, nor mercy from heaven, lead us to me, who have written and preach in this age of enlightened Christianity.

How can we reconcile this with the statement that we are the Sons of God? Or where in Ecclesiastes it reads, "I will call the dust of the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God, who gave it, and who will surely punish those who have despised his word." The mercy of the Lord endures forever. Or if there was no redemption after death, why should Peter state that Jesus went down and preached to the spirits in prison, and that they were disobedient in the days of Noah?

Many more quotations might be given, but the above are sufficient to show that spirits did return in Bible days, and if they did, it is reasonable to suppose that their guidance and inspiration as much as it did then.

Christ taught his disciples on account of their mediocrity powers. Especially were Peter, Paul and James, who were not long past spiritualists to be able to leave their earthly bodies, and as a reflection against them as an ignorant and superstitious class of people.

The reverend doctor says that he has lived too long near spiritualists to believe that they were simply dead. He is among the list of spiritualists—some of the following have gone to their long home:

A Page of Interest to Women

ODDS AND ENDS

BY PENLOPE PENN.

[BY PENLOPE PENN.]

My friend the Fat Woman is thoroughly imbued with the idea that a woman is perfectly capable of doing anything she really tries to do. Of man's capabilities along the same line she is not so sure. In fact, very fond of the old poem about "Daisy and Joan," which concludes with "Return my Joan, as heretofore, I'll play the housewife's part no more."

Knowing, as I do, my Fat Friend's tendency to believe in woman's superiority, when it comes to doing a score of things at once, I was not surprised the other day to receive from her a copy of the following clipping from a recent issue of the Canadian Courier.

My friend writes: "Given exactly the same circumstances, what sort of man do you think a man would have made of this?" The article is by Nina M. Peterson, and bears the title "Potatoes and a Baby."

"We have just weathered a siege of potato-planting—about as mean a job as there is. My part, of course, consisted in cutting the tubers, and there was plenty for me. We always cut them in the driveway, a commodious stone building full of draughts and ineptness. I also have a hen in there with twenty-one chickens, which add to the lively appearance of the place. I sat up in the old sleigh-box on a pile of empty sacks, and a bag of potatoes emptied around me. As I cut them, I took the whisks off them and laid the cuts in a pail. At intervals the hen and floorwalker appeared and carried off what I had cut. On the start I cut fast and furiously, and everything went as merrily as a wake until I happened to think of my bread—no anything else to do—so I ran to the house and lifted the cloth off the tubers, and there they were, and would not be ready for mixing for half an hour. I was at the kitchen door, going out to the driveway again when a sudden extraordinary uproar sent my heart into my throat—the baby had fallen out of bed!"

Baby Awakes.

"I raced upstairs and rescued a small and very indignant girl from the far recesses of the darkness under the bed and brought her downstairs. The afternoon nap was terminated for that day, which brought in a new complication. My experience told that child told me that if I cut potatoes, she would insist upon cutting them too, and much as I wanted help, I had to do it. I tried to hurry her past the hen with the chickens, but she broke out in a fit of giggles, and ran over to the coop, flinging herself down upon her—also—contour and getting very impatient at the little ones. She knew where I kept the wheat tailings for them, and set about to feed them. I had to put the wheat "far from the maddening crowd," for I think there are some cases where prevention is better than cure. Then I clambered into the sleigh-box once more and took up my knife. Baby continued to fuss with some sprouts, which she endeavored to eat, but finally fed to the hen, though with rather indifferent results. She soon went over to the shelf where I had put the wheat and demanded some for her pets.

"Oh, no, Babe," I said anxiously. "Run out and get some pretty dandelions to play with."

"Chicky," she said, firmly, but kindly, pointing a fat and dirty finger at the wheat.

"Might make chicky sick—too much wheat," I told her, endeavoring to convey by dumb show the awful agonies of a crop overcrowded with wheat at $2-and-a-half-dear-knows-what a bushel.

"Chicky," she rejoined, patiently, disheveled.

"Where's the doggie here, Bob?"

"Here, Bob!" I called in vain. She was not a bit interested in her purpose.

For Bob was tied up in the stable and made no answer.

"Chicky," she reiterated, a little impatiently creeping into her voice, I concluded that silence was my refusal, and cut rotations at top speed.

"Chicky," she demanded sternly, foresawing that she must establish her authority once and forever. "Chicky—

me!"

