ONE OF THE MANY.
I am tired of this quiet old city.
No life or enjoyment have I;
I long for the city of Boston
To reside to the day I will die.
I work here from morn until even,
And sometimes well into the night,
For only the garments that clothe me
And then at my best I'm a slave.
But Boston, the city of riches,
In day dreams I see thee afar
And my heart leaps in bounds without measure
To gaze on these just as thou art!
If I only could reach thee in safety
St. John I would quickly forget.
And this is my honest intention
To be an American yet.
So the day came at last that he wished for
Two hundred he managed to save,
And another Canadian was added.
To the land of the free and the brave.
He started quite early one morning
Hoping employment to find,
But the kind of inducements they offered
Were not what he had in his mind.
At length he got work in a factory.
The concern it was run by a trust.
The rooms there were close and unhealthy.
With smoke and with heat and with dust.
He travelled from Cambridge to Chelsea
Hoping to better his lot,
But he found that the luck was much harder
Than it was in the home he forgot.
Now he stops for a moment's reflection.
The gay life of Boston he's seen
But the road that would lead him to fortune
Was only a phantom—a dream.
And deep was that bitter repentance
When he thought of the home he despised.
His adventure had taught him a lesson
And Boston had opened his eyes.
St. John, N. E., Aug. 1905. M. J. C.

CHIEF KERR UPSET.
An outbreak of fire in R. P. Hamm's stable on Sheriff street yesterday afternoon, where the damage done was slight, led to an accident to Chief Kerr, who was on his way to the scene of the fire. The occupants of his cart were besides himself, his driver and Capt. White. Going along Main street the horse shied at a load of wood coming in the opposite direction and jumped over into a car fender, which happened to be passing on the way to the plant. The horse went down and the three occupants of the cart were thrown out but escaped with a few bruises. Chief Kerr last night said it was the fault of the horse.
CHINESE MILLIONAIRES.
The sixteen Chinese who arrived on the Oruro yesterday are an interesting group. There are four women, Mrs. Lie A. Qui, a widow and three children, a girl, Kemian, aged sixteen, and three young boys aged four, eight and ten. Mrs. Chin A. Yong, aged eighteen, whose husband, a youth of sixty-five, is a millionaire; and the other two women are quite old and both are widows.
The party are from Georgetown, with the exception of the millionaire, who is from Dutch Guiana. The younger women are dressed in the height of fashion and the children are clothed in European dress. They are all merchants dealing in Oriental wares and speak English fairly well. One of the party is a graduate of Queen's University, Georgetown. The party left at 7 p. m. for Montreal en route to China for a year's vacation.
The public library at Southwark, Eng., is about to inaugurate a system of public shelves. These will hold all the latest books, and will be open to any taxpayer of the city, who can go to them and take out a book without reference to library attendants.

When William McNaughton, who found the goods, and his wife went to their barn to unload some hay, two men were hiding pointed revolvers at them and threatened them away. Policeman Dixon, of Dalhousie, was notified and spent the night searching in vain.

NOT FOR HIM.

Mr. and Mrs. Tiffin had been quarrelling. After an exchange of words incident to such occasions each settled into an armchair in silence. Finally, Mrs. Tiffin extended the olive branch by saying to her spouse, "Trying as you are at times, Mr. Tiffin, if I had my time to go over, I'd marry you just the same."

"You would?" I wouldn't!" came the reply from the depths of the other armchair.—Harper's Weekly.

JAPAN'S TERMS.
Now that the preliminary bluffing is over and the peace conference is actually begun, the world may expect results in a few days. For in spite of semi-official intimations that Japan will demand instant compliance with her first proposed terms under threat of much more severe conditions and notwithstanding Russia's bolsterous declaration that she will fight to the bitter end—whatever that may mean—rather than pay a cent of money or yield an inch of land, it is improbable, if a common ground is at all attainable, that either side will refuse to recede to some extent from its present position rather than continue a costly and weakening war.

