Trial — Speedy Trial of Indictable Oflences—Election as to Mode of Trial—Time for—Indictment.]—After an indictment has been found against the accused by the grand jary, it is too late for him to elect for speedy trial without a jury under part LIV, of the Criminal Code. Jurisdiction to hold a speedy trial is strictly limited by the terms of s. 765 of the Criminal Code, and such jurisdiction is only conferred where the accused has been committed to gaol for trial, or is otherwise in custody awaiting trial on the charge against him. Rex v. Komiensky, Q. R. 12 K. B. 329.

Trial — Speedy Trial of Indictable Officaces—Election as to Mode of Trial—Time for—Waier—Plea to Indictment.] — Four acused persons, after a preliminary inquiry, were committed for trial for conspiracy to defraud, but no bill of indictment was preferred to the grand jury on such charge. A bill of indictment, however, was preferred by the Crown counsel, with the written consent of the Judge presiding in the Court of King's Beach, charging the four accused and two other persons with conspiracy. Two additional bills were preferred against the six persons, charging them with having committed other indictable of fences, and the grand Jury declared the three bills well founded and D—16 returned them into Court as true bills. The accused, when arraigned, severally pleaded not guilty on the three indictments, but when the Court was proceeding to fix a day for the trials, they moved that an order be made allowing them to be taken before a Judge of sessions to declare their option for speedy trial on the indictments:-Held, that in order to waive a trial by jury and to elect to be tried by a Judge of sessions, an information must have been laid before a justice of the peace, a preliminary inquiry must have been made, depositions giving evidence concerning the offence charged must have been taken, and the accused must have been committed for trial. Rex v. Gibson, 4 Can. Crim. Cas. 451, followed. 2. Whenever an accused party neglects to take the necessary steps to elect for a trial without a jury in the special Court for speedy trials, before an indictment is found against him and returned into Court, his plea to such indictment will be conclusive against him, and he cannot afterwards elect for a speedy trial cannot interwards elect for a speedy trial without a jury; Regima v. Lawrence, I Can, Crim. Cas. 295. His plea to the indictment conclusively and exclusively fixes the form. Rex v. Wener, Q. R. 12 K. B. 320.

Trial—Speedy Trial of Indictable Offences

Jurisdiction of District Magistrate—Crimnal Code.]—A district magistrate has no jurisdiction to try a person for an indictable offence, except in the special cases provided by law, viz., the indictable offence must be one which is triable before the general or quarter sessions of the peace; the accused person must have been committed or bailed for trial, and be in actual custody awaiting trial; the sheriff must have notified the distriet magistrate in writing that such person is so confined, stating his name and the nature of the charge preferred against him; the district magistrate must thereupon have caused the prisoner to be brought before him, and, after having obtained the depositions on which the prisoner was committed, state and describe to him the offence with which he is describe to him the offence with which he is charged, and the prisoner must then have consented to be tried before such district magistrate without a jury. The jurisdiction to hold a speedy trial is strictly limited by the terms of ss. 765-767, Criminal Code, and the conditions specified in these sections must be strictly complied with, on pain of absolute nullity, even where the accused has expressly declared that he consents to stand his trial before the district magistrate who convicted him. Rex v. Breckenridge, Q. R. 12 K. B. 474.

Trial—Summary Trial—Assault—Penalty—Right to Juvy—Notification by Magistrate's Clerk.]—Section 785 of the Criminal Code, 1892, as re-enacted by 63 & 64 V. c. 46, gives to the police magistrate of a city or town power to impose the same punishment for a common assault as could be imposed upon a person convicted on an indictment, when he has decided to treat it as an indictable offence and is proceeding under the summary trials part of the Code. 2. The magistrate may ask the question provided for by 8, 786 of the Code through the mouth of his clerk. Rex v. Ridchaugh, 23 Occ. N. 236, 14 Man. L. R. 434.

IV. SUMMARY CONVICTION.

Complainant -Appeal -Notice to — Held, that a notice of appeal addressed to nor served upon the Forum.] prosecutor, but addressed to and served upon one only of two convicting justices of the peace, is insufficient, though it appear that when the notice was so served the justice whom it was served was verbally inupon whom it was served was verbally in-formed that it was for the prosecutor. Keohan v. Cook, 1 Terr. L. R. 125, followed. The question, whether a notice of appeal to the Supreme Court of the North-West Territories instead of a Judge thereof was valid, was raised but not decided. Hostetter v. Thomas, 4 Terr. L. R. 224.

Appeal - Magistrate Stating Case after Appeal-Res Judicata.]-The defendant was convicted before a stipendiary magistrate for convicted before a stipendlary magistrate for violation of certain regulations made under the Fisheries Act, R. S. C. c. 96, s. 17, and an appeal was taken to the County Court for district No. 3, where the conviction was afirmed. No appeal was taken from the judgment in the County Court, but the stipendlary magistrate was applied to to state a case for the opinion of the Supreme Court, with the view of questioning the validity of the conviction, which he did:—Held, quashing the case stated, that, with the judgment of the County Court standing in the way. of the County Court standing in the way, the defendant was precluded from asking the stipendiary magistrate to state a case for the purpose of attacking the conviction in the Supreme Court. The judgment in the County Supreme Court. The judgment in the County Court, in the identical case, was binding as Court, in the identical clase, was binding as between the parties, and upon the stipendiary magistrate, and the matter was therefore res adjudicata, and one in which the magistrate could not be asked to state a case. Rew. v. Tovenshend, 35 N. S. Reps. 401.

Appeal-Notice of-Parties to be Served.] notice of appeal from a summary con viction (provincial) served upon the convict-ing magistrate is not invalid because it is not also addressed to and served upon the respondent. It is not a pre-requisite to the right of appeal that the person convicted should have been taken into custody. Quære, should have been taken into custom. Whether service of notice of appeal on the respondent's solicitor would not be sufficient in any event. Rex v. Jordan, 22 Occ. N.

-A person by paying his fine on a summary conviction loses any right of appeal he might otherwise have had under s. 880 of the Crim-Code. Where on an appeal from a inal Code. Where on an appeal from a summary conviction an appellant makes a money deposit in lieu of recognizance, the deposit, which includes both the fine and the security for costs of appeal, should be returned by the justice into the appellate Court, and in default the appeal cannot be heard. Rew v. Neuberger, 9 B. C. R. 272.

Appeal—Recognizance—Defect in—Costs -Order-Motion to Quash - Grounds-Addition of.]-The Court may allow new grounds to be added on shewing cause against an order nisi to quash an order dismissing an appeal from a conviction under the Criminal Code, granted under the Rule of Court of Michaelmas term, 1899, although the Rule requires the grounds to be stated in the order.—A recognizance entered into under s. 880 (c) of the Code is bad if the word "personally" is smitted from the condition to appear and try the appeal and ablie the judgment of the Court thereupon. And the appellate Court, on this objection being raised to the recognizance, has jurisdiction to dismiss the appeal with costs. Rew v. Wedderburn, Ex p. Sprague, 36 N. B. Appeal — Recognizance — Suretice—Sututory Requirements, 1—On an appeal, under s. 879. Criminal Code, by several defendants from a summary conviction, the recognizance must be that of two sureties besides the appellant, and the appeal will be quashed if the recognizance be given with only one surety. 2. An appeal not being of common law right, the conditions precedent imposed by the statute must be strictly compiled with. 3. The civing of security is an essential. Appeal — Recognizance — Sureties—Sta-3. The giving of security is an essential part of the appeal, and unless it be done in the manner required by statute, the giving of a notice of appeal will be unavailing and the conviction may be prosecuted as if no parties had been given. Reging N, Joseph. notice had been given. Regina v. Joseph. O. R. 21 S. C. 211.

Appeal—Right of —Plea of Guilty.]—A person who has pleaded "guilty" to a charge, and has been summarily convicted. may raise a question of law in an appeal under s. 897 of the Criminal Code, but on such appeal his former plea of "guilty" estops him from calling upon the respondent to prove his guilt. So far as his guilt or innocence is concerned, he is not a "party aggrieved" within the meaning of s. 879 of the Criminal Code. Rew v. Brook. 5 Terr.

Appeal to County Court—Habeas Corpus Proceedings.]—Application for a writ of habeas corpus. The prisoner was charged with an offence under s. 523 of the Crimical Code, convicted thereof by the police massis. Code, convicted thereof by the police magic trate for the city of Rossland, and sentened to two months' hard labour. Immediately after conviction he appealed to a County Court, and Leamy, Co.J., affirmed the co-viction:—Held, dismissing the application, that the decision of the County Court in appeal from a surrougar, considering in final in any event. Appeal to Judge of Supreme Court, N.W.T.—Notice of appeal—Insufficiency—Time of sitting of Court not stated. Rex v. Brimacombe (N.W.T.), 2 W. L. R. 53.

Case Stated—Recognizance—Cash Deposit in Lieu of.]—Appeal by way of case stated under s. 900 of the Code. The defendant was convicted of an offence under the Act to restrict the Importation and Employment of Aliens. Instead of entering into the recognizance required by s.-s. 4 of s. 900 of the Code, the defendant deposited a marked cheque for $100 with the convicting magistrate:—Held, that the recognizance was a condition precedent to the jurisdiction of the Court to hear the appeal, and no substitute was permissible. Res v. Geiser, 21 Occ. N. 604, 8 B. C. R. 169.

Certiorari—Habeas Corpus—Keeper of Basedy-house—Pleading Guilty—Trial on the Merits.]—The offence of being a keeper of a house of ill-fame is an indictable offence, and it may be tried either before a jury in the ordinary way, or before a police magistrate under the summary trials clauses, or before a justice of the peace under the summary convictions clauses, of the Code. Upon an application to quash a conviction where the prisoner was in custody when the matter came up on certiorari:—Held, that a write of habeas corpus was necessary. The defendant was convicted by a police magistrate after pleading guilty to a charge that she did "unlawfully appear the keeper of a house of ill-fame," and sentenced to be imprisoned for one year in the Andrew Mercer reformatory:—Held, that the conviction might be treated as having been made under the summary convictions clauses of the Code, although the seatence exceeded the power of the magistrate, and that such conviction might appearing the keeper of a house of ill-fame had pleaded guilty to such charge, there was a trial on the merits, and that such person was to be deemed guilty of the offence of keeping a boase of ill-fame. Regina v. Spooner, 21

Certiorari—Recognizance—Sufficiency of Justification—Appeal.]—An affidavit of justification upon a recognizance given pursuant to Rule of Court passed under s. 892 of the Criminal Code, need not state that the surety is worth the amount of the penalty over and above other sams for which he is surety. A Rule of Court made under s. 892 of the criminal Code requiring sufficient sureties for a specific amount, is compiled with if the sureties justify as being possessed of property of that value, and as being worth the amount over and above all their just debts and liabilities, and over and above all examptions allowed by law. Regina v. Robinet, 16 P. R. 49, not followed. Where a conviction is attacked on the ground of want of jurisdiction, the mere filing of a recognizance by the defendant on an appeal therefrom does not deprive him of his right to a writ of certiorari. The conviction and all other proceedings relating thereto having been filed by the magistrate under s. 801 of the Criminal Code, in the office of the derk of the Court for the judicial district in which the motion is made, a motion to quash

the conviction can be made without the issue of a writ of certiorari. Section 892 of the Criminal Code authorizes the requiring of a recognizance only where the conviction is brought before the Court by a writ of certiorari, and no recognizance is required where such a writ is not necessary or is dispensed with. Regina v. Ashcroft, 4 Terr. L. R. 119.

Certiorari—Right to—Criminal Code, s. 887—Failure of Remedy by Appeal.]—Section 887 of the Criminal Code, which enacts that "no writ of certiorari shall be allowed to remove any conviction or order had or made before any justice of the peace, if the defendant has appealed from such conviction or order to any court to which an appeal from such conviction or order is authorized by law, or shall be allowed to remove any conviction or order and upon such appeal," does not deprive the Court of the right to quash a conviction on certiorari, where the convicting justice acted as a partisan in collusion with the prosecutor and without jurisdiction, even though an appeal has been taken which has failed by reason of the refusal of the justice to make the return required by law; Landry, J., dissenting. In re Kelly, 27 N. B. Reps. 553, discussed. Rex v. Delegarde, Ex p. Uouan, 36 N. B. Reps. 503.

Certiorari—Selling Liquor to Indians—View of Place of Sale.]—Motion for certiorari to remove a conviction for selling an intoxicant to an Indian. The magisstrate, after hearing the evidence but before giving his decision, went alone and took a view of the place of sale:—Held, quashing the conviction, that the proceeding was unwarrantable. 2. That s, 108 of the Indian Act and s. 889 of the Criminal Code do not prevent proceedings by certiorari where the ground of complaint is that something was done contrary to the fundamental principles of criminal procedure. In re Sing Kee, 21 Occ. N. 220, 8 B. C. R. 20.

Certiorari—Warrant of Commitment— Illegality—Refusal to Quash—Habeas Corpus.]—When a person is in custody under a warrant of commitment, founded on a good conviction, the Court will not quash the commitment on certiorari, even if it is illegal. The proper procedure is by way of habeas corpus. Rex v. Mclanson, Ex p. Bertin, 36 N. B. Reps. 577.

Complaint—Description of Offence—Uncertainty—Certioreri.] — A conviction obtained upon a complaint which does not give a clear and precise description of the alleged offence or contravention of a statute or bylaw will be quashed upon certiorari. Carriere v. City of Montreal, 5 Q. P. R. 44.

Costs of Distress and Conveying to Gaol—Variance between Minute and Conviction.]—The costs of distress and of conveying to gaol are obligatory where a summary conviction imposes a fine and awards distress and imprisonment in default of distress, and therefore the omission of any reference to such costs in the minute of adjudication will not invalidate the formal conviction which includes them. Rex v. Beagan (No. 2), 36 N. S. Reps. 208.

Fine—Distress—Hard Labour—Duplicity - Warrant of Commitment - Habeas Corpus.] - A conviction, which attaches hard labour to imprisonment in default of there being sufficient distress to levy the fine imposed, is bad. A conviction which charges an offence on two separate days, charges two distinct separate offences, and, if it be a case where s. 26 of the Summary Convictions Act applies, is bad; a warrant of commitment based on such a conviction is consequently bad. It is a usual, convenient, and established practice that a rule nisi to shew cause why a writ of habeas corpus should not issue should also require cause to be shewn why, in the event of the rule being made absolute, the prisoner should not be discharged with-out the actual issue of the writ of habeas corpus and without his being personally brought before the Court; but in order that the rule may be made absolute in this form, the magistrate, the keeper of the prisoner and the prosecutor should all be served with the rule nisi, or at least be represented on its return. Regina v. Farrar, 11 Occ. N. 25, 1 Terr. L. R. 306.

Fine — Payment to Clerk — Illegality — Quashing.]—A conviction by the Recorder's Court of Montreal requiring payment of a fine to the clerk of the Court, and not to the city, is illegal, and will be quashed upon certiorari. Willock V. City of Montreal, 5 Q. P. R. 126.

Fine and Costs or Imprisonment-Defendant Submitting to Imprisonment— Motion for Certiorari—Deposit of Fine and Costs—Refusal of Writ—Surrender of Prisoner-Right to Return of Deposit.]-W., the plaintiff's assignor, having been condemned to pay a fine and costs for an infraction of the license law, and to imprisonment in default, sought to set aside the conviction by means of certiorari proceedings, after having suffered part of the imprisonment imposed. He deposited with the defendant, in his capacity of clerk of the peace at Mon-treal, the sum of $114.83, the amount of the fine and costs, besides $50 to cover subsequent costs, pursuant to s. 217 of the Quebec Liquor License Act, 63 V. c. 12, and was released from prison. The writ of certiorari having been refused, W. surrendered himself again as a prisoner, and offered to serve the time of his imprisonment, but claimed at the same time from the defendant the repayment of the $114.83. The latter refused and gave as reasons that W., in making this deposit voluntarily and thus obtaining his freedom, had chosen the alternative of a fine. and the judgment setting aside the writ of certiorari had the result of awarding the deposit in payment of the fine to the mis-en-cause, the collector of revenue of Montreal:-Held, that this deposit possessed only the character of a security, and could not be converted into a payment of the fine and costs; that the application for certiorari could not take away from one convicted of an offence his right to choose to submit to the term of imprisonment to which he is condemned, instead of paying the fine; that the writ of certiorari, in suspending the execution of the sentence, has only the result when it is discharged of rendering the person convicted liable to his term of imprisonment; and if he makes that choice, he has a right to repayment of his deposit representing the fine and costs. Wing v. Sicotte, Q. R. 26 S. C. 387.

Imprisonment - Warrant of Commitment-Defects-Place of Offence-Time for ment—Defects—Place of Offence—Time for Commencement of Imprisonment — Court of Record—Copy of Sentence.]—A motion for the discharge of S., a prisoner serving a term of imprisonment at Dorchester Penitentiary, was based upon alleged defects in the warrant of commitment signed by the clerk of the County Court Judge's Criminal Court at Halifax, returned by the warden of the penitentiary as the authority under which S. was held :- Held, that, even if the place where the offence was committed was not stated in the body of the record of conviction, it was covered by that named in the margin, viz., "the county of Halifax."—Semble, that the "copy of the sentence" required to be delivered to the warden of the penitentiary (R. S. C. c. 182, s. 42), need not contain all the averments essential to the validity of an indictment or conviction :—Held, that the document certified by the warden in the present case as his authority was sufficient. Rex v. Smitheman, 24 Occ. N. 329.

Injury to Property—Description of Offence.]—N. L. was committed to gaol under a warrant of a stipendiary magistrate, charging him with having at L., in the county of C. B., "unlawfully and wilfully destroyed and damaged property owned by A. M. S. on the 24th day of December, 1903."—Held. that the conviction was bad because it did not specify the injuries and the nature of the property injured. Regina v. Spain, 18 O. R. 385, followed. In re Leary, 24 Occ. N. 70.

Justice of the Peace-Master and Servant Act—Refusal to Work—Information— Amendment—Form of Conviction—Omissions—Distress—Costs.]—The prosecutor hired the defendant to work on a farm and paid for the defendant's transportation thereto. The defendant worked a few hours, and then The prosecutor swore to an information that the defendant did "accept the sum of $1.30 to pay his fare to B. on the condition that the said amount was to be worked out, and refused to work after reaching this place, with the exception of 4 hours, The magistrate issued a warrant setting out the facts stated in the information and adding "consequently obtaining money under false pretences," and the defendant was arrested. The magistrate amended the formation by adding a reference to the Master and Servant Act, 1901, but the information was not re-sworn. The amended ination was not re-sworn. formation was read over to the prisoner and he was informed that he was to be tried under it as amended. He made no objection: the prosecutor gave evidence, and the de-fendant was sworn and testified on his own behalf. The magistrate adjudged that the defendant should be fined $5 and $4.88 cests, and if the amounts were not paid forthwith and it the amounts were not paid forfluving he should be committed to gaol. A note of the conviction was made and a formal conviction drawn up. The conviction form was headed "conviction for a penalty to be levied by distress," but no such term was mertioned in the body of it:—Held, that the parties of the officers was mentioned in the body of the convergence of the conve nature of the offence was sufficiently clear in the original information, and any doubt was removed by the addition of the reference to the Act. 2. That the Court, being satisfied that an offence of the nature described in the conviction had been committed, and that the magistrate had jurisdiction, and that the punishment imposed was not excessive, should not hold the conviction invalid because the date and place of offence were not stated, there being power to amend. 4. That the heading formed no part of the conviction, which was correctly drawn under the statute. 5. That the costs of conveying the accused to gaol being omitted, was a matter which could be amended, if necessary, but here there were no such is, as the prisoner never went to gaol. That there was special power by 1 Edw. VII. c. 2, s. 14, under which the prisoner was convicted, to award imprisonment in default of payment; and that by R. S. Motion to Quash-Jurisdiction of Single Judge—Certiorari — Disorderly House—In-mate—Pleading Guilty—Form of Conviction — Summary Conviction or Summary Trial— Penalty.]—A single Judge in the Territories has jurisdiction under 54 & 55 V. c. 22, s. 7, s-s. 2, to hear and determine applications to quash summary convictions, whether the convictions have been brought into Court by certiorari or not. If the conviction have been returned to the clerk of the Supreme Court, by virtue of s. 102 of the N. W. T. Act, the issue of a writ of certiorari is unnecessary. The defendant pleaded guilty before a magistrate of being an inmate of a disorderly house, an offence punishable either under part XV. of the Criminal Code (Vagunder part XV. of the Criminal Code (Vagrancy), where the fine on summary conviction is limited to $50, or under part LV. (Summary Trials of Indictable Offences), where the fine and costs together must not exceed $100. A fine of $90, with $6.25 costs, was imposed, but the conviction was in the form WW prescribed under part LVIII. relating to summary convictions, and not the form QQ prescribed under part LV., and did not contain the words "being charged before me the undersigned," which appear in the latter form, On an application to quash, the conviction was sustained as a good con-viction under part LV., as being of like effect to the form therein prescribed; the amount of the fine and the fact that the accused was not charged with or convicted of being a loose, idle, or disorderly person, indicating the procedure adopted by the magistrate. The omission to recite that the accused had been charged with the offence before him, a fact which appeared from the proceedings, is a matter of form only, and not sufficient to void the conviction. Rex v. Ames, 5 Terr. L. R. 492

Metion to Quash — Practice — Duty of Justice to Return Depositions—Certiforari.] — Section S88 of the Criminal Code provides for the return of convictions by Justices into the Court to which the appeal is given:—Semble, apart from this provision, it is the day of Justices to make return also of the depositions upon which the conviction is founded.—Held, that papers purporting to be the depositions relating to the conviction having been returned therewith, they should be assumed to be such depositions; that they were properly before the Court, and a writ of certiorari was unnecessary. Rex v. Rondeau, 5 Terr. L. R. 478.

Motion to Quash—Preliminary Objections — Security — Cash Deposit — Written Document—Certiorari—Notice—Objection to -Delay.]-On the return of a rule nisi to quash the conviction of the defendant for an offence against the Liquor License Ordinance, it was objected that no proper security had been given, as required by Supreme Court Rule 13. It appeared by the certifi-Court Rule 13. It appeared by the certin-cate of the registrar that $100 in cash had been deposited with him in this cause, and that such sum stood to the credit of the cause in a chartered bank. It was the fact, however, that no written document had been deposited with the registrar stating the conditions upon which the deposit was made, Rule 13 requires the deposit to be made "with a condition to prosecute such motion and writ of certiorari:"—Held, that no written document was necessary, the money being in the hands of the registrar for the purposes provided by law. It was also objected that the notice did not give the name of the party who intended to apply, nor the name of the Court or the Judge in Chambers: — Held, that the Court should not bers: — Heid, that the Court should not entertain this and other like objections, for after a writ of certiorari has issued the ob-jections should be raised by a substantive motion to quash the writ:—Held, also, that when more than three months have intervened between the return to the writ of certiorari and the motion for a rule nisi, the preliminary facts must be taken to be admitted, and an application to quash the writ would be too late. Regina v. Davidson, 21 Occ. N. 98.

Motion to Quash—Recognizance—Inefficiency—Justice of the Peace—Married Woman—Separate Estate.]—The defendant is a necessary party to the recognizance required upon a motion to quash his conviction; and where his recognizance was invalid because entered into before a justice of the peace for a county other than that in which the conviction was made, the recognizance of his surety, though properly taken, was held bad also.—Semble, that a recognizance by the wife of the defendant might be binding in respect to her separate estate, which she connected by affidavit with her recognizance. Rex v. Johnson, 24 Occ. N. 266, 7 O. L. R. 525. 3 O. W. R. 221, 232.

O. c. 90, s. 2, has the effect of incorporating s. 841 of the Criminal Code, and therefore, in the case of any offence punishable on summary conviction, if no time is especially limited for making any complaint or laying any information under the Act or law relating to the particular case, the complaint must be made or the information laid within six months from the time the matter of complaint or information arose. Rex v. McKinnon, 22 Occ, N. 161, 3 O. L. R. 508, 1 O. W. R. 199.

Two Informations—Withdrawal of One—Canada Temperance Act.]—Under a 858 of the Criminal code, after the evidence has been heard, the magistrate is not bound either to convict or discharge the defendant; he may allow the prosecutor to withdraw the charge, and he may do so even when another information for the same offence has been laid by the same prosecutor against the same defendant, and the determination thereof is still pending. Ex p. Wyman, 34 N. B. Reps. 608.

Vagrancy — Conviction—Information — Facts Necessary to be Stated.]—Application for habeas corpus. The accused was charged with being a "loose, idle person, or vagrant," and was convicted by a police magistrate, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment with hard labour. The conviction described the offence in the same terms as the information:—Held, that the conviction was bad in that it did not set out the facts constituting the offence. Under s. 207 of the Code various acts constituting vagrancy are specified, and an information charging vagrancy should shew the particular facts on which the prosecution relies to establish the offence. Rev v. McCormack, 23 Occ. N. 207, 9 B. C. R. 497.

Warrant of Commitment - No Conviction Alleged - Habeas Corpus - Return.] -On an application for a writ of habeas corpus, and for discharge of prisoner detained in pus, and for discassing of presence detailed in custody under a warrant of a justice of the peace in form V., Criminal Code, s. 596 (committal for trial), the warrant did not allege a conviction, but only that the ac-cused had been charged before the justice. The conviction upon which the warrant was issued was admittedly bad, but an amended conviction was returned to the clerk by the justice after the argument: — Held, that where a warrant of commitment upon a conviction does not allege that the prisoner has been convicted of an offence, the conviction cannot be referred to in order to support the warrant, Order made discharging prisoner, —Semble, that had the warrant shewn the prisoner to have been convicted of some specific offence, even though insufficiently stated, the conviction could have been referred to, to support it. An application to discharge a prisoner held under a defective warrant of committal in execution will not be adjourned in order to procure the return of the conviction with a view to supporting the warrant, if the prisoner has been actually brought up on a habeas corpus, aliter where he has not been brought up. Regina v. Lalonde, 2 Terr. L. R. 281.

V. SUMMARY TRIAL.

Assault — Information for Indictable Offences—Conviction for Common Assault—Jurisdiction of Magistrate — Indictment—Court — Information.]—The defendant was tried before a stipendiary magistrate on an information charging him with committing an assault upon J. F., causing bodily harm. The accused having consented to be tried summarily, in accordance with s. 787 of the Code, was tried and convicted of a common assault only:—Held, that s. 713 of the Code enabled the magistrate to convict of the common assault only:—Held, that s. 713 of the Code enabled the magistrate to convict of the common assault on the common assault. 2. That the common assault upon the contention that s. 713 only applies to indictments, "counts" being the only word used, was disposed of by s. 3 (b) of the Code, where it is provided that the expressions "indictment" and "count," respectively, include information and presentment, as well as indictment, and also any plea, replication, or other pleading, and any record. 3. That independently of the statute the conviction was good. The Queen v. Oliver, 30 L. J. M. 12, and The Queen v. Coliver, 30 L. J. M. 12, and The Queen v. Coliver, 30 L. J. M. 12, and The Queen v. Colover, 38 N. S. Reps. 510.

Assault and Theft - Summary Trial-Police Magistrate-Election-Next Court for Jury Trial-Amendment-Fresh Election -New Trial.]—In order to give a police magistrate jurisdiction to try an indictable offence, namely, a charge of assault and robbing prosecutor of 30c., not triable summarily by the magistrate except with the prisoner's consent, the magistrate, in putting the prisoner to his election to be tried before or by jury, must expressly name the Court at which the charge can probably be soonest heard; and it is immaterial that the election is made by counsel representing the prisoner: Maclaren, J.A., dissenting, Regina v. Cock-shott, [1898] 1 Q. B. 582, followed. After the election of the prisoner to be tried summarily on such charge, and after the magistrate has entered upon the trial thereof, he has no power to amend the indictment so as to cause a further charge to be preferred against the prisoner, unless the prisoner is again put to his election, and consents to be so tried. Rex v. Walsh, 24 Occ. N. 27, O. L. R., 149, 2 O. W. R. 222, 3 O. W. R. 31.

Election — Absence of Accused.]—A prisoner charged with theft waived preliminary examination, and was committed for trial. Upon then being arraigned before the junior Judge of the County Court he consented to be tried by "the said Judge without a jury."—Held, that s. 767 of the Criminal Code, as amended by 63 & 64 V. c. 46 (D.), contemplates an election to be tried in a certain way and not necessarily by the Judge before whom the election is made; that the election in question having been given in a limited form was void; and that the senior Judge could not proceed with the trial of the accused.—Held, also, that a person accused, by waiving preliminary investigation and this accepting committal without depositions taken, foregoes his right to a speedy trial and cannot make an election effectual confer jurisdiction:—Held, further, that unless in the case of misconduct rendering it impracticable to continue the proceedings in his presence, or at his request and with the permission of the Court, the trial of a person accused of felony cannot proceed in his absence. Election—Amendment of charge—Substitution of earlier date for offence—Seduction of girl under sixteen—Necessity for new election. Rew v. Lacelle, 6 O. W. R. 911, 11 O. L. R. 74.

Election — Depositions Disclosing More Serious Offence.]—Where the depositions disclose an offence which could not have been disposed of by speedy trial, the prisoner will not be allowed to elect for speedy trial if the Crown intends to lay the more serious charge, even though he is committed for an offence which may be disposed of by speedy trial. Res. v. Preston, 11 B. C. R. 150, 1 W. L. R.

Election-N. W. T. Act-Re-trial-New Election—N. W. 1. Act—Re-frial—New Election—Duty of Judge.]—The North-West Territories Act, R. S. C. c. 50, s. 67 (section substituted by 54 & 55 V. c. 22) provides that "when the person is charged with any other criminal offence, the same shall be tried, heard, and determined by the Judge with the intervention of a jury of six, but in any such case the accused may, with his own consent, be tried by a Judge in a summary way, and without the intervention of a jury:"-Held, that the consent of the accused does not make it imperative upon the Judge to try the charge without the intervention of a jury. It appears to be assumed by the Court that where the accused had been tried by a Judge with the intervention of a jury who disagreed and were discharged, and the accused was brought up again trial, the Judge on the second trial might, had he seen fit, have, on the accused's consent, tried him without the intervention of ury. Regina v. Brewster (No. 1), 2 Terr. L. R. 353.

Election — Withdrawal.] — A prisoner who, on being brought before the County Judge's Criminal Court, elects to be tried summarily by the Judge, cannot be allowed afterwards to withdraw his election; no provision therefor having been made in the Criminal Code, so. 762-781, such as the amendment to s. 767 with regard to elections to be tried by a jury. Res v. Keefer, 21 Occ. N. 585, 2 O. L. R. 572.

Evidence — Consent — Felony — Misdemeanour. Rex v. Fox, 2 O. W. R. 728.

Inmate of House of III-fanue—Jurissiction of Stipendiary Magistrate—Punishment.]—The defendant was convicted before a stipendiary and sentenced to imprisonment at hard labour for one day, and to forfeit and pay $60, and in default of payment to a further term of imprisonment for

paid. She was arrested and imprisoned under a warrant issued on the conviction, and an application was made for a writ of habeas corpus to test the legality of her imprisonment:—Held, that the conviction was under Part LV. of the Criminal Code, and the trial was a summary trial of an indictable of-The and not a summary conviction. jurisdiction is given by s. 783 (f) of the Code. The following section makes the jurisdiction of the magistrate absolute in respect of the particular offence, and independent of the consent of the person charged. Section 788 fixes the punishment which the magistrate on summary trial of indictable offences may inflict upon the person convicted in respect of all the crimes mentioned in s. 783, except theft and attempt to commit theft, the punishment for which is provided by s. 787. The punishment inflicted was not in excess of that authorized by the Code, and is not limited to that prescribed by s. 208. The jurisdiction of the magistrate to try the offence charged under Part LV. of the Code and to inflict the punishment which he awarded was quite clear, and no ground had been shewn for the discharge of the prisoner. Rew v. Roberts, 21 Occ. N. 314.

Jury — Election — Withdrawal—Refusal of Judge to Dispense with Jury,1—The N. W. T. Act, R. S. C. 1886 c. 50, s. 67 (section substituted by 54 & 55 V. c. 22, s. 9), provides that "When the person is charged with any other criminal offence the same shall be tried, heard, and determined by the Judge, with the intervention of a jury of six; but in any such case the accused may, with his own consent, be tried by a Judge in a summary way and without the intervention of a jury: "—Held, that in the event of the accused electing to be tried by a Judge alone, the Judge is not bound so to try the case, but may insist upon the intervention of a jury. So held, where the accused was first tried with the intervention of a jury, who disagreed, and upon a second trial coming on withdraw his first election and elected to be tried by the Judge alone. Regina v. Webster, 2 Terr. L. R. 236.

Keeping Bawdy House-Consent-Conviction - Date of Offence - Discharge of Prisoner—Protection against Actions.]—The defendant was summarily tried without her consent and convicted for keeping a disorderly house, that is to say, a common bawdy house, and was sentenced to pay a fine, and in default to be imprisoned at hard labour: -Held, that, as she was charged and punished under the combined operation of ss. 198 and 958 of the Criminal Code, the magistrate could lawfully try her only after having obtained her consent under s. 785, and for want of such consent the conviction was wholly without jurisdiction and void. Nor could the proceedings be sustained under s. Nor 783 (f) of the Code, nor under s. 207 (j). The conviction, which was in the form QO, declared that the defendant had been guilty of the offence "on the 21st day of April, A.D. 1901, and on divers other days and times during the month of April:" Held, that it was bad, as it might be read as indicating the commission of an offence subsequent to the laying of the information (the date of which was the 29th April) and including the date of the conviction (the 30th April.) Obstructing Peace Officer—Consent of Acoused.]—Held, that a person charged with obstructing a peace officer in the execution of his duty may be tried summarily by a magistrate without the consent of the accused. See Criminal Code, ss. 144, 783-6. Semble, that a magistrate is not bound to inform an accused of the exact sections of the Code under which the proceedings are being taken. Regina v. Crossen, 3 Can. Powers of Magistrate-Theft-Attempt to Commit-Description of Offence-Warrant of Commitment-Absence of-Order for Further Detention.] — It is competent for a magistrate upon the summary trial before him of a prisoner charged under s. 783 (a) of the Criminal Code with having committed theft, to convict him of the offence of attempting to commit it provided for in s.-s. (b). The offence of theft from the person is sufficiently described in popular language as picking the pocket of a person. To authorize the detention of a person under a conviction there should be a warrant of commitment: but where there was none, and the conviction it-self was lodged with the gaoler as his au-thority for the detention, there being an offence proved and a proper conviction for the offence, and no merits on the part of the prisoner, the Judge before whom the prisoner was brought upon habeas corpus exercised the power conferred by s. 752 of the Code. and directed that the prisoner should be fur-ther detained and that the convicting magistrate should issue and lodge with the gaoter a proper warrant. Rex v. Morgan, 21 Occ. N. 533, 2 O. L. R. 413. (Affirmed by the Court of Appeal, 20th November, 1901, 21 Occ. N. 583.)

Without Consent of Prisoner—Conviction—Discharge from gnol—Second prosecution. Rex v. Kennedy, 1 O. W. R. 31.

VI. MISCELLANEOUS.

Comment of Judge—Reserved Case—A prival of a prisoner indicted for stealing, the Judge, in his charge to the jury, called attention to the fact that the prisoner was not called to testify on his own behalf, and warned the jury that they were not to take that fact to his prejudice; but added, if he were an innocent man he could have proved that at the time of the offence he was not in the vicinity where the theft took place:—

Held, that this was "comment" within the meaning of s. 4 (2) of the Canada Evidence Act, 1893. It is not too late after the sentence has been imposed to ask to have a case reserved for the opinion of the Court. Rex V. McGuire, 36 N. B. Reps. 609.

Conviction under Liquor License Act—Arrest under Justices' Warrant—Pri-soner Found in Another County — Warrant not Indorsed-Unlawful Caption-Legal Detention-Habeas Corpus-Reference to sional Court-Conviction for Second Offence -Form-Finding of Previous Conviction-Order of Proceedings-Amendment.]-Appeal by prisoner from order of Anglin, J., upon the return of the habeas corpus and certiorari in aid, refusing to discharge the prisoner and remanding him to the custody of the keeper of a common gaol. The prisoner was convicted for a second offence of selling liquor without license. He was sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour for 4 months. The gaoler made his return to the habeas corpus. assigning the warrant of commitment as the cause of detention. The conviction and proceedings before the magistrate were returned upon the writ of certiorari in aid, and an amended conviction was also returned. was objected that the warrant was defective in form; that the arrest thereunder was irregular or void, the warrant not having been backed by a justice of the peace of the County of Victoria, in which county the prisoner was arrested, and whence he was taken to gaol. It was contended that the conviction, as well in its amended as in its original form, was invalid, as the finding in respect of the previous conviction was omitted in the latter and improperly set forth in the former, and also because the magistrate had entered upon the inquiry as to the previous conviction before adjudicating upon the guilt of the prisoner in respect of the charge then the prisoner in respect of the charge then before him, contrary to the provisions of sec. 101 of the Liquor License Act:—Held, all the objections urged against the proceedings failed. The second deposition of Chief Confailed. The second deposition of Chief Constable Jarvis shews that the magistrate had already adjudicated upon the charge laid in the information then before him before entering upon the inquiry as to the fact of the previous conviction. The affidavits from which it was argued that he had probably not done so are too vague and indefinite to warrant an assumption to the contrary of the deposition; but the amended conviction, though carelessly prepared and not following accurately the form given in the schedule to the Act, of the conviction, may be amended upon the evidence: 1 Edw. VII. ch. 13 (0.); Criminal Code, secs. 889, 896. There is nothing in the objection that the arrest was made in the county of Ontario without the warrant having been backed by a justice of that county. The warrant of commitment is sufficient to justify the prisoner's detention in the gaol of the proper county, and the Court will not, on habeas corpus, inquire into any irregularity in his caption. The distinction in this respect between the practice of the country of the coun tice in criminal and civil cases has been settled too long and too firmly to admit of Regina v. the point being now debated. Jones, 8 Occ. N. 332 overruled, appeal dismissed. Rew v. Whitesides, 4 O. W. R. 113, 237, 25 Occ. N. 33, 8 O. L. R. 622.

Jurisdiction of Magistrate-Constitutional Law — Constitution of Criminal Courts.]—By s. 785 of the Criminal Code any person charged before a police magistrate in Ontario with an offence which might be tried at the General Sessions of the Peace. may, with his own consent, be tried by the magistrate and sentenced, if convicted, to the same punishment as if tried at the General Sessions. By an amendment in 1900 the provisions of this section were extended to police and stipendiary magistrates of cities and towns in other parts of Canada:—Held, that, though there are no Courts of General Sessions except in Ontario, the amending Act is not therefore inoperative, but gives to a magistrate in any other province the jurisdiction created for Ontario by s. 785. Though the organization of Courts of criminal jurisdiction is within the exclusive powers of the legislature, the Parliament of Canada may impose upon existing Courts or individuals the duty of administering the criminal law, and their action to that end need not be supplemented by provincial legislation. Adverse Possession—Information of Intrusion.]—Though there has been adversed possession of Crown lands for more than twenty years, the Act 21 Jac. I. c. 14 does not prevent the Crown from validly granting the same without first re-establishing title by information of intrusion; Davies, J., dissenting. Judgment in Emmerson v. Maddison, 36 N. B. Reps. 260, reversed. Maddison v. Emmerson, 24 Occ. N. 204, 34 S. C. R. 533.

Contract for Grant of Public Domain—Breach of—Exchequer Court—Petition of Right.] — The Exchequer Court of Canada has jurisdiction in respect of a chaim arising out of a contract to grant a portion of the public domain made under the authority of an Act of Parliament. 2. Such a claim may be prosecuted by a petition of right, 3. Where the Court has jurisdiction in respect of the subject-matter of a petition of right, the petition is not open to objection on the ground that a merely declaratory judgment or order is sought thereby. If, on the other hand, there is no jurisdiction, no such declaration should be made. Clark v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 182, considered. Qu'Appelle, Long Lake, and Sakatchevan Railroad and Steamboat Co. v. The King, 21 Occ. N. 283, 7 Ex. C. R. 105.

Crown Grant — Concealment—Revocation,]—Action to set aside a Crown grant to the defendant on the ground that it was erroneously and improvidently granted. The land covered by the grant was in the town of Sydney, but in the application it was described as "near the town of Sydney." Moreover, it was included in the description of land expropriated by the town of Sydney under legislative sanction and afterwards conveyed by the town to a company. These circumstances were withheld from the officers of the Crown, when the grant was made:—Held, that the action must succeed, the Crown having acted upon a mistake and upon a false statement. Attorney-General v. McNulty, 11 Gr. 281, followed. Attorney-General v. McGovan, 24 Occ. N. 138.

Crown Grant-Person in Occupation Permission—Estoppel—Non-disclosure — Collateral Proceedings.]—In an action to recover land, the plaintiffs relied upon a grant from the Crown dated the 14th March, 1891. The defendants limited their defence to a portion of the land claimed, and, as to that portion, depended upon title acquired in 1893, from H., who entered as a servant of the plaintiffs, and, by their permission, erected a house on the land in 1890:—Held, that the possession of H. was not sufficient to prevent the Crown from granting to the plaintiffs; that H. having entered by the plaintiffs' permission, both the defendants and H. were estopped from denying the plaintiffs' title; that if the Crown was misled by the omission of the plaintiffs to disclose in their peti-H., that objection could not be raised by a third party, in collateral proceedings, but must be raised in a proceeding to be taken before the Governor in council to have the grant vacated; and that the case was not within the provisions of R. S. (5th series) c. 9, and that the occupancy, being that of a person in possession by permission of the plaintiffs, did not require to be disclosed. Lakeview Mining Co. v. Moore, 36 N. S. Reps. 333.

Lease of—Building erected by lessee— Interference with right of access to canal— Action—Parties. Slater v. Dominion Supply Co., 3 O. W. R. 254. Lam—Dominion Lands Act Amendment, 1897—Repisitry Laws—Entries—Costs.]—
Under s, 18 of 60 & 61 V. c, 29, amending the Dominion Lands Act, unless the Registrar makes the necessary entries respecting the indebtedness of the patentee there referred to "in the proper register or other record book in his office," no charge or lien will be created on the land comprised in the patent for such indebtedness. A docket or note book in which the Registrar kept a record of applications under the Real Property Act received and examined by him, is not to be considered "the proper register or record book" in which the proper register or record book" in which the proper register or record book "in which the proper register or record book" in which to make the necessary entries, which should have been made in the abstract book kept under the Registry Act, as the patent had been registered under the old system of registration. Under Rule 277 of the Queen's Bench Act, 1895, costs will be given against the Crown when it falls in proceedings taken by way of caveat and petition under the Real Property Act. Regina v. Fauccett, 20 Occ. N. 287, 13 Man. L. R. 205.

Location Ticket — Conditions—Nonliquifilment — Cancellation—Prescription.] — Under the terms of a sale from the Crown in 1857, the grantee was ablig d to perform all the obligations contained in ordinary location tickets, and without residence and clearance upon the lot the grantee could not become the incommutable owner nor acquire letters patent. 2. Prescription does not run against the Crown, which always has the right to cancel a location ticket. Kealy v. Regan, Q. R. 23 S. C. 305.

Military Reserve—Provincial or Federal Domain—Recitals in Private Acts.]—
The statement in the Vancouver Incorporation Acts, which are private in their nature, that certain land is a "Government Military Reserve," is not conclusive on the Crown in right of the Province:—Held, on the facts, that it was not shewn that Deadman's Island was a military reserve called into existence by properly constituted authority, and, therefore, that it belongs to the Province and not to the Dominion. Remarks as to the powers of the Governor of British Columbia in 1859, and as to what constituted a "reserve." Attorney-General for British Columbia, v. Ludgate, 8 B. C. R. 242.

Patent —Locatee—Improvements—Ascertainment of Amount Payable for — Crown Lands Department.]-On an application being made for the patent to certain lands, a claim was made by the defendant, who had married the widow of the locatee and had improved the land, to be allowed the value of such improvements, whereupon the Commissioner of Crown Lands directed that before the patent issued the amount, if any, payable to the defendant for his improvements and work on the land, after proper deductions, should be ascertained. A consent judgment was obtained referring it to the Master to inquire and report as to what sum, if any, the defendant was entitled to for permanent improvements and work done upon the land; for maintenance of the family of the locatee, and for any advances made to the family, after making all proper deductions:-Held, that, as the consent judgment was silent as to the principle to be applied in ascertaining the amount payable to the defendant for the improvements, the proper mode, having regard to the object of the Crown Lands Department, was to award such sum as in fore conscientis the defendant ought to receive. Highland v. Sherry, 21 Occ. N. 116, 32 O. R. 371.

Patent—Revocation—Powers of Commissioner of Lunds—Scire Facias.]—The power to annul letters patent belongs to the Superior Court only, and not to the Commissioner of Lands, who has no power to correct errors which have crept in, in the preparation of such letters, when there is no adverse contention. 2. The legal way to proceed to have nullified the action of the Commissioner in revoking letters patent in order to make a grant to another, is by scire facias. Regina v. Adams, Q. R. 18 S. C. 520. Right of Way Over-Easement-Prescription—Possession—Predecessors in Title.]
—The provisions of C. S. U. C. c. 88, ss. 37, 40, and 44, were in force at the time of Confederation, and have not been repealed by the Parliament of Canada. Such provisions affect the right of the Crown as represented by the Government of Canada. 2. Under such provisions, where one enjoys an easement as against the Crown and over Crown property within the limits of some town or township, or other parcel or tract of land duly surveyed and laid out by pro-per authority in Ontario, for a period of twenty years, he thereby establishes a right by prescription in such easement; and if the Crown interferes with the enjoyment of it by expropriation proceedings the owner is entitled to compensation. 3. To establish the easement by prescription it is not necessary to shew that the present owner was in undisturbed possession for the full twenty years; but the undisturbed possession of his predecessors in title may be invoked in order to complete the term of prescription. Settlement of Manitoba Claims -Statute—Operation of Grant—Ascertainment and Identification of Swamp Lands—Revenwes - Constitutional Law. |-The first section of the Act for the final settlement of the claims of the Province of Manitoba on the Dominion, 48 & 49 V. c. 50, enacts that "all Crown lands in Manitoba which may be shewn, to the satisfaction of the Domin ion Government, to be swamp lands, shall be transferred to the Province and enure wholly to its benefit and uses:" — Held, wholly to its benefit and uses:"— Held, affirming the judgment in 8 Ex. C. R. 337, Girouard and Killam, JJ., dissenting, that the operation of the statutory conveyance in favour of the Province of Manitoba was suspended until such time or times as the lands in question were ascertained and identified as swamp lands and transferred as such by order of the Governor-General in Council, and that, in the meantime, the Government of Canada remained entitled to the administration thereof, and that the revenues derived therefrom eaured wholly to the benefit and use of the Dominion. Attorney-General for Manitoba v. Attorney-General for Canada, 24 Occ. N. 163, 34 S. C. R. 287.

Squatter-Grant-Purchaser for Value-Priorities-Notice-Registry Act-Instrument Improperly Registered.] — A squatter upon Crown land, which he had partly cleared, and upon which he had built a house, gave a registered mortgage of it in 1874 for value, and in 1881 conveyed the equity of redemption by registered deed to the mortresemption by registered deed to the mort-gage, remaining in occupation of the land as tenant. In 1898 a son of the squatter, having no knowledge of the mortgage or ded, or that his father occupied the land as tenant, obtained a grant of the land from the Crown:-Held, that he should not be declared a trustee of the land for the purchaser from the land for the purchaser from the father:—Semble, that s, 69 of the Registry Act, 57 V. c, 20 (C. S. 1903, c, 151, s, 69), by which it is provided that "the resistantion of any instrument under this Act stall constitute notice of the instrument pall person classifies are interest in the to all persons claiming any interest in the lands subsequent to such registration, "does not apply to an instrument not properly on the registry, such as a conveyance of Crown land by a squatter. Robin, Collas, and Co., Limited v. Theriault, 25 Occ. N. 68, 3 N. B. Eq. 14.

Swamp Lands—Transfer to Province—Construction of Statute—Order in Council.]
—By s. 1 of 48 & 49 V. c. 50 (D.), sub-sequently re-enacted by R. S. C. c. 47, s. 4, it was provided that all Crown lands which may be shewn to the satisfaction of the Dominion Government to be swamp lands shall be transferred to the province and enure wholly to its benefit and uses:—Held, that by its true construction the section did not operate an immediate transfer to the province of any swamp lands or of the profits arising therefrom, but only from the date of the order in council, made after survey and selection as prescribed by the Act directing that the selected lands be vested in the province. Down to that date the profits resulting from the transferred lands belonged to the Dominion. Judgment in 34 S. C. R. 287 affirmed. Attorney-General for Manitoba v. Attorney-General for Canada, [1904] A. C. 799.

Timber Licenses—Prior Grant of Land—Retroactivity,]—Lots granted or located prior to the date of a license to cut timber under Art. 1309, R. S. Q., are exempt from the rights conferred by such license. 2. Licenses to cut timber on Crown lands are not retroactive as against prior grantees of said lands. Price v. Delisle, Q. R. 21 8, C, 411.

Timber Licenses—Sales by Local Agent—Location Ticket—Suspensive Condition—Title to Lands.] — During the term of a license to cut timber on ungranted lands of the Province of Quebec, the local Crown lands agent made a sale of a part of the lands covered by the license, and issued location tickets or licenses of occupation thereof under the provisions of Arts. 1269 et seq., R. S. Q., respecting the sale of Crown lands. Subsequently the timber license was renewed, but at the time the renewal license was issued that a the time the renewal license was issued there had not been any express approval by the commissioner of Crown lands of the sales so made by the local agent, as provided in Art. 1299, R. S. Q. —Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, Taschereau and Davies, JJ., dissenting, that the approval required by Art. 1269, R. S. Q., was not a suspensive condition, the fulfilment of which would have retroactive effect from the date when the sales by the local agent were made, and that, at the time of the issue of the renewal license, the lands in question were still ungranted lands of the Crown for which the timber license had been validly issued. Leblanc v. Robitaille, 22 Occ. N. 78, 31 S. C. R. 582.

Compensation—Damages for Injury to Adjoining Lands—Amount of Judgment of Exchequer Court — Appeal to Supreme Court.]-Information in the Exchequer Court for a declaration that certain lands taken for the Trent Canal were vested in Her Majesty, and that the sum of $6,860 tendered to the defendant was sufficient compensation for the lands taken and for damages to adjoining lands, The amount tendered was up of $3,860 for the lands taken and $3,000 for damages. The valuators on whose report the tender was made put the value of the land at $200 per acre. This was accepted land at $200 per acre. This was accepted by the Judge of the Exchequer Court, but, upon conflicting evidence, he increased the amount for damages to $10,250. The Crown appealed on the ground that the damages were excessive:—Held, Gwynne and Girourard, JJ., dissenting, that, as it did not appear from the evidence that there was error in the judgment appealed from, the Supreme Court would not interfere. Regina v. Armour, 31 S. C. R. 499.

Compensation - Leasehold Interest -Measure of Damages.]—The suppliants were lessees of certain land and premises expropriated for the Intercolonial Railway. The premises had been fitted up and were used by them for the purpose of their business as coal merchants. By the terms of the leave under which they were in possession, the term for which they held could at any time be determined by the lessors by giving six months' notice in writing, in which event the suppliants were to be paid $2,500 for the improvements they had made: — Held, that the measure of compensation to be paid to the suppliants was the value, at the time of the expropriations, of their leasehold interest in the lands and premises. Apart from the sum payable for improvements there was no direct evidence to shew what the value was. But it appeared that the suppliants had procured other premises in which to nad procured other premises in which to carry on their business, and that in doing so they had of necessity been at some loss, and that the cost of carrying on their busi-ness had been ingreased. The amount of the loss and of increased cost of carrying on business during the six months succeeding the expropriation proceedings was, in addition to the sum mentioned, taken to represent the value to them, or to any person in a like position, of their interest in the premises. The suppliants also contended that, if they had not been disturbed in their possession, they could have increased their business, and so have made additional profits, and they claimed compensation for the loss of such profits, but this claim was not allowed. Gibbon v. The Queen, 20 Occ. N. 434, 6 Ex. C. R. 430.

Damages to Land — Owner — Public Work—Liability—Land Dedicated for Highway,—It is the owner of the land at the time a public work is constructed that is entitled to damages for lands taken for or injuriously affected by such constructier and not his successor in title:—Held, in view of the opinion in City of Quebec v. The Queen, 24 S. C. R. 420, that where the Injury to property does not occur on a public work the suppliant has no remedy under 50 & 51 V. c. 16, s. 15 · (4). Where in the division of his land the owner dedicates a partion to the public for a street or highway, a part of which is subsequently taken by the Crown for a public work, the owner is not entitled to compensation for the part so taken. Stebbing v. Metropolitan Board of Works, I. R. 6 Q. B. 37, and Paint v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 149, 18 S. C. R. 718, followed, Letourneux v. The Queen, 21 Occ. N. 277, 7 Ex. C. R. 1.

Damage to Remaining Land-Access -Undertaking - Right of Way-Future Damages-Agreement-Increased Value.] -The defendants owned a certain property, a portion of which was taken by the Crown for the purpose of a canal. Access to the remaining portion of the defendants' land was cut off by the canal, but the Crown, under 52 V. c. 38, s. 3, filed an undertaking to build and maintain a suitable road across its property for the use of the defendants. The evidence shewed that the effect of this road would be to do away with all future damage arising from deprivation of access: and the Court assessed the damages for past deprivation only. 2. It having been agreed between the parties in this case that the question of damages which might arise in the future from any flooding of the defendants' lands should not be dealt with in the present action, the Court took cognizance of such agreement in pronouncing judgment. 3. In respect to the lands taken, the Court declined to assess compensation based upon the consideration that the lands were of more value to the Crown than they were to the defendants at the time of the taking. Stebbing v. Metropolitan Board of Works, L. R. 6 Q. B. 37, and Paint v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 149, 18 S. C. R. 718, followed. Regina v. Harwood, 20 Occ. N. 424, 6 Ex. C. R. 420.

Damages—Valuation—Bridenee.]— The Crown expropriated land of L, and had it appraised by valuators, who assessed it at 811.400, which sum was tendered to L, but refused. L, brought suit by petition of right for a larger sum as compensation. The Exchequer Court awarded him $17,000. on appeal by the Crown—Held, dirouard, J. dissenting, that the evidence given on the trial of the petition shewed that the sun assessed by the valuators was a very generous compensation to L. for the loss of his land, and the increase by the judgment appealed from was not justified. The Court, while considering that a less sum than that fixed by the valuators should not be given in this case, expressly stated that the same course would not necessarily be followed in future cases of the kind. Rex v. Likely, 22 Occ. N. 191, 32 S. C. R. 47.

Leasehold Property—Tenant's Improvements—Expense of Removal—Compensation.

—The suppliant was tenant of certain buildings and wharves creeted upon lands of which he had acquired possession as assigned two leases. He there carried on business as a junk dealer. The terms for which the leases were made had expired at the time of the expropriation of the lands by the Crown; but the leases contained a profise that the buildings and other erections put on the demised premises should be valued to the demised premises should be valued as a profise that the suffer of the contraction of the demised premises should be valued to the demised premises or reversioner.

should have the option of resuming possession upon payment of the amount of such appraisement, or of renewing the leases on the same terms for a further term not less than three reasons. As such appraisement had been made, and the suppliant continued in possession of the property as tenant from year to year. The evidence shewed that the lessor had no resent intention of paying for the improvements and fresuming possession, of the property.—Held, that, in addition to the value of his improvements, the suppliant should be allowed compensation for the properties of the properties of the properties of the circumstances of his possession under the leases at the date of the exprepriation. Itelioidrick v. The King, 23 Occ. N. 10, 8 Ex. C. R. 169.

Lessor and Lesses—Covenant to Build on Demised Premises,]—Where a lessee is under covenant to build upon the demised premises, and a part of the premises are expepitated by the Crown for the purposes of a public work, the fact that by the exponiation the lessee is relieved from his covenant and the further fact that his rent is refused by reason of the taking of a part of the premises, will be taken into consideration by the Court in fixing the amount of compessation to be paid to the lessee. Rex v. funng, 22 Occ. N. 84, 7 Ex. C. R. 282.

Possession by Officers of the Crown of Lands not Expropriated—Taking of lighway—Rifle Range—Damages.]—The defendants complained that possession of certain lands not covered by the plan and description filed by the Crown in an expropriation proceeding had been taken by the officers of the Crown, and claimed compensation :- Held, that the right to recover compensation must be limited to lands mentioned in the plan and description filed, and to the injurious affection of other lands held therewith. 2. The defendants' prodecessor in title, in laying off into lots the land of which a portion was taken from the defendants by the Crown, left a roadway between the land so divided and the top of the land adjacent to the sea. This roadway had been used by the public, and work had been done upon it by the municipal authorities. The land between that so taken and the sea was not included in the plan and description filed; but the Crown closed up the roadway, and from the land taken from the defendants opened another in lieu thereof :- Held, that the defendants were not entitled to compensation in respect of the taking of the roadway. 3. Where property adjoins a rifle range, the site of which has been expropriated from the lands of the owner of such adjacent property, he is entitled to compensation for damages arising from the use of such rifle range. Rex v. Harris, 22 Occ. N. 83, 7 Ex. C. R., 277.

Prospective Value—Assessed Value.]—
Prospective Value of the expropriation bad a prospective value for residential purposes beyond that which then attached to them as lands used for farming or dairy purposes, such prospective value was take also consideration in assessing compensation. It is assessing compensation in this case the Court looked at the assessed value of the lads, not as a determining consideration, but as affording some assistance in arriving at a fair valuation of the property taken. Ex. C. R. 163, Affirmed in Turnbull Real Estate Co. v. The King, Corkery v. The King, De Bury v. The King, 33 S. C. R. 677.

Public Work—Damages—Reference. Upon an appeal from the report of special redamages reported by them was excessive, and it appearing to the Court that the matter was in which it was expedient that there should be a reference back to the referees under the 19th Rule of Court of the 12th December, 1899, an order was made therefor, in which the following directions were given to the referees:-1. To find what in September, 1902, was the value of the wharf, land, and premises taken by the Crown as mentioned in the information. In finding that value the referees were directed to exclude from their consideration the value of the same to the Crown, in the way of saving expense in the construction of the public work, or otherwise, and to determine its value at that time to the owner or any other person, for any purpose to which in the ordinary course of events it could be put. In finding that value the referees were also directed to take into account the condition, situation, and prospects of the property taken; but that such value should be one that the property had at the time it was taken, and not one that the referees might think that it might have at some future time by reason of its condition, situation, or prospects. 2. With regard to the remainder of the property, of which that taken formed part, the referees were directed to find the amount of damages, were directed to find the amount of damages, if any, that had been occasioned to the portion not expropriated by the taking of the part mentioned, and the construction of the public work. The referees were further directed that if the construction of the public work benefited and increased the value of the portion of the property not expropriated, that was to be taken into account and set off against the damages occasioned by the severance. Rex v. Shives, 9 Ex. C. R. 200.

Will - Construction - Gift Over in the Event of Death-Life Estate-Interest on Compensation Money.]—A testatrix devised and bequeathed to her nicee M. W. a dwelling-house and its contents, "but in case she should die without leaving lawful issue, then to my nieces hereinafter mentioned, and their children, being females." Following this there was a residuary gift or bequest to "the daughters of my sisters M. and H. and to the daughters or daughter of my late brother J., and to their children, if any, being daughters:"—Held, that there was nothing in the will to indicate any intention on the part of the testatrix that the gift over should not take effect unless in her lifetime her niece M. W. died without leaving lawful issue. but, on the contrary, it was to be inferred from the terms of the will that it was the intention of the testatrix that in the case of the death at any time of M. W. without leaving death at any time of M. w. without leaving lawful issue, the other nieces, to whom she left the residue of her estate, should take the property. Cowan v. Allen, 26 S. C. III. PUBLIC WORKS

Collision of Vessel with Entrance Pier to Canal — Negligence in Construc-tion.]—One of the entrance piers to a government canal was so constructed that a substructure of masonry rested on crib-work. The base of the pier was set back three feet from the edge of the crib-work, which left a step or projection under water between the masonry and the side of the crib-work. It was necessary for vessels to enter the canal with great care, at this point, owing to the eddies and currents that existed there. The proper course, however, for vessels to steer was marked by buoys. A vessel on entering was marked by buoys. the canal touched another pier than the one in question, and then, taking a sheer and getting out of control, swung over and came in collision with this pier:—Held, that, upon the facts proved, the accident was caused by the vessel being caught in a current or eddy and so carried against the pier. 2. That, as there was no negligence by any officer or servant of the Crown as to the location and the method of construction of this pier, the Crown was not liable for dam-ages arising out of the collision. British and Foreign Marine Ins. Co. v. The King, 25 Occ. N. 146.

Compulsory Taking—Compensation—Value,1—It is the value of the land at the time of the expropriation that the Court has to consider in assessing compensation. If the property has depreciated in value between the time it was acquired by the person seeking compensation and the time of the expropriation by the Crown, the former has to bear the loss. 2. Where the property is occupied by the owner as his home, and he has no need or wish to sell, the compensation ought to be assessed upon a liberal basis. Rex v. Sedger, 22 Occ. N. 84, 7 Ex. C. R. 274.

Contract-Abandonment and Substitution of Work-Implied Contract.]-The suppliants contracted with the Crown to do certain work on the Cornwall canal, the contract providing that they should provide all labour, plant, etc., for executing and completing all the works set out or referred to it in the specifications, namely, "all the dredging of the Cornwall canal on section No. 8 (not otherwise provided for)" on a date named; "that the several parts of this contract shall be taken together to explain each other and to make the whole consistent; and if it be found that anything has been omitted or misstated which is necessary for the proper performance and completion of any part of the work contemplated the contractors will, at their own expense, execute the same as though it had been properly described:" and that the en-gineer could, at any time before or during construction, order extra work to be done, or changes to be made, either to increase or diminish the work to be done, the contractors to comply with his written requirements therefor. By cl. 34 it was declared that no contract on the part of the Crown should be implied from anything contained in the signed contract or from the position of the parties at any time. After a portion of the work had been done, the Crown abandoned the scheme of constructing dams contemplated by the contract, and adopted another plan, the work on which was given to other contractors. After it was completed the suppliants filed a petition of right for the profits they could have made had it been given to them:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Exchequer Court, 7 Ex. C. R. 221, 22 Ces. N. 82, that the contract contained no express covenant by the Crown to give all the work done to the suppliants and cl. 34 prohibited any implied covenant therefor. Therefore the petition of right was properly dismissed. Gibbert Blasting and Dredging Co. v. The King, 23 Occ. N. 59, 33 S. C. R. 21.

Contract-Breach-Contractor's Duty -Repetition of Claims—Extra Work—Loss of Profits—Damages.]—By cl. 26 of the suppliants' contract with the Crown for the construction of a public work, it was, in sub-stance, stipulated that, if the contractors had any claims which they considered were not included in the progress certificates, it would be necessary for them to make and repeat such claims in writing to the engineer within fourteen days after the date of the certificate in which such claims are alleged to have been omitted; and by cl. 27 it was stipulated that the contractors in presenting claims of this kind should accompany them with satisfactory evidence of their accuracy, and the reason why, in their opinion, they should be allowed; and unless such claims were so made during the progress of the work and within the fourteen days mentioned, and repeated in writing every month until finally adjusted or rejected, it should be clearly understood that the contractors would be shut out and have no claim against the Crown in respect thereof. The suppliants did not comply with these provisions:—Held, that a petition of right for moneys claimed to be so due to contractors could not be sustained. 2 By one of the clauses of the contract it was provided that the engineer might, in his discretion, require the contractor to do certain work outside of his contract: - Held, that there was no implied contract on the part of the Crown that work outside of the contract which the engineer might, under the authority so vested in him, have required the contractor to do, should be given to the contractor; and where this is not done by the engineer, and such outside work is given to others, the contractor is not entitled to the profit that he would have made on the performance of such work. 3. Where, by a change in the plan of the works, certain works are abandoned and others substituted therefor, and the contractor is paid the loss of profits in respect of such abandoned works, he is not entitled to profits upon the substituted works. Gilbert Blasting and Dredging Co. v. The King, 22 Oc. N. 82, 7 Ex. C. R. 221.

Contract—Delay—Forfeiture—Notice by Engineer—Withdrawal of Work—Damage—Interest.]—Where a contract provides for a forfeiture for not proceeding with work at the rate required, and fixes a time for its completion, any notice given after such date to determine the contract and enforce the forfeiture must give the contractor a resonable time in which to complete the work, and the contractor must, before the forfeiture

The damages for a breach have to be measured as nearly as may be by the profits which the contractor would have made by completing the contract in a reasonable time; and loss of profits in respect ef extras could not be taken into consideration. 3. Where the Crown dispossessed the contractor of his plant, and used it in the completion of the work, the contractor was satisfied to recover the value as a going concern. 4. Where the contractor was not allowed interest upon the value of such plant, it was held that he was not to be charged with interest upon the balance of the purchase price of a portion of the plant which, with his consent, the Crown had subsequently paid. Contract for Improvement of Govcontract to Improvement of Tovernment Canal—Change in Works—Breach of Contract — Spoiled Grounds — Cost of — Mlowence for.]—The suppliants were contractors for certain works of improvement on the Rapide Plat division of the Williams burg canal. For their own use and benefit, and without notice to or request of the Crown in such behalf, they obtained certain grounds upon which to waste the material excavated by them:—Held, that the Crown was not bound to indemnify them for money expended in obtaining the said spoiled grounds. 2. In order to carry on the works in the way contemplated by the contract and specification, the contractors changed certain dump-scows into deck-scows. Thereafter a change was made by the Crown in the manner of carrying out the work, which required the contractors to convert the deck-scows into dump-scows:—Held, that the contractors were not entitled to recover from the Crown the expense they were put to in re spect to the scows, because, the change in the works being provided for in the contract, there was no breach; but that such expense might be taken into account in considering the increased cost of doing the work, under the circumstances in which it was done, as compared with the cost of doing it in the was contemplated by the contract. Weddell v. The King, 22 Occ. N. 85, 7 Ex. C. R. 323.

Contract for Sale of Railway Ties-Delivery - Inspection-Payment-Purchase by Crown from Vendee in Default-Title.]-In January, 1894, the suppliant agreed with M., acting for the B. & N. S. C. Co., to supply the company with railway ties. The supply the company with railway ties. The number of the ties was not fixed, but the suppliant was to get out as many as he could, to place them along the line of the Intercolonial Railway, and was to be paid for them as soon as they were inspected by the company. The ties were not to be removed from where the suppliant placed them until they were paid for. During the season of 1894 the suppliant got out a number of ties, which were piled alongside the Intercolonial Railway, inspected, those accepted being marked with a dot of paint and the letters "B. & S.," and thereafter paid for by the company. 1905 the suppliant made a second agreement with M. to get out another lot of ties for the company upon the same terms and conditions. Under this agreement the suppliant got out ties and placed them along the Intercolonial Railway where the former ties were piled, but the lots were not mixed. The second lot was inspected and marked with the dot of paint, but the letters "B, & S." were not put on them. The suppliant demanded payment for them from the company, but was not paid. In November, 1896, the company sold both lots of ties to the Crown for the use of the Intercolonial Railway, and was paid for them, and in May or June, 1897, the Intercolonial Railway authorities removed all the ties:—Held, that the B. & N. S. C. Co. had not at the time when they professed to sell the second lot of ties to the Crown any right to sell them, and the Crown did not thereby acquire a good title to the ties. That being so, the suppliant was entitled to have the possession of the ties restored to him, or to recover their value from the Crown. McLellan v. The King, 25 Occ. N. S1, 9 Ex. C. R. 227.

Government Railway — Carriage of Goods—Breach of Contract — Damages — Negligence, —The suppliant sought to recover a sum of $886.38 alleged to have been lost by him on a shipment of sheep undertaken to be carried by the Crown from Charlottetown, P.E.I., to Boston, U.S.A. The loss was occasioned by the sheep not arriving in Boston before the salling of a steamship thence for England, on which space had been engaged for them; and the cause of such failure was lack of room to forward them on a steambout by which connections are made between the Summerside terminus of the Prince Edward Island Railway and Pointe du Chene, N.B., a point on the Intercolonial Railway. The suppliant alleged that before the shipment was made the freight agent of the Prince Edward Island Railway at Charlottetown represented to him that if the sheep were shipped at Charlottetown on a certain date, which was done, they would arrive in Boston in time: —Held, that, even if the suppliant had proved, which he failed to do, that this representation had been made, it would have been inconsistent with the terms of the way-bill, and contrary to the regulations of the Prince Edward Island Railway, and therefore in excess of the freight agent's authority. 2. That the evidence did not disclose negligence on the part of any officer or servant of the Crown within the menning of s. 16 (c) of the Exchequer Court Act. Wheetley v. The King, 25 Occ. N. 80, 9 Ex. C. R. 222.

Government Railway — Contract for Services—Conditional Increase of Salary—Impossibility of Performance of Condition — Promises by Crown's Officers—Liability.] — However, the several trailer manager of the Intercolonial Railway, offered to secure the appointment of R. to a position in H.'s department of the railway at a salary of $2,000 per annum. R. refused that amount, but signified his willingness to accept $2,400. H., after obtaining the permission of the Minister of Railways to offer R. $2,100 per annum, wrote to him: "I would be prepared to alter the terms of my letter to read $2,100, with the assurance that should you, as I feel confident you can, develop the traffic on your division to my satisfaction, your salary should be increased to $2,400 on the 1st January, 1899." R. accepted the appointment upon these terms, and entered upon the duties of his office on the 1st January, 1898. In the, following autumn H. resigned his position on the railway. Shortly after, namely, in September, 1898, the departmnt offered to appoint R. general traveller freight agent of the railway, with headquarters at Toronto, and R. accepted the new office on the assurance contained in the letter from W then general freight agent of the railway, that "there is to be no change in the selary of the present position and the one in the west." R. entered upon his new duties on west. R. entered upon his new duties on the 10th October, 1898, and discharged the same until April, 1903, when his services were dispensed with. He had never been paid a salary during his employment by the Department of Railways of more than $2,100 per annum, and after his retirement he filed a petition of right claiming a balance of a petton of right chaining a balance of salary due him at the rate of $2.400 from the 1st January, 1899, basing such claim upon H.'s letter and W.'s letter, above mentioned: —Held, that, even if the assurance of increase of salary contained in such letter was more than an engagement or liability in honour, the contingency upon the happening of which the salary was to be increased had never in fact arisen. Before the time arrived when it could happen, two things had oc-curred to prevent it, neither of which was in the contemplation of the parties when the appointment was made. H. had resigned his office, and was no longer in a position to say whether R. had, or had not, developed the traffic to his satisfaction, and secondly, R. had ceased to hold the office in respect of which the increase of salary had been promised, and had accepted another office in connection with the traffic department of the railway. 2. The fair meaning of W.'s promise that there would be no change in the salary on R.'s acceptance of his new office in the traffic department was that R. would be paid the same amount of salary in the new position as that which he was then receiving, namely, $2,100. 3. That W. not having been shewn to have had any authority to bind the Crown by a promise to give any such increase of salary, no such authority was to be implied from the fact that he was at the time the general freight agent of the railway, and as such R.'s immediate superior officer. Robinson v. The King, 25 Occ. N. 143, 9 Ex. C. R. 448.

Government Railway-Injury to Person at Crossing—Negligence—Defective En-gine—Rate of Speed—"Train of Cars"— Dangerous Crossing—Gates or Watchman— Discretion of Croien.]—The husband of the suppliant was killed by being struck by the tender of an engine while he was on a level crossing over the Intercolonial Railway tracks, in the city of Halifax. The evidence shewed that the crossing was a dangerous one, and that no special provision had been made for the protection of the public. mediately before the deceased attempted to cross the tracks, a train of cars had been backed, or shunted, over this crossing in a direction opposite to that from which the engine and tender by which he was killed was coming. The engine used in shunting this train was leaking steam. The atmosphere was at the time heavy, and the steam and smoke from the engine did not lift quickly, but remained for some time near the ground. The result was that the shunting ground. The result was that the shunting engine left a cloud of steam and smoke that was carried over towards the track on which the engine and tender were running, and obscured them from the view of any one who approached the crossing from the direction in which the deceased approached it. The train that was being shunted and the engine and tender by which the accident was of the crossing. The train and shunting engine being clear of the crossing, the deceased attempted to cross, and when he had reached the track on which the engine and tender were being backed, the latter emerged from the cloud of steam and smoke and were upon him before he had time to get out of the way. At the time of the accident the engine and tender were being backed at the rate of six miles an hour :- Held, that the accident was attributable to the negligence of officers and servants of the Crown employed on the railway, both in using a defective engine, as above described, and in maintaining too high a rate of speeed under the circumstances. 2. An engine and ten-der do not constitute a "train of cars" within the meaning of s, 29 of the Government Railways Act, R. S. C. c. 38. Hollinger v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 21 O. R. 705, not followed. 3. Where the Minister of Rail-ways, or the Crown's officer under him whose duty it is to decide as to the matter, comes, in his discretion, to the conclusion not to employ a watchman or to set up gates at any level crossing over the Intercolonial Railway, it is not for the Court to say that the Minister or the officer was guilty of negligence because the facts shew that the crossing in question was a very dangerous one. Harris v. The King, 24 Occ. N. 388, 9 Ex. C. R. 206.

Head-gates and Waters of Canal-Control of Public and Private Rights—Crone Officer—Estoppel by Acts of—Departmental Report.] — The suppliant's predecessor in title, the Seignior of Beauharnois, early in the last century had constructed a canal or feeder, with hear-gates and appurtenances, through his own land for the purpose of conveying water from the river St. Lawrence to the river St. Louis, and so increase certain water-powers belonging to the seigniory. Later in the century, when the Beauharnois canal was constructed by the government of the province of Canada, certain works near the head of that canal had the effect of raising the water along the shores of Hungry bay. in lake St. Francis, and flooding a considerable portion of the seigniory of Beauharnois. To overcome this, the government built a dyke through Hungry bay, which crossed the feeder and had a flume with three sluice gates at its entrance into the St. Louis river. The gates that the seignior had used up to that time were removed, and the three sluice-gates mentioned were constructed as part of the public work. It was not dis-puted that this dyke was part of the property of the province, and passed to the Dominion of Canada in 1867; but down to the year 1882 the seignior and his grantees remained in possession of the feeder and head-gates. In that year, however, a sum of $10,000 was voted by Parliament for the improvement of the river St. Louis, and a sum of $5,000 in each of the two years following. nection with the work so provided for, the Crown took possession of the feeder, deep ened and improved it, built a bridge over it, and took out and re-built the head-gates. was not quite clear whether these works were undertaken by the Dominion government at the request of the farmers who owned adjacent lands or of the mill owners, or at the request of both. It was clear, however, that none of the mill owners, of whom the suppliant was one, objected in any way to what was done. But after the work was completed, the Crown's officers continued in possession of both the feeder and the head-gates, and the suppliant complained to the Minister of Public Works that he was prevented. along with other mill owners, from exercis-ing the control of the feeder and head-gates to which they were as such owners entitled. The result of this complaint was that the control and possession of the feeder and headgates were handed over to the suppliant, who retained possession until 1892, when the government resumed possession against the will and consent of the suppliant, who gave up the keys of the gates without waiving any of his rights. Prior to the time when the government in 1892 took possession of the feeder, the suppliant had acquired the rights therein of all the mill owners interested excepting one, the rights of the latter being acquired afterwards in the same year :-Held, that, as the suppliant's auteurs were not in possession of the feeder and headnot in possession of the deed of conveyance, they could not give him possession thereof as against the Crown; and, as the right of control and regulation of the head-gates had been in the Crown from the time the dyke was built, such right was not lost by the Crown ceasing to exercise it for the period above mentioned. The suppliant, while enjoying the right to have these works so regulated and controlled as to give him all the water he was entitled to, consistent with other public or private interest therein, had not the paramount or exclusive control and regulation of them, which, by the necessities of the case, were vested in the Crown. The Crown is not estopped by any statement of facts or by any conclusions or opinions stated in any departmental report by any of its officers or servants. Robert v. The King, 9 Ex. C. R. 21.

Injurious Affection—Closing up Street
-Compensation.]—The properties of the suppleants were injuriously affected by the constretion of a public work, which obstructed a haway upon which the properties respects by abutted. MacArthur's property was 190, feet from the place of obstruction, and Keen's 240 feet. The suppliant's properties, iniciand of being respectively situated, as they were formerly, on a main thoroughfare, were, be the change effected by the construction of the said public work, situated at the extreme end of a street closed up at one end, and forming a cul de sac:—Held, that where the injurious affection concerned the presonal convenience of the occupiers of the properties in question, the suppliants were not entitled to compensation, but that in so far as the value of the property, in the bands on yone, and used for any purpose to which they could be put, was lessened, the suppliants ought to recover therefor.

In Affective V. The King, Keefe v. The King,

Injurious Affection of Property—Deprivation of Access—Street—Damages.]—By the construction of a public work a public high-D—17 way was closed up at a point two hundred and fifty feet distant from the suppliant's property, which fronted on the highway. In the first expropriation for the public work of land in the neighbourhood no part of the suppliant's property was taken. Afterwards, and during the construction of the public and during the construction of the public work, a portion of his property was taken for the public work, and on the trial of a petition of right for compensation, the question arose as to whether or not the depreciation of the property by reason of the clos-ing up of the street or highway should be taken into account as one of the elements of damages:-Held, that it should be so taken into account, first, because it appeared that the depreciation from this cause in fact occurred subsequent to the taking of the land, and secondly, it was a case in which the suppliant was entitled to compensation for the injurious affection of his property by reason of the obstruction of the highway, reason or the obstruction of the inginway, which was proximate and not remote. Metropolitan Board of Works v. McCarthy, L. R. 7. H. L. 243, Caledonian Railway Co. v. Walker's Trustees, 7 App. Cas. 259, and Barry v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 333, referred to. McQuade v. The King, 22 Occ. N. 87, 7 Ex. C. R. 348.

Injurious Affection—Evosion—Increase of—Exchequer Court—Jurisdiction,]—Where the crosion of land by the natural action of the waters of a river was accelerated and increased by certain works erected in the river, and some dredging done therein by the Crown, a petition of right will lie for damages, 2. The jurisdiction of the official arbitrators under s, 1 of 33 V. c. 23, and 34 V. of 35 V. c. 24, was, in substance, transferred to the Exchequer Court of Canada by ss. 16, 58, and 59 of 50 & 51 V. c. 16. Graham v. The King, 8 Ex. C. V. 331.

Injury to Person—Negligence—Common Employment in Manitoba—W.rkmen's Compensation Act.]—The effect of s. 16 (c) of the Exchequer Court Act is not to extend the Crown's liability so as to enable any one to impute negligence to the Crown itself, or to make it liable in any case in which a subject in like circumstances would not be liable. 2. In the province of Manitoba the Dominion government is not liable for any injury to one of its servants arising from the negligence of a fellow-servant. Filion v. The Queen, 24 S. C. R. 482, referred to. 3. With respect to the liability of the Dominion government in cases involving the doctrine of common employment, nothing short of an Act of the Parliament of Canada can after the law of Manitoba as it stood on that subject on the 15th July, 1870. The Workmen's Compensation Act, R. S. M. c. 178, does not apply to the Crown, the Crown not being mentioned therein. Riper v. The King. 25 Occ. N. 85, 113, 9 Ex. C. R. 330, 38 S. C. R. 462.

Injury to Property—Barge Wintering in Government Canal—Lovering Level of Water—Omission to Notify Owner—Negligence—50 & 51 V. c. 16, s. 16 (c).]—In the autumn of 1900 the suppliant placed his barge for winter quarters at a place in the Lachine canal which he had before used for a similar purpose. The practice is now changed, but up to and including the year 1900 it was sufficient for any owner of a barge, without asking leave or notifying any one on behalf of the Crown, to leave his barge in the canal, and during the winter some officer of the canals department would take the name of the barge, measure it, make up an account based on the tonnage for such use of the canal, and in the spring collect the amount thereof from the owner of the barge before she was permitted to leave the canal, the whole in conformity with the provisions of Art. 32 of the tariff of tolls framed by that department and issued in the year 1895. Some time after the suppliant had so placed his barge in the canal, M., the superintending engineer for the province of Quebec of the canals department, wrote officially to O'B., the superintendent of the Lachine canal, directing him to have the water lowered on certain dates during the winter to facilitate certain work then being done by the Grand Trunk Railway Company on their swing bridge at St. Henri, M. also gave an oral order to O'B, to comply with the usual practice of notifying the owners of barges wintering in the canal before lowering the water on any occasion. In pursuance of such order, O'B. directed one of the employees of the canal to notify the barge owners whenever the level of the water was to be lowered. This employee failed to notify the suppliant This employee failed to notify the suppliant before the water was lowered on a certain date, and his barge was so injured by the lowering of the level of the water that she became a total loss:—Held, confirming the report of the registrar, that, as the canal was a public work, a case of negligence was established for which the Crown was liable under the provisions of $.16 (c) of the under the provisions of s. 16 (c) of the Exchequer Court Act, 50 & 51 V. c. 16. Gagnon v. The King, 25 Occ. N. 56, 9 Ex. C. R. 189.

Lands Injuriously Affected — Closing Highacay—Inconvenient Substitute,] — The owner of land is not entitled to compensation where, by construction of a public work, he is deprived of a mode of reaching an adjoining district and obliged to use a substituted route which is less convenient. The fact that the substituted route subjects the owner at times to delay does not give him a claim to be compensated, as it arises from the subsequent use of the work, and not its construction, and is an inconvenience common to the public generally. The general depreciation of property because of the vicinity of a public work does not give rise to a claim by any particular owner. Where there is a remedy by indictment, mere inconvenience to an individual or loss of trade or business is not the subject of compensation. Judgment of the Exchequer Court, 8 Ex. C. R. 245, reversed. Rex v. MacArthur, 24 Occ. N. 201, 34 S. C. R. 570.

Lease of Water Power—Stoppage of Power on improvement of Canal—Danagas—New Lease—Waiver—Surrender—Measure of Damagas.]—The suppliant was the owner of a flouring mill at frequents, Ontario, which was built upon a portion of the Galops Canal reserve, and, prior to the 12th December, 1898, was operated by water power taken from the surplus water of the canal. The site upon which the mill was built, as well as the water power sufficient to drive four runs of ordinary mill stones, equal to a tenhorse power for each run, were held by the suppliant under a lease from the Crown. On that date the canal was unwatered to facilitate the construction of certain works that were being carried out by the government of Canada for its enlargement and improvement. At that time it was not intended that the stoppage of the supply of such surplus water to the mill should be permanent, but temporary only. Subsequently, however, certain changes in the work were made, which resulted in such supply being permanent's discontinued. These changes were made by the Crown, at the request of the suppliant and others, for the purpose of developing the water power, of which the suppliant expected obtain a lease on favourable terms :-Held, that the suppliant was entitled to recover compensation for the loss of power to which he was entitled under the earlier lease, 2. The Court did not include in such compensation any claim for loss of profits or dissipation of business, because, on the one hand. in its inception the stoppage of water was lawful and within the lease, and there was no ground upon which such claim could be allowed except that founded upon a change in the works that was made in part at the instance of the suppliant and to meet his instance of the supplimit and to meet in views, and wholly with his acquiescence and consent; while, on the other hand, he had at all times a well founded claim either to have the power granted by the former lease restored to him, or to be paid a just compensation for the loss of it. 3. It was provided in the first lease that the suppliant would have no claim for damages in the event of a temporary stoppage of water for the purpose inter alia, of improving or altering the canal. Upon the question whether the stoppage of the water supply for the period of two and one-half years, being the time actually necessary for the execution of the works for enlarging and improving the canal would have been a temporary stoppage within the meaning of the former lease:—Held, that, having regard to the subject matter of the lease. any stoppage of the supply of surplus water actually necessary for the repair, improve ment, or alteration of the canal, in the public interest, and to meet the requirements of the trade of the country, would be temporary within the meaning of the provision above referred to, although it might last for several years. 4. Upon the question as to whether the acceptance by the suppliant of the lease of 1901 worked a surrender of the grant of surplus water made by the former lease :-Held, that, as there was nothing in the two leases which would go to affect the validity of either of them, and there was no inconsistency between them, the two leases should stand. 5. That the damages should be measured by the cost of supplying and using for the operation of the mill forty horse power furnished in some other way than by the water supply in question. Beach v. The King, 25 Occ. N. 83, 9 Ex. C. R. 287.

Negligence — Freight Elevator—Use of, by Employees—City By-lauc.—The suppliant, an employee of the post office in the city of Montreal, was injured by falling from a lift to the floor of the basement. The lift was used for the transfer of mail bags and matter with those in charge of them from one floor to another in the post office building. It was proved that the lift was constructed in the usual and customary maner of freight elevators, but the suppliant contended that, as the lift was allowed to be used by certain employees in going from one floor to another, it should have been provided with guards or something to prevent anyone from falling from it, as the suppliant did, while passing from the first floor to the basement:—Held, that such user by the employees did not constitute the lift a passenger elevator and impose a duty upon those in charge of it to see that it was better protected than it was. 2. In any event the suppliant was not using the lift as a passenger at the time of the accident, but to transfer mail matter of which he was then in charge. 3. The by-law of the city of Montreal respecting freight and passenger elevators, passed on the 4th February, 1901, did not affect the liability of the Crown in this case. The lift in question was built in 1897, before the enactment of such by-law, and was situated in the post office at Montreal, which building constitutes part of the public property of the Dominion, and so was within the exclusive legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada. Finigan v. The King, 25 Occ. N. 145.

Negligence of Crown Officials—Right of Action—Injury to Land—Jurisdiction of Exchequer Court — Prescription,] — Lands in the vicinity of a government canal were injuriously affected through flooding caused by the negligence of the Crown officials in failing to keep a siphon-tunnel clear and in proper order to carry off the waters of a stream which had been diverted and carried under the canal, and also by part of the lands being spoiled by dumping matter upon ft:—Held, reversing the judgment in 21 Occ. N. 27, 7 Ex. C. R. 1, that the owner had a right of action and was entitled to recover damages for the injuries sustained, and that the Exchequer Court of Canada had exclusive original jurisdiction under ss. 16, 23, and 58 of the Exchequer Court Act. Regina v. Fillon, 24 S. C. R. 482, approved. City of Quebee v. The Queen, ib. 430, referred to. The prescription established by art. 2261, C. C., applies to the damages claimed by the owner. Letourneux v. The King, 33 S. C. R. 335.

Non-repair-Money Voted by Parliament -Discretion of Minister - Jurisdiction of Court—Improvement of Navigation.]—There is no law of Canada under which the Crown is liable in damages for the mere non-repair of a public work, or for failing to use in the repair of any public work money voted by Parliament for the purposes of such pub-2. In such a case, whether the repair should be made or the money expended is within the discretion of the Governor in Council or of the Minister of the Crown under whose charge the work is; and for the exercise of that discretion he and they are responsible to Parliament alone, and such discretion cannot be reviewed by the Courts:— Semble, that, although the channel of a river may be considered a public work under the management, charge, and direction of the management, charge, and direction of the Minister of Public Works during the time that he is engaged in improving the navigation of such channel under the authority of s. 7 of the Public Works Act, R. S. C. 5 36, it does not follow that once the Min-ister has expended public money for such a purpose, the Crown is for all time bound to teep such channel clear and safe for navigation, or that for any failure to do so it must asswer in damages. Hamburg American Pecket Co. v. The King, 21 Occ. N. 517, 7 Ex. C. R. 150, affirmed 33 S. C. R. 252.

Rifle Range—Injury to Person.]—A rifle range under the control of the Department of Millita and Defence is not a "public work" within the meaning of the Exchequer Court Act, 50 & 51 V. c. 16, s. 16 (c). The words "any officer or servant of the Crown" in the section referred to, do not include officers and men of the millita. Judgment in 6 Ex. C. R. 425, 20 Coc. N. 424, affirmed. Larose v. The King, 21 Occ. N. 327, 31 S. C. R. 206.

IV. OTHER CASES.

Bounties on Manufacture of "Pig Iron" and Steel — Statutes — Interpretation.]—it is a general practice in the art of manufacturing steel to use the iron product of the blast furnaces while still in a liquid or molten form for the manufacture of steel, the hot metal being taken direct from the blast furnaces to the steel mill. Among iron-masters and those who are familiar with the art of manufacturing iron and steel the term "pig iron" has come to mean that substance or material in a liquid as well as in a solid form. A question having arisen as to whether the iron when so used in a liquid or molten form was "pig iron" within the meaning of the term as employed in 60 & 61 V. c. 6 and 62 & 63 V. c. 8:—Held, that the term "pig iron" in the Act mentioned applied to the iron used in the manufacture for such iron. Dominion Iron and Steel Co, V. The King, 23 Occ. N. 1. 8 Ex. C. R. 107.

Contract—Builment—Hire of Horses for Construction of Public Work—Loss of Horses —Xegligence—Liability — Petition of Right — Remaine of Croven.]—1. Where the suppliant's goods are in the possession of an officer or servant of the Crown under a contract of hiring made by him for the Crown, the obligation of the hirer in such a case is to take reasonable care of the goods according to the circumstances, and the hirer is liable for ordinary neglect. Where there is a breach of the hirer's obligation in such a case, the Crown is liable under the contract of its officer or servant. 2. Having regard to the circumstances in evidence, the hirer of the horses on the work after the grazing the horses on the work after the grazing the horses on the work after the grazing dated imprudently in continuing the horses on the work after the grazing the horses on the work after the grazing acted imprudently in continuing the horses on the work after the training the horses on the work after the grazing and acted imprudently in continuing the horses on the work after the training the horses on the work after the grazing and cated imprudently in continuing the horses of the Crown's officer or servant. Windsor v. Annapolis A. W. Co. v. The Queen, 11 App. Cas. 607, referred to . 4. The Crown is liable in respect of an obligation arising upon a contract implied by law. Regina v. Henderson, 28 S. C. R. 425, referred to . 5. An action arising out of a contract for the hire of horses to be used in the construction of a public work of Canada lies against the executive authority of the Dominion, and is not affected or defeated by the demise of the Crown.—Semble, that the loss sustained by the suppliant in this case was an "hipty to property on a public work" within the meaning of clause C. of s. 16 of the Exchequer Court Act. Johnson v. The King, 24 Occ. N. 2, 8 Ex. C. R. 360.

Contract - Inland Revenue Stamps -Breach of Contract-Acceptance by Officer-Recovery of Money Paid—Deduction of Cost of Production—Set-off—Quantum Meruit.]— Revenue stamps are not articles of merchandise, and have no commercial value. 2. The defendants contracted to print for the Crown certain Inland Revenue stamps from steel plates, but delivered, instead, stamps pro-duced from steel transferred to stone, which were accepted, paid for, and used by an offi-cer of the Crown under the belief that they were produced by the process specified in the contract, the Crown not being bound by the acts of the officer:—Held, that the Crown was entitled to recover back the money paid. -3. Semble, that the defendants could not recover from the Crown on a quantum meruit the fair value of the stamps produced from stone; their right to an allowance therefrom stone; their right to an allowance there-for would be a right of set-off, which does not exist against the Crown; but the Crown having consented to allow the defendants the fair cost of production without profit, they must accept that or nothing; and the "fair cost of production" meant the fair cost to a competent person with the necessary capital, skill, means, and appliances for producing such stamps. Rex v. British American Bank Note Co., 7 Ex. C. R. 119.

Where funds belonging to the suppliants had gone to form part of a fund paid into the hands of the Minister of Finance and Receiver-General, as unadministered assets, in the case of the insolvency of a bank, in proceedings under the Winding-up Act, R. S. c. 129, and it was objected that the suppliants were not entitled to such moneys because of judicial decision to the contrary in other litigation in respect to the fund :-Held, that, if it was clear that the matter had been really determined, effect should be given to the estoppel, but that where to give effect to it would work injustice, the Court, before applying the rule, ought to be sure that an estoppel arises by reason of such decision. In this case there was no estoppel. A reference to the Registrar was directed to ascertain what proportion of the fund in the hands of the Minister properly belonged to the suppliants. The rule as to estoppel stated by King, J., in Farwell v. The Queen, 22 S. C. R. 558, referred to. 2. One of the equities or conditions attaching to the sale to H, was that a debtor had a right to set off against his debt the amount which he had at his credit in the bank at the date of its insolvency. It appeared that at the time of the bank's insolvency certain of its debtors had at their credit in the bank's books sums which they would, on payment or settlement of their debts, have a right to apply in reduction thereof, and the suppliants claimed that they were entitled to be indemnified in respect of such reductions out of the fund in the hands of the Receiver-General:—Held, that the suppliants were not entitled to such indemnity. Hogaboom v. The King, 22 Occ. N. 88, 7 Ex. C. R. 292.

Liability as Common Carrier—Loss of Acid in Tank Car during Transportation— Contract—Negligence—Costs.]—The Crown is not, in regard to liability for loss of goods carried, in every respect in the position of an ordinary common carrier. The latter is in the position of an insurer of goods, and any special contract made is in general in mitigation of its common law obligation and liability. The Crown, on the other hand, is not liable at common law, and a petition will not lie against it for the loss of goods carried on its railway, except under a con-tract, or where the case fal's within the statute under which it is in certain cases liable for the negligence of its servants (50 & 51 V. c. 16, s. 16), and in either case the burden is on the suppliant to make out his case. 2. By an arrangement between the consignee of the acid in question and the officers of the Intercolonial Railway, freight charges on goods carried by the latter were paid at stated times each month, and in case anything was found wrong a refund was made to the consignee. In the present case the consignee paid the freight on the acid, amounting to $135, no refund being made by the Crown. This amount was paid to the consignee by the suppliants, and they claimed recovery of the same from the Crown in their petition of right. The evidence shewed that by the arrangement above mentioned the freight was not payable on the transportation of the tank car, but on the acid contained in the car at the rate of 27 cents per 100 pounds of acid:—Held, that the Crown was only entitled to the freight on the number of pounds delivered to the consignee at Sydney: and that the balance of the amount paid by the consignee should be repaid to the sup-pliant with interest. 3. That, as the suppliants, while succeeding as to part of the amount claimed, had failed on the main issue in controversy, each party should bear their own costs, Nicholls Chemical Co. of Canada v. The King, 25 Occ. N. 82, 9 Ex. C. R. 272.

Payment for Services as Commissioner—Servant—Public Office.]—A person appointed under the provisions of R. S. C. c. 115, as a commissioner to investigate and report upon improper conduct in office of an officer or servant of the Crown, cannot recover against the Crown payment for his services as such commissioner, there being no provision for such payment in that enactment or elsewhere. 2. The service in such a case is not rendered in virtue of any contract, but merely by virtue of appointment under the statute. 3. The appointment partakes more of the character of a public office, than of a mere employment to render a service under contract, express or implied. Tucker V. The King, 22 Occ. N. 201, 7 Ex. C. R. 351, affirmed 32 S. C. R. 722.

Petition of Right—Damage to Lands—Subsidence—Release of Claim.,—In connection with the work of affording better terminal facilities for the Intercolonial Railway at the port of St. John, N. B., the Dominion Government acquired a portion of the suppliant's land and a wharf, the latter being removed by the Crown in the course of carring out such works. For the lands and wharf so taken by the Crown, the suppliant was paid a certain sum, and he released the Crown from all claims for damages arising from "the expropriation by Her Majesty of the lands and premises, or the construction and maintenance thereon of a railway or railway works of any nature." One of the effects of the removal of the wharf was to leave a wharf remaining on the suppliant's land more exposed than it formerly had been

Petition of Right—Suppliant—Locus Standi,—The suppliant applied to be allowed to purchase certain lands under s. 31 of the Land Act, tendering the proper amount therefor. The application was refused on the ground that the lands had been granted to a railway company. The suppliant alleged that such grant was illegally issued and void, and the Crown allowed a petition of right to be brought:—Held, that the suppliant had no locus standi to obtain any relief. Hall v. The Queen, 7 B. C. R. SP, 480.

Postmaster's Salary-Allowances - Interest—Civil Service Act. | By the Civil Service Act, R. S. C. c. 17, sched. B., a city postmaster's salary, where the postage collections in his office amount to $20,000 and core nor proper in Section 1. over, per annum, is fixed at a definite sum according to a scale therein provided. discretion is vested in the Governor-in-Council or in the Postmaster-Gerenal to make the salary more or less than the amount provided. Notwithstanding the statute, it was the practice of the Postmaster-General to take a vote of Parliament for the payment of the salar-ies of postmasters. For the years between 1892 and 1900, except one, the amount of the 1892 and 1800, except one, the amount of the appropriation for the suppliant's salary was less than the amount he was entitled to under the statute:—Held, that he was entitled to recover the difference. 2. That the provisions in s. 6 of the Civil Service Act to the effect that "the collective amount." of the salaries of each department shall in no case exceed that provided for by the vote of Parliament for that purpose," was no bar to the suppliant's claim, even if it could be shewn that if in any year the full, salary to which the suppliant was entitled had been paid, the total vote would have been exceeded. Such provision is in the nature of a direction to the officers of the Treasury who are intrusted with the safe keeping and payment of the public money, and not to the Courts of law. Collins v. United States, 15 Ct. of Clms. 35, referred to. 3. The suppliant was not entitled to interest on his claim. 4. The provision in s. 12 of the Civil Service Amendment Act, 1888, to the effect Service Amendment Act, 1888, to the enect that "no extra salary or additional remun-eration of any kind whatsoever shall be paid to any deputy-head, officer, or employee in the civil service of Canada, or to any other person permanently employed in the public service," does not prevent Parliament at any time from voting any extra salary or remuneration, and where such an appropriation is made for such extra salary or remuneration, and the same is paid over to any officer, the Crown cannot recover it back. Hargrave v. The King, 22 Occ. N. 427, 8 Ex. C. R. 62.

Public Officer—Assignment of Salary—Public Policy.]—The provisions respecting the assignments of choses in action found in

R. S. O. c. 51, s. 58 (5), (6), are not binding upon the Crown as represented by the government of Canada. 2. On grounds of public policy the salary of a public officer is not assignable by him. 3. Neither the librarian of Parliament nor the Auditor-General of Canada has power to bind the Crown by acknowledging explicitly or implicitly an assignment of salary by an officer or clerk employed in the library of Parliament. Powerly V. The King, 25 Occ. N. 140, 9 Ex. C. R. 364.

Return of Moneys Paid by Mistake—Action for.]—The suppliant brought his petition of right to recover from the Crown the sum of $190, which he alleged he paid under mistake to the Crown in settlement of an information of intrusion in respect of certain lands occupied by him. He also claimed $500 for damages for the loss which he alleged resulted to him on the sale of the lands by reason of the proceedings taken against him by the Crown:—Held, that the suppliant's petition disclosed no right of action against the Crown, and that a demurrer should be allowed. Moore v. Vestry of Fulham, [1894] 1 Q. B. 399, followed. Paget v. The King, 21 Occ. N. 280, 7 Ex. C. E. 50.

30th November, 1900, in an envelope addressed to the defendant at a place in Ontario. On the 28th December, 1900, judgment was entered for the plaintiff for default of appearance to the writ, for damages to be assessed. No proceedings were taken upon the statement of claim either to enter judgment or a default note:-Held. that, according to the practice, no assessment could be made except upon the judgment for default of appearance, for nothing else was ripe for assessment; and the plaintiff could not have damages pursuant to the claim indorsed on the writ, because it appeared by the evidence that she had consented to the defendant conveying the land in breach of his covenant. The action was, therefore, dismissed, but without costs and without prejudice to a new action being brought upon the causes of action set forth in the statement of claim:—Semble, that the order for service by posting should not have been made. the material being quite insufficient, and there being no probability that the papers would reach him. Contract—Breach—Assessment by Judge—Evidence-Guess — Appeal — Concurrent Findings of Courts Below.]—The evidence in an action for breach of contract being insufficient to enable the trial Judge to assess damages, he was obliged to guess, as he stated, and his guess was $5,000. This was affirmed by a provincial appellate tribunal. The Supreme Court of Canada allowed an appeal and dismissed the action, the majority holding that the result of the absence of evidence was that the damages could be no more than nominal. the defendants' servants upon the plainthe defendants sevants upon the plaintiff's property and the wrongful seizure and appropriation of the plaintiff's chattels. The jury found that the defendants, by their servants, took possession of the property illegally and in violation of their agreement, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the value of the property taken, and they assessed the damages at $730, for which judgment was given by the trial Judge with costs. The evidence as reported did not disclose proof of the value of several of the chattels for the taking of which damages were claimed, and it did not appear anywhere how the $730 was made up. Upon a motion by the de-fendants to set aside the judgment and for a new trial :- Held, per Meagher and Ritchie, JJ., that the evidence of damage which was before the jury not having been reported to the Court, and in view of the violent and illegal manner of entry upon the premises, the Court was not in a position to decide that the damages were excessive. Per Townshend and Graham, JJ., that the damages should be reduced to conform with the proof of loss suffered disclosed in the evidence before the Owing to the equal division of opinion, the motion was dismissed, but without Johnston v. Expropriation of Land—Assessment
lesse of premises used as an ice house recovered damages from a city corporation for injuries by the expropriation of part of the premises. In his statement of claim he had expressly reserved the right of further recourse for damages. In an action brought after his death by his universal legatee to recover damages for loss of the use of the ice house during the unexpired term :-Held that the reservation did not preserve any further right of action in respect of the expropriation, and the plaintiff's action was properly dismissed, as, in such cases, all damages capable of being foreseen must be assessed once for all, and a defendant cannot be twice sued for the same cause. Flooding Land-Measure of Damages-Duty of Claimant to Diminish.]-Where there is, in the power of the person complaining, an obvious and inexpensive method of reducing, diminishing, or wholly doing away with the damages complained of, e.g., by a short transverse drain to prevent flooding of land, it is his duty to adopt it, and, in default of his doing so, he is only entitled to recover such loss as he would have suffered if he had taken proper measures to prevent or diminish the damages. Filiatrault v. Village of Coteau Landing, Q. R. 23 S. C. 62.

Inadequacy—New Trial — Compromise Verdict.]—A new trial on the ground of the insufficiency of the damages will not be granted unless it appears clearly to the Court that the smallness of the damages has arisen from mistake upon the part of either the Judge or jury, or from some unfair practice on the part of the defendant.—A verdict will not be set aside on the ground that it is a compromise verdict if it can be justified upon any hypothesis presented by the evidence. Currie v. St. John R. W. Co., 36 N. Bt Reps. 194.

Injury to Property—Elements of Damages—Fees of Expert Witnesses—Notarial Protests.]—The fees of expert witnesses employed to make examinations of property, plans, etc., necessary for the proof of the plaintiff's allegations of damage to property caused by the defendants' illegal acts, and also the costs of notarial protests, form part of the damages which the plaintiff is entitled to recover from the adverse party. Décarie v. Town of Montreal West, Q. R. 26 S. C.

Lord Campbell's Act—Action — Bar— Life Insurance.]—The fact that a widow has, upon the death of her husband, obtained the proceeds of a policy of insurance upon his life, is not a bar to her recovering damages from the person responsible for the accident which caused his death. Konwaketasion v. Dominion Bridge Co., 5 Q. P. R. 320.

Lord Campbell's Act — Apportionment between Widow and Children — Other Provision for Widow.] — An action brought against a railway company by a widow on behalf of herself and four infant children, aged respectively seven, five, three, and one year, to recover damages for the death of her husband through the company's alleged negligence, was settled by the company paying $4,800. On application to a Judge, the amount was apportioned by giving the widow $1,200, and each of the children $900, the widow also to be paid for the children's maintenance $200 a year half-yearly for three years, the fact of the widow having already received $1,000 for insurance on the hus-Burkholder v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 23 Occ. N. 155, 5 O. L. R. 428, 2 O. W. R. 267.

Lord Campbell's Act-Death of Relative-Reasonable Expectation of Pecuniary Benefit.]-The parents and sisters of a man who was killed by an electric shock whilst working in the defendants' works, and in consequence, as it was alleged, of defects in the appliances supplied by the defendants at the works, sued for damages for his death. The deceased, who was the only son of the rector of a small parish near Montreal, with an income of about $600 a year, had been given a college education and had returned home when about 21 years old. For a time he remained at home, earning nothing. he spent some time in the insurance business in Vermont. Then, on account of his father's illness, he went home, but soon left for Manitoba in search of occupation. There, after working at several things for about three years, he was employed by the defendants to manage their electric works at a salary of $115 a month, out of which he had to pay $45 a month to an engineer and sometimes to hire other assistance. He had been thus employed about three months when he met his death. The parents were getting old and mis death. The parents were given good and were in failing health and it was not shewn whether they had or had not any means beyond the income of $600 a year. The deceased contributed nothing to the support of the family during all the time he was in Manitoba; but, according to the father's evidence, he had been a great help to him when at home, and had assisted him in many ways in his parish work and in matters of business, and was "a noble, faithful son," efficient in every way, steady and industrious, and "an affectionate son and brother?'—Held, that there was nothing in all this to warrant the inference of a reasonable expectation of any pecuniary benefit to the plain-tiffs from a continuance of the life of the deceased, and that the verdict of the jury in favour of the plaintiffs should be set aside. Sykes v. North Eastern R. W. Co., 44 L. J. C. P. 191, and Mason v. Betram, 18 O. R. 1, followed. Davidson v. Stuart, 22 Occ. N. 236, 14 Man. L. R. 74.

Lord Campbell's Act—Pecuniary Loss from Death of Son—Negligence—Evidence —Judge's Charge—Excessive Damages—New Trial.]-In an action under Lord Campbell's Act for the benefit of the father of a man who lost his life as alleged by the negligence of the defendants, evidence was riven to shew that the father, who was about 70 years old, was unable to earn his own living; that the son, who was 26, had always lived with his father, and for many years had paid for his board and lodging; that for the 15 months previous to his death, he had paid nothing, be-cause, having gone into business for himself, his father wished him to keep the money to put into the business; that when the son went into business, the father advanced him $700; that the saie of the son's business realized $1,100, of which the father got $400 on account of his advance. The trial Judge left it to the jury in general terms to estimate what, if any, pecuniary damage the father had sustained by the death of his son; and the jury found a verdict for $3,500:—Held, that the amount of the verdict shewed either that the charge was too general in its terms, or the jury misunderstood the principles upon which damages should be assessed in cases such as this, and, therefore, that there must be a new trial on the question of damages, and, as the evidence of negligence on the part of the defendants was not altogether satisfactory, and the finding of the jury on the ques-tion of the damages did not entitle their opinion on the question of negligence to much weight, there must be a new trial on this point as well. 2. That, as a claim for $300, the balance due the father upon his advance, had not been mentioned in the particulars delivered under the Act, and was not referred to either in the plaintiff's opening, the Judge's charge, or in any other part of the case, it was impossible to say that the jury in assessing the damages had included this item; therefore, even admitting this claim to be a proper element of damage in cases under the Act, it must be submitted to the consideration of another jury. 3. That, outside of the debt, there was sufficient evidence to go to the jury of a pecuniary loss to the father by the son's death. Runciman v. Star Line S. S. Co., 35 N. B. Reps. 123.

Measure of—Accident to Person—Negligence of Crown's Servants—Pecuniary Benefit.)—In the case of death resulting from negligence, and an action by the party entitled to launch the same under the provisions of R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 178, s. 5, the damage should be calculated in reference to a reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit, as of right or otherwise, from the continuance of the life. 2. Such party is not to be compensated for any pain or suffering arising from the loss of the deceased; or for the expenses of medical treatment of the deceased or for his burial expenses, or for family mourning. Osborn v. Gillett, L. R. S. Ex. 88, distinguished. McDonald v. The King, 21 Occ. N. 581, 7 Ex. C. R. 216.

Measure of-Breach of Contract-Evidence—New Trial.]—In an action brought by him for work done and materials supplied in constructing a mill for the defendants, the defendants counterclaimed for damages arising from the defective performance of the work which the plaintiff was employed to do:-Held, that the defendants were entitled to damages suffered by reason of the loss of the use of the mill during the sawing season, but, as there was no evidence to fix the amount, and as damages were allowed to which the defendants were not legally enthere must be a new trial :- Held, titled. that the plaintiff was not liable for damages not in contemplation of the parties, or not being the immediate result of the breach of contract, such as additional cost of sawing, or logs sold at a loss. Bruhm v. Ford, 33 N. S. Reps. 323.

--Action for damages for negligence. Plaintiffs (husband and wife) were being driven in an enclosed omnibus when crossing the tracks of the defendants; the omnibus was caught between the two parts of a freight train which was about to be coupled, when the driver of the omnibus was caught between the two sections of the train, and while considerable damage was done to the omnibus, neither of the plaintiffs suffered visible bodily injury, beyond a few slight bruises, but both complained of serious injury to their nervous systems as a result of fright:-Held, action should be dismissed as damages were result of mental shock only. Henderson v. Canada Atlantic R. W. Co., 25 A. R. 437, and Victorian Railway Commissioners v. Coultas, 13 App. Cas. 222, followed, but, in view of the unsatisfactory state of the law and the conflict in the decisions, no costs were allowed. Geiger v. Grand Trung R. W. Co., 5 O. W. R. 434, 6 O. W. R. 482, 10 O. L. R. 511.

Nervous Shock - Personal Injuries-Damages not Severable-Judgment-Appeal -Waiver.]-The movable portion of a fence erected by the defendant fell upon the plaintiff while passing along the street, and caused injuries for which damages were claimed. The trial Judge assessed the damages at $25, and ordered judgment in favour of the plaintiff for that amount. The plaintiff's solicitor took an order for judgment for the amount awarded, taxed his costs, and immediately de-manded payment from the defendant under threat that, if not paid, judgment would be entered, and execution issued. Subsequently the plaintiff appealed from the judgment, in so far as it restricted the damages awarded to external injuries suffered by the plaintiff, and refused to allow damages for shock con sequent upon such external injuries:-Held,

Newous Shock—Physical Injury—Liability for.]—Fear or nervous shock resulting in physical injury may render him who occasions it liable in an action for damages. Fear is not of itself a basis of an action for damages, because ordinarily it does not produce any physical injury, but if such injury results there is liability. Victorian Railway Commissioners v. Coultas, 13 App. Cas. 222, discussed. Montreal Street R. W. Co. v. Walker, Q. R. 13 K. B. 324.

Nnisance—Exemplary Damages — Evidence—Appeal.] — Where there has been a manifest disturbance of enjoyment and violation of rights of ownership, e.g., by the smoke, noise, and vibration caused by the operation of machinery on an adjoining property, the person so disturbed in his enjoyment is, even without proof of any precise amount of damages suffered, entitled to nominal or exemplary damages. 2. Moreover, on a question of the appreciation of damages, the Court of Appeal will not disturb the award of the Court below, in the absence of any special ground for doing so. Montreal Street R. W. Co. V. Gareau, Q. R. 13 K. B. 12.

Public Work — Injury to the Person—Nesilgence—Aggravation of Injury by Un-tkilful Treatment—Croven.]—Where a person who is injured through the negligence of a servant of the Crown on a public work, voluntarily «Jomits himself to unprofessional medical treatment, proper skilled treatment being available, and the natural results of the injury are aggravated by such unskilled or improper treatment, he is entitled to such damages as would, with proper treatment, have resulted from the imjury, but not to damages resulting from the improper treatment he subjected himself to. Vinet v, The King, 25 (ec. N. 133), 9 Ex. C. R. 352.

Railway Accident — Nerrous Shock.]—A railway company is liable, in an action by one injured in an accident while a passager in the company's train, for damages and pecuriary loss consequent upon a fright resulting in a shock to the nervous system causing physical injury, if the fright was the result of the accident, and was reasonable and natural. Kirkparick v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 35 N. B. Reps. 598.

Reduction — Consent—Costs.]—The defeedant company, instead of paying to the plaintiff the amount of damages sustained by a fire in her bakery, undertook to repair the damage, and on account of the faulty manner in which the work was carried out the plaintiff sed for the amount of the damages caused by the fire, and also for damages in respect of loss occasioned by reason of being unable to carry on the business. The plaintiff chief witness stated that the inlury to the business was $3,000, and the jury returned a verdict for her for that amount. On appeal the full Court, being of opinion that the amount of the damages was excessive, with the plaintiffs consent, reduced it to $1,000. Precise directions should have been given to the jury as to what they should have taken into account in estimating the damages, and, as the case had been allowed to go to the jury without such directions, without objection by the defendant's counsel and without contradiction of the statement as to the damage being $3,000, no costs of the appeal were allowed. Murray v. Royal Insurance Co., 11 B. C. R. 212.

Reduction — Consent—New Trial as to Quantum of Damages Only.]—Court of Appeal pronounced judgment (5 O. W. R. 572) directing a new trial unless plaintiff consented to reduce the amount of the judgment recovered by plaintiff at the trial to $4,000, holding the amount of damages excessive. The certificate of this judgment not having issued, the Court reviewed the case and having regard to Con. Rule 786 ordered a new trial confined to the question of quantum of damages only. Watt v. Watt [1905] A. C. 115, followed, which held the Court had no jurisdiction to order new trial (without defendant's consent), depending upon the plaintiff reducing the damages recovered. Hockley v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 6 O. W. R. 57, 10 O. L. R. 363.

Street Railways—Personal injuries — Excessive damages—New trial. Witty v. London Street R. W. Co., 1 O. W. R. 288, 2 O. W. R. 578.

Trespass — "Wilful" Acts—Measure of Damages—Judgment.[—In an action of trespass for taking coal from a mine the judgment declared that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover damages from the defendants for and in respect of the wrongful and wilful trespass and conversion complained of in the plaintiffs' statement of claim: — Held, that "wilful" was not intended as an adjudication that the trespasses were wilful in the sense that would render the defendants liable to have damages assessed against them on the sterner rule; and, the defendants having entered the mine under a mistaken idea as to their rights, the milder rule was applied. The measure of damages should be the value of the coal at the mouth of the mine, less the cost of digzing (hewing) it and transporting it there as a merchantable article. Fleming v. H. W. Moveli Co., 23 Occ. N. 312.

Warranty — Breach—Manufacture and Sale of Machine—Defects—Loss of Profits—Property not Passing.] — The plaintiffs agreed to manufacture a goring loom fit for certain special work required by the defendants, and to deliver it by a certain time. The machine was not delivered until after the time fixed, and when delivered did not have certain fittings which were necessary for its proper working, and there were certain defects in it which the defendants, after applying to the plaintiffs to remedy them, had to rectify themselves. In an action for the price of the loom:—Held, that the defendants should be allowed the sums paid in supplying the missing portions of the machine and for the services of an expert to put it in working order; that, notwithstanding that the property in the machine remained in the plaintiffs until paid for, the plaintiffs never had supplied a loom properly constructed to do the work required of it, and to do which the plaintiffs well knew the machine had been ordered; that there was a warranty that it should be fit for the purpose; that the defendants were prevented from earning the profits they would have earned if the loom had been complete; and that, under the circumstances, the plaintiffs were liable to make Such profit good. Crompton and Knowless Loom Works v. Hoffman, 23 Occ. N. 188, 5 O. L. R. 554, 1 O. W. R. 717, 2 O. W. R. 273.

Company's Mortgage Bonds—Interest

Thegal Issue—Innocent Holder — Liability of School Trustees—Negligence—Finding of Jury—Charge.]—A debenture of the defendants payable to bearer sealed with defendants payable to bearer sealed with their corporate seal and signed by their chair-man and secretary, was allowed to get into circulation without the authority or know-ledge of the defendants, and without their receiving any value therefor. It was finally purchised by the plaintiff before maturity, who cook it in weed faith and wave full who took it in good faith and gave full market value for it. In an action brought upon two of the interest coupons attached to the debenture, the trial Judge asked the jury the two following questions (among others), which were answered in the affirmative: "Did the bond come into the hands of the plaintiff as an innocent holder for value through the carelessness and neglect of the defendants, or those of their officers whose duty it was to have the bonds properly whose duty it was to have the bother property executed and issued, and in whose hands or custody the bonds should be detained until delivered to bonn fide purchasers?" "Do you find that the board of school trustees, or their officers, were guilty of such negligence in connection with this bond, as that in your opinion it would be inequitable and unjust that the defendants should be permitted as against the plaintiff to set up a defence that the bond was not duly executed, or the issue thereof authorized by the board?" A verdict was thereupon entered for the plainverdict was thereupon entered for the plant-tiff:—Held, that the verdict was rightly so entered. 60 V. c. 24, s. 159, in reference to the trial Judge unnecessarily expressing his own opinion upon the facts, commented upon. The terms of the deed had been discussed between the parties during two days, and there was a strong presumption that the subject of interest on the instalments payable under the deed had not been overlooked. In the original minute the words "avec interet [egal]" were added at the end of a line where there was barely space to crowd them in and moreover these words did not appear in a copy made by the notary a few days after the execution of the deed: — Held, that, under the circumstances and the facts apparent on the face of the original minute, the words "avec interet [egal" constituted an addition (a)oute), which is null under the law regarding the elearly identified or confirmed by the contracting parties; R. Land was conveyed subject to certain conditions to be performed by the purchasers, and, in default of the performance of such conditions, the purchasers were to hold the land in trust for the grantor, and reconvey to him, notwithstanding that any prior breach may have been waived. The conditions were not performed. In an action by the assignee under seal of the vendor for a declaration that the purchasers held the land in trust for him, and for an order for the conveyance thereof to him:—Held, that after the conveyance there was no estate left in the grantor, but only a possibility of reverter, which was not assignable, sid no action lay. Description - Ambiguity - Charge on Homestead before Patent - Dominion Lands Act. 1-The written contract signed by the defendant for the purchase of machinery from the plaintiff provided for a lien or charge upon the "N. E. 1/4 Section 2, Township 4, Range 14," without stating whether the range meant was 14 west or east of the principal meridian, both of which ranges are in this province. but the evidence shewed that it was range 14 west that was intended:—Held, that the expression "N. E ½" sufficiently designated the north-east quarter, as such contractions are in daily use. 2. That in this case the description was sufficient to warrant was salient to warrantee the order for a charge on the N. E. 1/4 2-4-14 W.; for, (a) if judicial notice should be taken of the surveys that had been already made in Manitoba and of those which had not been made, then, as township 4 in range 14 east had not been surveyed into sections, township 4 in range 14 west must have been the one intended by the contract, and there was no ambiguity requiring evidence to explain; and (b), if judicial notice of such surveys could not be taken, then the ambiguity, if any, was a latent one, and oral testimony was admissible to ascertain what land was meant. It was suggested in argument that the defendant was merely a homesteader under the Dominion Lands Act, and had not received his patent, and that, under s. 42 of that Act, he could not validly create a charge on the land :- Held, that the defendant could on the land:—Held, that the detailed not raise such an objection in this action, and that the plaintiff was entitled to an order for the charge on the land and the chance of realizing on it, though he might afterwards be defeated by the action of the Dominion Government. Abell v. McLaren, 21 Occ. N. 453, 13 Man. L. R. 463.

Description—Boundary—Medium Filum Aqua—Ascertainment of Uentre Linc.]—The plaintiff and the defendant were owners of adjoining farms; the division line was a small stream. The dispute was as to the ownership of an island in the stream. Down to the 5th March, 1883, both parcels were owned by R., who on that day conveyed to the defendant the land lying south-east of the stream, describing it by metes and bounds, the boundary on the north-west being "the southerly edge of the stream." In 1884 R. conveyed to the plaintiff the residue of the lot by a description which expressly crossed the stream and ran along its south-easterly edge. At the time of this action there were signs of a channel on each side of the island, but the main stream at all times, and the whole stream in the dry seasons, flowed in a channel on the north-west side. It was contended by the plaintiff that in 1883 and 1884 the stream very largely in the southerly channel and by the plaintiff that the northerly channel had always been the only regular one :- Held that the description in the conveyance to the defendant entitled him to the medium filum aquæ as his boundary, and the plaintiff's deed being subsequent, could not entitle him to claim anything beyond that boundary, boundary line was, therefore, the centre line of the stream, and the position of that line was the matter to be determined. The centre line of whichever channel was the main channel in 1883 would be the centre line of the stream. The question left to the jury was whether there was any southerly channel at all, and they were told that, if they found there was, the plaintiff was entitled to succeed. They should have been asked to find, if there were two channels, which was the main channel in 1883. Wason v. Douglas. 21 Occ. N. 521, 1 O. W. R. 552, 2 O. W. R. 688, 3 O. W. R, 456.

Pascription — Falsa Demonstratio—Water Rights.] — By an indenture of less lessees were given the right to "a sufficient supply of water for the purpose of propolling a wheel not exceeding forty-four inches in diameter, being the size of the present wheel was forty inches in diameter; — Held, that the governing words were "not exceeding forty-four inches in diameter," and that the governing words were "not exceeding forty-four inches in diameter," and that the subsequent words "being the size of the greent wheel upon the premises," should be rejected as falsa demonstratio. Brautford Electric and Operating Co. v, Brautford Studyorks, 22 Occ. N. 13, 3 O. L. R. 118.

Description-" Intersection " - Dividing Line between Houses - Production - Ejectment-Tender of Deed after Action-Costs.] —Action of ejectment brought to determine the boundary line between adjoining lots conveyed to the plaintiff and defendant respectively. Dispute over a nine-inch case of brick put around one of the houses, which extended that distance beyond what would have otherwise been the boundary between two houses. The deed from the North British Canadian Investment Co. to plaintiff describes the land sold to plaintiff as "commencing at a point on the western limit of Euclid avenue where it is intersected by the production easterly of the southern face of the southern wall of house number 232 (that is, where the northern wall of number 230 joins the southern wall of 232), said point being distant & feet and 6 inches more or less measured northerly along said limit of Euclid avenue from southern limit of said lot number l thence northerly along said avenue 20 feet 6 inches more or less to the intersection of production easterly of northern face of northern wall of house 232; thence westerly along said last production face of wall and limit between premises in rear of house numbers 232 and 234, in all 129 feet to eastern limit of lane; thence southerly, etc.:—Held the word "intersect has a meaning, although rarely applied to it, to divide or separate two things, by passing between them:" Murray's Easement - Agreement - Purchasers -License—Revocation—Repairs.] — The lower and the upper half of a lot of land were respectively conveyed to separate purchasers. In the deed of the lower half the grantor reserved the right of way to convey water by aqueduct or otherwise from one of the springs on the lower lot to the upper lot. The easement was assigned in the deed of the upper lot. On the lower lot were two springs known as the front and back springs. It was agreed, and acted upon, by the purchasers of the lots that the back spring should be set apart for the exclusive use of the owner of the upper lot under the reservation in the fendant, becoming respectively the owners of the lots, entered into a parol agreement for the construction by the defendant of a pipe from the front spring to her house, to be tapped on her land by a pipe leading to the plaintiff's house:—Held, that the agreement between the original purchasers of the lots to binding upon the defendant; and that the license to the defendant to use the front spring was revocable upon the plaintiff making equitable compensation fixed by the Court to the defendant for her expenditure under the license. Where license is given to lay pipes on another's land to convey water to the licensee's land, the burden of repair rests in law upon the licensee, and it is a revocation of the license to refuse to the licensee permission to go upon the licensor's and for the purpose of making repairs.

S'ouria v. Montreal City and District Savings Bank, Q. R. 12 K. B. 390.

Incapacity of Grantor — Absence of Consideration—Conflict of Evidence—Relief.] —Where at the time of the execution of a deed of conveyance the grantor was 70 years of age, was sick and in feeble health, and it was the opinion of some witnesses, though not of others, that he did not understand the nature of his act, and the effect of the deed was to deprive him of means of support, and the evidence was uncertain respecting the existence of adequate consideration for the deed and favoured the view that it was intended as a gift, the deed was set aside. Winstone v. McKay, 25 Occ. N. SS, 3 N. B. Eq. 84.

Inscription en Faux — Production of Original.]—If an authentic deed is alleged to be false, an order will be made upon the person in custody of such deed to produce it in order that it may form part of the record in the case for the purposes of the inscription en faux. Aude v. Charest, 5 Q. P. R. 319.

Lost Deed-Inference as to-Maintenance of Dyke-Liability for-Covenant Running with Land.]—In 1847 T. R. purchased from R. a portion of a large tract of marsh land of which R. was owner. From the time of the purchase down to the time of his death, 1886, T. R. contributed, either by the in performance of work or in cash, in the pro-portion of one-seventh of the whole amount, towards the maintenance and repair of a dyke and aboiteau erected, prior to the time of the purchase, for the protection of the land against the sea. In an action brought by the plaintiffs, claiming under R., against defendant, claiming under R., against defendant, claiming under T. R., to recover a proportion of the cost of rebuilding the aboiteau, it appeared that the dyke in question had never been brought under the operation of the Act, R. S. c. 42, "Of Commissioners of Sewers and Dyked and Marsh Lands," but that the provisions of the Act had been followed in relation to the calling of meetings of proprietors, the summoning of proprietors to perform work, and the apportionment of the cost of such work among the proprietors according to their acreage. There was some evidence of the existence of an agreement signed T. R., having reference to his liability to contribute towards the keep-ing up of the dyke and aboiteau, but, at the time of the commencement of the action, the agreement had been lost, and there was no evidence to shew the exact contents of the agreement:-Held, that, after the lapse of time, in view of the position of the parties, and the necessity of the work for their protection, the requirements of the Act, and the facts shewn in relation to payments made and work done, there was evidence from which to infer the existence of an agreement touching the keeping up and repair of the dyke and aboiteau, constituting a covenant running with the land by which the defendant was bound :- Held, also, the Judge of the County Court having found that the amount which the defendant was required to pay was not excessive, that such finding was supported by the evidence and should be affirmed. Roach v. Ripley, 34 N. S. Reps. 352.

Maintenance Bond — Declaration of Lien.]—Where land was conveyed in consideration of a bond by the vendee to maintain the vender and wife for life, but the consideration was not expressed in the deed, a decree was made charging the land with a lien for the performance of the agreement in the bond. Duguay v. Lanteigne, 25 Occ. N. 92, 3 N. B. Eq. 132.

Notarial Act - Authentication -- False Date-Nullity.] - A notarial act binds the parties who have signed it, and the signature of the notary only has the effect of authenti-cating it. 2. The date of a notarial act is an integral and essential part of it, and the want of it nullifies the instrument. 3. When an act, to which several persons are parties, has been signed and executed by each of them on different days, a single date may be added to the act, namely, that of the day of the last signature, but it is more proper to give the several dates in the act. 4. A notarial act must bear the date of the signa-ture of the parties, allowing the notary, if he has delayed his signature, to mention the day on which he has affixed it. the day of which he has amixed it. Therefore, a notarial act signed by all the parties on the 2nd July, 1902, but signed by the notary on the 3rd July, 1902, should be dated the 2nd July, 1902, and if the notary dates the act on the 3rd July, 1902, because that is the date on which he has one of the strength of the s closed the transaction, the act will be declared false as an authentic act, the Court having no other alternative, and not having the power to substitute the true date of the completion of the act for the erroneous date which the notary has put to it. Ordway v. Veilleux, Q. R. 22 S. C. 197.

Notarial Act — Illiterate Parties—Assent — Notary — Witness.]—In order that a notarial act may be considered authentic, it is necessary that the assent thereto of parties who declare that they are not able to write, shall have been received in presence of the notary who is acting in the matter, and of a witness who has signed. 2. Such obligation in regard to the notary imports that the act has been read to the parties in the presence of the witness, or that a sufficient mention, in the presence of the parties, of what the act contains shall have been made to the witness before he attaches his signature, in order that he may be able to state that the parties who are not able to sign have given their consent; if it is otherwise, the act is not an authentic act, and will be declared invalid. Cloutier v. Dulac, Q. R. 24 S. C. 153.

Notary — Copy — Translation.]—A notary ought to deliver exact copies of his deeds, in the language in which they are written, and not translations certified to be correct. Baker v. Gagnon, 7 Q. P. R. 100.

Parent and Child—Consideration—Notice—Evidence — Veracity — Agreement — Laches—Possession of land. Martin v. Kirby, 6 O. W. R. 107.

Quit-claim — Competing Purchasers — Priorities — Registry Act.] — It is not a deed of quit-claim where the grantor remises, releases, and quit-claims unto the grantee, his heirs and assigns, a lot of land, and covenants that the land is free from incumbrances made by him, and that he will warrant and defend the same to the grantee, his heirs and assigns, against the demands of all persons claiming by or through the granter; and the grantee under such a deed, if registered, will not be postponed under the Registry Act, 57 V. c. 20, to the equities of a prior purchaser, of which he had no notice. Bourque v. Chappell, 21 Occ. N. 132, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 132

Rectification — False Representation— Boundaries of Land Conveyed—Damages.]— The plaintiff purchased from the defendant a tract of land which was supposed by the plaintiff, at the time of the purchase, to be bounded on the east by the LaHave river. In the deed to the defendant from his father the eastern boundary line was described as beginning at an oak tree on the western bank of the river, and running south nine de-grees west, &c. This line was not identical with the course of the river, and left the title to a strip of land between the line described in the deed and the river still in the father. The defendant occupied and cultivated this strip for thirteen years after the making of his deed, and plaintiff continued the occupa-tion and cultivation for a further period of five or six years, after the conveyance to him, when he was ejected. In the deed from defendant to plaintiff the description in defendant's deed was repeated with an addition in which it was stated that the land conveyed was "bounded on the east by the La Have In an action for rectification of the deed, and damages, on the ground of the defect in the defendant's title, the trial Judge found that the defendant represented that the land he was selling was bounded on the east by the river, and that this representa-tion, which was false in fact, was material, and was relied on by the plaintiff, and be held the plaintiff entitled to the rectification claimed, and fixed the damages at $150. An appeal was dismissed, the Court (four Judges) being divided in opinion. Ramsay v. Meisners, 33 N. S. Reps. 339.

Rectification—Mistake.]—The plaintif, intending to sell the whole of a piece of land, sold it under an oral contract describing it as the D, lot. The deed to the purchaser followed the description in the vendor's deed. After the vendee's death, and about ten years after the contract of sale was made, the vendor sought to have the deed rectified, on the ground that it contained more land than that known as the D, lot. The evidence did not shew that the D, lot did not embrace the whole of the land conveyed:—Held, that the bill should be dismissed. Principles upon which the Court proceeds in reforming deeds, considered. Carman v. Smith, 25 Occ. N. 75, 3 N. B. Eq. 44.

should be entitled to have the damages assessed by arbitrators, and the purchasers should pay the amount awarded:—Held, that, under the deed, the purchasers were liable not only for damages caused by the flooding of the lands, but also for all other damages occasioned by their building dams and other works in the stream; and that the provisions of art. 5535, R. S. Q., did not entitle them to construct or raise such dams without liability for all damages thereby caused:—Held, also, that an objection as to arbitration and award being a condition precedent to an action for such damages, which have been waived or abandoned in the Court of Queen's Bench, could not be invoked on an appeal to the Superior Court. Sheriff's Deed - Condition - Usufruct -Rés Inter Alios Acta-Default of Accept-ance - Pleading - Reply - Fraud.] - The plaintiff alleged that in another suit, in which her husband was defendant, the present de-fendant purchased at sheriff's sale certain immovables, subject to a right of usufruct in her favour during her life, but that the defendant had entered into possession of the property and deprived her of the usufruct; and she asked that the defendant be ordered to give the possession of the property to her, and render her an account of the rents and profits. The defendant, by his plea, admitted that a clause existed in the sheriff's deed to the effect that the property was sold subject to a right of usufruct in favour of the plaintiff during her life, but that such clause was of the nature of res inter allos acta, and had never been accepted by the plaintiff, and that the defendant had since protested against the clause and repudiated it,—the plaintiff not being, in fact, entitled to the immediate usufruct, but only from the death of her heard of of her husband, who was still living. defendant further pleaded that previous to the sheriff's sale he became hypothecary creditor upon the property in question, by obligations granted to him by the husband, in which the plaintiff intervened and renounced all her rights upon the property in favour of the defendant. To this the plaintiff replied that t was the defendant himself who arranged for the sheriff's sale and contrived that the property should be sold subject to the plaintiff's rights as expressed in the sheriff's deed, his object being to keep bidders away and acquire the property much below its value. The defendant demurred to this part of the reply:-Held, that the demurrer was well founded, the allegations of fraud not being properly urged by reply to plea, in an action on a contract, but being grounds rather to support an action to set aside the sheriff's sign of the sheriff' sale. 2. That the clause in the sheriff's deed relating to the plaintiff's right of usufruct was res inter alios acta, and could not avail her without acceptance by her, which had not been signified before the clause was repudiated by the defendant. Hope v. Leroux, Q. DEFAMATION.

- I. EVIDENCE, 542.
- II. PLEADING AND PRACTICE, 543.
- III. PRIVILEGE, 554.

I. EVIDENCE.

Admissibility — Previous and Subsequent Publications.]—In an action for libel evidence may be given by the defendant of a previous publication by the plaintiff connected with the libel complained of, but not of a publication subsequent to the libel—at any rate, where it makes no difference to the defendant. Stirton v. Gummer, 31 O. R. 277, and Downey v. Stirton, 1 O. L. R. 186, followed. Downey v. Armstrong, 1 O. L. R. 237.

Admissibility—Publication of Previous Libel — Provocation — Subsequent Libel—Mitigation of Damages.]—In a libel action the defendant, in order to mitigate the plaintiff's damages, may shew that he was provoked to libel the plaintiff, because the plaintiff had previously libelled him, but (Rose, J., dissentiente) no subsequent libel or slauder can be given in evidence. Nor can the defendant be permitted to show that the plaintiff has attacked the character and reputation of others. It having been elicited in cross-examination of the plaintiff that the defendant had recovered damages for previous and subsequent libels before mentioned in an action against the proprietor of the newspaper of which the plaintiff was editor, the Judge told the jury to take that fact into consideration:—Held, not misdirection. Doveney v. Stirton, 21 Occ. N. 119, 1 O. L. R. 186.

Conflicting Evidence — New Trial.]—In an action for damages for certain slanderous words alleged to have been spoken by the c'fendant, of and concerning the plaintif, during the progress of a trial before a justice of the peace, six witnesses called by the plaintiff testified to the use of the words complained of, while four called on the other side, including the justice, testified that they had not heard the words used, and the defendant denied having uttered them. The County Court Judge treated the evidence for the defendant as a contradiction of that for plaintiff and gave judgment in the defendant's favour.—Held, that he erred in doing so, and that there must be a new trial. Weight should not be attached to the finding of the trial Judge on a question of fact where the reasons given disclose erroneous judgment in weighing the testimony. Zwicker v. Zwicker, 33 N. S. R-ps. 284.

Discovery — Examination of defendant —Admission of publication—Refusal to give name of informant. Sangster v. Aikenhead, 5 O. W. R. 438, 495.

II. PLEADING AND PRACTICE.

Damages — Particulars.]—Where in an action for libel the plaintiff claims damages generally, and makes no special allegation of real damages, the Court should assume that the damages sought are vindictive, and should not order particulars. Gauereau v. Caapais, Q. R. 18 S. C. 135.

Declaration — Several Counts — Particulars of Damages.] — In an action for libel and slander based upon several different coun: the plaintiff may be ordered to give particulars of the amount claimed on each distinct count. Hogg v. Ross, 5 Q. P. R. 339.

Declaration — Particulars — Names of Persons Present—Prejudice.]—In an action for slander, where the declaration mentions a person in whose presence the words complained of were spoken, the plaintiff is not obliged to give the first name of such person, unless it appears that confusion may arise without it. 2. The plaintiff is not bound to give the names of the persons in whose presence the words were spoken, if the particulars given are precise enough to permit the opposite party to defend himself without knowing such names. 3. The words "similar statements" in such declaration, coming after the enumeration of defamatory remarks of the defendant, need not be particularized. Kennedy v. Shurtleff, 3 Q. P. R. 514.

Defamatory Pleading - Fire Insurance-Implication-Fraud-Arson.] denial in a plea that a fire occurred accidentally and from cause unknown, does not imply or insinuate that the assured criminally set the fire. Allegations in a plea by an insurance company, that the assured made false representations in his application for insurance, made false solemn declarations after the loss, as to the value of the stock, with fraudulent intent, and that in swearing to false exaggerated statements, the assured did not swear to the truth and rendered himself guilty of fraud and his policy null, when pertinent to the issue, and pleaded in good faith and with probable cause, are not libellous or defamatory. Morrison v. Western Assurance Co., Q. R. 24 S. C. 111.

Defamatory Statement in Pleading—Right of Action—Good Faith—Relevancy—Determination of Previous Suit.]—An action against a party for a libellous statement in a judicial proceeding, raises matters concerning the relation of the subject to the administration of justice, and, as such, is governed by the law of England. 2. Under the law of England, no damages can be recovered for injurious words, forming part of a judicial proceeding, pleaded in good faith, with probable cause and without malice, the words being relevant to the issue, although they may be subsequently shewn to be false and injurious:—Semble, an action for such injurious statements, instituted before the determination of the suit in which they were pleaded, is premature; but, in the present case, it was unnecessary to pronounce formally upon this point, the action being dismissed on other grounds. Wilkins v. Major, Q. R. 22 S. C. 294.

Defamatory Statement in Pleading—Right of Action — Prescription.]—A person complaining of a libellous statement in a pleading filed in a suit is not bound to postpone his action for damages until final judgment has been rendered in that suit:—Semble, were he so to delay, his action might be prescribed. Wilkins v. Major, Q. R. 22 8. C. 263.

Defamatory Words in Pleading — Action Pending Original Action.]—A party who complains of a libel contained in a pleading is not bound to postpone his action for such libel until the case in which the pleading was filed is decided, and such action, if taken, will not be dismissed as premature. Wilkins v. Major, 4 Q. P. R. 172.

Defence - Denial - Justification -Innuendo-Hypothetical Case.]-In slander, the words complained of were to the effect that the plaintiff, a vendor of patent pills, had the plaintiff, a vendor of pat'at pills, had paid $50,000 for his title as 'Senator of the Dominion, and was advertising that he was made Senator because of the benefits con-ferred by his discovery in pills. Innuendo, that he had corruptly bribed members of the government, and had purchased the office, etc.:—Held, that a defence that if the defendant did speak the words, they, even with the innuendo, were not libellous, and denying the innuendo; and saying that without it the words were not libellous, was not open to objection, and not embarrassing. 2. That a defence justifying the slander and asserting, in addition, that the plaintiff did pay the government $50,000, and did advertise as alleged, and that the particulars were well known to the plaintiff, but not to the defendant, was not embarrassing nor open to objection. 3. That the defendant was not at liberty to allege that the words actually spoken were different from those charged in the statement of claim, and to plead as to those other words something either by way of answer or in mitigation of damages; and a defence alleging that, if the defendant did speak the words, he did so not as stating a fact, but as stating a rumour generally believed, should be struck out. Beaton v. Inheved, should be struck off. Beaton v. In-telligencer Printing and Publishing Co., 22 A. R. 97, distinguished. Rassam v. Budge. [1893] 1 Q. B. 571, followed:—Held, also, that the remaining paragraphs of the defence, which were pleaded to a hypothetisd case, which might never arise, and could arise only on an amended statement of claim. were objectionable and should be struck out. Pulford v. Wallace, 21 Occ. N. 238, 1 O. L.

Defence—Fair Comment — Absence of Justification—Striking Out Defences.]—In an action for alleged libel contained in a article in the defendants' newspaper, the defendants pleaded fair comment, but did is attempt in any way either to set un the fair upon which it was alleged the article was mR

It is clear upon the authorities that a man may not invent his facts and then comment on them, and succeed upon the ground that, the facts being assumed to be true, the comment is fair. Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. v. Bell, 22 Occ. N. 407, 4 O. L. R. 660, 1 O. W. R. 679.

Defence — Justification — Fair comment —Particulars — Examination for discovery —Motion to strike out defence—Embarrassment. Chambers v. Jaffray, 6 O. W. R. 441.

Defence - Justification - Particulars-Appeal—Res Judicata.]—A libel originally complained of in the statement of claim stated that the plaintiff had been cashiered from the army for cheating at cards, and also that divorce proceedings had been taken against him. The defendant pleaded justification to the whole, and added two clauses to the same paragraph of his statement of defence, one paragraph of his statement of derence, one of which related to the first charge and the other to the second. The first of these clauses was as follows: "The plaintiff was obliged to leave the army on the ground that he had cheated at cards, and stories of the peculiar character of the plaintiff's cardplaying and of his having been cashiered from paying and of his having been cashiered from the army for cheating at cards were in circula-tion in the city of Vancouver." The plain-tiff applied for an order striking out both these added clauses, but the application was refused on the ground that the defendants were entitled to plead them as particulars of the defence of justification. There was no appeal from this order, but the plaintiff amended (by leave) by striking out so much of his complaint as related to the divorce proceedings, and the defendants then struck out of their defence the second clause, relating to the divorce proceedings. An application was then made to strike out the first clause, that relating to the plaintiff being cashiered from the army, and was refused by the Master and by a Judge in Chambers on appeal: Held, per Falconbridge, C.J., that the plaintiff was not prejudiced by the clause; and, moreover, approving Dodge v. Smith, 1 O. L. R. 46, that a second appeal was not to be encouraged in a case of this kind. Per Street, J., that the matter of the second application was res judicate by the order made on the first application and not appealed against. Bateman v. Mail Printing Co., 21 Occ. N. 559, 2 O. L. R. 416.

Defence—Mitigation of Damages.]—In an action for slander the defendant may allege facts and circumstances which occurred on the occasion in regard to which complaint is made, when such facts and circumstances are of such nature that, if proved, they wil, if they do not altogether justify the conduct of the defendant, at least make the injury appear less grave and mitigate the damages. Renault v. Lortie, 3 Q. P. R. 495.

Defence—Mitigation of Damages.]—In an action for damages for slander the defendant may allege certain facts which, if they are proved, will go, if not to justify the alleged defamation, at least to mitigate the damages. Dion v. Fafard, 4 Q. P. R. 351.

Defence - Privilege-Mitigation of Damages.]-In an action for slander, the complaint was that the defendant had falsely and maliciously accused the plaintiff of stealing the defendant's newspaper. The defen-dant pleaded that "if he spoke the words dant pleaded that it he spoke the words complained of, which he does not however admit, but denies, they were so spoken in good faith and without any malice whatever towards the plaintiff, under the following circumstances"-setting out the circumstances which led the defendant to believe that the plaintiff had stolen his newspaper: - Held. that this was substantially a plea of privi-lege; and leave was given to add words claiming privilege. Switzer v. Laidman, 18 O. R. 420, distinguished: — Held, also, following Beaton v. Intelligencer Printing and Publishing Co., 22 A. R. 97, that a subsequent paragraph of the defence setting up the same facts in mitigation of damages was properly pleaded. Vansycle v. Parish, 21 Occ. N. 128, 1 O. L. R. 13.

Defence—Privilege—Scandalous and irrelevant statements. Caldwell v. Buchanan, 10 W. R. 682, 2 O. W. R. 839.

Defence — Provocation — Set-off — Justification—Defence — Gross-action.] — Rude and provoking words, but not reflecting upon the honour or credit of a person, do not justify or excuse defamatory accusations.—
In an action to recover damages for slander, grounds of defence arising from provocation and set-off of injuries should be pleaded as defences to the principal action; and the defendant cannot support a cross-action for damages unless the injuries done by the plaintiff are more grave and damaging than those suffered by him. Cleveland v. Sherman, Q. R. 19 S. C. 270.

Defence — Publication — Falisity.] — Motion to strike out as false, frivolous, and vexatious, the following paragraphs of a defence in an action for libel: "The defendant does not admit that he is the publisher and editor of said newspaper." The fact of the defendant's being editor and publisher having been established by affidavit:—Held, that the paragraph could and should be struck out as false. Lanos v. Landry, 21 Occ. N. 312.

Disagreement of Jury—Amendment by Adding Innuendoes.]—An action for libel. The cause was tried, and the jury disagreed. The plaintiff applied after trial to amend the statement of claim, by adding further innuendoes as to the libel complained of, the defendant opposing the motion, on the ground that a new case was set up, and also on account of the delay:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the amendment sought, on payment of costs. Grant v. Grant, 24 Occ. N. 95.

Discovery—Examination of defendant— Information as to source of libel. Schmuck v. McIntosh, 2 O. W. R. 237.

Discovery — Report of proceedings in Court—Examination of defendant—Malice or motive. Bateman v, Mail Printing Co., 2 O. W. R. 242.

Finding of Jury — Meaning of words published — Defamatory sense — Damages. Stone v. Jaffray, 5 O. W. R. 725.

Joinder of Claim for Wages—Particulars.]—A claim for damages for defamation may be joined with a claim for wages due. 2. The plaintiff in an action for damages for defamation, who alleges that he has been defamed to certain institutions and persons must give particulars shewing what institutions and what persons employed in such institutions are intended. Gray v.
Brommell, 6 Q. P. R. 234.

Justification — Qualified privilege—Answer to public statement—Judge's charge—Perverse verdict, Preston v. Journal Printing Co. of Ottawa, 2 O. W. R. 923.

Justifying Words not Charged — Striking our—Demurrer.]—To an action for damages for slander the defendant may not plead fact tending to justify other words than those mentioned in the declaration. The elimination of allegations in a plea not amounting to justification, should be sought by demurrer, and not by a motion to strike them out. Phillips v. Laviolette, 4 Q. P. R. 396.

Letter to Newspaper-Defence-Provocation by Utterances of Plaintiff Reported in Newspaper—Privilege — Mitigation of Damages-Counterclaim-Malice. |-Plaintiff was alderman of the city of Ottawa, and a member of the building committee of the public library, and defendant was the contractor for the stone and mason work of the library building. The libel complained of was in the letter written by defendant to the editor of the Ottawa "Evening Journal," published in that news-paper on 23rd October, 1903, in which, after calling attention to certain statements made by plaintiff at a meeting of the committee criticizing the work upon the library building, defendant proceeds to charge in effect that plaintiff was actuated in his criticism by spite and bigotry; that plaintiff was himself an incompetent mechanic; that certain buildings were put up by plaintiff "of which he ought to be ashamed;" that plaintiff owed defendant an ashamed; that plaints over determined account which he had to force him to pay; that plaintiff was always in a quarrelling mood; and that "if the like of Alderman Hopewell was a fit man to inspect his work, it was time he quit building. Laughton v. Bishop of Soder and Man, L. R. 4 P. C. 495, distinguished, Murphy v. Halpin, Ir. R. S. C. L. 127, followed:—Held, that it was the duty of plaintiff as a member of the building committee to honestly criticize at meetings of the committee the workmanship on a building under its charge, and if such criticisms were not made in good faith and defendant felt aggrieved thereby, he could either resort to an action or communicate to the committee and such other persons as may have heard plaintiff's criticisms his defence thereto, accompanied with such retort upon plaintiff as may have been necessary as a part of his defence or fairly arising out of any charges made by plaintiff, and if in such retort de-fendant had reflected upon the conduct or character of plaintiff, it would be for a jury to say whether defendant acted in good faith and in self-defence, or was actuated by malice. But, he had no right to publish his defence and retort to the general public through the newspapers. In other words, the public as a whole, unlike the members of the committee and other persons who chanced to hear plaintiff, had no corresponding interest with defendant in the subject matter. . . The facts set forth establish no defence on the ground of privilege, but many of them would be admissible in mitigation of damages, and limited to that purpose may be pleaded. . . . [Reference to Stirton v. Gummer, 31 O. R. 227.] Appeal allowed as regards counterclaim and dismissed as regards defence. Hopewell v. Kennedy, 4 O. W. R. 433, 25 Occ. N. 70, 9 O. I. R. 424.

Malice—Bad Faith.]—It is not legal to plead to an action for damages for defamation that the action is malicious and is the product of the hatred which the plaintiff bears to the defendant. Melançon v. Archambeault, 6 Q. P. R. 460.

Mitigation of Damages-Provocation-Set-off.]—An elector, who has made a complaint in respect of a voters' list, which a municipal council is revising, has the right to appeal from the decision of the council. but he has no right to say ostentatiously, while the council is sitting and with the object of intimidating it or ridiculing its decision, that he is going to appeal. If he does so, and the secretary-treasurer of the council, who has prepared the list and acted as clerk and adviser to the council, says to him that "it is easy for him to appeal because he is insolvent, he has not paid his taxes, and is already in debt to the municipality for costs," the manner in which this elector has acted will be taken into consideration by the Court in mitigation of damages in an action brought by the elector against the secretary-treasurer for slander on account of the words quoted .- 2. A party against whom a debt cannot be set off because it is not liquidated, may, if he chooses, himself demand that it be set off. Desmargis v. Geoffrion, Q. R. 22 S. C. 229.

Newspaper — Discovery — Examination of defendant—Refusal to disclose name of correspondent. Marsh v. McKay, 2 O. W. R. 522, 614, 3 O. W. R. 48.

New Slanders Since Action—Incidental Demand.]—Slanders uttered by the defendant after the commencement of an action for damages for previous slanders cannot be made the subject of an incidental demand in the same action, but must be the subject of a separate suit. Lefebvre v. Godin, 5 Q. P. R. 279.

Nominal Damages—Costs.]—In slander, for words spoken imputing unchastity to the plaintiff and the commission of an indecest act by her in a public place under s. It's for the Criminal Code, without claim for special damages—there was a verdict of sidenages—Held, that the defendant having denied the speaking of the words, and the only other defence being, that it was mere abuse spoken in the course of a quarrel breven the parties, and the jury by their verdict having found both these questions in the plaintiff's favour, there was no reason for depriving her of the costs of the action is which she was successful. Nominal Damages — Costs—Cause for depriving plaintiff of—Misconduct. Ellis v. Sherrin, 3 O. W. R. 938.

Notice Given by Public Crier—Repir of Road—Malice.]—The defendant gave notice to the plaintiff at the door of the parish church, as the congregation were issuing from high mass, by the public crier, to repair and maintain his road and keep it open, in default of which the defendant would take the necessary proceedings to compel him to do so. The plaintiff having chained fills of the control of Onus—Words not defamatory per se—Innuendo. Lossing v. Wrigglesworth, 1 O. W. R. 460.

Particulars.]—The plaintiff in an action to recover damages for defamatory words uttered in the presence of two persons specified and named, and also before "a large number of other persons," will be ordered, upon motion, to give the names of these persons, the dates upon which the words were speken, and the place at which they were speken, Lefebere v. Lefebere, 4 Q. P. R. 398.

Parties-Joinder of Plaintiffs - Pleading Striking Out - Several Rights of Action Straing Out - Several Lights of Action Arising Out of Same Transaction.] - The plaintiffs, a married man and an unmar-ried woman, brought the action for damages in respect of alleged statements by the defendant on three different occasions that the plaintiffs had been criminally intimate, one of the occasions complained of being by letter to the female plaintiff. A motion to require the plaintiffs to elect which would proceed with the action, and to strike out the claim in respect of the letter to the female plaintiff as shewing no cause of action or as embarrassing, was refused, leave to amend being given to both parties. The plaintiffs thereupon amended by claiming for both of them damages in respect of another allega-tion to the same effect, on another occasion, for the male plaintiff special damage, and for the female plaintiff the benefit of R. S. O. 1897 c. 68, s. 5 :- Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to sue in one action for damages in respect of the statements made on three occasions, there being publication as to both, and these three being a series with a common question of law and fact, but that the joinder of the claim in respect of the letter to the female plaintiff, which gave rise at most to a cause of action in the male plaintiff, was improper, and that this claim, unless amended so as to be simply one in aggravation of damages, should be struck out as embarrassing. Order of Britton, J., 3 O. W. R. 421, as to the joinder of parties, affirmed, and order of Anglin, J., as to the pleadings, varied. Agar v. Escott, 24 Occ. N. 312, 8 O. L. R. 177, 3 O. W. R. 719.

Plea—Character of Plaintiff.]—In an action for damages to the reputation, the defendant may plead the evil reputation of the plaintiff. Coté v. Desrosiers, 6 Q. P. R. 65.

Post Card—Threat of Action.]—A person who, without malice, sends his debtor a post card, upon which there is a notice that the sender will sue the sender if he does not pay, is not liable in damages although third persons have seen the card. L'Heureux v. Héroux, Q. R. 25 S. C. 126, Privilege—Discovery — Examination of Plaintiff—Relevancy of Questions—Mitiga-tion of Damages—Rule 488.]—Ir an action for slander, the defence, besides a denial of the material allegations of the statement of claim, was that the words were spoken without malice, in the belief that they were true, and under such circumstances as to make them a privileged communication. There was no justification. The words were: "He perjured himself and stole the money from the township:" and the innuendo was that the plaintiff had committed wilful and corrupt perjury for the purpose of procuring a reward of $5 from a municipal corporation, and had secured the reward by perjury : Held, that certain questions put to the plaintiff upon his examination for discovery relating to the reward and directed to eliciting information as to the payment of it to the plaintiff; another question as to statements made by the plaintiff at meetings of the muni-cipal council; another question as to the fact of the council having offered a reward to be paid to any one who killed a dog found worrying sheep; another question apparently intended to elicit information as to the particular times or occasions when the words were spoken; and other questions which might elicit information relevant to the defence of privilege-were all questions relevant to the issues raised on the pleadings, and should be answered by the plaintiff. Though a defendant may not be able to prove all that is necessary to be shewn to establish a de-fence of privilege, he is entitled to the benefit of what he does shew, in mitigation of damages, if it goes to that-subject, perhaps, to his having given the notice required by rule 488. McKenzie v. McLaughlin, 22 Occ. N. 92, 1 O. W. R. 58, 80.

