NOTE AND COMMENT

Kincardine Review-Not yet included in the casualties—the man casualities.

In Germany, British civilians are herded together in horse stalls. In the British empire, plenty of Germans whose sympathy is far from being with the Allies, are allowed all the privileges and liberties usual in times of peace.

Boys and girls are the most valuable crop the farm produces. Would that the farm could hold more of those who drift from country to city. The boy who takes an interest in farming and farm practice is soon a young farmer, and all such boys have ideas which other boys would like to get, seeing that they have so much in common. The boys are sometimes called young farmers, junior farmers, etc., and are the most valuable asset of Canadian agriculture.

The possibility that the fly, aud probably more particularly the stable fly, has something to do with the spread of that dreaded disease, infantile paralysis, makes it doubly important that piles of manure be not allowed to remain exposed within the municipality. The Provincial regulations require that the keeper of every stable shall permit not more thau two wagon-loads of manure to accumulate, and shall keep such manure in a properly covered receptacle. The Provincial Board of People often wonder why mosqui toes do not bother them in the day. time, but are the pest of their lives in the evening and at night. The explanation of this is that the wings of the mosquitoes are so constructed that they will not stand the rays of the sun. Immediately on being exposed to the san, their wings become useless, consequently they cannot move about. The only condition under which we are likely to be troubled with mosquitoes in the daytime is on a dark day when the atmosphere is over-charged with moisture, or when we go into the woods, particularly in swampy districts, especially after a rain, when the atmosphere is well laden with moisture.

It is expected that the forthcoming Dominion war loan, which is to be issued in September, will meet with an even greater degree of success than the first, which was floated in November of last year. Out of this loan of one hundred million dollars, fifty million was advanced in the Imperial Treasury for the purpose of munitions and supplies in Canada. In addition to this fifty millions, the Minister of Finance was able to arrange with the chartered banks for further advances aggregating one hundred million dollars as an Imperial credit to be availed of for similar purposes. The result of this total credit of one hundred and fifty millions has been that since the date of the first Dominion war loan new orders to an aggregate of a hundred and fifty million dollars have been placed in Canada by the Imperial Munitions Board.

That indefatigable friend of British farmers, Mr. Jesse Collings, in a letter to The London Times regarding the meeting at the Colonial Institute to consider the future of soldiers after the war, says:

"Sir Rider Haggard as the representative of the Institute is about to investigate the means by which our soldiers who return after the war can be settled in the Dominions oversea. Lord Curzon rightly stated that at the end of the war the men, after their military experience and life in the open air, will not be inclined to return to the factory, workshop, or the office stool, and that it was the duty of the Government to provide an outlet for the employment of such men.

"These sentiments are excellent and true, but the conclusion which Lord Curzon arrives at is very disappointing. It contains a suggestion that the returned soldiers should be sent overseas and settled on Colonial lands. It is certain that there will be no sufficient employment for them in the industrial world in England. The only outlet for them is on the land.

"If an investigation similar to that about to be made by Sir Rider Haggard were made with regard to the situation at home, it would be found that there is profitable employment for all the returned soldiers in cul-tivating the uncultivated and waste lands in our own country. There is lands in our own country. Inches as something repulsive in the idea that after these men have fought so bravely in defence of the nation they are to be deported oversea, while the land of their own country is crying aloud for their service.

"The immense outlay required for sending these men away would be largely, if not quite, sufficient to pay the expenses of settling them at home. "On these land settlements returnon these land settlements returned soldiers and their womenkind would be engaged in rearing strong and healthy families, and, what is most important, would be solving the question of our food supplies and adding to the economic and indus-trial strength of the country. "Lord Curzon rightly states that after the war there will have to be a readjustment of the basic principles on which our public life now That readjustment will doubt, involve an industrial and a social revolution, of which no one can foresee the nature and extent.

"It is certain, however, that our effete land system will be over-hauled. That system, which exists hauled. That system, which exists in no other country in Europe, gives the control of nearly all the land— a prime necessary of life—into the hands of a comparatively small number of persons. It permits the land to be held up and put to inferior uses or to no use at all. No thinking man, with any foresight, can con-clude that such a system, in view of the needs of the nation can continue for long.

"In view of the action, which is certain to take place, by bodies of men who hold extreme views with regard to the land—nationalizers, Socialists, and others—it becomes more than ever wise and necessary to create a numerous rural popula tion, which at all times and in all element for safety and restraint in the economy of a nation. Our rural districts are already enough depleted without taking steps to turn them into a desert.

'I am as anxious as anyone strengthen our Empire; but surely it is a poor way of doing it by weakening its heart and centre."

Fleets in the Baltic.

