INTERESTING LETTER FROM W. R. MORSE

Lawrencetown Boy Doing Noble Work in a Mission Hospital in Seufu, China

June 18. Our little girl are up on the Hill. It is certainly terribly hot here in Seufu. The Hospital work is going on well. Have had seventeen operations (surgical) in last five months. So you see I have been keeping busy all right. It is a tremendous satisfaction to be up and doing in a job that is exactly to one's liking.

August 19. The Military Commander at Ching King has rebelled and declared Szechuan independent of the Republic. We only hear vague rumors of battles, but not a trustworthy report to write about. At present there is no reason to apprehend any special danger. (When you record this our news will be old). This week, above Seufu, not sixty miles from here, robbers attacked a boat. As it did not stop when ordered by them they opened fire with the result five men were shot. Three of them I have here now,—one shot through the chest died about an hour ago. The other two, though seriously injured, may live. This does not look particularly peaceful. I am glad the days of hating the foreigner have gone by. I believe we are safe, especially so any American Mission. The Chinese have much to say in praise of United States of America, and good reason too, for no other country of any importance has recognized the New Republic of China. To illustrate their true democratic, republican, progressive-socialistic government, I will mention the fact of a proclamation just lately put out by the officials here, viz: "If people congregate in tea shops, on the street or anywhere else to talk or circulate any political rumor, they are subject to a fine of $200 first offence, $500 for second offence, and death for third. (Remember this is in a city where the wages of a good carpenter or stone mason per day is between 11c and 12c, mex or 5¢ to 6c gold.) The officials here in Szechuan are new and young as a rule, but the methods of governing are the same as the old before their freedom. In Seufu of late, as many as ten men have been beheaded in a day for stealing. We are living in a free Republic said to be patterned after United States of America. The results in practical working don't harmonize with the theory of democracy. In fact the rule of present officials is much like the very Chinese way in which the society "dudes" wear their American clothes. For example a young chap came to me, to be treated, dressed in the height of foreign fashion,—you could hear his boots a long distance off, the squeak was so pronounced. When I asked him to undress, he had no shirt on; he removed coat and vest, while his high and shiny celluloid collar and dickie still stayed on. More could be said as to fit, quality and style, but I forbear.

I get discouraged sometimes, but I hope it will reckon up that we are doing the best we can, when the great Reckoning Day comes.

W. R. MORSE.

Boston Post of Oct. 4.—The largest swordfish to reach Boston this season $52. Expressage from Nova Scotia totalled $14.50, and the big fish weighed 808 pounds.

July 4th.

We are sweating, sweating and "smelling" along the uneven tenor of our way. Yet we are doing something each day. For how much it counts, I do not know, but I feel that if one does his duty wherever he is or whatever it may be, there is no occasion to worry over the outcome being all right. Have over forty in the Hospital now. Did another cataract operation this week,—the second successful one since opening up. Last night (late for China, from 9 to 11 p.m.) I was called out to see a policeman who lived outside the city, and the gates were locked, but there was no trouble on that score, for the police control the gates. When we arrived at the gate there was no key. A man was sent to get it. After some time he returned with the wrong key and had to go back for the right one. At the time the patient was suffering, how much you can imagine when I tell you he had been seized by gamblers and cayenne pepper and lime had been rubbed in his eyes. It took some time to relieve him, but finally he got easier and today is in the Hospital, and seems very grateful to me.

August 8.

Well, from all appearances, rumors and telegrams, there is evidently some considerable commotion going on in some parts of China. In fact, it looks uncomfortably like a civil war, but run in a Chinese way (and that makes it none the less serious.) At Seufu all the business seems to be going on just as usual, and the people act toward us as they always have done. But the natives are excited and run to us for news. We are in receipt of reliable news from China Inland Mission about the war, or revolution, but we are requested not to tell the Chinese because it surely would be disquieting to them. We fear our letters will be intercepted. We do hope they will come and go safely,—it is such a comfort to get letters from home. I don't think there is danger to us personally. Anna and

Letter from John N. Chute Now in London

(Register, Oct. 9th.)

Heavy September winds and rough seas destroyed the pleasure of what might have been a most enjoyable trip from Halifax to London. We were not able to enjoy much fresh air on deck, and it was with considerable satisfaction that we again set foot on solid earth.

On taking up the daily papers here we were much impressed with the serious amount of unrest amongst the labor people of this country. Strikes of railway employees in Ireland spread to Liverpool, Birmingham and other large cities. The strikes in England originated by the union men here refusing to handle goods from ports in Ireland where strikes were in progress. As the railway and steamship companies could not discriminate in goods offered for conveyance they discharged the men who refused to handle the goods. This in turn led to strikes.

Strikes of railway employees in England are of interest to us as apple shippers, from the fact that should a general strike be declared it would reduce the demand for our apples by about one-half. Happily this matter has for the present been settled, but it has been sufficient to show how strikes may occur from very trivial and unreasonable causes.

Just lately one of the drivers of a motor bus company in London put a union button on the lapel of his coat. On refusing to take this off he was discharged, with the result that all the men employed by the company as drivers went out on strike. The company was forced to acknowledge the union. In case this had not been conceded there might have been a general strike of all vehicle drivers in the city.

The great dock strike of 1912 in England was brought on by union men insisting that one non-union man who had started work must be discharged. This strike proved disastrous to the apple shippers of Australia. Luckily the matter was settled before our fruit came on. During this strike hundreds of tons of food stuff was allowed to spoil in the docks while at the same time wives and families of strikers were reduced to starvation and were only saved by charity. In the settlement the dock men gained nothing of any benefit to them, while the dock people took this as an excuse for putting up all dock charges five per cent, which cost us thirty-three cents on each one hundred barrels.

These are only a few of the cases which serve to show the lack of harmony between the masters and laborers of this country. This condition comes mainly from the fact that English employers have held themselves entirely above and apart from their help. There is a great lack of sympathy and harmony, and now that laborers are beginning to feel their power through the unions they are inclined to be too exacting and independent.

What is a reasonable solution of labor troubles? It appears to me that only a proper system of profit-sharing, by which the capitalist is allowed a fair interest on capital invested. The employed should be allowed to participate in some reasonable way in the profits of the business. Such a system would give the laborer an interest in the results of his labor and tend to make harmony and good will among all concerned. There are a large number of cases where such co-operative schemes have worked out in an entirely satisfactory manner. There is no reason why, under proper conditions, the people who are in no way to blame, should suffer by disputes between employer and employees. It certainly seems unreasonable that strikes should be allowed to hold up the business of the country and cause loss to the strikers themselves and suffering to their families. The law should provide for a proper investigation and an enforcement of what is found to be right.

Annapolis, Kings and Hants Exhibition

(Windsor Tribune)

Glorious autumn weather crowned the opening of the three counties Exhibition at Windsor, Tuesday afternoon. The Drill Hall, where the Exhibition was held, never presented a more attractive appearance than on the present occasion. Although the fruit exhibit was not as large as three years ago, yet the varieties shown were of first-class quality. The display of roots and other farm products was described as the best ever seen in Nova Scotia.

The poultry exhibit was far and away beyond any previous show, and the domestic department excelled former displays. The horse and cattle show was a great attraction.

When the Governor and others ascended the platform the Citizens' band played "God Save the King," and they rendered other selections during the afternoon.

The Exhibition was formally opened at 2.30 p.m. by His Honor Lieutenant Governor McGregor. Associated with Governor McGregor on the platform were William O'Brien, President of the Exhibition Commission, and Professor Cumming, of the Nova Scotia Agricultural College, Dr. J. W. Reid, M. L. A., Albert Parsons, M. L. A., John McKee, Halifax, and members of the Executive Committee. Mr. O'Brien introduced the speakers, expressing his pleasure at the Governor's presence.

The display of fancy and useful articles exceeded former Exhibitions, and was greatly admired. The Committee of ladies in charge of the work deserve much praise for the arrangement of display and the care of the exhibits.

The educational exhibit was small, Windsor Schools being the only exhibitors, with the exception of manual training and domestic science articles from Kentville.

The work of the manual training school was greatly admired, and the domestic science displays of Windsor-Kentville and Edgell received a special amount of interest from the visitors.

The general arrangements for the protection of the fruit and other exhibits reflect much credit on the committees in charge.

The Citizens' Band, under the leadership of Windsor's popular young bandmaster, Mr. Edward Croft, rendered choice music during the different days of the Exhibition, the performers being much admired by the visitors.

The attendance was in some respects disappointing, but the gate receipts amounted to somewhat over $1,000, and it is hoped that when all accounts are closed that there will not be a deficit.

How Money Multiplies!

Buy a $100.6 p. c. Bond on our partial payment plan each year for 21-years, invest the interest in the same way, and you will then have accumulated the handsome sum of $4,219.41. This is the way money multiplies when scientifically invested.

How many young men and young women could, by strict economy, set aside enough from their savings to make the easy monthly payments on a $100 Bond each year? And if one is able to buy two $100 Bonds each year, in 21-years he will have a little fortune of $8,487.51.

An interesting table illustrates these accumulations and a very readable booklet explains the plan. Shall we send them?

The Liquor Traffic in Nova Scotia

The sale of liquor has been suppressed in many parts of the Province. In some towns, owing to the perfidy of officials and the apathy of the citizens, liquor is openly sold in violation of law.

