ROYAL YEAST CAKES

A QUEEN UNCROWNED

THE STORY IN THE LONE INN.

CHAPTER XIII

"Come away," said Grizzle. "I hope you are satisfied with your reception."

"Perfectly! Good-night, Orrie." Orrie's reply to this piece of politeness was an angry scowl, as she still sat threateningly holding the pillow, until the door closed after them.

"She does look like the De Veres," said the captain.

"And is blessed with her mother's dove-like temper, and her maternal grandparents' gentleness. Come back early to-morrow morning. Are you ready to go?"

"Yes; if I must go. But as I have to return here to-morrow, could you not accommodate me with a shake-down before the fire for this night?"

"No. I can do no such thing. I don't want you. There, be off!" "You hospitable old soul! Well, good-night!"

"Good-night," said the woman, in pretty much the same tone as if it were a curse sent after him; and then the door was bolted, and Grizzle Howlet was in and Nick Tempest was out, cramping back to the Mermaid, and musing intently on all he had heard that night.

CHAPTER XIV

The loud ringing of the breakfast bell was the first thing that awoke Captain Alfred Disbrowe on the morning of his departure. For hours after his parting with Jacquetta, he had paced up and down his room, too miserable and angry to go to bed, and it was only when the sky began to grow red in the east that he had

HER NERVES BETTER NOW

Received Much Benefit by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chatham, Ont.—"I started to get weak after my second child was born, and kept on getting worse until I could not do my own housework, and was so bad with my nerves that I was afraid to stay alone at any time. I had a girl working for me a whole year before I was able to do my washing again. Through a friend I learned of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took four bottles of it. I gave birth to a baby boy the 4th day of September, 1922. I am still doing my own work and washing. Of course, I don't feel well every day because I don't get my rest as the baby is so cross. But when I get my rest I feel fine. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and am going to keep on with it until cured. My nerves are a lot better since taking it. I can stay alone day or night and not be the least frightened. You can use this letter as a testimonial and I will answer letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. CHAS. CARSON, 27 Forsythe St., Chatham, Ont. Mrs. Carson is willing to write to anyone suffering from female trouble.

legs crushed to pieces that evening—poor fellow! She would have gone last night, I believe, only Lightning had lost a shoe."

With a sickening feeling of disappointment, Disbrowe arose and proceeded to arrange his disordered dress and brush his disheveled hair. So intense and bitter was the sensation, that it was some moments before he could trust himself to speak.

"Jack's a regular guardian angel to one-half these poor people," continued Frank, now, as ever, disposed to sing the praises of his favorite, and quite unconscious that every word of praise was like a dagger to the heart of his cousin. "Let her hear of an accident, even though it should be fifty miles off, and if she thought she could be of the least service, she would be up and off in a twinkling, in spite of wind and weather. I remember once, when the typhus fever was raging at Green Creek, and carrying off the people in scores, she established herself as nurse general, and scarcely took time to sleep or eat, but went from cottage to cottage, night and day. Uncle told her she was mad, and tried to prevail on her not to risk her life; but she wouldn't listen to him a moment. Her duty lay there, she said, and there she must be. For over four months, she never came to Fontelle, for fear of bringing the contagion; and I do believe she saved the lives of one-half the poor people there. Uncle gave her plenty of money, and, by George! if she didn't spend it!"

"And did she escape herself?" "Oh, no! she took it when almost everybody else was well; but she recovered again. Her hair all fell out, too, and it has never grown long since."

"And this is what I have lost," again thought Disbrowe, in bitterness of spirit. "This is the girl I have called heartless—this entrancing fairy, with the heart of a hero and an angel! Oh, Jacquetta! what have I done that I should lose you?"

"What is the matter?" said Frank, curiously. "Something more than a bad night's rest, I'll be bound! You look as if you had lost your best friend."

"So I have!" said Disbrowe, passionately. "Eh? what? Why, Cousin Alfred, is Lord Estreaclyffe dead?"

"Not as I know of, I hope not." "Then what else—I thought he was, by your saying that."

"Never mind, Frank; you are five years too young to understand what I mean. Heaven grant you never may understand it!"

Frank looked at him an instant with a peculiar smile, and then began to whistle, with piercing emphasis, the grand march in "Norma." Disbrowe, paused in his occupation, and looked at him a moment with a singular expression.

"You, too, Frank," he said, with a slight smile; "are you in the secret, too?"

"What secret?" said Frank, with a slight smile; "are you in the secret, too?"

"What secret?" said Frank, with a look of innocent unconsciousness. "Don't understand, Captain Disbrowe, I'm five years too young to know any secrets."

Captain Disbrowe returned to his toilet. "I forgot you were a Yankee, and consequently wide awake. Has Jacquetta"—his face flushed as he uttered her name—"told you anything?"

"No. What would she tell me? I don't understand you at all, Cousin Alfred."

Frank's look of resolute simplicity was refreshing to see. Disbrowe made an impatient gesture. "You understand well enough. Out with it!"

"Well, then, I know you're in love with our Jack," blurted out Master Frank, thrusting both hands in his pockets. "All of my own knowledge, too, if I am five years too young to know anything."

Evidently youth was a sore spot with Frank, like all boys ambitious to be thought men. Disbrowe's face grew crimson one moment and whiter than ever the next. He went on dressing without speaking a word, and Frank evidently possessed by some spirit of evil, continued, undauntedly: (To be continued.)

The Meteorite

Q.—What is a meteorite?

A.—Meteorites might be compared to butterflies which have fallen from air (their natural medium) into water (a denser medium) in which they remain, unable to escape; for in that manner, meteorites, aerolites, etc.—which are supposed to be small bodies travelling through interplanetary space and moving in different directions around the sun—meet with, or fall by accident, into the earth's atmosphere, and (unable to escape) sink through it, falling to the bottom (the earth). Once within the earth's atmosphere they are attracted, of course, to the earth by the power of gravitation; but some never reach it, or reach it only in the form of dust, being exploded because of the heat generated by means of their own passage through the air. Winston's Cumulative Encyclopaedia, in speaking of meteors—a name "now more usually applied to the phenomena known as aerolites, meteorites, meteoric stones, etc." says: "It is now generally believed that these phenomena are a hot the same nature, and are due to the existence of a great number of bodies, many of them very small indeed, revolving round the sun, and which, when they happen to pass through the earth's atmosphere, are heated by friction and become luminous. Under certain circumstances portions of these bodies reach the earth's surface, and these are known as meteorites or meteoric stones. These stones consist of known chemical elements. They have this peculiarity, that whereas native iron is extremely rare among terrestrial minerals it usually forms a component part, and frequently the whole, of meteorites, and is known as meteoric iron." The following statement has been made by Isabel M. Lewis, of the United States Naval Observatory, concerning the origin of meteorites: "Though there is some uncertainty as to the origin of meteoric stones or meteorites, they probably are the minute fragments of the primitive solar nebula that failed to be swept up originally in the formation of the larger members of the system, and which finally chanced to be trapped by the earth's atmosphere." "The Aghnighito meteorite brought to New York by Lieut. Peary from Cape York, Greenland, in 1897

ZR-3 Guards Against Possible Stowaways

FRIEDRICHSHAVEN. — (A.P.) — Every precaution against the possibility of stowaways attempting to get a free ride to America on the ZR-3 will be taken by the Zeppelin officials here prior to the start of the dirigible on her westward trip to Lakehurst, New Jersey.

An incident of a German fond of adventure who "beat" his way to Rome in a reparations ship, is still fresh in the minds of flying officers here. The German, Walter Cron, a Friedrichshafen banker, hid himself inside the LZ-120, which was turned over to Italy in 1919, several hours prior to the start of the flight southward, and was not discovered by the crew until the ship had passed well over Switzerland. Cron was turned over to the Italian police when the dirigible arrived at her destination.

For weeks prior to the hop-off of the ZR-3 for Lakehurst, the great hangar here in which the ship was built and housed has been guarded day and night, and during the hours of darkness numerous arc lights were kept burning outside the shed to prevent any unauthorized persons approaching without being seen. Admission to the hangar itself was by special card only.

To Be Given Heavy Mail to America. Friedrichshafen, Sept. 2. (A.P.)—German air post stamps for mail to be sent to the United States on the ZR-3 have been going like hot cakes here lately, the government post office department having given notice weeks ago that "it would be wise to do your Zeppelin mailing early."

Stamp collectors were hopeful that special stamps would be issued for the trip, but the department did not do so, advising customers to use the ordinary air post stamps. Letters cost one mark, 24 cents, and post cards 12 cents.

HUNDREDS KILLED IN FIGHTING.
SHANGHAI, Sept. 29. Hundreds of Chinese soldiers were killed and many others wounded this morning on the six mile front from Niansang to Mulu, when the armies of the rival military governors, fighting for possession of Shanghai, continued hostilities with impetuous intensity, according to a witness who returned this afternoon after traversing the shore from Niansang to Mulu west of Shanghai. Both sides were drenching the lines with shrapnel. Numerous relief stations behind the Niansang six mile front were filled with wounded, while scores of others were arriving on stretchers.

PREMIER HERRIOT'S REPLY TO THE CARDINALS.
PARIS, Sept. 29. Premier Herriot has drawn up a reply to the letter sent to him by six Cardinals of France in which they called his attention to the deep feeling aroused by his feelings towards the Church, especially with regard to suppression of the French Embassy to the Vatican, the introduction of education without religious teaching in Alsace Lorraine and strict application of existing laws to religious orders. The reply which was submitted by Premier to the Cabinet Council yesterday for its approval is couched in moderate terms, but takes sharp exception to arguments advanced by the Cardinals. "It is entirely impossible for me to admit," the letter says, "that measures elaborated by my Government can constitute—as you say—a grave menace to internal peace, justice and liberty." Under our administration all functionaries, clerics and others, have been permitted the fullest liberty in their religion. Moreover, should the Catholic faith in our territory be molested in any way we should interfere immediately and take energetic steps to ensure the full exercise of that faith. Indeed, freedom of religion is the foremost principle in the establishment of internal peace.

ALLEGED PIRATE PUT TO A GRUELING EXAMINATION.
BREST, France, Sept. 29. Max Jerome Phaff, German-American, charged with piracy on the high seas in connection with the looting last July of wharves from the French steamship Malheur, off the Canadian Coast, was subjected to 12 hours of grilling Saturday, by Captain Fourcort of the French Navy, who will act as the prosecution against Phaff before the Marine Tribunal. The examination was conducted with the strictest privacy in the presence of Phaff's attorney. Afterward Phaff's attorney reported that his client had repudiated the accusation of piracy but had given many interesting details concerning smuggling of liquor into the United States.