The correspondents of the Petrograd Telegraph Agency has forwarded an account of the visit to the British Grand Fleet of a party of Russian publicists, from which the following is an extract:

At the luncheon on the Iron Duke
Sir John Jellicoe, after proposing the health of the Emperor of Russia, made the following speech: "It is a great pleasure to me to welcome you to the Grand Fleet. I am sure you to the Grand Freet. I am sure we are very obliged to you for com-ing so far at such a season, and I hope you will take away pleasant memories of your visit. We know and appreciate the great work done by the Russian army. It saved us at the beginning of the war. It is saving us now. I need only refer to the splendid victory of the Caucasus army at Erzerum.

"The Russian navy, too, has won our admiration by its efficiency. No our admiration by its efficiency. No-thing would give us greater pleasure than to be able to fight side by side than to be able to fight side by side with Russian sailors against our common foe. It would be difficult for us to go to the Baltic, but not impossible, and I hope the day may come when our ships will engage the enemy together. Let me raise my glass to the health of our Russian guests, associating with it that of the Russian army and the great Russian fleet." fleet."

Dainty Boudoir Cap.
'A dainty boudoir cap can be fashioned out of a bit of shadow lace and a scrap of crepe de chine. Make a crown of the lace, and attach to it the silk, which is gathered a trifle. The joining place is concealed with twisted ribbon, which is studded here and there with a tiny rosebud. Gather the silk about an inch or so from the bottom and see that it slips over the head easily. Finish with a ruffle of lace sewed inside the edge. Long loops of ribbon placed on the side will still further improve the appearance of this dainty bit of feminine wear.

JUST PLAIN COUNTRY.

Beauty to Be Found In Rural Scenes Round About Home.

Like many another person of the present day, I have from time to time traveled as far as my means would permit—and a little farther—exploring countries new and strange or new and strange to me, climbing high mountains, sailing broad seas and making the acquaintance of coasts as full of wonder and of mystery, swept by the wings of gulls, washed by green waves, as were the far shores of Odysseus' wide adventure to Odysseus. have had huge enjoyment in it all, standing to watch at distant corner of the earth the pageant of wind and wave and cloud, trudging up unknown hills in a fine mood of adventure, driv-they had been created overnight to meet this first fresh sense of quest.

Yet sometimes and oftentimes I realize that no strange shore or wondermountain range has brought a sense of pleasure quite so deep as that which comes at moments in mere coun try, the plain country of the land of home. I do not mean any of the show regions of America. The glories of the Canadian Rockies, the wonders of the Yosemite, are unknown to me. I mean the common country of old fashioned fences and winding roads, where tangles of alder and sumac cluster by the gray rails or grayer stone-com mon country, where the hay grows long in June and the woods creep close to the hayfields and a little stream per-haps goes threading its way softly been the grasses.

Here is no sense of effort in your enoyment. All is near and dear, familiar, perhaps for generations a part of your forefathers' lives. There is no need to try your eyes to take in the meaning of jagged rock outlines and heaped earth masses or stretches of rt sand. You have not purchased an expensive ticket whose worth to the uttermost penny must be extracted from the panorama before you, making you study it anxiously, eages to do your duty by every shade and outline. You do not have to strain to the sublime, as you do when confronted by scenery, capitalized scenerycapitalized in every sense of the word. You do but sit quietly upon some green bank, full of unforced pleasure that hardly names itself pleasure, se unconscious it is.—Scribner's,

Quarries of Carrara. The wealth of the city and province of Carrara, Italy, which has a population of 220,000, is derived from the 500 quarries, which give employment in one way and another to over 8.000 workmen. The quarries are situated in the mountains above the town, and the stone is brought down to the plain to be sawed and worked, largely in shops connected with the homes of the workmen. Explosives are used to obtain the largest size blocks, although wire saws driven by electricity are used in a few instances to quarry the blocks to the desired dimensions Russian-American Calendars. The Russian calendar is thirteen days behind the calendars of other Christian countries, and unless this fact is familiar to correspondents in the United States considerable confusion arises over the dates of letters, telegrams, etc. Usually in Russian business correspondence both dates are used, the Russian date having after it the letters O. S., meaning old style, and the date of foreign countries, N. S., meaning new style. For instance, the Russian Christmas occurs on Jan. 7 N. S. and the Russian New Year's day on Jan. 14 N. Pat's Retort.

An English tourist was being taken through the country by an Irish jar-They were traveling along the road when an ass put its head over the fence and began to bray with all its power.

Glaciers Are Brittle.

An authority on the subject says that the substance of a glacier is brittle, though solid, and that its descent down a valley is caused by its constant fracture produced by gravitation and the sliding forward of the whole mass, the surfaces of the fractures speedily reuniting by regulation.