In the City of Halifax, under protection of Provincial law, liquor is sold in forty-six bar-rooms and a half dozen or more wholesale houses.

The agents of the Halifax dealers solicit trade in every part of the Province.

HALIFAX THE BASE OF SUPPLY.

Scores of communities where the bar-room has become a thing of the past, are now suffering by reason of conditions in Halifax. Men who formerly patronized the drinking place or in other ways acquired the drink habit, and now crave for liquor can easily obtain supplies. As the drinking places in the towns, villages and rural communities are being closed, Halifax is more and more becoming the base of supply. By boat and by train almost every day in the year the Halifax liquor dealer sends out consignments, large and small. It is sent to Scott Act counties marked, "For Personal Use." This is done legally. Under the amended Scott Act the Halifax dealer is protected.

FRAUDULENT SHIPMENTS.

Under the Nova Scotia Temperance Act the Halifax dealer is not protected. Liquor is sent fraudulently to Nova Scotia Temperance Act Counties. It is shipped in all sorts and sizes of packages. So expert have the dealers become in the matter of fraudulent shipping that only occasionally is it possible for officers to detect the shipments. The dealers have been more than once convicted.

HALIFAX INFLUENCE.

Halifax does more than send supplies of liquor into towns, villages and rural communities. Its licensed bar-rooms are training schools whose bar-tenders become the most defiant dive keepers in the different places where liquor is illicitly sold. In addition to this "the trade" in Halifax co-operates with the town or village law-breakers when a fight is on for law enforcement.

Is it any wonder that good citizens throughout the Province are filled with indignation as they think of the far-reaching injurious effect of the Halifax trade?

It is no exaggeration to say that the licensed traffic in Halifax is an unmitigated curse to the rest of Nova Scotia.

IS THERE A REMEDY?

Is there a remedy? Certainly! The time has come for action.

By vote of the citizens of Halifax, or, better, by vote of our legislators in the House of Assembly, the license system ought to be abolished within a year. It has been tolerated too long.

On the requisition of one-fourth of the resident ratepayers of the City of Halifax, the City Council must direct that the votes of the electors of the City be forthwith taken for or against the granting of licenses. If the electors declare against license, the City becomes dry. At the present time signatures are being obtained to the necessary petitions, and within a few months the citizens of Halifax may decide to abolish the traffic.

If they do not so decide, if they rather decide to permit a traffic, which is not only a menace to the moral and economic life of the City, but to the province at large, it is not unreasonable to predict that the members of the House of Assembly, representing the various constituencies and interested in the welfare of the whole province will be constrained by direct legislation at an early date to abolish the traffic.

SATISFACTORY CONDITIONS
Conditions will be satisfactory in the province, so far as provisional legislation is concerned, only when we secure the abolition of the licensed traffic in Halifax and the thorough enforcement of the Nova Scotia Temperance Act in every County.

To obtain thorough enforcement the Inspector-in-Chief must be empowered to send deputies to prosecute violators of law where local officials are inefficient.

Sentiment in Nova Scotia demands the overthrow of the liquor traffic in every part of the province by a well-enforced prohibitory law.

ANOTHER TERRIBLE OCEAN DISASTER

Fire on Steamer Volturmo Bound Rotterdam to Halifax Causes Disaster and the Loss of 135 Lives

London, October 11.—Not since the Titanic sank has Europe been so thrilled as by a wireless message today telling of the burning of the Halifax bound steamship Volturmo in mid-Atlantic, with a loss, so far as is at present known, of 135 lives and the rescue of 521. The survivors are now aboard a fleet of steamers summoned by the Volturmo's call for help some of which are bound eastward and others westward.

The Volturmo sailed from Rotterdam on October second for Halifax and New York. According to the official statement she carried twenty-two first cabin passengers, 538 steerage and a crew numbering ninety-six.

The rescue ships reached the scene of the disaster in plenty of time to save all, but for hours stood by the blazing vessel, impotent because of the storm, being unable to reach the agonized men, women and children crowding the after part of the ship and within a stone's throw.

All night long (Thursday) the lifeboats made a desperate effort to get alongside the Volturmo, but the waves beat them back again and again, and not until the storm abated at day-light on Friday did the rescuers succeed in removing the survivors from the doomed ship. Even now only the fringe of one of the most thrilling tales of the sea is available. Exactly how the rescue was effected is not known. The Volturmo was well equipped with boats, sufficient, the agents say, for a thousand people, but the vicious sea or lack of boat drill, or panic among the passengers, prevented the successful employment of them.

The rescue ships were able to lower lifeboats, but apparently most of the boats launched from the Volturmo were smashed or upset and the occupants drowned. Two of the boats, crowded with passengers, are reported to have got away from ship, but a search for them has proved fruitless, and they have practically been given up as lost. The occupants of these boats are included in the death toll.

The steamer Carmania, bound from New York to Liverpool, was seventy-eight miles away when the call for help sounded. Captain Barr, ordering full steam, in spite of the gale, drove through the seas at twenty knots an hour, and was first of the fleet to reach the burning vessel.

She was followed by La Touraine, Mjneapolis, Rappahannock, Czar, Narragansett, Devonian, Kronland, Grosier Kurfurst and Seydlitz at various hours throughout the day. But try as they might, the rescuing vessels could get neither line nor lifeboat to the Volturmo, the forward part of which was almost hidden by a dense cloud of smoke when the Carmania arrived.

The burning steamer lay in the trough of the sea pounding helplessly with her propellers fouled by the boats' tackle. The terrified passengers were huddled together as far as it was possible to get from the flames, while throughout the day the

ANNOUNCEMENT

TO THE PUBLIC— We have decided that on the 1st of November, 1913, we will commence a STRICTLY CASH BUSINESS.

In many ways we regret to make this change, as custom has established the credit system and it has gone to such an extreme that in some instances it is thought to be almost impossible to do business without the furnishing of the extra capital for the convenience of our customers.

The keenness of competition to-day created through the high cost of living and increased expenses of business, and the fact that other large houses are adopting the cash system in order to enable them to retail goods at lower prices, forces us to this decision.

It may seem hard to some of our patrons to feel that the firm they have dealt with for years have taken this step, but we think that after a little consideration, even these friends will see the mutual benefit to be derived from a CASH SYSTEM.

Under the credit system you are not only supporting your own family, but assisting to support those who are not willing to be self supporting, in addition to helping pay the book-keeping and interest on money at present tied up in unpaid accounts, etc. While under the cash system we will be able to keep a larger and more modern assortment of goods in stock AT PRICES THAT WILL APPEAL TO YOU.

We trust that you may see your way clear to still continue your business with us, in any case do not withdraw your patronage without first giving us a few months trial. We will take all kinds of produce as cash, balancing each transaction as it occurs.

Again thanking you for the many favors you have shown us from time to time in the past, and assuring you that we will endeavor to fill all your orders under the new system to the very best of our ability. We are

HYMENEAL

MORRIS—BEALS.

A quiet and pretty wedding took place at Lawrencetown, Wednesday morning, when Mr. E. Fenton Morris and Miss Mary E. Beals, both of Lawrencetown, were united in marriage. Rev. H. G. Mellick, B. D., performed the impressive ceremony in the presence of a few relatives and friends.

Prof. Morse played the wedding march and at the close of the ceremony, sang and played several happy selections.

The bride looked charming in a beautiful white silk gown. Little Miss Beals, niece of the bride, was maid of honor. After the ceremony refreshments were served and the happy young couple drove to Paradise, where they took the train for a honeymoon trip to St. John and other places. They were followed by the best wishes of a host of friends.

On their return they will reside in Lawrencetown, where Mr. Morris has built a beautiful residence.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris returned on Saturday and were saluted by the lads in town in a very nice manner. The choir of which Mrs. Morris is a member, called and presented her with some handsome china. Congratulations were conveyed by Mr. B. Banks, after which a lunch was served. Mr. and Mrs. Morris will be "at home" to friends on Thursday and Friday afternoons and evenings.

PANAMA CANAL WELL NIGH FINISHED.

Washington, October 10.—Pressing a key at the White House at two o'clock this afternoon, President Wilson will release an electric current that will travel overland and under sea to the Panama canal to discharge a charge of dynamite and destroy Gamboa dike. This dike is the last great physical obstruction to the opening of water communication between the two oceans, although the wreckage of the dike and two earth slides, one at Cucaracha and another at Gold Hill, must be cut through before the canal actually can be opened. A fleet of dredges will attack the slides as soon as they have cleared the wreckage of the dike, and although Colonel Goshalis, in his telegram to the canal commission today, made no prediction, it is believed it will be possible to have the lighter boats used by the canal diggers to pass from ocean to ocean in a few weeks.

CARE OF THE INSANE

A building is to be opened shortly in connection with the Nova Scotia Hospital, at Dartmouth, which will mark a new era in the care of the insane in Nova Scotia. This building is designed very closely after general hospital plans the intention being to make the treatment of the insane approximate as nearly as possible that which is afforded to patients whose illness is other than mental. Special wards are provided for the care of tubercular patients according to the most modern methods, and isolation wards are also provided for other forms of infectious diseases. The building contains an operating room, clinical laboratory, and other adjuncts of an up-to-date hospital. Broad verandas are connected with each ward, so that patients may be wheeled out in their beds, to enjoy and profit by the beautiful surroundings and pure air. The sanitary arrangements are as nearly perfect as possible. The building is intended mainly for the treatment of patients whose mental trouble is recent development the expectation being that with improved facilities recovery rate will be bettered.