Undoubtedly Japan's lowest demands will include a cash indemnity based on the expense of the war, the cession of Sakhalen and the complete withdrawal of Russia from the Liao Tung peninsula and Manchuria. And, in the light of the history of the past few years, these terms are reasonable and fair. Japan is asking for the cession of no territory that she has not won by force of arms; and as regards Manchuria, Russia can have no complaint, for had she kept her solemn promises to evacuate that country there would have been no war. Also in her demand for an indemnity Japan is following well-established precedent and, if preliminary reports can be believed is keeping her estimate of the money due her, within reasonable bounds.

An interesting historical article recently published in the New York Herald recalls that the first mention of indemnity occurred in the famous peace of Westphalia, which ended the bitter religious struggle known as the 30 years' war, in 1648, in which Germany was reduced in population, territory and morale. To her allies, France, Sweden and Prussia, she was required to pay a staggering price. France got the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine, while Sweden got part of Pomerania and the sum of $5,000,000.

Two hundred and twenty-three years later Germany got back from France the surrendered provinces and at the same time obliged her vanquished foe to pay the greatest cash indemnity ever secured in the history of the world, $10,000,000.

Russia got over $15,000,000 from Persia in 1828, besides large provinces, and the next year, in conquering Turkey, demanded an enormous sum, which, however, was never paid. Fifty years later, in 1878, she secured from Turkey the sum of $23,000,000, an indemnity which has been exceeded but once in the history of the world.

After her two wars with China—the Taiping rebellion and the opium war, Britain demanded and received $10,000,000 and $25,000,000, but made no profit as the wars were expensive and much of the indemnity went to reimburse British merchants for the destruction of property.

In 1866 Prussia closed a war with Austria much more advantageously. All told the fighting had not lasted two months, nor was warfare then the expensive thing it has come to be today. Yet Austria, with her five lesser allies, was forced to agree to an indemnity of $32,500,000.

Eleven years later, in 1877, Russia having beaten the Turks, kept her financial demands to the actual cost of the war. She asked $180,000,000 and Turkey agreed.

A PROVINCIAL STATESMAN.

In some of the recently published local accounts of the attempts to restrain a strong man supposed to be suffering temporary derangement it is said that his delusion takes the form of a belief that he is about to carry out great schemes of local development. He has visions of whole streets of houses which he is about to build, of towns which he is to found, probably of railways and mines which are to spring into existence at his word. He has inside support of capitalists who are about to pour out their wealth in projects which are dancing through his mind. It seems that the things do not happen which he sees in his mind's eye and that the glorious oral prospectus which he presents have no basis in reason and fact.

But this must not be considered sufficient proof of mental derangement. It may only show that the gentleman is qualifying for a candidacy in support of the Twelfth-Pegsley government, and perhaps for a position in the ministry. Central Railway finance would be altogether in his line.—Sun.

AUGUST.
Nothing to do in August; nothing to do but wait.
No big holiday comin' along to tempt us to celebrate.
No more pinwheels or rockets to dazzle the weary eye;
No more outdoor speeches an' pickles an' picnic pie.
The flowers are clusterin' rank an' high an' the grass is dull an' brown.
An' the leaves are dyin' here an' there, where the pitiless sun looks down.
The shy nutlets long since have fled.
The roses have bloomed in state.
An' there's nothin' to do in August.
Nothin' to do but wait.

—Washington Star.

Following his father as a sailor on the Lakes Mr. Oiler became a master of a schooner. In 1881 he enlisted in the navy and under Admiral Porter, on whose ship he was enlisted, he took part in the river battles between New Orleans and Vicksburg. After the war he became a life insurance agent and was engaged in active business until one year ago.

TOM BUTLER, CYCLIST, FATALLY HURT.

HELENA, Mont., Aug. 10.—Tom Butler, the bicycle rider, known as "Volvo," who jumps the gap during a circus performance failed to do the trick here last night and fell to the ground. He was unconscious for half an hour. The physicians say they fear he is internally injured and will die. His wife loops the loop in an automobile and she followed with her turn soon after the accident to her husband.

LOCAL NEWS.

Continued complaint is heard along the Kennebec about the large quantities of sawdust dumped into the river, and which destroys the fish. Some years ago there were thousands of shad and gaspereaux caught on this river, but now only one or two men find it profitable to fish for a living. Salmon, too, are becoming scarce. It is stated that there is one portable mill above Hampton, which has been sawing for two years, and every bit of sawdust from it has been allowed to go into the river.