Privilege—Justification — Denial of innuendo—Motion to strike out defences. Goodwin v. Graves, 4 O. W. R. 449, 473.

Privilege—Public Interest — Provocation—Set-off.]—A defendant has a right to plead to an action for slander that as a physician and a member of parliament he requires and is entitled to the esteem and confidence and consideration of his constituents and fellow citizens. 2. In an action for slander an allegation that everything which the defendant has said has been said in the public interest, in good faith, and without malice, and is a legitimate criticism on those who attacked his private character and attempted to tarnish it, if assisted in doing so, is not a valid defence and will be struck out upon petition en droit. 3. Where a plea of set-off of injuries may be set up as a defence to an action or as mitigation of the damages claimed, it must be alleged and proved that the provocation received was the immediate cause and was of sufficient violence to make the defendant lose the control of his will. Bissonnette V. Sylvestre, 6 Q. P. R. 255.

Proof of Defamatory Words-Verdict — New Trial — Aggravation of Damages — Evidence — Pleading.] — Motion for a new trial in an action of slander upon the ground that the verdict was perverse. The defamatory words were proved, but the jury nevertheless found a verdict for the defendant, instead of giving nominal damages to the plaintiff :-Held, that a new trial should not be granted in order that the damages which the jury ought to have assessed should be assessed to the plaintiff. Another ground of the motion was that the Judge had refused to admit evidence offered by the plaintiff and directed to aggravate the damages :-Held, that, inasmuch as there was no allegation in the plaintiff's pleading to entitle him to give evidence of the acts of the defendant on which he wanted to rely to aggravate the damages, a new trial should not be allowed on this ground. It would be a highly inconvenient practice to require a defendant to go to trial at the risk of being met with a number of circumstances which the other side was permitted to give evidence of, without having set them forth in his pleading, and which might, if unanswered, seriously affect the damages. Milligan v. Jamieson, 22 Occ. N. 409, 4 O. L. R. 650.

Publication—New Trial.]—The defendant took a copy of an alleged libellous resolution to the editor of a newspaper, who dictated it to his stenographer, and handed the defendant's copy back to her. Before the stenographer extended his notes, another copy of the resolution was found in the office, and from it the printer set up the type:—Held, reversing the decision of Irvipa, J., who dismissed the action on the ground that it was not shewn that the defendant was the cause of publication, that there should be a new trial. Mackenzie v. Cunningham, 21 Occ. N. 251, 8 B. C. R. 36.

Publication — Place where Damages Arise—Superior Court—District.]—An action based upon a libel, and claiming damages incurred in a certain district other than that in which the defendant has his domicil and in which the newspaper containing the alleged libel is printed, may be begun in such district. Gosselin v. Belley, 4 Q. P. R. 233.

Several Libels—Damages — Separation.]
—A plaintiff who claims damages by reason of a series of libelious paragraphs and articles which he sets forth, cannot be ordered to declare what amount of damages he claims for each of such paragraphs and articles. Prévost v. Nationalist Printing Co., 6 Q. P. R. 428

Special Damage—What Constitutes.]—
The special damage required in an action of defamation must be such as would be the reasonable and natural result of the words used.—Where, therefore, the alleged defamatory words were that the plaintiff, who received an allowance for the maintenance of

ns wife's niece, from her father's estate, had put in an account of trifling matters, such as for candies, oranges, etc., the special damage alleged being that in consequence thereof the niece and wife had left him and refused to live with him:—Held, that such damage was not such as was recognizable at law, not being the natural and reasonable consequence of the words used. Ludloc v. Batson, 23 Occ. N. 151, 5 O. L. R. 309, 2 O. W. R. 41.

Statement of Claim — Setting Out Whole Newspaper Article—Parts not Refer-ring to Plaintiff—Innuendo.] — The very words complained of in an action of defamation must be set out by the plaintiff, in order that the Court may judge whether they constitute a cause of action; it is not sufficient to give the substance or purport, with innuendoes; it is sufficient to set out the libellous passages, provided that nothing be omitted which qualifies or alters the sense; and, as the libel itself must be produced at the trial and the defendant is entitled to have the whole of it read, the plaintiff is entitled to set out in the statement of claim the whole article complained of .- Held, also, that certain words set out in another paragraph, which did not refer to the plaintiff, and tendered an issue not material, which might be embarrassing, should be struck out.—Devo v. Brondage, 13 How. Pr. 221, referred to. Hay v. Bingham, 23 Occ. N. 112, 5 O. L. R. 224, 1 O. W. R. 822, 6 O. W. R. 447, 11 O. L. R. 148, Trial-Nonsuit after Verdict - Innuendo —Onus—Contradictory Evidence— "Black-mailing."]—The word "blackmailing" is it does not lie upon the plaintiff to prove the falsity of the charge; for the purposes of the trial it is presumed in his favour, and the onus is on the defendant to prove it to be true, if justification is pleaded. Semble, the better view is, that colloquial use has broad-ened the meaning of the word so that it may not have a criminal connotation. In an action for two libels, where the words used in one were not libellous per se, and were not, fairly taken, capable of the meaning alleged in the innuendo:-Held, as to that, that where motions were made for a nonsuit both at the close of the plaintiff's case and after all the evidence was in, upon which judge ment was reserved, the trial Judge had a right to give judgment dismissing the action, after a verdict rendered by the jury in farour of the plaintiff. But as to the other where the truth of the charge was not admitted by the plaintiff or proved on uncontroverted evidence, and where the evidence as to the use of the word "blackmailing" was contradictors . Hald that it was was contradictory :- Held, that it was for the jury to pass upon the evidence, and the judgment dismissing the action on the ground that there was no evidence to go to the jury should be set aside and the verdict jury in favour of the plaintiff for of the $50 restored. Judgment in 32 O. R. 165. 20 Occ. N. 404, reversed in part. Macdosoli v. Mail Printing Co., 21 Occ. N. 495, 2 0. L. R. 278.

Truth—Justification.]—A defendant will not be cast in damages for defamation deharacter where the words complained detruly describe the conduct or an act of the $\begin{array}{c} \textbf{Understanding} \quad \textbf{of} \quad \textbf{By-standers} \quad \textbf{of} \\ \textbf{Words} \quad \textbf{Spoken} - Question \quad for \quad Jury - Non-direction} - Excessive \quad Damages - New \quad Trial.] \end{array}$ -In an action for defamation, in which the jury awarded the plaintiff \$500 damages, the evidence shewed that the plaintiff was a tenant of the defendant, paying rent for the property occupied by her and receiving a certain sum in return for the support of the defendant, who boarded with her. The words complained of were alleged to have been spoken on the termination of this arrangement, when the plaintiff removed her goods from the house, and were alleged to be, "You stole my feather bed and silver spoons." The evidence of witnesses called by the plaintiff shewed that the words first used by the de-fendant were "You took my feather bed and silver spoons," but that when the plain-tiff asked him the question, "Do you really blame me for stealing them?" the defendant replied, "Most undoubtedly I do." There was further evidence to the effect that the defendant was 85 years of age, very indistinct in his speech and hard of hearing and accustomed to make use of an ear trumpet, and that on the occasion of speaking the words complained of he did not use an ear trumpet. There was no evidence that the defendant correctly heard the question addressed to him by the plaintiff in the words used by her, or that he meant to accuse her of stealing, or that the words used by him might not have been used in a perfectly innocent sense :- Held, that this view of the question should have been placed before the jury by the presiding Judge, and they should have been asked to consider the question, in what sense the hearers understood the words used. and that there having been no such instructions there must be a new trial. Some of the remarks used by the presiding Judge were calculated to impress the jury with the idea that they had unlimited scope in relation to the question of damages, although this impression would be corrected to some extent by later instructions. The jury nevertheless awarded heavy damages in what the Court regarded as a mere petty squabble: -Held, that this was further reason for ordering a new trial. McLean v. Campbell, 37 N. S. Reps. 356.

Verdict for Defendant—Motion to set ade-W-ight of evidence—Innuendo—Proof of—Jury—Reasonable verdict. Kelly v. Journal Printing Co. of Ottawa, 5 O. W. R. S.

Verdiet for $1—Uosts.]—Action for libel in which the jury brought in a verdict in favour of the plaintiffs for $1. The plaintiffs counsel applied for full costs of suit, which was opposed. By Rule 926, where any action is tried by a jury, the costs shall follow the event, unless, upon application made at the trial, for good cause shewn, the Judge or the Court otherwise orders:—Held, that the verdict of $1 recovered should not carry costs, but no costs should be allowed to defendants. Manitoba Farmers' Hedge and Wire Fence Co. v. Stonel Co., 22 Occ. N. 186, 14 Man. L. R. 55.

Words Capable of Defamatory Meaning—Question for Jury—Crime.]—In an action for shander, if the words used by the defendant are capable of being reasonably understood in a slanderous sense, it should be left to the jury to find whether or not they were so used, and the plaintiff should not be nonsuited on the ground that the words did not necessarily impute the commission of a crime. Cameron v. Overend, 15 Man. L. R. 408, 1 W. L. R. 545.

Words Charging Criminal Offence— Performance of duty as assessor — Special damage—Words spoken after plaintiffs ceased to hold office—Intrinsic evidence of malice— Privileged occasion — Excessive language— Question for jury—Burden of proof—Misdirection—Belief in truth of words spoken— Reasonable belief—Justification — Evidence of falsity of words—Evidence in reply. Crate v. McCallum, 6 O. W. R. 825, 11 O. L. R. S1.

Words of Abuse—Natural Signification—Innuendo—Necessity for Sheveing Sense in which Words Understood,—The defendant, a tax-collector, having applied to the plaintiff for payment of certain taxes, was told by him that J. S. should pay them. He subsequently wrote and posted to the plaintiff a post-card stating; "I saw J. S. this morning; he said make the S. B. pay It." In an action for libel in which the plaintiff alleged that "S. B." applied to him and meant "son of a bitch."—Held, that there was no reasonable evidence to go to the jury that the letters conveyed the meaning attributed to them by the plaintiff, they are words of abuse, but are, as often used, absolutely meaningless; they do not impute anything against the character of the mother, and are not a statement of a fact; and in their natural significance are not actionable; and the plaintiff had failed to prove his innuendo. Major v. McGregor, 23 Occ. N. 47, 305, 5 O. L. R. 81, 6 O. L. R. 528, 1 O. W. R. 839, 2 O. W. R. 836.

III. PRIVILEGE.

Interest - Evidence of Actual Malice -Charge to Jury-Evidence.]-On the trial of an action for damages for a libel alleged to an action for damages for a libel alleged to be contained in a privileged communication, the Judge charged the jury as to the privilege, and added:—"If the defendant made the com-munication bona fide, believing it to be true, and the privilege existed that I have endea-voured to explain, then there would be no action against him:"—Held, that the plaintiff was actified to a proc explicit statement of was entitled to a more explicit statement of the law on a point directly affecting the proof of an issue the burden of which was upon One portion of the communication containing the alleged libel might be read as importing a grave charge against the plaintiff or as an innocuous statement of fact :- Held, that, as, in order to prove malice, the writer's knowledge of the falsity of the fact was the material point, the sense in which he may have used the words was the governing consideration. The Judge's carrie was not open to objection for want of an explicit reference to pre-existing unfriendliness between the parties as proof of malice, where the only eviunfriendliness consisted of things said of the defendant by the plaintiff.

Judgment in 32 N. S. Reps. 129 affirmed. Miller v. Green, 21 Occ. N. 254, 31 S. C. R. 177. (See the next case).

Interest—Evidence of Actual Malice— Nondirection—Misdirection—New Trial.] — The plaintiff, the local agent of an insurance company, voluntarily retired from his posi-tion, and another agent was appointed in his stead. Shortly afterwards the defendant, the general manager of the company, wrote to a policy holder, who was a client of the plain-tiff, that the latter had been "removed from the agency . . because it was clearly necessary . . I now find that he has colnecessary . lected money which up to the present time we have been unable to get him to report." At the time this was written it was untrue, to the knowledge of the defendant, that the plaintiff had been dismissed and that he had collected money of the company for which they had been unable to get him to account: —Held, that the writing was libellous; but, if it was written bona fide, the occasion was privileged. 2. The trial Judge should have directed the jury that if it was proved that the defendant stated in his letter that which he knew to be false, it was evidence from which actual malice might be inferred, and, as he had not so directed, that there should be a new trial. 3. That evidence of altercations between the plaintiff and defendant was proper to be submitted to the jury as evidence of malice. 4. That an inference of malice could be drawn from evidence that the defendant knew that the plaintiff had used abusive language with respect to him in connection with their business relations. 5. That the trial Judge erred in directing the jury that it was not open to the plainiiff to put another construction upon the word "report" than the sense in which it would be understood by the plaintiff and defendant themselves. 6. That the Judge erred in his definition of malice in connecting it with the idea of "wreaking petty spite" upon the plaintiff, and in leaving the jury under the impression that the defendant's evidence as to the state of mind in which he wrote the letter was conclusive. Miller v. Green, 33 N. S. Reps. 517.

Interest-Malice-Judge's Charge.]- The plaintiff and defendant were members of the same cheese-making association. The plaintiff sued the defendant for slander for saying to the cheese-maker of the association that the plaintiff sent skimmed milk to the cheese factory. The defendant pleaded privilege. The Judge charged the jury that the occasion was privileged, and that the defendant was entitled to a verdict unless they came to the conclusion that he was actuated by malice; that they might take into consideration all the circumstances and all the evidence in coming to a conclusion as to whether the defendant acted from ill-will or not in reporting the matter to the cheese-maker :- Held, that this charge was entirely free from objection. Preston v. Thompson, 21 Occ. N. 464.

Interest—Publication to Clerk—Finding of Jury.]—One of the defendants, the secretary of a trade association, prepared a statement for circulation among the members of the association, and gave it to a person to copy. It contained an allegation that the plaintiff was unworthy of credit:—Held, that, as the publication to the members of the association was privileged, in the absence of malice, on the ground of interest, the publication to the copyist, though she was not a regular employe, was also privileged, being a reasonable means employed to make the communication to the others. Lawless v. Anglo-Egyptian Cotton and Oil Co., L. R. 4, Q. 3. 262, followed:—Held, also, that the finding of the jury that "there was no ground of action" was in effect a finding that the words were not defamatory. Harper v. Hamilton Reall Grocers' Assn., 21 Occ. N. 23, 32 O. R. 205.

Malice-Privilege-Evidence-Meaning of Words - New Trial.] - The defendant, the general manager of a life insurance company, wrote a letter to F., a policy-holder in the company, in which he stated that the plaintiff had been "removed" from his office as local agent of the company, and assigned as the reason for such removal that they had tried for a considerable time past to get the plaintiff to attend properly to their business, and that it was only because it was clearly neces-He stated. sary that the change was made. further, that, to give the plaintiff the opportunity of getting the benefit of commissions on outstanding business, certain matters had been left in his hands, but that he, the defendant, now found that the plaintiff had collected money which, up to the present time, they "had been unable to get him to report." This letter was handed by F. to the plaintiff. who, in addition to acting as the local agent of the company, was a solicitor, and acted as F.'s legal adviser:-Held, in libel, that the trial Judge correctly directed the jury that if the statements made by the defendant in the letter in question, as to the reasons for dis-missing the plaintiff, were made by him, knowing them to be false, there was malice, and his privilege was wholly gone. also, that the reception of evidence of F., as to the meaning which she attached to the words of the letter, was not, under O. 37, r. 6, "a substantial wrong or miscarriage in the trial," and was not therefore ground for a new trial. Miller v. Green, 35 N. S. Reps.

Master and Servant—Malice.]—A master is not necessarily liable in damages because, in the presence of fellow servants or even of casual bystanders, he accuses his servant of theft. Such an accusation is prima facie privileged, and to destroy the qualified privilege there must be some evidence of malice, such as want of belief in the accusation, intemperate language, seeking the opportunity to make the accusation publicly, or the like. Gildner v. Busse, 22 Oct. X. 137, 3 O. L. R. 501.

Moral and Social Duty — Malice.]—A niece wrote to her aunt, with whom she was on terms of great intimacy, and with whom she was in the habit of staying, a letter making, on the authority of a correspondent, statements derogatory to the character of a gentleman well known to niece and aunt, who was a frequent visitor at the aunt's house, and it was alleged on the one sit and denied on the other that in the letter, which had been destroyed, the niece told the aunt "to spread this about town at one;" —Held, that such a moral and social duy existed as made the communication a privileged one; and that, though a direction is spread the statement about would be some Newpaper — Fair Comment — Truth of Statement.]—The defendants published on p. 1 of their newspaper an article stating that some women from Seattle had been canvassing some time ago in Victoria for subscriptions for a bogus foundling institution, and on being questioned by the police had left town; on p. 8 of the same issue there was an article stating that two ladies for the past few days had been selling tickets for a recital by one Greenleaf, and that the tickets were being sold "in a manner similar to those for a recital by a gentleman of the same name nearly two years ago, which was ostensibly for the benefit of the Orphanage, but which the promoters were obliged to abandon." The manner of selling tickets was as a fact the same in both cases: — Held, that the article on p. 1 did not necessarily refer to the plaintiff, and that the article on p. 8 was fair comment on a matter of public interest, and was true. Wiles v. Victoria Times Printing and Publishing Co., 11 B. C. R. 143.

Newspaper—Letter to—Defence—Provocation by utterances of plaintiff reported in newspaper — Privilege—Mitigation of damages — Counterclaim — Malice, Hopewell v, Kennedy, 4 O. W. R. 433, Newspaper — Misleading Statement — Public Interest—Damages—Costs.1—The defendant published in a newspaper a statement that the plaintiff had in the Police Court pleaded not guilty to a charge of theft and had been remanded for enquête. As a matter of fact, the inquiry was held later in the same day, and the plaintiff was discharged. The item stating that she had been remanded, however, did not appear in the newspaper until the following day, and no mention was made of the fact that it had subsequently been discovered that the charge was unfounded. The defendant pleaded that the item was true and had been published without malice and in good faith and in the public interest: -Held, that, though the item was evidently published without malice and in good faith, yet, if it was in the public interest, it was equally so that the plaintiff's discharge should have been recorded. As there was no proof, however, of any pecuniary damage suffered by the plaintiff, judgment was given for $10 and costs as of a Circuit Court action of the lowest class. Hearn v. Graham, 23 Occ.

Newspaper—Publishing Company—Joint Librility of Manager, 1— The president and manager of a company incorporated for the publication of mesupaper, who is also the siner of the hecharation required by arts. 2024 et seq. 8, 2, may be held responsible in damages for a libel published in the newspaper, jointly with the company. Mignerow, La Patrie Publishing Co., 5 Q. P. R.

Newspaper — Recklessness — Absence of Actual Malice — Retractation—Damages.]— Where a false report, implicating an entirely innocent person in the commission of a serious crime, has been published in a newspaper, not maliciously, but without any effort to verify the statements contained therein, the fact that the newspaper was about to go to press at the time the information was received is not a valid excuse for failure to investigate the truth of the charge; and the fact that subsequently a retractation and apology were published in the same journal, while it may be taken into consideration in the assessment of damages, is not a sufficient reparation for the wrong inflicted on an innocent person by a false accusation. The Court in such case will award exemplary damages to an amount in proportion to the degree of negligence proved. Auburn v. Berthiaume, Q. R. 23 S. C. 476.

Occasion Privileged—Proof of malice—Social or moral duty—Functions of Judge and jury — Excessive damages. Clunis v. Slcan, 1 O. W. R. 27.

Occasion Privileged—Master and servant. Gildner v. Busse, 3 O. L. R. 561, 1 O. W. R. 167, Privilege — Mercantile Agency.]—In a mortgage foreclesure action, the Lion Brewery Company as second mortgagees were joined as defendants, and a mercantile agency published a notice or circular, distributed amongst its subscribers, that a writ had been issued against the Lion Brewery Company claiming foreclosure of a mortgage, and indicating by means of the words "et al." that there were other defendants:—Held, in an action by the company against the mercantile agency, that the publication was libelious and not privileged. Lion Brewery Co. v. Bradstreet Co., 9 B. C. R. 435.

Privilege—Proof of Mulice—Understanding of Letter—Admissibility of Evidence—Misdirection — New Trial.]—The defendant, local manager of an insurance company of which the plaintiff had been an agent, wrote to Mrs. F., a policy holder, a letter in which to Mrs. F., a poncy noner, a recent of the stated, among other things, that he had relieved the plaintiff of his agency; that the plaintiff had collected money which he had not reported, etc. In libel it was shewn that the plaintiff had not been dismissed from the agency, but wanted larger commissions in continuing, which were refused, and that he was not a defaulter, but was dilatory in making his returns:—Held, that evidence of Mrs. F. of her understanding of the letter as imputing to the plaintiff a wrongful retention of money, was improperly received, and there was a miscarriage of justice by its admission. The Judge at the trial charged the jury that "if the meaning of the first part of the letter is that he dismissed the plaintiff, and you decide that he did not dismiss the plantiff, and it was not a correct statement, that is malice beyond all doubt. The protection which be gets from the privi-leged occasion is all gone. He loses it en-tirely. The same way with the second tirely. The same way with the second part. If it is not true, it is malicious, and his protection is taken away:—Held, that this was misdirection; that the question for this was misurection; that the question to the jury was not the truth or falsity of the statements, but whether or not, if false, the defendant honestly believed them to be true; and that it was misdirection on a vital point. The majority of the Court were of opinion, Girouard and Davies, JJ., contra, that, as the defendant had asked for a new trial only in the Court below, the Supreme Court could not order judgment to be entered for him:

and a new trial was granted. Judgment in Miller v. Green, 35 N. S. Reps. 117, reversed. Green v. Miller, 23 Occ. N. 149, 33 S. C. R. 193.

Public Duty-Municipal Councillor Truth.]-A municipal councillor has a right to make known to the council all the facts which may be reasons for not awarding a contract of the municipality to a person who is tendering for it; it is even his duty to do so; but the statement must be true, and if he makes false statements, he is liable for defamation. R. 19 S. C. 429. Campeau v. Monette, Q.

Publication—Privilege—Copied Letter— Authority of Manager of Company—Damages —New Trial.]—The manager of the defendant company handed to his stenographer to be type-written a draft letter written in the interest of the company, but unconnected with its ordinary business, with its ordinary business, which contained defamatory statements:—Held, that privilege was taken away by the publication to the stenographer, and the defendant company were liable for the act of the manager. Pullman v. Hill [1891] 1 Q. B. 524, commented on, but followed. New trial ordered for excessive damages unless the plaintiff consented to a reduction. Puterbaugh v. Gold Medal Furniture Manufacturing Co., 23 Occ. N. 193, 24 Occ. N. 205, 5 O. L. R. 680, 7 O. L. R. 582, 1 O. W. R. 250, 2 O. W. R. 398, 3 O. W. R. 535. which contained Qualified Privilege - Duty - Interest — Privileged Occasion.]—A qualified privilege exists, when it is the duty of the person charged with slander to make a communication with another person who has an interest in the subject of the communication, or some duty in connection with it; or, secondly, where the defendant has an interest in the subject of the communication, and the person to whom the communication is made has a corresponding interest, or some duty in connection with the matter. Consequently, a communication made by the chairman of the school commissioners or his chairman or the school combinssioners of his colleagues, respecting the character of the secretary-treasurer, if the statement were made to them alone, would be privileged. But the privilege ceases when the communication is made at a public meeting of the parish, at which many others, who were not interested, were present. Höbert v. not interested, were present. Jobin, Q. R. 26 S. C. 193.

Qualified Privilege — Variance between pleading and proof—Nonsuit — Verdict of jury. Tapp v. Brenot, 3 O. W. R. 80.

Solicitor . Innuendo-Amendment Justification-Evidence - Privilege - Interest. — In an action for stander of the plaintiff as a solicitor, the evidence at the trial shewed that the defendant asked L. who his solicitor was, and upon L. mentioning the plaintiff, defendant said that if he ing the plaintiff, derendant said that if he had an honourable man like M, he might win his case. L. said that he would not change until he found some fault—that the plaintiff always did honourably with him, whereupon the defendant said that the plaintiff was "a dirty man." The words proved were different from those set out in the statement of claim, and the innuendo in the statement of claim, as inapplicable. Leave was given jurisdiction to act upon or pronounce as jurisdiction to act upon or pronounce as jurisdiction to act upon or pronounce as jurisdiction.

to the plaintiff on the trial to amend, but no amendment was made:—Held, setting aside the verdict for the plaintiff, that, in the absence of evidence to shew how the words proved were spoken and understood, the Court could not frame an innuendo to conform to the evidence. On the trial the defendant called the plaintiff as a witness, and the plaintiff admitted that he had collected a sum of money for a client which he failed to pay over, and that he had given a note for the amount collected which he had also failed to pay and that a judgment had been obtained against him for the amount, which was unpaid at the time of the trial:— Held, that this evidence shewed conduct which was dishonourable to plaintiff as a solicitor and justified the language used by the defendant. If the words proved were spoken and understood in the sense that the plaintiff was not an honourable solicitor the defendant had substantiated a good defence:— Held, also, that the communication was a privileged one, L. being a person who had an interest in knowing of it. Intestacy in Part—Widow's Benefit]—
Where under a will there was an inistacy in part, viz., an intestacy as to the residuary estate:—Held, following in re Twige (1892), 1 Ch. 579, that the brolution of Estates Act did not apply, all the widow was not entitled to $1,000 mbler s. 12. In re Harrison, 21 Occ. N. 48, 2 O. L. R. 2217.

Payment of Debts—Real and Personal Property, 1—The Devolution of Estates Act, R. S. In re Hopkins Estate, 20 Occ. N. 446, 32 O. R. 315.

Real Representative — Caution—Sale of Land—Lapse of Year—Injunction.]—Letters of administration to real estate of an inistration to real estate of an estate who died 18th October, 1900, were issued to the defendant on the 14th October, 1901. Frior to such issue the defendant attertised the lands of the deceased to be sold on the 22nd October, 1901, more than a year after the death of the intestate. No caution had been filed within the year under the Devolution of Estates Act; and it appeared that there were no debts:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction restraining the defendant from selling the plaintiff's interest in the lands, under the above circumstances. Clearly the defendant had no right to sell the lands at the time he proposed doing so, as, by the operation of the Devolution of Estates Act, the property had become vested in the heirs of the deceased. Sale of Lands by Administrator—Non-concurring Admit Heirs—Official Guardian, 1—Application for a direction to the official guardian to approve of a sale of certain lands, made by the applicant as administrator of his deceased brother's estate, there being heirs who were sui juris, but had not concurred in the sale. The application was made under s. 16 of the Devolution of Estates Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 127, as amended by 63 V. c. 17, s. 17, which gives the official guardian power to approve the sale in such case, as in the case of infants. There appeared to be no express objection to the sale by any of the heirs, but their concurrence had not been sought, because of the delay and expense which that would involve:—Held, that under the facts of this case, the proper course was for the official guardian to make the usual inquiries, and if no good reasons were advanced or discovered for withholding his approval, it should be given. Settlement—Trust Deed — Construction —Equitable Estate in Fee of Settlor—Rule in Shelley's Case—Devolution of Estates Act —Distribution of Estate.] — Motion under Rule 938 by trustees under a certain trust deed, executed by William Bower, since deceased, for an order determining two questions arising upon the construction of the trust deed, (viz.: (1) Who are to share in the trust estate as to the right heirs of William Bower according to the laws of descent in Ontario? (2) Whether under the trust deed the property vests in the administratrix of the estate of William Bower, under the Devolution of Estates Act, for under the Devolution of Estates Act, for the purpose of distribution. The trust deed conveyed to the applicants (and another trustee, since deceased) a farm of 80 acres, "to have and to hold the same, with the appurtenances unto the said parties of the second part (trustees), their heirs and assister for the same and assister for the same and assister for the same and the same that the following the same trust the following trust the same trust the following the same trust the following trust the same trust the following trust the same trust the same trust trustees the same trust the same trust trustees the same trust trustees the same trust trustees the same trust trustees the same trustees the s signs forever, to the use and upon the following trusts, namely, first, to lease and de-mise the said land and to pay the said rents and profits over to the said party of the first part (settlor) for his maintenance and support, annually, during the remainder of his natural life, and after the death of the said party of the first part, then in trust to convey and assign the said lands to such person or persons as the said party of the first part shall, by his last will and testament in writing executed by him so as to pass real estate in the Province of Ontario, limit and appoint, and in the event of his dying without making such will, then to hold the same in trust for the right heirs of the said party of the first part, according to the laws of descent in Ontario, in fee simple." William Bower died on 21st February, 1903, without having made a will, leaving as his next of kin a brother and two sisters, and the children of two deceased sisters:—Held, it was quite clear that the settlor was possessed of an equitable estate in fee simple in the lands described in the trust deed, which estate under the Devolu-tion of Estates Act, vested in the adminis-tratrix. There being no disposition of the estate provided for under the deed upon the testator's death, the duty is cast upon the administratrix to proceed to realize upon and distribute the estate under the provisions of that Act. Desistment — Order — Prothonotary — Jurisdiction — Judgment of Court.] — The prothonotary has no jurisdiction to give a certificate or make an order upon a desistment; and therefore, when a desistment is filed with the clerk of the Court by a party, the opposite party must apply by way of inscription to the Court, in order to obtain a judgment in accordance with the desistment. Mageau v, Montreal Mutual Assurance Co., Q. R. 24 S. C. 208.

Appointment-Service -- Enlargement -Default of Attendance.]-The plaintiff obtained from the proper officer an appointment for the examination for discovery of the defendant; the defendant's solicitor was served with a copy of the appointment more than forty-eight hours before the time apant himself was not served. At the appointed time and place the plaintiff's solicitor attended before the officer, but neither the defendant nor his solicitor attended, and the officer enlarged the appointment until the next day (the 7th), and on the 7th, the defendant still not having been served, and neither he nor his solicitor attending, the officer enlarged the appointment until the 8th. On the 7th the defendant was served with the appointment for the 8th, and with a subpœna, and was paid his conduct money, and his solicitor was on the 7th notified by letter of the enlargement till the 8th :-Held, that the defendant was in default for not attending for examination on the 8th. Rules 443 and 446 construed. Reid v. Watters, 21 Occ. N. 22, 19 P. R. 310.

Attendance out of County—Further examination—Locus. McKinnon v. Richard-80n, 2 O. W. R. 244, 275.

Burden of Proof—Right to Examine Deieudant before Plaintiff.]—In a case in which the burden of proof is upon the plaintiff, he may object to be examined for discovery by the defendant before he has himself exunited the defendant. De Martinyn v. Biencau, Q. R. 21 S. C. 317, 4 Q. P. R. 352.

Company — Directors—Account of Profite — Postponement of Consequential Disfive — Production of Documents.] — The setement of claim set forth a single cause of action, based upon the proposition that the defendant C. and his associates, as to the transactions detailed in it, in the circumsances under which those transactions took blace, stood in a fiduciary relation to the defendant company, which prevented the

of the purchase of certain businesses acquired by them and afterwards transferred for a large sum of money to the defendant com-pany, and the relief claimed was an account and payment by the individual defendants of the difference between the aggregate of the price paid by them and what was paid by the company to them. It was admitted that the individual defendants received from the defendant company a sum in cash and stock far in excess of what they paid for the businesses, and the only matters really in controversy were the fiduciary relationship with the company and the liability of the defendants other than the defendant company, to account for the profit made by them on the transfer to the company of the pro-perties, and, if liability were established, the amount for which they were answerable :-Held, that discovery as to the details of the expenditure made by the individual defendants in acquiring the businesses, should be postponed until their liability to account asserted by the plaintiff had been established. Bedell v. Ryckman, 23 Occ. N. 167, 5 O. L. R. 670, 2 O. W. R. 86, 148, 280.

Corporation — Miners' Union—Pleading Dual Capacity-Subpana-Conduct Money -Objection.]-A miners' union entered an appearance in an action, and by statement of defence raised the objection that it was not shewn that the defendant was a legal entity capable of being sued:—Held, that defendant by so pleading must be deemed, before the trial of the action, to be a corporation for the purposes of the litigation, and so compellable to make discovery. Where it is sought to examine for discovery in his dual capacity, one of the defendants in an action, who is also secretary of another defendant, two subpænas are not necessary. On examination for discovery, if the witness has an objection, such as the payment of insufficient conduct money, he should take the objection before the examiner, and he will not be allowed to raise it on an application to compel his attendance to answer questions which he has refused to answer. Criminating Answers— Maintenance.]
—Maintenance is an indictable offence in the province of Ontario; and in an action to recover damages for maintenance, the plaintiff is not entitled to obtain from the defendants upon examination for discovery such answers as would tend to subject them to criminal proceedings. In such an action no discovery of the matters charged could be had which would not involve the defendants in matters leading up to the offence; and, therefore, the examination should not be allowed to take place at all. Motion by plaintiffs to compel defendant to answer certain questions put to him on his examination for discovery. The statement of claim alleged (1) an agreement by defendant to devote his whole time to the service of plaintiffs from 1889 to August, 1903; and (2) breach of said agreement by carrying on business on his own behalf both alone and in partnership with others." Plaintiffs ask an account of such dealings, and resulting profits, and damages for breach of con-tract. The statement of defence denies any such agreement, and says that, if defendant was to devote his whole time to plaintiffs' business, he did so, and denies his having en-gaged in any other business on his own acgaged in any other outsiness on its own ac-count. By these pleadings two issues are distinctly raised: 1. Was there such an agree-ment between the parties as alleged in the statement of claim? 2. Was defendant guilty of a breach of the same? Plaintiffs must prove both to entitle them to a decree. The questions which defendant refused to answer were directed to the second point. The refusal was on the ground that plain-tiffs were not entitled to an answer until they tiffs were not entitled to an about had bad. See had proved the agreement. Plea held bad. See Graham v. Temperance and General Life
Held, Defendant must attend at his own expense and answer the questions so far as necessary to prove the second point. But as necessary to prove the second point. But this would not extend to going into any such detail as will be proper enough on a reference as to profits and damages, nor would defendant necessarily be required to produce his books. Defendant Withdrawing after being Sworn—Order to Appear Again — Excuse. 1—A party to an action subpensed for examination for discovery before a special examiner and paid his conduct money for the day may be compelled to attend and testify in the same manner as a witness. One of four defendants, all of whom were subpensed for haif past ten in the morning and attended and were sworn, after being excluded from the examiner's chambers, waited while the others were being separately examined until after three in the afternoon, and then, without communicating with the examiner, went away and did not attend for examination—Held, that a local Judge's order requiring him to attend again for examination was right. Campbell v. Scott. 23 Occ. N. 113, 5 O. L. R. 233, 2 O. W. R. 144.

Disclosing Names of Witnesses— Questions as to Indemnity for Costs,—On an examination of a plaintiff for discovery under Rule 379 of the King's Bench Act, he cannot be compelled to disclose the names of his witnesses, or to answer questions as to whether he has received from persons or corporations, not parties to the action, assistance or promise of assistance or indemnity as to the cos's of the action, or as to whether he consulted before action with such other persons as to bringing the suit. Gibbins v. Metcalfe, 23 Occ. N. 98, 14 Man, L. R. 384.

Liquidator of Company—Action against Company — Production of Books.] — The official liquidator of a company sued for an act attacked as a fraud may be examined

Officer of Benefit Society - Clerk of Subordinate "Camp."] — Motion by defendants to set aside an appointment issued by ants to set aside an appointment of one Harley plaintiffs for the examination of one Harley plaintiffs. The action was brought to recover from defendants the amount of a policy upon the life of plaintiffs' son, payable to plaintiffs :-Held, by the constitution of defendants the governing body is stitution of detendants the governing body is the "Head Camp," which alone has power to form subordinate camps and issue charters to them. The "Head Camp" consists of one delegate from each subordinate camp and eleven officers who are elected every two years by the members from among their own number. This has absolute jurisdiction over all members. Every subordinate camp has similar officers, who are elected annually by subordinate camps such compensation as they see fit. The dues of the members are payable monthly to the clerk of the subordinate camp and handed to the banker. But no clerk or banker can be installed until he has given security to the satisfaction of the Head Camp's three head managers. The clerk and banker of the subordinate camps are the persons by whom the dues of the members are collected and remitted to the Head Camp. In the present case, Field is the clerk of the Woodstock camp, of which deceased was a member; but he was not the clerk during the member; but he was not the clerk during the lifetime of insured. It is not easy to see what information he can give; but, if he is the proper officer to examine, he must prepare himself accordingly. After reading through the by-laws of the Order, and the material filed, I think plaintiffs' view is right. and that the clerk and banker of the sub-ordinate camp are officers of this Order, and liable to examination. Motion dismissed with costs. Readhead v. Canadian Order of Woodmen of the World, 5 O. W. R. 55, 9 O. L. R. 321. Appealed twice, but both dismissed. See 5 O. W. R. 90 and 169.

Officer of Defendant Bank - Local Agent — Previous Examination of Principal Officer.] — Action by the liquidator of the Palmerston Pork Packing Co. to set aside a chattel mortgage given by the company to defendants. The general manager of defend-ants was examined for discovery. He knew nothing of the facts. Subsequently on 5th November, 1904, the inspector was examined with no better results. Plaintiff now moved for an order for the examination under Rule 439 (2) of Mr. Campbell, the agent of defendants who was in charge of the Palmerston branch, and was present at the giving of the mortgage in question:—Held, where a corporation or other company is a party to an action, it would seem reasonable and convenient that the company should suggest for examination the officer or servant best qualified to give all information to which the opposite party is entitled. Such officer should prepare himself by obtaining full knowledge of all relevant facts, so that the examining Officer of Company—Agent of Unincorporated Association.]— The plaintiffs sued "The Tanners' Association," a syndicate, not incorporated, made up of a number of trading partnerships and incorporated companies. One of the companies appeared and defended in their own name "sued as the Tanners' Association:"—Held, that the agent of the association or syndicate could not be examined by the plaintiffs for discovery as an officer of the association or of the company defending, Ahrens v, Tanners' Association, 23, Gec. N. 23, 6 O. L. R. 63, 2 O. W. R. 464, 479, 513.

Officer of Defendant Company—Control—Foreiture—Production of Membership Roll—Privilege,1—In an action against an incorporated club, for a declaration that they were using their premises as a common betting house contrary to the provisions of the Criminal Code, 1892, and for a revocation of their charter:—Held, that the Evidence Act of Ontario, R. S. O., 1897 c. 73, S., applied, and that the president of the club was not bound to produce upon his examination for discovery the membership roll of the club, he having stated under oath that its production might lead to a criminal prosecution against him. D'ury v, World Newspaper Company of Toronto, 17 P. R. 387, and Hopkins v, Smith, 1 O. L. R. 659, followed. Forfeiture of the charter being claimed, on that ground also a refusal to produce the roll was justifiable. Attorney-General for Ontario v, Toronto Junction Recreation Club, 24 Occ. N. 172, 7 O. L. R., 248, 3 O. W. R. 287, 4 O. W. R. 72.

Officer of Defendant Foreign Company, |-An order cannot be made for the examination for discovery of an officer of a foreign corporation residing in a Toreign country, even when the foreign corporation has atorned to the jurisdiction of the Courts of this province. Order of Master in Chambers, 4 O. W. R. 233, reversed. Perrins, Limited, v. Algoma Tube Works, Limited, 24 Occ. N. 373, 8 O. L. R. 634, 4 O. W. R. 233, 280.

Officer of Defendant Lumber Company—Refusal to answer questions—Motion to strike out defence—Motion to compel officer to attend for re-examination—Jurisdiction of Master in Chambers. MeWilliams v. Dickson Co. of Peterborough, 6 O. W. R. 424, 702, 706, Officer of Defendant Manufacturing Company—Action for tolls—Timber Slide Companies Act—Penalty or damages. Pickerel River Improvement Co. v. C. Beck Manufacturing Co., 5 O. W. R. 181, 183.

Officer of Defendant Railway Company—Conductor.]—The plaintiff's claim being that, while employed as a brakesman on one of the defendants' trains, he went under one of the cars, by order of the conductor in charge, for the purpose of adjusting some chains, and that, while so engaged, the train was - started without warning to him and caused him injury:—Held, that the conductor, in the circumstances, was an officer of the railway company within the menning of Rule 387 of the King's Bench Act, and must attend and submit to be examined as to his knowledge of the matters in question. Gordanier v. Canadian Northern R. W. Co., 24 Occ. N. 379, 15 Man, L. R. 1.

Officer of Defendant Railway Company—Station Agent—Section Foreman—Clerk.]—A station agent is an officer of a railway company within the meaning of Rule 21 of the Judicature Ordinance, N.W.T., and liable to be examined for discovery. A section foreman is not such an officer, nor is the chief clerk in the office of a general superintendent. Eggleston v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 5 Terr. L. R. 503.

Officer of Railway Company—Engine-driver—Rules 439, 461 (2).]—Held, reversing the decision of a Divisional Court, 4 O. L. R. 43, 22 Occ. N. 162, that inasmuch as the engine-driver never was in charge of the train, never assumed the duties of conductor, and never acted for the defendants in relation to the control, conduct, and management of the train in such a way as to make him responsible to the defendants except for the management of his engine, he was not an officer of the company examinable for discovery under Rule 439; Maclennan, J.A., dubitante. Speaking generally, the officer of the corporation who, if there was no action, would be looked upon as the proper officer to act and speak on behalf of and to bind the corporation in the kind of transaction or occurrence out of which the action arises, would prima facie be the proper officer to be examined in the first instance under Rule 439, Morrison v, Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 23 Occ. N. 9, 5 O. L. R. 38, 1 O. W. R. 180, 263, 329, 758.

Officer of Unincorporated Society—Production of Minutes—Interest of Persons not Parties.]—In an action against some of the members of an unincorporated musical society for infringement of the copyright of a musical composition, the secretary-treasurer, one of the members sued, stated in his examination that he had taken minutes of meetings of the members of the society, at which proceedings took place relating to the performance of the composition in question, and that he had handed these and other documents referring to the same matters to the advocate for all the defendants.—Held, against the objection that this defendant was not bound to produce these documents because they concerned persons other than the defendants, viz., the members of the society, not sued,—that this defendant was bound to produce them. It is not a ground for resisting production that a person, not before the Court, has an interest in the document. Carle v. Dennis, 4 Terr. L. R. 357.

Parties—Default of attendance — Motionto dismiss action—Proof of default—Affidavit of solicitor—Cross-examination—Ex parte certificate of examiner, Johnston v. Ryckman, 1 O. W. R. 720, 2 O. W. R. 1080, 1113, 3 O. W. R. 198.

Party-Inscription in Law.]-When allegations in a pleading are attacked by means of an inscription in law, one of the parties cannot be examined for discovery by virtue of art. 286, C. P., by his opponent, on the facts which are the subject of such allegations; and if such examination has been com-menced upon other facts, it will be adjourned until judgment has been rendered on the inscription in law. United Shoe Machinery Co. v. Brunet, 7 Q. P. R. 268, 284.

Party—Scope of examination—Production of books—Relevancy—Damages. Blumenstiet v. Edwards, 3 O. W. R. 772, 5 O. W. R. 341, Party-Time for-Inscription-Trial.] -The preliminary examination of the opposite party under art, 286, C. P., cannot take place after the filing of an inscription for final examination and hearing on the merits; inscription being a proceeding which forms part of the trial of a cause. Jobin v. Potvin, 6 Q. P. R. 117.

—R. S. C. c. 140 extends to parties as well as witnesses; and the person who was manager of the defendant company at the time when the transactions in dispute in the action took place, as such officer, is a quasi party and stands for the person to be examined for discovery for the defendant company. And an order to compel him to attend and be examined in pursuance of an order of a Manitoba Court, which he had refused to do, was made as on an ex parte application. In re Kirchoffer v. Imperial Loan and Investment Co., 24 Occ. N. 230, 7 O. L. R. 295, 3 O. W. R. 390.

Past Officer of Company - Rule 439 (a:—Rule 485.]—There is no power now under Rule 439 (a), as substituted by Rule 1250 for Rule 439 (1), to make an order for the examination for discovery of a former officer or servant of a corporation party, nor is there power to make such an order under Rule 485. Cantin v. News Publishing Co. of Toronto, 24 Occ. N. 398, 8 O. L. R. 531, 4 O. W. R. 162, 217.

Patent of Invention-Agents-Production of Documents. |- In an action for damages for the infringement of a patent of invention the defendants pleaded among other defences that the invention was in public use prior to the application for letters patent; that the patent was void for want of novelty: that the patent was not at the commencement of the action a valid and subsisting patent; that the plaintiff had not since the expiration of two years from the date of his patent commenced and after such commencement continuously carried on in Canada the manufacture of the patented invention: that the plaintiff had after the expiration of one year from the granting of the patent imported or caused to be imported into Canada articles made in accordance with the patent:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to the fullest discovery from the plaintiff, and that he was bound to give informa-tion as to agreements and transactions made and carried on between him and certain agents employed by him for the manufacture and sale of the patented invention. especially as to the time at which and the terms upon which the patented invention was manufactured in Canada under the patent; and the plaintiff, having refused upon his examination for discovery to answer questions relating to these matters, was ordered to attend for re-examination at his own expense. The plaintiff was also ordered to make and file another affidavit on production, and to produce for inspection statements received by him from such agents. Parramore v. Boston Manufacturing Co., 22 Occ. N. 415, 4 O. L. R. 627, 1 O. W. R. 643, 716.

Person Actually Interested-Nominal Plaintiff. |- When the plaintiff in an action is only a prête-nom and does not know the facts of the case, an examination before trial of the person actually interested will be allowed. Barbeau v. Viau, 7 Q. P. R. 151.

Person for Whose Immediate Benefit Action Defended-Action against Assignee for Creditors — Examination of Assignor—Reference for Trial—Power of Referee to Order Examination.]-Appeal by defendant from order dismissing appeal from certificate of Neil McLean, official referee, of his ruling in the course of a reference that plaintiff was entitled to examine for discovery one David E. Starr, against whose assignee for the benefit of creditors this action was brought, to establish the right of plaintiff to rank upon the insolvent estate: -Held, Rule 440 and Rule 466 are in pari materia and provide that a person for whose immediate benefit an action is prosecuted or defended is to be regarded as a party for the purpose of examination and for the purpose of discovery. Under the Rules examination for discovery may be "before the trial" (Rule 439), and production may be ordered "at any time pending the action or proceeding" (Rule 463.) Rule 440 has been construed to apply to a debtor who has assigned his estate for the benefit of creditors. even though the estate may be insolvent. In Macdonald v. Norwich Union Ins. Co., 10 P. R. 462 (1884), Mr. Justice Rose held, that such an assignor might be treated as one to be immediately benefited by the litigation. This decision was followed in 1897 by McColl, J. (afterwards Chief Justice of British Columbia), in Tollemache v. Hobson, 5 B. C. R. 214; see Johnston v. Ryckman, 7 O. L. R. at p. 523, 3 O. W. R. 198. There would be no difficulty in supporting this order to examine the debtor Starr for discovery.

The referee has plenary power to deal with the cause under the statute, and, in addition, under Rules 648, 665, fore trial and for the purpose of trial, the referee can properly direct one to be examined for discovery who is a party or who is to be treated as a party to the litigation.—
Appeal dismissed.—Meredith, J., dissented on both grounds. Garland v. Clarkson, 5 O. W. R. 62, 9 O. L. R. 281.

Person for Whose Benefit Action Defended-Rule 440.]-Rule 440, providing that a person for whose immediate benefit an action is prosecuted or defended shall be regarded as a party for the purpose of examination, is difficult of application where the plaintiff seeks to examine a person for whose benefit it is said that the action is defended. Where the action was for infringement of a patent of invention for a certain heater, and the statement of defence denied the infringement and set up that the right to manufacture the heater was acquired by the defendants from C. & Co., and it did not appear that anything had been done by C. & Co. in reference to the action before or after it was brought :-Held, that the members of the firm of C. & Co. were not persons for whose immediate benefit the action was defended; at the most, a successful defence might relieve them from a possible liability to the defendants, Mofa possible indulty to the defendants. Mof-ful v. Leonard, 24 Occ. N. 401, 8 O. L. R. 519, 2 O. W. R. 787, 3 O. W. R. 633, 4 O. W. R. 201, 5 O. W. R. 259.

Plaintiff—Absence from province—Place of residence—Offier to submit to examination abroad—Stay of action—Concurrent proceedings under Railway Act. Maclean v. James Bay R. W. Co., 5 O. W. R. 440, 495.

Plaintiff Resident Abroad—Demand—Description in Writ—Travelling Expenses.]—Where the plaintiff is described in the writ as being "of No. 8 rue Alfred de Vigny, in the city of Paris, in the republic of France," it is not incumbent on his attorpet to "declare where such party then is "under Art. 361, C. P., but it is for the opposite party to have him examined under a commission. Where a party is absent and under Art. 361, C. P., service of summons upon articulated facts may be made upon his attorney; such attorney may demand the necessary funds to pay his client's travelling expenses under Art. 370, C. P. Menier v. Whiting, Q. R. 18 S. C. 113.

Plaintiff Resident Abroad — Place of Exmination — Order—Discretion.] — The plaintiff resided at Cleveland, in the State of Ohio, and the defendant and the solicitors of the parties in the county of Oxford, Ontario, where also the cause of action arose:—Held, that the local Judge for that county has jurisdiction under Rule 477 to make an order, upon the application of the defendant, requiring the plaintiff to attend for examination for discovery at Windsor, Ontario; that it was unnecessary for the defendant to shew special circumstances to obtain such an order; that it was a proper exercise of discretion to name Windsor, as a place "just and convenient" for the purpose; and that the local Judge properly took judicial notice of the geographical situation of Windsor, Lick v. Rivers, 21 Occ. N. 166, 1 O. L. R. 57.

Questions on Examination — Assignment of Chose in Action—Interest of Assignor—Nominal Plaintift.]—In an action to recover a money demand assigned to the plaintift, the defence alleged that the plaintiff was only a nominal plaintiff and that no consideration had been given for the assignment, and the plaintiff on his examination for discovery objected to answer questions relating to the consideration and to the interest of the assignors:—Held, that the question should be answered. Boggs v. Bennett Lake and Klondike Navigation Co., 8 B. C. R. 353.

Relevancy of Questions — Defamation — Wrongful Dismissat.]—The plaintiff had, as a member of the medical board of the defendants, recommended a certain woman as a nurse, and she was employed by the defendants. Subsequently, the defendants, having been informed that the plaintiff had introduced the woman under an assumed name. and had previously been living in adultery with her, dismissed the plaintiff from their medical board, and withdrew permission to him to deliver lectures to the nurses, by a resolution of their board of directors, in which the grounds of their action were stated to be that the plaintiff had "recommended as a nurse a woman who was not a fit and proper person for the position, and had doing so done injury to the hospital, and for other reasons" not specified in the resolu-tion. The plaintiff sued for wrongful dis-missal and for libel. In their defence the defendants set up that the alleged libel was privileged, and that they had received information to the effect that the plaintiff had been living in adultery with the woman in question some time previous to his appointment. Upon his examination for discovery the plaintiff was asked several questions as to his former relationship with the woman. These he refused to answer. Upon an application to compel him to answer:-Held, that the plaintiff was bound to answer all questions the answers to which would tend to shew whether or not the woman in question was or was not a fit and proper person to be employed as a nurse, even though the fact sought to be proven had occurred previously to the plaintiff's appointment, and that evi-dence tending to shew that the woman had been living in adultery or leading an immoral life was evidence bearing on that issue, especially as the adultery was alleged to have been committed with the plaintiff himself, and he would therefore be aware of it and of the fact that the woman was not a and of the late that the woman was not a fit or proper person when he recommended her appointment. Ings v. Calgary General Hospital Trustees, 4 Terr. L. R. 58.

Scope of Examination—Cross-examination—Rule 703—Retroactivity.]—Upon the examination for discovery of the defendants certain questions were objected to, on the ground that they were in the nature of cross-examination. On the 30th May, 1900, an order was made requiring the defendants to answer the questions objected to, from which the defendants appealed. Owing to some doubt as to the construction to be placed on the Rules providing for examinations for discovery, on the 15th June, 1900, Rule 703 was amended so as expressly to sanction cross-examination:—Held, dismissing the appeal, that the examination for discovery under Rule 703 (even before the amendment) was in the nature of a cross-examination, but limited to the issues raised in the pleadings. Carroll v, Golden Cache Mines Co, 6 B, C, R, 354, overruled. The amendment of 15th June, 1900, is retroactive. Bank of British Columbia v, Trapp, 20 Occ. N, 464, 7 B, C, R, 354.

Scope of Examination—Rule 703.]—The action was to set aside the will of Alexander Dunsmuir, on the grounds of insanity and undue influence exercised by the defendant, who was the beneficiary under the will. On the examination for discovery of the defendant, he refused to answer questions in reference to the nature and extent of the subject matter of the will, the business and personal relations that existed between him and his deceased brother, the history of their dealings with the property, the mode in which the deceased brother managed his affairs, and the circumstances leading up to and surrounding the execution of the will:—Held, that the questions must be answered or the defence would be struck out. The examination for discovery under Rule 703 is a cross-examination both in form and in substance, and a party being examined must answer any question the answer to which may be relevant to the issues. Hopper v. Dunsmuir, 23 Occ. N. 275, 10 B. C. R. 23.

Scope of Examination—Specific Per-formance — Denial of Contract—Tender— Financial Means.]-In an action for the specific performance of an alleged contract the sale and purchase of a vessel for $5,000, one-half of which was to be paid in cash at the execution of the bill of sale and delivery of the vessel, and credit given for the remainder of the purchase money without any security upon the vessel or otherwise, the plaintiffs alleged a tender to the defendants of $2,500 in payment of the down instalment. Defences in denial of contract and of fraud were, among others, set up :- Held, that, as the defendants adsolutely refused to carry out the contract, and denied their obligation to do so, the question whether there had been a tender in fact was immaterial, in an equity action such as this; and, therefore, the plaintiffs were not obliged upon examination for discovery to answer questions as to the source from which they had obtained the money alleged to have been tendered. The defendants also sought to examine the plaintiffs as to their means, to shew that they were persons of no means, which, it was contended, would be a circumstance to induce the Court to refuse to adjudge specific performance, even if the contract were proved:—Held, that the defendants were not entitled to such discovery, no such issue being raised upon the record, and it not being alleged that the contract was entered into upon the belief or representation that the plaintiffs were persons of means. Bentley v. Murphy, 21 Occ. N. 590, 2 O. L. R. 665. Second Trial — Rule 432.]—A party to an action may be orally examined before the trial touching the matters in question: Rule 439:—Held, that a trial which has proved abortive by the disagreement of the jury or by the granting of a new trial is not a trial within the meaning of the Rule. Leitch v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 12 P. R. 541, 671, 13 P. R. 369, considered. Where the defendant had not been examined before the first trial, and the judgment thereupon had been set aside and a new trial ordered, the plaintiff was allowed to examine the defendant before the second trial:—Semble, that if there had been an examination of the defendant before the first trial, a second examination might be an abuse of the process of the Court. Clarke v. Rutherford, 21 Occ. N. 189, 1 O. L. R. 275.

Stage of Cause.]—The preliminary examination of a party to an action may take place after the inscription of the cause. Bourassa v. Lambert, 5 Q. P. R. 375.

Time for—Day before Trial.]—The preliminary examination of a party may take place the day before that fixed for examination and hearing. Ward v. Jasmin, 5 Q. P. R. 130, Withdrawal of One Defendant after Being Sworn — Order to appear again, Campbell v. Scott, 5 O. L. R. 233, 2 O. W. R. 144.

II. INSPECTION.

Action for Negligence—Defect in Elevator—Witness.]—In an action for damages for injuries alleged to have been caused by the defects of an elevator situated on the property of the defendants, the Court cannot allow the plaintiffs the privilege of having the elevator inspected by a person whom they intend to call as a witness. Such an inspection is not an expertise under art. 382, C. P. C.: and it cannot be allowed under art. 289, Gareau v. Montreal Street R. W. Co., Q. R. 8 Q. B. 469, followed, Dubois v. Horfall, Q. R. 18 S. C. 138.

Action for Work and Labour-Erperts.]—In an action for the value of work done for the defendant to his house, where he complains of bad workmanship and allers that he will be obliged to spend a certain sun to put the work done in good condition, the plaintiff cannot have an order to enter the defendant's house with experts to examine the work done. Adams v. Préjent, 3 Q. F.
R. 516.

Machine in Dispute—Order for Production—Deposit to Cover Expense, —When an action is brought to revendicate a machine which the defendant says is in his factor, but which the buillif charged with the wrihas been unable to find or seize, the Court is without power to order the defendant to exhibit the machine in his premises, because art. 289, C. P., does not authorize a conpulsory entry on the premises of a party Gareau v. Montreal Street R. W. Co., I Q. P. P. R. 566, followed. The Court will not, in such a case, order the defendant to bring the machine to Court, because such a course would subject him to expense which he is not bound to bear. Nevertheless, an order for inspection will be granted in such a case, ordering the defendant to bring the machine to Court, when the plaintiff has deposited an amount sufficient to cover the expense of removal. United Shoe Machinery Co. v. Caron, 6 Q. P. R. 100.

III. INTERBOGATORIES.

Absence of Defendant — Delay—Foreign Commission.]—In case of absence of the defendant, the attorney upon whom service of interrogatories sur faits et articles has been made may demand a delay in order that his client may appear and reply, or ask that the plaintiff shall interrogate the defendant upon a commission rogatory, in default of
confessis. Hall v. Fenton, 4 Q. P. R. 344.

Answer—Reference to Answer of Co-defendant—Exceptions.]—To an interrogatory to set out particulars of a claim of debt by the defendant C. against the defendant company, the defendant C. answered that he believed that schedules (which contained the information sought) attached to the answer of the defendant company were true:—Held, allowing an exception for insufficiency, that, the interrogatory relating to a matter within de defendant's knowledge, he should have made positive oath of the correctness of the schedules, or that they were correct to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief, accounting for his inability to swear positively to their correctness. Lodge v. Catlown, 25 Oec. N. S9, N. B. Eq. 100.

Ans.gers — Exceptions — Costs—Will.]—The bill alleged that the testator by his will bequeathed a fourth part of his estate to be divided equally among the four children of his son who were living at the date of the will; that the plaintiff was one of the children, and a beneficiary under the will. The defendants, trustees under the will, was not one of the four children of the son mentioned in the will, and living at the date thereof, and beneficially entitled thereunder to some and what interest in the estate, after admitting the will, answered that they did not know that the plaintiff was one of the children of the son, that she was living at the date of the will, and that she was living at the date of the will, and that she was beneficially entitled to an interest in the estate, although they were so informed and believed:—Held, sufficient. Specific information should be given in answers upon facts within the knowledge of the party answering, and the matter should not have the left to inference. Where some exceptions were allowed, and others overruled, costs were allowed to each party. Crosby v. Taylor, 24 Occ. N. 241, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 511.

Company — Officer.] — Interrogatories must be addressed to a corporation which is a party to the action, and not to one of its officers. Lambe v. Electric Fire Proofing Co. of Canada, 6 Q. P. R. 397.

Default — Pleading.] — A defendant in default for a reply to interrogatories sur faits et articles cannot obtain permission to plead until he has been relieved from his default. Hall v. Fenton, 4 Q. P. R. 356.

Ex Parte Order.]—Summons by the defendants to set aside an ex parte order giving the plaintiffs leave to deliver interrogatories to be answered by the defendants' manager:—Held, discharging the summons, that an order for leave to deliver interrogatories under Order XIII.. Rule 6, may be made ex parte. Charles T. Daily Co. v. British Columbia Market Co., 21 Occ. N. 321, 8 B. C. R. 1.

Judgment on, for Default of Answer—Discretion.)—The Court has a discretion as to admitting interrogatories upon default to appear and answer them, and is not imperatively obliged to admit them upon such default. Caron v. Gaudet, 6 Q. P. R. 105.

Order for—Amendment.]—An order for interrogatories "sur faits et articles," signed by the prothonotary, may be amended by him only. Tongas v. Quinn, 7 Q. P. R. 34.

Penal Action.]—The defendant in an action qui tam for a penalty under art. 5639, R. S. Q., is not bound to respond to interrogatories sur faits et articles; and in this case a motion to take the interrogatories pro confessis was dismissed, but without costs. Rossignot v. Morel, 3 Q. P. R. 407.

Secretary of Corporation — Authority to Answer.]—The answers of the secretary of a corporation to interrogatories sur fairs et articles will be struck out of the record if he has not been authorized by the corporation to answer; a delay should be granted to allow the secretary to renew his answers after having procured the necessary authorization. Dumont v. College of Physicians and Surgeons of Quebec, 4 Q. P. R. SI.

Service Abroad—Statute—Repeal—Auswers—Capias, 1—The provisions contained in s.-s. 6 of s. 63 of s. S3 of the Revised Statutes of Lower Canada is abrogated. 2. A party who is served in Ontario with interrogatories, and at the same time accepts conduct money, thereby consents to go to the place where he is summoned to answer the interrogatories, and cannot oppose a motion to have the interrogatories taken pro confessis if he does not so answer. 3. Interrogatories may be served, in an action in which a capias is issued, immediately after the filing of a petition to quash the capias, Carbonneau v. Bernard, 6 Q. P. R. 309.

IV. PHYSICAL EXAMINATION.

Bodily Injuries — Accident.] — In an action to recover damages for bodily injuries resulting from an accident, the Court has no power to order the plaintiff to submit himself to a physical examination by a surgeon, if he refuses to do so. Monseau v. City of Montreal, 4 Q. P. R. 38.

Bodily Injuries—Assault.]—In an action to recover damages for bodily injuries caused in an assault the Court will order the plaintiff to submit himself to surgical examination. Baster v. Davis, 4 Q. P. R. 153.

V. PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS.

Action for Penalties. —It is improper in an action to recover penalties under the Extra-Provincial Corporations Act. 63 V. c. 24 (O.), to issue the usual praceipe order for production of documents by the defendants. Such an order having been issued, it was held that the defendants were not bound to file an affidavit and claim privilege, but were entitled to have the order set aside. Johnston v. London and Paris Exchange, 23 Occ. N. 245, 6 O. L. R. 49, 2 O. W. K. 468, 492, 501.

Affidavit — Copy of Document.]—Under 53 V. c. 4, s. 60, and form 10, an affidavit of discovery should negative possession of a copy of a document. Burden v. Howard, (No. 2), 23 Occ. N. 266.

Affidavit - Materiality - Examination of Parties—Scope of—Contents of Document

—Costs of Examination.]—The plaintiff alleged a contract of partnership with the defendant J. for the promotion of a company to buy plant and carry on a manufacturing business, and that the defendants R. and C had maliciously caused a breach of the partnership contract; he claimed an account and damages. The defendant R., on examination for discovery, said that he had obtained agreements to sell from various companies, which were afterwards assigned to a newly incorporated company, not a party to this action. The plaintiff alleged that these agreements were, in fraud of him, substituted with variations, for agreements previously entered into between the same companies and J.; also that R. and C. paid $20,000 to J. to induce him to act with them; and it appeared from R.'s examination that he and C. drew a cheque upon their bank account in favour of J., which was paid:—Held, that the agreements and the cheque and a memorandum prepared by R. were material to the plaintiff's case, and should be produced or accounted for in the defendants' affidavits of documents. 2. the defendants' affidavits of documents. 2. That R. and C. ought not, as a matter of discretion, to be ordered to disclose facts which would become material only when the plaintiff should have established his right to damages. 3. That the plaintiff was entitled to know from R. and C. whether they paid money to J.; whether it was their own money, money to J.; whether it was; and for what it was paid. 4. That the plaintiff was entitled to know the amount paid by R. and C. to the M. company for their business, it being alleged by the plaintiff that he and J. had obtained a prior option upon it. 5. That the plaintiff was entitled to know from C. the nature of the agreements made for the purchase of the properties; if they were in writing, and he had access to them in his capacity of director of the company which was formed, he should inform himself of their contents so as to be able to answer as to them, or should produce copies; but, if he had no right of access, he was not bound to state his mere recollection of them:—Semble, that where an examination is unnecessarily long, the costs of it should be entirely disallowed. Decision of Meredith, C.J., 22 Occ. N. 117, varied. Evans v. Jaffray. 22 Occ. N. 133, 3 O. L. R. 327, 1 O. W. R. 29, 158, 2 O. W. R. 678, 3 O. W. R. 877, 6 O. W. R. 733.

Affidavit — Necessity for—Agent's Commission.]—In an action for compensation for services rendered in finding a purchaser for property, where one of the defendants is a corporation, and must have under its control all records, proceedings, and correspondence, if any exist, relating to communications with the other defendant, it is impossible to say, under all the circumstances, that discovery was not necessary or might not be helpful in the trial, and an affidavit of documents will therefore be ordered. Wood v. Dominion Lumber Co., 37 N. S. Reps. 250.

The plaintiff's manager made an affidavit on production of documents in which he objected to produce a certain agreement (referred to in the statement of claim) between the plaintiffs and their assignors whereby the property in question in the action was assigned to the plaintiffs; on the ground that such document "relates exclusively to the title of the plaintiffs and to the case of the plaintiffs in this action, and not to the case of the plaintiffs in this action, and not to the case of the plaintiffs in the said document tend to support the defendants' case, nor does it, to the best of my knowledge, information, and belief, contain anything impeaching the case of the plaintiffs: "—Held, not sufficient to protect the document from production. Combe v. Corporation of London, 1 Xe, 2 C.h. D. (331, followed, Quiller v. Hearly, 23 C.h. D. (24, specially referred to. Diamond Match Co. v. Haukkeabury Lumber Co., 21 Occ. N. 32, 1 O. L. R. 571.

Affidavit — Order.] — Where inspection is sought of documents supposed to be in the possession of the opposite party, an order should be obtained under s. 59 of 53 V. c. 4 for discovery by affidavit as to what documents are in the opposite party's possession, when an order may be made under s. 61 for their production. Motion—Necessity for.] — A defendant cannot demand, by motion, the production of the documents invoked by the plaintiff in support of his claim, the plaintiff not being in a position to proceed with his action until such documents have been produced. Lemay v. Labelle, 4 Q. P. R. 189.

Motion to Compel—Documents Relied on by Plaintiff—Pleading.]—A defendant not being bound to plead to the action whilst documents invoked by the plaintiff are not produced, a motion to compel production of such documents is idle (inutile). Montreat Watch Case Co. v. Imperial Button Works, Limited, 7 Q. P. R. 279.

Non-materiality of Documents-Foreign Commission-Inspection.]-Where discovery, as distinguished from production for the purpose of inspection, of documents, is sought, an affidavit of such documents must be given, though their production when applied for could be successfully opposed on the ground of immateriality. Documents within the jurisdiction of the Court will not be ordered to be produced before a commissioner for taking evidence abroad except in very special circumstances. Where inspection of documents had been given by consent, an application to the Court for further inspection was granted, and the Court declined to give effect, as too technical, to an objection that a demand in writing for inspection had not been made prior to the application to the Court. Cushing Sulphite Co. v. Cushing, 23 Occ. N. 231, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 469, 472.

Place of Production.]—Where an order has been made for the production of document, the document should be produced in the city or town in which the writ was issued, but a Judge has a discretionary power to order production somewhere else to prevent inconvenience and prejudice to a party's business operations. Davies-Sayvard Mill and Land Co. v. Buchanan, 24 Occ. N. 107, 10 B, C. R. 175.

Practice —Application to Dismiss Action —Failure to Indorse Notice on Order.]—Rule 330 applies to orders for discovery of documents, not only where the remedy sought for non-compliance is attachment, but also where the remedy sought is dismissal of the action or striking out of the defence. Where therefore a copy of such an order served was not indorsed as provided, an application to dismiss the action for non-compliance with the order was refused. Leadley v. Gaetz, 5 Terr. L. R. 484.

Privilege—Solicitor and Client—Fraud.]—There is no valid claim of privilege in regard to the production of documents passing between solicitor and client, when the transaction impeached is charged to be based upon fraud. Williams v. Quebrada Railway, Land, and Copper Co., [1895] 2 Ch. 751, followed. And where the action was by a mortgager to set aside as fraudulent a sale under the power in the mortgage and for redemption:—Held, that an admission made by one of the defendants, though sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to redeem, not being of efficacy against some of the other defendants, did not remove the issue of fraud from the record so as to enable the defendant making the admission to escape discovery. Smith v. Hunt, 21 Occ. N. 237, 1 O. L. R. 334.

Production of Documents—Privilege—Evidence Produced in Contemplation of Litity action.]—Appeal by plaintiffs from order of local Judge at Perth requiring plaintiffs to file a further and better affidavit on production. Defendants were owners of land through which a roadway runs, and the question to be determined in the action was whether such roadway was a public highway or not:—Held, that defendants were not entitled to such production and inspection. While the information was not obtained for the purpose of supporting an action expressly contemplated at the time the instructions were given to the solicitors, it must have been contemplated at the time the instructions were given to the solicitors, that if the report of the solicitors was that a highway existed, an action would be brought against the defendants for obstructing it, if they persisted in disputing that it was a highway, in which event the information obtained by the solicitors would be necessary to assist them in prosecuting such action. The immediate purpose of the information was to aid the solicitors in forming an opinion as to the legal rights of plaintiffs in reference to the road, and such information obtained by the solicitors for that purpose was privileged from production in an action brought as the result of the opinion formed by the solicitors. Southwark v. Quick, 3 Q. B. D. 315; Leroque V. Halifax, [1895] 1 Ch. 686.] The appeal allowed, with costs to the successful party in the action. Township of Elmsley v. Miller, 5 O. W. Railway-Affidavit on Production made by Officer - Cross-examination on -Privilege — Reports of Officials Respecting Accident—Duty of Officer to Inform Himself -Disclosing Names of Witnesses.]-Reports made by the employees of a railway company to their superior officers in accordance with its rules concerning an accident resulting in death, and immediately thereafter, are not privileged from production in an action against the company for damages arising out of the accident, if they were made in the discharge of the regular duties of such employees and for the purpose of furnishing to their superiors information as to the accident itself, and were not furnished merely as materials from which the solicitor of the company might make up a brief, and an officer of the com-pany who has made an affidavit on production of documents, must, on his cross-examination on such affidavit, furnish such information concerning them that the Court may be in a position to decide, on a further motion whether they are privileged or not. If any of the information sought on such examination, and to which the plaintiff is entitled, is not within the knowledge of the deponent, he must ascertain the facts and give the information. That the names of sor g of the defendants' witnesses would be di losed if the questions were answered, is not a sufficient reason for refusing to answer. Questions as to whether reports had been sent in as to the condition of the locomative before the accident, and as to repairs thereto, must also be answered. Savage v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 15 Man. L. R. 401, 1 W. L. R. 441.

Railway Company — Accident—Report of Servants—Privilege.]—A company sued in damages on account of an accident may be compelled to produce at the trial all report of the accident made by its employees in the ordinary course of their business, or of their duty, but not its reports made at the request or instance of its solicitor, in answer to inquiries made by the latter, with a view to and in contemplation of anticipated littleation. Stocker v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. 5 Q. P. R. 117.

Relevancy — Denial — Sufficiency of Afdavit,]—When a party to an action has male and filed an affidavit on production of docments, in the ordinary form, in obedience to an order to produce served upon him, the opposite party must be satisfied with such affidavit unless he can shew, from admissions or former statements on oath of the affiant, that there has in his ments relating the party order for a that there as the opposite not mention contain relestatement in such. Payment by Tenant after Distress to Mortgagee of Landlord — Distress Lavafully Begun—Continuation after Payment—Validity of Payment—Bailiff—Counterclaim—Costs of Distress—Costs of Action for Illegal Distress,—Action by tenant against landlord and bailiff for an injunction restraining defendants proceeding with a distress for rent, and for damages. Defendant Ireland, being the owner of a farm of 90 acres in the township of Brighton, conveyed it by way of mortgage to C. R. W. Biggar, and others, trustees. Later defendant Ireland demised the same premises, by lease ander seal, to plaintiff for 5 years, at an annual rent of $150. Rent became in arrear and landlord distrained. Landlord's mortgagee notified tenant to pay rent to him, as his mortgage was overdue, and threatened tenant with proceedings if he did not so pay him the rent. Under this compulsion tenant paid landlord's mortgages the rent due:—Held, the position was the same as if plaintiff, after defendant had distrained his goods, had paid the rent to the landlord himself. The distress was originally lawful, and the landlord was entitled to retain it until, not only the rent, but the costs of the distress, should be paid. Unthe costs of the distress, should be paid. Un-til payment of these plaintiff was not en-titled to any relief. Upon the question whether plaintiff was entitled to pay his rent to the mortgagees or not, the defendant Ireland failed. On the other hand defend-ants were entitled to be paid their costs of distress before a replevin or injunction could properly be granted, because the seizure and proceedings down to the time plaintiff paid his rent to the mortgagees were proper and regular; and they were entitled to retain a sufficient quantity of the goods until the costs of distress were paid. In these circumstances, there was no cause of action against the bailiff, and the action should be dismissed as against him. Puffer v. Ireland, 5 O. W. R. 447, 10 O. L. R. 87.

Believing him dead, Philinda Todd in 1826 entered into marriage relations with Parley University. with Parley Hunt the elder, which continued until her death in 1833. Of this marriage Parley Hunt the younger was born in November, 1829, more than 5 years after Gideon Todd had deserted his wife, who always remained unaware that he was not in fact dead. mained unaware that he was not in fact dead. He returned many years afterwards to his former home, in the State of New York, where all the parties were domiciled. The estate of George W. Todd consisted entirely of personalty. Parley Hunt the younger, was born in November, 1829, and died in 1896. On 3rd May, 1895, the legislature of the State of New York passed the following statute, chaptered 531 of the laws of that year:—"1. All ligitimate children, whose parents. "1. All illegitimate children, whose parents have heretofore intermarried, or shall hereafter intermarry, shall thereby become legitimatized and shall be considered legitimate for all purposes. Such children shall enjoy for all purposes. Such children shall enjoy all the rights and privileges of legitimate children. Provided, however, that vested interests in estates shall not be divested or affected by this Act. 2. All Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with this Act are hereby repealed. 3. This Act shall take effect immediately." There could be in 1895 no vested interests in the estate of George W. Todd, who did not die until 1903. Nemo est heres viventis. The provise in s. 1, therefore, does not, for the purposes of this case, exclude Parley Hunt the younger from the beneficent operation of the statute. Although illegitimate when born, the subsequent intermarriage mate when born, the subsequent intermarriage of his parents in 1830 legitimatized him for all purposes. His issue can, therefore, claim all purposes. His issue can, therefore, claim through him as a half brother of the intestate George W. Todd. Judgment entered elaring plaintiffs to be of the next of kin of George W. Todd, deceased, and for payment to them of their costs of this action by defendants other than the Trusts and Guarantee Co., who will have their costs as between solicitor and client out of the estate of the intestate. Intestacy — Next of Kiin—Ascertainment—First Cousins once Renoved.]—Application by the administrator of the estate of Isabella McEachren, deceased, for an order for the administration and distribution of her said estate, consisting of about $3,000 personalty and $300 realty, which came to her on the part of neither parent. Isabella McEachren died intestate and unmarried. There were 2 daughters of a deceased sister of the intestate's father and 16 or more grandchildren of the deceased brothers and sisters of the intestate's mother. The intestate's father and mother were dead. No brothers or sisters, or children of such, survived her. The question was whether the 16 grandchildren of the brothers and sisters of the intestate's mother, were entitled to participate, by representation of their deceased parents, with the 2 daughters of the deceased sister of the intestate's father, in the distribution of the estate. Falconbridge, C.J.,: — Held, that there was no representation of collaterals of this class, and that the 2 daughters of the deceased sister of the intestate's father, to the deceased sister of the intestate's father took to the exclusion of the 18 grandchildren of the deceased sister of the 18 grandchildren of the deceased brothers and sisters of the intestate's mother. The Statute of Charles, being in force here, was applicable to the present case. Intestate's Estate—Rights of Widow— Second Husband and Child—Devolution of Etates Ordinance — Married Women's Property Ordinance—Land Titles Act—Imperial Intestates' Estates Act.]—The Devolution of Estates Ordinance, c. 13 of 1901 (assented to 12th July, 1901), provides:—"1. The property of any man hereafter dying intestate and leaving a widow, but no issue, shall belong to such widow, absolutely and exclusively, provided that prior to his death such widow had not left him and lived in adul-tery after leaving him. 2. This section shall apply to the property of any person who died before the date of the coming into force of this Ordinance, in case no portion of the estate of such person has been distributed: —Held, that s.-s. 2 does not apply to a case where the widow died previously to the passing of the Ordinance, although no por-tion of the estate of the deceased husband had been distributed at the time of its passing. The Ordinance respecting the personal property of married women, C. O. 1898, c. 47, provides that "a married woman shall in respect of personal property be under no disabilities whatsoever heretofore existing by reason of her coverture or otherwise, but shall reason of her coverture of other season in respect of the same have all the rights and be subject to all the liabilities of a feme sole:"—Held, that notwithstanding this provision a husband is entitled to the whole of his deceased intestate wife's undisposed of personal property upon taking out letters of administration. Section 3 of the Land Titles Act, 1894, 57 & 58 V. c. 28 (D.), which provides that "land in the Territories shall go to the personal representatives of the decaded. sentatives of the deceased owner thereof in the same manner as personal estate now goes, and be dealt with and distributed as per-sonal estate," does not convert realty into sonal estate, does not convert realty into personalty, but refers only to the manner of distribution. The Imperial Intestates' Estates Act, 53 & 54 V. c. 29, is not in force in the Territories. Where, therefore, S. died on the 24th December, 1899, intestate and without issue, leaving as his next of kin his without issue, leaving as his next of kin his father, and also his widow, who having married B., died on the 22nd April, 1901, leaving a child by B., the property of S. was directed to be distributed as follows:—One-half of the personal property to the deceased's father and the other half to B, for his own benefit, on his taking out administration to his deceased wife: one-half of the real property to the deceased's father and the other half to the administrator of the widow's estate to be distributed, one-third to B. and two-thirds to her child. In re Steidel, 5 Terr. L. R. 303.

Judgment — Contestation — Motion to Set Aside—Preliminary Exception—Deposit—Creditor.]—A motion to set aside a contestation of a judgment of distribution is a preliminary exception, and must be accompanied by the deposit mentioned in Art, 165, C. P. 2. A party making such a motion will be permitted to make a deposit upon giving notice of it to the opposite party. 3. The contestation of a judgment of distribution by a creditor, who has not filed his claim, will be set aside if it is not accompanied by the deposit required by Art, 674, C. P. Labelle v. Ouimet, 5 Q. P. R. 150.

Legacy—Saisic-Conservatoire.]—A legatee is not entitled to issue a saisic-conservatoire where he alleges simply that he has good grounds for claiming the amount of his legacy and for bringing into the custody of the Court all movables and money belonging to the estate of the deceased. Rochon v. David, 6 Q. P. R. 290.

Legitimation of Bastard — Heirship of Parent.]—A father is one of the heirs of his natural child legitimated by a subsequent marriage with the child's mother. Lamoureux v. Aymard, Q. R. 24 S. C. 24, 5 Q. P. R. 432.

Opposition — Collocation of Married Woman—Personal Service—Judgment,]—An opposition in distribution against the placing on the list of a woman who lives apart from her husband, must be served upon her and not upon her husband only. 2. A collocation which has been confirmed constitutes a judgment which cannot be attacked by an opposition in distribution. Décary v. Bro dit Pominoville, 5 Q. P. R. 203.

Personalty—Next of Kin — Married Women's Property Act.]—Where a child dles intestate and unmarried entitled to personal estate, leaving a father, mother, brother, and sister, the father is entitled as the next of kin in the first degree to the whole of the personal estate exclusive of all others. This rule of construction, as to the distribution of personal property, has not been in any way altered by any provision of the Married Women's Property Act, 1895. Levin v. Levin, 36 N. B. Reps. 365.

Renunciation of Succession — Registration—Residuary Legatee.]—It is only in regard to third persons that the lack of registration renders a renunciation to a succession invalid, and In an action against a residuary legatee who renounces to the seccession after the expiry of the delays to make inventory and deliberate, and subsequently pleads a renunciation to the succession, the plaintiff cannot have such renunciation set aside on the ground of non-registration set aside on the ground of non-registration. Turner v. Renouf, 6 Q. P. R. 175. See also Renouf v. Turner, Q. R. 24 S. C. 194.

Report — Dispensing with—Powers of Prothonolary.]—The power to pay the money without report of distribution is given to the prothonotary alone, and not to the Judge or Court. Gravel v. Melancon, 5 Q. P. R. 388.

Report on — Collocation—Contestation—Bridence—Proceedings in Action.]—Upon a contestation of a collocation of a report on distribution, the Court will consider all the proceedings in the action subsequent to the writ of summons. Pelletier v. Michaud, Q. R. 20 S. C. 413.

Rival Claims to Succession—Dilapidation of Property—Remedy against—Scaling up—Curator.]—When the property of a succession is dilapidated or in danger of becoming so, the only remedy which creditors or heirs have is to cause the property to be scaled up; they cannot, so long as the time for making an inventory and deliberating has not expired, where several persons are claiming the succession, obtain the appointment of a curator. It was contended on behalf of the defendant that the action should be dismissed on the ground that it was not in evidence that the tutor (i.e. the plaintiff) had disbursed anything or had actually suffered any loss:—Held, that, as the father, if the tutor recovered damages, would have a claim against him for any sums he had disbursed for the minor as a result of the accident, it was immaterial whether anything had in fact already been paid by the tutor:—Held, further, that it was not incumbent upon the plaintiff to prove that the dog was a vicious dog. Hades v. Edmundson, 21 Occ. N. 444.

Injury by-Scienter - Findings of Jury Danages—Misdirection.]—In an action to recover damages from the owner of a dog, which had bitten the plaintiff, a child a little over five years of age, the jury, in answer to questions, found that the dog had attemption ed to bite one G. B., and that the defendant had knowledge of this before the plaintiff was bitten; that the dog had never, before the injury to the plaintiff, evinced a cross, savage, or vicious disposition, to the knowledge of the defendant; that the dog was in the habit of jumping upon or against people, and in such acts scratching them, and that the defendant knew this before the plaintiff was injured; that one of the acts of jumping on or against people referred to one W. B.; that the defendant knew of it before the plaintiff was injured, and that the dog did not do it playfully; that they considered that if G. B. had left the dog alone he would not have attempted to bite him :-Held, that not have attempted to the film. Head, the answers established that the defendant had kept the dog after he had knowledge that he was apt to do injury to manking. The Judge, in charging the jury, told them that if they thought the scars on the plain-tiffs face, caused by the bite, were likely to be permanent, and that such lasting dis-figurement might effect her prospects of making a good marriage, they might consider such possible loss of marriage in assessing the damages:—Held, misdirection, as such damages were too speculative and remote. jury were further directed that in assessing the damages they might take into consideration the financial position of the defendant and the condition in life of the plaintiff:— Held, misdirection. Change — Service of Process—Nullity—Prejudice.]—Where a young man of full axe who used to live with his father, but left to pursue his studies in a foreign city for a number of years, taking with him all his effects with the exception of a few books used by him when a student; and proposes on the completion of his studies to settle in one of several countries, and has no intention of returning to his father's domicil, he is held to have his domicil in such foreign dity, and service at his father's domicil in regular and null, and such nullity amounts to prejudice. Robert v. Dufresne, 7 Q. P. R. 226.

Origin — Change — Intention — Proof of—Residence—Permanency of,]—The domicil of origin adheres until a new domicil is acquired, and the onus of proving a change of domicil is on the party who alleges it; the change must be animo et facto, and the animus to abandon must be clearly and unequivocally proved: although residence may be decisive as to the factum, it is equivocal as regards the animus; the question is one of fact, to be determined by the particular circumstances of each case. Where a deceased person (in respect of whose estate a question of his domicil at the time of his death arose in an action by his widow to obtain a share of it) had his domicil of origin in Ontario, but went to live in the province of Quebec upon a farm owned by his father:—Held, upon the evidence, that he had not so adopted the farm as his home as to effect a change of domicil. Coyne v, Ryan, 21 Occ. N. 498. (Affirmed by C. A., 22, Occ. N. 12.)

Origin — Choice — Abandonment—Hus-band and Wife—Alimony—Writ of Summons —Service out of Jurisdiction — Rule 162 (c).]—In an action for alimony the de-- Choice - Abandonment-Husfendant was served with the writ of summons in November, 1900, in the State of California, where he had gone to reside in September, 1899. He was born in the State of Pennsylvania, and was married to the plaintiff in the State of New York in 1889. For seven or eight years before the marriage he had lived in Canada, most of the time in Ottawa. After the marriage the plaintiff and de-fendant went to Europe for several months, and afterwards resided for short periods at two places in different States in America. In 1891 they came to Canada, and bought In 1891 they came to Canada, and bought property at a village in Ontario, which was their home from that time on, although during several winters thereafter they went to different places in the United States, where each did something to earn money, but always came back to the Ontario home in the spring. The plaintiff still continued to reside there, and said she newer at any time. side there, and said she never at any time had any intention of changing permanently her residence or place of abode. The de-fendant swore that in September, 1889, he sold all the property he had in Canada, and went to the United States to reside, where he had ever since resided, was now residing, he had ever since resided, was now residing, and intended to reside, and that he had no property of any kind in Ontario. The defendant had since going to California instituted proceedings there against the plaintiff for a divorce:—Held, that the defendant's domicil of origin was in the United States; that he acquired a domicil of choice in Outerio: that upon the evidence, he had not tario; that, upon the evidence, he had not abandoned that domicil; and therefore he was still domiciled within Ontario, within the meaning of Rule 162 (c), and service of the writ upon him out of Ontario was permissible. Bax—Infant Wife — Purchaser for Value—Cansideration—Married Woman's Real Estate Act.]—A purchaser for value is one who obtains a property for a valuable, as distinguished from a merely good, consideration; and where there is no question of bona fides involved, the question of the adequacy of the consideration cannot be inquired into. Where a son, who had left his father's farm, returned upon his father's request and promise of remuneration and helped the father to work the farm, and remained with him working in that way upon a further request and promise of a conveyance, and the father afterwards married a girl under 15, johing to bar her dower:—Held, that the consideration, having become executed by the son having done his part, was a substantial and valuable consideration sufficient to make the son a purchaser for value, within the meaning of s. 5 of the Married Woman's Real Estate Act, R. S. O. 1897, c. 165; and therefore, the wife having been found to have known what she was doing when she executed the release of dower, was not entitled to dower out of the land conveyed to the son. Bar in Mortgage—Release of Equity of Redemption — Release after Action.)—The plaintiff joined with her husband in executing a mortgage of land, and released her dower in due form. The defendant took an assignment of the mortgage, and, subsequently, received from the plaintiff's husband a release of his equity of redemption, in which the plaintiff did not join:—Held, that the plaintiff could not assert a claim for dower against the defendant as long as the mortgage remained on foot, her only remedy being to redeem. As to a release executed by the defendant after the commencement of the action, the plaintiff's right must be determined by the condition of things existing at the time of action brought. Thompson v. Thompson, 37 N. S. Reps. 242.

Customary Dower — Authorization by Interdicted Husband — Registry Laws—Sheriff's Sale—Vendor and Purchaser—Ventranty—Sweession—Renunciation — Dometion by Interdict.] — The registration of a notice to charge lands with customary dower must, on pain or nullity, be accompanied by a certificate of the marriage in respect of which the dower is claimed, and must also contain a description sufficient to Identify the lands sought to be affected. A sale by the sheriff, under execution against a debtor in possession of an immovable under apparent title, discharges the property from customary dower which has not been effectively preserved by registration validiy made under the provisions of Art. 2116, C. C. Per Taschereau, C.J.,:—Neither the vendor not his heirs, who have not renounced the succession, nor his universal donees, who have accepted the donation, can, on any ground whatever, attack a title for which such vendor has given warranty: — Semble, that voluntary interdiction, even prior to the promujation of the Civil Code of Lower Canada, was an absolute nullity, and that the authorization to a married woman to bur her dower is not invalidated by the fact that he husband had been so interdicted at the time of such authorization. Customary Dower — Declaration—Registration—Marksucoman—Payment of Debts — Partition — Interest—Heirs—Purchaer.]—1. The registration of a declaration sized by mark in the presence of a single winess is sufficient to preserve the right to customary dower. 2. The doweress has the right to be taken the properties of the land devoted to her customary dower, even if there are debts which may be the basis of a claim when partition is made later. 3. The downers, taking the part of the lands appropriated to her customary dower, will be obliged to pay interest to the heirs upon such portion of her debts as may be attributed to her part of the lands; but such an arrangement should be made with the heirs, and gelp payment is due to them, and not to a purchaser, who has only a remedy en garantic against his grantor. The Quebec Act 47 V. c. 15, which declares that after the 1st January, 1884, rights of customary dower shall be avoided and extinguished as against his present to the declaration required by law has not been registered, should be interpreted as limited to cases, where a 181, has registered his title before the registration

Election — Gross Sum—Proceeds of Sale of Testator's Land.] — The owner of land died intestate leaving a widow and an infant child. The widow administered, and, with the consent of the official guardian, sold and conveyed the land in March, 1899, barring her dower in the deed of grant, and the whole of the purchase money was paid into Court to the joint credit of herself and of the official guardian, she reserving her right to elect between receiving the value of her dower or a distributive share of the estate, one of which it was clearly understood she would be entitled to be paid out of the fund in Court. In September, 1900, the widow executed a document wherein she elected to take the value of her dower in lieu of "any other interest she might have in her husband's undisposed of real estate." She died in April, 1901 :- Held, that the administrator of the widow's estate was entitled to receive out of the moneys in Court the value of the widow's dower, computed according to the annuity tables. Equity of Reclemption — Conveyance by Hubband Alone—Discharge of Mortgage.]

—On the 8th February. 1881, the owner of land subject to a mortgage, dated 29th January. 1875. In which his wife had joined to har dower, made a second mortgage in which his wife did not join. A portion of the more accordance of the second mortgage and the first mortgage and the first mortgages executed a declarge, which was registered on the 5th March, 1881. On the 30th September, 1881, the owned executed a conveyance of the land to the plaintiff, the grantor's wife joining the mid to the plaintiff, the grantor wife joining therein to bar her dower. Neither the plaintiff nor his grantor paid the principal money due under the subsisting mortgage, and the mortgages in the exercise of the power of sale on the 27th February, 1892, contracted to sell the land to the defendant, who had ever since been in possession as purchaser.

The plaintiff's grantor died on the 19th September, 1901, leaving his wife surviving him, and the plaintiff, claiming as assignee of the wife's right to dower by virtue of the conveyance of 30th September, 1881, brought this action for dower on the 11th September. this action for dower on the first parameter 1902:—Held, that, as the law stood on the 29th January, 1879, the wife, having joined in the mortgage of that date and thereby barred her dower, could become entitled to dower out of the equity of redemption only in the event of her husband dying beneficially entitled; and, as long as the mortgage subsisted, her husband could by a subsequent conveyance defeat her dower in the equity, which he effectively did by the second mortgage; and this was not affected by 42 V. 22 (O.), which became law on the 11th March, 1879. 2. The second mortgage having been executed and delivered for some weeks before the execution of the discharge of the first, the effect of the registration thereof was not to revert the premises in the mortgagor, but in the second mortgage. Interest in Lands — Locatee of Croten Lands—Bond to Convey—Unpatented Lands —Unregistered Assignment — Public Lands Act—Evidence—Corroboration.] — A locatee of Crown lands executed a bond in favour of his son, in consideration of services rendered, that the land should, at his death, be conveyed to the latter, on condition that he paid the Crown dues, which he did. The father afterwards married, and after his marriage obtained the patent:—Held, that his widow was not entitled to dower inasmuch as he had no more than the right of enjoyment for life with the fee held as trustee for his son. A locatee of land transferred all his interests therein to his son by assignment, which assignment was deposited, but not registered in the Crown lands office :-Held, that, notwithstanding R. S. O. 1897 c, 26, s. 19, the omission to register did not invalidate the transfer as against the assignor; and it operated so as to prevent the father from dying beneficially entitled, and so defeated any claim of the widow un-der the Dower Act. The facts rested mainly upon the evidence of the son, and his eviapon the evidence of the son, and his evidence did not require corroboration under R. S. O. c. 73, s. 10. Brown v. Brown, 24 Occ. Land Contracted to be Sold by Testator — State of Nature—Right to Dower — Executors—Payment to Widow for Release.]—The testator was the owner in fee at the time of his death of a timbered lot containing 100 acres, from 15 or 20 acres of which he had taken the timber; a part of the cleared land had been prepared for cultivation, and the seeds planted, but, owing to the nature of the soil, with little or no result. The testator had contracted to sell the whole lot for $2,000, and after his death the purchase ralled on the executors to receive the balance of the purchase money and to make title. The widow claimed her dower, and her claim was compromised by the executors at $390, which they paid her, and Lease made by Deceased Husband Priorities — Assignment of Dover—Rights of Executor and Devisee—Devolution of Estates Act.]—A doverse whose dower has not been assigned has no estate in the land out of which she is entitled to dover, but, as soon as her dower is properly assigned, she is entitled to claim possession of the land assigned to her in priority to persons land assigned to her in priority to persons claiming under leases created by her husband, without her assent, during the coverture. Stoughton v. Leigh, I Taunt. 402, followed. Where a testator, dying in August, 1901, devised land to his son, and probate of the will was granted to the executor named therein, and the son in April, 1909. 1902, executed a conveyance of a part of the land to the testator's widow for her life, as and for her dower, the executor not assenting thereto:—Held, that the conveyance was of no avail, for the only person veyance was of no avail, for the only person who could assign dower was the executor, in whom, under s. 4 of the Devolution of Estates Act R. S. O. 1897, c. 127, the whole inheritance of the testator vested, Allan v. Rever, 22 Occ. N. 294, 4 O. L. R. 309, 1 O. W. R. 459.

Mortgaged Land — Sale — Purchase Money.]—The testator in his lifetime purchased property subject to a $10,000 mortgage, which he assumed, but subsequently made a new mortgage, in which his wife joined to bar dower, and paid this mortgage off. He afterwards made a further mortgage for $1,650.58, in which his wife also joined for $1,050.58, in which his wife also joined to bar dower. He subsequently entered into an agreement for the sale of the property for $16,000, receiving $500 on account. The agreement was carried out by his executrix, the purchase money being applied in paying off the two mortgages, taxes, etc., leaving a balance of $2,150.52:—Held, that the wife was entitled to dower only out of the residue of the estate after satisfying the charges; and that such balance must not be treated merely personal estate so as to prevent the widow from claiming her dower therein. Payment under Threat of Criminal Prosecution — Error — Ratification.] About the time a dissolution of partnership was imminent, one of the partners was ac cused of embezzling funds, and, supposing that he was liable for an alleged shortage, and under threat of criminal prosecution, he signed a consent that the amount should be deducted from his share as a member of the firm. He was denied access to the books and vouchers, and some weeks afterwards, upon settlement of the affairs of the partnership, the amount so charged to him was paid over to the other partners. It was subsequently shewn that this partner had made his re-turns correctly, and had not appropriated any part of the missing funds:—Held, that he was entitled to recover back the amount so paid in an action condictio indebiti, as both the consent and the payment had been made under duress and in error; and, further, that there had been no ratification of the consent to the deduction of the amount by tne subsequent payment, because the denial of access to the books and vouchers caused him to continue in the same error which vitiated his consent in the first place; and further, that, even if the consent could be regarded as amounting to an agreement, it would be avoidable for error as to fact. Deed-Registration - Renewal-Road -Discontinuous, but Apparent Servitude-Aggravation.]-Default to renew the registration of the instrument creating a servitude, does not effect the extinction of such servitude, unless a real, discontinuous, and non-apparent servitude is in question.—2. In the present case the servitude, while discontinuous, was apparent; it was indicated by a road, and the Act 44 & 45 V. c. 6, ss. 5, 6, 7, does not apply to servitudes discontinuous but apparent, and consequently it was not necessary to renew the registration of the instrument which constituted it.—3. It cannot be said that there is aggravation of the servitude by the fact that the place where it is sought to be maintained changes little by little by reason of the fact that the water of a river breaks the land and makes more distant, attle by little, the place where the gravel is found which is to be taken out according to the terms of the instrument creating such servitude. Perry v. Simard, Q. R. 21 S. C.

Light-Servitude - Contract - Interference with Enjoyment of.]—A notarial deed made between the parties and intituled "Convention et Accord," contained among other provisions the following: "The parties, their heirs and those claiming under them, shall respectively have the right to maintain forever the windows (ouvertures) which actually exist in their said dwelling houses built on said lots Nos. 120 and 119, and will have the right to change the places of the same according to their respective need, but they will not have the right to construct more of them than they now actually respectively have:"—Held, that the deed above mentioned created an easement for light in favour of the covenantees. 2. It follows that nothing may be done which would limit the enjoyment of this easement or make it more inconvenient; the condition of the place cannot afterwards be changed so as to render the right illusory .- 3. Thus the construction of a new roof on the house at such a height that it takes away almost all the light and air obtained from a window of which the existence and enjoyment were assured by such deed, constitute an obstacle to the enjoyment of such easement. of such easement. 4. As a consequence he having a right to this easement can demand that this new construction be removed and the removal should be to such an extent that, after it has been done, the person having a right to the easement will enjoy it to the same extent as before. 5. The easement of light covenanted for by the plaintiff places on the defendant, the owner of the servient tenement, the implicit obligation not to build in such a manner as to destroy the enjoyment of the easement by the plaintiff. Thibault v. Gourde, Q. R. 26 S. C. 185.

Light—Servitude—Right of View.]—A conveyance of land fronting on public highways, with the right of passage merely over a private lane, does not create a servitude entitling the grantee to make windows or other openings in walls built on the line of the lane. Lesperance v. Gone, 25 Occ. N. 138.

Non-apparent Continuous Servitudes—Building Restrictions—Necessity for Renewal of Registration—Party Wall—Deed -" Fastened."] - Clauses in a deed of sale, prohibiting building in certain materials, or for certain purposes, do not create servitudes. 2. The words "établissements qui pourraient être de nature à incommoder les voisins et devenir un sujet de plainte," imply some substantial inconvenience exceeding ordinary grievances such as neighbours living together are obliged to endure. 3. A proprietor has a right, under Art. 520, C. C., to occupy nine inches of his neighbour's land for a foundation wall eighteen inches in thickness. has also the right to erect upon his line a building which cannot serve as a mitoyen wall, such as a wooden brick-encased wall, but subject to the obligation of demolishing such wall at his own cost, in the event of his neighbour constructing a mitoyen wall between their respective properties; and even where the previously existing wall was quite sufficient for his purposes, he will still be obliged to contribute one-half of the cost of the mitoyen wall if he use it. 4. The word "fastened" (scellé) in Art. 534, C. C., is sufficiently complied with by a window fixed to the wall with nails or screws, and these covered by a moulding of plaster which is, itself, fastened in such a way as not to be removable without being broken. deed creating a servitude must sufficiently indicate the dominant property without extrinsic aid. Projecting Eaves—Descending Water and Snow—Common Owner—Conveyances by -Grant and Reservation of Rights.]-The plaintiff's predecessor in title, owning a lot of land, built two houses thereon, with a passageway between them, and the eavestrough and part of the enves of the defendant's house projecting over the passageway. He then conveyed to the defendant's predecessor in title the westerly house, "with the privilege and use of the projection of the roof
. . . as at present constructed," and covenanted for the quiet and undiscurbed enjoyment of the projection, and that, on any sale or conveyance of the house to the east, he would "save and reserve the right . . . to such projection." Subsequently he conveyed the easterly house, with the land between the two houses, to the plaintiff, "subject to the right . . . to the use of the projection . . . as at present constructed:—Held, that the defendant was not bound to prevent the snow and water discharged from the clouds upon his roof from falling from it upon the plaintiff's land, and that the easement of shedding snow and water, as had been done ever since the defendant's house was built, was necessary to the reasonable enjoyment of the property granted; that the grantor could not insist upon the grantee altering the construction of the roof so as to prevent the snow and water coming

Right of Way—Agreement—Evidence— User.]—The plaintiff claimed a right of way over a private road 700 feet in length, in part on land of defendant adjoining plaintiff's land, and leading from a public highway to lots comprised in part by defendant's land, sold by defendant's predecessor in title, B., under a conveyance reserving to the grantees the use in common of the road. The evidence of plaintiff's predecessor in title, K., was that, shortly after the sale of these lots, he moved back on his land his farm house and fence, to widen the entrance of the priand reflect to when the entrance of the private road at its junction with the highway, under an agreement with B, concurred in, as he believed, by the owners of the lots, that he, K., should have for so doing a right of way with them over the road. B. denied that an agreement was concluded, or that the matter ever proceeded beyond negotiation, and his evidence was corroborated by H., a former owner of the lots, and by drafts of an agreement containing alterations indicating that the parties were merely in treaty, and providing for the maintenance of the road by K. in common with the owners of the lots, an obligation disclaimed by plaintiff, and for a obligation discialmed by paintint, and for a conveyance by K. of the part of his land to be used for widening the entrance. This conveyance was never made, and the land was included in the conveyance from K. to the plaintiff. The road had been used, from the time of the alleged agreement, by K. and plaintiff in connection with the farm house, until it was torn down, situate about 200 feet from the public highway, and the plaintiff had used, but not without interruption, the road for about 15 years, for a considerable part of its length. Shortly after the date of the alleged agreement, fences with gates, crossing the road at separate points, were erected by H. without objection by K.: -Held, that the plaintiff's bill for an injunction to restrain the defendant from obstructing plaintiff in the use of the road, should be dismissed. G,, the owner of lot 33 (except the part owned by the railway company), for a number of years used the passage under the trestle bridge to reach a lane on the south half of lot 34, over which he could pass to a village on the west side, his predecessor in title, who owned atl these lots, having also used the same route for the purpose. The company having filled up the ravine, G. brought this action for a mandatory injunction to compel the defendants to reopen it:—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 27 A. R. 64, 20 Occ. N. 56, that such user could never ripen into a title by prescription of the right of way, nor entitle G. to a farm crossing on lot 34. Guthrie v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 21 Occ. The owner of the higher parcel cannot even require the owner of the lower to pull down at his expense the obstructions created by his tenant; he can only demand the power to destroy them himself at his own charges, reserving his recourse in damages against the lessee who did the mischief. The words "établissements qui pourraient être de nature à incomles voisins et devenir un sujet de plainte," imply some substantial inconvenience exceeding ordinary grievances obliged to endure. 3. A proprietor has a right, under Art. 520, C. C., to occupy nine inches of his neighbour's land for a foundation wall eight teen inches in thickness. In 1902 R. foreibly broke the connection between the main pipe and D.'s house and cut off his supply of water, because, although D.'s family had increased in numbers, he refused to pay $9 per annum for the water:—Held, that & had no right to refuse the supply of water so long as he retained the servitude of D.'s property. EJECTMENT.

in equity praying that M. might be restrained from asserting title to a lot of land, and that R. might be declared to be entitled to the lot in fee simple. The Judge in Equity directed that R. bring an action of ejectment against M. to try the title. Both parties failed to prove a documentary title, and relied upon, and gave evidence of, title by possession. On questions submitted the jury found that R. and his predecessors in title had been in possession of the lot since 1876. On this finding the trial Judge ordered a verdict to be entered for R.:—Held, that the direction was right, and the Court was not obliged to treat the action under the order of the Equity Court as an ordinary action of ejectment, and assume the defendant to be in possession, and nonsuit the plaintiff on failure to prove title. Robertson v. Miller, 35 N. B. Reps. 686. The decree in equity founded upon the verdict in this case was reversed by the Supreme Court of Canada.

Improvements — Tender — Condition— Description of Land.]—In a petitory suit by the owner of land against a possessor, the plaintiff is not obliged to tender with his action an amount for the improvements; is not in default to pay the amount until it has been fixed by the Court. A tender ex-pressed to be made without prejudice, and pour acheter sa paix, and under the condi-tion that the party to whom it is made can take it only as a complete settlement of his claim in principal, interest, and costs, is not illegal and will not be struck from the re-cord on demurrer; it is not equivalent to a payment of the amount, but is a mere proposal. A tender is not necessarily illegal by reason only that there is a condition attached to it. Where land claimed by a petitory suit was situated in a locality of which there was no cadastral plan, and no fences or other boundaries, the judgment was held to be executable and the land to be sufficiently described as the lot of land situate at Fox Bay, Anticosti, on which the defendant had built a dwelling house which he occupied. Menier v. Whiting, Q. R. 18 S. C. 113.

Proof of Title-Heir-at-law-Unrecorded Proof of Ittle—Herrat-date—Unrecorded Deed—Sale by Administrative—Presumption —Paper Title—Adverse Possession—Acts of Possession—Limitation of Actions.]—An un-recorded deed from the heir-at-law of the owner of the fee to his widow in occupation at the time of his death, which occupation was continued by the widow and her successors in title to the time the deed was given and for more than twenty years after, is not a deed by one disseised (the possession not being adverse), but operates as a convey-ance of the heir's title, or, at all events, is good as a release against the heir or one good as a release against the neir or one claiming through him under a recorded deed. After a lapse of thirty years a deed by an administratrix, under a license from the Probate Court to sell, will be presumed to be good, though there is no affidavit of the administratrix indorsed thereon, as required by the Probate Act of 1840, and no proof that the provisions of the Act as to notice of sale, etc., were complied with. Adverse possession to cut down a documentary title of a defined lot must be made out clearly and satisfactorily, and must be open and exclusive, of some definite part or of the whole; and evidence of acts of cutting hay and planting crops on parts of the lot, the location of which are not so defined as to make it possible to adjudge their position or boundaries, amount only to acts of trespass. Interest in Land—Rule 743—Sale under Jadgment — Cancellation — Consideration— Top-payments.] — In 1859 the plaintiff recovered judgment against W, and registered and kept in force a certificate thereof. On the 2nd July, 1901, the defendant H, entered into an agreement to buy land, paying for it in installments. A few days later H. agreed to sell this land to W. for a higher price, to be paid by the delivery of half the grain raised each year, without any provision to pay in eash. The plaintiff took proceedings under Rule 742 to have W.'s interest in the land sold, and an order for sale was made. The plaintiff then offered to redeem H. Before the order for sale H. had served on W. a notice purporting to cancel the agreement for default, and later notified the plaintiff of the cancellation:—Held, that H. would have had no right to cut out, in the manner he did and without notice to the plaintiff, the plaintiff's claim against W's interest, if that claim were one which could be enforced. But the nature of the arreement between H. and W. was such that W. could not have assigned his interest to anyone without H.'s consent. In the case of a crop-payment agreement, such as the present one, an assigned his interest to anyone without H.'s consent. In the case of a crop-payment agreement, such as the present one, an assigned his interest to anyone without saign his interest covenants, would perhaps not raise half of the crops that W. would, and might drag out interminably the man bayment for the land. I. ADMISSIBILITY.

Admissions — Devisibility—Commencement of Proof in Writing.]—Where a contract is admitted to have been entered into by the party against whom it is set up, no commencement of proof in writing is necessary in order to permit of the reducing of evidence by parol as to the amount of the consideration or as to the conditions of the contract. In such a case, the rule that admissions cannot be divided against the party making them does not apply. Campbell v. Young, 23 Occ. N. 38, 32 S. C. R. 547.

Admissions — Divisibility — Commencement of Proof in Writing — Architect—Plans — Agreement.] — In an action brought by architects, claiming fees for the preparation of sketches or designs for the defendant, the latter, when examined as witness, admitted that the sketches had been prepared for him by the plaintiffs, but stated that there was an understanding that they were not to be paid for unless used by him, and that they had not been used. It appeared that the defendant, at the time the plans were invited, had not yet purchased the land for the proposed buildings, and that he had asked for plans from several architects:—Held, that the admission of the defendant could not be divided, for the purpose of obtaining a commencement of proof, there being no improbability in his statement, or indication of bad faith, or other circumstance, to bring the case within the exceptions of 60 V. c. 50, s. 20 (Q.), amending Art, 1243 of the Civil Code. Cox v. Pacaud, Q. R. 23 S. C. 9.

Admissions—Withdrawal—Leave—Motios for Judgment.]—After all parties had arred upon a statement of facts, and the plaintif had served notice of motion for judgment thereon, he delivered a statement of claim and served on the defendants a notice withdrawing the statement of facts and counting the motice of motion. One of the defendants then moved for judgment on the statement of facts, which had not been file!—Held, that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to make an independent motion to be relieved from his admissions contained in the statement of facts, which had not been acted upon or brought before the Court; after the filing of the statement of claim and the notice of withdrawal, it was not competent for the plaintiff to get judgment on the statement of facts; and if the sanction of the Court were needed for the course takes by the plaintiff, it might be given upon the defendant's motion. East v. O'Connor, 21 Occ. N. 28, 19 P. R. 301.

Appeal — Acquittal for Perjury at Triel of Action.]—For perjury alleged to have bee committed by the defendant at the trial of this action, he was tried and acquitted before the hearing of an appeal in the action and, on the appeal, his counsel moved the full Court to be allowed to read the verdict of the jury in the criminal trial. The motion was refused. Borland v. Coote, 24 Occ. N. 383, 10 B. C. R. 493.

of the plaintiffs' business and not otherwise, books of account kept by the plaintiffs were received in evidence against the defendant :-Held, that the evidence in question was improperly received; and the Court, being unable to say with certainty that the evidence did not enter into the materials that produced upon the mind of the trial Judge the conviction expressed in his judgment in favour of the plaintiffs, and being unable to say with certainty what the judgment of the trial Judge excluding the evidence improperly received would have been, directed a new trial. was argued that the reception of the books of account was "harmless error," inasmuch inasmuch as they could only have been received to fix the value of the goods sold and delivered, and such value was fixed independently of the books by the admission of the defendant, The whole question in dispute being whether the defendant was a purchaser or not, and there being evidence that he was not aware that the plaintiffs were making a claim against him until shortly before the action was brought, the admission relied upon being vague in its character, and the amount of goods sold being only capable of being ascertained from the plaintiffs' books:—Held, that the admission was not of the nature or effect which such an argument required. Semble, if it were conceded that the defendant was a purchaser of the goods sent, the evidence as to his admissions on this point would probably suffice to fix the amount. Carstens v. Muggah, 37 N. S. Reps. 361.

Cause of Death - Way-Non-repair Negligence-Statements of Person Injured-Res Gestw-Other Evidence. 1-In an action brought by the father and mother of a young to recover damages in respect of her death, which resulted, as was alleged, from a fall on a stone in a highway under the conthe stone in a nighway under the control of the defendants, it was proved that the stone in question had been allowed to remain for a long time in a part of the highway used by foot passengers; that several persons had tripped over it; that the deceased had left her house on a certain evening to go to another house, the direct route to which would be by the highway in question; that she came to the other house apparently suffering great pain, and stated that she had tripped on the stone and hurt berself; that, about the time she would in the ordinary course have been passing the place in question, a witness saw a young girl, whose description answered to that of the deceased, lying beside the stone, who stated to him that she had fallen on the stone and hurt herself; and that the girl died from peritonitis result ing, in the opinion of the doctor who attended her, from an injury such as would have been the result of a fall on a stone:—Held, that the statement of the deceased to her friends at the house to which she came, and, assuming that the identity had been proved, her statements while lying near the stone, were not admissible in evidence as part of the res gestge, these being at most statements made in reference to the accident after it had appened, and after the deceased had had time for consideration, distinguishable therefore from those involuntary and contemportaneous exclamations made without time for Manufacture. reflection, which alone are properly admissible as part of the res gestæ. Regina v. Mc-Mahon, 18 O. R. 502, applied. But the identity of the deceased with the person seen by the witness lying near the stone was established; and, excluding her statements, there was ample evidence to justify the conclusion that the deceased had received injuries by falling on the stone; and, as the highway was by reason of the presence of the stone in a dangerous condition and out of repair, the defendants were liable. Garner v. Township of Stamford, 24 Occ. N. 52, 7 O. L. R. 50, 2 O. W. R. 1167.

Cross-examination of Party Affidavit.]-Where a party has been crossexamined on an affidavit made by him, the opposite party can use such examination at he trial as evidence in rebuttal of the evidence of the same party. Livingstone v pitts, 21 Occ. N. 102, 4 Terr. L. R. 441. Livingstone v. Col-

Custom of Commerce - Proof of.] Evidence may be given of the usage of commerce not only when the terms of the contract are ambiguous, but even when the intention of the parties is not clearly shewn according to the circumstances of the transaction, Prior v. Atkinson, Q. R. 19 S. C.

Depositions-Special Examiner - Wrong Person—Suppression.] — An order appointed "E. K. A. of Neihart, Montana, U.S.A., a justice of the peace," a special examiner to take the depositions of certain witnesses; the depositions were in fact taken by one G. P. M., a justice of the peace, it appearing that E. K. A. had ceased to hold office, and that G. P. M. was his successor in office. An agent for each party appeared on the taking of the depositions, and it did not appear that any objection was made to G. P. M. taking the depositions:—Held, that the depositions were taken by G. P. M. without authority and, therefore, could not be used in evidence. Held, also, that the depositions being taken without authority and being not merely irregular, a substantive motion to suppress was not necessary, and that the objection could be taken upon their being tendered in evidence. Claverie v. Gory, Pagnac v. Claverie, 4 Terr. L. R. 470.

Depositions at Former Trial -Divorce.] — In divorce proceedings the evidence of a witness who cannot be found, given at a former trial proving misconduct, may be read over to the petitioner at the trial and verified by her as a correct note of the evidence as given by the witness and used as proof of misconduct. Cunliffe v. Cunliffe, 8 B, C. R. 18.

Depositions in Another Action.]—
The provision of art, 292, C. P., "A Judge may order that the evidence taken in one action may serve in another," must be interpreted as applying to evidence not already taken, but which is to be taken, the parties being aware at the time that it will be useful in another cause. Held, however, that evidence of persons who had been witnesses at the trial, that the evidence they then gave was not in fact true, and that certain statements made by them before trial to the plaintiff's solicitor (which was avowedly the evidence sought to be obtained here by the examination in question) were true, would not be receivable. Town of Maisonneuve v. Charlier, Q. R. 20 S. C. 518.

Parol Evidence—Trust.]—Among other claims in this action, the plaintiff asked to have it declared that the purchase made by the defendant of a lot of land was made to him as trustee and agent for the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the profits and an account. There was no writing evidencing the account. There was no writing rediencing the sat. Iberty to prove by parol evidencing the sat. Iberty to prove by parol evidence for the alleged trust. The authorities are conflicting. Bartlett v. Rickersgill, 2011. Eden. 515, 4 East 57, Heard v. Pilley, L. R. 4 Ch. 548, James v. Smith, [1891] I. Ch. at p. 387, and Rochefoucauld v. Bousfead, [1897] 1 Ch. 196, discussed. Held, however, that the evidence in this case failed to prove the trust. Hull v. Allen, 22 Occ. N. 138, 1 O. W. R. 151, 782.

Parol Evidence — Contradicting Valid Writing—Commencement of Proof by Writing—Downments—Inscription de Foux.]—Oral evidence will not be admitted to contradict the terms of a writing validly made whether as a commencement of proof by writing or any other kind of oral testimony. 2. An inscription de faux is only required when it is desired to prove the falsity of what a public officer declares that he saw or heard himself. O'Malley v. Ryan, Q. R. 21 S. C. 566.

Parol Evidence—Work Done—Request.]
—On a claim for repairs done by the lesses at the request of the lessor, and board of men, exceeding $50, the request cannot be proved by parol evidence. Caron v. Gaudet, 6 Q. P. R. 23.

Parol Evidence to Explain Contract -Collateral Security.]-The plaintiff sued on promissory note, and tendered with his action a certificate of shares which he said the defendant had transferred to him as collateral security for the loan represented by the note. The defendant pleaded that the note was made in connection with a contract by which the defendant sold to the plaintiff eleven shares of Kensington Land Company stock subject to the right of redemption within six months on certain conditions, and that the note was only collateral to the contract, and made at plaintiff's request to enable him to obtain the money by discount. The note and contract were produced :-Held, that taking the note and contract together, and also seeing the admission in the declaration that the two documents were connected with the same transaction, parol evidence was admis-sible in explanation of the contract as between the parties thereto. Walker v. Brown, Q. R. 19 S. C. 23.

Presentation of Evidence Rejected— New Trial.]—Where a party seeks a new trial on the ground of wrongful rejection of evidence, he should shew that the evidence sought to be adduced was put squarely before the Judge, so that his mind was applied to the point. Hopkins v. Gooderham, 24 Occ. N. 104, 10 B, C. R. 250.

Production of Book—Refusal of trial Judge to allow—Substantial wrong—New trial—Costs. Matthews v. Moody, 1 O. W. R. 47.

Relevancy — Froud — Similar Transactions.]—In an action to set aside a bill of sale of a mineral claim, on the ground that it was forgery by one of the defendants, evidence was given by the plaintiff and his witnesses as to matters which, whether material or not, were intended to make the Judge give a readier credit to the plaintiff's case. For the defence witnesses were allowed to give evidence shewing that the plaintiff and his witnesses, in respect of the same mineral claim, had been parties or privy to a fraudulent transaction involving perjury and conspiracy, and tending to shew that a like fraudulent scheme was being attempted in this case, and the result was that the Judge was so influenced by this evidence that he gave judgment for the defendants:—Held, that the evidence on behalf of the defendants was properly admitted. D'Avignon v. Jones. 23 Occ. N. 71, 9 B. C. R. 359; affirmed, 32 S. C. R. 650.

II. AFFIDAVITS.

Marksman—Jurat.]—In the jurat of the affidavit of a marksman, upon which a rule had been obtained, instead of the words "he (or who) seemed perfectly to understand the same," were the words "seemed fully to understand the same :"—Held, a sufficient compliance with Rule 1 of Hilary Term, 1848. Ex p. Allain, 20 Occ. N. 87, 35 N. B. Reps. 107.

Statute — Form Prescribed — Officer to Take—Justice of the Peace—Commissioner—Exception to Form.] — The provisions of a special statute, enacting that an affidavit shall be made according to the form contained in the Act, which indicates that it is to be made before a justice of the peace, have not the effect of restricting the power conferred on a commissioner of the Superior Court by art, 23, C. P. C.; but these provisions indicate only that a justice of the peace can also take such affidavit. The fact that an affidavit does not read in t'.e first person, is not a ground for taking exception to its form, if it is not shewn that the other party has been prejudiced thereby. Lapointe v. Berthiaume, Q. R. 26 S. C. 35, Swearing—Foreign Notary.]—A notary public for the State of New York has authority, under art. 30, C. P., to receive affidavits, within his State, for use in the Courts of the Province of Quebec. Schwob v. Baker, 5 Q. P. R. 441.

III. CORROBORATION.

Action against Executor—Contract.]—
The corroboration required by s. 50 of the Evidence Act (B. C. stat. 1900, c. 9, s. 4), must refer specifically to the contract on which action is based, and not to some part of it, so as to leave the effect of the whole unascertained. Biacquiere v. Corr, 10 B. C. R. 448.

Action against Representative of Deceased—Cestui que Trust.] — The material corroborative evidence required by R. S. O. 1897 c. 73, s. 10, in a proceeding by or against the executor of the will, or the administrator of the estate, of a deceased person, may be given by one who is interested as cestui que trust in the matter of the claim in question in the action. The interest of such a witness in the result may well be considered by the jury in considering the weight to be attached to it, but the evidence could not be withdrawn from their consideration. Batsold v. Upper, 22 Occ. N. 257, 4 O. L. R. 116, 1 O. W. R. 381.

Action against Representative of Becased—Promissory Note—Comparison of Handwirthing.]—In an action on a promissory note against the personal representatives of the maker, tried by a Judge without a jury, a duplicate registered mortgage purporting to be executed by the maker of the note, with the registrar's certificate of registration upon it, was produced in evidence to prove by comparison the signature of the note:—Held, that the Judge was entitled to compare the signatures, and act on his own conclusion as to their identity, and having found them identical, the corroboration was sufficient to satisfy R. S. O. 1897 c. 73, s. 10. Thompson v, Thompson 4 O. L. R. 442, 1 O. W. R. 431.

Action by Executors for Money Demand — Defence — Payment to Testator — Testimony of Defendant—Corroborating Circumstances.]-In an action by executors to recover money due from C. to the testator, it was proved that the latter when ill in a hospital had sold a farm to C., and that $1,000 of the purchase money was deposited in a bank to the testator's credit; that sub-sequently C, withdrew this money on an order from the testator, who died some weeks afterwards, when none was found on his person, nor any record of its having been received by him. C. admitted having drawn out the money, but swore that he had paid it over to the testator; no other evidence of any kind was given of such payment:-Held. reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 2 O. W. R. 356, and restoring the judgment of a Divisional Court, 1 O. W. R. 205, that a prima facie case having been made out against C., and his evidence not having been corroborated as required by R. S. O. 1897 c. 73, s. 10, the executors were entitled to judgment. Thompson v. Coulter, 24 Occ. N. 48, 34 S. C. R. 261, 3 O. W. R. 82.

Breach of Promise of Marriage—Imperial Statute.] — The Imperial statute 32 & 33 V. c. 68, s. 2, requiring the plainiffs evidence in an action for breach of promise of marriage to be corroborated by some other material evidence in support of such promise, is in force in Manitoba, not being either copressly or by implication repealed by the Manitoba Evidence Act, 57 V. c. 13, now c. 57 of R. S. M. 1902. Cockretil v. Harries, 23 Occ. N. 123, 14 Man. L. R. 369.

Claim against Estate of Deceased Person—Statute of Limitations. Wilson v. Houce, 1 O. W. R. 272.

Partition of Land-Proof of Identity-Fuller v. Grant, 1 O. W. R. 452.

IV. CREDIBILITY OF WITNESSES.

Conflicting Evidence—Duty of Confl.

—When several witnesses equally intelligent and credible, who appear to give their ref-mony in good faith, do not agree upon the existence of a fact, the Court should adopt the version of the majority, rather than that of the minority. 2. As between winness equally honest, the Court ought rather to believe those who would not be likely to mischen than those who are likely to mischen than those who are likely to mische ceive the facts in question. Finding Based on Pósitive Evidence—Appael.]—In an action for injury to land by flooding, the trial Judge found, with some doub, that the water had been delivered by means of a culvert constructed by the defendants, in spite of a mass of testimony going to shew that this was impossible:—Held, that the Court (Supreme Court en bane) would not interfere with the Judge's finding, there being positive evidence to sustain it, which had chosen to believe, and it could not be said that he was clearly wrong. Millon v. District of Surrey, 10 B. C. R. 290.

Trial Judge—Appellate Court.] — When the credibility of a witness who has given his evidence before the trial Judge is questioned before an appellate Court, the Court should reverse the finding of the trial Judge as to the witness's evidence only if the evidence itself furnishes very strong grounds for doing so, and if the matter is in doubt the finding should be accepted. Laftamme v. Fortier, Q. R. 27 S. C. 96.

V. DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

Commencement of Proof—Admission of Oral Testimony—Promissory Note.]—An affidavit to the effect that the payee of a promissory note has transferred it to the person making the affidavit, joined with the admission of the latter that the holder of the note did not receive from him any consideration for transferring it to him, constitutes a "commencement de preuve" in writing of a promise by the transferee of such note to pay the amount thereof to the transferor, sufficient to admit oral testimony of such promise. Jewell v. Latimore, Q. R. 26 S. C. 450.

Commencement of Proof in Writing—Authentic and Private Writings.]—A writing which is not authentic by reason of defects which deprive it of its authenticity, will avail as a private writing if it have been signed by all the parties whose signatures thereto were necessary if made as a private writing. Earthal evidence is not admissible to estable the amount payable under a private withing (not referring to any specific transactions) and the property of the property of the property of the property of the previous there have a commencement of proof in writing as to the amount; and the signature of the person obliging himself would not constitute such commencement of proof. Judement in Q. R. 10 S. C. 82 affirmed. (fauther v. Rioux, Q. R. 10 S. C. 473.

Entries in Books—Onus.]—An entry in a merchant's books, shewing that the defendant is indebted in a certain amount, with proof that the plaintiffs did sell goods to him and that the books were regularly kept, is not sufficient, per se, to put the defendant, who, by his plea, denied his indebtedness, upon proof of the incorrectness of such entry. Garla v. Montreal Park and Island R. W. Co., Q. R. 18 S. C. 463.

Instrument in Duplicate—Variation— Less—Secondary Evidence—Demand of Perfermance of Obligation—Default.)—When a written instrument is made in duplicate, all that one contains more than the other is non-existent so far as the holder of the latter is concerned. In order that secondary evidence may be admitted of a document, it is not necessary to shew that it was lost by no fault of the party or unforeseen accident; it is sufficient to shew to the satisfaction of the Court that it is impossible to find it, and that it has not been purposely destroyed. Damages cannot be recovered for non-performance of an obligation unless the party seeking to recover has demanded performance so as to place the other in default. Lafrance v. Larochelle, Q. R. 27 S. C. 153.

Notice to Produce — Object of, 1—The only object of a notice to produce is to enable the pury giving it of the produce is to enable the pury giving it on the secondary evidence the contents of it writing, if the original, being in the possession of the party to whom the notice is given, is not produced by him. If the party chooses to produce the original without notice, or if the party desiring to put in the original gets possession of it and puts it in, it is, no objection that a notice to produce was not given. Carte v. Dennis, 21 Occ. N. 207.

Oral Contract — Petition to Open up Jampen — Discovery of Fresh Boidenea, — A party who has declared, in compliance with a judgment ordering him to file particulars, that he was suing upon an oral contract, may, without fraud, file documentary evidence at the trial, in support of such so-called oral contract. 2. At any rate, it is the duty of the adverse party, when such documents are filed, to object to their production and take proceedings to have the case reopened while it is under advisement, and a requête civile will not be received when the party might have had the case reopened before judgment. 3. A judgment will not be revoked by reason of the discovery of new evidence, unless it is shewn that the party made reasonable efforts to discover it before the trial, or could have discovered it by reasonable diligence. Union Home and Real Estate Co. v. Estates Limited, 6 Q. P. R. 383.

Revival of Action—Petition by Child of Deceased Plaintiff—Proof of Status—Certificate of Baptism—Marriage Contract,—Upon a petition for leave to continue an action in the name of the petitioner as the daughter of the deceased plaintiff:—Held, that the certificate of the petitioner's baptism attested only her fillation, but not that her parents were man and wife, which fact could only be proved by the marriage settlement or other similar documents. Connolly v. Consumers' Cordage Co., 6 Q. P. R. 150.

Will—Validity—Letters Probate.] — Probate of a will devising real estate is not conclusive evidence of the validity of the will in a Court of equity. Turner v. Turner, 24 Occ. N. 243, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 535.

VI. FOREIGN COMMISSION,

Application for—Affidavit in support—Purpose of evidence sought. Spencer v. Drysdale (B.C.), 1 W. L. R. 6 & 7, Application for—Evidence on.]—Application was made for a commission to examine a witness resident in the United States, the application being based on an affidavit of the partner of the defendant's solicitor, on information obtained by him from M., the defendant's agent. There was no affidavit from M., personally, and nothing to shew that the evidence of the witness could not have been obtained before he left the jurisdiction, or that the facts said to be in the knowledge of the witness could not be supplied by other persons: — Held, that the application was properly dismissed. McPherson v. Rater-Conleys Mig. Co., 35 N. S. Reps. 429.

Application for, during Trial — Re-fusal—Adjournment by Consent — Appeal — Estoppel.]—During the progress of the trial, and after a number of witnesses on behalf of the plaintiffs had been examined, the defend-ants' counsel applied for a commission for the examination of a witness who was absent in British Columbia, and for a postponement of the trial. The witness in question was a son of one of the defendants, who was aware of his absence, but the fact was not brought to the attention of the defendants' counsel until the day on which the trial was commenced. The trial Judge having refused both the commission and the postponement:— Held, that there was no reason for interfering with his discretion on these points. After the commission applied for had been refused, the plaintiffs' counsel offered to agree to an adjournment for a reasonable time, to be fixed by the Court, to enable the defendants to produce the witness, should they desire to do so, and the case was adjourned from the 8th January to the 17th February. On the latter day, the case being called, the defendants counsel stated that he had no further evidence to offer, and judgment was given for the plaintiffs: — Held, that the defendants, having accepted the offer made on behalf of plaintiffs, and obtained an adjournment of the case, were not in a position to revert of the case, were not in a position to revert back to their original rights, and claim a review of the judgment. Stephen v. Thompson, 35 N. S. Reps, 390.

County Court—Transitation of Plaintiffs—Expense. —In an action in a County Court on a promissory note for $65.40, the defendant pleaded that the note was obtained from him under duress and the plaintiffs, who lived in Ontario, applied for a commission to take their evidence there: — Held, that, as the probable expenses of the commission would not exceed a quarter of the expenses of the plaintiffs attending the trial, and the application was made bona fide, it should be granted. Thompson v. Henderson, 9 B. C. R. 540.

Examination of Absent Plaintiff.]— Action of replevin. After the commencement of the action one of the plaintiffs left the jurisdiction. Application was made on behalf of the plaintiffs to examine the absent plaintiff under a commission, the plaintiffs solietor stating that the absent plaintiffs was joined by mistake:—Held, that the plaintiffs ought to have leave to issue a commission. The delay was satisfactorily accounted for, and, even if the absentee was a real plaintiff, the law permits a commission to be issued to take the evidence of a party. The fact that it is on the part of the plaintiff makes no difference. Wills v. Behie, 22 Occ. N. 430.

Examination of Party.]—Under a general commission to examine witnesses abroad on behalf of both parties, the witnesses intended to be examined not being named in the order or the commission, it is not permissible for the plaintiff to give his evidence before the commissioner, and, where the commission is opened at the trial, the plaintiff depositions on being tendered in evidence will be rejected. Wright v. Shattuck, 4 Terr. L. R, 317.

Examination of Party—Default as to Interrogatories.]—A defendant against whom interrogatories upon articulated facts have been declared pro confessis, and who has left the country, cannot obtain a rogatory commission for his examination abroad. Bernard v. Carbonneau, 6 Q. P. R. 350.

Examination of Party — Interrogatories, 1—A party to an action in default for answers to interrogatories sur faits et articles may, by motion, and on paying the costs incurred by his default, ask to be examined upon commission at his new domicil out of the Province. Burelle v. Palardy, 4 Q. P. R. 73.

Grounds for Ordering — Terms—Security for costs. McGregor v. Johnson, 2 0. W. R. 531.

Interrogatories — Foreign Commission—Bridence—Motion to Strike out-Jurisletion.]—Motion by defendant to strike out iterrogatories served by plaintiffs upon defendant as proposed to be used upon a commission to take evidence in Scotland. No authority was cited in support of the metion; against it was the authority of Huminission (1903), p. 101, where it said that great care should be taken in framing between the defendant of the contain leading questions or are immedial irrelevant, or otherwise objectionable, the posite party may object to the auswerpest reactive for the Master to consider intergatories proposed to be administered increase where so the same part of the season of the same part of the same practice for the Master to consider intergatories proposed to be administered the resease on commission, because the rules wish

The only rule deal-ing with the subject is 503:—Held, in the broad absence of express authority, there was no power to deal with these interrogatories. A Ferguparty examining on interrogatories cannot be interfered with as is sought to be done ses inmed in in this case. If the other side objects to his interrogatories, it may be wise to alter them. But a party is not obliged to do so. If he chooses he is free to take his risk of the commission evidence being rejected either in whole or in part by the Judge at the trial. dismissed with costs to plaintiffs in the cause. Toronto Industrial Exhibition Assn. V. Houston, 5 O. W. R. 493, 9 O. L. R. 527.

Interrogatories-Names of Witnesses.] -When a commission in the nature of a commission rogatoire is issued to examine witnesses, the interrogatories will be allowed and settled notwithstanding the fact that the party at whose instance the commission issued, declares he is unable to disclose the names of all the witnesses he intends examining. Milliken v. Laurentide Pulp Co., 6 Q. P. R. 134.

Irregularity — Waiver — New Trial— Defect in Evidence.]—Where a commission to take evidence was issued without a formal order therefor, but merely on an informal memorandum of a Judge, containing no direction as to the commissioners' name, or the time, place, or manner of taking the evidence, but the commission, before being sent out, had been shewn to the advocate for the opposite party, and due notice of the time and place of taking the evidence under the commission had been served on him, and on the return of the commission it had been opened at his instance :- Held, that the irregularities in connection with the issue of the commission, which might at an earlier stage commission, which might at an earlier stage have been taken advantage of by motion to suppress, were waived by the advocate for the opposite party, with knowledge of the irregularities, causing the commission to be opened; that being a fresh step within the meaning of s. 541 of the Judicature Ordinace. 2. That in any case, the trial Judge lawing received the evidence, and a 201 of having received the evidence, and s. 501 of the Judicature Ordinance providing that a new trial shall not be granted on the ground of the improper admission or rejection of evidence, unless, in the opinion of the Court to which application is made, some substantial wrong or miscarriage has been thereby occasioned in the trial, and the Court being of the contrary opinion, no effect should be given to the objection. Trial of an action ad-journed to enable plaintiff to supply defect in the evidence in support of his case under s. 236 of the Judicature Ordinance. Hamilton v. McNeill, 2 Terr. L. R. 31.

Irrelevant Testimony — Terms—Costs and expenses. Toronto Industrial Exhibition Assn. v. Houston, 5 O. W. R. 303, 349, Postponement of Trial — Delay — Terms—Security for costs. Lemoine v. Mac-Kay, 2 O. W. R. 390, 400.

Return — Delay — Nullity — Omission to Put Questions.]—The execution of a foreign commission and the return of the commissioner after the time fixed, by the consent of the parties, are not necessarily causes of nullity, especially when no prejudice has been occasioned. 2. If the commissioner has omitted to put to a witness certain questions, his return will not be received, his proceedings being incomplete, but such omission does not render the proceedings void, and the Court, in that case, will order the record to be sent back to the commissioner with instructions to put the questions and so complete his proceedings. Thibault v. Poulin, Q. R. 22 S. C. 371, 5 Q. P. R. 189.

EVIDENCE.

Time - Extension - Issue - Return.] -Where a commission rogatoire has not been issued within the time allowed for its return, the order allowing it to be issued lapses, and the Court cannot extend the time for taking testimony under such commission or for its return. Girard v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 18 S. C. 315.

Trial Judge - Postponement of Trial.] The Judge to whom an application is made for a commission rogatoire may refer the same to the trial Judge, who will, in his discretion, after having heard the evidence. grant or refuse the motion, and, in the former case, postpone the trial in order to permit the execution of the commission. Armstrong v. Gillies, 5 Q. P. R. 423.

Witnesses out of Province - Examination of—Procedure.] — Under art. 373, C. P., the commissaire-enquêteur to be appoint ed must reside in the Province of Quebec, and the witness to be examined must also reside therein. If the witnesses reside out of the province, the party who finds it necessary to examine them must proceed under arts. 380 et seq. Patterson v. Crépeau, Q. R. 19 S. C. 147, 3 Q. P. R. 404,

VII. SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

Books and Documents - Objections-Resemblance or Identity of Performances— Copyright,] — Objections to secondary evidence of the contents of a written document must be distinctly stated when it is offered; and if not objected to it is received, and is entitled to its proper weight, and the weight to be attached to it will depend upon the cir-cumstances of each case. Each programme of an entertainment is an original document, not a mere copy. The rule excluding oral testimony of a witness of the contents of a written document which he had read was not applicable to the present case (an action for infringement of a copyright by the performance of an opera). What was sought to be proved was not the contents of any book or document, but the resemblance or identity of two performances, partly verbal, partly musical, and partly made up of dramatic action, gesture, and facial expression. Sufficiency and admissibility of evidence of resemblance or identity of the performance or of copy with original discussed. Carte v. Dennis, 5 Terr. L. R. 30.

Notice to Produce - Object of .] -The only object of a notice to produce is to enable the party giving it to put in secondary evidence of the contents of a writing, if the original, being in the possession of the party to whom the notice is given, is not produced by him. If the party chooses to produce the original without notice, or if the party desiring to put in the original gets possession of it and puts it in, it is no objection that a notice to produce was not given. Carte v. Dennie, 21 Occ. N. 267, 5 Terr. L. R. 30.

Proof in Writing — Necessity for — Loss by Unforescen Accident — Oral Testimony.] — Where the original of a notarial minute has disappeared without the fault of the parties, by some inexplicable circumstance, the case comes within art, 1233, para. 6 C. C., which provides that proof may be made by testimony "in cases in which the proof in writing has been lost by unforescen accident." Filiatrault v. Feeny, Q. R. 20 S. C. 11.

Voluntary Destruction of Document.]

—A plaintiff who has voluntarily destroyed an instrument under seal evidencing an agreement with the defendant cannot be allowed to prove orally the contents of such document. Oct v. Cantin. Q. R. 21 S. C. 432.

VIII. WITNESSES,

Competency — Religious Belief.] — A person offered as a witness, upon being examined on the voir dire, stated that he believed in God but did not believe in a future state of rewards and punishments dependent upon his conduct while on earth, whereupon he was rejected as incompetent:—Held, that he was properly so rejected. Bell v. Bell, 34 N. B. Reps. 615.

Cross-examination to Credit — Contradiction — Defamation.]—The defendant in an action of defamation, to which he pleaded privilege, after himself stating in the witness box that one H. had informed him that the plaintiff was keeping the strippings from his cows, and making butter from them, contrary to his agreement with a cheesemaking association, which was the alleged slander, called H. as a witness, and proved that H. had told him (the defendant) what he had stated. The plaintiff's counsel then in cross-examination asked H. his grounds for making the statement, and H. said that he had seen the plaintiff's wife taking the strippings, and that she had not mixed them with the milk sent to the factory; that she told him that she always took the strippings from the cows and used them in the house. The plaintiff proposed to call, in reply, a witness to contradict H.:—Held, that this evidence, if sufficiently tendered, was properly rejected, there being no plea of justification, and the defendant not seeking to go into the truth of the charge. It was not competent for the plaintiff to make the evidence relevant by himself asking H, in effect, whether the charge were true or not, and then seeking to contradict him. The cross-examination of H. upon this point was proper, but only as a matter of credit, to rebut evidence brought out by himself upon a matter going only to credit. Preston v. Thompson, 21 Occ. N. 464.

Expert Witnesses — Opinion evidence — Witness fees — Additional payment for opinion. Butler v. Toronto Mutoscope Co., 6 O. W. R. 527, 11 O. L. R. 12.

Expert Witness — Opinion — Witness Fees. — A medical man who has attended the victim of an accident, and who is after-wards called as a witness, must disclose all the facts of which he has knowledge; but is not obliged to express an opinion in his capacity of physician until his fees as such have been paid or guaranteed. Marquis v. Robidowa, 3 Q. P. R. 433.

Motion—Cross-examination of officers of company on affidavit—Injunction—Production of documents — Undertaking to produce—Questions — Relevancy — Sufficiency—Trade union—Details as to employer's business. Gurney Foundry Co. v. Emmett, 2 0. W. R. 938, 599, 1038, 3 O. W. R. 382, 554.

Motion - Examination of Witness on Pending Motion-Ex Parte Motion-Substituted Service of Process-Status of Witness to Move to Set aside Appointment and Subto Move to Set aside Appointment and Sub-pana.]—Motion by a person, not a party to the suit, who was served by plaintiff with a subpena and appointment for examination as a witness upon a pending motion, to set aside the subpena and appointment. Several grounds were taken in the notice of motion. Those mainly relied on were: (1) that there is no motion pending before the Court, and so Rule 491 does not apply; (2) that an order for substituted service has already been order for substituted service has already been made and acted on, and the witness, on whom service was made, has disclaimed any know-ledge of defendant's residence, and (3) that the Rules do not provide for or permit the examination of witnesses upon an ex parte motion. It was argued that the witness has no status to move yet. This point was met no status to move yet. This point was met by Steele v. Savory, 8 Times L. R. 94, which seems to overrule the objection. The substantial question was whether an ex parts motion is a "motion before the Court" with in the meaning of Rule 491. The notes to this Rule in Holmested & Langton's Jud. Act. p. 673, and the cases cited, seem to shew that an ex parte motion is a motion in support of which evidence can be obtained:—Held, plaintiff was right in trying to obtain such information as would enable such an order to be made as would prima facie bind defendant on the question of service. When an order has been made, as here, which was plainly abortive, it does not seem reasonable to hold, in the absence of authority, that plaintiff's whole remedy is exhausted. The motion dismissed. Dunlop v. Dunlop, 5 0. W. R. 258, 305, 9 O. L. R. 372.

Party as Witness — Discrediting — Reputation — Opinion — Rejection of Bidence—New Trial.] — At the trial of an action for negligence in non-repair of a waythe plaintiff testified in his own behalf. For the defence a neighbour of the plaintiff was not have been rejected; but, as, even assuming the plaintiff's testimony to be true, the action was properly dismissed by the trial Judge, there was no substantial wrong or miscarriage within Order 37, Rule 6, and there should not be a new trial. Messenger v. Tonen of Bridgetonen, 33 N. S. Reps. 201.

Party as Witness—Refusal to Incriminate Himself — Municipal Councillor — Quo Warranto.] — The defendant was elected a member of the council of a village, the charter of which required that no one should occupy such office unless he could read and write. The plaintiff proceeded against the defendant by quo warranto upon the ground that he could neither read nor write. Being examined by the plaintiff as a witness, the defendant refused to say whether he could read or write, and refused to read a paper presented to him:—Held, that he was not bound to incriminate himself, and his refusal was proper. St. Arnaud v. Barrette, 4 Q. P. R. 102.

Petition to Correct Deposition.]—A wimes has the right to apply directly to the Court, by petition, to have his deposition corrected, when he states that it is not correct. Nadon v. Richmond, Drummond, and Famaska Ins. Co., 3 Q. P. R. 439.

Right to Contradict Witness—Judge's Lauve—Refusal of,]—Where a witness, whether a party to the action or not, is called by the plaintiff to prove a case, and his evidence disproves the case, the plaintiff may yet establish his case by other witnesses called, not to discredit the first, but to contradict him on facts material to the issue; and the right to contradict by other evidence exists, though the trial Judge may not grant his permission. Stanley Piano Co. of Toronto v. Thomson, 21 Occ. N. 73, 32 O. R. 341.

IX. OTHER CASES.

Action to Perpetuate Testimony— Procedure—Order for examination of witnesses. Allas Loan Co. v. Honsinger, 3 O. W. R. 917.

Admission of Liability — Burden of Prool—Positive and Negative Evidence.]—
Where in an action against the indorser of a promissory note, a defence of failure to present for payment and to give notice of disbonour is admitted, but the plaintiff relies on an alleged admission of liability by the defendant, the burden of proof is on the plaintiff; and the case is not one where the rile as to the adoption of the positive evidence of one witness against the negative evidence of another can be properly applied. Hart v. Tajlor, 37 N. S. Reps. 155.

Affidavit — Jurat — Illiterate Person.]—The jurat to an affidavit for an order for repievin, made by an illiterate person, after the words "sworn, etc.," containing the words, "And I certify that this affidavit was read in the presence of the deponent, and that the said deponent seemed perfectly to understand the same:"—Held, that the affidavit was bad, being apparently signed by an illiterate person, and there being no certificate that it was subscribed in the presence of the commissioner. Kassop v. Day, 36 N. S. Reps. 430.

Affidavits — Interlocutory Application— Information and Belief—Grounds for.]—An affidavit leading to an order for an ex juris writ containing allegations of the fact which must necessarily have been founded on information and belief only, must state the source of the information. Tate v. Hennessey, 8 B. C. R. 220.

Application to Let in Fresh Evidence

—Knowledge of Party.]—A petition to open up judgment in order to prove an allegation in the declaration (which the plaintiff forgot at the hearing) will not be granted unless it appears that the facts which it is desired to prove did not come to the knowledge of the plaintiff until after the close of the examination-of witnesses. Canadian Breaccries (Linited) v. Altard, 4 Q. P. R. 365.

Bornage — Right of Defendant to Call Witnesses—Absence of Plea.]—In an action en bornage, a defendant, who has not filed a plea, has nevertheless a right to examine witnesses. Johnsons Co. v. Wilson, Q. R. 24 S. C. 131.

Court of Appeal—Leave to adduce further evidence on appeal. Kiees v. Dominion Coat and Apron Co., 3 O. W. R. 841, 937, 6 O. W. R. 200.

Default of Answer to Interrogatories—Promissory Note—Prescription—Interruption—Part Payment,1—The default of the defendant to answer interrogatories sur faits et articles is sufficient proof to establish part payments made by him upon a promissory note for more than $50, and therefore to prove the interruption of prescription. Charrier v. St. Pierre, Q. R. 19 S. C. 103.

Deposition of Witness—Forum.]—A deposition necessary to obtain judgment in an action by default should be taken before the Judge or the prothonotary and not before a commissioner of the Superior Court. Morris v. Everett. 3 Q. P. R. 406.

Discovery of Fresh Evidence—Opening up—Judgment.]—Where the plaintiff, whose action had been dismissed, presented a petition supported by an affidavit shewing that since the judgment he had discovered two new witnesses who would prove facts essential to the success of his action, an order was made remitting the parties to the same position as they were in before judgment in order that the plaintiff might produce the two witnesses, with leave to the defendant to give evidence to contradict them, and reserving costs. Brousseau v. Déchène, 3 Q. P. R. 397.

Entries—Proof of Debt — Sufficiency.]— Where regular entries of sales of goods were made, and invoices were rendered and demands for payment frequently made, and the debtor only questioned one small item of 50 cents, and, promising to pay, asked for delay:—Held, that the indebtedness was sufficiently established. Laporte v. Duplessia, Q.
R. 20 S. C. 244.

Examination of Witness de Bene Esse—Rule 638.] — Summons to examine a witness de bene esse. The witness lived at Telegraph Creek, in Cassiar district, but at the time of the hearing of the summons he was in Victoria temporarily, and the application was for the purpose of getting his evidence before he went back to Telegraph Creek:—Held, that Rule 368 was applicable, and order made as asked. Hyland v. Canadian Development Co., 22 Occ. N. 170, 9 B. C. R. 32.

Examination of Witness de Bene Esse.]—Haskins v. May, 2 O. W. R. 500.

Exchequer Court of Canada—Statutes—Conflict,]—In a proceeding in the Exchequer Court of Canada, if a conflict arises between the rules of evidence established by a provincial statute and those subsisting by virtue of a Dominion statute, the latter will prevail. Regina v. O'Bryun, T Ex. C. R. 19.

Injunction Motion — Cross-examination on affidavits—Refusal to produce books—Proper custodian—Order for production—Forum—Alternative motion to commit, Canada Foundry Co. v. Emmett, 2 O. W. R. 1032, 1102, 3 O. W. R. 33, 639.

Letter Written "Without Prejudice"—Objection on appeal. McLennan v. Gordon, 5 O. W. R. 98.

Clothing — Retention for Value of Repairs — Clothing Supplied by Husband to Wife.]—A fur overcoat for a man of a certain age and of a certain social position is no ordinary garment necessary and indispensable during the winter season, and therefore is exempt from seizure under art. 580. C. P. C. 2. A right of retention claimed by one who has repaired such an overcoat does not authorize a creditor to seize it under execution. 3. A husband being obliged to clothe his wife, necessary articles of personal clothing given to a wife by her husband during marriage do not fall under the prohibition against gifts from husband to wife intervivos, and such garments once given to the wife become her individual property, and therefore are not exigible for the debts of her husband. Homestead — Conveyance of homestead by husband to wife—Action to set aside—13 Eliz. c. 5—Consideration. Meunier v. Doray, (N. W. T.), 2 W. L. R. 231.

Homestead - Judgments Act.] plaintiff claimed a right to have two village lots owned by the defendant sold to satisfy a judgment of which he had registered a certificate. The defendant occupied as his dwelling the upper floor of a two-storey building on one of the lots, the ground floor having been built for use as a store. There was a stairway inside the building connecting the two floors, also a stairway from the outside to the dwelling. The two lots were occupied as one property and some use was made of the vacant store tor storage of articles used in connection with the dwelling. The Judge at the trial found that the value of the property was $3,000, and that there was a mortgage upon it for an amount exceeding $2,000: -Held, that the defendant was bona fide using the whole premises as his residence and that, under s. 12 of the Judgments Act, R. S. M. c. 80, the property as a whole was free from sale under the judgment. Codville v. Pearce, 21 Occ. N. 318, 446, 13 Man. L. R. ARR

Homestead — Sale of —Mortgage Taken in Part Payment — Receiving Order.]—The Exemptions Ordinance, Q. O. 1889 c. 27, s. 2, s.-s. 9, declares the following real property of an execution debtor and his family free from seizure by virtue of all writs of execution, namely:—(9) "The homestead, provided the same is not more than one hundred and sixty acres; in case it be more the surplus may be sold subject to any lien or incumbrance thereon;"—Held, that mortgage moneys, forming part of the proceeds of the sale of the defendant's homestead, do not come within this provision. This provision exempts the homestead only so long as it remains a homestead, and where the debtor has voluntarily disposed of it, the language of the Ordinance is not wide enough to extend the exemption to the proceeds, unless they are reinvested in other exempt property before a creditor has acquired a charge or lien upon them. Receiving order, as equitable execution, discharged. Massey-Harris Co. v. Schram, 5 Terr. L. R. 338.

Homestead — Value — Notice.]—Held, that the execution debtor was entitled, as an exemption under the Homestead Act, to $500 out of $1.000 realized by the sheriff on the sale of a steamship, the only exigible personalty of the debtor. Vye v. McNeill, 3 B. C. R. 4, approved:—Semble, that notice of a claim of exemption is necessary. Yorkshire Guarantee and Securities Corporation v. Cooper. 23 Occ. N. 302, 10 B. C. R. 65.

Tools and Implements — Selection — Right of Creditor to Make, 1—The privilege zanated the debtor by art. 598. C. C. P., paragraph 10, of selecting and withdrawing from seizure "tools and implements and other chattels ordinarily used in his profession, art, or trade, to the value of $200," only exists while the debtor is carrying on his profession, art, or or trade. When he has ceased to do so, his right to make a selection is at an end, and, therefore, his creditor can have no right, under art. 1031, C. C., to make such selection. In any case the right of the creditor, under the last mentioned article, is merely to bring back certain effects to the patrimony of the debtor, for the benefit of his creditors generally, and cannot be exercised for the exclusive benefit of the creditor seeking to avail himself of the provisions of the article. Stephens v. Toback, Q. R. 26 S. C. 41.

Tools of Trade — Costs of Opposition.]
—A workman who demands the withdrawal from a seizure of his necessary tools, cannot claim costs against the execution creditor, because the balliff making the seizure cannot make the distinction between tools which the debtor may claim as exempt and his other tools. Cunningham v. Guilbault, 6 Q. P. R. 75.

II. FOR COSTS.

Judge's Order—Direction for Set-off—Service of Allocatur—Issue of Execution—Production of Order.]—Where a Judge's order requires the defendant to pay interlocutory costs to the plaintiffs, and the Judge makes an oral direction that costs previously awarded to the defendant should be set off pro tanto, the deduction should be made before execution issues on the Judge's order. It is not necessary to serve the certificate of taxation of the costs awarded by an order, where the party to pay has been represented upon the taxation and has notice of the amount payable. When execution is issued upon a Judge's order, the order itself or an office copy should be produced to the officer issuing it; a mere copy is not sufficient, unless such officer is the one who has official custody of the book in which the order is entered. People's Building and Loan Assn. v. Stanley, 22 Occ. N. 410, 4 O. L. R. 644, 1 O. W. R. 399, 469, 572, 592, 2 O. W. R. 122.

Motion for Leave to Appeal—Court of Appeal—High Court.]—An application to a Judge of the Court of Appeal for leave to appeal from an order of a Divisional Court having been dismissed with costs, the same were taxed and a certificate thereof issued, which, with the order of dismissal, was filed in the High Court, and a fi. fa. to levy the amount of such costs placed in the sheriff's hands for execution:—Held, that the order directing payment of costs was properly made under ss. 77 and 119 of the O. J. Act; and that execution was properly issued out of the High Court, under Rule 3, by analogy to the procedure under Rule 818. People's Building and Loan Association v. Stanley, 22 Occ. N. 300, 371, 4 O. L. R. 247, 377, 1 O. W. R. 399, 469, 572, 592, 2 O. W. R. 122.

