Liability to Repair Highway—Road-bed Washed Away by Natural Stream—Construction of New Roadbed — Diversion of Stream—Depreciation in Value of Property Abutting on Highway — Delay in Repairing Bridge.]—A swift natural stream ran through the defendants' town. The stream changed its course but owing to no fault of the defendants, and in so changing its course carried away a portion of the street on which the plaintiff had land situated:—Held, the nunicipality was not bound to replace the portion of the street so carried away under their statutory duty to repair highways. Nor could the plaintiff recover for damages to his property. Cummings v. Toven of Dundas, 6 O. W. R. 168, 10 O. R. R. 300.

Maintenance of Road—Mandamus.]—
When a municipal corporation has caused a road to be opened, it is obliged to keep it in repair, no matter of what importance the amount of taxes raised on the adjoining property may be; and this obligation may be enforced by means of a mandamus, Gouces-verbal in such a way as to subject the piaintiff or his lands to such charges unless in the first place public notice has been in the first place public notice has been

Non-repair—Penalty — Informer — Action — Afridavit.] — By virtue of art, 1046, C. M., any adult person may in his private name claim the penalty imposed by art, 793, C. M. 2. The affidavit required by art, 5716, R. S. Q., is not necessary in such a case. Tourigny v. Corporation of St. Paul de Chester, 5 Q. P. R. 199.

Opening Highway — Procès-verbal — Particulars of Route — Persons Affected — Right to Attack — Municipal Council—Homologation - Amendment-County or Local Road.]-A proces-verbal, which provides for the opening of a road, satisfies the law if it sets out where the road is to be opened and that it is to have ditches and trenches everywhere necessary, even if it does not indicate precisely the places where they are to be made nor their width and depth. 2. If the proces-verbal of a road states that it will pass through a place where a cheese factory stands, or any other place which it cannot pass through without the consent of the owner, or if it provides that fences shall be at the expense of persons who cannot be forced to make them, such owner or such person illegally charged with the fences, may attack the procès-verbal upon that ground. 3, In a procès-verbal numbers and dates may be indicated by figures. 4. A municipal council called together to adopt a proces-verbal may amend it by adding particulars, the absence of which would have made it void. A road which extends through more than one municipality, is not a county road; it is only a local road of each one of the municipalities in which a part of it is situated.

Opening Highway—Procès-verbal—Petition to Quash — Service — Time for Presentation.]—When a petition to quash a proces-verbal has been served within thirty days following its adoption, it need not necessarily be presented to the Court at the next term. St. Aubin v. Parish of St. Jerome, 5 Q. P. R. 317.

Opening Highway—Report of Superintendent — Notice — Parties Interested — Adoption by Council.]—The report of a special superintendent upon the opening of a road will not be set aside, in spite of the want of a new special notice of the day upon which he is to visit the locality in question, if the interested parties are present, and submit to him all their grounds for or against the report. 2. A procesverbal adopted by the council will not be set aside because it is adopted at a general sitting of the council and without notice that it was to come up, if all the parties interested were present and stated their grounds for and against. Paquet v. Township of Durham, Q. R. 22 S. C. 233, 5 Q. P. R. 22 S. C.

Opening Road — Procesverbal—By-law Amended to Charge Plaintiff's Lands—Notice—Sufficiency — Application to Quash.]
Neither the plaintiff nor his lands were charged in any way with the expense of opening and maintaining a road created by a confirmed procesverbal. The municipal in the first place public notice has been given stating clearly that by the proposed by-law the plaintiff or his lands might be rendered liable to contribute to such expense. A notice addressed "to whom it may con-cern," stating that the "municipal council of the parish of St. Alexandre, at a session which will be held Tuesday October 13th next, at 8 a.m., will consider a by-law to amend the proces-verbal of . . . with respect to arranging as to the cost of the roads authorized and the owners benefited." was held insufficient as regarded the plaintiff, who was not hitherto a party concerned in the proces-verbal nor interested in these roads nor benefited by them. As a result the plaintiff would be entitled, in an action in the Superior Court, to have this by-law declared void so far as he was concerned, in view of the fact that he had not had an opportunity of being heard before the council, and of shewing that he ought not to be subjected to these charges. Bouchard v. Corporation of the Parish of 8t. Alexandre, Q. R. 25 S. C. 415.

Petition for Opening of Road—Discretion of Township Council — Appeal to County Council—Special Meeting of Council—Notice — Resolution—Minutes.]—A township council has a discretionary power to grant or refuse a petition for the opening of a road, and however unjust its decision may appear, if the formulities required by law have been observed, the Superior Court will not Interfere to set aside the decision; the remedy being by appeal to the county council. 2. Notices of a special meeting of a municipal council orally given by the secretary-treasurer are sufficient. 3. Resolutions of municipal council orally given by the servetary-treasurer are sufficient. 3. Resolutions of municipal council nor in the processory of the meeting at which they were adopted. Martin v. Corporation of Windsor, Q. R. 24 S. C. 40.

Pissonault v. County of Laprairic, Q. R. 20 S. C. 525.

Road Work — Charge on Lands—Servitude—Interest—Decision of Council—Powers of Court.]—Municipal councils have no power to create servitudes on lands; they can only give effect to those already created by law. 2. Those lands can only be charged with servitude of road work which have an interest in such work. 3. The interest required by law is not the personal interest of the owner of the lands, but that arising from the situation of the lands. 4. Article 795. M. C., does not give to municipal councils the power arbitrarily to charge land with road work.

Road Work Done on Owner's Default not a Tax—When Collectible as Such—Sale for Taxes—Prescription.]—The cost of road work done at the expense of an owner in default under arts. 397 et seq., C. M., is assimilated to a tax and collectable as such only when it has been ascertained by a judgment rendered in a suit brought under these articles. The abstract furnished by the secretary-treasurer of a local municipality to the secretary-treasurer of the county, by virtue of art. 373, C. M., and the notice given and published by the secretary-treasurer of the county, by virtue of arts. 998 and 999, C. M., ought to contain, on pain of being void, the amounts of the taxes affecting the lands mentioned in it. A sale made under arts. 1900 and 1901, C. M., of land mentioned in such extract and notice, as for a sum exceeding that actually owing for taxes, is void. The prescription of two years provided for an article 1915, C. M., applies only to sales which are voidable, and not to those which are effected with absolute illegality. Dent v. Compt of Lochaber, Q. R. 27 S. C. 171.

The by-law provised for construction of sidewalks five feet wide, along certain streets and to raise money by may of debentures to pay for the same. The city engineer was placed in charge of matters of grade, etc. The work was to have been completed in 1904. In 1905, objection being raised as to the validity of the by-law the council passed two other by-laws which were not submitted to the people. They adopted the city engineer's plans and reduced the sidewalk to only four feet:—Held, these two by-laws were ultra vires as the council had not the power to extend the time allowed in the first by-law for the construction of the walks, nor to vary the width and purpose of them. Injunction granted to restrain the money being raised on debentures. Cleary v. Toten of Windsor, 6 O. W. R. 192, 10 O. L. R. 333.

Winter Road—Location of — Art. 849, C.M.]—In laying out winter roads at some distance from the summer roads, a municipality is only exercising the right conferred on it by art. 840, C. M., and, therefore, an owner of property abutting on a summer road cannot be heard to complain of the location chosen by the municipality for the winter road, Pesant v. Parish of St. Leonard de Port Maurice, 7 Q. P. R. 220.

Work - Initiative - Ratepayers - Petition-Board of Delegates-Summoning.] When it is a question of adopting a by-law, or causing work upon a road or bridge to be executed, conformably to the provisions of the statutes or proces-verbaux, municipal corporations may take the initiative in the measures necessary to obtain such a result, without waiting for the ratepayers to put them in a position to act. 2. But when it is a question of changing or modifying the obligations or charges which the statute or by-laws impose upon the ratepayers the corporations exercise judicial functions, and have not then the same initiative, and must wait until the ratepayers complain and establish their grievances; and if the latter do not succeed in their demand, the corporations may condemn them to pay the expenses which they have occasioned. 3. Even if the board of delegates has acted so illegally as to render its proceedings void, the county corporations which it represents are responsible for the consequences of its error and its illegality, and must be held responsible for expenses incurred by its secretary. 4. The board of delegates may be summoned in several ways, but not necessarily by writing. Lord v. County of Maskinonge, Q. R. 10 Q. B. 20.

XV. LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Apportionment of Cost — Railway Companies—Court of Revision — Appeal to County Court Judge by Municipality—Prohibition.] — By s. 41 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 226 and s. 75 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, an appeal lies to the County Court Judge not only from a decision of the Court Jungs not only from a decision of the Court of Revision, but also from the refusal to decide an appeal; and by s. 6 of 62 V. (2) c. 27, the appeal in such case may be at the instance of the municipal corporation or of the assessment commissioner or assistant assessment commissioner. After a petition had been presented to a city council for the construction, as a local improvement, of certain bridges over the tracks of certain rail-ways where they crossed one of the streets, and asking that a proportionate part of the cost should be imposed on the railways and on the city generally, and after lengthened procedure in which the validity of by-laws passed for the carrying out of the said work were questioned, a by-law was passed purporting to be made in pursuance of a petition of ratepayers under s, 664 of the Municipal Act, whereby the matter of the assess-ment for the cost of the said work was referred to the city engineer, under which the city engineer hande his report and a reference thereof was then made to the Court of Revision, whereupon that Court determined that such assessment was invalid and refused either to confirm it or to make any assessments under it: — Held, that the County Court Judge could properly entertain an appeal from the decision of the Court of Revision at the instance of the city and the assistant assessment commissioner; and an application for prohibition was therefore refused. Decision of Meredith, J., 3 O. W. R. 170, affirmed. In re Hunder and City of Toronto, In re Dundas Street Bridges, 24 Occ. N. 336. 8 O. L. R. 52, 3 O. W. R. 690.

Assessemnt of Property Owners — By-law—"Cost" of works — Price of lot acquired for prolongation of street—Interest —Commuted payment—Time for making — Tender after time expired—Extention—Resolutions of council. City of Victoria v. Meston (B. C.), 2 W. L. R. 384.

By-law — Personal Service of Notice — Waiver—Court of Revision.]—It is a fatal objection to the validity of a municipal by-law authorizing a work as a local improvement, that notice of the intention of the council to undertake the work was not given to the owners of the properties benefited thereby, by personal service, etc., as provided by s. 689 (Ia) of the Municipal Act, 1903. Semble, that an owner might waive such notice, but held, that in this case there was no conduct amounting to waiver. Semble, also, that while the direction of the statute (s. 64 of the Assessment Act, R. F. O. 1897 c. 224), that the members of the Court of Revision are to be sworn, should not be ignored, it does not follow that neglect or failure to take the oath renders their acts void. Order of Boyd, C., T. O. L. R. 146, 24 Occ. N. 129, 3 O, W. R. 233, seversed. In re McCrea and Village of Brussels, 24 Occ. N. 346, S. O. L. R. 156, 3 O. W. R. 888.

Expropriation — Assessment — Rating for Benefit—Trivial Objections.]—Where a statute for the widening of a street directs that part of the cost shall be paid by the owners of property bordering on the street, the apportionment of the tax should be made upon a consideration of the enhancement in value accruing to such properties respectively, and the rate levied in proportion to the special benefit each portion has derived from the local improvement. When an assessment roll covering over half a million dollars has been duly confirmed without objection on the part of a ratepayer that his property has been too highly assessed by a comparatively trival amount, he cannot be permitted afterwards to urge that objection before the Courts upon an application to have the assessment roll set aside. Expropriation for Widening Street -Action for Indemnity-Assessment of Damages—Evidence.]—Where the city of Mon-treal, under the provision of 52 V. c. 79, s. 213, took possession of land, for street widening, in October, 1895, under agreement with the owner, the fact that the price to be paid remained subject to being fixed by commissioners to be appointed under the statute was not inconsistent with the validity of the cession of the land so effected, and, notwithstanding the subsequent amendment of the statute in December of that year, by 50 V. c. 49, s. 17, the city were bound, within a reasonable time, to apply to the Court for the appointment of commissioners to fix the amount of the indemnity to be paid, and having failed to do so, the owner had a right of action to recover indemnity for his land so taken. Hogan v. City of Montreal, 31 S. C. R. 1, distinguished. The assessment of damages by taking the average of estimates of the witnesses examined is wrong in principle. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Coupal, 28 S. C. R. 531, followed. Fairman v. City of Montreal, 21 Occ. N. 330, 31 S. C. R. 220.

Payment out of General Funds-Ille-gality-Liability of Councillors-Trustees-Breach of Trust-Excuse - Relieving Statute.]—By a special Act of the legislature of Ontario incorporating a town it was provided that all expenditure in the municipality for improvements and services for which spe cial provisions were made in ss. 612 and 324 of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1883. should be by special assessment on the property benefited and not exempt by law from taxation; and the construction of sidewalks upon the local improvement plan was one of the matters provided for by s. 612. In an action by a ratepayer, on behalf of all rate-payers other than the defendants, against the members of the council who sanctioned the payment out of the general funds of the town for work done in reconstructing a sidewalk. and against the corporation of the town, the claim was that the individual defendants might be ordered to pay to the corporation the moneys expended in the construction of the sidewalk, and that the defendants might be enjoined from paying any further moneys in respect thereof:—Held, that the members of the council who were sued, having acted in good faith and under the bona fide belief that they were doing their duty as trustees for the body of ratepayers in paying out of the general funds of the municipality for what was practically a new sidewalk, even if they had misconstrued the meaning of the statutes, which was by no means clear, at all events acted honestly and reasonably and were entitled to be excused for the alleged breach of trust. Semble, that 62 V. (2) c. 15, s. 1, ap-plied to these defendants; but, if it did not, they should not be more hardly dealt with than ordinary trustees, and should be treated as within its equity. King v. Matthews, 23 Occ. N. 109, 5 O. L. R. 228, 2 O. W. R. 18.

XVI. MEETINGS OF COUNCIL.

Minutes—Signature of Presiding Officer.]
—One who presides at a meeting of a municipal council should, without delay, sign minutes which correctly record the proceedings, whether these proceedings be regular or not. Macdonald v. Cheevier, 7 Q. P. R. 160.

Notice — Time — Resolution — Statute — Finance Committee.]—A delay of at least 24 hours between the day on which the notice is given of the holding of a special session of the council of a town corporation, and that fixed for such session, is necessary, and all resolutions adopted, in the absence of one councillor, at a session irregularly called are void. 2. The statute governing the city of Sherbrooke, providing that all resolutions concerning expenditure beyond the amount of credits voted, must first be submitted to the finance committee, must be observed on penalty of nullity. Farneell v, City of Sherbrooke, R. 25 S. C. 203.

Procedure — Local Option By-law — Second Reading without Formal Motion — Approval by Vote of Ratepayers-Motion to Quash—Discretion—Delay.]—A local option by-law was introduced in a town council on the 5th October, 1903, and a motion that it be read a first time was carried, after discussion, on a division of eight to two. On the 17th November a motion that the second reading should be deferred till January was lost on a division of three to seven. The council then went into committee of the whole and reported the by-law, which was then "read and passed as having had its second reading," but without any motion that it be read a second time. The by-law was then submitted to the electors, as provided by the Liquor License Act and the Municipal Act, and was approved by a vote of 869 to 679. On the 11th January, 1904, the by-law was, on mo-tion, read a third time in the council, and, also on motion, adopted as final. On the 23rd April, 1904, a motion to quash the by-law, on the ground that there was no motion for a second reading, was launched. The procedure by-law of the council contained a provision that in proceedings of the council the law of parliament should be followed in cases not provided for. The procedure followed in this case was, however, the usual procedure of the council:—Held, that the matter was one of internal regulation, of which the mayor was the judge, subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the council; that, even if 'here was an irregularity, a by-law passed pursuant to a statute and adopted by vote of the people should not be quashed by reason thereof; and further, that as a matter of discretion, and in view of the delay in moving, the motion should be refused. In ref. Kelly and Town of Toronto Junction, 24 Occ. N. 352, 8 O. L. R. 162, 3 O. W. R. 765.

Procedure at — Passing By-law — Suspending Rule of Order—Notice.]—It is not necess ary that a thirty days' notice should be given to permit the council of the city of Montval to suspend the rule which forbids more than one reading of a by-law at the same sitting, such suspension, with the consent of three-fourths of the members of the council, being authorized by the orders and by-laws of the city. Societé des Ecoles Gratuites v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 19 S. C. 148.

XVII. NUISANCE.

Factories — By-law — Injunction — Penalty,] — A municipal corporation has a right to prevent factories or mechanisms moved by steam being erected within its limits, to pass by-laws to that effect, and to exercise, in order to have such by-laws observed, all the remedies known to the law, and particularly injunction. 2. A municipal corporation is no. bound to impose a penalty for contravention of such by-laws. Village of St. Agathe des Monts v. Reid, 6 Q. P. R. 3.

Street Nuisance—Neglect to Enforce By-lave—Injury ... Person—Liability—Non-feasance.]—The passing by a municipal corporation, under the powers conferred by the Municipal Act, of a by-law prohibiting the setting off of fire-works, fire-crackers, &c., on the public streets, does not cast any duty on the municipality to see to its enforcement. An action to recover damages from a corporation on account of injuries sustained by the plaintiff by reason of the setting off of fire-works, in alleged contravention of a by-law, will not lie. Brown v. City of Hamilton, 22 Occ. N. 3224, 4 O. L. R. 249.

XVIII. OFFICERS, SERVANTS, AND OTHERS— LIABILITY FOR ACTS OF.

Aldermen of City—Illegal Acts—Rate-payer—Right of Action—Damages—Notice of Action—Out Tam Action.]—Ratepayers and proprietors of the city of Hull are qualified to take action against any of the aldermen who by their votes have illegally spent the city's money, to force them personally to refund the same to the city. Aldermen of the city of Hull are persons fulfilling a public function or duty; the present action was an action in damages, and the defendants were entitled to one month's notice under art. 88, C. C. P. The present action was not a "qui tam or popular action." Trudel v. Thibault, Q. R. 28 S. C. 542.

Commissioner of City Court—Salary—Reduction—Connent—Public Policy,—An arrangement entered into by the plaintiff, the Commissioner of the City Court of Moncton, an officer appointed by the Lieuteant-Governor in council, with the city council of the city of Moncton, to accept a reduction of his salary, which arrangement had been assented to by both parties and acted upon for a period of five years, is binding and can not be repudiated on the ground that it is void as against public policy. Kay v. City of Moncton, 33 N. B. Reps. 377.

Commissioner of City Court—Salary—Statutory Liability—Pleading, 1—The declaration alleged that under 33. V. c. 60, a Court for the trial of civil causes was established in the city of M.: that a commissioner of the said Court was to be appointed by the Governor in council: that the salary of the said commissioner was to be fixed by the city of M. and paid out of their funds; that pursuant to the Act the plaintiff was appointed commissioner, and his salary was fixed by the city council at 8600 per annum; that he had performed the duties of the office and was entitled to be paid the salary, but the defendants had refused to pay:—Held, on demurrer, that the declaration was good, as it alleged a statutory liability to pay the plaintiff out of the city funds. Kay v. City of Moncton, 36 N. B. Reps. 202.

Inspector of Works—Authority of,]— A special inspector duly appointed to superintend the construction of a ditch or watercourse ordered by by-law of a municipality to be made of a specified depth and width and at a specified place, has full power to cause the work to be carried out, without a special authorization of the council. Liability for Acts of Treasurer-Power to pledge credit—Advertising tax sale. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Town of Toronto Junction, 1 O. W. R. 74, 3 O. L. R. 309.

Mayor—Disqualification of—Election of Illiterate Councillor as—Removal after 30 Days Allowed for Contesting—Quo Warranto,1—A municipal councillor who could neither read nor write was elected mayor. The 30 days within which to contest his election before the Circuit Court had expired, and it had not been contested. The mayor, although he could not read or write, took the outh of office, and, after the 30 days had expired, he acted and continued to act as mayor:—Held, that any person interested could, by the quo warranto proceedings provided in arts. 987 et seq., C. P. C., depose this councillor from the mayoralty and prevent his continuing to act as mayor. Bedard v. Venet, Q. R. 25 S. C. 537.

Mayor—Refusal to sign by-law and contract—Mandamus—Stay to enable ratepaver to bring action—Demand and refusal—Other remedy. Re Kennedy and Boles, 6 O. W. R. 836.

Park Commissioner —Action against— Parties — Attorney-General — Ratepayers.]——Ratepayers who are affected thereby only to the same extent as all other ratepayers in the city cannot bring an action against the park commissioners of the city to set aside resolutions as to the management of a city park; such an action must be brought by the Attorney-General. Hope v. Hamilton Park Comm'ssioners, 21 Occ. N. 230, 1 O. L. R. 477.

Secretary-Treasurer — Illeyal Assessment—Execution for — Imprisonment, —A municipal corporation is liable to respond in damages for the act of its secretary-treasurer in sending to a collecting justice, the name of the plaintiff as having made default in the payment of a rate, which had been illecally imposed upon him, at the same time instructing the justice to enforce payment of the same, which the justice did by issuing an execution against the plaintiff, under which, for want of goods and chattels whereon to levy, he was lodged in prison. Mcllon v. King's County, 35 N. B. Reps. 153.

Superintendent — Negligence—Personal Injuries—Drains and Sewers, I—The Act incorporating the town of St. Louis, Quebe, gives power to the council to regulate the connection of private drains with the severs, "owners or occupants being bound to make and establish connections at their own cost, under the superintendence of an officer appointed by the corporation:—Held, that the municipality cannot be made liable for damages caused through the acts of a person permitted by the council to make such connections, as he is neither an employee of the corporation nor under its control. Judement in Q. R. 11 K. B. 117 affirmed. Bulles v. Town of St. Louis, 22 Occ. N. 194, 32 S. C. R. 120.

Tax Collector—Tenure of Office—Remoral—Notice—Tex Sale—Commission—By-law.]—Under s. 45 of the Municial Clauses Act a municipal officer holds office "during the pleasure of the mayor or council," and so may be removed at any time without notice or cause shewn therefor. A tax sale by-law provided that the collector should be entitled to a commission on all arrears of taxes collected:—Held, that where hads were bid in by the municipality because the amount offered at the sale was less than the arrears of taxes and costs owing on the lands, the collector was not entitled to a commission on the price of lands so bid in. Municipality of North Vancouver v. Keene. 24 Occ. N. 197, 10 B. C. R. 276.

Treasurer—Tax Sale—Power of Treasurer to Pledge Credit of Corporation.]—A treasurer of a town has no authority to bind the municipal corporation by a contract to pay the cost of advertising his list of lands for sale for arrears of taxes. Under the Assessment Act. R. S. O. 1897 c. 224 s. 224 he is only persona designata to act on behalf of the municipality, and the municipality has no authority to interfere with him in thereformance of his defined duties. A creditor in respect to the publication of such advertisements must look to him personally. Warwick v. County of Simcoe, 36 C. L. J. 461, approved of and followed. Bank of Commerce v. Taxen of Toronto Junction, 22 Occ. N. 97, 3 O. L. R. 390, 10 N. R. 74.

of the he city scember of every year, 8 valuators, who remain in office until their successors are appointed. In this case the plaintiff, appointed valuator on the 7th January, 1901, received notice on the 27th February, 1902, that his services were no longer required:—Held, that, in the circumstances, he could not maintain that his services had been engaged for the year 1902, nor that there had been a tacit renewal of the engagement, Hamilton v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 24 S. C. 535.

XIX. POLICE OFFICERS.

Corruption - Inquiry - Jurisdiction to Corruption — Inquiry — Jurisdiction to Order—Quashing Resolutions—Ratepager— Promise of Immunity.]—The board of police commissioners of the city of M. resolved to call a special session of the board to inter-rogate under oath all the members of the police force annolated or promoted by the board as to the circumstances which had led to their appointment or promotion, in order to satisfy the public and to demonstrate the falsity of the allegations of newspapers which alleged that every appointment or promotion was due to the influence of money. The city council ratified this resolution of the board, and adopted a resolution instructing the board to give an assurance of full protection to the officers and constables who should be interrogated, so as to get at the whole truth: -Held, that, as no matter had been submitted to the council, nor any representations made to the council concerning matters within its jurisdiction, the board and the council had no power to order the inquiry. 2. That the resolution assuring immunity to those who should admit criminal acts done to secure their appointment or promotion was void 3. That the plaintiff, as a municipal elector and ratepayer, was entitled to have these resolutions quashed, and the defendants restrained from putting them into execution. Martin v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 18 S. C.

Liability for Acts of.]—A police officer is not the agent of a municipal corporation. 2. A municipal corporation is not responsible for the acts of its police officers, unless it has authorized or adopted such acts. Tremblay v. City of Quebec, Q. R. 23 S. C. 266.

Liability for False Arrest—Hours of Daty.)—The corporation of the city of Sherbrooke were held responsible for the damages caused by an arrest made without reasonable or probable cause by a policeman in the employ of and wearing the uniform provided by the city. The fact that, at the time the arrest was made, the policeman had been relieved and was off duty is no defence to the action. Rousseau v. Town of Levis, 14 Q. L. R. 376, and Corporation of Quebec v. Oliver, 15 Q. L. R. 319, distinguished. Bourget v. City of Sherbrooke, Q. R. 27 S. C, 78.

Liability for Unlawful Acts of—Ratification.]—The defendants, a city corporation, were held not liable for the act of a police officer who unlawfully broke and entered the premises of the plaintiff and carried away therefrom certain intoxicating liquors there kept for sale by the plaintiff contrary to the provisions of the Canada Temperance Act, although the officer had been specially appointed to see that the Act was enforced. When the servant of a municipal corporation does an act in which the corporation have no peculiar interest, and for which they derive no benefit in their corporate capacity, but which is done in pursuance of some statute for the community, the servant cannot be regarded as the agent of the corporation for whose wrongful acts they would be liable, and the doctrine of respondent superior does not apply. The defendants could not make themselves liable for the acts of the officer unless they ratified and adopted them with a full knowledge of their illegality, McCleave v. City of Moncton, 35 N. B. Reps. 296.

Negligence—Principal and Agent,]—A police officer is not the agent of the municipal corporation which appoints him to the position, and, if he is negligent in performing his duty as a guardian of the public peace, the corporation is not responsible. McCleave v. City of Moneton, 22 Occ. N. 109, 32 S. C. R. 109.

XX. PUBLIC HEALTH.

Exercise of Right—Quarantine of House—Damage to Ovener—Liability.]—The plaintiff had leased his house, situated in the city of Montreal, upon a lease to begin on the 1st May, 1901. In the month of April one of the persons who lived in the house contracted smallpox, and the municipal authorities, after removing him, put the house in quarantine, preventing all access to it, and kept it so until the 14th May. The plaintiff's tenant, therefore, was not able to take possession, and the plaintiff was obliged to cancel the lease. He now claimed damages from the city corporation for the loss of his rent:—Held, that, although the municipal authorities had acted in the exercise of a right and even of a duty, the corporation must pay the plaintiff for the injuries which he had suffered. Dalbec v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 22 S. C. 23.

Liability for Expenses Incurred by Local Board of Health. —A medical practitioner, employed by the local board of health of the city of Moncton to attend to cases of smallpox, cannot recover for his services in an action against the city. The Public Health Act, 1898, imposes upon the cities or municipalities wherein local boards of health are established, no liability, which can be enforced by action, for the expenses or contracts of such boards. Cruise v. City of Moncton, 35 N. B. Reps, 249.

Local Boards of Health—Action—Partics—Corporations.]—Local boards of health constituted under ss. 48 and 49 of the Public Health Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 248, are not corporations, and cannot be sued by any corporate name: Britton, J., dissenting. Sellars v. Village of Dutton, 24 Occ. N. 311, 7 O. L. R. 646, 3 O. W. R. 664.

Sanitary By-law — Conviction—Summons—Reference to Wrong Action of By-law.]—A city by-law making the owner of a house responsible for the unsanitary condition of a yard leased by him, is intra vires. 2. A conviction will not be quashed because the summons refers to a provision of a statute or by-law which is not the one applicable to the case. Beauchamp v. Weir, 7 Q. P. R. 174.

XXI. PUBLIC LIBRARIES.

Aid by Municipality—Grant for Site—Validity of By-lawe—Assent of Electors.]—
A mechanics' institute having been converted into a library, and a board of management organized under R. S. O. 1897 c. 232, part IL, a grant of a sum of money for the purchase of a site was made by by-law of the corporation of the town in which the library was situate, without the assent of the electors to either the appointment of the library board or the grant:—Held, that the power to grant aid to free libraries is absolutely in the hands of the local nunnicipality under the general provisions of the Municipal Act, and that the by-law was valid notwithstanding s. 18 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 232, which may have its full and legitimate scope by being applied to the raising of ways and means by means of the requisitionary powers intrusted to particular free library boards under ss. 14 and 17 of the Act. Hunt v. Tosen vt Palmerston, 23 Occ. N. 66, 5 O. L. R. 76. 1. O. W. R. 791.

Gift—Breach of Contract—Injunction—Ratepager—Attorney-General,—A. C. made an offer to the defendants that "if the city will piedge itself by resolution of council to support a free library... and provide a suitable site," he would furnish $75,000 to erect free library building. The defendants obtained legislation enabling them to give the guarantee, and afterwards the council passed a resolution accepting the offer and giving the guarantee, which resolution was communicated to A. E., and the receipt thereof acknowledged by him. At a later meeting of the city council a resolution was passed to rescind all previous resolutions in relation to the matter:—Held, that there was a binding contract between the defendants and A. C., and the Court would interfere by injunction, at the suit of the Attorney-General, upon the relation of a ratepayer, to restrain a breach of the contract. The passing of the statute gave a vested interest to every citizen. Attorney-General v. City of Halifax, 23 Occ. N. 24.

XXII. RESOLUTIONS.

Confirmation of Hotel License—Action to Quash Resolution—Collector of Recenue—Issue of License—Interest of Rate-payer—Irregularity.]—A municipal council, when it confirms a cert leate to obtain a hotel license, under art. Is of the License Act, does not represent the municipal corporation, but is a special authority created by that Act. 2. Such corporation cannot be sued in an action to quash the resolution confirming the certificate. 3. The collector of revenue is the sole judge of the legality of such resolution. 4. One who, by an action before the Superior Court, seeks the quashing of such resolution, and such interest no longer exists after the collector of revenue has, upon production of the confirmed certificate, issued a license in favour of the person named in the certificate. 5. A resolution of a municipal council should not be annulled no matter what irregularity it may be tainted with; it shou't be annulled only by reason of the absence of essential formalities; or for irregularities which are of such a nature as to cause prejudice. 6. The indication of its date upon a certificate for a hotel license, and the competence of the officer who takes the affidavit accompanying it, are not essential things, and any 6-fect in these regards does not constitute an irregularity which causes prejudice. Dukuing V. Parish of St. Francois du Lac, Q. R. 19 S. C. 162. S. C. 162.

Privilege to Private Person.] — A municipal council has no power to permit a private person to construct a reservoir in the ditch at the side of a public road, even if it causes no inconvenience; and a resolution authorizing such a thing will be declared illegal. Roy v. Corporation of St. Anselme, Q. R. 19. S. C. 119.

XXIII. SEWERS.

Communication of Disease—Evidence—Inference—Nonsuit.]—Although the defendants were guilty of a nuisance in conducing sewage and depositing it or allowing it to be deposited at the outlet of that sewer on the shore of the Toronto harbour, there was no evidence from which a jury might fairly and reasonably infer that the plaintiff's family, who lived in a house built upon cribs ear such outlet, were infected with the germs of diphtheria by reason of such sewage, and therefore the case should have been withdrawn from the jury. Connacher v. City of Toronto, 2.1 Occ. N. 172.

Discharge into Navigable Waters-Special Damage.]—The defendant's sewer emptied into navigable water, in which the plaintiff's vessel was lawfully moored for the winter. The defendants, although notified of similar previous occurrences, allowed a factory to send hot water down the sewer, which melted the ice on one side of the vessel, causing damage:—Held, that the defendants were liable, as the plaintiffs were lawfully using the waters, and the discharge of the hot water was a public nuisance which caused special damage to the plaintiff. Matheues v. City of Hamilton, 6 O. L. E. 182.

Extending into Adjoining Municipality—Injunction to Restrain. —A municipal corporation, unless specially authorized by statute, has no right to construct severs or other works across or under the public streets of another municipality, without having obtained the consent of such municipality, or a right of way; and may be restrained by injunction from proceeding with such works, where the same will cause great or irreparable damage to the other municipality. Visitage of Ahuntsic v. City of Montreal, Q. E. 26 S. C. 291.

Extending into Adjoining Municipality—Terms and Conditions—Award—Municipal Act.]—Arbitrators made an award, purporting to be under s. 555 of the Municipal Act. 3 Edw. VII. c. 19 (O.), permitting an extension of a sewer from one municipality into another, but no by-law had ever

N. 89, 7 O. L. R. 3 O. W. R. 145, that the award was bad and should be set aside; Moss, C.J.O., and Maclennan, J.A., dissenting. In re Town of Berlin and Township of Waterloo, 24 Occ. N. 323, 3 O. W. R. 903; S. C., sub nom. Township of Waterloo, 24 Occ. N. R. 335.

Negligence — Insufficiency — Damage Caused by Back Flow—Compulsory User of Sever—Statutory Authority.]—In 1884 the plaintiff but a house on R. street, in the city of M., and, pursuant to city by-law, connected the same with the sewer system provided by the city in the exercise of their statutory duties. Several times the tidewater backed up into the halistiffs and others. statutory duties. Several that the the value backed up into the plaintiff's and other cellars on the same street, and, in 1901, the corporation, with a view, if possible, of preventing damage in future by back flowage. continued the sewer on R. street southwardly to the P. river, the outlet being still below high water mark. The new sewer was constructed according to plans prepared by the city engineer and approved of by the city council, and with the same device at the outlet to prevent back flowage, as in other sewers in the city, and similar in principle and mode of operation to those used in other places where sewers discharge into tidal rivers. The new sewer did not prevent back flowage, and the action was brought for loss and damage occasioned thereby:—Held that the city, having the statutory authority to construct the sewer, and having built it after plans made by a competent engineer and adopted by the council, were not guilty of actionable negligence on account of the insufficiency of the sewer to answer its purpose, and a person thereby injured has no remedy by action at law; and it makes no difference in this particular whether the use of the sewer is voluntary or under compul-sion. Livette v. City of Moncton, 36 N. B. Reps. 475.

Permit to Enter-Frontage and Entry -Non-payment-Mandamus,]-The city of M, by their Act of incorporation were authorized to levy on the owners of lots frontage fees for sewers, and to collect them as ordinary city taxes; the Act also gave auth-ority to make by-laws to regulate the way and manner of entering the sewers, and to prevent the entry of any sewer, unless the entry and frontage fees were first paid. A by-law was made providing that no person should enter any public sewer until all entry and frontage fees were paid. E., the owner of a lot by purchase from the sheriff under an execution by the city of M. for general city taxes (not frontage fees), on which frontage fees had been rated against a former owner and not paid, applied for a mandamus to compel the city to grant him a permit to enter a sewer without payment of the frontage fees:—Held, refusing the manda-mus, that the city could not be compelled to issue the permit until the fees were paid. even though they had lost the right to enforce payment against the owner of the lot. Ex p. Edgett, 36 N. B. Reps. 224. D-36

Vancouver Incorporation Act—Entry on Land—Compensation—Condition Precedent.)—Before entering on land for the purpose of putting a sewer through it, the city of Vancouver must, under their Act of incorporation, compensate the owner of the land through which it is proposed to lay the sewer. Arnold v. City of Vancouver, 10 B. C. R. 188.

XXIV. TRANSIENT TRADERS.

By-law-Conviction-Negativing Excep-Evidence before Magistrate-Certiorari.]-Conviction of the defendant under a by-law of a town respecting transient traders. The by-law was in the terms of R. S. O. 224, s. 31. The defendant was convicted because he, not being entered on the assessment roll, offered goods for sale without havning paid a license fee:—Held, that the by-law in the terms of the section was intra-vires, and the use of the word "effect" in-stead of "affect" was immaterial; (2) that since 1 Edw. VII. c. 13, s. 1, it is not necessary to negative an exception; and Regina v. Smith, 31 O. R. 224, is no longer useful;
(3) that the objection that the evidence shewed that the defendant was managing the business of his wife, and was not a transient trader nor occupant of the premises, was not open upon certiorari. Rex v. Allan, 21 Occ. N. 585.

Conviction — Form—Costs — Imprisonment—Evidence. Rex v. Swanton, 2 O. W. R. 106.

Conviction—Hawking Goods—License—Traveller with Sample,]—One who travels about from house to house for the purpose of seiling sewing machines, carrying with him only one machine as a sample, his stock being stored in a shop rented for the purpose, cannot be convicted under 58 V. c. 39, s. 4 (N.B.), of hawking or peddling goods without license. Semble, that proof of a single act of sale of goods or merchandise against a man does not constitute him a hawker or peddler within the meaning of the above Act. Regina v. Phillips, 35 N. B. Reps, 333.

Conviction—Penalty — Costs — Distress—Imprisonment—Uncertainty as to Time and Place — Amendment — "Butcher"—By-law.)
—Upon motion to quash the conviction of the defendant, a transient trader, for offering meat for sale in quantities less than the quarter carcase, without hving paid a license fee, contrary to a by-law of a village:—Held, that it was not necessary that the by-law or conviction should contain the words "for temporary purposes" and "assessment roil for the then municipal year," as they relate to the regulation of transient traders under clause 30 of s. 583 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, which refers to the payment of a license fee before beginning operations; nor was it necessary to refer to or negative the provisions of 58 V. c. 42, 8. 22 (O.), making the term "transient trader" applicable to one who has resided less than three rounths in the municipality before beginning bu-sness, the evidence shewing brief visits periodically and regularly to sell meat for a given time at a particular place in the village. 2. The objection that the penalty of $1 was not apportioned under s, 708 failed, because the application was otherwise provided for by the by-law. 3. The objection that the conviction and by-law were in excess of the statute because power of distress was given for both penalty and costs, and because of the commitment, in default of payment, to the common gaol, was not well taken, having regard to the powers given by s. 702, s.-ss. 2 and 3. 4. The uncertainty of the offence in the conviction as to date, place, and meat sold, should be cured by amendment, upon the facts in evidence, under 2 Edw, VII. c. 12, s. 15 (O.). 5. Although ss. 580 and 581 deal specifically with the sale of meat, a transient trader, under s. 583, angist include a butcher or dealer in meat. Rex v. Myers, 23 Occ. N. 286, 6 O. L. R. 120, 2 O. W. R. 533.

Conviction—Proof of By-law—Offence— Certiorari—Costs.]—The Municipal Ordin-ance (R. O. 1888 c. 8, s. 68, s. s. 31) authorizes municipal councils to pass by-laws for "licensing, regulating, and governing transient traders and other persons who occupy premises in the municipality for temporary periods, and whose names have not been duly entered on the assessment roll in respect of income or personal property for the then current year, and for fixing the sum to be paid for a license for exercising any or all such callings within the municipality, and the time the license shall be in force."—The defendant was convicted "for that he, the said (defendant), whose name had not been entered on the last revised assessment roll of the municipality on, etc., within said municipality, was a sewing machine agent, carrying on his business occupation, and calling as such sewing machine agent without first having obtained a license so to do, con-trary to the provisions of by-law No. 25 of the said municipality." On an application for a writ of certiorari it appeared from affidavits filed that the original by-law was produced before the convicting justice, but that neither the original nor a copy put in as evidence, and it was sought to prove the by-law on this application by affidavit:—Held, that the by-law could not be proved by affidavit on the application for the writ of certiorari. 2. That therefore the only means available of ascertaining the provisions of the by-law was by reference to the informa-tion and conviction. 3. That the offence stated in the conviction was not one which could be created by a by-law passed under the above quoted clause of the Municipal Ordinance. inasmuch as it did not allege that the defendant was "a transient trader or other person occupying premises in the municipality for a temporary period." 4. That costs of quashing a conviction on certiorari will not be granted, unless there be misconduct on the part of the informant or of the justice. Regina v. Banks, 2 Terr. L. R. 81.

Ideense—Travelling Salesman of Trading Corporation.]—A person in the employ of a trading corporation (the latter having a place of business and paying the usual business and other taxes), who sells by wholesale to retail dealers and not to consumers, is not a peddler, and therefore is not obliged to take out a license or pay a special tax as such. Semble, that the calling of a peddler carries with it the idea of petty trade, or of sale by outery and tinerancy. City of Montreal v. Emond, Q. R. 23 S. C. 77.

Licensing Powers—Hawkers—License Fee—Statutes—Effect on By-laws.]—The authority granted to the city of Montreal by 52 V. c. 79 (art. 140, s. 36), to empower any person to sell elsewhere provisions usually bought and sold on public markets, by granting him a license upon payment of such sum as shall be fixed by by-law, is equivalent to authority to levy a special tax, and justifies the exaction of a license fee or tax of $50 from such person. 2. By-laws of the city of Montreal validly passed in virtue of $50 from such person. 2. By-laws of the city of Montreal validly passed in virtue of $50 from such person. 2. By-laws so the city of Montreal validly passed in virtue of $50 from such person. 2. By-laws of the city of Montreal validly passed in virtue of $0.5 V. c. 79, remain in force until formally repealed, notwithstanding the passing of the new charter, 62 V. c. 38. City of Montreal V. Hatton, Q. R. 21 S. C. 68.

Taking Orders for Goods.]—There is no power to pass a by-line or to conjet under the transient traders' clauses of the Municipal Act in respect to a person living at an hotel and taking orders for clothing at an hotel and taking orders for clothing to be made in a place outside of the municipality, out of material corresponding with samples exhibited. Res v. 8t. Pierre, 22 Occ. N. 233, 4 O. L. R. 76, 1 O. W. R. 335.

Tax on—Ultra Vires—License.]—A by-law imposing a tax of $50 on every peddler or seller of beer within 550 on every peddler or seller of beer within the municipally is ultra vires of a municipal corporation, unless the right is specially given by statute. 2. Arts. 582 and 582a, M. C., do not authorize a tax. but a license. Hamel v. Parish of St. Jean Deschaillons, Q. R. 20 S. C. 301.

XXV. WATERWORKS.

Board of Commissioners-Statutory Body—Powers—Contract—37 V. c. 79 (O.)
—Action—Parties.]—By 37 V. c. 79 (O.)
the waterworks system of Windsor is placed under the management of a board of commissioners, who are to collect the revenue, paying over to the city any surplus therefrom. and to initiate works for improving the system, the city supplying the funds to pay for the same. The total expenditure is not to the same. The total expenditure is not to exceed $300,000, and not more than $20,000 can be expended in any one year without a vote of the ratepayers:—Held, sfilming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 27 A. R. 566, 21 Occ. N. 14, that the board was merely the statistics examt of the cluster examt of the clusters. the statutory agent of the city in carrying out the purposes of the Act, and a contract for work to be performed in connection with the waterworks, and authorized by by-law of the council, and incurring an expenditure which would exceed the statutory limit, was not a binding contract:-Held, also, that, if an action could have been brought on such contract, the city corporation would have been a necessary party:—Quere, whether the city corporation would not have been the only party liable to be used. McDougall v. Windsor Water Commissioners, 21 Occ. N. 366, 31 S. C. R. 326.

Special Tax—Submission to Ratepayers—Debentures—Attacking By-law—Parties—Ratepayer—Corporation.1—A by-law of a municipal council for the purchase of an aqueduct and a system of sewers should contain a clause imposing a special tax and be submitted to the vote of the ratepayers. 2. Such a by-law containing only a clause for the issue of debantures, not providing for the imposition of a special tax, and not submitted to the tratepayers, is void. 3. The nullity of such a by-law extends not only to the part which provides for the issue of debentures, but also to the other parts which provides for the purchase of the aqueduct and the system of sewers: the by-law is, therefore, void in tello as well as the contract of purchase which it authorizes. 4. Such by-law may be attacked by any ratepayer of the manicipality. 5. Semble, that the corporation cannot itself take proceedings in its own name to have the nullity of the by-law declared. Gagnon v. XXVI. OTHER CASES.

Act of Incorporation-Repeal-General Act—Constitution of Corporation—Municipal Council.]—By an Act of the Legislature passed in the year 1875, c. 47, the "inhabi-tants of the town of T.," within the limits thereby defined, were constituted "a body corporate and politic by the name of the town of T." In the year 1888 a general Act was In the year 1888 a general Act was passed in relation to incorporated towns (c. passed in relation to incorporated towns (c. 1) whereby previous Acts of incorporation were repealed and the towns incorporated under such Acts, including the town of T., were made subject to the provisions of the Act of 1888:—Held, that, under a proper construction of the terms of the original charters and the general Act of 1888, the inhabitants of each of the incorporated towns, including those incorporated under the repealed Acts, as well as those subsequently incorporated under the Act of 1888, were created a body corporate under the name of the town within the limits of which they respectively resided. By s. 5 of the repealed Act in relation to the town of T., it was enacted that "the corporation shall consist of a mayor and six councillors," etc. :-Held. that, even if this section had not been repealed by the Act of 1888, it could not, in the face of s. I of the Act of 1875, incorporating "the inhabitants of the town," be held to mean that the corporation at large consisted merely of the mayor and the six councillors:—Held, that the inhabitants of T. constituted the corporation at large, and that the town council was only a portion of it. Regime ex rel. Laurence v. Patterson, 33 N. S. Reps. 425.

Action against Corporation — Corporate Name.]—A municipal corporation may be sued under the name which the statute establishing it gives it, even if that is not its corporate name. Milton v. Parish of Coté St. Paul. 6 Q. P. R. 446.

Action against Corporation — Deposit — Default—Leave to Make.]—A plaintiff who did not, at the time of the issue of a writ of summons, make the deposit required by art. 738, C. M., in an action against a municipal corporation, may obtain permission to make such deposit at a later stage. Prevost v. Village of Ahuntsic, 5 Q. P. R. 171.

Action against Corporation—Deposit —Condition Precedent—Husband and Wife
—Parties to Action — Injuries to Wife.]—
The deposit of $10 required from persons, not ratepayers, who sue a municipality for damages caused by the bad state of the pavements, is required only as security for costs; it is not a condition precedent to the right of action, and may be made in the course of the action. 2. There is nothing improper in a wife, common as to property, being joined as a party along with her husband claiming, is chief of the community, compensation from a municipality, one part of which is based upon personal injuries suffered by her, Precest v. Vilage of Ahuntsic, 6 Q. P. R. 17.

Annexation of Town and City—Petition for submission of by-law—Investigation as to number and qualification of petitioners—Delegation—Withdrawal of names—Addition of—Mandamus—Time — Statute—Directory or Imperative. Re McLeod and Town of East Toronto, 4 O. W. R. 26, 220.

Annexation of Village Lands to Township—County By-law—Detachment of Lands—Petition — Description—Schedules.]
—Under s. 18 of the Municipal Act. 1903, 3 Edw. VII. c. 19 (O.), which provides for the detachment of a special area in a village, and for its annexation to an adjoining township, it is not essential that the whole area sought to be detached should be set out in one petition, but there may be separate petitions setting out distinctive portions, nor is it essential that the area so detached, and the mates and bounds of the new limits, should be set out in the by-law, but they may be set out in schedules attached thereto, In re Village of Southampton and County of Bruce. 24 Occ. N. 353, 8 O. L. R. 106, 3 O. W. R. 729, 4 O. W. R. 341.

Audit of Accounts — Appointment of Auditor—Payment—Premature Action—Attorney-General — Tarif.] — A person appointed by the provincial auditor, pursuant to the provisions of the Act respecting the audit of municipal accounts, R. S. O. 1897, c. 228, to audit the accounts of a municipality, has no right of action against the municipality for his fees and expenses until three months after the a unit thereof has been specifically determined by the provincial auditor with the approval of the Attorney-General or other Minister, as required by s. 16 of the Act. The approval by the Attorney-General of a tariff according to which the fees and expenses are made up and allowed by the provincial auditor, is not sufficient. Judgment of Boyd, C. 2 O. W. R. 977, reversed, Williamson v. Township of Elizabethtoen, 24 Occ. N. 313, S O. L. R. 181, 3 O. W. R. 742.

Board of Delegates—Rights and Liabilities of—Entity—Action against.] — Although the board of delegates is created a responsible entity, and recognized by the law, it is not a body corporate and politic capable of suing and being sued, any more than is the council of a county or municipality; and the members of such a board form in reality a council created for two or more counties for the purposes specified by the law, and as such the delegates sitting for the counties which they represent cannot be sued in a court of justice. Parish of St. Stanislas de Kostka v. Burcau of Deputies of the Counties of Huntingdon and Beauharnois, 7 Q. P. R. 256.

Bonds - Liability of County for Parish Almshouss - Certificate of Indebtedness -Common Counts-Mandamus.]-By 41 V. 102 (N.B.), it was provided that the defendants should appoint commissioners to lease or purchase lands and erect thereon an almshouse for the parish of B, and to support and manage the same; that the cost was to be assessed by the county council on the parish; that the county council might cause bonds to be issued which should be wholly chargeable on the parish and be disposed of for the purposes of the Act; that the county council should levy upon the parish a sum sufficient to pay the principal and interest of the bonds; and that sums, when collected, should be held by the secretary-treasurer of the county for the purposes of the Act. Pursuant to this Act instruments were issued, signed by the secretary-treasurer and warden of the county, sealed with the county seal, certifying that the parish was indebted to the holder in the sum of, etc. One of these was purchased by the plaintiffs' intestate, who was named in it as the holder, and the plaintiffs sued the county corporation to recover the principal and interest thereof:—Held, that the defendants were not liable on a count framed on the instrument itself, por upon the common counts, nor under 62 V. c. 67; that by 41 V. c. 102 the defendants were not authorized to issue any instrument that would create an indebtedness between them and the person advancing money upon such instrument. Semble, that the plaintiffs' remedy was by motion for a mandamus to compel the defendants to assess the parish for the amount of the loan and interest. Grimmer v. County of Gloucester, 35 N. B. Reps, 255.

Bond—Form of—Statuve Authorizing — Parish Commissioners—Liebility,1—An Act of the New Brunswick Le, islature authorized the county council of Glou-ester county to appoint almshouse commissioners for the parish of Bathurst, in that county, who night build or rent premises for an almshouse and workhouse, the cost to be assessed on the parish. The municipality were empowered to issue bonds, to be wholly chargeable on the purish, under their corporate seal and signed by the warden and secretary-treasurer, the process to be used by the commissioners for the purposes of the Act. G. purchased from the secretary-treasurer of the county a bond so signed and sealed, and headed as follows: "Alms House Bond—Parish of Bathurst." It went on to state that "this certifies that the parish of Bathurst, in the county of Gloucester, Province of New Brunswick, is indebted to George S. Grimmer . . . pursuant to an Act of Assembly "(the abovementioned Act.) In an action by G. on the bond:—Held, reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, that, notwithstanding the above declaration that the parish was the debtor, the county corporation were liable to pay the amount due on the bond. Grimmer v. County of Gloucester, 22 Occ. N. 276, 32 S. C. R. 305.

City Charter - Transient Traders - License-" Assessed as a Resident"-Conviction.]-Case stated by a magistrate, after the conviction of the defendant, a non-resident of the province of Nova Scotia, for soliciting orders in Halifax for a Glasgow, N. S., firm of tailors. Chapter 57 of the Acts of 1899 enacts that "no person on his own account or as agent for any person, firm, or body corporate residing or doing business outside of the province of Nova Scotia, shall solicit orders or take measurements or make an agreement or agreements for the furnishing or supplying of clothes or other garments in the city of Halifax, unless he or it has been assessed as a resident of the said city," in the previous general assessment, without first taking out a license therefor from the said city. The defendant did not take out any license, but his principals purchased property in Halifax and were assessed therefor in the same manner as residents of the city. On behalf of the prosecution it was con-On benair of the prosecution it was cortended that the principals should be residents of the city:—Held, that the conviction must be quashed. The defendant's principals were assessed in the same manner as residents, and the statutory prohibition therefore did not apply to them. Rex v. Murray, 24 Oct. N. 183.

Control of Streets - Railway Crossing -Regulation Requiring Gates-Resolution of Council-Injunction - Attorney-General -Parties-Assent of Governor-in-Council.] -By the Act amending the Act of incorpora-tion of the defendant company, they were given the right to lay their tracks across the streets of the plaintiffs provided that before doing so the consent of the town council should have first been obtained. On application by defendants to the town council for permission to cross one of the streets of the town, a resolution was passed granting the application "subject to such regulations as the town council may, from time to time, make to secure the safety either of persons or property." Subsequently, the town council passed a resolution requiring the company to forthwith erect and maintain two gates, of the latest approved pattern of railway gates, on and across the street on either side of the track. The defendants failed to comply with the regulations so made, and this action was brought to restrain them from running trains across the street until they should comply with the regulation:—Held, that the regulation was one within the powers 1129

The town council having a special interest in the subject matter, the action could be brought in the name of the town, without joining the Attorney-General. The regulation in question, being made by virtue of a power given by a special Act, was not, in the abseace of express words to that effect, a by-law of the town which required the assent of the Governor-in-Council before going into operation. Such assent was required only in connection with the cases specially mentioned in the Act: Towns Incorporation Act, R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 71, ss. 203, 204. Town of Liverpool, de., R. W. Co., 35 N. S. Reps. 233.

Electrical Works — Statute authorizing—Imperative or permissive—Damage to lands by dam—Temporary structure—Independent contractor—Control by corporation. Clippham v. Town of Orillia, 4 O. W. R. 121.

Ferry — Powers of Municipelity—Appliances of Ferry—Sale — Duty to Purchaser—Liability.]—The authority conferred on a municipality to make by-laws for establishing, licensing, and regulating a ferry, authorizes it to provide a boat and other appliances for operating the same. And where a ferry so established, with the boat and appliances, is sold at public auction by the municipality, they are bound to put the vendee in possession, and are liable in an action of damages for failure to do so, and to an action to recover back the purchase money. Currey v. Municipality of Victoria, 35 N. B. Reps. 1995.

Fines — Conviction — Fine Payable to Officer.)—When it is provided by a statute that a fine shall belong to a municipal corporation, a conviction which condemns an offender to pay such a fine to an officer of the corporation, and not to the corporation itself, is void and will be quashed upon certiorari. Wilcox v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 23 S. C. 38.

Formation of Village Municipality—Petition for—Withdrawal of Signatures—Jariadiction.]—After two-thirds of the residents of a locality have signed a petition demanding the formation of their territory into a village municipality, the county council is sufficiently seised of such petition, and the fact that certain of the signers withdraw their signatures so that there no longer remain two-thirds of the residents upon the petition, does not take away the jurisdiction of the council; and the proceedings which it subsequently takes are not in excess of its jurisdiction. Judgment in Q. R. 20 S. C. 229, reversed. Martin v. County of Arthabaska, Q. R. 21 S. C. 119.

Inquiry into Municipal Election—Powers of council—"Good Government of the Municipality"—Ratepayer—Injunction—Conduct of Inquiry—Evidence—Witnesses—Ballot Papers.]—Held, that the council of a city had power under s. 324 (1) of the Municipal Act, 1903, to order an inquiry by a County Court Judge into an election for members of the council and board of education, at which it was alleged that corrupt practices had prevailed; the election being a "matter connected with the good government of the municipality," within the meaning of the enactment:—Held, also, that the High Court could not, in an action by a ratepayer for an injunction, interfere with the conduct of the inquiry by the Judge in regard to the admission or rejection of evidence, the examination of ballot papers, compelling witnesses to answer incriminating questions, etc. Lane v. City of Toronto, 24 Occ. N. 228, 7 O. L. R. 423, 3 O. W. R. 269.

Liability for Arrest—Warrant of Mayor—Execution by Special Constables.]—The execution of a warrant of arrest, signed by the mayor of a municipality, and intrusted to special constables of the municipality, does not make the municipal corporation responsible for the consequences of the arrest; the constables in making the arrest acting only in the execution of the functions for which they are employed. Milton v. Municipality of Coté St. Paul, Q. R. 24 S. C. 541.

Liability for Flooding of Lands — Culvert — Negligence — Owner — Evidence. Jephson v. City of Niagara Falls, 3 O. W. R. 938.

Toans—Appropriations—Sinking Fund
Madamus—Deposit—Interest — Action —
Status of Plaintiff.]—Mandamus lies to compel the corporation, but not the treasurer, a mere official acting under the orders of the council, to deposit in an incorporated bank, or the hands of the provincial treasurer, appropriations in hand, but not those of previous years diverted to other uses, to the credit of interest and sinking funds on loans made in virtue of by-laws, passed under the provisions of 56 V. c. 52, ss. 374, 375, 376, 380, and 412. 2. It is a duty imposed by law, and not discretionary with the council, to make such deposit, and once appropriations are made to pay interest and sinking funds, the council cannot afterwards change such appropriations, nor divert the funds. 3. After payment of nor divert the funds. 3. After payment of the absolutely necessary expenses of muni-cipal government, the balance of the revenue should be applied to payment of interest and sinking funds, and not to improvements, betterment of streets, etc., debts for which are not privileged and take no preference over sinking funds. 4. Where appropriations for payment of interest and sinking funds for -previous years, had been collected from the tax-payers and diverted, and no money retax-payers, and diverted, and no money remained in the treasury to pay except the cur-rent year's interest and sinking funds—as the city had exceeded the limit of its borrowing powers-to order the city to pay the previous years' interest and sinking funds so diverted, from the current year's appropriations, would be to suspend its function of municipal government; and the petitioners' demand was granted for the current year's appropriation only. 5. An occupant not an elector paying municipal taxes, is, with the electors, interest-ed in municipal administration, and has the right to compel the city to perform the duties imposed by law upon the corporation. Trudel v. City of Hull, Q. R. 24 S. C. 285.

Misnomer—Amendment—Penalty—Affidavit.]—Where a corporation whose true name was "La corporation de la pariosse de St. Columban de Sillery" commenced an action under the name of "La corporation de la nunicipalité de St. Columban de Sillery," its action was dismissed upon exception to the form, tho "the writ might have been amended had it, "dicitation been made for leave to do so. A municipal corporation which sues for a penalty incurred by the infraction of one of its by-laws, ought to furnish the affidavit required by art 5716 of the consolidated statutes of Quebec. Corporation de Sillery v. McCone, Q. R. 26 S. C. 464.

Notice—City Charter.]—The requirement of notice under s. 301 of the charter of the city of Montreal (62 V. c. 58) applies only to by-laws enacted under s. 12 of the charter. Wider v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 26 S. C. 504.

Operation of Railway—Use of Streets

— By-law or Resolution.] — By the Nova Scotia statue 63 V. c. 176, the appellant company were granted powers as to the use and crossing of certain streets in the town, subject to such regulations as the town council might from time to time see fit to make to secure the safety of persons and property:

— Held, that such regulations could only be made by by-law, and that the by-law making such regulations would be subject to the provisions of s. 264 of the Towns Incorporation Act, R. S. N. S. 1900, c. 71. Liverpool and Milton R. W. Co. v. Town of Liverpool, 23
Oce. N. 180, 33 S. C. R. 180.

Parks-Establishment of-By-law-Dedication of Land Held by Corporation in Fee-Subsequent Leases for Building Purposes— Injunction—Private Plaintiff—Interest.] — A by-law was passed by the defendant corporation in 1880 purporting to establish a park on the "Island," which was granted to the corporation by the Crown in fee in 1867, and certain lots were designated therein which, "with such other lands as may hereafter be obtained from lessees or otherwise," were to form a park. Other lands were in 1887 directed to be taken and expropriated in order to enlarge the "Island Park," but no general plan or scheme for park improvements was considered till 1901, when a special committee was appointed to elaborate a plan. The defendant corporation from 1880 till 1901 acted on the belief that there was power to deal with the land designated as park land, by leasing it, imposing and collecting rent and taxes, approving of the laying out of new streets on registered plans, and otherwise exercising the control of owners. The park scheme was not abandoned, but the details and the area were modified from time to time by successive councils:-Held, that the corporation had not exceeded their powers in so dealing with the land designated. The doctrine of irrevocable dedication is not applicable to the case of a park which is established by by-law out of land belonging to the corporation as owners in fee. The fact of corporate action being embodied in a bylaw implies its revocability :-Held, also, that S., who was joined as a plaintiff, claiming under a lease made prior to the park scheme, and renewed in 1895, after registration of plans mode in 1883 and 1890, which shewed that the corporation had sanctioned the subdivision of the lands in question into building lots, had not such an interest, by reason of a special grievance, as would entitle her to have the corporation restrained from granting to the defendant L. a building lease of part of the lands. Attorney-General v. Uity of Toronto, 23 Occ. N. 284, 6 O. L. R. 159, 2 O. Personal Injuries—Notice of Action— Pleading.)—In an action for the recovery of damages against the corporation of a town, the absence of previous notice, required by the charter of such corporation, must be specially pleaded. Sullivan v. Touch of Magog, Q. R. 18 S. C. 107.

Powers of Councils-Right to Censure Member-Municipal Code-Illegal Resolution —Damages.]—An appeal from a decision of the local council of the defendants having been taken to the county council, and no seesion to consider this appeal having been called by the mayor, secretary-treasurer, or councillors, and the appeal in question having been allowed by the county council when the mayor of the local council concerned was present. the local council at a subsequent meeting passed the following resolution: "That the mayor deserves the censure of the council for having neglected to call a meeting of council so that the council should have an opportunity to resist the appeal:" — Held reversing the judgment of the Superior Court, Q. R. 26 S. C. 447, that municipal councils have no rights or prerogatives other than those conferred on them by the Municipal Code; and, there being nothing in the said Code giving municipal councils the right to pass judgment on their members, they cannot arrogate to themselves the right to do so; and, in this case, a vote of censure of the mayor was, consequenti,, illegal, ought to be re-scinded, and for this purpose the judgment of the Court declaring the resolution illegal should be inserted in the minute books of the council in the margin where the said resolution appears. Furthermore the corporation are liable for the act of their council and may be adjudged to pay exemplary damages. Vallières v. Corporation of the Parish of 8t. Henri of Lauzon, Q. R. 14 K. B. 16.

Public Dock - Invitation to Use-Collapse.]—Under the authority conferred by s. 562 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. c. 223, the defendants, a municipal corporation, built a dock on the Detroit river, and passed a bylaw providing for the collection of wharfage fees from those using the dock, one item of the tariff of fees being ten cents per thousand for loading and unloading bricks; a period of forty-eight hours was allowed for removing freight placed on the dock, and fifty per cent. was to be added if that period was exceeded. The plaintiff unloaded 34,000 bricks from a vessel upon the dock, whereupon the dock, being by reason of some defect incapable of sustaining such a weight, collapsed. and the greater part of the brick were sunk and lost to the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendants, having placed the dock in such a position as invited any vessel owner desiring to unload a cargo to do so, if prepared to pay the dock charges which the statute gave the defendants authority to levy, and having passed a by-law establishing tolls for the use of it, thereby invited the public to make use of it for such purposes as public docks are ordinarily used for, and, if they wished to limit the use of it, they should have made that known in some public way; and, the evidence shewing that the mode adopted in this case of whooldy and viller the height way. case of unloading and piling the bricks was that usually adopted at public docks, the defendants were liable for the loss. Public Works—Proces-verbal—Ratepayer —Mandamus.]—A municipal corporation, in an action by a ratepayer regularly brought, will be ordered to construct works, fences, &c., prescribed by a proces-verbal, and such ratepayer is not obliged to proceed against each one of the owners or occupants of the lands liable for such works; but in default of the corporation performing such works within a certain time, the Court will authorize such ratepayer to do them or cause them to be done at the expense of the corporation. Rousseau
v. Corporation of Blandford, Q. R. 21 S. C.

Quashing Proceedings of — Powers of Superior Court — Petition of Ratepayers — Withdrawal of Signatures.] — The Superior Court may always quash the proceedings of a municipal body when they are unjust, arbitrary, or not in the public interest, nor in that of the taxpayers for whose benefit the proceedings are intended. Semble, that by virtue of art. 52, C. M., the county council must have before it, during the whole time that it is proceeding upon a petition, at least two-thirds of those interested, in order to have jurisdiction; the taxpayers who have signed such petition in error or under false representations have the right to withdraw their signatures from the said petition. Sidewalk—Accident — Relief Oper.] — The corporation of the city of Montreal, being sued for damages for injuries sudatined by reason of a fall upon one of its sidewalks, have the right to bring in en garantic the owner or occupant of the land in front of which the sidewalk is. City of Montreal v. Sisters of Congregation of Notre-Dame de Montred, 3 Q. P. R. 475.

Trespass—Taking Land for Sidewalk — Restoration — Amendment.] — Action to recover the value of a strip of land in front of which a municipal corporation had laid a sidewalk. The real matter in controversy was the extent of the plaintiff's land. The Courts below dismissed the action on the ground that the proper remedy was by action en bornage or an petitoire. In order to put an end to litization, the Supreme Court of Canada reversed the judgments below and directed that the record should be remitted to the trial Court to ascertain the property affected, all necessary amendments being made, and that plaintiff's property should be restored to him, defendants having offered this in their pleading, Burland v. City of Montreal, 33 S. C.

Trimming of Trees in Streets.]—Under s. 574, s.-s. 4, of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, municipal corporations have power to deal with the trimming of all trees the branches of which extend over the streets of the municipality, but that it is a matter which should be dealt with not by resolution, but by by-law, as indicated by s. 575 of the Municipal Act. In re Allen and Town of Naponee, 22 Occ. N. 412, 4 O. L. R. 582, 1 O. W. R. 634.

Work Done—Request of Land Owner — Assessment Roll—Particulars—Pleading.] — In an action for work done by a municipal corporation (the plaintiffs), for land owners in the municipality, the plaintiffs will be ordered to declare whether the order for the work was oral or written, and if written to produce the writing. 2. A municipal corporation suing a religious community for work done in pursuance of an assessment roll, may be ordered to file an extract from such roll, and the defendants may demand that they be not required to plead before such filing. Village of Lorimier v. Community of the Sacred Names of Jesus and Mary, 6 Q. P. Rt. 368.

application in the nature of a quo warranto to set aside a municipal election upon the ground of bribery or undue influence, as defined in
ss. 245 and 246 of the Municipal Act, R. S.
O. c. 223, all the evidence both pro and con, and not merely the evidence adduced by the relator in support of the charge, is to be taken viva voce; this is the true construction of s. 248, to ald which the heading "evidence as to corrupt practices to be taken viva voce," may be read into the section; and affidavits in answer to oral evidence cannot be received.

Conduct of Presiding Officer—Fraudulent Practices—Closing Poll.]—In a municipal election, the facts that the presiding officer has given to a supporter of the candidate elected, privately and in a low voice, advice as to the election law; that shortly before four o'clock on the first day of the voting certain supporters of the candidate elected, who have not voted, withdraw from the hall in which the voting is going on, in order that, by reason of their presence in the hall, the voting may not be adjourned to the next day, that the presiding officer said to an elector, who afterwards entered the hall, "if you do not wish to have the poll go on to-morrow, vote immediately or go out," after which the elector, who swore that he did not wish to vote, retired without having voted—did not constitute fraudulent practices justifying the setting aside of the election. Controverted Election — Petition—Affidates of Town—Incorporation of Code by Reference — Construction of Statute.] — The affidavit mentioned in Rule 47 of the Rules of Practice of the Superior Court, applies only to incidental motions or petitions in the course of a pending suit, and not to such as themselves form the commencement of suits. 2. The Act 61 V. c. 20, s. 3, having abolished the terms of the Circuit Court and the Superior Court, at Quebec, there are no longer, practically, terms or sessions of the Court at Quebec, or, to put it in another way, the whole year constitutes a single term, and, therefore, if notice of a petition in contestation of a municipal election is given within 15 days after such election, it may be presented to the Court at any time afterwards. 3. In this case the charter of the corporation of the town of Levis, referring, as regards contestations of elections, to arts. 348-358,, inclusive, of the Municipal Code, and declaring that they are to be regarded as forming part of it, these articles as they existed at the time the charter was passed by the Quebec Legislature, and not those which have since been substituted for them by the legislature, are to be considered as incorporated in the charter. Mercier v. Belleau, Q. B. 23 S. C. 136.

Controverted Election — Petition—Affidavit—Security for Costa—Terms of Circuit Court.]—It is not necessary that a petition in contestation of a municipal election should be accompanied by an affidavit. 2. The security for costs which the party contesting the election of a municipal councillor must give, in which the surery declares that he is the owner of an immovable of the value of $200 over and above all his debt, is sufficient. 3. Although it is declared in s. 2352, R. S. Q., that in the district of St. Francois all juridical days are term days, nevertheless, if the Bar of St. Francois has, by resolution, approved by all its members and accepted and followed for several years, fixed certain days as term days for the Circuit Court, that resolution has the force of law. Labbe v. Morin, Q. R. 23 S. C. 269.

Controverted Election — Petition — Pleading—Amendment.]—The insufficiency of a pleading in a contestation of a municipal election, governed by the provisions of the Municipal Code, is a cause of nullity. 2. After the expiration of the time for serving the contestation an amendment will not be allowed. Brisson v. Pelletier, 5 Q. P. R. 295.

Controverted Election—Quo Warranto—Contestation—Deposit.]—The right to a seat in the municipal council of the city of Quebec may be contested by quo warranto. 2. The remedy by quo warranto under the Code of Procedure is not affected by arts, 427 et esco., R. S. Q. 3. A petition invoking reasons against the validity of an alderman's claim to hold a seat in the city council of the city of Quebec, and asking that he be ousted and his seat given to the petitioner, and that the city clerk be ordered to proclaim him elected, is a contestation of the election, and therefore the deposit of $200 required by 58 V. c. 49 (Q.), as security for the costs of contestation, must be made. Roy v. Martineau, Q. R. 22 S. C. 1.

Corrupt Practices—Effect on Election— Votes of Unqualified Persons — Scrutinp,] — Promises, gifts, favours, or threats, which may induce an elector to vote for a candidate, are corrupt practices, the effect of which is to annul the election of the candidate for a municipal office, whatever be the number of voters whom he has thus corrupted. But illegal votes which are so because of want of qualification of the voter, do not invalidate the election, if, such votes being deducted, the candidate elected still has a majority of legal votes. Labbé v. Morin, Q. R. 23 S. C. 407.

Corrupt Practices by Candidate — Place of Committing.]—Corrupt practices by a candidate for the municipal council for the city of Montreal, in order to make void inselection and cause the loss of his right to vote and sit in the municipal council, must have been committed in his own ward and not in another. Tanguay v. Vallières, 6 Q. P. R. 228.

Corrupt Practices by Candidate— Particular Election.]—The corrupt practice referred to in s. 249 of the charter of the city of Montreal, 62 V. c. 58, is a corrupt practice committed by the candidate in the election in which he is a candidate, and not in another election in which he is not a candidate. Tanguay v. Vallières, Q. R. 26 S. C. 122.

Councillor - Disqualification of - School Trustee-Term not Expired-Motion to Set Aside Election-Costs-Disclaimer.]-The respondent was elected school trustee in January, 1903, for two years, and took the oath of office on 21st January, 1903; (2) that on 26th December, 1904, he was nominated as councillor, and on the same day was nominated (with four others) as school trustee; but next day filed with the secretary of the school board a memorandum in these words: "I hereby tender my resignation as candidate for trustee for 1905;" (3) that the first meeting of the new school board was held on 18th January, 1905, when the same was organized; (4) and that Mr. Cook took the outh of qualification as councillor on 27th December, 1904, made his declaration of office as councillor on 97th January, 1905, and took his sent in the council. On 7th February the relator caused a letter to be written to the respondent pointing out that he was disqualified by reason of 3 Edw. VII. c. 19, s. 80, s.-s. 1, as having been a member of the school board at the time of his election, and inviting him to consult his solicitors as to the advisability of disclaiming so as to save costs of proceedings to have him unseated, O'Connor v. City of Hamilton, 8 O. L. R. on pp. 469 and 410, followed. Motion to set aside the election of the respondent as a town councillor granted, with costs, as the respondent did not avail himself of the notice to disclaim. Rex ex rel. Jamieson v. Cook, 5 O. W. Councillors—Voting for — Procedure.]—Where there are two councillors to elect and four candidates are proposed, the presiding officer ought to count the electors favourable to the four candidates and declare elected the two who have the greatest number of vores irrespective of the question whether the cândidates have been nominated in opposition to one another. Disqualification of County Councillor-Membership in School Board-Resignation-Relator's Claim to Seat - Notice to Electors.]-By 2 Edw. VII. c. 29, s. 5 (O. s. 80 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, is amended so as to provide that "no member of a school board for which rates are levied" shall be qualified to be a member of the council of any municipal corporation. The respondent was a member of a school board for a section which had no school or teacher of its own; but the board was organized, and paid over the rates levied on the section to the board of an adjoining section, which provided accommodation for the school children living within the first-named sec-tion:—Held, a school board for which rates are levied, within the meaning of the amendment:—Held, also, following Regina ex rel. Rollo v. Beard, 3 P. R. 357, and Regina ex rel. Adamson v. Boyd, 4 P. R. 204, that the respondent, being a member of a school board on the day of the nomination for the office of county councillor, was disqualified for the latter office, although he resigned his membership in the school board before the day of polling. No objection to the respondent's qualification was taken until the day of polling, on which day notices were posted up in five out of the twelve polling booths, warning the electors not to vote for the respondent :-Held, not sufficient to entitle the relator to Rex ex rel. Zimmerman v. Steele. 23 Occ. N. 196, 5 O. L. R. 565, 2 O. W. R.

Disqualification of County Councillor-Membership in School Board-Statutes —Saving Clause — Resignation — Relator Claiming Seat—Notice—Costs.] — In a quo warranto proceeding in which it was sought to unseat the respondent as a county councillor because he was a member of a school board for which rates were levied, and to seat the relator :- Held, that the relator was not entitled to the seat, as he had not objected to the disqualification of the respondent at the nomination or given any notice on the election day to the electors that they were throwing away their votes on account of the respondent's disqualification. 2. That s. 76 of the Municipal Act does not apply to county councillors. 3. That at the time of the respondent's election he was a member of a school board for which rates were levied. and if he were then disqualified, his resignation after his election and before taking his seat would not remove his disqualification. Regina ex rel, Rollo v. Beard, 3 P. R. 357, Regina ex rei, Rollo v. Beard, o F. A. Ser, followed. 4. That the words "for which rates are levied," used in 2 Edw. VII. c. 29, s. 5 (O.), disqualify any member of the council of any municipal corporation who was at the time of his election a member of a school board for which rates are levied, whether levied by the municipal corporation for which he was elected or by any other. 5. That the saving clause in s. 5 refers to the election of the member of the council of any municipal corporation, and not to the election of a school trustee. Rex ex rel Zimmerman v. Steele, 23 Occ. N. 196, 5 O. L. R. 565, fol-lowed. Therefore at the time of his election as county councillor the respondent was disqualified; and a new election was ordered. The relator was allowed the costs of proceedings so far as he had succeeded, and the respondent his costs of opposing the application to seat the relator; such costs to be set off pro tanto, Rex ex rel, O'Donnell v, Broomfield, 23 Occ. N. 202, 5 O. L. R. 596, 2 O. W. R. 295, Disqualification of Township Councillor-Membership in School Board-Resignation-Non-acceptance - Designation of Board—Relator's Claim to Seat—Notice to Electors—Costs—Status of Relator—Discretion.] - Held, that the respondent being a member of the school board for a union school section, a school board for which rates were levied, and his resignation as such not having been accepted by his co-trustees, was by 2 Edw. VII. c. 29, s. 5 (O.), disqualified for the office of township councillor; and it was not material whether the school corporation of which he was a member was called a "board of public school trustees of union section," etc., or a "public school board." The respondent's qualification not having been objected to at the nomination, so that the electors might have an opportunity of nominating another candidate, the defeated candidate was not entitled to the seat. Rex ex rel. Zimmerman v. Steele, 23 Occ. N. 196, 5 O. L. R. 565, followed. It appearing to be the fact, but there being no actual proof, that the relator was put forward by the clerk of the township, and the relator having put the respondent to expense by his unsuccessful claim to have the defeated candidate seated, while the election was set aside and a new election ordered, no costs were given to either party. Rex ex rel. Robinson v. McCarthy, 23 Occ. N. 203, 5 O. L. R. 638, 2 O. W. R. 298.

Illegal Voting - Electors Voting More than Once-Presumption-Affecting Result of Election-Corrupt Practices-Illegal Voting by Respondent and Relator.]-At a municipal election for reeve, at which upon a large vote the successful candidate obtained a majority of six, it was shewn that a widespread belief prevailed among the electors of the right to vote at each sub-division in which the name of the elector appeared; that four electors had in fact voted twice; and that several others had received ballot papers within a polling booth, after having already voted for reeve:-Held, that the statutory presumption arising under the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, s. 162, s.-s. 3, did not apply in proceedings to set aside an election, and that as, owing to the destruction by the clerk of the ballot papers pursuant to the provisions of the Act, it was impossible to tell whether more than four voters had voted twice, the election should not be set aside, the voting twice by four electors not having, in the opinion of the Court, affected the result :- Held, also, that if, as alleged, the respondent had himself voted twice, this was not a cause for setting aside the election; voting twice not being in itself a corrupt practice, and the commission of that offence not being, under the statute, a disqualification for office during the current year :- Held, also, that, there being strong reasons to believe that the relator had himself voted more than once, and there being undoubted evidence that he had advised other electors to vote more than once, he could not successfully urge this objection against the validity of the election. Rex ex rel, Tolmie v. Campbell, 22 Occ. N. 236, 4 O. L. R. 25, 1 O. W. R. 268.

Irregularity — Quo Warranto Application—Status of Relator—Voting for Respondent—Disclaimer.]—The relator attacked the election of the respondents as county counciliors for non-compliance with certain statutory formalities:—Held, that the relator, by voting for M., one of the respondents, who was in the same class with the others, acquiesced in and became a party to the irregularity, and could not be heard to complain. The fact that M., after service of the notice of motion, disclaimed office, was nihil ad rem. Rex ex rel. McLeod v. Bathurst, 23 Occ. N. 201, 5 O. L. R. 573, 2 O. W. R. 246.

Irregularity in Procedure — Circuit Court—Discretion.]—The Circuit Court has a discretion to exercise in the matter of the contestation of municipal elections, and will not annul an election, on the application of a defeated candidate, by reason of irregularities in form and in the procedure followed in the holding of the election, when such informalities have caused no prejudice to such candidate. Jones v. Gauthier, Q. R. 19 S. C. 100.

Lists of Municipal Electors—Quashing—Injunction — Other Remedy.] — Lists of municipal electors made under the provisions of art. 4515 et seq., R. S. Q., may be quashed on the ground of illegality, under the provisions of art. 4376, as provided by art. 4522. 2. A writ of injunction will not be granted when the law provides a special remedy for the grievances complained of, Wallace v. Languedoc. 4 Q. P. R. 361.

Mayor—Inability to Read or Write—Petition to Avoid—Objection to Juridiction—Time for—Declinatory Exception—Costs.]—The election by a rural numicipal council of a mayor who can neither read nor write can only be attacked in the munner provided in the Municipal Code, The question of absence of jurisdiction, ratione materiae, may be raised at any stage, but the party who has not raised it by a declinatory exception, if he succeeds, ought not to have the same costs as if he had so taken it, Marois v. Lafontaine, Q. R. 27 S. C. 174.

Nomination of Councillors—Time of Holdinj—Irregularity—Saving Clause,]—Notwithstanding the Municipal Amendment Act, 1898, the nomination of candidates for the office of councillor, in towns having a population of not more than 5,000 persons, and where the election is to be by general vote, may take place at the same time and place as the nomination for mayor, and therefore at ten o'clock in the forenon:—Semble, that an error in this respect as to the time and place of the nomination would come within the curative provisions of s, 204 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, and would not be a fatal objection to the validity of the subsequent election. Resc excl. Warr v. Walsh, 23 Occ, N. 94, 5 O. L. R. 208, 2 O. W. R. 108, 120.

Petition — Affidavit — Discretion—Service—Certificate of Bailiff,]—It is for the Judge to whom a petition contesting a municipal election under the charter of the city of Montreal has been presented, to judge of the sufficiency of the affidavit accompanying the petition; and the Court cannot afterwards, upon an exception to the form, interfere with the exercise of discretion by the Judge, 2. The service on the defendant is not void because the bailiff who effected it certifies that he has served on the defendant the writ and declaration thereto annexed—the word "declaration" evidently referring to the petition, Reneault v. Gagnon, Q. R. 17 S. C. 542.

Petition — Exception to Form—Status of Petitioner.]—In the case of a petition to set aside a municipal election the objection that the petitioner is not an elector is not an objection to the form but to the merits. Moreau, v. Lamarche, Q. R. 18 S. C. 34.

Petition-Exception to Form-Status -Justification-Particulars.]—If a petition contesting an election is served within 15 days from such election, and another service is ordered, the delay given for the presentation of the petition being insufficient, the petition shall not be dismissed on the ground that the second service of the petition was made more than 5 days after the election, Such petition need not be accompanied by affidavit. 3. The absence of justification shewing a surety to be qualified as required by law is not a ground of nullity of the bond justifying a demand for dismissal of a petition in contestation of election, but the respondent is entitled to have the said surety justify that he complied with the requirements of the law. 4. The fact that some allegations of the petition are not sufficiently detailed does not constitute ground for the rejection of the petition, Thérien v. Sénécal, 4 O. P. R. 66.

Petition — Service — Returnday, — The delay between the service of a petition in contestation of a municipal election, and the presentation thereof, is the ordinary delay for the return of a summens, and not merely one clear day. Trudel v. Guay, 3 Q. P. R. 481.

Petition to Avoid - Allegations-Particulars - Corruption - Treating-Committee Meetings-Undue Influence.]-In a contestation of a municipal election a general allegation of fraudulent acts and corrupt practices will be struck out as too vague. 2. Acts of corruption by a candidate and his agents, consisting in payment of treats, cannot be proved unless the name of the keeper of the hotel at which these treats were paid for is mentioned. 3. If refreshments were offered at a committee meeting in support of a candidate, this fact can only be proved in relation to the committee mentioned in the petition. 4. All the persons accused of har-ing unduly influenced the electors must be mentioned in the petition, 5. It is necessary to give the names of the electors having the right to vote who have been influenced. 6. Vague accusations, such as "a large number of persons" and "in a number of other restaurants" will be struck out on motion. Pepin v. Vallières, 6 Q. P. R. 364.

Petition to Avoid — Exception — Lit Pendens.]—An alderman whose election is contested cannot, by exception of his pendens, plead that an analogous action, brought by another elector, is actually pending. Tanguag v. Vallières, 6 Q. P. R. 269.

Petition to Avoid—Misnomer of Petitioner—Class of Action—Costs.]—A petition in contestation of a municipal election will not be dismissed, upon exception to the form because one of the petitioners is described sometimes by the Christian name of "Auguste," sometimes by that of "Augustine," Petition to Avoid—Qualification of Petitioner.)—Where a candidate at a municipal election is not duly qualified for the office which he seeks, he may nevertheless be the petitioner in a petition contesting the election of his opponent. Tetreau v. Beaudry, 6 Q. P. R. 1956.

Petition to Avoid — Quo Warranto—Superior Court — Territorial Jurisdiction—Special Town Charter—Discretion.]—A petition in the nature of a quo warranto, for the purpose of ousting a municipal councillor from his office, is a contestation of his election, and therefore, by art, 4276, R. S. Q., the jurisdiction of the Court is confined to the district where the election was held, 2. The charter of the town of Chicoutimi excludes the recourse by quo warranto to oust a municipal councillor from his office, 3. The granting of leave to file an information in the nature of a quo warranto is not a matter of strict right, but is subject to the exercise of a wise judicial discretion by the Court. Guay v. Fortin, Guay v. Lépine, Q. R. 24 S. C. 210.

Petition to Avoid—Security for Costs— Examination of Surety.]—Where the petitioner in a petition to set aside a municipal election gives notice that he will furnish two sureties at a certain hour, and does not come to the process office until a later hour, and then with only one of the sureties, after the solicitor for the respondent has departed, an order will be made for the appearance again of this surety to be interrogated by the respondent. Pepin v. Vallères, 6 Q. P. R. 280.

Petition to Avoid—Security for Cests—Single Surety, —A bond for security for costs of a petition to avoid a municipal election will not be set aside on the ground that it is furnished by a single surety only, if the solvency of such surety is not contested, and this although the notice of filing the security mentions the names of two sureties, Pepin v. Vallière, 6 Q. P. R. 345.

Petition to Avoid—Status of Petitioner—Allegation of—Amendment.]—Upon a petition to quash the decision of a municipal council in an election matter, the petitioner should allege his status as an elector, or make it appear in his petition. He will not be permitted to amend his petition in this regard after the time for commencing proceedings has expired. Brousseau v. Village of Ahuntsic, 7 Q. P. R. 33.

Petition to Set aside Election—Particulars of Corrupt Practices.]. — Upon motion of the defendant respondent, the petitioner in a petition to set aside a municipal action was ordered to declare: (a) At what date, at what places, and in what circumstances, by whom, and in what ways, certain funds, of which a named person was the depositary, had been employed for purposes of corruption. (b) Where, when, and how persons named had employed funds, of which they were the depositaries, for purposes of corruption. (c) What persons were intended to be designated under the names of "friends and agents of the defendant or duly authorized agents of the defendant, or his agents. (d) Where, when, and how drivers of conveyances, among whom were some electors, had been engaged and paid, and to distinguish the drivers to whom allusion was made. (e) Where, when, and how professional politicians had been engaged and paid to work on behalf of the defendant, which of such politicians were electors of the district in question, and which had voted for the de-fendant. (f) Who were the persons intended to be designated by the words "agents duly authorized of the defendant," and who were the persons to whom the defendant and his agents had paid out different sums of money. (g) At what dates, at what places, and in what circumstances, the defendant and his agents had induced divers persons to commit the offence known as "personation." That part of the motion seeking to obtain the names of the friends who had furnished money to the defendant, was not granted, because it was not important to know the names of such friends. Levy v. Lamarche, 5 Q. P. R. 16.

Petition to Set aside Election—Security.—By virtue of the Act respecting town corporations, applicable to the town of Maisonneuve, a petition to avoid a municipal election, filed by a single elector, and not preceded by security, is illegal and will be dismissed upon exception to the form. Dufreane v. Fortin, 5 Q. P. R. 57.

Petition to Set aside Election—Security — Particulars — Notice — Amendment
—Signature of Attorney.]—A security falled under art. 352 of the Municipal Code, in support of a petition against the election of a councillor, must set forth the name, Christian names, quality, occupation, and residence of the surety, and in default thereof the security is void. 2. The want of such particulars cannot be supplied by mentioning them in the notice in respect to which the security was given. 3. The security cannot, after the expiry of the time meutioned in art. 352 of the Municipal Code, we amended by adding the necessary particulars which are wanting.
Semble, that a petition in contestation of a municipal election can be signed only by the attorney himself, and that a signature by another person, with the authorization of such attorney, is void. Pariseau v. Thèmens,
Q. R. 21 S. C. 222.

Petition to Set aside Election—Trial
—Procedure—Absence of Rules of Court.]— A Judge has jurisdiction to fix a time and place for the trial of an election petition upder the Municipal Elections Act, notwithstanding no rules for regulating such a trial have ever been made as provided by s. 86 (d) of the Act. Remarks as to the procedure to be followed at such a trial. It is not necessary that Judges should exercise power to make rules regulating the trial of election petitions, if the ordinary machinery of the Court is sufficient for that purpose. In re Slocan
Municipal Election, 9 B. C. R. 113.

Qualification of Alderman — Bare Ownership of Property—Assessment Roll—Inconclusiveness.]— In an action to annul the election of an alderman of the city of Montreal, for want of the required real estate qualification, the fact that the defendant's name appears on the valuation and assessment roll as "proprietor" of the property on which he qualifies, is not conclusive, and does not preclude investigation of the nature of his title, notwithstanding the final clause of s. 29 of 62 V. c. 58 (Q.), which says that the qualification is to be established by the valuation and assessment roll in force at the date of nomination. 2. Where it appears that the defendant is the donee of the immovable property on which he qualifies, and that by the terms of the deed of donation he has the mere ownership (nue propriété), the usufruct for life being reserved by the donor, he is not "seised of" and does not "possess as proprietor," within the meaning of s. 29. Archambault v. Tanscy, Q. R. 23 S. C. 170.

Qualification of Candidate-Mortgaged Real Estate-Plea to the Merits-Powers of Returning Officer.]-Held, on a petition contesting a municipal election, in which the petitioner and respondent were nominated as candidates, and a poll was granted and held without protest or objection, and without nocification of any kind to the electors, or its being shewn that those who nominated or voted for the petitioner had knowledge of his lack of qualification, that averments by the respondent to the effect that the petitioner had not the necessary property qualification to be put in nomination, and that the re-spondent was, consequently, the only candi-date duly nominated, and was and should have been declared elected by acclamation, are matters of plea to the merits and not of exception to the form. 2. Where a candidate's real estate was hypothecated for payment of insurance premiums, as well as for the principal obligation, such accessory hypothec must be taken into account in ascertaining the net value of the real estate over the above hypothecary charges. 3. Notwithstanding the lack of property qualification on the part of one of the candidates, the returning officer, in the absence of any protest or objection, has no authority to reject his nomination paper, and consequently the other candidate is not entitled, ipso facto, to claim that his election was, and should be held, an election by acclamation. Martin v. Ricard, Q. R. 25 S. C. 461.

Qualification of Candidate—Payment of Taxes.]—In order to be elected a municipal councillor, a candidate must at the time of his election, whether there was polling or not, have paid all municipal and school taxes; arts. 283, 291, 309, C. M. Rockingham v. Leith, 6 Q. P. R. 77.

Qualification of Voter-Tenant-Cesser of Occupancy by-Corrupt Act.]-It is not the amount of rent paid, but the annual value of the premises occupied as appears in the assessment roll, which is the basis of qualification, as a voter, of a tenant. The position of the elector at the time of the election is what should be considered, and that which appears by the assessment roll, but if an elector, who takes the oath and votes as an occupant, has ceased for two months before the election to occupy the premises on which he qualifies, his vote ought to be rejected. In order that the payment of an elector's taxes or travelling expenses may be considered a corrupt act, either at common law or under the Municipal Code, it is necessary that it be made with corrupt intent, that is to say, for the purpose of influencing and inducing the voter to vote for a particular candidate; it is not sufficient that the payment is made for the purpose of enabling him to qualify only. To entitle an elector to vote it is only necessary that he pay the taxes for which he is rated on the collection roll, and it is not necessary that he should pay those owing on land which he has purchased from a third person some days before the election, nor is it necessary that he should have paid taxes levied for country purposes which have not been entered on the collector's roll of the local corporation and of which an estimate has not been sent to the latter. Proof of personal corruption by a candidate will only void an election when the result has been thereby affected. Laframboise v. Ledouccur. Q. R. 26 S. C. S.

Quo Warranto Proceeding—I fiderito—Cross-examination on — Discretion — Refusal.]—In a proceeding to set aside a municipal election it is in the discretion of the Judge or Master to allow or retuse to allow the parties to cross-examine deponents on their affidavits. Quo Warranto Proceeding-Tampering with Ballots-Delivery of Ballot Box to Clerk-Evidence - Affidavits-How Voters Voted-Cross-examination.]-Where in a quo warranto proceeding under the Municipal Act, R. S. c. 223, before a County Judge, to set aside the election of a town councillor, set aside the election of a town councilor, it was found by the Judge upon a scrutiny of the ballot papers, having regard to the character of the evidence, both viva voce and by affidavit, that such ballot papers had been tampered with, and that there was also a breach of the Act in the deputy returning officer taking the ballot box to his own house, instead of directly to the town clerk, and it was impossible to say that the result of the election was not affected thereby, an order of the Judge setting aside the election was affirmed. Affidavit evidence may be supported at the trial by viva voce evidence, although not mentioned in the notice of motion, Regina ex rel. Mangan v. Fleming, 14 P. R. 458, referred to. The provision of s. 200 of the Act that "no person who has voted at an election shall in any legal proceeding to question the election or return, be required to state for whom he voted," must be construed, in furtherance of the object of the Act, as absolutely excluding such testimony. After the trial of such proceeding has commenced, it is discretionary with the Judge to allow a person who has made an affidavit to be crossexamined, though before the commencement of the trial cross-examination may properly be had. Such interlocutory procedure is matter of discre-tion, and not subject to appeal. The provisions of s. 128 (1), that every nomination is to state the full name, etc., of the candidate, are directory, not imperative; and the presiding officer cannot, after the close of the meeting for nominations, reject those made on account of non-compliance with such requirements. Voters' Lists—Revision—Absence of Certificate—Injunction.]—Where it appears that the lists of municipal electors of a town corporation have not been certified and signed by the secretary-treasurer, as required by art. 4516, R. S. Q., and that the board of revisors is proceeding to the revision and amendment of the lists without the same being so certified, there is sufficient ground for granting an interlocutory injunction, on the petition of a municipal elector, to prohibit the board of revisors from revising or homologating the lists, until the final hearing upon the petition, or until the interlocutory order be further judicially dealt with. Wallace v. Languedoc, Q. R. 21 S. C. 115.

Voters' Lists—Revision—Injunction to Restrain—Remedy by Motion to Quash—Costs—Defendants Severing, I—There is no ground for an injunction when the law gives a special remedy for the grievances complained of, and, therefore, recourse cannot be had to an injunction to prevent the revisors of a town corporation from revising and homologating a list of municipal electors on the ground that such list has not been prepared according to law; arts. 4376 and 4522, R. S. Q., allowing such list to be quashed on the ground of illegality. 2. Each of the revisors defendants, having filed a separate defence invoking the same grounds, the costs should be taxed against the petitioner as if the revisors had filed only a single defence. Voters' List-Valuation Roll-Amendment by Council-Irregularity-Poll Book-Councillors — Voting for — Declaration of Poll.]—An amendment made by a municipal council in the month of January of a valuation roll by adding new names to it without notice or previous demand in writing, is void. 2. At the time of the election of a municipal councillor the fact that the names of the voters have been entered by the returning officer upon detached sheets, and not upon the pages duly numbered and ruled of the poll book, does not constitute a sufficient irregularity to annul the election if no fraud or prejudice is proved. 3. When more candidates than there are councillors to elect have been nominated and a poll is held, the electors vote for as many candidates as there are councillors to elect, and the returning officer must declare elected those who have obtained the largest number of votes, without regard to whether a certain candidate has been proposed in opposition to another candidate. Absence of Direct Proof-Leaving Unguarded Hole in Ice Formed upon Navigable Water—Evidence of Negligence—Death of Person Walking Over Ice — Contributory Negligence—Argumentative Finding of Jury -Interpretation of.]-Defendants were owners of a large dock at Midland, lying alongside of which in the winter was their tug, which accidentally filled with water and sank at the dock, breaking the ice and leaving open water above her deck. The sunken boat was not immediately raised, and ice formed above it. In a short time they cut the new ice recently formed, and proceeded with the work of raising the tug. Defendants did not place any brush or obstruction or sign near the open water or in any way or sign hear the open water or in any way mark the place of open water or give any warning of danger. While in this condition on the morning of 7th February, 1903, the body of plaintiff's deceased husband was found near this tug. He was lying upon his back, his feet and legs were upon solid ice, his head in open water. On the evening be-fore the morning when the body was found, the deceased had been drinking and there was no doubt that he was that evening in a state of intoxication. Certain questions were submitted to the jury, all of which were answered by the jury in favour of plaintiff except the 5th question, which was: "Could the deceased, by the exercise of ordinary and reasonable care, have avoided the accident which occasioned his death, and, if so, in what respect or how could the de-ceased have avoided the accident?" The latter part of the question was added at the request of the question was asked at the re-quest of counsel for plaintiff. To this ques-tion the answer was: "Yes. He might bave taken another road, or if sober on a bright night he might have avoided the hole: Held, there was no doubt that the deceased had a right to be on the ice in the vicinity of the hole. He was not a trespasser. He was upon the ice over navigable water. He was, when he lost his life, at a place "open to" but not "frequented by "the public. Defendants in making the hole through the ice did so in the exercise of their rights for the purpose of saving their tug, which, without fault of theirs, so far as it appeared, had sunk in navigable water. Defendants had no reason to suppose that in the ordinary course of business or trave! any one other than those in their employment would be near enough to their boat or to this hole to be in any way in danger. While the public had the right to be, or travel upon the ice, there was no invitation by defendants to deceased or to any of the public to travel upon the ice or to go near the opening. There was not, apart from what was being done by defendants in the raising of the tug, any work or business being carried on, or any road or way defined by bushes or marks or by travel on the ice, that would give notice to defendants that any one would be likely to drive or ride or walk near to where the hole was. and the ice was not in condition to be skated upon. It was quite as reasonable to conclude from the evidence that the deceased voluntarily sat down or fell upon the ice, close to the edge, and perished from cold as that he accidentally walked into the hole. Upon the evidence, the way in which Plouffe met his death was as consistent with the theory that he did not fall into the water as that he did, and, that being so, the case should not go to the jury; see Armstrong v. Canada Atlantic R. W. Co., 4 O. L. R. 500. I O. W. R. 612. Plouffe v. Canada Iron Furnace Co., 5 O. W. R. 758, 6 O. W. R. 500, 10 O. L. R. 37.

Bridge—Injury to—Navigable River—Sudden Rising—Floating Logs—Vis Major,)
—The plaintiffs were the owners of an iron bridge crossing a navigable river. The deferdant was hurriedly floating his logs and timber down the river; and the river suddenly rising, as it often did, a jum was formed, and the plaintiffs' bridge was injured. The defendant pleaded that the damage was caused by an irresistible force over which he had no control:—Held, that, the river being navigable, the defendant had the right to use it as an ordinary highway only; that the defendant must be taken to have been aware of the fact that the river was subject to sudden rising; and that the accident was caused not by force majeure, but by the negligence of the defendant in placing too many logs in the river at once, without having at the same time a correspondingly sufficient number of men to keep abreast of them in order to prevent a jam. Storm-Defective Construction-Knowledge of Owner-Employment of Competent Superintendent.]-Defendants did not employ an architect to prepare plans and specifications architect to prepare plans and specifications of a mill, but adopted the plans and specifications which had been prepared by Allis Chambers & Co., of Chicago, a well known firm of architects and contractors, who had prepared the plans and specifications used for the St. Anthony Lumber Co. at Whitney, who, though not a professional architect, had had very extensive experience in mill conhad very extensive experience in mili construction work. Some variations were made by Mr. Proper in these plans. The plans for the roof were prepared by the Dominion Bridge Company, who under contract constructed and put on the roof. The brickwork was done under contract by defendant Garrock, who commenced his work early in March, 1903, and a portion of his work was was completed with the exception of putting in some interior machinery, in which the deceased was engaged under his employer Campbell on 6th August, 1903, when sud-denly the end wall of the boiler house gave way and fell into the building, inflicting in-juries to deceased which caused his death the next day. According to the evidence, a very severe gale of wind was blowing when the wall fell. The defendants contended that it was the suddenness and violence of the storm that caused the accident, and that they could not, by the exercise of the utmost care, foresee and provide against the irresistible force of the storm. The end of the power house was near the edge of a lake, and faced stretch of 2 or 3 miles of open water:-Held, the defendants could not be expected to provide against storms of the violence of a cyclone or tornado, but it was reasonable to expect from the location and position of the boiler house that it would be subjected to more than ordinary wind strain at times. It was not unreasonable for defendants to adopt the plans and specifications which had been used in the construction of the building at Whitney, and also it was not unreasonable for them to employ Mr. Proper, although not an architect, to take charge of the construction; but the wall was not sufficient to withstand the wind pressure the might reasonably be expected in that localit —Held, notwithstanding the fact that the defendants were not guilty of such negligence as to render them liable to plaintiffs, they were not liable to plaintiffs as insurers, or that the insufficiency of the designs or of the wall were so manifest that it could have been detected by any ordinary inspection; in fact, honest differences of opinion might very well occur between architects as to the sufficiency, as was shewn by the variety of testimony at the trial; and no obligation is to be implied by law that a building is absolutely safe: see Searle v. Laverick, L. R. 9 Q. B. 122. Action dismissed without costs. Valiquette v. Fraser, 4 Q. W. R. 60, 543, 25 Qec. N. 36, 9 Q. L. R. 57.

Collision of Vehicles-Rule of Road-Runaway.]-In an action on the case for negligence in driving the defendant's horse whereby his waggon came into collision with and damaged that of the plaintiff, it is not sufficient to prove merely that the defendant was driving on the wrong side of the road, especially as it was shewn that the defendant just before the collision had crossed from the left side of the road for the purpose of speaking to a man sitting on a doorstep on the other side, and that the plaintiff's horse at the time of the accident was running away, and beyond control. Stout v. Adams, 35 N. B. Reps. 118.

Contributory Negligence—Quebec Law —Damages.]—If the principal cause of an accident is the want of care of the victim, that does not take away all recourse against the party who has contributed to the accident by his negligence. 2. The only effect of the victim's carelessness is to reduce the amount of damages which he may be awarded. 3. It is not necessary in order to establish negligence in a party that the law should have imposed upon him the duty of doing what he has not done; it is sufficient that ordinary prudence imposed the duty upon him. Jess v. Quebec and Levis Ferry Co., Q. R. 25 S. C. 224.

Bernier v. Généreux. Q. R. 12 K. B. 24.

Dangerous Animal-Horse on Highway -Injury to Child.]-The defendant's horse being on the highway, a boy of twelve years of age approached to catch him by taking hold of a rope then around his neck, when the boy was kicked and injured. There was no evidence that the defendant knew that the horse was accustomed to stray or had any vicious propensity, nor was the horse shewn to have such fault, and there was evidence that the horse had been interfered with by several boys, of whom the injured boy was one, and that the latter had more than ordinary intelligence and fully understood the risk he ran. In an action by the boy and his father:—Held, that they could not recover. Patterson v. Fanning, 2. O. L. R. 462, distinguished. Flett v. Coulter, 23 Occ. N. 111, 5 O. L. R. 375, 1 O. W. R. 775, 2 O. Dangerous Place on Premises-Part of Premises Used by Licensee—Responsibility of Owner—Construction of License—Extent of Invitation.]—Defendants were lessees of large grounds which they used for the purposes of holding an annual exhibition of arts and manufactures, admission to which grounds they charged a fee. There were several attractions by way of amusements on the grounds, the owners of which paid a li-cense fee to the lessees of the grounds, for the right to charge a further fee, for admission to these several attractions. The plaintiff paid his general admission fee to the grounds and also a further fee for a ride on a merry-go-round, which was separate from the general grounds. Here he met with serious injuries, by the merry-go-round breaking by a defect in its construction: — Held, the owners of these several attractions were licensees and not lessees and the defendants had a right of supervision which they were negligent in not exercising, and they were liable to plaintiff for holding out an invitation to use the merry-go-round when it was tion to use the interpy-gordound when it was negligently constructed. Flynn v. Toronto Industrial Exhibition Association, 5 O. W. R. 550, 9 O. L. R. 582.

Death of Person—Pleading—Damages.]
—In an action for damages for the death of the plaintiff's father by the negligence of the defendant, the plaintiff may allege the services which the father performed, and the value of them. 2. In such an action the plaintiff must not allege the verdict of the coroner's jury upon the cause of death. 3. A plaintiff cannot claim damages for injuries to his sensibilities or feelings. 4. A plaintiff may claim a certain sum, at the same time alleging that the damages suffered cannot be compensated by money. Thibault v. David, 6 Q. P. R. 55.

Defect in Goods Sold-Injury to Purchaser-Liability of Vendor-Accident.] -The plaintiff's daughter, about eleven years of age, was injured by the bursting of a bottle containing cream soda, which had been sold to the plaintiff by the defendant, a manufacturer of soda water. The bottle had manufacturer of soda water. The bottle had been carefully tested by the defendant before it was filled, and was more than ample to support the pressure to which it was sub-jected. The cause of the accident was not definitely ascertained, but it appeared to be the sudden exposure of a cold bottle in a refrigerator to a current of warm air, or, perhaps, to some unknown flaw or inequality in the glass itself :-Held, that, whether the accident was attributable to sudden change of temperature or to an unknown defect in the glass, the defendant, as the vendor, was not responsible, it being either the result of imprudence on the part of the plaintiff's daughter, or a case of inevitable accident. The extent of the obligation of persons selling gaseous waters, as to the receptacles which contain them, is to take every reasonable precaution that such receptacles shall be sufficient for the purpose. Guinea V. Campbell, Q. R. 22 S. C. 257.

Defective Appliances in Ship-Injury to Passenger—Duty of Owners—Proximate Cause.]—The plaintiff, a boy of four years of age, with his parents, was being carried as a passenger on a steamboat of the defendants. The child and his mother were in a house on the boat's deck, leading from which out on to the deck were doors fitted with appliances intended to keep them fastened back, when they should happen to be flung wide open. While the plaintiff was in the act of passing through one of the doorways, the door swnng to and jammed his fingers, so that the tips of some of them had to be amputated. The plaintiff's father and elder brother swore that the fastening of the door was out of order, and would not hold it back. There was evidence to shew that the doors of the house were frequently being opened and shut by passengers and others, and that a very few minutes before the accident a passenger had gone through the doorway in question, leaving the door on the swing. It was also proved that the fastenings had been put on the doors in order to hold them open in warm weather for the purposes of ventilation:-Held, that there was no duty cast upon the defendants to provide the doors with the appliances mentioned or to maintain them in good working order; and, even if there were, the evidence went to shew that the proximate cause of the accident was the act of the passenger in leaving the door on the swing, for which the defendants could not be held liable. Cormier v. Dominion Atlantic R. W. Co., 36 N. B. Reps. 10.

Demolition of Buildings-Injury to Materials—Liability — Contract.]—The appellants purchased from the respondent certain land with buildings erected thereon, which were to be demolished. The yender reserved the timber and other materials in the buildings, with the exception of the brick and stone, the materials so reserved to be removed by him as the demolition of the buildings proceeded. The appellants, without notice to the respondent, employed contrac-tors to demolish the buildings, and a considerable quantity of the material was carried away before the respondent was aware that the demolition had commenced, and the timber was so split and broken by the haste with which the work was carried on, that it was unfit for building purposes:-Held, that the obligation of the appellants to deliver the materials required the observance at least of ordinary care necessary for safe delivery under such circumstances, and that the appellants were responsible for the damage occasioned by the undue haste of the de-molition, proper allowance being made for breaking and splitting unavoidably caused by the process of demolition. y to Bridge patable Rivers— Rights — Vis in the Province of Quebec, is floatable but not navigable, and is used by the lumbermen for bringing down saw-logs to booms, in which the logs are collected at the mouth of the river, and distri-buted among the owners. The plaintiffs constructed a municipal bridge across the river near its mouth where the collecting booms are situated. The defendant and a number of other lumbermen engaged in driving their logs, mixed together, down the river, did not place men at the bridge to project it during the drive, and took no precautions to prevent the formation of jams of the r logs at the piers of a railway bridge which crosses the river a short distance below the municipal bridge, nor did they break up a jam of logs which formed there, but they abandoned the drive before the logs had been safely boomed at the river mouth. The river Rouge is subject to sudden freshets during heavy rains, and, on the occurrence of one of these freshets, the waters were penned back by the jam, and a quantity of the logs were swept up stream with such force that the superstructure of the municipal bridge was carried away. In an action by the municipality to recover damages from the lumbermen, jointly and severally :- Held, that irrespective of any duty imposed by statute, the proprietors of the logs were liable for actionable negligence on account of the careless manner in which the driving of the logs was carried on. and were jointly and severally responsible in damages for the injuries so caused :-Held. further, that the right of lumbermen to float timber down rivers and streams is not a paramount right, but an easement or privilege which must be enjoyed and exercised with such care, skill, and diligence as may be necessary to prevent injury to or interference with the concurrent rights of riparian proprietors and public corporations entitled to bridge or otherwise make use of such watercourses. Ward v. Township of Grenville, 23 Occ. N. 27, 32 S. C. R. 510.

Electric Lamp—Injury by—Evidence— Non-direction—lability of master for acts of servant of aginjury to stranger—Findings of jury Damages. Sedore v. Toronto Electric Land Co., 3 O. W. R. 407.

Electric Shock-Death Caused by-Burden of Proof-Liability of Suppliers of Electricity.]-Appeal from a judgment condemning the defendants to pay $5,000 damages for the death of the respondent's husband, caused by taking hold of a lamp (supplied by the defendants in the ordinary course of their business) to turn on the light. It was not proved exactly what was responsible for the accident. A guy wire of another electric company's system was, at one point, within an inch or an inch and a half of the appellants' wires communicating with the house of deceased, and, although there was no evidence of actual contact between the wires, yet this was one of the various theories advanced in explanation of the accident :- Held, that the burden of proof of the fact, act, or omission constituting negligence was not upon the plaintiff. The presumption was that the fatal current came over the same system and from the same source as that by which his ordinary supply was delivered to the deceased by the appellants. The burden of proof was upon them to shew the contrary. This they had failed to do, and the judgment holding them responsible for the accident should be affirmed. Royal Electric Co. v. Hevi, 21 Occ. N. 442.

Electric Wire - Trespasser-Evidence -Contributory Negligence - New Trial.]-The Ahearn and Soper Co, had a contract to illuminate certain buildings for the visit of the Duke of York to Ottawa, and obtained power from the Ottawa Electric Co. For the purposes of the contract, wires were strung on a telegraph pole and fastened with tie wires, the ends of which were uninsulated. R., an employee of the Ottawa Electric Co., was sent by the latter to place a transformer on the same pole, and in doing so his hands touched the ends of the tie wire, by which he received a shock and fell to the ground, being seriously injured. To an action for damages for such injury the Ahearn and Soper Co. pleaded that R. had no right to be on the pole and was a trespasser, and on the trial their counsel urged that the work he was doing was connected with the lighting of a building in the city. The Court of Appeal held (6 O. L. R. 619, 24 Occ. N. 5, 2 O. W. R. 1022), that this defence was established and dismissed the action:—Held, reversing the judgment, that the counsel's address did not indicate that the building referred to was not one of those to be illuminated under the contract, and the evidence did not shew that R, was engaged in the ordinary business of his employers, and the case should be re-tried, the jury having failed to agree at the trial. A rule of the Ottawa Electric Co, directed every employee whose work was near apparatus carrying dangerous currents to wear rubber gloves, which would be furnished on application. R. was not wearing such gloves when he was hurt:—Held, that the mere fact of the absence of gloves was not such negligence on R.'s part as to warrant the case being withdrawn from the jury; that, as to the Ahearn and Soper Co., R was not bound by the rules; and that, though his failure to take such precaution was evidence of negligence, he had a right to have it left to the jury and considered in connection with other facts in the case. Randall v. Ottawa Electric Co., 24 Occ. N. 262; Randall v. Ahearn and Soper Co., 34 S. C. R. 698

Electric Wire—Use of pole by stranger—Liability—Findings of jury—Cause of action—Claim of wife for injury to husband. Randall v. Ottava Electric Co., 2 O. W. R. 146, 173, 1022, 4 O. W. R. 240, 269, 6 O. W. R. 913.

Electric Wire Left on Ground—Injuny to Passers-by—Liability of Gas Company—City Corporation—Immediate Cause of Injury—Damages—Costs.]—Plaintiffs were injured by a wire which had been cut and allowed to hang loose by the workmen of defendant company while straightening a pole. It came in contact with a power wire and thus became a live wire injuring the plaintiffs. Defendants held liable owing to original negligence of defendants workmen. Labombarde v. Chatham Gas Co., 5 O. W. R. 534, 10 O. L. R. 446.

Elevator—Injury to Person—Bad Condition of Premises—Responsibility of Owner to Stranger.]—The plaintiff fell into the well of an elevator at the defeudant's place of business and thereby injured herself. She brought action for damages alleging negligence on the part of the defendant. At the time of the accident the plaintiff was neither an employee nor a customer, but was merely a stranger upon defendant's premises:—Held, that the proprietor had no responsibility towards third parties who might come upon his premises without invitation or without having business to transact there. Wiggins V. Semi-Ready Clothing Co., 23 Occ. N. 117.

Ferry Boat Wharf-Dangerous Way Precautions for Preventing Accidents—Contributory Negligence—Findings of Jury.]— A passenger who arrived on the pontoon wharf as a ferry boat was swinging out, and when it was a few feet away from the wharf. with the gangways withdrawn, attempted to jump aboard over the stern bulwarks, and was drowned. In an action by her representatives to recover damages from the ferry company on account of negligence in failing to provide proper means to prevent accidents at their wharf, the jury found that the drowning was caused by the fault of the company, "in not having proper gates at the gangway openings leading from the pontoon to the boat," and that deceased was herself negligent "by her imprudence in attempting to board the boat after the gangway had been raised and the boat was swinging preparatory to leaving the pontoon," but that she "was not then aware that the boat had left the wharf:"—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (Girouard, J., dissenting, on a different appreciation of the facts), that, as there was no proof of any negligence on the part of the company which proximately and effectively contributed to the accident, but, on the contrary, it appeared that the sole, direct, proximate and effective cause of the accident was the wilful and rash act of the deceased in attempting to jump aboard the ferry boat over the bulwarks, after the gangways had been withdrawn and the boat had got under way, the company could not be held responsible in damages. Tooke v. Bergeron, 27 S. C. R. 567, and George Matthews Co. v. Bouchard, 28 S. C. R. 585, followed. Quebec and Levis Ferry Co. v. Jess, 35 S. C. R. 693.

Fire—Setting out—Damage to property—Causal connection—Findings of jury. Fabian v. Smallpiece, 4 O. W. R. 268.

Fire—Contributory Negligence—Voluntar-ily Incurring Risk—Remoteness of Damages.]-The defendant was the owner of a threshing machine and a portable steam engine, and hired from the plaintiff a team of horses with a driver for use in moving the engine about and in drawing straw and grain during the work of threshing. threshing for a certain farmer, sparks from the engine set fire to a stack of grain, and, the separator being thereby placed in danger, the plaintiff's driver attached his horses to it for the purpose of hauling it into a place of safety; but the fire spread so rapidly and unexpectedly before the separator could be moved or the horses detached that they were severely burned and had to be killed. The County Court Judge, who tried the case without a jury, found that the fire had been caused by negligence on the part of the defendant's servants, also that the horses had been attached to the separator either in obedience to a call from the defendant's foreman or under his personal supervision, and that there was no negligence on the part of the plaintiff's driver:—Held, that the evidence fully warranted the finding of negligence, and, unless the plaintiff's driver was guilty of contributory negligence, the defendant was responsible for the loss of the horses. 2. That the driver was not guilty of contributory negligence in exposing the horses to danger, as it was not obvious, and he had acted either on the orders of the defendant's foreman or in obedience to a natural impulse to try to save the defendant's property. Connell v. Town of Prescott, 20 A. R. 49, 22 S. C. R. 147, followed. Thorn v. James, 23 Occ. N. 124, 14 Man. L. R. 373.

Highway—Horse — Presumption—Onus. Doughty v. Dobbs. 3 O. W. R. 19.

Horse at Large on Highway—Injury to Passer-by,—The defendant left his horse, attached to a vehicle, upon the public highway, without tying it up or putting any person in charge. The horse ran away and struck and injured the plaintiff, who was driving a loaded sleigh;—Held, that the defendant was liable to the plaintiff in damages; and it made no difference that the plaintiff had got down from his sleigh, and when struck, was endeavouring to keep the runaway horse from running into the sleigh, as the evidence shewed that he would have been struck had he remained upon the sleigh. Laflamme v, Starnes, Q. R. 18 S. C. 105.

Horse at Large on Highway—Injury to Passer-by—By-lau.]—The defendant's horse strayed from his field to the highway, the fence being defective, and, being frightened by a boy, ran upon the sidewalk and knocked down and injured the plaintiff. A municipal by-law made it unlawful for any person to allow horses to run at large:—Held, that the horse was unlawfully on the highway, and that the defendant was liable in damages for the injury suffered by the plaintiff, the injury being the natural result of, and properly attributable to, his nedigence. Judgment in 1 O. L. R. 412, 21 Occ. N. 205, affirmed. Patterson v. Fanning, 21 Occ. N. 549, 2 O. L. R. 462.

Ice-Accumulation - Death from-Construction of Building.]-A man hired to work about a building was killed by a mass of ice falling upon him from the roof. In an action, under Lord Campbell's Act, by the administratrix of the deceased against the owners and occupiers of the building:-Held. that the latter were not liable in the absence of evidence that they suffered the ice to remain there for an unusual and unreasonable time after they had notice of its accumulation, and might have removed it. In erecting a building the owner may adopt any style of architecture he pleases, provided he does not create a nuisance or violate any law or municipal ordinance; therefore the construction of a roof with projecting eaves, which caused an accumulation of ice and snow thereon, is not per se evidence of negligence on the part of the owner, although it may impose upon him a greater degree of watch fulness and care in order to prevent acci-dents. Injury to Goods of Occupant of Building — Trespasser or Licensee—Con-tractor for Alteration of Building—Liability Where the plaintiff, a tenant of property subject to mortgage, after foreclosure of the mortgage, though his tenancy had been thereby determined, continued in occupation of the premises, pursuant to an arrangement with the mortgagor (apparently with the cogniz-ance of the purchaser), and afterwards failed to move out as agreed with the mortgagor, because the latter had not complied with a stipulation to find him other premises, and the defendant, who had contracted to make alterations required by the purchaser, entered and commenced tearing down the walls and plaster on the upper floor, in the course of which work the waste pipe leading from a basin on the apper floor became choked with plaster, and the tap over the basin having been turned on at a time when the water was not turned off again, the water subsequently overflowed the basin, and, passing down through the floors, damaged the plaintiff's goods:—Held, that there was no duty cast upon defendant of protecting the plaintiff's property except against wilful or wanton injury, of which there was no evidence; that if any servant of the defendant had turned on the water tap, the defendant would not be liable, such not being within the scope of the employment of such servant; that to render the defendant liable the damage must have been occasioned by some negligent act of the defendant to his servants, and the onus on the plaintiff was not satisfied, there being abundant opportunity for some one else to have occasioned it after the defendant's workmen left the building; and that the plaintiff being in the position of a trespasser, and in the building at a time when the defendant was carrying on his work (the work being done with at least ordinary care), he was there subject to all risks incident to occupation at such a time, and must bear the consequences, Brookfield, 37 N. S. Reps. 115. Sievert v.

Injury to Infant in Factory—Liability of Owner—Contributory Negligence of Infant.]—A boy of eight years, the appellant's son, was in the habit of playing in the respondent's factory. In consequence of an accident which happened to the boy in the winter of 1890-1900, the respondent instructed his foreman to prevent all persons who had no business in the factory from entering, and particularly this boy. For a certain time these orders were obeyed, but later the boy began to frequent the factory as in the past, including a room in which was a dangerous machine, and that to the knowledge of the foreman. In August, 1900, the boy entered the factory by the office door. The bookkeeper was not there at the moment; the boy crossed the office and seeing the book-keeper, with whom he was in the habit of playing, threw himself into his arms, and the bookkeeper began to throw the boy into the air and catch him in his arms. In playing thus the boy's foot was caught in a pulley and seriously injured:—Held, that, in these circumstances, the owner of the factory was liable, and in order to relieve himself of liability he should not have confined himself to giving orders, but should have seen that they were executed. 2. There cannot be on the part of a child of eight years liability for his own negligence, the presumption being that at such age he is incompetent to know the consequence of his conduct. Delage v. Delisle, O. R. 10 K. B. 481.

Injury to Linesman of Electric Company—Duty of strangers—Danger—Precautions—Volunteer or licensee—Jury. Randall v. Ottava Electric Co., 2 O. W. R. 146, 173, 1022, 4 O. W. R. 249, 269.

Injury to Passenger in Elevator -Contributory Negligence.] — H. entered an elevator in a public building, after inquiring of the boy in charge if a certain tenant was in his office, and being told he was not, he remained in the elevator while it made a number of trips in response to calls, and had been in it over ten minutes when a call came from the fifth floor. The elevator went up, and the passenger who had rung entered, H. at first making no attempt to get out. The operator then shoved to the door of the elevator, and at the same time started the wheel, which had to be completely turned round to move the elevator. The turning of the wheel would also close the door. While it was being turned H., without giving warning, tried to get out through the door, and, the elevator being then descending, he was caught between it and the floor and injured, so that he died soon after. In an action by his administrator against the owner of the building: -Held, that the accident was entirely due to the conduct of H. himself, and the owner was not liable. Judgment in 34 N. S. Reps. 365, affirmed. Hawley v. Wright, 22 Occ. N. 198, 32 S. C. R. 40.

Injury to Passer-by-Electric Company -Operations of a Dangerous Nature—Insulation of Electric Wires.]—The defendants, a company engaged in supplying electric light to consumers in the city of Montreal, under special charter for that purpose, placed a secondary wire, by which electric light was supplied to G.'s premises, in close proximity to a guy-wire used to brace primary wires of another electric company, which, although ordinarily a dead wire, might become danger-ously charged with electricity in wet weather. The defendants' secondary wire was allowed to remain in a defective condition for several months immediately preceding the time when the injury complained of was sustained, and it was at that time insufficiently insulated at a point in close proximity to the guy-wire. While attempting to turn on the light of an incandescent lamp on his premises, on a wet and stormy day, G. was struck with insensibility and died almost immediately. In an action to recover damages against the company for negligently causing the injury:—Held, affirming the judgment in 21 Occ. N. 442, Q. R. 11 K. B. 436, that the defendants were liable for actionable negligence, as they had failed to exercise the high degree of skill, care, and foresight required of persons engaging in operations of a dangerous nature. Here v. Royal Electric Co., 22 Occ. N. 358, 32 S. C. R. 462.

Injury to Passer-by — Municipal Corporation—Dangerous Operations—Neglect of Precautions—Personal Injuries.]—Dangerous operations, such as blasting for the purpose of excavation, should be carried on with due regard to the safety of the public; and where it appeared that a person, at a distance of about 250 yards from the works, was seriously injured by a stone hurled through the air by a blast, and that the accident occurred through the fault and negligence of the defendants' employees in not sufficiently covering the blast, the defendants were held responsible. Laroeque v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 19 S. C. 527.

Injury to Pedestrian — Street Railway — Findings of Jury — Contributory Negligence, 1—In an action founded on personal injuries caused by a street car, the jury found that the defendants' negligence was the cause of the accident, and also that the plaintiff had been negligent in not looking out for the car: —Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 2 O. L. K. 53, 21 Occ. N. 369, that, as the charge to the jury lad properly explained the law as to contributory negligence, the latter finding must be considered to mean that the accident would not have occurred but for the plaintiff's own negligence; and he could not recover. Broven v. London Street R. W. Co., 22 Occ. N. 78, 31 S. C. R. 642.

Injury to Person — Municipal corporation—Work on roads—Pathmaster—Relationship of master and servant—Infant. Bock y. Township of Wilmot, 1 O. W. R, 415.

Injury to Person Coming on Premises — Dangerous Premises — Want of Sercen or Guard.]—While a teamster was delivering a load of coke on the premises of the defendants, an iron foundry company, he was struck in the eye and injured by a chip, which one of the defendants' workmen, who was cutting off the excrescences on the inside of an iron pipe for the purpose of smoothing it, had chipped off. The accident might have been avoided had there been a screen or guard; or, in the absence of a screen or guard, by the workman stopping work during the delivery of the coke:—Held, that the defendants were liable for the injuries sustained. Fallis v, Gartshore-Thompson Pipe Foundry Co., 22 Occ, N. 283, 4 O. L. R. 176, 1 O. W. R. 348.

Injury to Volunteer—Machinery — Defects—Duty—Delegation. Pimperton v. Mc-Kenzie, 1 O. W. R. 335.

Leaving Dangerous Place Unguarded —Contributory Negligence — Nonsuit—Undisputed Facts — Inference.]—The power to nonsuit on the ground of contributory negligence is restricted to cases where it is indisputable that the misfortune would not have occurred but for the plaintiff's own want of proper care. Where the rest, or the projer inference from the facts, are in dispute, the case must go to the jury. And where the affendants negligently left a hole in the floor of a room unguarded, and the plaintiff, going into the room, saw the danger and at first avoided it, but, in tunning to go out agam, lost sight of it, stepped into the hole, and was injured:—Held, these facts being undisputed, that it was properly left to the jury to say whether she was negligent or not. Servicer N. Lonc, 21 Occ. N. 27, S2 O. R. 280.

Master and Servant — Injury to Servant—Volenti Non Fit Injuria — Question for Jury.]—In an action for compensation for personal injuries caused by negrigence, the defendant who invokes the doctrine of volenti non fit injuria must have a finding by the jury that the person injured voluntarily incurred the risk, unless it so plainly appears by the plaintiff's evidence as to justify the trial Judge in withdrawing it from the jury and dismissing the action. Judgment of the Court of Appeal, Mitchell v. Canada Foundry Co., 3 O. W. R. 907, in an action by the widow and children of a workman to recover damages for his death by the negligence of his employers, affirmed. Canada Foundry Co. v. Mitchell, 25 Occ. N. 27, 35 S. C. R. 452.

The city corporation covenanted to cepair, but the practice was for the association to repair and charge the repairs to the corporation. In walking across a platform which was constructed between the building and the public sidewalk to give access to people requiring refreshments the plaintiff put her foot into a hole in the platform, which was out of repair, and was injured:-Held, that she was not a lessee of the prebut a mere licensee; that she was lawfully there upon the invitation of the association; that the association owed a duty

Playing Dangerous Game on Highway—Infant—Contributory negligence. Coburn v. Hardwick, 1 O. W. R. 733.

Promissory Note — Agent of Bank — Neglect to Take in Proper Form — Subsequent Material Alteration—Loss of Remedy on Note-Damages.] — The defendant, the plaintiffs' agent at a branch, accepted a promissory note, not expressed to be joint and several, as security for an advance, instead of a joint and several one, although expressly instructed to require the latter, Shortly afterwards he discovered the mistake, and at the suggestion of one of the makers of the note, he inserted the words "jointly and severally," on the understanding that the alteration was to be initialled by all the makers, This, however, was not done, and, after con-sultation with the plaintiffs' solicitor, the inserted words were crossed out by the defendant. In the result the bank were held to have lost their remedy on the note on the ground of material alteration. The bank then brought this action against the defendant for damages for negligence :-Held, Osler, J.A., dissenting, that the form of the note as taken was to all intents and purposes as valid as if made jointly and severally, and therefore in this regard only nominal damages could be recoverable. The defendant, also, was not liable in damages for the consequences of his subsequent acts. What he did was done in good faith, and in ignorance of the legal consequences. The defendant exercised reasonable care and diligence, in all the circum-stances of the case, and the mere fact that his judgment was mistaken, and his acts prejudicial to the plaintiffs, was not enough to render him liable. Judgment of Meredith, C.J., awarding the plaintiffs nominal damages with costs on the appropriate scale and a set-off of costs to the defendant, affirmed. Banque Provinciale du Canada V. Charbonneau, 23 Occ. N. 256, 6 O. L. R. 302, 2 O. W. R. 558.

Railways - Injury to Licensee-License -Master and Servant - Damages - New Trial.]-The plaintiff's son was given leave by a yardmaster of the defendants to learn in the railway yard the duties of car checker, with the expectation that if he became competent he would be taken into the employment of the defendants in that capacity, and he was free to devote as much or as little time to acquiring the necessary knowledge as he saw fit. While he was in the railway yard a few days after this permission had been given, he was killed by an engine of the defendants, which was running through the railway yard without the bell being rung, though the rules of the defendants required this to be done :- Held, that the deceased was a licensee, and not a trespasser; that the defendants were bound to exercise reasonable care for his protection; and that the omission to give the warning was negligence which made then liable in damages for his death. The Court, being of opinion, however, that damages of $3,000 allowed by the jury were excessive, ordered that there should be a new trial unless the plaintiff should consent to accept $1,500. Collier v. Michigan Central R. W. Co., 1 Occ. N. 16, 27 A. R. 630.

Ship-Dangerous Condition - - Cause of Death-Evidence-Onus of Proof.] - In an action to recover damages for death caused by alleged negligence, the onus is on the plaintiff to prove not only that the defendant was guilty of actionable negligence, but also, either directly or by reasonable inference, that such negligence was the cause of the death. Where, therefore, a man employed on the defendant's tug was drowned, and it was shewn that wood had been piled upon the tug's deck in such a way as to make it dangerous to pass along the deck, but it was also shewn that there was a safe passage-way on a scow lashed to the tug, and there was no evidence whatever as to the manner of the accident, the action was dismissed. Street Railway — Electric shock—Fall from car—Damages—Mental shock—Evidence—Improper admission—Excessive damages—New Trial—Costs, Lewis v. Toronto R. W. Co., 6 O. W. R. 1029.

Street Railways - Accident to Person Crossing Track—Contributory Negligence— Jury—Trial—Form of Questions.] — When contributory negligence is set up in an action to recover damages for negligence, which is being tried before a jury, the plaintiff is entitled to a clear and distinct finding upon the point. In an action against a street railway company to recover damages, the jury, after finding in answer to questions that the defendants were guilty of negligence, in running at too high a rate of speed, not properly sounding the gong, and not having the car under proper control, and that the plaintiff's injury was caused by this negligence, said. in answer to further questions, that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence in not using more caution in crossing the railway tracks:—Held, that this answer was ambiguous and unsatisfactory, and, in view of the previous distinct answers, not fairly to be treated as a finding of contributory negligence. Per Osler, J.A.—Instead of put-ting in such cases the question, "Was the plaintiff guilty of contributory negligence? involving, as it does, both the fact and the law, it would be better to ask, "Could the plaintiff by the exercise of reasonable care have avoided the injury?" and to provide for the case of an affirmative answer by the further question, "If so, in what respect do you think the plaintiff omitted to take reasonable care?" Brown v. London Street R. W. Co., 21 Occ., N. 369, 2 O. L. R. 53.

Street Railways—Collision with Vehicle—Motorman.]—The motorman of an electric car is not necessarily guilty of negligence because he does not at once stop the car at the first notice that a horse is being frightened either at the car or at something else. All that can be expected is that the motorman shall proceed carefully, and it is in each case a question whether that has been done. Upon the facts of this case, the majority of the Court held that there was no evidence to justify a finding of negligence, and set aside a judgment in the plaintiff's favour. Robinson v. Toronto R. W. Co., 21 Occ. N. 370, 2 O. L. R. 18.

Street Railways — Contributory negligenee—Collision between electric car and another vehicle—Findings of jury—New trial. Liddiard v. Toronto R. W. Co., 2 O. W. R. 145, 3 O. W. R. 852.

Trespasser — Licensec—Master and Servant—Liability of Master for Acts of Servant—Course of Employment.]—A trespasser or bare licensee injured through negligence may maintain an action. The workmen of a contractor for tearing down portions of a building, in order to make alterations, turned on a water tap in a room where they were working, and neglected to turn it off, whereby goods in the store below were damaged by water:—Held, Davies and Nesbitt, JJ, dissenting, that the act of the workmen was done in the course of their employment; that it was negligent; that their employer was liable; and that the owner of the goods could recover damages, though he was in possession mcrely as an overholding tenant who had not been ejected, Sievert v. Brookfield, 25 Occ. N. 53, 35 S. C. R. 494.

Unsafe Premises - Accident to Visitor -Liability of Gwner-Landlord and Tenant -Sub-letting without Leave-Damages-Increase on Appeal-Costs.] - It is negligent for the owner of property to leave an unprotected excavation in an open passage lead; ing from the street to the rear of his buildings, and used by his tenants and those having business with them, and he is responsible in damages for an accident occurring in consequence of such unprotected excavation. The fact that the person injured was visiting her son, a sub-tenant, who had leased from a tenant notwithstanding a clause in the lease of the latter prohibiting sub-letting, does not affect the responsibility of the owner for negligence in permitting the passage to be in an unsafe condition. Where the award of damages and costs by the first Court appears to be inadequate and unjust, the Court of King's Bench will, on appeal of the plaintiff, reform the judgment in this respect, and increase the award to a reasonable extent, and will, moreover, reform the judgment as to costs; e.g., where a woman had her leg broken by falling into an unprotected excavation, and was crippled and incapacitated for work. and the first Court awarded only $50 damages, without costs of plaintiff's enquête, the appellate Court increased the indemnity to $200, with costs of suit. Vachon v. Durand, Q. R. 13 K. B. 372.

Unsafe Premises — Invitation — Unguarded Hole in Floor — Absence of Warning—Notice of Danger,] — The plaintiff, a contractor for constructing and repairing roofs, came to the defendants' premises on their invitation to examine the roof and give an estimate of the cost of certain repairs to it. There was a cupola on the roof, from which it could be examined. This cupola was reached by a ladder going up through a bole in the roof, It had two windows and was well lighted. There was also another hole in the floor of the cupola, which was there for the purpose of furnishing light to the floor below and was unguarded. The plaintiff in broad daylight ascended to the cupola, accompanied by the defendants' foreman, for the purpose of examining the roof, and, after looking through one of the windows, he stepped backwards and fell through the last mentioned hole to the floor below and was injured :-Held, that there was no evidence of negligence on defendants' part to go to a jury, and that the plaintiff was properly nonsuited. Johnson v. Ramberg, 51 N. W. Rep. 1043, followed. Indermaur v. Davies, L. R. 1 C. P. 274, distinguished:—Held. also, that, as the danger was obvious, there was no duty on the part of the defendants' foreman, although he was present, to warn the plaintiff of it. Fonseca v. Lake of the Woods Milling Co., 15 Man. L. R. 413, 1 W. L. R. 553.

Vehicle Driven by Policeman—lininy to Foot-passenger—Liability of Police Commissioners.] — A constable in charge of a patrol waggon is not a servant of a board of commissioners of police constituted under x. 481 of the Municipal Act, R. 8. 0. 1897 c. 223, as amended by 62 V. c. 29, s. 28, so as to make them liable for his negligence in performance of his duties, whereby a person walking in the street was knocked down and injured. Winterbottom v. London Police Commissioners, 21 Occ. N. 260, 431, 1 O. L. R. 549, 2 O. L. R. 105.

Absence of Material Witness—Taking chances at trial. McLellan v. Hovey, 1 O. W. R. 215, 707.

Decree of Appellate Court—Reasons for Judgment, 1—B., a passenger on a railway train, was thrice assaulted by a fellow-passenger during the passage. The conductor was informed of the first assault immediately after it occurred, and also of the second, but took no steps to protect B. In an action against the railway company B. recovered damages assessed generally, for the injuries complained The verdict was maintained by the Court of Appeal, but the Supreme Court of Canada ordered a new trial unless B. would consent to his damages being reduced (34 S. C. R. 74). In the reasons given for the last mentioned judgment it was held that damages could be recovered for the third assault only. but the judgment as entered by the Registrar stated that the Court ordered the reversal of the judgment appealed from and a new trial unless the plaintiff accepted the reduced amount of damages. Such amount having been refused, a new trial was had, on which B. again obtained a verdict, the damages being apportioned between the second and third assault. Divisional Court Setting Aside Nonsuit and Directing New Trial—Appeal— Evidence for jury—Negligent setting out fire. Pareau v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 2 O. W. R. 872.

Findings of Jury-Contrary to Evidence -Costs.]-On the trial of an action for the delivery up and cancellation of an order given by the plaintiff in favour of the defendant D. upon the defendant S., as a means of avoiding a threatened arrest upon a charge of having been a participant in the blowing up of the de fendants' dam, the jury, in answer to several questions submitted to them, negatived the fact of plaintiff's complicity in the offence charged, and upon their finding a verdict was entered for the plaintiff. There being strong evidence to shew that the plaintiff, although not an actual participator in the offence charged, was conspiring with, and aiding and abetting, those by whom the dam was blown up; that he received sums of money from people in the neighbourhool which was used for the purchase of dynamite, to be used in blowing up the dam; and that, although not actually present at the time, he was in the vicinity, and knew all about the intentions of those by whom the act was committed :-Held, that the findings must be set aside, with costs to be paid by the plaintiff, and a new trial ordered. Moore v. Dickie, 33 N. S. Reps.

Ground for—Defence not Availed of.]—
If the defendant on the trial of a cause neglects to avail himself of a defence of which he was apprised, and which he could have then made if he had wished, it is not open to him to move for a new trial in order to make such defence. Kennedy Island Will Co. v. Mclareney, 36 N. B. Reps. 612.

Jurisdiction — Objection not Taken at Trial.]—Effect was given to an objection to the Judge's charge not taken at the trial, and a new trial ordered, but without costs. Wason v. Douglas, 21 Occ. N. 521, 1 O. W. R. 552.

Jury—Verdict—Setting Aside—Powers of Court in Bano—Nonsuit.]—Where the Court in bane set aside the verdict of the jury in favour of the plaintiffs: — Held, that the Court could not, under any of the Rules in the King's Bench Act, 58 & 59 V. c. 6, dismiss the action or enter a nonsuit or verdict for defendants in the face of the verdict of the jury. Rules 639, 640, and 642 discussed, jury. Rules 639, 640, and 642 discussed, Connecticut Mutual, &c., Co. v. Moore, 6 App. Cas. 644, and British Columbia Towing, &c., Co. v. Sewell, 9 S. C. R. 527, followed. New trial ordered without costs of former trial.

Costs of the application to be costs in the cause to the defendants in any event. Davidson v. Stuart, 14 Man. L. R. 74.

Motion for—Misconduct of Jurors—Contradictory Affidavits—Oral Examination before Court.]—Where one of the grounds in support of a motion for a new trial was that some of the jury had been tampered with, and the charge included the defendant's attorney, an officer of the Court, and a number of affidavits very contradictory and of an entirely irreconcilable nature were read, under the special circumstances of the case an order was made that the deponents should appear before the Court to be examined viva voce touching the matters in question. Wood v. Le Blanc, 36 N. B. Reps, 47.

Motion for—Notice of—Amendment—Appeal—Improper Admission of Evidence—Absence of Objection at Trial—Percerse Verdict.] — An amendment was allowed to a notice of appeal so as to ask expressly for a new trial, but only on the grounds stated in the notice of appeal. An amendment so as to set up the ground, not stated in the notice, of the improper admission of evidence taken on commission was refused, as it did not appear from the Judge's notes that objection was made at the trial, though the commissioner had noted the objection. A new trial on the ground that the verdict was perverse was refused. Edmonton v. Thompson, 1 Terr. L. R. 342.

Motion for—Practice—Service of Notice on Judge.]—See Lang v. Brown, 34 N. B. Reps. 492.

Order Directing—Appeal from — New trial pending appeal—No application to stay — Judgment. Webb v. Canadian General Electric Co., 2 O. W. R. 322, 865, 1113.

Restricting to Particular Issues — Jury.] — The jury brought in findings upon which the trial Judge was unable to enter judgment for either party. The plaintiff asked for a new trial on some of the issues not disposed of by the jury: the defendant on all the issues:—Held, that there must be a new trial on all the issues. This was not a proper case for limiting the new trial, as the jury might give answers on the issues not disposed of which might be inconsistent with the findings of the former jury. Irvine v. Parker, 24 Occ. N. 138.

Staying Proceedings — Appeal to Supreme Court of Canada — Special Circumstances.]—The Court has power, in its discretion, to stay the second trial of an action pending an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from the order directing a second trial, but the discretion should only be exercised where special circumstances are shewn by the applicant. No special circumstances being shewn, the decisions of the Master in Chambers, 7 O. L. R. 186, 24 Occ. N. 134, 3 O. W. R. 312, and of a Judge on appeal, refusing to stay the trial of these actions, were affirmed. Hockley v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., Davis v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. 311, 7 O. L. R. 658, 3 O. W. NORTH-WEST MOUNTED POLICE.

Constable - Discharge - Revocation -Authority of Superintendent - Descriton -Trial by Officers of Force - Jurisdiction . Prohibition.] -- A constable in the North-West Mounted Police, whose term of service would expire in six days, applied to the superinten-dent commanding the post for six days' leave of absence. The superintendent approved of the application, and appointed a board to verify and record the service of the constable, who delivered up his kit and signed a receipt in which it was stated that he had been settled with to the end of his term of service. The board made a favourable report, post-dating it six days, to the ordinary form of which were added the words, under the head of "Remarks of Board and Commissioner:" "term of service having expired he is dis-charged," The pass for the six days' leave of absence was issued but not delivered to the constable, and a cheque for the balance of his pay was being prepared, when the superinten-dent revoked the pass and ordered the con-stable to be notified that his pass had been revoked, the board's report cancelled, and the issue of the cheque for the balance of his pay refused; and he was ordered to continue in duty for the remaining six days of his term of service. The constable refused to obey the order to continue on duty, and absented himself from his quarters and duty, remaining absent without further leave. Proceedings for his arrest and trial under s. 18 of the Mounted Police Act, 1894, being about to be taken, a summons for a writ of prohibition was taken out :- Held, that the pass was revocable. (2) That the superintendent had authority to cancel proceedings of the board, and that such pass and proceedings having been cancelled, the constable was still a member of the fore: —Held, also, that, as the officers mentioned in s. 18 of the Mounted Police Act, 1894, had jurisdiction to try a constable on a charge of desertion, and it had not been established that they were disqualified by interest or bias, the writ of prohibition should not have been granted. In re Nettleship, 4 Terr. L. R. 148.

NOTARY.

Affidavit — Foreign Country.]—Seeing that the notary public mentioned in art. 20, C. P., refers to a notary public in England, an affidavit sworn before a notary public in a foreign country, not in England, cannot be used in the Courts of Quebec, and will be rejected on motion. Laurendeau v. Montlord, 7 Q. P. R. 37.

Authentic Acts — Signatures — Conventional Hypothec, I—Notaries are appointed to take all the acts to which parties ought or wish to give authenticity, and therefore they must be present during the whole of the execution of the Act. 2: An act which is not signed in the presence of a notary, or the signature to which is not acknowledged before him, is not an authentic act, and has not the effect of creating a conventional hypothec. Léveille v. Kauntz, 4 Q. P. R. 358.

Partnership—Investment of Money—Misappropriation—Liability of Partner.]—The members of a firm of notaries, practising as such in partnership, but also, by their sign, business cards, and advertisements, holding themselves out as real estate, insurance, and investment agents, are jointly and severally liable in respect of their transactions and joint and several liability exists to account for a sum of money which was intrusted to one member of the firm for investment, and, when repaid by the debtor, was not returned to the owner thereof. NOTICE OF ACTION.

Bailiff—Sale of Goods under Execution— Public Officer—Act of Omission.)—A bailiff in selling goods seized under an execution, is fulfilling public functions, and if he is sued for damages for what he has done in these circumstances, he has a right to the notice mentioned in art. 88, C. P. C. 2. A public officer has a right to this notice as well when he is sued for an act of omission as for an act of commission. Dion v. Richard, Q. R. 23 S. C. 403.

Churchwarden—Public Officer — Money Rileculus Speat — Damages,]— In this action the respondent was a churchwarden, and, therefore, a public officer within the meaning of art. 88, C. P. 2. The action, although it claimed from the respondent the repayment of certain sums which he had illegally spent in his capacity of churchwarden, was in fact an action for damages, and, therefore, the respondent had a right to the notice required by art. 88 C. P. Default of notice rendered the action premature. Bélanger v. Mercier, Q. B. 12 K. B. 428.

Defamation—Summary Dismissal of Action, —There were several defendants to the action, and different causes of action were alteged. As against one defendant, a company, the allegation was that it had multicously published and circulated a printed newspaper containing statements describing the goods manufactured by the plaintiffs as inferior, etc. A Judge in Chambers considered that the action as against the company was for libel, and dismissed it summarily because the notice of action required by s. 9 (2) of R. S. O. 1897 c. 98 was not given. A Divisional Court reversed this order, thinking it better to have the whole case disposed of at the trial, and allowed the plaintiffs to amend if they desired and the defendants to plead the want of notice. Gurney Foundry Co. x. Emmett, 7 O. L. R. 604, 3 O. W. R. 382, 554, 259.

Dominion Constable—Provincial Government Detective—Malice—Public Officer.]—A Government detective in the province of Quebec, appointed to that office under an order in council, who is at the same time a Dominion constable, having jurisdiction throughout the whole of Canada, is a public officer, and has a right to the month's notice mentioned in art. 88, C. P., of an action against him for damages on account of something done by him in the exercise of his public functions, unless it be alleged and proved that he has acted maliciously and in bad faith. McDonad v. McCaskill, 5 Q. P. R. 296.

False Imprisonment—Prace Officer—Honest Belief.]—In an action for talse imprisonment the defendant, acting as a peace officer under the Criminal Code, is entitled to notice of action under s. 976, if he homestly believed the plaintiff had committed a felony. The bona fides of the defendant's belief is a question of fact, and must be submitted to the jury, if any facts exist which could give rise to an honest belief. The reasonableness of the belief is not material. White v. Hamm, 36 N. B. Reps. 237.

Malicious Arrest — Municipal Officers.]
—An action for damages for unlawfully entering a man's house and maliciously arresting him, brought against a municipality and its constables, must be preceded by notice of action to the latter. Milton v, Municipality of Coté 8t. Paul, 6 Q. P. R. 407.

Police Officer—False Arrest.]—A police officer, sued for false arrest, is entitled to the notice of action prescribed by art. 88, C. P., where he made the arrest under instructions. Lefebvre v. Village of Verdun, 6 Q. P. R. 437.

School Commissioner—Public Officer.]

—A school commissioner is a public officer, who has a right to notice of action under art. 88. C. P., and the absence of such notice is fatal to an action against him. Carrière v. Jobin. 5 Q. P. R. 305.

Street Railway Company — Statute—Condition Precedent. — The obligation imposed upon creditors of the Montreal Street Railway Company to give notice of action, as required by the charter of the company, is not a prejudicial obligation suspending only the right of action of a planitiff; but it is an obligation prejudicial to the right of action itself, and a creditor cannot begin an action for damages without having given such a notice. Bourguignon v. Montreal Street R. W. Co., 6 Q. P. R. 232.

Damages-Refusal to Accept Conditional Renunciation — Costs on Appeal to Court Below — Costs of Enquête—Statutory Powers -Negligence.] - In an action for $15,000 damages occasioned by a nuisance to neighbouring property, the plaintiff recovered $3,000, assessed en bloc by the trial Court, without distinguishing between special damages suffered up to the date of action and ages salered at the date of action and damages claimed for permanent depreciation of the property. Before any appeal was in-stituted, the plaintiff filed a written offer to accept a reduction of $2,500, persisting merely in $410 for special damages to date of action, with costs, and reserving the right to claim all subsequent damages, including damages for permanent depreciation, but without admitting that the damages suffered up to the time of the action did not exceed the whole amount actually recovered. This offer whole amount actually recovered. This offer was refused by the defendants, as it did not affect the costs and contained reservations, and an appeal was taken by them, on which the Court of King's Bench, in allowing the appeal, reduced the amount of the judgment to $410, reserved to the plaintiff the right of action for subsequent special damages and damages for permanent depreciation, and gave full costs against the appellants, on the ground that they should have accepted the renunciation filed — Held, Dayles, J., dissenting, that the Court of King's Bench erred in holding that the defendants had no right to reject the conditional renunciation and in giving costs against the appellants; that the action should be dismissed as to the $2,590 with costs, and the reservation as to further action for depreciation disallowed; but that the judgment for $410 with costs as in an action of that class, with the reservation as to temporary damages accruing since the action, should be affirmed. As the costs at the enquête were considerably increased on account of the large amount of damages claimed, it was deemed advisable, in the circumstances, to order that each party should pay their own costs thus incurred:—Held, also, that, although the nuisance complained of was caused by the defendants acting under rights secured to them by special statute, yet, as there was negligence found against them with evidence sufficient to support that finding, the maxim sic utere tuo ut alienum non lodas applied, and that the powers granted by their special charter did not excuse them from liability. Drain — Discharge of Hot Water and Stem into—Liability.]—The defendants connected a drain leading from their premises with a private drain constructed by the plaintiff. Hot water and steam, originating on the defendants' premises and passing into the defendants' premises and passing into the defendants' premises and passing into the drain, flowed back through the plaintiff's drain, and overflowed his cellar, and filled his house with steam:—Held, following

Electric Power Company—Authorization by Legislature—Injury to Neighbouring Properties — Vibration.] — The fact that a company has been authorized by the legislature to carry on a certain manufacture does not render it free from the legal obligation to repair the injury which the carrying on causes to the neighbouring properties. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Roy. Q. K. 9 Q. B. 551, followed. 2. When the carrying on of a manufacture, even in a manufacture; causes to the neighbouring properties an injury which goes beyond the ordinary disadvantages of the neighbourhood—for example, by the vibration caused by powerful machines and by the smoke charged with soot which escapes from the furnaces—the person carrying on such manufacture is bound to make compensation for the injury. Montreal Street R. W. Co. v. Gareau, 21 Occ. N. 128, Q. R. 10 K. B. 417.

Electric Power Company—Erection of Power House—Injury to Land Adjoining — Vibration — Injunction—Damages.] — An electric power company by the working of their engines caused so much vibration in the land adjoining that on which the paintiff's house was built as to render it at times almost uninhabitable, though no actual structural injury was shewn to have taken place. The company was incorporated under the Ontario Companies Act, for the purpose of manufacturing, etc., electric power, and to purchase and hold lands to be used in the business, with authority under R. S. O. c. 200, s. 3, to construct, maintain, complete, and operate works for the production, etc., of electricity. But the company had no compulsory power to take lands; and no oppor-tunity had been afforded the plaintiff, as there would have been in such case, of objecting to the location of their works, etc. Moreover, the company were under no compulsion to exercise their powers, nor was any compensation provided, under the statutes relating to them, for any injury done by such exercise:—Held, that the company were entitled only to exercise their powers in such a way as not to create a nuisance, and the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction and a reference as to damages. 2. Although the defendants had by their private Act incorporated therein certain sections of the Ontario Railway Act, relating to expropriation, they were not entitled to protection, because no map or book of reference had been de-posited. Hopkin v. Hamilton Electric Light and Cataract Power Co., 21 Occ. N. 440, 2 O. L. R. 240.

Electric Railway — Vibration, Smoke, and Noise—Injury to Adjoining Property — Evidence—Assessment of Damages—Reversal on Questions of Fact - Appeal.] - Notwithstanding the privileges conferred upon an electric street railway company for the construction and operation of an electric tramway upon the public thoroughfares of a city by its Act of incorporation, the company is responsible in damages to the owners of property adjoining its power house for any structural injuries caused by the vibrations produced by its machinery and the diminution of rentals and value thereby occasioned. Drysdale v. Dugas, 26 S. C. R. 20, followed. In an action by the owner of adjoining property for damages thus caused, the evidence was contradictory, and the Courts below gave effect to the testimony of scientific witnesses in preference to that of persons acquainted with the locality:—Held, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that, notwithstanding the concurrent findings of the Courts below, as the witnesses were equally credible, the evidence of those who spoke from personal knowledge of the facts ought to have been preferred to that of persons giving opinions based merely upon scientific observations. In reversing the judgment appealed from the Supreme Court deemed it expedient, in the interest of both parties. to assess damages, once for all, at an amount deemed sufficient to indemnify the plaintiff for all injuries, past, present, and future, resulting from the nuisance complained of, should she elect to accept the amount so estimated in full satisfaction thereof; otherwise the record to be transmitted to the trial Court to have the amount of damages determined.

Gareau v. Montreal Street R. W. Co., 22 Occ.
N. 4, 31 S. C. R. 463.

Erection of Building-Obstruction of View-Enforcement of Fire By-law - In-junction.]—The plaintiff by injunction sought to prevent the completion of a warehouse which the defendant was erecting on ground leased by him from a railway company, belawn of a property owned and occupied by the plaintiff as a dwelling in the city of Winnipeg. On the other side of the right of way was a strip of land, owned by the defendant, sloping down to the Red river. The warehouse was situated directly between the plaintiff's house and the river and would obstruct the plaintiff's view of the river. It was being constructed of wood in contravention of the fire limit by-law of the city : Held, that the plaintiff had no right to the unobstructed view of the river. 2. That the plaintiff had no right to enforce the fire limit by-law by injunction, as it was a by-law passed for the protection of the general public and providing for a penalty in case of its infringement, and there was no evidence to shew that the risk of fire to the plaintiff's property would be specially increased by the construction of the warehouse. Atkin Newcastle, 2 Ex. D. 441, followed. Atkinson v. plaintiff further urged that the construction and intended use of the warehouse would create a nuisance to her, which she was en-titled to have prevented by an injunction, and gave some evidence as to the use by tramps and others of the vacant ground on the side of the warehouse next her property, causing unpleasant smells, but it was not shewn that the defendant was lessee or occupant of that vacant ground :--Held, that there was not sufficient evidence to entitle the plaintiff to an injunction on the ground of nuisance. McBean v. Wyllie, 22 Occ. N. 270, 14 Man. L. R. 135.

Factory—Neighbouring Office — Acquisition of Rights.]—A person who reuts an office in a building near an industrial establishment must bear the inconvenience which results from the normal exercise of the industry, especially when the establishment existed and carried on its industry in the same manner before the construction of the building in which such person has rented an office. Jones v. McCleary Mig. Co., Q. R. 18 S. C. 130.

Factory—Noxious Odonrs—Municipal Bylawe—Extra-territorial Froe—Municipal Coporation—Right to Compel Abadement.]—A by-law of a mulicipal corporation imposing a penalty for sending out smoke and noxious odours, has no force outside of the limits of the municipality, and such penalty cannot be enforced against a person carrying on a manifacturing business in an adjoining municipality; but, in the present case, the plaintiffs under s. 34 of their charter, 69 V. c. 63 (Q), had a right of action to "prohibit" (faire cesser) any person from allowing emnnations of smoke or unwholesome odours. even when the establishments objected to were in adjacent municipalities, if such municipalities, refused or neglected to abute the nulsances. Town of 8t. Paul v. Cook, Q, R, 22 S, C. 498.

Factory - Slaughter-house - Injury to Neighbours.] — The plaintiff purchased a house in the neighbourhood of a tannery which had been carried on for many years by the defendants' predecessors and himself. The locality was also largely occupied by other manufacturing establishments. The plaintiff alleged damage by the smoke, smell, and moisture emanating from the defendants' tannery. The odour was not proved to be unsanitary. Other residents in the immediate neighbourhood testified that they did not find the smoke or smell specially objectionable. It also appeared that the plaintiff had used his own property for years as a slaughter-house:—Held, following Carpentier v. Ville de Maisonneuve, Q. R. 11 8, C. 242, that neighbours are obliged to endure the reasonable inconveniences which result from neighbourhood. These inconveniences vary in kind and in extent according to the circumstances of place, and quality of the population, and must be reduced by the care and prudence of neighbours to the lowest possible limit; but under the circumstances above stated the limit had not been exceeded in the present case, especially in view of the facts that the locality was largely occupied by manufacturing industries, that the defendants' occupancy preceded that of the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff had used his own premises as a slaughter-house. Cusson v. Galibert, Q. R. 22 S. C. 493.

Factory—Smoke, Vibration, and Noise-Rights of Neighbours—Operation of Works-Authorization by Statute—Damages.]—The defendants operated a system of waterworks for the supply of water to several municipalities, including the town of Westmoust. In this town, in a neighbourhood entirely residential, it constructed a pumping plant operated first by steam, and later by electricity. The plaintiff, proprietor and occupant of an adjoining property for many years before the construction of the defendants works, complained of the smoke, vibration and noised caused thereby, more especially

The defendants being free to select the site for their works, the principle laid down by the Privy Council in Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Roy, [1902] A. C. 220, with respect to damage caused by sparks from locomotives, did not apply, and defendants were responsible for damage caused to neighbours just as any manufacturing firm incorporated by letters patent would be responsible. 3. Home Drains—Damage to Neighbour's Premises.]—The plaintiff and defendants were owners of adjoining buildings. The drains from both ran to a street, where they entered a box drain constructed by the town. The defendants allowed hot water and steam to pass into their drain. The hot water and steam do had seam did not pass away, but flowed back into the plaintiff scellar, and the plaintiff sued for damages thereby caused. The defendants set up that the damage was caused by a stoppage in the public drain:—Held, following Fuller v. Pearson, 23 N. B. Reps, 263, 21 S. C. R. 337, and Humphreys v. Cousins, I. R. 2 C. P. 239, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Andrews v. Cape Breton Electric Co., 24 Occ. N. 237.

Injury to Farm by Sewage-Municipal Corporation-Fouling Natural Stream-Damages.]—The defendants, a municipal corporation, were held liable to the plaintiffs for damages sustained by reason of sewage matter brought upon the plaintiffs' land by a creek which received the outflow from a sewage farm operated by the defendants, and also for anthrax germs brought upon the plaintiffs' land by reason of the defendants' sewage system. The defendants, though authorized by the Municipal Act to undertake and carry out the works, were not authorized to do so in such a way as to cause a nuisance or to injure other persons. Having given leave to the tanneries from which the anthrax germs came to connect with their system of sewers, the defendants were responsible for the result. Although they had forbidden the throwing of the refuse from which the germs were believed to come, into the sewer, they were not relieved from liability, because they had the power, and had not exercised it, of enforcing the prohibition by stopping the connection. The elements of damage in such a case were considered, and damages were assessed for the loss of an atland which died from anthrax, for the value of laudis rendered worthless by anthrax, and interest thereon, for permanent impairment of the value of other lands, for the value of additional fencing to keep cattle from the infected water, for loss of pasture, and for pollution of the air in and about a dwelling-house. The acts of the defendants having had the natural effect of giving rise to an apprehension which had destroyed the value of the plaintiffs' property, the defendants were held liable to make the loss good. Weber v. Town of Berlin, 24 Occ. N. 371, 8 O. L. R. 302, 3 O. W. R. 812.

Interim Injunction—Application before Writ of Summons Issued — Machinery — Noise and Vibration—Statutory Duty.]—The respondents installed an electric pump, in a building belonging to them in a strictly residential neighbourhood, for the purpose or supplementing their plant for pumping water to the high level reservoir of the city. The operation of this electric pump produced noise and vibration, which affected the health and comfort of the petitioner's family and rendered his residence unfit for private occupation. It appeared that prior to the in-stallation of the electric pump, the work of pumping water to the high level reservoir was done wholly by steam pumps without noise or vibration, whereas the operation of the electric pump caused both noise and vibration over a wide neighbourhood. It also appeared that, from motives of economy, the electric pump was to be used during the night time. An interlocutory injunction was prayed for:—Held, that the existence of a writ of summons is not essential to the procurement of an interlocutory order of in-junction. Hart v. Rainville, Q. R. 15 S. C. 17, followed. 2. Whether the electric pump had been accepted by the respondents from the manufacturer or not, could not affect the petitioner's rights. 3. A nuisance, whether public or private, is, speaking generally, cause for an injunction. But with respect to a private nuisance, the petitioner for redress must suffer some special, direct, substantial, or irreparable damage, over and above the general damage sustained by the rest of the public. 4. A nuisance such as the present is ground for injunction, and for an interlocutory order as well, inasmuch as a denial of this remedy would compel the petitioner and other sufferers to resort to a multiplicity of suits, without obtaining the cessation of the grievance, or adequate compensation, 5. The statutory duty of the respondents to supply citizens with water and to provide water for fire purposes, does not affect the right to an injunction against a particular mode of pumping, not shewn to be indispensable, but which, on the contrary, may be replaced by other methods of doing the same work without damage to neighbours, Adami v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 25 S. C. 1.