I do not know what possible connection made me remember my bread—but I had a mental vision of it swelling out over the sides of the dish and wasting itself upon the floor. So I tucked the knife into a safe place and ran, calling her to follow me. So I had no time to spare with her. I think

I put that bread into the pans in record time, considering the wastefulness of the changing of aprons—but the few minutes were quite long enough for Babe. She found a box, climbed up on it, and drew the wheat bag in her direction, so that it hung over the shelf, dribbling a fine stream of wheat for me.

PLES

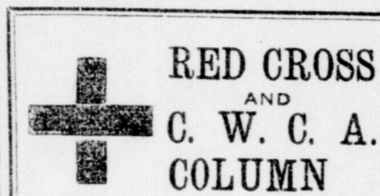

Are you a sufferer? Know that terrible aching, dragging-down pain, that robs you of pleasure, even of rest, and makes life miserable? Don't you believe in the law of average? If a remedy has cured hundreds of people, don't you think it likely it might at least cure you?

Just give Zam-Buk a fair trial! Mr. J. McEwen, of Dundas, suffered from piles for fifteen years. He says: "I tried pretty nearly everything, but got no permanent relief until I tried Zam-Buk. This balm relieved the pain, continued use completely and permanently cured me."

The rich herbal essences of which Zam-Buk is composed, quickly remove congestion, relieve the dull, gnawing, burning pain, and cure. All druggists and stores, or post-paid from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 50c. box, 3 boxes $1.25.

twenty-one enthusiastic chickens. They are the greediest creatures alive, and I know I have had twenty-one and ones in a very short time if they gored themselves according to their intention. I straighten the legs of the hen and shoveled up the chicks with my hands and put them into a box, while I threw an old horse blanket over the wheat, for I really could not spare time to clean it up.

In the first year of the war one rarely saw a woman in public without her knitting—at concert or lecture or business meeting, on the train or street car, there she was with her needles clicking energetically, saying spare moment must be used for her country. There was a story current in England at the time about the knitting woman.

A house was on fire, and the firemen were attempting to extinguish an old lady from an upstairs window. She stood there waiting anxiously, a fireman called and asked her to get out in a minute.

"Well, hand me up my knitting," she returned, "I think I could turn the heel while I am waiting."

Whether one may find the details of the story there can be no doubt that the spirit of it is quite right. And we women all need just a little more of it. We need more urgent anxiety over our war work, more carefulness in our domestic duties, more country needs so much. And we need to become more attached to our knitting-bags, just now, and the sock that is hanging on the arm when the spare moment arrives. Every woman who is in a knitting circle, equally one ought to see their socks being knit, everywhere and at all times of the working days of the week.

A letter from a Red Cross secretary the other day told of a little man of mine who had learned to knit and couldn't go to the trenches," he said, "I can make socks for the soldiers. The true Canadian soldier burns unquenchably these days, whether at home or abroad. Canada's 'Friend' may be assured that her kind message was much appreciated."

When boys of 9 are knitting, and little public school girls give up their precious recess to knit for the men at the front, surely we can say that we are going to win the war.

All the way from Charlotte, Mich., there came a letter the other day to Hyman Hall with gift of a girl, but the writer stated that she was a Canadian, and that explains her generosity. The true Canadian soldier burns unquenchably these days, whether at home or abroad. Canada's 'Friend' may be assured that her kind message was much appreciated."

Sal, a returned soldier the other day to a friend who was asking for news of the doings at the front: "I might as well give you some idea of conditions in the trenches, under fire, or I might be able to describe in some way the work I am in. It is an attack, but there is one thing that is indescribable and that is the devotion of the men. I don't know what words can commence to do them justice."

These women have set us a high example to which we must reach out. If we are even to approach them there are days of long endeavor before us all. But London district has been doing noble things, and it is going to continue.

NO WINE RECIPES.

One or two requests for recipes for such beverages as champagne and dandelion wines, etc., have reached the editor of this column. In accordance with a rule made last spring, however, Miss Grey prefers not to publish formulas for these homemade beverages.

Those who make them may be surprised to learn that after a certain stage of fermentation, wines of this sort contain a large per cent of alcohol.

Will Do Her Best.

Dear Miss Grey—I noticed where "Topsy" has a soldier's name. I would be very pleased to receive this name and will do my best to send him lots of cheer. If I am favored with the name or if I am too late I would be pleased to receive a name whenever you have one. Thanking you, I am,

Ans.—You have the very first claim on "Topsy's" soldier boy, and the name has been sent you with pleasure.

From Ura Kidd.

"Ura Kidd"—Have gladly addressed and forwarded the letter as requested.

Her Opinion, Too.