The steamer Elaine is to have a new boiler before she goes on the route next spring. The boiler is being imported from Scotland, and will be ten feet long by twelve wide, with three fire holes.

Barbara Crawford, aged three years, and Eva Cohen, aged four years, were discovered yesterday by the police wandering along Main street and apparently lost. They were taken to the police station and soon after to their homes.

James Waddell, manager of the mill at Reed's Point, on the Kennebec, will install steam power in his mill instead of water power equipment, as is used at present. Mr. Waddell has bought an engine from the Waring foundry in Carleton, and will take the two boilers now in the steamer Elaine at the close of the navigation season.

The Connell liquor case was resumed in Fairville court house yesterday afternoon and adjournment made after a few hours' proceedings until 2 o'clock tomorrow. A few witnesses were examined. The first information was laid against John Connell, of Spruce Lake. Scott E. Morrill is defending him. A second information was laid against John Connell's wife. Both cases will probably be brought up tomorrow, with Mr. Morrill appearing for the defence in each.

ST. JOHN STAR THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1905.

NEWS OF SPORT.

Fredericton Tartars Will Challenge the St. Johns to Five Games for Money Stake—Late Baseball Games.

BASEBALL.

TARTARS AFTER THE ST. JOHNS.

The Fredericton Tartars are about to challenge the St. Johns to a series of five games for $100 a side. The captain watched the series between St. Johns and Portlands with interest and when the outcome was assured, made up their minds to play the winners. The idea is to have two games here, and two in Fredericton, the fifth to be mutually agreed upon.

The Tartars expect Malloy and Dunphy to return again on next Thursday. This will strengthen their team fifty per cent, as it gives them a new pitcher, and allows Art Finnemore to go to centre field, a position which he plays in stellar fashion.

Should this series of games be pulled off, it will greatly boom baseball in the province.

THE BROWNS COMING.

When a State of Maine baseball team visits St. John to do battle with the local team there is generally something doing that will make the fans sit up and think. The Maine team are usually thoroughly in touch with all the latest wrinkles in the game and they are always out to win. One of the best Maine teams is the Eastport Browns. They have defeated all the Maine teams they have met this season and in addition have the distinction of beating the St. Johns twice. Lately the St. Johns have been playing wonderful ball. In their last four games the team has made but four errors, a record which has never been equaled by a St. John team. Moreover, the St. Johns have proven that they are the fastest team in the maritime provinces as they have easily beaten all the provincial teams they have played.

It is announced that the Browns will be here on Thursday night to play two games with the St. Johns on Friday and Saturday afternoons on the Victoria grounds.

The games will certainly be two of the fastest ever seen in St. John, and it would be no surprise to see the Browns capture one of the games.

Local Games.

The Jubilee-Athletic game in the amateur league series on the Victoria grounds last evening resulted in a 7-7 score, but the Athletics claim the game as the Jubilees refused to continue before the umpire called the game. The evening was dark and foggy and unsuitable for baseball. The Y. M. C. A. and Athletics will play Friday night and games will probably be played every night next week to wind up the league. E. Small was umpire last night and the teams were:

Jubilees—Lee, catcher; Bent, pitcher; Stubbs, 1st base; Ramsey, 2nd base; Francis, 3rd base; Wingo, short stop; Hodge, left field; Donovan, centre field; Totten, right field.

Challenge.

The Franklins of Lower Cove challenge the St. Luke's, champions of the Church League, for a game, to be played on the Y. M. C. A. grounds, corner of St. James and Wentworth streets, on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 13th.

THE TURF.

GOOD RACING AT DOVER.

DOVER, N. H., Aug. 8.—The second day of the harness racing at the Granite State Park today was a good one for favorites, each of the three of the finished events ending in the picked horse.

Gracie Kellar took the free-for-all trot without difficulty, but in the 2:17 pace Caffeno had a slip up in the first heat. After that the big gelding had things his own way. In the third event, the 2:15 trot, the judges did not like Gray's driving of Minnie Bradstreet in the third heat and suspended him for ten days for pulling.

