there with his hand on his head, while his new employer spoke kindly to him about the work that would begin on the morrow.

"You will find it a little strange at first," he said; "but Mr. Kirk, the head of our reporting staff, has been instructed to explain the routine of the office to you, and I have no doubt we shall work well together."

Rob said he meant to do his best. "It is our hope," Mr. Angus, "that you will find the place very friendly before our staff, and if you have suggestions to make at any time on a matter connected with your work we shall be most happy to consider them and to meet you in a cordial spirit."

While Rob was thanking Mr. Liqueurish for his consideration, Kirk in the next room was wondering whether the new reporter was to have half a crown a week less than his predecessor, who had begun with six pounds a month.

POETRY.

As You Go Through Life.

Don't look for the flaws as you go through life,
And even when you find them
It is wise and kind to be somewhat blind
And look for the virtues behind them.
For the cloudless night has a hint of light
Somewhere in its shadows hiding;
It is better by far to hunt for a star
Than the spots on the sun abiding.
The current of life runs ever away
To the bosom of God's great ocean,
Don't set your force 'gainst the river's course
And think to alter its motion.
Don't waste a curse on the universe--
Remember it lived before you,
Don't butt at the storm with your puny form--
But bend and let it go o'er you.
The world will never adjust itself
To suit your whims in the latter,
And some things must go wrong your whole life long,
And the sooner you know it the better.
To suit your whims in the latter,
And go under at last in the wrestle.
The wisest man shapes into God's plan
As the water shapes into a vessel.

SELECT STORY.

When a Man's Single.

BY JAMES W. BARRIE.

This was the first fire in the reporter's room that season, and it smoked. Kirk, left alone, fung up the window, and gradually became aware that some one with a heavy tread was walking up and down the alley. He whistled gently in case it was a friend of his own, but getting no response, resumed his work. Mr. Liqueurish also heard the footsteps, but though he was waiting for the new reporter, he did not connect him with the man outside.

Rob had stopped at the door a score of times, and then turned away. He had arrived at Silchester in the afternoon, and come straight to the "Mirror" office to look at it. Then he had set out in quest of lodgings, and having got them, had returned to the passage. He was not naturally a man crushed by a sense of his own unworthiness, but looking up at these windows and at the shadows that passed them every moment, he felt far away from his saw-mill. What a romance to him, too, was the glare of the gas and in the "Mirror" bill that was being reduced to pulp on the wall at the mouth of the close! He had begun to rain heavily, but he did not feel the want of an umbrella, never having possessed one in Thramis.

Fighting down the emotions that had mastered him so often, he turned once more to the door, and as he knocked more loudly than formerly, a compositor came out, who told him what to do if he was there on business. "Go upstairs," he said, "till you come to a door, and then kick." Rob did not have to kick, however, for he met Mr. Liqueurish coming down stairs, and both half stopped.

"Not Mr. Angus, is it?" asked Mr. Liqueurish.

"Yes," said the new reporter, the moneyable also-telling that he was a Scotchman, and that he did not feel comfortable.

Mr. Liqueurish shook him warmly by the hand, and took him into the editor's room. Rob sat in a chair with his hand on his head, while his new employer spoke kindly to him about the work that would begin on the morrow.

"You will find it a little strange at first," he said; "but Mr. Kirk, the head of our reporting staff, has been instructed to explain the routine of the office to you, and I have no doubt we shall work well together."

While Rob was thanking Mr. Liqueurish for his consideration, Kirk in the next room was wondering whether the new reporter was to have half a crown a week less than his predecessor, who had begun with six pounds a month.

"It is pleasant to us," Mr. Liqueurish concluded, referring to the novelist, "to know that we have sent out from this office a number of men who subsequently took a high place in literature. Perhaps our system of encouraging talent by fostering it has had something to do with this, for we like to give everyone his opportunity to rise. I hope the day will come, Mr. Angus, when we shall be able to recall with pride the fact that you began your literary career on the "Mirror."

Rob said he hoped so too. He had, indeed, very little doubt of it. At this period of his career it made him turn white to think that he might not yet be famous.

"But I must not keep you here any longer," said the editor, rising, "for you have had a weary journey, and must be feeling tired. We shall see you at ten o'clock to-morrow."