Dear Miss Grey—I read in the paper about "Sweetheart Girl" and her dad, and have been reading all the answers, so thought I would give my opinion. Well, "Sweetheart Girl," I don't think $50 enough to buy your wedding clothes. Do you, Miss Grey? And on this great day we should have nice clothes, and at the way things are selling just now, you have to pay a big price for everything, or if you don't, they aren't very good. But I think, "Sweetheart Girl," if you take dad along with you he will buy you everything you want willingly. I don't you, Miss Grey? For, by the way, his letter reads, he thinks a lot of her. I hope she will let him know how she gets along. I wish her every success in her new home.

Well, Miss Grey, as there is peace and quietness in the page just now, I will try not to disturb it. But I think it is right that the women have a vote, don't you?

SUFFERED FROM SEVERE HEADACHES FOR TWO YEARS

Headaches are many and varying; but when the head starts to ache you may be sure there is some chief cause. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but the presence of the headache clearly shows that unless the cause is removed some other baneful disease is liable to assert itself.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for the past forty years, been curing all kinds of headaches and has proved itself to be a remedy that cures where others fail.

Mr. L. N. Petersen, Dnipere, Man., writes: "I am only too glad to be able to state that I derived wonderful benefit from Burdock Blood Bitters. I suffered from severe headaches for two years. I was treated by several doctors, but received no benefit until by chance I heard of B. B. B. and I at once procured two bottles and in a short time I was completely cured. I am, and always will be, grateful for what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I am glad to recommend it to all who suffer from headaches."

B. B. B. is the oldest and best known blood medicine on the market today, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Company, Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Veteran Singles, Driving in a Run, But Is Out Trying to Stretch It Into Double.

PITTSBURGH, June 7.—Hans Wagner made his first appearance of the season with Pittsburgh today, playing first base, but poor pitching by Mamaux caused the home team to lose 5 to 3, to Brooklyn. The veteran shortstop in four times up was thrown out three times by the second baseman, but singled the fourth time, driving in a run, and was out at second trying to stretch his hit into a double.

HURT SLIDING INTO FIRST

CINCINNATI, June 7.—Regan was ineffective and New York won the third game of the series here today, 10 to 1, piling up fifteen hits, most of which came in the pinches. Saltsie also was hit rather hard, but he kept the safeties widely scattered. Catcher McCarty slid back into first in the third inning. It is believed he suffered a fracture of the right leg, and probably will be out of the game the remainder of the season.

ALEXANDER NOT TO TRY FOR SHUTOUTS

[Baseball Magazine.]
Grover Alexander, who holds the record for the greatest number of shutouts ever won in a season, says he will never pitch another shut-out game. At least he makes that statement in an article in the June Baseball Magazine, of course, with a few reservations. Among other things, Alex, who is the highest salaried man in the National League, puts over the following fast balls and in-shoots.

A pitcher is strong for a shut-out. I won't deny that I rather like to put over a scoreless game on the enemy. There is a certain satisfaction in getting the third strike on a dangerous batter. There is still more satisfaction in retiring the side when three men are on the bases. But the thing a pitcher likes more than anything else next to a no-hit game, is a shut-out. Last year I was pretty fortunate in my shut-out record. I pitched three shut-outs in the season. I was too liberal with the whitewash. At least, I managed to get some signs on the opposition score board. That looks like a good many at this distance. I am not sure I will ever do it again. I would say it was quite an undertaking, standing as I do at the beginning of a season and looking ahead. There are too many slingers in this league, too many strong teams to make that stunt any sort of a feat. And yet I would have looked to do it last year if I had not been so busy in my daydreams, and considered the chances of scoring sixteen shut-outs.

Luck Counts.
Baseball, of course, is a game of skill. But there is a lot of luck in it to use all guesses. No, I hadn't banked on anything wonderful last year. I felt all right about the chances of doing it. I had no pipe dream about any little thing like a broken record when I entered the grand old game last April. Perhaps that explains my good luck. I had tried to do my best, but I couldn't do anything of the ordinary. I wouldn't have done so well. In fact, I learned from my experience in the grand old game. The fellow who does the thing unusual. He is merely determined to do it. He is not a gambler. If he tries to let out a few reefs he will get nervous and fall all over himself. Keep your head, use your head.

HANS GETS OVATION

Pittsburgh, June 7.—John H. Wagner was given a fine ovation by the fans when he appeared on first base for the Pirates in the game with Brooklyn this afternoon. The veteran may be switched to third base later, it was announced.

Wagner's comeback has been joyfully received in baseball circles and the famous ball player was the recipient of scores of messages of congratulations. Hans said today that he felt confident that he would be able to pitch regularly. He experienced some soreness after his few work-outs with the Pirates during the last week, but this was due to his long idleness and he believes the effects will wear off speedily, and that he will be able to stay in the game from day to day.