MECCA PROBABLY CAPTURED.
LONDON, Sept. 29. While the Moslem world is anxiously awaiting confirmation of the report that Mecca has been captured by Wahabis, the fanatical Mohammedan, Furitan reformers who held the Holy City for a few years at the beginning of the nineteenth century, and with little news reaching the outside world by way of rumor, it seems to suggest that the report is likely to be true. King Hussein who, during the Great War, made Mecca the capital of his new kingdom of Hedjaz, is reported by the Daily Chronicle Cairo Correspondent to be retreating with his scanty forces of Hashemites to Jeddah, the port of Mecca. The belief is held, according to this correspondent's despatches, that Hussein's allies have failed to attempt to recapture Taif, which Wahabis seized recently. Possession of Taif is of the greatest importance to Mecca because it is from there that the capital receives most of its food-stuffs. The tribes between Mecca and Taif are stated to have refused to help Hussein whose safety, according to current reports, is in danger.

A $235,000,000 Bonfire
United States plans to set fire to 218 woodsheds that were constructed during the rush days of the world war. The cost of them in the first place was $235,000,000. The only bid received for them was $262,000, and that figure depended on the salvage being worth the price. When the United States was carrying on this work there were two ideas—one, the need for supplying ships to take the place of those being sunk by German submarines, the other, that at the conclusion of the war United States, not Britain, would become the great seafaring and carrying nation of the world. The putting of the torch to 218 ships that cost the United States $235,000,000 is, as the London Advertiser says, the answer to the quest for the shipping supremacy of the world.—Morning Chronicle.

A Truly Magnificent Screen Play

"LITTLE OLD NEW YORK" SET THE FACE.

In "Little Old New York," which opened at the Nickel Theatre last night, Marion Davies, whose work in "When Knighthood Was in Flower" is remembered by everyone who saw that production, is called upon to act a role entirely different from anything in which she has previously been seen. Not only does she make a charming and graceful boy, but she acts with an unaffected naturalness and quiet pose.

Miss Davies brings to the role of Patricia O'Day, a wistful pathos and a sense of tender fun. Her portrayal in "Little Old New York" makes secure her title as one of the foremost screen players of the day.

The story concerns the arrival in New York in 1810 of Patricia O'Day and her father from Ireland. Her brother Pat died on the way over and her father insisted on her masquerading as her brother in order to inherit the fortune left by an uncle. Patricia falls in love with Larry DeLavan, step-son of the uncle, who believes he is going to inherit the fortune. Much of the comedy as well as the pathos of the picture grows out of her relations with Larry, who, until almost the end of the film, believes she is the youthful lad she pretends to be. The fight between Bully Boy Brewster and The Hoboken Terror is one of the funniest things ever screened and the scene in which "Pat" is seized by a mob of the thousand angry fight fans and dragged to the whipping post where she receives a lashing at the hands of one of the boxers, is spectacular in the extreme.

"Little Old New York" was received in St. John's last night with all the enthusiasm which has been accorded it in New York, London, Los Angeles and other places where it has been seen. It is something that every lover of the best in film entertainment should make certain of seeing. Miss Davies is most capably supported by Harrison Ford as Larry; by Courtenay Foote as Robert Fulton, inventor of the steamboat, the trial trip of which, up the Hudson, affords one of the thrills of the picture.

Laughs and More Laughs

Extraordinary Feature Set The Crowd In Rears At The Majestic.
"Second Youth," the screen adaptation of Allan Updegraff's novel of the same name, takes first honors as the funniest comedy shown this season. From start to finish the laughs are abundant and yesterday's audience was in a state bordering on hysteria throughout. There is Alfred Lunt, the best light comedian of the day; Walter Catlett, who, it is said, gave Harold Lloyd the idea for his present character; Herbert Corthell, the rotund veteran of musical farce; Lynn Fontanne, creator of "Dulcy" and many others. Mimi Palmer always beautiful to look upon, essays some comedy herself and proves adept at it.

Mimi portrays a young woman who is bound to have her own way no matter what happens. She doesn't like the double standard of morality and thinks if a man can sow his wild oats a girl should have a chance to do likewise. So she goes right out and flirts with a good looking silk salesman, invites him to dinner and then to her apartment. The young man, amazingly well played by Alfred Lunt, is not so simple as he seems. No man is, of course. Furthermore, he has been flirted with before. In fact, he is a sort of a Shelm with the reverse English. All the girls want him because he doesn't seem to want any of them.

So Mimi has a lot of competition. The silk salesman also makes a lot of enemies as the ladies enamoured with him don't like the idea. The fun is fast and furious throughout and every situation is taken advantage of by the marvelous collection of stage and screen humorists playing the various parts. See it to-night. Keep your eyes open for "Happiness," with the celebrated Laurette Taylor.

Transport is Civilisation

ARCHIBALD HURD SAYS THAT OUR SEA POWER, A GREAT NATIONAL ASSET, IS WOEFULLY NEGLECTED BY THE GOVERNMENT.

"Transport is civilisation. In our own case, as islanders, we have a peculiar responsibility. We have good ships, efficient management and expert crews, but steps must be taken to improve the efficiency of our ports."

—ARCHIBALD HURD, in Fortnightly Review.

OUR NEGLECTED ASSETS. Mr. Archibald Hurd calls attention to our "neglected national assets" in the Fortnightly Review.

"Another national asset which is being woefully neglected by the Government is our sea power," he says. "We are the most fortunate of peoples in that we live in an island, all the great centres of population having easy access to the cheapest of all means of transport, and possess in our coal measures a source of power which can be utilised to enable us to render sea transport at once cheaper and more efficient. Our shipping services constitute a national asset, the value of which is not adequately appreciated. The freights which shipping earns constitute one of our principal 'invisible exports,' enabling us, in association with the income derived from overseas investments, to balance our national accounts. The importance of shipping as a national asset is shown in the following statement:—

GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

"It is an axiom among all commercial men, irrespective of their political opinions, that the less the Government interferences with business the better for industry and for the nation generally. The outstanding lesson of the late war was that the Government cannot 'control' shipping or any other industry without injuring other related industries.

"Nothing was more clearly demonstrated by the war than the complexity of the factors which go to make up carrying power, and the danger of dealing singly with any one of them. The ships, the ports, the railway, the merchant's office, and the banker's counting-house are all," Mr. C. Ernest Fayle, in the official history of sea-borne commerce in the Great War, adds, 'cog-wheels in the one great machine, and a breakdown or lack of co-ordination at any point will clog the working of the whole.'

"The demand of shipowners, as well as the leaders of other industries, is to be let alone, but that appeal does not mean that the State has no duty towards industry. While abstaining from bureaucratic fussiness, it can do much to ensure that British shipping, as well as other industries, has fair play. Freedom of the seas is useless unless it embraces also freedom of the ports.

OUR VITAL SHIPPING

"Ministers and the nation generally need to be brought to a fuller realization of the extent to which their fortunes depend upon the prosperity of the shipping industry. Everyone is, directly or indirectly, concerned in the well-being of the British mercantile marine, which embraces about half the efficient steam and motor tonnage of the world. The tendency to rejoice when freights are low, with a resultant depression in the industry, injuring alike investors, managers, and officers and men, is based upon a misconception. Sir William Noble, speaking in Newcastle-on-Tyne, recently exposed this fallacy:—

"Whilst shipping in self-contained countries such as the U.S.A. is a luxury, with us—an island nation—requiring to import two-thirds of our food, it is vital. It should, therefore, need no emphasis to convince the public, the retail tradesmen, and the local merchant that they have nothing to gain by low freights and an impoverished shipping. We know, of course, that prosperity in transport services does not precede but follows the world development and expansion of trade, but in this maritime country, serving the world with its ships, and peculiarly in this portion of the country, so largely dependent on its shipbuilding, shipworking, and shipowning, the shipping industry is the real key industry, and is the first and surest index of the well-being of the people."

FREIGHTS AND COST OF LIVING.

"Anticipating the criticism that he was ignoring the influence of freights on the cost of living, Sir William Noble added:—

"It may be objected that I have overlooked the effect of freight rates upon the cost of living. The fact of the matter is, however, that to the consumer here the difference between a freight rate at which a ship can make a reasonable profit and that at which she makes a loss is infinitesimal. Take, for instance, grain and flour. One shilling per quarter increase on North Atlantic grain rates only represents one-third of one penny per stone of wheat. Five shillings per ton increase on flour is slightly over that fraction per stone—0.37d. to be exact. Ten shillings per ton on bacon means one-ninth of one penny per lb. in the retail price.

"We are bringing grain, flour, bacon, eggs, apples, and a variety of other foodstuffs; it requires a 3,000 miles ballast run and a 3,000 miles loaded run to do it; and we bring these commodities at a cost to the weekly domestic budget, so far as the ocean freight is concerned, of a matter of a few coppers for a family's needs."

OUR COASTING TRADE.

"As Sir Alfred Read recently reminded the Institution of Naval Architects, 'the coasting trade is in reality the mother of all shipping,' consisting of the regular trade loading at a fixed berth and sailing according service, and the tramp steamer which seeks its living by carrying principally bulk cargoes between any two points selected according to the conditions of trade.

"Sir Alfred Read, in championing coasting shipping, pleaded a cause which is essentially a national cause, since this country is completely surrounded with water and its fortunes depend, in large degree, on the extent to which it can use that means of cheap transport, costing only about one-thirtieth of that offered by the railways of such continental countries as the United States, France and Germany.

"One of the chief things to help a trade revival, and one which must of necessity play an important part, is cheap and efficient transport; to obtain this the coasting trade must be developed, for which the co-operation of the harbour and port authorities is required. Even to-day, with very few exceptions, the accommodation and facilities at our ports are inadequate and hopelessly out of date, modern appliances for the rapid handling of cargo being conspicuous by their absence.

"When the change took place from sailing-ships to steamships the inadequacy of the docks and appliances generally became apparent; at the present time a great change is taking place from steamships to motorships, and without doubt the internal combustion engine has many advantages which would make it suitable for coastal services.

£20,000,000 FOR PORTS.

"Sir Frederick Lewis, as chairman of a committee of the Chamber of Shipping which has inquired into the present facilities at our ports, constituting an important national asset, has since stated that at least £20,000,000, or probably a larger sum, is being spent on development. But there is evidently need for even greater expenditure."

A Gift You'll Enjoy

A delightful 10-day test

Try Her Way

The way millions now employ to fight film on teeth

Try the method which is bringing the prettier teeth you see. It is the modern method of teeth cleaning. Millions now employ it. The results are seen in every circle, in those whiter, cleaner teeth.

It means new beauty, new cleanliness, new charm. Let this test prove that to you.

Why teeth decay and discolor

You feel on teeth a viscous film. Much of it clings and stays. No ordinary tooth paste can effectively combat it. Food stains, etc., discolor it, so it forms dingy coats. That is why so many teeth are clouded. Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Very few escaped these troubles under old ways of tooth brushing. Just because they did not combat that film.