Rob sat in his lonely room, with interest examined his books with a look. One of them was Tennyson's new volume of poems, and a month afterwards the "Mirror" would be full of his verses. Rob marched up the streets of Silchester with his chest full forward by advertising "The Silchester Mirror" says, "This admirable volume." After all, the great delight of being on the press is that you can patronize the Tennysons. Doubtless the poet laureate got a marked copy of Rob's first review forwarded him, and had an anxious moment till he saw that it was favorable. There had been a time when even John Milton felt a thrill pass through him as he saw Messrs. Bessy and Biss boasting that he thought their "Chaplain of the Fleet" a novel of sustained interest, "which we have read without fatigue."

Rob sat over his empty grate far on into the night, his mind in a jumble. As he grew more composed the "Mirror" and its staff sank out of sight, and he was, carrying a dead child in his arms along the hazy Whimsey road.

LIVES IN DANGER.

The Time for Action and Great Care.

Paine's Celery Compound Should Be Used This Month.

Our changeable autumn weather brings fear to the hearts of thousands of rheumatic sufferers who are unable to go to warmer climes. The present month with its wet, cold weather and chilling north east wind will, without doubt, intensify the agonies of those who are afflicted with acute, chronic, inflammatory and sciatic rheumatism. The use of Paine's Celery Compound, which has not removed, is poisoning the blood, causing stiff and swollen joints, twisted legs, arched fingers, and contracted toes. What it reaches the heart it generally proves fatal.

Rheumatic sufferers, why remain in agony and peril? There is a sure cure and a new life for all! If the proper agency is made use of. The true agency, Paine's Celery Compound, has triumphantly met hundreds of cases far more subtle and dangerous than yours; it will surely meet your troubles. It is for you to determine this day whether you shall be free from suffering and take on a new life, or remain in a condition of helplessness and torture that may drag you to the grave at any time.

Best in mind that Paine's Celery Compound cures all forms of rheumatism, and does the work so well that the disease never returns. Mr. M. J. Vinco, of Barrie, Ont., says:

"I am happy to say that I have taken Paine's Celery Compound with great results. I had sciatica so badly that I could not turn in bed or walk without help; and for a period of three weeks was helplessly laid up and suffered pain that at times was unbearable.

"I tried many medicines, but all in vain. I was afterwards recommended to try Paine's Celery Compound. I used six bottles, and am entirely cured and enjoy good health. I take great pleasure in recommending the valuable medicine that cured me."

Rob sat in a chair with his hand on his head, while his new employer spoke kindly to him about the work that would begin on the morrow.

arms along the hazy Whimsey road. His mouth twitched, and his head dropped. He was preparing to go to bed when he got down again to look at the other book. It was a novel by "M." in one thin volume, and Rob thought the title, "The Scorn of Scorns," foolish. He meant to write an honest criticism of it, but never having reviewed a book before, he rather hoped that this would be a poor one, which he could condemn brilliantly.

How Rob! he came to think more of that book by-and-by.

At last Rob wound up the big watch that neighbors had come to gaze at when his father bought it of a peddler forty years before, and took off the old silver chain that he wore round his neck. He went down on his knees to say his prayers, and then, remembering that he had said them already, he rose up and went to bed.

CHAPTER IV.

St. Leonard's Lodge is the residence of Mr. William Meredith, an ex-mayor of Silchester, and stands in the fashionable suburb of the town. There was at one time considerable intercourse between this house and Dome Castle, the seat of Colonel Abinger, though they are five miles apart and in different counties; and one day, after Rob had been on the press for a few months, two boys set out from the castle to show themselves to Nell Meredith. They could have reached the high-road by a private walk between a beech and an ivy hedge, but they preferred to climb down a steep path to the wild-running Dome. The advantage of this route was that they risked their necks by taking it.

Nell, who did not expect visitors, was sitting by the fire in her boudoir, dreaming. It was the room in which she and Mary Abinger had often discussed such great questions as "Woman's Influence," "Man's Instability," "his Character," "his Degeneration"; the Poor, "How we are to Help Them"; why Lady Lucy Gilding wears Pink when Blue is obviously her Color.

Nell was tucked away into a soft arm-chair, in which her father never saw her without wondering that such a jiltle thing should require eighteen yards of a dress.

"I'm not so little," she would say on these occasions, and then Mr. Meredith chuckled, for he knew that there were young men who considered his Nell tall and terrible. He liked to watch her sweeping through a room. To him the boudoir was a sea of reefs. Nell's dignity when she was introduced to a young gentleman was another thing her father could never look upon without awe, but he also noticed that it soon wore off.