DRIVER HAS CLOSE CALL FROM DEATH.

BUFFALO, Aug. 9.—Ed Geers, at 60 years of age the dean of the Grand Circuit driving brigade, had another close call at Kenilworth Park this afternoon. The veteran was in the sulky back of King Direct in the 2:04 pace, the feature of the day, when in the third heat, at the head of the stretch, King Direct, pacing strongly, struck his hoof through the wheel of Locanda's sulky. A wicked looking accident was the immediate result. There was MULOCK'S REPORT ON CABLE CONFERENCE.

OTTAWA, Aug. 9.—Mulock is expected to report fully to his colleagues respecting the Pacific cable conference on his return to Ottawa. In the meantime the government has received a detailed statement of the working of the cable for the past year. The number of messages and words transmitted during the year 1904 was approximately 171,988, and 2,058,952 respectively. Expenditure on the service of the cable during the twelve months ended March 31, 1905, amounted to $50,751, against $54,824 in the previous year. Total receipts amounted to $57,449, 10c, (including special ed. to $5,118 on account of repair service rendered by Irish, against $50,118 last year. Surplus on actual working was, therefore, $2,698.94. The board, however, set aside $25,000 for renewal fund, and they had also to provide the sum of $7,544 for interest and sinking funds. This sinking fund will extinguish in fifty years the entire capital expenditure. Adding these payments to the expenditure, the deficiency on the year's operations amounts to $25,349, against $57,751 in the previous year. This deficiency has to be made by the contributing governments.

OTTAWA, Aug. 9.—Mulock is expected to report fully to his colleagues respecting the Pacific cable conference on his return to Ottawa. In the meantime the government has received a detailed statement of the working of the cable for the past year. The number of messages and words transmitted during the year 1904 was approximately 171,988, and 2,058,952 respectively. Expenditure on the service of the cable during the twelve months ended March 31, 1905, amounted to $50,751, against $54,824 in the previous year. Total receipts amounted to $57,449, 10c, (including special ed. to $5,118 on account of repair service rendered by Irish, against $50,118 last year. Surplus on actual working was, therefore, $2,698.94. The board, however, set aside $25,000 for renewal fund, and they had also to provide the sum of $7,544 for interest and sinking funds. This sinking fund will extinguish in fifty years the entire capital expenditure. Adding these payments to the expenditure, the deficiency on the year's operations amounts to $25,349, against $57,751 in the previous year. SIR HENRY MORGAN, BUCCANEER

By CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY.
Author of "The Southerners," "For Love of Country," "The Grip of Honor," Etc.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

Sir Henry Morgan, a notorious buccaneer, who had been knighted by King Charles II. and made vice-governor of Jamaica, was deposed by King James and ordered under arrest. Morgan admitted the two officers who came to take him, slew them and made his escape. With the help of one Benjamin Harrigold, a former lieutenant in his place, he collected a gang of a hundred out-throats in Port Royal and announced his intention of hoisting the black flag again. Harrigold actively aided him because he hopes in this way to get Morgan in his power and exact a horrible revenge for his brother whom the old buccaneer had hanged. After capturing the Mary Rose Morgan and his gang got safely past the forts with their prize, firing a broadside as they pass. During the next ten days the Mary Rose sailed south while Morgan drilled his crew. The sailors that were taken prisoners when the frigate was captured were given their choice of casting in their lot with Morgan or walking the plank. All joined the buccaneer. Two Spanish frigates, conveying a heavily loaded galleon, were unsuspectingly engaged, as Morgan's vessel was flying the British ensign. Morgan was successful in his attack but was obliged to blow up the stern of his frigate to complete his victory and his vessel sank but not before he and his crew were aboard and in control of the galleon. The convicts were destroyed.

CHAPTER VII.