Pending Appeal to Privy Council— Security.]—In a case in which, by special leave, an appeal has been allowed to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, execution may issue, pending such appeal, for the costs incurred in the Courts appealed from, without, for that purpose, sending the record back to the Court of first instance, when no security for the costs incurred in the Courts below has been given with the appeal to the Judicial Committee. Consolidated Car Heating Co. v. Came, 5 Q. P. R. 48.

III. PROCEDURE.

Creditor Collocated on Moneys Levied — Insolvency — Sub-opposition—Sub-olocation,1—Held, in review, affirming the disposition of the judgment in Q. R. 23 S. C. 45, but meelfying the considerants, that art. S24 of the Code of Procedure, which authorizes a creditor of a person who is entitled to be collocated, or who is collocated, upon moneys levied, to file a sub-opposition, does not confer any privilege on such creditor. If the person primarily entitled to be collocated is insolvent, the amount of the collocation must be distributed among his creditors, according to law. The service of a writ of attachment, attaching such moneys in the hands of the sheriff, does not give the sub-opposant any special right thereto. Art. 1981, C. C. Marion v. Brien dit Desrochers, Q. R. 23 S. C. 52.

Guardian of Property Seized — Discharge — Lapse of Time — Destruction of Property Seized.] — A judicial guardian is not discharged from his guardianship by the expiration of a year from the day of the seizure, and a rule will issue against him to make him produce the goods intrusted to him if he does not prove that they have been destroyed without fault on his part. Millar v. Gillespie, 5 Q. P. R. 376.

Opposition to Seixure — Dismissal — Execution of Judgment of Courie of Review — Time for.]—A motion for the dismissal of an opposition cannot be made before the original thereof is returned. 2. An opposition which raises the question whether a judgment of the Court of Review, in a summary matter, can be executed within eight days from the rendering thereof, is not frivolous, and will not be dismissed on motion. Kavanagh 1. Quinn, 5 Q. P. R. 166.

Opposition to Scixure—Invaisinsabilité—Investment of Moneys Bequeathed—Declaration—Registration.) — A declaration of investment, stating that a purchase of property has been made with moneys bequeathed to the purchaser on condition of insaisissabilité, may be set up in opposition to a seizure of such property by a creditor of the purchaser, although the declaration was not registered until after the creditor's claim had accrued. Baird v. Morphy, Q. R. 23 S. C. 497.

Opposition to Seixure—Security—Time for—Hypothecary Creditor—Tensant].— An hypothecary creditor, whose claim has been registered before the registration of a lease of the immovable hypothecated, may require from the tenant, who flies an opposition to a seizure by such creditor, asking that the immovable may be sold subject to his lease, security that the immovable will be sold for a price sufficient to assure him the amount which is due to him (art. 726, C. P. C.), 2. He may require such security as soon as the opposition is filed and without admitting the ground of the opposition. Desaulniers v. Pepette, Q. R. 12 K. B. 445.

Return.]-A seizure made under a writ issued in execution of a judgment obtained ex parte for $500 damages ceased to be valid and binding as soon as this judgment is reformed upon opposition to judgment by a second judgment maintaining the opposition: and the defendant-opposant is only bound under the seizure to the sum to which the judgment is reduced, in this case, $50. Such a seizure having become effete cannot be con-tinued upon the same writ for the latter sum; and the defendant may dispose of the immovable so seized notwithstanding the seizure after the judgment maintaining the opposition. 2. A writ of execution which has been returned by the sheriff to the Court upon service of certificate of the filing of an opposition to the judgment cannot be withdrawn from the record of which it forms part in order to be sent to the sheriff with instructions to continue proceedings, without the authorization of the Court or a Judge. Demers v. Dufresne, 5 Q. P. R. 465.

Science and Sale—Opposition for Payment—Bailiff's Return — Default — Rule Nisi.]—A bailiff who has seized and sold a debtor's property both at his domicil and place of business, and has received an opposition for payment on the moneys levied at either of these places, must return into Court all the moneys levied at that place, and make a separate return of his proceedings at both places, in order that the Court may adjudicate; in default of his so doing, a rule may be issued against him. Lacroix v. Prontx, 5 Q. P. R. 309.

Seizure by Way of Security—Service—Return — Declaration.]—When a writ of saisie-gagerie is made returnable the second day after service, the declaration must be served at the same time as the writ. 2. When the service of the declaration is made at the office of the Court, there must be at least one clear day between the service and the return. Dupuis v. Mathieu, 5 Q. P. R. 414.

Science for Preservation of Property—Declaration—Money in Bank—Garnishment—Exception to Form.]—A writ of saliseconservatoire must be accompanied by a declaration or contain a sufficient statement of the grounds of the demand. 2. If the articles to be seized are not in specie, but sums of money in the possession of a bank, the creditor must proceed by way of garnishment, and not by saise-conservatoire. 3. A saisle-conservatoire with respect to sums of money, and not accompanied by a declaration, will be dismissed upon exception to the form. Leith v. Hall, 5 Q. P. R. 155.

Sheriff — Return — Reissue to another Sheriff — Opposition—Sale of Railway,—It the sheriff to whom a writ of execution is addressed makes a return of nulla bona and nulla terre, the prothonotary has no right to address the same writ to the sheriff of another district, by making an addition in the margin. 2. An opposition to the sale of a portion of a railway seized under a writ of execution will not be dismissed upon defence in law upon the ground that it is not formally alleged that the portion of the railway so soized does not constitute a section; that must be shewn by evidence. Account Book—Assignment of Debts.]

—A ledger or account book containing a list of debts which have been assigned in writing, and which are described in the writing as "all the debts in a certain ledger marked A," is a mere incident to the debts, and is no longer a chattel as it was before the entries were made in it. It is, therefore, not seizable in execution against judgment debtor, the former owner of the debts, as against the person to whom they have been so assigned by him. Corticelli Silk Co. v. Balfour, 5 Terr. L. R. 385.

Amendment — Affidavit — Provisions of Statute.]—Article 647, C. P., does not prevent the amendment of an opposition to a seizure, but merely requires that such amendment shall be accompanied by a deposition on oath affirming that the facts alleged therein are true. 2. An affidavit is not required in support of an amendment which merely alleges a provision of a public statute, of which the courts are bound to take notice without its being pleaded—in this case, the charter of the city of Montreal. Laroque v. City of Montreal, 5 Q. P. R. 34.

Amendment — Title — Costs.]—On motion to reject an opposition, and on motion by the opposant to amend:—Held, that a delay will be granted to the opposant to amend her opposition by setting up her title and the date thereof, upon her paying costs of both motions au préalable, and that in default by her of so doing within such delay, the opposition will stand dismissed. Senecat v. Chappell, 5 Q. P. R. 72.

Bailiff's Return — Exemptions—Controverting Return—Res Judicata.] — A defendant can, without inscribing en faux salust the report of a bailiff seizing the defendant goods, declaring the hard has left to the salust service of the property seized, constitutes res judicata upon an opposition âtin d'annuler founded upon defects or irregularities in the seizure. Adams v. Mulligan, Q. R. 20 S. C. 251.

Bank Notes — Property Passing.] — A superamunated civil servant had presented his superamunation certificate at the wicket of a bank, which paid superamunation allowances for the Dominion Government. The teller cunted out the amount coming to him, and placed the money on the edge of the teller's wicket. Before the payee had touched it, the money was seized by a sheriff's bailiff under an execution against the payee:—Held, that that the property in the money had passed to the payee as soon as it had been placed upon the ledge, and that the execution creditor was entitled to it. Hall v. Hatch, Bank of Montreal v. Hatch, 22 Occ. N. 58, 3 O. l. R. 147.

Buildings on Land—Erection by Purchaser à Réméré—Seizure and Sale.]—Buildings placed upon land by a purchaser à réméré may be seized and sold separately from the soil. 2. A purchaser à réméré has no status to restrain the sale, as against him, of buildings placed upon the land of his vendor. Quære, whether such a seizure is of movables or imnovables. Lafontaine v. Bélanger, 6 Q. P. R. 338.

Claim by Assignee of Chattel Mortgage and Lien Note Given by Vendors of Execution Debtors — Extinguishment of claim—Interpleader—Equitable interest—Subrogation—Renewal of chattel mortgage. Green v. Cornell, 3 O. W. R. 872.

Claim by Transferee — Possession.]— An opposition to a sale of movable effects, made by a third person, who has lent money to the debtor and has had transferred to him the effects seized as security for the loan, but has let them in possession of the debtor, will be dismissed upon motion as frivolous. Pharand v. Emond, 5 Q. P. R. 29.

Costs — Taxation — Notice — Particulars—Several Defendants—Contestation by one only—Apportionment of Costs.]—Pursuant to art. 554, C. P., costs incurred in the Circuit Court must be taxed upon notice to the opposite party before an execution issues. Where, upon a bill of costs, taxed, but not on notice to the opposite party, execution issued for a larger amount than was really due, an opposition demanding the annulment of the seizure for the whole amount, without mentioning the items of the bill of costs objected to, will not be allowed; but the oppo-sant will be permitted to prove his allegations or surcharge, notwithstanding that that is equivalent to a revision of the bill of costs; and if he succeeds in establishing that the amount of the writ of execution is larger than amount of the wint of execution is integer than the amount due, the opposition will be allowed for the difference between these amounts, but without costs, seeing that both parties are in fault. 3. By virtue of item 37 of the Circuit Court tariff, or item 19 of of the Circuit Court tariff, or item 19 of the Superior Court tariff, when there are two defendants appearing by different attor-neys, and one of the two files a plea, the at-torney of the plaintiffs, if he succeeds in obtaining judgment upon every issue, will be entitled to the full amount of his costs against the defendant who contested the action, and to half the costs against the one who did not contest. Descormiers v. Hyland, 5 Q. P. R.

Gounty Courts Act — Seizure by Creditor—Ratification by Baitiff—Abandonment —Interpleader — Onus — Extoppel—Sale of Goods Act.].—Under ss. 82 and 83 of the County Courts Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 38, before the amendment of 1904, a seizure under execution made by the execution creditor himself was not unlawful or invalid. Where wood piles were seized under execution, and notices of the seizure attached to the different piles, and a person living near asked by the bailiff to look after them, and a week or two later placed by the bailiff in charge, it was held that there was no abandonment. Per Dubuc, J.,—The property in the wood never passed to the claimant, notwithstanding contract to buy and part payment, because it had not been mensured: Rule 3 of s. 20, Sale of Goods Act, R. S. M. 1902, c. 152. The plaintiff was not estopped from enforcing his execution by the fact that he had attached any Dismissal - Examination of Opposant.] -The Court may, upon a motion for the examination of the party opposing a seizure and for the dismissal of the opposition after such examination, order the examination of the opposant, saving the right to pronounce afterwards upon the part of the motion re-lating to the dismissal of the opposition. It is not necessary for the applicant to allege in his notice of motion that the opposition is untenable on its face. Dupuis v. Beaudry, 4 Q. P. R. 416.

Distribution — Contestation.] — The opposition of a third party cannot hinder a distribution of the moneys realized, and the rights and privileges of the parties will be determined by the scheme of distribution unless it is contested, contestation being the remedy of the third party. Turgeon v. Shannon, 4 Q. P. R. 156.

Filing Documents — Deposition—Service—Stay of Sale.] — The failure to file, with an opposition, the documents alleged in it, is not a ground for dismissing it upon a simple motion, in accordance with art. 651, C. P.; and Rule 62 of the Rules of Practice is not imperative. 2. The sheriff is bound to receive an opposition accompanied by a deposition such as is mentioned in arts, 647 and 727, C. P., and the service of such opposition stays the sale, pursuant to art, 729, C. P. Morineille v. Basil, Q. R. 18 S. C.

Goods of Stranger-Right of Revendication.]—The owner of effects seized under a writ of saisie-arrêt before judgment, as belonging to a third person, has the right to recover them by means of a saisie-revendication in the hands of the first execution credi-tor or of the bailiff or guardian to the seizure, Corriveau v. Boright, 6 O. P. R. 136.

Guardian - Discharge - Sale.] guardian appointed to a seizure under execution is discharged as soon as he has handed over the effects seized to the bailiff charged with the sale of them, and if the latter does not sell them all, the guardian is not responsible for those which are not sold. Gingras v. Parent, Q. R. 25 S. C. 271.

Guardian - Several Execution Creditors -Different Guardians - Rights of.]-The second execution creditor seizing is not obliged to name the same guardian as in the case where the debtor has been dispossessed of the goods seized, 2. The two guardians named at the time of different seizures, who have allowed the debtor to remain in possession of the goods seized, may each or either take them from him at any time before the sale, 3. If the two guardians wish to have possession of the goods seized, the Court. upon petition, will determine their respective rights, awarding, however, possession, in default of sufficient reasons against his demand, to the guardian named in the cause in which the sale of the goods seized should first take place. Couture v. McManamy, Q. R. 24 S. C. 356.

Inscription - Filing of Contract.]-A person who makes an opposition to a seigure based upon a marriage contract, cannot set based upon a marriage contract, cannot set the opposition down for judgment without filing the contract, and if he does so, the in-scription will be set aside on motion. Ward v. McGarry, 3 O. P. R. 380.

Irregularities.]-A defendant cannot by opposition to a seizure after judgment invoke irregularities-in this case an erroneous description of his residence in the proces-verbal of seizure-which he could have set up by exception to the form before judgment. Afkinson v. Ryan, Q. R. 18 S. C. 427.

Joint Opposition.]-Two or more persons, each one of whom is sole owner of one of the articles seized, cannot, by a joint opposition, each claim the article which belongs to him, especially if their titles are not of the same nature. Hill v. Howley, Q. R. 20 S. C. 269, 4 Q. P. R. 176, 353.

Lessor of Goods Seized.] party, the lessor of the goods seized, who has reserved to himself the right to re-take them if the lessee should not pay the instalments regularly, may exercise such right by way of opposition to the seizure of the goods by a creditor of the lessee. Gaudeau v. Teta, Q. R. 20 S. C. 402.

Notice — Exemption — Telephone.]—A seizure of goods under an execution and a notice that goods 20 miles away in the same halliwick belonging to the same execution debtor are under seizure do not operate as a seizure of the latter goods. Quere, whether a debtor's right of exemption is absolute or a privilege to be exercised within two days. Selv. Humphrey, I B. C. (pt. 2) 257, and in re Ley, 7 B. C. R. 94, questioned in this regard. Semble, goods cannot be seized by telephone. Dickinson v. Robertson, 11 B. C. R. 155, 1 W. L. R. 142.

Opposition — Attack on Judgment — Juradiction.]—A judgment, in execution of which a sizure has been made, cannot be attacked by an opposition a fin d'annuler, on the ground that the Superior Court had no jurisdiction to pronounce the judgment. Coté v. Bernatchez, Q. R. 25 S. C. 219.

Opposition — Default of Contestation— Time—Leave to Contest — Consolidation of Actions.]—Where an execution creditor has shade default in contesting an opposition to his seizure within the time allowed, he will not be allowed after the time has expired to lie his contestation and to join his cause to aucher cause in which he has seized the same goods. Archibald v. Spenard, 6 Q. P. R. 124.

—The examination of an opposant will not be ordered unless the creditor seizing establishes, or there appears on the face of the record some reason leading the Court to believe that the opposition is made to unjustly retard the sale, or is unfounded, or would be slewn to be so by the opposant's examination, Demere v. Rerpecin, 6 Q. P. R. 47.

—An opposant, who claims property, stating that he has been doing business for "some time" previous to the seizure, under the same firm name under which the debtor was condemned, will be ordered to appear for examination on the opposition. Ford v. Payette, 6 Q. P. R. 57.

Opposition—Insaisissabilité—Investment of Moneys Bequeathed — Declaration — Registration.]—A declaration that a purchase of property has been made with moneys derived by the purchaser, under a condition of "insaisissabilité" can be set up against a creditor of the purchaser, although not registered until after the creditor had acquired his status as such. The following clause in a will, "My intention in making the bequests aforesaid being that the said property or that by which it shall be represented shall D—21 be insaisissable, the same being given to secure a provision for the support of the said beneficiaries," is not contrary to the provisions of art. 599, C. P. C., clauses 3 and 4, the law empowering a donor or testator to declare "insaisissables" not only immovables so disposed of by the will, but also such as might be acquired in place of such immovables, Judgment in Baird v. Morphy, Q. R. 23 S. C. 497, nfilmed. Baird v. Ferrier, Q. R. 13 K. B. 317.

Opposition — Judgment — Reduction of Amount — New Writ.] — A judgment proanounced upon an opposition to a judgment has the effect of causing the execution issued and based upon a judgment obtained by default to lapse; and the party who has thus obtained judgment by default and has executed it, may not, after the sustaining in whole or in part of an opposition to the judgment, proceed with his execution, but must be content to reduce the amount to be levied upon his original writ to that fixed by the judgment upon the opposition. 2. The judgment sustaining an opposition, but granting to the plaintiff a part of his demand, should be executed by a new writ. Demers v. Dufrene, Q. R. 24 S. C. 141.

Partnership Property — Ownership of Goods Seized—Transfer to Continuing Partners—Sherilf—Proceeds of Sale—Liability to Execution Creditor — Damages — Depreciation.]—A partnership existing between C. and S. was dissolved. C. taking all the assets and assuming all the liabilities of the firm:—Held, that, in the absence of fraud, the goods of the firm were effectually transferred to C., and were subject to an execution placed in the hands of the defendant sheriff with instructions to levy upon and sell the goods of C. The defendant, after having levied upon the goods under the plaintiff's execution, sold the goods under two executions placed in his hands subsequently, and paid over the proceeds to the creditors at whose instance such executions were issued:—Held, that he was liable to the plaintiff in damages for so doing; but was not liable for depreciation resulting from delay in selling occasioned by the act of the Court. The case was not one for punitive damages or for other damage than the actual value of the goods at the time of the sale. Croce v. Buchanan, 36 N. S. Reps. 1.

Patent for Invention.]—A patent for invention granted by the Dominion Government may be seized in execution. Farand v. Emond, Q. R. 23 S. C. 2.

Patent of Invention — Exigible Property.]—A patent of invention is seizable, and an opposition based upon its alleged insaiss-subilité will be dismissed upon motion. Farand v. Emond, 5 Q. P. R. 63.

Patent for Invention.]—Quære, whether a patent for invention can be seized under execution. Walker v. Lamoureux, Q. R. 21 S. C. 492.

Possession of Goods—Joint Ownership.]
—A creditor can seize under ordinary execution only goods which are in possession of the debtor. 2. A third party, owner of an undivided interest in goods seized under execution against his co-owner, may prevent the sale of the goods as regards his own rights. Turner v. Bradshaw, 6 Q. P. R. 184.

Product of Timber-Permit to Execution Debtor to Cut and Remove from Crown Lands—Partnership—Purchasers— Claimants -Interpleader-Interest of Partner.]-E. F. Kendall, an execution debtor, was the holder of a permit entitling him to cut and remove from certain lands of the Crown a quantity of railway ties. He entered into a contract with the Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. to furnish them with 30,000 ties on certain terms as to delivery and payment. To enable him to carry out the contract, he applied to the Bank of Ottawa for advances, which the bank agreed to make, on receiving an assignment of the moneys payable under the con-tract and other securities. E. F. Kendall and Thomas Robinson entered into partnership in the business of tie manufacturers, to be carried on upon lands comprised in the permit, and to include the carrying out of the contract with the Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. The agreement of partnership was at first oral, but, later, it was, at the instance of the Bank of Ottawa, reduced to writing and signed by the parties, and a certificate of the partnership was duly registered. The partners proceeded to the lands, and Robinson was left in control, in accordance with the partnership agreement. He established the camp and commenced to cut the ties, and got them out on the ice on an arm of the Lake of the Woods. In the spring they were boomed and finally towed to Norman's Bay, where they were seized by the sheriff. The boom timber and logs were cut by the partnership for the purposes of rafting the ties, and were properly taken for that purpose:— Held, the claim of the execution creditors could not take effect so as to deprive the partner Robinson of his rights, or prevent him from enforcing them in the name and on behalf of the partnership. The property in the ties was shewn to be in Kendall & Robinson and the Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., as purchasers from them, and the property in the boom timber and logs to be in Kendall & Robinson. A sale of Kendall's interest in the partnership would not pass the property to the purchaser, but would give him a right to account of the partnership transactions with a view to ascertaining and realizing the interest of the execution debtor. But there were no means by which such a proceeding could be taken in this matter. The money in Court stood as security for the ties, boom, timber, and logs seized by the sheriff. It was not possible to determine in this proceeding whether Kendall was entitled to any, and, if so, how much of it. The materials for such an inquiry were not before the Court. Defendants' remedy, if any, was in some pro-ceeding in which all questions between the partnership and the execution debtor could be properly inquired into and adjusted. Appeal dismissed. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Rat Portage Lumber Co., 5 O. W. R. 473, 10 O. L. R. 273.

Property Already under Seizure — Duty of Sheriff — Seizure upon Seizure.]—A sheriff, having a judgment against the defendant, issued a fi. fa, addressed to the coroner (arts, 35, 36, C. P.), and the latter seized the immovables of the defendant. The defendant having lodged an opposition, the coroner returned the writ, the opposition, and all his proceedings. Subsequently the plaintiffis, having a judgment against the defendant, issued a fi, fa. addressed to the sheriff, and he seized thereunder the same immovables:— Held, that the old maxim "seizure upon seizure is invalid "exists no longer except as modified by the Code of Procedure; that the sheriff had not to note this second writ upon that addressed to the coroner; that art, 711, C. P., did not apply to this case; that the sheriff, upon receiving the second writ, had nothing to do but seize, since he had not then the first writ, and that writ had not been addressed to him. Richer v. Michaud, Q. R. 20 S. C. 442.

Property Declared by Will Insaisissable—Scizure for Debt of Testator.]—P. M. devised his property to L. M., without reserve, constituting him his universal legatee from the day of his death, upon the express condition that L. M. was to dispose of the property in favour of his children, in equal or unequal parts, as he should judge fit when making partition of his other perperty. L. M, accepted the devise. Then, by his will, he bequeathed his property (other than that which he had from P. M.) to his son J. B. M., the present defendant, on the express condition that he should preserve the property for his children and divide it among them equally or unequally. And, moreover, L. M. desiring to discharge the trusts mentioned in desiring to discharge the trusts mentioned in the will of P. M., made choice of his said son J. B. M. to receive the property left by P. M., and he gave him all such property, and P. M., and he gave him all such property, and added that he (L. M.) wished and intended that the property belonging to the testamentary succession of P. M. should be preserved. in the same manner as the property devised by L. M., and he concluded his will as fol-lows: "I wish and intend that the enjoyment of the property above devised to my son J. B. M. shall be insaisissable and I declare that I gave him this legacy à titre d'aliments."

L. M. dying, J. B. M. accepted the will. The plaintiffs, having obtained judgment against J. B. M., as universal legatee, for a debt contracted by L. M., caused to be seized the immovables coming from P. M. J. B. M. lodged an opposition, setting up that the property was subject to a substitution in favour of his children, and invoking also the insaisissof his children, and invoking also the insasse abilité clause:—Held, that the substitution provided by the will of L. M., as regards the property which came from P. M., in favour of the children of J. B. M., was valid, but that the decree did not purge the substitution: that the defendant, who was the grevé, could not set up the substitution by his opposition; that the insaisissabilité clause as regards the property coming from P. M., imposed by the will of L. M., was valid and within the powers of L. M., but it could not be invoked against the debts left by L. M., and the defendant, as his universal legatee, was bound to pay. Richer v. Michaud, Q. R. 20 S. C. 442.

Stay — Appeal—Irregular Notice—Costs—Undertaking by Advocate to Repay—Costs of Levy.—The defendants, having served notice of motion to the Court in bane for a rule to sew cause why the verdict for the plaintiff should not be set aside, or for a nonsuit or a new trial, applied to the trial Judge, under J. O. Ord. 512, after seizure under execution issed upon the judgment, for a stay of proceedings, upon the grounds of irreparable loss and inability of the plaintiff to repay the amount levied in case the appeal should be excessful.—Held, that there was jurisdiction to entertain the application, although the nodes of motion was perhaps irregular in form. (2) That the fact that the plaintiff would be to repay the amount levied in case of an adverse decision on appeal is sufficient round for granting stay. Stay ordered on security being given. (3) That execution for east should be stayed unless the advocates the personal undertaking to repay them in sea appeal succeeded. A tight of dower in an equity of redemption of the property of the state of the state of one of sure it find, nor is the share of one of sure it find. Where a person dies possessed i lands mortgaged by him, his widow, before assignment of dower, though entitled to redem, has no estate in the land, and is therefore not an "assign" of her husband, nor a "person having the equity of redemption" within s. 29 of the Execution Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 77, and her interest does not come within s. 30 of that Act, and therefore is not saleable under it nor under s. 33. In such a case an execution creditor seeking equitable execution should proceed under Rules 1016-1018, and not by action. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Rolston, 22 Occ. N. 232, 4 O. L. R. 106, 1 O. W. Fixtures-Opposition-Appeal - Title of Purchaser.] — The appellants, a company having their place of business in the Province of Ontario, had sold certain machines to K. Bros. of Joliette, with a reservation of right of property. The mill in which these machines were installed having been seized with the machines at the suit of the curator under an assignment of K. Bros, for the benefit of creditors, and of a creditor of one of the insolvents, the appellants filed an opposition, which the respondent contested, and which the Superior Court dismissed. The appelthe Superior Court dismissed, lants, nearly four months after the judgment of the Superior Court, appealed to the Court of Queen's Bench, which maintained the opposition: and this judgment was affirmed by the Supreme Court of Canada. However, in the interval between the judgment dismissing the opposition and the institution of the appeal, the creditor obtained from the prothonotary a writ of ven. ex., and, through the agency of a person named by the respondent, the curator obtained from a Judge an order for the sale of the mill and the machines. The sale took place after the appeal, but the appellants knew nothing of it until after they had obtained the judgment of the Supreme Court, and at that sale the respondent became the purchaser of the mill and the machines, and subsequently disposed of them:—Held, that the respondent, whom the appellants had informed of their right of property in the machines and the nullity of the seizure which had been made of them, could not, by instigating the order and be-coming the purchaser at the sale, obtain a title which would be good against the appellants, and that in disposing of the machines as things belonging to him, the respondent had made himself responsible to the appellants for their value. Waterous Engine Works Co. v. Bank of Hochelaga, Q. R. 12 K. B. 258.

Goods—Opposition to Sale—Notice—Partices—Debtor.]—An opposition to the sale of movables will not be maintained unless notice of contestation has been given to the parties, including the debtor. Valiquette v. Guilbault, 5 Q. P. R. 163.

Goods — Place of Sale — Residence of Debtor, 1—An execution debtor has the right to say that goods of his seized under the execution shall not be sold at the place of his residence at the time of sale, if such goods were not seized there and have not been taken there by him, but are in the control of the creditor, who proposes to remove them to the actual residence of the debtor. Adams v. Mulligan, Q. R. 19 S. C. 398.

Goods not Seized—Irregular Sale—Acquiescence—Purchase in Good Faith.]—A portion of a debtor's stock-in-trade having been seized under a writ of execution, the bailiff, on the day fixed for the sale, added other goods of the debtor to the list of those seized, and, at the request of the debtor, who was desirous of repurchasing his stock-intrade, sold the entire stock en bloc. The proceeds of the sale were distributed among the creditors in due course of law. The debtor having, shortly afterwards, made an abandonment of his effects, his curator, by the present action against the purchaser at the bailiff's sale, sought to have the sale annulled as irregular and void, and the goods returned, or their value paid to the plaintiff.—Held, that, although the sale was irregular, and improperly included goods which had not been seized or advertised for sale, yet the purchaser having acted in good faith and even offered to re-transfer the goods, the price being a reasonable one, and the proceeds distributed according to law, and the creditors, moreover, having suffered no injustice in consequence of the irregularity of the proceedings, the sale should not be amulled. Bernier v. Dépocas, Q. R. 24 S. C. 70.

Lands—Advertisement — Distribution — Crosts of Execution Creditor — Security Relief Act.]—Where two writs of execution gainst lands were placed in the sherilf's hands on the same day, and, no further steps being taken by the first excution creditor, the second execution creditor directed the sherilf to advertise and sell the lands, which he did under the second execution creditor's writ:—Held, that the advertisement was in law the seizure of the lands under the second execution creditor's writ; and, there being no seizure or sale under that of the first, the second was entitled, under a 28 of the Creditors' Relief Act, k. S. O. 1897 c. 78, to payment in full of his taxed exected the amount of the residue of the sheriff's fees. McGuinness, v. McGuinness, 22 Occ. N. 34, 30 L. R. 78.

Lands—Collocation of Hypothecary Creditor—Right of Execution Debtor to Contest
—Conditional Debt.] — At the time of a sheriff's sale the judgment debtor has a right to contest the collocation of an hypothecary creditor, whose debt is conditional, and who is collocated as a simple creditor, inasmuch as, if the condition is not realized, the creditor will have received the money, and, not having furnished the security required from a conditional creditor, he wiii perhaps not be in a position to repay the arrount which he has received. Benoit v. Ste. Marie, 5 Q. P. R. 222.

Lands — Diligence — Creditors—Prioritice,]—In order that a first seizure of an immovable shall prevent a second one, it is necessary that at the moment when it is desired to proceed with the second, there shall be nothing to hinder the sale of the immovable under the first seizure. Therefore, if the creditor making the first seizure has suspended the sale of the immovables, he cannot oppose a seizure made by another creditor. Garand v. Roussin, Q. R. 19 S. C. 596.

against M., the defendant relied upon his adverse possession of the land at the time of the sale :- Held, that the defence was not applicable to the case of a sheriff selling under execution. The objection was also taken that at the trial the plaintiffs failed to give evidence of the death of D.:—Held, that the objection was one which under Order 21, Rule 5, must be specifically taken; and the reception in evidence, without objection, of a certified copy of the will of D. was an implied admission of his death. At the trial the plaintiffs put in evidence a certified copy of the deed to M., the judgment debtor, without shewing that the original was not in the plaintiff's possession :- Held, that this was a matter as to which the plaintiffs should be permitted to amend by filing the usual statutory affidavit. Per McDonald, C.J., that the registry of the judgment obtained by D. had the same effect, so far as his title was concerned, as if he held a mortgage :- Held, also, the judgment being registered, and securing the title, that the Statute of Limitations would not begin to run until after the date of the recovery of the judgment. Doull v. Keefe, 34 N. S. Reps. 15.

Land — Pormalities—Minutes of Science—Place of safe,1—The formalities prescribed by Arts, 706, 741, and 742, C. C. The opposition was maintained by the Superior Court, but that judgment was reversed by the Court of Review, which dismissed the opposition, maintained the seizure, and ordered a sale of the immovables under writ of ven, ex. By virtue of this last judgment the intervenant advertised the sale of the immovable upon ven. ex., and the sale took place and one C. became the purchaser. He sold to the defendant. After the sale under the ven. ex., but before the time for appeal had expired, the plaintiff appealed from the judgment of the Court of Review to the Court of Queen's Bench, and, not wishing to give security for the costs of the appeal, signed the declaration required by Art. 1214, C. P. C., consenting to execution upon the judgment against her. The Court of Queen's Bench reversed the judgment of the Court of Review and restored that of the Superior Court. The plaintiff then brought the present action to recover the immovable sold, and the intervenant (the judgment creditor) intervened in this action, and contested it :- Held, that the seizure having been made against one in possession animo domini, the sale, having taken place after the fulfilment of all the formailties required by law, and before the appeal of the plaintiff, was valid, and had wiped out the right of the plaintiff to the immovable itself, and left her only a claim upon the purchase money. Sale of Equity of Redemption -Purchase by Execution Creditor—Subsequent Conveyance to Debtor—Covenants — Incumbrances-Release.]--Under a writ of fi. against the lands of the original defendant (the mortgagor) the sheriff sold the equity of redemption in mortgaged land, and conveyed it to the purchaser in 1896. The purchaser it to the purchaser in 1896. was at the time the assignce of the judgment upon which the fi. fa, was founded. holding the interest acquired by his purchase for a year, he sold it to the mortgagor, and made him the usual short form convey-ance under R. S. O. 1897 c. 124. The moneys realized under sale were not sufficient to satisfy the judgment, and the writ was returned by the sheriff for renewal on 2nd August, 1899, but was not then renewed. In 1902 the purchaser assigned the judgment (so paid in part) to one S., and thereafter an alias writ of fi, fa. lands was issued and placed in the hands of the sheriff, and in respect of that execution S. was made a party in the Master's office to an action brought upon the mortgage:—Held, that the land was not affected by the judgment and execution while the purchaser retained his interest, but the effect of his sale and conveyance to the mortgagor was to invest the latter with a new interest in the land, and that interest fell under the operation of the fi. fa. and the statutory covenants, No. 4 as to incumbrances, and No. 8 as to the release of all claims, contained in the conveyance by the purchaser to the mortgagor, did not operate to release the judgment or the execution; and the latter was, therefore, a subsisting incumbrance. Sale of Property En Bloc — Discretion Sheriff—Oppression—Equitable Relief — Remedy at Law - Innocent Purchaser -Fixtures-Abandonment of Action Against one Defendant-Effect on Others.]-A quantity of gold mining machinery, consisting of boilers, engine, stamps, etc., was sold by the sheriff en bloc, under execution, against the plaintiff company: — Held, that the method of sale, whether en bloc or otherwise, is a matter in the sound discretion of the sherifi, to be determined in each case by the particular facts, and that the question whether, in view of the particular facts, he has acted oppressively, must be determined in an action against him :-Held, also, that the equitable rule that where there is an adequate remedy at law, the Court will not exercise its equitable powers, was applicable to the state of affairs in this case. Quere, whether, even where the action of the sheriff is oppressive, the sale can be set aside as against an innocent purchaser, as irregular and void. Part of the property sold consisted of machinery ordinarily used in connection with a gold mining mill. The evidence shewed that the boiler could only be lifted out of its place by pulling off the top of the wall and that portion of the wall over the lugs of the boiler: also, that the mortar was connected to a foundation of cement and timber extending down to bed rock by a number of iron bolts 30 inches in length:—Held, that the mill was a fixture and a part of the real estate, and therefore not liable to be levied upon and sold by the sheriff as personal property: -Held, also, that the effect of the abandon ment of their action as against the sheriff. by the plaintiffs, was not to release their action against remaining defendants. If a Judge of the High Court in Chambers has the power to make an order —and, semble, he has—this was not a proper case for the exercise of it. The judgment being for only $400 damages and costs, there was no appeal to the Supreme Court without leave, and there was no doubtful question of law of such general importance as to call for extraordinary interference. Question call for extraordinary interference. Questions whether the stay of execution in such a seriests with the High Court or the Court of Appeal. Tabb v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. 24 Occ. N. 400, 8 O. Sufficiency of Science—Sale—Adjournments—Notice—Expiry of Writ.]—The defendants contended that the baliff executing a writ of fi, fa, did not make a seizure, as required by law, of certain buildings, or that, if he did legally seize, he abandoned the seizure: that he did not give due notice of the sale, or at any rate of the adjournments; that the buildings were sold for an inadequate price; and that the writ had expired before the sale. The baliff found the buildings locked. He did not enter them, or put a man in possession, but put up written notices on the buildings stating that he had seized them, and mentioning the date when and the place where he intended to sell:—Held, reasonably sufficient to constitute a seizure as against defendants, whether it would, or would not, have held the property as against a subsequent bona fide purchaser from the owner for value, without notice. No notices of the several adjournments of the sale were made public by the sheriff, but the debtor must be presumed to have known of the day fixed for the sale, as a solicitor, at the sale, on the defendants behalf, gave the bailliff a notice forbidding the sale. The seizure was made while the writ of execution was in force, and the sale then advertised was adjourned from time to time till the buildings were actually sold. The fact that the writ expired before the actual sale was, therefore, unimportant. Dixon v. Mackay, 22 Occ. N. 274.

Territories Real Property Act-Ureditors' Relief Ordinance-Expiry - Renewal -Priorities - Scizure - Sheriff's Sale -Advertisement - Postponement-Appeal -Admission of Point of Law. |-No question of the effect of the Creditors' Relief Ordinance being raised, the priorities of several executions against land depend not upon the date of their delivery to the sheriff, but upon the date of the deposit with the registran of certified copies of the executions, accompanied by memoranda of the lands sought to be charged. (2) The sheriffs advertisement of sale of land is a seizure of the land. (3) The effect of s. 94 of the Territories Real Property Act is to provide that neither the delivery of the execution to the sheriff nor his seizure of the land binds the land, but only the deposit with the registrar of the copyexecution and accompanying memorandum.

(4) Any seizure by the sheriff enures to the benefit of all execution creditors whose executions are then in his hands, and this notwithstanding that, in case the seizure is by way of advertisement, the advertisement mentions only one or some of such executions; and semble, also, notwithstanding that some of such executions were not in the sheriff's hands for a sufficient time to authorize an advertisement for sale under them alone. (5) The sheriff's advertisement of the sale of lands may properly run prior to the expiration of the year, during which he cannot actually sell; and semble, even if the date fixed for the sale fall short of the year, but the sale is adjourned to a date subsequent to the lapse of the year, the sale would not be bad on that account. (6) A sheriff having seized lands under an execution before it has expired can proceed with the sale of such lands after the lapse of the time for the renewal of unexecuted executions:-Held, on appeal to the Court in banc, that the priorities of several executions against lands is not affected by the provisions of s. 94 of the T. R. P. Act, and that therefore such priorities are not determined by the order in which copies-execution and accompanying memoranda are deposited with the registrar, but by the dates of delivery to the sheriff. (2) The distribution of the proceeds of the sale is governed by the provisions of the Creditors' Relief Ordinance. (3) Although no question was raised before the Judge of first instance, as to the effect of the Creditors' Relief Ordinance, and it was there conceded that the re-spective execution creditors had the right to have the proceeds of the sale applied on the executions in the order of their legal priority, this could not be construed as a consent on the part of the claimants to the fund that it should be disposed of in the same manner as if the Ordinance were not in force, but merely as a contention on their part that the whole fund should be applied on their executions, and in the absence of consent on the part of the sheriff and all the parties interested in the fund, the provisions of the Ordinance must govern its disposal. Limages v. Campbell, 2 Terr. L. R. 356.

Writ of Possession - Breaking House with Violence-Conservatory Scizure.] - An action of conservatory seizure is subject to the same rules and delays as summary matters and attachments before judgment arts. 956, 939, 922, C. C. P. 2. A judgment maintaining a conservatory seizure and order ing that the plaintiff be put in possession of the effects seized "under the authority of this without fixing any delay for the deli-Court. very of the effects, is not executory until after the lapse of eight days from its date, and a writ of possession issued before the expiration of that time, without service of the judgment, and without a further order of the Court, is premature and illegal. 3. If the debtor be absent, or if there be no one to open the doors of the house, the seizing officer must draw up a minute of the fact, and obtain judicial authority to use all necessary force, but only in the presence of two witnesses. 4. It is a breaking in for an officer, by a false pretence, to procure a person within the house to open the door, and then, without permission, to rush in with violence. He must notify the inmates of his business and demand admittance. Kaufman v. Campeau, Q. R. 19 S. C. 479.

73 of the Surrogate Courts Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 59, being to bring the practice back to that in force under the ancient statute. It is not only the duty of an executor or administrator to file an inventory and render an account when duly called upon to do so, but it is his privilege to do so voluntarily in any case in which he is liable to be called upon, and this privilege in case of his death extends to his personal representative. though not at the same time the representative of the original testator, and even though there is a surviving representative of the original testator. Administration-Cash on Deposit-Rate of Interest.] — Executors found a sum of money belonging to the testator in the hands of a loan company upon savings bank account, and allowed it to remain there at 31/2 per cent, per annum, for more than two years cent, per annum, for more than two after obtaining probate of the will. In January, 1902, they closed the savings bank account, and invested the money at 4 per cent. in a debenture, but 20 days later, fear-ing that they would be called on to distribute the money, they took over the debenture themselves as from its date, and put the money into a chartered bank at 3 per cent. The trusts of the will, so far as the property not specifically devised was concerned, were to provide for annuities and to divide the surplus amongst the residuary legatees :- Held, that the executors would not have been justified in making long or permanent investments of the money which came into their hands; in strictness they should have deposited it from the beginning in a chartered bank, where it would have earned only 's per cent.; and, in accounting, they should not be charged with more interest than they : ally received, that is, 3½ per cent. while the money was on deposit with the loan company, 4 per cent. for the 20 days during which it was invested in a debenture, and 3 per cent. thereafter until distributed. An action was pending in the High Court, in which the validity of the will was to be tried, and in the meantime the Surrogate Court appointed the executors administrators pendente lite. They had received a large amount of money, which they wished to invest at higher rates of interest than could be obtained from chartered banks, as the litigation was liable to be somewhat prolonged:—Held, that this was a proper case in which to apply for a direction under the Trustee Act, and that there was no difference in principle between the position of the applicants with regard to the money in their hands, and that of an executor or trustee under the Trustee Investment Act; and the order asked for was made. In re Mackey, 23 Occ. N. 115, 2 O. W. R. 230, 689.

K. obtained from the Judge of a County Court an order permitting them to issue execution on a judgment ob-tained by H. N. K. in his lifetime against defendant:—Held, following Jost v. McNell, 20 N. S. Reps. 150, that S. K., having accepted letters of administration, could not renounce without the order of the Court of Probate, and that the order made on the application, and in the names of E. R. and R. K. only, was bad and must be set aside The order was bad, further, for want of jurisdiction, because it permitted execution to issue on the judgment "for the benefit of the said R. R. and R. K.," instead of requiring any sum realized to be applied according to law under the direction of the Court of Probate. As the appellant had failed on the merits, a larger amount appearing to be due on the judgment than was claimed, there should be no costs to either party, either in this Court or in the Court below. Assets-Exemptions - Widow - Will -Election-Devolution of Estates Act-Gift of Another's Property — Insurance Moneys — Charge on.]—The goods of a deceased husband, exempt from seizure, under the Execu-tion Act, are not, except as to funeral and testamentary expenses, assets in the hands of the husband's executors for the payment of debts, the effect of s. 4 of that Act being to give his wife a parliamentary title thereto. The fact of the wife being residuary devisee under the husband's will does not put her to her election as to taking these goods, either under statutory title or under the gift of the residue, for, though such goods, apart from the statute, would pass under the residuary devise, it was otherwise here, for the husband would not, under the circumstances, be presumed to be dealing with such goods; nor would any such presumption arise from the fact that, under the terms of the will, the provision made for her should be in lieu of dower; nor did s. 4 of the Devolution of Estates Act affect her right, for that section must be read as being subject to s. 4 of the Execution Act. A piano belonging to the wife was dealt with by the husband under his will, as part of his estate, by giving it to his son:—Held; that the wife must elect either to allow the son to retain it, under the gift to him, or to take it herself, making good to the son the value thereof, out of the provisions made for her in the will. A policy of insurance for $2,000 was by the hu-band's will made payable to and for the benefit of his wife and son, and he appeartioned the proceeds by giving the son $500 and his wife the residue thereof. Business Carried on for Benefit of Estate under Will—Liability of Executor— Estoppel — Statute of Limitations.]—An estate of a deceased was being administered in this action commenced in May, 1892, and V. brought into the Master's office in 1901 a claim for goods supplied to the executor, between July, 1890, and March, 1892, for use in carrying on the hotel business of de ceased under authority conferred by his will.

V. had, in May, 1893, sued the executor in a County Court for the price of the goods in question, but the County Court Judge dis-missed the action, on the ground urged by the defendant that he was not personally liable, but that the claim should be against the estate. The executor claimed in the adthe estate. The executor claimed in the administration proceedings that the estate was insolvent, but in April, 1894, an order was made by consent for the transfer of all the assets to him personally, upon his undertak-ing to pay or settle with all the creditors the estate and paying $1,200 into the nds of the trustees for the benefit hands of the trustees for the benefit of the children of the deceased and certain costs, and this order was car-ried out on both sides. The order con-tained provisions that the Master should forthwith adjudicate upon and settle all claims against the estate, that the executor should indemnify and save harmless the estate from all such claims, and that he should carry out and perform all the terms and provisions of the settlement :- Held, that a person supplying goods to an executor under such circumstances has no right against the estate, but he may sue the person who incurred the debt, and he also has a right to be subrogated to any right of indemnity which the executor has against the estate in respect of the liability so incurred. Compensation of Executors-Distribution of Corpus-Collection of Interest -Management of Estate.]—An estate was not a simple one to deal with, owing to conflicting interpretations of the rights of the beneficiaries under the will, the nature of the trusts, their number and complication, and, to a more limited extent, the character of a portion of the assets. The executors took over about $60,000 worth of the property in cash, mortgages, notes, farm property, and furniture. Of this they distributed a little less than half, and set apart the remainder for payment of annuities, legacies not matur-ed, etc. They collected about $16,500 of interest. They managed the estate for a period of a little more than four years down to the date of a report providing for their remuneration:—Held, that they were not enremmeration:—rieid, that they were not exittled to an allowance upon taking over the estate, but should be allowed 2½ per cent. upon such portion of the corpus of the estate as they had taken over and distributed, and when the remainder of the corpus taken over should be distributed, they should have a like allowance upon the portions distributed from time to time; they should be allowed 5 per cent, on the interest collected, and to be collected; and $100 a year in addition, for the first two years, and $75 a year for the last two years, for management of the estate and services not covered by the other charges, including the care and preservation of the corpus. Corrobe rative Evidence — Advance of Money—Claim for Interest—Promissory Note -Action for Consideration.] -- The plaintiff sued the surviving member of a firm, together with the representatives of a deceased member of the firm, for $1,000 lent by him, in the lifetime of the deceased, to the firm, for the purposes of the firm. He also claimed interest, alleging that this was spoken of at the time the money was borrowed, and that the deceased member of the firm had asked him what the interest would be, and he told her five per cent.; the surviving mem-ber of the firm denied all recollection of interest having been mentioned :-Held, that, inasmuch as there was corroboration as to the main fact, namely, the borrowing by the firm of $1,000, this was sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to recover the interest claimed. When a promissory note is taken from a borrower as collateral security for money lent to him, and not in payment, an action can be brought for the money lent, notwithstanding that, owing to the form of the note, an action thereon could not be maintained. Secor v. Gray. 22 Occ. N. 27, 3 O. L. R. 34.

Costs of Unsuccessful Action—Personal Estate—Real Estate.—A executor, without direct authority or obtaining indemnity, brought an action to recover a sum of money alleged to belong to the testator, and this action was dismissed with costs, the personal estate being insufficient to pay the costs of the opposite party:—Held, that, though the general rule is that an executor acting in good faith is entitled to be recouped his costs of an unsuccessful action, this rule would not justify the executor resorting for this purpose to specifically devised real estate. In re Champagne, 81. Jean v. Simard, 24 Occ. N. 234, 7 O. L. R. 537, 3 O. W. R. 515.

Creditor's Action against Executors -Stay Pending Administration Suit.] - A motion by the defendants, executors, to stay a creditor's action against them, on the ground that an administration action by a legatee was pending, in which an administration order had been granted, was opposed on the ground of inconvenience to the plaintiff and generally as to the right to grant a stay in such cases :- Held, that actions should be stayed against the estate, unless a fair consideration of the claim cannot be had by the referee. The affidavits of the plaintiff disclosed that it would be a hardship if compelled to come to Halifax to establish the claim before the referee; but it was stated that the referee would go to Sydney to in-quire into the claim. The order to stay proceedings was continued until the referee should have an opportunity of considering the claim. Brown v. McDonald, 25 Occ. N. 131.

Evidence—Corroboration.]—Upon a claim in an administration action by a tenant against the estate of his deceased landlerd for a balance due to him in respect of alleged advances, and for goods supplied, the books of the tenant, in which the transactions were set out, and cheques made by him in favour of the landlord, were held to be sufficient corroboration of his evidence, although the cheques did not shew on their face whether they had been given on account of rent or in respect of advances. Fatal Accidents Act—Conflicting Claims—Consolidation of Actions—Negligence.]—A woman, claiming to be the widow of a man killed owing as alleged to the negligence of the defendants, brought an action against them, with her two children as co-plaintiffs, to recover damages. Subsequently another action was brought by another woman, also claiming to be the deceased's widow, to recover damages for the benefit of herself and her child, her marriage having taken place after an alleged divorce of the first plaintiff:—Held, that only one action would be for the benefit of the persons in fact entitled; and that, there being no doubt as to the right of the children in the first action, the first action should be allowed to proceed and the rights of all parties worked out in it, the plaintiff in the second action to be represented by counsel at the trial if desired. Fatal Accidents Act — Right of Action—Action before Grant of Administration—Fital of Surrogate Court Judge,]—This action was brought by the plaintiff as administrator of a workman who died in the service of the defendant, in consequence, as alleged, of their needligence. It appeared that the fiat of the Surrogate Court Judge directing letters to issue to the plaintiff was signed on the same day that the writ of summons in this action issued, but that letters were not actually issued until two days later. The plaintiff never had any personal right or interest in the subject-matter of the litigation:—Held, that the action must be dismissed, but without prejudice to the plaintiff bringing another action. Dini v. Fauquier, 24 Occ. N. 294, 3 O. W. R. 786. (Reversed 4 O. W. R. 295.)

—Stay of Proceedings,]—An unmarried man having come to his death by reason of injuries inflicted by the defendants, two actions were brought to recover damages occa-sioned by his death. The first in point of time was brought by the paternal grandfather and grandmother of the deceased, and the second by his mother, who had obtained letters of administration to his estate after the bringing of the first action. Upon a motion by the defendants to stay one or other of the actions :- Held, that, while the grandfather and grandmother could legally proceed with their action under R. S. O. 1897 c. 166. although brought within six months of the death, so long as there was no executor or administrator, yet an administratrix having been appointed and an action brought by her within the six months, she was entitled to proceed with it; and the first action was the one to be stayed. Lampman v. Township of Gainsbrough, 17 O. R. 191, and Holleran v. Bagnell, 4 L. R. Ir. 740, explained and followed:—Held, also, that the administratrix would have the right in her action to claim damages sustained by the personal estate of the deceased. Legsott v. Great Northern R. W. Co., 1 Q. B. D. 599, followed. Mummery v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., Whalls v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 23 Coc. N. 343, 1 O. L. R.

Fatal Accidents Act-Status of Widow -Grant of Administration Pendente Lite-Workmen's Compensation Act-Negligence-Release of Cause of Action—Rights of Mo-ther—Expectation of Benefit—Discovery of Fresh Evidence-Damages-New Trial.1-An action was brought to recover damages for the death of a workman employed by the defendants, owing to their alleged negligence, The plaintiff alleged that she was the widow of the deceased, but this was denied. She obtained as widow, pendente lite, letters of administration to the estate of the deceased, and amendments were made by which she claimed as administratrix for her own benefit as widow and for the benefit of the mother of the deceased. The defendants denied negligence, denied the plaintiff's status as widow gence, defined the plainting status as whow and administratrix, and also set up a re-lease of the cause of action. The trial Judge found against the plaint T's status, but the jury found negligence, and assessed the damages at $1,500, apportioning that sum equally between the plaintiff and the mother :- Held, that there was evidence upon which the jury were justified in finding that the man's death arose from the negligence of the defendants without blame on his part; and therefore that there should not be a nonsuit or a new trial upon this branch of the case; Meredith, J., dissenting, and being of opinion that there should be a new trial. 2. That on the evidence the mother had no sufficient interest in her son's life or expectation from him to give her a right of action in respect of his death; and there should be a new assessment of damages unless the plaintiff was content to accept $750. 4. That there should be a new trial upon the question of the plaintiff's right as widow and administratrix, evidence having been discovered since the trial going to shew that the plaintiff was the true widow. 5. Foreign Will — Action to Set Aside—Powers of Provisional Administrator Appointed by French Court.]—The widow of W. C. H. died at London, England, leaving property in Great Britain, France, and Canada. By her last will she appointed "La Societé Charitable de l'Asile de nuit à Paris" her universal legatee, and a French Court appointed L., a notary, provisional administrator of the succession. Subsequently the heirs of W. C. H. brought an action to have the will set aside, and afterwards the Court at Paris confirmed the appointment of L. for such time as might be necessary. L. then asked for an account from Mrs. H. s former agent in Montreal, and obtained from the French Court an order allowing him to delegate his powers as provisional administrator to a designated person, with power to sue the former agent at Montreal for an account respecting the property in Canada. In the meantime, however, the Superior Court of Quebec had appointed M., a notary, judicial sequestrator of the property. L. brought the present action to obtain possession of the property from M., and relied on the facts above .et forth:—Held, that the judicial sequestrator appointed by a Court of this province was the proper person to be in possession of the property in Mackay, 21 Occ. N. 129.

Passing Accounts—Corroboration—Payment of Ulaims—Statutory Declarations.]—
A Judge sitting on the Probate side of the Court passing accounts is not bound by the rule of procedure requiring claimants against the estate to give corroborative proof of their claims. This rule of procedure is applicable only when the claim comes to be contested in Court. Semble, a Judge sitting without a jury is not bound any more than is a jury to apply it under all circumstances. The responsibility of paying claims falls upon the administrator; he must use care and judgment in considering them, and if he does so fairly and honestly, and in the interest of the estate, he will on passing his accounts be allowed such as he has thought fit to pay. The note was given in renewal of a former one (similarly signed) which was not a demand note, but payable at a definite time, the debt being originally the testator's:—Held, that there was a good consideration, for the former note, if not for the demand note, pamely, forbearance on the part of the plaintiffs, and the defendant was liable thereon: and his antecedent liability was a valuable consideration for the demand note; s. 27, Bills of Exchange Act. the whole of the property was to go to the survivor, and in case of the death of both without issue, to brothers and sisters of the testatrix. The executors contracted to sell a part of the real estate to the appellant, the daughter being alive and having three children, the son alive and unmarried, and brothers and sisters being also in existence. The land was incumbered and there were other debts:-Held, that the executors, even without the concurrence of the son and daughter, and a fortiori with their concurrence, could make a good title, either under the Devolution of Estates Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 127. ss. 4, 9, 16, or under the Trustee Act, R. S. 0. c. 129, s. 18. Section 9 of the former Act enables executors to sell for the payment of debts, and the power to sell is not quali-That section was intended to fied by s. 16. make it clear that executors had power to sell for the purposes of distribution where there were no debts as well as where there were debts; and the consent of the official guardian, on behalf of infants, lunatics, and non-concurring heirs or devisees, is only necessary when the sale is for purposes of distribution only. The power of sale given to executors by s. 18 of the Trustee Act was exercisable in this case, notwithstanding the last clause of s. 20; "a devise to any person or persons in fee or in tail, or for the testator's whole estate and interest," does not mean a devise of a life estate to one or more persons, and a remainder or several remainders to one or more others, either jointly or successively, and with, it may be, executory derises over to still other persons, so that his whole fee simple, or less estate, whatever it may be, is disposed of; but it means a devise of his whole inter-st, whatever it may be, whether it be *m estate in fee simple or be whether it be 'm esta'e in fee simple or any less interest, to the same person or per-sons, either as joint tenants or tenants in common. In several places in the will (which was not skilfully drawn), the testator used the expressions "from the time Humewood" and "so soon as Humewood is sold," "after the sale of Humewood," and "so soon as Humewood is sold, "his trust, and no express power of sale. The lands in question which wood" in the will, were sold and conveyade. The sale was not devise to the executors, and the vendors made title under such conveyance. of debts. The question was whether the executors had power to sell. The Devolution of Estates Act, 1886, came into force on the 1st July, 1886, shortly before the death of the testator:—Held, that under what is now at 18 of the Trustee Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 123, the executors had power to sell, the testator having created such a charge as is described in s. 16, and not having devised the real estate to the executors in trust; that s. 16 of the Devolution of Estates Act, as found in R. S. O. 1897 c. 127 (which first became law in 1891), did not oblige the executors to sell under the Devolution of Estates Act, to for by s.-s. (2) that section is not to derogate from any right possessed by an executor or administrator independently of the Act; that if the testator had devised the land to the executors upon trust, the machinery of the Devolution of Estates Act was not to be applied: Re Booth's Estate, 16 O, R. 429; and no more should it where the executors have a statutory power of sale to satisfy a charge. Mercier v. Gosselin, 5 Q. P. R. SO.

Removal of Executors—Account—Pleadiny—Execution to Form.]—A demand for the removal of testamentary executors and a demand for reddition de compte are not incompatible. 2. The fact that the defendants have already rendered an account, and therefore the plaintiff has only an action for reformation of the account, is not a ground for an exception to the form. Donohue v. Substitution—Power to Sell Property and Reinvest—Mortgage by Grevé—Creditors —Attachment of Debts.1—The testator left his property to the defendant, subject to a substitution in favour of the children of the defendant, with a stipulation of insalissabilité. The will, however, permitted the executors, of whom the defendant was one, to sell the property on condition of employing the moneys arising from the sale in the purchase of property of the same value as the property sold, the property so acquired to represent that sold. The defendant in 1869 sold one of the immovables of the estate, and in 1873 he bought in his own name a lot upon which he built a house. In 1895 he charged and hypothecated this land in favour of his children to the amount of $10,440, which was the cost price, to serve and be instead of, as the deed said, a reinvestment for the children in accordance with the provisions of the will, up to the amount of the price so paid. The deed of hypothecation reserved to the defendant the richt to remove the hypothec, and invest elsewhere, whether in purchasing new properties or upon other sufficient securities: — Held, that the deed of hypothec did not constitute a valid reinvestment of the moneys arising from the sale of the property of the estate, and that the revenues of the immovable acquired by the defendant in his own name could be attached by his creditors. De Serres v. Leclaire, Q. 14, 23 S. C. 454.

Surrogate Courts — Grant of Adminis-tration—Nominee of Next of Kin in Ontario —Discretion—Revocation — Fraud.]—Only one of the next of kin, the sister, of an intestate, resided in Ontario, and, upon the consent of the sister and her children, ters of administration were granted by a Surrogate Court to the defendant, the husband of the sister's daughter. A brother of the intestate, resident in the United States. brought this action to revoke the grant. was stated in the defendant's petition that all of the next of kin had renounced in his favour, but it was plain from the renuncia-tion, which was filed, that this statement was intended to refer only to the next of kin resident in Ontario:—Held, that the Surrogate Court had before it all those who were required by s. 41 of the Surrogate Courts Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 59, to be cited or summoned, and the consent and request of all of them that the defendant should be appointed administrator, and, having regard to the nature of the property of the deceased, and the age and illiteracy of his sister, that the Judge had not exercised his discretion improperly in directing the grant to be made to the defendants. Semble, that, even if the discretion had been improperly exercised, the grant would not have been revoked. The practice of the Surrogate Courts in this Province is to apply the provisions of s. 59 of the Act more liberally than do the English Courts the corresponding provision of the English Probate Act. Held, also, affirming the finding of the Surrogate Court, that the defendant had not made false suggestions nor concealed material facts for the purpose of obtaining the grant. Carr v. O'Rourke, 22 Occ. N. 207, 3 O. L. R. 632, 1 O. W. R. 331.

Survival of Action—Tort—Power to Appoint Administrator ad Litem., 1—R. S. O. 1897 c. 129, s. 11, providing that in case any deceased person has committed a wrong to another in respect to his person or his real or personal property, the person so wronged may maintain an action against the administrators or executors of the person who committed the wrong, does not give authority to maintain an action against one who is an administrator ad litem merely, but only against an administrator in the ordinary sense of the term, that is, a general administrator clothed with full power to collect the assets, pay the debts, and divide the estate.

Therefore, for this reason, apart from others, the appointment of an administrator ad liten should be refused in this action, which was bould be refused in this action, which was brosecution, one of whom had died pending the action, and whose widow and children refused to administer to the estate. Taking Possession of Estate—Debtor Opposing Claim for Account—Period of Year and a Day—Commencement of—Cessation of Executor's Functions.]—The fact that a deb tor of an estate resists an action en reddition de compte brought against him by an executor, alleging that he is not accountable to the estate, does not prevent the executor from taking possession of the estate; nor is he prevented from doing so because the debtor, having been ordered to render an account to the executor, renders an account in which he brings himself out free of debt to the estate. so long as the executor contests such account. 2. In consequence, the period of a year and a day commences to run from the date of the death of the testator, the executor being presumed to have known the will from that date. 3. If the year and a day from the death have elapsed during the pendency of the contest as to the account, then there is plainly a cessation of the functions of the executor, and the proceeding is suspended until the legatee or heir takes up the conduct of it in place of the executor. cœur v. Paradis, Q. R. 20 S. C. 246.

Technical Breaches of Trust—Relief from—Limitation of Actions—Trustee Acts.] —Where it was held that the appointment of executors to carry out the alternative provisions of the will never took effect, it was also held that the persons named as executors, having applied for and obtained probate, became trustees for the persons entitled upon an intestacy: payments made by them to those who would have been beneficially estitled if the alternative provisions had take effect were breaches of trust; but the status of limitations was a bar to a recovery in espect of any of those breaches which occurred more than six years before the action was brought: R. S. O. 1897 c. 129, s. 32:—Held, moreover, that the executors were estitled to be relieved from personal liability for all breaches of trust committed by them under 62 V., 2nd sess., c. 15, they having acted honestly and reasonably, in view of the facts that the construction of the will sufficiently interested all dage took the same view of its effect as they did, and for eleven year everybody interested in the estate acquieced in that view. Appointment of Extradition Commissioners—Federal Parliament—Extradition Act—Constitutionality—Prohibition—Notice to Adverse Parly—Excess of Jurisdiction.]—Upon presentation of a petition for the issuance of a writ of prohibition, the Judge may require notice to be given to the parces having an adverse interest in the proceedings. 2. The Judge to whom the application is presented, in view of the effect of the issuing of the writ, which would be to the up the interior privalction for an indefinite time. The writ of the interior privalction for an indefinite time of the property of the interior privalction for an indefinite time. We will be not be reason. The writ of prohibition lies whenever court of inferior jurisdiction exceeds its jurisdiction, if there is no other remedy equally convenient, beneficial, and effectual, and it may also be used to restrain any body of persons or officers assuming to exercise judicial or quasi-judicial powers, although not strictly or technically a court. 4. The writ should not be granted except in a substantially clear case of want of jurisdiction and where there is an imminent danger of failure of justice. 5. The Extradition Act, R. S. C. c. 142, in so far as it enacts that the Governor-General in council may appoint Extradition Commissioners other than members of a court already constituted and organized by the provincial authorities, is constitutional and within the powers of the federal parliament. 6. Doubted, that a writ of prohibition is the proper means of bringing before the Court the question of the constitutionality of a statute under which a court or an officer pretends to act. In re Gaynor, 7 Q. P. R. 115.

Arrest and Remand of Accused—Write of Habeas Corpus—Jurisdiction—Procedure.)—The respondents, having been arrested in Montreal by order of an extradition commissioner for an alleged extradition offence committed in the State of Georgia. were remanded by him for the purpose of affording the prosecution an opportunity of proving its case. Thereafter one Judge in Quebec issued, on their application, and then quashed, writs of habeas corpus, while another Judge afterwards issued similar writs and discharged the respondents from custody, on the ground that no extradition offence had been disclosed against them in the proceedings before him:—Held, that this was the question which the Extradition Commissioner had jurisdiction to investigate on the remand which he had ordered; that his remand warrant could not be treated as a nullity; that the respondents were in lawful custody; and that, in consequence, the Judge had no jurisdiction to order their release. United States of America v. Gaynor, [1905] A. C. 128.

Child-stealing — Contempt of Foreign Court—Parent Stealing His Own Child— Foreign Law — Criminal Code.]—The pris-Foreign Law — Criminal Code.]—The prisoner and his wife were absolutely divorced in the State of Illinois, where they were domiciled, by a decree which gave the custody of their child, five years old, to the wife, with permission to the prisoner to take it out with him in the day time, but to return it the same day. The prisoner, having thus obtained the child, brought it to Canada':—Held, following In re Murphy, 26 O. R. 163, 23 A. R. 386, that "child stealing" being mentioned in the existing Extradition Treaty between the United States and Great Britian. as one of the extradition crimes, the Court should, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, assume the crimes to be identical in the two countries, and the onus did not rest upon the prosecutor of proving what the foreign law was. The evidence taken before the extradition commissioner shewed a case of child stealing under s. 284 of the Criminal Code, and, in the absence of evidence of the foreign law, that was sufficient. Section 284 of the Criminal Code does not exclude the case of father and child. Though what was done was a contempt of Court, yet if a man has committed a crime it does not become the less a crime because it also happens to be a contempt. As to the prisoner's contention that he had acted in good faith because he had been advised that the decree of divorce having been obtained collusively, was a nullity, this was a matter which might properly be set up as a defence by the prisoner upon his trial, but could not be dealt with by the magistrate, who had before him the decree of the foreign Court and the oath of the wife that she did not collude. In re Watts, 22 Occ. N. 166, 3 O. L. R. 368, 1 O. W. R. 133.

Embezzlement — Hearsay Evidence-Removal of Goods-Master and Servant-Larceny.]-The prisoner was remanded for extradition for the crime of embezzlement committed in Texas. The facts relied on were set forth in the deposition of the owner of the property alleged to have been embezzled. He stated that twenty thousand sheep and other property were placed by him under the charge of the prisoner, as foreman, on a ranch 350 miles distant from the owner's place of residence, in the State of Texas; and that the property was removed without his knowledge from the ranch. There was no evidence except that of the owner as to the removal or as to the receipt by the prisoner of the proceeds of sale, and the owner's evidence as to those matters was merely hearsay:—Held, that the evidence did not shew embezzlement nor larceny, and the prisoner must be discharged. In re Piaget, 21 Occ. N. 536.

Foreign Warrant-Proof of-Return-Discharge.]—A warrant under the Extradition Act, R. S. C. c. 142, s. 6, for the apprehension of a fugitive was issued upon duly authenticated copies (1) of an indictment found by a grand jury in a foreign country charging the accused with an extraditable offence, (2) of a bench warrant issued upon the said indictment, accompanied by a copy of a return thereto by the sheriff dated 10th April to the effect that he could not find the accused and believed that he was without the jurisdiction, and (3) of depositions of witnesses tending to shew that the accused was guilty of the offence charged. On the hearing, the proceedings above mentioned were put in as evidence subject to objection, and the sheriff gave evidence that the accused whom he identified, had been in custody from about the 1st May until the sittings of the Court at which he was indicted, and that he was at that sittings discharged from his custody:—Held, that, in order to give jurisdiction to a Judge to issue such a warrant. either a foreign warrant of arrest must be proved or an information or complaint must be laid before the Judge at or before the time of the issue of the warrant. That, in case of a foreign warrant, it must be shewn to be outstanding and in full force, and that the evidence failed to establish this. Semble that in case of a foreign warrant, the ori-ginal must be produced. The accused was therefore discharged. In re Bongard, 5 Terr. L. R. 10.

Forgery — Uttering Forged Document-Intent.]—There was evidence that the prisoner handed to a young woman in charge of a telegraph office a letter purporting to be signed by a vice-president of the telegraph company, in these words: "To any employe. Western Union Telegraph Company. This will introduce Mr. J. O. Goelet, a personal friend of the management of this company. Any favours shewn him will be duly appreciated by the corporation and myself." The vice-president whose name was used did not himself sign it, nor authorize any one else to sign it for him, nor was he aware of it. There was evidence that the prisoner shortly afterwards gained the affections of the young arterwards gained the anections of the yous woman, and proposed, under the name of J. O. Goelet, to marry her, although he had a wife living. There was no evidence that any person named J. O. Goelet existed. There was no evidence to shew that the prisoner had himself written any part of the decourant. Hold that the fortunate was the content of the c document :- Held, that the facts were suffcient to make out a prima facie case that the prisoner presented the document with the intention that the young woman should be lieve and act upon it as genuine, to her own prejudice, within the meaning of s. 422 of the Criminal Code; and therefore a prima facie case of uttering a forged document, within the meaning of s. 424; and an order for extradition was right. The language used in s. 422 is intended to extend to cases which would not have come within any former common law or statutory definition of forgery in force in Canada. In re Abeel, 24 Occ. Commissioner - Jurisdiction -- Warrant-Description of Offence-Extradition Treaties.] -A writ of habeas corpus, in an extradition matter, issued upon the order of a Judge, then discharged by the same Judge, does not prevent the issue of another writ and does not constitute res judicata, when: (a) there are new allegations in the petition upon which the second writ is issued; (b) the petitioner has desisted from his first writ petitioner has desisted from his first writ-before judgment and alleges this desistment in his second petition; (c) the second writ-is not addressed to the same gaoler and is executed in a different district. 2. The petitioner may validly desist from a writ of habeas corpus at any time before judgment, and if, in spite of the desistment, judgment is rendered, it does not constitute res judicata, and cannot be set up against the second writ. 3. After the issue of a writ of habeas corpus, in an extradition matter, the Judge seised of the writ may issue a writ of certiorari in aid, addressed to the extradition commissioner who has issued the warrant, to return the whole of the proceedings before him, including the information or complaint and the documents relating to it. 4. In order to form an opinion upon the merits, the Judge after the return of the proceedings under the certiforari, is not confined to the warrant of arrest, to see if the extradition commissioner had jurisdiction, but he may go behind the warrant and see what it is founded on. 5. An extradition commissioner has no jurisdiction to proceed to extradition, unless his warrant, as well as the documents upon which it issues, is legal and contains a legal description of an offence mentioned in the treaties. 6. In an extradition matter, the date of committing the offence is an essential element in the description of the offence, and if it is not in the warrant, the warrant is illegal. 7. The warrant, the complaint, and the documents relating to it, must shew clearly that the offence is within the treaties. 8. The extradition commissioner cannot in his warrant change the offence stated in the complaint so as to bring it within the treaty. Ex p. Gaynor and Greene, Q. R. 22 S. C. 109.

Kidnapping Child—Offence of Mother—Judicial Award of Custody to Father—Exrediable Offence.]—After a judgment dedaring the consorts divorced, and awarding the custody of the child to the father, the mother may be extradited for the offence of bidanping it. The fact that at the time the judgment was pronounced, the mother was in possession of the child, is no bar to the extradition, any more than the fact that the escaped with it between the pronouncing of the oral judgment in divorce and the entry thereof in the register; and the offence to be extraditable, need not be one against the federal laws of the United States, the demanding country. In re Lorens, 7 Q. P. R.

Locus Standi in Court of Foreign Locus Standi in Court of Foreign State—Commissioner of Extradition — Jurisdiction — Interference by Judge — Habeas

Other Judges.] — Foreign sovereigns and States have the right to appear and intervene in cases before the Court of the province of Onebec. 2. A commissioner of streadition vene in cases before the Court of the province of Quebec. 2. A commissioner of extradition acting under the authority of the Extradi-tion Act, has equal authority with a Judge of the Superior Court; and it is only when, assuming to act as a commissioner, he does something which is ultra vires, or otherwise acts illegally, that Superior Courts, or Judges thereof, become seised with revisory, amendatory, or appellate powers over his acts. When a prisoner, whose extradition is sought, has been brought before a Judge of the Su-perior Court on a writ of habeas corpus issued before the committal of the accused and before the conclusion of the inquiry before the commissioner, the powers of the Judge are limited to determining whether the commissioner has jurisdiction to make the in-quiry, i.e., whether he is legally seised of the case; when, however, the writ of habeas corpus was issued after the committal of the accused, the Judge has the power to review the case against him. 4. The jurisdiction of an extradition Judge or commissioner ex-tends over the whole province for which he tends over the whole province for which he has been appointed; he may therefore order a prisoner to be brought before him from any part of the province in which he has been arrested. 5. A Judge of the Superior Court before whom a prisoner, whose extra-dition is sought, has been brought on a writ of habeas corpus, has absolute control over him until he has passed from the hands of such Judge; and until then no other Judge has the right to interfere in the matter by habeas corpus or otherwise. and Gaynor, Q. Prohibition — Extradition Commissioner — Appeal — Inferior Tribunal — Power of Federal Government to Appoint.]—An appeal lies to the Court of King's Bench from a decision refusing to grant a writ of prohibition. An extradition commissioner is not an inferior tribunal within the meaning of art. 1003, C. P. The federal government has power to appoint extradition commissioners. Gaynor and Greene v. Lafontaine, 7 O. P. R. 240.

Receiving Stolen Property—Evidence—Inferences—'Money, Valuable Security, or Other Property'—Ensedem Generis,]—Upon a motion for the discharge of a prisoner committed for extradition, no evidence can be considered except that upon which the prisoner stands committed, and into the weight of that evidence, or even its sufficiency to sustain the charge, no inquiry can be made. The fact of the silence of a person accused of receiving stolen property, upon hearing statements made as to his alleged guilt by the person who stole the property, is admissible in evidence as leading to the inference of his guilty knowledge. Having regard to the interpretation clauses of the Extradition Act, R. S. C. 1886 c. 142, crimes referred to in the "extradition arrangement" of 1890 between Great Britain and the United States, come within the Act. The words "other property" used in that arrangement as to the crime of "receiving any money, valuable security, or other property, knowing the same to have been embezzled, stolen, or fraudulently obtained," must be construed as relating only to things of the same type as "money" or "valuable security," and a prisoner accused of receiving a stolen pair of shoes was discharged from custody. FALSE ARREST.

Absence of Malice—Arrest not Justificate—Aggravation by Pleading—Liability for Arrest.]—In this case, acting without malice, the defendant caused the arrest of the defendant for obtaining money by false pretences, without first demanding from the plaintiff the proof of his title to certain land which the plaintiff offered as security for the loan of $300, and in an action for the arrest made allegations which he could not support:—Held, that he was liable in damages under Art, 1053, C. C. Under the circumstances he was ordered to pay $25 damages and the costs of an action of the fourth class. Laliberte v. Gingrays, Q. R. 21 S. C. 400.

Absence of Malice — Probable Cause—Burden of Proof,]—In an action for damages for false arrest the onus is on the plaintif to prove that there was not probable cause for the arrest and that the defendant was actuated by malice. Malice alone is not sufficient: there must be absence of probable cause. The theory of probable cause according to English law does not prevail in Quebec; the rule of the French law must be applied. Giguère v. Jacob, Q. R. 10 K. B. 501.

Action—Pleading — Reasonable and Probabel Cause. [—A plaintiff may sue for damages for false arrest, alleging that the information, trial, and conviction were irregular, null, arbitrary, malicious, ultra vires, that the conviction was quashed as such upon certiorari, and that the plaintiff has suffered damage owing to the fault, negligence, and imprudence of the defendants, and their employees, such allegations being, in effect, sufficient charges of want of probable and reasonable cause. Leonard v. Delorme, 6 Q. P. R. 349.

Malice—Want of Reasonble and Probable Gause—Functions of Judge and Jury—Appreciation of Evidence—Misderection.]—In an action for damages for false arest, the function of the jury is only to find whether the evidence adduced establishes facts from which good faith and reasonable and probable cause, or malice and want of reasonable and probable cause, can be deduced: the inferences of good or bad faith, reasonable and probable cause, or the absence the fifteence of the description of the probable cause, or the absence thereof, to be drawn from such facts, is a question of law to be determined by the Court alone; and the jury ought to be guided a questions of law by the Court. In this case the evidence did not establish that the arrest of the defendant had been made in good faith and with probable cause on the part of the defendant; and therefore the verdict of the judge, as regards the effect of the evidence upon this point, should be set aside.

Semble, that, if the leases and licenses prejudiced the rights acreases and incenses prejudiced the rights acquired by the suppliant under his ferry grant, he would be entitled to a writ of scire facias to repeal them. a writ of habeas corpus:—Held, that, although by s. 517 of the charter of the city of Montreal, 62 V. c. 58, it is provided that all fines sued for and recovered in the Recorder's Court shall belong to the city, and by the same statute, s. 518, it is provided that to the council alone appertains the right to remit the whole or part of any fine belonging to the city, yet under 63 V. (Q.) c. 7, which provides that the Crown's right to fines is not affected by provisions right to fines is not affected by provisions of municipal charters, the fine in question did not belong to the city of Montreal, but to the Crown (there being no private prosecutor), and therefore, even if s. 518 of 62 V. c. 58 were constitutional (a question which did not require to be decided in the present case), the city council had no right to remit the fine, and the petitioner was not entitled to be liberated. FIRE.

Destruction of Work in Progress - Incidence of Loss-Owner or Contractor.]-The hot water furnace in a house of the defendant having been damaged by frost, the defendant requested the plaintiff, a plumber, to make the necessary repairs. The latter not wishing to do the work for a fixed price, unless it were the price of a new outfit, it was agreed that the plaintiff should make it was agreed that the plaintiff should make the repairs, furnish the materials, at an advance of 12 to 15 per cent. upon the price which he himself should pay, and should charge 35 cents per hour for the time of his men. During the night which preceded the day which would have seen the completion of the work, the house was destroyed by fire, which was an accidental one:-Held, that, under these circumstances, the plaintift not having undertaken the work in furnishing the materials and in charging himself ing the materials and in charging himself with doing all the work and to render it perfect for a fixed price (art, 1684, C. C.), the loss did not fall upon him, and that he could claim for the time of his men and the price of his materials being regarded as sold to the defendant according as they were placed in his house. Precautionary Measure — Destruction of House — Municipal Corporation—Liability.]—A fire threatened to assume large proportions and to destroy a considerable part of a city. It was considered proper, in order of a city. It was considered proper, in order to arrest the progress of the fire, to pull down the respondent's house. The circumstances justified such demolition as a measure of prudence and of public safety in respect to that part of the city. But it turned out that the fire was extinguished before it reached the site of the respondent's house:—Held, that the demolition of the house was lawful. 2. That the city corporation was bound to indemnify the respondent. City of Quebec v. Mahoney, Q. R. 10 K. B. 378. osts.]

They were not partners in respect of the license, and each catch of fish was divided at the sanc time it was made among such of the licensees as assisted in it. The expense of repairing the fishing gear was proportionately borne by the plaintiff and defendants up to the years 1899 and 1900, when it was borne by the defendants. In the years 1899 and 1900 the negli fishing gear was possessed and used exclusively by the defendants in fishing under the license:—Held, that the plaintiff was not enis not v have titled to a declaration of interest in the license, nor to a share of the earnings therefire under for the years 1899 and 1900, and that the defendants were not liable to account to him for profits from the use by them of the fishing gear in those years. Regulations — Foreigners — Order in Council — "Temporarily Domiciled,"]—The defendants r-sided in Pennsylvania; they came to the county of Yarmouth in three successive years for the express purpose of trout-fishing in the inland waters of the county, employing Canadian boats and boatmen; they erected a substantial fishing camp on Crown land at the fishing grounds, in which they lived while engaged in fishing, and where their accountements remained from season to season. Each of the defendants was convicted of a violation of certain regulations made under s. 16 of the Fisheries Act:—Held, that an appeal lay to the County Court from these convictions. 2. That the defendants were not "temporarily domiciled in Canada," within the meaning of an order in council providing that foreigners when so domiciled should be exempt from the regulations requiring permits. 3. That they were properly convicted. Rex v. Townsend, 21 Occ. N. 569.

FIXTURES.

Buildings — Crown — Intention.]

Be plaintiff sued for the delivery by the defendants of certain buildings erected by M. npvn land the title to which was, at the time of such erection, and continued to be, in the Crown. The plaintiff claimed title through a sale made to her under an execution issued from the County Court of Selixis, on an alleged judgment recovered by the plaintiff's husband against the defendants, under which execution the bailiff purported to sell the buildings as chattels of M., who for the country of the plaintiff's husband against the defendants and the different about 19 years before action, and lived in them till about 1896; he did sell the buildings are considered them about 19 years before action and lived in them till about 1896; he did sell the sellings were not so affixed to the free-bold as to require that anything should be baken or separated by force in order to resoure them. M. did not own the land:—

Held, that the presumption was that it was not intended that the buildings should become part of the freehold; the onus was on M, to shew that it was so intended. If the buildings became part of the freehold, they became the property of the Crown, the owner of the freehold. But the evidence shewed that M, tried to sell the buildings to the Crown, his actions in so doing being those of an owner, and not of one seeking compensation for the buildings as a matter of grace. Dizon v. Mackay, 22 Occ. N. 394. Reversed 24 Occ. N. 28.

Hypothecation as Attached to Land—Separation and Sale—Rights of Hypothecary Creditor—Preferential Ulaim]—An hypothecary creditor has a right to be paid in preference to ordinary creditors, according to the order of his hypothec, out of the proceeds of sale of movable articles, immovable by destination and hypothecated as such, sold at a judicial sale as movables separated from the property to which they were attached, subject to his hypothec. McCaskil v, Richmond Industrial Co., Q. R. 23 S. C. 381.

Machinery — Conditional Sale — Lien of Manufacturers—Rights of Mortgagee—Priori-ties — Statute — Retroactivity.] — A woollen company purchased from the plaintiffs, on the instalment plan, a steam engine under an agreement in writing which provided that it should not become the property of the vendee until the payment of all the instalments, and should be removable by the vendor on failure of the vendee to pay as agreed. The engine was affixed to the freehold of the vendee by bolts and screws to iron plates embedded in concrete to prevent it from rocking and shifting, and might have been removed at any time without injury to the freehold. It was used for driving the machinery in the factory of the vendee. Default having been made in the payment of the instalments, the engine was claimed by the vendor and also by the defendant, a mortgagee of the land on which the mills were situate and all the mill plant, engines, etc., who took his mortgage after the engine had been installed and without notice of the plaintiffs' claim. The mortgage was foreclosed by the defendant, and the mortgaged property was bought in by him under a sale in equity, for an amount less than the mort-gage debt. The plaintiffs were not parties to the foreclosure proceedings, but were aware of the pendency of the same. No repowt of the sale or motion to confirm was made:— Held, that the engine was sufficiently annexed to the land to become part of the freehold, and passed to the defendant under his mortgage. By the mortgage to the defendant the engine passed as part of the realty, and on his taking possession, if not by virtue of the mortgage alone, all right in the plaintiffs to retake it was put an end to. The Act 62 V. c. 12, s. 8, s.-s. 2, which provides that where goods or chattels are sold on the instalment or hire and purchase system, and the property is not to pass until payment, the right of the owner shall not be affected by such goods or chattels being affixed to the realty, does not apply to past transactions where the goods had been affixed to and become part of the realty before the passing of the Act. Mortgage-Plant - Temporary Absence from Factory.]—A mortgage of an electro-plating factory, "together with all the plant and machinery at present in use in the fac-

natury to foundries to have mouldings made, and not in the factory at the time of the making of the mortgage. Judgment of Ferguson, J., 1 O. L. R. 229, 21 Occ. N. 186, reversed. McClosh v. Burton, 21 Occ. N. 371, 2 O. L. R. 77. factory to foundries to have mouldings made,

Suspensive Conditional Sale—Replevin — Title — Registration.] — In order that movable property placed on real property for a permanancy and incorporated therewith, should become immovable by destination, one ownership as well of the movable as the immovable upon which the former is placed, must be vested in the same person. 2. Movable property which, had it been owned by the proprietor of the real estate upon which it was placed, would have become immovable by destination, may, even after a sheriff's sale of the immovable while the movable property was so attached to it, be revendicated by its owner. 3. The title to such movable property preserved under a susrevendicated by its owner. 3. The title to such movable property preserved under a suspensive conditional sale providing that the ownership shall not pass until full and final payment of the price, and that the property shall not become immovable until that time, and with a stipulation that any money paid on account shall be imputed as rent, is, without registration, a valid and sufficient title. Leonard v. Willard, Q., R. 23 S. C. 489

Contract—False Representations — Suppression of Fact — Cancellation — Sale of Goods.] — The plaintiff's traveller obtained from the defendant an order for a quantity of gin, by falsely representing that the combine of large dealers in gin, by which the price of gin had been fixed at certain rates, was still in existence, and would continue to exist, and by suppressing the fact that the plaintiff and three other important members had left the combine, a fact which would have the effect of reducing prices —Held, that the misrepresentation and suppression of facts were material, inasmuch as the defendant would not have bought at the price agreed on, if he had known the actual state of affairs, and that the defendant was justified in demanding the concellation of the contract. Letellier v. Lafortune, Q. R. 26 S. C. 200.

Contract — Representations Subsequently Made.]—False and fraudulent representations made by a party to a contract after it has been entered into, which had no influence in inducing it, cannot be deemed sufficient grounds for setting aside the contract, and recovering money paid pursuant thereto. McNaughton v. Hudson, 37 N. S. Reps. 191.

Contract—Rescission—Mining Lease.]—The defendant, by falsely stating to the plaintiffs that he had obtained a lease of a similar mica property from another proprietor for $30 per ton on the mica extracted, which statement he supported by producing a pretended copy of the lease in his own writing, induced them to lease their mica property to him on the same terms. The plaintiffs would not have agreed to the lease but for the deceit practised:—Held, that the representation that the defendant lad obtained a lease of a similar property for $30 per ton, being a principal consideration for entering into the contract, the plaintiffs were entitled, under arts, 992 and 998, C. C. to obtain its resiliation. Barnard v. Riendeau, 31 S. C. R. 234, followed. Doucet v. Clerex, Q. R. 23 S. C. 107.

Action to Set Aside-Judgment Creditor -Lapse of Execution — Homestead Entry— Trustee—Evidence — Costs.]—In an action to set aside a conveyance of lands as a fraud upon creditors, if the action is not brought on behalf of all the creditors of the debtor, the plaintiffs must shew that they have obtained both judgment and execution, and if their executions have elapsed for want of renewal before the commencement of the action, the action will fail. A. D. made a homestead entry on certain lands, but by mistake his homestead duties were performed on adjoining lands. The government cancelled his entry but agreed to sell the lands to the nominee of A. D. at $1 an acre. In pursuance of this agreement the lands were sold by the government to one Alloway, as A. D.'s nominee, and Alloway received a patent for the same:-Held, that Alloway held the lands as trustee for A. D., and that a transfer of the lands from Alloway to the defendant, the wife of A. D., for which the defendant gave no consideration, and which was made at a time when A. D. was, to the knowledge of the defendant, in insolvent circumstances, should be set aside as fraudulent and void. A letter written by A. Voluntary Deed—Creditors—Absence of Fraudulent Intent.]—The defendant's father, believing himself solvent, in January, 1903, conveyed land voluntary to the defendant. At that time he owned shares in the plaintiff company, and had borrowed money from the company upon them, but these shares up to the time of the failure of the company in June, 1903, were saleable above par, and considered then and at the time of the loan ample security for the amount of it. On the evidence, no fraudulent intent on the part of the grantor could be inferred:—Held, that, although, at the time of action brought to set aside the conveyance, the plaintiff company were, by reason of it, hindered in recovering their claim, this was not the necessary consequence of the conveyance, within the meaning of R. S. O. 1897 c. 147, and therefore the conveyance could not be set aside. Spirett v. Willows, 3 De G. & Sm. 293, and Freeman v. Pope, L. R. 5 Ch. 383, specially considered. The conveyance was made without consideration, and in fraud of creditors, and was voidable as against creditors and subsequent purchasers for valuable consideration. In 1896 H., at the request of C., assigned the mortgage so made to W., who was a creditor of C., and pressing for payment:—Held, that the mortgage, although fraudulently made id the first instance, was validated by the assignment to W. for valuable consideration; that the giving of time by W. to C. in connection with the antecedent indebtedness, was sufficient consideration to support the assignment in the validating of the mortgage would not affect the right to priority of the party claiming under a second mortgage made by C. previously to the assignment of W.;—Held, also, following McNeil v. McPhee, 31 N. S. Reps. 140, that a deed made by C., the sole consideration for which was the future support of the maker and his wife by the grantee, was not founded upon valid consideration, within the Statute of Elizabeth. FRAUDULENT PREFERENCE created upon the property of the debtor, while he is insolvent, and with the intention of obtaining a fraudulent preference over other creditors of the debtor, may be attacked withing the time mentioned in art. 1949, C. C. 2. A judgment is a judicial contract. S. The time for contesting the fraudulent act of a debtor runs not only from the date of the distribution of his property, establishing his insolvency, but from the date of the knowledge of the fraud by the creditor, that is to say, from the prejudice which the fraudulent act causes him. Banque Nationale v. Common, Q. R. 22 S. C. 294.

—The plaintiff claimed a declaration that a certain piece of land purchased from the Dominion Government in the name of the defendant J. was the property of his brother, the defendant R., and should be sold to real-ize the plaintiff's registered judgment against At the time of the purchase in 1888 R. was indebted to the plaintiff in a sum of over $1,800, and to another person for over $4,000, and it was shewn that J. had never paid anyand it was shewn that J. had never paid any-thing on the land either for the purchase money or taxes, and had never received any-thing by way of rent or profits; also that the money for the first installment has been advanced by another brother, that R. had paid the rest of the purchase money from the proceeds of the land, of which he had always enjoyed the use and occupation; and that the Crown patent for the property was issued to J. in 1892 without his having approach. it. The defendants at their examination for discovery before the trial swore that the whole transaction was bona fide and that R. was J.'s agent throughout in respect of the property, but R. was not called as a witness for the defence. J., also, in a letter to R. written in 1899, had referred to the property as "your land!"—Held, that the proper con-clusion upon the whole evidence was that the land was really R.'s property and had been purchased and held in J.'s name for the purpose of preventing creditors from realizing out of it, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief asked for. Semble, that when a defendant who is in Court does not give eithered to support his case, the Judge is entitled to make every reasonable presumption Ch. 172, followed. Miller v. McCuaig, 20 Occ. N. 27, 13 Man. L. R. 220.

Simulated Sale of Chattels—Presumption—Pledge.]—Although a sale of movable effects may be perfect without deliver, the want of deplacement gives rise to the presumption that the sale was simulated. 2. The laws of the province of Quebec do not permit chattel mortgages, and, in a prominent degree, refuse recognition of subterfuges whereby a creditor may secure advantages at the expense of his fellow-creditors. Where it appears that a pretended deed sale, without any delivery having taken place is, in reality, an unlawful pledge of the morables affected, such deed will be annuled. In re Goper, Q. R. 21 S. Dealing in Shares — Broker—Payment of Differences—Illegality — Criminal Code, a. 201.]—The defendant instructed the plaintiffs to sell shares for him; the plaintiffs asked for cover, and the defendant paid 8600; no time was fixed for delivery; the plaintiffs asked the defendant for more, as shares were rising, and finally called for $2.400, which the defendant refused to pay. The plaintiffs then, as they alleged, purchased the shares to satisfy their own liability, and sued for amount paid:—Held, that, as no stock was ever delivered or intended to be delivered and as the intent was to make a profit from the fluctuations of the stock market, the transaction was illegal. R. S. O. 1897 c. 923, s. 549 (4). The iegailation pointed at houses where gaming or gambling was practised, and house kept for such purpose. The inquiry in this case was not as to whether the place in questing a gambling house," and there was no tast to whether the place in questing a gambling house, and there was no cards for gam had been played at the house, but that fell far short of what would bequired to attach to it the character of a "gambling house."—Held, the character of a "gambling house."—Held, the character of the control of the cards for gambling house in the scenario of the character of the control of the control of the control of the control of the character of a gambling house in a gambling house, and so others come jogether in private houses to play cards, were not within the scope of this state of the enabling statute, and assumes to make illegal that which was a control of the legislature as expressed in the statute. Owner.]-By a notarial act the parents of a family of twelve living children assigned and abandoned to one of their sons all the rights, privileges, and advantages resulting and belonging to them by virtue of an Act of the legislature assented to 2nd April, 1890, intituled an Act giving the privilege to the father and mother of a family of twelve living children, of a grant of 100 acres of public land. The notarial act recited that the assignment or abandonment was made gratuitously and out of parental love, and purported to give the son the right to enjoy and dispose of such rights and privileges, as owner thereof and in perpetuity, upon the charges, clauses, and conditions imposed by the statute: — Held, Casault, C.J., dissenting, that this act of donation granted to the donee the lot which the donors had claimed from the government, and to which afterwards the latter had given the donors a title of concession; and that it was not necessary to render the donee pro-prietor of such lot that the donor should make a new assignment. 2. That the acceptance of the gift appeared by the same act, and that the signature of the notary affixed to the act after that of the donee made the act of donation perfect, and it was not necessary that the done should notify the donors of the perfecting of the act. 3. That the defen-dants, from whom the done claimed the value of wood cut upon this lot, they being neither heirs, legatees, nor creditors of the donors, and not pretending to have any right donors, and not pretending to have any right in or to the lot, were not in a position to set up the want of registration of the act of donation. 4. That the defendants, if they paid the amount claimed to the donee, he having the apparent title, would be discharged as regards the heirs of the donors, if they should become entitled by virtue of the want of registration. 5. That the statute 53 V. c. 26 authorizes such a gift inter vivos. Gélinas v. St. Maurice Lumber Co., Q. R. 21 S. C. 270.

Donatic Mortis Causa—Banker's Pass Book—Delivery of.]—Held, that a banker's pass book given upon receipt of a deposit, which was numbered, and in which it was stipulated that the deposit would not be repaid without production of the pass book, is a good subject of donatio mortis causa. The book was contemporaneous with the debt, was delivered to the creditor, was essential to the proof of the contract, and the production of it essential before the money could be demanded. The delivery of such a pass book in anticipation of death, operates as a transfer of the debt due by the bank in respect of the money or deposit, to take effect upon death. Brown v. Toronto General Trusts Corporation, 21 Occ. N. 28, 32 O. R. 319.

Donatio Mortis Causa — Deposit Re-ceipts—Cheques and Orders — Delivery for Beneficiaries - Corroboration - Construction of Statute.]-McD., being ill and not expecting to recover, requested his wife, his expecting to recover, requested his wife, his brother being present at the time, to get from his trunk a bank deposit receipt for $6,000, which he then handed to his brother, telling him that he wanted the money equally divided among his wife, brother, and a sister, The brother then, on his own suggestion or that of McD., drew out three cheques or orders for $2,000 each, payable out of the deposit receipt, to the respective beneficiaries, which McD, signed and returned to his brother, who handed to McD.'s wife the one payable to her and the receipt, and she placed them in the trunk from which she had taken the receipt. McD. died eight days afterwards: -Held, affirming the judgment in 35 N. S. Reps. 205, Sedgewick and Armour, JJ., dissenting, that this was a valid donatio mortis causa of the deposit receipt and the sum it causa of the deposit receipt and the sum is represented, notwithstanding that there was a small amount for interest not specified in the gift. By R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 163, s. 35, an interested party in an action against the estate of a deceased person cannot succeed on the evidence of himself or his wife, or both, unless it is corroborated by other material evidence —Held, that such evidence may be corroborated by circumstances or fair inferences from facts proved. The evidence of an additional witness is not essentially the corresponding to the tial. McDonald v. McDonald, 23 Occ. N. 135, 33 S. C. R. 145.

Donatic Mortis Causa — Evidence — Moreys and Notes — Delivery of Keys of Boy:]—The defendant's father, a man of ninety-eight years of age, who had been living in her house, was taken suddenly ill, retired to his room and lay down on his bed, and while she was endeavouring to make him comfurtable, he handed her a small wallet containing three keys, and said, "All the money and notes! I have got are yours." One of the keys was that of a trunk in his room and another of a cash box (in which the money and notes were) in the trunk. There was evidence that he had a foreboding that it would be his last illness, and that he in tended to give his property to the defendant. She retained the keys until his death. In an action by the administrators of his estate for the money and notes:—Held, that there was a good donatio mortis causa. In re Mustapha, Mustapha v. Wedlake, S Times L. R. 160, followed. Donatio Mortis Causa - Mortgage.]o the The holder of two mortgages, while very ill on of and about to start on a journey for the bene-fit of his health, handed the mortgages and some title deeds to the defendant, telling her a derans that they were for her and that he would execute an assignment of them to her if one upon were prepared and sent to him. The mortgagee died two months later, no assignment 9. having been executed by him, and one of the mortgages having been partly discharged by him:—Held, that there had not been a donatio mortis causa of the mortgages, but Rey for merely an incomplete and effective gift inter vivos, and that the mortgages formed part of the mortgagee's estate. Wood v. Bradley.

Donatio Mortis Causa—Savings Bank Deposit Book—Trust—Remedy in Equity.]— A deceased person in her last illness, and shortly before her death, handed to the de-fendant a government savings bank pass-book, in which was credited in the names of the defendant and the deceased a sum of money deposited in their names, and at the same time told the defendant to pay to the plaintill till detectable to pay to the partitiff $400 out of the bank, pay some debts owing by the deceased, and her funeral expenses; to which the defendant assented. The money on deposit belonged to the deceased, but could be withdrawn by the deceased. fendant on delivery up of the pass-book, whether before or after the deceased's death: Held, (1) that the pass-book was a good sub-ject of a donatio mortis causa; (2) that there was a valid donatio nortis causa constituted by trust, and enforceable in equity, in favour of the plaintiff. Thorne v. Perry, 21 0cc. N. 95. 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 146. Affirmed, 35 N. B. Reps. 398.

Donatio Mortis Causa - Savings Bank Deposit—Delivery of Pass Book—Evidence -Corroboration.]—The money at the credit of a savings bank depositor may pass as a of a savings can depositor may pass as a donatic mortis causa by the delivery of the savings bank book by the depositor to the done with apt words of gift, the deposit being subject to the condition that no part of it can be withdrawn without the production of the book. Any evidence which is sufficient to prove any fact against the estate of a deceased person is sufficient to prove a donatio mortis causa; that is, any evidence which is believed and is corroborated as reduried by the statute may be acted upon. In re Reid, 23 Occ. N. 334, 6 O. L. R. 421, 2 O. W. R. 918.

Donatio Mortis Causa -- Solicitor and Client—Absence of Independent Advice—Invalidity of Gift—Corroboration.]—Held, per Moss, C.J.O., and Garrow, J.A., that where, at the time of the making of an alleged donatio mortis causa, the relationship of solicitor and client existed between the parties, who were the only persons present at the time, no previous intimation of the intention to make the sift having been given to any one, nor any disinterested person called in, nor any advice or explanation of the nature of the proposed gift given to the deceased, such gift could sati given to the ecceased, such girl could have be supported; Maclennan, J.A., dissenting. Per Osler, J.A.—Apart from the question of coafidential relationship, the plaintiff's testimony as a litigant making a claim upon the estate of a deceased person in respect of a matter occurring before the death, had not been corroborated by some other material evidence, as required by s. 10 of the Evidence Act. Davis v. Walker, 23 Occ. N. 83, 5 O. L. R. 173, 1 O. W. B. 1, 745, Inter Vivos - Promissory Notes-Evi-Inter Vivos — Promissory Notes—Evidence.]—The defendant, by representations that he had been presented by one M., deceased, with several promissory notes, as a gift, a few days before the death of M., induced the plaintiff to give him a new note for the balance due by the plaintiff to M., on the old notes alleged to have been given to the defendant. The notes in question were not indorsed by the deceased, and there was no evidence of the alleged gift apart from the defendant's statement. In an action by the defendant's statement. In an action by the plaintiff, asking that the note given by him to the defendant be delivered up to him:was inadmissible to prove the fact of the do-nation alleged, the debt represented by the notes being a civil and not a commercial debt. 2. Even if the defendant's evidence were admissible, the words which he deposed as those which had been used by the deceased, viz., "ces billets, je te les donne au cas ou je were not sufficient to establish a valid donation inter vivos. Elkenberg v. Mousseau, Q. R. 19 S. C. 289.

Marriage Portion - Renunciation of Right to Benefit from Parent's Estate — Heirship.]—Under the old law, as under the Civil Code, it was possible, in a contract of marriage, for the future wife, receiving a dowry from her father and mother, to renounce her right to any benefit from their estates. 2. This right of légitime continued to exist in the province of Quebec until the date of the Civil Code, but it cannot, since the introduction of the unlimited power of disposing of property by will, be exercised to the prejudice of testamentary dispositions. 3. In order to have a right to légitime, the person claiming it must be an heir; to re-nounce Iégitime is to renounce right of sucnounce legitime is to renounce right of suc-cession. 4. The plaintiff, by a marriage con-tract made in January, 1853, having accepted certain gifts from her father and mother in lieu of her share in their future succession, thereby renounced in advance her right of succession to her father and mother, and it was held that she could not now claim anything from their estates, since she was not an heir. Duval v. Fortin, Q. R. 23 S. C.

Moneys Deposited in Bank-Terms of Deposit Receipt-Testamentary Disposition -Costs.]-Action by John R. Hill against the personal representative of his deceased father, William Hill, for a declaration that a certain deposit receipt and the moneys represented by it were the property of plaintiff and not part of the estate of his deceased father. William Hill, deceased, owned $400 on deposit in the Bank of Ottawa to his on deposit in the Bank of Ottawa to nis credit. He procured from the bank a de-posit receipt for this amount "payable to William Hill and John R. Hill, his son, or either, or the survivor." The understanding between William Hill and his son was that it should remain subject to the father's con-trol and disposition while living, and that whatever should be left at his death should then belong to the son. The father's request to the bank manager, upon which the deposit receipt issued, was "to fix the money so that his son John would get it when he was done with it." He told John himself that he wanted him to get the money when he (the father) was gone. He retained the deposit receipt intact in his own possession, and it was found amongst his papers at the time of his death. These facts are deposed to by the son John, the plaintiff:—Held, upon plaintiff's own evidence, that the purpose of William Hill, deceased, was to make a gift to his son, plaintiff, in its nature testamentary. As such it could only be made effectually by an instrument duly executed as a will. The father retaining exclusive control and disposing power over the $400 during his lifetime, the rights of the son were intended to arise only upon and after his father's death. This was in substance and in fact, a testamentary disposition of the money, and, as such, ineffectual. Action dismissed. Cost out of funds in question. Hill v. Hill, 5 O. W. R. 2, 25 Oc. N. 41, 8 O. Parent and Child — Fiduciary Relationship—Undue Influence — Principal and Agent — Absence of Independent Advice.]—In the case of a gift attacked on the ground of undue influence, something more must be shewn than the mere fact that the donce was the agent of the donor, and in the absence of proof of more the done is not called upon to shew independent advice. The fact in this case of the donee being the son of the donor was held not to alter the principle applicable, the son being, as was found on the evidence, the agent and business manager of the father; and the gift in question, which was made to the son as trustee for his children in consideration of services rendered by the son, was upheld. Replevin — Concubinage — Partners—Pleading.] — To an action for replevin of goods the subject of a gift, the defendant may plead that one of the donors was living in concubinage with the donee at the time of the gift. 2. The defendant will not be allowed to plend as against the donee that the gift is void because made by the donor in order to escape his creditors. 3. In repleying articles given by a partnership, it is not necessary to make all the partners parties if a single one of them is detaining the articles in question. 4. The defendant cannot plead to a saisie-revendication that other creditors are claiming the right to the same articles. 5. Preuve avant faire droit will be ordered where the donor alleges that he has sold the articles replevied with the assent of the donee. Rousseau v. Verdon, 5 Q. P. R. 219.

Revocation — Condition — Maintenance of Donor.]—A gift is not an onerous gift equivalent to a sale by a reason only that the donee is obliged to lodge, feed, warm, and maintain the donor. 2. A gift may be revoked on the ground of ingratitude when the donee, who is obliged to lodge, feed, warm, and maintain the donor, uses with regard to the donor base and insulting expressions and drives him from the house. Rousseau v. Majeur, O. R. 18 S. C. 447.

Revocation — Ingratitude — Arrest of Dance by Donce—Judgment in Slander.]—A donee, who causes to be imprisoned, under a judgment for damages for slander, one of the donors, an old man of 83 years of age and in bad health, thus separating him from his wife, the other donor, also ill, where the donors, who have given all the property they possess, have nothing to pay the damages except an alimentary pension, insalisable and hardly sufficient for their subsistence, which the donee allows them under the terms of the gift, is guilty of ingratitude which has the effect of revoking the gift. Depatie v. Charbonneau, Q. R. 22 S. C. 80.

Revocation — Parties — Co-done — Transfer of Rights—Mortgage—Exception—Demurrer.]—It is not necessary, in an action for the revocation of a gift on the ground of ingratitude, to bring before the Court as a party one of the donees who has since, as is alleged in the action, transferred all his rights to his co-donee, the defendant in consideration of a mortgage upon the property the subject of the gift. The neglet to make a party of one whose presence before the Court is necessary affords ground at the most for a dilatory exception, but does not cause, as a matter of law, the absolute rejection of the demand, Jacob v. Rlein, 3 Q. P. R. 519.

Creditor—Claim Arising after Gift.]—Where the donor does not intend to give and does not divest himself of the thing given, and the donee does not intend to receive the thing as a gift, there is no real donation, and art. 1039, C. C., does not apply—this article applying only where there is a real contract, and not where the contract is simulated. The thing which is nominally given may be seized, therefore, as being still in the possession of the donor. 2. A person who only becomes a creditor subsequent to the execution and registration of a simulated deed of donation of movables by his debtor, may nevertheless allege and invoke the fact of simulation, in his contestation of an opposition, based on such pretended deed of donation, made to a seizure effected by the creditor. Lighthall v. O'Brien, Q. R. 6 S. C. 153, approved. Sisenucain v. Roque, Q. R. 23 S. C. 115.

Undue Influence—Confidential Relations—Evidence—Parent and Child—Public Policy—Principal and Agent.)—The principle that, where confidential relations exi.a between donor and done, the gift is, on grounds of public policy, presumed to be the effect of those relations, which presumption can only be rebutted by shewing that the donor acted under independent advice, does not apply so strongly to gifts from parent to child or from principal to agent. Thus, in case of a gift to the donor's son, for the benefit of the latter's children, when the son had for years acted as manager of his father's busines, when he was the only child of the donor having issue, and when the donor, nine years before his death, had evidenced his intention of making the gift by signing a promissory note in favour of the son, by renewing it six years later, and by voluntarily paying it before he died, such presumption does not arise. Judgment of the Court of Appeal, 2 O. L. R. 251, 21 Occ. X. 438, reversing that of a Divisional Court, and O. R. 414, 20 Occ. N. 65, affirmed. Trusts and Guarantee Co. v. Hart, 23 Occ. N. 36, 28. C. The respondent, as one of the executors of the bonor's will, having knowledge of the fact that the portraits were bequeathed to the spellant, had no possession which could serie for purposes of prescription. HABEAS CORPUS.

Adjournment—Expenses—Costs—Discretion—Leave to Appeal.]—When the officer or other person to whom a writ of habeas corpus, is directed has obeyed it by bringing up the body and making his return, the Judge or Court may make an order for payment by the applicant of the expenses of such officer or person. Dodd's Case, 2 De G. & J. 510, followed. The costs of proceedings by habeas corpus are governed by s. 119 of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1837 c. 51, and are therefore in the discretion of the Court or Judge. Regina v. Jones, [1894] 2 Q. B. 382, followed. Where, in obedience to a habeas corpus, the person to whom it was directed produced the body of an infant before a Judge in Chambers, and filed affidavits in answer to the writ, making his return thereto, and the ap licant thereupon applied for an enlargement, which the Judge granted upon condition of the applicant paying to the respondent a sum for counsel fee and expenses, and the applicant appealed from the order embodying such condition to a Divisional Court, which dismissed the appeal, giving the applicant leave, however, to have her original application heard upon payment of the sum already ordered to be paid, and a further sum, the Court of Appeal refused the applicant leave to appeal from the order of the Divisional Court. Re Weatherull, 21 Occ. N. 256, 1 O. L. R. 542.

Affidavits—Irregularity—Croven Rules—Costa, 1—On a motion for a habeas corpus, the preliminary objections were taken that the affidavits proposed to be read in support of the prisoner's discharge had not been served upon the interested party, that the affidavits filed were not indorsed with a memorandum stating on whose behalf they were filed, and that the affidavits had been interlined and corrections had been made therein which had not been initialled and re written in the margin by the commissioner: Crown Rules 15, 163, 17, 352, 348, and 463:—Held, that these Rules governed and the irregularities should not be condoned. The applicant must pay the costs of this application, but should have leave to ronew his motion. In re Hayes, 21 Occ. N. 87.

Appliention for — Forum — Districts — Judges—Court of King's Bench—Consent. 1—A person deprived of his liberty, who wishes to obtain the issue of a writ of habeas corpus, must make his application for such writ to any Judge who may be in the district in which the prisoner is confined, and who is qualified and authorized to execcise his judicial functions therein. 2. If there be no Judge within the limits of such district, the application for a writ of habeas corpus may be made either to a Judge in any adjoining district, or to any Judge in the city of Montreal or in the city of Quebec, according as an appeal from the district where the applicant is confined would be brought to one or the other city. 3. The Court of King's Bench, appeal side, has original jurisdiction at Montreal or Quebec in matters of habeas corpus with respect to any person confined in a district from which appeals are brought to one or the other city; but a Judge of the Court of King's Bench has no jurisdiction to grant an order in Chambers in such matter, unless it be first established that there was no Judge within the limits of the district where the prisoner is confined, when the application was made to such Judge of the Court of King's Bench. 4. Where a Court of Judge is not vested with jurisdiction by law, the consent of the parties cannot confer jurisdiction.

Jurisdiction — County Court Judge — Liquor License Act — Conviction — Findings of Fact — Review.] — A Judge of a County Court has no jurisdiction to grant an order under the Habeas Corpus Act (Consolidated Statutes c. 41) unless the person applying is confined within the Judge's county. Where there is conflicting evidence in a case for selling liquor contrary to the Liquor License Act, 1896, the finding of the committing justice on questions of fact can not be reviewed on an application for an order in the nature of a habeas corpus. I. ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST — PARTIES AND SERVICE.

Absent Husband — Service — Authorization of Wife as Sole Defendant.]—When a husband who is absent is made a party to a cause for the purpose of assisting and authorizing his wife, the defendant, and when it does not appear by the report of the bailiff that any attempt has been made to serve him in this province, a petition to a Judge for authorization by the Court of the wife's being brought before the Court in the action, will be dismissed. Crédit Foncier Franco-Canadien v. Dufresne, 4 Q. P. R. 244.

Action — Parties—Joint Liability.\—An alimentary debt not being joint or indivisible, a person sued for such a debt cannot require another relative equally liable to be added as a party; but, in such a case, the defendant should be ordered to pay the half only of the alimentary allowances demanded. Larochelle v. Lafleur, Q. R. 19 S. C. 358.

Action against Wife — Authorization—Service on Husband, —Ac married woman, whose husband, made a party for the purpose of authorizing her, has not been served, may have the action dismissed with costs upon exception to the form delivered by her after having been judicially authorized to appear before the Court. 2. The plaintiff in such a case will not be permitted afterwards to serve process in the action upon the husband so made a party. Jarvis v. Allaire, 5 Q. P. R.

—Where, in an action by a married woman, her husband is made a party only to authorize and assist her, conclusions demanding a judgment in favour of "the plaintiff" must be interpreted as if they read "the plaintiff" only. 2. It is for a defendant who sets up default in the execution of a judgment ordering separation of property alleged by the plaintiff, to shew, upon his exception to the form, such default in execution. Droletv. Bélanger, 5 Q. P. R. 312.

Action to Compel Provision of Maintenance — Necessities—Relatives — Concurrent Obligations—Parties — Infanis — Tutris.]—An action for maintenance may be brought, aithough the claimant, at the date of its institution, is in possession of a sum of money sufficient to supply his or her wants for a short time to come, e.g., in this case, sufficient for about twelve months. It is not necessary that the claimant should wait until the money in hand is totally exhausted before instituting an action to have his right to maintenance determined. 2. The obligation of relatives by blood and relatives by alliance to furnish a maintenance is concurrent, and not successive. The father-inlaw may, therefore, be condemned to contribute his proportion of the maintenance of a daughter-in-law, even where it appears that the father is equally able to furnish maintenance. (See Q. R. 19 S. C. 358.) 3. The mother is entitled to sue for aliment on behalf of her children, without being named turtix to them. Larochelle v. Lafteur, Q. R. 20 S. C. 184.

Authorization of Wife — Declaration of Widowhood — Estoppel — Husband actually Alice. [—Want of authorization of a wife under the control of her husband as a party to a suit is a nullity which nothing can cure, and of which all those who have any interest existing and actual may take advantage. 2. In this case, although the defendant passed for a widow, and although she had called herself a widow in certain deeds and writings, such action on her part did not modify her absolute incapacity to be a party to the suit without authorization, where she swore that her husband was still alive, and the plaintiff had not proved that he was dead, Judgment in Q. R. 21 S. C. 566 reversed. O'Malley v. Ryan, Q. R. 23 S. C.

Authorization of Wife — Exceptions by Wife.]—A married woman can not take part in litigation, or take exception to a judgmen and to the form, without authorization. When her husband, duly called upon with her to authorize her to ester en justice, does not appear, it is deemed a refusal of authorization. In this case it was incumbent on the married woman defendant to have the authorization granted by the Judge before presenting her exceptions. Charbonneau v. Vendette, 7 Q. P. R. 164.

Authorization of Wife — Writ — Declaration.]—If a married woman is such as being authorized to be a party, it is not necessary that the authorization appear upon the writ; it is sufficient if it is alleged in the declaration. Derose v. Derose, Q. R. 25 S. C. 273.

Authorization of Wife — Want of — Exception to Form.]—In an action by a married woman, separate as to property, who alleges that she is authorized by her busband, actual want of authorization must be alleged by way of exception to the form, and an allegation to that effect contained in a defence will be set aside upon motion. Contois v. Seńeżul, 6 Q. P. R. 307.

Authorization of Wife — Pleading — Opposition — Swearing to — Proper Officer —Costs against Wife — Community — Res Judicata. |- It is not necessary to allege specially the authorization given by a Judge to a married woman to be a party to a cause, if such authorization appears somewhere in the proceedings for which such authorization is required. 2. An opposition sworn to before the prothonotary of a district different from that in which such opposition is filed, is, nevertheless, sworn to before a competent officer: Art. 23 C. P. 3. Although costs have been incurred for the purpose of obtaining possession of real estate of a married woman, it does not follow that she should be obliged to pay them in any other quality than as common, when the judgment which has been pronounced against her for such costs has not determined in which quality she is oblig-ed to pay them. Therefore, it cannot be set up, against an opposition alleging that the married woman is only obliged to pay such costs in her quality of common, that, in view of the judgment in the principal action in which she has been ordered to pay costs jointly and severally with her husband, there is res judicata as to her liability on this head. and a like ground of opposition will not be rejected as frivolous upon a motion for that Vidal v. Latulippe, Q. R. 21 8.

Community — Action by — Lusufie Husband—Curator.]—The action for damage for an injury sustained by a wife commune en biens belongs to the community, and case maintained only by the husband, or, if he has been interdict for insanity, by is curator. Sauriol v. Clermont, Q. R. 10 K. B. 294.

Community — Action by — Personal living to Wife—Witness.]—A wife, community may sue with her husband to recover damars for personal injuries sustained by her, and in such an action has a right to be a wines on her own behalf. Sullican v. Tous & Magog, Q. R. 18 S. C. 107.

That the husband alone could begin an action for and in the name of the community. 3. That the objection should be taken by defense en droit, and not by exception to the form. Goyette v. Brunelle. 3 Q. P. R. 464.

Community — Action by — Wife as Witness.]—Where in an action pertaining to the community the wife is joined with her husband, the wife has no more right to testify in the cause than if the action had been instituted by the husband alone. Dunfy v. Kelly, Q. R. 20 S. C. 231.

Conservation of Wife's Personal Property—Intervention.]—A wife contractually separate as to property may be a party to an action without the assistance or the authorization of her husband, or of a Judge, when she seeks the administration and conservation of her personal property; therefore, she may alone intervene in a cause for the conservation of her personal property; such a proceeding being only an act of simple administration Beauchamp v. Beauchamp, v. Beauchamp, v. P. K. 400.

Defamation — Wife Suing Alone.] — A married woman common as to property assisted by her husband, or upon its refusal autorized by a Judge, has a personal right of action to protect her honour, and may bring, in her own name, an action for defamation. Such action does not belong solely to the basband as chief of the community, and an exception to the form based upon that ground will be dismissed with costs. Girard v. Trembiag, 6 Q. P. R. 63.

Defence — Nullity of Marriage — Malice—Prewe Avant Faire Droit.]—In an action for an account by an infant married woman, assisted by leef husband, against her tutor, where the latter pleads, by exception to the form, the nullity of the marriage as contracted without consent, preuve avant faire droit will be ordered upon a reply to an exception alleging that such consent has been refused through malice and interest, and against the unanimous feeling of the family council. Joint Action — Goods Sold—Amendment.]—The plaintiff was described in the writ of summons as a public merchant, wife of F. A., adding the words "and the said A. to authorize his said wife." The action was for the price of goods sold in the course of the wife's business. The defendant demarred on the ground that, the plaintiff being commune en biens, the price of the goods was due to the community, and therefore the action should have been by the husband alone. After service of the demurrer, the plaintiff made a motion to amend the writ by adding "and the said F. A. also personally." This was granted on payment of costs. Pleau v. Clément, 3 Q. P. R. 406.

Joint Defondants—Service of Process on — Bailiff's Report.] — Service upon a wife, séparée de biens, but not séparée de corps, of two copies of the writ of summons, one for herself as the principal défendant, and the other for her husband, made a defendant as tutor to the plaintiff's infant children, is sufficient and regular, and is not vitiated by the fact that the bailiff alleges in his report that he served both defendants. Corbeil v. Beaudoin, 4 Q. P. R. 44.

Libel by Wife — Liability of Husband—Verdict for $10—Costs.]—Action against a husband and wife for damages for a libel published by the wife. At the trial in Vancouver the jury returned a verdict in the plaintiff's favour for $10:—Held, by Martin, J., following Seroka v. Kattenburg 17 Q. B. D. 177, that the husband was liable; and, also, that the costs should follow the event. Mackensie v. Cunningham, 22 Occ. N, 43, 8 B. C. R. 206.

Marriage of Woman Pendente Lite— Rights of Husband,]—If, during the pendency of a suit a woman who is a party to the suit is married, with a settlement under which her property is to be separate from that of her husband, the husband may obtain leave to take part in the suit for the purpose of authorizing his wife, but not on his own behalf. Toupin v. Boule, 5 Q. P. R. 137.

Married Woman—Action against.]—If a woman, although separate as to property and engaged in a business as a merchant, is sued without her husband having been cited to authorize it, the action will be dismissed. Vanasse v. Bellefeuille, 7 Q. P. R. 266.

Married Woman Sued as Widow—
Exception to Form.]—An action against a boarding-house keeper, who was beld out and declared herself to be a widow, will not be dismissed on an exception to the form, although the defendant is married and common as to property. Normandin v. Desrochers, 7 Q. P. R. 93.

Negligence — Injury to Wife.]—An action for damages for injuries caused to a married woman, common as to property, must be brought by her husband alone, and the action will, upon demurer, be dismissed as to the wife if she is made a plaintiff. Major v. Paquet, 6 Q. P. R. 20.

Recovery of Damages for Death of Son — Claim by both Husband and Wife— Community.]—In the case of an action to recover damages for the death of a son, the damages and the action to recover them, are personal, and are part of the community of property; and the husband common as to goods has the right to bring such action as the head of the community. When two plaintiffs who sue jointly, designate themselves as husband and wife, without alleging separation as to property, they are presumed to be under a legal community as to property. There is nothing to prevent a husband and wife common as to property from bringing an action jointly concerning the property of the community. St. Laurent v. Telephone Co. of Kamouraska, 7 Q. P. R.

Slander of Wife — Sole Right of Husband to Sue.]—In the case of community of goods, the husband has the sole right of action for recovery of damages for slander of his wife. 2. The wife cannot be joined with the husband in the institution of the action, even if the latter acts in his personal capacity and not solely to authorize her; and upon demurrer, the demand of the wife will be dismissed. Caron v. Larivé, 5 Q. P. R. 332.

Tort — Personal Injuries of Wife.]—A married woman common as to property may be joined with her husband in his claim as head of the community to damages, a part of which is based upon personal sufferings which she has endured. Précost v. Village of Ashuntic, Q. R. 24 S. C. 408.

Wife Sued Alone—Absence of Authorization—Nullity — Objection — Ouring — Costs.]—Proceedings taken against a wife under the control of her husband, before being authorized either by the husband or by the Court, are absolute nullities, and will be so declared upon demand even after enquéte and at the argument. 2. Nevertheless, a demand of authorization of the defendant made by the plaintiff also at the argument should be gran'ed. 3. No order can be made as to the costs of the proceedings of either party before such authorization. Demers v. Duferene, 4 Q. P. R. 130.

Wife Sued Alone — Authorization by Husband — How Shewn.]—In an order that a wife may be regarded as authorized by her husband as defendant to an action, it is not sufficient that he should have assisted during the trial by giving instructions to the attorney, and by being present, but it is necessary that such authorization should appear on the record, or that the husband should be a party to the cause with his wife, without which he escapes the jurisdiction of the Court. Thibaudeau v. Desilets, Q. R. 10 Q. B. 183.

Wife Sued Alone—Dejamation—Service of Process—Authorization of Husband—Exect on of Judgment — Goods of Community.]
—A wife commune en biens, defendant in an action, is not validly served with process unless copies of the writ and declaration are served upon her husband as well as upon her. Service at the conjugal domicii, made by leaving with the husband for the defendant a copy of the writ in which the husband is named "to authorize his wife," is insufficient and void. 2. In an action for damages for slander, against a wife under control of her husband, default of authorization of the wife, either by the husband or the Court, vitiates and renders void a judgment recovered against her. 3. The facts that the husband has received from the bailiff the copy of the writ and declaration intended for his wife, that he has chosen the advocate for the Cence, and that he has been present at the hearing, do not constitute a sufficient authorization, and the husband has the right to maintain an opposition to the judgment against the wife in an action for damages being executed against the property of the community. Thibaudeau v. Désilets, 4 Q. P. R. L.

Wife Sued Alone — Promissory Note — Exception.]—A married woman, séparée de biens, may be sued alone, without her husband, upon a promissory note signed by her; and an exception to the form upon the ground that her husband was not made a party as authorizing her, is not well founded. Fraser v. Ogitivie, 3 Q. P. R. 424, 546.

Wife Sued Alone — Separation — Luncy of Husband—Contract of Wife—Authorization—Curator—Act of Commerce—Exception to Form.]—1. A wife who has obtained a judgment declaring her séparée de biens, but has not caused it to be executed, and has in a contract made by her described heself as a wife séparée de biens, without mentioning whether such separation is contracttual or judicial, cannot set up that her contract is void by reason of the non-execution of such judgment, 2. The curator of the husband declared interdit has no capacity to authorize any act of the wife, and, consequently, is not a necessary party to an action against the wife. 3. When a husband is interdit, it is for the Court to authorize the wife, and such authorization may be given at any stage of the cause. 4. Keeping boarders is not an act of commerce necessitating marital authorization; and, even if it were, the absence of authorization would not be a ground of exception to the form. Parises
v, Huot, 3 Q. P. R. 395.

Wife Sued with Husband as Mis-encause—Failure to Serve Husband—Authorisation of Court.)—The plaintiff sued "Dane M. P. D. the wife, separate as to property, of F. J. B., and the said F. J. B., made a party to assist his said wife." Process in the action was served on the wife herself on the 15th November, 1901, at Quebec. It was not served in Court on the 21st November. On the action was entered in Court on the 21st November. On the same day the defendant alone, without he assistance of her husband, and without any authorization, appeared by her advocates. On the 23rd November, the plaintiff served those advocates with a notice of a petition, alleging that the husband hall efft the courtry not to return, that it was impossible to serve him, and praying that the Court would authorize the defendant to defend the present cause, which was an hypothecary action:—Held, that the wife not being able in such an action to defend without the assistance of the authorization of her husband, or the sthorization of the Court, the plaintiff, who such her action, have obtained the country, effect service upon him, should be refused him in the case it stood, because the husband hall efthe country, effect service upon him, should be refused him in the case it stood, because the wife was not regularity wold. The question how a married womat may be authorized or served, discussed. Or dit Foncier Frenco-Canadien v. Dulrent, Q. R. 21 S. C. 108.

Interim Order—Right to — Amount—Disbursements. Lovell v. Lovell, 5 O. W. R. 401, 640, 6 O. W. R. 621.

Interim Order—Husband's Offer to Pay for Necessaries.]—It is not a sufficient answer to a motion for interim alimony where cruelty is alleged, that the husband has offered to allow the wife to get whatever is necessary for the house, in which both are living but not on friendly terms, and to pay for all such goods. Snider v. Snider, 11 P. R. 140, distinguished. Lovell v. Lovell, 5 O. W. R. 401, 640, followed. Theakstone v. Theakstone, 10 O. L. R. 386, 6 O. W. R. 400, 436.

Interim Order—Time for Applying—Commencement of Allovaence—Merits.]—1. Under Rule 433 of the King's Bench Act, an application for interim alimony may be made as soon as the defence is filed or the time for filing one to the original statement of claim has elapsed. 2. Unless the statement of claim makes a demand for a specific sum by way of interim alimony, as contemplated by Rule 601 of the King's Bench Act, it should only be allowed from the date of the order, not from the commencement of the action. 3. The merits of the defence set up should not be looked into or considered on an application for interim alimony. Foden x Foden, 11894; P. 307, Campbell v. Campbell, 6 P. R. 128, and Keith v. Keith, 7 P. R. 41, followed. MoArthur v. McArthur, 15 Man. L. R. 151, 1 W. L. R. .

Judgment—Liability of Estate of Husband—Costs.]—The obligation to furnish an alimentary allowance is not transmissible to heirs as a debt of the estate of the person who was under obligation to furnish the allowance, even when such person has been adjudged to do so in his lifetime, in this case by a judgment pronounced in an action for separation begun by a married woman against her husband, which judgment required the husband to pay alimony to his wife during her life. In this case, also, the costs were divided, even the costs of the appeal, on account of the relationship of the parties and the fact that they had proceeded by way of joint factum under Arts. 509 et seq., C. P. C. Davidson v. Winteler, Q. R. 13 K. B. 97.

Lunatic Wife — Admission to Asylum—Removal by Relatives. —A husband on two occasions procured the release of his wite from the provincial lunatic asylum, where he had procured her admission as a 'unatic. After her second release she grew worse, becoming violent and dangerous, and he again applied for her admission, which was refused, it being insisted that she would only be admitted as a warrant patient, whereupon he took proceedings under s. 12 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 317, which resulted in her being committed to gaol as a dangerous lunatic, whence she was transferred to the asylum. Her relatives then applied to the Lientenant-Governor and obtained her release, and she went to live with them, and claimed alimony: —Held, that an action therefor would not le. Hill v. Hill, 21 Occ. N. 525, 560, 2 O. L. R. 289, 541. Leave to appeal refused in Hill v. Hill, 22 Occ. N. 107, 3 O. L. R. 202.

Multiplication of Actions.] — If a husband has sued his wife in separation from bed and board, and recovered by judgment in his favour, while a similar action by the wife is still pending, the latter, who has demanded a pension alimentaire in her action, will not be permitted to bring a new action for alimony, as she can obtain such alimony in the case already pending. 111. COMMUNITY.

Action by Wife — Authorisation by Husband — Deckaration—Personal Property.1—Article 1298, C. C., does not take away from a wife, common as to property, the right of exercising, with the authorization of her husband, personal actions belonging to her. 2. It is necessary, however, that the declaration in such an action should make it appear that the personal property which she claims does not fall into the community. Donohue v, Donohue, 4 Q. P. R. 300.

Action by Wife Alone—Tort—Refusal of Husband to Join. |—A married woman, commune en biens, authorized de justice upon the refusal of her husband, may maintain an action in her own name alone to recover damages for injuries to her person and her honour by acts of violence of which she has been the victim, 2. Although the compensation which she obtains may be the property of the community, the principle of the action must chiefly be considered, and it has a character peculiarly related to her person and honour, which she has the right to protect even against her husband. Baker v. Gingras, Q. R. 20 S. C. S.

Death of One Consort — Continuation of Community — Inventory—Prescription.]

1845, the common assets consisted of bare necessaries of small value and exempt from seizure. There was no inventory or processerbul de carence made, and, subsequently, the survivor contracted a second marriage. In an action by a child of the first marriage claiming a share in continuation of community:—Held, that there was no necessity for an inventory of property of such insignificant value, and that failure to make an inventory or process-verbal re carence did not, under the circumstances, effect a continuation of community. Judgment in Q. R. 9 Q. B. 44 reversed. King v. McHendry, 29 Qe. N. 373, 30 S. C. R. 450.

offt by Husband to Child — Fraud on Wife.]—A gift of the property of the community made by the husband in favour of one of the children of the marriage cannot, whatever the advantages which the gift confers upon the child, even to the prejudice of the other children of the marriage, constitute a fraud as against the wife so as to enable her to claim that the gift shall be set aside as a nullity. Jodoin v. Birtz, Q. R. 22 S. C. 443.

Plea of — Exception to Form.}—Community between flushand and wife, who are sued for damages, although it is a ground of defence upon the merits, may be pleaded by an exception to the form if it constitutes a good defence. Shank v. Bourassa, 4 Q. P. R. 287.

Fights of Wife—Pleading—Demurer,
—A wife common as to property has no right of action to reclaim rights which belong to the community. 2. The proper procedure to have an action dismissed as regards her, is by demurrer and not by exception to the form. Desrouard v. Forticr, 5 Q. P. R.

IV. DIVORCE.

Adultery of Husband — Laches—Cutody of Children.]—The petitioner and respondent were married in 1886, and three were two children of the marriage. The respondent left Nova Scotia in 1889. If committed adultery before leaving Nova Scotia, but the petitioner did not become awar of it until shortly before instituting the proceedings:—Held, that the petitioner wis not railty of any laches; and a decree for the dissolution of the marriage must pass with costs; the petitioner to have the cutody of the children. Frazer y, Frazer, 21 Occ. N. 356.

Adultery of Husband—Inches — [tree] parties were married in 1876, and had sered children. adultery at various times during the preceding ten years:—Held, that the petitioner was not guilty of laches; and there must be a dissolution of the marriage on the ground of adultery; the petitioner to have the custody of the children, and the respondent to have access to them on terms to be settled; the sun to be paid by the respondent for alimony and for maintenance of the children to be settled by the Registrar; the petitioner to have the costs of the petition and action. Baker v. Baker, 21 Occ. N. 357.

Adultery of Wife — Previous Separation—Held, that where a husband separates from his wife on account of her intemperance, but makes no provision for her, thereby leaving her without any means of support, he is not entitled to a divorce on the ground of adultery committed by her after the separation. Forrest v. Forrest and Morton, 21 Occ. N. 219, 8 B. C. R. 19.

Ecclesiastical Decree-Effect of-Civil Consequences — Community — Alimony — Custody of Child—Maintenance—Costs of Action.]—In spite of an ecclesiastical decree declaring a marriage invalid on account of a relationship in the fourth degree between the contracting parties, in respect of which there has been no dispensation, the civil consequences of the marriage continue until judgment of a civil Court declares it void. Therefore, pending a suit by the husband against the wife to have the marriage declared void, the husband and wife continue to be regarded as such in their civil relations, the community stipulated for in the marriage contract continues to exist and the husband continues to be obliged to support his wife. 2. A child being born of such marriage after the canonical decree and after the husband and wife have ceased to live together, and such child being only a few months old, the wife, who naturally has the guardianship and care of the child, has a right, without being appointed guardian, to obtain from the husband, pending the suit, a proper provi-sion for the child. S. the wife has also the right to obtain from the husband alimony for herself pending the suit. 4. She has also the right to obtain from the husband, head of the community stipulated for in the marriage contract, a provision for her costs of a defence in good faith to the action. It is for the plaintiff, as head of the community, to defray all the expenses of the action both on his own part and on the part of the defence; such expenses are a charge upon the community. Levesque v. Ouellet, Q. R. 22 8. C. 181.

Effect of Divorce not Actually Declared Void.]—A woman who has obtained a divorce and has re-married, has no status as the widow of her first husband upon his death, so long as her divorce has not been declared void, Fitz-Allan v. Rieutord, 6 Q. P. R. 111.

Foreign Divorce—Criminal Conversation—Alienation of Affections—Damages.]—The plantiffs wife separated from him with, as was found on the evidence, his consent, and after some years obtained a divorce from him and valid according to the law of this province. She then went through the cremony of marriage with the defendant, and lived with him as his wife for some years before this action, which was brought to recover damages for criminal conversation and alienation of affections. The latter branch was abandoned at the trial, but on the former the jury allowed $5,000 damages, and judgment was entered for this sum:—Held, MacMahon, J., dissenting, that, nowithstanding the separation and the divorce, the action lay, but that the damages were grossly excessive, and on this ground, and on the ground of improper reception of evidence, a new trial was granted. Fer MacMahon, J. The separation and subsequent conduct amounted to an absolute abandonment of his wife by the trial was solute abandonment of his wife by the trial was found to the action. Judgment of Anglin, J., 3 O. W. E. 561, respectively. Milloy v. Wellington, 24 Occ. N. 318, 3 O. W. R. 37, 501, 4 O. W. R. 82: 6 O. W. R. 437, C. V. D. 8 O. L. R. 308.

Fo eign Divorce—Invalidity—Service on Wife.]—In a suit to declare voic a marriage contracted by a woman who had obtained in the United States of America a divorce from her first husband, upon the ground that such divorce is void, that question cannot be decided upon an exception to the form alleging that the service of process was illegal and that the woman should have been served as the wife of the first husband. Stephens v. Miller, 5 Q. P. R. 397.

V. LIABILITY OF ONE FOR CONTRACTS AND TORTS OF THE OTHER,

Contract of Wife for Husband—Invalidity—Firm Name—Presumption.]—When a wife, separate as to property, who has, by request of her husband, registered a declaration to the effect that she is carrying on business under a certain firm name, contracts obligations for her husband under such firm name, such obligations are absolutely void, according to Art. 1301, C. C. 2. The facts that she has derived no personal advantage from the business carried on under such firm name, and that the business has chiefly served to pay the debts of her husband, make a strong presumption that she has contracted for him, 3. She cannot engage the property for the purpose of guaranteeing the obligations of the husband. Housen v. Buckett, Q. R. 19 S. C. 418.

Debts of Husband—Contract of Wife to Pay—Incalidity—Stranger, —A contract by a married woman séparée de biens, to pay the debts of her husband, is void, even where the wife declares to the creditor that she is borrowing to pay her own debts, which the lender believes. Such a contract is an absolute nullity, and the nullity of it may be invoked by a third party, the holder of an immovable mortgaged to guarantee such obligation. Judgment of Court of Review, Q. R. 13 S. C. 129, reversed. Globenski v. Boucher, Q. R. 10 K. B. 318, 321.

Debts of Husband Before Dissolution of Community—Obligation by Wife— Nullity — Public Policy.]—Judgment of the Superior Court in review, 6 Rev. Jur. 13. affirming judgment in Q. R. 15 S. C. 445, affirmed for the reasons given in the Courts below. Bastien v. Filiatrault, 31 S. G. R. 129. Debts of Wife—Costs—Application by Husband for Custody of Children.]—Where a wife leaves her husband without justification, she is not entitled against him to her costs of unsuccessfully resisting his application by habeas corpus for the custody of the children of the marriage. In re McPhalen, 10 B. C. R. 40.

Debts of Wife Before Marriage— Married Women's Property Act — Property Acquired from Wife — Evidence — Deduc-tions.]—The Married Woman's Property Act, 1100m.;—The Married Woman's Property Act, R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 112, s. 25, makes a hus-band liable for the debts of his wife con-tracted by her before marriage "to the ex-tent of all property whatsoever belonging to the wife which he has acquired or become entitled to from or through his wife, after entitled to from or through his wife, after deducting therefrom any payments made by him" in respect to any such debts, etc. In an action against the defendant R. for goods supplied to his wife before marriage, evidence was given by the plaintiff's solicitor to shew that on the examination of the wife before a commissioner, the defendant R. was present and stated, among other things, that he had received from his wife three promis-sory notes, for amounts and due at dates which he mentioned :-Held, that the evidence was not admissible, the best evidence being that taken down by the commissioner, and which he was required to return to the Court. 2. That there was nothing in the evidence to bring the notes referred to within the language "property belonging to the wife which the defendant had "acquired or become entitled to" through the wife, or to discharge the burden resting upon the plaintiff to shew acquisition or title by or in the husband .-Semble, where money was received and payments made by the husband, that the plaintiff would have to shew a balance remaining in his hands, and that he could not put in one side of the transaction without the other. Bauld v. Reid, 36 N. S. Reps. 127.

Gods Ordered Through Wife—Ackmouled/ment—Domicil — Change.]—Assuming that the defendant and wife were separated as to property, the fact that the household linen goods in question were purchased of the property of the fact that the household linen goods in question were purchased at the gods of the transaction throughout, his personal visit to the vendor, his furnishing a sketch of his own family crest to be embroidered on the linen, by his promise to pay for the goods on arrival, and by r letter to the vendor, and by the transaction throughout, his personal visit to the vendor, his furnishing a sketch of his own family crest to be embroidered on the linen, by his promise to pay for the goods on arrival, and by r letter to the vendor's attorneys in which he stated that he had authorized the insurance of the goods at his own expense, and further said, "I do not see why I should be called upon to pay him (the vendor) until I have received the goods and checked them off before a linen expert, etc."

2. Change of domicil from Montreal to New York is not legally established by the fact that a person born in Montreal, and having his domicil there, went to New York and married there, and subsequently lived in New York State for a time with his mother-in-law, and at a hotel, and then in a furnished house in New Jersey. There must be actual residence in the place selected, coupled with the intention of the person to make it the seat of his principal establishment: Art. 80, C. C. Octatut v. Tiffin, Q. R. 23 S. C. 175.

Tort of Both—Slander—Action against Both—Liability of Husband—Business Carried on by Both.]—The wife of the decindant managed and worked his cheese factory. With the object of taking away customers from the plaintiff, who was in the same business, she stated that he gave bad measure, and did so in the presence of her husband, who made the same statement. The plaintiff brought, on account of these statements, an action for damages against the husband and wife, but without conclusion against the latter:—Held, that the husband is responsible for the acts of his wife during the tacit execution of the duties he has intrusted her with, and therefore for the damages which she has caused by uttering injurious words against some person, even if no special conclusions have been taken against her by the action. Dubuc v. Trottier, Q. R. 19 S. C. 202.

Tort of Husband—Keeping Vicious Dog—Separate Property of Wife, 1—A wife, separate as to property, is liable for damages caused by a vicious dog belonging to her husband, and harboured at the common domicil which is her private property, particularly when it is proved that the dog was so harboured not only without any objection or protest on her part, but with her full consent and approval, notwithstanding that she had full knowledge of the dangerous character of the dog. Hugron v. Statton, Q. R. 18 S. C. 200.

Torts of Wife—Community—Participation—Defamation,]—A husband in general is not responsible for the torts or quasi-torts committed by his wife, nor is the community responsible for them. 2. There is no exception to this rule except when the bushand has acted as his wife's accomplice or has participated in the tort or quasi-tort by haring aided, ordered, or authorized her. 3. In this case (slander), the bushand having ordered his wife to be silent and to go into the house as soon as he understood what she was saying, there was no fault or complicity of his part, and therefore, to responsibility of the husband or of the community for the wrong committed by the wife. Fortier v. Demers, Q. R. 21 S. C. 643.

VI. MARRIAGE CONTRACT.

After-acquired Property — Donatio Mortis Causa—Separation — Replevin—Parties.]—A marriage contract stipulated that "all the furniture which should be borded that any time into the dwelling-house of the future husband and wife, by either one of them, should belong to the future wife.\(^1\) Asparation de corps having been adjudged between the husband and wife, the wife, accompanied by her father, went to the house of the husband, and removed the furniture which she alleged belonged to her by virtus of the clause above quoted, and this furniture was transferred to the house of her father, where she lived. The husband replevied the furniture in an action brought against the father and daughter:—Held, that the clause quoted constituted a gift of future property mortis causa, and, therefore, the furniture remained the property of the husband until his death. That, in the circumstances, the husband was right in bringing his action against both his wife and her father. Goyette v. Leclerc, Q. R. 23 S. C. 542.

After-acquired Property—Contestation of Opposition—Donatio Mortis Causa.]—A gift to the wife of all the household furniture in the dwelling-house of the husband and wife is a gift of property present and future, which is not a gift mortis causa, but which takes effect at any time, and there is nothing illegal or immoral about it. 2. It may be alleged in answer to the contestation of an opposition, based upon such a gift, that certain of the effects were bought by the husband after the marriage for his wife to replace like effects which had been sold, this answer being an explanation of an allegation of the opposition raised by the contestation. Allan v. Trihey, 5 Q. P. R. 298, Q. R. 24 S. C. 12.

Ante-nuptial Contract—Specific Perjormance—Will — "Voluntarily"—Executor —Costs.]—A woman, in consideration of a man marrying her, promised him that she would make him her sole heir: he married her, and after marriage, in acknowledgment of the ante-nuptial contract, she signed a writing stating I voluntarily promised a bin my sole heir. by virtue of this contract he is my sole heir. She died having (after the acknowledgment) disposed of her etate by will to the exclusion of her hushand:—Held, that the ante-nuptial agreement was a binding contract on the part of the woman to leave by will her property to her husband, and should be specifically performed; and that "voluntarily" in the acknowledgment meant "of her own free will."
—Held, also, on the facts, that the executor named in the will acted reasonably in defending the action and resisting the appeal, and was therefore entitled to charge the estate for his costs. Raser v. McQuade, 11

Community—Stipulation for Usufruct of Survivor—Registration,]—A contract of marriage provided that there should be universal community, and also stipulated a donation to the surviving consort of the usufruct during life, of all property existing at the dissolution of the community by the death of the consort dying first. Nothing existed in the community, at the date of its dissolution, that would not have formed part of it by mere operation of law:—Held, that the stipulation, in such marriage contract, of usuality of the consort although described as a donation, is not a donation but a marriage covenant, and is not subject to the formality of registration. Art. 1911, C. C. Huot v. Bienvenu, Q. R. 21 8. C. 341.

Construction—"Meubles et Effets Mobiler"—Money in Bank.]—Unless the context clearly indicates the contrary, the words "meubles et effets mobiliers" in a marriage eulract comprise money deposited in a bank. Schoerin V. Montreal City and District Savings Bank, Q. R. 21 S. C. 381.

Donation a Cause de Mort—Creditors of Husband.)—A gift to the wife in a mariage contract, "of all the furniture and furnishings which the expected husband will have in his dwelling at the time of his death," is a gift of goods in the future, and, therefore, made à cause de mort. This grant takes det only on the death of the husband, and in his lifetime the wife has no right to the goods granted; she has no title to prevent the seizure and sale thereof at the suit of the creditors of the husband. Dorval v. Préfontaine, Q. R. 14 K.B. 80.

Donation of Chattels—Time of Taking Effect—Death of Husband—Rights of Creditors in Lifetime.]—A clause in a marriage contract providing that, "In consideration of the honest and sincere affection which the intended busband bears towards the intended wife, he makes a donation to her of all his furniture, furnishings, and movable effects to be actually found in his dwelling house, and also of all such furniture, furnishings, and movable effects which the intended husband may in the future have in his dwelling house," does not amount to a gift in favour of the donor, but should be considered a gift "3c cause de mort," which would take effect only at the death of the husband, and, as a consequence, the goods thus given, becoming the property of the wife only at the death of the husband, can be seized and sold to satisfy a judgment against the latter. Prefontaine V. Dorval, Q. R. 26 S. C. 301.

Douaire Prefix Une Fois Paye et Sans Retour—Civil Code—Interest of Wife—Interest of Children,]—A clause in a marriage contract, made before the coming into force of the Civil Code, by which the husband gives his wife the sum of $4,000, douaire prefix une fois payé et sans retour, interpreted according to the law prior to the Code, does not import a departure from the well established principle underlying dower, of usufruct in the wife and property in the children; and therefore the children have a vested proprietary interest in the dower and become entitled to claim it on the death of the parents. Birks v. Kirkpatrick, Q. R. 27 S. C. 51.

Gift to Wife—Contemplation of Death—Creditors.]—A clause in a marriage contract, stipulating that all household effects and furniture which shall at any time be brought into the conjugal domicil by either of the consorts shall belong to the wife, is neither a gift of present property, nor a gift of future property made in contemplation of death permissible in a marriage contract, but purports to be a gift of future property inter vivos, and is illegal and of no effect. Moreover, such stipulation is void inasmuch as it would enable the husband to confer benefits upon his wife during the marriage, contrary to the terms of Art. 1265, C. C. The husband has, therefore, a right, notwithstanding such clause, to oppose the seizure, by a judgment creditor of his wife, of articles of furniture acquired by him after the marriage and brought into the common domicil. Judgment in Q. R. 16 S. C. 273 reversed. Desrochers v. Roy, Q. R. 18 S. C. 70.

Gift to Wife—Expenditure in Purchase of Land—Deed Notice—Registration—Rights of Mortgage—Rights of Children of Marriage.]—The husban. by the marriage contract promised to _pend, within five years, $7.000, which he gave to his wife (separate as to property), in the purchase of an immovable in the name of the wife, but in which she should have only the usufruct, and the children the property. After the marriage, the wife, with the authorization of her husband, bought an immovable in her own name. There was immovable in her own name. There was nothing either in the deed of sale, nor in any other writing, which shewed that this purchase was made with the money of the husband, or with the sum given in the marriage contract; on the contrary, everything shewed that it was the wife who was purchasing for herself and with her own money, and so the matter appeared at the registry Afterwards the wife borrowed money from the plaintiff, and, with the authorization of her husband, hypothecated the immovable as her absolute property to the plain-tiff. The plaintiff having caused the immovable to be seized under his execution against the wife, her children claimed it by virtue of the marriage contract, and they proved orally that the intention of the husband and wife, at the time of the purchase, was to make it in order to conform to the contract of marriage, and that the husband had himself furnished the purchase money in fulfilment of the contract:—Held, that the claim of the children could not, upon such testimony, prevail against the plaintiff; that, in order to prevail against him, the deed of sale or some other registered deed should have mentioned that the purchase was made with the sum given by the busband to the wife; that the plaintiff, in consequence, had the right to cause the whole of the immovable to be sold as the property of the wife. Gaudreau v. Tetu, Q. R. 20 S. C. 402.

Gift to Wife-Future Payment-Insolvency of Husband-Ranking on Estate-Registration-Creditors-Loan by Wife.]-In a marriage contract the giving by the future husband to his future wife of a sum of money which she "shall have and take, when it shall please her, sur les plus clairs et ap-parent biens of the future husband," is lawful when such gift has been made without fraud, when the husband was not insolvent at the time of the contract, and when the debt of the creditor contesting the gift did not exist at such time, and the wife can claim such sum at the time of the subsequent insolvency of the husband and rank therefor with the other creditors of the husband upon the estate. 2. The marriage contract may be set up in opposition to the subsequent credi-tors of the husband, if it has been registered at the place where the husband and wife had their domicil at the time it was entered into, even when it has not been registered until later at the place where the bankruptcy has been declared. 3. A contract of loan between husband and wife is valid, and the wife can claim the sum lent against the estate of the husband equally with the other creditors. In re Denis and Kent, Q. R. 18 S. C.

Gift to Wife—Insolvency of Husband— Dower—Renunciation of—Hypothec—Registration,]—A gift in a marriage contract by the intending husband to his intended wife, of the furniture and household effects garnishing the common domicil, is deemed to be by gratuitous title, and is invalid as against a creditor of the husband, donor, who was insolvent at the time of the marriage. 2. Dower, whether customary or conventional, is not a gift but a debt, and is by onerous title. This rule applies to conventional dower when it exceeds the customary dower which it replaces. 3. Renunciations to dower are to be very strictly construed in favour of the wife; and even where, as in the present case, the marriage contract contains what purports to be a renunciation to dower. whether customary or prefix, the stipulation of a life rent payable to the wife, which rent is expressly stated to be in lieu of dower. is in effect a stipulation of conventional dower, and is governed by the same rules which govern dower. Such stipulation cannot, therefore be set aside by a creditor with-out proving knowledge by the wife of her husband's insolvency at the date of the mar-riage. 4. The wife has no legal hypothec to secure the payment of conventional dower, and the registration of a mere notice, as provided for legal hypothec, without description of the property affected, does not charge the husband's property with a hypothec in favour of the wife. Turgeon v. Shannon, Q. R. 20 S. C. 135.

Universal Community—Don Mutuel—Registration.]—A marriage contract contained a clause whereby the contracting parties made to each other a mutual gift of all the property which might belong to the one who should die first, "en jouir en usufruit sa vie durant à sa caution juratoire et gardant vieirié." The only property affected belonged to the community:—Held, that the donation was within Art. 1411, C. C., and did not require registration, as the clause was diviside, and the stipulation as to universal community merely a marriage covenant, and not subject to the rules and formalities applicable to gifts. Judgments in Q. R. 21 S. C. 341 and 12 K. S. 44, affirmed. Huot v. Bienenn, 33 S. C. R. 370.

VII. MATRIMONIAL OFFENCES.

Adultery of Wife—Mourning,1—The mourning equipment of the wife is part of her portion as survivor, and a wife who has been adjudged guilty of adultery cannot recover the value of such mourning (deal) from the heirs of her husband. Bradley v. Ménard, Q. R. 18 S. C. 382.

Alienation of Husband's Affection—Action for—Summary Dismissal.]—The plaintiff sued another woman for alienating her husband's affections, committing adultery with him, and inducing him to leave the plaintiff and go to a foreign country, whereby she was deprived of his support and services and of the statutory right to proceed against him for non-support:—Held, following Lelis v. Lambert, 24 A. R. 653, that the action would not lie; and a summary order was made under Rules 250-261 striking out the statement of claim as disclosing no reasonable cause of action, and dismissing the action. Lawry v. Tuckett-Lawry, 2 O. L. R. 162.

Action by Wife against Husband— Promissory Note—Indorsement—Contract.]— In 1882 the respondent made a promissory note for $10,000 in favour of J. L., payable on demand. This note was indorsed by the payee to her sister, the maker's wife. In 1849 an action was brought on the note by the indorsee against her husband, the maker, which, at the trial was dismissed on the ground that the Married Women's Property Act did not authorize such an action: 19 Occ. N. 326. On appeal to the Court en banc the Judges were equally divided in opinion, and the judgment at the trial stood affirmed: 20 Occ. N. 136, 32 N. S. Reps. 1. By R. S. N. S., 5th ser., c. 94, a married woman in Nova Scotia holds her separate personal property, not reduced into possession by her husband, as if she were a feme sole, and the Act of 1898, c. 22, gives her the same civil remedies against every person, including her husband, as an unmarried woman has:-Held, reversing the judgment, that the note sued on was personal property of the wife not reduced into possession, and the action could be maintained under the above Acts by the wife against her husband. Michaels v. Michaels, 20 Occ. N. 450, 30 S. C. R. 547.

Administration by Wife — Agent's Commission.]—Although a wife, separée de biens, can by herself do all acts and make all contracts which concern the administration of her property, she cannot, without the authority of her husband, validly contract to give a commission to an agent who shall effect a sale of her immovable property, such a contract not being an act of administration. Bourdon v. Bourdeau, Q. R. 18 S. C. 136.

Chattels - Domicil-Married Women's Property Ordinance, N. W. T.—Construction—Constitutional Law—N. W. T. Act.]— Whether a husband and his wife are living together or apart, her domicil in legal con-templation follows his. Where, therefore, a man domiciled in the Territories married in Ontario a woman domiciled there, and thereafter they resided in the Territories, it was that as to furniture belonging to the wife brought by her to the Territories, the question whether it passed to the husband jure mariti or was the wife's separate property, depended upon the law of the Territorles .- Ordinance No. 16 of 1889, enacted: "A married woman shall in respect of her personal property, have all the rights and be subject to all the liabilities of a feme sole, and may alienate and by will or otherwise deal with personal property as if she were unmarried:"—Held, that this Ordinance referred only to such property of a married woman as was covered by the provisions of the N. W. T. Act, R. S. C. 1886, c. 50, ss. 36-40. Conger v. Kennedy. 2 Terr. L. R. 186; reversed 28 S. C. R. 397.