Old Mrs. Blunderby was telling/her caller about a play she had been to the evening before. One of the characters was an Englishman of the "silly awss" type. "He did look so awfully ridiculous with that monologue in his eye," chuckled the old lady.

Mr. Newed-Will you have a piece of this angel cake, darling? Newed (cautiously)-Well, dear, you-er-know I don't care much for cake. Did you make it? Mrs. Newed-No; mamma sent it over. Newed-Give me two pieces, please.

A Reminder.

"The old fashioned boy used to mind every word his father said." "Yes," replied the somewhat cynical "but you must remember that youth, the old fashioned boy had one of those thoughtful old fashioned fathers."-

IN FREEZING TRENCHES.

Officer Describes First Adventure of New Battalion.

An interesting and detailed account of how a battalion first takes to the trenches in cold weather is given in a letter from Lance-Corp. C. R. Bennett, attached to a Warwick-shire Regiment of the Imperial Army, to his father in Montreal.

"We marched out of the village about three o'clock in the afternoon," he says, "and after a very hard march over very bad roads we arrived at a barn where two companies of the regiment we were to be attached to—until our own battalion arrived-were preparing to go into the trenches that evening as soon as it was dark. It was a black night and raining hard, and the nearer we got to the trenches the worse the roads became. The regiment we were to go in with were old hands and knew the ropes well."
"Before we got to the communication trench proper, we had to enter a trench to get through a rising bit of ground, for at this point the bullets were whining overhead, just to remind us that we were in it at last. Well, this trench proved to be not less than three feet deep in water which gave us a delightful sensation about the legs. We at length reached the discout we were to prove the sent ed the dug-out we were to pass the night in. It was about five feet high and five feet wide by about twenty-four feet long, and the floor was wet and muddy. We sat on our packs and as sleep was out of the question our friends soon made some hot tea which put new life into us. There were three other N. C. O.'s beside myself of our battalion, and we took it in turns to slither about the trench during the night to see how men were posted and made our-selves acquainted with their periods selves acquainted with their periods of duty, etc.

"During the night all the men were ordered to turn out, except those on sentry duty, to clean up the trench. I thought at the time that daylight would have been a better time to do such work, but I learned on enquiry that it was done to keep on enquiry that it was done to keep the circulation going and therefore prevent frost bite, a complaint which prevent frost bite, a complaint which is exceedingly painful, and everything possible is being done to minimize it. When the light arrived I had a pot at the enemy over the parapet, and somehow I felt it was worth the journey of the night before, to be able to do that.

"After four days' instruction, our own battalion relieved the regiment own battalion relieved the regiment we had been with and then we carried on the good work for another four days in which we experienced some horrible weather conditions.

The trenches were knee deep in many places and thigh and waist deep in mad waist deep in mud. More than one poor chap got hopelessly stuck, and it proved an exceedingly hard task to get them out again."

We shall never return to the status quo ante bellum. The competitive racket and rush of life threatened to drive the world mad. It gasps with relief to find itself delivered from itself. The hope dawns of a return to simplicity. And we have begun by eating and drinking less.

The police are co-operating with the health authorities and young ones after nine o'clock know not the streets of Windsor. The measure prevents the little ones from visiting public places at night or mingling with other children of their age when there was a chance of contagion. Anyway, the regulation is a good one, whether it be a preventative against infantile paralysis or not.

The Fire Marshal of Wisconsin has issued a bulletin which he terms a "Comedy of Errors."

While assisting his father in repairing a mowing machine, Gordon, son of Peter Campbell, Howard, met with what might have proved to have been a serious accident. In his curiosity the boy got his face too close to a section of the knives and had the misfortune of having his upper lip badly cut, necessitating several stitches.

MULES WIN BATTLES.

Loyalty of the Indian Muleteer a Byeword in the Armies.

Perhaps there never was a more picturesque campaign than that being carried on in ancient Mesopotamia.

The war is too engrossing to permit of very much attention being given to the spectacular. But we gain something of the color of the surroundings of things from the description given by Mr. Edmund Candler, representative of the British Press in Mesopotamia, of the transport service in Mesopotamia:

The first and second line transport is served by pack mules, Indian Army transport carts drawn by mules and ponies, camels, and a bullock

Army transport carts drawn by mules and ponies, camels, and a bullock train for the heavy guns. It is doubtful if any other army can count on being so efficiently served in the way of transport when fighting in an inhospitable country.

In the old days before the war the drabi (mule driver) was a worthy drudge, and as such respected. He got more kicks and less halfpence than anybody else in the army. Per-than anybody else in the army. Per-haps it is adversity that has moulded him.