Interim Injunction—Tenants of Rooms in same Building—Noise—Reasonable use of Premises.]—The defendant hired rooms in a building in a business part of the city for the purpose of giving music lessons, put up his sign, and gave lessons on the mandolin to over 200 pupils between the hours of 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. On a motion for an injunction by an occupier of rooms on the opposite side of the hall in the same building. who had taken his rooms subsequently, to restrain the defendant from giving lessons, on the ground that the noise was a nuisance: -Held, on the evidence, that the noise to which objection was taken was reasonably connected with and incidental to the teaching; that the defendant's use of the premises was not an unreasonable one; and that to offend against the law, the teaching of music in such premises must be done in a manner which beyond fair controversy ought to be regarded as unreasonable; that an injunction would break up the defendant's business, and it would be better that the plaintiff should be compensated in damages if he was entitled to recover; and the injunction was refused. Machinery—Continuing Nuisance — Permanent Injury—Damages — Prescription.]—Where injuries caused by the operation of machinery have resulted from the unskilful or negligent exercise of powers conferred by public authorities and the nuisance thereby rerated gives rise to a continuous series of torts, the action accruing in consequence falls within the provisions of art. 2261, C.C., and is prescribed by the lapse of two years from the date of the occurrence of each successive tort. Wordsworth v. Harley, 1 B. & Ad. 391, Lord Oakley v. Kensington Canal Co., 5 B. & Ad. 138, and Whitehouse v. Fellowes, 10 C. B. N. S. 755, referred to. In the present case the permanent character of the damages so caused could not be assumed from the manner in which the works had been constructed, and, as the nuisance might, at any time, be abated by the improvement of the system of operation or the discontinuance of the negligent acts complained of, prospective damages ought not to be allowed, nor could the assessment in a lump sum of damages past, present, and future, in order to prevent successive litigation, be justified upon grounds of equity or public interest. Fritz v. Hobson, 15 Ch. D. 452, referred to. Gareau v. Montreal Street R. W. Co., 31 S. C. R. 463, distinguished. Montreal Street R. W. Co., 31 S. C. R. 329.

Smoke, Noise, and Vibration—Veighbouring Proprietor—Company—Charter Authorizing Works—Right to Recover—Damages—Reduction on Appeal,]—The appellants operated a system of waterworks for the supply of water to several municipalities, including the town of Westmount. In this town, in a section entirely residential, the appellants receted a pump station and installed a pumping plant, operated for some years wholly by steam, but later chiefly by electricity. The respondent, proprietor and occupier of a property adjacent to the pump station, for many years before the erection of the appellant's works, claimed damages by reason of the smoke, noise, and vibration of the smoke, noise, and vibration caused by the operation of the works, more especially of noise and vibration since the installation of an electric motor plant:— Held, affirming the judgment of the Superior Court, Q. R. 23 S. C. 141, that the fact that the appellants were authorized by their charter to carry on the business of supplying water, and to use steam and electricity for such purpose, did not exempt them from the such purpose, the not exempt them from the legal obligation of indemnifying neighbour-ing preprietors for the damage occasioned by the operation of their works. 2. The appellants being free to select the site for their works, the principle laid down by the Privy Council, in Canadian Pacific Railway Co. Roy, [1902] A. C. 220, Q. R. 12 K. B. 543, with respect to damage caused by the operation of a railway, did not apply, and the appellants were responsible for the damage caused to adjacent proprietors by their works. 3. The respondents having tendered a part renunciation of the judgment, as to permanent depreciation in the value of her property the judgment of the first Court was reduced in appeal to the damages suffered by her prior to the institution of her action. Mon-treal Water and Power Co. v. Davie. O. R. 13 K. B. 448.

Trespass-Railway - Continuing Damage. |-In 1888 the defendants ran their line through Britannia terrace, a street in Otta-wa, in connection with which they built an embankment and raised the level of the street. In 1895 the plaintiffs became owners of land on that street, on which they had since carried on their foundry business. In 1900 they brought an action against the defendants. alleging that the embankment was built and level raised unlawfully and without authority and claiming damages for the flooding of their premises and obstruction to the egress in consequence of such work:—Held. that the trespass and nuisance (if any) complained of were committed in 1088, and the then owner of the property might have brought an action, in which the damages would have been assessed once for all. right of action being barred by lapse of time since the plaintiffs' action was brought, the latter could not be maintained. Chaudiers Machine Co. v. Canada Atlantic R. W. Co.. 23 Occ. N. 80, 33 S. C. R. 11.

Vibration, Smoke, and Soot — Conpany—Authority to Carry on Enterprise — Immunity from Consequences—Damages.]—
The fact that a company are authorized by the legislature to carry on a particular enterprise, does not render them innume from the legal obligation to indemnify neighbouring property owners against the injury which the carrying on of the enterprise has occsioned them. When the carrying on of such an enterprise, even in a manufacturing district, causes Inconvenience to neighbouring property owners, more than is ordinarily suffered by them, for example, by causing vibration by heavy machinery and by the discharge of smoke and soot from furnaces—he who carries on such an enterprise must make good the damage which he has occasioned.
Montreal Street R. W. Co. v. Gareau, 31 S.

is of a permanent nature, the damages may

OPPOSITION.

Affidavit—Attorney of Opposant—Frivolous Opposition.] — The deposition which should accompany an opposition, pursuant to art. 647, C. P., may be sworn to by the attorney of the opposant, if he has a personal knowledge of the facts alleged. 2. An opposition will not be dismissed as frivolous, upon motion under art. 651, C. P., upon the ground that the price agreed upon for the purchase of the land in question by the vendor of the opposant is not indicated in the opposition and does not appear to have been really paid. Savard v. Bertrand, 3 Q. P. R. 498.

Affidavit—Denial of Unjust Delay,]—An affidavit, made in support of an opposition, in which it is not stated "that the opposition is not made with the object of delaying unjustly the sale, but of obtaining justice," is insufficient and illegal. Bourgouin v. Pelleticr, Q. R. 24 S. C. 473.

Amendment—Affidavit.]—An amendment to an opposition will not be allowed, because, the opposition being sworn to, the amendment would have the effect of introducing into the opposition a new allegation which would not be supported by affidavit. Farand v. Emond, 4 Q. P. R. 312.

Contested Cause — Admission.] — An opposition to a judgment cannot be maintained where the judgment was rendered in a contested cause, more especially where it appears from the opposition itself that a part at least of the plaintiff's claim was well founded. Robertson v. Prossor, 3 Q. P. R. 351.

Defence—Time for Filing—Order of Judge—Reacission.]—An opposition to a judgment is a defence to the action, and will be dismissed upon inscription en droit if there is nothing in the affidavit to shew that the opposant has been hindered from filing his defence within the proper time: Ross v. Dawson, Mont. L. R. 2 S. C, 361. 2. The leave of a Judge to file an opposition to a judgment is only an order of procedure, and is subject to rescission: Hamilton v. Bourassa, Q. R. 5 S. C, 407. Martineau v. Lacroix, 3 Q. P. R, 432.

Dismissal—Frivolity—Conditional Gift.]
—An opposition stating that the effects seized were given to the opposant absolutely, but on condition that they should be returned to the donor or his heirs, should the done predecease without descendants, is frivolous and will be dismissed on motion. Fenoglio v. Oucliette, 7 Q. P. R. 158.

Examination of Opposant — Motion for.]—A motion merely for the examination of the opposant, and not seeking the dismissal of the opposition after such examination, will not be granted. Hopue v. McConnell, 3 Q. P. R. 387. Cf. Bouchard v. Ouellette, 2 Q. P. R. 253.

Examination of Opposant — Wife of Debtor—Old Code of Procedure,]—The examination of an opposant, being the wife of the debtor separate, as to property, may be ordered if the opposition makes no distinction between the goods which her husband possessed at the time of the marriage and those which have been acquired since. 2. The examination of the opposant may be allowed upon opposition commenced under the old Code of Procedure. Préfontaine v. Dorval, 5 Q. P. R. 374.

Husband and Wife — Amendment—Resuccaring,1—An opposition to judgment made by the husband (commun en biens) of the defendant is regular. 2. The opposant may add an allegation to his opposition, by mendment, without leave of the Judge, even after it has been sworn to and received by the Judge, provided that the amendment be also sworn to. Dion v. Dionne, 3 Q. P. R. 497.

Interpellation — Service — Domicil.] —
The Court will not dismiss upon motion an opposition to a sale of immovables based upon the fact that the interpellation required by art. 705, C. P., has been made upon a grown-up person in the family of the debtor, without naming such person, if it appears that the interpellation was made at the domicil of the debtor. Jetté v. Désaulniers, 5 Q. P. R. 437.

Judgment for Partition—Sale by Licitation—Time—Purchaser at Sheriff's Sale—Sheriff—Execution—Trepularity.]—1. A proceeding by which a party opposes judgments declaring the parties to an action for partition, proprietors of a certain immovable property, and ordering the same to be sold by licitation, alleging that he is the owner of the undivided half said to belong to the defendant, and that the plaintiff's half is now under seizure at the instance of one of his judgment creditors, is a tierce-opposition, and is not subject to the delay fixed by art. 1050, C. P. 2. A purchaser of part of an immovable, at sheriff's sale, becomes proprietor thereof, by the fact of the adjudication, and may oppose judgments rendered in an action for partition of that immovable, to which he is not a party, although at the time of the institution of the action, he had not paid the purchase price, and was not registered as owner. 3. Although the writ of execution had been returned into Court by the sheriff, and was not resisted to him, a deed given by him to the purchaser, upon payment of the price, will not be set aside as irregular; especially if the party invoking such irregularity shews no interest in doing so. 4. A tierce-opposition need not attack the legality of the proceedings which led to the judgment complained of. Stanbridge, v, Stanbridge, 5 Q. P. R. 140.

Motion to Reject—Examination of Opposont—Cross-examination, 1— Counsel for the opposant may cross-question the latter on an examination had after the launching of a motion under art, 651, C. P., to strike out the opposition. Renaud v. Vaillancourt, 7 Q. P. R. 30.

Notice of Contestation—Filing of Copy Galty.]—A notice of contestation on opposition will not be set aside because at the time of service only a copy of the opposition was filed, the original having since been filed. Leclaire v. Payette, 7 Q. P. R. 44.

Notice of Contesting—Neglect to File— Irregularity—Motion.]—A party cannot by motion ask to have a proceeding in an action set aside, the proceeding in this case being a notice of contesting an opposition, served but not filed; the only proper motion would be one for dismissal. Fortin v. Drouin, 5 Q. P. R. 282.

Notice of Sale—Guardian.]—An opposition & fin d'annuier based upon the want of notice of sale to a guardian will not be dismissed upon motion as frivolous. Idler v. Lanthier, 5 Q. P. R. 294.

Notice to Contestants—Time—Return— Service.]—The opposary on the 1th Aussi served on the plaintiff and others a notice that his opposition had been returned into Court and that if they wished to contest if they must do so within 12 days of the service of this notice. At the time of the service the opposition had not been returned, and was not until the 29th August. On motion of the plaintiff the notice was set aside. Chaleper v. Warnecke, 6 Q. P. R. 421.

Opposition a Fin D'annuler — Frivolous Ground — Delay.]—An opposition à fin d'annuler, alleging that the defendant-opposant does not bear the name under which he is sued, will be dismissed upon motion as being made with the object of unjustly delaying the sale of the goods seized. Masson v. Teller, 5 Q. P. R. 411.

Labelle v. Hyde, 5 Q. P. R. 406.

Sale of Land — Description — Error — Particulars.]—An opposition to a sale of immovables, which alleges simply that they are erroneously described, without saying in what respect the description is erroneous, is frivolous, and will be dismissed on motion. Phillips v St. Jean, 3 Q. P. R. 440.

Sale of Land-Opposition to Secure Ser-Sale of Land—Opposition to Secure Servitude—Way-Plan-Kegisiry Laus.]—The F. estate sold to T. two blocks of land, for $85,945, part of which T. paid in cash, and the vendor retained a bailleur de fonds claim for the balance,—the hypothec being restricted to fifty cents per foot of the land so sold. T. caused to be made and registered a plan subdividing the two blocks of land into building lots, and also indicating the proposed extension of a street, and of two lanes, through the land. These building lots he subsequently sold to various persons, granting them a servitude of right of passage over the projected street extension and over the lanes. H. purchased the bailleur de fonds claim from the F. estate, and was subrogated in all the rights of that estate. T., having become insolvent, made an abandonment of his property for the benefit of his creditors, and C. was appointed curator of the estate. The city of Montreal refused to carry out the proposed extension of the street, and the result was that the lots sold by T., and on which buildings had been erected, fronted on portions of the land covered by the hypothec of H. H. petitioned for an order upon the curator, for the sale by the sheriff in ordinary course of the land subject to his hypothec. The petition was granted, and the sheriff seized and advertised for sale four lots, being parts of the projected extension of the street, and also parts of lanes. Five oppositions to the sale were filed by persons whose rights of passage would be interfered with by the proposed sale:—Held, that the opposition, being an opposition to secure a servitude, was, under art. 725 C. C. P., unnecessary and inadmissible. Masson v. P., unnecessary and inadmissible. M. Hatton (No. 1), Q. R. 19 S. C. 218.

Sale of Land—Ordre de Sursis—Former Judgment—Effect of—Sherif,] — The Court of Review confirmed a judgment of the Superior Court which dismissed several oppositions by different persons, to secure an alleged servitude of right of passage, but, as the oppositions were dismissed by the majority of the Court, on the ground that an opposition afin de charge to secure a servitude is prohibited by the Code of Procedure, art. 725, the recourse of the opposants by opposition to annul, or such other procedure as might be advised, was reserved. The opposants now asked for an ordre de sursis:—Held, that the opposants having urged no reasons subsequent to the proceedings by which the sale was stopped in the first instance, the Court was precluded by art. 654, C. C. P., from granting the order asked for; and it was not within the jurisdiction of the Court to express an opinion for the guidance of the sheriff as to the effect of the judgment of the Court of Review. Masson v. Hatton (No. 2), Q. R. 19 S. C. 254.

Sale of Land — Reasons for — Former Judyment—Reservation in.]—In a judyment of the Court of Review, confirming the dispositif of the judyment of the Court below dismissing on opposition, the following clause was inserted:—"Sauf recours par telle autre opposition on procedure qu'ils aviseront, mais qu'ils ont adopté n'est pas celle qui leur les délais, vu que l'opposition afin de charge qu'ils ont adopté n'est pas celle qui leur compétait, et qu'ils paraissent avoir des droits à sauvegarder." The opposants then made an opposition afin de distraire, which the petitioner-intervenant moved be rejected from the record:—Held, that the opposition, being founded upon reasons which were not subsequent to the proceeding by which the sale was stopped in the first instance, and there being no Judge's order to stop the sale, was without effect under art. 654, C. C. P., and should be rejected from the record, not-withstanding the reservation contained in the judgment of the Court of Review. Masson v. Hatton (No. 3), Q. R. 19 S. C. 256.

Sale of Land—Unregistered Lease for a Year.]—A lease for a year, not registered, affords no ground for an opposition Afin de charge by the lessee with respect to a sale of the demised premises. Lantaigne v. Kelling, 5 Q. P. R. 101.

Sale of Land by Hypothecary Creditor—Opposition à Fin de Charge—Security for Realization.]—An hypothecary creditor who puts up for sale immovable property, may demand by motion that the tenant, who makes an opposition à fin de charge based upon his lease, shall furnish security that the immovable will be sold for a sum sufficient to assure the complete payment of the debt. Trust and Loan Co. v. Charlebois, 5 Q. P. R. 365.

Solicitor—Election of Domicil—Default—Motion—Costs—Amendment—Time.] — By virtue of Rule 63 of the Rules of Practice of the Superior Court, an opposition signed by an attorney who has not elected a domicil pursuant to art. 85, C. P., may be set aside upon motion, but if the applicant has suffered no prejudice, the Court will grant the motion as regards costs only, and will order that an election of domicil be made, and the time fixed by art. 650 for contesting on opposition, if the notice therein mentioned has been given, will be extended until 12 days after the service of notice of such election. Evidence of — Canvassers — Speakers — Relatives—Scrutineers.]—The following were held to be agents:—One who accompanied the respondent on a canvassing trip during which he spent a day canvassing for the respondent and spoke on his behalf at an election meeting at which the respondent was also present and spoke. One who accompanied the respondent on a canvassing trip, acting as interpreter (the respondent being under the impression that he was one of his supporters), and actually worked and canvassed for him with his authority. The son of the respondent, who took an active interest in the election on behalf of the respondent with his knowledge, acted as sc.utineer, and was furnished with a sum of money by the respondent when leaving for the polling place at which he was to act. Leblanc v. Maloney, 5 Terr, L. R. 402.

Proof of.]-The respondent was the can-Proof of.,—The respondent was the candidate of the Protestant Protective Association and of the Patrons of Industry. D. was president of the local Conservative Association for a town in the riding. After R., who was a candidate in the Liberal interest—though an opponent of B., the nominee of the Liberal party—had withdrawn, D. canvassed two or three votes in the interest of the respondent, to whom he transferred his support, probably in order to defeat B. There was one interview between D, and the respondent during the campaign, but it was not shewn clearly that the latter, or any accredited agent of his, knew that D, was working for him. The respondent was not called as a witness on this point, but there was no doubt that he relied on having the votes of the Conservatives. There was no Conservative committee, and D. did not attend the respondent's committee b, do not attend the respondent's committee meetings. The evidence of one witness, if accepted in its entirety, would have brought agency home very closely, but it was contradicted by D. It also appeared that D. knew where to send a person to obtain a scrutineer's authority:—Heid, that there was much to raise a case of suspicion, but in a question of imputed agency the facts ought to lead to a not doubtful inference; and in this case they stopped short of that, and therefore D. was not an agent for whose acts the candidate was responsible. In re South Perth Provincial Election—Malcolm v. McNeill, 2 Elec.

Proof of.)—As to the agency of L., who had bribed two voters, it appeared that the respondent was brought into the field as the candidate of his party, having been nominated at a convention of the party association for the electoral district; L. was not a delegate to, nor was he bresent at, the convention; and he was not upon the evidence connected with the association or its officers; he was not brought into touch with the candidate, or any proved agents of his, either as regards knowledge of the fact that he was working or purporting to work on behalf of the candidate, or as regards any actual authority conferred upon him to do so. But he was present at three meetings of electors when the voters' list was gone over; he acted as chairman of a public meeting called in the respondent's interest; he canvassed some voters; and from his antecedents, the respondent hoped or believed or expected that he would be an active supporter:—Held, by the Court of Appeal, Boyd, C., dissenting, affirming the decision of the trial Judges, that L. was not an agent of the respondent. Haldimand Case, 1 Elec. Cas. 572, distinguished. In re East Elgin Provincial Election—Easton v. Brower, 21 Occ. N. 10, 2 Elec. Cas. 100.

Proof of. !- As to the agency of T., who had been found guilty of a corrupt practice, it appeared that he was one of the local vice-presidents of the party association above referred to; he had been present at two meetings of local party men calling themselves a "Conservative Club," who were interesting themselves in the election, and had contributed towards the cost of hiring the club room; at these meetings he had gone over the voters list with others, which was the only work done; at a meeting held by the respondent in the place where T. lived, he had presided, having been elected chairman by the audience, and had made a speech introducing and commending the respondent; before the meeting he had met the respondent in the street, had shaken hands with him, and asked him how things were going. The respondent did not know that T, was local vice-president, and had never heard of the "Conservative Club," T. was not a delegate to the nominating convention nor present thereat. The association, as such, was not charged with any detion, as such, was not charged with any definite duty in connection with the election except the selection of a candidate:—Held, reversing the decision of the trial Judges, Burton, C.J.O., and Maclennan, J.A., dissenting, that T. was an agent of the respondent. What Constitutes—Authority — Recognition—Delegates to Convention—Canvassa; — —Accompanying Candidate in Canvass.] — See In re Lisgar Dominion Election, 22 Occ. N. 433, 14 Man. L. R. 310.

What Constitutes Agency.]-As to the nature of agency in the abstract, in election law there does not now seem to be any room for doubt. In election cases, as in other cases, there must be authority in some mode or other from the supposed principal. may be by express appointment or direction, or employment, or request, or it may be by recognition and adoption of the services of one assuming to act without prior authority or request. It may be directly shewn or it may be inferred from circumstances. It may proceed directly from the supposed principal, or it may be created indirectly through one or more authorized agents. The fact that a person is a delegate to or member of the convention or body which selects a candidate does not of itself make such a person an agent of the chosen candidate. Canvassing or other work in the promotion of an election does not per se establish agency, although, according to degree and circumstances, it may afford cogent evidence of agency. The respondent was nominated at a meeting of delegates from different portions of the con-The respondent did not appear stituency. to have definitely requested the assistance of these delegates in the contest, but at a general public meeting, after the close of the convention, he expressed hope "that all his friends would go to work with a good will;" the respondent further stated that he wished it understood that he expected the delegates to assist at the election:—Held, that these and other general remarks did not seem sufficient to constitute all supporters of the Government or all Liberals, or even all such in the constituency, agents of the candidate. Accompanying a candidate in his canvass is not sufficient in itself to constitute agency. In re Lisgur Dominion Election, 22 Occ. N. 4322

II. BALLOT PAPERS.

Divisions of—Error in Printing—Uncertainty.]—Where a surname of a candidate had been printed so high up in the ballot paper as to appear in the division containing the name of another candidate and to lead to uncertainty as to which of the two candidates divisions it was in:—Held, that the votes marked opposite to such surname were ambiguous, and could not be counted for either candidate; and a new election was ordered. In re South Perth Pronicial Election—Schoultz v. Moscrip, 2 Elec. Cas. 52.

Initialling by Deputy Returning Officer—Numbers—Marking by Voters.]—A ballot paper properly marked by a voter, but not initialled by the deputy returning officer, having instead the initials C. S., which appeared to be and were assumed to be, those of the poll clerk, held good. 2. A ballot from which the official number was torn off, no explanation being given as to how it happened, held bad. 3. Ballots marked with a single horizontal or slanting line, instead of a cross, or with an imperfect cross, held good, following Jenkins v, Brecken, 7 S. C. R. 247. 4. Ballots marked for a candidate, but having; (1) the word "vote" written after his name; (2) having the word "Jos." being an abbreviation of the candidate's Christian name, written before his name; (3) having the candidate's surname written on the ballot—held, bad. In re West Huron Provincial Election—Garrow v. Beck, 18 Occ. N. 247, 2 Elec. Cas. 68.

Marking of-Division of - Portion Removed.]-If a ballot paper is so marked that no one looking at it can have any doubt for which candidate the vote was intended, and if there has been a compliance with the provisions of the Act, according to any fair and reasonable construction of it, the vote should be allowed. 2. The dividing lines on the ballot between the names of the candidates, and not the lines between the numbers and the names, indicate the divisions within which the voter's cross should be placed, and the space containing the number is part of the division of the ballot containing the candidate's name, so that a vote marked by a cross to the left of the line between the number and the name is good. 3. A ballot from which a portion of the blank part on the right hand side has been removed, leaving all the printed matter except a portion of the lines separating the names, but properly marked by the voter, is good. 4. Ballots marked for both candidates, and a ballot marked on the back, although over a can-didate's name, are bad. 5. Ballots with other marks on them besides a cross, held good or bad under the circumstances of each case set out in the report. 6. A ballot having the name of a candidate marked on its face in pencil, in addition to being properly marked for that candidate, held good. 7. A ballot with two initials on the back as well as those of the returning officer, held good. 8. A ballot with the name of a voter on the back, held bad. 9. Ballots with certain peculiar crosses marked thereon, held, good. In re West Elgin Provincial Election, 18 Occ. N. 249. 2 Elec. Cas. 38.

Numbering by Deputy Returning Officer—Numbers Leading to Identification of Voters—Rejection of Ballots — Voiding Election Costs.]—The deputy returning officer placed numbers on the ballot papers by which the voters could be identified:—Held, the prohibition contained in the Dominion Election Act, 63 & 64 V. c. 12, s. 80, s. s. 2 (D.) applied, and such ballots must be rejected. Woodward v. Sarsons, L. R. 10 C. P. 753, applied, and a new trial was ordered, there being a sufficient number of ballots rejected to have altered the result of the election. In re Wentworth Dominion Election—Scaley v. Smith, 5 O. W. R. 282, 9 O. L. R. 201.

Numbering by Deputy Returning Officers—Marking by Voters—Divisions of Ballot Paper—Error in Printing — Uncertainty.]—The fact that a number has been placed on the back of each ballot paper in a voting sub-division, in pencil, by the deputy returning officer, will not invalidate them. 2. The fact that the cross is marked in the division on the left hand side of the ballot paper containing the candidate's number, and not in the division containing his name, will not invalidate it. In re West Eighi Provincial Election, 2 Elec, Cas, 38, followed. 3, Where the surname of a candidate was printed too high up and in the division of the ballot paper occupied by the name of another candidate:—Held, that the ballots marked with a cross above the dividing line, but opposite the surname so. placed, could not be counted for such candidate, but were either marked for the other candidate, or were void for uncertainty. In re South Perth Provisial Election, 18 Occ. N. 255, 2 Elec, Cas. 47.

Secrecy — Act of Deputy Returning Officer—Numbering Ballots.] — Under the Dominion Election Act a ballot cast at an election is avoided if there are any marks thereon by which the voter may be identified, whether made by him or not. Hence, where a deputy returning officer at a polling place placed on each ballot the number corresponding to that opposite the elector's name on the voters' list, the ballots were properly rejected. Judgment of Meredith, C. J., and Teetzel, J., 9 O. L. R. 201, 5 O. W. R. 282, affirmed. Sedgewick and Idington, J.J., dissenting. In re Wentworth Dominion Election, Sealey v. Smith, 25 Occ. N. 133, 36 S. C. R. 497.

Connivance of use—Disqualifis—Omission—of Agent's Excitices had been different agents of the respondent; and it was found, as regards at least two of such agents, that the respondent had given no orders or cautions against the commission of corrupt practices, and that the circumstances were such as to throw upon him the suspicion of having sanctioned or connived at the corrupt practices committed by a third agent, although he denied on oath having been guilty of any such conduct:—Held, that the offences proved could not be deemed to have been of a trivial, unimportant, and limited character, and that the onus was on the respondent to shew that the offences were committed contrary to his orders and without his sanction, and, as he had failed to satisfy the Court in that regard, the election must be set aside under s. 123 of the Dominion Election Act, 1900. That in seeking to disqualify the respondent the onus was on the petitioner, and the evidence was insufficient to warrant a finding that he had been personally guilty of corrupt practices. Centre Wellington Case, H. E. C. 579, Russell Case, ib. 199, and Welland Case, ib. 187, followed. 3. That the omission from the election accounts of certain payments made by the respondent personally and not through his election agent, although contrary to the Election Act, was not a corrupt practice avoiding the election. Lichfield Division Case, 5 O'M. & H. 34, and Lancaster Division Case, ib, 39, distinguished. 4. That the payment by a candidate of an agent's legitimate expenses while engaged in promoting his election, is not a corrupt practice; and quære, whether payment for the services of such an agent would be so where not colourably made to secure the agent's vote. 5. Costs awarded according to the findings. In view of s. 15, s.s. 4, of 54 & 55 V. c. 20, the Court allowed to the respective parties the witness fees and other actual disbursements incurred in respect of the issues on which the findings had been in their favour respectively. Avoiding Election for—Saving Clause—Application of,]—Where only two acts of bribery were proved, but the perpetrators were both active, and one was an important agent of the candidate, and neither was called at the trial, and one of the bribes, though only $2,$ was paid out of a general election fund, to which the respondent had contributed $250, and the respondent majority was 65 out of a total vote of about 5,000:—Held, that the election was rightly avoided, notwithstanding the saving clause, s. 172 of R. S. O. c. 9. In re North Waterloo Provincial Election—Shoemaker v. Lackner, 2 Elec. Cas. 76.

Avoiding Election for—Saving Clause—Application of.]—The total vote polled was over 4,500, and the majority for the respondent was 29. The trial Judges had reported one person guilty of an act of undue influence, three being concerned in acts of bribery, and T., an agent, and two others, of providing money for betting:—Held, that s. 172 of the Election Act could not be applied to save the election. In re East Elgin Provincial Election—Easton v. Brower, 21 Occ. N. 10, 2 Elec. Cas. 100.

Bribery — Evidence.]—In Bureau's case the evidence was that he purchased a dress and gave it to the daughter of Labossière, a hotel keeper. Bureau was working in the respondent's interest and stayed at Labossière's hotel; the daughter gave up her room to Bureau and he said he wanted to make her a nice present:—Held, that it was impossible to infer with any certainty that the present was made for the purpose of affecting the father's vote. In re Liegar Dominion Election, 22 Occ. N. 433, 14 Man. L. R. 310.

Bribery—Offer not Accepted.]—Where a charge is made of an offer not accepted of money to influence a voter the evidence is required to be particularly clear and conclusive. In re Lisgar Dominion Election, 22 Occ. N. 433, 14 Man. L. R. 310.

Bribery—Payment of Voters for Trifling Services.]—The bribery by L. of two persons to abstain from voting against the respondent was established by the evidence, although it was not shewn that anything was said to them about voting; L. having paid them, for trifling services which he engaged them to perform upon election day, sums in excess of the value of such services, knowing them to be voters and to belong to the opposite political party. In re East Elgin Provincial Election—Easton v. Broveer, 21. Occ. N. 10, 2 Elec, Cas. 100.

Conveying Voters to Poll—Onus.]—The taking unconditionally and gratuitously of a voter to the poll by a rallway company or an individual, or the giving to a voter of a free pass or ticket by rallway, boat, or other conveyance, if unaccompanied by any condition or stipulation affecting the voter's action in reference to his vote, is not a corrupt practice, and the onus is on the petitioner to prove that the railway tickets supplied had been paid for. In re Lisgar Dominion Election, 22 Occ, N. 433, 14 Man. L. R. 310.

Dismissal of Charges against Candidate and Agents—Concurrent Findings of both Trial Judges—Disagreement of Trial Judges-Right of Appeal.]—The Judges at the trial of an election petition, having reserved judgment in respect of five charges, subsequently gave judgment dismissing four of these charges, both Judges agreeing as to the result. In respect to the fifth charge— a charge of payment of money by the candidate to a voter to induce such voter to vote for him-the Judges disagreed, one Judge being in favour of the dismissal of the charge, the other being of the opinion that the charge was proved:—Held, that the existence of a right of appeal in respect of one class of charges does not draw with it the right of appeal in respect of other charges, as to which there would otherwise be no right of appeal :-Held, also, that the portions of the Ontario Controverted Elections Act relating to the right of appeal in cases of disagreement between the Judges, must be construed in connection with the other provisions of the same Act; and also with the provisions of the Ontario Election Act, which are in pari materia; that the words "or otherwise" in s.-s. (5) of s. 57 of the Controverted Elections Act extend the effect of that sub-section to a difference or disagreement in every matter on which a candidate might be disqualified for a corrupt practice, and that s.-s. (6) extends it to candidates and others. That if an appeal lies in case of a disagreement between the trial Judges, a judgment in appeal finding a candidate or other person guity of a corrupt practice would necessarily subject him to disqualification or other disability or penalty, notwithstanding the absence of a concurrent judgment to that effect of the two trial Judges, and that this would be contrary to the statute:—Held, Maciaren, J.A., dissenting, that an appeal did not lie in respect of any of the charges. In re Lennox Provincial Election—Perry v. Carscallen, 23 Occ. N. 255, 6 O. L. R. 203, 1 O. W. R. 730, 810, 2 O. W. R. 190.

Disqualification of Candidate.]—The judgment of the trial Judges unseated and disqualified the member-elect. On appeal the members of the Supreme Court of Canada were equally divided in opinion, and the judgment stood affirmed. In re St. James Dominion Election—Brunet v. Bergeron, 34 Occ. N. 147, 33 S. C. Providing Money for Betting—Loan.]
—Three persons each lent $10 to R. L., knowing that the moneys so lent were intended to be used by him, as he then told them, in betting on the result of the election. Any bet or bets which he made were to be his own bets, not theirs, and he was to return the money in a couple of days. He did not succeed in getting any one to bet with him, and he returned the money to each on the following day:—Held, that this was providing money to be used by another in betting upon the election, and was a corrupt practice within the meaning of s. 164 (2) of the Election Act. In re East Eligin Proviscal Election—Easton v. Brower, 21 Occ. S. 10, 2 Elec. Cas. 100.

Summons for—Limitation of Time for Prosecuting — Several Charges—Marshalling Evidence—Ontario Election Act.]—The limitation of one year for bringing actions prescribed by s. 195, s.-s. 3, of the Ontario Election Act, applies only to actions for penalties under that section, and not to proceedings by summons for corrupt practices under ss. 187-8, nor are the latter within the limitation of two years for actions prescribed by R. S. O. c. 72, s. 1. On such proceeding under ss. 187-8 the Judges may, if they see fit, hear the evidence on all the charges before giving judgment on any of them. Treating - Antecedent Habit - Candidate.]-The respondent admitted that he had treated on the day of the convention, after the convention was over, several times, at at least two hotels, several persons, some of whom might have been electors. He denied, however, that the treating had any relation to the election:—Held, that under s. s. 2 of s. 162 (added by 62 V. (2) e. 5, s. 7 (0.)). treating generally or extensively or miscellaneously is only prima facie a corrupt prac-tice. If it be shewn that the treating was not in fact done corruptly in order to be elected, or for being elected, or for the purpose of corruptly influencing votes, it is no offence any more than it was before the enactment of s.-s. 2. There may still be innocent treating, though, if it be general or extensive or miscellaneous, the onus of shewing that it is innocent is upon the respondent. And an antecedent habit of treating must still help, among other things, to rebut the inference of corrupt intent:—Held, also, that, although the respondent did not become a "candidate," within the meaning of s. 2, s.s. 8, until the 27th March, yet if any corrupt acts in relation to the election were done by him before that date, they would affect the election, for the Act applies to everything done at any time before an election by a person who is afterwards elected. Treating — Candidate — Carrupt Intest—Habit.)—The undisputed evidence shewed that the respondent from the time of his nomination as the candidate his party frequently treated the electors and others in the bar-rooms of hotels whilst engaged in his canvass. He was not a man whose ordinary habit it was to treat, nor one who in the course of his ordinary occupations frequented bar-rooms: — Held, Osler, J.A., dissentine, that the trial Judges properly drew the inference that the treating was done with corrupt intent, so as to avoid the election of the respondent, Remarks by Burton, J.A. on the amendment to the Election Act, in Treating—Committee Meeting.]—Upon a charge of treating a committee meeting held at an hotel, the evidence was that McC., who was found to be an agent of the respondent, brought into the room where the meeting was being held a box of cigars for the use of the members of the committee. He said he did it at the request of the landlord. It was not shewn by whom payment was made:—Held, that the charge was not proved, for it is the person at whose expense the treat is supplied, or who pays or engages to pay for it, who alone is guilty of the offence. In re Middlee, 22 Occ. N. 183, 5 O. L. R. 644, 2 O. W. R. 233.

Treating — Evidence,]—In Jobin's case the treating was on polling day. He lived in a locality where there was no licensed tavern. He was accustomed, according to his own account, to keep considerable quantities of wine and spirits on hand and to supply them quite freely to others in the way of hospitality, or as a matter of business:—Held, that under the circumstances the Court would not infer the intent necessary to create an offence under either s. 110 or s. 111 of the Dominion Election Act. In re Liegar Dominion Election, 22 Occ. N. 433, 14 Man. L. R. 310.

Treating - Evidence.]-In the cases of Ami and Foley the charges were of treating in bars. The evidence of Ami's treating was of a very general and vague character. He stayed for some time at Labossière's hotel and treated considerably, even including, at times, all in the bar-room. The circumstances of the different occasions, or who were present, were not shewn :-Held, impossible, upon such evidence, to find the corrupt intent proved. In Foley's case the charge in the particulars was of treating all of the voters-a large number present in the bar of Tremblay's hotel on a particular evening -and that Foley then announced "that although he was not the government candidate, he had their money to spend." The evidence shewed that Foley was at Labossière's, not Tremblay's hotel, and gave an invitation to all in the house to drink, and that what he said was that "if he wasn't a candidate, he had money to spend." Foley's name was one of those brought before the convention which nominated the respondent in the government interest :- Held, that the evidence of the part taken by Foley in the contest was very vague and seemed in no way to support the view that this treating was done in the respondent's interest or for the purpose of influencing electors. In re Lisgar Dominion Election, 22 Occ. N. 433, 14 Man. L. R. 310.

Treating — Evidence.]—In the case of Watson, the charge against him and others associated with him, was of furnishing food can be considered with him, was of furnishing food can be considered the consideration of a meeting the night before polling day. It might be inferred that the refreshments were supplied with intent to influence the electors, and that, in that sense, it was done corruptly. The suggestion, after the votes had been poiled, of a further "treat" for the night of polling day was not without importance. That suggestion fell through:—Held, that the case could not be brought within s. 111 of the Dominion Election Act, for which it seems necessary that either the meat or drink, or the money or a ticket to procure them, should be actually supplied. A re Lisgar Dominion Election, 22 Occ. N. 433, 14 Man, L. R. 310.

Treating - Evidence - Particulars.]-In Fiset's case it was charged in general terms in the particulars that he travelled about in the constituency and canvassed a large number of voters in certain specified polling districts, and "corruptly treated them, to induce them to vote for the respondent."
The evidence shewed that Fiset did go about canvassing and was driven by Jean Moreau. It was sought by the petitioners to shew that in so going about Fiset treated various electors, but objection was made to the allowance of such evidence on the ground that the particulars did not give the details required by the order, and the Court refused to hear evidence of treating in that way, not more definitely specified, or to allow the examination of Moreau for the purpose of obtaining information only. About a week before polling day Fiset spent an evening at Moreau's house; he had with him whisky and gin and gave a drink to one Cardinal, telling him it was "election whisky." The meeting was not arranged, but the neighbours just happened to come in. It was not shewn that Cardinal had a vote. Cardinal's evidence was given without objection, and he was cross-examined upon it :- Held, that the Court was not prevented from considering the charge on ac-count of its not being specified in the particulars, but the way in which the evidence was brought out was to be taken into consideration. If such meetings were frequent or intentionally brought about, the inference of the corrupt intent would be almost irresistible. As it was, it could not be taken as absolutely clear. In re Lisgar Dominion Election, 22 Occ. N. 433, 14 Man. L. R. 310.

Treating — Intent — Candidate.] — It was shewn that the respondent and his chief agent had on several occasions in the course of the canvass treated in bars. The respondent was a physician, with a large country practice, and constantly on the road. He was also a horse funcier, and, although an abstainer from liquor, a great consumer of cigars. It was not disputed that while on the road he was in the constant habit of treating, and he continued to treat after his nomination by the convention on the 1st February until the writ for the election was issued, on the 22nd April:—Held, that no corrupt intent having been shewn in any of the instances of treating proved, the election was not thereby avoided. West Wellington Case, 1 E. C. 16, distinguished. In re East Middlesser Provincial Election—Rose v, Ruitledge, 23 Occ. N. 183, 5 O. L. R. 644, 2 O. W. R. 233.

Treating — Intent — Custom.] — The treating of electors prior to and on polling day by an agent of the respondent, although done on a liberal scale, will not be assumed to have been done with the corrupt intent necessary to make it an offence, when the Court is satisfied that be was accustomed to keep at all times considerable quantities of liguous on hand and to supply them quite freely to others in the way of hospitality or as a matter of business, and there is no other evidence to shew that the treating was done in order to influence a voter or voters. The same rule applies to treating when done in compliance with a custom prevalent in the country and without express evidence of any corrupt intent in so treating; also to the supplying of meals at a private house to electors who have come from a distance, in the absence of evidence that this was done for the purpose of influencing the election. In re Lisgar Dominion Election, 22 Occ. N. 433, 14 Man. L. R. 310.

Treating - Intent - Custom,]-Where a person who was held to be an agent gave two bottles of whisky to an elector the day before polling day, the inference of fact was drawn that they were given with the corrupt intent of influencing the voter, although there was no direct evidence to shew the object for which they were given. Where a quantity of whisky was obtained from one agent of the respondent and taken to the home of another in the vicinity of one of the polling places, where it was drunk freely on election day by the electors generally, the inference of was drawn that it was provided by both these agents for the purpose of influencing the electors, though there was no direct evidence to that effect, and it was held to be a corrupt practice notwithstanding that apparently it did not have that effect. The evidence also shewed that a quantity of whisky was taken to a place in the vicinity of another polling place by an agent, where it was consumed by the agents and others on polling day:— Held, that this shewed a scheme on the part of the respondent's agents to influence voters generally, and procure the election of the respondent by providing whisky at each of the polling places. Quere, whether an agent accustomed to carry about with him a bottle of whisky to treat those whom he should happen to meet, should not, if following this custom while actually engaged in canvassing, be held to have treated with a corrupt intent. Leblanc v. Maloney, 5 Terr. L. R. 402.

Treating — Meeting of Electors — Individuals.] — The respondent requested M., who was found to be an agent, to go with him to a factory and introduce him to the workmen, some of whom were voters. M. did this, and the respondent addressed the work-men on behalf of his candidature. After the meeting was over and the workmen had dispersed, M. asked the foreman to have a drink at a neighbouring inn, which the foreman declined. M. also said that if the workmen who went home in that direction would go to the inn, he would "leave a drink for them there." This conversation was not in the presence of the respondent, nor heard by him. When the men were leaving their work for the day, the foreman told them what M. had said, and eight or ten of them called at the inn and got a drink of beer without paying for it:—Held, that a charge of treat-ing a meeting assembled to promote the elec-tion, under s. 161 of the Ontario Election Act, failed upon this evidence, for the meeting had come to an end before anything was said about the treating, and the men were not told anything about it till nearly three hours afterwards. Nor did the evidence sup-port a charge under s. 162 (1) of corrupt treating of individuals in order to be elected,

M, being a customer of the factory and following a previous habit in his intercourse with the men. In re East Middleace Provincial Election—Rose v, Ruttedge, 23 Occ. N. 183, 5 O. L. R. 644, 2 O. W. R. 233.

Treating a Meeting—Bribery.]—Where, after a meeting of electors had broken up, an alleged agent of the respondent had broken up, an alleged agent of the hotel where it had been held, a mixed multitude comprised of some who had been at it, and others who had not:—Held, Maclenann, J.A., dissentling, that this was not treating "a meeting of electors assembled for the purpose of promoting the election," within s. 161 of the Ontario Election Act, R. S. O. c. 9:—Held, also, reversing the decision of the trial Judges, that such treating was not "bribery," within s. 130. Corrupt treating in its nature runs very dose to bribery on the part of the treater, but the circumstances in which a treat can be said to be a valuable consideration within s. 150, so as to amount to bribery on the part of the person accepting it, must be unusual. In re North Waterloo Provincial Election—Shemaker V. Lackner, 2 Elec. Cas. 76.

Treating a Meeting — What Amount to,]—A number of voters met at a voter's house for the purpose of going over the voters' lists and then of having a card party. After the lists were disposed of, the card party took place, and meat and drink were supplied by the host, but the drink, a quarter cask of beer, was paid for by subscription, according to the custom of the locality, a German settlement:—Held, not a corrupt practice withing the meaning of the words "treating a meeting of electors assembled for the purpose of promoting the election." in s. 161 of the Ontario Election Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 9. In re South Perth Provincial Election—Ellah v. Montieth, 2 Elec. Cas. 144.

Voting without Right — Knowledge — Aliena—Non-residents. — Actual knowledge on the part of a voter that he has no right to vote (e.g., because an alien or non-resident) is necessary to constitute a corrupt practice under R. S. O. 1887 c. 9, s. 190. In re South Perth Provincial Election—Malcolm v. McNeill, 2 Elec, Cas. 30.

Voting without Right-Knowledge -Mala Mens-Taking Oath.]—It was charged that a person had voted at the election, knowing that he had no right to vote, by reason of his not being a resident of the electoral district. He knew that his name was on the voters' list, and that it had been maintained there by the County Judge, notwithstanding an appeal, and he believed that he had, and did not know that he had not, a right to vote:—Held, that a corrupt practice under s. 168 of the Election Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 9, was not established. Under that section the existence of the mala mens on the part of the voter, "knowing that he has no right to vote," not merely his knowledge of facts upon the legal construction of which that right depends, must be proved. The offence does not depend upon his having taken the oath; it may be proved apart from that; nor does the fact that he has taken the oath. even if it be shewn in point of law to be untrue, necessarily prove that the offence has been committed. Haldimad Case, 1 Electors, 529, distinguished. In re East Elgin Provincial Election—Easton v, Brower, 21 Occ. N. 10, 2, Figs. Cas. 1509. Occ. N. 10, 2 Elec. Cas. 100.

Affidavit — Commissioner — Agent of Societor-, —The respondent to a petition under the Ontario Controverted Elections Act moved to set aside or dismiss the petition and to set aside the service thereof, and of the affidavit of bona fides and of notice of presentation, because the commissioner before whom the affidavit was sworn was the solicitor by whom the petition and affidavit were prepared, and by whom, as agent for the petitioner's solicitors, the petition was presented:—Held, that the commissioner was not disgualified. In re Lennox Provincial Election—Perry, v. Carscallen, 22 Occ. N. 407, 4 O. L. R. 647, 1 O. W. R. 730.

Appeal—Settlement of Case.]—No machinery has been provided by the Ontario Controverted Elections Act or by the Rules for the settlement of a case upon an appeal to the Court of Appeal from the judgment upon the trial of a petition under the Act. The trial Judges can give no direction as to the evidence to be submitted to the Court. Semble, that either party may treat the whole of the evidence taken at the trial as being before the Court of Appeal. In re South Oxford Provincial Election—McKay v. Satherland, 23 Occ. N. 41, 5 O. L. R. 58, 2 O. W. R. 2.

Application to Fix Day for Trial— Delay—Extending Time—Grounds — Discre-tion—Appeal—Form of Order.]—The petitions were presented on the 4th February, 1903; the Legislative Assembly sat from the 10th March to the 27th June. On the 5th November applications were made by the petitioners to a Judge on the rota to fix dates for the trial of the petitions, and if necessary to extend the time for bringing them to trial. Owing to the engagements of the other Judges on the rota, and the difficulty of immediately communicating with them, the Judge was unable then to fix dates, and, the respondents not being prepared to agree to an extension of time, the applications stood over pending applications to be made to extend the time. On the 11th November the petitioners moved before the same Judge (one of the Judges of the Court of Appeal) for, and obtained, orders extending the time for the commencement of the trials, upon affidavits shewing that the petitioners believed that the Court could fix days for trial suitable to the Judges' other engagements; that bribery was extensively practised on behalf of the respondents; that the petitioners could prepare for trial in one month; that the re-quirements of justice rendered it necessary that the time for the commencement of the trials should be extended; that the applications were not made for delay :- Held, that the applications were in time to enable the trials to be commenced within 6 months from the date of the presentation of the petitions (excluding the time occupied by the session) within the meaning of ss. 47 and 48 of the Ontario Controverted Elections Act, and the failure to fix days could not be attributed to the petitioners; ss. 16 and 47 of the Act and Rules 26 and 27 leave the fixing of days in the hands of the rota Judges. It was not open to the respondents to complain of lack of diligence by the petitioners within the 6 months, no days for trial having been fixed. Much of what was necessary to be

transpired in the presence of the Judge, and the facts were within his own knowledge; there was no reason why he should not act thereon. The justice of the case was in favour of making the orders; the Judge rightly exercised his discretion upon sufficient grounds; and his orders should not be interfered with. The appropriate form of the orders would be to extend the time for fixing the days of trial rather than the time for the commencement. In re North Norfolk Provincial Election, Snider v. Change of Solicitors-Right to Object Change of Solicitors from to Volume to Withdrawal of Petition Order for Evidence on Notice of Motion-Publication Collusion Deposit Security for Costs Substitution of Petitioner —Time for.]—The only person who can complain of an order changing the solicitor for the petitioner in an election petition is the solicitor removed. An ordinary voter has no status to attack the order, and an application by such an one to set aside an order can be considered only so far as the order is part of a scheme to get rid of the petition. 2. Assuming that an ordinary voter is a person who can move against an order giving the petitioner leave to withdraw the petition, there was no irregularity in the application to withdraw in this case, affidavits of the financial agents of the candidates not being necessary unless insisted on by the Judge who hears the appli-cation, and the notice of motion having been published in two newspapers in the electoral division. 3. It was not proved that there was collusion or that the petitioner did not in good faith authorize the application; and semble, if there had been collusion, the applicant would still have had the right to withdraw, but the Judge might have ordered that the deposit should remain as security upon a petitioner being substituted. 4. An application to substitute a petitioner is to be made at the time the motion to withdraw is made; and, if not then made, and an order for withdrawal granted, the petition is out of Court and cannot be revived. But semble, if there was power to make such an order at a later period, it should be applied for within a reasonable time and full explanation of any delay given. In re South Leeds Dominion Election—Kelly v. Taylor, 2 Elec. Cas. 1.

Charges Not Investigated at Trial—Excessive Particulars—Witness Fees.]—A controverted election petition contained 685 charges and at the trial application was made to 8 or 10 more charges; 225 witnesses were subpenaed and paid 8539. Two charges were proved thereupon, the respondent admitted responsibility of an agent and did not claim protection of the statute. The Court declared the seat vacant:—Held, the practice of heaping up excessive number of charges could not be encouraged. Costs were not allowed for charges which failed nor for the supplemental charges, but the Court allowed the petitioner $230, as a reasonable apportionment of the expenses for witness fees. In re. North. Norfolk. Provincial Election—Snider v. Little, 4 O. W. R. 314, 25 Occ. N. 9, 8 O. L. R. 506.

(2) c. 6 (O.) are received by them as registrars of the Court of Appeal. And, although a petitioner who does not leave with the local registrar at the time of filing the petition a copy of the petition to be sent to the returning officer, is in default under Election Rule 1 (2), still the time for doing so is subject to Election Rule 58, enabling the Court or a Judge in a proper case to enlarge the time appointed. And—where, through inadvertence, the solicitor for a petitioner had omitted to leave the copy, and applied without delay, the time was extended, and an order for the dismissal of the petition was discharged, upon the terms as to costs. Gosts—Conduct of Respondent.]—The respondent, having allowed the organization of the contest to go into the hands of persons as to whom he could not or would not give any information, and having failed to shew that he had made any serious effort to prevent illegal practices, was refused any costs of his attendance or examination as a winess, the petition being in other respects dismissed with costs. In v. Lisgar Dominion Election, 22 Occ. N. 433, 14 Man. L. R. 310.

Costs—Counsel Fees—Disbursements.]
The fee of an advocate or counsel upon the trial of a controverted election petition is not to exceed the amount provided by 54 & 55 V. c. 20, s. 15 (D.) 2. The fee allowed by this section does not include disbursements in the cause nor the costs of preliminary proceedings. Bergeron v. Brunet, 5 Q. P. R. 434.

Cross-petition—Security for Costs.] — Under s. 13 of the Controverted Elections Act. R. S. The deposit of $500 required by s. 5 was made with the deputy clerk, who thereupon issued the writ of summons under s. 7:—Held, that the deputy clerk was, by virtue of s. 3 of Ordinance 10 of 1891-2, the proper person to receive the deposit and issue the writ of summons. The deposit was made in notes of a chartered bank:—Held, that a payment or deposit of a sum of money required by statute need not, in the absence of express provision, be made in gold or legal tender; and that, therefore, the deposit was sufficient. That where particulars of the charges had been ordered the examination could not be competled until after the delivery of the particulars. Lebiase v. Maloney, 5 Terr. L. R. 341.

Evidence — Return.]—In a controverted election petition it is not necessary that proof should be given that the respondent has been returned as member. Leblane v. Maloney, 5 Terr. L. R. 402.

Examination of Respondent for Discovery — Inquiry into Corrupt Practices Committed at Former Election—Scope of—Lengthy Examination.—Discretion—Adjuntment — Continuation.]—Corrupt practices said to have been committed by the respondent to a controverted election petition at a former election on the petition against which he was declared to have been duly elected, cannot, as such and as committed with reference to that election, be inquired into for the purpose of invalidating the election in question. Therefore, the petitioner has no right, upon the examination of the respondent for discovery, to make a general inquired.

Extending Time for Trial — Orders Discretion—Practice.] — While there is nothing to prevent a petitioner from making an application to fix the time and place of trial, he cannot be said to be in default for not having done so. The obligation and initiation in that respect are cast upon the rotr Judges, the only penalty (if so called) upon the petitioner being that, if three months elapse after the presentation of the petition until the day for the trial being fixed, any elector may, on application, be substituted for the petitioner, on proper terms. And where the Judges' other engagements are such as to make it difficult for them to try the petition, an application to extend the time for proceeding to trial will be granted almost as a matter of course. Act, as to "the election of a member of the
Ningara, holden on the 22nd and 29th days

Petitioner-Status-Corrupt Practices -Right to Vote — Preliminary Objections — Dominion Election Act — Interrogatorics — Failure to Answer.]—Corrupt practices committed by a petitioner who contests a federal election do not deprive him ipso facto of his right to vote at such election, nor of his right to be petitioner, except in the cases provided for by ss. 8 and 9 of 63 & 64 V. c. Consequently, the disqualification resulting from practices other than those enumerated in ss. S and 9 cannot be pleaded by way of preliminary objection. Aliter, in the case of a provincial election. 2. Section 113 of the Dominion Election Act of 1900 should be strictly interpreted and should not be extended by analogy. 3. In the case of a petition to set aside an election the opposite party cannot be interrogated sur faits et articles, and if the party does not obey the order to answer such interrogatories, they will not be taken as affirmatively answered upon a motion to that effect. In re West Assinibia Dominion Election—McDougell v, Davin, 2 Terr, L. R. 417.

Preliminary Objections—Order as to Jurisdiction of Judge at Chambers—Rules of Court-Practice.]-The words of O. 35 of the Rules of the Supreme Court made under the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, and the table of Chambers work indicating the order in which each Judge shall sit and the period of time during which he shall take the duties assigned, etc., fulfil the provisions of the Dominion Act of 1887, c. 7, s. 2, and there being both a practice as to the order of business and an arrangement of the order of business, a Judge sitting at Chambers has jurisdiction to make an order setting down preliminary objections to an election petition to be heard before one of the Judges of the Supreme Court. It is not necessary in Nova Scotia that there should be a rota before such an application can be heard, the English practice in that particular being different, and depending upon the wording of the English Act applicable in such cases. The words "order," "duties," and "arrange," as used in the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, are not used as conferring jurisdiction. In re Cumberland Dominion Election—Ripley v. Logan, 37 N. S. Preliminary Objections — Status of Pretitioner - Particulars—Corrupt Practices.]

—A respondent to an election petition must, if he alleges that the petitioner's name is not lawfully upon the list of electors, point out the nature of the illegality charged. 2. The respondent will be ordered to give particulars of the corrupt practices of which he alleges that the petitioner has been guilty and the expenses which he has incurred and the electors whom he has treated. 3. He will also be ordered to give particulars of the conspiracies of which he accuses the petitioner, the payments and promises of money or rewards which he alleges the latter has made, and the particular circumstances of each offence. Preliminary Objections — Status of Petitioner—Proof of—Notice of Hearing of Preliminary Exceptions—Procedure on Hearing-Particulars-Quebec Controverted Elections Act.]-The allegation that the deposit required by law had not been made by the petitioner, and that the latter was only a prête-nom, are not good grounds of prelimin-ary exception. If the respondent denies that the petitioner is a British subject and entitled to vote, it is for the petitioner to prove his qualification as a voter and his status to contest the election. The production of the ori-ginal voters' list which was used at the poll or of a copy duly certified by the officer who has charge of the original, is the best proof of the status of the petitioner; and if the latter has voted at the election without objection on the part of any one, his status as an elector cannot be questioned. The production of a certificate of baptism setting out the date of the birth of the petitioner and the domicil of his father and mother in the province of Quebec at that time, although the baptism Queece at that time, although the baptism took place more than 24 years after such birth, is sufficient proof that the petitioner is a British subject; and the burden of proof is on the respondent to prove that the petitioner, although baptized in the province, was born in a foreign country. The law being silent as to the form of proceedings to be followed on a hearing of preliminary exceptions, the notes of evidence may be taken by a stenographer appointed by the Judges, and the witnesses may be sworn by the clerk of the Court (député protonotaire of the Superior Court) tespate protonomies or the Superior Court) in the presence of the Judge; this procedure is conformable to the spirit of the law as set forth in sa. 473 and 500 of the Controverted Elections Act of the province of Quebec. To prove that an election has been held, it is not necessary to produce the writ nor the proclamation and commission of the returning officer, but these facts may be established by oral testimony: s. 515, Quebec Contro-verted Elections Act. This Act and the Rules of practice under it do not contain any direction as to the length of the notice to be given of the hearing, leaving it to the Judge to give at, at his discretion, on the application of one of the parties, as he may deem convenient in the common interest of the parties and the public; and the rules followed in England in similar cases are not consistent with the rules of practice governing election petitions in the province of Quebec. The Judge may, without prejudice to the parties, fix a day for the hearing at the same time that he grants an application of the respondent for particulars, providing he limit such hearing to facts which particulars are not demanded and of which proof can be made by the production of public and official documents, and adjourn the hearing on the other facts until after such particulars are furnished. It is not such particulars are turnisade. It is not necessary to give public notice of the day fixed for the hearing, the only public notice required by the law being that of the discontinuance of the petition on abandonment of the contestation. In re Brome Provincial Election—Dyer v. McCorkill, Q. R. 26 S. C.

Preliminary Objections — Status of Proceedings of the Voter's List—Franchise Act, 1898.]—On the trial of the preliminary objection to an election petition, filed under the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, that the petitioners were not persons entitled to vote at the election in question, it is not necessary since the passing of the Franchise Act, 1808, and the Dominion Elections Act, 1960, to prove that the names of the petitioners were on the list of voters which was actually used by the deputy returning officer at the particular polining division; but it will be sufficient to shew that their names were on the original 3st transmitted under s, 16 of the Franchise Act, 1898, by the custodian thereof, after final revision, to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, as this is declared by s.-s. 2 of s, 16 to be "the original and legal list of voters for the polling division for which the list of which it is a copy was prepared." and under s, 10 of the same Act this list may be proved by the production of a copy authenticated by the ordinary imprint of the Queen's Printer. The Richelieu Case, 21 S. C. R. 168, and The Winnipeg and Macdonald Cases, 27 S. C. R. 201, distinguished on the ground of changes in legislation. In re Provencher Dominion Election, 21 Occ. Preliminary Objections—Sufficiency of — Service of Petition—Naming Attorney—Affidavit in Support of Petition.]—The Dominion Controverted Elections Act, defining, as it does, what are grounds on which an election petition may be deemed insufficient, the Courts can only entertain preliminary objections based on substantial error and want of formalities essential to a valid petition, especially when the want of form is not such as is calculated to prejudice, surprise, or mislead the party who urges it. After an election petition has been presented. the petitioner may get it from the registrar of the Court and deliver it to a bailiff for service in the same manner as in the case of writs of summons in civil matters. A petitioner is not bound to name an attorney, and, if he does, he need not state the residence of the attorney chosen. The affidavit filed by the petitioner in support of the petition, sworn before an officer qualified to take oaths and within the limits of his jurisdiction, is lawful although the place where it is sworn is not accurately stated in the jurat. Bailey v. Hunt, Q. R. 27 S. C. 84, Presentation of—Time—Return to Clerk of Crown in Chancery, when Made—Notice of Presentation.]—The return of a member by the returning officer is made only when it has been actually received by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, and not when the returning officer has placed it in the express or post office for transmission to such Clerk; and a petition may be presented within 21 days after such receipt. R. S. O. 1897 c. 3, s. 135, and R. S. O. 1897 c. 4, s. 3, considered. 2. The omission to serve a separate notice of "presentation" of the petition is not fatal to the proceedings, where a copy of the petition itself is duly served, on which is indorsed: "This petition is filed," etc. Williams v. Mayor of Tenby, 5 C. P. D. 133, distinguished. In re Ottova Provincial Election—Randall v. Povocil, 2 Elec. Cas. 64.

Presentation of—Time—Computation.]
—An election petition under R. S. B. C. 1897 c. 67, s. 214, must be filed within 21 days of the exact time of the return. Decision in 22 Occ. N. 43, S. B. C. R. 273, affirmed; Irving, J., dissenting. In re New Westminster Provincial Election—Rae v, Gifford, 9 B. C. R. 192.

Publication of Notice of Trial—Sheriff's Costs of—Payment Out of Deposit.] Where an election petition is dismissed at the trial without costs, the petitioner must pay to the sheriff the costs incurred in the publication of the notice of trial thereof; and, although the sum deposited as security is not security for such expenditure, payment our of Court will be ordered only on the condition of its being made good to the sheriff. No charge can be made by the sheriff for attending to the publication, no allowance therefor being authorized by the tariff. In re East Middlesex Provincial Election, 2 Elec. Cas. 150.

Qualification of Petitioner—"Reside"—Ontario Controverted Elections Act, I—The word "reside" in s. 3 of the Ontario Controverted Elections Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 11, as amended by 62 V. (2) c. 6, s. 1, is intended to denote the place where the petitioner "eats, drinks, and sleeps," And therefore a petitioner who owned a farm assessed in all for more than $1,000, and all in one electoral district, but the house and part of the land, assessed for less than that sum, being in one township, and the main part of the land in another township, was held to be unqualified, the assessment of the part with the house being alone regarded. Leave was given to substitute a petitioner:—Held, on the evidence, that the signatures of the petitioners to the petition and accompanying alfidavit had not been obtained by fraud. In re North Reafrew Provincial Election—Weight v, Duslop, 24 Occ. N. 125, 7 O. L. R. 204, 3 O. W. R. 300.

Qualification of Petitioners - Signatures—Fraud—Question of Fact—Corrobora-tion—Insufficiency — Residence — Leave to Substitute Petitioner.]-Within a few days after the presentation of an election petition, signed in a solicitor's presence, the affidavits accompanying it, sworn to before another solicitor, deposing to the presentation of the petition being in good faith, and with reason to believe that the statements contained in it were true in substance and in fact, and after a retainer of the first named solicitor to conduct the proceedings, two of the petitioners made affidavits virtually contradicting their former affidavits, one of them deposing to being intoxicated at the time and unable properly to realize what he was doing, while the petition had only been partily read over to him, some of the statements in which he had since found were wholly untrue, while as to others he knew nothing ; the other petitioner stating that he was an old man, unable to read or write, and that without the petition being read over or explained to him, and without his having any independent advice and without his appreciating his position, he was induced by the first named solicitor and a hotel keeper to sign the petition and swear to the affidavits: - Held, that, in the absence, not only of any corroboration of the statements made in the subsequent affidavits, but in the face of their denial by the partics interested, as well as by another person then present, they were not sufficient to support an application made by the respondent to set aside the petition. Order of Moss, C.J.O., 24 Occ. N. 125, 7 O. L. R. 204, 3 O. W. R. 300, dismissing application to set aside petition and allowing a new petitioner to be substituted for one whose qualification was insufficient, affirmed. In re North Resfress Rules of Court—Validity of —Payment into Court—Appointment of Master —Status of Petitionera—Beidence on Appeal.] — Payment into Court in the usual way is a good payment in, within the usual way is a good payment in, within the meaning of Rule 16 of the Parliamentary Election Petition Rules, 1898 (Imperial), A Rule made by the Judges empowering the Senior Puisne Judge, or any other Judge of the Court, to perform the duties devolving by the Rules on the Chief Justice whenever the office of Chief Justice is vacant, or he is absent from the Province, is valid. Appointment of a new Master under said Rules operates ipso facto as a rescission of any former appointment, it being unnecessary to rescind any former appointment by express writing. The full Court on appeal allowed evidence to be adduced to prove the status of the petitioners, although the matter was not gone into in the Court below. In re Esquimall Provincial Election—Jardine v. Bullen, 7 B. C. R. 471.

Security—Notice—Affidacit of Service—Rules of Court,—In 8, 216 of the British Columbia Elections Act "proposed security" means "intended security," and a notice by the petitioner informing the respondent that security would be given by dept siting $2,000 with the Registrar was held a red notice pursuant to the section. The additional Rules made on the 27th January, 1875 (i.e., in addition to the Parliamentary Election Petition Rules, Michaelmas Term, 1878), are in force in British Columbia. The petitioner after serving notice of the presentation of the petition and of the proposed security omitted to file an affidavit of the time and manner of such services thereof:—Held, that the petition should not be struck off the files of the Court on that ground. In re Lillocet Provincial Election—Stoddart v. Prentice, 7 B. C. B.

Service-Extension of Time-Special Circumstances.]—Under substituted s, 10 (s. 8 of c. 20, 1891), of the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, a Judge of the Election Court has jurisdiction to extend the time for personal service of the petition on the ground of special circumstances of difficulty in effecting service, if it appears that there was a bona fide attempt to serve, and ordinary diligence is used in trying to effect a service, even though it is shewn that the petition was not uclivered to the officer for service for four day after it was filed, and during the whole period allowed by the section for service the respondent was at or in the vicinity of his residence, and made no attempt and colluded with no person to avoid service, and might have been served if more than ordinary diligence had been used. In re Sunbury and Queen's Dominion Election—Nason v. Wilmot. 35 N. B. Reps. 457.

Service—Irregularity — Extending Time—Reservice—Preliminary Objections.]—The petitioner in a controverted election petition under the Dominion Act, after the appearance of the respondent, and the fling by him of preliminary exceptions in which he complains of the irregularity of the service effected upon him, may obtain ex parte an order of a Judge extending the time for service, and that before having desisted from the first service. Labelle v. Leonard, 5 Q. P. R. 77.

Service — Order Extending Time for — Grounds for.]—An election petition filed in the clerk's office on the 17th December was sent to the petitioner at C. by registered letter on the 20th, and was received at the post office at C. on the evening of that day, but, for some reason that was not explained, the letter was not delivered, and the petitioner had no knowledge of its receipt until the 27th, the last day for service:—Held, that an order extending the time for service was properly made. Re Restigouche Dominion Election— McAllister v, Reid, 35 N. B, Reps. 390.

Service - Personal-At Domicil-Abandonment-Time - Extension of - Motion to Dismiss Petition.]—An election petition under the provisions of s. 10 of c. 9, R. S. C., as amended by s. 8 of c. 20 of the statutes of 1891, should, unless otherwise ordered by a Judge, be personally served. 2. Service made on the respondent of a copy of the election petition by leaving such copy for him at his domicil with his wife, without having previously stated the impossibility of making a personal service within the time described, and without the order of a Judge. is not good service according to the provisions of s. 8 of c. 20. 3. As in ordinary actions, a petitioner may abandon at his own expense the service of an election petition made as above, without the authorization of the Court or a Judge, which is necessary under s. 56 of c. 9. 4. Within the time allowed by law for the service of an election petition, a Judge of the Superior Court may, under s. 10 of c. 9, extend the time for such service, and a personal service, such as is required by s. 8 of c. 20, is a good and valid service of such petition. 5. A motion for the dis-missal of an election petition, made before the time allowed by law or by a Judge has expired, is premature and will be dismissed with costs. Labelle v. Leonard, 4 Q. P. R. 420.

Service — Substituted Service — Order after Time Expired.]—Under s. 8 of c. 20 of 54 & 55 V., substituted for s. 10 of the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, R. S. C. c. 9, the Court has jurisdiction to make an order for substituted personal service, where the application for the order is not made until after the time allowed for personal service has expired. The order is not bad because it omits to fix a time within which the substituted service must be made. Where the petitioner, by reason of a deception practised upon him, erroneously believed a personal service had been effected and allowed five days after the extended time to elapse before taking out the order for substituted service:—Held, that it was not too late. Re York Dominion Election—McLeod v. Gibson, 35 N. B. Reps. 376.

Service of Notice of Presentation—Security for Costs—Deposit—Moneys of Solicitor.;—The statute of Canada 54 & 55 V. c. 20, s. S. allows three modes of service of the notice of presentation of an election perition:—(a) If service is made within ten days of the presentation, it may be made in the same way as in the case of a writ of summons in a civil cause. (b) If, by reason of special circumstances of difficulty in service, the petition has not been served within the ten days, the Court or Judge may allow further time, and in such case the service must be personal. (c) If it has not been such service for the present of the service must be personal. (c) If it has not been possible to serve the defendant personally within the time allowed by the Court or Judge, then the Court or Judge may order another mode of service. 2. Rule 12 of the Rules of Practice of the Superior Court does not apply to a deposit, made in the matter of a contested Dominion election, of the moneys of the solicitor for the petitioner. Belanger v. Carbonacau, 5 Q. P. R. S.

Service of Petition — Exhibition of Original—Indorsement of Service — Allegations of Petition—Holding of Election.]—
There is nothing in the law requiring that the original of a petition contesting a federal election be exhibited to the respondent at the time of the service. The omission by the bailiff to mention on the copy of the writ of summons or contestation of electrion the date of such service, is no ground for exception to the form, unless prejudice is shewn. It is sufficient in the contestation of an election held in one of the divisions of Montreal, to state that the same took place within the judicial district of Montreal. Darlington v. Galley, F. Q. P. R. 40.

Service of Petition—Second Service.]—An election petition cannot be served outside of Canada. Where the petition was served on the respondent abroad, and, subsequently, service was made on him in Ottawa:—Held, that the first irregular service did not invalidate that properly made afterwards. In re Shelburne and Queen's Dominion Election—Coxie v. Fielding, 25 Occ. N. 133, 36 S. C. R. 537.

Service of Petition out of Canada—Second Service on Agent.] — Under the Dominion Elections Act, service of an election petition cannot be made outside of Canada: Idington, J., dissenting. By rule 10 of the Nova Scotia Rules under the Elections Act, candidate returned at an election may, by written notice deposited with the clerk of the Court, appoint an attorney to act as his agent in case there should be a petition against him:—Held, that an agent so appointed is authorized only to act in proceedings subsequent to the service of the petition, and service of the petition itself on him is a nullity. In re King's Dominion Election—Parker v. Borden, 25 Occ. N. 135, 36 S. C. R. 520.

Service out of Jurisdiction.]—A petition against the return of a member may be served personally on the respondent out of the jurisdiction; and it is not essential that an application should be made for leave to effect such service, or for allowing the service so made. In re West Algoma Provincial Election — Whitecre v. Savage, 14 Occ. N. 390, 2 Elec. Cas. 13.

Setting aside—Summary Application—Grounds.]—Held, that a petition may be set aside upon summary application upon grounds other than those contained in s. 10 of the Controverted Elections Ordinance. N. W. T. In re Banff Election—Brett v. Sifton (No. 2), 4 Terr L. R. 253.

Status of Petitioner—Fees—Credit for —Copy — Affidavit — Deposit — Service—Bailiff.] — A party who contests a federal election has only to shew that he had a right to vote at the election in question, and the fact that he is on the voters' list as a tenant—

instead of as an occupant does not affect his status. 2. No court house tax is payable upon an election petition. 3. The respondent has no interest in urging that the prothomotary gave credit to the petitioner's attorney, instead of claiming his fee on the election petition at once. 4. A copy of an election petition which is followed by an affidiavit is not invalid by the mere fact that a copy of the petition itself is not certified with the words "true copy" when the signature appears at the end of the last document, the affidavit. 5. A deposit of bank bills accepted by the prothonotary, is regular. 6. It is regular to serve a copy of the election petition and affidavit, not a duplicate thereof, 7. A bailif will not be declared unqualified by the mere fact that no proof has been shewn that his guarantee policy has been renewed. In re Missisquoi Dominion Election, Moria v. Mergs, 6 Q. P. R. 372.

Status of Petitioner-Franchise Acts. -The principal contention raised on preliminary objections to an election petition was that the petitioner had been guilty of was that the pertioner had been guilty of corrupt practices before, during, and after the election, and that, by the effect of 61 V. c. 14 and 63 & 64 V. c. 12, the Dominion Franchise Act was repealed and the provisions of the Quebec Elections Act regulating the franchise in the province of Quebec substituted therefor, so as thereby to deprive the petitioner of a right to vote under s. 272 of the Quebec Elections Act, 59 V. c. 9, and being so deprived of a vote, that he had no status as petitioner. In the Election Court. evidence was taken on issues joined, and the Judge, holding that no corrupt practice upon the part of the petitioner had been proved. dismissed the preliminary objections. On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada:-Held that, as corrupt practices had not been proved the question as to the effect of the statutes did not arise. Per Gwynne, J.:—A person properly on the list of voters for an election to the House of Commons cannot be deprived of his right to vote at such election by provincial legislation. In re Beauharnois Dominion Election, 22 Occ. N. 6, 31 S. C. R.

Status of Petitioner Volen' List-Affidavit — Preliminary Objection.]—A list appearing on its face to be an imprint emanating from the Queen's printer, certified by the clerk of the Crown in Chancery to be a copy of the voters' list use! at an election, and upon which the name of the petitioner against the return at such election appeared as a person having a right to vote thereat is sufficient proof of his status. The jurat of the affidavit accompanying the petition was subscribed "Grignon & Fortier, Protonetaire de la Cour Supérieure dans et pour le District de Terrebonne:"—Held, per Gwynns. J., that an objection to the irregularity of the subscription to the jurat did not constitue proper matter to be inquired into by way of preliminary objection to the petition. ending Appeal

Time-Extension.] - Preliminary objections to an election petition filed on the 22nd Feb-1902, were dismissed by a Judge on the 24th April, and an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court of Canada. On the 31st May the Judge ordered that the trial of the petition be adjourned to the thirtieth juridical day after the judgment of the Supreme Court should be given, and the same was given, dismissing the appeal, on the loth October, making the 17th November the day fixed for the trial under the order of the 31st May. On the 14th November a motion was made before a Judge, on behalf of the member elect, to have the petition declared lapsed for non-commencement of the trial within six months from the time it was filed. This was refused on the 14th November, but the Judge held that the trial could not proceed on that day, as the order for adjournment had not fixed a certain time and place, and, on motion by the petitioner, ordered that it be commenced on the 4th December, The trial was begun on that day:-Held, that the effect of the order of the 31st May was to fix the 17th November as the date of commencement of the trial; that the time between the 31st May and the 10th October, when the judgment of the Supreme Court on the premliminary objections was given, should not be counted as part of the six months within which the trial was to be begun; and that the 4th December, on which it was begun, was therefore within the six months :-Held, also, that, if the order of the 31st May could not be considered as fixing a day for the trial, it operated as a stay of proceedings, and the order of the 17th November was proper. In re St. James Dominion Election, Brunet v. Bergeron, 23 Occ. N. 147, 33 S. O. D. 1975. C. R. 137.

Substituting Petitioner — Grounds for — Jurisdiction of Court—Time—Collusion,]]
—The Court has no power in a proceeding maler the Dominion Controverted Elections Act to substitute a new petitioner unless either no day for trial has been fixed within the time prescribed by statute or notice of withdrawal has been given by the petitioner. And where a petition came regularly down for trial and the petitioner stated that he had no evidence to offer, an application of a third party to be substituted as petitioner, upon vague charges, made on information and belief, of collusion in the dropping of the petition, which were contradicted, and of corrupt practices, was refused; and the petition was dismissed with costs. In re South Essex Dominion Election—Tofflemire v. Atlan, 2 Elec. Cas. 6.

Time for Hearing—Legislature in Session—Quebee Controverted Elections Act.1
—An election petition under the Controverted Elections Act of the province of Quebec, must be brought on for hearing on the merits by the petitioner within four months following the publication of the notice provided for in a 213 of the Election Act of Quebec, 1895, even if the legislature is or has been in session. After the trial is commenced the Court should adjourn it over the session on the request simply of the sitting member. Receion v. Gendrom, Q. R. 27 S. C. 163.

The fees of criers at the trial of election petitions will be taxed. Bergeron v. Brunet, 5 Q. P. R. 433.

Trial—Extension of Time—Appeal—Jurisdiction.]—On the 25th May, 1901, an order was made by Belanger, J., for the trial of the petition against the appellant's return as a member of the House of Commons for Beauharnois, thirty days after judgment should be given on an appeal then pending from the decision on preliminary objections to the petition. Such judgment was given on the 29th October, and on the 19th November, on application of the petitioner for instructions, another order was made by the same Judge which directed that judicial days only should be counted in computing the thirty days, and stating that such was the meaning of the order of the 25th May, and that the 6th December would be the date of On the petition coming on for trial on the 6th December, the appellant moved for peremption on the ground that the six months' limitation for hearing had expired. The motion was refused, and on the merits the election was declared void. On appeal to the Supreme Court:—Held, Davies, J.. dissenting, that an appeal would not lie from the order of the 19th November; that the Judge had power to make such order, and its effect was to extend the time for trial to the 6th December; and that the order for peremption was, therefore, rightly refused. In re Beauharnois Dominion Election — Loy v. Poirier, 22 Occ. N. 193, 32 S. C. R. 111.

Trial—Production of Voters' Lists—Certified Copies—Costs.]—Since the Franchise Act. 1898, provides that the voters' lists used at an election of a member of the House of Commons may be proved by the production of certified copies, it is unnecessary to procure the attendance of the clerk of the Crown in Chancery from Ottawa to produce the lists at the trial of an election petition, and the costs occasioned by procuring his attendance will not be allowed to the successful petitioner as against the respondent, but instead thereof only what the certified copies of the necessary parts of the lists, if procured, would have cost. In re Lispar Dominion Election, 14 Man. 1. R. 268.

Verification — Sufficiency of Affidavit.] —An affidavit which alleges that the allegations contained in an election petition are true "to the best of my knowledge," is not sufficient to satisfy the requirements of a statute which provides that the deponent shall swear "that he has reason to believe and does verily believe," etc. Lemieux v. Paquet, Q. R. 27 S. C. 159.

V. RECOUNT.

Appeal — Notice of—Signature—Result of Appeal—Majority.]—The notice of appeal from the decision of the County Court Judge upon a recount of votes under s. 129 (1) of the Election Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 9. need not be signed by the appellant candidate personally, but may be signed by his solicitor or agent on his behalf. Where both candidates appeal from the decision of the County Court Judge, and the result of the appeal of one, first heard and determined, is to give his opponent a majority, the appeal of the other will be heard and determined, although it cannot change the result except by increasing the majority. Neither appeal having been limited to particular ballots, it was open to the candidate whose appeal was first determined to object, when his opponent's appeal was being heard, to certain ballots not previously objected to. In re North Grey Provincial Bicetion—McKuy v. Boyd, 22 Occ. N., 287, 4 O. L. R. 286, 1 O. W. R. 474, 483, 2 O. W. R. 231, 604, 1131.

Ballots — Absence of Candidates' Numbers.]—Recount of votes cast at a provincial election:—Held, that the candidate's number, mentioned in s. 69 (3) of the Ontario Election Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 9, is not an essential part of the ballot paper; and where a deputy returning officer, in detaching the ballot papers from the counterfoils, did so in such a manner that the candidate's numbers were left on the counterfoils, instead of appearing on and as part of the ballot papers, such ballot papers, when marked by voters, were not rejected. In re Prince Educard Provincial Election—Williams v, Curric, 22 Occ. N. 285, 4 O. I. R. 255, 1 O. W. R. 408.

Ballots — Irregular Marking.]—Upon the recount of ballots cast at the election of a member of the Ontario Legislature, there being two candidates, ballots were allowed which were marked (1) with a cross below and to the right of the lower compartment: (2) with a cross in one compartment and a line in the other; (3) with a cross in one compartment and a faint and probably unintentional mark in the other; (4) with a mark in the form somewhat of an inverted V, as being probably intended for a cross; (5) with three crosses in one compartment; and (6) with a mark which might fairly be taken to be a clumsy and ill-made cross; and ballots were disallowed which were marked (1) with a single stroke; the error in the head-note in In re West Huron, 2 Ont, Elec, Cas. 58, in which it is stated that ballots so marked were in that case allowed, being pointed out: (2) with a plain cross in one compartment and a fainter, partly smudged or rubbed out cross in the other: (3) with the name of the candidate written in the compartment; and (4) with a circle in both compartments. lots marked in due form but with an indelible coloured pencil, were objected to on the ground that there was possibly a design to identify the voters, but these were allowed, there being no evidence, and evidence not being admissible, to shew whether a pencil of this kind had or had not been supplied by the deputy returning officer. In re Halton Provincial Election,—Nixon v. Barber, 22 Occ. N. 362, 4 O. L. R. 345, 1 O. W. R. 501.

Ballots — Irregular Marking.] — Four ballots counted for one of the candidates by a deputy returning officer were held to have been properly rejected by the County Court Judge on a recount, in consequence of each being marked with a cross in the division of both candidates. There was nothing to shew that, as was alleged, one of the crosses had been placed on each ballot after the counting by the deputy returning officer. A ballot having a distinct cross in the division of one candidate, and an obliterated cross in that of the other, was allowed for the first, Bur where there was a distinct cross in one division, and a very faint one in the other the ballot was rejected. The following ballots were rejected :- Marked for one candidate and having the name of that candidate written on the back. Having, instead of a cross, a perpendicular, horizontal, or straight slanting line. Having a cross on the back only. The following were allowed :- Properly marked. but having on the back words written by the deputy returning officer. Having several con-nected tremulous marks in one division. Having a strongly marked cross in one division. and a thin, faint upright pencil mark on the upper edge of the ballot in the other division. not indicative of any intention to make a cross. Having a distinct cross, and in the same division a slight irregular pencil marking, or a series of slight, cloudy, formless pencil markings. Having a mark consisting of two lines lying very close to each other, both distinctly visible, in one division, shewing an intention to make a cross. In re North Grey Provincial Election, Boyd v. McKay. 22 Occ. N. 286, 4 O. L. R. 286, 1 O. W. R. 474, 483, 2 O. W. R. 231, 604, 1131.

Ballots — Irregular Marking—Ballot not Objected to Before Deputy Returning Officer.]-A County Court Judge is not confined. on a recount, to the consideration of cases in which an objection was made before the deputy returning officer when counting the votes at the close of the poll. Where a ballot was marked with a cross outside, but near the upper line of, the top division :- Held. that it should be allowed. It is not essential to have a line on a ballot paper at all. Similarly all votes below the lower division must be counted for the candidate whose name is in it. Where a ballot was marked with a circle, not a cross, nor any apparent attempt to make a cross :- Heid, bad. Where a ballot was well marked for one candidate, but in the other candidate's division there was an irregular, shapeless pencil mark, which was not, however, a cross or any attempt to make a cross, nor a mark by which the voter could be identified :- Held, a good vote for the candidate for whom the paper was well marked. Where a ballot, though well marked, had in the same division, the initials S. A. in small but legible capitals :-Held, bad. Any written word or name upon a ballot presumably written by the voter, ought to vitiate the vote as being a means by which he may be identified. Where ballot papers had a cross or crosses in the division of both candidates;— Held, bad. In re Lennox Provincial Elec-tion—Carscallen v. Madole 22 Occ. N. 363, 4 O. L. R. 378, 1 O. W. R. 472.

Ballots—Irregular Marking—Initialling).
—Ballots marked with a straight line only are improperly marked and cannot be counted, while ballots marked with a cross upon or above the upper division line, or marked with a cross made by three or four pencil strokes, or marked with what might be taken for a "c," are properly marked and should be comited. In initialling the ballots a deputy returning officer at one sub-division put as his initials. It. C. G., and a deputy returning officer at another polling sub-division put MeX. instead of his full initials, W. D. McX.—Hold, that such ballots were sufficiently initialled within the

Interference with by Superior Court Judge—Method of Counting Votes.]—A County Court Judge holding a recount of the rotes cast at an election for the House of Commons, pursuant to s, 90 of the Dominion Elections Act, 1900, rules that a ballot could not be objected to before him because the same objection had not been raised when the ballot was counted by the deputy returning officer:—Held, that a motion to a Superior Court Judge for an order requiring the County Court Judge to entertain the objection was not warranted by s, 91; under that the County Court Judge could be directed to proceed, but not as to the mode by which he should proceed. In re King's County Dominion Election, 21 Occ. N, 57.

Irregularities.]—Upon a recount of the votes cast at the London election for the House of Commons objection was taken to three ballots without the official stamp of the returning officer and to five ballots from which the deputy returning officer had omitted to remove the counterfoils. The ballots were in other respects regular, and were counted and allowed by the deputy returning officer. The Judge refused to disallow them. In re London Dominion Election, 24 Ocs. N. 401, 4 O. W. A ballot had a cross in a division for one candidate and the hallot also shewed an erasure of another cross after the the other candidate's name -Held, properly counted for the candidate in whose division the cross was left unerased. Held, also, that there was nothing in the Ontario Election Act to void the ballots cast at any particular poll where the deputy returning officer failed to make a statement of the votes cast in his returns; if the returning officer has no difficulty in ascertaining the number of votes cast the vote must be counted. British Columbia Elections ActApplication for Registration—Affidavits—
Official to Take—Statutes.1—Under the Provincial Elections Act and amendments an affidavit or application to be placed on the register of voters for an electoral district may be sworn outside the province of British Columbia; and the venue and jurat of the affidavit, form A., Provincial Elections Act Amendment Act, 1902, may be varied to conform to that fact. The affidavit may be sworn before a commissioner for taking affidavits in and for the Courts of the province, or before any of the officers named in s, 4 of the amending Act of 1902, provided they derive their power from provincial authority, or ordinarily reside and perform their duties within the province. The Lieutenant-Governor in council has power under the Elections Act and s. 11 of the Redistribution Act to make regulations providing that affidavits sworn outside the province may be received by collectors of votes, and the applicants' names be placed upon the register. Per Walkem and Drake, JJ.: Acts affecting the franchise should be construed liberally so as not to disfranchise persons having the necessary qualifications of voters, In re Provincial Elections Act, 24 Occ. N. 33, 10 B. C. R. 114.

Collector of Vote —Jurisdiction—Time—Prohibition.]—After the collector of votes under the British Columbia Elections Act, 1897, as amended in 1899, has placed on the register of voters the names of persons objected to, an application for prohibition on the ground that the collector proceeded without jurisdiction is too late. Court of Revision-Appeal-Jurisdiction-Voter's Qualification-Territories Election Ordinance - Residence-Controverted Elections Ordinance.]—In the case of an election under the Territories Election Ordinance, a Judge sitting in appeal from the Court of Revision is timited in the exercise of his jurisdiction to the same extent as the Court of Revision. The jurisdiction of the Court of Revision is limited to inquiring whether any of the formal statements, subscription to which the Ordinance provides, may be required from a person tendering a vote, is "false in whole or in part;" if false in whole or in part, the vote is to be disallowed; if altogether true, the vote is to be allowed. New polls were held in two polling divisions; votes were challenged on the following grounds: (a) voter was deputy returning officer in another polling division on the day of the general election, (b) voter was resident in another polling division on the day of the general election and entitled to vote there, and (c) voter was absent from electoral district on day of general election; and in each case the voter could not possibly have voted on that day at either of the two polling divisions in question; the Court of Revision disallowed these votes; the Judge in appeal held that he had no jurisdiction sitting in appeal (but only in proceedings under the Controverted Elections Ordinance) to consider the validity of these votes, though he doubted their validity. "Residence" means a man's habitual physical presence in a place or country which may or may not be his home; the word "habitual" does not mean presence in a place for either a long or short time, but the presence there for the greater part of that period. Lists-Appeal - Notice of Complaint-Loss of-Parol Evidence.]-A list of appeals containing names sought to be added to the voters' list, was prepared, and a voter's notice of complaint in Form 6 to the Ontario Voters' Lists Act, R. S. O. c. 7, was signed, by the complainant, attached to the list of names to be added, and handed to the clerk in his office within the thirty days required by the statute. When the list was produced by the clerk in Court the notice of complaint was missing :- Held, that it was competent for the Judge to hear and receive parol evidence as to the form and effect of the notice in question and of its loss; and that, upon his being satisfied by such evidence that a sufficient notice of complaint was duly left with the clerk, the complaint might be dealt with. Ontario Elections Act—Notice of Complaint—Non-compliance with Form—Amendment,—It is not essential that the form given in the schedule to the Ontario Voters' Lists Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 7, for objections to names wrongfully inserted in the voters' ists, should be followed with exactness; all that is required is that the nature of the objections to the names should be stated with reasonable clearness. Where, therefore, in giving notice of the wrongful insertion of names in the voters' list, the complainant used list No. 2 of form 6 in the schedule, being the list for persons wrongfully named, instead of list No. 3, being the list for those wrongfully inserted in the voters' list, but it was quite apparent what the grounds of the objections were, the notice was held sufficient. Right to Vote-Refusal of Ballot-Action-Damages.]-The plaintiff resided in St. John, New Brunswick, and his name was on the voters' list in St. John, and also in Dalhousie, Annapolis county, Nova Scotia, at which latter place the defendant acted as deputy returning officer in the last Dominion election. The plaintiff presented himself at the Dalhousie booth, and demanded a ballot. Under the Nova Scotia statute, which was passed with a view to provincial elections only, it is provided, in effect, that an elector can only vote once in the province at any election; that he must vote in the county in which he resides at the teste of the election writ, if qualified, and not elsewhere; and that a non-resident elector, having a right to vote in two or more polling districts, may vote in either. The plaintiff was required to swear before receiving a ballot that "at the teste of the writ for this election I resided in the city of St. John, New Brunswick; that I am not qualified to vote in the said city He declined to take the oath and was refused a ballot and brought this action to recover damages :- Held, that the plaintiff had a right to vote in Dalhousie; and damages were assessed at $550. Writ—Petition—Coats.]—The returning officer decided that, owing to the absence of proper voters' lists, the election could not be held on the days fixed by the writ, and publicly so declared, and notified the two prospective candidates that there would be no meeting for nomination on the day appointed. He made a special return to the writ, setting forth why it had not been duly executed, and the executive government accepted such return, and issued a new writ under which due proceedings were had and one M., a former candidate, was nominated and declared elected by acclamation. The petitioner, who was to have opposed M., refused to recognize the authority of the returning officer to decline to hold a meeting for nomination, and on the day originally appointed left with a clerk of the returning officer a nomination paper and deposit, and he filed a petition under the Dominion Controverted Elections Act to have it declared that he had been duly elected for the district. M. was not made a party :- Held, that, apart from the question of the jurisdiction to entertain such a petition, no practical result could follow from an attack upon the returning officer as sole defendant. If the special return was illegal, the Court would go no further than to declare that it was an invalid return, upon which Parliament might direct the issue of a new writ; but that was what executive government had done, and was not what the petitioner had sought. It was not the duty of the Court under its statutory jurisdiction to pronounce upon the constitutional right of the executive to direct the issue of a new writ; that was a matter for the House of Commons, In re Nipissing Dominion Election-Klock v. Varin, 21 Occ. N. 258.

IX. OTHER CASES.

Dominion Elections Act-Deputy Returning Officer—Conditional Refusal to Vote
—Non-resident's Oath—Damages—Malice.] -Plaintiff, who resided at St. John in the province of New Brunswick, was a property owner and entitled to vote at Dalhousie, in the county of Annapolis and province of Nova Scotia, where his name appeared on the list of voters as a non-resident. Plaintiff pre-sented himself before the deputy returning officer at Dalhousie at an election and de-manded a ballot poper, but the officer refused to deliver a ballot paper or to permit plaintiff to vote unless he took the non-resident's oath: -Held, that the oath proposed was not applicable to the case of a property owner residing in another province, and that the officer was wrong in his refusal to permit plaintiff to vote. Per MacDonald, C.J., and Ritchie, J., that plaintiff's right to vote being clear, de fendant was responsible in damages for his refusal to permit him to do so: that defendant, in undertaking to determine plaintiff's right to vote, was not acting in a judicial capacity, but was merely a ministerial officer to carry out the provisions of the Act; and that, even assuming that defendant was acting in any respect in a judicial capacity. his action in refusing the ballot paper not being bona fide, but being wilful and cor-rupt, the action was maintainable even on the theory that proof of malice was necessary Per Weatherbe, J., and Graham, E.J., that defendant was a public officer having a quasi judicial duty to perform, and that he could not be made liable for an error of judgment; that, in order to make defendant liable malice must be shewn; that the burden of shewing malice was on plaintiff, and that the evidence adduced was not sufficient for that purpose. Anderson v. Hicks, 35 N. S. Reps.

Telegrams—Action for Price—Illegality—Pleading.]—To an action begun by a relegraph company to recover the price of a certain number of telegrams, the defendant will not be allowed to plead simply that such telegrams were sent in the course of a parl lamentary election; in order to defeat the

PAROCHIAL ELECTIONS.

Churchwardens-Voters-"Tenant et Lieu"—"Householder" — Custom.]—The words "paroissiens tenant feu et lieu" used in art. 3438, R. S. Q., and the word "householder" in the English version of the same comprehend and designate all heads of families, even married sons living with their fathers. working with them and dwelling on the paternal lands, lodging and having a common table with their fathers and mothers; and such married sons have, pursuant to the text of that Act, the right to vote at elections of churchwardens. 2. Unmarried sons living under the same circumstances, with their fathers and mothers, are not "paroissiens ten-ant feu et lieu," and cannot vote at elections of churchwardens. 3. The usage followed in the parish in question, or in neighbouring parishes, cannot be invoked to interpret art. 3438, the law overriding the custom, and the latter being no authority except in the absence of a positive law. Plante v. Guévremont, Q. Account—Amendment at Trial—Refusal of Postponement—Surprise—New Trial.]—Declaration for work and labour and on an account stated. Pleas, payment and set-off, the particulars of which shewed a considerable sum due the defendants over and above what was claimed by the plaintiff's particulars which were confined to the count for work and labour. At the trial, where a verdict passed for the plaintiff, the set-off being entirely rejected, an application was made to amend the plaintiff's particulars by making a large addition to the time of the alleged work and labour and by giving particulars of the account stated. The amendment was allowed without terms, although the defendants produced aff'davirs of one of themselves and their attorney and connsel, stating that they were unprepared to make their defence at the then circuit to the claim of work and labour as set out in the amended particulars; that had the original particulars been served as amended they might have offered to suffer judgment and would have done so had they found the plaintiff's claim was correct; that, as no particulars had been served applicable to the count for an account stated, that count had not been regarded as bona fide, and in preparing for trial no consideration had been given to it; that if the amendment was allowed the defendants would be taken by surprise and were not prepared to make their defence, and great injustice would be done to them:—Held, that the defendants' affidavit shewed that the amendment was of a character to materially prejudice the defendants, and should not have been allowed without such terms as would, as nearly as might be, place the defendants in the position they occupied when the original particulars were served; and a new trial was ordered. Hicks v. Opden, 25 N. B. Reps, 361.

Account — Partnership — Interests of Partners.]—It is not necessary for a defendant, sued in assumpsit, to know the respective interests of each one of the plaintiffs in their partnership, nor to know the minor details of an account already for the most part paid. Callaghan v, Rutherford, 5 Q. P. R. 303.

Action by Advocate for Bill of Costs Fees and Disbursements — Procuration Copies of Proceedings-Demand of Particulars—Default of Plea — Opening Pleadings Closed—Terms.]—The defendant in default for a plea will be relieved from his foreclosure and be allowed to demand particulars of the plaintiff's account, upon payment of the costs, occasioned by his default. 2. The advocate in an action for fees and disburse ments in a former suit in which he acted for the present defendant's opponent, must state when the proceedings for which he claims fees were taken by him. 3. He must also indicate the object of his disbursements made in Court or at the sheriff's office, 4. He should also file the procuration of his client authorizing him to sue when he alleges such procuration. 5. Semble, that he is not obliged to file copies of the proceedings which he has taken nor of the acts which he has had made by a notary on behalf of his client. Desjardins v. Lamoureux, 4 Q. P. R. 338.

Action for Account—Postponement till after discovery. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. McDonald (Y.T.), 1 W. L. R. 271, 506.

Action for Goods Sold—Exception to Form.]—A plaintiff suing for a balance of an account for goods sold and delivered, without giving at the time of service of proces: details of the quantity, quality, nature, and kind of the goods sold, as required by Rule of Practice 56, will, on an exception to the form, be required to furnish such details on pain of his action being dismissed, Savaria v. Rosenfeld, 7 Q. P. R. 15.

Action of Ejectment—Defence of Encroachment.] — A general allegation of encroachment in the defence to an action for possession of land may be the object of a motion for particulars shewing when, bow, and to what extent the plaintiff has encroached upon the land of the defendant. Vallée v, Prescott, 4 Q. P. R. 279.

Breach of Contract—Statement of Damage, —In an action for damages resulting from a breach of contract, an allegation that the plaintiff has, through the breach, lost his custom and a large sum of money, by the ruin of his business, is sufficiently particularized. Gratton V. Dagenais, 5 Q. P. R. 261.

Commission on Sale of Goods—Information in possession of defendants, Blackley v. Rougier, 4 O. W. R. 153.

Contestation of Opposition—Illegality of Debentures of Railway Company.)—Pauticulars will be ordered to be given of a paragraph in a contestation, alleging generally the illegality of an issue of debentures of the execution debtors, a railway company, without averring in what the Illegality in question consists of an opposition to a seizure. Connolly Baie des Chaleurs R. W. Co., 4 Q. P. R. 178.

Damages — Plea that Danage Cowed by Plaintiff's Own Acts.]—When, in pleading to an action for damages, the defendant alleges that if the plaintiff has suffered any damage, which is denied, such damage is due to his own acts, the defendant will be ordered to give particulars of these acts of the plaintiff, and will not be allowed to prove other acts than those which be enumerates. Montreal and St. Lawrence Light and Power Co. v. Stillnedi. 5 Q. P. R. 148.

Declaration — Acknowledgment of Bebt Suef for—Promise to Pay.]—The Court will not order particulars of an oral acknowledgment of the debt sued for, alleged by the declaration to have been made by the secretary of the defendant company in the name of the company, nor of a promise to pay made in the same way. Montreal Watch Case Co. v. Imperial Button Works, Limited, 7, Q. P. R. 279.

Declaration — Amendment.] — Particulars furnished by the plaintiff pursuant to an order therefor, will not be set aside upon motion because they amount to an amendment of the declaration. Fournier v. Martin, 6 Q. P. R. 288.

Dedication of Town Site — Public User.]—In an action by the provincial Attorney-General for a declaration that the public had a right of access to the sea over the embankment of the Canadian Pacific Railway via certain streets in Vancouver, it was alleged that, in 1870, Her Majesty, by the officers of her colony of British Columbia, lad out and planned a town-site on Burrard Lulet and dedicated certain parts of the town-site to public uses:—Held, that the plaintiff must give particulars: (1) of the authority under which the town-site was laid out; (2) of the nature and dates of dedication and by whom made; and (3) of what portions of the town-site were dedicated. Attorney-General for British Columbia v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 10 B. C. R. 184.

Defamation — Justification—Damages—Costs—Grounds for Ordering—Surprise—Exception to Form.]—A motion for particulars assumes that the cause of action is sufficiently set forth; the defendant accepts and desires only to have additional or more precise information in order to prepare his defence.

Such a motion is not subject to the formalities of an exception to the form, from which it is different. It is a motion according to English law, and has always been admitted in Quebec jurisprudence; it is a matter of discipline in the conduct of causes in order that there may be no surprise. 2. Where the plaintiff in an action for libel has anticipated the defence and undertaken to justify the act of which the defendant has accused him, he will be ordered to give particulars of his grounds of justification, if his allegations are vague. 3. A defendant, on motion for particulars, may obtain an order that the plaintiff shall make more precise all the definite or vague allegations which he has made. 4. If the plaintiff alleges special damage he must give particulars of it. 5. The plaintiff in an action for libel claimed a lump sum of $25,000 damages to his reputation, his honour and his property:—Held, that he should give particulars of the special damage intended to be covered by these words, 6. The plaintiff claimed also $25,000 damages as "effective ment" caused by the libel. He was ordered to declare whether he intended to claim some special damage, and if so to give the particulars of it; but if general damages only, particulars would not be necessary. action for defamation the plaintiff stated that the defendant had defamed him before several persons. He was ordered to give the names of these persons, if he knew them, and also the dates. The defendant has a right to all the information which the plaintiff possesses. 8. The costs of a motion for particulars should be in the cause. Chicoutimi Pulp Co. v. Price, Q. R. 25 S. C. 351.

Default — Dismissal of Action,]—If a plaintiff neglects to give the particulars which he has been ordered to give, and if the alleations which he has thus neglected to supplement constitute the whole action, the other allegations being general and simply introductory, his action will be dismissed upon motion. Gravel v. Lafontaine, 5 Q. P. R. 82.

Demand — Time — Deposit.] — A demand of particulars is in the nature of a preliminary exception, and therefore must be made within the time fixed for the filing of such exceptions and be accompanied by a deposit, (But see 1 Edw. VII. c. 34). Alliance Nationale v. Union Franco-Canadiens, Q. R. 10 Q. B. 116.

Litigation between Agents — Principuls Added.]—T, sued McM. as the drawer of a bill of exchange payable to T's order, with an alternative claim against McM. on a guaranty that the bill would be paid. T. was the manager of the P. C, line, of Seattle, which owned the steamer Mexico, and the defendant was the agent of the D, and W. H. N. Co., and these two principals had through T. and McM. entered into a charter-party providing that the steamer Mexico should carry certain freight, for which the D, and W. H. N. Co. agreed to pay. McM. alleged that he gave the bill of exchange sued on along with the guaranty to T. as the balance of the freight moneys due under the charterparty, and the company set up a claim for demurrage, and advised McM. to pay. On an application made by McM. and the company as a defendant, and giving leave to counterclaim against P. C. line:—Held, on appeal, that the order was properly made, as the real parties in interest should be brought before the Court. Troubridge v. McMillan, 22 Occ. N. 421, 9 B. C. R. 171.

Separate Causes of Action—Joinder—Rales 185, 186, 187, 192—Third Party Notice—Indemnity.]—The plaintiff sued to recover the amount of a book debt assigned to him. The defendant admitted nothing, and pleaded payment and set-off:—Held, that the plaintiff was properly allowed to add as a party defendant the assignor of the alleged debt, and to make a claim against him, in the event of the original defendants succeeding in their defence, basing such claim upon an alleged warranty or a total failure of consideration. Rules 185, 186, 187, 192 discussed. Tate v. Natural Gas and Oil Co., 18 P. R. S2, and Evans v. Jaffray, I O. L. R. 614, followed. Smurthwaite v. Hannay, [1894] A. C. 494, Thompson v. London County Council, [1893] I Q. B. 840, and Quigley v. Waterloo Manufacturing Co., I O. L. R. 606, distinguished. Held, also, that the added defendant was properly allowed to give a third party notice to a bank, upon his allegation that he acted only as the bank's agent in assigning the debt. Conferderation Life Association v. Labatt, 18 P. R. 266, followed. Langley v. Law Society of Upper Canada, 22 Occ. N. 99, 3 O. L. R. 245, I O. W. R. 143, 718.

Separate Causes of Action—Joinder—Rules 186, 192.]—Where the plaintiff sought to join in one action the original and added defendants, in order that he might recover against the original defendants damages for breach of an alleged warranty of title and quiet enjoyment of the property in question, if it should appear that the added defendants rightfully dispossessed him of it, or, if it should appear that the latter were wrong-doers, that he might recover from them damages for the conversion of the property, his motion for an order to add them was refused:
—Held, that the causes of action were entirely separate, and there was no right to join them even as alternative causes. Thompson v. London County Council, [1899] 1 Q. B. 504, and Frankenburg v. Great Horseless Carriage Co., [1900] 1 Q. B. 504, followed. Child v. Stenning, 5 Ch. D. 695, commented on and distinguished. Quigley v. Waterloo Manufacturing Co., 21 Occ. N. 240, 336, 1 O. L. R. 606.

Specific Performance — Several Purchasers.]—Where the owner of property authorized two agents to make a sale for him, and each of them entered into a contract for sale:—Held, that in a suit by one purchaser for specific performance, the other had a right, on his own application, to be added as a party defendant. Bryce v. Jenkins—Exp. Levy, 8 B. C. R. 32.

Alternative Claims—Rule 186.] — A machine sold by the plaintiffs was burnt while in the premises of the defendant railway company at the place for its delivery to the purchaser. The plaintiffs brought this action against the railway company as carriers for the value of the machine and in the alternative against the purchaser for the price:—Held, that this could not be done, the relief claimed against the railway company being based on the assumption that the title to the machine was in the plaintiffs, and that against the purchaser on the assumption that title had passed to him, Quigley v, Waterloo Manufacturing Co., 1 O, L. R. 614, applied. Chandler and Massey, Limited, v, terand Trunk R. W. Co., 23 Occ. N. 172, 194, 5 O, L. R. 680.

Application to Strike Out—Matter of Substance. |—An objection that one joined as plaintiff in an action has no title to maintain the action, is matter of substance which should be raised on the pleadings as provided by Rule 250, and is not a proper subject for an application to strike out parties under Rule 185. Morang v. Rosc, 22 Occ. N. 168, 3 O. L. R. 354.

Assignce of Chose in Action—Transfer before Service of Process in Action by Azsignor — Dilatory Exception, 1—A party sued upon a claim which was, before process in action served, transferred to another, may ask, by dilatory exception, that the assignce be added as plaintiff to the action. Honan v. Anderson, 7 Q. P. R. 170.

Assignee of Claim—latervention.] — A judgment ordering a plaintiff to add the assignee of the claim as co-plaintiff, is not satisfied if the said assignee merely intervenes to protect his rights, and declares that he acquiesces in the plaintiff's conclusions, and that his only interest in the case is to have any sum in which the defendant may be condemned, paid to him, intervenant. Honan v. Anderson, 7 Q. P. R. 288.

Cause of Action—Exception to Form.]—Where two plaintiffs complain of the same grievances, and each one invokes a right of action proceeding from the same source, and their conclusions are to the same effect, the claims may be joined together by the plaintiffs, who can institute them only as a single suit, and in such a case the suit will not be dismissed upon exception to form. Slater Shoc Co. v. Trudeau. 5 Q. P. R. 314.

Cause of Action—Injuries Received in Same Collision—Adding Plaintiff,—Rule 206 is to be read in connection with Rule 185, and parties to an action who might have been joined under the latter may be added by way of amendment under the former. In an action against a street railway company for damages for running an electric car into the plaintiff and his horse and waggon in which his son was seated with him, who was also injured, the son was added as a party plaintiff in an action already commenced by the father alone. Liddiard v. Toponto R. W. Co., 23 Occ. N. 156, 5 O. L. R. 371, 2 O. W. It. 145.

Causes of Action—Partnership Account Conspiracy.]—The relief sought against the defendant J. was an account and damages for breach of a partnership agreement between him and the plaintiff; and that sought against the other defendants was damages for the malicious procuring of the breach by the defendant J. and for conspiracy:—Held, that despite the form of pleading, there was such unity in the matters complained of as between all parties as justified the retention of the co-defendants. Kent Coal Exploration Co. v. Martin, 16 Times L. R. 486, specially referred to. Evans v. Jaffray, 21 Occ. N. 336, J. O. L. R. 614.

Causes of Action-Pleading - Lease -Action to Set Aside-Fraud on Creditors-Right of Assignce for Creditors-Termination of.]-One of the defendants mortgaged land to the plaintiff bank, and then made an assignment under R. S. O. 1897 c. 147, to the other plaintiff for the benefit of creditors. The assignee conveyed to the bank the equity of redemption in the land. This action was then brought to have a lease of the land made by the mortgagor to his co-defendant declared void. The bank alleged that the lease, though dated before the mortgage, was not made until after it; and both plain-tiffs alleged that the lease was made voluntarily when the lessor was, to the knowledge of the lessee, in insolvent circumstances, and with intent to defraud creditors :- Held, that the right to relief upon the latter ground could be claimed only by the assignee under s. 9 of the Act, and his right terminated when he so dealt with the estate as to render the relief useless to it; and therefore the assignee was improperly joined as a plaintiff. Semble, that the proper order would be to strike out the name of the assignee as plaintiff and the claim to set aside the lease as fraudulent against creditors. The order made below, 7 O. L. R. 613, putting the plaintiffs to their election as to which claim they would pro-ceed upon, was, however, affirmed. Bank of Hamilton v. Anderson, 24 Occ. N. 347, 8 O.

Deed - Rectification-Cancellation - Independent Claims-Election.]-In considering the propriety of the joinder of defendants, the nature of the action and of the relief asked must be considered. If that relief is of an equitable nature, all parties must be before the Court whose presence is necessary to give the plaintiff if successful the full mea sure of his rights, assuming that the action is not multifarious. On the other hand, the plaintiff cannot join two independent claims merely because they happen to relate to the same subject matter, there being no connection otherwise between the parties. In an action claiming as against one defendant rectification of a deed and as against the other defendant cancellation as a cloud on the plaintiff's title of a deed from a third person to that defendant of part of the land which, as the plaintiff alleged, should have been included in the deed of which rectification was sought, an order was made as in Chandler and Massey v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 5 O. L. R. 589, requiring the plaintiff to elect as against which defendant he would proceed. Andrews v. Forsythe, 24 Occ. N. 134, 7 O. L. R. 188, 3 O. W. R. 307.

Industrial Printing Co., 5 Q. P. R.

Foreign Unincorporated Association
—Money of Union—Judgment Against Members of Union—Trust.]—Action against an association. Certain members were authorized by the Court to defend the action on behalf of themselves and all other members—Held, I. That the association was not a corporation, individual, partnership, nor a quasicorporate body. 2. That its members could not be sued by their adopted name. Certain costs were ordered to be paid by defendant members. The plaintiffs sought to garnishee a certain account ct the Dominion Bank, headed "Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' Union, No. 30".—Held, could not be garnished, as order that the defendants shall pay money, without more, cannot be enforced against the property of any one except the defendants themselves. Metallie Roofing Co. of Canada v. Local Union, No. 30, Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Association, 1 O. W. R. 573, 644, 2 O. W. R. 183, 206, 819, 844, 5 O. W. R. 05, 700, 6 O. W. Former Owners—Action to Fix Boundaries—Motion to Add Defendants.) — The defendants, before pleading, applied for an order that the plaintiff join several owners farther back, alleging that the boundaries of the lands adjoining could not be laid out unless that be done, and asked for a stay of proceedings meanwhile:—He/d, that the Court could not now be grante; that the Court could not now compel the plaintiff to go to the expense of joining these owners. The defendants themselves could, at their own risk, summon them, if they thought proper. Bestiviers v. Richardson, Q. R. 26 S. C. 128.

Negligence — Death of Plaintiff's Husband—Children of Deceased—Stay of Proceedings,]—In an action by a widow for damages caused by the death of her husband through the negligence of the defendants, the defendants cannot ask that the proceedings be suspended until the children of the deceased have been made parties to the suit. Thomson v. Singer Manufacturing Co., G-Q. P. R. 358.

Nullity of Action—Dilatory Exception.]
—The default of a plaintiff to bring before the Court a person who is a necessary party to the action does not render the action void as a matter of law, and such default should be invoked by a dilatory exception, and not by way of exception to the form. McNally v. Préjontaine, Q. R 11 K, B, 370.

Overflow of Water - Damage by -Separate Causes of Action — "Combined" Acts of Defendants — Election or Amendment.1 - Different defendants cannot be brought before the Court in the same action where the real causes of action that exist against them are separate. In this case the plaintiff sued for the obstruction of a water-course which passed through her property, causing it to be overflowed. The town corporation were charged by the plaintiff with having increased the volume of water, while also obstructing the watercourse. The defendant Webb was charged with having obstructed the watercourse where it passed through his land. And it was charged that the natural effect of the combined acts of the defendants was to cause the watercourse to obstructed and to overflow the plaintiff's land. Put it was not alleged that these acts were cone in concert, or that the defendants were jointly concerned in their commission:—Held, that the plaintiff must elect against which of the two defendants she would continue the action, or amend by setting up a joint cause of action. Hinds v. Town of Barrie, 24 Occ. N. 4, 6 O. L. R. 656, 2 O. W. R. 995.

Partnership—Persons interested—Mining ventures—Cautioner, McLeod v. Dawson, 6 O. W. R. 487.

Principal and Agent — Action for Breach of Contract — Alternative Ulain — Pleuding,1—In an action for breach of contract the plaintiff may join as defendants both the agent through whom the contract was made and his undisclosed principal, claiming alternatively against one or the other; the statement of claim in such case should read "the claims alternatively against one or other of the defendants," rather than "the plaintiff claims damages;" and, when the contract is in writing, the plea of a defendant, that, if any agreement was entered into between the plaintiff and defendant, it was entered into by such defendant as agent of the other defendant, and not on his own account, and that, at the time, the plaintiff knew he was so acting, is sufficiently pleaded, there being nothing to prevent the inference that the fact set forth in such allegation appeared on the face of the correspondence forming the contract. Hart v. Bissett, 37 N. S. Reps. 320.

Principal and Agent—Bailiff—Conversion—Counterclaim—Judicature Ordinance.; —In an action of conversion against a bailiff, an application under s. 45, J. O. 1893, by the bailiffs principal to be added as a defendant, on the grounds that the bailiff was entitled to be indemnified, and the principal was entitled to set up, by way of counterclaims, certain claims against the plaintiff not arising out of the conversion complained of, was refused. The plaintiff brought an action against the defendant for conversion of certain household furniture. The defendant applied to add or substitute, as a defendant, one O., on whose behalf he had, as bailiff, seized and sold the goods in question, alleging, (1) that O. had agreed to indemnify him against the seizure, and (2) that O. desired to be added or substituted as defendant for the purpose of counterclaiming against the plaintiff certain claims, none of which appeared to arise out of the subject matter of the action: — Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to substitute or add 0. as a defendant, as it was not necessary for the determination of the question in dispute, he being only indirectly interested in the result, and could be brought in by the defendant as a third party; and that he could not be added for the purpose of setting up a counterclaim which did not arise out of, and was not involved in, the subject matter of the action, Randall y, Robertson, 2 Terr. L. R. 332.

Principal and Agent—Order 16, Rules 4, 6.]—Action against an ugent and his undisclosed principal for damages for breach of contract. In the defences a point of law was raised that it was not competent to the plaintiff to join both in the same action:—Held, that under the old practice it was competent to the plaintiff to sue the agent in one action and the principal in another, but his remedy was limited to a judgment in one action. Having regard to these principles, Order 16, Rules 4 and 6, are wide enough to admit of the action being brought against both. The claim is not in the alternative. The plaintiff cannot recover against both, and must make his election before judgment. Honduras R. W. Co. v. Tucker, L. R. 2 Ex. 305, and Thompson v. London County Council, [1890] 1 Q. B. 845, referred to. Hart v. Bissett, 23 Occ. N. 335.

Recovery of Moneys Paid by Mistake.] — M. brought three separate actions against three insurance companies on three policies of insurance, two on the hull of defendant's vessel, and the third on freight. The three actions were tried together before a jury, but were not consolidated. Upon the findings of the jury judgment was entered for the plaintiff in each action separately with costs. The defendants moved in each action for a new trial, and these motions were dismissed, separate orders being issued. The defendants appealed in each action to the Supreme Court of Canada; and the three appeals were all heard together, but not consolidated. The appeals were allowed on payment by the defendants of the costs of the former within thirty days after taxation. There being some uncertainty as to the exact terms of this judgment, the defendants paid the plaintiff's sollcitors, under protest, the amount which the latter considered was payable to them as costs under such judgmeut, the defendants reserving the right to require repayment of any part of the amount paid. In an action on behalf of the three companies jointly to recover part of the money paid as having been paid by mistake:-Held, that the claims made against the three companies and their supposed liability being several, and the money to pay the costs having been contributed severally, the implied promise to pay back was several, and the title to the moneys was several, and therefore the companies could not be joined as plaintiffs in one action but they should have leave, on terms, to amend by striking out two of the companies and leave to tax the costs of the trial severally against each company. Insurance Company of North America v. Borden, 34 N. S. Reps. 47.

-Striking Out an action of 1 consisted of two land scrips which had been issued to the defendant B., and which it was alleged she had sold to McM. and allowed him to get possession of, having given him a written contract assigning them to him, but which scrips, it was alleged, she or her husband and a codefendant afterwards wrongfully seized and kept. It was alleged that McM. sold the scrips to one H., but did not assign to him the contract with B., and that H. sold the scrips to the plaintiff W. The action was brought by W. and McM. On his examination for discovery McM. stated that his sole interest in the scrips when the action was brought was to see that W. got them and to protect himself against claims by H. or W. if the scrips should not be located. The defendants moved to strike out McM.'s name on the ground that the above shewed that he had no interest in the subject matter of the action, and claimed no property in the scrips:—Held, that as between McM. and B., McM. had probably the legal title to the scrips. If so, he was properly joined as a plaintiff. If. however, his interest was equitable only, then Carter v. Long, 26 S. C. R. 430, seemed to be an authority that replevin can be brought on an equitable title. Wright v. Battley, 24 Occ. N. 278.

Representatives of Insured — Action against Assignee of Life Insurance Policy—Cancellation.]—The cessionnaire of an insurance policy, sued for cancellation thereof, cannot ask, by dilatory exception, that the heirs and representatives of the party on whose life and in whose favour the policy issued, should be called in to defend the action. "Series of Transactions" — Common Motive.]—The allegation that the defendants have been actuated by the same motive in each of a number of similar transactions between them and distinct plaintiffs is not sufficient to constitute the transactions a "series" within the meaning of Con. Rule 185, so as to enable the plaintiffs to join in one action. Order of Master in Chambers, 3 O. W. R. 621, affirmed, Mason v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. 325, S. O. L. R. 28, 3 O. W. Where, therefore, an action was brought against an extra-provincial company for penalties for carrying on business in Ontario without a license, and against an individual for penalties for carrying on the company's business in Ontario during the same period as its agent, the plaintiffs were ordered to elect as against which defendant they would proceed and the action was dismissed with costs as against the other. Tax Sale — Joint Wrong-doers,] — In an action to set aside a tax sale deed obtained by the defendant T, and for an account and damages against the defendant municipality, the tax sale was impeached on the grounds, amongst others, that there were no taxes due, that there was no proper assessor's roll or collector's roll, and that the provisions of the Municipal Clauses Act respecting tax' sales had not been observed:—Held, that the municipality were not improperly joined as parties defendant. Lasher v. Trethevay, 24 Occ. N. 290, 10 B, C. R. 438.

Trustee and Cestui que Trust — Amendment—Fraudulent Conveyance—Estoppel.]-In an action brought against a husband alone for the sale of land vested in his wife by an unregistered deed, and which the plaintiff contended was bound by a registered certificate of judgment against the defendant, the plaintiff applied, after the case had been set down for trial, for leave to amend his statedown for trial, for leave to amend his state-ment of claim by aldding the wife as a party defendant, and by alleging that the land in question was the defendant's property, and had been mortgaged by him with other lands to a bank; that, after the bank had commenced an action for foreclosure of the mortgage, it was agreed between it and the defendant that the bank should take a final order apparently foreclosing the defendant's title to all of the mortgaged lands, but should accept in actual satisfaction of its claim the mortgaged lands other than the parcel in question, and should hold the latter for the defendant; that such agreement was carried out; and that, after getting such final order, the bank, at the defendant's request, conveyed the parcel in question to the defendant's wife. who gave no consideration for it, but received and had always since held it solely as a trustee for the defendant. When he began the action the plaintiff had knowledge of the facts thus sought to be set up by amendment: -Held, that leave to amend as asked should be granted, on payment of costs, and that both husband and wife would be proper parties to such an action, notwithstanding that the defendant in his statement of defence had denied that he had any interest in the land. Such denial could not afterwards be set up as an estoppel against him in favour of his wife, or even in favour of the plaintiff, but would only be evidence that at one time, and for certain purposes, he had repudiated having any such interest. Bank of Montreal v. Black, 9 Man, L. R. 439, distinguished, Shiels v. Adamson, 24 Occ. N. 158.

Will—Action to Set Aside—Heirs—Executor—Pleading—Exception.] — A plantiff alleging nullity of a will is not obliged to make all the heirs parties, but, when indivisible debts or rights are in question, the party served may, by a declinatory exception, stay the suit until all the heirs have been brought before the vourt. 2. An executor sued for retaining the property of the estate after his functions have ceased, cannot, by exception to the foru, demand a dismissal of an action which has been brought against him personally. Coleman v. Stevens, Q. R. 25 S. C. 44.

Company — Officer of.] — In an action against a company for a declaration that the plaintiff was the owner of certain shares in the company, the company applied to have its president added as a third party, on the ground that he was the real defendant and was responsible for the action:—Held, that the defendant's remedy was by third party notice. Henley v. Reco Mining and Milling Co., 7 B. C. R. 449.

Gross-demand—Principal Demand—Contract.]—When a cross-demand arises from the same cause as the principal demand, the crossplaintiff may have the proceedings stayed for sufficient time to bring before the Court a third person who was a party to the contract upon which the principal demand is based. Larue v. Gerth, 5 Q. P. R. 322.

Defective Construction of Building—Privity.]— A defendant sued for damages for injury to the plaintiff by reason of the defective construction of a roof, may bring in as third parties en garantie the persons whom he has employed to construct the roof and who have done it hadly. 2. An inscription in law by the third parties brought in, alleging want of privity, will, in these circumstances, be dismissed with costs. Dagenais v. Caron, 5 Q. P. R. 42.

Defendant ea Garantie—Right to Appeal from Principal Judgment.]—A defendant en garantie. In the case of a formal guaranty, may appeal from the judgment in the principal action, although he has refused, in the first instance, to make common cause with the principal defendant. Him—Right of Plaintiff to Enforce—Right of Principal Defendant.]—Although ordered to intervene and take up the defence of the action in the place of the defendant in the principal action, a defendant "en garantie" is not obliged to do so. There is no privity between the plaintiff and the defendant en garantie ordered to take up the defence of the principal defendant, and who has neither appeared nor pleaded in the principal action, and therefore the principal plaintiff cannot proceed gasist him. The principal defendant may require that the defendant "en garantie," ordered to take up his defence in the principal action, and who has not intervened, indemnify him from the judgment rendered against him in favour of the principal plaintiff. Andrews y. Larocope, Q. R. 27 S. C. 107.

Garantie—Pleading—Defence.]—A third party brought in by the defendant en garante may take part in the principal action and do what is necessary for the preservation of his rights, but he cannot, after the defendant has appeared and pleaded in the action, file a defence absolutely identical with that filed by the defendant. Dryden v. Yuile, Q. R. 24 S. C. 315, 6 Q. P. R. 58.

Indemnity — Directions — Order allowing Notice—Appeal.]—In an action to recover damages for the death of an employe of the defendants, who was killed at a crossing of the defendants' rail vay with another railway, the defendants obtained an ex parte order allowing them to serve a third party notice upon the other railway company, claiming indemnity under an agreement whereby the latter company were allowed to put in the crossing at the point where the accident happened, upon their indemnifying the defendants against any claim for damages arising during the progress of the work. The defendants asserted and the other company denied that the accident in question happened during the progress of the work: — Held, that it was desirable that the question as to the defendants' liability to the plaintiff should be established in such a way as to be binding upon the third parties, although all the matters in dispute between the defendants and the third parties could not be determined in the action. Baxter v. France (No. 2), [1895] 1 Q. B. 591, distinguished. Form of order giving directions as to the trial and questions of costs in such a case settled. Semble, referring to Baxter v. Notice — Service Out of Jurisdiction — Partners—Amendment — Irregular Affidavit.] -After service of the writ the defendant applied for and obtained under Rule 60 (J. 1898), leave to issue and serve ex juris a third party notice on a partnership carrying tories. The notice was directed to them under the partnership name, and not to the several partners as individuals, and was served upon an officer of the partnership, and not upon any of the partners individually ;-Held, that the order giving leave to issue the third party notice to a firm not carrying on business within the jurisdiction, in the firm's name, was not authorized under Rule 60; (2) that such a notice must be personally served upon the members of the firm, where the firm does not carry on business within the jurisdiction. Notice - Time - Enlarging - Rules 209, 353.]-In an action for damages for trespasses to land and cutting down and removing timber and wood, the defendants in their statements of defence justified the acts complained of under agreements which they alleged authorized those acts, and to which the plaintiff's rights in the land were subject. The de-fendants served notice upon third parties claiming indemnity or relief over in respect of all liability which the defendants might be under to the plaintiff by reason of acts done by them on the faith of representations made by the third parties, who had sold to the defendants the standing timber on the land and the right to remove it, representing that they had acquired title from the owners under whom the plaintiff derived his title:—Held. that the third party notice was served too late (Rule 209), having been served not only after the time for the delivery of the defence, but after the pleadings were closed and the action entered for trial; and, under the circumstances, the time should not be collarged by virtue of the provisions of Rule 353. Semble, that it was not a proper case for contribution, indemnity, or relief over, under Rule 209.

Relief Over—Identity of Claims.]—The owner and occupant of a house in a town sued a gas company for damages alleged to have been sustained by reason of an escape of gas from the defendants' pipes upon the highway into the plaintiff's premises. The defendant served a third party notice upon the town corporation, alleging that the break in the pipes was caused by the negligence of the corporation in the course of construction of a sewer in the same highway:—Held, that there was no right to indemnity or relief over, within the meaning of Rule 209, as the damages which might be recovered by the plaintiff against the defendants were not the measure of the damages which might be recovered by the defendants against the third parties. Miller v. Sarnia Gas and Electric Co., 21 Occ. N. 507, 2 O. L. R. 546,

Right to Contribution or Indemnity -Application for Directions as to Trial-Warranty of Title.] - The plaintiff brought action against the defendants for breach of warranty of title to a horse sold by the defendants to the plaintiff. The defendants, in pursuance of leave given, served a third party notice on G., from whom they had bought the horse, claiming to be indemnified by him to the extent of any damages recovered against them by the plaintiff, on the ground of breach of warranty of title by G .: - Held, that upon the application for directions as to trial, the Court should consider the defendants' right to contribution or indemnity, and if satisfied that they were not so entitled should refuse to give directions, which refusal will be tantamount to a dismissal of the third party from the action. Held, also, that in the circumstances the defendants' claim against G. was not properly one for contribution or indemnity, and that no direction as to trial should be given. Bolduc v. Larose, 5 Terr. L. R. 6.

Settlement of Action.]—After a third party had been brought in and the usual directions as to trial given, the action was settled as between the plaintiff and the defendants:—Held, that the defendants could not proceed to trial as against the third party, and the action was dismissed as against the third party with costs, without prejudice to the right of the defendants to bring an action against the third party. Action Brought in Name of "C. & Co."—Sole plaintiff—Rules of Court. Cummings v. Ryan, 1 O. W. R. 149.

Action en Faux—Person: Profiting.]

In a principal action to de lare null a false document, just as in the case of an incidental inscription for the same purpose, it is not necessary to bring before the Court all the parties to the document alleged to be false, but it is sufficient to make a demand against the one who profits or is in a position to profit by such document. Aucde v. Chaurest, 5 Q. P. R. 6.

Action to Cancel Registration of Document — Registrar—Person Procuring Registration.]—In a suit to set aside the registration of a document affecting real property, it is proper to make the registrar a party, especially when it is alleged that he has treated as a right to real property that which was not in fact one. The neglect to make the one who has procured the registration a party is no ground for a defence in law. Rochez v. Champagne, 5 Q. P. R. 19.

Defendants by Counterelaim — Addition of—Pleading, 1.—The practice of the Supreme Court of the Territories permits a defendant to set up a counterclaim which raises questions between himself and the plaintiff, along with other persons, and to add such other persons a parties by counterclaim; the English practice respecting counterclaims contained in Order 21, rr. 11, 12, 13, 14, and 15, being in force in the Territories. Robertson v. White, 5 Terr. L. R. 311.

Defendants by Counterclaim—Service Out of Jurisdiction—Cause of Action.]—T., the British Columbia agent for the P. C. Line of Seattle, sued McM., the agent of the D. and W. H. N. Co., on a bill of exchange drawn by McM. on the company in favour of T. This bill was for the balance of freight moneys due under a charterparty entered into between the principals, and the company, having a claim against the P. C. Line for demurrage, obtained an order adding the company as party defendants, and giving them and McM. leave to deliver a counterclaim and serve it upon the P. C. Line (9 B. C. R. 171, 22 Occ. N. 421). An order was then made giving leave to McM. and the company to serve notice on the P. C. Line of the defence and counterclaim:—Held, that, as no cause of action or counterclaim against T. was shewn, there was no "action properly brought against some other person duly served within the jurisdiction," and hence there was no jurisdiction to take the order. Troubridge v. McMillan, 9 B. C. R. 443.

Fraudulent Preference—Action to Set Aside—Insolvent Debtor—Costs of Examination of, for Discovery.]—A fiat will not be granted under Rule 932 of the King's Beuch Act to tax to a plaintiff the costs of the examination of a defendant who was not a necessary or proper party to the action, although no objection on that ground was taker, prior to the application for the fiat. An insolvent debtor who has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors is neither a necessary nor a proper party to an action by the benefit of his creditors is neither a necessary nor a proper party to an action by the sassignee to set aside a fraudulent preference given by him. Motion to Add-Examination of Solicitors — Order for—Summons—Affidavit—Sub-pæna.] — Several actions for damages were brought against colliery owners by relatives of miners killed in an explosion, and the defendants applied to add the plaintiffs' solicitors as parties, and while the summons was pending they obtained under Rule 383 au order on summons, in support of which no affidavit was filed, for the examination of the solicitors as to what interest they had in the subject matter of the action :- Held, that the summons should have been supported by an affidavit shewing that it was probable that the solicitors had some interest in the subject matter of the litigation, and the order should not have been made as of course. A subpona under Rule 383 cannot be issued without an order therefor. Leadbeater v. Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., 24 Occ. N. 103, 10 B. C. R.

Municipal Corporation-Authority to Use Name — By-law — Retainer — Ratifica-tion—Application to Dismiss.]—Under s. 35: of the Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 316. which provides that "the powers of the council shall be exercised by by-law when not otherwise authorized or provided for," a by law is not necessary to authorize the commencement of an action, but a municipal corporation may give such authority by resolution under the corporate seal. Town of Barrie v. Weaymouth, 15 P. R. 95, Barrie Public School Board v. Town of Barrie, 19 P. R. 33, and Brooks v. Torquay, [1902] 1 K. B. 601, followed. Where an action has been commenced without authority, a subsequent ratification of the proceedings by a properly executed retainer will be a sufficient answer to an application by the defendant to dismiss the action, subject to the question of costs. P., were residents of England and members of the firm of S. & Co., which carried on business in England only. The plaintiffs issued two writs of summons (neither of which was for service out of the jurisdiction) in respect of the same cause of action, the defendants named in one being the firm and S., G., and H. P. individually, and in the other the three individuals only. The writs were served on H. P. while on a visit to British Columbia, and he entered conditional appearances, and applied to have both writs set aside, and (in the alternative) as to the second action, have it dismissed as vexatious:-Held, that the name of the firm was wrongly inserted and should be struck out of the first writ, and that the plaintiffs should elect as to which action they would proceed with. Before the hearing of the appeal, the plaintiffs gave notice that they were content that the gave notice that they were content that the name of S. & Co. should be struck out of the writ:—Held, that the defendant appellant was entitled to the costs of the appeal up to the time of the service of the notice, and the plaintiffs to the costs subsequent, Oppenheimer v. PARTITION.

Acquisition of Entirety by Licitation — Effect of Incumbrances upon Undivided Shares—Preference on Shares of Price.]— Shares—Preference on Spares of Fried, Art. 746, C. C., which declares that the co-partitioner who acquires the entirety of an undivided immovable by licitation, is deemed to have always been the owner of such entirety, establishes a fiction of law in favour of such co-partitioner, which must be re-stricted to the party in whose interest alone it was created. One of the effects of this fiction is, that he acquires the entirety free from all incumbrances; but when the price of the property licitated is deposited in the hands of justice for distribution, the fiction has not the effect of nullifying rights of preference on the shares of the price accruing to the other co-partitioners. Art. 2021, C.C., which declares in effect that a hypothec upon an undivided portion of an immovable ceases to subsist when a partition or a licitation conveys the immovable to a person other than the one who constituted the hypothec, extinguishes the right to follow the property in the hands of such person, but does not abolish the right of preference upon the share of the price which represents the undivided portion of the immovable which was hypothecated, and which price has been placed in the hands of justice for distribution. The partition or licitation has the same effect as a sheriff's sale, which discharges the property sold from the hypothecs which existed at the time of the sale, but does not destroy the efficiency of such hypothecs upon the proceeds of the sale which represent the property. Bruneau v. Banque Jacques-Cartier, Q. R. 10 K. B.

Action for—Plea to—Portion Claimed.]
—It is illegal to plead to an action for partition that the plaintings part of the succession is less than that which he claims, his right to demand partition being the same in any case. Cabana v. Latour, 5 Q. P. R. 102.

Application for Summary Order — Question of title—Direction to bring action. Tasker v. Smith, 5 O. W. R. 254.

Costs — Judgment — Substitution — Sale under Execution—Report on Distribution—Contestation of—Curator to Substitution.]—The plaintiff, a stranger to the substitution, was owner of an undivided fourth of certain immovables, of which the defendant had the other three-fourths, but burdened with a substitution, of which the contestant was the curator. In an action for partition the immovables were divided, and the judgment ordered that the taxed costs of all parties should be massed and the defendant should pay three-fourths of them, and the plaintiff one-fourth. The judgment was registered. R., the plaintiff's advocate, baving judgment against the defendant for costs, caused to be seized and sold a part of the immovables allotted to the defendant in the partition. The contestant was a party to the seizure and sale. The price obtained at the sale was reported by the sheriff with a certificate of the registrar, which stated the substitution and its registration and a hypothec made, since the parti-tion, by the defendant to P., his advocate in the action. The debt of R, having been paid out of the purchase money, there remained a balance which the prothonotary awarded The curator contested this, alleging that P. had been paid his debt, which at any rate, was the defendant's own debt, for which the substitution could not be held bound, and asked that the balance should be paid to him (the contestant). P., while not opposing this demand, and submitting his rights to the Court, alleged that the amount of his hypothec included $45.89 for costs in the partition action, and he said that in case any part of that sum ought to be placed to the charge of the substitution, he was willing to give security for repayment of the portion for which he had no lien. The contestant did not prove that P.'s debt had been paid: Held, that P.'s declaration was an actual plea, which obliged the contestant to proceed as in a contested cause. 2. That the curator had no status to assert that P.'s debt had been paid, 3. That the partition bound the substitution. 4. That the debt of R. for costs of such partition was preferable to the substitution and was apparent on the record, and the decree had purged the substitution. 5. That R. had a lien on the substituted immovables for his debt. 6. That the defendant and the contestant should, as to costs, join their claims together. 7. That the balance of the purchase money belonged to the substitution, and it was the duty of the curator to see that it was not diverted. 8. That the curator should have proceeded by way of opposition afin de conserver, or by an intervention, but the procedure which he had adopted was equivalent, and should be maintained. 9. That the hypothec made by the defendant, having effect so long as the substi-tution was not opened, P. had the right to be paid the balance of the purchase money, upon his furnishing security to repay it upon the opening of the substitution. 10. That as to $26, costs of P. usefully incurred in the partition, he had a lien superior to the substitution, and to this extent he was not obliged to give security. 11, That the costs of the contestation should be paid by P., but to be taxed as the costs of a contestation of collocation in law only. Pelletier v. Michaud, Q. R. 20 S. C. 413.

Counterclaim for Reformation of Deeds — Defence of Limitations Act—Res Judicata.] — In an action for partition of land, and land covered with water, of which the plaintiff and defendants were alleged to be tenants in common, the defendants counterclaimed for the reformation of a deed from the plaintiff, to make it include all the plaintiff's interests in the lot in question. The Court refused the reformation claimed, on the ground that the evidence was not sufficient no mutual mistake, or fraudulent conceniment, on the part of the plaintiff, having been proved, and gave judgment in favour of the plaintiff for partition of all portions of the lot not built on, and those built on within 20 years:—Held, that the question of 20 years' adverse possession could not be raised by the defendants in this action, that question having been raised and decided adversely to them in a previous action by the same plainting in relation to the same land. Zwicker v. Morash, 36 N. S. Reps. 365.

Creditor of Co-parcener — Lies on Lands—Decree.]—A creditor of the defendant in respect of a sum of money which the defendant has engaged to pay at the time of an expected partition, among the heirs, of entailed property, has the right to be paid out of such property, and in such a case the decree should declare the land free from the entail. Précost v. Précost, 4, Q. P. R. So.

Ouster — Conduct Amounting to Mesne Profits — Waste—Damages—General Costs
—Costs of Proceedings under Order of Reference Subsequently Reversed-Costs of Appeal -Variation of Judgment.] - Appeal by defendant company from judgment of Teetzel. J. (3 O. W. R. 14), in favour of plaintiff for partition of Monro Park, near the city of Toronto. The partition sought was between plaintiff and defendant company for the remainder of the term of a lease to defendant company, which was not binding on plaintiff, as he was an infant when it was made:—Held, it was manifest, as well from the testimony as from the whole circumstances, that there was no intention on the part of any of the parties to the conveyance to take from plaintiff any part of his rights as the owner of an undivided one-third of the premises, or to give any of his property or rights to his brother and sister, so as to increase their property and rights and leave him with less than each of them was to have Neither his brother nor sister contended that there was any such intention or that they understood that to be the effect of the conveyance. It was not intended to affect the railway company as lessee of two undivided one-third shares. And if the general words of grant and release contained in the conveyance operated to take away from plaintiff or to convey to his brother and sister any right of his in the premises during the existence of the term, it was proper and just to reform it so as to prevent it from so operating. The railway company could not reasonably complain of this being done. Throughout the litigation they contended that the partition made was not binding on them. So far as the railway company were concerned, it was resinter alios acta. Then, as the railway company were not parties to or bound by it, they could not insist that the conveyance made must stand for their benefit, even though it be shewn or admitted to be contrary to the intention of the parties to it. The railway company gave no new consideration, and their position has not altered. They held their lease and their leasehold interest unaffected by the partition. The railway company can not be permitted to take for their benefit the property of plaintiff because by mistake he had executed a conveyance which ap peared to give rise to a claim to that effect. From the date of the repudiation of the lease by the plaintiff, he was entitled to possession of the whole of the premises in common with the railway company, who were bound upon demand to let him into possession along with give must for t it is reply stood it way the he railw buildi after and t before facts tiff t broug sessio but ti did n Settle plaint ns for mesne dence proper Judge was so of the this 1 Monre 1992 of 1992 o them. On 17th August, 1900, plaintiff wrote to the railway company stating his repudiation of the lease and asking the company to give him immediate possession. This demand must be reasonably construed as a claim not for the sole but for the joint possession, and it is apparent from the company's letter in reply of 20th August that it was so understood. The demand was not assented to, but it was sought to induce plaintiff to confirm the lease and accept the rent under it. The railway company had at that time their buildings and tracks upon the premises, and after the demand they continued in possession and used the property in the same way as before. It was a fair inference from all the facts that there was a refu al to permit plaintiff to enter. And when this action was brought, there was not only a refusal of possession on the part of the railway company, but there was a denial of his title. The lease did not come within the provisions of the Settled Estates Act so as to be binding on the plaintiff. Ouster being found, damages either as for trespass or by way of allowance for mesne profits should follow, and upon the evidence as to the value and rental of adjoining properties it cannot be said that the trial Judge has made an excessive award. There was some slight evidence of waste destructive of the freehold, and the amount awarded on this head ($50) should not be disturbed. Monro v. Toronto R. W. Co., 4 O. W. R. 392, 9 O. L. R. 299.

No Common Title - Easement - Summary Application—Adjournment — Action— Order—Appeal.] — Where, on summary application for partition or sale of lands, it was alleged by the defendant and prima facie evidence given that he had acquired, as to part of the land, title by possession, and as to the residue, had only an easement or right of way over it, and no title to the land itself: -Held, that, there being no common title, no interest in common, an order for partition or sale should not be made. It was not open to the plaintiff by admitting an ownership in the land in the defendants, which the latter did not assert, to get a sale by partition proceedings, and thus force the defendants to protect their easement by purchasing, or per-mitting it to be destroyed by sale. The Master should, on the question of title being raised, have adjourned the hearing of the application, allowing an action to be brought. An appeal lay to a Judge in Chambers from the Master's order granting the application. Stroud v. Sun Oil Co., 24 Occ. N. 298, 7 O. L. R. 704, 8 O. L. R. 748, 3 O. W. R. 806, 4 O. W. R. 212.

Objection by Tenant for Life—Premature Action—Trustee under Marriage Settlement—Interests of Infant—Will.—Under an ante-nuptial settlement lands were settled in trust for, successively, the lives of the plaintiff, the settlor, and his intended wife, and on their death to the children of the intended marriage for such estates or estate as the plaintiff and the intended wife should appoint, and in default of appointment to the children in equal shares, with powers of maintenance during minority. After the marriage the plaintiff conveyed all his interest in the lands to one W., who conveyed to the wife. The wife predeceased the plaintiff, having by her will devised the lands to one E. W., who had been appointed the trustee under the settlement in trust to receive and pay over the income from the said lands to the children during their minority, and on their attaining their majority to hand over to them their shares. There were three children, one of whom died prior to, another subsequent to, the death of the said wife, leaving one surviving. The plaintiff, on his wife's death, claimed to be entitled to a share in the said lands as one of the heirs of the child who had died subsequently to his said wife, and brought an action to have the same partitioned or sold, to which E. W. objected:—Held, that, in the face of the objection of E. W., the trustee and representative of the life estate, the action was premature, her consent being a prerequisite to its maintenance. Rajotte v. Wilson, 24 Occ. N. 351, 3 O. W. R. 787.

Particulars — Inscription in Law—Parties—Addition of, J.—If it does not clearly appear from the declaration that a certain person predeceased another, the defendant, in an action for partition, may ask for further particulars, but cannot inscribe in law. 2. The fact that all necessary parties have not been brought before the Court is no ground for the dismissal of an action, but when the original parties fail to add the necessary parties, the Court itself should order the calling in of said parties. Hurtubise v. Stamford, 5 Q. P. R. 151.

Parties — Tenants in Common—Lease—Infant—Repudiation.]—The plaintiff, having when he came of age repudiated a lease to the defendants of land of which he and his brother and sister were tenants in common, made when he was an infant, and having made a partition by deed with his brother and sister, to which the defendants were not parties:—Held, Macleman, J.A., dissenting, that the brother and sister were necessary parties to the plaintiff's action for a partition as against the defendants in respect of their possession under the lease. Judgment of a Divisional Court, 4 O. L. R. 36, 22 Occ. N. 231, 1 O. W. R. 25, 316, 813, reversed, and judgment of Meredith, C.J., ib., restored, Monro v. Toronto R. W. Co., 21 Occ. N. 165, 5 O. L. Pleading — Share of Plaintiff — Quantum.]—A defendant, sued for partition of an estate, cannot plead that the plaintiff's share is less than that which he alleges by his declaration. Cabana v. Latour. Q. R. 23 S. C, 255.

The purchaser, so sued for the recovery of an undivided part of an immovable which he is in possession of as a whole, has a right to set up as a defence the payment made by his grantor and the improvements made by him-self upon the immovable in question. Special Value-Discretion.]-The form of judgment for partition or sale (Con. Rules, No. 158) must be read in the light of the legislation by which the Court has been given the right to order a partition instead of a sale, and its meaning is, that a partition is to be made unless it is shewn by those who ask for a sale that a partition cannot be made without prejudice to the interests of the owners of the estate as a whole. A report directing partition was therefore upheld where there was no physical difficulty in dividing the land, and the plaintiffs had been allotted that portion of it adjoining other lands owned by them, the argument in favour of a sale being that the portion allotted to the plaintiffs was of special value to them so that in the event of a sale it would have been necessary for them to purchase the whole of the land at whatever price it might have been bid up to, and thus have benefited the co-owners. History of legislation affecting partition. Ontario Power Co. v. Whatter, 24 Occ. N. 128, 7 O. L. R. 198, 3 O. W.

Succession or Community - Partition of Part — Property Subject to Usufruct— Movables—Account, | One of the several coowners of an undivided universality, e.g., a succession or a community, is not entitled, in principle,—and without alleging special circumstances shewing that some portion of the property comprised in such universality is temporarily or permanently insusceptible of partition.—to demand the partition of part only of the property comprised in such succes-sion or community. The object to be partitioned is the mass composed of all the property, movable and immovable, comprised in the universality, not the particular proper-ties which go to form the mass, treated separately. 2. The fact that a property forming part of a succession or community is subject to a right of usufruct does not prevent its partition among those having the nue pro-priété. 3. As regards the movables of a community, the mere fact that they have been converted into money, that the surviving consort has received one-half of the proceeds, and that the other half has been employed by the executor in part payment of debts, is not sufficient to justify the non-accounting for such money by the surviving consort, and by as an incident of the partition. Farrell, Q. R. 21 S. C. 231.

PARTNERSHIP

Account-Judgment Directing-Extension of Time-Separate Defences of Partners.]-The Court will not extend the delay, fixed by the judgment, for the defendant to render an account, unless special and sufficient rea-sons be adduced. The fact that the defendants, co-partners, pleaded separately, and that judgment was rendered against one defendant before the delivery of judgment in the case of the other, is not sufficient ground for extending the delay to account fixed by the first judgment so that the defendants may account together. Action against Firm — Amendment—Abundonment of Part of Claim—Re-service—Parties.]—The claim in an action against a commercial partnership cannot be amended so as to eliminate all conclusions taken against the firm and one of its members, and continued against another of its members, without service of the claim as amended, or the amendment, the service of this amendment at the same time as of the motion to amend upon the attorneys of this firm being sufficient service upon the partner. Sykes v. Dillon, 7 Q. P. R. 285.

Action against Firm — Death of one Partner—Retivor—Personal Representatives.]

—When an action has been brought against a commercial firm, and one of the members of that firm dies while it is still pending, the defence must be taken up by the heirs and representatives of the deceased partner, in his place, and not by the surviving partners, who have become the only owners of the assets of the firm. Wilkins v. Eadic, 4 Q. P. R. 402.

Action in Name of Firm-Demand for Names—Sole Member—Motion — Costs.]— The plaintiff, who carried on business alone in a firm name, brought his action in the firm name. The defendants' solicitor demanded the names and places of residence of all persons constituting the firm, and no answer was given until four days afterwards, when the plaintiff's solicitor gave the information to the defendants' solicitor in the office of a special examiner; but at the same hour notice of a motion by the defendants for an order for the information was served at the office of the plaintiff's solicitor. On the return of the motion counsel for the defendants asked only that the costs of the application be made costs in the cause: -Held, that, as the plaintiff was the cause of the difficulty in using a firm name, he might well have been ordered to pay the costs so occasioned. and an order was made as asked by the defendants. Cummings v. Ryan, 22 Occ. N.

Action Pro Socio — When it may be Brought—Account.] — The action pro socio brought during the existence of the partner-ship, and before the dissolution thereof, is premature, and will be dismissed, even when only partial settlement or acounting be asked, e.g., where an account is asked as to two of many contracts held by the partnership. Luchance v. Vieu, Q. R. 25 S. C. 399.

Advocates — Firm Debt — Several or Joint Liability — Promissory Note.]—The members of a partnership, in this case a firm of advocates, are not responsible severally for partnership debts, and they are not liable to third persons except jointly in equal parts; this distinction applies to commercial debts which the partnership may contract, as, for instance, a promissory note signed in the firm name. Dronin v, Gauthier, 5 Q. P. R. 211.

Agency — Factor — Pledge — Lien—Notice—Res Judicata.]—A partner intrusted with possession of goods of his firm for the purpose of sale may, either as partner in the business or as factor for the firm, pledge them for advances made to him personally, and the lien of the pledgee will remain as valid as if the security had been given by the absolute owner of the goods, notwithstanding notice that the contract was with an agent only. Where a consignment of goods has been sold and they remain no longer in specie, the only recourse by a person who claims an interest therein is by an ordinary action for debt, and he cannot claim any lien upon the goods themselves nor on the price received for them. The plen of res judicata is good against a party who has been in any way represented in a former suit deciding the same matter in controversy. Dinguall v. McBean, 20 Occ. N. 374, 30 S. C. R. 441.

Agreement - Construction - Continuance after Expiry of Term-Deceased Partner -Purchase of Share-Discount-Good-will,] -A deed, providing for a partnership during seven years from its date, provided for pur-chase by the survivors of the share of a deceased partner, with a special provision that if one partner, K., should die, the value of his share should be subject to a discount of twenty per cent. After the seven years had expired, the partners continued the business by verbal agreement for an indefinite period, and, while it so continued, K. died: Held, that, even if the parties had not admitted that the business was continued under the terms of the partnership deed, such terms would still govern, as there was nothing the deed repugnant to a partnership at will; that the surviving partners had, therefore, a right to purchase the share of K., and to be allowed the deduction of twenty per cent. therefrom, as the deed provided; and that, in the absence of any stipulation in the deed to the contrary, the good-will of the business and K.'s interest therein should be taken into account in the valuation to be made for such purpose. Evans v. Jaffray, 2 O. W. R. 678, 3 O. W. R. 877, 6 O. W. R. 738.

Agreement to Form-Failure to Furnish Capital-Dissolution - Account.] - A contract by which two persons agree to enter into partnership from a fixed date, which also defines the nature of the business to be carried on, the contributions and shares of the partners, and stipulates a forfeit in case of non-fulfilment of the agreement, creates a valid partnership on and from the date appointed. 2. The failure of one partner to formally tender his share of the capital does not necessarily prevent such agreement from having effect. He would be liable to interest from the day on which he made default to pay, and his partner would have a right to obtain damages and demand a dissolution of the partnership if the default continued. The fact that one of the partners, after acting with the other as his partner, secretly registered the business in his own name, and asserted that he was not a partner, is sufficient ground for an action by the other partner for dissolution of the partnership and for an account. Whimbey v. Clark, Q. R. 22 S. C. 453.

Appointment of Liquidator — Discretion of Court.]—Petition for the nomination of a liquidator for a limited partnership. By the terms of the partnership agreement, the plaintif was to furnish his time and skill, and the defendant was to provide the capital. Each party was to draw $20 a week salary. After doing business for five weeks, the firm got into difficulties. The plaintiff ceased work, and brought this action for the appointment of a liquidator. He had at that time drawn out $112:—Held, that the appointment of a liquidator was in the discretion of the Court: that in the present instance it would be merely imposing a useless expense upon the defendant, as the whole cost would fall on him, the plaintiff having no pecuniary interest in the business; and the petition was dismissed with costs. Sorignet v. Henry, 23 Occ. N. 118.

Assets — Salary of Partner as Crown Official — Dissolution.]—While C, and M, were in partnership as architects, M, received an appointment from the Dominion government as supervising architect and clerk of the works, in connection with a government building being erected in Nelson, and for a time M, paid the salary of the office into the partnership funds. M, afterwards notified C, that the partnership was at an end, and thereafter refused to account for the salary. C, sued for a declaration that he was entitled to half the salary since the dissolution: — Held, that, even if it were agreed that the appointment should be for the benefit of the firm, the plaintiff would not have any right to share in the salary after dissolution unless there was a special agreement to that effect. The production of a power of attorney must be made in the suit where the same is required; and the deposit of a power of attorney at the office of the prothonotary, in compliance with the Insurance Act, is insufficient. 3. The power of attorney required by art. 177. C. P., must confer upon a resident of Canada power to institute suit on behalf of the plaintiffs. Liverpool and London and Globe Ins., Co. v. Creditors of Partner - Diversion of Money by Formatiow of Partnership—Fraud —Action Paulienne—Assignment—Cift—Personal Debt—"Person."]—A partnership cannot be annulled as having been formed in fraud of the creditors of one of the partners, unless its formation has caused them prejudice, and unless the person with whom their debtor has contracted, knew at the time of its formation that it would cause them this prejudice. 2. A creditor who is in a position to bring an action to set aside a transaction as fraudulent, has no right to demand that a third person, who has dealt with his debtor, shall be condemned to pay him what the latter owes him. 3. The payment by a person forming a partnership into the business of fund which constitutes all his property, is not an act a titre universel. 4. An assignment, even à titre universel, does not bind assignee to the payment of the debts of the assignor, unless the assignment is made by way of gift, and not if it is made à titre onercux. 5. When two partners are sued jointly and severally and as partners for a debt alleged to be a debt of the partnership, but which is really only the personal debt of one of the partners, the partner who is the debtor may be, in the action so begun, condemned alone to pay the debt. Dissolution — Account—Construction of articles—Division of assets. Gouinlock v. Baker, 4 O. W. R. 118.

Dissolution—Account—Profits from Portion of Assets Withdrauen by Partner)—Partners owe each other a reciprocal account of everything that arises from the common property, up to the time of the division to be made of the property, and one of them cannot divide the remedy which the law gives Lim for the liquidation of the partnership affairs. Therefore, an action does not lie for an account of the profits which one of the partnersh has made, since the dissolution of the partnership, from the use of an article belonging to the assets of the partnership, when no liquidation has been made of the partnership affairs, and while there still remains common property the division of which is not demanded. Heffernan v. Sheridan, Q. R. 11 K. B. 3.

Dissolution — Accounts.]—One of two partners at will in an hotel business agreed to sell his interest to a third person, and then went away to another province. The processor refused to complete because of all leged non-compliance with certain conditions, and the vendor brought this action claiming as against him specific performance, and, in the alternative, as against his partner who had continued to carry on the business, a Dissolution — Goodwill—Customers — Use of Firm Nume—Injunction.]—An appeal from the decision of McDonald. CJ., 23 Oct. N. 299, was dismissed, the Court holding that the use of the firm name by the defendant was both misleading and injurious to the plaintiff. Macdonald v. Miller, 24 Occ. N. 137.

Dissolution—Interlocutory Injunction — Assets,]—A partner in the course of an action for dissolution of the partnership has, against his co-partner, the right to an interlocutory injunction to restrain the latter from continuing to infringe the rule that the partners must continue in the same position as regards the assets until the action has been tried out. Bourdon v. Dinelle, 5 Q. P. R. 240.

Dissolution — Solicitors — Goodwill — Right to Firm Name—Acquiescence—Abandonment — Injunction—Parties.] — Upon the dissolution of a partnership, in the absence of an agreement between the partners to the contrary, the firm name being a part of the roodwill, and not having been dealt with upon the dissolution, remains the property of all the partners, like any other undisposed of partnership property; and each member of the k-rapertnership is entitled to carry on business in the firm name, subject to the limitation that no man has a right to hold out his late partner as still being his partner in business, contrary to the fact. Burchell v. Wilde, [1900] 1 Ch. 151, followed. A firm of solicitors had carried on business a "Smith, Rae & Greer" down to October, 1902, and after that until the dissolution of the firm in January, 1903, as "Smith & Greer;"—Held, that both the names must be taken to have formed part of the goodwill of the firm at the time of the dissolution of

At the time of the dissolution the firm consisted of four members. Taree of them formed a new firm and used the name "Smith, Rae, & Greer." The fourth, the defendant, protested against the others assuming that name, but, on their refusing to abandon it, notified his clients, the legal profession, and the public, that he had severed his connection with the firms of Smith, Rae, & Greer and Smith & Greer, and intended to carry on his own business under his own name. For nearly ten and a half months he adhered to this position, frequently addressing his late partners as "Smith, Rae, & Greer," and permitting them to acquire the right to be known by that name as its sole owners:— Held, that he could not, after this conduct and lapse of time, assume the name of Smith, Rae & Greer, and that the members of the firm who had adopted that name were entitled to have him enjoined from using it. Levy v. Walker, 10 Ch. D. 436, 448, followed. Rae had at one time been a member of the old firm of Smith, Rae, & Greer, but had ceased to be so before the dissolution. He permitted his name to be used in the style of the new firm, but was not a member of it, and was not practising as a solicitor:—Held, that he was not a necessary party to the action, nor was there such danger of liability being inwas there such danger of Hability being in-curred by him by his being held out by the defendants as a partner as entitled him to an injunction. Foreign Judgment—Corporation — Action—Judgment—Estop,pel—Service — Bxecution—Judgment—Land judgment was recovered by the planitiff in Quebec against certain defendants sued and described as "La Compagnie de Publication Le Temps," a corporation having its head office in Ottawa, Ontario, in an action for libel. There was no incorporated company in Ontario of that name, but a partnership in that name was registered in Ottawa, the partners being F. M. and his wife. This action was begun by writ of summons specially indorsed with a claim for the amount of the Quebec Judgment. The writ was served upon F. V. M., the manager of Le Temps Publishing Co. but without the notice in writing required by Rule 224, informing him in what capacity he was served. Le Temps Publishing Co. appeared by the name mentioned in the writ as if sued as a corporation, and the plaintiff obtained a summary judgment against the defendants, and afterwards an order to examine F. M. as a partner in what was now called the defendant partnership. Upon a motion by the plaintiff for leave to issue execution against F. M. and his wife, as members of the partnership, an issue was directed to determine whether they were members and liable to execution:—Held, that it must be taken that the judgment in this jurisdiction was recovered against a partnership, and not against a corporation. If the Quebec judgment was to be regarded as one against a corporation, and therefore not capable of being the foundation of an action thereon against a partnership firm of the same name, that objection should have been taken, but was not, on the motion for summary judg-On that motion it might have been shewn, but was not, that there never had been an effective service of the writ upon the firm, or the firm might have moved to set aside the faulty service on the manager. Neither of these courses having been taken, there was an unimpeached judgment against a firm, which could not be attacked in a collateral proceeding; and it was open to the plaintiff to apply under part (2) of Rule 228 for leave to issue execution against F. M, and his wife as members of the firm; and, as they disputed their liability, the question, not of the validity of the judgment, but of their liability as members of the firm to execution thereon, should be determined by the issue directed. Gibson v. Le Temps Publishing Co., 24 Occ. N. 21, 6 O. L. R. 690, 2 O. W. R. 1122.

Holding out - Evidence-Admissions -Finding out Extractic Admissions Finding of Trial Judge—Ratification—Consideration—Estoppel.]—O, purchased goods from the plaintiff on the credit of a partnership, which he represented to the plaintiff existed between himself and the defendant. The trial Judge, on contradictory evidence of the statements and conduct of the defendant after the goods were supplied, accepted the plaintiff's version of what took place, and held that the admissions of the defendant established a partnership. On appeal, the Court, while feeling bound to accept the trial Judge's view as to the credibility of the witnesses, was of the opinion that the evi-dence did not establish a partnership, but established a ratification by the defendant. Per curiam: A ratification is not a contract; it is the adoption of a contract previously made in the name of the ratifying party, and made in the hame of the ratifying party, and it requires no consideration to support it. The dissenting judgment of Martin, B., in Brook v. Hook, L. R. 6 Ex. 89, must be taken Bank of New Brunswick, 23 S. C. R. 277, followed. A statement by T., made after the goods were supplied, that he and the de-fendant were partners, would not,—though a "holding out" to the same effect made before the goods were supplied would,—consti-tute an estoppel. Grady v. Tierney, 20 Occ, N. 193, 4 Terr. L. R. 133.