The intention is to staff this building with a relatively large number of nurses, and very comfortable quarters are being provided for the members of the nursing staff. When the new building is opened the hospital will be able to accommodate more than five hundred patients. The training school for nurses has an excellent reputation, and its graduates are in ready demand for all types of nursing.

The teaching session begins in October, so that the present is a favourable time for those intending to take up nursing as a profession to apply for positions.

OCTOBER ROD AND GUN

The October number of "Rod and Gun in Canada," published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont., has been received and justifies its reputation as Canada's leading sportsman's magazine.

The cover cut this month is worthy of special comment, depicting as it does "A Madonna of the Marshes," a cow-moose and her calf, photographed in their natural habitat. "Moose the Swamp Hog of the Canadian Forest" is the leading article, being a study of moose in Henry Braithwaite's country in Central New Brunswick, with photographs of live moose in their natural environment.

"When Fortune Smiled in Mooseland" is the story of a big game hunt in Northern Ontario and is brimful of interest to every sportsman. "The Game Trails of Canada" by S. E. Sangster is a resume of the variety and character of game to be found in the different Canadian provinces and includes an estimate of the approximate outlay involved in a big game hunt, for a non-resident, in each of these provinces. Other stories there are of out-door interest, and the regular departments are well maintained. Under Alpine Club of Canada appears the story of the "Cathedral Camp" held this summer in the Canadian Rockies and under The Traps department there is a special write up of the 13th Annual Tournament of the Dominion of Canada Trap Shooting Association.

LARGEST FARM IN THE WORLD

The farm of Joseph O. Thompson outside of Birmingham, Ala., is said to be one of the largest in the world.

It comprises 25,000 acres in the famous black belt, which is considered the most fertile farm land to be found anywhere. If this farm were to be cut into city lots there would be 400,000 inhabitants, figuring six to each family. Two hundred miles of wire encloses the farm.

It takes the man who inspects the fence five days to ride around it on horseback.

To properly care for the farm 1,200 are employed who, with their families make a population larger than the average Alabama city. Two hundred and thirty plows are always in use.

Chased by an Ostrich

(By J. Alden Loring.)

Probably the most amusing incident that happened to any member of the Roosevelt African Expedition occurred to me before we had been in Africa a week; I was chased by an ostrich. The ostrich was not a wild one, for the wild birds are far too cunning to do anything so adventurous. We saw them feeding in pairs and small groups on the veldt, but they were too shy to be easily approached.

The ostrich that gave chase to me was a huge bird that belonged to an English settler by the name of Percival. It was a member of a fine flock he had reared from eggs brought him by the natives. He valued the old birds at $400 each.

At night, Percival kept the ostriches in a kraal—brush enclosure,—and early each morning let them out to feed on grass, while a Kikuyu boy stood guard. The native was armed with an eight-foot pole, at the end of which was a wide croch. This stick he used to protect himself when an ostrich became ill-tempered and attacked him; he would push the fork against the bird's neck, and hold the creature off it until became discouraged and was willing to "be good."

A cock ostrich when peevish has a disagreeable habit of running up to a person, bowing him over with a blow of his foot, and then dancing on him.

Unless a man has one of those forked poles when he is attacked by an ostrich, he is likely to be seriously injured by the bird's powerful kicks. In such a case the best thing to do is to lie flat on the ground, and let yourself be trodden on. You may be pounded black and blue, and badly bruised, but even that is better than having a fractured skull, broken ribs or limbs, or great gashes cut in your flesh by the bird's strong feet.

It is the duty of safari managers to warn greenhorns of the danger from tame ostriches, and as one of Percival's birds was noted for its truculent disposition, our party had been properly cautioned.

Unpacking our outfit at Kapit, where we made the first camp, we remained there only long enough to put things in working order, and then rode across the veldt for half a day to Sir Alfred Pease's ranch.

All along the route we saw thousands of animals. It seemed impossible that in this age there could be any spot on the earth where animal life was so abundant. Herds of zebras, hartbeests, Thompson's gazelles and wildebeests, in separate bands and sometimes mingled together in one great herd, were feeding on all sides.

The wildebeest is a remarkable animal. Some herds are so shy that it is almost impossible to stalk them. Others seem full of spirit of playfulness, and will caper about a hunter as if trying to induce him to join them in a frolic.

Doctor Mearns was once pursuing on horseback a wounded animal, when a herd of wildebeests joined in the chase, and for half a mile ran by his side, tossing their heads in the air and bucking and kicking as if they were thoroughly enjoying the hunt.

It was a gently rolling country, and was a scarcity of water at Sir Alfred's place and his shooting box was too small to accommodate us all, Doctor Mearns and I and most of the porters camped at Potha River, about four miles away.

Three-quarters of a mile behind the camp was Percival's place. In the evening of our first day at Potha, he came down and asked us to visit him and see what a typical East African ranch was like. On the way I noticed numerous small earth mounds that looked as if they had been blown up by our Western pocket-gophers.

Now, my special work with the expedition was collecting small mammals, and naturally when I discovered these mounds I became interested. Early the next morning I shouldered a bag of steel traps and, with my rifle and shotgun, made for the spot where I had seen the gopher workings the evening before. I wore a green shirt, which was supposed to serve the double purpose of being invisible to animals and of tempering the rays of the powerful tropical sun.

We arrived at the spot, a-out four hundred yards from Percival's house, and I began digging into a burrow with a long case-knife, with the intention of setting a steel trap in the underground passageway. The animals live a subterranean life, and appear above ground only when in the course of their work they break through the surface in order to push out the earth that they have excavated.

It was a gently rolling country, and the only trees in sight were the scattering ones along the edge of the river where our camp was pitched.

I had set one trap and was on my knees, digging into another mound. My gun-bearer, wondering, no doubt, what new kind of white man I could be, stood by, watching my actions.

Glancing up from my work I noticed the Kikuyu boy driving the flock of ostriches from the enclosure and starting them off to pasture.

Presently I heard him shout, and I saw that an enormous cock bird had left the kraal, and was heading in our direction in a very significant manner.

Of course I had a gun and a rifle with which to protect myself, but the $400 that I would have to pay if I killed the bird made me reluctant to kill it.

I jumped to my feet and looked in some perplexity at the gun-bearer. "What shall we do?" I said. "Run!"

Although he could not understand English, he must have known by my tone that I was asking a question, and so he replied with the only English word he knew: "Yes."

I did not wait to pick up the bag of traps, but snatched the shotgun. The gun-bearer grabbed the rifle, and off we started. It was fully half a mile over the gently rolling veldt to camp, and it seemed that the great bird would easily overhaul us before we could reach it, but the thought of the $400 stimulated me to my top speed. Yet I did not dare to throw away the shot gun.

We had a lead of three hundred yards. At intervals I looked back over my shoulder, and saw the ostrich swinging over the ground at a graceful trot; his wings were half-raised, and at every step his body rose and sank as if it were resting on springs.

A herd of about twenty-five wildebeests were just ahead of us; when they saw us bearing down on them they divided to let us pass. Then they lined up on each side, about a hundred yards away, and dashed along parallel with us, tossing their heads, bucking and frisking, and evidently taking a deep interest in the race.

It was plain that the ostrich was not exerting himself. Perhaps he thought it would be more fun to run us down and tire us out than to end the race by a sudden burst of speed. With each stride, his feet reached out like those of a race horse, and as he drew near I saw that his bill was half-open. With his extremely small head mounted on his snake-like neck, his open mouth gave him an idiotic appearance.

When he was within forty or fifty yards of us he suddenly began surging back and forth, and it seemed that I could read his thoughts: "I've got you. You can't get away!"

And he did have us. But the ridiculousness of our position, together with a nearer view of the green shirt that I wore, seemed to intoxicate him with ecstasy; the foolish old bird threw himself flat on the ground, lifted his wings over his back, and began rocking from side to side, and twisting his head and neck about as if he were ready to burst with laughter.

How long he continued to act so I do not know; I was too busy watching for the green covers of the tent, to loom ahead. But I do know that we put two hundred yards between us and the bird before he again started after us. We were so near the camp that the wildebeests had veered off, and now stood watching from a safe distance the finish of the race.

When at last we came within shouting distance of the tent, I tried to call, but I could hardly make a sound. I turned to the gun-bearer and by signs made him understand that I wished him to attract attention. He shouted long and loud.

The porters came swarming from their tents, and the uproar of laughter that broke from the crowd still tings in my ears. Not one of them offered to come to our assistance, they just stood there and laughed. Cunningham, however, darted back into his tent, and reappeared with a large towel. Running toward us, he waved the towel in front of him as if to flag the bird, or to announce to us that the race was over and that we had won the prize of $400.

As we entered the camp, amid the uproarious mirth of the childlike porters, the ostrich trotted up to within twenty yards of the tent, threw himself on the ground again, and repeated the antics that he had gone through a few minutes before. Finally he tired of it, and, rising, went to feeding about the veldt as if nothing had happened. Soon his keeper appeared and drove him back to the flock.