Before August 19 there was only one case in which an Indian mule driver received a decoration. At Sahil and Smaiba alone six members of the corps were awarded the Indian Order of Merit. And in France the drabi's reputation was high.

It was drabi who pursued his escaping mule almost into the German lines at Loos, crying out that escaping mule almost into the German lines at Loos, crying out that the beast had broken his heel rope and that his Sahib would be angry. It was a drabi who sat through the whole of the bombardment at Neuve Chapelle when all the rest of his column had taken cover. He wancolumn had taken cover. He wan column had taken cover. He wandered about all night unable to find his destination. His cart was "written off," for the bombardier in charge, who had obeyed the order:

"All into your dug-outs," said that nothing could live through that fire.
In the morning the drabi turned up at Brigade Headquarters with his at Brigade Headquarters with his ammunition, explaining that he had lost the way. "Rasta bul gia, hazur." When asked what the fire was like he said that the wind from the shells was like the monsoons in the hills at Dharmsala.

And only the other day Ali Hussein, drabi, must need report himself sick on January 23. The doctor found a bullet in his shoulder.
"Where were you wounded?" he was asked.
"In the bettle Sahih."

"In the battle, Sahib." "But that was on the 21st. Why did you not report yourself before?"
"Sahib," he said, fearing reproof.
"I had no time. The wounded were too many."

too many."
He had made the journey to the trenches in his cart ten or a dozen times through the darkness and cold and mud and rain.

If beasts were decorated, the mule would be covered with ribbons. He also knows not defeat. In the second line the brunt of the work has fallen on the ponies and mules of the Jaipur and Bharatpur Imperial Service Transport Corps.

It is commonly reported in the force-with what truth I cannot say —that the Jaipur pony transport train won the battle of Shaiba. The story is that when the 200 carts appeared cantering up on the horizon in the blur of the mirage as dusk fell, the Turkish general, taking them for a new brigade of cavalry decamped. The camel so far has been but an auxiliary in the second line of transport, but much is expected of him, though he is woefully misunderstood. though he is woefully misunderstood. Like the yak, he is a providentially ascetic beast. The camel's mincing gait and supercilious glances are generally attributed to pose; as a matter of fact they are the expression of an inward and unsuspected delicacy. Neither the British officer nor the Indian sepoy, as a rule, understand the camel of a strange land. Too often the camel's uncouth bulk. derstand the camel of a strange land. Too often the camel's uncouth bulk, combined with his uncanny asceticism, leaves a false impression of hardiness, and adds to his yoke. Weight is piled on, and his cries ascend to deaf ears. But, well cared for, sufficiently equipped, and tactfully treated, the camel is second only as a beast of burden to the mule.

"At England, and England's Trade!"

A fiery leading article in the Frightful Hamburger Nachrichten (March 2) does its best to remove the doubts of Bethmann-Hollweg about the advisability of ruthless submarine warfare against England. The screech concludes:
"Until England is overthrown and ber trade on which she depends, debe trade, on which she depends, destructively attacked, the German nation cannot attain that booty of triumph to which it is entitled and the war for us and our allies will not end. All the nations battling for God and Right are waiting upon us. God and Right are waiting upon us.

What are we waiting for? The weapons with which to strike England are at hand. Honest German labor has created them. The courageous men who can wield them burn for the command to employ them. The the command to employ them. The whole German nation is united in the determination to use these weapons. At England and England's trade! That is the battle-cry which rings imperiously from the North Sea to the farthermost frontiers of the Empire!"

The moon rose, as it were, out of the ocean, the first spark appearing like a far distant bonfire, then gilding the shore over the crests of the waves, and finally the great round disk rested on the horizon of water.

"Heaven grant," said Edmond, "that we will again see this beautiful sight and that we shall then be one."

"If I live you will have your wish," replied Evalina.

The next day the ship that was to carry her to England sailed from the little town on Narragansett bay, the

A Strip of Seaweed

It Was Given as a Token at the Time of a Betrothal.

By F. A. MITCHEL

In the olden time Newport, R. I., was an important shipping port. Indeed, until the period of the Revolution a number of points on the Atlantic coast were about equally prominent in this respect. As the years rolled on all except New York, Boston and Philadelphia dropped out, the latter finally leaving the first the supremacy.

In that early day on the beach where now in the summer season hundreds. at times thousands, of fashionable persons drive and lounge and bathe, one moonlight night a young man and a girl sat looking out upon the gilded water. They were Edmond Roscoe and Evalina Blair, the young man a son of a prominent shipowner, the girl the daughter of a merchant. There were no sounds of revelry in the little town back of them, as there are now at that season, and, as for the beach, not a sound was to be heard except the plash of the sluggish waves as they broke and rolled in on the sand.