Judgment—Execution Against Partners—Husband and Wife—Separate Estate—Dissolution of Partnership—Registered Declaration.]—A man and wife made a statutory declaration.]—A man and wife made a statutory declaration under R. S. O. 1847 c. 152, that they were partners. A judgment was recovered against the firm. Wife set up that she was incapable of becoming a partner of her husband:—Held, that a registered declaration signed by the husband only that the partnership had been dissolved was no evidence in his favour and that the wife was precluded from setting up that she was incapable of becoming a partner of her husband. Execution against the wife limited to her separate estate. Gibson v. Le Temps Publishing Co., 25 Occ. N. 40, 8 O. L. R. 707.

Limited Partnership—Special Partner—Contribution—Cash — Interest in Previous Partnership.]—The contribution of a special partner must be in actual cash paid at the time of the formation of the limited partnership. The provisions of art. 1872. C.C., which require that the contribution of a special partner shall be "in cash payments," are not compiled with where the circumstances are as follows. A person became a special partner in a firm, for the term of one year. At the end of the year a new partnership was formed, without liquidation of the pre-existing business, and while there were debts of the first firm outstanding. The special partner became a special partner in the second firm, and his contribution was stated in the certificate at $501, in goods then in the possession of the firm. Barry v. Hamed, Q. R. 26 S. C. 265.

Loss of Capital—Depreciation in Machinery.)—Where under a partnership agreement a partner gave to the partnership busness his time and skill, and the use of, but not the property in, certain machinery, in consideration of a weekly salary, and one-half of the net profits of the business:—Held, that he was not entitled to an allowance for the depreciation in the value of the machinery arising from ordinary wear and tear on the taking of the partnership accounts, as a loss to him of capital put into the business. The words "carry on business" sufficiently designate a commercial or trading business in the sense of arts. IS34 and IS34 (a). C. C., especially where it is further alleged that the defendant acted in violation of those articles. 3. The word "alone" sufficiently indicates that the defendant was not associated in partnership with any other person. 4. The word "transmit" a declaration is not sacramental, and the word "file" may be substituted therefor. 5. The name "Rothiolz, Sponging Co.," used as a business name is manifestly such a name as is referred to in s. 50.30, R. S. Q. Bull v. Lanigon, 3 Q. P. R. 329, Q. R. 19 S. C. 30.

Pleading - Reply - Obligation to Pay reading Reply Golgation to Pay for Goods Purchased by Partner before Partnership—Fraud—Formation of Partnership—Creditors—Capital—Assignment Personal Debt of Partner, — A plaintiff cannot, by a special reply, reform, complete, or modify his declaration. 2. One who, not being a purchaser, obtains goods which have not been paid for, does not thereby incur an obligation to pay for them. 3. A partnership can be annulled as having been contracted in fraud of the creditors of one of the partners, only if its formation caused the creditors prejudice, and if he with whom their debtor contracted knew at the time of its formation that it would cause such prejudice. 4. A creditor who is in a position to bring an action to set aside a transaction as fraudulent, has no right to claim from a third person, who has dealt with his debtor, payment of what the debtor owes him. 5. An act by which a perdettor owes him. S. An act by which a per-son forming a partnership puts in capital constituting all the property he has, is not an act a titre universel. 6. An assignment, even a titre universel, does not impose upon the assignee the obligation of paying the debts of the assignor, unless the assignment is made à titre de donation, and not if it is made à titre onereux. 7. When two part-ners are sued jointly and severally and as partners for a debt alleged to be the debt of the partnership, but which is in fact only the personal debt of one of the partners, the personal debtor may, in such an action, be adjudged to pay the debt. Purchase of Property—Re-sale at Profit—Agreement for Division—Consideration—Declaration of Trust.] — Upon information supplied by the plaintiff, the defendant purchased certain property, which upon re-sale yielded a surplus after meeting, a liability the defendant had assumed for the benefit of the plaintiff father. The defendant promised the plaintiff and the event of there being a surplus it should belong to him:—Held, that the plaintiff and defendant were not partners in such a way as to entitle the plaintiff to share in the profits from the re-sale of the property, and that the defendant's promise, which was not a declaration of trust, was mudum pactum. Leighton v. Hale, 25 (ex. N. 88, 3 N. B. E. Eq. 68.

Real Estate Brokers — Necessity for Registration—Action for Penalty—Costs.)—A partnership of real estate brokers is not a partnership for trading purposes, within the meaning of s, 3 of the British Columbia Partbership Act, and a declaration of partnership need not be registered. An action to recover a penalty under the Act being dismissed, it was held that there was power to award costs to the defendants. Paisley v, Nelems, 25 Occ. N, 111.

Salary of One Partner as Government Architect—Right of Co-partner to Share in —Receiver—Book Debts.]—While C. and M. were in partnership as architects, M. received an appointment from the Dominion government as supervising architect and clerk of the works in connection with a government building being erected in Nelson, and for a time M. paid the salary of the office into the partnership funds. M. afterwards notified C. that the partnership was at an end, and thereafter refused to account for the salary. sued for a declaration that he was entitled to half the salary since the dissolution, and nair the sainty since the dissolution, and asked that a receiver be appointed of it, and also of the book debts of the firm, which he alleged M, had been collecting and not accounting for:—Held, by the full Court, that no receiver of the salary could be appointed; that, although the amount of the book debts was small, there should be a receiver in respect to them. Per Hunter, C.J., at the trial: -Even if it were agreed that the appointment should be for the benefit of the firm, all the partners would not have any right to share in the salary after the dissolution of the firm, unless there was a special agreement to that effect. Syndicate for Promotion of Joint Scock Company—Trust Agreement — Construction of Contract—Administration by Majority of Partners — Lapse of Time Limit—Specific Performance.]—A syndicate consisting of seven members agreed to form a joint stock coupany for the development, etc., of properti-s owned by two of their number, the defendants, under patent rights belonging to two other members; the three remaining members, of whom the plaintiff was one, furnishing the capital; and all members agreeing to assist in the promotion of the proposed company. In the meantime the lands were acquired by the defendants, and patent rights were assigned to them in trust for the syndicate, and the lands and patent rights were to be transferred to the syndicate or to the company without any consideration save the allotment of shares proportionately to the interest of the parties. The stock in the proposed company was to be allotted, having in view the proprietary rights and moneys con-tributed by the syndicate members, in proportion as follows: 371/2 per cent. to the defendants who held the property, 321/2 per cent. to the owners of the patent rights; the other three members to receive each 10 per cent, of the total stock. A time limit was fixed within which the company was to be formed, and, in default of its incorporation within that time, the lands were to remain the property of the defendants, the transfers of the patent rights were to become void, and all parties were to be in the same position as if the agreement had never been made. The 10th clause of the agreement provided that, in case of difference of opinion, three-fourths in value should control. Owing to differences in opinion, the proposed company was not formed, but, within the time limited, the plaintiff and the other two members, holding together 30 per cent, interest in the syndicate, caused a company to be incorporated for the development and exploitation of the enterprise, and demanded that the property and rights should be transferred to it under the agreement. This being refused, the plaintiff brought action against the trustees for specific performance of the agreement to convey the lands and transfer the patent rights to the company, so incorporated, or for damages :- Held, that the 10th clause of the agreement controlled the administration of the affairs of the syndicate, and that, as three-fourths in value of the members had not joined in the formation of a company, as proposed, within the time timited, the lands remained the property of the defendants, the patent rights had reverted to their original owners, and the plaintiff could not enforce specific performance. Excavations under—Rights of adjoining owners—Reversioners—Landlord and tenant—Injunction. St. Leger v. T. Eaton Co., 4 O. W. R. 205.

Raising—Dumage to Adjoining House—Cause of—Liability—Damages.]—The owner of a house who wishes to raise the party wall must give previous notice thereof to the owner of the adjoining house, in order to give him time to prepare for the work, and thus avoid all responsibility other than that proceeding from his negligence or want of care. 2. If the damages incurred by the co-owner of the party wall are the result not of the raising of the wall but of the party wall, the one who has done the work of raising is not responsible for these damages. In other words, the co-owner of the party wall has no recourse against the one who raises the wall, when the damages which he suffers are the result of faulty construction of his own building. Demers v. Lemieux, Q. R. 21 S. C. 28.

Rights of Neighbour - Youndation -Custom.]—The proprietor who first builds a house wall, intended to become common, has a right to establish the base of the wall on the first soil sufficiently strong to support the wall which he intends to construct, and is not obliged to go deeper, although his neighbour may require a greater depth, and may offer to bear the cost of the increased excavation and masonry. If the neighbour desires to have a heavier building, necessitating a deeper neavier building, necessitating a deeper foundation, he must make the under structure at his own expense. 2. The proprietor first building a wall destined to become common, has a right to extend the footing courses more than 9 inches on his neighbour's land, where such extension is necessary to secure the solidity of his wall. 3. Article 520, C. C. has no application to house walls, but refers to fence walls only; house walls being governed, not by positive law, but entirely by custom, which varies according to local conditions and usages, which, in the city of Montreal, require a footing course wider than the body of the wall, where the same is necessary for the solidity of the wall. Anticipation—Novelty.]—A patent for prisms intended for use in deflecting the course of rays of light falling obliquely or horizontally on glass placed vertically, as in the ordinary windows of houses or shops, is not void for anticipation by reason of prior patents for prisms for use where the light falls vertically or obliquely on glass placed horizontally, as in pavements. Semble, that if the former patent were to be broadly construed as for a device for deflecting the course of light passing through glass, it would fail for want of novelty. Lusjer Prism Co. v. Assignment for Limited Period — Sale Thereafter.] — A person who is the assignee of a patented right for a limited period, with a right of purchase, but who at the expiration of such period elects not to purchase, and reassigns the patent, cannot thereafter sell the patented article, though made during the time he was assignee, his right to make and sell being restricted to such imitted period; and under the powers conferred on the Court by s. 31 of the Patent Act, R. S. C. c. dl, an injunction may be issued restraining such sale. Bennett v. Wortman, 21 Occ. N. 527, 2 O. L. R. 292.

Claim-Patentability.] - The application of well-known things to a new analogous use is not properly the subject of a patent. defendants employed a solution of hydrochloric acid to remove from pickled eggs the deposit of carbonate of lime that forms upon them while being preserved in a pickle of lime-water. From the known properties of the acid and its use for analogous purposes it was to be expected that it would accomplish the purpose to which it was put. The purpose was new, and the defendants were the first to use the process and to discover that it could be practised safely and with advantage in the business of preserving and marketing eggs, but there was nothing in the mode employing such solution demanding the exercise of the inventive faculties: - Held, that there was no invention, and that a patent for the process could not be sustained. —When there are more than two conflicting applications for any patent, and one of the applicants has intimated to the commissioner or the deputy commissioner or person appointed to perform the duty of that officer, that he will not unite with the other applicants in appointing arbitrators, the appointment may be made by that official without notice to or consultation of the wishes of the other applicants; and he has the absolute right to deed, without possibility of his decision being reviewed by prohibition or injunction, whether the conditions exist in which he should proceed to exercise the power of appointment. Faller v. Aylen, 24 Occ. N. 322, 8 O. L. R. 70, 4 O. W. R. 97.

Construction of Articles Previous to Patent—Right to Sell after Patent—Consent of Inventor.)—The defendants bought from the plaintiffs a punching bag, which had on it the words "Pat. applied for," and, before the issue of the patent, manufactured and advertised for sale a number of similar bags in spite of the plaintiffs, remonstrances; and, after patent obtained by the plaintiffs, nevertheless continued to sell the bags which they had manufactured: — Held, that the defendants were entitled to do so under s. 46 of the Patent Act, R. S. C. 1886, c. 61; and that it made no difference that they had acted without the consent of the inventor. Fowell v. Chown, 25 O. R. 71, distinguished. Lean v. Huston, S. O. R. 521, distinguished. Victor Sporting Goods Co. v. Harold A. Wilson Co., 24 Occ. N. 211, 7 O. L. R. 570, 2 O. W. R. 465, 3 O. W. R. 496.

Expiry of Foreign Patent—British Patent,—By the true construction of s, 8 of the Canadian Patent Act, R. S. C. c, 61, as amended by 55 & 56 V. c, 24, s, 1, a Canadian patent expires as soon as any foreign patent for the same invention existing at any time during the continuance of the Canadian patent expires. A British patent is a foreign patent within the meaning of the Canadian Patent Act. Judgment in 31 S. C. R. reversed, and that in 20 Occ. N. 274, 6 Ex. C. R. 357, restored. Dominion Cotten Mills Co. v. General Engineering Co. of Ontario, [1902] A. C. 570.

Importation and Non-manufacture— Patent Act. s. 37.]—A patentee is not in default for not manufacturing his invention, unless or until there is some demand for it with which he has failed to comply, or unless some person has desired to use or obtain it and has been unable to do so at a reasonable price; and where the invention is a process only, the patentee satisfies the statute and the condition of his patent by being ready to allow the process to be used by anyone for a reasonable sum. Anderson Tire Co. of Toronto v. American Dunlop Tire Co., 5 Ex. C. R. 100, referred to. 2. The effect of s. 31 of the Patent Act is to make the patent void only as to the interest of the person importing or causing to be imported the artiele made according to the process patented and importation by a licensee will not avoid the patent so far as the interest of the owner is concerned. 3. Semble, that the importation of an invention made in accordance with a process protected by a patent, is an importaprocess protected by a patent, is an importa-tion of the invention. But, quære, whether the provision of s. 37 of the Patent Act, requiring the manufacture in Canada of the invention patented, after the expiry of two years from the date of the patent, applied to the case of a patent for an art or process. Hambly v. Albright, 22 Occ. N. 201, 7 Ex. C. R. 363.

Infringement—Assignee and Assignor—Estoppel—Fair Construction.] — Where the original owner of a patent had assigned the same, and was subsequently preceeded against by the assignee for the infringement of the patent so assigned, the former was held to be estopped from denying the validity of the patent, but, inasmuch as he was in no worse position than any independent member of the public who admitted the validity of the patent, he was allowed to shew that on a fair construction of the patent he had not infringed. Indiana Manufacturing Co. v, Smith, 24 Occ. N, 387.

Infringement—Foreign patent—Application for Canadian patent—Time—Evidence, Milner v. Kay, 1 O. W. R. 200.

Infringement—Assignee and Assignor—Estoppel—Construction.]—Where the original owner of a patent had assigned it, and was subsequently proceeded against by the assignoe for infringement thereof, the assignor was held to be estopped from denying the validity thereof; but, inasmuch as he was in no worse position than any independent person who admitted the validity of the patent, he was allowed to shew that, on a fair construction of the patent, he had not infringed, Indiana Manufacturing Co. v. Smith, 24 Occ. N. 387, t Ex. C. R. 154.

Infringement - Improvements in Car Wheels-Combination-Utility.]- The plaintiffs were owners of Canadian letters patent numbered 63,608 for improved abrading shoes for truing up car wheels. The improvement consisted in the use of an abrading shoe in which there were a number of pockets filled with abrading material. Between the pockets were spaces or cavities to receive the material worn from the wheel, the spaces having openings in them to facilitate the discharge of such material. Prior to the alleged invention abrading shoes had been used in which there were similar pockets filled with abrading material; and other shoes had been used in which there were similar spaces or cavi-ties. The plaintiffs' abrading shoe, however, was the first in which these two features were combined, or used together :- Held, that there was invention in the idea or conception of combining these two features for the purpose of truing up car wheels. 2. That the invention was useful. Griffin v. Toronto R. W. Co., 7 Ex. C. R. 411.

Intringement—Lontern Globe—Want of Element of Incentiveness.]—In an action for infringement of letters patent for improvements in lanterns, one feature only of the lantern, the globe of which could be lifted vertically for the purpose of lighting the lamps, came in question; and as to that, one Issue was whether or not in the idea or conception that if the bail of the lantern was made of the right length to drop under the guard or plate of the globe, the bail would hold up the globe while the lantern was being lit, or in the working out of that idea or conception, there was invention to sustain a patent:—Held, that there was no invention to constitute a valid patent. Kemp v. Chown, 22 Occ. N. 89, 7 Ex. C. R. 306.

Infringement—Metal Weather Strips—Prior American Patent—Narrow Construction.]—The defendants had manufactured a form of metallic weather strip in Canada very much neare to that shewn and described in an American patent to a date prior to the Canadian patent owned by the plaintifs than it was to any of the forms shewn and described in the plaintiffs' patent:—Held, that if the plaintiffs' patent was good, it was good only for the particular forms of weather strips shewn and described therein; and that upon the facts proved the defendants had not infringed. Chamberlin Metal Weather Strip Co. of Detroit v. Peace, 25 Occ. N. 144, 9 Ex. C. R. 399. Infringement—Novelty — Onus. Lang

Infringement-Parties to Action - Service out of the Jurisdiction - Domicil.]-To an action by the holder of a patent of invention against persons resident within the jurisdiction for an injunction against infringement of the patent and damages, other persons not within the jurisdiction, who make and sell to the defendants the goods which are the subject of the plaintiff's complaint under another patent which the plaintiff al-leges to be null and void, are neither necessary nor proper parties, and service upon them of an amended statement of claim asking for damages and an injunction against them and for a declaration that their patent is null and void, will be set aside with costs.

The statement of claim did not allege that the non-resident parties had done anything as to which an injunction could be asked against them in Manitoba, and upon its allegations the only relief the plaintiffs could possibly claim against them would be a declaration that their patent was null and void. thus raising two distinct and separate causes of action, one against the parties within the jurisdiction and the other against the nonresident parties, both of which issues should not be tried in one action. Under the Patent Act, R. S. C. c. 61, as amended by 53 V. c. 13, the Court has no jurisdiction to impeach a patent held by a person whose domicil is in another province, but could only, on the application of a defendant sued in this province for an infringement of such a patent, declare it to be void as against him, leaving it primă facie valid as against everyone else. Maw v. Massey-Harris Co., 23 Occ. N. 26. 14 Man. L. R. 252.

Interpretation of Letters Patent-Infringement-Combination of Old Elements. -The rules of interpretation to be applied to a patent, which is a contract between the Government or the public and the patentee. are those which are applied to all other con-The intention of the parties must be found in the contract itself, and the interpretation of its several clauses is a question of law which is left to the Court. In case of doubt, the contract is interpreted against him who has stipulated, i.e., the patentee. 2. In a patent for a combination of old elethe subject-matter of the patent is ments, the combination itself taken as a whole, which cannot be infringed unless the whole combination be used, without omitting any ele-ment which the inventor himself considered material. 3. In the present case, the hinge joint was a material part of a patent for a hose coupler, and as this was not used by the respondent, there was no infringement, Judgment in Q. R. 18 S. C. 44, reversed. Came v. Consolidated Car Heating Co., Q. B. 11 K. B. 103,

License—Alterations and Improvements—Rights of Licensee,1—The plaintiff granted to the defendants a license under seal to use a patented invention of his, being an automatic air brake, and to manufacture and equip their rolling stock with the same. He complained that, though the object of his agreement was that his brake might be advertised by its user on the defendants road in the form in which he had patented it, the defendants were injuring his invention by Manufacture—Extension of Time.]—A patent of invention expires in two years from its date, or at the expiration of a lawful extension thereof, if the inventor has not commenced and continuously carried on its construction or manufacture so that any person desiring to use it could obtain it or cause it to be made. A patent is not kept alive after two years have expired by the fact that the patentee was always ready to furnish the article or license the use of it to any person desiring to use it, if he has not commenced to manufacture. Smith v. Barter, 2 Ex. C. R. 474, overruled on this point. The power of extension beyond the two years given to the commissioner of patents, or his deputy, can only be exercised once. Quaere: Can it be exercised by an acting deputy commissioner?— Power v. Griffin, 23 Occ. N. 79, 33 S. C. R. 39.

Manufacture of Patented Article-Violation — Importation — Intention — Forfeiture — Elements — Intringement — Anticipation.]—1. The object of the law, in requiring the manufacture of the patented article in the country where the patent issues, being to protect the labour and industry of the country, the violation of the law, in order to incur the forfeiture of the patent, must be intentional and of such a character as to injure the national labour. The forfeiture of a patent is not incurred by an importation of a trifling character, or by one made unintentionally. 2. A Canadian patentee is not de-prived of his rights under the Canadian patent by the refusal by the United States patent office, through one of its examiners, of a demand by the patentee for a patent similar in effect to one claim of the Canadian patent, and his submission to such decision. proposition that all elements described in a combination patent of old elements are presumed to be essential, and that such a patent ceases to be protected when one of the elements is left out in the machine of the alleged infringer, is not sustained by the law of Canada. Even the inventor's opinion that the element omitted is essential may be passed over when a better opinion, sustained by experiments, tends the other way. The test of infringement is, whether the substance and essence of the invention has been taken. the omissions and additions in the machine of the alleged infringer are not material, the mere fact that there are certain parts of the patented combination omitted and certain parts added, cannot prevent an infringement where the substance and essence of the patented invention has been taken. 4. A patent cannot be attacked on the ground of anticipation even where most of the elements, taken separately, were known and used previously, but in a different method, as in the present case, where an entirely different steam hose coupler was used prior to the plaintiff's invention of an end-port steam coupler. Consolidated Car Heating Co. v. Came, Q. R. 18 S. C. 44.

Novelty - Patentability - Pleading -Amendment—Costs.]—S., the plaintiffs' pre-decessor in title, obtained Canadian letters patent No. 20,566, for certain improvements in wear plates for railway ties, which, ac-cording to the specification of the patent, consisted in a flat body-portion, provided at its opposite sides with defending flat-edge flanges, adapted to enter the wooden body of the great-ties without injuries it here. of the cross-ties without injuring it, the flanges being relatively parallel and lying in planes approximately at right angles to that of the body-portion. The inventor claimed : (1) a wear plate for railway ties consisting of a body having projecting flanges at its side edges; (2) the combination with a rallway rail and supporting cross-tie of a wearplate consisting of a body having projecting side flanges; the plate being interposed be-tween the rail and tie with its flanges entered into the tie longitudinally or parallel with the grain or fibres of the tie. The substance of the invention was the projecting or defending flanges at the edges of the plate. adapted to enter the wooden body of the cross-tie without injuring it. S. had also obtained an earlier patent, in 1882, which differed from the one above set out only in having one or more flanges or ribs placed under the plate for insertion into the tie. its object being the durability of railway ties. Prior to S.'s improvements, iron or steel plates had been used as tie plates, and it was common knowledge that the insertion of such a plate between an iron or steel rail and a wooden tie would give greater durabil-ity to the rail; that reduction of the weight of the plate without loss of strength could be effected by using channel iron or angle iron or by having the plate made with flanges or ribs; and that if such flanges or ribs were sharpened they could be driven into the tie. and that such flanges or ribs would in that position assist in holding the plate in place: -Held, that there was no invention in either of the improvements for which S.'s patents were granted. 2. Costs were whicheld because the judgment proceeded upon a defence not raised in the pleadings, but in respect of which the defendants were allowed amend after the trial. Servis Railroad Tie-Plate Co. of Canada v. Hamilton Steel and Iron Co., 8 Ex. C. R. 381.

Prior Public User—Experiments—Dedication to Public.]—The use of an invention by the inventor, or by other persons under his direction, by way of experiment, and in order to bring the invention to perfection, is not such a public use as, under the statute, defeats his right to a patent. But such use of the invention must be experimental, and what is done in that way must be reasonable and necessary and done in good faith for the purpose of perfecting the device or testing the merits of the invention; otherwise, the use in public of the device or invention for a time longer than the statute prescribes, will be a dedication of it to the public; and when that happens the inventor cannot recall the gift. Comeay v. Ottawa Electric R. W. Co., S Ex. C. R. 432.

Steadying Device in Cream Separators — Improvement — Narous Construction, —The invention in question consisted in the substitution of an improved device for one formerly in use as part of a machine, in this case a tubular cream separator:—Held, that the patent must be given a narrow construction, and be limited to a device substantially in the form described in this patent and specification. Sharples v. National Manufacturing Co., 25 Occ. N. 148.

PAUPER.

Leave to Appeal in Forma Pauperis.]—While no precise or definite rule can be laid down as to the proof to be adduced in support of applications for leave to proceed before the Court of King's Bench in forma pauperis, the Court will be more exacting in a case like the present, where the appellant, claiming a share of an estate, is appealing from a unanimous adverse judgment of the Court of Review, and is, moreover, still capable of earning a livelihood, than it would be in an action for an alimentary allowance, or for damages by a person incapacitated for work by an accident, and particularly where the judgment appealed from has been in favour of the party making the application. Boucher v. Morrison, Q. R. 11 K. B. 129.

Maintenance-Liability of Overseers -"Expenses Necessarily Incurred "-Notice.] -The defendants declined to pay expenses incurred by the plaintiff in connection with the support and maintenance of C, and her infant child, paupers chargeable to the district, on the ground that the paupers in question had been placed with D. by the overseers. and that they were removed by the plaintiff from the house where they had been placed to his own house, without the know edge and consent of the overseers :-Held, assuming this to be the case, and that the plaintiff had acted improperly in connection with the removal of the paupers, he was under no obligation to support them longer than he chose to do; that the paupers remained chargedo; that the paupers remained charge-able to the district; and that the defendants, after notice from the plaintiff, must remove the paupers, and provide for them, or pay all charges thereafter necessarily incurred for their support. The care of C., while it and confined to bed, charges for medical attend-ance, and expenses of burial, were all necessary expenses, for which the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Medical attendance was an expense necessarily incurred, for which the plaintiff was entitled to recover, although he had not actually paid the bill, such attendance having been furnished at the plaintiff's request, and on his responsibility. The notice given by the plaintiff to the overseers to provide for C., must be held to apply to and include her infant child, who, to the defendants' knowledge, was living with her, although the child was not specially mentioned in the notice. Naos v. Overseers of the Poor for District No. 3, 35 N. S. Reps. 316.

Relief-Expenses Necessarily Incurred -Proceedings to Recover-Examination - No tice-Pleading-Reduction of Amount. |- ln an action by the overseers of the poor district of one county against the treasurer of another county, to recover expenses incurred in and about the removal of a pauper, pursuant to an order for removal, and of the suant to an order for removal, and of the relief, on examination, of the pauper, pre-vious to such removal, the order for removal was impeached, on the ground that it did not shew, on its face, that the pauper was examined previous to such removal:—Held, following Rex v, Tavistock, 3 D. & R. 431. that this was unnecessary. The defendar, having had notice of the amount claimed, should have pleaded, if he considered the amount excessive. A statement of claim was good which set out the following particulars. viz., the application to the plaintiffs for relief, that the pauper had no settlement there; examination of the pauper under oath; transmission to the defendant of copies of the depositions; neglect to remove; the making of the order for removal; the amount of expenses necessarily incurred; demand for payment, and refusal. Nevertheless, as the amount claimed appeared to be excessive.
the order for judgment for the plaintiffs should be conditioned upon an undertaking on the part of the plaintiffs to reduce the amount. Cumberland Overseers of the Poor v. McDonald, 35 N. S. Reps. 394.

Action — Non-registration of Declaration—Agent of Insurance Company—Registration on Day of Service of Writ—Institution of Aviton.]—The institution of an action dates from the service of the writ, and not from the issue of the writ, and hence, in a qui tam action against the agent of an insurance company to recover a pennity for failure to register the declaration required by art. 4754, R. S. Q., a certificate shewing that the declaration had not been registered within sixty days nor up to the date of issue of the writ, is insufficient to establish default, where it appears that the writ was not served until four days after its issue and that the declaration was duly made and registered on the day of such service. If the writ was served before registration, the lurden of proving that fact was on the plaintiff, which proof he had not made. Inglis v. Aitken, Q. R. 23 S. C. 528.

Action — Parties—Association—Groun.]
—A suit under s. 12 of 62 V. c. 90 (Q), which makes liable to a penalty of not mors than $10 every person who, without a license of the barbers' association of the province of Quebec, shaves or trims the beard or cuts the hair of any person for payment or promise of payment, cannot be begun in the name of the crown or of some person suing as well in the name of the Crown or of some person suing as well in the name of the Crown as in his own name. Barbers' Association of the Province of Quebec v. Blanchard, Q. R. 21 S. C. 201.

Action for—Statute—Parties.]—Where a special statute, or the Consolidated Statutes of Quobec, or the Municipal Code, authorizes any ore to institute an action for a penalty in his own name, he may do so, although the penalty for which he sues is payable half to himself and half to the Crown. Poirrier v. Boursier, 7 Q. P. R. 10.

Affidavit—Commissioner — Form,]—The affidavit required for the institution of an action for a penalty under the provisions of the charter of the city of Montreal, may be made before a commissioner of the Superior Court, as well as before a justice of the peace. 2. The defendant suffers no prejudice in fact if the affidavit of the sureties is not in the first person. Lapointe v. Berthiaume, 6 Q. P. R. 217.

Commissioner of Schools — Contract with Corporation, —The defendant, a commissioner of schools for his parish, had undertaken to warm the school of his precinct, in consideration of $10 a year:—Held, that this trivial contract was not a violation of the spirit of the law, and therefore an action for a penalty brought against him should be dismissed. Cantin v. Lachance, Q. R. 19 S. C. 144.

Compounding Action for Promissory Note for Costs—Failure of Consideration.]— The plaintiffs instituted an action qui tam The plaintiffs institutes an action qui tam for a penalty, and, further, asking for the confiscation of certain pictures. He also lodged a flat for a writ in an action to recover damages. The penal action was subsequently discontinued, and the plaintiff received from the defendant two promissory. notes, in the consideration of which the costs of the action qui tam were included. In an action on the promissory notes:—Held, that the discontinuance or suspension or compounding of a popular or qui tam action, without the consent of the Crown or of the Court, is prohibited by law, and such prohibition applies from the amount of the issuance of the writ in such action. 2. The fact that the plaintiff prayed for the confiscation of the pictures, in addition to a condemnation for penalties in favour of the Crown and himself, did not make it less impossible for him to discontinue or compound the action so far as the recovery of penalties shareable with the Crown was concerned. 3. A promissory note given by the defendant in settlement of such action is null and void, but where the settlement of the penal action formed only part of the consideration, and the settlement of the damages claimed by the plaintiff in the other action was the consideration for the rest of the amount, the note was held good so far as regarded the settlement of damages. Laprés v. Masse, Q. R. 19 S. C. 275.

Municipal Corporation—4ction by Istorrer—Crown—Writ of Summons—Necesary Averments.]—A person of full age who brings against a municipal corporation an action to recover the penalty provided by art. 733 of the Municipal Code, suing in his own name. must state in the writ of summons that he is suing for the Crown, to whom the penalty belongs; he must claim the penalty, not for whomsoever has a right to it, but for the Crown by name. Durat v. Corporation of St. Alexandre, Q. R. 24 S. C. 271.

Municipal Corporation—Right of Action Against—Resident of Municipality.]—
By virtue of s. 335 of 54 V. c. 86, a statute incorporating the town of Drummondville, any adult person residing in the said town may begin in his own name a penal action such as is mentioned in s. 330 of that Act, or such an action as is authorized by s. 4857, R. S. Q., and art. 1046, C. M. Poirier v. Cusson, Q. R. 21 S, C. 407.

Non-registration of Partnership—Foreign Partners—Factor—Firm Name.]—In an action for a penalty brought against C, doing business as C, & Son, for failure to register his business as required by law, it was proved that C. was not carrying on business alone, but was in partnership with another person, and that both partners resided in a foreign country—Held, that laws imposing penalties cannot be extended beyond their clear provisions, and that the court cannot PENALTY.

Nova Scotia Towns Incorporation Act Qui Tam Action - Right of Informer to Bring-Stay-Statute of Limitations-Interpretation Act.]-A qui tam action for the recovery of the penalties prescribed by the Towns Incorporation Act, R. S. N. S. c. 71, in the case of a person who acts as mayor after becoming disqualified. Section 56, s.-s. 3, of the Act prescribes the penalty, namely, $20 for each time he 35 acts. Section 238 provides that "all actions and prosecutions for penalties for breach of any of the provisions of this chapter may, when not otherwise therein provided, be prosecuted by the town or any officer thereof, or any person who prosecutes therefor, and shall be begun by information laid before the stipendiary magistrate of the town." Section 238, s.-s. 2, gives the stipendiary magistrate jurisdiction to enforce such penalties, and s.-s. 3 makes the Summary Convictions Act applicable. Section 242 states that all penalties collected shall form part of the revenue of the town. The plaintiff claim d the right to bring the action as a common informer under s. 23, s.-s. 45, of the Interpretation Act, R. S. N. S. c. 1. The defendant took out a summons to stay the action :- Held, that the action must be stayed. The penalty is not given to a person aggrieved. But for the provisions in the Interpretation Act, the Crown alone could sue thereunder: Bradlaugh v. Clark, 8 App. Cas. 354. But the Interpretation Act does not allow the action to be maintained. Another mode of enforcing the penalty is provided in the Towns Incorporation Act, and if that does not apply, the penalty can be recovered under the Summary Convictions Act. McDonald v. Robertson, 22 Occ. N. 430, Ontario Election Act — Bribery — Recovery of Penaity by Action.]—The effect of the amendment of s. 159 (2) of R. S. O. 1897 c. 9, made by 63 V. c. 4 (O.), by which persons committing various forms of bribery enumerated in the section (a to e inclusive) become on conviction liable to a fine of $200 and imprisonment, is to take the penaltics imposed by the amended clause out of the category of those which may be recovered by action under s. 195. Only one proceeding is contemplated by the amended section, and that is one in which both the penalty may be recovered and the imprisonment imposed. Both must follow on the conviction in one and the same proceeding taken to enforce them. Imprisonment cannot be adjudged in an action under s, 195, which intends a proceeding by action to recover the money penalty only. Judgment of Boyd, C., which followed that of Britton J., in Carey v. Smith, 5 O. L. R. 200, 2 O. W. R. 16, in dismissing the action, varied; and the action held maintainable under s. 195 only for penalties imposed by ss. 162, 163, 165, 166, 168, Assettice v. Shibley, 9 O. L. R. 327, 5 O. W. R. 109.

Ontario Election Act - Bribery - Recovery by Action—Agent at Poll—Certificate
— Neglect to Take Oath — Reduction of Penalty]-An action will not lie under s. 195 of the Ontario Election Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 9, for the pecuniary penalty for the offence of bribery prescribed by s. 159, s.-s. 2, as amended by 63 V. c. 4, s. 21, until after conviction. The defendant was found guilty of bribery, on the evidence, and the claim for a penalty was dismissed without costs. The defendant was found guilty of bribery, on the evidence, and the claim for a penalty was dismissed without costs. The defendant was held liable to a penalty of $400 under s. 94, s.-s. 5, of the Act, for voting at a polling place where he was acting as an agent of a candidate, under a certificate of the returning officer, without having taken the oath of qualification, but the penalty was reduced to $40, as in the preceding case. Carey v. Smith, 23 Occ. N. 94, 5 O. L. R. 209, 2 O. W. R. 16.

Ontario Election Act — Voting without Right—Agent at Poll—Reduction of Penalty.] The defendant applied for and obtained registration as a city voter, not knowing that his name was still on the voters' list for the township in which he had formerly resided, Afterwards he agreed to act as agent at the poll for one of the candidates for the electoral district in which the township was situated, at a polling place other than that for the subdivision in which he had formerly resided, and received from the returning officer a certificate entitling him to vote at the place where he was to be stationed. He acted as agent there, took the oath of secrecy, and voted No other oath than that of secrecy was administered or tendered or discussed. He was not aware that a non-resident could and was not aware that a non-resulent cound not vote:—Held, that the defendant was not liable to the penalty imposed by s. 168 of the Ontario Election Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 9, for voting knowing that he had no right to vote. —South Riding County of Perth, 2 Ont. Elec. Cas. 30, followed. 2. That the defendant was not liable to the penalty imposed by s. 181 of the Act for wilfully voting without having at the time all the qualifications required by law. "Wilfully voting" as in this section and applying it to the facts of the case, was practically the same as voting knowing that he had no right to vote. 3. That the defendant was liable to the penalty of $400 imposed by s. 9, s.-s. 5, of the Act, for not having taken the oath of qualification required to be taken by agents voting under certificate; but, as the defendant was not asked to take the oath, the deputy returning officer not having been aware that it was necessary, and the plaintiff himself was present when the defendant voted, and did not object, the provisions of R. S. O. 1897 c. 108 should be applied, and the penalty reduced to $40. Smith v. Carey, 23 Occ. N. 93, 5 O. L. R. 203, 2 O. W. R. 13.

Ontario Election Act—Disqualified Person Voting at Election—Postmaster in City—Sub-postmaster—Post Office Act—Liability to Penalty.] — Held, a sub-postmaster having charge of a branch office in a city or town is a "postmaster" within the meaning of the Ontario Election Act, and liable to the penalty imposed by that Act for voting at an election for members of the Legislative Assembly. PEREMPTION.

Action in Warranty—Intervention.]—
Even if a principal plaintiff, in an action where there is an intervention and a demand in warranty, would be entitled to have any part of the instance perempted, such as the intervention, he cannot obtain such peremption on a motion whereby he simply asiss that the present instance be declared perempted. 2. A principal plaintiff has no interest in moving for the peremption of the action in warranty. 3. The service of such motion is a useful proceeding to interrupt the peremption as regards the intervenant, even if the latter can be considered as a defendant. Lonsdale v. Leange, 3 O. P. R. 304.

Action United with Another, |—A motion for peremption cannot be granted in a case which has been united with another for the purpose of proof, when the latter is still pending. Cardinal v. Brodeur, 4 Q. P. R. 171.

Appeal—Useful Proceeding.)—An appeal from a judgment declaring a cause percumpted, and the judgment allowing such appeal, are useful proceedings stopping the peremption. Wright v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 4 Q. P. R. 132.

Applicant—Defendant who has not Appeared—Attorney.] — A defendant who has not appeared in a suit, either personally or by attorney, has no right to move for peremption through an attorney who is a stranger to the record. Dumoulin v. Lapointe, 7 Q. P. R. 150.

Application for Rule to Return Property—Guardian.]—Peremption applies to all proceedings whose object is the settlement of matters in controversy by a judgment, and therefore, can be invoked with regard to a rule nisi taken out against a guardian who has failed to produce goods seized and placed in his charge. Dapont v. Lacoste, Q. R. 26 S. C. 33.

Certificate of State of Cause—Contradictinn, 1—A certificate shewing the last step taken in the cause, signed by the prothonotary, is an authentic document, which can only be contradicted by inscription en faux. Donnelly v. Rafter, 5 Q. P. R. 62.

Commencement of Period.]—The time required for the peremption of a suit after the issues are joined does not begin to run until three days have elapsed after issue joined. Castelli v. Lunkin, 4 Q. P. R. 32.

Date of Last Filing—How Determined.]
—A motion for peremption will not be granted although the procedure book states that the filing of the last document took place more than two years before, if the date appearing on the document itself states the contrary. Ross v. Phibé, 5 Q. P. R. 254.

Demand of —Peremption of Demand — Useful Proceeding—Stay.]—A demand of peremption is itself a proceeding susceptible of peremption. Such a demand arrests the proceedings and hinders the peremption from running until the decision upon such demand of peremption is a useful proceeding which covers the peremption. Reid v. Merizzi, Q. R. 19 S. C. 42S, 4 Q. P. R. 150.

Erroneous Certificate.)—The Court will not declare a suit perempted upon the faith of a certificate which is evidently erroneous, even when it forms part of the record. Leguerrier v. City of Montreal, 5 Q. P. E. 440.

Interruption — Assignment—Natice.]—An assignment of property made by the plaintiff after the commencement of an action, and the sale of the plaintiff's assets by the curator to the assignment, do not interrupt peremption, especially if notice had not been given to the parties to the action. Dufour v. Harvey, 6 Q. P. R. 110.

Interruption — Certificate of State of Cause.]—The fact that the certificate of last proceeding was not filed at the time of the service of the notice of motion for peremption, does not give to the proceedings taken by the plaintiff between the service of the notice of motion and the filing of the certificate, the effect of interrupting peremption. Brunet v. Duperrault, 6 Q. P. R. 125.

Interruption—Inscription—Detect in. |— The filing with the clerk of the Court et an inscription for trial of a cause upon the merits, is a useful proceeding which interrupts prescription, and that is so even where the party filing the inscription does not at the same time file the pleadings upon which issue has been joined, for the use of the trial Judge. Martin v. Goszelin, 6 Q. P. R. 113.

Interruption - Negotiations for Settlement—Change of State of Party—Knowledge of Attorney ad Litem—Notice—Interdiction. -In order that negotiations for a friendly settlement may have the effect of preventing the action being dismissed on peremption d'instance, they must be put in writing, as, for example, by letters from the party seeking such settlement. A change in the state of a party, unknown to her attorney ad litem, will prevent peremption, even although no notice was given of such change of state. In this case the attorney ad litem, filing his own affidavit that he did not know of the change of state (a party becoming interdict) when the notice of motion for peremption was served, was absolved from giving notice to the opposite party; and the filing of the service of interdiction obliges the Court to take judicial notice of it and justifies a declaration that the action is not perempted. Guénard v. Poitras, Q. R. 27 S. C. 41.

Interruption — Useful Proceeding — Motion to Amend — Prescription — Pleading — Exception—Litigions Rights.]—A motion to amend the declaration is a useful proceeding, and interrupts peremption. 2. The respondents sued the appellant and one C. L., the

L. by his defence submitted that the action as against him should be dismissed, alleging that his wife, and not himself, carried on business under the name of "C, L, & Co." After this plea. the respondents desisted as against C. L., and obtained leave to amend the declaration by alleging that the note was signed by C. L.'s wife, carrying on business under the name of "C. I., & Co.." but she was not added as a defendant:—Held, that, in these circum-stances, the amendment related back to the date of the commencement of the action, and that it was not prescribed. 3. An exception of litigious rights cannot be set up in answer to an action for a claim included in a general sale of all property and claims, even when the claim in question is in its nature litigious. Brossard v. People's Bank, Q. R. 13 K. B.

Interruption — Useful Proceeding — Premature Demand of Peremption—Costs—New Demand.] - A useful proceeding which may prevent or cover peremption must be a proceeding taken in order to promote the success on the merits of the claim of a party to the suspended cause. 2. A premature demand for peremption is not a useful proceeding to a party to the cause to advance his rights, and therefore it has not the effect of preventing therefore it has not the easest of preventing or covering peremption. 3. A party who makes a demand for peremption, which is dismissed as premature, is not obliged to pay the costs incurred by his opponent upon such motion before making a new motion for per-emption. Clifford v. Beauport Brewery Co., 4 Q. P. R. 295, 324.

Interruption—Useful Proceeding — Motion to Withdraw Deposit.] — A motion to withdraw a deposit made with a plea is not a useful proceeding susceptible of preventing peremption. Primeau v. Richard, 6 Q. P. R.

Interruption-Useful Proceeding-Withdrawat of Attorney-Petition to Proceed in Forma Pauperis.] — The withdrawal of an attorney, not authorized by a Judge, is invalid, and a proceeding made by an attorney substituted without such authorization, is not a useful proceeding having the effect of in-terrupting peremption:—Quere, Is a petition for leave to continue proceedings in forma pauperis, a useful proceeding? Gingras v. Syndies of Parish of St. Antoine de Longueuil, 5 Q. P. R. 300.

Interruption—Useful Proceeding—Substitution of Solicitors.—The substitution of solicitors, by adding to the firm name the name of a junior member who has recently joined the firm, is a useful proceeding to interrupt peremption. Standard Trust Co. v. South Shore R. W. Co., 7 Q. P. R. 113.

Interruption-Useful Proceeding - Subpana - Examination of Officer of Corporation.]-A subpæna served on the mayor of a municipal corporation in an action in which the municipality is a party defendant, re-quiring him to appear and give evidence in the case before it had been set down for hearing, was held a useful proceeding to interrupt peremption, the administration of preliminary interrogatories to the mayor of a defendant corporation being authorized by art. 286, C C. The fact that the witness subpænaed did not appear on the day appointed would not cake away from the subpœna its character as a useful proceeding. Article 286, C ., which provides that when the opposite party is a corporation, the president, manager, treasurer, or secretary thereof may be examined, does not by this enumeration of officers limit the right to examine to them only. The registrar's certificate that no proceeding has been taken in the action for two years is only a ministerial act; this officer may shew whether any proceedings have in fact been taken or not within the time limited, but he has not power to decide whether such proceedings are useful or not. Boas v. Town of St. Hyacinthe, Q. R. 13 K, B. 431.

Interruption after Time Expired Advocates Nominated to Other Offices—Judicial Notice — Defendant's Rights.] — The Court, of its own motion, takes judicial notice of the nomination of advocates to offices incompatible with the exercise of their profession. 2. Differing from the prescription which gives to a debtor a right acquired from the time that the period has expired, the peremption of a suit does not exist until it is adjudged, and the plaintiff, up to the time of the service of the demand for peremption, even after the period set for peremption has expired, may interrupt such peremption by a expired, may interrupt such peremption by a usful proceeding. 3. A defendant who has only appeared may demand peremption of the suit. 4. One of several defendants may de-mand and obtain as to himself alone the peremption of the suit. 5. The fact that the defendant has censed to be represented by his advocates who had because the desired. advocates, who had been called to duties incompatible with the exercise of their profession, does not prevent the peremption from running; it is for the plaintiff to signify his wish to proceed by giving notice to the defendant to authorize a new solicitor. 6. The fact that, after six years having elapsed since the last proceeding, the attorney of the plaintiffs demands the record from the deputy-clerk, who tells her that it is in the hands of the defendant, is not an incident which arrests the proceeding in such a way as to prevent the peremption from taking place where the defendant had the record temporarily and returned it to the clerk upon the first demand. 7. A defendant who has ceased to be represented by his advocates on account of their nomination to positions incompatible with the exercise of their profession, is not obliged to file an appearance, but he may himself sign the demend of peremption, and serve it on the plaintiff, for the demand of peremption is a chief proceeding in itself, having an existence separate and distinct from the action. People's Bank of Halifax v, Labreque, Q. R. 20 S. C. 263.

Motion for - Failure to File Exhibits with Defence.] - The fact that a defendant failed to file with his defence the exhibits mentioned in support thereof, is no bar to a motion for peremption for want of proceedings during two years. Lect v. Royal Bank of Canada, 7 Q. P. R. 11.

Motion—Firm of Attorneys—Incapacity of Member.] — A motion for peremption of suit, signed by the original attorneys of record, is not invalidated by the fact that one of the attorneys is now a practising advocate of the Bar of the province of Quebec. Ross v. Ellintt, 5 Q. P. R. 47.

Motion for — Second Motion after Termination of First, — A motion for peremption which has been determined is not an obstacle in the way of the presentation of a second motion for peremption, neither is it a proceeding preventing peremption. Slater v. Slater Shoe Co., 7 Q. P. R. 55.

Motion for — Solicitors — Change in Firm.]—A motion for peremptlon may be made in the name of a law firm which has represented the party making the motion, although one of the members thereof no longer practises as a solicitor, utile per inutile uon vitatur. Hibbard v. Williamson, Q. R. 26 S. C. 34.

New Code of Procedure—Pending Action.]—An action begun under the old Code of Procedure may be extinguished if the plaintiff has not taken any useful step in procedure for two years, the peremption having commenced under the new Code. Lewis v. Town of St. Lowis, 3 Q. P. R. 484.

Notice of Motion—Attorneys—Signature—Partuership Dissolved.]—The signatures of two attorneys, being the remaining members of a legal partnership dissolved, is sufficient in a notice of motion for peremption. 2. The addition of the name of the attorney who has ceased to be a member of the partnership, does not render void the signatures of the other partners. Cleve v. Bickerdike, 5 Q. P. R. 391.

Notice of Motion—Service—Solicitors— Change in Firm.]—If a firm of advocates is dissolved, a motion for peremption will not be granted, unless it was served upon all of the late partners. Glass v. Eveleigh, 3 Q. P. R. 357, followed. Lamoureux v. Johnston, 7 Q. P. R. 56.

Notice of Motion—Service—Solicitors— Death of Partner,]—When one of the meabers of a law firm has died during the start, service of a motion for peremption is validly made upon his surviving partner. Lipshitz y, Montreal Street R. W. Co., 7 Q. P. R. 237.

Notice of Motion—Service—Partnership
—Solicitors.] — In an action brought by a firm of attorneys, of which one member has died since the action was begun and been replaced by another advocate, service of a notice of motion for peremption made upon the partnership as it actually exists, is valid.
Hughes v. Montreal Herald Co., 5 Q. P. R.

Notice of Motion—Service—Solicitors— Partners.]—The service of a motion for peremption upon a firm of solicitors whose members have dissolved partnership since the last proceeding must be made upon both partners, and not only upon one of them as representing the late firm. Desrockers v. Martin, 3 Q. P. R. 522.

Notice of Motion—Service—Solicitors— Change in Firm.] — A notice of motion for peremption is validly served at the office of a firm of solicitors who acted for the plaintif, although there has been since the last step taken in the action a change in the composition of the firm. Haggart v. Langlois, 6 Q. P. R. 290.

Notice of Motion—Time.]—The period between the service of a notice of motion for peremption and its presentation is one juridical day. Barbeau v. Martin, 6 Q. P. R. 303.

Old and New Codes—Interruption—Useful Proceedings—Negotiations.]—An action begun under the old Code of Civil Procedure may be declared perempted when no useful step has been taken for two years since the coming into force of the new Code. 2. A proceeding, in order to interrupt prescription, must appear by the record or by the procedure book, and must be of such a nature as to advance the cause and aid in its continuance; mere discussions and negotiations, even in Court, to fix a day for proceeding to a bearing, which do not appear upon the record nor in the Court registers, are insufficient to stop peremption, and cannot be established by affidavits subsequent to a motion made to declare the cause perempted. Schwob v. Town of Farnham, Q. R. 21 S. C. 521.

Retrospective Legislation.] — Where the period of peremption commenced after the promulgation of the new Code of Civil Procedure of the province of Quebec, the exceptions declared by the fourth purgraph of its first article do not prevent the peremption of a suit pending at the time it came into force under the limitations provided by art. 250 of the new Code. Cooke v, Millar, 3 Rev. Leg. 446, 4 Rev. Leg. 240, referred to. Scheols v, Farnham, 22 Occ. N. 4, 31 S. C. R. 471.

Rule against Guardian.]—Perempton applies to all proceedings taken with the object of obtaining a judgment upon any issue whatever, and consequently to a rule against a guardian. Dupont v. Lucoste, 6 Q. P. R. 127.

Several Defendants—Motion by Onc.)— One or more joint and several defendants, who have severed in their defence, may move for peremption after two years from the last proceeding as against them, although, since that time, proceedings have been had against some of their co-defendants. Leet v. Mostreal-Oregon Gold Mines Co., 5 Q. P. R. 374.

Suspension—Proceeding — Agreement - Proof—Oral Evidence.] — An agreement between the parties, by virtue of which, at the request of the defendant, the plaintiff stayed his action in order to prosecute a claim, if cluding that against the defendant, against third party, is a proceeding which suspends percently and the provisions of art. 1235 (1). C. C. which prohibits or a commercial matter, and the provisions of art. 1235 (1). C. C. which prohibits oral evidence of any acknowledgment or promise which has the effect of withdrawing a debt from the provisions of the statute relating to the prescription of actions, is not to be extended to peremption. Headroshot v. Macfarlane, Q. R. 24 S. C. 5, 5 Q. P.

Suspension—Infant Attaining Majority—Notice.]—A change of condition by an infant attaining his majority, which has not been notified and which is not legally proved, cannot suspend peremption. Ethiott v. Frace, 5 Q. P. R. 5.

Apprentice—Payment for Presentation to Corporation—Contract—Illegality—Recovery of Money Paid,]—A contract to pay a pilot for his presentation of an apprentice pilot to the corporation of pilots, is illegal and cannot be enforced. 2. Money paid on a contract null as being contrary to public order, can be recovered by an action en repetition. Paynet v. Pepin dit Luchance, Q. R. 22 S. C. 155.

Forfeiture of License—Corporation of Pilots—Acquiescence—Certiorari.]—A pilot who, in consequence of a temporary forfeiture of his right to exercise his trade, by the Court of Pilots, remits his commission to the Court, thereby acquiesces in the sentence and cannot afterwards proceed against the Court by way of certiorari: Frenette v, Montreal Court of Pilots, 5 Q. P. R. 415.

Harbour Commissien — Corporation of Pilots — Apprentices — Recommendation — Douceurs—Hiegalitys—Public Policy,] — The statutes concerning pilots and pilotage are of public order. 2. It is the harbour commission of Quebec which commissions the pilots, and from the time that a person is commissioned as a pilot he is a member of the corporation of pilots; it is the harbour commission which prescribes the number of candidates who may be apprenticed to the corporation of pilots; it is the corporation of pilots; it is the corporation of pilots which chooses the apprentices, who are Indentured not to the individual pilots but to the corporation of pilots, whose duty it is to see that they acquire the necessary knowledge.

3. A custom exists among the pilots of Quebec of recommending, each in his turn, an apprentice, and for such recommendation ach pilot requires for his personal benefit a fee from the apprentice. Without such recommendation no person is accepted as an apprentice:—Held, that this custom is an abuse and contrary to the public interest, and, therefore, every contract made by a pilot who recommends an apprentice, by which the latter engages himself for such recommendation to pay a sum of money to a pilot, is illegal and contrary to public order. Raymond v. Langlois, Q. R. 22 S. C. 392.

Suspension—Harbour Commissioners.]—

Demurrer.]—A bill is not demurable unless it absolutely appears that on the facts disclosed in the bil! being established at the hearing the bill must be dismissed: and where the case for relief contained in the bill depends upon facts admitting of variation in their proof from their statement in the bill, denurrer will not lie, though no relief, or relief in modified form, may be granted at the hearing. Stewart v. Freeman, 22 Oct. N. 330.

II. COUNTERCLAIM.

Claim on Behalf of Defendant and Others—Release,]—The plaintiff, having under her deceased husband's will a charge on land devised by him to the defendant, brought this action to enforce payment of arrears by a sale of the land and for construction of the will. The defendant delivered a coun-terclaim alleging that he was one of the next of kin of the testator; that the testator by his will directed the plaintiff, who was executrix, and his executors, to manage a farm for the maintenance of the children until the youngest should reach the age of twenty-four; that the plaintiff received all the profits of the farm for many years, and kept them; that the defendant, as one of the next of kin, was entitled to a share that the executors of the testator had never had control of the land; and that any remedy against them was barred by statute; and he asked for an account and payment into Cour of the amount found due by the plaintiff, to be divided amongst the parties entitled. He further alleged that the phyntiff had ex-cuted a release of a part of the charge for which she claimed:—Held, that the counterclaim was in effect for a declaration that the plaintiff was a trustee for the defendant and the other next of kin of certain profits of working the testator's farm alleged to have been received by her so many years ago that if she were not a trustee their rights would be barred. The counterclaim was an action brought on behalf of the defendant and the other cestuis que trust, who would be necessary parties at the outset but for Rule 203, and who must be made parties in Rule 203, and who must be made parties in the Master's Office; and not being for him-self alone, but for himself and others, did not come within Rule 248, Pender v. Taddei. [1898] 1 Q. B. 798, followed. The effect of the release was not a matter to be raised by counterclaim, but as defence. Hume v. Hume, 22 Occ. N. 147, 1 O. W. R. 156, 187.

Exclusion of — Defendants to Counter-Claim out of Jurisdiction — Foreign Trade Mark—Conspiracy to Defraud. — The plaintiffs, an English company, brought an action against the defendants in Ontario to restrain them from exporting goods to and interfering with their business in Australia, in breach of a certain agreement, and the defendants, besides setting up as a defence certain breaches of the agreement by the plaintiffs, counter-claimed against the plaintiffs for damages for such breaches, for a declaration of their rights as to trade with Australia and other countries, and a rectification of the agreement to make it conform to the representations of the plaintiffs. The defendants also counterclaimed against the plaintiffs, and G.

III. CROSS-DEMAND,

Unconnected Claims—Detence.] — A cross-demand must have for its object the defeating or at least the modifying of the principal demand; and therefore a cross-demand filed in answer to an action to set aside an hypothecary inscription, and claiming from the plaintiff payment of a debt alleged to be privileged, does not flow from the same source as the principal demand, and cannot be maintained. 2. A ground of defence to a principal action cannot be set up by way of cross-demand. Langlois v. Bayard, Q. R. 24 S. C. 195.

IV. DECLARATION.

Action by Inspector for Cost of Public Road — By-law.]—A road inspector who sues to recover the cost of materials used in and work done upon the public highway and sidewalk in front of the defendant's projecty, should make it appear in his declaration that the construction of the sidewalk was ordered by the municipal corporation, and if he does not allege the existence of a by-law to this effect his action will be dismissed on inscription in law. Paré v. Deschamps, 7 Q. P. R. 4.

Action for Damages—Influencing Employers Against Plaintiff—Particulars.]—A plaintiff who alleges that the defendant, an inspector of roads, used his influence maliciously and irregularly to prevent the plaintiff securing work from the municipal corporation, should state when and how the defendant so acted; but he is not obliged to say, when, how, or by whom the defendant nedewoursed to bring a criminal prosecution against him aor to state the kind and nature of the damages which he claims to have sustained. Simard v. Durocher, 7 Q. P. R. SS.

Alternative Claims—Will — Usufruct— Substitution—Election—In suing a person for maladministration of an estate of which he is in possession by a title the exact nature of which is ill-defined in the will which creates it, the plaintiff cannot make alternative claims in view of the Court construing the will as giving a usufruct, or a substitution, and the defendant has a right to require, by way of dilatory exception, that an election be made between such alternative demands, if made. Hurtubise v. Decarie, 6 Q. P. R. 333.

Amendment—Costs of New Defence.]— Where the plaintiff by amendment changes his demand by reducing it, upon paying the costs of the motion, the other costs being reserved, the costs of filing a new defence will not be adjudged against the plaintiff until the trial, the trial Judge being left to decide whether the new defence was necessary. Quinn v. Imperial Bank of Canada, 6 Q. P. R. 352.

Amendment—New Cause of Action.]—A palaritif cannot be allowed to amend his declaration for the purpose of alleging a cause of action which did not accrue until after the institution of the action. Ward v. Merchants Bank of Halifax, 4 Q. P. R. 407.

Amendment — Useless Conclusions.] — A plaintiff should not be allowed to amend his declaration by adding conclusions for coercive imprisonment against the defendant, such amendment serving no useful purpose, Chartrand v. Smart, 4 Q. P. R. 41.

Claim for Relief—Inconsistency—Real Action,]—A real action in which only personal conclusions are made will be dismissed upon demurrer. Dronin v. Laurier, 4 Q. P. R. 343.

Declinatory Exception—Jurisdiction—Attention in one district against a person living in another, should allege in his declaration all the facts necessary to give jurisdiction to the Court in which the action is brought; the allegation of these facts in an answer to an exception déclinatoire, is irregular, and such answer will, on motion, be struck from the record. McKenzie v. Person, Q. R. 26 S. C. 521.

Inconsistent Allegations — Motion to Compel Plaintiff to Elect—Extension of Time for Pleading.]—A motion that the plaintiff may be directed to elect between two contradictory allegations of his declaration, is a ground preliminary to the contestation, which has the effect of prolonging the time for pleading, which will not commence to run until judgment is given on such motion. Blais v. Aubé, 7 Q. P. R. 269.

Inconsistent Claims — Dilatory Exception. — Where a party to an action alleges contradictory grounds of action or defence, the course to be taken by the opposite party is not to inscribe in law, but to proceed by dilatory exception, in order to compel the party to elect: art. 117, C. P. Crépeau v. Braneau, Q. R. 24 S. C. 368.

Interest on Promissory Note — Particularity, [—An allegation in a declaration that the plantiff claims a certain sum for interest due upon a promissory note, not otherwise described, is sufficient. Bromuell v. O'Farrell, 5 Q. P. R. 85.

Irrelevant Allegations — Action by Physician for Fees—Cause of Injury to Defendant, I — A physician who sues for the value of professional services, may not allege in his declaration, even in order to justify the amount of his claim, that the injury from which the patient suffered was mentioned in the newspapers, as well as the fact that the services of the plaintiff had been engaged; that the injury was caused by the son of the defendant, who was at the time in custody accused of injuring the defendant. Marien v, Lussier, 5 Q. P. R. 324.

Joinder of Causes of Action — Cancellation of Deeds—Account—Injunction — Possession—Requestration.]—In the same action may be joined claims for the cancellation of certain deeds made by an inheritor for life, for an account of the rents and profits received by the grantees under these deeds by virtue thereof, for an injunction against the continuance of actions begun under these deeds, for terminating the possession of the inheritor for life, and to place the inheritance under sequestration unless the inheritor should furnish security. Resther v. Hébert, 7 Q. P. R. 476.

Landlord and Tenant — Caucellation of Lease.]—In an action for the resiliation of a lease and for future rent, it is not necessary to allege specifically that the causes mentioned in the declaration entitle the plaintiff to the conclusions of his action. Desautels v. Fortier, 7 Q. P. B. 85.

Matters Arising after Action — Discharge of Saisie-revendication — Final Judgment, — The plaintiff cannot, by amending his declaration, allege facts arising subsequent to the commencement of the action. 2. In this case the plaintiff could not, in support of his action for damages for the issue without probable cause of a writ of saisie-revendication, allege the discharge of this writ by the Court, if the judgment discharging the writ had only become final after the institution of the action for damages and service of process therein. Kaine v. Matthews, 4 Q. P. R. 226.

Necessity for Plaintiff's Signature— Fraudulent Deeds — Inscription en Foux.] —A, plaintiff who begins a suit demanding that certain deeds mentioned in the declaration shall be declared fraudulent. is not obliged himself to sign the declaration, although he indicates in the declaration that he intends to inscribe en faux against such deeds. Marcoposition v. Fouriesos, 5 Q. P. R. 315.

Puis Darrein Continuance—Aggravation of Damages.]—A plaintiff who complains of injuries caused to him a long time before the institution of the action, cannot, by a proceeding puis darrein continuance, on the even of the hearing allege facts which would amount to an aggravation of damages. Branet v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 5 Q. P. R. 425.

Questions of Fact and Law—Distress for Rent—Soisure—Exemption.]— Although a party cannot raise questions of fact in an inscription in law, he may, nevertheless, set up grounds of law in an exception or reply based upon facts set up. 2. In an action for rent and damages the plaintiff is not bound to allege in the declaration that the defendant has removed the greater part of his effects and that the effects soized were in fact seizable; this ground, which ought to be contested in law, should be set up by a pleading claiming exemption from seizure. Beaubien v. Lynch, 4 Q. P. R. 183.

Revendication of Goods—Purchase at Assignce's Sale—Signification of Act of Sale not Alleged.]—An action in revendication of goods purchased by the plaintiff at an assignee's sale, wherein it is not alleged that signification of the act of sale was made, nor that a copy of it was delivered to the debtor, nor that it is produced with the action, will be dismissed on an inscription in law. Maller v. Levinton, 7 Q. P. R. 17.

Service — Time — Saisie-Gagerie] — When a writ of saisie-gagerie is made returnable the second day after service, the declaration must be served at the same time as the writ. 2. When the service of a declaration may be made at the office of the clerk of the Court, there must be at least one clear day between such service and the return of, the writ, Dupuis v. Mathien, Q. R. 24 S. C. 136.

Setting out Previous Proceedings—
Amendment.]—The plaintiff in an action en reddition de compte will not be allowed to set out at length in his declaration the proceedings in a previous action between himself and the defendant, and such allegations will be struck out upon demurrer. However, as it may be of importance to him to allege such facts in a general way, to justify himself for not having begun his present action earlier, the Court will, proprio mott, permit him to amend his declaration by alleging the previous suit and the judament therein. Cheval v. Senical, 40, P. R. 241.

Time—Saisic-Gagerie — Exception — Service—Production.] — In the case of a saisisgagerie it is sufficient to file the deciration within three days after service of the writ even if the writ is returnable and returned within two days after its execution. 2. The time allowed for the service of a preliminary exception in this case ran only from the day on which the plaintiff filed the contract of marriage establishing her status as a married woman separate as to property. Burgess v. Work Bulletin Printing Co., 6 Q. F. R. 442.

bill, for thereby the demurrer is overruled, notwithstanding s. 47 of 53 V. c. 4. Consequently, where a demurrer prof.seed to be to a part, and the answer professed to be to a part, and the answer professed to be to a part, and the answer professed to be to the residue, of a bill, but the denurrer was extended to the whole prayer of the bill, it was held that unless the answer was withdrawn, for which purpose leave of the Court was given, the demurrer should be overruled with costs, but that, if the answer was withdrawn, the demurrer should be overruled with costs. The objectively to the whole bill, is not waived by the plaintiff setting the amurrer down for argument under s. 41 of 13 V. c. 4. A defendant cannot demur ore tenus where there is no demurrer on the record, as where the demurrer on the record is overruled by the answer. Abelt v. Anderson, 21 Occ. N. 94, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 136.

Grounds Specified — Review — Executors—Res Judicata.]—In adjudicating upon an inscription in law the Court will only take into consideration the grounds which are there specified. 2. A judgment rendered in an action qui tam may be set up by the defendants (executors) in an action brought for the purpose of forcing them to review an action for damages, when the question in litigation is the same in the two cases. Marshall v. MacDongall, 5 Q. P. R. 186.

VI. EXCEPTIONS.

Declinatory Exception — Deposit.] — When a defendant by a declinatory exception demands simply the dismissal of the action, without complying with the terms of art, 170, C. P., that is to say, without depositing the amount claimed, or the eccivalent if it is something else than money which is claimed, his declinatory exception will be considered irregular and will be struck out with costs. Garneau v. Gaudet, 4 Q. P. R. 370.

Declinatory Exception — Jurisdiction—Plea on Merits.]—A party who complains. by way of declinatory exception, of a defect of jurisdiction ratione personse, cannot afterwards complain of the same defect when pleading to the merits. Lapierre v. Brunct. 6 Q. P. R. 398.

Declinatory Exception — Reply — Account—Acknowledgment — Motion to Strike Out.]—Where a declinatory exception is pleaded to an action upon an account, the plaintiff cannot, in replying to the exception, allege that the defendant has acknowledged owing the account in the district in which the action is brought. 2. Such an allegation may be struck out of reply by motion, and not by inscription in law, it being of a nature to justify the conclusions of the reply. Theoret v. Brunet, 6 Q. P. R. 441.

Dilatory Exception — Account — Default of Service.]—Default of service of an account upon which the action is based is ground for a dilatory exception, and not for an exception to the form. Dubrule v. Leclaire, 5 Q. P. R. 310.

Dilatory Exception—Beneficiary Heir—Action Against—Time for Inventory.]—The beneficiary heir cannot plead a dilatory exception to an action instituted against him in his quality of beneficiary heir, based upon the ground that the term for making inventory and deliberating has not expired. Standard Drain Pipe Co. v, Robertson, 5 Q. P. R. 70.

Dilatory Exception—Contractor—Warranty.]—The owner of a property being sued for a fault of his contractor, is entitled to bring in the latter en garantie by a dilatory exception. Flanigan v. Town of Outremont, 6 Q. P. R. 22.

Dilatory Exception—Fiduciary Heir—Action Against—Calling in Widow and Children of Testator.]—A fiduciary heir, who is sued for a debt of the de cujus, with the payment of which he was specially charged, having received funds therefor, has no dilatory exception to call in the widow, common as to property, and the minor children of the deceased. Dequire v. Lanthier, 7 Q. P. R. 112.

Dilatory Exception — Hypothecary Action—Security—Defence au Fonds.]—A third party who has taken an immovable in payment of his hypothecary debt and who wishes to demand security, under art. 2073. C. C., from a subsequent creditor who is suing him as hypothecary, should do so by defence on the merits and not by way of dilatory exception. Bastien v. Desjardins, Q. R. 11 K. R. 428.

Dilatory Exception — Inconsistent Allegations—Motion to Compel Election—Deposit.] — A motion to compel a defendant to elect between two allegations of his defence is in the nature of a dilatory exception, and must be accompanied by a deposit. Martineau v. Pause, 5 Q. P. R. 412.

Dilatory Exception—Right of Plaintiff to Fife.]—Although arts. 177 and 183, C. P., speak only of the defendant, the plaintiff may demand by dilatory exception an extension of the time for replying to a plea of payment, when such plea renders it necessary to call in his haddord or others en garantic. Dionne v. Ouellet, 3 Q. P. R. 190.

Exception to the Form — Action for a Debt by Insolvent after Assignment — Defence on the Merits.]—The proper answer to an action by an insolvent who sues on an account forming part of his estate, after he has made an assignment, is by a defence on the merits and not by an exception to the form. Coté v. Marinier, 7 Q. P. R. 110.

Exception to the Form—Action in Part Summary and in Part Ordinary—Election.]—Where the plaintiff's claim is in part summary and in part ordinary, the action as a whole is susceptible of different methods of procedure, and the defendant's remedy is to have the plaintiff optate, not to move for the dismissal of the action by exception to the form. Sun Life Assec. Co. v. Piché, 7 Q. P. R. 227.

Exception to the Form — Defendant Sued Personally and in Another Capacity.] —Where an exception to the form filed by a defendant sued personally is dismissed, the defendant, sued afterwards in another capacity, by an amendment, can offer the same objection in the character in which he is sued, but not personally. Cantlie s. Cantlie, 7 Q. P. R. 308.

Exception to the Form—Loss after Filiand — Record — Copp.]—An exception to the form, accompanied by the deposit required in similar cases filed at the office of the Court within the time fixed by law, is regularly upon the record, and, therefore, before the Court, and if, in the time which clapses between its filing in the office and the day of its presentation before the Court, the original exception to the form is lost without any fault on the part of the party who field it, the Court will order the filing, as part of the record, of a copy of such exception in place of the original. Bélanger v. Mercier, Q. R. 12 K. B. 428.

Exception to the Form—Missioner—Amendment,]—A defendant who complains, by exception to the form, that the plaintiff does not describe himself under his true name, but without setting forth such true name, will not be allowed to amend his exception, after the delays within which it must be filed, by adding thereto an assertion of the true name of the plaintiff. Dufour v. Portier, 7 Q. P. R. 162.

Exception to the Form — Notice of Deposit.]—The Court will not hear an exception to the form when no notice of the deposit made therewith has been given to the opposite party. Merchauts Bank of Canada v. Republic Consolidated Gold Mining Co., 5 Q. P. R. 202.

Exception to the Form—Prejudice— Service.j.—No exception to the form will be entertained in the absence of an allegation and proof of prejudice; and in this case it did not appear that the service of process in the action after 7 o'cl-ck in the evening (admitting that the delar war, proved) had prejudiced the defendant Meunier dit Lagace's v. Laurin, 7 Q. P. R. 281.

Exception to the Form—Residence of Defendant.]—An exception to the form alleging that the defendant is described as being of the village of St. Louis, whereas he resides at Montreal, where process in the action has been served upon him, will be dismissed with costs. Brunet v. Tison, 5 Q. P. R. 459.

Exception to the Form — Summary Procedure — Time — Waiver.]—A defendant sued in tort under the Summary Procedure Act, may proceed by way of exception to the form within the time limited and if he has pleaded to the merits he cannot complain of the defect of form at the time of the setting down of the cause for hearing, Levy v. Strathcong Rubber Uo., 5 Q. P. R. 341.

Form — Waiver — Appearance by Another Solicitor—Ground of Exception—Particulars, —When a defendant appears separately by two solicitors and one of them files an ex-eption to the form, the defendant is held to have waived, by reason of the other appearance, his objectious to the form of the plaintiff's pleading. 2. It is not a ground of exception to the form that the pleading does not give sufficient particulars, but only a ground for asking further particulars. Moreau v. Lamarche, Q. R. 18 S. C. 34

Opposition to Judgment — Crow-Demand—Set-off—Waiter—Jurisdiction.] — In framing an opposition or petition in recoation of judgment, the defendant in order to comply with art. 1104, C. P. Q. is obliged to include therein any cross-demand he may have by way of set-off or in compensation of the plaintiff's claim, and, unless he does so, he cannot afterwards be permitted to file it, as of right. A cross-demand, so filed with a petition for revision of judgment, is not a waiver of a declinatory exception previously pleaded therein, nor an acceptance of the jurisdiction of the Court. In order to take advantage of waiver of a preliminary exception to the competence of the tribunal over the cause of action on account of subsequent incompatible pleadings, the plaintiff must invoke the alleged waiver of the objection in his answers. Magann v. Auger, 2) Occ. N. 329, 31 8, C. R. 186.

Preliminary Exception — Deposit.] — The requirements of art. 195, C. P., as regards the deposit to be made with preliminary exceptions, are peremptory, and must be strictly compiled with. Leclere v. Ayer, 5 Q. P. R. 253.

Preliminary Exception — Long Vacution — Computation, — Article 10, C. P., which dispenses with the necessity of proceding during the long vacation, applies to preliminary exceptions. Thus, when an action has been commenced between the 30th June and the 1st September, it is deemed to have been so commenced on the 1st September, and preliminary exceptions can then be made on the 2nd, 3rd, or 4th September, or any juridical day immediately following the 4th September, if the latter is not a juridical day or a Saturday. Trusts and Guerantee Co. v. Bélanger, 7 Q. P. R. 201.

Preliminary Exception—Order Allowing after Time Expired—Appeal.] — The Court has discretionary power to allow the filing of preliminary exceptions, and particularly of an exception to the form, after the delays, when sufficient reason for the delay is shewn. 2. A judgment allowing a defaulant to file an exception to the form after the delays, without adjudicating upon its merits is not an interlocatory judgment from which leave to appeal can be granted. Lefebrer v. Heirs of Everett, 6 Q. P. R. 188.

Preliminary Exception - Plea to the Merits-Postponement.]-To a demand for an assignment the debtor filed an exception and contested the demand upon the merits before adjudication upon the exception:-Held, that it is lawful for a party who had filed a preliminary exception to plead to the merits before the contention upon the exception is decided: but in this case the hearing upon the merits should be postponed until the exception should be decided, and if it should be maintained, the defendant would have no right to costs of the contestation; if the exception should be dismissed, the contestation would proceed in the ordinary way. A motion to set aside the contestation was dis-McCall v. Godmaire, 5 Q. P. R. missed.

A mostation was disire, 5 Q. P. R. Preliminary Exceptions — Pleading to the Merits.]—The fact that a plaintif has answered preliminary exceptions, does not prevent his requiring the defendant to plead to the merits in spite of such exceptions. Roy v. Quesnel, 7 Q. P. R. 148.

Preliminary Exception — Service — Deposit — Not. v., |—It is not sufficient in the signification of an exception to the form, to serve notice that the certificate of the prothonotary as to the deposit, will be filed at the time of the return of the motion, but a copy of the certificate itself ought to be served; and the defendant will not be allowed to serve such copy after the return of the motion. Roberge v. Belanger, 7 Q. P. R. 8.0.

Escliminary Exception — Time — Computation—Vacation.]—Although art, 10, C. P., says that "in the computation of the time for pleading or for trul the first day of September is considered to be the day immediately following the 30th day of June," it does not follow that every day after the 30th June is to be considered as being the 1st September, and, therefore, the three days allowed by art, 164, C. P., for the service of preliminary exceptions begins to run, in the case of an action brought during vacation, upon the first and not the second day of September. Barbeau v. Jobin, 5 Q. P. R. 457.

VII. INCIDENTAL DEMAND.

Action by Husband and Wife—Joint Cause—Separate Cause—Joinder.]—In an action brought by both husband and wife for attacks made upon them in common, whereby they jointly suffered, an incidental demand based upon the husband's dismissal, will be rejected upon exception to the form. Villeneuce v. Anderson, 7 Q. P. R. 290.

Filing — Amendment.]—An incidental demand whereby a plaintiff (claims something which he had omitted to ask for by his action, is not in the nature of an amendment, and leave to file it is not necessary. Scottish Union Assurance Co. v. Quinn, 5 Q. P. R. 262.

Leave to Present in Forma Pauperis —Terms.] — The authorization to begin an action for a certain sum, in forma pauperis, does not extend to a supplementary incidental demand, filed at a later stage in the same cause. 2. In such case the person making the incidental demand will be ordered to affix to his demand the necessary stamps, and to obtain permission to proceed in forma pauperis upon his incidental demand; upon his default to conform to such order within the time fixed by the judgment, his incidental demand will be dismissed upon exception to the form. Vitale v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 4 Q. P. R. 335,

Supplementary Answer—Rights Arising since Action.]—An incidental demand does not lie where it claims a right which did not exist at the time of the institution of the action, especially if such right does not constitute an answer to the contentions of the adverse party, but may at the most serve as a basis for a new action on the part of the one who invokes it. 4. The supplementary answer to an action or to a plea, of which art, 199, C. C. P., speaks, must constitute a good defence to such action or a good reply to such plea, and it must not be founded upon facts subsequent to the institution of the action which do not contribute a reply to the defendant's plea, but which might, at most, support a fresh action by the plaintiff against the defendant. Dupuis v. Dupuis, Q. R. 19 S. C. 509.

VIII. INSCRIPTION IN LAW.

Allegations of Fact—Documents.]—An inscription in law ought to be directed against the facts alleged, and the documents produced in support of the claim ought not to be taken into consideration. Lewis v. Cunningham, 7 Q. P. R. 238.

Amendment—Leave.]—An inscription in law, once served and filed, cannot thereafter be amended without leave of a Judge. Grossman v. Cloman, 7 Q. P. R. 281.

Conclusions.]—An inscription in law or demurrer must contain a conclusion or prayer. Préfontaine v. Compagnie de Publication de la Patrie, 6 Q. P. R. 183.

Grounds of—Conclusions.]—An inscription in law should contain not only grounds but conclusions of law. Deliste v. McCrea, Q. R. 27 S. C. 76.

Practice. —An inscription in law founded on grounds which apply to several paragraphs of a pleading, should be directed against all of such paragraphs, and not against only one of them. In re Victoria Montreal Fire Ins. Co., 6 Q. P. R. 302.

IX. INTERVENTION.

Preliminary Plea—Time for Service of Motion to Strike Out—Defences—Coverture—Absence of Deposit, 1—A motion to strike out certain allegations of an intervention, as being in the nature of a preliminary plea, is itself a preliminary plea, is itself a preliminary plea, and should be served within three days of the filing of the intervention. 2. An intervener may plead that the plaintiff, being commune en biens, is not entitled to the damages which she claims. Quaere, whether an intervener may set up the want of the deposit required by art. 793, C. P., when the defendant has not set it up. Prevost v. Village of Ahunsteic, 5 Q. P. R. 131.

X. NOTICE OF DEFENCE.

County Courts—Striking Out.]—In an action in a County Court the fact that the special matters set out in a notice of defence could be given in evidence under the general issue, is not necessarily a good ground for an application to strike the notice out. Bennett y. Cody. 35 N. B. Reps. 277.

XI. PLEAS.

Affirmative Plea—General Denial—Election—Husband and Wife—Separation.]—When a defendant pleads an affirmative plea at the same time as a general denial, the plaintiff has no right to have the affirmative plea struck out; he must confine himself to a motion to make the defendant elect between the two pleas. 2. A defendant who denies only a part of the allegations of the declaration may plead at the same time an affirmative plea. 3. In an action for separation of persons or property, the defendant may plead at the same time a general denial and an affirmative plea. Vachon v, Rochette, Q. R. 25 S. (1. 242)

Amendment after Judgment—inouni of Domages—Petition—Clerical Error—Procedure.]—The advocate of the defendant had omitted to deny allegation 4 of the plaintiff, which was, that the damages caused by the defendant amounted to $200. The Judge, suposing that this allegation had not been denied, awarded the plaintiff the $200 as damages. Then the defendant's advocate for the first time perceived his omission and made an affidavit to that effect, adding that it was by error and inadvertence that he did not deny such allegation. He then presented, pursuant to notice, a petition to the Court:—Held, that the nine cases mentioned in art. 1177, C. P., in which a petition lies, are not limitative. 2. That the defendant should not suffer from such an inadvertence, which is equivalent to a clerical error and affords ground for a petition. 3. That the petition should be received by the Court, in order that the petitioner might proceed upon it according to the ordinary rules of procedure. Roy v. Davis, Q. R. 2.1 S. C. 184.

Amendment—Exception to the Form.]—An amendment to a plea, which contains only matters of exception to the form, such as the nullity of the writ for non-user during six months, will be rejected on motion to that effect. Demera v. Girard, 7 Q. P. R. 60.

Amendment—Must be Before Judgment.]
—A Judge is invested with a discretionary power, but he ought to exercise it within the limits of justice, and he cannot permit an amendment at the same time that he renders his final judgment; the amendment of any pleading should always be made before judgment; arts, 516, 518, 529, and 522, C. P.;
Hall, J., dissenting, Guillot v. Garant, Q.
R. 21 S. C. 282.

Breach of Contract — Non-delivery of Goods—Justification—Insolvency—Facts Constituting.]—An inscription in law is not well founded in spite of the fact that the allegations by which a vendor, being sued for cancellation of a contract of sale of goods for non-delivery, seeks to justify his refusal, do not contain the word "insolvent," when they sufficiently allege the facts to justify proof of insolvency within the meaning of art. 1497. C. C. Pineau v. Letellier, 7 Q. P. R. 203.

Cheque—Consideration—Presentment for Acceptance or Payment.)—An action on a cheque will not be dismissed on an inscription in law because the declaration does not allege the consideration nor presentation for acceptance or payment; and an allegation in a plending setting up absence of consideration is not a good defence to the action; but an allegation of want of presentation for payment is good as a defence. Aumont v. Massey, 7 Q. P. R. 67.

Contentions in Law — Principal and Agenti,—In the Quebec system of procedure, the Courts having to adjudicate upon both fact and law, contentions of law are allowable in pleadings. 2. The allegations in a deface that the defendant has acted not pesonally but as mandatary of a third person, when he names, are pertinent; the mandatary who acts in his own name within the limits of his authority, binding his principal as well as himself. Dubois v. Gohier, 5 Q. P. R. 228.

County Court—Action against Administrator.]—Where the defendant, being sued in the County Court as an administrator, pleaded that the intestate was never indebted, and for a second plea, plene administraint, the Court ordered the second plea to be struck out, on the ground that more than one plea can only be pleaded by leave of the Court. Belgea v. Hatfield, 23 Occ. N. 158.

Conversion—Denial—Dates.]—The statement of claim alleged that on or about a certain date the plaintiff was the owner of certain goods and chattlels described, and that on or about the date mentioned, the defendant converted them to his own use:—Held, that pleas which denied that the plaintiff was the owner of the goods and chattlels described without adding the words "or any of them," and which confined the denial of the plaintiff so ownership of the goods and chattlels, and the defendant's conversion of them, to the dates mentioned in the statement of claim, were bad and must be set aside. McDouald v. Louce, 34 N. S. Reps. 531.

Default — Leave to File—Regularity—Order—Appeal from—Time.]—A party in default for the filing of a pleading in the matter of the contestation of a demand for an assignment, may obtain from a Judge leave to file such pleading, and if such permission is granted the filing will be regular. 2. An order permitting the filing of a pleading after the proper time, obtained ex purte, is a judgment, and the party complaining of such idement must in proceeding to have it reviewed do so within the proper time. Filion v. Mussen, 5 Q. P. R. 284.

Default of Plea Non-production of Documents—Ex parter Inscription—Striking Out—Costs.]—When the actual documents invoked in support of an action are not produced at the time the action is instituted a defendant can be foreclosed from pleading only under an order of a Judge, even if such documents are produced after the return as to the service of process, and notice duly given of their production. 2. So long as a foreclosure has not been obtained as above, the plaintiff cannot inscribe for examination and hearing exparte. 3. A motion of the defendant to strike out such an inscription and for permission to plead will be granted with costs against the plaintiff. St. Aubin v. Lemarche, 4 Q. P. R. 434.

Default of Plea — Non-production of Documents—Ex-parte Inscription—Striking Out—Costs.]—Until the actual proofs invoked in support of an action have been produced by the plaintiff, and notice given to the opposite party, the plaintiff cannot foreclose the defendant from pleading and inscribing for judgment ex-parte. Default of Plea — Noting Pleadings Closed—Neglect of Plaintiff to Produce Documents—Irregular Inscription—Leave to Plead —Costs.]—When the documents relied upon in support of the claim in an action are not produced with the return of the writ of summons, the defendant will not be foreclosed from pleading upon default of pleading within the usual time, except by the order of a Judge, even if such documents are afterwards produced. 2. The inscription ex parte of the action for examination and hearing under these circumstances is irregular and illegal, and will be struck out of the record. 3. The defendants having declared that they had a good defence and having produced affidavits to that effect with their motion, were allowed to file their defence, the whole with costs against the plaintiff. St. Aubin v. Lamarche, 5 Q. P. R. 41.

Filing after Time Expired—Terms—Costs.]—If a plea is filed after the time fixed, without the consent of the opposite party or the permission of a Judge, the Court, upon motion of the plaintiff, will order the defendant to pay, within a fixed time, the costs occasioned by his default, upon failure of which his plea will be regarded as not filed. Sum Life Assurance Co, of Canada v. Daveluy, 6 Q. P. R. 346.

Inconsistency — Denial — Subsequent Allegations.] — A defendant has a right to deny one by one all the paragraphs of the declaration and to follow this denial by other allegations. Dansereau v. Latreille, 6 Q. P. R. 464.

Inconsistency—Settlement—Merits.]— A defendant who pleads the sottlement of a claim is not prevented thereby from contesting the foundation of the claim. Dubeau v. Nadon, 6 Q. P. R. 224.

Liconsistent Pleas—Denial—Payment— Set-off, 1—A defendant may plead at the same time that the debt sued for never existed and that it has been extinguished by payment or set-off. Lemoine v. Caisse Generale, 23 S. C. 390.

Inconsistent Pleas—Denial—Sct-off—Ellection,]—A defendant who pleads set-off, however irregularly, is not thereby taken to have admitted the allegations of the declaration, 2. In such case the defendant cannot be placed in the position of having to elect between his denial of the allegations of the declaration and his plea of set-off. 3. The denial of certain allegations of the declaration only does not constitute a general denial, and, consequently, in accordance with the terms of paragraph 2 of art. 202, C. P., does not exclude every other defence. Palliser v. Duff, 5 Q. P. R. 7.

Inconsistent Pleas—Denial—Special Defeccia—A special denial of each one of the allegations of the declaration is not a general denial within the meaning of art. 202. C. P., and does not exclude another special defence. Beaulac v. Lupien, Q. R. 21 S. C. 216.

Inconsistent Pleas — General Denial — Exclusion of Confession and Avoidance.] — Where the defendant pleads a denial that the accident alleged by the plaintiff took place, and that if it did take place it occurred by reason of the fault of the person injured, the defendant cannot have the benefit of both pleas: art. 202, C. C. P. McLeod v. Montreal Street R. W. Uo., Q. R. 20 S. C. S.

Inconsistent Pleas — General Denial — Set-off — Payment, J.—There is no incompatability between a plea by which a defendant denies having ever owed the plaintiff the sum demanded, and one by which he pleads set-off of the said sum if the Court is of the opinion that he owes it, or payment; a defendant may plead these three defences by the same pleading. Lemoine v. LaUaisse Générale, 5 Q. P. R. 104.

Inconsistent Pleas — General Denial — Special Allegations,]—Where the defendant, in his plea, begins by denying generally all the allegations of the plaintiff's declaration, he is excluded, under art. 202 of the Code of Procedure, from proceeding to special allegations upon the facts of the case. Chapicau v. Toren of St. Louis, Q. R. 20 S. C. 238.

Inconsistent Pleas—General and Special—Election.] — When a defendant pleads a general denial in the two first allegations of his plea, and then pleads specially in the remaining paragraphs, on motion of the plainiff to reject the special allegations of the plea, defendant will be permitted to make option within four days, and if he fails to do so, the special allegations will be struck from the plea. Rutherford v. Macy, 4 Q. P. R. 326.

Inconsistent Pleas—Ignorance—Set-off.]
—A plea in which the defendant commences by saying that he is ignorant of the facts alleged by the plaintiff does not hinder the defendant from pleading set-off at the same time, because the defendant must have a certain latitude in defending himself, and also because everything which prevents the useless multiplication of actions ought to be favoured, Godbout v. McPeak, Q. R. 20 S. C. 294, 4 Q.
P. R. 190.

Inconsistent Pleas—Method of Attacking—Dilatory Exception—Slander—Irrelevant Plea. |—A dilatory execution, and not an inscription in law, is the paper remedy to compel a party to optate between different paragraphs of his pleading. 2. In a plea to an action in damages for slander, the words, "et qu'i dit à la prière de son curé," are irrelevant and in no wise constitute a legal justification in respect of an action of this nature, and, on an inscription in law, will be struck from the plea with costs. Bourget v. Lefebre, 4 Q. P. R. 325.

Inconsistent Pleas—Parchase of Littigious Rights—Deposit of Price.]—A defendant, being sued by the assignee of littigious rights, may, in a defence, in which he contests the demand on the merits, also invoke the benefit of art. 1582, C. C., and deposit the amount which he alleges to be the price of the sale of such rights to the plaintiff, inasmuch as, by such deposit, he offers to take the plaintiff's bargain, and thereby, in effect, ceases to control it. Crevier v. Evans, Q. R. 20 S. C. 179.

Inconsistent Pleas—Striking Out—Election.]—Allegations which contradict the preceding allegations of the same plea, containing admissions, will be struck out upon motion of the plautiff, without allowing the defendant the option of having the preceding allegations struck out. Destroismaisons v. Dominion Ice Co., 4 Q. P. R. 368.

Intervention—Time—Service—Exception to Form.)—The time for plending is computed from the day of the service of the Intervention, and an exception to the form of the intervention must be filed within three days after the service thereof. Beauchamp v. Beauchamp, 4 Q. P. R. 367.

Irregular Default Note — Effect of — Vacation.]—If a foreclosure to plead has been unduly entered during vacation, the lapse, after vacation, of the ordinary delay to pleat does not affect the defendant until the plaintiff has removed the foreclosure. Bernard v. Carbonneau, 6 Q. P. R. 348.

Irregularity—Reply—Waiver.]—A party who has replied without reservation to a plea irregularly filed, is considered to have renounced the right to take advantage of the irregularity. Bergeron v. Cempeau, Q. R. 25 S. C. 26.

Irrelevant Plea — Negligence — Fire — Building.]—In an action for lamages against an electric light company for loss by fire by reason of defective wiring and excess of electric current, an allegation in the plea which states that the building was refused as a risk by the insurance companies, will be struck from the plea, on an inscription in law, as being irrelevant to the issue and in no wise supporting the conclusions of the plea. West v. Lachine Rapids Hydraulic and Land Co., 4 Q. P. R. 314.

Judgment—Promissory Note — Affidavit.]
where a defendant, in his pleading, denies that a promissory note signed by him is the consideration for a judgment whereon the plaintiff is suing him, such plea will not be struck out of the record for default of an affidavit in support of it; arts, 208 and 209,
C. P., not being applicable, Penfold v.
Piggott, 3 Q. P. R. 301.

Mortrage Action—Foreclosure—Neglect to File Exhibits—Plea Filed without Leave.]
—The default to file, with the return of the action, exhibits which are not of a nature to suspend the delay for foreclosure, does not prevent the filing of a plea, and a plea filed without leave will be rejected on motion to that effect. Melancon v. Archambault, 7 Q. P. K. 38.

Motion to Strike Ont—Particulars— Preliminary Exception—Deposit, 1—A motion to strike out certain allegations of the defence as foreign to the litigation, vague, and indeterminate, and, as a subsidiary matter, for particulars of some of such allegations, is a preliminary exception, and will be dismissed if it is not accompanied by a deposit, Cohen v. Lipschitz, 3 Q. P. R. 577.

Municipal By-law—Invelidity—Advice of Solicitor,]—It is not lawful to plead in attacking the validity of a municipal by-law relied on by the plaintiff, that it was passed contrary to the opinion of the advocete of the municipality. Town of Westmoust v. McKim, 5 Q. P. R. 134.

Propositions of Law—Salary—Representations—Set-off —Peuve Acant Faire Droit.]—The Court will not strike out upen demurrer, legal propositions set forth in a plea, which do not require proof. 2. To an action for salary the defendant cannot plead that the plaintiff was engaged on certain conditions by reason of representations made by him, which have since proved talse. 3. It is, however, not illegal to plead that the plaintiff has not fulfilled the obligations undertaken by him, and has thereby caused dimage, and to demand on that account set-off equal to the damage caused; and preuve avant faire droit will be ordered upon such allegations. Section V. Violett, 6 Q. P. R. 413.

Puis Darrein Continuance — Faut Arising since Action—Affidati-Documents— Judgment.]—The facts contained in a plac or a reply puis darrein continuance must have arisen since the contestation. 2. Such a vise attesting the facts and allegations, unless these facts are stated by an authentic document. 3. A certified copy of a judgment prove its contents, but does not by itself prove the relation which exists between the adjudication and the facts which are set up in the proceeding in which it is delivered. McDonough v. Catholic Institution of Deaf Mutes, 5 Q. P. R., 430.

Striking Out — Demuyrable Plea,] — A plea which is open to a ge-eral demurrer will not be struck out on a nammary application under s. 133 of the Supreme Court Act; it must be demurred to. Clark v. Müller, 35 N. B. Reps. 42.

Striking Out — Embarrassment—Dupli-city—Bail—Equitable Defence.] — To a declaration for breach of a limit bond given in a case wherein one of the defendants had been arrested upon an execution issued upon a judgment obtained in the St. John City Court. the defendants by a plea negatived the jurisdiction of such Court by reason of the cause having been tried and judgment entered upon a day upon which the Court was not authorized by law to sit, of which trial and entry judgment the defendant had no notice:-Held, that the plea should not be struck out as embarrassing; if it were bad in substance, the plaintiff should demur. 2. To the same declaration the defendants pleaded on equitable grounds that the note upon which the original action was brought in the City Court bad been paid; that the plaintiff, notwith-standing payment, retained the note in his possession, and fraudulerity obtained judgment thereon in the City Court; that the defendant was an official Court stenographer and was privileged from arrest on civil process while in the performance of his civil duties, yet the plaintiff caused him to be arrested while he was performing such duties; that the de-fendant only went beyond the limits assigned in the bond when he was compelled to do so in order to perform his official duties :- Held. that this plea was bad as being both embarrassing and double. Semble, that bail cannot by plea take advantage of matters forming grounds for equitable relief, but should apply to the Court by motion. Dibblee v. Fry. 35 N. B. Reps. 109.

ons in - Pre-]-A motion for the rejection of certain allegations of a plea, and that the defendant be ordered to furnish certain details, is of the nature of a preliminary exception, and will be rejected if not accompanied by a deposit. Clermont v. Bilodeau, 7 Q. P. R. 68,

Submission of Rights—Law Stamps.]

— A declaration of a defendant that he submits his rights to the Court, especially if accompanied by documents in support of it, is a pleading, and will be set aside if it is not stamped as such. Dagenais v. Desnoyers, 5 Q. P. R. 384.

XII. REJOINDER.

Admission or Denial — Ignorance — Amendment.] — Each party must reply specially and categorically to the allegations of the opposite party, either by admitting or denying them, or by declaring that he is ignorant of them. But, on a motion to reject an allegation A the replication to the answer to plea, the defendant will be permitted to produce new allegation. Vig md v. Kilburn, 4 Q. P. k. 316.

XIII. REPLY.

Amendment — Full Court—Statute of Linitations.]—The full Court has power to allow, on terms, an amendment for the first time of a pleading by setting up a fact which would, if proved, be a good answer to a plea of the Statute of Limitations. Jones v. Dacenport, 7 B. C. R. 452.

B. C. Rule 168—New Points Raised on Appreal—Condition Precedent, 1—The B. C. Supreme Court Rule 168 provides that "any condition precedent, the performance of which is intended to be contested, shall be distinctly specified in his pleadings by the plaintiff or defendant (as the case may be), and, subject thereto, an averment of the performance or occurrence of all conditions precedent, necessary for the case of the plaintiff or defendant, shall be implied in his pleadings." In an action for trespass and a mandatory injunction, the defendants pleaded the right of entry under a private Act, and the consent or acquiescence of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs replied setting up the failure of the defendants to comply with certain conditions precedent to the exercise of the privileges claimed, but did not set up another condition precedent upon which the judgment appealed from proceeded, though it was not referred to at the trial:—Held, Killam, J., contra, that the Rule refers rather to cases founded on contract than to those where statutory authority is relied upon, and that the plaintiffs need not have replied as they did, but having done so without setting up the conditions specially relied upon in appeal, thereby possibly misleading the defendants, they were properly punished by the Court below by being deprived of their costs in appeal.—Fer Killam, J.—It was improper for the Court appealed from to allow the absence of proof to be set up for the first time on the appeal. Judgment in 10 B, C, R, 361 varied, Sandon Waterworks and Light Co, v, Byron N. White Co., 35 S, C, R, 309.

Close of Pleadings Joinder Necessity for Filing-Motion for Nonsuit-Costs.] A motion for judgment as in case of a nonsuit for not proceeding to trial after issue joined, according to the course and practice of the Court, was met by an affidavit made on behalf of the plaintiff shewing that no re-plication or joinder of issue had been filed. The defendant in reply proved that a joinder of issue had been served in compliance with a demand of replication made by him, and urged that it would be permitting the plaintiff to take advantage of his own wrong if this motion were refused on account of the plaintiff's neglect in filing the joinder :- Held, that the motion must be refused, because the cause is not at issue until the joinder is filed as well as served. Parties are not only at liberty to search to see whether or not pleadings have been filed, but are entitled to a fee ings nave been fired, but are the state of the for so doing. Moreover, as a fee is payable to the Crown for the filing of such papers as replications and joinders, it would be a fraud on the revenue to permit parties to proceed without filing and paying the fee. plaintiff's course was open to objection, he should be deprived of his costs upon dismissal of this motion. Gallagher v. Wilson, 21 Occ.

Consideration—Departure.] — A party who sues on a writing alleged to have been given in execution of a natural obligation, cannot, in reply to a plea of no consideration, set out a wholly distinct and additional consideration; and the paragraphs of his reply relating thereto will be rejected on motion. Brate v. Brute, 5 Q. P. R. 263.

Contract—Lease or Sale—Amplification of Plean,—If a party, in his plea, calls a certain contract a lease, and the plaintiff, as his answer, sets up that it is a sale, the defendant may, in his replication, allege that it is immaterial whether the writing is interpreted as a lease or as a sale. 2. A replication cannot set up in detail allegations already set up in a plea; such allegations being either useless or irregularly pleaded in a replication. Migneron v. Williams Manufacturing Co., 5 Q. P. R. 226.

Departure—Contract—Repudiation— Reformation.]—The plaintiffs alleged that they supplied the defendants, under an agreement, with patent brakes for use on their railway, and that the defendants altered them and infringed their patent. The defendants alleged that they had a right under their agreement that they had a right under their agreement with the plaintiffs to do what they had done. The plaintiffs, by their reply, denied any such agreement, and alleged that if the written agreement did give any such right, it was not the true agreement, and they asked to have it reformed: — Held, that there was no departure in the reply; for the fact that, by mutual mistake, the written agreement did not set forth the true agreement between the parties in this particular respect was a perfectly good answer to the plea of the agreement, and it was not necessary that the agreement should be actually corrected before the mistake could operate as an answer to its terms :- Held, also, that, even if the portion of the agreement upon which the defendants relied was contained in the same instru-ment as the "agreement" mentioned in the statement of claim, the plaintiffs might, consistently with their relying upon one part of it, ask to have another part reformed. Mac-Laughlin v. Lake Erie and Detroit River lt. W. Co., 21 Occ. N. 405, 2 O. L. R. 151, Departure — Striking Out — Demurrer Tenus — Particulars — Estoppel—Deed— Cutting Down-Evidence.]-A pleading cannot be struck out on summary application on the ground that it is bad in law, unless it discloses no reasonable cause of action or answer (R. 151), or is so framed as to prejudice, embarrass, or delay the fair trial of the action (R. 127), but the opposite party may raise the point of law under Rule 149, or the Court or Judge may under Rule 251 direct the question of law, if there appear to be one to be raised by special case or in such other manner as the Court or Judge may deem expedient; or semble, the opposite party may take the point at the trial though it has not been otherwise previously taken. Even assuming that English Order 19, r. 6 (Mar. R. 202), is in force, before an application to strike out a pleading for want of particulars can be made, an application must first be made for further and better particulars under R. 212. Upon such an application, the Judge may impose the term that if the particulars ordered are not furnished, the pleading shall be struck out. Where the statement of claim set up a case for reformation of a document on grounds other than that of fraud, and by the reply fraud was set up, it was held that the reply was bad in law, under Rule 117, as being a departure:—Held, as against the objection that the plaintiff was estopped by the recitals and other statemer is in the deed, of which he sought reformation, that parol evidence to shew that a conveyance absolute on its face was intended to take effect as a mortgage is admissible, but that such evidence must be of the clearest, most conclusive, and unquestionable character. The evidence on the plaintiff's behalf was in this case held to be sufficient to establish the plaintiff's case. Boardman v. Handley, 4 Terr. L. R.

Departure from Declaration.] — A plaintiff cannot, by a special reply, remodel, complete, or modify his declaration. Walker v. Lamoureux, Q. R. 21 S. C. 492.

Falsity of Quittance Pleaded — Inscription en Fanx.,—To a plea of payment based upon a notarial quittance the plaintiff may reply that the quittance is false, and this although the falsity cannot be proved without an inscription en faux. McCarthy v. Leviolette, 5 Q. P. R. S7.

Grounds of Original Claim—Motion— Demurer.)—The plaintif in his reply to a plea of the defendant must confine himself to setting up grounds going to shew that the plea is not sustainable, and must not allege grounds tending to augment or reinforce his claim. 2. The fact that allegations necessary to sustain the claim are made in the reply, instead of being in the declaration, must be invoked by motion and not by demurrer. 3. Nevertheless, a demurrer may in certain cases be treated as a motion. Fox v. Morris, 4 Q. P. R. 345.

Insufficiency of Particulars — Exception to the Form—Demurrer,]—An inscription in law does not lie against a reply to a plea in which the details are insufficient. An exception & la forme is the proper recourse. 2. An allegation of a reply, insufficient in itself to displace the plea, but which tends to prove the truth of the plaintiff's action, will not be dismissed on inscription in law. Vipond v. Kilburn, 4 Q. P. R. 376.

Intervention — Supplementing Petition — Exception to Form.]—A reply to an intervention containing conclusions which should have been made in the petition for a writ of mandamus, is irregular. 2. Such a reply should be attacked by exception to the form, and not by demurrer. Grier v. David, 4 Q. P. R. 378.

Joinder—Denial — Fresh Allegations.]— A party who, by his reply to a plea, joins issue upon one allegation of such plea, and denies all the others one by one, has the right in such reply also to make new allerations. Provincial Bank of Canada v, Lacerte, 4 Q. P. R. 292.

Leave to Deliver — Time — Jury No-tice — Discretion — Notice of Trial — Close of Pleadings.]-Where an order was made the Master in Chambers allowing the plaintiff to deliver a reply after the regular time for replying had expired, a Judge re-fused to interfere with the discretion exercised, although the reply was open to the objection that all that it sought to put in issue was already in issue by the statement of defence, the purpose being to enable the plaintiff to file a jury notice, and the case being one in which the plaintiff should be allowed to file a jury notice and thus leave it to the discretion of the Judge at the trial to say whether it should be tried with or without a jury. The pleadings were not closed until the lapse of four days (excluding the Christmas vacation) after the delivery of the reply, or until the defendants had joined issue; and a notice of trial given before the lapse of that time, and without a joinder of issue having been delivered, was irregular; and the Judge had no power to allow the notice of trial thus irregularly given to stand. Rules 257, 258, 262, considered Qua v. Canadian Order of Woodmen of the World, 23 Occ. N. 51, 5 O. L. R. 51, 2 O. W. R. S.

Negligence — Denial — Reiteration.]—In an action for damages caused by an automobile going at an imprudent rate of speed, the plaintiff may meet allegations of the defence stating that it was only going at 3 miles an hour and was stopped immediately after the accident, by stating the rate of speed at which the automobile was going, and asserting that It was not under control. Abrahamson v. Yuite, 7 Q. P. R. Gl.

New Facts—Departure.] — The plaintiff in his reply to the defence must confine himself to what is strictly in reply; he may not add to his original claim nor allege facts which should have been set up in the declaration or which might serve as a basis for another action. Jobin v. Rainville, 5 Q. P. R. 93.

Descriptives v. Delaney, 3 Q. F. R. 384.

Regularity - Title to Land - Assignment of Mortgage-Attacking.]-The statement of claim, in an action for a declaration that the plaintiff was entitled to a share in certain lands and to recover possession, alleged that the defendant society were in poss ssion of the whole of the lands and in receipt of the rents and profits, under a mortgage of a share or interest therein made by two of the remaining defendants, who derived their title from the plaintif's father or some of his heirs. The defendant society sought to defend their possession and to hold the rents and profits by setting up in their statement of defence the assignment to them of a mortgage made by the plaintiff's father. The plaintiff replied that there was no consideration for the assignment of such mortgage, and that the alleged assignor was at the time of making it of unsound mind, to the knowledge of the defendant society:-Held, that the reply raised an issue which the that the reply raised an issue which the belinfiff was entitled to have tried, and it was not irregular or improper to raise it at that stage. Smith v. Smith, 21 Occ. N. 531, 2 O. L. R. 410.

Replication—Hemand—Leave to Plead and Demar-Time-Replevin, 1—Where a piaintiff has been served with a demand of replication, and has afterwards obtained an order allowing him to plead and demur at the same time to the defendant's pleas, he must do both within the time allowed by the demand. If a replication is served within such time, and a demurrer after it has expired, the latter will be set aside. In replevin the time for the plaintiff to reply to the defendant's pleas is te., and not twenty days. Macmonagle v. Campbell, 35 N. B. Reps. 468.

Settlement of Action.]—A settlement of the cause entered into between the parties thereto cannot be set up by way of a supplementary reply. A motion for leave to file such a reply will be dismissed with costs, Gilbert v. Tremblay, 4 Q. P. R. 438.

Striking Out — Embarrassment.] — Detime for an engine. The defendants justified under a writ of attachment against the goods of F., an absent or absconding debtor, the engine being seized as F.'s property, and also under execution against the goods of F. The plaintiff replied (4) that when the writ of attachment was issued F. was not an absent or absconding debtor; (5) that the summons and attachment were never personally served upon F., who did not owe the defendants the whole amount of their judgment, and that such judgment was obtained by collusion with F.; (6) that the judgment was paid before this action; (7) that since the recovery of the judgment large sums had been paid by F. which had not been credited thereon, and F., in addition, gave the defendants ertain stocks as collateral security for all sums due, which stock should have been sold, and would, if sold, have yielded sufficient to pay all amounts due. These paragraphs of the reply having been struck out by order as irrelevant and tending to prejudice, embarrass, and delay the fair trial of the action:—Held, that the order was wrong as to the 4th, 5th, and 6th paragraphs, but right as to the 7th. Leonard v. Necet, 33 N. S. Reps, 197.

XIV. STATEMENT OF CLAIM,

Allegation of Immaterial Fact — Striking out—Rule 268—Evidence. Prince v. Toronto R. W. Co., 5 O. W. R. 88.

Allegation of Material Fact.] — Where the failure to prove a fact will cause the action to fail, that fact is a material one upon which the plaintiff relies, and, under Rule 306 of the King's Bench Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 40, should be set out in the statement of claim. Makarsky v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 15 Man. L. R. 53.

Alternative Claim — Embarrassment— Partnership. Hives v. Pepper, 6 O. W. R. 713.

Alternative Claim—Sale or conversion—Doubtful facts. Leader v. Siddall, 1 O. W. R. 337.

Amendment—Causes of Action Arising Pendente Lite—Appeal—Time.]—There is nothing in Rule 349 of the King's Bench Act to warrant the amendment of the statement of claim by setting up matters which have arisen since the commencement of the action except by way of answer to a counter-claim set up by the defendant. That Rule confers on the Court no new power of amendment, but merely defines the procedure to be followed in exercising powers of amendment, which exist apart from it, and as to which the procedure is not pointed out by the Rules preceding it. Toke v. Andrews, S. Q. B. D. 432, distinguished. The referce having previously made an order allowing such an amendment to be made, the plaintiff made the amendment without waiting for the expiration of the time for appealing—Held, that this was no reason for disallowing the appeal, which was made within the time allowed by the Rules. Speton v. Gilmour, 24 Occ. N. 157, 14 Man. L. R. 706.

Amendment — Conformity with Writ—Incorporated Company — Slander — Joinder of Causes of Action — Trial.]—The writ of summons claimed damages against an incorporated company for wrongful dismissal and slander. The original statement of claim was confined to the former cause of action, but, after defence and before reply due, the plaintiff amended on practice by adding a claim for slander;—Held, that it was competent for the plaintiff to do so, under Rule 300. Semble, that an incorporated company may be liable for slander if spoken by its servants or agents in direct disbodelience to its orders; and held, that, at all events the pleading setting up slander should not be struck out summarily, but should be adjudicated on. Leave to the defendants to have the question of law first determined.

The two causes of action were properly joined; but application might be made under Rule 237 to direct the method of trial, Rodger v. Noxon Co., 21 Occ. N. 78, 19 P. R.

Amendment - Conversion-Prayer for Relief-Payment into Court-Judgment Costs—Appeal.]—The judgment in 4 Terr. L. R. 498 varied by striking out the order to amend the plaintiffs' statement of claim as unnecessary, and directing that judgment be entered for the defendant, and that the amount paid into Court by the defendant be paid out to the plaintiffs; the plaintiffs to have the costs of the action up to the time of the second payment into Court, the defendants to have the general costs of the action after that date, and the plaintiffs to have the costs of the issues upon which they succeeded. The trial Judge having reserved judgment came to the conclusion that the plaintiffs were entitled to the moneys paid into Court by the defendant. He held, however, that they were not so entitled under the form of the statement of claim (4 Terr. L. R. p. 498), but only under a claim for conversion, and accordingly in his reasons for judgment—the formal order had not been taken out before the appeal—he stated that under the authority of Rule 189 of the Judicature Ordinance, C. O. 1898 c. 21, he "amended the statement of claim so as to determine the pred augustion." determine the real question at issue according to the evidence adduced," and thereupon directed judgment to be entered for the plaintiffs for the amount paid into Court, without costs:—Held, that no amendment was necessary; that if, as in this case, the facts alleged shewed a wrongful conversion, that was sufficient, although the specific words were not used, and that, so far as the relief claimed was concerned, the Court was entitled under English O. 20, rule 6 (introduced by J. O., 1898, s. 21), and J. O., 1898, s. S. s.-s. 5, to give, and ought to give, any appropriate relief to which the plaintiffs were entitled, though it was not specifically claimed. 2. That where money is paid into Court (though with a denial of liability) it is to be taken to be pleaded as an alternative defence going to the whole cause of action, and if the plaintiff fails to shew himself entitled to a greater sum the defendant is entitled to judgment on this defence, and that the proper judgment as to costs is :- The plaintiff to have the costs of the action up to the time of payment into Court; the defendant to have the general costs of the action from that time, and the plaintiff to have the costs of the issues found in his favour. 3. That although by Rule 500 of the J. O., C. O. 1898 c. 21, no appeal lies without leave from any judgment or order as to costs only which by law are left to the discretion of the Court or Judge making the judgment or order, and although the Court will not as a rule interfere with such discretion unless it has been exercised on a wrongful principle, nevertheless when the judgment or order dealing with the question of costs is appealed from on other grounds, the Court has power under Rule 507 to make any order which ought to have been made by the Court or Judge, and this Rule authorizes the Court in banco to deal with the question of costs below in any way which may appear necessary or expedient by reason of its varying or reversing the judgment or order appealed from. Imperial Bank v. Hull, 5 Terr. L. R. 313.

Amendment-Delivery of Amended State. ment—Irregularity — Time — Validating Order — Terms — Costs — Stay of Proceed-ings — Appeal — Waiver — Compliance With Terms.] - After the delivery of the statement of claim an order for particulars was made, and the time for delivering the defence was extended until the expiry of six days after the delivery of the particulars. Before this period had elapsed, and before any statement of defence had been delivered, and more than four weeks after the appearance, the plaintiff, without leave and without the defendant's consent, delivered an amended state-ment of claim:—Held, that the delivery of the amended statement of claim was irregular under Rule 300. An order was made. upon the defendant's application to set aside the amended statement of claim for irregularity, validating the delivery of it, but directing that the plaintiff should pay the costs of the motion and other costs occasioned by the irregularity, and that until payment of such costs further proceedings on the charges introduced by the amendment should be stayed. or, if such costs should not be paid within one month after taxation, that the amendments should be struck out. Mere compliance with the terms of an order, by the party to whom an indulgence or relief is granted on terms, does not preclude him from moving against the order. Anlaby v. Prac-torius, 20 Q. B. D. 764, Hewson v. Mac-donald, 32 C. P. 407, and Duffy v. Donovan, 14 P. R. 159, followed. Anthony v. Blois, 23 Occ. N. 50, 5 O. L. R. 48, 1 O. W. R. 841.

Amendment—Description of Defendant—Married Woman—Widow.]—If a wife, common as to property, who is described as a widow in a contract, is described in the same manner in an action founded upon the contract, to which she is defendant, and pleads that she is a wife and common as to property, the plaintiff will not be permitted to amend by changing the description. Merrill v. Laprade, 6 Q. P. R. 242.

Amendment—Exceeding Terms of Order Allowing—Water of Right to Object.]—Two weeks after the receipt of an amended statement of claim the defendant's solicitors wrote to the plaintiffs' solicitor that they would "prepare and file a new statement of defense according to the amendment you have most os trike out the amended statement of claim, on the ground that it exceeded the terms of the order authorizing amendment: — Held, that the defendants had waived their right to object. Centre Star Mining Co. v. Roix land Miners' Union, 23 Occ. N. 57, 9 B. C. R. 325.

Amendment—Increasing Amount Claimed—Mistake—Money Paid into Courl—Acceptance by Mistake.]—The plaintiff was allowed under Rule 312 to amend his statement of claim in an action upon a building contract by increasing the amount claimed for extras, and to amend his reply by changing acceptance into non-acceptance of money paid into Court by the defendant, notwithstanding that the plaintiff had filed a memorandum of acceptance, under Rule 423, although he had not taken the money out of Court; the Court being satisfied that the plaintif had made a mistake, and, on finding it out.

Amendment—Misnomer of Petitioner — Impossibility of Amending Security-bond. If a petition in contestation of an election of a school commissioner may be amended by changing the first name of one of the petitioners, such change cannot apply to the security-bond given by the petitioners, which is a contract, and the petition cannot be amended if the security is not. Dame v. St. Germain, 6 Q. P. R. 449.

Amendment-Misnomer of Plaintiff -Affidovit.]—The fact that the plaintiff is described in the writ of summons and declaration as "Charles Averill Kennedy," Instead of "Charles Avery," causes no prejudice, and does not afford ground for an exception to the form. 2. In any case such an exception ought to be accompanied by the affidavit required by Rule 47 of the Rules of Practice. Kennedy v. Shurtleff, 3 Q. P. R. 421.

Amendment-New Claim after Trial.]-A motion to amend will not be allowed after the close of the trial, especially if the new claim attempted to be set up is not supported by the evidence. Archambault v. Melancon, 7 Q. P. R. 36.

Amendment — Ordinary Action—Appearance—Change to Summary Action.] — A plaintiff cannot, after the appearance of the defendant, by simple amendment change an ordinary action into a summary action; and such an amendment will be struck out upon metion. Trahan v. Morin, 4 Q. P. R. 378.

Amendment-Parties-Joinder of causes of action-Specific performance-Recovery of land. Lee v. Gallagher (Man.), 2 W. L. R.

Amendment at Trial—Trespass to Land New Cause of Action—Mine—Inspection. -In an action for damages for trespass and for an injunction the statement of claim alleged that the defendant, who was in occupation of adjoining property which was being operated as a coal mine, had entered upon and under lots B. and C. owned by the plaintiff, and had moved coal and minerals there-From the evidence for the defence it appeared that no excavations had been made on lots B, and C, since the date trespass was alleged to have commenced, but that the defendant's tunnel had extended into other adjoining lands owned by the plaintiff in respect of which no complaint had been made. The plaintiff at the close of the defendant's case applied for leave to amend the statement of claim under s. 164 of the Judi-cature Ordinance, by alleging that the tres-pass had been committed upon these last mentioned lands:—Held, that the real controversy between the parties was whether the defendant had committed trespass upon lots B, and C., and no amendment was necessary for the purpose of determining that question, and it would be an unreasonable exercise of the powers conferred by the section to allow the plaintiff, after the close of the evidence, to amend by setting up a new cause of action discovered from the evidence for the defence: Held, also, that a refusal by the defendant to allow inspection by the plaintiff of the workings of the mine was not sufficient reason for allowing the amendment, as the defendant might have obtained an order for inspection. Greater latitude should be allowed to a defendant in amending by setting up new grounds of defence than to a plaintiff in setting up new causes of action, because a defendant cannot afterwards avail himself of such defence, while a plaintiff does not lose his claim in respect of such cause of action. Moran v. Graham, 2 Terr. L. R. 204.

Amendment—Writ of Summons — Two Couses of Action—Election to Pursue One —Penalty — Discovery — Dominion Elec-tions Act, 1990.]—The writ of summons (issued 30th January, 1901) was indorsed with a claim to second 11. with a claim to recover penalties under the Dominion Elections Act, 1900, and for damag. 5 for wrongfully depriving the plaintift of his vote at an election held on the 7th November, 1900. The statement of claim (delivered 14th March, 1901) did not assert any claim to penalties, but was confined to the common law cause of action. The state-ment of defence (delivered 27th March, 1901), denied the allegations of the statement of claim and alleged want of notice of action. The plaintiff obtained the usual discovery from the defendant, without objection. On the 31st December, 1901, after such discovery, and when the action was ready for trial, the plaintiff applied for leave to amend the statement of claim by adding a claim for the penalties mentioned in the indorsement of the writ:—Held, that the defendant in an action for penalties might have successfully resisted an attempt to compel him to submit to an examination for discovery. Regina v. Fox, 18 P. R. 343, distinguished. The plaintiff, having by proceeding at common law obtained from the defendant the discovery which he could not have had in an action for penalties, and having allowed more than a year to elapse before applying for leave to amend, must, notwithstanding the indorsement of the writ, be taken to have conclusively elected to pursue his common law remedy; and leave to amend was properly refused. Sections 19, 131, 133, and 142, of the Dominion Elections Act. 1900, discussed. Rose v. Croden, 22 Occ. N. 135, 3 O. L. R. 283, I O. W. R. 170.

Amendment before New Trial—Rule 312—"At any Time"—Special Damage.]—All necessary amendments may be made "at any time" under Rule 312, and an action in which a nonsuit has been set aside as against one defendant and a new trial ordered as to him by a Divisional Court, is in the same position as if it was at issue and had not been tried; and the plaintiff was allowed to amend the statement of claim by inserting a paragraph alleging special damage. Delivery after Defence—Irregularity.]—The defendant entered an appearance and at the same time filed a statement of defence and counterclaim, which he then served, and gave notice to the plaintiffs that he fild not require the delivery of a statement of claim:—Held, that a statement of claim subsequently delivered by the plaintiffs was irregular. The indorsement on the writ of summons had become the statement of claim, and if not sufficient could be amended without leave. Rules 171, 243, 247, 256, 300, considered. Discretion—Appeal. [—When a Judge to whom an application has been made to strike out a statement of claim, on the ground that it discloses no reasonable cause of action, has exercised a discretion and made an order refusing the application, that order ought not to be interfered with on appeal unless the Judge below decided the case upon an erroneous principle or omitted to take into consideration something which ought to have influenced his judgment. Cooper v. Yorkshire Guarantee and Securities Corporation, 11 B. C. R. 97.

Embarrassment — Cause of Action — Croun—Onevership of Foreshore,—In an action by the Attorney-General for the province for damages and an injunction the statement of claim alleged that the defendant company had wrongfully erected an embankment on the foreshore of Burrard Inlet, and thereby obstructed the outfall of sewers, to the damage and annoyance of the people of Vancouver:—Held, on an application to strike out the pleading as embarrassing and as disclosing no cause of action, that the pending was good. In such an action it is not necessary for the plaintiff to allege ownership in the foreshore. Semble, a combined application may be made under Order XIX., 27, and Order XXV., r. 4, to strike out a statement of claim on the grounds that it is embarrassing and discloses no reasonable cause of action, and such precedure is not limited to cases which are plain and obvious. Extension of Claim in Writ - Service by Posting—Subsequent Appearance — Waiver. |—The claim indersed on the writ of summons was for specific performance of an agreement for the purchase and sale of land. The statement of claim prayed cancellation of the agreement and possession of the land:—Held, a legitimate extension of the claim within Rule 244. The defendant not having appeared within the proper time, service of the statement of claim was effected, pursuant to Rule 330, by posting up a copy in the proper office, after which the defendant entered an appearance and therein required the delivery of a statement of claim:

—Held, that the defendant had waived any right to complain of the variation made in the extended pleading; and the order made upon a motion to set aside the statement of claim, allowing it to stand as of the date of the order, was the proper one. Gee v. Bell. 35 Ch. D. 160, distinguished. Gibsan v. Hieb, 21 Occ. N. 211, 1 O. L. R. 247.

Extension of Claim Indorsed on Writ of Summons—Service out of Jurisdiction.]
—The plaintiffs began an action against three defendants all resident in England, and served the writ of summons on one of the defendants while temporarily in British Columbia, and then under Order XI. served the other defendants in England. The claim indorsed on the writ was for damages for nontransfer to the plaintiffs of shares according to agreement and for failure to hold certain stock in trust. By the statement of claim the plaintiffs set up in effect a claim for damages against the defendants for fraudulently manipulating certain companies so that the stock had become worthless:-Held, that the matters alleged in the statement of claim were within the scope of the indersement. In deciding whether or not the cause of action indorsed on a writ has been unduly extended in the statement of claim, the fact that one of the defendants was served within the jurisdiction and the others were subsequently served without the jurisdiction under Order XI., is immaterial. Malpractice — "Efficient" — Amendment, | The word "efficient," as applied to a medical practitioner in a statement of claim for damages for his unskilful treatment of the plaintiff, was held to be ambiguous, inasmuch as it might be taken to mean that the practitioner was merely competent, or that he was not only competent, but would in fact skilfully treat, and the statement of claim was therefore held to be embarrassing. Judge's order dismissing application to amend by setting up objection in law, varied, and plaintiff given leave to apply to amend, and in default defendant given leave to apply to strike out portion of claim as embarrass ing. Schiller v. Canada North-West Coal and Lumber Syndicate, 1 Terr. L. R. 421.

Mortgage Action - Alternative Pro-Embarrassing or Unnecessary -Striking Out. 1-Allegations in a statement of claim unnecessary inasmuch as they merely anticipate a possible defence, are not necessarily embarrassing. The plaintiffs in paragraph 2 of their statement of claim alleged that the defendant by deed dated 13th November, 1888, in consideration of £1,003 lent him by one A. M., mortgaged his reversionary interest in his father's estate, and that in the said deed it was provided that if the defendant should within ten years after the date of the mortgage become entitled to the said reversionary interest by the death of the tenant for life, and should within 30 days tenant for fife, and should within 30 days after obtaining possession of the same pay the said A. M. $2,000, with compound interest at 10 per cent. per annum, then the mortgage should be void. In paragraph 3 it was alleged that it was further provided by the mortgage that if the defendant should at the expiration of 10 years from the date of the mortgage repay to A. M. the said sum of £1,003, with interest compounded yearly at 10 per cent., then the mortgage should be void. In paragraph 4 it was alleged that the defendant covenanted in the said deed to pay the mortgage money and interest and observe the provisoes therein contained. In paragraph 5 it was alleged that A. M. had duly assigned the mortgage to the plaintiffs; in paragraph 6, that the defendant did not within 10 years become entitled to the property mortgaged by the death of the life tenant; and in paragraph 7, that the defendant had not paid any sum whatever on the mortgage. The plaintiff claimed £1,003 and interest at 10 per cent. compounded yearly: — Held, on an application to strike out the whole statement of claim, or at any rate either para-graph 2 or paragraph 3 as embarrassing, that the pleading was not embarrassing, and should stand; that so far as any of the allegations might be unnecessary they merely anticipated a possible defence, and were not on that account embarrassing. Particulars—Copyright in Book—Registration—Infringement.]—In an action for in-fringement of copyright in a book, the statement of claim alleged that the plaintiffs were the proprietors of a subsisting copyright duly registered, but did not mention the date of registration, and further alleged that the de-fendants printed for sale a large number of copies of another book a part whereof was an Infringement of the plaintiffs' copyright:— Held, that the defendants were entitled to particulars shewing the date of registration of the plaintiffs' copyright, and shewing what of the pallithis copyright, and snewing what part of the defendants book infringed the plaintiffs' right. Striking Out-Cause of Action-Embarrassment—Demurrer—Amendment—Terms — Rules 259, 261, 298.]-In an action to recover the amount of an insurance upon the life of C., under a policy issued by the defendants and assigned to the plaintiff, the plaintiff alleged, in the alternative, that the defendants had re-insured with another company, and after the death of C. the defendants requested the reinsuring company to pay the amount reinsured to the defendants, which the reinsuring company did, with a direction to pay the amount over to the plaintiff, which the defendants refused to do: — Held, that this amounted to an allegation that the defendants had received a sum of money to the use of the plaintiff, which they refused to pay over to him, and that they were trustee thereof for him; and the paragraphs of the statement of claim containing the alternative allegations should not be struck out summarily under Rule 261 as disclosing no reasonable cause of action, nor under Rule 298 as tending to prejudice, embarrass, or delay the fair trial of Embarrassment-Striking Out-Partnership-Bills of Sale.]-Matter in a statement of defence, attacked as tending to prejudice, embarrass, or delay, will be struck out less freely than in a statement of claim. McEwen v. North-West Coal and Navigation Co., 1 Terr. L. R. 203, followed. Statement of claim set up a partnership between the plaintiff D. and the defendant P., a mortgage by D. and P. of partnership goods to C., and a mortgage of P.'s interest therein to C. Bros. The lst paragraph of the defence of C. Bros. denied the partnership. The 2nd paragraph set up that, "whatever relationship existed" between Do, and P., that relationship was put an end to and the entire ownership of the goods mortgaged then vested in D. free from any interest of P.:—Held, that the 2nd paragraph was embarrassing, inasmuch as, while it assumed some relationship to have existed between D. and P., and alleged it to have been put an end to and the property to have vested in D., it did not allege (1) the nature of the relationship, and (2) the mode in which the relationship had been terminated and the property become vested in D., i.e., whether by operation or implication of law or by agreement of dissolution or other agreement stating the nature of such other agreement. The 7th the nature of such other agreement. The 7th paragraph of the defence of C. Bros. alleged that, even if the mortgage to C. constituted a partnership Hability, C. Bros. had a separate claim against D, before C, acquired any such partnership Hability:—Held, that the 7th paragraph was embarrassing, inassured as a laboration of the paragraph was embarrassing, inassured as a laboration of the paragraph. much as it did not allege that the separate claim of C. Bros, was the same as that for which they held the chattel mortgage, and as, if that was not the case, the whole paragraph was entirely immaterial. The 8th paragraph of the defence alleged that the mortgage to C, was void, and did not comply with the Bills of Sale Ordinance, and no affidavit of bona fides accompanied it:—Held, that the 8th paragraph was embarrassing, inasmuch as it was uncertain whether it intended that the mortgage was void on the ground only of the absence of an affidavit of bona fides, or as well for non-compliance with other requirements of the Bills of Sale Ordinance, or on grounds apart from that Ordinance. Immaterial Issue-Striking Out.]-The plaintiff's claim was for work done and materials provided for a company for which the defendants had agreed to become responsible. The statement of claim set out the items of the claim. By one paragraph of the statement of defence the defendants set up that no account of the moneys claimed by the plaintiff, except as to one disputed item, had been rendered to the defendants, and that payment had not been demanded before action brought; and been demanded perfore action brough; and by another paragraph, that before the commencement of the action the defendants offered to the plaintiff a specified sum (less than the amount claimed) and that the plaintiff had not demanded nor made any claim for any amount in excess thereof :- Held, that no issue or an immaterial issue was tendered by hese paragraphs, and that they were embar-rassing and must be struck out. an executrix for damages for an alleged unlawful detention of the plaintiff's goods. The defendant pleaded a number of defences, and paid into Court $1, which, he said, was suffi-cient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. A motion was made by the plaintiff at Chambers for an order allowing him, notwithstanding the time limited for so doing had expired, to file and deliver a reply accepting the sum of money paid into Court by the defendant, and en-larging the time for payment of the money out of Court:—Held, in Chambers, that, although there was a technical right on the part of plaintiff to recover nominal damages, the action should not have been commenced for the value of the property, and, for this reason, the plaintiff should be refused assistance over the technical difficulty which stood in her way on account of her not having replied within the ordinary time:—Held, on appeal, reversing the order in Chambers, that in case of a plea of payment of money into Court to satisfy the claim of the plaintiff, whenever the plaintiff becomes ready to accept such sum, his right to amend so as to accept such sum, paid in in full must be allowed, subject to such terms as the law requires. Promissory Note — Indorsement without Value—Fraud—Set-off Defeated.]—Action by an indorsee against the maker and the indorser of a promissory note. Defence that the indorser, for whose benefit the note was made, and who had received the consideration, indorsed it to the plaintiff's brother, who when he was indebted to the indorser, in collusion with the plaintiff, and for the purpose of defrauding the indorser, and preventing him from collecting the sums due by the plaintiff's brother, indorsed the note to the plaintiff without consideration:—Held, that the plea was no defence to the action and must be struck out as embarrassing. Caldwell v. McDermott, 2 Terr. L. R. 249.

Real Property Limitation Act—Section Relied on—Appeal—Practice—Costs.]—Held, by the Master and a Judge in Chambers, following Pullen v. Snelus, 40 L. T. N. S. 363, that a defendant pleading the Real Property Limitation Act must set out in his statement of defence, or give particulars show-ing, the section or sections on which he re-lies:—Held, by a Divisional Court, that the defendant should have been content in such a matter with his appeal to the Judge in Chambers, and should not have incurred useless costs by a further appeal. Dodge v. Smith, 21 Occ. N. 162, 1 O. L. R. 46.

Repetition of Counterclaim - Tender and Payment into Court-Judgment-Costs. -In an action for the price of goods sold and delivered, the defendant counterclaimed for damages for breach of contract, and, for grounds of defence, repeating the clauses of the counterclaim, pleaded (1) payment into Court of an amount alleged to be sufficient to satisfy the plaintiffs' claim, and (2) tender before action brought of the amount paid into The plaintiffs replied, (1) denying that the amount paid in was sufficient to satisfy their claim, and (2) objecting to the paragraphs of the defence, so far as they incorporated the paragraphs of the counterclaim, as bad in law, on the ground that the counterclaim was no defence to the action, and could not be so pleaded :- Held, that the defence was no answer to the action, and the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount of their claim. The tender was bad, being pleadtheir ciaim. In the tender was also the property of the whole cause of action, and being insufficient to cover it. The trial Judge having found in favour of the defendant on the counterclaim, and his finding being supported by the evidence, it should not be disturbed. Judgment for the plaintiffs upon their claim with costs, and for the defendant on his counterclaim with costs—the two amounts to be set off pro tanto. No costs of appeal. Bauld v. Fraser, 34 N. S. Reps. 178,

Sale of Medical Practice -- Covenant not to Open an Office—Injunction Restraining from Practising—Judgment not Supported by Pleading.] — The defendant agreed with the plaintiff "not to open an office or have one for the practice of medicine in." etc. The plaintiff sued, alleging that the defendant had agreed "to refrain from practising as a physician," and that he had not ceased to practise "as he had agreed to." The relief sought was an injunction "to restrain the defendant from practising." The defendant admitted that he had agreed "not to open an office, nor to have one for the practice of medicine," At the trial the plaintiff's evidence was directed to proving that the defendant, in breach of the agreement, did "open and have an office," and the defendant, relying on the pleadings, which had not been amended, offered no evidence. Judgment was given restraining the defendant from opening or having an office :- Held, on appeal, that the judgment was not supported by the pleadings, and must be set aside, K. v. Wilson, 25 Occ. N. 51, 11 B. C. R. 109.

v. Pakenham, 2 O. W. R. 1183, 3 O. W. R.

Striking out Defence as Embarrassing—Phird Party Proceedings—Stay of Proceedings.]—In an action for foreclosure of a mortzage made by the defendant and his deceased partner, paragraphs of the defence alleging in effect that the administratrix of the estate of the deceased partner was a necessary party to the action, inasmuch as the defendant was entitled to contribution from the estate, and as an order that no action should be brought against the administratrix as such, and staying all pending proceedings against her as such administratrix for four months, prevented the defendant from pursuing his remedy in that behalf, were struck out as embarrassing: the defendant's proper course being an application under the third party procedure, and the plaintiff not being affected by the effect of the order upon the defendant's rights or remedies. Paul v. Flinn, 2 Terr. I. R. 406.

Time for—Noting for Default — Security for Costs—Payment into Court—Notice of.]

into Court, gives notice thereof, as required by Con. Rule 1207, the defendant is entitled to at least one day to ascertain if payment has really been made, and to file his defence, before the plaintiff can note the pleadings closed for default of defence—the order for security for costs having stayed the proceedings the day before the last day for delivering the defence. Deposit with Tender - Forfeiture -Breach of Contract-Municipal Corporation-Breach of Contract—Municipal Corporation— Right of Action—Damages—Set-off—Restitu-tion,]—C., on behalf of a firm of contractors of which he was a member, deposited a sum of money with the city of Montreal as a guarantee of the good faith of the firm in tendering to supply gas. After the construction of some works and laying of pipes in the public streets, the firm transferred their rights and privileges under the contract to another company, and ceased operations. The plain-tiff, afterwards, as assignee of C., demanded the return of the deposit, which was refused by the city council, which assumed to forfeit the deposit and declare the same confiscated to the city for non-execution by the firm of their contract. After the transfer, however, the companies supplying the gas in the city reduced the rates to a price below that mentioned in the tender, so far as the city supply was affected, although the rates charged to citizens were higher than the contract price: -Held, that the deposit so made was a pledge subject to the provisions of tit. 16 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada, and which, in the absence of any express stipulation, could not be retained by the pledgee, and that, as the city had appropriated the thing pledged to its own use without authority, the security was gone by the act of the creditor, and the debtor was entitled to its restitution, although the obligation for which the security had been given had not been executed. As the city had not been obliged to pay rates in excess of those fixed by the contract, no damage could be recovered in respect to the obligation to supply the city, and the breach of contract in respect to supplying the public did not give the corporation any right of action for damto individuals. Prospective damages which might result from the occupation of the city streets by the pipes actually laid and abandoned were too remote and uncertain to be set off against the claim for the return of the deposit. Finnie v. City of Montreal, 22 Osc. N. 356, 32 S. C. R. 335.

Securities-Bank-Power of Sale-" By Giving" - Notice -- Auction -- Private Sale --Purchasers for Value.]-As collateral security to a promissory note the makers deposited with a bank certain railway bonds, and by a memorandum of hypothecation authorized the bank, upon default, "from time to time to sell the said securities by giving 15 days' notice, in one daily paper published in the city of Ottawa with power to the bank to buy its and resell without being liable for loss occa-sioned thereby." Default having been made, notice of intention to sell was duly published. and, pursuant to the notice, the bonds were offered for sale at public auction, after two postponements at the request of the pledgors, but no sale was made for want of bidders. The bank afterwards made a private sale of the bonds without further notice:—Held, that the words "by giving" in the memorandum the words "by giving" in the memorandum were equivalent to "after giving" or "first giving" or "giving," and the condition of publication of the notice having been performed, the power to sell arose and might be exercised afterwards without fresh notice : Held, also, that there was nothing upon the evidence to shew that the purchasers were not bona fide purchasers for value or that they had any reason to suppose that the bank were not authorized to sell; and under these circumstances the construction of the power of sale should not be strained against the purchasers. Toronto General Trusts Corporation v. Central Ontario R. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. 319, 7 O. L. R. 660, 3 O. W. R. 520.

Securities - Railway Bonds - Sale by Pledgees—Compilance with Terms of Hypothe-cation—"By Giving"—Notice—Abortive Sale -Subsequent Private Sale. |- Dispute as to which of two parties were entitled to prove in respect of 300 bonds issued by the railway company for the sum of $1,000 each, with incoupons attached, which had been pledged by Ritchie to the Bank of Ottawa, as security for a promissory note of $50,000 made by him, bearing date 30th November, 1900, and payable 15 days after date, with interest at 6 per cent. per annum from 31st May preceding. Blackstock and Weddell claim as purchasers of the bonds from the bank, after default in payment of the note, at the rate of 221/2 cents on the dollar of the principal money of the bonds, and to have paid the purchase money therefor, amounting to $67,500. Ritchie, on the other hand, contends that the bank having held the bonds in pledge by way of security, the sale made by them was irregular and void, and that the purchasers, having bought with notice of the character in which the bank held the bonds were affected by the invalidity of the sale :-Held, that the respondents had notice before completion that the bank held the bonds as pledgees and not as owners. The contract authorizes the bank, in default of payment of the note at maturity, " from time to time sell the said securities or any part thereof by giving 15 days' notice in one daily paper published in the city of Ottawa, as to the said bank shall seem proper, with power to the bank to buy in and resell without being liable for loss occasioned thereby." The bank published a notice of a sale of the bonds by auction on 11th March, 1902, and it was published in the Ottawa "Evening Journal" daily for 15 days before the day of sale. There was no sale at the time appointed. On 19th August an offer was received by the bank from Mr. Blackstock, one of the respondents, of 221/2 cents in the dollar on the par value of the principal money of the bonds, and, after much correspondence, a sale of the whole of the bonds, with unpaid coupons attached, was made to Mr. Blackstock, on behalf of himself and the other respondent, and completed on or about 30th September. At the time of the sale the par value of the bonds, with interest coupons in arrear, was, bonds, with interest coupons in arran, was as found by the Master, about $66,000; the debt due to the bank was $56,872.78, and the purchase money received was $67,500, or $10,627.22 more than was due. So that the bank sold nearly five bonds, with attached coupons, the par value of which was $11,000, more than was necessary to pay their debt, no effort having been made to restrict the sale to so many as was necessary for that purpose. On receiving Blackstock's offer of 19th August, the bank telegraphed to Ritchie at Akron, Ohio, where he lived, that they had an offer for the bonds, not stating what it was, and that they would sell unless payment was made by 12 o'clock on the 21st. they received an answer on the same day that arrangements were being made to pay the debt, and protesting against the sale. further communication was made to Ritchie, and the fact of the sale was apparently not made known to him until 21st October afterwards :- Held, the sale was not made with reasonable care nor with proper regard to the rights and interests of Ritchie. No attempt had been made to reach the inquirers referred to in Mr. Burn's letter of 18th March, and were expected at that time to become purchasers, and when the offer of 19th August came, its terms were not communicated to Ritchie, but he was called upon to redeen. within 48 hours, or in default it would be accepted. That offer was about 101/2 cents in the dollar of the bonds and arrears of interest which were sold. The very first offer was accepted, because it was sufficient to pay the bank's debt, although they knew there were other inquirers for the bonds, who, as they had reason to believe and expect, might become purchasers. They also carelessly sold more than were necessary to pay their debt, without any effort to restrict the sale to what was sufficient for the purpose, and, although the offer was at so much in the dollar, and not a fixed sum for the whole, such a sale, even if the bank had power to sell by private contract, which they had not, cannot be supported as between the bank and Ritchie, and by reason of notice to respondents cannot be maintained by them any more than it could be by the bank. The appeal allowed, and the decision of the Master restored. Toronto General Trusts Corporation v. Central Ontario R. W. Co., 5 O. W. R. 600, See 3 O. W. R. 520, 7 O. L. R. 660, 10 O. L. R. 347.

Anctioneer — Sale of Property—Concealment of Material Fact—Action of Deceit—Depriving of Commission.]—An action of deceit will lie against an auctioneer who, being employed to effect the sale of a piece of property, concealed from his principal a material fact, by reason of which concealment the latter sold the property for a smaller sum than he could have obtained if he had been in possession of all the facts. Such failure of duty on the part of the auctioneer towards his principal deprives him of any right to the compensation agreed to be paid to him upon the sale being effected. Ring v. Potts, 36 N. B. Authority of Agent — Sale of Land— Contract—Statute of Frauds—Evidence—Vendor and Purchaser — Specific Performance— Appeal—Findings of Judge.]—1. Although an agent for the sale of land, having only an oral authority from the owner, may sign for him a contract of sale of the land which will be binding under the Statute of Frauds, yet, if disputed, the evidence of the agent should not be accepted as sufficient proof of such authority without corroboration, unless it is of the clearest and most convincing kind and such as bears overwhelming conviction on its face. The authority ordinarily conferred upon a broker employed in the sale of land is limited to the duty of finding a purchaser ready and willing to buy the property at the named price and on specified terms and to introduce him to his principal; and, without a clear and express provision, such authority does not warrant the agent in signing a contract of sale so rant the agent in signing a contract of sale so as to bind the principal. 3. Where the owner has authorized his agent to sell on terms re-quiring payment of $1,000 cash, this will not authorize him to sign an agreement of sale by which the purchaser is to pay the money "on acceptance of title." 4. Although accepting the findings of the trial Judge as to the credibility of the witnesses, the Court in appeal may review the evidence and reverse the decision arrived at as to the legal conclusions to be drawn from the admitted facts. amount so advanced. Shortly afterwards the Buffalo firm failed, and P. became satisfied that they had only conducted a bucket shop, and the transaction had no real substance. He accordingly repudiated his liability on the note, and C. & Son sued him for the amount of it :- Held, Davies and Killam, JJ., dissenting, that the evidence shewed that the transaction was not one in which wheat was actually purchased; that C. & Son were acting therein as agents for the Buffalo firm; that the transaction was not completed until the acceptance by the firm in Buffalo was notified to P. in Toronto; and being consummated in Toronto it was within the terms of s, 201 of the Criminal Code, and the plaintiff could not recover:—Held, also, Davies and Killam, JJ., dissenting, that, assuming C, & Son to have been agents of P, in the transaction, they were not authorized to advance any moneys for their principal beyond the sums deposited with them for the purpose. Execution against Agent-Seizure of Goods Intrusted for Sale-Fraud-Sheriff.1-On the evidence it was found that an arrangement, between merchants and an insolvent person, against whom there were unsatisfied judgments-whereby the former supplied the latter, as their agent, with goods to be exchanged with Indians for furs, which were to be delivered for sale to the merchants, who were to retain from the proceeds of the sale of the furs the invoice price of the goods, plus 10 per cent, thereon and 2½ per cent, of the selling price of the furs, the agent getting all further profit as his remuneration—was established as against the defence that it was an arrangement in fraud of the agent's creditors; and it was held, that such an arrangement was legal, and that therefore the merchants were entitled to damages against the deputy sheriff, who had seized some furs comprised in the agreement under an execution against the agent, MacDonnell v. Robertson, Terr. L. R. 438.

Fraud of Agent — Pleading.]—The first count of the declaration alleged that the defendant was hired for the purpose of receiving and forwarding to the plaintiffs applications for fire insurance, yet the defendant, not regarding his duty, negligently and wrongfully received and forwarded to the plaintiffs an application for insurance containing statements which he knew at the time to be false, and material to the risk, and the plaintiffs relying upon the truth of the application, accepted the risk, and issued a policy thereon which became a claim, and the plaintiffs were put to great costs in defending an action at law. The second count alleged that the false statements were received and forwarded to the plaintiffs by the defendant fraudulently and in collusion with the applicant against the company:—Held, that both counts stated a cause of action and were good on demurrer. The defendant, while admitting the accuracy of the balance up to a specified date, claimed that he was not responsible thereafter, by reason of his not being then able, through overwork, to actually count the money taken over by him; -Held, under the circumstances, and in the absence of a positive statement shewing the inaccuracy of the daily balance, that the defendant was bound to account therefor. Insurance Agent — Agreement to give Notice of Further Insurance—Omission—Linability—Gratuitous Undertaking — Mendate.]
—The defendant, a general insurance agent, undertok gratuitously to have an additional 5500 policy placed on the property of the plaintiffs; and, before completion of this transaction, he also undertook, at the plaintiffs request, to notify the companies already holding policies, of the additional insurance, as was required under their policies. A loss occurred and, owing to the defendant having failed to give such notice, the plaintiffs were placed in the power of the insurance companies and 1 ad to accept $1,000 less than they otherwise would have received:—Held, that the transaction was one of mandate. If the defendant had not entered upon the execution of the business intrusted to him, he would have incurred no liability, but, having undertaken to perform a voluntary act, he was liable for negligently performing it in such a manner as to cause loss or injury to the plaintiffs. Coggs v, Bernard, 1 8m. L. C. 182: Judgment of Lount, J., 4 O. L. R. 541, 22 Occ. N. 372, 4 O. W. R. 554, affirmed. Baster v, Jones, 23 Occ. X 558, 6 O. L. R. 330, 2 O. W. R. 573.

Insurance Agent - Breach of Duty-Neglect to Insure—Damages—Amendment.]— The defendant, who was the agent of a fire insurance company, was applied to by the plaintiff for an insurance upon certain buildings. The defendant filled out a form of application, which was signed by the plaintiff's uncle and guardian, and received the premium, but neglected to insure. The buildings having been burnt, the plaintiff was held by the trial Judge entitled to recover their value as damages. But his decision was reversed by the full Court, which held that the plaintiff's case was not proved; that at most it was proved that the defendant was to forward the application to a loan company, the holders of a mortgage on the premises in question, and that the company were to be expected to apply for the insurance; and an amendment to make that case was refused. Henry v. Beattic, 23 Occ, N. 30, 250, Insurance Agent — Agreement to Give Notices — Breach — Damages.]—An insurance agent who, in consideration of his being given the right of effecting a firm's insurance in companies represented by him, undertakes to attend to the insurances, to see that the policies are duly made out, and to give the necessary notices required to be given from time to time, but, upon a further insurance being subsquently effected, omits to give any notice thereof, whereby the firm is damnified, is liable to the firm in damages for his default. Baster thereof, whereby the firm is familiar. Baster V. Jones, 22 Occ. N. 372, 4 O. L. R. 541, 1 O. V. R. 554, 2 O. W. R. 553, 2 O. W. R. 553.

Mandate — Revocation — Notice — Indemnity — Admission—Offer of Settlement.]—An agreement between the parties, by which the defendants were to pay the plaintiff a fixed sum per month for receiving, storing, handling, and shipping such goods as might be consigned to him for and on necount of the defendants, is a contract of mandate; and such contract may be revoked, without notice, at any time by the mandator, whether the mandatary is salaried or unsalaried, subject to his right to be indemnified against all loss directly flowing from the mandator's wrongful act, where he has acted wrongfully or unjustly in revoking the mandate,—which was not proved in the present case. 2. The plaintiff cannot avail himself of an offer contained in a proposition of settlement made by the defendant (but which he, the plaintiff, refused to accept), as a recognition or admission of his demand to that extent. Galibert v. Atteaux, Q. R. 23 S. C. 427.

Misrepresentation of Authority by Agent—Contract for Sale of Land—Personal Liability—Damages, 1—1. An agent who, by misrepresentation of his authority, procures a person to enter into an agreement with his principals for the purchase of land, will be personally liable to the intending purchase for damages in an action for specific performance against himself and his principals, if they afterwards repudiate the agreement and prove that the agent had no authority to bind them. 2. In such a case, the plaintiff is entitled not only to the expenses actually incurred, but also to the loss of the profit he would have made if the bargain had been carried out. Mancer v. Sauford, 24 Occ. N. 70, 13 Man. L. R. 181,

Power of Attorney — Authorization of Action—Delay in Production, 1—1. The attorney appointed by a non-resident plaintiff must be a resident of the Province of Quebec, and not a person only temporarily present therein. 2. It must appear that the plaintiff, or his attorney, has authorized the institution of the suit. 3. An action will not be dismissed on account of plaintiff's afture to produce a proper power of attorney, if he has shewn willingness to comply with the order of the Court, but an additional delay will be granted to him. Glasgow and Montreal Asbestos Co. v. Canadian Asbestos Co., 5 Q. P. R. 20.

Promissory Notes—Luthority of Agent—Husband Acting for Wife.]—Where a wife separated as to property is carrying on business as a trader, and the husband is acting as her manager under a general power of attorney, the wife is liable to bonā fide holders, for value, of negotiable instruments signed or indorsed by the husband for the purposes of such business, and particularly where there is no pretension that the husband appropriated to his own use any part of the funds obtained on such negotiable austruments. Sale and Purchase of Land—Contract —Construction—Agency.]—In an action by the appellant for a declaration that he was entitled as purchaser to a conveyance from the respondent of the property in suit:—Held, on consideration of all its terms and of the surrounding circumstances, that the agreement sued upon was not a vendor and purchaser agreement, but an agency agreement; that the appellant never came under any personal liability, present or future, to purchase, the arrangement contemplated being on behalf of third parties who might thereafter be accepted by the respondent, Livingstone v. Ross, [1901] A. C. 327.

Sale of Goods-Commission-Evidence.] The plaintiffs claimed a commission of ten per cent, on a sale of electric lighting apparatus, made by the defendants, to an electric lighting company. The plant of the company having been destroyed by fire, the plaintiffs, who had from time to time sold electrical supplies for the defendants, and received commissions therefor, notified the defendants of the loss and asked for quotations for a new plant, and offered to look after the defendants' interests. The defendants replied offering a new plant at a price which included a commission to the plaintiffs. The defendants, in order to ensure making a sale, sent on a special agent, who was directed to call upon plaintiffs, and who was accompanied by one of the plaintiffs, and was introduced to officials of the electric lighting company. The command of the electric fighting company. The latter declined to purchase the plant offered them through the plaintiffs, but subsequently, on the same day, purchased from the defendants, through their special agent, another plant, which was offered them by the latter are agreed price. Held that the victorial of the special price. at a special price:-Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to the commission claimed on the sale; but that the plaintiffs' claim, if any, for compensation for their services, would be on a quantum meruit. Starr, Son & Co, v. Royal Electric Co., 33 N, S. Reps. 156; affirmed 30 S. C. R. 384, 20 Occ. N. 323.

Sale of Goods—Contract—Goods sold by another agent in plaintiff's territory. Webster v. Luxfer Prism Co., 3 O. W. R. 197.

Sale of Goods — Payment to Agent of Vendor-Forged Receipt—Warning.] — The defendant had bought goods of the plaintiff through an agent of the plaintiff who came to the defendant to take an order. The goods were delivered to the defendant by the agent, accompanied by a signed involce of the plaintiff, upon which was written, "Pay no account without my written authority," Afterwards the agent of the plaintiff came to collect the amount due for the purchase, and the defendant said that he would pay him upon an order or receipt of the plaintiff, and and signed with the name of the plaintiff, and the defendant paid him. The signature of the plaintiff was forzed, and the agent was not authorized to receive payment of the account: —Held, that, in these circumstances, the defendant, having been warned not to pay with out an order signed by the plaintiff, should have assured himself that the signature presented to him was really that of the plaintiff, and the latter was entitled to recover the amount of the account. Girard v. Beauchemin, Q. R. 18 S, C. 111.

Sale of Goods by Agent—Commissions—Territory—Contract. Banfield v. Hamilton Brass Mfg. Co., 1 O. W. R. 293, 2 O. W. R. 837.

Sale of Goods by Agent - Violation of Authority—Notice to Purchaser—Bona Fides — Factors Act.] — D. was intrusted by the plaintiffs with carriages for sale, under an agreement in writing by which he was authorized to sell only to responsible persons, and by which it was provided: "Notes of the pur-chaser only will be taken for goods in this contract; old machines, horses, or trades of any kind are entirely at the risk of agents, and they will be held strictly resoposible for all such notes." D. disposed of two of the carriages to the defendant, taking for one goods to be supplied out of the defendant's shop for the use of his (D.'s) family, and for the other cash and a waggon of the defendant's. In an action by the plaintiffs for a return of the carriages or the value, the jury found that the defendant had no notice or knowledge that D. had no authority to dispose of the carriages in the way he did; that the defendant did not know or believe that D. was merely an agent, but believed he was the owner, and had no reason to suppose he was an agent. The Court directed a new trial: Held, inter alia, that the provisions of the Factors Act were inapplicable. Macnutt v. Shaffner, 34 N. S. Reps. 402.

Sale of Land—Authority of Agent—Price of Sale—Specific Performance.]—M., owner of an undivided three-quarter interest in land at Sault, Ste. Marie, telegraphed to her solicitor at that place: 'Sell, if possible, writing particulars; will give you good commission.' C. agreed to purchase it for $600, and the solicitor telegraphed M.: 'Will you sell three-quarter interest, sixty-seven acre parcel. Korah, for six hundred, hard cash, balance year?' Wire stating commission.' M. replied. Will accept offer suggested. Am writing particulars; await my letter. The same day she wrote the solicitor: "Telegram received. I will accept $600; $300 cash and $500 with interest at one year. This payment J may say must be a marked cheque at par for $300, minus your commission, $15, and balance $500 secured.' The property was incombered to the extent of over $300, and the solicitor deducted this amount from the purchase money, and sent M, the balance, which she refused to accept. He also took a conveyance to himself from the former owner, paying off the mortgage held by the latter.

In an action against M. for specific performance of the contract to sell:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal (6th November, 1991), that the only authority the solicitor had from M. was to sell her interest for $585 net, and the attempted sale for a less sum was of no effect. Held, further, that the conveyance to the solicitor by the former owner was for M.'s benefit alone. Clergue v. Murray, 22 Occ. N. 354, 32 S. C. R. 450.

Sale of Land—Breach of Duty — Secret Profit.)—D. represented to the manager of a land corporation that he could obtain a purchaser of a block of land, and was given the right to do so up to a fixed date. He negotiated with a purchaser who was auxious to hey but wanted time to arrange for funds. D. gave him time, for which the purchaser agreed to pay $500. The sale was carried out, and D. sued for his commission, not having then received the $500:—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, 14 Man. L. R. 233, 23 Occ. N. 26, that the consent of D. to accept the $500 was a breach of his duty as agent for the corporation, which disentitled him to recover the commission. Davidson v. Manitoba and North-West Land Corporation, v. Davidson v. Manitoba and North-West Land Corporation, v. Davidson, v. Davidson v. Davidson v. Respective of the commission.

Sale of Land-Commission for Procuring Purchaser—Company Law—Commercial Cor-poration — Contract — Powers of General Manager.] - A land broker volunteered to make a sale of real estate owned by a trading corporation, and obtained from the general manager a statement of the price and other particulars with that object in view. He brought a person to the manager who was able and willing to purchase at the price mentioned, and who, after some discussion, made a deposit on account of the price and proposed a slight variation as to the terms. They failed to close, and the manager sold to another person on the following day. The broker claimed his commission as agent for the sale of the property, having found a qualifield purchaser at the price quoted:—Held, affirming the judgment in 14 Man. L. R. 650, Taschereau, C.J.C., and Girouard, J., dubitantibus, that the broker could not recover a commission, as he had failed to secure a purchaser on the terms specified. Under the circumstances, as the owner did not accept the purchaser produced and close the deal with him, there could be no inference of the request necessary in law as the basis of an obligation to pay the plaintiff a commission. Per Taschereau, C.J.C., and Girouard, J., that the general manager of a commercial corporation could not make a binding agreement for the sale of its real estate without special authorization for that purpose. Calloway v. Stobart Sons & Co., 35 S. C. R. 301.

Sale of Land—Commission—Secret Barpain between Purchaser and Agent of Vendor.]—F., a agent of the defendant company, arreed with the plaintiff that he would withhold IS,000 acres of the company's lands from sale for 16 days to give the plaintiff an opportunity to complete negotiations for the sale of the land, and promised that if he sold the land he should receive a commission of 2½ per cent. The plaintiff afterwards entered into negotiations with one G., who represented

a number of investors desiring to purchase a large quantity of land, but G. was not pre-pared to bind himself at once and wanted time to make financial arrangements and at the same time to have the opportunity kept open, and agreed to pay the plaintiff $500 if he would give him the desired time. plaintiff then agreed to and did give the time and reported to F. that he had done so, but did not inform F. that he expected to be paid The plaintiff never received the $500, nor any part of it, and G. and his associates carried out the purchase of 18,400 acres of the company's lands at the price agreed on :-Held, that, although the secret bargain was a breach of the plaintiff's duty to the defendants, and, if the money had been received, the plaintiff would have to account for it to them, yet it was not such as to disentitle the plaintiff to the stipulated commission for the service which he had fully performed. Boston Deep Sea Fishing Co. v. Ansell, 39 Ch. D. 339, and Culverwell v. Birney, 11 O. R. 265, followed. Davidson v. Manitoba and North-West Land Corporation, 22 Occ. N. 305, 23 Occ. N. 26, 14 Man. L. Sale of Land — Finding purchaser—Contract—Purchaser declining to complete, Copeland v. Wedlock, 6 O. W. R. 539.

Sale of Land—Exclusive Right of Sale—Commission—Contract.]—In order to vest a real estate agent with the exclusive right of sale of an immovable, and entitle him to a commission, there must be a contract in writing, or, at least, an equivalent admission on the part of the owner, of the existence of a contract. The mere statement of a price which the owner is willing to take, and of a commission which he is willing to pay, does not constitute such a contract. Mainwaring v. Crane, Q. R. 22 S. C. 67.

Sale of Land-Finding Purchaser-Subequent Negotiations — Appeal—Reversal of Findings of Fact.]-The defendant commissioned the plaintiff to sell his house and lot, and agreed to pay 5 per cent. commission; the plaintiff offered it to R., the tenant, who paid the rent to the plaintiff as agent for the defendant, who did not want to buy at the time; the defendant became dissatisfied at the plaintiff's not being able to sell, and told him he was going to put the property in other agents' hand for sale, but not withdrawing it from the plaintiff's, and that his price was $3,000 net, and whoever sold it was to look for remuneration to what he could get a purchaser to pay above that sum; another agent sold to R. for $3,150, the defendant realizing $3,000: - Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to commission in respect of the sale. Observations on reversing a finding of fact on a trial in which the evidence was not taken in shorthand. Johnson v. Appleton, 11 B. C. R. 128, 1 W. L. R. 14.

Sale of Land — Finding Purchaser—Subsequent Sale to Another—Personal Liability of Vendor—Property Standing in Name of Another — Special Circumstances,1—The defendant, living in New York, placed a farm in the hands of the plaintiff and S., two different real estate agents in Winnipeg, for sale. The plaintiff found a purchaser at $12 per acre in cash, and informed the defendant by letter. The defendant replied a epting the offer, but asking the plaintiff to call on S., and arrange regarding commission so as to avoid having to pay more than one com-mission. The plaintiff did not communicate mission. The plaintiff did not communicate with S, but introduced his purchaser to the defendant's solicitor in Winnipeg. This purchaser paid the solicitor $500 on account, and was ready and willing to pay the balance on receipt of a transfer. Meantime S. also made a sale of the farm at the same price. This latter sale was carried through by the defendant, who paid S, the usual commission: -Held, that the plaintiff was also entitled to his commission, as he had done all that was necessary to earn it; and that, notwithstanding that the title to the property was, to the knowledge of the plaintiff, in the defendant's father, from whom the defendant had a power of attorney to sell and convey it, the defendant's letters, statements, and conduct throughout justified the plaintiff in looking to the defendant alone for his commission. Bell v. Rokeby, 15 Man, L. R. 327, 1 W. L. R. 124, 531,

Sale of Land—Purchaser Found—Agreement for Lover Price—Quantum Meruit.]—The plaintiffs, whom the defendant knew to be real estate agents, called on the defendant and ascertained from him that his house was for sale at $14,000, nothing being said about a commission. Shortly afterwards, the plaintiffs introduced a purchaser for the property, who, after inspection, authorized the plaintiffs to offer $12,500. On this offer being communicated to the defendant, he told the plaintiffs that he would not accept any less than $14,000, and that he wanted that net, which the plaintiffs understood meant clear of commission. The plaintiffs tried to induce the purchaser to buy on these terms, but he afterwards dealt with the defendant directly and bought the property for $14,000:—Held, Perdue, J., dissenting, that the plaintiffs were centitled on a quantum meruit to recover the full amount of the usual commission on the $14,000. Wolf v. Tait, 4 Man, L. R. 59, Wilkinson v. Martin, S. C. & P. I, and Morson v. Burnside, 31 O. R. 438, followed. Atkins v. Allan, 24 Occ. N. 154, 14 Man, L. R. 549.