On the mantel-piece lay a comb and several hair-pins. There are few more mysterious things than hair-pins. So far back as we can go into the past we see women putting up their hair. It is said that married men lose their awe of hair-pins and clean their pipes with them.

A pair of curling-tongs had a chair to themselves near Nell, and she wore a short blue dressing-jacket. Probably when she woke from her reverie she meant to do something to her brown hair. When old gentlemen called at the lodge they frequently told their host that he had a very pretty daughter; when younger gentlemen called they generally called again, and if Nell thought they admired her the first time, she spared no pains to make them admire her still more the next time. This was to make them respect their own judgment.

It was little Will Abinger who had set Nell dreaming, for from wondering if he was home yet for the Christmas holidays her thoughts wandered to his sister Mary, and then to his brother Dick. She thought longer of Dick in his "lonely London chambers than of the others, and by-and-by she was saying to herself petulantly, "I wish people wouldn't go dying and leaving me money." Mr. Meredith, and still more Mrs. Meredith, thought that their only daughter, an heiress, would be thrown away on Richard Abinger, barrister-at-law, whose blood was much bluer than theirs, but who was, nevertheless, understood to be as hard up as his father.

The door-bell rang, and two callers were ushered into the drawing-room without Nell's knowing it. One of them left his companion to talk to Mr. Meredith, and clattered up-stairs in search of the daughter of the house. He was a bright-faced boy of thirteen with a passion for flinging stones, and of late, he had worn his head in the air, not because he was conceited, but that he might look with admiration upon the face of the young gentlemen down-stairs.

Bouncing into the parlor, he caught sight of the object of his search before she could turn her head.

"I say, Nell, I'm back."

Miss Meredith jumped from her chair.

"Will!" she cried.

When the visitor saw this young lady coming towards him quickly, he knew what she was after, and tried to get out of her way. But Nell kissed him.

"Now, then," he said, indignantly, pushing her from him.

Will looked round him fearfully, and then closed the door.

"You might have waited till the door was shut, at any rate," he grumbled. "It would have been nice thing if any one had seen you!"

"Why, what would it have mattered, you horrid little boy?" said Nell.

"Little boy! I'm bigger than you at any rate. As for its not mattering--but you don't know who is down-stairs. The captain--"

"Captain!" cried Nell.

She seized her curling-tongs.

"Yes," said Will, watching the effect of his words, "Greybrooke, the captain of the school. He is giving me a week just now."

Will said this as proudly as if his guest was Napoleon Bonaparte, but Nell laid down her curling-tongs. The intruder interpreted her action and resented it.

"You're not his style," he said; "he likes bigger women."

"Oh, does he?" said Nell, screwing up her little Greek nose contemptuously.

"He's eighteen," said Will.

"A mere school-boy."

"Why, he shaves."

WOLFVILLE, N. S., OCT. 29, 1897.

Lessons From the Windsor Fire.

On the occurrence of such a calamity as the recent Windsor fire, men's minds are naturally led to enquire, Whence such loss and suffering? The question of evil will doubtless ever remain an enigma. The shade and the light are equally necessary, yet the shadows deepen and darken where the light alone would bring health and gladness. While we cannot account for calamities which bring to men loss and death, we may at least trace in them somewhat of good, and learn from them lessons to warn and to benefit. Few realized what sympathy and kindness best in the hearts of our people—in their own hearts it may be—till the sad news of Windsor's conflagration and her people's destitution flashed over the wires. Men whose hearts had become hard with greed and selfishness were touched, and gladly they gave and still give, if by their gifts they can lessen the misery of their fellows. From the Pacific to the Atlantic the hearts of the people have been stirred. The sad news has drawn tears from eyes and sympathy from hearts, and gifts have poured in from all sides to the Windsor sufferers. Our people have been reminded, and especially they most directly affected, that wealth is but an accident, that men demand respect not for what they have but for what they are. A night's blaze may put the millionaire and the pauper on an equality so far as the possessions of either are concerned. There is something more valuable than this world's riches. A day's conflagration may destroy the accumulations of centuries. Mens minds are turned towards the importance of laying up for themselves treasures where fire does not destroy, where moth does not corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal. The greatest spiritual awakenings have ever followed in the wake of great commercial depressions and dread calamities. One of the plainest lessons of the Windsor fire—that is continually observed in the experiences of men—is that the innocent suffer for the misdeeds of the guilty. Vicarious suffering is stamped on many faces printed on many lives. Our sister town paid dearly for her liquor business. It is not enough to say that the calamity owes its origin to the illicit sale of intoxicants. Such sins as that which occasioned the Windsor fire are but parasites of the so-called respectable bar. Banish the one and the other would have nothing to live upon. Very few would frequent such places while sober. Begin at the respectable bar, supported and encouraged by the first citizens, and when made to buy more and a disgrace, loafing in a condition about the grand hotel, and the debauch at the illicit dens, where you will be welcomed with open arms. Windsor's calamity should be a lesson to other towns. What they now that shall they resp, and the respect will be found, as in the case of Windsor, far, far more abundant than the sower.