During the rest of the trip I was constantly reminded of that experience, and time and again was obliged to tell the story. But what wounded my sensitive feelings most was to have Sir Alfred Pease, in a ludicrous cartoon the episode, and ask me to inscribe beneath it my feelings at the time and then to sign my name.—Youth's Companion.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again, as soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin diseases, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again, as soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming of fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Co. and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to skin disease. His hands were so sore that he could not even hold a pen. He had tried every medicine he could get, but in three years after his cure of a skin disease he had had no more of it. He had no more of it, and he had no more of any other skin disease.

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. per box, or we will send you a box if you send this advertisement and a 1c. stamp (to pay return postage). Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

A GREAT DOG TOWN

The greatest dog town in Great Britain, if not in the world, is Haverfordwest. There are a great many men in the town who live wholly and make a good living by breeding, buying and selling dogs. Although the population is only 6,000, at least 6,000 dog licenses are issued annually, and there are also a large number of exemptions. Almost daily there are more dogs than people in the public streets, though valuable animals are never allowed to run loose.

Haverfordwest dog breeders are known for their working terriers, show terriers, pointers, setters and spaniels, which are daily traded for big sums through the fanciers' journals and go everywhere. It is the home of the Sealyham breed of terriers, the origin of which has puzzled the keenest sportsmen. One fancier's kennel recently sold by auction realized £200 but £250 is not an unusual price for a single dog, while £60, £70, and £80 are almost common. The quaint old town, with its mixed Welsh, English and Flemish population, is almost the hub of the dogs universe.—Fur News.

PROPRIETORS AND PUBLISHERS.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1913.

Monday, the 26th inst., has been set apart by the Government as our Canadian Thanksgiving Day. We are invited to make the day one of special recognition of the Almighty Giver of all our blessings. Many things should incline us to yield a cheerful compliance to this mandate.

And while every family in the Dominion should in its own seclusion recognize the obligation, it is expected and desirable that Christian people unite in the public expression of thanks for benefits received, both local and national.
We appreciate the motive which led to the changing of the annual Thanksgiving Day from Thursday to Monday.
The large numbers of commercial travellers who endeavor, when possible, to spend their Sabbaths with their families, are able by this change to enjoy another day at home. But, it seems evident that the change has mitigated to a considerable degree against the public services of religion which were formerly common. Many persons nowadays are disposed to satisfy themselves with the public recreations made upon the preceding Sabbath to the duty and reasons for thanksgiving, and to devote the special day to recreations, amusements and social gatherings. These have a proper place and time on Thanksgiving Day, for both old and young. But, to omit the public expression of gratitude to God is surely a perversion of the original and proper purpose of the appointment.

We would suggest that it would be eminently fitting, if as on some other occasions, the ministers and people of the different congregations in this and other towns would agree for a united thanksgiving service. Long addresses are not needed. An hour might be spent very profitably in praise and prayer chiefly. The example and influence would be very beneficial.

The New York Independent recently requested its readers to send in a list of the names of the ten men who, in the opinion of the sender, would be most missed in the United States. To this request there was a very general response, and the following are the names in the order of their popularity as indicated by the replies:—Thos. A. Edison, Jane Addams, Andrew Carnegie, Theodore Roosevelt, Helen Gould Shepard, Alexis Carrel, George W. Goethals,
William Jennings Bryan, Woodrow Wilson and Luther Burbank.

The example of the Independent led Claudius Clear, of the British Weekly, to present a similar request to its readers, and omitting the name of the King, which had a place of honor in all the lists, the following is the result:—Lloyd George, Premier Asquith, Sir Edward Grey, A. J. Balfour, M. P., Dr. Clifford, Viscount Kitchener, Earl Roberts, Dr. Meyer, Andrew Carnegie and Dr. G. Campbell Morgan.

It is, of course, not to be understood that these lists would have been the same, had the request in each case been extended to the general public, and yet, it is very probable that most of these names would have appeared under any circumstances, but in a different order.

Comparing the lists we find some resemblances, but more contrasts. In the American list the names of three politicians are given, but they occupy subordinate places. In the British list the names of four prominent politicians head the list. In the American list are the names of three philanthropists, two of whom are women. In the British list no women are mentioned, and but one philanthropist, Andrew Carnegie, whose name is also in the other list, a Briton by birth, an American by adoption, whose benefactions are widely scattered in these and other lands.

In the American list four persons are mentioned who may be classed as scientists, though they labor in very different departments, and no military man appears. In the British list the name of no scientist is found, and we observe the names of two distinguished soldiers. In the American list there are no clergymen. In the British list there are three well known names of Free Church clergymen.
Finally, neither list hono's any name known especially in literature or art.

It would appear, then, that in the United States the persons who would be most missed would be the scientists and the philanthropists, while in Great Britain it would be the politicians and the preachers.

Whether these differences are apparent and artificial, or real and fundamental, one thing is certain. Both these great countries have very similar and very serious problems on their hands, which demand the wisdom of the most clear-visioned politicians, the fervor of the most devoted preachers, the zeal of the most willing philanthropists, the patience of the most skillful scientists, and the heartiest co-operation of all their citizens in order that they may maintain their place in the van of the world's progress in these things which make for the highest welfare of humanity. In view of Thanksgiving Day these are fitting matters for serious contemplation.

OBITUARY

MISS JANE PIPER.

There passed away on Monday evening,
October the sixth, a representative of the elder generation of Bridgetown in the person of Miss Jane Piper. Her death was somewhat sudden as, though suffering to some extent from the infirmities due to advanced age, she was confined to the house with illness less than a week.
A paralytic shock, thrice repeated, was the immediate cause of death.
She suffered but little and passed peacefully to rest.

The funeral service was held in St.
James church, of which she was a devoted and faithful member, the Rector, Rev. E. Underwood, officiating.
The casket was heaped with beautiful floral tributes expressing affection and esteem, and the service was in every respect fitting to the memory of a devoted daughter of the church and a lady warmly regarded by a large circle of friends. After the service at the church interment took place in the family lot in St. James church burial ground.

Miss Piper was the fourth daughter of the late Dr. Silas Piper and had outlived all but two of her family.
Mrs. Aylwin Creighton of Dartmouth, and Mrs. William Ruffee of Bridgetown.

MRS. ELIZABETH PRAT.

(Hants Journal, Windsor.)
Mrs. Elizabeth Dupont Prat, widow of the late Samuel Prat, Wolfville, passed peacefully away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Wilcox, at midnight on Monday, Oct. 6th.
She had been gradually failing for the last two years. Mrs. Prat was a true lady of the Old School, and was beloved and respected by all who knew her.

Her husband, Mr. Samuel Prat, predeceased her twenty-one years ago and since then she has spent most of the time at her daughter's home in Windsor.

Mrs. Prat was a daughter of the Samuel Morse, of Paradise Farm, Paradise, and was seventy-eight years of age.

The surviving members of the family are three daughters—Mrs. George Wilcox, Windsor; Mrs. Richard S.
Starr, Starr's Point, and Miss Annie
L. Prat; and one son, Rupert Prat, residing in Toronto.

W. T. JAMES.

The death of Mr. W. T. James, which occurred at his summer home in Paradise, on Tuesday evening, Sept. 30th, removed from among us a gentleman who had become well known and highly respected in this County.

Mr. James was a native of Bermuda, and some fifteen years ago built a beautiful summer residence in Paradise (Ellenhurst) since which time he has been a regular visitor here each summer. The deceased had been in ill health for about a year, and realizing the serious nature of his illness, had made arrangements to spend the winter in Paradise.

Mr. James was a large real estate owner in Bermuda, and held many important positions of trust on the island. He was Ex-Mayor of the City of Hamilton and President of the Bank of Bermuda.

The deceased is survived by Mrs.
James, (who was a Cumberland County lady), and an adopted daughter, now the wife of Major Whitmarsh of the British army, all of whom were at "Ellenhurst" during his more recent illness and death.

The remains will be forwarded from Bridgetown today to Halifax, thence by S.S. Oruro to Bermuda for interment.

Methodist Church Circuit Notes

Next Sunday will be observed as Thanksgiving Sunday in the churches upon the circuit. Dr. Jost will preach at the morning service in the town church, and the pastor of the church will preach in the evening.
The pastor will conduct the service at Granville at 11 a.m. and at Bentville at 3 p.m. Themes appropriate to the Thanksgiving season will be presented and music in keeping with the day will be given by augmented choirs.

This Week Forty Years Ago

The Monitor has moved this week to the premises adjoining the store of Messrs. Tupper, Esq., on Queen St.

A new paper is to be started in Kentville to be called the "Western Chronicle," the manager of which is to be Mr. J. A. Cogswell.

The Monitor contemplates establishing a news room in the building in connection with the paper, and shall at all times be pleased to see our friends, where they will find the latest papers and magazines.

At Torbrook last week Mr. Wm.
Brown, who can boast of having killed twenty bears in twenty-one years, was accidentally shot in the leg. Mr. Brown had fired and killed the bear. The shot passed through the

HYMENEAL

RAMEY—CARDE.

(Parishboro Leader, Oct. 9.)

The home of Capt. and Mrs. J. H.
Carde was the scene of a quiet wedding yesterday afternoon, when their third daughter, Alice M. was given in marriage to Angus Ramey of Bridgetown, N. S.