Sale of Land-Purchaser Found-Alteration of Terms without Agent's Intervention-Evidence-Credibility-Appeal.]-The defendant had a property for sale which he had placed in the hands of several estate agents. The plaintiff, who was not known to the defendant to be a real estate agent, and who had no office as such, went to the defendant, ascertained that the property was for sale, and asked the terms, which the defendant gave him. The plaintiff tried to find a purchaser; and, at a subsequent interview, he told the defendant that he had found one. In answer to the defendant, the plaintiff gave the name of the purchaser. The defendant stated the terms as before, but said he would require a larger cash payment than the plaintiff had previously understood would be accepted. The plaintiff then said that the purchaser would take the property on these terms, and brought the purchaser to the defendant. The chaser then proposed that, instead of $10,000 cash, he should pay $5,000 cash and $5,000 in six months—the other payments to be as agreed on—to which the defendant acceded, and the sale was carried out. There was some conflict of testimony as to whether the defendant understood that plaintiff was working for a commission on the sale, but the trial Judge, in dismissing the action, said that he did so with hesitation, and that all the witnesses had impressed him with the honesty of their belief in their statements:-Held, that the Court on appeal was in as good a position to judge of the evidence and its effect as the trial Judge, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the usual commission on the sale. Wolf v. Talt, 4 Mah. 1. d. followed. Where there are two persons of followed. a particular conversation took place, whilst the other positively denies it, the proper conclusion is that the words were spoken and that the person who denies it has forgotten the circumstances: Lane v. Jackson, 20 Beav. 535; King v. Stewart, 32 S. C. R. 483. Wilkes v. Maxwell, 24 Occ. N. 150, 14 Man. L. R. 599.

Sale of Land-Purchaser not Accepted-Terms of Employment of Agent.] - The defendant having placed his property in the hands of several real estate agents for sale, the plaintiff called upon him and asked him if it was for sale and inquired as to the price and terms. The defendant then wrote out the price and terms on a slip of paper, which he gave to the plaintiff, knowing that the plaintiff's object was to try to find a purchaser, effect a sale, and earn a commission, although nothing was said about it. The plaintiff shortly afterwards found and introduced to the defendant a purchaser for the property, ready. willing, and able to take it on the terms men but, after some negotiations, the detioned. fendant refused to carry out the sale and sold to another purchaser at a higher price :-- Held, affirming the judgment of Killam, C.J., (Perdue, J., dissenting), that the plaintiff had only been authorized to find a purchaser who would be accepted by the defendant, and that, in the absence of any express contract for remuneration to the plaintiff, the only promise that could be implied from what had taken place amounted to this: "My property is for sale in the hands of several agents at the price and on the terms which I give you; I do not ask you or employ you to sell it for me; but I will allow you to try to sell it, and, if you succeed in finding a purchaser whom I shall accept, I will pay you the usual commission;" and that, as the defendant did not sell to the purchaser introduced by the plaintiff, the latter was not entitled to anything for his work. Sale of Mine-Remuncration of Agent-Written Agreement for Commission - Oral Promise of Expenses and Remuneration if no Sale-Findings of Jury.] - The defendant gave instructions in writing to the plaintiff respecting the sale of a coal mine on terms mentioned, and agreed to pay a commission of 5 per cent, on the selling price, to include all expenses. The plaintiff failed to effect a He brought an action to recover expenses incurred in an endeavour to make a The jury sale, and reasonable remuneration. found that the plaintiff was entitled to com-pensation of $9,667.62, and also answered guestions as follows:—(1) Did the defendant in the middle of 1800 verbally authorize the plaintiff to do his best to sell her mine, and if so, was any compensation mentioned at the (a) In view of concessions made subsequently, we believe there was. (b) A promise of fair treatment in case of no sale. (2) Were the documents signed later intended to represent all the terms? Yes had sale been effected. (3) If the documents were not so intended, what agreement was come to? Answer to question (1) expresses our view -Held, that judgment was properly entered for the plaintiff on these findings; that the agreement as found by the jury was net illusory; that the findings supported the judgment; and that the verdict was not one which the jury could not reasonably find. Harris'v. Dansmuir, 9 B. C. R. 303.

Sale of Mine—Written Contract—Collisteral Oral Agreement—Findings of Jury—New Trial.)—An agent employed to sell a mine for a commission falled to effect a sale, but brought action based on an oral collateral agreement by the owner to pay "expenses" or "expenses and compensation" in case of failure. The jury found, in answer to a question by the Judge, that "we believe there was a premise of fair treatment in case of no sale;"—Held, reversing the judgment in 9 B. C. R. 303, Taschereau, C.J.C., and Killam, J., disserting, that this finding did not establish the collateral agreement, but was, if anything, opposed to it, and, the real issue not having been passed upon, there must be a new trial. Dunamuir v. Loucenberg, Harris & Co., 24 Occ. N. 117, 34 S. C. R. 228.

Sale of Mineral Claim—Commission—Introduction of Purchaser.]—Where a broker, on the instruction of the vendor of mineral claims, introduces a purchaser, he is entitled to his commission even though the sale be effected wholly through another agent. Osler v. Moore, S. B. C. R. 115.

Undisclosed Principal - Action by Agent — Addition of Principal as Party — Building Contract — Guarantee—Breach—Representation as to Ownership-Damages.]-A husband who was superintending for his wife the erection of a building on her property, after correspondence with contractors in which the building was referred to by them as "your building" and by him as "my building," took a guarantee from them that "your roof will remain water-proof." In the correspondence and contract the expression "your town" was also used. The wife was not mentioned. The roof proved defective. In an action by the husband and wife for damages:—Held, that the expressions employed did not necessarily imply that the husband was the owner of the roof or the building, but were used as convenently descriptive of the matter under discussion, and that it was competent for the wife to shew that he was her agent, and to recover damages for its breach :- Held, also, that the husband, not breach:—Held, also, that the husband, not being either a party or privy to the contract, could not recover for its breach. Lucas v. De la Cour. 1 M. & S. 249, and Humble v. Hunter, 12 Q. B. 310, distinguished. Abbatt v. Atlantic Refining Co., 22 Occ. N. 411, 4 O. L. R. 701, 1 O. W. R. 701.

Undisclosed Principal - Action against Agent—Election — Purchase of Judgment — Equities—Notice.]—The plaintiff sold a judgment for more than $9,000 against K. to G., who was acting as agent for Mrs. K., to whom he at once assigned the judgment, and received $1,000 from her therefor; G., by his instructions from Mrs. K., was limited to $1,000 as the purchase price of the judgment, but, as he was interested in the architect's commission which he expected to receive out of the erection of a building proposed to be erected on the land against which the judgment was registered, he agreed to pay the plaintiff $1,000 in cash and $500 when the roof of the building was completed or at the latest on the 1st January, 1903, and he also agreed to enforce the judgment against K., and pay the plaintiff half the proceeds he received; his agreement with the plaintiff was contained in two writings, one being an assignment from the plaintiff to G. of all the plaintiff's rights under the judgment for $1,000, and the other containing the additional terms, of which Mrs. K, was not aware when she bought from G .: G. failed to pay the plaintiff the additional $500, and the plaintiff sued for it in a County Court; and, although the fact came out in evidence during the trial that G, in buying the judgment had been acting as Mrs. K.'s agent, the plaintiff took judgment against G. sequently the plaintiff sued G. and Mrs. K. to have the assignment set aside or to have Mrs. K. declared a trustee for the plaintiff: Held, that the plaintiff by taking judgment against G., founded upon his promise contained in one of the documents which made up the transaction, elected to treat him as the sole principal, and that Mrs. K. bought the judgment without any knowledge of the agreement between the plaintiff and G., and so was not bound by its terms. Semisch v. Guenther, 10 B. C. R. 371.

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

Agent for Sale of Goods-Surety for-Conditions of Bond-Giving Time-Discharge of Surety-Default-Notice.]-The plaintiffs entered into an agreement in writing with O. for the sale of carriages, by the terms of which O. was required to obtain from the purchaser of each vehicle, on delivery, his note or cash in settlement, and, in all cases where notes were taken, to guarantee the payment of and indorse the notes. The defendant became surety on a bond given by O, to the plaintiffs that O. would perform the conditions of the agreement, and would pay and satisfy all notes and other securities which remained outstanding on its termination. Some of the notes taken by O, having become overdue during the course of the business, the plaintiffs drew on O. for the amounts; O. accepted but failed to pay :- Held, that, as the defendant was not to be liable until after the termination of the agreement, and as the time given had elapsed before his liability accrued, the giving of the time did not prevent the plaintiffs from looking to him as surety. any case, time was given, so as clearly to discharge the surety, the amount as to which he was so discharged was severable from the rest of the transaction, and the discharge would only operate pro tanto. As, by the terms of the bond, the taking and renewal of notes was contemplated, the surety was not prejudiced by the drawing of drafts as a means of collecting the notes. As to the taking by O. of notes of a different form from that stipulated, it must be shewn that the plaintiffs, by their conduct, prevented the thing from being done, or connived at its omission, or enabled O. to do what he ought not to do, and but for such conduct on the part of the plaintiff, the omission or commission would not have happened; and the mere re-ception by the plaintiffs of notes taken by O. in another form than that required was not within this principle. A letter from the plaintiffs' manager to the defendant notifying him that notes indorsed by O, were not being paid when due, and that the amount due the com-pany by O. was large and growing, was sufficient to have put the defendant upon his guard. McLaughlin Carriage Co. v. Oland, 34 N. S. Reps. 195,

Collateral Security—Neglect of Creditor by which Security is Lost — Release. of Surety.]—Where a creditor accepted a transfer of seigniorial rents from the surety, the rents being transferred to secure the payment of a loan made to the principal debtor, interest, and premiums on a life policy, which had been assigned by the principal debtor to the creditor as security for the debt, and through the neglect of the creditor to make payment of a premium due, the policy larsed, the surety is entitled to be released from his obligation of suretyship for so much of the debt as the lapsed policy would have suffect to extinguish. The principle above stated is not affected by the fact that the surety's agent, with the consent of the creditor, continued to collect the rents, or by the further fact that signification of the transfer of the rents, with the consent of both creditor and survety, was not made upon the tenants. Wartele v, Trust and Loan Co, of Canada, Q. R. 13 K. B. 329.

Discharge of Surety—Ratending Time for Payment—Promissory Notes—Renewal— Accommodation Indorser—Collateral Security Notice.]-T. B. L. and A. C. S. being indebted on several promissory notes to the plaintiffs, who demanded security, the defendant H. A. S., the wife of A. C. S., at his request and without knowing of the purpose for which he proposed to use it, indorsed a blank form of note, which was afterwards filled out as a note made by T. B. L. payable to H. A. S., and indorsed by her and A. C. S., and was then given to the plaintiffs. This note was afterwards renewed, H. A. S. again indorsing a blank form, A. C. S. being made payee and indorsing ahead of H. A. S. While the plaintiffs. tiffs held this latter note, they kept the several notes as security for which they held it renewed, the renewals extending beyond the date of the maturity of the note held as security. In an action on the latter note, H. A. S. pleaded that she was discharged, by reason of the plaintiffs having given time by a bind-ing agreement to T. B. L. and A. C. S., the principal debtors, without her consent :- Held. McGuire, J., dissenting, that the renewal of the notes constituted such an agreement and that the rule invoked-that giving time to a principal debtor by a binding agreement without the surety's consent, discharges the surety—was applicable; and that H. A. S. was entitled to a dismissal of the action. Semble, that the fact that T. B. L. falsely stated to the plaintiffs, when they demanded security. that H. A. S. was indebted to him, and asked them if they would accept her indorsement to which they consented, could not bind H. A. S., as T. B. L. had no authority from her to make the statement. 2. That if notice to the plaintiffs that H. A. S. was merely an accommodation indorser were necessary, the mere fact that she was second indorser on the first note and first indorser on the second nots would be sufficient evidence of such notice. 3. The case was distinguishable from that a person who, being asked for collatof eral security, brings paper founded on an actual indebtedness to himself. In that case, giving him time would in no case relieve the parties to the paper given as security. Jeune v. Sparrow, 1 Terr. L. R. 384.

Discharge of Surety — Extension of Time—Promissory Note—Forged Reneval.]—The appellant was a maker of a promissory note along with one of the other defendants, his son, for whose accommodation the note was made. The father's signature was in reality a forgery. The original note was given up by the plaintiff to the son, and was not produced at the trial. Secondary evidence of it was given, and judgment for the plaintiff upon it:

—Held, that, assuming that the creditor knew at the time of the making of the original note that the appellant signed it as surety only, the surety was not discharged by the extending of time to the principal debtor. Irwin v. rreeman, 13 Gr. 465, followed. Melayer v. McGregor, 21 Occ. N. 25.

Discharge of Surety-Giving Time -Prejudice.]—A surety, relying on the giving of time by the creditor to the principal debtor as a defence on an action for the debt, must now, under s.-s. 14 of s. 39 of the King's Bench Act, 58 & 59 V. c. 6, shew that he has suffered pecuniary loss or damage as the reasonably direct and natural result of the creditor having given the extension of time. defendant, claiming that he was entitled to be treated as a surety, proved that, relying on the representations of his co-debtor that the debt had been paid and satisfied, he had made a settlement of their partnership affairs and paid a large sum of money to him and given him a formal release, besides handing over to him a large quantity of goods:—Held, that this was not evidence to shew that the de fendant had been prejudiced by the plaintiffs having given time to the co-debtor, as what the defendant had done was done on the strength of the statements made to him by his co-debtor, and not in reliance on anything the plaintiffs had done or omitted to do. Discharge of Surety-Wrongful Acts of Principal—Failure to give Notice of—Findings of Jury—Setting Aside.]—The defendants F. W. B. and J. A. K. were sureties on a bond given to the plaintiff association by the defendant B, for the faithful discharge of his duties as an agent of the association. Among such duties were the remittance, at least once in each month, of all moneys or securities collected for or on account of the association, such remittances to be made by bank draft, marked cheque, post office order, or by express. The evidence shewed that B. remitted moneys by his own personal cheques, instead of as directed, and on a number of occasions asked to have such cheques held over for a few days in order to enable him to provide funds to meet them: -Held, that these, and other acts of disobedience, under the terms of the agreement, would have justified the dismissal of B.; that it was the duty of the association to have notified the sureties of his derelictions of duty; and that, having failed to do so, and having continued him in their employ with knowledge that he was violating his instructions, they could not re-cover against the sureties for the default of B .: Held, that findings of the jury, negativing knowledge on the part of the associa-tion of the irregularities of B., being against the weight of evidence, must be set aside with costs, and a new trial ordered. Confederation Life Association v. Brown, 35 N. S. Reps. 94.

Fidelity Guarantee—Alteration of Duties of Principal — Imposition of Greater Responsibilities—Release of Surety.]—A contract of suretyship is to be interpreted strictly, and its effect should be circumscribed by and limited to the particular obligations assumed by the surety; therefore the suretyship of one who gives a guarantee against the acts of another is at an end, if the duties of the latter, while apparently, on the whole, remaining the same, are changed to place on him more onerous responsibilities. In this case, the defendant D, having become surety only for the nets of the defendant T. as a simple collector of the plaintiff, his suretyship terminated when the defendant T ceased to act as collector, to take the more important and onerous office of secretary-treasurer of a new local branch established in the territory where he had acted as collector. Société des Artisans Canadiens-Francius v. Trudet, Q. R. 28 S. C. 118

Guaranty — Construction — Continuing Security.]—A firm, being indebted to the plaintiffs for goods supplied, on ordering further goods received from the plaintiffs a telegram — "Let M. I. (defendant) "wire guaranty for payment of all accounts to us, and everything will be satisfactory." The defendant, without apparently having seen the telegram, but having been informed of its contents, telegraphed in reply, "Will guarantee payment of all accounts" for the firm:—Held, that the guaranty was a continuing one, and the defendant was liable for accounts incurred or to be incurred. Guaranty-Honesty of Agent-Notice of Default-Proofs of Loss-Proposal - Conditions-Expenses of Prosecution.] - An action upon a guaranty policy to reimburse the plaintiff for pecuniary loss by the fraud or dishonesty of an agent of the plaintiffs which should amount to embezzlement or larceny. One condition was that on the discovery of fraud or dishonesty the employers should immediately notify the defendants :- Held, on the evidence, that the defendants got imme-diate notice of the fact of loss, and waived exact compliance with the condition as to notice. 2. That, within a reasonable time after discovery of default, the plaintiffs furnished their claim, with such particulars as proved the cause, nature, and extent of the loss. 3. Whether the incorporation of the proposal in the policy (as was provided for) should be construed as constituting a warranty by the plaintiffs that they would adhere to the course indicated by the answers to questions submitted to the plaintiffs, the surety should be considered as discharged by a departure from that course materially contributing to the loss insured against. plaintiffs did not furnish reasonable verification of the statements made in the written proposal or the compliance therewith. Therefore, the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover for pecuniary loss; but, having prosecuted their agent, as required by a condition of the policy, they were entitled to be paid the expenses so incurred. N. 354, 8 O. L. R. 117, 4 O. W. R. 99, dismissing action upon a guarantee policy issued by defendants in favour of plaintiff loan company to secure the fidelity of one Rowley, manager of that company. guarantee agreement in this case was issued upon and after the proposal or application of the employee, fortified and accompanied by the answers of the company (the employers) touching the duties of the applicant, which answers it was agreed were to be taken as the basis of the contract between the employers (the plaintiffs) and the de-fendants, the guarantee company. Upon these papers, statements, and representations, the contract was issued and accepted by plaintiffs. On the face of the sealed contract of insurance or guarantee it was recited: insurance "Whereas the employer has delivered to the company certain statements and a declaration setting forth, among other things, the duties and remuneration of the employee, the moneys to be intrusted to him, and the checks to be kept upon his accounts, and has consented that such declaration, and each and every the statements therein referred to or contained shall form the basis of the contract hereinafter expressed to be made, but this stipulation is hereby limited to such of said statements as are material to this contract." This last clause was apparently the outcome of what was deemed a proper form of expression to comply with sub-sec. (2) of sec. 144: see Village of London West v. London Guarantee and Accident Co., 26 O. R. 520, in which the defendants were the company now defendants. If sub-sec. (2) of sec. 144 were derendants. If sub-sec. (2) of sec. 144 were alone considered, it appears to contain in gremio sufficient to indicate that the terms which go to avoid the contract need not be contained in or indorsed upon the contract "in full." It was enough if the contract "be made subject" to any stipulation as to avoiding the contract by reason of any statement inducing the entering into of the contract by the corporation. In this case the contract was made subject to the preliminary statements and declaration. Besides this, there was an express notice given on the face of the agreement (p. 2) that if any suppression or mis-statement of any fact affecting the risk of the company be made at the time of the payment of the first or any subsequent premium

. . . this agreement shall be void and of no effect from the beginning. The original untrue statements were made contemporane-

ously with the first payment of premium, and they were unquestionably material and affeced the risk. Blgin Loan and Savings Co. v. London Guarantee and Accident Co., 5 O. W. R. 349, 9 O. L. R. 569.

Judgment against Principal - Res Judicata against Surety - Evidence Appro-priation of Payments - Scope of Liability of Surety.]-A judgment against the principal debtor is res judicata against his surety, provided that the judgment defines and determines the responsibility of the principal debtor in the matter covered by the security. 2. In this case the judgment against the principal debtor, being based upon the fact that he had neglected to collect certain premiums, and not determining his responsibility as regards money received and not remitted to the plaintiffs, did not decide the question arising in the present action, and therefore did not sustain the allegation of res judicata as regards the surety. 3. Evidence cannot, in order to establish res judicata, he admitted to determine the nature of debts covered by the amount of a judgment, when the judgment does not determine such debts and does not particularly specify them: art. 1234, C. C. 4. The surety is not concerned in the appropriation of moneys remitted by the principal debtor to the creditor; the remitting of the money frees the surety from all responsibility. 5. In this case the surety, warranting only the fidelity of the principal debtor in the performance of his duties, will not be responsible for what the creditor has, in his own interest, tolerated and even approved in the conduct of his agent. Judgment in Q. R. 24 S. C. 88 reversed. Morgan v. Western Assurance Co., Q. R. 13 K. B. 49.

Judicial Surety — Appeal — Extent of Liability.] — A judicial security guaranteeinz that a party will effectively prosecute an appeal which he has taken to the Court of King's Bench from a judgment of the Superior Court, and will pay the award and all cost and damages which shall be awarded in case the judgment of the Superior Court shall be affirmed, is at an end the moment the judgment of the Superior Court has been reversed by the Court of King's Bench; and the fact that, upon an appeal of the opposite party, the Supreme Court of Canada has subsequently set aside the judgment of the Queen's Bench and restored that of the Superior Court, does not revive the obligation of the surety, Guertin v. Molleur, 21 Oct. N. 445, Q. R. 19 S. C. 571.

Mandate — Negligence — Laches — Release of Surety — Pledge — Construction of Contract — Principul and Agent.]—Upon the execution of a deed of obligation and hyperhec, the plaintiffs became sureties for the debtor, and, for further security, the debtor and delivered to the mortgage, by way of pledge, a policy of assurance upon his life for the amount of the loan; one of the clauses of the deed provided "for further securing the repayment of the said loan, interest, accessories, and premiums of insurance on the said life policy," that the debtor and sureties, "by way of pledge à titre d'anti-chrése transferred and made over unto the said lender" certain constituted rents and seigniorial dues. Laches - Re-Construction of at.]-Upon the ion and hyporeties for the ity, the debter mortgagee, by rance upon his in; one of the said loan, inns of insurance the debtor and à titre d'antiover unto the ted rents and arther provided should remain be repaid with premiums as might be disbursed by the creditor, and that the creditor should have the right to dismiss said agent should he fail to make out of the revenues of the seignlory and remit to the creditor the amount necessary for the payment of such interest and the sums disbursed for the insurance premiums. It further pro-vided that the lender should not be responsible to the debtor and sureties for the agent's acts, the debtor and sureties assuming responacts, the dector and surfectes assuming respon-sibility therefor. The judgment appealed from found, as facts, that the sureties had made a provision in the hands of the creditor for the provision in the hands of the creditor for the purpose of payment of the premium out of the revenues assigned, that, for such pur-poses, the creditor had become the mandatary of the sureties and responsible for the due fulfilment of such mandate, and that there were sufficient funds derived from such revenues to pay a renewal premium which fell due shortly before the death of the debtor, but said premium had been omitted to be paid through some neglect or fault of the creditor in obtaining the funds therefor from the agent. In consequence of the failure of the agent. In consequence or the failure of the payment of the premium the benefit of the policy was lost:—Held, affirming the judg-ment appealed from, Idington, J., dissenting, that the deed contemplated the payment of the premiums by the creditor out of the funds assigned, that the creditor had failed to use proper diligence in respect to the payment of the premium, and that the sureties were, therefore, entitled to be discharged pro tanto, and the property pledged released accordingly.

Release of Surety — Assignment of Mortgage — Unvenant — Discharge of Part of Land.)—The defendant, when assigning a mortgage on lands to the plaintiffs, covenanted that the mortgage would pay. The plaintiffs afterwards, without his consent, discharged half the lands from the mortgage on payment of half the mortgage debt:—Held, that this was such an alteration of the contract guaranteed as to release the defendant from his liability, whether the amount paid was the full value of the part released or not. Farmers' Loan and Savings Co. v. Patchett, 23 Occ. N. 285, 6 O. L. R. 255, 2 O.

Release of Surety — Rent — Rescission of Lease—Damages. —A third person who was given security for the payment of rent by a tenant is discharged when the lease is rescinded at the request of the landlord upon a ground other than non-payment of rent, and, the effect of the rescission operating on the day of the institution of the action for rescission, the landlord cannot claim from the surety gales of rent falling due after that date, even when these gales are included in the damages which the tenant has been ordered to pay by reason of the rescission. Burland v. Fuliquette, Q. R. 24 S. C. 94.

Surety not a Third Person as against Creditor — Defences Open — Insolvent Act, 1875—Uncontested Claim—Judgment.]— A surety is not a third person as against the creditor secured, and cannot set up defences which the principal debtor would not be allowed to set up. Under the Insolvent Act of 1875, a claim filed in pursuance of s. 104 and not contested, is thereby proved against all concerned in the bankruptcy, and has the effect of a judgment in favour of the claimant. Such a claim has the effect of a judgment against the surety of the assignee in insolvency, without any further proof, and, besides, is only subject to be prescribed at the expiration of 30 years. The surety of a defaulting assignee sued under s. 98 by a creditor, who has filed a claim against the bankrupt, and who, by the provisions of this section, is entitled to the fruits of such litigation, will not be allowed to set up a plea that the sum secured by him (in this case $5,000) would, if he paid it, be exhausted by the privileged creditors of the bankrupt. PROCURATION.

Death of One of Two Attorneys Named in Power—Security for Costs—Vaste of Motion.]—Where a power of attorney to prosecute an action has been given to a firm of attorneys generally, and one of them dies before the institution thereof, the surviving member of the firm may take such action in his own name as attorney for the plaintiff. 2. Security for costs, as well as a power of attorney, having been asked by the same motion, and such security having been ordered, the costs will follow the fate of the case. Kitts v. Gosselin, Q. R. 25 S. C. 22, 6 Q. P. R. 154.

Foreign Company — Authority of Officers Signing—Authentication.]—A procuration furnished by a foreign company ought to be the true deed of the company, authorized by its board of directors, and ought to shew prima facie that the officer who signs it is authorized to do so; and all signatures thereto ought to be authenticated by an officer competent under art. 1220, C. C. Trusts and Guarantee Co. v. Rélanger, 7 Q. P. R. 301.

Foreign Plaintiff — Advocate — Other Person.] — The procuration which a foreign plaintiff must give, need not necessarily be given to an advocate, and it is sufficient if it is given to some person resident at the place where the action is brought. Spencer v. Strathcon Rubber Co., 5 Q. P. R. 385.

Time for Demanding — Security for Costs.]—If the defendant does not demand from the plaintift, a foreigner, a procuration at the same time as security for costs, he cannot do so after security has been given. National Life Assec. Co. of Canada v. Malone, 7 Q. P. R. 283.

Circuit Court, Quebec—Judge, — The Circuit Court, even when presided over by a Judge of the Superior Court, is subject to prohibition. Robillard v. Blanchet, Q. R. 19 S. C. 383.

Circuit Court, Quebec — Poncers of Superior Court—Action against Liquidator—Winding-up Act—Motion after Judgme.at.]—The Circuit Court has no jurisdiction to entertain an action against the liquidator of a company in liquidation under the Dominion Winding-up Act. 2. The Superior Court, by virtue of the control which art. 50, C. P., gives it over all Courts (except the King's Bench) has jurisdiction to grant a writ of prohibition to a Circuit Court which exceeds its jurisdiction. 3. Prohibition may be distinction of the court of the c

Commissioner under Collection Act-Examination of Debtor — Disqualification by Reason of Interest—Solicitor—Commissioner not a "Court."]—The plaintiff, who had recovered a judgment against the defendant in the Supreme Court, initiated proceedings unthe Supreme Court, initated proceedings under the Collection Act, R. S. N. S. e. 182, for the examination of the defendant before D., a commissioner. The defendant's solicitor appeared before D., and objected to his proceeding with the examination, on the ground that, as solicitor for another creditor of the defendant, he had such an interest in the result of the examination as to disqualify him from acting. Consequently a writ of prohibition was issued from the Su-preme Court to restrain D, from acting, or proceeding with the examination. On appeal from the order allowing the writ:—Held, that D. was disqualified:—Held, nevertheless, that, as a commissioner acting under the provisions of the Collection Act is not a distinct court, the writ was improperly allowed, and, that, for this reason, the appeal must prevail, but without costs. McKay v. Campbell, 36 N. S. Reps. 522.

Court of Commissioners — Territorial Jurisdiction—Declinatory Exception — Judgment—Declinatory Exception — Judgment—Declinatory Exception — Judgment of the Court of Commissioners of a district of the Court of Commissioners of a district other than that in which the writ of prohibition was issued, a declinatory exception filed against the writ of prohibition, accompanied by a desistment from the judgment sought to be quashed, was maintained, and the action dismissed. Judgment in Q. R. 21 S. C. 437 reversed. Gaudet v. Garneau, Q. R. 12 K. B. 145.

Court of Revision - Prohibition after. Sentence-Jurisdiction.]-A municipal court. of revision, after the assessment roll has been completed by the assessor, and checked over by the assessment committee, passed, in consequence of a successful appeal to the court by the promovents, a general resolution reducing the entire assessment by 20 per cent. -Held, with hesitation, that prohibition lay. The Court should not be chary at the present day in exercising the power of prohibition. The proceedings before the court of revision were not terminated, inasmuch as its decision necessitated the amending of the roll, and this duty imposed upon the clerk would be the act of the court by the instrumentality of its clerk. In any case prohibition will lie after sentence, when it appears on the face of the proceedings that the matters are not within the jurisdiction of the tribunal. Hickson v. Wilson, 2 Terr. I., R.

oreign Judgy on—Cause —Ascertainaintiff suing dgment may on the orimbine them a judgment may be enforced in this jurisdiction as importing a legal obligation to pay the sum recovered by means of an action of debt represents a simple contract. A judgment debt represents a simple contract debt only, and one not ascertained by the signature of the contract of the sort more signed by the defendant; and prohibition was granted to restrain proceeding with a plain in a Division Court on a Manitoba judgment for $232.37 recovered on such a note, where the plaintiff abandoned $2.00. In re Medilian v. Fortier, 21 Occ. N. 501, 2 O. L. R. 231.

Division Court-Order for Committal-Previous Order for Payment-Affidavit.] The plaintiff recovered judgment against the defendant in a Division Court action for a debt contracted before 61 V. c. 15 (Q.), and the defendant was at the hearing ordered to pay the amount of the judgment forthwith:— Held, that the Court had jurisdiction under s.-s. 5 of s. 247 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 60, upon examination of the defendant on an after-judgment summons, to make an order for her committal without a previous order for payment based upon such an examination and default thereunder. Where it appears that the judgment debtor has been examined before the Judge, his order for committal must, on a motion for prohibition, be treated as a complete adjudication, as to that which must be made to appear to as to that which must be made to appear to warrant the making of an order under s.s. 5 of s. 247. Semble that if the affidavit of the plaintia required by s. 243 to be filed before the issue of the summons were not filed, it would not be open to the defendant, after appearing in obedience to the summons. atter appearing in obedience to the summons, to raise an objection to the jurisdiction on that ground; and, the defect not appearing on the face of the proceedings, prohibition would not be granted. In re Hawkins v. Batzold, 21 Occ. N. 597, 22 Occ. N. 14, 2 O. L. R., 704.

Division Court—Transfer of Action]—Where an order was made by a Division Court Judge for the transfer of an action to a Division Court in another county, the order being made under the powers conferred by s. 90 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1807 c. 60, whereas, under the circumsers, it should have been made under c. 91, an order was made prohibiting the Division Court to which the transfer had been made from acting under the order of transfer; but such order of prohibition was to be without prejudice to the right to apply for an order under s. 91. In re Frost v, McMillen, 21 Occ. N. 552, 2 O. L. R. 303.

Enforcement of Judgment — Declinatory Exception—Deposit of Desistment.

When a defendant pleads by way of declinatory exception and simply demands the dismissal of the action, he must deposit with his exception the amount claimed if it is a sum of money, or a desistment regularly signed and authenticated if the suit, as in this case, is for a writ of prohibition against a judgment. Garneau v. Gaudet, Q. R. 21

Justice of the Peace—Qualification— De Facto Justice—Grounds for Application— —Taking before Justice.]—The grounds alleged upon application for a writ of prohibition based upon excess of jurisdiction in the inferior Court, must have been raised before that Court. 2. A justice of the peace who exercises his functions in good faith is competent to act de facto, although he has not complied with all the formalities relating to his qualification. Hogle v. Rockwell, Q. R. 20 S. C. 309.

License Commissioners - Deposit -Absence of Preliminary Exception - Juris-diction of Commissioners-Grant of License -Discretion-Matters within Jurisdiction.1-The absence of the deposit required by law, before application for a writ of certiorari or prohibition, should be pleaded by preliminary exception. 2. License commissioners, although not among the inferior courts mentioned in arts, 59, 63, 64, and 65, C. P., have duties of a judicial character which, on proper occasion, subject them to the superintending authority of the Superior Court, and the proper remedy is a writ of prohibition. 3. The only proof required, or admissible, on a writ of prohibition against the license commissioners is such as would go to establish want or excess of jurisdiction. 4. When art. 836, R. S. Q., may be invoked, the license commissioners can no longer grant a license as a matter of discretion, but their judgment is none the less final as to whether majority oppositions, or two previous oppositions, really exist. 5. The refusal of the commissioners to re-open the enquête after both parties had formally declared their respective enquêtes closed, is not sufficient to support a writ of prohibition. G. The refusal of the commissioners to count on the opposition signatures of duly qualified electors, for the reason that the same persons had also signed in support of the application, was a decision on an issue within their jurisdiction, and was, moreover, a proper decision. Judgment in Q. R. 19 S. C. 270 affirmed. Kearney v. Desnoyers, Q. R. 10 K. B. 436,

Statutory Board - Jurisdiction-Summary Application—Declaration in Prohibition—Parliamentary Elections—Voters' Lists.]— A person claiming to be entitled to be registered as an elector in a certain division, and to have had his name on the last revised list to have had his hame on the last revised list of electors for the division, applied for a pro-hibition to restrain the Board of Manhood Suffrage Registrars, as constituted under the Manhood Suffrage Registration Act, 63 & 64 V. c. 25 (M.), from proceeding to prepare the lists of vacces for the certain control of the certain control of the control of the certain control of the certa the lists of voters for that constituency under the provisions of the Act, which they were about to do for the purpose of a bye-election then pending. On the motion coming on for hearing, it was contended that the board had no power to go on with their proceedings because, under s, 70 of the Manitoba Voters List Act, 63 & 64 V. c. 62, the former revised lists were to be used until new lists had been prepared and revised throughout the province, and further, that, even if that was done, the board were not to prepare the whole list, but only lists supplemental to the lists prepared under the Voters' Lists Act. It was contended on behalf of the board that there was no power in the Court to interfere with a board of that kind by prohibition:—Held, (1) that a Judge should not undertake to decide difficult questions of that kind on a summary application such as was made, but that the parties should be left to declare in prohibition, which might still be done under

PUBLIC HEALTH ACT.

Compulsory Vaccination — Statutory Regulations—Exception—Conviction.]—The health district of the city and county of St. John is not within regulation 2 of the regulations made under s. 38 of the Public Health Act, 1898, which provides for compulsory vaccination when "it shall be found by the local board of health of any health district that a case of smallpox exists in case such district be a city or town," and a conviction for refusing to attend at the office of the local board of health of the district of the city and country of St. John and to be vaccinated, contrary to the startute and regulations, is bad. Rex v. Ritchie, Ex p. Juck, 35 N. B. Reps, 581.

Contagious Disease—Detention of Person Exposed to Infection.]—Section 75 of the Health Act provides, that when smallpox, scarlet fever, diphtherin, cholera, or any other contagious or infectious disease dangerous to the public health, is found to exist in a municipality, the health officers shall use all possible care to prevent the spreading of the infection or contagion:—Held that health officers were justified under this section in detaining a person who had been exposed to infection from a person suspected of having smallpox, but who in reality had measles. Mills v. (Vity of Vascouver, 10 B. C. R. 39.

Contagious Disease — Prevention of spread—Local board of health—Converting hotel into hospital — Illegality — Malice—Reasonable and probable cause—Members of board—Corporation—Violation of statute—Conversion of goods—Confinement of person in hospital. Contagious Diseases Hospital—Acquisition of Site—Municipal Corporation—Bulaw—Resolution — Delegation of Powers—Local Board of Health—Public Health Act—Prohibition as to Locality of Hospital—While Benefit—"Inhabited Ducelling"—Consent of Owner—Injunction—Status of Plaintiff—Special Damage, —The council of a city corporation passed a by-law, pursuant to 62 V. c. 32, providing for establishing, creeting, and furnishing a contagious diseases hospital, and for borrowing $72.000 for these purposes. Subsequently the council passed a resolution authorizing the local board of health to purchase a property in the residential part of the city and proceed to erect a contagious diseases hospital thereon, "at an amount not the Queen's Bench Act. (2) Although the board was about to prepare and revise lists of electors under the Act, it could not be assumed that they would decide or attempt to decide what lists the returning officer should use at the coming election, or would detérmine or attempt to determine whether the vote of the applicant should be received or not in the event of his name not being put on the list they were about to prepare; and therefore the applicant could not say that the board intended to take away any of his rights; and there was no necessity for an immediate prohibition. to exceed $31,600 approximately," "providing the same, in the opinion of the city solicitor, can be done without incurring a law suit:"-Held, that the resolution was not illegal; it was not necessary for the corporation to proceed by by-law at this stage; the resolution did not delegate to the local board the authority to acquire property for the municipality, but only the power to negotiate for the purchase, after which the council could pass the necessary by-law for the purpose of acquiring title. 2. It is provided by s. 28 of the Public Health Act that "no land or building to be used for the purposes of this Act shall be nearer than 150 yards to an inhabited dwelling:"—Held, that this limitation applies to land to be acquired for any of the purposes of the Act as found in the Revised Statutes of 1887 and 1897. also, that s, 28 is a provision enacted in the public interest and for the benefit of the public generally, and therefore where there is only one inhabited dwelling within the prescribed radius, the consent of the owner and occupier of that dwelling to the erection of a hospital within such radius is not a legal answer to an action (by one who can shew special damage) to restrain the corporation from erecting such hospital. 4. To maintain the action the plaintiff must himself be within the 150 yard radius or must shew some special pecuniary or proprietary damage or some special legal injury. Reed v. City of Ottawa, 21 Occ. N. 470.

Hospital for Consumptives — Conviction—Statute—Grouping of Sections.]—Section 72 of the Public Health Act, R. S. O. c. 248, which prohibits, under a penalty, the establishment, without the consent of the anusicipality, of "any offensive trade, that is to say, the trade of blood boiling, or bone bolling, or" (setting out a number of similar trades), "or any other noxious or offensive trade, business, or manufacture, or such as may become offensive," etc., does not apply to a house or hospital for consumptive patients, for not only is it excluded under the doctrine of ejusdem generis, but also by virtue of the legislative grouping of the sections of the Act, s. 72 being under the sub-division dealing with nuisances, while infectious diseases and hospitals are dealt with in a distinct sub-division, commencing with s. 81. A conviction, therefore, for carrying on such house or hospital contrary to s. 72, was quashed. Regina v. Playter, 21 Occ. N. 285, 1 O. L. R. 300.

Infectious Disease — Employment of Physician and Nurse—Payment—Liability of Municipality — Powers of Health Officer or Inspector.]—Section 67 of the Public Health Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 138, which enables the health officer to act by removing a person afflicted with any infectious or contagious disease to a separate house or by otherwise isolating him, "and by providing nurses and other assistance and necessities for him at his own cost and charge or the cost and charge of his parents or other person or persons liable for his support if able to pay for the same, otherwise at the cost and charge of the same, otherwise at the cost and charge of the goal of the Act, and by the true interpretation of all these provisions, persons performing services as aurses or furnishing necessities at the request of a health officer for a smallpox patient are entitled to be paid at once by the municipality, without proving that the parents or other persons are unable to pay for the same. Under s. 32 of the Act, an inspector appointed by the government has the same powers as a health officer, and may exercise such powers without having first suspended or superseded the local health officer. Although the Act does not distinctly provide for the employment of a physician, yet a person who is a physician, and is employed to act both as doctor and nurse for a smallpox patient, may recover at least for his services as nurse, and $15 per day was not considered excessive for the services of so skilled a nurse as a physician should be, considering also the special risk he ran :--Quære, whether the employment of a physician is not authorized by the words "providing other assistance and necessities" in s. 67. Cameron v. Town of Dauphin, 24 Occ. N. 99, 14 Man. L. R. 573.

Infectious Disease—Property Desiroyed to Prevent Spread—Compensation—Municipal Corporation.]—The Public Health Act, R. S. N. S. c. 102, s. 32, provides that "all necessary expenses incurred by a local board in suppressing any infectious or contagious disease, shall be a charge against the municipality." In an action to recover the value of personal property destroyed, as adleged, by direction of the board of health, during an epidemic of smallpox, for the purpose of preventing the spread of the disease:—Held, that, in the absence of proof of proper authority for the destruction of the property, neither the board nor the municipality could be held liable. Per Weatherbe, J., that, assuming the property to have been destroyed by order of the board, there was no provision in the Act to render the municipality liable to make compensation for the destruction of infected property dangerous to the public health. Townshend, J., dissented. Petipas v. Municipality of Picton, 36 N. S. Reps. 400.

Infectious Disease — Quarantine — Expenses — Liability of Municipality.] — One whose house is placed in quarantine by virtue of by-laws of the board of health of the province of Quebee, is obliged to pay only the ordinary expenses attending the infectious disease: and the extraordinary expenses imposed by law to prevent the spread of the disease, such as those of caretaking and those of a like nature, are to be paid by the municipality. Corporation of South Whitton v. Giroux, Q. R. 24 S. C. 361.

Local Board of Health—Expropriation of Land for Hospital—Public Park.]—Upon a motion to restrain a municipal corporation from using land acquired by the plaintiffs under the Public Parks Act for a park for the purpose of erecting thereon a contagious disenses hospital:— Held, that the actual or virtual expropriation of the land for the use of a hospital in perpetuity, or during the existence of the substantial building contracted for by the defendants, was not within the powers conferred by the Public Health Act on the local board of health; and that this infirmity was not overcome by the sanction of the Provincial Board of Health, or of an order in council. Ottawa Board of Park Management v. City of Ottawa, 21 Occ. N. 378.

Prosecution—Ratepayer—Disinfection— Public Health Act.]—A prosecution for the infringement of by-laws of the board of health can be brought by any ratepayer, without any authorization. 2. A private disinfection of infected premises by the proprietor is not sufficient reason, under the Public Health Act, for refusing to allow the executive officer to disinfect. Bousquet v. Gagnon, Q. Bondholders-Right to Vote at Annual General Meeting of Company — Interest in Arrear—Scope of Right as to Future Meet-ings — Number of Votes — Value of Bonds Compared with Shares—Construction of Statutes.]-The right of bondholders of a railway company to te exists, under s, 15 of the Act 36 V. c. 73, and it may be exercised at any time when interest is in arrear. could not have been intended that it should be restricted to the one general annual meeting next after the interest fell into arrear, and that it was not to be exercised at another meeting although the arrear continued. The language does not drive one to that conclusion, and, in view of the end manifestly aimed at, that construction should be adopted which will secure to the bondholders a voice in the affairs of the company as long as their interest is in arrear. The language of s. 15, "all holders of bonds shall have and possess the same rights and privileges and qualifications for directors and for voting as are attached to shareholders," was very comprehensive, It implies equality with the shareholders in every respect as regards directors and voting. It did not deal with their rights, privileges, and qualifications as be-tween the bondholders themselves, but as between them and the shareholders. And as against the latter the bondholders are given the same rights, privileges, and qualifications for directors and voting. The only just way of effecting this is by giving to each holder of a bond one vote for each portion equivalent to the amount of one share. Thus each share being for $100, each holder of a bond for $1,000 should be upon an equal footing with the holder of 10 shares. Osler and Maclaren, JJ.A., agreed in the result, except that they were of opinion that the bondholders' right of voting was confined to one vote on each bond. Weddell v. Ritchie, 5 O. W. R. 733, 10 O. L. R. 5.

Holder of Attached Coupons—Conditions—Action—Trustee for Bondholders—Partice,]—A holder of coupons is bound by the conditions appearing upon the bonds to which the coupons were attached as to the amount payable and the manner of recovery thereof; he is therefore in the same position as the holder of the bonds before the coupons were attached, and is, like him, in the present case, subject to the condition in the mortgage which gives the trustee thereunder the sole right to recover payment of principal and interest. So any action for the recovery of principal or interest must be brought in the name of the trustee, and when a statute has been passed to ratify the contract between the company and the trustee, an action, in the name of the holder of such coupons, not-withstanding that they are made payable to bearer, is wrongly framed and will be dismissed. Levis County R. W. Co. v. Fontaine, Q. R. 13 K. B. 523.

Mortgage—Foreclosure—Receivers.] —A railway co.apany issued bonds secured by mortgage of the company's property. In a suit by the mortgage for foreclosure, receivers and managers of the property and business of the company were appointed, with liberty to operate the railway and to maintain the road and property in good and sufficient repair, either by credit or by cash out of the earnings of the road. Repairs being necessary, and the earnings being insufficient, the receivers were empowered to issue receivers' certificates, made a first charge on the company's property, and on the moneys to be realized from the sale of the company's property, and priority to the bondholders. Sage v. Shore Line R. W. Co., 22 Occ. N. 38, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 321.

Recital — Consideration—Bonus—Conditions.]—A railway company had power to receive and take grants and donations of land and other property made to it to aid in the construction and maintenance of the railway, and any municipality was authorized to pay by way of bonus or donation any portion of the preliminary expense of the railway, or to grant to the railway company sums of money or debentures by way of bonus or donation to ald in the construction or equipment of the railway. The railway company, in consideration of a bonus by a municipality, agreed to keep for all time its head office and machine shops in the municipality; agreed to keep for all time its head office and machine shops in the municipality.—Held, that the recital of the agreement in a bond signed by the railway company amounted to a covenant on their part to observe its terms, but that such an agreement was not justified by the statutory provisions and was not enforceable. Judgment in 32 O. R. 90, 20 Occ. N. 379, reversed. Town of Whitby v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 21 Occ. N. 226, 1 O. L. R. 480.

Railway — 46 V. c. 24, ss. 14-16 (D.) — Dominion Railway Act, 1888.]—Bonds contained a covenant to pay half-yearly instalments of interest, evidenced by attached coupons, and payment of principal and interest secured by a mortgage of the undertaking, which also contained a covenant to taking, which also contained a covenant or pay, under seal issued by a railway company incorporated in 1873 by an Ontario statute, whose railway was declared by a Dominion statute in 1884 to be a work for the general advantage of Canada (thereupon becoming subject to the legislation of the Dominion) : Held, in foreclosure proceedings upon mortgage, by the trustees for bondholders, that the interest being a specialty debt, and the mortgaged undertaking consisting in part of realty and in part of personalty not sub-ject to division, the holders of coupons, whether attached to the bonds or detached therefrom, were entitled to rank for all instalments which had fallen due within twenty years, and not merely for those which had years, and not merely for those which had fallen due within six years. Judgment of Boyd, O., 6 O. L. R. 534, 24 Occ. N. 14s, 2 O. W. R. 259, 946, affirmed:—Held, also, that, even if the case were dealt with upon the footing of the mortgage being one of reality only, there was the right to rank, for there were no subsequent in-umbrancers, and there had been shortly before the action a valid acknowledgment by the railway company of liability for all the interest in question. Judgment in 24 Occ. N. 392, 8 O. L. R. 604, 3 O. W. R. 910, 4 O. W. R. 357, affirmed:—Held, also, that the railway could be sold by virtue of the provisions contained in 46 V. c. 24, ss. 14, 15 and 16 (D.), re-enacted by the Dominion Railway Act, 1888 (51 V. c. 29). Central Ontario R. W. Co. v. Trusts and Guarantee Company, [1905] A. C. 570.

Second Issue without Payment of First — Conventional Hypothec — Specific Performance—Judgment.! — Where a valid issue of bonds has been made by a railway company under the provisions of the Quebec Railway Act, which at the time of their issue governed the company defendant,-the validity of the bonds so issued not being affected by the bringing of the company under the legislative control of the Parliament of Canada and the Railway Act of Canada by 57 & 58 V. c, 84,—the company cannot, in view of the provisions of s. 93, s.-s. 4, of the Act above-mentioned, exercise again the bond-issuing power, unless the bonds first issued have been withdrawn and paid, or duly can-celled. 2. The obligation to grant a conventional hypothec constitutes an obligation to do an act (execution of an authentic instrument) which can only be performed by the debtor himself or some person authorized by him, and whereof the Court has no means of compelling specific performance, and the law nowhere authorizes the substitution by the Court of its own judgment for the authentic act executed by the debtor personally, or his authorized agent, which is essential to the creation and existence of a conventional hypothec. 3. The only hypothec which can result from the judgment of a Court is the judicial hypothec, which results from such judgments only as contain a condemnation to pay a specific sum of money. 4. An order to execute a conventional hypothec, unaccompanied by any alternative condemnation.—no alternative condemnation being asked in the event of failure to obey the order—would constitute a judgment not susceptible of execution, in contravention of art. 541, C. C. P. Where the plaintiff asks that a property be declared hypothecated, but does not indicate or sufficiently describe the property, either in the allegations or conclusions of his declaration. the Court cannot take upon itself to ascertain and determine what specific property should be declared hypothecated. Overhead Bridge — Headway Space Brakesman Killea Contributory Negligence. -Upon the proper construction of s. 192 of the Dominion Railway Act, 1888, a railway company, whether the owners or not of a bridge under which their freight cars pass, are prohibited from using higher freight cars than such as admit of an open and clear headway of 7 feet between the top of such cars and the bottom of the lower beams of any cars and the bottom of the lower beams of any bridge which is over the railway. McLauchlin v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 12 O. R. 418, and Gabson v. Midland R. W. Co., 2 O. R. 638. distinguished. Contributory negligence may be a defence even to an action founded on a breach of a statutory duty. A brakesman standing on top of a car passing under a bridge was killed by striking the bridge:-Held, that, as the evidence shewed that he was standing where he was contrary to the rules of the company and warning received, he was guilty of contributory negligence, and the defendants were not liable, although it was also shewn that there was not a clear headway space of 7 feet between the top of the car and the bottom of the lower beams of bridge, as provided for by s. 192 of the Railway Act, 51 V. c. 29 (D.) Bill of Lading-Delay of Trains-Condition as to.]—When a shipper signs conditions inserted in a bill of lading, he is bound by these conditions. In this case the plaintiffs having subscribed to the condition that the defendant company would not be responsible for delay of trains, and the train by which the hours late, thus causing damage to the shipper, the latter could not recover. If the animals are abandoned to the company for what they will bring at a sale, the latter have a right to the return of the bill of lading before paying over the proceeds. Lafontaine v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., Q. R. 26 S. C. 455.

Claim for Non-Delivery - Special Instructions-Acceptance by Consignees-Warehousemen-Negligence-Amendment.] - The plaintiffs for some time prior to and after 1897, had sold iron to a rolling mills company at Sunnyside. The defendants had no station at Sunnyside, the nearest being at Swansea, a mile further west, but the rolling mills company had a siding capable of holding three or four cars. In 1897 the plaintiffs instructed the defendants to deliver all cars addressed to their order at Swansea or Sunnyside to the rolling mills company, and in October, 1899, they had a contract to sell certain quantities of different kinds of iron to the company, and shipped to them various times up to the 2nd January, 1900 five cars, one addressed to the company and the others to themselves, at Sunnyside, which the company refused to receive:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 22 Occ. N. 176, that the rolling mills company were consignees of all the cars, and that they had the right to reject them at Swanesa if not according to contract. Having exercised such right, the defendants were not liable as carriers, the transitus having come to an end at Swansea by refusal of the company to receive the iron. The Court of Appeal, while relieving the defendants from liability as carriers, held them liable as warehousemen, and ordered a reference to ascertain the damages on that head:—Held, reversing the decision, Mills, J., dissenting, that, as the action was not brought against the defendants as warehousemen, and as they could only be liable as such for gross negligence, and the question of negligence had never been raised nor tried, the action would be dismissed in with reservation of the right of the plaintiffs to bring a further action should they see fit. Delivery to Wrong Person—Liability.]
—The plaintiff consigned to the defendants certain goods addressed to the "I. C. Company" simply. He knew that the company had not yet been incorporated; he also knew that the defendants' practice was never to deliver goods consigned "to order" without the production and indorsement of the shipping bill, but that when not consigned "to order" they did sometimes deliver the goods without the production of the shipping bill. The defendants did deliver the goods to a person carrying on business under the name of the I. C. Company, and at the ostensible office of the company:—Held, that the plaintiff was most to blame for such delivery, and that the defendants were not liable by reason of their having delivered the goods without first requiring the production of the shipping bills. There is no law here requiring carriers to take up the shipping bills before the delivery of goods. Conley v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 20 Occ. N. 458, 32 O. R. 258. Affirmed on ground of ratification, 1 O. L.

Liability for Loss-Dog-Common Carriers.]—The defendants are, by the Railway Act, 51 V. c. 29 (D.), common carriers of animals of all kinds; and in this case were held liable for the loss of a dog which was received by them for carriage by their railway and was not delivered to the plaintiff in accordance with the contract made with him. Distinction between the English and Canadian Railway Acts pointed out. McCormack v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. 13, 6 O. L. R. 577, 2 O. W. R. 1053.

Loss-Negligence-Bill of Lading-Condi-Loss—Negligence—Bill of Lading—Condi-tion Exempting from Liability — Weight of Grain—Certificate of Weighmaster—Weights and Measures Act—Indorsement of Bill— Action for Loss.]—When it clearly appears that the loss of goods shipped by railway must have been caused by the negligence or omission of the railway company or their servants, the company are precluded by s.-s. 3 of s, 246 of the Railway Act, 1888, from relying on a condition of the bill of lading exempting them from liability for any deficiency in weight or measurement. McMillan v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 16 S. C. R. 543, followed. The certificate of a weighmaster under s. 9 of the Manitoba Grain Act, 1900, being only of the Manitoba Grain Act, 1900, being only prima facie evidence of the weight of grain in a car, may be rebutted. The indorsement of a bill of lading to a bank for collection, though it passes the property in the goods, does not prevent the shipper from bringing an action in respect of the loss of the goods, if he still has an interest in them. Section 21 of the Weights and Measures Act, R. S. C. c. 104, does not apply to a contract for carrying wheat by the carload, although the number of bushels in the car had been ascertained by bag measurement. Ferris v. Canadian Northern R. W. Co., 15 Man. L. R. 134, 1 W. L. R. 177.

Loss by Fire — Negligence — Just and Reasonable Condition—Notice.] — Although the statute law of Canada prevents a railway company from relieving itself from liability for damage caused by fire arising from any negligence or omission of it or its servants, still such a condition, when the damage arises otherwise than from any negligence or omission of the company or its servants, is valid, and there is no law in Canada requiring that such a condition shall be just and reasonable. The goods arrived on the 21st April; notice of their arrival was given to the owner on the same day, and they were destroyed on the 26th;—Held, on the evidence, that the notice was sufficient, and that the owner had a reasonable time within which to remove them, and not having done so, the defendants were not liable. McMorrin v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 21 Occ. N. 292, 1 O. L. R. 561.

Shipping Bill-Bill of Lading-Condition Requiring Insurance — Breach of—Loss of Goods — Negligence, 1—Under s. 246 of the Dominion Railway Act, a railway company is precluded from setting up a condition indorsed on a bill of lading relieving the company from liability for damage sustained to goods whilst in transit, where damage is occasioned through negligence. Consignors, by their own shipping bill, agreed to insure the goods to be shipped, the railway company being thereby subrogated to consignors' rights in case of loss, and a condition of a bill of lading given by the railway company on the shipment of goods, required the consignors to effect an insurance thereon, which in case of loss or damage, the company were to have the benefit of:—Held, affirming the judgment of Meredith, J., 5 O. L. R. 742, 23 Occ. N. 226, 2 O. W. R. 328, 472, that the contract being one for exemption from total liability. even where, as here, the damage to the goods was occasioned by negligence, the defendants were precluded, under the above section, from setting up the breach of such condition as setting up the breach of such condition as aforesaid as a ground of relief from liability. IV. CONSTRUCTION OF RAILWAY.

Injunction—Interested Party — Public Corporations—Franchises—Lapse of Powers — "Ratileapy" or "Tranway — Agreement as to Local Territory—Invalidity — Public Policy — Work for General Advantage of Canada, —An agreement by a corporation to abstain from exercising franchises granted for the promotion of the convenience of the public is invalid as being contrary to public policy, and cannot be enforced by the Courts. Per Sedgewick and Killam, JJ. A company having power to construct a railway within the limits of a municipality has not such an interest in the municipal highways as would entitle it to an injunction prohibiting another railway company from constructing a tramway upon such highways with the permission of the municipality under the provisions of art, 479 of the Quebec Municipal Code. The municipality has power, under the provisions of the Municipal Code, to authorize the construction of a tramway by an existing corporation, notwithstanding that such corporation has allowed its powers as to the construction of new lines to lapse by non-ner within the time limited in its charter. Per Girouard and Davies, JJ. A railway company which has allowed its powers as to construction to lapse by non-user within the time limited in its charter, and which does not own a railway line within the limits of a municipality where such powers were granted, has no interest sufficient to maintain an injunction prohibiting the construction therein of another railway or tramway. Where a company subject to the Dominion Railway Act, with power to construct railways and tramways, has allowed its power as to the construction of new lines to lapse by non-user within the time limited, it is not competent for it to enter into an agreement with a municipality for the construction of a tramway within the munici pal Ilmits under the provisions of art. 479 of the Quebec Municipal Code. Montreal Park and Island R. W. Co, v. Chateaugusy and Northern R. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. 302, 35 S. C. R. 48.

Receiver—Authority to Construct Portion of Line.]—The Court will not grant to the receiver and manager of a railway, authority to proceed with the construction of a small portion of the incomplete part of the line of the railway, where it is questionable whicher such construction will be of any real benefit to the undertaking, and in the face of the opposition of bondholders whose interest is largely in excess of those desiring it, and in the face of a judgment directing a sale of the road. Ritchie v. Central Onterio K. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. 340, 7 O. L. R. 727, 3 O. W. R. 609.

Time for Construction-Interpretation Statutes—Lapse of Powers—Rival Company Forfeiture—Waiver — Contract — Public Policy.]-Where a time limit for the completion of a work is enacted by a section of a statute, and by an amending Act the term of years prescribed for the completion of the work is extended, by a section which expressly replaces the section of the original Act, the term fixed by the substituted section runs from the coming into force of the original Act, and not of the amending Act. 2. The lapse of a railway company's construction powers does not divest it of interest to prevent similar construction by a rival company. if it had once utilized its own powers of construction and still remained in the use of this constructed work or any part of it. 3. Forfeiture of franchise powers by a railway company, for non-completion within the time prescribed, is a prerogative of the Crown, which may be waived, and so long as it has not been enforced, it cannot be invoked by any individual or other company similarly incorporated. 4. A railway which has been declared by a Dominion statute to be a work for the general advantage of Canada, is subject to s. 89 of the Railway Act of Canada. and if not finished and put in operation within 7 years from the passing of the Act giving it con are nt portio applie 6. V. CROSSINGS.

Absence of Protection — Negligence.]
—Where the railway traffic at the crossing of a highway was very great, and there was no gate, guardian, lamp, or other protection for the public, although the railway company had been notified of the dangerous condition of the crossing, the company was held responsible, under s. 288 of the Railway Act of Canada, for a collision of an engine with a vehicle crossing the track, which caused the death of the plaintiff's son, and which occurred without any fault on his part. Gironard v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., Q. R. 19 S. C. 529.

Approachès — Repair,]—Where a railway severs a farm and the company have constructed a farm crossing, no duty is cast upon them, in the absence of an express agreement, to keep in repair the approaches thereto within the farm. Palmer v. Michigan Central R. W. Uo., 23 Cec. N. 265, 60 J. L. R. 90.

Compensation to Municipality—Terminas "at or near" Point Named.]—Authority to a company to build a railway empowers them to cross every highway between the termini without permission of the municipal authorities being necessary and without liability to compensate the municipalities for the portions of the highways taken for the road. A charter suthorized the construction of a railway from Vaudreuil to a point at or near Ottawa, passing through the counties of Vaudreuil, Prescott, and Russell:—Held, that, if it were necessary, the railway could pass through Carleton county, though it was not named:—Held, also, that in this Act the words "at or near the city of Ottawa" meant "in or near" said city. Judgment of the Court of Appeal, 4 O. L. R. 56, 22 Occ. N. 224, affirming the judgment at the trial, 2 O. L. R. 336, affirmed. Montreal and Ottawa R. W. Co. v. City of Ottawa, Canada Alantic R. W. Co. v. City of Ottawa, 23 Occ. N. 209, 33 S. C. R. 376.

Dangerous Crossing—Failure to Give Warning—Neoligence — Contributory Neglisence,]—A siding of the defendants' line of railway, which was not used by the defendants more than two or three times a week, crossed a narrow arched-in lane or alleyway, held on the evidence to be a highway, very close to the face of the walls. The plaintiff's servant had driven the plaintiff's broad waggon across the siding and through the alleyway to a warehouse close by, there being no engine or cars on the siding. The waggon has with the siding the plaintiff's servant then returned through the alleyway, the servant walking beside the waggon in order to steady the load.

Just as the horse came out of the alleyway it was struck by a passing engine and severely injured. The whistle of the engine had not been sounded, nor the bell rung. The plaintiff's servant did not stop the horse at the mouth of the alleyway or look or listen for trains:-Held, that, assuming but not deciding that the duty to sound the whistle or ring the bell did not apply in the case of engines using a siding, it was nevertheless in-cumbent upon the defendants to give some warning before crossing the lane, especially in view of the very dangerous nature of the crossing, and that not having done so they were guilty of negligence and prima facie liable in damages: Held, also, that in all the circumstances it could not be said that there was not some evidence to support the finding of the Judge at the trial (the case having been tried without a jury) that the plaintiff's servant had not acted unreasonably and was therefore not guilty of contributory negligence. Smith v. Niagara and St. Cathar-ines R. W. Co., 25 Occ. N. 34, 9 O. L. R. 158, 4 O. W. R. 526.

Destruction of, by Train—Negligence of engine-driver — Evidence — Trespass — Fences — Damages. Eggleston v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., Duggan v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., (N.W.T.), 1 W. L. R. 356, 576.

Farm Crossing-Approaches - Repair.] —Held, affirming the judgment of Street, J., 23 Occ. N. 265, 6 O. L. R. 90, that the accident to the plaintiff having arisen on his own property and from his own default in not remedying the defect in the approach, and in not giving notice to the company that any such defect existed, he could not recover. Semble, that a distinction exists between the approach to an overhead bridge on a public highway and the approach on private lands to a farm crossing over the line of rail. While the presumption will be, in the case of the former, that the approach is part of the bridge and to be kept in repair by the railway company, in the case of the latter, in the absence of original compensation as to the crossing, and of express agreement, while it is for the company to maintain the crossing over its limits, it is for the owner to maintain the approach within the limits. Palmer v. Michigan Central R. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. 85, 7 O. L. R. 87, 3 O. W. R. 89.

Farm Crossing—Compensation in Lieu of.)—When the value of a piece of land euclosed by a line of railway is so small as to be dispreocritonate to the cost of a farm crossing; and is of no utility to the farm from which it is so separated, the Court has the power and the discretion to grant to the proprietor a pecuniary compensation in lieu of a crossing. Martin v. Maine Central R. W. Co., Q. R. 19 S. C. 561.

Farm Crossings — Duty to Provide — Statute—Retroactivity.]—Before the Dominion Railway Act of 1888 there was no statutable obligation upon a railway company to provide and maintain a farm crossing where the railway severed a farm, and s. 191 of that Act, providing that every company shall make crossings for persons across whose lands the railway is carried, is not retrospective. Farm Crossings - Duty to Provide -Statutes - Railway Act of Canada - Juris-diction of Provincial Legislatures. |-- An owner whose lands adjoin a railway subject to the Railway Act of Canada, upon one side only, is not entitled to have a crossing over such railway under the provisions of that Act; and the special statutes in respect to the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada do not impose any greater liability in respect to crossings than the Railway Act of Canada. The Provincial Legislatures in Canada have no jurisdiction to make regulations in respect to crossings or the structural condition of the roadbed of a railway subject to the provisions of the Railway Act of Canada. Leave to Make - Railway Committee of Privy Council-Private Bridge-Approaches to-Compensation-Injunction.] - Leave granted by the Railway Committee of the Privy Council to a railway company to cross a public road upon which are the approaches of a bridge belonging to a private person, does not deprive this private person of his recourse for compensation, and, in default of a previous offer of compensation, he may by writ of injunction prevent the company from building their line upon these approaches. Negligence — Contributory Negligence— Excessive Speed.]—Where all the usual signals and warnings were given by the railway company, and the proximate and determining cause of the accident of which the plaintiff complained was the imprudence and recklessness of her deceased husband and his brother. the plaintiff was held not entitled to recover. It was unnecessary to decide whether s. 259 of the Railway Act prohibiting a rate of speed, through a thickly peopled portion of a city, exceeding six miles an hour, applies to highway crossings, because, in the opinion of the Court of Review, the accident would have happened even if the rate of speed had been less than six miles an hour. Tangua, v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., Q. R. 20 S. C. Tanguay

Obligation to Provide — Dominion Railway Act—Midland Railway Company— Ontario Statutes.]-The plaintiff's father 1882 conveyed part of his farm to the Midland Railway Company, who constructed their railway so as to sever the farm, but did not agree to make a farm crossing. In 1900 the father conveyed to the plaintiff all the farm not previously conveyed to the railway company:—Held, that the plaintiff could not compel the defendants who had acquired the Midland Railway in 1893, to provide a farm crossing, either by virtue of the Dominion Railway Act or of Ontario legislation appli-Railway Act of of Ondario legislation appli-cable to the railway before 1893. Review of the statutes affecting the Midland Railway Company. Obligation to Provide Owner of Farm -Date of Acquisition-Jurisdiction of Magis-trate's Court.]-In an action for a farm crossing, it is sufficient if the plaintiff be shewn to be the actual bona fide owner, and snewn to be the actual form a new sweet, and in possession as such, of the land crossed by the railway, although his title is not regis-tered; and the fact that the tand was pur-chased and cleared by him, long subsequent to the building of the railway, is no bar to his right of action. 2. The district magistrate's court has no jurisdiction to order the construction of a farm crossing, even when the cost thereof is alleged to be less than 850. because such order would involve also the future maintenance of the crossing, would create a servitude, and would be interfering with future rights. Bolduc v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., Q. R. 23 S. C. 238.

Omission to Ring Bell or Sound Whistle—Contributory Negligence.]—The word "highway" in s. 256 of the Railway Act, 1888, requiring a bell to be rung or a whistle sounded by a railway locomotive engine on approaching a crossing over a high-way, means a public highway, which is so as of right. Semble, that the question whether there is a public highway at any point is one which a County Court is precluded by s. 59 (d) of the County Courts Act, R. S. M. c., 33, from trying. 2. Where a trail or way over a railway track is used by the public by invitation or license of the railway company, a person crossing the track upon the same is bound to observe reasonable precautions to avoid injury by trains; and where the evidence shews that he has not done so. he cannot recover from the company for such injuries without proving that they were immediately caused by the negligence of the company's servants only. Quære, whether the failure of the person in charge of a locomotive to ring a bell or sound a whistle or observe other precautions on approaching such a crossing constitutes actionable negligence. Cotton v. Wood, 8 C. R. N. S. 58. and Weir v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 16 A. R. 100, followed. Royle v. Canadian Northern R. W. Co., 23 Occ. N. 25, 14 Man. I. R. 275. L. R. 275.

The defendants had obtained from the Railway Committee of the Privy Council an order permitting them to cross the plaintiffs' track Pending an appeal by the plaintiffs from the order to the full Cabinet, the defendants proceeded to lay the crossing, and the plaintiffs applied for an injunction:—Held, that defendants were not exceeding the terms of the order, which was binding on the Court till reversed on appeal to a competent authority. and therefore an injunction could not be granted. Right to Cross Streets - Expropriation Compensation - Extension of Municipality -Toll Road.]-Railway companies incorporated by the Dominion Parliament, which have complied with the Railway Act and obtained the approval of the Railway Committee, have, in the construction of their lines of railway, the right to cross over the highways of a city without taking expropriation proceedings under the Railway Act, or without making any compensation to the city therefor. Where under the powers conferred by 51 V. c. 53. s. 9 (O.), for extending the limits of the city of Ottawa, the city acquired, at an agreed price, part of the road of a toll road company within such extended limits, such part thereupon ceased to have its previous character of a toll road, and became the same as the other public streets of the city. Speed of Trains-Crowded Districts -- Statutory Requirements-Negligence-Injury to Person Crossing Track.]-By s. 250 of the Railway Act, 1888, as amended by 55 & 56 V. c. 27, s. 8, "no locomotive or railway engine shall pass in or through any thickly peopled portion of any city, town, or village, at a speed greater than six miles an hour, unless the track is fenced in the manner prescribed by this Act. Besides the usual railway fences the only feucing required is that provided for by 5b & 56 V. c. 27, s. 6, which is substituted for s. 197 of the Railway Act, 1888, namely: "At every public road crossing at rail level of the railway, the fence on both sides of the crossing and on both sides of the track shall be turned in to the cattle guards, so as to allow of the safe passage of trains." The plaintiff was injured and his wife was killed by a train passing through a thickly peopled portion of the town of Forest, at a speed of at least twenty miles an hour, and on the trial the jury found that such speed was excessive for that place and constituted negligence on the part of the company:—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 5 O. L. R. 313, 23 Occ. N. 138, Girouard, J., dis-senting, that the company, having compiled with the statutory provisions as to fencing, were not liable. McKay v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. 49; S. Streets of Town — Speed of Trains — Guards and Barriers.]—A railway company whose railway crosses the streets of a town, not only must not allow its trains to go faster than the speed allowed by the Railway Act, but besides, in order to escape liability for accidents, must put guards and barriers at the places where the railway crosses the streets. Agreement with Owner-Possession -Compensation - Damages - Arbitration -Action-Municipal Corporation.]-In carrying out the agreement provided for in 63 V. c. 77 (O.), the purchasing agents of a town corporation agreed with the plaintiff for the purchase of and possession by a railway company of the portion of the plaintiff's land required by the company, but without fixing the price. The company, having, pursuant to s. 131 of the Railway Act, 51 V. c. 29 (D.). deposited a plan, profile, and book of referdeposited a pint, prome, and book of reference of the land in the county registry office, which were approved by the Railway Committee of the Privy Council, entered and completed the work. The purchase money not having been agreed upon or paid, the plaintiff brought an action against the town cor-poration and railway company for damages to the land and for interference with his business;—Held, that the defendants the town corporation were not liable, and that the plaintiff's remedy against the railway company was by arbitration proceedings under the Railway Act, and not by action. Per Falconbridge, C.J., at the trial:—Expected increased profits from enlargement of plaintiff's buildings and plant are too speculative and uncertain to form a true measure of damage. Todd v. Town of Meaford, 23 Occ. N. 323, 6 O. L. R. 469, 2 O. W. R. 12, 779.

Appointment of Arbitrator-" Opposite Party"-Notice - Evidence. | - The rallway company having served on both the owner of the land and the mortgagee the notice and certificate prescribed by ss. 146 and 147 of the Railway Act, 51 V. (D.) c. 29, the owner refused the sum offered, and notified the company of the name of her arbitrator, but the mortgagee gave no such notice:-Held, that under s. 159 of the Act, the company were entitled to apply to have a sole arbitrator appointed, as the mortgagee should be treated as an "opposite party" within the meaning of that section. After giving notice to the company of the name of her arbitrator, the owner sold and conveyed the property to another person. The land had been brought under the Real Property Act, and on the certificate of title issued to the purchaser there was indorsed a memorandum of the deposit in the Land Tities office of the Minister's certificate and the plan and book of reference:—Held, that the purchaser must be deemed, under s. 145 of the Act, to have had notice of the expropriation proceedings, and was bound by them. Evidence in support of an application under s. 150 of the Act may be by affidavit. In re Canadian Pacific R., W. Co. and Batter, 20 Occ. N. 317, 13 Man. L. R. 200.

Arbitration and Award—Appeal from Award — Forum — Petition — Modifying Award.]—In an expropriation matter, pursuant to the Railway Act of Canada, a single Judge of the Superior Court has jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the award, in spite of the fact that such appeal is taken not by way of a simple petition, and that even in the absence of special rules of practice to that effect, seeing that such rules of practice are not necessary, to give him jurisdiction. Thus it follows that such rupeal may be taken without an action and by means of a petition. 2. The appeal in such case comes on as a case of original jurisdiction upon all questions of law or of fact and upon the evidence taken before the arbitrators. 3. The Judge cannot modify the award except when it is clear that it is the result of a gross error upon the part of the arbitrators in law or in appreciation of the facts. Neilson v. Quebce Bridge Co., Q. R. 21 S. C. 329.

Award — Appeal — Evidence — Reasons for Award—Value of Lands Taken—Injury to Other Lands.]—1. Written reasons for an award of compensation for land expropriated under the Railway Act of Canada are admissible as evidence upon appeal therefrom. 2. The Court upon the appeal is to review the judgment of the arbitrators as it would that of a subordinate Court. 3. In this case the principle adopted by the arbitrators was approved, but a mistake in the acreage was approved, but a mistake in the acreage was corrected, and also a mistake in the amount settled as the original cost of the land, which increased the amount of the award from $2,856 to $5,681. 4. To estimate the injury to the portion of the claimants' lands not taken, the original price paid by them for the whole property was taken, interest thereon from the time of purchase to the date of the award added, and the value of the portion left after the severance, according to the evidence, deducted from the 5. It makes no difference as to the principle upon which compensation is to be awarded for lands injuriously affected that such lands have or have not been laid out in building lots; and therefore evidence of the condition of the real estate market in the locality is of much importance, In re Brennan and Ottawa Electric R. W. Co., 21 Occ. N 208

Award—Extension of Time for Making.]
—Arbitrators appointed to ascertain the compensation to be paid for lands expropriated under the Railway Act of Canada had, at their first meeting, fixed the 6th July, 1897, as the day for making their award. On the 29th June, 1897, after the claimant had closed his case, they adjourned till the 8th July, without having formally extended the time for making their award. At the time of the adjournment the solicitors for the parties were present and made no objection:—Held, reversing the judgment in Q. R. 14 S. C. 409, that the adjournment itself was a sufficient extension of the time for making the award. In re Wynnes and Montreal Park and Island R. W. Co., Q. R. 9 Q. B. 483.

Award of Compensation — Appeal — Damages—New Evidence—Discretion—Costs —Injurious Affection.]—On an appeal from an award of arbitrators, under the Railway Act of Canada, so far as the appreciation of damages is concerned no new evidence can be adduced, and no objection based upon the admission of illegal evidence, or the exclusion of legal evidence, can be considered, unless the illegalities complained of appear of record. 2. The award cannot be explained or varied by extrinsic evidence of the intention of the party making it. Error of law or fact on the part of the arbitrators, or or fact on the part of the abstrators, or excess of jurisdiction, must appear on the face of the award, or from the evidence or documents of record. 3. The Court will not interfere with the discretion of the arbitrators as to the amount of the award, unless it be as a check upon possible fraud, accidental error, or gross incompetence. 4. The award of costs by the arbitrators does not invalidate the award, where it simply follows the rule established by the Railway Act itself, for in such case the party has no grievance. 5. The award of a block sum is valid, the law not requiring the arbitrators to distinguish between the amount awarded for value of land taken, and that awarded for damages to other lands. Pontiac Pacific Junction R. W. Co. v. Sisters of Charity at Ottawa, Q. R. 20 S. C. 567.

Breach of Contract-Interim Injunction. -Where a petitioner for an injunction shews that his rights under the terms of a contract made by him with the respondents, and under a servitude granted by them over the property acquired, are violated by them, and another railway company under agree ment with them, an interlocutory order of injunction will be granted to restrain the respondents from the performance of any acis in violation of the contract and servitude. 2. Where a railway company, by expropriation proceeding, obtain land for one object and make use of it for another, causing additional damage to the expropriated party, particularly when the railway company have de-clared that they so expropriated for the former object in order to save the greater dam age resulting from the other object, the expropriated party is entitled to an interlocu tory order of injunction, irrespective of his right to recover damages, the object of the law being that all damages must be paid before expropriation. Hampson v. Chateauguay and Northern R. W. Co., 6 Q. P. R.

On the 23rd October, 1900, the county council passed a resolution that "a free right of way and lands necessary for railway purposes from V. B. to M., in the county of A., be granted "to the derendants, "said right of way to be paid for on the completion of said line of railway." In 1902, at the instance of the council of the town of B., an Act was passed, 2 Edw. VII. c. 62 (N.S.), authorising the town to expropriate the necessary lands, and providing for entry thereon upon payment or tender of the compensation awarded by arbitrators. The Nova Scotia Railway Act, R. S. N. S. c. 90, provides (s. 164) that where the charter makes the cost of the right of way a charge upon any municipality, it shall not be necessary for the company to expropriate, and there is no provision authorizing the company to enter before the municipality has expropriated:—Held, that the plantiff was entitled to have the defendants enfolined as trespassers from entering upon his lands in the town of B. until such lands had been expropriated and the compensation paid. VII. FENCES.

Absence of Fence—Liability to Strangers—Owner of Land Adjoining Railway.]—Section 179 of the Railway Act of Canada, 51 V. c. 29, obliging railway companies to erect fences on both sides of their railway, is imperative and in the public interest, and the responsibility which it imposes subsists in regard to an animal belonging to a third person which, being lawfully upon a neighbouring lot, is killed by reason of the absence of such fence, in spite of the fact that the company have omitted to erect such fence upon the request of the owner of the neighbouring land. Quebec Central R. W. Co, v. Pellerin, Q. R. 12 K. B. 152.

Cattle on Track—Running at Large — By-law of Municipality — Crown Lands.] — The Act respecting railways, 53 V. c. 28, s. 2 (D.), enacts that if, in consequence of the omission or neglect of a railway company to erect, complete, and maintain a fence, "any animal gets upon the railway from an adjoining place where under the circumstances it might properly be, then the company shall be liable to the owner of every such animal for all damages in respect of it caused by any of the company's trains or engines." The plaintiff's cattle running at large in a municipality, under one of the by-laws of which they were permitted so to do, got upon Crown lands, and from the Crown lands on to the railway, and were killed on the track by one of the defendants' trains:—Held, Meredith, J., dissenting, that by virtue of the by-law permitting running at large, the cattle were properly on the Crown lands, and hence the defendants were liable under the above enactment. Such a by-law affects all unenclosed lands, and under it cattle may properly depasture and ramble over all open lands, wastes, or commons, even if owned by the Crown, if no objection is taken thereto and no barrier or fences be erected against them. Judgment of Britton, J., 2 O. W. K. 473, varled. Fensom v. Conadiam Pacific R. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. R. 373, 70 L. R. 688, 3 O. W. R. 227, 4 O. W. R. 373.

Culvert—Negligence—Cattle on Track.]—A railway company are under no obligation to erect and maintain a fence on each side of a culvert across a watercourse. Where cattle went through a culvert into a field and thence to the highway and straying on to the railway track were killed, the company were held, not liable to their owner; Taschereau, J., dissenting. Judgment of Court of Appeal,

1 O. L. R. 127, 21 Occ. N. 110, affirming the decision at the trial, 31 O. R. 672, 20 Occ. N. 278, reversed. James v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 22 Occ. N. 2, 31 S. C. R. 420.

Defective Fencing—Cattle—Highway—Negligence.]—The plaintiff was the owner of a nield, bounded on the one side by the main line of the defendants' railway, and on the other side by a switch thereof, and abutting on a highway, which was crossed by both tracks. Owing to a defect in the fence between the switch and the field, the plaintiff's cow escaped from the field on to the switch, which she crossed, and, going over the land of a private owner, which was not fenced off from the switch, and then along a lane, she got on to the highway, and then proceeding along the highway she got to the main line, whence by reason of a defective cattle guard she got on to the track and was killed by a passing train: — Held, that the defendants were liable therefor. James v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 23 Occ. N. 185, 5 O. L. R. 574, 2 O. W. R. 185.

Duty to Maintain—Opening in Fence—Cattle, 1—As the law obliges railway companies to maintain fences on both sides of the track in a good condition, it follows that they are responsible for damage caused to an animal in consequence of their having in one of such fences left an opening of such a size as to permit of an animal getting through, and that even where such opening is at a spot where there is a ditch used for the purpose of draining the lands on each side of the track. Huot v. Quebec R. W., Light, and Power Co., Q. R. 21 S. C. 427.

Injury to Horse.]—The defendants maintained along their line of railway, through a farming country, a barbed wire boundary fence, without any pole, board, or other capping connecting the posts; the plaintiff's horse, picketed in his field adjoining, became frightened from some cause unexplained and ran into the fence and received injuries on account of which it had to be killed:—Held, that the fence was not inherently dangerous, and therefore the company were not liable. The test is whether the fence is dangerous to ordinary stock under ordinary conditions and not whether it is dangerous to a bolting horse. Plath v. Grand Forks and Kettle River Valley R. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. 258, 10 B. C. R. 259.

Negligence—Damages—Remoteness.]—Under s.s., 3 of s. 194 of the Railway Act (53 V. c. 28, s. 2), a railway company is not liable in damages for the death of an animal which, having got on the track through a defective fence, is frightened by a train and then runs into a barbed wire in another part of the fence and is so cut by the burbs that it dies. The damage to the animal cannot be said to be "caused by any of the company's trains or engines," unless the animal is actually struck by the train or engine. Dicta of the Judges in James v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 1 O. L. R. 127, 31 S. C. R. 420, and decision in Winspear v. Accident Insurance Co., 6 Q. B. D. 42, followed. McKellar v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. 152, 14 Man. I. Negligence-Failure to Fence-Contributory Negligence.]—A street ran to the north and to the south from the defendants' tracks in the city of Hamilton, but did not cross them. With the tacit acquiescence of the defendants, however, foot passengers were in the habit of crossing the tracks from one part of the street to the other, and for convenience in doing so part of the fence between the tracks and each part of the street had been removed. A boy of nine, intending to cross from one part of the street to the other, walked through the opening in the fence to one of the tracks. While he was standing and playing upon this track waiting for a train on another track to pass, he was struck by a train running at a speed of about forty miles an hour and was killed :- Held, that there was a clear neglect of a statutory duty by the defendants in permitting the tracks to remain unfenced, and at the same time running at such a high rate of speed; that it was for the jury to say whether, upon all the facts, the deceased had displayed such reasonable care as was to have been expected from one of his tender years, and that their verdict in favour of the child's father could not be interfered with. Conductor - Negligence - Proximate Cause—Imprudence of Person Injured—Dis-play of Wrong Signal—Case for Jury—New Trial.]-A railway train was approaching a station in London, and the conductor jumped off before it reached it, intending to cross a track between his train and the station, contrary to the rule forbidding employees to get off a train in motion. A light engine was at the time coming towards him on the track he wished to cross, which struck and killed The light engine was moving reversely. and shewed a red light at the end nearest the conductor, which would indicate that it was either stationary or going away from him. In an action by the conductor's widow she was nonsuited at the trial, and a new trial was granted by the Court of Appeal, 3 O. W. R. 892:—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, Davies and Killam. JJ., dissenting, that, as the light engine had been allowed to pass a semaphore beyond the station, on the assumption, which was justified, that it would pass before the train came to a stop at the station, and as, if the deceased had not, contrary to rule, left the train while in motion, he could not have come into contact with the engine, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Per Davies and Killam, JJ., dissenting, that the act of the deceased in getting off the train when he did was not the proximate cause of the accident, and the plaintiff was entitled to have the opinion of the jury as to whether or not deceased was misled by the red light. Birkett v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 Occ. N. 1; Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Birkett, 35 S. C. R. 296.

Death—Negligence — Defective Engine—Dangerous Crossing—Undue Speed—"Train of Cars" — Crown Railwoy — Discretion of Minister — Precautionary Measures against Accident.]—The husband of the suppliant was killed by being struck by the tender of an engine while he was on a level crossing over the Intercolonial Railway tracks in the city of Halifax. The evidence shewed that the crossing was a dangerous one, and that no special provision has been made for the protection of the public—Held, that the accident was attributable to the negligence of officers and servants of the Crown employed on the railway, both in using a defective engine and immintaining too high a rate of speed under the circumstances. 2. An engine and tender do not constitute a "train of cars" within the meaning of s. 29 of the Government Railway Act, R. S. C. c. 38. Hollinger v. Candian Pacific R. W. Co., 21 O. R. 795, not followed. 3. Where the Minister of Railways, or the Crown's officer under him whose duty it is to decide as to the matter, comes, in his discretion, to the conclusion not to employ a watchman or to set up gates at any level crossing over the Intercolonal Raliway, it is not for the Court to say that the Minister or the officer was guilty of negligence because the facts show that the crossing in question was a very dangerous one. Harris v. The King, 24 Occ, N. 388.

Negligence-Braking Apparatus - Notice of Defects - Benefit Society - Contract In-demnifying Employer. | - The "sander" and sand-valves of a railway locomotive, which may be used in connection with the brakes in stopping a train, do not constitute part of the "apparatus and arrangements" for applying the brakes to the wheel required by s. 243 of the Railway Act of 1888. Failure to remedy defects in the sand-valves, upon notice thereof given at the repair shops in conformity with the company's rules, is merely the negligence attributable to the company itself; therefore, the company may validly contract with its employees so as to exonerate itself from liability for such negligence, and such a contract is a good answer to an action under art. 1056 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada. The Queen v. Grenier, 30 S. C. R. 42, followed. Girouard, J., dissented on the ground that the negligence found by the jury was negligence of both the company and its employees. Judgment in Q. Negligence—Excessive Speed—Fencing—Railway Act—Evidence—Reasonable Inferences.]—The provisions of 55 & 56 V. c. 27, s. 6, amending s. 197 of the Railway Act, 1888, and requiring, at every public road crossing at road level of the railway, the fences on both sides of the crossing and of the track to be turned into the cattle guards, apply to all public road crossings, and not to those in townships only, as is the case of the fencing prescribed by s. 194 of the Railway Act, 1888. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Mc-Kay, 34 S. C. R. Sl, followed. Three persons were near a public road crossing when a freight train passed, after which they attempted to pass over the track, and were struck by a passenger train coming from the direction opposite to that of the freight train, and killed. The passenger train was running at the rate of 45 miles an hour, and it was snowing slightly at the time. On the trial of actions under Lord Campbell's Act against the railway company, the jury found that the death of the three persons was due to negli-gence "in violating the statute by running at an excessive rate of speed," and that deceased were not guilty of contributory negligence. A verdict for the plaintiff in each case was maintained by the Court of Appeal:—Held, that the defendants were liable; that the deceased had a right to cross the track, and there was no evidence of want of care on their part, and the same could not be presumed; and, though there may not have been precise proof that the negligence of the company was the direct cause of the accident, the jury could reasonably infer it from the facts proved; and their finding was justified. Mc-Arthur v. Dominion Cartridge Co., 11905) A. C. 72, followed. Wakelin v. London and South Western R. W. Co., 12 App. Cas. 41, distinguished:—Held, also, that the fact of deceased starting to cross the track two seconds before being struck by the engine was not proof of want of care, that owing to the snowstorm and the escaping steam and noise of the freight train they might well have failed to see the headlight, or hear the approach of the passenger train if they had looked and listened. Judgment of the Court of Appeal affirmed. Hainer v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 Occ. N. 93; Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Hainer, 36 S. C. R. 180.

Negligence—Failure to Look for Train—Contributory Negligence—Case for Jury.]—
The plaintiff was injured by being struck by the engine of a train of the defendants while crossing their track at a level highway crossing. Had he looked, he could have seen the approach of the train, but he did not look. There was some evidence that the usual statutory signals of the approach of the train were not given. The plaintiff sought to recover damages for his injuries:—Held, not a case which could be withdrawn from the jury. The defence that the plaintiff should have looked out for the train was one of contributory negligence, and must be left to the jury. Morrow v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 21 A. R. 149, and Vailée v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 10, L. R. 224, followed. Sims v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 10, L. R. 330, 5 0. W. R. 604.

Negligenee — Warning of Approach of Train—Failure to Give—Reasonable Excuse for Omission to Look for Train before Crossing—Question for Jury—Nonauit Set Aside—New Trial.] — Planitiff was driving in a southerly direction, at night, along a road called the Luzon road, which crosses defendants line at a right angle. The carriage in which he was driving was struck at the crossing by an express train of defendants from the east. Plaintiff was thrown out and injured, and his carriage was damaged. Evidence shewed that the plaintiff neither saw nor heard the train approaching until he found himself actually crossing the track, immediately before he was struck, when it was too late to avoid it. He said that the night was so dark that he could not even see the fences at the side of the road, and that he mistook his position in consequence, and supposed that he was still some 400 feet away from the railway track when he found himself upon it. If seemed plain, however, that he must have seen the train had he been at all on the alert. There was some evidence that the cover of the carriage in which he was sitting was up, and this would have prevented his seeing the train. Wakelin v. London and South Western R. W. Co., 12 App. Cas. 41, and Vallée v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 1 O. L. R. 224, considered: -Held, that where the railway company fails of a train, and an accident happens, plaining is entitled to have the opinion of the jury upon any reasonable excuse given for omission to look out for the approach of the train, and the Judge cannot himself pass upon the sufficiency of the excuse. The excuses offered by plaintiff in the present case for his omission to see the approach of the train in time to avoid the accident, should not in accordance with the authorities, have been withdrawn from the jury. Passenger-Alighting from Moving Car-Negligence—Contributory Negligence—Findings of Jury—Damages.]—A railway company which has undertaken to carry a passenger to a station on its line must stop its train at that station long enough to give the passenger a reasonable opportunity of getting off. the train stops, and the passenger, after making reasonable efforts to do so, is unable to get off before it starts again, and jumps of and is injured, the company is liable in dan-ages; provided, however, that, when the passenger jumps off, the train is not moving at such a rate of speed as to make the danger of jumping obvious to a person of reasonable intelligence. The fact of a passenger getting off a train while it is in motion is not in itself evidence of negligence. In every case it is a question to be decided by the jury whether the passenger acted as a reasonable man would do under the circumstances. Where a train scheduled to stop at a named station, did not, on arriving there, stop a sufficient length of time to enable the passengers to get off, and a passenger in attempting to do so, after the train had started, stumbled and fell and was injured, and it was found by the jury on the evidence that he acted as a reasonable man would do under the circumstances, the Court refused to interfere with their finding, or to reduce the damages awarded, $1,000. In an action by N's representatives to recover damages from the company for his death, the jury found that the company had undertaken to carry N, as a passenger:—Held, that there was no evidence to support such a finding, and that N, was a "mere liceusee." The relation of common carrier and passenger does not exist when a person travels on the locomotive of a coal train without the permission of some officer who has authority to give such permission, and, if injured, such a person has no right to action unless injured through the dolus as distinguished from the culpa of the carrier. end of the berth from the inside, but, just as she leaned to the inside of the car, there was a violent lurch and jerk which threw her into the middle of the passage way, on her

Damage to Property Adjoining Railway — Negligence — Evidence — Provincial Statutes Respecting Setting out Fire — Intra Vires-Application to Canadian Pacific Railway Company.]-In an action brought by the owner of a lot of woodland adjoining the defendants' line of railway to recover damages alleged to have been caused by a fire negligently started by the defendants' servants, and allowed to extend to the plantiff's land, it appeared in evidence that N., a section foreman of the defendants' railway, set fires to burn up some piles of eleepers and rubbish on the railway line. The weather had been very dry for a long time, and forest fires were burning all over the country. Witnesses on behalf of the plaintiff testified that they saw fire on the railway line at this time, and traced its course through the fence to the plaintiff's land. N, swore that the fires which he started were all burnt out before the fire was seen on the plaintiff's property, and other evidence was given to the same effect. The jury found that the fire spread from the fire set by N., and that N. negligently and unreasonably allowed it to extend. A verdict was entered for the plaintiff for $500:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence to justify the verdict. Per Tuck. C.J., and McLeod, J., that 48 V. c. 11 and 60 V. c. 9 (to prevent the destruction of for ests and other property by fire) are not ultra vires of the local legislature. Per McLeod. J., that the defendants, having brought on their land a dangerous element, not naturally there, did so at their peril, and, if it caused injury, they were liable, though no negligence was proved. The provision of the statutes that a person starting a fire, except for cer-tain purposes specified, between the 1st May and the 1st December is guilty of negligence. applied to the defendants, and they were. therefor, liable under the Acts as well as at common law. Evidence d Trunk R.). L. R. 689.

Negligencerailway comcarry on its e and by the e in damages ence, but by its railway: per execution tatute. Ged-rvoir, 3 App. Cas. 430, 438, and Hammersmith R. W. Co. v. Brand, L. R. 4 H. L. 215, followed. The previous state of the common law imposing previous state of the Common law imposing inability cannot render inoperative the posi-tive enactment of a statute. Neither the Civil Code of Lower Canada, art. 356, nor the Dominion Railway Act, ss. 92, 288, on their true construction, contemplates the liability of a railway company acting within its statutory powers. So held, where the respondent had suffered damage caused by sparks escaping from one of the appellants locomotive engines while employed in the ordinary use engines while employed in the ordinary use of its railway. Judgment in 20 Occ. N. 441, Q. R. 9 Q. B. 551, reversed. Appeal allowed, appellants to pay respondent's costs in accordance with the terms on which special leave to appeal was granted. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., Q. R. 9 Q. B. 551, 20 Occ. Deed — Construction — Fencing—Boundaries — Estoppel — Registry Laws — Riparian Rights — Prescription — Tenant by Sufferance — Damages — Emphyteusis — Alienation — Parties,]—The plaintiffs, a railway company, purchased land from P. bounded by a non-navigable river, as "selected and laid out" for their responsances, Stakes were out" for their permanent way. Stakes were planted to shew the side lines, and the railway fencing was placed here and there above the water line, although the company could not have had the quantity of land conveyed unless they took possession to the edge of the river. P. remained in possession of the strip between the fence and the water's edge and of the bed of the stream ad medium, and, after the registration of the deed to the company, sold the rest of his property, including water rights, to the defendant's grantor, describing the property sold as "including that part of the river which is not included in the right of way," etc. The company never operated their line of railway, but leased it for and their line of railway, but leased it for 999 years to another company, by whom it was operated:—Held, that the description in the deed to the railway company included, ex jure nature, the river ad medium, as an incident of the grant. 2. That the possession by the vendor and his assigns of the strip and the bed of the river ad medium, was not the possession animo domini required for the acquisitive prescription of ten years under art. 2251, C. C., but merely an occupation as tenant by sufferance. 3. That the failure of the yendor to deliver the full quantity of land sold and the company's abstention from troubling him in his possession, could not be construed as conduct placing a different con-struction upon the deed. 4. That the terms of the description in the conveyance to the defendant's grantor, were a limitation equivalent to an express reservation of the part previously conveyed to the company, the defendant having also notice through the registration of the deed to the company. That the acquisitive prescription of thirty years under art. 2242, C. C., could not run in favour of the yendor. 6. That the lease to the company which held and operated the railway amounted to an emphyteutic lease assigning the domaine utile and all the company's right in respect of the railway, re-serving, however, the domaine direct, and consequently the lessor company had the right of action au petitoire, although the lessees would have the right of action for damages, and might be added as plaintiffs if there were any valid claim for damages, Massawippi Valley R. Subsidy - Grant - Construction of Statute-Mines and Minerals - Reservation -Dominion Lands Act.]-Held, that the appealant railway company, being entitled under 53 V. c. 4, (D.), and an order in council made in pursuance thereof, to grants of Dominion lands as a subsidy in aid of the construction of their railway, were entitled to them without any reservation by the Crown of mines and minerals except gold and silver. The Dominion Lands Act, 1886, and the Regulareservation to that effect, do not apply. They relate only to the sale of Dominion lands and to the settlement, use, and occupation thereof. The grants in question were not by way of sale. Judgments in S Ex. C. 83, 33 S. C. R, 673, reversed. Calpary and Edmonton R. W. Co. v. The King, [1904] A. C. 765. XI. LEASE OF RAILWAY.

Passenger Train Service - Contract with Government-Breach by Lessee-Waiver -Damages-Mandatory Injunction.] - By an agreement the plaintiffs were to lease their line of railway to the defendants, upon the condition, inter alia, that the defendants would run a passenger train each way each day between stations A. and B. The lease was not executed, but the defendants went into possession of and operated the line. The plaintiffs alleged in their bill that at the time of the agreement, as was known to the defendants, they were under contract with the Government of New Brunswick to run a passenger train each way each day between A. and B.:—Held, that no case was made out for relief by mandatory injunction, which will only be granted where necessary for the prevention of serious damage, and that the question raised was merely one of pecuniary damages between the plaintiffs and defend-ants, for which the defendants were well able to account to the plaintiffs, and which by the lease the plaintiffs had agreed to accept in event of their liability, if any, to the Gov-ernment, and that it-did not appear that such liability had arisen. Plaintiff, while a passenger on defendants' railway received injuries, the result of a head-on collision between two cars of the defendants ananged by the defendants' servants:—Held, there was prima facie evidence of negligence and plaintiff was entitled to recover. 2. The action was not barred under the limitation clause of the General Railway Act, R. S. O. 1897, c. 207, s. 42 which was incorporated in the defendants' special Act, although the action was brought later than six months after the accident occurred, because the action was bosed on the breach of the common law duty of the defendants, and not on injury sustained by reason of their railway. 3 R. S. O. 1897, c. 2077, s. 42 (1) "may prove that the same was done in pursuance of and by authority of this Act and the special Act," mean only that "may prove that the damage or injury resulted by reason of the railway" as in the earlier part of same section. Injury to Passenger-Evidence for Jury - Negligence - Railway Mail Clerk - Contractor — Principal and Agent — Master and Servant — Independent Contractor — Respondeat Superior - Misfeasance and Nonfeasance.] - The action for damages for injury caused by negligence of a common carrier of passengers is in tort. A duty is imposed by law upon a common carrier of passengers to carry them safely and securely so that no damage or injury shall happen to them by the negligence or default of the carrier. A breach of this duty is one for which an action lies which is founded on the common law and requires not the aid of contract to so prort it. Corporations are liable for negligence whether they derive any ultimate pecuniary benefit or not from the performance of the duty imposed on them. If the passenger be carried in per-formance of a contract, it is immaterial whether he himself negotiated the contract or paid the fare, or whether any fare was paid. or if paid whether it went into the pocket of the defendants. The C. & E. R. Co, were the owners of a line of railway between the city of Calgary and the town of Edmonton, but owned no rolling stock and employed no staff for the operation of the road. entered into an agreement with the C. P. R. Co., the defendants, "for the regulation and interchange of traffic and the working of traffic over the railways of the said companies, and for the division and apportionment of tolls, rates, and charges, and generally in re-lation to the management and working of the railways" of the two companies, whereby the defendant company agreed to operate the rail-way line on behalf of the C. & E. R. Co. "with a staff and organization appointed by the C. P. R. Co. (the defendants), and to provide a service of such efficiency and speed and operate the property of the C. & E. R. Co. as agents for and on account of the C. & R. Co., as may be required or directed by that company or its officer." The contract also provided that the defendant company should not be required to maintain the road "below a point of efficiency necessary to the safe and proper handling of such train service, as may be required for the proper operation of the railway." All the expenses of operating the road were to be paid in the first instance by the defendant company, but were to be charged against the C. & E. R. Co., under a special clause in the agreement for the apportionment of the tolls and receipts. The rolling stock used in operating the road bore the name of the defendant company. The officials employed in operating it wore caps indicating that they were servants of the defendant com-pany. The defendant company sold tickets entitling the holder to travel over the C. & E. line and issued a "time bill" giving the time tables of the western division of the defendant efendant comy sold tickets er the C. & E. iving the time the defendant of the defendant company. The plaintiff was a railway mail clerk in the employ of the government of Canada, whose duty it was to handle and attend to the government mail matter being carried on the C. & E. line between Calgary and Edmonton. This mail matter and the plaintiff were both carried under a contract between the Postmaster-General of Canada and the C. & E. Co., and the C. & E. Co. received from the government of Canada the moneys paid for carrying the mail and the moneys paid for carrying the man-matter, and no part of such money was re-ceived by the defendant company. While being carried on a train on the C. & E. line towards Edmonton, the plaintiff was injured by the derailment of the train, which fell into a ravine, and he brought action for damages against the defendants:—Held, that the plaintiff being lawfully in the mail car with the knowledge and consent of the defendants, and a passenger under the charge and care of the defendants, of which there was evidence to go to the jury, a duty was imposed upon the defendants to carry him safely and securely, so that by their negligence or default no injury should happen to him; that for a breach of this duty an action would lie independently of any contract; and that the question whether or not the defendant company re ceived a reward for carrying the plaintiff did not affect the rights of the parties:—Held, also, against the contention that the defendant company were merely agents for the C. & E. Co., and that the officials and workmen operating the road were the servants, not of the defendants, but of the C. & E. Co., and that the latter company, if any one, were responsible; that there was evidence to shew that the officials and workmen were the servants of the defendant company, and that the defendant company were not merely agents but were independent contractors :- Held, also, against the contention that the defendants were the agents of the C. & E. Co. in operating the road, and were, therefore, liable only for a misfeasance but not for a nonfeasance; that the omission to take proper care in respect to the condition of the bridge, and the track, and the running a train over the track and bridge while in an unsafe con-dition, would be a misfeasance and not a nonfeasance, and that, therefore, even if the defendants were merely agents of the C. & E. Co., they would still be liable. Kenny v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 5 Terr. L. R.

Injury to Passenger—Negligence—Over-crowding Train—Proximate Cause.] — The plaintiff, when travelling by an excursion train belonging to the defendants' system, was constrained, by reason of the over-crowding of the ears, to resort to the platform outside one of the cars, and for better protection sat down on the second step of the outside platform, and while so sitting was thrust out by a swerve of the train, which made the persons strading on the platform press up against him suddenly. This caused him to lose his ballance, and one of his legs protruding was struck by some fixture on the track and he sustained injuries:—Held, that the defendants were liable. Burriss v. Pere Marquette R. W. Co., 25 Occ. N. 13, 9 O. L. R. 259, 4 O. W. R. 510.

Megligence — Invitation to Jump off maining Train.]—If there is a platform at a railway station, the railway company are bound to bring the passenger car of a train stopping there up to the platform to permit passengers to step down on it in alighting. or to provide some other safe means for passengers to alight, and the omission to do so will, if dumage result, render the company liable, and there is no duty imposed by the law upon a passenger to disclose to an officer of the company who offered to assist her to alight at an improper and dangerous place, anything in her condition which rendered special care necessary. Guay v. Canadian Northern R. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. 277, 15 Man. L. R. 275.

Negligence—Assault on Passenger—Duty of Conductor—Damages—Reduction — New Trial.]—The plaintiff, a passenger on a railway train, was assaulted shortly after beginning his trip by an intoxicated fellowpassenger. He complained to the conductor. who promised to get a policeman at the next station, but failed to do so. The assailant having become more quiet, the plaintiff did not anticipate a further attack, but was assaulted a second time, which was also reported to the conductor, who took no action, and a third assault having been made, the plaintiff left the train and completed his journey on the following day. In an action against the rail-way company the plaintiff obtained a verdict for $3,500, which was sustained by the Court of Appeal:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 5 O. L. R. 334, 23 Occ. N. 65, that the defendants were liable; that was the duty of the conductor, on being informed of the first assault, to take precautions to prevent a renewal, and his failure to do so gave the plaintiff a right of action. Pounder v. North Eastern R. W. Co., [1892] 1 Q. B. 385, dissented from. Held, also, that, as the plaintiff did not anticipate the second assault, the conductor could not be assumed to have foreseen it, and the jury having evidently given damages for that as well as the third, the amount recovered should be reduced to $1,000, and a new trial had if this sum 10 $1,000, and were not accepted. Blain v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 5 O. L. R. 334, 2 O. W. R. 76, 24 Occ. N. 49; S. C., sub nom. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Blain, 34 S. C. R. 75.

Negligence.—Defective Bridge — Gratuitous Passenger.].—In the absence of evidence of gross negligence, a carrier is not liable for injuries sustained by a gratultous passenger. Moffatt v, Bateman, L. R. 3 C. P. 115, followed. Harris v. Perry, [1903] 2 K. B. 219, distinguished. Although a railway company may have failed to properly maintain a bridge under their control so as to ensure the safety of persons travelling upon their trains, the mere fact of such omission of duty does not constitute evidence of the gross negligence necessary to maintain an action in damages for the death of a gratuitous passenger. Judgment in 9 B. C. K. 453 affirmed. Nightingale v. Union Colliery Co. of British Columbia, 35 S. C. R. 65.

Negligence - Ejection of Drunken Passenger-ratal Injuries Act-Damages-Remoteness.]—The deceased was a passenger on the defendants' train from Detroit to Buffalo. Between Detroit and Bridgburg he drank heavily, and when near Bridgburg began to annoy passengers, and the conductor compelled him to leave the train at the latter station. This was 700 feet from the northerly end of the international railway bridge over the Niagara civer, and the deceased, who was not given into the charge of the station agent or any other person, being intoxicated, strayed after the train, on which his luggage remained, and fell over the bridge and was drowned. There would have been no difficulty in taking care of the deceased and preventing him interfering with the passengers. Bridgburg was only 5 minutes distant from the city of Black Rock and only 20 minutes from Buffalo :-Held, that the defendants were not liable for damages, as they were not obliged to carry him to Buffalo, nor to place him in charge of any one at Bridgburg. Judgment in 24 Occ. N. 293, 7 O. L. R. 690, 3 O. W. R. 788, reversed. Delahanty v. Michigan Central R. W. Co., 6 O. W. R. 252, 10 O. L. R. 388.

Negligence - Invitation to Jump off Moving Train. | - In February, 1902, the plaintiff and her husband travelled by the defendants' line from Winnipeg to Eustace; when the train stopped at Eustace, the baggage car was at the station platform. rear passenger car, in which the plaintiff travelled, was some distance from the end of the platform. When the train stopped the plaintiff and her companions went to the front platform of the car; her companions jumped down; when they were off, the defendants' conductor in charge of the train, who was standing on the ground, put up his hand to assist the plaintiff to get off; she took his hand and jumped down from the lowest step of the car to the ground; the distance was too great for her to step down. The ground sloped downwards away from the track and was slippery from ice on it. The train began to move either as she jumped or just before or just after. Immediately after jumping down, the plaintiff, who was pregnant, felt great pain; for several days she was confined to her bed; and on the 16th February, 1902, had a miscarriage. The trial Judge found that her sufferings from the time of her journey till the miscarriage on the 16th February, and the miscarriage itself, and her suffering, were the result of her being obliged to jump down as she did in order to leave the train at her journey's end. It was contended for the defendants that they were not compellable to have a platform at so unimportant a station as Eustace :- Held, that, as they had one there, they were bound to bring their passenger cars up to it to permit a passenger to step down on it in alighting. The conductor's act was an invitation to the plaintiff to get off when she did; she was justified in assuming that there was no safer or better way of getting off. There was a platform at which the plaintiff could have descended in safety. Instead of that, she was invited by the defendants' servant to alight at a place which was patently not safe. Judgment for the plaintiff for $200 damages and costs. Guay v. Canadian Northern R. W. Ca., 24 Occ. N. 277.

Return Ticket—Condition of Identification—Neglect to Comply With—Removal troat Train.]—The plaintiff purchased an excursion ticket from Indian Head to Toronto and return, one of the conditions (which he signed) being that he should identify himself to an agent in Toronto before he set out on his return journey and obtain the agent's signature. On production of his ticket at Toronto, he secured his sleeping berth, had his luggagchecked, was admitted to the train, and started on his return journey, but neglected to identify himself, and was put off the train by the conductor after he had refused to pay his fare, although he offered to identify himself to the conductor. In an action for damages:—Held,

XIII. SERVICE OF PROCESS.

Place of Service.] — Held, that in an action against the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, service of process against the company must be effected at the conpany's office in Vancouver appointed pursuant to 44 V. c. 1, s. 9, following a former unreported decision in 1891 of Hansen v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., and refusing to hear subsequest decisions of the Privy Council which counsel alleged in effect overruled such decision. Jordan v. McMillan, 21 Occ. N. 1s2, 8 B. C. R. 27.

Place of Service—Special 1cl—General Rules—Conflict.] — The defendants having pursuant to s. 9 of sched. A. of "An Act respecting the Canadian Pacific Railway," 44 V. c. 1 (D.), appointed their office at Regina as the place where service of process might be made on them in respect of any cause of action arising within the North-West Terrieries, a service of process effected in a station agent of the defendants, pursuant to Rule 14 (3) of the Judicature Ordinance, was add bad, because s. 9 was special legislation, and Rule 14 (3), quond the defendants, was overridden by it. Ditches and Drains-Increase of Servitude-Railway under Dominion Jurisdiction-Blocking Outlet of Drain—Damages—Railway Commission,]—Lands of railways under the jurisdiction of the Parliament of Canada are subject, in the province of Quebec, to art, 501 of the Civil Code; and especially are the lands of the Grand Trunk Railway Company bound to receive the flow of water from the higher adjoining lands. A ditch de ligne between higher lands of two proprietors, necessitated by the ordinary needs of good husbandry, is not an addition to the servitude for the flow of water although this ditch receives the water from the lands of the two proprietors, and brings it to the boundary of the lower land of the railway. If the railway company block this ditch at its entrance upon their lands, they will be liable in damages and will be ordered to remove the obstruction and receive the waters brought by the ditch. Where the company have constructed a ditch on each side of their road without sufficient fall so that the water remains stagnant in them. making the adjoining lands wet and injuring the crops on them, the company will be liable in damages to the adjoining owners and will be ordered to pay them. The Railway Com-mission of Canada alone, and not the Superior Court, has power to order the railway com pany to construct the necessary works to carry away the water it is bound to receive and to give greater fall to its ditches. The first part of s, 196 of the Dominion Railway Act (3 Edw. VII. c. 58) does not apply to railways actually built at the time of the passing of this Act, and the second part only applies to the Railway Commission. Langlois v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., Q. R. 26 S. C. 511. Fire Caused by Sparks from Engine
—Lubility in Absence of Negligence.]—The respondent brought suit for damages caused by a fire originating from sparks escaping from a locomotive engine of the company appellant, while the engine was employed in the ordinary use of its railway. The question of negligence on the part of the company was specially withdrawn from the consideration of the tribunal on the present appeal:—Held, reversing the judgment in Q.
R. 9 Q. B. 551, that a railway company undertaking in the place and by the means adopted, is not responsible in damages for injury not carried by negligence, but by the ordinary and normal use of its railway.

Motion to Restrain Pending Action Grounds for Refusal.] - In proceedings taken to confirm a scheme of arrangement, filed by a railway company under the provisions of s. 285 of the Railway Act, 1903, an application was made on behalf of the railway company for an order to restrain further proceedings in an action against such company begun in the Superior Court for the District of Montreal, by certain creditors, before the filing of the scheme of arrangement, but which had not proceeded to judgment:-Held, that, as there were real and substantial issues to be tried out between the parties in the action pending in the Superior Court, the same ought to be allowed to proceed pending the maturing of the scheme of arrangement. In re Cambrian Railway Company's Scheme, L. R. 3 Ch. 280 n. 1, referred to, In re Atlantic and Lake Superior R. W. Co., 25 Occ. N. 83, 9 Ex. C. A. 283,

Right to Ferry Passengers and Cargo—Netute—Restrictions,—The Dominion statute incorporating the Algoma Central and Hudson Bay Railway Company authorizes them, for the purpose of their undertaking, to acquire and run steam and other vessels for cargo and passengers upon any navigable waters which their railway may connect with:—Held, that under the very large and general words of this clause the railway company were not bound to restrict the passengers and cargo transported by their vessels to persons and goods intended to be carried on their railway line. Perry v. Clergue. 23 Occ. N. 31, 5 O. L. R. 357, 2 O. W. R. 89.

Sale under Execution — Description in Advertisement—Sale on Bioc—Franchises and Privileges of Ratioacy]—The designation, in a notice of sale published by the sheriff, of a railway by its name, by its terminals, and by the numbers of the lots which it traverses, as appears in the registry office, is sufficient, more especially when the execution creditor has obtained an order by virtue of art. 754, C. P. C., that the property advertised may be sold en bloc. The franchises and privileges of a railway company (apart from those which appertain to it as a corporation), and which, are necessary for the operation of the road, are a necessary part of the railway property, and excipible. Bégin v. Levis County R. W. Co., Q. R. 27 S. C. 180.

Seizure under Execution—Description—Reseizure,—A: railway was seized and sold by sheriff's sale to the present opposant. It was described as fifty feet in width, but the renter part of the line was actually sixty-six feet wide. The present plaintiff now caused the line to be seized again, but stated exceptions from the seizure, which exceptions really included the entire road, less the surplus width: — Held, that the seizure was irregular and illegal, the adjudication by the sheriff being of a specific object, fenced at the time of the sale, and known as consisting of the property so enclosed. The error as to the width was immaterial unless it were to give a ground of action by the defendant to have the sale set aside. Moreover, a railway can only be seized as an entirety, which had not been done in the present case. Carter v. Montreal and Sorel R. W. Co., Q. R. 23 S. C. 3.

Scizure under Execution—Opposition to Sale—Question as to Osnership—Depreciation—Appointment of Receiver.1—Article 1823 of the Civil Code, which treats of the appointment of receivers, is not restricted, but simply enumerative, and therefore the Court may exercise its discretion in the matter, Railway companies incorporated by the provincial legislatures are subject to the ordinary law as to the appointment of receivers, and, therefore, it follows that if a seizure of a railway has been made under a judgment, and there are oppositions which prevent the sale of it, the provisions of art. 713, C. P. C., apply. Several oppositions to a sale in this case having been filed, the right of ownership and the right of possession of the railway being brought in question, and the depreciation likely to ensue by its not being operated being shewn by the petition and the affidavition support thereof, all these facts constituted good reasons for the appointment by the Court of a receiver of the railway property. (the Midland Railway Company of Canada) without the consent of the council of the corporation of the said town:" — Held, that this section imposed an obligation upon the Midland Railway Company of Canada for the benefit of the plaintiffs, who were entitled to maintain an action thereon in their own name; and by virtue of 56 V. c. 47 (D.). amalgamating the Midland Company with the defendants, and cl. 3 of the agreement in the schedule to that Act, the plaintiffs could maintain an action against the defendants for damages for any breach of the obliga-tion committed by the Midland Company before the amalgamation or by the defendants since amalgamation; and the paintiffs should be allowed to amend and to have judgment for such damages as they were entitled to:

—Held, also, that "the workshops now existing" meant the buildings used as workshops: and damages could not be assessed on the basis of the prohibition being against the shutting down of or reducing the extent of the work carried on in the workshops.

Undertaking for General Advantage of Canada Junction or Crossing Provincial Railway Connection by Means of Independent Branch - Railway Act - Construction.]-The Canadian Pacific Railway, the Great Northern Railway, the railway owned by the Quebec Railway, Lighting, and Motor Power Company, all three being railways which are undertakings for the general ad-vantage of Canada and under the control of Parliament, and the Quebec and Lake St.

Unsecured Creditor not Assenting to Scheme — Objection to Confirmation of Scheme,—An unsecured creditor who does not assent to a scheme of arrangement filed under s. 285 of the Railway Act, 1903, is not bound thereby.—It is, however, a good objection to such a scheme that it purports in terms to discharge the claim of such a creditor. By a scheme of arrangement between an insolvent railway company and its creditor, it was proposed to cancel certain outstanding bonds and to issue new debentures in lieu thereof against property that was at the time in the possession of the trustees for the bondholders of another railway company. Part of such new debentures were to be issued upon the insolvent company acquiring the control of certain claims, bonds, and liens against the railway; and part upon a good title to the railway being $\frac{\text{Ded}}{245}$ secured and vested in the trustees for the new debenture holders. The other railway company, the trustees for whose bondholders were in possession of the railway, objected to the scheme of arrangement. Their rights therein had not been determined or foreclosed:—Held, that the railway company were entitled to be heard in opposition to the scheme, and that the latter was open to objection in so far as it purported to give authority to issue a part of the new debeniures upon acquiring the control of such claims, bonds, and diens, and without any proceedings to foreclose or acquire the rights of such railway company in the railway. No scheme of arrangement under the Railway Act, 1903, ought to be confirmed, if it appears or is shewn that all creditors of the same class are not to receive equal treatment. REAL PROPERTY ACT.

Application to File Second Caveat While First One in Force. —The plaintiff held a tax deed made by the defendants of a quarter section of land within the territorial limits of the defendants' municipality. The defendants claimed title under a vesting certificate issued by themselves to themselves, in pursuance of a tax sale held subsequent to that through which the plaintiff claimed, and applied for the issue of a certificate of title in their favour. The plaintiff filed a cavent setting up title under his tax deed:—Held, that the plaintiff's application for leave to file a new cavent, in order to set up a recently nequired title, must be refused with costs. Section 140 appeared to be only intended to deal with what may or may not be done after a cavent shall have inpsed or been withdrawn or discharged. The first words of the section, ''after a cavent shall have elapsed or been withdrawn or discharged, it shall not be lawful,' etc., control the whole section. In no case is the same party to be allowed to have in force more than one cavent at one time, and when his first cavent lapses he is not entitled as of right to file another, but may be given leave by a Judge to do so. The power of a Judge to order the filing of a new cavent arises only after the first one has lapsed or been withdrawn or discharged. As the first caveat was still in force there was no power to entertain the application. Alloway v. Rward Municipality of St. Andrews, 24 Occ. N. 248.

REAL PROPERTY ACT, MANITOBA.

Caveator Out of Jurisdiction-Security for Costs.]—In May, 1893, the caveatee executed a mortgage to the caveator, which was registered in the proper land titles office. The caveatee afterwards applied for a certificate of title under the Real Property Act of the land mortgaged and other lands, and the caveator was served with notice of the application. He thereupon filed a caveat and a petition asking that his mortgage might be declared to be a subsisting security on the land mortgaged for the sum secured, interest, and costs. The caveator was resident out of the jurisdiction, and prima facie the caveatee was entitled to security for costs; he took out a præcipe order, and the caveator applied to set it aside :-Held, that it must assumed that the district registrar had good reason for causing the notice of the application to be served on the caveator, and it could not be said that it was the caveatee who had compelled the caveator to come into Court to litigate. The caveator was the actor in the proceedings in Court, and, as he resided out of the jurisdiction, he was subject to the general rule as to security for costs: Apollinaris Co. v. Wilson, 31 Ch. D. 632. In re Lang and Smith, 22 Occ. N. 212.

Petition of Caveator—Obicctions to Tax Salc—Statement of—Amendment,1—The caveator filed a petition under schedule L, Rule I, of the Real Property Act, 1 & 2 Edw. VII. c. 43, to prevent the caveatees, tax sale purchasers, from getting a certificate of title applied for by them; and, after setting out the nature of her title by grant from the Crown, alleged that the caveatees claimed title to the same land under certain alleged sales of same for taxes, and that the said tax sales and all proceedings connected therewith under which the caveatees claimed title were illegal, null, and void, and that the caveatees were not at the time of their application the owners of the land:—Held, without deciding whether it is necessary in such a petition to go further than to set forth fully the title of the caveator, that, as the petitioner had set out the claim of the caveatees and the nature of it, it should also have shewn in what particulars the title of the caveatees was defective or invalid, and what facts were relied on to have the tax sales declared void, and prima facie to displace the adverse claims of the tax purchasers. An order giving leave to the petitioner, within a limited time, and upon payment of the costs, to amend the petition as she might be advised and to bring it on for further hearing before the Referee, and that in default the petition should be dismissed with costs, was affirmed with costs. Transfer — Executions — Prioritica]—While the Territories Real Property Act was in force, a title stood as follows: 5th July, 1887, certificate of ownership to Canadian Pacific Railway Company; 12th July, 1887, transfer, J. S. to L. H. R., filed and emeric in day book; 31st March, 1888, transfer, J. S. to L. H. R., filed and emeric Canadian Pacific Railway Company to J. S. registered, and certificate of ownership 1891, 13th January, 1893, take the J. S., 5th February, 1891, 14th April, 1894, 13th January, 1893, L. H. R. applied to the registrar to Issue her a certificate of ownership upon her transfer of 12th July, 1887. The registrar was ready to do so, but proposed to mark the certificate as being subject to the several above mentioned execution. On a reference by the registrar under s. 11t.—Held, that in view of ss., 34 and 55, the registrar had no right, where the land had been brought under the Act, to receive a transfer for registration executed by a person other than the certificated owner, and that therefore the ling of the transfer, prior to the lodgment of the executions, was ineffective, and that therefore the registrar's view was correct. N. 380, that payment of the money in question in this case was to be made by the Crown to the judgment debtor purely out of bounty, and was not enforceable by any Court, and was not to be made in pursuance of any contract; and therefore the money could not be reached by the judgment creditor by means of a receiving order. Equitable Excention — Judgment for Alimony—"The plaining, The wife of a retired member of the Toronto police force, and entitled to interim alimony under an order therefore made, applied to be appointed receiver of moneys to which the defendant, her husband, would become entitled as a pension, under the rules of the Police Benefit Fund (a friendly society incorporated under R. S. O. 1897 c. 211), on application by him before the Benefit Fund committee, which application, however, he had not yet made:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to succeed, for, whereas arrears of pension cannot be reached either position of the proceedings, uncarned pension cannot be reached either by that procedure or by the appointment of a receiver. Semble, that the plaintiff was a "resdior" within the meaning of s. 12 of R. S. O. C. 211 and on that ground also her application must fail. Slemin v. Slemin, 24 Oc. N. S., 7 O. L. R. of 7, 2 O. W. O. 1897 c. 51, that a receiver may be appointed in all cases in which it shall appear to be just or convenient that such order should be made, was intended merely to expressly confer upon all the Courts that jurisdiction which under the designation of equitable execution, had, before the fusion of law and equity, been before the fusion of law and equity, been led, that a judgment creditor was not entitled that a judgment creditor was not entitled by the Court of Chancery alone:—Reld, that a judgment debtor, to receive all debts due to the judgment debtor, to receive all debts all certain shares of stock in a foreign company said to be owned by the debtor, do receive the interest of the debtor, and to receive the interest of the debtor and the certain policy of insurance on the life of another, assigned to the debtor. And, in order to justify the making of an order for the appointment of a receiver at the instance of a judgment creditor, the circumstances of the case must be such as would have enabled the Court of Chancery to make such an order before the Judicature Act. Where the plaintiffs were judgment creditors of the defendant, and were also the trustees entitled to receive the rents and other property in respect of which they asked that they should be appointed receivers, to which the defendant was beneficially entitled:—Held, that there was no impediment in the way of their receiving such rents and other property, and their motion for an order appointing them receivers was unnecessary. REFEREES AND REFERENCES.

Accounts—Warrant to Proceed—Dismissal of Bill.]—It is not a ground for dismissal of the bill in a suit that the plaintiff fails to take out a warrant to proceed in a reference in the suit to take accounts between the patties. On the failure of the plaintiff to take out the warrant the defendant is entitled to do so. Gallapher v. City of Moneton, 22 Occ. N. 169, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 300.

Quebec Superior Court-Practice as to Appointment of Referee—Powers of—Rights of parties—Liability for costs.]—While a Judge can suo motu, in the cases provided for in art. 410, C. P. C., refer a case to a re-ferce, he should, nevertheless, first afford the parties an opportunity to agree upon a practicien, and he cannot name the person who is to act, in such manner, at all events, as to impose upon both parties, even though neither of them should desire them, the services of the person so named and the obligation of paying for such services, and such judgment cannot be invoked by the person so named as imposing upon the parties to the suit the obligation of proceeding before him, or of paying for services by him performed, without any proceeding being by them or either of them taken before him, merely because it has not been appealed from. Moreover the judgment making such reference and appointment is a judgment rendered in the interest of the parties, and it is for them to avail themselves of it; and, therefore, save in case of acquiescence of the parties, such referee cannot act until served with the judgment and a requisition calling upon him to be sworn, or in some equivalent manner required to act by one of the parties, nor until he has given notice to the parties of his intention to proceed and of the time when and place where he will proceed. The judgment appointing a referre, although it may become chose jugge as to the parties to the action, cannot bind the latter in favour of such referre, and until they have signified an intention to avail themselves of it, such judgment confers no rights on the referre and no obligations on the parties to the action. The taxation of the bill of the referre by the Court, against the will and in spite of the objections of the parties, has only the effect of fixing the amount thereof and does not reacher the parties liable. Germano v. Musson, Q. R. 26 S. C. 325.

Referee's Fees—When Payable.]—A referee having entered upon a reference is not entitled to payment of his fees from day to day as a condition of proceeding with the reference: — Semble, where special circumstances shew a probability that the fees of a referee will not be paid, the Court will require that his fees be secured to him before ordering the reference to be proceeded with Gullagher v. City of Moneton, 21 Oct. X. 485, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 209.

Stay of Reference Pending Appeal-Raino of Master in Ordinary—Appeal from -Forum, —A judgment directed the Master in Ordinary—April 1 and sordered that the parties should execute and deliver all necessary conveyances, to be settled by the Master, and should give possession to each other in accordance therewith; and directed the Master to ascertain the plaintiff's damages for ouster, mesne profits, and waste. The defendants appealed from the judgment to the Court of Appeal, and gave the security provided for by Rule $26:—Held, that the reference was stayed pending the appeal. Construction and application of Rules $27 and $29. The ruling of the Master that the reference was not stayed was a ruling upon a question of practice, and therefore came within the exception in s. 75 (2) of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 51; and an appeal from his ruling lay to a Judge in Court. Monro v. Toronto R. W. Co., 23 Occ. N. 12, 5 O. L. R. 15, 1 O. W. R. 20, 316, 813, 2 O. W. R. 207.

Taxation of Bill—Illness of Referec—Proof of—Change of Referec—Use of Depositions already Taken.] — Where a deputy-registrar before whom a reference had been made to tax a solicitor's bill of costs fell ill after the evidence and argument was all in, but before judgment had been given, and being ill for nearly a year and not able to attend to his duties, an application was made by the client to change the reference to one of the taxing officers at Toronto. The solicitor opposed the change:—Held, the matter should be referred to the deputy clerk of the Crown. Re Solicitor, 6 O. W. R. 422, 10 O. L. R. 333.

Yukon Court-Nullity - Boundaries of Mining Locations, | — In an action in the Yukon Territory in which the question in issue was as to the true boundary between a creek and a hill claim, a reference to ascertain the boundary was ordered on the application of the plaintiff; the referee adopted a line run by a surveyor named Gibbons under instructions from the Gold Commissioner (after the location of the plaintiff's claim) for the purpose of establishing an official boundary between the hill and creek claims, which cut off part of the plaintiff's claim. On motion to the Court the report was confirmed and judgment entered accordingly — Held, on appeal, per Walkem, J., that the Gibbons line was a nullity, and, as the Court below adopted it and based its judgment upon it that judgment must be set aside, 2. The reference was a nullity, as it involved the determination of a mixed question of law and fact, and was not a matter of "practice and procedure," but of jurisdiction; and it was beyond the power of the Court to order was beyond the power of the Court of the reference even by consent. Per Irving, J., the reference even by consent. Per Irving, J., following Williams v. Faulkner, 8 B. C. 197, that the Yukon Court has no power to make an order of reference, and, as the whole proceedings before the referee were founded on a mistaken idea of the jurisdiction to refer, the doctrine of extra cursum curiæ did not apply. Stevenson v. Parks, 10 B. C. R. 387.

Yukon Law—Order of Reference—Jurisdiction of Court to Make.1—The power to make an order of reference in an action is a matter of jurisdiction and not merely a question of "procedure and practice," within the meaning of s. 3 or the Judicature Ordinance, N.

W. T., and therefore the Yukon Court had no power under this section to make an order of reference. Williams v, Faulkner, Raymond v, Faulkner, 22 Occ. N. 40, 8 B. C. R. 197.

Amendment of Registered Plan—Petition to County Court Judge—Jurisdiction of Judge of Another County—Local Courts Act—Evidence on Petition—Affidavits—Writs—Order Refusing to Re-open—Appeal. — A petition under s. 110 of the Registry Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 128, for an order amending a plan of land in a town by closing part of a street allowance, was presented to the Judge of the County Court of Perth, in which county the land lay:—Held, that he Judge of another County Court had jurisdiction, upon the request of the Judge of the County Court of Perth, to hear and adjudicate upon the petition. To hear such a petition is one of the judicial duties to be performed by the Judge of the County Court in any case where application is made to him instead of to a Judge of the High Court; and he has jurisdiction by virtue of ss. 16 and 18 of the Local Courts Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 54. 2. Although the projection, and is therefore interlocutory in form, the order to be made finally and conclusively form.

settles the rights of the parties concerned; and the evidence upon the application, if the facts are in dispute, should, in the absence of agreement, be given viva voce. The Judge properly refused to receive affidavits in answer to the oral testimony of witnesses given in support of the petition. 3. Upon the merits the order of the Judge amending the plan was justified, the portion of the street in question never having been opened or used as a highway, and the lands abutting on both sides being owned by the petitioner. 4. No appeal lay to the Court of Appeal from a subsequent order of the Judge refusing to open the proceedings and receive further evidence. In re McDonald and Town of Listowci, 24 Occ. N. 8, 6 O. L. Certificate of Allowance of Petition ander Partition Act—Lien of Execution Creditor — Expiry of Writ — Notice—
Bona Fide Purchaser for Value — Priorities.]—At the date of the filing by the plaintiff of a petition for partition the defendant company had in the hands of the sheriff a writ of execution against the lands of the defendant L., who was entitled to an undivided interest in the lands sought to be partitioned, and their lien by virtue thereof was still in existence at the date of the allowance of the petition (to which they were made parties) and the registration of a certificate thereof, but their writ, not having been renewed, expired before the date of a conveyance by the defendant L. to the defendant G., a bona fide purchaser for value:—Held, that the company's lien was not preserved by the pro-ceedings taken before the conveyance to G., who was not, therefore, affected with notice of the lien. The company were bound to keep alive the lien which they had at law, at least until there was some act or declaration of the Court recognizing their claim as an existing one against the lands. Macdonell v. Best, 23 Occ. N. 262, 6 O. L. R. 18, 2 O. W. R. 459.

Easement — Artificial Waterway—Parol Permission — User — Subsequent Unregistered Grant — Notice — Prescription.] — In 1871 the defendants' predecessor in title, with the permission (not in writing) of plaintiff's predecessor in title, laid pipes under the land of the latter for the purpose of conveying water from a spring to the lands of the defendants. These pipes continued there and in use up to the time this action was brought in July, 1908. In 1878 the plaintiff's predecessor in title, by an instrument under seal, purported to grant and convey to the defendants' predecessor the right to convey the water in pipes "in such manner and under such circumstances as the same are now:" and at the time of the conveyance to the defendants in 1879 their predecessor purported to grant to the defendants the same The plaintiff, who was a son of his predecessor in title, in 1887 became the owner of the lands through which the pipes were laid, by virtue of a conveyance to him, were laid, by virtue of a conveyance to him, registered before the registration of the instruments of 1878 and 1879. The plaintiff knew of the existence of the pipes under ground, and the use that was being made of them. He believed that they could not have been placed there without his father's permission, but he was not aware of the instru-ments of 1878 and 1879 or their nature:— Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to rely upon his conveyance, the registration of which without notice of the defendants' interest or claim rendered it void as against him; and there had not been a sufficient lapse of time since to give the defendants a right under the statute or by prescription. Harrington v. Spring Creck Unexe Manufacturing Co., 24 Occ. N. 209, 7 O. L. R. 319, 3 O. W. R. 26.

Foreign Company—Owner of Lands—Right to Registration.]—A company duly incorporated in a foreign country, have a right, though not licensed to do business in British Columbia, to be registered as the owners of lands acquired by them. Gift of Land - Prior Sale - Non-regis tration — Notice — Gift Burdened with Debts.]—A universal donee of property charged with the debts of the donor cannot evict the prior purchaser for value of one of the immovables comprised in the gift, in spite of the fact that the sale has not been registered, while the gift has, for the donee has succeeded to the obligation of warranty of his donor. 2, Article 2085, C. C., is not ap-plicable to a donee of an immovable in such a manner that his knowledge of an unregistered right belonging to a third person cannot be set up against him, but it is otherwise when the burdens upon the gift equal the value of the thing given, for in that case the pretended gift is in fact a sale, 3. The mere knowledge of a purchaser for value that the immovable which he has acquired was previously sold by his grantor to a third person. whose title has not been registered, does not constitute a fraud sufficient to effect the validity of the duly registered title of such purchaser; Mathieu, J., diss. Barbe v. Barbe, Q. R. 20 S. C. 119.

Imperfect Registration — Notice—Subsequent Purchaser,]—The defendant took a mortgage from M. J. M. and had it registered in the office of the registrar of deeds at Sydney. M. J. M. subsequently conveyed the same lands by deed to the plaintif, who had no actual notice of the mortgage. The mortgage, although spread on the books of the registrar, was not proved in accordance with the provisions of R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 137, the attempted proof falling short of the statutory requirements. The trial Judecheld the registration to be inoperative, and the defendant appealed:—Held, dismissing the appeal, that the formalities prescribed by the statute are for the benefit of the public and must be compiled with. Unless compiled with, the registrar ought not to record the instrument. Burchell v. Bigelow, 24 Occ. X. 347.

On the 11th July, 1889, the defendant bought from the same vendor lot 15. In 1880 the plaintiff bought from Kilby lot 16, the deed shewing the purchase to be according to the registered plan, but before purchase she inspected the property and saw the fence which Kilby and the defendant considered the boundary between lots 15 and 16 according to the unregistered plan. Lot 16 according to the registered plan overlapped lot 15 according to the unregistered plan:—Held, in an action for possession by the owner of lot 16, that both the plaintiff and defendant must be deemed to be holders of their respective parcels accord-ing to the registered plan and to have regis ing to the register conveyances in conformity with the Land Registry Act. 2. It is not open to a person who accepts and registers a conveyance of land according to a registered plan to afterwards object, in an action respecting the title to the same land, to the validity of that plan. North-West Territories Land Titles Act — Description — Uncertainty — Exceptions.]—A deed in which the land is described as a certain parcel of land "saving and reserving nevertheless thereout and thereform any lots or blocks that may heretofore have been deeded to others," is, unless supplemented by conclusive evidence of the full extent of the exceptions, too uncertain to justify the Registrar in acting on it on an application to bring the land under the Land Titles Act, 1894. In re Lillis, 20 Occ. N. 189, 4 Terr. L. R. 300.

North-West Territories Land Titles Act — Earlier Registration Laws — Duty of Registrar — Estoppel.]—The registrar in issuing certificates of ownership is bound to take notice of instruments registered or filed, previously to the issue of the patent, under the provisions of the Registration of Titles Ordinance, or the Territories Real Property Act. It was the intention of the Territories Real Property Act and the Land Titles Act, 1894, to recognize and continue, as creating vested interests, the proper effect of all instruments registered or filed under previous legislation in that behalf. Where an agreement for the sale of land by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company was registered under the Registration of Titles Ordinance, and subsequent instruments, purporting to be executed by the purchaser under the agreement, and persons claiming under him, were also registered or filed under that Ordinance or the Territories Real Property Act; the Registrar, on an application by the company for a certificate of ownership upon a patent subsequently issued to the company, was directed to issue the certificate of ownership to the company indorsed with memoranda of the agreement and other instruments. Where, on a similar application, a transfer was filed under the Territories Real Property Act, purporting to be executed by the purchaser under an agreement (recived, but not registered or filed) for sale by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and, after the Registrar's reference, a quit claim deed from the transferee to the company was produced, the Registrar was directed to issue a clear certifi-Where, cate of ownership to the company. Where, on a similar application, it appeared that an agreement purporting to be executed by the purchaser under an agreement (recited, but not registered or filed) for sale by the company, was registered, and also other instru-ments purporting to be executed by persons claiming under the purchaser, the Judge, to whom the reference was made, was advised whom the restricted was made, to cause notice to be given, to all persons appearing to be interested, of the time and place when the questions submitted by the Registrar would be investigated. If such parties failed to appear, or having appeared failed to establish the existence of the agreement, the Registrar should be directed to issue a clear certificate of ownership to the company. If the existence of the agreement was properly proved, the proof should be filed with the Registrar, and he should be directed to issue a certificate of ownership to the company, indorsed with memoranda shewing the interests apparently created by the agreement and other instruments. Title by estoppel discussed. In re Canadian Pacific R. W. Co_A 4 Terr. 1, R. 227.

Real Property Act (Man.) — Careat——New Title — Second Cuveat—Trial.]—1. The words "a caveat" in s. 127 of the Real Property Act. R. S. M. 1902 c. 148, in view of s. s. (u) of s. S. of the Interpretation Act. R. S. M. 1902 c. 89, cannot be construed to mean "only one caveat," and if the caveator, after filing his caveat and taking proceedings under it for the trial of an issue, pendings such trial acquires a new title or estate in the land in question, he may file a new caveat thereon without getting a Judge's order for leave to do so. 2. The provisions of s. 140 of the Act only apply to a second caveat "in relation to the same matter," that is, the same estate or interest on which the first caveat was based. Frost v. Driver, 10 Man, L. R. 200, distinguished. 3. When such a second caveat is properly filed, the trial of the issue under the first caveat should be postponed to enable proceedings to be taken upon such new caveat, so that the trial of the issues under both caveats may take place at the same time, and, if convenient, the issues must be consolidated. Alloway v. Rural Municipality of 8t. Andrews, 15 Man. L. R. 188, 1 W. L. R. 407.

Real Property Act (N. W. T.) Mortgage — Omission of Registrar to Enter Memorial of — Subsequent Mortgagee—Payment of Prior Mortgage — Subrogation — Lackes—Assurance Fund — Cests — Dis-tribution.]—On the 26th September, 1880, one G. applied to the plaintiff for a loan of one G, appute to the phantin for a long of $500, and executed a mortgage to him of the lands in question, of which he was the owner. The plaintiff's advocates made search in the Land Titles office on the 14th October, ascertaining that the only incumbrance on the register was a mortgage to one P., registered the plaintiff's mortgage and a discharge of the other, which had been obtained on their undertaking to pay the amount due, and the registrar indorsed memorials accordingly on the certificate of title, on receipt of which certificate the plaintiff's advocates paid the amount due to P., and advanced the balance to G. No other memorial appeared on the certificate at the time of the advance, nor were the plaintiff's advocates aware of any other incumbrances, but there had in any other literature.

fact been filed with the registrar a mortgage from G. to the defendant B. for $2,000, which had been entered in the day book only. which and been entered in the day book only. Subsequently on an application under the Territories Real Property Act, on behalf of the defendant B., by way of a summons to the registrar and the plaintiff to shew cause, it was held that the $2.000 mortgage to B. had been registered within the meaning of the Act at the time of filing, and had priority over the plaintiff's mortgage, and an order was made to amend the memorials on the was made to amend the memorials on the certificate accordingly. Then, default having been made by G. in payment of the mort-gage to the defendant B., the lands were offered for sale, and a foreclosure order ob-tained on the 15th September, 1900, notice tained on the loth September, 1999, bottee of application therefor having been duly served on the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled as against the defendant B, to be subrogated to the rights of P, in respect of the mortgage held by him and paid by the plaintiff, and to a first mortgage upon the lands in question for the amount thereof with interest; so heid against the contention of the defendants that the question of the plainthe detendants that the question of the pain-tiff's priority was res judicata either by the amending order or the foreclosure order. Brown v. McLean, 18 O. R. 533, and Abell v. Morrison, 19 O. R. 669, followed. Lackes discussed. Held, also, that the indersement on the certificate of title of the plaintif's mortgage was equivalent to a certificate that there were no prior incumbrances affecting the land other than those appearing on the the find their than those appears in occurring the and that the plaintiff was entitled to be paid out of the assurance fund the balance of his claim, with interest, under a 108 of the Territories Real Property Act. It is unnecessary for the plaintiff, in order to recover against the assurance fund, to shew that he has been deprived of any land or any interest therein by the mistake or omis sion of the registrar, it being sufficient if loss or damage is shown. Nor is it necessary for the plaintiff to shew that he has been barred from all other remedies before proceeding under s. 10; it is enough that his principal remedy has been barred. Section 108 discussed. And held, in a subsequent judgment as to costs, that the plaintiff and the registrar were both entitled to tax as against the defendant B, the costs of the issue as to the right of subrogation, and the plaintiff against the registrar the other costs of the action. Morris v. Bentley, 2 Terr. L. R. 253.

The legal estates in both properties had throughout been in different mortgagees. The acutoh was to enforce by foreclosure the plaintiff's mortgage upon lot 4, and the defence was in respect of the part covered by the defendant's house:—Held, that the defendant had acquired no title by possession to the strip of land in dispute; and that the provisions of the Registry Act precluded him from setting up title to any part of lot 4 as laid down upon the registered plan. Semble, that, but for the provisions of the Registry Act, the strip might have passed to the defendant by the mortgage to him of for 3 in 1892, which was made pursuant to the Short Forms Act, under the "general words" implied in such mortgages. Renewal of Registration—let of Sale— -tregularities — Hypothec.] — A notice of renewal of the registration of an act of sale, which does not give the date of the original registration, which gives the wrong number of such registration as well as of the register and the volume, and which confuses the names of the vendor and the purchaser, giving that of the vendor for the purchaser and vice versa, is informal and irregular and is not sufficient to preserve the hypothec created by the sale. Giard v. Lachance, Q. R. 21 S. C. 103.

Territories Real Property Act—Unregistered Transfer — Execution — Priority — Cloud on Title — Sheriff — Parties — Costs.]—The Territories Real Property Act has not altered the law that a writ of the execution binds only the beneficial interest of the execution debtor; and therefore a transferee (whose transfer is unregistered) from the certificated owner is entitled to have an execution, filed subsequently to the making of the unregistered transfer, declared to be a cloud upon his title; so likewise is entitled a person who, though he has received no actual transfer, is entitled to one under an enforceable agreement. To such an action the sheriff, against whom an injunction is asked to restrain proceedings upon the execution, is a proper party. Where in such an action the sheriff joined in, and set up, the same defences as the execution creditor, he, as well as the execution creditor, was ordered to pay the costs. Wilkie v. Jellett, 2 Terr. L. R. 447, 3 O. W. R. 510), and directing a new trial as to the plantiff's right as widow and administratrix to recover damages for the death of John Doyle, a workman in the employment of defendants, who was caught in the machinery of the workshop while at work painting, and fendants, who was caught in the machinery of the workshop while at work painting, and died from injuries received. The Court below held that a release given by the plaintiff should not be held binding on her, and the defendants' appeal was mainly against that part of the decision, and as to whether the acpart of the decision, and as to whether the ac-tion was maintainable, the money paid to plaintiff not having been returned:—Held, that the evidence fully sustained the findines of the jury as to the cause of the accident and the defendants negligence. On the cross-appeal, the judgment of the Divisional Court holding that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover any damages on behalf of the mother of the deceased was held right. Held, the conclusion unanimously arrived at by the Judges of the Divisional Court that the release was procured under circumstances that rendered it invalid as a bar to plain-tiff's claim should stand. It was said that the plaintiff, while repudiating the re-lease, had not restored or offered to restore the money paid to or for her as the con-sideration for her executing it. And it was argued that on that account the plaintiff was not in a position to attack the transaction. Hewson v. Macdonald, 32 C. P. 407, relied on. Held, the circumstances were entirely different, and the bringing of an action is in itself a declaration of intention to disaffirm and rescind. Up to that time the plaintiff may keep open the question whether he or she will affirm or disaffirm the transaction, sub-ject of course to being held bound by delay if in the meantime third parties have acquired interests dependent on the transaction, or the position of the defendant has been altered to his prejudice. See Clough v. London and North-Western R. W. Co., L. R. 7 Ex. 25, ... It was, therefore, a question of discovery of the fraud elected not to avoid the transaction; and, unless the other party could shew that either by unequivocal acts or express words there had been an election not to avoid the transaction, the question of its invalidity was open for trial. Neither as a matter of pleading nor of substance was as a matter of pleading nor of substance was she treated as debarred, by reason of not having restored or offered to restore the money, from impeaching the transaction. And there has been no finding that she elected not to disaffirm it. The release having been declared invalid, for satisfactory reasons, she ought not now to be deprived of the benefit of that finding merely because before action she had not returned or offered to return the she had not returned or offered to return the money. But it has not been found that an actual premeditated fraud was practised on the plaintiff, in which case there would be no obligation to restore money paid in pursuance of it. Held, the plaintiff, having been re-lieved by the Divisional Court as respects the release, should have been required to return or otherwise make good the money paid to or on her account. If the judgment in her favour had remained, it would have been proper to reduce it by the amount so paid. But, as the judgment for damages no longer stands, she should now be allowed to bring the amount into Court ready to be paid to the defendants in the event of her failing to obtain a verdict for damages on the trial directed by the Divisional Court. Any amendments to the pleadings necessary to set forth the plaintiff's willingness to make good the money paid by the defendants should be made. Subject to these directions, the appeal was dismissed with costs. The crossappeal also dismissed with costs. Doyle v. Diamond Flint Glass Co., 6 O. W. R. 207, 10 O. L. R. 567.

REPLEVIN.

Affidavit — Bond — Misnomer — Suretication — Summons. |—An application to set aside a writ of replevin on the following grounds: (a) the affidavit upon which the writ issued was sworn before the issue of the writ of summons in the action; (b) the replevin bond was executed before the issue of the writ of summons; (c) there was a misnomer of the defendant in the affidavit, writ, and other proceedings; and (d) there was but one surety in the replevin bond; was dismissed. Such an application was properly made by summons under R. 458 of the Judicature Ordinance (C. O. 1808 c. 21). An affidavit of justification on a replevin bond is not necessary. Marcy v. Plerce (No. 1), 4 Terr. L. R. 185;

Affidavit for — Insufficiency of — Exception to the Form.]—The insufficiency or irregularity of an affidavit preliminary to the issue of a writ of saisie-revendication, does not constitute such an irregularity as will enable the service upon the defendant to be set aside, and be the basis of an exception to the form. Albert v. Gravel, 7 Q. P. R. 12.

Christian Name of Defendant—Initials — Bond — Number of Suretica.] — A writ of replevin, in which the defendant is described by the initial letter only of his christian name, is bad, and will be set aside upon application to a Judge in Chambers. The writ will be likewise set aside where the replevin bond has been executed by one surety only. Semble, that a replevin bond that does not follow the form prescribed by the statute is bad. Hubbard v. Young, 34 N. B. Reps. 641.

Delivery of Goods to Husband of Plaintiff — Third Party — Garantie.]—In an action brought by a married woman, separate as to property, for revendication of morbles, the defendant may, by way of dilatory exception, demand that the husband of the plaintiff be brought in en garantie, he having, as alleged, received such movables before the institution of the action. Hotte v. Rochon, 6 G. P. R. 361.

Distress for Rent under an Illegal Lease - In pari delicto, &c.] - Replevin will lie to recover goods distrained for rent in arrear under an illegal lease. The maxim, In pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis, is applicable only when the possession results from the act of the parties, and not when it results from some incident attached to a legal instrument: per Tuck, C.J., Barker and Mc-Leod, JJ. (Hanington and VanWart, JJ., dissenting). Per Hanington, J.: An illegal contract is valid as between the parties thereto for all purposes that can be accomplished without the aid of the Court; therefore that person must fail who is first compelled to set a Court in motion in order to obtain such aid. Per Van Wart, J.: The Court ought not to assist any of the parties to an illegal transaction; therefore, in the above case, the parties should be restored to the position in which the writ of replevin found them; that is, an order should be made to restore the goods replevied to him out of whose possession they were taken by the process of the Court. Gallagher v. McQueen, 35 N. B. Reps. 198.

Land Secip — Dominion Lands Act —
Lasginment — Contract — Higgality,] —
Under an order of the Governor in council, prohibiting the Commissioner from recognizing or accepting assignments of land scrips and frea delivering them to assignees, made pursuant to s.-s. (1) of s. 90 of the Dominion Lands Act, R. S. C. c. 53, as re-enacted by 62 & 63 v. c. 16, s. 4, the defendant became entitled to scrip for land to be located by her. She sold the right to the scrip to the plaintiff, and gave him an order on the Commissioner for it. After delivery by the latter to the plaintiff, the defendant, knowing that the scrip was in the plaintiff's possession, deliberately assigned it to him for valuable consideration. She afterwards took the scrip from the plaintiff and refused to return it:—Held, that the contract of sale of the scrip was valid, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession of it in an action of replevin. Wright v. Battley, 15 Man. L. R. 322, 1 W. L. R. 563.

Order for Sale of Goods Replevied—Rules 1097, 1098.].—Plaintiff had paid into Court $2.000 to obtain an order of replevin of some horses. He was further paying $5 per day for their keep. No trial could be had for considerable time. He therefore applied for order for sale of the horses under Rules 1097 and 1098:—Held, there is no power under those rules or otherwise to grant such an order. Innex v. Hutcheon, 5 O. W. R. 357, 9 O. Pleading — Procedure — Evidence — Judenem Secundum Allegata et Probata — Ultra Petita — Surprise.] — In an action for revendication of books, documents, and records retained by a fire insurance agent after his dismissal, and for damages in default of delivery thereof, several policy copy books, which could not be found at the time of the seizure, were delivered up in a mutilated condition by the defendant during the pendency of the action, the defendant being unaware of such mutilation. Some time afterwards the answers to the defendant's pleas were filed and contained no reference to the mutilated and incomplete condition in which these books were returned. At the trial the plaintiffs were allowed to give evidence as to the cost of replacing these books in proper condition, although the defendant objected to the adduction of such proof, and the trial Judge assessed damages in this respect at $200 and $2,000, in respect of certain mutilated plans, at the same time declaring the revendication valid, etc. On appeal by the plaintiffs from the judgment of the Court of King's Bench, reversing the judgment at the trial in regard to the pecuniary condemnation:—Held, affirming the judgment at the trial in regard to the judgment at the trial in regard to the judgment appealed from, that, as the situation of the court of the court of King's Bench, reversing the judgment at the trial in regard to the judgment of the Court of King's Bench, reversing the judgment at the trial in regard to the judgment at the trial in regard to the judgment at the trial in regard to the judgment at the trial mean of $200 for damages in respect thereof, as the matter was not pleaded. With resurd to the liten of $2,000 damages, however, as the defendant could not have been taken by surprise, he himself having mutilated the plans, the Supreme Court of Canada reversed the judgment appealed from and restored the judgment at the trial as to that item of the damages assessed. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Kavanagh, 25 Occ. N. 98, 36 S. C. R. 7.

Saisie-revendication — Affidavit—Irregularities—Procedure.]—It is not by an exception to the form, but by a petition in contestation, that the defendant to a saisierevendication must make complaint of irreguiarities in the affidavit upon whi b the saisierevendication was issued. Albert v. Gravel, Q. R. 22 S. C. 478.

Saisie-revendication—Title—Res Judicata—Petition—Winding-up Act.]—Where a person has petitioned in proceedings under the Winding-up Act to be put in possession of certain articles of which he alleges that he is owner, and judgment has been given granting the prayer of his petition as to certain of such articles, without adjudicating as to the others, he may subsequently replevy the other articles, although they have been sold by the liquidator to a third person; and such third person cannot plead that the judgment upon the petition is res judicata against the claimant. 2. A saisie-revendication may be taken against the party in possession of thing, even if he detains it by virtue of an uncertain, temporary, and conditional title. United Shoe Machinery Co, of Canada v, Filibotte, 5 Q. P. R. 333.

Scizure—Absence of Inventory.]—The seizure of a lot of merchandise certain and ascertained and identified by the person seizurg, is regular, and he whose goods are seized cannot complain of the want of a detailed inventory either in the affidavit for salisie-revendication, or in the process-verbal of the bailiff. Action for Penalty—Previous Action—Distinct Contraventions of Same By-lav—Ultra Vires—Judgment Ultra Petita.]—The plaintiffs had sued the defendant for a penalty of $20 for having sold goods in November, 1900, without having taken out a lieense, contrary to a by-law of the municipality. This action was dismissed upon the ground that the by-law in question was ultra vires. Afterwards, the defendant having in the month of April following sold goods by retail in the municipality, the plaintiffs sued him again claiming a like penalty of $20, under the same by-law;—Held, that the new action of the plaintiffs should be dismissed upon the plae of res jusicata in spite of the fact that distinct contraventions of the by-law were in question in the two suits, 2. That-the fact that the first judgment had gone beyond the pleadings in declaring the by-law void without any pleading to that effect, could not deprive this first judgment, which had not been attacked by petition of the authority of res judicata. Breach of Contract—Identity of Partice and Causes of Action—Dispositif and Motifs of Judgment—Novation.]—To an action for breach of contract, in which damages were claimed for the entire unexpired term of the contract, the defendant pleaded that he had made a judicial abandonment, and the Court of Appeal, affirming the decision of the Court of Review, dismissed the action. In a second action, by the same plaintiff against the same defendant, for damages for the same breach of contract, for a portion of the period covered by the first action;—Held, that there was chose jugée, 2. In a question of chose jugée, the dispositif only of the first judgment can be taken into account. The motifs of the judgment can be considered only for the purpose of explaining obscurity or ambiguity in the dispositif. And, even if the motifs could be looked at in the present case, the plaintiff would have no action, because the Courts, in the first action, held that there had been novation of the debt, and it was not alleged or proved that a second novation had taken place. Amount Payable by Half-Sister of Testator.]—The words "sister of the deceased" in s.-s. 4 of s. 2 of the Succession Duty Act Amendment Act of 1899, include a half-sister. In re Oliver, 21 Occ. N. 364, 455, 8 B. C. R. 91.

Bank Shayes — Mobilia Sequinatur Personam, —The appellant, as collector of provincial recenue, sued the respondent as executor of the last will of Allan Gilmour, claiming that, although the deceased had died domiciled in the Province of Ontario, the Province of Quebec was entitled to succession duties upon 626 shares of the stock of the Merchants Bank of Canada and 4.275 of the Canadian Bank of Cameree, which were registered at the offices of the respective banks in Montreal,—and also upon a certain loan made to a person domiciled in Quebec — Held, that the succession devolved in Ontario and thus movable property, although locally situated in Quebec at the time of the death of the testator, was constructively situated in Ontario according to the rule "mobilia sequentry personam," and therefore the Province of Quebec was not entitled to any succession duties thereon. Lambe v. Manuel. 21 Occ. N. 230, Q. R. 18 S. C. 184.

Customs Act-Infraction-Smuggling-Preventive Officer-Salary-Share of Con-demnation Money.]-The suppliant had been empowered to act as a preventive officer of customs by the chief inspector of the department of customs. The appointment was oral, but a shorthand writer's note of what took place between the chief inspector and the suppliant at the time of the latter's appointment shewed the following stipulation to have been made and agreed to as regards the sup-pliant's remuneration: "Your remuneration will be the usual share allotted to seizing officers; and, if you have informers, an award to your informers, and you must depend wholly upon these seizures." Certain regulations in torce at the time provided that in case of condemnation and sale of goods or chattels seized for smuggling, certain allow-ances or shares of the net proceeds of the sale should be awarded to the seizing officers and informers respectively:—Held, that where the Minister of Customs had not awarded any allowance or share to the suppliant in the matter of a certain seizure and sale for smuggling, the Court could not interfere with the Minister's discretion. Bouchard v. The King, 24 Occ. N. 390, 9 Ex. C. R. 216.

Customs Act-Smuggling - Penalties-Averments in Information—Demurrer—Jurisdiction.]-In an information for smuggling, laid under the provisions of s. 192 of the Customs Act, it is a sufficient averment to allege that the defendants in order to defraud the revenue of Canada did evade the payment of the duties upon dutiable goods imported by them into Canada; and did fraudulently import such goods into Canada with-out due entry inwards of such goods at the custom house. It is not necessary to charge the defendants with all the offences mentioned in such section; and the information is good in law if it sets out any one of the offences in law if it sets out any one of the offences mentioned in the said section. 2. In such an information, where it is sought to recover, in addition to the value of the goods smuggled, a sum equal to the value of the goods were "not found." The offender is only liable to forfeit twice the value of the goods when such goods are not found, but their value has been ascertained. 3. The penalty "not exceedings $200 and not less then $500" mentioned in $102 of the Customs Act. as recoverable. 192 of the Customs Act, as recoverable before "two justices of the peace or any other magistrate having the powers of two justices of the peace," cannot be sued for in the of the peace, cannot be sued for if the Exchequer Court of Canada. Barraclough v. Brown, [1897] A. C. 615, referred to. 4. While a claim for penalties in respect of goods smuggled more than three years before goods shuggied more than three years before the filing of the information would be pre-scribed under s. 240 of the Customs Act, where the goods have been seized by a customs officer, such seizure is to be deemed a commencement of the proceeding within the meaning of s. 236, Rew v. Lovejoy, 25 Occ. N. 141, 7 Ex. C. R. 377.

Customs Duties—Importation of Steel Rails—Return of Duties Paid Under Protest — Interest—Quebec Law.]—The suppliants had imported, at different times during the years 1892 and 1893, large quantities of steel rails into the port of Montreal, to be used by them as contractors for the construction of them as contractors for the construction of the Montreal Street Railway. The customs authorities contended that the rails were subject to duty, and refused to allow them to be taken out of bond until duties, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $53,213.54. were paid. The suppliants paid the same under protest. After the decision by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Toronto R. W. Co. v. The Queen, [1896] A. C. 551, and some time in the year 1897, the customs authorities returned the amount of the duties to the suppliants. The suppliants claimed interest on the money during the time it was in the hands of the Crown, and they filed their petition of right therefor :- Held, that, as the duties were paid at the port of Montreal, the case had to be determined by the law of the Province of Quebec. 2. That on the question at 'ssue the law of the Province of Quebec was the same as the laws of the other provinces of the Dominion. 3. That, as the moneys wrongfully collected for duties were repaid to the suppliants before the action was brought, there was no debt on which to allow interest from the commencement of the suit. If at the time of the commencement of the action the Crown was not liable for the interest claimed it could not be made liable by the institution of commencement of action. Laine v. The Oueen, 5 Ex. Jur. 222, approved. Per Strong, C.J. (dubitante). The error of law mentioned in arts, 1047 and 1049, C. C., is the error of the party paying and not that of the barty receiving. Deposits in Banks—Foreigner.]—Payment of duty under the Succession Duty Act is based upon administration, and duty is payable upon any property which can properly be administered only in Ontario. Payment of non-negotiable deposit receipts, payable after notice at branches in Ontario of Canadian banks, held by a foreigner at the time of his death in the foreign country, cannot be enforced except by his personal representative in Ontario, and succession duty is payable there in respect of the amount covered by them. Judgment in 31 O. R. 340, 20 Occ. N. 70, affirmed. Attorney-General for Ontario, v. Newman, 21 Occ. N. 225, 1 O. L. R. 511.