Thomas J. Buckley, of Buckley's Corner, West Cornwallis, was found dead in his own house on Saturday morning last, with a bullet shot through his head. It was first thought to be a case of suicide, but examination of the body gave reason to believe that murder had been committed. A jury was empanelled and a full investigation was held, when the following verdict was rendered: That the deceased came to his death from a pistol shot fired by his own hand, while suffering from temporary aberration of mind. Mr Buckley was an inoffensive single man of about 55 years of age. For a good many years he has lived alone, and while looked upon as somewhat peculiar, was a general favorite with his acquaintances. There appears to be a wide difference of opinion with regard to the matter, and many persons in the neighborhood believe it to have been a case of murder despite the verdict of the jury.

The Shakespearean recital given by Mr Geo. B. Williams in College Hall, on Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Acadia Athenaeum Society was well attended and much enjoyed. Shakespeare's master comedy, "Much Ado About Nothing," received masterly treatment. Mr Williams personated each of the characters successfully and proved himself a splendid elocutionist and dramatist and a most successful interpreter of the humor of Shakespeare. Those who heard him on Wednesday evening would gladly learn of Mr Williams return to Wolfville on another occasion.

We hear some complaint that no acknowledgment has been made of Wolfville's contribution to the sufferers by the Windsor fire. Wolfville was one of the first towns to send help, and our people generally have been willing to render all possible assistance. The town council have been perhaps a little slow but they will be heard from soon. Meantime generous donations have gone forward of clothing, etc., from private individuals. We trust that when Wolfville is heard from our contribution will be creditable to the town.

Commencing October 26th, the steamer Boston will leave Boston every Tuesday and Friday, and will leave Yarmouth to return every Wednesday and Saturday evening; connecting with the D. A. Ry. both going and coming. Mr H. F. Hammond has been appointed the Boston Agent for the Yarmouth Steamship Company, Limited, in the place of the late Mr J. E. Spiny who died at Boston October 24th.

The Governor-General Pleased.

The following is a copy of a letter written by the Governor-General to Lieutenant-Governor Dely on his return from his recent trip through Nova Scotia, and is published by the ACADIAN on the request of Governor Dely:

CAR "VICTORIA," Oct. 19th, 1897.
MY DEAR LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR:
I desire to express the hearty appreciation with which we shall always remember our recent trip through various portions of Nova Scotia. Everywhere we experienced abounding manifestations of loyalty and public spirit, and also of the most kindly and hospitable good-will. It was, as your honor is aware, by no means our first experience of such manifestations in Nova Scotia, but the profuse and interesting portion of the province comprised by Cape Breton was new to us. We have been delighted with what we heard and saw there. In addition to the attractive scenery of the island, it was a great pleasure to find ourselves among the kindly Highland Scottish folk with whom we have so many associations in common.

I wish particularly to thank your honor for your sympathetic advice and assistance with reference to the arrangements for our tour. Your being able to accompany us during the first portion of the trip gave us the best start possible, and we much regretted that your health did not allow you to remain with us all the time.

We have also a grateful and pleasant memory of the kind help and company of the Hon. Mr Murray, premier of Nova Scotia, during part of the journey. An additional element to the pleasure that has been afforded to us of meeting several of our friends among the senators and members of the Dominion Parliament in their own districts and amongst their own people. Their company on various occasions, and the part they have all taken in making arrangements for our reception, and their hearty welcomes, have been most gratifying to us. I am afraid that we have given a considerable amount of trouble to the mayors of the different cities we have visited, as well as to other public men who have acted with them, but our reception everywhere has been the occasion of bringing out so much true patriotic feeling, that we are assured that the officials referred to will not grudge the labor involved. To them also our sincere thanks are due.