Protect the Enamel Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

Science has in late years found effective film combatants. One disintegrates the film at all stages of formation. One removes it without harmful scouring.

ABLE authorities have proved these methods effective. A new type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

Leading dentists the world over began to urge this method. Now careful people of some 50 nations employ it in their homes.

No one can doubt the results

The results are quick and convincing. And they are necessary. Pepsodent multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids. It multiplies the ptyalin in saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits on teeth. These combined results bring one quickly a new conception of what clean teeth mean.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

Then decide if your home should adopt this modern method. Cut out coupon now.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR CORNS.

Empire's Bonniest Baby Competition

The search for the Empire's Bonniest Baby, which the National Baby Week Council (117 Piccadilly, London, England) conducted in connection with Imperial Baby Week (July 23rd to 31st) at the British Empire Exhibition, proved to be a very great success. Many thousands of babies from all parts of the Empire were entered, and the Champion was discovered to be an Australian. The other first prize winners were found in Canada and in Newfoundland. Entries for the Competition were received from even the farthest parts of the Empire:—New Zealand, East Africa, South Africa, West Africa, Australia, Canada, India, Ceylon, Strait Settlements, Singapore, Bermuda, Borneo, Egypt, Palestine, France Gibraltar, Malta, British West Indies, British Guiana, Curacao, Newfoundland, Switzerland, Kenya Colony, Nigeria, British Army on the Rhine, as well as from the British Isles, entries came. In some parts of the Empire—British Isles, Australia, South Africa (Cape Province, Transvaal, Natal), Canada (Toronto, Edmonton), preliminary searches were conducted through the agency of newspapers. The Melbourne Herald, in conjunction with five other Australian newspapers, prosecuted the search in Australia; the Toronto Star, in Canada, and the Edmonton Journal in Alberta. In South Africa the Transvaal was covered by the Sunday Times Syndicate, the Cape Province by the Cape Times, and Natal by the Woman's Weekly; while in Great Britain the Daily Sketch undertook to find the bonniest British baby. In each of these Sub-Competitions the judging was conducted according to the lines which the National Baby Week Council adopted in making its final selections, and in this way, as far as possible, uniformity in judging was obtained. Many entries from Overseas came direct to the Council.

Entry was by means of photographs showing the competitor unclothed. Each photograph had to be accompanied by a score sheet on which were asked the questions regarding the child's physical condition, age, height, weight, number of teeth, and when the baby first sat up, stood up, and walked without support, method of feeding (natural or artificial). In addition, the judges required to know whether the baby had had teething during the night and whether it had any certain specified defects or had suffered from any illnesses. Each score sheet had to be signed by the parent or other responsible guardian, and by the medical practitioner attending the child. Thus it will be seen that the competition was largely a "health" competition.

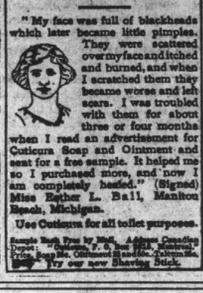

On the final Judging Committees were medical experts, men and women specially qualified in the examination of children; two well known artists—Sir William Orpen, R.A., and Mr. Steven Spurrler, R.O.I.; noted Child Welfare workers—Miss J. Halford, Hon. Secretary of the National League for Health, Maternity and Child Welfare; the Countess of Rothes, member of the Executive Committee of the National Baby Week Council; Lady Nott-Bower, Hon. Secretary of the National Baby Week Council; Mrs. Jean Muldrew of the Canadian Immigration and Colonization Dept. On the medical side there were, in addition, representatives of various parts of the Empire Overseas.

The competitors were divided into three age classes:—3 months to 9 months, 9 months to 2 years, and 2 years to 5 years. A complete list of the 18 prize winners and the announcement of a Consolation prize to triplets is given on the attached list.

PRIZES.
 The Champion Baby, Mary Patricia Wilson, of Australia, received £200; each of the first prize winners in the other two classes, £100, and the remaining 15 on the prize-winner list each received £20. In addition to these money prizes, Messrs. Woodward, Ltd., presented each of the 18 prize winners with a silver porringer and spoon, and Messrs. Milkal, Ltd., gave a silver tea service to the mother of the Champion Baby, British Isles triplets, Sheila, Patrick and Denis Girtton, received a Consolation prize, a milkley Safety Pram. These prizes were presented by Her Grace the Duchess of Norfolk at a grand Presentation Ceremony arranged by the National Baby Week Council, at the British Empire Exhibition on July 21.

CAN YOU JUDGE BABIES?
 So great has the interest been in this search for the Empire's Bonniest Baby that the National Baby Week Council has published the photographs of the 18 prize winners in book form. Each photograph is accompanied by some details regarding the child's physical condition. People are invited to place these 18 in order of merit, the first prize winner in each case being indicated. There is no entrance fee for this new competition. The National Baby Week Council offers prizes—£50, £25, £10, and ten prizes of £1, for placing these babies in order of merit, the prizes to go to those competitors whose arrangement most closely corresponds with that of the judges, the judges' decision being placed under lock and key at the National Baby Week Council's bankers, not to be opened till November 1st.

TROUBLED WITH ITCHY PIMPLES Scattered Over Face. Cuticura Healed.

"My face was full of blackheads which later became little pimples. They were scattered over my face and neck and burned, and when I scratched them they became worse and left scars. I was troubled with them for about three or four months when I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. It helped me so I purchased more, and now I am completely healed." (Signed) Miss Esther L. Ball, Manitoa, Michigan.

FAILURE.
 "Were you a failure to-day?"
 I heard a voice ask,
 And I hurried to say:
 "I completed my task."

"Not enough, not enough!"
 Said the voice speaking low,
 "You were overly rough
 With a boy that I know."

"Your work you performed
 In a suitable way,
 But you raved and you stormed
 At a youngster to-day."

"You were cruelly curt,
 And a girl hung her head,
 And she went away hurt
 By the things that you said."

"Did it enter your mind
 When they blundered and feh
 That you could have been kind
 And succeeded as well?"

"The day brought its gain,
 And the task is complete,
 But must you give pain
 To make victory sweet?"

"And what do you say
 And the girl now declare?
 Do she speak with joy
 Or pronounce you unfair?"

"You rot, as you say,
 But what of to-day?
 Is it free from regret?"

"You call it 'success,'
 But now what of those two?
 Do they think more or less
 Of a fellow like you?"

"Bugler" Dunne

JUSTICES SPOOFED BY BOGUS V.C.
 "Hero" Stripped Of Glory Goes To Prison.

Shorn of his false glory, a self-styled hero was sent to prison at Oxford for an impudent imposture. Calling himself "Bugler Dunne, V.C." of Colenso fame, he applied to the magistrates the other day for leave to perform in the streets. He explained that he was known as the "Human Ostrich," on account of his ability to swallow watches, glass, coins, and other articles. The Mayor shook "Dunne" heartily by the hand, and granted the permission, remarking that the magistrates felt they must "stretch a point." The supposed hero's second appearance in court was under very different circumstances. In the name of Hardy Percy Dunne he was charged with falsely representing himself to be a person entitled to wear the Victoria Cross. The chief constable explained that enquiries had been made regarding a letter produced by Dunne which was signed by the Governor of the Tower of London, and gave him permission as "Bugler Dunne" to perform on the tower. The letter was genuine, but it was ascertained that the Governor of the Tower had not seen applicant's military papers. The real Bugler Dunne was at present a steward on a ship in the Indian Ocean. When asked where his V.C. was, accused replied that it was on a waiting list which he pawned, while his papers were in the hands of the Governor. It was on the strength of this statement that permission was given to him to perform in the streets of Oxford. The constable who arrested Dunne asked the man if he was a V.C., and he admitted he was not. On being questioned about the silver bugle presented by Queen Victoria to the real Bugler Dunne, accused replied that it was in the palace in Hyde Park. When told that there was no palace there, he stated he meant Victoria Park. "Dunne, it was added, performed in Oxford 14 months ago, and then showed a placard saying he was Bugler Dunne, V.C. of the Dublin Fusiliers. Mayor: Were you ever in the Dublin Fusiliers?—Accused: yes.—For how long?—About a month. Prisoner now admitted he had no right to claim that he was the holder of the V.C., and remarked, "I am sorry I had to tell lies to get an honest living."—He was sentenced to a month's hard labour.

$12,000 Daily Collected From Issuing Passports

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—(A.P.)—The passport business has been a flourishing one for Uncle Sam this summer. It has strengthened the claim of attaches of the Division of Passport Control of the State Department that theirs is the one unit of the department that more than pays for itself. During the months of May, June and July, passport applications averaged between 1,300 and 1,400 a day. Figures for August are not yet complete.

The great majority of the passports are written in Washington, only a few emergency ones being issued in the field. The abnormal rush this year was occasioned by certain conventions abroad, and the competition among steamship lines to secure the traffic by offering lower passage rates. Belgium, Switzerland and Holland, require visas for which a charge of $10 is made, and must be obtained by the visitor before entering the country. The Irish Free State has been the latest country to fall in line and asks the customary "ten spot" from sojourners in the Emerald Isle. Uncle Sam started charging a $10 fee for issuing passports in July, 1920. Although no passport or visa is officially required for Americans traveling to Mexico, Canada or Cuba, the State Department gets numerous applications for them, as a protection. A Useful Safeguard and Other Matters

Innovations are not always welcomed, but the plan of painting a broad white line in the middle of the road round corners and bends, which has for its object the keeping of motorists on their proper side, and discouraging reckless passing, is one to recommend as a simple method of reminding all and sundry what they should do to safeguard themselves and other road users.

Captain of Schooner Una Lost Overboard

VESSEL CAUGHT IN STORM OF THURSDAY LAST.

The two topmast schooner Una, registered at Guysborough, N.S., which was towed into port on Sunday night reports the loss of her captain, Nathaniel LeMoine who was washed overboard before dawn on Wednesday last. Captain LeMoine, native of Burgoyne was captain of the schooner. An adopted son H. LeMoine, is one of the crew. Other members are Benj. Cox, mate and Thos. Sticking, cook; the former is a native of Burnt Island but resident of Sydney. According to the story told a Telegram reporter by the mate the Una left here September 4th for Trinity Bay to load lumber for Vardy & Sons. No freight being secured the vessel left to return to St. John's on Tuesday, September 23rd. Crewing Baccalieu Tickle it was found necessary to take a reef in the mainsail. It was dark and raining. All were engaged at the work and the only illumination that anyone had that something was amiss was a cry of help from the captain. An attempt was made to get out the small boat but by the time everything was in readiness for launching, the vessel had proceeded so far from where the captain had gone overboard that it was useless to make further effort. Endeavouring to reach St. John's the vessel was driven about 50 miles to sea, and during the gale of Thursday night the mainsail was lost. The main boom also broke off and the job was torn in shreds. The crew of three men had a difficult time working the vessel back to land with the remaining canvas. She reached in Freshwater Bay on Sunday evening and was picked up by the tug Hugh D. Walsh and towed to port. Captain LeMoine was about 50 years old. His wife predeceased him some years ago, and it is understood that all his property goes to his adopted son. The Una has been engaged in freighting during the past summer, made a trip to St. Pierre and also brought cargoes of coal from here to Heart's Content and Bay Roberts. The vessel is lying in the stream and meanwhile the authorities are making investigations.