BRITISH GOLF COURSES
NOT BEING PLOWED

No Spuds to Flourish There, Says Henry Leach.

DEMAND FOR GOLF BALLS

Mashie Strokes Are Practiced Under Shell Fire—Also in Berlin Internment Camp.

DETROIT, May 13.—In his last letter sent from England Henry Leach sets several things right so far as the golf situation on the other side is concerned. It is learned that golf courses are not being plowed up for vegetable and grain crops; that golf balls are not being turned out at home in large enough numbers to supply the demand of Great Britain, and that there is much more golf being played in Great Britain now than there was during 1915.

As a matter of fact, Leach says that no golf course has been turned over with a plow, and states that the links have been constructed at too great an expense for destruction. He also states that he has information that no such agricultural exploit is going to be pulled.

Of course there are vast areas being cultivated that never felt the impress of the plow and the harrow before, but there are many such areas possible for such development without even encroachment on the links of the British Isles.

Supply and Demand.
"These stories of golf links under the plow are merely stupid and sensational reports," says Leach. "And they are just a sort of quill war." There is a demand for many more golf balls than it is possible to make. This arises from the fact that the Government now controls certain of the golf ball manufacturing plants, where there are being turned out things that fly further and faster and do much more damage than a golf ball. In the case of the old ball manufacturers, which were left to continue their work labor is very scarce. Hence the shortage.

"On the other hand, there is much more play on the courses at the present time than there was during 1915, when everybody swore off everything, regardless of health and all other considerations. One of the most distinguished generals of the British army was home recently and visited his favorite links on the outskirts of London. While there he expressed himself many times as pleased that golf was being so well maintained during the war, as he was satisfied that there was nothing so good as golf for the people who had to work so hard in these times and upon whom such a strain was laid."

Playing Behind the Lines.
Annapolis of golf in Great Britain not long since C. H. Perkins, formerly a caddy, was given a commissioned rank in the army. By no means the least remarkable development of the war was the news that golf was being played in the internment camp at Berlin. The enforced presence of a number of professional and civilians even led to the holding of a tournament. Tom Fernie, the "Turnberry" professional, who was wounded, tells of how he had laid out a small temporary course behind the lines, and one also hears of mashie strokes being practiced under shell fire.

At home many of the links had been given over to training, and it was no infrequent experience for a player to find a small temporary course behind the lines, and one also hears of mashie strokes being practiced under shell fire.

THE MISSIONS DEFICIT

Item of $157,000 Cut Down to $30,000—Priest Congratulates Moderator.

MONTREAL, June 7.—By unanimous consent the Presbyterian General Assembly this afternoon fixed the minimum salaries of married ministers at $1,200 a year, with manse, and single ministers at $1,500 a year, to take effect January 1 next. The minimum for ordained missionaries is to be $1,000, married men; $950 for single men. This means an increase of the scale of salaries in the east, and brings them up level with the minimums formerly established in the west. The recommendation for increased minimums in salaries was moved by Rev. Dr. Alex. McGillivray of Toronto, who had moved for an increase ten years ago, when the General Assembly met in Montreal, and seconded by J. K. Macdonald of Toronto.

Mission Deficit Lowered.
The home mission report, presented by Rev. Dr. G. C. Pidgeon of Toronto, pointed out that the deficit of $157,000 with which the year was started had been reduced to $30,000.

Addresses on home missions were given tonight, when emphasis was placed on the great problem of wedding the different peoples in the Dominion into one nation.

"Our church is one of the great unifying forces in the land," said Rev. Dr. Pidgeon of Toronto, who was the chief speaker. "The Russians like to drink, to work hard, and to quarrel," said Rev. W. Willsinkie, a Lutheran minister from Vermilion, Alta.

Criticism Immigration.
Rev. J. S. Henderson, in telling of the fight in British Columbia to drive out vice, criticized the immigration policy of Canada because it stopped short when the immigrant landed.

Rev. Dr. Neil announced that one of the telegrams he had received congratulating him on his election as moderator was from a Roman Catholic priest, a personal friend of his.

FRANCE TO LOAN ALLIES

2,138,000,000 FRANCS

PARIS, June 7.—France has thus far advanced to her allies or friendly states 2,138,000,000 francs. A bill was introduced in the Chamber today by the minister of finance, with the approval of President Poincaré, asking for authority to loan to France's allies and friends additional sums amounting to 2,138,000,000 francs. This would bring the total advances by France up to more than 6,000,000,000 francs.