There could be no more fitting place for a young man to tell his story to a maiden, and Edmond Roscoe was telling Evalina Blair his love for her. Then and there their troth was plighted under the yellow light of the moon. the lovers' voices accompanied by the effervescing sound of the waves as they slid up in foam on the smooth

There were both happiness and sadness for these two young creatures whose lives seemed so much to them. In a few days they were to part for several years. Evalina was to go to England that her education might be finished under the supervision of an aunt, for she was of the Blairs of Devonshire, a family of country gentlemen and ladies of blue blood, and must needs be given accomplishments suitable to her rank. Edmond was to enter Brown university, which was then in its babyhood and soon to give up its as yet only dormitory to quarter soldiers of the Revolution.

The transports of betrothal were scarcely over when Edmond said:

"You are going to a land where you will meet many persons of rank and fashion. I know that you will be a belle among them. Some man, possibly a noble, will fall in love with you. You will dread to return to this uncultivated land. You will remain in England, and I shall never see you

Looking at him through her earnest eyes, she replied: "Give me some token by which I shall remember these words of yours. If I am tempted by fortune to remain in England I promise you I will look at it and am sure it will bring up before me the happiness of this evening, and I shall choose you and the life of a simple Rhode Island woman in preference to that of a lady of rank.'

"Alas, I have nothing suitable. should give you a ring or"—
"I wish no bauble," replied Evalina.

"Give me something to remind me of these sands, the ocean, the plash of the waves.'

Looking about him, Edmond saw a seaweed lying within his reach. Taking it up, he handed it to Evalina. She took it and, spreading it out on her lap, said:

"I, Evalina, promise you, Edmond, that in case I am tempted to place rank and fortune before my love for you I will think of you with this plant of the sea before me. And I assure you that when I have finished my education I will bring the token to you as evidence that I have been true to you and my heart has been always yours.

After this assurance there was a long embrace. Then they arose and taking a path which is now a broad avenue, returned to the town.

Every day, or, rather, every evening, till Evalina's departure the lovers went to the beach. They were not troubled even in the daytime with persons to disturb their meetings. There were no bathers in fantastic suits, no carbefore Evalina's departure they passed there. The moon rose, as it were, out of the ocean, the first spark appearing vers waving until they could distinguish each other's forms no longer. During the first year of their separation Evalina wrote regularly to her lover. The second year abroad was for an education in social life. As her lover had predicted, she became a She wrote Edmond of the fine people she met, of the amusements common among persons of quality. But her letters showed no diminution of love for him and indicated that she looked forward to their reunion with as much hope and pleasure as when she had left him.

Yet there was a great deal that she did not write him. She did not write of the offers of marriage that followed one another in rapid succession.

When these offers of marriage were showered upon Evalina she declined them without giving as a reason a previous attachment. Later, possibly as one might hide behind gauze, she frequently wore as a decoration the seaweed that her American lover had given her. Sometimes it was tacked to her skirt, sometimes she wore it in her corsage, and again it would be intertwined with her hair. In time she came to be called the Seaweed Lady. Meanwhile Roscoe was studying as a collegian, though his mind was with his heart, and that was across the ocean. He read with avidity Evalina's letters and shuddered as he thought of the differences between himself, an undergraduate of a college but a few years old, without fortune, compared with some coroneted man with vast estates. Evalina's letters were reassuring, but she was growing from maidenhood to womanhood, and would she not give way at last?

However, the period allotted for her sojourn abroad was drawing to a close. She did not write her lover that she was coming home for the reason that she did not know if she would be permitted to return. Her parents were much chagrined at hearing that she had refused an earl and the second son of a duke and were debating whether to send the funds for her passage back to America or insist that she remain longer.

It was two years from the time of Evalina's departure that a storm such as Newport had not experienced in many years broke upon the coast. For three days the giant waves struck wildly upon the cliffs and rolled far up into Narragansett bay. Then, on the evening of the third day, the clouds broke away in the west, and the sun set in golden splendor.

That night the moon was at the full. As the sun went down the queen of night rose. Edmond, desiring to view the effect of the storm on the waves, when night had fallen and the moor was lighting the land and the water, started for the beach. The path was lonely, and there was terror in the tumbling of the great waves on the The only likeness to the nigh of Edmond and Evalina's betrothal was the full moon.

He had passed midway from the town to the water when he saw before him a figure that he knew to be a woman by her garments fluttering in the wind, which was still strong. She seemed to be coming toward him, but as he advanced drew no nearer to him. He went on until he came to the edge of the beach and saw her still distant from him, sometimes flitting nearer, sometimes farther, and always seeming to rock like a bird resting the crest of a wave.