THE ALBATROSS, Recalde, for such was the name of the galleon, was easily and speedily repaired by the skilled seamen of the Mary Rose under their leadership and direction as the experience of Morgan and the officers afforded. By the beginning of the first day watch even a critical inspection would scarcely have shown that she had been in action. With the wise forethought of a seaman, Morgan had subordinated every other duty to the task of making the vessel fit for any danger of the sea, and he had deferred any careful examination of her cargo until everything had been put shipshape again, although by his hurried questioning of the surviving officers he had learned that the Albatross Recalde was indeed loaded with treasure of Peru, which had been received by her via the isthmus of Panama for transportation to Spain. On board her were several priests returning to Spain and also an aged abbot, Sister Maria Christina.

In the indiscriminate fury of the assault one or two of the priests had been killed, but soon as the ship had been fully taken possession of the lives of the surviving clerics had been spared by Morgan's express command. The priests were allowed to minister to their dying compatriots so long as they kept out of the way of the sailors. In the hold of the ship nearly 150 wretched prisoners were discovered. They were the crew of the buccaneer ship Daring, which had been commanded by a famous adventurer named Ringrose, who had been captured by a Spanish squadron after a desperate defense off the port of Callao, Peru. They were being transported to Spain, where they had expected summary punishment for their iniquities. No attention whatever had been paid to their protests that they were Englishmen, and indeed, the statement was hardly true, for at least half of them belonged to other nations. In the long passage from Callao to the isthmus and thence through the Caribbean they had been kept rigorously under watch. Close confinement for many days and enforced subsistence upon a scanty and inadequate diet had caused many to die and impaired the health of the survivors. When the hatch covers were opened, the chains unshackled and the miserable wretches brought on deck their condition moved even some of the buccaneers to pity. The galleon was generously provided for her long cruise across the ocean, and the released prisoners, by Morgan's orders, were liberally treated. No work was required of them; they were allowed to wander about the decks at pleasure, refreshed by the open air, the first good meal they had enjoyed in several months and by a generous allowance of spirits. As soon as they learned the object of the cruise, without exception they indicated their desire to place themselves under the command of Morgan.

As soon as it could be done a more careful inspection and calculation satisfied the buccaneer of the immense value of his prize. The lading of the galleon, consisting principally of silver bullion, was probably worth not far from a million Spanish dollars—pieces of eight! This divided among the 150 survivors of the original crew meant affluence for even the meanest cabin boy. It was wealth such as they had not even dreamed of. It was a prize the value of which had scarcely ever been paralleled.

They were assembled forward of the quarter deck when the announcement was made. When they understood the news the men became drunk with joy. It would seem as if they had been suddenly stricken dead. Some of them stared in paralyzed silence; others broke into frantic cheers and yells; some reeled and shuddered like drunken men. The one person who preserved his imperturbable calmness was Morgan himself. The gratitude of these men toward him was overwhelming. Under his leadership they had achieved such a triumph as had scarcely ever befallen them in the palmiest days of their career, and with little or no loss they had been put in possession of a prodigious treasure. They crowded about him presently with enthusiastic cheers of affection and extravagant vows of loving service. The general joy, however, was not shared by the rescued buccaneers. Although they had but a few hours before despaired of life in the loathsome depths of the vile hold and they had been properly grateful for the sudden and unexpected release which had given them their liberty and saved them from the gibbet, yet it was not in any human man, especially a buccaneer, to view with equanimity the distribution—or the proposed distribution—of so vast a treasure and find that he could not share in it. The fresh air and the food and drink had already done much for these hardy ruffians. They were beginning to regain, if not all their strength, at least some of their courage and assurance. They congregated in little groups here and there among Morgan's original men and started with lowering brows and fushed faces at the frantic revel in which they could not participate. Not even the cask of rum which Morgan ordered broached to celebrate the capture and of which the hands partook with indiscriminate voracity could bring joy to their hearts. After matters had quieted down somewhat and during this time the galleon had been mainly left to navigate herself—Morgan deemed it a suitable occasion to announce his ultimate designs to the men.

"Gentlemen, shipmates and bold hearts all," he cried, waving his hand for silence, "we have captured the richest prize probably that floats on the ocean. There are pieces of eight, and silver bullion enough beneath the hatches, as I have told you, to make us rich for life, to say nothing of the gold, jewels, spices and what not besides."