The parlor was tastefully decorated with sweet peas, dahlias and potted plants. At the wedding march was played by Miss Hazel Johnson, the contracting parties took their places before the Rev. W. J. W. Swernam, pastor of Grace Methodist church, who in the stately words of that office, united them in holy matrimony. The bride was becomingly attired in a travelling suit of blue brocade with hat to match and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley.

After the ceremony a dainty repast was served, after which Mr. and Mrs.
Carde left for their future home in Bridgetown, via S.S. Prince Albert.

Among the gifts of the family and intimate friends was a beautiful cut glass cream pitcher and silver bowl from the choir of Grace Methodist church of which the bride was a member. Mrs. Ramey has a host of friends here whose hearty good wishes go with her to her future home.

The only cause to come before the Supreme Court at Annapolis last week was the criminal case, The King vs. Durling, as noted in our last issue. Durling was found guilty of the crime charged against him, and received a sentence of seven years in the penitentiary and thirty lashes. We think the sentence was justly and well deserved.

Barnon & Reade's Vaudeville Show Coming Here

The Moncton Transcript makes the following comment on Barnon & Reade's show, which will appear at the Primrose Theatre on Friday evening of this week:

"Notwithstanding the boisterous weather, the Grand was packed last night, and those who faced the elements went home happy, feeling that they were amply rewarded for doing so. The newspaper announcements regarding the vaudeville proved true to the letter. Never before has such a lengthy, classic and varied vaudeville been presented to a Moncton audience. Brownie, the Gipsy Violinist, was the first act. For a young man he is a marvel, seeming all the time to be the master of his instrument. His music was classic and clear. He was repeatedly encored. Dot Reade & Co., in the Circus Waif, made a decided hit. Miss Reade is an excellent dancer. Her presentation of the Sword Dance and Sailors' Hornpipe was not an imitation and did not belie her reputation as "Queen of Scottish Dancers." Her costumes were all that could be desired. Barnon's Circus kept the audience in silence with their marvellous work on the stage. Prince Ton, the smallest horse on earth, did everything correct that was asked of him, obediently and clever. He can count, subtract or add any figures requested by anyone in the audience. The trained dogs and cats were exceedingly good. Miss Dot Reade presented her Spring Dance admirably; the stage effects were splendid."

A LAND OF WHITE HOUSES.

Buildings in Bermuda are all of whitewashed coral. The most striking things about a Bermudian house are its color and material. White does not begin to express the vivid, radiant, penetrating purity of its smooth, unbroken surfaces. In the intense sunlight the dazzling roofs give forth a halo of reflected light where the roof line in stead of standing out sharply against the sky blends imperceptibly with it. Bermudian houses are built today as they were centuries ago, of coral blocks literally sawed out of the hillsides. A Bermudian quarry is a queer institution. For convenience it is usually located on the side of a hill where only a thin layer of soil covers the coral. The blocks are sawed out by negroes with long, coarse toothed hand saws and cut in uniform sizes measuring about two feet long, one foot wide and six inches thick. The roofs are covered with overlapping slabs an inch thick. When taken from the quarry these coral blocks and slabs are very soft but after being piled up for a month or so and exposed to the air they become hard and firm. Even when, however, the coral is porous, so that all Bermudian houses are covered with a thick coat of whitewash or lime a quarter of an inch deep. This hides all cracks and joints and gives the surface a beautiful, smooth finish. To keep the houses in good condition a coat of whitewash is applied each year. What little wood is used for floors, verandas, interior trim and shutters can be obtained from the cedar trees that grow on the same hills where the stone is quarried. With material so handy and ready for use with so little work it does not cost much to build in Bermuda. In some of the older houses and churches the cedar beams are locked into the masonry exactly as a shipbuilder would do it. Big chimneys, sloping roofs to catch the rainwater, stone porches and windows filled with green shutters that push outward are features common in many Bermudian houses.—Country Life in America.

J. W. Copeland, of Dayton, Ohio, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for his boy who had a cold, and before the bottle was all used the boy's cold was gone. Is that not better than to pay a five dollar doctor's bill? For sale by all dealers.

INCREASING THE PROFITS OF DAIRYING.

By following a system of intelligent breeding, selection, care and feeding, many farmers in Canada have increased the annual production of their milking herds by at least 2,000 lbs. of milk per cow. If this were accomplished in all dairy herds in Canada the yearly revenue from them would be increased by about $30,000,000 without adding to the size of the herds. Even with greatly improved feeding this desirable result could not be obtained unless a well organized system of cow testing is followed. Such an improvement is based on a study of the individual cow in the herd, the retention of only the good animals and the following of a system of generous feeding of economically produced koods.

While it is practicable for individual farmers to test their own cows it is infinitely easier and cheaper for them if some form of co-operation is adopted. This is clearly brought out in bulletin No. 33 of the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner's Branch entitled "Cow Testing with Some Notes on the Sampling and Testing of Milk." This work, which is published for free distribution by the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, explains clearly how cow testing associations are formed and worked as well as the benefits these are to those who take advantage of them.

DEEP BROOK

October 13. Mr. F. E. Purdy has gone to Boston for the winter. Miss Irma Jones of this place, left on Saturday for Rhode Island, where she intends continuing her education. Mrs. Geo. Pinkney is spending a few weeks in New Hampshire with her parents. Mrs. J. M. Nichols spent a few days in Yarmouth last week. Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Sherman spent Sunday in Bear River. Miss Annie L. Payson has returned from Boston. Mr. and Mrs. J. F. McClelland spent Sunday with Mrs. McClelland's mother at Bear River. Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Vroom spent a few days in Yarmouth last week. Miss Daisy Woodman of Joggin Bridge, is visiting Mrs. Jos. Berry. Miss S. Manning was in Deep Brook last Friday. Miss Bessie Betts of Granville, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Purdy.

A number of the Deep Brook people visited the Exhibition at Digby on Friday. "Finest wheat seen in twenty-five years" is the opinion expressed by Lieut.-Col. Frank Meighen, President of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., regarding the crop in the Canadian Northwest. The new grain is reaching Winnipeg daily at six times the volume during the corresponding period of last year. The wheat crop this year has been harvested early and under ideal climatic conditions, and the grain movement has started earlier than usual.

Here is a woman who speaks from personal knowledge and long experience, viz., Mrs. P. H. Brogan, of Wilson, Pa., who says, "I know from experience that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is far superior to any other. For cough there is nothing that excels it." For sale by all dealers.

I doubt not but "Our Lady of the Snows" is seen at her best in the cold splendour of the winter months, when those who find delight in sledge and toboggan, on ice skates or ice yachts, swathed in furs and bracing icicles, hold high revel amid the hospitable gaities of Montreal. That is as may be, but personally my enthusiasm for outdoor amusement flags below zero, and I love Canada, like Switzerland, best when the snow has shrunk to the high tops. Canada in summer-time, with its trails and streams and lakes, is a paradise for those who make holiday, whether their fancy be for active enjoyment of boating, bathing, fishing, or riding, or, in the more restful mood of Walt Whitman, to learn and loaf at ease, "observing a spear of summer grass." There is a very sufficient reason why the month of September is to be preferred to the fuller glory of summer. It is not so much that the heat is perceptibly less, for the cities can be very oppressive far into the autumn, but the black flies and mosquitoes cease from troubling in the early days of August and life in Canada without either snow or black flies is, to me at any rate, a very delectable proposition. If I ever knew the etymological Latin or Greek for the black fly I have forgotten it. Doubtless it has a laboratory title suitable to its villiany, but, though Socrates held that naming things saved things, no amount of naming could ever save the Canadian black fly from inspiring some of the most unrainful thoughts that ever clouded the traveller's mind. Its one virtue is that, unlike "anopheles or glossina," it does not in any circumstances seem capable of transmitting infection. Apart from this ulterior dread of disease, it is a horrid neighbor, inflicting its painful bite when one is playing a fish or enjoying a siesta, or any other moment at which relaxation is most difficult. The only attraction which, speaking as a fisherman, might possibly be worth traveling this scourge is the salmon fishing on the "North Shore," otherwise in the Restigouche or Metapedia River, and even such sport is dearly bought at the price. In September, it is true the salmon of the North Shore are at rest, since fishing ends officially in the middle of August; but there are black bass to be caught and mas'ellonge and late trout; and I would rather catch any of these, imagine from black flies, than the biggest salmon living with these winged devils pasturing on my face.