DAWN SCHOOLHOUSE STRUCK; SCHOLARS ESCAPE UNINJURED

Electrical Storm's Damage
Heavy Throughout District.

FLORENCE, June 7.—During the electrical storm of Wednesday afternoon, the union school between Dawn and Camden was struck by lightning and a barn was struck and fired, but the blaze was put out. Full reports of the fires from here have yet to come in. Many washouts of culverts and creek bridges have been reported, and roads are impassable as a result of their destruction.

The storm was the heaviest ever seen here. For an hour the streets were like a river. The flats and river bank are covered with water, and farmers will not be able to get on their land for days at least.

On the farm of Thomas Moorhouse, Shelburne, a barn was struck and fired, but the blaze was put out. Full reports of the fires from here have yet to come in. Many washouts of culverts and creek bridges have been reported, and roads are impassable as a result of their destruction.

Fields, gardens and cellars were flooded.

Well Up.

EDMONTON, June 7.—The Sifton Government was returned to power today by an ample majority, the figures tonight indicating that the Liberals will be within one or two of the last legislature, when the parties stood: Liberals 38, Conservatives 18. All the cabinet ministers have been re-elected with good majorities.

Up till midnight, out of the 43 seats where contests were held today the results were: Liberals 26, Conservatives 16, Independents 3, and doubtful 4. Of the doubtful the Liberals are leading in two ridings and the Conservatives in two. There are also eleven seats where soldier members were elected by acclamation by a special act of the legislature. Six of these members are Liberals and five Conservatives. There are, as well, two deferred elections, and two soldiers-at-large seats to be elected.

It will be a day or two before the final results are received in the doubtful ridings.

The following are the Liberal candidates whose elections have been conceded:

COALITION AS PROPOSED TO SECURE EXTENSION OF PARLIAMENT 5 YEARS

OTTAWA, June 7.—Liberal members are inclined today to approve Sir Wilfrid's stand in rejecting coalition. Some go so far as to dub the proposal a "fraud upon the public," because it involves an appeal to the people in which the machinery of both parties would be at the disposal of the pro-conscription coalition. One member declared that this would mean virtually no effective opposition for either Liberal or Conservative members, who backed up the coalition, and the election would therefore amount to an extension of term for the present Parliament for five years instead of one.

While Sir Wilfrid is supported to this extent, many members freely declare that if an election held they will pledge themselves to conscription within a reasonable time if a new Government fails to secure sufficient recruits by the voluntary system.

ANNUAL I.O.O.F. MEETING

District Brethren Elect in Clinton—Well-Known Citizen Dies Suddenly.

CLINTON, June 7.—The I. O. O. F. held its annual district meeting in Clinton yesterday afternoon, the following representatives being present: Goddard, Messrs. Wallace, Fenwick and Knox; Seaford, Messrs. Harburn and Thompson; Hensall, Mr. Stacey; Brucefield, Mr. Chapman; D. G. M. Scott of Seaford presided, and the usual routine business of the district was gone through. Wm. Douglas of Hensall was elected district deputy master for the ensuing year.

A sudden death occurred here this morning when Job Cooper, a resident of Clinton for more than forty years, passed away at his home on the Mainland terrace in his 65th year. The family grief is all the more intense from the fact that Mr. Cooper's wife died about two weeks ago, and up to a couple of days ago Mr. Cooper appeared to be enjoying good health, but took the death of his wife very hard.

NO GOVT. STATEMENT AS TO COALITION UNTIL NEXT MONDAY

Big Crowd Had Gathered To Hear Leader's Debate.

UNION GOVT. IS PLANNED

Rumor Says Four of Sir Wilfrid's Aides Will Be in Cabinet.

OTTAWA, June 7.—There is no announcement upon compulsory service nor the failure of coalition.

Statements of the two leaders set for today are deferred until Monday. A great crowd of people and Parliament itself had a disappointment this afternoon. Wednesday the prime minister stated that today he would have for Parliament explanations of the negotiations which he carried on for the past ten days with the Opposition leader, looking to the formation of a coalition government, with an enactment of compulsory service its chief business. In anticipation of this Sir Wilfrid and the two leaders were given to the press this morning. A caucus of Conservative members was held, but little was done, as a resolution carried that the "situation" should not be discussed.

Spectators in Throngs.

In the afternoon, when children and the Senate came to the Commons to learn from the leaders' lips their mutual activity for days past upon compulsory and coalition. There was a party from the Government House, under the escort of Col. Henderson, military secretary to the governor-general; there was a squad of returned veterans, most of them with canes, and both were given seats on the chamber floor. At the entrances of the spectators' gallery an unparalleled jam waited the end of prayers and the opening of the doors to the chamber.