Contract—Pleading—Proof of Separate Estate.]—In an action against a married woman on a contract, it is not necessary under the Married Women's Property Act of 1895 (N. B.) to allege on the record, or prove on the trial as a fact, that either at the time the contract was made, or at the time the action was commenced, she had or was possessed of separate property. Judgment against Married Woman — Payable out of Separate Estate — Proceeds of Insurance Policy on Life of Husband—Trust in Favour of Wife.]—The defendant judgment debtor was named as sole beneficiary in the contract of insurance upon the life of her husband, and sec. 159 of the Insurance Act, R. S. O. 1897 ch. 103, in such cases enacts that "such contract shall (subject to the right of the assured to apportion or alter as hereinafter enacted) create a trust in favour of the said beneficiary or beneficiaries, according to the intent so expressed or declared; and, so long as any object of the trust remains, the money payable under the contract shall not be subject to the under the contract shall not be subject to the control of the assured," etc.;—Held, the effect of this section was to create a statutory trust of the money payable under the policy in favour of the wife without restraint upon anticipation, but subject to be defeated upon the happening of either of two contingencies, the wife predeceasing her husband, or the revocation of her appointment as beneficiary and appointment of a child or children in her place as heppefeigive under a 100 of the her place as beneficiary under s. 160 of the Insurance Act. Neither of these contingencies happened, and upon the death of the husband, the absolute right to the money became vested in the wife. Her original interest in the trust was separate property within the contemplation of the Married Women's Property Act, and it necessarily follows that the fruits of the trust must also be regarded as satisfy the judgment obtained by plaintiffs. Doult v. Doelle. 4 O. W. R. 525, 5 O. W. R. 288, 253, 413, 6 O. W. R. 39, 10 O. L. R. 411.

Such nullity being absolute and d'ordre public, involves the nullity of everything which is attached to it; and in this case, the security given to guarantee the obligation of the wife is a subsidiary obligation, depending upon the existence of the principal obligation, and consequently the nullity of the principal obligation necessarily involves the nullity of the security. 3. An obligation prohibited by law is not a natural obligation, and it cannot be the subject of security. 4. Such nullity, being d'ordre public, is inherent in the debt; it is an infirmity in the debt which the surety may invoke as well as the wife herself. Sutherland v. Bérard, Q. R. 13 K. 128.

Mortgage for Benefit of Husband—Burden of Proof.]—By the true construction of art, 1301 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada, a wife's mortgage of her separate property is void, both as to the debt contracted and as to the disposition, if it is in any way for her husband's purposes. Ignorance on the part of the lender that the money was borrowed for the husband's purposes is of no avail, and the burden is on him to prove that it was not so borrowed. Judgment in Trust and Loan Co. v. Kerouack, Q. R. 12 K. B. 281, affirmed. Trust and Loan Co. of Canada v. Gauther, 1704] A. C. 94.

Obligations Undertaken for Husband—Promissory Notes—Burden of Proof —Presumption.]—Although the obligation of the wife who is separate as to property, when she binds herself with her husband, is not not null if the obligation be for her own business and profit, the burden of proof is on the creditor to establish that it was for her business and profit, and in the absence of such proof the presumption is that she bound herself for her husband. 2. The wife separate as to property will not be condemned on promissory notes s, grade by her, which were either renewal' of notes made and signed by her husband, alone, or which were given for goods furnished on the husband's order, and charged to him in the books of the creditor. Mc-Clatchie v. Gilbert, Q. R. 24 S. C. 387.

Personal Property — Jus Disponendi—Matrimonial Domicil—Conflict of Laws.]—The law of the matrimonial domicil regulates the rights of the bushand and wife as to the movable property of either of them:—Held, therefore, where the matrimonial domicil was Ontario, that personal property which by the law of Ontario was the separate property of the wife, remained such on the removal of the parties to the Territories; and furthermore was subject to the provisions of the Ordinances of the Territorial Legislature, subsequently passed, relating to the personal property of married women. Brooks v. Brooks, Z Terr. L. R. 289.

Rents and Profits — Sale of Land — Necessity for Concurrence of Husband.]—A married woman married before the commencement of the Married Women's Property Act, 58 V. c. 24, is entitled under s. 4 (1) to the rents and profits of her real estate during her life, but may not, without the concurrence of her husband, dispose of her real estate so as to deprive the husband of his tenancy by the curtesy. Debury v. Debury, 21 Occ. N. 510, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 278.

Sale of—Payment of Husband's Debt—Nullity — Reimbursement of Purchaser.]—A married woman, separate as to property may sell one of her immovables to pay the debt of her husband—in this case to secure the liberation of her husband then under arrest at the suit of one of his creditors—and such sale does not fall under the prohibition of art, 1301, C. C. 2. In any event, even if the wife could assert the nullity of the sale, she could succeed in the action only upon offering to reimburse the purchaser the amount which he has paid her, over and above the price of sale, to extinguish her personal debt. De Kerouack v. Gauthier, Q. R. 20 S. C. 320.

Separate Business - Consent of Hus. Separate Business — Consent of His-band—Certificate—Place of Doing Business, 1— Under the provisions of R. S. N. S., 5th ser., c. 94, s. 53, when a married woman does, or proposes to do, business on her separate account, in addition to filing her husband's consent thereto, she is to record a certificate in writing setting forth her name and that of her husband, the nature of the business, and the place where it is, or is proposed, to be carried on, and giving, "if practicable," the street and the number on the street; and where the nature of the business, or the place where the hattie of the schanged, a new cer-where it is carried on, is changed, a new certiff, who carried on business as a grocer in a city, under a license from her husband, ena city, under a needs from her hashing, end abling her to carry on such business, filed a certificate giving the particulars required by the Act, except as to the street and the number on the street, as to which it was set out that it was not practicable to do so, as the premises had not yet been selected. Goods claimed by the plaintiff as her separate proclaimed by the plaintin as her separate property having been levied upon by the defendant, as sheriff of the county, under a writ of execution for the husband's debt.— Held, that it was incumbent upon the plaintiff to select the premises before filing her certificate, the provision being intended to apply not only to towns having streets named and numbered, but to towns which had not streets so named and numbered :-Held, also, that the words "the place" meant the place in the city, town, or municipality where it was proposed to do the business, and that where the place was changed a new certifi-cate must be recorded. Pearce v. Archibald, 34 N. S. Reps. 543.

Sheriff's Sale — Purchase by Husbad—Folle Enchère,] — A husband, séparé en biens, may validly purchase at a sheriff's sale an immovable belonging to his wife; and, if he fails to pay the price, the usual proceedings for resale may be taken against him. Buchanan v. O'Brien, Q. R. 18 S. C. 343.

IX. SEPARATION.

Abandonment of One Claim — Proceeding with the Other — Allegations Required—Notice.]—In an action for separation from bed and board and as to property the plaintiff may abandon her claim for separation from bed and board and proceed with that for separation of goods only, provided always that the allegations in the action and the conclusions to be drawn thereform be stated in a manner to justify the latter claim, and that the notice required, in cases of separation of goods, to be given in the newspapers, has been given. Rielle v. Dubreuit, 7 Q. P. R. 66.

Action for — Evidence of Parties.]—In an action for separation de corps the husband and wife may be heard as witnesses, even in support of the action. Talbot v. Guilmartin, Q. R. 10 K. B. 564.

Action for — Misnomer of Wife—Wife Separate as to Property—Marriage Contract —Exclusion from Community—Exception to Form.]—A husband sued for separation from bed and board cannot object that all the prenomens of his wife are not set out, especially where the marriage contract and extract from the marriage register are filed, and where she uses the prenomen by which she is known, and which is mentioned in her petition pour ester en justice. 2. The fact that a woman, suing for separation from bed and board, is described in the writ as separate as to property, whilst in the contract of marriage (which she has not alleged) exclusion from community is stipulated for, is not a ground for exception to the form. Roy v. Quesnel, 7 Q. P. R. 136.

Action for — Particulars.]—A wife suing for a separation from her husband will be ordered to give particulars shewing when and how her husband has seriously injured her, and in what way he has rendered an existence in answer impossible and insupportable by her; indicating in what circumstances or with what person he has held slanderous conversations charged against him, and in what circumstances he refused to answer when she spoke to him. Melançon v. Bédard, 4 Q. P. R. 147.

Action for—Trial—Reconciliation—Preliminary Hearing, 1—Where, in an action for separation de corps, the parties have, with the assent of the Court, divided the hearing to allow one of the parties, who alleges a reconciliation, to prove the facts constituting it, reserving the right to prove the other facts alleged by the parties, after adjudication upon the reconciliation, the opposite party will not be permitted to reopen the hearing to prove facts having nothing to do with the reconciliation before adjudication by the Court upon this first question. Christin v. Lafontaine, 5 Q. P. R. 198.

Alimentary Allowance—Authorization of Wife.)—A wife who is not authorized to leave the conjugal domicil cannot demand an alimentary allowance, in the course of an action for separation de corps. Protain v. Prevott, 5 Q. P. R. 103.

Alimentary Allowance — Rights of Wife ogainst Relatives — Past Debts.]—A wife, common as to property, abandoned by her husband, who is absent in a foreign country, against whom she has begun an action for separation of the person, which is actually pending, may, her poverty being shewn, and with the authorization of a Judge, claim against a relative or connection who is bound to provide her with support, an alimentary allowance for herself and her children. 2. A wife who, before an action in which she claims an alimentary allowance, has contracted debts in respect of the means of livelihood, may claim an alimentary allowance in respect of the past in order to pay such debts. Girard v, Vincent, Q. R. 21 S. C. 206.

Conservatory Attachment — Affidavit for.]—A wife commune en biens who sues for a separation de corps, to obtain a conservatory attachment to which the law entitles her, ought to set out in her affidavit the facts which would entitle her to a saisic-arrêt before judgment or to a conservatory attachment. Mongeau v. Trudeau, 7 Q. P. R. 70.

Conservatory Attachment — Affidavit for.]—In an action for separation from bed and board, an affidavit of the wife, who is separate as to property, that without the benefit of a conservatory attachment she will lose her recourse in respect of alimony and of the donations made by the marriage contract, is insufficient, and such seizure will be quashed on petition. Gratton v. Desormiers, 7 Q. P. R. 88.

Evidence — Facts Anterior to Reconciliation. 1—Under arts. 196 and 197 of the Civil Code, the plaintiff in an action for separation from bed and board is not entitled to adduce evidence regarding facts anterior to the last reconciliation between the consorts, without first having proved some fact which, if not of sufficient gravity alone to warrant a separation, should at least strongly support the demand therefor. Courteau v. Skelly, Q. R. 20 S. C. 216.

Grounds — Insanity.] — The fact that the husband is insane and unable to receive or provide for his wife is not a ground for separation from bed and board. Deneen v. McLeod, 5 Q. P. R. 391.

Intervention by Creditor of Husband —Jurisdiction in Vacation.]—The filing of an intervention by a creditor of the husband in an action for separation as to property is equivalent to an appearance of the defendant, and ousts the Court of jurisdiction to try and adjudicate upon the same in vacation. Goldstein v. Schwartz, 7 Q. P. R. 221.

Judgment — Execution—Third Persons —Wife taking Lease—Authorization.]—The non-execution of a judgment for separation de biens does not deprive it of effect except against third persons, and does not prevent third persons from invoking it against the wife who has obtained it. 2. A married woman, séparée de biens, who keeps a boarding house, may, without the authorization of her husband or of the Court, take a lease of a house to serve as a boarding house. Parizeau
v. Huot, Q. R. 19 S. C. 379.

Judgment for Separation de Corps—

Effect as to Dissolution of Community—Default of Execution—Right to Allege.]—The separation of property which follows upon a séparation de corps, is without effect if it has not been executed in the manner provided by art. 1098, C. P.; and the inefficiency of a judgment to dissolve the community may be pleaded as well by the husband and wife as by their creditors, Lafleur v. Morin, Q. R. 21 S. C. 483.

Judgment not Executed—Effect of as to Strangers—Contract of Wife—Estoppel—Action—Non-authorization.]—The nullity of a judgment en séparation de biens, not executed, is absolute; and third parties even cannot succeed by virtue of the fact that the wife, in a contract made between her and them, described herself as judicially separated as to property. 2. Default of authorization of a wife commune en biens makes service of process upon her absolutely void; such nullity is a matter of public policy and should be taken notice of by the Court in a case where the wife does not avail herself of it. Per Langeller, J.—An action brought against a wife, commune en biens, who has falsely represented herself in the contract upon which the action is based as séparée de biens, and has not pleaded the nullity of the service by way of exception to the form, will be dismissed, but without costs. Leclaire v, Robert, 3 Q. P. R. 549.

Lunatic Husband — Authorization of Wife to Proceed against Curator] — The plaintiff, common as to property with her husband, alleged that they had been married in 1882, and had been living apart since the year 1884, and that since that time she had supported herself by her own work; that he had recently been interdicted for insanity; and that his curator had obtained a judgment for $5,500 damages for personal injuries suffered by the husband before the date of interdiction. She asked that she be authorized to ester en justice, in an action against the curator in his quality, for separation decorps et de biens from her husband:—Held, that the inability of a husband interdicted for insanity to receive or provide for his wife for separation from bed and board, and no legal grounds were alleged for a judicial authorization of the wife to bring such action against the husband's curator. Deneen v. McLeod, Q. R. 21 S. C. 54.

Where the dissipation of the husband or his maladministration of the revenues of his wife is property renders it impossible to provide for the needs of his wife and children, or even make it seem probable that it will become impossible if his management continues, there is ground for decreeing séparation de biens, although the corpus of the wife's estate is not really in peril, Kavanagh v. McCrory, 3 Q. P. R. 45.

Pleading — Misconduct — Alimony — Custody of Children.]—In an action by the wife for separation from bed and board, the plaintiff also asked for an alimentary allowance and the care of children; the husband pleaded admitting some of the acts alleged in the declaration, but denied the motive alleged, and asserted that the acts in question were caused by the misconduct of the plaintiff herself:—Held, that, although the plaintiff smisconduct might not be an answer to the claim for separation, yet it would affect her right to the care of the children and to an alimentary allowance; and a demurrer to the plea of misconduct was overruled. Courteau v. Skelly, Q. R. 20 S. C. 215.

Providing Residence for Wife—Conjugal Domicil.]—In an action for separation, personal and as to property, brought by a wife against her husband, the Judge may according to circumstances, in place of allotting to the wife a provisional residence outside the conjugal domicil, authorize her to remain in such domicil, and order the husband to leave it. Hebert v. Michaud, 4 Q. P. R. 297.

Provisio aal Alimentary Allowance— Vacation, j. - A. Judge has no jurisdiction in vacation to order the payment of a provisional alimentary allowance in an action for séparation de corps. Currie v. Cunin, 5 Q. P. R. 56.

Reconciliation — Subsequent Cruelty— Pleading. 1—A mere general allegation as to deceit or force in regard to a reconciliation which took place between consorts, or as to subsequent ill-usage, is not sufficient to justify proceedings in separation from bed and board within a few days of the reconciliation, Beauchamp v. Leduc, 7 Q. P. R. 91.

Reference — Powers of Referee—Report —Community of Property—Will—Intention —Provision that Wife shall not Benefit — Provision against Seizure and Attachment-Public Policy.]—A referee, appointed by the Court with the object of determining the wife's share in the property (if any such property existed) as belonging to the community of property between her husband and herself in a case arising as a sequel to a judgment of separation from bed and board, for adjudication upon an application for confirmation of his report, ought to limit himself to giving in his report a complete and detailed statement of all the property belonging to the husband and wife, without taking upon himself to decide whether such property is included in the community of property or not, this being a question for the Judge alone to decide on the presentation of the report for confirmation. Where a report of a re-feree stated that certain property should be excluded from the community, and judgment was given directing the referee to amend his report by inserting therein a complete and detailed list of this property so that it might form part of the community property, such judgment does not constitute chose juger when the report so amended is presented afresh to the Court for final adjudication and confirmation. In ascertaining the intention of a testator on the interpretation of a will. regard should be had to the particular circumstances which may have influenced him. and to the impression by which he sought to convey his meaning. The following clause in a will, "I wish it to be well and clearly understood that the said movable and immovable properties may not in any manner be liable for the support and maintenance of N. T. S., divorced wife of the said D. A. C., my son," is not contrary to public policy or good morals, as having the effect of protecting a husband from providing for the necessities of his wife while he is provided with maintenance and the other necessaries of life, the words "support and maintenance" aforesaid being interpreted in a wider sense than would be those of "alimentary allowance." Property thus devised or be queathed to the husband ought to be considered as property de communauté. A clause in a will, " I wish it to be well and clearly understood that the property, movable and immovable, real and personal, hereby devised.

Renunciation of Community—Formalities—Authorization.]— The wife's renunciation of the community, in an action en apparation de biens, should be made at the record office or before a notary, and a renunciation made before a commissioner of the Superior Court is void and of no effect. 2. A wife authorized by a Judge to sue her husband en séparation de biens, does not need a fresh authorization to renounce the community. Trudeau v. Labossière, 4 Q. P4 R. 46.

Renunciation of Community—Registration — Absence de Droits et Reprises.]—The neglect to register the wife's renunciation of community, upon a judicial separation of property, does not affect the validity of the judgment for separation. 2. In order that the absence of rights and remedies of the wife against the husband may exempt her from causing the judgment for separation to be executed, it is not sufficient that such judgment does not grant any rights and remedies to the wife, but it is necessary that the absence of such rights and remedies should be stated by the referee's report or by a declaration of the wife, Mailloux v. Brolet, Q. R. 18 S. C. 667.

Right of Husband to Aliment.]—A merchant sued for séparation de corps, may daim from his wife an alimentary pension if the latter has been put in possession of the basiness from which the former obtained his mans of subsistence. Joly v. Garneau, 5 Q. P. R. 137.

X. SEPARATION OF PROPERTY.

Administration of Wife's Property by Husband—Warrant of Administration—Alienation by Husband—Replevin by Wife.]—A wife, separate as to property, may repley ber goods without the authorization of her husband. 2. A warrant of administration given by a wife, separate as to property, to her husband, does not give him the right to alienate the goods. 3. The husband, although he may be, in certain cases, the administrator of the property of his wife, separate as to property, has no right to alienate them without an express warrant. Beaulae them without an express warrant. Beaulae them of the property has been supposed to the suppose the supposed to the suppose the suppose the supposed to the suppose the suppose

Execution of Judgment—Renunciation of Community—Respiratation — Creditors of Husband, — A judgment for separation of property is sufficiently executed by the declaration of the wife, given effect to by the judgment, that she has no rights or remedies to exercise against her husband, but the separation of property takes effect against third persons only from the time of the judgment, and the wife can only, as against them, D-24

set up Fer renunciation of the community from the time of the registration of such renunciation. Therefore, a contract made by a married woman, before the execution of the separation of property and the registration of her renunciation, is made for the benefit of the community, and sums due by virtue of such contract may be attached by the creditors of the husband. Bérard v. Magnan, Q. R. 22 S. C. 217.

Pleading — Particulars — Judgment — Estoppel.]—Community of property between husband and wife is the general rule under the law of the province of Quebec, and separation of property the exception. Therefore, a party setting up a judicial separation of property must indicate in his pleading where and when the judgment for separation was rendered, and this under the penalty of being afterwards estopped from setting up such judgment. Gravel v. Cardinal, 5 Q. P. R. 166.

XI. TRANSACTIONS BETWEEN HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Debt — Interest — Prescription.]—Notwithstanding art. 2233, C. C., the prescription of five years (arts. 2250, 2267, C. C.), applies to the interest upon a debt between husband and wife. Picard v. L'Hôpital Général de Québec, Q. R. 26 S. C. 159.

Execution against Husband—Business Carried on in Wife's Name—Simulation.1—The opposant, the wife of the defendant, had registered a notice that she was carrying on business as a decorative artist (which was the defendant's business) under the firm name of F. E. M. & Co., and in this capacity she maintained an opposition to a seizure of goods at the place where the business was carried on. It was proved that at the time of the registration the opposant had no money and that she had since acquired none by her own work, and that the goods seized had been bought with the moneys earned by the work of the defendant, who carried on the business under a power of attorney from his wife:—Held, that the alleged firm was simply a prête-nom for the defendant, who was the true owner of the goods seized, and that the opposition should be dismissed. Décary v. Melooke, Q. R. 21 S. C. 486.

Execution against Husband - Opposition by Wife-Usufruct — Marriage Contract — Subsequently Acquired Goods-Evidence.]-A wife, being the usufructuary of the furniture of a house, has a right to make an opposition to the sale of the furniture where it is demanded by the creditors of the husband. 2. This usufruct ceases, however, with the disappearance of the goods, and does not extend to furniture bought in renewal of that which was subject to the usufruct and has been worn out by use. 3. An opposition to the sale of a piano, which the opposant alleges was given to her, will be dismissed if the evidence shews that the piano was bought by the husband of the opposant. who gave her in payment therefor an old piano, and that the opposant lent to her husband the money necessary to pay the difference in price. 4. It is for the opposant, who alleges that she has bought goods of which she claims the possession, to prove that the money which went to pay for such goods was her own; if she has mixed money which came to her from her relatives with that coming from her husband, she cannot maintain that the goods are not the property of her husband. Walker v. Massey, 5 Q. P. R. 369.

Gift from Husband - Change of Possession-Execution Creditor-Scizure in Con-iugal domicil.1-Interpleader issue. The defendant purchased certain pictures, and, bringing them home, handed them to his wife, telling her he gave them to her. She had one framed in a frame given her by her mo-ther; and all three were hung up in the house occupied by her and her husband. Some six or seven years afterwards an execution creditor of the defendant caused the sheriff to levy on these pictures:-Held, that since the Married Woman's Property Act, 1884, R. S. O. 1897 c. 163, s. 3, a married woman is under no disability as to receiving and holding personal as well as real property by direct gift or transfer from her husband; and in this case the subsequent possession of the pictures was the wife's, although the house was occupied by her husband and herself:— Held, also, that the effect of s.-s. 4 of s. 5 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 163, whereby it is en-acted that a married woman married since 4th March, 1889, may hold her property free from the debts or control of her husband, "but this sub-section shall not extend to any property received by a married woman from her husband during coverture," is not to make property received by the wife from the husband during marriage liable to the husband's debts. This sub-section must be read band's debts. This sub-section must be read in connection with s. 3, s.s. 1, and a wife is placed precisely in the position of a feme sole with regard to property transferred to her by her husband during coverture; and therefore she can hold the property against his creditors unless the transfer is made for the purpose of defeating them; and there was no evidence of such purpose here. Shuttleworth v. McGillivray, 23 Occ. N. 153, 5 O. L. R. 536, 2 O. W. R. 250, Loan Inter se—Bona Fides—Prohibition of Art. 1265, C.C.—Husband Acting as Agent of Wife—Rights and Remedies.]—The prohibition of art. 1265, C. C., against a husband or wife during the marriage advantaging the other by an act inter vivos forbids every transaction whereby one advantages or en-riches the other to his or her own detriment, or to the decrease of his or her estate, but it does not hinder one from borrowing money from the other in good faith, and a loan so made imports a valid contract to repay the sum borrowed. 2. The fact that one of them has lent money to the other, in the absence of evidence indicating fraud cannot taint the transaction with fraud as having been made in contravention of the prohibition of art, 1265. 3. The law does not forbid the husband to act gratuitously as the agent of his wife, separate as to property, in the purchase and sale by her of immovables or in the management of her immovables, and purchases so made, when they are true and actual, and do not withdraw anything from the property of the husband to his detriment or that of his creditors, do not come under the prohibi-tion of art. 1265. 4. If the husband or wife has illegally benefited the other during the marriage, what has been so given may be recovered; if it is an immovable that has been given, it may be retaken; but when it is money, the husband or wife and his or her heirs and assigns have against the other, or his or her heirs, only an action for restintion of the sum given. Dery v. Paradis, 21 Occ. N. 47, Q. R. 10 K. B. 227.

Loan or Gift-Statute of Limitations-Executors and Administrators—Right of Retainer—Devolution of Estates Act.]—In 1876
Mary Starr advanced by way of loan or gift to her husband the purchase money of certain land, which was accordingly conveyed to him. On his death in 1893 he devised the land to Mary Starr and one of his sons in equal shares. In 1901 she obtained an order for partition or sale of so much of the land as had not been theretofore sold, and a sale of such residue of the land being made, she filed a claim upon the proceeds as a creditor for the amount originally advanced by her to purchase the land as above mentioned :-Held, that, even assuming that such money had been advanced by her by way of loan, her claim was barred by the Statute of Limi-tations. There is no reason why the Statute of Limitations should not be applied to a claim by a wife against her husband to recover a loan from him, in the same way as if she was not his wife :- Held, also, that, though she was executrix under the will of her husband, she had no longer any right of retainer in respect of her alleged debt, inasmuch as by her own acts, that is, first by registering no claim within the twelve months allowed for this purpose, and then treating the property as vested in the defendants, the heirs of her co-devisee, who had previously died, she had put the assets out of her own possession and control. In re Starr, St v. Starr, 21 Occ. N. 592, 2 O. L. R. 762.

Loan to Wife — Benefit of Husband-Hypothecation of Wife's Property — You Contract—Duty of Lender to see to Application.]—Where a loan is obtained by a married woman separated as to property from her husband, with hypothecation of her relestate, it is sufficient to shew that the money, although handed to her in the form of a cheque payable to her order, was not used by her, but was given to her husband, in order to bring the contract within the prohibition of art, 1301. C. C. 2. The law does not require that the person from whom a wife obtains a loan should know that it is for the benefit and use of her husband. It is for the lender to exercise proper caution, and to see to the due employment of the money for the purposes of the wife. Even in the case of a deception by the wife, as to the use to which the money is to be applied, the contract do loan is nevertheless null. Trust and loss Co. v. Keronack, Q. R. 12 K. B. 281.

Loan to Wife—Benefit of Husbard—Security by Sale of Land with Right of Redemption—Void Contract—Knowledge of Lender.]—A loan contracted by with separate as to property—the security for the lead of redemption of her immovable property instead of in the form of a sale with right of redemption of her immovable property instead of in the form of a hypothesticonia null and void as contrary to the prohibition contained in art, 1301, C. Promissory Note — Obligation by Wife with Husband,]—A promissory note made by a wife to the order of her husband, and indorsed by him, is not, in the absence of any evidence that the note was signed by the wife for her husband, a contravention of art. 1301, C. C., as constituting an obligation contracted by the wife with her husband. Dupuis v. HeTavish, Q. R. 21 S. C. 455.

Prospective Gift of Money by Hushand to Wife.—Attachment by Judgment Creditor of Wife.]—It is essential to a gift inter vivos that the donor should actually divest himself of his ownership in the thing given; and the following clause in a marriage contract does not constitute such gift:—"En consideration dudit futur mariage ledit future fooux fait don à ladite future fopuse d'une somme de $800 courant, à prendre sur ses biens les plus apparents, et avant tout autre créancier." And such sum cannot be attached in the hands of the husband under a writ of saisie-arrêt issued by a creditor, upon a jodgment against the wife. Pagé v. Beauchang, Q. R. 20 S. C. 220.

Purchase of Land—Gift—Presumption—Surrender of Leases—Merger—Lien.]—Freehold property and leaseholds, the reversion in which was vested in the plaintiff's wife by devisee under her father's will, were purchased by the plaintiff in 1893, while act-ing as manager of her landed estates, with his own money. The freehold property was conveyed by the vendor to the plaintiff's wife by his directions, and the surrender of leases was to the plaintiff and wife. Under the law at that date a husband was entitled to the rents and profits of his wife's real estate. By s. 4 (1) of the Married Women's Property Act, 1895 (N.B.), real estate belonging to a married woman, not acquired from her husband, is held and may be disposed of by her as a feme sole:—Held, that the presumption that a purchase by a husband in the name of his wife is intended to be a gift to her was not rebutted by the evidence in the case. That the wife could not alienate the freehold estates 10 acquired from her husband, at least during his lifetime. 3. That on the purchase of the leases the estate under them merged in the freehold of the wife, and that she could dispose of the whole estate without the husband's consent, and free of any equity in him for repayment of the purchase money or money expended by him in making repairs to the property. De Bury v. De Bury, 22 Occ. N. 184, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 348, 36 N. B. Reps. 57.

XII. OTHER CASES.

Abandonment of Wife — Replevia of Replevia of Replevia of Industrial Coods. — In a saisie-revendication the plaintiff will not be put in possession of the goods seized when it appears that they are in the possession of the intervenant, his wife, whom he has abandoned, and that the blace where the effects are is the domicil of the husband and wife, where the intervenant lives with her children. Beauchamp v. Beauchamp, 5 Q. P. R. 307.

Action by Husband against Wife.]—
In an action by a husband against his wife for a declaration that certain real and personal property claimed by both parties, belonged to him, and for an injunction to restrain the wife from disposing of the same: Held, that a husband can sue his wife in respect of both real and personal property as if she were a feme sole. Semble, the law in the Territories is practically the same as that in England as to suits between husband and wife, except that in the Territories one may sue the other in respect of torts, while in England this is not so. England v. England, 5 Terr. L. R. 204.

Affidavit.]—A wife may swear to the affidavit required by art. 208, C. P., in a proceeding taken in the name of her husband. Godburt v. McPeak, Q. R. 20 S. C. 294, 4 Q. P. R. 190.

Conveyance before Marriage - Fraud on Marital Rights - Testamentary Dispositions on Marital Rights—Testamentary Dispositions—Wills Act,1—The plaintiff was engaged to be married to J. C. A. in November, 1900. The marriage took place on the 4th December, 1901. The husband died on the 26th January, 1902. In August, 1901, the deceased secretly executed a conveyance of all his real. estate to the defendant, and this conveyance was not recorded until a few days before the marriage. Late in November, 1901, the de-ceased also assigned his securities to the defendant. The plaintiff had no knowledge of these conveyances at the time of the marriage, and only learned definitely about them after her husband's death. She thereupon brought an action to have the instruments set aside, (1) as having been made in fraud of her marital rights, and (2) as not having complied with the provisions of the Wills Act. The trial Judge found that the transfers were made with the distinct object of preventing the plaintiff from enjoying any portion of her husband's estate after his death, and that the deceased wilfully concealed from his in-tended wife before and after their marriage the fact that he had stripped himself of his property. The Judge decided, however, that the instruments were not testamentary, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to the relief claimed; — Held, that conversations with the deceased were admissible, not to derogate from the transfers, but to shew the design of the deceased. Under English law the wife is not entitled to relief against conveyances made in fraud of her marital rights, though the rule is different in the United There was nothing to indicate that the operation of the instruments was to be suspended until the grantor's death. Archibald v. Archibald, 23 Occ. N. 121.

Infant Wife—Guardian—Rights of Husband.]—Unless upon grounds adjudged to be valid, the husband of a minor emancipated by marriage should be named her guardian ad litem. 2. The right of a husband to the guardianship of his infant wife is a consequence of the respective duties of the spouses and their intimate relations. Such reasons cease to exist when, for example, the spouses are separated, and the wife is preparing to begin an action for séparation de corps. In such a case th. husband loses all right to the guardianship of his wife. Ex p. Pauzé, 3 Q. P. R. 570.

Liability of Husband for Torts of Wife.] — Held, affirming the judgment of Street, J., that a husband is still liable for the torts of his wife if the marriage took place before the 1st July, 1884. The provisions of the Married Women's Property Act, 1884, 47 V. c. 19 (O.), applicable to persons married before that date, do not relieve him from liability. Earle v. Marriage Settlement — Gift—Registration—Time—Creditors—Action to Set Aside Transaction—Parties.]—A gift of property by husband to wife by way of marriage settlement must be registered. 2. The registration of a gift after the time allowed cannot be set up against creditors who have become such in the interval. 3. Several creditors may join together in an action to set aside a transaction as fraudulent. McDougalt Co. v. Boisvert, Q. R. 24 S. C. 162.

Protection Order — Affidavit — Information and Belief—Denial.] — Application for protection order under s. 17 of the Married Women's Property Act, by a married woman. The application was dismissed with costs. Cochrane y. Cochrane, 21 Occ. N. 87.

Sale of Goods—Authority of Wife to Sell Husband's foods—Re-purchase by Husband—Acquiescence.]—A husband, sued for the price of a stove, will not be allowed to set up in his defence that the stove always belonged to him and that the sele which his wife assumed to make of it in order to obtain drink was void, unless he can prove that he could not have prevented the sale. 2. The fact that the husband offered a certain sum of money for the re-purchase of the stove shews acquiescence in the sale made by his wife. Beaulieu v. Paquet, 6 Q. P. R. 68.

Wife Pledging Credit of Husband — Necessaries—Admissions—Evidence.] — An admission of a sale of goods for more than $50 by a merchant to one who is not a merchant, cannot be proved by witnesses. If it is not proved that the goods were delivered in whole or in part. 2. In the absence of a special mandate to his wife, a husband is not responsible for purchase made by her unless they are for things necessary for his family, such as provisions, clothes, etc. 3. Even when goods so purchased by the wife for the needs of the family are in question, the husband is not bound by the admissions of his wife as to the purchase, unless such admissions have been made in the course of the purchase. (2) Against the contention that the defendant having been shewn to have actually belonged to a particular band, this disproved, or was insufficient to prove, that he was reputed to belong thereto—that the intention of the Act is to make proof of mere repute sufficient evidence of actual membership in the band, (3) Against the contention that by virtue of s. 11 the mother of the defendant by her marriage to his Lather, who was a white man, ceased to he an Indian, and that therefore the defendant was not a person of Indian blood—that while the mother lost her character of an Indian by such marriage, except as stated in that section, it did not affect her blood which she transmitted to her son. Next Friend Ratification. Maintenance — Absence of Express Provision for—Infants Entitled to Share in Residue in Addition to Specific Legacies — Setting apart Sum to Answer Legacies -Quantum of Allowance for Maintenance Quantum of Attoracte for Maintenance Whole Interest or Part.]—Legacies of $4,000 were given to each of the testator's infant sons, Mowat and Ross McIntyre, to carry interest from the death of the testator for the purposes of their maintenance, and in directing the retention and setting apart by the executors of $8,000 to provide for the payment of $4,000 each to the infants when they attain the age of 25 years, and 10 per cent. of the residue of the testator's estate, Street, J.:—Held, 3 O. W. R. 258, 7 O. L. R. 548, that the legacies carried interest from the testator's death for the purpose of maintenance. There was no express provision for the maintenance of the two infants during their minority. But the appellants contend that the other devises and bequests in favour of the infants contained in the will are a sufficient provision for their maintenance :- Held, the rule is that when a legacy is given to a minor by a parent or by a person in loco parentis, payable at a future period, if no other provision is made for maintenance, interest will be allowed for that purpose, even though by the terms of the will the legacis contingent on the legatee living to the period mentioned for payment of the legacy. The gift of an immediate share in the residue indicates a fund or source from which maintenance was derivable, but not in such form as to preclude recourse for maintenance to the interest upon the legacies. But it should be taken into consideration in dealing with the allowance to be made for maintenance out of the interest of the legacies, having regard to their shares of the residue and the income derivable therefrom, they are entitled to have recourse to interest on their legacies, but only to that extent. It follows that the order was proper at the time it was made, and that the whole sum of $8,000 must be set apart to provide maintenance, if necessary. But that sum was manifestly arrived at without reference to the income from the infants' shares in the residue; and the question of the proper amount to be allowed. having regard to such shares and the time when they were ascertained, should be now settled by the Master unless otherwise agreed upon. Re McIntyre, McIntyre v. Lonodon and Western Trust Co., 5 O. W. R. 137, 6 0. L. R. 408.

Galerneau v. Betrand, Q. R. 20 S. C. 28S.

Mortgage—Voidable Contract—Repudiation of—What Amounts to—Infants' Contracts Act.]—Held, that a mortgage executed by an infant before the passing of the Infants' Contracts Act is not void but voidable, and if the infant wishes to avoid it he must expressly repudiate it within a reasonable time after coming of age. R., in 1896, being then an infant, executed a mortgage in favour of S., the plaintiff. R. came of time, on account of default having been made in the payment of the loan, S. was proceeding to sell under power of sale in the mortgage. R.'s solicitors on the 13th February, 1990, wrote S., saying that no valid mortgage had ever been executed by R., and threatening proceedings to protect their client's interest, and on the 2nd March they began an action on behalf of R. against S. for a declaration that the mortgage was null and void and an injunction restraining the sale. On cross-cardination on an affidavit made by R. in 80 ord of a mortgage was null and void and an injunction for an interim injunction. As said in substance that the reason he did not pay was because he couldn't, and that he had never repudiated his contract, and in October, 1900, he discontinued his action. On the 2nd November, 1900, S. commenced his foreclosure action, and in defence R. pleaded infancy:—Held, that the solicitor's letter and the writ in Russel v. Saunders did not constitute a repudiation, as they were qualified by R.'s statement that he did not intend to repudiate. Saunders V. Russell, 23 Occ. N. 56, 9 B. C. R. 321.

Next Friend—Amendment—Costs—Solicitor. Henderson v. Button, 2 O. W. R. 653.

Next Friend—Father Out of Jurisdiction—Sourity for Costs—New Next Friend,]—Motion by defendants to stay the action until the plaintiff should name a next friend in the jurisdiction or give security for costs. The plaintiff sued by his father as next friend; both resided in the Province of Quebec, as appeared by indorsement on the writ of summons:—Held, defendants entitled to their order. The next friend of an infant plaintiff stands in the same position as any other litigant. Any indulgence is given to the infant and not to the next friend,—If, for any reason, the infant's father does not wish to give security, and no other person can be found in the jurisdiction willing to act, then, as was said in Taylor v. Wood, 14 P. R. at p. 456, the Court has power to appoint the official guardian to act as next friend in the case of commendable litigation. The only thing that looks the other way is the remark of Meredith, J., in Scott v. Niagara Navigation Co., 15 P. R. at p. 455. That, however, does not seem intended to be a positive expression of opinion on the point now under consideration. . . . The order should go that some other next friend be appointed resident in Ontario, unless the father gives the usual security for costs. Mc-Bain v. Waterloo Manufacturing Co., 4 O. W. R. 144. 25 Occ. N. 45, 8 O. L. R. 620.

Partition or Sale of Lands—Rights of guardian—Discretion of Court—Interest of infants—Lease of lands—Proper conditions and restrictions. Badge v. Badge, 3 O. W. R. 230.

Tutor—Appointment of Pleading—Exception.]—In an action brought by a tutor, ès-qualité, the fact that the plaintiff has not been regularly appointed tutor to the minor whom he assumes to represent, must not necessarily be pleaded by exception to the form, but may be set up in a plea to the merits. Dins v. Canadian Construction Co., 5 Q. P. R. 447.

Tutor—Removal — Grounds—Insolvency
—Immorality — Action — Interim Order—

Costs.]—1. Insolvency is not a sufficient ground for the removal of a father from the office of tutor to his minor children, more especially where it is not established that his insolvency is the result of misconduct, dishonesty, or incapacity. 2. A person cannot be deprived of the tutorship of his children on the ground of immorality unless it be notorious, that is to say, the acts with which the tutor is reproached must be known to a large number of persons, and be the subject of common talk. However opposed to the principles of morality the conduct of a tutor may be, he cannot be removed from office so long as the knowledge of his conduct is restricted to his private circle. 3. During the pendency of an action to remove a tutor from the tutorship of his children, he is entitled to retain the administration of the person and property of the minors, and he can only be dispossessed thereof by an order can only be dispossessed thereof by an order made by the Court under the provisions of Art, 289, C. C.—4. Where the subrogate tutor is in good faith in bringing an action for the removal of the tutor, he will not, if successful, be condemned personally to costs. St. Pierre v. Tucker, Q. R. 18 S. C. 451.

Tutor ad Hoe—Place of Appointment.]
—If an infant has interest opposed to those of his tutor, a tutor ad hoc may be appointed in the district in which the property of the infant is situated, and in which the original tutor was appointed, and this may be done although the tutor and the infant have gone to live elsewhere. Frappier v Birabin, 6 Q.
P. R. 102.

Tutor of —Removal — Procedure—Necessity for Aotion.]—A demand for the removal of the tutor of an infant can only be made by action in the ordinary form, commencing with a writ of summons in the name of the sovereign. Exp. McNicol, Q. R. 21 S. C. 170.

Assignment for Benefit of Creditors
—Projudice of Creditor—Varying Order—
Title of Cause.]—Where an ex parte injunction order restrained a trader, who had obtained goods from the plaintiffs under an agreement that the property therein was to remain in them, with liberty to them to take possession, from, inter alia, making an assignment for the general benefit of his creditors, it was ordered to be varied in that respect. It is not a ground for setting aside the service of an ex parte injunction order that the order is not intituled in the cause, where the defendant has not been misled. Gault Brothers Co. v. Morrell, 25 Occ. N. 89, 3 N. B. Eq. 123.

Chattel Mortgage—Sale of goods—Misrepresentations—Breach of warranty. Rogers v. Lavin, 5 O. W. R. 492.

Contract — Enforcing Obligations of— Penalty.]—In a case where the parties are bound by a contract, an interlocutory injunction may be granted only for the purpose of ordering that a party obligated by the contract shall do exactly what he is under obligation to do by the contract, and refrain from doing that which he is thereby forbidden to do.—Therefore, if an actor has agreed not to sign, during the year following the expiration of his engagement to play upon another stage, under penalty of a forfeiture, there is no ground for granting an interlocutory injunction restraining him from acting upon another stage after he has signed an engagement contrary to his promise. La Societé Anonyme des Théatres v. Lombard, 7 Q. P. R. 262.

Contract—Stipulation as to Damages—Agreement in Restraint of Trade.]—An interlocutory injunction will not be granted when the parties by a clause of the agreement between them have stipulated that a certain amount of damages will be payable in case of violation thereof. An agreement not to do business, unreasonable as to space, restrictive of trade, and of personal liberty, is null and void in law, and cannot be legally enforced. Hamilton Powder Co. v. Johnson, 7 Q. P. R. 236.

Debtor Disposing of Property—Status of Creditor—Verdict for Damages—Fraud.]—The plaintiff in an action of tort who has recovered a verdict, the entry whereon of judgment has been stayed, is not a creditor of the defendant, much less a judgment creditor, and is not entitled to have the defendant enjoined from disposing of his property, even where the plaintiff shews upon difficant the intent of the defendant to defraud the plaintiff and to leave the country with the proceeds of the sale of property. Interim Injunction—Breach of Contract to Sell Goods to Plaintiff Only—Remedy in Damages.]-A contract recited that the plaintiff, in conjunction with others, was forming a company to be incorporated, and that the plaintiff was desirous of purchasing bricks for the benefit of the proposed company, and set out the intention of the plainto assign all his interest in the contract to the company upon its incorporation, and stipulated that, upon such assignment, the company should be substituted for the plaintiff in the contract, and the evidence shewel that the defendants did not intend to enter into such an agreement for the benefit of the plaintiff and his associates personally, that the formation of the company and its interest in the proposed purchases were ma-terial parts of the arrangements. The statement of claim in each case alleged that, relying upon the contract and upon the supply of bricks under it, the plaintiff, together with others, entered into a number of building contracts requiring the use of bricks, that the plaintiff would require for the purposes of his business during the present year all the bricks called for by the said contract, that the plaintiff and the company were tendering for and expected to obtain a large number of other building contracts requiring bricks, that the plaintiff expected to sell bricks to other builders at a profit, and that, unless the defendants supplied the bricks called for by the contract, it would be impossible for the plaintiff to get bricks in time to carry out these contracts, or to complete the works in the manner and within the time mentioned in said contracts. The evidence adduced supported these statements in the main, but did not shew that the contracts referred to had been made for the benefit or on behalf of the company or that the company had acquired any interest or incurred any liability in respect of them: — Held, that the plaintiff should, under the circumstances, be left to his claim for damages, if any, arising from the alleged breach of the contract, and that interim injunctions should be dissolved. Cass v. Couture, Cass v. McCutcheon, 23 Occ. N. 249, 14 Man. L. R. 458.

Interim Injunction — Condition—Security — Time.]—Where a party has obtained an interlocutory injunction on condition of furnishing security, the Court may by a subsequent judgment fix a time within which security must be furnished under penalty of the dissolution of the injunction granted. Moore v. Bullock, 5 Q. P. R. 464.

Interim Injunction — Cutting Timber on Disputed Land — Finding by Jury in Replevin Action.]—An exparte injunction to restrain the defendants from cutting timber and removing timber already cut, on lands, the title to which was claimed by the plaintiff and defendants by possession, was dissolved, where a jury in an action of replevin by the plaintiff to recover timber cut by the defendants on the land, had found in their favour, though a motion for a new trial was undisposed of. Wood v. Leblanc, 23 Occ. N. 151, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 427.

Interim Injunction — Dealing with shares — Dissolving, Wright v. Rowan, 2 O. W. R. 120.

Interim Injunction— Dissolution before Hearing — Assessment of Damages.] — Where an ex parte injunction was dissolved before the hearing of the suit which was for a declaration of title to land, the Court post-poned assessing the defendant's damages upon the plaintiff's undertaking given on obtaining the injunction, to the hearing of the suit. McLellan v. Turnere, 23 Occ. N. 268.

Interim Injunction — Newspaper—Advertisement — Trade union — Preponderance of convenience. Dixon v. Globe Printing Co., 2 O. W. R. 726.

Interim Injunction - Railway - Expropriation-Crossing Line of Another Compropriation—possing was of Trial.]— On the application of the plaintiffs, who al-leged inter alia that the defendants railway was not commenced within two years, that no map or plan and profile of the whole line of railway had been prepared and deposited in the department of the Minister of Railways, and that the work being done by the defendants was not authorized and was not being prosecuted in good faith under their charter, but was really for the benefit of the Great Northern Railway Company, so that it might extend its railway system, which lies south of the international boundary, into British Columbia, injunctions were granted cestraining until the trial of the action the defendants from continuing in possession and proceeding with the expropriation of the land of the plaintiff hotel company, and also from taking any proceedings toward effecting the proposed crossing of the right of way of the plaintiff railway company. Motions to dissolve the injunctions were refused. The full Court (Irving, J., dissenting) dismissed an appeal on the ground that there were several points of importance which should be decided at the trial. Yale Hotel Co. v. Van-couver, Victoria and Eastern R. W. and Navigation Co., Grand Forks and Kettle River R., W. Co. v. Vancouver, Victoria and Eastern R. W. and Navigation Co., 9 B. C. R. 66.

Interim Injunction — Refusal—Discretion — Appeal,]—Although the Courf of King's Bench sitting in appeal has power to overrule the discretion exercised by the Court of first instance in refusing a petition for an interim injunction, it is a power which will be used only in an extreme case, where the right of the petitioner is clear and unmistakable, and where there has been manifest error in refusing his application. South Shore $R,\ W,\ Co,\ v.\ Grand\ Trunk\ R,\ W.\ Co,\ Q.\ R.\ 12\ K.\ B.\ 28.$

Interim Injunction - Rule as to Granting—Facts in Dispute — Partnership — Receiver.]—On a motion for an interlocutory injunction to restrain defendant from disposing of assets of an alleged partnership be-tween him and the plaintiff to carry on a business previously conducted by the defendant, and for a receiver, the plaintiff alleged that books of account were opened up, and a bank account kept, in the firm's name; that bill heads with the name of the firm, and names of the plaintiff and defendant thereon. were used, and a circular under the firm's name distributed by the defendant, announcing that the plaintiff was associated in the business. The defendant denied that a partnership was formed, and alleged that it was contingent upon the plaintiff paying into the business a sum of money equal to the value of the defendant's stock-in-trade on hand; that this had never been done; that the plaintiff was employed at a weekly salary; and that the bill heads were ordered by the plaintiff without authority, and their use only permitted after his assurance that he would shortly purchase an interest in the business. These allegations were denied by the plaintiff:-Held, that the motion should be granted. On a motion for an interlocutory in-junction, the Court should be satisfied that there is a serious question to be determined, and that under the facts there is a probability that the plaintiff will be held entitled to relief. Burden v. Howard, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 461.

Interim Injunction - Threatened In-Jury to Property — Discretion—Affidavits in Reply — Non-disclosure of Material Facts— Offer — Costs.]—1. When evidence is given to the satisfaction of the Judge that there is a strong probability of injury to the plaintiffs' building by the continuance of blasting operations for the loosening of frozen earth on adjoining land, it is proper, on motion to continue an ex parte injunction, to grant an interlocutory injunction restraining the contractor until the hearing of the action from carrying on such blasting in such a manner as to injure the plaintiffs' building, although there is no proof that any actual injury to such building has already resulted. Fletcher v. Bealey, 28 Ch. D. 688, and Attorney-General v. Manchester, [1893] 2 Ch. 87, followed. 2, There is a discretion in the Judge on the hearing of such a motion to allow affidavits in reply which contain statements going merely to strengthen the original case; and, when an opportunity is given to the defence to answer the affidavits in reply, the full Court on appeal will not interfere with such discretion. Peacock v. Harper, 7 Ch. D. 648, followed. 3. The non-disclosure of material facts on the application for an ex parte injunction for a limited time, although a ground for discharging it, will not neces-sarily disentitle the plaintiffs to succeed on a motion to continue the expiring injunction when both sides present their cases fully. and the Court is not bound to specifically discharge the interim injunction or to award costs to the defendants. 4. An offer or suggestion on the part of the plaintiffs, before commencing the action, to accept a bond to secure them against damages caused by the operations complained of, even if distinctly proved, would not necessarily preclude them from claiming an injunction afterwards, though it would be a fact to be taken into consideration in determining whether a remedy by action for damages would not be adequate. Wood v. Sutcliffe, 2 Sim. N. S. 168. distinguished. 5. Costs of appeal were ordered to be paid by the appellant in any event. Miller v. Campbell, 23 Occ. N. 233, 14 Man. L. R. 437.

Interim Order — Costs — Municipal Corporation — Illegal Purchase of Land.] — The council of a city having by resolution proposed to enter into a contract of purchase of certain land to be paid for in five yearly instalments, notwithstanding the provisions of s. 396 of the Municipal Act, R. S. M. c. 100, this action was brought by a ratepayer and a motion made for an injunction to prevent the proposed purchase. After several adjournments of the motion, and before it finally came on for hearing, a new arrangement was entered into so far varying the original proposition that the injunction was not pressed for on that argument, and the only question for decision was as to the disposition of the costs: — Held, following Hoole v. Great Western R. W. Co., L. R. 3 Ch. 262, that a suit or an injunction was proper in such a suit should be brought in the name of the Attorney-General. Smith v. Township of Raleigh, 3 O. R. 405, and Wallace v. Township of Crangeville, 5 O. R. 37, followed. Shrimpton v. City of Winniper, 30 Occ. N. 248, 13 Man. L. R. 211.

Interim Order—Dissolution for Default of Security.]—An interlocutory injunction, subject to the giving of security within a certain delay, will be dissolved on motion if such security is not given. Moon v. Bullock, 6 Q. P. R. 59.

Interim Order — Issue before Writ of Summons — Restraining Adoption of Municipal By-law,]—It is not necessary that a writ of summons should be issued before an interlocutory injunction is applied for; it is sufficient if it issues after the injunction order has been signed, for the two may be served at the same time. 780 Interim Order - Possession of Landad to Claim of Lien.]-An interlocutory injunction will not be granted, in the course of an action, in order to put the plaintiff in possession of property on which the defendant is about to erect buildings for the plaintiff, if the possession of the land, as to which the defendant alleges a right of retention, is one of the objects of the litigation. Canada Radiator Co. v. Société Anonyme de Construction, 6 Q. P. R. 354. Man.

Interim Order made Ex Parte - Enforcing Obedience to - Contempt of Court.]-An injunction order made ex parte by local Judge must be obeyed until set aside, and if disobeyed the defendant will be committed for contempt of Court. Leberry v. Braden, 7 B. C. R. 403.

Landlord and Tenant — Repairs by Landlord — Interference with Tenant's Occupancy.]-A landlord, who, during the term of the tenancy, makes considerable repairs to the property leased, which interfere with the occupancy of the tenant, may be restrained by an interlocutory injunction. Haycock v. Pacaud, 7 Q. P. R. 249.

Landlord and Tenant - Stopping of Work Commenced by Landlord — City By-law — Suspension of Injunction.]—Where works are commenced by a proprietor on premises leased, and subsequently stopped injunction at the lessee's request, the injunction may be suspended if it is proved that the city, in virtue of its by-laws, would be obliged to terminate the work itself, if it remained unfinished. Obstruction of River - Removal -Dismissal of Suit - Costs - Assessment of Damages - Remedy at Law. |- The plaintiff was prevented from driving his lumber down a tributary of the Saint John river by the closing of the passage by a pier and boom erected by the defendant in connection with his saw mill, and by logs of the defendant. The defendant was the owner of both sides of the river. The suit was for a mandatory injunction to compel the removal of the pier, booms, and logs so as to open up and to keep open a passage for the plaintiff's lumber, and for an assessment of damages. The bill and for an assessment of damages. was filed and motion heard on the 23rd May, two days before the passage had been opened -Held, that the injunction in respect of future obstruction should be refused, and the plaintiff left to recover his damages, if any, in an action at law, but that the bill should be dismissed without costs; the plaintiff to have costs of obtaining and serving an interim injunction obtained in the m Watson v. Patterson, 23 Occ, N. 268. matter.

parties to a suit only. 2. Such suit may be instituted simultaneously with the appli-cation for the injunction. 3. The service of a petition of notice of any kind, without a writ, does not suffice to constitute the person upon whom such service is made a party to a suit. Paradis v. Paradis, Q. R. 19 S.

Receiver -- Balance of Convenience -Company.]—An application to continue until trial an interim injunction granted ex parte, and to appoint a permanent receiver, was dismissed, where the plaintiff's right of action was not entirely free from doubt, and it appeared that the injury that would be occasioned to the defendants by the granting of the injunction and the appointment of a receiver, if the plaintiff ultimately failed, would be very great, while that which would result to the plaintiff by its refusal, if he ultimately succeeded, would be comparatively small. Application of this principle to an incorporated company. Reynolds v. Urquhart, 5 Terr. L. R. 413.

Repetition of Slander — Public Entertainment — Imputation of Murder.]—Injunction granted until the trial to restrain the defendants, who professed to be mindreaders, from pretending to give information at their public entertainments as to the cause of the death of the plaintiff's husband, intimating as they had done at such entertainments, that he met with his death at the hands of a supposed friend, and thereby suggesting the idea that his late partner and the plaintiff were concerned in the matter. Monson v. Tussand, [1894] 1 Q. B. 671, referred to, Quirk v. Dudley, 22 Occ. N. 388, 4 O. L. R. 532, 1 O. W. R. 637.

Return of - Acceleration.]-Unless in extraordinary circumstances a motion for the return of a writ of injunction before the day fixed will not be granted. Tétrault v. Corporation of Wickham, 6 Q. P. R. 157.

Right to - Contract - Municipal Corporations-Street Railways-Performance of Work - Irreparable Injury - Malice.]-1 Where one of two parties to a contract is doing a thing which, by the terms of the contract, he has specially reserved the right to do, the other party to the contract is not entitled to an injunction to restrain the doing of the thing, on the ground that the work is proceeding in a way which inflicts more damage than would be caused if another method, more expensive, had been adopted. So, in the present case, the defendants, who had granted certain powers to the plaintiffs, but had reserved the right to take possession of the streets when necessary for road operations, were not bound to adopt a more lengthy and expensive though less injurious method of performing the work. 2. In order to obtain an injunction in such circumstances, where there has been no invasion of a legal or equitable right, it must be established that irreparable injury will be caused if an injunction be not granted. 3. A temporary interruption of traffic and an injurious method of removing the rails, causing a damage in the nature of a pecuniary loss, do not constitute an irreparable injury. 4. Montreal Park and Island R. W. Co. v. Town of St. Louis, Q. R. 17 S. C. 545.

Sale of Goods—Condition — Breach.]—An interlocutory injunction will be granted to enforce an agreement whereby the respondent purchased certain goods at a specified price, which agreement he deliberately violated. Osono Co. v. Lyons, 7 Q. P. R. 65.

Sale of Property — Rescission of Contract — Misrepresentation.]—Where a party contracts to purchase property and pays an instalment and afterwards repudiates the contract and sues for rescission, the Court has no jurisdiction to restrain by interim injunction the vendor, who accepted the repudiation and re-took his property, from dealing with it as he sees fit. Christie v. Fraser, 24 Occ. N. 257, 10 B. C. R. 291.

Security — Alteration in Terms — Jurisdiction of Judge — Proceedings before another Judge.]—A Judge who has granted an interlocutory injunction in the terms of Art. 957, C.P., remains seised of the motion until the security preliminary to its enforcement is furnished. He may, consequently, suspend its operation, hear the parties anew, allow the matter to be contested, and revoke the order. Proceedings taken before one Judge may be continued before another. Wampole v. Lyons, Q. R. 14 K. B. 53.

Special Remedy.]—A writ of injunction will not be granted when the law provides a special remedy for the grievances complained of. Beauregard v. Corporation of Roston Falls, 6 Q. P. R. 155.

Stay of Proceedings — Security for Costs.] — An order for security for costs made pursuant to Rule 1199, and issued according to Form 95, has the effect of staying all further proceedings until security is given; and while such an order stands, it is not competent for the plaintiff to proceed with a pending motion for an injunction against the defendant who has obtained the stay, but such motion should be enlarged till the security is perfected. Weekes v. Underfeed Stoker Co. of America, 21 Occ. N. 24, 19 P. R. 299.

Substantial Damage — Mandatory Injunction.]—Where a trespass is being continued, and substantial damage is being caused, the Court will generally interfere to restrain the further commission of the trespass, and may grant a mandatory injunction. Smith v. Public Parks Board of Portage La Prairie, 1 Man, L. R. 249, 1 W. L. R. 237.

Undertaking as to Damages—Order for Assessment.)—Claims for small damages by some defendants ordered to be included in an order for assessment of damages by other defendants under an undertaking given on obtaining an interlocutory injunction, where they arose from the restraint of acts which the injunction was obtained to prevent the doing of. Wood v. Leblanc, 25 Occ. N. 90, 3 N. B. Eq. 116.

Undertaking to Speed Trial — Breach of, Clarry v. Brodie, 1 O. W. R. 387.

When Granted—Irreparable Wrong—Remody in Damages — Landlord and Tenant.]—There is no ground for the issue of a writ of injunction except when the wrong caused to the party claiming it is serious and irreparable and when such party has no other remedy in law to obtain reparation, 2. The lessee of part of a building, who complains that the owner in altering another part of the building troubles him in his enjoyment, has a remedy in damages against him, as well in virtue of the relationship between neighbours, and in consequence he has no right to a writ of injunction. Poulos v. Scroggie, 6 Q. P. R. 1.

Fire Escape Act — Neglect to Comply with — Injury to Guest — Rescue of Another -Volenti non fit Injuria - Contributory Negligence - Jury.]--Where a guest in a burning hotel is injured in consequence of the proprietor having failed to provide the means of fire escape required by the Fire Escape Act, an action for damages will lie against the proprietor, notwithstanding that a penalty is imposed for breach of the statutory duty. Groves v. Lord Wimborne, [1898] 2 Q. B. 402, applied. The defence arising from the maxim volenti non fit injuria (the guest being aware of the lack of means of fire escape and having made no objection) is not applicable where the injury arises from a breach of a statutory duty. Baddeley v. Earl Granville, 19 Q. B. D. 423, applied. The fact that the guest delayed his exit in order to rescue a fellow-guest and thereby lost his own chance of getting out safely, is not as a matter of law "contributory negli-gence;" whether the plaintiff did anything gence;" whether the plaintiff did anything which a person of ordinary care and skill would not have done in the circumstances, or omitted to do anything which a person of ordinary care and skill would have done, and thereby contributed to the accident, was for the jury to decide. Love v. New Fairview Corporation, 24 Occ. N. 259, 10 B; C. R.

Lien — Detention of Goods—Strangers.]—An innkeeper has, by virtue of Art. 1816a.
C. C., a right of retention only in respect of the goods belonging to his guest, and not in respect of goods belonging to third persons whom his guest has brought into the inn. Taylor v. O'Brien, Q. R. 24 S. C. 407.

Lien — Expenses and Advances—Commercial Traveller — Samples of Employer —Pledge.]—The lien which the law gives an inakeeper on the goods of his lodgers is to be interpreted strictly, and the Judge cannot enlarge it even for equitable causes. son who prolongs his stay at a hotel and remains for a month or more, is a traveller within the meaning of Art. 1233 (4), C.C., and can prove by witnesses that he left his luggage in the hotel. He can do this also by clause 1 of the same article, because a hotel keeper is a tradesman (commercant). hotel keeper is a tradesman (commercant), and the deposit of luggage a matter relating to trade. A hotelkeeper who places the lug-gage of a traveller in a baggage room, which is not under lock and key and open and accessible to every one at all times, is guilty of negligence within the second exception of Art. 1815, C.C. The loss of luggage, in these circumstances, renders him liable not only for the $200 mentioned in that article, but for the full value, Judgment in Greene v. Windsor Hotel Co. Q. R. 26 S. Loss of Guest's Property—Negligence —Contributory Negligence.]—On the plaintiff's arrival at Winnipeg, he delivered some luggage to the driver of a transfer company, to be taken to the defendants' hotel, to which the plaintiff walked, and at which he registered and was assigned a room, to which he took his valise. The driver brought the ne took his value. The driver brought the luggage to the hotel and left it in the hall with other luggage, but in a place not visible from the office, and informed the clerk in the office that he had done so. The hotel was crowded, the city was unusually full of visitors, persons going to and from the hotel bar passed the place where the parcels were, and it was not in a safe place for unwatched luggage to be left in. The plaintiff noticed his parcels there about 11 o'clock the same night, but did not remove them or draw the attention of the hotel servants to them. The next day he noticed that the parcels were not in the hall, but said nothing about it until the third day after, when he asked for the par-cels. They could not then be found, and the presumption was that they had been stol-Neither the defendants nor any of their servants had paid any attention to the parcels or moved them in any way:—Held, per Richards, J., that the parcels got into the custody of the defendants when the driver who brought them reported to the hotel clerk that he had done so; that the plaintiff was justified in assuming, when he saw the parcels in the hall, that they were being cared for by the defendants, and that, when he missed them the next day, he had a right to suppose that they had been put into the defendants' baggage room; and that he had not been guilty of such negligence as to disentitle him to recover their value from the defendants. Per Perdue, J., that the plaintiff was guilty of such gross negligence, in the circumstances, in not calling the attention of the hotel keepers to his parcels, when he saw them lying in the hall, and taking no steps to have them in the hall, and taking no steps to have them removed to a safer place, as to relieve defendants from their common law liability as innkeepers. The Court being equally divided, the defendants' appeal from the verdict and judgment of a County Court in favour of the plaintiff was dismissed without costs. Barrie v. Wright, 15 Man. L. JJ., dissenting. Per Sedgewick, J.—The New Brunswick Act for securing to wives and children the benefits of life insurance (55 V c. 25) applies to accident insurance (35 v. c. 25) applies to accident insurance, as well as to life. Baggageman - Conditions in Policy -Hazardous Occupation - Voluntary Exposure to Danger.]-An accident policy issued to M., who was insured as a baggageman on a railway, contained the following conditions: "If the insured is injured in any occupation or exposure classed by this company as more hazardous than that stated in said application, his insurance shall only be for such sums as the premium paid by him will purchase at the rates fixed for such increased hazard. (There was no classification of "exposure by the company.) This insurance does not cover death resulting from voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger." M. was killed while coupling cars, a duty generally performed by a brakesman, whose occupation was classed by the company as more hazardous than that of a baggageman :-Held, affirming the judgor a baggageman:—Held, amrining the judg-ment of the Court of Appeal, 2 O. L. R. 521, 21 Occ, N. 553, which sustained the judgment for the plaintiff at the trial, 32 O. R. 284, 21 Occ. N. 76, that, as he was only performing an isolated act of coupling cars, the insured was not injured in an occupation classed as more hazardous under the first of the above conditions. Held, also, that as the evidence shewed that the insured was in the habit of coupling cars frequently, and therefore would not consider the operation dangerous, there was no "voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger" within the meaning of the second condition. McNevin v. Canadian Railway Accident Ins. Co., 22 Occ. N. 223, 32 S. C. R. 194

Beneficiary — Application — Incomplete Gift—Trust—Act to Secure to Wives and Children the Benefit of Life Insurance — Declaration.]—C. made a written application to an accident insurance company for $2,000 accident insurance, the policy "to be payable in case of death by accident under the provisions thereof to M.," wife of the deceased. The company issued its policy, payable to the representatives or assigns of the assured. M.'s name was not mentioned in the policy, neither was there anything in it to indicate in any way her as a beneficiary. M., as administratrix of C., brought an action on the policy for the recovery of the $2,000. The action was afterwards settled by the company paying the $1,000 now in dispute to the administratrix in discharge of the policy. On an application to pass the administratrix's accounts before the Judge of Probate, it was contended on behalf of the creditors of C. that the administratrix should account for the $1,000 as assets of the estate, and on behalf of M., that she was the sole beneficiary under of M., that she was the sole beneficiary under the policy, and the money formed no part of C.'s estate. It appeared that it was not the practice of the company in a case of this kind, notwithstanding the terms of the application, to issue a policy payable to the beneficiary named therein, but they held themselves bound, in case of death, to pay the amount due to the beneficiary named in the applica-tion. It also appeared that C. told M. that the policy was payable to her, and he gave it to her when he took it out. The Judge held that the money paid under the policy be-longed to the estate of C. From this deci-sion the administratrix appealed:—Held, that there was no complete gift inter vivos of the policy and fund to M. from her husband; and the intended gift being purely voluntary and incomplete, the Court would not complete it, and there was no trust created and de-clared in her favour. Apart from 58 V. c. 25, no interest would pass to M., even had she been named in the policy as beneficiary, merely by reason of that fact, and if C.

wished such interest to pass he must have left the money to her by will or settled it upon her during his life. The Act 58 V. c. 25, for securing to wives and children the benefit of life insurance, does not apply to accident insurance. The application can not be said to be a declaration under the Act, as under s, 6 the policy must be in existence before there can be a declaration affecting it. Cornwall v. Halifax Banking Co., 35 N. B. Reps. 398.

Change in Occupation - Exposure to Danger, 1-An accident insurance policy in favour of a railway servant, described as a baggageman, and employed as such at a small railway station, provided that, if the insured were injured "in any occupation or exposure classed by the company as more hazardous than that stated therein, the amount recoverable should be reduced in a certain proportion, and also that injuries resulting from "voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger were not covered. The insured while coupling cars received injuries which resulted in his death, it was shewn that at a small station like that in question a baggageman would not infrequently couple cars and that the insured had often done this work, although not strictly within the scope of his employment, this work being as a rule done by brakesmen, and the occupation of brakesman was classed by the defendants as more hazardous than that of baggageman: — Held, that hazardous "occupation or exposure" referred to in the policy was something of a permanent nature, and that the doing of isolated acts of a more hazardous nature did not change the insured's class or entitle the insurers to reduce the amount recoverable :- Held, also, per Armour, C.J.O., and Maclennan, J.A., that, as the in-sured might reasonably have thought that it was his duty, to couple the cars, there was not a voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger. But per Osler and Moss, JJ.A., that there was such exposure, the act being a voluntary one and its danger being apparent. In the result the judgment of Falconbridge, C.J., 32 O. R. 284, 21 Occ. N. 76, in favour of the insured's representatives, was affirmed.

Disability — "Immediately Disable"—Cusation or Time—Notice of Accident—Condition Precedent.]—An accident polley issue to the plaintiff contained a contract that "if accidental injuries shall immediately, continuously, and wholly disable" the assured, the defendants would pay a weekly allowance. The plaintiff was injured by accident within the meaning of the policy, but did not become wholly disabled from the effect of such accident until three months afterwards, when he notified the defendants, the insurers:—Held, that the word "immediately" in the contract had relation to causation and not to time, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Williams v. Preferred Mutual Accident Assn., 91 Ga. 698, and Merrill v, Travellers Ins. Co., 91 Wis. 329, distinguished. The policy also contained a condition that written notice must be immediately given to the company at the office in Montreal, and "that if in any terespect the conditions of this insurance are disregarded all rights hereunder are forfeited to the corporation." Held, that the giving of notice forthwith was not thereby made a condition precedent to the right of recovery on Information Withheld by Insured -Previous Insurance—Concellation or Surren-der — Facts Material to Risk — Jury — Mis-direction.] — A policy of accident insurance was issued upon an application containing a warranty that the applicant had not withheld any information which was calculated to influence the decision of the directors as to the applicant's eligibility for insurance, and also a warranty that no application ever made by the applicant for accident insurance had been declined, and no accident policy issued to him had been cancelled by any company. The plaintiff had effected previous insurance, which, on a settlement of a disputed claim was put an end to during its currency with the consent of the plaintiff, but at the request of the company, the unearned premiums being returned:—Held, that the proper question for the jury was whether the withholding of this information was in fact material, and it was misdirection to tell the jury that they were to consider whether the plaintiff believed it material; that the putting an end to the policy with the consent of the plaintiff was a surrender and not a cancellation, and was not a breach of the warranty that no policy issued to him had ever been cancelled. Smith v. Dominion of Canada Accident Ins. Co., 36 N. B. Reps. 300.

Married Woman.—Absence of Authorication—Void Contract.—Action on, by Husband —Terms of Policy.]—A contract of insurance against accidents by a married woman, even one who has no community of property with her husband, must be authorized by the husband, and if such authorization is wanting the contract is absolutely void: arts. 177, 183, C. C. 2. Therefore, the husband cannot bring an action founded upon such contract of insurance. 3. In this case the policy of insurance upon which the action was brought, stipulated that the insurance company should pay an indemnity only in case of the assured sustaining body in jury accidentally and involuntarily while travelling by land or water. The saured was injured in her own house:—Held, that the accident did not fall within the scope of the policy, and therefore there was no right of action. Transit Ins. Co. v. Plasondon, Q. R. 13 K. B. 225.

Policy—Construction—"Riding" in Public Conveyance.]—A person who is injured while getting into a public conveyance, after he has got upon the step or platform, but before the vehicle has begun to move, is "riding as a passenger on a public conveyance" within the meaning of a clause in an accident insurance policy containing those words. Posia v. Ontario Accident Ins. Co., 21 Occ. N. 164, 1 O. J. R. 54.

Proofs of Loss—Sufficiency of — Waiver—Death by Accident — Finding of Jury — Vagueness of.]—Proofs of loss were furnished within the time limited by an accident policy, without any objection being then taken to their sufficiency, or further proofs asked for, the refusal to pay being based on the contention that the circumstances surrounding the death of the insured brought it within a clause of the policy providing against liability p—25 where the death was by suicide, duelling, &c., or from natural causes; objection to the sufficiency of the proofs having been taken for the first time in the statement of defence delivered a couple of years afterwards: — Held, that the proofs as furnished were sufficient; but, in any event objection to their sufficiency, or the right to call for further proofs, was waived. By the policy, the death was required to be by accidental bodily injury, caused by violent external means; while by s. 152 of the Insurance Act, R. S. O. c. 203, which is to be read with the policy, "accident" is defined as any bodily injury occasioned by external force or agency, and happening without the direct intent of the person injured, or happening as the direct result of his intentional act, such act not amounting to violent or negligent exposure to unnecessary danger. The finding of the jury was that there was no evidence to satisfy them that the deceased came to his death by his own hand, but that he came to his death by external injury unknown to them:—Held, that the finding was too vague to be construed as a finding of accidental death; and a new trial was directed. III. FIRE.

Agreement as to Loss-Refusal to Arbitrate-Adjustment - Conditions of Policy -Waiver-Evidence.]-By a contract of insurance against fire made between the plaintiff and defendants, it was provided that in case of disaster the amount of the damages should be determined by agreement between the company and the assured, or by arbitration; that the assured should, whenever demanded, produce for examination to any person appointed by the company anything which remained of the insured property damaged or not damaged that he should also produce for examination to any person appointed by the company anything which remained of the insured property damaged or not damaged; that he should also produce for examination his books, invoices, or other papers, or certified copies if the originals were destroyed; that the company should not be considered to have waived any condition unless the waiver should be clearly expressed in writing and signed by an agent of the company. A fire having partly de-stroyed the insured property, the manager of the defendants himself visited the place, and the plaintiff having proposed to him to sub-mit the settlement of his indemnity claim to arbitrators, the manager answered that he did not wish to have arbitration, and asked the plaintiff to prepare for him a statement of his loss and send it to him, adding that if it was satisfactory he would pay it. He told him at the same time that he could clean up the place and continue his business. The plaintiff prepared a statement, and, at the request of the manager, made his claim in writing. The manager submitted this claim to adjusters. and they went to the premises of the plaintiff to make an examination of his losses, but the plaintiff refused to shew them the damaged goods, which were for the most part still in his possession, saying that everything had been cleaned up and that no further state-ment of the damages could be made. The defendants then refused to pay, but did not allege that the account of the plaintiff was too large; and that the contract of insurance being in its nature commercial, oral evidence was admissible to prove the facts; and to do so was not to let in evidence to contradict a writing or to violate the condition of the policy which required a waiver in writing of the conditions of the contract, for the policy provided for a settlement by agreement, and the plaintiff was able to prove such agreement by witnesses. 2. In view of the refusal of the manager of the defendants to submit the settlement of the claim to arbitrators, and his proposition that the plaintiff should himself prepare a statement of his loss, the plaintiff could not be required to exhibit to the adjusters the damaged goods. Application—Diagram of building—Omission from—Agent. Ball v. Farmers' Central Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 1 O. W. R. 168.

Application — Untrue Statement — Materiality—Statutury Condition,]—In an application for insurance against fire, to the question "Have you ever had any property destroyed by fire?" the applicant answered, yes. "Give date of fire, and, if insured, name of company interested." "1892. National and London and Lancashire." The evidence shewed that there was a fire on the applicant's property in 1882, and two fires in 1892, and two fires in 1892, and the insurance granted on this application was on property which replaced that destroyed by the latter fires:—Held, reversing the judgment in 35 N. S. Reps. 488, that the above questions were material to the risk, and the answers untrue. The first statutory condition, therefore, precluded recovery on the policy. Western Assurance Co. v. Harrison, 35 S. C. R. 473.

Apprehension of Incendiary Danger—
Intrue Ansier, — An application Filed in by Local Agent — Untrue Ansier, — An application for insurance on the contents of a barn contained the question, "1s there any incendiary danger threatened or apprehended," to which the answer was, "No." The plaintiff, who had not previously carried any insurance, stated that he effected the insurance, having learned that the owner of the barn had placed a high insurance on it, as well as on the adjacent dwelling-house. This was told by the plaintiff to the company's agent, who filled in the application and the answers to the questions. The application was then signed by the applicant, who was not an illiterate man, but he did not read over the application, and was not told that the question had been answered in the negative:—Held, that the plaintiff was bound by the answer to the question, he inserted in the application, it being material to the risk, and that it was untrue, for the reasonable inference was that the apprehension of incendiary danger as a fact existed Graham v. Ontario Mutual Ins. Co., 14 o. R. 358, and Chattillon v. Canadian Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 27 C. P. 450, considered and commented on. Quarer, whether the linquiry raised by the question was not as to the apprehension of the applicant of incendiary danger, and not whether, as a fact, any incendiary danger was to be apprehended. Assignment of Policy - Formalities -Notice to Insurers—Admission—Representa-tion of Value of Goods Insured—Fraud—Undisclosed Insurance-Proof of Claim-Time-Waiver.]-A transfer of a contract of insurance, by a private writing made in duplicate, signed by the transferor and transferee in the presence of two witnesses, is good and valid. 2. The admission of the debtor that he received a duplicate of such transfer is a sufficient signification (1571, C. C.). 3. An estimate by the insured in round figures of the value of the stock, at the time of the application, should not be considered a ground of nullity, unless it contains such an exaggeration as creates a suspicion of fraudulent intention. 4. The fact that an interim receipt had issued for an insurance in another company, which insurance was afterwards declined by that company, does not establish a plea of undisclosed insurance. 5. The time limit for furnishing statement of loss is waived by a letter from the company to the insured, dated after the expiration of the delay, and enclosing a blank form of policy in order that the insured might know exactly what it was necessary that he should do. Western Assurance Co. v. Garland, Q. R. 12 K. B. 530.

Gancellation—Notice—Statutory Conditions.]—The insured sent to the company his policy with an indorsed surrender clause executed, and a letter asking that the insurance be terminated and the uncarred proportion of the premium repaid. Owing to its misinection by the insured, the letter was delayed in the post office and did not reach the company till the morning after the insured property had been destroyed by fire:—Held, that the letter did not take effect from the time of its being posted, but only from the time of its receipt, and that the relationship of the parties had been so changed by the occurrence of the fire before its receipt that the attempted surrender did not operate, and therefore the company were liable for the loss. of fire ring the certificate as to the matters contained in the statement of loss under the hands of two magistress most contiguous to the place of the first. A further condition provided that no condition should be deemed to have been writing indorsed on the policy:—Held, per Tuck, C.J., Hanington, Barker, and Gregory, J.J., that the production of the certificate of the magistrates most contiguous to the place of fire was a condition precedent to the assured's right to recover. Per Landry and McLoed, J.J., that the magistrate most contiguous qualified to act is the most contiguous within the menning of the condition, though not the merrest in point of distance to the place of the fire. Per Curiam, that if there could be a waiver under the condition without indorsement on the policy, the acceptance of the proof of loss by the company, without objection, was not a waiver. LeBlane v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 35 N. B. Reps. 935.

Conditions—Limitation of Risk—Amount of Loss—Arbitration.]—1. Where it is a condition of the policy that the total insurance on each item of the property insured shall not exceed two-thirds of the cash value of such item, and that notice shall be given of all previous insurance effected by the insured on the same property, and it appears that the insurance exceeds two-thirds of the cash value, and that other insurance, on two items, to the amount of $100, exists without having been declared to the company, the policy is void. 2. The condition that, in case of a loss by fire, the amount of the damages shall be determined by arbitrators, and that no action shall be brought until the amount of the loss is so determined is a legal condition. Pharand v. Lancashire Ins. Co., Q. R. 18 S. C. 25.

Conditions-Prior Insurance - Abandonment - Subsequent Insurance - Interim Rement—Subsection I in a policy of insurance for $2,000 in the M. Co., wrote to D., a sub-agent of the R. Co., that he was going to abandon that insurance, and insurance to the control of in the R. Co. for about $3,000. B. gave D. his note for $51 and paid him $25 in cash, and D. sent B. the usual interim receipt of the R. Co., promising the subsequent issue of a policy which was to be subject to the conditions indorsed on the receipt. One of these provided that the policy should be void if there was any prior insurance, unless the consent of the company were indorsed. D. discounted the note and in due course accounted to the R. Co. for the full amount of the premium. The goods insured were destroyed by fire before the maturity of the note, which B. paid at maturity. No formal application for the insurance was signed by B., but a policy was made out before the fire and sent to D., who did not, however, deliver it to B. In actions brought upon the two policies by the assignees of B.:-Held, that Be's statement that he was going to abandon the insurance in the M. Co. was not merely an expression of intention, but was a term or condition that affected the very existence of the proposed insurance in the R. Co., which was not to become effective until that condition was fulfilled, and, as B. never did so abandon, there never was any effective insurance on his goods in the R. Co.; and therefore the M. Co. could not set up the conditional contract of insurance in the R. Co. as a breach of the statutory condition against a subsequent insurance. Commercial Union Assace. Co. v. Temple, 29 S. C. R. 206, and Western Assec. Co. v. Temple, 31 S. C. R. 373, followed. Whita v. Royal Ins. Co., Whitla v. Hunitoba Assec. Co. 22 Occ. N. 69, 72, 266, 14 Man. L. R. 90.

Conditions-Prior Insurance-Subsequent Insurance—Substitution of Policies—Implied Assent—Adjustment of Loss—Waiver,]— In an application for insurance, particulars of prior insurance in two other companies of $4,000 in each company were given, but in the policy in question prior insurance for only $4,000 was assented to, neither company being named. The defendants pleaded as a breach of the statutory conditions non-disclosure of prior insurance for $4,000 in one of the two companies:-Held, that the plea must be read strictly and without amendment, and that so read the assent in the policy to insurance of $4,000 might be treated as an assent to the prior insurance complained of in the plea; and semble, that, had the defendants not intended to assent to the prior insurance of $8,000, they would have been bound under the second statutory condition to point out in writing the particulars wherein the policy differed from the application. Held, also, that to a subsequent insurance for $4,000, in another company, in substitution for a prior insurance to that amount in one of the two companies mentioned in the application, the assent of the defendants was not necessary. Assent, express or implied, to subsequent in-surance is sufficient even if given after the loss has occurred. In this case such assent was held to be sufficiently shewn by the defendants joining in the adjustment of the loss and allowing the insured to accept from the subsequent insurers their proportion of the loss as so adjusted. Mutchmor v. Waterloo Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 22 Occ. N. 406, 4 O. L. R. 606, 1 O. W. R. 667.

Conditions - Sale and Unconditional Owner - Mortgagor - Other Insurance -Estoppel.]—A policy of fire insurance contained a condition that if the insured were not the sole and unconditional owner of the property, the policy should be void. At the time the policy was issued there was a mortgage on the property for a small amount, the existence of which was not disclosed to the insurance company by the plaintiff, who insured as owner:—Held, that the mortgage did not avoid the policy under the condition. Another condition of the policy was that it should become void if the assured had r should become void it the assured had r should obtain any other insurance on the property. While the policy was in force, the insured's son, without his knowledge, applied to another insurance company for a policy on the same property, but, before he was notified of the acceptance of his application, the property was destroyed by fire:-Held, following Commercial Union Assurance Co. v. Temple, 29 S. C. R. 206, that the policy was not avoided:—Held, also, that the plaintiff was not, under the circumstances arising at the trial, estopped by his admission in the declaration from claiming that there was no other insurance. Temple v. Western Assurance Co., 21 Occ. N. 427, 31 S. C. R. 373.

Conditions — Subsequent Insurance — Destruction of Property Insured—Sole Owner—Mortgagor—Pleading.]—A policy of insurance against Cre contained the following

condition: "If the assured have or shall hereafter obtain any other policy or agreement for insurance, whether valid or not, on the property above mentioned, or any part thereof any part therefore, this policy shall become void, unless consent in writing by the company be indorsed hereon:"—Held, following Commercial Union Assec, Co. v. Temple, 29 S. C. R. 206, that where additional insurance was applied for, but not accepted until after the property was destroyed by fire, the condition had no application. A mortgagor is the "sole and unconditional owner" of property within the meaning of a condition in a policy of insurance against fire stipulating that the policy shall become void if the assured is not the sole and unconditional owner of the property insured. The policy also contained a condition that it should become void if any building intended to be insured stood on grounds not owned in fee simple by the as-sured. The land upon which the buildings insured stood was subject to a mortgage :-Held, that the defence that the lands were not owned in fee simple by the asured mortgagor was not available under a plea charggagor was not available under a plea charging that the plaintiff had been guilty of misrepresentation in the application for insurance, in that he stated that the property insured was not mortgaged or otherwise incumbered, whereas, etc., it was mortgaged. Temple v. Western Assec. Co., 35 N. B. Reps.

Conditions - Variation - Requirements of Insurance Act—Imperative Provisions— Exception in Body of Policy—Negativing in Pleading—Proofs of Loss—Interest — Value Pleading—Proofs of Loss—Interest — Value of Insured Property, 1—In an action upon a fire insurance policy, it appeared that at the time of the loss a portion of the plaintiff's note given for the premium was unpaid, and the defendants relied upon a condition indersed on the policy that the company should not be liable in such a case. What purported to be the statutory conditions prescribed by the Fire Insurance Policy Act, R. S. M. c. 50 were writted on the back of the policy. 59, were printed on the back of the policy, and, following these, under the heading "Variations in conditions," were several other conditions, including the one relied on, printed in ink of a different colour, but in type apparently of the same size as that of the statutory conditions from the words found in the statute, and the heading prescribed by s. the statute, and the heading prescribed by s. 4 of the Act was omitted:—Held, that the requirements of the statute were inoperative, and the plaintiff was not bound by the condition on which the defendants relied. Sly v. Ottawa Agricultural Co., 25 C. P. 28. Sands v. Standard Ins. Co., 27 Gr. 167, and Bellagh v. Royal Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 5 A. R. 87, followed. 2. The policy stated in the body of it that the defendants were not responsible for loss by varietie fires:—Held. sponsible for loss by prairie fires: — Held, that this qualification was a condition of the insurance within the meaning of the Act, and should have been set forth in the manner prescribed for non-statutory conditions, which it was not, and in pleading the plain-tiff was not bound to negative it. 3. The defendants objected at the trial to the sufficiency of the proofs of claim, but they had not notified the plaintiff in writing that his not notified the plaintiff in writing that his proof was objected to:—Held, that under s. 2 of the Act, they could not now take advantage of any defect in the proofs. 4. The plaintiff was entitled under 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 42, s. 29, to interest on the insurance money, but only from the expiration of thirty days from the time he sent in his corrected and completed proofs of loss. 5. The insured was not precluded from shewing what the real value of the property-insured was by the fact that he had, under peculiar circumstances, offered to sell it for less than the amount for which it was insured. Green v. Manitoba Assurance Co., 21 Occ. N. 360, 13 Man. L. R. 395.

Conditions of Policy - Double Insurance-Application-Representation and Warranties-Substituted Insurance - Condition Precedent—Lapse—Estoppel.]—B., desiring to abandon his insurance against fire with the Manitoba Assurance Co., and in lieu thereof, to effect insurance on the same property with the Royal Insurance Co., wrote to the local agent of the latter company staring his intention and asking to have a policy in the "Royal" in substitution for his existing insurance in the "Manitoba." On rereceiving an application and payment of the premium, the agent issued an interim receipt to B. insuring the property pending issue of a policy, and forwarded the appli-cation and the premium, with his report, to his company's head office in Montreal, where the enclosures were received and retained. The interim receipt contained a condition for The interim receipt contained a constance unon-liability in case of prior insurance unless with the company's written assent, but it did not in any way refer to the existing insurance with the Manitoba Assurance Company of the Charles of the Char Before receipt of a policy from the "Royal. and while the interim receipt was still in force, the property insured was destroyed by fire, and B. had not in the meantime formally abandoned his policy with the Manitoba Assurance Co. The latter policy was conditioned to lapse in case of subsequent additional insurance without the consent of the company. B. filed claims with both companies, which were resisted, and he subsequently assigned his rights to the plaintiffs, quently assigned his rights to the plantus, by whom actions were brought against both companies:—Held, reversing both judgments appealed from, 14 Man. L. R. 90, 22 Occ. N. 69, 72, 266, that, as the Royal Insurance Company had been informed, through their agent, of the prior insurance by B. when effecting the substituted insurance, they must be assumed to have undertaken the risk, not withstanding that such prior insurance had not been formally abandoned, and that the Manitoba Assurance Co. were relieved from liability by reason of such substituted insurance being taken without their consent; and both companies did not deprive him or his assignees of the right to recover against the company liable upon the risk. Contract — Lex Loci — Lex Fori — Principal and Agent—Payment of Premium —Interim Receipt—Repudiation of Acts of Sub-agent.]-The lex fori must be presumed to be the law governing a contract, unless the lex loci be proved to be different. The appointment of a local agent of a fire insurance company is one in the nature of a delectus persone, and he cannot delegate his authority nor bind his principal through the medium of a sub-agent. Summers v. Commercial Union Assurance Co., 6 S. C. R. 19, followed. The local agent of a fire insurance company was authorized to affect interim insurances by issuing interim receipts, countersigned by himself, on the payment of the premiums in cash. He employed a canvasser to solicit insurances, who pretended to effect an insurance on behalf of the company by issuing an interim receipt countersigned by him (the canvasser) as agent for the company, taking a promissory note payable in three months to his own order for the amount of the premium :- Held, that the canvasser could not bind the company by a contract on the terms he assumed to make, as the agent himself had no such authority:—Held, further, that, even if the agent might be said to have power to appoint a sub-agent for the purpose of soliciting insurances, the employment of the canvasser for that purpose did not confer authority to conclude contracts, to sign interim receipts, nor to receive premiums for insurances. Canadian Fire Insurance Co. v. insurances. Canadian Fire Insurance Co. Robinson, 22 Occ. N. 8, 31 S. C. R. 488.

Contract — "Valid in Canada"—Policy in Company not Licensed in Canada—Premium.]—A contract to procure fire insurance is some office valid in Canada, means, in some company licensed to do business in Canada, and a premium paid under such a contact may be recovered back, as upon a failure of consideration, if the insurance is effected without the knowledge of the insured in a company not so licensed. Barrett v. Elliott. 24 Occ. N. 344, 10 B. C. R. 461.

Contract of Re-insurance—Trade Custom—Conditions—"Rider" to Policy—Limitation of Actions—Commencement of Preservition.]—A contract of re-insurance consisted of a blank form of policy of fire insurance in ordinary use, with a "rider" attached setting forth the conditions of re-insurance. The policy contained a clause providing that no action should be maintainable thereon unless commenced within twelve months next after the fire. The "rider" provided that the re-insurance should be subject to the same risks, conditions, valuations, privileges, mode of settlement, etc., as the original policy, and that loss, if any, should be payable ten days after presentation of proofs of payment by the company so re-insured:— Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, Girouard and Nesbitt, JJ., dissenting, that there was no incongruity between the limitation of twelve months in the form of the main policy and the condition in the rideragreement as to claims for re-insurance, and, consequently, that the action for recovery of the amount of the re-insurance was prescribed by the conventional limitation or twelve months from the date of the fire occasioning the loss. Victoria Montreal Fire Ins. Co. V. Home Ins. Co., 25 Occ. N. 3, 35 S. C. R. 208.

Failure to State Prior Insurance—Renewal of Policy—Effect of,]—Where, at the time of effecting an insurance against fire, there was a prior insurance in force, and no statement thereof was made, either in the application of policy issued thereon, the renewal of such policy, without any such statement being then made—such prior insurance having then expired—does not validate the policy, for the renewal constitutes merely a continuation of the policy, and not a new insurance. Agricultural Savings and Loan

Foreign Company not Registered in Ontario — Uause of Action Cognizable in Ontario—Place of Payment—Ontario Insurance Act, s. 143—Rule 162 (c)—Delivery of Policy to Agent of Assured—Prohibited Contract—Insurance Act, s. 85.] — Defendants were incorporated under the laws of the State of Delaware, and their home office was at Wilmington. in that State, but the preat Wilmington, in that State, but the president and secretary reside in Chicago, where the policy was executed. George Wilson & Co., of St. Catharines, applied for this policy through one Nairn, an insurance broker carrying on business in Montreal. According to the evidence of the president of defendants, taken under commission, Nairn was not an agent of defendants, nor had they any agent or officer in Ontario or any part of Canada. By order of a Divisional Court (3 O. W. R. 372) it was directed that de-fendants should be allowed to enter a conditional appearance, and, that plaintiffs "do prove at the trial of this action a cause of action upon when they are entitled to sue the defendant within the province of Ontario. No of payment was named in the policy. In Clark v. Union Fire Ins. Co., 10 P. R. 313, 6 O. R. 223, it was decided that where no place of payment was mentioned in the policy it must be assumed that the place of payment was where the head office of the company was situated. The evidence bearing upon the delivery of the policy consisted of that of the assured, Wilson, who swore that he received the policy through the mail from Nairn, and the evidence of the president of defendants that the policy was delivered to the assured's agent, Mr. Nairn. The evidence does not disclose whether such delivery was made personally in Chicago or by mail in Montreal:—Held, that the proviby mail in Montreal:—Heed, that the provision in s. 143 of the Ontario Insurance Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 203, as to committing a policy to the post office "to be delivered or handed over to the assured, his assign or agent in Ontario" contemplates a committing to the post office of the policy by the insurer, addressed to the insured, his assign or agent in Ontario, and does not contemplate circum. in Ontario, and does not contemplate circumstances such as those in this case. Further, that the provision in such event that the moneys should be payable at the office of the chief officer or agent in Ontario, shews that the section was intended to apply to com-panies having an officer or agent in Ontario. and not to a company which has in no way brought itself or its business within the limits of Ontario. There was no evidence of any request or authority from defendants to Nairn to forward the policy to Wilson, and therefore the plaintiffs have failed to shew that the policy in question was, by or with the authority of defendants, committed to the post office to be delivered or handed over to the assured, his assign or agent in Ontario, and therefore plaintiffs have failed to prove a cause of action upon which they are entitled to sue in Ontario. The address of the insured was not given in the policy, which simply insures "George Wilson & Co." for the term of one year against loss by fire, to the amount of $1,000, to the property therein described, located at St. Catharines, Ontario, Canada, loss, if any, payable to the Quebec Bank; and there was nothing in the evidence to shew that defendants knew that Wilson & Co. resided at St. Catharines. Even if it were intended by defendants that the policy should be delivered to the insured at St Catharines, within the meaning of s. 143, then the plaintiffs have not proved a cause of acthe paintains may not proved a clause of ac-tion for which they are entitled to sue within Ontario. Action dismissed with costs. Bur-sow v. German Union Insurance Co., 6 O. W. R. 21, 10 O. L. R. 238.

Interim Receipt — Agent, Powers of—Premium.]—On the 21st April, 1900, D. and C. applied for a policy of insurance for $5,000 upon their property, and an interim receipt, signed by one of the company's agents, was given to them on the same day. According to this receipt the property in question was thereby insured for thirty days from the date thereof, unless the policy was sooner delivered, or notice was given that the application was declined by the company; the receipt also provided that any loss payable under the policy should be paid to R., who held a mortgage on the property. The property was destroyed by the great fire of the 26th April, 1800. The company, refused to pay the claim thus made, upon the ground that no premium had ever been received, and also upon the ground that the person who signed the receipt was not a duly authorized agent: —Held, that the agent who signed the receipt was at the time a duly reconjized agent:

of the company; and that the company was bound by the receipt, although no premium had actually been paid. Canadian Fire Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 21 Occ. N. 443.

Interim Receipt - Estoppel tory Conditions — R. S. O. 1897 c. 203, s. 168.]—The plaintiffs, through an agent of the defendants, orally applied on the 7th November, 1901, for an insurance for one year, and the defendants accepted the risk for one year the defendants accepted the risk for one year at a premium of $33.60, and gave an inter-im receipt, which, however, provided in terms that the insurance should be for 30 days only. On the 30th November, 1901, the plaintiffs paid a full year's premiur, to the agent, and believed themselves insured for the whole year. According to his usual course of dealing with the defendants, the agent did not pay over the premium to the latter till the 20th January, 1902, and the latter till the 20th January, 1902, and the defendants ac-cepted it, knowing for what it was paid. They did not, however, issue a policy, and after the fire had occurred repudiated liability, on the ground that they had only in-sured the plaintiffs for 30 days:—Held, that the defendants were liable, for, if they intended to treat the insurance as terminated at the end of 30 days, it was their plain duty to have so informed the plaintiffs, and re-turned them a proper proportion of the premium paid; and not having done so they were legally, as well as morally, liable both by virtue of the second statutory condition, N. S. O. 1897 c. 203, s. 168 (2), and also on the ground of estoppel. Coulter v. Equity Fire Ins. Co., 24 Occ. N. 88, 7 O. L. R. 180, 3 O. W. R. 194, 4 O. W. R. 383.

Mortgagor and Mortgagee-Release of Equity of Redemption—Cessation of Mort-gagor's Interest.]—H., who had made a mort-gage under the Short Forms Act on certain lands to the plaintiff, such mortgage containing a covenant to insure the mortgaged premises, effected thereon an insurance against fire. On the face of the policy was this in-dorsement: "Loss, if any, payable to (the plaintiff) as his interest may appear under the mortgage." The interest having become in arrear, H. made a deed to the plaintiff, whereby he granted, released, and confirmed unto the plaintiff the said mortgaged lands, without the consent of the insurance company having been obtained therefor. premises having been subsequently destroyed by fire:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the insurance moneys, for (1) the fact of the conveyance made by H. to the plaintiff whereby he ceased to have any interest at the time of the fire, was a good answer to the claim; and (2) such conveyance constituted a breach of the fourth statutory condition, which provided against the insured premises being assigned without the insurance company's consent. Mutual Contract-Untrue Representation-Title-Material Statement-Sketch on Policy.]-In a contract of mutual fire insurance, where the application forms part of the contract, representations in the application as to the title of the insured are to be strictly interpreted, and the rules of ordinary fire insurance do not apply. So, where the insured stated in the application that he was owner of the immovable sought to be in-sured, whereas his father-in-law was the registered owner, his pretension that he was the real owner, and that his father-in-law was merely his agent in respect of the property, could not avail, and the contract was absolutely null and void. 2. Where the insured has made a material false statement in his application, as to one of the subjects insured, the whole contract is void. inadvertent misstatement by the insured, in his application, as to the name of the company in which an insurance existed, is immaterial, and will not avoid the contract. 4. The insured is not bound by sketches or additions made by the company's agents on the back of the policy, after he signed the same. Lambert v. La Foncière Compagnie d'Assurance centre le Feu, Q. Mutual Plan-Annual Renewal-Proposal for Increased Premium—Non-accep-tance—Condition of Payment in Advance— Delivery of Receipt—Waiver.]—On the 31st October, 1898, the defendants issued their policy on the mutual plan to the plaintiffs for an insurance of $20,000 upon their property, and on the 31st October, 1899, a furpolicy for $10,000. The policies provided for insurances for one year and "during such further period or periods for which the assured shall from time to time have paid in advance the renewal premium or prepaid in advance the renewal premium of premiums required by the company, and for which the company shall have issued a renewal receipt or receipts." The plaintiffs newal receipt or receipts." The plaintiffs paid the premiums in 1898, 1899, and 1900, but not in advance. On the 28th October, 1901, the executive officer of the defendants wrote to the plaintiffs enclosing renewal receipts and asking the plaintiffs to remit the amounts of the cash premiums. The rates being higher, some correspondence ensued, and on the 16th November, 1901, when a fire took place, the plaintiffs had not paid the cash premiums. The rates being higher, some correspondence ensued, and on the 16th Nov-became payable, and had not cancelled these reinsurances down to the time of the trial: -Held, that no contract existed between the plaintiffs and defendants for an insurance for the year beginning on the 31st Octo-Semble, that if the plaintiffs had unqualifiedly accepted the renewal terms, the condition providing for payment in advance of the cash premium would have been waived; for the intention of the defendants in delivering the receipt, where the money had not in fact been paid, was to keep the policy in force and to give the plaintiffs credit for

The application for the insurance was made on 3rd February, 1903, and was for an insurance for one year; it was oral; one of the application forms of defendants was partly filled up by the agents and signed in the name of plaintiffs, per G. S., which are the initials of a member of the firm of R. Stewart & Son, the agents. This was done without the knowledge, consent, or authority of plaintiffs. In the policy the property insured was stated as being held by assured as owners." The latter statement did not appear in the application form. . . All the property was developed to the property and the property was developed to the property to the propert appear in the application form. All the property was destroyed by fire during the currency of the policy, and this action was brought to recover $2,500, the amount insured. The only defence made was, that plaintiffs were not, by reason of the 10th statutory condition, entitled to recover for the loss in respect of the 3 machines, because, or it is pleaded they were owned by a peras it is pleaded, they were owned by a person other than plaintiffs, and the interest of plaintiffs in them was not stated in or upon the policy:—Held, plaintiffs had an insurable interest in the property at the insurable interest in the property at the time of the fire to the extent of at least $2,500, and the 2nd statutory condition: "After application for insurance it shall be deemed that any policy sent to the assured is intended to be in accordance with the terms of the application, unless the company point out in writing the particulars wherein the policy differs from the applicawherein the poncy differs from the application," and there was no reason for confining the operation of this condition to a written application. Davidson v. Waterloo Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 5 O. W. R. 264, 9 O. L. R.

Oral Contract—Interim Receipt—Estop-pel—Statutory Conditions—R. S. O. 1897 c. 203, s. 168.]—The plaintiffs, through an agent of the defendants orally applied on the 7th November, 1901, for an insurance for one year, and the defendants accepted the risk for one year at a premium of $33.60, and gave an interim receipt, which, however, provided in terms that the insurance should be for 30 days only. On the 30th November, 1901, the plaintiffs paid a full year's premium to the agent and believed themselves insured the whole vear. According to his usual course of dealing with the defendants the agent did not pay over the premium to the latter till the 20th January, 1902, and the defendants accepted it knowing for what it was paid. They did not, however, issue a policy, and after the fire occurred repudiated liability on the ground that they had only insured the plaintiffs for 30 days. Held, defendants liable, for if they intended to treat the insurance as terminated at the end of 30 days it was their duty to have so informed the plaintiffs and returned them a proper portion of the premium paid, and not having done so they were legally, as well as morally liable both by virtue of the second statutory condition, R. S. O. 1897 c. 203, s. 168 (2) and also on the ground of estoppel. Coulter v. Equity Fire Ins. Co., 24 Occ. N. 88, 7 O. L. R. 180, 3 O. W. R. 194, Affirmed 25 Occ. N. 30, 4 O. W. R. 383, 9 O. L. R. 35.

Policy—Application — Misrepresentation—Ownership—Apent.]—An application for insurance made by the plaintiff contained the following question: "Are you the owner of following question; "Are you the owner of the land on which the above described build-ing stands?" Before the written answer to this was put down the plaintiff told M., the this was put down the plaintiff fold M., the defendants' agent, that he was not the owner of the land, but that the building stood on the highway. Whereupon M. said: "We will put it down as yours," and, with the consent of the plaintiff, wrote "Yes" as the answer to the question. to the question. The application contained this provision also: "If the agent of the company fills up or signs this application, he will in that case be the agent of the applicant and not the agent of the company."
The jury found that the house stood on the highway:—Held, in an action on the policy (Tuck, C.J., and VanWart, J., dissenting), that, notwithstanding the foregoing provision, the verbal communication made to M., the agent, must be taken as if made to the company, and, therefore, there was no misrepresentation on the part of the plaintiff. first condition in the policy was as follows: "If an application, survey, plan, or description of the property herein insured is referred to in this policy, such application, survey, plan, or description shall be considered a part of this contract, etc." The only reference to the application in the policy was as follows: "Situate on the north side of the Great Road from Dalhousie to Bathurst, in the Parish of Durham, Restigouche County, N. B., as per diagram filed with application."
The diagram was on the back of the appli-The diagram was on the one of the application, but it was not put there until after the plaintiff had signed it. The presumption was that it was so put there by M., the company's agent:—Held (Tuck, C.J., and Van-Wart, J., dissenting), that, as the diagram was treated as a separate piece of paper, the words of reference in the policy were not sufficient to incorporate into it the whole application. appellant:—Held, that the breach of the condition made the policy void. 2. The statement in the policy that it is in favour of a third person is subject, as regards the latter, to the conditions which the policy contains; the insurer sot being subjected to other obligations than those which he has assumed by his contract. Migner v. St. Laurence Fire Ins. Co., Q. R. 10 Q. B. 122.

Policy—Form of—"Co-insurance" Clause—Statutory Conditions—Variations.]—A policy of fire insurance issued on the 2nd January, 1896, contained the clause known as the "co-insurance clause" (requiring the insured to keep the property covered by other policies to at least seventy-five per cent. of its value), printed under the heading "variations in conditions," as prescribed by ss. 115 and 116 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 167:—Held, affirming the judgments in 27 A. R. 373, 20 Occ. N. 297, 29 O. R. 695, 18 Occ. N. 361, that, whether or not the alteration introduced into the policy was of the nature of a variation of any particular statutory condition, or in addition to statutory condition, or in addition to statutory condition, and that it formed part of the contract of insurance to the same extent as the statutory conditions indorsed on the policy would have, if the alteration had been printed therein. Eckhardt v. Lancashire Insurance Co., 21 Occ. N. 136, 31 S. C. R. 72.

Policy on Goods-Partial Loss-Other Insurance-Proportionate Payment-Conditions of Policy - Construction-Overvaluation.—The insurance was upon goods valued in the application at $15,000. The policy was dated the 11th June. 1902, and the fire occurred on the 12th July following, with a loss of $6,250. The defendants' policy was for $3,000; there was other insurance to the amount of $7,000; and the total value of the goods at the time of the fire was $9,274.62. sould at the time of the fire was $0,212.05. Statutory condition No. 9 provided that "in the event of any other insurance on the property herein described having been assented to as aforesaid, then this company shall, if such other insurance remains in force, on the happening of any loss or dam-age, only be liable for the payment of a ratable proportion of such loss or damage, without reference to the dates of the different policies." A special condition was indersed A special condition was indorsed on the policy as follows: "The assured shall not be entitled to recover from this company more than two-thirds of the actual cash value of any building, and in case of further insurance then only the ratable proportion of such two-thirds of the actual cash value, unless more than such two-thirds value, as represented in the application, shall have been insured, in which case the company shall be liable for such proportion of the actual value as the amount insured bears to the value given in the application. In the case of property insured being found, by arbitration or otherwise, to have been overvalued in the application for this policy, the company shall be liable (in the absence of fraud) for such proportion of the actual value as the amount insured bears to the value given in the application:"-Held, that the special condition was inapplicable to the case of a partial loss, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendants three-tenths of the amount of his loss, in accordance with statutory condition No. 9. Eacrett v. Gore District Mutual Ins. Co., 24 Occ. N. 7, 6 O. L. R. 592, 2 O. W. R. 1009. Proofs of Loss—Delay—Conditions of Policy—Estoppel—Ownership of Property. Baker v. Royal Ins. Co., 1 O. W. Proof of Loss—Condition—Waiver—De-lay—Agent—Adjuster,]—A condition of the policy required that proof of loss "shall be made by the assured." The son of the as-sured filled in and signed the statement of loss, under the general authority of a notarial power of attorney:-Held, that this was a sufficient compliance with the condition of the policy. 2. Where the insurer retains the proof of loss, without objection as to its sufficiency, for more than sixty days before action taken, the company will be considered to have waived the condition which requires a delay of sixty days after filing claim before the institution of suit; and the fact that a blank in the statement was filled in. at the of sixty days before suit, will not affect the right of action. 3. The condition which re-quires proof of loss to be furnished within thirty days after the fire may be waived either expressly or impliedly; and the assured is held to be relieved from this condition if the presentation of the claim has been delayed by the company's investigation of the loss, or if the representations of the company's authorized agents have led the assured to understand that compliance with this condition will not be required. 4. While adjusters of fire losses are not, as a general rule, agents of the companies under an authority sufficient to make their statements binding upon the companies for whom they act, yet an adjuster may become a duly authorized agent of the company by the course of procedure in a particular case, e.g., where the adjuster was the only medium of com-munication after the fire between the company and the assured, and was engaged by the company to look over the proofs, advise as to a settlement, &c. Western Assec. Co. v. Pharand, Q. R. 11 K. B. 144.

Provincial Company-Goods out of the Province — Application — Concealment — Transfer of Debt—Notice to Debtor.]—A company incorporated by the Legislature of Quebec to carry on insurance business in that province may insure, in that province, merchandise which is out of the province. . The fact that the assured has not disclosed that he has contracted to keep for a creditor everything that he receives, and to transfer to him the policy of insurance, if desired, does not constitute a concealment which annuls the contract of insurance. 3. Notice of the transfer of a debt should be given in such a way that the debtor shall have no doubt that it is the assignee who is now his creditor, and notice given by means of the delivery of an unauthentic copy of the instrument of transfer is insufficient to vest the claim in the assignee as against the debtor.

Renewal—Prior Insurance—Action—Partice—Mortgage.]—The renewal, as it is commonly called, of a contract of insurance is not a renewal or extension of the original contract, but a new contract based, as far as applicable, upon the original application and in accordance with the policy issued in pursuance thereof. Where, therefore, at the time of such a new contract by way of renewal, no prior insurance is in force, the insurance is not avoided, although when the original contract was entered into prior insurance was in force, and this fact was not disclosed. Judgment of Rose, J., 32 O. R. 369, ante 124, reversed. Mortgagees to whom by a policy the loss is made payable as their interest may appear, have a right of action upon the policy in their own name against the insurers, and are entitled to enforce payment to the extent of their interest. Representation-Denying Previous Fires -Materiality-Conditions of Policy. One who was insured against fire, who had been burned out three times, in answer to the company's agent said that he had only had one fire :- Held, that this reply was material to the risk and invalidated the policy. the following clause, "and the said applicant hereby covenants and agrees to and with the company that the foregoing is a just. true, and full exposition of all the facts and circumstances in regard to the condition, situation, and value of the property to be insured, so far as the same are known to the applicant and are material to the risk, and agrees and consents that the same be held to form the basis of the liability of the company, and shall form a part and be a condition of the insurance contract," does not constitute an absolute warranty, but the replies given by the assured amount only to warranties by virtue of this clause in so far as they are material to the risk. Rights of Hypothecary Creditor—
Default of Owner, I—An hypothecary creditor has a real right in an insured immovable, which right is an interest capable of insurance. 2. If the insurance of the immovable is made payable to this hypothecary creditor, or is transferred to him, such creditor becomes the true assured; he is not an ordinary transferee of a purely personal claim, but he is the assured just as if he were co-proprietor

such he retains his rights even when the assignor has lost his by default. Higner v.

Right to Insurance Moneys—Hypothecary Claims—Priorities.]—An hypothecary creditor, whose debtor has undertaken to insure against fire the buildings erected on the hypothecated lands, is not entitled to receive the amount of the insurance (become due by reason of a fire), in preference to one in whose favour the policy has been issued, and who has, against the same debtor, a vendor's claim guaranteed by a first hypothec, and a claim upon written instruments, the amount of which, added to that of the hypothec, is greater than the sum insured. Davies v. Valiquette, 4 Q. P. R. 196.

Specific Goods - Substituted Goods-Construction of Policy—Termination of In-surance—Notice — Reinsurance—Breach of Surance—Notice — Rensurance—Breach of Warranty—Limitation of Actions—Statutory Condition—Unjust and Unreasonable Variation.]—The policy of plaintiffs bears date 24th February, 1899, and was for a term of one year. The property insured was de-scribed in it as "120 sacks of green coffee while stored in the 3-storey patent roofed while stored in the 3-storey patent roofed building occupied by the assured situate 37 and 39 Dalhousie street, Brantford, On-tario." The policy was, in pursuance of one of its terms, renewed in each of the years 1900, 1901, and 1902. The loss was made payable to the Bank of British North America. The business of the Snow Drift Co. was that of dealers in coffees, spices, extracts, and other articles. They carried insurance on their general stock for a considerable amount, besides the policy on the green coffee. The reason for effecting the insurance of 4th February ruary, 1899, on the green coffee, was that the Snow Drift Co, had exceeded their line of credit with their bankers, the Bank of British North America, who required security, and the means adopted to give the security was the effecting of this insurance, and providing by the policy that the loss should providing by the policy that the loss should be payable to the bank. A fire occurred on 18th September, 1902, which resulted in the total destruction of the whole of the com-pany's stock in trade, including the green coffee. . . . The loss on it was $1.321 at the lowest; . . . it is more likely that the lowest; . . . it is more likely that the loss exceeded $2,000:— Held, such insurance was not for the specific 120 bags of green coffee, but for any 120 similar bags of green coffee. The assured had, on 10th September, 1902, written to the agents at Brantford of plaintiffs in the following terms: "In reference to policy 2958, in amount $2,000, held by the Bank of British North America, on 120 bags of coffee, we wish to cancel this policy and have you give us a new one for $1,000, as there are now only 50 bags of coffee in stock:"—Held, the letter was not such a written notice as the condition relied on refers to. It was only an intimation of the intention of the assured to terminate the insurance if and when there was substituted for it a new policy for $1,000; to that plaintiffs never agreed, and it was never done. . . . It was contended lastly that, as the action was not begun until more than 6 months after the loss occurred it was barred, and condition 22, as varied by the indorsement on defendants' policy, was relied on in support of that contention:—Held, the variation of the statutory condition 22 which defendants attempted to impose upon the assured, by reducing the time allowed for bringing an action, from 1 year to 6 months, to be both unjust and unreasonable.

One of the variations was as follows: "Any incumbrance by way of mortgage . shall be deemed material to be made known to the company, within the provisions of the first statutory condition:"-Held, defendant company had failed to make out their defence on this branch of the case. By another variation it was provided that "the words 'or its local agent' in the 3rd statutory condition are struck out, and whenever the words 'agent' or 'authorized agent' occur elsewhere in the said statutory conditions, such agent or authorized agent shall be held to mean the company's secretary only:"—Held, this to be a just an organ had between 400 and 500 local agents in all.—Held, when a company had their head office in the province, and had no general agents away from their head office, but local agents having limited duties to perform, it is not unjust or unreasonable in their stipulating that notice of an important change in the character of the risk should be communicated to their head office, particularly as the 23rd statutory condition permits it to be given by the sending of a registered letter to the head office of the company and the address for the purpose is printed on the back of the policy. The plaintiff made a material alteration in the risk by substituting steam for water power; that she did not give notice in writing to defendants; and she could not recover upon this policy. Lount v. Mutual Company-Assessment of Premium Notes—Discount for Prompt Payment,] —Action to recover the amount of an assessment on a premium note given by the defendant for an insurance against loss by hail. Section 35 of the Mutual Hail Insurance Act, R. S. M. c. 106, under which the plaintiffs were incorporated, provides that the assessments upon premium notes or undertakings shall always be in proportion to the amounts of such notes or undertakings. In making the assessment of each policy, the directors added a proviso that all members and policy-holders who should pay the full amount of the assessment on or before the 1st November, 1899, should be entitled to and should receive a discount of 25 per cent. upon the amount of such assessment:—Held, that the plaintiff had no power to allow a discount for, or to impose penalties for default in, prompt payment, and being a mutual company, the directors must strictly observe the requirements of the Act and preserve equality amongst the members in assessing them; and that the effect of the resolution was really to assess 75 per cent, of five per cent, upon those who should pay before a certain date and the full should pay before a certain date and that she five per cent, upon all others, and that the assessment was therefore void under s. 35 of the Act, Manitoba Farmers' Mutual Hail Ins. Co. v. Lindsay, 21 Occ. N. 60, 13 Man. L. R. 352.

Mutual Company—Assessment of Premium Notes—Withdrawal from Membership—Presumption of Continuance of Policy—Impossibility of Performance of Condition.]—
In an action by a company incorporated under the Mutual Hail Insurance Act, R. S. M. c. 106, to recover the amount of an assessment imposed by resolution of the directors upon one of its members for the second crop season after the issue of the policy, it is incumbent on the company to shew that by the terms of the policy the person called on to pay the assessment is still a member of the company, and if no evidence is given to shew what the terms of the policy were in regard to the period covered by it, the action should be dismissed. If a member of such a company is entitled to withdraw from membership upon certain conditions, including the surrender of the policy issued to him, he cannot exercise such right without surrendering the policy, although the loss of it has rendered it impossible for him to perform that condition. Croockewitt v, Fletcher, I H. & N. 893, and Cutter v. Powell, 6 T. R. 320, followed. Manitoba Farmers' Mutual Hail Ins. Co. v, Fisher, 22 Occ. N. 303, 14 Man. L. R. 157

Action for Premium—Plea that Policy moi in Accordance with Application—Reply—Williagness to Change, —In an action by a life insurance company for a premium, where the defendant pleads that the policy did not comply with his application, the company may, in reply, allege that the policy was a substantial compliance with the application, but they cannot declare and pray acte of their willingness to effect any change that may be required to have the policy conform with the application. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of Canada v. McCool, 6 Q. P. R. S7.

Action on Policy — Condition as to Award—Application to Stay Proceedings.]— In an action on a policy on which was indorsed a condition that, in case any question should arise, "it is a condition of this policy which the assured by the acceptance thereof agrees to abide by, every such difference shall be referred to the arbitration and decision of a neutral person and the decision of the arbitrator shall be final and binding on all par-ties, and shall be conclusive evidence of the amount payable and it is hereby expressly stipulated and declared that the obtaining of an award by such arbitrator shall be a condition precedent to the liability or obligation of the corporation to pay or satisfy any claim under this policy," etc. "Provided also that compliance with the stipulations indorsed hereon is a condition precedent to the right to recover on this policy," etc.:—Held, that no action lay, nor did the amount payable under the policy become due, until the determination of the arbitrator to be appointed under the agreement to refer contained in the condition; that the plaintiff could not claim under the policy without assenting to its terms; and that the condition was not in contravention that the condition was not in contravention of s. 80 of R. S. O. c. 203. Spurrier v. La-Cloche, [1902] A. C. 446, followed. Nolan v. Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corpora-tion, 23 Occ. N. 187, 5 O. L. R. 544, 1 O. W. R. 77, 2 O. W. R. 98, 272.

Application — Concealment — Accident Policy.]—M., in answer to a question in an application for insurance on his life, requiring him to state "the amount of insurance you now carry upon your life," gave particulars of all ordinary life policies, but failed to disclose the fact that he had two accident policies, on each of which $10,000 was payable in the event of his death by accident:—Held, that an accident policy is not life insurance within the meaning of the application, although such accident policy contains an undertaking to indemnify the insured in case of death by accident only. Montreal Coal and Totoling Co. v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., Q. R. 24 S. C. 399.

Application—Issue of Policy—Date—Completed Contract—Due Dates of Premiums.]—The initialling of an application for insurance by officers of an insurance company, though indicating acceptance of the risk, does not experient, constitute any contract with him. If a policy is afterwards prepared, and the applicant informed that it is ready for him, this will constitute an acceptance of the original application; and such policy may be properly anteclated as of the date of the application. A provision in the application.

and policy that the insurance shall not be binding on the company, or the policy go into effect, until payment of the first premium, will not postpone or affect the due dates at which the respective premiums will fall due, so as to make them different from those mentioned in the policy. Armstrong v. Provident Savings Life Assec. Socy., 22 Occ. N. 13, 2 O. L. R. 771.

Application-Withdrawal before Acceptance—Return of Premium — Contract — Interim Receipt.]—Appeal by defendants from judgment of County Court of Wentworth in favour of plaintiff in an action for the return of a life insurance premium paid by plaintiff to defendants. On 19th May, 1904, plaintiff signed a written application to defendants for an insurance on his life of $10,000, and on the same day paid to the local agent of defendants $51.90 and gave him his (plaintiff's) promissory note for $300, the two sums making up the amount of the first annual premium, for which he received the company's receipt in full, stating: "The insurance will be in force from the date of approval of the application by the medical director. In case the policy should not be issued, the money will be refunded: provided, a completed application for such insurance is made and submitted to the company, at its home office, and that the applicant, if he shall not receive his policy within 30 days from date hereof, shall notify the company." On 1st June, 1904. and before any acceptance by defendants of the offer of plaintiff which was contained in the application, plaintiff gave notice to de-fendants of the withdrawal of his application, and requested the return of the money he had paid and the promissory note he had given:
—Held, that what took place between the parties amounted merely to an offer by plaintiff to defendants of the risk on his life, on the terms mentioned in the application, and the payment by plaintiff of the sum required to pay the first premium to be applied for that purpose if and when the offer of plaintiff should be accepted, and that defendants before the application was withdrawn had neither accepted the risk nor bound themselves to do anything in consideration of what plaintiff had done. Appeal dismissed. Henderson v. State Life Insurance Co., 5 O. W. R. 585, 9 O. L. R. 540.

Apportionment of Insurance Moneys—Revocation by Will—Application of Forcigin Law — Lien for Premiums.]—A contract of life insurance entered into by a contract of life insurance entered into by a company whose head office is in Ontario, the policy having issued from the head office and providing for payment of the insurance money there, is an Ontario contract, and must be interpreted and carried out in accordance with Ontario law, although the assured lived in Manitoba and made application there to a local agent for the insurance, but an assignment of or dealing with the benefits of the policy made by the law of this province relating thereto. The deceased, who was a resident in Manitoba, insured his life with a company whose head office was in Ontario, and by the policy the insurance money was appropriated in favour of his wife, but by his will he absolutely revoked this appropriation and directed that the money should become part of his exteutor. of the Life Assurance, R. S. M. c. 88, as reenacted by 62 & 63 V. c. 17, permits such a revocation and new disposition of the insurance money, but the corresponding statutory

Assignment - Insurance Moneys-Tontine Life Policy — Right of Assignee to Select Cash Surrender Value—Declaration by Insured in Favour of Wife under Insurance Act.]—On 18th April, 1905, defendant assigned all his right, title, and interest in and te life insurance policy No. 364,467, in the New York Life Insurance Company to his solicitor, to whom he was at that time indebted to the amount of (about) $40. The assignment, thought absolute in form, was on the following conditions: The assignee was to apply to the company for the cash value of the policy, and, if the company consented to pay such cash value, the debt of the defendant to the assignee was to be deducted, and the balance paid to Mrs. Marshall, the wife of defendant. On 30th May, 1905, plaintiff obtained judgment for $75 debt and $19.22 costs against defendant. On the same day notice of the assignment was given by the assignee to the New York Life Insurance Company, and on the same day the assignee made, in writing, what purported to be a selection of the cash value of the policy. On 31st May plaintiff served an attaching on Jist any plaintiff served an attaching order upon the garnishees. On 23rd June the assignee, the garnishees having made no acknowledgment of his selection, revoked in writing his selection of option, which revocation the garnishees declined to recognize. On 29th June, 1905, defendant made a description of the control claration under the Ontario Insurance Act. sec. 159, declaring the policy and the money to be derived therefrom to be for the benefit of his wife, subject to the assignment above mentioned:—Held, 1. That the declaration in favour of defendant's wife was valid. The judgment of his late brother Robertson in Weeks v. Frawley was very strong, and, although this point did not come up directly for decision in that case, the rest of the Court seem to have taken no exception to his remark. The wording of the statute seems clear and plain. The appeal will therefore be dismissed with costs. 2. That the money was not attachable. There was no sum of money or debt due or payable, the time having elapsed and the selection having been made too late. The assignee's revocation was communicated to the garnishees be-fore their acceptance of his selection, and they had no right or power to prevent such revocation. 3. That an assignee holding a life assurance policy as security for a debt would have no right to make a selection of the cash surrender value, thus completely changing the character of the security. Beneficiaries — Designation of—"Legal Heirs" — Trust—Reservation of Power of Revocation — Declaration—R. S. O. 1897 ch. 139, sub-sec. 1—Construction of — Preferred Beneficiaries - Next of Kin.]-Apferred Beneficiarie's — Next of Kin.]—Appeal by John Arthur Farley from order of Meredith, C.J., 5 O. W. R. 530, 9 O. L. R. 517, declaring Mary Lawson Farley entitled to the proceeds of an insurance policy in the friendly society called "The Royal Templars of Temperance." The policy in question, dated 12th September, 1901, was upon the life of deceased, the father-in-law of Mary Lawson Farley. The insured had, when the policy issued, designated the beneficiaries in these terms:—"Harold E. Peaficiaries in these terms :- "Harold E. Peagam, Charles R. S. Dinniek, and William W. Farley, executors, in trust for legal heirs." At that time his son William W. Farley was alive, as was also his grandson John Arthur Farley. No other descendants of Arthur Farwere living in September, 1901. His son William predeceased him; his grandson John Arthur survived. In November, 1903, the insured executed the following memorandum:

—"Toronto, November, 1903. "I, Arthur Farley, hereby declare that the money payable under the benefit certificate upon my life issued to me by the Royal Templars of Temperance, of which I am a member, shall be perance, or which I am a member, shall be paid to my daughter-in-law Mary Lawson Farley for her own use and benefit. Arthur Farley." The question for determination was the efficacy of this memorandum, the appellant contending that the original designation was that of a preferred beneficiary, within R. S. O. 1897, ch. 203, sec. 159, and as such irrevocable:—Held, at the time when the insured declared that the policy when the insured declared that the policy 'should be payable to his executors "in trust for his heirs," his son William alone answered that description, so far as any person can be said to be the heir of one living. Had he survived the insured the present claimant, John Arthur Farley, would have claimant, John Arthur Farley, would have no status. On the other hand, had both the son William and the grandson John Arthur predeceased the insured, the words "legal heirs" would have described persons incapable of designation as "preferred beneficiaries." The provision of the Insurance Act referred to by the learned Chief Justice, R. S. O, ch. 203, sec. 2, sub-sec. 36, puts the matter beyond doubt. This sub-section, adopted in 1897, reads as follows: "In insurance of the person the phrase 'legal heirs' or 'lawful heirs' shall mean and include all the lawful surviving children of the assured: the lawful surviving children of the assured; or, where the assured died without lawful surviving children and unmarried, it shall mean those persons entitled to take according to the Statute of Distribution." Regarding and applying sub-sec. 36 and reading it with sub-sec. 35, which distinguishes between children and grandchildren, of an assured dying "without lawful surviving children and unmarried," with the consequence that the phrase "legal heirs" means "those entitled to take under the Statute of Distributions." This precludes any argument that "legal heirs," so interpreted, can be deemed a designation of preferred beneficiaries under sec. 159. The appeal fails and should be dismissed with costs. Re Farley, 6 O. W. R. 78, 1 O. I. R. 540.

Beneficiary — Murder of Assured—Liability of Insurers.]—The fact that the beneficiary of a policy of life insurance has intended to assassinate, and has in fact assassinated, the assured, in order to obtain payment of the amount of the policy, is not sufficient—at any rate if it is not proved that the assured knew of this intention when he insured his life, nor that the beneficiary was his agent in effecting such insurance—to release the insurer from the obligation to pay the amount of the insurance to the heirs of the assured; the benefit stipulated for in favour of the assassin having been judicially declared void. Judgment in Q. R. 16 S. C. 539, affirmed; Blanchet J., diss. Standard Life Assurance Co. v. Trudeau, Q. R. 9 Q. B. 499, affirmed. 31 S. C. R. 376.

Beneficiary for Value — Change of Beneficiary—Will—R. S. O. c. 203, ss. 151, 160, 1—When a policy of insurance is payable to a beneficiary for value, not so named on the face of the policy, who is also one of the preferred class of beneficiaries, the assured cannot by his will transfer the benefit of the insurance to another beneficiary of the preferred class. Such a case is governed by s. 151, and does not full within s. 160, of the Insurance Act, R. S. O. c. 203. Judgment of Meredith, J., 32 O. R. 206, 20 Occ. N. 386, reversed. Book v. Book, 21 Occ. Benefit of Wife and Children—Certificate of Benefit Society—Disposition of Proceeds by Will — Identification of Certificate —Residuary Estate—"Including.")—Motion by executor under Rule 988 for order determining a question arising under the will of Adam Harkness as to the disposition of life insurance moneys. The testator was the holder of a policy of insurance issued by the Ancient Order of United Workmen, payable to "his order or beirs." After devising certain real estate, the will contained the following clause: "(2) I give the residue of my property, including life insurance, to my wife Harriet Elizabeth, and to my two youngest children, Adam Wier and Andrew Edmund, share and share and share and share and share and share and share wife accepts this in lieu of dower."

etc. Excluding the insurance money, the estate was not sufficient to pay the testator's debts, and the question was whether the insurance money was available for creditors or went to the widow and two children. Re Cheesborough, 30 O. R. 639, applied: -Held, "the residue of my property, including life insurance," although not using the words "policy" or "certificate," makes it as certain and clear as in the Cheesborough case what policies or certificates of insurance are meant, namely, any and every policy securing insurance on testator's life in respect to which he had a disposing or an appointing power. parman on Wills, 5th ed., p. 1090, defining the meaning of the words "namely" and "including," says: "Namely imports interpretation, that is, indicates what is included in the previous term; but 'including' imin the previous term; but 'incuting,' imports addition, that is, indicates something not included;" and the same definition is given in Stroud's Judicial Dictionary under title "namely." Thus, in such a case, the attempted diversion of the benefit from a beneficiary of the privileged class, to a beneficiary not of that class, was held invalid by reason of s.s. 3 of s. 151. Lints v. Benefit Society —Beneficiary—Supposed Wife — "Dependent"—Effect of Payment into Court.]-The plaintiff was the wife of Philip Crosby, deceased, having been married in 1860. In 1886 the deceased went through a second ceremony of marriage with the defendant, who did not know that she was marrying a man whose wife was living. In 1900 the deceased made an indorsement on his certificate of insurance in a benevolent society, revoking his former direction as to payment, and directing payment to be made "Mary Bail, otherwise known as Mary osby." The defendant was the holder of the certificate, and claimed the money as a "dependent" of deceased:—Held, that the defendant, having lived with the deceased, believing herself to be his wife, and being supported by him, was, under one of the rules of the society, No. 174, entitled to the fund as a "dependent" of the deceased:—Held, as a dependent of the declaration also, that although the society had not stood upon their strict rights, but had paid the money into Court to be dealt with by the Court, that fact did not affect the rights of the parties, which must be determined according to law, and not ex sequo et bono. The day before his death (in 1902) the assured made a will by which he directed that the whole of his estate should be divided amongst his children—in equal shares, but made no reference whatever to the benefit certificate or to the moneys payable thereunder:—Held, that the infant children of the assured were entitled to the whole of the moneys, by virtue of the amongment made to the Insurance Act, R. 8. 0, 1897 c. 203, s. 151, s.-s. (6), b) 1 Edw. VII. c. 21, s. 2, s.-s. (7). In recongular, 20 cc. N. 299, 4 O. L. R. 320, 1 O. R. 481.

By her will, dated the 30th September, 1892, she gave specific properties and legacies to her husband and each of her three children by name, the insurance to her executors "for the purpose of paying thereout all debts due by me," and the residue to her children:—Heid, that the bequest of the insurance money to the executors was inoperative; that it was payable to the three children as "legal heirs designated by will:" and that the children were not bound to elect between the benefits specifically given to them and the insurance money. A member of one of the Ontario branches was the holder of a certificate of the society, whereby they promised to pay to the defendant, a brother of the holder, $1,000, upon satisfactory proof of his death. The holder was resident in Ontario; the application for the certificates was made in Ontario; and the certificate was delivered in Ontario. The holder made a will whereby he bequeathed the certificate to the wife of one of the plaintiffs, naming the plaintiffs executors: - Held, that the Order were legally entitled to do business in Ontario; that the certificate in question was a "contract of insurance" within the meaning of the Ontario Insurance Act, R. S. O. c. 203; that the rules of the Order, so far as they were inconsistent with the provisions of the Act, were modified and controlled by such provisions; and, therefore, the benefits of the certificate passed, by virtue of the will to the legatee, although the rules of the Order provided that no will should be permitted to control. death or injury from accidents. The question so answered did not specially refer to accident insurance, but the policy provided that the "tatement in the application should that "accident insurance" is not insurance of the character embraced in the term "insurance on life" contained in the application, and, consequently, that the questions had been sufficiently and truthfully answered, according to the natural and ordinary meaning of the words used, and, even if the words used were capable of interpretation as having another or different meaning, then the language was ambiguous and the construction as to its meaning must be against the company by which the questions were framed. Contract - Condition-Payment of Preminm—Deivery of Policy—Concurrent Deals of Assured.)—The husband of the plantifi had, on the 24th February, 1900, made to the defendant company, an application for insurance containing the following condition: "The policy applied for, if it is issued, will not come into force until the premium shall have been actually paid to the company and accepted by it, while the person whose life is offered for assurance is alive and in good health." In making this application for insurance the plaintiff's husband paid $4 on account of the premium, and, the medical examination having been satisfactory, the company issued a policy of insurance at New York on the 8th March, 1900, and deposited it in the post office of that city on the 9th March, addressed to its agent at Montreal, to whom the letter containing the policy was delivered upon the 10th March (a Saturday). On the 8th March the plaintiff's husband was seized with an illness, of which he died on the 10th March between half-past nine and ten o'clock in the morning. The plaintiff afterwards offered the balance of the premium to the agent of the company, who re-fused to give her the policy:—Held, that if, in principle, the acceptance of the proposal for insurance constituted a valid contract of insurance (Art. 2481, C. C.), in this case the acceptance of the proposal was subject the acceptance of the proposal was subject to the condition stated, and such condition not having been complied with, no contract of insurance existed. 2. The defendant pleaded that he was a minor when the contract was made; that it was disadvantageous to him, as it absorbed nearly all his annual revenue; and that as soon as his tuttor had heard of it he had served a protest on the company on the ground that the contract was injurious to his pupil;—Held, that the defendant had established his plea, and that it was not his interest to have so large an insurance, especially as his health was not good, and the premium took up nearly all of his fixed income. Action dismissed, but without costs, insurance as the plaintiffs had been led into error as to the defendant's age, health, and financial circumstances. Imperial Life Ins. Co. v. Charlebois, 22 Occ. sured to Tender during-Insurance Act-Conduct of Insurers-Dispensing with Tender-Estoppel.]—Appeal by the defendants from judgment of Idington, J., upon the findings of a jury, in favour of plaintiff, the widow and administratrix of the estate of Richard Tattersall, for the recovery of $3,950.50, with interest and costs, in an action upon a policy of insurance on the life of the de-ceased. The company defend on the following grounds: (1) Fraudulent representations by Tattersall on application for insurance, (2) Denial that plaintiff was assured that the policy was all right, or misled. (3) Statement that plaintiff was told that premium had not been paid. (4) All liability caused on the death of Tattersall with overdue premium unpaid. (5) On his death, not possible to renew or revive policy by tender because no beneficiary who could make tender under the contract. (6) Tattersall having died in default, and no tender made by any one within 30 days from due date of premium, liability ceased on policy:—Held, as to the matters of fact the jury found in favour of plaintiff's contention, and the evidence was sufficient to support such finding as right and proper. On matters of law it was argued that there was no right to tender was argued that there was no right to tender after death of assured, and if such right existed, there was no beneficiary in this case to make tender. The last premium of case to make tender. The last premium of $49.50 fell due on 10th April, 1903, and was not paid. The death was on 22nd April, 1903, intestate, and plaintiff was administratrix. On 15th December, 1902, the wife, in whose favour was the policy, assigned her interest to the husband, subject to the terms of an agreement referred to in the assignment. This was not notified to the insurance company till after the death. The policy was assigned to the husband, in consideration of his granting her an annuity of $1,500, on condition that if he predeceased his wife the said policy and the proceeds thereof should be charged with payment of the said annuity. There had been default also in the last payment of the annuity be-fore the husband's death. Indorsed on the policy are conditions and provisions, of which Nos. 5 and 8 are important:—"5. Thirty days of grace will be allowed for payment of renewal premiums, if the insured be unable to pay them when due. . . . " "8. From any sum payable under the policy the com-"8, From pany may deduct any lien that may be standing against the policy and the balance (if any) of the yearly premium for the then current year. The statute applicable to this policy provided for 30 days of grace during which the payment in default may be made by the assured or by any of has be hade by the assured or a superior the beneficiaries under the contract: R. S. 0. 1807 ch. 203, sec. 148 (1). The original section, passed in 1893, provided that this payment might be made "when the event upon the happening of which the insurance money becomes payable has not yet happened:" 56 V. ch. 32, sec. 10, sub.sec. 12 (8). These words, in case of life policy, exclude the right so to renew or revive the contract by afterpayment when death has happened to the person insured. But this qualification was appunged by the legislature in the amendment made in 1897, 60 V. ch. 36, sec. 148 (1), the section now in the R. S. O. 1897:—Held, that the facts disclose a case of estoppel against the company, whereby their conduct and statements, as well as the silence

Delivery of Policy—Payment of Premiums.]—A contract for life insurance is complete on delivery of the policy to the insured and payment of the first premium. Where the insured, being able to read, having ample opportunity to examine the policy, and not being misled by the company as to its terms, nor induced not to read it, neglects to do so, he cannot, after paying the premium, be heard to say that it did not contain the terms of the contract agreed upon. Judgment of the Court of Appeal, 27 A. R. 675, 21 Occ. N. 17, reversed. Movat v. Provident Savings Life Assurance Society, 22 Occ. N. 221, 32 S. C. R. 147.

Delivery of Policy — Payment of Premium—Evidence.]—The production from the custody of representatives of the insured of a policy of life insurance raises a prima facie presumption that it was duly delivered and the premium paid, but where the consideration of the policy is therein declared to be the payment of the first premium upon the delivery of the policy, parol testimony may be adduced to shew that, as a matter of fact, the premium was not so paid, and that the delivery of the policy to the person therein named as the insured was merely provisional and conditional. The reception of such proof cannot, under the circumstances, be considered as the admission of oral testimony in contradiction of a written instrument, and in the province of Quebec, in commercial matters, such evidence is admissible under the provisions of Art. 1203s, C. C. Mutual Life Assurance Co. of Canade v. Giruère, 22 Occ. N. 276, 32 S. C. R. 348.

Delivery of Policy—Time—Operation of Conditions — Inconstentibility,1—An application for life insurance, dated 16th September, 1884, and madé part of the contract, previded that the issue and delivery of a policy in the usual form should be the only acceptance thereof, and that the place of contract for all purposes should be the head office at Toronto. The policy issued provided that it should not be in force until the first premium had been paid and accepted and the receipt delivered to the insured, and the attesting clause stated that it was delivered at Toronto on the 27th September, 1894. The insured lived in British Columbia. The policy and receipt were mailed at Toronto on the 27th September, 1894, to the company's agent at Winnipeg, and forwarded by him on the 1st October to the insured, who could not have received it before the 7th October. The insured died on the 30th September, 1897. The policy provided that, after being in force for three years, it should be indisputable. The insured violated a condition that would have avoided the policy but for this clause:—Held, that the policy and receipt were delivered and the contract of insurance completed on 27th September, 1894, and was indisputable three days before the insured died. The provision as to indisputability covered a breach of condition made during the three years. North American Life Assurance Co. v. Elson, 33 S. C. R. 383; Elson v. North American Life Assurance Co., 9 B. C. R. 474.

Deposit with Provincial Treasurer—Withdrawal—Action—Petition.]—In order to withdraw a sum of money deposited with the Treasurer of the Province, representing the amount of a life insurance policy, an action must be brought; a petition is not sufficient. Bx p, Lacombe, 6 Q. P. K. 301.

Extra Premium for Special Risk— Non-exposure—Return of Extra Premium— Rules of Construction Applicable to Contract —Military Service.]—Policies on the lives of members of the fourth contingent for the war in South Africa were issued and accepted on condition of payment, in each case, of an extra annual premium, "whenever and as long as the occupation of the assured shall be that of soldier in the army of Great Brit-aln in time of war." Each policy also pro-vided that the assured has hereby consented to engage in military service in South Africa in the army of Great Britain, any restriction in the policy contract notwithstanding." The restrictions were against engaging in naval or military service without a permit and travelling or residing in any part of the torrid The contingent arrived in South Afrizone. ca after hostilities ceased. An action was brought against the company for return of the extra premium, on the ground that the insured had never been soldiers of the army of Great Britain in time of war: that the special premiums had not been earned by the company, in view of the fact that the assured had not been exposed to the risks of war in South Africa, and that, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to recover back the amount thereof. 2. In an action to recover from an insurance company it is sufficient to allege the contract, the payment of the premiums, and that the risk provided against did not occur,—without asking for the re-scission of a contract which the law treats scission of a contract which the law treats as a nullity, in providing that, if the risk does not or cannot arise, the insurer has no right to claim the unpaid premiums or to keep them, if they have been paid; Art. 2469, C. C. 3. The meaning or the intent in an insurance contract is to be obtained first from the language employed, and if, by the settled rules of construction, the intent is not clear from the language itself, then resort is had to the circumstances existing at the time the contract vas entered into, in order to solve the difficulty and dispel any obscurity, 4. If the terms of the policy are capable of two interpretations equally reasonable, the construction which is most favourable to the insured must be adopted. As the company prepares must be adopted. As the company, premiuse the contract, and the insured is not consulted with regard to the form thereof, doubts with reference to its meaning must be solved against the company. 5. The clause prohibiting military service in time of war referred to above, means active service in the field as a soldier, and the clause allowing the men to engage in military service in South Africawhere it was known that a state of war existed at the time—permitting them to join the army of Great Britain, indicates that the men were to be insured against the risks and perils of war, and not against the ordinary dangers of a journey to South Africa, which were provided for in the first agreement. 6. The condition in the second clause limiting expressly the contemplated service to South Africa, cannot be extended so as to mean also the journey to South Africa, as this interpretation would be contrary to the terms used by the contracting parties. Provident Sovings Life Assurance Society of New York v. Belleve, Q. R. 14 K. B. S.

First Premium-Promissory Note-Condition Avoiding Policy.]—On the 20th April, 1900, G. applied to the defendants for life insurance; the defendants accepted the risk and issued and delivered their policy to G. in May. The premium was $40, payable half-yearly in advance. On account of the first yearly in advance. On account of the first half year's premiums G. paid $5 in cash and gave his promissory note for $15.38 at two months. Nothing further was paid, and the note was overdue in the defendants' hands when G. died on the 7th August, 1900. The application (forming part of the contract) contained a clause by which G. agreed that if a note given for the first premium or any part thereof should not be paid when due, the policy would cease to be in force without any notice or action on the part of the company. This provision was not set out in full or at all on the face or back of the policy, as required by R. S. C. c. 124, s. 27:—Held, that the cash and note were accepted as payment of the first premium, and the statute not being complied with, the policy was in force at the time of the death. Greenwood v. at the time of the death. Gre Home Life Ins. Co., 21 Occ. N, 90.

Foreign Company—Heir of Beneficiery—merof of Heirship—Action—Tender—Poyment into Court—Costs.]—A foreign company is not presumed to know the law of succession of this province, and, before suing such a company upon a benefit certificate, the plaintiff ought to make known legally to the company and state upon competent authority his position as legitimate heir of the beneficiary, by obtaining from a Judge of the Superior Court letters of verification such as are provided for by arts. 1411 et seq., C. P. 2. In an action taken without these formalities, offers of the amount due to whatever person has the right to it, and a deposit in Court of the amount, will be declared good and valid, and the action will be dismissed without costs up to the plea in which the company declares that it submits its rights to the Court, and with costs subsequent to such plea. Medical Examination - Misstatements and Concealments-Materiality - Breach of Warranty-Cancellation of Policy.]-In the plaintiff's application to the defendants for a policy of life insurance he warranted, amongst other things, that the answers in the medical examination, which formed part thereof, were full, complete, and true, and without any suppression of facts so far as such answers were material to the contract of insurance to be based thereon. In the examination the plaintiff stated that he had not consulted or been attended by a physician for six years prior thereto, whereas he had consulted four physicians within four months immediately before the examination. He also stated that he had not had any illness, except a slight attack of "la grippe," for three years next before his examination, whereas he had been ill for two months immediately before his examination, and had consulted two doctors, who had told him that he was suffering from, at any rate, anæmia. The plaintiff also concealed several symptoms of phthisis or tuberculosis from the examining doctor, which he afterwards admitted to him that he had at the time of the examination. He also warranted that he was free from disease, whereas he had phthis or tuberculosis, which, though undeveloped by physical signs, were existing:—Held, that these statements and concealments were material and constituted a breach of the warranty; and therefore the policy was void. Judgment was given for the defendants on their counterclaim for delivery up of the policy to be cancelled. Smith v. Grand Orange Lodge of British America, 24 Occ. N. 16, 6 O. L. R. 588, 2 O.

Misstatement in Application as to Age—Evidence of Bona Fides—Admissibility—Burden of Proof—Findings of Jury,1—In a action on a policy of life insurance a defence was that the insured in his application, made in 1891, stated that he was 41 years of age, whereas in fact he was 44. The evidence shewed that 44 was his actual age at the time. Evidence of statements made by the insured, many years before the application, tending to shew his belief that he was born in 1850, was rejected: — Held, that the cyidence should have been admitted for the purpose of shewing that the statement in the application as to age was made in good faith, and without intention to deceive. In answer to questions the jury found that the statement in the application that the insured was born in 1850, was untrue, and was material, but that the insured made the misstatement in good faith, believing it to be true, and without intention to deceive :- Held, that on these answers judgment should have been entered for the defendants, if the jury could not properly find that the statement was made in good faith and without intent to deceive; but, as the plaintiff was not allowed to elicit evidence on this point, there should be a new trial. Where the statement as to the age is found to be material and un-true, an avoidance of the contract follows, unless that result is prevented by its being made to appear that the statement was made in good faith and without intent to deceive; and it must lie upon the person seeking to uphold the contract to make proof of it. Dillon v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association, 23 Occ. N. 86, 5 O. L. R. 434, 2 O. W. R. 78, 4 O. W. R. 351.

Moneys Deposited by Company Recovery — Procedure — Action.] — Where moneys have been deposited by an insurance company pursuant to art. 1198, R. S. Mutual Company—Natural Premium System—Rate of Assessment—Rating at Attained Age—Fraud — Puffing Statements—Warranty—Rescission of Contract—Estoppel,—A. took out a policy on his life in a mutual association, relying on statements contained in circulars issued by the association stating that interest on the reserve fund would be sufficient to cover increases in the death rates, and make the policy, after a certain period, self-sustaining. The rates having been increased, A. paid the assessments for some years under protest, and then allowed his policy to lapse, and sued for a return of the payments he had made with interest, and for a declaration that the contracts were void ab initio:—Held, Sedgewick and Nesbirt, JJ., dissenting, that the statements in the circulars only expressed the expectation of the managers of the association as to the future, and did not prevent the rates being increased in the discretion of the directors. Note Given for Premium—Part Payment— Extension of Time— Forfeiture—Waiver—Estoppel.]—A condition in a policy of life insurance provided that if any premium, or note given therefor, was not paid when due the policy should be void. A note given, payable with interest, in payment of a premium, provided that if it were not paid at maturity the policy should forthwith become void. On the maturity of the note it was partly paid, and an extension was granted, and on a part payment being again made a further extension was granted. The last extension was overdue and balance on note was unpaid at the death of the assured. A receipt by the company, given at the time of taking the note, was of the amount of the premium, but at the bottom of the face of the receipt were these words: "Paid by note in terms thereof." While the note was running the policy was assigned for value, with the assent of the company, to the plaintiff, to whom the receipt was delivered by the assured:—Held, that no estoppel was created by the receipt; that there was no duty upon the company to have afforded the plaintiff an opportunity of paying the premium; and that the policy was void. Wood V. Confederation Life Association, 21 Occ. N. 149, 2 N. B. En. Revs. 217.

Payment of Overdue Premium—Acceptance—Consent—State of Health of Assured.]—Where, by the conditions of a policy of life insurance, the non-payment of a premium when it falls due renders a policy void, and where it is also declared that no premium in arrear will be accepted by the insurance company unless with the consent in writing of the president, vice-president, or secretary, the acceptance of a premium, after it was due, and the sending of a recept signed by the secretary, are equivalent to the consent required to validate the late payment of the premium. 2. The fact that the assured was dying when the premium in arrear was paid, the insurance company not having inquired as to his state of health, and no false representation as to it having been made, does not invalidate the payment. Policy—Assignment by Will—Identification.]—The assignment of a policy of life insurance under Arts, 5581 and 5584, R. S. Q., may be by will. It is not necessary that the will should be annexed to the policy; it is sufficient if the will refers to the policy in such a way as to establish its identity beyond contest. Hardy v. Shannon, Q. Policy Inconsistent with Application—Repayment of Premium—Lackes.]—The plaintiff applied to the defendants for insurance at a fixed annual premium for life, but the policy sent to him contained a provision that the premium might be increased. He did not read the policy, and, pursuant to notices from the defendants, paid them seven annual premiums at the original rate. In the eighth year the defendants demanded a larger premium:—Held, that the policy, not being in accordance with the application, was a mere counter-proposal, and that there was no contract; that the plaintiff was under no obligation to read the policy, which he was entitled to assume, in the absence of anything done by the company to call his attention to the provision in question, to be in accordance with the application; that he was, therefore, not barred by acquiescence or delay; and that he was entitled to repayment of the premiums with interest; Maclennan, J.A., dissenting, Moucat v. The very instrument con-ferring title upon the widow made that title subject to the payment of the debts of the The insurance moneys were in the gift itself blended with and treated as forming part of the general estate out of which debts were expressly directed to be paid. R. 80, and the insurers could not recover upon the note by virtue of that section or therwise:—Semble, that if the insurers were allowed to amend and sue on the policy, they could recover only a small part of the premium, because, by a condition indorsed upon the policy, it became void if the premium was not paid within a month. Proceeds of Policy-Payment by Instalments-Beneficiaries-Vested Rights.]-The ments—Benegatives—Vesica Rights, —The insured applied for a policy of $5,000 on his life, payable in the event of his death in fitteen instalments of $333.33 each, Being asked in the application: "In event of death of beneficiaries" (his three daughters) "do you desire that the assurance shall be made payable to your executors, administrators, or assigns?" he answered: "No; make to my two This policy was drawn payable in sons. This policy was drawn payable in infleen annual instalments to the three daughters, or, in the event of their death, to the two sons. The three daughters applied to accelerate the payments and obtain the whole amount insured forthwith: - Held, that it was not desirable to incorporate the somewhat technical and not always satisfactory doctrine as to the vesting of legacies into policies of insurance. The intention of the insured was certainly to eke out the amount insured, so far as possible, by means of annual payments for the benefit of his daughters if alive at the date of payment, and, if not, for the benefit of his sons who might survive the deceased daughters. Promissory Note Given for Premium

Right to Recover on, Notwithstanding Forfeiture-Consideration.]-An application for a policy of life insurance in the plaintiff company contained the following provision: "In consideration of the acceptance of this application and the expense incurred in connection therewith, I will accept said policy, when issued, and pay the first annual premium thereon, and if any note . . . or renewal or renewals thereof, given for the first or any subsequent premium, or any part thereof, be not paid when due, any policy issued here-under will cease to be in force without any notice or action on the part of the company, but nevertheless the liability to pay such note shall continue and be enforceable, provided the company will revive the policy in its terns, on production of satisfactory evidence of continued good health." A promissory note, given by the defendant, for one-half of the premium on the policy issued by the plaintiff company, was not paid at maturity, and the company notified the plaintiff that the policy was forfeited, and made an entry to that effect on their books. It appearing that, in addition to the considerations mentioned in the application, the defendant had been insured for at least five months :-- Held, that there was valuable consideration for the note, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to re-cover upon it. The effect of the words in the application "provided the company will reetc., was merely to signify the terms upon which a policy forfeited under the rules of the company could be revived, and formed an agreement on the part of the company independent of the payment of the premium. A note given, payable with interest, in payment of a premium, provided that if it were not paid at maturity the policy should forthwith be-come void. On the maturity of the note, it was partly paid and an extension was granted, and on a part payment being again made a further extension was granted. The last exfurther extension was granted. tension was overdue, and the balance on the note was unpaid at the death of the assured. A receipt by the company, given at the time of taking the note, was for the amount of the premium, but at the bottom of the face of the receipt were these words: "Paid by note in terms thereof." While the note was running the policy was assigned for value, with the assent of the company, to the plaintiff, to whom the receipt was delivered by the assured :- Held, that the company were estopped by the receipt, and by the extensions of the time for payment to the assured, from setting up against the plaintiff that the policy was void for non-payment of the premium. Wood v. Confederation Life Association, 35 N. B. Reps. 512.

Tender of Premium—Refusal to Accept —Necessity for Tender of Future Premiums.]
—In an action by the widow of a man whose life was insured by the defendants for $1,000, upon payment of a monthly premium of $1.34, to recover the amount of the insurance upon proof of his death, the plaintiff alleged that she tendered the monthly premium for January, 1892, but the defendants refused to accept it, or any future premium, unless the insured should be re-examined. He died in June, 1895:—Held, upon the evidence at the trial, that the plaintiff had not discharged the burden of proving the tender; but, in any case, one tender would not have been sufficient, the circumstances not being such as to justify a reasonable belief that future tenders would be rejected. Webb v. New York Life Ins. Co., 22 Occ. N. 179.

Transfer of Policy—Gift—Civil Code.]
—The provisions of the Civil Code as to gifts

inter vivos and their acceptance do not apply to transfers of life insurance policies, Montreal Coal and Toving Co. v. British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Co., 5 Q. P. R. 309.

Unmatured Policy — Present Value of Reversion—Mode of Calculating—Statute— Amendment-Declaration as to Former Law.] -The ascertainment of the present value of the reversion in the sum assured by the policy at the decease of the life insured, as directed by the judgment in 21 Occ. N. 232, 1 O. L. R. 256, is a matter of simple calculation from the ordinary life insurance tables; the premium actually paid by the insured has nothing to do with the calculation. The sta-Edw. VII. c. 21 (O.), assented to on the 15th April, 1901, altering the manner of valuing unmatured policies, and enacting that the alterations declared the law of the province as it existed on the 14th April, 1892. did not affect the rights of the claimants under their policies, because those rights had been declared (by the judgment referred to above) before the Act was passed, and judgments are not re-opened even by such legislation. Wager Policy—Endowment—Action for Cancellation—Return of Premiums.]—If the beneficiary of a life insurance policy has no interest in the life of the insured, has effected the insurance for his own benefit, and pays all the premiums himself, the policy is a wagering policy and void under 14 Geo. III. c. 48, s. 1 (Imp.). The Act applies to an endowment as well as to an all life policy. Judgment of the Court of Appeal, 2 O. L. R. 559, 21 Occ. N. 557, affirmed. In an action by the company for cancellation of the policy under the Act, a return of the premiums paid will not be made a condition of obtaining cancellation. Judgment of the Court of Appeal reversed. North American Life Assurance Co. v. Brophy, 22 Occ. N. 250, 32 S. C. R. 261.