Double Duty-Power of Appointment-Statutes.]—The testator died in England on Statutes. 1—The testator dies in Engand on the 25th February, 1901, possessed of and entitled to lands in Ontario. He left a will and four codicils, by which his sister was named as sole executrix and trustee, and was bequeathed the income of his whole estate for life and given a general power of appointment by will in respect of the whole estate, sister died on the 2nd March, 1901, without having proved the will and codicils and without having taken upon herself any of the burdens thereof. By her will, made in 1873. she gave all her estate to the defendant, who obtained from the High Court of Justice in England letters of administration to the estates of the testator and his sister with the wills annexed. He then applied to a Surrogate Court in Ontario for ancillary letters of administration to both estates and for legal authority to deal with the lands in Ontario:
-Held, hat, having regard to the provisions of clause (g) of s. 4 of the Succession Duty Act R. S. O. 1897 c, 24 (inserted by s. 19 of 62 V. c. 9), the lands in Ontario we subject to two duties, as having devolved under two wills:-Held, also, that the provisions of s-s, 2 of s, 6 of 1 Edw. VII. c. 8 were not declaratory of the previous law nor retroactive, and, having become law since the two deaths, did not apply to this case. Attorney-General v. Theobald, 24 Q. B. Inland Revenue Act-Amending Act-Possession of Still-Conviction-"At any Place."]-The defendant was convicted before the stipendiary magistrate in and for the city of Halifax, for that he did, in the said city of Halifax, on the 11th February. 1892, without having a license under the island Revenue Act then in force, unlawfully have in his possession, in the city of Halifax, aforesaid, a still, suitable for the manufacture of spirits, without having given notice thereof as required by the Act, the said still not being registered under s. 125. The prosecution and conviction were under the Inland Revenue Act, R. S. C. c, 34, s. 159 (e). as amended by the Acts of 1898 c. 27. The Act as it originally stood read, "Everyone who, without having a license under this Act, then in force, has in his possession any such still, &c., in any place or premises owned by him, or under his control, without naving given notice thereof, &c., is guilty, &c." As amended it read ". . . his possession, at any place, any such still, &c.:-Held, sustaining the conviction, that the amendment gave the Act a much wider operation, and did not confine it to cases where the place was owned or controlled by the accused; and was intended to cover all cases of actual or constructive possession, no matter where the still was, the words "at Inland Revenue Act—Officer Acting Under—Scarch — Private Residence—Writ of Assistance—Inquiries—Privitege.]—An officer of Inland Revenue, acting in good faith in the execution of his duty, and under competent authority, is not responsible in damages for entering a private house and making a search therein. A writ of assistance, signed by a Judge of the Exchesquer Court of Canada, as provided by the Inland Revenue Act, It, S. C. c. 34, s. 74, constitutes legal and sufficient authority for a search in a private residence. Inquiries of, or consultations with, official or other persons in the neighbourhood by a revenue officer, with a view to obtaining information, are privileged. The words "any building or other place," in the Inland Revenue Act, s. 75, include a private residence. Duquenne v. Brabant, Q. R. 25 S. C. 451.

Inland Revenue Act - Possession of Still-Conviction—Jurisdiction of Stipend-iory Magistrate—Penalty — Commitment— Misdemeanour — Constitutional Law.]—The defendant was convicted for a like offence, committed at the same time, as that referred to in Rex v. Brennan, 35 N. S. Reps, 106. In addition to the grounds relied on in the Brennan case, in support of the application to set aside the conviction, and for the prisoner's discnarge, the further objection was taken that the jurisdiction of the magistrate, by s. 113, was limited to cases where the penalty or forfeiture was not in excess of $500, whereas, reading ss. 124, 159, and 160 together, the penalty, in this case, would be in excess of that amount. Also, that, under the commitment, the prisoner was required to be detained until he paid a larger amount than he was adjudged to pay. It being admitted that there was a good conviction:— Held, that ss. 886, 896, of the Criminal Code applied, and that the objections taken afforded no ground for the prisoner's discharge:--Held also, that calling the offence a misdemeanour would not affect the jurisdiction of the stipendiary magistrate, which was clearly given under the Inland Revenue Act, R. S. C. c. 34, s. 113:—Held, also, following Attorney-General v. Flint, 16 S. C. R. 701, that the Dominion Parliar ent had power to create such a court. Res v. Kennedy, 35 N. S. Reps. 266.

Succession Duty—Aggregate Value of Estate.)—In order to arrive at the aggregate value of the property of a deceased person under s. 4 of the Succession Duty Act of New Brunswick, 1896, the debts due by the estate should be deducted. Receiver-General of New Brunswick v. Hayward, 35 N. B. Reps. 453.

Succession Duty—"Accregate Value" of Property—Incumbrances.]—In estimating the "aggregate value" of the property of a deceased person under the Succession Duty Act, R. S. O. 1897 c, 24, as amended by 62 V. (2) c. 9, and 1 Edw. VII. c. 8, the value of the land of the deceased, where such land is incumbered or mortgaged, is to be regarded, and not merely the value of the deceased's equity of redemption therein. Attorney-General for Outerlo V. Lee, 25 Occ. N. 39, 4 O. W. R. 516, 6 O. W. R. 245, 9 O. L. R. 9, 10 O. L. R. 79.

Succession Duty—Appraisement of Pro-perty of Deceased Persons—Appeal to Surro-gate Judge—Further Appeal to Judge of High Court-Amount in Controversy-Treasurer of Court Amount in Controversy Treasurer of Province—Status—Gift of Real Estate to Children before Death—Contemplation of Death—"Disposition" of Property—Convey Death—"Disposition" of Property—Convey-ance More than a Year before Death—Valu-ation of Shares in Company.]—Appeal by the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario from a judgment or decision of the Judge of the Surrogate Court of Wentworth, under s. 9 of the Succession Duties Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 21; and cross-appeal by the executors of the will of George Roach from the same de-cision. The Surrogate Judge assessed the value of the estate of George Roach at $197,152.27, upon an appeal from the appraisement and assessment by the sheriff under s. 7 of the Act. In the amount ar-rived at by the Judge he refused to include the value of the homestead property of the deceased; and he refused to alter the valuation of $10,550 placed by the sheriff on certain stock in the Hamilton Park and Suburban Co.; but he included $1,000 in respect of the household goods of the deceased, which the sheriff had not included. By his appeal the Treasurer of Ontario sought to have the value of the homestead, stated at $7.680, added to the amount fixed by the Surrogate Judge, and to have the valuation of the stock in the Hamilton Park and Suburban Co., increased from $10,550 to $16,000. By the cross-appeal the executors sought to reduce the valuation of the stock from $10,550 to $4,000. The testator more than a year before his death, and while in good health, conveyed his homestead to his two daughters in fee. The conveyance was registered imme-diately. No change of possession however took place, and the testator continued to live in house until his death. The Surrogate Judge, on the appeal, fixed the value of the estate at $197.152.27, refusing to include the homestead property, but he included the value of the household goods:—Held, that s. 9 of the Act included the Provincial Treasurer so as to give him the right of appeal; and that such appeal was not limited to the grounds expressly stated, the whole appraisement being open to appeal; and the appeal being for an amount in excess of $10,000 there was a further appeal to a Judge of the High Court:—Held, also, that the con-veyance to the daughters of the homestead property could not be deemed to have been made in contemplation of death within s. 4 (b): but that came under s.-s. (c) of that section, and should be read in connection with the interpretation section, s. 2, whereby "property" included real as well as personal estate, and was subject to duty. In re Roach, 6 O. W. R. 189, 10 O. L. R. 208.

Succession Duty—Bank Deposit by Foreigner.]—Under the British Columbia Succession Duty Act, 1899, c. 68, s. 4, succession duty is payable upon money deposited in a bank in British Columbia, belonging to a person domiciled in a foreign country at the time of his death. In re McDonald Estate, In re Succession Duty Act, 9 B. C. R. 174.

Succession Duty-Charge against Legacies—Payment of Legacy Within Year—Sct-off,]—The direction in a will to executors to pay debts and funeral and testamentary expenses does not operate so as to make the payment of the succession duty, payable under R. S. O. 1897 c. 24, a charge on the residue and to exonerate the legacies from payment thereof. Manning v. Robinson, 29 O. R. 483, followed. The rule that executors are not bound to pay pecuniary legacies before the expiration of a year from the testator's death does not prevent them, where no time is fixed for payment, and there is sufficient to pay debts, legacies, and charges, from paying legacy forthwith, and so to allow the amount thereof to be set off against a mortgage due by a legatee to the estate. In re-Holland, 22 Occ. N. 164, 3 O. L. R. 406, 1 O. W. R. 73.

Succession Duty - Debentures Exempt from Taxation.] -- A part of the estate of L., deceased, consisted of debentures of the Province of Nova Scotia, issued under the provisions of a statute of the Province, which exempted them from taxation for provincial, local, or municipal purposes :- Held, that, notwithstanding the exemption from taxation, under the provisions of the Act, the deben-tures in question must be included in the valuation of the estate for the purpose of determining the amount payable to the government of the province, under the Succession Duty Act, Acts of 1895 c. 8, s. 5. Attorney-General v. Lovitt, 35 N. 8. Reps. 223.

Succession Duty-"Dutiable" Property-Transfer of Property before Death-Donatio Mortis Causa-Contract - Consideration-Estoppel -- Survivorship.] -- The aggregate value of the estate of an intestate was $12,877, and of this $7,540 passed to the hands of his niece by virtue of an agreement between them, given effect to by a donatio mortis causa, as established in Brown v. Toronto General Trusts Corporation, 32 O. R. 319:—Held, that the $7,540 was not dutiable under the Succession Duty Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 24, and amendments, the transfer from the intestate to his niece not being a voluntary one, but one made in pursuance of a contractual obligation for value; and the niece not being estopped, by the form the judgment in her action against the Toronto General Trusts Corporation, from setting up in this action, brought on behalf of the Crown to recover succession duty, that the transfer was not a gift, but the implementing of a contract:-Held, also, that the $7,540 did not pass by survivorship within the meaning of s, 4 (d) of R. S. O. 1897 c. Attorney-General for Ontario v. Brown, Occ. N. 90, 5 O. L. R. 167, 2 O. W. R.

Succession Duty - Property Exempt-Sale under Will-Duty on Proceeds-Costs -Crown.]-Debentures of the Province of Nova Scotia are, by statute, 'not liable to taxatio for provincial, local, or municipal purposes' in the province. L. by his will, after making certain bequests, directed that the residue of his property, which included some of these debentures, should be converted into money to be invested by the executors and held on certain specified trusts. This direction was carried out after his death, and the Attorney General claimed succession duty on the whole estate:—Held, affirming the judgment appealed against, 35 N. S. Reps. 223, Sedgewick and Mills, JJ., dissenting, that, although the debentures themselves were not liable to the duty either in the hands of the executors or of the purchasers, the proceeds of their sale, when passing to legatees, were. Costs will be given for or against the Crown as in other cases. Lovitt v. Attorney-General for Nova Scotia, 23 Occ. N. 212, 33 S. C. R. 350.

Succession Duty-Provisions of Will-Income only Payable for Life or Years-When Duty Payable on Corpus.]-The scheme of the Succession Duty Act, R. S. O. 1807 c. 24, is to provide a duty on succession to property by persons succeeding to estates and interests in property by testate or intestale title. A testator by his will devised his estate to trustees upon trust to collect the income and apply it or such part as the trustees chought proper for the benefit of childrev and grandchildren for the period of 21 years after his death, and to pay over to the beneficiaries the whole income, without accumulations, for the period between the end of the 21 years and the death of the last surviving child:--Held, that there was a plainly marked out period in the future not sooner than 21 years, when the corpus of the estate was to be divided; that there was a prior interest for life or years according to the event in fact, during which the trustee, standing in loco parentis, was entitled to the present income of the property until the time arrived when the corpus was to be divided; that when there is a present enjoyment there should be present payment of the du-ties based upon the estate or interest which is enjoyed; that there was a prior estate for years or for life, after which came the future estate in fee, not now to be levied upon for duty; and that only the income was presently liable to the payment of succession duty. Attorney-General for Ontario v. Toronto General Trusts Corporation, 23 Occ. N. 89, 5 O. L. R. 216, 1 O. W. R. 807, 2 O. W. R. 271.

Succession Duty-Quebec Act-Construction-Application to Ontario Property. -Taxes imposed on movable property by the Quebec Succession Duty Act of 1892 and the amending Acts apply only to property which the successor claims under or by virtue of Quebec law, and have no application to the several items in this case, which formed part of a succession devolving under the law of Ontario. Judgment of the Court of King's Bench, Quebec, affirming judgment in 21 Occ, N. 250, Q. R. 18 S. C. 184, affirmed, Lambe v. Manuel, [1903] A. C. 68.

Transfer of Shares in Lifetime. -Shares in an incorporated company transferred by the deceased in his lifetime to different members of his family, but not for the purpose of evading the payment of succession duties, are not liable for the payment of such duties under 59 V. c. 42 (N.E.) Action to Remove Curator of Inter-dist-Death of Plaintiff-Survival of Action -Costs.]-The plaintiff brought suit for the removal of the curator appointed to his son-in-law, interdicted for prodigality. While the case was proceeding the plaintiff died, and his testamentary executors petitioned to be permitted to take up the instance. The heirs of the deceased, who were relations by affinity of the interdict, also petitioned to be allowed to intervene and continue the suit for the removal of the curator, defendant :-Held, that while an action to remove a curator forms no part of the plaintiff's succession and is not transmissible to his heirs, nevertheless the claim against the defendant for costs incurred in the action is a claim which formed part of the patrimony of the plaintiff, and was transmitted under his will to his executors, who therefore, were entitled to take up the instance, not to have the defendant removed from the curatorship, but in order to determine his liability for costs. 2. The heirs were entitled to intervene to continue the action, not in virtue of any right unue the action, not in virtue of any right transmitted to them, but in virtue of their quality of relatives by affinity of the inter-dict, and in this quality were entitled to ask for the removal of the defendant from his oflice of curator, Wilson v, Giroux, Q. R. 21 S. C. 56.

Decased Plaintiff—Continuance of Action—Adverse Party—Tructice.]—Art. 607, C. P., applies to a voluntary continuance on the part of the representatives of a deceased plaintiff. If the adverse party wishes to compel the heirs to continue the suit he must do so by means of a demand in the form provided by art. 273, C. P. Routhier v. Nelson, 7 Q. P. R. 205.

Executors — Petition — Acceptance of Office.]—When one of the parties dies during the pendency of a suit, the suit may be continued by his testamentary executors. 2. It is not necessary for the executors to allege that they have accepted office as such, inasmuch as the making of the petition is in itself a sufficient acceptance. Gipanc v. People's Telephone Co., Q. R. 21 S. C. 154.

Survival of Action — Séparation de Corps—Universal Legatee.]—The universal legatee of a deceased plaintif, suing his wife for séparation de corps, has a right to continue the action, especially where the plaintiff has made a claim that the defendant shall be deprived of the right of exercising the advantages given to her under her marriage contract. Action for Price—Deduction for inferior quality—Costs. Vair v. United Fruit and Produce Co., (Man.), 2 W. L. R. 54.

Contract—Receipt—Sale of Goods Ordinonce.]—In an action for the price of 43 head of horses at $23 per head, the evidence established that the plaintiff and defendant drove to the plaintiff's ranche and saw the plaintiff's bunch of horses; that the defendant specified such horses as were unsuitable for his purpose, which were thereupon marked and separated from the others; that the defendant gave the plaintiff $3 with which to purchase oats to feed the horses, and also bought and gave the plaintiff some rope with which to make halters for the horses; but that the horses never left the possession of the plaintiff:—Held, that, though there may have been a sufficient acceptance, there was not such an actual receipt by the defendant of the horses as to establish a coutract binding under s. 6 of the Sales of Goods Ordinance. Livingstone v. Colpitts, 21 Occ. N. 102, 4 Terr. L. R. 441.

Defence as to Quality—Off v to Return and Cancel Sale, !—In an action for the price of goods and delivered, the defendant cannot plead that the goods delivered to him were not of the quality stipulated for and that he has been obliged to replace them by other goods, without at the same time offering to the plaintiff the goods received from him and demanding the cancellation of the sale. Dominion Bag Co. v. Bull Produce Co., 5 Q. P. R. 175.

Refusal to Accept—Entire Contract— Failure to Supply Part.]—The respondent or dered, by illustrated descriptive catalogue received from the appellant, several articles of furniture, at the prices stated in the catalogue, for furnishing a cottage in the country. The order included a table styled a "monk's bench." The appellant, being unable to supply this article as described in the catalogue, substituted another table of a similar character. Some of the other articles sent also differed slightly from the description in the catalogue. The respondent, treating the order as an entire contract, refused to accept the whole or any part of the articles sent to him. Subsequently, the appellant offered to take back the article substituted for the "moak's bench." The action, however, was broagle for the price of all the articles sent:—Held. affirming the judgment in 21 Q. R. S. C. 336, that the order of the respondent being for specified articles forming a suite of furniture for a cottage, the order was an entire contract, and the respondent was entitled to get exactly what he had ordered; and in default, to refuse acceptance of articles different from those contracted for, and also to recover his disbursements made under the contract. Tobey Furniture Co, v. Macmaster, Q. R. 12 K. B. 34.

Refusal to Accept—Perishable Goods—Sequestrator.]—In an action to enforce a contract of sale and to recover the price, when the object of the sale has been tendered by the vendor to the purchaser, who refuses to take delivery, and where it is perishable and its price liable to fluctuate, the Court will appoint a sequestrator with power to sell. Contract in Writing-Verbal Representation-Evidence.]-The plaintiffs sent to the defendants the following telegram: "Can you handle 90,000 green cod? Answer price."
The defendants replied:: "If cod No. 1, large, no shrinkage, $1.45." The plaintiffs brought the cod to the defendants, and while the fish were being landed the defendants signed an were being langed the derivariats suggested agreement in writing by which they agreed to buy from plaintiffs "the cargo of fish now being landed," and to pay for the same at the rate of $1.46 per 100 lbs. In an action by the plaintiffs to recover the contract price of the fish, the defendants sought to give evidence of a verbal representation at the time of delivery that they were of No. 1 quality. -Held, that the trial Judge was right in recusing to receive such evidence, as tending to vary the written contract. Where the defendants were seeking a remedy in damages, by reduction in price, for breach of condition or warranty, the remedy was a purely com-mon law one, and the authorities which would permit such evidence to be given in an action for specific performance, or to rescind a con-tract, were not applicable.—Semble, that if the defendants had not taken the fish, and the parties could have been restored to their original position, the evidence might have been given by way of defence to an action for the price. Defence — Inferior Quality—Receipt of Goods—Bar—Demurrer,] — The purchaser may refuse the goods which his vendor has delivered to him, if they are not of the kind or quality agreed upon, or if, in the absence of agreement on this subject, they are not of a true and merchantable quality. 2. The fact of the receipt of the goods is not, by itself, a bar to the claim of the purchaser, if the silence of the latter is sufficiently explained, and if his conduct gives no occasion for suspicion. 3. Where the defendant, in an action for the price, alleges that the goods delivered were not of the quality agreed upon, and that he has notified the plaintiff to take them back, preuve avant fair droit will be ordered. Delivery "on Approval"—Onus—Conflicting Evidence—Findings of Trial Judge—Revieve—New Trial by Jury.]—Where a question of fact, as to which the evidence is contradictory, and as to which there is no preponderance in favour of either party, has been determined by the trial Judge in favour of the plaintiff, but with doubt, and only for the reason that to send the case to a jury would probably result in a disagreement and in expense to the parties, the Court, if they consider that the interests of justice require it, will review the Judge's dinding and will order a new trial, directing the issues to be settled by a jury; and where the delivery of goods, after negotiations for a sale, is as consistent with the defendant's account of the transaction (delivery on approval) as it is with pleintiff's, the trial Judge is in error in regarding the delivery as a fact which requires explanation, and throws the burden on the defendant. Privilege of Returning Goods — Defence.]—Where, in a contract of sale, the purchaser had the privilege of freeing himself from the obligation of paying the price upon his returning to his vendor the articles sold, an action for the recovery of the price will, nevertheless, lie, and the purchaser cannot plend, by way of defence in law, that the creditor should allow him to return the articles sold, and not claim the price until after default to return. Leduc v. Rabeau, 4 Q. P. R., 154.

Proof of Sale and Delivery—Justice's Court—Limit Bond — Extension of Time after Breach.] — In a Justice's Court a judgment by default was signed in an action for goods sold and delivered, the only evidence of the sale and delivery being that of the plaintiff, who swore that she sold the goods to the defendant's wife, as per bill put in evidence, and that she had received $5 on account. The bill contained the dates of the sales, the articles sold, and the amounts charged: — Held, sufficient to warrant the signing of the judgment. Per Barker, J. The giving of time to arrange payment by the plaintiff to the original defendant, after breach of a limit bond, is no defence to an action for such breach. Kelly v. Thompson, 35 N. B. Reps. 718.

III. CONDITIONAL SALES.

Agreement as to Default - Resumption of Possession—Implied Contract—Exten-sion of Time for Payment—Consideration — Novation - Interest - Damages.]-Goods were delivered to the plaintiff by the vendors on the terms of two conditional sale agree-Until payment in full the goods were to remain the property of the vendors, and on default for one month of any of the stipulated payments, or of any extended payment, the whole balance of the purchase money was to become due, and the vendors, notwithstanding action or judgment, were to be at lib-ry to resume possession and resell, etc. The plaintiff got into default, although the continued in possession, and in August, 1902, an agreement was come to between him and the vendors that he should pay $50 on account, and the balance of $242, made up of arrears of principal and interest, in quarterly instalments, with interest. The plaintiff paid the $50. In October, 1902, the defendant, who had a judgment against the plaintiff, paid the vendors the whole balance due and procured an assignment, and transfer of the roods to himself, subject to the plaintiff's right. In November 1902, the defendant went to the plaintiff's house and seized the goods. The plaintiff was not then in default under the agreement for extension of August, 1902:-Held, that the seizure was wrongful and the defendant liable to damages, because an implied contract arose between the plaintiff and the vendor, from the delivery of the goods to the plaintiff on the terms of the receipts, that the right of resumption by the vendors should not be exercised-should not arise-while the goods remained in the plaintiff's possession until default had been made for one month of any of the payments provided for by the agreements "or of any extended payment." by which was plainly intended a default after an extension of time for payment: - Held. also, that the fact that under the agreement of August interest was to be paid upon interest then in arrear, as well as upon principal, was sufficient consideration for that new agreement :-Held, also, that the lowest measure of damages was the sum which the plaintiff had paid to the vendors on account of the price, inasmuch as this was the value of his interest in the goods which had been wrongfully taken out of his possession. Bridgman v. Robinson, 24 Occ. N. 214, 7 O. L. R. 591, 3 O. W. R. 503.

Default - Seizure-Re-sale-Rescission of Contract - Repairs - Warranty.] - In an action for the balance of the price of machines sold by the plaintiffs to the defendants, it appeared that the sale was a conditional one. the agreement containing a warranty of the machines, and providing that on default of payment the plaintiffs might resume possession and sell the machines and apply the proceeds, after paying the expenses of taking possession and selling, towards payment of the amount remaining unpaid, and sue for The putchase price was $2,875, the balance. and when the defendants had paid $1,200 the plaintiffs resumed possession, made repairs, and effected a conditional re-sale to W. for $2,000, no part of which had been received by them: — Held, that the defendants, having failed to return the machines after trial having used them during three seasons, and paid $1,200 on account, were barred, under the terms of the agreement, from claiming that the machines were not good and that payment should not be enforced. 2. That the agreement was not rescinded by the plaintiffs re-taking possession and re-selling. Sawyer v. Pringle, 18 A. R. 218, distinguished. Watson Mfg. Co. v. Sample, 12 Man. L. R. 373, 19 Occ. N. 94, followed. 3. That the plaintiffs had a right, under the circumstances, to charge the cost of the repairs and of resuming possession against the proceeds of the re-sale. 4. That the defendants were not entitled to be credited in this action with anything on account of the proceeds of the conditional sale to W., as nothing had yet been received; if the money should be paid by W., the defendants would then have their recourse against the plaintiffs. 5. That the plaintiffs were not recourse. entitled to charge the cost of the repairs against the defendants in this action. Abell Engine and Machine Works Co. v. McGuire, 21 Occ. N. 358, 13 Man. L. R. 454.

for the price, crediting the proceeds of the sale:—Held, following Sawyer v. Pringle, 18 A. R. 218, and Arnold v. Playter, 22 O. R. 608 that the vendor must fail because the contract did not expressly provide that on a re-sale the defendants were to remain liable notwithstanding the provision for sale "to-wards paying the amount remaining unpaid." Nor did a request from the vendee "to take the engine back and sell the same and apply the proceeds, less the expenses, towards paying my indebtedness to you," put the ven-dor in a better position, for it was only a reput the venquest to him to do what he might do under the contract; and it did not constitute the vendor the agent of the vendee to re-sell the goods, which were never the property of the vendee, and it did not estop the vendee. Abell v. Campbell, 21 Occ. N. 303.

Default-Remedy - Taking Possession -Action for Price-Ratification - Defence of Intoxication-Onus.] - A written agreement entered into between the plaintiff and defendant for the purchase of an organ by the defendant from the plaintiff, provided that the property in the organ should remain in the vendor erly in the organ should remain in the vendor until payment in full of the price, which was payable in instalments, but that the vendee, making the payments agreed upon when due, &c., should be entitled to the possession and use of the property. It was further provided that, if, at any time before payment in full of the price, the vendee should fail in the performance of the agreements on his part to be kept, &c., the vendor should be entitled to the immediate possession, and that if the rent due or to become due under the agreement was not paid within 30 days all rights of the vendee should cease, and any money paid by him on account of the purchase should be retained by the vendor. The vendee failed to make any of the payments as required :- Held, by two members of the Court, that the provision in the agreement enabling the vendor to retake possession in default of payment was cumulative, and that the vendor not having done any act towards making an election that he would forfeit the agreement to pay, and take possession of the instrument, was entitled to the ordinary remedy on breach of the agreement to pay; that the burden of establishing the defence of intoxication was upon the defendant, and that he had failed to make it out; and that the agreement, even if defective, had been fully ratified:—Held, by the other two members of the Court, that the agreement being one for the conditional sale of the organ, and no property passing until all instalments had been paid, and the agreement providing that, in the event of nonperformance by the vendee of the conditions of sale, the payments made by him should be forfeited and that the vendor could retake possession, the latter was the only remedy open to the vendor and that he could not sue under the agreement for non-payment of the instalments. Travis v. Way, 33 N. S. Reps. 551.

Hire Receipt—Registration—Bills of Sele Ordinance, N.W.T.—Possession — Description of goods.]—The Ordinance respecting receipt notes, hire receipts, and order for chattels (No. 8 of 1889) requires such instruments to be registered " where the condition of the bailment is such that the possession of the chattel should pass without any ownership therein being acquired by the bailee." The instrument in question in this case provided that "the title, ownership, and right to the possession of the property for which this note is given, shall remain in" the bailors:-Held, that, inasmuch as the "receipt note" in question in this case provided that the bailors might on certain contingencies take possession of the property, though the right of possession was in the bailors, the actual possession was to pass to the bailee, and therefore the instrupass to the ballee, and therefore the instru-ment was one which came within the terms of the Ordinance. Sutherland v. Mannix, S. Man. L. R. 541, and Boyce v. McDonald, 9 Man. L. R. 297, considered. The Ordinance provides (s. 2) that the provisions of the Ordinance respecting Mortgages and Sales of Personal Property (No. 18 of 1889) and amendments thereto shall apply to such receipt notes, hire receipts, or orders for the purposes of this Ordinance, in so far as the provisions thereof may not be incompatible with or repugnant to this Ordinance :- Held, that this provision made applicable to such instruments s. 8, Ord. No. 18 of 1889, which provides that mortgages, sales, assignments, or transfers of goods and chattels shall contain such sufficient and full description thereof that the same may be readily and easily known and distinguished. The receipt note in question in this case stated that it was "given for one team of oxen:"—Held, that, inasmuch as the instrument itself shewed further that the team of oxen was one bought by the bailee from the bailors for the price therein mentioned, that the team, immediately previous to the bailment, had been owned by the bailors, and at the time thereof was taken over by, and was in possession of, the bailee, the team of oxen was sufficiently described. Lien Note Signed after Sale and Delivery—Priority of Chattel Mortgage.]—On the 10th December, 1903, the plaintiff sold to C. three head of cattle; he swore that C. agreed at the time to give him a lien on the cattle; the reason it was not given at the date of the sale was that he had no form of lien note at the house; he procured one and had it signed by C. on the 31st December. Besides the cattle, the lien note included a gray horse; the plaintiff stated that, when he presented the note to C. for signature, the latter wanted to put in the horse, and it was done. He never owned the horse and did not claim it. On the 21st January, 1904, C., who was indebted to the defendant, gave him a chattel mortgage covering the cattle, horse, and other chattles; the chattel mortgage was duly registered. On the 29th March the plaintiff, having heard that C. had left the province, went to see the defendant and ascertained that he held the chattel mortgage, but had not yet taken possession of the cattle. They were in the stable of one P., to whom it was stated C. had sold them. The plaintiff made a warrant of distress under his lien note and tried to seize the cattle, but, during the night, the defendant had taken possession of them under his chattel mortgage and prevented the plaintiff from taking them:—Held, that if the lien note had been given at the time of the delivery of the cattle to C., it would have had its full effect under s. 26 (b) of the Sale of Goods Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 152. The defendant, having obtained the chattel mortgage from C. in good faith and without notice of any lien or other right of the original owner, came within s. 26 (a), and was entitled to claim the goods under the chattel mortgage Gallant v. Mellett, 18 Occ. N. 199, referred to. Collom v. McGrath, 24 Occ. N. 376, 15 Man, L. R. 96.

Name of Vendor — Agreement to Purchase.]—Upon a pinno made by a company whose corporate name was "The Mason and Risch Piano Company, Limited," and place of business Toronto, claimed by them in replevin as against a mortgage thereof, there was painted the words "Mason & Risch, Toronto:"—Held, that if the transaction came within the Conditional Sales Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 149, this was not a compliance with the provisions of s. 1 of that Act. But held, also, that the transaction did not come within the Act, the mortgager not being bound by the agreement under which the plano was in his possession, to purchase the piano, but having merely the option to purchase it. Helby v. Matthews, [1895] A. C. 471, distinguished and applied. Mason v, Limbasay, 22 Occ. N. 371, 4 O. L. R. 355, 1 O. W. R. 501, 583.

Possession - Chattel Mortgage - Lien Notes Act—Bills of Sale Act—Registration
—Assignment for Creditors—Exemptions,]— The owner of manufactured articles, which were in his possession free from any lien for the unpaid portion of the purchase money, signed a lien note in favour of the defendant, the manufacturer, containing a description of the goods and statement that the property in them was to remain in the defendant until paid for in full and that on default the defendant might enter and retake them :-Held, in the absence of evidence to prove that defendant had obtained the lien note by fraud or misrepresentation, that it might be treated as a chattel mortgage on the articles for the debt secured by it as against the person who had signed it. The defendant had not put on had signed it. The defendant had not put on the articles his name or any other distinguishing name so as to comply with s. 2 of the Lien Notes Act, R. S. M. c. 87:—Held. notwithstanding, that the lien note was valid as against the maker of it. The lien note was not registered under the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, 63 & 64 V. c. 31, and the maker of it, before maturity of the debt, became insolvent and made an assignment to the plaintiff under the Assignments Act, R. S. M. c. 7, for the benefit of his creditors:-Held, that, for want of such registration, the lien note, being an instrument intended to operate as a mortgage of goods which re-mained in the debtor's possession until the assignment, was null and void as against his creditors, including the plantiff as his assignee, by virtue of s. 2 (a) of the Bils or Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act. It was doubtful upon the wording of the assignment whether the debtor had reserved any exemptions to which he would be entitled under s. 43 (f) of the Executions Act. R. S. M. c. 55;—Held, that defendant could not claim the benefit of any such exemption even if it was reserved by the debtor in the assignment. Cox v. Schack, 22 Occ. N. 188, 14 Man. L. R. 174.

Promissory Note-Property Not to Pass Judgment in Action on Note-Execution . |-Under execution issued upon a judgment against the defendant, the sheriff seized a binder in the possession of the defendant. The Massey-Harris Company claimed the binder under a lien note, which provided that until the full amount of the purchase money was paid the property in the binder should remain in the company. Previous to the seizure of the binder the company had recovered judgment in a County Court against the defendant upon one of the lien notes or agreements for the balance due on the binder, and had issued execution for the amount, but in this execution there was no evidence of any action having been taken:—Held, in an interpleader issue, that, notwithstanding the judgment recovered by the company against the defendant on the note or agreement and the issuing of execution thereon, the property in the binder still remained in the company, and it was not liable to seizure by the sheriff under was not induce to the execution creditor. The plaintiffs were willing to deliver the goods, but the defendant refused to take them and to give the notes, or to pay, according to the contract. Purchase and Hire Agreement — Necessity for Filing — Bills of Sale Act — Rights of Vendors against Purchaser for Value from Vendee - Incomplete Clause in Agreement.]—Where the plaintiffs sold to F. a piano for the sum of $300, F. paying a portion of the purchase money in cash and giving his promissory notes for the balance, and, immediately after the sale and delivery of the piano, signing a purchase and hiring agreement, under which, upon completion of the payments to be made by him, he was to become owner of the piano, the title to which, in the meantime, remained in the vendors, and in which it was provided that in the event of F. becoming insolvent, or attempting to sell or part with the possession of the piano, all rights of F, should cease and the band, all rights of 2. should cease and the vendors should be at liberty to retake possession, and, while about one-half of the purchase money was still unpaid, F. sold the piano:—Held, that the agreement, having been taken by way of security, should have been filed under the provisions of the Bills of Sale Act. R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 142, s. 8, in order to be valid against creditors or an innocent purchaser for value, and not having been so filed. the plaintiffs could not recover; and, the Court could not give effect to a clause in the agreement which contained a number of blanks which by inadvertence were not filed up at the time the agreement was executed. and which lacked ingredients to make it operative and must deal with the agreement as if the clause were not there at all. Miller Bros. v. Blair, 37 N. S. Reps. 293.

Resale by Vendee-Conduct of Vendor-Resale by Vendee Conduct of Bona Estoppel—Implied Authority—Title of Bona Fide Purchaser—Waiver of Condition.]—The plaintiffs, who were the owners of a quantity of logs, upon being asked by the defendant if they were for sale, replied in the negative, adding that they had already been sold to one M. The defendant thereupon bought a portion of said logs from M., who was in possession and had all the indicia of title to the same, and paid M. in cash for them. As a matter of fact the sale to M. was subject to the condition that no property in the logs was to vest in M, until they were paid for, of which condition the defendant had no knowledge. In an action of trover brought to recover the value of the logs so purchased from M, by the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiffs were estopped by their declaration as to the sale to M. from setting up that the title was not in him, and that a verdict ought, therefore, to be entered for the defendant. Per McLeod, J., that the evidence shewed an intention on the part of the plaintiffs to abandon the conditional element of their contract with M., and that he was clothed by the plaintiffs with authority to sell the logs, accounting to them for the proceeds. Per Gregory, that the circumstances were such that the defendant could not reasonably have had any doubt as to the right of M. to sell, and, as the plaintiffs had put M. in a position to practise a fraud on the defendant, they must suffer the loss. Further, it being apparent from the evidence that the plaintiffs intended that M. should dispose of the logs in the usual course of his business, he of necessity had an implied authority to sell and pass the title. People's Bank of Halifax v. Estey, 36 N. B. reps, 169.

Rescission by Vendor — Principal and Agent — Authority of Agent — Parol Evidence of Agency.]—Held, that the buyer of an article under a sale, conditional upon the property not passing until full payment of the price, was entitled to treat the contract as rescinded where the seller took possession, used, offered for sale, and neglected to take proper care of, the article, although he made no actual use of it. Sawyer v. Pringle, 20 O. R. 111, 18 A. R. 218, followed. The evidence of the authority of a person assuming to act as agent for a dealer in agriculing to act as agent for a cener in agricul-tural implements, and the scope of his author-ity discussed. Where on the trial, parol evidence was given, without objection, to es-tablish agency, and afterwards it appeared that the agent's appointment was in writing, and, on appeal, it was contended that the parol evidence should not have been and should not be considered:—Held, that, though upon the written appointment being put in evidence, an application might, perhaps, have been properly made to strike out the parol evidence being on the same point, yet, as no such application had been made, nor any objection taken to its reception, the parol evidence might properly be considered. Harris v. Dustin, 1 Terr. L. R. 404.

Suspensive Condition-Term of Credit — Delivery — Pledge — Shipping Bills — Bills of Lading — Indorsement — Notice — Fraudulent Transfer - Insolvency - Resiliation of Contract - Revendication - Pleading. 1-The absence of the indorsement on bills of lading by the consignee therein named is notice of an outstanding interest in the goods represented by the bills, and places persons proposing to make advances upon the security of those bills upon inquiry in respect to the circumstances affecting them. On failure to take proper measures in order to ascertain these facts and obtain a clear title to the bills and goods, any pledge thereof must be assumed to have been made subject to all rights of such consignee. But, per Taschereau, C.J.C., dissenting, that where a sale of goods has been completed by actual tradition and delivery, the mere absence of the consignee's indorsement upon shipping bills representing the goods made in the name of the vendor, cannot have the effect of re-serving any right of property in the vendor. If the goods have been sold upon terms of credit, the unpaid vendor has no right to revendicate such goods after they have passed into the possession of a third person in the ordinary course of business, and, in the present case, on failure of the conservatory seizure and in the absence of any right of the plaintiff to revendicate the goods, the alternative relief prayed for by his action should not be granted. Gosselin v. Ontario Bank, 36 S. C. R. 406.

Waiver Intention — Secondary Evidence—Handwriting.]—On proper evidence as to non-production of the original, secondary evidence of the contents of a letter, given by a witness who had seen the author write once only, was admitted. On a conditional sale, evidenced by writing, providing that the title should remain in the seller till cash, notes, or drafts (for the balance of purchase price) as agreed upon, should be paid:—Held, that the question whether the conditions had been waived and thus the property had vested in the buyer, was entirely a question of intention, and that the facts shewn in evidence, one of which was that the seller had accepted, for the balance of the purchase price, the promissory note of a firm of which the buyer was a member, did not shew an intention to waive the condition as to property. Marcy, Pierce (No. 2), 4 Terr. L. R. 246.

Goods.]—Although the terms or conditions of a civil contract for an amount exceeding $50 (art. 1235, C. C.), cannot be proved by oral testimony, the acceptance of the contract and the delivery of the article sold may be proved by a witness. 2. From the moment that a party to a contract refuses to acknowledge the contract, a demand and tender of payment becomes useless. 3. A person who has bought en bloc a certain ascertained number of animals cannot be forced to accept a smaller number, Wark v.

Agent — Representations—Contract — Vesset — Latent Defect — Inspection—Part Payment — Forfeiture.]——The defendants wrote to the plaintiffs enquiring whether they knew of a vessel fulfilling certain requirements, and which they could "in every re-spect recommend and guarantee." The plaintiffs replied, mentioning and recommending a vessel offered for sale, but saying, "If you consider this vessel, we would advise you to send a man and inspect her, as we would not care about sending you a vessel and then not to turn out satisfactory." The defendants wrote in return that they were unable to send a man to examine the vessel, but were prepared to take her on the plaintiffs' recommendation. They thereupon authorized the plaintiffs to buy the vessel and draw on them for a portion of the purchase money, and agreed to pay the balance on delivery: Held, that when the bargain was finally struck between the plaintiffs, acting for the vendor, and the vendee, the property passed, and there was no further locus punitential after Plat date. Some time after delivery, the defendants discovered that the vessel was infected with dry rot, which made her practically valueless, but could not be detected by any ordinary inspection :- Held, that, in making tae representations they did as to the condition of the vessel, and in the conduct of the negotiations, the plaintiffs were only bound to use ordinary diligence in the discharge of their duties, and the evidence fully warranted the conclusion that such diligence was used:—Held, further, that a reference to the part payment as "earnest money," and a provision for forfeiture of the amount paid in the event of the defendants failing to complete the purchase were not sufficient to give the defendants the option of forfeiting their deposit and refusing to carry out their contract as to the balance. Breach - Conditions - Shipping Payment - Construction of Contract - Damages.]—By contract in writing M. agreed to sell to P. cedar poles of specified dimensions, the contract containing the following provisions: "All poles as they are landed an Arnprior are to be shipped from time to time as soon as they are in shipping condition. Any poles remaining at Arnprior over one month after they are in shipping condition to be paid for on estimate in 30 days therefrom, less 2 per cent, discount. . . . For shipments cash 30 days from dates of invoices less 2 per cent. discount:"-Held, that for poles not shipped P, was not obliged to pay on the expiration of one month after they were in shipping condition, but only after 30 days from receipt of the estimate of such poles. M, refused to deliver logs that had been on the ground one month without previous payment, and P. brought an action for specific performance and damages, contending that he could not be called upon to pay until the poles were inspected and passed by him, and also that M. should supply the cars. M. counterclaimed for the price of the poles: — Held, Sedgewick and Killam, JJ. dissenting, that each party had misconstrued his rights under the contract, and no judg-ment could be rendered for either. Condition — Measurement of Logs by Surreyor — Action for Price—Evidence.]— An agreement for the sale of logs contained a condition that the logs were to be surreyed by any surveyor the vendee might have in his employ and that such survey was to be final:—Held, that proof of such a survey was, in the absence of any charge of fraud or incompetency on the part of the vender surveyor, a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to recover the price of the logs, and that the trial Judge was in error is rejecting the evidence of such surveyor at the ground that he was not proved to have been a duly sworn surveyor, appointed by the

Condition as to Acceptance — Post Letter — Time Limit — Term for Delivery —Breach of Contract — Damages — Count-erciaim — Right of Action.]—The plaintiff on 2nd October, 1899, wrote offering to supply the defendants with 37 car loads of hay at prices mentioned "subject to acceptance within 5 days, delivery within 6 months."
On the 5th October the defendants replied: "We will accept your offer on timothy hay as per your letter to us of the 2nd instant. as per your electron as of the 2nd instant.
Please ship as soon as possible the orders you already have in hand, and also get off the 7 cars as early as possible . . . We will advise you further as to shipment of the 30 cars. Should we not be able to take it all in before your roads break up, we presume you will have no objection to allowing balance to remain over until the farmers can haul it in. Do the best you can to get some empty cars at once, as we must have three or four cars by next freight." This letter wvs registered, and, although it reached the plaintiff's post office within the five days, was not received by him until the following day. The hay was not delivered, and, before the expiration of the six months named for delivery, the defendants, in defence of this action (which was brought in respect of earlier transactions), counterclaimed for damages for breach of contract in the non-delivery of the 37 car loads:—Held, that the correspondence did not constitute a binding contract, as the did not constitute a bloom to the parties were never ad idem as to all the terms proposed. 2. That, as the six months limited for making delivery had not expired, the company had no right of action for daments. ages, even had there been a contract, and that the filing of the counterclaim was premature. Correspondence-Condition as to Quality — Acceptance — Completed Contract — Breach.] — The plaintiffs offered to buy a quantity of fish from the defendants, at a price twenty-five cents per quintal above the Halifax price, provided the fish were so cleaned, or prepared for market, as to leave "little, if any, blood or black spot." The defendants answered, guaranteeing to furnish the quantity of fish required, at the price specified, and prepared as required by plaintiffs, "with one exception, that it is impossible for us to take all black skin from the napes of fish." The plaintiffs, in reply, stated that the condition which the defend-ants wished to except was the most important requisite, that it was done in the case of all fish caught and cured in Iceland, and other places mentioned, and that, for this one reason, fish from those countries sold at a fair price, when fish not so prepared could not be sold at all. The defendants failed to make any immediate reply to this letter, and the plaintiffs wrote again, asking whether the defendants had decided to supply the cargo in the condition the plaintiffs would like to have it, as per their previous letter. The defendants thereupon wrote: "We will furnish any quantity of fish that you want, sultable for any market, at the price you offered." They added: "I will do my best in regard to removing the black skin, as you stated in your previous letter." To this fetter the plaintiffs replied, stating that they would take a cargo of 2.500 quintals, "according to previous arrangement as to quality and price." The defendants failed to deliver the fish, as required, and the plaintiffs claimed damages:—Held, that, notwithstanding the words "I will do my best," there was a complete contract, upon which the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. Place of Delivery—Receipt of Goods—
"Delivered Price"—Notice — Estoppel.]—
The plaintiffs, while expressly stipulating against any obligation to deliver, offered to sell to the defendants 20 cars of Pittsburg slack at $1.25 at mine, which they would ship all rail, if the defendants wished, and if the plaintiffs would procure the necessary cars. The defendants telegraphed, giving order at the price named, "F.O.B. mine." adding "Route it G. T. R. London." On the same day the plaintiffs worde accepting the order, and stating that they would ship as soon as railway equipment could be furnished, that an all rail rate of $2.10 to London had been quoted them, and they would ask the carriers to put same through at once. Subsequently and before any shipment had been made, it was arranged between the plaintiffs and defendants that No. 8 Pittsburg slack should be substituted for Pittsburg slack, and at the same "delivered price." Invoices sent with the coal shewed the mine price at $1.65, but, notwithstanding, the defendants accepted the coal, and rande no protest until making their first payment:—Held, that the place of delivery was to be at London at the price of $3.35; and, even if the defendants could claim to have been misled by the correspondence, they were estopped by dealing with the coal when the invoices were received from shewing the contrary. National Cash Rejister Co. v. Demet. Q. R. 14 K. B. 68.

Statute of Frauds—Inability of Vendor to Deliver Goods — Breach of Contract — Sale of Business as a going Concern,]—The plaintiffs were executors of one John McCalla, who had carried on a general grocery and hardware business in St. Cacharines.

They caused an advertisement to be published asking for tenders for the purchase en bloc of the grocery and hardware stock, goodwill, fixtures, etc., of the business. The advertise-ment stated, inter alia, that intending purchasers were to tender at a rate of so much in the dollar for the stock and fixtures, and a specified sum for the goodwill; that business had been continued from McCalla's death by the executors, and was a going concern; that the stock sheets might be seen on application to the executor's solicitor: and that further particulars and conditions of sale might also be seen there. Defend-ant came into the office of the solicitor on two occasions and looked over the stock sheets: that on 22nd September, 1902, the day before the tenders were to be opened, defendant met him in the street in the evening and said he thought he would make a tender on the stock. Defendant asked the solicitor to write it out for him and gave him the figures, 75 cents for the grocery stock and 50 cents for the hardware stock; nothing for the goodwill. Solicitor then wrote the following offer: "To the Trusts and Guarantee Co. (Ltd.), Toronto. "Dear Sirs,—I offer 75 cents on the dollar for the grocery stock and 50 cents on the dollar for the hard ware, but nothing for the goodwill. "Yours, "John Ross, per A. W. Marquis." This offer was accepted by the plaintiffs, and notice thereof in writing given by the solicitor to the defendant containing a request to call and execute the agreement in accordance with conditions of sale, and to make his deposit. The defendant by letter repudiated any liability on the contract. The conditions of sale were never produced nor proved. There had been a large quantity of staple goods sold prior to time for completion of the contract: -Held, that there was no valid contract under the Statute of Frauds; and further, that by the depletion of the stock, the plaintiffs were not in a position to carry out the alleged contract. Trusts and Guarantee Co. v. Ross, 5 O. W. R. 558, 9 O. L. R. 715.

Unascertained Future Goods - Appropriation to Contract — Property Passing.)—Held, that, under the circumstances of this case, there was a sale by description of unascertained future goods, viz., wood to be cut, drawn, and delivered, and 714 cords of the wood we've delivered at the place at which by the contract they were to be delivered, and in the state in which by a subsequent agreement they were to be delivered, and the plaintiff, by measuring, estimating, marking and stamping them with his own stamp, assented to the delivery of them in the state in which they were delivered, and uncontract, and the property therein thereupon passed to the plaintiff, as was the intention of the parties; and the provisions of the sequent agreement did not prevent the property passing; and the plaintiff must bear the loss of part of the wood which was destroyed by fire. Wilson v. Shacer, 21 Occ. N. 141.

Writing — What Amounts to—Evidence—Commencement of Proof.]—It is not essential that the writing required by clause 4 of art. 1235, C. C., set forth the contract of sale in all its details; it is sufficient if it set forth the essential terms of the contract, or refers to another writing which does contain them. The writing may be supplemented by the admission of the party, but such admission ought to include all the conditions contained in the writing, and ought to be complete in itself; furthermore art. 1235, forming, as it does, an exception to art. 1233, such admission cannot be offered as the commencement of proof by writing. A writing, signed by the party sued, which confirms the requirements of art. 1235, C. C., but which such party con ends is not binding, would, nevertheless, be sufficient to form a basis for the admission of oral testimony of the contract of sale. Molleur v. Mitchell, Q. R. 14 K. Denial of Delivery — Novation Buidence of inferior Quality—Admissibility—Amendment.]—Where, in an action for the price of piles of red pi.e, sold and delivered to the defendant, the plea, in addition to a general denial of delivery, was to the effect that the plaintiff had accepted other persons as his debtors instead of the defendant, thereto the insurance of the present property of the goods supplied is freelevant to the issue, and inadmissible. 2. Amendment of the plea at the trial, in order to allege that the goods supplied were not in conformity to the contract, ought not to be allowed, more particularly where the evidence did not shew objection or refusal to accept on this ground at the time of delivery. Veilleux v. Atlantic and Lake Superior R. W. Co., Q. R. 23 S. C. 217.

Denial of Sale and Delivery—Burden of Proof—Corroboration — Appeal — Reversal of Judgment.]—In an action for the price of goods sold and delivered, judgment was given in favour of the defendants at the trial, on the ground that the denial of the sale and delivery threw the burden of proof upon the plaintiffs, and that they had failed to satisfy this burden, there being a conflict of evidence between the plaintiffs' traveller,

E., and the defendant M. It appearing from the evidence that the ground upon which the case was determined at the trial was wrong, the evidence of E. being corroborated in a number of particulars, and there being a preponderance in favour of the plaintiffs:—Held, that the appeal should be allowed and judgment entered for the plaintiffs for the amount of their claim, with costs of action and appeal. Fraser v. McCurdy, 35 N. S. Reps. 467.

Failure of Seller to Deliver Part—Action by Purchaser — Damages — Proportionate Value.)—A purchaser who is not put in possession of a part of the goods sold to him en bloc, can claim from the vendor only the value of the part which he has not received in proportion to the total price, and the damages mentioned in art. 1518, C. C.; all other damages will be refused upon defence in law. Muscat v. Montreal Hardware Manufacturing Co., 5 Q. P. R. 197.

Non-delivery of Quantity Contracted for Measure of Damages — Measurements — Specifications — Interest — Mise en Demcure.]-An insolvent had agreed to deliver to V., a creditor, upon a certain dock, a quantity of wood at so much per foot, the expenses of measurement to be paid by the insolvent, who was to furnish specifications to V., the measurement to be made by the measurers of the Quebec harbour commis-sion:—Held, that the delivery was not com-plete until the measurement had been made and the specifications furnished to V.; also that it was incumbent on the insolvent or on the curator representing him to prove his allegation that V. had received a larger quanity of wood than the specifications shewed or than V. admitted, and the proof of that must be clear and certain. 2. In a commercial matter interest upon money does not run unless it be alleged and shewn that it is allowed by commercial usage. 3. In a commercial matter mise en demeure arises by lapse of time alone. 4. By the default of the insolvent to deliver to V. the quantity of wood which he had contracted to deliver to him, V, had the right as damages to the difference between the price upon which he had agreed with V, and the price at which he had sold or could resell the wood. 5, In a commercial matter it is necessary to be faithful and to fulfil exactly a contract within the time agreed, for a disturbance may quickly be caused in the affairs of a trader durickly be caused in the analys of a tradi-by reason of one with whom he has contract-ed not punctually fulfilling his obligations. One of the defendants' employees, obeying the instructions of one of the firm, put on the store a plate bearing their own name, and it was sold with this plate on it, but the purchaser was informed that the store had been manufactured by the plaintiff. The store was soon afterwards returned by the purchaser to the defendants, and another taken in its place: — Held, (affirming the judgment in Q. R. 16 S. C. 189), that there having been no misrepresentation or intention to deceive, and no damages proved, and the purchaser having been informed that the store was of the plaintiff's manufacture, the plaintiff had no right to recover damages. Passing.]—The plaintiff sold to the defendant all the opples of first and second quality on the trees in the plaintiff's orchard at a rate per barrel, the plaintiff to pick the apples and place them in piles, the defendant to supply barrels and pack the apples, and to supply carries and pack to sylventhe plaintiff to take the apples when in barrels to the railway station. There was no agreement as to the time and mode of culling and packing or the time for payment. The plaintiff picked the apples and placed them in plannill picked the apples and placed them in piles and told the defendant that they were ready for packing. The de'endant was not at the time able to obtain barrels. About three weeks later, however, he took delivery of twelve barrels of apples. Two weeks after this a severe frost occurred and the rest of the apples were destroyed, neither the plaintiff nor the defendant having taken any steps to protect them :-Held, that the inference from the circumstances was that the culling was to be done by the defendant with the plaintiff's concurrence; that until the culling took place there could be no ascertainment of the apples intended to be sold; that the property had therefore not passed; and that the loss must fall on the plaintiff: Lee v. Culp. 24 Occ. N. 316, 8 O. L. R. 210, 4 O. W. R. 41.

Bill of Leding in Name of Vendor-Transmission to Purchaser Unindorsed—Pledge by Purchaser—Right to Rescind—Right of Vendor to Recover from Third Party—Hanks.]—When the vendor of goods, to secure payment, has consigned them to himself at the ports of shipment, and taken from the carriers bills of lading in his own name, and afterwards sent these to the purchaser, without indorsing them and without completing the delivery of the goods, he alone has power to dispose of these bills of lading, and the purchaser cannot lawfully assign them to a bank to secure advances, nor pledge or otherwise give title to them. The vendor not having made delivery of the goods, since the bills of lading were made out to his order and were not indorsed, arts, 1543, 1998, and 1999, C.C., do not apply; but, by virtue of the provisions of art. 1065, the vendor, who had preserved his possession of and property in the goods, could avoid the sale, the purchaser having been guilty of failure to carry out his obligation to pay for them; and the bank which had made advances to the purchaser as aforesaid, was bound to account to the vendor for the bills of lading which had been received from the purchaser and the goods which they represented, and in default, for the value of such goods. Breach of Warranty-Counterclaim -Pleading. Marks v. Waterous Engine Works Co., 1 O. W. R. 148.

Condition - Waiver - Detinue - Demand and Refusal.]-The plaintiff sold to the defendant his one-half interest in a heiter named Irene, registered as a thoroughbred. the defendant already being owner of the other half. The defendant subsequently charged the plaintiff with having wrongfully secured the registration of the heifer as a thoroughbred when, as he alleged she was not. The charge was laid before the Execu-tive Committee of the Dominion Short Horn Breeders' Association at Toronto. The parties then entered into a written agreement, which provided: (1) that the heifer should be resold to the plaintiff at a certain price; (2) that on payment of the price the heifer was to become the property of the plaintiff;
(3) that the defendant should withdraw the charge above referred to, and upon all proceedings in respect to it being dropped by the association the "foregoing part" of the agreement was to be carried out. The defendant did not withdraw the charge, nor were the proceedings dropped. The plaintiff twice tendered the purchase price of the heifer to the defendant, which was refused. He then, with-out making a formal demand for the heifer sued the defendant in define:—Held, that, as the condition contained in the third clause of the agreement was inserted for the plaintiff's benefit, he could waive it; that he had waived it, by proferring payment; that on refusal to accept the price the defendant became ipso facto the wrongful detainer of the heifer; that a demand and refusal was therefore not essential to the plaintiff's right of action; and that the plaintiff was, therefore, entitled to succeed. Purchaser carried on business in Winnipeg. No inspection took place at time of contract. Vendor shipped car load at purchaser's request to Winnipeg. Purchaser refused to accept because of defect in quality. Vendor re-sold and sued for difference between contract price and amount realized:—Held, that the agreement s to quality was a condition of the contract; that the property in the butter had not passed; that the purchaser's adult to accept depended upon the quality of the butter; that the fact that the purchaser had accepted other car loads of "fine" butter did not bind him to accept one that was not. (Dyment v. Thompson, 9 O. R. 566, 12 A. R. 658, 13 S. C. R. 303, commented on;) that the onus was on the v-ndor to prove the quality of the butter; that such evidence could not be given in rebuttal. Specific Goods — Deliverable State — Property Passing—Destruction to fore Pay-ment or Delivery.]—Unless a contrary intention appears, where there is an unconditional contract for the sale of specific goods, in a deliverable state, the property in the goods passes to the buyer at the time the contract is made; and it is immaterial whether the time of payment or the time of delivery or both be postponed. The plainting agreed to sell to the defendants a quantity of tan bark which lay in piles in the woods at a distance of 14 miles from the railway siding at which it was to be delivered. The price agreed up-on was to cover the plaintif's trouble and expenses of carrying the bark to the siding and placing it on the cars there. At the time the contract was made the bark was ready for immediate delivery so far as its condition was concerned; nothing remained to be done by the plaintiffs to entitle themselves to the price but the hauling and ship-ping. The bark was destroyed by fire where it lay in the woods, payment not having been made by the defendants for it :- Held, that the property had nevertheless passed to the defendants, and they were liable for the price. Judgment of Meredith, J., 2 O. W. R. 985, affirmed. Craig v. Beardmere, 24 Occ. N. 308, 7 O. L. R. 674, 3 O. W. R. 547.

VIII. RESCISSION.

Action — Time—Defect in Goods—Vice Redhibitoirc.]—An action to set aside a contract for the sale of goods, begun 16 days after the sale, where the parties lived 20 miles from each other, and the purchaser has, two days after the sale, asked to have it rescinded, and has not ceased since to negotiate with the vendor to obtain rescission by consent, is begun within a reasonable time. 2. A certain lameness or halting which was shewn when the horse, the subject of the sale, was at rest for a time, and which did not appear when the trial was made by the purchaser at the time of the sale, is a defect which affords ground for setting aside the sale; art. 1522, C. C. Balcer v. Provancher, Q. R. 24 S. C. 137.

Breach—Damages. Fisher v. Carter, 4 O. W. R. 319.

Contract — Refusal to Perform — Remedies. — A refusal by the promisor to perform the contract unless the promisor will do something which he is not bound to do, may be treated as an absolute refusal to perform it, and the promisee may at once rescind the contract and sue for damages. Freet v. Burr, L. R. 9 C. P. 208, Withers v. Reynolds, 2 B. & Ad, 882, and Mersey Steel and Iron Co. v. Naylor, 9 App. Cas. 434, followed. When the promisee has thus rescinded a contract of sale of nacertained goods, and afterwards put it out of his power to perform it by otherwise disposing of some of the goods, subsequent negotiations on his part to induce the promisor to take other similar goods on the same terms, or offers to settle the dispute for the sake of avoiding litigation, will not necessarily be considered as doing away with the effect of the previous receission. McCouran v. McKay, 22 Occ. N. 100, 13 Man. L. R. 590.

Default of Payment—Stipulation for Right—Time for Exercise—Extension—Insolvency—Demand for Assignment,]—A demand for an assignment and the filing of a claim, being only a demand for payment, do not deprive the creditor of his right to rescind a sale of goods for default of payment of the price. 2. In the case of a sale of movables, this right of rescission may, in case of insolvency, be exercised after 30 days, when delay has been allowed for payment of the price, and the right of receission has been formally stipulated for. In re Girouard, Q. R. 24 S. C. 336.

Defect—Diligence.]—Where communication between buyer and seller may be had easily and promptly, and, in the case of the sale of a horse, the defect complained of is one which would have been quickly discovered if a proper trial of the animal had been made promptly, but the buyer did not make any complaint until sixteen days after the sale, and even then did not tender the animal back, but allowed eight days more to elapse before bringing suit, the action for resiliation of the sale was no instituted with reasonable diligence. Brown v. Wiseman, Q. R. 20 S. C. 304. Evidence—Conduct. Vipond v. Griffin, 2 O. W. R. 532.

Sale by Sample-Reasonable Diligence Acceptance-Pledging-Tender.1-Where the buyer of goods (in this case, eggs) by sample, after he had knowledge of the alleged inferior quality of the goods, instead of tendering them back immediately, completed a sale of part of them at a reduced price, a week later sold another lot, and afterwards obtained permission from the holder of the warehouse receipt to take a further lot out of warehouse:— Held, that he had not shewn "reasonable diligence" within the meaning of art. 1530 of the Civil Code, and was not entitled to re-siliate the contract. 2. There may be a recerpt of goods without an acceptance, but the buyer, in order to be entitled to bring a redhibitory action, must not, by his acts, have adopted the contract. Pledging the goods is an adoption. 3. A tender back of the goods to the vendor is ineffective where, at the time it is made, the goods are really out of the control of the buyer, and in the possession of a party who has made advances thereon. Actual Receipt.]—Action for the price of forty head of horses "sold and delivered to the defendant at $23 a head." There was no agreement in writing nor part yment to bind the bargain. By s. 6; (3) of the Sales of Goods Ordinance, in order to establish a binding contract, the plaintiff had to prove an acceptance and an actual receipt by the defendant of at least a part of the goods. The plaintiff said he was to keep the horses until paid for, but he had no direct agreement not to give them till paid for. The horses which the defendant orally agreed to buy were kept on the plaintiff's ranche separate from the rest of the plaintiff's herd:—Held, that, even if there was an acceptance, there was no actual receipt by the defendant; and the action failed. Memorandum in Writing-Omission of Term - Oral Evidence Connecting Documents.]-The plaintiff's agent took an oral order for goods from the defendant, one of the terms of payment being that he should in a certain event, have six months' credit. The plaintiff's agent signed a memorandum containing all but this term of the contract. The defendant subsequently wrote cancelling the order. This led to further correspondence. In none of the letters was any reference made to the term allowing six months' credit. The Sale of Goods Ordinance, No. 10, 1896, s. 4 (now C. O. 1898 c, 39, s. 6), (substan-tially a re-enactment of s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds), was pleaded :- Held, that it was open to the defendant to prove, as he had, that the term as to six months' credit was part of the contract, and, as it did not appear in any of the documents submitted to constitute the note or memorandum in writing, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. 2, That as the statement of claim alleged the term as to six months' credit to be part of the contract sued on, it was unnecessary for the defendant to have proved it, and he might have taken the objection immediately upon the written evidence of the contract being put in. 3. That a letter cancelling the contract for the purchase of goods cannot be taken to constitute, an acceptance of the goods. Semble, that parol evidence is admissible to connect several writings so as to constitute them together a note or memorandum under the Ordinance. Oliver v. Hunting, 44 Ch. D. 205, referred to. That a memorandum of sale required to be in writing may be complete and binding, though silent as to price and to time and mode of payment, if no agreement in fact was made or these points, the omission being equivalent to a stipulation for a reasonable price and immediate payment in the usual mode. Valpy v. Gibson, 4 C. B. 837. referred to. Calder v. Hallett, 5 Terr. L.

Payment on Account-Garnishment-Waiver. -The primary creditor sued the primary debtor to recover damages for refusal to accept and pay for a horse bought by the primary debtor from the primary creditor for $50. At the time of the sale the primary debtor had deposited $5 in the hands of the garnishee, which was to have been paid over to the primary creditor when the horse was delivered. There was no delivery, no acceptance, no memorandum in writing, and nothing given by way of earnest :--Held, that there had been no compliance with s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds; the payment to the garnichee was not sufficient to satisfy the statute, the primary creditor, by his action in garnishing this amount, having elected to treat it not as a payment under the contract (in which case it would be the primary creditor's money and not garnishable), but as the primary debtor's money. Weese v. Peak. 21 Occ. N. 43.

Sale of Specified Cargo—Sale "on arrial"—Duty to Ship—Quantity Mentioned.]
—The sale of a cargo of coal, not then loaded, evidenced by two writings, the first being an agreement to accept "a cargo . consisting of from 1,000 to 1,100 tons to arrive at this port (Levis) later from Swansea during this fail from Mr. Francis Gunn of Quebec," and the second providing that "the cargo of Welsh anthracite which is now declared to arrive per S.S. Avona 'in September, for Messrs, P. Robitaille & Filis of Levis," is not a sale of a cargo "on arrival," and so conditional upon arrival, but made it the duty of the vendor to ship the quantity mentioned by the ship designated, and the contract was not satisfied by the delivery of 465 tons carried by the vessel named. Robitaille v. Gunn, Q. R. 13 K. B. 552.

XI. WARRANTY.

Absence of—Waiver of Inspection—Dumages for Inferior Quality,]—Cheese was sold without special warranty as to quality, but subject to inspection at the factory before shipment. The purchaser's agent did not avail himself of the opportunity to make an inspection at the factory. The purchaser complained after delivery that the quality of the cheese was inferior, and that some damage had been done by nails in packing it, and he tendered the price, less half a cent per pound, deduction for damage. The Court below allowed a deduction for the damage by packing, but maintained the action for the bafance. The defendant inscribed in review:—Held, that there being no special warranty as to quality, and the buyer, by his agent, having waived inspection at factory by asking that the cheese be forwarded before it had been inspected, could not afterwards claim damages for inferior quality, which, if it existed, would have been disclosed by the inspection. Lebrecque v. Duckett, Q. R. 22 S. C. 135.

Action for Contract Price - Defence and Set-off-Counterclaim for Damages-Substitution of Inferior Material—Condition pre-cedent — Resale — Measure of Damages — Delay.]-In an action for the contract price of goods sold and delivered, in which it was shewn that the goods delivered were not manufactured as agreed upon, the vendors having substituted castings for forgings:-Held, that the defendants were entitled to have their damages applied in reduction of the plaintiffs' claim :- Held, also, that as soon as the vendee discovers the defect he may bring an action on the warranty and recover the value of the article he should have received, and that the right of action is complete without a resale, and that the measure of damages is the same whether the goods are in his warehouse or in the hands of persons to whom he may afterwards have pledged or sold them :-Held, also, that where credit is given or where the goods have been paid for, the vendee may sue at once, or in the case of credit, if the vendee so elects, he may await an action for the price and set off or counterclaim for his damages by reason of the defective material or other breach of warranty:—Held, also, that where there had been delay in the delivery of the samples, as well as the bulk of the goods ordered for a particular season, which arrived late for the season, and in consequence were sold at a loss, the measure of the damages was the difference between the value of the goods at the time at which they were to have been delivered according to the contract and their value for the purpose of resule. Breach-Implied Condition as to Reasonably Good Usage. 1 - In an action to recover the amount of a promissory note given by the defendant for the price of a bicycle purchased by him from the plaintiff's agent, the defend-ant pleaded an undertaking on the part of the agent that the bicycle delivered would carry the defendant or bear his weight, but that the bicycle delivered would not carry defendant or bear his weight, and broke down. The evidence shewed that the agent by whom the bicycle was sold was to have come the following morning to instruct the defendant in the use of it, but that the defendant, who was a heavy and clumsy man, and who had never ridden a bicycle before, undertook to try it in the absence of the agent. The County Court Judge found that a warranty that the bicycle would bear the defendant's weight implied the condition of reasonably good usage, and that, under the circumstances in proof, the defendant assumed the risk of injuring the bicycle, and even if there was a warranty as alleged, there was not sufficient proof of breach:—Held, that the Judge was right. Johnson v. Moore, 34 N. S. Reps. 85.

Breach—Remedy — Contribution. Ferguson v. Arkell, 1 O. W. R. 190.

Breach—Rescission of Contract—Fruudu-Lat Representations—Finding of Jury — Appeal—I alue of Goods.] — Where a chattel sold with a warranty is delivered as agreed upon and is not up to the warranty, that fact, in the absence of fraud, affords no ground for rescinding the contract, but the remedy is for a breach of warranty. A court of appeal will not disturb the finding of a jury on a question of fraudulent representations, where there is any evidence upon which the verdict may rensonably be supported. Evidence of the value of the chattel (a horse) at the time of the trial, a year after the sale, was properly rejected when offered to prove the value at the time of the sale, Finn v. Broten, 35 N. B. Reps. 335.

Correspondence—Construction — Breach —Damages.]—The plaintiff, a private banker, wrote to the defendants, safemakers, for an estimate of a burglar proof door. The defendants, in answer, described No. 67, as 11/8 inches thick, the entire surface protected with hardened drill proof plate, and enclosed a cut hardened drill proof plate, and enclosed a cut of No. 67, called "fire proof vault door with chilled steel lining." The plaintiff, in reply, asked whether No. 67 would furnish a fair protection against burglars, and the defend-ants answered, "No. 67 door gives both fire and burglar proof protection." The plaintiff purchuser a No. 67 door, which was blown open by burglars. It appeared that the handle to the spindle by which the lock was turned had been knocked off and dynamite introduced between the savindle and the door plates; the between the spindle and the door plates; the explosion of the dynamite then stripped the nuts which held the door plates together, and gave entrance to further explosives by which the door was wrecked. The door having been taken to pieces, it was found that the centre layer of the three layers making up the door, represented to be hardened drill proof plate, was not so, and was easily perforated by a hand drill:—Held, that the correspondence could not be construed as containing an absolute warranty on the part of the defendants that the door was proof against the efforts of burglars, without qualification as to time or place. The warranty which was given was that which would have been created by an answer simply in the affirmative to the plaintiff's question whether the door would furnish " a fair protection against burglars;" and the further warranty, in a former part of the correspondence, that the entire surface of the door was protected by hardened drill proof plate composed of chilled steel. The former warranty meant that, so far as the thickness of the plate sused would admit, the securities against burglary were as complete as the experience of safemakers could make them. Both warranties had been broken :- Held, as to damages, that the loss of the money contained in the vault was not a natural consequence of the defects in the vault door, because the presence of these defects was not the reason why the burglars were enabled to break it open; but the plaintiff, having sustained a total loss by reason of the article supplied being valueless, was entitled to recover as damages the price, $250. Express Stipulation of no Warranty

—Fraudulent Concealment of Deject.]
—The or "rot" in a horse is a defect for which a contract for the sale of the horse can be set asside. 2. Even where the seller of a horse sells it without warranty, and the purchaser buys it at his own risk, the seller will be held to have warranted it if at the time of sale he knew that the horse had such a defect; for, in stipulating that there shall be no warranty in these circumstances, he has been guilty of fraud as against the purchaser.

3. When the seller has refused to cancel the sale of a horse having, to his knowledge, such a defect, and persists in his refusal in his defence to an action, he cannot object that the buyer has not offered the horse back to him before action; the fraud practised leaving the purchaser always in a position to rescind the fraudulent sale. Ducharme v. Charest, Q. R. 23 S. C. S2.

Implied Warranty-Latent Defect-Inspection-Caveat emptor.] - The plaintiffs sought to recover from the defendants a sum of money paid on account of the purchase of a boiler and engine purchased by the plaintiffs from the defendants for the purpose of operating a grist mill, claiming that the engine and boiler were not reasonably ht for the purpose for which they were sold :-Held, that the case came within the first class of cases mentioned in Jones v. Just, L. R. 3 Q. B. 202, and that the goods being in esse, and in a position to be inspected by the buyers, and there being no fraud on the part of the sellers, the maxim caveat emptor applied, even though the defect was latent, and could not be discovered on examination. Sale of Horse—Subsequent Development of Vice, 1—A horse sold by the defendant to the plaintiff was guaranteed so and and without vice, fault, or tricks. The evidence shewed that for a period of eight years prior to the sale the horse was without faults or tricks, but that, immediately afterwards, in the hands of the plaintiff, it baulked and kicked when in harness, and was useless for the purpose for which it was purchased. Judgment having been given, on these facts, in favour of the defendant:—Held, McDonald, C.J., dubirante, that the appeal must be dismissed. McGill v. Harris, 36 N. S. Reps. 414.

measure used was not stamped as required by the Weights and Measures Act, R. S. C. c. 104, the onus is on him to prove that the was not properly stamped. Hanbury v. Chambers, 10 Man. L. R. 167, followed. Section 21 of that Act does not remer it illegal for parties to agree upon a sale by some authorized measure, and then that the quantities should be ascertained by authorized weights, and, when lime is ordered by the bushel and supplied by weight, the sale would not be illegal or void if the purchaser knew that such was being done, and the onus is on him to prove that he did not know of it. After the passing of 61 V. c. 30, s. 2 (D.), a bushel of lime was to be determined by weighing, unless a bushel by measure should have been specially agreed upon :-Held, that, as to certain lime furnished by measure after the passing of the Act of 1898, the plaintiff was entitled to recover for it, on the ground that the defendant had not raised at the trial the objection that there had been no agreement for a determination by measure. The de-fendant had voluntarily made certain payments on account of certain other sales of lime which were admitted to have been illegal, but he gave no evidence to shew that, when he made the payments, he was ignorant of the illegality:—Hield, that he could not recover back the amount of such payments. The plaintiff alleged a sale of the whole; the defendants a purchase of a part of the wheat delivered, and a bailment of the remainder: — Held, that the tickets shew additivery only, and that the question of sale or bailment must be determined by extrinsic evidence. On the evidence the trial Judge found for the defendants. The effect of alterations in documents discussed. Cargo v. Jopner, 4 Terr, L. R. 64.

The note not having been paid at maturity, an action was brought in a County Court for the balance due on the goods, being the amount for which the note had been given, and judgment was entered against both husband and wife: -Held, on appeal, that the proper inference was that the husband's note was not taken in satisfaction of the debt, and that there was no election to look to him alone for payment; and the plaintiffs were therefore entitled to sue on the original cause of action; but that they could not have judgment against both husband and wife; and must elect as to which they desired to hold it, and that they could properly hold it against the wife, a recovery against her being now maintainable under against her being now maintainable under the Married Woman's Property Act, R. M. registered his judgment in 1896. In January, 1990, O'B. agreed to sell to McK. the timber for $1,050, payable at various times, part of the consideration being the fees payable to the Crown for Crown grant; and, on these being advanced by McK., the Crown grant was delivered to him as security for such advance. The plaintiff moved for liberty to sell the land under his judgment, and Drake, J., made on order for sale, holding that McK., being an equitable mortgage, was excluded by the statute:—Held, reversing the decision, that the sale should be subject to McK.'s interest. Commissioners-Election of - Duties of President - New Municipality-Procedure-Justice of the Peace-Status of Condidates-Of Mover and Seconder.]—The president of a meeting for the election of school commissioners may have other persons to help in the performance of his duties, provided that he is present during the whole time of the election, personally, authorizing and participating in all that is done. In case of a first election of commissioners in a new municipality, whilst it may be said that this election ought to be presided over Ly a justice of the peace or three electors, if the resident justice of the peace is not in fact known as such, the three electors may call the first meeting. The irregularity in case of such meeting will not nullify the election if such justice of the peace s present and allows nominations to be made without protest, and only calls in question the legality of the meeting after the proclamation of the election of commissioners by the president of the meeting. The lack of status, supposing it existed in certain persons who moved and seconded the nomination of candidates, would not render the election void. The fact of candidates being indebted for school taxes to the neighbouring school municipalities or to municipalities out of which the new municipality has been formed, does not render such candidates ineligible as school commissioners under the terms of art. 148 of the School Code. Contract-Salary - Evidence - Parol Agreement - School Returns-School Regulations.]-In an action in a County Court brought by a public school teacher for a balance of salary, evidence of a parol agreement of January, 1902, and the school returns, were admitted to explain a written contract signed by the parties on the 4th February, providing that the plaintiff should teach for the unexpired portion of the should teach for the unexpired portion of the term ending the 30th June, 1902, for $75. The term contained 121 days, of which the plaintiff's contract covered 100. The plaintiff taught for the unexpired portion of the term, and was paid the agreed salary, and continued teaching the next term, which begun on the 1st July, and ended on the 31st Decemfollowing, but which, in consequence of holidays under the regulations of the board of education, contained only 92 teaching days. The returns sent to the chief superintendent by the teacher and trustees, as required by the school law, stated the salary to be $180 per year. These returns were sworn to by two of the trustees. The trustees tees refused to pay the plaintiff for the short term more than $69, asserting that she was entitled only to the same rate per day as the first term, viz., 75c. per day. Clause 4 provided "that for a term or any part of a school year the teacher is to receive such proportion of the salary stated in the contract as the number of days actually taught bears to the whole number of teaching days in the unexpired portion of the term, instead of "in the school year," as in the form prescribed by the regulations, clause 5 of which provides that "in default of written notice the contract shall continue in force from school year to school year." The County Court Judge, reading the written agreement and the parol evidence together, found that the plaintiff was entitled to $50 for the short term:—Held, that the finding was right. R. 539) had been dissolved the defendant school board passed a new resolution asking the village council to pass by-law for the issue of debentures for $12,500 for the purchase of a school site and the erection of a school house. This was presented on the same day to the council, who repealed their by-law and passed a new one as re-The plaintiff then brought this acquested. tion to have the new by-law declared invalid, alleging that notice was not given to the members of the board of the object of the meeting, and that the council meeting was an adjourned one and no notice of this bylaw had been given: -Held, that, in the absence of some rule requiring the object of the meeting to be stated in the notice calling it, it was unnecessary to specify the business to be transacted. Rex v. Pulsford, 8 B. & C. 350, and La Compagnie de Mayville v. Whit-ley, [1896] I Ch. 788, distinguished. Marsh v. Huron College, 27 Gr. 605, and Cannon v. Toronto Corn Exchange, 5 A. R. 268, referred to. It was the duty of every member of the council to be present at the adjourned meeting, and it was competent to the members present to transact any business that might have been transacted at the original meeting. As the later by-law was passed only to overcome certain defects in the earlier one, it might well have been passed without any new requisition. The by-law sufficiently recited the amount of the debt intended to be created, as it recited that application had been made by the school board to the council to raise $12,500 by debentures, and it authorized an issue to that amount:—Held, also, that s.-s. 1 of s. 386 of the Municipal Act, 1903, authorized the issue of Jahor and the superfection of of debentures providing for the payment of principal and interest together by equal instal ments spread over the whole period for which ments apread over the whote period for white the debentures are to run, and is alternative to the provisions of s.-s. 5 of s. 384 of that Act. Payment to City High School for County Pupils Dispute as to-Reference to County Court Judge—Absence of Jurisdic-tion—Res Judicata—High Schools Act—Payment for Particular Year.] - The town of Windsor separated from the county of Essex on 1st January, 1881, and remained separated it became a city on 14th April, 1892. The High Schools Act was passed on 4th May, 1891. Until then the county was under no legal obligation to contribute towards the support of a high school situated in a town separated from the county, or in a city, but by s. 31, s.-s. 2, a change was introduced, and a county became liable thereafter to pay its proportionate share, upon the trustees of the high school notifying the county clerk that such high school was open to county pupils. Acting under this provision the trustees of the Windsor High School, on 11th June, 1891, notified the county clerk of the county of Essex, and the next day a meeting was held between the warden of the county and the Windsor high school board, for the purpose of settling the amount which the county should pay, and a proposition was made by the warden to pay $500 as a fixed sum per annum, but not accepted by the board. Then on 30th December, 18st, this cheque was issued to and received by the plaintiffs: "$500. Treasurer of the county of Essex, pay to the order of Alex'r Bartlet five hundred dollars due from the county to him for amount granted to Windsor high school for 1891. F. B. Bouteiller, warden of the county of Essex. Office of the County Council, Sandwich, Decr. 30th, 1891." The defendants had previously The defendants had previously made grants in each year for several years prior to 1891, but these were wholly voluntary, and not in any way based upon allowance of expenditure, as became the case under the Act of 1891, and as made in each year were plainly for that year and not for a previous year, and were usually so expressed in the cheques. The next previous one, the only one which could bear upon the question in this action, bears date 23rd January, 1891, and is for $500 "for amount granted to Windsor high school for 1890." Then following upon the cheques before set out are yearly cheques for 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895, 1896, and 1897, all paid at or near the end of each of these years, all expressing on their face for what year they were given, and all in like manner accepted and received by plaintiffs without objection. In 1898 the cheque expresses on its face that it was for the year 1897, and the same with the cheque issued in 1899, which on its face says that it is for the year 1898. But the cheque issued in 1900 again follows the course of the first seven, and says it is for the year 1900 and the same in 1901 and 1902. Certain statements submitted from time by plaintiffs to defendants were produced and much relied on by plaintiffs. They shewed that the amounts payable from year to year were calculated upon the previous year's attendance, which was what the statute intended, but this circumstance did not alter the fact really in question that the amount to be paid in 1903, however arrived at, was in fact the payment for that, and not for the previous year, and therefore one to which the reduction authorized by the statute 3 Edw. VII. c, 33 would apply. The defendants contention is correct, and the appeal should be allowed and the action dismissed, both with costs. Windsor Board of Education v. County of Essex, 5 O. W. R. 726, 10 O. L. R. 60.

School Board-Notice of Meeting-Terminating Contract with School Master — Salary—Division Court.]—The plaintiff was the master of a public school. The contract between him and the school board gave either party the right to terminate it on one month's There were eight members of the notice. school board, and at a meeting on the 19th February a resolution was passed instructing the secretary to notify the plaintiff that the contract between him and the board should cease on the 31st March, which he accordingly did. The notice of the meeting given to the members of the board did not state that the matter of determining the plaintiff's contract was to be considered, and some of the members had no knowledge of this fact, nor had the plaintiff any knowledge or notice of the Only six members of the board meeting. attended the meeting, of whom four voted in favour of the resolution, and two against it: -Held, that the above resolution and notice that the above resolution and notice to the plaintiff in pursuance of it was not a fair or proper exercise of the power and option to determine the plaintiff's contract contained in it, and the agreement with the plaintiff was not terminated thereby. The plaintiff brought this action under the above circumstances, claiming a balance of salary, and had recovered judgment for $132.03:— Held, that the matters of difference between the parties fell within R. S. O. c. 292, s. 77, s.-s. 7, and a Division Court had jurisdiction. Greendees v. Picton Public School Board, 21 Occ. N. 520, 2 O. L. R. 387.

School Rates — Partnership — Co-owners of Mine—Assessment.] — The Act to amend and consolidate the Acts relating to public instruction, Acts 1805, c. 1, in relation to the assessment of property for school purposes, provides that all ratable property before property on any association, corporation, or firm shall be assessed in the name of the firm, association, or corporation:—Held, that the defendants were properly assessed as a firm, in respect of a mining property owned by them in the plaintiffs' section, the property having been purchased by the defendants with a view to working or sale, and having been worked by them jointly for upwards of two years, the proceeds, after paying expenses, being equally divided. The evidence shewed a community of interest in the profits and losses and capital employed:—Held, that the defendants were partners in the business of carrying on the mine, and that their liability, as such, could not be affected by evidence on their part denying the existence of a partnership or authority on the part of either to bind the other. Montagu School Trustees v. Oland, 35 N. S. Reps. 409.

School Sections-Subdivision into-Mandanus.]—The Public Schools Act, 1 Edw. VII. c, 39, s, 12, enacts as follows:—"The municipal council of every township (except where township boards have been established) shall sub-divide the township into school sections, so that every part of the township may be included in some section, and shall distinguish each section by a number; provided that no section formed hereafter shall include any territory distant more than three miles in a direct line from the school house." The applicants asked for an order of mandamus commanding the respondents to subdivide the township into school sections:-Held, that there must be some discretion left to a township council as to when the township shall be subdivided; and, that even where the majority of the council may be mistaken as to what would be best, which did not appear to be the case here, the Court will be slow to interfere if the duly constituted governing body have honestly attempted to do their duty; and upon the facts, as proved in the evidence here, this did not appear a case in which it would be just or convenient that an order of mandamus should be made. Selection of Site—Arbitration and Avaral.)—Under s. 34 of the Public Schools Act, I Edw. VII. c. 39 (O.), the arbitrators appointed in consequence of a majority of the ratepayers at a special meeting differing (from the trustees) as to the suitability of the site for a school house selected by the trustees, can determine only whether or not the site selected by the trustees is a suitable one; they have no power to select another site. Selection of School Site - Trustees-Ratepayers-Difference-Award-Invalidity-Mandamus-Estoppel.]-It is only in case of a difference between the trustees, on the one hand, and a majority of the ratepayers at a special meeting, on the other, as to a school site selected by the trustees, that an arbitration is to be had, under s. 31 of the Public Schools Act, R. S. O. 1897 c, 292. And where a majority of the ratepayers at a special meeting voted in favour of a change of school site, without any selection of site having been first made by the trustees :- Held, that there was no foundation for an arbitration, and that an award made by arbitrators appointed in the manner prescribed by s.-s. 2, whether such award was or was not valid on its face, was an absolutely void proceeding, and no answer to a motion by the trustees for a mandamus to the corporation requiring them to pass a by-law for the issue of debentures to provide funds for the purchase of a school site and the erection of a school house in pursuance of the vote of the ratepayers. Quære, whether the award was valid on its face, inasmuch as it did not shew a difference between the trustees and the ratepayers :--Held, also, that there could be no estoppe against the applicants, or waiver of the public right. Judgment of a Divisional Court. 22 Occ. N. 291, 1 O. W. R. 387, 447, 4 O. L. R. 272, affirmed. In reCarteripht Public School Trustees and Toransinj of Carteripht, 23 Occ. N. 216, 5 O. L. R. 689. 2 O. W. R. 330.

Trustee—Election of—Equality of Votes—Casting Vote—Complaint—Jurisdiction of County Court Judge.]—Upon the complaint of S. of the election of I. as a public school trustee for the year 1902 for a ward in a city:—Held, that the Public Schools Act, I Diw. VII. c. 39, s. 63, presupposes an election, and that, inasmuch as in the election in question there was a tie, and the proper officer had net yet given the casting vote, there was not an election within the meaning of the section, and the Judge of the County Court had no jurisdiction to hear the complaint. Quiere, whether the Jefendants could resist the action which was brought in the name of the school orporation, the acknowledged owner of the goods, and whether the defendants in any case could do more than rpply to the Court to stay the use of the name of the corporation in the action, on the ground that its use was not authorized by those who were lawfully the trustees. Trustees—Power to Borrow — Ordinary Espenditure.]—The plaintiff, one of the trustees of a school section, at the instance of his co-trustees, lent to the trustees a sum of money required for payment of the teacher's salary:—Held, that, as the amount borrowed was to be applied to ordinary expenditure, and did not increase the liabilities of the corporation, no special authority to borrow was necessary. McNeil v, Victoria School Trustee, 34 N. S. Reps. 546.

Trustees—Qualification — Contract with Roard—Termination.]—The lack of qualification of a school trustee which results from his having a contract with the school board, ends with such contract, and after he has been paid the amount owing in respect of it, he is no longer liable to be unseated on this ground. A school trustee who, at the order of the beard, causes certain work to be done on account of the board, and pays for it himself, and afterwards is paid what he has expended and for his time in overseeing the work, is not a contractor with the board within the meaning of art. 147 of the School Code, and does not by thus acting forfeit his seat. Larochelle v. Roi, Q. R. 27 S. C. 55.

Trustees — Sceretary-Treasurer of Board—Security — Validity.] — The security furnished by the sceretary-treasurer of a board of school commissioners and accepted by the chairman, is not void because it is not made by notarial act nor by act sous seing privé signed and acknowledged before a justice of the peace, in accordance with art. 2088, R. S. Q.; but such formality being only accidental and not essential to the validity of the security, a security sous seing privé not signed and acknowledged before a justice is a valid engagement on the part of the surety. 2. Although art. 2089, R. S. Q., says that the security should be given jointly and severally by two solvent sureties, a security given by a single surety is not less valid. 3. The neglect to transmit the security to the super-intendent of public instruction is without effect upon the validity of the security. St. Norleet School Commissioners v. Paquette, Q. R. 18 S. C. 289.

Trustees - Teacher-Power of Dismissal Inquiry.]—Under s. 16 (7) of the Public Schools Act, 1 Edw. VII. c. 40 (O.), which enables the board of education of a municipality "to appoint and remove such teachers, officers, and servants, as they may deem ex-pedient," members of the board are the sole judges of what they may deem expedient in each particular case in the matter of the re-moval or dismissal of a teacher on the ground of unsuitability for the position. They may institute a private inquiry into such a matter without allowing the usual safeguards of representation by counsel to the person affected, or they may dispense with such investigation and proceed on their own conviction of what is right from a general knowledge of the situation; they may also act on the report of an inspector, although irregularly obtained, or may remit the matter to a committee and act on its report, and they should not be interfered with by injunction in any action they may be advised to take. Although honorary trustees of the property held for the purposes of public education, their relation is not in any sense fiduciary. Cases of charitable endowments, in which property is clothed with a trust, considered. Dunn v. Foronto Board of Education, 24 Occ. N. 223, 7 O. L. R. 451, 3 O. W. R. 393.

Union of School Sections—Powers of Arbitrators—Appeal to County Council—I Edw. VII, c. 39, s. 42.]—An application was made to a township council to alter the boundaries of school sections 12, 13, and 14, by taking about 1,200 acres from 13 and adding them to 12, and by taking about 2,000 acres from 14 and adding them to 13. The township council refused the application; an appeal was taken to the county council against such refusal; and arbitrators were appointed by the latter council under the authority of s. 42 (3) of the Public Schools Act, 1 Edw. VII. c. 39. The arbitrators made no alteration in the boundaries of any of the sections, but by their award assumed to unite sections 12 and 13, and recommended the building of a new school house in a central position in the thus united sections :-Held, that it was not within the power of the arbitrators to unite the two school sections upon an appeal against a refusal to comply with an application to alter boundaries only. The arbitrators are given power "to form, divide, unite, or alter the boundaries." but that means to form, divide, unite, or alter in accordance with the subject matter of the appeal. Award set aside without costs. In re Southwold Public School Sections, 22 Occ. N. 62, 3 O. L. R. Sl. 1 O. W. R. 32.

In making the levy the town council exacted payment from the plaintiff of $1.95, which was his assessed proportion of the amount necessary to pay the debenture instalment, and which he paid under protest and now sought to recover back from the municipality, upon the ground that the council had no power to assess him, he being a separate school supporter:-Held, that the plaintiff was not liable for the rate in question, Construction of s. 14 of the North-West Territories Act, R. S. C. c. 50, as amended by 61 V. c. 5, s. 1, and s. 36 of the School Ordinance. McCarthy v. Town of School Ordinance. M. Regina, 21 Occ. N. 321.

Protestant School - Pupil of another Faith - Scholarship - Withholding-Mandamus School Regulations.] — The petitioner, a British subject, resident in Montreal, but not the owner of real estate, was by religion a Jew. His son was admitted to a Protestant school under the control of the respondents, and by his success in his classes and in the examinations would, in ordinary course, have been entitled to a commissioners scholarship, which gives a right to a high school course free of tuition fees. The com-missioners having, under their regulations, withheld the scholarship, the petitioner applied for a writ of mandamus to compel the respondents to grant his son such scholarship : -Held, that the remedy by mandamus was the proper one under the circumstances, the petitioner alleging the refusal on the part of the respondents to perform a duty incumbent on them by law. 2. The petitioner not being a Protestant, and not being the owner of real estate inscribed on the Protestant panel, son was not entitled, as of right, to admission to the Protestant schools. 3. His admission to a Protestant school by grace of the Protestant school commissioners did not amount to a warranty that the existing school regulations were to be permanent and un-changed throughout the entire scholastic course. 4. The respondents had, within the limits of their corporate authority, power to change the school regulations from year to year, and particularly in regard to prizes and other competitive rewards; and, consequently, they had power to provide by regulation that the child of a Jew, not the owner of real estate, should be ineligible to compete for a commissioners' scholarship, Pinsler v. Protestant Board of School Commissioners, Q. R. 23 S. C. 365.

Qualification of Teachers-Construction of Statute - Religious Communit, Status.] - The general policy declar d by later statutory enactments is to r quire teachers of separate schools to under the same examinations and receive the sam certificates as common school teachers. some persons are exempted from its immediate operation, and the word "persons" 36 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 294, is to be read as "individuals;" and where, as in that enactment, there is found in unambiguous lan-guage a general declaration as to the qualification required, any restriction upon that declaration should not be extended beyond what the language, construed in the ordinary and natural meaning of the words, and in light of the context, clearly requires. The light of the concext, clearly requires, Judgment of MacMahon, J., 24 Oce. N. 318, 8, 0. L. R. 135, 4, 0. W. R. 58, affirmed, Grattan v. Ottawa Roman Catholic Separate School Trustees, 25 Oce. Supporters of — Assessment for Public School Debts.]—A ratepayer rated as a supporter of a separate school where a separate school district has been formed is not liable to be assessed for a debenure indebtedness of the public school incurrel prior to the establishment of the separate school district. McCarthy v. Town of Regina, 21 Occ. N. 321, 5 Terr. L. R. 71.

Teachers - Religious Residence - Contract.] - The Ottawa separate school trustees entered into an agreement to secure the services of Christian Brothers as teachers in a proposed separate school for boys, the agreement among other things providing for the erection by the trustees of a house or residence with chapel, etc., for the Brothers, and the advance of $100 for each of the Brothers for furniture. this furniture to become the property of the Brothers at the rate of one-fifth for each year. the contract to be in force for ten years unless previously put an end to by notice in a prescribed way:—Held, that the agree-ment was invalid because (1) Christian Brothers as such are not qualified to teach in separate schools in Ontario; (2) school trustees have no authority to expend money in erecting a house for teachers; or (3) to enter into a contract with a teacher extending beyond a year. Grattan v. Ottaica Separate School Trustees, 24 Occ. N. 319, 8 0. L. R. 135, 4 O. W. R. 58, 389.

Withdrawal of Supporter—Continuance of Liability.] — Property which was sowned by a separate school supporter and so assessed for rates imposed under by-law passed before the time when the supporter has withdrawn, does not remain liable for such rates in the future unless the property is still owned by him at the time of each assessment, and he resides in the section. But the ratepayer who was such when the loan was effected remains liable for future assessments to the extent of the ratable property he possesses, so long as he is resided within the school district. The defendant was adjudged to pay a fine of $20 and the costs of the prosecutior, and he paid both:—Held, on appeal, that the conviction should be quashed, and repayment of the fine and costs ordered. Payment of the fine does not bar the right of appeal, when the payment is made contemporaneously with the expression of intention to appeal, and under pain of distress. SET-OFF.

Account — Disputed Items—Absence of Liquidation.] — Set-off will not be allowed when the amount of the account which the defendant assumes to set off cannot be determined without a long discussion and contestation of the majority of the items. 2. A defendant in such a case cannot complain of a judgment which allows him a set-off in part, to which he had no right, and properly rejects the remainder of his account. Pharand v. Declandes, Q. R. 24 S. C. 324.

Action on Contract — Damages for Breach, —Where an action is brought on a contract, and the defendant pleads non-ful-filment of contract, he may plead as a set-off damages which are alleged to have directly resulted from the negligence and defaults of the plaintiff in connection with the contract sued on. Latour v. Yasinooski, Q. R. 29 S. C. 292.

Bank — Winding-up — Promissory Note Maturing after Order—Set-off of Deposit to Credit of Indorser—Note made by Municipal Officers for Municipal Purposes — Personal Lability — Set-off of Deposit to Credit of Indorser—Note Officers for Municipal Purposes — Personal Lability — Set-off of Deposit to Credit of Municipality. — The funds of a township corporation were deposited in a chartered bank to the credit of an account kept in the name of "A. M., treasurer of R." The township council purported, by by-law, to authorize the treasurer and reve to borrow from the bank money to be used for drainage purposes. Accordingly the treasurer made a promissory note which he signed in his own name with the words "treasurer of the township of R." after it, in favour of the reeve, and the reeve indorsed it, signing his own name with the words "reeve of R." after it. This note was discounted by the bank, the proceeds placed to the credit of the account referred to, and paid out for the drainage purposes specified. The bank being in liquidation under the Dominion Winding-up Act, the liquidators sued the reeve and treasurer in their personal capacities upon the note, which matured after the winding-up Act, the liquidators sued the reeve and treasurer in their personal capacities upon the note, which matured after the winding-up Act, the liquidation under the Dominion Winding-up Act, the liquidation the form the reeve was entitled to set off, against the plaintiffs' claim upon it, the balance in the bank to the credit of the account kept in the name of the treasurer at the date of the winding-up order:—Held, that the defendant her reeve was entitled to set off, against the plaintiffs' claim upon it, the balance in the bank to the credit of the winding-up order; and the defendants were allowed to amend their pleadings so as to claim that set-off. Bank — Winding-up—Transfer of Assets to Debtor within 30 days—Moneys Deposited by Third Parties to Satisfy Debt.]—After a bank have suspended payment, and their insolvency is notorious, compensation of a debt due to the bank cannot be effected by a transfer to the debtor of debts due by the bank to third paries, where such transfer has been made to the debtor after the suspension and within 30 days prior to winding-up proceedings under the Winding-up Act. This rule is not affected by the circumstance that the amounts offered in compensation consisted of moneys deposited with the bank by such third parties, for the special purpose of aiding the debtor to meet his indebtedness to the bank, but not transferred to the debtor until after the suspension of payment. Communacté des Sœurs de la Charité de la Providence v. Kent, Q. R. 13 K. B. 483.

Bank in Liquidation - Deposit - Note Discounted and not yet Due-Renunciation of Term-Indorser-Intervention - Costs.] -A deposit made in a bank is a loan to such bank, and art, 1190, which says that a debt arising from a deposit shall not be the subject of set-off, does not prevent the same deject of set-off, does not prevent the same de-posit being set off by a debt due to the bank by the depositor, 2. The set-off of a debt due to a bank by the claim resulting from a deposit in such bank, may be effectuated up to the time of service of a petition for the winding-up of the bank, provided that both debts are equally liquidated and exigible. 3. Nevertheless the toru of the europers of Nevertheless, the term of the currency of a bill of exchange or promissory note is to be regarded as a stipulation in favour both of the creditor and of the debtor, and, therefore, the maker or indorser of a note discounted in a bank cannot, by renouncing the benefit of the time which the note has to run, set off the debt arising upon such note by the sum, which he has on deposit in the bank. 4. The indorser of a note discounted in a bank does not become the debtor of such bank until the note has been protested for non-payment and notice of protest given to him. 5. Although a creditor of a bank in liquidation has a right to intervene in a suit pending between the liquidators and debtor of the bank, who alleges that his debt has been extinguished by set-off, in or-der to watch the proceedings and take measures necessary for the protection of his rights, such creditor will be ordered to pay the costs incurred by the debtor of the bank if he produces, in opposition of the demand of the latter, a useless contestation founded upon grounds which have already been set up by the liquidators. Vanier v. Kent. Q. R. 11 K. B. 373.

Debt Due by Mandatory — Damages for Non-performance.]—Where the claim is for ascertained sums of money due by virtue of bills or notes or of the receipt of money as mandatory, the defendant cannot set off damages accruing by reason of the plaintiff having failed to discharge the obligations which he assumed by the contract of mandate. London Guarantee and Accident Co. v. Groilt, Q. R. 18 S. C. 398.

Goods Sold — Damages for Short Detivery—Cross-demand—Pleading.]—In an action for goods sold and delivered, the defendant cannot plead set-off of damages alleged to have been suffered by him in consequence of the plaintiff's default to complete delivery of the whole quantity of goods stipulated in the contract. Such claim should be urged by cross-demand. Walshaw v. Rosenfield, Q. R. 24 S. C. SO.

Money Advanced by Another—Liquidated Amount — Costs,—One who has paid money for the benefit of a third person, who has contracted to repay it, may claim such sum from the third person or set it off, although it is asserted that the money was furnished by another, to whom it must be repaid. 2. In order to have a set-off it is sufficient that the debt which the debtor asserts as a set-off shall be liquidated; it is not necessary that the debt against which the set-off is asserted shall be liquidated. 3. Costs due to a party upon a verdiet of acquittal, where the complainant has been ordered to pay the costs, may be the subject of set-off, for such costs may be easily ascertained. Bérard v. Dord, Q. R. 24 S. C. 298.

Plea — Objection to — Practice.] — The obligation to a plea of set-off, as being a matter for an incidental demand and not a defence to the action, should be raised by means of exception to the form, not of inscription in law. Levinson v. Renaud, 6 Q. P. R. 114.

Pleading — Acknowledgment — Trial—Counterclaim—Tender.]—A plea of compensation, setting forth a contra-account, followed by an allegation of acknowledgment and promise to pay by the plaintiff, will not be rejected on a reply in law. 2. The Judge presiding at the trial has, however, power to order that the settlement of account and acknowledgment by the plaintiff, alleged by the defendant, be proved by him before he is allowed to prove his counterclaim. 3. The validity of a tender, especially in commercial matters, may be a question of fact, and allegations relating to a tender will not be rejected on answer in law, although the tender may appear not to have been made in the manner prescribed by law for legal tenders, Laurentide Pulp Co. v. Curtis, 4 Q. P. R.

Pleading — Damages — Construction of Contract—Penal Clause—Waiver.] — A debt which is not clearly liquidated and exigible cannot be set off in compensation of a claim upon a promissory note except by means of a cross-demand made under art. 217, C. P. Q., of the province of Quebec; Nesbitt and Idington, JJ., dissenting. By a clause in a contract for the construction of works the completion thereof was to be made within a specified time, in default of which it was agreed that the contractor should pay "as liquidated damages and not as a penalty the sum of $50 for every subsequent day until the completion." The works were not completed within the time limited, and both parties joined in a petition to the municipal corporation for an extension of the time during which subsidies it had granted to wards the cost of the works should be earned. The petition was granted, and the works were completed within the extension of time so allowed:—Held, Nesbitt and Idington, JJ., dissenting, that damages accruing under the clause in question did not, upon mere default. become sufficiently liquidated and ascertained to be set off in compensation against a claim upon a promissory note :- Held, per Girouard and Davies, JJ. (Nesbitt and Idiugton, JJ., contra), that by joining in the petition for extension of time the party in whose favour the penal clause might take effect had waived the right to claim damages thereunder during the period of the extension so obtained in the interests of both parties to the contract. SETTLED ESTATES.

Leave to Mortgage—Express Declarations in Settlement.]—This was an application by the trustees of a settled estate, under R. S. O. 1897 c. 71, for leave to mortgage the estate for the purpose of building, the existing buildings having been destroyed by fire. The settlement contained a clause that the trustees might "sell, but not mortgage, the trust property or any part therefore."—Held, that this clause of the settlement was not an express declaration that the lands should not be mortgaged within the meaning of s. 37 of the Settled Estates Act; and merely meant that the power of sale given to the trustee was not to be construed as including a power to mortgage. In re Curry and Watson's Settlement, 24 Oct. N. 291. 7 O. L. R. 701, 3 O. W. N. 776.

One of the adult children died and the youngest child had not yet become of age. Upon petition under the Settled Estates Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 71, s. 2 (1), Chancellor Boyd held with some hesitation that the case came within the scope of the Act. In re Cornell, 5 O. W. R. 60, 9 O. L. R. 128.

SETTLEMENT.

Deed — Substitution — Donatio Mortis Causa, —An acte by which the children assign to their mother the enjoyment of immovables devised by their father, and stipulate that after her death they shall enjoy them in the same fashion, and that the property will go to their children, does not effect a substitution but a donatio mortis causa, which is void. Kannon v. Kannon, 6 Q. P. R. 455.

Gift — Stipulation in Favour of Third Party—Revocation before Acceptance — Relinquishment by Grantee.] — A stipulation made by a donor for the benefit of a third party, as a condition of the gift, can be revoked without the assent of the third party, so long as he has not given notice of his intention to take advantage of it. A relinquishment by the donee of the charge in her favour is deemed a revocation of the stipulation made for the benefit of the third party. Guerette V, Quellet, Q. R. 27 S. C. 45.

Life Interest in Land-Gift Over to Children—Death of Grantee without Children—Testamentary Pisposition by Grantee
—Breaking of Entail—Gift—Trust.] — By deed of gift inter vivos 'he grantor granted to the grantee, pour l'ui e. les siens de son côté, estoc et ligne, certaix lands for the benefit of the grantee during his life, with-out power to dispose of the same in the meantime; and directed that the property upon his death should go to the children born of his marriage. On these conditions the grantor transferred to the grantee all his rights in the property given "to vest it in the grantee et ses héritiers de son côté, estoc et ligne:"—Held, that the deed of gift created an entail; and, in case of the death of the grantee in tail without children, this entail became broken, and a testamentary disposition of the property made by the grantee in tail was valid. (2) That this grant in tail did not extend to relations of the grantee other than children; and that the phrase "pour lui et les siens de son côté, estoc et ligne," did not constitute a fidéicommis, even under the law in force at the time the gift was made (1844), the only effect of this clause being to constitute an appointment in favour of the heirs who would have taken in succession to the grantee in case he should not have legally disposed of the pro-perty otherwise, (3) That the restraint on alienation in the deed applied only to the enjoyment of the property by the grantee in tail, and did not affect the entail created in favour of the children of the grantee, nor the power of the grantee to dispose of the subject matter of the gift, in case of the failure of the entail. Crevier v. Cloutier, Q. R. 26 S. C. 373.

thereof being given to plaintid's attorneys, and evident collusion is shewn against the latter by the plaintiff and defendant, the plaintiff's attorneys will be entitled to take judgment against the defendant for their costs. 2. Such costs do not comprise the costs of appointment of the plaintiff as utrix to minors, there being no lien de droit, in respect thereof, between the defendant and the plaintiff's attorneys. Skelly v. Thibault,
5 Q. P. R. 75.

Fraud—Costs.] — As a general rule, a settlement of the suit by the parties there to is valid, unless it be made in fraud of the rights of the plaintiff's attorney, in which case it will be carried out subject to the obligation to pay the plaintiff's attorney his costs. 2. The mere fact that the settlement was made by the defendant without paying the plaintiff's attorney his costs, although aware that the plaintiff was unable to pay them, does not constitute fraud, more particularly where it appears that the plaintiff's action was unfounded, and that the defendant was induced by her knowledge of the plaintiff's inability to pay costs, and her reluctance to continue the contestation under such circumstances, to make a settlement by which the plaintiff profited to some extent. Bond - Condition on Appointment to Office—Resignation of Office — Re-appointment—Subsequent Breaches—Liability—Res Judicata.] - The plaintiff resigned his office of sheriff, and the defendant was appointed in his place under a commission containing a condition that he should pay the plaintiff "out of the revenues of the said office" a certain sam for his life; and he gave a bond to the plaintiff for the due fulfilment of the condition. Finding that the revenues were not sufficient to pay the amount, the defendant resigned his office, and soon afterwards was re-appointed under a commission with-out any such condition. In an action on the bond, the plaintiff obtained judgment for the amount of the penal sum, and damages were assessed for the breaches up to the time of the defendant's resignation. A petition was subsequently presented by the plaintiff, asking for assessment of damages for alleged breaches since the re-appointment and for execution. On the trial of an issue as to whether the plaintiff was entitled to execution for any further damage.—Held, that want of good faith was not o be imputed to the Crown, who had the right to permit, and did permit, the defendant's resignation, and by accepting it made it effectual, and thereby discharged the condition and all further liability on the bond; that the condition was attached to the first commission, and the annuity was payable only during the occu-pancy of the office thereunder, and when that commission was gone there ceased to be any contract to pay it. Semble, that there was no implied obligation on the defendant's part to refrain from invoking the consideration of the Crown to relieve him from the obligation it had imposed upon him :-Held, also, that the question was not res judicata by the principal judgment, and that the judgment upon the issue was appealable as a final judgment as to matters set up as a de-fence to further liability in respect of alleged breaches subsequent to the new appointment. Smart v. Dana, 2 O. W. R. 287, 3 O. W. R. 88, 5 O. W. R. 387, 5 O. L. R. 451, 9 O. R. R. 427, 23 Occ. N. 476, 24 Qcc. N. 436, 25 Occ. N. 456.

Capias — Gaol — Mileage.]—A sheriff is required to safely keep a person arrested on a capias, and, as there is no common gaol in Vancouver, the sheriff of Vancouver is entitled to lodge a person arrested in his bailiwick in New Westminster gaol and charge mileage therefor. Carson v. Carson, 10 B. C. R. 83.

Execution — Wrongful Act—Indemnity—Solicitor — Directions — Overcharges — Error — Knowledge — Recovery.]—Where a sherift had been mulct in the costs of an action brought ugainst him for wrongfully charging certain lands with an execution, he was held entitled to recover in an action brought by him against the solicitor who gave him directions to charge the lands, for indemnity against such costs, although in giving such directions the solicitor acted merely as agent for his client. 2. Upon a counterclaim of the solicitor against the sheriff for alleged overcharges:—Held, assuming that there was an error in the charges, that, as there was on erior in the charges, that, as there was no evidence that the solicitor was not aware of such error when he paid the charges, he could not recover. Robertson v. Taylor, 21 Occ. N. 270.

Executing Writ — Public Officer—Notice of Action.] — The sheriff is not, when executing a fi. fia, at the suit of a private individual, a public officer entitled to notice and other protection under s. 468 of the Judicature Ordinance, R. O. 1888 c. 8. Mr. Whirter v. Corbett, 4 C. P. 203, followed. MacDonnell v. Robertson, 1 Terr. L. R. 438.

—The meaning and effect of the Judicature Ordinance, R. O. (1888) c. 58, s. 461, providing for the payment to officers, in advance, of the fees and allowances fixed by tariff, discussed:—Seluble, a sheriff is not under that section entitled to demand in advance his charges for mileage or seizure before executing a fi. fa. goods:—Held, that the finding of the trial Judge that the conduct of the first execution creditor's advecate did not have such effect that the fi. awas not originally placed, or had ceased to be, in the sheriff's hands for execution, was justified by the evidence. Parsons v. Hutchings, 1 Terr. L. R. 317.

Fees—Re-sale on False Bidding.] — When a property is resold upon false bidding, the sheriff is only entitled to one commission and tax, as if there had been but one sale. Niewwenthuyse V. Town of Farnham, 5 Q. P. R. 160.

Fees—Seizure of Land under Execution—Divisios', into Lota, 1—An immovable, within the raeaning of art, 706, C. P. C., does not necessarily mean a cadastral lot, but an exploitation; and an immovable composed of several lots upon the official plan and book of reference constitutes, notwithstanding, only one immovable if it constitutes only a single exploitation, 2. Article 7 of the tariff of fees for sheriffs, allowing an additional fee for every additional lot seized, must be interpreted as referring to art, 6 of the same tariff and as meaning every additional immovable; so, if the bailiff has grouped several lots according to their respective situations to constitute different immovables, the sherifican charge an additional fee only for each group or additional immovable. Sale under Execution-Proceeds Stolen from Sheriff's Bailiff-Responsibility - Sat-isfaction of Judgment-Advertisement of Sale —Chattel Mortgage.] — 1. Notwithstanding the provisions of s, 21 of the Executions Act. R. S. M. 1902 c. 58, a sale of goods by a sheriff's bailiff under fi. fa. was, in the peculiar circumstances set forth in the statement below, held to have been good, although made immediately after seizure and without the notice required by that section. 2. A sheriff is responsible for all money realized by his bailiff by a sale under a fi. fa., though the money be stolen from the bailiff as a result of his carelessness and never comes to the sheriff's hands. 3. A seizure by a sheriff of sufficient goods to satisfy a judgment in part will be a discharge to the debtor as to such part. 4. When the goods seized are subject to a chattel mortgage, the sale of the goods themselves, instead of only the equity of redemption, will be good unless objected to by the mortgagee. 5. It is not an absolute rule that a sheriff's sale under execution must be for ready money; but, if the sheriff does not comply with such rule, he will be responsible for the money if he fails to collect it. 6. The fact that the sheriff failed to comply with s. 25 of the Executions Act, by advertising the amount realized and keeping the money to be distributed ratably, is no answer to the defendant's claim to have such amount credited upon the execution against him, when nearly three years have elapsed, and there is no evidence that any other execution against the defendant has been placed in the sheriff's hands. Massey-Harris Co. v. Molland. '15 Man. L. R. 384. 1 W. L. R. 424. Seizure of Company's Property under Execution — Interruption by windingup order-Right to fees and poundage—Rule 1190. Re Palmerston Packing Co., Allan's Claim, 4 O. W. R., 339.

Seizure under Execution — Levy — Sale after Commencement of Artion against Sheriff — Damages — Value of Goods Sold.] — Goods solzed by the sheriff under an execution at the suit of E. v. R., were claimed by E. R., the wife of R., as her property. After a formal levy it was arranged between the sheriff and E. R. that she should hold the goods for the sheriff until they were required for sale under the execution. After the seizure and before sale, a suit was commenced by E. R. against the sheriff, and a declaration was fined containing two counts: 1st, for seizing, taking away, and converting the plaintiff's goods; 2nd, for detention. Part of the goods seized were sold, and part released:—Held, that a verdict for the full value of the goods sold was proper, though the sale did not take place until after the commencement of the action; that, as far as the sheriff was concerned, the levy was effectual and complete. Rideout v. Fibbits, 36 N. B. Reps, 251.

Theft of Money Received by Bailiff under Fi. Fa. - Entry of Satisfaction-Liability of Sheriff for Acts of Bailiff. - In January, 1900, the plaintiff recovered judgment against the defendant for $436.98, and issued to a sheriff a fi. fa, against the defendant's goods. The same sheriff received a fi. fa. against the defendant's goods at the suit of H. & Co. The sherifi issued to one A. as his bailiff his warrants to realize under the writs. The defendant died, and his executors decided to sell his chattels by auction, and employed A., as auctioneer, to conduct the sale. He advertised the sale as being by order of the executors to be held on the 5th April, 1901. Some of the chattels were under mortgages from the defendant to a trustee for the Union Bank of Canada. A, sold the goods and placed the moneys received in a cash box, which was stolen:—Held, that the judgment was discharged by the seizure and sale to the extent of the amount realized and applicable to the fi. fa., and that it has since been discharged in full by the payment made directly to the sheriff. Order made to dispense with the signature of the satisfaction piece and for satisfaction to be entered. The execu-tors' costs of the motion and of entering satisfaction to be paid by the plaintiffs and the sheriff. A sheriff is liable not merely for moneys received by his bailiff, but also for those received by the bailiff's clerk: Gregory v. Cotterell, 5 E. & B. 571. A. sold the goods under the fi, fa, and received the procoeds for the sheriff, and his receipt was, in law, that of the sheriff. All the time he held the money he held it for the sheriff. The loss was the result of A.'s carelessness, and that must be held to be in law the carelessness of the sheriff himself, so far as liability to others was concerned. M. Harris Co. v. I. BILL OF LADING.

Custom of Port.]—A trade custom, in order to be binding upon the public generally, must be shewn to be known to all persons in whose interests it would be to have a knowledge of its existence, and, in any case, the terms of a bill of lading, inconsistent with and repugnant to the custom of a port, must prevail against the custom. Parsons v. Hart, 20 Occ. N. 372, 30 S. C. R. 473.

Delivery—Shortage in Goods—Carrier—Custom of Trade.]—Where the ship-owners and their agents never notified or requested the consignee to take delivery of the goods from the ship's side, after arrival at the port of destination, as they had a right to do by the terms of the bills of lading, but, on the contrary, retained possession of the goods, and proceeded, after they were landed, to sort the boxes and arrange them in separate lots, partly in their own shed, and partly upon the wharf itself, and caused the goods to be watched by their employees, without any interference or participation by the consignee, and where, in the opinion of the Court, the only delivery which took place was made by the ship-owners upon orders given by the consignee to the parties who had purchased the goods at an auction sale held five days after the arrival of the ship, the shipowners are responsible for any shortage in the quantity mentioned in the bills of lading as compared with the quantity delivered, notwithstanding the payment of freight made under reserve and before delivery. Judgment in Q. R. 15 S. C. 515 reversed. Hart v. Parsons, Q. R. 10 K. B. 555. (Reversed 20 Occ. N. 372, 30 S. C. R. 473).

Exceptions in — Voyage.— Obligation to Provide Fit Ship—Clause Limiting Liability of Ship-owners.] — The plaintiff shipped six cases of dry goods on board the defendants ship for carriage from Vancouver to Skagway and thence to Dawson, under a bill of lading which provided that all claims for damage to or loss of any of the merchandise must be presented within one month. The grating on the outside of the bull of the ship and at the mouth of the pipe in which the seaccek was placed was defective and rendered the ship unseaworthy, the result being that salt water entered the after-hold and damaged the plaintiff's goods. The plaintiff did not present his claim within a month, but subsequently sued for damages:—Held, that the stipulation in the bill of lading to the effect that no claim for loss should be valid unless presented to the company within a month, did not apply to damage occasioned by the defendarts not providing a seaworthy ship. Drysdele v. Union Steamship Co., 22 Occ. N. 74, 8 B. C. R. 228, Limitation of Time to Sue—Danage from Unseaucorthiness.]—On a shipment of goods by steamer the bill of lading provided that all claims for damage to or loss of the same must be presented within one month from its date, after which the same should be completely barred: — Held, reversing the judgment in 3 B. C. R. 228, 22 Occ. N. 74. Mills, J., cissenting, that this limitation applied to a claim for damages caused by unseaworthiness of the steamer. Union Steamship Co., v. Drysdale, 22 Occ. N. 278, 32 S. C. R. 379.

II. CHARTERPARTY.

Contract-Letters and Telegrams.]-The plaintiffs, through their agents, H., and defendants negotiated for the chartering by the plaintiffs to the defendants of the steamer T, then at Chatham, N.B. The defendants de-sired to have the steamer delivered to them at North Sydney, but, after some negotiation, on the 9th October offered to take delivery at Chatham and use the vessel for three months if navigation remained open. The plaintiffs declined to take the risk of navigation remaining open, and on the 15th October the plaintiffs offered to close at three months and take the risk of navigation remaining open. On the same day the plaintiffs' agents replied: "Have closed in accordance agents replied: "Have closed in accordance your telegram to-day and arranged delivery North Sydney." On the following day the defendants replied: "Telegram received closing T. Try to get her delivered North Sydney end October:"—Held, that the defendants, by their telegram of the 15th October, in view of previous correspondence, disclosed an intention to authorize a contract according to what had already been embodied in writing. and that the reply to that telegram conveyed all that was required to embody the terms of the charter; and that the defendants, whose position was changed on the 22nd, could not, by continuing the correspondence and raising other questions, escape the effect of the mutual terms previously agreed upon. Heckla v. Cunard, 37 N. S. Reps. 97.

Foreign Vessel—Necessuries—Authority of Master — Liability of Owners.]— Action against a foreign vessel and owners for necessaries supplied at a Canadian port to the vessel, which was under charter, the possesion and control of the vessel being by the charters, who appointed the master, and he for them the crew, and who paid their wages and the running and other expenses of the vessel. The plaintiff knew that the vessel was under charter, but not the terms of the charterparty. The trial Judge found, on conflicting testimony, that the necessaries were supplied on the order of the master mad the credit of the vessel and owners, and he held the vessel liable therefor:—Held, that the plaintiff ought to have the benefit of the finding in his favour, but, as the master was the servant of the charterers and not of the owner, he had no authority to pledge the latter's credit, and, as the owner was not liable, the vessel was not. The "David Wallace" v. Bain, 23 Oc. N. 103, 8 Ex. C. R. 206.

Renewal-Option - Notice - Agents -Burden of Proof Jury. A chairerparty made between the plaintiff and defendant companies provided that the plaintiffs should have the right of renewal, upon giving notice on or before a specified date. On the date specified the plaintiffs rave notice of renewal to M. K. & Co., who had acted as agents of defendants in connection with the negotiation of the charterparty, and the receipt and remittance of the hire of the vessel. The defendants refused to renew, on the ground that the notice required had not been given ;-Held, that the authority given by the defendants to M. K. & Co. was a special authority, and that the duty devolved upon the plaintiffs of shewing that, by usage or otherwise, they had authority to receive notice in connection with the extension of the time, such notice not being incidental or necessary to their original authority. The trial Judge having refused to subnit to the jury a question tendered on behalf of plaintiffs as to the authority of M. K. & Co.:—Held, Graham, E.J., dissenting, that he was right in doing so:—Held, that the Judge was justified in deciding, as matter of law, that there was no proof of agency, and that there was, therefore, nothing that could properly be submitted to the jury. Dominion Coal Co. v. Kingswell S. S. Co., 33 N. S. Reps. 499.

Time Limit for Loading—Loading at Port—Custom—Obligation of Charterer.] — A ship, by the terms of the charter, was to load grain at Fort William before noon of the 5th December:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 6 O. Is. R. 432, 23 Occ. N. 319, Girouard, and Nesbitt, JJ., dissenting, that to load at Fort William meant to load at the elevator there; that the obligation of the shipowner was to have the vessel placed under the elevator in time to be loaded before the expiration of the time limit; and where, finding several vessels ahead of him, the captain saw that he could not be loaded by the time fixed, and left to save insurance, the obligation was not fulfilled, and the owner could not recover damages. III. COLLISION.

Action for Damages—Preliminary Act—English Rules—Non-observance of Sailing Rules.—Action for damages sustained by the plaintiffs' steamer, "The Canadian," in a collision with the defendants' steamer, "The Merwin," The plaintiffs did not file a preliminary act, as required by Order XIX., r. 28. of the English Rules, which Dugas, J., beld to be in force in the absence of a local Rule:—Held, by Dugas, J., and by the full support of the plaintiffs' claim. "The Canadian," navigated by an American pilot, was making a landing against a current of about six miles an hour, "The Merwin," also navigated by an American pilot, was coming down stream. Both vessels before collision by the collision of the col gave blasts which were interpreted by each ship according to American regulations:—Held, by Dugas, J., that under the circumstances "The Canadian" was alone to blame: —Held, in appeal, by Walkem and Drake, JJ., that both vessels were to blame, and that appeal should be allowed without costs. Per Irving, J., that both vessels were to blame, and that there should be a reference back to assess the damages to "The Canadian," and then the damages should be apportioned according to the Admiralty rule. Per Martin, J., that the appeal should be dismissed. Observations as to the undesirability of the importation of foreign salling rules and as the necessity of using in Canadian waters are signals authorized by the Canadian Reis-Canadian Bevelopment Co. v. Le Blane, 21 Occ. N. 500, 8 B.C. R. 173.

Anchor-Light - Lookout - Weight of Evidence—Credibility.]—A collision occurred between the A, L. T., a ship at anchor, and a steamship, the L. O., proceeding in charge of a pilot to her dock, within the harbour of Halifax, N.S., at night in the month of Jan-The weather was blustering, and intermittently clear and cloudy. On arriving at the quarantine grounds the L. O. had signalled, by guns and whistles, for the medical officer of the port, and then proceeded up the harbour on the east side of George's Island. After passing the northern line of George's Island the L. O. changed her course westerly toward her berth, and in proceeding thereon passed between the lights of two vessels anchored on the northern side of the island, While doing so she suddenly came upon the A. L. T. lying at anchor, collided with and sank her. The only person on board of the A. L. T. was a caretaker, and while admitting that he was not on deck at the time, he swore that a proper anchor-light was burning on his ship. His statement as to the anchor-light was corroborated by the captain of a fishing schooner lying close by, and that of some boatmen and labourers on the wharves. On the other hand the pilot of the O., the captain and the first and third officers, boatswain and boatswain's mate, and four of the seamen, all swore positively that there was no light on the A. L. T. while they were approaching her, and that she was not seen by any one until their lookout called that there was something ahead. The evidence further shewed that both the officers and crew were alert at the time of the accident, and anxiously working the ship through anchored vessels in the darkness and blustering weather: -Held, that the state of facts as substantiated by the evidence for the owners of the L. O. must be accepted as the owners of the L.O. must be accepted as correct, and that being so, the collision and subsequent loss were wholly attributable to the A. L. T. in not keeping a proper light and lookout. Dominion Coal Ca. v. The Lake Ontario, 7 Ex. C. R. 403.

Appreciation of Evidence — Findings of Fact—Appeal—Proper Navigation,]—In an action claiming compensation for loss of the fishing schooner "Carrie E. Sayward" by being run into and sunk while at anchor by the "Reliance," the decision mainly depended on whether or not the lights of the lost schooner were burning, as the Admiralty rules required, at the time of the accident. The local Judge gave judgment against the "Reliance:"—Held, that though the vidence given was contradictory, it was amply sufficient to justify the judgment, which should not, therefore, be disturbed on appeal. Santanderino v. Vanvert, 23 S. C. R. 145, and Village of Granby v. Menard, 21 Occ. N. 7, 31 S. C. R. 14, followed. The "Retiance" v. Concell, 22 Occ. N. 77, 31 S. C. R. 653.

Barque Approached by Steamer — Manaeucres.]—Where a steamer is proceeding on a course north seventy-two degrees west, and a barque is sailing on the starboard tack within about seven points of the wind, whose direction is east north-east, the barque is not an overtaken ship within the meaning of the regulations. Smith v. The "Empress," 21 Occ. N. 439, S B. C. R. 122, 7 Ex. C. R. 430.

Breach of Regulations—Itinor Breach not Contributing—Lights—Negligence.] — It a collision upon the high seas has been brought about by a ship neglecting to follow her course as prescribed by the regulations for preventing collisions at sea, the other ship will not be held equally at fault because of a contravention of a statutory regulation, where such contravention could not by any possibility have contributed to the collision. 2. A vessel "hove-to" with her helm lashed is not obliged to carry the lights mentioned in article 4 of such regulations, as she is not "a vessel which from any accident is not under command, The "Birgitte" v. Moulton. 9 Ex. C. R. 339.

Damage to Wharf - Negligence ..] ship was moored in her dock with her bow to the east. Her stern, being at the inner end of the dock, was partly protected by the wharf and stores to the south, while the bow and fore-part of the ship, extending easterly beyond any such protection, was exposed to the full force of a south-easterly gale. There was an anchor out, with 25 fathoms of chain, on the starboard bow of the ship; but it was not in a position to keep the ship from swinging against the wharf in the event of such a gale. A gale from that direction having sprung up, the master ran out a wire rope from the starboard side of the ship's stern to a wharf on the south of her berth; but the evidence shewed that this rope had no effect in preventing the collision of the port bow of the ship with the wharf, which was damaged by the pounding of the ship against it from the force of the wind and waves :- Held, that the master had failed to exercise seamanlike care, forethought, and skill, in omitting so to place his anchor as to protect his ship from the force of the gale and prevent her colliding with the wharf, and that the damage was attributable to his negligence and not to inevitable accident. Book v. The "Baden," 8 Ex. C. R. 343.

Fishing Vessels — Sufficiency of Anchor Light—Carcless Navigation — Costs — Witness Fees — Parties.]—The C. E. S., a fishing schooner, while lying at anchor on Bank Quero, was run into and sunk by another fishing vessel, the R., which was changing her berth in the night time. The weather was fine and the sen smooth. The C. E. S. was displaying a light, in order to comply with the regulations; but it was claimed by the crew of the R, that they did not see the light until it was too late to avoid a collision. It was shewn that the R. had been fishing in a berth four or five miles distant from the C. E. S., that her crew knew that there were a number of vessels fishing in their vicinity, and that the master of the R. took no extra precautions in sailing at night over the closely crowded fishing grounds, but on the crossey crowded insing grounds, but on the contrary went below himself, leaving the ship under full sail to the charge of those on deck:—Held, that the R, was solely to blame for the collision. The crew of the ship of the plaintiffs, twelve in number, were landed in Nova Scotia, and were maintained at Halifax until they gave their evidence on the trial, a period of about one week Before the trial was commenced, they were added as plaintiffs in the cause. Judgment was given in favour of the plaintiffs, condemning the defendant ship in damages and costs to be taxed. Upon the taxation the plaintiffs sought to tax the amount expended in maintaining the crew while they waited for the trial, and also their ordinary witness fees during the trial, it having been shewn that they were kept for the sole purpose of giving evidence. Counsel for the defendant objected on the ground that the crew, having been made parties to the action, were not entitled to any fees as witnesses, and that it was unreasonable that they should receive any sustenance fees. The District Registrar referred the matter to the local Judge, who:—Held, that the parties to an action are entitled to the usual witness fees, when they attend the trial to give evidence -Held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to tax a reasonable sum as sustenance fees for the crew while they awaited the trial. Conwell v. The "Reliance," 21 Occ. N. 429, 7 Ex. C. R. 181.

Fog — Sailing Rules,]—The defendant steamer bound for St. John, while steering in a dense fog a N.-W. by N. course, heard three blasts of a fog horn from the plaintiff vessel, a little before the beam on the particle. The steamer was then going at a speed of from 4 to 6 knots an hour, and kept on her course. The plaintiff's vessel continued sounding her horn at regular intervals, and was proceeding on a northerly course before the horn was heard by the steamer, she struck the vessel on her starboard side, and sunk her:—Held, that the steamer was solely to blame, as she had infringed art. If of the regulations by not stopping after the horn was heard. Roberts v. The "Pauence." The C. R. 380. The "Pauence." 22 Occ. N. 129.

Fog — Speed — Damages.] — In an action for collision, where the Court found both vessels in fault for moving at an immoderate rate of speed in foggy weather, and that such immoderate speed was the chief, if not the sole, cause of the collision, the owner of the damaged ship was allowed to recover only half his loss. Wineman v. The "Hinvatha." 7 Ex. C. R. 446.

the rule of the road as it obtains under the American Sailing Rules for the purpose of determining the question of liability for the collision. Article 25 of the American Rules provides that "in narrow channels every steam vessel shall, when it is safe and practicable, keep to that side of the fare-way or mid-channel which lies on the starboard side of such vessel:"—Held, that the words "safe and practicable" must be taken to imply that the vessel is only obliged to take this course when she can do so without danger of collision. The inner harbour of Boston, Mass., containing wharves and anchorage for ships on either side, where ships and steam-turs are continually plying back and forth, is not a "narrow channel" within the meaning of article 25 of the above Rules, and the provisions of that article do not apply to cases of collision there. Lovitt v. The "Calvin Austin," 9 Ex. C. R. 160; The "Calvin Austin," v. Lovitt, 25 Occ. N. 8, 35 S. C. R. 610.

King's Ship — Negligence—Public Work—
Oroun.]—Where a collision occurs between a ship belonging to a subject and one belonging to the King, the King's ship is not liable to arrest for damages; and, in the absence of statutory provision therefor, no action will lie against the King for the negligence of his officers or servants on board of the ship. 2. In this case the steamship "Prefontaine." belonging to the suppliant, was damaged in a collision with a loaded scow which was fastened to the starboard side of the steam tug "Champlain," and which the latter was towing, from the dredge "Lady shinto," then working in the Contreceur channel of the river St. Lawrence. The dredge, steam-tug, and scow were the property of His Majesty:—Held, that the facts did not disclose a case of negligence by the officers or servants of the Crown on a public work for which the Crown would be liable under clause (c) of s. 16 of the Exchaquer Court Act, 50 & 51 V. c. 18. Paul v. The King, 24 Occ. N. 389, 9 Ex. C. R. 245.

Liability—Imperial Regulations.]—In a collision in Canadian waters between the steamship W. and the schooner M. A., the W. was found to be at fault in a matter that occasioned the collision. It was also found that the M. A. had contravened the regulations for preventing collisions in Canadian waters; but that such contravention did not contribute to the accident. In an action against the W. by the widow and universal legatee of the owner of the M. A.; —Held, that the W. alone was to blame, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. 2. Where a collision occurs on the high seas, and the provisions of s. 419 of the Merchants Shipping Act, 1894, and the Imperial regulations for preventing collisions at sea, are in force, the obligation is imposed on a vessel that has infringed a regulation which is prima facie applicable to the case, to provention that such infringement did not, but that it could not, by any possibility, have contributed to the accident; but when the collision occurs in Canadian waters, and the Act respecting the navigation of Canadian waters, R. S. C. c. 79, and the regulations for the prevention of collisions made by the Governor-General in council, are in force, the vessel which contravenes one of them will be vessel which contravenes one of them will not be held to be in fault unless such contravention has contributed to the collision. The "Cuba" v. McMillan, 26 S. C. R. 661, referred to. Hamburg Packet Co. v. Desrochers, 23 Occ. N. 214, 8 Ex. C. R. 263.

SHIP.

Narrow Channel — Rule of the Road—Look-out — Meeting Ships — Harbour — Lights and Signats—Negligence—Evidence—Damages.]—A pilot in charge of a ship, or a man at the wheel, is not a sufficient look-out within the rules of navigation for preventing collisions in narrow channels. Judgment of the Exchequer Court of Canada in Richelien and Ontario Navigation Co. v. The "Cape Breton," 25 Occ. N. 57, 9 Ex. C. R. 67, affirmed. Where meeting ships are in collision, and one of them has neglected to observe the regulations, there must be evidence of gross dereliction of duty or want of skill in navigation in order to make out a case for apportionment of damages against the other ship. Where a ship navigating a narrow channel has no proper look-out, and neglects to signal her course, at a reasonable distance, thus perplexing and misleading a meeting ship, the former is alone responsible for all damages caused by collision, even if, in the agony of collision, a different maneuvre on the part of the other ship hight have avoided the accident, Judgment below reversed, Girouard, J., dissenting. The "Cape Breton" v. Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Co., 36 S. C. R. 564.

of the "White Law" governing navigation in United States waters provides "that in all narrow channels where there is a current, and in the rivers St. Mary, St. Clair, Detroit, Niagara, and St. Lawrence, when two steamers are meeting, the descending steamer shall have the right of way, and shall, before the vessels shall have arrived within the distance of one-half mile of each other, give the signal necessary to indicate which side she elects to take:"—Held, that this rule has no reference to the general course of vessels navigating the waters mentioned, but applies only to meeting vessels. Therefore a steamer demeeting vessels. Therefore a steamer de-scending the St. Clair with a tow was not in fault when she followed the custom of up-going vessels to hug the United States shore. The "Shenandoah" with a tow was ascending the St. Clair river in a fog and hugging the United States shore; the "Carmona" was coming down the river; and they sighted each other when a few hundred yards apart. They simultaneously gave the port signal, which was repeated by the "Carmona." The "Shenandoah" then gave the starboard signal, and steered accordingly. The "Car-mona," thinking there was no thinking there was no room to pass between the other vessel and one lying at the elevator dock, reversed her engines. She passed the "Shenandoah," but on going ahead again collided with the vessel in tow —Held, reversing the judgment of a local Judge, 8 Ex. C. R. 1, that the "Shenandoah" was not in fault; but that, as the local Judge had found the "Carmona" not to blame, and as her captain's error in judg-ment, if it was such, in thinking he had not room to pass between the two vessels, was committed while in the agonies of collision, the judgment as to her should be affirmed. Negligence — Harbour — Regulations.]
—Articles 11 and 15 (d) of the Collision Regulations of the 9th February, 1887, do not apply to the case of a ship made fast to a lawful wharf in a harbour.—Peld, on the facts, that a vessel which ran into another so moored was guilty of negligence. Bank Shipping Co. v. The "City of Scattle," 24 Occ. N. 305, 10 B. C. R. 513.

NegHgence — Ship at Wharf — Regulations,1—Articles 11 and 15 (d) of the Imperial Collisions Regulations of 1897 do not apply to the case of a ship made fast to a lawful wharf in a harbour. On the evidence, a vessel which ran into another so moored was held not guilty of negligence. Bank Shipping Uo. v. The "City of Scattle," 9 Ex. C. R. 146.

Right of Way.]—In the case of a river traversed annually by thousands of vessels and used by two nations, a custom which in effect supersedes a statutory rule ought to be established by the most conclusive and cogent proof; and when it is sought to make it binding on foreign as well as domestic vessels, the proof should include some convincing evidence that a knowledge of the alleged custom existed among mariners generally, and extended to mariners sailing on vessels carrying a foreign flag and habitually traversing a busy river. Steamer and Sailing Vessel—Collision Arts. 20, 22, 23, 25—Liability.]—The J. M.. a sailing vessel, was proceeding, in the day time, out of Charlottetown harbour by tack ing, according to the usual course of navigation. The T., a steamship, was on her way into the harbour. When the T. was first seen by the J. M. the latter was on a course of W.S.W., standing across the harbour, to-wards, and to the northward and eastward of Rocky Point black buoy. From that time until a collision occurred between the two vessels, they were in full view of each other. While the J. M. was under way on the starboard tack and going about three knots an hour, the T. was coming straight up the harbour at nearly full speed. The latter did not change her course, nor execute any manœuvre, nor make any attempt by slackening speed or stopping or reversing to keep out of the way of the J. M. The bow of the T. struck the J. M. on the starboard side aft of the fore-rigging and nearly amidships, cut-ing her almost through from her batches to her keel, and causing her to become a total wreck:—Held, that the T. had infringed the provisions of arts. 20, 22, 23, and 25 of the rules for preventing collisions at sea, and was responsible for the collision. The next night a violent storm arose—a storm of which there were no indications and which was the severest ever experienced in the harbour—and the "Lois," whose crew were absent, bumped against the "Vigilant," and damaged her:—Held, in an action for damages for negligence, that it had not been shewn that the defendant's act of so mooring his tug was negligent, and that on the evidence the accident was due to the act of God. IV. JUDICIAL SALE.

Mortgage — Judicial Sale — Rights of Mortgage — Acquiescence.] — Although a hypothec upon a ship does not make the hypothecary creditor owner of the ship, he can nevertheless, dispose of it absolutely. 2. The sale of such a ship, even when effected judicially and with the authorization of the Court, upon an assignment of the property of the owner of the ship, but without the consent of the hypothecary creditor, as without effect as regards such creditor, and the purchaser may refuse to pay the purchase price so long as the hypothec is undischarged. 3. The fact that such creditor has been present at the sale and has even been a bidder does not constitute acquiescence, the proceeds of the sale being insufficient to indemnify him. In re Robert and Lamarche, Q. R. 18 S. C. 101.

Purchaser Refusing to Complete—Resule—Liability of Purchaser for Difference in Price—Statute of Frauds.]—A ship was sold at auction by the marshal under an order of Court in an action for seamen's wages. The ship was knocked down to J. for $2,000. J. refusing to complete the purchase, the ship was resold by the marshal for $1,000.—Held, that J. was liable for the difference in price and the costs occasioned by his default. 2. Judicial sales are not within the Statute of Frauds, and therefore no memorandum in writing of the sale to J. was necessary. Attorney-General v. Day, I. Ves. Sr. 218, referred to. 3. For the purpose of establishing J's liability, an order for resale was not necessary. Hackett v. The "Blakeley," In re Jones, 8 Ex. C. B. 327, 9 B. C. R. 430.

V. PILOTAGE DUES.

Exemption—Statute.]—Under the terms of the Pilotage Act, R. S. C. c. S. s. 59, as amended by the Acts of 1900, c. 36, s. 14, the following ships, called "exempted ships," are exempted from the compulsory payment of exempes from the compulsory payment of polioting dues: "(c) Ships employed in trading . . between any one or more of the provinces of Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, or Prince' Edward Island, and any other or others of them, or employed on of the said provinces and any port in New-foundland, etc.:—Held, that a ship employed on a sealing voyage from Halifax to the Newfoundland seal fisheries and back, calling on her outward voyage at Louisburg for coal. and at a port in Newfoundland for men and supplies, and again at Newfoundland, on her return, to dispose of her catch, was not an exempted ship within the terms of the Act. Semble, that what was contemplated by the Act, in providing for exemptions, was lines of steamers, or even one steamer, making regular periodical voyages, with termini as indicated in the Act, either throughout the year or during a certain season of the year. Far-quhar v. McAlpine, 35 N. S. Reps. 478.

Liability of Barge—"Every Ship which Navigates."]—Held, affirming the judgment of the local Judge for the Quebec Admiralty District, that the expression "every ship which navigates," found in s. 58 of the Pilotage Act, R. S. C. c. 80, means a ship that has in itself some power or means of moving through the waters it navigates, and not a ship that has no such power or means and which must be moved or propelled or navigated by another vessel. Corporation of Pilots for the Harbour of Quebec v. The "Grandec," 22 Occ. N. 428, S. Ex. C. R. 54, 79.

VI. SALVAGE.

Arrest — Payment into Court—Release—Expread — Security — Foreign Owner—Extravegant Claim,]—An application by the defendant for payment out of Court of money paid in by him to obtain the release of his ship arrested to answer a claim for salvage, will, if the defendant be a foreign resident, be stayed wholly or in part, pending an appeal to the Exchequer Court to increase the salvage award. Observations upon the scope of bail bonds and the retention of security pending appeal. It is an improper practice, and one which the Court will discourage, to arrest property to answer extravagant claims. Vermont 8, 8, Co, v. The "Abby Palmer," 8 Ex. C. R. 462, 10 B. C. R. 383.

Assessors — Trial — Time.]—Assessors will be appointed in salvage cases where necessary. The proper time to apply for assessors is on the application to fix the dafe of trial. Vermont 8. S. Co. v. The "Abby Palmer." S Ex. C. R. 469, 10 B. C. R. 380.

Basis of Valuation.]—Where, in a case of salvage, there is no market value for the ship in the port where it is brought by the salvors, the res should be valued not on the basis of a forced sale, but as a "going concern" in the hands of a solvent owner, using it for the particular purposes of his trade at the sum for which the owner, as a reasonable man, would be willing to sell it, Vermont 8, 8, Co. v. The "Abby Patmer," S Ex. C. R. 446.

Maritime Lien—Agreement — Rights of salvor — Possession of salved goods — Removal — Purchaser for value — Conversion —Replevin — Costs. Pearce v. Letherby, 6 O. W. R. 77, 606.

Quantum of Remuneration - Mail Steamer — Sailing Ship.]—Salvage services were rendered a distressed sailing ship on the high seas by a mail steamer. At the time the latter performed the salvage services, she was valued at $100,000, and, besides passengers and mails, she carried a cargo esti-mated to be worth $7,000. The time occupied in the performance of such services was about two and one-half days, the weather being fine and no risk or danger threatening the steamer except some chance of collision with her tow through a narrow channel of some thirteen miles in length. On account of the delay occasioned by the services, the steamer was obliged to consume additional coal to the value of $360 in making up her schedule time on the voyage. The sailing ship was in a position of peril when sighted by the steamer, having been dismasted and at the time drifting broadside at the mercy of the seas. Her cargo was worth $13,727.23, and her freight, as per bill of lading, $1,332.26. The value of the salved ship when taken into port in her damaged condition was placed at $2,290. The amount of salvage in respect of cargo and freight was settled before action brought: -Held, that the sum of $400 was a fair salvage award in respect of the ship alone. Pickford and Black S. S. Co. v. The "Foster Rice." 9 Ex. C. R. 6.

VII. SEAMAN'S WAGES.

Actions in Rem—Wages — Equality — Priority — Costs — Pro Rata Payment of Subsequent Claims.] — Held, following The 'Saracen,' 6 Moo. P. C. 56, that when claimants against a fund in the registry are of equal degree, the Court will give priority to the diligent creditor. 2. Where the parties are not of equal degree and one claiming subsequently has a legal priority over another, such priority will be protected if he make his claim before a decree has passed for distributing the fund, but not afterwards.
3. Where two claims for seamen's wages were prosecuted to judgment before two simihar claims were allowed by the Court, the costs of the prosecution of the first two claims were ordered to be paid out of the fund in the registry in full in preference to the last two claims. In respect of the latter it was directed that they should be paid in full if the bainnee of the fund por ratu. Muneen

Amount-Jurisdiction of Supreme Court, N. S.]—An action for seaman's wages, where the amount claimed is under £50, cannot be brought in a Superior Court, except where the owner or master, neither is, nor resides, within twenty miles of the place where the seaman is discharged, or put on shore, Watson v. Leukten, 24 Occ. N. 26, 36 N. S.

Arrest on Telegram - Rescue-Contempt of Court-Ignorance of Law.]-It is competent for a deputy-marshal to arrest a ship, in an action for wages, upon a telegram from the marshal of the Admiralty district, baving jurisdiction of the action, informing him that a writ of summons and a warrant had been issued and sent to him by mail. The master of the ship, although ignorant of the legal consequences of his act, was held guilty of contempt of Court in permitting the ship to be moved after the deputy-marshal had gone on board, read to the master a copy of the writ of summons, and of the marshal's telegram, informed him that the ship was under arrest, and tacked up a copy of the writ in the ship. Jurisdiction of Exchequer Court to Entertain Claim for Wages under $200 — Admiralty Act—Foreign Ship — *200 — Admiratly Act—Foreign Ship — Costs.]—When the exceptions in s. 56 of the Seamen's Act, R. S. C. c, 74, do not apply, the Exchequer Court, on its Admiralty side, has no jurisdiction to entertain a claim for seamen's wages under the amount of $200, oarned on a ship registered in Canada. The W. J. Alkens, 7 Ex. C. R. 7, decided under similar provisions in s. 34 of R. S. C. c. 75, criticized and not followed. 2. The Adairalty Act, 1891, being a general law, and enacting general provisions as to jurisdiction, does not repeal by implication the special provisions of s. 56 of R. S. C. c. 74, limiting the jurisdiction of this Court in proceedings for seamen's wages. 3. This Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a claim for seamen's wages under an amount of $200 earned on a wages under an amount of $250 earned of a ship registered in England, and to which the provisions of s. 165 of the Merchants Shipping Act, 1894, apply. 4. Costs in these actions were not allowed to the defendants because exception to the jurisdiction to entertain the claim sued for was not taken in limine litis. Gagnon v. The "Savoy," Dion v. The "Polino," 25 Occ. N. 87, 9 Ex. C. R.

Refusal to Pay — Conviction — Juris-diction—Criminal Offence — Seamen's Act (D.)—Shipping Act (Imp.)—Rescission of Contract.]—J. M., the master of the S. S. "Wobun," a British ship of Canadian register, was convicted, before a stipendiary magistrate, for that he wrongfully and unlawfully refused to pay R., a seaman serving on board said ship, a sum of money claimed to be said ship, a sum or money claimed to be due him for wages, and, further, for refusing to discharge said M_n, he being then entitled to his discharge:—Held, quashing the con-viction with costs, that the refusal to pay M. his wages, or to give him his discharge, was not a criminal offence, and that the proceedings taken were not warranted by the Seamen's Act of Canada, c. 74. ship being, at the time the proceedings were instituted, within the jurisdiction of the government of the British possession in which she was registered, the case was within the exception mentioned in s. 26 (d), and part 2 of the Imperial Shipping Act was not applicable. Semble, that if the magistrate had power to rescind the contract, and had undertaken to do so, the judgment would require to be in a different form. Rex v. Meikle, Ex p. Ramsey, 36 N. S. Reps. 297.

Seizure for Wages of Sailors-Internal Navigation.]—Save in the case provided for by cl. 2 of art. 955, C. P., a saisie conservatoire does not lie for the wages of sailors in respect of services rendered on ships employed in internal navigation. Bertrand v. Anderson, 4 Q. P. R. 387.

VIII. OTHER CASES.

Account-Co-owners - Jurisdiction of Account—Co-owners—Jirradiction of Court of Equity,—The jurisdiction of the Court of Equity in a suit for account between co-owners of a ship has not been taken away by 54 & 55 V. c. 29 (D.), which confers a like jurisdiction upon the Exchanger Court in Admiralty; any discretion the Court of Equity may have as to the exercise of its jurisdiction must depend upon the circumstances of each suit. Penry v. Ho 21 Occ. N. 358, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 233.

Action in Rem - Jurisdiction of Exchequer Court of Canada - Arrest-Account -Co-owners.]-The Exchequer Court of Canada has, in admiralty, as large a jurisdiction as the High Court of Admiralty, and therefore in an action between the co-owners of a ship for an account, the ship may be arrested. Cope v. The "Raven," 9 Ex. C. R. 404.

Arrest — Release — Re-arrest—Escape —Burdén of proof — Bond — Pleadings. Rex v. The "Tuttle," 5 O. W. R. 384.

Careless Mooring of Vessels - Negligence — Extraordinary Storm — Vis Major.]
The plaintiff's tug "Vigilant" was moored The plaintiff's tig "Vigilant" was moored at a wharf in Vancouver harbour, with another tug, the "Lois," belonging to the defendant, lying outside and moored there by a line attached to the "Vigilant." The "Lois" was left in that position all night, with no one in charge, and no fenders out on the side next the "Vigilant." During the night a heavy gale came up, and the "Lois" pounded the "Vigilant," causing her considerable damage:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, 11 B. C. R. 62, 24 Occ. N. 412, that, as the defendant was not a frespasser, he was not guilty of negligence, in the circumstance. stances, in leaving his tug as he did, and that he was not obliged to observe extreme and unusual precautions to avoid injury by a storm of exceptional violence. Foreign Vessel - Foreign Judgment -Comity of Courts-Account between Co-owners.]-The ship was registered in an American port and owned by American citizens resident in the United States. The defendant S, advanced to the then capain of the ship at Brava, Cape de Verde Islands, the sum of $1,400 for necessaries, and took from the captain and V., a part-owner, what pur-ported to be a bottomry bond, and a further instrument, purporting to be a charterparty, as security for such advance. By the last mentioned instrument, the control and posses sion of the ship were handed over to S. until the profits of the employment of the ship repaid the loan. S, thereupon took over the ship and brought her to a United States port, where she was arrested at the suit of R. for an amount due him for necessaries supplied to the ship on a previous voyage. By the judgment of a competent court in the United States the rights of S., under the instruments mentioned, were held to give him priority over the claim of R., and he was confirmed in his possession of the ship. The plaintiff herein was the owner of 1,764 shares of the ship and had notice of the American suit between S. and R., and subsequently took part in some negotiations for the settlement of the claims of both. By instituting pro ceedings on the Admiralty side of the Ex-chequer Court the plaintiff sought to obtain possession of the vessel while in a Canadian port, together with certain relief against the defendant V .: - Held, that as by the proceedings taken in the Exchequer Court the plaintiff sought to derogate from rights obtained by one of the parties under the judgment of a competent court in the United States,, the action should be dismissed. Castrique v. Imrie, L. R. 4 H. L. 414, referred to. Semble, that in so far as the plaintiff sought to obtain an account between the parties who were co-owners the Court would have directed an account if it had been shewn that S. had received from the earnings of the vessel sufficient to repay him the amount of his loan. Michado v. The "Hattie and Lottie," 9 Ex. C. R. 11.

Foreign Vessel - Illegal Fishing Scieure of Vessel-Evidence of Vessel's Position.]—The American vessel "Kitty D." was seized by the government cruiser "Petrel" for fishing on the Canadian side of Lake Erie, In proceedings by the Crown for forfeiture, the evidence was conflicting as to the position of both vessels at the time of seizure, and a local Judge in Admiralty held (2 O. W. R. 1065) that the vessel seized was not in Canadian waters at the time. On appeal by the Crown:—Held, that, as the "Petrel" was furnished with the most reliable log known to mariners for registering distances, and her compass had been carefully tested and corrected for deviation on the morning of the seizure; as the "Kitty D." and two tugs in her vicinity at the time, whose captains gave evidence to shew that she was on the American side, carried no log or chart and kept no can side, carried no log of chart and kept ho log book; and as the local Judge had mis-apprehended the facts as to the course sailed by the "Petrel" and the rules of navigation; the evidence of the officers of the "Petrel must be accepted; and it established that the "Kitty D." had been fishing in Canadian Kitty D. had been fishing in Canadian waters, and her seizure was lawful. Rex v. The "Kitty D." 24 Occ. N. 261, 34 S. C. R. 673, 2 O. W. R. 1065.

Hlegal Fishing—Foreign Vessel — Evidence — Condemnation, —The method of catching lish has no bearing upon a violation of the provisions of R. S. C. c. 94. The fact of taking fish without a license in the territorial waters of Canada constitutes the offence, Semble, that coming into the territorial waters of Canada to cure fish caught outside the limits of such waters, will subject the offending vessel to forfeiture. Rex v. The "Samoset," 25 Occ. N. 128, 9 Ex. C. R. 348.

Injury to Raft from Swells—Negligence—Onus — Rules of navigation, Adams v. British Yukon Navigation Co. (Y.T.), 2 W. L. R. 476.

Materials used in Construction and Repair—Lien—Continuance of.]—One who furnishes materials which are used in the construction and repair of a vessel intended for inland navigation has a right to the "privelège de dernier equipeur." The right is not limited to the last voyage, nor confined to the person who last furnishes such materials, but continues during the period that elapses between two seasons of navigation. Canin v. Bruile, Q. R. 26 S. C. 40.

Medical Attendance — Duty of Shipowner.] — A ship-owner is under no duty either at common law or under s. 207 of the Merchants Shipping Act. 1894, to provide surgical or medical attendance for the ship's company. Morgan v, British Yukon Novigation Co., 24 Occ. N. 38, 10 B. C. R. 112.

Necessaries — "Owner"—"Domiciled" — Lien.]—An action in rem for necessaries will not lie against a ship if supplied to a charterer, who also engages the crew in a port other than her home port, if it is shewn that at the time the writ issued an owner or part owner was domiciled in Canada. 2. The word "owner" used in s. 5 of the Imperiel Admiralty Act of 1861 (which is in force in Canada by virtue of the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890, and the Canada Admiralty Act, 1890, and the Canada Admiralty Act, 1891), means "registered owner" or "person entitled to be registered as owner," and not a pro hae vice owner; the word "Canada" is to be read in the place of "England and Wales;" and the word "domiciled" must be understood in its ordinary legal sense. Semble, that wherever a maritime lien is created in favour of any one against a ship, it is not essential to establish further personal liability against the owner. Rochester and Pittsburg Coal and Iron Co. v. The "Garden City," 7 Ex. C. R.

Necessaries—Owner Domiciled in Canada—Jurisdiction.]— No action will lie on the Admiralty side of the Exchequer Court against a ship for necessaries when the owner of the ship at the time of the institution of the action is domiciled in Canada. Rocher and Pittsburg Coal and Iron Co. v. The "Garden City," 21 Occ. N. 283, 7 Ex. C. R. 94.

Personal Injury Done by—Jurisdiction of Admiralty Court—Negligence—Sufficiency of Machinery—Feldene-Corkmen—Evidence—Hospital Expenses—Particulars—Summons.]—An engineer white working on a steam was injured by the breaking of a stop valve:—Held, that the Admiralty Court has jurisdiction to try a suit for damages done by a ship to a person. 2. Adequacy of construction is to be determined by the generally approved use at the time of manufacture; and the absence of the best possible construction is not of itself conclusive evidence of negligence. 3. The officers of the ship as well as the men are fellow-workmen and for the negligence of the one the steamer is not liable to the other, 4. Improving machinery after an accident is not evidence of insufficiency of its former state. 5. A seaman shipped in Candada and injured in Canada has no claim for hospital expenses under the Merchants Shipping Act, 1894. 6. A plaintiff's claim is confined to the particulars indorsed on the summons. Wyman v. The "Duart Castle," 6 Ex. C. R. 387.

Towage—Injury to Tow—Liability of Owners—Evidence—New Trial.]—Appeal (pursuant to 62 & 63 V, c. 11, s. 7) from a judgment of Dugas, J., in the Territorial Court of the Yukon, The defendants' steamer, which previously had been employed carrying freight and passengers between White Horse and Dawson, had gone out of commission on the 23rd September, 1898, and on that day, and while on her way down Lake Lebarge to winter quarters, she took in tow the plaintiffs' scow loaded with goods. After proceeding some way the weather became bad, and in endeavouring to get into shelter the scow foundered, and the whole cargo was lost. In an action for damages against the owners of the steamer, evidence was tendered by the owners that those in charge of the steamer had been particularly warned not to do any towing, but this evidence (being objected to by the plaintiffs) was ruled out. Dugas, J., held that the defendants were common carriers and therefore limble. An appeal from the judgment was allowed with costs, but the plaintins were granted the option of a new trial upon payment of the costs of the first trial. Couring v. Canadian Development Co., 21 Oec. N. 319, 8 B. C. R. 53.

SMALL DEBT PROCEDURE.

Debt — Conversion — Tort Waived—Goods Sold—Rule 602.]—A claim for the value of goods converted by the defendant, the plaintiff expressly waiving the tort and suing as for goods sold and delivered, may be sued under the small debt procedure. The plaintiff, in his statement of claim under the small debt procedure, alleged that the defendant had wrongfully taken possession of a horse and converted it to his own use, and expressly waived the tort, and sued for goods sold and delivered, claiming $75, the value of the horse. An application to set aside the writ and service, upon the ground that the claim was not for one debt within the meaning of Rule 602, which brings "all claims and demands for debt whether payable in money or otherwise where the amount claimed does not exceed $100," within the small debt procedure, was refused. The word "debt" is not restricted to "a sum certain or capable of being reduced to a certainty by calculation," but includes claim for value of goods sold where no price is mentioned. Henry v. I. ADMISSION AND RIGHT TO PRACTICE.

Conviction for Usurping Functions of — Resolution of Bar Council—Person Assuming to Act as Advocate-Accountant.] -The defendant, a chartered accountant, sent out a notice, at the head of which were printed his name and description as chartered accountant, requesting payment of a sum of money due to an estate, and concluding in these words, "If I do not hear from you within three days, action will be taken for recovery without notice." At the foot of the letter, there was an entry "Charges, $1.50." He was adjudged to pay a fine of $25 under s. 3562a of R. S. Q. as amended by 61 V. c. 27, s. 5:—Held, reversing that judgment, that a resolution of the council of the Bar of the section, authorizing the syndic to institute a prosecution, under s.-s. b of s. 5, 61 V. c. 27, for usurping the functions of the profession, was insufficient to support a condemnation (apparently based on s.-s. f of the same section), for acting in such manner as to lead to the belief that he (the defendant) was authorized to fulfil the office of or to act as an advocate. 2. Even if the resolution were sufficient, the defendant, in the circumstances stated above, was not guilty of practising as an advocate or of usurping the functions of the profession, nor was he guilty of acting in such manner as to lead to the belief that he was authorized to act as an advocate. Chartered accountants are authorized by law to collect debts, and, although the demand of $1.50 for charges was illegal, it was not sufficient to shew an intention to lead the recipient of the letter to the belief that the writer was authorized to act as an advocate, his true description as a chartered accountant being printed at the head. Montreal Bar v. Duff, Q. R. 24 S. C. 478.

Legal Professions Ordinance — Striking Off Roll—Suspension, — Under the provisions of the Legal Professions Ordinance, No. 9 of 1895, s. 16, which enacts that "the Supreme Court may strike the name of any advocate off the roll of advocates for default by him in payment of moneys received by him as an advocate," the Court has no power merely to suspend an advocate temporarily from practice. In re Forbes (No. 1), 2 Terr, L. R., 440.

Legal Professions Ordinance—Advo-cate—Striking Off Rolls—Reinstatement—Grounds for Refusal.]—The Legal Professions Ordinance, 1885, confers no jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the N. W. T. to reinstate an advocate who has been struck off the rolls—Semble, that in this case had there been jurisdiction the application must have been refused on the grounds: (1) that the applicant was in default in not paying the costs which by the order striking him off he had been ordered to pay; (2) that there was no evidence that the advocate was not liable to an application to strike off in respect of moneys other than those in respect of which he had been struck off; and (3) that the lapse of time since the misconduct charged was unusually short. In re Forbes (No. 2), 2 Terr. L. R. 423.