What they saw first was Sir Robert Borden cross the floor, lean across Sir Wilfrid's desk and shake the Opposition leader, who nodded his head in acquiescence. There was the routine of bills and reports.

Galleries Disappointed.

Then the prime minister rose and the murmur of whispered talk hushed, while members and spectators leaned eagerly forward, only to receive a disappointment. Sir Robert said simply that he desired to read the bill that the military service bill would be introduced Monday.

Can the prime minister indicate when he anticipates to move for its second reading? asked Sir Wilfrid. It is on the second reading that the debate of a measure begins.

The prime minister answered that he would consult the Opposition leader's convenience upon this point, but he felt that it was desirable to proceed with the bill as soon as possible.

Sir Wilfrid bowed his acknowledgments and the show was over.

After this came a little talk by the finance minister on the family allowance bill and some legislation from the Hon. Mr. Hazen to promote the welfare of lobsters, salmon and other sea dwellers when they are put into cans.

Ministers, members and spectators swarmed from the chamber to the lobby for freedom to give audible expression to their curiosity as to why they had been soiled.

Planning Union Government.

The mystery began to clear some time later when the report gained currency that falling coalition the premier was promoting union government and that when the military service bill is brought down Monday there will be four or more of Sir Wilfrid's lieutenants in ministerial places and a host of portfolios in the Borden Government.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, former provincial secretary who had been shown to a place on the floor by Sir Robert Borden and Hon. Mr. Cochrane, is understood to have approached Chief Liberal Whip Pardee, who is a strong unionist, with an intimation that he would be given a portfolio in the reorganized Borden Government if he would accept it.

The reply was that while he was for the compulsory military measure he did not feel like crossing the floor. However, the leaders have not given up the hope of getting Mr. Pardee to join them.

Carvell is Mentioned.

A. K. McLean, representing Halifax while Premier Borden removes to an Ontario seat, is another proposal for cabinet promotion. F. B. Carvell of New Brunswick and Hon. George P.

BARBER CURED OF ECZEMA

Generously Tells Others How Cure Was Effected.

Toronto, Ont., April 26.—No one is better qualified to judge of treatment for skin troubles than the barber. He finds his customers bothered with barber's itch, pimples and eczema, and has his own difficulties in treating these conditions after shaving.

Mr. Lewis learned from a customer about Dr. Chase's Ointment, and when he contracted eczema, applied this treatment with most satisfactory results. He is naturally enthusiastic now in recommending this ointment to anyone suffering from similar skin troubles.

Mr. George Lewis, barber, 202½ Wellesley street, Toronto, writes: "I was for some time troubled with an eczema eruption on the scalp and obtained temporary relief by the use of a tonic. About six months later the doctor pronounced the trouble to be eczema. He is naturally enthusiastic now in recommending this ointment to anyone suffering from similar skin troubles."

HENSALL

HENSALL, June 7.—John Zueff of this village is becoming a large producer of gentian roots, which are so largely used for medicinal purposes. The death has occurred of Mary Ann McNure, widow of James Rea, who had been living for the few past years with her daughter, Mrs. John McD. Wilson, of this village, and lately of the township of Hay. She was in her 87th year and was most highly respected. The remains were taken by train on Thursday morning to St. Marys to be interred in the family plot there. Mrs. Rea was exceptionally bright and active for her age and recently attended church services in the Methodist Church, of which she had been a consistent member.

Quite a large number from Hensall and vicinity attended the funeral held in Chisholm on Tuesday evening last.

CAN MARK DRAIN NEEDS.

WINGHAM, June 7.—The wet weather here has been noted by the farmers, who are taking advantage of it to mark the needed locations for drains. The farmers report that the grasses and fall grains are picking up well, and all that is now needed is warm weather.

Are You an Asset to Canada—or are You a Liability?

ARE you helping to win the War? Or could Canada put up a better fight without you?

Are you working—saving—paying—to back up the men at the front? Or are you loafing—wasting—spending on selfish indulgences the money that should be loaned to the Nation?

Man-power is at a premium! The time and strength of every man in Canada should be devoted whole-heartedly to really useful work—work that will help, directly or indirectly, in the Struggle.

Food is short the world over! Every housewife in Canada should devote herself earnestly to the problem of conserving it—of feeding our people well, yet economically and without waste.

HOUSEKEEPING IS A BUSINESS.
ECONOMICAL COOKING IS A SCIENCE.

Our Consumers' League

BY ISOBEL C. ARMSTRONG.