QUEBEC TO VANCOUVER. For the average tourist a run over one of the great transcontinental railway systems is obviously a duty and pleasure in one, and the journey from Quebec to Vancouver is the most varied and instructive. Quebec itself is treated by visitors from Europe in far too cavalierly a fashion. Those who are emigrating for a livelihood cannot be blamed for boarding their slender resources and taking the first West-bound train to their goal; but the tourist should give a day or two to this nobly placed city, with its old-world charm its atmosphere of memories, its echo of the gay chivalry of Bourbon France. This is the one provincial capital that lives in the past. Politics is the breath of Ottawa, trade of Winnipeg, education of Montreal, Quebec alone, looking superbly down the St. Lawrence on incoming steamers from the overcrowded lands of Europe, lives only in her past, haunted by the wraiths of Wolfe and Montcalm, with memories of Nelson, who all but married the niece of a local innkeeper, and of William IV., who, as a midshipman, was said to have been soundly thrashed by a burger of Quebec for an adventure that stopped short of even clandestine marriage. A few hours through not particularly interesting country, a section of the trip that may well be done at night, brings the traveller to Montreal, possibly the most imposing city in Canada, though without any irresistible attraction for the hot weather tourist, save the fresh air to be breathed by going either to the top of the mountain or on board one of the small steamers that shoot the not very perilous Lachine Rapids. These, with the inexplicably famous tidal bore at Moncton, are the most discouraging disillusion that Canada has in store for her visitors. Next after Montreal comes Toronto, and, since Canadian cities must be most agreeable, if at all, in winter, a day's halt can be counselled only as an opportunity for making a side-trip, on one of the lake steamers, to Niagara Falls. WATERWAYS AND PRAIRIES. West of Toronto, the comparatively new track through Sudbury reveals one of the two really beautiful sections of the railroad, with fairy-like steepness of the Muskoka Lakes and a long spell of the shores of Superior with a million Christmas trees mirrored in the still waters of the great inland sea in which Rudyard Kipling found such quiet horror. Silence, as can be appreciated even from the train window, is the keynote of these Canadian waterways. Even the Indians paid their canoes, as they pass through the forest, without making a sound, a habit doubtless confirmed by centuries of rapine, in which the battle was oftentimes won by him who could come unawares upon his enemy. Winnipeg is one of these prodigiously successful centres of commerce that must delight the eye of a commercial traveller, but the mere tourist with no stake in grain or real estate is glad to leave it behind. Hereabouts the train enters the rolling prairies, a dreadful prospect that the farmer has reclaimed from the buffalo and the brave. It is not until Calgary also lies to the east that the lover of scenery his distant sight of the Rocky Mountains, and soon he is enjoying scenery magnificent enough to make up for the level dullness of the prairie. Banff is the fashionable halt, and the windows of the Springs Hotel give entrancing views of mountain, wood and river. Banff is worth the inside of a week; for the buffalo and other animals in the National Park must be inspected, the natural hot swimming bath is an experience that few tourists will wish to miss, and there are endless opportunities of fishing (more, indeed, than of catching fish) in both lake and river. It is after leaving Banff that the train plunges into the full splendor of the Rockies, and after crossing the Great Divide the rivers run with instead of against it, their goal no longer the far Atlantic but the near Pacific. Vancouver comes at last, and thence one of the company's steamers may be taken through haunting, land-locked seas to the island city of Victoria, the most attractive residential centre in all Canada.

A WORD FOR THE LOWER PROVINCES. In New Brunswick and Nova Scotia Canada has a neglected backwater into which all too little of the tourist traffic flows. Why this oversight, unless it is deliberately contrived by those who would the malleable minds of globe trotters in that region, I know not. Even admitting that the prospect lacks the grandeur of the Far West and the cities the up-to-dateness of Montreal, there is much in the river scenery of New Brunswick and Cape Breton that should captivate the eye; the opportunities of shooting and fishing are, if anything, greater as well as cheaper than anything else in the country east of the Rockies; and in the Land of Evangeline Canada has an asset of higher historic and sentimental value than any spot outside of Quebec. The mandates of fashion in tourist travel are difficult to understand, and why that portion of Canada which lies east of Quebec should, hitherto have suffered this oblivion is impossible of explanation. September in these Lower Provinces is a month of delight with a well-nigh perfect climate and varied chances of sport. The same, however, may be said for the whole of Canada, both east and west of the prairies. The prairies themselves I prefer as imagined from the window of a train with the blind down. They staged many a romance, furtively read in stolen schooldays leisure, but the reality always seemed to me to strike a note of dreadful desolation, depressing to anyone but a coyote.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are not a new and untried remedy—our grandfathers used them. Half a century ago, before Confederation, they were sold in nearly every drug or general store in the Canada of that day, and were the recognized cure in thousands of homes for Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness, Rheumatism and Kidney and Liver Troubles. Today they are just as effective, just as reliable as ever, and nothing better has yet been devised to Cure Common Ills

MONEY LENT FREE.

Funds For Helping Tradesmen, Clergymen and Students. It is generally supposed that money lenders are a rapacious and unscrupulous lot. Some, of course, are, but many are not, and there are a few cases where men can even borrow money free from all interest and charges. A total sum of $25,000 is available this year for loans in Leicester, England, to people under thirty-five years of age who fulfil certain specified conditions. They must be "of good name, good fame, and good condition," whatever is signified by that clause; also they must not be "tipplers!" This large amount, available for Leicester residents to borrow, comes from three old charities bequeathed to the Midland town, and the money is lent for nine years in sums of $125, $150 or $500. It is both interesting and surprising to learn that for the past forty years there has never been any borrower who has failed to repay the loan fully and punctually.

The City of London also possesses similar bequests of money which it can lend to tradesmen within the famous square mile, in sums of $50 to $250, as agreed. This money comes, too, from old bequests left to certain City companies, of which the Skinners is one, for this express purpose, and it has many a time and oft served to keep an ambitious and hard-working, but temporarily hard-up tradesman from having to shut up his shop, owing to lack of capital—a critical moment. The times when these loans become open for tradesmen, and their amounts, are duly advertised in the chief newspapers.

Of similar nature, though for use in a rather different way, are many large sums of money held in trust by colleges and schools. One or two well-known societies for helping candidates who wish to be ordained as clergymen in the Church of England have also money in hand which they lend without interest in similar fashion, to men requiring it for the purposes of study, maintenance, or for livelihood immediately after ordination. Indeed, it is surprising to know how many candidates for the ministry are thus financed. And the Church gains greatly thereby, for many an excellent young fellow would be precluded from entering its ministry, owing to lack of means when in college, were it not for the trust money thus available, from which he can borrow without interest.

One Cambridge college is quite famous for the extreme generosity of its chief Don in the matter of lending money free to men who have distinguished themselves at the university and need such useful and valuable assistance at, perhaps, the most crucial periods of their lives. This money comes from the Don's own private purse, and is neither a trust nor a right. It is simply a grand and splendid effort (wonderously appreciated by those who have profited from it, as so many have) to assist the men of that college to high places and work in the world.

MR. ALVA PHILLIPS

BRISTOL, N. B., JULY 25th, 1911. "I am unable to say enough in favor of 'Fruit-a-lives' as it saved my life and restored me to health, when I had given up all hope and when the doctors had failed to do anything more for me. I had a stroke of Paralysis in March, 1910, and this left me unable to walk or help myself, and the Constipation of the bowels was terrible. Nothing did me any good and I was wretched in every way. Finally, I took 'Fruit-a-lives' for the Constipation, and it not only cured me of that trouble but gradually this fruit medicine toned up the nerves and actually cured the paralysis. Under the use of 'Fruit-a-lives', I grew stronger and stronger until all the palsy and weakness left me. I am now well again and attend my store every day and all day."

ADVANTAGES OF FALL PLANTING.

That the fall is the right time to set out the farm orchard has recently been proved by results attained by Professor Whitten of Missouri. He concludes that the tree is capable of responding to the call for quick establishment of the new root system when it is transplanted in the fall and that the available plant food which is stored and carried over in a staple condition in the roots is partly used in the autumn to meet the demand for a new root system or for the healing of wounds.

Spring transplanted trees do not quickly begin to make new roots in the spring. They are out in full leaf and apparently making good progress above ground before there is root growth below ground. The readily available stored food in the trees is carried to the growing points above ground and utilized to make new growth there more readily than it is carried to the wounds of the roots to make callouses or to make new roots. Root growth does not begin to form abundantly until June, at least six weeks or two months after trees are ordinarily transplanted in the spring. Fall transplanted trees always have a larger root system. Considering that the size of the fruit crop harvested depends upon the feeding capacity of the roots, one does not have to be an expert in fruit growing to see the advantages in fall planting.—Ex.

STAGE A STAIRCASE.

A Musical Play on the Steps at the London Hippodrome.

Carpenters are busy building "the most wonderful stairway in the world" to form the setting for a new musical production at the London Hippodrome on October 15, entitled, "The Escalade, or Magic Staircase." When the curtain rises the audience will be confronted with the great shimmering white stairway filling the whole stage and rising from the curtain line almost to the heights of the roof. The top step will just be visible at the back of the stage, and to begin with all that will be seen there will be a row of dainty feet. Then, stepping apparently from nowhere, the chorus will glide in time with the music down the stairway. Each step will be twelve inches wide, and on these steps the chorus will go through many movements, marching and drilling like soldiers and dancing and with slow, stately steps will show how it is possible to descend stairs with infinite grace.

The stairway, claimed to be one of the most marvellous mechanical effects ever designed for the stage, is the work of Ned Wayburn, an American, who spent three years evolving and perfecting the idea. He went to England to superintend its construction.

THE NEW WOMAN IN CHINA.

It is certainly true that the educated women of China are making a name and a place for themselves and are working hard to better the condition of young women as a whole. A visitor to that country today will find Chinese women at the heads of hospitals and in some cases also conducting nurses' training schools. They are principals of large government or private schools for girls, and many of them are doing excellent work. A few young women have graduated from American colleges but the majority of principals and teachers are the products of mission or government schools. The very wealthy, of course, have private tutors, and some of the women most zealous in founding schools for girls have been from princely families.