Riggers for Northern Construction Company

Amongst the passengers who went out by the Humber special yesterday were Captains D. Robinson, J. Turner, E. Whiteway, and Mates E. Spagnars and A. Seaward, who have accepted positions as Riggers to the Northern Construction Company at Corner Brook. The above master mariners were secured by the local employment bureau. The wage is said to be $160 per month and found.

A Good Suggestion

A very good suggestion was made by a prominent gentleman on Water Street this morning in connection with the salmon "caught" at Corner Brook referred to in yesterday's issue. Knowing that salmon are numerous there it was suggested that a moving picture be taken netting the salmon, and expose the catch above the surface for the purpose of showing their immense size. Then he suggests that they should be netted and photographs of the scene taken to be used for advertising our salmon pools.

The Governor's Visit to Twillingate

His Excellency Sir William Lamond Allardyce and Lady Allardyce arrived at Twillingate on an official visit on Friday, 19th inst., by H.M.S. Wistaria. The morning was rather cloudy with easterly wind and sea running, and many wondered if the ship would be able to leave Fogo. However, at 11 a.m. she anchored and Magistrate Miffen went on board. At 11.30 his Excellency the Governor, Lady Allardyce, Capt. Goodfellow, Private Secretary, and Capt. Johnston commanding H.M.S. Wistaria landed at the Coastal Wharf, where they were met by Magistrate and Mrs. Miffen and were introduced to members of the Committee. A large number of citizens were present at the wharf to witness the landing. Some hundreds of school children marshalled under Mr. Hartnett, Principal of St. Peter's High School, then proceeded to Alexandra Hall followed by his Excellency and party in autos. On returning to the Hall, his Excellency and Lady Allardyce were introduced to the public by Magistrate Miffen. An address of welcome from the citizens was presented by T. G. W. Ashbourne, Secretary of the Committee, and one from the school children by Miss Frank Gilbert. Later Miss Marguerite Winsor presented a bouquet to Lady Allardyce. His Excellency thanked the citizens and the children for the address and the cordial welcome, and said he was glad to see so many children present, as both he and Lady Allardyce were very fond of them.

Wedding Bells

WHELAN—MOAKLER.
At St. Teresa's Church, Brooklyn, N.Y., on Sunday, Sept. 14th, in the presence of a large gathering of friends, a very pretty wedding ceremony was performed; the principals being Miss Margaret Whelan, daughter of the late Alice and Michael Whelan and Mr. A. J. Moakler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Moakler, of this city. The bride, who was attended by Miss Mae Power, formerly of St. John's, was attired in a gown of white crepe romane with wreath of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of yellow tea roses. The duties of best man were ably performed by Mr. M. Wetters of Brooklyn. A reception was tendered at the residence of Mrs. Anna Canning, St. Francis Place, where the toast of the bride and groom was enthusiastically honored, congratulatory speeches being made by Dr. L. P. Conway; Messrs. A. F. Murray and H. J. Power. The bride and groom left at midnight for the Marlborough Bismark Hotel, Atlantic City, where the honeymoon will be spent. Mr. and Mrs. Moakler will leave for their future home, Caribou Terrace, Circular Rd., St. John's, on the Silvia, leaving New York September 29th.

Home Massage

HOW TO BEAUTIFY YOUR FACE, NECK AND ARMS.
Soap and water washing is of little use in cleansing the delicate skin of the face, neck and arms. And skin-cleansing is the first step in the preservation or attainment of beauty. This is the approved method of skin-cleansing, and the first massage will show how ineffectual ordinary washing is. Before retiring, massage the face, neck and arms gently but thoroughly with Pond's Cold Cream, using the tips of the fingers. Then wipe off the surplus cream with a soft towel, and notice how much dirt has been removed—not from the surface of the skin; but out of the pores. Continuous repetition of this treatment clears the skin, gives it a smoother texture and a more even colour, lifts up hollows and lines, and dispenses roughness and dryness. Beauty, protect and refresh your complexion by day with Pond's Vanishing Cream; no wind can then roughen the skin, no sun can freckle or reddens it.

This Company Has Pioneered

FOR FORTY-TWO YEARS.
Those who give their time to legislating against big business in the interest, as they say, of the "common people," assume that all concerns which have a real or seeming monopoly are careless in their service they render, unprogressive in method, and uninterested in reducing costs for the benefit of their customers. The New York Edison Company, which enjoys a perpetual franchise for supplying the City of New York with electricity, cannot be so classified.

"While we have no competition from other electric lighting companies," says an officer of the company in Forbes Magazine (N.Y.) "there is always potential competition from the larger consumers. There is nothing to keep them from installing power plants and making their own current instead of buying it from us. To keep their business we have to give more dependable service at a lower rate than they could get from their own plants."

"More than 99 per cent. of all buildings in the city rely upon our service exclusively."
The Edison company feels that inability to furnish service promptly to new customers would greatly impair its goodwill. For that reason it plans its new construction so as to keep an actual reserve capacity of about 150,000 kilowatts. It has never had to delay rendering service to a customer, no matter how large or how small.

During the past four years an average of nearly $14,000,000 a year has been expended for new equipment and to extend its service. During the same period it has annually retired from service an average of $1,600,000 worth of equipment because it was not up to modern standards of efficiency. Probably no other lighting company is so quick to replace serviceable old equipment with new equipment which tests have shown to be better than the old.

The company makes great efforts to deserve the goodwill of every one with whom it deals. Its policy, as stated by President Nicholas F. Brady, is:

"The courtesy and attention which an employee gives to every customer, no matter how small, must be at least as great as that which he would render to a director of the company. This rule is indispensable for any concern which considers, as we do, that favorable public opinion is our greatest asset."

"Whenever the King and Queen attend the Goodwood races, they are the guests of the Duke of Richmond at Goodwood House, the Duke's private residence.

The State apartments, which the King and Queen always use, are on the ground floor. The King's bedroom is furnished throughout in old oak. The bed is a massive "four poster" of ancient design and execution, and the mantelpiece is a magnificent specimen of oak carving, the author of which is now unknown.

The fireplace is made of wrought iron taken from the Sussex mines in the days when this was one of the principal iron-producing counties in England. The design of the fireplace is composed of the arms of the Dukes of Richmond.

The great "Tapestry Room" is used as the Queen's private sitting-room. The walls are covered with tapestries of rare design and workmanship, and will bear comparison with the specimens of this work either at Windsor Castle or at Hampton Court.

Perhaps the chief feature of Goodwood House is the wonderful dining-room. It is built in the Egyptian style throughout in marble and bronze. An inscription in hieroglyphics is sculptured over the handsome mantelpiece, and the ornaments of the room are carried out in porphyry. The room was the work of a French soldier who served in Egypt under Napoleon.

A treasure that attracts much attention from all who stay at Goodwood House is the breakfast service that was used by Napoleon on the morning of Waterloo.

Do the Dead Protect Those Left Behind
After reading an account of how the spirits of dead people had helped their loved ones by guiding their steps or protecting them in time of trouble, A. M. writes to a London paper as follows:

Such an experience has actually befallen me, and the circumstances, as I am sure you will agree, are most remarkable. About three years ago my husband, to whom I had been married three years, died after a prolonged illness. We had loved one another deeply and had been very happy. Before the end he wrote a long letter to me which I was not to open until after his death. In that letter he declared his last wish to be that I should not go

Labradorite

Always we have bridged ourselves on the quality of our Labradorite and refused to place on sale stones that did not do credit to the peculiar beauty that is its chief charm. We have now received the first samples of our new stock and they fulfil in every way our ideas of what Labradorite should really be like when made into jewellery.

Specially selected and extra well polished stones made into an assortment of Pendants—Bean, Oval and Square shape are the chief items in our new selection.

into mourning, and that if ever I met anyone who, as he put it, was worthy of my love and devotion, I was to have no hesitation in marrying. And he added: "If it is possible for me, or my spirit, to help you, I will do so."

Although many people criticised my action, I refused to go into mourning, and while my sorrow at first was very deep, I seemed to find comfort from a source which I could not discover.

It was as if a secret influence was at work healing the wound at my heart. Time passed and laughter came to my lips again. I mixed with people I liked, made new friends, and wore pretty clothes. I was regaining my interest in life, yet the memory of my husband was still with me. When I thought of him, I knew that he would be glad if he could know I had buried my grief.

Then came the first real problem of my widowhood. I met, and took a liking to, a wealthy business man, a friend of my late husband's family. He proposed to me, and when my husband's relatives learned of this they said that if I wished to marry again I could not choose more wisely.

Although he was nearly twenty years older than I, we became engaged. When I told him of my decision a vague uneasiness overcame

CHARLES HUTTON,
THE HOME OF MUSIC.

As I began the letter—which was addressed to my fiancé—a great joy seemed to well into my soul and I felt that some protecting influence was near me. Suddenly it dawned upon me—it was my husband! I wrote the letter, but the words hardly seemed to be mine. At any rate, the purport of the letter was that I had decided it would be better if the engagement was broken off.

The rest of the narrative may be told in a few words. Three weeks later, while on a holiday, I met a man of my own age with whom I fell in love. We were married within a fortnight and our life together has since been an idyll of happiness.

That was nearly a year ago, and the more I think over the matter the more I feel convinced that the spirit of my dead husband came to me and prompted me to break off my first engagement, knowing as he did that a man in every way "worthy of my love" was waiting for me. Nothing can make me believe otherwise.

Let the Bolsheviks Stew
Labour Denunciation of the Surrender.
Mr. Thomas W. Casey, ex-Labour M.P. for the Attercliffe division of Sheffield and general secretary of the National Winding and General Engineers' Society, stated to a Daily Mail reporter recently: The treaty between the British and Soviet Governments, so far as we are now informed, is clearly more or less a fake. The Soviet Government must be compelled not only to acknowledge but also honorably to discharge its debts, especially those owing to our own people. Failing this, I certainly hope Parliament will not agree to back any Russian loan.

Moreover, propaganda now going on with the avowed object of undermining the British Constitution and of destroying our democratic form of government should be made to cease before we recognize the Soviet Government.