Legal Professions Ordinance — Advocate — Striking off Rolls—Rescission of Order—Juvisidiction.]—The Court, having no jurisdiction to reinstate an advocate struck off the rolls, cannot effect the same result by rescinding the order. In re Forbes (No. 3), 2 Terr. L. R. 447.

Readmission to Practice.]—A solicitor who had abandoned practice for more than five years vas readmitted by the Court upon passing an examination to the satisfaction of the council of the barristers' society of New Brunswick. In re Deacon. 36 N. B. Reps. 3.

Right to Practise — Non-payment of Fees—Suspension—Law Society.]—A solicities—Suspension—Law Society.]—A solicities and taking out the certificate of the Law Society, practise as such, even in an isolated instance, or even where he is joined as plaintiff himself with another who holds his claim in the interest of and for the solicitor, without making himself liable to the provisions as to suspension of R. S. O. c. 174. In reclude, a Solicitor, 21 Occ. N. 30, 32 O. R. 237.

Uncertificated Attorney—Void Proceedings—Waiver, —Proceedings by an attorney who has not paid the fee required by C. S. N. B. c. 34, s. 4, are void, and the right to set aside the proceedings is not waived by the opposite party contesting the suit to judgment, Rex v. Sisk. Sisk v. Foley, 35 N. B. Reps. 560.

Uncertificated Solicitor — Right of Client to Party and Party Costs.]—The plaintiff was deprived of costs on the ground that her solicitor had failed to take out a certificate, as required by the Nova Scotia Barristers and Solicitors Act, 1899, s. 27:—Held, that the procedure to enforce compliance with the provisions of the Barristers and Solicitors Act being by fine and suspension, under ss. 31 and 32 of the Act, and there being no provision enacting in express terms that attorneys who failed to take out certificates as required should be debarred from recovering their costs, or that parties employing such attorneys should be debarred from recovering there was nothing to prevent the plaintiff from recovering her attorney's costs from the opposite party to the suit. Wallace v. Harrington, 34 N. S. Reps. 1.

Usurping Professional Functions—Mercantile Agency—Collecting Letter.]—A anercantile agency firm who sent a letter to a debtor demanding payment from him of a certain sum due by him to a third person, and intimating that legal proceedings would be immediately taken to recover the amount in default of payment, should be regarded as having exercised the profession of an advocate in violation of GI V. c. 27 (Q.) Montreal Bar Association v. Sprague's Mercantile Agency, Q. R. 25 S. C. 383.

II. AUTHORITY.

Action in Name of Company—Determination of question—Stay or dismissal of action—Adding shareholders as parties: Saskatchewan Land and Homestead Co. V. Leadley, Saskatchewan Land and Homestead Co. V. Moore, 2 O. W. R, 916, 944, 1075, 1112, 3 O. W. R, 133, 191, 4 O. W. R. 39, 378.

Instructions—Imprisonment of plaintiff—Dismissal—Costs. Pine v. McCann, 2 O. W. R. 546.

Mortgage—Collection.]—In the absence of legal proceedings to enforce a mortgage security, there is nothing in the mere relation of solicitor and client from which an authority may be implied to the solicitor to receive interest or principal due the client on the mortgage, even though the solicitor arranged the mortgage loan. The solicitor must have either express authority for the purpose, or the course of dealing between the parties must have been such as to necessarily imply such an authority; and the onus of establishing that is upon the mortgagor. An authority to receive interest confers no authority to receive interest confers no authority to receive money due on them. Foreman v. Secly, 22 Occ. N. 67, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 341.

Power of Attorney in Favour of Another, —The power of attorney or procuration of a plaintiff not residing in the province, need not necessarily be made in favour of the advocate of the plaintiff; it is sufficient if it is given to a person resident at the place where the action is begun. Spencer v. Strathcona Rubber Co., O. R. 24 S. C. 323.

Ratification—Right to Recover Costs.]—A piano belonging to the defendant having been seized in the possession of one H., the plaintiffs, advocates, upon instructions received from H., who alleged that he was authorized by the defendant, made, in the name of the latter, an opposition demanding the withdrawal of the piano from the seizure which had been made. The defendant's agent, having learnt that the opposition had been filed, went to the office of the plaintiffs and told them that he would not pay the costs of it, but did not order them to discontinue the proceedings, and, the opposition having been maintained, he re-took his piano:—Held, that, in these circumstances, the defendant was liable to pay the plaintiffs the costs of the opposition. Semble, that the defendant, if he wished to avoid the payment of the costs, should have disavowed the proceedings taken in his name. Delisle v. Lindsay, Q. R. 23 S. C. 313.

Retainer—Instructions—Annuity— Judgment—Assignment—Setting aside proceedings—Costs. Quantz v. Quantz, 2 O. W. R. 326.

III. Costs.

1. Agreement as to

Confession of Judgment - Agreement with Counsel-Overcharge.]-A solicitor may take security from a client for costs incurred. though the relationship between them has not been terminated and the costs not taxed, but the amount charged against the client must be made up of nothing but a reasonable remuneration for services and necessary disbursements. A country solicitor had an agreement with a barrister at Halifax for a division of counsel fees earned by the latter on business given him by the solicitor. The solicitor took a confession of judgment from a client for a sum which included the whole amount charged by the Halifax counsel, only part of which was paid to him: Held, that, though the arrangement was improper, it did not vitiate the judgment entered on the confession, but the amount not paid to counsel should be deducted therefrom, Knock v. Owen, 24 Occ. N. 287, 35 S. C. R. 168.

Misrepresentation-Pressure-Manitoba Law Society Act-Interest-Consideration. Section 68 of the Law Society Act, R. S. M. e. 83, making it legal for a solicitor to bargain with his client, does not preclude the Court from determining the validity of any such agreement upon equitable principles, although it contains no express provision. In the course of negotiations leading up to such an agreement, the solicitor overstated the amount of his disbursements, and threatened to dispose of a judgment which had been assigned to him:—Held, that the misstatement and threat were such as to render the clients incapable of acting freely and independently, and therefore the agreement should be set aside. Forbearance to sue may be a sufficient consideration for an agreement by a client to pay interest to his solicitor upon an amount agreed on as due for costs, although there is no legal liability for such interest,

2. Recovery of.

Acquiescence—Revision.]—A party who pays under protest a bill of costs, after having discussed it and obtained several reductions, will be held to have acquiesced in it, and cannot afterwards demand the revision of it. Beaudoin v. Lamothe, 5 Q. P. R. 358.

Action for Costs—Lump Charge [or Proissional Services — Champerty—lyrecment.]
—The plaintiffs, advocates in the Yukon, sued the defendant for a lump sum for professional services in obtaining a judgment for the defendants against one H., it being alleged by the plaintiffs that they were to charge $600
if the amount was collected, and by the defendant that they were to get ten per cent.
if collected by them;—Held, in appeal, per Druke, J., that by Yukon law an advocate cannot legally obtain a lump sum for professional services under R. 524 of the NorthWest Territories Judicature Ordinance of 1893. Per Martin, J., that the plaintiffs failed to prove any agreement. Robertson v.
Bossuty, S. B. C. R. 301.

Action for Costs—Prescription—"Final Judgment"—Costs of Action—Plea Offering Judgment.]—The words "final judgment," in art. 2260, C. C., which enacts that the action for professional services and disbursements of advocates and attorneys is prescribed by five years, reckoning from the date of the final judgment in each case," mean final as opposed to interlocutory, and not final in the sense of being the judgment in the Court of last resort; and consequently prescription of an attorney's claim against his own client for the taxed costs in a cause commences to run from the rendering of the final judgment in the Court in which such costs are taxed, notwithstanding the fact that the case may have been taken to review and conducted by the same attorney in that Court. 2. Where the defendant, by his plea, offers judgment for part of the sum claimed, and the plaintiff does not accept such offer, but proceeds to proof and is unsuccessful in establishing any greater sum than that admitted, he is entitled only to costs up to plea filed, and will be condemned to pay the defendant's costs of contestation after plea filed. Poulin v. Prevost, summarized in Bertrand v. Hinerth, 25 L. C. J. 168, followed. Gilman v. Cockshatt, Q. R. 18 S. C. 552.

Against Opposite Party in Litigation.]—In the absence of any special provision of law, the advocate is not a party in the cause, but merely the agent of the party whom he represents. 2. There being no provision of law by which an advocate appearing in a cause before the Recorder's Court of Montreal, is granted distraction of costs awarded to his client, there is no lien dedroit between him and the city of Montreal, the other party to the cause, and he, therefore, has no action in his own name against the city for the costs of a cause in which costs were awarded in favour of his client. Beaudin v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 20 S. C. 32.

Consolidation of Actions.] — Re Wickett, 1 O. W. R. 554.

Counsel Fees - Action for-Liability of Solicitor or Client-Supreme Court of Canada -Quantum Meruit.] - An advocate of the Territories (in whom are combined the functions of both barrister and solicitor) retained a member of the plaintiff firm (Ontario barristers and solicitors) as counsel, and the firm as solicitors, on an appeal for certain clients to the Suprome Court of Canada from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the North-West Territories:-Held, per Curiam, that the contract was to be spelled out of the correspondence which took place up to the time the services sued for were performed, and that for the purpose of ascertaining the terms of that contract, the subsequent letters should not be looked at. 2. That if the clients were liable by virtue of the original contract, the plaintiffs charging the advocate in mistake of their legal rights would not release the clients. 3. That the advocate's letters were merely of such character as an advocate engaging counsel in the ordinary course would naturally write, and were not such as, under Armour v. Kilmer, 28 O. R. 618, would render the advocate personally liable; but, held, McGuire, J., dissenting, and the majority of the Court declining to follow Armour v. Kilmer, that on the retainer of counsel by an advocate, the advocate, and not the client, is prima facie liable:—Held, also, per Curiam, that an action lies for counsel fees. Mc-Dougall v. Campbell, 41 U. C. R. 332, and Armour v. Kilmer (on this point) followed. 2. That, inasmuch as the tariff of the Supreme Court of Canada does not apply as between solicitor and client, the plaintiffs orent, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover on a quantum meruit. O'Connor v. Gernmill, 29 O. R. 47, 26 A. R. 27, followed. Armour v. Dinner, 4 Terr. L. R. 30.

Distraction of Costs - Foreign Law -Code of Civil Procedure in Quebec—Recovery of Costs—Interest.]—" Distraction of costs," as provided for in s. 553 of the Code of Civil Procedure in the Province of Quebec, is the deverting of costs from the client or party who in the ordinary course would be entitled to them and their ascription to his attorney or other person equitably entitled. The plaintiffs were the attorneys on the record for one R., against whom an action was brought in the Province of Quebec by the defendant, and an interlocutory motion therein had been dismissed with costs, taxed at $238.20, and judgment entered therefor in the Superior Court at Montreal:-Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover such costs from the defendant in their own names in Ontario, without the intervention of their client. Quære, as to interest on the account. Hutchinson v. Mc-Curry, 23 Occ. N. 111, 5 O. L. R. 261.

Lieu—Charging Order—Lands in Question in Redemption Suit—Registry of Lis Pendeus—Discharge of.]—Rule 1129, which empowers the Court or a Judge to declare that a solicitor, who has been employed to prosecute or defend any case, etc., shall have a lien on the property recovered or preserved through his instrumentality, is construed liberally, so as not to deprive the solicitor of his lien. Lien—Mioney Paid into Court as Security for Costs—Priority of Execution Creditor.]—
Money paid into Court by a plaintiff in an action, as security for costs, is not property "recovered or preserved" by the solicitor for the plaintiff within the meaning of Con. Rule 1129 on which the solicitor's lien for costs will attach as against an execution creditor who has obtained a stop order, Gibson v. Le Temps Publishing Co., 10 O. L. R. 434, 6 O. W. R. 410.

Lien on Fund in Court — Charging order—Priority over garnishing orders—Costs—Taxation. Murray v. Royal Ins. Co. (B. C.), 1 W. L. R. S.

Lien on Title Deeds — Relationship of solicitor and client—Proceedings for partition—Conveyancing charges — Assault — Costs. Dainard v. Macuee, 2 O. W. R. 284.

Remuneration for Services Out of Court — Quantum Meruit — Percentage.] — The services of an attorney in procuring an option on and the purchase of an immovable, for a client, are purely a matter of quantum meruit, which the Court will fix at 5 per cent. upon the price. Aylen v. Lindsay, Q. R. 23 S. C. 345.

Solicitor-Trustee—Profit Costs—Lien.]—Held, that notwithstanding the provision in s. 40 of the Manitoba Trustee Act, R. S. M. c. 146, the rule of English law that a sole trustee who is a solicitor cannot charge against the trust estate profit costs for acting as solicitor for the estate, still prevails to the extent that he is not entitled as of right to have such costs taxed to him as a solicitor. Meighen v. Buell, 24 Gr. 503, followed. Cradock v. Piper, I Macn. & G. 694, distinguished. Held, also, that neither the Imperial Act 23 & 24 V. c. 127, nor the Ontario Rule 1129 founded upon it, gives a solicitor an absolute right to a lien for his costs upon property recovered or preserved through litigation, but only a discretionary power in the Court to charge the property. Turriff v. Mc-Donald, 21 Occ. N. 545, 13 Man. I. R. 577.

Taxed Costs—Additional Charges.]—The solicitor can recover from the client only the amount of the bill of costs taxed, unless under agreements to the contrary or for extraordinary services rendered necessary in a cause. Surveyer v. Drainville, Q. R. 18 S. C. 527.

3. Taxation.

Allowance of Lump Sum—Work Done for to f Court—Power of Taxing Officer.]—A solicitor employed by the assignee of a number of life insurance policies to collect $82,000 from eleven different insurance compfinies, of which payment was resisted on the ground that they were gambling policies, while the widow of the insured set up a trust for herself and her family, subject only to a lien for premiums paid and interest, after long negotiations, collected from pine of the companies.

in all, $70,000, without suit, and also compromised the widow's claim, leaving $60,000 to his client, who by another solicitor then sued unsuccessfully upon the remaining policies. The former solicitor rendered a bill shewing in detail the negotiations, and charging disbursements and ordinary costs in connection with an action by the widow and for drawing claim papers and affidavits, and a further lump sum to cover the negotiations out of Court. On taxation of the bill the taxing officer allowed $3,200 in respect of the lump omcer anowed $5,200 in respect of the damp sum charged, having first, with the acquies-cence of the parties, conferred with various referees, officers of the Court, and solicitors. as to charges usually made in such matters, and then determined the amount to be allowed in the light of his own general knowledge and experience: — Held, that the ruling of the taxing officer should be affirmed; and that after himself issuing the order for taxation. after ministi issuing the order for Marion, the client could not claim to have the solicitor's remuneration assessed in an action. In re Attorneys, 26 C. P. 495, followed. In re Atohnston, 21 Occ. N. 561, 22 Occ. N. 24, 3 O. L. R. 1.

Collection of Moneys—Commission.]—A bill of costs was rendered by the solicito to the appellant in respect of services of the solicitor in collecting $70,000 of insurance moneys. The principal item was a commission amounting to $3,200 upon the amount collected, and this was allowed on taxation:—Held, having regard to In re Richardson, 3 Ch. Ch. 144, and the line of practice founded thereon as manifested in the certificate of the taxing officer appended to In re Attorneys. 26 C. P. 495, that the conclusion of the taxing officer should not be disturbed. The circumstances surrounding the professional employment in this case were very exceptional, and justified the somewhat liberal allowance ascertained upon the reference. In re Solicitor, 21 Occ. N. 561.

Coursel Fees — Allocatur — Tariff— Notice.)—The Judicature Ordinance (R. O. 1888 c. 58), s. 462, enacted: "In all causes and matters in which duly enrolled advocates holding certificates as such and resident in the Territories are employed, they shall be entitled to charge and be allowed the fees in the 'Advocates' Tariff' appended to this Ordinance, or as the same may be from time to time varied by the Judges of the Supreme Court in bane." In view of this provision, on a taxation of a bill of costs by an advocate against his client it was held: —1. That counsel fees are on the same footing as other fees allowed by the tariff, and an advocate can recover them from a client by action, 2. That an allocatur can be granted for such fees only as are prescribed by the tariff, 3. That any Judge of the Court may grant an allocatur for counsel fees before the Court in bane, and the giving of notice to the client of application for an allocatur for fees is discretionary. Hamilton v. McNeill (No. 2), 2 Terr. L. R. 151.

ended delidients applied for and obtained an order that the solicitors should deliver a bill and for traxation of the same when delivered. Under this order the solicitors delivered a bill in which certain charges were made larger than they had been in the previous unsigned bill, and some new items were charged. Objection was taken on the part of the clients that nothing more should be allowed on traxation in respect of any item appearing in the new bill than was charged in respect of it in the first bill, nor should new items be allowed:—Held, that by applying for an order for delivery of a bill the clients must be considered to have consented to the old bill being withdrawn; and the objection could not prevail. In resolicitors, 24 Occ. N. 57, 7 O. L. R. 41, 2 O. W. R. 220, 268, 409, 618, 1082, 3 O. W. R. 1, 4 O. W. R. 137, 302.

Expiry of Year-Special Circumstances - Receipt of Client's Moneys-Commission.] An order for the taxation of an advocate's bill of costs ought not to be granted on the ex parte application of the client, where the bill has been rendered more than twelve months before the application to tax. Orders of course defined. Semble, (1) on an application to set aside an ex parte order to tax, special circumstances are shewn by the client which would, in the opinion of the Judge, have warranted an order to tax on a special application, the ex parte order will be special approaction, the exparte order with be allowed to stand. (2) The receipt by the advocate from time to time of moneys belong-ing to his client, does not constitute such special circumstances, nor, although overcharges would, in certain circumstances, constitute such special circumstances, does the mere fact that a commission of 5 per cent. is charged on the collection of a sum of $1,200. On the trial of an action on an advocate's bill, the trial Judge may, without special circumstances appearing, and notwithstanding the lapse of twelve months from delivery, direct a reference or inquiry as to any disputed items, although no application to tax has previously been made. Re Mc-Carthy & Carthy v. Walker, 2 Terr. L. R.

Orler for Taxation - Effect of Client ing—Judgment—Certificate of Taxation view — Time — Extension.] — Where a ent has obtained an order in the usual form for the taxation of an advocate's bill of costs upon which he has been sued, and for a stay of the action pending the taxation, although he has made no submission to pay the amount found due, the advocate, after the taxation is ended and the clerk's certificate signed, is entitled to an order giving him leave to sign judgment against the client for the amount found due. The certificate of the clerk is final and conclusive as to the amount due to the advocate unless an application be made for a review of the taxation under s. 529 of the Judicature Ordinance, 1893. That section applies to taxations between solicitor and client, as well as between party and party. There is no necessity for an application on behalf of the advocate to confirm the certifi cate of the clerk as a report. The clerk's certificate is not a report, and need not firs be set aside before the application for a re view, and the intention of s. 529 is, that : review thereunder should be had after the clerk's certificate has been signed. Since the repeal of s.-s. 7 of s. 491 of the Judicature Ordinance, 1893, there is no provision in our Rules as to the time within which a review of taxation can be made, and therefore the provisions of English Order 65, Rule 27 (44), so far as they relate to the time within which an application to a Judge for a review shall be made, are now in force in the Territories by virtue of s. 556 of the Judicature Ordinance, 1893. Where the time for review has expired, the Judge has power under s. 355, in a proper case, to extend the time for making the application for review. In re McCarthy—McCarthy v. Walker (No. 2), 4 Terr. L. R. I.

Tariff.]—A charge in a bill of costs, although not justified by the item under which it is framed, may nevertheless be allowed if it can be sustained under any other item of the tariff. In re Corean, 7 B, C, R, 353.

Terms of Bill-Multiplicity of Proceedings—Postponement of Mortgage Sale—Retainer—Counsel Fees—Commission on Collections.] - Where separate proceedings were taken by plaintiff's advocate upon two mortgages, one made to the plaintiff in her personal capacity, and the other made to a deceased person of whose will the plaintiff was executrix, and the plaintiff, on taxation at her instance of the advocate's bill of costs, failed to shew that the claim upon the first mentioned mortgage arose with reference to the deceased's estate, the advocate was held entitled to charge his client, the plaintiff, with separate bills of costs in respect of each of the separate proceedings. Where proceedings for the sale of property in question in mortgage actions were postponed from time to time upon the solicitation of the mortgagor, and without instructions or consent of the plaintiff, the mortgagee, for the purpose of enabling the mortgagor to raise the necessary money to pay off the mortgage debt, and where these successive postponements resulted in securing for the mortgagee a larger sum than could have been realized by a forced sale, and the mortgagee accepted the benefit thus secured for her, she was held liable to pay to her advocate the costs and expenses incurred in connection with the various postponements. Where the order for taxation of an advocate's bill of costs, obtained at the instance of the client, did not reserve to the client the right to dispute retainer :--Held, that the retainer must be taken to be admitted; and where in such a case the advocate had stated in writing that he did not intend to charge anything for certain proceedings taken without special instructions, but it appeared that the statement was made without consideration, the advocate was allowed his costs of such proceedings. Upon the taxation of an advocate's bills of costs no counsel fee should be allowed in respect to an application made by a clerk of the advocate, and evidence should be given on the taxation that the applications for which a counsel fee is asked were in fact made by an advocate. An application to postpone a sale is a common application for which $2 only should be allowed. Upon the taxation of his bill, the advocate will not be allowed a lump sum as commission upon a collection made for his client, unless such evidence is produced before the taxing officer as will enable him to ascertain that the commission represents reasonable and proper charges for services actually rendered. In re McCarthy—McCarthy v. Walker (No. 3), 4 Terr, L. R. 9. IV. PARTNERSHIP.

Death of Partner—Motion for Peremption.]—Where one member of a firm of advocates has died, and there has been no substitution of attorney, the remaining mambers of the firm continue to represent the party for whom the firm was acting, and are entitled to make a motion for peremption of suit, but a motion signed with the old firm name "by A. B. one of the said firm," is illegal and will be rejected. (Gill, J., diss.). Wright v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., Q. R. 19 S. C. 105.

Departure of Partner from Province—Notice of Peremption—Service on Remaining Partner.]—Where a member of a firm of solicitors and advocates has notoriously ceased to be a member of the Bar or profession in the province, the service of a motion for peremption made on the remaining partner in the firm is valid service, the firm being the plaintiff's solicitors of record. Chouinard v. Thompson, 3 Q. P. R. 476.

Dissolution of Firm—Effect on Subsequent Proceedings—Peremption.]—When one member of a firm of solicitors dies or ceases practice, in consequence of a public appointment incompatible with the exercise of his profession, a party to an action represented by the firm is sufficiently represented by the remaining member or members of the firm. 2. If two solicitors have dissolved partnership, but have both continued to practise their profession, the client's mandate is held by both of them, and not by either of them acting alone, and therefore a motion for peremption served on one only of the the then partners is irregular and illegal. Glass v. Eveleigh, 21 Qcc. N. 51, 3 Q. F. R. 357, Q. R. 18 S. C. 523.

Dissolution of Firm — New Partner — Mandate—Pending Suit—Notice of Motion—Peremption.] — The defendant was represented in this case when it was first instituted, by a firm of three solicitors, one of whom was subsequently raised to the Bench. Another solicitor then became a partner in the firm. The defendant presented a motion for peremption of the suit signed by the new firm. The plaintiff opposed the motion, on the ground that it was not shewn that the new firm, although containing two members of the former firm, had any mandate from the defendant to act for him in the case, in so far at least as the new member of the firm was concerned:—Held, dismissing motion for peremption with costs, that a member of a firm of solicitors who joins the firm after the institution of an action must shew that he is authorized to act therein. 2. If he does not do so, the subsequent proceedings must be signed by the remaining members of the firm vione. Landry v. Pacaud, Q. R. 19 S. C. 171.

V. RETAINER.

Evidence of.]—A commencement of proof by writing is not necessary in order to allow an advocate to prove a retainer. Mireault v. Bissonnette, Q. R. 24 S. C. 25.

Termination of — Costs Subsequent to Judgment—Limitation of Actions.]—The employment of a solicitor to bring or defend an action, subject possibly to his right to claim payment of his costs on judgment being given, does not terminate on the giving of judgment. so long as anything remains to be done which it is the solicitor's duty under his retainer to do for his client's protection; and even, in the absence of such duty, where he does not elect to treat the contract as then at an end. but under his client's instructions acts for him thereafter in subsequent proceedings consequent upon the judgment, there is a continuation of such original contract. Where, therefore, after the giving of judgment in an interpleader issue, the solicitor for the defendant, against whom judgment had been given. continued, with the client's knowledge, to act for him in the taxation of the plaintiff's costs. and in the preparation and taxation of cer and in the preparation and taxation of certain bills which the defendant was entitled to set off, his appointment continued until the completion of those proceedings, so that as against a claim for the amount of his bill of costs, the Statute of Limitations began to run only from the date of such completion. Millar v. Kanady, 5 O. L. R. 412.

VI. OTHER CASES.

Affidavit - Scandal - Confidential Communication by Client—Privilege.]—The plaintiff's claim was for payment of $6,000 which she alleged the defendant had received for her as the purchase money of certain real estate belonging to her, which she had employed the defendant to sell for her. She alleged that he had only paid over $500 of the money. The defendant, who was a solicitor, applied for an order for security for costs, on the ground that the plaintiff was permanently resident out of Manitoba, and, in support of the application, filed his own affidavit in which he set forth certain communications alleged to have been made by the plaintiff to him as her solicitor, and which, if true, shewed that she was not legally married to her alleged husband, and stated in effect that the plaintiff had returned to and was living with such alleged husband, who was a non-resident. On the plaintiff's application to have the affidavit taken off the files of the Court, it was argued on behalf of the defendant that the facts thus sworn to were relevant to the question whether the plaintiff was permanently resident out of the jurisdiction or not, as tending to shew that she was greatly under the influence of the alleged husband, and therefore likely to remain per-manently with him:-Held, that the affidavit should be ordered off the files as containing another which the plaintiff was entitled to have treated as privileged from disclosure and which was scandalous and irrelevant to the application. A. v. B., 24 Occ, N. 249, 14 Man. L. R. 249.

Bar Council—Appeal from Rulings of— Excess of Juriadiction — Prohibition.] — Although the law (61 V. c. 27, s. 2), forbids all appeals from rulings of sectional Bar councils pronounced against their members on complaints lodged against them, the Superior Court has, by virtue of art. 50, C. P., a right of control and surveillance over the tribunals formed by these sectional councils in such cases. its jurisdiction and not otherwise. Semble, that informalities so grave that they amount on excess of jurisdiction would justify the issue of a writ of prolibition, in spite of the wording of art. J003, C. P., which seems to deny this right. Thus a writ of prohibition would not be granted when its object was an indirect appeal from the ruling of the council acting within the limits of its powers in angularity into a complaint. In the case in hand the advocate against whom the complaint was lodged could not prevent the council hearing the complaint because there is an action for damages pending between the same parties based on the same facts before the Superior Court, the jurisdiction of the two tribunals being absolutely distinct; and, therefore, the Bar tribunal, in investigating such complaint, is not guilty of contempt of Court; and, besides, it is not for the member against whom a complaint is made to raise this objection. Vidal v. The Bar of Quebec, Q. R. 27 S. C. 115.

Client Acting for Himself — Discontinuance.] — The solicitor being merely the agent of the party to the action whom he represents, and the principal being at liberty to act without the concurrence of the agent, the former may personally file a discontinuance of the action, without the knowledge or consent of his solicitor. Levaseur v. Toen of Levis, Q. R. 19 S. C. 212.

Client Acting for Himself — Discontinuance—Settlement of Action by Pertics—Rights of Solicitor, in Absence of Fraud.]—
The parties to a suit have a right to settle the same as they see fit, without the presence or assistance of their attorneys, provided such settlement be not made in fraud of their attorneys' rights. 2. Where an action was settled by the parties themselves without fraudulent inter, and in the settlement no mention was made of costs, a general inscription by the defendant on the whole of the issue as joined was held to be irregular; but the Court reserved the right of the defendant's attorney to proceed for his costs, and also the plaintiffs right to file a discontinuance of the action upon such terms as he might be advised. Delaney v. Lionais, Q. R. 19 S. C. 288.

Investment of Money — Liability to client—Guaranty. Lewis v. Ellis, 1 O. W. R. 356.

Maintenance and Champerty-Action on Bill of Costs—Defence — Agreement of Solicitor to Conduct Action without Remuneration-Cross-action - Consolidation.] The bill of costs sued upon was incurred in respect of an action brought by plaintiff as solicitor for defendant. At the end of the litigation plaintiff rendered a bill for $1,755.-89. He gave credit for $1,473.23. This left a balance of $282.66. For this, as well as for an $82.50 note, which was not paid, an action was brought. The bill was rendered more than a year previous, and no order for taxation was taken out, because negotiations were pending for settlement, it was said. On motion for summary judgment, defendant also denied that he ever consciously signed a retainer; and further alleged that plaintiff "took up the case on condition that he was to get his costs out of defendants; that if they failed all he would have to pay was the de-fendants' costs:"—Held, the agreement alleged was not champertous, nor in any way within the prohibition against maintenance. "It was never doubted that a solicitor might lay out bis own moneys, as disbursements on his client's account, and a solicitor can conduct a case gratuitously out of charity or friendship towards his client." In re Solicitor, Clark v. Lee, 5 O. W. R. 631, 9 O. L. R. 708.

Accepting Transfer Misconduct -Client's Property after Judgment-Defeating Anticipated Execution-Fraud on Plaintiffs-Summary Jurisdiction, |- Before the trial of an action for damages for tort the defenan action for damages for our the defendants dant's solicitor wrote to one of the defendants warning him of a possible judgment against him and advising him to make disposition of his property in anticipation of it. After verdict against the defendants, and pending argument on the motion for judgment, counsel (who was also one of the solicitors) for the defendants, obtained a transfer to himself of certain property belonging to the defendant union, which he credited with $500 on account of costs; subsequently judgment was entered for the plaintiffs for $12,500 and costs, and the plaintiff obtained the appointcosts, and the plantal ment of a receiver and issued executions, but nothing was realized: — Held, reversing the decision of Irving, J., Martin, J., dissenting, that the solicitor in obtaining the transfer to himself of the property was guilty of a fraud on the plaintiffs; and upon a summary application in the original action he was ordered to restore it or pay its value into Court, under penalty of attachment. Centre Star Mining Co. v. Rossland Miners' Union, No. 38 Western Federation of Miners, 11 B. C. R. 194, 1 W. L. R. 244.

Negligence—Advice — Established Juris-prudence — Territories Real Property Act— Charge on Land — Execution—Sheriff—Tort— Pleading—Interpleader — Counterclaim Bill of Costs.]—Where a sheriff and an execution creditor are sued together in respect of an alleged irregular levy, the sheriff is not obliged to interplead, but may defend with the execution creditor. 2. A solicitor who advises his client according to the established jurisprudence is not guilty of actionable negligence if the decision upon which he relies is overruled. 3. Neither a solicitor nor a sheriff becomes a tort-feasor, as against a transferee whose transfer is unregistered, by registering, in the discharge of his duty. an execution of a judgment against lands of the judgment debtor. 4. The delivery of an execution with a requisition to the sheriff to charge and levy upon lands apparently belonging to the execution debtor does not belonging to the execution destor does not give rise to any implied or express obligation on the part of the solicitor of record to in-demnify the sheriff against loss or damage in consequence of irregular levy. 5. In an action by the sheriff against a solicitor for office fees and charges, the solicitor cannot counterclaim for overcharges in former bills paid to the sheriff by him in respect of matters in which the solicitor may have acted for the parties interested, because such overcharges, if recoverable, do not belong to the solicitor, but to his clients. In such an action, however, the solicitor may counter-claim for costs in a former suit in which he acted for the sheriff, notwithstanding his he acted for the sherin, notwithstanding his omission to render a signed bill of the costs prior to the filing of the counterclaim. When the order came to the knowledge of the plaintiffs' solicitors they at once moved under Rule 358 to be allowed to put in security Rule 358 to be allowed to put in security Rule 358 to be allowed to put in security and proceed with the action. Notice of this motion was served on the defendant's solicitor who, however, did not consider himself any longer entitled to act as his client had left the province when the action was dismissed and had left no address. The Master in Chambers held that so long as Rule 358 can be invoked, the action is still pending, and the solicitor on the record is still solicitor. Muir v. Guinane, 5 O. W. R. 324, 9 O. I. R. 324.

Agent — Fraud — Amendment — Delay, Aitcheson v. McKelvey, 1 O. W. R. 51, 355,

Contract — Option — Purchase of Land—Time — Ejectmen — Injunction to Restrain.]—Time is of the essence of unilateral agreement, such as an option to purchase land. On an application for an injunction order, in a suit for the specific performance of an agreement for the sale of land, to restrain an action of ejectment by the vendor to recover possession of the land, the Court ordered that, on the defendant confessing the action of ejectment, the plaintiff should be restrained until further order from taking possession; otherwise the application should be dismissed. Semble, that relief by specific performance cannot be obtained under s. 283 of 60 V. c. 24. Freeman v. Stewart, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 305; Steicart v. Freeman, 22 Occ. N. 211.

Contract for Sale and Purchase of Land — Agent of Purchaser — Action by Agent—Delay of Purchaser — Resale—Right Sub-Purchaser to Join Vendor as Party. -Where an agent makes a contract for the purchase of land in his own name, the vendor knowing that the agent is acting for another person, whose name is not disclosed, the agent cannot maintain an action in his own name against the vendor for specific performance of the contract. Where the value of land is uncertain and speculative, the purchaser thereof must act upon his rights with reasonthereof must act upon his rights with re-able diligence and promptitude, upon pain of losing them. The owner of land of that character on the 1st May, 1900, contracted to sell it to H., but was never paid anything upon the purchase money, although $50 was to be paid down, and $200 in six months, to be secured by H.'s note, which never was given. On the 29th August, 1900, H. contracted to sell the upon the property of tracted to sell the land to the plaintiff acting for an unnamed principal, and the owner was willing to carry out the resale :- Held, that the whole course of proceedings on the part of the plaintiff's principal (set out in the case) shewed that he had been endeavouring to keep alive his claim to the land as long as possible in order that he might take it if it increased in value, without committing himself actually to buy it, in case it should depreciate, and the action should be dismissed as against both defendants:-Held, that the owner was properly joined as a defendant; the foundation of the right against him be-ing that the plaintiff or his principal was the equitable owner under his contract with H, of H.'s rights against the owner of the land, and might join the latter upon offering to perform H.'s contract. Contract for Sale and Purchase of Land Judgment for Payment of Price -Extension of Time-Payment on Account-Liquidated Damages-Forfeiture - Relief Against.]-After judgment in an action by the vendors of land for specific performance, and before issue of the same, the vendors agreed to extend the time for the payment of the purchase money for three months, upon the terms of the purchaser paying down $500; which extension was embodied in the judgment, and it was agreed between the parties as follows: "If the defendant shall pay the balance of the purchase money within the time limited by the judgment, the plaintiffs shall give credit to the defendant upon the said balance for the said sum of $500, but, if the defendant shall fail to make payment of the said balance within the time limited by the said judgment, then the plaintiff shall not be bound to give credit to the defendant upon the said balance for the said sum of $500, and in this respect time shall be of the essence of the contract." A few days after the expiry of the time limited by the judgment, the defendant tendered the purchase money, less $500, which the plaintiffs refused to accept:—Held, that the above provision was in the nature of a forfeiture, and not of liquidated damages, and the purchaser was entitled to be relieved from the terms of the judgment and to have a conveyance of the property upon paying the balance due after credit given for the $500. Contract for Sale and Purchase of Land — Oral Contract—Statute of Frauds —Part Performance — Possession—Note or Memorandum — Delivery of Deed in Escrow.]—Specific performance of an oral contract for the sale and purchase of land was adjudged at the suit of the vendee, who had gone into possession of the land on the faith of the contract and openly and continuously for some time remained in visible possession by his tenants, to the knowledge of the vendors and without objection on their part. It was considered that, under the circum-stances, possession should be assumed to have been taken with the assent of the vendors, and the possession was of such a character as to exclude the operation of the Statute of Frauds. Quære, whether a conveyance of land defectively executed and delivered in escrow and retained in the vendor's own possession, to be handed to the vendee on payment of the purchase money, can be regarded as a note or memorandum in writing of a previous parol contract between the parties for a sale of the land on the terms mentioned in the deed. stranger and the owner. On negotiations for the purchase of land the agent of the plaintiff, vendor, told the defendant, purchaser, that the iot was his. The defendant went on and set in the ground a number of stakes to mark out the foundation of a proposed house, and then changed his mind and refused to carry out the purchase:—Held, that what he had done constituted such a taking of possession as to constitute part performance, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the usual judgment for specific performance, Bodwell v. Contract for Sale of Land-Fraudu-Contract for Sale of Land—Fraudulent Scheme—Costs.]—The plaintiff brought his action against P., R., and H., for specific performance of an agreement for sale of land by H. to the plaintiff, and alleged that both P. and R. had notice of his claim as a bona fide purchaser from H., and that they had dealt with the land in pursuance of a fraudulent scheme and decide to decripe him of ulent scheme and device to deprive him of his interest. P. set up that he was a bona fide purchaser for value, without notice. set up that the plaintiff was in default under the covenants in the agreement, and that as assignee he had cancelled the same and deassignee he had cancelled the same and de-clared it void:—Held, that the circumstances shewed a dishonest and fraudulent design, de-vised and carried out by R., to get the land of the plaintiff: to have the benefit of the $200 the latter had paid to H. and all the improvements, including a good house, without any compensation, all in violation of the promise made and in fraud of the undertaking given in his (R.'s) name, so that the plaintiff was entitled to relief against R. The plaintiff baving omitted to register his agreement, P. was not shewn to have had knowledge of his interest in the land; there was not against him any proof of ac-tual notice, and the evidence of constructive notice through one Haney was far from being conclusive. As to R, he was guilty of fraud in dispossessing the plaintiff of his land, after promising and undertaking to protect him. The plaintiff should recover by way of damages what he paid to H. as purchase money, with interest. The plaintiff executed the agreement and returned it to R, with a cheque for $250, being the cash payment on the sale. Contract to Convey Land — Description — Quantity of Land — Measurements — Occupation—Abstement of Price.]—In an action for specific performance of a contract to convey lands, it appeared that the lands were described in the contract as "the bouse and premises on P. street, now occupied by Mrs. Ls., 32 feet more or less frontage on P. street and 67 more or less in depth." and that such lands did not possess a uniform depth of 67 feet, a pleee 13 feet by 14 having been taken out of one side at the near:—Held, that the implication as to the uniform depth of the lot, which would arise from the measurements given ought not to prevail, there being a certain description expressed in the agreement, viz., the occupation by L.; also, assuming that the distance to the rear line, from the measurements given, must be assumed to be equal, that the case was one in which the maxim falsa demonstratio non nocet applied, it being absolutely necessary to take the occupancy of L. in order to obtain the base line; and also, that the description answering to the holding ought to prevail ever the implied description, or subsequent addition, which would be false. Lease — Undertaking to Build — Non-performance in Lifetime of Lessor—Devise to Lessee — Damages.]—By an instrument dated 29th January, 1901, a father leased a farm to his son for five years from the 1st March, 1901, at a yearly rental of $200 payable in October of each year, and undertook to build on the farm, during the first year of the term, a house of certain expressed dimensions. There was a provision in the instrument for the determination of the lease at the end of any year by notice to that effect given in October previous. The father died on the 19th June, 1902, after the expiry of the first year of the term, but had not built nor done anything towards building the house. By his will, dated the 7th February, 1901, he devised the farm to his son, but made no reference to the lease:—Held, that (the father having died after breach of the undertaking) the son was not entitled to have the house built at the expense of the father's personal estate, but at most was entitled to damages for non-performance of the agreement to build. Amending Act — Retroaction — Sale of Land — Judgments and Orders — County Ourts.]—Until 1897 it was the practice in Manitoba for the Court of Queen's Bench to grant orders for the sale of lands on judgments of the County Court under Rules 803 et see, of the Queen's Bench Act, 1895. In that year the Court of Queen's Bench decided that this practice was irregular, and in the following year the Legislature passed an Act providing that "in the case of a County Court judgment an application may be made under Rule 803 or Rule 804, as the case may be. This amendment shall apply to orders and judgments heretofore made or judgments have been attacked before the passing of this amendment:—Held, Sedgewick, J., dissenting, that the words "orders and judgments in said clause refer only to orders and judgments." In said clause refer only to orders and judgments of the Queen's Bench for sale of lands on County Court judgments, and not to orders and judgments of the County Courts. Held, further, reversing the judgment of the Queen's Bench, 13 Man. L. R. 419, 21 Occ. N. 309, Davies, J., dissenting, that the clause had retroactive operation only to the extent that orders for sale by the Queen's Bench or only to the extent that orders for sale by the Queen's Bench or orders and previously were valid from the date on which the clause came into force, but not from the date on which the clause had or retroactive operation at all. Ritz v. Schmidt, 22 Occ. N. 79, 31 S. C. R. 602.

Bills and Notes — Place of Payment — Abrogation of Right to Elect Domicil—Current Instrument.] — Although the provision of art. 85, C. C.—by virtue of which the indication of a place of payment in a bill or note or-other writing, whatever be the place where it is dated, is equivalent to an election of the place so indicated as a domicil—has been abrogated by 63 V. c. 36 (Q.), such abrogation does not affect the election of domicil so made in a note signed before such abrogation. Therefore, it was open to the plaintiff in this case to sue the defendant at Montreal upon a promissory note dated at Montreal and payable there, although such note was really signed by the defendant in the Province of Ontario, where he was domiciled. Merchants Bank of Halifax v. Graham, Q. R. 19 S. C. 319.

Construction — Expropriation of Private Property.]—Statutes which encroach upon the rights of the subject in respect of his private property, or which enable public corporations to take his property without his consent, must be construed with the greatest strictness. Smith v. Public Parks Board of Portage La Prairie, 15 Man. L. R. 249, 1 W. L. R. 237.

Construction—Limitation of Monopoly—Bridge,]—Every limitation imposed by the legislature in creating a privilege, in this case a monopoly in favour of the owner of a bridge, must be interpreted as having for its object the diminishing as far as possible of the public inconvenience or the burden imposed by such monopoly. Rouleau v. Pouliot, Q. R. 25 S. C. SS.

Construction — Repeal—City charter— —Revocation—Change in governing body — Preamble of statute—Inconsistency with enacting parts. Rew v. Pickering (Y.T.), 1 W. L. R. 521.

Construction — Toll-bridge — Franchise — Exclusive Limits—Measurement of Distance — Exeroachment — 58 Geo, III. c. 20 (L.C.))—The Act 58 Geo, III. c. 20 (L.C.), authorized the erection of a toll-bridge across the river Etchemin, in the parish of Ste. Claire, "opposite the road leading to Ste. Thèrese, or as near thereto as may be in the county of Dorchester," and by s. 6 it was provided that no other bridge should be erected or any ferry used "for hire across the said river Etchemin, within half a league above the said bridge and below the said bridge:"—Held, Nesbitt and Idington, JJ., dissenting, that the statute should be constructed. Per Nesbitt and Idington, JJ., that there was not any expression in the statute show the said bridge and below the said bridge that the privilege defined should be mensured up-stream and downstream from the site of the bridge as constructed. Per Nesbitt and Idington, JJ., that there was not any expression in the statute shewing a contrary intention, and, consequently, that the distance should be measured from a straight line on the horizontal plane. But, per Idington, J.: In this case, as the location of the bridge was to be "opposite the road leading to Ste. Thèrese," and there was no proof that the new bridge complained of was within half a league of that road, the plaintiffs action should be maintained. Rouleau v. Pouliot, 25 Occ. N. 122, 36 S. C. R. 224.

Error in Printing - Effect of Amending Statute — Retroactivity — Assessment and Taxes — "Exempted."]—The Assessment Act, R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 73, s. 4 s.s. (p), by the accidental insertion of the word "exempted," rendered liable to assessment property of the plaintiffs previously exempted. It was admitted that the word imposing the liability was not contained in the manuscript revision of the statutes, but was inserted, by error, in the printed copy, deposited in the office of the Provincial Secretary, which, it was declared by the Act respecting the Revised Statutes, Acts of 1900, c. 44, s. 5, should be held to be the original. By an Act of the following year (Acts of 1902, Act of the following year (Act of 150%), c. 25), the error was corrected, by striking out of s. 4 (p) the word "exempted:"—Held, that, by this amendment, the Court was precluded from coming to the conclusion. that the insertion of the word "exempted, in the chapter of the Revised Statutes amended, was a mistake, and inserted and printed accidentally, it being assumed, in the amending Act, that the section amended was in full force and effect from the time it came into operation, the amendment being one that would be out of place if the legislature had intended from the first that the word should not be there; that, in the absence of words giving the amendment a retrospective effect, it could not be so read, and that the Act, as amended, would only apply to future as-sessments; and that the liability of the plaintiffs having been fixed by c. 73, and there having been no appeal, the amendment would not have the effect of preventing the collection of the rate complained of. Dominion Iron and Steel Co. v. McDonald, 37 N. S.

Imperative Provisions—"Is Hereby Authorized"—"May"—Boys' Industrial Home—Warrant of Chairman—Custody of Boy Convict—Establishment of Home as Prison-Dominion Statute-Intra Vires-Certificate of Sentence.]—In an application for a mandamus to the chairman of the Boys' Industrial Home to compel him to issue his warrant to deliver to the custody of the superintendent a boy sentenced to a term of imprisonment in the home under 56 V. c. 33 (D.). it appeared that s. 6 of the Act authorizes the gaoier to retain the boy "until there is presented to such gaoler a warrant from the chairman of the governing board (which warrant the chairman is hereby authorized to issue under his official seal) requiring the sheriff or constable or other officer to deliver such boy to the superintendent of such industrial home;" and that s. 9 of 56 V. c. 16 (N. B.) says "the said chairman may thereupon (referring to what shall precede the issuing of the warrant) issue his warrant." etc.:—
Held, that the words "is hereby authorized" in s. 6, and "may" in s. 9, are not only enabling words but imperative as well, and the chairman has no discretionary power as to the issue of the warrant. That the Dominion Act establishing the home as a prison, is not ultra vires. That the chairman was not justified in refusing to issue the warrant because the certificate of sentence did not contain all the items of information specified in schedule A of the Provincial Act. Exp. The Attorney-General, In re Goodspeed, 36 N. B. Reps.

Inadvertent Use of Word—Intention of Legislature—Way—Municipal Corporations-Property Fronting on Street.]-1 Where it is clear on the face of a statute that it was intended to govern and provide for a particular state of facts, the Court will modify the ordinary meaning of words so as to permit such intention to have effect. Therefore, in 57 V. (Q.) c. 57, s. 1, the word "widening," in reference to Milton street, being used evidently by inadvertence for "open-" the statute should be read in connection with other statutes relating to the same subject, and should be interpreted so as to give effect to the intention of the legislature. Joseph v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 10 S. C. 531, referred to. 2. The clause "properties fronting" on the line of a street includes properties adjoining or contiguous to the line of the street on any side, although the buildings thereon front on a street intersecting the other, and the properties are only bounded on the side line by the street first mentioned. Judgment in Q. R. 15 S. C. 268 affirmed. Watson v. Maze, Q. R. 17 S. C. 579.

Interpretation—Dual Language—Different Versions,]—Where the text of one version of a statute appears to be in conformity with the intention of the Legislature, such version may be followed in the interpretation of the statute, notwithstanding that an ambiguity exists in the text of the other version. Toes of Coaticook v. People's Tetephone Co., Q. R. 19 S. C. 535.

Interpretation-Reference to Prior Statute-Amendments - Incorporation-Declaratory Act-Expropriation of Land-Charter of Montreal.]-Where a statute declares that proceedings for expropriation shall be taken in conformity to a previous scatute, it is the latter, with all its subsequent modifications, and notably that allowing an appeal from an award fixing the compensation to be paid for the lands expropriated, which regulates the proceedings for expropriation, and that in spite of the fact that the legislature has only indicated that statute, without mentioning the amendments which have been made to it. 2 A statute in its nature declaratory, adopted at the session following the passing of the statute in question, adding to the mention of the previous statute that of the statute which had amended it so as to allow an appeal from an award, applies to expropriations commenced during the time allowed for such purpose. City of Montreal v. Poulin, Q. R. 25 S. C. 364, 6 Q. P. R. 457.

Jurisdiction of Court—County Court Judgment—Judicial Sale of Land.]—Itale S07 (a), added to the King's Bench Act by 60 V. c. 4, is retrospective, and was intended to apply not only to orders which had been previously made and which had not been attacked, but also to the proceedings which had been taken under them, so as to validate judicial sales of land that had been made under orders to realize County Court judgments without the bringing of a separate action, which it had been held in Proctor v. Parker, 11 Man. L. R. 485, 18 Occ. N. 128, there was no jurisdiction before 60 V. c. 4 to make. Ritz v. Schmidt, 21 Occ. N. 396, 13 Man. L. R. 4.19.

If a party may derogate from and renounce certain statutes having the character of public order, which confer private rights upon him, he may not, by his mere act and will, hinder and arrest the effect of a statute of public order. 3. The statute respecting controverted elections, being a law politic, has a retroactive effect. Succeey v. Lovell, Q. R. 19 S. C. 558.

Quebec Pharmacy Act — Retrospectiva Legislation—Suit for Joint Penalties—Second Offences—Unilicensed Sale of Drugs.]—The amendment of the Quebec Pharmacy Act by 62 V. c. 55, s. 2 (Q.), adding art. 4039 (b), R. S. Q., has no retroactive effect upon proceedings instituted for penalties under the Act before the amendment came into force. Penalties for several offences under the Act may be joined in one action, and, when the aggregate amount is sufficiently large, the action may be brought in the Superior Court as a Court of competent jurisdiction under the statute. Such action may properly be taken in the name of the Pharmaceutical Association of the province of Quebec. It is improper in such an action to describe subsequently charged offences as second offence under the statute, as a second offence and arise until there has been a condemnation for a penalty upon a first offence cannot arise until there has been a condemnation for a penalty upon a first offence charged. The sale in the Province of Quebec by an unlicensed person of drugs by poisonous, or partly composed of poison, or absolutely free from poison, is a violation of the prohibition contained in art. 4035, R. S. Q., and whether or not the articles sold be enumerated in the Quebec Pharmacy Act as poisons or as containing an enumerated poison. Judgment in Q. R. 2 Q. B. 243 reversed; Taschereau and Gwynne, J.J., dissenting, Pharmaceutical Association of Quebec V. Livernois, 21 Occ. N. S. 31 S. C. R. 43.

Retroactivity—Ultra Vires Act — Validating Act of Dominion Parliament—Construction — Execution — Exemption—Homestead,]—The Exemption Ordinance, c. 45, B. O. 1888, s. 1, s. s. 9, exempted from seizure under execution the homestead, to the extent of 160 acres, of the execution debtor. This sub-section having been declared ultra vires of the Legislative Assembly in In re Claxton, 1 Terr. L. R. 282, the Dominion Parliament, by 57 & 58 V. c. 29, declared that the territorial legislation on this subject "shall hereafter be deemed to be valid, and shall have force and effect as law:"—Held, that an execution filed against the homestead of the defendant prior to the passing of the validating statute constituted—but that an execution against the lands of the defendant filed subsequently to the passing of the said Act, did not constitute—a charge upon the homestend. Rules for construction of statutes considered, Massey v. McClelland, Baker v. McClelland, 2 Terr, L. R. 179.

Right of Appeal.] — A new statute giving a right of appeal which the previous statute denied is not applicable to an action begun under the operation of the old statute, even when such action is adjudicated upon after the coming into force of the new statute, which cannot be invoked in a cause begun while the previous statute was in force unless it merely changes the form of an already existing appeal. Reneault v. Gagnon, Q. R. 18 S. C. 127.

STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.

Action in Foreign Court for Bringing — Judicature Act, s. 57 (10).]
—Where there are substantial reasons for the double litigation, the Court will not stay proceedings in an action in Ontario until after the determination of another action for the same cause pending in a foreign Court. The power to stay proceedings under s. 57, cl. 10, of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 51, is a discretionary one, and the English cases are authorities as to the exercise of the discretion, although there is no similar statutory provision in England. Where the defendant, resident in Ontario, was sued there upon a promissory note, the Court refused to stay the action until after the determination of an attaching proceeding in a foreign Court, the effect of which, if successful, would be to make available towards payment of the note certain stock in a company domi-ciled in a foreign country. First Natchez Bank v. Coleman, 21 Occ. N. 437, 2 O. L. R. 159.

Agreement to Refer — Application to Stay Action — Time.]—An application under s. 11 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, to stay proceedings in an action for the purpose of compelling the plaintiff to carry out an agreement to submit the matters in dispute to arbitration, must, under the practice now in force in Manitoba, be made before the filing of the statement of defence. Claims in Contestation — Payment by Defendant.]—A motion by the defendant to stay the proceedings because of claims in contestation, in order that he may pay them, will be dismissed with costs; art. 1198, R. S. Q., indicates how, in such circumstances, the defendant should dispose of the sums which he owes. Montambault v. Brien, 4 Q. P. R. 328.

County Court Action — Injunction Against — Declaratory Judgment — Jurisdiction—Practice.)—Where no consequential relief is claimed, the Court's jurisdiction to make a declaratory order will be exercised with great caution. A declaration that the defendant is not entitled to proceed on a judgment recovered by him in another action against the plaintiff, will not be granted if, on a proper case being made out, the proceedings could have been stayed in the original action, except in special circumstances. A County Court Judge has jurisdiction to stay proceedings on a judgment in his Court, on a proper case for a stay being made out, such, for instance, as that the judgment has in effect been satisfied. In such a case an action in the Supreme Court to restrain the defendant from proceeding with his action in the Courty Court will be dismissed. Willman v. Jackson, 11 B. C. R. 133.

Several Actions by Different Plaintiffs against Same Defendant — Consolidation.) — Twenty-nine actions having been brought by different persons against the defendant company for damages caused by the death of relatives in an explosion in the company's coal mine, and twenty-nine summonses for better particulars of the plaintiffs' claims having been dismissed, the acfendants appealed:—Held, that the Court, by virtue of its inherent jurisdiction to prevent the abuse of its process, could and would, on the application of the defendants, stay proceedings in twenty-eight of the actions (upon defendants consenting to be bound in all the appeals by the result of one) until after the decision of the appeal in the remaining action—proper provisions being made in case that appeal did not properly dispose of the questions in all. The proper practice would have been to have applied to have the actions consolidated. Bodi v. Crow's Neat Pass Coal Co., 9 B. C. R. 332.

Vexations Action—Security for Costs.)—A special assignment for the benefit or creditors had been made by the plaintiff and his then partner to the defendant, who realized the assets and wound up the estate. The defendant's accounts were, after notice to the plaintiff, passed by a Surrogate Judge. The plaintiff then brought this action asking for an account and complaining of certain items of expenditure and compensation—Held, on the evidence, that there were grave doubts as to the bona fides of the action; that an order to stay proceedings would be justified; but that in the exercise of discretion the action might be preceeded with upon security for costs being given.

Board of Railway Commissioners—Jurisdiction—Railway Act, 1903, ss. 23, 184,—Use of Highway—Consent of Municipality—By-law.]—In the case of a street railway, or of any railway to be operated as such upon the highways of any city or incorporated town, the consent of the municipal authority required by s, 184 of the Railway Act, 1903, must be by a valid by-law, approved and sanctioned in the manner provided by the provincial municipal law, and, in the absence of evidence of such consent having been so obtained, the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada have no jurisdiction to enforce an order in respect to the construction and operation of any such railway. Montreal Street R. W. Co. v. Montreal Terminal R. W. Co., 25 Occ. N. 121, 36 S. C. R. 369.

By-law — Intra Vires — "Workmen's Tickets" — Amendment—"School Children's Tickets"—Action to Enforce Contract—Parties—Attorney-General—Specific Performance—Injunction—Declaration of Right.]—Held, upon the proper construction of the defendants' Act of incorporation, 36 V. c. 100 (O.), the amending Act, 56 V. c. 90, and the contract and by-law contained in the schedule to the latter Act, that the defendants were bound to sell the tickets called "workmen's tickets" upon their cars to the public and to receive them in payment of fares at the hours mentioned in the by-law, not from workingmen only, but from the public generally; and that the provision of the by-law in that behalf was not ultra vires of the plaintiffs. 2. The aforementioned contract was modified in accordance with a subsequent by-law of the plaintiffs, by requiring the de-fendants, in addition to the other limited tickets, to "give to any child between 5 and 14 years of age, when going to school, a ticket to go and return on the date of issue, for five cents:"-Held, that there was nothing in this cents: — Held, that there was nothing in this amendment to prevent children, when going to school, from paying their fares by using workmen's tickets, within the prescribed hours. 3, That the plaintiffs could maintain an action for a mandamus or mandatory injunction to compel the defendants to con tinue to sell workmen's tickets, without adding the Attorney-General as a party representing the public. 4. The defendants, having refused to sell certain classes of tickets upon their cars, or to accept them from persons from whom they were bound to accept them in payment of fares, were restrained from running cars upon which these tickets were not kept for sale, and this restraint was coupled with a declaration that they bound to sell them on their cars to all persons desiring to buy them, and to receive them from all persons in payment of fares during the hours mentioned in the by-law. Construction of Contract-Operation of Railway—Right of Municipality to Direct— Service—New Lines—Extension of Municipal Boundaries—City Engineer—Specific Performance—Special Case. —Under the agreement between the corporation of the city of Toronto and the Toronto Railway Company, which is set out in 53 V. c. 99 (O.), the right to determine what new lines shall be established and laid down, is vested in the city, and applies as well to the streets within the city, as it existed at the time of the making of the agreement, as to the streets in the territory from time to time brought within it, and for the company's failure to establish and lay down such new lines, the city is not limited merely to the right provided for in the agreement of granting such privilege to others. The right, under such agreement, to settle the time tables, and to fix the routes of the cars, to determine when open cars should be taken off in the autumn or resumed in the spring, and as to when and how cars should be heated, is for the city engineer, subject to the approval of the city council; but the city have no power to compel the company to continue to run, after mid-night, any car which, having started before midnight, cannot in due course finish its route by that time. On a special case stated in an action only such questions will be answered as must necessarily arise in the action. The Court, therefore, in view of 63 V. c. 102, ss. 1 and 5 (O.), being made applicable to the city, declined to answer a question raised in a special case as to the right of the city to have specifically performed those provisions of the agreement found in its favour; and an expression of opinion previously given against granting such specific performance, following Kingston v. Kingston Electric R. W. Co., 25 A. R. 462, was withdrawn. City of Toronto v. Toronto R. W. Co., 25 Occ. N. 72, 9 O. L. R. 333, 4 O. W. R. 330, 44 \(\) 6 O. W. R. 677, 10 O. L. R. 657.

Contract with Corporation - Construction of Contract-Snow and Ice.]-The city council of Montreal being bound as the road authority to remove the ice and snow on the street from curb to curb, including the snow thrown or falling thereon from the roofs of houses and removed thereto from the sidewalks: - Held, that the respondent street railway company, having contracted with the city to keep their track free from snow and ice, did not, having regard to the surrounding circumstances, and in the absence of words expressly forbidding it, commit a nuisance by sweeping their snow into the street. Ogston v. Aberdeen District Tramways Co., [1897] A. C. 111, distinguished:—Held, also, that the city having granted to the company all rights and privileges necessary for the proper and efficient use of electric power to operate cars in the streets in the manner successfully in use elsewhere, the latter could not be prevented from using the electric sweepers. Judgment in Q. R. 11 K. B. 458 affirmed. City of Montreal v. Montreal Street R. W. Co., [1903] A. C. 482.

Contract with Municipality-Specific Performance—Damages—Impossibility—Railway Committee of Privy Council-Bond-Substituted Agreement.]-Specific performance of an agreement by a street railway company with a municipal corporation to construct, equip, and operate a line of rails along certain streets in the municipality, cannot enforced, nor can damages be awarded for non-performance of the contract, if the construction of the street railway has been rendered impossible, through the action of the Railway Committee of the Privy Council in refusing to sanction a crossing, or by reason of the occupation of the street by another railway company, whether with or without lawful authority, the duty of the municipality in the case of unlawful occupation being to restore the street to a condition to permit of the construction. When the obliger in a bond agrees, if required by the obligee, to perform certain work, and subsequently, by agreement between the successors in law of the obligor and the obligee, an absolute obligation to do the work is substituted, the effect of the later agreement is, to discharge the obligation created by the bond. City of Ottawa v. Ottawa Electric Street R. W. Co., 21 Occ. N. 289, 1 O. L. R. 377, 1 O. W. R. 830, 2 O. W. R. 719.

Extension of Lines—Municipal By-laces
—Changes in Lines—Validity—Mandatory Order—Injunction—Estoppel—Resolution,]
—The city of London council passed certain resolutions authorizing the extension of the lines and changing the routes of the plain tiffs' railways. The plaintiffs relied upon a by-law being passed later to affirm the resolution and went on with certain work and incurred expense. The by-law No. 2083 was afterwards passed, read a first, second and third time at one meeting of the council, signed by the clerk, sealed with the municipal seal, but the mayor refused to sign it. An action was brought to compel the mayor to sign the by-law and to compet the mayor to sign the by-law and to compet the defendants to accept the agreement: — Held, that the company took the risk of the by-laws being carried, and that they were not misled; and it was incomplete and invalid without the mayor's signature :- Held, also, that two bylaws as to the routes and speed of the plaintiffs' cars were, under the circumstances valid as being within the defendants' power and authority under 59 V. c. 105 (O.), which validated a by-law of the defendants and an agreement between plaintiffs and defendants under which the plaintiffs built and operated their railway. By the original by-law, under which the road was authorized to be built and operated, as set out in the judgment of McMahon, J., 2 O. W. R. 44, the defendants were bound to establish new lines, as might be directed by by-laws of defendants, in the proportion of one mile of track to every 2,000 inhabitants of the city then existing or thereafter extended, the population to be ascertained as mentioned in the by-law, and that in the event of any local municipality being annexed, the railways of the company within the annexed municipality, and the company, in relation thereto, should have all the rights and be subject to the terms of the by-law. and be subject to the terms of the by-law. A local municipality, London West, was an-nexed to the defendants' municipality in 1898, and at the time of annexation had a street railway trackage of 5,900 feet. The population of the city in 1901 was 39,183, being an increase of 4,183, and the proportion of additional trackage to population was 11,043 feet. By a subsequent by-law defendants were directed to construct 7,380 feet of additional track: — Held, Maclennan, J.A. dissenting, that under the original by-law when the population was raised by the by the absorption of the municipality of West London, the track mileage in that municipality could not be treated for the purposes of by-law 916 as extension quoad the increased population. It was the increase of the population of the city, no matter how its borders were extended, which gave the council the right under the prescribed conditions to require the extension of the existing track mileage, whatever that might be. from a car of the defendants in which he was a passenger, and attempted to cross the street, when he was, while the car from which he had alighted was standing still. which he had angued was statuting struck by another car going in the opposite direction, and injured. A rule of the defendants required that a motorman when passing another car should slacken speed and ring gong continuously until car passed: -Held, upon the evidence, that the gong was not rung when the east-bound car was approaching and passing the standing car; that the car was running past the standing car at a rate of speed which was, under the circumstances, excessive and dangerous to the passengers alighting from the other car; and negligence was thus established. The onus of proving contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff rested on the defendants in the first instance, and, in the absence of evidence tending to that conclusion, the plaintiff was not bound to prove the negative in order to entitled him to a verdict; Wakelin v, Loudon and South-Western R, W, Co., 12 App. Cas. 41. To prove contributory negligence it is necessary for the defendant to shew that the plaintiff could, by the exercise of such care and skill as he was bound to exercise, have avoided the consequence of the defendant's negligence: Dublin and Wicklow R. W. Co. v. segrence: Dublin and Wicklow R. W. Co. V. Slattery, 3 App. Cas, 1207. Upon the whole circumstances as detailed in the evidence, there was no proof of contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff to disentitle him to recover. There was not a want of due care on the plaintiff's part as a proximate cause of the injury, which could alone constitute negligence sufficient to deprive him of his remedy against the defendants for their negligence. Bell v. Winnipeg Electric Street R. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. 155.

Injury to Passenger — Damages — Release of claim — Validity of — Mental incapacity of plaintiff — Knowledge of defendants — Absence of fraud—Failure to notify plaintiff's solicitor—Costs. Beog v. Toronto R. W. Co., 3 O. W. R. 517.

Injury to Passenger—Dangerous Condition of Steps of Car—Climatic Unditions—Moccasity for Care.]—The steps of an electric car, owned and operated by the defendants, were in a slippery condition in consequence of exposure, while in use, to snow followed by rain, sleet, and cold. The evidence shewed that the car had been thoroughly cleaned in the morning, before being sent out, and that it would not have been practicable to operate it in such weather as that which prevailed at the time and to send it back constantly to the barn to have the snow and ice removed:—Held, that passengers bourding and leaving the car at such a time were bound to exercise more than ordinary caution, and that it would not be reasonable to hold the defendants accountable for injuries sustained by the plaintiff, a passenger on one of their cars, who, in getting off the car, slipped and fell. McCormack v. Sydney and Glace Bay E. W. Co., 3T N. S. Reps. 254.

Injury to Passenger—Findings of jury—Proximate cause—Nonsuit—New trial. Collins v. London Street R. W. Co., 3 O. W. R. 212, 553.

Injury to Passenger—Negligence—Contributory Negligence — Passenger Alighting

from Car run over by Another.]-The plaintiff, a passenger on a crowded car of the defendants going westwards, being near the front of the car when it stopped at the street where he wished to alight, made his way past a number of persons in the passage and in the front vestibule to the steps at that end, on which another man was standing, and stepped off the car in the direction of the parallel track of the railway. Almost in-stantaneously upon alighting, he was struck by another car of the defendants (of whose approach he was not aware) proceeding eastwards on the other track, knocked down, and very seriously injured. The distance between the sides of two cars, when passing one another on the two tracks, was 44 inches, and the height of the lowest step of the car from the ground was 15½ inches. It was the custom of the company to permit passengers to alight at the front entrance, and they had no rule against it. It was, however, a rule of the company that motormen, when approaching another car, should slacken speed and ring the gong continuously until the car had been passed, which, however, was not done in this case:—Held, that the motorman on the car by which the plaintiff was struck was guilty of negligence, rendering the defendants liable in damages for the injury done to plaintiff, and that the plaintiff had not been guilty of contributory negligence. There is no binding authority for the proposition that from the moment a pussenger's foot touches the ground, a street railway company's lia-bility for injuries to him by their other cars ceases. Injury to Pedestrian—Negligence—Excessive Speed—Means of Escape—Burden of Proof.]—The plaintiff, proceeding along the track of the defendants, on a public street in the city of Sydney, was overtaken, struck, and severely injured by an electric car, driven at an excessive and dangerous rate of speed. At the time of the accident the plaintiff was prevented from escaping by a car of another line, which was obstructing the crossing in front of him, and by banks of snow, which had been thrown up by the defendants' plough at the side of the track upon which he was standing:—Held, that the burden of shewing that the plaintiff had means of escape, was upon the defendants; and that the plaintiff having the right to be where he was, and the whole event, from the moment he discovered his danger to the time he was struck, having appened in the course of a few seconds, he was not to be held to the obligation of selecting the best possible means of escape. Injury to Person Crossing Track -Collision — Rate of Speed—Negligence—Con-tributory Negligence—Proximate Cause—Ap-peal—New Point.] — The plaintiff's waggon was struck and plaintiff injured by an electric tram car of the defendants, while attempting to cross the defendants' track, at a place known as Grand Lake Crossing, near which there was a down grade for a distance of about 3,000 feet, and then an up grade for 1,000 feet, terminating at a siding near which the crossing was situated. On the down grade it was usual to run cars at a speed of from 20 to 25 miles an hour, but when half way down the power was shut off and the speed on reaching the siding was 10 miles an hour. When the plaintiff's team was first seen it was at a distance of from 35 to 40 feet from the crossing, and the car was distant from 50 to 75 feet. The motorman promptly applied the brakes and reversed the current, but was unable to avert the collision. The whistle had been blown when 300 yards distant from the crossing, and the car was provided with suitable appliances for stopping it within a reasonable time. The rate of speed at which reasonable time. The rate of special was reasonable considering the time and place. The plaintiff heard a whistle blown, which he supposed to be that of a Sydney and Louisburg train, but did not see the car until his horse's head was distant about 20 feet from the crossing. was also evidence to shew that he failed to exercise proper care in approaching the crossing, as the reins were lying loose, and one witness called for the plaintiff testified that, at the time, the horse was being whipped and was galloping: — Held, that the proximate cause of the accident was negligence on the part of the plaintiff. A point not raised by the statement of claim, or at the trial, where evidence might have been given to displace the contention, should not be raised on appeal. Livingstone v. Sydney and Glace Bay R. Injury to Person Crossing Track — Negligence — Contributory Negligence — Nonsuit.] - The plaintiff, in returning home at two o'clock in the morning, alighted from a west-bound car of the defendants on the north track of a street in a city, and proceeded to cross the north and south tracks on the street, in front of an approaching east-bound car on the south track, then about one hundred feet away. He was struck by the car and in-jured. There was evidence that it was going at the rate of 8 to 10 miles an hour; that there was a bright electric light near by : that the plaintiff, if careful, could have seen the approaching car; but that the motorman did not apply the brakes or sound the gong before the plaintiff was struck :- Held, that a nonsuit was properly directed in an action brought against the defendants for negligence, Gallinger v. Toronto R. W. Co., 25 Occ. N. 10, 8 O. L. R. 698, 4 O. W. R. 522.

Injury to Vehicle by Collision — Negligence—Use of Tracks—Nuisance—Piling Snow at Sides of Tracks—Contributory Negligence.]-A car of the defendants, driven at an excessive rate of speed, ran into the plaintiffs' waggon, which was proceeding along the track, from which the defendants had removed the snow accumulated there during a heavy snow storm, and deposited it on the highway in such a way as to make it impassable for waggons, which, to the knowledge of the defendants, were forced, in consequence, to make use of the defendants' tracks. The driver of the waggon made repeated efforts to attract the attention of the motorman, but failed though there was sufficient light and an unobstructed view for 400 yards :- Held, in an action for damages for negligence, that the action for damages for negligence, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover; that the blocking of the highway by the defendants constituted in fact as well as in law a nuisance, and, the common law having been infringed, there was no burden east upon the plaintiff to shew a requirement by the local authorities to level the snow to a certain depth over a certain area, and that such requirement had not been complied with; that if contributory negligence was relied on, the case was one in which the defendants must not only prove such negligence, but also that it was of such a character that they could not by the exercise of ordinary care and diligence have averted the mischief which happened; and that the restrictions in the company's charter in relation to the levelling of snow placed upon the highway, amounted to a condition. Mortgage-Future Property-Fixtures -Rolling Stock-Execution-Company.] - An electric street railway company, incorporated electric street raiway company, incorporated under the Ontario Joint Stock Companies Letters Patent Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 157, and subject to the provisions of the Street Railway Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 171, gave to trustees for holders of debentures of the company that the provisions of the company that the company that the provision of the company that the contract of the contract o a mortgage upon the real estate of the company, together with all buildings, machinery, appliances, works, and fixtures, etc., and also appliances, works, and fixtures, etc., and also all rolling stock and all other machinery, appliances, works, and fixtures, etc., to be thereafter used in connection with the said works. The by-laws of the directors and shareholders (who were the same persons, and only five in number) authorizing the giving of the mortgage, directed it to be given upon all the real estate, plant, franchises, and income of the company, and the debentures stated that they were secured by morfgage of the real estate, franchises, rolling stock, plant, etc., acquired or to be acquired:—Held, that s. 38 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 157 does not restrict the power of mortgaging to the existing property of the company, and that a company is invested with as large powers to mortgage its ordinary after-acquired property as belong to a natural person; that the mortgage in terms covered future property, and, even if not authorized in this respect upon a strict reading of the by-laws, had been acquiesced in and ratified, and was binding:-Held, also, that the rolling stock, poles, wires, etc., formed an essential part of the corpus of what must be regarded as an entire machine and water the corpus chine, and were, therefore, fixtures and not seizable under execution to the prejudice of the mortgagees, Kirkpatrick v. Cornwall Electric Street R. W. Co., Bank of Montreal v. Kirkpatrick, 21 Occ. N. 368, 2 O. L. R.

Municipal By-law—Conviction—Operating Car without Proper Vestibules—Persons Operating Car.]—Conviction of a street rail-way company for that they did run and operate a street car which was not provided with proper and sufficient vestibules to protect the motormen and persons in charge of such car from exposure to cold, snow, rain, and sleet, while engaged in operating such car, contrary to the by-law of the municipality passed on the 24th September, 1894, numbered 3280, and intituled "A by-law to provide for the construction of vestibules for the shelter of motormen and others upon the cars of electric railway companies:"—Held, on motion to quash, that the conviction was valid upon its face, being in the terms of the by-law, and that the by-law was warranted by the statute. Semble, per Armour, C.J.O., that the conductor, unless he is acting instead of the motorman, is not a person engaged in operating the car; but that point would only arise upon the evidence, which the Court would not look at where the conviction was valid on its face and the majistrate had juriselication. Regina v. Toronto R. W. Co., 21

Municipal By-law—Highway—Removal of Snow—Indemnity.]—By the provisions of a municipal by-law, to which a street railway company were bound to conform, the conjuny were obliged to remove snow from their tracks in such a manner as not to obstruct or render unsafe the free passage of sleighs or other vehicles along or across the street. After a heavy snow-fall the company removed the snow from their tracks, the result being that there was a bank of several inches at each side of the tracks to the level of the snow-covered portions of the street:—Held, that the company had not discharged their obligation, and that they were liable to indemnify the city against damages recovered against the city by a person who had, in consequence of the bank, been upset while driving along the street. Mitcheil v. City of Hamilton, 21 Occ. N. 372, 2 O. L. R. 58.

Negligence — Collision — Contributory Negligence.]—The plaintiff, who was driving a horse and waggon very slowly along a street on the left side of a car track, turned to the right to cross the track, and the waggon was struck by a car which was coming behind, at what was held to have been a reasonable rate of speed. The plaintiff said that one hundred feet from the point at which he had tried to cross he looked back and that no car was to be seen, and he did not look again before trying to cross:—Held, that it was his duty to have looked, and that his not having done so constituted contributory negligence on his part, which disentitled him to recover damages. Danger v. London Street R. W. Co., 30 O. R. 493, applied. O'Hearn v. Town o' Port Arthur, 22 Occ. N. 255, 4 O. L. R. 208. 1 O. W. R. 373.

Negligenee—Danger to Public—Avoidance of — Notice of Action.] — An electric tramway company ought to avoid everything which, without being absolutely necessary for its service, constitutes a danger to the public, and if the company does not do so it is guilty of actionable negligence. 2. The fact that a cause of danger can be suppressed only by means of an increase of labour or expense, is not an excuse for allowing it to subsist. 3. A provision of the charter of the Montreal Stre-t Railway Company which obliges those who wish to sue it for damages to give a thirty days' notice, does not make of such notice a condition of the right of action against the company; it is but one of those prejudicial obligations the non-observance of which must be invoked by a dilatory exception. Mattice v. Montreal Street R. W. Co., Q. R. 20 S. C. 222.

Negligence—Evidence — Misdirection — Foreign Commission—New Trial.)—The Supreme Court of New Brunswick, in banc, granted a new trial for misdirection, but this decision was reversed by the Supreme Court of Canada. Hesse v. St. John R. W. Co., 35 N. B. Reps. 1, 20 Occ. N. 113, 30 S. C. R. 218.

Negligenee — Injury to Passenger — Car Running Backwards — Jury — Answers to Questions.]—The plaintiff was injured by a waggon in which he was being driven being struck by an electric car of the defendants which was runing backward in a southerly direction on the easterly track in a street, which track, according to the usual custom of the defendants, should have been used only by cars running in a northerly direction. The motorman was at the northerly end of the car, and no special precautions were being observed. The jury were asked, by the Judee

of snow o a con-Co., 37 presiding at the trial, to say, in the vent of their returning a verdict for the piaining, what negligence they pointed to. The jury found that the defendants were responsible for the accident, for the reasons that the car was on the wrong track and the motorman at the rear end, and judgment was entered in the plaintiff's favour for the damages assessed:—Held, that this was a general verdict, which there was evidence to support, in the plaintiff's favour, with a statement of reasons which might be disregarded, and was not merely a specific finding in answer to a question. Per Armour, C.J.O.: Questions to the jury must be in writing, Per Osler, J. A.: While it is more convenient that questions to the jury should be in writing, the Judge is not bound to adopt that course. Ballour v. Toronto R. W. Co., 23 Occ. N. 241, 5 O. L. R. 735, 2 O. W. R. 671.

Megligence — Injury to Passenger—Conductor Attempting to Pull Passenger on Moving Car—Scope of Authority—Question for Jury—New Trial.]—The plaintiff came to a platform station of the defendants and signalled an approaching car to stop. The car slowed down, but did not stop, and, as it was passing, the conductor seized the plaintiff's hand, and, while attempting to help her on board, signalled the car to go on again, which it did, and she was injured. The jury found that the plaintiff was injured by the conductor seizing her hand and trying to pull her on the car, and that he acted negligently : -Held, that it was the duty of the conductor to assist people in getting on and off the car, and that it might be within the line of his duty to assist those apparently about to get on a car while it is slowing up: that the question as to the scope of the onductor's authority is one of evidence; that there was evidence to go to the jury, and the effect of it was for them to consider; and that it should have been left to them to pass upon the circumstances of the case as to the scope of the conductor's authority, Davedy v. Hamilton, Grimsby, and Beamsville R. W. Co., 23 Occ. N. 44, 5 O. L. R. 92, 1 O. W. R. 364, 781, 2 O. W. R. 789.

Negligence—Injury to Person — Failure to Give Warning.]—The plaintiff, travelling by electric railway along a country road on dark night, got off at a regular stopping He then turned back along the road, and, after walking for some distance, the car which he had travelled, backing up, struck and injured him. There was a light at both ends of the car, but the current was very weak at the time, and the light given very slight, and the motorman came within four or five feet of the plaintiff before seeing The car was going along at the rate of only three or four miles an hour. The motorman did not sound the gong nor give any other warning of his approach :- Held, that the case could not properly have been with-drawn from the jury; that the accident was fairly and properly attributable to the de-fendants' negligence; and that there had been no misdirection, but that the sum awarded by the jury as damages, $1,800, was largely in excess of what had been given in cases of much more serious injury, although it can-not be said that there is a standard of damages in such cases. New trial directed unless the plaintiff would consent to the reduction of his verdict to $900. Ford v. Metropolitan R.

W. Co., 22 Occ. N. 227, 4 O. L. R. 29, 1 O. W. R. 387.

Operation — Municipal Franchise—Con-struction of Contract — Suburban Lines Percentages upon Earnings Outside City Limits.]-The corporation of the city of Montreal called for tenders for establishing and operating an electric passenger railway with-in its limits in accordance with specifications. and subsequently entered into a contract with a company then operating a system of horse tramways in the city, which extended into adjoining municipalities. The contract, dated adjoining municipalities. The contract, dated the 8th March, 1893, granted the franchise to the company for the period of 30 years from the 1st August, 1892. A clause in the contract provided that the company should pay to the city, annually during the term of the franchise, "from the 1st September. 1892, upon the total amount of its gross earnings arising from the whole operation of its said railway, either with cars propelled by electricity or with cars drawn by horses. certain percentages specified according to the gross amounts of such earnings from year to year. Upon the first annual settlement, on the 1st September, 1893, the company paid the percentages without any distinction being made between their earnings arising beyond the city limits and those arising within the city, but subsequently they refused to pay percentages except upon the estimated amount of the gross earnings arising within the limits of the city. In an action by the city to recover percentages upon the gross earnings of the lines of tramways both inside and outside of the city limits:—Held, reversing the judgment below, Taschereau, C.J.C., and Killam, J., dissenting, that the city corporation were entitled to the specified percentages upon the gross earnings of the company arising from the operation of the tramway both within and without the city limits. Payment of Proportion of "Gross Receipts" — Intra Vires.]—A covenant by the defendants to pay to the plaintiffs a certain proportion of the defendants' gross receipts was held to be not beyond the powers of the plaintiffs, a city corporation, and the defendants, a street railway company. Upon the proper construction of the covenant, the term "gross receipts" was held to include fares paid by passengers without the corporate territorial limits of the plaintiffs, where the passengers began their journey upon the defendants' railway beyond such limits and also to include traffic receipts not yet arned, such as receipts from the sale of massengers' tickets still outstanding. SUBROGATION.

Essentials of — Creditor — Volunteer.]
—The doctrine of subrogation is part of the law of the province of Nova Scotia. 2, Subrogation arises either upon convention or by law, but in the province of Nova Scotia the creditor must be a party to the con-vention. It is not sufficient that it be with the debtor only. 3, Subrogation by opera-tion of law is recognized not only by the civil law, but it has been adopted and followed civil law, but it has been adopted and followed by courts administering the law of England. 4. It is an incident of the doctrine of sub-rogation that an obligation extinguished by a payment made by a third party is treated as still subsisting for his benefit. 5. Where one is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of a judgment creditor, he is to be subrogated to all and not to part only of the latter's rights in such judgment. Semble, that a mercian control of the subrogated to all and such judgment. that a mere stranger or volunteer, who pays the debt of another, without an assignment or agreement for subrogation, without being or agreement for subrolation, without being under any legal obligation to make the payment, and without being compelled to do so for the preservation of any rights or property of his own, cannot invoke the benefit of the doctrine of subrogation. Regina v. O'Bryan, 21 Occ. N. 278, 7 Ex. C. R. 19.

Expothec — Payment — Tiers-de-tenteur — Registration — Mistakes of Registrar.]— F. on the 13th May, 1893, hypothecated to O. lots 87, 119, 130, and 132. Subsequently

A. became tiers-de-tenteur of 87 and half of 132. Later J. became tiers-detenteur of 119 and 130 and other half of 132. Neither A. nor J. was bound to pay the claim of O. On 22nd April, 1899, and 12th February, 1900, J. borrowed $500 from E. and hypothecated to him the lands of which he was tiers-detenteur. On the 9th November, 1901, in order to obtain legal subrogation, E. paid the claim of O., who gave him a quittance and granted him conventional subrogation. On 23rd November, 1901, A, sold the lands of which he was tiers-detenteur to M., and charged upon the purchase price the charged upon the purchase pires the payment of O.'s claim, to which E. was subrogated. On 26th November, 1901, to comply with this obligation, M. paid to E. the O. claim and obtained a quittance, which stated that the payment was made out of the purthat the payment was made out of the pay-chase money due to A. and in accordance with the terms of the sale, and that it was a general and final quittance and for radiation of the hypothec. The lands of which J. was of the hypothec. The lands of which J, was the tiers-detenteur were sold by the sherift, and the proceeds were to be distributed:—
Held, that the right and interest of A, (or of M.) to obtain legal subrogation was superior to those of E., for A, was interested in paying off the debt to free his land from the hypothec. 2. That A, by this payment made by his purchaser out of the purchase money to E, had obtained legal subrogation in the O, claim in suite of the terrest fits. money to E_s, had obtained legal subrogation in the O. claim, in spite of the terms of the quittance signed by E. 3. But that the lands of A. (sold to M.) being equally affected by the claim of O_s A. could claim out of the proceeds of the sale of J.'s 'lands only a deduction of that portion of the O. claim which these lands should bear in proportion to their value; and such was the extent of the legal subrogation obtained by A. 4. Thaf the legal subrogation obtained by A. 4. That E., not being an assignee nor a subsequent subrogate, could not complain of the want of registration of the legal subrogation obtained by A. 5. That the registrar's mistakes or irregularities or erroneous interpretation of documents regularly produced before him could not injuriously affect the rights of A. 6. That to obtain registration of the quittance granted by E., it was sufficient to produce a copy of it to the registrar, which had been done, and the quittance shewed the legal subrogation. Claims on — Alimentary Allowance for Widow. |—A widow, as such, has no right to an alimentary allowance from the succession of her deceased husband. Peloquin v. Brazeau, 5 Q. P. R., 128.

Claims on — Widow's Mourning.] — A widow who sues to obtain from her husband's succession a provision for the expense of her mourning, has a right herself to choose what she regards as proper to buy, and the person who is obliged to pay for the mourning must pay such a sum as is fitting, having regard to the estate and fortune of the decensed; a detailed account of the cost of the mourning cannot be claimed. Peloquin v. Brazeau, 5 Q. P. R. 129.

Heritier Beneficiaire — Scisin — Liability for Debts — Account.] — An héritier beneficiaire is, like an héritier pur et simple, seised of the succession as soon as it' is sopened, with this difference, that he is not personally liable for the debts of the succession. He may be sued for such debts, and the creditors, before bringing action, are not obliged to demand and await an account. Picard v. L'Hôpitai Général de Quebec, Q. R. 26 S. C. 159.

Renunciation of — Mandate of Attorney — Execution — Registration.]—In the absence of proof of express mandate, an allegation of renunciation of a succession made by an attorney ad litem, in an action claiming rights under a substitution, is absolutely void and ineffective as a renunciation, the same not being made by a notarial deed or by a judicial declaration which has been recorded, as required by art. 651, C. C., and an attorney ad litem having no presumed mandate to renounce a succession. 2. A document purporting to be a renunciation of a succession in this province, executed in a foreign country before witnesses and a justice of the peace, and recorded on the same day by the town clerk of the place, is also void and ineffective as a renunciation, the forms prescribed by art. 651 C. C., not having been thereby complied with, and the document, moreover, not having been registered, as required by art. 2128, C. C. Legrand v. Legrand, Q. R. 20 S. C. 521.

Jurisdiction — Accounting—Falsifying Inventory of Assets.]—The jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical Court as to accounting was of a very restricted character, and no greater measure of jurisdiction in scope, though there may be in details, is now vested in the Surrogate Courts of Ontario. For full inquiry and accounting resort must be had to the administrative powers of the High Court. Review of English authorities. Where upon an accounting by executors before a Surrogate Court Judge it was objected by the residuary legatees that a certain sum of money not in-cluded in the executors' inventory of the assets of the estate, should have been included, and it appeared that the widow of the testator, who was one of the executors, ctaimed this sum as a gift from the testator in his lifetime:—Held, Meredith, J., dissenting, that the Judge had no jurisuiction to pass upon the question thus raisec; all that he could do was to report that a claim had been made that there was another asset of the estate, stating what it was, which he was unable to investigate, and could therefore only approve of the rest of the accounts suomitted to him. Willage Lots — Authorization — Statutory Requirements — Order in Council—Re-law oblutions of Municipal Council—By-law — Cost of Survey—Assessment for — Proprietors Interested.]—After a resolution of the council of an incorporated village in favour of a survey of certain streets and lots, and correspondence with the Crown Lands Department, an order in council was passed, by which C, was instructed to survey the village lots of the Bailey estate and to plant durable monuments at the front angles of each of these lots, on Joseph street, Bailey street, and a street south of Bailey street, unnamed in the original survey, and he did as he was instructed. The village council then passed a by-law directing that the sum of $290.77 should be levied on the proprietors of the lands surveyed, being the village lots of the Bailey estate: —Held, that the survey directed was not authorized and was illegal, the requirements of the statute (R. §. O. 1887 c. 152, s. 39) not having been complied with so far as to give the Lieutenant-Governor in council jurisdiction to authorize the survey. 2. That the survey being illegal, the municipal council had no power to pass a by-law to levy the cost of it. 3. That if there was jurisdiction to authorize the survey, it could only be at the cost of the proprietors of the lands in each range or block interested, and not of all the proprietors, whether interested or not. TENANTS IN COMMON.

Erection of Wharf by One—Ouster—Trapsas—Burden of Proof.]—The defendants erected a wharf on a portion of a water lot in the town of L., of which they were tenants in common with the plaintiff:—Held, that the wharf was a permanent structure, and that the defendants by erecting it ousted the plaintiff, their co-tenant, from the portion of the lot which it covered; that a claim by the plaintiff for damages for cutting logs, and a counterclaim by the defendants for the erection of the logs so cut, must both be dismissed, neither party having satisfied the burden of proof by shewing ownership of the land upon which the trespasses complained of were committed. Possession of One—Statute of Limita-tions—Fiduciary Capacity—Acquiescence Partition.]-An action for partition of land was resisted by the heirs, etc., of D., on the ground that she had acquired title by exclusive possession against the other tenants in common. The trial Judge found, and the evidence supported such finding, that D. acted throughout in a fiduciary capacity, as administratrix for the benefit of her father's estate, and those interested in it:-Held, that it and those interested in it.—Heid, that it was not open to a person in the position of D. to avail herself of the Statute of Limitations. As the plaintiffs believed that D, was acting within her rights as administratirs, there was nothing in their conduct that would operate as a bar to the relief sought on the ground of acquiescence. The acts of D., leasing the property, collecting rents, etc., which were relied upon as giving her an exclusive title, were perfectly consistent with the rights of the plaintiffs as tenants in common. Driving Logs—Injury to Land—Damacas—Misdirection — Employment of Contractor — Vis Major.]—In an action for damages for injuries to the plaintiffs' land by logs which the defendant had neglected to confine within his boom, and which were suffered to be driven up and down stream by the tide, the trial Judge instructed the jury that in assessing damages they were not restricted to the actual damage referred to in the statute (R. S. N. S. c. 95, s. 17), but, at the same time, the amount allowed ought to be reasonable:—Held, that the jury should have been told, at the same time, that the actual damage was, as a rule, the measure in common law actions of this kind; but, as the amount awarded by the jury was small, and as there was evidence to support it, the misdirection, if any, occasioned no substantial wrong or miscarriage, and was, therefore, within O. xxxvii., r. 6. Quere, whether the defendant could escape liability by employing a contractor to bring down his logs, when, in the ordinary course of things, they would necessarily come in contact with the plaintiffs' land. Semble, that he could not. In respect to a portion of the damage done, the defendant relied upon a plea of vis major:—Held, that this was not a defence unless the defendant could shew that the damage would equally have happened if he had done his duty:—Held, that, in this case, the excuse was insufficient, a larger quantity of logs having been brought down the stream in the expectation that, before the high tides came, a sufficient quantity could be sawed to enable the remainder to be confined within the boom, and the high tides having occurred two or three days earlier than the defendant expected, as the result of which the logs not confined in the boom were carried up the stream and stranded on the plaintiffs' land. Campbell v. Dickie, 35 N. S. Reps. 40.

Sale — Contract — Time for Removal.]—
In 1899 the plaintiff contracted with the defendant B., by an instrument under seal, to sell to the latter certain kinds of timber from the plaintiff's land, "now upon" the lots described, and so much thereof as the purchaser might see fit to cut and remove, with the right of entry "at all times "until removed, that the present the timber removed to be paid for at certain specified prices —Held, that the agreement being silent as to the duration of the right to cut and remove, it must be exercised within a reasonable time; and B. and his assigns, not having attempted to exercise the right until 1903, should be enjoined from doing so, Dolan v. Baker, 10 O. L. R. 250, 5 O. W. R. 229.

—St. G., the owner of land, by an agreement in writing sold all the timber on it to E. assigned all his interest in the agreement to S., his principal, who made the notes: E. indorsed them to St. G. S. cut and removed timber from the land, and cut and piled on the land a lot of cordwood, which he sold to the defendant, but did not pay the notes. St. G. sold the land and all her interest in the timber and the notes to the plaintiff. The defendant sought to remove the wood, but the plaintiff obtained an injunction restraining him, and claimed a vendor's lien:—Held, that the sale of the timber to be removed in three years by the purchaser was of an interest in land, in respect of which Application to Fix-Rivers and Streams Act-Improvements.]-Proper sum fixed by a County Court Judge as a toll to be paid by one lumber company to another for the use of the constructions and improve-ments made by the latter upon a creek so as to make it floatable, upon an application one of the companies under R. S. O. c. 142 taking into account the original cost of the constructions and improvements, the amount required to maintain the same, the interest upon the original cost, and other matters. Fire-ranging was not considered part of the original cost nor a proper charge for maintenance. A sum of $100 was allowed for book-keeper's time. The Judge refused to divide the constructions and improvements into sections and assign different tolls to the different sections according to the amount of saw logs and timber floated over each of such sections. He also refused to take into such sections. He also refused to take into consideration the sum expended in increasing the efficiency of the improvements for the convenience of the respondents. TITLE TO LAND.

Quebec Law — Possessory Action — Nature and Period of Possession,]—The possession necessary to entitle a plaintiff to maintain a possessory action must be continuous and uninterrupted, peaceable, public, and as proprietor, for the whole period of a year and a day immediately preceding the disturbance complained of. *Uonture y. Sheriff's Sale — Effect of Annulment — Possession in Good Faith—Rents and Profits -Compensation for Improvements-Liability for Deterioration.]--One who is in possession of land by virtue of a title acquired at a sheriff's sale is the possessor in good faith up to the moment at which his title is declared void by the Court, and such title is valid although its subsequent annulment deprives it retrospectively of its effect. 2. A contract set aside as absolutely void is considered as never having had a legal existence and as in capable of producing any juridical effect, past future; but a contract or a title in virtue of which action has been taken and which has been declared void later, is, notwithstanding art, 412, C. C., a sufficient basis to establish the good faith of the possessor. 3. Such a possessor has a right to retain the profits which he has received and to be compensated for the improvements which he has made, as will be responsible for any deterioration which he has caused to the property. Savoie v. Gastonguay, Q. R. 10 K. B. 459.

Trespass - Overhanging Roof - Right of View-Evidence-Boundary Line - Waiver. -In 1844 the defendants constructed a toll house close to or on the boundary of their land, with windows overlooking the adjoining lot and a roof projecting over it by about three feet. This was done with the knowledge and consent of persons who were then proprietors, and was not objected to by them or any subsequent owner till after the purchase of the adjoining lot by the plaintiff in 1895 when he complained that the overhanging roof interfered with the gable of a house he was building upon it. He cut the roof to permit of the construction of the gable to his house, and the defendants paid the cost of the neces sary alteration. In 1900 the plaintiff instituted the present action against the defendants to have the remainder of the projection of the roof demolished and the windows There was no evidence that there closed up. There was no evidence that there had ever been a division line established between the properties, and the actual width of the land purchased and taken possession of by the plaintiff in 1895 was left in uncer-tainty:—Held, Strong, C.J., dissenting, that the plaintiff had not satisfied the onus that was upon him of proving title to the strip of was upon him of proving title to the strip of land in dispute, and consequently that his action could not be maintained. Held, fur-ther, per Gironard, J., following Delorme v. Cusson, 28 S. C. TRADE MARK AND TRADE NAME.

Assignment—Execution—Right of Property.]—The right of property in a registered specific trade-mark is not saleable by itself under a writ of execution. Such a right can be sold, if at all, only as appurtenant to the business in which it has been used. Gegg v. Bassett, 22 Occ. N. 114, 3 O. L. It. 263.

Corporate Name — Conflict—Fraud—Intent to Deceive.]—In the absence of fraud or bad faith, a body corporate may use its own name on goods of its own manufacture, although such use may tend to confuse its goods with goods of the same kind bearing the trade-mark of another manufacturer. 2. Where the defendants, a corporate body, had obtained their name before a trade-mark with which such name was said to conflict had been registered in Canada by the plaintiffs, a foreign corporation, and it was not shewn that the defendants had adopted such name with intent to deceive the public, nor to sell their goods as those of the plaintiffs, the Court refused to restrain the defendants from using their corporate name upon goods manufactured by them. Boston Rubber Shoe Co.

v. Boston Rubber Co. of Montreal, 21 Occ. N. 517, 7 Ex. C. R. 187.

"Cream Yeast"—Validity—Trade Name—"Passing-off."]—Held, that the plaintiff's trade mark for a certain kind of yeast, consisting of a label bearing the representation of the head and bust of a woman, with the words "Day" and "Hop" on either side, and the words "Cream Yeast" below was properly registerable and valid. Provident Chemical Works v. Canada Chemical Co., 1 O. W. R. 488, 4 O. L. R. 545, followed. 2 That the defendants, by selling yeast in packages labelled "Jersey Cream Yeast Cake" the words "Jersey Cream" at the top and "Yeast Cake" at the bottom, with the representation of two Jersey cows and a milkmaid between, were not infringing the plaintiff's mark. Cochrane v. MacNish, 13 R. P. C. 100, distinguished. 3. That the defendants were not, upon the evidence, guilty of passing off their goods in such manner as to induce the belief that they were goods manufactured by the plaintiff. Judgment of a Divisional Court, 6 O. L. R. 66, 2 O. W. R. 497, 23 0cc. N. 259, affirmed. Gillett v. Lunsden, 24 Oc. N. 250, affirmed. Gillett v. Lunsden, 24 Oc. N. 345, 8 O. L. R. 168, 3 O. W. R. 851.

Criminal Law — Forging or Falsely Applying Trade-Mark—Prosecution for—Defence-Invalidity of Registration-Title to Exclusive Use of Registered Words-Descriptive Words.]-The defendant was convicted by a magistrate of the offence of forging a trademark, to wit, the registered trade-mark
"Glyco-Thymoline," and falsely applying to certain goods a trade-mark or mark so nearly resembling a trade-mark as to be calculated to deceive, contrary to s. 447 of the Criminal Code. The trade-mark "Glyco-Thymoline" consisted solely of these words, applied to a medical compound sold by a company, in the form of a solution in bottles. The defendant made and sold a solution, of which the chief ingredients were thymol and glycerine, which he named "Glyco-Thymol." The company and the defendant labelled their respective bottles in much the same way. Before the magistrate the case was virtually dealt with as a case of passing off the defendant's goods for those of the company, but this, the Court of Appeal pointed out, was not the offence charged, and could only be the subject of a civil action for an injunction and damages. The words registered as the company's trade mark were merely descriptive and incapable of registration, and that was a defence open to the defendant. The conviction was there-fore quashed. Rev. v. Cruttenden, 25 C. L. T. 455, 6 O. W. R. 249, 10 O. L. R. 80.

Descriptive Words.]—Where a word is merely descriptive of a natural product, it cannot be appropriated and form part of a trade-mark. Hence, the word "asbestic" prefixed to "wall plaster" being merely descriptive of the material used in the plaster, the sale by other persons of plaster under that name is not an infringement of a registered trade-mark for "asbestic wall plaster," Asbestos and Asbestic Co., v. William Sciater Co., Q. R. 18 S. C. 300.

Descriptive Words.] — A trade-mark bearing the words "asbestic wall plaster" was registered by the plaintiffs on the 3rd Februars-1896. The particular words were applied to a compound of asbestic and the ordinary well-paper. The defendants alleged that they

Asbestos and Asbestic Co. v. William Schater Co., 21 Occ. N. 130, Q. R. 10 Q. B. 165.

Descriptive Words — Pleading — Prior Isser, —In an action for infringement of the plaintiffs' trade-mark for "asbestic wall plaster," the defendants were entitled to allege in their plea, without having taken steps to have the plaintiffs' mark annulled, that they had sold asbestic wall plaster long prior to and since the registration of plaintiffs' trademark, and that by law they had the right to make use of the words "asbestic wall plaster," the word "asbestic" being merely an indication and description of the article sold by the defendants and referring to the character and quality of the article. Asbestos and Asbestic Co. v. William Schater Co., Q. R. 18 S. C. 224.

Faney Name — Descriptive Letters — Forum—Exchequer Court.]—The letters "C. A. P.," standing for the words "cream acid phosphates," a fancy name for acid phosphates manufactured by the plaintiffs, were held to constitute a valid trade-mark, and an injunction was granted against the use thereof by the defendants, who had used these letters in the sale of goods of the same class, but estensibly as standing for the words "calcium acid phosphates." Judgment of Meredith, C.J., 2 O. L. R. 182, 21 Occ. N. 467, reversed. The amendments to the Exchequer Court Act since the decision in Partic v. Todd, 14 A. R. 444, 17 S. C. R. 196, have not had the effect of giving that Court exclusional trade of the court of the validity of a registered trade mark, and in answer to an action in the High Court of Justice for Ontario to restrain the infringement of a registered trade-mark, its invalidity may be shewn. Provident Chemical Works v. Canada Chemical Mfg. Co., 22 Occ. N. 381, 4 O. L. R. 545, 1 O. W. R. 612.

Geographical Description - Alien -Competition.]-An alien has an action in the province of Quebec to prevent unfair competition in trade. 2. An unregistered trade-mark is only entitled to protection where there is unfair or fraudulent competition, and damage is caused to the proprietor of such mark. 3. Unfair competition does not exist where confusion of marks is not possible. So, in the present case, the adoption by the defendants of the name "Milwaukee" to describe their lager beer, made in Montreal, having preceded by ten years the introduction of the plaintiffs' lager beer in the Canadian market, and there being no proof of deception or damage, the defendants using a different label containing the word "Montreal," the plaintiffs were not entitled to an injunction to restrain the use of the word "Milwaukee" in connexion with the sale, etc., of the Canadian article. Judgment in Q. R. 20 S. C. 20 reversed. Pabst Brewing Co. v. Ekers, Q. R. 22 S. C. 545.

Geographical Designation.] — Apart from any consideration as to registered trademarks, an action lies at common law to restrain a trader from applying to his goods the name of a place in which they were not manufactured, and where the adoption of such name tends to confuse his goods in the eyes of the public with those of a rival trader who has made his goods known to the public under a designation including the name of their place of origin or manufacture. Pabst Brewing Co. v. Ekera, Q. R. 20 S. C. 20.

Geographical Designation-" Caledonia Water" - "Caledonia Mineral Water."] - The plaintiffs for many years had been the owners of mineral springs in the township of Caledonia, respecting the waters of which they had caused to be registered certain trade-marks, and the names "Caledonia water" and "Caledonia mineral water." The water, and "Caledonia mineral water." The water, which was used medicinally and as a beverage, had through the plaintiffs' exertions and the expenditure of large sums of money, become very widely known as water from Caledonia springs, and near the springs a village, laid out on the ground many years before, had actually come into existence, where the plaintiffs had erected an hotel, and had procured a railway station and post office to be erected under the name "Caledonia Springs." In 1898 L. & Co., who had purchased a lot about a quarter of a mile distant from the plaintiffs' place, had, by sinking an artesian well, tapped springs, from which water flowed, in some respects to the plaintiffs which they supplied in barrels to their agents, "water from the new springs at which these agents bottled and sold, The bottles used were similar in shape and size to the plaintiffs'. One of the agents, T. & Co., had, at the time of the commencement of the action, been using labels thereon resembling the plaintiffs', and selling the water as Caledonia water, but this had never been as Caledonia water, but this had not sanctioned by L. & Co., and was at once abandoned:—Held, reversing the judgment in 21 occ. N. 524, 2 O. L. R. 322, 1 O. W. R. 785, that the defendants could not be resulted in the state of the country of the c strained from using the word "Caledonia as they did in designating the water sold by as they did in designating the water sold by them, and that the injunction granted herein should be dissolved with costs, except as to T. & Co., and as against them the plaintiffs should only be allowed the costs of entering judgment by default, Grand Hotel Co. of Caledonia Springs v. Wilson, Grand Hotel Co. of Caledonia Springs v. Tune, 23 Occ. N. 82, 5 O. L. R. 141. Affirmed, 1904, A. C. 193

"Hall Mark"—Right to Register.]—If by the laws of any country the makers of certain goods are required to put thereon certain prescribed marks to denote the standard or character of such goods, and goods hearing the prescribed marks are exported to Canada and put upon the market here, it is not possible thereafter, and while such goods are to be found in the Canada a right to the exclusive use of such prescribed marks to be applied to the same class of goods, or to the exclusive use of such prescribed marks to be applied to the same class of goods, or to the exclusive use of any mark so closely resembling the prescribed marks as to be calculated to deceive or mislead the public. The fact that such marks were not trade-marks, but marks used to comply with the statuces of the country of origin would not in that respect in any way alter the case. Quaere, whether any one would, in such a case, be precluded from acquiring a right in Canada to the exclusive use of such a trade-mark, where there was no importation into Canada of goods bearing the prescribed foreign marks. 2. The plaintiffs brought an action for the infringement of their registered specific trade-mark to be applied to the goods manufactured by them from sterling silver which, it was thought, so resembled a "British hall mark," or a hall mark, as to be calculated to deceive or mislead the public, and it appeared that during the time that the plaintiffs' goods, bearing such mark, were upon the Canadian market, goods bearing a "British hall mark" were also upon the "uarket:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not, under the circumstances, exercise the exclusive right to the use of such mark as a trade-mark, Gorham Manufacturing Co, v. Ellis, 24 Occ. N. 119, 8 Ex. C. R. 401.

Incorporated Company — Infringement —Passing off goods — Injunction—Scope of, Sovereen Mitt, Glove, and Robe Co., v. Simcoe Mitt, Glove, and Robe Co., 3 O. W. R. 681.

Industrial Design — Cook-stove—Imitation—Injringement—Injunction—Caucellation of Conflicting Design.] — The plaintiffs were registered owners of an industrial design for a cook-stove, called the "Royal Favourite, 9-25." which, as a special article of their manufacture, had become well known to the trade. The defendants procured one of such stoves, caused a model to be made from it, and, with some minor alterations chiefly in the ornamentation, manufactured a stove called the "Royal National, 9-25," and subsequently registered it as an industrial design. In an action by the plaintiffs for infringement, and for an order to expunge the defendants' design from the register, the weight of evidence established that the defendants' design was an obvious imitation of that of the plaintiffs: — Held, that the defendants should be enjoined from infringing the plaintiffs design, and that the registration of the defendants' design should be expunged from the register. Findlay v. Ottawa Furnace and Foundry Co., 22 Occ. N. 200, 7 Ex. C. R. 338.

Injunction—Security.]—The owner of a trade-mark, who complains that his orders for sales of an article covered by the trade-mark are filled by the sending of an article covered by the defendant's trade-mark, and that the resemblance between the two marks is such that it may induce error in purchasing, has the right to an interlocutory injunction upon furnishing security. Lefebvre v. Landry, 5 Q. P. R. 341.

License—Option—Agreement—Declaration of rights—Specific performance—Injunction —Misconduct—Equitable relief—Counterclaim —Reservation of rights—Res judicata, Mc-Acity v. James Morrison Brass Mfg. Co., 2 O. W. R. 156, 1018,

Pleading — Registration — Prior User—Superiority of Product—False Representations—Scire Facias,—In an action for infringement of a trade-mark, the defendant may, in answer to an allegation that the trade-mark was obtained by the plaintiff's firm, deny such allegation and state that the plaintiff was, at that time, doing business under another name. 2. It is immaterial whether the interdict or the curator who sues es-qualité upon a trademark, obtained the registration of the trademark 3. In such an action it is a valid defence to say that the label constituting the trade-mark in question had been used by the defendant and others prior to the registration of the trade-mark by the plaintiff, 4. Although it matters not which of the two products is superior, the defendant may meet an allegation of the plaintiff's declaration products is superior, the defendant may meet an allegation of the plaintiff's declaration ing the superiority of his statement and affirming the superiority of his own product. 3. Plake representations regarding the ownership of a trade-mark constitute no ground for the voiding of it. 6. A defendant may plead in answer to conclusions demanding that he had ceased to use it before the institution of the action, 7. That the unlifty of a trademark can be pleaded against an action based upon such trade-mark, without the issuing of a scire facias by the Crown. Falard v. Ferland, 6 Q. P. R. 139.

Pleading — Statement of Claim — Sufficiency of, ——In an action for infringement of a trade-mark, it is a sufficient allegation that the trade-mark it is a sufficient allegation that the trade-mark of the plaintiffs, to allege in the statement of claim that the registered trade-mark of the plaintiffs and the mark used by the plaintiffs and the mark used by the plaintiffs and the mark used by the defendants are in their essential features the same. 2. It is not necessary in such statement of claim to allege that the imitation by the defendants of the plaintiffs trade-mark is a fraudulent imitation. 3. It is not necessary to allege that the defendant used the mark with intent to deceive, and to induce a belief that the goods on which their mark was used were made by the plaintiffs. Boston Rubber Shoe Co. v. Boston Rubber Co. of Montreal, 21 Occ. N. 278, 7 Ex. C.

Prior Use—Application to Rectify Register—Counterelaim—Title.]—A manufacture or dealer in cigars cannot acquire the right to an exclusive use, and be entitled to registration, of a specific trademark, of which the term "King" forms the leading feature, and is used in combination with the representation of some particular king, while other manufacturers or dealers use the same term with the likeness of other kings. Spilling x. Rynl, 8 Ex, C. R. 195, 23 Occ, N. 102, explained. 2. An application to rectify the register of trade-marks cannot be made by counterclaim. (Secus now, under General Order of the 7th March, 1904.) 3. In an action for the infringement of a trade-mark the defendant may attack the legal title of the plaintiff to the exclusive use of the trademark he has registered. Partle v, Todd, 17 S. C. R. 196, referred to. Provident Chemical Works v. Canadian Chemical Manufacturing Co., 4 O. L. R. 548, approved. Spilling v. O'Kelly, 24 Occ, N. 119, 8 Ex. C. R. 429.

Registration — Words—Device—Resemblance—First User—Declaration—Truth of — Expunging Mark.] — Registration of a Expanying Mark. 1 Registration of a trade-mark to be applied to the sale of whisky was refused, on the ground that it too closely resembled trade-marks previously registered. The earlier ones consisted in the registered. The earner ones consisted in the representation of a maple leaf and such words as "Old Red Wheat," "Early Dew." The later one consisted of the words "Maple Leaf" and the device of a maple leaf on which was impressed the figure of a beaver, used separately or in conjunction with the words "Fine Old Rye Whisky,' etc. 2. A declaration made by the respondents that they believed a certain trade-mark was theirs on account of their having been the first to use it, being true when made, and they having afterwards, when they learned of one J. C.'s registered trade-mark, purchased it from him, the petitioners were not entitled to have the respondents' trade-mark expunged, on the ground that their declaration was untrue. 3. In 1902, after the controversy between the parties had arisen, and without notice to the petitioners, the respondents obtained registration of another specific trade-mark to be applied to the sale of whisky, which consisted of the words "Maple Leaf" and the and the representation of a maple leaf :- Held, that the registration should be expunged. Meagher v. Hamilton Distilling Co., 8 Ex. C. R. 311.

Representations of the King and the Royal Arms—User before Registration—Declaration Signed by Agent.] — A label, as applied to boxes containing cigars, bearing upon it in an oval form a vignette of King Edward VII., with a coat of arms on one side, and a marine view on the other, sur-mounted by the words "Our King," and with the words "Edward VII." underneath, con-stitutes a good trade-mark in Canada, and may be infringed by the impression, upon boxes containing cigars, of a fac-simile of the royal arms surmounted by the words "King Edward." 2. The English rule prohibiting the use of the royal arms, representations of His Majesty, or of any member of the royal family, or of the royal crown, or the national arms or flags of Great Britain, as the subjects of trade-marks, is not in force in Can-3. It is not essential to the validity of a trade-mark registered in Canada that the person registering the same should have used it before obtaining registration. The registration must, however, in such a case, be followed by use, if the proprietor wishes to re-tain his right to the trade-mark. In this respect there is no difference between the law of Canada and the law of England. 4. The declaration required from the proprietor of a trade-mark by s. 8 of the Trade-Marks and Design Act, R. S. C. c. 63, may be signed by his duly authorized his duly authorized attorney or agent. Spilling v. Ryall, 23 Occ. N. 102, 8 Ex. C. R. 195.

Use of Corporate Name - Fraud and Deceit—Evidence.]—Since 1885 the plaintiffs, incorporated in Massachusetts, had done business in the United States of America and Canada as manufacturers and dealers in india rubber boots and shoes under the name of "The Boston Rubber Shoe Company," having a trade line of their manufactures marked with the impression of their corporate name, registered as their trade-mark known as "Bostons," which had acquired a favourable repu-The defendants were incorporated in tation Canada in 1896 by the name of "The Boston Rubber Company of Montreal," and manufac-tured and dealt in similar goods, on one grade of which was impressed their corporate name, these goods being referred to in their price lists, catalogues, and advertisements as "Bostons," and the company's name frequently mentioned therein as "Boston Rubber In an action to restrain the defendants from continuing to use such impressed trade-mark or any other similar mark, on such goods as an infringement of the plaintiffs' registered trade-mark:—Held, reversing the judgment in 7 Ex. C. R. 187, 21 Occ. N. that, under the circumstances, the use by the defendants of their corporate name in the manner described on goods of their own manufacture similar to those manufactured by the plaintiffs, was a fraudulent infringe-ment of the plaintiffs' registered trade mark and calculated to deceive the public, and so, in bad faith, to obtain sales of their own goods as if they were the plaintiffs' manufactures, and consequently, that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction restraining the defendants from using their corporate name as a mark upon such goods manufac-tured by them in Canada. Boston Rubber Shoe Co. v. Boston Rubber Co. of Montreal, 22 Occ. N. 275, 32 S. C. R. 315.

Use of Similar Name - Registration -Misrepresentations—Injunction — Evidence.]
—The fact that the word "Simpson" had been, previously to the plaintiff's registration. used and registered as a trade-mark for pills as a cure for one complaint, did not disentitle the plaintiff to obtain registration of the name as a trade-mark for pills to cure another ailment, and the registration was therefor good. The fact that the name "Simpson and the registration was therefore was entirely fictitious and was not the name of the real manufacturer, did not constitute any such misrepresentation as would entitle the plaintiff to an injunction. Only misrepresentations contained in the trademark itself will disentitle the plaintiff to an injunction, and therefore fictitious testi-monials published by the plaintiff were not such misrepresentations as would defeat his right. Ford v. Foster, L. R. 7 Ch. 611, followed. Semble, that the prior user outside of Canada of the word "Simpson" in connection with Kidney Pills was not sufficient to disentitle the plaintiff to its exclusive use disentitle the plaintiff to its executive within Canada: — Held, also, upon the evidence, that the defendant had adopted the word "Simpson" wilfully, and solely to instance of the control of the contro duce the public to believe that the pills he sold were those advertised by the plaintiff, and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction, with costs. One of the defendant's witnesses stated that he had in the year 1891 seen the name "Simpson's Kidney Pills" inscribed upon a wire door mat in London. England. This evidence was objected to on the ground that it was secondary evidence and that the door mat itself should be produced:—Held, that the evidence should be admitted because the production of the door mat would be highly inconvenient. Templeton v. Wallace, 4 Terr. L. R. 340.

Expulsion of Member-Articles of Association — By-law in Restraint of Trade Illegality—Militia Act.] — The plaintiff, musician and a member of the active militia of Canada and of the band of a militia regiment, became a member of the defendant association, a body incorporated under the Friendly Societies and Insurance Corporations Act, whose object was to unite the instru-Act, whose object was to unite the instru-mental portion of the musical profession for protection of its interests, the regulation of prices, the enforcement of good faith among its members, and to assist members in sick-ness, etc. After the plaintiff joined, the de-fendants adopted a new article providing that no member should play in any engagement with any necesson playing an instrument who with any person playing an instrument who was not a member. The plaintiff was fined, and expelled for default of payment of the fine, for playing in his regimental band at a concert, in uniform, under the direction of the bandmaster, and with the permission of the colonel commanding—some of the band not being members:—Held, that, at the time the plaintiff joined the association, it was a perfeetly legal society, its objects being of a friendly and provident nature; but the amendment was unreasonable and in restraint of trade and for that reason, and also because contrary to the Queen's Army Regulations and contrary to the Queen's Army Regulations and the Militia Act of Canada, was illegal, and the plaintiff's expulsion was invalid, and he was entitled to an injunction and damages. Rigby v. Connol, 14 Ch. D. 482, Mineral Water Bottle, &c., Society v. Booth, 35 Ch. D, 465, Swaine v. Wilson, 24 Q. B. D. 252, and Chamberlain's Wharf, Limited, v. Fees of Members—Arrears—By-laws—Penalty for Infraction.]— By their charter the plaintiff association have power to impose by by-law the payment of an annual fee by each of their members, and also a penalty for every infraction of their by-laws. The association, in pursuance thereof, passed a by-law fixing the membership fee at $2 a by-law fixing the membership fee at $2 a year and imposing a penalty of $10 for every infraction of the by-laws. The defendant took out his license, and paid his fee for one year, and afterwards exercised his trade for three years without paying his fee:—Held, that, in the circumstances, the plaintiff association could claim from the defendant only the penalty which he had incurred for the infraction of the by-laws and not the arrears of his fees. Barbera' Association of the Province of Quebec v. Charlebois, Q. R. 23 S. C. 287.

Inducing Breach of Contract—Inter-ference with Business — Foreign Officer—in-corporation — Pleading.] — Damages are recoverable against a trade union and the members thereof in an action by employers of workmen when, by means of threats, abusive language, and a system of espionage, the workmen are induced to break their contracts of employment with the employers, and other workmen are prevented from entering into the employment in their stead. And a foreign officer of an organized body of which the local trade union was a part, who came to this province and aided, encouraged, and directed the members in their unlawful acts, was held liable with them for the consequences. It is too late at the trial, after a trade union has appeared and pleaded in an apparently corporate capacity, to raise the objection that it is not in fact incorporated or liable to be sued. Growing Trees — Highway — "Left standing"—Municipal corporation—Statutes. Wolff v. Kehoe, 1 O. W. R. 78.

Ornamental Trees - Destruction by Railway Company under Statute-Hights of Owners - Injunction - Construction of Statutes.]-The right of property in shade trees on highways and to fence them in, conferred upon the owners of the lands adjacent to the highways by s. 688 of the Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 116, is not taken away by an Act incorporating a railway company with power to construct a line of rail-way along the public highway with the consent of the municipality and according to plans to be approved by the council of the municipality, even although such consent has been given and such plans approved. The defendants' Act of incorporation provided defendants Act of incorporation provided that the several clauses of the Manitoba Rail-way Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 145, should be incorporated with and deemed part of it. And the Railway Act provides that the several clauses of the Manitoba Expropriation Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 61, with respect to the expropriation of land and the compensation to be raid therefore, shall be decreated. tion to be paid therefor, shall be deemed to be incorporated mutatis mutandis with the Railway Act:—Held, that the defendants had no right to cut down the trees on the highway or to lower the grade in front of toe plaintiffs' land, although such action was necessary in carrying out the approved plans, without taking the proper steps, under the Railway Act and the Expropriation Act, either to ascertain and pay the damages suffered by the plaintiffs to their land injuriously affected by the intended construction, or to procure an order from a Judge, under s. 25 of the Railway Act, giving them the right to take possession upon giving security for payment of the compensation to be awarded; and that the interim injunction secured by the plaintiffs should be continued until the trial unless the defendants should furnish security that they would proceed forthwith to settle the amount of such compensation. Bannatyne v. Suburban Rapid Transit Co., 24 Occ. N. 380, 15 Man, L. R. 7.

Property in Trees Planted in Highway — Destruction—Recovery.] — Trees planted upon the public highway in the city of Montreal, with the consent of the municipal authority and in conformity with its regulations, become an accessory to the preregulations, become an accessory to the property in the land in front of which and for the advantage of which they have been planted, and the owner of such land may maintain an action for damages against a neighbour, when by reason of the industry carried on by the neighbour, the trees have been destroyed. Hire of Chattels—Contract for — Payment in Satisfaction for Breach of—Effect of—New Trial—Notice of Motion.]—In an action upon a contract for the hire of chattels, the plaintiff is entitled to recover damages for the improper use of or injury to the chattels or for a conversion of them. Therefore, where a plaintiff sued in assump-sit for the hire of blocks and gear for hoisting, and also added a count in trespass for the improper use and injury to the same and a count in trover for a conversion of a part thereof, and the trial Judge found that a sum of money paid by the defendant to the plaintiff before action was an ample composation for the plaintiff. the plaintiff before action was an ample com-pensation for the plaintiff's claim on the count for hiring:—Held, that this amounted to a finding in favour of the defendant on the pleas of "not guilty," pleaded to the counts in tort. A copy of the notice of the motion for a new trial must be served upon the Judge who tried the cause. The mere filing of the same with the clerk is not suffi-cient. Lang v, Brown, 34 N. B. Reps, 492.

TRESPASS TO LAND.

Action - Possession-Effect of Enclosure Action – Possession – piece of Income by Another, |—The mere enclosure of the land of another, by the adjoining proprietor, by a fence put up with the consent of and by arrangements with the owner, for the purpose of protecting the lands of both against cattle, does not dispossess the owner, nor prevent him from maintaining trespass against any one intruding therein, or using his land for purposes other than that for which it was enclosed. Brookman v. Conway, 35 N. S. Reps, 462, affirmed. Conway v. Brookman, 35 S. C. R. 185.

Fences-Agreement-Muni-Animals cipal By-law.]-The plaintiff and defendant, adjoining land-owners, made an arbitrary division of the line fence between their lots, which was less than five feet in height and which they agreed to keep in repair. reason of the defendant allowing his portion reason of the derendant allowing his portion to get into disrepair, his cattle and sheep got on the plaintiff's land and damaged it. The defendant also allowed his cattle to escape and run at large on the highway, whence, by breaking down the plaintiff's land and fences, they got on the plaintiff's land and further damaged it. A township by-law pro-vided that no fence should be less than five feet high, and prohibited the running at large of all breachy cattle:—Held, that the defendant was liable for the damages sustained by the plaintiff, and that such liability was not affected by the by-law. Barber v. Cleave, 2 O. I., R. 213.

Boundaries — Survey — Conventional line — Agreement — Possessory title—Real Property Limitation Act—Acts shewing possession. Clark v. Fisher, 3 O. W. R. 358.

Boundary Lines Act — Obligation to Pence—Joint Owner—Parties—Possession—Right of Action.]—The provision in s. 4 of the Boundary Lines Act, R. S. M. c. 12, viz. "Each of the parties occupying adjoining tracts of land shall make, keep up, and repair a just proportion of the division or line fence on the line dividing such tracts, and equally on either side thereof," does not supersed the common law liability of an owner of cattle for all their trespasses except such as are due to defects in fences which the complainant is bound as between himself and such owner to keep up; and such owner will be liable for the trespasses committed by his cattle, unless it is shewn that the complainant was bound to keep up and repair the particular part of the fence through which the cattle entered. The common law rule is not displaced by a joint liability to keep up fences. The injured crops were raised by plaintiff who was in possession, but another person had a half interest in the crop: — Held, that sole possession by the plaintiff was sufficient to support an action of trespass, and it was not necessary to make the co-owner a party or to obtain any release from him. Star v, Rookesby, 1 Salk. 335, and Graham v. Peat, 1 East, 246, followed. Garrioch v. McKay, 21 Occ. N. 421, 13 Man. L. R. 404.

Cutting and Removing Timber—Measure of Damages—Wrongful and Wilful Acts.]
—In trespass, the inquiry is, what damages will compensate or restore the plaintiff financially to his original position as nearly as possible at the time when the trespass was committed. Where the defendants had wrongfully and wilfully entered upon and cut and carried away timber from the plaintiffs' limits, and the plaintiffs sued for trespass only:—Held, that the damages should be measured by: (1) the value of the timber after it was severed and manufactured, so far as it was manufactured, while on the timber limits of the plaintiffs, immediately before the defendants removed it; (2) such sum as represented the extent to which the limits were injured, if at all, by reason of their having been partly denuded by the acts of the defendants; (3) such further and other damage as resulted to the limits by the acts of the defendants, such, for instance, as wasteful methods in cutting, using the surface to pass and repass, etc. Martin v. Porter, 5 M, & W. 351, and Bulli Coal Co. v. Osborne, [1899] A. C. 351, applied and followed, becision of Lount, J. 22 Occ. N. 114, 3 O. L. R. 209, affirmed. Union Bank of Canada v. Rideau Lumber Co., 23 Occ. N. 11, 4 O. L. R. 721, 1 O. W. R. 764.

Defence — Expropriation—Plan — Description — Boundary Line — Damages.]—

The defence in an action for trespass to land was that the land in question has been expropriated by the town of S. under the provisions of the Acts of the province, 1889. c. 84, and conveyed by the town to the de-fendant company. The Act contained a profendant company. The Act contained a pro-vision that, upon the filing of a plan in the office of the registrar of deeds for the county. immediately after the town council should have by resolution provided for such expropriation, all right, etc., in said lands should forthwith absolutely vest in the town:—Held, that the filing of the plan would be ineffectual in the absence of a resolution of the town council providing for the acquisition or expropriation of the land; and that a description written on the face of the plan was made part of and must be taken in connecpended in part upon the position of the line between McD. and McL.:—Held, that the mode adopted by the defendant to fix the starting point of this line could not be adopted to the exclusion of all others, and to control the line as established by the vendors and purchasers at the times the conveyances were made, and not since disputed, especially as the effect would be to deprive the plaintiff of his land without proper notice, and without remuneration;—Held, with respect to damages, that though they were not such as the Court would have given, the matter was one in the discretion of the trial Judge, and there was no reason for interfering. McLennan v. Dominion Iron and Steel Co., 38 N. S. Reps. 28.

Injunction — Expropriation—Statute— Acquiescence — Compensation,]—Where a trespasser, by taking proper steps to that effect, would have the right to expropriate the lands in dispute, an injunction should be withheld in order to enable the necessary proceedings to be taken and compensation made. Goodson v. Richardson, L. R. 9 Ch. 221, and Cowper v. Laidler, [1903] 2 Ch. 337, applied. But where there has been acquiescence equivalent to a fraud upon the defendant, the in junction ought not to be granted, even where the legal right of the plaintiff has been proved the legal right of the plaintiff has been proved.

Wilmot v. Barber, 15 Ch. D. 96, Johnson
v. Wyatt, 2 DeG. J. & S. 17, and Smith v.
Smith, L. R. 20 Eq. 500, referred to. By the defendants' charter, 59 V. c. 62, ss. 9, 25 (B.C.), it was provided that the powers to enter, survey, ascertain, set out, and take. hold, appropriate, and acquire lands, should be subject to the making of compensation, and that the powers, other than the powers "to enter, survey, set out, and ascertain," should not be exercised or proceeded with until approval of the plans and sites by the Lieu-tenant-Governor in council. The defendants entered upon lands of the plaintiffs, made surveys, and constructed works thereon, without making compensation or obtaining such approval. Some time after entry the defendants obtained the necessary order in coun cil approving of the plans and sites of the land to be expropriated :-Held, that making of compensation was not a condition preced-ent to making the survey and taking possesWA

Mining Claim — Contradictory Evidence—Wilful Trespass—Rule in Assessing Damages—Practice—Adding Party — Reversal on Appeal.]-In an action for damages for entry upon a placer mining claim and removing valuable gold bearing gravel and dirt, the trial Judge found the defendants guilty of gross carelessness in their work, held that they should be accounted wilful trespassers, and referred the cause to the clerk of the Court to assess the damages. The referee adopted the severer rule applicable in cases of fraud in assessing the damages. The Territorian Court en banc reversed the trial Jude in his findings of fact upon the evidence:—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that the trial Judge's findings should be sustained with a slight variation, but that the referee had erred in adopting the severer rule against the defendants in assessing the damages, and that his report should be amended in view of such Semble, that the record and pleadings error. Semble, that the record and pleadings should be amended by adding the plaintiff's partner as co-plaintiff:—Held, per Tasche-reau, C.J.C., dissenting, that, although not convinced that there was error in the judgment of the trial Judge which the Court en banc reversed, while at the same time it did not appear that there was error in the judg ment en banc, yet the latter judgment should stand, as the Court en banc should not be reversed unless the Supreme Court, on the appeal, be clearly satisfied that it was wrong. Kirkpatrick v. McNamee, 25 Occ. N. 125, 36 8. C. R. 152.

Possessory Action — Disturbed Possession — Prescription — Title — Intercention.]—The plaintiff, by possessory action, complained of being troubled in his possession, by the defendants, of the rear portion of lots 2195 and 2196 of the cadastral plan of Three Rivers, extending from "la clime de la côte" to the river St. Lawrence. The defendants pleaded ownership and possession under arrangements with the Crown. The Canada Iron Furnace Company intervened. claiming ownership of the entire lot No. 2196 under a deed of sale of the 30th October, 1890, accompanied by constant possession for over ten years. The plaintiff contested the intervenion, alleging that the intervenants could only claim the extent of ground conveyed to their auteur, by sheriff's sale of the 15th February, 1862, and which extended only to the "cime de la côte." none of which is claimed by the action, the portion so claimed starting from the "ctme de la côte" and going to the river. The intervenants' title expressly covered all the land to the river, which is given both by the title and by the cadastral plan as the boundary thereof, The intervenants were never troubled in their possession judicially, the only disturbance being a notarial protest by the plaintiff, more than a year and a day prior to the institu-tion of this action, notifying the intervenants that he claimed the land now claimed by his action, and requiring them to join in making a line fence along the "cime de la côte." This protest was not followed by any attempt to obtain possession of the land from the intervenants:-Held, that there was no trouble de droit of the intervenants' possession within ten years. 2. A notarial protest is not a trouble de droit of possession of land, and does not interrupt prescription. 3. The in-tervenants' title and constant possession gave them ownership of the land, notwithstanding the title of conveyance to their auteur. 4. The intervenants had a sufficient interest to intervene, having shewn a possession which was troubled by the plaintiff's action. Possession which affects a whole lot of land renders it unnecessary to prove particular acts of possession, within a year and a day, of any special part of the lot. Dupré v. Harbour Commissioners of Three Rivers, Q. R. 23 S. C. 439.

Searching for Liquor without War-rant — Private Dwelling House — Liquor Act - County Constable - Notice License of Action — Bona Fide Conduct — Leave and License — Jury.]—The defendant, a county constable appointed by a police magistrate, searched the plaintiff's dwelling house for liquor without a warrant and without any special authority. In an action for tres-pass the trial Judge held that the defendant was acting in the discharge of his duty, and, there being no evidence of malice, that, he was entitled to notice of action, and withdrew the case from the jury and directed a nonsuit :- Held, on appeal, that the question as to whether the defendant was acting bona fide in the discharge of his duty as a constable, in searching a private house, as being a house of public entertainment, for liquor, was a question for the jury; and that leave and license, which was argued on the appeal but not pleaded on the record, should also, if pleaded, be submitted to the jury; and the judgment dismissing the action was set aside and a new trial ordered, with liberty to the defendant to amend by adding a plea of leave and license, Bell v. Usufructuary of Undivided Half.)— The usufructuary of an undivided haif of an immovable has a right of action in trespass. Martin v. Campbell, Q. R. 23 S. C. 522.

Wrongful and Wilful — Damages — Mode of Assessment.]—Where in an action of trespass, the judgment is that the trespass was wrongful and wilful, the assessment of damages must be on the basis of such inding, and not as if the trespass was done innocently or bona hde. Union Bank of Canada v, Rideau Lumber Co., 22 Occ. N. 114, 2 O. L. R. 269.

TRESPASS TO PERSON.

Arrest and Search - Reasonable and Probable Cause — Post Office — Decoy Let-ter.]—The appellant, a letter carrier employ-ed by the post office department at Montreal, was intrusted with the delivery of two decoy letters, for the purpose of testing his honesty. Each of the letters contained a small sum of money. One of them bore a non-existent address, the other a real address. latter was delivered, but the former, under the rules of the department, should have been entered in the book kept at the post office for that purpose, and the letter should have been returned by the carrier to the post office, There being no entry of this letter in the post office book, after the usual time for making such entry had clapsed, the appellant was detained and searched by the respondent, a detective, acting under the instructions of the post office department. The letter not being found on the appellant, he was released. On the following day the letter was returned to the following day the letter was returned to the post office: — Held, (affirming the dispositif of the judgment in Q. R. 20 S. C. 549, with a modification of the considérants) that the appellant having violated the rules of the post office depart-ment, by failing to enter the letter bearing a non-existent address in the book provided for that purpose, there was reasonable and probable cause for detaining and searching him, and that his action for damages against the respondent, in the absence of evidence that the respondent had made an improper and illegal use of his authority in the manner in which he effected such detention and search, and subsequent release, could not be maintained. 2. A letter is a post letter al-though directed to a fictitious or non-existent address. Mayer v. Vaughan, Q. R. 11 K. B.

Assault — Personal injuries — Damages. Harris v. Burt, King v. Burt, 474, 2 O. W. R. 474, 3 O. W. R. 400.

Pleading — Allegations as to Character.]
—In an action for damages for trespass or aggravated assault, allegations concerning the respective characters of the plaintiff and defendant will be struck out of the record, upon inscription in law, as being useless and not pertinent to the issue. Chémier v. Martin. Q. R. 25 S. C. 324.

Proceeding taken in Name of Deceased Party — Ame. dment—Discretion ary Order — Interference with Discretion and Appeal.]—During the time between the hearing of a case and the rendering of the judgment in the trial Court, the defendant diel. His solicitor, by inndvertence, inscribed the case for revision in the name of the deceased defendant. The plaintiffs allowed a term of the Court of Review to pass without noticing the irregularity of the inscription, but, when the case was ripe for hearing on the inscription. The executors of the deceased defendant then made a motion for permission to amend and to be allowed to make a regular reprise d'instance. The Court of Review allowed the plaintiffs' motion as to costs only, permitted the amendment and reprise d'instance applied for, and reversed the trial Court judgment on the merits. Application for — Action for Money Lent—Joinder of Claims—Exception.] — A claim arising from a loan of money by an advocate to a broker is not a debt of a commercial nature, and consequently is not susceptible, under art, 421, C. C. P., of trial by jury. And where such claim is Joined to a demand of a commercial nature the defendant is entitled, under art, 177, C. C. P., to stay the suit by dilatory exception. Gliman v. Fennick, N. R. 20 S. C. 513.

Application for — Change of Venue— Time for—Amendment.]—An application for change of venue and trial by jury after an order made giving leave to amend defence, but before delivery thereof, is premature. Bank of British Columbia v. Oppenheimer, 7 B. C. R. 446.

Application for — Delay in Proceeding — Bar.] — A party who has applied for a trial by jury is deprived of the right of proceeding by the expiration of the delay of 30 days from issue joined, if the application has been made by pleading, or from the judgment granting a special application for a trial by jury, if there has been such an application. Copland v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 4 Q. F. R. 163.

Application for — Equitable Relief — Questions of Fact.] — Action by a former shareholder in a company against T. and the company, the latter being joined as defendant because T. and his brother and partner had a controlling interest in the company, and the consent of the company to be joined as plaintiff could not be obtained. It was alleged that T. while a director of the company had discovered a valuable bed of gold in areas as to which the company heid an option to purchase: that the discovery was concealed; and that T. procurred a conveyance of the property to himself, and also purchased the shares of the other shareholders, including those of the plaintiff, without disclosing the discovery. These facts were put in issue by T. The relief rought to be obtained was, among other things, a declaration that T. held the areas as trustee for the company, and that the company was entitled to a transfer thereof; also, that the transfer of the shares by the plaintiff to T. should be set aside. The defendant applied for an order to have the issues tried by a jury: 0, 34 2:—Held, that the admitted relation of T. with these properties and to his co-owners and co-partners in the transaction was such as to entitle all others interested in the property to the fullest explanation of the dealings of T. with the officers of the company, and the circumstances under which he and his partner became proprietors of the mine. The inquiry could be more effectively made in a trial before a Judge, as in other equitable proceedings, than before a jury. The application was dismissed.

Application for — Fraud—Time.] —
There cannot be a trial by jury except in the cases enumerated in art. 421, C. P. 2.
An action for damages, founded upon fraud and false representations, does not come within any of the classes of actions mentioned in that article. 3. After a motion is made to settle the facts, it is not too late to plead that the action is not one proper to be tried by a jury. Boll v. Royal Bank of Canada.
4 Q. P. R. 300, Q. R. 21 S. C. 321.

Application for — Time.]—An application for a trial by jury will be received if it is made within three days after issue joined, although the notice thereof was not given a clear day before the return of the motion. Richer v. Shawinigan Water and Power Co., 7 Q. P. R. 71.

Application for — Trespass.]—To make a case for an order for trial of an action be a jury, all the causes of action must be susceptible of being tried in this exceptional way. 2. Roy v. Dickson, 4 Q. P. R. 357.

Application for — Time.]—A special application to a Judge for leave to exercise the option of having a case tried by a jury, when that option has not been exercised by the declaration or the defence, must be presented to the Judge within the three days which art, 423 fixes for this purpose, and it will not suffice to give to the opposite party notice of this application within this time, even when one of three days is a non-juridical day. Unadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Foster, Q. R. 12 K. B. 139.

Application for — Time — Justice's Court — Adjournment — Continuation of Trial before Another Justice—Security for Costs. — An application for a jury under C. S. c. 60, s. 31, must be made one clear day previous to the trial; and a demand made after a trial had been commenced, and adjourned at the request of the defendant before any substantial progress had been made, is too late. A bond for security for costs under 49 V. c. 53, approved of by a justice who has been called upon to continue a trial commenced before the justice who issued the irrst process, and who was unable by reason of illness to conclude the trial, is sufficient. Temperance and General Life Assec. Co. of North America v. Ingraham, 35 N. B. Reps. 558.

Application for — Time — Non-juridical Day, —Where the third and fourth days following that upon which issue is joined are non-juridical days, a motion for leave to elect to have a-case tried by a jury may be presented on the following juridical day. Morlock v. Webster, 5 Q. P. R. 484.

Application for — Time—Pleading.]— A plaintiff who is in default for a reply to a plea, may obtain leave to file his reply, but such filing will not have the effect of extending the time to elect for trial by jury, the time therefor having expired on the fourth day after issue joined. Deniger v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 5 Q. P. R. 136.

Claim and Counterclaim. |—Where the claim is such that it cannot by reason of R. 170 of the Judicature Ordinance (C. O. 1808 c. 21), be tried by a jury, and there is a counterclaim which, if the defendant had sued in a separate action, he would have been entitled to have tried by a jury.—Held, that if the counterclaim arises out of the same transactions as the claim, they must be tried together; and in that event the defendant, having accepted the forum chosen by plaintiff, a jury cannot be allowed. Friel v. Stinton, 5 Terr. L. R. 252.

Direction to—Submission of Questions— Scientific Investigation—New Trial—Exceptions to Charge—Exclusion of Jury.]—In an action by a ship owner against a tug owner for damages for negligence on the part of the tug in allowing the ship to drift ashore while attempting to tow her from a dangerous position, the Judge in his charge to the jury explained the law applicable to the issues, but he did not point out to the jury the bearing of the facts in evidence upon the questions to be determined:—Heid, that the charge was incomplete and was mismicerstood by the Jury and that there must therefore be a new trial. The Judge is bound to submit questions to the Jury if requested to do so. Per Hunter, C.J.: (1) A Jury is not suited to try a dispute involving questions as to what were the proper mutical manueures to be performed under peculiar conditions, and the new trial should be heid before a Judge without a jury. (2) The Court has jurisdiction to order a new trial without a jury, although the appellant in his motion for a new trial does not so nsk.—Per Martin, J.: (1) It is the duty of the Judge under s. Số of the Supreme Court Act, 1904, to instruct the jury upon all leading groups of evidence and apply to them the law as affecting the issues arising out of such evidence. (2) The jury should not be excluded from the court room during the discussion on an application by counsel for further direction by the Judge. (3) The plaintiffs have an inherent right to a jury, and mere complexity of fact is no ground for depriving them of that right. Alaska Packer's Association v. Spencer, 24 Occ. N. 361, 10 B. C. R. 473.

Disagreement — Motion for nonsuit— Negligence of master—Death of servant—Action for damages. Rogers v. Empire Limestone Co., 3 O. W. R. 788.

Disagreement — Fraud — Judgment by Court.] — On the second trial of an action on a promissory note, where the defence alleged fraud on the part of the plaintiffs in obtaining the indorsement, the jury disagreed. Plaintiffs then moved for judgment on the ground that there was no evidence of fraud, and the motion was refused:— Held, that no jury could properly find fraud, and it was desirable, especially in view of the first abortive trial, that the judgment should now be entered which should have been entered at the trial. Yorkshire Guarantee and Securities Corporation v. Fulbrook, 9 B. C. R. 270.

Disqualification of Juror — Setting aside Verdict, — If a juror on the trial of a cause is allowed without challenge to act as such on a sub-equent trial, that is not per se a ground for setting aside the verdict on the latter. Dunamuir v. Loucenberg, Harris, & Co., 24 Occ., N. 117, 34 S. C. R. 228.

Failure to Set Down in Time—Power to give leave to set down—Jurors Act, s. 97 —Amending Act, 2 Edw., VII., c. 14, s. 3. Fleming v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 5 O. W. R. 588.

Failure to Submit Question — New Trial.]—In the trial wifth a jury of a replevin action, the fact in issue was whether an annual rent, the amount whereof was fixed by an award, was agreed prior to the submission to arbitration to be paid in advance, or whether both the amount of the rent and the time of payment were included in the submission. The ascertainment of this fact was not left to the jury, and pursuant to a general verdict judgment was entered for the defendant:—Held, on appeal, that, in consequence of the non-submission of this question of fact to the jury, there must be a new trial. MacAdam v. Kickbush, 10 B. C. R. 358.

Findings—Meaning of—Negligence—Contributory negligence—Injury at railway crossing—Signals—Evidence—Nonsuit. Moore v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 6 O. W. R. 1031.

Findings—Negligence—Failure to agree as to contributory negligence. White v. Canada Atlantic R. W. Co., 3 O. W. R. 840.

Findings as to Negligence—Questions as to Special Grounds—Judge's Charge—Xon-direction—Misdirection—New Trial.)—Upon a trial by Jury, the Judge in directing the jury as to the law is bound to call their attention to the manner in which the law should be anniled by them according to their indings as to the facts, the extent to which he should do so depending on the circumstances of the case he is trying. And, where the form of the charge was defective in this respect, and, consequently, left the jury in a confused state of mind as to the questions in issue, a new trial was directed. Judgment in Alaska Packers' Association v. Spencer, 10 B. C. R. 473, affirmed; Davies, J., dissenting:—Held, per Nesbitt, J., that in an action founded on negligence it is advisable that specific questions should be submitted to the jury to enable them to state the special grounds on which they find negligence or no negligence. Spencer v. Alaska Packers' Association, 35 C. C. R. 302.

General Verdict—Questions Submitted—Oral Contract—Credibility of Partics.]—The terms of an oral contract were in question. The plaintiff and defendant, being the only witnesses on the point, each swore positively to his version of the contract. Counsel for each of the parties at the trial proposed certain questions, asking that they be submitted to the jury and objecting to the submission of the questions proposed by the other side. The Judge submitted both sets of questions, but directed the jury that they were at liberty either to answer the questions and thus give a special verdict, for to give a general verdict. The jury gave a general verdict, for the plaintiff, On a motion by the defendant to set aside the verdict :—Held, that the question of there being a mistake or no consensus ad idem did not arise, and that the verdict depended on the jury's view of the credibility of the parties, and that, therefore, the verdict should not be disturbed. Neuson v. McLean, 2 Terr. L., R. 4.

Inconclusive Findings—New Trial—Negligence.]—The plaintiff's intestate had a contract with the defendant company to repair a bridge, and in an action to recover damages for his death by the defendant's negligence, the jury found, inter alia, that he went on such business on a coal train without any ticket, but with the consent of the officer in charge, and that the latter had no authority, unless by custom, to allow the deceased to travel on the train:—Held, that the findings were inconclusive and that there should be a new trial. Nightingale v. Union Colliery Co., S. B. C. R. 134.

Inconsistent Findings—Contract—New Trial:] — In an action for damages for breach of a contract the jury found, in answer to questions submitted by the Judge, that the racks furnished under the contract by the plaintiffs, and rejected by the defendants' inspector, were not in accordance with the contract and specifications, but were in accordance with the sample rack furnished by the defendants on acceptance of the plaintiffs' tender; they also found that the defendants employed a competent inspector and he acted in good faith, and they assessed the damages at $831.70, for which amount a verdict was entered for the plaintiffs:—Held, on a motion to set aside the verdict and enter a verdict for the defendants, that, in view of the findings that the inspector acted in good faith, and that the racks were not manufactured according to the contract and specifications, there must be a new trial. Lauton Co. v. Maritime Combination Rack Co., 38 N. B. Reps. 604.

Inconsistent and Unsatisfactory Findings—Re-trial. Moore v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 5 O. W. R. 211.

Interpleader Issue.]—Neither a Judge nor the Court, in the North-West Territories, has power to direct the trial by jury of an interpleader issue. McIntosh v. Shaw, 4 Terr, I. R. 97.

Judge's Charge — Time for Objecting — Statement in Writing — Misdirection—Affidavit.]—A party who desires to object to the direction given to the jury by the trial Judge must formulate his objection at the trial, and indicate in writing the portion of the charge to which he objects, and he will not be permitted to make the objection at a later stage, establishing by affidavit the direction given to the jury which he alleges to be contrary to law, Bélanger v. Larocque, Q. R. 25 S. C. 403.

Jurors—Same Juror Sitting on Former Trial—Challenge—New Trial.]—The fact that a member of a special jury was one of the jurors at a former trial is a good ground of challenge at a new trial, but the fact that such a juror served without challenge is not per se a ground for granting a new trial. At the first trial, with a special jury, the plainifigot a verdict in his favour, and on appeal a new trial was ordered. At the second trial a nonsuit was entered, and on appeal a new trial was ordered. At the third trial, also with a special jury, the plainifigot a verdict in his favour. Between the second and third trials the defendant changed her solicitors. At the first trial the defendant was in Court, but on account of illness was not present at either the second or the third trial. J. M. was a juror on the first trial and also on the third trial, but neither the defendant nor her solicitors were aware of the fact until after the conclusion of the trial:—Held. refusing a new trial on this ground, that in selecting a special jury it was the duty of the solicitor to ascertain any grounds of challenge, an opportunity to do which is provided by s.s. 5 of s. 50 of the Jurors Act. Harris v. Dunsmuir, 22 Occ. N. 341, 9 B. C. R.

Misdirection — Judge's Opinion of Evidence.]—It is not misdirection for the Judge to tell the jury his own opinion on the evidence before them. In his charge to the jury the Judge stated that he himself would pay very little attention to certain corroborative evidence adduced by the defendants, but he also told them that the matter was entirely for them to decide:—Held, not misdirection, Harry v. Packers S. S. Co., 10 B. C. R. 258.

Misdirection — Non-production — Inference—New Trial,]— In an action involving disputed accounts, it is not a ground for a new trial that the Judge told the jury they might draw inferences favourable or unfavourable to the plaintiff's case from the fact that he refused to produce, under notice, documentary evidence in his possession, which, it was admitted, contained some account of the transaction in dispute, Hale v. Leighton, 36 N. B. Reps, 256.

Cytion for—Failure to Bring on Trial—Subsequent Reply — Motion for Act of Option.]—When, after making the option for a jury trial in his declaration, the plaintiff allows more than 30 days to elapse from the date on which he should have filed his answer to a plea, without proceeding to bring on the trial, he is deprived of his right to a jury trial, and subsequent production of an answer, whether by consent or otherwise, has not the effect of reviving the lapsed right to a jury trial. A motion praying act of an option already made is not a proceeding to bring on the trial: Assetin v. Montreal Light, Heat and Foucer Co., 7 Q. P. R. 218.

Option for—Time—Pleading—Vacation.]—If a plea is filed during the long vacation, the plaintiff may reply on the 7th September, from which date the delay for making option for trial by jury will run if the plea is not answered. Belanger v. Montreal Street R. W. Co., 7 Q. P. R. 272.

Order for Special Jury—New Trial.]—Pressuant to an order therefor, a trial was had with a special jury; on appeal a new trial was ordered:—Held, that the order for a special jury was not exhausted, and a sunmons for a special jury on the new trial was unnecessary. Alaska Packers' Association v. Spencer, 11 B. C. R. 138, 1 W. L. R. 103, 188, 507.

Order for Special Jury—New Trial—Change of Circumstances.)—Pursuant to an order therefor a trial was had with a special jury; on appeal a new trial was ordered:—Held, per Irving and Morrison, JJ., Hunter, C.J., dissenting, that the order for a special jury was not exhausted by the abortive trial, and that, as there had been no amendment of the pleadings or change in the circumstances, the order was not provisional in its nature. Per Hunter, C.J., dissenting: — Any purely procedure order which does not touch the parties, can be disregarded or vacanted if the circumstances have changed or the ends of justice require it, although it has not been appealed against: and, as there were issues involving scientific investigation, the trial should be had without a jury. Alaska Packers' Association v. Spencer, 11 B. C. R. 280, 1 W. L. R. 103, 188, 567.

Question for Jury—Master and Servant—Injury to Servant—Negligence—Findings of Jury—Casual Connection—New Trial—Costs.]—Plaintiff received injuries through carelessness of a fellow workman, and the jury found negligence, and stated in what the negligence consisted, but because they did not state that such negligence was the cause of plaintiff's injuries a new trial was ordered. The jury when asked whether the defendants through their foreman were guity of negligence, and if so in what such negligence consisted, were not explicitly directed to confine their findings to such negligence, if any, as, upon the evidence, they should be satisfied had caused the explosion which injured plaintiff. Hillyer v. Wilkinson Plough Co., 5 O. W. R. 748, 9 O. L. R. 711.

Retirement—Facts for Judge Only.]
On a trial by jury after the plaintiffs case has commenced, the Judge may, in his discretion, permit the jury to retire while proof is being given of facts with which the Judge alone is concerned. Bank of British Columbia v. Oppenheimer, 20 Occ. N. 370, 7
B. C. R. 488.

Right to Jury—Action to Set Aside Will—Issues.]—In an action to set aside a will on the ground that it was obtained by fraud and undue influence, the plaintiff asked for a jury: — Held, that the action was one of those referred to in Rule SI, and as such according to Rule 330, must be tried without a jury. Per Drake, J., that the character of an action is determined by the issues raised in the plendings rather than by the prayer for relief. Stewart v. Warner, 4 B. C. R. 298, and Corbin v. Lookout Mining Co. 5 B. C. R. 281, approved. Hopper v. Dunsmuir, 10 B. C. R. 17.

Right to Jury — Duty of Judge. | — The prover which a Judge has to take a case away from the jury should be exercised only when it is clear that the plaintiff could not hold a verdict in his favour: if the matter is reasonably open to doubt, the Judge should let the case go to the jury, and then decide, if necessary, whether there is any evidence on which the verdict can be supported. Nighting gale v. Union Colliery Co. of British Columbia, 23 Occ. N. 206, 9 B. C. R. 453.

Right to Jury—Joinder of Issue—Subsc-quest Leave to Reply—Revival of Right to Ask for Jury.]—Issue is joined by reason of default in replying to a plen; and the right to trial by jury, lost by neglect to demand an act of option within the 30 days following that upon which the plaintiff has been foreclosed of his right to reply to the plen, is not revived by the plaintiff subsequently obtaining leave to file his reply. Vincent v. Mostreal Urban R. W. Co., 6 Q. P. R. 289.

Right to Jury—Joinder of Issue—Time—Waiver.]—A case is ready for trial on the day when issue is joined, either by the filing of a pleading or the foreclosure from filing same. 2. After the right to a jury trial has been forfeited by the expiry of 30 days after a foreclosure, the consent to the filing of a pleading does not constitute a waiver of such forfeiture. Matthews v. Town of Westmount, 6 Q. P. R. 52.

Right to Jury — Insurance — Powers of Jury—Motion—Costs.]—An action to recover the amount of a policy of insurance issued by a mutual insurance company is not of such a nature that it can be submitted to a jury. 2. The question of the want of jurisdiction of the jury may be raised at any stage of the cause, but if it is raised for the first time in answer to a motion to "fixer less faits," such motion will be dismissed with

Right to Jury — Option—Inscription for Proof and Hearing—Delay.]—The delay of 30 days, within which a party must proceed to bring on a trial by jury, runs from the day of the granting of a motion praying acte of his option for jury trial. 2. A motion for fixing the facts for the jury is a proceeding to bring on the trial, and an inscription for proof and hearing filed by the adverse party, notwithstanding such motion, will be rejected. Mortock v. Webster, 6 Q. P. R. 49.

Right to Jury — Practice—Demand in Pleadings — Time — "Ready for Trial" — Amendment.] — A cause stands "ready for trial," under the provisions of art. 442, C. C. P., upon issue being regularly joined between the parties; and if a party who has made a demand in the pleadings for a jury trial, allows more than 30 days to elapse after the cause so stands ready for trial, without proceeding to bring on the trial, or obtaining an extension of the delay on application to the Court, he is deprived of his right to a jury trial by the sole operation of law. This rule is not affected by the fact that the adverse party, during the 30 days, with the formal consent of the party who demanded a jury trial, withdrew an allegation of one of his pleas. Standard Life Assurance Co, v. Montreal Coal and Toxing Co., Q. R. 13 K.

Right to Jury — Time for Exercising Openical — A motion to compel a party to exercise his option for or against a trial by jury, will be granted even after the expiry of the time fixed by art. 423, C. P., if it appears that the delay has been for the purpose of accommodating the opposite party. Varin v. 8t. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co., 6 Q. P. R. 295.

Special Direction to Sheriff.]—Where an action is to be tried at the Victoria or Vancouver civil sittings held pursuant to s. 5 of the Supreme Court Act Amendment Act, 1901, a special direction (under s. 69 of the Jurors Act) to the sheriff to summon a jury is necessary. Tanaka v. Russell, 9 B. C. R. 336.

Special Jury—Fees of Jurors—Mileage.]

—A special juror is entitled to $2 for each day's attendance at Court, whether he serves or not, and whether in order to attend Court, he travels from his place of residence or not; if he so travels he is in addition entitled to mileage, Taylor v, Drake, 22 Occ. N. 220, 9 B. C. R. 54.

Special Jury—Striking—Parties—Defendant to Counterclaim—Challenge.]—The defendants in the original action counterclaimed against the plaintiff and one R. On the defendant's application an order for a special jury was made, the plaintiff and R. acquiescing. On the striking of the jury the sheriff refused to allow R. to take any part, and the plaintiff then applied under Rule 137 to strike out the counterclaim because of the D—51 impossibility of properly striking a special jury where there are more than two parties: —Held, that the plaintiff had no right to make the application. As R, acquiesced in the order for a special jury when it was made and had not appealed, a challenge to the array by his counsel at the trial was overruled. Bank of British North America v. Robert Ward & Co. (Ltd.), 9 B. C. R. 49.

thereto is not ipso facto a ground for setting

Electric R. W. Co., 7 B. C. R. 39.

Title to Land—New Trial.]—Cases involving the title to land should be tried without a jury, so that the necessity for a second trial may be avoided. Wason v. Douglas, 21 Occ. N. 521.

Verdict-Indefiniteness-Circumstances of Case — Discharge of Jury — Recalling, and Amending Verdict - Effect of-New Trial-Non-direction.] - In an action for damages caused by water being backed up on to the plaintiff's premises, the jury did not answer the questions put, but answered: "We have not answered exactly in the form of the question. We find that the construction and grading of the street across Boundary creel caused the plaintiff chamage in the sum of $3,000;" without stating that the grading was done by the defendants. It appeared that the it was the grading of the street by the de-fendants or the grading of an alley by one Fletcher that caused the damage. On the verdict judgment was entered for the plaintiff; -Held, on appeal, that from the circumstances of the case the verdict would support the judgment. Where counsel at the trial abstains from asking the Judge to submit a point to the jury, a new trial will not be point to the jury, a new trait with not be granted on the ground of non-direction as to that point. After judgment was pronounced and the jury was discharged, at the direction of the Court the jury was recalled and asked certain questions as to the meaning of the verdict, and the verdict was amended accord-ingly:—Held, that whatever was done after the discharge of the jury was a nullity, Waterland v, City of Greenwood, 22 Occ. Railway, drawn by two engines, one having a long, and the other a short, or medium, smoke box. In an action against the company for damages it was proved that the former was perfectly constructed. Two witnesses considered the other defective, but nine men, experienced in the construction of engines, swore that a longer smoke box would have been unsuited to the size of the engine. The jury found that the fire was caused by sparks from one engine, and they believed it was from that with the short smoke box; and that the use of said box constituted negligence in the company, which had not taken the proper means to prevent the emission of sparks:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 2 O. L. R. 689, 22 Occ. N. 12, that the latter inding was not justified by the evidence, and the verdet for plaintiff at the trial was properly set aside. Jackson v, Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 22 Occ. VI. JUBY NOTICE.

Action against Municipal Corporation—Non-repair of Street—Judicature Act, a. 104—Delay in Moving—Costa.]—Injuries caused by the negligent use of a steam roller belonging to a municipal corporation and operated by a contracting company on a street of the former, are not caused through non-repair of the street; and a motion by the defendants, under s. 104 of the Judicature Act, to strike out a jury notice in an action to recover damages for injuries so caused, was refused. Because of the long delay in moving the costs were made costs to the plaintiff in any event. Kirk v. City of Toronto, 24 Occ. N. 62, 7 O. L. R. 36, 2 O. W. R. 1138.

Action against Municipal Corporation—Non-repair of Street—Jury Notice—Striking Out.]—By s. 104 of the Judicature Act, an action against a municipal corporation for an injury "sustained through non-repair" of a highway, is to be tried without a jury. It was alleged that an accident to the plaintiff was caused by the negligent construction of a certain pavement, which was built on an incline, and made with an exceedingly smooth granite nnish, at all time dangerous to pedestrians, and when moist rendered even more dangerous than when dry through the faulty, improper, and negligent construction thereof. The Master in Chambers decided that, secundum allegata, the action was for non-repair, which he defined as meaning any omission of duty on the part of the nunicipality which has the highway unsafe. Making a new road or walk defectively and leaving it in such unsafe condition would seem to be non-repair, within the words of the statute, as interpreted by the cases. The jury notice was therefore struck out. Armour v. Town of Peterborough, 25 C. L. T. 283, 5 O. W. R. 630, 10 O. L. R. 306.

Action against Municipal Corporation—Non-repair of Streets—Obstruction.]— An action for damages for injuries caused by runaway horses which were frightened by a steam roller, left standing on a highway, is an action based on an act of misfeasance by the defendants, and not on the non-repair of the highway, and the plaintiff is entitled to have it tried by a jury. Order of the Master in Chambers, 2 O. W. R. 1115, reversed. Clemens v. Town of Berlin, 24 Occ. N. 92, 7 O. L. R. 33, 3 O. W. R. 73.

Default of Proceeding on—Certificate—Filing—Time.]—A certificate of the prothonotary attesting that a party who has demanded a trial by jury has made default in proceeding upon his demand will be struck out of the record if it is filed before the expiry of thirty days from the joining of the issue. Mathers v. City of Montreal, 3 Q. P. R. 382.

Effect on Future Trial.]—A jury notice is not a notice of trial, but one changing the mode of trial. If given in sufficient time it assigns the case to the jury list of trials, and when once given makes the case a jury case, at any time or times when the trial comes on, unless the case be an equitable one, or the parties agree to a trial without jury. Hackett v. Rorke, 37 N. S. Reps. 435.