The ladies in their homes are also working for reforms, and thousands signed petitions sent to England protesting against the opium trade which that country forces on China. They are forming anti-cigarette leagues and holding meetings at which some of them preside and speak with great intelligence and dignity. They are zealous in the anti-foot binding societies, and take an active part in church and philanthropic work if they are christians. For would the women forget to speak of the women in the church who go about as teachers of the Bible or on errands of mercy to the poor and suffering. Some of these are ladies of fine families and country women, whose chief qualifications are a tender heart and a sympathetic mind rather than literary attainments.—Popular Science Monthly.

PROBLEMS OF THE FRUIT GROWER.

During a sitting of the Select Standing Committee of the House of Commons on Agriculture and Colonization a few months ago it came out in evidence that many apple growers were last year unable to secure more than 75c to $1.00 per barrel on the tree and in some districts hundreds of barrels of good fruit were allowed to fall to the ground and rot because no profitable market could be found for it. It came out also that in the western provinces consumers were required to pay from $5.00 to $5.50 per barrel for good fruit. Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, in giving evidence on this question pointed out that about $1.75 per barrel was received in the Lake Ontario and Lake Erie Districts by the members of co-operative associations while independent growers received about $1.00 per barrel. The Commissioner in referring to the discrepancy between the first and final prices of apples estimated that the unavoidable expenses amounted to about $2.23 per barrel made up as follows: barrel, 43c; picking, 17c; management expenses or commission to a local buyer, 19c; freight to Winnipeg, 80c; broker's commission, 12c; and retailer's profit 50c per barrel.

The question of marketing was but one of many dealt with by the special committee who had as witnesses besides the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, Messrs. Dan L. Johnson, Forest, Ont.; S. B. Chute, Berwick, N. S.; W. S. Foggo, Vernon, B.C. and James Hardwick, Ottawa. As evidence of the value to the grower of co-operation Mr. Johnson instanced the case of a woman who was offered by a local buyer, $125 for her crop for which she received through a co-operative association $1,885.

Mr. Chute who represented 1,500 farmers, as manager of the United Fruit Companies of Nova Scotia, explained that through his organization 5,000 tons of fertilizer had been bought from the manufacturers for the members who had benefited to the extent of about $15,000 on purchase of fertilizers, spraying machines and materials, farm implements, seeds and other requirements. Equally interesting evidence was given by the other witnesses all of which appears in a pamphlet of 116 pages that has been printed for public distribution by the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

GOOD GROOMING.

Good grooming can do much toward helping out a woman with a limited dress allowance. This from a woman who has comparatively little to spend on dress, yet always presents the perfectly appointed appearance of women who can lavish money on their toilet.

Any woman who wishes to be so can be well groomed. Being neat isn't of itself being well groomed. There's a subtle difference between neatness and good grooming. Good grooming is a sort of sophisticated neatness, a neatness carried into an art.

It's their beautiful grooming that gives to photographs of fashionable women a finish and distinction missing in pictures of women who do not go in for that sort of thing. The art of good grooming can be learned. I think the best way to learn it is simply to study it in the women whose appearance we admire.

Never mind what Mrs. Fashionable has on. Consider what she has done to make the costume look so charming upon her.

Her hair is neatly arranged. "But she has a skillful maid who understands the art of hair dressing," you cry. Well, why can't you understand this art, too? Instead of buying a new hat for yourself, go once to a fine hair dresser and have your hair done and watch like a cat while it is being done. Then go home and practise and practise, doing all the little tricks you saw done until you become skilful in them.

There's one little trick in hair dressing that is almost magic in giving a woman the well groomed look. You use a stiff toothbrush to administer it. After your hair is arranged dip the brush lightly into water and then rub the brush lightly over scalp—very lightly. Pass the brush delicately over the edge of your hair where it grows from face to the hair. Be especially careful to do this over the ears. Nothing militates so much against the well groomed look as the least disarrangement of hair over the ears. The slightly soaped water applied by the brush will keep the hair about face and neck in arrangement for a long time. The brush should not be wet—just damp.

Mrs. Fashionable's coiffure hairpins do not show. They do in the heads of most women who do not go in for the art of fine grooming. Also her hair itself shows evidence of the right care lavished upon it. Never would it in fine condition. It does were it not in fine condition.

Her hands show that delicate care is taken of them, and her nails could never be as perfectly manicured as they are in a hurried few minutes by an ordinary manicure set. Manicuring is a clever art, calling for much skill, but one visit to a good establishment will teach the woman who wants to do her own nails well all the tricks that she needs to know. Mrs. Fashionable's notes tell the story of life on trees when they are not worn. Tread shoes have a special look that untread shoes simply cannot have. Good grooming insists upon trees. Her shoes are not worn down a hairbreadth at heel or sole. Her costumed notes tell the story of the little accessories of Mrs. Fashionable's toilet are in perfect condition—her veil, her collar, her cuffs, her gloves. Accessories in perfect condition count much in good grooming.

Her gown and such accessories as can crumple or crease show the care expert pressing. Why won't women with a limited dress allowance learn the importance of the iron in good grooming? I've an electric iron in my own room which I use every day of my life. It presses out my laces, my collars, my blouses and skirts constantly.

Mrs. Fashionable's gown could never look as it does if dust were allowed to rest in it after she takes it off. If it were not hung up carefully on a dress hanger.

Her costume itself? Yes, it is very beautiful. But if it weren't she'd still have the subtle, enviable look that being well groomed gives any woman who achieves it by help from others or through her own painstaking effort.

CASSEROLE OF FISH.

Two pounds of cod, halibut or salmon, six onions, six potatoes, two carrots and seasoning.

Remove the skin and bones from the fish, put the fish into one kettle and the trimmings into another. Cover the fish with cold water and let it simmer while preparing the other ingredients. Peel the onions and carrots and put them into the kettle with the fish trimmings, cover with water and cook for about an hour. Peel and slice the potatoes and boil them a few minutes. Put the cooked fish, onions, potatoes and carrots (which should be cut into dice) into a casserole, or baking dish, season with salt and pepper, strain over the whole the liquor in which the fish was cooked, and cook in the oven for twenty minutes more.

WHAT IT MEANT.

Not long ago an English cyclist was wheeling through some of the country byways of the West of Ireland, and, on his journey one day, had occasion to dismount at a small roadside cabin so that he might make inquiries as to his whereabouts.

The tenant of the humble shanty enthusiastically invited the tourist to come in for a little rest, and this he consented to do.

As soon as the stranger had entered the hut he could not help observing the extreme poverty of everything about him. The furniture was of the rudest possible description, and amongst the various articles was an extraordinary but primitive arrangement that evidently served the purpose of a sideboard; this simply consisted of a rough plank, supported at each end by four bricks.

Doing duty as a sort of centre ornament on this strange stand was half an old brick, and resting on it was a faded flower. The stranger became exceedingly curious as to the meaning of this brick and flower, and during the course of conversation he made inquiries about it.

"Shure, yer honor," said the Irishman, "and do you really want to know what the things mean? Well, then, I'll tell ye. Ye see this big hole at the back of my ear? Shure, then, it was made entirely wid that brick."

"But what have you got the flower there for?" asked the tourist.

"Ah, but shure now," proceeded Pat, pleasantly, "that is a flower of the man's grave that threw the brick!"

DID THE VICAR STOP?

It was too much. Every Sunday old Adams, who blew the organ, would continue blowing after the music had stopped, thereby producing most undesirable sounds.

Time and again had the organist taken him to task for it.

"Right, mister," had been old Adam's invariable reply. "I forgits, you know."

One Sunday the organist could stand it no longer.

The congregation had been set tittering by the old man's forgetfulness, and during the sermon the organist seized the opportunity to write him a note on the matter, and hand it to a choir-boy to deliver.

Misunderstanding the whispered directions, the lad handed the note straight up to the vicar, who astoundedly read the following:—

"Will you stop when I tell you to? People come here to listen to my music, not to your horrible noise!"

HE GAVE IT UP.

"There," said the superintendent of the lunatic asylum, "is a young man who started in life as a great public benefactor. After years of thought he finally completed a gigantic plan of philanthropy, a scheme which he expected to bring joy to the hearts of millions of grief-stricken mortals and peace into thousands of unhappy homes—its failure sent him here."

"How infinitely pitiful," mused the visitor. "And what was his idea?"

"It was a device for preventing trousers bagging at the knee," responded the superintendent, with a long-drawn sigh.

THOUGHT FIREWORKS OUT OF PLACE.

The storm at sea was increasing and some of the deck fittings had already been swept overboard, when the captain decided to send up a distress signal. The rocket was already lit and about to ascend, when a solemn-faced passenger stepped up.

"Cap'n," said he, "I'd be the last man on earth to cast a damper on any man's patriotism, but seems to me this here's no time for celebratin' an' settin' off fireworks."

THE VETERAN.

Ay, sell him, now the old-time fire Burns feebly in his breast! Forget the past, the proud desire To do his level best. He's willing yet, but sinews fail When years a number flock; He'll bring a pittance at the sale,— Ay, send him to the block!

Forget the day you drove him home, Lest memory lose a tongue,— The burst of speed, the flying foam, The pride of strength unwrung. No retrospection, if you please, Pass all that's gone before; The wine is drunk, who wants the lees? Go, spurn him from your door!

What matter though his faithful heart Shall mourn the homely stall? Why fear his shrinking sides may smart? Beneath the lash's fall? Pull up the roots and chance the blow Waive sentiment, I say; He's but a chattel, let him go For what the crowd will pay.