Whether it was the night, still disturbed by the storm that had passed, or something bewildering in this unsteady figure, Roscoe could never tell, but an appalling premonition stretched a pall over him like the wings of some huge black bird. Something within him seemed to say: "A great misfortune has fallen upon you. The wind and the waves are a dirge. Be strong or you will be crushed."

And now, having reached a point overlooking the water, the sands being soaked, progress was slower. Scattered ragged clouds were flying above, now and again dashing across the face of the moon and shutting off its light. At these dark periods the flitting figure was lost, but reappeared when the cloud had passed and the full light of the moon was released.

Edmond had spent many an hour when home from college on the spot where he and Evalina had spoken their betrothal, and he saw that the figure was slowly moving toward it. Yet it was the movement of a floating object, driven by alternate advancing and receding waters, yet borne by an invisible tide toward a given point. But notwithstanding this apparently slow movement he gained but little on the figure. At last it reached the very spot where he and Evalina had plighted their troth. There it paused.
Hastening his steps so far as he could—the moon at the moment was overcast—he advanced to join the figure.

When he was a few yards from it a bright light burst from the moon and revealed—Evalina, looking at him with pale and melancholy visage.

He sprang toward her with outstretched arms, but at the moment another black cloud swept across the face of the only available light and hid his from her. When it had passed she had vanished.

At his feet was a strip of seaweed. When morning came a boatman stalking along over the soft sands saw a man lying so still that he thought it might be one cast in from a wreck by the storm. He found Edmond Roscoe There was life in him, and the boatman after rousing him helped him home.

A ship came in and with it news that Evalina had departed for America. But the vessel on which she sailed never reached port. Pieces of wreck came ashore on the coast, denoting that a ship had foundered, but no fragment bore its name.

Edmond Roscoe never went back to college. He had lost all ambition, all desire for life. It was claimed that he had received some physical stroke which impaired his mental faculties. Whether this were so or whether the loss of his betrothed and his ailment were a coincidence was never settled. He was often seen on the beach at Newport wandering about aimless ly or sitting on one spot looking out on the water. This continued till be was an old man, and in the town in which he lived a few residents of other places began to build cottages for summer residences.

DO SOME DEEP THINKING.

Help Your Mind by Going Into a "Brown Study" Once In Awhile.

"If the 'brown study' were more often cultivated many people would be happier and more clear thinking would be done." says the London Lancet. "It is in such a state that truths dawn suddenly and clearly upon the unclouded intelligence. It is in such a state that mighty actions are conceived, poems born at a stroke and mankind enlightened through the enlightenment of the individual.

"In this state of mind there is such a concentration of mental energy that the body is ignored. The mind, on the other hand, is so working upon the subject which concerns it, is so intent upon its own affairs, that the external world is obliterated, and any bodily discomfort that may have been pre-existing is now negligible and unnoticed."

The Lancet says the relationship be-tween mental activity and the bodily state is not realized with sufficient frequency or with sufficient thoroughness by the European of today. "The average man is too engrossed with his bodfly pabulum, and in caring for the needs of the body he neglects the needs of the mind."

Wisdom Teeth.

The wisdom teeth are the two last molar teeth to grow. They come one on each side of the jaw and arrive somewhere between the ages of twenty and twenty-five years. The name is given them because it is supposd that when a person has developed physically and mentally to the point where he has secured these last two teeth he has also arrived at the age of discretion. It does not necessarily mean that one who has cut his wisdom teeth is wise. but that, having lived long enough to grow these, which complete the full set of teeth, the person has passed sufficient actual years that if he has done what he should to fit himself for life he should have come by that time at the age of discretion or wisdom. As a matter of fact, these teeth grow about the same time in people whether they are wise or not.

Knights Templars.

During the latter half of the eleventh century pilgrims to Jerusalem began to secuted by the Turks or Saracens then in possession of the Holy Land. Nine noble knights formed a brotherhood with the object of protecting the pilgrims. The cause spread rapidly over Europe, and the knights grew to legions in number. Vows of chastity, obedience and poverty were taken, and the order, from merely protecting the pilgrims, took upon itself the task of recovering the Holy Land from the grip of the infidels. About 1120 they were given a place in the in-closure of the temple on Mount Moriah, and hence the name Templars, or Knights of the Temple of Solomon,

Made a Social Outcast In court circles in England it is a serious matter to incur royal displeasure. The man or woman who does so intentionally ceases to be recognized by his majesty, which means social extinction. The offender's name is struck out of the visiting list of every person who is anybody in society, and should the offender be a man he is politely informed that his resignation from his club or clubs would not be out of place. No man or woman of social repute will in future know him, and if he be in the army or navy he has no option but to resign, for he will find himself cut dead by every one of his brother officers.-London M. Shakespearean.