War-time thrift and the world's food situation demand that every possible effort shall be made to conserve supplies in Canada. This means the fruit crop, just as truly as the wheat harvest. This means the berries, the currants, the cherries, plums, peaches and apples and peaches grown within the immediate vicinity of London. Fruit does not obligingly drop from the vines, the bushes and trees into boxes, crates, baskets or barrels, all ready for market. It must be carefully picked, in order that it may not be bruised or otherwise injured for keeping.

No such thing has yet been invented as fruit picking by wireless. The human medium is still required. In view of the enlistment of so many men for overseas service, and the opportunities afforded those who formerly made a specialty of fruit picking for making "big money" in factories, the call for service has gone out to the girls and women.

Notwithstanding all that has been written (right in this column, too), and preached on the subject of rendering patriotic service by fruit picking and other farm work, there is still a need of recruits to fill the ranks of the girls' units to save the fruit crop within a few miles of the city.

The period of the "big drive" will come between July 15th and August 15th, when a force of at least 70 will be needed to defeat the flying hours and rapidly operating armies of decay. The two weeks previous to that a national service army division of 15 can probably compass the work, while in September the forces in the orchards may be safely reduced to 20.

Capt. (Mrs.) Parsons, who has recently rendered effective service as a recruiting lecturer in No. 1 Military District, tells of the preparations which Germany made for a great war, at least 20 years prior to 1914. Each year the surplus fruit was preserved or, as it was termed there, "conserved" by the Government, and put into great storehouses. Each year the supplies in the storehouses were carefully examined, and those in danger of spoiling sold at auction, at a figure to just cover expenses, to the poor or to others of very moderate means wishing to avail themselves of the opportunity of thus obtaining fruit. The newly conserved fruit then replenished the store.

The gathering up of the fragments of fruit that none may be wasted is a phase of efficiency which is badly in need of adoption in the coming fruit harvest. The more fruit "conserved" the more there will be available to send to the men in the trenches and hospitals.

Miss Ethel McRobert, superintendent of the Women's Employment Department of the London branch of the Provincial Government Employment Bureau, has been delivering a number of recruiting addresses in the past week to classes and organizations of girls and women to bring to the attention of these the importance of rendering patriotic service through fruit picking, and possibly other forms of lighter farm work. One point emphasized by her, which is worthy of being passed along to a larger audience than she reaches, is the importance of exercising care in the picking of fruit to prevent injury through bruising, which lowers the value of the fruit for preserving, and reduces the chances of keeping it in good condition.

If fruit picking is worth doing at all it is worth doing to the best of ability, just like any other task in life. Moreover, the fact that it is being done this year for "King and Country," and as an effective means of holding a section of the support line at home, should halo the task with dignity and call forth the finest effort.

The Imperial Munitions Board recognizes the service of women engaged in munitions work by a badge after a certain period, to which bars are added from time to time. The Government Employment Bureau, a branch of the department of trade and commerce, is recognizing the value as patriotic service of fruit picking by issuing an armlet to be worn by the workers.

Is a part of the fruit crop in the immediate vicinity of London going to be allowed to go to waste for the need of 70 pickers between the middle of July and the middle of August? Surely the London girls and young women are going to measure up better than that.

THEY CANNED FRUIT WITHOUT SUGAR.

Last week in Our Consumers' League department a prominent London physician offered a number of reasons, scientific and economic, for canning fruit without sugar. Readers who had tried the experiment themselves were asked to tell of their own experience for the benefit of those to whom sugarcane preserving is a new idea or "just a fad."

Rosecoe A. Finn, district agricultural representative, is an advocate of canning fruit without sugar. Representing the department of agriculture, which issues bulletins on this subject, he felt called upon to preach the doctrine to others. But consistency demanded that he should practice what he preached. Last fall the experiment was tried in his own home and with entire success. He says in regard to this: "Canning fruit without sugar has passed the experimental stage. In Europe it is largely done in this way and the sweetening added when it is to be used. Personally I prefer the fruit unsweetened. That is one reason I wanted to try canning it without sugar. Sugar injures the delicate flavor of fruit, and for my taste, at least, the majority of people use too much sugar in the use of sugar canning. All that is needed is complete sterilization of the fruit. For canning, we use a boiler with a false bottom. No expensive equipment is required. All that is needed is a boiler that will fit in the boiler easily and a couple of bricks to place it upon. Bore holes in the boiler for steam escapes, set in on top of the supports, then place the cans filled with fruit on the board.

We followed closely the directions given by the department of agriculture, with the result that our efforts met with success."

HOW IT IS DONE.