I hope that your honor will kindly make it known how much I have been gratified and impressed by the outburst of loyalty of which, as her majesty's representative, I have been the recipient, and that you will also convey our warmest personal thanks to all who have taken part in our reception. I shall find it a most gratifying opportunity of conveying to her majesty, this renewed expression of the devotion of her subjects in all the maritime provinces, and I am glad to think that the hereditary connection of my family with Nova Scotia, provides me with a permanent link with that province, irrespective of the office which I have the honor to hold.

With the assurance of hearty good wishes and our kind regards to your home circle,
I remain,
Very sincerely yours,
[Sgd.] ARMAND.
Mark Twain in His Old Manner.

An article by Mark Twain written in the style of "The Innocent Abroad" and Peter Newell, is a promise that magazine readers do not have held out to them every day. It is in the November number of McClure's Magazine that this rare feat of humor is to be secured. One might reasonably expect more than ordinary entertainment from any one of the three items of pictures by Frost, pictures by Newell, and an "Innocent Abroad" article by Mark Twain; but the editors of McClure's, in their profession, engage to serve all three at once. The Mark Twain article will consist of chapters from the forthcoming book on his recent journey around the world, and is the only part that will be published in advance of the book itself. It follows, those who have read it say, the earlier Mark Twain manner, which is undoubtedly the most popular; it is a thread of pleasant travel are strung no end of wise and witty reflections, quaint and quizzical observations, comic adventures, and plausible impossible tales.

Football Notes.
The Wolfville football team is to play the Acadia team again to-morrow on the campus.
Port Williams and Canning have also organized football teams, which will no doubt be heard from soon.
The Acadia football team goes to Sackville on Nov. 12th to play the Mt. Allison team. We wish them success.

A football match was played on the campus Saturday between the Freshman class and the Academy in which after a hard fought game the latter were victors. One score 6-0.
Next Friday afternoon a match game of football is to be played on the campus here between Acadia and the University of New Brunswick. The game will no doubt be an interesting one.

The N. S. Apple and Produce Shipping Co., Ltd.
A meeting of the provisional directors of the above mentioned company was held in the office of W. P. Shaffer, Esq., at Kentville, on Tuesday, the 19th of October, to consider means for the organization of the Company, when it was decided to select a stock for that purpose at once. Dr. DeWitt to look after Horton township; Wm. Young and Peter Innes, Esqs., Cornwallis; Dr. P. N. Bacon, Antigonish; and James Pennington, Esq., for Annapolis. The partners will have more leisure now than during the busier seasons.

Wolfville Division.

Wolfville Division is studying during this quarter the lives of some of the most foremost of temperance workers. A few weeks ago a meeting was devoted to the life and works of the late Neil Dow, that grand apostle of prohibition. At the meeting this week John B. Gough was discussed. A sketch of his life was presented and selections were read from his pen. At other meetings Frances E. Willard, John B. Finch, Father Mathew and other temperance advocates will be considered. Such meetings will no doubt be very helpful to the members, bringing them into touch with the leading minds who have engaged in the temperance reform. Wolfville Division has in the past done a good work, and it should be supported better than it is by our people. The young people who gather week after week should be encouraged in the work they are striving to carry on. It is true there are no intoxicants openly sold in our town, but there is still much work to be done along educative lines if our young people are to grow up to be temperance and true men and women.

We present to readers of the ACADIAN an opportunity to secure that great world's paper, The Family Herald and Weekly Star, at a considerable reduction. We do this to enable our own subscribers to save considerable money. The Family Herald and Weekly Star is not in competition with the ACADIAN but goes with it as the great universal paper, making with the ACADIAN the best value before the reading public of this continent. There goes with this magnificent premium, a picture that is not to be missed. It is known throughout the United States, Great Britain and Australia. The Family Herald and Weekly Star is an enormous value for the subscription price of one dollar. The Family Herald and Weekly Star, of Montreal, and the ACADIAN. This offer is limited as to time, and cannot be together with the premium, accepted after the offer is withdrawn.

Although business has improved, temporarily at least, there promises to be much suffering among the poor, because of the large cities this winter. Work is not much more plentiful just now than it was last year outside of the mill towns, where practically all mills are busy. Flour and potatoes are much higher than they were a year ago, but wages are no better, hence the outlook for the poor is not very reassuring. Estimated at $1.00 of $1.10 per bushel. Flour at $2.00 to $2.50 for the bushel.