He has no words wherewith to plead, Did he your purpose rate? Nor knows the renace of the steed That paws without the gate. Hail, then, the young, with life awing! Let useless age make room— The King is dead. Long live the King!— Ay, send him to his doom! —By Thos. J. Taylor, in Our Dumb Animals.

CARRYING LIQUOR IN MAILS.

Notes From the Presbyterian Synod Meeting in Sydney, and the Methodist Convention Meeting in Amherst.

(The Synod)

A resolution was passed requesting the Postmaster General to exclude liquor from the mails in parcel post. The Governments were asked to enforce the liquor laws, where the mayor and councils fail. Chief inspectors should be sent, or provincial deputies who would enforce the law without any exception.

(The Convention)

Closing up last night's proceedings there was brought in a resolution to the Postmaster General touching the carrying of liquor in His Majesty's mails, which reads as follows:—

"To the Honorable Louis Philippe Pelletier, Postmaster General of Canada:

"Whereas we believe it is the intention of the Government shortly to introduce a parcel post system in Canada;

"And whereas, the Government of the United States excludes all intoxicating liquors from the mails;

"And whereas, we believe that the great majority of the people of Canada are strongly opposed to the carriage of intoxicating liquors through the mails of His Majesty in our Dominion;

"Therefore, we the members of the General Board of Missions for the Methodist Church of Canada, and the Methodist ministers of the Province of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, together with representative laymen from all over the said Provinces, now here in convention assembled to the number of about three hundred, as well as seven hundred citizens of the town of Amherst present at this meeting respectfully request that all intoxicating liquors be excluded from the mails of Canada from the inception of such parcel post system and your petitioners will ever pray."

Moved by E. E. Hewson, Amherst, seconded by George Bell, Victoria, B. C.

This was carried by a unanimous vote.

Plotted to Kill President of China

Chief of the Peking Mounted Police Consented He Had Been Bribed to Assassinate Yuan Shi Kai —Brilliant Scene at Inauguration of New President.

Peking, Oct. 10.—Yuan Shi Kai was today inducted into the office of President of the Chinese Republic, and the ceremony of inauguration was surrounded with eastern brilliance. It was attended by throngs of distinguished Chinese and foreign officials, Diplomats and military officers, and took place in the interior of the Tai-Ho palace, in which many of the Ming and Ching emperors had been crowned.

The choice of the place of inauguration was a further encroachment on the sacred precincts of the Emperor within the Forbidden City. The southern half of this extensive enclosure was opened to the guests, who traversed hall after hall and court after court toward the present residence of the little dethroned emperor.

The ceremony was enacted in the vast building called the Tai-Ho Tien, or Hall of Supreme Peace, which sits high up on terraces of marble and is decorated everywhere with dragons and imperial gold. It was here that the emperor formally received New Year's greetings from the Manchu and Suzerain princes.

A BRILLIANT SCENE.

The Chinese officials present, as well as the priests of the various religions, wore garments of colored silks of many hues, but the members of the Chinese Parliament were dressed in western frock coats and silk hats, which they have adopted as their official costume. Many of the natives of Turkestan, Tibet and Mongolia, and also some of the Chinese and Manchus appeared still to feel ill at ease in their sombre garb, which they have so recently chosen instead of their former flowing robes.

The chiefs of the foreign legations were carried to the ceremony like the President, in chairs on men's shoulders, and during the inauguration the military officers attached to the legations, contrasted strongly with the black of the Chinese deputies.

Yuan Shi Kai wore a blue military uniform. He read his declarations, which were tantamount to taking the oath of office from the dragon days of the emperor, over which republican flags had been draped.

After the delivery of the inaugural address, the President, surrounded by the members of the foreign legations, reviewed 10,000 troops, equipped in modern uniforms from the front of a pagoda of the Forbidden City, and it was remarked by all present how well the soldiers went through their exercises.

PLOTTED AGAINST PRESIDENT.

Extensive precautions, both police and military, had been taken for several days as it was feared that some Chinese Rebels who had cut off their queues might obtain access to the ceremony disguised as Japanese.

It was not possible for the authorities to limit the number of invitations sent to the Japanese Legation, and for this reason it was decided to reduce the number all round.

In spite of these precautions it was found that the Rebels had succeeded in tainting the loyalty of the Chief of the Peking Mounted Police. This was discovered in time, and he was arrested and confessed that he had been bribed to assassinate the President.

President Yuan Shi Kai in his inaugural address, avowed his intention of maintaining a firm and steady policy. He expressed the opinion that the first principle of Government was a clear definition and promulgation of its legal systems, and the establishment and maintenance of public order. After this he said in compliance with the requirements of the time and circumstance efforts should be made to unite the people in their march along the path of progress.

The President admitted his preference for conservative rather than extreme radical methods, first because he did not desire to risk the welfare of the people, and secondly because he thought the ancient teachings and traditions of China should not be wholly swept away. He referred to the restrictions which had not allowed a free hand for the advance of the interests of the nation, and asserted his intention of introducing reforms one by one in the present conditions in China.

Yuan Shi Kai then emphasized the necessity of capital and education, especially of technical education—the former in order to promote China's industrial resources and the latter for the development of the natural assets of the nation. He likened China to a man who possessed buried treasures and complained of poverty.

Powers were then received by the President and on their behalf Louis Paeter, the Spanish Minister and Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, offered felicitations and expressed confidence that under Yuan Shi Kai's Chief Magistracy the cordiality of the relations between China and Foreign Powers would increase. He said the strict observance of treaties and usages would not only guarantee the peace of China and the stability of the Republic, but would assure to the country the development of its wealth to which end the foreign nations had an interest in contributing.

Yuan Shi Kai replied by expressing the friendly intentions of the Chinese Government toward foreign interests and declaring his sincere intention of observing all treaties, conventions, and other engagements entered into by the former Manchu and Provisional Republican Governments with foreign Governments, and also of contracts duly concluded between foreign countries and individuals. He also said that all rights, privileges and immunities enjoyed by foreigners in China would be confirmed.

WOMAN SACRIFICES $14,000.

Pays Higher Duties on Her European Finery. Rather Than Wait For Law.

Philadelphia, Oct. 5.—Fourteen thousand dollars was sacrificed by Mrs. E. T. Storesbury, wife of head of the Drexel-Morgan interests in this city, to rush seventeen trunks of feminine finery, valued at more than $50,000, through the customs.

Had the wife of the banker not insisted on the immediate appraisement and release of her wardrobe, this sum would have been lopped off the amount of duty exacted on the gorgeous apparel she brought with her from abroad, for twenty-four hours after her trunks and their costly contents had been passed, the new Tariff Bill became operative, admitting at greatly reduced cost many of the articles included in the rich woman's baggage.

Mrs. Storesbury motored to the appraiser's storehouse on Friday and paid the duties, however, with her personal cheque.

During the five months of the present fiscal year from April to August, immigrants poured into Canada at the rate of about 1900 per day. The total for the five months was 292,757, an increase of 40,248 as compared with the corresponding period last year. A feature has been the marked falling off in the influx from the United States.

KING'S STUDENTS FOUGHT FIRE

Windsor, Oct. 13.—Between 11 and 12 a.m. today fire was discovered in King's College in a closet where clothes are kept in one of the student's rooms on the upper floor of the Middle Bay. At the time the students were attending the lectures. When discovered the closet was in a blaze, the door and other woodwork being pretty well burned. Fortunately there is a hose owned by the College which was speedily attached to the hydrant in front of the building and in a few minutes the flames were extinguished. The firemen responded quickly and when they arrived, fearing that the fire might have penetrated where the water had not reached, they cut holes on either side of the closet and also on the opposite side where a closet is situated in Chapel Bay. Through these apertures they played water for some time until all danger was past. The only damage was to the closet and the holes made in the walls, and by the water which flooded the rooms in the second story, and the Halliburton room and classical lecture room on the first floor. The work of the students at the outset prevented the spread of the fire to the roof, containing the damage to a smaller area than would otherwise have been the case.

Canada has in ten years paid $118,000,000 to the United States for automobiles or 40,900 of the 50,000 in use in the Dominion.

DR. WILFRID GRENPELL VISITOR IN CITY.

(Morning Chronicle, Oct. 11.)

Dr. Wilfrid Grenfell, the heroic doctor of the deep sea missions to fishermen on the banks of Newfoundland and the Labrador coast arrived in the City Thursday and left last evening en route for Washington. About the end of November Dr. Grenfell will sail for England to return in the Spring.

Dr. Grenfell said that the institute for fishermen in St. John's, which cost $200,000, is paying its own way at the end of its first year. There are a few thousand dollars yet to raise on construction account, but as regards maintenance the institution is already self-supporting.

The reindeer introduced on the northeast coast of Newfoundland are doing well, and now there are about 1,000 of them. The United States authorities have achieved success with their reindeer in Alaska, and the doctor believes the reindeer will prove to be a solution of the problem of existence for a vast number of the people. The reindeer is good for draft purposes, delicious as food, and is splendidly adapted to supplement the resources of the fishermen while kept on the barrens and away from the forest.

Speaking of the fishing season on the Labrador coast Dr. Grenfell said the Labrador catch for fishermen was rather light. On the east coast it was all right. The prices were high all round, thus compensating for all light catch.

Dr. Grenfell will return next Spring from England to re-engage in his work on the coast of Labrador and Newfoundland.