Wax Risk — Extra Premium — Special Consideration.] — Policies on the lives of members of the fourth contingent for the war in South Africa were issued and accepted on condition of payment in each case of an extra annual premium "whenever and as long as the occupation of the assured shall be that of soldier in the army of Great Britain in time of war." Each policy also provided that "the assured has hereby consented to engage in military service in South Africa in the army of Great Britain, any restriction in the policy contract to the contrary notwithstanding." The restrictions were against engaging in naval or military service without a permit and travelling or residing in any part of the torrid zone. The contingent arrived at South Africa after hostilities ceased, and an action was brought against the company for return of the extra premium, on the ground that the insured had never been soldiers of the army of Great Britain in time of war:—Held, Davies, J., dissenting, that the risk taken by the company of the war continuing for a long time and the insurance remaining in force so long as the annual premiums were paid, was a sufficient consideration for the extra premiums, and it could not be recovered back:—Held, also, that the permission to engage in war in South Africa was a waiver of the restriction against travelling in the torrid zone. Provident Savings Life Society v. Bellew. 24 Occ. N. 301, 378 S. C. R. 33.

Withdrawal of Application - Promissory Note for Premium-Failure of Con-sideration. | The defendants signed an application to the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York for insurance on the lives of S. F., R. F., E. F., and G. H. W., mem-bers and directors of the defendant company. When the application was given, the plaintiff, the agent of the company, took from the defendants their promissory note, payable to his own order, for the amount of the premium, and gave the defendants a receipt on one of the company's forms which contained this provision: "The insurance so applied for shall be in force from this date, provided that the said application shall be accepted and approved by the said company at its head office in the city of New York, and a policy thereon duly issued. In case the application is not so accepted and approved and no policy is issued, or should the applicant receive no notification from the company, within 30 days from the date of this receipt, of any application, then in every such case no insurance shall be effected, and it shall be understood and agreed that the company declines the risk, whereupon all moneys paid hereunder shall be returned on the delivery of this receipt." The plaintiff discounted the note and placed the amount to his own credit, and paid the amount of the premiums, less his commission, to his principals after the note was discounted, but before the applica-tion was accepted the defendants notified the plaintiff and his principals at their head office in New York that they withdrew the application:—Held, in an action on the note by the agent, that the application was a mere proposal for insurance and might be with-drawn at any time before acceptance; that the consideration for the note having failed, the defendants were not liable in an action by the payee. Johnson v. G. and G. Flewel-ling Manufacturing Co:, 36 N. B. Reps. 397.

voyage described as "from Montreal to New Carlyle and Bonaventure River," without indication that the ship will touch at intermediate ports, the fact that the ship is delayed at Levis for six or seven hours, and for four days and six hours at St. Michel de Bellechasse, constitutes a deviation and vititates the contract of assurance. Judgment in Q. R. 15 S. C. 476 reversed on this point. In order that custom or necessity may be invoked as authorizing such delay, the custom must be universally recognized or at least notionus enough to be known to thy assurers, and the necessity must be such as could not be foreseen before the departure of the vessel; and in this case no such custom or necessity was proved. Mannheim Ins. Co. v. Atlanic and Lake Superior R. W. Co., Q. R. 21 S. C. 200.

Re-insurance - Salvage - " Special Contribution - Constructive Total Loss.]-The plaintiffs, having insured a large number of cattle and sheep, for the voyage from Montreal to Manchester, reinsured part of the risk with the defendants -the re-insurance policy or certificate containing the following clause: - "Insured against absolute total loss of vessel and ani mals, but to pay general average, and special charges." The ship carrying the animals struck a reef, and was finally abandoned three weeks later. In the meantime part of the animals had been landed on an island, whence they were carried to Halifax and other places. The amount payable for salvage of the live stock so transported was fixed at one-third of the gross proceeds of the sale thereof. A large sum was also paid for maintenance of the animals and other expenses until they were sold. The insured then assigned all right in the live stock to the plaintiffs, and were paid as for a constructive total The plaintiffs alleged that all the expenditure for salvage, transportation, and maintenance of the animals, constituted "spe-cial charges," within the meaning of the reinsurance policy, and sued the defendants for their proportion of the amount :- Held, that "special charges" is equivalent to "particular charges," and includes expenses for salvage, preservation, and sale of the object insured. The word "special" merely distinguishes an expense incurred in a particular interest from an expense incurred in the general interest, which latter gives rise to general average contribution. Special charges cover all expenses occasioned by a peril insured against, when they have been necessarily incurred in consequence of such peril. 2. The fact that the plaintiffs had paid the principal insured as for a total loss, and the circumstance that the defendants may not have been interested in incurring all or any of the charges, did not relieve the defendants from liability for contribution to Such charges. Western Assurance Co. v. Baden Marine Assurance Co., Q. R. 22 S. C. 374.

Shipwreck — Abandonment — Refusal to Accept—Acceptance by Conduct—Powers of Mater—Arrical of Owner's Agent—Misdiretion — Waiver — Evidence — Understanding of Witness—Special Jury—Demenour of Witnesses—Services of Crew and of Agent.]

—The plaintil's vessel having put into port damaged, notice of abandonment was given to the insurers, all of whom declined to accept. By direction of the agent for the insurers, the cargo was taken out and stored, and the vessel repaired, after which a portion was reloaded, when it was discovered that the vessel was leaking. The cost of repairs up to this time was over $4,000, and the vessel was valued at only $5,000. The persons who had made the repairs, in order to preserve their lien, refused to allow the cargo to be taken out a second time, and, in default of payment, took proceedings against the ship and cargo, under which they were finally sold:—Held, that the refusal to accept the abandonment did not prevent the working of an acceptance, and what was done constituted an acceptance of the abandonment, or, if not an abandonment, such a wrongful conversion of the ship as would preclude the insurers from setting up non-acceptance. 2. That the direction to the jury that the powers of the master in case of shipwreck were displaced upon the arrival of the owner, or of an agent having express authority to represent him, was right. 3. That misdirection as to the particular agent who waived proofs of loss was immaterial, if there was an acceptance of the abandonment. 4. That a mistake of the trial Judge as to a matter of fact about which there was no dispute was not ground for a new trial unless it was shewn that his attention had been directed to the mistake. 5. That under Order 37, Rule 6, the misdi-rection must have been such as to have occasioned some substantial wrong or miscarriage, 6. That evidence of a witness as to what he understood or did not understand generally was properly rejected, where the memory of the witness appeared to be defective as to conversations. 7. That where the underwriter was wrongfully interfering with the control of the ship, the insured might elect at the last moment to hold that the underwriter had accepted the abandonment. 8. That if the renewal of the notice of abandonment, when the project of the insurers to repair failed, did not conclude the matter, the vessel was lost to the insured by the sale. 9. That the Court, even if dissatisfied with the verdict, especially after a second trial, will defer to the opinion of a special jury of men peculiarly able to understand the subject matter. 10. That where such jurors were furnished with a shorthand report of the evidence of witnesses on a former trial, it was not important that they did not have an opportunity of observing the demeanour of the witnesses, That the amount claimed by the plaintiff for services of the master and crew, while the vessel was in the hands of the underwriters, did not come within the "sue and labour" clause, and was not recoverable; nor was an amount sought for services of the plaintiff's special agent, who was acting adversely to the underwriters. McLeod v. Ins. Co. of the underwriters. McLeod v. In. North America, 34 N. S. Reps. 88.

Action against — Parties — Curator—Amendment,! — Interdiction for prodigality renders the interdict incapable of administering his estate, or of being lawfully served with or of lawfully appearing in judicial proceedings. 2. Where a writ has issued against an interdict for prodigality instead of against his curator, the defect cannot be cured by adding his curator as a defendant, Greene v. Mappin, M. L. R., 5 Q. B. 108, followed. Leroux v. De Beaujeu, Q. R. 20 S. C. 235, 4 Q. P. R. 35.

Action by — Husband and Wife—Family Council—Curator, 1—1f a woman, interdicted for drunkenness, wishes to bring an action for separation from bed and board, against her husband and curator, and the grounds stated in the petition are sufficient to justify such an action, the Court will order that a family council be held to advise as to the appointment of a curator ad hoc. Clermont v. Charest, 4 Q. P. R. 427.

Curator—decount.]—The curator to an interdict may be ordered, upon petition to that effect, to preduce a summary account of his administration, certified by him, containing and setting forth the date, amount, and character of each loan made on behalf of the interdict, the time at which it is payable, the security held therefor, and the name and residence of the borrower; also the several deposits made on his behalf, and the name and residence of the persons or institutions with whom they are made. Cardinal v. Cardinal, 7 Q. P. R. 153.

Curator — Removal — Pension—Family Council.]—The curator of a person interdicted for habitual drunkenness has power to sue for an alimentary pension due to the interdict, and his refusal to do so when the interdict is in absolute need of the pension, is a ground for removing him from the curatorship. 2. The advice of a family council as to the expediency of removing the curator is useless where the council was not represented when evidence was given upon the demand for removal, or where such evidence was not communicated to the council. Gagnon v. Gauthier. Q. R. 22 S. C. 310.

Curator ad hoc—Family Council.]—
Where it appears that an interdict has matters to litigate with his curator he is entitled to have a curator ad hoc appointed to him for the purpose of such litigation, and the Judge ought to reject the advice of the family council not to name a curator ad hoc to the interdict. Cantlie v. Cantlie, 7 Q. P. R. 193.

Intoxicating Liquors — Excessive Use—Husband and Wife.]—A husband has the right and it is his duty to apply for an interdiction (art. 336 (a), C. C.), against his wife who is addicted to the excessive use of intoxicating liquors. Archambault v. Camiraud, Q. R. 27 S. C. 30.

Mania for Spending Money—Purchase on Credit-Necessaries—Loss of Records of Court.]—Where a person to whom a judicial adviser has been appointed because of her mania for spending money, and with a prohibition against incurring any debts, buys, on credit, the creditor must prove that the goods sold were necessary and useful before he can recover:—Quare, when the records of Court are burnt (force majeure), is it necessary to re-inscribe the name on a new list of interdicts? Contract—Absence of Stipulation for Interest—60 V. c. 24, s. 175 (N.B.)—Rate of Interest.]-A contract between the defendant a contractor with the department of railways and canals of the Dominion government and the plaintiff, a sub-contractor, provided that for $145,000 to be paid to him he was to complete certain work for the defendant. and that the payments should be made (less ten per cent.) monthly as the work progressed according to the estimate of the government engineer in charge. The work on the principal contract was to be completed on the 30th September, 1899. It was not completed for more than one year after that date, but the delay was not the fault of the plaintiff. There was no stipulation in the contract in reference to the payment of interest on any sums due but not paid. M.'s claim was dispated. On an action being brought, it was established that he was entitled substantially to what he claimed:— Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to interest, his claim not being for a sum certain payable by virtue of a written instrument at a time certain, within the meaning of s. 175 of 60 V. c. 24 (N.B.) Semble, that if the plaintiff had been entitled to interest. the rate would not be restricted to 5 per cent under 63 & 64 V. c. 29 (D.), the contract having been entered into before the passing of the Act. Mayes v. Connolly, 35 N. B. Reps. 701.

Contract — Chattel Mortgage — Statement of Rate—Interest Act, 1897—Statutes — Waiver,]——A chattel mortgage provided for the payment of $125, the principal money, in consecutive monthly instalments of $5 each, and for payment of $5 more with each instalment, for interest. The yearly rate to which this was equivalent was not stated, but there was a clause in the mortgage waiving in explicit terms the necessity for stating the yearly rate and waiving also the benefit of the Interest Act, 1897:—Held, that this being an Act passed on the ground of public policy for the benefit of borrowers, its application could not be waived, and that the mortgage was entitled to interest only at the legal rate. Dunn v. Malone, 23 Occ. N. 328, 6 O. L. R. 484, 2 O. W. R. 1036.

Contract—Sum Certain—Rental of Track—Interest by acey of Banages—Demand of Payment.]—By the agreement in question in the action the defendants agreed to pay to the plaintiffs $800 per annum per mile of single track and $1,900 per annum per mile of double track occupied by the defendants' railway, not including "turnouts," in four equal quarterly installments, on the lat January, April. July, and October 'un each year. Disputes arose between the parties as to the meaning of the word "turnouts' and as to the manner in which they were to be measured, and this action was brought in reference to these questions, and was finally determined on appeal to the Judicial Committee. In the result the contention of neither party was given effect to, the mileage in releto to which rental was payable being help plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs had from time to time de.annied payment of the sums payable to them according to their construction of the agreement. The mileage and the sums consequently payable were fixed by the Master in accordance with the principles laid down in the judgments:—Held, that the defendants were bound at their peril to ascertain the sums properly payable and to pay or tender these sums to the plaintiffs; that not having done so the plaintiffs were entitled to interest upon these sums from the times at which they should have been paid; not, under s. 114 of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 51, as being sums certain payable by virue of a written instrument at certain times capable of ascertainment by arithmetical computation, but upon the ground that the case was one in which it would have been usua for a jury to allow interest, and therefore within s. 113 of that Act. Disputed Accounts—Federal and Provincial Governments—Avard—Agreement as to Bute from which Interest to be Computed.]—In certain arbitration proceedings between the Dominion of Canada and the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, the first mentioned province was found to be indebted to the Dominion in the sum of $1,815.848.59 on the 31st December, 1892. Upon a case stated to determine whether interest was payable by the province from the 31st December, 1892, when a balance was struck in favour of the Dominion, or from the 1st July, 1894, odly:—Held, that the correspondence shewed an agreement on the part of the Dominion that interest should only be paid from the date last mentioned. Dominion of Canada v. Province of Ontario, 23 Occ. N. 100, 8 Ex. C. R. 174.

Hypothee—Several Properties—Sale—Distribution of Proceeds—Collocation.]—When two or more immovables hypothecated by the same instrument are sold at different dates, and the amount of the obligation is not entirely paid by the proceeds of the first sale, its interest upon the obligation continues to rm, and the creditor has a right to be collected by virtue of his hypothec upon the proceeds of the second sale. Moneys Realized upon Execution -Repayment when Judgment Reversed - Liability for Interest-Claim by Stranger-Rate of Interest—Costs.]—After the Court of Appeal (3 O. W. R. 32) had affirmed the decision of the trial Judge (2 O. W. R. 93) in favour of plaintiff, plaintiff issued execution against defendants, and received a sum of $1,358.59, being proceeds of sale of goods of defendant Alice R. Cox. The Supreme Court of Canada on 14th December, 1904, reversed the judgment of the Court of Appeal, and plaintiff thereupon became liable to repay the $1,358.80. Some delay arose about this, as the money was claimed by another execution creditor. The plaintiff thereupon notified the claimants that he would apply for an interpleader order, and prepared the necessary material, but did not proceed further. Ultimately on 20th February, 1905, the money was paid by consent of all parties to the solicitors for the defendants, but without interest, though interest was asked for before payment of the principal. Defendant Alice R. Cox moved for an order for payment by plaintiff of interest at 5 per cent, from date of payment to plaintiff to date of repayment, nearly 11 months :- Held, the prima facie right to interest, in the circumstances of this case, is established by Rodger v. Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris, L. R. 3 P. C. 465, where the whole question is discussed by Lord Cairns. This question is discussed by Lord Cairus. This was followed by Bacon, V.-C., in Merchant Bankling Co. v. Maud, L. R. 18 Eq. 659, and by our own Court of Appeal in Sherk v. Evans, 22 A. R. 242 (see especially judgment of Osler, J.A., at p. 248). Counsel for plaintiff, contended that, in view of the conflict as to who was entitled to the principal, interest should not be allowed. But it was interest should not be allowed. But it was open to him to have guarded himself either by an order to pay the money into Court, or by getting a waiver of any right to interest from the rival claimants. The present lawful rate being 5 per cent., I think defendant Alice R. Cox is entitled to what she asks. Adams v. Cox, 5 O. W. R. 419, 10 O. L. R. 96.

Order on Further Directions to Pay Interest on Amount Decreed—Power of Court-Discretion Overruled-Interest Intentionally Omitted from Final Judgment.]—Where a decree of the Court of Appeal affirmed by the Judicial Committee had ordered the repayment of moneys received by the appellant in excess of his salary as manager of a company, but was silent as to interest on the sums so overdrawn; - Held, that the Court had power to order interest on further directions as a matter of discretion, but that, as it appeared from the judgment of the Judicial Committee that the order in council issued upon their advice intentionally omitted a direction to that effect, the discretion of the Court below should be overruled. As no claim for interest was made at the commencement of the action, it should be charged only on the amount decreed from the date of the decree of the Court of Appeal. Judgment in Earle v. Recovery of—Debt—"Time Certain"—Writing.] — The defendant P., in October, 1889. contracted with C. to build certain fences and gates along the line of the G. N. W. Central Railway, and associated the defendant M. with him. They sublet the contract to the plaintiffs by a written agreement which provided for payment to the plaintiffs as follows: "Estimates for the said work shall be made monthly by the engineer, and shall be paid forthwith upon same being paid to said P. and M. by said company." After payment of two estimates for part of the plaintiffs work, difficulties arose, and the engineer, to prevent the bringing of an action, withheld further estimates; but in September, 1891, after litigation between C. and the company had commenced, P. accepted a judgment against the company for the balance due to him by C. upon his fencing contract. This judgment, however, was not paid until 1898, and then it was paid without interest:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to interest on their claim before action, as it was not payable by virtue of a written instrument at a time certain within the meaning of 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 42, s. 28. London, Chatham, and Dover R. W. Co., Y. South-Eastern R. W. Co., [1892] 1. Ch. 120, followed, Judgment in 20 Occ. N. 339 varied. Sinclair v. Preston, 21 Occ. N. 97, 13 Man. L. INTERPLEADER.

Application by Executor — Adverse claims to estate—Delay in applying for probate — Discretion — Remedy. Re Smith and Bennett, 2 O. W. R. 399.

Issue-Party Plaintiff-Sheriff Remaining in Possession-Place of Trial - Security for Costs-Execution Creditor - Insolvency. Where the claimant is in possession of the where the claimant is in possession of the goods at the time of seizure, the execution creditor is made plaintiff in the interpleader issue directed on the sheriff's application. And this rule applies where the claimant is the wife of the execution debtor, and the goods are seized upon the premises in which a busiare seized upon the premises in which a business is carried on by her in which he is assisted by him, but in which he has no interest. Where the goods seized were manufactured materials, the product of a going only a series of the seize of concern, a direction in the interpleader order that the sheriff should continue in possession until the final disposition of the issue, was until the inm disposition of the issue, was upheld against the contention of the execution creditor that the sheriff should be directed to sell the goods, or the claimant to pay into Court or give security for the applications. praised value. An interpleader issue should ordinarily be tried in the county where the goods are seized, but where the sheriff is to remain in possession of the goods of a going concern, a speedy trial is so important that for the purpose of securing it, the issue may be sent to another county, having regard to considerations of expense and convenience. Under the discretionary powers given by Rule 1122, the execution creditor, being in insolvent circumstances, may be ordered to give security for the sheriff's costs. Farley v. Pedlar, 21 Occ. N. 294, 1 O. L. R. 570.

Security for Goods—Sole Bond of Chortered Bank.]—The sole bond (approved by the proper officer of the Court) of a chartered bank, the claimant of the goods in question in an interpleader, is sufficient security for the forthcoming of the goods; it is not necessary to procure sureties, nor to give proof by affidavit of the responsibility of the bank. Ontario Bank v. Merchants Bank of Halijax. 21 Occ. N. 188, 1 O. L. R. 235.

Shares—Certificate and Transfer—Claims for Damages—Parties Out of Jurisdiction—Lackes—Collusion.]—A transfer of shares in a company having been made, the transferor set up that it was procured by fraud, and the transferor and transfere each brought an action against the company:—Held, that the company were entitled to relief by way of interpleader, notwithstanding the claim against them for damages made by one of the claimants:—Held, also, that although both claimants were out of the province, and the company's head office was also outside of the province, there was jurisdiction to make an interpleader order, the claimants themselves having brought the company into the jurisdiction:—Held, also, that the lackes of the company and the documents being within the jurisdiction:—Held, also, that the lackes of the company had not been so great as to discontint them to the relief claimed, and the Sheriff—Delay—Indemnity.] — A delay of three weeks after receipt of the claimant's notice before making interpleader application will not disentitle the sheriff to relief, unless the party objecting has been prejudiced, Quare, whether a sheriff who has taken indemnity from one of the parties after seizure would now be held by that fact alone to have lost his right to interplead:—Held, that in any event it is not open to the party giving the indemnity to take such objection. Mc-Culium v. Schwan, Gould v. Schwan, 5 Terr. I. R. 471.

The insured had livel for many years in this province with a person who passed as his wife, and by whom he had a family, and who had possession of the policy; but shortly before his death he made a will whereby he left the policy in question to a person of the same name, who resided out of the province, whom he described as his wife, and to a daughter by name. In directing an interpleader issue to try the right to the policy, it was ordered that the legatese under the will should be plaintiffs, and they were not required to give security for costs; the difficulty having been caused by the deceased himself, it might be made payable out of the fund. INTERVENTION.

Inscription—Practice.]—When an intervener contests the demand of the plaintiff, and the plaintiff has not replied to the intervention, he cannot inscribe ex parte in respect of the intervention at the same time as in respect of the principal action. Williamson v. Yates, 6 Q. P. R. 300.

Re-opening of Cause—Preliminary Exceptions—Deposit,]—An intervenant has not the right, at any stage of the case and without deposit, to re-open it on questions plendable only by preliminary exceptions. Bisaillon v. Curé, &c., of St. Valentin, 4 Q, P, R, 191.

Service—Certificate of Prothonotary.] — A certificate of the prothonotary stating that an intervener has not served his intervention within three days after its filing, will be set aside on motion if it is stated that the parties have received a copy of the intervention not being necessary. Montreal Loan and Mortgage Co. v. Heirs of Mathieu, 6 Q. P. R. 459.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

Action for Price—License—Production—Pleading.]—The plaintiff was a grocer, and sued to recover the amount of an account for intoxicating liquors sold. The defendant moved for an order that the plaintiff should be directed to declare whether at the time of the sale of such beverages he had a license required by law, and to produce such license:—Held, that the plaintiff was not obliged to allege that he was the holder of a license nor was he obliged to produce one as long as the defendant did not by his pleading allege that the plaintiff had not obeyed the law upon this point. Martel v. Paquet, 5 Q. P. R.

The Municipal Ordinance authorizes municipal councils to make by-laws for licensing, regulating, and governing, inter alia, hotels, places of public resort, and places where liquid refreshments are sold; and for fixing the sum to be paid for a license:—Held, that a permit from the Lieutenant-Governor did not dispense the holder from a compliance with a municipal by-law passed under the above mentioned provision of the Municipal Ordinance :—Held, that, assuming that the power to impose a license under the Ordinance was intended as a power to make a police regulation, and not for the purpose of raising a revenue (but semble, courtar), a by-law imposing a license fee of

I. DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

Debt—Interest — Unliquidated Demand—Irregularity.]—Where in an action for a debt or liquidated demand, there is also a claim for interest as accruling prior to the issue of the writ, but no allegation in the statement of claim of any contract, express or implied, to pay it, it cannot, being an unliquidated demand, be included in a judgment signed by default under Rule 90. Such judgment will be set aside as irregular. Evoing v, Latimer, 5 Terr. L. R. 499.

Dismissal of Action—Default of Plaintiff—Application by Plaintiff for Relief—Service on Defendant's Solicitor—Duration of Retainer — Absent Defendant.] — On 20th December, 1904, the usual practipe order for security for costs was taken out and served. Owing to a change in the firm of plaintiffs solicitors, the order was not compiled with: and on 18th January, 1905, an order issued under Rule 1203 dismissing the action with costs; but no judgment was entered or costs taxed. On 23rd January this order came to the knowledge of plaintiffs' solicitors: they at once moved under Rule 358 to be allowed to put in security and proceed with the action. Notice of this motion was served on defendant's solicitor (as a papeared by admission indersed thereon). But on the return of the motion on 28th January, he stated that defendant had been dismissed, and that defendant had been informed by him that the action had been dismissed, and that defendant had left the province, without giving any address; and that the solicitor did not consider himself any longer entitled to act:—Held, wherever a judgment has been entered on default of either party, a possible remedy is provided by Rule 358; and that, so long as that Rule can be invoked, the action is still pending. In all such cases the motion has to be made in the action, which must therefore be viewed as still pending—otherwise no motion could be made—and, the only remedy would be by petition, if any remedy existed. Then it follows that if the action is pending—ther with the action is pending—the remedy civited. Then it follows that if the action is pending—the solicitor on the record is still solicitor until a change has been made as directed in Rule 335. See Newcombe v, McLanhan, II P. Watt v. Barnett, 3 Q. B. D. 363, approved. The proper course for the plaintiff was to have applied to the Judge who heard the cause to set aside the judgment and for a re-hearing. Mumford v. Acadia Powder Co., 37 N. S. Reps. 375.

Want of Jurisdiction Ratione Personae Vel Loci—Waiver—Duty of Court.]—Want of jurisdiction ratione personae vel led is only waived by the appearance of the defendant and his default to plead it within the delays; it does not give a Court power to modemn by default a defendant improperly summoned. If want of jurisdiction is pleaded on appeal by the defendant, the duty of the Court is to put the parties out of Court, restring the plaintiff his recourse before the competent tribunal. Action on—Defence—Fraud—Evidence to sustain. Anderson Produce Co. v. Nesbitt, 1 O. W. R. 818, 2 O. W. R. 430.

Action on-Defence-Non-service of Process in Original Action-Pleading-Reply.]-The declaration charged that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in $326, by virtue of a judgment recovered in the Superior Court of the District of M., in the Province Plea, that the defendant was not personally served with the first process in the suit within the jurisdiction of the where the judgment was obtained, and that the defendant was never indebted to the plaintiff in the claim on which the judgment was obtained. R-plication that the contract on which the judgment was recovered was made at M., within the jurisdiction of the Superior Court of the district of M.; that the said Court had jurisdiction of the subject matter of the said suit, and the said judgment was regularly obtained according to the practice of the said Court, and that the sum mentioned in the said judgment and ordered to be paid is justly and truly due and payable by the defendant to the plaintiff. Demurrer to the replication, and notice of objection to the plea:—Held, that the plea as an allegation that the enforcement of the judgment by this Court was contrary to natural justice, was bad, as it did not negative the existence of all facts which, if proved, would render the judgment enforceable, that it was not sufficient to enable the defendant to go into the merits of the original cause of action under C. S. c. 48, as it did not set out the cause of action. the replication was bad, as it did not join issue on the conclusion of the plea "never indebted," and merely reiterated in another form the right to enforce the judgment. Shearer v. McLean, 36 N. B. Reps. 284.

Action on—Defences Set Up in Original Action—Motion to Strike Out—Embarrassment—Delay,1—The defences that may be set up in an action in Manitoba an a foreign judgment by virtue of s-s. (1) of s. 38 of the King's Bench Act, R. S. M. 1902, c. 40, are not limited to such as might have been, but were not, pleaded in the original action, but include such as were actually pleaded there, subject to the power of the Court or a Judge to strike them out on the ground of embarrassment or delay; and a motion to strike out defences was refused. Gault v. McNabb, 1 Man. L. R. 35, distinguished. Meyers v. Prittie, 1 Man. L. R. 27, not followed. British Linen Co. v. McEwan, 8 Man. L. R. 39, discussed. Hickey v. Legresley, 15 Man. L. Action on—Equitable Relief—Declaratory
Judgment — Simple Contract Creditor —
Statute of Limitations.]—A creditor under a Quebec judgment asked a declaration that the judgment debtor was beneficial owner of a certain claim against the Dominion government:—Held, that being in this province in the position of a simple contract creditor he was not entitled to such relief, for the same

from taking garnishee proceedings or proceedings for equitable execution; and also because, the claim being one against the Crown, no consequential relief was or could be asked. Held, also, that the judgment, being more than six years old, would under ordinary circumstances have become barred; but since the judgment debtor was not at the time of the recovery, nor had been since, in this province, the plaintiff's remedy was saved by R. S. O. 1897 (vol. 3) c. 324, s. 40. Setement v. Guibord, 23 Occ. N. 242, 6 O. L. R. 262, 2 O. W. R. 108, 554.

Action on—Lis Pendens—Similar Action in Another Province.]—A judgment rendered in a province of the Dominion other than the province of Quebec will not be considered as a judgment rendered in a foreign country, and the Quebec Courts are obliged to recognize a judgment so prenounced if it is in accordance with the provisions of art. 211, C. P. 2. A defendant by a plea of lis pendens may except to a suit begun in the province of Quebec by alleging that a suit of the same nature, between the same parties, and for the same cause of action, is pending in another province of the Dominion. 3. But, if the action has no object but to have the judgment rendered in another province of the Dominion declared executory, the fact that the plaintiff has set up a like cause of action in another province, and that it is actually pending, does not justify a plea of lis pendens, provided that the Court is not asked to pronounce upon the cause of action, but only to state that the judgment has been regularly obtained. Black-tood v. Percival, 22 Occ. N. 417, 5 Q. P. R. 110, Q. R. 23 S. C. S.

Action on—Motion for summary judgment—Defence. Chambre v. Gundy, 2 O. W. R. 243, 244.

Action on—Plea to—Damages not Due.]—
A defendant who is sued upon a foreign judgment declaring a contract to be executory and awarding damages by reason of its nonexecution, may, notwithstanding such judgment, by virtue of arts, 111 and 202, C. P., plead to the allegation of the debt in the declaration, that the damages claimed are not due and give the grounds for such conclusion.
Reid v. McCurry, 4 Q. P. R. 251.

Action on—Pleading—Declaration—Original Cause of Action.] — An action was brought in the province of Quebec upon a foreign judgment. The defendant made an exception to the form, upon the ground that the plaintiff had failed to indicate the causes of action in the suit in which the judgment had been rendered:—Held, that the plaintiff bringing an action upon a foreign judgment is not bound to state the grounds of the original action, where it is shewn, by the certificate of the clerk of the Court by which the judgment was rendered, that the claim sued on was personally served on the defendant, together with the writ of summons in the action in which the foreign judgment was rendered. Smith v. Beaubien, 22 Occ. N. 419.

Action on - Proof of-Exemplification - Void Contract - Company - Extra-territorial Contracts of Carriage.]-A default judgment obtained in a foreign jurisdiction, though liable to be set aside so long as it stands, is "final and conclusive," within the meaning of that expression as applied to foreign judgments, and consequently it may be sued on in this province. In an action on a foreign judgment the defendant is entitled to challenge the validity of the judgment on the ground that it is manifestly erroneous, such as being founded on an ex-facie void contract. The province may create a company with power to undertake extraterritorial contracts of carriage, and so it is not ultra vires of a company incorporated in British Columbia to contract to carry goods from British Columbia to contract to carry goods from British Columbia to a point in the Yukon Territory. Per Martin, J.:—An ex-emplification of judgment under the seal of the Court in which the judgment was pronounced, is equivalent to the original judgment exemplified, and notice under the dence Act of intention to produce it in evidence is unnecessary. Boyle v. Victoria Yukon Trading Co., 22 Occ. N. 377, 9 B. C.

Action on, in Ontario — Original Cosideration—Ontario Judicature Act —Promoter of Company—Loan to—Personal Liability,]—Under the Ontario Judicature Act, as before it, the declaration in an action on a foreign judgment may include courts claiming to recover on the original consideration. A promoter of a joint stock company horrowed money for the purposes of the company, giving his own note as security. The lender was informed at the time of the manner in which the loan was to be, and was, applied:—Held, that, as the company did not exist at the time of the loan, it could not be the principal debtor, nor the borrower a mere guarantor. The latter was, therefore, primarily liable for repayment of the loan, Judgment of the Court of Appenl, 27 A. E. 96, 20 Occ, N. 57, affirmed. Bugbee v. Clergue, 21 Occ. N. 136; S.C., sub-nom. Clergue v. Humphrey, 31 S. C. R. 66.

Warrant of Attorney — Confession—Jurisdiction—Residence of Defendant)—The general rule is, that a judgment valid by the law and practice of the state where it rendered or confessed, may be sued upon as a ground of action in any other state. A judgment by confession is an instance of a party voluntarily submitting himself to the diction of the Court, whereby competence is acquired to deal with the matter submitted of Pennslyvania, after the defendant has caused to be a resident of that State, unon a warrant of attorney executed there, availd, and that the Courts there had jurisdiction to deal with the matter. III. INTERLOCUTORY OR FINAL.

Interim Injunction—Leave to Appeal.]

—The judgment reanting an interlocutory injunction does not fall under Art. 46, C. P., and leave to appeal therefrom will not be granted. Wright v. City of Hull, 4 Q. P. R. 52.

Revocation of Stay of Execution —
Leave to Appeal.)—An interlocutory judgment is one which is rendered in a cause between the institution of the suit and the final judgment therein, and is given in an intermediate question before the final decision. A judgment revoking the stay of execution previously ordered by the Court, and ordering the balliff to proceed with the execution of the property seized, is a final judgment, and a petition for leave to appeal therefrom cannot be granted. Shannon v. Turgeon, 4 Q. P. R. 49.

IV. OPENING UP, RESCINDING, AND VARYING.

Action—Petition — Fraud—Affidavit.]—
The revocation of a judgment may be demanded by a direct action, while it may also be effected by means of a petition. 2. One who attacks, on the ground of fraud, a judgment against him, and alleges that it causes him serious prejudice, is not obliged to make it appear in his declaration that, but for the alleged fraud, the judgment would have been different from what it is. 3. A petition should be accompanied by an affidavit, but if, upon an inscription in law against a direct action, the absence of such affidavit is not set up as a ground, the Court cannot, of its own motion, take notice of the absence of the affidavit. Charette v. Leveillé, 4 Q. P. R. 310.

Action to Annul—Fraud — Parties — Creditors.]—A decree, like a contract, may be attacked for fraud by a party interested. 2. An action to annul a decree is subject to the same rules as an action to set aside a conveyance, and, in the same way, enures to the benefit of all the creditors interested. McNally v. Préfontaine, 4 Q. P. R. 125.

Action to Set Aside Assignment of Salary — Previous garnishing proceeding in Division Court—Res Judicata — Fraud — False testimony, Johnston v. Barkley, 4 0. W. R. 453, 6 O. W. R. 549, 10 O. L. R. 724.

Action to Set Aside Judgment—Jurisdiction—Fraud — Pleading.]—Where a judgment has been obtained by fraud, the Court has jurisdiction, in a subsequent action brought for that purpose, to set the judgment side; but a statement of claim alleging that to be that no service of the writ of summons to the hand action was ever made upon him, and that the said lation was ever made upon him, and that the said lability of the plaintiff to the defendants and co-indorser was satisded and discharged either prior or subsequent to the institution of said action, as defendants well knew at the time, is insufficient as not alleging that the judgment in question was obtained by fraud, or, if it can be keld to do so, as not positively averring the recovery of the judgment against the plaintiff, which is also essential. Richards v. Williams, 11 B. C. R. 122, 1 W. L. R. 9.

Costs — Practice — Supreme Court of Canada.]—The minutes of judgment as settled by the registrar directed that the appellants' costs should be paid out of certain mones in Court, and in this form the judgment was duly entered and certified to the clerk of the Court below. Subsequently it was made to appear that there were no moneys in Court available to pay these costs, and upon the application of the appellants the Court amended the judgment, directing that the costs of the appellants should be paid by the respondents forthwith after taxation. Letourneau v. Carbonneau, 25 S. C. R. 701.

Amendment — Ex parte application — Changing personal into proprietary judgment —Leave to amend—Rescinding order. Bolster v. Booth, 2 O. W. R. 890.

Application to Vary — Costs.]—The defendant K., an auctioneer, advertised at the instance of the defendant M. certain land for sale at public auction claimed by the plaintiff and M. This suit was brought for an injun-tion restraining the sale and for a declaration of title. An interim injunction was granted. An ejectment action was also brought by the plaintiff against M. in respect of the same land, and judgment therein was given for the plaintiff. The defendants appeared by the same solicitor and joined in their answer in this suit. At the hearing a decree was made against the defendants with costs. K. now applied to vary the decree so far as it ordered him to pay costs, alleging that since putting in his answer he had had nothing to do with the conduct of the suit, believing himself to be but a nominal defendant, and his co-defendant to be responsible for the defence:—Held, that the application should be refused, but without costs. Robertson v. Kerr, 23 Occ. N. 266.

Consent — Misrepresentations—Motion to stay—Motion to vacate—Forum. Dominion Syndicate v. Oshawa Canning Co., 2 O. W. R. 674.

Consent Judgment — Setting Aside.1— A judgment declaring the contestation to an opposition maintained by consent cannot be set aside upon petition, unless it is attacked by way of improbation. Beaubien Produce and Milling Co, v. Corbeil, 3 Q. P. R. 435.

Correction of Interlocutory by Final Judgment.] — A judgment dismissing an exception to the form, in which the defendant, a married woman, separate as to property, complained of being sued alone, can be corrected by the final judgment. Ogilvie v. Fraser, 3 Q. P. R. 546.

Default—Application to set aside—Delay—Discovery of defence—Condition of payment into Court. Cayley v. Graham, 2 O. W. R. 400.

Default—Opening up—Terms—Alimony. Edgeworth v. Edgeworth, 2 O. W. R. 404, 3 O. W. R. 71.

Default Judgment—Motion to Set Aside —Order Reducing Amount—Power to Make

-Costs-Mala Fides.]-An action having been brought in a County Court to recover an amount claimed for taxes, an agreement to pay the amount claimed for debt and costs within a day or two from a time fixed, the 16th or 17th May, 1901. On the 18th May an amount was paid on account of costs, and on the 21st, the balance not having been paid judgment by default was entered for the full amount claimed for debt and costs, without giving credit for the amount paid on account. An application to set aside the judgment was refused, but an order was made reducing it to the proper amount :- Held, that under O. xiii, r. 10, the Judge of the County Court had power to make such an order. Inasmuch as the application was a necessary one, the defendant should have had the costs of the motion below, but, as there was a substantial condition in respect of which he had not succeeded, there should be no costs of the appeal. Semble, that, if the judgment had been entered in breach of good faith, the amendment should not have been granted, but that in this case it was the defendant's duty to have seen that the terms of the arrangement as to payment were complied with. City of Halifax v. Bent, 33 N. S. Reps. 546.

Default Judgment—Statement of Defence—County Court, —An order made in an action in a County Court for service of notice of a writ but of the jurisdiction provided that the defendant should have twelve days after service "within which to appear to notice of the writ and file his defence to the action." Within the twelve days an appearance in the usual form was entered, the following words being added: "The defendant admits only $103, but otherwise disputes plaintiffs' claim in this action:"—Held, that this was in effect a statement of defence; that filing was, under the order, all that was necessary, and that a judgment entered for default of defence was void. Voight Brewery Co. v. Orth, 23 Occ. N. 168, 5 O. L. R. 443, 2 O. W. R. 304.

Default Judgment—Petition for Review—Declinatory Exception.]—A defendant who does not reside in Canada and has been summoned by way of publication, may, with his petition for review of a judgment rendered against him by default, file preliminary exceptions, and notably a declinatory exception, if the contract set up by the plaintiff has not been made in the province of Quebec and the cause of action has not arisen there. Levy v. Arkbulatoff, 5 Q. P. R. 204.

Default of Appearance—Motion to Set Aside Service of Writ of Summons out of Jurisdiction—Stay of Proceedings—Irregular Judgment.]—A notice of motion by the defendant to set aside an order for service of a writ of summons out of the jurisdiction, on grounds of irregularity, operates as a stay of proceedings until finally disposed of, so that the time for entering the appearance does not run in the meanwhile. A judgment signed by the plaintiffs, for default of appearance on the same day that an order dismissing the defendant's motion was issued, was set aside as irregular. Confederation Life Association v. Moore, 24 Occ. N. 25, 6 O. L. R. 603, 2 O. W. R. 341, 1030, 1087, 1120.

Default to Shew Cause—Motion to Set Aside—Merits—Improvidence.]—On a motion for judgment under Order XIV., after due service of notice of motion, affidavits, and exhibits, the defendant did not appear, and the plaintiff secured an order. This was an application to set aside the order, on the ground that the defendant's affidavits to resist the motion were misdirected to Toronto instead of to Halifax. The order was set aside on payment of costs. On such an application the merits will not be looked at, the sole question being: "Has the judgment been improvidently entered?" A subsequent day was appointed for the argument of the merits. Le Gresley v. Le Moine, 21 Occ. N. SS.

Exception to Petition — Validity as Tirece-Opposition.]—A court document intituled "petition for revocation of judgment," but not containing any of the necessary grounds, will not be rejected upon exception to the form if it can be held valid as a tierce-opposition. In re Montreal Cold Storage and Freezing Co., 5 Q. P. R. 91.

Laches. |- Judgment was signed against the defendant for $542.68 and costs, in de fault of appearance, on the 2nd July, 1892. In 1901 he moved to set it aside on the grounds that he was never served with the writ of summons and that he did not owe any money to the plaintiff. The plaintiff's husband swore that on the 21st June, 1892, The plaintiff's he personally served the defendant, with whom he was well acquainted, with the writ of summons in the usual way, in the pre-sence and hearing of the plaintiff's solicitot, and the affidavit of the solicitor shewed that he was present on the occasion in question, when the defendant, after being served with the writ of summons, admitted that the amount set out in the indorsement was correct and that he had no defence:-Held, that, the defendant not having explained the delay on his part of nearly nine years, nor satisfied the Court that he had any merits, and the judgment being regular, the applica-tion should be refused. Fooks v. Cos., 22 Occ. N. 44.

Motion to Set Aside-Action for Value of Services—Appearance—Affidavit—Account —Service of Copy—Default Judgment—Evidence.]-An action by a civil engineer for the value of services rendered, detailed in an account, such services consisting in the preparation of a plan, is not a summary matter within the meaning of Art, 1150, C. P. C., and, therefore, when the writ is returned during vacation, the defendant is not obliged to file with his appearance an affidavit stating that such appearance is entered in good faith and not with the object of unjustly delaying the proceedings. 2. The neglect to serve upon the defendant with the original process a copy of the account sued upon is not a ground for setting aside a judgment rendered ex parte against the defendant, where such account has been filed with the writ and afterwards served upon the solicitors for the defendants, with a notice to plead within two days, the time for pleading having Motion to Vary-Custody of Infant-Neglect to Provide for—Inscription in Review.]—Where the plaintiff, in an action for separation from bed and board, also prays for the custody of a minor child, some order should be made by the Court of first instance, in delivering judgment, with respect to this portion of plaintin's conclusions. 2. Where the Court of first instance has omitted to make such order, the plaintiff is not entitled by motion not notified to the opposite party, to ask that an addition be made to the judgment, disposing of the prayer for the guardianship of the minor, it appearing in this case that the omission complained of was not a mere clerical error. 3. On an inscription in review from the first judgment, the Court of Review may either make such order, or, if it seem to be more desirable, may send the record back to the Court of first instance, for such further proceedings as may be proper or necessary to enable the latter tribunal to adjudicate as to the custody of the minor. Smith v. Cooke, Q. R. 24 S. C. 14.

Motion to Vary—Difficulty arising in proceeding under judgment—Deaths of members of Court — Lapse of time. Uffiner v. Levis. 2 O. W. R. 441, 3 O. W. R. 306, 5 O. W. R. 39.

Motion to Vary—Rehearing—Uosts—Partiea, I—In a suit to restrain the sale of property by K., an auctioneer, at the instance of M., and for a declaration of the plaintiff's tills. K. appeared and jointly answered with M. at. thereafter undertook the conduct of the suit, and alone appeared at the hearing, k holding himself to be but a nominal party. Jodgment with costs having been given against both defendants, an application by K. to have the suit reheard for the purpose of varying so much of the decree as ordered him to pay costs, was refused. Robertson v. ker. 23 Occ. N. 266, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 494.

Motion to Vary Judgment—Disposition of Costa—Clerical Error.]—A disposition in a final judgment awarding costs in a manner absolutely contrary to that which he Judge wished to direct, as appears in confectation of the whole text of the judgment, hay be corrected on application to the Judge, this correction being considered as the correction of a clerical error provided for by Art. 546, C. P. C. Gervais v. Lesly, Q. R. 1 S. C. 44, followed. Regina v. Stadacona Water, Light, and Power Co. and Town of Famborn, Q. R. 25 S. C. 525, Opposition—Defendant not Served—Petition in Review—Exception to Form.]—An opposition to a judgment, based upon the fact that the defendant has not been served with process in the action, must shew the grounds of defence of the defendant in the action, and, if it is begun after the time fixed, it cannot be regarded as a petition in review if it does not contain such grounds. 2. Semble, that an exception to the form must reserve the recourse of the plaintiff. Hénault v. Fulton, 5 Q. P. R. 213.

Opposition—Petition for Review—Nullity of Service—Saisie-gagerie — Irregular Sale—Damges—Res Judicata,]—The defendant may proceed by way of opposition to a judgment or of petition for review of a judgment heard or called upon, and in such a case it is sufficient to allege the nullity of the service without any other ground of defence. 2. A party whose effects have been sold upon a writ of saisie-gagerie en expulsion, which has not been served upon him, may claim damages for the irregular sule of his effects, and the order dismissing his opposition to a judgment based upon the defective service, does not constitute res judicata against him in his suit for damages. Fulton v. Henault, 5 Q. P. R. 258.

Petition to Open up—Cause Heard exparte.]—Where judgment was given by a Court without hearing one of the parties, in consequence of a misunderstanding between the solicitors, such party may, on petition, have the judgment opened up. Fabien v. Gougeon, Q. R. 18 S. C. 242.

Petition to Open up—Error as to Statute.]—Where the parties and the Judge have, by a common error, supposed that a certain statute had been promulgated and was applicable to the case in hand, whereas, though it had been passed by the Legislative Assembly, it had been modified by the Legislative Council so as to make it inapplicable to pending causes, there is ground for proceeding by petition against a judgment rendered in accordance with such supposed law. Lamalice v. La Campagnie d'Imprimerie Electrique, 4 Q. P. R. 63.

Petition to Reopen—Discovery of Fresh Evidence. —A party cannot by petition demand the setting aside of a judgment upon the allegation that he has since found letters of such a nature that they would have the effect of changing the judgment, if such letters were in his possession at the time of trial. Warin v. Werthemer, 5 Q. P. R. 462.

Petition to Vary—Final Judgment— Contestation of Dividend Sheet—Curators— Inscription — Notice.]—A judgment maintaining the contestation of a dividend sheet is a final judgment, subject to review or appeal, and can only be modified by the Court which pronounced it in accordance with one or other of the modes provided by Arts, 1163 et seq., C. P. 2. There is ground for a petition against such a judgment when it alleges that the curators affected by the judgment had no notice of the last inscription of the contestation. Bayeur v. Seath, 5 Q. P. R.

Reference by Consent to Experts -Misunderstanding of Counsel as to Purpose of Reference-Opening up Judgment.]-In a proceeding before a Master in a mechanic's lien matter, an understanding was arrived at between the counsel for the plaintiff and defendant, and orally communicated to the Master. When the time arrived to act on the understanding, the counsel disagreed in their recollection of what their understanding was. The Master entered judgment for the amount found due by certain experts, in accordance with the understanding of the agreement: Held, that the judgment given by the Master, whose recollection of the understanding was the same as that of the plaintiff's counsel, in favour of the plaintiff, must be reopened and the matter referred back, as the parties were not ad item. Wilding v. Sanderson, [1897] 2 Ch. 534, referred to. Beaudry v. Gallien, 23 Occ. N. 46, 5 O. L. R. 73, 1 O. W. R. 793.

Revocation — Amendment—Default of Adjudication,]—A petition in revocation of judgment will lie ngainst a final judgment which does not adjudicate upon the issue raised by an amendment to a pleading, Lusher v. Pulmoti, 6 Q. P. R. 331.

Revocation—Contestation of Account firounds.]—If a petition in revocation of a judgment is granted and a party allowed to contest an account by means of newly discovered evidence, he cannot, nevertheless, insert in the contestation which he is allowed to file, grounds of contestation not set forth in the petition in revocation. Hill v. Campbell, 6 Q. P. R. 424.

Action on Bills of Exchange Defence — Illegality—Powers of company, Canada Permanent and Western Canada Mortgage Corporation v. Briggs, 6 O. W. R. 180.

Action on Bills of Exchange—Indonsement—Collateral agreement—Failure to establish — Correspondence. Imperial Bank of Canada v. Tuckett, 6 O. W. R. 121, 461.

Admissions—Pleading — Rules 259, 261, 616.]—Rule 616 is not intended to apply to the case of alleged insufficiency in law of the statements of facts pleaded in the defence. A motion for judgment should not under such circumstances be made under that Rule, but the procedure indicated in Rule 259 or Rule 261 should be adopted. Editeard v. Gole, 24 Occ. N. 360, S O. L. R. 141, S. C. sub nom. Edwards v. Cook, 4 O. W. R. 112.

Admissions of Fact-Pleading-Costs-Rule 615 (Man.)]—The words "admissions of fact in the pleadings" in Rule 615 of the King's Bench Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 40, are not confined to such admissions made by an opposite party, and this Rule may be availed of by the party making the admissions and an order made accordingly; and, when the defendant in his statement of defence consents to the relief asked for by the plaintiff and offers to give the conveyance required by him, such consent and offer, although strictly speaking not an admission of fact, should be treated as one for the purposes of the Rule, as its object is to save further proceedings and further costs when the need of trying issues is removed by admissions. The state-ment of defence, besides the consent and offer referred to, denied the allegations of the statement of claim:—Held, that, as the defendant, by making an application under Rule 615, had put it out of the power of the plaintiffs to prove their allegations and out of the power of the Court to decide, on the merits, who should pay the costs of the ac-tion, the case should be treated, for the purpose of awarding costs, as if the defendant had admitted the truth of the plaintiffs' pleadings, as well as submitted to the relief asked for, and that the defendant should pay the main costs of the action, including the costs of the motion. Houghton v. Mathers, 24 Occ. N. 246, 14 Man, L. R. 733.

verifying his cause of action, and an affidavit of his solicitor stating that the defendant had no defence, would be sufficient under s. 94 of the County Courts Act to support a speedy judgment. Bremner v. Nichol, 24 Occ. N. 413, 11 B. C. R. 35.

—On a motion for speedy judgment in a County Court action, it is open to the defendant to set up other defences than those disclosed in his dispute note. 2. On the facts, the defendant was entitled to unconditional leave to defend. 3. Fer Irving, J.:—The defendant should have been allowed to cross-examine the plaintiff on his affidavit. MeGuire v. Miller, 9 B. C. R. I.

Defence — Company—Indebtedness Exceeding Statutory Limit—Directors' Liability,1—In an action against a company incorporated under R. S. O. 1897 c. 1994, for goods sold and delivered, the amount claimed being admitted, in which the defendants set up that their indebtedness when the goods were purchased largely exceeded the limits prescribed by ss. Il and 49 of that Act, and that the directors were personally liable, and not the company, a motion for summary judgment was dismissed. Jacobs v. Booth's Distillery Co., S. L. T. R. 202, followed. Canadian General Electric Co. v. Tagona Water and Light Co., 24 Occ. N. 61, 6 O. L. R. 641, 2 O. W. R. 1055.

Defence - Counterclaim-Payment into Court.]-The plaintiff employed the defendant to sell a property at Sydney, of which the plaintiff had an option. The defendant was not a regular real estate broker, and the parties did not settle upon any rate of payment for the service. The defendant payment for the service. The defendant effected a sale for $13,200, at a profit of $2,200 for the plaintiff. The defendant be-came possessed of the $2,200 profit after having effected the sale, and wired the plaintiff that he had effected a sale and held this amount. The defendant to effect the sale, had personally undertaken that certain necessary steps to vest title in the purchaser would be duly taken. The plaintiff moved for judgment under Order XIV. for $2,000. He gave credit to the defendant for $200, which the plaintiff alleged to be sufficient commission on the sale, questioned the defendant's solvency by affidavit, and sought immediate judgment for the amount in the defendant's hands, less the $200. The sum in the defendant's hands was all he was fo receive from the purchaser, but there was, at the time of the hearing of the motion for judgment, a matter of the transfer of a mortgage from the original mortgagee of the property to another, still incomplete. The Judge ordered the sum of $2,000 to be paid into Court to abide the event of the action. Costs to be costs in the cause. Le Gresley, v. Le Moine, 21 Occ. N. 89.

Defence — Municipal debentures — By-law —Payment of principal — Statute. Standard Life Assurance Co. v. Village of Tweed, 2 0. W. R. 731, 747, 922, 983. Implied Covenant for Payment—Instrument of charge — Defence — Unconditional leave to defend—Terms. Farmer's L. and S. Co. v. Munns, 2 O. W. R. 503, 823.

Leave to Defend—Allegations of Fraud—Costs, refusal of.]—When a defendant intends to rely on a defence of fraud, he should set it up definitely in his statement of defence, and, in meeting a motion for leave to sign judgment under Rule 593 of the King's Bench Act, he should file an affidavit in answer shewing such definite facts pointing to the alleged fraud as to satisfy the Judge that it would be reasonable that he should be allowed to raise such defence. In this case the only evidence in support of the allegation of fraud consisted of some general statements of defendants in their examinations on their affidavits filed in answer to the plaintiffs motion, and it was held that an order allowing the plaintiff to sign judgment was right. Wallingford v. Mutual Society, 5 App. Cas. 685, followed. Costs of appeal refused partly on account of the great mass of material heaped up, including diffuse examinations on affidavits. Promissory Note — Defence—Unconditional Leave to Defend.]—In an action upon a promissory note the defendant set up, in answer to a motion for summary judgment under Rule 603, that the consideration for the note consisted in whole or in part of the purchase money of a patent right, and that the note had not the words "given for a patent right" written or printed across the face, and was, therefore, void under the Bills of Exchange Act, s. 30, s-s. 4. In the hands of the plaintiff, who was alleged to have notice of such consideration. The plaintiff denied that the note was given for such consideration:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to unconditional leave to defend. Davey v. Sadler, 21 Occ. N. 343, 1 O. L. R. 626.

Promissory Note—Fraud—Notice—Costs of motion. Merchants Bank v. Irvine, 2 O. W. R. 47.

Promissory Note—Holder for Value—Fraud—Onus,—Where the maker and one of the indorsers of the promissory note sued on, in answer to a motion by the plaintiff for summary judgment under Rule 603, swore that they were induced to become parties to the note by certain fraudulent misrepresentations made by their co-defendants, whereof they had reason to believe the plaintiff had notice:—Held, having regard to s. 30, s.-s. 2, of the Bills of Exchange Act, that they were entitled to unconditional leave to defend, notwithstanding the plaintiff as affidavit that he was a holder for value. VII. OTHER CASES.

Account—Time Fixed by Judgment for Rendering—Damages in Default—Death of Defendant during Time Fixed — Revivor— Universal Legatee—Payment of Costs.]—On 16th November, 1901, the judgment of the Court required the defendant to render to the plaintiff, within 30 days, an account of a quantity of wood which defendant had to dispose of for plaintiff, and, in case of default render the account, to pay to plaintiff $0,000, with interest, and costs in any case. On 30th November, 1901, the defendant died, leaving his wife his universal legatee. His decease was not entered on the roll. On 2nd December, 1901, the widow, as universal legatee, paid the costs of the action. ight January, 1902, the plaintiff served the judgment on the universal legatee, with a demand for payment of the $9,000 within eight days, in default of which the judgment would be executed against her. On 21st January, 1902, she presented a petition alleg-ing the death of her husband, her capacity of universal legatee, and asking that she should be added as a party to the suit in place of her husband and allowed to proceed The plaintiff answered that the 30 days having expired, the judgment had become final as to the $9,000; that the petipaying the costs; and that there was no suit to which the petitioner could be made a party:—Held, that the plaintiff had not at the time of the defendant's death acquired a right to the $9,000, since it was not due till after the expiry of 30 days, and then only in default of the account being produced within that time. 2. That the decease of the defendant stopped the running of the 30 days, for a dead man cannot render an acccount; and it was not a case within Arts. 268, 269, C. P., which say that suits are valid up to the day of service of notice of a party's death, for as against the defendant there had been no suit since his death. 3. That the universal legatee, in paying the costs of the action, acquiesced in the judgment, but did not acquiesce in the default to render an account and to pay the $9,000. 4. That the universal legatee was in a position to take up the suit at the point where it was at the death of the defendant, 5. Quere, as to the effect of the judgment, whether the defendant, if he had lived, could, after the expiry of the 30 days, have demanded and obtained further time to readenthe resemble. further time to render the account. Girard v. Letellier, Q. R. 21 S. C. 192.

Action on—Limitation—Writ of Summons—Renewal.]—Notwithstanding R. S. O. 187 c. 108, s. 23 (see R. S. O. 1897 c. 133, s. 23), twenty years is the period of limitation applicable to an action on a judgment of a court of record. Boice v. O'Lonne, 3 A. R. 167, and cases following it, followed in preference to Jay v. Jo.mston, [1803] 1 Q. B. 25, 189. The renewal of a writ of summons after its expiration is matter of judicial discretion, and where the Judge of the County Court in which the action was brought made an order for the renewal of a writ which had the effect of defeating the operation of the Statute of Limitations, and the defendant made no attempt to appeal from such order, but appeared to the writ without objection, the High Court, on appeal from the judgment rendered at the trial, refused to entertain an objection to the validity of the writ. Butler v. McMicken, 21 Occ. N. 71, 32 O. R. 422.

Certificate of—Court of Appeal—Power to amend after issue — Mistake — Costs. Whipple v. Ontario Box Co., 1 O. W. R. 36.

Compromise of Action-Enforcement by Order of Court—Forum—Jurisdiction of Master in Chambers—Practice—Motion to Court.] -Appeal by plaintiffs from order of Master in Chambers dismissing application for order allowing plaintiffs to enter judgment against defendant for $160, the amount which the parties had agreed should be paid by defendant in settlement of the action :- Held, since the Judicature Act the Court has jurisdiction to enforce in the action a compromise of it to which the parties have agreed. The proper practice in such cases is to apply to a Judge in Court for such order as may be necessary to enforce the compromise. Where the compromise is to be carried out by a stay or dismissal of the action, the Master in Chambers may have jurisdiction to make the order. It follows that plaintiffs fail in their appeal. But treating their substantive motion as having been transferred into and heard by a Court: order made for payment by defendant of the $160 to plaintiffs forthwith. Pirung v. Dawson, 4 O. W. R, 499, 25 Occ. N. 71, 9 O. L. R. 248.

Confession of Defence Arising after Action — Judgment for Costs — Waiver of Other Defences.]—Action for damages for trespass to land and for an injunction. An interlocutory injunction was granted, but afterwards discharged by consent, the right to acquire the land having been obtained after The defendants then obtained leave action. The detendants then obtained leave to plead, and pleaded that since the com-mencement of the action, the town of B. had expropriated the plaintiff's land, etc., and had paid him the damages awarded, and that said award included all damages done to the plaintiff's land by the defendants, as well as all the trespasses, acts, and griev-ances complained of in the statement of claim. The plaintiff confessed this defence, and entered judgment for his costs to be taxed :- Held, that this defence operated as a waiver of other defences; and a motion to set aside the judgment was refused. Date of—Amendment—Death of Plaintiff between Argument and Judgment—Administrator ad Litem.]—The plaintiff died after the argument of an appeal by him from the judgment of the High Court dismissing his action with costs, but before judgment was given on such appeal. The Court was not informed of the death, and gave judgment dismissing the appeal with costs. The defendants, in ignorance of the death, obtained the issue of the certificate of judgment, which bore date as of the day on which the judgment was pronounced. Upon an application made by the defendants some months later, the Court directed that the certificate should be amended by dating it as of the day of the argument, and by inserting in the body thereof a direction that it be entered as of the day of the argument, Turre v. London and South-Western R. W. Co., L. R. 17 Eq. 561, and Ecroyd v. Coulthard, [1897] 2 Ch. 554, followed. The defendants were entitled to have an administrator ad litem appointed to represent the plaintiff's estate in order that the costs of the action and appeal might be recovered. Gunn v. Harper, 22 Coc. N. 208, 225, 3 O. L. R. 603, 1 O. W. R. 366.

Defence Arising after Action Brought Confession - Judgment for Costs without Judge's Order—Other Defences.]—The defendant under Order 24, Rules 1 and 2, pleaded a defence arising after action brought, which was a good answer to the whole action The plaintiff confessed this defence and signed judgment against the defendant for costs under Rule 3 of Order 24, which provides that the plaintiff may deliver a confession of such defence, and may thereafter sign judgment for his costs up to the time of pleading such defence, unless the Court or a Judge shall otherwise order. The defendant moved to set aside the judgment because (1) it was entered up by the prothonotary without a Judge's order, and (2) such judgment could not be entered while the other defences remained undisposed of:—Held, that the words of the Rule specifically enable the plaintiffs to sign a judgment without further proceedings except taxing costs, unless the defendant obtain an order otherwise. The subsequent defence amounts to a waiver of the original defence pleaded. It would be futile to go to trial on the remaining defences, as there is no question remaining defences, as there is no question remaining to be tried as in Hoght v. Tottenham, [1892] W. N. 88. Bridgetown, &c. Co. v. Barbadoes, &c., Co., 38 Ch. D. 378, distinguished. Ruggles v. M. and V. B. R. W. Co., 22 Occ. N. 432. Affirmed 35 N. S. Reps. 553.

Desistment—Appeal Pending—Jurisdiction of Court Below—Costa.]—Where the action has been dismissed, and the plaintiff appeals from the judgment dismissing it, and the parties in whose favour the dismissal has been granted desist from the judgment in their favour, the Superior Court is, in spite of such desistment, functus officio in the cause, and cannot take cognizance of subsequent proceedings as long as the appeal is pending. 2. A motion dismissed upon a ground not set up by the parties will be dismissed without costs. Lamothe v. Piche, 5 Q. P. R. 172.

Desistment—Proof of—Authority of Autorney—Ratification.]—The authority of an attorney ad litem to file a desistment from a judgment in the name of his client, or the ratification of such desistment by the client, cannot be proved by witnesses, when the judgment is for more than $50, without a commencement of proof by writing. Gauthier v. Barcelo, Q. R. 19 S. C. 498, 4 Q. P. R. 224.

Disregarding Findings of Jury.]—
The power conferred on the Court by Rule 615 to give judgment on the evidence before it, may be exercised though the result may be to disregard the findings of a jury, but it must be used with great caution. Clayton v. Patterson, 21 Occ. N. 117, 32 O. R. 435.

Effect of, as Evidence—Contradicting,]
—A judgment of the Superior Court is an authentic document which makes full proof of the statements contained therein, and their veracity cannot be impeached by parol evidence, except upon inscription en faux. Beaubien Produce and Milling Co. v. Corbeil, Q. R. 18 S. C. 484.

Interlocutory Judgment—Judge at the Trial—Review by.]—The Judge at the trial cannot review an interlocutory judgment of the Superior Court, for, although it may be this Court that sits at the trial and becomes seised of the merits when the trial is over, and it is only in deciding on the merits that it can review the interlocutory judgment. Whilst the case has not reached the stage when it is under consideration by the Judge, he is not in a position to judge of the merits even, and he plainly cannot modify an interlocutory judgment on a question of law. Galindez v. The King, Q. R. 26 S. C. 171.

Interpretation—Reasons for Judgment,—
If the reasons for a judgment shew that there is a mistake, ambiguity, or obscurity in the adjudication, they may be taken into consideration in order to shew the meaning.
Adam v. Gagné, Q. R. 22 S. C. 367.

Life of Judgment-Statute of Limitations—Payment—Sale under Execution—Purchase by Execution Creditor—Crediting Price -Ex parte Order for Execution - New Right.]-At a sale of land under execution, the lands sold were bid in by the judgment creditor, and the amount of the bid credited on the execution by the sheriff on account of the judgment debt:—Held, that this was not a payment by or on behalf of the debtor to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations:-Held, further, that an order for the issue of a writ of execution, made by a Judge ex parte, during the currency of the period of twenty years from the recovery of the judgment, the judgment debtor having died out of the province intestate, and no administrators having been appointed, conferred no new right upon the defendant sufficient to keep the judgment alive, and unbarred by the statute:-Held, that to obtain a new right against anyone, by reason of such an order, the defendant must have given notice, which he could have done, either by applying as a creditor to have administrators appointed, or by notifying the heirs. Proof of-County Court - Entries by Clerk in Book-Irregularity.]-To prove a County Court judgment the plaintiff produced the procedure book of the County Court shewing the entries therein of the different proceedings in the action in which such judgment was alleged to have been recovered, and also filed a copy of such entries, certified as a true copy by the clerk of the Court, pursuant to s. 46 of the Courty Courts Act. Amongst the entries so proved was one of judgment by default against M., which entry itself, by by denuit against al., which early reseri, yes, so the Act, constituted the judgment of the County Court:—Held, that, as the entry of the judgment in the procedure book constituted the judgment, and as the Court itself was a Court of record, the entry of the judgment became a record of a Court of record. If so, its production, or the statutory proof of it by a certified copy, proved the jurisdiction of the Court over the matters in respect of which the judgment was recovered, and the recovery, existence, and validity of such judgment. It was argued that the procedure book shewed on its face that the judgment was invalid, as it did not shew the note required by s. 105 to be made in such book :-Held, that the making of such note was only Held, that the infamily of such hote days a ministerial act to be performed by the clerk; it was not a part of the judgment itself; the validity of the judgment did not depend on such note being made. The failure to make it would seem to be merely an irregularity. Dixon v. Mackay, 22 Occ. N.

Reference by Consent to Experts— Misunderstanding of counsel as to purpose of reference—Opening up judgment. Beaudry v. Gallien, I O. W. R. 793.

Service of—Opposition—Interruption of Bight.]—The service of judgment required by Art, 1166, C. P., as a means of interrupting the defendant's right to file an opposition thereto, must be that of a duly stamped and certified copy of said judgment. Migneron V. Fon, 4 Q. P. R. 185.

Set-off of Judgment Purchased by Defendants—Equitable right — Discretion— Attachment of debts. Bleasdell v. Boiston, 4 O. W. K. 155, 239.

Collection Act, N. S.—Examination—Power of Examiner to Direct Assignment—Discretion—Surface or Directory,—Section 28 of the Collection Act, R. S. N. S. c. 182, provides that upon the examination of a debtor the examiner may verbally require that the debtor shall execute an assignment of all his real and personal property, not exempt from levy or execution, to the creditor in trust for the payment due on the judgment. The examiner in the present case ordered the assignment, holding that he had no discretion in the matter:—Held, on appeal, that the examiner had a discretion, and that the statute was not mandatory as to directing an assignment. McMillan v. Watton, 21 Occ. N. 446.

bility, paid money into Court. The plaintiff took it out of Court and entered judgment under Order XXII.. R. 7. Upon an examination of the defendant before a commissioner under the Collection Act, the plaintiff made application to have the defendant committed to gaol under s. 27 (f) of the Act, The commissioner refused the application, on the ground that the evidence that the tort was wilful and malicious was not receivable, as there had not been an adjudication of a tort by the Court:—Held, that the commissioner was in error in assuming that it was necessary to have a formal adjudication by the magistrate that a tort had been actually committed. The expression in this sub-section—"cases of tort"—does not mean cases where a judgment has been given expressly finding a tort, but is merely intended to deal with all actions of tort in the same manner as preceding sections cover actions upon contracts. Etter v. Graden, 21 Occ. N. 484.

Committal—Conditional Order—Service
—Arrest—Terms of Discharge—County Court Practice—Registrar's Minute.]—An order to commit a judgment debtor under s. 193 of the County Courts Act must be absolute, not conditional. Where an order to commit a party is made in his absence, he must be served with a copy of the order before arrest.
Orders to commit should be drawn up and should contain the terms on which discharge out of custody may be obtained, as required by Order XIX., r. 13. Where a registrar is present and takes a minute of an order, the minute so taken is convisive, even though the Judge's recollection of the order is different. Walcace v. Ward, 9 B. C. R. 450.

Examination—Assignment for Creditors—Examination under Assignments Act.]—The fact that the judgment debtor had, before judgment, made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, and had been examined as an insolvent assignment under the provisions of s; 34 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 147, does not deprive a judgment creditor, after obtaining his judgment, of the right to examine the debtor under Rule 900. Bank of Hamilton v. Scott, 24 Occ. N. 268, 3 O. W. R. 716, 717.

Examination—Default—Motion to Set aside Summons.1 — The examination of a debtor, after judgment, can only take place in the cases mentioned in Art. 590, C. P. 2. A debtor who has made default to appear upon a summons wrongly issued, may nevertheless demand, by motion. the setting aside of the summons. Alden Knitting Mills v. Hershfeld, 5 Q. P. R. 390.

Examination—Default of attendance on adjourned appointment—Costs. Moran v. McMillan, 2 O. W. R. 410.

Examination — Insufficient answers — Further examination. Ivey v. Moffat, 1 O. W. R. 519.

Examination—Judgment summons—Issue of second while first pending—Necessity for special motion. Brownlee v. Eads (Y. T.), 2 W. L. R. 123, 216.

Examination—Making away with property—Committal. Hunt v. Robins, 1 O. W. R. So.

Examination—Opposition Pending.]—A judgment debtor cannot be called upon for examination as such while an opposition to the seizure made under the judgment against him is pending. Duplessis v. Quinn, 6 Q. P. R. 999.

Examination—Unsatisfactory answers— Disposition of property—Pending actions. Gault v. Pentecost, 2 O. W. R. 636.

Examination—Unsatisfactory answers—Preference—Committal, Hepburn v. Vanharne, 1 O. W. R. 506.

Examination of—Committal—Incurring Debt by Fraud—Appeal.]—The defendant received from the plaintiff several sums of money, part of which were to be invested and part expended on the plaintiff farm. The defendant placed these moneys to his wife's credit, made no investments, kept no accounts, and could not account at all for a large portion, although he said it had been expended on the farm. Before the plaintiff got judgment, and while the action was pending, the defendant allowed his wife and sister-in-law to get judgments against him:—Held, by the full Court, reversing the order of Drake, J. that the defendant had not incurred the debt by fraud or false pretences within the meaning of s. 15 of the Arrest and Imprisonment for Debt Act. An appeal lies direct from an order committing a debtor to gaol, and no preliminary motion to the Judge for discharge is necessary. Bullock v. Collins, 21 Occ. N. 191, 8 B. C. Bullock v. Collins, 21 Occ. N. 191, 8 B. C. R. 23.

Examination of -Order for-Refusal to Obey-Contempt of Court - Attachment for—Privilege—Judge of Supreme Court.]— The proceedings for the oral examination of a judgment debtor under s. 36 of 59 V. c. 28, should be by summons and order; and not by an ex parte order in the first instance. A Judge of the Supreme Court has no privilege against an attachment for any contempt which is of a criminal and not of a civil kind. The process of attachment which may be issued under the provisions of s. 36 of 59 V. c. 28, against a judgment debtor for contempt of an order calling upon him to appear and be examined orally as to any and what property he has, which by law is liable to be taken in execution, is punitive or criminal in its nature; therefore, a Judge of the Su-preme Court cannot protect himself by his privilege against an attachment issued against him for refusing to obey such an order. re Burkhardt v. Van Wart-Ex p. Van Wart, 35 N. B. Reps. 78.

Examination of Transferee—Evidence of transfer. Holme v. McGillivray, 2 O. W. R. 519.

Examination of Transferee — Third Mortgage — "Exigible under Execution."]—A third mortgage upon real estate made by a judgment debtor is not a transfer of property "exigible under execution," within the meaning of Rule 903, and the third mortgage is not, therefore, liable to be examined as a person to whom such a transfer has been made. The words quoted refer to legal execution and do not include equitable execution or the appointment of a receiver. Canadian Mining and Investment Co. v. Wheeler, 22 Occ. N. 123, 3 O. L. R. 210, 1 O. W. R. 103.

Fraudulent Disposition of Property —Order for Committal—Refusal to Execute Assignment—Term of Imprisonment—Collection Act.] — A judgment was recovered against the defendant for debt, the amount of which at the time of the proceedings to be referred to was $50.32, and was unsatisfied. The defendant entered into a recognizance for $45, and justified on oath as being worth, in personal property, consisting of household furniture, $45, over and above all his debts, including the judgment mentioned and another, which were specifically brought to his notice. An execution was issued, and the sheriff, five days later, demanded the property, but the defendant replied that he had sold it for $60, which he gave to his wife to buy household supplies. The defendant, being examined under the Collection Act, shewed that he had conveyed away other property to relatives, etc. The examiner made an order under the Collection Act, s. 27 (e), committing the defendant to gaol for two months for a fraudulent disposition of his property, or until he should pay $61.42, the amount due on the judgment:—Held, that the examiner was fully justified in making the order for imprisonment. where the debtor refuses to execute the assignment mentioned in s. 28 of the Collection Act, and the Judge or examiner determines to commit him under s, 27 of the Act, the warrant or order of committal cannot then direct an assignment to be executed, but such refusal of the debtor to execute it can be taken into consideration by the officer or Judge only in fixing the term of imprisonment. Henniger v. Brine, 24 Occ. N. 143.

Garnishee—Order for payment—Examination of debtor of garnishee—Rules 835, 903, 904. Roaf v. Ditzel, 6 O. W. R. 931.

Motion to Commit — Imperial Debtors Act in force in N. W. T.—Non-payment of judgment—Examination of debtor—Refusal to disclose property, Iverson v. Energht (N.W.T.), 2 W. L. R. 20.

Order for Committal — Appeal from—Questions of Fact — Affidacit — Oral Evidence.]—The Court will not set aside an order committing a judgment debtor to prison on the ground of his bropperty whereby the judgment creditor is materially prejudiced in obtaining satisfaction of his judgment, unless it appears that the Judge making the order has taken some manifestly mistaken view of the law or the facts. As such Judge has had the opportunity of hearing the witnesses give their testimony viva voce, and of observing their demeanour, his decision on questions of fact must be taken to have the same weight as the verdict of a jury. On an application for a rule nisi to rescind a Judge's order imprisoning a judgment debtor, the applicant cannot shew by affidavit what took place before the Judge to whom the application was made; the stenographer's return of the evidence must be produced. Exp. Desprex, 10 to O'Leary v. Desprex, 36 N. B. Reps. 13.

JUDICIAL SALE OF LAND.

Effect of—Extinction of Title—Action to Remove Cloud on Title.]—After the sale under a decree of an immovable of which he was the owner, the debtor has no longer any interest in the property, and therefore has no right of action to have removed from the property a hypothec which he alleges has been illegally registered. Kauntz v. Léveillé, Q. R. 24 S. C. 537.

Party having Conduct Purchasing—levalidity — Objection — Person Interested in Proceeds.]—In the absence of any order of direction, the plaintiff and not the clerk of the Court is to be considered to have the conduct of a judicial sale. Where the plaintiff, who had conduct of such a sale, purchased the land without leave, confirmation was refused. Such a sale is void, not merely voidable, and it is unnecessary for the person opposing to shew that the purchaser has perpetrated fraud, or acquired the property at less thau its value, or obtained undue advantage, or that the lands should have realized sufficient to give him an interest in the proceeds. Any person having any interest in the proceeds of a sale, whether a party or not, has a right to object to confirmation. Priden v. Squarebriggs, 2 Terr. L. R. 200.

Collection of Fine and Costs — Presumption of Proper Disposition—Duty, where Convection Quashed.] — Held, in an action against a Justice of the peace to recover the sum of $15 paid to him as fine and costs, upon a conviction under a Territorial Ordinance, which was afterwards quashed, that it must be presumed, in the absence of evidence, that the moneys were properly applied, i.e., the fine transmitted to the Attorney-General, and the costs paid over to the complainant, for whom they were received by the justice as agent. There is no duty imposed on the justice in such case to obtain a refund. The justice's personal fees when retained by him are in effect paid to him by the complainant, against whom he had the right to retain them. Kauditzki v. Telford, 5 Terr, L. R. 488.

Conviction — Certiorari—Costa of Conveying to Gaol.] — The Superior Court has jurisdiction to take cognizance, upon certiorari, of every decision rendered by a justice of the peace, even in criminal matters. 2. A recorder has no right, in imposing a fine and the costs of a prosecution, and imprisonment in case of non-payment, to require as a condition precedent to the liberation of the defendant, the payment of the costs of prosecution and conveying to gaol; and a conviction containing that provision will be quashed upon certiorari. Conviction - Certiorari - Selling Unwholesome Meat-Public Health Act-Criminal Code,]—A charge was laid against the defendant of exposing and offering for sale on a public market meat unfit for food for The charge was so worded as to leave han. The charge was so worded as to leave it doubtful whether it was intended for one under s. 122 of the Public Health Act or un-der s. 194 of the Criminal Code. The magis-trates treated the charge at first as one of an offence against the Code, and, the defendant electing against a summary trial, took evidence, and adjourned for a week. They then announced that a case had been made out under the provisions of the Public Health Act, but not such as to warrant sending for trial under the Code, and adjourned for some days to enable the accused to put in a defence under the new conditions, if he so desired. The defendant objected to the case being proceeded with under the Public Health Act, and offered no defence, and the magistrates then convicted him:-Held, that the conviction must be quashed. It is not competent for magistrates, where the informa-tion charges an offence which they have no jurisdiction to try summarily, to convert the charge into one which they have jurisdiction to try summarily, and to so try it, on the original information. Convictions — Separate Offences—Disposition of Both Cases after Hearing Ecidence in Both.]—Two informations were preferred before a justice of the pence against the accused for distinct offences of selling liquor to Indians. At the conclusion of the first case, the magistrate reserved his decision, and proceeded with the second case, in which he convicted, and then dismissed the first. On an application to quash the conviction, the magistrate stated on affiniavit that in convicting he was governed only by the evidence in the case in which the conviction was made:—Held, that the postponement by the magistrate of his decision in the first case until he had concluded the second, did not, under the circumstances, reader the conviction in the second case bad in law. Jurisdiction — Conviction for Trespass -Warrant of Commitment — Necessity for two Justices-Habeas Corpus - Certiorari.] -The prosecutor charged the petitioner before a justice of the peace with having cut wood upon his property. The petitioner took no notice of the summons served upon him, and the justice convicted him and ordered him to pay a fine of $5 and costs and upon default to be imprisoned for 15 days at hard labour. A warrant of commitment was issued by the justice under s. 783 of the Criminal Code, and the petitioner was imprisoned. He obtained a habeas corpus and certiorari in aid, alleging that a single justice of the peace cannot issue a warrant of imprisonment, and that the conviction was illegal :-Held, that a single justice has no jurisdiction to issue a commitment under s. 783. 2. When it appears on the face of the conviction that the justice has exceeded his jurisdiction a certiorari in aid is not necessary. 3. In such a case the writ of habeas corpus was maintained and the conviction and commitment were quashed. Coté v. Durand, Q. R. 25 S. C. 33.

Jurisdiction-Conviction not Conformable to Municipal By-law-Payment of Fine -Acquiescence.]-A by-law of the town of Levis enacted that all umbrella-menders, whether residing in the town of Levis or not, but carrying ont that trade or business there, before carrying on such trade or business should take out a license, and that on failure to do so they should be liable to a fine of $50 or to imprisonment for one month. The applicant was convicted and ordered to pay a fine and in default of immediate payment to be imprisoned for 15 days, because he "was arrested by Constable Odillon Houde at sight within the limits of the town of Levis, whilst, in contravention of the town by-law, soliciting orders as an umbrella-mender without having taken out the license required by the said by-law and the law." The applicant thereupon paid the fine:—Held, that the conviction was not conformable to the by-law. which did not require that those who solicited orders as umbrella-menders should take out licenses; that the conviction was therefor entirely beyond the jurisdiction of the justice of the peace. (2) The applicant must be presumed to have paid his fine to obtain his liberty, and such payment did not therefore constitute acquiescence. Robitaille, Q. R. 25 S. C. 444. Cardoni V.

Jurisdiction—Hearing in Absence of Accused—Appearance for Sentence—Right to Addace Evidence,1—A justice of the peace has no right, after having heard the case has been considered to the second of the accused, and issued a new warrant, to compel the accused to appear before him to receive sentence, to overest the accused from adducing evidence when he appears in answer to that warrant. Accepte V. Asselin, 6 Q. P. R. 64.

Jurisdiction—Information—Date of Oftence—Liquor License Act—Prohibition.]—

An information was laid at Halifax on the 25th April, 1904, by the chief inspector of licenses for the municipality of Halifax county, who resided 35 miles from the city of Halifax, before the stipendiary magis-trate for the county of Halifax, against the defendant, charging him "for that he within the space of six months last past previous to this information at ... unlawfully,
(a) did sell, ... and (b) did keep for sale ... intoxicating liquor contrary to the provisions of the Liquor License Act." The only evidence offered by the prosecution was that of the chief constable for the county of Halifax, who swore that in company with the inspector on the 23rd April. 1904, he visited the defendant's house within the county of Halifax, and found a gallon of liquor in his bedroom, but there was no bar or other appliances generally found in a place where liquor is sold, and that he had on former occasions served the accused with papers under the Liquor License Act. The defendant gave no evidence nor called any witnesses, but asked for a dismissal of the complaint on several grounds. The justice adjourned to consider the application of the defendant who in the meantime applied ex parte for a writ of prohibition under Crown Rule 72:—Held, following Rex v. Boutiller, 24 Occ. N. 240, that, as it did not appear by the information that it was laid within six months after the commission of the offence, or that the defendant had committed the offence within six months previous to its being laid, and as the evidence given on the trial in the presence of the de-fendant did not amount to a charge for violation of the law so as to dispense with the formality of an information, the magistrate was acting without jurisdiction, and should be prohibited from further pro-ceeding in the matter. Justice's Civil Court—Jurisdiction—
Omission to Give Security for Costs—Foreign Corporation—Goods sold and Delivered.]
—The plaintiffs, who were a company incorporated abroad, but having a place of business in the province, brought an action against the defendant in a justice's court for goods sold and delivered. To prove their case they put in evidence a paper in the form of a promissory note, whereby the defendant promised to pay the plaintiffs a sum certain with interest. There were certain conditions as to the possession of the goods and the title thereto incorporated in the note or paper.
Security for costs was not demanded at the trial, and none was given:—Held, that indebitatus assumpsit would lie, and that the omission to give security for costs did not deprive the magistrate of jurisdiction to try the case. Per Tuck, C.J., that 49 V. c. 53,
s. 1, does not apply to companies incorporated abroad, but having a place of business within the province. Per Barker, "., that the defendant by not demanding the security. 2: the trial waived the benefit of 49 V. c. 53. Massey-Harris Co. v. Stars, 34 N. B. Reps. 591.

Ministerial Duties—One Justice Sufficient.)—In cases tried under the Summary Act, purely ministerial duties, such as receiving complaint, issuing warrant, etc., may be done by one justice of the peace, even where the statute under which the proceedings are had, says that the case can only be tried by two justices of the peace. Bousquet v. Gagnon. Q. R. 23 S. C. 35.

Offence Committed in a Harbour-Jurisdiction-Adjacent County.]-Upon the shores of the high sea it is only land not cover d by the sea which forms part of the adjacent counties, and, therefore, the jurisdiction of the Courts of these counties does not extend beyond the line of low tide. 2. Bays, gulfs, mouths of rivers, harbours, ports, roadsteads, or waters situated between the necks of land, where one can see from one bank to the other, form part of neighbouring or adjacent counties, and consequently offence committed upon such waters is within the territorial jurisdiction, and not the Admiralty. 3. The port of Percé, in which an offence was committed, is part of the adja-cent county of Gaspé, having regard to the facts (a) that it is an inland water almost entirely surrounded by land, and lying be-tween necks of land, and (b) that the statute, in making the river the border of this county and including in it the nearest islands, includes also the waters of the ports and the roadsteads which lie between these islands and the mainland because they are between necks of land. 4. Consequently, a magistrate of the district of the county of Gaspé has jurisdiction over an offence or a tort or a quasi-tort committed at this place: and a writ of prohibition against the enforcement of a decision of such a magistrate will not be maintained. Duguay v. North American Transportation Co., Q. R. 22 S. C. 517.

Penalty—Excessive Fee—Information for Indictable Offence—Pleading—Amendment, —An information having been laid by the plaintiffs before the defendant, a justice of the peace, for an indictable offence under ss. 210 (2) and 215 of the Criminal Code, over which the defendant had no summary jurisdiction as a justice :- Held, that he was not entitled to any fee whatever, and that the plaintiffs, while they were entitled to recover by action the amount of the fee which they paid, could not maintain an action under s. 3 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 95, or under s. 902, s.-s. 6, of the Criminal Code, to recover a penalty from the defendant for receiving a penalty from the defendant for receiving a larger amount of fees as a justice of the peace than he was entitled to. Bowman v. Blyth, T. E. & B. 26, applied and followed. It was alleged by the statement of claim that the defendant wrongfully, illegally, and maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, demanded from the plaintiffs the sum of, etc., contrary to the Ontario Act. At the trial the plaintiffs were allowed to amend by substituting "wilfully" for "maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause, and by making an alternative claim under s. 902, s.-s. 6, of the Criminal Code:-Held, that the amendments were properly made. McGillivray v. Muir, 23 Occ. N. 282, 6 O. L. R. 154, 2 O. W. R. 663.

Powers of — Master and Servant — Complaint for Non-payment of Wages — Damages for Disobedience of Orders—Set-off,—B., a servant, under the provisions of s. 3 of Consolidated Ordinances c. 50, the Masters and Servants' Ordinance, lodged with a justice of the peace a complaint against C., his master, for non-payment of wages, and on the hearing, besides that bearing on the question of wages, some evidence was introduced tending to shew that, by reason of B.s neglect to obey C,'s directions in regard to some oats. the oats became entirely lost and destroyed, and, notwithstanding the objection of B's counsel, the justice expressed his determination to allow the claim for damages as a setoff to the wages :- Held, that the justice exceeded the power conferred on justices by the Ordinance in holding that, upon hearing of an information laid under s. 3, damages claimed for any of the causes set out in s. 2 can be adjudicated upon, and if found set off against wages proved under s. 3. In re Brown and Craft, 21 Occ. N. 103.

Preliminary Inquiry-Continuation before Another Magistrate-Jurisdiction-Commencement de Novo.]-A preliminary inquiry in a criminal matter commenced before a magistrate cannot be continued by another. 2. But if a magistrate who has commenced a preliminary inquiry, dies or is deposed from office or resigns, or if he discharges himself from the matter, another competent magis-trate may take the matter in hand, but as must begin the inquiry de novo; he may not continue the proceedings already commenced 3. A Judge of sessions of the peace who commenced a preliminary inquiry, having obtained leave of absence, and having, without finishing the inquiry, departed for a journey to Europe, was held to have discharged himself from the matter; and in this case, with the consent of the Crown, the prosecutor properly obtained from another magistrate, who replaced the former, an order to commence de novo the preliminary inquiry. of certiorari to prevent the second magistrate from seising himself of the matter and re-commencing it was refused. Bertrand v. Angers, Q. R. 21 S. C. 213.

Proceedings as to Maintenance of Pauper Jurisdiction Notice of Discontinuance of Previous Proceedings-Interest of Justice in Prosecution-Certiorari-Appeal.]-Proceedings were taken by the plaintiffs before a justice of the peace with a view to having a pauper made chargeable to poor district No. 5 in the county of Pictou. Subsequently, and without notice to district No. 5, proceedings against that district were discontinued, and proceedings were commenced before another justice with a view to having the pauper made chargeable to the defendants' district. On the depositions taken before the magistrate applied to in the second instance, the stipendiary magistrate for the county (who was also county treasurer) took further depositions, and made an adjudication that the pauper was legally chargeable to the defendants' district :- Held, that the adjudication so made was bad, both because of the failure to give notice of discontinuance of the original proceedings, and because the stipendiary magistrate, as county treasurer, was a party to the proceedings and should not have acted. Held, that the order made under the circumstances mentioned was open to attack either by certiorari or by appeal. Picton Overseers of the Poor for District No. 7 v. Summary Corviction Quashed—detion to Recover Fine and Costs.]—In an action for the recovery from the defendant, a justice of the peace, of the fine and costs paid to the defendant by the plaintiff upon a summary conviction made by the defendant under an Ordinance of the North-West Territories, which conviction had been quashed, it was held that the action did not lie against the magistrate, since, under s. 11 of the Ordinance respecting justices of the peace. Con. Ord. (1898) c, 32, he was bound to transmit the fine to the Attorney-General forthwith upon its receipt by him, and, in the absence of evidence that he had not remitted, must be presumed to have done so, and the costs were, by the conviction, directed to be paid to the complainant, whose agent to receive them the plaintiff must have known the defendant to be. S. O. 1897 c. 271, an Act for the Protection of Sheep and to impose a tax on dogs, finding that the defendant, at the town of Waterloo, did unlawfully have in his nose. of Waterloo, did unlawfully have in his possession two dogs, which dogs worried and injured two sheep, the property of the com-plainant, at the township of Wellesley, and ordering the defendant to kill the dogs: Held, that the offence under s. 11 was the having in possession a dog which, wherever the act was done, had worried, injured, or destroyed sheep, and therefore the offence was committed at the town of Waterloo, where the defendant lived, and a magistrate for the county had no jurisdiction, there being a police magistrate for the town, and it not appearing that the convicting magistrate was acting for or at the request of such police magistrate. Upon the same information the same magistrate also made an order, under 8. 15 of the Act, for payment by the defendant to the complainant of $10 (said to be the value of the sheep) and costs:—Held, that a proceeding under s. 15 is independent of one under ss. 11-13, and the magistrate had no power to award damages for the injury to the sheep, without a separate complaint. The first order was quashed without costs, because the question of the magistrate's jurisdiction was not raised before him, and the assuming jurisdiction was his mistake. The second order was quashed with costs to be paid by the complainant, because he insisted on going on with the claim for damages before the magistrate. Rew v. Duering, 21 Occ. N. 588, 2 O. L. LAND TITLES ACT.

Claim on Assurance Fund—Transfer—Fraud—Forgery—Bond Fide Purchaser for Value without Notice.]—The plaintiff, being the owner of land registered under the Land Titles Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 138, was, by the fraud of two persons, G. and H., induced to transfer her land to one D. Subsequently a transfer to McD., purporting to be signed by D., was registered, but D's signature was forged. McD. then transferred to O'M., and O'M. to B., both being parties to the fraud-with G. and H. B. transferred to C., an innocent purchaser for value without notice. All the transfers were duly registered. None of the parties to the fraud being financially responsible, an action was brought for compensation for the loss of the land out of the assurance fund, under ss. 130 and 132 of the Act: — Held, that the plaintiff was not "wrongfully deprived" under s. 132 and that she could not recover. Fackes v. Attorney-General for Onterio, 23 Occ. N. 328, 6 O. L. R. 490, 2 O. W. R. 149.

Execution—Renewal—Refling—Notice to Execution Creditor — Confirmation of Tax Sale—Statute—Retroactivity.] — The Land Titles Act, 1884, s. 92, s.-s. 1, is nuended by 63 & 64 V. c. 21, s. 2 (assented to 7th July, 1900), by the addition of a proviso "that every writ shall cease to bind or affect land at the expiration of two years from the date of the receipt thereof by the registrar, unless before the expiration of such period of two years a rerewal of such writ is filed with the registrar in the same manner as the original is required to be filed with him." This proviso is not retroactive so as to apply to a writ of execution which would have expired but was renewed before the 7th July, 1900; such a writ, therefore, remains in full force though a renewal thereof has not been filed with the registrar either before or after that date. The execution creditor in such a writ should consequently be notified of an application for the confirmation of a tax sale of land of the execution debtor. Re Town of Prince Albert, 4 Terr. L. R. 510.

Executions against Lands—Research
Expiry—Memorandum on Certificate of Title
—Sheriff—Judge's Order—Seizure—Statute—Amendments.]—The Land Titles Act, 1894, s.
92, provides for the delivery by the sheriff of a copy of a writ of execution against lands to the registrar, until the receipt by whom to land shall be bound by the writ. It also movides that "no certificate of title shall be granted except subject to the rights of the execution creditors under the writ while the same is legally in force." and also that the registrar granting a certificate of title shall by memorandum hereon express that it is subject to such rights. This section was amended by 63 & 64 V. c. 21, s. 52 (which came into effect on being assented to the 7th July, 1900), by adding a proviso to the effect that every writ shall cease to bind or affect land at the expiration of such period of two years a renewal of such writ is filed with the registrar in the same manner as the original is required to be filed with him:—Held, that this proviso applies only to writs of execution filed with the registrar after the passing of the amending Act, and, therefore, among other consequences, a writ of execution filed with the registrar before the passing of the amending Act, and regularly renewed, does not require to be re-filed with the registrar of a certificate by the sheriff or a Judge's order shewing the expiration or satisfaction or with drawal of the writ, the registrar shall make a memora adum on the certificate of title to that effect. 63 & 64 V. c. 21, s. 3, substituted for the above section a provision that upon the satisfaction or withdrawal from his hands

of any writ the sheriff should transmit a certificate to that effect to the registrar, and that the registrar on its receipt or on receipt of a Judge's order shewing the expiration, satisfaction, or withdrawal of the writ, should make a memorandum on the certificate of title to that effect:—Held, that now a sheriff cannot give a certificate of the expiry of a writ of execution; that unless the provise added to s. 92 applies, and the writ appears by force of that provise to have expired, the registrar can make a memorandum of its expiry only upon a Judge's order. If the sheriff has begun to execute a writ, e.g., by seizure, it does not require a renewal. The delivery by a sheriff to the registrar of a copy-writ pursuant to s. 92 is not a seizure or other inception of execution which will prevent the expiry of the writ. In re Blanchard Estate, 5 Terr. L. R. 240.

Claim to Goods — Notice to Landlord — Service—Proof.]—A bailiff is not empowered to serve upon a landlord the notice required by law to be given him by the owner of chatteis in order to deprive the landlord of his right to a lien upon goods on the premises demised; and the bailiff's certificate alone is not sufficient evidence of the notice required by law in such cases. Duperreault v. Pauzé, Q. R. 25 S. C. 401.

Default to Sell — Suspension of Action for Rent.] — Where a distress for rent has been made, and the goods distrained remain unsold in the landlord's hands, his right of action for rent is suspended. Lehain v. Philpot, L. R. 10 Ex. 242, followed. Smith v. Haight, 4 Tert. L. R. 387.

Excessive Distress — 1rregularities — Waiver—Sale for full value—Account of proceeds. Piché v. Montgomery, 1 O. W. R. 325.

Goods of Tenant — Refusal to Deliver up.]—The plaintiff had rented an office from the defendants until the 1st May. On the 15th March he notified the defendants that he abandoned the office from that day, and engaged to pay $55, the amount due up to that day, on the 2nd April. At the end of March the plaintiff claimed his goods left in the office, which the defendants refused to give up.—Held, that the defendants had the right to retain the goods of the plaintiff until payment of the $35. This principle was a result of the right to follow which expressly belongs to a landlord. The goods are his pledge, and be cannot be forced to part with them until the sum for payment of which they are security has been paid. McAvoy v. Merchants Bank of Halifax, 3 Q. P. R. 400.

Goods of Third Person—Claim—Notice —Opposition.]—The landlord's lien for his rent upon the goods which are on the demised premises extends to those which belong to a third person, and an opposition made by such third person to a seizure for rent which is based solely upon his right of property, and not upon a notice given to the landlord before seizure, will be dismissed as frivolous and ill-founded. Quebec Bank v. Tozer, 4
Q.P. R. 131.

Goods of Third Person—Claim—Notice to Landlord—Description of Goods—Intervention—Costs.]—A third party, the owner of goods in Costs.]—A third party, the owner of goods in the provisions of art. 1622. C. as modified by 61 V. c. 45 (4). should give a notice to the landlord describing the goods of which he is the owner, and it is a stufficient for him to notify the landlord distribution of the tenant. 2. An intervention itself in goods which are found in the possession of the tenant. 2. An intervention itself in the control of t the costs incurred by the latter, and should have tendered them with his intervention, and, in the absence of such tender, he should be condemned in the costs of the contestation of his intervention. Mathieu v. Clifford, Q. R. 19 S. C. 410.

Goods of Third Party — Exemptions — Claim by Third Party.]—A landlord has no right to seize the chattels of a third person found on the demised premises, which are exempt from seizure, or those which should be left to the debtor at his election; and, as the law does not make any distinction of persons, this choice may be exercised as well by the third party interested as owner of such chattels, as by the debtor himself. Battison v. Potvin, Q. R. 27 S. C. 165.

Illegal Distress - Abandonment-Agreement to Suspend Right — Violation — Trespass.]—Under a distress for rent issued on pass.]the 12th March the defendant took possession of the plaintiff's store and evicted him. On the 13th March, discovering that the distress was illegal, he induced the plaintiff to go to the store with his attorney and the bailiff who made the distress, where they informed him that the distress was illegal, and a new one would have to be made, and they then handed him the key of the store and an inventory of the goods distrained, and tendered him $17 as damages for the eviction. The bailiff immediately informed him that he had a new demand, and received back the key and they left the store. In an action for illegal distress, it was not left to the jury to say whether there had been an abandonment of the distress under the first warrant, but they found, in answer to a question, that the bailiff at no time prior to the service of the second warrant gave up the possession and control of the goods under the first:—Held, that it should have been specifically left to the jury to say whether what took place, and what was done on the discovery of the mistake was done on the discovery of the mistake made on executing the warrant, and making the distress after sunset, was done with the intention of abandoning the distress. Per McLeod, J., that the evidence and the answers of the jury to the questions submitted shewed that the defendant at the time the second warrant was issued had the goods in his possession by virtue of an illegal warrant, and the trespass continued as if no second warrant had issued. Where an agreement was made between the plaintiff and the de-fendant that if the plaintiff would pay the rent on the 1st April and give up the premises so that the defendant could have the month for making repairs for a new tenant coming in on the 1st May, he, the plaintiff, would not distrain for the rent until after default on the 1st April:—Held, that the agreement would have the effect of suspending the right to distrain, and, if the defendant in violation of it distrained, he would render himself a trespasser. Mooers v. Manzer, 36 N. B. Reps.

Illegal Distress — Seizure of growing crops—Chattel mortgage. Meighen v. Armstrong (Man.), 2 W. L. R. 578.

Judgment for Costs—Priority.]—On a landlord's distress upon the goods of a tenant the costs of an action brought by the tenant, which has been dismissed, are costs "de justice," and ought to be ranked as such par

Lodger's Goods—Action for Damages—Pleading—Cause of Action.]—In an action for damages for the alleged wrongful distress of a piano, the property of the plaintiff, the statement of claim set out that the plaintiff was a lodger: that her property was seized and illegally removed, for which she claimed compensation under the provisions of R. S. N. S., c. 172. s. 15; that the property seized and removed was only returned under order of the Judge of a County Court:—Held, per Townshend, J., that, as the whole of s. 15 was necessarily made a part of the statement of claim, its provisions, read in connection with the other facts alleged, disclosed a good cause of action. Per Meagher, J., that, as the cause had been fully tried out, and no hardship could result, the cause should be treated as if the pleadings were correct, although there were defects on both sides. Per Ritchie, J., that the statement of claim disclosed no cause of action, and that the appeal should therefore be allowed and the action dismissed, although it appeared that the defendant had no defence to the cause of action proved at the trial, but not disclosed by the statement of claim. Gray v. Harris, 35 N. S. Reps. 519.

Removal of Goods—Following—Replection—Owner—Depositary.]—The privilege of the landlord ceases after the lapse of 8 days from the removal of goods from the demised premises, and that is so even where the tenant, not being the owner of such goods, has pledged them to the landlord; and the true owner may repley them from the landlord. 2. In this case a merchant with whom the goods had been deposited was to be considered as a depositary of the goods, and could claim from the owner the value of such deposit. Emmans v. Savage, Q. R. 24 S. C. 104.

Second Distress — Appraisement — Appraisers not Sucora, 1—After a distress for a month's rent, it is not illegal to make another distress for the next month's rent, although it was due and in arrear at the time of the first distress. Under 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 19, the want of the sworn appraisement required by 2 W. & M., sess. 1, c. 5, is only an irregularity, and the tenant can only recover such special damage as he can shew to have resulted from it. Lucas v. Tarleton, 3 H. & N. 116, and Rodgers v. Parker, 18 C. B. 112, followed. McDonald v. Fraser, 24 Occ. N. 101, 14 Mnn. L. R. 582.

II. INJURY TO TENANT.

Defects in Premises — Apparent Defects.]—A landlord is not responsible to his tenant for damages for injuries sustained on account of defects in the demised premises which were apparent and existed at the time of the execution of the lease. Cartier v. Durocher, Q. N. 22 S. C. 255.

Defects in Demised Premises — Liability.]—Where the tenant suffers personal injuries resulting from the giving way of a portion of the structure leased, the fault is not contractual but delictual, and the lessor is responsible therefor without having been put in default, even where the defect was not apparent, and was unknown to either proprietor or tenant. Vineberg v. Foster, Q. R. 24 S. C. 258, Demise of Part of Building - Defective Condition of Other Part. J-The plaintiff was tenant of a store on the ground floor of a building owned by the defendant, and sued for damages to her goods caused by rain water entering an unglazed fanlight over a door at the end of a hall extending from the head of a stairway leading to the second floor of the building. The water, flowing over the floor above the plaintiff's store, came through the ceiling, and caused plaster to fall which damaged the plaintiff's goods. The defect com-plained of existed at the time of the demise planned of existed at the time of the demise to the plaintiff:—Held, following Humphrey v. Wait, 22 C. P. 580, Colebeck v. Girdlers' Co., 1 Q. B. D. 234, and Carstairs v. Taylor, L. R. 6 Ex. 217, that the defendant was not liable. Miller v. Hancock, [1893] 2 Q. B. 177, distinguished. A tenant taking part of a building, in other parts of which are defects likely to result in damage to him, should examine the premises and contract for the removal of such defects as are apparent, othermoval of such defects as are apparent, one-wise he will have no remedy afterwards against the landlord for damages caused by such defects. Rogers v. Sorell, 23 Occ. N. 247, 14 Man. L. L. 450.

Discarbance of Enjoyment—Escape of Water from Adjoining Premises.]— A land-lord is liable to his tenant for injuries done to the tenant's goods arising from the fact of thieves having entered an adjoining dwellinghouse belonging to the landlord and there upset a cistern, which caused water to escape into the house leased to the tenant, such act not being a simple trespass committed by a third person, within the meaning of art. 1016. C. C., but a substantive act which modified the enjoyment in a manner prejudicial to the tenant. Brisker v. Lerue, Q. R. 23 S. C. 447.

Disturbance of Tenant's Possessic:— Trouble de Droit—Trespass—Croven Lauds.]
—The cutting of hay, and hunting, upon leased property, by a third party not pretending to have any right upon the property leased, but merely asserting that the land on which he cut hay and hunted was not part of the property leased, is not a trouble de droit, but a mere trespass, against which, in the terms of art, 1616, C. C., the lessor is not obliged to warrant the lessee. 2. The pretension of a third party that he had acquired a right by prescription to cut hay on the leased property, which pretension was never brought to the notice of the Crown, lessor, by a legal proceeding or otherwise, and which was mainfestly untenable as regards property of the Crown, would not constitute a trouble de droit under art. 610, C. C. Fitzpatrick v. Lacalie, Q. R. 25 S. C. 206.

Repair of Premises—Injury to Teant.]
—The lessee is not obliged to notify the lessor of the need of repairs to the leased premises, which the lessor is obliged to make. It is the duty of the proprietor to inspect his own property from time to time, and ascertain what repairs are necessary. He is, therefore, although not notified of any defects, responsible in damages for an accident which heppened to the tenant in consequence of the weakness of a railing on the leased premises. Troude v. Meldrum, Q. R. 21 S. C. 75.

Repairs—Landlord Execeding Time Specified for Doing—Banages—Measure of—Contemplation of Parties at Time Lease was Made.)—A tenant can claim from the landlord, who has exceeded the time specified in the lease for making repairs, only such damages as result directly from non-compliance with the conditions of the lease, and which might have been foreseen at the time it was granted. As a consequence, if he did not know that the premises had been leased for a place of business, the owner could not foresee that he might be called upon to pay any other damages than those resulting from the lease of an ordinary dwelling-house; and, therefore, he cannot be held responsible in damages which arise from the fact that the tenant has been prevented from carrying on the trade of a tailor whist the repairs were effected at a place leased for the purpose of a residence only. Léveillé v, Pigeon, Q. R. 26 S. C. 73.

III. LEASE,

Abandonment—Re-letting— Cancellation—Deficiency in Rent.]—When a tenant abandons the demised premises and the landlord lets them to another, there is a tacit cancellation of the lease, 2. Nevertheless, such cancellation being due to the fault of the tenant, he must pay to the landlord the difference between the old and the new rent. Jodoin v. Demers, Q. R. 24 S. C. 189.

Acceleration Clause - Assignment for Creditors—Forfeiture—Assignee's Election—Payment of Rent.]—The effect of s. 34 of R. 8. 0. c. 170, the Landlord and Tenant Act, is to place the assignee who has elected by notice in writing under his hand to retain the premises occupied by the assignor at the time of the assignment, for the unexpired term of the lease, in the same position as respects the lease as the assignor would have been in had the assignment not been made; the landlord in such cases being entitled to the full amount of the rent reserved by the lease, but to nothing more. And where accelerated rent due for the unexpired term of a lease containing the usual forfeiture clause had been paid by the assignee, who had elected to retain the premises till the end of the term, he was held entitled to recover back a term, news and elittled to receive state of the premises for a portion of the same period which he had paid, on demand of the landlord, under protest, to avoid distress. Kennedy v. Donell, 21 Occ. N. 233, 1 O. L. R. 250, Action by Tenant—Pleading.] — A tenatub sues by virtue of his lease is no coobliged to allege that he has fulfilled all the conditions which it imposes upon him; that is implied by his setting up the lease. Trempe v. Larivière, 6 Q. P. R. 367.

Agreement for Construction—Condition—Water.]—The defendant contracted to let use plaintiff a house, then under construction, for the term of one year from the 1st June, 1900, at the rental of $20 per month, lersble monthly in advance. It was agreed that in the event of the house not being completed by the 1st June there should be a proportionate reduction in the rent. The house was not completed by the time agreed, but the plaintiff moved in on the 24th June, when the work was still unfinished. No rent was charged for the month of June, but the plaintiff paid rent in advance for the months of July, August, September, and October, and continued in occupation of the premises until the 1st May, 1901, when he moved out. In an action by the plaintiff for damages for goods distrained by the defendant for rent in arrear:—Held, that the trial Judge was right in construing the agreement as a letting for a year from the 1st June, 1900, with a condition that if the occupancy was prevented by reason of the house not being ready for occupation at that time, there should be a deduction from the rent in respect to the period of time during which the house was not occupied. Held, also, that the payments made by the plaintiff shewed a waiver of the provision made in respect to the house being finished by a fixed date, or rather, in respect to the reduction which was to be made in consequence of its not being finished. Acorn v. Hill, 34 N. S. Reps. 308.

Agreement for - Municipal Corporation —Lease to Railway Company — Settling — Taxes—Rent — Covenants.] — Property of a city municipality, when occupied by a tenant other than a servant or officer of the corporation occupying the premises for the purposes thereof, is subject to taxation (Assessment Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, s. 7, s.-s. 7); and such tax is a tenant's tax payable by him, and not in any event payable by the landlord as between him and the tenant. Section 26 of the Act, as to tenants deducting taxes from their rent, has no application to such a case, their rent, has no application to such a case, as it applies only to taxes which can be legally recovered from the owner. The reason of the rule embodied in that section dis-appears when the property is in the hands of the landlord exempt, and becomes liable to be taxed only when in occupation of a tenant. Semble, also, that where the tenant, as in this case, holds in perpetuity under a renewable lease, he may be regarded as the "owner, within the meaning of the Assessment Act, and as such is liable to taxation without recourse to the owner in fee. Where the municipality had entered into an agreement to grant a lease for a rent specified, but no mention had been made of taxes:-Held, that the fixing of the rent payable to the city did not interfere with the right of the latter in its governmental capacity and exercising its sovereign power to lay taxes upon the property when no longer exempt, by reason of its being under lease. Taxes and rent are its being under lease. Taxes and rent are distinct things and collectible by the corporation in different capacities, and the imposition of the yearly taxes is not a derogation from or inconsistent with the contract. A covenant by a tenant to pay taxes is a "usual" covenant, and it lay upon the tenant here objecting to give it, to shew by competent evidence that it was not so in such a case as that in question here or in this country, which the tenant had failed to do. No covenant to repair should be inserted in the lease, the jurisdiction to keep the railway in effecthe jurisdiction to keep the railway in effective operation being in the Railway Committee of the Privy Council, and it not having been shewn that this was insufficient to protect the city. In re Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. and City of Toronto, 22 Occ. N, 235, 4 O. L. R, 134, 1 O. W. R. 255, 2 O. W. R. 385, 5 O. L. R, 717, Agreement for — Specific Performance.]
—Where the lessee refuses to sign a notarial lease in the terms of the agreement between him and the lessor in respect of the premises leased, the lessor has a right to bring suit, and have the lessee condemned to sign the lease, and, in default of his so doing, to have it ordered that the judgment of the Court shall serve as such lease. Walsh v. Brooke, Q. R. 21 S. C. 394.

Agreement for Lease—Incomplete contract—Nature of tenancy—Possession. Grant v. McPherson, 1 O. W. R. 240.

Breach of Covenant—Quiet enjoyment— Eviction—Covenant not to sublet—Forfeiture—Waiver. Armstrong v. Canada Co., 6 O. W. R. 888.

Cancellation—Use of Premises Changed.]

—There is a change in the use of the demised premises, affording ground for the cancellation of the lease, when the tenant of a bakery sublets it for a laundry. Pearson v. Potvin, Q. R. 25 S. C. 54.

Charge on Land—Opposition to Sale by Sheriff.]—A lease for one year, whether registered or not, does not constitute a charge upon the immovable leased, and gives no right to the tenant to make an opposition âm de charge, when the immovable is to be sold by the sheriff. Lantaigne v. Skelling, Q. R. 22 S. C. 304.

Construction — Unincorporated society—Lease signed by officers—Action for expulsion from demised premises—Parties—Damages. Trudeau v. Pepin, 3 O. W. R. 779.

Covenant—Breach of—Assignment without Leave-Re-entry—Formal Escention of Assignment ofter Action.]—The right of reentry under the short form of lease applies to the breach of a negative as well as an affirmative covenant, so that there is a right of re-entry for breach of the covenant not to assign or sublet without leave. Toronto General Hospital Trustees v. Denham, 31 C. F. 203, followed. The making of an agreement for the assignment of a lease, the settlement of the terms thereof, and the taking of possession by the assignee, constitute sufficient evidence of the breach of such covenant, so that the fact of the document shewing the transfer not having been executed until after action brought, is immaterial. McMahon v. Coyle, 23 Occ. N. 225, 5 O. L. R. 618, 2 O. W. R. 265.

Govenant—Goods on Premises to Secure Rent—Valuation.]—Where, by a lease, the lessee undertook to furnish the leased premises with "a sufficient quantity of household furniture or goods to secure the payment of one year's rent," the effects upon the leased premises should be valued in accordance with their ordinary merchantable value, and not in accoraance with what they might bring at a forced sale, Rousseau v. Archibald, Q. R. 12 K. B. 14.

Covenant — Implied Covenant to Crop and Cultivate—Damages for Deterioration.] —The plaintiff leased to the defendant's hubband land for five years, yielding and paring therefor the clear yearly rent or sum of one-third of the crop. The lease contained covenants by the lessee that he would cultivate in a good husbandlike and proper manner so as not to impoverish or injure the soil, and plough and crop the same in a proper farmer-like manner. Afterwards a new lease was made substituting the defendant as lessee, instead of, her husband. This did not contain any of the above-mentioned covenants, or anything specially applicable to leases of farms, but contained the following: "Yielding and paying therefor yearly and every year during the said term. ... the sum of out-third of the crop grown, to be payed to the contain early the contained to the plough in the fall of each year," and a covenant to plough in each year of the term four inches deep, which was written into it. It did not contain express covenants to cultivate or crop:—Held, that there should be judgment for the plaintiff for deterioration in value of land from defendant's omitting to plough for the plaintiff for deterioration in value of land from defendant's omitting to plough all $591.76. Implied covenants to cultivate, and crop in 1902, $300, and for loss of wheat, barley, and oats, $291.78, in all $591.76. Implied covenants to read into the second lease: McIntyre v. Belcher, 14 C. B. N. S. 65: Hamlyn v. Wood, 1891, 1991, 1991, 1991, 1992, 1991, 1991, 1992, 1991, 1991, 1992, 1991, 1992, 1991, 1992, 1992, 1991, 1992,

- Improvements — Renewal Covenant --Independent Covenants-Option.] - A lease contained a covenant to the effect that the lessee might make improvements upon the demised premises; that at the expiration of the lease or any renewal thereof the same should be valued and paid for by the lessor; and concluding as follows: "And upon such payment, upon such valuation not being duly made, the party of the first part, his heirs or assigns, shall, if so required, give or renew a lease including the covenants of the pre-sent lease to the parties of the second part for a further period of five years, with the like agreement of valuation and payment for improvements as in this lease expressed and at the same yearly rent." On the expiration of the term, a dispute having arisen between the lessor and lessee as to the effect of the covenant-the former claiming that it was optional with him either to renew the lease or pay for the improvements after valuation. the latter that he was entitled to have the improvements valued and paid for by the lessor-a special case was stated in Equity for the opinion of the Court. Each party was ready and willing to perform the covenant as interpreted by him: -Held, that the covenant was single, and therefore that the lessor was discharged upon his shewing that he was ready and willing to renew the lease; (2) that, even if there were two separate and independent covenants, one to pay the appraised value of the improvements and the other to renew, only one was to be performed, and the option lay with the lessor, he being the first person called upon to act. Covenant—Lease by Tenant for Life— Straw and Manure — Property in—Emble-ments.)—During the lifetime of the widous and tenant for life, two of the farms belongand tenant for life, two of the farms belong-ing to the estate were leased for five years, dependent on her living so long, and the les-sees covenanted to cultivate, till, menure . and to spend, use, and employ in a proper husbandlike manner all the straw and manure . . . and not to remove or permit to be removed from the premises any straw of any kind, manure, wood or stone, and to carefully stack the straw . . . and tura all the manure thereon into a pile (so it may heat and rot so as to kill and destroy foul seeds), and thereafter and not before to spread the same on the land:—Held, that the defendants were not entitled to the straw and manure as emblements, as the widow was not in actual occupation or cultivation of the lands on which it was produced :- Held, also, that the lessees would have been entitled to the straw and the manure, which had been piled into heaps, but for their covenants, which precluded them from making any claim; and that the covenants might be construed or held to operate as a reservation of the straw and manure to the lessor to be dealt with in the stipulated manner, and, as the lessees' right or power and obligation so to deal with it came to an end with the death of the lessor, it passed to her representatives unrestricted thereby. Snetsinger v. Leitch, 32 O. R. 440, referred to. Gardner v. Perry, 23 Occ. N. 295.

Covenant—Not to Cut Timber—Statutory Coreant—Common Law Rights.]—Under a covenant in a lease made in pursuance of the Short Forms Act, the lessee was not to cut down timber for any purpose whatever, except for fire wood, but he was to have the privilege of using for any purpose all lying down hard wood timber, cedar only excepted:—Held, that the covenant was a restriction of the statutory covenant, under which the lessee could cut down timber or timber trees for necessary repairs or for fire wood, but was an extension of the common law right, which was limited to lying down dead timber, and that the covenant allowed the lessee to use all the lying down hard wood timber, soud or unsound, except in so far as restricted by the exception as to cedar. Snellie I. Wiston, 70. L. R. 635, 2 O. W. R. 118, 3 O. W. R. 475.

Covenant — Not to Sublet—Lodgers.]—A condition in a lease, prohibiting subletting of the premises in whole or in part is not violated by a tenant who lets furnished rooms to lodgers, the tenant retaining the entire care and control of such rooms, and the lodgers not even being in possession of keys thereto. Collerette v. Bassinet, Q. R. 24 S. C. 372.

Covenant — Railway Company — City Leave—Usual Covenants—Covenants to Pay Taxa and Repair—Right of Re-entry—Rent is Array — Interest on.] — An agreement made between the corporation of the city of Toronto and the Canadian Pacific Railway Campany, provided, amongst other things, for a lease renewable in perpetuity, in successive terms of fifty years, at an agreed rent, payable on named days, nothing being said about covenants:—Held, that the lease should contain a covenant by the appellants to pay the same, partly because the effect of the Assessment Act in force at the date of the contract was to impose such liability on the lessees of municipal lands without recourse to the corporation, and partly because a covenant to that effect was shewn to be a usual covenant, in the sense that the corporation invariably insisted on it in their leases. Judgment in In re Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. and City of Toronto, 23 Occ. N. 218, 5 O. L. R. 717, affirmed in the main, but varied as to interest. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. City of Toronto, [1965] A. C. 33.

Crops — Defence—Tilling and Sowing— Harvesting.] — In a defence claiming the value of crops the defendant is not entitled at the same time to the cost of tilling and sowing and the cost of harvesting, and a claim for the latter will be set aside upon inscription in law. Desormeus v. Bastien, 5 Q. P. R., 417.

Crops—Provision as to—Execution against Tenant—Rights of Landlord—Bills of Sale Act—Seizure of Equitable Interest.] — The claimant let to the execution debtor the farm on which the grain had been grown by an indenture reserving as rent "the share or por-tion of the whole crop which shall be grown upon the demised premises as hereinafter set forth," and the lease provided that the lessor might retain from the share of the crop that was to be delivered to the lessee a sufficient amount to cover taxes, and to repay advances and other indebtedness; that the lessee vances and other Indeptedness; that the lessee immediately after threshitg, should deliver the whole crop, excepting hay, in the name of the lessor; that all crops of grain grown upon the said premises should be and remain the absolute property of the lessor until all cove-nants, conditions, provisoes, and agreements therein contained should have been fully kept, performed and satisfied; and that the lessor should deliver to the lessee two-thirds of the proceeds of the crop to be stored in the ele-vator, less any sum retained for taxes, advances, indebtedness or guaranties previously mentioned. The grain in question had, until its seizure under the plaintiff's execution, remained on the farm in the possession of the lessee. The claimant claimed it as owner under the terms of the lease and not for rent:—Held, that the lease did not operate to prevent the lessee from ever having any property in the grain to be grown. 2. That, even if the legal ownership of the grain was even if the legal ownership of the grain was to be in 'he lessor, it was still, as to two-thirds, held for the benefit of the lessee sub-ject to the lessor's charges for taxes and ad-vances, etc., and the lessee had an equitable interest in it, and the lessor's lien or charge would be void under the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 11, s. 29 as being a charge upon crops to be S. 39, as being a charge upon crops to be grown in the future. 3. That the interest of the lessee in the grain whether legal or only equitable, was subject, under s. 182 of the County Courts Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 38, to seizure and sale under execution, and that the claimant's interest could not prevail over that of the plaintiff. Campbell v. McKinnon, 23 Occ. N. 234, 14 Man. L. R. 421.

Emphyteusis — Bail-à-rente — Petitory Action—Transfer by Lessee.] — An instrument by which lands were leased for sixteen years at an annual rental, subject to a renewal for a further term of twelve years, provided for the construction of certain buildings and improvements by the lessee upon the leased premises, and hypothecated these contemplated ameliorations to secure payment of rent and performance of the obligations of the lessee. On disturbance, an action, with both petitory and possessory conclusions, was brought by a transferee of the lessee against an alleged trespasser, who pleaded title and possession in himself, without taking objection to its cumulative form :-Held, that, under the circumstances, the action should be treated as petitory only; that the contract under the instrument described was neither emphyteusis nor a bail-à-rente (lease in perpetuity), but merely an ordinary contract of lease which conveyed no title to land or real rights sufficient to confer upon the transferee the right to institute a petitory action:— Held, also, that a deed of sale from the lessee would not support the petitory action, as the lessee could not transfer proprietary rights which he did not himself possess. Price v. LeBlond, 20 Occ. N. 449, 30 S. C. R. 539.

Evidence of — Commencement in Writing—Third Party—Confession of Judgment.]
—A lease for a year at more than $50 rent cannot be proved by verbal testimony, even as against a third party, without a commencement of proof by writing is not to be found in the allegation, by such third party, of a monthly lease. 2. A confession of judgment by the tenant in an action brought against him by the landlord is not proof of a verbal lease against a third person who has been made a party. Laliberté v. Langelier, Q. R. 9 Q. B. 398.

Expiry — Continuance of Possession by Tenant—Special Agreement — Tenancy at Will.]—The reservation or payment of rent in aliquot proportions of a year, is the leading circumstance which turns tenancies for uncertain terms into tenancies from year to year. But this payment does not create the tenancy. It is only evidence from which the Court or jury may find the fact. And the circumstances may be shewn to repel the implication—Held, therefore, in this case, where the landlord, before he accepted any rent after expiry of the lease, expressly told the tenant that he would not consent to any tenancy from year to year, so as to require any notice of termination to be given, but that they should remain in the same position as they were on the expiry of the lease, to which the tenant assented—the rent, however, to be the same as that reserved in the lease, and to be paid in like manner—the tenant was not a tenant from year to year, but a tenant at will. Idington v. Douglas, 23 Occ. N. 286, 6 O. L. R. 266, 2 O. W. R. 734.

Farm — Crop-payments—Negligence and want of skill of tenants—Action for damages —Joinder of defendants—Farming operations —Conflicting evidence — Damages — Costs. Graviston v. Johnston (N.W.T.), 2 W. L. R. 81.

Forfeiture — Assignment for Creditors.]
—A lease is not terminated or dissolved by operation of law in consequence of an abandonment of his property by a trader for the benefit of his creditors, Milot v. Hains, 4 Q. P. R. 58.

Forfeiture—Breach of covenant not to sublet without leave—Acquiescence—Waiver —Breach of covenant to repair. Minuk v. White (Man.), 1 W. L. R. 401.

Forfeiture—Non-payment of Rent—Dunages—Declinatory Exception.] — A declinatory exception, which concludes simply for the dismissal of the action, where it is shewn that the Court is competent, must be dismissed, 2. A landlord who demands the cancellation of the lease for non-payment of rent, may allege, besides, that he incurred, on account of the loss of future rents, damages to a certain amount, and is not obliged to limit his demand to three months' rent to fall due. Belanger v. Dubois, 5 Q. P. R. 342.

Forfeiture - Waiver-Estoppel-Covenant — Sub-lease—Company — Assignment for Creditors.]—A lease to a joint stock com-pany provided that, in case the lessee should assign for the benefit of creditors, six months' rent should immediately become due, and the lease should be forfeited and void. The two lessors were principal shareholders in the company, and while the lease was in force one of them, at the meeting of the directors, moved, and the other seconded, that a by-law be passed authorizing the company to make an assignment, which was afterwards done, the lessors executing the assignment as creditors assenting:—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 1 O. L. R. 172. 21 Occ. N. 111, that the lessors and the company were distinct legal persons, and the individual interests of the former were not affected by the above action. Salamon v. Salamon, [1897] A. C. 22, followed. The assignee of the company held possession of the leased premises for three months, and the lessees accepted rent from him for that time, and from sub-lessees for the month following:—Held, reversing the judgment, that, under the facts of the case, the lessors could not be said to have waived their right to claim a forfeiture of the lease. Mortgagees of the premises having notified the sub-tenants to pay rent to them, the assignee paid them a sum in satisfaction of their claim, with the assent of the lessors, against whose demand it was charged :-Held, that this, also, was no waiver of the lessors' right to claim a forfeiture. Quere: Was a covenant by the company to supply steam and power to its sub-tenants anything more than a personal covenant by the company, or would it on surrender of the original lease, have bound the lessor and a purchaser from him of the fee? Littlejohn v. Soper, 22 Occ. N. 45, 31 S. C. R. 572.

Hotel Premises—Requirements of By-late

House not Completed — Requirements as to Heating.)—Where in a lease of a house in the course of construction, it is provided that the lessee shall take the house in the condition in which it shall be at the time of delivery over, provided that the work is finished, and the arrangement of the house shews (the owner having placed in it pipes for a system of hot water heating) that the house is to be heated by hot water, the tenant, especially if the house, by reason of its construction, cannot easily be heated with stoves, may require that the owner, shall place radiators in every room where the visible indications make it apparent that the intention was to so place them, and a furnace of a capacity sufficient to heat the water for such system. Businet v. Collerette, Q. R. 21 S.

Implied Covenant to Crop and Cultivate - Rent in Kind-Damages for Deterioration.] - In April, 1898, the plaintiff leased by deed to the defendant's husband a half section of land for 5 years at a rental of one-third of the crop grown on the pre-mises yearly. The lease was on a printed form of a farm lease, and contained cove-nants by the lessee that he would during the term cultivate such part of the land as was then or should thereafter be brought under cultivation, in a good, husbandlike, and pro-per manner, and would plough the land in each year 4 inches deep and crop the same during the term in a proper farmerlike manner. Afterwards a new lease of the same land was made by deed, ante-dated so as to bear the same date as the first one, substituting the defendant as lessee instead of her husband. It was intended that the new lease should be a duplicate of the other in all respects except as to the name of the lessee. The new lease, by mistake of the solicitor who prepared it, was written on a printed form of "statutory lease," not containing the special clauses applicable to farm land. It provided for the same rental as the other lease, payable ir the same way and at the same times, and contained the same covenant to plough 4 inches deep in each year written into it, but no express covenants to cultivate or crop. By the end of 1901 the cultivated portion of the farm was 117 acres, but in 1902 the defendant only ploughed and cultivated 4 acres out of the 117, and weeds grew up all over the rest. The plaintiff's claim was for damages for breach of covenants to cultivate, crop, and plough in 1902, which he contended should be implied in the lease to defendant in the circumstances:-Held, following McIntyre v. Belcher, 14 C. B. N. S. 654, The Moorcock, 14 P. D. 68, and Hamlyn v. Wood, [1891] 2 Q. B. 491, that such covenants should, in the circumstances, be implied in the lense to the definant and that she was lightle for the extra fendant, and that she was liable for the estimated value of one-third of the crop that would probably have been produced on the 117 acres if it had been cropped in that year, and for deterioration in value of the land on account of defendant having allowed it to row up with weeds. Dunsford v. Webster, 23 Occ. N. 290, 14 Man. L. R. 529.

Option to Purchase - Revocation of by Death—Specific Performance—Consideration
—Tender — Evidence — Declarations against Interest.]-A provision in a lease, whereby the lessor grants to the lessee an option to purchase the leased property within a limited time, is not a nudum pactum. Such an option is, within the time limited, binding on a deceased lessor's personal representatives, though not so expressed. Statements, whether written or orally made, by the lessor as to the terms of the lease are not after the death of the lessor, admissible as evidence in favour of his successor in title as being declarations against the deceased's interest. Per McGuire, C.J.—Such statements merely amount to statements of an agreement which must be supposed to be made on fair terms, and, consequently, as much in favour of the maker's interest as against it. Where a tender is made in current bank bills, and objection is made only to the amount tendered, the objection cannot subsequently be taken that the tender was not made in "legal ten-der." The questions of the necessity for a formal tender, a contract under seal importing a consideration, the inadequacy of the consideration in an action for specific performance, discussed. Yuill v. White, 22 Occ. N. 312, 5 Terr. L. R. 275.

Option of Purchase — Terms — Construction.] — S. leased land from F. for a term of 3 years at a rent of $150. payable in advance, with a right to extend the term for a nurther period of 6 years—that is, two terms of 3 years each—on paying a further sum of $150. in advance, at the beginning of each term of 3 years. The lease also contained a purchase clause, whereby F. agreed to convey to S. the leased premises at any time within the 9 years for the sum of $600, and further agreed that any payment which might have been made on account of the lease rent in advance at the time at which such conveyance might occur should be allowed as part payment:—Held, that in case of a purchase all the advance rent should go a coount of the purchase money. Judzment in 1 N. B. Eq. Reps. 363, 451, adfirmed. Freeman v. Steuart, 36 N. B. Reps. 405.

Privileges not Specified—Injunction.]
—Before the construction of a building by the defendant, the plaintiff agreed to rent a shop in the proposed building. The lease, in the short form made in pursuance of the Leaseholds Act, described the premises by metes and bounds, without specifying any privileges. The plaintiff, after entering, demanded the use of a water-closet and of a place for storing coal, and the defendant conceded the right:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with his right of access to the closet and with his right to store coal in rear of the premises. Rosa v. Henderson, 21 Occ. N. 219, 8 B. C. R. 5.

Produce of Farm — Agreement os to— Execution against Tenant.] — The plaintiff leased a dairy farm and thirteer cows, by lease in writing, in which was contained the following clause: "All the hay, straw, and corn stalks raised on the . . . farm to be fed to the said cows on the said . . . farm:"—Held, that, while the property in hay produced on the farm might be legally in the tenant, yet his contract was 'o so use it that it should be fed to the cattle and consumed on the premises; he was not to have the beneficial use of it, and could not by his contract take it off the farm, and his judgment or excution creditor hand not such power, under cover of an excension; and an injunction restraining a bailiff and purchaser at a bailiff's sale from removing it was granted. Seek-ainger v. Leitch, 21 Occ. N. 157, $2 O. R.

Provisions of - Damage by Fire-Repairs — Abandonment—Lien of Landlord— Stock-in-trade—Sale en Bloc.]—1. Where a lease contains stipulations to the effect that the lessee shall deliver the premises at the expiration of the lease in as good order as they were at the commencement of the lease, reasonable wear and tear and accidents by fire excepted, and shall pay extra premium of insurance exacted by insurance company in consequence of the work carried on by the lessee, the effect is to do away with the presumption, which would otherwise exist by law in favour of the lessor, that the fire which occurred in the leased premises was due to the fault of the lessee, or of persons for when he were the state of the lessee. for whom he was responsible, and it is for the lessor to prove fault before he can recover damages. Evans v. Skelton, 16 S. C. R. 637, followed. 2. Damage by fire so inconsiderable in extent that repairs may be made in three in extent that repairs may be made in three or four days does not justify the lessee in abandoning the premises. His remedy is to put the lessor in default to make the necessary repairs, and then, if the repairs be not made, to ask for the cancellation of the lease. 3. The application of art. 1623, C. C., which says that in the exercise of the privileged right the lessor may seize the things which are subject to it, upon the premises, or within eight days after they are taken away, but "if the things consist of merchandise they can be seized only while they continue to be the property of the lessee"—is not restricted to daily sales of merchandise in detail. The article applies to any sale which a merchant may make in the ordinary course of business; and the sale en bloc of a stock which has been damaged by a fire on the premises, is an ordinary and usual transaction; and therefore the lessor is not entitled to seize in recore use ressor is not entitled to seize in recaption, in the possession of the purchaser, a damaged or partly damaged stock bought from the lessee in good faith, even when such merchandise has been sold en bloc. Judgment in Q. R. 14 S. C. 396, affirmed, but damages increased. Liggett v. Viau, Q. R. 18 S. C. 201.

Proviso for Subletting — Right of Landlord to Refuse Consent.] — Action for cancellation of a lease on the ground that the defendant, in violation of one of its terms, sublet the premises without having obtained the plaintiffs' written consent. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiffs refused their consent without cause, being only ready to grant the same upon the condition that the rent should be increased; that the subtenant was solvent and was willing to pay the rent yearly in advance, or to furnish security. Against these allegations the plaintiffs in scribed in law, claiming that they were irrelevant, and that the plaintiffs had an absolute right to refuse consent:—Held, following MacKenzie v. Wilson, 10 L. N. 113, that he clause in the lease being absolute, the plaintiffs had the right to refuse consent, and that, therefore, the grounds urged by the defendant did not constitute any legal justification for his conduct in subletting. Inscription-in-law maintained and paragraphs of plea complained of struck out with costs. Racette v. Carriere, 23 Occ. N. 117.

Registered Lease—Sale of Property by Sheriff under Hypothec—Opposition by Tenant—Security.]— An hypothecary creditor has a right to demand that a tenant who makes an opposition afin de charge based upon a registered lease, shall furnish good and sufficient, security that the property will be sold at a price sufficient to assure the amount of his claim, and this before the property has been advertised subject to the charge. Semble, that a tenant, whose lease has been registered, has a right to proceed by way of opposition afin de charge. Desaulaiers v. Payette, 5 Q. P. R. 344.

Relief against Forfeiture of Lease
—Insolvency—Mistake in telegram. Smith
v. Wade, 1 O. W. R. 549.

Renewal — Arbitration — Appointment of Arbitrators—Procedure — Interference by Injunction—Jurisdiction.]—A lease contained an agreement for renewal upon the following terms: the lessors were at liberty to elect either to take the improvements made by the lessees at a valuation or to grant a new lease for a further term at a rent to be fixed by arbitrators, one to be chosen by the lessors, one by the lesses, and a third by the two, provided that if either party refused or neglected to appoint an arbitrator within 7 days after being required in writing by the other to do so, the other might appoint a sole arbitrator, whose award should be final. After the original term had expired, the lessors'served upon the lessees a notice requiring them to appoint an arbitrator. lessees answered by stating that they con-tended that the lessors had no longer any right to insist upon a renewal and protesting against any arbitration, but at the same time naming an arbitrator. The lessors did time naming an arbitrator. The lessors did not accept this as an appointment of an arbitrator, and assumed to appoint a sole arbitrator as upon default for 7 days after notice:—Held, affirming the judgment of Boyd, C., 5 O. L. R. 105, 23 Occ. N. 13, that the lessees had made a valid appointment of an arbitrator, and the lessers had no right to appoint a sole arbitrator; and that the lessees were entitled to resort to the Court to have the lessors restrained from proceeding before a sole arbitrator and to have a determination of their contention that the lessors had tion of their contention that the lessors and no right to insist upon a renewal. North London R. W. Co. v. Great Northern R. W. Co., 11 Q. Bl. D. 30, and London and Blackwall R. W. Co. v. Cross, 31 Ch. D. 354, distinguished. Direct United States Cable Co. v. Dominion Telegraph Co., 28 Gr. 648, 8 A. R. 416, followed. Semble, per Osler, J.A. that the lessors could not require the lesses that the lessors could not require the lesses. that the lessors could not require the lessees to appoint an arbitrator without having first or at the same time appointed one on their own behalf. Renewal — Construction of Lease— Rent.]—A clause in a lease providing for a renewal stated that the renewal lease was to be "at such increased rent as may be determined upon, as hereinafter mentioned, payable in like manner and under and subject to the like covenants, provisions, and agree-ments as are contained in these presents, in-cluding the covenant for renewal, such rent to be determined by three indifferent or dis-interested persons as arbitrators." The lease further provided for payment of the yearly rent as follows: "For the first ten years of the said term eighty dollars per annum; for the said term eighty dollars per annum; for the remaining eleven years one hundred dol-lars per annum; all the said payments to be made half-yearly on the first day of January and July in each year;"—Held, that the pro-per manner by which the rent should be increased during the renewal term was by adding to each payment during the twenty-one years, that is to say, adding to the rent of $80 per annum for the first ten years of the renewal term and to the rent of $100 per annum for the remaining ten years of the renewal term,—and not by adding together renewal term,—and not by adding together the annual payments for twenty-one years and making an addition to that, nor by adding to the sum payable during the last year be-fore the renewal:—Held, also, that the con-dition as to the rent for the new term being an increased rent, might be satisfied by making a merely nominal addition, whereas here there was no increase in the rentable value of the premises, In re Geddes and Garde. In re Geddes and Cochrane, 20 Occ. N. 455, 32 O. R. 262,

Renewal — Increased Rent — Arbitration.]—In a lease for twenty-one years the reat fixed was, for the first years $106,85, for the next four years $130 a year, for the next five years $130 a year, for the next five years $145 a year, and for the remaining eleven years $178 a year. The lease contained a covenant by the lessor to renew for a further term of twenty-one years, "at such increased rent as may be determined upon as hereinafter mentioned, payable in like manner, and under and subject to the like covenants . . . as are contained in these presents." The lease provided for the application of arbitrators to determine the rent to be paid under the renewal lease:—Held, that the arbitrators were bound to award an increased rent under the terms of the reference to them, but they might award a mere nominal increase if they thought proper; the increase was to be based upon the rent reserved for the whole term, and not for any particular year or years of it; it might be upon each year's rent or upon the enterage of the whole twenty-one years, but so that in the result the greage annual rent should be greater for the future term than the past. Rescission — Immoral use of Premises— Knowledge — Costs.] — The fact that the lessor's auteur, who was also manager of the company appellant, was aware, during several years, that a portion of the leased premises was being used for immoral purposes, and that he acquiesced therein, does not deprive the purchaser and transferee of such premises of the right to demand the resiliation of the lease on the ground of such immoral use of premises. Such knowledge can only affect the question of costs. Provident Trust and Investment Co. v. Chapleau, Q. R. 12 K. B. 451.

Rescission — Tenant Quitting Possession—Rent to Fall Due—Damages—Injury to Premises.]—Where the tenant leaves the demised premises before the expiry of the lease, the landlord cannot claim as damages a sum equal to the rents which would fall due under the lease, unless he also claims cancellation of the lease, cannot, before the expiration of the lease, claim damages for injury done by the tenant to the demised premises. Short Forms Act-Lease-Surrender-Evidence of Destruction of Building by Fire —Obligation of Tenants to Rebuild—Cove-nants to Repair — Breaches—Assignment of Lease—Assignment of Reversion—Parties— Amendment.]—The male plaintiff, being the owner of a farm in the township of Pelham, by indenture of lease, dated 29th June, 1891, and expressed to be made in pursuance of the Act respecting short forms of leases, R. S. O. 1897 c. 106, devised it to defendants the Brown Brothers Co. for the term of 12 years, to be computed from 1st April, 1892. The lessees covenanted "to repair," "and that the said lessor may enter and view state of repair and that the said lesses will repair according to notice," "and that they will leave according to notice, "and that they will leave the premises in good repair, ordinary wear and tear only excepted." After the making of the lease, plaintiff Ira Delamatter con-veyed the lands demised to plaintiff Emma C. Delamatter, and defendants the Brown Brothers Co. conveyed all their interest under the lease to their co-defendants, who accepted the lease and became liable to all the cove-nants. In August, 1902, one of the buildings on the demised premises-a barn-was destroyed by fire, and was not rebuilt. The action was brought to recover damages for breaches of covenants on the part of breactes of covenants on the part of the lessees:—Held, Magee, J., dissenting, that words annexed to the short form which are designed to increase the obligation of the covenantor cannot introduce into the form an exception from it, or to annex to the form an exception from it, or to annex to the form a qualification of it, and the covenant must be construed as it stood without the aid of the long form. Therefore the covenant as to damage by fire and tempest did not apply. Delamatter v, Brocan Brothers Co., 5 O. W. R. 423, 9 O. L. R. 351.

H. A. & Co., who afterwards executed an assignment for the benefit of creditors to the defendant, who did not take possession of the premises. The plaintiff, on the third day after the assignment, requested and obtained from H. A. & Co. the keys of the premises, which she proceeded to clean up and repair, and she took down a sign board having on it the firm name of H. A. & Co., and painted the name out. The plaintiff afterwards sued for a declaration that she was entitled to a privileged claim against the estate for rent accruing due after the assignment:—Held, that there had been a surrender of the premises to the landlord by act and operation of law. Phean down the control of the premises to the landlord by act and operation of law. Phean down the control of the control of the control of the premises to the landlord by act and operation of law. Surrender-Forfeiture for Breach of Covenant-Eviction by Notice.]—The plaintiff, tenant of the defendant's farm under a lease for 3 years from March, 1903, containing a covenant by the plaintiff to buy 3 horses and to pay for them by doing certain work on the farm, or in cash at the time of threshing, being embarrassed financially, about the 1st December, 1903, met the defendant and asked him to assist him by guaranteeing certain accounts, in default of which he said he would be unable to go on working the farm, and terms were discussed, on which the plaintiff should abandon the lease and give up possession of the premises. While the defendant was willing to assist the plaintiff, they failed to agree, whereupon the former told the latter that he would cancel the lease for non-performance of covenants, and, on the plaintiff's request for a writing, gave him the following writen notice: "Take notice that I have this day cancelled lease of my farm to you on the grounds of non-fulfilment of terms of said lease." On the same day the plaintiff vacated the premises, after selling to the defendant some oats, barley, and feed he had there. The defendant resumed possession at once. A few days afterwards possession at once. A few days afterwards the plaintiff came back and sold to the defendant his poultry, and then left the farm altogether:—Held, that there had been no surrender of the lease, and that the defendant was liable in damages as for an eviction of the plaintiff. The defendant also contended that he was entitled to terminate the lease for breach of the covenant referred to. to this, it appeared that the plaintiff had done some of the work stipulated for, and that there was a dispute over their accounts, but that at all events there was not more than about $38 due on the horses :-Held, that there was not such a clear breach of the covenant as to entitle the defendant to declare the lease forfeited on that ground. Watson v. Moggey, 15 Man. L. R. 241, 1 W. L. R. 438.

Surrender—Substitution of Tenant—Liability for Rent—Distress—Amendment—Rent Accruing after Action.]—Where a tenant by arrangement with his landlord secured another occupant for the premises, but was given to understand at the time that he would still be liable for the rent:—Held, that this did not amount to a surrender of the lease. In order to constitute a surrender it must be shewn that the incoming tenant has been expressly received and accepted by the landlord as his lessee by the mutual agreement of the parties:—Held, also, that the fact that the landlord at the request of the tenant has issued a distress warrant sgainst the sub-tenant is not sufficient to constitute a surrender by operation of law. Amendment allowed so as to include a claim for additional rent which fell due after the commencement of the action. Lougheed v. Terrant, 2 Terr. L. R. 1, 13 Occ. N. 473.

Tacit Reconduction—Oral Lease—Hise en Demeure—Damages—Non-repair.]—Lease by tacit reconduction is not a verbal lease. 2. Under such a lease, a verbal mise en demeure to make repairs is insufficient. 3. A mise en demeure is necessary in order to claim from the landlord damages resulting to the tenant from non-repair of the premises. Pelletier v. Boyce, Q. R. 21 S. C. 513.

Valuation of Buildings-Extension of Time for Making Award—Interest.]—By a lease made on the 1st November, 1879, land was demised for a term of twenty-one years, and it was agreed that all the buildings on the land at the end of the term should be valued by valuators or arbitrators, and that the reference should be made and entered on and the award made within six months next preceding the 1st November, 1900; and it was further agreed that within six months from that day the value of the buildings found by the arbitrators should be paid with interest at the rate of seven per cent, per annum from that day, and that until paid it should be a charge on the land. By deed dated the 23rd October, 1900, the parties agreed that the time for making the award should be extended to the 1st December, 1900, and until such further day as the valuators or arbitrators might extend the same, was duly extended until the 30th November, 1901, on which day an award was made fixing the value of the buildings. Possession of the land and buildings was given up by the lessees to the lessors on the 31st October, 1900: -Held, Osler, J.A., dubitante, that, suppos-ing the extension of time and delay to have been agreed to for the convenience of both parties and without the fault of either, the lessees were entitled to interest on the value of the buildings from the 31st October, 1900, to the 30th November, 1901, for the first six months at seven per cent, and for the remainder of the time at the legal rate of five per cent. Notice of Rights of Third Person—Assigns of Landlord, 1—If notice to the landlord of the rights of property of third persons in the goods upon the demised premises affects a subsequent purchaser of the freehold, it is not so with regard to mere knowledge of the fact acquired by the landlord. Therefore, such purchaser may enforce his lien upon the goods in the possession of the tenant, notwithstanding the knowledge which his grantor had of the rights of third persons. In re Bolduc, Q. license (sold upon an assignment for the benefit of creditors) are not subject to the lieu of a landlord. 2. The only costs which have priority over special lieus are those incurred in the interest of privileged creditors and for the preservation of their lieu. Therefore, in the case of an assignment for the benefit of creditors, the costs of the assignment and of the administration and liquidation of the insolvent estate have not priority over the claim of a landlord, but it is otherwise with the costs of the sale of the articles subject to his lieu, of the inventory of such articles, and of the distribution of the proceeds of the sale. Poulin v. St. Germain, Q. R. 12 K. B. 353.

V. NOTICE TO QUIT.

Days of Grace — Computation—Holidays.]—The period of three days allowed to a tenant to give up possession, according to Art. 1089, C. P., is a delay in procedure which is extended to the juridical day following, if it expires on a Sunday or a holiday. Beauday v. Harrigan, 5 Q. P. R. 99.

Time—Computation—Non-juridical Day.]
—Article S. C. P., which says that the day upon which a thing ought to be done being a non-juridical day, the thing may be done with the same effect on the next following juridical day, does not apply to the three days which the landlord may give to the tenant, by virtue of art. 1089, C. P. C.; to leave the demised premises, therefore, when the last day is non-juridical, the tenant cannot delay his removal to the next day, Beaudry V. Hannigan, Q. R. 23 S. C. 232, 5 Q. P. R. 366.

Time—Holiday.]—Where the last of the three days which follow a notice to quit given by a landiord under Art. 1089, C. P. C., is a Sunday or holiday, it is not reckoned, and the tenant has the following day to shandon the demised premises. Beaudry V. Harrigan, Q. R. 19 S. C. 421.

Waiver, |—A lease at a yearly rent payable in even portions, in advance, on the first day of each and every month, contained a provision entitling the landlord to give the tenant three months' notice to quit in case which he was willing to accept. On the 22nd August the landlord gave the tenant notice to quit three months' thereafter. On the 22nd August the landlord gave the tenant notice to quit three months' thereafter. On the 22nd August the landlord gave the tenant notice to quit three months' fittle, accepted the rent landlord's successor in title, accepted the rent land in advance the previous day, for the whole of the month of November, though the whole of the month of November, though the the landlord by the notice to quit would expire and the 22nd November—Held, that he notice to quit was waived—Held, also, that the acceptance on the 3rd December of a chaque for that month's rent, although it was not been a waiver. A notice to quit in pursuance of such a special provision may be given for such as such as a s

"Colour of Right." | - An agreement dated the 4th May, 1900, was entered into whereby L, acknowledged that he was a weekly tenant of the premises in question to H., and ant of the premises in question to H., and agreed that his lease might be terminated at any time by "the party of the first part" (evidently an error for "the party of the second part") or by J. O. or J. A. M. A., whom L. acknowledged to be the agents for that purpose of the party "of the first part," meaning H. At that time the property was vested in H., but he was merely a trustee for the railway company. Afterwards the property was conveyed to the company. At the time the notice to quit was served L. was tenant of the premises to the company as landlords under the terms of the agreement of the 4th May, 1900. Notice to quit was served on 1. on the 29th June, 1903, and demand of possession was served upon him on the 15th July following. The tenant attempted to prove an understanding with S. A., one of the agents of the landlords, by which he should be permitted to remain on the premises until the company should build on the land. It was urged that the tenant had a colour of right to the possession of the premises, and that his right could not be tried on this application:—Held, that the tenant occupied the premises in question under a lease from week to week, that it was duly terminated by the landlord, and that the tenant continued to overhold without colour of right after written demand of possession by the landlord. Order to issue for writ of possession. No costs. Whether there is colour of right or not, and what constitutes colour of right, are matters of law to be determined by the Judge: Wright v. Mattison, 59 U. S. R. 50. To constitute a colour of right there must be some bona fide question of right to be tried: Price v. Guinane, 16 O. R. 264. The tenant had not shewn any claim which should be construed as a colour of right. In re Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. and Lechtzier, 23 Occ. N. 339,

Colour of Right—Indefinite Promise.

In answer to a summary proceeding under the Landlords and Tenants Act, R. S. M. 1902, c. 93, to recover possession of the premises in question, which were held under a written lease creating a tenancy from week to week, the tenant gave evidence tending to shew that agents of the landlords had, prior to and at the time of the execution of the lease, agreed and promised orally that the tenant would not be required to give up possession until the landlords would build on the land. This was denied by one of the agents, and the tenant admitted that that agent had refused to put such a term in the lease, although requested to do so:—Held, that the alleged promise, if proved, was of too indefinite a character to support the contention of the tenant that he was not holding over without colour of right. Price v. Guinane, 16 O. R. 294, Gilbert v. Doyle, 24 C. P. 71, and Wright v. Mattison, 59 U. S. R. 50, followed. In re Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. and Lechtzier, 23 Occ. N. 339, 14 Man, L. R. 506.

Demand for Possession-Uncertainty-Evidence of Overholding - Writ of Possession, |-- An application was made by the landlord for a writ of possession against a tenant under the Overholding Tenants Act, R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 174, based on a demand for possession, served on the tenant on the 9th March, 1904, as follows:—"Your lease of the premises expired on March 1st last. You are hereby notified to deliver up said premises to me forthwith." The tenant had held under a lease by deed dated in the year 1901 for a term of 3 years, but, owing to erasures and alterations in the indenture, there was some doubt as to whether or not the tenancy some doubt as to whether or not the transity terminated on the 1st March, 1904, or the 1st May, 1904. Before service of the de-mand the landlord had, on the 1st February, 1904, given to the tenant a three months' notice in writing to quit (not called for by lease) on the 1st May, 1904. On hearing it was contended that no evidence had been given that the tenant had refused after the service on the 9th March, 1904, of the above demand in writing, to go out of possession:—Held, that the written demand for possession was stances, following Re Magann and Bonner, 28 O. R. 37, and Re Snure and Davis, 4 O. L. R. 82, as the case was not one clearly coming within the true intent and meaning of the Act, the application should be refused. In re Myers and Murrans, 24 Occ. N. 186.

Expiry of Lease—Creation of new tenancy—Increased rent—Presumption—Intention of parties. Winnipeg Land and Mortgage Corporation v. Witcher (Man.), 1 W. L. R. 551.

Failure to Give Possession — Holding Over of Previous Tenant.]—The fact that the previous tenant refused to vacate the premises at the expiration of his lease, and that legal proceedings were necessary to effect his ejection, does not relieve the lessor from a claim for damages by the lessee who was prevented from getting possession at the date stipulated in the lease. Lanviere v. Vinct, Q. R. 25 S. C. 338.

Foreible Entry—Costs.]—In an action for damages for forcibly and unlawfully entering the premises occupied by the plaintif, as tenant of the defendant, and ejecting the plaintiff therefrom, the trial Judge found that, although the defendant had technically violated the plaintiff sight of possession, the plaintiff was retaining possession in violation of good faith, and that her evidence as to the circumstances and manner of her removal was untrue—Held, that the trial Judge was justified (following Rice v. Ditmars, 21 N. S. Reps. 140), in depriving the plaintifi of costs. Russell v. Murray, 34 N. S. Reps. 548.

Negotiation for New Tenancy — Tenancy at Will — Notice to Quit — Demand of Possession - Jurisdiction of County Court Judge.]-Upon a review of proceedings taken under the Overholding Tenants Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 171:—Held, that the evidence sustained the finding of the County Court Judge that no completed agreement for a new lease was ever made, but that the tenant held over expecting an agreement would be arrived at. The tenant, overholding after the 1st March, did so with the consent of the landlord pending negotiations. When the negotiations came to an end, the landlord, on the 19th March, served a notice requiring the tenant to give up possession on the 23rd March. Upon the tenant's failure to give up possession on that day, the landlord took proceedings under the Act without further demand of possession:—Held, that the tenant was after the 1st March, a tenant at will; the notice had the effect of extending his right of occupation till the 23rd March; and a demand of possession after that date was necessary to give the County Court Judge jurisdiction under s. 3 of the Act. In re Grant and Robertson, 24 Occ. N, 366, 8 O. L. R. 207, 3 O. W. R. 846.

Notice of Hearing—Affidavit—Prohibition—Waiver.]—On an application under the Overholding Tenants Act by a landlord for possession, a copy of the affidavit filed on the application was not served on the tenant, as directed by s. 4 of the Act. Counsel appeared for the tenant on the return of the application and took this objection, and the application was adjourned to enable a copy of the affidavit to be served. After such service the application was proceeded with, and counsel for the tenant examined and cross-examined witnesses and argued the case, when an order for possession was made:—Held, that the failure to serve a copy of the affidavit was an irregularity which could be and had been waived; and prohibition against the enforcement of the order for possession was refused. In re Devear and Dumas, 24 Occ. N. 300, 8 O. L. R. 141, 4 O. W. R. 110.

Order for Possession - Review by Court — Evidence — Breach of Covenant in Lease — Notice Specifying.] — Under the Overholding Tenants Act, R. S. O. 1897 c, 171. two things must concur to justify the sum-mary interference of the County Court Judge; the tenant must wrongfully refuse to go out of possession, and it must appear to the Judge that the case is clearly one coming under the purview of the Act. It is only the proceedings and evidence before the Judge, sent up pursuant to the certiorari, at which the High Court may look for the purpose of determining what is to be decided under s. 6 of the Act. Where there was nothing in the evidence to shew that the tenant had violated the provision of the lease for breach of which the landlord clamined the right to re-enter, the Court set aside the order of the County Court Judge commanding the sheriff to place the landlord in possession. Per Boyd, C.:-The whole proceeding was nugatory from the outset for the want of a proper notice specifyoutset for the want of a proper notice specifying the breach complained of, as required by s. 13 of the Landlord and Tenants Act, k. Summary Ejectment Act — Purchaser in Default—Tenant at Will.)—W. went into possession of a lot of land under an instrument in writing whereby it was agreed that the purchase money was to be paid in 4 equal instalments in 6, 12, 18, and 24 months. It was also agreed that W. was to be tenant at will, and that he should remain in possession until default in the payment of any of the instalments:—Held, that W. was not a tenant at will, or a tenant for a fixed term, so as to be subject to the provisions of the Summary Ejectment Act, C. S. N. B. c. 83, or amending Acts. Winslow v. Nugent, 36 N. B. Reps. 356.