O. 1897 c. 51, which provides for actions of libel, &c., being tried by a jury, is to dispense with a jury notice being given in such actions, so that a notice of trial is properly given without such notice having been first served; s. 100 not applying to actions of libel. rs-Comiction a jury in to resewage farm, and for damages: — Held, this not being an action which prior to the Administration of Justice Act, 1873, was cognizable by the Court of Chancery, that the jury notice could not be set aside as irregular by the Common Law Procedure Act. Long prior to the Administration of Justice Act, 1873, the common law Courts had power to grant an injunction in a case such as this, While, no doubt, a Judge sitting in Chambers has power, in the exercise of his discretion, to strike out a jury notice in an action such as this, although the party nequiring a jury may primá facie be entitled to it, the practice is not to exercise that power, but to leave it to be dealt with by the trial Judge. VII. NOTICE OF TRIAL.

Close of Pleadings—Several Defendants—Irregularity—Waiver—Delay.]—A notice of trial is irregular nuless the pleadings are closed as against all the defendants; and a defendant against whom the pleadings are closed when notice of trial is served by the plaintiffs can take advantage of the fact that the pleadings are not closed as against all the defendants, and have the notice of trial set aside, although the other defendant are content to accept it. A defendant, by delaying the delivery of statement of defence till the last possible day, and by delaying a motion to set aside a notice of trial for six days after service thereof, does not waive an irregularity in the notice. Long v. Long, 24 Occ. N. 297, 7 O. L. R. 596, 3 O. W. R. 428.

Distant Sittings—Dismissal of Action.]
—In January, the plaintiff's solicitors gave notice of trial at the civic sittings to be held in July in Victoria, where, according to statute, civil sittings are also held in February, March, and May:—Held, on a summons to dismiss for want of prosecution, that the plaintiff must give notice of trial for the March sittings, otherwise the action will stand dismissed, Wiles v, Times Printing and Publishing Co., 10 B. C. R. 226.

Equitable Action—Default Judgment — Appearance in Spite of—Time — Butry for Trial—Motion to Set Aside—Non-appearance at Trial—Dismissal of Action—Conditions of Order—Appeal—Amendment—Cost.] — An action for partition or sale of lands and for a declaration that a Crown grant to the defendants was inoperative and void. Judgment for default of appearance was entered against three of the four defendants in June, 1890. In February, 1960, an appearance was entered on behalf of all the defendants and a defence deliveres. Notice of tria, was given and the action entered by the defendants. The palantiffs moved before the trial Judge to set aside the notice. This motion was dismissed; and, the plaintiffs not proceeding with the trial, an order was made dismissing the action for want of prosecution unless plaintiffs paid costs and gave security:— Held, that the action was of an equitable nature, and the plaintiffs were not entitled under any practice prevailing immediately prior to the 1st October, 1884 (when the Judicature Act came into force), to obtain a judgment by default against the defendants as at common law; the suit must be governed by the same practice as any other equitable action aot provided for in Order XIII., Rules 11, 13; the defendants could appear at any time before judgment, although the time limited for appearance had elapsed; a defendant could appear at any time, though not served. 2. The appearance and defence being regular, the notice of trial and entry were regular; and semble, that, if the appearance and de-fence were irregular the motion should have fence were irregular the motion should have been to set them aside, and not the subsequent proceedings. 3. The notice of trial was regu-larly given under Order XXXIV., Rule 11, and, the defendants having appeared when the cause was called for trial, and the plaintiffs having failed to appear, the action was prop-erly dismissed under Rule 23 of that Order. The conditions of the order made by the trial Judge, though unusual, were within his province. 5. The order made at the trial should be amended by adding recitals shewing what actually took place at the trial, and the appeal from it should be dismissed without costs, the difficulty having been created by want of care in drawing up the order, and the action should be dismissed with costs in case the conditions imposed were not complied with. Duyon v. LeBlanc, 34 N. S. Reps. 215.

Failure to Proceed Pursuant to Notice—Motion for Nonsuit — Affidavit in Ansacer — Service — Leave to Proceed—Terms.]—An application for judgment as of nonsuit for not proceeding to trial pursuant to notice, was refused, upon the plaintiff giving a peremptory undertaking to go to trial at the next sitting, and on payment of the costs of the motion, notwithstanding that the plaintiff's affidavit in answer to the motion, excusing the default, had not been served, as required by the Rule of Hilary term, 1894. Frederick v. Gibson, 36 N. B. Reps. 364.

Necessity for—Order to Proceed at Next Sitting—Adjournment.]—An order made on the defendants' application to dismiss for want of prosecution, directing that the plaintiff set down his action for the next sitting at Nelson and proceed with the trial, otherwise the action do stand dismissed without further order, dispenses with a notice of trial; and if, before the date fixed for the sitting at the time the order was made, the sitting is adjourned, it is a compliance with the order by the plaintiff if he enters the action for the later date, and is ready for trial when the case is called. McLeod v. Waterman, 9 B. C. R. 370.

Service of—Letter Wrongly Addressed— Ratification.]—On the day prior to the last day for serving notice of trial, the plaintiff's solicitor, who lived in St. Thomas, prepared a notice of trial and copies thereof, in three actions, which he directed to be forwarded to his Toronto agents, with instructions to serve a return with admissions of service; but, by a costake in the office, the envelope was addressed to the defendants' solicitors in Toronto, and reached their office on the following morning; but did not come to the notice of the member of the firm who had charge of the defences therein until after four o'clock, when, on discovering that the letter was not addressed to his firm, he returned it with the notices to his St. Thomas agents, with instructions to return it to the plaintiff's solicitor, which was done:—Held, reversing the decision of the Master in Chambers, that what was done did not constitute valid service of the notices on the defendants' solicitors; nor did the defendants' solicitors do anything to ratify such service. Necesome v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association, 22 Occ. N. 115, 3 O. L. R. 258.

Time—Judgment Granting New Trial—Settlement of.]—By the judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada an appeal in this action was allowed and a new trial granted. The judgment was read in open Court on the 27th May. The plaintiff's solicitor thereupon gave the usual ten days' notice of trial for the 10th June, 1902. The minutes of the judgment were not settled until the 37th June, and when settled bore date the 27th May, 1902. The notice of trial was set aside as premature. Grant v. Acadia Coal Co., 22 Occ. N. 261,

Time for — Power to Abridge — 'County Courts.')—A County Court Judge has no jurisdiction to abridge the six clear days' notice of trial required by s. 92 of the County Courts Act. Hickingbottam v. Jordan, 21 Occ. N. 490. & B. C. R. 126.

VIII. POSTPONEMENT

Absence of Witness—Onerous Terms.]
—Where a party to a suit is entitled to a postponement of the trial, on the ground of the absence of a material witness, it is improper to impose as a term of granting the order a condition that the party consent to a change of venue. Royal Bank of Canada v. Hale, 36 N. B. Reps. 471.

Discretion—Review—New Trial.]—If a trial Judge refuses, except upon unusual and onerous terms, to postpone a trial on the ground of the absence of a material witness, the Court will review the exercise of his discretion, and grant a new trial. Hale v. Tobique Manufacturing Co., 36 N. B. Reps. 360.

Peremptory Order for Trial.] — An offer that the plaintiff set his action down for trial for a certain sitting, and in default that his action be dismissed without further order, is not a peremptory order for trial; and where the plaintiff has complied with the order, and moves at the trial for a postpomment, it will be postponed if a proper case is made out. Thurston v. Weyl, 9 B. C. R. 452.

Preliminary Trial of Question of Law-Demurrer. |-The action was founded upon an agreement, under which the defendants were to transfer to the plaintiff a quantity of stock in certain telephone companies and property and assets connected therewith in consideration of which the plaintiff agreed to make certain payments in money, deliver certain stock, and transfer to the defendants certain lands, including the portion of parish lot 3, Kildonan, lying west of the main high-The plaintiff conveyed the land to the defendants, but charged that he had been induced to enter into the agreement by the mis representations of the defendants and that the stock transferred to him was of no value. He claimed $210,000 damages and also claimed a lien on lot 3, Kildonan, for $150,-000. In the statement of defence the defend ants raised the question of the plaintiff's legal right to a lien:—Held, that a Judge should make an order for the trial of such a question before the trial of the issues of fact, only where the points of law involved are such as affect the whole case, the disposition of which would either determine the case or declare some important principle which would influence the consideration of the matters remaining. If there are issues of fact which must be tried in any event, however the point of law be decided, the order should be refused and the point left to be argued before the Judge at the trial. If the question of the plaintiff's right to a lien were argued and decided, the main issues raised in the action would still remain undisposed of. A question like the present one, not being the principal issue involved, but arising as an incident to the main relief sought, should not be set down to be argued and decided before the trial of the action. Gardner v. Bickley, 24 Occ. N. 382, 15 Man. L. R. 354.

Preliminary Trial of Question of Law — Pleading.] — Under Rule 453 of the King's Bench Act, Man, it is only in respect of some question of law which is fundamental or goes to the root of the cause of action or defence set up that there should be a separate argument before the trial. As to all other matters in the pleadings which may be objectionable, an application in Chambers, under Rule 326, to strike them out, is the proper remedy. Makarsky v. Canadian Pacaise R. W. Bélanger v. Montmorency Cotton Mills Co., 7 Q. P. R. 202.

XI. TEST ACTION.

Substitution of Another Action as Test Action.] — After one of a number of actions brought by different plaintiffs against the same defendants in respect to causes of action which were identical has been ordered to be tried as a test action, the Court has power to substitute another action as a test action. Twenty-nine actions were brought by different persons against the defendants for damages caused by the death of relatives in an explosion in the defendants' coal mine, and on the plaintiffs application an order for a test action was made, the order providing that the defendants, if dissartisfied with the result of the test action, might apply to have the other action proceeded with, and that they might apply to have any of the actions forthwith proceeded with, if there existed any special ground of defence applicable to it, and not raised in the test action. After obtaining the order, the plaintiffs' solicitor discovered that, on account of the particular place in the mine in which McLeod was killed, a separate defence not applicable to the crosses might apply, and an application was made for the substitution of another action as the test action.—Held, that the object of the order, which was provisional in its nature, was to have a fair test action, and, as the one chosen would not be a fair one, monther should be chosen. TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

Accidental Mixture of Goods—Sale by Trustec — Tenants in Common — Folloring Proceeds—Equitable Claim — Jurisdiction of County Court—Denand.]—The defendant shipped wheat in a car from a place in Maniroba to Duluth, with instructions that the wheat was to be unloaded at Roland and cleaned and dried at the plaintiff's elevators there. This was done, and the wheat was thereby reduced in bulk to about 573 bushels. The plaintiff's employees, in reloading it into the car, supposing it to be the plaintiff's own wheat to make up a car load, and forwarded the car to its descination. The defendant had obtained an advance of money from B., the repayment of which he secured by transferring to B. the bill of lading for the wheat with the agreement that B. should sell it, and, after deducting the amount of the loan, pay the balance to the defendant. B, sold all the wheat, paid himself, and accounted to the defendant for the balance, neither of them knowing what part of the wheat was the plaintiff's—Held, that there was a mixture of goods by accident, and the owners became tenants in common of the whole in the proportions which they severally contributed to it; (2) that B., as regards the wheat in question, stood in a fiduciary relation towards both the plaintiff and defendant; that the proceeds of property soid by a trustee without the consent of the owner can in equity, when traceable, be followed as fully as the property itself, if unconverted, could have been; that, so long as such money can be definitely traced it makes no difference that it has been mixed with other money; and that this rule applies, not only in the case of a trustee in the narrow and technical sense, but to any person in any kind of a fiduciary relation to others; (3) that an equitable claim like the plaintiffs in this action can now be entertained by a County Court; (4) that no demand and refusal were necessary before action. Robbin v. Jackson, 21 Occ. N. 217, 13 Man. L. R. 829.

Breach of Trust — 62 V. (2) c. 15 s. 1 — "Honestly and Reasonably"—Opinion Evidence — Inadmissibility.]—The provisions of 62 V. (2) c. 15, s. 1, relieving trustees from the consequences of technical breaches of trust who have acted "honestly and reasonably," does not render competent as evidence the opinions of bankers or other financial men as to whether the trustee has so acted in the course he has taken or omitted to take. The general rule of evidence still applies, that mere personal belief or opinion is not evidence, and that the test of reasonableness is that exhibited by the ordinary business man, or the man of ordinary sense, knowledge, and prudence in the conduct of his own affairs. The nearest approach to a working rule is, that, in order to exercise a fair ludgment with regard to the conduct of trustees at a particular time, we must place ourselves in the position they occupied at that time and determine for ourselves what, having regard to the opinion prevalent at that time in the neighbourhood and concurrent with the transaction, would have been considered the prudent course for them to have adopted. This is a different thing to asking the opinion of witnesses of what would have been done or what would

Breach of Trust — Liability for, of Cotrustee — "Honestly and Reasonably."] — A testator devised his estate to his three executors upon trust. One of the executors was a solic..., and with regard to him the will provided that in the administration and management of the estate he should be entitled to the same professional remuneration as if he were not trustee. Another executor was in England, and the third, the defendant, was told by the testator that the solicitor-trustee was to have the management of the estate, and consented to act upon that understanding. All three proved the will and acted as trustees, but the whole management of the estate was left to the solicitor, and at his death it was found that he had, without the knowledge of the defendant, misappropriated the moneys of the estate, and that his own estate was insolvent. The testator had perfect confidence in the solicitor, who up to the time of his death was reputed to be wealthy:—Held, that the defendant, having acted honestly and reasonably within the meaning of 62 V. (2) c. 15, s. 1, was not liable to make good to the estate the loss occasioned by the misconduct of the solicitor. Dover v. Denne, 22 Occ. N. 201, 3 O. L. R. 664, 1 O. W. R. 297.

Breach of Trust — Purchase by Trustee from Trust Estate — Partnership — Adequacy of Price — Delay in Bringing Action — Evidence—Entries in Books.]—In 1885 the trustees of a certain business sold it at an adequate price to B., who before purchasing stipulated with C., one of the trustees, that he should go into partnership with him; C. did go into partnership, and in 1893 he sold out his interest at a large profit. In 1903 certain beneficiaries commenced an action founded on an alleged breach of trust against C. and the representatives of his deceased co-executor, and asked for an order declaring that the sale to B, was a sham and was really one to C :- Held, that, considering the number of years since the sale took place and that it was for a fair price, C.'s account of the transaction must be accepted, notwithstanding several suspicious circumstances. In cross-examination of a defendant it is admissible to question him as to what disposition he has made of his property since the suit was begun or in anticipation of it, and a defendant so disposing of his property does an act which will be viewed with su-picion. Per Hunter, C.J.: Entries made by the deceased executor in a private book kept by him were not admissible in evidence either for or against the other executor, neither were the entries in the charge book of the solicitor for B, and C, as to instructions received by him from B, in regard to the drawing of certain papers carrying out the arrangement between B. and C. admissible in evidence as against C. Camsusa v. Coigdarripe, 11 B. C. R. 177.

Breach of Trust — Relief—61 V. c. 26—Costs.] — A testator devised and bequeathed his real and personal estate to his wife "to be hers in such a way that she shall during her natural life have the full use, benefit, and enjoyment thereof." He directed his executors to sell his real estate and to invest any money belonging to his estate in certain specified securities. "so that my said wife may have the interest and income arising therefrom during her life" and appointed his wife and the plaintiffs executors. Proceeds from the sale of real estate came to the hands of the plaintiffs, and were by them remitted to the widow, living in England. The widow invested part of the proceeds in securities in the name of herself and one of the plaintiffs, and disposed of, though in what way did not appear, the balance of the principal moneys. By 61 V. c. 26, a trustee who has acted honestly and reasonably, and ought fairly to be excused for the breach of a trust, and for omitting to obtain the directions of the Court in Equity in the matter in which he committed such breach, may be relieved by the Court from personal liability for such breach. Relief granted, but without costs. Simpson v. Johnston, 22 Occ. N. 38, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 333.

Breach of Trust — Setzure under chattel mortgage — Injunction — Damages — Counterclaim — Compensation of trustee—Costs. Watts v. Sale, 2 O. W. R. 1020.

Compensation of Trustee — Action for —Pleading — Particulars.]—In an action by a trustee to recover the just compensation stipulated as belonging to him as trustee under a trust deed, it is not necessary that he should specify fixed charges for each of the different acts done by him in his capacity of trustee. Hanson v. Montreal Park and Island R. W. Co., 5 Q. P. R. 355.

Conveyance Absolute in Form — Mortagge — Resulting Trust — Notice to Equitable Owner — Estoppel — Inquiry.] — The transferee of an interest in lands under an instrument absolute on its face, although in fact burthened with a trust to sell and account for the price, may validly convey such interest without notice to the equitable owners. Hastings (Man.), 1 W. L. R. 285.

Debentures — Validity — Ultra Vires—Breach of Trust—Croun.]—In an action for the recovery of interest upon certain debentures issued by the defendants and held by the Crown, the defendants set up that they had no authority to issue the debentures; that the application by them of moneys received from the sale of debentures to the payment of interest on other debentures, was a misapplication of the trust fund and a breach of trust; and that the Crown's advisers knew, when the debentures were acquired by it, that the proceeds were to be so misapplied—Held, that, inasmuch as the defendants had authority to issue and dispose of the debentures, their acts in so doing were intra vires, and that complicity by the Crown in a breach of trust committed by them could not be relied on as a defence to the action. Rex v. Quebec North Shore Turnpike Trustecs, S. Ex. C. R. 330.

Discretion — Lunatic — Setting Apart Maneys for—Will.]—Where, under the terms of a will, executors and trustees are required to retain in their hands a sufficient sum to provide for the support of a lunatic, the Court will not interfere with the exercise

Investments — Realization — Tenants for Life — Remaindermen—Apportionment — Election — Rate of Interest.]—A testatrix devised and bequeathed all her real and personal estate to trustees to sell and convert into money and to invest the money. She directed that the residue after payment of debts, etc., should be divided equally among her four children, three daughters and a son; each daughter to receive the income of her share for life, and her children the capital after her death; the son to receive his fourth absolutely on coming of age. In 1887, after all the children had attained their majority, a deed of partition was made. The invest-ments were divided into four equal parts, an undivided fourth of certain real estate which had belonged to the testatrix being which and peopled to the testarry being allotted to each of the children. By the dead the children ratified the acts of the trustees and continued them in the trust. At the same time the son executed a deed to the trustees, under which they were to hold his share in trust for him during his life, with remainder to his children. The real his share in trust for him during his life, with remainder to his children. The real estate above mentioned was subject to a building lease renewable. When the lease expired in 1893 it was renewed for 21 years at $1,850 a year. The lessee made default in 1894, and the trustees took possession of the land and buildings, but for a number of years were unable to obtain an adequate rental or make a sale. In November, 1902, a sale was effected for $47,500 :—Held, following In re Cameron, 2 O. I., R. 756, that the life tenants were entitled to 5me portion of this sum. But in ascertaining what sum was to be allowed them, the period betion of this sum. But in ascertaining what sum was to be allowed them, the period be-fore the deed of partition in 1887 was not to be considered. The life tenants then, in effect, elected to treat this property as a satisfactory investment. The rate of in-terest was to be determined by the rate which with the design of the property of the property of the with the design of the property and the property of the with the design of the property and the property of the propert terest was to be determined by the rate which could be obtained on securities upon which trustees may invest. Walters v. Solicitor for the Treasury, [1900] 2 Ch. 107, followed. An inquiry was ordered to determine what sum invested on the 1st May, 1894, would have produced $47,500 on the 15th Novem-ber, 1902, interest being calculated at 4½ per cent., with half-yearly rests, and credit being given for sums actually received by the life tenants from the rants acquired durthe life tenants from the rents accruing dur-ing that period. Investment — Shares in Company — Conversion, — An order was made authorizing an exceutrix to convert certain shares in a company bequeathed to her for life with remainder to her children into shares of a new company (in which the old one was about to be merged), such shares not being an investment authorized by the Trustee Investment Act, but it appearing that the arrangement would be for the benefit of the estate. Lien — Abortive sale — Foreclosure — Purchase by trustee, Hutton v. Justin, 1 O. W. R. 64.

Lien of Trustee - Abortive Sale -Foreclosure - Purchase by Trustee-Report on Sale - Certificate in Lieu of - Order -Terms.]-The defendant having been declared a trustee, with a lien for advances, and the greater portion of the trust estate having been offered for sale, to satisfy the amount found due him under the direction of the Court, and the sale having proved abortive:-Held, that the defendant's position as a trustee debarred him from the ordinary remedy of foreclosure, to which a mortgagee is entitled after an abortive sale. But, after a sale by auction has been tried in vain, the trustee is at liberty to make proposals on his own behalf, and the Court may, in its discretion, accept him as a purchaser of the estate. Tennant v. Trenchard, L. R. 4 Ch. 537, 546, 38 L. J. Ch. 661, followed. Held, also, that it was not necessary to wait for the report on sale, but the motion might be based upon a certificate of the Master shewing that the sale had proved abortive, no ground for impeaching the sale proceedings being suggested. Held, also, that the property embraced in the order not being the whole of the trust estate, it would not, upon the evilence, be just to compel the defendant to accept that which was put up for sale in satisfaction of his entire claim. The defendant offering to submit to terms, an order was made providing that he should be allowed to purchase at the amount of his claim less $250, in the event of $17,500 not being realized by a sale by tender or private contract. Hutton v. Justin, 22 Occ. N. 23, 2 O. L. R. 713.

Misappropriation of Trust Funds—
Payment by Trustee to Stranger—Appropriation to Debt of Trustee.]—A sum of money was bequenthed to B., by his father, ".o.
the use and benefit "of the children of B., for their "support and education," and not in any wise to be subject to or liable for any debts or obligations of B. personally. B., forwarded to T. a sum of £500 to hold "in trust," informing him that it was a special legacy for the benefit of his children. T. acknowledged receipt of the money, as stated, and placed it to the credit of the children of B. as directed. The money so remitted having been subsequently appropriated by T. and his co-defendants, in part payment of the indebtedness to them of B. personally, an action was brought by B., as trustee for his children, and by the children, to have the defendants declared trustees, and for an account:—Held, per Weatherbe and Henry, JJ., that the appropriation could not be disturbed, it having been made to appear that the money paid over to T. by B, was not the money set forth in the pleadings, but a sum of money bequeathed to B, absolutely:— Held, per Graham, E.J., that there should be an inquiry to ascertain what sum should be an and the support and maintenance of the children of B, and that the plaintiffs, other than B, should have judgment against B, for the balance; that the defendants should make good this balance to the extent of the fund received by them:—Held, per Henry, J., that the intention of testator was to give the legacy to B., subject only to the obligation to use it for the support and education of the children; that if the sum of £500 became at any time subject to the terms of the trust, it became free from its operation as soon as the purposes of the trust were performed, and that the defendants, having whatever rights in the fund B. had, were no more answerable to the plaintiffs than B, himself would be. Public Park — Conveyance to Municipality in Trust — Conditions — Breach — Forfeiture — Assignee — Champerty. |—C. conveyed lands to a city corporation for a park and public recreation ground, with conditions prohibiting their use for certain speci-fied purposes, and that the corporation should, within a limited time, clear the lands, seed them, build a road thereto, and maintain the same in good condition. In an action by the assignee of C.'s reversionary interest, for a declaration that the corporation held the lands in trust and for a reconveyance, under the proviso on breach of conditions, peared that about one-sixth of the land had been left in its natural state, but that the remainder had been cleared and made fit for ordinary athletics, though not level. road had been built, but, as population did not increase in the vicinity, the grounds were not in demand for athletic or exhibition purposes, and had not been used, and had become covered with undergrowth:—Held, affirming judgment in 10 B, C, R, 31, that there was no such breach of the conditions as would warrant a declaration of forfeiture. Semble, that, had there been a breach of trust, the resulting forfeiture could have been decreed in favour of the assignee. City of Vancouver, 35 S. C. R. 121. Clark v.

certain lands held in the name of defendant were, at the time of the assignment, the property of M., and, by reason of the assignment, became vested in the plaintiffs. The evidence shewed that the money required by the defendant for the purchase of the properties in question was obtained from M., but that M. had nothing to do with any of the purchases except to advance the money to the defendant, whom the negotiations were conducted, by whom the negotiations were conducted, and in whose name the deeds were taken and recorded, and who, in all cases, acted independently of M. in negotiating for and acquiring the properties from the respective owners;—Held, that the doctrine of resulting trusts was not applicable, and, there being no issue of fact for the jury on this phase of the case, that the Judge was justified in with-drawing it from them:—Held, also, the Judge having at the close of the trial announced his intention of withdrawing the case from the jury, that counsel for the plaintiffs should at that time have indicated the facts or issues that they wished the jury to pass upon, and, having neglected to do so, that it was now too late for them to object :- Held, also, that the objection was without merit, as the jury was applied for by the defendants and not by the plaintiffs. Semble, that where a cause of an equitable nature has been ordered to be an equitable nature has been ordered to be tried with a jury, under the provisions of O. 34, r. 2, the trial Judge cannot, without the consent of both parties, withdraw the case from the jury, and himself try the issues of fact. Remuneration of Trustees-Fixed Annual Sum-Solicitor-trustee-Profit Costs.1-Appeal by one of the trustees of an estate from the judgment of a Surrogate Court fixing his remuneration. The Surrogate Judge allowed five per cent, on the interest collected only, but nothing for any other services, on the ground that he had allowed two and a half per cent, in a former order for the taking over of the copus:—Held, following Re Berkeley's Trusts, S. P. R. 193, that an annual allowance should be made for looking after the corpus of the fund, and that it should not aloved the state of the state that it should not depend upon the amount collected and invested, but should be a fixed annual allowance, based on the nature of the property and the consequent degree of care and responsibility involved. Held, also, that the Surrogate Judge, instead of allowing the trustees a percentage on the principal sum taken over, and nothing for the collection the interest, should have allowed them nothing for the taking over of the estate, but a percentage on all interest collected and paid over, and an annual sum for the care of the estate. Held, also, that the general rule is, that a trustee-solicitor is not entitled to charge the estate with fees for any professional services, but that an exception, which is not to be extended, has been established by the decision of Lord Cottenham in Cradock v. Piper, 1 Macn. & G. 664, under which a solicitor-trustee, who brings or defends proceedings in Court for himself and his co-trustee, is entitled to recover profit costs, and, therefore, to charge such costs to the estate, ℓn re Williams, 22 Occ. N. 323, 4 O. L. R. 501, 1 O. W. R. 501.

Sale of Land-Specific Performance Contract for Sale of Land by Trustees-Evidof Concurrence by All-Statute Frauds-Correspondence-Authority of Trustees to Bind Co.-trustee,]-One of three trustees assumed in the name of all to make an offer to sell a freehold property, part of the trust estate, for $13,000. A second trustee assented to and approved of the offer when made aware of it; but the third repudiated as soon as it came to his knowledge :-Held, in an action brought against the three trustees for specific performance, by the person who had accepted the offer, that the trust estate was not bound, although the distrust estate was not bound, attnough the dis-senting trustee had, only a fortnight before, assented to a sale of the same property to another person at $12,000. The situation had changed in the fortnight; further inquiries had been made; a new customer had been found; a new negotiation had been opened with the prospect of a better price. The cestui que trust had a right to the benefit of the third trustee's best judgment in the changed situation before concluding the new contract, and to have that judgment manifested by his signature, either actual or expressly authorized. Where there are several trustees, all must act. Gibb v. McMahon, 25 C. L. T. 291, 5 O. W. R. 554, 9 O. L. R.

Shares in Company — Contract — Declaration of trust — Statute of Frauds. Creighton v. Carman, 3 O. W. R. 748.

Shares in Building Society - " /n Trust "Notice—Mortgage — Purchaser for Value—Consolidation.)—The defendant A. J., being the holder of six shares of permanent stock in her own name, and six shares of instalment stock in trust," and other shares, building one of the shares. in a building society, obtained a loan of $700 from the company, and transferred to the company's treasurer, as security, "all my stock in the said company." Subsequently stock in the said company." Subsequently she obtained a further loan of $600, and transferred to the treasurer, as security, six shares of instalment stock, the intention being to transfer the six shares held "in trust" and already assigned, as the company con-tended, to secure the prior loan of $700. giving also a mortgage on land, reciting that she was the owner of six shares of the capital stock of the company, and that the company had agreed to advance $600 upon the said shares with this mortgage as further security. The defendant A. K. J. became the purchaser of the land subject to the $600 mortgage (which she assumed), and pur-chased from A. J. her equity in the six in the six shares of instalment stock:-Held, that the use of the words "in trust" put the company upon inquiry, and they were affected by the notice that A. J. was not the owner of the shares and had no power to mortgage. Held, also, that s. 53 of c. 205, R. S. O. 1897, did not empower the company to dis-regard the trusts, although it relieved them from seeing to the execution of any trust to which the shares were subject. Held, that the company could not consolidate the two mortgages as against A. K. J., as she was a purchaser for value, without it being shewn that she was aware at the time she purchased the equity of redemption in the lands that any prior mortgage existed against the six shares in the hands of the company. Birkbeck Loan Co. v. Johnston, 22 Occ. N. 190, 3 O. L. R. 487, 1 O. W. R. 163, affirmed with a variation as to parties. Birkbeck Loan Co. v. Johnston, 6 O. L. R. 258, 2 O. W. R. 566.

Statute of Frauds - Express Trust -Purchase, to Make a Home for Relative — Implied Trust — Absence of Fraud.]—The plaintiff claimed a declaration that certain lands standing in the name of the defendant lands standing in the name of the detendant W. were held by him in trust for the defend-ant F. and a sale thereof to satisfy the plain-tiff's judgment against F. Three things were mainly relied on to establish the trust; (1) that W. on one occasion told the plain-tiff that he had bought the land for F.; (2) that in a letter to the inspector of a company, he said that the land would eventually belong to F.; (3) that in his books he had kept an account of his dealings with F., entering the different items of debit and credit in respect to this farm, as well as of other matters:—Held, on the evidence, that W., no doubt, intended that F. (a relative) might have a home upon the farm, but was determined to retain the ownership of the land. There was no agreement between the parties, either as to a life tenancy or as to the acquisition of the fee simple in the land by F., which he could have enforced against W. in a court of law; and the plaintiff, under his registered judgment against F. was in no better position than the would be if suing on his own behalf. It was urged that there was a trust in favour of F.; that this was a resulting trust and therefore excluded from the provisions of the Statute of Frands. As no portion of the purchase money of the land was advanced by F., there could be no resulting trust in his favour. No fraud on the part of W. was shewn, and there was no trust which could be enforced. Thompson v. Wright, 24 Occ. 97.

Technical Breach of Trust — Relicion under Trustee Act — Statute of Limitations — Accounts — Evidence — Books of Account — Reference — Report — Correction on Further Directions.]—Under the last will of N., after making provision for his daughter E., all the rest and residue of his estate was given to his two daughters A, and C., equally, share and share alike. A. was appointed executrix and trustee, and the share given to C. was directed to be invested, and the interest, dividends, and annual produce paid to her half-yearly during her lifetime for her sole and separate use, etc. A. proved the will and filed an inventory, and paid over to E. the amount bequeathed to her, but with respect to C., who was very deaf and weak-minded, contented herself with supporting her during her lifetime, usually taking from her at the close of each year a receipt mentioning no amount, but sealed and witnessed, and acknowledging payment of the interest due her to the date of each receipt. The incomes of both A, and C, were applied by A. to their joint support, C, being provided with all necessary care and attention. After the denth of both A, and C, at the instance of the plaintiffs, claiming under E., a reference was ordered to a Master to ascertain the amount of the residue of the estate of N. to which C, was entitled, and also receipts and expenditures by A. in her lifetime on account of C., and by the defendants as executors of A. after her death. After receiving the report of the referee, the Judge reterred the report back to be varied, and with further instructions. On appeal from the latter or der:-Held, that the whole cause and the matters in controversy being still before the Judge, he had power, in giving further direc-tions to the referee, to correct any errors into which he thought he had fallen, the cause in this respect being unlike a common law action. Also, in the circumstances, that, though there had been a technical breach of trust on the part of A., the case was an appropriate one for relief under the Trustee Act (Acts of 1892 c. 13); and that the defendants were entitled to avail themselves of the projection of the Statute of Limita-tions. Also, as to income received by the defendants since the death of A., the Judge was right in holding that they should only be charged within 6 years of action brought.

Also, as to a sum of money received by A., and not accounted for, her estate could not be relieved from liability, but with respect to income which should have been derived from the investment of the sum so not accounted for, the same rule must be applied as in the case of income received by the defendants after the death of A., and that the liability must be restricted to the period of 6 years before the commencement of the action. Also, that the Judge was right, under the provisions of O. 32, r. 3, in directing books of account kept by A., and which consisted largely in admissions against her own interest, to be taken as prima facie evidence of the truth of the matters therein contained. Cairns v. Murray, 37 N. S. Reps. 451

Transfer of Mining Areas to Trustee — Power to Sell — Title of Vendee — Action — Parties.] — In an action for, among other things, a declaration, that, as against the defendants, the plaintiffs were entitled to an undivided one-third interest in certain gold mining areas transferred by the plaintiffs to the defendant McN., and sold by the latter to the defendant W, it appeared that the main objects with which the transfer in question was made were; (1) payment of certain advances made by McN., on account of the purchase money of the property; (2) the payment of an amount due by the plaintiff E. H. O, to the McLaughlin Carriage Co., for which the plaintiff C. G. O, was liable on a bond as surely: —Held, that the defendant McN. had power to sell the property for the purpose of carrying out the intentions of the parties. 2. That the plaintiffs not having established their right to the declaration prayed for, the claims or rights of the company, for whose benefit the transfer was made, could not be adjudicated upon without their being nade parties to the suit. 938.]-An order made under Rule 938 declared that the persons interested in the residue of the estate of a testator were entitled to have sums set apart by the executors and trustees, from time to time, from the capital of the estate, to provide for annuities bequeathed by the testator, as sufficient funds for that purpose came to the hands of the executors are to the hands of the executors, or to have such sums applied by them in the purchase of Government annuities, and, after provision made for pay-ment of the specific legacies and the annuities, to have the residue in the hands of the executors from time to time distributed among the persons entitled:—Held, that the order was substantially right. The annuitants were not entitled to have the estate of the testator realized and converted into money further than might be necessary for the payment of his debts and funeral and testamentary expenses; their right was limited, after this had been done, to having the annutities sufficiently secured by the setting apart of such part of the estate as might be adequate for that purpose. —R. G. died in 1870, having by his will given the income of his estate to his widow for life, and subject to certain bequests, the for fire, and subject to certain bequests, the residue to the children of his brothers and sisters, and appointed T. H., J. G., and the widow executors and executrix of his will with power "to dispose of the property if they see fit." J. G. managed the estate until the time of his death in 1885, by which date some of the real property had been disposed of and invested, and his management was of and invested, and his management was duly accounted for. T. H. then took the management of the estate until 1895, when the widow, the widow, after much pressure by her friends, took proceedings against him for an account, the result of which was that he was found largely indebted, and a large sum was tound largely indebted, and a large sum was lost to the estate. The widow died in 1902; probate of her will was then granted to the defendants; and T. H. was removed as trustee, and the plaintiffs appointed in his place. In an action by the plaintiffs against the defendants in 1903 to compel them to make good the losses to the estate of R. Act of Sale—Droits de Mutation—Failure to Pay—Nullity—Improvements—Morts gage — Priorities — Payment to Insolvent Mortgugor.]—The defendant mortgaged a lot of land to C, in 1888 and 1889. In 1899 P., the possessor of the lot, sold the improvements thereon to C. The plaintiff, a judgment creditor of P., caused the lot to be seized in the possession of P., invoking a sale by the defendant to P. in 1894. The defendant claimed the property as his, and sold it to C, for $25:—Held, that the act of sale in 1894 was absolutely null and void and must be considered as non-existent, because the dues thereon had not been paid; that such nullity not only prevented the transmission of the property, but took away all probative value as to establishing the sale, and that such an act, being non-existent in the eye of the law, did not even prove the payment and the receipt of the moneys mentioned in it. 2. That C. committed no fraud in purchasing from the defendant. 3. That, besides, in the actual case, the plaintiff, a creditor of P., claiming to be the earlier purchaser, alleging that P., his debtor, was charged with the mortgage debt of the defendant to C., thereby affirmed the bad failin of P., who, not having the mortgage debt, and the control of the control of the mortgage lebt of C. having priority in law over such improvements. 4. There is nothing illegal in a mortgage paying for the improvements upon the mortgage premises with the object of protecting his security, even if he whom he pays is insolvent insamuch as it is not fraud for a debtor to pay his insolvent creditor. —Specific Performance—Election.]—Where at the time of an agreement for sale and purchase of land, the title to the land stood in the name of the vendor's wife, but the vendor obtained and tendered a transfer from his wife to the purchaser before the purchaser repudiated the agreement;—Held, following Paisley v, Wills, 19 O. R. 303, 18 A. R. 210, that the purchaser was liable to an action or balance of purchase money. Right to repudiate discussed. If a thing be agreed to be done, though there be a penalty annexed to secure its performance, yet the very thing itself must be done, and the Court will not permit the person on whom the penalty rests to resist specific performance by electing to pay the penalty. Rati-Stan applainwife, d by thort for hich the the land in question, of which sale the plaintiff was duly notified; and the defendant went into immediate possession and commenced making improvements, of which the plaintiff was also notified on the 19th February. On the 8th June, after a large sum had been spent in improvements, the plaintiff notified the defendants that he repudiated the sale, and brought an action for possession:—Held, that M. had authority from the plaintiff through T. to make the sale to the defendant. 2. That if M. had not been authorized to make the sale, the plaintiff thad ratified it by his conduct in standing by and allowing the defendant to make improvements, under the arrangement of purchase, and not immediately repudiating it and giving notice within a reasonable time. 3. Contract for Sale - Payment-Conveyance — Dependent Obligations—Title—Dower — Payment into Court — Costs.] — By an agreement entered into between plaintiff and defendant for the sale of land, it was pro-vided that if the purchase money was paid by instalments the deed was to be given when by instalments the deed was to be given when and not before the last instalment was paid. If defendant exercised his option and paid the whole purchase money at any-time within four years, then the deed was to be given when the money was paid:—Held, that the obligations were mutual and dependent. and that the acts were performed concur-rently. By the terms of the agreement, a good title was to be given, and this could not be done, as a release of dower could not be obtained, but defendant signified his willingness to retain possession and to accept compensation. The matter being a small one, and there being some question as to the jurisdiction of the County Court to afford relief: -Held, that the matter should be transferred to this Court, and the judgment for defendant to this Court, and the judgment for defendant in the County Court set aside; that the plain-tiff should have leave to apply at Chambers to ascertain the value of the dower, and that the balance of the purchase money should be paid into Court within one month after the ascertainment of the value of the dower: otherwise defendant should be taken to have abandoned his option, and plaintiff should have judgment for the amount of his claim with costs:—Held, that plaintiff's claim being for an amount under $80, costs must be taxed according to the scale of the County Court in such cases. Lots 9 and 10, block 10, were on the north-east corner, and were not owned by C.; whereas lots 9 and 10, block 9, were on the north-west corner, and were owned by C. B. sued to have the agreement or receipt rectified or performed so as to cover lots 9 and 10, block 9, and to have the agreeowned by C. ment specifically performed :-Held, that it was the property on the north-west corner that the parties had in contemplation, and that C filled in the wrong description either by mis-take or fraud, and that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance of the true agreement. Contract for Sale of Land-Payment in Goods—Rescission—Failure of Considera-tion—Trover for Goods—Reconveyance.]—V., being desirous of purchasing a lot of land in neing destrous of purchases a few of and in the possession of F., was negotiating with him about it, but no agreement of purchase had been arrived at. W., a dealer in cattle, went to V. and offered, to purchase from bim two head of cattle. He refused to sell, stating that he wished to exchange them with F. for that he wished to exchange them with F. for the land. W. then went to F. and agreed to extinguish a debt of $79 that he had against him if he would convey the land to V. W. went again to V. and offered him the land in exchange for the two head of cattle and his note for $20. This offer V, accepted. The parties then met at the office of a justice, and Except V. W. Seprence the dead of the land and F. gave V. a warranty deed of the land, and V. gave W. his note for $20. W. selected the cattle, asked V, to turn them out, and said he would come again and take them away. recorded the deed, but, discovering that F recorded the deed, but, discovering that F-had no title on the records, told W. ha could not have the cattle. W. afterwards went and took the cattle frow V.'s pasture without his consent. V. alleged that W. told him that F. had a good title, and agreed to give him a good title, and if he did not do so the bargain was to be off. W. denied that he told V. that F. had a good title, or that he agreed to give V. a good title. In an action of trover in a County Court to recover the cattle and note, the Judge told the jury that if they believed V.'s version of the transaction, the title in the cattle did not pass, and there was evidence upon which they might find for the plaintiff. The jury found for the plaintiff:—Held, on appeal, that V. having accepted and registered the deed under the contract, the consideration had not entirely failed, and V. could not rescind the contract and sue in trover for the cattle and note without reconveying or offering to reconvey the land, and that the appeal should be allowed and a nonsuit entered. Vanbuskirk v. Vancart, 36 N. B. Reps. 422.

Contract for Sale of Land-Resolution by Municipal Corporation - Acceptance of Offer to Purchase - Evidence - Written Instruments-Statute of Frauds-Estoppel.]-T. offered to purchase lands which the municipality had bid in at a tax sale, and to pay therefor the amount of the arrears of taxes and costs. The council resolved to accept and costs. The council resolved to accept "the amount of taxes, costs, and interest" against the lands, and authorized the reeve and clerk to issue a deed at that price:—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that, even if communicated to T. as an acceptance of his offer, this resolution would have raised no contract, on account of the variation made by the addition of interest. An instrument, which was never delivered to T., was executed by the reeve and clerk of the municipality, in the statutory form of conveyance upon a sale for taxes, reciting the above resolution, but without a reference to any contract in pursuance of the resolution, and about two months after the passing of the resolution, upon receipt of another offer for the same lands, the council resolved to intimate to the person making the second offer "that the lot had been sold to T.:"—Held, that these circumstances could not be relied upon as an admission of a prior contract of sale:— Held, also, that, even if it could be inferred that contractual relations had been estab-lished between T. and the municipality, it did not appear that there had been any written communications in respect thereto made on behalf of the municipality, and, consequently, the alleged admission of a contract did not satisfy the Statute of Frauds, and could have no effect. Contract for Sale of Land — Specific Performance—Statute of Frauds—No name of Purchaser in Memorandum—Laches — Agent's Duty to Furnish Name of Purchaser.]

— Action for specific performance of an alleged contract by the defendant to sell to the plaintiff two Lots of land. The writing relied on was an acknowledgment signed by the agents for the defendant (naming firm) of having received from B. & R. $25 deposit on the purchase of the lots, describing them, with the price and terms of sale. The plainiff asserted that he was the purchaser, though his name did not appear in the agreement, B. & R. were his solicitors and agents. The defence was that the agreement did not comply with the requirements of the Statute of Frauds, as the name of the purchaser did not appear in it; that the plcintiff by his laches had disentitled himself to specific performance of the agreement; and that, on account of the default of the plaintiff, the defendant had rescinded the agreement :- Held, that the plaintiff had not made out a case entitling him to specific performance of the agreement in question, and the action should be dismissed with costs. The note or memorandum of an agreement for the sale of real estate must contain the names of the contracting parties. or such a description of them that there cannot be a fair dispute as to their indemnity The term "vendor" is not in itself a suffi-The term venor is not in itseir a sufficient description of one of the contracting parties: Potter v. Duffield, L. R. 18 Eq. 4; Williams v. Jordon, 6 Ch. D. 517; White v. Tomalin, 19 O. R. 513. In the present case the purchaser was neither named nor de-scribed in the agreement. As the agreement did not comply with the requirements of the Statute of Frauds, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Maber v. Penkalski, 24 Occ. N. 407.

Contract of Sale-Construction of Covenants-Dependent or Independent-Payment into Court.]-The plaintiff's claim was for payment of the balance of the purchase money of land under an agreement of sale, in the usual form, in which the purchaser covenanted that he would well and truly pay the said sum of money together with the interest thereon on the days and times mentioned, and the vendor covenanted that, in consideration of the purchaser's covenant and on payment, &c., he would convey and assure or cause to be conveyed and assured to the purchaser, his heirs and assigns, by a good and sufficient deed in fee simple, &c., the said price or parcel of land freed and discharged from all incumbrances: — Held, following from all incumbrances: — Held, following Macarthur v. Leckie, 9 Man. L. R. 110, that the two covenants were independent, and that the defendant was bound to pay the purchase money before he could call on the plaintiff to convey the property, and that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to prove the tender of a conveyance, or to allege that he was ready and willing to convey, although it appeared that the property was subject to two mortgages. With the plaintiff's consent, the defendant's purchase money was ordered the derenant's policies to be paid into Court so that the incumbrances could be discharged out of it and only the balance paid to the plaintiff. Sword v. Tedden, 21 Occ. N. 546, 13 Man. L. R. 572.

Contract of Sale—Default—Rescission— Demand or Notice—Necessity for—Costs of Pending Opposition.]—The plaintiffs had sold to the defendants a bit of land for construction of their line, for an annual rent of $25 as long as the purchase money, $500, should not have been paid, it being stipulated that if the defendants made default in payment of any gale of rent for six months after it fell due, the sale should be rendered void and of no effect, and it should be lawful for the plaintiffs to resume possession of the land and to dispose of it as their own property without indemnity or reimbursement of the sums paid. The defendants having made default in payment of one of the gales of rent for more than six months after it fell due, the plaintiffs began an action to rescind the sale, and, besides, claimed the costs of a pending opposition which they had filed to protect their rights upon a seizure of the land being made as against the defendants:—Held, that, by reason of the default clause above referred to, the plaintiffs had the right to demand the rescission of the sale, without any demand of payment of the gale of rent, or any mise en

Contract of Sale-Rescission for Fraud Secret Commission to Purchaser's Agent-Collusion-Election.]-The defendant was induced by his agent to agree to buy the plaintiff's farm for $1,850, although the plaintiff's price for it was only $1,800. He paid $250 in cash and went into possession. It was represented to him that there were 80 acres of cultivated land on the farm, but it turned out that there were only about 58 acres. On discovering this he asked to have the agreement cancelled and his money returned, but this was refused. He then, on the advice of the same agent, raised a crop on the farm and remained in possession for over a year, but refused to make the further payments agreed on. The plaintiff then brought this action to have the agreement cancelled and the money he had received forfeited. At the trial it came out that the plaintiff had paid the agent $50 out of the money paid by the defendant, who asked to have the agreement cancelled and his money refunded to him:by his inaction had lost his right to repudiate the bargain on account of the shortage in the cultivated area, and distinguishing Campbell v. Fleming, 1 A. & E. 40, that, on account of the newly discovered secret payment by the plaintiff to the defendant's confidential agent, the defendant had the right to ask for cancellation of the sale and repayment of the $250, with costs of action. Contract of Sale—Taxes—St. John Assessment Act.]—By agreement dated the 18th March, 1902, for the sale of land in the city of St. John, the vendee was to be given a "good title free of all claims on the 1st. May," the date when possession was to be given. Section 131 of the St. John Assessment Act, 52 V. c. 27, enacts that "any assessment upon or in respect to real estate shall be a special lien on such real estate from the 1st day of April in the year of the assessment," &c. By 58 V. c. 49, s. 1, power is given to the city to sell real estate, on failure of the person assessed to pay taxes assessed in respect of the land. On the 1st May, 1902, the rate of taxation for the year from the 1st April had not been fixed by the assessors, and the rate was not determined, nor was the assessment list filed by the assessors, and the rate was not determined, nor was the assessment list filed by the contended that the taxes for the year beginning on the 1st April should be paid by vendor, and the matter was referred to the Attorney-General, whose decision it was agreed should be final:—Held, that the vendee should pay the taxes, save one month's proportion thereof, to be borne by the vendor. Contract of Sale — Time of Essence — Waiver—Notice — Rescission — Forfeiture of Payments — Receiver — Rents — Laches — Specific Performance—Costs.]—Semble, that the acceptance by a vendor of a payment on account of a past due instalment of purchase money is a waiver of his right to take advantage of a provision in the agreement of sale making time of the essence thereof; but, if there be a subsequent default in payment of a subsequent instalment, that, being a new breach, gives the vendor a right to insist on that provision :- Held, that a vendor, gives to the purchaser a notice limiting a reasonable time within which to complete an agreement to purchase, and informing him that after the lapse of the time limited the agreement will be treated as at an end, and if he does not act subsequent to waive the effect of the notice, thereby legally rescinds the agreement, and the purchaser is not en-titled to specific performance. 2. That mere delay in enforcing his rights, consequent upon uch a rescission, does not discentifie the vendor to a declaratory order that the agree-ment is rescinded. 3. That in such a case payments on account of purchase money are forfeited to the vendor if there he a provision to that effect in the agreement, and, semble, even without such a provision. 4. That where, after such an agreement, the property in question passed into the hands of a receiver appointed by the Court, and he, as well as the purchaser, was given a notice of the terms above mentioned, the receiver was accountable to the vendor for the rents receivaccountable to the vendor for the rents received subsequent to the date on which the notice terminated the agreement. The receiver, on the grounds of his being an officer of the Court, and of the delay of the vendor in taking steps to enforce his rights, was not ordered to pay the costs of the application in which the above questions were raised. Forfar v. Sage, Ex. p. Wilkins, 5 Terr. L. R. 255.

Covenant—Building Restriction—Deed of Land — Covenant Running with Land — Breach — Construction — "House."] — The purchaser of land covenanted, for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, not to erect more than one house thereon. It was held by Street, J., that the burthen of the covenant passed with the land to the defendants, the assigns of the purchaser, and the benefit of it to the plaintiffs, the assigns of the vendor in respect of the adjoining land, but that the covenant should not be extended beyond what its terms reasonably imported. He was of opinion that "house" meant "dwelling house" and that putting up a stable and carriage house was not a breach; and "if the defendants could build a house first and then add a stable without breach of the covenant, there was no reason why they should not begin by building the stable and afterwards build the house. Hime v. Lovegrove, 25 C. L. T. 344, 5 O. W. R. 706, 9 O. L. R. 607.

Deed of Sale—Warranty—Assessment for Building Church—School Taxes—Payment of Arrears by Purchaser — Recovery—Prescription.]—In case of a sale of land "with warranty against all troubles, hypothecs, debts, dowers, donations, substitutions, alienations, and incumbrances whatsoever," the existence of an assessment (répartition) for the building of a church, at the time of the sale, cannot give the purchaser a right of warranty or to be indemnified against the vendor if he knew at the time of the deed of assessment. The school taxes and assessments for building a church affecting land, being public charges or of common law, ought to be taken into consideration in the purchase of land, and as to future payments to be taken into account at the time of sale. The purchaser with legal warranty, who has paid municipal or school taxes owing by the vendor, cannot recover these taxes from the latter, if, when he commenced his action, the debt due the municipality by the vendor for payment of these taxes had been prescribed; the pur-chaser, being subrogated to the rights of the school corporation, has no greater rights than the latter against the vendor. Peabody v. Vincent, Q. R. 26 S. C. 37, 253.

Deed of Sale — Terms of Warranty — Right of Action.] — The purchaser of land, who has paid the price thereof, has no right of action against his vendor for damages and a clear title, if the deed of sale does not contain a clause of franc et quitte, but simply that the vendor warrants the buyer against trouble and will hold him harmless against all incumbrances. Vail v. Baker, 6 Q. P. R. 159.

Faisa Demonstratio-Position of Vendor's Signature - Specific Performance.] -On the conclusion of negotiations between C. and B. as to the sale of two city lots on the corner of Hastings street and Westminster avenue, in Vancouver, B.C., C. signed a document as follows: — "Vancouver, June 28th, 1902. Received from James Borland the sum of ten dollars, being a deposit on the purchase of lots Nos. 9 and 10, block No. 10, district lot 196, purchase price twenty thousand dollars ($20,000), the balance to be paid within 10th July . . days, when I agree to give the said James Borland a deed agree to give the said James Bornand a deed in fee simple free from all incumbrances. Jos. Coote, N. W. Cor. Hastings & Westr. Ave." The lots on the corner of the streets mentioned were, in fact, lots 9 and 10 in block 9, and the trial Judge found that these were the lots intended to be sold, and also that the words below the signature formed part of the receipt. In an action for specific performance of the agreement for sale of the lands :--Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, Borland v. Coote, 10 B. C. R. 493, 24 Occ. N. 383, Killam, J., dissenting, that the inaccuracy of the description in the receipt was a mere discrepancy, which should be dis-regarded, and a decree made for specific performance in respect of the lots actually bargained for between the parties. Coote v. Borland, 25 Occ. N. 28, 35, S. C. R. 282.

Fraudulent Representation—Value of Land—Rental—Abatement of Price. —In an action quantum minoris, it is necessary to prove that the buyer, plaintiff, gave more than the real value of the property, which proof had not been made in this case. Judgment in Q. R. 17 S. C. 387 affirmed. Doberty, J., did not concur in the last considerant of the judgment of the Court below, viz., that where the alleged fraud relates to the motive inducing the purchaser to buy at a price exceeding that which he would have given if the fraud had not been practised, no action lies at the suit of the purchaser who adheres to the sale, to reduce the price. Bailey v. Reinhardt, Q. R. 20 S. C. 225.

Incumbrance-Lis Pendens-Notice-Interpleader-Rule 1103 (a). |- Action brought against one who had contracted to purchase lands for the purchase price. Pending the action the Molsons Bank sought to set aside, as fraudulent as against themselves and his other creditors, a grant of certain lands by one Sanderson to his wife, the vendor. Before accepting conveyance of these lands or paying the purchase money, the purchaser from Mrs. Sanderson was apprised of the registration of a certificate of lis pendens issued in the action brought by the bank:— Held, that the registration of a certificate of lis pendens is not an incumbrance within the meaning of R. S. O. c. 119, s. 15. - It did not create any lien or charge upon the lands against which it was registered. this case one in which it would be at all possible to comply with the requirements of the statutory provision which the purchaser invoked. The Molson's Bank could not assert any liability on the part of the purchaser to pay to them such purchase money. Their claim must have been to have it declared that the lands in question were exigible to meet the demands of themselves and the other creditors of the vendor's grantor. Rule 1103 "deals with a liability in one person to pay a specific sum of money, while at the same time two other persons are making claims in respect of that sum." Ingham v. Walker, 3 T. L. R. 448, 31 Sol. J. 271. See too Baxter v. Day, 73 Wise. 27. The application was wrongly conceived, and should be dismissed with costs to be paid by the applicant to the vendor. The Molsons Bank, having supported the motion, should have no costs. Molsons Bank v. Easer, 6 O. W. R. 93, 180, 10 O. L. R. 452.

Lien—Bailleur de Fonds—Charge on Purchase Money—Gift—Acceptance.] — Although an act of sale or gift does not contain a stipulation for an hypothecary guaranty, the immovable sold or given remains burdened with a lien in the nature of a bailleur de fonds, for appreciable charge in money stipulated for in the act of gift, or for what remains due of the price of sale. Such hypothee exists in favour of the vendor or donor, or of the third r son to whom it is stipulated in the act of gift or sale that the charges upon the gift or the price of the sale shall be paid. 2. The lodging of his claim by a creditor with the liquidator to be collocated upon the product of the sale of an immovable, of which the price is due to him, as a creditor indicated in the act of sale, constitutes a sufficient acceptance of the stipulation on his part, Canadian General Electric Co. v. Shipton, Q. & 21 S. C. SS.

Misrepresentations—Fraud — Error — Rescission — Exchange — Improvements — Option—Actio Quantum Minoris—Latent Defects—Damages—Warranty.]—An action will lie against the vendor of land to set aside the sale and recover the price, on the grounds of error and latent defects, even in the absence of fraud. The purchaser has the option of returning the property and recovering the price or of retaining the property and recovering a portion of the price; he cannot be forced to content himself with the action quantum minoris and damages, upon the pretext that the property might serve some of his purposes, notwithstanding the defects. Where the vendor has sold, with warranty, a building constructed by himself, he must be presumed to have been aware of any latent defects, and to have acted fraudulently in making the sale. Where the vendor represented that a block of buildings had been constructed by him of solid stone and brick, and it was discovered after the transfer that a portion was built of lumber encased with stone and brick in a manner to deceive :-Held, that the contract was vitiated for error and fraud, and the vendor, as he knew of the faulty construction, was liable to return the price and for damages. The action quantum minoris and for damages does not apply to cases where contracts are voidable for error or fraud. The sale was made in part in con-sideration of vacant city lots given in payment pro tanto, and, during the time the defendant was in possession of the lots, he erected buildings upon them with his own materials:—Held, that, even if the contract amounted to a contract of exchange, it was subject to be rescinded in the same manner and for reasons similar to those which would avoid a sale, and, if the contract be set aside for bad faith on the part of the defendant, the plaintiff has options similar to those mentioned in arts. 417, 418, 1526, and 1527 of the Civil Code, that is to say, he may either re-tain the property built upon, on payment of the value of the improvements, or cause the defendant to remove them without injuring the property, or compel the defendant to retain the property built upon and to pay its value, besides having the right to recover damages according to the circumstances. Pagnuello v. Choquette, 24 Occ. N. 77, 34 S. C. R. 102.

Mistake-Rectification of Agreement.]-Suit for rectification and specific performance. The defendant agreed to sell to the plaintiff lots 26, 27, and 28 according to a subdivision in Kildonan; he gave him a transfer under the Real Property Act, which the plain-tiff registered, and he received a certificate of title. The plaintiff supposed the lots so of title. The plaintiff supposed the lots so sold to him to be those which were really 27, 28, and 29, and took possession of the last named three, and made improvements on lot 29. Later on the defendant sold lots 29 to 34 to another person, when they were to 34 to another person, when they were clocated by a surveyor, and the plaintiff discovered that the lot on which his improvements were was lot 29, instead of 28, as he had supposed. The plaintiff brought this action to have it declared that the intention had been to sell him the lots which were really 27. 28, and 29, and to have the sale agreement rectified, and for specific performance of the rectified agreement. The plaintiff testified that the defendant told him that a house, which since turned out to have been on lot 29, was on lot 28, and he relied on that representation in buying, and making his improvements. The defendant said he told the plaintiff he was selling by the plan only, and that the plaintiff must find the lots for himself. It was admitted that the plaintiff looked over the property before buying, though he did not measure the distance from the railway track to the lots he chose, which, if done, would have shewn him their numbers and probably prevented the mistake :- Held, that the plaintiff did not rely on any representation by the defendant, but looked over the property with a knowledge of how to find lots according to their actual numbers, and his misfortune was the result of his own mistake only. It was argued that the case was one of a unilateral mistake, but to entitle the plaintiff to damages as in a case of unilateral mistake a plaintiff must shew fraud on the defendant's part: May v. Platt, [1900] 1 Ch. 616. There was no suggestion of fraud in the present case. Williams v. Hespeler, 24 Occ. N. 409.

Mortgage—Payment into Court—Interest—Bonus—Municipal Corporation.]—Where the corporation of a city acquired the property of a light, heat, and power company, which was subject to a mortgage for a large sum, the Court refused to exercise the powers conferred on it by ss. 15 and 16 of the Act respecting the law and transfer of property, R. S. O. 1897 c. 110, by requiring the company to accept, on an existing mortgage, three per cent., the Court rate of interest, instead of five per cent., the rate secured by the mortgage for the unexpired period thereof, and to authorize the corporation to deduct the amount of the mortgage so computed from the purchase money. In re Kingston Light, Heat, and Power Co, and City of Kingston, 24 Occ. N. 358, 8 O. U. R. 258, 3 O. W. R. 769.

Mortgage Sale—Notice of Sale—Service of—Recitals in Deeds—Assigns—Meaning of —Devolution of Estates Act—Caution—Non-registration of.]—Where, by a provision in a mortgage, no want of notice required by the mortgage was to invalidate any sale thereunder, but the vendor was alone to be responsible, and the conveyance made on a sale under the power of sale contained recitals that service had been duly made on the mortgagor and his wife, the accuracy of such recitals being in no way disproved, a subsequent vendor of the land, in making title on a sale thereof, is not called upon to furnish any other evidence of such service; and further, the objection being as to the proof of service on the wife, no such proof was in any event required, for, by the terms of the mortgage, service only was to be required to be made on the mortgagor and his assigns, and the wife was not an assign. Where, after the death of a mortgagor, a married woman, and after the coming into force of the Devolution of Estates Act, R. S. O. c. 127, and the expiration of a year from the mortgagor's death, without any caution being registered, sale proceedings were taken on the mortgagor, service of notice of sale on the husband and her heirs, two infant daughters, is sufficient, it not being necessary to serve the personal representatives. In re-Martin and Merritt, 22 Occ. N. 116, 3 O. L. R. 284.

Mutual Mistake—Innocent Misrepresentation—Rescission of Contract — Damages — Costs—Fraud.]—Plaintiff entered into a contract for the purchase of land from the defendant, after the latter had personally shown him what he honestly thought was the land he owned. After payment of certain instalments of the purchase money and certain sums of money for taxes and otherwise in connection with the land, the plaintiff bought an outfit of horses, implements, lumber, etc., and took them out to the railway station nearest the land, intending to take possession and commence farming operations. He then discovered that the property which he had bought was not the one which had been shewn to him, but was greatly inferior to it in value. He then brought this action in which he charged the defendant with fraudulent misrepresentation as to the locality of the property:-Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have the contract rescinded and to repayment of all moneys paid by him under it with interest at five per cent, per annum. Adam v. Newbigging, 13 App. Cas. 308, followed. (2) The plaintiff was not entitled to damages, as the defendant's misrepresentation had not been fraudulently made. (3) Appearances having justified the charge of fraud, though this was not proved, costs should be allowed. Hopkins v. Fuller, 25 Occ. N. 481 15 Man. L. R. 282.

Offer to Sell—Purchaser Pendente Lite— Certificate of Lis Pendens — Specific Performance—Delay — Damages.] — A letter by the vendor's agent to a probable purchaser, giving the description of the vendor's land, mentioning the price at which the vendor is willing to sell, and asking the person written to if he is willing to purchase at that price, is an offer to sell, not simply a request for an offer to purchase, and, upon the person so written to stating that he wishes to buy at the price named, a contract of sale and purchase is constituted between the parties. After the contract for the sale had been entered into, the vendor sold and conveyed the land in questior, which was of a speculative character to a third person, who purchased in good faith and without notice of the prior contract. Before he registered his deced the original purchaser began this action for specific performance and registered a certificate of lis pendens, but, although he knew of the second sale, he did not take any step in the action, or make the second purchaser a party, for nearly twelve months:—Held, that the second purcheser's rights were not affected by the registration of the certificate, and that in any event the delay would have been fatal to the claim for specific performance as against him. The vendor having deliberately broken his contract because of a better offer, substantial damnges were assessed against him. Clergue v. McKay, 23 Occ. N. 243, 6 O. L. R. 51, 1 O. W. R. 178-241, 2 O. Partnership Lands-Death of One Partner-Conveyance to Surviving Partner by Administratrix - Infants-Consent of Official Guardian—Personalty.] — Two brothers in partnership in business were the owners of certain land as partnership assets used in the business. One of them died intestate, leaving a widow and infant children, and the widow took out letters of administration and conveyed the land to the surviving partner, Later the surviving partner died, and his personal representative agreed to sell the land. On an application under the Vendors and Purchasers Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 134, in which the purchaser contended that the consent of the official guardian should be obtained to the conveyance to the surviving partner, under s. 8 of the Devolution of Estates Act, R. S. O. 1897 c, 127 :- Held, that the latter Act did 1837 c. 121:—There, that the latter Act and not apply, as the property devolved by opera-tion of law upon the personal representative virtute officii, and not by virtue of the sta-tute, and that the ciridren were not concerned or interested in the land in any sense contemplated by the Act. Previous Sale of Land — Partition — Title of Vendor Confirmed—Costs of Vendee—Evidence—Ancient Documents.] — Where a suit for partition of lands sold previously to the commencement of the sun established the exclusive title of the vendor, and the suit was not caused by any fault of his, the vendee made a party to the suit was held not to be entitled to deduct his costs from the purchase money. Where a document, of date 1831, purporting to have been executed by father and son, was produced from the custody of a grandson of the former, and as having been kept with title papers in a box formerly in the custody of the grandson's brother, and now in the grandson's custody, and where a document, of date 1840, purporting to be a will, was produced from the custody of a nephew of a person purporting to have signed it as a witness, and as having been kept by him with other papers in a chest now in the nephew's custody, both documents were held admissible in evidence without proof of execution. Patterson v. Patterson, 25 Occ. N. 91, 3 N. B. Eq. 106.

Registered Hypothecs—Cloud on Title—Validity of Registration.]—The registration, along, of hypothecs affecting an immovable property sold gives the purchaser the right to invoke the benefit of art. 1535, C. C., and he is not obliged to contest with the creditors the contention made by the vendor that such registrations are without effect. Malbauf y. Leduc. Q. R. 19 S. L. 67.

Rents of Land — Apportionment—Contract—Conveyonces, 1—The plaininf, on the 29th May, 1992, contracted in writing with the defendant for the sale to the defendant of certain land, a portion of which was at the time under lease to a tennu whose term commenced on the 1st May, 1902, and was then unexpired. The plaintiff claimed an apportionment of the rent between the 1st May and the 24th June, when the deed was delivered.—Held, that the Act respecting the apportionment of rent, R. S. N. S. c. 150, s. 2, did not apply as between vendor and purchaser, and the written contract containing no reservation of rent, the purchaser was entitled to the whole rent. Miller v. Nicholls, 23 Occ. N. 176.

Requisitions on Title—Dower—Taxes —Executions.]— The purchaser made these requisitions: (a) That evidence should be given shewing that dower rights do not attach in the cases of conveyances made without bar of dower (in 1852 and 1853) before commencement of the period of possession relied on. (c) That the vendor should furnish evidence that the lands to be conveyed by her are not incumbered by any executions or arrears of taxes or local improvement rates;
—Held, that the vendor was bound to comply with the requisitions. In re Clayton and Rescission of Contract-Misrepresentations—Consideration—Possession—Laches—Waiver—Ratification.]—The defendant, by falsely representing that he had a serious offer for the purchase of his property for a brewery, induced the defendant to take a deed of it, the defendant fearing that a brewery might be an injury to a hotel which he was projecting near by. Payment of the purchase money was deferred. On discovering the falsity of the representations, the defendant notified the plaintiff that he repudiated the contract, and invited him to bring an action to test its validity if he was unwilling to take back the property. The plaintiff delayed some time in bringing this action for the recovery of the purchase money, and in the menatime the defendant remained in possession and collected the rents:—Held, that, under the provisions of the Quebec Civil Code, as the vendor had made false representations which deceived the purchaser as to the principal consideration for which he contracted, he could not recover; that the purchaser had a right to have the contract rescinded on the ground of error; that, under the circumstances, the delay could not be imputed as laches of the defendant, nor waiver of his right to have the contract set aside, and that the defendant's administration of the property in the meantime could not be construed as ratification of the contract. Barnard v. Riendeau, 31 S. C. R. 234.

Rescission of Sale—Default of Paymenn—Registration.]—The vendor cannot demand that the sale of an immovable effected by him shall be declared void, and that he shall be placed in possession of the immovable, without alleging and proving that the stipulation for the rescission of the sale in default of payment has been registered. Beaudoin v. Gaudeys. 4, Q. P. R. 161.

Rescission of Sale — Delay in Making Title—Pleading—Oral Demand.]—The delay of a vendor to make title to his purchaser of the immovable, which he has sold him, is not a ground for rescinding the sale. 2. When the purchaser has not demanded the rescission of the sale by his pleading, he cannot obtain it upon a demand made ore tenus, and this is so even when the grounds which he invokes for obtaining it, appear upon the record. Brunet v. Berthiaume, Q. R. 21 S. C. 314.

Rescission of Sale—Part Performance of Contract — Non-fulfilment of Conditions — Abandonment.]—The defendant had sold his restaurant to the plaintiffs, who had paid a part of the price in cash, another part being agreed to be paid on the day of the transfer of the liquor license, and the balance by monthly payments thereafter. The defendant put the plaintiffs in possession of the restaurant, but afterwards retook possession. The plaintiffs took no steps to obtain the transfer of the license, and the defendant did not offer them a transfer. Subsequently the plaintiffs sued for the cancellation of the sale and to be reimbursed what they had paid to the defendant, alleging that he had dis-possessed them: —Held, that the parties not having executed or really intended to execute the bargain made between them, there was ground for adjudging the cancellation of the sale, Coté v. Neveu, Q. R. 22 S. C. 268.

Right of Remere—Jus ad Rem—Assignment of Right.)—A vendor à réméré deprives himself of all his rights of property; he reserves only a simple jus ad rem in the property sold, and cannot, consequently, sell it anew to a second purchaser: art. 1487, C. C. 2. In this case, L., the vendor à réméré, was held not to have sold the property a second time to C., but to have merely assigned to him his right of re-purchase, which is assignable. Judgment in Q. R. 24 8, C. 438 reversed. Sirois v. Carrier, Q. R. 13 K. B. 242.

Right of Remere—Exercise of.]—One who has reserved the right of réméré upon an immovable must seek out the purchaser in order to fulfil the conditions upon which he has reserved such right, and it is not for the purchaser to seek him out. Chartrand v. Decrouard, 6 Q. P. R. 131.

Sale of Land at Auction en Bloe-False Bidding—Part Payment.]—Where an immovable composed of several lots is sold at auction en bloe, in pursuance of notice of sale, a sum paid on account of the purchase price should be deducted from the total price, and one of the purchasers cannot escape the consequences of false bidding by saying that he has paid his part. Marceau v. Morin, 5 Q. P. R. 349.

Sale of Land without Title—Remedy of Purchaser—Executor—Power to Convey.]
—A purchaser of land troubled in his possession has no right of action en garantie against his vendor who has sold him the land of another, but has a right of action for indemnity. 2. In the absence of express provisions in a will, an executor cannot, without the consent of his co-executors, as such executor, transfer the title to property. Gosselin v, Martel, 5 Q. P. R. 205.

Sale of Mining Rights—Fraud—Exaggerated Representations—Rescission—Parties.]—Representations exaggerating the value of rights sold do not constitute acts of fraud which give to 'he purchaser the right to insist that the sale is void, but they amount to a simple wrong, which is not a ground for nullifying a contract between adults. 2. An action to set aside a sale of mining rights and rights of redemption, or which the plaintiff alleges that he possesses only a part, will be dismissed upon demurrer, if the owners of the other parts of such rights are not before the Court. Jeannotte v. Caron. 5 Q. P. R. 183.

Sale under the Direction of Court Error in Fixing Reserve Bid - Opening Biddings.]-A purchaser at a sale under the direction of the Court, having no knowledge of an irregularity in fixing the reserve bid, cannot be affected by such irregularity; and a motion made to set aside a sale and open the biddings, on the ground that in fixing the reserved bid the value of one part of the property was not taken into consideration. was dismissed with costs. The referee not having in his report approved of the sale, but having made a special report regarding it, the purchaser, although ready, was unable to pay the balance of his purchase money into Court :- Held, that he should be allowed to pay it in without interest, and without prejudice to his right to object to the title. In re Jelly, Provincial Trusts Co. v. Gamon, 22 Occ. N. 64, 3 O. L. R. 72.

Sale under Power in Will - Debts Charged on Lands — Devise after Payment— Executors' Power to Sell—Gifts to Widow in Lieu of Dower - Evidence of Election-Release.] — A testator by his will directed his executors to pay his debts, and, subject to the payment of debts, devised a particular portion of the estate, and directed that the balance of that portion of his estate, after payment of the debts, should be divided among his four children in equal shares. Then followed a paragraph declaring that the property willed should go to the parties direct :- Held, that a power of sale was given to the executors under the provisions of s. 19 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 129, and that purchasers were, by s. 19, released from the necessity from inquiring as to the due exe cution of the power. The will also contained gifts to the widow, including an antuity to be accepted in lieu of dower, which was regularly paid to her, and which she ap, arently had elected to accept in lieu of down Held, that the purchaser was entitled either to a release from her or to a declara tion from her in form sufficient to estop her as against him from claiming dower. if he were dissatisfied with their management of the enterprise:—Held, that the two contracts must be deemed to be, and were, distinct and independent transactions - the one being an absolute sale of the property to the respondents, and the other a joint ven-ture with them, for the disposal of the property in lots. And the appellant, having exercised his option to take back his deposit, was entitled to recover the same, and the respondents could not, by dilatory exception, set up a defect in the title of the property transferred by a deed of sale, or ask, under art. 1535, C.C., that the disturbance be re-moved before repayment of the deposit, the respondents' recourse against a defect in title being by a separate action against the appellant as warrantor, 2. Where ambiguity exists in one or more of the answers of a party examined as a witness, an isolated expression cannot be detached from the context, to serve as a judicial admission for the purpose of making proof against an authentic act. In case of uncertainty, the law which the parties have made for themselves in the text of contracts formally executed by them, should be literally enforced by the Courts. Ander-son v. Provost, Q. July, and on the 18th July the defendants notined him that they treated the agreement as cancelled and that they had re-sold the land: — Held, that the defendants had exercised their option of reseinding within a reasonable time, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to any reller. The plaintiff paid $10 on account of his purchase and obtained the following receipt signed by S.: "Hamilton, Oct. 10, 1904. Received from Mr. Edwin Green the sum of ten dollars on house and lot number 328 East avenue sold by Mr. James Stevenson for $350 by paying (fifty dollars) to Mr. Stevenson, allowing one-half for lawyers' fees, also paying water rates. Balance $40 on house." S. afterwards sold and conveyed the property to the defendant B, for $425. The plaintiff admitted that the agreement orally made was for a sale at $400, payable $50 in cash and $350 by the assumption of an existing mortgage, and for payment by the plaintiff of the taxes for 1904 and interest upon the mort-gage since the 14th May. The receipt was gage since the 14th May. The receipt the only memorandum of the bargain. solicitor for B. had full knowledge of the previous sale to the plaintiff, and it was held that this was notice to B., who was thus deprived of the protection of the Regis-try Act. The second point ruled was that the receipt plain, shewed a contract for a sale at $400, of which $350 was to be paid by the assumption of the existing mortgage and $50 in cash; and the third that the receipt sufficiently shewed that Edwin Green receipt summently snewed that Edwin Green was the purchaser. The defendants escaped, however, upon the fourth question raised, which, like the second and third, depended upon the Statute of Frauds—the omission from the receipt of all reference to the spe-cial terms as to integer and taye. The decial terms as to interest and taxes. The defendants averred that these terms were part of the bargain, and the plaintiff admitted that it was so, and expressed his willingness to perform that part of the contract as a condition of obtaining specific performance. The Court (distinguishing Martin v. Pycroft, 2 De G. M. & G. 785), reluctantly gave effect to this defence. "The receipt," said Anglin, J., "not purporting to contain the whole terms of the bargain, offers no legal impediment to the introduction of parol evidence to prove terms which it omits. The contract was, for aught that appears to the contract was, for augin that appears to the contrary, designedly left in part parol. Its special equitable jurisdiction not being invoked by the defendant or requisite to his defence, the Court is not in a position to impose terms upon him. He defeats the plaintiff's claim without any indulgence which it is peculiarly the province of a court of equity to afford. By evidence admissible in any court he shews a parol contract of which only some of the terms are evidenced as required by the Statute of Frauds. His defence is thus complete. By no known pro-cess can those terms be put in a writing signed by the defendant. Nothing less can constitute an enforceable agreement so long as the Statute of Frauds prevails. There is no fraud, no mistake, even if it would suffice, to enable the Court to avoid the effect of the statute; nor part performance to satisit in the absence of a sufficient memorandum. Green v. Stevenson, 25 C. L. T. 354, 5 O. W. R. 761, 9 O. L. R. 671.

Specific Performance — Statute of Frauds — Names of Parties — Laches — Default — Discretion.] — 1. A note or memorandum in writing containing an agreement for the sale of land must, to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, name both the contracting parties or describe them so that they can be ascertained without extrinsic parol evi-dence, and it is not sufficient that the agent of the intending purchaser is named. 2. An intending purchaser of land who has been guilty of laches, bad faith, and default for a considerable time in payment of the cash stipulated for, disentitles himself to the exercise of the judicial discretion to grant specific performance in his favour. Title to Land — Conditional Devise Over to Children of Named Woman—Possi-bility of Issue Extinct — Presumption — Evidence.]-Land was devised to the vendor for life with remainder to her son in fee subject to a devise over to the children of M., a married woman, in the event of the vendor's son dying without issue. The son was living and had had issue, and he and the existing children of M. (all being of age) had conveyed their interests to the vendor. M. was now a widow and 54 years of age:-Held, on an application under the Vendors and Purchasers Act, that the Court should, without evidence as to the physical condition of M., act on the presumption that there would be no further issue of her body, and declare that the vendor could make a good title in fee simple-such a title as could be forced upon an unwilling purchaser. In re Tinning and Weber, 25 Occ. N. 38, 8 O. L. R. 703, 4 O. W. R. 514.

Title to Land — Removal of Incumbrances — Certificate of Registrar.]—One who has brought an immovable, free and clear of incumbrances, is entitled to compel his vendor to make title to him in respect of such immovable and to remove the charges upon such immovable. 2. The documents of title to an immovable include a certificate of the registrar stating that the property is free from every charge and hypothec. Ville-Marie Bank v. Kent, 4 Q. P. R. 206.

Title to Land - Specific Performance - Purchaser at Judicial Sale - Administration Proceedings - Mortgage - Advertisement of Sale — Form of — Sheriff's Deed.]
—A lot of land was devised to M. for the term of her natural life, and, after her death, death the property was subject to a mort-gage, and there was one child by the marriage, who subsequently married. M. instituted an administration suit for the settlement of the estate, as the result of which, a sale was ordered; and she became the pun-chaser at the sale, and the Master's deed was made out to her. Subsequent to the purchase, M. executed a paper by which she agreed to convey the property in question to her daughter K. for her life, subject to the life interest of M.; then to go to the children of K. in fee simple:—Held, following Kearney v. Kean, 3 S. C. R. 339, that the purchase by M. at the administration sale must be presumed to have been an act done in the due course of administration; that it was in substance a mere discharge of an incumbrance; and, notwithstanding the fact that the Master's deed was absolute in its form, M. took the property in question subject to the life interest in herself, in trust for her daughter K., who had a clear title to the remainder in fee, paramount to any title derived under the agreement. 2. That, as against the title of K., the instrument executed by M. purporting to give K. a life estate only had no effect. 3. That K. had a good title to the land, and that, as against the defendant, who purchased at a sheriff's sale under the decree in an action on a mortgage made by K, and her husband, and who refused to complete the purchase, the plaintiff, the holder of the mortgage, was entitled to a decree for speci-fic performance. 4. The advertisement of sale was in the following form: "All the estate, right, title, interest, and equity of redemption of K., and of all persons claiming. or entitled from or under the said K., of, in, or entitled from or under the said K., of, ill, to, or out of all that lot, piece, or parcel of land," &c.; and the form of the order was that "the said lard and premises be sold," &c.:—Held, that this form was sufficient to cover all the estate, right, title, interest, and equity of redemption of the deforders, the triple of the content of the cont fendant at the time of giving the mortgage. 5. That the deed was given by virtue of the statute (Acts 1890 c. 14, ss. 5 and 6), and by virtue of the provisions of the statute the land ordered to be sold by virtue of the sheriff's deed was vested in the grantee. 6. Semble, that the form of words in use in Nova Scotia was adopted in consequence of the practice of not settling conditions of sale. and offering a specific title: Diocesan Synod of Nova Scotia v. O'Brien, Ritch, Eq. Dec. 352; and that the form is suitable for a good title, or a limited one, and a more specific reference to the title is not made. Power v. Foster, 34 N. S. Reps. 479.

Warranty of Vendor -Charge on Land — Municipal By-law — Drainage — Assessment Roll.]—A by-law was passed by the municipal council of a town, providing for the construction of a drain, which drain was to jass in front of an immovable property subsequently sold by the defendants to the plaintiffs. The by-law also provided that the immovables on either side were charged for the construction of this drain at the rate of $1.75 per running foot. The drain was constructed before the sale to the plaintiffs, and subsequent to the sale an assessment roll was prepared in accordance with the bylaw :-Held, that, as the by-law created the charge and determined the amount, independently of the assessment roll, which merely

of Deed — Sheriff's Deed — Sale of Rights

Warranty of Vendor — Construction of Deed — Sheriff's Deed — Sale of Rights in Land — Evettion by Claimant Under Prior Title.]—By the deed of conveyance the vendor declared that he had sold with warranty all rights of property and other rights which he had acquired by virtue of a deed of sale from the sheriff of the lands therein mentioned, and of which he was actually in possession, and that "the immovable belonged to him as having been acquired from the sheriff."—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from Strong, C.J., and Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the warranty covenanted by the vendor had reference merely to the rights he might have acquired in the lands under the sheriff's deed, and did not oblige him to protect the purchaser against eviction by a person claiming prior title to a portion of the lands. Ducondu v. Dupuy, 9 App. Cas. 150, followed. Brouin v. Morissette, 22 Occ. N. 79, 31 S. C. R. 503.

Warranty of Vendor — Description —Plan of Subdivision —Change in Street Line — Accession — Troubles de Droit — Eviction - Issues on Appeal.]-A vendor of land described according to an existing plan of subdivision, with customary legal warranty, is not obliged to defend the purchaser against troubles resulting from the exercise subsequently by municipal authorities of powers in respect to the alteration of the street line. A party called into a petitory action to take up the fait et cause of the defendant therein, as warrantor of the title, may take up the defence for the purpose of appealing from the trial Court judgments maintaining both the principal action and the action in warranty, although he may have refused to do so in the Court of first instance, but, should the appellate Court decide that the action in warranty was unfounded, it is ipso facto ousted of jurisdiction to entertain or decide upon the merits of the principal action. Monarque v. La Banque Jacques-Cartier, 22 Occ. N. 7, 31 S. C. R. 474.

Warranty of Vendor — Eriction — Charges.]—A purchaser of immovables cannot sue his vendor, nor the granter of his vendor, to obtain from him a clear title, before eviction from his property, or before having been sued for charges or claims upon it which were not made known to him at the time of the purchase. Trudcau v. Molleur, 5 Q. P. R. 221.

Warranty of Vendor-Eviction — Special Agreement—Damages.]—A sale of land, including a dam, was accompanied by a warranty of the vendor of his title. The vendee, having been evicted from the portion of the premises used for the dam, brought an action to recover back the price he paid, and for damages. The vendor tendered the price and costs of resisting the action for eviction, but denied liability for damages, on the ground that there was no special agreement as to the cause of eviction under art. 1512. C. C.: — Held, that the warranty of title did not constitute a special agreement which would entitle the vendee to damages under art. 1512, C. C. Allan v. Price, 20 Occ. N. 432, 30 S. C. R. 536.

Warranty of Vendox—Failure of Title —Specific Performance — Rescission—Payment by Vendor to Real Owner — Remedy against Arrière-parant.]—The purchaser of an immovable with a legal garantie, whose vendor was not the owner at the time of the sale, may, without waiting until the true owner claims possession of the immovable, sue his vendor for rescission of the sale or to compel him to make a good title. 2. When, in such a case, the vendor can obtain a good title by paying a fixed sum to the true owner, the purchaser may have judgment against the vendor for payment of this sum to the true owner, and upon default by the vendor in the payment of it within the time fixed, the purchaser may make the payment and charge the vendor with it. 3. The purchaser may exercise this remedy against the vendor's predecessor in title who has given a garantie. Trudeau v. Molleur, Q. R. 24 S. C. 27, 5 Q. P. R. 418.

Warranty of Vendor — Incumbrance— Discharge — Title Deeds — Certificate of Registrar.]—The purchaser of an immovable, sold to him with zarantie, may demand that the vendor be ordered to pay off a creditor who at the time of the sale had a hypothec upon the immovable. 2. On such a sale, the vendor is bound to hand over to the purchaser the title deeds of the immovable sold, and among them the certificate of the registrar stating that the immovable is free from all charges and hypothees. In re Banque Ville-Marie, Q. R. 22 S. C. 162.

Warranty of Vendor - Incumbrance-Special Municipal Tax-Apparent Charge.]-When an immovable is sold after the passing of a municipal by-law providing for the execution of certain works in the municipality where the immovable is situated, and for payment for such work by means of a tax upon the immovables in such municipality, but before the completion of an assessment roll for the purpose of levying such tax, the vendor is not liable as a warrantor to pay such tax, 2. It is only by the putting into force of such roll that the tax becomes a charge upon the immovables of the municipality. 3. One who buys an immovable in a municipality is supposed to have knowledge of all the municipal by-laws which can affect it, and a charge made by a by-law is therefore an apparent charge, as to which the vendor is not a warrantor, 4. The vendor who has sold with a guaranty of title, but without any stipulation "de franc et quitte, is not obliged to extinguish a charge which exists upon the immovable sold, as long as the debt which constitutes such charge is not exigible. Judgment in Q. R. 17 S. C. 573, reversed. St. Sulpice Seminaire v. Masson. O. R. 10 K. B. 570.

Warranty of Vendor Incumbrance—Special Municipal Charge — Apparent Charge, —The warranty of the vendor of an immovable property does not extend to a charge imposed by the municipality in which the property is situate, for a term of years, as a special tax for the cost of a drain, except as to the arrears of such tax due by the vendor at the date of the sale. Warranty of Vendor — Land Abutting on Street—Reduction in Width.]—A vendor who has sold land fronting on a street is not obliged to indemnify the purchaser because, subsequent to the sale, the municipal authority has reduced the width of the street so that the land sold is no longer upon the street line. Judgment in Q. R. 19 S. C. 33, reversed, Banque Jacques-Cartier V. Gauthier, O. R. 10 K. B. 245.

Change — Aff.davit of Mcrits—Prepondermore of Convenience—Speedy Trial—Costs.]
—Upon a motion by the defendant in a County Court action to change the venue from Digby to Halifax:—Held, that where an affidavit of merits is required, it should, if made by the party himself, state that he has a good defence on the merits, as he is advised (by his solicitor or counsel) and verily believes; but if made by the solicitor, it should state that the party has a good defence on the merits, as the deponent is instructed (by his client, or the client's agent) and verily believes; 2. That the preponderance of convenience was, upon the affidavits, entirely in favour of a trial in Halifax rather than in Digby. Levy v. Rice, L. R. 5 C. P. IIB, and Church v. Barnett, L. R. 6 C. P. IIB, followed. 3. That the fact that the trial would take place on an earlier day at Digby, which would suit the plaintiff's convenience, as he intended to go away, was not a justification for laying the venue at Digby. 4. That the order changing the venue should be with costs, as it had been opposed on unreasonable grounds. O'Hearn v. Keith, 21 Occ. N. 572.

Change—Agreement before Action.]—A conditional sale agreement provided that "in case of any litigation arising in connection with thir transaction, it is agreed that the trial will be held only in" the place where the vendors carried on busin-ss):—Held, that this condition was binding, and in an action by the purchaser to recover damages because of the unsatisfactory condition of the article sold, an order was made changing the place of trial to the place agreed upon, although the balance of convenience was in favour of the place named by the plaintiff in his writ. Dulmage v. White, 22 Occ. N. 260, 4 O. L. R. 121.

Change — Contradictory Affidavits—Defence on Merits.]—An application under Order XXXIV. R. 2, on the part of the defendant company, to change the venue from Halifax to Pictou. The defendants filed an affidavit which stated that they had a good defence to the action on the merits. The plaintiff opposed the motion and read affidavits tending to shew that the defendant had not a good defence on the merits:—Held. that the plaintiff's affidavits could be read on such a motion; and the Judge, not being satisfied that the defendant had a good defence to the action on the merits, refused to change the venue. Cooper v. Copper Crown Co., 21 Occ. N. 313.

Change — Convenience — Fair Trial.]—
The writ of summons was issued in Rossland, where all parties resided. The venue was laid in Victoria, and the defendants applied, on the ground of greater convenience, for a change of venue to Rossland. This application was refused because a fair trial by jury could not be had there, on account of the feeling among the mining classes. The defendants then applied for a change to Nelson, where they contended a fair trial could be had, but the plaintiffs nied affidavits to shew that the feeling was the same as in Rossland:—Held, that, although the expense of a trial at Nelson would be less than at Victoria, still the venue should not be changed, unless it was clear that an absolutely fair trial could be hgd. Centre Star Mining Co.

Change - County Court Action - Contract—Clause Governing Venue — Construc-tion — Enforcement.]—In an action brought in the County Court of the county where the plaintiffs' head office was situated, on an agreement which contained a provision "that on default in payment suit therefor may be entered, tried, and finally disposed of in the Court where the head office of the Noxon Company (Limited) is located," a motion to change the venue to another county was refused, on the ground that the word "Court" is to be understood as meaning "the Court having jurisdiction" mentioned in s. 1 a of 3 Edw. VII. c. 13 (O.), and should be construed in reference to the contract in which it occurs; and that the parties had agreed that in case of litigation, the suit should be carried on in the Court, whether High Court, County Court, or Division Court, having jurisdiction in the locality where the head office was :- Quære, whether stronger grounds must be shewn on motion to change the venue in a County Court than a High Court action. Change — Preponderance o, Convenience —Undertaking as to Expense, 1—The plaintiff, who was a workman, was injured by an actident which took place near Welland, and he then went to Belleville, his place of residence, and received there medical treatment. The venue in the action brought by him to recover damages was laid at Belleville. All the eye-witnesses of the accident lived at or near Welland, and it appeared that there would be a difference in travelling expenses and witness fees of about $50 in favour of a trial at that place:—Held, that this difference in expense, and the fact that the cause of action arose at Welland, were not sufficient to do away with the plaintiff's prima facie right to have the trial at Belleville, especially when the evidence of professional men living there would be necessary:—Held, also, that an undertaking by the defendant to pay the extra expense to the plaintiff of a trial at Welland was not a ground for changing the venue, for that would not be of any advantage until the trial was over, and would not lessen the financial difficulty to the plaintiff of bringing his witnesses to a distant point, McDonald v, Daucson, 24 Occ. Case under Rule 529 (b), which in Corniel v. Irwin, 2 O. W. R. 466, it was held to apply to the County Court:—Held, there was nothing to satisfy what was said in Pollard v. Wright, 16 P. R. 507, to be necessary to have a change of venue. Not only was there no proof of "a very strong case," but, strictly speaking, there was no proof that could be considered. The only affidavit was one of plaintiff's solicitor. According to Hood v. Cronkrite. 4 P. R. 279 (per Draper C.J.), affidavits on these motions should be made by the party and not by his solicitor, who can only repeat what his client has told him. Attention drawn to this in Baker v. Weldon, 2 O. W. R. at p. 434. The solicitor's affidavit was vague and indefinite. If plaintiff could not speak more positively and precisely the could not expect to obtain an order to bave the trial at Lindsay. Leach v. Bruce, 4 O. W. R. 441, 9 O. L. R. 380.

Negligence - Damages - New Trial,] -In an action against the owners of a grain elevator for negligence in the care of grain, one of the grounds of negligence found by one of the grounds of negrigence found by the jury was, that the grain had been taken into the elevator from the vessel while rain was falling, and the hatches had not been protected:—Held, that the responsibility of the defendants did not commence till the grain was delivered to them; that therefore there was no duty cast upon them to pro-tect the grain during unloading; and a new

Charge of Annuity - Life Tenant and Remainderman — Apportionment — Damages — Security — Timber.j — A testator seised in fee of land, subject to a mortgage, to secure an annuity for his wife, devised the land to one for life, with remainder over in fee. After his death, the life tenant paid the annuity to the widow. She also sold the timber on the land, and the purchaser having begun to cut the timber, this action was begun by the remainderman to restrain waste. The life tenant contended that she was entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee in respect to so much of the annuity as she had paid, and that being so subrogated, the land was an insufficient security for her claim, and that she therefore had a right to cut down the timber:—Held, following Yates v. Yates, 28 Beav, 637, that the periodical payments of the annuity must the periodical payments of the annuity must be treated partly as interest which the ten-ant for life had to pay, and partly as princi-pal for which she would have a charge on the inheritance, in the proportion which the value of the life estate bore to the value of the reversion :-Held, also that, on the evidence, the land was adequate security for the claim of the life tenant against it in that regard, and that the purchaser of the timber having purchased in good faith, an injunction could not be granted, but the life tenant was liable for damages in respect of the timber cut. Tenant for Life - Repairs - Sale of Timber.] - All the niceties of the ancient learning as to waste which obtain in England are not to be transferred without discrimination to a new and comparatively unsettled country like this province. It is laid down in the English authorities that tenant for life cannot cut down trees for repairs, and sell the same, but that he must use the timber itself in making repairs, and that to sell it is waste. Where, however, the house and buildings were in need of repairs, and proper timber and shingles were obtainable from a dealer, whereas the timber on the place was unsuitable for the repairs needed, and the tenant for life proposed to sell a sufficient amount of timber off the palce to pay for what was required, and for that purpose only, and an injunction was sought to restrain him:-Held, that no case of waste was made out to justify an injunction. nor could damages be awarded if the timber was cut with due regard to the situation of the bush and the cleared land, and no unreasonable amount was trien off to recoup the cost of the timber used or to be used in the repairs, but that the parties if they wished might have a reference to ascertain to what amount and in what locality the timber should be cut. Flooding Land — Damages—Summary Procedure—Costs of Action—Dam—Owners —Tolls—Persons Using Dam.] — A certain dam was the property of an improvement company incorporated under the Timber Slide Companies Act, R. S. O. c. 194, and the original defendants had used it for the purpose only of floating logs down the river, The improvement company were added as defendants. The action was for flooding the plaintiffs' lands by such dam:—Held, that although (as decided in Blair v. Chew, 21 Occ. N. 404), a plaintiff is not bound to proceed summarily upon such a claim, under R. S. O. c. 85, but has a right to bring an action in the ordinary way, yet, in the absence of any good reason for not proceeding under the special Act, a plaintiff who brings an action should not be allowed the costs of it. 2. There is nothing in the Act under which the added defendants were incorporated which added defendants were incorporated which confers upon them any right to flood private property unless they have first taken the steps authorized by the Act for expropriating the property or settling the compensation to be paid for flooding it which these defendants had not done, 3. or were the defendants assisted by ss. 15 and 16 of R. S. But s. 1 of R. S. O. c. 142 places quence. the public advantage of allowing lumbermen to use rivers and streams as highways for carrying their logs to a market, above the private damage and inconvenience which may necessarily be caused to individual riparian proprietors by their doing so; and the original defendants were not liable for any damage sustained by the plaintiff by reason of their having, during any spring, autumn, or summer freshet, caused damage to the plaintiff by using or repairing or maintaining any

The rights given to persons desiring to float their own timber down a stream should not, however, be extended to companies incorporated far the purpose of making a profit by improving streams and charging tolls to lumbermen desiring to use them; and this view is strengthened by s. 15 of R. S. O. c. 194. Neely v. Peter, 22 Occ. N. 297, 4 O. L. R. 293, 1 O. W. R. 499, affirmed, and, in addition to the damages awarded to the plaintiff against the added defendants, an injunction was granted restraining those defendants from penning back the waters of the river in question, but the operation of the injunction was suspended for a year to enable those defendants to acquire the right to overflow the plaintiff's land, under the provisions of R. S. O. 1897 c. 194, or otherwise. Neely v. Peter, 23 Occ. N. 166, 5 O. L. R. 381, 2 O. W. R. 114.

Injury by — Statutory Authorization—Water Commissioners—Act of Incorporation —Construction — Appropriation of Water.]—The Act for construction of waterworks in the city of London empowered the commissioners to enter upon any lands in the city of water.]—On the portion required for the works, and to divert and appropriate any river, pond, spring, or stream therein:—Held, Sedgewick and Killam, JJ., dissenting, that the water to be appropriated was not confined to the area of the lands entered upon, but the commissioners could appropriate the water of the river Thames by erection of a dam and setting aside of a reservoir; and that such water could be used to create power for utilization of other waters, and was not necessarily to be distributed in the city for drinking and other municipal purposes. Judgment of Court of Appeal, 1 O. W. R. 567, 2 O. W. R. 763, reversed. Saunby v. London Water Commissioners, 24 Occ. N. 201; London Water Commissioners v. Saunby, 34 S. C. R. 650.

Injury to Flow of Water — Riparian Oweners — Damages — Remedy — Action—Arbitration.]—In 1876 C., owner of two lots bordering on a river, sold one to the respondents, with all ways, watercourses, etc., "as such purchaser may choose to disturb, impede, and cause to rise by any dams or other artificial means." The vendor reserved his right to damages which might be caused by the construction of dams by the purchaser, such damages to be fixed by arbitration. In 1880 C, sold to the appellants a lot situated 1,500 feet above that of the respondents opposite to a natural fall, and the appellants constructed a dam there. The respondents having raised their dam, the appellants claimed damages resulting from the penning back of the water, and especially from the fact that the beight of their fall was diminished:—Held, that in spite of the fact that fact hat the beight of their fall was diminished:—Held, that in spite of the fact hat the respondents on a sold of the amount of such damages by experts, the party injured has the right of recourse directly to the Courts, and that such right was not in this case taken away by the arbitrantion clause in the act of sale of 1876. 2. That, in spite of the concession by C. to the respondents of the right of utilizing the water power and of constructing dams, the appellants, the assigns of C., could claim not only the damage caused to their lands and buildings, but also that caused to their lands and buildings, but also that caused to their lands and buildings, but also that caused to their lands and buildings, but also that caused to their lands and buildings, but also that caused to their lands and buildings, but also that caused to their lands and buildings, but also that caused to their lands and buildings, but also that caused to their lands and buildings, but also that caused to their lands and buildings.

power; and that, upon this head, although they had not yet made use of the water power otherwise than in constructing a dam, they could claim the depreciation in the commercial value of such water power. Bannerman v. Hamelin, Q. R. 10 Q. B. 68.

Injury to Land-Assessment of Damages -Jurisdiction of Equity-Diversion of Stream -Riparian Owner-Mandatory Injunction.] -A dam erected in 1858 across a natural stream upon land owned by the defendants, and used for the defendants' purposes, was in 1891 altered in respect of its devices for carrying off surplus water by the defendants' immediate predecessors in title, contrary to the protest of the plaintiff, a riparian owner since 1880. In 1900 a portion of the dam was carried away by a freshet, owing, it was alleged by the plaintiff, to the insufficiency of the alterations in the dam, and it was alleged that material damage was done to the plaintiff's land, but the evidence as to its precise nature and extent was slight and unsatisfactory, and the defendants denied any liability: Held, that the questions involved lability:—Held, that the questions involved being the liability of the defendants, and the extent of the injury sustained by the plaintiff, and the Court doubting its jurisdiction to assess the damages, the bill should be dismissed, and the plaintiff left to his remedy at law. A diversion of a natural stream from its natural channel in front of the land of a pieceta propriets is extremely of a riparian proprietor is actionable at his instance without proof of actual or probable damage. A mandatory injunction will not be granted except in cases where extreme or very serious damage will ensue if the injunction is withheld. The form of a mandatory injunction adopted in Jackson v. Normanby Brick Co., [1899] 1 Ch. 438, approved of. Saunders v. Richards Co., 21 Occ. N. 510, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 303.

Injury to Land — Damages—Statutory Compensation — Action — Prescription.]—
The statute which permits owners of mills to construct dams upon watercourses, for the rurpose of working their mills, creates in ineir favour a legal servitude over the lands upon which such dams make the waters flow. The exercise of such servitude makes them responsible to the riparian proprietors for the damages which it causes to them. 2. The special mode indicated by art. 5536. R. S. P. Q.. for determining the amount of compensation there mentioned does not take away from the complainant the right of recourse to the ordinary tribunals. 3. The damages caused not being the consequence of a tort, the action to recover such damages is not prescribed in two years. Larochelle v. Price, Q. R. 19 S. C. 403.

Prescription — Servitude — Apgravation.]—The owner of a dam, which has been standing for more than 30 years, cannot oppose a 30 years' prescription to an action brought by a riparian proprietor to recover damages caused by waters backed down by such dam, during the five years preceding the date of the suit, especially when the owner of the dam has during these five years changed and aggravated the exercise of his legal servitude. Roy v. Royal Paper Mills
Co., Q. R. 2.18. C. 53.

Riparian Proprietors - Servitude -Pleading — Petitory or Possessory Action.]
—The plaintiff had sold to the defendant's grantor a lot bounded by a river, with the right to build a mill there, to construct a dam, and to place such dam upon the property of the vendor on the other side of the river, and to pass and repass over the pro-perty of the defendant to communicate between the dam and a bridge. The dam built by the purchaser having been carried away by the waters, the defendant, in spite of the protest of the plaintiff, built a new one-up the stream, one end of which rested upon the land of the plaintiff. The latter then began a possessory action against the defendant, claiming an injunction, the demolition of the dam, and $150 damages. The defendant pleaded that he had only exercised the right which the plaintiff had given to his grantor. The plaintiff replied on grounds of law that the defendant was joining a petitory action with a possessory one, and also replied that the defendant's grantor by building the old dam where he brilt it had fixed the place where the servitude was to be exercised:— Held, that the plea of the defendant was bad in law in that it combined the petitory and possessory. 2. That before building the new dam the defendant stould have obtained permission from the plrintiff or from the Court. 3. That arts, 503, C. C., and 5535, R. S. Q., do not authorize a riparian proprietor to build a dam upon the laud of another ripa-rian proprietor upon the other side of the river, without the permission of the later, but are applicable only to the use of the watercourse. Drains — Increasing Flow of Natural Stream—Outlet—Engineer's Award—Parties -Joinder of Defendants-Joint Tort-feasors —Damages — Injunction.]—The owner of land on the banks of a natural stream has no legal ground of complaint if riparian owners above him use the stream as an outlet for drains made by them in the reasonable agricultural use of their lands, although the result is to increase the amount of water in the stream and to flood part his land. But this principle does not apply to persons not riparian owners, who, by proceedings under the Ditches and Watercourses Act, obtain an outlet to the stream : and they are liable to a person injured by the increased amount of water. A proper outlet under the Ditches and Watercourses Act is one which enables the water to be discharged without injuriously affecting the lands of another, and, if the outlet chosen by the engineer is not in fact a proper outlet. his award is no protection to the persons acting under it as against a person not a party to it. An action to recover damages for flooding his land was brought by a riparian owner against a number of persons who were respectively parties to the construction of several drains under the Ditches and Watercourses Act, the allegation being that by means of the drains the flow of water had been unlawfully increased to the plaintiff's injury. Evidence was given as to the quantum of the plaintiff's damage, and judgment was given against all the defendants, for the whole amount:—Held, that, while the defendants who were parties respectively to the construction of each drain were jointly liable for any damage attributable to that drain, the different sets of de-fendants were not joint cort-feasors, and had been improperly joined as defendants; that a joint assessment of damages was improper; and that, there being no evidence of the proportion of damage attributable to each set of defendants, only nominal damages and an injunction could be awarded. McGillieray v. Township of Lochiel, 24 Occ. N. 346, 8 O. L. R. 446, 4 O. W. R. 193.

Railway.]-An award under the Ditches and Watercourses Act directed that a drain should be built through the land of private owners as far as a highway of the defendants, then by the defendants along the highway to a point opposite the land of a railway company, and then by the railway company along the highway, or across the highway and through their own land, as far as might be necessary to give a proper outlet. The drain was built by contract under the Act as far as the point opposite the railway company's land, but the railway company whose railway had been declared to be a work for the general advantage of Canada, refused to recognize the award or do the work directed. The defendants then built a culvert across the highway and brought the water to the railway company's land, and the railway company thereupon built an embankment to keep it back, the result be-ing that it overflowed from the highway

Powers of Waterworks Company— Approval by Lieutenant-Governor in Council—Condition Precedent—Damages—Injunction - Acquiescence - Laches.] - By s. 9 of the Sandon Waterworks and Light Company Act (B. C., 1896, c. 62), the company were authorized to divert water from certain creeks and to use so much of the water of the creeks as the Lieutenant-Governor in council might allow, with power to construct such works as might be necessary for making the water power available, but the powers were not to be exercised until the plans and sites of the works had been approved by the Lieutenant-Governor in council. The company got their plans and sites approved, and proceeded with the construction of a tank and a flume on the plaintiffs' lands for the purpose of diverting water:—Held, that the authority of the Lieutenant-Governor in council to divert was a condition precedent to the company's right to interfere with the plaintiffs' soil, and that the plaintiffs' were entitled to damage and a mandatory injunction. Mere submission to an injury, such as the erection of a building by another on one's land, for any time short of the period limited by statute for the enforcement of the right of action, cannot take away such right: to amount to laches raising equities against the person on whose land the erection was placed, there must have been some equivocal conduct on his part inbeen some equivocal conduct of an space and ducing the expenditure by the person erecting it. IV. INJURY TO NEIGHBOUR'S LANDS.

Discharging Water on Neighbour's Land—Remedy—Landlord or Tenant—Servitude.]—Where a lessee of the defendants land, being in possession thereof and having a contract for future purchase contained in his lease, raised for the purpose of building operations for his own benefit, and not as mandatary of the defendants, the lower part of the leased land, with the effect of diverting to the plaintiff's adjoining land, and thereby causing him damage, the water which would otherwise have been discharged over the defendants' land:—Held, that the plaintiff's remedy was against the lessee, and that an action negatior against the defendants, who claimed no servitude over the plaintiff's land, was unnecessary. Judgment of Court of King's Bench, Quebec, Q. R. 11 K. B. 173, reversed. Keifer v. Le Seminaire de Quebec, [1903] A. C. SÖ.

V. NAVIGABILITY.

Dam—Riparian Proprietors—Public Right —Mistrial—New Trial.]—The owner of the alveus of a navigable river and of the land on both sides of it upon which a dam stands, has an absolute right to maintain it for the purpose of operating his mill by the use of the flowing water, and he has this right as an incident to the ownership of the property. Such right must be exercised subject to the rights of other riparian proprietors to a reasonable use of the water and to the public right of passage. The public right is not a paramount right, but a right concurrent with that of the riparian owners; and if, in the exercise of their public right, the defendants. exercise of their public right, the december in driving their logs down the river, injured the plaintiff's dam, the onus is vyou them to shew that they adopted all reasonable means and used all reasonable care and skill menns and used all reasonable in order to avoid the injury: per Barler, J. Per Tuck, C.J., McLeod and Gregory, J.J., that where the clear weight of evidence is against the plaintiff's claim, and important questions involved have not received due consideration on the trial, the case should be sent down for a new trial. Per Haning-ton, Landry, and Barker, JJ., that if there is evidence to justify the jury in finding for the plaintiff on the material point in dis-pute, the verdict should not be disturbed, even though the case was not tried out with due regard to other important points. Roy v. Fraser, 36 N. B. Reps. 113.

Floatable Stream — Timber Driving — Carrying away of Bridge—Neilgence—Damages,—The owner of logs who floats them down a stream, suitable only for floating logs at random and not in rafts, across which a bridge has been constructed by a fisherman, in virtue of a liceuse of the Lieutenant-Governor (art. 863, C.M.), the councils of the municipalities not having concurred in granting same (arts. 861, 862, C.M.), is bound to so properly order, guide, and oversee the flotation of such logs as not to injure this bridge, which offers every necessary facility for the floating of such logs; and if, by the negligence of the owner of such logs, in not properly guiding them and not having for this purpose a sufficient number of men, they carry away the bridge, the owner of the logs will be liable for the value thereof. Veina v. Drummond Lumber Co., Q. R. 26 S. C.

Possession—Title.]—By the law of the province of Quebec, as by the law of England, no waters can be deemed navigable unless they are actually capable of being navigated. An arm or inlet of a navigable river cannot be assumed to be either navigable or floatable in consequence of its connection with the navigable stream, unless it be itself navigable or floatable as a matter of fact. The land in dispute formed part of the bed of a stream called the Brewery creek, which was originally a narrow inlet from the Ottawa river, dry during the summer time in certain parts:—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (see Q. R. 24 S. C. 59), that, as the Brewery creek was neither navigable nor floatable in its natural state, the subsequent overflow of the waters of the Ottawa river into it could not have the effect of altering the natural character of the creek. 2, That, as there was no reservation of the lands covered with water in the original grant by the Crown in 1806, the bed of the creek passed to the grantee as part of the property therein described, whether the waters of the creek were floatable or not. 3. That the untinterrupted possession of the bed of the creek by the grantee and his re-presentatives from the time of the grant with the assent of the Crown, was evidence of the intention of the Crown to make an unqualified conveyance of all the lands and lands covered with water described in the grant. City of Hull v. Scott, 24 Occ. N. 264; At-torney-General for Quebec and City of Hull v. Scott, 34 S. C. R. 693.

River—Floatability—Minister of Crown—Admission—Third Party—Missen-cause.]

The principles of the old French law govern the question of the navigability or floatability of rivers in the province of Quebec. 2. Navigable and floatable rivers form part of the public domain of the province, and cannot be alienated except by an express grant from the Crown. 3. It is otherwise with rivers which are unnavigable or unfoatable; they belong to the riparian owners unless there is an express reservation to the contrary. 4. A river may be declared navigable and floatable as to part only. 5. The admission of a minister of the Crown in an answer to a question or an address in the legislature cannot bind the Crown, and proof may be given that such an admission has been made by mistake. 6. A party has a right to bring before the Court a third party interested, in order to have it declared that the latter is subject with the former to the judgment upon an intervention. Procureur-General v. Fraser, Q. R. 25 S. C. 104.

Stream—Question of Fact—Crown Grant—Reservation—Prescription—Acquies-cence.]—It does not follow that, because a river is navigable and floatable, all its branches or channels must be considered so. The navigability of a stream cannot be estimated to the considered so.

tablished by any rule of law; it is a question of fact. 2. The grant of land from the Crown includes the bed of a non-navigable creek running through it, and no specific grant of the bed of the creek is necessary. Moreover, in this case, the reservation of gold and silver mines in favour of the Crown, contained in the grant, indicated that everything outside of this reservation was granted, 3. Although there is no prescription against the Crown, yet the conduct or the constituted authorities in allowing a creek to be used by the patentees, and their successors and assigns, openly, publicly, peaceably, and uninterruptedly for 96 years, is evidence of acquiescence in their pretensions. Judgment in Q. R. 24 S. C. 59 affirmed. Chy of Hull v. Scott. Q. R. 13 K. B. 164. Affirmed 24 Occ. N. 264, and S. C. sub nom. Attorney-General for Quebec and City of Hull v. Scott, 34 S. C. 7. R. 403.

VI. RIPARIAN RIGHTS.

Accretions—Right to, as "Alluvion"—Formation.]—On the 27th March, 1804, a considerable mass of earth, which had crumbled away at St. Alban, was carried by the river Ste. Anne to its mouth. The mass of earth grounded in a shallow at the mouth of this river, which was navigable, and dried up a part of its bed, which remained dry for a distance of 2,280 feet in a straight line, dividing the old bank of the river (the property of the plaintiff) from the new bank thereof:—Held, that this accretion did not constitute an "alluvion;" that the addition of land to the bank of a navigable river belongs to the adjoining owner only where it is formed by imperceptible degrees; and the only exception to this rule is in the case where a considerable and noticeable part of a field on a river bank is carried suddenly towards a lower field or on the opposite bank; but, even in this case, the new land will belong to the riparian owner at that point only if the former owner does not reclaim it within the time the law allows. Germain v. Price, Q. R. 27 S. C. 101, 188.

Dumping Rocks into River—Impeding flow of water—Rights of lower riparian proprietors—Sensible injury—Injunction. West Kootenay Power and Light Co. v. City of Nelson (B.C.), 2 W. L. R. 66.

Floatable River—Timber Driving—Obstruction — Mandatory Injunction—Costs—Injunction for Apprehended Injury—Damages.]—The defendant, the owner of a savaill on a floatable river, erected booms in connection therewith, which, with logs of the plaintiff. The obstructions were removed before the hearing, but after notice of motion had been given—for an interim mandatory injunction, which was granted:—Held, that the bill should be dismissed, but without costs, and with costs to the plaintiff of the taking out and service of the injunction order. An injunction to perpetually restrain the defendant from closing or obstructing the river refused. The owner of land on a floatable river is entitled to erect booms and piers necessary for reasonable use of the river in operating a saw mill. The Courtefused to assess the plaintiff's damages, as Flooding Lands-Driving Saw Logs-Action, |-- Action by the owner of lands on both sides of a stream used by the defendants for the purpose of driving saw logs, for damages for penning back the water on his land by meens of a dam, including the road allowance reserved along the banks of the stream in question, and for an injunction to remove the obstruction. The defence raised was that the defendants were not liable by reason of the reservation in the grant from the Crown of the road allowance and by rea-son of the provisions of s. 1 of c. 142, R. S. O. 1897, an Act for protecting the public interest in rivers, streams, and creeks:—Held, that the plaintiff was in such possession of the road allowance along the banks of the stream as entitled him to recover damages for flooding the same; that the defendants were liable for all damages caused by the dam complained of; and that c. 142, R. S. O. 1897, does not prevent a plaintiff recovering for unnecessary damage or for damages accruing after spring and fall freshets; and awarded damages accordingly and an order for removal of the dam, the defendants admitting they had done with it :-Held, also, that there is nothing in c. 85, R. S. O. 1897, compelling a defendant to proceed under it if he chooses his ordinary remedy of action. Blair v. Chew, 21 Occ. N. 404.

Rivers and Streams—Floating Lous—Damage to Riparian Onners—Procedure,—The Nova Scotia statute R. S. N. S. 1500 c. 95, s. 17, gives to persons engaged in the transmission of saw logs and timber down rivers and streams the reasonable use of and access to the same for their business, and relieves them from liability for any but actual damage thereby, unless caused by their own wilful act:—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, 36 N. S. Reps. 40, that such persons are liable for all actual damage caused in transmitting logs, even without negligence, and the owner of the logs is not relieved from liability though they were transmitted by other persons under contract with him. On motion for a new trial one of the grounds was misdirection in the charge to the jury. The trial Judge reported to the full Court that he did not make the direction on which this objection to his charge was based, and gave a correct report of what he said: — Held, that this was not an objectionable course for the Judge to pursue, and in any case it was a matter for the Court appealed from, whose ruling was not subject to review. Judgment in 36 N. S. Reps. 40 affirmed. Dickie v. Campbell, 24 Occ. N. 50, 34 S. C. R. 265.

Trespass to Land-Conveying Timber and Lumber on Stream.]—The plaintiff was the owner of land bounded on one side by a stream, above tidewater and not navigable. The defendant was a lumberman, and, in order to assist his operations in driving logs down stream, erected a permanent dam, one end of which rested on the plaintiff's land. To an action by the plaintiff for damages the defendant pleaded inter alia that the entry complained of was a reasonable use of the land and was a use authorized by R. S. N. S. 1900, c. 95, "of the conveying of timber and lumber on rivers and the removal of obstructions therefrom," and amending Acts:—Held, that the erection of the dam was clearly a trespass and could not be tified under c. 95, or under the Acts of 1902 c, 33, no commissioner having been appointed for the stream in question or for the river into which it ran; that s, 15 of c. 95, which gives the right to construct dams necessary to facilitate the floating of logs down streams during freshets, is subject to the provisions of s, 6, which requires the assent of the owner of land entered upon to be obtained. and can only be construed to apply to temporary erections, and not to permanent erections, such as the one in question; that s, 17 of c. 95, as amended, only gives the right to enter for the purpose of driving or removing logs and not for the purpose of making erections; and that, as the plaintiff had failed to prove any substantial damage, there should be judgment in his favour for $5 damages and costs. Deal v. Cook, 23 Occ.

Unnavigable Pond-Fishing Rights.]-The plaintiffs, with three others, are the owners, under grants from the Crown prior to Confederation, of certain lots of land which extend to, or are partly covered by, an enclosed sheet of water known as "Brome Pond." There was no reservation by the Crown of the bed of the pond or of the fishing rights connected with the water. The plaintiffs sought to recover damages from a person who had fished in the pond:-Held that the riparian owners of a non-navigable water or pond, the bed of which was granted by the Crown to them or their auteurs before Confederation, have the exclusive right of fishing therein. 2. Where land granted by the Crown before Confederation to a number of proprietors extends into and includes the bed of a pond, the fishing rights of the whole pond do not belong to all in common, but the rights of each are limited to the water covering the portion of the bed which each is entitled by his deed. VII. WATER RECORDS.

Applications for—Mining Companies— Gold Commissioner—Land Commissioner— — Water Notice — Posting — Evidence.] — Where an application for a record of water for mining purposes is pending before a Gold Commissioner, an application for a record of the same water for domestic, mechanical, and industrial purposes should not be adjudicated upon by an Assistant Commissioner of Lands and Works without express notice to the applicants before the Gold Commissioner. A water notice posted on a board usually used for such notices, in a hall leading to the rooms occupied by the Commissioner and his staff, is posted in the office of the Commissioner within the meaning of s. 9 of the Water Clauses Consolidation Act. Where an application is not contested, the Commissioner need not take evidence, but where it is contested he should have the evidence taken in shorthand. In re Water Clauses Consolidation Act, War Eagle Mining Co. v. British Columbia Southers R. W. Co., 22 Occ. N. 247, S B. C. R. 374.

Joint Application for—Purpose for which Water Required — Duty of Gcid Commissioner.] — Mine owners, in a notice for application to the Gold Commissioner for water records, stated, as one of the purposes for which the water was required, a purpose not authorized by s. 10 of the Water Clauses Consolidation Act, i.e., "domestic and fire purposes." At the hearing before the Gold Commissioner the application as one for mining purposes only, but he refused the request and dismissed the application as one for mining purposes only, but he refused the request and dismissed the application as one for mining purposes only, but he refused the request and dismissed the application as one for mining purposes only, but he refused the refused the refused the refused to make the control of the purposes and the matter should be referred back for rehearing. Held, also, that water records, under part II. of the Water Clauses Consolidation Act, may be held jointly, Quære, whether a supply of water for fire purposes would be necessary as being directly connected with the working of a mine or incidental thereto. Center Star Mining Co, v. British Columbia Southern R. W. Co., 21 Occ. N. 491, 8 B. C. R. 214.

Pending Applications—Duty of Officer.]—Where two different officials are called upon to exercise their functions in regard to applications for water rights in respect of the same water, the official who is determining the later application should stay his hand until the final result of the prior application before another official is known. In re Water Clauses Consolidation Act, War Eagle Mining Co. v. British Columbia Southern R. W. Co., S B. C. R. 281.

Validity of—Ditch—Continuation into United States, —The fact that a ditch constructed in intended compliance with the provisions of s. 41 of the Land Act (C. S. B. C. 1888), runs partly through United States territory, does not of itself prevent the ditch from being a good ditch within the meaning of the Act. Held, also, applying Martley v. Carson, 20 S. C. R. 634, that the plaintiff's water record was valid. Covert v. Pettijohn, 22 Occ. N. 308, 9 B. C. R. 118.

Grant of Water Power-Dam-Ownership by Two Persons in Common—Agreement
—Construction—Rights in Regard to Water Surplus Water-Injunction-Damages.] The plaintiff and defendant owned grist mills on the Grand river, and were each seised in fee of an undivided half of dam No. 5, and both had the right, by agreement tween them, to draw water therefrom "for their own purposes," The agreement provided for the maintenance and repair of the dam at the joint and equal expense of the parties, and that both should be equally interested in rents derived from supplying water to others. For many years the parties and their predecessors had used the water as they required it. The owner of a saw mill above the defendant's grist-mill had, mili above the defendant's grist-mili had, under a lease from the common grantor of plaintiff and defendant, the right to use "surplus waters" stored by the dam and not required by the grist-mills. The right was continued by the separate owners of the grist-mills and the shearing mathematical statements. grist-mills, and the plaintiff and the defendant, under the agreement referred to, shared equally in the rentals derived from this Then the defendant acquired the source. saw-mill and the trouble began. Anglin, J., was of opinion that each party had an absolute right to use, in a reasonable manner, for their own purposes, so much of the dammed water which might properly be used for generating power as he required, not exceeding one-half of the whole, and so much of the remaining water which might be property so used, as would not interfere with or impair the user in a reasonable manner by the other party of the water to which he was entitled, and which he from time to time required. "Their own purposes" he construed as meaning any lawful uses to which the water might reasonably be put in a business owned and conducted by the party, as distinguished from a grant or lease to a third party of the right to use such water. Any water not required by either party for "their own purposes," thus defined, was "surplus water." Caledonia Milling Co. v. Shirra Milling Co., 25 C. L. T. 154, 5 O. W. R. 170, 9 O. L. R. 213.

Injunction — Nuisance—Construction of Road—Flooding Neighbouring Land—Accumulation and Discharge of Water—Damages—Injunction—Scope of—Culverts—Municipal Corporation.]—A farmer consented to water, which came through a culvert, being carried off by means of a drain which he dug himself, across one corner of his farm. There was no agreement in writing, nor was there any expenditure of public money on the drain, and there was no consideration given for the use of the drain:—Held, there was only a license to use the drain and such license was revocable, and that the plaintiff was also entitled to an injunction. Damages of $100 were also allowed. The cause was a recurring one which would ripen into an easement by prescription if permitted to continue long enough to become such. Taylor v. Township of Collingwood, 6 O. W. R. 261, 10 O. L. R. 182.

Lessees of Watercourse—Right to Flow of Water—Title—"Proprietors' Committee."]
—The plaintiffs chaimed to be lessees in possession of a watercourse running through a pond in the vicinity of the town of L., and, as such, entitled to the flow of brook and the use of a dam at the pond to regulate the flow of water in connection with the working of a grist-mill situated upon a lot of land owned by the plaintiffs further down the stream. The plaintiffs further down the stream. The plaintiffs further down the stream. The plaintiffs claim was based upon a resolution passed at a meeting of the "proprietors' committee" of the township of L. in 1895. There was no evidence to shew who the persons were who called themselves the "proprietors' committee" was appointed. The township grant, which bore date the 26th November, 1764, under which both parties claimed, shewed that the township contained 200 rights or shares of 500 acres each, of which only 157 appeared to have been granted at the time. It appeared from the grant that before it was issued, a division was made but none was proved, and it was impossible to say whether the land covered by the brook passed under the grant, or was included in the ungranted shares or rights. Evidence was given, however, to shew that, from time to time they had passed resolutions for that purpose; but no authority was shewn for these proceedings, and it did not appear that the grantees had any—Held, assuming that the original grantees had authority to so deal with the brook and pond, that, in the absence of evidence that their rights were transferred to the persons who, in 1895, assumed to exercise such authority, no right or title to the brook, pond, or dam passed to the plaintiffs, as lessees or otherwise, and they must fail in their action.

Water Rights—Water Clauses Consolidation Act, B. C.—Jurisdiction of Gold Commissioner—Statutes.]—Under s. 11 of the Rossland Water and Light Company Incorporation Act, 1896, the rights of the city of Rossland, which purchased the waterworks system of the company, to the waters of Stoney Creek, are paramount but not exclusive, and the Gold Commissioner has jurisdiction to adjudicate on an application under s. 18 of the Water Clauses Consolidation Act for an interim record of the surplus water not used by the city. County Road — Boundary Between Local Municipalities.]—Where one side of a road runs along the boundary line between two local municipalities, atthough such road is wholly situate in one of them, it is a county road, under the provisions of art. 755, paragraph 2, of the Municipal Code. Walsh v. Corporation of St. Anicct, Q. R. 25 S. C. 319.

Deviations - Substitute for Boundary Line between Counties — Declaration — Mandamus.)—The question was whether a "deviation" road came within s. 617 (1) of the Municipal Act, 1903, (3 Ed. VII. c. 19), so as to be regarded as a boundary line between counties. The deviation in ques-tion was rendered necessary owing to a sharp bend in the river Madawaska, where the boundaries between the township of Fitzroy in the county of Carleton, the township of McNabb in the county of Renfrew, and the township of Pakenham in the county of Lanark, meet:—Held, by Court of Appeal, Justice Osler dissenting, that the deviation road was to be regarded as a boundary between Pakenham and McNabb, and between Fitzroy and McNabb, but not between Fitzroy and Pakenham. The history and roy and Pasennan. The instory and the meaning of the boundary line road legislation discussed. Township of Fitzroy v. County of Carleton, 25 C. L. T. 292, 5 O. W. R. 615, 9 O. L. Public Highway between Townships Survey - Road Allowance - Evidence Departure from Instructions and Plan.] The township of Lochiel forms part of the original township of Lancaster laid out and partly surveyed about the year 1784 or 1785, as composed of 17 concessions. Subsequently an 18th concession was added, and, in 1818 concessions 10 to 18 of Lancaster were detached as the township of Lochiel, During the ar 1798, the township of Hawkesbury (now divided into East and West Hawkesbury) was laid out and partly surveyed by a deputy provincial surveyor named Fortune, who returned his plan and field notes without the double lines generally in use to shew road allowances between Hawkesbury and the lands now lying upon the northerly and easterly limits of Lochiel. In completing the survey of portions of Lancaster and Hawkesbury, in 1816, a deputy provincial surveyor named McDonald planted posts on the ground, but also returned plans and field notes with-out indicating road allowances at the points in question. The departmental instructions, under which these surveys were made, directed that the mode of survey, etc., should be according to a model plan shewing rectangular townships surrounded by double lines. None of these reservations were shewn on the plan of Hawkesbury, and, in the Lancaster boundary, the rectangular form was brok-en:—Held, that there could be no inference from the instructions and model, in view of the other circumstances, that road allowances were intended to be reserved on the eastern and northern boundaries of Lancaster where the rectangle was broken:—Held, also, that, even if the work subsequently performed on the ground by McDonalo or other Crown officers might afford some evidence of an intention on the part of the Crown to dedicate sa a highway certain portions which may have been reserved for the purpose, yet, having regard to the decisions in Tanner v. Bissell, 21 U. C. R. 553, and Boley v. Mc-Lean, 41 U. C. R. 271, officers employed for the survey of an old line could not conclusions entablish. clusively establish a road allowance along the boundary, if none had been reserved by the original survey. Judgment in 1 O. W. R. 64, 1 O. W. R. 664, affirmed. Township of Lochiel v. Township of East Hawkesbury, 24 Occ. N. 261; Township of East Hawkesbury v. Township of Lochicl, 34 S. C. R.

Acquisition by Municipality - User Opening — Fences,]—Besides the modes prescribed by the Municipal Code, municipalities may acquire lands for public roads; (1) by dedication or abandonment by the owner of the land with the object of opening and establishing a public road; (2) by user and public and continuous possession of such land as a road by the public during thirty years; (3) by the opening and user as such by the public of the whole road. without contestation of the right, for the space of ten years or more, according to the provisions of 18 V. c. 100, s. 40, s.-s. 9 (Q.) 2. Fences erected by the ancient proprietors fencing off a public road are recognized according to Quebec usages and presumed to have been established by such proprietors with the object of separating their properties from the road, and that in the interests of good administration and also with a view of protecting the crops and the property itself generally, and such fences will serve and aid considerably in determining the question of dedication. Maintenance — Cost of Work — Action to Recover from Land-owner — Work done by Inspector — Bridenee of Inspector — Ac-count — Report — Authorization — Percen-lage, —It is the imperative duty of a municipal corporation and its officers to put its roads in good order without delay. testimony of the inspector who has done the work is a sufficient proof, if not contradicted, that the work has been executed, that the sum claimed is the value of it, that the formalities required have been followed, and that the defendant in an action to recover the cost of the work is the person bound by law to pay such cost. 3. It was not necessary to give the defendant in this case a municipal notice, she residing in England, nor to give notice to her agent, who resided at Quebec, i asmuch as no writing had been de-posited at the office of the municipal council giving the address of the defendant or of her agent, 4. A road crossing the defendant's lots and other lots in the 4th range of Gosford having been for a great many years open and free to the public as a road in front of such lots, and being governed by a proces-verbal which declared such road to be the road in front of such lots and to be at the charge, as to its maintenance, summer and winter, of every land-owner in the 4th range whose land abutted thereon, should be maintained by the defendant as regards the part which crossed her lots, and there was no ground for an act of apportionment to execute such part of the proces-verbal, there were no works to apportion. 5. Even if there was need of any act of apportionment, in default of such an act, art $24. M. C., would apply until such act was made.

6. The inspector of roads himself did the work which the defendant should have done; he rendered an account for it without adding the statutory 20 per cent.; and he did the work without first having made the report required to the council and without the authorization of the council. Later the plaintiff corporation paid the inspector the amount of his account without the 20 per cent .:--Held, that the corporation had a right to pay the amount of the account; in paying it, they paid the defendant's debt. (b) The corporation had an action against the de-fendant to recover what they had paid. (c) But they had not the right to recover the 20 per cent. From the defendant. (d) The corporation would have no right in their own behalf to the 20 per cent. except in cases falling under arts. 399, 400, and 401, M. C. Corporation de St. Raymond v. Prior, Q. R. 21 S. C. 172,

Ownership of Part not Used — Servitude — Litigious Rights — Warranty.]—
The plaintiff, by petitory action, claimed the ownership of a strip of land, under deed of purchase in 1897. It appeared that a street in the village of Hochelaga was opened in 1874 or 1875, and the width proposed was 100 feet. In 1884 the village of Hochelaga was annexed to the city of Montreal, and the city reduced the width of the proposed street from 100 feet to 60 feet, leaving a strip 40 feet wide which was not used, as originalto contemporated, for street purposes. The question was, in whom did the ownership of this strip vest. The plaintiff relied upon her title by purchase from the parties who held the title prior to the proposed widening. The defendant called in her vendors, the Banque Jacques Cartier, in warranty, and also pleaded possession for over ten years. The defendant further pleaded to the action, alleging ownership; that the strip in ques-tion had formed part of Ontario street for more than ten years; that when the width of the street was, in 1887, reduced to 60 feet, the excess, 40 feet, reverted to her as the adjoining proprietor, and that the defendant had ever since been in possession. To the action in warranty the defendants in warranty pleaded that, when they bought the property subsequently sold to the principal defendant, it was bounded in front by the proposed street, and that the subsequent action of the city in reducing the width to sixty feet could not make them liable to an action in warranty-Held. (in the principal action) :-1. That when the width of the street was reduced, the possession of the forty feet deducted reverted to the parties who owned the land before the improvement was projected, viz., in this case, the plaintiff's auteurs, and that the title on which the plaintiff rested existed at the date of the sale by the bank to the defendant. 2. The special laws and usages applicable to the dedication of streets can only be resorted to where it is proved that the owner has, in fact, voluntarily and gratuitously abandoned his property to the public use. Otherwise, the principle that no servitude can be established without a title governs. 3. The plea of litigious rights cannot avail the defendant unless the price cannot avail the detendant unless the price and incidental expenses of the sale, with in-terest on the price from the day that the buyer has paid it, be tendered with such plea (art. 1582, C. C.). 4. The defendants in warranty, having sold the land in question to the principal defendant, sous les garanties de droit, as fronting on the street, whereas, at date of the sale, a strip forty feet wide intervened, were liable for the damages thereby occasioned to the principal defendant, Gauthier v. Monarque, Q. R. 19 S. C. 93.

Plan.]—The plaintiff's predecessor in title bought a certain lot according to a plan (then unregistered), on which was shewn a strip 33 feet in width, running along one side of the lot. The plaintiff alleged that this strip had been dedicated, either as a public highway or a private way for the use of the owner of the lot, and claimed a declaration to that effect and an injunction. On the evidence, the Court found for the plaintiff and gave judgment accordingly. Daly v. Robertson, 1 Terr L. R. 427.

Plan—Crown—Obstruction — Nuisance—Injunction.]—The defendants, claiming under the original squatter on certain Dominion lands, erected a building thereon fronting on claims of himself and his assigns, registered an old trail; the original squatter subsequently, in expectation of the Crown recognizing the claims of himself and his assigns, registered a plan of the entire land, whereon was shewn a highway approximately conforming to the lines of the old trail, but so that the building in question projected into the highway shewn on the plan. The Crown did, afterwards grant a patent to the original squatter for the entire land, excepting the portions shewn on the plan, as reserved for the defendants and others in like position. These excepted portions as they appeared on the plan approximately conformed in size and position to the portions which the squatter had assumed to convey to the defendants and others. Patents for these excepted portions were granted by the Crown to the defendants and others, respectively :- Held, that the Crown, by issuing patents in accordance with the registered plan, had adopted it, and thereby dedicated to the public the highway as shewn thereon; that the plaintiff municipality, within which the land lay, having demanded of the defen-dants the removal of the building, so far as it encroached on the highway as shewn on the plan, and the defendants having refused to comply with the demand, the plaintiff municipality were entitled to a mandatory injunction to abate the nuisance:—Held, also, that the defendants were consequently not entitled to compensation as owners or occupiers under the provision of the Municipal Ordinance. Town of Edmouton v. Brown, 1 Terr. L. R. 454, 23 S. C. R. 308, 27 S. C. R. 510n.

Phan—Opening and Laying Out—Sidewalks—User—Selling Lots—Acceptance by Public and Municips of the John Street or road is sufficiently established by the following facts: 1. registration by the proprietor of a subdivision plan, and deposit of book of reference, on which the road is indicated and described as a street or road; 2, the opening and laying out of the land by the proprietor as a street, and the placing of sidewalks thereon; 3, the free and uninterrupted use of the street by the public for more than ten years; 4, exploiting of the adjacent land by the proprietor and selling lots as bounded by a public street; 5, use of the street by the public as the only direct access to the railway station; 6, acceptance of the dedication by the public and the municipality—the uninterrupted use of the street being a sufficient acceptance. Shorey v. Cook, Q. R. 26 S. C. 203.

Plan—Other Acts—Servitude—Violation.
—The proprietors of certain land prepared al official subdivision plan of the property, dividing it into lots and tracing a street thereon. They registered this plan as the official plan, and sold lots described as fronting on the street indicated on the plan. They also constructed a sidewalk along the street, and permitted the public to pass freely without objection. They also petitioned the municipal council to annex the property in accordance with the plan, which petition was granted:—Held, that there was a valid dedication of the property as a public street. 2. In any case, the acts above mentioned constituted at least a servitude of right of way over and through the property, in favour of the purchasers of lots described as fronting on such street, and the erection of platforms thereon was an illegal obstruction, and a violation of the servitude. Geoffrion v. Montreal Park and Island R. W. Co., Q. R. 20 S. C. 550.

Private Person—Necessity for Writing

Creditors.] — The indication of a proposed street upon the official homologated plan of a city is not equivalent to the writing required by art. 551, C. C., for the creation of a servitude par destination du père de famille; such dedication must be by writing and not otherwise. 2. The homologation of such plan does not give a title to the property; such title can be acquired only by expropriation, compulsory or voluntary. 3. A servitude created par destination du père de famille is effective as against third persons only by registration indicating the lands subject to the servitude, in conformity with art. 2108, C. C., and is not valid as against claims previously registered. 4. Int this case the claim of the petitioner was already registered at the time of the creation of the pretended servitude, and the city of Montreal not having carried out its project for the extension of Hutchinson street, the petitioner had a right to require that the land should be sold in insolvency proceedings to satisfy his claim. Public User-Crown Lands - Acquiescence of Locatee and Equitable Owner-Subsequent Grant without Reservation of Way Rights of Public—Continuous User for 70 Years.]—In 1834 an order of the Quarter Sessions was made for the opening of a highway from the township of Percy through several lots in the township of Seymour. One of the lots had been recently occupied under a location ticket by the ancestor of the plaintiff, but the title to it was still in the Crown. The road described in the order of the Sessions was never opened, but another road, following the same general direction, was opened across this lot and the others, in 1835 or 1836, and from the time it was opened was regularly travelled and used as a highway. The title to the lot in question remained in the Crown until 1904, when the plaintiff, claiming as successor in title to the original locatee, obtained a patent for it, in which no reservation or mention of any road was made. It was quite plain that the plaintiff and his predecessors had acquiesced in the user of the road, but it was contended that there was no dedication by the Crown, and that the acts of the locatee before the patent were not binding upon him after its issue. Street, J.: —"From the time the road was laid out between 60 and 70 years ago, it has been a recognized, well travelled public highway connecting locally important centres, fenced off from the farm in question, improved from time to time by statute labour and public money, and treated by the plaintiff and his predecessors in the equitable title to the farm as being an undoubted public highway. In these circumstances, there is evidence of dedithese circumstances, there is evidence of deal-cation by the equitable owner, acquiesced in by the Crown; and the fact that a Sessions order was made for the establishing of a highway, but never acted upon, and abandoned at

Trail — Crown Land — User — Squatter's Right — Patent — Reservation — Arbitration and Award—Estoppel—Trial—Judge's Findings — Appeal — Inferences of Fact.] — The Edmonton settlement was surveyed by the Dominion government in 1882. At that time there were numbers of persons in occupation of different parcels of the land forming the settlement. McD. was in occupation of the parcel shewn on the government plan of seryears previously. McD.'s rights as a "squatter" under the Dominion Lands Act, "squatter" under the Dominion Lands Act, R. S. C. 1886 c. 54, s. 33, were recognized by the government, and he was given a right to purchase the lot outright at $1 an acre. He exercised this right, and a patent was eventually issued to him, on the 30th September, 1889. It appeared that at the date of the survey there were two well defined trails crossing the lot, and that both had been used as public roads for a period of more than 20 years previous to the attempted closing by McD.'s successor in title of the trail in question in this action—the southerly trail of the two above mentioned. Per Scott, J.:—The two above mentioned. Per Scott, J.:-The fact that the patentee before the issue of patent never interfered with the user by the public of the trails crossing the lot, or that he permitted such user, would not constitute an implied dedication by him of such trails as highways. Having no legal right or title of occupation, he was not in a position to prevent such user, and it would be unreasonable to hold that a dedication should be implied as against him merely because he permitted an act to be done which he was powerless to prevent. The patent contained th following "Reserving thereout the public road or trail one chain in width crossing the said lot:"-Scott, J., held that this reservation was not void for uncertainty, but that the defendants, upon whom the onus of proof lay, had failed to shew that the trail in question was that one of the two trails which was intended by the reservation. In the year 1894 the defendant municipality expropriated a part of river lot 8. McD. was then the owner of the portion expropriated. The plaintiff represented McD. on the arbitration proceedings. Upon the arbitration it was material that the arbitrators in order to arrive at the amount of the compensation should ascertain whether the trail in question was a highway. His counsel contended that it was a highway. The award found that it was a highway:— Scott, J., held that the plaintiff was estopped Scott, J., heid that the plaintill was estopped from denying that the trail in question was a highway. On appeal, Richardson and Wetnore, JJ., held, that taking into account all the facts, and applying the principles laid down in Turner v. Walsh, 6 App. Cas. 636, a dedication of the trail in question ought to be presumed, and on this ground agreed in dismissing the appeal. Rouleau, J., dissented, and was of opinion that the appeal should be allowed. Section 509 of the Judicature Ordinance, 1893, provides, amongst other things, that the Court on appeal "shall have power to draw inferences of fact, and to give any judgment and make any order which ought to have been made, and to make such further or other order as the case may require:"—Per Wetmore, J.:—The exercise of these powers is discretionary with the Court, and possibly the Court ought not to find facts not found by the trial Judge, unless they are clearly established by the evidence, if the weight of testimony is manifestly in favour of the finding. Where such is the case, however, the legislature intends that the Court shall dispose of the case without sending it back for a new trial. Heiminck v. Town of Edmonton, 2 Terr. L. R. 462. User— Plan—Dved—Estoppel—Evidence.]—In an action for obstructing a highway there was conflicting evidence as to its location and user by the public. In support of the defendants' title a lease and an assignment thereof were produced, both of which had a plan attached exhibiting the highway as located where the plaintiffs claimed it to be. Neither the lease nor the assignment made any reference to the plans. The defendants' evidence shewed the highway as actually used in a location differing from that shewn by the plans. The jury found in favour of the defendants, both as to location and user. The trial Judge held that, as the deeds and plans must be read together, the defendants were estopped from disputing the location of the highway, and, disregarding the findings of the jury as to its location and user, ordered a verdict to be entered for the plaintiffs:—Held, that the verdict was properly so entered. Accumulation of Snow — Liability of township corporation. Hogg v. Township of Brooke, 1 O. W. R. 568, 2 O. W. R. 139.

Acts of Wrong-doers—Relief Over.]—A highway had been for a long time in a very bad state of repair, so covered with water at certain seasons that it was impossible for a pedestrian to pass from one side to the other without wading through mud and water. The plaintiff was injured by reason of cinders which the third parties had, about a week before the accident, spread upon the road in order to afford a passage across it:—Held, that the defendants ought to have auticipated that some such means of passing from one side to the other would be adopted by the third parties, and were liable for negligence in the performance of their statutory duty to keep the highway in repair, but the third parties were liable over to the defendants. Holland v. Toutuship of York, 24 Occ, N. 290, 7 O. L. R. 533, 3 O. W. R. 287.

imposed on a municipal corporation by reason of want of repair of railway crossings through there being too high a grade and the omission to fence, the obligation therefor being under s. 186 of the Dominion Railway Act, 51 29, imposed on the railway company. Where, therefore, under s. 186, the approach to a railway crossing must not be more thon one foot rise or fall for every twenty feet of the horizontal length of such approach, unless a good and sufficient fence shall be made by the railway company on each side thereof, and in this case the grade line was four feet without any fences, the municipal corporation was held relieved from liability to a person who was injured. Holden v. Township of Yarmouth, 23 Occ. N. 181, 5 O. L. R. 579, 1 O. W. R. 557, 2 O. W. R. 130.

Bridge-Absence of Railing - Negligence of Municipality - Notice of Accident - Requirements of Mistake in Date - Damages,] -Actions for damages sustained by plaintiff. who was crossing a bridge in the defendants' township during a thunderstorm between 9 and 10 o'clock at night on the 6th May, 1902, when a sudden flash of lightning caused his horse to swerve, and the horse's foot went into a gap in the logs of which the bridge was constructed, close to the edge of the bridge, and, there being no railing at the side of the bridge, they all fell over into the water, which was within 18 inches of the bottom of the bridge, and the plaintiff sustained injury. On the 26th May the plaintiff gave notice to the defendants of the accident as having the dezendants of the accident as having occurred on the 7th May, instead of on the 6th May, describing the circumstances and stating it was during a thunderstorm, and also that he had rescued his horse by the aid of a certain neighbour, whom he named:— Heid, that the cause of the accident as a matter of law and fact was the negligence of the defendants in not providing the bridge with a proper railing, and that the thunderstorm was one of those ordinary dangers which ought to have been thus provided against, and that the notice given to the defeudants was sufficient vithin s.-s. 3 of s. 606 of the Municipal Act, and the defendants were liable, and the damages ($200) were not excessive. Failure of Municipality to Remove Snow-Negligence - Agreement with Street Railway Company-Breach - Liability 1-A railway company acquired a street railway in 1894, subject to the obligations of keeping in repair the streets in which the railway ran, as provided by s. 10 of 50 V. c. 33 (N.B.), and also the obligation of removing the snow and ice as provided by s. 10 of 55 V. c. 29. In 1895 58 V. c. 72 was passed, s. 6 of which authorized the company to agree with the city of St. John to pay the city an annual sum to be agreed upon as a consideration for taking care, etc., of the streets and the removal of the snow thereon, relieving the company from all liability for the same during continuance of the agreement. under the authority of this section, the company and the city entered into a contract by which the city undertook to do what, by the section, it is authorized to do:-Held, in an action for damages for injury to the plaintiff caused by the defendants' negligence in not removing the snow in a street through which the railway ran, that s. 6, and the agreement made thereunder, imposes upon the city no greater liability in respect to the care of the streets than otherwise attaches to them as a municipal corporation, and neglect to remove the snow was a mere nonfeasance for which they were not liable at the suit of a private individual; and a nonsuit should be entered. The street in question was somewhat frequented by workmen, but it was not a very important street of Bracebridge, and those who frequented it did not consider it in a dangerous state; no complaint was made at any time, and the break in the plank where the plaintiff stur-bled had not existed longer than 6 days. The pa intiff had passed over the walk in the morning and had noticed the broken plank, which caused an angular depression of not more than two inches; at this spot she fell in the evening. There was evidence of a weekly supervision of the sidewalks of the town. "Taking it then," says the Chancellor, "that this condition of disrepair existed 6 days before on the particular street, and was not actually noticed by any of the officials of the municipality, and that no notice or com-plaint as to its state was lodged with them, can it, as a matter of law, be inferred that the corporation had notice of the breakage, and delayed to make repairs for an un-reasonable time? In Rice v. Town of Whitby, 25 A. R. 191, 200, it is laid down that where there is no actual notice, the inferring of such notice after the lapse of a reasonable time, dating from the origin of the defect, is proper and permissible; but the question as to the length of time sufficient to raise such inference depends altogether on the circumstances the case and varies accordingly." And he held that notice was not in this case to be attributed to the town corporation. McNiroy v. Town of Bracebridge, 25 C. L. T. 398, 6 O. W. R. 75, 10 O. L. R. 360,

After the accident it was found that one of the joists had rotted nearly through. Within a month after the occurrence, C.'s widow obtained letters of administration to her husband's estate and served defendants with a notice of action under s. 667 of the Muni-cipal Act, R. S. -Action by Administratrix - Expectation of Pecuniary Benefit.]-Where a heavy traction engine broke through rotton timbers in the approach of a bridge on one of the highways of the defendants, on which work had been done and improvements made by them, and over which such engines had for two years previous been accustomed to pass, to the knowledge of the defendants' officials, and no attempt had been made to stop such traffic or warn those in charge of it of any danger, the bridge in question being one of the strongest across the river in many miles:-Held, that the defendants were liable for damages under s. 667 of the Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 116, but that they could not be held to have been guilty of negligence amounting to misfeasance, so as to make them liable in damages independently of the statute, by reason of having failed to stop up a spike hole in one of the joists in the approach, in consequence of which it had rotted more than the others on account of water lodging in the hole; that the notice of action required by the Act need not be signed by the claimant personally, or shew that she was cleiming in the capa-city of personal representative of the de-ceased; that the words "happening of the alleged negligence," in the section referred to, should either be construed to read, "happening of the injury or damages resulting the alleged negligence," or it should be held that the negligence continued to " happen" up to the time that the damages resulted from it, otherwise no notice of the action or claim could be given, in compliance with the statute, in any case where the negligence had existed for more than a month before the injury resulted from it; and that the plaintiff could recover nothing on behalf of a son of deceased, who, in the circumstances a son discourage and position of his father, could have had no reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit from the continuance of the life, nor on behalf of a nephew or an adopted child, as they do not come within adopted child, as they do not come within the provisions of R, S, M. 1902 c, 31, or any other enabling Act. Municipal Corporation - Negligence - Condition of Sidewalk During Construc-tion Work - Plaintiff's Knowledge. |- The defendants were taking up an old board sidewalk and putting down a new one on one of their streets, and had completed the work up to a point somewhere in front of the plaintiff's shop, when the men were taken away to perform some urgent work in another part of the town, and were away part of a Saturday and the whole of the following Mo. lay. The plaintiff, who was aware of what was being done and the uncompleted state in which the work was left, drove up in a cart with goods for his shop, and in alighting slipped off the unfinished end of the sidewalk and was injured:—Held, that the defendants, as far as they had constructed the walk, did so in a proper manner and were complying with a statute in improving the condition of the street; that they were not negligent; that the walk was not, at the time the accident happened, unsafe for persons lawfully using it or going upon it; that it was not dangerous or a trap to per-sons having ordinary eyesight; that there was no duty on the defendants to put up barriers to prevent persons walking across it; that, as the plaintif knew about its condition, r printed notice was not required; that the accident was a mere minadvature; and the plaintiff could not recover. Belle-ide v. Toren of Haukesbury, 25 Occ. N. 16, 8 O. L. R. 694, 4 O. W. R. 271.

Municipal Corporation — Negligence—Injury to Traveller — Steep and Narrow Road — Want of Rail-guards — Contributory Negligence — Defect in Harness of Horses Driven by Plaintiff & Mother — Absence of Knowledge of Plaintiff — Damages.]—Meredith, J., held that the failure of the defendants to place guard-rails on the sides of a road at a place where it was narrow—from 11 to 17 feet wide—with banks sloping down on both sides, was a breach of the defendants' statutory duty to keep the road in repair, and that they were liable to the plaintiff on account of injuries which she received in an accident which would not have occurred had there been guard-rails at the place. There was some question as to contributory negligence, and the learned Judge held that the driver of the vehicle, the plaintiff's mother, was negligent, and that if she had sued she could not have recovered, but that the mother's negligence was not to be attributed to the daughter, who was the guest of her mother, and had no knowledge of the facts constituting the mother's negligence. Plaint V. Tourashpa of Minto, 25 C. L. T. 398, 6 O. W. R. 31, 10 O. L. R. 16.

Municipal Corporation - Negligence — Injury to Person — Subsidence of Road-way — Indications on Surface — Faulty Faulty Construction — Omission to Inspect — No-tice of Accident — Reasonable Excuse for Want of.]—The question of what is reasonable excuse for failure to give the notice of accident required by the Municipal Act as a preliminary to an action against a muni-cipal corporation for non-repair of a high-way, upon which there was a difference of opinion among four of the Judges of the High Court, but the remarks made by Mr. Justice Oslor were certainly unfavourable to the plaintiff's excuse being regarded as reasonable-" the plaintiff was not misled by any one into not giving notice, and was under no disability except that of ignorance (of the law), which can hardly be invoked as excuse for omitting to observe the requirements of the Act." The case in the Court of Appeal was decided in favour of the defendants upon the ground that there was no actionable negli-gence on their part. While the plaintiff was engaged in driving a watering cart along the street, the surface suddenly gave way, and the cart falling into the hole thus caused, the plaintiff was thrown out and injured. The break in the street was caused by the talling in of a sewer pipe laid 12 feet below the surface. The negligence alleged was the disregard of alleged surface indications of mischief below and negligence in the original construction of the sewer or the absence of subsequent examination and inspection, and subsequent examination and inspection, and the Court found that these allegations were negatived by the evidence. Municipal Corporation — Negligence—Obstacle in Road — Warning — Liability.]
—Where a road is so constructed or altered as to present at one part two paths, both of which exhibit the appearance of having been used by travellers, and one of them leads to a dangerous place, it is the duty of those in charge of the road to indicate in a manner not to be mistaken, by day or by night, that the unsafe path is to be avoided, and, if it cannot otherwise be done, to put up such an obstruction as will turn the traveller from the wrong track. The barrier in this case was a mere stick of wood laid across the road, and it was held by the Divisional Court that it was insufficient for the purpose, and that the defendants were liable for injuries to the palintiff, although there was a "concurring cause of injury," in the horse driven by the plaintiff afther becoming unmanngeable because of the unhitching of a trace, owing, however, to no fault or negligence of the driver. Notice of Accident — Reasonable Excuse for Want of — Knowledge of Corporation — Prejudice — Appeal from Ruling of Trial Judge.]-In an action against a municipal corporation to recover damages for injuries sustained by reason of non-repair of a highway, the ruling of the Judge at the trial as to whether there is reasonable excuse for the want or insufficiency of a "notice in writing of the accident and the cause thereand whether the defendants have been of," and whether the defendants have been prejudiced in their defence, under s. 606 of the Municipal Act, 3 Edw. VII. c. 19 (0.), is subject to appeal. The defendants had actual knowledge of the accident to the plain-tiff and its cause on the day it happened. It was caused by the cave-in of a well travelled public street in the centre of a city. The eleiptiff, but and only remaining arm was plaintiff's left and only remaining arm was broken and he sustained other injuries. He was in a hospital, suffering great pain, during the seven days allowed by the statute for giving notice, and notice was not given until the eleventh day after the accident :- Held. Meredith, J., dissenting, reversing the judg-ment of Meredith, C.J., at the trial, that there was reasonable excuse for the want of a notice in due time; and, affirming the judgment of Meredith, C.J., that the defendants had not thereby been prejudiced in their defence. Proximate Cause — Snow — Township Corporation — Notice — Pathmaster — Statute Labour.] — The plaintiff in travelling on a highway under the control of the de-fendant corporation, with a team of horses and waggon, came to a place where the road was impassible on account of drifted snow for more than half a mile. At the side of the road between the ditch and a farm fence was a temporary track made by the travelling public which was safe while the frost lasted and the snow was hard. But a thaw was in progress which had commenced three days before, and when those in the waggon sought to use the track the horses broke through and the waggo was in danger of being upset. The plaintiff got out and in assisting the horse, was injured by one of them:—Held, that, under the circumstances, it was the duty of the defendants to have opened up a way through the drift sufficient to enable vehicles such as the waggon in which the plaintiff was travelling to have passed in safety along this highway; the defendants had notice that the highway was out of repair; that the non-repair was the proximate cause of the injury; and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover :- Semble, that it was the duty of the pathmaster to use that it was the duty of the pathmaster to use statute labour to make a safe truck. Judgment of a Divisional Court (2 O. W. R. 139) reversing judgment of Falconbridge, C.J. (1 O. W. R. 568), affirmed. Hogg v. Townskip of Brooks, 24 Occ. N. 171, 7 O. L. R. 273, 3 O. W. R. 120.

Public Highway — What Constitutes.]

—A winter road, open to everybody, over which a great number of persons pass and which has nothing about it to indicate that it is a private road, is a public road, and the corporation of the municipality in which it is situated are liable for injuries caused by non-repair. Duckine v. Corporation of Beauport, Q. R. 23 S. C. 80.

Roadway—Defect in—Findings of Trial Judge. J.—The plaintiff, in crossing at night on foot a busy street in the city, did so at a point thirty feet distant from the crossing. proceeding in a diagonal direction across the carriage way. There was a hole or de-pression in the asphalt pavement from one and a half to one and seven-eighths inches deep at its nearest part, and the plaintiff sl.pped upon the edge and was injured. In an action against the city corporation for damages for negligence, the trial Judge found that the accident was c used by the defend-ants' negligence in allowing the pavement to be and remain dangerously out of repair; that the plaintiff was not guilty of contri-butory negligence in crossing the street diagonally; that the street vas not sufficiently out of repair to be dangerous to horses or vehicles; and assessed damages to the plain-tiff:-Held, Falconbridge, C.J., dissenting, that the plaintiff, using the carriage-way when on foot, had no right to expect a higher when on foot, had no right to expect a higher degree of repair than would render the way reasonably safe for vehicles; and the last finding of the Judge put the plaintiff out of Court. Boss v. Litton, 5 C. & P. 407, ex-plained and distinguished. Semble, per Street, J., that the defect in question was not one from which a reasonable man would have apprehended danger to any person either on foot or in a carriage, and therefore the corporation could not be guilty of negligence in regard to it. Belling v. City of Hamilton, 22 Occ. N. 110, 3 O. L. R. 318, 1 O. W. R. 124.

Roadway — Obstruction — Injury to Traveller — Contributory Negligence.] — Action for damages for injuries caused through the alleged negligence of a municipal corporation in permitting a mound of earth about eight inches in height to remain at the filling over a trench dug to lay a pipe across a public street. In passing over the obstruction during the night, the plaintiff shorse stumbled and fell, throwing the plaintiff from the vehicle, and causing the injury complained of:—Held, affirming the judgment in 33 N. S. Reps. 291, that there had been no negligence on the part of the defendants; that the obstruction was not serious or unusual; and that the accident occurred through want of proper care by the plaintiff in approaching, in the darkness, the dangerous place which he had previously seen in the same condition by daylight. Messengre v. Town of Bridgetown, 31 S. C. R. 379.

Roadway — Obstruction — Tecphone Pole — Negligence — Proximate Ceuse — Third Party — Costs.]—A person driving on a public bighway who sustains injury to his person and property by the carriage coming in contact with a telephone pole, lawfully placed there, cannot maintain an action for damages if it clearly appears that his horses were running away, and that the, violent, uncontrollable speed was the proximate cause of the accident. The defendants, the city corporation, were ordered to pay the costs of the telephone company, the third parties, it being shewn that the company placed the pole where it was, lawfully and by the authority of the corporation. Decisions in 18 Occ. N. 310, 29 O. R. 518, 19 Occ. N. 382, 26 A. R. 521, reversed. Atkinson v. City of Chatham, 21 Occ. N. 135; S. C., sub. nom. Bell Telephone Co. v. City of Chatham, 31 S. C. R. 61.

Roadway — Vis Major — Action Security for Costs—Deposit — Preliminary Exception.]—The failure by a plaintiff who is not a ratepayer to deposit $10 as security for costs of an action against a muniej, corporation, in accordance with art, 703, M. C., must be raised by preliminary exception and not by plea to the merits. 2. In regard to the deposit required by art, 763, M. C., there is no distinction between actions for penalties and actions for damages. 3. A municipal corporation is bound to keep roads at all times in good order, and can only be relieved by proving force haseure. Young v. Township of Stanstead, Q. R. 21 S. C. 148.

Sidewalk-Defect in-Notice of Defect -Damages-Quantum.]-Where a sidewalk on one of the principal streets of a town, on which there was considerable traffic, had been laid down for so long a period as to become unsound, the scantling or stringers being so rotten as to be unable to held the nails fastening the boards placed r.coss them: -Held, that its condition was such as to impose on the corporation a con tant care and super-vision over it; so that when one of the boards was proved to have been missing for a week, leaving a hole some six or eight inches deep, into which a person fell and was injured, notice to the corporation of such defect in the sidewalk must be assumed, and liability for the damage occasioned by the accident imposed on them. The damages as-sessed at the trial, $1,500, were reduced to $900, the Court being of opinion that the latter was the more reasonable amount, having regard to the injuries sustained, a sprained ankle and an affection of the sciatic nerve from which recovery might be expected at no distant date. McGarr v, Town of Presectt, 22 Occ. N. 281, 4 O. L. R. 280, 1 O. W. R. 54, 439.

Sidewalk — Excavation — Municipal Corporation — Gas Company — Joint Liability — Negligence — Relief Over.] — A municipal corporation having placed a barrier round a portion of a sidewalk in course of repair, the plaintiff, at night, passing around the barrier, fell into a trench dug by a gas company, with consent of the corporation, under an agreement for indemnity and to properly warn and protect the public. No light was put up by the corporation or company:—Held, that both were liable to the plaintiff, the corporation for non-repair and not warning the public, and the company under their special contract with the corporation and under R. S. O. 1897 c. 199, s. 26; but that the corporation should have judgment over against the company. McIntyre v. Town of Lindsay, 22 Occ. N. 292, 4 O. L. R. 448.

Sidewalk — Excavation Insufficiently Protected—Municipal Corporation — Negligence.}—The defendant company made an excavation across a sidewalk on a public street, in the city of Halifax, for the purpose of laying cables underground. The excantion was protected after working hours by a number of barrels, with planks laid across the tops from one to another. Plaintiff, while passing along the sidewalk, after dark, in the absence of the watchman, fell into a portion of the excavation, from which the barricade had been removed after it had been placed in position, and was severely injured. The evidence given on the trial of an action for negligence shewed that the barrier erected was of a frail and insufficient character, and that the place was insufficiently lighted, and that if it had not been for the want of care on the part of defendant in these particulars, the accident would not have happened:—Held, that plaintiff was erititled to a verdict. Cox v. Nova Sectia Telephone Co., 35 N. S. Reps. 148.

Snow and Ice-Liability of Sidewalk -Municipality.]-The obligation devolving upon a city corporation to keep the sidewalks of the city in a safe condition is temporarily suspended where the climatic conditions-such as a heavy rainfall accompanied by high remperature, followed by strong wind, sudden rost and low temperature—are such that the city could not, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, have remedied the condition of the sidewalk in question before the accident happened. 2. The fact that the sidewalk in question, which was in front of vacant lots, had not been properly attended to throughout the winter, does not affect the decision of such case, the city not being responsible for damages in consequence of negligence which does not apply to the particular circumstances when the damages were incurred. D'Estimonville v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 18 S. C. 470.