The following directions for canning are given in Bulletin 184 (revised May, 1915) of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, and are taken from a paper presented by J. A. Morton before the Wingham Woman's Institute:

"All fruit and vegetables are put into clean jars and are not cooked; when sugar is to be added, it is in the form of syrup; the jars are nearly filled to the top, not too full, so that as the contents swell with the heat there is no danger of small portions of the canned goods getting between the cover and the rubber, thus preventing the jar from being fastened down air-tight. The jars must not be too empty, lest the oxygen in the air within the jar give any resting-spores, which may not have been killed by the heat, opportunity to germinate, and mold might then result. Sound, select rubbers are adjusted in their places, the tops put on, the covers fastened down, but not perfectly tight, to admit of the expansion of the contents of the jar. The filled jars are cooked in the wash-boiler, which ordinarily will hold 15 to 18-quart jars, or 15 to 18 5-gallon jars. We see a false bottom in the boiler made of wooden slats. The jars being put on the slats with the jars standing upright on the bottom, cold water is poured into it until two-thirds of the way up the jars, the cover is put on the boiler, and the water therein brought to the boiling point. How long it should be kept there depends on the kind of food being canned. Keep it boiling long enough so that when the jar is opened the food will be palatable without further cooking. Strawberries, raspberries, blackberries and huckleberries will do if removed when the boiling point is reached. Take the jars out of the boiler, fasten down the tops all tight. If, while cooling you find that the air is getting into the jar, it is caused by poor rubber or a defective top; remove it by a good one, of which you should have two or three ready to use, and put back the jar in the boiler for a few minutes longer."

JANE A CONVERT TO COLD STORAGE

Dear Miss Armstrong—I have been hoping that you would soon comply with my request, and give us your views on cold storage and its use—or abuse—in regard to the high cost of living. But so far you are discreetly silent. (I do not know who I should expect to spend your whole time answering my questions—but!) However, somebody else has been giving her views on the subject "in your valuable paper" and if the things that she says in regard to it are true, I, for one, have had my eyes opened on the subject. Cold storage, in fact, instead of being a monster is almost a miracle. As the lady says she can give "chapter and verse" for her statements, will you be so kind as to ask her to do so, for I am interested in the subject—as every true citizeness should be when it so closely concerns the welfare of ourselves and families.

Did you see that somebody has been advocating "one onionless day" per week? That must be a very strong-minded person who finds that necessary. I am glad that there is talk of giving up the meatless day in England, as they say it only causes everybody to lean heavily on breadstuffs—and nobody should do that; it makes said breadstuffs indigestible. Besides, if you notice the menus of the English hotels they have meat three times a day on the other days. What do you think of the voluntary abstinence idea? It would be very helpful to the tired housekeeper who wants to ask people to supper if she could pick out all those who have sworn only to swallow an ounce a day! "Moderation in all things, even in passings," the immortal "Somebody" remarked, is a delicious motto. Exercise, I must go on-junketing with the June bug. June bugs, you know, grow into white grubs and eat the garden shrubs, so one can kill them with a glad heart. I am so grateful, for I always hated them anyway. Yours for reduction (by any method even the drastic one of swishingly exercising) i. e. living entirely on turnips. JANE WIGGINS.

GIVES CHAPTER AND VERSE.

Mrs. Bowker, whose illuminating article on cold storage appeared in Saturday's edition of The Advertiser, has been good enough to give, as follows, her authorities, in response to the request of "Mrs. Jane Wiggins":

Cold storage act, 1907, amended 1909. Cold storage warehouse act, 1914; Bulletin No. 35, Small Cold Storages; 36, Cold Storage for Creameries; 42, Dairy Industry Act; 44, The Cold Storage of Food Products; 20, The Use of Ice On the Farm.

All these to be had free from the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, and Bulletin 207, "Ice Cold Storage on the Farm," free from the Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

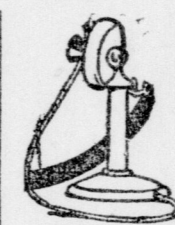

The acts may also be found in the public library here, as may the following books upon the subject: "Lower Living Cost in Cities" (King); "The Marketing of Farm Products" (Weld); "The Cost of Living," "Reducing the Cost of Food Distribution" (published by American Academy of Political and Social Science). Mrs. Bowker also says that very illuminating articles are now being published in "The Country Gentleman."

ASSETS

GIVE your son and daughter a lesson in thrift by opening for them a Savings Account in the Bank of Toronto. Help them add to it at regular intervals. The Thrift Habit acquired by the children will be worth more than the dollars it costs you.

Savings Accounts for small or large sums invited at all branches of this Bank.