Summary Proceeding — Forfeiture for Breach of Oosenant.]—This was an application by way of summary proceedings under ss. 13-17 of the Landlords and Tenants Act, R. S., M. 1302 c. 93, as anended by 3 & 4 Edw. VII. c. 29, ss. 1, 2, to recover possession of a hall let to the defendants for 5 years from the 1st November, 1901, at a rental of $15 per month. The lease was in writing under seal, and the lessees by it covenanted that they would not permit the hall to be used for the purposes of dancing, except to lodges rening the hall, and that any breach of that evenant should at once at the option of the lessor operate as a forfeiture of the lease. The lessees having rented the hall to five young men not connected with any lodge for the holding of a dance, the lessor grave them a notice declaring the lease to be forfeited and demanded possession:—Held, following Moore v. Gillies, 28 O. R. 358, that, under the statute as amended, the Judge can now try the right of the tenant to hold over, and that the defendants had forfeited the lease, and that a writ of possession should be issued in the landlord's favour. Summary Proceeding — Monthly Tenancy—Notice to Quit.]—1. Where a lease expressly provides that the tenancy created by it shall be a monthly tenancy, the fact that it also provides what rent shall be paid for each of 16 future months, and more for some months than for others, will not enlarge the rights of the tenant in any way, and the landlord may terminate the tenancy at the expiration of any month by glying a month's notice. 2. A notice to quit signed by one of two owners of the property with the approval of the other, such approval being known to the tenant, will be sufficient, although not expressed to be on behalf of any one except the person giving it. Aslin v. Summersett, I B. & Ad. 135, followed. 3. To put an end to a tenancy at the end of May, a notice served on 30th April is good, although the erroneously dated 1st May. 4. A notice to quit on or before the anniversary of the commencement of the tenancy is good: Sidebotham v. Holland, [1895] I Q. B. 375; although a notice to quit on the last day of the tenancy would also be good. In re Burrowca and hickleson, 24 Occ. N. 326, 14 Man. L. R. 739

Summary Proceeding by Landlord to Obtain Possession — Jurisdiction of County Court Judge—Dispute as to Length of Term—A-phication for Review.]—Motion by William Howard, the tenant, for an order

under sec. 6 of the Overholding Tenants Act, directing the senior Judge of the County Court to send the proceedings, evidence, and exhibits in this matter to the High Court under his hand, and for an order staying all proceedings therein. The application by the landlord. James Lumbers, to the County Court Judge was to recover from the tenant the possession of a shop and dwelling above the shop. It was alleged, the tenant was wrongfully holding possession:—Held, that under sec. 3, sub-sec. 2, of the Act, R. S. O. 1897 ch. 171, the Judge is to "inquire and determine whether the person complained of was tenant to the complainant for a term or period which has expired, . . . and whether the tenant does wrongfully refuse to go out of possession, having no right to continue in possession, or how otherwise." The dispute being as to whether the tenancy was for 3 years or for 5 years, the learned County Court Judge was, on the authority of Moore v. Gillies, 28 O. R. 358, justified in holding that he had jurisdiction to try the right. Having regard to the evidence and the judgment of the learned County Court Judge, this is not a case in which a certiorari should issue, and the motion will therefore be dismissed with costs. In re Lumbors and Howard, 5 O. W. R. 721, 772, 9 O. L. R.

Writ of Possession — Prohibition to County Judge and Sheriff—Certiorari.]—After an order has been made on the landlord's application under 'the Overholding Tenants Act for the issue of a writ of possession, but before the writ has been issued, the tenant applied for an order for the removal of the proceedings into the High Court and for prohibition to the Judge of the County Court and the sheriff:—Held, per Street, J., that proceedings under the Overholding Tenant's Act can be removed into the High Court only when s. 6 of that Act applies; that that section does not apply until a writ of possession has been issued; and therefore that the applicant was not entitled to relief. Per Briton, J., that whether s. 6 is exclusive or not; at least amply protects the tenant's rights, and that the applicant was not entitled to relief either under that section or under the general jurisdiction of the Court. In re Warbrick v. Rutherford, 23 Occ. N. 320, 6 O. L. R. 430, 2 O. W. R. 609, 961.

VII. RENT.

Action for — Abandonment of Part of Claim—Amendment — Desistment—Rescission of Lease,]—Where a plaintiff renounces a part of the conclusions of his action, and amends accordingly, such proceeding on his part is in reality a desistment and must be treated as such. 2. An action for the rescission of a lease is of a different nature from an action for rent, and a plaintiff who has at first simply claimed a certain amount of rent, cannot amend his declaration with the object of asking the rescission of the lease, because such amendment would change the nature of his action. Lechance v. Desbiens, Q. R. 23 S. C. 524.

Action for—Defences — Eviction—Entry by landlord to protect property — Demised premises becoming uninhabitable. Harrod v. Watt (N.W.T.), 1 W. L. R. 216.

Action for—Defence — Disturbance of Possession.]—A tenant being sued for rent may plead that he has not had the peaceable enjoyment of the demised premises, or that he has had only a part enjoyment. Symod of Diocese of Montreal v. Kelly, Q. R. 20 S. C. 19.

Action for—Mortgagee in Possession— —Executor de Son Tort.]—The defendant and her husband resided in a house which be rented from the plaintiff, the rent being payable monthly. At his decease some rent was due, and the defendant remained in the house for another month, when she removed to another house. She was about to take the furniture with her when it was distrained upon for rent due. Under pressure of the distress she paid the rent then due and expenses, and took the furniture, as she said, for the purpose of care and safe keeping, and not as claiming it as her own. No letters of administration were issued. The widow paid the funeral expenses, over $50. The value of the furniture was less than $200. The lease expired on the 1st May, 1900, and it was for the rent which accrued from September, 1899, to the 1st May, 1900, that the plaintiff brought this action. Before the deceased leased the premises they were mortgaged by the plaintiff to a company, which mortgage was then at the time of this action standing on the premises for $2,300. The company on the 27th July, 1899, took possession of the premises as mortgagees, and gave notice to the decensed to pay all future rent to them, which he did. The distress proceedings were taken by the company, and rent collected paid over to the company, and the property was still at the date of the action in the possession of the company, who, as mortgagees, were receiving the rents -Held, that the company, having entered into possession by collecting and receiving the rents of the premises, alone had the legal right, as mortgagees, to take them or to bring an action for the rents due; and the plaintiff could not therefore recover in this action. Morrison v. Jackson, 21 Occ. N.

Action for—Time for Bringing.]—When a gale of rent is payable on a day certain, the tenant has the whole day to pay, and an action begun on that day is premature. Robert v. Gagnon, Q. R. 10 K. B. 237.

Agreement for Lease—Refusal to sign

Agreement for Lease—Possession—Use and occupation. City of Toronto v. Mallon 2 O. W. R. 933.

Gale Accruing after Action—Counterclaim—Damages to tenant's crop—Cattle— Fences — Duty of tenant neighbour—Evidence—Leave to adduce on appeal. Littler v. Berlin Acreage Co., 2 O. W. R. 1153.

Ground Rent—Arrears—Movable or Immovable—Promise to Pay—Acceptance.]—A ground rent established before the coming into force of the Civil Code, even if it were immovable under the law as it existed at the time the rent was settled, has become movable by the operation of the Code, under the provisions of which it is convertible into money, and redeemable, and consequently movable: Arts, 388, 389, 390, 391, C. C. 2. Where there is a personal promise by the purchaser to pay the rent to the vendor at a given date each year, there is a personal liability to pay the amount so soon as the time has elapsed, and the arrears are movable. 3. Acceptance of such promise, by the person by whom the rent was created, is sufficiently established by the fact that he received payments and gave receipts to the purchasers in their own names, and entered them in his books as owing the amount. Laviolette v. Toupin, Q. R. 21 S. C. 538.

Ground Rent — Prescription—Renunciation — Acknowledgment—Heirs—Costs.]—
The prescription of five years applies to arrears of a rente foncière. 2. To effect a renunciation of an acquired prescription, both an acknowledgment of the debt and a promise to pay such debt are necessary. 3. The heirs or legal representatives of a party who bound himself by deed to pay a rente foncière, are not jointly and severally liable for the payment of the rent unless expressly declared to be so. 4. Nor are they jointly and severally liable for the costs of an action brought against them in respect of such rent. Ursuline Reverend Religious Ladies v. Lumpson, Q. R. 22 S. C. 7.

under Execution - Inter-Seizure under Execution — Inter-pleader.]—Where goods are seized under exe-cution on leasehold premises and are claimed by a third party, who establishes his title thereto, the 8 Anne c, 14 does not entitle the landlord to be paid rent by the sheriff. Where, however, goods seized by the sheriff were claimed by a third party, and under an interpleader order were sold and the proceeds paid into Court pending the trial of an issue as to the ownership of the goods, and the trial of a second issue had been directed between the landlord and the execution creditor as to the landlord's right to the rent claimed, and the claimants in the first issue consented to the landlord's claim being satisfied, even if they should be successful in the issue, the landlord was held entitled to be paid out of the fund in Court the arrears of rent not exceeding one year's rent, without awaiting the decision of the issue as to the ownership of the goods. Robinson v. McIntosh, 4 Terr. L. R. 102.

VIII. OTHER CASES.

Arbitration and Award—Valuation of Buildings — Interest on Amount Fixed by Award.]—In a lease of twenty-one years it was provided that the buildings should be valued at the end of the term by three valuators or arbitrators, whose award should be made within the six months next preceding the 1st November, 1900, and the value paid by the lessor within six months from that date, with interest from that date. Valuators or arbitrators were duly appointed, and possession given by the lessees on the 31st October, 1900, the last day of the term, but the award was not made until the 30th November, 1901:—Held, that the lessees were entitled to interest on the value of the buildings, as ascertained by the award, from the 1st November, 1900. Toronto General Trusts Corporation v. White, 22 Occ. N. 178, 30. L. R. 519, 1 O. W. R. 198, 760.

Bons for Improvements — Rent by Anticipation—Concellation of Lease—Recovery of Bonus—Commercial Establishment—Civil Contract.]—A sum of $300 paid by the tenant to the landlord as a bonus for improvements made to the demised premises, is equivalent to an additional rent paid by anticipation. 2. If the lease is afterwards by a judgment, cancelled at the suit of the tenant, for default of the landlord to make repairs which it is his duty to make, the latter wii be ordered to pay back such boaus in the same way as any other rent paid by anticipation. 3. The letting of an immovable for a commercial establishment is a purely civil contract. Coté v, Cantin, Q. R. 21 S. C. 432.

Claim for Cancellation of Lease— Questioning Landlord's Title.]— A tenant who has had peaceable enjoyment of an immovable leased to him, cannot demand the cancellation of the lease and damages on the ground that a third person, who has not disturbed him in his enjoyment, is the owner of a part of such immovable. Charpentier v, Quebec Bank, Q. R. 21 S. C. 296.

Destruction of Building-Fire . Destruction of Building—Fire — Accident—Negligence—Presumption of Fault—Burden of Proof,]—One of the covenants of the lease from plaintiff to defendant provided that the tenant should deliver up the premises, at the expiration of the lease, "in as good order, state and condition as the same may be found in at the commencement of the same, reasonable, were read tern and of the same, reasonable wear and tear, and accidents by fire, excepted." The building was destroyed by a fire, the origin or cause of which was not definitely determined. In an action by the lessor to recover from the lessee the value of the building destroyed, less the amount of the insurance money received :- Held, affirming the judgment in Q. R. 21 S. C. 1, that a fire in the leased premises, the cause of which is unknown, or not legally proved, is an accident within the meaning of the above-mentioned clause in the lease excepting "accidents by fire." 2. In such case there is no presumption of fault such case there is no presumption of rautragainst the lessee, where a fire occurs the origin of which is unknown, but rather a presumption of absence of fault, and the burden of proving fault is on the lessor. 3. Even assuming that the burden of proving absence of fault was on the lessee, he had succeeded in doing so in the present case. Ford v. Phillips, Q. R. 22 S. C. 296.

Expiry of Term.—Ejectment — Right to remove machinery.—Trade fixtures.—Wooden buildings.—Compensation for buildings not removed.—Provisions of lease. Cartwright v. Herring, 3 O. W. R. 511.

Insurance Premium—Change in use of Building.]—An action brought by a tenant sainst his landlord for the recovery of the eccess of an insurance premium paid by him, when, in the course of the year for which such insurance was effected, he changed the destination of the building, and gave proper notice of such change. Benard v. Préfonding, 60, P. R. 327.

Repair of Premises—Injury to Third Person.]—A tenant, bound by the terms of his lease to make grosses reparations, is not responsible (as between himself and his landlord) for an accident to a third person happening on the premises which he occupies as tenant, when he has not been guilty of negligence on his part, and the accident has happened by reason of faulty construction of a structure upon the premises. Allan v. Fortier, Q. R. 20 S. C. 50.

Trespass to Demised Premises—Action by Tenant—Assertion of Title by Defendant—Landlord Brought in en Garantie.]
—Where a tenant has sued a third person, in this case one of the other tenants of the same property, for a trespass, and the third person pleads that the tenant has not the right of enjoyment which he claims under his lease, but that he (the defendant) alone has such right, the tenant may call upon his landlord to defend him against this contention of the defendant. Hamilton v. Royal Land Co., Q. R. 24 S. C. 411.

Waste — Cutting Timber—Justification under Oral Agreement — Evidence to Vary Lease-Findings of Judge-Appeal.] plaintiff leased to his sons S. J. M. and W. S. M., for the period of one year, and thereafter from year to year, the farm occupied by him, to be held by them in proportions stated, the consideration being that the sons should reside with their father and pay him a specified sum in money yearly, in addition to furnishing him with sufficient food and clothing, etc., for himself and his wife. In an action against S. J. M. for cutting down trees on the portion of the land held by him, trees on the portion of the hand new by man, the defendant sought to give evidence of an oral agreement that, in consideration of the transfer of part of his land to W. S. M., he was to have the land upon which the trees were cut during the plaintiff's lifetime and in fee after his death: —Held, that the evidence was inadmissible as varying or contradicting the terms of the lease in writing; and, the trial Judge having found the facts against the defendant, as to the agreement with the plaintiff in relation to the lot of land upon which the cutting took place, and the evilence being of a contradictory character. that there was no good reason for disturbing the findings on this branch of the case. Meisner v. Meisner, 37 N. S. Reps. 23.

Barrister and Solicitor—Admission of One from Another Province—Term of Service — Legal Professions Act.] — To come within the exception in s.-s. 5 of s. 57 of the Legal Professions Act, it is not necessary that the applicant should have been a graduate at the time he commenced to study law, or that his term of study or service was shortened because he was a graduate. An applicant who obtained his degree after call of admission would come viithin the exception. Calder v. Law Society of British Uniwibia, 9 B. C. R. 56.

Barrister and Solicitor — University Graduate — Legal Professions Act.] — The applicant matriculated at the University of Dalhousie, Halifax, Nova Scotia, in August, 1892, and an L.L.B. degree was conferred on him by the University on the 23rd April, 1895; in March, 1892, he began to study law and signed articles in Nova Scotia, and on the 2nd April, 1895, he was called and admission, he was employed two years in the office of a Halifax firm of barristers and solicitors. The term of service under articles in Nova Scotia for call and admission is ordinarily four years, but in case of a college graduate it is three years. In British Columbia, a graduate, in order to have his law course shortened, must be a graduate at the time he commenced to study law:—Held, per McColl, C.J., that the fact that the applicant was graduated after he was called in Nova Scotia precluded the circumstance of his being a graduate from having shortened his term of study. Quere, whether the plaintiff would have succeeded if he had graduated before the 2nd April, 1895. In re King and Law Society of British Columbia, 22 Occ. N. 154, 8 B. C. R. 356.

Charge on Land—Beneficial Ownership —Parol Trust—Mortgage—Priorities—Voluntary Conveyances.)—The defendant, who had been for some years in possession of a farm purchased by his father with the intention of giving it to him, purchased a machine from the manufacturers, giving his notes therefor, and at the same time executed a document (which was registered) in which it was stated that the land had been so "willed" to him that he had a good title thereto, and would not further incumber it, and he thereby charged it with the payment of the notes. The father subsequently conveyed the land to the defendant, but upon the condition of his executing a mortgage, which he did to certain persons who had advanced moneys to him. The defendant, on the ground that the land had been conveyed to him on an alleged trust for his family, conveyed it to his wife, the consideration being $1 and love and affection, and the wife, for the like consideration, conveyed it to an infant son:—Held, that the charge in favour of the manufacturers was enforceable against the defendant and those claiming under him,

subject to the mortgage, and the evidence displacing any trust in favour of the defendant's family, the conveyances by the defendant and his wife must be treated as merely voluntary and subject to the plaintiff's charge. Abell v. Middleton, 2 O. L. R. 200.

Charge on Land-Unregistered Docu-Charge on Land—Unrepsitered Documents—Land Held Temporarily by Debtor as Trustee—Subsequent Conveyance to Person Entitled—Notice.]—J. R., one of the defendants, owned a half section of land which she conveyed to her son, the defendant A. G. R., who mortgaged it to a loan company. While the title was so vested company. While the title was so vested in A. G. R., he purchased a threshing machine and engine from the plaintiff's agent, and signed an unregistered document charging the land for the price, on which this action was brought. Later on A. G. R. mortgaged the half section to another loan company; he paid off the first mortgage and reconveyed the land to J. R. for an expressed consideration of $100; that conveyance was registered. After the reconveyance to J. R. this action was brought for payment by A. G. R. of the balance due on the machine and to have the balance due on the machine and to have it declared that under the unregistered docu-ment the plaintiffs had a charge on the half section for the unpaid purchase money due them for the machines; that J. R. knew of the plaintiffs' lien under the document signed by A. G. R.; and that the conveyance from the latter to her should be set aside and the land sold to satisfy the plaintiffs' claim. defence set up that A. G. R. was under 21 when he executed the unregistered document when he executed the unregistered documents in the plaintiffs' favour, that the conveyance from J. R. to A. G. R. was given voluntarily to enable him to raise the money under the first morigage that he put on it, and on the condition that, when so required by J. R., he would reconvey to her, and that the reconveyance complained of was made pursuant to that understanding and on the actual purpose of $100 which A. G. R. cynoted tual payment of $100 which A. G. R. exacted before he would reconvey:—Held, on the evidence, that the allegation that A. G. R. was under 21 when he executed the unregistered document, was not proved; also, that J. R. conveyed to her son A. G. R. to enable him to put on the first mortgage and in trust to reconvey to her after so doing; and that she was entitled to the reconveyance from him. Judgment against A. G. R. for the debt, but action dismissed as against J. R. with a declaration that the plaintiffs had no claim on the land. Fairchild v. Ray, 24 Occ.

Goods of Lodger—Money due for Medical Services.)—The right of retention of the movale effects of a lodger can only be exercised by the persons specially mentioned in Art. 1816 (a.), C. C. 2. One who has made himself responsible to a physician for professional services rendered to a lodger, has not a right of retention of the effects of the talle of such services. Goulet t. Brunelle, 5 Q. P. R. 223.

Husband and Wife—Expenses of Last Illness of Wife—Lien of Physician on Property of Husband — Registration—Priortics.] — A physician has no lien upon the goods of the husband for his charges in respect to the last Illness of the wife. 2. Repair of Ship—Possessory lien—Parting with possession—What amounts to—Floating ships on navigable waters—Caretaker for owner, Hackett v, Coghill, 2 O. W, R, 1077, 3 O. W, R, 827.

Thresher's Lien on Grain—Measurements—Weights and Measures Act—Hiegativp—"Dealing,"]—The defendant contracted with the plaintiff to thresh his grain at a price per bushel. The quantity threshed was not measured with a Dominion standard measure, or weighed, but was subsequently ascertained by the defendant by cubic measurement—Held, that so measuring the grain was not a "dealing" within the meaning of ... 21 of the Weights and Measures Act, which could relate back and render the contract void, and that the defendant was not therefore disentitled to a lien under the Threshers Lien Ordinance. Macdonald v. Corrigal, 9 Man. L. R. 284, and Manitoba Electric and Gas Light Co. v. Gerrie, 4 Man. L. R. 210, considered. Judgmeut of Wetmore, J., 22 Occ. N. 345, reversed. Conn v. Fitzgerald, 5 Terr. L. R. 345.

Thresher's Lien on Grain—Price of Threshing other Grain — Seizure of Excessive Quantity — Notice of Claim of Lien.]—A thresher cannot, under the Threshers' Lien Act, 57 V. c. 36, maintain a lien on grain for the threshing of which he has been paid, to recover the price of a subsequent unpaid threshing. The plaintiff, by his notice put up on the granary, asserted his claim to a lien upon all the grain contained in it, which was worth about $86; but the Court found that the amount of the claim for threshing for which he could, under the Act, at the time of the posting of the notice, enforce a lien on such grain, if the proper steps were taken, was only about $26:—Held, that the quantity of grain which the plaintiff attempted to retain was unreasonably large for the amount owing, and that, under s. 2 of the Act, he had forfeited his right of retention of any of it. Simpson v. Oakes, 23 Occ. N. 34, 14 Man, L. R. 262.

Woodman's Lien—Collusion—Froud — Appeal — Attachment—Demand — Service
—Sheriff's Fees.]—In proceedings under the Woodman's Lien Act, 1894, an order allowing the claimants' lien will be set aside if the evidence discloses an attempt on the part of the claimants acting in collusion with the defendant to defrauld the owners, notwithstanding that the Judge in the Court below has found that the evidence established the claimants' lien. Under s. 6 of the Act there must be a demand of the specific amount due before the issue of the attachment. Where attachments for three claims are served by the sheriff at the same time and place, the sheriff is entitled to full fees, including mileage, on each writ. Murchie v. Fraser, 36
N. B. Reps. 161.

Woodmen's Lien Act — "Logs and Timber"—Contractor—Bond — Estoppel.] —The appeliant, under a contract in writing made by him with the respondent, for an agreed price per thousand, cut upon the land of the respondent a quantity of logs, and hauled them to a portable mill upon the land, where they were manufactured into deals, planks, &c. The work was performed in part by the appellant himself with his team, though there was no stipulation to that effect between the parties, but chiefly by labouers and teams, by the terms of the contract hired and paid by the appellant. A portion of the amount due to the appellant under the agreement being unpaid, he caused an attachment to be placed upon the above mentioned deals, planks, &c., claiming a lien thereupon by virtue of the Woodmen's Lien Act. 1894:

—Held, that the words "logs and timber," as employed in s.-s. 1 of s. 2 of the Act, were not intended to include deals and other manufactured lumber; also, that the evidence shewed the appellant to be a contractor, and nor within the class of persons for whose benefit, by s. 3, liens were established; also, per Hanington, J., that the respondent by giving a bond in order to secure the payment of the amount claimed if the lien should prove effectual, and thus obtaining a release of the deals, &c., attached, did not estop himself from disputing the validity of the lien. Baster v. Kennedy, 35 N. B. Reps. 179.

Woodman's Lien — Lumber.]—By the Woodman's Lien for Wages Act, B. C., no lien is given to saw-mill men, but only to those engaged in getting timber out of the forest. Davidson v. Frayne, 9 B. C. R. 369.

Woodman's Lien—Notice of Lien—Effect —Owner of Limits.)—A person who has done work for the jobber of a lumberman, and given the notice required by art. 1994c, C. C., is a creditor of the latter. Rhéaume v. Batiscan River Lumber Co., Q. R. 23 S. C. 71.

Woodman's Lien—Notice — Necessity for.]—The notice which a woodman must give to a contractor in order to be able to maintain his lien upon the wood which he has cut, is not necessary when such contractor has recognized in writing the debt due to the woodman, and has given him an order for payment upon the owner of the wood. Harvey v. Harvey, Q. R. 19 S. C. 153.

Woodman's Lien—Statute — Limitation to Wage-carners—Exclusion of Contractors—Insolvency—Time for Filing of Lien—Saisie-conservatore — Identification of Property—Property Passing,]—The plaintiff, a sub-contractor under the defendant, made a certain number of ties during the winter of 1901-2. The defendant had these ties made for one S. The plaintiff, not having been paid, issued a writ of saisie-conservatore against the defendant and seized all the wood which the defendant had in hand for S., which wood was in a boom upon a river, without making S. a party. The latter intervened and contested the seizure:—Held, that the statute which creates a lien constitutes an exception to the common law and must receive a strict interpretation; it is for the person asserting the lien to establish that it exists by reason of the special statute creating it. 2. The lien given by Art. 1904 (c), C.C., applies only to wood-cutters or labourers and extends only to the payment of their wages, and does not apply to contractors or sub-contractors in respect of payment of their contract price or advances or disbursements made by them. 3. One who, under a contract or sub-contract, cuts wood upon his own property, converts it by his work into ties, logs, etc., and delivers it to the person with whom he has counted, cannot claim in respect of this wood the lien given by Art, 1994 (c), even when the value of the wood is trifling. 4. In the case of insolvency, the lien of the vendor must be asserted within 30 days after the delivery of the wood; a saisle-conservatoire issued after the expiry of this time cannot be maintained. 5. The lien of the vendor can only be exercised when the goods sold remain in the possession of the purchaser in the same state, and when the identity can be stated in a clear and certain manner. 6. The afficing of the trade mark of dealers in wood upon logs which have been got out for them by contractors, is a sufficient taking of possession and a proof of the transfer of the property in the logs. Dallaire v. Gauther, Q. R. 24 S. C. 495.

Woodman's Men.—Subject of Lien—Hire of Horse,]—The lien given by Art. 1994c, C. C., is given only to a workman who has worked in getting out the wood, and he has it only, for his wages; it is not given to one who is merely a creditor for the hire of a horse employed to cart the wood. Boundary—Absence of Enclosure—Occasional Acts of Ownership—Ecidence—Rejection.]—In a question of boundary between two persons claiming under a paper title, where there has been no enclosure, occasional acts, which would be merely acts of trespass if done by one not the owner, do not operate to give a statutory title; and evidence of such acts offered by the defendant was in this case properly rejected. Character of Possession—Occupation of house as compensation for services. Conter v. Coulter, 4 O. W. R. 65.

Colourable Title — Possession — Evidence, — The possession of a part of land claimed under colour of title is constructive possession of the whole, which may ripen into an indefensible title, if open, exclusive, and continuous for the whole statutory period. Carrying on lumbering operations during successive winters with no acts of possession during the remainder of each year does not constitute continuous possession. And it is not exclusive where other persons lumbered on the land, continuously or at intervals, during any portion of such period. Wood v. Lebbanc, 24 Occ. N. 266, 34 S. C. R. 627.

Description — Possession Beyond Boundaries—Deed—Plan—Length of Possession.]—
In June, 1808, by deed of gift, P. granted to his son F. an emplacement, described by mates and bounds, and stated to have thirty feet frontage, "tel que le tout est actuellement et que l'acque-cru dit bien connaître," declaring, in the deed, that the donation had actually been made in 1860, although no deed had been executed, and that since then F. had been in possession as owner:—Held, that the deed in 1808 operated as an interruption of prescription and limited the title to the thirty feet of frontage as therein described. A similar description in a deed of 1885, by F. to the plaintiff's wife, which made a reference to the number on a plan, thereby implying a greater width, left the true limits of emplacement subject to a determination according to the title held by the plaintiff's auteur, which granted only thirty feet of frontage; that, by the registered title, the plaintiff was charged with either actual or implied notice of this fact; and that, consequently, he had not, in good faith, possessed more than the thirty feet of frontage under this deed, and could not invoke an acquisitive prescription of title to the disputed six feet by ten years' possession thereunder; and further, that no augmentation of the lands originally granted could take place in consafter, used in the deed of gift, cannot be larterpreted in contradiction of the special description that precedes them, and can only be construed as extending "dans les limites ci-dessus décrites." A prescriptive title to lands beyond the boundaries limited by the prescription in the deed of conveyance can only be acquired by thirty years' possession. Chalifour v. Parent, 21 Occ, N. 332, 31 S. C. R. 224.

Grant to Uses-Deed of Appointment-Intervening Adverse Possession.]—The purchaser of land in 1870 had it conveyed by the vendor to grantees named by him, to hold to such uses as the purchaser should by deed or will appoint, and, in default of and until appointment, to the use of the grantees. The purchaser put his mother in possession of the land, and she remained in possession till her death in 1878, her two daughters, the defendants, living with her, and they after her death continued in possession down to time of the bringing of this action in 1897, no rent having been paid, nor any acknow-ledgment of title made. In 1892 the pur-chaser, in alleged exercise of the power, executed a deed of appointment in favour of his solicitor, who, on the following day, conveyed to him in fee simple. He died in 1894, having devised the land to the plaintiffs:— Held, that the grantees to uses took an estate in fee simple, which was barred before the execution of the deed of appointment, and that that deed did not give a new starting point to the statute, the estate appointed not being, within the meaning of the statute, a future estate coming into existence at the time of the exercise of the power. Landlord and Tenant—Limitation of Act—Institution—Teal Property Limitation Act—Tenant Paying no Rent—Payment of Taxes—Insufficiency to Prevent Statute Running—Mortgage—Costs—Counterclaim—Right of Way.]—The patent from the Crown granting the lands to defendant Finley issued on 5th August, 1870. Thereafter Finley built on the lands a row of 4 houses, one of which, that now in question, defendant Joyce entered into possession of about 1st November, 1875, as tenant of Finley, at a rental of $150 a year.

Joyce had been tenant of Finley in another house for some years.

These arrears he seems to have been paying up for some years after his removal, but he never, unless by way of paying the taxes and water rates, which are collected as taxes in Ottawa, where the land was, paid any rent for the new house. The payment of taxes being compulsory, it was impossible to attribute their payment over so many years to a casual conversation or temporary arrangement, and could not operate so as to prevent the bar of the Statute of Limitations; see McCowan v. Armstrong, 3 O. L. R. at p. 107, 1 O. W. R. 28. The action as against Joyce dismissed in respect of the land set out in his statement of defence. Brennan v. Finley, 5 O. W. R. 251, 9 O. L. R. 131.

Mortgage — Payments on — Insurance Premium—Entries in Books—Acknowledg-ments in Writing—Remedy on Bond—Absentee.]-A mortgage and bond given by G. to C. to secure the repayment of a of money were dated the 7th January, 1877. The last payment of interest was made in September, 1879. C. was absent from the province when the mortgage and bond were given, and did not return until 1880. The plaintiffs, as executors of C., on the 30th June, 1900, brought two actions: (1) to foreclose the mortgage and to recover the amount secured by the mortgage and bond; and (2) to obtain possession of the land. The only defence set up to both actions was that of the Statute of Limitations. Under one of the clauses of the mortgage the mortgage was empowered to make payment of insurance premiums, in default of payment by the mortgagor, and "to charge such payments with interest at the rate aforesaid upon the mortgaged premises," but there was no provision, in terms, making the advance a part of the principal sum secured by the mortgage:

—Held, that the effect of the provision was merely to make the advance a lien upon the land for its payment with interest, and was only in the nature of a further charge or additional mortgage. The repayment by the mortgagor of the amount advanced was not such a payment on account of the principal sum secured as would take the case out of the Statute of Limitations. An entry in the books of the solicitor for the mortgagee shewing the payment of the amount advanced for insurance, and the subsequent repayment of the amount, was not sufficient evidence of an advance by and repayment to the mortgagee. such entries being consistent with the view that the solicitor advanced the money on his own account on the credit of the mortgagor. Renewal receipts for premiums of insurance, taken in connection with a clause in the policy making the loss, if any, payable to the mortgagee, were not acknowledgments in writing within s. 21 of the statute. Held, also, following Sutton v. Sutton, 22 Ch. D. 511, and Steward v. England, [1895] 2 Ch. 820, that the limitation imposed by s. 21 of the Act applied as well to the remedy on the bond as to that under the mortgage against the land. Cogswell v. Grant, 21 Occ. Municipal Corporations-Cemetery-Deed of Burial Lot—Trespass—R. S. O. 1897, c. 223, s. 577.]—The plaintiff was the widow of J., who was buried in lot 18, block 1, of the cemetery of the town of Palmerston, in 1884. The defendant municipality held the cemetery under s.-ss. 8 and 9 of s. 490 of 46 V. c. 18 (O.), now R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, s. 577. By deed, dated the 26th August, 1885, the defendant municipality conveyed to the plaintiff lot 98, habendum "to her and her heirs and assigns to and for her and their sole and only use forever. were no other terms in the deed. In June. 1888, the defendant municipality caused the body to be removed from lot 98 and buried in some lot, now unknown, and sold lot 98 to the defendant H., whose deceased wife was buried in it on the 20th of that month, and the defendants, by deed dated the 19th June. 1888, similar in terms to that given to the plaintiff, conveyed the lot to H., who in June, 1889, erected a monument and put up an iron fence, both of which still remained. This action was brought for damages for trespass and removal of the body of the plaintiff's husband, for a declaration of title. and a mandamus to compel the defendants to remove the body of the wife of the defendant H. and to replace the body of J. At the trial, it having appeared impossible to discover the whereabouts of the body of the deceased J., the relief sought by mandamus was abandoned, the defendants undertaking supply the plaintiff with another lot:-eld, assuming the deed to the plaintiff to Held. be valid, and that it passed the fee, that the causes of action were barred by the Statute of Limitations, the trespass having been com mitted more than six years before action, and the defendant H. having been in possession the derendant H. having been in possession for more than ten years since his erection of the monument and the iron fence, which within the authorities, were acts of owner-ship.—Quere, as to the validity of both deeds under the statute (R. S. O. c. 223), because they were simple conveyance in few. cause they were simply conveyances in fee, without limitation or restriction, and therefore in violation of its provisions. Steen-son v. Nature of Possession—Acts of Ownership.)—The acts relied on in support of a claim to title by possession were that the claimant had sold the timber off the land in question; had afterwards cleared it, and had sowed and harvested one crop of wheat; had then for some years taken hay from it; and had then used it as pasture land. The land was not wholly enclosed, one end being bounded by a marsh, and through this marsh cattle could and did stray into it:—Held,

Parent and Child-Tenancy at Will-Right of Entry-Commencement of Statute-Caretakers—Entry by Consent—Assessment—Agreement—Concealment of Facts—Family Arrangement - Will - Devise - Charge -Arrangement — Will — Devise — Charge Election—Mistake.]—In 1879 the defendant was put by his father in possession of a farm of which the title was in the father, who said he had bought it for the son. The defendant continued in possession until his father's death in 1900, occupying for his own benefit, taking the profits, paying no rent, and giving no acknowledgment of title; he also made improvements at his own expense. There was no evidence that the defendant was a care-taker or servant:—Held, that the father's title was extinguished before his death by the Real Property Limitation Act. The defendant became upon his entry a tenant at will, and that tenancy never having in fact been determined, the father's right of entry first accrued at the expiration of one year, the defendant became a tenant at sufferance. The effect of s. 5, s.-s. 7, of R. S. O. c. 133, is that it is for the purposes of the statute only that the tenancy at will is to be deemed determined at the expiration of a year. But there was no entry by the father sufficient to prevent the running of the statute; a visit to the son, not being against his consent, would not be such an entry. The assessment of both father and son in 1882, at the request of the son, as freeholders of the farm, was not evidence of a new tenancy at will. Doe d. Bennett v. Turner, 7 M. & W. 226, distinguished. An agreement made a few days after the death of the father between the devisees and legatees under his will, whereby the defendant admitted that the father was the owner of the farm, and agreed to abide by the will, which devised the farm to him charged with a large sum, was not under the circumstances set out in the case, even when viewed as a family arrangement, binding on the defendant. Fane v. Fane, L. R. 20 Eq. 698, applied and followed. Held, also, that if there was any election by the defendant to take under the will, it was made under a mistake as to the defendant's rights; and besides, if the agreement fell, what the defendant did which was relied on as being an election, being a part of the same transaction, must fall with it. McCowan v. Armstrong, 22 Occ. N. 55, 3 O. L. R. 100.

Possession—Both Parties Claiming Title by—Findings of Jury.]—Where each party is seeking to make a title to land by possession, the Court will not interfere with the findings of the jury unless the verdict is one which, the whole of the evidence being reasonably viewed, could not properly have been found. Wood v. Le Blanc, 36 N. B. Reps. 47.

Possession—Title.]—In 1821 M. obtained a grant of land from the Crown, and in 1823 permitted his eldest son to enter into possession. The latter built and lived on the land and cultivated a large portion of it for more than ten years, when he removed to a place a few miles distant, after which he pastured cattle on it and put up fences from time to time. His father died before he left the land. In 1870 he deeded the land to his four sons, who sold it in 1873, and by different conveyances the title passed to P. in 1884. In 1896 the descendants of the younger children of M. gave a deed to B., who proceeded to cut timber from it. In an action of trespass by P.:—Held, that the jury at the trial were justified in limding that the eldest son of M. had the sole and exclusive possession of the land for 20 years before 1870, and that his possession had ripened into a title. If not, the deed to his sons in 1870 gave them exclusive possession, and, if they had not a perfect title then, they had twenty years after, in 1890. Bentley v. Peppard, 23 Occ. N. 212, 33 S. C. R. 444.

Possession as Against Mortgagee— Foreclosure Decree.]—In an action for pos-session of land the plaintiff's title was derived under a sheriff's deed made under direction of the Court in foreclosure proceedings, and dated 23rd July, 1896. The defendant relied upon the Statute of Limitations, and gave evideace of more than-twenty years' possession of the land in dispute without payment of rent or acknowledgment of title. It appearing that the defendant went into possession at a date subsequent to the date of the mortgage under which the plaintiff claimed:—Held, that the defendant could not acquire title by possession against the mort-gagee so long as the mortgage was kept alive. It is enacted by the Statute of Limitations. R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 167, s. 23, that "any person entitled to or claiming under a mortgage of land may make an entry or bring an action to recover such land at any time within twenty years next after the last payment of the principal money or interest secured by such mortgage, although more than twenty years have elapsed since the time at which the right to make such entry or bring such action first accrued:"-Held that the granting of the decree of foreclosure was an adjudication that, at that date, the mortgage was in force, and that, therefore, the plaintiff's title came under the provisions of the section quoted. Held, also, that a third party could not, by a possession of twenty years, acquire title notwithstanding the provisions of the statute, and that plain-tiff's title could not be defeated by defendant's possession, even although it were shewn to be of a more definite kind than was disclosed by the evidence. Tenants in Common-Death of Co-tenant Adverse Possession by Survivor.]-Land was conveyed in fee to two brothers as tenants in common. One brother died on the 9th May, 1876, intestate, leaving him surviving his co-tenant, his mother, and three sisters, of whom the plaintiff was one. The mother died on the 5th September, 1876. The surviving brother had from the time of his brother's death until his own death on the 8th November, 1896, exclusive possession and use of the land, and the receipt of the rents and profits therefrom without accounting. He and his sisters lived together on premises situated elsewhere until his marriage in 1890. He always contributed to their support, but the contributions were not meant, and were not understood, to be a share to the sisters in the rents and profits of the land. In a suit commenced on the 21st September, 1899, by the plaintiff for the partition of the land: —Held, that the plaintiff's title was extinguished by C. S. N. B. c. 84, s. 13. Ramsay V. Ramsay, 21 Occ. N. 133, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 179.

Title-Cancellation of Deed-Cloud-Plan and Survey-Acts of Ownership-State of Nature-Fences-Commencement of Statutory Period—Knowledge of True Owner.]— The plaintiff claimed cancellation of a deed as a cloud on his title to 14 acres of land. and an injunction and damages in respect of trespass:—Held, upon an examination of the defendant's title deeds, that they did not in fact convey the 14 acres, nor profess to do so, and the plaintiff was not entitled to can-cillation of the deed. Upon the evidence, the plaintiff had established his proper title to the 14 acres, and had sufficiently proved the correctness of a survey and plan shewing the correctness of a survey and plan activated the 14 acres were outside the land covered by the defendant's title deeds. The 14 acres had never been built upon, or the land of the land cleared, or cultivated, or resided upon. defendant relied upon the building of a brush fence along the south limit in 1880, by his predecessor in title. At that time, the title was still in the heirs of the patentee, who had never taken possession :- Held, that who had hever taken possession:—the building of the fence was of no significance as an act of ownership. Being built on the land while it belonged to the heirs of the patentee, it became their property, and the plaintiff naving become the owner, and having entered in 1888, before the statu-tory period had run, it became his property absolutely. Acts done since 1888, such as cutting and removing wood, and pasturing cattle, being intermittent and isolated, were merely occasional acts of trespass and 'nsufficient to constitute possession of the kind required by the statute to bar the true owner. Semble, also, that the land being in a state of nature, and there being no evidence that the grantee of the Crown, or his heirs or assigns, had taken actual possession, by residing upon or cultivating any thereof, until the plaintiff acquired the title of the heirs in 1887, or that hey or any of them had any knowledge before that date of the land having been in the actual possession of the defendant or of any one under whom he claimed, even if the defendant's acts amounted to possession, he could not claim to have acquired a title to it, for in such a case time runs from knowledge by the true owner of the entry on his land, and must have run for 20 years to bar his title, Judgment of Teetzel, J., 2 O. W. R. 486, re-

Title-Conveyance of Fee-Reservation of Life Estate—Possession — Ejectment—Evidence, J—In October, 1833, D, conveyed to his father and two sisters 6 acres of land for their lives or the life of the survivor. A few days later he conveyed a block of land to M. in fee, "saving and excepting" thereout 6 acres for the life of the grantor's father and sisters, or that of the survivor, or until the marriage of the sisters, on the happening of said respective events, the 6 acres to be and remain the property of M., his heirs and assigns, under said deed. Three months later M, conveyed the block of land to R. M. in and when the life estate terminated in 1903 the latter brought ejectment against the heirs of the life tenants, who claimed the acres, on the ground that the deed to M. contained no grant of the same, and also because the life tenants had had adverse possession for more than 20 years:-Held, that, as the evidence shewed that the life tenants went into possession under R. M., the title of the latter could not be disputed, and the statute would not begin to run until the life estate terminated: — Held, per Idington, J., that R. M. under his deed and that to his grantor had the reversion to the f in the 6 acres after the life estate terminated, lease of the life estate was given to R. M. with the other title deeds on conveyance of the land to him, and it was received in evidence as an ancient document relating to the title and coming from proper custody. It was not executed by the lessees, and no counterpart was proved to be in existence:-Held, that it was properly admitted in evidence. Dods v. McDonald, 25 Occ. N. 117, 36 S. C. R. 231.

B. 143.] If Sootheran had never re-conveyed to defendants, his legal right of entry under their deed to him, though no doubt defeasible by their equity to a reconveyance, would also in time be barred by the operation of the Statute of Limitations, upon their continued possession adverse to the legal title he had acquired under their deed. If the deed which was in fact made was avoided by plaintiffs for the purpose of supporting their registered title, and was to be treated as void ab initio, defendants possession must also be treated as having been adverse to Sootheran from the commencement, and plaintiffs, having avoided the deed for one purpose, cannot set it up for another in order to give a character to such possession which, in the absence of the deed, would not attach to it. The defendants had acquired a good title under the Statute of Limitations before the commencement of the action, and, therefore, with all respect, the appeal should be allowed, McVity v. Tremuth, 5 O. W. R. 123, 9 O. L. R. 105.

Title by Possession to Undivided Half of Lot—Husband and Wife—Joint Occupancy—Rights of Husband Surviving Wife—Declaration of Title—Rights of True Owner.]—On and after 1st March, 1872, Ruport were the owners as tenants in common of the south-west quarter of the lot, containing 50 acres, and Adam Ruport alone was in possession. He died on 30th March, 1872, having by his will devised his undivided half to his wife Caroline Ruport for life. He made no disposition of the remainder, and died without issue; consequently the remainder descended to his father, Levi Ruport. After Adam's death his widow continued in possession of the whole parcel. On 4th March, 1873, she intermarried with plaintiff, and they continued in sole possession until 24th December, 1887, when they conveyed the 24th December, 1887, when they conveyed the south half of the south-west quarter to de-fendant Benque Ruport, who entered into possession thereof. Plaintiff and his wife continued in possession of the whole of the north-west quarter during their joint lives. On 3rd March, 1903, plaintiff is wife died on and March, 1993, plaintin's wife died without issue, and plaintiff has remained in possession of the whole. Levi Ruport died in the year 1885, leaving a will whereby he devised his undivided estate in remainder to defendant Beaque Ruport. Upon the death of plaintiff's wife, defendant Beaque Ruport became entitled, as devisee of his father, to the undivided one-half of which she was tenant for life, and he claimed that he was the owner of the other undivided half, notwithstanding the possession commencing with that of plaintiff's wife from 30th March, 1872, and continuing until her death on 3rd March, 1903:—Held, Maclennan and Maclaren, JJ.A., dissenting, that the plaintiff's marriage was after the coming into force of the Married Women's Property Act, 1872. His wife was in sole possession, and, as against defendant Beaque Ruport's undivided half, the Statute of Limitations had begun to run in her favour. The possession was in her. and it was such as was capable of ripening into a title under the statute as against Beaque Ruport. It was an interest in real estate which was capable of transmission by will or by transfer inter vivos. As againt everybody but Beaque Ruport she was the owner in fee. This interest in real estate was secured to her on her marriage by virtue of the 1st section of the Married Women's Property Property Act, 1872. She owned it at the time of her marriage, and it was hers to be held and cally the first of the second of the second of the separate use free from any estate or claim of plaintiff. The marriage did not disturb her right or interest in the estate. Neither could her husband's possessite. sion, for she was in possession at the same The possession which she had begun against Beaque was continued by her notwithstanding her coverture. She made no assignment or transfer of her rights or interests or any part of them to plaintiff. Plain-tiff could not become seised or entitled jointly with his wife, and thus acquire some of her rights, simply because they lived together on the land, any more than he could thus acquire her estate in other lands owned by her at the time of the marriage, 1But for the fact that there was a lawful marriage, the nature of plaintiff's possession resembles that of the person who had gone through the ceremony with the wife of plaintiff in McArthur v. Egleson, 43 U. C. R. 406, 3 A. R. 577. As against defendant Beaque Ruport, therefore, the possession was that of plaintiff's wife, and, if that possession ripened into a title, it was gained by the wife and during her lifetime. The plaintiff was not entitled to a declaration of title, but he could not be dispossessed by the defendant. Myers v. Ruport, 4 O. W. R. 365, 25 Occ. N. 8, 8 O. L. R. 668.

Unregistered Deed—Subsequent Registered Mortgage—Possession—Right of Entry.]—R. T. in 1891, being about to marry W. T., and wishing to convey to him an interest in her land, executed a deed of the same to a solicitor, who conveyed it to her and W. T. in fee. The solicitor registered the deed to himself, but not the other, forging on the same a certificate of registry and he, in 1895, mortgaged the land, and the mortgage was duly registered. R. T. and W. T. were in possession of the land all the time from 1891, and only discovered the fraud practised against them in 1902. In 1903 the mortgagee brought action to enforce his mortgage:-Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 9 O. R. 105, Davies and Nesbitt, J.J., dissenting, that the legal title being in the solicitor from the time of the execution of the deed to him, the Statute of Limitations began to run against him then, and the right of action against the parties in possession was barred in 1901. McVity v. Tranouth, 25 Occ. N. 114, 36 S. C. R. 455.

Wild Land - Boundary-Entry-Occupation - Evidence of Possession-Survey.] -In an action of trespass the dispute was as to the ownership of a strip of land about 53 links in width, which the plaintiff claimed as part of his lot, 16, and the defendants as part of theirs, 17, or if not, as having become theirs by the operation of the Statute of Limitations. Neither of the lots had ever been cleared or cultivated, and no fence separating them had ever been built. Both parties had cut timber, and that was the only use that had ever been made of either lot :-Held, that the statute did not apply; to render it applicable it would be necessary to shew, if not an entry and cultivation of some part of the land, at least an entry and actual occupation. Semble, that, even if the statute applied, there was not, upon the facts, that clear and unequivocal evidence of pos-session by the defendants of the strip in dispute which was necessary to bar the right of the true owner. Davis v. Henderson, 29 U. C. R. 344. distinguished. Harris v. Mudie, 7 A. R. 414, and other cases, considered:— Held, however, that the plaintiff's evidence of his title to the land in question as forming part of his lot was not sufficient to establish it. Proper method of ascertaining the true position of the dividing line between lots pointed out. Huffman v. Rush, 24 Occ. N. 217, 7 O. L. R. 346, 3 O. W. R. 43.

II. OTHER CASES.

Account — Co-owners of Land—Partnership — Principal and Agent — Trustee — outlay on Land—Rente.]—The plaintiff sold a half interest in land to the defendant, and they agreed to build houses thereon at their joint cost and to raise part of the money for the purpose by mortgages upon the property, and to contribute the remainder in equal shares. The houses were completed and rent-ed in 1891; the defendant, who was on the spot, the plaintiff living in another province, collected the rents on joint account, and paid out of them the interest on the mortgares and the taxes and other outlays upon the property, sending accounts from time to time to the plaintiff. The plaintiff, alleging that the defendant did not contribute his just share of the cost of the houses, and that he had not properly accounted for the rents, brought an action for an account on the 15th August, 1902:—Held, that the plaintiff was barred by the Statute of Limitations in respect of his claim as to the cost of the houses, and also with regard to the rents except for six years before the commencement of the action; the plaintiff and defendant were not partners; nor was the defendant an express trustee for the plaintiff; he was an ordinary agent without any special fiduciary character. Coyne v. Broddy, 15 A. R. 159, Burdick v. Garrick, L. R. 5 Ch. 233, and Lyell v. Kennedy, 14 App. Cas. 437, distinguished. Ross v. Robertson, 24 Occ. N. 228, 7 O. L. R. 413, 3 O. W. R. 158, 513.

Account - Claim against Estate of Deceased Person - Corroboration - Special Agreement - Running Account-Terms of Gredit — Lemand-Fraud upon Greditors— Pleading.]—The plaintiff claimed from the executors of his father-in-law payment of a running account for work done and goods running account for work done and goods supplied to the testator from 1888 till his death in 1895. No demand for payment was ever made upon the deceased, nor was any account rendered until one was sent in to the defendants on the 16th May, 1895. This action was begun on the 4th May, 1901. The plaintiff and his wife gave evidence of an agreement with the deceased that the plaintiff should keep the account separate from his other accounts, that he should try, if possible, to get on without the money, and to leave it in the hands of the deceased, who said he would save it for the plaintiff and put it in a house for him or his wife. The plaintiff did keep the account in separate books, which were produced, as also the general books. A witness said that the deceased told him about a year and a half before his death that he had requested the plaintiff to keep the account between them in a little book at home, not in the regular day book, so that, if anything happened, the account would not go into the wholesale men, and that he intended to buy a house for the plain-tiff's wife. Similar evidence, although less distinctly, was given by another witness:— Held, that there was sufficient corroboration of the plaintiff's statement:—Held, also, that the plaintiff was not obliged to prove a de-finite term for which credit was given; the agreement was in effect one that the testator was to hold the money at least uptil the plaintiff demanded it; and, as there was no demand before the 16th May, 1895, the action was in time:—Held, also, that the agreement was not one which offended against the law relating to frauds upon creditors; and the defendants were not in a position to raise such a question, not having pleaded it. Acknowledgment in Writing—Agent of Executor—Power of Attorney—Letter.]—A power of attorney from the executor, resident out of the jurisdiction, of a deceased maker of a promissory note to the surviving maker, within the jurisdiction, "to do all things which may be legally requisite for the due proving and carrying out of the provisions" of the will, which, among other things, directs the payment of the testator's debts, does not authorize the surviving maker to bind the estate by an acknowledgment of a debt of which the executor knows nothing, and which is barred at the time. A letter from the executor of one maker of a note to the holder thereof, advising the holder to look to the surviving maker for payment, as he is now doing well, is not a sufficient acknowledgment. A direct acknowledgment of one maker of a note to the surviving maker is of no avail to the holder. Judgment of Boyd, C., 31 O. R. 573, 20 Occ. N. 209, affirmed. King v. Ropers, 21 Occ. N. 106, 1 O. L. R. 69.

Acknowledgment of Debt — Interruption—Art, 2264, C. C.]—An acknowledgment of a debt, not operating as a novation, is prescribed by the same lapse of time as the debt itself, the prescription of which it has interrupted. Charette v. Lacombe, Q. R. 17 S. C. 539.

Acknowledgment of Debt — Sealed Instrument — Promissory Note—Period of Limitation.]—A private writing, described by the parties hereto as an "indenture," and executed under seal, containing an acknowledgment of a personal debt, with hypothec on real property to secure the payment of such debt, is not a promissory note, and the prescription of five years does not apply. Zampino v. Blancheri, Q. R. 24 S. C. 265.

Annuity -- Will -- Charge on Land-Arrears—Lunatic.]—By a will made in 1872, a testator who died in the same year devised land to two sons, "subject to the payment by my said two sons, of the sum of $200 per annum, for the benefit of my son Thomas Anson, which said sum, or annuity. or so much thereof as shall be reasonably necessary for the support and maintenance of my said son Thomas Anson, shall be paid, yearly and every year for and during the natural life of my said son Thomas, to the person or persons who may be his guardian or guardians." The son Thomas Anson was of age at the time of the testator's death, but was of unsound mind, and he was declared a lunatic in 1898, and the plaintiffs were ap-pointed committee of his person and estate. After the father's death, the son lived with his mother, to whom from time to time till February, 1889, payments were made on ac-count of the annuity:—Held, that the annuity was charged on the land; that it was, therefore, by virtue of s. 2 (3) of the Linitations Act, R. S. 0, 1897 c. 133, rent within the meaning of that Act; that the payments to the mother, who was the natural guar dian, were good; and that the statute did not begin to run till the last of them were made; that apart from the question of disability the right of action would have been Assignment of Debt — Sheriff's Sale—Equitable Assignment—Payment to Stranger—Ratification.]—In Nova Scotia, book debts cannot be sold under execution, and the act of the execution debtor in allowing such sale does not constitute an equitable assignment of such debts to the purchaser. The purchaser received payment on account of a debt so sold, which, in a subsequent action by the creditor and others, was relied on to prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations: Held, that, though the creditor might be unable to deny the validity of the payment, he could not adopt it so as to obtain a right of action thereon, and the payment, having been made to a third party who was not his agent, did not interrupt the prescription. Keighley v. Durant, [1901] A. C. 340, followed, Moore v. Roper, 25 Occ. N. 55, 35 S. C. R. 533.

Bill of Exchange — Period of Limitation.]—A bill of exchange given for a commercial debt is barred by five years' lapse of time. Guimond v. Blanchard, Q. R. 21 S. C. 106, Building — Faulty Construction—Action against Architect or Contractor — Starting Point,]—The prescription of an action against the contractor or architect for the total or partial loss, within 10 years, of a building constructed by them, has for its starting point the manifestation within the 10 years of the fault in the construction or in the soil, and such right of action endures for 30 years from the time of the manifestation of such fault. Archambault v. Curé and Churchendens of St. Charles de Lachenaie, Q. R. 12 K. B. 349.

Centraet — Fraul — Creditor's Action—Knowledge of Fraud—Medding.] — Inasmuch as an action by a creditor to set aside a contract for fraud must, under art. 1040, C. C. be brought within one year from the time of his obtaining a knowledge of such contract, and inasmuch as that article is prohibitory in its terms, and denies absolutely the right of action unless exercised within the year, it is essential, whenever the fact does not appear by the dates of the contract attacked and of the institution of the suit of proceeding, that the party seeking the avoidance of the contract should allege and prove that he only obtained knowledge hereof within the year preceding the institution of his suit or proceeding. Where not peaded, the objection based on the omission of such allegation may be raised at any stage of the case. Gagnon v. Dunbar, Q. R. 20 S. C. 515.

Debt — Acknowledgment — To whom Made — Stranger—Vendee of Book Debts—Right of Skeriff to Sell—Absence of Statutory Authority.] — An acknowledgment or Lawment, to take a debt out of the Statute of Limitations, must be made to the party legally entitled to receive the same or his agent. An acknowledgment or payment made to a person who occupies the position of a stranger has no binding force or effect whatever. A sale by the sheriff, of book debts, without statutory authority, is void, and confers no right upon the purchaser. Moore v. Roper, 37 N. S. Reps. 161.

Debt — Acknowledgment — Writing Payments — Appropriation.] — An acknowledgment of a debt or promise to pay, to take such debt out of the law of limitations, must be in writing, and cannot be proved in any other way (art. 1235, C. C.) A payment made before any of the items of an account have been prescribed should be imputed to the earliest item of the account, no item of the account baring inferest and all being of the same nature and equally onerous: art, 1161, C. C. Beaudoin v. Fecteau, Q. R. 14 K. B. 29.

Goods Sold and Delivered—Division Court—Amendment of Defence—Misleading Particulars of Claim,1—Action in a Division Court for the amount of an account for goods sold and delivered to the defendant by the plaintiffs. The particulars attached to the summons gave the dates of sale as in 1896, and the action was brought within six years from the earliest date given. The defendant entered a dispute note, but did not give notice of a defence of the Statute of Limitations. When the plaintiffs books were produced at the trial, they shewed that the entries were all made in 1895, more than six years before action: — Held, that the defendants should have leave to amend by setting up the statute as a defence, and were entitled upon that defence to defeat the action. Mechan v. Berry, 22 Occ. N. 237.

Interruption of Statute — Assignment for Creditors — Claim against Estate.]—An assignment of property for the benefit of creditors does not interrupt prescription. 2. The lodging of his claim by a creditor in the hands of the curator of the estate of an insolvent, the collocation, and part payment of such claim, by the curator, interrupt prescription. Carter v. McLean, Q. R. 20 S. C. 395.

Interruption of Statute — Claim for Services—Gift in Recognition of—Payment—Subsequent Annulment. —The defendant had for several years been the agent and solicitor of a lady, and she, to testify her profound gratitude for his services, and as a mark of her affection, made him a gift of $8,000 out of her estate from the moment of her decease and before the division of her property. This gift was annulled by the Court (Q. R. 12 S. C. 162, 13 S. C. 205), upon the ground that it was a donatio mortis causa. The defendant then accounted for the sum which he had received from the executors in respect of the gift, but asserted a set-off of a greater amount as due to him by the estate of the deceased for solicitor's and agent's charges. The plaintiff replied that the defendant's claim was prescribed:—Held. that, although the gift had been declared void, the prescription of the defendant's claim had been interrupted by the recognition and promise to pay which the gift imported, and had been suspended until the decease of the donor, the defendant not being able before that to claim the price of his services; and, moreover, the Interruption of Statute — Proof of Payments — Admissions,]—In a commercial matter, governed by art. 1235, C. C., proof of payments interrupting prescription may be made by the admission of the defendant: art. 1245, C. C. Guay v. Guay, Q. R. 11 K. B. 425,

Judgment — Execution—Part Payment.]

—This action was brought on the 10th January, 1898, on a judgment for $412.69 entered on the 24th November, 1876; the defence was the Statute of Limitations. An execution was issued on the 17th December, 1877, returnable within sixty days. The sheriff on the 31st January, 1878, sold the defendant's land under execution. It was knocked down to the plaintiff for $35, and this sum was credited on the execution:—Heid that this was part payment within the meaning of the statute. Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. Cas. 115, followed. Hart v. Griffin, 21 Occ. N. 567.

Judgment - Execution-Part Payment.] The plaintiff recovered judgment against the defendant in the Supreme Court on the 18th October, 1875, and recorded the same so as to bind the lands of the defendant. The first execution was issued thereon on the 23rd October, 1875, and returned unsatisfied. The defendant died intestate on the 26th April, 1876. On the 10th September, 1887, another execution was issued, directed against lands of the defendant. A portion of the de-fendant's lands were sold thereunder, and purchased by the plaintiff, and the amount of the proceeds was credited on the execution. On the 14th July, 1901, one Lefurgey purchased from the heirs the remaining lands that belonged to the defendant. On the 31st August, 1901, the plaintiff obtained leave to issue another execution for the balance due on the judgment, and he proceeded under the execution to sell the lands purchased by Lefurgey. An order was made staying proceedings until an issue should be directed and tried as to the title of the lands. Semble, that proceedings were barred by the Limitations Act, the sheriff not being the agent of the judgment debtor, Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. Cas. 115, distinguished. Hart v. Griffin, 21 Occ. N. 567, referred to. Harrington v. Meloney, 21 Occ. N. 598,

Mortgage — Interest — Default — Acceleration.] — Under a mortgage containing the statutory provision that in default of the payment of the interest the principal shall become payable, default in payment of interest has the effect of making the principal payable as if the time for payment had fully come, and a right of action therefor then arises, and the Statute of Limitations then begins to run. Mortgage-Payment of Insurance Premium — Interest — Bond — Absentee.]—J. G. borrowed money from C. in 1877, and gave as security therefor his own bond and a mortgage made by A. G. An action on the bond and for foreclosure and ejectment in respect of the mortgaged premises was begun in 1900. The last payment of interest on the bond and mortgage had been made in 1879, and no payment of principal was ever The insurance clause in the mortgage made. The insurance clause in the mortgage was in the usual terms, and concluded as follows: "And in default thereof that the said (mortgagee), its heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, shall and may as required, effect, renew, and continue such insurance, and charge all payments made for or in respect thereof, with interest after the rate aforesaid, upon the said mortgaged premises." On the 5th September, 1883, B., the mortgagee's agent, paid to an insurance company $5, being the premium due on the 12th pany so, being the premium due of the Liu February, 1883, on a policy of fire insurance covering the premises, and charged the same to A. G., who in January, 1887, repaid it to B. There was no insurance on the property when this policy was taken out, nor was there any other insurance afterwards :-Held, that, when B. paid the $5, it became, under the terms of the mortgage, a part of the principal, and as such a charge on the land, and the subsequent payment by A. G. was a payment on account of principal within twenty years, and it was not necessary for the mori-gagee to do any act indicating an intention to add it to the principal. 2. That the plaintiffs were entitled to only six years' interest. 3. As C. was not in the province when the right of action accrued on the bond, he was entitled to the additional period allowed by s. 25 of R. S. N. S. c. 112 for one absent. Cogswell v. Grant, 21 Occ. N. 351.

Personal Injury Second Right Reserved.]—In 1895 the plaintiff sustained bodily injuries through negligence on the part of the city, and recovered judgment for $1,000 damages therefor, recourse being reserved for any further action she might have for future damages which might result from the same accident. On the 3rd December 10 damage which might result from the same accident. ber, 1897, she brought a second action for further damages said to have been ascer-tained since the institution of her first action, and recovered $5,000 additional damages:— Held, that at the time the second action was brought any right that the plaintiff may have had was barred by the limitation declared in art. 2262. C. C., which commenced to run from the day on which the right of action accrued; that the Courts should, of their own motion, take notice of prescriptions acquired in such cases, as provided by art. 2188, C. C., and dismiss the action; that tacit renunciation of such acquired prescription cannot be presumed from the failure of the defendant to plead the limitation that the reservation in the first judgment did not constitute a judicial condemnation within the meaning of art. 2265, C. City of Montreal v. McGee, 21 Occ. N. 3, 30 S. C. R. 582.

Personal Injury — Second Action—Right Renewed.]—The plaintiff was employed by the defendant as a stevedore. On the 20th September, 1898, he was injured by some seeks of sugar falling on him. About a month later he brought action for $1,999 damages, alleging that he had suffered permanent injuries and that the accident was caused by the negligence of the defendant. On the 16th March, 1899, the plaintiff obtained judgment for $300 for damages sustained up to that date, the Court reserving the right of the plaintiff to bring another action for future damages. This judgment was satisfied by payment of the amount awarded. The present action, brought under the reserve contained in the first judgment, was for $4,700 additional damages. It was only commenced on the 12th October, 1899, more than a year after the date of the accident; but it was contended that the prescription which would otherwise apply was interrupted by the reserve in the first judgment, and that the year should be calculated from that date:—Held, following City of Montreal, and that the year should be calculated from that date:—Held, following City of Montreal, and the first judgment and not the effect of the interrupting prescription. Ferns v. Racicot, 21 Occ. N. S.1.

Principal and Agent—Reformation of Agent's Account.]—An action for the reformation of an agent's account is prescribed by a period of five years. Grange v. Sauvé, 5 Q. P. R. 100.

Promissory Note — Acknowledgment—Interest.]—After the expiration of six years from the making of certain promissory notes, the maker wrote to the payee's solicitor stating that he acknowledged his indebtedness on the notes so as to prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations, and that in no event would it have made any difference, for, statute or no statute, the debt was one he would pay, if it toos his last penny. He enclosed a letter to the payee himself, stating that he thereby begged to acknowledge his liability to him on the notes, and that the acknowledgment was made by him to prevent the running of the Statute of Limitations. The maker died a couple of years afterwards:—Held, that the claim was taken out of the operation of the statute, both as to principal and also the interest due, not only at the maturity of the motes, but also after maturity, by way of damages. In re Williams, 24 Oc. N. 91, 7 O. L. F., 156, 1 O. W. R. 534, 2 O. W. R. 47, 3 O. W. R. 251.

Promissory Note Acknowledgment after Period of Prescription—Conditional Renanciation.]—A promissory note signed by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff had been barred by the Statute of Limitations since 1897. In 1902 the defendant wrote to the plaintiff: "You ask me for money; at this moment I have none. I have bought land and paid all I had; but I am negotiating for the sale of my land and I will pay you as soon as I sell it." The plaintif, contending that this letter constituted a renucliation of the prescription acquired, sued the defendant for the amount of the note and interest without waiting for the sale of the land:—Held, that this letter did not amount to a renunciation of the rights acquired, but only to a conditional offer to renounce the prescription acquired; and therefore the creditor, in order to acquire again the right of action which he had lost, should have waited for the fulfilment of the condition. Perrier v. Perrier, Q. R. 25 S. C. 183.

Promissory Note — Collateral Security by Mortpage—Period of Prescription—Inter-est—Commencement of Period—Acknowledg-ments—Interruption of Prescription — Renunciation.] — Prescription of 5 years and not 30, applies to a promissory note, not-withstanding that part thereof was for money lent, for securing which hypothec was given. Interest on demand note runs from the date thereof. Prescription begins to run from the date thereof and not from the date of demand of payment, Acknowledgments made by one party to a note interrupt prescription as to the others. Acknowledgments can be proved by the oath of one of the parties defendant. A transfer of property by one defendant to the plaintiff, though signed by the defendant before the consideration was filled in, and imperfect in form, when coupled with the admission of the defendant that the consideration, whatever it was, was to be placed sideration, whatever it was, was to be placed to the credit of the said note, is a "reconnais-sance par écrit" at the date of the transfer, and sufficient to interrupt prescription. The oath alone of one defendant is in itself enough to interrupt prescription. While it requires a new promise to pay, clearly expressed, to renounce a prescription acquired, the sole acknowledgment of a debt is sufficient to interrupt prescription, while running. Bank of Ottawa v. McLean, Q. R. 26 S. C. 27.

Promissory Note — Covenant in mortgage—Foreign lands — Sealed instrument—Foreign law—Foreign judgment—Jurisdiction —Defendant resident in territories—Subject of foreign state—Alleqiance — Natural justice—Purchase by mortgagee at judicial sale. Dekota Lumber Co. v. Rinderknecht (N.W. T.), 1 W. L. R. 481, 2 W. L. R. 86, 275.

Promissory Note — Joint Note—Statute of Limitations—Payments by one Maker—Agency—Evidence of—Costs.]—Action upon a joint promissory note made by W. W. Greenwood, deceased, and his wife, defendant Mary J. Greenwood. The defence chiefly relied upon was that of the Statute, of Limitations, in reply to which plaintiff proyed several payments on account by W. W. Greenwood within six years of the commencement of the action, and plaintiff sought to establish that these payments were out of money to which defendant Mary J. Greenwood was entitled, and were made by her husband with her authority:—Held, that the evidence fell short of establishing either that the payments or any of them were made out of the wife's money with her knowledge and consent, or that in making any of the payments the husband was acting as her agent. The fact that the husband had general authority to collect certain assets belonging to the wife, and was allowed by her to apply the same either for his own benefit or for hers as he saw fit, would not constitute him her agent so that by payments (out of the money so collected) on account of the note he could either continue or renew her liability upon a joint note which but for such payments would be barred by the Statute of Limitations. Payments made by one of two joint makers will not take the case out of the statute as against the other unless made expressly as his agent and by his authority: Creighton v. Allen, 26 U. C. R. 627. See also Paxton v. Smith, 18 O. R. 178. While the husband did make collections for the wife and did not account to her fully for the same, there is no evidence that any part of such collections was ever specifically applied by him upon the note. It was clear that, if he did so apply the money, it was without her knowledge or express consent. While this note was outstanding the husband caused to be onveyed to the wife several parcels of incumbered real estate, the equity of redemption in which would have been available in his hands to pay plaintiff. The action as against defendant Mary J. Greenwood, dismissed. Harris v. Greenwood, 4 O. W. R. 140, 25 Occ. N. 72, 9 O. L. R. 25.

Promissory Note—Payment on account—Conflict as to source of payment—Evidence—Inference, Gerolamy v. Cameron, 6 O. W. R. 425.

Promissory Note — Commencement of Statutory Period.]—The last day of grace upon a promissory note was the 19th September, 1894, on which day it was presented for payment and dishonoured: — Held, that an action thereon begun on the 19th September, 1900, was one day too late to save the Statute of Limitations. Sinclair v. Robson, 16 U. C. R. 211, followed in preference to Kennedy v. Thomas, 118941 2 Q. B. 759. Bank of Toronto v. McBean, 21 Occ. N. 44.

Sale of Goods — Action to Set asside— Period Allowed for—Pleadin.—Costs.]—An action to set aside a contract for the sale of machines, begun more than a year after the making of the contract, cannot be maintained in face of art. 1530, C. C.; but, if the defendant does not set up this ground until the hearing, after having specially pleaded that the machines were good and such as were warranted to do the work for which they were sold, which has not been established, the purchaser having on the contrary proved that they were worth nothing, the defendant, while successful in having the action dismissed, will nevertheless be ordered, on account of his pleading, to pay the costs of his trial, including witnesses, etc. Valleire v. Patent Development and Manufacturing Co., Q. R. 21 S. C. S26.

Simple Contract Debt—Conversion into Specialty Debt—Payment or Acknowledgment of Debt—Evidence of.] — Two promissory notes payable to a bank not having been paid, a trust deed was entered into, to which the defendant, the maker of the notes, the defendant's father, an agent of the bank as trustee, and the bank itself, were parties. The deed recited the defendant's indebtedness to the bank and also to his father, and that the father held certain lands as security therefor, and the father thereby conveyed the same to the trustee as security, in the first place for his indebtedness, and then for that of the bank, power being given to the trustee to sell the lands on one month's default in payment and notice in writing of the trustee's intention to sell. The deed contained an acknowledgment by the defendant of his indebtedness, but there was no covenant by him to pay the same. In 1893, on the bank pressing for payment, deeds of release were executed by the defendant and the other heirs and next by the derendant and the other ners and next of kin of the father, who was then dead, on the understanding that the father's debt had been paid, whereby, after referring to the recitals in the deed of 1884, and reciting that the releases were given to save the expense of a sale, they released to the bank all their interest in the said lands, and subsequently $5,500 was realized by the bank from a sale of a portion of the lands or the timber there on :- Held, that the effect of the deed of 1884 was not to convert the debt into a specialty debt, nor did the reference to the recitals in a deed of 1884 or the deed of 1893 so incorporate them in the latter as to amount to an acknowledgment of the debt; nor did such deed operate as a transfer or assignment of the interest, if any, which the defendant had in his father's estate, as one of his personal representatives; nor did the receipt by the bank of the $5,500 constitute a payment by the defendant on account of the debt; so that no bar was created by the ranning of the Statute of Limitations, and it could, therefore, be validly set up by the defendant as a defence to an action brought by the bank in 1902; Maclennan, J.A., dissenting. Judgment in 2 O. W. R. 332, affirmed. Bank of Montreal v. Lingham, 24 Occ. N. 123, 7 O. L. R. 164, 3 O. W. R. 182.

to pay a penalty of $400. On the same day a warrant was issued by the Judge committing the defendant to gaol in pursuance of the conviction, and under this warrant he was arrested and lodged in gaol. On the 30th January, 1903, a writ of certiorari was issued to the Judge and a County Crown attorney commanding them to send to the High Court of Justice all summonses, proceedings, etc., had before the Judge against the defendant and two others. This was served on the Judge on the 2nd February, before the date of the conviction and before the issue of the warrant:—Held, that the proceedings against the defendant were removed from the Court below by the issue and service of the certiorari, and that the subsequent proceedings were void. By 2 Edw. VII. c. 12, s. 15 (O.), the provisions of the Criminal Code respecting amendment of proceedings before justices of the peace are made applicable to all cases of proscutions under Provincial Acts:—Held, not to apply to proceedings under the Liquor Act, 1802. Semble, that, in a conviction of this kind, it was no objection, on habeas corpus, that the name of "Foster," whereas his name was "Forster," Semble, also, that there was a sufficient sentence and adjudication, although the particular language which might have been necessary in a conviction by a magistrate was not made use of in the record of the proceedings; but, at all events, there was no reason why the sentence of in mprisonment should not stand good, even if the adjudication of the fine were objectionable. Ree v. Foster, 23 Occ. N. 228, 5 O. L. R. 624, 2 O. W. R. 312.

Procuring Personation of Voter Ontario Election Act, 1992, ss. 167, 168—Procuring Person to Vote Knocing that he has no Right.)—The defendant was convicted of having unlawfully induced and procured another person to vote at a certain polling place on a certain day, upon the question of bringing into force the Ontario Liquor Act, 1992, which was the said time and place upon the said question:—Held, that the conviction was justified under s. 168 of the Ontario Election Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 9 (made applicable by s. 91 of the Liquor Act), although the evidence shewed that the defendant's offence consisted in inducing one R., who was himself a voter, but had no vote at the polling place mentioned, to personation a corrupt practice, but does not provide a punishment; and s. 168 is in terms wide anough to cover the offence. Rev., Coutter, 23 Occ. N. 280, 6 O. L. R. 114, 2 O. W. R. 523.

of Conviction—Habcas Corpus — Warrant of Commitment,—The provisions of s.-ss. (2) and (3) of s. 91 of the Ontario Liquor Act, 1900, are amplifications of the provisions of the Ontario Election Act which are incorprotated in the Liquor Act; and the Judge (appointed under s. 91 (4) in this case did not exce—I his powers in sentencing the accused, whom he found guilty of personation, to one year's imprisonment in addition to the payment of a pennity of $400 and costs.

The jurisdiction is to try at any place in Ontario, and, it appearing in the order of conviction that the trial was beld under the Act, and that the offence was committed at the city of Toronto, and the prisoner being sentenced to be imprisoned in the common gaol of the ccunty of York, at the city of Toronto, the order shewed jurisdiction, although it did not specify that place of trial. It was immaterial that the order of conviction was intituded in the High Court of Justice, and that it did not shew the informer's name, the County Crown Attorney of the county of York being shewn to be the prosecutor. Nor was it material that the date of the offence was not shewn, the time for conviction not being limited by statute. The prisoner was in custody under an order for his imprisonment for one year. In addition to this he was ordered to pay a penalty of $400 and costs within thirty days, and in default to imprisonment for three months unless sooner paid:—Held, that upon habeas corpus proceedings within the year, the objections that the costs were not ascertained or stated in the order, and that the warrant of commitment erroneously stated that the time for payment of the penalty and costs had expired, could not be considered, but the right should be reserved to the prisoner to apply again for his discharge at the expiration of the year. The amount of the costs should have been fixed by the Judge and inserted in the order, instead of being left to be ascertained by a taxing officer. Rew v. Carlisle, 23 Occ. N. 321, 6 O. L. R. 718, 2 O. W. R. 905.

Wholesale License—Alien—Mandamus—Board.)—The Vancouver licensing board refused to consider an application for a wholesale liquor license because the applicant was a Japanese. An application for a mandamus was refused by a Judge. Applicant appealed to the full Court, and at the time of hearing of the appeal the personnel of the board had been changed:—Held, that the board should have considered the application regardless of the fact that he was a Japanese, but, as the personnel of the board had been changed, no order would be made. Local Option By-law - Changes in Name and Boundaries of Municipality—Mandamus—By-law in Part Bad.]—The Act 53 V. c. 52, assented to 31st March, 1890, making changes in names and boundaries of the munichalifes in names and conductives of the indi-cipalities into which the province was divided, provided, by s. Sl, that if, in any of the terri-tory changed as to its municipal situation by the provisions of the Act, a by-law under the local option clauses of the Liquor License Act should be in force at the time of the coming into force of the Act, such by-law should continue to affect such territory as if the Act had not been passed. The village of Napinka was in 1890 part of the rural municipality of Brenda, in which a local option by-law had been passed forbidding the receiving of any money for licenses under the Liquor License Act; but, by 53 V. c. 52, the village became part of the newly created municipality of Winchester, and again in 1896 it was made part of a municipality then created under the old name of Brenda:—Held, that The local option by-law was still in force in that village, notwithstanding the changes in name village, notwithstanding the changes in name and boundaries of the municipalities referred to. Doyle v. Dufferin, 8 Man. I. R. 286, followed. Held, also, that the by-law was valid, although it contained an additional provision unauthorized by the statute, purporting to prohibit the granting of any licenses within the limits of the municipality. The King v. The Fishermen of Faversham, 8 T. R. 352, The King v. Bunstead, 2 B. & Ad. 699, and Re Fennell and Guelph, 24 U. C. R. 238, followed. Application for mandamus to license commissioners to grant a license to sell liquor in Napinka refused without costs, Rex v. License Commissioners for License District No. 1, In re Anderson, 23 Occ. N. 270, 14 Man. L. R. 535.

III. NEW BRUNSWICK.

Certiorari — Conviction — Improper Arrest.]—The fact that the defendant was arrested and brought before the magistrate who made the conviction, by a constable who was not qualified as required by C. S. N. B. c. 90, s. 69, is no ground for a certiorari under the Liquor License Act, 1896. The improper arrest does not go to the jurisdiction of the convicting magistrate. Exp. Gibberson, 34 N. B. Reps. 538.

Conviction—Minute—Period of Imprisonment—Scizure of Liquor—Disposal of Proceeds. — A conviction will not be quashed because the minute awarded an imprisonment of thirty days, while the section of the Act under which the conviction was made limited the tine of imprisonment to one month. Under 60 V. c. 6, s. 12 (N. B.), it is not necessary for the magistrate to specify in his order any particular public hospital in which the proceeds derived from the sale of liquor selzed by reason of its being illegally kept for sale, are to be paid. Rew v. McQuarric, Exp. Rogers, 36 N. B. Reps. 39. Wholesale License—Special Meeting of Commissioners—Absence of Notice—Revoextion,1—A wholesale license to sell liquor, granted under the Liquor License Act, 1866, at a special meeting of the license commissioners held after the regular meeting for the issue of licenses, when a license was refured to the applicant, and the license for the previous year was extended to the 1st August then next, of which special meeting no notice had been published, and no proof on oath of any special grounds why the license should issue had been shewn, and the commissioners had refused to hear evidence in proof of objections to the license being granted, is a license issued contrary to the provisions of the Act, and should be revoked on an application to a Judge under s. 31. Miles v. Rogers, 36 N. B. Reps. 345.

Conviction-Appeal - Forum - Contravention of Ordinance by Agent—Presumption— —Intra Vires—Forfeiture of License,]—Notice having been given of an appeal from a conviction or an infraction of the Liquor License Ordinance (a consequence of which conviction was a forfeiture of the license of the person convicted), to "the presiding Judge sitting without a jury at the sittings of the Supreme Court for the Judicial District of Western Assinibola, to be holden at the town of Regina, on Tuesday, the 25th day of March, 1902," the Attorney-General applied to a Judge under Ordinance 1901, c. 33 (amending the Liquor License Ordinance) 21, s.-s. 3, to expedite the hearing:-Held. that the appeal was to the Supreme Court for the Judicial District named, generally, and not merely to a Court coming into existence only on the day mentioned, and that a Judge had jurisdiction to hear the application. Held, on the hearing of the appeal, that s. 64. s.-s. 5, of the Liquor License Ordinance (declaring that a contravention by a servant or agent shall be presumed to be the act of the licensee) was intra vires, although the effect might be to inflict imprisonment (on nonpayment of fine) upon a person who had not personally violated the Ordinance. Held. also, that forfeiture of license results under s, 82 from a second or any subsequent offence against s. 64, notwithstanding that the convictions occurred in different licensing years. Rex v. Conviction for Illegal Sale of Liquor

Conviction — Jurisdiction—Single Justice of the Peace—"May"—Criminal Code.] — The Liquor License Ordinance (No. 18 of 1891-92) provides by s. 105 that "all informations or complaints for prosecution of any offence against this Ordina.ec, except as herein specially provided, shall be laid or made before a justice of the peace," and by s. 106, that "such prosecution may be brought for hearing and determination before any two justices of the peace," The Criminal Code, part LVIII. (Summary Convictions), which has been made applicable to summary proceedings under the Liquor License Ordinance, provides (s. 842) that "every complaint and information shall be heard, treed, determined and adjudged by one justice or law upon which the complaint or information is framed or by any other Act or law in that behalf," and that, "if there is no such direction in any Act or law then the complaint or information may by heard, tried, determined and adjudged by one justice:"—Hed, on an appeal from a conviction, that s. 106 constituted a "direction" that prosecutions should be heard, etc., before two justices and no jurisdiction to convict, except in the certain cases specially provided for in the Ordinance. Regina v. Wilson, 2 Terr, L. R. 73.

Conviction—Prohibited Hours—Proof of Liquor License,]— A conviction under the Liquor License Ordinance against a hotel-keeper, for allowing his bur to be open during prohibited hours, is invalid, if the informant does not allege, nor is proof made, that the accused held a liquor license for the hotel premises. Regina v. Henderson, 4 Terr. L. R. 146; Regina v. Davidson, 21 Occ. N. 98.

Conviction—Supplying Liquor to Interdict—Forfeiture of License—Appeal—Stay of Proceedings.]—Held, that where a licensee is convicted under s. 122 (3) of the Liquor License Ordinance, of supplying liquor to an interdicted person, with a knowledge of such interdiction, the effect of such conviction being that "his license shall be forfeited," an appeal from such conviction is a stay of proceedings and suspends all the consequences of the conviction, including the forfeiture of
L. R. 372.

Selling Liquor in Forbidden Houses— Proof of License.] — Upon a charge of having had a bar-room open and sold liquor during prohibited hours the prosecution must either allege or prove that the defendant was a licensee. Regina v. Davidson, 21 Occ. N. 98, 4 Terr. L. R. 425.

V. NOVA SCOTIA.

Conviction—Certiorari—Affidavit — Constitutional Law,]—The judgment in 31 N. S. Reps. 436 vacating an order for a certiorari to remove a conviction against the appellant under the Nova Scotia Liquor License Act, on the ground that the affidavit required by s. 117 had not been produced on the application for the certiorari, was affirmed for the reasons given in the Court below, Gwynne, J., dissenting. Bigelow v. The Queen, 31 S. C. R. 128.

Conviction—Sale of Liquor—Place of Sele-Bevidence.]—The defendant's clerk received, at Truro, N.S., an order, addressed to Bigelow & Hood, Ltd., Halifax, for one bottle of whiskey. The order was sent to Halifax, and was returned the following day, indorsed "Deliver this order from our Truro warehouse, and charge," etc. Bigelow & Hood rented from the defendant, who was president of the company, premises at Truro, which they used as a bonded warehouse; but the evidence shewed that the order in question was filled, not from the bonded warehouse, but from an open case in the defendant's cellar, which was kept there for that purpose, and that the money received by the clerk was put in the defendant's till, and a memorandum of it entered in the cash book, as a sale:—Held, that the evidence shewed a sale, by the defendant, in Truro. Rex v. Bigelow, 36 N. S. Reps. 559.

Conviction — Third Offence — Proof of Previous Convictions — Procedure before Magistrate.] — Previous convictions may be used as evidence upon which to base a conviction for a third offence against the provisions of the Liquor License Act, as often as such offence is charged and proved. It is not now necessary, under the statute (s. 131) to ask the defendant whether he has been previously convicted, unless he is present in person. Where at the conclusion of each of several cases tried before him, the magistrate decided to convict, but, at the instance of the defendant's counsel, refrained from imposing sentence and drawing up the formal conviction, until the County Court Judge should have decided a question, raised on the trial, as to the use of previous convictions:—Held, that the magistrate was not precluded from proceeding with the convictions at a later stage. The Queen v. McBerney, 29 N. S. Reps. 327, distinguished. Rex v. Bigclow, 36 N. S. Reps. 554.

Offence—Time of Committing—Information—Conviction—Warrant of Commitment— —Discharge, —To an order in the nature of a habeas corpus for the discharge of the defendant, a prisoner confined in the common goal at H., the gaoler returned a warrant signed by the stipendiary magistrate for the county of H., reciting a conviction under the Liquor License Act made against the defendant "for that he, the said L. B., within the space of six months last past, and previous to the information herein, which information is dated and laid on the 22nd day of April, A. D. 1994, did sell liquor by retail without the license therefor by law required," etc.:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to his discharge, it not appearing fom the warrant that the offence charged was committed within six months before the laying of the information. Rew v, Boutillier, 24 Occ. N. 240.

Prosecution-Witness for Defence-Compelling Attendance - Fees - Jurisdiction of Magistrate—Habeas Corpus.]—On a prosecution before the stipendiary magistrate for the city of Halifax, for a violation of the Liquor License Act, proof was given of service of a summons on M., who it was asserted, was a material witness for the defendant, but without tendering witness fees, and an application was made to the magistrate for a warrant to compel the attendance of the witness, the fees being at the same time tendered to the magistrate. The application was refused on the sole ground that fees were not tendered in the first instance to the witness, and the trial was proceeded with, and the defendant convicted. On application for a writ of habeas corpus:—Held, Weatherbe, J., dissent-ing, that the question whether, in a case under the Liquor License Act the witness could be compelled to attend, or the party was entitled to a warrant, unless the fees had been paid, was open to debate, but that, even if the decision of the stipendiary magistrate was erroneous, it could not be reviewed upon habeas corpus; and the application must be dismissed, Rex v. Clements, 34 N. S. Reps.

Sale by Agent — Conviction—Service of Mintet—Burden of Proof—Occupant.]—The Liquor License Act, R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 100, s. 111, provides that, "the occupant of any house, shop, room, or other place in which any sale has taken place, shall be personally liable to the penalty, notwithstanding such sale was made by some other person who cannot be proved to have so acted under or by direction of such occupant:"—Held that the defendant was properly convicted for sales made by his son, who lived with him in a house occupied by the defendant and his family. Per Ritchie, J., that the service, upon the persons convicted, of an incorrect copy of the minute of conviction, followed by service of a correct one, would not invalidate the proceedings, or prevent the magistrate from preparing a conviction in accordance with the original minute made by him, and issuing process to enforce the penalty or imprisonment. Per Graham, E.J., that the son living with his father was a person "suffered to be or remain" on the premises within the meaning of the Act, s. 111, s.-s. 2; that the burden was on the defendant of proving that the sales were made without his authority; and that the defendant on a "occupant" within the meaning of the Act. Rex v. Conrod, 35 N. S. Reps. 79.

Summary Conviction—Evidence—Third Offence—Proof of Previous Convictions—Trial on Three Separate Charges—Evidence in One Affecting Decisions in Others.]—Motion to quash three convictions for offences against the Liquor License Act, R. S. N. S. c. 100, all being convictions for a third offence committed on different days. It was contended that the previous convictions could not be used more than once as evidence of previous offences for the purpose of convicting the defendant a third time: -Held, that such previous convictions may be used as evidence on which to base convictions for a third offence as often as one is charged and proved It was also urged that, the defendant being before the magistrate charged with three separate offences, the magistrate should dispose of one first before entering upon the trial of the others: Regina v. McBurney, 29 N. S. Reps. 327. The magistrate and the prosecutor's counsel produced affidavits shewing that the magistrate decided to convict at the conclusion of the evidence in each case, and that he simply refrained from imposing the sentence and drawing up the formal conviction. The magistrate also stated in his affidavit that he was not influenced by the evidence in one case in making up his judgment in the other:

—Held, that Regina v. McBurney was not, therefore, applicable. Rew v. Bigelow, 24 Occ. N. 141.

Witness—Conviction for Non-attendance—Proof of Tender of Witness Feez, |—The defendant was summoned to appear as a witness on behalf of the prosecution at the trial of a complaint under the Liquor License Act, R. S. N. S. 1000 c. 100. He did not appear, and afterwards a summons was issued requiring him to appear to answer to the charge of refusing or neglecting to attend as a witness. He v_peared, and, after hearing evidence in support of the charge, the justices convicted the defendant, and imposed a fine of $5$ and costs:—Held, setting aside the conviction with costs; that the defendant could not be made liable for the penalty imposed by the Act, s. 161 (2), in the absence of proof that the proper fees were tendered to him before he was required to give evidence. Rev. V. Chisholm, 35 N. S. Reps. 500.

VI. ONTARIO.

Conviction—Third Offence—Evidence of Previous Convictions—Improper Reception—Subsequent Deletion.]—A conviction of the defendant for a third offence against the Liquor License Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 245, was quashed, on the ground that the convicting magistrate had improperly admitted evidence of previous convictions before the determination of the defendant's guilt upon the charge against him of a third offence, contrary to s. 101 of the Act. Regima v. Edgar, 15 O. R. 142, approved. Dietum of Armour, C.J., in Regima v. Brown, 16 O. R. 41, 48, disapproved:—Held, also, that the jurisdiction of the magistrate was gone when he admitted the improper evidence and his competence was not restored by its deletion. Rev. N. Varée, 24 Occ. N. 222, 7 O. L. R. 418, 3 O. W. R. 224.

Execution—Fieri Facias — Liquor Liccuse—Assignment of—Covenant by Lessee to Re-assignment—A license under the Inquor License Act cannot be seized by a sheriff under a writ of fieri facias. The piece of paper upon which it is printed and written ceases to be seizable as an ordinary chatrel when it is converted into such a license. The right to sell liquor at a particular place under such a license is a personal one, and is not assignable by the holder of it unless he obtain the consents and comply with the conditions of s. 37 of the Liquor License Act, R. S. O. c. 246. A covenant in the lease of an hotel by the lessee, that at the expiration of the lease he will assign to the lessor the license, if any, then held by him, is not a covenant binding upon the assignee of the term as such. It is a merely personal covenant, having nothing to do with the land or its tenure. Walsh v. Walper, 22 Occ. N. 43, 3. O. L. R. 158.

Powers of License Commissioners-Resolution Prohibiting Games of Chance in Licensed Premises — "Euchre"—Knowledge of Licensee-Conviction-Form - Distress-Imprisonment-Costs.]-A board of license commissioners, under the authority of the Liquor License Act, R. S. O. 1897 c, 245, s. 4, s.-s. 4, passed a resolution "that no gambling or any game of chance whatever for gain or amusement or for any other purpose whatever shall be played about any licensed tavern or other house of public entertainment. or on the premises:"

Held, McMahon, J., dissenting, that the powers of the commissioners under s. 4 were not restricted by s. 81, and that the resolution was within their power. Four persons played "euchre" for amusement in a room behind the bar of the defendant's hotel, the cards used being the property of one of the players, a boarder in the hotel:—Held, that "euchre" is a game of chance, and that the defendant was properly convicted of an infracorganization was properly convicted of an intrac-tion of the resolution by reason of the game having been played in his premises, though without his knowledge:—Held, also, that s. 100 of the Act should be read into the resolution providing for the recovery of the fine imposed upon a conviction, and that the direction of the conviction for recovery by distress and in default of distress imprison-ment was authorized:—Held, also, that where the license inspector attends Court as prosecutor he is to be allowed certain expenses by way of costs, as provided in s. 117, and there was nothing wrong in the amount ($4.20) allowed for costs in this case. If it were wrong, it was severable, and could not affect the conviction. Rex v. Laird, 23 Occ, N. 281, 6 O. L. R. 180, 2 O. W. R. 667.

Transfer of License—Premise, to be Made Suitable—Powers of Commissioners— Injunction — Costs.]—License commissioners appointed under the Ontario Liquor License Act have no power to say to an applicant for a transfer of a license that, if he will put certain premises into a nitable state for compliance with the law in the future, they will transfer a license to such premises; they are entitled to act under the statute only with regard to the existing state of omy with regard to be easily state of facts, not to make promises as to the future, in such cases. O'C., having no interest in the premises proposed to be licensed, and having no valid license at all, presented a petition to the commissioners for the transfer to these premises of a license standing in his name for other premises in which he had no longer any real interest. The comhad no longer any real interest. The com-missioners decided that they would allow the transfer of O'C.'s license to the new premises when they should be made suitable; but be-fore that time arrived O'C., whose fitness for the transfer was one of the subjects of the petition, had ceased to have any interest in the matter, and was allowed to make over his right to K., who in this way escaped the necessity of obtaining the certificate of the ratepayers as to his fitness:—Held, that this was illegal, and if the plaintiff had asked promptly for an injunction to prevent O'C., when he had no valid license and no interest in the new premises, from obtaining rights by asserting that he had, he might have ob-tained some relief; but at the trial it was too late to interfere, for K. had obtained rights which could not be interfered with in his absence, and the license commissioners whose conduct was in question had ceased to hold office:—Held, also, that an offer made by the defendants to submit the question of the costs of the action to be disposed of in Chambers should have been accepted by the plaintiff, and, as it was not, the plaintiff was not entitled to costs against O'C.; and the license commissioners should not have costs against the plaintiff. Will—Devise of Hotel Premises to Widow
—Benefit of Children—Division of Income
—Transfer of License to Widov—Creditors
—Receiver.]—A testator by his will devised hotel premises to his wife during her widowhood, for the benefit of herself and four children, the income to be applied for their support and maintenance until the children became of age, and in case of daughters until marriage. On the widow marrying, the property was to go to children, the widow being paid $1,000. On the testator's death in 1896, the widow applied to the license commissioners and obtained a transfer of the license to her for the remainder of the year; and for the subsequent years until 1900 the license was granted to her, she carrying on the business and maintaining herself and the children thereout, no money of the estate going into the business:—Held, that, after the testator's death, the license and goodwill of the hotel business belonged to the widow personally, and formed no part of his estate; and apart therefrom the income was divisible amongst the widow and children as in Allen v. Furness, 20 A. R, 34:—Held, also, that creditors of the widow were entitled to attach the widow's interest in the property, which could be reached by the appointment of a receiver. Taylor v. Hacfarlane, 22 Occ. N. 325, 4 O. L. R. 239, 1 O. W. R. 283.

VII. QUEBEC.

Confirmation of Licenses — Necessity for Notice—Imperative Statute, —The Liquor License Act of Quebec requiring on the part of a municipal council, at the time of the confirmation of certificates of license, a preliminary notice, is imperative and of public order, and the absence of such notice will justify any one interested in demanding the setting aside of the confirmation of such certificate within the time and in the manner indicated by the Municipal Code. Village of Plessisville v. Moffet, Q. R. 12 K. B. 412.

Conviction — Payment of Costs — Suspended Sentence—Mandanus,]—In a prosecution under the Quebec License Act, 63 V. c. 12, in which the defendant pleaded guilty, a judgment by the nagistrate suspending sentence on payment of costs, is illegal and ultra vires. Had the magistrate merely suspended sentence, a writ of mandamus would lie against him ordering him to proceed to adjudicate under s.-s. 3 of Art. 592, C. 12. Lambe v. Lafontaine, Q. R. 26 S. C. 132.

Conviction — Sentence—Changing—Payment of Costs only—Certiorari.]—Under the Liquor License Act of Quebec a Judge has no discretion to change his sentence for the offence of keeping liquors for sale without license into a sentence imposing payment of costs only, and a certiorari will be granted to remove a conviction so drawn up. Lambe v. Desnoyers, 6 Q. P. R. 439.

License Commissioners-Prohibition to —Deposit — Absence of—Preliminary Exception—Grant of License—Discretion — Opposition-Petitions-Enquête.] - 1. The absence of the deposit required by law with the application for a writ of certiorari or prohibition should be pleaded by preliminary exception. 2. License commissioners, although not among the infertor courts mentioned in Arts. 59, 63, 64, and 65, have duties of a judicial character which, on proper ocof a judicial caracter which, on proper oc-casion, subject them to the superintending authority of the Superior Court; and the proper remedy is a writ of prohibi-tion. 3. The only proof required, or admissi-ble, on a writ of prohibition against the license commissioners is such as would go to establish want or excess of jurisdiction.

4. When Art. 836, R.S.Q., may be invoked, the license commissioners can no longer grant a license as a matter of discretion; but their judgment is none the less final as to whether majority oppositions, or two previous opposi-tions, really exist. 5. The refusal of the commissioners to re-open the enquête after both parties had formally declared their respective enquêtes closed is not sufficient to support a writ of prohibition.

6. The refusal of the commissioners to count on the opposition signatures of duly qualified electors, for the reason that the same persons had also signed in support of the application, was a decision on an issue within their jurisdiction, and was, moreover, a proper decision, Kearney v. Desnoyers, Q. R. 19 S. C. 270.

License Fee—Amount of—Fees Fixed by Municipal Charters—Conflict.]—The statute amending the Liquor License Act of Quebec, 54 V. c. 13, which enacts that the municipal councils of cities, towns, villages, and other municipal local authorities cannot impose by by-law, resolution, or otherwise a tax, impost, or fee, exceeding in any year the sum of $50, upon a person holding a license under that statute, whether for a confirmation or a certificate to obtain the license, or otherwise, for the object for which he possesses such license, has not the effect of abrogating the provisions of particular charters permitting municipal corporations to impose a higher tax. Town of Farnham v. Roy, Q. R. 12 K. B. 23T; Hogan v. City of Montreal, ib. 251.

Municipal Council-Confirmation of License — Affidavit — Irregularities — Certificate.]—The function of a municipal council, when it is called upon to confirm a certificate for a hotel license, is limited to examining, verifying, and confirming such certificate; and irregularities contained in the affidavit of the petitioner, required by Art. 11 of the License Act of Quebec, do not effect the validity of the resolution of the council confirming the certificate, such affidavit being required only for the satisfaction of the collector of the revenue of the province. 2. It is not necessary that the oath required by Art. 21 of the License Act should be set forth in writing. Therefore, in this case, the deponent having actually taken the oath before the council in session, although an affidavit was prepared of which the jurat was signed by the secretary-treasurer, instead of by a member of the council, proof of the authenticity of the signatures affixed to the certificate was held to have been regularly made. Judgment in 19 S. C. 162, affirmed. Duhaime v. Parish of 8t. Francois du Lac, Q. R. 21 S. C. 80.

Offence — Conviction—Suspended Seatence—Quashing,] — A magistrate has no discretion to suspend sentence upon conviction of an offence against the Quebec License Law, but must impose, the fine therein prescribed; a judgment suspending sentence will be quashed on certiorari. Lambe v. Lafontaine, 6 Q. P. R. 422.

Personal Character of License—Conviction—Disorderly House—Proof of—Confirmation of License—Commissioners.]—
There are objections to the personal chareter of a licensee, within the meaning of Art.
27 of the Quebec Liquor License Act, if she has been convicted of a violation of the provisions of the Act, and has tolerated disorderly conduct in a restaurant for which she holds a license, though it is not actually kept by her, even if she does not know of such confluct. 2. Proof of such disorderly conduct need not be made according to the strict rules of evidence; it is sufficient fit in whatever manner it is made before the license commissioners, it convinces them of the existence of disorder. 3. The license

Action to Cancel-Contract for Sale of Land-Interest of Vendor-Instalments -Notice-Land Registry Act - Declaratory Judgment—Cause of Action—Perfecting after Commencement of Action.]—In 1894 h husband conveyed certain lands to his wife, and from her by writing dated in October, 1896 (registered in March, 1897), the plaintiff contracted to purchase one parcel of the land; the agreement provided that the purchase money should be paid by instalments, which were paid until November, 1898, when the wife conveyed to the plaintiff and took his bote in payment of the balance. In August, 1897, the defendant company commenced an action against the wife to set aside the conveyance to her from her husband as a fraud on his creditors, and registered a lis pendens on the 24th September, 1897, and by the final judgment in that action the wife was directed to do all acts necessary to make the lands comprised in the impeached conveyance available to satisfy the claims on her husband's estate. The plaintiff on applying to register his title first learned of the action and the lis pendens. In an action for cancellation the registry of the lis pendens:-Held, that the estate acquired by the conveyance to the plaintiff from the wife remained subject to the rights of the company, as they should be determined by the result of its action against the wife. (2) The plaintiff in order to get a title should not be compelled to pay again that portion of the purchase money which he had paid since the registration of the lis pendens. (3) Notice of the company's adverse claim was not imputed to the plaintiff by reason of the registration of the lis pendens, (4) Sections 85-88 of the Land Registry Act, providing for the cancellation of a lis pendens, are not available in practice where, as in this case, the nature and extent of the interest affected by the lis pendens D-30

are not ascertained. (5) The plaintiff was entitled to a declaration of right only, and the Court declared that he was within his rights in making th. Dayments before notice of the adverse claim; that the lis pendens did not affect the interest acquired by the plaintiff under his contract; and that the defendant company had a charge on the lands for the amount of purchase money unpaid. So long as there remains anything to be done to work out the judgment in an action, the action is pending. Upon a contract for the sale of land, purchase price of which is payable by instalments, the vendor retains an interest in the land proportional to the amount of purchase money unpaid, which interest is capable of being affected by lis pendens. Semble, generally a cause of action imperfect at the issue of the writ is not perfected, either at law or in equity, by subsequent events. Peck v. Sun Life Assurance Uo, of Canada, 11 B. C. R, 215, 1 W. L. R. 302.

Cancellation of — Security—Speeding Trial] — On a summors to cancel lis pendens, the Judge being of the opinion that the plaintiffs could not succeed in the action, ordered that the lis pendens be cancelled on the applicants giving the nominal security of $1:—Held, that it was not a case for cancellation of the lis pendens, but that the plaintiffs should be put on terms to speed the action. Merrick v. Morrison, 7 B. C. R. 442.

Lease—Damages—Breuch of Covenants— Cancellation.]—The defendant in an action for damages for breaches of covenants in a lease cannot plead as lis pendens the pendency of an action for damages arising from the cancellation of the lease. Larue v. Couture, 5 Q. P. R. 460.

Vacating—Ex Parte Application—Registration.]—The plaintiff having registered a tration.—The plaintiff having registered a lis peadens, a local Judge, on the plaintiff's ex parte application, made an order vacating it, and the plaintiff registered the order within 14 days of its being made:—Held, that ss. 98 and 99 of the Judicature Act, giving a Judge the power to vacate a certificate of lis pendens where the plaintiff or other party at whose instance the certificate was a local to the property of the pr at whose instance the certificate was issued does not in good faith prosecute the litigation, does not in good faith prosecute the litigation, and allowing registration of the vacating order only, on or after the fourteenth day from the date of the order, are applicable only when the party seeking to vacate the certificate is not the person by whom and for whose benefit it has been registered. One day the plaintiff picked up from the floor of the shop a roll of bank-notes, and handed it to the defendant, who caused inquiry to be made for the owner, and put the notes in his till for safe-keeping. No claim was made, and the defendant kept the notes:—Held, that the property in question was "lost," in the legal sense of the word; and in such a case, as against all other persons than the owner, the finder becomes the substantial owner of the thing found by him, and may maintain trover or other appropriate action to enforce such right of ownership. Action Brought in Name of—Benefit of lunatic's executors—Payment into Court—Amendment. Ramsay v. Reid. 2 O. W. R. 720, 4 O. W. R. 113, 6 O. W. R. 114.

Commitment — Documents Required — Documents Authentiques—Attack by "Pinscription de fause." |—The documents required by art. 3196, R. S. Q., for the confinement of the insane, although made under onth before a justice of the peace, are not authentic documents liable to be attacked by "l'inscription de fausse." Rousseau v. Sisters of Charity, O. R. 27 S. C. 168.

Commitment to Asylum—Certificate of Mayor—Facts to be Sheven.)—The mayor of a municipality cannot be compelled to sign the certificate (form E.) provided for by the statute concerning asylums for the insane, except upon sufficient proof that the person whose confinement in an asylum is sought has had his domicil in the municipality during at least 4 months, that he is insane or idiotic, and that he or the persons bound by law to maintain him have or have not property available. Torrance v. Weed, Q. R. 24 S. C. 364.

Committee—Funds in Hands of—Payment into Court—Reference — Report of Master—Revision of Costs.]—The rule has for many years been that when the Court intervenes in respect to the property of persons not sui juris, the money shall be left to private investment, but shall be paid into Court, and become subject to its general system of administration by which the interest will be punctually paid and the corpus will always be forthcoming when needed.

The general rule to be observed by local officers, when it is advisable that the estate should be realized and turned into money, is, that the fund so realized shall be paid into Court; and when part of the estate is converted and part kept for the abode of a lunatic or otherwise, the scheme for dealing with the whole shall be reported to the Court, that proper directions may be given. In two cases where local Masters had reported schemes for the maintenance of lunatics, and made provision for the moneys of the estates being collected by the respective committees, and thereafter for their investment by the committees on securities of different kinds at their discretion, and in one case had taxed the costs and inserted the amount in the report:-Held, that it is imperative that the costs in lunacy matters be revised by the proper officer in Toronto; and that the moneys in the hands of the committees and to be collected from debtors or by the sale of the land must be forthwith paid into Court. In re Norris, In re Drope, 23 Occ. N. 49, 5 O. L. R. 99, 1 O. W. R. 817.

Confinement in Asylum—Certificates—Municipal Officers—Mandomus.]—The father of an insane person, who has not the means to pay the whole cost of the lodging, maintenance, and treatment of such person in an asylum for the insane, may by mandamus compel the mayor and the secretary-treasurer of the municipality in which such person lives to sign and attest the certificates required by art. 3195a et seq., R. S. Q. tadded by 55 & 56 V. c. 30), for the confinement of such person in an asylum for the insane; and the provision of art. 3228b, R. S. Q., which renders such officers liable to a penalty of $20 in case of their refusing to sign and attest such certificates, does not exclude recourse by mandamus to compel them to do so, Cournoyer v. St. Martin, Q. R. 21 S. C. 305.

Death of—Confirmation of Report—Discharge of Committee.]—Before the confirmation of the Master's report appointing a committee of the person and estate of a lunatic and propounding a scheme for her maintenance, the lunatic died:—Held, notwith-standing the death, that an order should be made (the executors of the deceased consenting) confirming the report and for the discharge of the committee and the surrender of his bond. In re Garner, 21 Occ. N. 240, 1 O. L. R. 405.

Domici1 — Residence abroad—Money in bank in Ontario—Right of foreign committee to—Change of domicil—Private international law—Costs. Falls v. Bank of Montreal, 1 O. W. R. 538.

Interdiction—Conseil Judiciaire — Appeal, [—The prothonotary or the Judge may, upon a petition for interdiction for lunacy, do no more than appoint a conseil judiciaire for the respondent. 2. An appeal lies to the Judge from the decision of the prothonotary so naming a conseil judiciaire. Ledouz v. Meunier, 5 Q. P. R. 249.

Interest under Will—Advice to trustees—Right of appointment by lunatic—Payment into Court — Maintenance of lunatic. Re Faulkner, 3 O. W. R. 391.

Party to Gause—Curator—Appointment of New One—Appeal—Stay of Proceedings.]

—If, while a cause is standing for judgment, one of the parties, an interdict, is relieved from interdiction, and subsequently is again made an interdict, and a new curator is appointed for him, an appeal, in case of a judgment unfavourable to him, cannot be brought by the old curator; and a stay of proceedings will not be ordered to allow the new curator to obtain the authorization required by law. Plaintiff Becoming Insane after Judgment—Proposed appeal—Appointment of next friend—Inspector of prisons and public charities. Holness v. Russell. 1 O. W. R. 655, 774, 2 O. W. R. 334.

Proceedings to Set Aside Interdiction—Recovery of Costs—Solicitor—Effect of Judgment.]—An advocate or notary, acting upon the instructions of an interdict for insanity, and in good faith believing that the cause of interdiction had ceased, but acting without the consent and contrary to the instructions of the curator, is not entitled to recover from the curator in his said quality the costs of such proceedings, which were unsuccessful because it was held that the cause of interdiction had not ceased. Semble, a judgment setting aside the interdiction would have a retroactive effect to the date of the cessation of the cause of interdiction, and would necessarily validate an agreement by the interdict to pay the costs of the proceedings to obtain the removal of the interdiction. Judgment in Q. R. 16 S. C. 565, affirmed. Bouchard v. Bastien, Q. R. 19 S. C. 507.

Responsibility for Tort — Damages — Intervention of Statutory Guardian. |— Under the common law, a lunatic is civily liable to make compensation in damages to persons injured by his acts, though, being incapable of criminal intent, he is not liable to indictment and punishment. In this case, however, where the defendant had burnt a barn, and lunacy was set up, the evidence went to shew that, while not responsible, perhaps, to the extent of an ordinary man, he was rot utterly unconscious that he was doing wrong:—Held, therefore, that the defendant was liable at least to the extent of the damage done, taken, however, at rather a low than a high estimate. It was ordered that, before execution issued, notice should be given to the Inspector of Prisons and Public Charities. Stanley v. Hoyes, 24 Occ. N. 289, 8

Senile Decay—Appointment of Guardian—Provisions of Order.]—W, was about 85 or 90 years of age. He was not of unsund mind in the usual sense, but from extreme age and physical weakness was incompetent to manage his affairs, and required constant care and attention. An order was made appointing two of his children to act "in the nature of a guardian or committee of his person and estate." Form of order given. There was no fund in Court, nor did the order provide for payment in of any fund. Vane v. Vane, 2 Ch. D., 124, and In re Brandon's Trusts, 13 Ch. D. 773, followed. In re W., 21 Occ. N. 340; In re B., ib. 341.

Tort Committed by—Responsibility of Parent.]—Where a lunatic has attained his majority, but is living in his father's house, the father is not responsible for damage caused by the lunatic, although the father has failed to procure an interdiction of the son as such, if it appears that the son has for a long time been withdrawn from the authority of his father, and it is not proved that the father knew the dangerous character of his son's malady, or that the damage complained of would be the consequence of his imprudence or negligence. Arrest and Trespass—Reasonable and Probable Cause—Malice—Post Office—Letter with Fictitious Address.]-The plaintiff, a letter carrier employed by the post office department at Montreal, was intrusted with the delivery of two decoy letters for the purpose of testing his honesty. Each of the letters contained a small sum of money. One of the letters bore a non-existent address. the other a real address. The latter was delivered, but the former, under the rules of the department, should have been entered in the book kept at the post office for that purpose, and the letter returned. There being no entry of this letter, after the usual time for making such entry had elapsed, the plaintiff was detained and searched by the defendant, a peace officer acting under the instruc-tions of the department. The letter not be-ing found on the plaintiff he was released. On the following day the letter was returned to the post office:—Held, that the plaintiff having violated the value of the department. having violated the rules of the department, there was reasonable and probable cause for detaining and searching him, and that his action for damages against the officer, who acted without malice, could not be maintained. 2. County Courts Act, B. C., ss. 23, 31 Waiver of Objection to Jurisdiction-F —Waver of Objection to Jurisdiction—Fise Imprisonment—Interference by Complain-ant.]—The plaintiff took possession of the de-fendant Mason's float, which he found adrift on a lake. Mason, although aware that the plaintiff claimed a lien for salvage, made no move towards recovering the float until after three weeks, when he, in company with a constable, demanded it, and on the plaintiff refusing to give it up without compensation. he was arrested without a warrant and taken he was arrested without a warrant and taken to gaol, and subsequently an information laid against him under s. 338 of the Code for taking and holding timber found adrift, was dismissed. Mason provided the tug which got the float and carried the plaintiff to gaol, and accompanied the constable with the plaintiff to the gaol:—Held, on the facts, that the arrest was the joint act of Mason and the constable, and that Mason was therefore liable for damages for false imprisonfore liable for damages for false imprison-ment. An action for malicious prosecution was tried in a County Court, which has no jurisdiction to try such an action unless signed agreement consenting thereto is en-tered into by the parties. No signed agree-ment was shewn, but the action was tried without objection by either party, and judgment was given in favour of the plaintiff: -Held, that the question of the jurisdiction of the County Court could not be raised on appeal. Robitaille v. Mason, 23 Occ. N. 205, 9 B. C. R. 499.

Criminal Prosecution - Pleading -Statement of Defence-Embarrassment. 1-1. In the statement of defence in an action for malicious prosecution, a simple traverse of the plaintiff's allegation of the want of reasonable and probable cause is sufficient. In such an action, when the defendant in separate paragraphs of his statement of defence alleges certain facts tending to show reasonable ground for his belief in the plaintiff's guilt, but leaves it open for himself to prove other and distinct facts for the purposes of this defence at the trial, so that the plaintiff might be misled into assuming the allegations on the record to be all he has to meet, such paragraphs should, under Rule 318, Queen's Bench Act, 1895, be struck out as embarassing. 3. In such a defence it is not sufficient to allege that the defendant received certain information, without shewing the source, or that it was reliable, or to allege possession by the plaintiff of the animals which he had been accused of stealing, without shewing that it was recent possession, or that all the information received had been laid before the magistrate before whom the charge had been laid and before counsel who advised the prosecution complained of, with-out shewing what facts had been laid before them; and paragraphs of the defence setting up such matters without shewing absolutely reasonable and probable cause should be struck out. Rogers v. Clark, 20 Occ. N. 419, 13 Man. L. R. 189.

had the plaintiff arrested on a charge of fraudulently disposing of her property to defeat the defendant's claim for money due. The plaintiff was acquitted. She was a married woman, carrying on business for herself, her busband driving a delivery waggon for her. She denied that she owed the defendant anything. The defendant supplied goods for the plaintiff's business to the husband, who, according to the plaintiff's story, was given the cash for each purchase. Apparently he did not pay it over, as the dendant charged the price of the goods to the plaintiff. She sai, she had told the defendant not to give her husband any goods for her unless for cash. The defendant told the constable not to arrest the plaintiff if she would pay the amount due, but she refused to do so:—Held, that the plaintiff's evidence, if believed, would go to shew the absence of reasonable and p. obable cause on the part of the defendant. The credibility and effect of that evidence was for the jury, and the trial should have proceeded in the ordinary way, and the case should not have been withdrawn from the jury. Burns v. Clark, 21 Occ. N. 24.

Criminal Prosecution—Evidence—Record of Acquittal—Clerk of the Peace—Fiat of Autorney-General.—The books, indictments, and records of the Court of Quarter Sessions, which are in the hands of the clerk of the peace, are public documents which everyone who is interested has a right to see; and a defendant who has been tried and acquitted at the Sessions is entitled to a copy of the record of acquittal, and it is not necessary to obtain the fiat of the Attorney-General therefor. Regina v. 1vy, 24 C. P. 78, and Hewitt v. Cane. 26 O. R. 133, distinguished. Rea v. Scully, Soully v. Peters, 21 Occ. N. 432, 2 O. L. R. 315.

Damages—Charge of Theft—Permission to Take Property.]—The plaintiff was committed for trial on a charge of stealing two loads of wheat straw, the property of defendant, but was afterwards acquitted, and sued for damages for malicious prosecution:—Held, that the evidence strongly supported plaintiff's contention that defendant gave him permission to take the straw, and that the damages were properly assessed at $400. Findings of Jury—Damages—Issue of Warrant—Absence of Malica—Evidenoe—Misdace of Magistrate.]—The mere finding by the jury, in an action for malicious prosecution, that the plaintiff did suffer damages, and fixing the amount of the damages, is not a ground for a condemnation to pay such damages. And where the jury find, in addition, that the warrant of arrest was issued by the magistrate as being, in his opinion, the proper means of giving effect to the information, and in accordance with the practice of the police office; that the complaint was not dismissed on the merits, but because the case was not in the opinion of the magistrate, one in which the law allowed the issue of a warrant; that the facts alleged in the information and complaint were not true, but that the defendants used proper care to inform (complainants) themselves of the facts of the case, honestly themselves of the facts of the case, honestly believed the same, and were not actuated by malice—the verdict is really a verdict for the defendant. 2. Complaint of rejection of evid-ence is not well founded where the record shews that proof of the facts desired to be proved by the evidence alleged to have been rejected has really been made in the cause. A direction by the Judge presiding to the effect that "if the magistrate made a mistake, the defendants, unless they acted maliciously without probable cause, could not be held, because it would be preposterous to suppose that a person applying in proper form for a remedy should be responsible for the mistake of a magistrate," is well founded in 4. The Judge at the trial is not bound. law. 4. The Judge at the trial is not bound, and is right in refusing, to instruct the jury when they come in with their verdict, that it is their duty to find the defendant at fault on some one of the special facts, before they can award damages, Martin v. Montreal Gas Co., Q. R. 23 S. C. 222.

Illegal Arrest-Joint Conviction-Invalid Warrant-Constable - Resolution of Municipal Council-Ultra Vires.]-The three plaintiffs were summoned before a magistrate to answer a charge of interfering with and spoiling a spring by the side of a highway, but did not attend, and in their absence were convicted and fined, the conviction imwere convicted and fined, the conviction imposing one fine on all three. A resolution having been passed by the township council indemnifying the mag/strate against costs, he issued a warrant, directed "to all or any constables," following the form of the conviction, and this warrant was handed to a contribute who contribute who contribute who contributed to a contri constable, who got the defendant M., one of the informants and also a constable, to assist him, and arrested the plaintiffs and kept them in gaol until the fine and costs were paid. In an action against the township corporation and M. for maliciously enforcing an invalid conviction :- Held, that M. acted as a constable in the execution of the warrant, and was entitled to protection as such: he was, by virtue of s. 21 of the Code, exempt he was, by virtue of s. 21 of the Code, exempt from criminal prosecution; and in a civil action was entitled to the protection of R. P., in this case the bailiff had no right to the notice required by that article, inasmuch as what he did was not done in the exercise of his public functions. 2. The responsibility of the informant who causes a warrant to be issued against a person, is not removed by the fact that he acted on the advice of his advocates, even when the facts of which he informs his advocates, and which thereby become the basis of the warrant, are true; if they are false, it must be inferred that there was malice and absence of probable cause. Lachance v. Casault, Q. R. 12 K. B. 179.

Justice of the Peace—Action against— Notice of Action—Malice—Jurisdiction— Trespass.]—The plaintiff caused to be served upon the defendant, a justice of the peace, notice of action claiming damages for maliciously, and without reasonable and probable causing plaintiff to be arrested and confined in the common gaol under a warrant issued in a civil action, brought and tried before the defendant, in which one C. was plaintiff, and the present plaintiff de-fendant, said warrant having been issued without authority, and after the debt for which said suit was brought, and said war-rant issued, was satisfied. The plaintiff's statement of claim was framed on the theory that the justice had jurisdiction, but that he acted maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause. There was no count or paragraph founded on want or excess of jurisdiction. Held, per Graham, E.J., and Meagher, J., that it was not necessary under the circumstances to consider whether the justice had exceeded his jurisdiction or not and the warrant having been properly issued. and the only question being whether or not it could be enforced after the debt was paid. that this question was not covered by the notice, and that the action must be dismissed: R. Proof of Favourable Termination of Prosecution—Informal Abandonment—Reasonable and Probable Cause—Findings of Jury-Costs.]-Information laid by Hannah Beemer against plaintiff for unlawfuly set-ting fire to dwelling-house on 18th September, 1902, and warrant of same date to arrest issued. Under this plaintiff was arrested and brought before the police magistrate (since dead), and was let out on bail. That was on Saturday, and she says she was to return on Monday before the magistrate,, but did not do so, and heard no more of the matter. Tisdale, the high constable of Oxford, mater. Tismie, the high constants of Oxford who arrested the plaintiff, said the case did not come on for trial, but he did not know why. He served 11 summonses for the Crown preparatory to the hearing. Before the day of trial the prosecutrix obtained information which caused her to believe the plaintiff could not have set the fire in question. The could not have set the fire in question. The proceedings were dropped owing to some instructions given by the magistrate to the chief constables, the result of which was that no witnesses appeared. The prosecutrix or her mother paid the costs and nothing more was done in the matter. Three months later the plaintiff brought this action for malisions. malicious prosecution :- Held, Meredith, J., dissenting, dissenting, the evidence shewed by the questions of counsel for defendants — that the summons was not prosecuted by defendants before the magistrate, but that the costs were paid and the matter was allowed to drop. No written termination of the proceedings is needed in such a preliminary investigation, and the death of the magistrate Vesugation, and the death of the magnetic precluded his being called. Enough was shewn here, under the authority of Reid v. Maybee, 31 C. P. 392, to justify the jury and the Court in assuming that the prosecution had terminated favourably to the accused before the action was brought. Beemer v. Beemer, 4 O. W. R. 540, 25 Occ. N. 37, 9 O. L. R. 69.

Reasonable and Probable Cause—Arrest by Constable I aid by the Defendants—Responsibility for.]—In an action for malicious prosecution and false imprisonment, it was proved that the plaintiff and one L. were fellow-passengers on the defendants' road. L. complained to an officer of the defendants that a revolver had been stolen from his valise. The plaintiff had been seen by an official of the defendants at one of the stations to take something from L.'s valise, L. made a charge of theft against the plaintiff, and he was arrested by a constable appointed by the government on the recommendation of the defendants, and employed by them for duty on their road and paid by them. The prosecution was carried on by L., but at the instance and with the assistance of the officer making the arrest and other constables in the employment of the defendants. After an investigation by a magistrate the plaintiff was discharged:—Held, that the evidence shewed probable cause for the arrest and prosecution, and the defendants were not liable: that if there was want of probable cause the evidence failed to connect the defendants with the prosecution and imprisonment so as to make them responsible. Reasonable and Probable Cause—Herricons of Judge and Jury—Actual Malice—Inference—Conviction of Plaintiff Quashed on Grounds of Law—Evidence—Decease of Witness—Depositions Before Magistrate,—In an action for malicious prosecution the question of reasonable and probable cause is for the Judge. The jury may be asked to find on the facts, from which reasonable and probable cause may be inferred; but the inference from the facts found must be drawn by the Judge. Actual malice need not be proved, but may be inferred from the absence of probable cause. It is no answer to an action for malicious prosecution, that the conviction against the accused (plaintiff) was quashed by reason of a provise in the statute creating the offence excusing the act charged. The evidence of a witness taken before a magistrate on a criminal charge is admissible in an action for malicious prosecution founded on that charge, where the witness, at the time of the trial, is dead. Peck v. Peck, 35 N. B. Reps. 484.

Reasonable and Probable Cause— Malice—Information Bad in Law—Assistance

in Prosecution for Criminal Offence-Special Damages. — The defendant went before a justice of the peace with the intention of laying an information against the plaintiff for stealing. The justice prepared, and the defendant swore to, an information for "unlawfully taking the defendant's calf into his (plaintiff's) possession." The plaintiff appeared before the justice and was held to bail to appear for trial. The defendant honestly believed the calf to be his, but not that plaintiff was guilty of a theft; he believed him guilty of some criminal offence. The Crown prosecutor examined the papers sent up by the magistrate, and, without having had an interview with defendant, laid a charge of theft. The defendant, then becoming aware that the charge was theft, assisted in endeavouring to secure a conviction, but the plain-tiff was acquitted. The Judge trying an action for malicious prosecution found that the defendant was actuated by malice both in laying the charge and in aiding in the prosecution :- Held, that the defendant without reasonable and probable cause laid the information before the justice as for an indictable offence, and procured the plaintiff to be prosecuted for theft before the Court, and was liable in damages to the plaintiff. 2. That an action will lie where the procedure That an action will be where the procedure is criminal in form, though the charge be bad in law. 3. That the defendant was liable for the part he took in prosecuting the charge before the Court. Fitzjohn v. MacKinder, 9 C. B. N. S. 505, followed. 4. That the defendant, having "set the stone rolling," was responsible for the consequences, increase he had not as he should have inasmuch as he had not, as he should have voluntarily done, informed the Crown prosecutor of the facts. 5. That amounts paid by plaintiff to witnesses attending the trial of the criminal charge, for subpœnas and serving, for counsel fees, for expenses of himself and wife attending such trial, for ex-penses of himself and his servant attending the preliminary examination, should be allowed as special damages. Powell v. Hiltgen, 5 Terr. L. R. 16.

Reasonable and Probable Cause— Nonsuit—Search Warrant--Theft—Informa-Nonsut—Scurce Warrant—Incit—Information—Amendment,—A dog having been claimed by the plaintiff and taken from the defendant, the latter stated the facts to a magistrate, who drew an information that plaintiff did "unlawfully have and keep in his possession and take away a black collie dog, the property of the complainant," which was sworn to by the defendant. The magistrate issued a search warrant, under which a constable took the dog out of the plaintiff's possession. The constable then laid an information against the plaintiff in the same terms as the former one, and the plaintiff was summoned. Before the magistrate the plaintiff's counsel objected that the information and summons did not charge the plaintiff with any offence, and at the request of the defendant and his counsel the information was amended by inserting the words "steal and take away." The magistrate dis-"steal and take away." The magistrate dis-missed the charge. In an ection for mali-cious prosecution:—Held, that the defendant, having fairly stated the facts to the magis-trate, was not liable in damages for the erroneous view of the magistrate that he had jurisdiction to issue the search warrant, nor for summoning the plaintiff apparently to dispose of the question as to the property in the dog:—Held, also, that there was evidence | See MEDICINE AND SUBGERY—PLEADING.

that the defendant assented to the alteration charging the plaintiff with the crime of thef and his prosecution on that charge, and that the defendant was not justified in charging the plaintiff with having stolen the dog, because he believed the dog was his own; that the real question was not whether he believed that the plaintiff had stolen him, that is, taken him without any belief that he had the right to take him; and that the trial Judge should have left the case to the jury, telling them that, if they found that the defendant had authorized the charge of theft and honestly believed when the amendment was made that the plaintiff had stolen his dog, they should find for the defendant otherwise they should find for the plaintiff; the case should not have been taken from the jury upon the ground that reasonable and probable cause for a criminal prosecuand probable cause for a criminal prosecu-tion had been shewn; and a new trial was ordered. Reasonable and Probable Cause-Statements of Witness in Court-Defamation -Malice-Termination of Prosecution.]-The defendant and a companion were occupying a bed room in the plaintiff's hotel. During the night, the plaintiff entered the room and searched the pockets of both defendant and his companion, and then took the defendant's pocket book from his coat pocket and commenced to examine the papers contained therein. The defendant got up and accused the plaintiff of robbing him, and he after-wards laid a complaint to that effect before a justice of the peace. The criminal case had not terminated when the plaintiff brought the present action of damages for malicious prosecution :—Held, that the defendant had reasonable and probable cause for laying the complaint, and acted in good faith and without malice. A person cannot be sued for damages by reason of anything said by him while testifying as a witness before a court of justice, when he states, in answer to ques-tions put to him, what he honestly believes to be true, and is acting in good faith. To establish a cause of action for malicious prosecution, it must be shewn that the prosecu. tion has terminated. In an action for damages for malicious prosecution it is for the plaintiff to prove want of reasonable and probable cause, and malice, which he had not done in the present case; on the contrary, the defendant had proved that there was rea-Renaud V. sonable and probable cause. County Court Judge — Appeal from Conviction—Decision on Legal Merits—Re-jusal to Hear Evidence.]—A conviction was made by two justices of the peace, under the Summary Convictions Act of British Columbia and amending Acts, for a breach of the Highway Regulation Act. An appeal was taken from the conviction to the County Court of Yale, and the appeal came on to be heard before the Judge. The amendment to the Summary Convictions Act passed in 1901 provides that "in every case of appeal from any summary conviction or order made before any justice, the Court to which such appeal is made shall, notwithstanding any defect in such conviction or order, and notwithstanding that the punishment imposed or the order made may be in excess of that which might lawfully have been imposed or made, hear and determine the charge and complaint upon which such conviction has been made upon the merits. etc. The conviction in question was hope-lessly bad on its face, and on the appeal coming on to be heard a motion was made to quash it. For the respondents it was argued that the Judge under the section above quoted must hear evidence and try the case de novo in any event. After hearing argument on this question, the Judge gave judgment on the legal merits, allowing the appeal and quashing the conviction with costs. Application was thereupon made to the Supreme Court to grant a mandamus to the Judge to enter continuances, hear evidence, and determine the appeal on the merits:—Held, following Regina v. Justices of Middlesex, 46 L. J. M. C. 225, 2 Q. B. D. 516, that the Court had no power to interfere by mandamus, there having been a decision by the County Court Judge on the legal merits; that, as the Judge had heard argument on the question, and given a decision on the legal merits, the Court had no right to decide, or inquire whether such decision was right or wrong. Election Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 52-Revising Officer—Duties—Board of Registra-tion Functus Officio.]—A revising officer ap-pointed to revise and close the lists of electors under the Manitoba Election Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 52, although directed by the board of registration to hold his sitting for that purpose on a certain day and between certain hours, has power to continue the sitting to a later hour and on a subsequent day or days if necessary, to enable him to hear and dispose of all applications brought before Where, however, it was shewn that, before the hearing of the application for a mandamus to the revising officer to compel him to re-open his court for the purpose of hearing further applications to be placed on the lists, he had, pursuant to s. 92 of the Act, transmitted the list of electors and all books and papers to the chairman of the board of registration, and that, before the final argument of the motion, the chairman had, pursuant to s. 97 of the Act, sent the revised lists to the King's printer, and the books, documents, and other papers to the clerk of the executive council:—Held, that the issue of a mandamus to the revising officer as asked for should be refused, as it would be fruitless and futile, and both he and the board of registration were functi officio. Rex v. Bishop of London, I Wils. 11, Rex v. Bishop of Exeter, 2 East 496, and Rex v. Bateman, 4 B, & Ad. 553, followed. In re Bonnar, 23 Occ. N. 251; Rex v. Bonnar, 14 Man. L. R. 467.

Municipal Corporation - Statutory Duty-Prerogative Writ-Summary Application-Action-Affidavits.]-When body is required to perform a statutory duty at the instance of one entitled to call for such performance, the practice in England is to move summarily for the prerogative writ of mandamus, according to the prescribed procedure in the Crown office. But in this province all the divisions have coordinate jurisdiction: and the practice in cases of the prerogative writ is assimilated to that in ordinary applications of a summary nature: see Rules 1084, 1090, 1091, 1092. And where a meritorious application was made, in an action for a mandamus to compel a city corporation to levy a special rate for library purposes under the Public Lib-raries Act, R. S. O. c. 232, it was directed that the affidavit should be re-sworn and intituled as in an application (not in an action) for the prerogative writ. Toronto Public Library Board v. Magistrate-Sentence-Ontario Liquor Act, 1902-Voting on-Personation-Information—Deputy Returning Officer— Prosecutor—Applicant for Mandamus—Status.]-At the voting upon the Ontario Liquor Act. 1902, the defendant presented himself at a polling place and asked for a ballot in the name of another person, whereupon before the defendant had left the polling one Stewart laid an information bethe deputy returning officer charging the defendant with personation, and on this information the deputy issued his warrant, under which the defendant was arrested and brought before a police magistrate. deputy then laid an information against the defendant for personation, and the defendant was tried by the magistrate, convicted and sentenced :-Held, that, having regard to the provisions of R. S. O. 1897 c. 10 (made applicable by s.-s. (5) of s. 91 of the Outario Liquor Act, 1902), the information which gave the magistrate jurisdiction was that laid by Stewart; and the deputy returning offers had no status to apply for turning offcer had no status to apply for a mandamus to the magistrate to impose a different sentence. Per Britton, J., that a mandamus could not be granted for that purpose. In re Denison, Rex v. Case. 23 Occ. N. 279, 6 O. L. R. 104, 2 O. W. R. 152, 512.

To County Court Judge—Judgment Debtor—Arrest—Disclosure—Order for Discharge,]—The order provided for by 60 V. c. 28, s. 15, is a substitute for the remedy by writ of mandamus, and it will therefore be granted only in cases where mandamus will lie. In discharging or refusing to discharge a debtor who has made a disclosure under 59 V. c. 28 s. 7, the Judge or other officer is acting judicially and not ministerially; therefore the Court refused to make an order under s. 15 commanding the Judge of a County Court to discharge a debtor who had made a disclosure before him. $Ex\ p.$ Keerson, 35 N. B. Reps. 233.

To Municipal Corporation—Projection over Highway—Demolition—Discretion.]—A mandamus to order the demolition of a projection over a city street should be asked against the city corporation, and not against one of its officers. 2. To justify the issuing of mandamus in a similar case, the complainant must shew a particular act of neglect of duty on the part of the city, involving a real injustice and damage to him. 3. Mandamus is not strictly demandable as of right, but may be issued or withheld in the discretion of the Court. Pettigrew v. Baillargé, Q. R. 20 S. C. 173.

MANITOBA GRAIN ACT.

Application for Cars—Order Book— Distribution of Cars—Elevators—Loading Platforms.]—The Dominion statute 63 & 64 Act, R. S. C. 1886 c. 99, enacts (schedule) that the whole of Manitoba and the North-West Territories, and that portion of Ontario west of and including the then existing district of Port Arthur, should be known as the Inspection District of Manitoba. The Manitoba Grain Act (the short title of 63 & 64 V. c. 39, intituled 'an Act respecting the grain trade in the Inspection District of Manitoba"), contains, as indicated by subheadings, provisions respecting a warehouse commissioner-elevators and terminal warehouses—country elevators, flat warehouses, and loading platforms—commission merand loading platforms — commission merchants—general provisions. This Act is amended by 2 Edw. VII. c. 19:—Held, on admission of counsel, where a farmer who is not an elevator owner, lessee, or operator, has grain stored in a special bin in a farmers' elevator at a railway station where grain is shipped and has also grain stored in another elevator at the same point in common with other grain, for which he holds storage tickets, that it is not a violation of the Manitoba Grain Act for the station agent to refuse to recognize such farmer as an applicant, or to recognize his order in the order book for a car or cars to ship his grain. (2) Where a farmer has made order for cars in the order book at the station, and all applicants for cars who had made order prior to his order in such book, had each obtained one car, but the cars so distributed were not sufficient to fill the orders of such prior applicants, while the farmer had not yet been allotted a car by reason of the shortage, and the agent, out of the next lot of cars which arrived, refused to award the farmer a car, but there being a sufficient number of prior applicants, whose orders had not been entirely filled, to exhaust such next lot of cars, awarded out of such cars one to each of such prior applicants, who had already received one car—that this was a violation of the Act. (3) If each of the prior applicants as above mentioned had been supplied with one car at the time when the farmer gave his order, but on the day previous to the farmer's application there had been a surplus of cars after each prior applicant had been given one car, and the agent, in the distribution of the surplus cars had begun with the first applicant and distributed the cars so far as they would go, giving two or three to each of the prior applicants, but their order nevertheless remained unfilled, and if on the day of the farmer's application additional cars arrived to be loaded, and the agent declined to allot a car to the farmer, but allotted a car to each of the prior applicants, thus exhausting the supply-that this was not a violation of the Act, (4) Where a farmer having grain to ship made order for one car in the order book, requiring it to be placed at the loading platform for the purpose of being loaded, and the agent allotted a car to each of the elevator companies having elevators at the same station, but whose orders were subsequent to those of the far-mer—that this was a violation of the Act. of Terriageman a North tract under the hand and seal of the Lieutenant-Governor. Subsequently the plaintiff applied to the ecclesiastical court of the diocese in which he resided for a decree pronouncing the marriage null, on the ground that ac cording to law two Roman Catholics could only be married by a Roman Catholic priest. This decree was granted, and the decision of the court was confirmed on appeal to Rome. The plaintiff asked by this action that the pretended marriage should be declared null as to its civil effects; and that the Court should recognize and affirm, and give full force and effect to, the ecclesiastical decree:

—Held, that, even if both parties were Roman Catholics at the date of the marriage ceremony in question, yet, according to law, their marriage could be validly solemnized by a Protestant minister; and (2) that, according to law, the sentence of the ecclesiastical tribunal, so far as it pretended to annul the marriage in question, was void, as no ecclesiastical court had competence or jurisdiction to pronounce the annulment of a marriage Delpit v. Coté, 21 Occ. N. 307, Q. R. 20 S. C. 338,

Declaration of Nullity—Evading Laws of Province of Quebec—Celebration by Person not Authorized—Church Law.]—A marriage celebrated by a priest or minister professing a faith other than that to which the parties belong, is void. 2. If, before the coming into force of the Civil Code, any church whatever has established for its members a rule in restraint of marriage, and a marriage is celebrated contrary to the law decreeing such restraint, the Court must, upon an ac tion brought to declare the marriage void, and upon proof of such restraint, declare the marriage void for civil purposes only. 3. In this case the parties (Roman Catholics) having. during their minority, and without the con-sent of their parents or the publication of banns, left their domicil in the province of Quebec in order to go to be married before a Protestant minister in the United States of America, such marriage is void on account of having been contracted in fraud of the law and before a functionary who was not a curé of the domicil of either of the parties. Durocher v. Degré, 21 Occ. N. 303, Q. R. 20 S. C. 456.

Ecclesiastical Laws—Judicial Notice—Action for Separation — Plea of Nullity of Marriage, !—Where the defendant, by his plea to an action for separation from bed and board, alleges the nullity of his marriage with the plaintiff, but does not ask that the nullity be judicially pronounced, the Court cannot take his allegations into consideration. 2. The recognition, by art, 127, C. C., of certain impediments to marriage, has not the effect of obliging the Courts of the province of Quebec to take judicial notice of the ecclesiastical laws which establish them, and therefore the existence of such laws must be alleged and proved by those who desire to take advantage of them. De Grandmont v. La Société des Artisans Canadiens-Francais de la Cité de Montréal, Q. R. 16 S. C. 532, followed. Smith v. Cook, Q. R. 24 S. C. 469.

Legitimacy of Offspring — Condition of Territories in 1878—Presumption of Marriage—Evidence.]—In the year 1878 a white man and an Indian woman, domiciled in the North-West Territories, entered into a contract of marriage per verba de præsenti in the Territories, without a cermony of any kind, and cohabited as man and wife until the former's decease:—Held, in view of the legal provisions for the organization of the Territories and the actual condition, with reference to the facilities for the solemnization of marriage, at least in the portions of the Territories in the vicinity of the contracting parties' place of residence, that there was not a legally valid marriage. In bigamy cases, strict proof of marriage is required; a different rule prevails in legitimacy cases, where strict proof of the marriage of the parents is not required, but may be presumed from cohabitation and repute; but where the evidence shews the actual terms upon which the parents were cohabiting and the facts relied upon as constituting the marriage, no such presumption can arise. Re Sheran, 4 Terr. L. R. 83.

Officer Competent to Celebrate— Power of Court to Order,]—The Court, or a Judge, has no authority to order an officer competent to celebrate a marriage to do so, unless such officer is properly brought before the Court or Judge. Exp. Fiset, 6 Q. P. R. 42.

——The testator was married on the 30th June. 1855, to the widow of his deceased brother; she survived the testator. In 1884 and 1885 the testator was living with another woman as his wife:—Held, that the validity of the marriage between the testator and the widow of his deceased brother could not be disputed after the death of the testator; and the presumption arising from the testator's relationship with another woman was rebutted by the fact of his lawful wife being then alive; and the appellants, the children of the testator and the other woman, were not legitimate and had no locus standi to appeal from a judgment establishing a document as the will of the testator. The factory in which the plaintiff was employed being destroyed by fire, and the plaintiff thrown out of em-ployment, he sued the defendant for wrong-ful dismissal:—Held, that evidence of the capacity in which the defendant entered into the agreement and the other surrounding circumstances was admissible. It appearing that the defendant acted merely as agent for the government:—Held, that the defendant was not liable. Bocz v. Hugonnard, 4 Terr. L.

Breach-Damages - Action before Expiration of Term-Pleading - Condition Precedent.]—The plaintiff, who had been engaged from one year from August, 1902, by the defendants, at a monthly salary, was dismissed wrongfully, as the jury found, in December. He sued for damages for breach of contract, and the action was tried in May, 1903:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover damages covering the unexpired term of his engagement. The statement of claim alleged a contract of hiring the plaintiff as superintendent of a mill. arising from two letters, without setting them out and without alleging the continuance out and without alleging the continuance of the construction of the mill, which was one of the conditions stated by the defendants in their second letter. The defence denied the allegations in the statement of claim and alleged that the contract was contained in the second letter:—Held, that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to prove the continuance of the construction of the mill. Nevertheless, evidence of such previous acts might be given to shew that the act which led directly to the dismissal was not a solitary instance, but that the employee had been habitually guilty. Non-compliance with the printed regulations furnished the plaintiff as to the duties reetc., and impertinent and insulting language used towards members of the board of school commissioners, afforded sufficient ground for the immediate dismissal of the plaintiff from his position. may have been unaware of these acts of his servant at the time of dismissing him, he was entitled to rely upon them as a defence to an action for wrongful dismissal. Semble, it was sufficient to justify the dismissal that the servant falsely informed customers of the master that he, the servant, had been placed in his position by other persons for the purpose of "straightening out the business." Manager of Restaurant — Length of Notice—Reasonable Notice—Damages—Other Employment, —The rule requiring a month's notice to be given to terminate the engagement of a domestic servant does not apply to the case of the manager of a restaurant. The latter is only entitled to reasonable notice, having regard to the nature of the employment and the surrounding circumstances, and to entitle him to recover damages for dismissal, it must appear that he not only endeavoured to get similar employment elsewhere and failed, but that he acted reasonably in that behalf. Master and Servant Ordinance-Improper Dismissal of Servant - Additional Wages for-Justice of the Peace - Jurisdicion.]—A bar-tender employed by an hotel-keeper at a monthly salary from the 1st December, became temporarily incapacitated through illness on the 5th June, and, pro-curing a substitute, left the hotel, returning to work again on the 10th, whereupon he was discharged by his employer, being paid $10 for wages up to the time he left. He claimed the balance of two months' wages for improper dismissal, and on an information before a justice of the peace under the Master and Servant Ordinance (C. O. 1898, c. 50, s. 30), was awarded five days' further wages from the 5th to the 10th, the date wages from the out to del tool, the date of dismissal, and an additional month's wages expressed to be in lieu of notice:

-Held, on appeal from this order, that the hotel-keeper was not entitled to discharge the description of the discharge the description of the date charge the bar-tender, under the circumstances, without notice; also that the latter was entitled to be paid wages up to the time of his dismissal. But held further, that the justice had no jurisdiction under the Ordinance to order payment of the additional month's wages, which could not be said to be wages due, but damages for improper dismissal. good cause, or leaves without justifiable cause, after one of such periods has passed, is nevertheless entitled to recover any unpaid wages acrused up to the end of the last of such periods; a right of action accrues at the lapse of each of such periods. The master has only the right to recover damages against the servant for brach of his contract. Taylor v. Kinsey, 4 Terr. L. R. 178.

Share of Profits of Business—Sale of Business.]—The plaintiff and the defendant entered into a contract of hiring and service, which was to continue for a year unless the plaintiff's business was disposed of before that time, and the defendant was to be paid a certain sum each week, and also, at the end of the year, a percentage of the net profits of the business:—Held, that the sale of the business before the expiration of the year did not deprive the defendant of his right to the percentage of the net profits up to that time, but that he had no interest in the assets of the business, and therefore no right to a percentage of the profits made by the plaintiff on the sale of the passets. Statute of Frauds—Quentum Meruit—Dismissai.] — Held, following Giles v. McEwen, 11 M. L. R. 150, that where a contract of hiring is not enforceable by reason of the Statute of Frauds, insmunch as it is not to be performed within a year of the making thereof, the servant is entitled to recover on a quantum meruit where he is dismissed without justifiable cause. Justifiable grounds for dismissal discussed. Rose v. Winters, 4 Terr. L. R. 353.

Termination by Notice—Incapacity of Servant—Permanent Disability—Findings of Jury-Weight of Evidence.]-Where a contract for service provided that it could be terminated by either party giving the other a month's notice therefor, or by the employer paying or the employee forfeiting a month's wages :- Held, reversing the judgment in 36 N. S. Reps. 158, that illness of the employee by which he is permanently incapacitated from performing his service would itself terminate the contract:—Held, also, Killam, J., dissenting, that an illness terminating in the employee's death, and during the whole period of which he is incapacitated for service, is a permanent illness, though both the employee and his physician believed that it was only temporary. By a rule of the employer an employee was only to be paid for the time he was actually on duty. One of the employees had accepted and signed a receipt for a month's wages, from which the pay for two days on which he was absent from duty was deducted, and his conversations with other employees shewed that he was aware of the rule, but no formal notice of the same was ever given him. He died after a long illness, and his executrix brought an action for his wages during such period, and the jury found on the trial that he did not continue in the employ after notice of the rule and acquiescence in the terms thereof :- Held, that such finding was against evidence and must be set aside. Dartmouth Ferry Commission v. Marks, 24 Occ. N. 167, 34 S. C. R. 366.

Wages—Monthly Rate—Entire Contract —Servant Leaving Employment—Justification.]—It was found as a fact, on contradictory evidence, that the plaintiff hired with the defendant at $18 for the first month, and, if each party was satisfactory to the other, for $20 for the whole working season including

fixed with reference to the months, were payable only at the end of the period of hiring. The plaintiff after working for some months left, and sued for the wages for the number of months he had worked, less the wages for the first month, which had been paid:—Held, that the contract was an entire one and that the plaintiff could not succeed. Plaintiff did a particular job so imperfectly that it was unmerchantable. Defendants made him do the job over and deducted $1.45 from his wages, being 6 hours' pay. Plaintiff employed a solicitor to write defendant a letter demanding repayment of the $1.45. Defendant requested plaintiff to withdraw the letter. Plaintiff refused. Defendant thereupon paid the $1.45 and discharged him:—Held, it was not disobedience, to orders to complain through his solicitor, and was awarded damages. Clarke v. Capp. 5 O. W. R. 174, 9 O. L. R. 192.

Building-Defective Condition of Appliances — Knowledge of Master — Company— Officer of — Admissions by — Evidence — Onus — Nonsuit.] — The plaintiff was a labourer working for the defendants in the erection of an elevator. He was directed by a superintendent of the work, to go upon a planking which answered the purpose of a scaffolding in an excavation made for the purpose of placing therein the leg of the elevator. The planking gave way while the plaintiff was on it, and he was precipitated to the bottom of the excavation, sustaining injuries. It was contended that the plaintiff had knowledge of the defective construction and unsafe condition of the scaffolding through J., their secretary-treasurer. It was not shewn that J. assumed to give orders to the men, or directions as to the practical work which was going on; but there was evidence that he was standing, with his hands in his pockets, looking down into the excavation on the morning of the accident, and that on former occasions he had been seen to call D, on one side and say something to him, which no one overheard. There was no evidence that the persons employed by the defendants were not proper a d competent persons, or that the materials used were faulty or inadequatenor was there any evidence that the defendants had any better means of knowing of the danger than the plaintiff;—Held, that the onus was on the plaintiff, and he had not made out a case to be submitted to the jury. Evidence was given of an admission made by J. to the plaintiff, after the accident, as to the defective condition of the scaffolding and the defendants' knowledge of it;—Held, that he had no authority to make admissions on behalf of the defendants, an incorporated company, Wilson v. Botsford-Jenks Co., 22 Occ. N. 95.

Cause of Accident-Injury to Servant-Evidence-Negligence.] -- Administrator of the estate of John Wilson the younger, brought action to recover damages for the death of the latter from injuries received by him while in the employment of defendants at Merritton, owing, as alleged, to the unsafe and defective condition of a hoist in defendants' mill. The jury found that the deceased came to his death through a defective elevator; that there was negligence of defendants in not having a guard and not having sufficient light; that the deceased was not guilty of any act which contributed to his death; and assessed plaintiff's damages at $700. There was evidence that the approach to the hoist shaft was unguarded, and that the hoist was defectively constructed in that it had no catch:—Held, that defendants were liable, notwithstanding that there was no direct evidence of how the that there was no direct evidence of how the deceased was injured. Collapse of Building—Liability—Owner—Tenant.]—The plaintiff was employed by the defendant as a storeman. The building in which the latter carried on his business collapsed, and the defendant was carried down in the debris and was severely injured. He brought this action for $3,000 damages, claiming that the defendant hence of the faulty construction of the building, and that he had overloaded it. The defendant denied that he knew of any defect, or that he had overloaded the building. Both parties admitted that the building collapsed because of inherent defects:—Held, that the defendant denied by its defect, overloaded the building; and that therefore, since under art. 1055 the owner of a building is responsible for damages caused by its defects, the action should have been brought against the proprietor of the building, and not against the defendant, who was only a lessee. Contract as to Liability -Company — Provident Society — Release of Claim — Rights of Widow—Nullity—Indem-nity or Satisfaction—Motion for Judgment— Peremption.]-1. The provisions of art. 494, C. C. P., are not on pain of nullity, and failure to move for judgment in accordance with the verdict of a special jury until after the lapse of the time prescribed by this article, does not deprive the party of the right to a judgment, unless the action itself has been declared perempted for failure to proceed there during two years. 2. A railway company cannot, under a contract between their employee and an insurance and provident society, in consideration of an annual subscription to such society, be exempted from responsibility for damages caused by neglect and failure on their part to comply with a duty imposed on them by law for the safety of passengers and employees, e.g., equipment of the cars with efficient brakes, such stipulation being without effect under s. 243 of the Railway Act of Canada, 51 V. c. 29. 3. The right of the widow and other relatives under art, 1056, C. C., is not a representative one, but is independent of that of the injured person, and, therefore, even if an agreement stison and therefore even in an age entent size immunity from responsibility for damages caused by faute lourde were valid as regards the injured person, it would be without effect as regards his widow or other persons having rights under art, 1056, C. C. 4. An agreement exempting a party from responsibility for damages caused by his gross negligence, or faute lourde, is null and void, as being contrary to public order. 5. The words "indemnity or satisfaction," in art. 1056, C. C., imply compensation by the person responsible for the damage suffered, and not a payment made under a contract with an insurance society. Judgment in Q. R. 21 8. C. 346 affirmed. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Miller, Q. R. 12 K. B. 1.

Contributory Negligence — Action by Widow—Pleading—Reply — Railway. | — In an action for damages by the widow of a railway company for the death of her husband, where the defendants plead that the victin took no steps to protect his own train, as required by the rules and regulations of the company, and that such negligence was the determining cause of the accident, it is not legal for the plaintiff to reply that the determining cause of the said railway company defendant," and such allegation being too vague will be rejected on an inscription in law. Leahey v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 5 Q. P. R. 350

Contributory Negligence - Evidence-Mine.]-In an action to recover damages for negligence causing the death of the plaintiff's son, a workman employed in defendants' mine, the defence of contributory negligence was raised. The cause of death was the breaking away from its fastening of a car, used for the purpose of hauling coal up a slope leading from the mine. The evidence shewed that the fastening used to attach the car to the rope was fit for the purpose for which it was employed, and that it was in good condition; also that the deceased was on the "haulage way," where the accident occurred, contrary to orders, there being a "travelling way" by which workmen were required to go up and down:-Held, that the plaintiff could not recover. Solely in consequence of the failure of the plaintiff, an employee of the defendants, to comply with this rule a train backed down while he was werking at a car on the track, and he was injured:—Held, that the plaintiff had no claim for compensation under the circumstances. Dangerous Machine-Absence of Guard - Contributory Negligence.] - The plaintiff was employed by the defendant to "edge" boards at a machine known as a jointer, which consisted of two revolving knives about which consisted of two revolving anneas assisteen inches wide driven by steam power, set in and projecting slightly above the surface of an iron table about three feet high and eight feet long. The knives were not guarded, and it was proved that a guard could have been used; that without one the machine was dangerous; and that the defendant's fore man knew this. The workman as he edged each board stood it on end against the table at his left hand for removal by other workmen. One of the boards, owing either to the vibration of the machinery, or to a knock given to it by another workman, fell upon the plaintiff's arm and forced his hand upon the knives, and he was seriously injured :- Held, that the absence of a guard was a defect in the machine; that the foreman's knowledge of this defect and failure to remedy it consti-tuted negligence for which the defendants were liable; that the absence of the guard and not the placing of the board against the table was the proximate cause of the accident;

Dangerous Ways, Works, Etc. - Inspection—Evidence—Presumptions — Appeal
—Reversal of Findings of Fact.]—While at work in the pit of an asbestos mine, the pit foreman was killed by a loose rock falling upon him from the wall of the pit. Some time before the accident, after setting off a blast, the wall had been inspected by a competent person under the personal direction of the pit foreman himself, and the particular spot from which the loose rock fell tested by sounding and prying with a crowbar, and judged to be safe. In an action to recover damages the Courts below inferred from the evidence that the wall of the pit had been allowed to remain in an unsafe condition, and held the defendants responsible on account of negligence in this respect. On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada:—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, Girouard, J., dissenting, that, as an inspection had been duly made by competent persons using their best judgment in the honest discharge of their duty, who reported the wall to be secure, there could be no negligence imputed to the company in that respect, although it afterwards appeared that there had been error in judgment or in the manner in which the inspection was performed:—Held, also, Girouard, J., dissenting, that where there is evidence that makes it unnecessary to draw inferences or rely upon presumptions from facts proved, the indings of two Courts below which have acted upon such inferences or presumptions, should be reversed, Girard v. Canadian Asbestos Co., 25 Occ. N. 96; Canadian Asbestos Co., (Firard, 36 S. C. R. 13.