Father, in the hall, had been standing for half an hour while Millicent and Harold bade each other good night in the doorway.

"Parting," quothes Harold, "is such sweet sorrow that I could say good night till"-

At this speech father gets a Shakespearean inspiration of his own and tramps down the stairs.

Liberal Translations. At a certain foreign university the students, who had been studying Shakespeare in their native tongue, were requested by an examiner to translate into English the opening lines of Hamlet's soliloguy. "To be or not to be." The following was the result: The first Frenchman declaimed, "Towas or not to am;" the second rendered it, "To were or is to not." while the third gave a still more liberal reading, "To should or not to will."

An Odd Turkish Superstition. An odd Turkish superstition is as follows: If one finds a piece of bread lying upon the ground he must pick it up, kiss it and carry it until he finds a hole into which the bread can be inserted. To step upon a piece of bread or to leave it lying upon the ground is one of the unpardonable sins and dooms the offender to the third hell, where he is perpetually gored by an ox that has but a single horn that is in the center of his forehead.

We talk of a smile of defiance. There is really no such thing. Such a so called smile is nothing more nor less than a snarl, a survival of the way our savage ancestors had of showing their teeth in order to strike fear into the hearts of their enemies. The real smile of pleasure begins with slightly opening the mouth, and is, of course, traceable to the joy of those same savage forefathers of ours at the prospect of Avoid "Spring Fever" by Cutting Down Fuel.

SUMMER DEMANDS LESS FOOD

Warm Weather Means You Can Replace Hot Soups, Thick Gravies, Heavy Sweets and Rich Pastries With Greens, Salads, Fish and Fruits.

It will be only a few days now before some one will be heard to complain of "that tired feeling" so inseparably connected with springtime. But why not try a little modern therapeutics and see if you cannot escape that tired feeling this year? The tired feeling comes from only one thing, and that is an overclogged system. To use the hackneyed but nevertheless illuminating comparison, the body may be likened to a steam heating plant which has been going at a pretty high pressure all winter, but now, when the weather becomes warmer, we must open the furnace door, shut down the drafts and keep the fire as low as possible if we do not want to be overheated. Similarly we must cut down the fuel supply of the body with the approach of warm weather. It is foolish to keep on stok-ing our engines when the higher temperature about us does not require that the body work so hard to keep warm.

The only way to keep cool and thus not feel tired is by avoiding those foods which create heat or build tissue too generously. First of these are all the fats and then the starches or sweets. Let us therefore avoid the alluring doughnut, the elusive croquette, the pastry tray and the meats with rich gravies, for foods that are fat or heavy should be shunned in the changing season, when the body most par-ticularly cries out for foods that are cooling, refreshing and light. Avaunt with puddings, discard the pot roast. and in their places substitute salads fish, fruits and the uncooked cereals. Give the body a chance to work off the clinkers of winter without choking it up with new fuel. Patronize nature's medicines and you won't need the doctor's. Drink plenty of water, lemon and fruit juice. Cut down your helping by a third and see if you don't feel as sprightly as a robin instead of logy and weak. Your spring tonic is on the vegetable stand, and your spring pre-scription is to eat less and drink more.

The group of foods called proteins, of which meat is most important, are those which, science tells us, build up body tissues. Now, the spring is not the season to build up tissue unless we have been overworked during winter; also the protein of meat is particularly likely to leave a residue of uric acid in the body. But our aim now is to house clean the system, and we want to avoid complicating the house-cleaning by eating foods which will leave still more refuse. Elimination of meat almost entirely is one of the wisest plans for summer health. Cheese also is not an advisable diet for most.

The Vogue of Wicker.

Many of the wicker materials—reed, rattan, cane and bamboo—are of Asiatic origin, Singapore being the world market for them. Reeds are used both whole and split.

Bamboo, while not strictly wicker, is often used with rattan or with grass malting. Its chief merit is its cheap-

Grass, too, is hardly wicker, but is used as an outer textual covering rather than as a material for construction, the base being some light wood like willow.

Baked Breast of Lamb.
Remove the skin, put the meat in a stewpan, cover with boiling water and summer twenty-five minutes. Bone. dredge with flour, pepper and salt, roll and skewer into shape, add one cupful of the water in which the lamb was cooked and bake until tender and brown, basting frequently. Serve with cucumber sauce.

Parsian Shawls.

The "shal" of Kerman-whence our word "shawl"-is made of goats' hair. Like the carpets, the shawl patterns are learned by heart, and the work is even finer. Children also do this work. The finest product is a fir cone pattern, a rich color effect, made especialfor the governor of the province, who wears it as a robe of honor on the Persian New Year's day.

Appropriate Styles. "That elocutionist believes in dress ing the part for any recitation." "How do you mean?"