Our Own People First.
This treaty is all give and no take. We should consider the claims of our own people before those of a Government which is doing its best to create such conditions in this country as, by its own short-sightedness and stupidity, it has created in Russia. The Soviet Government should be allowed to stew in its own juice until it comes more to its senses and recognizes its obligations.

Further, I believe that if undue haste is made to place Germany on her feet without recognizing our own difficulties industrial conditions here will become even worse than they are. For us to back the proposed loan to Germany would undoubtedly mean keener competition, and prices would be much further reduced below our own cost of production. The possibilities are, therefore, that a trade revival here will be delayed, with the distinct danger of the basis of unemployment in this country being widened.—Daily Mail.

A FASHION FOR BOYS.

There are fashions in a great many things besides clothes, and other material possessions.

Fashions in habits, for instance, and like the fashions in clothes some are beautiful and some are unbeautiful, some are good and some are bad.

When I was a small girl it was almost unknown to any of the boys in our crowd, the comfortable middle class, to work during their summer vacations. I cannot recall a single one who did. They all played tennis and roquet, rode their bicycles to the nearest swimming place (that was before the days when people went to each and country for the whole summer), sat on porches and got prettily bored before the end of the summer.

Only the Widow's Son.

It was only the sons of widowed others or of very poor families who worked in their summer vacations in those days.

To-day it seems to me that half the boys I know put in at least part of their summer earning money for their leisure hours.

"Did I tell you about Junior?" one other, the wife of a successful doctor, writes me, "he has a job taking care of the news stand on the little island steamer, and he is sticking to it like a tramp although the hours are terrific, 12 hours a day for seven days a week. But he is out-of-doors and it isn't hard work so I know it stands for the florist and cutting lawns, to staking in church. Last summer he spent the summer as a caddy at a big summer hotel where the caddies had their own camp and their own golf tournament, and where he doubtless had a far better time than the boys who used to hang around home. And he made a goodly sum of money besides. When this youngster was 16 he already had $1,000 in the bank toward his college course. Some gifts were included in that, but the bulk of it he had earned himself.

I hardly need to speak of the boy in whose simplicity and unspoiledness, when his father rose to the presidency, we all felt a sort of proprietary pride, the boy whose tragic taking off shocked us and sickened us as if it had been our own friend's son. We all know what a splendid example he set the boys of the nation in his willingness to work at even the humblest of labor.

What Sort of Steel Is He?

It is an axiom and a bromidium to say that the boy who has earned the money for his college or his high school course will appreciate it the more. But there are some axioms that it does no harm to repeat.

For my own part, though I think it is a splendid thing for a boy or girl to go to college, I doubt if it is worthwhile for the family in moderate circumstances to make the sacrifices they so often do to send him unless he is willing to make his contribution by earning some of the money himself. You cannot put a finer temper on steel unless it has the right quality to begin with. It seems doubtful to me if the boy or girl who wasn't willing to help would have the right stuff in him to expend that extra time and money upon.

BE CAUTIOUS.

If you've money to invest—rubles in the old oak chest—see your banker, that is best; he is wise; he is on to all the men who deal in dreams, to the crooks who work in teams, gold-brick guys. When the schemes of fact is widely known that you have an extra bone, all the fakers fairly groan for that tin; they will tug you when you walk, they will bore you with their talk, they will never halt nor balk, till they win. They will mutter, shark to shark. "Here's another easy mark; it will be a pleasant lark, feeding him; let us meet him at his gate, handing him the hot air straight, let us there impersonate Sunny Jim." You may think you're pretty keen, but they're sharper still, I ween; garnering the good long green is their trade; they are men of winning smiles, they are men of many files, and they heap their loot in piles, with a spade. And they love to see a gent who is boasting in his tent. "None can trim me for a cent, nor defraud;" on their mettle they are placed and they'd feel themselves disgraced if they didn't get, in haste, that man's wad. When you have a little roll, to the village banker stroll; let him counsel and control, mark his rede; he is wise to all the snares of the fakers in their liars with their phony stocks and shares gone to seed.

Household Notes.

Melon seeds can be saved, dried and stored in pasteboard cartons for the birds.
Meat loaf is nice served hot with stuffed potatoes and broiled, sliced tomatoes.
Try sweetening bran muffins with molasses. Use twice as much flour as molasses.

Light furs can be cleaned with slightly heated cornmeal. Shake and brush well.
Place a frozen peach or pear in the center of each individual serving of fruit salad.
Lima beans are less apt to boil over if a small lump of butter is added to them.

Laurentic's Gold

Startling Discovery at End of Task—Greatest Salvage Feat On Record. Thanks to a chance discovery, practically all the gold and silver in the wreck of the White Star liner Laurentic, which was torpedoed off Lough Swilly, in 1917, has been recovered, and the conclusion of the greatest salvage feat on record is in sight. The Laurentic, when she was torpedoed, carried with her to the bottom of the Atlantic bottom to the value of £7,000,000, to recover which divers have been at work on the wreck since 1918. When operations were about to be suspended, a startling discovery was made. It had been supposed that there were only a dozen gold bars left in the wreck, and these would not be worth the cost of another season's work. It was therefore decided to break up H.M. salvage ship Racer, an old wooden gunboat, which before the war was used for the training of cadets. But at the eleventh hour a further block of 200 gold bars was discovered in the fore part of the Laurentic. Each gold bar weighs not less than 14 lb., and not more than 28 lb., and is worth from £1,400 to £2,000, according to the standard of gold. In the case of these 200 gold bars, they were worth about £250,000. The theory is that the bullion chamber could not contain the whole consignment of gold for American bankers, and the surplus was stowed forward. Early this summer the Racer left Portsmouth for the Irish coast. All the gold has been recovered except a few bars, and the divers

Cost of Living Shows Decrease

The cost of living in France during July showed a further decrease, according to the official index number for retail prices in Paris of 13 essential articles, i.e. bread, meat, lard, butter, eggs, milk, cheese, potatoes, beans, sugar, oil, kerosene and methylated spirits. This general index number, according to advices received by the Bankers Trust Company of New York from its French Information Service, fell from 370 in June to 360 in July. The fluctuations since the beginning of the year have been as follows:
Cost of Living in France, Year 1924.
January 370
February 378
March 392
April 380
May 370
June 370
July 360
The decrease of 10 points between June and July is attributed by the French Government Statistical office in large part to the fall in price of potatoes.

ADVERTISE IN THE EVENING TELEGRAM.

"One Great Slum"

Terrible Picture of Life in Russia—Belief of Terror Still in Sovietland.

"Red Russia is to-day a great slum, a running sore, a great beast half starved, half mad, on its back and spine." Such is a terrible picture of Russia painted by Miss Fanny Hurst, the distinguished American novelist who has completed a tour through the country. Her conclusions on the subject of Russia are all the more startling in view of the fact that Miss Hurst for years has been an avowed Marxist and an enthusiastic defender of the Communist revolution. Two months ago she left with her husband for a trip to Leningrad, formerly Petrograd, Moscow, and the smaller cities of the one-time Muscovite Empire. She has sat for New York sadder and wiser and, according to her own confession, "ready to climb down from the soap-box." It is still a reign of terror in Russia, stated Miss Hurst. Trotsky seems to be a man with the white light of inspiration. But he is the only one who has it. The tyranny of the peasant instead of the Tsar controls the people. In everyone's face you see nothing but fear—overwhelming fear. Russia is being terrified by a phantom army—the secret service. No two people dare to talk together against the Communist Government. There is always the terrible suspicion in the minds of both that the other is a spy for the service. You are invited to tea and the hostess dare not put a silver sugar bowl on the table. The secret service may come and ask you why you have such a valuable piece, where it came from and what you propose to do with it. I am so glad to get out of Russia that

I could kiss the Cobblestones. I was even happy to get back to Berlin which I have always hated. Red, once Miss Hurst's favourite color, will not be the predominating shade of her autumn wardrobe, she declared. Not that the Russian Government didn't extend every courtesy to us, the authors hastened to explain. We were taken through vocational training schools, received by officials and permitted to travel not only through Leningrad and Moscow, but through many of the smaller cities. The Government put its best foot forward, as our Government does before visitors. But everywhere it was the same. Poverty among the bourgeoisie and professional classes, squalor and filth everywhere. Russia, after ten years is still chaos. Only slow evolution or several more reigns of terror will change conditions, in Miss Hurst's opinion. Order and prosperity cannot result while the Government is in the hands of ignorant peasants who refuse to give the educated classes a place in politics, she added. It is as though in New York the people from the slums had moved into Park-avenue, the wealthy residential quarter, to rule the old residents. Suppose they hung clothes-lines from their front windows and put coal in the bath-tubs and never bothered to repair the great even when great holes had been gouged. That is what they have done to beautiful Leningrad and Moscow since the war. The great railroad cemeteries of Russia, where miles of freight cars lie rotting, indicate present industrial conditions in the old Slav Empire, according to Miss Hurst. Yet the railroad service itself she described as not bad. The property of the royalists has merely been grabbed by the people least fitted to own it. And when I think that this Red terror may spread to Germany—may even get a footing in my own United States—well I know I should prefer to die before that day came.

Not that the Russian Government didn't extend every courtesy to us, the authors hastened to explain. We were taken through vocational training schools, received by officials and permitted to travel not only through Leningrad and Moscow, but through many of the smaller cities. The Government put its best foot forward, as our Government does before visitors. But everywhere it was the same. Poverty among the bourgeoisie and professional classes, squalor and filth everywhere. Russia, after ten years is still chaos. Only slow evolution or several more reigns of terror will change conditions, in Miss Hurst's opinion. Order and prosperity cannot result while the Government is in the hands of ignorant peasants who refuse to give the educated classes a place in politics, she added. It is as though in New York the people from the slums had moved into Park-avenue, the wealthy residential quarter, to rule the old residents. Suppose they hung clothes-lines from their front windows and put coal in the bath-tubs and never bothered to repair the great even when great holes had been gouged. That is what they have done to beautiful Leningrad and Moscow since the war. The great railroad cemeteries of Russia, where miles of freight cars lie rotting, indicate present industrial conditions in the old Slav Empire, according to Miss Hurst. Yet the railroad service itself she described as not bad. The property of the royalists has merely been grabbed by the people least fitted to own it. And when I think that this Red terror may spread to Germany—may even get a footing in my own United States—well I know I should prefer to die before that day came.

I could kiss the Cobblestones. I was even happy to get back to Berlin which I have always hated. Red, once Miss Hurst's favourite color, will not be the predominating shade of her autumn wardrobe, she declared. Notorious Resort

IS CONVERTED INTO METHODIST CHURCH.

DURANGO, Colo., Sept. 24.—(A.P.)—The old Greek saying "out of bad wood good smoke sometimes comes" was applied here when a "community tabernacle" and its parsonage were built out of timbers and materials taken from a once notorious gambling resort and dance hall and from an erstwhile brewery.