The Americans host of every great institution have got there. There is a Canadian institution, however, that has opened the eyes of Americans and other people all over the world. It is a great weekly newspaper that is a marvel of excellence and getting better every issue. It is to be found in the homes of the wisest of our people in every town and township in Canada. We refer, of course, to the Family Herald and Weekly Star, Montreal, which this year has a general and new subscription for every issue of the ACADIAN have an exceptional opportunity to get the Family Herald and Weekly Star clubbed with the ACADIAN for $1.75.

Fletcher, the colored man in whose place the Windsor fire originated, and McIntyre, his alleged accomplice, were arrested last week, charged with causing the fire. The dwelling of the latter, when visited, showed most damaging evidence against him. Every room upstairs bore marks of small fires and several mattresses were saturated with kerosene oil and partly burned. He was confined in the Kentville jail, from which he made his escape on Wednesday night. Every effort will be put forth to effect his capture which we trust will be successfully accomplished.

A BOY'S SUFFERINGS.

ATTACKED WITH INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM AT AN EARLY AGE.

Each Successive Year Brought Fresh Attacks With Increasing Severity Until He was a Physical Wreck.

From the Sun, Belleville.

Mr and Mrs W. R. Kelly are people who are deeply grateful for a kind intervention of Providence whereby the life, health and happiness of their twelve year old son, Master Harry, has been restored and preserved.

Despite all we could do he was again attacked in the next spring. You can imagine the fear and dread with which we watched these recurring attacks, each one more severe than the last, and each one leaving our boy in a worse condition than those that went before.

Rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, nervous headache, nervous prostration, and diseases depending upon humors in the blood such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc., all disappear before a fair treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

On the bench Sir Lewis Cave was no respecter of persons. Even-handed justice was dealt out to poor and rich alike. It was useless for counsel to palm off bad arguments upon him.

THE WEAK MADE STRONG.

What Dodd's Kidney Pills did for a Brockville Butcher—He could not lift without Great Agony—Now He can lift with any Man.

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 25.—W. A. Stagg, a well-known butcher of this city, was the victor in a lifting contest, a few days ago. What makes this statement one of unusual significance is the fact that for years Mr Stagg has been a sufferer from kidney disease of a very severe type, and could not lift any weight without suffering the greatest pain.

A white minister after conducting services at a colored church, asked an old deacon to lead in prayer. The brother of black, offered a fervent prayer for the white brother, and said: "Oh, Lord, give him the eye of an eagle, let him spy out sin as of old. Put his hands to de gospel plow. Tie his tongue to de line of truth. Nail his ear to de gospel pole. Bow his head way down between his knees, and his knees way down in some lone some, dark and narrow valley, where prayer is much wanted to be made."

Convention Notes.

CONTINUED.

A "School of Methods" was very ably conducted by Mrs Woodbury, of Dartmouth. Different methods were discussed for carrying on the work of local unions.

In this connection a paper was read by Mrs McKay, of Pictou, on "Jail and Prison Reform," and another by Mrs Tufts on "Woman's Relation to the Municipality."

Both these subjects were duly discussed. Miss Slack spoke of the voting privilege of women in England, and urged our women to secure, if possible, the appointment of women on school boards.

A poem was also read composed by Miss Johnson, of Canoe "Our badge and why we wear it." The main points were, its secure recognition.

It bears witness—it keeps in remembrance—it gives inspiration. A parliamentary drill was conducted by Mrs Archibald. This was enjoyed by all, and was especially helpful to those who conduct the business meetings of the unions.

The public meeting on Wednesday evening was conducted entirely by the W. C. T. U. Good music was rendered by the choir of the churches and a very amusing dialogue given by a number of young ladies, the central figure being a delegate from "Tarry Town."

A solo was very finely rendered by Mrs Avery Shaw, of Windsor, and the meeting was in every way a decided success.

In the meeting on Thursday a. m. Mrs Archibald explained the Victorian order of nurses which is being organized in Halifax. She urged the union to take up this work as a department.

Questions were asked as to the nature of the work and satisfactorily answered. It was voted that this line of work be adopted by the Provincial union, with Mrs Archibald as superintendent.

A telegram was sent Lady Aberdeen conveying the decision of the convention.

A communication was received from Mrs Rutberford, Dominion president, expressing the hope that the N. S. union would be well represented at the coming Dominion Convention.