"Why, when she read the story about the sailors deserted on the lonely island she wore a costume of maroon, and at her lecture on Celtic wit her dress was all trimmed up with Irish point."-Ex-

No More Asthma. Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy sounds the death knell of this trying trouble. It stops the awful choking and painful breathing. It guards against night attacks and gives renewed ability to sleep and rest the whole night long. Much is claimed for this remedy, but nothing but what can be demonstrated by a trial. If you suffer from asthma try it and convince yourself of its great value.

An Ancient Superstition.

An Ancient Superstition.

Superstition still survives in County Antrim, and an illustration was recently furnished by a remarkable incident which occurred at a place called Aghadalgan, near Crumlin. A few weeks ago a farmer was working in a field about 200 yards from his dwelling-house, when the latter was broken into and a sum of £50 abstracted. He advised the Crumlin police, who proceeded to make investigations, but were unable to find the slightest clue that would lead to the detection of the criminal. On the following day, accompanied by his brother, the farmer paid a visit to Belfast, and on their return in the evening a story got circulated that they had been in consultation with a witch, who produced a mirror, in which was reflected the guilty person, and that she assured them the lost money would soon return. And, behold, on the next morning, when the rural postman was coming in from his rounds, he discovered, on a window-ledge at the Rose's Lane Ends Post Office, a small discovered, on a window-ledge at the Rose's Lane Ends Post Office, a small addressed to the farmer which on being opened was found to contain £45 10s. It is stated that the farmer intends to consult the Belfast witch again about the bal-ance not returned.

Sex Antagonism Stopped.

One of the most subtle results of the war is the far-reaching change in the relations of the sexes to each In the relations of the sexes to each other. Before the scraps of paper came to be torn up there was a great deal of sex-antagonism about, but the declaration of war seemed to blow it away as if by magic. Instantly, the sexes fell into their proper places, the monto fight for their per places, the men to fight for their homes, the women to stop there and "carry on." Like all great things, it was wonderfully simple, and we never noticed it till months afterwards.

"But I doubt whether this happy state of affairs will last," says Mrs. Chirton Braby in a London, Eng., newspaper. "With all my heart I would it might so prove. But to me it seems that the most bitter war of all will be the sex war to come. Not, perhaps, quite in the near hereafter, but, roughly speaking, within a few years of peace."

To Exclude All Aliens.

At a communication of the Grand Lodge of England in London recently the Duke of Connaught was unanimously re-elected Grand Master of England Free Masonry, for the ensuing year. In June of last year, Grand Lodge decided that in order to prevent the peace and harmony of the craft being disturbed it was necessary that all brethren of German, Austrian, Hungarian, or Turkish birth should not during the continuance of the war attend any Masonic meeting of any description. It was determined at this meeting to extend this restriction "until Grand Lodge, after the treaty of peace has been signed, should otherwise determine," which might result in a perpetual exclusion of all brethren of alien enemy birth. At a communication of the Grand enemy birth.

UNDERDRAINAGE

We already know the advantage to be gained by underdrainage. Now the question evolves down to the point of locating the drains. The observing farmer or cultivator who has acquainted himself with his fields during his labor upon them through successive seasons will have noted the location of parts on which excessive water at certain times oc-casioned a partial or total failure of crops. Knowledge of this nature is of first importance in the location of a system of drains that shall relieve his land of all excessive water.

In addition, the farmer who has familiarized himself through his field operations with the composition, structure, texture and drainage properties of the soil and subsoil of his land, has acquired data of utmost value as a preliminary to the proper placing of his drain.

With this information the farmer should apply to the Agricultural Representative for the county to have a drainage survey made of his farm. If it can possibly be arranged, the work will be done from the staff at his office free of charge; but if time does not permit a qualified man will be secured from the Drainage Department of the Ontario Agricultural College to do the work. The expense to be borne by the farmer will be a porportion of his railway expenses divided between the number of parties who are having drainage surveys made.

When a drainage engineer makes a thorough survey of the farm, the elevation of the land is taken at the corners of every one hundred square feet. This enables the general contour of the ground to be shown on the map, and the direction and course of each drain is plainly marked as well as the grade of drain and the number and size of tile. In addition to the use of the knowledge acquired relative to the situation, the exercise of discretion and good judgment is imperative. Previous experience is, of course, a valuable aid here but thought and painstaking in the application of the data secured will in a good measure compensate for its

The entire system should be decided upon at this time and recorded so that to the work now done, other portions can be added later and when all are finished a complete, well-arranged drainage system will be in operation.

The sketch map places the facts which have a bearing upon the locaform so that the topography of the entire field can be seen at a glance. (To be continued.)