The tabernacle, built by the Free Methodist Church, was recently dedicated. Its altar rail was made out of part of the bar against which the lumberjacks, miners, cowpunchers, Mexicans and gamblers of 40 years ago used to lean. The bar's foot-rail was converted into the hand-rail of the steps leading into the church. A Bible now rests on the polished walnut where the liquor of the early days was placed, for the top of the bar has become the pulpit. The altar was constructed from parts of the bar.

The church rests on a foundation of stone, heavy timbers and iron beams taken from both the dance hall and the brewery. The window sills and ledges were made from the heavy oak bottoms of huge beer vats. The building occupies the site for the former brewery. It is situated at the foot of a bluff and is overlooked by the parsonage of the presiding elder of the district. The parsonage once was the office of the brewery and has been made into a modern cottage. It is planned to terrace the bluff and to build winding stairs from the elder's home to the house of worship, using as a hand-rail a coil formerly utilized in making beer.

The two steps that lead to the entrance of the tabernacle were formed of timbers taken from the dance hall. One of the boards carries a bullet fired from a ".45," evidence of one of the many shooting scrapes that enlivened the old resort. The heavy timbers comprising the supporting columns and the roof beams were taken from the dance halls. The church seats seven hundred.

"I think," said Rev. F. F. Stewart, the presiding elder who conceived the idea, "that it was in the nature of an act of Providence that we were able to convert these places of disrepute into a house of worship."

London Begins to Cater to Moderate Americans

LONDON, Sept. 5.—(A.P.)—With the American "invasion" of London in full swing, the manager of a big Oxford Street store has estimated that the visitors from over the Atlantic were spending somewhat more than $500,000 a week in the English capital.

London shopkeepers have awakened to the fact that by far the greater number of Americans who come to England these days are people of moderate means, who watch their shillings and pence as carefully as does the frugal Briton. There are still visiting millionaires who amaze the English by the prodigality with which they scatter money about, but there is only one millionaire where there are a thousand people of relatively small income.

Hence Bond Street shopkeepers are finding it to their advantage to mark the prices on their window displays. This has stimulated trade with the visitors. Ten years ago Bond Street shopkeepers thought it beneath their dignity to have price labels in the windows.

The oddest purchase of the season seems to have been in the shop of an optician. An American, after some hesitation and fidgeting, selected a monocle and ribbon for half a guinea. When he made his choice he said he wanted half a dozen of them, and explained that he had four boys and a girl at home in Chicago who had all asked to bring them back an eye-glass from London "just like the dukes wear."

King George's Descent From King David

If there is any truth in legends, King George is directly descended from King David of Israel, one of whose descendants is reputed to have married Eochaid II, a Scots King, somewhere about 680 B.C.

Eschewing legends, however, and keeping to history, it is certain that his Majesty can claim an ancestor who successfully led the Picts and Scots against the Ancient Britons as long ago as 330 B.C., the year in which Babylon fell.

This was Fergus, the son of Ferchar, who is reputed to have been descended from Eochaid II, and the Jewish princess. After the defeat of the Britons—the two Celtic races in Scotland were so pleased with Fergus that they vowed that the kingdom should always belong to his descendants, and so far, although some two thousand years have now elapsed, the oath has been kept.

The House of David, as the descendants of Fergus were called, ruled Scotland until the deaths of Alexander III, and the Maid of Norway.

The crown should then have passed to the Earl of Carrick, better known as the Bruce, who was also of the House of David. And, after a period of warfare, Bruce did make good his claim to the throne.

The Bruces were succeeded by the ill-fated Stuarts, who became heirs through the marriage of Walter Stewart, High Steward of Scotland, to Dorothy Bruce. Five Jameses in succession wore the crown before Mary, Queen of Scots, changed the spelling of her name to the more familiar Stuart.

Then the death of Queen Elizabeth brought the Stuarts, in the person of James VI, to the throne of England, through the marriage of an earlier James to a Tudor princess. Six Stuarts were crowned sovereigns of Scotland and England. Of these one, Charles I, was executed; another, James II, was driven into exile; a third, Mary, ruled jointly with her husband, Dutch William. On the death of the sixth, Queen Anne, the throne was again vacant.

During this queen's lifetime Scottish statesmen had successfully insisted that her successor must not only be a Protestant, but one of the House of David as well. The British Parliament found that the only person who fulfilled both these conditions was the Elector of Hanover. He was directly descended from Princess Elizabeth, the daughter of James I, who, in 1613, had married Frederick, the Elector Palatine.

The Hanoverians, as they were called, proved themselves able rulers and worthy representatives of the line of Fergus.

Since the coronation of George I, the succession has never been broken.

FOOTBALL

Game Ends In Draw.
The Cadets and Saints eleven played to a small gathering of spectators at St. George's Field last night, and the game, which proved to be a fairly good exhibition of football, ended in a draw 2 goals all. In the first half the Cadets, playing into the eastern goal, scored twice, Walter Callahan and Mooney doing the needful. In the second half the Saints equalized matters through Hopkins and Young. Mr. Fred Phelan was referee.

HALIFAX HERALD ROAD RACE

Will Be Held Oct. 25th.
HALIFAX.—Saturday, October 25th, is the probable date of the Annual Herald and The Evening Mail modified marathon over the ten mile course. Thanksgiving Day was named some time ago, but as the whole holiday will not likely be celebrated before November 10, the runners protest that the weather would be too cool. Hence the change. By holding the race in October, the runners would be assured of ideal temperature for long distance running. The prospects are that Cape Breton will have a good representation in the race and Westville will be represented by a team. A handsome new shield in competition for the first time last year and won by Crescents will be up again this year for the prize.

Local Runners In Contention.

In view of the forthcoming race, no doubt the N.A.A.A. will meet and decide as to whether St. John's will send a representative team this year. Linegar and O'Toole are said to be keeping in condition in case they may be called upon to go.

58 MEDALS WON BY UNITED STATES.

The United States won ninety-eight of the 351 Olympic medals in France. The honors amounted to nearly one-third of the total and comprised prizes for forty-five first places, twenty-six for second places and twenty-seven for third places.

JACK BERESFORD ENGLAND'S BEST.

Jack Beresford is the best amateur oarsman of England. In addition to his victory in the recent diamond sculls race and in the Olympic regatta he won the Wingfield sculls, emblematic of the amateur championship of the Thames, decided over the championship course, four and a half miles, from Putney to Mortlake, recently. It was Beresford's fifth victory in succession in this year's regatta established in 1830 and equals the record held by F. L. Playford, of London, R.C., who won from 1876 to 1878.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE PRO. BOXERS AND WRESTLERS.

Jimmy Knox, local heavyweight, who made his start here last winter, has returned to Montreal after a short sojourn in the United States. Knox fought one or two bouts in New York City and again at Watertown, N. Y. He is now back here looking for action, and expects to get a return bout with Young Mack at the next local show. The two met at the Mount Royal Arena some months ago.

Newark, N.J., Sept. 25.—By a furious slash in the final round, during which he sent his opponent to the floor without a count, Ad. Stone, of Paterson, N.J., earned a newspaper decision over Young Stribling, of Macon, Ga. In their 12-round light-heavyweight fight last night.

Stribling's speed and use of a lightning left jab had matched Stone's punches to the body during the first eleven rounds of fast action, punctuated by frequent clinches. When they came up for the last frame the Georgian was atop of his opponent for the first few moments, but Stone fought his way out and caught Stribling off balance with a left hook which sent him to the floor.

The Georgian was up immediately with a smile, but Stone, encouraged by the Jersey crowd, sailed in with a body attack under which his younger opponent crumpled. Stone beat Stribling about the ring, almost without opposition during the rest of the round, but could not drop his opponent. The sensational finish was a climax to a stirring battle.

Paris, Sept. 25.—Jack Taylor, of Omaha, Neb., tonight defeated Marcel Nilles, the French pugilist. Nilles quit after the eighth round.

Marshfield, Oregon, Sept. 25.—Miss Ethel McMahon, playing with a travailing tent show, will leave the company next week, the management announced, for San Francisco, where she will be married to Benny Leonard, heavyweight boxing champion. Miss McMahon has been playing with the tent show for about a year, and is a southerner.

New York, Sept. 25.—Jack Delaney, who stepped into the fight limelight last winter by slapping over the crushing Paul Berlenbach, will open his winter campaign against the rugged Jimmy Slatery, of Buffalo. The bout will be at Madison Square Garden, October 3.

Worked Around a Mill

Some years ago in the historic city of Quebec there was a certain dentist who charged his patients, not by the amount of work done for them, but by their capacity to pay his bill.

One day a crew of lumberjacks came in from up the river, with a boom of logs from the timber regions of the north. One of the men suffered from a toothache and consulted the dentist. After making an extraction the dentist regarded the logger for a moment and then, when the bearded man from the woods commenced to feel for his change, he asked him what he did for a living.

"Oh, I usually work around a mill," was the reply.

"Then your charge will be fifty cents," said the dentist.

The logger hauled from his pocket a huge wad of currency of staggering denominations and commenced to finger the bills. The dentist was amazed. "I thought you said you worked around a mill," he said, as he remained in his cash drawer for change. "Well, so I do," said the logger calmly. "I happen to own the mill."

The dentist, subsequently learned that the "poor logger" that he had treated for fifty cents was John Rudolphus Booth, one of the richest men in Canada and outstanding lumber magnate of the continent—Forbes Magazine (N.Y.).

Palestine Long on Holidays

Jerusalem, Aug. 25 (A.P.)—Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays, the Sabbaths of the three faiths in Palestine, are recognized as official holidays for purposes of presentation of negotiable paper, and no promissory notes or bills may be protested on those days, according to a decision of a conference of merchants with the Chief Justice. All other official holidays of Moslems, Jews and Christians are similarly recognized in Palestine.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

TO SETTLE IRISH BOUNDARY QUESTION.

LONDON, Sept. 29.
Parliament will reasonably tomorrow for emergency session which will be brief and probably uneventful. Its sole business is to adopt a bill providing for settlement of the Irish boundary question. The Anglo-Irish treaty provide for a boundary commission to delimit territory between Northern and Southern Ireland, and the present bill is along those lines. The general belief is that the bill will be passed without serious opposition in the House Commons this week and will be ratified in House of Lords and receive royal sanction by the end of next week.

INTEREST ABUSED.

LONDON, Sept. 29.
Signs are accumulating that all parties in the industrial world are realizing the absolute necessity of discovering some permanent method of settling the disputes without resort to strikes if British trade is not to suffer almost complete stagnation. Lloyd George declared 35,000,000 working days were lost through strikes in last five years. The recent plea of Sir Robert Hatfield, perhaps the greatest living British steel master for a more reasonable method than the strike weapon has aroused keen interest.