Sidewalk — Snow and ice — Municipal corporation — Gross negligence. Stevens v. City of Chatham, 1 O. W. R. 199.

Sidewalk — Snow and Ice — Municipal Corporations—Negligence — Maintenance of Streets — "Gross Negligence."] — About 10.30 on a morning in January a man walking along a street crossing in Toronto slipped on the ice and fell, receiving injuries from which he eventually died. His widow brought an action for damages under Lord Campbell's Act, and on the trial it was shewn that there had been a considerable fall of snow for two or three days before the accident, and on the day preceding there had been a thaw followed by a hard frost at night. There was evidence, also, that early in the morning of the day of the accident employees of the city corporation had scattered sand on the crossing, but the high wind prevailing at the time had probably blown it away:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 27 A. R. 410, 20 Occ. N. 300, that the facts in evidence were not sufficient to shew that the injury to the deceased was caused by "gross negligence" of the corporation within the meaning of R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, s. 606 (2). Incv. V. Uty of Toronto, 21 Occ. N. 305, 31 S. C. R. 323, Sidewalk — Opening in — Injury to Pedestrian —Want of Guard — Municipal Corporation — Relief Over.]—The plaintif, whose eye-sight was defective, was walking in a city street, when, stepping towards a doorway lending into a tavern, he stubbed his toe against the step or door-sill, and, stumbling buck, fell into an area in the sidewalk used by the tavern-keeper, by the permission of the manicipality, for the purpose of putting beer into his cellar, and then open and being used for such purpose. A keg had been placed at each of the outside corners of the opening to warn passers-by—Held, that the numicipality were liable for negligence in leaving the opening without an adequate guard; that contributory negligence could not be imputed to the plaintif; and that he tavernkeeper was liable over to the defendants. Homewood v. City of Hamilton, 21 Occ. N. 206, 1 O. L. R. 266.

Sidewalk — Opening in — Injury to Pedestrian — Went of Guard — Municipal Corporation - Non-feasance - Limitation of Actions — Trap-door — Master and Servant,]
— Two servants of the defendant G, were engaged in their master's business in unloading and storing a cask of beer in the cellar of his house by means of opening a trap-door in the sidewalk in front of the house. This was at night, and the rap-door being left open, and no light or guard being provided, the plaintiff fell into the opening and was injured :- Held, that this negligence of the servants was attributable to the master, who was liable for the injury. No act of negligence was proved against the village corporation, nor was there evidence upon which notice to the corporation might be attributed; the construction of an opening in the sidewalk is authorized by the Municipal Act, s. 639, and no fault was alleged in its construction or maintenance; the corporation had no knowledge of the opening being left after dark without protection, and it was not shewn that they had means of guarding against it. Semble, that, under these circumstances, the corporation were not these circumstances, the corporation were not liable. Homewood v. City of Hamilton, 1 O. L. R. 206, considered. But, supposing the corporation liable, it could only be for nonfensance, and not for misfeasance, and the action failed because not brought within three months after the damages had been sustained. Minns v. Village of Omemee, 21 Occ. N. 561, 2 O. L. R. 579.

Sidewalk Voluntary Subscription Statute Labour, —A township municipality was held liable in damages for an injury arising through the non-repair of a sidewalk on a highway within its limits, notwithstanding the fact that the sidewalk was built by voluntary subscription and statute labour, and although the municipality never assumed any control over it, nor was any public money or statute labour expended on it with the knowledge of the council, where the latter was aware of the existence of the sidewalk, and there had been opportunity and time to

IV. OBSTRUCTION AND CLOSING.

By-law of Township Council—Conveyance of land to private person—Action against—Inconvenience to plaintiffs—Inconvenience to public—Parties — Attorney-General. Logan v. Logan, 3 O. W. R. 558.

Conviction Old Trail — Hudson's Bay Company—Transfer to Territories—Crown— Expropriation — Compensation—Petition of Right.]-When a statute authorizes the expropriation of private laud, the owner is not entitled to compensation, unless the statute so provides. Even where compensation is payable by the statute, the party expropriating may (unless the statute otherwise provides) enter upon the land for the purposes expressed by the statute, without being liable to an action for damages; the owner must take such proceedings as may exist for obtaining compensation-in the case of expropriation by the Crown by petition of right in the Exchequer Court. Where land, which was part of the lands reserved to the Hudson's Bay Company, was sold in a state of son's Bay Company, was son in a state of nature to a purchaser, who obtained a certi-ficate of own rship therefor under the Ter-ritories Real 'roperty Act, and cultivated and enclosed it, thus preventing the use of an enclosed it, thus preventing the use of an old trail, which, subsequently, was surveyed and transferred to the Lieutenant-Governor for the use of the Territories:—Held, that the purchaser was rightly convicted of obstructing a public highway. Regina v. Nimmons, 1, Tors. I. B. 415. 1 Terr. L. R. 415.

Dwelling House - Survey - Lowering Grade — Compensation.]—A survey of the town of Cornwall was confirmed by 47 V. c. 50 (O.). This Act declared the survey to lay down correctly the lines of the street as originally laid out, and provided that:"Where any dwelling house or shop . . . had been before the 1st January, 1888, partly built upon any street as ascertained by said survey, it shall not be incumbent upon the owner or occupant of such dwelling house, shop, or building to remove the same off such shop, or building to remove the same in street until the rebuilding of such dwelling house, shop, or building, or the repairing thereof to the extent of 50 per cent. of the then cash value thereof; but this proviso shall not apply to any fence, steps, platform, sign, porch, or projection attached to any such dwelling house or shop." The survey shewed that a certain dwelling encroached four feet upon the street, and that the verandah attached to it encroached three feet six inches arther on the street. This verandah was made of wood, rested on stone pillars, had its own roof, and was firmly attached to the house:— Held, that the verandah was an integral part of the dwelling house and not a porch or projection attached to it, and was not to be considered an obstruction on the street which should be removed, within the above proviso: - Held, therefore, that the posi-tion of the dwelling house and verandah did not bar the owner from applying for compen-sation under the Municipal Act for damages sustained by reason of the corporation having lowered the grade of the street in front to an extent interfering with his access. Williams V. Town of Cornwall, 20 Occ. N. 457, 32 O. R. 457.

Municipal Corporation — By-law Power to Close Roads.]—The roads mentioned in s.-s. 127 of s. 50 of the Municipal Clauses Act, which may be closed by by-law, are not only such roads as are wholly situate within the limits of the municipality, but include also highways or trunk roads leading into the districts beyond the boundaries. Styles v. City of Victoria, 8 B. C. R. 406.

Nonfeasance—Municipal Corporation—Knowledge—Pleading,]—The declaration alleged that the defendants wrongfully and negligently allowed a sidewaik in one of the streets to be obstructed by a pile of lumber, and wrongfull; and negligently allowed it to remain there for an unreasonable time, without lights or other signals thereon, whereby the plaintif was thrown down and sustained the injury complained of:—Held, that, as the declaration did not allege that the defendants had knowledge of the obstruction, it disclosed a mere nonfeasance, and was bad on demurrer. Rolsten v. City of St. John, 36 N. B. Reps. 574.

Proof of Abandonment-Obstruction-Action to Compel Removal-Owner of Abutting Land.]-The appellant removed a fence and took possession of a strip of land which originally had been detached from his prop erty, but which for many years had formed part of a public highway, and had served to give the respondent access to his property. The respondent brought suit asking that the appellant be ordered to cease his disturbance. and replace the fence as it was:—Held (affirming the judgment in Q. R. 20 S. C. 26, but omitting one considérant), that it was incumbent on the appcllant, in order to make good his pretension that the strip in question had ceased to be a public road, to prove that by some act of duly constituted and com-petent authority qualified to act on behalf of the public, the road had been closed or abolished and the rights of the public thereto renounced, or, at least, such a total cessation of use by the public of the road as a public road, and such a conversion thereof to other uses, acquiesced in by competent authority. as would constitute a total abandonment by the public and such competent authority, of all rights thereto as a public road. 2. person owning land abutting on such road, and who is deprived of the direct access which he previously had thereto, suffers special damage by the closing and obstruction of the road, and has in consequence a right of action in his own name to compel the removal of the obstruction. Meloche v. Davidson, Q. R. 11 K. B. 302.

The right of a railway company under s, 90 (g) of the Railway Act to construct their tracks and build their fences across the highway is subject to s. 183, which provides against any obstruction to the highway, and s. 194, which provides for fences and cattle-guards being erected and maintained; and, therefore, the defendants had no right to maintain fences which obstructed the highway or interfered with the public user of with the control over it chimed by the municipality. 4. That the Railway Committee of the Prity Council had no jurisdiction to determine the questions in dispute; s. 11 (h) and (g) of the Railway Act not applying. 5. Right of Municipality—Restoration of Land and Fences.]—The right of property of a municipal corporation in a public road is a conditional right, which exists only so long as the road, the land comprised in it is restored to the property from which it was detached, and the fences to those who made them. Easement—Prescription — Railway—Station Grounds — Implied Grant — Powers of Company - Benefit - Superfluous Lands -Company — Benefit — Superfutious La: 4s — Necessity.]—The defendant claimed a right of way through the plaintiffs' station grounds at M. by virtue of open, continuous, and uninterrupted user for more than 30 years:—Held, that the right must rest upon the presumption of a grant, and if an actual grant would have because. would have been illegal and void, a grant imwould have been flegal and vold, a grant plied from 20 years' user could not be valid. The user on which the defendant relied began in 1872. At that time the Northern Railway Company of Canada, through whom the plaintiffs derived title, had no power to make a sale or grant of any of their property otherwise than for the benefit and account of the railway, 12 V. c. 196 (C.) In 1868 the Northern Railway was declared to be a work for the general relating of Canada, but none of the general Railway Acts passed by the Dominion Parliament was made applicable to it until the passing of the Railway Act, 1888, ss. 3 and 5; and by s. 90 (d) the power of a railway company to sell and dispose of lands and other property was limited to so much thereof as was not necessary for the purposes of the railway. The land in question was acquired for use by the company as a railway station, and the area was within the quantity which they were authorized to acquire for the purpose:-Held, that neither at the time when the user on which the defendant relied began, nor since, was there power in the railway company to make a grant of such a right; it was not for the a grant of such a right; it was not for the benefit of the railway; neither was it of lands not required for its purposes; and the de-fendant had, therefore, failed to establish his right. Between the lot owned by the defendant and the station grounds there was a strip of land laid out as a street which he was occupying as part of his premises :-Held, that, even assuming that he had acquired title that, even assuming that he had acquired title to the strip by possession, that did not carry with it any right to a way, of necessity or otherwise, over the plaintiffs' lands in order to give him an outlet. Judgment of Boyd, C., 1 O. W. R. 695, reversed: Osler, J.A., dissenting. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., V. Valliear, 24 Occ. N. 207, 7 O. L. R. 364, 3 O. W. R. 98.

Easement — Way of Necessity — Parol Grant—Prescription—Constructive Notice.]— The defendant asserted a right to cross the plaintiff's land in going from his farm to the travelled road. The plaintift's predecessor in title, as part of an agreement for an exchange of lands with the defendant, had promised verbally to allow the latter to cross the parcel in question, and the defendant had exercised the right for four or five years. After that, the user ceased for six or seven years and until about 1886, when the defendant begun to use the trail for heavy loads, but in 1892 the defendant himself built a fence, without any gate, across the trail. There was no evidence to shew that the plaintiff had any notice of the verbal agreement when he bought:—Held, that the intermittent use of a convenient old trail was not sufficient to affect the plaintiff with constructive notice of the alleged agreement. 2. That the defendant was not entitled to use the trail as a way of necessity, although there were natural obstacles to his reaching the highway by any other road. 3. That there was no such continuous enjoyment of the way as is necessary to establish an easement by prescription under 2 & 3 Wm. IV. c, 71, s. 2. Carr v. Foster, 3 Q. B. 581, and Hollins v. Verney, 13 Q. B. D. 308, followed. 4. That the evidence was not sufficient to establish a definite agreement for a perpetual right of way or to warram the interference of a Court of equity oy way of specific performance, as the agreement was made when the country was sparsely settled and the road allowances were not expected to be specify made passable, and the passage across the intervening land not owned by either party might have been shut off at any time. Right of Way—Severed Farm—User—Right to Place Gates at Termini—Deed.]—The plaintiff, being the owner of a part of a farm which was subject to a right of way connecting two other portions of the farm, reserved by a former owner of the whole farm, for the use and benefit of himself, his heirs and assigns, as a lane or roadway 33 feet wide across so long as needed or required in passing to and from the other lands now owned by (the grantor), brought his action for a declaration of his right to place gates at the termini of the right of way. — Held, that he was so entitled; Osler and Maclennan, JJ.A., dissenting, Judgment of Falconbridge, C.J., 2 O. W. E. 258, reversed, Siple v. Blow, 24 Occ. N. 392, S. O. L. R. 547, 3 O. O. W. R. 855.

Right of Way Appurtenant to Land

— Prescription — Enjoyment for 40 Years —
Interruptions—Life Estate—Pleading.] — In an action by the plaintiff for trespass to land. or which the plaintiff was the admitted owner. the defendant justified under an alleged right of way appurtenant to land owned by his father, J. W., which J. W. and the defendant were farming jointly at the time the alleged were tarming jointly at the time the alteged trespasses were committed. The evidence shewed that J. W. became the owner of and went into possession of his land in 1855, at which time A., the plaintiff's predecessor in title, was owner of and in possession of the servient tenement. That in April, 1856, J. with the knowledge and assent of A., made use of the way claimed, being informed by A, that he had the right to do so, and that the way had been given by the previous owner, P. A., for the benefit of the lots owned by J. W. That there had been a user, at various times in each year, as required, from 1856 down to 1890, the time of action brought, without any interference by plaintiff, or without any interference by plaintiff, or others, until 1896, when, and in 1897, 1898, and 1899, the plaintiff obstructed the way, and sought to prevent the defendant from using it. That the obstructions placed by the plaintiff were, in each instance, removed, or protested against, by the defendant. Evidence was given on the part of the plaintiff to shew that a gate had been maintained across the way, and that the user was permissive, but the trial Judge found that the gate was mainthe trial Judge found that the gate was muni-tained with the defendant's permission, and that its purpose was to avoid the expense of fencing, and to prevent cattle straying at certain sensons of the year. As to the char-acter of the way, the evidence shewed that, it was a well defined road, with deep whest tracks over its entire length, except for a few feet close to the gate, where the ground was hard and stony. Also, that the road had been in the same condition throughout the whole period during which it had been used whole period during which is as extended to -Held, that the defendant was entitled to the way claimed: — Held, also, (following Symons v. Leaker, 15 Q. B. D. 629), that the period from 1871 to 1895, during which a life estate was outstanding in the plaintiff's mother, was not to be excluded in computing the period of forty years referred to in R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 167, s. 36, although it should be excluded in computing the shorter period of twenty years. Semble, that the tenancy for life, being a matter in respect to which the for life, being a matter in respect to which the defendant would not ordinarily have know-ledge, and the plaintiff would, should have been replied by the latter. Held, also, that the occasional attencts at interruption by the plaintiff in 1897, 4898, and 1899, not ac-quiesced in by the defendant, were not sufficient to defeat the operation of the statute. Eisenhauer v. Whynacht, 35 N. S. Reps.

Sufferance—Floatable River — Improvements—Riparian Proprietors—Damages—Malice—Threat,1—A way of sufferance is not a public road, and the owner may forbid the use of it to any one he pleases. 2. A floatable river is part of the public domain, and the riparian proprietors cannot hinder the doing of work thereon for the purpose of facilitating the floating of logs. 3. The exercise of a right within permitted limits cannot serve as a basis of an action for damages; and the forbidding of a certain thing, accompanied by a threat of instituting proceedings, in case it is done, in order to cause one's right to be recognized, implies no malice which can afford ground for an action for damages. VII electric ways in the municipality of Assiniboia as might be required, provided the permission of the municipality was first obtained. An agreement was entered into between the company and the municipality authorizing the company to proceed with the construction. A plan of the roadbed, including the portion opposite the plaintiffs' land, was approved by the council: —Held, that the plaintiffs had such an interest in the trees in question and in the eight feet of the highway adjoining their land, as would entitle them to maintain an action to prevent destruction of the trees and encroachment upon the eight-foot strip by an un-authorized person. Where a statutory right has been conferred, the legislature will not be has been conferred; the legislature and the deemed to have taken away that right by a deemed to have taken are plain language of later statute, unless the lateration so to do. It did not appear that the intention of the legislature in the present case was to put an end to the plaintiff's rights summarily, but rather to give to the railway company the right of way and power to construct; the disposal of the plaintiffs' rights forming the subject of another consideration and of other provisions contained in the Acts embodied in and forming part of the special Act. The plaintiffs' rights formed a subject of compensation which might be dealt with in the manner provided by the Manitoba Railway Act and the Manitoba Expropriation Act embodied in the Rain-toba Expropriation Act embodied in the Rain-way Act. I. ADMINISTRATION AND DISTRIBUTION OF ESTATES, Accumulation of Revenues.] — Where the trustees under a will, to whom the entire estate is bequeathed in trust, are directed by the testator to apply certain amounts for specified purposes until a division of the estate shall be made at a time prescribed by the will, it is their right and duty to retain and accumulate the surplus revenues of the estate although not specially instructed by the testator to do so. 2. The fact that the estate is much larger at the date of the testator's death than it was when the will was made, is an extraneous circumstance which cannot be taken into account by the Court in the interpretation of a will, so as to change its meaning from that fairly deducible from the contents of the entire instrument itself. Ogilicie, Q. R. 21 S. C. 130.

Annuity — Ademption — Evidence.] — A testator gave by his will to each of two daughters an annuity for life of 83,000. After making the will be gave to one daughter absolutely bonds sufficient to produce an income of a little more than $1,200 a year, and by a codicil reduced her annuity by that amount. He subsequently also gave to the other daughter absolutely bonds sufficient to produce an income of a little more than $1,200 a year, and instructed his solicitor to alter his will so as to reduce her annuity by that amount. He died suddenly, and the will was not altered:—Held, that the doctrine of ademption applied, and that, notwithstanding the different natures of the two gifts, and even without the evidence of intention, the second daughter's annuity must be treated as reduced pro tanto. Held, also, however, that the evidence of intention was admissible and was conclusive. Judgment of Ferguson, J., 1 O. L. R. 364, 21 Occ. N. 187, affirmed. Tuckett-Laurry v. Lamourceux, 22 Occ. N. 174, 3 O. L. R. 577, 1 O. W. R. 295.

Annuities — Purchase of — Assets of Estate.]—Motion under Rule 938 for directions to executors of a. will as to the distribution of the estate among the residuary legatees and as to providing for the payment of annuities bequenthed by the will: — Held, that the parties interested in the residue were entitled to have sums set apart to answer the annuities from time to time, as sufficient assets should be in the hands of the executors, or to have sums applied in the purchase of Government annuities in the same way from time to time, as should seem most expedient to the Master if the parties (including the annuitants) differed. Bequest to Charity—Religious Order—Revisual of Ecclesiastical Authority—Discretions of Executors — Cy Près Application — Attorney-General — Costs.] — Judgment in Attorney-General — Power, 35 N. S. Reps. 526, varied by declaring the direction in the will at present impracticable, and adjudging that the unapplied income of the residue should, from a date named, be applied semi-annually by the defendants to the promotion and support, in the city of Halifax or its vicinity, of such charitable Institutions and religious orders in connection with the Roman Catholic Church, and in such manner and in such proportious as the executors, in their discretion, might think proper, in accordance thereby conferred upon them; reserving further directions, with leave to apply to the Court below, costs of all parties out of the estate. Power v. Attorney-General for Nova Scotia, 35 N. S. Reps. 182.

Blanks in Will—Charitable Gift—Trust for Benevolent Purposes — Uncertainty — Failure of Trust.]—A testator by will provided for a bequest of money to the defendants, to be paid yearly or at such times as his executor should think advisable, but omitted to fill in the amount. In the same paragraph of the will it was then declared that, when "Home Missions" were considered more needy, an amount might be given to them, or to any such good and benevolent Christian objects as the executor should consider most deserving. The will then directed the executor to sell a part of the testator's real and personal estate, "and the proceeds to be placed, so as to be conveniently drawn to assist in aiding good and worthy objects."—Held, that the gift of an unnamed amount of money to the defendants was void, and that the gift in the rest of the will was not a gift to charitable, but to benevolent, uses, and failed for uncertainty. Breester v. Foreign Mission Board of Baptist Convention of Maritime Provinces, 21 Occ. N. 131, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 172.

Charitable Bequest—Relipions Order—Refusal of Ecclesiastical Authority—Application of Bequest Cypris—Attorney-General.]

—A will contained a direction that the executors should apply a portion of the income "in the introduction and support of the Jesuit Fathers" in the city of H. The same clause of the will gave the executors a discretion, "notwithstanding anything in this clause hereinbefore expressed," to apply the income in the promotion and support in the city of H. "of such charitable institutions and religious orders in connection with the Roman Catholic church as my said executors shall think proper." The testator died in 1881. The Archbishop of H. made unsuccessful efforts from 1883 to 1889 to induce the Jesuits to establish a college in H. A few years later another religious order was introduced. 1897 the Jesuits were willing to come to H., but the Archbishop refused his assent. This action was brought by the Attorney-General, on the relation of the Archbishop, against the executors, for a declaration and directions :-Held, that the refusal of the Archbishop to give his assent to the introduction of the Jesuits rendered that mode of applying the residue impossible. As to matters within his ecclesiastical jurisdiction, he was the sole judge. He was not precluded from taking these proceedings as relator. The executors were ordered to formulate at once a scheme for the application of the income for the benefit of some charitable or religious order. In default of their doing so, the Court would take upon itself to formulate such a scheme as would best agree with the testator's wishes as expressed in the will, Attorney-General v. Power, 22 Occ. N. 397. Affirmed on appeal by the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia. Attorney-General v. Power, 35 N. S. Reps.

Devise—Minority of Devisee—Application of Rents — Accumulation — Allowance for Maintenance.] — By his will testator bequenthed to his grandson D. his farm, implements, etc., but by a codicil provided that, until D. attained the age of 21 years, the executors should keep, control, and manage the farm, and expend the net revenue arising therefrom in the improvement and cultivation of the land, without accounting to D. or anyone else for such revenue. D. applied, through his next friend, to have an annual allowance made to him for his support and education:—Hield, that, the testator having directed the surplus revenue to be used in the improvement of the farm, that disposition could not be legally interfered with and the money diverted to another purpose. Re Waddell, Lynde, v. Waddell, 35 N. S. Reps. 433.

Direction to Set Sum Apart and Pay Income to Life Tenant.] - A testator directed his executors to set apart and invest $50,000 out of his estate and pay the income semi-annually to his wife during her lifetime. with power to appoint, and in default of appointment, over. He then gave the residue equally amongst his children. The estate consisted of income producing securities to the value of $30,000, and a large amount of unproductive land: — Held, that the executors were bound to reserve sufficient productive assets for the preservation of the lands and payment of necessary expenses; and that the widow was entitled to the income of the balance from the expiration of a year from the testator's death, and to have such balance set apart towards the fund of $50,000, ultimately to be made up to that sum as the lands were sold according to the following rule :- As lands or other assets were sold the proceeds should be apportioned between capital and income by ascertaining the sum which, put out at interest at the date of the expiration of one year from the testator's death, and accumulated at compound interest with half-yearly rests, would, with the accumulations of interest, have produced, at the day of receipt, the amount actually re-ceived from the sale of the lands or other

Gift of Income—Insufficiency—Sale or Mortgage of Land.)—A testator by his will gave to his wife the income derivable from his real and personal estate, and directed that, if this was not sufficient to supply her wants, the executors might for such purpose draw upon any of his property:—Held, that to supply such wants the executors were empowered to sell or mortgage the real estate, Re Crawford, 4 O. L. R. 313, 1 O. W. R. 470.

Gifts to Issue—Lapsc—Gifts to a Class—Executors—Shares in Company—Purchase by Executors.]—Section 36 of the Wills Act, R. S. O. c. 128, which provides that gifts to issue who leave issue on the testator's death, shall not lapse, applies only to cases of strict lapse, and not to the case of a gift to a class, such as a residuary bequest "equally among my children share and share alike." A testator died possessed of shares in a company. Afterwards, upon a fresh allotment of stock being made, his executrix took up the additional shares, paying the premium out of her own money as to some of the shares, and selling her right to others:—Held, that she was entitled as against the estate to such new shares, but only to a lien thereon for the amount advanced by her to take them up. In re Shelair—Clark v. Sinclair, 21 Occ. N. 501, 2 O. L. R. 349.

Legacy—Acceptance—Legatee-executor.]—
The fact that a universal legatee has claimed from an insurance company moneys due by the company to the heirs of the testator, does not import acceptance of his legacy, if the legatee is also executor. Renouf v. Turner, Q. R. 24 S. C. 194. See also Turner v. Renouf, 6 Q. P. R. 175.

Legacy — Ademption — Evidence.] — A testator bequeathed annuities of $6,000 each to his two daughters. Subsequently having transferred to one of the daughters securities producing $1,200 a year, he, by codicil, reduced, for that expressed reason, her annuity to $4,800. A few months later he assigned securities of similar value to the plaintiff, the other daughter, and by private memorandum intimated that there was to be a corresponding deduction from her share of his estate. Evidence was adduced of his having instructed his solicitor to alter the will accordingly, but that he died almost immediately after so doing, before any alteration was made: — Held that the evidence was admissible to shew and did shew that the assignment of the securities to the plaintiff was intended to operate as an ademption pro tanto of the legacy to her, as had been provided in regard to her sister. Tuckett-Lavery v. Lamourcaux, 21 Occ. N. 187, 10. L. R. 364.

Legacy — Charge on Land—Interest — Statute of Limitations — Legatee also Administrator with Will Annexed.]—A legatee of money charged on land, whose legacy was to be paid six months after the death of the testator, was appointed administrator with the will annexed, but did not sell the land to pay herself the legacy, and held it till π could be sold advantageously at a greatly advanced price, to the benefit of all parties, some eight years after the death of the testator:—Held, that the hand to pay and the hand to receive being one and the same, the Statute of Limitations had no application, and the claim for the legacy was still a subsisting claim with interest as accessory for the period till the fund was in hand for payment. In re Yates, 22 Occ. N. 413, 4 O. L. R. 589, 1 O. W. R. 639.

Legacies — Overpayment of Legacies under Judgment — Mistake — Repayment — Interest.]—A testator by his will gave to two trustees his estate, real and personal, and directed the trustees to pay: (1) to a sister a legacy of $500, and in case of her death to her daughter, and in case of the death of the daughter to the daughter's chil. death of the daughter to the daughter's children in equal shares; (2) to a niece a legacy of $500; (3) to the children of another niece a legacy of $500; and (4) to a chari-table institution a legacy of $500; with a direction that, should there not be sufficient to pay all the legacies, there should be a proportionate abatement; and then directed that should there be any residue after payment of the legacies it should be divided and paid and among my legatees hereinbefore named and referred to and my said trustees or the and referred to and my said trustees of the survivor of them in even and equal shares and proportions:"—Held, that the children of the niece, who were five in number, were entitled between them to one-fifth of the residue and not to one-ninth each. Proceedings were taken in the year 1882 for the administration of the estate, and, without, as was held in the previous judgment of this Court, 27 A. R. 242, proper proceedings being taken, it was a state of the court of taken, it was assumed that there were no children of the niece, and the amount of their legacy and their share in the residue was divided among the charitable institution, the trustees, and one of the other legatees:-Held, that the trustees and the charitable institution were bound to repay the excess which they had received; per curiam, with interest from the date of proceedings taken interest from the date of proceedings three by the children of the niece; and per Maclennan, J.A., dissenting, with interest from the date of distribution under the report in the administration proceedings. Uffner v. the administration proceedings. Uffner v. Lewis (No. 2), Boys' Home v. Lewis (No. 2), 23 Occ. N. 217, 5 O. L. R. 684, 2 O. W. R. 441.

Legatee Predeceasing Testatrix—Rights of Husband and Children.]—A testatrix by will dated 23rd March, 1901, directed her estate to be divided into four equal shares and one share to be paid to each of her four children. One of the four children predeceased her, intestate, leaving a husband and two infant children:—Held, that by virtue of s. 36 of the Wills Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 128, the husband took one-third of a one-fourth share in the estate of the testatrix, the two infant children taking the rest. In re Hannach Hunt, 23 Occ. N. 35, 5 O. L. R. 107, 2 O. W. R. 94.

Greditors.]—A testatrix by her will bequeathed a sum of money to a son, with a direction that her executors should invest the same and pay to the son half the interest, and in case of his sickness to advance to him such portion of the principal money as they should think necessary; and in case of his death, after paying funeral and other necessary expenses, to divide the amount equally amongst her other surviving children; and by a residuary clause, she gave the residue of her estate to her children in equal shares:—Held, that in case of sickness a trust was created, which must be exercised by the executors, when called upon to do so, though they had a discretionary power to determine the amount necessary to be so applied, and that such sum was payable to the son's personal representatives. 2. The son having taken ill and died, the trust arose; and the circumstance that the beneficiary died before the money was actually advanced or set apart did not operate to deprive his personal representatives of the right to receive it. 3. The son's creditors had no direct claim upon the executors or the fund. In re Evans, 22 Occ. N. 184, 30 C. R. 401, 10 W. R. 92.

Mortmain Act — British Columbia — Probate Duty.]—Petition by trustees and executors of a will to obtain the opinion of the Court on questions arising under the will:—Held, that the statute 9 Geo. II. c. 36, relating to charitable uses, and commonly known as the Mortmain Act, is not in force in British Columbia. (2) Probate duty is in the nature of a legacy duty and is payable in the first instance out of the estate. In re Pearse, In re Brabaut, Succetnan v. Durien, 24 Occ. N. 162, 10 B. C. R. 280.

Property of Absentee — Provisional Possession.] — An order for provisional possession of the property of an absentee will not be granted to any person interested other than a presumptive heir. St. Denis v. Masson, 6 Q. P. R. 308.

Void Legacy — Distribution — Residuary Legatees — Next of Kin, —A testntor gave, subject to the payment of his debts, etc., to bis widow a life estate in all his real and personal estate, and, subject to bequests to a university and a mission board, gave the proceeds of his real estate (with power of sale to the executors) to certain residuary legatees. The personal property being insufficient to pay the debts, etc., sufficient of the real estate to pay those debts, etc., and the specific legacies, was sold. The bequest to the missionary society was admittedly void under the Mortmain Act:—Held, that the amount of it fell into the residua and should go to the residuary legatees, not to the next of kin. In re Smith's Will (Carton C.), 7 O. L. R. 619, 3 O. W. R. 380.

"All my Children" — Children of Prodeceased Child.]—The testator by his wife his estate should "be divided amongst all my children." One daughter died, leaving issus, before the execution of the will:—Held, that the daughter's children did not take directly under the will, nor by virtue of s. 35 of the Wills Act of Ontario, there having been no gift to their parent. In re Williams, 23 Occ. N. 156, 5 o. L. R. 345, 2 O. W. R. 47.

Alternative Disposition — Death of Testator and Wife "at the Same Time"]—H. by his will provided for disposal of his property in case his wife survived him, but not in case of her death first. The will also contained this provision: "In case both my wife and myself should, by accident or otherwise, be deprived of life at the same time, I request the following disposition to be made of my property." . H. died sixteen days after his wife, but made no change in his will:—Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, 4 O. L. R. 966, 22 Occ. N. 494, that H. and his wife were not deprived of life at the same time, and he therefore died intestate. Henning v. Maclean, 23 Occ. N. 180, 33 S. C. R. 305, 1 O. W. R. 657.

Ambiguity — Distribution of estate — Designation of beneficiaries — Acceleration of distribution — Perpetuity. Ré Hopkins, 5 O. W. R. 417.

Annuities - Creation of Fund for -Right to Resort to Corpus.]—The testator by his will made certain specific bequests and devises, and then gave to his executors all the residue of his property, real and personal, in trust to provide means to pay the expenses of administration, to pay debts, and to pay the bequests thereinafter made, with power to the executors to sell lands, etc., "to deposit at interest, lend on security of mortgages, or invest in the Dominion funds, any balance that may be on hand at any time, any year, then to divide equally between them what may be available and make up the de-ficiency to them when there are funds to do it with, and to pay to any of them who may have greater need on account of ill-health or misfortune a greater sum than the others, and a greater sum than $250." The will then directed the executors, after sufficient funds had been invested to keep up the runus and neen invested to keep up the payments to the sisters, to pay certain specific sums to four named persons, or in like proportions to each of them, "if there be not enough to pay them in full," and "to pay to the children of my brother . . . what ever may remain of the estate:"—Held, that the sisters of the testator had the right to resort to the corpus of the fund provided for the payment of their annuities, if the income was sufficient, Mason v, Robinson. Bequest — Church — Trust — Mixed Fund — Perpetuity — Abatement — Mortmain Acts.)—A testator, who died on the 12th April, 1895, by his will made the 6th September, 1894, directed land to be solid and out of the proceeds thereof and some personalty directed $2,000 to be paid to N. W. for the use of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, such sum to be expended by N. W. in the manner best calculated by him to advance the principles of that church. N. W. assigned the whole fund to the trustees of the church:—Held, a good bequest:—Held, also, that the assignment by N. W. to the trustees of the church was a valid exercise of the discretion given him by the will. In re Johnson, Chambers v. Johnson, 23 Occ. N. 189, 5 O. L. R. 459, 1 O. W. R. 806, 2 O. W. R. 289.

Bequest — Classes of Relatives "Most in Need"—Distribution—Representation.]—A clause of a will, directing that the surplus of assets, if any, be distributed amongst the brothers and sisters or nephews and nieces of the testator, who are most in need, in the discretion of the trustees, is not void for uncertainty. Such distribution need not be made by representation, i.e., amongst the brothers and sisters living, and the children of those deceased at the time of the testator's death, but may be made, in the discretion of the trustees, amongst the brothers and sisters, and nephews and nieces, children of brothers and sisters, even if such brothers and sisters. Bequest of Bonds — Specific or Demonstrative — Succession Duty, J—A testator possessed both at the time of making a codicil to his will and at the time of his death of a considerable number (more than 5) of $1,000 debentures, bearing interest at four per cent, of a certain city, by the codicil devised to each of two devisees "one debenture of (the city) for the sum of $1,000, bearing interest at four per cent, per annum," and directed "that, if I should deliver over any of the above legatees, such delivery shall be considered and taken as a satisfaction of the legacy of the person to whom it is so delivered." He had in previous clauses bequeathed to each of five named persons one debenture of (the city) for the sum of $1,000, bearing interest at four per cent:—Held, that the legacies to the two legatees were not specific legatees were not entitled to receive them free of succession duty, and the executors should either deduct or collect the duty before paying them the legacies, In re Mackey, 23 Occ. Bequest of Use of Chattels for Limited Period — Sale — Interest — Executors.]—A part of a will was as follows: "I leave my stock and implements to my son H.; he to have the use of them for ten years, at the end of that time to replace them." The stock and implements were sold by the executors, at H.'s request, and the proceeds were paid to him:—Held, that the equest was merely of the use of the chattels for ten years, with the right of possession vested in H. for that period only; but the executors, with H.'s consent, having done what they should have done at the end of the period, all that he could have was the interest for ten years upon the proceeds of the sale; and therefore H. should repay the proceeds, for which the executors were bound to account. The question whether the widow could sell without the consent of the children was not a question which could be determined upon a summary application under Rule 938. In re McDougaii, 25 Occ. The minister and committee and ruling elders shall give me a decent funeral monument not to exceed £100 sterling, and then the widow and the orphan and neglected children to be seen after by the minister, committee, and ruling elders, having succeeding authority to remember the poor of the church at Christmas every year, and to cheer the poor and the broken-hearted with the joy of Chirst's death and sufferings, together with the presents presented by the minister, committee, and ruling elders at the Christmas time every year." By a codicil he appointed two persons executors and trustees, and vested all his property in them as trustees for the purposes mentioned in the will. He died within six months of the making of the will and codicil, leaving both real and personal property:—Held, that the beneficiaries, namely, the widows and neglected children and the poor, were sufficiently well designated, and came within the meaning of s. 6 of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 2 Edw. VII. c. 2: and, the gifts being charitable, the rule against perpetuities did not apply to them. The minister, committee, and elders were the almoners named for the purpose of carrying the charitable design into effect:—Held, also, that the word "assurance" in s.-s. 6 of s. 7 of that Act refers to a deed, not to a will, and therefore leaves s. 4 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 112 untouched, and under that section a devise in favour of a charity is good, though made within six months before the testator's death. In re Kinny, 23 Occ. N. 332, 6 O. L. Charitable Use — Bequest to Poor House—Mortmain—Void Condition—Costs.]

—A testator directed his farm to be sold and the proceeds paid over to the Bruce County Poor House Treasurer, to be expended in Juxuries for the inmates, said sale to be made at the expiration of four years from the date of the will, namely, the 21st February, 1900. The testator died a few days afterwards. The House of Refuge of the County Of Bruce was generally known as the Bruce County Poor House:—Held, that the county was entitled to the proceeds of the sale under R. S. O. c. 112, the bequest being a charitable use within that Act.—Held, also, that the provision postponing the sale more than two years from the death of the testator, contrary to s. 4 of that Act, was invalid, unless the period allowed by the Act were extended by the Court or Judge. Codicil — Revocation of Legacy — Statute of Mortmain — Bequest to School and Poor — Validity, — The testator in his will gave $2,000 to his son William McMurray, and no other person named William was mentioned in it. In the codicil to the will he said: "I am sorry, my dear William, to make this alteration. I cut you off my will and leave you $200. I leave $500 to Acton school, . . . and $300 to the three oldest and poorest people in Rosedale municipality . . . ——Held, I that the bequest of $2,000 to the son was revoked and one of $200 substituted for it. 2. That the Statute of Mortmain, 9 Geo. II. c. 36, is in force in Manitoba, and the bequest to the school district of Acton, so far as it was directed to be paid out of land or the proceeds of land, was void, but that such proportion of the amount as the pure personalty of the estate bore to the whole estate should be paid, subject to abatement pro rata with other legacies if the estate should not be sufficient to pay all. Should he not survive till the age of twenty-five years, I give" (the same land) "to my son Andrew, and should he die without heirs of his natural body. I give" (the same land) "to my son Robert, his heirs and assigns forever:"—Held, that the land was vested in the grandson, subject to be divested in the event of his not attaining the age of twenty-five years. Moore, 14 East 601, Phipps v. Ackers, 8 Cl. & Fin. 583, and other cases cited in Theobaid on Wills, 5th ed., p. 497, referred to. Semble, that the executors, having no estate in the land given to them by the will, and none under the Devolution of Estates Act, seven years having elapsed since the death of the testatrix, had no locus standi to make an application under Rule 938 to have questions arising under the will determined. Conflicting Bequests of Personalty—Reconciling — Ejusdem Generis Rule — Residuary bequest. Re Pink, 4 O. L. R. 718, 1 O. W. R. 772.

Contingent Legacies — Infants — Interest as Maintenance.] — The testator bequeathed to his two infant sons $4,000 each contingent upon their attaining 25 years of age; the only other provision for them was a gift to each of one-tenth of the residuary estate:—Held, that interest as a means of maintenance is payable out of the general residence of an estate, upon a legacy which is merely contingent, when the legatee is an infant child of the testator, and no other maintenance is provided; and it was proper in this case that an allowance should be made for the maintenance of the infants until their majority out of the interest on sums set apart to answer the legacies; the gift of a share in the residue was not intended as a provision for maintenance. The will was to oe read as directing the executors to apply the income of each legacy for the benefit of the infant during minority, to the extent required for maintenance, and this involved the reserving and investing of an amount equal to the amount of each legacy, not as the legacy, but to secure the amount of it in case it should become payable. The estate consisted of realty:—Held, that the words were sufficient to create a condition; that the condition was a valid one; that there was an absolute gift of the whole residue to the widow, followed by a gift over as to two-thirds if she married again; and that the executor should retain in his hands two-thirds of the estate, paying the widow the income till her death or marriage, when it would fall to be disposed of, in the latter case under the testator's will, and in the former by her own will or otherwise in due course of law. Van Grutten v. Foxwell, [1807] A. C. 688, and Verulam v. Bathurst, 13 Sim. 374, followed, With reference to another parcel of land, the codicil directed that all rents derived from it were to be divided between the testator's wife and daughter equally, and that on the death of a lifetenant the property should be sold and onehalf the proceeds given to his wife or her heirs, and the other half invested, the principal for the benefit of the heirs of his daughter, and interest to go to his daughter during her life:-Held, that as to one-half of this land also the daughter took an estate in fee simple. The testator did not provide for the payment of administration expenses, though he directed that his debts and funeral expenses should be paid by his son :-Held. that the estate as a whole should defray the expenses of administration, and if there was a different disposition of the real and personal parts, there should be ratable apportionment according to the respective values of the real and personal estate. M. and E. M., share and share alike. To her son, A., she devised her half of the homestead property charged with the comfortable maintenance of M. M. and E. M. upon such homestead during their lives:—Held, that the maintenance of M. M. and E. M. under the terms of the will was made a charge upon the property, and not upon A. personally:—Held, that a declaration made in the decree, with the consent of the plaintiff, the surviving beneficiary, restricting the liability of A. to a charge upon the land, could not be varied by the Court of Appeal:—Held, that a sum of money having been set apart which would be sufficient for the support of the plaintiff for the period of 13 years, and such maintenance being a charge upon the land, binding it as effectually as a mortgage, it was not necessary to provide for securing future payments:— Held, also, no partition having been asked for in the statement of claim, that the appeal from the decree, on the ground that partition had not been ordered, must be dismissed. He further directed that his execu-tors should donate a piece of his farm com-prising the grave lot to a designated church congregation, which had a cemetery then exist ing, adjacent to the testator's proposed burial The church refused to accept the place. donation. of the testator in the place indicated in the will, and took the necessary proceedings to have the same legally constituted as a cemetery. In actions by relatives of the testator to have the bequest declared lapsed, and to set aside the transfer of the land in question to a cemetery company:—Held, that the fact that the land in question did not form a portion of any cemetery lawfully established at the time of the testator's death, did not destroy the validity of the will, nor prevent the execution of the testator's instructions as regards his burial. 2. The principal and controlling condition and requirement of the will was that the testator's body should be buried in a certain place on his farm, and that a monument should be erected over his grave. The provision that certain land comprising the burial lot should be donated to a particular church, as a cemetery, was only a detail in the mode of executing the testator's principal bequest, and not an essential and controlling condition which must be exactly complied with, and therefore the refusal of the church to accept the land did not invalidate the bequest. Devise—Construction — Lapsed Devise—Failure of Objects—Residuary Clause—Wills Act, s. 27—Rules of Construction—Avoidance of Intestacy. |-The will of a testator who devised and bequeathed all his real and personal estate to trustees to hold for the benefit of his wife for life and after her death to hold for his daughter, and after her death to divide among her children. The will then provided that, notwithstanding the directions thereinafter contained, if the testator's son returned to Toronto within 5 years from the date of the testator's death, the trustees were to hold in trust for him from the time of his return certain specified lands (being a part of those before devised), subject to the existing life estate of the testator's wife during the term of the son's natural life, and to pay over to him the rents and profits thereof, and after his death to divide the same among his children. The son returned and entered into the receipt of the rents and profits of the lands, but died without issue. first clause of the will, containing the gen-eral devise and bequest to trustees was expressed to include all the testator's real estate, consisting of lots named and described, "and also all other real estate and the per-"and also all other real estate and the personal estate of which I may die seised or possessed." It was held that this was a residuary clause, and that the devise to the son and his children lapsed on his death without issue and was swept up by the residuary devise. Walsh v. Fleming, 25 C. L. T. 356, 5 O. W. R. 693, 10 O. L. R. 226.

Devise—Direction to Keep and Maintain.]

— A testator directed his two sons to keep their two sisters until they married, in a suitable manner free of expense, and that so long as the sisters, or either of them, kept house tor their brothers, they or she were to have control of the poultry, eggs, butter, etc., and all moneys thence derived, for their own use and benefit. He devised his farm, on which he was residing at his death, to his sons, who were compelled to sell it, as it was heavily incumbered:—Held, that all the sons were bound to do, was to offer to support and maintain the sisters, free of expense, in a suitable manner, either on the farm devised, or in the home of either of them, but that they were not bound to allow the sisters to reside wherever the latter wished, and to pay the cost of their maintenance. Devise—Estate — Defeasible Fee—Escentrory Devise Over.]—A testator dying in 1833 devised land "to his loving son Alexander, during his natural life, after the demise of his mother, and after his death, then he did bequeath the same to his heir-at-law should he have any (sic); if not, he did bequeath the same to bis brother John Grant:"—Held, that the gift to Alexander gave, by the operation of the rule in Shelley's Case, a fee simple or tail to him. Heir is nomen collectivum and carries the fee. But the last clause of the devise imported a defeasible estate in Alexander, should he die and have or leave no child, and, as he left no "lawful last control of the devise imported a defeasible estate in Alexander, should he die and have or leave no child, and, as he left no "lawful last control of the devise imported a defeasible estate in Alexander, should he die and have heir," or "heir-at-law," his fee tail or simple was defeated by the executory devise in fee simple in favour of John. Grant v. Squire, 21 Occ. N. 379, 2 O. L. R. 131.

—"I give and devise to my daughter Mary
, . . the following described parcels of real estate to be held and controlled by her during her natural life, and after her death to be divided in a legal manner among her heirs:"
—Held, that the devisee took an estate in fee simple, under the rule in Shelley's case. In re McCallum—Hall v. Trull, 21 Occ. N. 565.

Devise—Estate—Rule in Shelley's Case—Specific Performance.]—Action by the vendor to compel the purchaser to specifically perform a contract for the purchase of certain lands, the title to which was obtained under the following devise: "I give and bequeath to my son Francis (the plaintiff) for the term of his natural life and at his decease to his heir, all that, etc. . ." The defence was, that, on the proper construction of the will, the plaintiff was not entitled to the lands in fee simple, but only for the term of his natural life. The will was dated the 19th July, 1881, and the testator then had a wife, three daughters, and two sons; the devise to the other son, Gregorie, who was then the father of two children, was as follows: "I give, devise, and bequeath to my son Gregoire for the term of his natural life and at his decease to be divided between the children of my said son, share and share alike, but in the event of his leaving no issue the said property shall go to the next heir," etc.:—Held, that, as it was doubtful whether the testator so used the word "heir" as to make the rule in Shelley's case applicable, and thereby confer a fee simple, the devisee could not get specific performance of a contract for the purchase of land, his title to which depended on the will. Garriepie v. Oliver, 21 Occ. N. 242, 8 B. C. R. S9.

Devise—Estate in Fee—Divesting—Executory Devise Over—Contrary Intention—Vendor and Purchaser.]—A testator gave his widow a life estate in land and then devised it o his son P., his heirs and assigns. After devising other land to another son, he directed that, should any of his sons die leaving no children, the property given to such son should be equally divided between all his children, and should any of the children be disposed to sell, they should give the refusal to one of the family. At the time of the testator's death (1878) P. was married and had two children, and he and they were alive at the time of this action, the widow having died in 1898, and seven children of the testator having survived him:—Held, that the estate in fee in Philip was subject to being divested by lis dying "leaving no children," which might still happen, and in which event the executory devise over would take effect. Ollvant v. Wright, 1 Ch. D. 346, followed:— Held, also, that the provision in the will as to any of the children of the testator being "disposed to sell" did not shew a "contrary intention:"—Held, also, that a "contrary intention:"—Held, also, that a "contrary intention was not indicated by a devise in the same will to another son subject to the same limitation and conditions, but subject also to the payment of legacies of $2,000 at the expiration of two years from the testator's death—which appeared to be inconsistent with anything short of an absolute estate in fee. Cowan I. Allen, 26 S. C. R. 292, followed:—Held, therefore, that the plaintiff's title was not one that could be forced upon an unwilling purchaser, and a decree for specific performance should be refused. Vanluven v. Allison, 21 Occ. N. 468, 2 O. L. R. 198.

Devise—Estate Tail—Estate for Life—Mistake of Title — Improvements.] — A will made in 1877, by a testator who died in 1882, contained the following provision: "To my son Moses I give and bequeath fifty acres during his lifetime and then to go to his children, if he has any, but should be have no issue then to be equally divided among all my grandchildren." Moses married after his father's death, and left children surviving him at the time of his own death:—Held, that Moses took an estate for life with a remainder in fee to the children and not an estate tail:—Held, also, that a person who had purchased the land in question under the bona fide but mistaken belief that Moses took an estate tail, was entitled to a lien for lasting improvements, the statute being held to apply to a mistake of title depending upon a question of law. The point for determination in such a case is whether the person claiming for the improvements made them under the bona fide belief that the land was his own. Chandler v. Gibson, 21 Occ. Devise-Life Interest - "Premises" Election.]-The testator devised and bequeathed all his real and personal estate to out in his will, in which were the following provisions:—"To my wife, Marie Martin. in lieu of dower and at her own option, the sum of two hundred dollars yearly, or the use of the premises she now lives in and furniture therein during her natural "To my son Joseph Martin the south-west half of the north-west half of lot 10 . containing 50 acres . . also the south-west quarter of lot 10 . . fifty acres . . subject to the following conditions . . . that he will have to pay the allowance due to his mother in lieu of dower, also to pay," etc. "My said son Joseph Martin to have the whole above mentioned property at his age of majority, but is not to sell, bargain, or mortgage . . before he attains his thirty-fifth birthday." "Marie Martin to have the full and whole sole control of my property real and personal till my sons, are full age of majority." The testator and his wife lived on the 100 acres devised to Joseph. After the testator's death and before the majority of Joseph, the widow leased the 100 acres, reserving the dwelling-house and outbuildings and four acres for herself:—Held, Meredith, J., dissenting, that "premises" meant the whole 100 acres, and the devise to Joseph whole 100 acres, and the devise to Joseph must be read as subject to the interest of his mother for life:—Held, also, upon the evidence, that the widow had not elected to take $200 a year in lieu of "the use of the premises." The will plainly offended against the principle recognized in Holmes v. Godson, Ch. D. 1; Bowman v. Oram, 26 N. S. Reps. 318. Corning v. Bent, 23 Occ. N. 336.

Devise — Restraint upon Alienation — Period of—Insaissisabilité.] — Held, that the following clause of a codicil, "I do hereby will and direct and it is my express will and intention that no part of my real property which I have bequeathed to my sons William and Richard be sold or disposed nor mortgaged or hypothecated or otherwise alienated in any way or for any cause or for any reason for and during the period of fifteen years from and after my decease, and it is my express wish that the said properties shall remain in the family and not in any way be disposed of or alienated during the said period of fifteen years, and that the same shall not be liable for any debts or claims which my said sons for any debts or claims which my said sons William and Richard may in any way con-tract," limited to a period of fifteen years the restraint upon alienation by the devisees, but made the property inexigible during the lives of the devisees. Devise Relictions against Incumbering Devisee-Breach of Condition -Mortgage -Vendor Purchaser.]-A will providing for the dission in specified halves of a certain farm lot, between the testator's two sons, contained restrictions against the devisees selling or mortgaging their respective halves until after the expiration of twenty-five years from the testator's death, and also against incumbering it for a like period:—Held, on a petition under the Vendors and Purchasers Act, that the later restriction was void; but, Act, that the later restriction was void; but, following Chisholm v. London and Western Trusts Co., 17 Occ. N. 172, 28 O. R. 347, that the former restriction was good, so that the giving of a mortgage by one of the devisees on his half constituted a breach of condition for which the heir might enter and divest the devisee; and therefore the title was not such a one as a purchaser could be compelled to take. Between the date of the will and his death, the testator sold all his land, and took back a mortgage for part of the purchase money, which mortgage was an asset of his estate at his decease:— Held, that s. 25 of the Wills Act, R. S. O. c. 128, had not the effect of making the devise applicable to the interest in the land which the testator had at the time of his death by virtue of the mortgage; the mortgage was part of the personal estate and fell under the absolute bequest to the wife. R. 452, affirmed. Grant v. Fuller, 23 Occ. N. 81, 33 S. C. R.

Devise for Life and that of Wife or Survivor — Special Occupant — Part Intestacy.]—A testator by his will devised his farm to his son, Abner Butler, "for and during his natural life, and, in the event of his marriage, during the life of his wife, as the natural life, and, in the event of his marriage, during the life of his wife, or the survivor; and at his or their decease to his children, if any but if the said Abner Butler should die, without issue, the said land to descend to my then living children." The son married twice, having children by his first wife, but none by his second, who was left a widow:—Held, that the life was not extitled to a life. that the widow was not entitled to a life estate by implication, and that there being no special limitation to the heirs of Abner, they could not take as special occupants during her life, and the result was, that the estate for the residue of her life went to the executors of Abner, and were assets in their hands. Wilson v. Butler, 21 Occ. N. 564, 2 O. L. R. 576.

Devise of Lands Subject to Mortgages Devises Charges Exoneration.] — Motion by executors under Rule 938 for an order declaring the construction of the will of Alexander Goulet, who died in February, 1902, leaving a will and codicil, the material parts of which were as follows:—"1. I hereby constitute and appoint my two sons Francis Xavier and Alexander Blake to be my executors of this my last will, directing my executors to pay all my just debts and funeral ex-penses. 2 (a), I devise and bequeath to my wife Mary the easterly half of lot number 154
Talbot Road with everything appertaining thereto during her natural life. (b) I give to my wife Mary all household goods and chattel property of all kinds that may belong to me at the time of my death. 3. I devise and bequeath to my son Francis Xavier the easterly queath to my son Francis Anvier the easter, half of lot number 154 Talbot Road, after his mother's death, the easterly half of the northerly half of lot 7 in the 14th concession of the township of Raleigh, and the south 95 acres of lot 8 in 14th concession of the township of Raleigh. 4. I devise and bequeath to my son Alexander Blake the westerly half of lot number 153 Talbot Road, on condition that he pays $1,000 to assist in paying off the mortgage. If he fails to pay the above said amount, then I devise and bequeath the said westerly half of lot 153 to my son Francis Xavier. 5. In place of land mentioned in the 4th clause of my will I devise and bequeath to my son Alexander Blake the south 95 acres of lot 8 in the 14th concession of the township of Raleigh mentioned in the 3rd clause of will, and further will him $500 and hold the lands willed to my son Francis Xavier for the said amount. 6. I devise and bequeath to my daughter Rachel Jane the westerly half of the south 80 acres of lot number 7 14th concession of the township of Raleigh, in the county of Kent. 7. I devise and bequeath to my daughter Margaret Christenna the easterly half of the south 80 acres of lot in the 14th concession of the township of Raleigh, in the county of Kent. S. I devise and bequeath to my daughter Delia Eugenle the westerly half of the northerly half of lot 7 in the 14th T in the 14th concession of the township of Raleigh, in the county of Kent. 9. I further will that my wife Mary shall have full use and control over all my lands for 10 years after my death in order to pay off the mortgage now standing against my real estate if not paid off at the time of decease. This is a codicil to my last will and testament. 1. I will that if at the time of my decease the mortgages on my real estate are not paid off, each of my daughters shall pay to the executors of my last will and testament the sum of $150 to assist in meeting that debt, and I charge the lands willed to each for the respective amounts. 2. I will to my wife Mary all money to be derived from a policy in the Edinburgh Life Insurance Company. In all other respects I do hereby confirm my last will and testament." The testator's wife predeccased him. At the time of his death the land mentioned in the 3rd paragraph of the will was subject to a mortgage for $750, and all the other parcels mentioned in the will were subject to a mortgage for about $4,000. Alexander Blake Goulet declined to take the lot in the 4th paragraph mentioned, and elected to take the lot in the 5th paragraph mentioned, with the charge upon the lands of Francis Xavier of $500:—Held, 1, that Francis Xavier was not bound to pay the sum of $1,000 because the will did not require him to do so in the event which happened, but substituted a payment by him of $500 to be made to Alexander Blake, Held, 2, that any trust created by that clause terminated at the death of Mary Goulet. Held, 3, that he was unable to find in the language used by was unable to hack in the language used by the testator an intention to exonerate the daughter's lands from all but $150 of the mortgage debt. The question was governed by 8, 37 of the Wills Act, R. S. O. c. 128. Under that Act every devise of land which was under mortgage was treated as a devise of the equity of redemption treated as a devise of the equity of recemption only, and the devisee takes subject to the obligation of paying off the mortgage, or a proportion of it, if it covers lands devised to others, unless the testator has by his will or some other document signfied a contrary intention. The three daughters by the will took therefore an equity of redemption in the land devised to them, subject to the payment of a proportion of the $4,000 mortgage. The codicil directed them to pay $150 each to the executors to assist in paying the mortgage, and created a new charge upon their land for that amount. The testator had not anywhere signified an intention that the payment of this $150 should relieve them from the liability which existed under the devise in the will of paying their shares of the $4,000 mortgage debt. The $450 to be paid by them was by the terms of the codicil to be applied in reduction of both mortgages, that for $750 as well as that for $4000. Re Goulet, 6 O. W. R. 161, 10 O. L. R. 197.

Devisee—Use of House and Allowance— Care in Institution in the Alternative—Exercise of Judgment by Executor — Reasonable-ness.]—A testator by his will gave the defendant all his estate on condition that he should pay the plaintiff $50 a month, and that she should have the use of the testator's house and furniture for her life, and by a codicil provided that if "in his (the executor's) own absolute judgment he is of opinion" that it would be best for her to be cared for in some institution, he should have the right and authority to place her there (with her consent in a specially mentioned case), and that the charges for caring for her there should take the place of the use of the house and furniture and the monthly allowance. The defendant chose an institution where the plaintiff would be a paying inmate and be cared for (not the specially mentioned case), but the plaintiff re-fused to leave the house, and the defendant ceased paying the monthly allowance, and the plaintiff brought this action for the arrears of the allowance and for the construction of the will:—Held, that the will executed in 1896, indicated that the condition of the plaintiff was one that needed care and oversight; that in 1901 the defendant came to the conclusion and made it known to the plaintiff that it would be for her welfare to give up housekeeping, and take the benefit left to be brought into effect by his absolute judgment; that he had the right and authority to place her in a sufficiently adequate home (other than the specially mentioned case), without her consent, and that the choice he had made was such a one, and he was entitled to posseswas such a one, and he was entitled to possession of the house, and to cease paying the monthly allowance. Devisee Dying without Living Issue—Life estate. Re Blackwell, Blackwell v. Blackwell, 3 O. W. R. 232.

Direction to Accumulate — Contingent Interest — Acceleration — Cancellation of Legacy if Will Attacked.] — The testatrix, who died on the 14th February, 1892, by her will devised certain moneys and lands to her executors and trustees, with directions to invest and keep invested and re-invested (compounding interest) until the 17th March, 1915, when the whole accumulated fund was to be handed over to the plaintiff, if he was then alive; but if he died at an earlier date, leaving living issue, then to his children, and if he died without leaving any living issue, then to the other children of the testatrix:—Held, that the illegal part of the will was not that deferring payment of the corpus till 1915, but that directing the undue accumulation of income for over twenty-one years; that the plaintiff's interest was merely contingent or subject to be divested if he did not live until 1915; that the Court will accelerate payment in cases which rest on the postponement of enjoyment of property absolutely bestowed on the beneficiaries, as it is against public policy to restrain a man in the use or disposition of property in which no one but himself has any interest, but that in this case there was no acceleration in the enjoyment of any interest under the will as an effect of R. S. O. 1897 c. 332, and no such absolute vested interest in the plaintiff as entitled him to stop the accumulation in order to claim a present payment; that the executors might proceed with the conversion of the lands and the combination and accumulation of the interest for twenty-one years; that for the following two years the accumulation must cease and the income be paid out to those entitled, personalty to the next of kin and realty to the heirs-at-law if the plaintiff were then alive:— Held, also, that the plaintiff's action was to obtain a construction of the will and declaration of his rights rather than seeking a modification or changing of the will, and so did not operate a forfeiture of his share within the meaning of the prohibition in the will against action adverse to the testatrix's bounty. Harrison v. Harrison, 24 Occ. N. 222, 7 O. L. R. 297, 3 O. W. R. 247.

Protestant Orphans' Home, 25 O. R. 483, and Re Holland, 3 O. L. R. 406, that succession duty does not come within the description either of a debt or a part of the testamentary expenses, and that the specific legacies not being specially exonerated by the will, were not to be exonerated from their proportion of the succession duties payable upon the whole of the estate, at the expense of the residuary legatees. Gardner, Joseph Gardner, Mrs. Catharine Walkins, and my deceased sister, Mrs. Sarah A. Hutchinson's children, or their heirs, A. Hutchinson's children, or their heirs, Should no heirs of any of the above be alive, that it go to the next in heirship:"-Held. that the persons entitled in the first place were all the children of Luke, Joseph, Catharine, and Sarah, living at the testator's death or born afterwards during the life of the widow, per capita, and not per stirpes. The words per capita, and not per stirpes. The words "children or their heirs" meant "children or their issue," and gave the share of a child dying in the lifetime of the widow to the issue of the child so dying, in substitution for, and not by descent from, the child so dying. The shares of the children entitled to share became vested at once; but if any child died in the lifetime of the widow leaving issue, the share of that child was diverted and went to such issue, and vested at once and finally in the issue, who then became the stock of de-scent. The words "next in heirship" meant the heirs at law to the realty and the statutory next of kin to the personalty. The heirs or next of kin are to be ascertained at the death of the person whose vested share they took. In re Gardner, 22 Occ. N. 119, 3 O. L. R. 343, 1 O. W. R. 157.

Dower Election Annuities Pe-decease of First Annuitant—Rights of Subsequent — Intestacy — "Balance" of Estate.] — The restator gave annuities to his wife and only child; the latter pre-deceased him. He gave to his wife $200 a year during widowhood, and to his daughter $200 a year as long as she remained unmarried, but in case she married, only $150, the other $50 to go to the wife. At her death the $150 was to go to a charity. Until the testator's farm was sold, his wife and daughter were to have the house and lot with furniture and chattels while they remained unmarried; at the death or marriage of either it was to go to the other, but after the death or marriage of both the house and lot were to be sold and the money was to go to a charity. The annuities were to be taken out of the farm rent. Any balance of money received from rent was to go, with the interest of money on deposit, annually to two charities until the farm was sold. The executors were to have power to sell the farm in case of increased expenses or rise in property, and the amount was to be invested, and the amount of interest required was to be used in place of rent, and the balance of interest to go to the two charities until the death or marriage of the wife or daughter. After the death of both, the estate was to be divided among charities: — Held, that the widow was put to her election between the provisions of the will and her dower. 2. That because the first annuitant died in the testator's lifetime, it did not follow that those who were to take at her death took nothing; the annuity was payable to them from the testator's death, but only $150 a year. 3. There was no intestacy as to the additional $50.
4. Upon the facts, as found by the Judge. with regard to the money on deposit, there were no reasons impelling the conclusion that there was an intestacy as to the interest therein, in the face of the testator's declaration that he disposed of all his property. 5. There was no intestacy as to the corpus or any part of it. By the word "hance" the testator meant the rest or residue of the whole of his property. 6. There was no intestacy as to the furniture and chattels, after the expiration of the interest therein given to the widow; this property was included also in the "balance." "Dying without Heirs"—Estate.]—A teator gave and devised to his daughter all his real and personal property, subject to the payment of certain legacies and charges, and in the event of her dying without heirs' then to the testator's brothers and sisters:—Held, that the ulterior devisees being related to the first devisee, the "beirs" of the first devisee must be construed to be "heirs of the body," and therefore that as to the realty the daughter took an estate tall, and as to the personalty an absolute estate. Gift "during Natural Life"—Abolute Interest.—A testator gave $500 to A. S. but limited the disposition of it so that she got for her own use absolutely, only the interest upon it. He provided that at her death this $600 was to be given to her eldest son, E. C. S., and that he could use this sum "for his benefit during his natura; life." Then the testator purported to give to his wife all that remained after the $500 was taken out, but he limited her for her own use absolutely, to the interest only, and when the capital should be no longer needed to earn interest for his wife, he gave it to certain persons named, and in all cases "for their benefit during their natural lives:"—Held, that the testator intended to dispose of all his real estate, and had carried out his intention by a payment over of the $500 after the death of A. S., and by a division of the rest after the death of his wife; and that the sum of $500 was an absolute gift to E. C. S., and upon the death of his mother he was to be entitled to it absolutely; and the testator did not die intestate as to any portion of his sestate. In re Chapman, 22 Occ. N, 259, 4 O. L. R. 130, 1 O. W. R. 434.

Gift during Widowhood.]—A testator devised all his real and personal estate to his wife for her sole and absolute use, and then added: "The real property while the said (wife) remains my widow. But in case my wife should again marry, I request my executors to self-all my real and personal estate when my youngest child should come of age, and that they, my executors, shall divide the proceeds between my 6 younger children." The widow did not marry again and left a will devising all her real and personal estate:—Held, that the absolute devise to the wife was not cut down by the subsequent words, which were applicable only to the widow's marriage, and that the real estate passed under her will. Order of Street, J., 3 O. W. R. 146, affirmed. In re Mumby, 24 Occ. N. 315, 8 O. L. R. 283, 4 O. W. R. 19.

WILL.

Gift for Life — Codicil—Bequest of Life Interest with Power of Appointment by Will —Bequest of Corpus to Legatee in Default.] -A codicil gave Louis merely a life interest in an income, with a power of appointment by will, in default of the exercise of which the testator would be intestate as to the disposition of the corpus after Louis's death, While an unlimited gift of income carried to its done the corpus as well, no authority could be found for holding that a gift of in some for life had this effect. Nor did that superadded power of appointment, which could never be exercised in his own favour, increase in any wise the interest of the donee of this power in the fund which was its subject. By clause (e) of his will the testator had devised the rest and residue of his property to Louis. The corpus of the $10,000, of which the income by the codicil was given to Louis, would not, under the scheme of the will as originally framed, have been residuary estate. By a precding clause, (d), which the codicil revoked, Louis E. Hanmer was given the entire principal of his father's estate, except a sum set aside to produce an annuity for his mother; the testator by this codicil revoked the gift to his son of the principal of his estate; the same instrument he expressly confirmed, inter alia, the residuary bequest to him, which, the testator being otherwise intestate as to the corpus of the $10,000 (except that he gave his son a power of appointment by will over it), therefore, carried that corpus:

—Held, the testator had in fact given the corpus of the fund to his son in default of his exercising the power of appointment. The authorities seem uniform that such provisions constitute an absolute gift entiding the legatee to have the fund paid over. Re Hanner, 4 O. W. R. 474, 9 O. L. R. 348.

Gift of Personal Property for Life—Absolute Gift—Gift over Confined to Indisposed of Property—Legacy—Death of Legatee—Time of Vesting—"Before Receiving"—Devise—Estate—Rule in Shelley's Case—Restant on Alienation—Life Tenant—Linbility for Taxes—Advancement—Interest—Use of House—Survivorship—Proceeds of Sale—Distribution.]—Motion by executors of will of Charles Tuck for a summary order determining certain questions arising as to the construction of the will and distribution of the estate of the testator, who died on 26th May, 1871. The words of the will which dealt with this property were as follows: "Also I give, devise, leave, and bequeath to my said wife the full possession and occupation of the lands and premises now owned by me for and during her natural life, together with all my household furniture, personal property, goods and chattels, money, notes, and securities for money of every kind seever, to be for her use and behoof during her natural life, in lieu of dower, which she consents to accept instead thereof, and which she consents to accept instead thereof, and which she consents to accept instead thereof, and which she possession is to be held by her so long as she shall remain my widow. And finally I do hereby will and ordain that all the personar property consisting of goods, chattels, money, or notes receivable, of what kind soever that may be in possession of my said beloved wife at her decease, and not otherwise disposed of shall within one year after her decease be sold by my executor hereinafter named, and the proceeds or moneys arising from the same shall be equally divided among my daughters as being part of my estate:"—Held, that the widow, May Ann Tuck, took absolutely all of the personal property which she appropriated to her own use and used up during her life, and that there was a gift over of only so much of the personal property of Charles Tuck as was in the possession of the widow at the time of her death. The part of the will referring to the daughters was as follows: "And also I hereby will and ordain that at the decease of my beloved wife the said lot shall be sold for the benefit of my daughters, legatees hereinafter named, and moneys arising from the sale of said lot shall be equally divided among my daughters, the legatees of this my will, share and share alike. The names of my daughters, the legatees herein named and who are alive at the date hereof, are as follows; and if any one or more of the above named legatees shall be decessed before receiving her or their interest or share in or from my estate, then and in such case her or their heirs shall inherit the same, and if any one or more of the above legatees shall have become deceased and have left no legal heirs then her or their shares shall revert to the other legatees, or their heirs, and shall be equally divided among them:"-Held, that the share of Martha had become vested at the time of her death, and that share must be paid to her estate. The words "before receiving" might in this case well be interpreted as "before time to receive." The words of the will as to William Tuck were: Also at or upon the decease of my beloved wife, I give and devise to my son Tuck for and during his natural life, and his lawful heirs after him, subject nevertheless to the provisoes and conditions herein contained, all that certain parcel to have and to hold the same from and after the decease of my said beloved wife, during his natural life, and subject to this express condition, namely, he the said William Tuck shall have no power to sell nor any right to dispose of the above real estate or any part thereof, but shall transmit to his lawful heirs unimpaired, if he shall have any. And I further will and ordain that should my said son William Tuck fail to have any lawful heirs, then my will is that the said lands and premises thus devised shan at his decease be sold and the proceeds arising therefrom equally divided among the other legatees or their lawful heirs. And I further will and ordain that whether my said son shall have lawful heirs to inherit after him or fail therein, the above provisions made by or Init therein, the short provided in the in his favour shall be and constitute his entire share in my estate:"—Held, that the effect of what the testator did was, by the operation of the rule in Shelley's case, to give the fee simple in the land mentioned to William Tuck. In ve Tuck, 6 O. W. R. 150, 10 O. L. R. 309.

Gift to Child — Condition — Marriage — Consent of Executors — Invalidity — Mixed Fund.]—Testator died on the 1st May, 1900, leaving a will dated 14th March, 1808, in which be gave to his son out of and from the annual income and profits of the investment and rents of his real and personal estate $300 per year while unmarried, "but, if he marries to the satisfaction of and with the consent of the executors, then he is to receive the whole annual income of the estate during his life." There was no bequest over in case the son married without consent, nor any subsequent disposal of the estate affecting these assets. The son married without consent: — Held, nevertheless that he was entitled to the whole income. With regard to personalty, the Court of Chancery long ago adopted the rule of the civil and ecclesiastical law by which such a condition is void or regarded as merely in terrorem; and according to modern rules a mixed or massed fund is to be treated in the same way as personalty. Review of English authorities. In re Hemilton, 21 Occ. N. 128, 10 O. L. R. 10.

Gift to Childern — Substitution in Favour of Orandehildren—Distribution per Capita.]—Where by a will property is given to the children of the testator, a charge de substitution in favour of his grandchildren in equal shares, the division should be made per capita among those named. The "substitution" opens on the death of each heriter for life as to his share in favour of all the grandchildren living at the time of the opening of the "substitution" for each share. Remillard v, Chabot, Q. R. 26 S. C. 408.

Giff to Class — Ascertainment,] — A testator bequeathed the sum of $500, as to income to be applied for the support of his graudchildren, children of his son John, and as to principal to be paid to them equally as they respectively attained the age of twenty-one years:—Held, that the members of the class entitled to share were to be ascertained at the time when the eldest of the class attained the age of twenty-one years, and that those grandchildren born after the death of the testator and before that time were entitled to share. In re Archer, 24 Occ. N. 230, 7 O. L. R. 491, 3 O. W. R. 510.

Gift to Class — Death of Member Before Testator — Children of Deceased Member, 1—The testator, who at the time of making his will in 1891, had four children living at Barnstable, England, devised two houses to his "children at Barnstable, England, to be divided among them in equal shares." One of the four children died after the making of the will and before the testator, leaving children:—Held, applying the principle of Ite Williams, 23 Occ. N. 156, 5 O. L. R. 345, that s. 36 of the Wills Act did not apply, and that the children of the deceased child took no share. In re Clark, 24 Occ. N. 390, 8 O. L. R. 599, 4 O. W. R. 414.

One of the testator's sisters named in his will, and who survived him, had a daughter who died in 1886, leaving a son:—Held, that this son was not entitled to a share of the residue. Christopherson v. Naylor, I. Mer. 220 followed, In re Potter's Trust, L. R. 8 Eq. 52, not followed. A nephew of the testator, a son of one of the named brothers, was living at the date of the will, but died before the testator, leaving a daughter, who was held entitled to a share. "Including" — "Estate" — Policies of Insurance.]—By a clause in his will a testator bequeathed to his wife one-half his estate, "including policies of insurance made payable to her upon my death." The testator left three policies, one for $1,000 payable to his wife, the second providing for payment to his wife of an annuity of $250 per annum, for twenty years,, and the third payable at his death to the "legal heirs." There were no children, grandchildren, or mother, living at the time of the testator's death, but his widow survived him:—Held, that the third policy, being payable to the heirs and not to the widow as a preferred beneficiary, formed part of the testator's estate, although as a fact the widow was the legal heir; but the first two policies did not form part of the estate. By them a trust was created in favour of the wife as a preferred beneficiary, and so remained until the death of the testator:—Held, also, that "including" imported addition. In re Duncombe, 22 Occ. N. 167, 3 O. L. R. 510, 1 O. W. R. 153.

Inconsistent Bequests — Reconciling—Formal Bequest of Residue.]—A testator bequeathed all his clothing, wearing apparel, and personal effects to his brother; all his household furniture and other personal property to his sister. He then devised to his sister for life all his real estate, with remainder in fee to his nephew, subject to certain legacies and annuities which he charged upon it; and wound up his will by devising and bequeathing the rest and residue of his real and personal property to his nephew. At the time of his death the testator's personal property consisted of: household goods and furniture, $150; farming implements and live stock, about $500; book debts and promissory notes, $35; cash, $273; wearing apparel, which, chini, etc., $25; total, $983; —Held, that all the brother took was the wearing apparel and the watch and chair; that the sister took all the remainder of the personalty; the nephew taking none of it. The proper view of the residuary clause was that the testator, having disposed specifically of all his estate, both real and personal, added the residuary clause for the sake of greater caution or as a usual form, In re Pink, 23 Occ. Testator died in 1878 having made a will and a codicil. By the will he gave to his wife certain chattels for her life, and all the rest of his estate to his two executors upon trust to sell and out of the proceeds to pay funeral and testamentary expenses and the legacies bequeathed by the will or any codicil thereto, and to invest the residue in their own names and pay the annual income to the wife for life, and after her death to divide the estate between themselves (the executors) in the proportion of two-chirds to one and one-third to the other. By the codicil the testator gave certain specific legacies and directed that they should be paid by the executors after the decease of the wife from out of the two-thirds given to one of the executors. That executor died in 1885. After his death the other executor appropriated to his own use a part of the moneys of the estate, and died insolvent in 1900. The widow died in 1901. It was then found that more than one-third of the extate had been dissipated:—Held, that the part which remained belonged to the executor of the estate of the innocent executor, subject to the parment of the legacies given by the codicil, which should be paid in full and should not abate proportionally with the two-thirds share given to that executor. On the death of K. she was survived by her said son A. and two other children:—Held, that the fund vested absolutely on the death of K. in her three children, and that it was not the meaning of the will that the fund vested in C. in event of A. dying, leaving no brother or sister surviving him. Kerrison v. Kape, 23 Occ. N. 158, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 455.

Legacies—Interest.]—A will directed that the estate, real and personal, should be sold, and that the executors should hold the proceeds in trust to pay an annuity of $890, and then to pay all the residue of the income to the testator's widow for life, and on her death to divide the corpus, paying to two grandchildren $1,000 each, and dividing the residue among the testator's children. The will declared that the two legacies to the grandchildren were subject to the widow's life interest, and directed that they should be paid when the grandchildren should attain twenty-one, but in case the estate should be tivided before they attained that age, interest should be paid on their legacies. If the grandchildren died before attaining twenty-one, the legacies were to fall into the estate. Both the grandchildren attained twenty-one for the death of the widow:—Held, that interest on the legacies should be paid by the estate only from the death of the widow. Toomey v. Tracey, 4 O. —A testator by his will devised a farm to each of his two sons, subject to the right of his widow to work and manage the farms for her own benefit until certain fixed dates, and subject to the payment to her after those dates of certain sums of money by the devisees. He then gave legacies to his daughters, and proceeded as follows:—'I give to my wife all the moneys that remain after paying my former 'bequeaths,' debts, and funeral expenses, and all that may accrue from the farm during her term of management, to dispose of as she pleases, but if she should die without disposing, then I order that the undisposed part be divided among my sons and daughters then living. I order my executors to sell my undisposed real estate and divide it equally amongst my children then living :'—Held, that there had not been created a blended fund composed of the residuary real and personal estate so as to make applicable the rule established in Greville v. Browne, 7 H. L. C. 689, and that, the undisposed of personal estate being insufficient to pay them, the legacies to the daughters could not be paid out of the undisposed of real estate. "whereon I now reside" to his son "during his natural life, and at his decease to the second male heir of him and his present wife. and his heirs male for ever, and in default of a second male heir to their second surviving female heir or child, and her male heirs for ever, provided she continues to bear my name during her life." The testator's son had by the wife mentioned in the will four children, one son and three daughters, of whom one son and one daughter survived the testator's son and his wife. One of the daughters who predeceased the testator's son had previously joined with him in a disen-tailing deed in which it was recited that she was the tenant in tail in remainder ex-pectant upon the decease of her father:— Held, that the testator's son took a life estate only, and the surviving daughter an estate tail male; and that the disentailing deed did not stand in the way of that daughter making a conveyance of the lands in fee :- Held, also, that the condition as to continuing to bear the testator's name did not prevent the daughter, being unmarried, from conveying in fee. Period of Distribution — Clauses of Will—Survivors — Vested Estates,! — By clause 3 of his will the testator devised all his real estate to his executors and directed them to pay thereout his funeral and testamentary expenses, and that all the residue should be at the disposal of his wife for her maintenance during her lifetime, and that after her decease the real estate be converted into money and divided equally among his children or the survivors. But in the event of any of the children predeceasing the wife, his or her share was in the event of him or her leaving no issue, to be divided be-tween the survivor's other heirs, etc. But should the executors determine to sell the real estate during the wife's lifetime, the proceeds were to be invested for her main-tenance during her life, and at her death to be divided equally among the three children, or the survivors, share and share alike; but if the wife elected to take her third of the proceeds instead of the annual income from the whole, the remainder was to be divided in the same way among the children. The testator died in 1880, leaving a widow, two sons, and a daughter. The widow died in 1901. The daughter died in 1892, leaving an infant child, who died in 1894. The two sons were still living. The executors sold the lands in the lifetime of the widow, and she did not elect :- Held, that the exe cutors having acted with regard to the land under the provisions of clause 3, that clause only was to be looked at to ascertain the testator's intention, being a complete clause in itself. The period of distribution was that of the death of the widow, and the daughter's share went to the sons as survidaughter's share went to the sons as survivors, and not to the daughter's child, as claimed by the child's father. On the death of all the children of the testatrix the undisposed of residue was directed to be divided among their children then living, and in default of a grandchild living at the death of the last surviving child of the testatrix, then the undisposed of residue was to be divided among certain charities:—Held, that a division of the estate among the children made by the trustees in good faith two years after the death of the testatrix was a valid exercise of the power. The estate consisted of household furniture and chattels, a policy of life insurance, two parcels of real estate, and a mortgage on real estate:gage passed to the widow, under the words "other personal effects." These words occurring in a residuary gift were not to be read as restricted to things ejusdem generis with those described by the preceding words, the testator's intention being to dispose of the whole of his personal estate:—Held, also, following Re Thomas, 2 O. Rights of Wife — Usufructuary or Institute — Action by Heirs — Inconsistent Claims — Election, 1—The respondents charged against the appellant waste of certain of her deceased husband's estate, rights in which she possessed under his will, and neglect to secure the appointment of a "curator to the substitution," and it appeared that there was doubt whether under the will she was a usufructuary or an "institute;" and claimed, in case the Court should decide that the will only created a simple right of usufruct, the extinction of such right, or, in the alternative, that the estate be vested absolutely or qualifiedly in the heirs called by the will to succeed her; and, in case the Court should decide that there was a substitution, that the appellant might be "assufeie a souffrir Penvoi en possession des appelé à titre de séquestre, et que tel séquestre soit ordonné par le jugement à intervenir," and other relief appropriate to this situation:—Held, that the relief claimed was inconsistent and contradictory, and that the respondents should be required to exercise an option as to which relief they would claim. Hurtubise v. Decorie, Q. R. 13 K. E. 366.

Roman Catholic Bishop — Corporation Sole — Devise of Personal and Ecclesiastical Property — Construction.]—The will of the Roman Catholic Bishop of St. John, N.B., a corporation sole, contained the following general devise of his property:—"Although all the church and ecclesiastical and charitable properties in the diocese are and should be vested in the Roman Catholic Bishop of St. John, New Brunswick, for the benefit of religion, education, and charity, in trust according to the intentions and purposes for which they were acquired and established, yet to meet any want or mistake I give and devise and bequeath all my estate, real and personal, wherever situated, to the Roman Catholic Bishop of St. John, New Brunswick, in trust for the purposes and intentions for which they are used and established:"—Held, affirming the judgment in 36 N. B. Reps, 229, that the private property of the testator, as well as the ecclesiastical property vested in him as bishop, was devised by this clause, and the fact that there were specific devises of personal property for other purposes did not alter its construction. Travers v. Casey, 24 Occ. N. 169, 34 S. C. R. 419.

Separate Gifts — Rule in Shelley's Case—Len for Improvements.]—Action for the recovery of land, into the possession of which the defendants had entered under an agreement of sale made between them and the plaintiff. The plaintiff alleged a title in fee to the land by a conveyance from a devisee under a will as follows: "I give and devise to my grandson J. H. the last half after his death I devise the same to his children, lawfully begotten, in equal shares: should he die without a child living at the time of his death, then I devise said land to my son G. for the term of his natural life, and after his death to his children in equal shares, and if G. should die without a child living at the time of his death, then." &c. &c. J. H. was alive at the time of this action, aged 50 years, and had one child, a daughter, born after the death of the testator:—Held, that neither the rule in Wild's case nor that in Shelley's case applied. There were plainly two gifts, one to J. H. for life, and the other to his children in equal shares, which carried the remainder in fee to the child, or children, subject to be divested if he died without a child living at his death. The plaintiff, therefore, could not make title. The defendants were entitled to a lien for improvements, and for purchase money paid on account, with interest, less an occupation rent. Young v. Denike, 22 Occ. N. 27, 2 O. L. R. 723.

Shares of Children — Period of vesting — Rents — Interest — Equal division. Re Hunter, 2 O. W. R. 791.

Speaking from Death — Stock in Trade — "Now" — Household Furniture — Books — Legacy — Incomplete Words.]—A testator gave all his estate of which he might die possessed in manner following: "to my sister E. the house and lands with all household furniture and all the stock and trade now in house and out of house, with all book accounts now due to me, whereever found, for her own use and benefit forever, and out of this she shall pay to my brother B. $100, also she shall pay $100 to my brother W." At his death, At his death, and when he made the will, the testator was the keeper of a country village shop, and his possessions consisted of a house and lot, where he carried on his business and lived, the capital employed in his business, his stock of goods, and what was owing to him by his customers, and his household and other effects, consisting of furniture, books, horses, harness, carriages, and sleighs. Shortly after he made his will he sold his house and lot and business and afterwards repurchased them: -Held, that although the gifts of the household furniture, the stock in trade, and the book debts, were specific bequests, nevertheless, being specific gifts of that which is generic, of that which may be increased or diminished, the will carried the household furniture, the stock in trade, and the book debts, as they existed at the time of the testator's death; and the use of the word "now" did not limit the gift to them as they existed at the date of his will. This was confirmed by the words of general bequest at the commencement, as also by certain other features of the will:—Held, also, that in the gift of the "stock and trade" the money of the testator on deposit in the bank and cash in hand and a quantity of cordwood for use in the shop and dwelling-house, two horses, harness, and vehicles, were embraced:—Held, also, that a number of books belonging to the testator passed as part of the household furniture. The incomplete words of the gift to one brother were sufficient. In re Holden, 23 Occ. N. 52, 5 O. L. R. 156, 2 O. W. R. 11.

Specific Bequests of Shares—Change in shares by statute — Rights of legatees. Re Thompson, 3 O. W. R. 627.

Specific Legacies — Bequest of Residue—Condition —Application of,]—There were two distinct dispositions in one clause of a will. In the first part of the clause the testator gave specific legacies of $200 ench to five of his children, and in the second part he divided the residue of the moneys and book debts which he should leave at his decease among his ten children and the children of Malvina, a deceased daughter. At the end of the clause he added: "But on condition that the children of the deceased Malvina and Amable and Joseph (who were two of the five specific legates) shall renounce the succession of the late Dame Julie Leelerc, their mother and grandmother, in order that they may be on a footing of equality with my other children, and that of the said Amable on the said Amable and Amab and Joseph and the children of the said Malvina claim the succession of the said dame, their mother and grandmother, the property which I have given them above shall pass to my other children above lastly named:"—Held, that this condition did not apply to both dispositions, but only to the latter disposition, namely, of the residue. Bélanger v. Bélanger, Q. B. 10 K. B. 207.

Statute Interpreting Will—Construction — Income of Estate—Saisissabilité.]—
A statute interpreting or modifying a will should be construed as a codicil to such will. If such statute detaches from a considerable sum, to be divided later among the heirs, a certain sum to be used as income, without declaring that the latter sum shall be regarded as alimentary, the sum so detached will not be insatissiable, even if the capital would be. Union Bank of Canada v. Ogilvic, 4 Q. P. R. 157.

Subject of Devise—After-acquired Property.]—Testator by his will devised to his daughter "the homestead farm on which I reside." and the residue of his real estate to his wife for life. After the date of the will he acquired other real estate, including land known as lot A., upon which he resided at the time of his death. By s. 19 of c. 77, C. S. N. B., "every will shall be construed with reference to the real and personal estate comprised therein, as if it had been executed immediately before the death of the testator, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will:"—Held, that lot A., was not included in the devise to the daughter. Ager v. Estabrooks, 22 Occ. N. 328, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 302.

Substitution - Clauses Creating.] The testator bequeathed to his wife all his property "to be enjoyed by her during her natural lifetime;" by the next clause of his will he bequeathed to his brothers and sisters all his property "to be enjoyed by them in absolute property and ownership," share and share alike, but only from and after the de-cease of his wife. The testator's wife surcease of his wife. The testator's wife survived him, and at the time of her death, B. was the only one of the brothers and sisters mentioned who was living, and she took possession of all the testator's estate. A nephew of the testator, a son of one of the brothers mentioned in the above clause of the will, brought this action for one-sixteenth of the estate, claiming that the will gave the widow only the usufruct, and that the brothers and sisters of the testator were bequeathed the naked ownership:—Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Review, that the will created a substitution, and that B., as the sole survivor of the substitutes at the death of the widow (the institute), was entitled to the whole estate. Ryan v. Ryan, 23 Occ. N. 116.

Substitution — Opening — Legacy to Substitutes — Per Stirpes or Per Capita.]—
By his will, which created a substitution, the testator bequeathed the usufruct of all his property to his widow, and after her death to his surviving children, and then gave it to the legitimate children of his children, to enjoy and have in equal parts and portions among them from the day that the enjoyment and usufruct of his children should cease, instituting his said grandchildren his universal legatees:—Held, that all the grandchildren participated in the legacy, and that the property representing the fifth of the revenue given to each of the testator's children, on the opening of the substitution created by the will, for such fifth portion, should be divided among all the grandchildren then living in equal shares, they taking per capita and not per stirpes. Remillard v. Chabot, 33 S. C. R. 328.

Substitution or Usufruct.]— In the interpretation of a will, if it is doubtful whether a certain provision creates a substitution or a legacy of usufruct and bare property, the decision must be in favour of a substitution. 2. There is a substitution when there are in one provision two successive gifts, a period of time between, and a successive order. 3. If the testator in disposing of his property does not say, whether it is absolutely or by way of usufruct, it will be held to be absolutely. 4. The following clause in a will creates a substitution: "I will, devise, and bequeath unto my beloved wife . . . all my property and estate . . . to be enjoyed by her only during her natural lifetime. I will, devise, and bequeath unto . . . my beloved brothers and sisters all my property and estate . . . to be enjoyed by them in absolute property and ownership, share and share alike, . . . to be enjoyed by them in absolute property and ownership, share and share alike, but only from and after the decease of my said wife." Ryan v. Ryan, Q. R. 22 S. C. 174.

Substitution or Usufruct.] - The following clause in a will effects a substitu-tion and not a bequest of usufruct and bare property:—"I will and bequeath to my well property — I will and be dearen to my beloved wife . . . the enjoyment and usu-fruct during her life of all the property, mov-able and immovable, and the proceeds and revenues thereof of whatsoever nature and of whatsoever amount and wheresoever situated and title deeds, papers, rights of action, and other things generally whatsoever I shall leave at the date of my decease without excepting or reserving anything, for my said wife to enjoy the usufruct during her life and as long as she remains my widow without being obliged to give security nor to take any inventory nor to render an account to any one; and I forbid by this my will my children one; and I total by the person in any way to force my said wife to render an account or to make an inventory; but on her re-marriage, if she should re-marry, I will and intend that she shall render an immediate account to the children born of our marriage and afterwards make a good and true inventory; and the property in all such my said effects, morable and immovable, title deeds, papers, and rights of action, shall then belong to our said children as at the death of their mother my said wife." Cabana v, Latour, Q. R. 24 S. C. S3.

Tenant for Life — Reneval of Lease — Carrying on Business—Profits—Account.]—A testator devised and bequeathed all his property real and personal to his wife, "to be used and enjoyed by her for and during; the term of her natural life and widowhood, and after her decease or marrying again "to named members of his family. At the time of his death he was carrying on business as a brickmaker upon premises leased by him, he having the right to take clay. The widow, with the assent and co-operation of members of the family, carried on the business and developed it, using the plant and renewing it when necessary, and when the lease fell in some years after the testator's death she took a new lease of the same premises, and at her death the business had increased very much in value.—Held, that the personal estate should have been converted into money and not used in specie by the widow, but that having been so used the increased value of the business enured to the benefit of the remaindermen, and did not form part of the widow's estate. Judgment of a Divisional Court, 32 O. R. 36, 20 Occ. N. 255, affirmed. Wakefield v. Wakefield, 21 Occ. N. 367, 2 O. L. R. 33.

Trust—Next of Kin.]—H., by his last will, after bequeathing certain legacies, made the following bequests: — "I give and bequeath seven hundred dollars to A. of Charlottetown, in the Province of Prince Edward Island, to pay any money that I may leave an order for, and also to pay my funeral expenses, also to pay himself for his time and trouble." There was no residuary clause in the will. He appointed B, and C, executors of his will; they renounced, and administration cum testamento annexo was granted to A. Testator left no order to pay any money, and A. claimed the balance of the $700 after payment of the funeral expenses:—Held, that A, was a trustee of the sum of $700, and after payment of debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, and of a reasonable sum for his trouble in carrying out the trusts of the will, he held the balance in trust for the next of kin. Trainor v. Landrigan, 21 Occ. N. 515.

Trasts — Power to appoint new trustee — Persons to exercise power — Time for exercising — Death of trustee after death of testator — "Surviving brothers and sisters" — "Then" — Action — Parties — Cestuis que trust. Saunders v. Bradley, 6 O. W. R. 436,

Trusts - Provision for the Appointment of New Trustee - Construction - Person to Exercise Powers - Time for Exercising.]-A testator appointed his two brothers executors and trustees of his will, and provided that in the event of the death, liability, or refusal to act of either of them, "then my surviving brothers and sisters or a majority of them shall by an instrument in writing
. . . appoint a new trustee," etc. The
granted to the two brothers, one of whom died in the same year. In 1900, by an instru-ment in writing, a majority of the brothers and sisters of the testator then living (one other brother having also died in 1889, after the testator) appointed the plaintiff a trustee in place of the deceased executor:-Held. that the appointment was valid. The power to appoint a new trustee became operative in case either of the events provided for hap-pened, whether in the lifetime of the testator or after his death; and it was the survivors of the brothers and sisters at the time of exercising the power, or a majority of them, who had the power to appoint. Saunders v. Bradley. 23 Occ. N. 263, 6 O. L. R. 250, 2 O. W. R. 697.

Vested Estates in Remainder — Construction — "Family" — Children of Testator's Children — Distribution Per Capita — Partition or Sale.]—Plaintiff was one of the beneficiaries under the will of deceased. Defendant George Harkness was a son of deceased, and was the sole surviving executor under the will. The testator died on 25th June, 1872, having made his last will, dated 16th June, 1870, as follows:—"I will that my son Archibald and my daughter Mary have (after the death of my wife if she survives me) the life use of all my real and personal property to hold to them jointly during their natural lives if they survive me, and to the longest liver of them." "4. I will that, after the death of my wife and my son Archibald and my daughter Mary, all real property belonging to me shall be divided into 3 equal portions and distributed as follows: one portion to my son James's family, one portion to my son George's family, and one portion to my daughter Margaret's family." Testator's widow died on 24th July, 1884, the son Archibald on 7th July, 1894, and Mary on 2nd February, 1902. Probate was granted to defendant George Harkness on 20th June, 1902: — Held, the word "family" in the 4th clause of the will meant the children of the testator's sons James and George and of his daughter Margaret became on the death of the testator's sons James and George and of his daughter Margaret became on the death of the testator vested estates in remainder, subject to the respective life estates of the wildow and of Archibald and Mary. Harkness v. Harkness, 6 O. W. R. 122, 9 O. L. R. 705.

Void Devise of Life Estate — Acceleration of Remainder, — A testatrix bequeathed to her adopted daughter "the whole of my real and personal estate for her sole and only use absolutely, and in the event of her decease without heirs" she directed that "whatever may remain of my real and personal estate shall go to my nephew for his sole use and disposal." The adopted daughter was one of the witnesses to the will:—Held, following Aplin v. Stone, [1904] I Ch. 543, that the will must be constructed before the effect of the devisee being a witness could be considered; that on the true construction of the will the decease of the adopted daughter before the testatrix was the event contemplated; that "without heirs" meant without children lawfully begotten; and that there was no direct gift to heirs or children:— Held, further, that the gift to the adopted daughter being void, the gift to the nephew took effect at once. In re Mayber, 24 Occ. N. 399, O. L. R. 691, 4 O. W. R. 421.

III. EXECUTION.

Acknowledgment — Evidence—tppeal.]—In proceedings for probate of a will the solicitor who drew it testified that it was signed by the testatrix when the subscribing witnesses were absent; that on their arrival he asked the testatrix if the signature to it was hers, and if she wished the two persons present to witness it, and she answered "yes." Each of the witnesses acknowledged his signature to the will, but swore that he had not heard such question asked and answered. The Judge of Probate held that the will was not properly executed, and his decision was affirmed by the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, 24 Occ. N. 141, 39 N. S. Reps. 482:—Held, affirming the judgments, that two Courts having pronounced against the validity of the will, such decision would not be reversed by a second court of appeal. In re Cullen, 25 Occ. N. 54; McNeil v. Cullen, 35 S. C. R. 510.

Codicil - Suspicious Circumstances -Testimony of Beneficiary-Competency of Testator.]-A testator by his will among other anrairies, gave one to K. of $600. By a codicil, executed in the following year, he increased the amount to $800. By a second codicil, executed some years later and shortly before his death, he increased the annuity to $1,000 and provided that, on the death of any of the annuitants, the amount should go to the survivor or survivors for life. There was evidence that K, had been actively concerned in procuring the execution of the second codicil; there were some suspicious circumstances as to the time and manner of execution; there was no evidence, except that of K., to shew that the testator had even seen the codicil before he executed; there was evidence of delusions on his part as to his will and the property he had to dispose of; and the witnesses to the execution were of opinion from his demeanour, that he was not at the time in a condition to transact any important business. On petition by the executors for proof in solemn form, the second codicil was rejected by the form, the second codicil was rejected by the Surrogate Judge:—Held, affirming his decision, that it was open to him to discredit the testimony of K., and he having done so, the Court ought not to interfere with his finding. 2. That K. being the principal beneficiary under the codicil, and the principal witness in support of it, and having had knowledge the control of the principal witness in support of it, and having had knowledge the principal than the principal control of the principal witness in support of it, and having had knowledge the principal control of the principal witness in support of it, and having had knowledge the principal control of the principal control of the principal code of the principal control of the principal c ledge of it, and been a party to promoting its execution, was required to reasonably satisfy the mind of the court. execution of her will, two persons were brought, one of whom, presenting the instru-ment, which was signed by the testatrix, although not written by her, asked her if she was "perfectly satisfied with this," or "with this will." She answered, "I am perfectly satisfied." The two witnesses then signed the will in the presence of the testatrix and of several other persons, knowing it to be the will of the testatrix:—Held, that a document written in conformity to the directions of the testator, containing his wishes for the dis-position of his estate, and signed by him, and also by two witnesses, is a will, 2. The acknowledgment by the testator, in the presence of the subscribing witnesses, and in answer to a question put by one of them, that the document signed is his will, is a sufficient compliance with art, 851 of the Civil Code, which requires an acknowledgment by the testator of the signature, "as having been subscribed by him to his will then produced" in presence of the witnesses. 3. Art. 851, C. C., which says the witnesses "attest and sign the will immediately, in presence of the testator and at his request," but does not prescribe any form of request, is sufficiently complied with, where the witnesses, at the request of the testator, have been asked to come there for the special purpose of witnessing the will for the special purpose of witnessing the will, although, when present, they were not personally requested by the testator to sign. 4. The word "attest" in art, 851, C. C., means simply to sign as witness, no attestation clause being required. Hannah v. Breveton, Q. R. 23 S. C. 98.

Instructions for Will.] - Ryan v. Harrington, 3 O. W. R. 685.

Lost Will-Evidence - Solicitor - Privilege-Declarations-Probate.] - The doctrine of privileged communications as between solicitor and client exists for the benefit of the client and his representatives in interest, not for that of the solicitor, and in an action to establish the lost will of a testator, who was illegitimate and had died without issue, statements of the testator to his solicitor in reference to the making of and provisions in the will were held, against the objection of those who claimed under the lost will, to be admissible in evidence. Statements testator as to the provisions of his will are admissible in evidence in an action to establish it, and statements of this kind were in hish it, and statements of this kind were in this case held to be sufficient corroboration of the evidence of the plaintiff, who had drawn, and was claiming large benefits under, the will in question, which, it was alleged. had been lost or stolen. The facts that the testator was aware that unless he made a will his property would go to the Crown; that he was an experienced man of business possessed of a large estate; that he had, after the will had been made, several times spoken of it as in existence, and had mentioned some of its provisions; and that during his last illness, of some days' duration, he had expressed no wish to make a will; were held sufficient to rebut the presumption of destruction of the will by the testator. Stewart v. Walker, 23 Occ. N. 320, 6 O. L. R. 495, 1 O. W. R. 489, 2 O. W. R. 990.

Proof of Execution—Acknowledgment—Witnessex.]—The last will and testament of A. C. was contested on the ground that it was in the handwriting of the residuary legatee, that it did not express the frue will of the deceased, that deceased did not know or approve of it, and that it was not properly executed, not having been "signed or acknowledged by deceased in the precence of two or more witnesses, present at the same time," &c. The evidence shewed that, at the time the will was executed. deceased was present, but was sitting about 15 feet away from the witnesses; that the words at the end of the will were read over in a low tone so that the witnesses were unable to say whether they were heard by deceased or not. Neither of the witnesses was able to say that the signature of deceased was affixed to the will when they signed, or that he saw it if it was there, and both agreed that, if the signature was there, deceased did not in their presence acknowledge it to be her signature; nor did they hear her asked the question whether it was her signature; nor was there evidence of any other act or conduct on her part which could be considered the equivalent of an acknowledgment. According to the evidence of the witnesses she said nothing, and appeared to be indifferent to what was going on. One of the witnesses was unable to say, after leaving, whether he had witnessed a will or not:—Held, that, assuming it to be true. as sworn by the witness in support of the that deceased was asked, in presence of the witnesses, whether this was her will, and whether she wished the witnesses to sign, the evidence did not go far enough, it being essential to shew that the witnesses heard both question and answer. Revocation of Probate-Evidence -Appeal on Facts—Parties to Proceedings.]

—In 1877 the will of H. was proved in common form before the Registrar of Probate on the oath of one of the subscribing witnesses, who swore that he and the other witness signed in the presence of the testator, and in the presence of each other. The will was acted upon, and remained un-questioned for a period of twenty-four years, when, after the death of the witness on whose oath it was proved, it was set aside by the Judge of Probate, on the testimony of the remaining witness, M. H., and his brother, that M. H. did not sign his name to the will as witness, until after the testator's death:—Held, reversing the decision of the Judge of Probate, that, after the long lapse of time, it was impossible to accept the evi-dence of M. H. and his brother—both being interested parties-to establish the invalidity of the will, as against the oath of the deceased witness upon whose testimony it was proved. While some weight should be attached to the finding of the Judge of Probate, it was impossible for the Court, on appeal, to feel bound by such finding, when it appeared that he came to the conclusion he did simply on the evidence of the two interested parties, and without considering other facts bearing on the case. The devisee of a portion of the property under the will conveyed his title to a third party, and by several intermediate conveyances it came to M. asic tere ent into amount teer men to the re

Held, that the naming specifically of heirs, devisees, legatees, and next of kin, in the statute, was merely a matter of direction, leaving it open to those having an interest to intervene for the purpose of protecting their rights. IV. LEGACIES AND DEVISES,

Ademption of Legacy—Advancement.]
—A legacy is not revoked by a subsequent writing of the testator other than a will, unless the change of intention is thereby expressly stated. Thus, where a testator made his two sons his universal legatees, and made their legacies chargeable with the payment of certain sums to their sisters, and afterwards in the marriage contract of one of these sons he gave him the same property very nearly which he would have had as his half of the universal legacy, subject to the charge of paying to his sisters a sum equal to about half of the sums which he had designated for them by his will, the universal legacy, as regards the half of the charges which it involved, was not revoked nor satisfied by the marriage contract. By a codicil he directed that "in lieu of the house and premises (describing them) deeded to my beloved wife but since disposed of and the proceeds used in the business, I give, devise, and bequeath, and hereby direct, instruct, and empower my executors to pay over to my beloved wife the whole amount of my two life policies." The house and premises had not in fact been disposed of but were vested in the wife at the time of the testator's death:—Held, that the wife was entitled to the insurance moneys, and was not put to her election be-tween the additional one-half given by the codicil and the house; the two elements es-sential to a case of election being wanting, viz., the disposition by the testator of something belonging to a person taking a benefit under the will—while in this case there was merely an erroneous statement of fact—and a gift to that person of something in the absolute control of the testator—while the insurance money was not. If the words had been "charitable or philanthropic" the conclusion might have been different, as "or "would imply a discretion to select either "charitable" or "philanthropic" purposes. Codicil—Increase of Amount of Legacy.]—A codicil to a will, executed shortly before the testator's death, increased the provision for a nicce of his wife who had lived with him for nearly thirty years, a considerable portion of which she was his housekeeper, was attacked as having been executed on account of undue influence by the nice:—Held, reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, Taschereau and Sedgewick, JJ., dissenting, that, as the testator was shewn to be capable of executing a will at the time he made the codicil, considering the relations between him and his niece, even if it had been proved that she urged him to make better provision for her than he had previously done, such would not have amounted to undue influence:—Held, also, following Perera v, Perera, [1891] A. C., 354, that, even if there was ground for saying that the testator was not at the time capable of making a will, the codicil would still have been valid. Kaulbach v, Archbold, 22 Occ. N. 9, 31 S. C. R. 387.

Concurrent Findings of Fact by Courts Below — Gifts in Expectation of Death.]—Where there are concurrent findings of fact as to a testator's competence and freedom from undue influence:—Held, that they will not be disturbed unless it be made plain that there has been a miscarriage of justice, or at least that the evidence has not been adequately weighed or considered. Held, also, that gifts made by the testator to the respondent during his lifetime would not be avoided under art, 762 of the Civil Code, where there was neither allegation nor evidence that they were made in expectation of death. The proviso in that article, "unless circumstances tend to render them valid," requires that those circumstances should be investigated. Archambault v. Archambault, 11902] A. C. 575.

Delusions—Onus—Evidence of Partics—Interest—Corroboration.]—In March, 1897, testator made a will revoking a prior will made in 1890, materially reducing bequests to his wife and son, and giving away large portions of his estate to collateral relatives. The evidence shewed that, at the time of the making of the second will, the defendant was suffering from certain insane delusions as to the relations existing between his wife and son, and that the disposition of his estate made by the second will was affected by such delusions:—Held, that the decree of the Judge of Probate, admitting the second will to probate must be set aside, and the will declared inoperative and void. The existence of the delusion being established, the burden rested upon the parties setting up the second will to shew that it was made during a lucid interval. The objection that important testimony had been given by the wife and son, who were interested parties, lost the force that it would otherwise have had, where their testimony was corroborated in all essential particulars by disinterested witnesses. The provision of the Witnesses and Evidence Act, R. S. N. S., 5th series, c. 107, s. 16, excluding parties from giving evidence of dealings, transactions, or agreements with the decensed on the trial of any issue joined, or on any inquiry arising in any suit, action, or other proceeding in any court of justice, &c, has no application to an investigation of this kind as to questions of testamentary capacity, In re Farquiharson Estate, 33 N. Evidence—Delusions—Undue Influence—Onus—Certificate of Physician—Costs.]—The best evidence of testamentary capacity is that which arises from rational acts, and where the testatrix herself, without assistance, drew up and executed a rational will, medical evidence that she was mentally incapable of so doing will be rejected. Where one who benefits by a will procures it to be prepared without the intervention of any faithworthy witness, or any one capable of giving independent evidence as to the testator's intention and instructions, it will be regarded with suspicion, and its invalidity presumed, and the onus is on the party propounding it to clearly establish it. Where a physician improperly gives a certificate as to testamentary incapacity of his patient, it should not on that ground alone be rejected as evidence, if otherwise admissible, but the circumstances will affect the weight that should be attached thereto. Observations upon delusions and unden influence—Held, on the facts, that the will of the testatrix was valid, but that the codicil was obtained by undue influence, and probate thereof was refused. In the unusual circumstances the Court made no order as to costs. McHugh v. Dooley, 10 B. C. R. 537.

Insane Delusion.]—F. in 1890 executed a will providing generally for his wife and making his son residuary legatee. In 1897 he revoked this will and executed another by which the provision for his wife was reduced, but still leaving sufficient for her support; the son was given half the residue, and the testator's daughter the other half; his wife was appointed executrix and guardian of the children. Prior to the execution of the last will F. had frequently accused his wife and son of an abominable crime, for which there was no foundation, had banished the son from his house, and treated his wife with violence. After its execution he was for a time placed in a lunatic asylum. On proceedings to set aside this will for want of testamentary capacity in F.:—Held, reversing the judgment in 33 N. S. Reps. 261, Sedgewick, J., dissenting, that the provision made by the will for the testator's wife and son, and the appointment of the former as executrix and guardian, were inconsistent with the Proof of Insanity - Evidence.] - In order to avoid a deed or will on the ground of insanity, it is necessary to look first at the instrument itself and its provisions in order to see the mental condition of the maker; and if these provisions are such as a wise and just man would make in the like case, the Judge, unless there is irrefutable proof of insanity, should treat the instrument as valid. 2. The testimony of witnesses who did not see the testator for a long time before his death, and knew nothing of his mental faculties at the time when he made his will, has no significance, and cannot be a part of the chain of facts which constitute the general proof of insanity, unless it is sufficient in itself to annul the will, especially if there is medical testimony expressly contradicting it. Hotte v. Birubin, O. R. 25 S. C. 275.

Senile Dementia — Insane delusions — Comprehension of terms of will—Attack on will by person accepting benefit—Costs. Mc-Garrigle v. Simpson, 1 O. W. R. 685.

Spiritual Adviser—Onus of Proof.]
The influence of a person standing in a specially confidential relation to a testator (in the present case the spiritual adviser and confessor) may lawfully be exerted to obtain a will or legacy in his favour, so long as the testator thoroughly understands what he is doing and is a free agent, and the burden of proof of undue influence lies upon those who assert it; but, if the person who obtains the benefit takes part in the actual drawing of the will, the onus is cast upon him of shewing the righteousness of the transaction. Collins V. Kitroy, 21 Occ. N. 230, 1 O. L. R. 503.

Unsustained Charges of Fraud—Costs. Taylor v. Delaney, 1 O. W. R. 208, 409.

VI. WIDOW'S ELECTION.

Evidence of Election — Ignorantia Juris.]—A testator left to his wife all his personal estate absolutely, and his real estate for life or so long as she remained his widow, subject to which he devised his lands in specific parcels to his sons, and died in 1889. After his death his widow remained in possession of the land and supported the children, and built an addition to the house, and married again in 1891. She and her husband in 1893 took a lease of the property from the executors, to expire when the eldest son came of age. On this latter event happening in 1899, his purcel of land was conveyed to him by the executors, who then granted a new lease of the rest of the land to the second husband which was now current:—Held, that the widow was put by the will to her election:—Held, also, that, though there was no positive evidence that the widow knew she and a right to elect between the will and her dower, yet, on the principle ignorantia juris neminem excusat, she must be held to have made her election in favour of the will. Reynolds v. Palmer, 21 Occ. N. 78, 32 O. R. 431

VII. VALIDITY OF CONDITIONS.

Charitable Bequest — Validity—Application of executors for direction of Court—Question covered by authority. Re Rose, 6 O. W. R. 937.

Conditional Gift—Charitable Bequest—Fulfilment of Condition — Procuring like Sum.]—Testator left a legacy of $20,000 to the Corporation of the town of Windsor to assist in building and maintaining a hospital for the sick, on condition that the town should procure a like sum by a tax on the clizens, or from private donations or otherwise, to be added to this bequest. There was a gift over to another legatee, if the town, within seven years after the decease of testator, "fails to raise" the said additional sum. The sum of $6,000 was raised from private donations, and the balance of $14,000 was procured by grant from the Provincial Government:—Held, that the condition in the will was compiled with, and the town corporation were entitled to be paid the legacy. In re Paysant, 23 Occ. N. 246.

Devise — Restraint upon Alienation — Validity— Summary Application to Determine — Rule 938 — Scope of.] — A testator devised lands to his sons, subject to a restraint upon alienation. The sons, desiring to mortgage the lands devised, applied under Rule 938 for a determination of the question whether the restraint was valid:—Held, that Rule 938 gives no authority to determine such a question. In re Martin, 25 Occ. N. 18, S. O. L. R. 638, 4 O. W. R. 429.

Legacy—Religious Liberty—Public Policy—Restrictions as to Marriage—Education—Exclusion from Succession.]—In the Province of Quebec the English law governs on the subject of restamentary dispositions; and, therefore, in that province, a testator may validly impose as a condition of a legacy to his children and grandchildren, that marriages of the children should be celebrated according to the rites of any church recognized by the laws of the province, and that the grandchildren should be educated according to the teachings of such church, and may also exclude from benefit under his will any of his children marriage outrary to its provisions and grandchildren born of the forbidden marriages, or who may not have been educated as directed. Judgment noted in 21 Occ. N. 392 affirmed. Renaud v. Lamothe, 22 Occ. N. 357, 32 S. C. R. 357.

Restraint on Alienation — Precutory Condition—Substitution—Heirs.]—'There may be a restraint upon alienation in a testamentary dispasition, even where the testator has not used prohibitive terms, and has only expressed a simple wish, as long as there is no doubt as to his intention. 2. A restraint upon alienation constitutes a substitution, if it appears that the testator has made it in the interest of a person for whom he designs the property of which he forbids the alienation. 3. The restraint upon alienation, unless in favour of some of the presumptive heirs of Restraint on Alienation—Time Limitation.—A devisee of real estate under a will was restrained from selling or incumbering it for a period of twenty-five years after the testator's death:—Held, that, as the restraint, if general, would have been void, the limitation as to the time did not make it valid. Blackburn v, McCallum, 23 Occ. N. 133, 33 S. C. R. 65.

Galbraith V. Hudsan's Bay Co., 7 B. C. R. 431.

Destruction before Delivery—Fire—Risk of Workman.]—A workman who undertakes to make repairs to a house and who furnishes materials, although the quantity of the materials, and therefore the price of the work, cannot be ascertained until the work is finished, can claim nothing from the owner of the house, if it is destroyed, before the completion and delivery of the work, by a fire which is not attributable to the fault of the owner. Order for—County Court Judge—Appeal —Prohibition — Title to Land,]—There is no appeal from the order of a County Court Judge upon a summary application of a purchaser at a sherif's sale, for a writ of possession. If such an order were made without jurisdiction, prohibition would be the remedy. Upon such an application the Judge is not trying the title to lands, but is merely determining as a matter of discretion whether the purchaser should have possession. Such an application may be heard by the Judge of another district designated under s, 12 of c, 9 of the Nova Scotia statures of 1880 to act in the place and stead of the Judge of the district in which the lands lie. In re Gough, 21 Occ. N. 92.

Irregularities — Affidavit — Service.]—
The omission to describe the person making the affidavit for a fiat for a writ of revendication, and the failure to serve a copy of the affidavit on the defendant, or leave it for him at the office of the Court, within three days, do not constitute fatal irregularities in the procedure, Haddad v. Costs.)—In an action between lessor and lessee, the plaintiff will be allowed, upon paying costs of motion, to add the words "summary procedure" to the writ and copy thereof. Cusson v. Vaillantcourt, 5 Q. P. R. SS.

County Court Summons — Mistake in —Statute of Limitations — County Court Appeal.]—In the notice at the end of a County court summons the name of R, L. was by mistake inserted instead of that of the plaintiff. The plaintiff signed judgment by default for want of an appearance and plea, issued a writ of inquiry, and gave notice of the execution thereof, when the defendants took out a summons calling upon him to shew cause why the writ of inquiry, interlocutory judgment, and the writ and the service thereof, should not be set aside. At the return of the summons the plaintiff applied for leave to amend the writ of summons by inserting the plaintiff applied for leave to amend the writ of summons the plaintiff applied for leave to amend the writ of summons by inserting the plaintiff applied for heave to amend the writ of summons by inserting the plaintiff applied for heave to reserve the same, when amended. This application the Judge of the County Court refused, although the Statute of Limitations would be a bar to the issuing of a new writ, and allowed that of the defendants. On appeal:—Held, that the amendment should have been allowed and an order made for the reservice of the writ as amended. Semble, that an appeal will lie from the decision of a County Court Judge on a point of law, even though the same does not arise at or out of the trial of an action. Stevent v. Canadian Pactife R. W. Co., 20 Oce. N. 88, 35 N. B. Reps. 115.

Description of Defendant — Company —Incorporation — Exception to Form — Costs. — Where the company defendant is described in the writ of summons as a "corps politique et incorporê" when it is not an incorporated body at all, as it appears from the statute creating it, an exception & Informe on this ground will not lie when the company fails to prove that it suffers a prejudice by being so described. 2. A motion to amend the writ by striking out the words objected to, will be granted. 3. No costs will be allowed on either proceeding. Perrault v. Liverpool and London and Globe Ins. Co., 4 Q. P. R. 395.

the form, and is subject to the formalities of art. 164, C. P., as to the time for giving notice, etc. Pizzutó v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 3 Q. P. R. 471.

Service.]—If the plaintiff obtains leave to have his writ regularly signed by the prothonotary, and such signature is not affixed in open Court, he cannot foreclose the defendant from pleading without having first served such amendment upon him. Beauchamp v. Gourre, 4 Q. P., R. 201.

Style of Cause — Irregularity or Nullity.—J. S., trading under the name of the British Columbia Furniture Company, commenced an action in such name in respect of a promissory note. A summons under Order XIV. having been dismissed on the ground that one person cannot sue in a firm name, the plaintiff obtained an order amending the style of cause:—Held, that the writ was not a nullity and that the irregularity was properly amended. British Columbia Furniture Co., v. Tuguell, 7 B. C. R. 361.

Substitution of Defendants.]—Where the plaintiff has sued the defendants as a corporation, he cannot, after the filing of an exception to the form, move to amend his writ by substituting for his designation of the defendants, the names of the members of the so-called corporation, which is in reality a partnership. Lambe v. Thompson S. S. Line, 4 Q. P. R. 161.

II. INDORSEMENT.

Action on Bond - Special Indorsement -Necessity for — Unliquidated Damages— Costs.]—The defendants appealed to a Su-preme Court Judge in Chambers from the order of an examiner under the Collection Act, committing him to gaol, and gave a bond in the sum of $61.42 required by s. 32 of the Act, conditioned personally to appear be-fore the Judge on the hearing of the appeal, and to surrender himself to prison in case of an adjudication of imprisonment. The of an adjudication of imprisonment. appeal was heard and dismissed, and the adjudication below confirmed, and for an alleged breach of the condition of the bond by the defendant in not surrendering himself to prison, an action was commenced on the bond against the defendant and his sureties for the penalty of $61.42, by the issue of a general writ of summons. The defendants, before appearing, moved to set the writ and service aside, on the grounds (a) that be-ing for a debt or liquidated demand the writ should have been specially indorsed under Order 3, Rule 5, and (b) that the writ in any event should have been endorsed with the usual claim for costs under Order 3, Rule 6: -Held, dismissing the motion with costs, that the claim was not a debt or liquidated demand for money, but was one in respect to which damages must be assessed. Hennigar v. Brine (No. 2), 24 Occ. N. 144.

Address of Plaintiffs — Amendment.]
—Where the plaintiffs sue as trustees for a corporation, it is not necessary to indorse on the writ the addresses of the individual plaintiffs. The plaintiffs sued as trustees of the Standard Life Assurance Company, and their address was indorsed on the writ as "Edinburgh, Scotiand!"—Held, insufficient address, but, as there was nothing misleading in their address, leave was given to amend by staring the place of business of the company. Dundas v. Mckenzie, 10 B, C, R, 174.

III. INTITULING.

Municipal Election — Confestation of — Quo Warranto,]—The fact that a writ of summons, to which is annexed a petition to set aside a municipal election, pursuant to the charter of the city of Mourteal, is intituled "writ of quo warranto," does not invalidate the petition, Charbonneau v. Roys. 3 Q. P. R. 303.

IV. RENEWAL.

Ex Parte Order — Withholding material evidence — Statute of Limitations. Langley v. Costigan, 5 O. W. R. 147.

Grounds for — Sufficiency of—Statute of Limitations.]—An ex parte order for the renewal of a writ of sumanous on the ground of inability to discover the defendant's place of residence having been made, it was shewn on a motion to set aside such order that the defendant had never changed his place of residence, and that it could readily be ascertained from the directory:—Held, that the order should not be set aside, the local Muster who made the exparte order having been satisfied as to the efforts made to effect such service, and nothing having been withheld from him; despite the fact that, but for the existence of the writ, the ordinary period of limitation would have expired. Howland v. Dominion Bank, 15 P. R. 56, and Mair v. Cameron, 18 F. R. 484, distinguished. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Tennant, 23 Occ. N. 202, 5 O. L. R. 524, 2 O. W. R. 277, 398.

Service — Rule 132.]—The time allowed for renewal of a writ of summons is, upon the proper construction of Rule 132, to be reck-caed inclusive of the date of issue or of a former renewal. Black v. Green, 15 C. B. 262, 3 C. L. R. 38, and Anon, 11 W. R. 293, 32 L. J. N. S. Ex. S8, 7 L. T. N. S. T. 18, followed. Where the original writ of summons was issued on the 5th November, 1898, and was renewed on the 4th November, 1899, the renewal ran out on the 3rd November, 1900, and service thereafter was of no effect. Laird v. King, 21 Occ. N. 34, 162; 19 P. R. 307; 1 O. L. R. 51.

Statute of Limitations — Ex Parte Order—Master in Chambers—Local Judge.]—
The Master in Chambers has jurisdiction to rescind an order made on the ex parte application of the plaintiff by a local Judge for the renewal of a writ of summons, if material evidence has, even unintentionally, been withheld. Such an order was rescinded where on the ex parte application the facts that the writ had expired and that the Statute of Limitations had run against the claim, were not brought to the notice of the local Judge. Williams v. Harrison, 24 Occ. N. 24, 6 O. L. R. 685, 2 O. W. R. 1061.

V. RETURN,

Dismissal for Default of Notice Deposit of Copp—Time.] — When a writ has not been returned, the defendant, in order to have the action dismissed for default, must not only give the plaintiff a notice within three days from the expiration of the time allowed for appearance, but must also deposit in the record office his copy of the process within the same three days. Cofé v.
Corporation d'Irlande, 4 Q. P. R. 123.

VI. SERVICE.

Addresses of Defendants — Omission— Defendant residing out of Ontario— Setting aside writ — Nullity. State Savings Bank v. Columbia Iron Works, 6 O. L. R. 358, 2 O. W. R. 733.

Balliff.—Wron District.—Amendment.]—A writ of summons addressed to the balliffs of a certain district, and executed by a balliff of another district, may, even after the lodging of an exception to the form founded upon such irregularity, be amended by addressing it to the balliffs of the district in which it is desired to serve it. Houle v. Paquet, Q. R. 20 S. C. 297, 4 Q. P. R. 329.

Company — Head office removed from province — Substituted service, Gold Run (Klondike) Mining Co. v. Canadian Gold Mining Co., 5 O. W. R. 411.

Deceased Defendaxt—Appearance,]—The defendant having been sued by the plaintiff, there was filed in the defendant's name an appearance and an exception to the form, alleging that the defendant died before the service of process, and that the service was irregular:—Held, that the plaintiff could not have served the defendant, who was dead, and for the same reason an appearance and defence could not be illed in the defendant's name. The parties were dismissed out of Court without costs. Madore v. Graham, Q. R. 18 S. C. 129.

Delay in—Death of Sovereign—Nullity.]
—A writ of summons issued in the lifetime of her late Majesty and in her name, but served and reported after her death, is not on that account a nullity, and if a second action for the same cause is berun in the name of the King, a plea that the first action is still pending is a good plea. Ryan v. Fortier, 3 Q. P. R. 526.

Domicil—Service on Attorneys—Certificate—Deposit—Execution—Affidavita.]—The service of a writ of summons and declaration upon a defendant at his last known domicil and place of residence is regular, although the same is no longer his ordinary residence. 2. Under the circumstances of this case the plaintiff's motion for leave to serve the writ and declaration upon the defendant's attorneys ad litem, was granted. 3. A copy of the prothonotary's certificate as to the deposit made with a declinatory exception must be served upon the plaintiff. 4. Rule 47 of the Rules of Practice of the Superior Court, regarding affidavits, applies only to special demands, and not to plendings. Higginson v. Reid, 5 Q. P. R. 394.

Foreign Corporation — Rule 150 —
"Carrying on business in Ontario"—Service on general manager in Ontario. Burnett v. General Accident Assurance Corporation, 6 C. W. R. 144.

Foreign Corporation — Officer Temporarily in Province — Setting Aside Service — Status of Applicant.] — A writ of summons describing the defendant company as "doing business in the Province of British Columbia" was served upon J. G. McLaren, the manager of the defendant company, who was passing through British Columbia en route to Dawson. The company were incorporated in England, and not registered or licensed in British Columbia: — Held, that the service was irregular. Also that it is not necessary that a person who has been served with a writ should be a real defendant to entitle him to apply to set it aside. Fall v, Klondyke Bonanza, Limited, 9 B. C. R. 493.

Foreign Defendants — Service on Traveller—Sale of Goods — Contract — Completion—Goods Delivered and Refused—Property of Defendant in Jurisdiction.] — In a suit against a foreign commercial partnership, service of the writ of summons made upon a travelling salesman of the partnership, whose powers are limited to taking orders at prices furnished to him by his employers, is not sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Courts of the Province of Quebec. 2. A contract for the purchase of goods is complete at the place where the order is accepted by the vendor. 3. The presence in the Province of Quebec of a package of goods bought by the plaintiff from the defendants, and refused by him, which package the defendants 'traveller is charged to take back if it is untouched and uninjured, and which he alleges is not so untouched. does not constitute property in the jurisdiction sufficient to give to the Courts of the Province of Quebec jurisdiction over the defendants. Malouf v. Zech, 5 Q. P. R. 153.

Foreign Insurance Company—Agent—Power of Attorney—Cause of Action,]—An English insurance company, who had carried on business in Canada, and whose head office was at Toronto, by two powers of attorney had appointed its general agent at Toronto attorney to receive process under both R. S. O. 1807 c, 203 s, e86, and R. S. C. c, 124, s. 13, transferred its Canadian business to another company, and closed its Canadian offices, but the deposit under the Dominion Act had not been released, and neither of the powers of attorney had been cancelled. On a notion to set aside the service of a writ of summons, which was accepted by solicitors as if served on the Toronto agent of the company, subject to the right to move against it, on the ground that the company was not within the Jurisdiction:—Held, that a writ of summons upon a policy issued in Quebec in respect of a loss upon property in Quebec was properly served upon the agent named as attorney at Toronto under Rule 139, and that the Court in Ontario, therefore, had jurisdiction to entertain the action. Semble, that the power of attorney required to be filed under R. S. C. 124, s. 13, is to receive service of process in any suit instituted in any province of Canada in respect of any liability incurred in such province, and not in respect of any liability incurred in clanada. Foreign Unincorporated Voluntary Association—Parties—Incapacity — Proper Time to Raise Question.]—The right to maintain an action or the liability to be sued can only be by or against persons as individuals, or as a corporation, or a partnership, or where individuals are carrying on business in a name other than their own, or where they have been given the capacity to own property and to act by agents. A local union of workmen, a purely voluntary association, occupying none of such capacities, are not liable to be sued; and a writ served upon them was therefore set aside. Taff Vale R. W. Co. v. Amaigamated Society of Railway Servants, [1801] A. C. 429, distinguished. Where it clearly appears that the association sued is not an entity, which may be sued by the name it bears, it is more convenient to set aside the service of the writ on a motion made therefor, than to allow the case to proceed to theretor, than to anow the case to proceed to trind with a certainty of its ultimate dismissal. Metallic Rooping Co. of Canada v. Local Union No. 30, Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' international Association, 23 Occ. N. 152, 5 O. L. R. 424, 2 O. W. R. 188, 266, 819, 844, Heirs of Deceased—Infants—Curator—Renanciation—Vacant Succession.] — The general provision of art. 135, C. C. P., authorizing service upon the heirs of a person deceased within the previous six months, without mentioning their names or residences, by leaving the document for them at the former domicil of the deceased, does not apply to heirs who are not capable of pleading, e.g., minors, and who, moreover, at the time of the service were not actually interested, their tutrix having renounced the succession of the deceased in their behalf. 2. The fact that the curator to the vacant succession may have had knowledge of the service of the writ and made no objection, cannot be taken as equivalent to a service nor avail to support an exparte judgment obtained without legal service. Turcotte v. Dansereau, 27 S. C. R. 583, followed. Marion v. Brien dit Desrochers, Q. R. 23 S. C. 45, 52.

In Ontario on Defendant Resident Abroad—Appearance—Plea to jurisdiction—— Dismissal of action—Frivolous or vexatious action — Master in Chambers — Rule 261. Delap v. Codd, 2 O. W. R. 780, 849.

Individual Defendant — Partnership Name—Place of Business—Review.] — Held, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that an individual carrying on business alone under a partnership name may be served at the place where he carries on such business by leaving copies of the writ of summons and declaration with a grown-up person left in charge of his office, and such individual, if he is not prejudiced thereby, cannot by inscription in review, demand the setting aside of a judgment entered for default by alleging that the service is void. Bourdon v. Bradshow, Q. R. 18 S. C. 388.

Irregularities — Jurisdiction — Foreign lands — Confirming proceedings — Conditional appearance. Saskatchewan Land and Homestead Co. v. Leadley, 2 O. W. R. 745, 850, 917, 944, 1075, 1112.

Irregularity—Dismissal of Action.]—An action will not be dismissed upon exception to the form because the writ, addressed to the bailiffs of the district of Beauharnois, has been served upon the defendant at Montreal by a bailiff of the district of Montreal, no prejudice being alleged or proven. Bromwell v. O'Farrell, 5 Q. P. R. 85.

Irregularity — Re-service — Exception to Form—Costa.]—A writ of summons and the declaration annexed thereto irregularly served upon the defendant, may be regularly served again upon him after the filing of an exception to the form complaining of the illegality of the first service, provided that the second service is made within six months of the date of the writ, and in that case the plaintiff will be ordered to pay the costs of an exception to the form. Alexander v. Helfenberg, 5 Q. P. R. 246.

Nullity—Re-service.]—Service of a writ of summons if made otherwise than upon the defendant personally, or at his place of domicil, or at the place of his ordinary residence, or at his place of business, is absolutely a nullity, and the Judge cannot allow the plaintiff to re-serve, because the service is not only irregular, but non-existent. Hudon v. Jonca, 3 Q. P. R. 524.

On Foreign Corporation — Service in Jurisdiction — Agent.] — A writ of summons for service within the jurisdiction was, with the service thereof, set aside, where it appeared that the defendant was a foreign corporation, having no agent within the jurisdiction who could be served. Ehman v. New Hamburg Mg. Co., 4 Terr. L. R. 363.

On Insurance Company — Power of attorney — Removal of office from province. Armstrong v. Lancashire Fire Ins. Co., 3 O. L. R. 395, 2 O. W. R. 599.

Out of Jurisdiction—Action to Reacind Purchase of Shares.]—An action to rescind the purchase from the defendant of shares in an incorporated company on the ground of misrepresentation, is not an action within Order XI., so as to enable the plaintiff to obtain an ex juris writ against the defendant. Davies v. Dunn, 21 Occ. N. 364, 8 B. C. R. 68.

Out of Jurisdiction—Cause of action—Alimony—Support of children — Creditor—Fraudulent conveyance—Action to set aside—Parties—Grantor—Action for alimony in another province—Stay of proceedings on claim for alimony in Ontario. Eames v. Eames, 3 O. W. R. 42, 65, 351, 377, 409.

Out of Jurisdiction—Cause of action— Contract—Breach — Discretion — Forum non conveniens. Baxter v. Faulkner, 6 O. W. R. 198.

Out of Jurisdiction—Cause of Action—Conversion—Rule 162 (e).] — The plaintiff sued two defendants, one of whom, O, lived in the Province of Quebec, for conversion of a picture. The other defendant, W, as the plaintiff stated, in breach of an agreement with the plaintiff in Ontario, delivered the picture to O. in Quebec, and O, wrongfully held it there. O. stated on affidavit that W. pledged the picture to him in Quebec, lawfully and in good faith, for money lent, and denied having any other dealings as to the picture, or any dealings whatever in Ontario:—Held, that the cause of action, if any, against O, did not come within the terms

Out of Jurisdiction—Contract — Money had and Received—Place of Payment.]—The defendants, a foreign company, contracted with the plaintiffs, a Victoria firm, to carry coal from Seattle to Alaska, and were paid the amount of the contract price. When the coal arrived at Dyea, the defendants demanded and collected from the plaintiffs' agent an additional sum for taking the coal in lighters from Skagway to Dyea. The defendants' agent promised to repay the amount in Victoria:—Held, setting aside an ex juris writ, that the claim for this amount really arose out of the contract, and therefore the Court had no jurisdiction. Shallcross v. Alaska S. S. Co., S B. C. R. 203.

Out of Jurisdiction—Contract—Place of Performance—Quebec Law—Discretion.]—An agreement between the plaintiff and defendants provided for the purchase by the defendants, who resided and carried on business in Montreal, in the Province of Quebec, from the plaintiff, of certain plant and machinery and plantill, of certain plant and machinery and stock in trade of a business carried on by him at Montreal. The agreement was signed by the plantiff in Toronto, in the Province of Ontario, and afterwards by the defendants in Montreal. The plantiff sued for the price of the goods referred to in the latter part of the agreement, alleging that he had elected to sell the goods to the defendants, and had notified them of his willingness to do so, whereupon they became liable to pay him the price:—Held, that the contract was made in Montreal, and the obligations arising out of it were to be governed by the law of Quebec, according to which the domicil of the debtor is the place of payment, and therefore the action was not founded on a breach within Ontario of a contract to be performed within Ontario, and service of the writ of summons out of Ontario should not be allowed: Rule 162 (e). The obligation to pay did not arise directly from provisions of the agreement, but in order to make it complete there must have been an election to sell, and notice thereof to the defendants, and notice of the election was given by letter received by the defendants in Montreal. A proper discretion was exercised in setting aside an order allowing service of the writ out of Ontario. Comber v. Leyland, [1898] A. C. 524, referred to. Phillips v. Malone, 22 Occ. N. 32, 3 O. L. R. 47.

Out of Jurisdiction—Contract—Place of Performance—Option Exercised through Post Office—Terms — Acceptance — Onus.] — An appeal from the decision of Meredith, C.J., 22 Occ. N. 32, 3 O. L. R. 47, was dismissed with costs. Held, per Falconbridge, C.J., that if the agreement of the 1st May, 1899, was complete, the contract was made in Quebec; but, if it was to be completed by the subsequent acts of the parties, there was no authority to the plaintiff to use the post office as a menns of communication. Per Street, J.—The plaintiff might have notified the defendants that he desired them to become the purchasers of the goods, but he had no right to prescribe the dates at which the defendants should pay for them. Their letter was only a proposal to take the goods upon the terms proposed therein, requiring an acceptance by the defendants to make it a complete contract, the onus of shewing which was on the plaintiffs, and was not satisfied. Philips v. Masone, 22 Occ. N. 159, 3 O. L. R. 492, 1 O. W. R. 200.

Out of Jurisdiction-Contract of Hiring - Breaches within and without Ontario.] - The defendant was employed by the plaintiffs, who resided and carried on business in Ontario, to act as their traveller, at an agreed-on remuneration, in selling and taking orders for their goods over a prescribed route to British Columbia and return, his duties on such re-turn requiring him to call at a number of places in Ontario, to make his report to the plaintiffs, and return his samples. After entering on the performance of the contract, and while in British Columbia, he wrote resigning his position. The plaintiffs refused to accept his resignation, and after allowing a sufficient time to elapse for the performance of the contract, they brought an action in Ontario for breach thereof: — Held, by the Master in Chambers, dismissing an application to set aside an order for service of the writ of summons out of Ontario, that there was a breach of the contract within Ontario for which the plaintiffs were entitled to sue. On appeal to a Judge in Chambers, this order was varied by limiting the action to breaches in Ontario; but reserving to the plaintiffs the right to bring actions for breaches which occurred out of Ontario, R. J. Lovell-Co. v. Coles, 22 Occ. N. 165, 3 O. L. R. 291.

Out of Jurisdiction—Contract—Sale of goods—Place of payment. Burlington Canning Co. v. Campbell, 6 O. W. R. 331.

Out of Jurisdiction—Cause of Action, where Arising—Contract—Conditional Appearance.]—The contract was not in writing, and a writ had been issued in the Province of Ontario and served in Manitoba, on affidavits setting forth that the contract was to be performed by payment in Ontario:—Held, that this satisfied what is required by Rule 1246, and, although defendants by affidavit disputed and said that the contract was made and to be performed in Manitoba, yet the issue could not and should not be determined in a summary way on affidavits, but the proper course for the defendant was under the Ontario Rule 173, providing for conditional appearance, favouring the former equitable practice, which was to enter such appearance and raise the want of jurisdiction by plea or demurrer. Canadian Radiator Co. v. Cuthbertson, 5 O. W. R. 66, 9 O. L. R. 126.

Goo'ls-Place of Payment.] - The plaintiffs sued for breach of contract and for goods sold and delivered. Defendants carried on busi-ness and had their head office in Montreal, and the plaintiffs carried on business in The defendants at Montreal gave to a travelling agent of the plaintiffs an order for goods to be delivered f. o. b. at Toronto: -Held, that the acceptance of the order by post was within the contemplation of the parties, and the contract must be taken to have been made when the plaintiff's letter of acceptance was posted at Toronto; and that the property in the goods passed to the defendants upon a delivery being made at To-ronto, and a breach of the contract by nonacceptance was a breach within Ontario of an obligation to be performed within Ontario, The Chief Justice of the Common Pleas (delivering the judgment of the Divisional Court), expressed the view that the omission from the Ontario Rule 162 of the words "according to its terms," which are in the corresponding English Rule, leaves it open, in construing the contract in order to determine whether it is to be performed within Ontario, to apply the rule of law that the debtor must seek out his creditor to pay him, unless the application of it is inconsistent unless the application of it is inconsistent with the terms of the contract. Phillip v. Malone, 3 O. L. R. 47, 492, 1 O. W. R. 290, followed. Blackley (William). Limited v. Elite Costumes Co., 4 O. W. R. 417, Athrmed, 5 O. W. R. 57, 25 C. L. T. 92, 9 O. L. R. 57,

Out of Jurisdiction-Foreign Company -Transfer of Assets in Ontario to Ontario Company-Defence, 1 — On a motion to set aside a writ of summons, the order permitting service out of the jurisdiction, and the service thereunder, in an action brought in the Province of Ontario, by shareholders resident in the Province of Nova Scotia of a loan company incorporated in and with its head office and assets (real estate mortgages), except $1,200 in mortgages on land in Ontario, in the Province of Quebec, against the loan company and its liquidators, resident in the Province of Quebec, and a loan company incorporated in and with its head office in the Province of Ontario, to set aside an agreement transferring the assets of the Quebec company to the Ontario company, and making the shareholders of the Quebec company shareholders in the Ontario company, and for distribution of the proceeds of the assets, etc., on the ground that the Courts in Ontario had no jurisdiction and that the case did not fall within any of the clauses of Rule 162 :- Held, that the action was not brought with reference to real estate in the same sense as Henderson v. Bank of Hamilton, 23 S. C. R. 716, and similar cases were; and that the case fell within Con. Rule 162, clauses (g) and (h). Motion dismissed without prejudice to defendants setting up want of jurisdiction as a defence.

Out of Jurisdiction — Foreigner — Notice,]—The question in what circumstances and to what extent provisions in the Rules under the English Judicature Act are to be held incorporated with the Judicature Ordinance discussed. English Order XI, (Marginal Rules 64:70) is not in force in the Territories. The Judicature Ordinance, 1893, s. 32, authorizes an order for the service of a writ of summons ex juris, though the party to be served is not a British subject, and the other should provide for service of the writ of summons, not of a notice thereof. Judgment of Scott, J., 4 Terr. L. R. 322, 20 Occ. N. 108, on this and other points, affirmed. Conrad v. Alberta Mining Co., 21 Occ. N. 102, 4 Terr. L. R. 412.

Out of Jurisdiction—Notice—Company Defendant.]—The defendant company were incorporated by Act of the Parliament of Canada, and had their head office at Winnipeg. The plaintiffs obtained ex parte an order giving them leave to issue a writ of summons against the defendant company and to serve a notice of the same upon the company in Winnipeg. The notice having been served, the defendant company moved to set aside the service as irregular:—Held, that Order XI., Rule 4, did not apply. The defendant company were not a foreign company, and therefore the writ and not a notice thereof should have been served. The service of the notice was set aside with costs. Manley v. Great West Life Assurance Co., 23 Occ. N. 205.

Out of Jurisdiction-Order Before Accion-Parties-Causes of Action-Joinder.]-The proper practice under the Rules as they stand (Rules of 1897, Nos. 120, 128, 164) is to obtain, before the issue of the writ of summons, an order fixing the time for appearance to be inserted in the writ proposed to be issued, and allowing it to be served out of the jurisdiction. Where the affidavit filed on an application for such an order shewed that the cause of action alleged against three of the defendants, one of whom lived in Ontario, was the causing an information to be laid against the plaintiff in Quebec, and the plaintiff to be arrested upon a warrant in Ontario by the fourth defendant and taken to Quebec and prosecuted there upon a criminal charge of which he was acquitted, and that against the fourth defendant, the unnecessary and unjustifiable handcuffing of the plaintiff in Ontario:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to join the fourth defendant with the other three, the causes of action being separate and having nothing to do with each other. Held, also, that, as one of the three remaining defendants lived in Ontario, and it was alleged that he joined in the laying of the information, he was a proper party to the action, within the meaning of Rule 162 (g), and an order should be made for the issue and service of the writ upon the other two in Quebec, Croft v. King, [1893] 1 Q. B. 419, followed. But the order should contain a clause providing that in case the action should be dismissed as against the defendant in Ontario, the plaintiff should consent to its dismissal as against the other defendants as well. The legislature of the Territories has authority under the powers conferred by the N. W. T. Act to make such provisions. Section 32 of Ordinance 5 of 1894 (amending J. O. 1898). relating to small debt procedure, provides:
"The summons shall be returnable: (c) "The summons shall be returnable: (c) Where the defendant resides in any place in Canada outside the Territories, or in the United States of America, at the expiration 20 days from the service thereof; (d) Where the defendant resides in any part of the United Kingdom, at the expiration of 30 days from the service thereof; (e) In any of the above cases it shall not be necessary to obtain an order for service out of the jurisdiction. diction :' - Held, that neither an order for leave to issue a writ for service out of the jurisdiction, nor an order for leave to serve such a writ, is necessary under this procedure. Nor is it necessary that a proper case for service out of the jurisdiction should be shewn by the statement of claim; but semble, if a defendant served out of the jurisdiction can shew affirmatively that the action is not one in which service out of the jurisdiction would be allowed under the ordinary practice of the Court, he would be entitled to an order setting aside the service. McCarthy v, Brener, 2 Terr. L, R, 230.

Out of Jurisdiction - Sale of Goods -Out of Jurisdiction — Sale of Goods — Breach of Contract—Place of Performance— Property Passing — Order for Service — Affi-davit—Forum—Discretion.]—The defendants lived in England. One of them, being in Ontario, saw the plaintiffs, who lived in Outario, and it was agreed that the plaintiffs should send samples of their goods to the defendants, which they did. The defendants, after inspection, ordered goods from the plaintiffs, to be shipped to Liverpool, via Leyland line from Boston, delivered f. o. b. vessel, and they were shipped accordingly. There was no evidence as to whether the goods were insured, or if so, by whom, in whose name, and for whose benefit. order was given and the goods shipped in the same way. Before this order was filled the defendants were sued in England for infringement of copyright in respect of a part of the goods, and in consequence returned the goods covered by the second order, and refused to pay for what they so returned:-Held, that the property in the goods passed to the purchasers on the delivery on board the vessel at Boston, and an action would thereupon lie in Ontario, which was the place for payment, for goods sold and delivered. The purchasers were entitled to inspect before accepting, but, even in a case of a sale by sample, prima facie the place of delivery is the place for inspection, and there was nothing in the contract to rebut the presumption; and therefore the action came within Rule 162 (1) (e), being for a breach within Ontario of a con tract to be performed within Ontario; and service of the writ of summons on the defendants out of Ontario was properly allowed. That it was not necessary for the plaintiffs, in obtaining an ex parte order allowing them to serve the defendants abroad, to disclose the facts that the defendants had refused to receive the goods, and returned them to the plaintiffs, and that they were in Ontario at the time of the application, or the facts regarding the copyright, or that the de-fendants had paid for all the goods which they retained. 3. That a proper discretion had been exercised in favour of an Ontario action; it was not a case in which the plaintiffs should be compelled to sue the defendants in England. Atkinson v, Ptimpton, 23 Occ, N. 331, 6 O. L, R. 566, 2 O. W, R. 827, 914.

Out of Jurisdiction — Service on codefendant in jurisdiction—Partnership—Rule 162 (g)—Action "properly brought" in Ontario. Sparrow v. Rice and Barton, 6 O. W. R. 559.

Out of Jurisdiction—Statement of claim — Default judgment — Irregularity—Setting aside. Lovell v. Taylor, 5 O. W. R. 525.

Place of — Office of Firm — Prejudice — Costs:]—The office of a commercial firm in which the defendant is a partner, is not that of the defendant, within the meaning of art. 128, C. P. Nevertheless, the service in this case not having caused prejudice, an exception to the form was dismissed with costs. Patterson v. Levy, 4 Q. P. R. 196.

Place of Business—Domicil—Judge's Order.]—It is only in default of a regular domicil or of an ordinary residence, that a defendant may be served with process at his place of business. 2. In spite of an order of a Judge permitting service at the place of business, upon a pepert of a build to the effect that the domicil of the defendant is closed and unoccupied, an action in which process had been served in accordance with such order will be dismissed upon exception to the form. Soncy v. Electric Printing Co., 5 Q. P. R. 107.

Place of Service—Bailiff—Informality— Exception to Form.]—The service of a writ of summons, addressed to a balliff of the disvict of Saint Francis, upon a defendant in the district of Arthabaska, by a bailiff of the latter district, is not a nullity per se; and an exception to the form will not lie where no prejudice is suffered. Hackett v. Courchenne, Q. R. 19 S. C. 215.

Proof of—Oath—Person Administering— Default Judgment.]—A judgment cannot be obtained by default against a defendant served in another province, if the oath of the person who has signed the report of service has been taken before a notary, instead of before one of the persons designated by art. 137, C. P. Lydon v. Moore, 4 Q. P. R. 169.

Return—Motion for Leave to Make Return—Motion to Dismiss—Costs—Leave to Sue in Forma Pauporis.]— A motion to authorize a plaintiff to return a writ after the time has ervired will be granted with costs of motion of a units the plaintiff. 2. In such case, a motion for congé-défaut, made after a motion for leave to return after time expired, should be dismissed without costs. 3. Leave to sue in formá pauperis will not be granted by the Superior Court when the action is more properly one for the Circuit Court (e.g., alimony.) Boiteau v. Boiteau, 5 Q. P. R. 301.

Return without Balliff's Report of Service—Irregularity—Amendment.] — An action will not be dismissed upon exception to the form because the report of service does not appear upon the writ, if this irregularity is afterwards remedied: no prejudice having been caused, the exception to the form will be dismissed with costs against the plaintiff. Sourcy v. Forget, 5 Q. P. R. 154.

Substituted Service — Extra-procincial Company—Affidavit.—New Material on Application to Discharge Order—Discretion.]—An affidavit leading to an order for substituted service is a jurisdictional affidavit. An affidavit leading to an order for substituted service, under s. 130 of the Companies Act, on an extra-provincial company liensed to do business in British Columbia, should shew clearly that the company is an extra-provincial one licensed to do business in British Columbia, should shew clearly that the company is an extra-provincial one licensed to do business in the province. On an application to set aside an order for substituted service it is discretional with the Judge to allow the plaintiff to read further affidavits esting out facts omitted in the affidavit on which the order was made, and where in the exercise of his discretion he refused leave, the Court on appeal declined to interfere. Centre Star Mining Co, v. Rossland Great Western Mines, Limited, 24 Occ. N. 160, 10 B. C. R. 202.

Substituted Service-Fraud-Foreigner Judgment-Sale of Lands-Title-Leave to Defend.]-In an action by judgment creditors of a company for a declaration that the inof a company for a declaration of dividual defendants were trustees of certain lands for the company and for a sale of such lands and payment of the plaintiffs' claim out of the proceeds, an order was made for substituted service by mail of the writ of summons upon H., one of the defendants upon an affidavit of the plaintiffs' solicitor shewing that the writ had been sent to a certain person for service in Alaska, and exhibiting a letter from that person, giving the name of H.'s employer and certain information about him, but not stating definitely where he was. Proof of service in the way directed by the order having been given, and none of the defendants appearing, judgment was entered for the plaintiffs, and the lands sold thereunder: -Held, that the order for substituted service had been granted on sufficient material. That no fraud on the part of the plaintiffs had been shewn. 3. Following Moore v. Mar-tin, 1 N. W. T. Reps., part 2, p. 48, that service of the writ itself upon H., though a foreigner out of the jurisdiction, was neither a nullity nor irregular. 4. That, although H, had no actual notice of the proceedings, the Court had jurisdiction to deal with his interest in the property, and the title of the purchaser should not be interfered with. 5. But, as H. had disclosed a defence on the merits, he should be let in to defend upon terms, Conrad v. Alberta Mining Co., 20 Occ. N. 108, 21 Occ. N. 102, 4 Terr. L. R.

Substituted Service — Motion to Set Aside — Status of Applicant — Solicitor.] — Where a solicitor who was gerved with the writ of summons for the defendant, under an order for substitutional service, applied in his own name, but on the defendant's behalf, to set aside the service:—Held, that he had no locus standi. The Court will not set aside substitutional service if it appears or can fairly be inferred that the defendant has notice of the proceedings. Semble, that if the solicitor were not acting for or in communication with the defendant, he might have sent back the copy of the writ served, or might, as an officer of the Court have advised the Court that an error had been committed in ordering service upon him; and even a person who is not an officer of the Court may move to set aside the service if he is not an agent. Decision of Master in Chambers, 23 Occ. N. 325, 6 O. L. R. 353, 2 O. W. R. 921, affirmed on different grounds, Taylor v. Taylor, 24 Occ. N. 19, 6 O. L. R. 545, 2 O. W. R. 921,

Time—Dismissal of Action.]—Service of a writ effected more than six months after issue, the writ not having been renewed, is void, and the action will be dismissed upon exception to the form. Langevin v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 4 Q. P. R. 162.

Validity—Bailiff.]—The service of process in an action made by a bailiff of the district where the writ issued, is valid, although the writ is addressed to a bailiff of another district. Lapierre v. Brunct, 6 Q. P. R. 384.

VII. SMALL DEBT PROCEDURE, N. W. T.

Failure to Serve—Alias Writ—Limitation of Actions.]—A writ of summons (under the small debt procedure) had been issued in an action on a debt before the period after which it would become barred by the Limitations Ordinance had expired; it was, however, never served; but after the expiry of the period fixed by the Ordinance an alias writ of summons was issued:—Held, in view of the provisions of Rule 542 of the Judicature Ordinance (C. O. 1898 c. 21), the issue of the alias writ of summons prevented the operation of the Limitations Ordinance, and that therefore, the Ordinance afforded no defence to the action. Curry v. Brotman, 4 Terr. L. R. 369.

Meaning of "Debt"—Claim for Wrongjut Dismissat]—A claim by a servant hir-3, by the month against his master for wrongful dismissal in the middle of the month, does not full within the meaning of the words "all claims and demands for debt" in Rule 602 of the Judicature Ordinance, 1808, and proceedings to recover the same cannot be taken under the small debt procedure. Where, howwer, the plaintiff has brought an action for such a claim under the small debt procedure, and it appears that the defendant has not been in any way prejudiced, the Court or a Judge will, under the power given by Rule 588 direct that the writ of summons and the service thereof shall stand, but that the action shall continue as an action under the ordinary procedure. McNeilly v. Beattie, 20 Occ. N, 292, 4 Terr, L. R. 309.

Place of Entering Suit.]—In a small debt action where the cause of action arises within the district of a deputy clerk, and the defendant resides within the said district, the writ must be issued out of the office of the deputy clerk of the district, and a writ issued by the clerk of the district from his own office will be set aside as irregular. Sharples v. Powell, 20 Occ. N. 291, 4 Terr. L. R. 94.

VIII. SPECIAL INDORSEMENT.

Claims for Work and Labour and Goods Sold—Absence of Express Contract.]—A claim for reasonable remuneration for work and labour, even in the absence of an express contract as to the rate of remuneration, comes within the description of a "debt or liquidated demand," and may be the subject of a special indorsement; and claims for so many days-labour at so much per day and for goods sold and delivered at a nafined price, in the absence of an allegation of an express contract in either case, are in the nature of a quantum meruit for the labour and a quantum valebant for the goods, and, in both cases, equally good as the subject of special indorsements. Graham v. Warwick Gold Mining Co., 37 N. S. Reps. 307.

Company Plaintiffs — Incorporation—Bill of Exchange—Notarial Fees.]—Action to recover the amount of a bill of exchange accepted by the defendant as "Dean & Co." The action was begun by a specially indorsed writ of summons. The defendant applied to set aside the writ on the grounds that the plaintiffs being a foreign corporation, the writ should have disclosed how and where the company were incorporated, and that the plaintiffs, claiming notarrial fees, must proceed in the ordinary way by declaring:—Held, that the writ was good in form. (2) That under s, 57 of the Bills of Exchange Act, the plaintiffs had a right to interest, bank charges, and notarial fees as part of the bill of exchange. Covean Co. v. Dean, 21 Occ. N, 574.

Company Plaintiffs — Incorporation—Clerical Error—Amendment.]—Application to Set aside the writ of summons on the grounds that in the special indorsement the incorporation of the plaintiff company had not been set out, and that the writ was issued in the name of Victoria instead of Edward VII.—Held, that the writ was in good form; (2) that the plaintiff should be allowed to amend under 60 V. c. 24, s. 218 (N.B.), on payment of costs. London House V. Puddington and Merritt, 21 Occ. N. 573.

Company Plaintiffs — Incorporation— Particulars. — A specially indorsed writ of summons issued under 60 V, c. 24 by a foreign company need not aver the incorporation of the company. Particulars of claim under a specially indorsed writ may be attached to the writ. North Packing and Provision Co. V. Merritl, 21 Occ. N. 573.

Covenant.]—An indorsement upon a writ of summons of a claim for principal and interest under a covenant in a mortgage in order to be a good special indorsement within the meaning of Order III., Rule 4, and Order XIV., Rule 1, must allege that the moneys are due under the covenant. British Columbia Land and Investment Agency, Limited v. Cum You, S. B., C. R. 2.

Foreign Judgment—Interest Till Judgment—iquidated Demand.]—A claim for interest "until payment or judgment" is not a claim for a liquidated demand within the meaning of Order II, r. 6, except where the cause of action is in respect to negotiable instruments, in which case the interest is, by s. 57 of the Bills of Exchange Act, deemed to be liquidated damages. Interest claimed under a statute cannot be the subject of special indorsement, unless it is stated in the indorsement under what Act the interest is claimed. A specially indorsed writ should state specifically the amount due, and when a claim is made for the taxed costs of a foreign judgment, the date of the taxation should be stated. Becision in 9 B. C. R. 27, 22 Occ. N. 154, reversed; Martin, J. dissenting, Macauley v. Victoria Yukon Trading Co., 22 Occ. N. 377, 9 B. C. R. 136.

Foreign Judgment — Summary Judgment.]—In an action on a foreign judgment the statement of claim indorsed on the writ

oluntary ciation — Ontario of incordid not allege specifically against whom the judgment was recovered:—Held, that the writ was not specially indorsed; and a motion for aummary judgment was refused. Boyle v. Victoria Yukon Trading Co., 8 B. C. R. 352.

Interest—Summary Judgment — Amendment of Indorsement — Re-service.] — Summons for judgment under Order XIV., in an action for principal and interest due under a covenant in a mortgage. The statement of claim indorsed on the writ, in addition to the claim for principal and interest computed to a certain date previous to issue of writ, contained a claim for interest on the principal until payment or judgment:—Held, such claim for interest was not a subject of special indorsement under Order III., r. 6. Held, also, that where, on an application for judgment under Order XIV, it appears that part of the claim is not the subject of special indorsement, it is not open to the plaintift to obtain an amendment and proceed, but a new summons must be taken out. Where the indorsement of a writ has been amended, redelivery but not re-service is necessary. Pike v. Copley, 22 Occ. N. 218, 9 B. C. R. 62.

Omission of Formal Words — Motion for Summary Judgment,]—A motion for summary judgment under Order XIV. was refused on the ground that the writ of summons was not specially indorsed, the indorsement not being headed with the words "statement of claim." Vancouver Agency v. Quigley, 8 B. C. R. 142.

Promissory Note—"Duly Presented"—Summary Judgment, |—Appeal from an order giving the plaintiffs leave to sign final judgment under Order XIV. The statement of claim indorsed on the writ stated plaintiffs' claim as being on a note dated . . . payable four months after its date to the order of M. L. Wurzburg & Company, at their office. Halifax, N. S., indorsed . . and which said note was duly presented for payment and was dishonoured:—Held, a good special indorsement. Cunard v. Symon-Kaye Syndicate, 27 N. S. Reps. 340. distinguished. Union Bank of Halifax v. Wurzburg & Co., Ltd., 22 Occ. N. 402, 9 B. C. R. 160.

Signature of Plaintiff's Solicitor—Order XIV.]—Summons for judgment under Order XIV. Preliminary objection that the writ was not specially indorsed, in that it was not signed by the plaintiff's solicitor:—Held, that it was not a good special indorsement. Oppenheimer v. Oppenheimer, 21 Occ. N. 576, 8 B. C. R. 145.

IX. OTHER CASES.

Action for Revocation of Letters Probate — Practice — Affidavit verifying indorsement—Citation to custodian of letters— Stay of proceedings. McLagan v, McLagan, (B.C.), 2 W. L. R. 12.

Address of Defendant—Foreign Defendant,]—The address of the defendant is a necessary part of the writ of summons, and in a proper case the writ may be amended by inserting it. But where the address of a foreign defendant was omitted, no explanation of the omission being given, and no cause of action in Ontario against the foreign defendant being shewn, the writ was, on his application, set aside with costs. State Savings Bank v. Columbus Iron Works, 23 Occ. N. 309, 6 O. L. R. 358, 2 O. W. R. 733.

Application to set aside—Irregularity—Intituling of affidavits. Toronto and British Columbia Lumber Co. v. *Moore (B. C.), 2 W. L, R. 239.

Irregularities—Prejudice—Qui Tam Action—Reference to Sovereinn—Name of Printiff.]—In an action qui tam, the defenant cannot set up grounds resulting from irregularities of the plaintiff as long as they do not cause prejudice. 2. The word "us" in the words "suing as well as in his own name as for us" contained in form 3 of the Rules of Practice of the Superior Court is sufficient to designate his Majesty the King. 3. It is not necessary to give all the plaintiff's names, provided he is sufficiently designated in the writ. Ridgeway v. Collier, 5 Q. P. R. 308.

Irregularity — Action in name of next friend—Consent not filed—Application of English Rule—Death of plaintiff—Revivor— Effect on irregularities. Hourston v. Spence (N.W.T.), 2 W. L. R. 343.

Saisie-revendication — Declaration — Filing—Time—Record.]—A writ of summons or of saisie-revendication filed without the original declaration is an absolutely void proceeding, and a defendant, who has appeared in the cause, but who has not pleaded, may take advantage of the nullity at any stage of the cause without having recourse to an exception to the form, and have the action dismissed upon motion to that effect even on the day fixed for hearing; for it such case there is really no action before the Court. 2. A declaration placed upon the record outside of the stime allowed to the plaintiff for a result of this action and a long time after the result of the writ, without the consent of the opposite party or the permission of a Judge, is irregularly upon the record and will be considered as if it were no declaration at all. Bouchard v. Boivin, 6 Q. P. R. 41.

Summary Matter — Heading of Writ.]
—The provisions of the Code of Procedure relating to summary matters do not apply unless the words "summary procedure" are written or printed at the head of each original and copy of the writ of summons. Bernard v. Carbonneau, 6 Q. P. R. 348.