Dangerous Work - Accident - Inexperienced Workman - Infant - Superintendence Instruction. 1 — The employer owes to his workman, in the execution of his work, all the protection which a father owes to his child, and ought to take the necessary precautions to avoid accidents which may happen to his workmen, even by reason of their imprudence, inexperience, and want of skill; he is liable not only as regards habitual dangers, but also as regards possible accidents, and is responsible for an accident which happens to a workman in the course of dangerous work, which he has ordered him to do, especially when the workman is an infant, ignorant of the danger which he incurs, and having neither the prudence nor the experience necessary to protect himself. Therefore, in this case, the foreman of the defendant company having ordered the plaintiff's son (aged sixteen) to do a dangerous piece of work, without having instructed him sufficiently as to the mode of doing it without danger to himself, and without having superintended the work or caused the workman to be assisted by an experienced person, the defendant company were liable for the consequences of the accident which happened to the plaintiff's son by reason of his inexperience and his want of skill, known to the foreman. On the trial of an action against his employers for damages, it was proved that the elevator was over 20 years old; that it had fallen before on the same day owing to the dropping out of the key of the pinion gear which had been replaced; and the jury found that the vibration and general dilapidation of the running gear caused the key to fall out again, occasioning the accident:—Held, that the defendants were liable under the Workmen's Compensation Act:—Held, also, Nesbitt, J., dissenting, that the defendants were negligent in not exercising due care in order to have the elevator in a safe and proper condition for the necessary protection of their employees, and were, therefore, liable at common law. Dangerous Works — Ordinary Precautions — Knowledge of Risk — Contributory Nepigence—Voluntary Exposure to Danger.]
—An employer carrying on hazardous works is obliged to take all ordinary precautions, commensurate with the danger of the employment, for the protection of employees, and, where this duty has been neglected, the employer is responsible in damages for injuries sustained by an employee as the direct result of such omission. Lapitre v, Citizens' Light and Power Co., 29 S. C. R. 1, referred to, In such a case it is not a sufficient defence to shew that the person injured had knowledge of the risks of his employment, but there must be such knowledge shewn as, in the circumstances, leaves no doubt that the risk was voluntarily incurred; and this must be found as a fact. McDougall, 36 S. C. R. 1.

Death-Absence of Direct Evidence as to Cause of Injury—Inference—Case for Jury
—Dangerous Machinery—Factories Act.] — The plaintiff sued as the personal representative of her deceased husband to recover damages for injuries sustained by him while working as a sawyer in the employment of the deing as a sawyer in the employment of the defendants, which, as she alleged, resulted in his death, and were caused by a defect in the condition or arrangement of a "jointer" at which the deceased was working, the revolving knives of which it was, as she contended, the duty of the defendants under the Factories Act to guard, and which were not so guarded. There was no direct evidence of the cause of the injury :- Held, that certain circumstances shewn afforded evidence which, if believed, warranted the inference being drawn that the injuries to the deceased happened while he was in the act of putting the board through the jointer, and that, owing to the knives being unguarded, his fingers, without fault of his, came in contact with the revolving knives by which the ends of them were taken off. Montreal Rolling Mills Co. v. Corcoran, 26 Montreal Rolling Mills Co. v. Corcoran, 20 8. C. R. 595, Canadian Coloured Cotton Co. v. Kervin, 29 S. C. R. 478, and Wakelin v. London and South Western R. Death - Causal Connection - Evidence Conjecture - Defect - Want of Guard-Findings of Jury.]-The plaintiff's husband, who was working on a platform projecting a few feet from a gallery in the defendants' workship, fell from the platform and was killed, there being no evidence to shew how he fell. There was no railing or guard to the platform, but when the deceased was last seen he was standing on the platform next the gallery in a place of safety, and after that, up to the time when he was found lying on the floor, nothing had happened in connection with his work to make it necessary for him to change his position :- Held, Meredith, C.J., dissenting, that there was no case to go to the jury, it being merely at best a matter of conjecture that the accident had happened because of the want of a guard. Brown v. Waterous Engine Works Co., 24 Occ. N. 315, 8 O. L. R. 37, 3 O. W. R. 943,

Death-Cause of-Unauthorized Misconduct of Fellow-workman-Findings of Jury -Irrelevancy - Negligence - Workmen's Compensation Act-Factories Act.]-An action under the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act by a widow to recover damages for the death of her husband, caused by an accident when in the defendant's employment, The deceased was working on the first floor of the defendant's door and sash factory. There was an opening in the floor through which boards were passed from the lower to the first floor when required. The usual me-thod before and at the time of the accident was, that when a number of boards had to be put up-stairs a workman was sent up to stand by the hole and receive each board as it was handed up by a man on the ground When only a few boards were to be put up at a time, the man below would push a board up a little way and rattle it about until some one on the first floor came forward and took it. On the occasion of the accident an employee of the defendants engaged on the ground floor, finding three boards standing with the upper ends in the opening above and in the way of his work, pushed one up a little way and rattled it. No attention being paid, he violently shoved a board up so that it shot through the hole and landed on the first floor. He repeated this with the second and third, and the last one struck the deceased while walking past the hole and caused his death:—Held, that the defendant was not responsible, inasmuch the detendant was not responsible, maximum as the act of the employee which caused the accident was wild unauthorized and opposed to the usu, course, and the defendant or foreman could not be blamed for not assuming that any workman would resort to such unlikely and extraordinary measures for removing boards from the lower floor; and the findings of the jury were irrelevant and must be disregarded. Death — Defective Appliances—Construction by Deceased—Evidence—Appeal.] — In an action for diamages by reason of an accident in a workshep causing the death of a man, where the defendant pleads that the contract of the deceased contained a stipulation that the scaffolds, of which that which caused the accident was one, were to be constructed by the deceased and his father, and were so constructed, may call witnesses to prove such stipulation. 2. A judgment maintaining objections to the enquête falls within the cases enumerated in art. 46, C. P. Beaudoin v. Petit, 6 Q. P. R. 322.

Death -- Defectice System - Immunity from Accident for Long Period. | — The defendant was the owner of a derrick for hoisting coal from vessels, which was drawn up by a bucket and emptied into a hopper at the top of the derrick. Under the hopper was a platform with an opening in it, across which there were rails for a tram car, into which the coal was loaded when it was desired to weigh it, the coal being then dropped through the opening into a lower hopper; but when the weigh car was not in use, the coal fell directly from the upper hopper through the opening into the lower hopper. The sides of the platform were three feet nine inches from the opening, and were not fenced so as to prevent coal from falling over its edge. There was a ladder from the corner of the platform to the ground, which, though not the ordinary means of access to and from the derrick, was being properly used by deceased, one of the employees, on his way to inspect a vessel then being unbaded, when he was struck on the head and killed by a piece of coal, which had fallen from the platform. The derrick had been in use for fifteen years without the occurrence of any similar accident, or proof of any coal having previously fallen from, though occasionally falling on, the platform. In an action by the administrator to recover damages by reason of the death of the deceased:— Held, that the unfenced sides of the platform were obviously a cause of danger, which was necessarily increased by the existence of the rails across the opening causing coal striking them to be driven outward, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover, Judgmen of a Divisional Court, 2 O. W. R. 396, allirmed. Bisnav v. Shields, 24 Occ. N. 120, 7 O. L. R. 210, 3 O. W. R. 112.

Death — Electric Plant — Defective Appliances — Flectric Shock—Engagement of Skilled Manager—Contributory Negligence.] — An electrician engaged with the defendants as manager of their electric lighting plant, and undertook to put it in proper working order, the defendants placing him in a position to obtain all necessary materials for the purpose. About three months after he had been placed in charge of the working he had been placed in charge of the work which had been there the beginning the candescent lamp socket in the power house, which had been there the topic of the accident, was apparently insufficiently insufficiently insufficiently insufficiently insufficiently of the defendants towards the very effects that had caused his death, and the righter to discover them must be attributed to him. The judgment appealed from.

Death - Employers' Liability Act-Cause of Injury-Negligence Contributory Negli-gence.]—Action under the provisions of the Employers' Liability Act, by the widow and administratrix of McN., who was a night track walker in the service of the defendants. and whose duty was to walk backwards and forwards on the railway tracks of the defendants to see that the tracks were clear. There was a shed over the defendants' blast furnace, the roof of which projected on each side for some distance. The tracks were under the projecting roof, and persons walking along the tracks would be entirely protected from the falling ice and snow from the roof. If slag or metal was being poured from the furnaces, or the track was otherwise entirely obstructed, the walker would have to go outside the track or take the track on the other side of the shed. The deceased was found dead one morning about 12 feet outside the track, covered with pieces of ice, one arm broken and with marks on the back of his head. There was no direct evidence of the cause of the death:—Held, following Wakelin v. London and South Western R. W. Co., 12 App. Cas. 41, that the facts proved were consistent equally with negligence by the defendants, contributory negligence by the deceased, and death in circumstances for which the defendants would not be responsible; and the action was dismissed. Death-Fatal Accidents Act-Workmen's Compensation Act — Pleading — Status of Plaintiff — Expectation of Benefit—Persons for whose Benefit Action Brought.]—No person can sue under the Workmen's Compensation Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 178, for damages for the death of a deceased relative, who could not sue under R. S. M. 1902 c. 31, and the statement of claim must shew either that the plaintiff is the executor or administrator of the deceased or that there is no executor or administrator, or, if there be one, that no action has been commenced within six months after the death of the deceased by or in the name of the executor or administrator; and it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to state simply that he is the father and sole heirat-law of the deceased. It is necessary that the statement of claim should shew that the plaintiff had a reasonable prospect of future pecuniary benefit from the continuance of the life of the deceased. It is not necessary in every case, and it was not necessary in the circumstances of this case, to allege that the action was brought for the benefit of all persons entitled to claim damages. Death — Negligence of master—Mine— Defective machinery—Contributory negligence—Fatal Accidents Act—Death of widow of servant after action. Adams v. Culligan, Howe v. Culligan, 1 O. W. R. 38.

Death — Neglect to Provide Medical Attendance.] — The refusal or neglect of the master to provide medical or surgical attendance for the servant injured in his service by his alleged negligence gives no cause of action where death ensues from the injuries. Makarsky v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 17 Man. L. R. 63.

Death — Persons Entitled to Sue for.]— Where a person has been injured by the negligence of his employer and has died as the result of his injuries, without having received compensation, the right to recover belongs exclusively to the persons mentioned in art.

Telephone Co. of Kamouraska, 7 Q. P. R.

Death — Railway—Defective Appliances.]
—Where a car used by a railway company kills a man who is in charge of it, the company are responsible for the damages sustained by the widow and children of the decased, unless the company can prove that they could not have pervented the accident. 2. Where, as in this case, the accident could have been avoided by using more perfect appliances, which are easy to procure, as, for example, automatic couplers, compressed air brakes, etc., the company are guilty of nextingence in not having these appliances. Lemagy, Quebec and Lake St. John R. W. Co., Q. R. 25 S. C. S2.

Death — Workmen's Compensation Achelect, — M., proprietor of iron works, and built an engine in the course of business, and, while it was standing on a railway take in the workshop, a heavy dray standing ear, owing to the horses attached being artled, was thrown against it, whereby it was overturned and killed a workman at a bench three or four feet away. On the trial of an action by the administratrix of the workman's estate, the jury found that the accident was due to the negligence of M. in not having the engine properly braced: — Held, that this finding was justified by the evidence, and M. was liable under the Workman's Compensation for Injuries Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 160:—Held, also, that the accident did not occur through "a defect in the condition or arrangement of the ways, works, machinery, plant, buildings, or premises consected with, intended for, or used in the business of the employer." King v. Miller, 24 Occ. N. 263, Miller v. King, 34 S. C. R. 710,

Defect in Engine Consequent Death
-Negligence-Workmen's Compensation Act
-Repair Inspection Reasonable Care
-Person Intrusted by Master to Provide Proper Appliances-Evidence for Jury-New Trial.]—The deceased was in the employment of defendants as fireman on locomotive engine No. 480, which was of what is known as the "Atlantic" type, and was provided with arch flues or hot water pipes which passed through the fire box and had their ends inserted into the hot water tank surrounding the fire box. On 17th November, 1903, while the engine was on its journey from Windsor to Niagara Falls, one of these tubes drew out of the tank, with the result that the boiling water and steam from it escaped, and the deceased was so badly scalded that he died a few hours afterwards. Plaintiff's case as presented at the trial was: (1) that the use of arch flues or hot water pipes was improper, because, as it was attempted to be shewn, it was highly dangerous to use them. owing to their being very liable to draw our; (2) that this danger was increased by an unsafe and improper method of keeping the pipes in place, which was adopted and in use by defendants; and (3) that the pipe which drew out when deceased received his injuries was insecurely and negligently fastened into the side of the tank to which it was attached. It was also alleged that defendants had not made proper provision for the inspection of these appliances; and it was contended that, having regard to the liability of the hot water pipes to become displaced and to draw out, special care and vigilance should have been exercised to see that they were always in good and efficient repair and condition. It appeared in evidence that the pipe which drew out when the deceased was injured had been put in, in defendants' workshop, to replace one that had become defective, but it was not shewn by whom this was done or in what circumstances the engine was sent to the workshop to be thus repaired. There was evidence that in making this repair the pipe had not been properly secured, and the inference might be drawn that it was owing to this that the pipe drew out.:—Held, 'It was clear at common law that the contract be-tween employer and employed involved on the part of the former the duty of taking reasonable care to provide proper appliances and to maintain them in a proper condition, and so to carry on operations as not to subject those employed to unnecessary risk." It was also clear that at common law the employer was not bound in person to execute the work in connection with his business, but he was bound, if he did not personally superintend and direct the work, to select proper and competent persons to do so, and to provide them with adequate materials and resources for the work, and that, having done this, he had done all that he was bound to do, and for the negligence of the persons so selected he was not answerable; per Lord Cairns in Wilson v. Merry, L. R. 1 Sc. App. 326, 332. One of the duties flowing from that obligation of the employer was to take due and reasonable care that machinery which, if out of order, would cause danger to his employee, was safe and in such a condition that the employee could use it properly without in-curring unnecessary danger. What was due and reasonable case was a question of degree in each case and depends upon the nature of the machinery, its liability to get out of orand the danger incurred by the employee if he was suffered to use it when not in a condition to be safely used: Murphy v. Phillips, 24 W. R. 649, 35 L. T. N. S. 477. The employer who omits to discharge this obligation to his employee, either by performing it personally or by employing a competent person to do it, was liable at common law to answer in damages to his employee (unless the employee himself knew of the defect) for any injury happening to him owing to a defect in the condition of the machinery which, by reasonable examination from time to time, might have been discovered. The purpose of s.-s. 1 of s. 3 and s.-s. 1 of s. 6 was to take from the employer the immunity from liability for the neglect of the person to whom he had intrusted the duty of providing and maintaining in proper condition the appliances for the work in which his employees were engaged, but it was not intended otherwise to affect the common law liability of the employer, and it did not do so. If defendants in this case did not provide for a proper examination from time to time of the locomotive upon which the deceased was working, and the defect in it which caused the injury to him would have been discovered had such an examination been made, they were answerable for a breach of the duty which they owed to deceased of taking reasonable care to provide proper appliances and to maintain them in a proper condition, and if, on the other hand, they did provide for such an examination, if the defect could have been discovered they are answerable for the negligence of the person or persons whom they intrusted with the performance of that duty. Defendants are also answerable for the negligence of any person whom they had intrusted with the duty of seeing that the locomotive was repaired so as to make it fit to be safely used, for such a person would be a person intrusted by them with the duty of seeing that the machinery was proper, within the meaning of s.-s. 1 of s. 6: Markle v. Donaldson, 7 O. L. R. 376, 3 O. W. R. 147, affirmed in appeal, 4 O. W. R. 377. There was evidence which would support a finding by the jury of negligence in the discharge of the duty which defendants owed to deceased, and that deceased came to his death owing to that negligence Appeal allowed and new trial ordered; costs of appeal and of last trial to be costs in the cause; upon the new trial it was not to be open to plaintiff to re-ly upon the 1st and 2nd grounds of complaint, and as to these the action remained dismissed. Schwood v. Michigan Central R. W. Co., 5 O. W. R. 157, 6 O. W. R. 630, 9 O. L. R. 86, 10 O. L. R. 157.

Defect in Ways — Contributory negligence—Course of employment—Sunday work—Jury—Nonsuit. Hopkins v. Barchard, 5. O. W. R. 246, 6. O. W. R. 330.

Defective Appliances — Care — Liability,]—An employer is not absolutely bound to provide the latest tools and appliances, but if old fashioned, inferior, and dangerous tools and appliances (link and pin couplings for cars) are provided, this in itself constitutes an element of negligence imposing the obligation to exercise the greatest care. In the present case the care exercised by the employers was not such as it should have been in view of the defective nature of the couplings provided, and they must be held responsible for the injury and death of the servant, Judgment in Q. R. 25 S. C. 82, affirmed. Quebec and Lake St. John R. W. Co. v. Lemay, Q. R. 14 K. B. 35.

Defective Implements - Right of Servant to Assume Tools Furnished are in Good Order—Accident—Burden of Proof—Admis-sions of Servant—Value of.]—An employer is bound to furnish his workmen with tools in good order; if an accident happens by reason of a tool supplied being in bad order, the employer is responsible. The employer should have a foreman capable of judging the condition of tools furnished, and, when they become dangerous, they should be withdrawn from the workmen. The employer has the duty imposed on him to guard the workmen against dangers which may be the consequence of the work at which he is employed. In this case the workman was occupied in cutting a steel rail with a cold chisel; he and another workman, in turn, struck with ron hammers on the head of the chisel which another workman held on the rail with tongs; the head of the chisel was broken, and, when struck with the hammer of the plaintiff's companion, a sliver of steel was detached from the chisel and struck and injured the eye of the plaintiff; the latter had the right to take for granted that the head of the chisel was in good order:—Held, that the defendants were liable for the accident, An admission of a party has value and is binding only on questions of fact and not on questions of law. The admission of the plaintiff, after the accident, that the tools were in good order, that the accident was not the fault of the defendants, is contrary to the evidence and the truth, and it does not bind him, he not having the necessary ability to judge whether the tools were in good order or not, nor the legal knowledge necessary to appreciate the legal consequences resulting from the fact. He who alleges that an accident was due to mere chance (cas fortnit) must prove it. Drolet v. Metabetchman Pulp Co., Q. R. 26 S. C. 107.

Defective Machine — Fault of superior workman—Workmen's Compensation Act — Damages. Glasgow v. Toronto Paper Manufacturing Co., 5 O. W. R. 104.

Defective Plant — Ship.]—As a fisherman, employed by the defendants, was dragging by its wooden handle, according to the usual practice adopted on the defendants' fishing tug, a heavy box of fish along the deck, the handle, which was made of a poor quality of wood, broke, and the man fell overboard and was drowned:—Held, that the defendants were bound, even at common law, to exercise due care to furnish to their men material and plant in a sound and proper condition, and that they were liable in damages. Sim v. Dominion Fish Co., 21 Occ. N. 371, 2 Oct. R. 69.

Disregard of Warning — Danger — Liability.] — The plaintiff was employed in shovelling coal from a large pile, and carting it to the defendants' furnaces. The pile of coal was frozen over on the outside, and plaintiff was instructed not to undermine the crust, and, moreover, had been frequently warned by his fellow workmen of the danger of shovelling coal from under the crust so formed, but he took the risk, with the result that a portion of the frozen coal fell upon him and caused him serious injury. In an action by the plaintiff to recover damages for this injury:—Held, that employers are not obliged to indemnify their workmen when accidents happen in consequence of their not obeying the instructions given them as to the sate and proper method of performing their work; and under the circumstances the defendants were not responsible. Employers' Liability Act—Dangerous Place — Contributory Negligence — Obedience to Orders, —Where the plaintiff was required to perform a pice of work in a dangerous place, by a person in the employmen' of the defendants, whose orders he was required to obey, and, while so engaged, was 'truck by a moving car and severely injurec, the company having failed to provide proper plant and a reasonably safe place for the performance of the work he was directed to do: —Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover compensation for the injuries sustained; and that, as the plaintiff, although aware of the serious danger of working where he did, felt foliged to do so under peril of dismissal if he refused, he was not guilty of such contributory negligence as would preclude his recovery. Officer v. Dominion Iron and Steel Co., 37 N. 8. Reps. 183.

Employers' Liability Act — Defect in Ways, Works, etc.—Care in Moving Cars—Contributory Negligence.]—O., a workman in the employment of the defendant company, was directed by his superior to cut sheet iron and to use the rails of the company's railway track for the purpose. The superior offered to assist, and the two sat on the track facing each other. O. had his back to two cars standing on the track, to which, after they had been working for a time, an engine was attached, which backed the cars towards them, and O., not hearing or seeing them in time, was run over and had his leg cut off:—Held, that O. did not use reasonable precautions for his own safety in what he knew to be a dangerous situation, and could not recover damages for such nipury:—Held, also, that the employees engaged in moving the cars were under no obligation to see that there was no person on the track before doing so:—Held, per Sedgewick, Nesbitt, and Killam, JJ., that the want of a place specially provided for cutting the sheet iron was not a defect in the ways, works, etc., of the company, within the meaning of s. 3 (n) of the Employers' Liability Act:—Held, per Girouard and Davies, JJ., that, if it was such a defect, it was not the cause of the injury to 0. Dominion Iron and Steel Co. v. Oliver, 25 Occ. N. 54, 35 S. C. R. 517.

Employers' Liability Act — Proximate Cause.]—D. was engaged in moving cars at a quarry of the company. The cars were loaded at a chute under a crusher, and had to be taken past an unused chute about 200 feet away, supported by a post placed seven and a half inches from the track. D., having loaded a car, found that it failed to move as usual after unbraking, and he had to come down to the foot-board and shove back the foot-rod connected with the brake. The car then started, and he climbed up the steps at the side to get to the brake on top, but was crushed between the car and the post. He could have got on the rear of the car, instead of using the steps, or jumped down and walked along after the car until it had passed the post. The manager at the quarry had been warned of the danger from the post, but had done nothing to obviate it :- Held, reversing the judgment in 36 N. S. Reps. 113, Davies and Killam, JJ., dissenting, that D.'s own negligence was the cause of his injury, and the company were not liable :-Held, per Davies and Killam, JJ., that the position of the position was a defect in the company's works under the Employers Liability Act, which was evidence of negligence. Dominion Iron and Steel Co. v. Day, 24 Occ. N. 107, 34 S. C. R. 387.

Employers' Liability Act, B. C. Common Employment — Former Servant's Negligence—Trial — Party Bound by Course of.]—Where a party frames an action for negligence at common law and also under the Employers' Liability Act, but at the trial attempts to develop a case at common law and fails, he will not be granted a new trial in order to try to establish a case under the Employers' Liability Act. The jury found that the defendants were negligent in not providing proper and accurate working plans of a mine, and that such neglect was the cause of the accident, but they did not specify what person or official was guilty of the negligent act. The plans were prepared by the defendants' engineers, who were competent, and who had left the defendants employment:—Held, that the defendants employment:—Held, that the defendants were not liable either under the Act or at common law. Per Irving, J.—The doctrine of common employment is applicable where the servant because of whose fault the accident happened had left the employer's service before the injured servant entered his service. Hosking v. Le Roi No. 2, Limited, 23 Occ. N. 300.

Employers' Liability Act, B. C.— Dangerous Place—Duty to Warn Workmen.]—G. had been working in the defendants mine on the floors immediately below the 690-foot level, and on the night of the accident when he was going to work he was told by the shift whom he was relieving that the place was in pretty bad shape, and to look out for it. He proceeded to make an examination, but while thus engaged the mine superintendent directed him to do some blasting, and while doing it a slide occurred, and he was injured. The principal evidences of the like-lihood of a slide were two floors beneath the 600-foot level, of which the superintendent was aware, and G, not aware. The jury found that the superintendent was negligent, inasmuch as he did not advise G, of the probable danger:—Held, in an action under the Employers' Liability Act, that the defendants were liable. Where a workman is put to work in a place where there is an imminent danger of a kind not necessarily involved in the employment, and of which he is not aware, but of which the employer is aware, it is the employer's duty to warn the workman of the danger. Gunn v. Le Roi, 23 Occ. N. 291, 10 B. C, R. 59.

Employers' Liability Act, B. C. Negligence — Common Employment — Mine
Owner and Contractor.] — H. and M. contracted to sink a winze in defendants' mine at a certain price per foot, and by the terms of the contract the direction and dip of the winze were to be as given by the defendants engineers; the defendants were to provide all necessary appliances, etc.; H. and M.'s workmen should be subject to the approval and direction of the defendants' superintendent, and any men employed without the consent and approval of or unsatisfactory to such superintendent should be dismissed on request. A hoisting bucket hung on a clevis was supplied to H. and M. by the defendants, and through the negligence of the defendants' superintendent, master mechanic, or shift boss, a hook substituted for the clevis by defenda noos substituted for the cievis by defend-ants, at the request of H. and M., got out of repair, in consequence of which the bucket slipped off and in falling injured the plaintiff, who was one of H. and M.'s workmen en-gaged in sinking the winze:—Held, that the valuntiff shing applied to the plaintiff, being subject to the orders and control of the defendants, was acting as their servant, and the doctrine of fellow-servant applied, and the action was not maintainable. Hasting v. Le Roi No. 2, Limited, 23 Occ. N. 273, 10 B. C. R. 9.

Employers' Liability Act, B. C. -Negligence—Findings of Fact—Machinery in Mine—Defective Construction — Proximate Cause.]—An elevator cage was used in de-fendants' mine for the transportation of workmen and materials through a shaft over eight hundred feet in depth. It was lowered and hoisted by means of a cable, which ran over a sheave-wheel at the top of the shaft, and, to prevent accidents, guide-rails were placed along the elevator shaft, and the cage was fitted with automatic dogs or safety clutches, intended to engage upon these guide-rails and hold the cage in the event of the cable breaking. The guide-rails were continued only to a point about twenty feet below the sheave wheel. On one occasion the engine-man in charge of the elevator carelessly allowed the cage to ascend higher than the guide-rails and strike the sheave-wheel with such force that the cable broke, and the safety clutches failing to act, the cage fell a distance of over eight hundred feet, smashed through a bulkhead at the eight hundred foot level, and injured the plaintiff, who was engaged at the work for which he was employed by the defendants, about fifty feet lower down in the shaft. In an action to recover damages for the injury sustained, the jury found that the proximante cause of the injury was occasioned by the non-continuance of the guide-rails, which, in their opinion, caused the safety-clutches to fail in their action, and thereby allowed the cage to fall:—Held, that the Court ought Lot, on appeal, to disturb the verdict entered for the plaintiff, as there was sufficient evidence to support the finding of fact by the jury. Judgment in 9 B. C. R. 62 reversed. McKelvey v. Le Roi Mining Co., 23 Occ. N. 61, 32 S. C. R. 664.

Employers' Liability Act, B. C.— Notice of Injury—Want of—Reasonable Ec-cuse—Prejudice—Evidence.]—In an action for damages under the Employers' Liability Act for injuries sustained by the plaintiff. it was shewn that the plaintiff was without means and for some weeks after the accident was unable to transact any business; and that the defendants' business manager and representative saw the accident and arranged for the plaintiff's admission into the hospital. where a few days later he discussed with him the cause of the accident :--Held, that the circumstances excused the want of notice of injury. At the close of the plaintiff's case a nonsuit was moved for, on the ground that the plaintiff had not proved notice of in-jury, and the plaintiff then adduced evidence which the Court held shewed a reasonable excuse for the want of notice, and the trial proceeded. Before closing his case the defendants' counsel tendered evidence of being prejudiced by want of notice:-Held, excluding the evidence, that the proper time to shew prejudice was while the question of reasonable excuse was still open. Lever v. McArthur, 9 B. C. R. 417.

Employers' Liability Act, B. C.— Railway—Contributory Negligence—Nonsuit —Jury.]—The judgment in 22 Occ. N. 244. 8 B. C. R. 393, affirmed. Faucett v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 32 S. C. R. 721.

Employers' Liability Act, Nova Scotia -Railway-Defect in Way-Voluntary la-curring of Risk-Contributory Nealigence-Damages-Costs.]-The plaintiff was employed as a brakesman on cars that were being loaded with stone from a chute on the defendant company's line of railway. At a distance of 150 to 200 feet from the chute where the cars were loaded was a second and unused chute which the cars were required to pass in order to reach the loading point. The track sloped from the point where the empty cars were stationed to the point where they were filled, and as soon as one car was filled it was the duty of the brakesman to release the brakes and allow another car to run down the track and take its place. The gear controlling the brake of a car which the plaintiff was placing in position to be filled failed to work properly, and the plaintiff was obliged to descend for the purpose of releasing it. As he was attempting to regain his position, after the car had started, in order to be in a position to control it, he was caught between the car and one of the posts supporting the unused chute, and was injured. The attention of the manager of the defendant company had previously been called by the plaintiff to the danger of accidents from this cause, and he had promised to have it remedied, but nothing was done till after the accident, when the chute was re-moved. The plaintiff had been employed by the company for two years prior to the happening of the accident, but had only been engaged in this particular work for some nine days :- Held, that the position of the post, coupled with the position from which the empty cars had to be started, constituted a defect, and should have been remedied when the attention of the defendants' manager was called to the danger arising from it. After the plaintiff had notified the manager of the danger, there was nothing in his continuance in the defendants' employ from which to infer that he voluntarily incurred Notwithstanding evidence that the the risk. plaintiff might have got on the car in another way, and thus have avoided the accident, he was, under the circumstances, only called upon to use a reasonable way of doing what he was called upon to do-not the safest way—and that the finding of the jury that the plaintiff was not guilty of contributory negligence should not be disturbed. In the absence of evidence of permanent injury, the damages assessed ($850) were excessive and should be reduced; no costs to either party. Day v. Dominion Iron and Steel Co., 36 N. S. Reps. 113.

Employment of Child in Factory-Factories Act-Misrepresentation as to Age -Dangerous Machinery -- Warning-Negligence-Jury.]-The plaintiff, a boy of ten. represented his age as fourteen, and was employed by the defendants in their factory, He was not put at dangerous work, but, in going to his work through a room in which there were dangerous machines, he was in-jured by one of them:—Held, Meredith, J., dissenting, that the provision of the Factordissenting, that the provision of the ractories Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 256, s. 3, that no child (as defined by s. 2, s.-s. 5) shall be employed in a factory, is to protect young children from dangerous employment. It is not enough to take the statement of a child as to his age; the employer must satisfy himself by reasonable means that the applicant for work is of the requisite age; and it is for the jury to say whether reasonable pre-cautions have been taken. The illegal em-ployment may be evidence of negligence. Upon the facts of this case it was for the jury to say whether sufficient warning had been given by the defendants to protect the plaintiff—having regard to his age and the danger of the place. Melntosh v, Firstbrook Bos Co., 24 Occ. N, 370, 8 O. L. R. 419, 3 O. W. R. 924. Affirmed 10 O. L. R. 526, 6 O. W. R. 237.

Engagement by Contractor—Control—Defective Machinery—Notice—Failure to Remedy—Common Employment.]—The sinking of a winze in a mine belonging to the defendants was let to contractors, who used the boisting apparatus which the defendants maintained and operated by their servants, in the excavation, raising, and dumping of materials, in working the mine under the direction of their foreman. The winze was to easily a superior of their foreman. The winze was to be sunk according to directions from the defendants' engineer, and the contractors' employees were subject to the approval and direction of the defendants' superintendent, who also fixed the employees' wages and hours of labour. The plaintiff, a miner, was employed by the contractors under these conditions, and was paid by them through the defendants. While at his work in the winze the plaintif was injured by the fall of a hoisting bucket, which happened in consequence of a defect in the hoisting gear, which had been reported to the defendants' mastermechanic and had not been remedied:—Held, affirming the judgment in 10 B. C. R. 9, 23 Occ. N. 273, Taschereau, C.J.C., dissenting, that the plaintif was in common employment with the defendants' servants engaged in the operation of the mine, and that, even if there was a neglect of the duty imposed by statute, in respect to inspection of the machinery, as the accident occurred in consequence of the negligence of one of his fellow-servants, the defendants were excused from liability on the ground of common employment. Hastings v. Le Roi No. 2, Limited, 24 Occ. N. 116, 34 S. C. R. 177.

Evidence-Death from Electrical Shock —Inference as to Cause of Death—Jury— Negligence—New Trial.]—The plaintiff's son and another labourer were directed to clear up and remove the rubbish caused by their cutting a trench in the concrete floor of an alleyway in the defendants' power house. The alleyway was crossed at right angles by others, on each side of which were electric machines and live wires within arm's length of anyone working in the trench, one of the latter of which was ruptured, perhaps by bending in constant use. The other labourer went into a cross alleyway where the live wires were, although there had been a slat nailed across it when the two were put to work; and was sweeping towards the trench the litter that had been scattered about, when he suddenly became unconscious from an electric shock. The bodies of both men were found near a switchboard, plaintiff's son being dead. It was shewn that there was a rupture in the insulation of a loose loop or cable hanging from the switchboard directly over where the survivor was lying, and that the insulation of the wires was, with respect to the voltage passing, insufficient for the safety of anyone working among them, and that the hanging loop might easily have been better guarded than it was :- Held, that there was evidence which could not be properly was evidence which could not be properly withdrawn from the jury, and a nonsuit was set aside, and a new trial ordered. Griffiths v. Hamilton Electric and Cataract Power 23 Occ. N. 293, 6 O. L. R. 296, 2 O. W. Co., 23 R. 594.

Explosion—Verdict of Jury—Absence of Exact Proof of Cause of Injury—Appeal.]—A jury having found that an explosion occurred through the neglect of the defendants to supply suitable machinery and to take proper precautions, and that the resulting injury to the plaintiff, a workman in the employment of the defendants, was not in any way due to his negligence, the verdict was upheld by the unanimous judgment of two Courts—Held, reversing the judgment in Dominion Cartridge Co. v. McArthur, 22 Occ. N. 5, 31 S. C. R. 392, which went upon the ground that there was no exact proof of the fault which certainly caused the injury, that, although proof to that effect may reasonably be required in particular cases, it is not so where the accident is the work of a moment, and its origin and cause incapable of being detected. Factories Act, Ontario-Negligence-Unguarded Machinery-Proximate Cause.]-The plaintiff, a workman in a pulp factory, whose duty it was to take the pulp away from a drier, had to climb up a step-ladder to get on a plank in front of the drier. The stepladder was movable and placed close to a revolving cog-wheel. On returning from the drier on one oecasion, another workman, accidentally or intentionally, removed the ladder as the plaintiff was about to step on it, and before he could recover his balance his leg was caught in the cog-wheel and so crushed that it had to be amputated. In an action against the factory owners the july found that the injured workman was not negligent or careless; that the removal of the ladder would not have caused the accident if the wheel had been properly guarded, and the ladder fastened to the floor; and that the nador lastened to the door; and that the non-guarding and fastening was negligence of the defendants:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 3 O. L. R. 600, 22 Occ. N. 203, that the evidence justifield the findings; and that the proximate cause of the accident was the want of a proper guard on the wheel and fastening of the ladder to the floor, for which the do-fendants were liable. Myers v. Sault Ste. Marie Pulp Co., 23 Occ. N. 81, 33 S. C. R.

Findings of Jury—New Trial.]—In constructing the bins for an elevator, a staging had to be raised as the work progressed by ropes held by men standing on the top until it could be secured with dogs placed underneath. When sectred, workmen stood on the staging and nailed planks to the sides of the bin. The planks were run along a tramway at the side of the bin farthest from the tramway. While two men on the top of a bin were holding up the staging until it could be secured, a plank being thrown struck another on top of the adjoining pile and knocked it off. In falling it hit the men on top of the bin, and they were precipitated to the bottom and one of them killed. In an action by his widow against the contractor for building the elevator, 25 questions were submitted to the jury, and on their answers a verdict was entered for the plaintiff:—Held, Idington, J., dissenting, that.

while the falling of the plank caused the accident, there was no finding that the same was due to negligence of the defendant, nor any that the death of the deceased was due to negligence for which, under the evidence, the defendant was responsible. Therefore, and because many of the questions submitted were irrelevant to the issue and may have confused the jury, there should be a new trial. Jamieson v. Harris, 25 Occ. N. 79, 35 S. C. R. 625.

Inconclusive Verdict—Course of Trial
—Parties Bound By—Effect of s. 66 of Supreme Court Act, 1904—Practice.]—In an action for damages for personal injuries sutained by a workman engaged in decking logs, caused by the alleged negligence of the defendants in supplying a team of horses unfit for the work, the jury found that the team was unfit; that the accident was caused by reason of such unfitness; and that the plaintiff did not have a full knowledge and appreciation of the danger :- Held, affirming judgment in the plaintiff's favour. although the findings, read alone, did not establish any legal liability on the part of the defendants, yet, as the issues for the jury were limited to the questions submitted to them, and as the defendants' negligence was treated by all parties as an inference arising from the defect charged, a finding of the existence of the defect involved a finding of negligence. The provisions of s. 66 of the Supreme Court Act, 1904, are applicable to an appeal in an action tried and decided before the provisions were enacted The said section has not wholly repealed the rule that a litigant is bound by the way in which he conducts his case. The proviso of that section giving a party the privilege of having his right to have the issues for trial submitted to the jury, enforced by appeal, without any exception having been taken at the trial, does not give a right of new trial in cases where counsel settle by express stipulation the issues of fact for the jury, or where the issues submitted are accepted on both sides as the only issues on which the jury is to be asked to pass. Scott v. Fernie Lumber Co., 25 Occ. N. 51, 11 B. C. R. 91.

Independent Contractor—Jury.]—An employer is liable for the consequences, not of danger, but of negligence. He performs his duty when he furnishes machinery of ordinary and reasonable safety. Reasonable safety means safety according to the usages, habits, and ordinary risks of the business. No jury can be permitted to say that the usual and ordinary way commonly adopted by those in the same business is a negligent way for which liability shall be imposed. It is only so far as a duty arises on the part of the employer to provide proper means or precautions so as to make the service reasonably safe, and when a breach of that duty is a cause of injury, that a right of action accrues to the person injured. entered into an agreement with the defendant company to draw the coal and debris produced in the mine from the places at which the miners worked to the pit bottom, and to carry from the pit bottom to the workmen certain things required in their work, and K. agreed to provide competent and effi-cient drivers. The vehicles used were cars running on a railway track and drawn by a horse. The plaintiff was employed by K. as a driver, and while so employed was injured. On the evidence set out in the case, notwithstanding certain adverse answers to questions submitted to the jury, and the trial Judge's judgment thereon for the plaintiff:

—Held, that the plaintiff had failed to prove negligence on the part of the defendants. (2) That if the evidence established negligence on the part of K., resulting in the injury to the plaintiff, as was the inferential inding of the jury, K. was an independent contractor, for whose conduct the defendants were not liable. The judgment for the plaintiff was set aside and a judgment directed to be entered for the defendants. Patton v. Alberta Railway and Coal Co., 2 Terr. L. R. 438.

Infant—Machinery—Negligence of foreman. Holman v. Times Printing Co., 1 O. W. R. 7, 338, 756.

Infant — Factory — Dangerous Hole— Guard—Report of Inspector—Contributory Negligence—Reduction of Damages.]—The sixteen year old son of the plaintiff was employed by the defendant in his mill to throw out the waste made by a machine called an "edger." During his moments of leisure—and without having been requested to do so—he helped a man who was working "butter" or machine for trimming the end of planks. At a time when he was not occupied, he went to look out of the mill, and, in passing near the saw of the butter, which was placed above a hole from two feet to one and a half deep, he fell into this hole, and one of his arms was mutilated by the It was proved that he knew this hole, which was afterwards covered by the em ployer: Held, that there was contributory negligence on the part of the boy, and that the damages awarded by the Court of first instance should be reduced. 2. That the fact that the report of the inspector of factories stated that the mill was fitted up in accordance with the law did not relieve the employer from liability, seeing that the law requires that openings in the floor should be, as far as possible, surrounded with protecting apparatus. Nault v. O'Shaughnessy, Q. R. 19 S. C. 448.

Infant—Imprudence.]—The owner of a factory who employs children in it should take all necessary precautions to protect them against the consequences of acts which, although in the case of adults they would be imprudent, are such as might be expected in the case of children, but he is not responsible for accidents which the limited prudence to be expected from a child would have prevented. Mill - Dangerous Machinery - Want of Guard-Factories Act-Workmen's Compensation Act.]—The plaintiff, a boy between fourteen and fifteen years of age, was employed by the defendants in cleaning up about a machine — called a dove-tailing machine, consisting of rapidly-revolving knives—carrying pieces of board therefor; and on one occasion he had cleaned it. He had carried some boards and laid them down by the machine and was going for another load, when he was directed by the operator to straighten them out. On his proceeding to do so, and not observing that the machine was in motion, he put out his hand to remove some dust on it, when his arm was caught in the machine and cut off. The machine was of a very dangerous character, and the knives, when revolving, had the appearance of a solid stationary cylinder. There was no guard or protection around it. and no one at the time in actual charge of it, the operator having left it and standing some fifteen feet away looking out of a widow, The jury found that the cause of the accident was the negligence of the defendants in not having the machinery properly guarded, and the inattention of the operator, and they negatived contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendants were liable. Moore v. J. D. Moore Co., 22 Occ. N. 283, 4 O. L. R. 167, 1 O. W. R. 290, Mill—Dangerous Work—Precautions—Liability.]—In order to free himself from responsibility, an employer must, either personally or through his foreman, not only order his employees to discontinue work considered dangerous, but must also either personally or through his foreman, see that the orders are respected and carried out, and if he does not do so, he is responsible for accidents which happen as a result of the non-observance of these orders. Judgment in Q. R. 21 S. C. 32 reversed. Fournier v. Lamourcua, Q. R. 21 S. C. 99.

Mill — Opening in Floor—Fencing—Contributory Negligence.]—T, was working in a saw-mill at a time when the saws were stopped in order to change any saws requiring to be replaced. One only, the butting saw, was left running, being near the end of a board 12 feet long used to measure the planks before they were cut. While the saws were stopped several of the workmen sat on this table, and T., zoing towards the end to find a seat, slipped and fell into an opening in the floor where the deal ends were dropped on being cut off. On slipping he threw out his left arm, which came against the saw in motion, and was cut off:—Held, that the want of protection of the opening was negligence for which the owner was responsible. Held, also, Strong, C.J., hesitante, that if T. was guilty of contributory negligence, he was sufficiently punished by a division of the damages at the trial. Held, per Sedgewick, Davies, and Mills, JJ., that negligence could not be attributed to the owner from the fact that the butting saw was not stopped with the others. Price v. Talon, 22 Occ, N. 195, 28 S. C. R. 123.

workman employed by the defendants, in order to do his work, had to climb a step ladder and step over the unguarded rim of a cogwheel, to a plank on which he did his work. In coming from his work a trackman removed the ladder as he was stepping on it, and in recovering himself his leg went through the spokes of the wheel and he was injured. At the trial the jury in answer to questions found that the injury to plaintiff was caused by the negligence of the defendants, and not by his own negligence or want of proper care; that it was only to a certain extent caused by the negligence of a fellow-servant, for, if the wheel had been properly guarded and the ladder properly fastened to the floor, the accident would not have happened; that the negligence of the defendants consisted in guarding the wheel and fastening the ladder; that the wheel was a dangerous part of the mill gearing, and was not, as far as practicable, securely guarded; that he would not have received the injury if it had been so securely guarded :- Held, that the findings of the jury as to negligence were amply supported by the evidence, and could not be in-terfered with; that the defendants were bound by the common law to take all reasonable precautions for the safety of their workmen, and it was for the jury to say what were such reasonable precautions: that the defendants were also bound by the Factories Act to securely guard, as far as practicable, all dangerous parts of their machinery; that the jury having so found, and their finding being sup-ported by the evidence, the intervention of the truckman in wrongfully taking away the ladder did not relieve the defendants from the consequences of their negligence, for their negligence still remained an operative cause of the workman's injury. Mann v. Ward, 8 Times L. R. 699, not regarded as an authority. As the damages were excessive, a new trial was granted unless the plaintiffs would consent to reduce them. Myers v. Sault Ste. Marie Pulp and Paper Co., 22 Occ. N. 203, 3 O. L. R. 600, 1 O. W. R. 280.

Mill-Use of Dangerous Materials-Proximate Cause of Accident — Presumptions — Findings of Jury—Appeal.]—As there can be no responsibility on the part of an employer for injures sustained by an employee in the course of his employment, unless there be positive testimony, or presumptions weighty, precise, and consistent, that the employer is chargeable with negligence which was the chargeable with negligence with a sine immediate necessary and direct cause of the accident which led to the injuries suffered, it is the duty of an appellate Court to relieve the employer of liability in a case where there is want of evidence as to the immediate cause of an explosion of dangerous material which caused the injuries, notwith-standing that the findings of a jury in favour of the plaintiff had been sustained by two Courts below. Taschereau, J., dissented. taking a different view of the evidence, and being of opinion that the findings of the jury, concurred in by both Courts below, were based upon reasonable presumptions drawn from the evidence, and that, following George Matthews Co. v. Bouchard, 28 S. C. R. 580, and Metropolitan R. W. Co. v. Wright, 11 App. Cas. 152, those findings ought not to be reversed on appeal. Asbestos and Asbestic Co. v. Durand, 30 S. C. R. 285, discussed and approved. Dominion Cartridge Co. v. McArthur, 22 Occ. N. 5, 31 S. C. R. 392, Mines-Common Employment-Employers' Liability Act.]-The provisions of s. 3 of the Inspection of Metalliferous Mines Act, 1897. of British Columbia, do not impose upon an absent mine-owner the absolute duty of ascertaining that the plans for the working of the mines are accurate and sufficient and, unless the mine-owner is actually aware of inaccuracy or imperfections in such plans, he cannot be held responsible for the result of an accident occurring in consequence of the neglect of the proper officials to plat the plans up to date according to surveys, The defendant company acquired a mine which had been ant company acquired a mine which had been previously worked by another company, and provided a proper system of surveys and operation, and employed competent superintendents and surveyors for the efficient carrying out of their system. An accident occurred in consequence of neglect to plat the working plans according to surveys made up to date, the inaccurate plans misleading the superintendent so that he ordered works to be carried out without sufficient information as to the situation of openings made, or taking the necessary precautions to secure the safety of the men in the working places. The engineers who had made the surveys and omitted platting the information on the plans, had left the employment of the company prior to the engagement of the deceased, who was killed in the accident:—Held, that the employers, not being charged with knowledge of the neglect of their officers to carry out the efficient system provided for the operation of their mine, could not be held responsible for the consequences of failure to provide complete and accurate plans of the mine :- Held, also, that negligence of the superintendent would be negligence of a co-employee of the person injured for which the employers would not be liable at common law, although there might be liability under the British Columbia Employers' Liability Act, R. S. B. C. c. 69. s. 3, for negligence on the part of the super-intendent. Judgment in 23 Occ. N. 309, 9 B. C. R. 551, reversed and a new trial ordered. Hosking v. Le Roi No. 2, Limited, 24 Occ. N. 117, 34 S. C. R. 244.

Mine — Defective System—Rules—Findings of Jury.]—In an action by a miner against the mine owners for damages for injuries caused him by being precipitated to the bottom of a shaft when at work in the mine, the jury found inter alia that the system adopted for lowering the men was faulty and that the plaintiff did not comply with the printed rules of the mine:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment, although adherence by him to the rules would have prevented the accident. Warmington v. Palmer, 7 B. C. R. 414.

—Held, affirming the decision of McColl, C. J., that the cage or skip used for lowering and hoisting men is not "falling material," within the meaning of that term as used in Rule 20 of s. 25 of the Metalliferous Mines Inspection Act, and amendment of 1890 (c. 49, s. 12) does not create any duty on the mine owner to provide protection from a falling cage. McKeleey v. LeRoi Mining Co., 22 Occ. N. 246, 9 B. C. R. 62.

Mines—Non-observance of Rules—Mines Act.]—A master is entitled to make and insist on the observance of reasonable rules for the conduct of his business, and if, in consequence of the non-observance of these rules by a servant, that servant is injured, the master is not liable. It was held that the master was not liable in damages for the death of a servant resulting from the servant using, in direct violation of rules, the cage instead of the ladders to ascend from a mine, although the ladders did not in some particulars conform to the requirements of the Mines Act. Anderson v. Bikado Gold Mining Co., 22 Occ. N. 175, 3 O.

Mines-Shaft-Signals - Disregard of Rules - Negligence - Contributory Negligence-Damages-Employers' Liability Act, B. C.]—A miner was getting into a bucket by which he was to be lowered into the mine when, owing to the chain not being checked, his weight carried him rapidly down and he was badly hurt. In an action for damages against the mine-owners, the jury found that the system of lowering the men was faulty, the men in charge of it negligent, and the engine and brake by which the bucket was lowered not fit and proper for the purpose. Printed rules were posted near the mouth of the pit providing, among other things, that signals should be given by any miner wishing to go down the mine or be brought up, by means of bells, the number telling the engineer and pitman what was required. The jury found that it was not usual, in descending, to signal with the bells, and that the injured miner knew of the rules, but had not complied with them on the occasion of the accident. On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from a judgment setting aside the verdict for the plainmeat setting aside the verdict for the plantiff:—Held, reversing that judgment, 22 Occ. N. 126, 8 B. C. L. R. 344, and restoring the judgment of the trial Judge, 7 B. C. R. 414, that there was ample evidence to support the findings of the jury that the defendants were negligent; that there was no contributory negligence by non-use of the signals, the rules having, with consent of the employers and of the persons in charge of the men, been disregarded, which indicated their abrogation; the new trial should, therefore, not have been granted:—Held, further, that, as the negligence causing the accident was not that of the employers themselves, but that of the persons having control of those going down the mine, it was not a case of negligence at common law with no limit to the amount of damages, but the latter must be assessed under the Employers' Liability Act, R. S. B. C. 1897 c. 69. Warmington v. Palmer, 22 Occ. N. 199, 32 S. C. R. 126.

Mines—Statutory Mining Regulations— Fault of Fellow Workmen.]—The defendant company employed competent officials for the superintendence of their mine, and required that the statutory regulations should be observed. A labourer was sent to work in an unused balance which had not been fenced or inspected, and an explosion of gas occurred, from the effects of which he died. In an action for damages by the widow:—Held, reversing the judgment below, 34 N. S. Reps. 319, Taschereau and Sedgewick, JJ., dissenting, that, as the company had failed to maintain the mine in a condition suitable for carrying on their works with reasonable safety, they were liable for the injuries sustained by the employee, although the explosion may have been attributable to neglect of duty by fellow-workmen. Grant v. Acadia Coal Co., 22 Occ. N. 359, 32 S. C. R. 427.

Negligence — Dangerous place—"Way" —Contributory negligence. Birmingham v. Larkin, 2 O. W. R. 536, 3 O. W. R. 607, 5 O. W. R. 549.

Negligence-Death - Action by Widow --Employment of Competent Persons—Damages—Pecuniary Loss—Benefit of Heirship.] The plaintiff's husband was suffocated by a fire which broke out suddenly in the defend-ants' distributing station. The evidence, in the opinion of the Court, justified the con-clusion that if competent persons had been in charge of the work proceeding when the fire broke out, it might have been extinguished in time to prevent any injury to the de-ceased: — Held, that it is the duty of the employer to have competent persons in charge while work of a dangerous character is being performed, and he is responsible for an injury to a workman which might have been prevented if the persons in charge had been sufficiently on the alert to give timely warning. The fact that the deceased might have adopted a safer and more prudent method of attempting to escape from the danger did not relieve the employer from responsibility, 2. The "damage occasioned by the death" of the person injured, under art. 1056, C. C., is limited to pecuniary loss, and where the widow, claimant under that article, is heir to the deceased, the pecuniary benefit accruing to her as such heir must be deducted from the loss occasioned by the death. 3. It is for the defendant, in such action, to establish to what extent the claimant, as heir, establish to what extent the chainman, as negri-has benefited by the death, after liquidation of the liabilities of the estate. The Court may, however, under art. 371, C. C. P., in the absence of such proof, order the plaintiff to appear and answer on oath, in order to complete the proof necessary for the determination of the amount for which judgment should be rendered. Warboys v. Lachine Rapids Hydraulic and Land Co., Q. R. 22 S. C. 531.

Negligence — Evidence — Finding of Jury.]—An appeal by the defendant from the judgment in 32 O. R. 8, 20 Occ. N. 324, 20 Occ. N. 121, was dismissed with costs, the Court agreeing that there was some evidence to support the finding of negligence. Kelly v. Davidson. 21 Occ. N. 13, 27 A. R. 637.

Negligence—Unskilled Workman — Dangerona Work—Reasonable Precautions.]—Although an employer is not liable, as a general rule, for the result of accidents which happen to employees from dangers esentially inherent in the work which is being performed, he nevertheless becomes liable when reasonable precautions have not been taken by him to reduce the danger to the lowest point or remove it altogether. And so, when work which is not especially unsafe for a skilled workman, such as the driving of spikes on a railway, is intrusted to an unskilled person, the employer is responsible for an accident to the workman resulting from his inexperience, reasonable precautions to avoid it not having been adopted. Sparano v, Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., Q. R. 22 S. C. 292.

Negligence of Fellow-servant — Common Employment,]—Negligence of a trackmaster of a railway company causing an injury to a man employed as one of the crew engaged in removing gravel from a ballasting train working on a section of the road under the control of the track-master, is the negligence of a fellow-servant engaged in a common employment, and the company is not liable in an action for damages resulting therefrom. Day v. Uanadian Pacific R. W. Co., 36 N. B. Reps. 328.

Negligence of Fellow-servant - Factories Act-Elevator-Mechanical Device.]-The plaintiff was employed as a dressmaker in the defendants' departmental store, and, while descending in their elevator after her day's work was done, was injured by the fall of the elevator, owing to the failure of the person in charge to properly manage it: -Held, that the defendants were not answerable at common law for such neglect, which was that of the plaintiff's fellow-servant, nor under the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 160, for the fellow-servant was not a person having any superintendence intrusted to him, within ss. 2 (1) and 3 (2):-Held, that the defendants' store was a factory within the meaning of the Act, and the onus of proving that the brake and "dogs" in use in connection with the elevator were sufficient was upon the defendants; but it was not necessary for them to shew that the device in its concrete form as part of the elevator had been approved by the inspector in accordance with s. 20, s.s. 1 (d), of the Ontario Factories Act, R. S. O. c. 256; it was sufficient that the kind of device used had been approved:—Held, also, that in order to render the employer liable to a civil action it was incumbent on the plaintiff to make out the casual connection between the omission to provide the statutory safeguards and the injury complained of; and that she had not done. Carnahan v. Robert Simpson Co., 21 Occ. N. 74, 32 O.

Negligence of Foreman — Jury. Bowman v. Imperial Cotton Co., 1 O. W. R. 450.

Negligence of Master — Question for Jury — Res ipsa loquitur. Brotherson v. Corry, 1 O. W. R. 34.

Notice of Injury-Excuse for Want of-Evidence-Statement of Deceased - Negligence-Cause of Injury-Jury.]-The knowledge of the defendants of the injury and the cause of it, at the time it occurs, is (in case of death) a reasonable excuse for the want of the notice of injury required by s. 9 of the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 160, where there is no evidence that they were in any way prejudiced in their defence by the want of it. Where the deceased received the in-juries from which he died by being run over by a train of cars, a statement made by him immediately after he was run over, in answer to a question as to how it happened, "I slipped and it hit me," was held admissible in evidence. Thompson v. Trevanian. Skin. 402, Aveson v. Kinnaird, 6 East 188, 193, and Rex v. Foster, 6 C. & P. 325, followed. Upon that evidence and evidence of the slippery condition, by reason of snow and ice, of the place where the deceased slipped, a question should have been submitted to the jury whether he slipped by reason of such oudition, and whether such condition was due to the negligence of the defendants. Armstrong v. Canada Atlantic R. W. Co.. 21 Occ. N. 497, 2 O. L. R. 219.

Cause of Action.]—In an action by a brakes nan in the defendants' employment to recover damages for injuries sustained by him by reason of the negligence of the defendants, the defendants proposed to plead other defences along with "not guilty by starute."
Held, that it was not necessary to plead contributory negligence specially, for it could be raised under "not guilty by starute." by Rule 13, J. O., N. W. T. 2. That a denial of "each and every material allegation contained in the statement of claim" was too

grounds for the denial. 3. That the defendants should be allowed to set up the defence that the injury was caused by the negligence of the plaintiff's fellow servants in the common employment of the defendants; for c. 13 of the Ordinances of 1990, taking away the right to set up this defence, was not retroactive as applying to a mere matter of procedure, but gave a substantial right. 4. That the defendants might raise a guestion of law by pleading that the statement of law by pleading that the statement of claim disclosed no cause of action, but they must give the grounds. Smith v. Canavan Pacific R. W. Co., 21 Occ. N. 195.

Pleading - Onus-Contributory Negligence—Employer's Liability Act, N. S.]—The statement of claim alleged that while the plaintiff was in the defendant's employ, and engaged in filling a car with dolomite from a chute, a car was suddenly dumped into the chute above, and came down with great force, and struck and injured the plaintiff, and that such injury was caused by the defendant, his engineers, etc., not warning the plaintiff that the car of dolomite was about to be dumped into the chute, thus giving him notice to avoid danger:—Held, that upon the pleading, the onus was on the plaintiff to pleading, the onus was on the plaintiff to prove that that injury was caused by the negligence of defendant; and that, in the absence of evidence to satisfy the burden resting upon him, he could not recover. The evidence shewed that it was the plaintiff's duty to place the car to be loaded below the chute, and to remain in a place of safety until the car was loaded, and the gates of the chute closed, and then to remove the car to the crusher; that, at the request of a fellow workman, he attempted to pull out the car before it was loaded, and before the gates were closed, with the result that he sustained the injury complained of :- Held, that there was contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff which prevented his recovery. MacPherson v. MacLachlan, 36 N. S. Reps.

The requirements of s, 9 of the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act are directory rather than imperative, and the omission to give the name and description of the person in the defendants' service by whose negligence the accident which gave rise to the action occurred, is a matter to be dealt with by an application for particulars, and not by demurrer. Makarsky v. Canadian Pacific Railway—Collision — Duty of Enginement—Orders of Conductor — Rules—Contributory Negligence.]—By rule 232 of the defendants, "conductors and enginemen will be held equally responsible for the violation of any of the rules governing their trains, and they must take every precaution for the protection of their trains, even if not provided for by the rules." By rule 52, enginemen must obey the conductor's orders as to starting their trains, unless such orders involve violation of the rules or endanger the train's safety; and rule 65 forbids them to leave the engine, except in a case of necessity. Another rule provides that a train must not pass from one double to single track until it is ascertained that all trains due which have the right of way have arrived or left. M. was engineman on a special train which was about to pass from a double to a single track, and when the time for starting arrived he asked the conductor if it was all right to go, knowing that the regular train passed over the single track about that time. He received from the conductor the usual signal to start, and did so. After proceeding about two miles his train collided with the regular train, and he was injured. In an action against the company for damages in consequence of such injury :- Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal (31st December, 1901), that M. was not obliged, before starting, to examine the register and ascertain for himself if the regular train had passed, that duty being imposed by the rules on the conductor alone; that he was bound to obey the conductor's order to start the train, having no reason to question its propriety; and he was, therefore, not guilty of contributory negligence in starting as he did. Miller v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 22 Occ. N. 353, 32 S. C. R. 454.

Railway — Contributory Negligence — Nonsuit—Jury—Employers' Liability Act.]—F, a conductor and brakesman in the employ of the defendant company, while turning the brake wheel, fell from his train and was run over and killed. The nut which fastens the brake wheel to the brake mast, and which should have been on, was not on, and so the wheel came off and the accident resulted. It was the duty of the deceased to examine the cars of the train and see that they were in good order before leaving the station which the train was just leaving:—Held, in an action by F's personal representatives to recover damages in respect of his death, that it was F's own neglect in not seeing that the brake was in a secure condition, and that there was therefore no case for the jury. Faxcett v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 22 Occ. N. 244. 8 B. C. R. 393.

Railway - Employers' Liability-Excessive Damages. |-- In the defendants' coal mine the haulage slope, which was necessarily used as a travelling road by the workmen, was not provided with man-holes at intervals of not more than twenty yards, as required by the Coal Mines Regulation Act, and on account of this lack of sufficient manholes it was the custom of the defendants not to run the trip during the time the workmen were going to and coming from work. The plaintiff while coming from work was run into and injured by the trip, which had been started off during a prohibited time. The trip was a train of cars, operated by a stationary engine on the outside, and used for hauling coal out of the mine. found that the accident was caused by the defendants' negligence in letting the trip down, and on the verdict judgment was en-tered for the plaintiff for $1,424 and costs. An appeal to the full Court was dismissed. the Court refusing to reverse the findings of fact or to interfere with the damages as excessive:—Held, also, that the place in ques-tion was a "railway" within the meaning

Railway — Lights on Train.]—A conductor in the defendants' employment, while performing the duty for which he was engaged at the Windsor station of the Canadian Pacific Railway in Montreal, was killed by a train which was being moved backwards in the station yard. There was no light on the rear end of the last car of the train, nor was there any person stationed there to give warning of the movement of the train:—Held, that, by omitting to have a light on the rear end of the train, the railway company failed in their duy, and this constituted prima facie evidence of negligence. Judgment in Q. R. 41 K. B. 394 affirmed. Boisseau v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 22 Occ. N. 358, 32 S. C. R. 424.

Railway—Workmen's Compensation Act
—Notice of Injury—Absence of—Reasonable Excuse—Meaning of—Cause of Injury.] — While the notice of injury required by s. 9 of the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 160, is for the employer's protection against stale or imaginary claims, and to enable him, while the facts are recent, to make inquiry, the injured workman, however, is the primary object of the legislative consideration; and therefore under that section of ss. 13 and 14, notice may be dispensed with where there is reasonable excuse for the want thereof, the employer not being prejudiced thereby. What constitutes reasonable excuse must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case, and a reasonable excuse will be inferred where, as here, there is the notoriety of the accident. the knowledge of the employers of the injury which resulted in death, and its cause, and of a claim having been made on them by the deceased's representative, which they stated they would take into their consideration, but to which no final answer had ever been given. In an action against a railway company for alleged negligence, it appeared that the deceased was killed by being run over while shunting cars. The evidence shewed that the space between two sets of tracks in the defendants' yard was dangerous by reason of an accumulation of snow and ice thereon, but that the tracks themselves were in good condition, and it was merely a matter of conjecture, whether, at the time of the accident, the deceased was on the tracks themselves, or in the space between them:—Held, that, under these circumstances, the accident could not be said to be due to the defendants' negligence, and the plaintiffs' action failed. Judgment in 2 O. L. R. 219, 21 Occ. N. 497, reversed. Armstrong v. Canada Atlantic R. W. Co., 22 Occ. N. 373, 4 O. L. R. 590.

Ship — Bursting of Capstan—Defect — Notice—Superintendent — Competence—Ag-gravation of Injury by Subsequent Conduct —Muster of Ship—Scope of Authority.]— The mate of a steamer was injured by the bursting of a capstan, and brought a common law action against the owners for damages for his injuries, and also for aggravation of his injuries owing to his unauthorized detention on the steamer after the accident -Held, that, in the absence of evidence of a defective system, the defendants were not liable for the negligence, if any, of a competent engineer, who was a fellow-servant of the plaintiff and not the representative of defendants. If there was any negligence on the part of the captain in keeping the plaintiff on the steamer, the defendants were not liable for it, as such interference was not within the scope of his employment. Morgan v. British Yukon Navigation Co., 11 B. C. R. 316, 1 W. L. R. 294.

Verdict—Inconsistent Findings — Construction.]—In an action for damages for personal injuries received by the plaintiff while in the employ of the defendant:—Held, that in construing a jury's verilict, consisting of a number of questions and answers, the whole yerdict must be taken together and construed reasonably, regard being had to the course of the trial. The injuries were caused by the plaintiff's failure to withdraw himself from danger in response to a signal. The jury found that the defendant was negligent and that the plaintiff should have heard the signal, but being busy might not have heard it. The answer to the question as to contributory negligence, to which the jury's attention was directed by the Judge, was. "We do not consider that plaintiff was doing anything but his regular work." Workmen's Compensation Act Defect in Ways, Works, etc .- Person Intrusted with Duty of Seeing that Condition Proper-Fellow-servant - Negligence.] Held, that a cleat upon the roof of a building upon which the plaintiff was working, was a part of "the ways, works, machinery, plant, buildings or premises connected with, intended for or used in the business of the employer," within the mening of s. 3 of the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 160; and, there being evidence upon which a jury might find that the cleat was defective in that it was not securely fastened, that the defective condition was the proximate cause of the injury, and that it was due to the negligence the defendants' workmen who put on the cleats, the defendants would be answerable for the negligence (if found) as being negligence of persons intrusted by them with the duty of seeing that the condition or arrangement of the ways, etc., was proper, within the meaning of s. s. 1 of s. 6. Differences between s. s. 1 of s. 6 and the corresponding provisions of the English Act pointed out. Under s. s. 1 of s. 6 of the Ontario Act the employer is answerable, so far as the condition or arrangement of the ways, etc., is concerned, for the negligence of any person, whether in his service or not, to whom he intrusts the duty mentioned in the subsection, in the performance of that duty, in the same way and to the same extent as he would have been answerable at the common law had he taken upon himself personally the performance of the duty, and where an appliance necessary for the safety of the work-man is required in the course of the work, and the employer directs any one to provide it ready for the use of the workman, that person is one intrusted with the duty of seeing that the appliance is proper. Workmen's Compensation Defects-Private Railway-Unpacked Frog-Negligence.]-The defendants, manufacturers, had on their premises a private line of railway, with switches, turnouts, etc., connected with one of the public railway lines, and over which ordinary freight cars and steam locomotives used for the purposes of the defendants' business, were drawn or propelled in the usual manner. The plaintiff, switchman employed by the defendants, while engaged in coupling cars, had his foot caught in an unpacked frog, or an unpacked space between the wing rail and the frog, or between the rail guard and the other rail, whereby he was severely injured: - Held, that the omission of the packing was a defect in the condition or arrangements of the defendants' works, machinery, or plant, the meaning of s. 3 (1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, as well as of s. 5 (2), (3), which applied to the defendants' railway, and that it was for the jury to say on the evidence whether the plaintiff had knowledge and the defendants were ignorant of such defect. Workmen's Compensation Disobedience to Orders—Railway—Death of Engine-driver — Negligence — Contributory Negligence-Signals.]-The defendants were erecting an interlocking apparatus at a point of their main line where there was a siding, whereby the switch could be worked and a signal shewn to indicate how it was set, by lowering the upper or lower arm of the signal as the case might be. The plaintiff's husband, an experienced engine-driver in the defendants' employment, having been informed before starting with his train that the apparatus was in working order, and that all trains were to be governed by the rules applicable in such cases, approaching the spot saw the in such cases, approximately signal with both arms down, intimating that the interlocker was out of order, but nevertheless proceeded, and, the switch not being fastened in any way, the train was derailed and he was killed. As a matter of fact, the apparatus was not in working order, a switchman of the defendants being at the spot with flag signals to use in case of necessity, but he failed to warn the deceased.

The defendants' rules governing engine-drivers provided that they should stop when in doubt as to the meaning of a signal, also that a signal imperfectly displayed must be regarded as a danger signal, and that in case of doubt they were to take the safe course and run no risk. Employees were also specially instructed that if any interlocker was out of order trains were to be flagged through. The plaintiff brought this action for damages under R. S. O. 1897 c. 166:—Held, that, although there was a plain defect in the condition of the way which was the cause of the derailment of the engine, the plaintiff was properly nonsuited, in that her husband, had he survived, could not have maintained an action, having negligently disobeyed his orders as contained in the rules by proceeding in spite of the signnis. III. WAGES.

Absence from Duty-Illness - Resolution of Ferry Commission - Powers - Approval of Governor in Council-Acquiescence -Notice.]-M. was employed by the defendants to act in the capacity of captain of one of their ferry steamers, under a contract in writing, the employment to commence on the 1st March, 1899. On the 8th January, 1900, the defendants passed a resolution that after that date no employee would be paid for any time he or she might be absent from duty. This resolution was never formally communicated to M., but there was evidence that he was aware of its terms, and that, on two occasions, a portion of his wages was deducted for absence from duty. On the 15th December, 1900, M. was taken ill, and was thereafter continuously absent from duty until the time of his death, which occurred on the 16th July, 1901. In an action by the executivity of M. claiming payment of wages for the time during which he was so absent from duty :- Held, per Weatherbe, J., and Graham, E.J., affirming the judgment appealed from, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Per Townshend and Meagher, JJ., that deceased having been aware of the passage of the resolution, and of the change which it pur-ported to make in the terms of his contract, and having assented to the resolution by accepting his wages, less the deductions made therefrom, the action could not be maintained. Per Graham, E.J., that the resolution was not effective in the absence of evidence that it was submitted to and approved of by the was submitted to and approved of by the Governor in council; and that the resolution was ultra vires. Contract—Deduction for Defective Work—Time Lost—Dumages for Defects.]—Where a cheesemaker, hired for the season, with a stipulation guaranteeing his work, and agreeing that the loss from sales of cheese by reason of defective workmanship might be deducted from his wages, is dismissed before the expiry of his term, he is entitled to his hire for time lost when it is shewn that the defective cheese resulted from defective factory appliances; and where both factory owner and cheesemaker were to blame for defective cheese, the maker should be allowed wages for the lost time, less the damage suffered on sales of defective cheese. Leduc v, Lelionde, Q. R. 24 S. C. 423.

Engagement by the Day-Dismissal at Mid-day.] — The defendant had engaged the plaintiff and several other workmen by the day at $2 a day, and they had done masonry work for him from the commencement of July until midday on Saturday the 15th August, when the defendant dismissed them, telling them that he had not space and stone to keep them busy for the rest of the day. The defendant acted thus because, as he said, the number of masons engaged was too great for the work to be done that afternoon. When he dismissed them at midday be only paid them up to midday. They remained at the place at the defendant's disposition, and the defend-ant did not pay them until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and then refused to pay them their afternoon. They sued him for the wages for the afternoon:—Held, that they had the right to wages for the half day, be cause the defendant should have foreseen the shortness in the material and should not have engaged for the whole day more workmen than he had need of. Wrongful Dismissal of Servant — Damages—Costs. McCrae v. Sturgeon Falls Pulp Co., 3 O. W. R. 737.

IV. INJURY TO THIRD PERSON BY SERVANT.

Execution of Functions—Permitting Child to Ride in Vehicle.]—Although masters and employers are responsible for damage caused by their servants and workmen in the execution of the proper functions of such servants and workmen, they are not responsible for damage caused by such servants and workmen during the time that they are exercising such functions, but not in the actual execution thereof. So, the infant son (ten years of age) of the plaintiff having secretly got into a vehicle owned by the defendant, without the knowledge of the driver of the vehicle, and, when discovered, having been permitted by the driver to remain in p—32 the vehicle only because the latter did not wish to leave him upon the public road a long way from his father's house, the defendant was not responsible for the fact that the vehicle was struck by an engine when crossing a railway, and the plaintiff's son hurt, the driver not being engaged in the execution of his functions when he thus permitted the presence of the boy in the defendant's vehicle. Marquis v. Robidoux, Q. R. 19 S. C. 361.

False and Malicious Statements by Servant Injurious to Business of Former Employer—Benefit of Master— Action on the Case—Trade Slander—Liability of Master—Scope of Employment—Com-pany—Judgment against Both Master and Servant—Joint Tort-feasors — Measure of Damages—Findings of Jury—Judgment Not-withstanding Wrong Finding—Rule 615,]— Plaintiffs carry on business in the city Toronto as printers and publishers. T published to sell to the publishers of newspapers throughout the Dominion of Canada, a publication known as an annual Christmas or holiday number, which was disposed of by such purchasing newspaper publishers as a Christmas or holiday number for their papers. Plaintiffs had been publishing the said periodical for many years and alleged that it was an important and lucrative part of their business, from which they have derived considerable profits. Defendant Tibbs was in the employment of plaintiffs in the capacity of salesman, selling the periodical above referred to, and in that capacity travelled each year through different parts of the Dominion of Canada, and became personally acquainted with plaintiffs' customers. He left plaintiffs' employment in November, 1903, and entered that of defendant company. The plaintiffs charged that the defendant company decided to issue a publication, under the name "Christmas Number," similar to the publication issued by plaintiffs, and to sell the same to publishers of newspapers to be issued by them as Christmas numbers for their various publications. The defend-ant company sent out defendant Tibbs as their salesman much earlier in the season than it was the custom of plaintiffs to send out their salesman; the defendant Tibbs travelled as such salesman for defendant company throughout the Dominion of Can-ada, soliciting orders for the publication of add, soliciting orders for the publication of defendant company from the various custom-ers from whom formerly he had solicited orders on behalf of plaintiffs. They fur-ther charged that for the purpose of inducing the various customers of plaintiffs and others to give their orders to defendant company for the said publication, defendant Tibbs and defendant company, through and by Tibbs as their accredited agent and representative, falsely and maliciously made to many persons untrue and fraudulent statements. tending thereby to injure the trade and business of plaintiffs, and well knowing the same ness of plaintins, and well knowing the same to be untrue. The statements differed some-what from each other, but were to the effect that the Press Publishing Company (the defendant company) had taken over the business of the Sheppard Publishing Company (the plaintiffs) or that part of their business relating to the publication of the Christmas annual, and that plaintiffs were going out of that branch of the business. The questions submitted to the jury and their answers

thereto were as follows: 1. Did defendant Tibbs utter the words charged or words conveying the same meaning to Wilson, Elliott, Featherston, Gordon, Denholm, Fanson, Eilis, and Hogg, or any of them? Answer: Yes. 2. To which of these men did he utter such words? Answer: To all of them. 3. Did he utter them maliciously? Answer: Yes. 4. What damages do you find plaintiffs have proved that they have sustained in consequence of each of the statements which you find Tibbs uttered? Answer: Wilson, $50: Elliott, $30; Featherston, —; Ellis, $15: Gordon, $20; Denholm, $25; Fanson, $15; Hogg, $25. 5. Did Harkins, knowing that Tibbs had uttered the words charged, to Elliott, and knowing that they were false, and intending to do so, ratify what Tibbs had done? Answer: No. 6. Did Tibbs in uttering any of such words, which you find he did utter, act within the scope of his employment by the Press Publishing Company for their beuefit? Answer: No. 7. What for their bevent? Answer: No. 7. What general damage, if any, do you find plaintiffs sustained in consequence of such statements charged, which you find Tibbs made? Answer: None. Upon these questions and answers the trial Judge directed to be entered the judgment appealed from "Held it was the judgment appealed from :-Held, it was clear that Tibbs was employed by defendant company to sell their Christmas number, and as such agent was acting for and on their behalf and within the scope of his employment in obtaining orders for them, and the jury have found that he uttered the words charged maliciously. The defendant com-pany received these orders and filled them and collected the subscription price; in other words, took advantage of the representations that were made by defendant Tibbs.—Held, it was clear that the agent was acting in the course of his employment in canvassing for subscriptions, although he made statements which were not authorized by the company; no finding such as is made in answer to question 6 could be sustained, nor was there any reason to think that new light could be thrown upon the case by a new trial. There can, therefore, be no object in sending the case back for a new trial, when, upon the view taken, only one result ought to follow. Therefore judgment should be entered against both defendants with costs, and that plaintiffs' appeal should be allowed with costs, and the appeal of defendant Tibbs be dismissed with costs. Sheppard Pub. Co. v. Press Pub. Co., 5 O. W. R. 775, 10 O. L. R. 243.

Liability of Master for Negligence of Servant-Injury to Third Person-Want of Skill.]-The defendants were engaged by M. T. & Co. to remove furniture from one place to another. It became necessary to lower some tables from an upper window, and the plaintiff, who was not in the employment of the defendants, but was employed by M. T. & Co., was directed to stand below, and, by the use of a long board, keep the tables clear of the windows below. he was so engaged a table, which was badly tied by defendants' men, fell down and the plaintiff's legs were fractured :-Held, that as the defendants alone had charge of the removal, so far as the actual performance and mode of operation were concerned, responsibility for their employee's want of skill in not properly securing the table, attached to the defendants, and they were, therefore, liable for the result of the accident, Williams v. Cunningham, O. R. 23 S. C. 263.

Negligence of Servant-Injury to Third Person Scope of Employment—Railway— Sectionmen—Piling Ties on Railway near Crossing—Nuisance—New Trial.]—Plaintiff was a carpenter and contractor. On 24th August, 1903, he was driving across defendants' track in the township of Oxford when his horse became frightened, apparently by a pile of old railway ties upon the highway, and, by reason of the horse swerving, the buggy wheel went into the ditch, and plaintiff was thrown out and very severely injured. A section man, called by plaintiff, deposed that the ties were placed on the highway by himself and another section man. and the section foreman, the others acting under the direction of the latter. laid down in Lord Hale's time and repeatedly since, that wherever the master intrusts a horse or carriage or anything which may readily be made an implement of mischief. to his servant to be used by him in furtherance of his master's business or for the execution of his orders, the master will be responsible for the negligent management of the thing intrusted to the servant so long as the latter is using it or dealing with it in the ordinary course of his employment. Within these definitions, there was evidence that defendants' servants placed the ties question on the highway in the course of their employment. This was purely a question of fact, and I think there was reasonable evidence from which a jury might so infer. Their employment or duty at that time was to get rid of the no longer useful and now incumbering ties, and to do so two modes are suggested, both of which had previously been adopted-one to burn them on the defendant's own lands, the other to permit their workmen to take them home for firewood. By either method the defendants purpose would have been accomplished. But the ties were the property of defendants, and there was no evidence to shew that they had ceased to be their property when placed on the highway, even assuming what was certainly not proved, that the section foreman, who was not called, intended to afterwards remove them to his own house. work was done by defendants' workmen during their ordinary working hours, and under superintendence of the section boss. Under these circumstances, I think plaintiff made out a prima facie, and the issue was properly for the jury. But there was no specific finding of fact upon the vital question of nuisance or no nuisance, which was essentially plaintiff's cause of action. A nuisance such as the one in question was not necessarily created by placing an object or doing an act causing one horse to be frightened, but by doing something upon or near the highway which is calculated to frighten horses generally in ordinary circumstances. Roe v. Lucknow, 21 A. R. 1. On referring to the charge it appears that the jury were not told that the question of nuisance or no nuisance depended not so much on the particular result to the plaintiff's horse, but as they should have been, on the larger and more general result, to horses generally, as before indicated. The damages awarded are so large as to appear excessive. The appeal allowed and a new trial directed. Forsythe v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 6 O. W. R. 242, 10 O. L. R. 74.

bars across the highway as a train was approaching, and to raise them as soon as it had passed. This duty carried with it that of warning persons who were obstructing the raising or lowering of the bars, and thereby preventing him from using them for the purpose for which they were required. The infant plaintif was obstructing the raising of the bars, and the watchman threw a cinder at him, and put out his eye:—Held, the jury had found for plaintiff, and they must be taken to have found, as they might properly do upon the evidence, that the act done by Jarman was done in the course of his employment, not simply to gratify some spiteful feeling of his own against the boy. Hammond v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 4 O. W. R. 530, 25 Occ. N. 35, 9 O. L. R. 64.

Negligence of Servant—Scope of Authority—Forbidden Act.]—A master is liable for an injury caused by the wrongful act of his servant within the scope of his authority, although the master has expressly forbidden the servant to do the act from which the injury resulted. Read v. McGivney, 36 N. B. Reps. 512.

Dual Employment.]—While a sorvant cannot, in the course of his employment, and in connection with the services he has agreed to redder to his master, earn for his own benefit any remuneration or profit, he can do so in connection with any collateral or independent work or business, not carried on in competition with that of the master. The manager of a cold storage company was held entitled, therefore, to a commission on the sale of a cold storage plant effected by the makers thereof through his efforts, the cold storage company not being themselves makers of or dealers in cold storage plant. Judgment of Boyd, C., 32 O. R. 191, 20 Occ. N. 436, reversed. Jones v. Linde British Refrigeration Co., 21 Occ. N. 552, 2 O. L. R. 428.

Servant to Devote Entire Time to Master's Business and to Engage in me Other—Breach—Account of Profits Made in Other Businesses—Damages—Costs—Reference—Statute of Zimitations — Competitive Business.]—The defendant in 1889 engaged to devote his entire time and attention to the advertising interests of plaintiffs, and to engage in no other business during the period covered by the agreement then made; This provision of the original agreement was extended to the continued services of defendant with plaintiffs; and that the businesses undertaken by defendant, of which plaintiffs complain, were carried on by him while he was in their employment upon these terms. Defendant engaged in other business:—Held, liable to the master for damages for breach of contract, but the master was not entitled to the moneys earned in a different capacity if the servant did not use time which he should have devoted to his master's interest, provided he did not engage in a competitive business. But if the interests conflict in any way with his duty to his master he cannot retain the fruits of his labours against his master. Sheppard Publishing Co. v. Harkins, 5 O. W. R. 482, 9 O. L. R. 504.

VI. OTHER CASES.

Action by Parent as Master for Death of Child-Damages to Estate-Dismissal of Previous Action under Fatal Accidents Act-Evidence of-Negligence-Contriaents Act—Evidence of—Negtigence—Contri-butory Negligence—Misdirection—Survival of Right of Action.]—The plaintiff's son, who was employed as a watchman by the government of Canada, and boarded at home with his father, was killed as the result of an accident while attempting to leave a passenger elevator in the defendant's building. The deceased had entered the elevator for the purpose of seeing a tenant whose office was situated on one of the upper floors of the building, and, not finding the person whom he desired to see, had continued to ride up and down in the elevator. He finally attempted to leave the elevator as another passenger entered, and just as the boy in charge seager entered, and just as the boy in charge started the elevator and was in the act of closing the door, he was caught between the floor of the building and the upper part of the elevator cage, and received injuries from which he died. In an action by the plaintiff personally, and as administrator of deceased, for damages, the jury awarded the plaintiff "for loss of deceased's services since death $1,500." On the trial, evidence was offered and rejected of the proceedings in, and judgment dismissing, a former action, brought by the plaintiff as administrator, suing for the benefit and on behalf of himself as father and the mother of deceased, under the corresponding to Lord Campbell's Act, in jury, in addition to the damages above men-tioned, awarded "for damages to deceased's estate from the happening of the accident to death, and for necessary expenses, $37.50." The trial Judge, in summing up, said to the "I cannot understand myself how the Jury, I cannot understand myself now the negligence of the deceased contributed to this accident:"—Held, that this part of the ver-dict could not be sustained without overdect could not be sustained without over-ruling the common law rule that "in a civil court the death of a human being cannot be complained of;" that the evidence was im-properly rejected, and that, for this reason also, this part of the verdict could not stand; that, there being no contract for safe carriage, and the case being simply one of tort, for alleged negligence, the action died with deceased; that there was evidence of negligence on the part of deceased, in attempting to leave the elevator at the time he did, which contributed to the happening of the accident, and which should have been submitted to the jury; that the remark of the trial Judge was equivalent to telling them that there was no evidence of the fact, and was misdirection; and that the direction to the jury that, if they found that deceased pushed open the closed door to get out, they might find that there was contributory negligence, was calculated to hinder the jury from considering any evidence which they themselves might be able to discover tending to shew that there was contributory negligence. Hawley v. Wright, 37 N. S. Reps. 77, 24 Occ. N. 63, 136.

Breach of Contract—Actionable Wrong
—Bamages — Injunction — Necessity for Shewing Malice—Justification—Rules of Labour Union.]—It is no defence to an action for persuading a servant to break his contract with his master, that the persuader acted in good faith in pursuance of the provisions of the constitution of a trade union of which the servant and the persuader were both members, and that he had no ill will towards the master. Reid v. Friendly Society

Medical Attendance on Servant—Liability of Master—Contract — "Hospital Fund."]—A fund called "the hospital fund" was held by a mining company for the purpose of providing medicine and medical attendance for those of the men who required it, medical men being attached to the works, whose duty it was to attend the men and provide the necessary medicines:—Held, that no obligation was imposed on the company to pay out of this fund for the services of any physician whom the men might choose to employ. Struthers v. Canadian Copper Co., 23 Occ. N. 323, 6 O. L. R. 374, 2 O. W. R. 748.

Misconduct of Servant — Breach of Confidence — Soliciting Customers of Master.]—The appellant, a patent solicitor, had, by means of advertisements in the newspapers, solicited correspondence from persons who might need the services of a patent solicitor. By this means he had succeeded in securing patronage, and had a large number of correspondents; and he kept in his office a particular book in which were entered the names and addresses of about 5,000 of his correspondents and clients. The respondent, while in the employ of the appellant, but after having received from him notice of dismissal, had got hold of this book, which was in charge of another employee, during the absence of his employer, and had taken a copy of a great part of the addresses. Later, having left the service of the appellant, and opened an office on his own account as a patent solicitor, he sent to the addresses taken from the appellant's book, a circular announcing his profession, his address, and his photograph, thus soliciting the business of his former patron and even offering his services free:—Held, that the respondent had violated his contract and failed in his duty as an employee; and that he had unlawfully committed acts calculated to cause damage to the appellant by turning away from the latter part of his clientele. Marion v. Roberts, Q. R. 14 K. B. 23.

Servant Leaving Employment — Action—Damages—Particulars.] — In an action for damages against an employee for deserting his employment, it is sufficient to allege in relation to damages that he left his employment at a time when several of the employees were absent upon holidays. Chaput v. Charland, 6 Q. P. R. 33.

Servant Leaving Employment without Notice — Quantum Mernit—Cross-demand for damages.]—The plaintiff was engased by the defendants at a monthly salary.
After working for nineteen days in a certain month, he left without giving any notice, and subsequently brought this action for $20 for 19 days' work actually performed. The defendant company brought at ross-action for damages resulting from the plaintiff leaving their employment without notice.—Held, that by leaving without notice, the plaintiff flad forfeited his right to wages even for work done, 2. That upon the proof adduced the defendants had made out their case on a cross-demand. McKee v. Canadian Pacific

Affidavits Verifying Mortgage Account—Cross-czamination on — Forum—Redemntion Action,]—In a redemption action the defendant filed his affidavit verifying the mortgage account in the office of the Master in Ordinary, to whom the action was referred. Plaintiff took out an appointment before a special examiner to cross-examine defendant upon his affidavit:—Held, there was no precedent or authority for any such cross-examination before anyone except the Master before whom the reference was pending. Rule 490 had no application as the proceedings in the Master's office were regulated by Rules 654-700. Rule 668 was expressly negative to any such right as was claimed. Motion granted with costs added to the mortgace debt. Plenderleith v. Parrsons, 6 0. W. K. 145, 399, 10 O. L. R. 436.

Mineral Claim — Holder of Option— "Owner."] — The defendant, a mine owner, gave C. an option to buy a mine for $25.000, with liberty to work it, the net proceeds to be applied towards payment. The plaintiffs claimed liens for labour while employed by C. in working it under the agreement. C. did not exercise his option:—Held, Irving, J., dissenting, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to liens under the Mechanics' Lien Act, There is no lien given for cooking under the Act. Anderson v. Godsal, 7 B. C. R.

"Owner"—Interest in Land—Vendor and Purohaser,] — The plaintiffs claimed a mechanics' lien for $633 against the estate and interest of L. and T. In certain lots in the vicinity of New Westminster, for lumber furnished under the following circumstances: T., the registered owner, agreed to sell the land for $1,200 to L.; $50 was paid down, and the balance was to be paid immediately. No agreement in writing as required by the Statute of Frauds was executed, but L. entered into possession of the premises and proceeded to fit up the buildings for the purpose of his business as a butcher for a slaughter house, spending a large sum in so doing, and the lumber in respect of which the lien was claimed was used in building and repairing the slaughter house and putting up a fence on the land.—Held, that the lien attached only upon whatever interest L. might have in the land. Anderson v. Goodsall, 7 B. C. R. 404, followed. British Columbia Timber and Trealing Co. v. Leberry, 22 Occ. N. 273.

Woodman's Lien — Action for Wages—Pursuing both Remedies — Estoppel.]—The plaintiff was employed by G., who had a contract with the defendants, to cut logs on their land, and brought this action in a County Court under the Mechanics' Lien Act for $74.44 for wages. Before the commencement of this action the plaintiff and sixteen others obtained a joint judgment in the same Court against G., under the Woodman's Lien for Wages Act, for the gross amount of their wages. In that actica G. and the company were defendants, but the action was discontinued against the company, as they released all claim to the logs seized by the sheriff:—Held, that the plaintiff was estopped from proceeding under 2.27 of the Mechanics' Lien Act for the balance of liss wages. Costs Subsequent to Judgment-Taxation—Powers of Taxing Officer.]—"Costs" in s. 37 of the Mechanics' and Wage Earners' Lien Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 110, refers to the costs up to and including the trial, and means the costs which are allowed by the Judge at the hearing and entered in the judgment and the provisions of that section limiting the costs to be allowed do not apply to the subsequent costs of sale and proceedings before the Master; and where the judgment pronounced empowered the Master to tax and pronounced empowered the Master to tax and add to the plaintiffs' claim the costs of the subsequent proceedings, and the Master un-der it allowed the ordinary costs of a sale conducted in his office, and there was no appeal from the judgment, the Court could not on an appeal from the taxation interfere with the provisions of the judgment. The alternative procedure provided by s. 31 can-not be assumed to be any less expensive than the ordinary, so as to constitute a case for the application of s. 39, and at any rate the question of the least expensive course is one to be dealt with by the trial Judge, and one with which, without special direction in the judgment, the taxing officer has no right to interfere. Humphrey v. Cleave, 24 Occ. N. 374, 15 Man. L. R. 23.

Materials Furnished - Drawback -Non-completion of Work — Occupation of Building—Estoppel.]—Persons supplying materials to the contractor for the building of a house are not entitled to the benefit of the provisions of s. 12 of the Mechanics' and Wage Earners' Lien Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 110, by which, in the event of the contract not being completed, wage earners may enforce liens against the percentage of the contract price which the owner is required to hold back under s. 9 of the Act; but, if the contract price is payable by instalments, the general lien-holders may enforce their liens pro rata to the extent of any earned instalments in so far as the same remain unpaid in the hands of the owner, although the work is not completed. Brydon v. Lutes, 9 Man. L. R. 463, followed. 2. The occupation of the uncompleted house by the owner, and the mortgaging of it, for a sum to be paid to the contractor in accordance with one of the terms of the contract, do not estop the owner from setting up against the lien-holder that the house has not been completed, and that, consequently, no more money is due under the contract. Pattinson v. Luckley, L. R. 10 Ex. 330, and Sumpler v. Hedges, [1898] 1 Q. B. 673, followed. Black v. Wiebe, 15 Man. L. R. 260, 1 W. L. R. 75.

One Lien against two Owners—Eucroachment on Wrong Lot.]—A mechanic's lien registered against two lots of land owned by different persons in respect of work done upon two houses, one on each of the lots, on the order of one of the owners and for an amount claimed to be due for the work on both houses, without apportioning the amount as between the two, cannot be enforced under the Mechanics' and Wage Earners' Lien Act, 1898, nor can effect be given to the lien against one of the lots only for the proper amount. Currier v. Friedrick. 22 Gr. 243, Oldfield v. Barbour, 12 P. R. 554, and Rathbun v. Hayford, 87 Mass. 406, followed. Fairclough v. Smith, 21 Occ. N. 447, 13 Man. L. R. 509.

Sub-contractor — Liability of Owner— Failure to Retain Percentage—Entire Contract-Time for Filing Lien.] - Where nothing is payable under a building contract until the whole of the work is completed, but the owner voluntarily makes payments to the contractor as the work progresses, to the extent of the value of the work done, a subcontractor who has not been paid is entitled, under s. 9 of the Mechanics' and Wage Earners' Lien Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 110, as against the owner, to a lien for the amount due him, to the extent of 20 per cent, of such payments. Russell v. French, 28 O. R. 215, followed. The plaintiff's claim consisted of charges for different jobs, all in his line of business, but ordered at different times, and, as to the first job, if considered separately, his lien was not filed within the time required by the statute:—Held, that, in such circumstances, a mechanic should not be required, in order to secure payment, to file a lien after completing each piece of work, and that filing his lien after he has completed all of his work is sufficient, Carroll v. McVicar, 15 Man. L. R. 379, 2 W. L. R. 25.

Time for Registration of Lien—Completion of work—Extent of lien—Judgment—Reference — Costs, Day v. Crown Grain Co. and Cleveland (Man.), 2 W. L. R. 142.

Unpaid Vendor - Lien Subject to Claim of-Notice.]-The purchaser of a lot of land under an agreement of sale, fixing 15th August, 1901, for payment of the purchase money, was allowed to enter into possession on 15th June, 1901 and to commence build-ing on the land. He continued the expenditure of money upon the premises after the date fixed for payment, with the knowledge and concurrence of the vendors, but eventually abandoned the purchase, without having paid anything to the vendors. They then notified him that as he had not complied with the terms of the purchase as to time, his interest had ceased. The plaintiff's claim was for a lien on the interest of the purchaser in the property, for work done by him in the erection of the building, but he submitted to the lien of the vendors for the full amount of the purchase money of the land:—Held. that the vendors could not, under the circumstances, put an end to the rights of the purchaser by giving such a notice, and that, apart from the provisions of s. 11, s.-s. 2, of the Mechanics' and Wage-Earners' Lien Act. 61 V. c. 29, the plaintiff was entitled to the lien asked for, with the usual inquiries and directions. Hoffstrom v. Stanley, 22 Occ. N. 337, 14 Man, L. R. 227.

ferred to B. should be retained by a trust company as security for the performance by B. of his contract for the erection of the mill. to be paid out as the work progressed. In an action against the company by the subcontractor by whom the machinery for the mill was supplied:—Held, that, in the absence of notice, the company were not liable to the plaintiff for failure to retain out of the moneys paid to B, the percentage required to be retained under the provisions of the Mechanics' Lien Act; that the transaction which took place when the title to the property was transferred to the company, and the bonds and shares, the consideration therefor, were delivered to B., was not one within the provisions of the Mechanics' Lien Act, s. 8, and that the company were not required to retain anything on that date for the benefit of future sub-contractors; that, as the bonds and shares constituted the price or consideration not only for the construction of the mill, but for the land and other property transferred to the company, the price to be paid for the construction of the mill could not be ascertained so as to enable the claim for work or machinery to be enforced against the property; that the lien for goods or materials placed or furnished under of the Act, commences when the goods or materials are so placed or furnished, and that, as against the owner, this cannot be said to have occurred until they have reached his property. Smith Co. v. Sissiboo Pulp and Paper Co., 36 N. S. Reps. 348.

Machinery Furnished-Contract Price.] -Under the Mechanics' Lien Act of Nova Scotia, R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 171, a lien for machinery for a mill does not attach until it is delivered, and if the contractor for building the mill has then been fully paid, there is nothing upon which the lien can operate. as, by s. 6 of the Act, the owner cannot be liable for a sum greater than that due to the contractor. B., holder of more than half the stock of a pulp company, for which he had paid by cheque, and also a director, offered to sell to the company land to build a mill, and furnish working capital, on receipt of all the bond issue and cash on hand. The offer was accepted, and all the stock issued as fully paid up was deposited with a trust company, and the cash, his own cheque, and the price of five shares handed to B. was sold, and from the proceeds the land was paid for, the working capital promised given to the company, and the balance paid to B. from time to time as the mill was construct-The machinery was supplied by an American company, but when it was delivered all the money had been paid out as above:— Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, 36 N. S. Reps. 348, that as all the money had been paid before delivery, the company were not liable under the Mechanics' Lien Act to pay for the machinery:—Held, also, that s. 8 of the Act, which requires the owner to re tain 15 per cent. of the contract price until the work is completed, did not apply, as no price for building the mill was specified, but the price was associated with other considerations from which it could not be separated. Morgan Smith Co. v. Sissiboo Pulp and Paper Co., 24 Occ. N. 285, 35 S. C. R. 93.

quently filed his statement of claim. He obtained an order for the service of the statement of claim out of the jurisdiction, and service was effected in pursuance thereof. The defendant company applied to have the order and service thereunder set aside, on the ground that there was no statutory authority therefor: s. 28, s. vs. 1, 2, 6, of the Mechanics' Lien Act, R. S. N. S. c. 171:—Held, that the service was good by reason of s. 28 of the Act, the ordinary procedure of the Court with respect to the service of a writ having been followed in serving the statement of claim. Macdonald v. Consolidated Gold Mining Co., 21 Occ. N. 482.

Sub-contractor — Material Man—Notice to Owner—Failure to Retain Percentage—Identification of Premises.]—C. & W., who were awarded a contract to place heating apparatus in a hotel building owned by the defendat D., ordered materials required from the plaintiffs in a letter stating, "We have secured contract for hotel which requires above goods. The sub-contract was made on the 29th September, 1902, and the final payment was made by D. to the principal contractor on the 21st November, 1902, when the work was all done, without retaining 15 per cent, for 30 days, as required by the Mechanics' Lien Act, R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 171. s. S.—Held, that the letter sufficiently identified the building for which the goods were required; and, distinguishing Smith v. Sissiboo Pulp Co., 30 N. S. Reps. 348, that D. was required to retain the percentage whether he had notice of the sub-contract or not, and that he paid it at his own peril, if there was a sub-contractor in existence who was prejudiced by the payment. Dominion Radiator Co. v. Can., 37 N. S. Reps. 237.

Sub-contractors - Proceedings to Real-Sub-contractors — Proceedings to Real-ice Lien—Time.]—One Rhuland had a con-tract with Wright for the construction of some houses. Dempster & Co. were the sub-contractors, and supplied Rhuland, on his credit, with materials for the work, the whole of which was delivered before the 28th April. 1900. On the 18th May, 1900, Dempster & Co, registered a lien against the property under the Mechanics Lien Act, 1899, but no proceedings were instituted by them to realize the claim until the 13th August, 1900. On an application to set aside Dempster's lien :-Held, that the word "contract" in s: 20 of the Act means the original contract with the owner, and not the contract between the contractor and the sub-contractor. If no claim had been registered, Dempster & Co. could have registered one at any time within thirty days after the completion of that contract. In view of s. 9, an abandonthat contract. In view of s. 9, an abandon-ment would be equivalent to a completion and no claim could be registered after thirty days from the abandonment of a contract. In this case no period of credit was mentioned in the claim, and Dempster swore in the affidavit attached to the claim, that none was given, nor was the lien claimed upon mawas given, nor was the near cathlet upon mar-terials or machinery, as provided by s. 20. s.s. 2. The difficulty arose in construing the words "after the work or service has been completed" in the cases of sub-contractors. Dempster v. Wright, 21 Occ. N. 88.

IV. ONTABIO ACT.

Action—Affidavit Verifying Statement of Claim—Particulars of Residence.] — In the case of an action under the Mechanics' and Wage-Earners' Lien Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 153, the affidavit verifying the statement of claim, required by s. 31 (2), may be made by the plaintiffs olicitor as agent. The plaintiffs were day labourers, who did work for the defendants on a railway in an unorganized district, and it was set forth in the statement of claim that they resided in that district; the name and address of the plaintiffs' solicitor was also stated therein:—Held, that it was not necessarv to give more precise particulars of the places of residence of the plaintiffs. Crear v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 23 Occ. N. 171, 5 O. L. R. 383, 2 O. W. R. 187.

Action - Parties - Execution Creditor —Incumbrance Arising Pendente Lite—No-tice of Trial—Judgment—Vacating.] — Un-der s. 36 of the Mechanics' and Wage-Earners' Lien Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 153, it is the persons who are incumbrancers at the time fixed for service of notice of trial, and those only, who are required to be served, service of notice of trial on them being the mode by which incumbrancers not already parties to the proceedings are brought in. After service of notice of trial in an action to enforce a mechanic's lien against the lands of the defendants, but before the trial, the petitioners, who were judgment creditors of the defendants, placed a fi. fa. against goods and lands in the hands of the sheriff of the county in petitioners were not served with any notice of trial, and did not appear at the trial nor prove any claim, but the judgment given upon the trial recited that it appeared that they had some lien, charge, or incumbrance on the lands, created subsequent to the commencement of the action, and declared that the plaintiffs and others were entitled to liens: -Held, that the name of the petitioners and all reference to their claims should be stricken out of the judgment. Haycock v. Sapphire Corundum Co., 24 Occ. N. 56, 7 O. L. R. 21, 2 O. W. R. 1177.

Action Begun by Statement of Claim—Service out of Ontario — Jurisdiction to Allous.]—There is no authority in the Courts of this province to allow service out of Ontario of a statement of claim filed as the initial step in an action. In re Busfield, Whaley v Busfield, $2 Ch. D. 123, followed. Such Statement of Court to apply the analogous procedure as to survive of summons. Assignment — Debt "Due" — Consideration — Lien-holder — Priority — When Lien Attaches—Mechanics' Lien Act, 1877 c. 153, 28. 4, 13—Judicature Act, s. 8 (5).]—E., a sub-contractor, commenced work on the 19th August, 1903, completed it on the 11th October, 1904, and registered his lien on the 12th

October, 1904. On the 14th November, 1903, the contractor by whom E. was employed assigned $2,588.32 of the amount "due" from the owner of his contract, to D. another sub-contractor, who duly gave notice thereof to the owner. At the time of this assignment $2,588.32 had been earned under the contract, but it did not become payable until the giving of the architect's certificate on the 14th November, 1904: - Held, that under the Mechanics' Lien Act, s. 4, E.'s lien related back to the commencement of his work, and under s. 13 it was entitled to priority over D.'s assignment, for the full amount of the lien, and not merely for that por-tion thereof actually earned by E. up to the date of the assignment:—Held, also, that the assignment was valid, and bound the debt assigned, though it was not payable at the date of the assignment:—Held, also, that a debt due and owing is a sufficient consideration for an assignment of a chose in action, and that the assignment was, therefore, not revocable or impeachable as being voluntary.

for damages for improperly taking the works out of their hands and to recover the value of the materials, macrinery and plant, and some supplies taken by the owner, and also to recover a large sum on account of work done, had been dismissed:—Held, that the 15 per cent, which, under s. 11 of the Act, R. S. O. c. 153, the owner was required to deduct from any payments made in respect of the contract and to retain as a fund for the discharge of liens, was to be computed on the value of the work and materials, but not upon the value of the plant as well, notwithstanding that for the security of the owner the plant was declared to be for the purposes of the contract his property :-Held, that, if the judgment dismissing the action brought by the contractors were binding on the plaintiffs, they would not be benefited by a postponement of the trial until the final completion of the works, for the effect of that judgment was that the contractors had forfeited all right to payment for any work which they had performed and for which they had not been paid; and, even if the judgment were not binding on the plaintiffs, the case should not be sent back for a new Birkett v. Brewder, 22 Occ. N. 93, 1 O. W. R. 62.

Mining Location—Blacksmith—Cook.]

—A blacksmith, employed for sharpening and keeping in order tools used for the work of mining, is entitled to a lien for his wages on the mining location, but a cook who does the cooking for the men employed is not. Adjoining mining locations even when they are water lots, if "enjoyed with" the mining location on which the mine is situated, are subject to liens for work performed in the mine. Davies v. Croten Point Mining Co. of Ontario, 22 Coc., N. 52, 3 O. L. R. 69.

Notice in Writing to Owner—Letter.]

—A letter to the owner, from sub-contractors furnishing materials, asking him, when making a payment to the contractor for the building in question, to "see that a cheque for at least $400 is made payable to us on account of brick delivered, as our account is considerably over $700, and we shall be obliged to register a lien if a payment is not made to-day," is sufficient "notice in writing" of a claim of lien under the Mechanics' Lien Act, R. S. O. c. 153. Judgment in 32 O. R. 27, 20 Cec. N. 255, aftirmed. Craig V. Cromwell, 21 Occ. N. 13, 27 A. R. 585.

Several Buildings — Lien for Work on one — Registration—Time—Extent of Work Done.]—Where a contract is made with the respective owners of adjoining lands, on which two separate buildings are erected, but included under one roof, for the repair thereof, at one entire price, separate accounts being kept of the work done and materials furnished on each building, a lien attaches and can be enforced under the Mechanics' Lien Act, against the lands of each of such owners for the price of the work done and the materials provided on each respective building. The finding of the local Master who tried a mechanic's lien action, as to the fact of the work being done and the materials furnished within thirry days prhor to the lien being registered, and as to the extent of such work and materials, was upheld, for, though the evidence was contradictory, there was evidence to support such findings. Booth v. Booth, 22 Occ. N. 131, 3 O. L. R. 294, 1 O. W. R. 49.

Statutory Action to Realize—Joining other Causes of Action—Partics—Architect.]—In an action begun under s. 31 of the Mechanics' and Wage-Earners' Lien Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 153, by the filing of a statement of claim, to realize a lien created by the Act, the plaintiff cannot include other causes of action and other matters. Where the plaintiff in such an action claimed to be entitled to a lien against the owner of land who had erected a building thereon, and joined as r defendant the architect of the building, whom he charged with fraudulently refusing to give a certificate for the amount which the plaintiff claimed to be entitled to recover, and asked that the architect might be ordered to pay the amount claimed, with damages for his fraudulent breach of duty, and the costs of the action, the name of the architect was struck out. Semble, that, as against the owner, the claim to a proper certificate might be maintained in this action as one of the matters involved in the claim to a lien. Bag-shaw v. Johnston, 22 Occ. N. 33, 3 O. L. R. 58.

Writ of Summons—Service out of Jurisdiction—Statement of Claim—Time for Delivering Defence — Triat — Appointment in Writing—Notice of Triat]. — An order permitting service out of the jurisdiction of the writ of summons should also authorize service of the statement of claim at the same time, and fix a time for delivery of the statement of defence. Young v. Brassey, 1 Ch. D. 277, followed. Where the order makes no provision as to the statement of claim or defence, the defendant should have eight days from the last day for appearance within which to deliver his statement of defence, and the pleadings cannot be noted closed before the expiry of such eight days. Under s. 35 (1) of the Mechanics' Lien Act, R. S. O. c. 133, the Judge or officer fixing a day for the trial of an action brought under that Act, is od as oin writing; and a notice of trial under that section given by a party who has not obtained a signed appointment from the Judge or officer, is not effective. The notice of trial must be served at least eight clear days before the day fixed, as provided by s. 36. McLevr v. Crozen Point Mining Co., 21 Occ. N. 127, 19 P. R. 335.

Builder's Privilege—Promissory Note— Principal Contractor—Sub-contract—Notice to Owner—Registration—Time for—Delay— Default.]—The holder of a promissory note guaranteed by a builder's privilege may, in suing to recover the amount of such note, demand that the existence of this privilege be recognized in his favour. 2. The principal contractor may take, in his own name, a builder's privilege, not only for work which he has himself done, but also for work done by his sub-contractor and it is not necessary, in such circumstances, to notify the owner of the contract between the principal contractor and the sub-contractor. 3. The point of commencement of the time for registration of a builder's privilege is the date at which all work on the building has been completed and ended, and not that of beginning to use the building before its completion. 4. The owner who has caused the building in question to be erected cannot complain of delay in registering a builder's privilege, nor even of absolute default of registration. La Banque Jacques Cartier v. Picard, Q. R. 18 S. C. 502.

Builder's Privilege — Contract with Owner—Right to Lien—"Additional Value."] A contractor who contracts directly with the proprietor of a building which is being constructed, is entitled to register a privilege under the terms of art. 2013. C. C., as amended by 50 V. c. 42 (Q.). 2. The "additional value," referred to in the article, is the additional value given to the immovable by the work at the time it is done. Galerneau v. Tremblay, Q. R. 22 S. C. 143.

Claim of Lien—Repistration—Description of Land.]—The description of an immovable, in the notice for registration of a workman's privilege, as "part of lot 4101 of the cadastre of the parish of Montreal." but omitting the conterminous properties, does not comply with art. 2168 of the Civil Code, which provides that in any place where the offician plans are in force the true description of a part of a lor is by stating that it is a part of a certain official number upon the plan and in the book of reference, and mentioning who is the owner, and the properties conterminous thereto; and such notice does not create any privilege. Therrien v. Hénault, Q. R. 21 S. C. 452.

Increased Value — Vendor of Owner—Estimate of Increase—Registration of Lien—Contestation—Pleading.] — The question of the increase in value of an immovable by reason of work done by a workman can only be raised by the vendor of the owner and his creditors. 2. The increase in value is fixed by an estimate, at the time of the decree, when the money is insufficient to pay a workman who has registered a lien or in case of a contestation of the increase by those interested. 3. When there is a contestation it should be by means of a plea on the merits and not by inscription in law. 4. The defendant being the owner of the immovable, the workman is not bound to allege increase in value. Therien v. Hainault, 5 Q. P. R. 61.

Material Man—Manufacturer—Sale or Hiring of Labour.] — A manufacturer who makes a contract with a contractor to deliver to him a certain number of presses destined to form part of a building of which the contractor has undertaken the construction, is not a workman, but a furnisher of materials. The registration by such manufacturer of a workman ilen against the land of the owner as security for payment of the price of the presses is void under the circumstances, the manufacturer baving no other remedies than those given him by arts, 2013 (g), (h), (1), (1), and 2103, C. C. 2. The contract between the manufacturer and the contractor is a sale and not an employment of labour. 3. In order that a workman shall have a workman's lien upon the land of the owner it is indispensable that he should be employed thereon. It is not sufficient that he works and fashions materials intended to form part of the building which the owner is erecting. Montmorency Cotton Mills Co. v. Gignac, Q. R. 10 Q. B. 158.

Material Man—Notice to Mortgages—Registration of Leine—Description of Land—Several Purchasers.] — When the owner of land—Several Purchasers.] — When the owner of land builds thereon, the furnisher of materials who wishes to obtain a right of lien, must, before the delivery of the materials, give notice to the person who lends the owner the money for building, and a notice given later to the owner will be insufficient to give a right of lien to the material man. 2. When two portions of the same lot have been sold by separate contracts to two purchasers, and buildings have been erected thereon. a person furnishing materials for such buildings must, in the statement of claim which he registers pursuant to art, 2103, C. C., indicate the portion of the land which belongs to each purchaser, and his registration will be without effect if he describes the whole lot us being the property of the two purchasers. Paquette v. Mayer, Q. R. 18 S. C. 563.

Material Man — Notice—Registration.]
—The hypothee or lien of the material man is distinct and independent of the saisie-arret mentioned in art. 2013 (h) and (i), C. C., and is not subject to the conditions of notice mentioned in cl. (g), nor to the condition of registration: Oulmet, J., dissenting. Meclaren v. Villeneuve, 4 Q. P. R. 322, Q. R. 11 K. B. 131.

Material Men Dealing with Owner—Non-existence of Lien.]—The law does not confer a lien on a material man except where he furnishes material to the contractor and not to the owner. A labourer, workman architect, or builder, dealing directly with the owner, has a lien, but a merchant or manufacturer who sells material for construction to the owner has, as against him, only a personal action, unless he has agreed to a conventional hypothec. Harris v. Charbonneau, Q. R. 25 S. C. 180, Registration of Claim—Quebec Lau—Error in Description of Lands—Claim duly Recorded—Value of Lands—Claim duly Recorded—Value of Lands—Acquiacence—Notice.] — The description in a registered claim for a workman's privilege of the lands affected by the privilege as, "two lots of land known and designated under numbers two C. and three C. of the official subdivision of lot number 907." Instead of, in acordance with the plan, as "two lots of land known and designated under numbers two, subdivision C., and three, subdivision C., both of the subdivision of official lot number 907." is not an irregularity sufficient to nullify the registration of the privilege, especially where the description in the claim is identical with that contained in the title deed of the owner (who had acquired the lands from the respondent), and in the process-verbal of seizure, and where the registrar, upon presentation of the claim, had registered it against the lands as they were described in his office. the respondent in an allegation that the value of the property was $3,000, and in an arrangement by which the parties claiming privileges d'ouvriers were to rank against the balance of the purchase money (the property as improved having been sold for $5,000 after payment of a charge thereon), he being dominus litis could not be heard to complain that the increased value of the property, by reason of the work done by such claimants, had not been determined by a valuation. The omission by such a claimant to give notice to the owner of the property within three days after registration of his claim (art, 2103, C. C.) does not affect the validity of such registration or privilege. Daniel v. Macduff, Q. R. 13 K. B. 361.

Time for Registering Lien—Completion of Work.)—The point of commencement of the 30 days given by art. 2013b of the Civil Code for the registration of the lien of a labourer, workman, or contractor, is the moment at which the work upon the building in the construction of which they have laboured is completed, and not the date at which the use of the building has been begun, Quintal v. Benard, Q. R. 20 S. C. 199.

Woodman's Lien—Quebec Law — Person Cutting Wood at so Much a Cord — Saisic-conservation.]—The persons mentioned in art. 1894 (c). C. C., are not confined to those whose renuneration is fixed according to the time they work, but it also includes all persons who engage to cut wood for so much a cord. A motion to quash a writ of saisic-conservatoire obtained by a person claiming a lien upon wood cut, was dismissed. St. Onge v. Ross, 7 Q. P. R. 108.

Fees of Physician—Action for—Plead-ing—Irrelevant Allegations.)—The plaintiff, a practising physician, sued the defendant for $3,000 for professional services. In his declaration he set up the fact that the case was notrious, and that the public had been daily kept aware of the defendant's condition, and of all details connected therewith, thus putting the plaintiff's professional reputation at stake. These facts were alleged as partly justifying the large amount of the fee claimed. The defendant inscribed in law against these allegations:—Held, that the allegations complained of could not be connected with the amount of the fee due to the plaintiff. The inscription was, therefore, maintained, and the allegations complained of very extruck out of the declaration. Marien v. Lussier, 22 Occ. N. 418.

License to Practise—College of Physicians and Surgeons — Mandamus.] — The College of Physicians and Surgeons cannot refuse to grant a license to practise medicine, to a student who has passed the necessary examinations, or has been legally exempted from passing them, and who has obtained the degree of Doctor of Medicine. 2. Upon such refusal a writ of mandamus may issue to enforce the issuing of a license. Gosselin v. College of Physicians and Surgeons, Q. R. 19 S, C, 175.

Malpractice — Limitation of Actions —
Ontario Medical Act — Termination of Services — Trial — Jury.] — An action against surgeons for malpractice was held to be barred by s. 41 of the Ontario Medical Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 176, not having been commenced within one year from the date when, in the matter complained of, the defendants' professional services terminated, although the plaintiff had twice visited the defendants at their offices within the year, the Court finding that on these ocasions she did not go as a patient, but as a person with a grievance, she having previously consulted another surgeon and also a solicitor. Actions of malpractice are now more properly tried without a jury. Upon the evidence, it was held, also, that the plaintiff upon whom the burden rested, had failed to make out a case of negligent malpractice; and the action was dismissed. Town v. Archer, 22 Occ. N. 258, 4 O. L. R. 383, 1 O. W. R. 391.

Malpractice—Questions for Jury.]—In action against a surgeon for malpractice, the plaintiff has the right to a decision by a jury of a fact in controversy—not where that decision involves the consideration of difficult questions in the region of scientific inquiry, but where the fact to be found is as to what actually took place in the history of the plaintiffs malady and the defendant's treatment, for example, where there is a conflict of testimony as to what the surgeon did or did not do in the process of reducing or attempting to reduce a fracture. In the present case there were facts in dispute as to which the plaintiff was entitled to the jury's findings. Jackson v. Hyde, 28 U. C. R. 294, explained. McNully v. Morris, 21 Occ. N. 501, 2 O. L. R. 503.

Malpractice-Want of Care and Skill-Evidence-Nonsuit, 1-In an action against a surgeon for not exercising ordinary care and skill in treating the plaintiff for an injury skill in freating the plaintiff for an injury to his arm, caused by his being accidentally thrown from a sleigh, the trial Judge non-suited the plaintiff on the ground that, as neither the plaintiff nor any of his witnesses were able to say that the arm was dislocated a result of the accident, and as both the defendant and another surgeon, who was called in by the defendant and examined the arm three weeks after the accident, swore that it was not dislocated, and as the dis-location, which was sworn to exist a year and nine months after the accident by a third surgeon, whom the plaintiff consulted, and which was admitted to exist at the time of the trial-more than three years after the accident-might have been the result of disease, as was shewn by the evidence of several expert witnesses, there was no evidence to leave to the jury upon which they could properly find a verdict for the plaintiff:—Held. erly find a vertice for the plantage.—Here, Hanington, J., dissenting, that the nonsuit was right; and that, even if the dislocation was the result of the accident, the mere fact that the defendant did not discover it and treat the plaintiff accordingly, was not of itself evidence of want of ordinary care and skill on the part of the defendant. James v. Crockett, 34 N. B. Reps. 540.

Medical Act, B. C.—Registered Practitioner—Charge of Unprofessional Conduct—Inquiry by Private Tribunal—Mandamus—Action.]—Under s. 30 of the Medical Act, 1898 (previous to its amendment in 1903) the council may hold an inquiry into a charge of unprofessional conduct made against a registered medical practitioner:—Held, that mandamus did not lie to compel the council to hold an inquiry. Charges of unprofessional conduct may be investigated by the council notwithstanding that the acts complained of may be the subject-matter of an action at law. In re Medical Act, Exp. Inverarity, 10 B. C. R. 268.

Medical Act, Manitoba—Practising for Revard—Electro-therapeutics — Massage:] — According to standard dictionaries electro-therapeutics, consisting in the treatment of diseases by means of electricity, is a breach of medicine, and it is unlawful under s, 62 of the Medical Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 111, for a person not registered under the Act to practise as an electro-therapeutist for hire, gain, or hope of reward; and under s, 63 such person cannot recover any fees or charges for such treatment. Massage although a branch of therapeutics, is merely a skilled manipulation by external pressure of the muscles and tissues, and, not depending for its efficacy upon the introduction or application of any other element, cannot be considered to be a branch of medicine. Militia Act — Relations of Officers and Privates—Obeying Orders—Arrest—Liability for.]—Persons belonging to the regular army are always subject to military law and regulations, and they are obliged to obey orders lations, and they are obliged to obey orders.

which their superiors give them, the sole condition being that such orders relate to militia affairs and are not so exidently illegal that they lead to the belief that the person giving them is mentally incompetent. 2. It is otherwise in the case of those who belong to the volunteer militia; they are not subject to military law and regulations and are only obliged to obey their superiors in the case expressly enumerated in the Militia Act. Outside of such cases, they are only ordinary citizens, and their superiors have no more right to give them orders than they have to give orders to persons who do not belong to the militia. 3. Action—Inspection — Underground Workings — Plans — Privilege — Enforcement of Order,] — The right to inspect underground workings in a mine carries with it the right to inspect and make copies of the plans of such workings. Per Martin, J.:—(1) The practice respecting inspection under r. 514 is distinct from the practice in obtaining discovery, and a claim of privilege set up in an affidavit in answer to a motion to compel inspection is not conclusive. (2) It is a proper and convenient practice to apply to the Court to enforce an order for inspection when the resistance is not contumacious. Star Mining and Milling Co. v. Byron N. White Co. 9

Adverse Action—Certificate of Improvements—Co-owner—Estoppel—Notice—Res Judicata—Judgment in Rem.1—A judgment in an adverse action under s. 37 of the Mineral Act is not a judgment in rem. One co-owner of a mineral claim is not estopped by the result of such action instituted by an adverse claimant against another co-owner who has applied for a certificate of improvements. Bentley v. Botsford, 8 B. C. R. 123, followed. Per Martin, J.—Section 37 does not apply to co-owners of the same claim, but to owners of conflicting claims. Fry v. Botsford, MacQuillan v. Fry, 22 Occ. Adverse Claim-Form of Plan and Affidavit—Right of Action—Condition Precedent — Necessity for Actual Survey — Blank in Jurat.]-The plan required to be filed in an action to adverse a mineral claim under the provisions of s. 37 of the Mineral Act of British Columbia, as amended by s. 9 of the Mineral Act Amendment Act, 1898, need not be based on an actual survey of the location made by the provincial land surveyor who signs the plan. The filing of such plan and the affidavit required under the said section, as amended, is not a condition precedent to the right of the adverse claimant to proceed the right of the adverse action. The jurat to an affidavit filed pursuant to the section above referred to did not mention the date upon which the affidavit had been sworn:—Held, that the absence of the date was not a fatal defect, and that, even if it could be so considered at common law, such a defect would be cured by the British Columbia Oaths Act, and the British Columbia Supreme Court Rule 415 of 1890. Judgment in 9 B. C. R. 184 reversed. Paulson v. Beaman, 23 Occ. N. 60, 32 S. C. R. 655.

Application for Certificate of Improvements—Adverse Action—Location,1—
The plaintiff was the cwner of the Colonial mineral claim located on the 7th October, 1900. The defendant located over the same ground the Wild Rose fraction on the 4th September, 1902, and having advertised for purposes of obtaining a certificate of improvements, this action to adverse such application was brought:—Held, on the evidence that the location of the Colonial was proved, and was not invalidated on any ground; that the Wild Rose was duly located, but was already occupied. Dockstader v. Clark, 24 Occ. N. 43.

Applicant for Crown Grant—Certificate of Improvements—Injunction—Adverse Claim.]—The plaintiffs held a Crown grant dated the 8th March, 1895, of certain lands from which there were excepted "lands held prior to 23rd March, 1893, as mineral claims." The defendant held a certificate of improvements dated the 14th August, 1890, and the plaintiffs, being apprehensive as to form of Crown grant to be issued to the defendant, applied for an injunction restraining him from applying for and receiving a Crown grant:—Held, dismissing the motion, that the policy of the Mineral Acts is to compel persons claiming adversely to an applicant for a Crown grant to commence action before a certificate of improvements is obtained. Nelson and Fort Sheppard R. W. Co. v. Dunlop, 7 B. C. R. 411.

Application for Mining Lease—Commissioner of Mines—Mandamus.]—The plaintiffs applied to the Commissioner of Mines for the Province of Nova Scotia, for a coal mining lease covering an area adjacent to an area previously leased to M. A dispute having arisen in relation to the application, the Commissioner held an investigation, and announced, as the result of his inquiry, that the lease granted to M. was not to be considered as in any way void or uncertain, but was to be and remain the evidence of the cultract between the Crown, represented by the Commissioner, and M.:—Held, that the plaintiffs' application was not disposed of by this decision, but that they were entitled to a mandamus requiring the Commissioner of Mines to consider their application and give a decision thereon. Dominion Coal Co. v. Drysdale, 36 N. S. Reps. 282

Application under Mineral Act, B.C.

Forum—Extension of Time.]—An order to extend the time for filing the affidavit and plan required by s. 37 of the Mineral Act must be made by the Court, and cannot be made by a Judge in Chambers. Noble v. Blanchard, 7 B. C. R. 62, not followed as to this point, McColl, C.J., dissenting, Murphy v. Star Exploring and Mining Co., 22 Occ, N. 104, 8 B. C. R. 421.

Assessment Work — Affidavit—Notice—Certificate.] — The plaintiff, owner of the Rebecca mineral claim and having an interest in the Ida, an adjoining claim, performed the assessment work for both claims on the Ida, as believed, but in reality, as shewn by subsequent survey, a few feet outside the claim, but did not file the notice required by s. 24 of the Mineral Act with the Gold Commissioner, who told him the work on the Ida would be regarded as done on the Rebecca. The plaintiff received in August, 1899, a certificate of work in respect of the Rebecca, and in his affidavit stated that the work was done on the Rebecca: — Held, in ejectment, that the plaintiff, being misled by the Gold Commissioner, was protected by s. 53 of the Act. The omission to file the notice required by s. 24 of the Act, and the incorrect filling up of the affidavit, were irregularities which were cured by the Certificate of work. Lawr. v. Parker, 7 B. C. R. 418. Affirmed 8 B. C. R. 223.

Certificate of Improvements—Application for, by Co-owner.]—A part owner of a mineral claim may apply for a certificate of improvements under s. 36 of the Mineral Act. Bentley v. Botsford, 21 Occ. N. 492, S B. C. R. 128.

Certificate of Work—Impeachment of— Evidence—Mineral Act, s. 28 — Amendment Act, 1898, s. 11—Parties—Attorney-General.] Appeal from judgment dismissing the plain-—Appear from Hagment dishissing the plantiff's adverse action. The defendant relied on certificates of work obtained by him in respect of the mineral claims covering the ground in dispute, and the plaintiffs sought to shew that the full amount of work required by the statute as a pre-requisite to such certificates of work being issued had not been performed. The trial Judge refused to admit the evidence, holding that evidence impeaching a certificate of work could not be received in any proceeding to which the Attorney-General was not a party. The full Court affirmed the decision, holding that if a certificate of work is to be set aside the Attorney-General must be a party, and until set aside all things are presumed in favour of its holder. The plaintiffs in making their case admitted that the defendant had obtained certificates of work :- Held, by the full Court, that this in itself was affirmative evidence of the defendant's title, within the meaning of s. 11 of the Mineral Act Amendment Act of 1898. Cleary v. Boscowitz, 22 Occ. N. 41, 8 B. C. R. 225.

Co-owner's Interest in Claim—Science by Sheriff—Lapse of Miner's license—Sheriff Renewing—Rights of Co-owners.]—A sheriff in possession of a free miner's interest in a mineral claim has no power to take out a special free miner's certificate under s. 4 of the British Columbia Mineral Act Amendment Act of 1880, in the name of the judgment debtor; neither has the sheriff power to renew a certificate before lapse. Where some of the co-owners of a mineral claim allow their free miner's certificates to lapse, their interests at once vest pro rata in their former co-owners. McNaught v. Van Norman, 22 Occ. N. 341, 9 B. C. R. 131.

Dominion Lands Act - Mining Regulations—Royalties—Placer Miner—Renewal of Grant.]—Section 17 of the Mining Regulations passed under the Dominion Lands Act (R. S. C. c. 54) does not, on its true con-struction, extend to the holder of a grant for placer mining the same privileges as to a renewal of his grant which are acorded to the holder of a quartz mining grant. The placer miner, on renewal (to which he has no absolute, but only a preferential right), holds under an annual grant in substitution for, but not in continuation of, his original grant. And the renewed grant is subject to all such regulations as may be in force at the date when it comes into operation, whether or not it was made during the currency of an existing grant: — Held, that the Governor in Council has power to make regulations requiring the placer miner to pay a percentage on the proceeds realized from the grant. Such an imposition, called a royalty, is not a tax, but is a reservation which the owner in fee but is a reservation which he spent ludgment is entitled to make out of his grant. Judgment in Rex v. Chappelle, 32 S. C. R. 586, affirmed. Chappelle v. The King, Cannack v. The King, Tweed v. The King, [1904] A. C.

Expiration of Certificate - Special Certificate.] - Action to adverse claim in which the plaintiffs adversed the defendant's application for a certificate of improvements to the Sunrise mineral claim. The plaintiffs claimed the ground in dispute under two locations, known respectively as the Sunset and Mayflower mineral claims. These locations of the plaintiffs were good and valid up to the 31st May, 1901, upon which date the plaintiffs allowed their free miner's certificate to expire without renewal. The defendant's claim was located upon the 8th July, 1901. On the 25th October, 1901, the plaintiffs, by paying a fee of $300, obtained a special free miner's of s. 2 of c. 35 of the statutes of 1901, and relied upon that section as reviving their rights, notwithstanding the intervening location of the defendant :- Held, that on the expiration of a free miner's certificate any mineral claim on which the holder thereof was the sole owner becomes open to location, and the obtaining of a special certificate under s. 2 of the Mineral Act Amendment Act, 1901, does not revive the title, if in the meantime the ground has been located as a mineral claim. Woodbury Mines, Limited, v. Poyntz, 24 Occ. N. 107, 10 B. C. R. 181.

from an order on application to postpone trial, fixing a date (peremptory) for trial of an action by the owners of a mineral claim for an injunction restraining the defendants, who were the owners of adjoining mineral claims, from running a tunnel from their claims on to the plaintiff's ground. The defendants claimed, under s. 31 of the Mineral Act of 1891, the right to follow on to the plaintiff's ground the vein of ore in question, because the apex of the said vein was on the surface of their claim. Before going to trial the defendants wished to do development work in order that they might determine definitely the continuity of the vein in question, and they shewed that it was impossible for them to do the work needed by the date fixed for the trial :-Heid, allowing the appeal; that the defendants should not be forced on to trial without being given a fair opportunity of doing such development work as might be necessary to determine the position of the apex of the vein in question. Noble Five Mining Co. v. Last Chance Mining Co., 23 Occ. N. 252, 9 B. C. R. 514.

Free-Miner's Certificate — Renevals—Vesting of Interest in Co-owners—Sherif—Levy Under Execution.]—The sheriff seized the interest in mineral locations held by an execution debtor in co-ownership with another free-miner, and, before sale under execution, the debtor allowed a free-miner's license to lapse. A special certificate in the debtor's name was subsequently procured by the sheriff under the provisions of s. 4 of the Mineral Act Amendment Act, 1899, and it was contended that the debtor's interest had thus been revived and revested in him subject to the execution:—Held, that upon the lapse of the free-miner's certificate the interest in question had, under the statute, become absolutely vested in the co-owner, and could not thereafter be revived and re-vested in the debtor by the issue of a special certificate. Judgment in 22 Occ. N. 341, 9 B. C. N. 33 Occ. N. 63, 32 S. C. R. 680.

Grant of Gold Mining Claim-Dominion Lands Act—Order in Council—Directory Provisions of Statute—Royalty—Imposition of Tax - Recovery Back.]-The provisions of s. 91 of the Dominion Lands Act, R. S. C. c. 54, requiring all orders in council under the Act to be laid before Parliament within the first 15 days of the next session, is directory only. 2. The effect of another provision of the same section, that any order under the Act shall, unless otherwise specially provided, have force only after it has been published for four successive weeks in the Canada Gazette, is that such order does not come into force until one week after the fourth publication. 3. There is no authority in the Yukon Territory Act, 61 V. c. 6, as amended by 62 & 63 V. c. 11, for changing the date upon which an order under the Dominion Lands Act shall come into force. 4. The suppliant, by right of discovery, under the Dominion Lands Act and the Dominion Mining Regulations, 1889, obtained a grant of a gold mining claim in the Yukon district in December, 1896. His grant gave him for one year the exclusive right to all proceeds; and the rights which it conferred upon him were those laid down in the said regulations, and no more, and were subject to all the provisions thereof, whether expressed in the grant or not. During the currency of this grant an order in council was passed making grants of gold mining claims in the district subject to a royalty. On 7th December, 1897, the grant was renewed on the same terms:—Held, that the terms of the renewal should be construed by reference to their meaning in the original grant; and that the renewal was not subject to the royalty imposed by the order in council in 1900 and the renewal words for the order in council lamposing the royalty were, "a royalty shall be levied and collected:"—Held, that the expression contained apt words for the imposition of a tax, but that such a tax could not be levied without legislative gathority therefor. 6. The evidence shewed that the suppliant had paid the amount of royalty caimed by the Crown under protest, and in the bellef that payment was necessary to protect his rights:—Held, that he was entitled to recover it back. Chapelle v. The King, 7 Ex. C. R. 414.

Legal Posts—Stone Mounds in Lieu of Statute.]—Held, that the requirement of s. 16 of the Mineral Act (B. C.), that posts Nos. 1 and 2 shall be of wood, is imperative, and stone mounds are not to be substituted. Callahan v. George, 21 Occ. N. 600, 8 B. C. R. 146.

License-Rights Acquired Under Application-Estoppel-Amendment.]-The respondents made application at the office of the Commissioners of Mines for a license to search missioners of mines for a ficense to search for coal areas. The application contained a good description of the property in respect of which the license was desired, and was ac-companied by the necessary fee. Subsequently one of the applicants received a letter from the Deputy Commissioner, stating that he could not find the starting point, and asking for additional information. A letter was sent in reply, in which the starting point was stated incorrectly, and as a different point from that mentioned in the original application:—Held, affirming the decision of the Commissioner of Mines, that, there having been certain descriptions, and the money and application having been appropriated, the license could not be removed to another local-The applicants were not estopped, and could not be bound, by an entry made in the registry book of the office, after the receipt of the letter sent in reply to the letter of the Deputy Commissioner, and they could not, as the result of such entry, lose the title that they had acquired by a good application. Semble, that applications may, subject to the rights of intervening applicants, be amended for such causes as uncertainty, but not where there is a certain description and location of the area applied for. In re Barrington, 35 N. S. Reps. 426.

Location — Abandonment — Defects in Title—Certificates of Work—County Court—Evidence.] — The "Trilby "mineral claim lapsed by abandonment in July, 1896. Before lapse the same ground was located as the "Old Jim" by the defendant's predecessor in ritle, and certificates of work were recorded in respect of it in 1897, 1898, and 1899. In February, 1899, the plaintiffs located the same ground as the "Herald Fraction" claim:—Held, that the defects in the defendant's title were cured by the recording of the certificates of work. Unless objection is taken to the jurisdiction of the Court below at the trial, it will not be considered an appeal. At the trial evidence tendered by the defendant as to abandonment of the "Trilby" claim by its locator was rejected. Per Martin, J.: As abandonment was not pleaded, the rejection of the evidence was proper. In mining cases especially the parties should know beforehand the case they have to meet. Gelinas v. Clark, 21 Occ. N. 261, 8 B. C. R. 42.

Location — Abundonment — Overlapping — Evidence — Uertificate of Work — Irregularities.]—The Parrot mineral claim, located in February, 1895, lapsed by abandonment in February, 1890. In March, 1895, part of the same ground was located by the plaintiff as the Townsite claim, and certificates of work were recorded in respect of it in 1896, 1897, 1898, and 1899. In December, 1899, the ground covered by the original Parrot claim was re-located as the Defiance No. 1 Fraction, by the defendants predecessor in title:—Held, in adverse proceedings, that so much of the Parrot claim was not unoccupied ground at the time of the location of the Townsite, and as such was not open to location. At the trial the plaintiffs attacked the validity of the defendants' location, and the defendants sought to put in evidence a certificate of work issued the day before. Held, not admissible, as it was obvious that such certificate was to be used to cure irregularities. Rammelmeyer v, Curtis, Powers v, Curtis, B, B, C, R, 383.

Location—Adverse Proceedings — Title— Action.]—Adverse proceedings are essentially in ejectment and not in trespass, and the plaintiff must succeed by the strength of his own title; it is, therefore, for the plaintiff to shew affirmatively the due location of his claim. Clark v. Haney, S. B. C. R. 130.

Location—Approximate Bearing — Misstatement—Minerals in Place." I—Accuracy in giving the approximate bearings in staking out a mineral claim is as necessary in the case of a fractional claim as in any other. A prospector, in locating and recording his location line between No. 1 and No. 2, as running is an easterly direction, whereas it was nearly due north, does not comply with the statute requiring him to state the approximate compass bearing; and his location is void. Coplen v. Callaghan, 30 S. C. R. 555, followed. Before a prospector can locate a claim, he must actually find "minerals in place." His belief that the proposed claim contains minerals is not sufficient. Judgment in 8 B. C. R. 153, reversed. Collom v. Mauley, 22 Occ. N. 28, 32 S. C. R. 371.

Location — Approximate Compass Bearing — No. I Post on Occupied Ground.]— Held, that the location of a mineral claim is not invalid merely because the No. 1 post is placed on the ground of an existing valid claim, if the facts bring the locator within the benefit of s. 16 (g) of the Mineral Act as amended in 1898. The direction of the location line was stated in the affidavit of location as being south-easterly, when, as a fact, it was south 52° 50° west:—Held, that the discrepancy was of a character calculated to mislead. Appeal from judgment of Irving.

Location — Certificate of Work — Evidence to Impugn]—A certificate of work done on a mining claim in British Columbia is conclusive evidence that the holder has paid his rent, and can only be impugned by the Crown. Joplen v. Callaghan, 30 S. C. R. 555, and Collum v. Manley, 22 Occ. N. 278, 32 S. C. R. 371, followed. C., believing that the statutory work had not been done on mining claims, and that they were therefore vacant, located and recorded them under new names as his own, and brought an action claiming an adverse right thereto:—Held, affirming the judgment in S. B. C. R. 225, that evidence to impugn the certificate of work given to the prior locators was rightly rejected at the trial. Cleary v. Boscowitz, 22 Occ. N. 278, 32 S. C. R. 417.

Location — Mineral Act — Imperative Provisions.]—The Blue Bird mineral claim was located 20th April, 1895, and recorded 3rd May, 1895, and on 21st April, 1896 (before it would have lapsed if duly located), the defendants located the Red Oak claim over the same ground, and after lapse the plaintiffs located over the same ground the Back Pay claim and attacked the defendants' title:—Held, that, as the location line of the Blue Bird was not placed as near as possible on the line of the wedge or vein, its location was bad, and the location of the Mineral Act as to location are imperative. Bleckir V. Chisholm, 8 B. C. R. 148.

Location—Planting of Posts—Formalities required by R. S. B. C. 1897 c. 135, s. 16— 61 V. c. 33, s. 4 (B.C.)]—Judgment of Supreme Court of British Columbia, affirming judgment of Martin, J., 10 B. C. R. 123, affirmed. Sandberg v. Ferguson, 35 S. C. R. 476.

Location of Placer Claim Over Lode Claim - Essentials of a Placer Location-Application and Declaration-Gold Commissioner-Appeal-Pleadings - Issue not Rassed in Court Below.]-Held, that a placer claim may be located on a lode claim. gold commissioner has no authority to change the entire location of a placer claim, and an order to that effect made by him is null and void. 3. Where it is sought to sustain an appeal on an issue outside the record. on the ground that nevertheless it was an issue fought out in the course of the trial, it must, particularly in a charge of fraud, appear that the attention of the Court and the adversary was directed to the fact that such an issue was being raised, otherwise a waiver of the necessity for a formal plead-ing will not be assumed. Per Martin, J., at the trial, that upon a locator of a placer claim tendering to the proper officer the proper fee and documents, he is entitled to obtain a record for the claim, and the officer has no discretion in the issuance thereof, and where the record is not granted to him in due course, he shall, under the remedial pro-visions of s. 19 of the Placer Mining Act, 1901, be deemed to have had such record issued to him at the time of his application therefor. 2. The validity of the placer mining record primarily depends upon the mere belief of the locator, based upon indications he has observed on the claim in the existence of a deposit of placer gold thereon. Tanghe v. Morgan, 25 Occ. N. 49, 11 B. C. R, 76.

Mineral Claim — Relocation — Permission — Fractional Claim—Marking Line.] — Where a holder of a mineral claim which is the subject of an adverse action causes the ground to be relocated by some one else from whom he purchases it for a small consideration, the provisions of s. 32 of the Mineral Act, requiring permission to relocate, do not apply. The location line of a fractional mineral claim must be marked by the blazing of trees or the setting of posts in the same manner as that of a full sized claim. Singder v. Ransom, Ransom v. Singder, 24 Occ. N. 41, 10 B. C. R. 182.

Mineral Claim—Defects in Location of—Mistake—Certificate of Work.]—The defendant's mineral claim Cube Lode was located in May, 1892, and duly recorded, and certificates of work were issued in respect of it regularly since. The plaintiff, in 1895, located and recorded the Cody Fraction and the Joker Fraction claims on the same ground, and attacked the defendant's location on the ground that upon the initial post the "approximate compass bearing of No. 2 post was not given as required by the Act. The compass bearing was east by north, and not south-easterly as stated on No. 1 post:—Held, that the irregularity in locating was not cured by a certificate of work. Per Druke, J., that s. 28 of the Mineral Act cures only irregularities arising after location and record and which do not go to the root of the title. Callahan v. Coplen, 7 B. C. R. 422.

Miner's License-Legality of-Location - Re-location - Permission of Gold Commissioner - Defects-Certificates of Work-Mistakes of Officials.]-In November, 1897, Cooper, having already a claim on the same lode, located the "Native Silver" claim in the name of Haplin, who transferred in December, 1897, one-half to Cooper and the other half to Haller, who sold to the plaintiff in July, 1900; the usual certificates of work having been obtained in the interim. The defendant, who knew of the error in the description of the compass bearing and of the issue of such certificates, on failing to effect a purchase of the claim from Cooper and Haller, located the same ground as the "Arlington Fraction," and on obtaining the usual certificates of work applied for Crown grants. Two of the mining licenses on which the plaintiff's title depended were issued by a constable at Sandon, who, acting on instructions from the Government agent at Nelson, obtained the blank forms from the Mining Recorder at New Denver, and on issuing licenses he accounted to the Government :- Held, in adverse proceedings, affirming the decision of Walkem, J. (Drake, J., dissenting), that the defendant not being misled, the irregularities in the plaintiff's title were cured by s. 28 of the Mineral Act. lahan v. Coplen, 30 S. C. R. 555, and Gelinas v. Clark, S B. C. R. 42, specially considered.

damages for the mining and removal of iron ore, claimed by him, under a lease from the Crown, judgment was given in favour of the defendant company, on the ground that, in order to recover, it was necessary for the plaintiff to establish the south line of land originally granted to G. The starting point in the plaintiff's lease was a marked stone, located a given distance from a marked maple tree, "on the south line of lands originally granted," etc.:—Held, following Fielding v. Mott, 6 R. & G. 339, 14 S. C. R. 254, that the trial Judge erred in holding that the plaintiff could not recover unless he established the south line of the land granted to G., as such line, if shewn to be in a different place from the marked tree, would be rejected as falsa demonstratio. A copy of a plan from the Crown lands office, as to which one of the plaintiff's witnesses was crossexamined, and which was put in by the defendants' counsel, without restriction, as part of his general evidence, was in for all purposes to which the plaintiff might apply it, and was properly used for the purpose of proving measurements made on the ground. Bartlett v. Nova Scotia Steel Co., 35 N. S. Reps. 376.

Mining Lease-Contest as to-Defective Application-License to Search.]-An application for a mining lease made by the appellants on the 10th November, 1893, was re-fused by the Commissioner of Mines, on the ground that, at the date of the application, the area applied for was covered by a license to search issued by the department to W. It appeared that on the 16th July, 1890, the appellants applied for a license to search which would come into force on the 13th May, 1892, and expire on the 13th November, 1893. When the application was originally made it covered other areas, but, subsequently, on the application of the appellants, assented to by the Deputy Commissioner of Mines, and indorsed on the application, it was amended so as to cover the area in dispute. The application subsequently made by W. contained no description except one incorporated by reference to the application made by appellants:-Held, that, if the application made by appellants was defective, that made by W. was equally so, and that the parties relying upon it in attacking the application had no locus standi. As-suming the license applied for by W. to be invalid, it was competent for the appellants, under the provisions of the Acts of 1892, c. 1, s. 103, to apply for a lease without a previous license to search. In re Greener, 33 N. S. Reps. 406.

Mining Lease — Forfeiture — Notice — Statutory Requirements— Compliance with — Construction of Statute—Leches.] — The Nova Scotia Mines and Miner-ls Act of 1892, c. 1, s. 152, requires "all applicants for leases or licenses under this chapter" to furnish the Commissioner of Mines with their address, which shall be registered, and all summonses, notices, &c., which require to be served under the Act, "shall be considered under the Act, "shall be considered under the Act, "shall be considered to serie of the amending Act of 1893, c. 2, s. 10, the Commissioner of Mines is not required to send notices of default of payment to any lessee, unless previous to such default, such lessee shall have given written notice to the Commissioner of his post office address. A lease of gold mining areas, held by the relator, G., was forfeited for alleged non-compliance with the provisions of s. 152 of the Act of The forfeiture was entirely ex parte, no notice being given to the lessee that rent was overdue, or that any proceedings would be taken to forfeit the lease. The lease was granted in 1890, at which time there was no provision in force requiring an applicant for a lease to give his residence or post office address, but the evidence shewed that, as a matter of fact, the name, address, and occupation of G., were indorsed on his application. and were registered in a book kept in the office of the Commissioner for some time af-terwards. No further address was given:— Held, that there having been a substantial, if not a literal, compliance with the proviif not a literal, compliance with the provisions of the statute on the part of G., the forfeiture of his lease, without notice sent to the address given by him, was illegal and void, and must be set aside. As the Act imposed forfeiture, and affected individual rights, it must be given a strict construction, and the words "after the passage of this, Act." could not be read into it so as to results of the property of the propert require G. to give a second notice, and, in default thereof, to deprive him of the rights given him under his lease. The doctrine of laches, as affecting the application to set aside the forfeiture, had no application, this not being an action invoking the equitable assistance or interference of the Court, but an official information on the relation of G., based upon his legal rights, in which he required no equitable assistance. Attornoy General v. Waverley Gold Mining Co., 35 N. S. Rets. 192.

MJ ang Lease — Non-payment of Rental Dishonour of Cheque—Forfeiture — Intervening Rights - Commissioners of Mines -Equities.)—The rental payable by the defendants for gold mining areas held by them under lease, fell due on the 2nd July, 1904, and continued unpaid for 30 days thereafter. On the last day for payment the solicitor for A., the holder of a judgment lien against the company, acting under the provisions of R. S. N. S. 1900 c. 18, s. 43, went to the mines office and made out and gave to the clerk his cheque in payment of the rental, and an entry of payment was made opposite the lease in the books in the office, and a receipt was prepared. On the following day the cheque was presented for payment and was returned indorsed "no funds," and the entry in the books and the receipt (still not delivered) were cancelled: -Held, assuming that payment by cheque would be good (as to which quære), that, the cheque having been dishonoured, the lease was forfeited, and the Commissioner of Mines could not sequently, as against the intervening rights of third parties who had made application for the areas thus vacated, accept payment from A. or his solicitor, for the purpose of preserving the rights of A., whether by good cheque or otherwise; and, affirming the judgment of the Commissioner of Mines on this point, that he had no jurisdiction to deal with the supposed equities of A. as against with the supposed equities of A. as against H., a member of the defendant company, who had filed an application, on the theory that H., as a member of the company, could not allow the lease to be forfeited, and take a fresh title in himself as against A. Re Hanright and Lakeview Mining Co., 37 N. S. Reps. 278.

Mining Regulations - Representation Work — Rights of Different Crown Grantees to Same Ground.]—In July, 1898, the plaintiff located and obtained a Crown grant for placer mining in respect of a claim, and on the 25th January, 1898, one Mensing located a claim, and recorded it the next day, and on the succeeding 27th October, a few minutes after midnight on the 26th, the defendant re-located it as ground abandoned and open to occupation on the ground of non-representa-The two claims overlapped. On the 10th November, 1898, the defendant obtained her Crown grant for placer mining, covering the ground in dispute, and being a re-location of Mensing's old land. The Gold Commissioner had made a rule that three months' continuous work in the year was sufficient, and by the regulations a claim was deemed abandoned after it had remained unworked on working days for the space of seventy-two hours:—Held, that the defendant's Crown grant must prevail over that of the plaintiff. Victor v. Butler, 21 Gcc. N. 454, 8 B. C. R. 100.

Overlapping Claim—Renewal of Application—Re-staking.] — In August, 1889, M. staked and received a grant for a placer claim, which included part of an existing creek claim, staked previously by W. In 1900 M. applied for and obtained a renewal of his license, embracing the identical ground staked by him in the previous year, and, at the time such renewal was applied for, W.'s creek claim had lapsed. In March, 1901, S. staked a bench claim, embracing the lands in W.'s expired location, which had been overlapped by M.'s chaim, as being unoccupied Crown land:—Held, that, although M.'s original staking of the ground in dispute was invalid, yet, as W.'s claim had lapsed at the time of the application for a renewal grant in 1900, M. having been continuously in possession of the whole location as staked by him, his stakes still standing and the limit of his area well known, his application for the renewal gave him a valid entry without the formalities of re-staking and applying anew for the original area located by him, and, following the rule kid down in Osborne v. Morgan, 13 App. Cas. 227, 8. could not interfere with M.'s possession. 8t. Laurent v. Mercier, 23 Occ. N. 211, 33 S. C. R. 314.

Partnership — Abandonment—Evidence of — Equitable Relief — Laches.] — The plaintiff and the defendant, as partners, acquired a lease of forty gold mining area at Mahons. For convenience, the title was taken in the name of one of the defendants. The partnership expended some moneys on the areas, but was unsuccessful in finding gold. In 1887 the plaintiff decided to leave Mahone to study medicine. There was contradictory evidence as to whether he did or did not at this time abandon his interest in the areas. The defendant at all times subsequently treated the areas as theirs alone. The plaintiff took no further interest in the areas apparently until January 1899, some twelve years after first leaving Mahone, and, although he had made several visits thereto in the interval and had seen the defendants, he made no inquiries. The defendants of the defendant of the contradictory of the lease alive until 1894, when the lease was forfeited by the Mines Office. An agreement was then made by which the defendants received $2,400 and conveyed the areas to one F. The plaintiff hearing of this brought an action to recover one-third of the $2,400:—Held, that the plaintiff, when he left Mahone in 1887, gave up and abandoned to the defendants all the interest he had in the areas; and, although he did not do so in writing, the Court would not assist him after such lackes as he had shewn, Duntop v. Nicoli, 21 Occ. N. 84.

gold mines—that is, exclusive only against quartz or hydraulic licenses or owners of surface rights, and not against the Crown. The provision of s. 91 of the Dominion Lands Act as to publication of regulations, means that the regulations do not come into force on publication in the last of four successive weeks in the Gazette, but only on the expiration of one week therefrom. Where repiration of one week therefrom. Where re-gulations provided that failure to pay royal-ties would forfeit the claim, and a notice to that effect was posted on the claim and served on the licensee, payment by the latter under protest was not a voluntary payment.
One of the regulations of 1889 was, that "the entry of every holder of a grant for placer mining had to be renewed and his receipt relinquished and replaced every year: -Held, reversing the judgment in 7 Ex. C. R. 414, that the new entry and receipt did not entitle the holder to mine on the terms and conditions in his original grant only, but he was subject to the terms of any regulations made since such grant was issued. The new entry since such grant was issued. cannot be made and new receipt given until the term of the grant has expired. Therefore, where a grant for one year was issued in December, 1896, and in August, 1897, the renewal license was given to the miner, such renewal only took effect in December, 1897, and was subject to regulations made in September of that year. Regulations in force when a license issued, were shortly after-wards cancelled by new regulations imposing a smaller royalty;—Held, that the new regulations were substituted for the others and applied to said license. Rev v. Chappelle, Rev v. Carmack, Rev v. Tweed, 23 Occ. N. 43, 32 S. C. R. 586. Leave to appeal granted by the Judicial Committee, 23 Occ. N. 163.

Staking Claims — Annulment of Prior Lease—Volunteer Plaintiff—Right of Action—Status of Adverse Claimants].—In an action by free-miners, who had "staked" placer mining claims within the limits of a concession granted for purposes of hydraulic mining, to set aside the hydraulic mining lease on the ground that it had been illegally issued and was null and of no effect:—Held, that, where there was a hydraulic lease of mineral lands in existence, the mere fact of free-miners "staking" claims on the lands included within the leased limits did not give them any rights or interest in the lands, nor did they there's require such status in respect thereto as could entitle them to obtain a judicial declaration in an action for the annulment of the lease. Hartley v. Matson, 23 Oc. N. 61, 32 S. C. R. 144.

Transfer of Mineral Claim—Time for Recording — Mineral Act.]—The claimant of an interest in a mineral claim, seized under an execution on the 18th May, 1903, relied on a bill of sale obtained by him on the 23rd February, 1903, while in Dawson, X.T., over 2,000 miles from the mining recorder's office. The bill of sale was not recorded until the 22nd May, 1903:—Held, that, as the time for recording mineral claims fixed by s. 19 of the Mineral Act is dependent upon the distance of the claim (not of the locator) from the recorder's office, therefore by s. 49 of the Act the bill of sale was of no effect as against the intervening execution. Dumas Gold Mines, Limited v. Boultbee, 24 Occ. N. 283, 10 B. C. R. 511.