ACCUSED OF SORcery AND BURNED ALIVE.

The lad was burned alive with his hands tied behind his back after being tied to a sapling for several days. His slayers declared he had worked magic to make hunting poor for the tribe in Telegraph Creek country in British Columbia, 200 miles distant from here.

LOSS OF BERT M. CORKUM.

LUNENBURG N.S. Sept. 30.
Tragedy from rum row was brought home to Lunenburg to-day when it became known that the 247 ton schooner Bert M. Corkum, locally owned which has been missing since the great storm of August 25 was floating a speared derelict off Georges Bank and that her crew of seven have all probably perished. Members of the crew of the ill-fated craft Captain William Zwicker, Mahone Master, survived by wife and two children. Gabriel Conroy, 24, have, mate, survived by wife. Arthur Zwicker, Mahone survived by wife and two children. Son-in-law of Captain Zwicker, Titus Westhaver Mahone, survived by two children, Charles Wynacht Mahone survived by wife and six children, Charles Ernest of Lunenburg, single. Alphonse Branos, Barabodes, The Bert M. Corkum cleared from Halifax on May 24 with 4000 cases of liquor under charter to American parties. This she had disposed of and was coming north in ballast having it is believed left Rum Row the day before the terrific storm started. The schooner was uninsured. Her agents were the Lunenburg Outfitting Company.

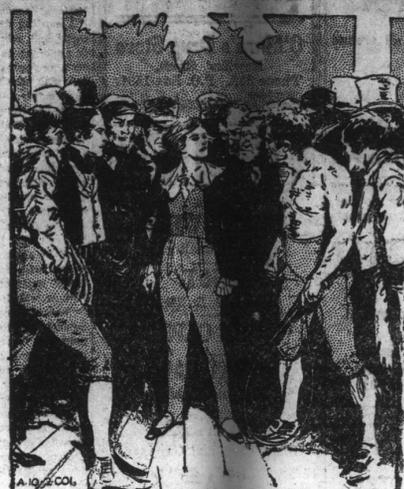

SEEKING THE MIRACULOUS FORMULA.

GENEVA, Sept. 30.
A swing of sentiment to Japan was its outstanding feature of a critical situation in Geneva to-night. After laboring without cessation throughout the entire day leaders had to confess that they had not yet discovered the miraculous formula which, while satisfying the aspirations of the Japanese, would keep the proposed protocol of arbitration and security strong enough to win not only the support of the delegations assembled at Geneva, but what is more important the ratifications of world Parliaments. There is no washing in evidence among Japanese who say they have unequalled directions from Tokyo to maintain their attitude of opposition to any protocol plan which would make Japan the aggressor if she failed to abide by world court decision, based on the interpretation of matters supposed to be within the exclusive jurisdiction of the other party to dispute.

THE IRISH BOUNDARY PROBLEM.

LONDON, Sept. 30.
Predictions, that "some thing unexpected" might be looked for as regards the Irish Boundary Problem, were current this morning as members of House of Commons gathered from their summer vacations for the special session convoked to consider the troublesome questions. Those who look for a surprise, some of political writers in particular, base their opinion mainly on the fact that Premier MacDonald has taken charge of the Boundary Bill which technically should be steered through Parliament by the summer vacationers for the session. While it is believed by many that the Premier intends to make a supreme effort to effect a settlement apart from party politics and that his speech introducing the bill is likely to be somewhat sensational, there are others who are confident that Government reserves it is too late to alter the situation and that bill will go through the House as presented by Friday. Up to the last it was hoped that the Irish Free State and Northern Ireland would come to an agreement without outside interference, but the Boundary Commission, provided for in the Anglo-Irish Treaty, whose duty would be to settle the frontier in accordance with the wishes of the inhabitants, remained unorganized. This made necessary the calling of the emergency session of Parliament to consider the boundary measures.

MACDONALD SENDS LETTER TO HERRIOT.

PARIS, Sept. 30.
Premier Herriot has received another long letter from British Prime Minister, Ramsay MacDonald, but as it is of confidential and personal character, it will not be made public, according to the Matin. Mr. MacDonald writes particularly about the questions arising out of the debates on the arbitration protocol at Geneva, as well as an expression of public opinion in France and England regarding the League of Nations. A large part of the letter is devoted to the problem of commercial relations between Germany and Great Britain on the one hand, and Germany and France on the other.

A Real Career for Educated Women

(By BARBARA DANE).

"There is no future for highly educated women in England. They simply are not wanted." This challenging remark was made to me a few days ago by a man who is widely acquainted with the demand which exists for professional women workers. He added that, with the exception of the scholastic, legal, and medical professions, women with university degrees are finding that their talents and their training are wasted.

"Every year the universities are turning out women graduates who, so far from obtaining highly paid positions, are glad to get work at £3 a week," he continued.

"University training in the case of men has long been recognized as utterly insufficient in itself as a qualification for earning a living; to-day our women graduates are beginning to realize that while three years at Oxford or Cambridge may be an interesting and valuable experience for a woman, it is by no means the key to a career.

"Women will always be needed in the most honourable profession of nursing; they are needed in great numbers than never before in business. In years to come I believe the skilled household worker will be more highly paid than the struggling woman doctor, and that is the day for which women should prepare themselves. For some of these careers is the education of the scholar necessary."

It is certain that men are realizing more vividly than ever before that the comfort and efficiency of a home depend on its scientific equipment and on the skill of its staff of workers.

The tendency in future, I think, will be to employ fewer but better household workers. Some highly interesting experiments in this direction have already been made.

work, to be succeeded by two equally highly skilled women, who continue the routine of household duties until 11 p.m.

All four women are high school girls who are experts in household science. They live out, they are better paid than secretaries, teachers, or most professional women.

The employer gets the high-water mark of efficiency in all his household arrangements, he saves space in his house which otherwise would have to be devoted to the servants' wing, and he also saves money because women who are trained in domestic economics know how to cook and work thriftily.

The women thus employed are well paid, they are independent, they have freedom, and the prospect of careers that will last long after middle age.

I do not suggest that such an arrangement would be suitable in every home, but the fact that it has been tried with great success points to changing conditions in English home life.

Does anyone imagine that every qualified woman doctor is working for high remuneration, or that every woman barrister is making a good living? No woman, however clever, who enters either law or medicine can be assured of a living, but the day is quickly coming when the skilled domestic worker is going to be certain of a living for as long as she is able to work.

Politicians Assailed

AT ANNUAL MEETING OF GRAIN GROWERS.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 24.—(A.P.)—America has regained its equilibrium "and the vociferous radical minority will try in vain to move the nation out of its normal course," President F. E. Watkins told the Grain Dealers National Association to-day.

A settling down tendency reflecting thrift and sobriety, the speaker said, is apparent throughout business, "in striking contrast to the reckless abandon with which uneconomic nostrums were gaining speed a year ago."

"To-day Europe's star of hope is rising," Mr. Watkins declared. "Better economic conditions mean an improved foreign market for our products, with a normal export demand for grain. The broadened foreign market for our surplus will benefit the farmer most directly, but the stimulus will be felt also all along the line."

He referred to the depression suffered by the grain trade as "a period strewn with the wrecks of long-established businesses," and assailed politicians who had capitalized discount. Defeat of the McNary-Haugen bill, he said, was to the credit of the grain industry, "whose vigorous opposition was in time joined by other industries which recognized that if the grain industry were to be socialized, their lines might be next exploited."

"Theories underlying many of these queer measures," Mr. Watkins continued, "are that somewhere in the present system is concealed tremendous profits that can be captured by the producer through some type of co-operative efforts."

"This is pure buncombe. It has been established as such by those engaged in co-operative and country stations, and in various terminal market organizations. But the politicians have not had this experience, and the professional agitator would not be influenced by it."

Despite the possibility of a new congress being as radical as the last in seeking the farm vote, President Watkins declared the farmer will not be so prone to listen "to the siren voice of self-named champions."

"Nature's action in reducing the world cereal supply has enhanced our prices and the farmer, reasonably prosperous again, will lose interest in political panaceas that have only made matters worse. Farmers know the grain trade fought and won a battle that benefited the farmers."

The Romance of "Smiths"

HOW THE FAMOUS FIRM OF NEWS-AGENTS HAS GROWN TO GREATNESS.

The recent coming-of-age of the Hon. W. H. Smith, whose father, Lord Hambleden, is the present head of W. H. Smith & Son, marks an epoch in this famous firm.

William Henry Smith the First, started business just after the Battle of Waterloo. He owed his earliest success to his energy in supplying country newspapers ahead of the Post Office mails. The mails of the day were carried in slow, heavy-horsed coaches, and Smith easily beat them with his service of swift carts.

Later on, when railways began to come into prominence, he took full advantage of them.

When William Henry Smith the Second left school he joined his father's business. Together they would drive down to the head office at four o'clock in the morning; and W. H. S. II., with his coat off, would rival the best of their employees at packing and despatching.

When he became of age he was made a partner and the firm became, and has ever since remained, W. H. Smith and Son.

The business was now getting bigger. Soon the firm obtained the right to maintain bookstalls on all the great railway lines, the first "Smith bookstall" being opened at Euston Station in 1848. Another ten years saw the launching of the W. H. S. Library which, though started with some misgivings, has proved a great success.

Apart from the development of his own business, W. H. S. II.—his father had died in 1865—found time for many public activities, holding among other offices those of First Lord of the Admiralty and Secretary of State for War.

After his death, the peerage which he had refused in his lifetime was conferred to his widow, whose son, W. F. D. Smith, thus became Viscount Hambleden when his mother died in 1913. The Viscount is the first head of the firm to hold that position without the familiar pair of Christian names.

His son, W. H. S. III., is at present at New College, Oxford, where he went from Eton; and, as he has said in a message to members of the firm: "In a few years I hope to join in the work of the firm, and it is with the greatest delight that I look forward to doing so."

Is Britain "Tilting"?

Is Britain becoming higher in the north and lower in the south? Scientists say that it is.

Recently a number of readings have been taken to find out the height above sea-level of the land in various districts. The results show that since the last readings were taken, about fifty years ago, the North of Scotland has risen about half an inch, while the South of England has sunk by rather less than that distance.

It is already an accepted fact that land is rising and falling in other parts of the world. The coast of Norway, for instance, is rising about half an inch a year, while the coast of Holland is sinking by that amount.

Britain once formed part of the mainland of Europe. The land in between gradually sank until the sea covered it and formed the English Channel and the North Sea.

Such earth movements, gradual or convulsive, are in operation ceaselessly upon the earth's surface. Their impulse seemingly arises from the fact that, the core of the earth being of heavier material than the crust on which we live, the latter naturally responds to the expansion or shrinkage of the mass largely metallic, which it surrounds.

Whys Lightning Forked

Science recognizes several kinds of lightning, although authorities differ as to whether some types are not identical and merely appear different because of the peculiarities of human vision.