After this seven delegates were appointed—one for each hundred members—three being 703 members in N. S. Mrs Chesley was also appointed delegate to the World's Convention.

After the morning session on Thursday the delegates and visitor, repaired to the coffee rooms of the W. C. T. U., where they were sumptuously entertained at dinner by the charming young ladies of Windsor.

Mrs Archibald remarked that as we were deluged from making toasts in the usual way we might indulge in some dry toasts, and proposed "Our entertainers." Other toasts given were for "Our hosts and hostesses of Windsor," "The press," and "Our president," each of which was duly responded to.

The public meeting on Thursday evening was addressed by Miss Slack on the subject of "Equal Suffrage," presenting very clearly and forcibly the arguments in favor. She was frequently cheered by the attentive audience.

C. J. Wilcox, M. P. P., addressed the meeting, giving his reasons for not supporting the franchise bill, his chief reason being that the majority of women did not want it.

Mrs Archibald then spoke in her own womanly way, saying that for the protection of home women asked for the ballot—not because they wished to engage in politics.

Dr. Saunders then gave an earnest and eloquent address, saying many kind things of the W. C. T. U., but by no means committing himself to the franchise question.

"God be with you till we meet again," the convention adjourned to meet in Amherst in October, 1898.

The Kentucky Bankers' Association in annual session at Frankfort, on October 7, unanimously adopted a resolution complimenting and endorsing the local bankers for keeping wine off the table at the annual banquet, saying that it was recognized as a pleasing advancement, and resolving that at all the annual banquets hereafter women should be among the guests, "as the only stimulants there."

It is the first action of the kind ever taken by a Kentucky association of a similar character, and is an exciting comment, coming from an organization at whose previous annual banquets wine has been as free as water and more freely consumed.

In the headquarters of the W. C. T. U. at the Chicago Temple, packed ready for shipment, the banners and flags of the Loosan nations, Barmah, Siam, Australia, New Zealand, South Australia, Queensland, Victoria, India, Japan, Hawaii, Great Britain and America—all are represented by standards marked with devices and embellished by workmanship which stamp them as the product of the lands they claim. They are the flags and banners destined for the World's Convention at Toronto.

Enough For Every One. We have all heard of the old woman who said, the first time she had seen the sea: "What a comfort it is to see something of which there is enough for every one."

What a comfort it is to think that in the ocean of God's forgiving love there is enough salvation for every one—that not this or that favorite, but whoever, ever will, may come and take the water of life freely. There is no difficulty on God's side, but on ours a whole ocean of unbelief and unwillings.

What Talmage Says. Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage eagerly observes that "a newspaper whose columns overflow with advertisements of business men has more influence in attracting attention to and building up a city or town than any other agency that can be employed. People go where there is business. Capital and labor will locate where there is an enterprising community. No power on earth is so strong to build up a town as a newspaper well patronized, and its power should be appreciated.

A WOMAN'S TRIUMPH. She Managed Her Work So Well That It Equaled the Efforts Of Professionals.

While it is well known that any woman of intelligence can do as good work as the Diamond Dyes, and at less than half the cost charged by professional dyers in city steam dye-houses, yet there may be some people who doubt the statement. The following extracts from a letter written by Mrs. J. Gardner, of Owen Sound, Ont., proves that Diamond Dyes are unequalled:

"There was a man in our town going from house to house looking for orders for dyeing clothes for the dyeing of all kinds of garments and clothes. I had just taken off the line some goods that I had dyed with Diamond Dyes, and showed him that I could do as good work as any dye house. He honestly admitted that I was right about my work with Diamond Dyes."

"Having a large family I use Diamond Dyes to economize. I have always had the best of success with your dyes, and would say that I am more than delighted with your colors for dyeing cotton."

"That man has a fine head for figures," said Crimsonbeak as an Italian passed by carrying a lot of images on his head.

He (bitterly): "Have you the heart to refuse me?" She: "No. I've given it to another man."

Minards Liniment is the best. "When did she first seem to become disatisfied with your present?" "When she accidentally ran across the price mark."

"Thomas told the mass-meeting that he was a self-made man." "Very noble of him to take the whole blame on himself, wasn't it?"

Minards Liniment Cures Colds, &c. Agent the state of political affairs some little time back, an Irishman said that it was enough to make a man commit suicide or perish in the attempt."