Transfer of Mineral Claim-Writing

-Use by Miner of Another's Name in Locating.]—A transfer of any interest in a mineral claim is not enforceable unless in writing. Where one free miner locates and records a mineral claim, if he locates another claim on the same vein in the nume of another free miner, he thereby acquires no interest in such last claim by virtue of 8. 29 of the Mineral Act of 1896. Alexander v. Heath, 8 B. C. R. 95.

Trespass—Action for — Discovery — Inspection—Order for—Copies of Plans—Undertaking for Damages—Security.] — This was an action of trespass to extralatoral rights appurtenant to a mineral claim located and recorded in 1891, and the point in dispute was as to the terms of an inspection order enabling the plaintiffs to inspect the defendants' workings:—Held, affirming the decision of McColl, C.J., that the 'order might allow the inspection party to make copies of plans, charts, &c., of the other party's workings. 2. That the order should contain an undertaking for damages, and the practice does not require security to be given. Star Mining and Milling Co. v. Byron N. White Co., 22 Occ. N. 104, 3 B. C. R. 9.

Trespass Workings — Wrongful Abstraction of Ore — Conversion—Accumulation of Water—Nuisance—Injunction—Trespass of Predecessor.]—A mining company who purchase the assets of an old company, whose debts and liabilities they agree to pay and satisfy, are not liable to a stranger to the contract for a tort committed by the old company. The defendants purchased a min-eral claim having ore on the dump which eral claim having ore on the dump which which had been wrongfully taken from the plaintiffs' claim; they let the ore remain where it was at the plaintiffs' disposal:—Held, there had been no conversion of the ore by the defendants. The defendants' predecessors in title ran trespass workings from their mineral claim, the Nickel Plate, through the Orecore of mineral claim; which they the Ore-or-no-Go mineral claim in which they had a right to mine, but of which the plain tiffs were the owners in fee, into the plain-tiffs' mineral claim, the Centre Star, which adjoined the Ore-or-no-Go claim; to stop the flow of water from the Nickel Place through the trespass workings to the Centre Star claim, the defendants built bulkheads on the boundary between the Centre Ster and Ore-or-no-Go claims, and at this point a large body of water accumulated:—Held, that the accumulation of water was a menace to the plaintiffs and amounted to a nuisance, and that the bulkheads should have been built at the Nickel Plate boundary so as to keep the water from flowing from the Nickel Plate into the trespass workings. Fraud — Damages.] — Upon representations made by the vendor the plaintiffs purchased several mining locations, the consideration therefor being stated in a lump sum. In an action for fraud and deceit brought by the purchaser, the trial Judge, in discussing the total consideration for the properties purchased, found that there was evidence to shew the values placed by the parties upon each of two of these properties as to which false and fraudulent representations had been made, and which had turned out worthless or nearly so:—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, Taschereau, C.J.C.,, and Idington, J., dissenting, that the finding of the trial Judge as to the consideration ought not to be disturbed upon appeal, and that the proper measure of damages, in such a case, was the actual loss sustained by the purchaser by acting upon the misrepresentations of the vendor in respect of the two mining locations in question, without regard to the results or values yielded by the other locations purchased at the same time, and as to which no false representations had been made. Water Rights-Placer Mining-Jurisdiction of County Court-Two Actions-Stay of One-Layman-Status of, to Attack Water Record - Joint Application of Individual Miners-Gold Commissioner-Appeal. |-The County Court has jurisdiction over water rights appurtenant to placer claims, concurrent with that of the Supreme Court, and such jurisdiction is not ousted by the mere fact that an action was first begun in the Supreme Court by the same parties respecting the same subject matter, and until objection is taken it will continue to exercise its jurisdiction, whereupon the proper course is to apply to stay one of the actions, and it depends upon the circumstances which one will be stayed. It is too late to object to the jurisdiction after judgment. A layman is a lease-holder, and may apply for a water record, which is appurtenant to the mine and not to the miner, and only one who is the holder of a water record, or its equivalent under the Act, has a status to attack a water record; a right to water under s. 29 confers such a status. Individual miners working on the same creek who have statutory rights in the same water may join in an application for a record, or to reduce or modify an existing record which is being misused to their disadvantage, and on such application the Gold Commissioner may make such adjudication as seems to him just; and, unless those in terested who participated in or properly had notice of the proceedings appeal from his decision in the summary way provided by s. 36, they are bound by it. If the action taken by the Gold Commissioner was the proper one. it is not invalidated because he gave wrong reasons or relied on one section instead of another which authorized his action. Brown v. Contract for Purchase of Land—Mistake of purchaser as to quantity, not known to vendor—Hardship amounting to injustice —Rescission—Election to affirm contract after discovery of mistake—Fraud—Payment of commission to agent. Slouski v. Hopp (Man.), 2 W. L. R. 363.

Mortgage — Prior Agreement — Mining Rights — Misrepresentations — Hitieracy.] — The plaintiffs leased mining rights under lay agreement to the defendants, providing for division of profits and payment of an existing debt, and for advances to be made out of the clean-ups, a mortgage to be given on the dumps to secure the advances. Owing to some inaccuracy, a new lay agreement was executed at the same time as the mortgage. The mortgage provided for payments at earlier dates than the lay agreement, and was not read over to the defendants, who were unable to read and had requested that it should be read over to them. In an action on the mortgage, evidence was given that a document signed on that date was represented to be in terms similar to the lay agreement as first drawn, but it might, possibly, have been the new lay agreement that was thus spoken of, and it appeared that, although the defendants became aware of the difference in the terms of payment mentioned in the mortgage, and complained of this to the plaintiffs' agent, they continued to work on the lay, assuming that the altered terms of payment would not be insisted on:—Held, that there was not sufficient evidence of acquiescence in the altered terms of payment, and that, as the evidence shewed that the defendants were illiterate, and the mortgage had not been read over to them on request, and they had been misled as to its contents, they could not be bound by its altered provisions as to the payments. Letourneau v. Carbonneau, 35 S. C. R. 110.

Recovery of Money Paid Under Mistake of Fact—Mortgage—Account—Ack-nowledgment — Estoppel — Appeal — Crossappeal — Leave — Parties — Costs.] — The judgment of Robertson, J., 22 Occ. N. 59, was reversed on appeal:—Held, that there was reversed on appear.—Head, that there could be no recovery against the executors, because their testator was not the person who received the erroneous overpayments sought to be recovered back. He omitted to give credit in his books or on the plaintiff's mortgage for two sums paid to him, but the plaintiff made no mistake in paying them, for there was then so much and more due on the mortgage, and when the executors subsequently assigned the mortgage to the defendant G. W. L. H. in part satisfaction of the legacy bequeathed to him by their testator, there was still a considerable balance due thereon. The time when these payments should have been taken into consideration was when the mortgage was being paid off to G. W. L. H. There was nothing to create an estoppel as between him and the plaintiff so as to have prevented the latter from then claiming credit for these payments. G. W L. H., and not the testator, was the person who received too much, and it was the payment to him which was erroneous. The executors, upon their appeal from the judgment against them, were entitled to be relieved and to costs of the action. And the plaintiff. although he had omitted to appeal, by way of precaution against that result, for judgment in his favour against G. W. L. H., should be permitted to do so, nunc pro tune, and judg-ment should be entered for the plaintif against G. W. L. H. with costs down to the trial and settlement of the judgment as if G. W. L. H. had been the original and only defendant. No costs of the appeal to any of the parties. McDermott v. Hickling, 23 Occ. N. 40, 1 O. W. R. 19, 768.

Conveyance Subject to Mortgage— Reservation of Life Estate.]—A father, being the owner of land, mortgaged it, and then conveyed it to his son subject to the mort-gage, and reserved a life estate to himself:—Held, that the son was not entitled, on payment of the mortgage money to the assignee of the mortgage, to an assignment of the mortgage to himself or his nominee under R. S. O. 1897 c. 121, s. 2, s.-ss. 1 and 2; the holder of the mortgage having notice of the equitable right of the father to have his life estate relieved of the burden by payment of the mortgage debt by the son:—Semble, that the grantee was entitled to have the mortgage assigned in such a way that it would remain an incumbrance on the remainder in fee vested in him. Leitch v. Leitch, 21 Oct. N. 4908, 2 O. L. R. 233.

The plaintiffs afterwards, without his consent, discharged half the lands from the mortgage on payment of half the mortgage dett:—Held, that this was such an alteration of the contract guaranteed as to release the defendant from his liability, whether the amount paid was the fell value of the part released or not. On the 10th March. 1894, K, agreed to sell the mortzaged projectly to L., and L. paid the purchase price. On the 4th June, 1895, the defendant K, gave a mortgage to the same company on other property to secure $2,600. K, subscribed on each occasion for shares in the loan company, which he assigned to the company as security for the loans, the mortzages being treated as collateral. Each mortzage contained a proviso that the company should have a lien upon all stock then or thereafter held by the defendant as security for the loans, K, allowed the payments on both mortzages to fall into arreer. The company proceeded on the $2,600 mortgage, and on the 24th August, 1890, obtained an order vesting the title to the property covered by it in themselves and debarring K, from all right to redeem. and on the 10th January, 1901, sued K. upon his covenant for payment in the $2.900 mortage, offering to reopen the forecleaure, and claimed the right to consolidate the two mortages;—Held, that L. was entitled to be added as a party defendant under s. 36 of the Judicature Ordinance, 1808, and that the plaintiffs had no right to consolidate as against him. 2. The proceedings upon the $2.900 mortgage were not identical with forecleaure proceedings, and the presumption from the company's taking a vesting order and from their delay in suing was that they intended to take the land in full satisfaction and to abandon the remedy on the covenant. Purchase Subject to Mortgage-Imolied Covenant of Indemnity-Assignment of Implied Covenant—Survivorship of Joint Contractors — Administrators — Territories Contractors — Administrators — Territories Real Property Act.]—The obligation, de-clared by the Territories Real Property Act, s. 69, to be implied in every instrument transferring any estate or interest in land under the provisions of that Act, subject to mortgage or incumbrance, is assignable by the implied covenantee to the original mortgagor. The implied covenant takes effect notwithstanding that the mortgage or incumbrance not noted upon the transfer. The plaintiff sold, subject to a mortgage, to L. & V. L. & V. gave a mortgage back for the whole price, the understanding being that L. & V should pay the first mortgage, the amount thereof being credited in reduction of the second; L. & V. sold to T. for a certain sum, and T. was to pay what was then owing on the two mortgages; T. sold to S. for a certain sum, and S. was to pay what was then owing on the two mortgages, S. thus became by mesne transfers the registered owner subject to the two mortgages, the first made by the plaintiff, the second by L. & V S. died, and the contesting defendants, his administrators, became, by transmission, registered owners, subject to the two mortgages. L. died, and V. assigned to the plain-tiff the rights of L. & V. on T.'s implied covenant to discharge two mortgages. also assigned to the plaintiff his rights on S/s implied covenant to discharge the two mortgages:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to an order against the contesting defendants, the administrators of S, that deteannes, the administrators of the two mortgages with costs, and that de bonis propriis if the assets of the estate proved insufficient. Semble, the assignment from V., the survivor of L. & V., conveyed the rights also of the representatives of L. Glenn V. Scott, 2 Terr. L. R. 339.

Release — Dealings between Mortgagee and Assignee of Equity.]—When land subject to mortgage is sold by the mortgager, and the purchaser assumes and covenants to pay the mortgage, the mortgager does not become to the mortgage a surety in the technical sense, and the doctrines as to the discharge of sureties do not apply to him to their full extent. The mortgagor is liable, therefore, upon his covenant, notwithstanding a previous extension of time granted by the mortgagee to the purchaser, if, when the liability is enforced, the right of the mortgagor to redeem is not affected. Judgment in 32 O. R. 175, 20 Occ. N. 402, affirmed; Osler and Maclennan, JJ.A., dissenting. Forster v. Ivey, 21 Occ. N. 550, 2 O. L. R. 480.

Sale—Deficiency—Personal Order for—Notice of Motion—Service by Filing.]—A mortgage made by the defendant to the plaintiffs to secure payment of $500, côntained a covenant that the defendant would pay, or cause to be paid, the said mortgage money, to wit, $500, with interest. On sale under order for forcelosure and sale, the mortgaged property realized only $110, and the plaintiffs applied for an order for judgment against the defendant, with costs, for the balance due on the mortgage, after deducting the proceeds of the sale. The defendant did not appear to the action, and as he was a seafaring man, and it was impossible to effect personal service, the notice of motion was served by filing with the prothondary, pursuant to 0. 65, r. 4:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the order applied for, Reliance Savings and Loan Co. v. Curry, 34 N. S. Reps. 565.

III. DISTRESS.

Tenancy at Will-Quiet Enjoyment-Assignment of Equity—Tenant—Sale of Distress—Appraisement — Damages.]—A mortgage containing the usual statutory covenants and a special clause providing for a tenancy at will at an annual rent equal to the interest :-Held, not inconsistent or void for repugnancy. Trust and Loan Co. v. Lawrason, 10 S. C. R. 679, distinguished. The mortgagor, remaining in possession upon the execution of the mortgage, had the right un der the provision for quiet possession until default, to enjoy the premises, but for no determinate period, and his tenancy there-under was a tenancy at will, and such provision was, therefore, not inconsistent with an express tenancy at will at a half-yearly rent. There being a tenancy at will at a fixed rent, there was, as incident to it, the right to distrain, and the covenant for quiet enjoyment must be read as subject to such right. Doe d. Dixie v. Davies, 7 Ex. 89, followed. After the mortgagor had made default, his continuance in possession was still as tenant at will. After default, the mortgagor, at the instance of the mortgagees, assigned his equity of redemption to his wife, and she took possession and agreed to apply the proceeds of the land to the payment of the mortgage:—Held, that this operated as a new tenancy at will with the wife, who became liable for the payment of the rent as the assign of her husband with the assent of the mortgagees, and her goods were, therefore, distrainable for the rent. So the goods of the husband might also be distrained as it was a case of real tenancy :- Held, however, that the defendants were liable for selling the distress without appraisement or valuation; and the measure of damages was the real value of what was sold, minus the rent due. Pegg v. Independent Order of Foresters, 21 Occ. N. 158, 1 O. L. R. 97.

IV. FORECLOSURE AND REDEMPTION.

Absolute Conveyance to Secure Debt —Redemption — Entry — Possession—Limitation of Actions—Real Property Limitation Act, Manitoba - Acknowledgment.]-Where Act, Manitoo — Acknowledgment, — where the plaintiff in January, 1891, by a certifi-cate of title under the Real Property Act, vested a parcel of land, vacant and which so continued to be until the commencement of the action, in the defendant, as security for a loan of $200 repayable in two months, and paid no taxes and nothing on the debt until October, 1902, when she asked the defendant for a statement of his claim, who then sent her a memorandum shewing, among other things, the amount due, it was held that such transfer had the effect of a mortgage, that the defendant should be presumed to have "obtained possession" at that time within the meaning of s. 20 of the Real Property Limitation Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 100, and the plaintiff's right of redemption was barred by the lapse of 10 years; and that an acknowledgment of the right of redemption given after the lapse of the statutory period was of no avail to the mortgagor seeking redemption. Rutherford v. Mitchell, 15 Man. L. R. 390.

See Burr v. Bullock, 2 O. W. R. 428.

Acceleration—Assignment Pendente Lite—Parties—Costs.]—Judgment in 21 Occ. N. 555, 2 O. L. R. 500, affirmed without costs, the Court refusing to interfere with the decision of a provincial Court in a matter of procedure. Gibson v. Nelson, 35 S. C. R. 181.

Acceleration-Assignment Pendente Lite -Parties.]-When a mortgagee, upon default in payment of an instalment of interest, brings a foreclosure action and claims payment of the full amount secured by the mortgage, any party to the action by original writ, or added in the Master's office, or by subsequent order, is entitled to hold him to his election and to pay his claim. But this right must be taken advantage of in the foreclosure action, and does not enure to the benefit of a person not a party to that action who ignores the foreclosure proceedings and brings a redemption action after making an independent tender to the mortgagee. person who, after the institution of the foreclosure action, acquires an interest in or claim against the mortgaged premises, mav. on his application, he added as a party. Action for Foreclosure—Parties—Irregularity—Appeal from Report.]—An action for foreclosure and possession was begun by a mortgagee against the mortgagor and a tenant of the latter in possession. The tenant entered an appearance disputing the amount, and pending the action the mortgagor dispossessed her by other means addinent by default was obtained by the plantiff against the mortgagor, without taking any notice of the tenant:—Held, that this was irregular; the action should have been dismissed or discontinued as against her. Upon the reference directed by the judgment and in his report the Master continued the tenant as a defendant by original action and also added her as a party in his office by serving her with notice to incumbrancers, although she was not a subsequent incumbrancer:—Held, that her name should be struck out both as an original and added party, upon her appeal from the report, notwithstanding that she had not moved to discharge the notice served upon her. Cowan v. Allen, 26 S. C. R. 292, followed. Mc-Laughlin v. Steveart, 21 Occ. N. 185, 1 O. L. R. 295.

Assignment of Mortgage—Advances, Subsequent to—Report—Varying, on Motion for Foreclosure—Interest.]—H. assigned to the plaintiff a mortgage of certain property of which F. was owner, subject to the mort-gage to H. The assignment, to which F. was a party, and which was made at his request, contained, among other things, an agreement on his part that any future advances which he might require, if made by the assignee, should also be a lien or charge upon the property. After the death of F foreclosure proceedings were commenced by the plaintiff, who, in addition to the amount secured by the mortgage, made a claim for subsequent advances. The defendant H. was appointed to represent the heirs of F. in the proceedings, but, subsequently, C. F., who claimed to be one of the legal representatives of F., was permitted to appear, and entered an appearance by her attorney. Plaintiff's claim was sent to a referee to ascertain and report the amount due, and after a hearing, at which C. F. was represented, the referee reported as due the sum of $808.45, including $338.96 for subsequent advances On application for order for foreclosure and sale, the Judge reduced the amount of the plaintiff's claim to $435.25, with interest to the date of the sale:—Held, that the Judge had authority to open up the question as to the correctness of the referee's report, but was wrong in his conclusion, the recital in the assignment being sufficient as between the parties to make the subsequent advances a charge upon the property, and there being sufficient evidence to support the finding that the advances claimed were actually made:-Held, also, that plaintiff was entitled to recover interest up to the date of payment by the sheriff, and not, as allowed, only to the date of sale. Wallace v. Harrington, 34 N. S. Reps. 1.

Bonus—Collateral Advantage.]—The provise for redemption in a mortgage dated the 30th August, 1902, to secure an advance of £3,500, was the payment on the 11th November of £6,000 and a transfer of £5,000 in shares in a company to be promoted by the mortgagor. The principal money advanced Opening Foreclosure-Real Property Act.]—Section 71 of the Real Property Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 148, must be read along with the other provisions of the Act, as s. 92 dealing with trusts, s. 76 declaring the cases in which an action will lie against a registered owner, and s, 52 giving the Court power over certificates of title in any proceeding respecting land; and foreclosure proceedings conducted by the district registrar, in the case of lands which have been brought under the Act, are no more binding between mortgagor and mortgagee than a decree and final order of foreclosure made by the Court; and, if the dealings between the parties, subsequent to the foreclosure, are shewn to be such as would be sufficient in equity to open the foreclosure and let the mortgagor in to redeem, they should in the case of lands under the Act have the same effect. Campbell v. Bank of New South Wales, Torrens Australasian Digest, p. 149, not followed. Under the circumstances set out in the case, it was held that the defendant was entitled to be let in to redeem the property in question. Barnes v. Baird, 25 Occ. N. 20, 15 Man. L. R. 162.

Opening Up Foreclosure—Subsequent Incimbrancer.]—Mortgagees obtained the usual judgment against the mortgagor and his wife for redemption or foreclosure on the 5th April, 1900. The Master added as defendants a subsequent mortgagee and creditors of the mortgagor having a fi. fia. lands in the hands of the sheriff, and by his report, dated the 16th May, 1900, certified that the execution creditors had not proved any claim, and appointed the 17th November, 1900, for payment by the subsequent mortgagee. Payment of the subsequent mortgage of foreclosure as to the added defendants was issued on the 21st November, 1900. The Master thereupon made a subsequent report appointing the 29th December, 1900, as the day for payment by the original defendants; and, payment not having been made by then a final order of foreclosure was issued against them on the 29th January, 1901. On the 3rd April, 1901, the execution creditors served a notice of motion to open the foreclosure. On the same day the mortgagees had written to the mortgagor offering to give him, as of grace, a part of any surplus over their claim which they should realize by a sale of the mortgaged premises, upon the mortgagor agreeing not to move to open the foreclosure:—Held, that the execution creditors, having moved with reasonable prompt-ness, and being in a position to give the mortgagees immediate payment, were, under the circumstances detailed in the evidence, entitled to have the foreclosure set aside, and to be let in to redeem upon the usual terms. Thornhill v. Manning, 1 Sim. N. S. 451, followed. Scottish American Investment Co. v. Brewer, 21 Occ. N. 522, 2 O. L. R. 369.

Parties-Devisee of Deceased Mortgagor -Executors-Joint Assignees of Mortgage--Executors-Joint Assignces of Mortgage— Death of One—Action by Survivor—Trustees -Objection—Laches—Action to Open Fore-closure.]—Mary Ann Plenderleith and her husband had mortgaged certain lands. Hus-band died in 1890, leaving a will whereby he devised and bequeathed all his real and personal estate to his wife, and appointed her to be his sole executrix. This will was proved on 23rd July, 1890. She died on 22nd September, 1890, also leaving a will whereby she appointed defendants James M. Brown and Jesse Brown to be her executors, and whereby also she devised and bequeathed all her real and personal estate to her daughter, Eliza Plenderleith, the plaintiff in this action, then an infant. Probate of this will was granted to the executors named therein on 2nd October, 1890. John Downey, one of the assignees of the mortgage, died on 11th April, 1894, leaving a will and appointing executors. On 28th November, 1894, the surviving assignee of the mortgage, James Maclennan, brought an action for foreclosure against James M. Brown and Jessie Brown, executors, representing the estates of Mary Ann Plenderleith and her husband. In the statement of claim it was alleged that plaintiff and Downey held the mortgage as mortgagees in trust, and that plaintiff, after the death of Downey, was entitled as surviving mortgagee and trustee to the moneys secured by the mortgage. Defendants filed an answer admitting their character of executors under the wills of the mortgagors, setting out the devise to Eliza Plenderleith, and submitting that she was a necessary party to the action. The usual foreclosure judgment was obtained upon motion for judgment, and, after a re-ference and report, a final order of foreclosure was made. On 1st May, 1902, James Maclennan conveyed to George Hamilton, On 2nd May, 1902, George Hamilton con-veyed to the defendant George B. Smith. who on the same day conveyed by way of mortgage to defendant M. Augustus Thomas. On 14th November, 1904, Eliza Plenderleith brought this action against Smith and Thomas to set aside the foreclosure and for redemption, alleging that the foreclosure proceedings were irregular because the personal representatives of Downey were not made parties, and because Eliza Plenderleith, the plaintiff in the present action, was not a party to those proceedings. Maclennan had entered into possession of the lot after the foreclosure as owner, and since then the possession had fol-lowed the conveyances:—Held, the law laid down in Re Martin, 26 O. R. 465, was there held by the Chancellor that the joint effect of 54 V. c. 18, s. 1, and 56 V. c. 20, s. 4, was to vest all estates in the devisees under the wills of persons dying at any time, whether before or after 4th May, 1891, unless the executors registered a caution within a year. That construction, however, was not approved by the legislature, and the declaratory s. 29 of 60 V. c. 14 expressly interpreted s. 1 of 54 V. c. 18 as applying only to the estates of persons dying after 4th May, 1891, and this interpretation is made retrospective, save where a conveyance had been made before the passing of the declaratory section. Both Mr. and Mrs. Plenderleith died before 4th May, 1891, and the result was, that the equity of redemption was vested in their executors at the time of the foreclosure action and judgment; they were properly made defendants as the owners of the equity, and the present plaintiff, Eliza Plen-derleith, the devisee of her mother, was neither a necessary nor a proper party to the foreclosure action. The other objection was, that Downey's personal representatives were not necessary parties to the foreclosure pro ceedings:—Held, the case was within s. 13 of c. 121, R, S. O. 1897, which entitled a surviving mortgagee, in the case of a mortgage or obligation made or assigned to two persons "jointly and not in shares," to receive the mortgage money from the mort-gagor and to give a valid discharge of the mortgage. This mortgage became the property of the two assignees, "jointly and not in shares," within the meaning of this section, and James Maclennan, the survivor, became entitled as against the mortgagors to receive the money and to enforce payment of it by action. It was true that the section applies only to securities made or assigned after 1st July, 1886, but the renewal agreement was made after that date, and contains a direct covenant by the mortgagors with the assignees to pay the mortgage money and interest at a new day, and this constitutes a new "obligation" after 1st July, 1886, so as to bring the case within the section. The statement of claim in the foreclosure action alleged that Maclennan and Downey took and always held the mortgage and the moneys secured by it as trustees. They being trustees, the right to recover the money survived, both at law and They being trustees, the right to in equity, upon the death of Downey, to his co-trustee Maclennan. Plenderleith v. Smith. 5 O. W. R. 753, 6 O. W. R. 389, 10 O. L. R. 188

Payment—Evidence—Onus.] — Payment of a debt must be proved by the debtor beyond reasonable doubt; and where a mortgagor sought redemption, alleging that he had paid $400, which was in dispute, he was held not to have satisfied the onus of proving the payment. True v. Burt, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 497.

Rate of Interest — Loan Company— Pledge of Shares by Mortgagor—Forfeiture —Separate Action.]—The defendant, having certain shares in the plaintiff company, obtained a loan of $600. The shares were allorted and the loan granted upon certain conditions, which included the payment of a membership fee, and certain monthly dues. and the execution, as collateral security, of a mortgage, which was to continue until the maturity of the shares, or until payment of the loan was made. Under the by-laws of the company the rate of interest on loans was declared to be 6 per cent., but under the provisions of the mortgage executed by the defendant, the rate of interest payable where the stock payments, dues and interest were not promptly paid, was 15 per cent. :- Held, that, the defendant having made default in her payments, the company were entitled to payment of the amount due them. with interest at the latter rate. tract of membership as a shareholder was distinct from the mortgage contract, and was not be considered in the foreclosure suit. If her shares were wrongly forfeited, the defendant's rights as a shareholder were to be sought in a separate actiton, and afforded no defence to the foreclosure suit. Canadian Mutual Loan Co. v. Burns, 34 N. S. Reps.

Tax Title Defence - Conveyance of Equity to Purchaser at Tax Sale-Onus of Proof of Arrears-Improvements under Mistake of Title.]-In an action for foreclosure, in which a defendant set up a purchase at a tax sale prior to 1899, and a conveyance of the equity of redemption from the mortgagor, but did not prove the regularity of the sale, or that taxes were in arrear, and relied upon 58 V. c. 90, s. 13 (O.), and 63 V. c. 103, s. 11 (O.), and also claimed for improvements as made under a mistake of title -Held: following Stevenson v. Traynor, O. R. 804, that the onus of proof that there were taxes in arrear for which land might rightly be sold was upon the person claiming under the sale for taxes, and had not been satisfied. Held, also, that the words "sales . . for taxes" in s. 11 of 63 V. c. 103.

mean sales for taxes for which the lands might rightly be sold. Held, also, under the circumstances here, that the defendant had made no improvements as under a mistake of title—there was no mistake—he had simply improved his own land which he took subject to the mortgage. Building and Loan Assn. v. Stanley, 1 O. W. R. 399, 469, 572, 592, 2 O. W. R. 122.

Forgery—Facts establishing genuineness—Want of independent advice—Reduction of amount—Costs of action — Counterclaim—Promissory note. Malcolmson v. Malcolmson, 3 O. W. R. 324.

Payment - Acceptance - Estoppel -Findings of Jury.]—In an action to foreclose a mortgage one of the chief grounds of defence was that the amount claimed had been placed by the detendant in the hands of M., a solicitor, to be paid over to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff, after notice of such payment, induced the defendant to believe that he accepted such payment as a payment to himself, and that the plaintiff, after such notice, by failing to press for payment, prevented the defendant from recovering amount from M., who had become insolvent and unable to pay. The jury found in answers to questions submitted; (2) that the plaintiff by his conduct, after the payment to M., led the defendant to reasonably believe that said payment was regarded and accepted and payment was regarded and accepted as a payment to himself; but (5) that the position of the defendant, in consequence of such belief, was not changed for the worse. The trial Judge, notwithstanding the fifth finding, ordered judgment to be entered for defendant with costs: Held, that a letter written by the plaintiff to the defendant did not support the fifth finding of the jury, and that the find-ing must be set aside. 2. That the fifth find-ing, even if supported by the evidence, was insufficient to complete an estoppel. 3. That to shew detriment to the defendant, it would be necessary to shew that the money was in the hands of M. at the time, and that the defendant, but for the letter written by the plaintiff, would have taken measures likely to secure payment. Cameron v. McDonald, 33 N. S. Reps. 469,

VI. INTEREST.

Amount Due — Waiver or Dispensation Tender — Rate of Interest Post Diem— Costs.]-Prior to the maturity of a mortgage, the mortgagor's solicitor wrote to the mortgagee's solicitor, that if he would call at the former's office he could have the principal and interest due, amounting to $396.48, and, on the mortgagee's solicitor failing to call, he wrote to the mortgagee that he was prepared to pay the said sum; this was answered by the mortgagee's solicitor sending a statement claiming, in addition, certain disputed costs: -Held, that what took place did not amount to a waiver or dispensation of a tender of the amount due under the mortgage. The payment of the principal money was to be made at the expiration of a named period, with interest at a specified rate, as well before as after maturity, until the said principal was fully paid and satisfied:—Held, that the interest at the rate specified was payable after as well as before the expiration of such People's Loan and Deposit Co. v. Grant, 18 S. C. R. 262, distinguished. In an action for redemption brought by the mortgagor, in which a tender was set up, the judgment was for a reference to a Master to ascertain the amount due, to make all necessary inquiries for redemption or fore-closure, and to report; the provision for costs being that if the mortgagor had made default in payment of the amount, if any, found to be due, he should pay the costs; and, if no greater sum than $396.48 were found to be due, the defendant should pay the costs. Further directions were not reserved; nor were there any further directions as to costs: —Held, that the defendant was entitled to the costs of the action. Judgment in 22 Occ. N. 28, 3 O. L. R. 29, varied. Middleton v. Scott, 22 Occ. N. 309, 4 O. L. R. 459.

Building Society - Monthly Payments - Maturity of Shares—Depreciation — Dis-charge — Novation — Interest—Premium.] - The plaintiff became a member of, and mortgaged his land to, a building society in-corporated under R. S. O. 1887 c. 169, as collateral security for repayment of the value of his stock, which had been advanced to him, which stock he covenanted to assign forthwith to the company, and to repay its forthwith to the company, and to repay its par value in 96 monthly payments, "as per rules, etc., of the company;" and he signed 96 promissory notes, which included interest at 6 per cent, and 40 cents per share per month, bonus or premium. Afterwards the company sold out to another company, and the plaintiff accepted shares in the latter in lieu of his shares in the former, contracting at the same time to observe the by-laws of the latter company, one of which provided that "the monthly dues under mortgages must continue to be paid until maturity of the pledged shares." Having paid the 96 notes. pledged shares." Having paid the 96 notes, he claimed a discharge. Owing to a depre-ciation in the value of the assets of the vendor company, 38 per cent, was deducted from the amount credited on the plaintiff's shares, and a discharge was refused:-Held, that there had been a complete novation and change of membership by the plaintiff from one company to the other; and the plaintiff was not entitled to a discharge till he had paid his proportion of the deficiency arising from the depreciation. 2. That P. S. C. c. 127, s. 3, relating to interest c. mortgages, and embodied in R. S. O. 1897 c. 205, s. 21, had no application to this mortgage; and moreover the rate of interest was only 6 per and cent., the bonus (authorized by R. S. O. 1887 c. 169, s. 38), not being considered to be interest. Lee v. Canadian Mutual L. and I. Co., 22 Occ. N. 60, 3 O. L. R. 191, 2 O. W. R. 370, 5 O. L. R. 471.

Construction — Interest.]—The proviso for payment in a mortgage, given to secure an indebtedness, provided for the payment of "said overdrawn account and all promissory notes or bills of exchange (and interest upon the same) then due and payable:"—Held, that the overdrawn account was made chargeable with interest. Bank of Montreal v. Dunlop, 22 Occ. N. 327, 2 N. B. Eq. Reps. 288

Default of Payment of Interest — Possession. Coté v. Meloche, 1 O. W. R. 802.

with interest at nine per cent., payable half yearly, contained these provisoes: "Provided that on default of payment for two months of any portion of the money hereby secured the whole of the instalments hereby secured shall become payable. Provided that on default of payment of any of the instalments hereby secured, or insurance, or any part thereof, at the times provided, interest at the rate above mentioned shall be paid on all sums so in arrear, and also on the interest by this proviso secured at the end of every half year that the same shall be unpaid:"—Held, reversing the judgment in 26 A. R. 232, 19 Occ. N. 210, that the principal sum of $20,000. becoming due for non-payment under the first of the above provisoes, was not an instalment in arrear under the second, on which the mortgagees were entitled to interest at the rate of nine per cent, per annum. Biggs v. Freehold Loan and Savings Co., 21 Occ. N. 222, 31 S. C. R. 133.

VII. SALE UNDER POWER.

Frudulent Scheme - Subsequent Purchase for Value—Exchange of Lands—Con-structive Notice—Redemption—Costs.] — A mortgagee of land made a colourable sale of the land, under the pretended exercise of the power of sale, to D., who conveyed to the mortgagee's wife, who conveyed to B., receiving in exchange a conveyance of another lot. The solicitor who acted for the mortgagee in The solicitor who acted for the mortgages in the sale proceedings and drew the convey-ances to D. and the mortgages's wife, also acted for B. in drawing the deed of the lot conveyed by her in exchange, but there was nothing to shew that he had been instructed to examine the title of the mortgaged land on behalf of B.:—Held, that B. was not effected with potice of saveting B. was not affected with notice of anything the solicitor knew, but that knowledge of the contents of the conveyances and of other facts from which a Court of equity would infer that there had not been an actual bona fide exercise of the power, should be imputed to B., whose husband acted as her agent and to B., whose husband acted as her agent and was aware of the facts, and thus she had sufficient notice of the plaintiff's right as owner of the equity to prevent her from claiming the property free from it. Rose v. Peterkin, 13 S. C. R. 677, followed. 2. The conveyances to D. and the mortgagee's wife operated to vest the legal estate in the latter, and she could exercise the power of sale, which had not been exhausted. Henderson v. Astwood, 18941 A. C. 150, followed. 3. The conveyance to B. (being only a quit claim deed) could not be treated as an exercise of the power of sale because it did not purport to grant the whole estate in mortgage, but only the interest of the grantor, which was really only that of a mortgagee. 4. The power of sale cannot be properly exer-4. The power of sale cannot be properly exercised by the mortgage accepting other property in exchange, unless there is no value in the equity. Smith v. Spears, 22 O. R. 286, explained and distinguished. 5. B. was entitled, on being redeemed, to add to her claim the costs of the sale proceedings up to but not including nor beyond the conveyance to D. and (following Harvey v. Tebbutt, 1 J. & W. 197) the costs of the action so far as it was for redemption only, but she should pay the plaintiff the costs occasioned to him by her resisting the claim to redeem, to be set off; and the mortgages should pay the costs of the plaintiff and of B. Winters v. McKinistery, 22 Occ. N. 213, 23 Occ. N. 54, 14 Man, L. R. 294.

Interest on Interest — Accruing after Maturity of Principal—Construction of Proviso.]—A mortgage contained the following proviso: "Provided this mortgage to be void on payment of $5,000 with interest from the date hereof at the rate of 8 per cent, per annum as follows: The said principal sum at the expiration of one year from the date hereof, and the interest at the rate aforesaid on the principal money from time to time remaining unpaid until the whole of time remaining unpaid until the whole of same is satisfied, and as well after as before maturity thereof, quarterly on each and every 12th day of November, February, May, and August hereafter, the first of such payments of interest to be due and made on the 12th day of November next; it being agreed and understood that in the event of said interest not being punctually paid, the amount of same shall bear interest at the said rate from the date of its maturity until paid in like manner as if it were part of the principal, but this proviso shall not entitle the said mortgagor to any extension of time for payment of the interest on the said principal sum beyond the date hereinbefore provided for payment of the same:"—Held, that the proviso, taken as a whole, did not entitle plaintiffs to any interest upon interest which accrued after maturity of the principal money. It is clearly deducible from the authorities that, where a claim is made to convert interest into capital, the intention of the par-ties should be indicated by clear and unambiguous language, and, no such intention was indicated in this case, except as to interest indicated in this case, except as to interest accruing during one year. See St. John v. Rykert, 10 S. C. R. 278, at p. 288; Blythwood, 4th ed., vol. 3, p. 895, and precedents, p. 1131; Am, and Eng. Eucyc. of Law, 2nd ed., vol. 16, p. 1073; Coote on Mortzages, 7th ed., p. 1181. Appeal allowed with costs, and the perport amendal by stilling and and the report amended by striking out all allowances for interest on interest which has accrued since maturity of principal. Imperial Trusts Co. v. New York Security and Trust Co., 5 O. W. R. 213, 10 O. L. R. 280.

Notice — Sufficiency — Service—Person Entitled — Agent—Registration—Statutes.]—A notice of sale under the power in a mortgage was addressed to the mortgage. then resident abroad, G. A. M. (as his agent), E. M. and W. M., J. M. and J. A., and said: "I. C. W., hereby give you notice?" etc. It was dated, and signed by the solicitor for the mortgage:—Held, that on stace it was a sufficient notice:—Held, that on stace it was a sufficient notice:—Held, that service of it was effective where made upon and accepted by G. A. M., who acted generally as agent of the mortgager, who was abroad, and who received the notice from G. A. M. and never made any objection to it. J. M. and J. A. were subsequent mortgages who had assigned their mortgages to G. A. M., who accepted service of it for them, saying in his acceptance that he was the assignee of their mortgages. The assignment to him was not registered:—Held, that J. M. and J. A. were out entitled to notice. The notice was not served upon E. M. and W. M., but the eight of the mortgage was paid

(2) c. 16, providing for registration of notice of sale, did not apply to this case; here the sale was "effected" prior to the 1st January, 1990, and the conveyance when drawn would be "in pursuance" of that sale, Feneick v. Whiteam, 21 Occ. N. 122, I O. L. R. 24.

Payment—Agent of Mortgagee Advancing Money to Make up Interest Unpaid—Dual Unaracter of Agent—Question whether Advance Made on Behalf of Persons Liable for Interest.—Plaintiff, residing in Ireland, was first mortgage of a property upon which defendant held a second mortgage. Mr. Frank Cayley acted as agent for plaintiff in investing her money in a first mortgage upon this property. He also acted as agent for the owners of the equity of redemption in collecting the rentals of the property until July, 1904. Since that time he collected these rentals as agent for plaintiff, qua mortgage in possession. The rentals received having proved insufficient, after satisfying such charges upon them as taxes, outlays for repairs, etc., to pay plaintiff's interest in full. Mr. Cayley from time to time advanced out of his own moneys, the sum required to make up the deficiency. Thus he remitted to plaintiff half-yearly the full amount of the interest accrued upon her mortgage during the previous six months. Plaintiff asserted that this amount was still due and owing as arrears of interest upon her mortgage, of the deficiency. Thus he remitted to plaintiff's claim for interest upon her mortgage of prenicipal moneys were outstanding: — Held, that the advances made by Mr. Cayley were never intended to be payments in satisfaction of plaintiff's claim for interest upon her mortgage, or to discharge the mortgaged premises therefrom. The facts do not bring the present case within Williamson v, Goold, I Bing. 171, and Carroll v. Goold, ib. 190, so much relied on by Mr. Denton. There the circumstances pointed clearly to payment in satisfaction being intended by the person who made it, Simpson v, Eggington, 10 Ex. 845, followed. Appeal allowed with costs here and below. Glascott v, Cameron, 6 O. W. R. 36, 10 O. L. R. 399.

Payment into Court of Surplus—Competing Claimants of Fund—Costs.]—A mortage sale under power yielded a surplus of $20.29, out of which the mortgage applied to pay into Court $23.48.9, being the amount of a judgment against the mortgager, which the judgment creditor sought by suit to have paid out of the surplus as against the owner of the equity of redemption in the mortgage:—Held, that, on the mortgage paying into Court the whole surplus, less the costs of his appearance and application, his name should be struck out of the suit. Boyne v. Robinson, 25 Occ. N. 75, 3 N. B. Eq. 57.

Payment of Arrears—Acceleration.]— The effect of the acceleration clause, No. 16, schedule B., of the Act respecting Short Forms of Mortgages, R. S. O. 1897 c. 126, is to give a right in every case to the mortzagor, his heirs and assigns, to pay all arrears and lawful charges, and the mortgagee has then no right to take further proceedings, except when a judgment has been recovered. The plaintiff, as assignee of the mortgager, was entitled to restrain proceedings under the power of sale in the mortgage, upon payment of arrears of interest and costs, the principal not being due except under the acceleration clause. Pretended Sale — Fraud — Purchasers for Value without Notice — Knowledge of Agent — Redemption — Acts of Parties to Fraud—Dumage by.] — On an appeal from the judgment of Meredith, C.J., 2 O. L. R. 134, 21 Occ. N. 438:—Held, that the defendant D. was not personally liable, as he committed no wrong in taking the assignment of the mortgage, and in exercising the power of sale wrought no change in the plaintiffs' rights, as the property in the hands of H., the purchaser, who became trustee for R., was redeemable unaffected by the sale. But the defendant H. was personally liable, as he was possessed of the legal title and had the legal power and control, and it was his sale and his act that prejudiced the plaintiff. Judgment below varied. Smith v. Hunt, 22 Occ. N. 429, 4 O. L. R. 653, 1 O. W. R. 598, 798.

Sale on Credit not Carried Out-Removal of Building from Land—Inability to Reconvey Property in Original Condition— Liability of Mortgagee to Account for Price. though not Paid - Possession - Rents and Profits.]-Action on a covenant by defendant for the payment of $700 and interest, contained in a chattel mortgage from him to plaintiff. Defendant sets up in answer to plaintiff's claim that the chattel mortgage was given as collateral security to a morton a cheese factory and the land on which it stood, which he had given to plaintiff, and on which there remained due the $700 secured by the chattel mortgage; that plaintiff took possession of the property covered by both mortgages and sold it on 7th plaintiff took covered by both mortgages and sold it on 7th August, 1902, under the power of sale, which the mortgages contained, to Alvin W. Mit-chell, for $750; that Mitchell subsequently sold the property for $1,000; that the ma-chinery contained in the factory was immedi-ately removed by Mitchell or his grantee; that the factory was dismantled by Mitchell, and "removed piecemeal several miles from the original location;" and that plaintiff, by these dealines with the mortgaged property. these dealings with the mortgaged property, "was estopped from proceeding with an ac-tion on the covenant." Mitchell never comtion on the covenant. Mitchell never com-pleted the purchase nor paid anything on ac-count of either purchase money or interest, and the factory remained closed and unused until it was taken down: — Held, in an alteration of the character or condition of alteration of the character or condition of the mortgaged estate, where the mortgage was in a position to reconvey the whole of the land itself, that there was no good rea-son why he should not be entitled to recover the mortgage money after deducting from it what may be sufficient to compensate the mortgagor for the injury done to the mort-gaged property by the wrennful act or degaged property by the wrongful act or default, Reference to Munsen v. Hauss, 22 Gr. 279:—Held, that plaintiff was bound to account for the whole of the purchase price which was to have been paid by Mitchell. Plaintiff was not entitled, according to the terms of the powers, to sell on credit, but a sale made by a mortgagee on credit, if a real sale, is, according to the decided cases, a valid exercise of the power, if the mortgagee stands ready to account to the mortgagee stands ready to account to the mortgagee for the price as so much money received by him in cash; Thurlaw v. Mackeson, L. R. 4. Q. 15. 97. Judgment should be entered for plaintiff for the mortgage money and interest (including the costs of exercising the power of sale, which could be taxed if defendant so desired), less the amount of Mitchell's purchase money ($750), treating it as a sum received on 7th August, 1902.

Service of Notice-Fraudulent Scheme-Exchange—Notice by Solicitor's Knowledge.]
—In April, 1900, plaintiff mortgaged land to —In April, 1900, plaintiff mortgaged land to defendant McK. to secure $140 and interest; the whole to become due in the following December. The mortgage provided for sale on one month's notice, after one month's default. Shortly after the mortgage was made, plaintiff paid McK. $2.50 for interest. In January, 1901, plaintiff left the province, and returned in August, 1901. Until two weeks before leaving, plaintiff lived on the mortgaged land. Shortly after plaintiff left, his brother paid McK. $32 on the mortgage. About 25th February, 1901, McK. took proceedings to sell under the power of sale; a notice of intention to sell was fastened to the door of the house on the property, but the door of the house on the property, but not served on plaintiff personally. The property was advertised for sale by auction on 9th April, 1901. Before the sale McK. arranged with D. to bid as if for himself, but ranged with D. to bid as it for himself, out in reality for McK. D, bid, and the property was knocked down to him. A deed, purporting to be in pursuance of the power of sale, was executed by McK. to D., for the expressed consideration of $195, and a quit claim deed by D. to McK.'s wife, for the expressed consideration of $200. McK, paid for the drawing of both deeds; D. was paid $5, but otherwise no money was paid by or to him. Afterwards an exchange of proper-ties was effected with one B., McK.'s wife executing a quit claim of the plaintiff's land in favour of B.:—Held, that the pretended sale to D. and the deed by D. to McK,'s wife were in pursuance of a fraudulent scheme by McK. to become the owner of plaintiff's land for much less than it was worth, and the sale was declared void. 2. That the service of the notice of sale was good, 3. It was contended that B. had notice of the fraud by having employed the same solicitor who had conducted the sale proceedings: — Held, that there was no presumption that the solicitor would communicate his knowledge to B., as it would be against his interest to tell. 4. The fact that on the day of the alleged mortgaged sale, B. found that the mortgagee or his wife claimed to absolutely own the land, was notice enough to put B. on inquiry. As she did not make such inquiry, she could not avail herself of her ignorance. The best not avail herself of her ignorance. position she could hold was that of an assignee of the mortgage. 5. A power of selectual not be exercised by an exchange of the land instead of by a sale for a price. Smith

Short Forms Act—Sale without Notice,—The insertion of the word "calendar" before the word "month" in the words given in column one, number 13, of the second schedule to the Short Forms Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 157, does not prevent the mortgagee getting the benefit of the wording of the corresponding long form, and, where the words of the short form above referred to were followed by the words "Should default be made for two months a sale or lease may be made hereunder without notice:"—Held, that these words were effectual to enable the mortgage to make a valid sale and conveyance of the whole estate mortgaged, without giving any notice whatever of his intention to do so. Tender of Mortgage Money — Place and Time of,]—The defendants under a power of sale in a mortgage advertised a sale of sale in a mortgage advertised a sale of lands near Kincardine, to take place there on the 19th January. On the 17th January, at eleven a.m., the mortgagor telegraphed to the defendants at Toronto asking amount required to pay mortgage, to which the defendants telegraphed a reply. At ten a.m. on the 19th January the defendants received at Toronto the amount named, but, in accordance with their office procedure, the accountant was not aware of this till about eleven a.m., when, knowing the property was up for sale, he telegraphed and telephoned the fact to Kincardine. The sale had, however, been made a few minutes before to the plaintiff, the defendants then returned the money to the mortgagor:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance, for the mortgagor had not tendered the amount at such a reasonable time before the sale as to make if obligatory to receive it as payment. Gentles v. Canada Permanent and Western Canada Mortgage Corporation, 21 Occ. N. 143, 32 O. R. 428.

VIII. SUBSEQUENT INCUMBRANCES.

Collateral Security—Release—Discharge of Mortgage—Rights of Second Mortgagee—Principal and Surety—Priorities, 1—A mortgage, made to the plaintiffs, by a married woman, whose husband was a party, but did not join in the covenants, was given as collateral security for the payment of certain promissory notes made by the husband and wife to secure the husband's indebtedness. Further liabilities were incurred by the husband and payments made on account, and subsequently the whole indebtedness was adjusted, the plaintiffs taking the notes of the husband alone, maturing at several future dates, in substitution of the original notes which the plaintiffs agreed to cancel and deliver up:—Held, that the effect of what took place was to extinguish the liability on the notes secured by the mortgage, and therefore the mortgage itself given as collateral security therefor, and which enured to the noteft of the holders of a second mortgage also given by the husband and wife, and that the rights so acquired were not affected by an agreement subsequently entered into by an agreement subsequently entered into between the wife and the plaintiffs that the plaintiffs mortgage should be considered as still subsisting. Waterous Engine Works Co. v. Livingston, 24 Occ. N. 338, 7 O. L. R. 740, 3 O. W. R. 670.

Execution Creditors — Salc—Surplus— Collateral Security.] — Execution creditors, though they probably cannot sell under their writs the interest of their execution debtor in land subject to more than one mortgage made by him, are nevertheless incumbrancers upon that interest, and upon the proceeds thereof in the event of a sale of the land by a mortgagee, and entitled to payment thereout according to priority. A mortgagee who sells the land and pays off an incumbrancer who holds, to his knowledge, collateral security, must take over that collateral security for the benefit of execution creditors, and is liable to them for the value thereof if he fails to do so. Judgment of a Divisional Court, 31 O. R. 552, 20 Occ. N. 66, affirmed; Maclennan J.A., dissenting. Glover v. Southern Loan and Savings Co., 21 Occ. N. 105, 1 O. L. R. 59.

Priorities - Payment by Sale of Other Property — Improvements — Security.] — Action for a declaration of hypothec of im-The defendant moved for security movables. that the immovables should be sold for an amount sufficient to pay him the whole of his claim, which he alleged was prior to the claim of the plaintiff, and that his hypothec was also prior. The plaintiff replied that the defendant had been paid his privileged or prior claim by the sale of other immovables hypothecated for the same debt. The defendant rejoined that he had not been paid his entire debt, and that a certain sum received by him had been expended in improvements on the property. The plaintiff denied the improvements, and alleged that, in any event, they were off-set by the rents and profits. Finally, the defendant denied the off-set:—Held, that the defendant had not proved his improvements; that he had received from the sale of the other immovables a sum exceeding his claim; that his debt was therefore extinguished, and he was not entitled to security. Desjardins v. Bastien, 4 Q. P. R. 264.

Rents and Profits-Collateral Indebtedness-Appropriation of Receipts.]-A mort-gagee, in receipt of the rents and profits of the mortgaged premises, from time to time sold goods to the mortgagor, and the latter upon a settlement of accounts assented to the receipts being applied first in payment of the account for goods sold:—Held, that an incumbrancer whose rights accrued after the settlement could not complain of this, and was not entitled to take the position that the rents and profits necessarily and irrevocably reduced the mortgage debt as they were received. Mitchell v. Saylor, 21 Occ. N. 224, 1 O. L. R. 458.

IX. OTHER CASES.

Account-Payments by Mortgagees-Release of Claim — Improvements — Solicitor— Negotiation of Sale — Commission.] — Mortgagees of land, the mortgage being in default. made an agreement for sale to C., who paid nothing, but entered into possession and made improvements, and in order to do so borrowed money from N., and assigned to N. his agreement from the mortgagees; the agreement and the assignment were registered. The mortgagees found another purchaser, and paid N. a sum of money for a release of his claim ; —Held, that upon an accounting by the mort-gagees, at the suit of the mortgagors, on the basis of the second sale, the mortgagees were entitled to credit for the money paid to N .: -Held, also, that they were entitled to credit for a small sum paid to their solicitor for negotiating the second sale—a service which comes within the scope of the professional duties and employment of a solicitor. Laws v. Toronto General Trusts Corporation, 24 Occ. N. 395, 8 O. L. R. 522, 3 O. W. R. 634, 4 O. W. R. 164.

Action-Judgment - Subsequent Settlement-Failure to Carry Out-Account-New Day—Reference.]—A motion by the plaintiff in a mortgage action for an order for a new day and a new account, and to change the relief sought from sale to foreclosure, was opposed on the ground of an agreement for a compromise after judgment under which money had been paid to the plaintiff, the mortgagee:—Held, that if the defendant mortgagor had made default in payments according to the agreement, the unmodified burden of the mortgage existed and was enforceable. Such an arrangement should be investigated in the Master's office, and not by independent in the Master's once, and not by independent litigation. The matter has passed into judgment, and the only matter between the contestants was one of account—how much was due and payable in respect of the mortgage, having regard to the arrangement manifested in the correspondence and dealings subsequent to the Master's report. It was foreign to the policy of the Judicature Act to contemplate new litigation in such a case as this: s. 57 McCollum v. Caston, 21 Occ. N. 189, 235, 1 O. L. R. 240.

On default in payment, a warrant was issued under the chattel mortgage, and the goods were seized and taken out of the mortgagor's possession. Although a form of sale was gone through, no sale actually took place, but the goods were taken possession of by the mortgagee and appropriated to his own use. More than 10 years afterwards, the mortgagor's possession of the land not having been in any way interfered with, an assignee of the mortgagee attempted to exercise the power of sale in the mortgage of the lands:—Held, that the intended sale was a "proceeding" within the meaning of s. 23 of R. Mining leases subsequently were issued by the Crown to the company. A judgment creditor of the company, with notice of the mortgage, purchased the leases at a sheriff's sale, under an execution upon his judgment, and paid to the Crown rent overdue upon the same, whereupon new leases were issued in his own name, the Crown having no knowledge of the mortgage :-Held, that the new leases were subject to the mortgage. Semble, that the title of the judgment creditor would have been postponed to that of the mortgagee, though he had been a purchaser without notice of the mortgage. Continental Trusts Co. v. Mineral Products Co., 25 Occ. N. 67, 3 N. B. Eq. R. 28.

Loan Association—Collateral Security—Advance of Maturing Shares—By-law Changing Mode of Payment—Covenant,]—Where a mortgage of real estate by a member of a loan association incorporated under R. S. O. 1887 c. 169, executed to secure collaterally an advance to him of the amount of the maturity value of certain of his shares in the association, contained a covenant by the mortgagor that the monthly payments would be made according to the by-laws of the association until the shares should have matured, and also that he would make the several payments provided by the by-laws for the time being with respect to shares and the payment thereof:—Held, that the association had power, by by-law passed subsequent to the execution of the mortgage, to change the mode of payment, which, according to the mortgage, was by fixed monthly instalments, to a provision by which when the shares matured the mortgage should be released. Williams v. Dominion Permancal Loan Co., 1 O. L. R. 532.

Mortgagee Dealing with Property-Power to Reconvey-Action on Covenant-Right of Way.]-A mortgagee, being compellable under his mortgage to discharge at any time any portion of the land described in it, having not less than 20 feet frontage, upon payment of a certain sum per foot frontage, not only discharged a certain portion of the land upon payment of a certain sum, but also assented to a right of way across the whole of the property, which right of way had been granted by the owners of the equity of redemption to the purchaser of a portion of the mortgaged lands, and released the right of way from his mortgage: - Held, that the mortgagee having debarred herself from restoring the estate covered by the mortgage, unaltered in character and quantity, in a manner un-authorized by the terms of the mortgage. owing to the right of way, an assignee of the mortgage could not claim under the covenant therein in an administration of the mortgagor's estate. It is proper, however, in such a case that the mortgagee claiming under the covenant should have an opportunity within a limited time to put himself in a position to restore the estate upon payment of the mortgage money, and so twenty days were allowed for that purpose. Rectification - Limitation of Actions -Real Property Limitation Act-Interest.] -In 1882 the defendant mortgaged land to the plaintiffs to secure a loan. The plaintiffs asserted that it was intended by both parties that the mortgage should include the outer two miles as well as the inner two miles of lots 18 and 19, and that the outer lots were omitted by mutual mistake:—Held, on the evidence, that the mortgage deed should be rectified. The defendant paid interest up to the 25th November, 1883. In 1885 the defendant wrote to the plaintiffs asking for a discharge of part of the outer two misses with the control of th discharge of part of the outer two miles which had been taken for a railway, and the plain-tiffs executed the discharge and received payment of compensation from the railway com-The defendant left the land in 1892, and his brother-in-law afterwards cut hay upon it. The defendant paid no taxes since 1887. The plaintiffs paid all taxes from that year:—Held, that the Real Property Limitation of the paid of the pa tion Act did not begin to run in the defendant's favour till 1885, and did not continue to run after he abandoned the land in 1892; he thus had no more than S years of adverse possession. The principal became due in May, 1884. The contract to pay interest then ceased, and interest thereafter was recoverable only as damages, at the statutory rate, and for only 6 years before action. The statutory rate would be 6 per cent, up to 7th July, 1900, and 5 per cent, since: 63 & 64 V c. 29 (D.). (e), notwithstanding that these persons had determined, before negotiating with the town, to remove their business from the village at all events, and to such other place as should offer the largest inducement. The by-laws were quashed upon an application made within three months after they were registered, and nearly three months after they were passed, notwithstanding that the industry had been in the meantime established in the town and the money paid over

Interest - Illegal Payment-Liability of Councillors-Arbitration and Award.] the year 1899, by special Act, an agreement between the corporation of a town and a company was confirmed, by which on comple-tion of certain works the company were to be paid a bonus. The works were proceeded with, but alterations became necessary, and a new agreement was entered into, in accordance with which the works were com-pleted in January, 1900. In April of that year another special Act was obtained authorizing the payment of the bonus notwithstanding the alterations, nothing being said as to interest. The bonus was thereupon paid, and the company claimed payment of interest on the amount from the date of completion of the works. After some negotiation, the town and the company agreed to obtain the opinion of counsel, who, on an incomplete (as was found) statement of facts, advised the payment of the claim, and payment was made in spite of the protest of the plain-tiff:—Held, in an action by the plaintiff on behalf of himself and all other ratepayers, that there was no right to interest; that the payment was illegal and a breach of trust; that there had not been an award by an arbitrator but merely an expression of opinion, which was no protection, and that the councillors who had authorized the payment, and the company who had received it, were bound to make good the amount to the corporation, which was made a party to the action to receive payment. Semble, that the council of a municipal corporation may perhaps refer to arbitration a question of permaps reper to around a question of act falling within their ordinary administrative duties, but cannot refer a question of law. Patchell v. Raikes, 24 Occ. N. 212, 7 O. L. R. 470, 3 O. W. R. 457.

Manufacturing Corporation — By-law Closing Part of Highway—Private Interest Hones Clauses of Municipal Act—Reducing Width of Street—Rights of Feners Purchasing According to Plan.] — A municipal corporation passed a by-law to reduce width of a street and conveyed to a manufacturing corporation the part taken from the street There was no contract between as a bonus. the manufacturing and municipal corporations that the manufacturing corporation should employ additional men nor enlarge their plant:—Held, that this fact alone did not invalidate the by-law nor prove that the by-law was passed in interests of a private corporation and not in the interests of the public. The plaintiff purchased lands on the street in question according to a registered plan :- Held, that the fact that the registered plan shewed the street to be 80 feet in width did not prevent the municipality passing a by-law to reduce its width to 66 feet. In re Inglis and City of Toronto, 5 O. W. R. 489, 9 O. L. R. 562.

Personal Interest of Councillors

Necessity for By-law-Approval—Limitation of Actions.—Municipal Code.]—No member of a council can take part in the discussion of any question in which he has a personal interest. 2. The aid to a factory must be granted, not by a simple resolution, but by a by-law approved by the municipal electors and the Lieutenant-Governor in council. 3. The prescription enacted by art. 708, M. C., does not apply to regular actions in the Superior Court, but only to proceedings taken under the code. Beauregard v. Village of Roston Falls, Q. R. 24 S. C. 474.

Res Judicata-Construction of Aqueduct Exclusive Privilege—Monopoly.]—To an action brought to recover a bonus of $5,000 voted for the construction of an aqueduct, a municipal corporation cannot plead mat-ters which it has already invoked and which have been pronounced against in an action which has been finally dismissed by the Supreme Court of Canada, and which was instituted by such corporation to set aside the contract in pursuance of which the bonus was voted. 2. A municipal corporation may pass a by-law granting a bonus to persons who undertake to construct an aqueduct within the limits of the municipality. 3. A municipal corporation, by virtue of art. 637, C. M., may grant an exclusive privilege for not more than 25 years to persons who undertake to construct an aqueduct within the limits of the municipality. Such privilege, if it is limited to the exclusive right to lay pipes in the streets, is not unconstitutional and does not constitute an illegal monopoly. 4. Even if the terms in which such privilege has been granted are of such a nature as to extend this privilege to a period exceeding 25 years. that would not make the contract and by-law totally void, and the bonus granted by such contract and by-law for the construction and working of the aqueduct can always be claimed. The fisheries between high and low water mark of the harbour are declared by the charter to be for the sole use of the inhabitants, but by Act of Assembly they are directed to be annually sold by the city—Held, that where the city is bounded by low water mark it has not at ttle to self the right of fishing be, and such mark, though within the harbour. Re-construction — Urgency — Irregular Resolutions—Liability for Cost-Borrowing—Levying Rate.]—The council of a municipality had in July, 1895, by a simple resolution, declared that bridges and roads should be at the charges of the municipality, and in August, 1895, also by resolution, it was decided to re-construct, at the expense of the corporation, a certain bridge. The reconstruction work having been done, the counconstruction work having been done, the coun-cil on the 14th October, 1895, resolved to pay the accounts of those who had done it, and on the 4th November, 1895, the mayor was authorized to borrow $300 for this purpose upon a promisory note, which he did. On the 7th January, 1896, a by-law was passed ordering a levy upon the municipality, among other sums, of $310.50 for the cost of re-construction of this bridge. The resolure-construction of this bringe. The resolu-tions of July and August were quashed by the Superior Court (In a proceeding begun on the 1st October, 1895, the works being than nearly finished), upon the ground that the council having jurisdiction over the matter should have proceeded by by-law coming into force on the 1st January following; and in the present case, there was nothing in the evidence to shew that the bridge was a municipal bridge at the charges of all the owners or occupants of properties fronting on the road of which this bridge formed a part, or that it was a part of the works of the watercourse which it crossed and at the watercourse which it crossed and at the charges of the ratepayers who were liable therefor: — Held, Blanchet, J., dissenting, that, in adopting the two resolutions of July and August, the corporation had only acted in an irregular manner in a matter within its jurisdiction; that having caused to be performed the work of re-construction — which was urgent—in virtue of such resolutions, it had made itself liable to those who had done the work; and that it could borrow money upon a promissory note to pay those persons and assess upon the municipality an amount sufficient to repay the loan. After the three months allowed by the Municipal Act for making such an application had expired, the application of R. not, however, having been dismissed, one of the remaining ratepayers applied to be added or substituted as an applicant:—Held, that he should be allowed to continue the proceedings in R.'s name, on the usual terms of indemnifying him against costs. Cattle - Highway-License Fee.]-A bylaw passed by a township council under s. 546 (2) of R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, prohibiting the running at large of cattle, horses, sheep, swine, or geese, and for impounding those contravening the by-law, was amended by a by-law subsequently passed, whereby milch cows, heifers, and steers under two years, were permitted to graze on the public highways of the township, on payment of an annual fee of $2 for each animal, such animal to have securely fastened thereon a tag bearing a registered number, furnished by the clerk at the township's expense, the township also furnishing a book to contain such registered numbers, all moneys received to be the common property of the township. The by-law also contained a provision for the appointment of inspectors:—Held, that the amending by-law was valid; that the sum named as a license fee was not excessive, and was merely for the purpose of meeting the expenses of carrying out the by-law, and not for raising a revenue; and that the permission to graze on the highways was not ultra sion to graze on the inginarys was not nitra-vires of the corporation. Closing of Saloons — Bar-rooms—Sunday Closing—Powers of Municipality—Liquor Traffic Regulation Act.]-Appeal by way of case stated from a conviction by the police magistrate for Nanaimo, whereby the appellant was convicted under a Sunday observance by-law, the offence being that of being found in the bar-room of the Crescent Hotel between 10 and 12 p.m. on Sunday, con-trary to the provisions of the by-law. By the Liquor Traffic Regulation Act, liquor is prehibited from being sold between 11 p.m. on Saturday and 1 a.m. of the Monday fol-lowing, and also during any other days or hours during which the place is to be closed by order of municipal by-law :-Held, setting aside the conviction, that a municipailty has no power under s. 50, s.-ss. 109 and 110, of the Municipal Clauses Act, to pass a by-law closing any kind of licensed premises except saloons. 2. A municipality is not empowered, by s. 7 of the Liquor Traffic Regulation Act, to pass any closing by-law, the intention of the section being to reach by the sale daying interto prohibit the sale during, inter alia, such hours as may be prescribed by the municipality under the authority of some other statute. 3. Where a statute creates offences and provides the necessary machinery for the carrying out of its provisions, a by-law to put it in force is unnecessary and bad. Hayes v. Thompson, 22 Occ. Closing Street - Ordinance Lands Dominion of Canada — Consent — Void By-law — Subsequent Consent — Amending Bylaw.] — The Consolidated Municipal Act, 3 Edw. VII. c. 19, s. 628, provides that, without the consent of the Government of the Dominion of Canada, no municipal council shall pass a by-law for the stopping up or altering the direction or alignment of any street made or laid out by the Dominion of Canada, and a by-law for any of the purposes aforesaid shall be void unless it recites such consent. On the 26th September, 1904, the municipal council of Toronto passed bylaw 4420, stopping up and closing a certain portion of Strachan avenue in that city. It was afterwards discovered that Strachan avenue was a street which had been laid out by the Dominion of Canada, being part of the Ordinance survey, and the consent of the Dominion Government was sought and given by an order in council of the 6th October, 1904. On the 10th October, 1904. the city council passed by-law 4428 amend-ing by-law 4420 by reciting the consent of the Dominion Government. A motion to quash the by-law was launched, and notice served on the 1st October, 1904, before the passing of the amending by-law:—Held, that when by-law 4420 was passed, the powers of the city council were spent, and, as it was a void by-law by reason of the consent of the Dominion Government not having been obtained, it could not be given life and rendered valid by the subsequent consent of the Dominion Government and the passing of the amending by-law, and must be declared invalid. Early Closing of Shops—Ultra Vires—Penalty — Imprisonment—Special Charter—Private Rights.]—It is ultra vires of a municipal corporation to pass a by-law ordering the early closing of shops, and imposing for an infraction thereof, a penalty with the alternative of imprisonment, under the sole authority of 57 V. c. 50, when there is no specific provision in its charter to pass such a by-law. 2. When a municipality is acting under a special charter the provisions of the Municipal Code do not apply. 3. A by-law containing a penal clause with alternative of imprisonment, must be directly and specifically authorized by the Legislature. 4. Semble, that a by-law ordering the closing of all shops at a certain hour is tyrannical terest of the public, and an unwarrantable and unjust interference with private rights. Town of Coaticook v. Explosives - Statute-Construction -Ejusdem Generis Rule-Constitutional Law -Petroleum Inspection Act.]-The defendant was convicted for a breach of a city by-law, which enacted that no larger quantity than three barrels of rock oil, coal oil, or other similar oils, nor any larger quantity than one barrel of crude oil burning fluid, naphtha, benzole, benzine, or "other combustible or dangerous materials," should be kept at any one time in a house or shop in the city, except under certain limitations. The by-law was passed under s.-s. 17 of s. 542 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. c. 223, such section being headed, "Storing and Transportation Municipal Act, R. S. O. c. 223, such section being headed, "Storing and Transportation of Gunpowder," and providing "for regulat-ing the keeping and storing of gunpowder and other combustible or dangerous mater-ials," and being one of a group of sections under division VI. of the Act, headed, "Pro-tection of Life and Property," sub-division 3 of the said division, which included s. 542, being under the heading "Prevention of Fires!"—Held, that s.-s. 17 authorized the passing of the by-law, and that the con-viction could be supported thereunder, for passing of the by-taw, and that the conviction could be supported thereunder, for that the words "other combustible or dangerous materials" were not limited by the ejusdem generis rule to gunpowder or other similar substances, out would include the substances set out in the by-law; and that such legislation was not superseded by Dominion legislation, for the Petroleum Inspection Act. 1899, 62 & 63 V, c. 27 (D.), dealing with the subject, was expressly made conformable thereto. Guarante ing Debentures of Company — App oval of Governor in Council— Hypothec — Levenucs — Debenture Holders.]—I. A by-law authorizing a municipal corporation to guarantee debentures issued by a company, is not valid until it has been approved by the Lieutenant-Governor in council, 2. A general hypothec given by a company on its present and future property is null; and where special authority is conferred on a company by its charter to give such hypothec in favour of its creditors, or of the holders of bonds, debentures, and other securities, such special authority does not enable the company to give a valid general hypothec on present and future property in favour of a municipal corporation which has become surety for the debentures of the company. 3. In any event, the guaranty of the corporation, under the by-law in this case, was only to pay over two-thirds of the revenues collected, and as no revenues had been collected the action could not be maintained. 4. The warranty being invalid, even innocent holders of the debentures issued have no action against the warrantor (the municipal corporation.) Village of Pointe Gatineau v. Hanson, Q. R. 10 K. B. 346.

CHOUSES — Construction of—Conviction— Certiforari,]—A municipal by-law may forbid the construction of houses of less than two storeys which are not cottages, and a conviction under such a by-law will not be quashed upon certiorari. St. Pierre v. City of St. Henri, 5 Q. P. R. 362.

Hlegality—Limit of Time for Attacking—Theeting of Council—Notice—Minutes —Time for By-law Going into Operation.]—The right to attack a municipal by-law for illegality is prescribed after 30 days, counting from its coming into force: art. 708 of the Municipal Code. 2. The absence of any mention in the minutes of the meeting of a municipal council at which a by-law had been attacked, that notice of the meeting has been sent to the absent counciliors, is without effect upon the validity of the by-law, if in fact that notice has been given. 3. By-laws, unless the contrary is expressed, come into force 15 days after their promulgation, and a notice given by the secretary-treasurer of a corporation that a by-law would come into force 30 days after the notice, has not the effect of retarding the coming into force of the by-law. Filiatrault v, Corporation of Coteau Landing, Q. R. 21 S. C. 302.

Hlegality — Rules of Construction.]—A by-law having for its object the closing of the Craigflower road read thus: "That portion of the Craigflower road re-opening by-law, 1900.' declared to be a public highway, is hereby stopped up and closed to public traffic." The word "by" was omitted in-advertently from between "road" and "by-law," and by the strict grammatical construction a former by-law dealing with the same road was declared closed instead of the road itself:—Held, that the words "by-law No. 327, being the Craigflower road re-opening by-law," in the enacting clause, should be regarded as a parenthetical expression and as descriptive of the portion of the road referred to, thus giving the by-law a sensible meaning and the one intended. The Court will not hold any legislation to be meaningless or absurd unless the language is absolutely intractable. Equimnit Waterworks Co. v. City of Victoria, 24 Occ. N. 105, 10 B. C. R. 193.

Local Option—Application to Quash—Alleged Irregularities—Submission to Electors.]—Application to quash a local option by-law of the rural municipality of Argyle, passed in 1889, under the Liquor License Act, 52 V. c, 15. Three objections were taken:

(1) that the by-law was not signed by the reeve; (2) that the by-law fixing the day. hour, and places for taking the vote was not signed by the reeve, or sealed with the cor-porate seal; and (3) that the notice of the by-law and of the purpose to take the vote thereon was not published during the period in which it was required to be published. By s. 428 of the Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 116, an application to quash a by-law cannot be entertained unless the application is made within one year from the passing of the by-law, "except in the case of a by-law requiring the assent of the electors or ratepayers, when the by-law has not been sub-mitted to, or has not received the assent of the electors, or ratepayers." A similar provision, differing only as to the period of limitation, was in force when the byslaw in question was enacted; see 49 V. c. 52, s. 328 :- Held, that the above provision meant a submission in fact, and an assent in fact, without reference to the validity of the formalities attending the submission. The alleged by-law was submitted to a vote of the electors and received their assent, and it had stood without objection for over thirteen years. The summary method of quashing a by-law was the creature of the statute, and must be taken with the limitations imposed by statute, In re Houghton and Rural Municipality of Argyle, 23 Occ. N. 237.

Local Option-Directions to Voters -Motion to Quash - Electors' Status to Oppose.]—A local option by-law named as one of the polling places a small unincorporated village, without specifying any house, hall, or place in the village. Polling had taken place at this village year after year at municipal elections, and any house or place in it could be easily found:—Held, following In re Huson and South Norwich, 19 A. R. 343. that the polling place was sufficiently defined. But held, also, that, as directions to voters had not been, as required by the Municipal Act, ss. 142 and 352, furnished to the deputy returning officers, and as there was not clear evidence of the posting up under the directions of the council of the by-law at four or more public places, the by-law must be quashed, these not being irregularities cured by s. 204, and the fact that no harm had. as far as shewn, resulted, being no answer. The municipal council having decided not to oppose the motion to quash the by-law, certain electors were allowed, at their individual risk as to costs, to oppose it in the council's name. Re Mace and Frontenac, 42 U. C. R. at p. 76, followed. In re Satter and Trousship of Beckwith, 22 Occ. N. 182, 1 0. W. R. 266, 4 O. L. R. 51.

Local Option—Seal and Signature—Order to Quash—Alteration in Boundaries of Municipality,! — 1. Section 336 of the Municipal Act, R, S, M, c, 100, is impersive, and an instrument not scaled with the seal of a municipal corporation or not signed by its head or the person presiding at the meeting at which the supposed by-law was passed, is no by-law of the corporation. 2. When such alleged by-law purports to be passed in accordance with the local option clauses of the Liquor License Act, R, S, M, c, 90, the applicant is entitled to a definite order quashing it, so that the council of the municipality may know whether to receive license fees or not. 3. At a regular meeting of the council when only four of five members vere present the by law was voted down by two voting each way. The applicants complain that the requirements of the Municipal Act were not complied with. They state 20 grounds. Those urged may be classed under 8 heads: — 1. That no newspaper was designated by the council, as the Act requires, wherein the by-law should be published. 2. Non-appointment of one person to attend the polling on behalf of those interested on each side. 3. Persons being allowed to rote who were not so entitled. 4. Absence of a compartment wherein a voter could mark his ballot screeped from observation. 5. Presence of other persons in the compartment with the voter. 6. Allowing other persons to be in a position to see how the voter marked his ballot. 7. Allowing persons to be in the polling place who were not entitled to be there. 8, Non-performance by the returning officer of various duties required of him at and after the close of the poll. Part of the complaint was proved, part was disproved:—Held, that the election had been conducted within the meaning of the s. 204 of the Act and did not affect the result of the election. Monopoly — Validating Statute—Constitutionality — License—Revocation.]—Under a by-law of the Hull city council, afterwards declared valid by the appellants' incorporating Act (Quebec, 58 V. c. 69), the appellants obtained an exclusive right of establishing a system of electric lighting for a certain term of years in the said city, and thereupon sued to revoke a license previously granted by the city to the respondents for a similar purpose: —Held, that the Quebec Act, passed in favour of a purely local undertaking, was within the exclusive competence of the Provincial Legislature, and none the less so because it excluded for a limited time the competition of rival traders:—Held, also, that by the true construction of the by-haw the city did not themselves revoke the license to the respondents under which they were actually supplying electric light to the municipality nor give to the appellants the right to have it revoked, and that the respondents were free to carry on their operations until revocation was effected. M.), has a remedy by injunction against any person who, in violation of the by-law, builds a mill to be operated by steam within the limits of the municipality. 2. The owner of such building has a sufficient interest to be allowed to intervene in the proceedings for injunction. Village of Ste. Agathe Des Monts v. Reid, Q. R. 24 S. C. 461.

That, as an offence was disclosed in the information, and it would have been unobjectionable had the reference to a by-law been omitted, as a by-law had been proved at the hearing, as the defendant had not been deceived or misled, and no adjournment had been refused, the variance was not fatal. C. R. S1, distinguished. 4. That some reasonable meaning must be attributed to the clause of the by-law prohibiting the driver of a waggon from leaving it unattended on the stand; that the nature or disposition of the horse had nothing to do with the interpretation of the regulation, the object of which was to compel the driver to remain in close proximity to his horse and vehicle; and the de-fendant had not complied with it when he took up a position 120 or 130 feet away. Repair of Buildings—Fire Limits— Ultra Vires—Validation by Legislation.]— Under s.-ss. (a) and (b) of s. 607 of the Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1892 c. 100, as amended prior to the 8th May, 1899, a municipal council has no power to pass a by-law requiring the submission of plans and specifications of proposed repairs to a building inspector and the obtaining of his certificate before the commencement of repairs of any building; and the conviction of the defendant for breach of such by-law was quashed. And a council has no power to enact that, if And a council has no power to enact that, it the proposed repairs to a building should cost 40 per cent, of its actual value, they should be considered a re-erection thereof, subject to the terms of the by-law; and where the owner had made repairs to a frame building within the first-class fire limits, which had been damaged by fire, a rule nisi to prohibit a magistrate from proceeding with a prosecution as for alleged unlawful re-erection of the building, in breach of the by-law, was made absolute. The amendment by the city council of other provisions of the same by-law, under powers conferred by legissame by-law, under powers conferred by legis-lative amendments of the section of the Municipal Act referred to, made after the passing of the by-law, had not the effect of re-enacting the provisions objected to. The effect of s. 6 of the Winniper Charter, 1 & 2 Edw. VII. c. 77, which provides that the by-laws, &c., of the city, "when this Act takes effect, shall be deemed . . . the by-laws . . of the city of Winnipeg, as continued under or altered by this Act, was mersit to received that the then existing as continued under or altered by this Act. was merely to provide that the then existing by-laws should stand as they stood before the passing of the Act, with only such force, effect, or validity as they previously had, and not to declare that all such by-laws were legal and valid. Rev. Nunn, Re Rogers and Nunn, 15 Man. L. R. 288, 1 W. L. R. 559.

Submission to Electors—Adoption by Council—Motion by Ratepayer to Invalidate —Vote of Councillor—Bribe.]—A ratepayer who is interested in the granting of licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors in the municipality, may apply to have it declared that a by-law which the electors of the municipality have approved by their votes, and which has been transmitted to the collector of revenue for the district in order to prohibit the granting of licenses, was not adopted by the council of the municipality and is inexistent. 2. A municipal council has no right to declare that one of its members is incompetent to vote upon questions relating to the granting of licenses for the sale of spirituous liquors, on the ground that he has been bribed by a person soliciting such a license. Guag v. Village of Malbaie, Q. R. 25 S. C. 203.

Submission to Electors—Approvel—Mapping a special statute provides that a by-law shall not come into force until after it has been approved by a majority of the municipal electors having the right to vote at the election of a municipal control to the terms to be an absolute majority of the electors. Mercier v. Corporation of Warsiok, 6 Q. P. R. 78.

Supply of Electric Light by Village to County House of Refuge—Necessity for submission to electrs— Extraordinary expenditure. County of Grey v. Village of Markdale, 6 O. W. R. 978.

Telephone Company—Regulation of I)—The council of the plaintiff municipality were authorized by 59 V. (Q.) c. 56, s. 18, cl. 10, to order by by-law the painting of all poles then or subsequently erected within the towa; and the by-law complained of in this case was not ultra vires. Town of Coaticook v. People's Telephone Co., 21 Occ. N. 351, Q. R. 19 S. C. 535.

Trimming of Trees in Streets—Resolution—Necessity for By-law.]—Motion to quash resolution of the council of the town of Napanee that "the street committee have instructions to see that the street trees, where necessary, be properly trimmed:"—Held, that under s. 574, s.-s. 4, of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, municipal corporations have power to deal with the trimming of all trees the branches of which extend over the streets of the municipality, but that it is a matter which should be dealt with not by resolution, but by by-law, as indicated by s. 575 of the Municipal Act. In re Allen and Town of Napanee, 22 Occ. N. 412, 1 O. W. R. 633, 4 O. L. R. 582.

Violation—Toleration by Corporation— Liability for Damages.]—A city corporation has no right, in the administration of its by-laws, to act with partiality, and where it tolerates the violation of an existing bylaw, it is responsible for the damages thereby caused. Brunet v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 23 S. C. 262.

License—Chief Constable—Discretion —Mandamus.]—The chief of police of the city of Montreal has a discretion to exercise in the granting of permits or licenses to cabmen, and the Court will not by mandamus interfere with the exercise of this discretion, unless the chief of police has acted in bad faith and with evident injustice. 2. The fact that the chief of police has granted a permit to a cabman, after the latter has committed reprehensible acts, is not a ground for granting a permit to him for the following year, if the chief of police is satisfied that he should not have granted the first one. Carriere v. Legault, Q. R. 23 S. C. 440.

License—Mandamus.]—A cabman who algress that his license has been taken away from him illegally, cannot obtain a mandamus against the municipal corporation by which the license was granted, to compel the return of it. Laberge v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 22 S. C. 473.

Regulation of Cabmen—Establishment of Stand—Committee of Council—Resolution—Action.]—The council of the city of Montreal has no power to delegate to a committee the authority, vested in it by the charter of the city, to prescribe standing places or stations for cabs. 2. The resolution of a committee of the council cannot be considered a by-law so as to bring it within the provisions of s. 304 of the charter of the city, 62 V. c. 58 (Q-), concerning the annulment of by-laws, on petition of any ratepayer, on the ground of illegality. 3. A licensed cabman has, as such, no special or individual interest sufficient to justify an action for the annulment of a resolution of a committee of the city council establishing a cabstand. Judgment in Q. R. 23 S. C. 256 reversed. Samson v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 23 S. C. 500.

Vehicles Waiting for Hire-Standing Streets-Engagement by Hotel Company -Nominal Consideration-Agreement-Validity-Conviction.]-An hotel company engaged three vehicles from a livery man to keep standing at their doors constantly ready for immediate use by guests of the hotel, the hotel company paying one cent per hour from time of attendance until dismissed or engaged for use by a guest; the hotel becoming responsible for the payment by the guests of the fees charged for such service :-Held, the liveryman did not commit a breach of a municipal by-law which provided that no cab should stand upon any street while waiting for hire or engagement, by keeping these vehicles waiting on the street for the use of the guests under the above agreement. Rex v. Maher, 6 O. W. R. 247, 10 O. L. R. 102.

VII. CONTRACTS.

Agent—Designation of Principal—Change of Principal—By-law—Approval of ratepay-vrs—Bonus—Mandamus—Specific Perform-ance,1—Where a principal has been named by the agent charged with the negotiation.

the latter cannot afterwards designate a different person as his principal, and more particularly where the negotiation would not have been entered into if the principal secondly designated had been disclosed at the outset. 2. Where a contract with a municipal corporation required the sanction of a by-law approved by the ratepayers, and a by-law subapproved by the ratepayers, and a synthesis stantially embodying the terms of the contract, with the name of the principal first designated, was rejected by the ratepayers. the corporation were held not subject to any further l'ability. 3. The contract in question, although disguised as a sale with a consideration of one dollar, really amounted to a bonus, and in manner and form, as made was ultra vires of the corporation. question whether there was a right to a mandamus to enforce specific performance of a contract, under the circumstances, was not decided. 1 Real Estate Investment Co. v. Town of Richmond, Q. R. 23 S. C. 151.

Breach—Damages—Construction of Sciencers—Interference by Reason of Other City Sciencers.—The plaintiff entered into a contract with the corporation of the city of Ottawa to construct certain sewers. In the course of his work the contents of certain city sewers, which existed in the streets in which the plaintiff was required to build the sewers he had contracted to construct, the existence of which was not known to and was not disclosed to him, flowed into the trenches dug by him and impeded and delayed him in the work and caused him additional expense in doing it:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover damages from the defendants, for the defendants owed him a duty to do nothing to prevent or interfere with his doing the work he had contracted to do, and in discharging through the sewers under their control upon his work the sewage and other matter which they carried, they committed a breach of duty for which they committed a breach of duty for which they were answerable to him in damages. Bourque v. City of Ottavea, 23 Occ. N. 263, 6

By-law—Variation—Necessity for By-law —Mode of Payment for Work.]—A city made a contract for supply of dynamos and station systems for a plant to furnish electric lighting for their streets. The contract was executed by a by-law under the corporate seal of the city, subject to the approval of the work subject only to re-armaturing, if it should be necessary, during the next five years. It was arranged that a part of the purchase money should be retained as a guarantee for the same:—Held, a contract, being manifested in and adopted by by-law, can be changed in some important details without the means of another by-law, such as changing the mode of payment. Thompson v.
City of Chatham, 5 O. W. R. 156, 9 O. L. R.
343.

Certificate of Engineer—Delay in Issuing—Loss to Contractor,]—Where, under a contract with a municipal corporation which made the right of the contractors to receive payment for the construction of certain works dependent upon the certificate of an engineer who was also sole arbitrator of all disputes, the engineer unjustifiably delayed the issue of the certificate for seven months and acted in a shifting and vacillating, though not fraudulent, manner, and probably caused heavy loss to the contractors by his mistakes: —Held, that in the absence of collusion on the part of the corporation, the certificate could not be set aside. Impropriety of certain acts of the corporation remarked upon. Walkley v. City of Victoria, 7 B. C. R. 481.

Electric Lighting—Use of Streets— Poles and Wires—Rights of Rival Compan-ies—Injunction.]—The plaintiffs and defend-ants were respectively companies incorporated to produce and supply electricity heat, light, and power, and each had authority from the corporation of the city of Ottawa to erect and maintain poles and wires along the sides of, across, and under the streets of the city for certain periods. The plaintiffs had obtained their rights before the defendants, and had erected their poles and wires before the defendants were incorporated. The agreement between the city cor-poration and the defendants provided that the latter should not, without the express permission of the corporation, erect additional poles on certain streets:—Held, that, as the plaintiffs and defendants were both electric light companies, and therefore on an equal footing in regard to the business they were respectively chartered to carry on, fact that the plaintiffs were in prior occupation of the streets gave them no exclusive right or privilege to use such streets or the particular sides of such streets occu-pied by their poles and wires. But, being first in occupation and using the streets under an authority conferred by the municipality. they were entitled to protection against a company subsequently using the street under a like authority in such a manner as would likely to injure the property of the plaintiffs or endanger their workmen or servants. Semble, that the plaintiffs could not by exsending cross-arms on their poles occupy space not required for the present or imme-diate f dure service:—Held, that danger apprehended by the plaintiffs from the use by the defendants of their wires in the condiin which they were strung or threatened to be strung, was ground for moving for an interim injunction. Ottawa Electric Co. v. Consumers' Electric Co., 22 Occ., N. 140, 1 O. W. R. 154, 2 O. W. R. 767.

Erection of Public Library-Resolution Rescinding Contract-Statutory Authority-Attorney-General - Relator-Consideration.]-The Attorney-General, on the relation of M., a ratepayer of the city of Halifax, applied for an injunction to restrain the defendants, the city council of Halifax, from carrying into effect a resolution seeking to rescind a previous resolution accepting an offer made by C. to furnish a sum of money for the purpose of erecting a free public library building in the city, on condition that the city would provide a specified sum of money for its maintenance, and would provide a free site for the building. An interlocutory injunction was granted (23 Occ. N. 24), from which the defendant appealed:

-Held, per Townshend, J., that the city council, in passing the rescinding resolution, was acting within the scope of its corporate powers, and that, assuming there was a breach of contract, no one except the other party to the contract could legally complain of its action, or adopt remedies for the enforcement of the contract; that no public right or interest was endangered to justify the in-tervention of the Attorney-General. Per

Meagher, J., concurring (without discussing the position of the relator or of the Attor-ney-General), that the question was one that was imminently proper for the consideration and action of the city council. Per Graham, E.J., (McDonald, C.J., concurring), affirming the judgment appealed from that the corporation, having accepted the offer, were bound by its terms, and that the passing of the rescinding resolution was a breach of contract which the Court had power to restrain, the council being agents or trustees of the citizens in securing the gift; that the council could not without like authority rescind a contract entered into by statutory authority; that the Attorney-General could sue either with or without a relator; that the words "will guarantee to support," were responsive to the words "pledge itself by resolution to support;" that the detriment to the city incurred at the request of C. promise to support, and the rates being bound, was consideration to support the promise on the part of C.; that where a promise to support the "library" was asked, and the resolution was to support the "lib-rary building," the word "building" should should be rejected as falsa demonstratio, Attorney-General ex rel, Mackintosh v. City of Hali-fax, 36 N. S. Reps. 177.

Execution by Mayor—Authorization by Council—Want of Consensus at Idem.]—A nuncipal corporation can be bound only by the nets of those who have the right to represent it, and, if, in a case in which it can only be represented by its council, the mayor should execute an instrument other than that which the council has authorized him to sign such instrument is void as against the corporation. 2. If by reason of a misunderstanding one of the parties to a contract supposes that he is to undertake a certain work, while the other party wishes him to execute another work, there is no contract between them. (Reversed by the Kimis Bench.) Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 21 S. C. 225.

Sale of Land Acquired in Satisfac-tion of Arrears of Taxes—Specific Per-formance—Resolution of Council—Redemp-tion—Damages.]—At a tax sale in Novem-ber, 1899, as the price offered for a lot owned by one B. was less than the arrears of taxes, it was bid in by the corporation. In September, 1902, the plaintiff wrote the corporation asking if they would accept "the taxes and costs" for the property, and the next day the council passed a resolution reciting the plaintiff's offer and resolving to accept for the property the amount of "taxes, costs, and interest," amounting to $88, and the reeve and clerk were authorized to issue a deed for that price, and a deed in the statutory form of conveyance by the officers upon a sale for taxes was prepared and signed and the corporate seal attached, but was not de the corporate seal attached, but was not de-livered to the plaintiff, who then demanded the deed and tendered his cheque for $88. Subsequently the clerk received from the agent of B. $88, and returned the plaintiff his cheque, informing him that B. had re-deemed his property. The plaintiff sued for specific performance:—Held, per Hunter, C.J., at the trial, that no cause of action existed against the corporation, and that the section law if at all only against the receaction lay, if at all, only against the reeve and clerk as personæ designatæ:—Held, on appeal, reversing that decision, (Irving, J., dissenting), that a contract had been made out, and that the plaintiff had a good cause of action against the corporation, but that, as the land had been redeemed by the original owner, specific performance could not be granted, and it was therefore referred to the registrar to assess the damages. Per Irving, J.:—The resolution of September did not satisfy the requirements of s. 26 of the Municipal Clauses Act, which requires all contracts to be made under seal; a resolution to sell must be followed up by a contract under the corporate seal, placed there by order of the council. VIII. COUNCILLORS AND OFFICERS, Councillor - Disqualification-Contract with Corporation - Vacating Seat - Elections.]-A municipal councillor who, in a case of urgency, has supplied to employés of the corporation timber and joists and money for the purpose of repairing municipal bridges, under the direction and control and at the sole charge of the corporation, who makes and files his claim, amounting to $19.38, with the council, who approve of it and order it to be paid at a session presided over by such councillor as mayor, and who receives payment, but does not make any profit, and between whom and the council there was no prevenient contract, does not thereby vacate his office. 2. In any event, supposing that art. 205, C. M., would be applicable, the only result would be a simple incapacity to act as councillor; such incapacity would not have any retroactive effect upon the elec-tion of the defendant; it would cease with the facts which gave rise to it, and would come to an end with the payment of the ac-count, before the issue of the writ of quo warranto and before any notice could be given pursuant to the terms of art. 207, or any resolution adopted by virtue of art. 208; and the result would be, therefore, that there was never any vacancy in the office, according to art. 337; and that such councillor does not come within the provisions of art. 205, C. M., and art. 987, C. P. C. Houle v. Brodeur, Q. R. 18 S. C. 440.

Disqualification-Contract.]-The contracts which, according to art. 4215, R S. Q., render the contractor incapable of sitting in the council of a town, are those which establish permanent relations between the contractor and the town corporation. 2 The fact that a man has sold to a town corporation a quarry and plant does not render him incapable of being a member of the council of such town. Leonard v. Martel, 4 Q. P. R. 320.

Disqualification — Contract — Profes-sional Services—Resolution—Creditor—Elec-tion of Conneillor—Agent—Corrupt Practice —Personation.]—Art. 4215, R. S. Q., ren-ders ineligible for municipal officers only those who receive from the municipality remuneration for services which they render to it by virtue of a contract, express or implied, effecting between them and it a connection for a certain period, and not professional men who, without being bound in advance by any contract, render professional services to the municipality for which they receive only the remuneration fixed by the tariff of their profession. 2. A resolution of a municipal council to the effect that a certain person shall be for the future the advocate or the notary of the corporation, even if it is communicated to the person whom it concerns, and acted under for several years, is only an instruction to the officers of the corporation to address themselves to such person when they need the professional services which he can render, and does not constitute a con-tract which renders him incapable of being elected a member of the council. 3. The fact that a person is a creditor of a corpor-ation does not render him ineligible to be elected a member of the council. 4. An agent of a candidate for a municipal office in whose presence an act of personation is committed without his endeavouring to hinder it is not guilty of a corrupt practice, and the election of a candidate cannot be affected. Chaussé v. Olivier, Q. R. 21 S. C. 387.

Disqualification-Contract for Performance of Work—Solicitor Employed by Officer of Town.]—Under the provisions of the Towns Incorporation Act, R. S. N. S. c. 71, ss, 54 and 56, no person is qualified to be elected, or to hold office as mayor or councillor who, "directly or indirectly, by himself or with any other person, as a partner or otherwise, enters into, or is directly or indirectly interested in any contract, express or implied, for the supply of any goods, or materials, or for the performance of any work or labour to or for the town." Among the officials appointed by the town of W. was an inspector for the purpose of enforcing and carrying out the provisions of the Canada Temperance Act. The inspector received as salary one-half the net proceeds of fines imposed, after paying expenses, and was anthorized by resolution of the town council to engage his own solicitor, whose fees were not to exceed a fixed amount in each case. The defendant, who was elected mayor of the town, had been previously engaged by the inspector for the purpose of prosecuting cases under the Act, and at the time of his election there was due him a small sum for services rendered as such prosecutor, which was passed by the council, and paid after the election:—Held, that the defendant was a person directly or indirectly interested in a contract for the performance of work for the town, within the meaning of the Act, and was therefore disqualified from holding office. Rew ex rel. McDonald V. Robertson, 35 N. S. Reps. 348.

Disqualification—Diversion of Sinking Fund, 1—The provisions of s. 418 of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 3 Edw. VII, c. 19, do not apply to debentures payable in annual instalments, there being in such a case no "sinking fund" to be provided. Regina ex rel. Cavanagh v. Smith, 26 O. R. 632, distinguished. Rew vx rel. Seymour v. Plant, 24 Occ. N. 235, 7 O. L. R. 467, 3 O. W. R. 50c.

Disqualification—Insurance Agent—Interest in Contract,]—A municipal councillor who represents an insurance company, and is paid by a commission on the premiums, is not disqualified from holding office by the fact that the company he represents insures through him property belonging to the corporation. Art. 4215. R. S. Q., which says that whoseover has, directly or indirectly, by himself or his partner, any contract or "interest in any contract with the corporation," cannot be appointed a member of the council or act as such, does not cover the case of an agent paid by commissions on premiums paid under a contract between the insurance company and the corporation. Pinder v. Evane, Q. R. 23 S. C. 229.

Disqualification—Interest in "Contract"—Judgment,1—The object of the legislature in passing s. 80 of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1903, 3 Edw. VII. c. 19 (O.), was to prevent any one being elected to a municipal council whose personal interests might clash with those of the municipality; and the word "contract" used therein must be construed in its, widest sense; and a member of a municipal council against whom the corporation held an unsatisfied judgment for costs was unseated as being disqualified under that section. Res are InfoMamara v. Heffernan, 24 Occ. N. 233, 7 O. L. R. 289, 3 O. W. R. 431.

Disqualification—Interest in Contract—
Solition for Prosecutor Appointed by Tosen.]
—The Towns' Incorporation Act, R. S. N.
S. c. 71, s. 54, disqualifies for the office of mayor "any person who directly or indirectly, by himself or by or with any other person as copariner or otherwise, enters into or is directly or indirectly interested in any contract, express or implied, for the supply of any goods or materials or for the performance of any work or labour to or for the town." R. S. N. S. C. 100, s. 181, enacts that the town shall annually appoint an inspector to enforce and carry out the provisions of the Canada Temperance Act, and authorizes the town to pay out of its funds the expenses of enforcing the Act. On the 19th December, 1900, W. was appointed prosecutor under the Canada Temperance Act, and his salary was by resolution fixed at one-half the net proceeds of the times, after deducting expenses. It was also resolved that the prosecutor should enagehis own solicitor, whose fees were not to exceed $5 for any one case. The defendant, a solicitor, acted for W. in four cases before his election as mayor, and his fees were paid on the 6th March, 1901. On the 8th February, 1901, the defendant was elected mayor, and thereafter he acted gratuitously for W. in a number of cases:—Held, that the direct relation of agency was constituted between the town and the defendant, and that the defendant could recover directly from the town his fees: Thison v. Warwick Gas Light Co., 4 B. & C. 962. Held, also, that the defendant had a direct interest in the contract with W. Rev v. Robertson, 22 Occ. N. 240.

Disqualification - Proceeding against Municipality.]—At a municipal election the respondent C. was elected mayor, and the other respondents were elected councillors. of a town, and subsequently took the declarations of office, and sat as members of the muni-cipal council. The relator complained that at the time of such election, each one of the at the time of such election, each one or me respondents had "a claim, action, or pro-ceeding" against the municipality. The re-spondents were members of "The Good Citi-zens' League" of the town, and they subscribed money to pay the expenses of a summary proceeding taken at the instance of the league to quash a by-law of the town. The respondents were not the applicants in the application to quash the by-law :- Held, that the proceeding to quash the by-law was a proceeding against the municipality, within the meaning of s. 80 (1) of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. c. 223; and, upon the evidenceand findings of the County Court Judge, that it was a proceeding taken by the respondents "through another." Something more than membership in the organization was necessary to render the members answerable for expenditures or acts done in the name of the association; but their assent to and participation in the proceedings were shewn by the evidence. Rex ex rel. Davis v. Campbell, 22 Occ. N. 118.

Disqualification — Vote on By-law—Pocuniary Interest — Liquor License,—A member of a municipal council is disqualified from voting in the council upon any subject in which he has a personal or pecuniary interest, distinct from that which he has as a ratepayer in common with other ratepayers. A by-law to reduce the number of liquor licenses in a municipality was quashed because carried by the casting vote of the reeve, who was mortgage of one of the properties likely to be affected by it. ture for 1903 in excess of the amount authorized by s. 435 of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1903, and having had proceedings taken against them by a relator to unseat them, disclaimed, and a new election was held, at which the mayor and four of the old councillors, together with another, were elected by acclamation. The same relator then took further proceedings against the mayor and four old councillors, on the same to have them unseated again :- Held, in answer to the contention that sums expended for school purposes and debentures and other special charges were not "current expendi-ture," that the by-laws recited that the loans were to meet "current expenditure;" and that there was no power to borrow for any other purpose without a vote of the duly qualified ratepayers; that the sums borrowed were in the estimates and were part of the current expenditure for 1903; and similar charges were in the regular levy for 1902 and formed part of the sum on which the 80 per cent. was calculated :-Held, also, that a sum of $5,000 borrowed under a by-law passed in January, 1903, by the outgoing council 1902, should be taken into account :- Held, also, that the personal motives of the relator had no bearing on the motion or any part of it; and affidavits and counter-affidavits as to his motives were not read; and the mayor and four councillors were unseated and ordered to pay the costs. Rex ex rel, Moore v. Hamill, 24 Occ. N. 271, 7 O. L. R. 600, 3 O. W. R. 642.

Election Officer.—Nepligence—Depriving Elector of Vote—Liability.]—An action will lie where one is deprived of his right to vote at a municipal election by the negligence of another. A municipal corporation is answerable for the negligent performance of his duties by one of its officers, who is appointed and removable by it, even where the duties, the negligent performance of which gave rise to the action, were imposed by the legislature and not by the corporation; Hanington. J., dissenting. Crawford v. City of St. John, 34 N. B. Reps. 560.

Hlegal Payments to—Recovery Back.]

—A municipal corporation were held entitled to recover from councillors moneys illegally paid to them for services on a resolution of the council. Toton of Amherst v. Read, Town of Amherst v. Read, Town of Amherst v. Fillmore, 23 Occ. N. 139.

Interest in Matter before Council-Shareholders in Company-Bonus-By-lawinvalidity.]—Article 4301, R. S. Q., declares that councillors who have a personal interest in a question before the council are incompetent to take part in the deliberations of the council upon that question. No matter how small that interest may be, and whether an individual or collective interest, such as the interest which a councillor may have in a joint stock company of which he is a shareholder, if it exists, it is direct, immediate, and therefore sufficient according to the terms of the article, which does not make the distinction found in art. 4215, which relates only to candidates for municipal offices, 2. Therefore a councillor who is a shareholder in a company, cannot take part in a vote of the conneil granting a bonus to this company: and, if the majority is composed of councillors so interested, the by-law passed by their aid for such purpose will be quashed. Town of Victoriaville v. Dubuc, Q. R. 13 K. B. 109.

Mayor — Disqualification — Employment as Solicitor—Quo Warranto.]—The defendant was, before his election as mayor of a town, solicitor for the prosecutor appointed the town to enforce the provisions of the Canada Temperance Act, the prosecutor receiving as salary from the town one-half of the fines collected, after deducting the expenses. His right to the office was attacked on the ground that he was disqualified un-der R. S. N. S. c. 71, s. 54 (c). The affi-dayits were in conflict as to whether the defendant had received any payment out of the funds of the town after his election as mayor, but it was conceded that he had acted for the prosecutor, having been retained by him :-Held, that on a motion for an information in the nature of quo warranto, the Court could not determine the disputed questions of fact, and leave to exhibit the information should be granted, as there appeared to be something to be investigated. The Court had some doubt as to whether the seat ought not first to be declared vacant by the council. Rex v. Robertson, 21 Occ. N

Money Payment to—By-law—Violation of Procedure By-law—Discrition,1—The Court, in the exercise of its discretion, refused, under the circumstances of the case (Street, J., dissenting), to restrain a municipal corporation from acting upon a by-law for the payment of money to the mayor as remuneration for services, the money not being provided for on the face of the estimates, and the by-law being passed by the council in the face of the protest of the minority and in contravention of the procedure by-law of the council, by being taken up by the council before being submitted to a committee of the whole. Heffernan v. Tourn of Walkerton, 23 Occ. N. 222, 6 O. L. R. 79, 2 O. W. R. 17, 434.

Payment for Services—Recovery Back.]
—A municipal council which has knowingly and voluntarily paid a councillor the value of his services as inspector of roads has no right to recover back from him the sum paid. Corporation of New Rockland v. Torrance, Q. R. 21 S. C. 165.

Presence at Meetings-Mandamus-Penalty-Nonfeasance-Discretion of Court.] -A municipal councillor is a person occupying an office in a corporation, within the meaning of art. 992, C. P. 2. One of the duties attached to such office is that of being present at the sittings of the council. A councillor who while he retains his office, conspires with others not to be present at the sittings of the council in order to prevent a quorum being present, and thereby to prevent the council from exercising rights or powers or functions which it is obliged to exercise within a certain time, is held to be a person occupying an office in a corporation who omits and neglects to perform a duty attached to such office, and, according to the terms of art, 992, he may be ordered by mandamus to be present at the sittings of the council. 4. The fact that a penalty is given for the non-fulfilment of such duty does not prevent the issue of the mandamus. Semble, that a municipal councillor is one of the persons aimed at by Art. 50, C. P., subject to the rights of surveillance and direction under the orders and control of the Superior Court and its Judges. Semble, that, without a by-law therefor passed by the council, there is no penalty upon a councilior who is not present at the sittings of the council. Semble, that there is nonfeasance of office on the part of a councillor who conspires for the purpose aforesaid. Semble, that the writ of mandamus is a matter largely in the discretion of the court or Judge. Legacé v. Olivier, Q. R. 21 S. C. 285.

Pro-mayor of Village—County Council.] — A pro-mayor of a local municipal council has no right to sit in the county council. Paré v. County of Shefford, Q. R. 24 S. C. 50.

Recorder-Removal of-Grounds for-Powers of Council—Statutes—Appointment—Seal.] — The relator, who held the office of recorder of the town of T. during good behaviour, was removed from his office by the town council, and the defendant was appointed in his place and stead. An information in the nature of a quo warranto was filed tion in the nature of a quo warranto was filed to determine the right to the office. The grounds of dismissal were: 1st, non-attendance at meetings of the council; 2nd, refusal to prepare an Act for submission to the legislature unless paid therefor; and, 3rd, procuring alterations of this Act, after it had been prepared by another solicitor, whereby certain changes were made in the salary attached to the office of recorder and in the tenure of office, By the Act of in-corporation numerous powers were given to the town council, but no power was given specifically in relation to the amotion of officers, and all the powers of the corporation generally were not vested in the council. The town council was given power to make by-laws, but only in relation to sub-jects specifically mentioned, and not including the amotion of officers :-Held, that, under all the circumstances, it could not be inferred that the power of amotion was given to the council by the charter and Acts of incorporation, but the same remained in the corporation at large as one of its incidents and could be exercised only by the corporation itself and not by any separate portion of it such as the town council:-Held, that, as the town council had no power to amove the relator from the office of recorder, the office was not vacant at the time of the ap-pointment of defendant:—Held, that the appointment of the relator was not bad for not having been made under seal, such a method of appointment being unnecessary :- Held. that, if an appointment under seal were necessary, the objection was removed by Acts of 1889 c. 4, s. 30, by which appointments made by the councils under the Act of 1888 were declared to be valid and effectual. Semble, that if the town council had the semble, that it the town council has the power of amotion it was properly exercised and for good cause. McDonald, C.J., dissented. Regina ex rel. Lawrence v. IX. COUNTY COUNCILS - POWERS OF.

Alteration of Boundaries of Local Municipalities — Misdescription—Petition —Notice—Waiver — Arbitration and Award —Motion to Quash By-law—Application by

Minor Municipality.] - Under s. 18 of the Municipal Act, 3 Edw. VII. c. 19, when an application is made to a county council to detach a portion of one municipality and annex it to another, the county council is not confined in its powers to the boundaries of the lands mentioned in the application, but may detach any lands it may deem proper from the one municipality and attach them to the other, subject, in case of the dissent of the municipality the area of which is reduced, to the award in the 2nd sub-section mentioned. It would, therefore, be no objection to a by-law of a county council detaching two parcels of land from one municipality and adding them to another, that the pet-tion for the by-law described only one of the parcels and asked to have that parcel de-tached, for the council, being once set in motion, may, in the exercise of its discretion, detach all, or less, or more, than the territory described. The municipalities affected how ever, have a right to require that there shall be a real exercise of discretion before the power is acted upon, it being judicial in its nature. The by-law of the county council was bad when passed because it altered the limits of the village of Southampton without intending to alter them to the extent actually affected, and without considering the actuary infected, and which them; and the objection was not waived by the act of the Southampton council in passing a by-law appointing their arbitrator, because they were pointing their arbitrator, occasion the misled by the untrue recitals in the county council's by-law that the petitioners covered the whole of the lands detached. They should not be held to have waived an objection going to the root of the by-law, of which they were not aware; in the face of the recital. they were not obliged to verify it before acting as they did. Notice of the application should have been given to the Southampton council before the county council acted upon the petitions. It seems to be the intention of s. 18 of the Municipal Act of 1903 that the by-law of the county council should provide for the reference of boundaries to the arbitrators only where the municipality from which territory is detached opposes it, and notice to that municipality is necessary for the purpose of ascertaining whether it opposes or agrees to the proposed alteration of its boundaries. That objection, however, was apparent on the face of the county by-law in the present case, and was, therefore, waived by the appointment of an arbitrator. It was objected that this was not a case in which one municipality could apply to quash the by-law of another, but it is manifestly within s. 378a of the Municipal Act. Appeal allowed and by-law quashed with costs. Order of MacMahon, J., 24 Occ. N. 353, 30, W. R. 729, 8 O. L. R. 106, reversed. In re Village of Southampton and County of Bruce, 40. W. R. 341, 25 Occ. N. 12, 8 O. L. R. 664.

Appeal from Decision of Local Council.] — A county council, sitting in appeal from the decisions of local councils, has neither the privileges nor the powers which municipal corporations; it only fulfils quasi-judicial functions, by virtue of the powers which the legislature has delegated to it, to adjudicate upon appeals from the decisions of local corporations; and for such purpose a county council is a tribunal which in no way warrants the validity of its decisions; and for its decisions or judgments the county council is a council c

Appeal from Decision of Local Council — Jurisdiction — Irregularity — Contra-dictory Decision.]—A local council had adopted a proces-verbal ordering the opening of open a procesverous ordering the opening of a road. In his report to the council the superintendent had stated the date of ap-pointment as the 13th instead of the 12th June. An appeal was taken to the county council to quash this proces-verbal on the merits. The petition in appeal gave the true date of the appointment of the superintend-ery and did not invice the depression. and did not invoke the clerical error. Before the county council the appellants demanded a declaration of want of jurisdiction by reason of the error in the report and proces-verbal, and the council decided that it had no jurisdiction, and at the same time quashed the proces-verbal:—Held, that this contradictory decision was illegal; that the informality in the date was of no conse quence, and, besides, had not been invoked before the local council, nor by the petition in appeal; that the county council could not, by relying upon such an informality, refuse to take cognizance of the merits of the procesverbal and at the same time quash it, so long as it was regular on its face; and the decision of the county council was a denial of justice to the respondents. Ricard v. Lemyre, Q. R. 19 S. C. 172.

Appeal from Decision of Local Council - Way - Maintenance and Opening-Powers of Special Superintendent-Municipal By-law-Petition-Discretion of Council -Powers of Superior Court-Quashing.] 1. By virtue of art, 794. C. M., if the special superintendent is of opinion that a petition for certain works should be refused, he should report accordingly; but if, on the contrary, he is of opinion that this petition is well founded in demanding certain works, it would be proper to make a proces-verbal to that effect. 2. It is not necessary that the works demanded should be mentioned in the prayer of the petition; it is sufficient, to give the county council authority to act, that they should be mentioned in the body of the petition as things suggested to the council upon which the council should exercise its discretion. 3. The Superior Court, by virtue of powers, which are conferred upon it by art. 2329, R. S. Q., may take cognizance of the proceedings of municipal councils, whatever they may be, and quash them; and it may exercise these same powers in the case of a decision of a county council sitting in appeal, in spite of art. 1061, C. M., which denies the right of art. 1001, C. M., which defies the right of appeal in such a case. Judgment in Q. R. 17 S. C. 131 corrected. Pické v. County of Portneuf, Q. R. 17 S. C. 589.

X. DEBENTURES.

Bonus — Special Rate — Railway.]—By a by-law passed under the provisions of ss. 386, 694, and 696 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1807 c. 223, a township corporation was authorized to raise a sum by issuing debentures, to be met by special rate, to provide a bonus in aid of a railway company, payable upon its compliance with certain corditions, no time for compliance being limited. The debentures were duly executed, but remained unissued in the possession and under the control of the municipality:—Held, that until the sale or negotiation of the debentures there was no debt on the part of the township, and that the special rate was not leviable, though the time fixed for payment of some of the debentures had passed. Judgment below, 32 O. R. 135, 2 Occ. N. 384, reversed. Bogart v. Township of King, 21 Occ. N. 229, 1 O. L. R. 496.

Borrowing Powers-Condition Imposed by Statute — Purchiser — "Provided."]— Under the N. S. Acts of 1898, c. 65, s. 13, the city of Halifax was authorized to borrow certain sums of money, including "the sum of $6,500 for the extension north of the Esplanade, provided the owners of the property north of the contemplated extension give and convey to the city the necessary land required for such extension." The work was required for the abatement of a nuisance of which the property owners in the vicinity had been complaining for some time, and, it being understood that the property owners would convey to the city the land required for the purpose, the city treasurer recom-mended to the council that all sums required during the year 1898-99, including that required for the carrying on of the work at the Esplanade, be borrowed at the same time, as, by doing so, the expense would be lessened, and a better price obtained for the deben-tures. This recommendation was adopted by the city council, and the amount in question was included with other amounts to be borrowed, and debentures issued for the whole. The plaintiff, a ratepayer, whose rates were increased by the amount of 84 cents annually for interest on the loan, applied for a writ of certiorari to remove into the Supreme Court the record of proceedings of the committee on public accounts, the tenders committee, and of the city council relative to the borrowing of the amount represented by the loan, as part of the consolidated fund of the city, and the estimates of income and expenditure of the city for the year 1902, the principal ground being that the rate which was made apon the basis of the estimates included interest on the sum of $6,500 :- Held, that, with respect to the issue of bonds for the amount in question, there was not merely a defective execution of a power, but a total want of it; that the word "provided" in the Act was intended to create a condition precedent to the exercise of the borrowing power; that the purchaser of the debentures was bound to examine the statute under the authority of which they were issued, and, had he done so, would have been made aware of the fact that the terms of the statute had not been satisfied, there being nothing in the face of the debentures, or in any of the pro-ceedings of the council, so far as disclosed, to convey any intimation that the condition subject to which the power was to be exercised had been performed; that the word "provided," as used in the Act, was an apt word to create a condition, being synonymous with "if," "when," and "as soon as." Hart v. City of Halifax, 35 N. S. Reps. 1.

By-law — Estimates—Sinking Fund.]—A by-law to raise $8,000 by debentures to build a $10,000 bridge will be set aside when not in conformity with the provisions of arts. 491 and 495, M. C. Such by-law should be based upon precise estimates and provide for the levying of a sinking fund as well as interest upon the loan. Pritchard v, Township of Wakefield, Q. R. 24 S. C. 100.

By-law Guaranteeing — Approval of Retepoyers — Approval of Lieutenant-Governor.]—Judgment in Q. R. II K. B. 77, affirmed. Hanson v. Village of Grand Mère, 33 S. C. R. 50.

By-law Guaranteeing-Statute-Construction — Approval by Ratepayers and Lieutenant-Governor.] — A by-law enacted under the Towns Corporation Act (c. J. tit. 11, Revised Statutes of Quebec, 1888), by the respondent corporation guaranteed debentures to a specified amount to be issued by a company with which the corporation contracted for the execution of a public work within the municipality; but the same had not been submitted to the municipal electors for their approval or to the Lieutenant-Governor for his authority :- Held, in a suit by debenture-holders against the corporation, that the guarantee was in consequence ultra vires: -Held, also, with regard to the special Act (60 V. c. 78) under which the company was incorporated, that the above contract involved a financial obligation on the part of the corporation within the meaning of s. 7 (c). Both under that section and s. 27, which should be read together, a by-law must be approved by a majority of the whole body of ratepayers. Judgment in 33 S. C. R. 50, affirmed. Hanson v. Village of Grand Mère, [1904] A. C. 789.

Defective By-law - Remedial Statute.] -A municipal by-law was passed in 1892 on which debentures were issued, which provided for payment of the interest, but failed to provide for payment of the principal. The matute 3 Edw. VII, c. 18, s. 93 (O.), enacts that "where in the case of any by-law heretofore or hereafter passed, the interest for one year or more on the debentures issued under such by-law and the principal of the matured debentures (if any) has or shall have been paid by the municipality, the bylaw and the debentures issued thereunder remaining unpaid shall be valid and binding:" -Held, that the effect of this is to make one payment of interest validate the debenture in respect to which it is paid, and one payment of principal validate the debenture in respect to which it is paid; and that accordingly the debentures here in question fell within the scope of this remedial enactment. Standard Life Assurance Co. v. Village of Tweed, 23 Occ. N. 324, 6 O. L. R. 653, 2 O. W. R. 731, 747, 922, 983.

Form of—Sinking Fund—Assent of Lieutenant-Governor.]—A by-law (not being for local improvements) which provides for the postponement of the payment of the principal to the end of the term over which the debentures are to run, and for the same being met by a sinking fund, instead of providing for the payment of the principal by equal instalments, is not in accordance with the Municipal Ordinance (C. O. 3898 c. 70), and for that reason the Lieutenant-Governor in Council is warranted in withholding his assent thereto. In re Edmonton By-law, 21 Occ. N. 100, 4 Terr, L. R. 450.

Guaranteeing—Approval of Ratepayers.]
—Held, following Corporation de la Pointe Gatineau v. Henson, Q. R. 10 Q. B. 34¢, that a by-law authorizing a municipal corporation to guarantee debentures issued by a company, is not valid until it has been approved by a vote of the ratepayers, and by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. And compliance with these conditions is not affected or dispensed with by s. 27 of 60 V. c. 78 (Q.) Hanson v. Village of Grand Mère, Q. R. 11 K. B. 77.

Illegal Assessment - Validity of Debentures — Motion to Quash Whole Rate— Certiorari.]—By c. 65 of the Nova Scotia Acts of 1898, the council of the city of Halifax were authorized to borrow on the credit of the city of Halifax a sum not to exceed $6,500 for the extension north of the esplanade; provided the owners of property in front of the contemplated extension should give and convey to the city the land required: and it was enacted that the sum when borand it was enacted that the sum when bor-rowed should form part of the consolidated fund of the city, and debentures should be issued by the city therefor under the provisions of c. 24 of the Acts of the legislature of Nova Scotia for 1880. The said sum of $6,500, together with other sums, was subsequently borrowed, and debentures issued to cover the amount of the loan. There was nothing to distinguish the debentures issued in respect of the sum of $6,500 from those issued with respect to the balance of the loan. The owners of property in front of the proposed extension refused to convey, and it was not disputed that the loan was prematurely made. The application was for a writ of certiorari to remove the whole rate for 1901 into the Supreme Court. On behalf of the city corporation it was contended that the holders of the debentures could enforce against the city payment of the debentures and the interest, and therefore the rate should not be quashed. By reason of the loan the rate of the applicant was increased 84 cents a year:—Held, that the application must be refused. In re Hart and City of Halifax, 21 Occ. N. 480.

XI. DRAINAGE.

Alteration of Report and Plans.]—Before the report, plans, and assessment of the engineer for a drainage scheme have been adopted by the council, it can refer them back to him for further consideration or for amendment, but after they have been adopted it cannot of its own motion change or amead them; and if the drainage scheme is carried out with a material change the municipality are not protected, and are liable to make good any damages resulting from the work. Priest v. Tournship of Flos, 21 Occ. N. 113, 1 O. L. R. 78.

Artificial Drain — Repairs—Outlet.]—Section 75 of the Drainage Act. R. S. O. 1897 c. 226, applies only to drains artificially constructed, and does not apply to the repair or improvement of a natural water-course. Sutherland-Innes Co. v. Ronney. 30 S. C. R. 495, considered and followed. Where part of a drainage work to which the provisions of s. 75 apply is out of repair, if is not necessary before initiating proceedings for the improvement of the drain under that section for the initiating township to repair the portion of the existing drain which it is bound to repair. Both classes of work may be provided for in the same by-law, the enginer in that case estimating and assessing separately the cost of each class. In re Townships of Mersa and Gosfield North and Artificial Obstruction — Failure of Scheme—Report of Engineer.] — In 1884 a petition was presented to the plaintiffs' council asking for the removal of a dam and other obstructions to Mud Creek, into which the drainage of the township and of Augusta, adjoining, emptied. The council had the creek examined by an engineer, who presented a report with plans and estimates of the work to be done and an estimate of the cost and proportion of benefit to the respective lots in each township. The council then passed by-law authorizing the work to be done, which was afterwards set aside on the ground that the removal of an artificial obstruction was not contemplated by the law then in force, s. 570 of the Municipal Act, 1883. In 1886 the Act was anended, and a fresh petition was presented to the council, which again instructed the engineer to examine the creek and report. The engineer did not again examine it (its condition had not changed in the interval), but presented to the council his former report, plans, specifications, and assessment, and another by-law was passed, under which the work was done. In an action to recover from Augusta its proportion of the assessment:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 2 O. L. R. 4, 21 Occ. N. 375, Strong, C.J., dissenting, that the amendment in 1886 to s. 570 of the Municipal Act, 1883, authorized the plaintiffs' council to cause the work to be done, and claim from Augusta its proportion of the cost:—Held, forther, reversing the judgment. that the report of the engineer was sufficient without a fresh examination of the creek and preparation of new plans and a new assessment, Township of Elizabethtown v. Township of Augusta, 22 Occ. N. 191, 32 S. C. R.

By-law — Petition—Qualification of Petitioners — "Assessment Roll" — Farmers' Sons—Interest in Land—Damages.]—In an action for an injunction to restrain a municipality from proceeding with the work under a drainage by-law:—Held, that the assessment roll last revised previous to the passing of the by-law is the one to be looked at for the purpose of ascertaining whether the petition for the work was sufficiently signed to authorize the passing of the by-law:—Held, also, that the words "exclusive of farmers' sons not actual owners," in s.-s., 1 of s. 3, R. S. O. c. 226, does not refer to farmers' sons who are not actual owners in fact, but to farmers' sons so shewn by the last revised assessment roll:—Held, also, that two sons to whom a father was willing and promised to grant his farm, taking back a life lease, had an interest in the lund, of a freehold nature, entilling them to be assessed as joint owners, and were not "farmers' sons not owners, and were not "farmers' sons not actual owners:"—Held, also, following Connor v. Middagh, 16 A. R, 356, and McCulloch v. Township of Caledonia, 25 A. R, 417, that, the by-law not having been quashed, the plaintiff was not entitled to damages for work done under it although invalid. Challoner v. Township of Lobo, 21 Occ. N, 23, 32 O. R, 247.

Construction of Ditch without By-law — Trespass — Negligence — Costs.]—
Section 470 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, applies only to actions brought to recover damages "for alleged negligence on the part of the aunicipality." In an action against a municipality for damages for diverting water upon the plaintiff's land by the construction of a ditch without any proper by-law authorizing the work:—Held, that s. 470 did not apply, as the plaintiff's claim was for trespass, and not for negligence; and that the trial Judge had power over the costs; and the Court would not interfere with his discretion in awarding costs up to the trial to the plaintiff, while directing a reference as to damages. Judgment of Ferguson, J., 1 O. W. R. 559, affirmed. Lauvrence v. Toten of Oucen Sound, 23 Occ. N. 138, 5 O. L. R. 369, 1 O. W. R. 559, 2 O. W. R. 189.

Construction of New Drain-Notice-Land Owners—Liability for Old Drain—Appeal to County Council.]—A public notice given by a special superintendent of his appointment and of his proposed visit to places where it is proposed to establish a water-course, is sufficient when it is addressed to the persons directly or indirectly interested in the proposed works, and the owners of a concession through which the watercourse must necessarily pass are sufficiently notified by such a notice. 2. Arts. 881 and 882 of the Municipal Code, passed in the interests of agriculture, override art. 501. C. C., and subject the owners of higher lands to submit to the establishment of a watercourse through their lands for the benefit of lower marshy lands. 3. Owners who assert that they are already under obligation in respect of works for a watercourse established by a procèsverbal, in order to escape liability for the work of making a new watercourse, must prove the homologation of this proces-verbal, and they may, besides, be made liable for the new watercourse in respect of the land which such new watercourse drains, 4. An appeal to the county council does not deprive a party of his right to move before the Su-perior Court to quash a proces-verbal on the ground of illegality or nullity. Corporation of the Parish of Ste. Julie v. Massue, Q. R. 13 K. B. 228.

Cost of Repairs—Varying Apportionment
—Powers of Referee.]—Upon certain repairs to a drainage work becoming necessary, one of the townships interested directed their engineer to make a report, and he assessed the cost against the different townships in the proportions in which the original cost had been assessed, no proceedings having been taken under s. 69 or s. 72 of the Drainage Act to vary the assessment:—Held, that this was the proper mode of apportionment, and that, notwithstanding the wide wording of
s. 71 of the Act, the Drainage Referee had

Cost of Work — Procès-verbal — Rate-payers not Interested—Mis-en-cause—Costs.]—At common law as well as by virtue of the Municipal Code, a procès-verbal cannot bind, nor effectively call upon to contribute to the costs of works ordered by the procès-verbal in regard to a watercourse, any ratepayer except those interested: arts, 811, 870, 871, 881, 882, C. M. 2. Therefore a procès-verbal which imposes upon certain ratepayers the duty of contributing to the cost of works in which they are not interested, is illegal and unjust, and should be quashed. 3. Costs cannot be given against a mis-eu-cause unless he has joined issue with the plaintiff and asked for the dismissal of the whole or part of the plaintiff's claim. Papuet v. Corporation of 8t. Nicolas, Q. R. 13 K. B. 1.

County Road -- Watercourse-Special Superintendent - Proces-verbal.] - Article 772 of the Municipal Code applies only to cases where it is necessary to dig a watercourse through lands fronting on a road duly established, and where such a watercourse is necessary not only for draining the water from the road, but also for draining the abutting lands. 2. In this case a watercourse serving the purpose of draining several lots in the vicinity of a road was not in question, but only a prolongation or continuation of road ditches into natural watercourses to facilitate the flow of water from the road; and consequently the special superintendent had a right to provide in his proces-verbal for the digging and maintenance of these outlets by virtue of arts, 799 and 803 of the Municipal Code. Division of Township - Damages for Construction-Joint Claim - Amendment of Statute - Limitation Clause-Recurrence of Damages, —Pursuant to the judgment of the Court of Appeal of the 2nd March, 1901 (1 O. L. R. 519, 21 Occ. N. 231), the Drainage Referee on the 25th July, 1901, added the corporation of the township of Gosfield North as defendants, and they filed a statement of defence on the 10th September, 1901. The Referee then heard the evidence and assessed damages against both townships in respect of the construction of the drain in question, which was completed before the division of the township of Gosfield. On the 15th April, 1901, 1 Edw. VII. c. 30 (O.) was passed, which repealed s. 93 of the Drainage Act, and made new provisions, one of which was that the notice claiming damages was to be filed within two years from the time the cause of complaint arose :- Held, that the plaintiffs' claim for damages was against the two defendants jointly, and that it must be taken to have been first made on the 10th September, 1901, and was confined to damages suffered by the original construction of the drain which had arisen within two years next before that date; and that the plaintiffs would be at liberty to take proceedings under a. 93 as often as any damages should arise in the future, until a remedy should be provided to prevent their recurrence. Wide v. Township of Gosfield South, 24 Occ. N. Sl. 7 Q. L. R. 302, 3 O. W. R. 21.

Execution of Work by Persons Benefited - Default-Officers of Corporation-Mandamus-Code of Procedure-Change in.] -Municipal corporations have the direction and control of works necessary for the execution of proces-verbaux regulating the opening or maintenance of watercourses. 2. If persons liable to do work, neglect to do it, the municipal corporation should have it done by their officers. 3. Municipal officers are subject to the orders of the municipal corporation, but not to the orders of private persons interested in the works, and they are responsible for their acts only to the corporation. 4. The Superior Court has the right to compel municipal corporations by mandamus to execute what they have ordered by their own procès-verbaux, and this right exists whenever there is no other remedy equally appropriate, advantageous, and efficacious. 5. The new Code of Procedure, so far from restricting the cases where mandamus may be obtained against corporations, renders the use of the writ applicable to a larger number of cases than the old Code of Procedure, art. 1022 of the old code, and art. 992, No. 1. of the new. The jury found that the drain had been constructed in 1886 "by virtue of the street commissioner's power of office." The plaintiff, although aware of the existence of the drain at the time, made no objection till 1896, when the land caved in. The judgment in 33 N. S. Reps. 401, holding that the defendants having constructed the drain by their agent, the trespass, being a continuing one, was not barred by the Towns Incorporation Act. 1895, was affirmed. Held. also, that, as Montreal had not obliged itself to construct additional or new works within any fixed time in case of insufficiency, the adjoining municipalities were not relieved from any of their liabilities on account of postponement of construction of such works by Montreal. Held, further, that the judgment awarding damages against Montreal being a matter between third parties and not res judicata against the other municipal corporations interested, Montreal was only entitled to recover from St. C. such damages as might be shewn to have resulted from the connection and user of the sewers under the agreement; that Montreal, when sued, was not obliged to summon its warrantor in the action for damages, but could, after condemnation, recover such damages by separate action under the cortract; that it was not a condition precedent to action by Montreal, by the terms of the contract, that it should first submit to a judicial condemnation in liquidation of such damages; and that, as between St. C. and the arrière garants, their contracts bound them to pay damages in proportion to the areas drained by them into the Montreal sewers. Maintenance — Improvement of Natural Watercourses—"Benefit" assessment—"Out-let" Liability.]—Lands from which no water is caused to flow by artificial means into a drain having its outlet in a municipality other that that in which it was initiated, cannot be assessed for "outlet liability" under 57 V. c. 56 (O.). 2. Where a drainage work initiated in a higher municipality, obtains an outlet in a lower municipality, the assessment for "outlet liability" therein is limited to the "outlet liability" therein is limited to the costs of the work at such outlet. 3. Every assessment, whether for "injuring liability" or for "outlet liability," must be made upon consideration of the special circumstances of the case, and restricted to the mode prescribed by the Act. There must be apparent water which is caused to flow by an artificial channel from the lands to be assessed into the drainage work or upon other lands, to their injury, which water is to be carried off by the proposed drainage work. 4. Assessment for "benefit" under the Act must have reference to the additional facilities afforded by the proposed work for the drainage of all lands within the area of the proposed work, lands within the area of the proposed work, and may vary according to circumstances. 5. Section 75 of the Act only authorizes an assessment for repair and maintenance of an artificially constructed drain. The cost of widening and deepening a natural watercourse is not assessment for repair and maintenance of an artificially constructed drain. The cost of widening and deepening a natural watercourse is not assessment and sunder 7.5, but so a charge upon the general funds of the municipality. 6. Works for the reclamation of drewned lands in a township on a loweled than that of the initiating municipality are not drainage works, within the meaning of s. 75, for which assessment can be levied thereunder, nor are they works by which the lands in the higher township can be said in have been benefited. Decision in 25 A. R. 495, 19 Occ. N. 381, reversed. Sutherland-Innex Co. v. Townskip of Romney, 21 Occ. N. 1, 30 S. C. R. 495.

Maintenance of Ditch-Action against Ratepayer—Prescription—Forum—Justices of the Peace—Residence—Summons — Conviction.]—The prescription of six months provided by art. 2558, R. S. Q., does not apply to an action begun by a municipal corporation against a ratepayer, for the recovery of his share of the cost of maintenance of a line ditch. 2. Such a suit may be begun by the corporation after having paid the account of the rural inspector, but not before a justice of the peace, the right of re-course to that tribunal being a right personal to the rural inspector, which he cannot assign. 3. In this case, the summons calling upon the appellant to appear before two justices of the peace of the district of Montreal, without indicating their residence, and the conviction having been made by such justices without stating their residences, the summons and convictions were held void, the competence of justices of the peace under art, 1042, M. C., depending upon their place of residence, which, therefore, must be mentioned. Tour-ville v. Parish of St. Francois de Salles, Q. R. 23 S. C. 67.

Mandamus-Notice-View-Damages.] -A letter written by the complainant's solicitor to the council of the municipality, stating that the land in question had been flooded by water from a drain constructed by the municipality, but not saying anything as to the drain's condition, and asking them to construct and maintain such drainage work as is required to relieve the land, is not a suffi-cient notice under s, 73 of the Drainage Act to justify the issue of a mandamus. the claimant's duty to shew that proper notice has been given if a mandamus is asked for, and objection to the sufficiency of the notice may be taken by the defendants at any stage of the action without pleading want of notice. The Drainage Referee in trying an action may proceed partly on view, but in so doing must follow strictly the directions of the Act, and not make the view without appointment or notice to the parties. If he does so proceed, however, his finding, though bases partly on the view, may be upheld if the evidence supports it. A complaint is entitled to recover for any injury to the use and enjoyment of his land or for its depreciation in value, if caused by failure to keep a drain in repair, but not for depreciation in value based upon the alleged insufficiency in size of the drain as originally made, and the Court holding, on the construction of the Referee's judgment, that this element had been allowed to enter into the computation of the damages, reduced them from $250 to $50. Qualification of Petitioners — "Last Revised Assessment Roll" |—The "last revised assessment roll" which governs the status of petitioners in proceedings under the Drainage Act is the roll in force at the time the petition is adopted by the council and referred to the engineer for inquiry and report, and not the roll in force at the time the by-law is finelly passed. Watercourse Traversing Two Counties—Naming of Special Superintendent—Re-quest—Quashing—Costs—Res Judicata.]— The defendants had presented a petition to the county council of Hochelaga for the authorization of the opening and maintenance of a watercourse crossing the counties of Hochelaga and Jacques Cartier. The council granted the request and named a special superintendent, who, after having visited the locus and heard the parties, drew up a report in favour of the proposal. This report was submitted for homologation to the board of delegates of the two counties, who, after consideration, quashed it with costs of the report against the defendants, the petitioners. These costs were forthwith taxed and paid by the plaintiffs, who now claimed payment of them from the defendants:—Held, that the decision of the board of delegates had the force of res judicata against the defendants, and could not be incidentally reformed in a suit for the costs, 2. That the council of Hochelaga had. in this case, the power to name a special superintendent, and even supposing such nomination to be illegal, the corporation would not be responsible for errors in procedure induced and accepted by interested parties. Borrowing Powers—"Ordinary Expenditure"—School Purposes — Costs.] — The power conferred upon a manicipality by the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, s. 435, of borrowing money to meet current expenditure is distinct from the power conferred by that section of borrowing money for school purposes, and the amount borrowed for the former purpose must not exceed eighty per cent, of the amount collected in the preceding municipal year for the current expenditure of the municipality, apart from the expenditure for school purposes. Where this limit had been exceeded, but before the action was tried the money had been repaid, the plaintiff, who sued on behalf of himself and all other ratepayers, was held entitled to have the merits of the case disposed of, and, in the result, his costs awarded to him, and this although the borrowing had taken place to enable the municipality. Credit Legally Voted — Expenses Incurved—Payment—Treasurer—City Charter.]
—What art. 336 of the charter of the city of Montreal forbids to its connection and its committees, and what art. 338 punishes, is not the ordering of payment of expenses already incurred without their being covered by a credit leadly voted, but the incurring of them without such a credit. The prohibition against paying these expenses is only directed to the treasurer of the city. 2. The restrictions provided by arts, 336, 338, and 339 of the charter only apply to the expenses which the council has discretion to incur, and do not apply to disbursements which are provided for by statified by a contract legally made by the council. Expenses of Criminal Justice — Liability for—Certificate—Powers of Provincial Legislatures. —A municipality is liable for the fees and expenses of a justice of the peace or a constable, payable in relation to the prosecution of indictable offences, only where they have been certified to be correct by the Attorney-General or other counsel acting for the Crown, and have been ordered to be paid by the Judge presiding at the Court in which the indictment is presented. The Act of Assembly 57 V. c. 19, s. 1, whereby certain expenses in criminal prosecutions are made chargeable upon the municipalities, is not ultra vires of the Provincial Legislature. MeLeed v. Illegal Payments—Action by Ratepayer—Defence of Action Brought against Constable—Resolution of Council—Ratification—

Parties - Costs.] - A constable appointed by by-law of a town arrested a man as a vagrant, and for so doing was sued for false arrest and imprisonment :-Held, that he was not acting as the servant of the corporation, and "respondeat superior" did not apply; that the corporation were not liable to the person arrested; that a resolution of the council retaining an advocate to defend the constable and agreeing to indemnify him, was ultra vires, and payment by the corporation to such advocate of his costs and to the advocate for advocate of his costs and to the advocate for the person arrested his costs of such action, was illegal. 2. That the payment by the corporation of a fee to an advocate for his opinion as to the liability of the council and councillors was a legal payment. 3. That, though the resolution of the council and the payments thereunder might amount to a ratification of the act of the constable so as to render the corporation liable to the person arrested, the payment could not be so made arrested, the payment could not be so make legal as against a complaining ratepayer. 4. That the constable was a proper party to an action by a ratepayer. 5. That ss. 268 and 269 of the Municipal Ordinance of 1898, c. 70, are merely permissive, and do not oust the general jurisdiction of the Court, in an action to quash by-laws resolutions, &c. 6. That s. 273 affords protection for acts done under a by-law or resolution, but does not bar an action to restrain the corporation from enforcing it. 7. That a ratepayer, on behalf of himself and all other ratepayers, has a right to bring an action for a refund of the moneys illegally paid. S. That the corporation not having paid the moneys under mistake, and having no right to recover them from the constable as moneys paid to his use, the plaintiff had no greater right. Pease v. (b) of s. 10 was repealed and a new sub-section substituted, and a new sub-section substituted, and a new section, 222 (now 218), was enacted, a money by-law (not being for local improvements) which provides for the postponement of the payment of the principal to the end of the term over which the debentures run, and that such payment is to be met by a sinking fund, instrad of providing for the payment of the principal by equal instalments, is invalid. In this case the by-law not being in accordance with the Ordinance, the Lieutenant-Governor in council was warranted in withholding assent to it. In re Town of Edmonton, 21 Occ. N. 100.

Public Parks Act, Man. — Municipal Act—Expropriation—Powers of Board—Entry—Trespass — Remedy of owner — Action—Arbitration.]—1. Section 755 of the Municipal Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 116, giving power to the council of a city to acquire by purchase or expropriation land for park purposes, read together with s. 769, does not auti-orize the council to enter upon the land, without the consent of the owner, without first taking steps to expropriate the land and obtain an award of arbitrators and paying the amount awarded for compensation. 2. Section 44 of the Public Parks Act, R. S. M. 1902 c. 141, does not warrant the parks board of a town in entering upon land, or doing anything to injuriously affect it, without the consent of the owner, until after they have regularly expropriated and paid for the property; and a person whose land has been thus entered upon or injuriously affected has a right of action for damages against the parks board, and is not restricted to the remedy by arbitration under the expropriation and arbitration clauses of the Municipal Act. Sanatorium — Proposed Expenditure — Sumission of Question to Electors — Injunction.]—There is nothing in the Municipal Act permitting a municipal council to take a plebiscite, and there is no express prohibition against doing so. Taking a vote of the electors upon questions or upon authorized bylaws is open to grave objections. And where a council sought to take such a vote on the question of a money grant in aid of a sanatorium, which they had not power to make, with a view to inform the Legislature of the result, and, if favourable, to use the result as an argument in attempting to obtain for the council legislative authority to make the grant, they were restrained by injunction from so doing. XIII. EXPROPRIATION.

Abandonment — Damages — Costs.] — The city commenced expropriation proceedings, and forthwith took possession of the plaintiff's hand, constructed works thereon, and incorporated it with a public street. Subsequently, in virtue of a statute granting permission to do so, the city abandoned the expropriation proceedings without paying indemnity or returning the lands so occupied and used:—Held, that the plaintiff had been illegally dispossessed of his property, and was entitled to have it returned to him in the state in which it was at the time it had been so taken possession of, and also to recover compensation for the illegal detention:—Held, further, that in the present case the measure of damages, as representing the rents, issues, and profits of the lands usurped by the city, should be the equivalent of the interest upon the value of the property during the period of its illegal detention. Judgment below, Q. R. S. Q. B. 534, varied, with costs against the appellants. City of Montreal v. Hogan, 21 Occ. N. 6, 31 S. C. R. 1.

Compensation-Arbitration and Award-Conclusiveness of Award-Variation on Appeal-Examination of Evidence-Valuation of Lands.] - In a matter of expropriation at Montreal, under the provisions of 54 V. c. 78, s. 11, 1890, the commissioners' report has not the character of "chose jugée" any more than it had before the passing of that Act; and, on appeal from the decision of the commissioners to the Court of Review, the Court has a right, in order to understand the award. to refer to the evidence which accompanies it but the Court will only change the amount of compensation awarded when it appears that no allowance has been made for part of the claim, or in case of manifest error in arriving at the value of the property. The Court of Review has no right to take as a basis of its judgment, the opinions as to valuation given by the witnesses of the parties. In arriving at the value of lands and the damage sus-tained by reason of its expropriation, the revenue derived from the land ought to be taken into account as well as the sales which have been made in the neighbourhood. City of Montreal v. Gauthier, Q. R. 26 S. C. 351.

Compensation—Increase on Appeal—Increast, —Where, under the charter of the city of Montreal, a land-owner whose land has been expropriated has obtained from the Court of Revision, on appeal from an award of compensation, an increase of the amount fixed by such award, he may receive from the city corporation, the expropriating municipality, the amount of interest accrued upon the amount by which the award is increased from the time when the corporation took possession of the land down to the date of payment of the amount of the increase, Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. City of Montreal, Q. R. 18 S. C. 534.

Compensation—Vancouver Incorporation Act, 1990, s. 133—Aucard—Jurisdiction—Enforcement.]—The right to compensation carpoot be determined by arbitrators appointed under s. 133 of the Vancouver Incorporation Act, 1900, as their jurisdiction is limited to the finding of the amount of compensation. An award of such arbitrators cannot be enforced summarily under s. 13 of the Arbitration Act, In re Northern Counties Incestment Trust, Limited, and City of Vancouver, 22 Occ. N. 127, 8 B. C. sued the city for the value of this land:—Held, that the only act of possession being the construction of the sidewalk up to the wall of the plaintiff's house, and the placing of the sidewalk in this position not having been authorized by the city, which prayed acte of its willingness to surrender to the plaintiff possession of any property which might belong to him, his action to recover the value of the strip of land could not be maintained. Burland v. City of Montread, Q. R. 19 S. C. 574.

Costs of Proceedings by Claimant for Compensation-Inclusion in Damages Procedure - Taxation.] - Although the charter of the city of Montreal, in dealing with municipal expropriation, makes no provision for the costs properly incurred by the person seeking compensation in establishing his claim, yet these form part of the damages suffered by him and ought to be included in the com-pensation awarded, but the commissioners ought to limit themselves to declaring in their report that the person to be compensated has incurred such costs and to filing a statement of them; they have no right to determine and tax the amount. The costs thus incurred are taxed according to the law and the ordinary practice, upon a bill prepared for the pur-pose, following the tariff established by the Judges of the Superior Court, as to the proceedings in expropriation, actually in course, and the amount of this bill ought to be added to the amount of the compensation. Consequently the only fees taxable against the party expropriating are those which are provided by the tariff, City of Montreal v. Gauthier, Q. R. 26 S. U. 361.

Overholding Tenant — Right to Compensation as Occupant — Elements of Damage.]—A tenant whose lease has terminated by effluxion of time, and who, netwithstanding that an order decreeing expropriation has been made, and public notice has been given nearly a year before such expropriation, continues nevertheless in occupation of the lands as a simple occupant, day by day, on the sufferance purely of the owner, who, anticipating expropriation, did not wish to renew the lease, has only a precarious occupation of the land subject to be terminated from one day to another; consequently he cannot be considered an occupant within the meaning of art. 1608. C. C., and is not entitled to compensation be cause the expropriation interrupted his occupation. Such an occupant can only recover damages for loss of profits from the time the order is made to the expiration of the lease, and, therefore, he has no right to the cost of moving, to the expense of transferring a hotel license, or to the damage resulting from deterloration of his chattels, these losses not being occasioned by the expropriation, but happenoccasions by the expropriation of an un-ing solely through the termination of an un-certain occupancy. City of Montreal v. Poulin, Q. R. 26 S. C. 387.

Purchase of Gas Works — "Works, Plant Appliances, and Property" of Company—Arbitration—Franchise and Good-will individually application.]—By agreement—Ten per cent. Addition.]—By agreement between the city and the company, the former was to have the option of purchasing and acquiring "the works, plant, appliances, and property of the company node for light, heat, and power purposes," upon giving to the company notice as therein provided, at a price to be fixed by arbicration under the Municipal Act. The majority of the three arbitrators, in fixing the value of the works, plant, appliances, and property, included nothing for the earning power or franchise and rizhts of the company:—Held, that they were right, for by the fair interpretation of the agreement "property" must be limited by the preceding words, the rule of cjusdem generis applying. Held, also, that there being here no expropriation, but a voluntary agreement and submission, s, 99 of R. S. O. 1887 c, 164, as to adding ten per cent. to the amount ascertained by the arbitrators as the value, had no application. In re City of Kingston and Kingston Light, Heat, and Power Co., 22 Occ. Statutory Authority — Manufacturing Site—Survey—Location — Tresposs.] — The corporation of the town of Sydney were empowered by statute to expropriate as much land as would be necessary to furnish a location for the works of the appellants, a plan shewing such location to be filed in the office for registry of deeds, and on the same being filed the title to the lands to vest in the Engineers of the company were emtown. ployed by the town to survey the lands required for the site and to make a plan, which was filed as required by the statute. M., two years later, after the company had excavated a considerable part of the land, brought an action for trespass, claiming that it included five chains belonging to him, and at the trial the main contention was as to the boundary of his holding. He obtained a verdict, which was affirmed by the full Court: — Held, reversing the judgment, 36 N. S. Reps. 28, that the only question to be decided was whether or not the land claimed by him was a part of that indicated on the plan filed; that the sole duty of the engineers was to lay out the land which the town intended to expropriate; and whether it was M.'s land or not was immaterial, as the town could take it without regard to boundaries. Dominion Iron and Steel Co. v. McLennan, 24 Occ. N. 169, 34 S. C. R. 394.

Closing Street - By-law - Registered Plan-Sale of Road Allowance-Approval of Leiutenant-Governor in Council—Promulga-tion.]—When the owner of land has regisa plan of subdivision of it into lots and shewing a street, and has sold lots lying alongside and facing on the street, he is bound by the plan, and cannot, without the consent of the purchasers, close up the street and retake the land composing it, and what he could not do himself the council of the municipality has no right to do for him by passing r. by-law effecting that result: nor has such council a right under s. 667 and s.-s. (d) of s. 693 of R. S. M. 1902 c. 116, to sell roads stopped up by them, save original road allowances and public roads which have been duly dedicated as such, and over which the council has established its jurisdiction; and a by-law having such ends in view will be quashed, and is not validated by the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in council pursuant to s.s. (c) of s. 694 of the Muni-cipal Act, nor by its promulgation under the provisions of ss. 425 and 426 of the Act. In re Knudson and Town of St. Boniface, 15 Man. L. R. 317, 1 W. L. R. 281.

Construction of Sidewalk—Encroachment on Abutting Property—Straightening of Street — Compensation—Petitory Action — Prescription.]—The respondents were owners of houses situated upon a street in Quebec. The lots sloped at this place, and the houses were originally constructed upon the alignment of the street, that is to say, they were not square except those of the respondents. The consequence was that the corner of the west side of their house upon the street was thirteen feet behind the neighbouring house to the west; as to the east corner, it was in line with the property to the east. So that there was between the alignment of the street and the front of the house a strip of land in the form of a triangle upon which had been built two flights of steps to give access to the houses. In 1896 the appellants, the city corporation, in order to enlarge the street and make it regular, had acquired the property of one C. adjoining on the west those of the respondents, had pulled down the house and built a new one in line with the houses of the respondents. The appellants constructed the sidewalk up to the new building, and at the same time made a sidewalk in front of the respondents' houses up to the houses, thus taking possession of the triangular strip, but without touching the flights of steps. The respondtouching the flights of steps. The respond-ents claimed the value of the land which the appellants had so taken, and the latter pleaded that the land did not belong to the respondents, but was part of the street and had been so for more than 30 years :- Held, that in these circumstances the respondents could claim from the appellants the value of the land of which they had thus taken possession, and that without having recourse to a petitory action. City of Quebec v. Caron, Q. R. 13 K. B. 52.

County or Local Work -- Proces-verbal -- Resolution of Council-Notice-Status of Local Corporation.]-A bridge which had been treated and considered as a county bridge, by virtue of old proces-verbuux, cannot be declared to be a local bridge, in spite of the fact that it is such by its situation, unless a resolution is adopted or a proces-verbal homologated to that effect; and a simple notice of taking into consideration the proces-verbal in which such a declaration is made, does not fulfil the requirements of the law. 2. A local corporation charged with maintaining a bridge in the condition required by the statute, by the proces-verbal, and the by-laws which govern it, if it has been declared to be a local bridge, has a sufficient interest to apply, to set aside the proces-verbal which makes the bridge a local bridge. County Road — Board of Delegates — Hiphway Between Counties—Froceedings — Jurisdiction.]—In the absence of a declaration in pursuance of arts. 758 and 759 of the Municipal Code, it is competent for the board of delegates to take all the proceedings in reference to a road, such as that of the Grande Ligne, situate between two local municipalities belonging to two different counties, such as those of St Jean and Chambly. 2. The board of delegates is a municipal authority quite distinct from the county corporation, although it has ex officio for secretary the secretary of the corporation of one of the counties interested. Irbee v. Lussier, Q. R., 21 S. C. 204.

County Road—By-law Declaring it Local—Amendment —Notice — Restoration as County Road — Maintenance — Land-orers.]—A notice given by a municipal boly to amend a by-law or to passing another relating to a public road, without in any way mentioning the amendment or amendments to be made, or the nature of the by-law to be passed, is not sufficient, especially when those who comply in of it are prejudiced. 2. By virtue of art. 755, C. M., a road situated between two local municipalities is a county road, and when, by virtue of art. 758, C. M., the county council has declared it a best wond under the direction of one of such municipalities, it has no jurisdiction afterwards to amend such by-law so as to declare it again to be a local road, but at the charges of the two municipalities separated by it; but it has the right to restore the road as a county road, and then, in accordance with art. 758 (3), C. M., it may reapportion the work by specially indicating the property of the owners in each municipality liable for the maintenance of such road. Corporation of St. André Avelin v. Dangerous Machine in Street-Use by Independent Contractors — Precautions—In-jury to Passer-by—Liability of Corporation and Contractors.]—In a public and busy street of a city a horse became frightened by a steam roller engaged in repairing an by a scam roller engaged in repairing an intersecting street, and, swerving suddenly upon the plaintiff, who was passing on a bicycle, injured him. The roller was the property of the city corporation, and was being used by paving contractors under a provision in the contract. The work was being done for the corporation, and it necessitated the use of the roller. It was shewn that the roller was a machine likely to frighten horses of ordinary courage and steadiness: that of this the city corporation's servants were aware; and that proper precautions were not taken on the occasion in question to warn persons of the approach of the too to warn persons or the approach or the roller to the street on which the horse was passing:—Held, that the place where the work was to be done and the means by and the manner in which it was to be performed made it incumbent on the city corporation, if they had been doing the work otherwise than through a contractor, to see that proper precautions were taken to guard against danger to the public from the use of the roller; and the corporation could not rid themselves of this obligation by intrusting the work to a contractor. Penny v. Wimbleton Urban District Council, [1898] 2 Q. B. 212, [1899] 2 Q. B. 72, followed:—Held, also that the contractors were bound equally with the corporation to take notice that the roller was likely to cause danger to the public, and their failure to take proper precautions occasioned the accident. Kirk v. City of Toronto, 25 Occ. N. 29, 8 O. L. R. 730, 4 O. W. R. 496.

Establishment of Highway — Assessing Lands not Benefited—By-law—Action to Set Aside—Appeal to County Council—Petition to Quash.]—Held, that the defendants, a municipal corporation, could not subject the lands of the plaintiff, which had a road in front of them at a distance of less than 30 arpents, to a contribution, in proportion to their area, to the expense of opening up and maintaining a road which was of no use to such lands and was projected only for the benefit of other lands; and a by-law passed by the defendants for this purpose, thereby causing a grave injustice to the plaintiff, was set aside in an action brought in the ordinary way in the Superior Court. 2. The fact that the plaintiff had first appealed to the county council, who had confirmed the by-law, did not deprive him of his right of action. 3. The remedy given by the Municipal Code by way of petition to quash did not exclude the proceeding by action. Therriault v. Parish of St. Alexandre, Q. R. 20 S. C. 45.

Expropriation of Land for Highway — Proces-verbal—Ultra Vires—Pleading.]. — Where an action is brought by a municipal corporation to compel the defendant to convey land for a road, the defendant cannot plead that the proces verbal of the municipal inspector is void and ultra vires, and has been annulied by the Court; that the county council has not been consulted on the subject of the opening of the road; and that the defendant has sued the corporation for possession; such allegations will be struck out on demurrer. Corporation of the Parish of Ste. June v. Malo, 5 Q. P. R. 217.

Expropriation of Land for Road—Valuation — Compensation.]—A municipal corporation cannot expropriate land for a public road without first having a valuation made. The formalities required for expropriation ought always to be followed even if the owner has no right to compensation. Laramie v. Township of Hincks. Q. R. 27 S. C. 27.

Extension of Streets — Municipal Works — Delay—Injury to Individuals.]—Municipal corporations, in deciding upon the extension of streets and municipal works generally into new districts, and acting in good faith, are not responsible for damages caused to individuals by delay in resolving upon such works, especially where such delay was occasioned by due regard to economy and prudent administration.