Forked lightning is the most common type. The irregular path of the discharge is believed to be due to the presence of solid particles and electrical charges that make a jagged course along the path of least resistance. Sheet lightning, which illuminates large areas of the sky, is believed to be merely the reflection of forked lightning from a distance.

The majority of victims of lightning are not killed instantly. They are merely stunned, and can be revived by the application of artificial respiration and the other first-aid measures commonly employed in cases of drowning and asphyxiation.

Most of the exceptionally tall structures of the world have been struck by lightning more than once, but have escaped damage because the lightning has been carried harmlessly to the ground by lightning-rods. The Eiffel Tower in Paris has been struck many times without damage, despite the belief that lightning never strikes twice in the same place.

A single flash of lightning concentrates many times more energy than could be produced at one instant by all the power plants in the world.

Why Yorkshire for Woollens?

THE GEOGRAPHY OF BRITISH INDUSTRIES.

Why is cotton manufactured in Lancashire, although the raw material has to cross the sea? Why is crockery made in North Staffordshire, although the clay from which all the finer ware is made has to be brought from Cornwall?

The main reason why great manufacturing towns spring up in certain areas in the near presence of coal. The rise of the cotton industry in South Lancashire would not have taken place but for the coalfield, but even the presence of vast stores of "black diamonds" would have been unavailing had not Lancashire been one of the wettest and most humid counties in England.

Clay from Cornwall.

This is shown, even in Lancashire itself, when the dry east winds of spring prevail, for then spinning is said to be "had." The spinner has more trouble in five minutes during east wind weather than in an hour when the wind blows from the west.

In North Staffordshire only the coarsest pottery clay is found, and that undoubtedly laid the foundations of the towns which to-day are known as the Potteries. But Josiah Wedgwood would never have made a fortune from the "corks and pots" which this coarse clay produces.

The clay for the beautiful things must be brought from Cornwall, Devon and Dorset.

Why, then, are not the Potteries there? It is more economical to carry the clay from Cornwall to Staffordshire, where the coal is, than to carry the coal to Cornwall, where the clay is, and thus the Potteries are 300 miles from their source of supply of the raw material in which they work.

When Coal Succeeded Charcoal.

Why should the woollen manufacture have gravitated into the West Riding of Yorkshire? There are several answers. The first is water. The Yorkshire Ouse has eight or nine main tributaries coming down from the Pennine Range, and each of these has innumerable affluents. As the woollen manufacture at first depends upon water power, it found more power there than elsewhere.

But Yorkshire is also the county of moor and wild, and therefore the raw material was more plentiful in the county of broad acres than elsewhere in England.

WOMAN EXPLORER, ACCOMPANIED ONLY BY A FEW NATIVES WILL PENETRATE WILD PARTS OF DARK CONTINENT.

(MIGNON RITTENHOUSE)

It is again calling her, and once Mrs. Akeley will penetrate the Congo Forest and Jubaland; live with the little known tribes in the east, travelling up the Congo River, out next year by way of the Congo. On this, her third trip, she will be accompanied only by a few natives and a few natives picked up during the course of her explorations. She is calling, but it is a different Africa which beckons to her in 1924. The African continent has been somewhat altered by civilization. To what extent have been altered even Mrs. Akeley will be unable to tell until her next trip. That she is anxious to make up for her first trip, she explains in a dozen years, she explains, "the old things, I believe will be wiped out. Civilization is sweeping over Africa, and even sections which I visited on my first trip the missionaries and British agents were doing much to raise the standard of living among those over-looked by most of the explorers. They understand them, bring back material for lectures on the life of the women and children of Africa."

Incidentally, Mrs. Akeley will provide for the East African animals for the Brooklyn Museum, under whose auspices she is making this expedition. The long, airy reception room Mrs. Akeley welcomed me shortly before her departure for England. She was to live among those who had opportunity of studying this remarkable woman, whose achievements as explorer and hunter are internationally known. Others have described her breath-taking beauty, aristocratic bearing, exquisite grooming, and marveled that a lady so able to endure the rough and wearing life of an explorer.

As she seems ideally fitted for the life she has, yes, but because she has no uncertain strength of character, culture and refinement, but her quiet dignity of manner, not unlike that possessed by those pioneer foremothers of who migrated from homes of comfort and tradition to help their men blaze new trails in a strange, far-distant land. The greatest strength is not physical, nor is masculinity an index of endurance power.

Her very femininity will be, and has been in the past, an asset. Among the more primitive tribes a man would find it hard indeed to enter. It is certain that he would not be permitted to associate with the native women as Mrs. Akeley intends to do. Her lack of aggressiveness will not be amiss, for the farther away from civilization one travels the more susceptible are the people to gentleness and kindness. Their instinct for self-preservation is still a very dominant part of their makeup.

Danger and risk there will most certainly be, but Mrs. Akeley is inclined to smile a little at our idea of an African surrounded on all sides by cannibals and vast barbaric hordes. "Even on my first trip there in 1905," she says, "it was possible to secure canned Del Monte peaches, pineapples and fancy chocolates in the little shops and huts scattered all through the more civilized regions. The traders are marvellous—they are everywhere with their foreign luxuries and delicacies."

Speaking of canned pineapples, Mrs. Akeley likes to tell a story about the laziness of the East Africans. A native and black Prime Minister of the capital of Uganda went into one of the little shops and bought a can of Hawaiian pineapples for the equivalent of one dollar in our money when on his own property, a few feet away, the finest pineapples in the world were rotting for want of picking.

"But Uganda is a very progressive protectorate notwithstanding," she defended. "Since Sir Stanley's expedition, a court as been established there with a Prime Minister and Parliament similar to that of England's." The tribes with whom Mrs. Akeley intends to confine herself, however, are the Africans made famous by imaginative fiction writers. The Kikuyu, Wakamba, Wajambam and Maasi, all of whom were superstitious and primitive when last seen by her in 1911, will furnish the data which she desires to obtain for her lectures.

Although each of these tribes at that time had its own customs and traditions, they were for the most part Mohammedans by religion and agriculturists, weavers and hunters by trade. Both Mohammedans and other sects worshipped spirits, particularly "Nahis" the spirit of the mountain, and had spirit houses at the entrance of their gardens, where water and food were placed. Polygamy was practiced universally; among the Mohammedans four wives were the custom, but the other natives married as many women as they could afford. One wealthy man of the Kikuyu tribe had fifty wives and one hundred and fifty-five children and was contemplating another adventure on the sea of matrimony when Mrs. Akeley was there in 1905.

It was during this first trip that she learned to make use of their superstitions to secure curios for the Field Museum in Chicago, under whose auspices she was then exploring.

ing. Her hair, which was prematurely white, attracted considerable attention among the Kikuyu, who could not understand how a woman with a young body could have an old head, as they expressed it in native tongue. They beat upon their drums, summoning men and women from miles around to come and view this strange young-old woman.

At that time, it was becoming increasingly difficult to get genuine curios, due to the fact that enterprising traders were importing imitations from England and selling them to the natives, who were, as has been mentioned, lazy to the extreme. The consequence was that very few native-made articles could be secured, especially by visitors. Knowing that among certain natives of this tribe there were still many native curios, Mrs. Akeley made it clear to them through an interpreter that in exchange for watching her perform the ceremony of combing her hair she wanted them to bring the real curios. In this way she secured a very fine collection of hand carved ornaments, spears and paddles, as well as valuable strings of pearls.

Among the Kikuyu, Maasi and Wakamba especially are some very beautiful women. "Their shoulders were the most perfect I had ever seen," she stated as she showed me some pictures of the natives. "Their wrists and ankles were slender, their skins as soft as velvet. Many of them coated their bodies with castor oil and red clay to protect themselves from the cold, for the African climate is as varied and at times penetrating as here in America. They shaved their heads, leaving a funny little tuft of hair in the center.

"If this custom is still prevalent, I shall introduce it to American shoppers when I return," she cleverly commented on the times in mock serious tone.

The seriousness became very real, and pathos was in her voice as she told me of the custom among many of the tribes of throwing the ill to the hyenas. "They were terribly afraid to let any one die in the huts. One morning an old man and his very young wife, about fourteen or fifteen, I should say, brought me their puny little baby, who had a bad case of pneumonia and asked me to give it some medicine. I did so willingly, and after helping them doctor it, they returned to the hut. Early that evening we heard the hyenas yelping frightfully in the direction of the hut, and sensed immediately what had happened.

"The next morning the old man came to me with tears in his eyes, and I could not help but pity him in his ignorance. He told me how he had paid a huge sum for the girl, and that she had been utterly useless as a 'beast of burden,' as all Kikuyu women are supposed to be. And how their baby had become ill, and had to be thrown away. 'Oh, such a waste!' he finished weeping profusely."

It is such people that Mrs. Akeley has dwelt among and will dwell among again unless civilization has reached its long arm to them during her absence. A people harassed by superstition and a profound ignorance. But a lovable people, and a people who are quick to pick up new ideas, languages and customs.

"I have longed for them more than once in my sojourns in England and on the Continent," says this woman who has wandered far from her birthplace at Beaver Dam, Wisconsin. "For I love them," she finished simply, earnestly.

And as she stood there, framed in the wide, white stone doorway to bid me good-by, the tall, exquisite woman looked out on a horologous, near-sighted world with the gray, sad and seeing eyes of a philosopher.

Cleanliness is one of the chief secrets of charm, and perfect cleanliness results from the use of Ivory Soap—adv. it.

Improving Trade

Britain and America Lead the World. There is a ray of comfort in the trade returns of the Board of Trade for the first three months of the year. Great Britain has the highest figures of any country in the world for imports. Some big figures are disclosed. The imports during the three months into the countries selected for the return are headed by Great Britain . . . $262,450,000 U.S.A. . . . $221,345,000. It is a curious fact that the figures for the imports into France and Germany are almost identical: France . . . $2108,804,000 Germany . . . $2106,766,000. In the matter of domestic exports for the first quarter of this year the United States came first, with a total of $251,801,000 and Great Britain was second with $195,513,000. France exported goods to the value of $218,749,000, British India (by sea) came fourth with $78,639,000 and Germany fifth with $74,807,000.

The "KODAK" Store

Sells You Quality and Gives You Speed FREE

Do you get the very best results from your Snapshots all the time? Do you let the KODAK STORE develop and print them for you, because so exceptionally up-to-the-minute are their printing and developing methods and equipment, so efficient are their assistants (you see they handle far more films than any one else in the city, and they're developing and printing only, all the time) that while they can, and do, give you a 24-hour service, no detail of quality is lacking. Every print from every negative is accurately and perfectly finished. When the KODAK STORE develops your prints it does not sacrifice quality for speed, it combines the two, and gives you—perfection.