He was interrupted by another yell of appreciation. "But, men," he continued, "I hardly know what to do with it." "Give it to us!" roared a voice, which was greeted with uproarious laughter. "We'll make away with it!" Morgan marked down with his eye the man who had spoken and commanded. "The ports of his majesty the king of England will be closed to us so soon as our capture of the Mary Rose is noted. England is at peace with the world. There is not a French or Spanish port that would give us a haven. If we appeared anywhere in European waters with this galleon we would be taken and hanged. Now, what's to be done?"

"Run the ship ashore on the New England coast," cried the man who had spoken before. "Divide the treasure, burn the ship and scatter. Let every man look to his own share and his own neck."

"By heaven, no!" shouted Morgan. "That's well said half of them. You can disappear. I should be taken, and Hornigold and Ravensau and the rest. It won't do. We must stay by the ship, keep to the original plan. We'll sail this ship down the Spanish main and capture a town, divide our treasure, make our way overland to the Pacific, where we'll find another ship, and then away to the south seas! We'll found a community, with every man a law for himself. We'll—"

But the recital of this utopian dream was rudely interrupted. "Nay, master," cried the man Sawkins, who had done most of the talking from among the crew; "we go no farther."

He was confident that he had the backing of the men and in that confidence grew bold with reckless temerity. Flushed by the victory of the morning, the rum he had imbibed, intoxicated by the thought of the treasure which was to be shared, the man went on impudently. "No, Sir Harry Morgan, we've decided to follow our latest plan. We'll work this ship up to the New England coast and wreck her there. There are plenty of spots where she can be cast away safely and none to know it. We'll obey you there and no farther. We've got enough treasure under hatches to satisfy any reasonable man. We're not afraid of the king if you are."

Hornigold clutched at the helm, which had been deserted by the seamen detailed to it during the course of the hot debate. The old man cast one long, anxious glance to windward, where a black squall was apparently brewing. But he said nothing. The argument was between Morgan and his crew; there was no need for him to interfere. Teach, Ravensau, Velsars and the others drew their pistols and bared their swords, but most of the crew were also armed, and if it came to a trial of strength the cabin gang was so overwhelmingly outnumbered that it would have been futile to inaugurate a contest.

Morgan, however, was frantic with rage. He did not hesitate a second. He rushed at Master Bartholomew Sawkins, and brave man as that sailor was, he fairly quailed before the terrific incarnation of passionate fury his captain presented. The rest of the crew gave back before the furious onset of Sir Henry.

"You dog!" he screamed, and before the other realized his intention he struck him a fearful blow in the face with his naked fist. Always a man of unusual strength, his rage had bestowed upon him a herculean force. He seized the dazed man by the throat and held him as he fell to the deck from the force of the blow and, lifting him up, literally pitched him overboard. Before the crew had recovered from their astonishment and terror at this bold action, the buccaneer officers closed behind their captain, each covering the front ranks of the men with a pistol. At the same instant the other men, Ringrose's crew, came shoving through the crowd, snatching such arms as they could in the passage, although most of them had to be satisfied with belaying pins.

"We're with you, Captain Morgan," cried one of their number. "We've had no treasure, and it seems worse to have a share in this either. We've been in the south seas," continued the speaker, a man named O'Lonnolly, noted for his cruelty, rapacity and success, "and the captain speaks truly. There are all that can delight brave men and a race of cowards to defend them."

The man who had been thrown overboard had shrieked for help as he fell. The splash he had made had been followed by another. A Spanish priest standing by the rail had seized a grating and thrown it to the men. Morgan took to the situation in haste. "I, senior," composedly answered the priest, who understood English. Morgan instantly snatched a pistol and held it to the priest's head and shot the man dead.

"I allow no one," he shouted, "to interfere between me and the discipline."

Shot the man dead

of my men! You speak well, O'Lonnolly! And how long have you been clubbing the smoking pistol and stepping toward the huddled, frightened men, 'get back to your duties unless you wish instant death! Scuttle me, if I don't blow up the galleon unless you immediately obey! Bear a hand there! If you hesitate—Fire on them!" he cried to his officers. But the men in the front did not linger. They broke away from his presence so vehemently that they fell over one another in the gangways.

"Don't fire!" they cried in terror. "We'll go back to duty!" Morgan was completely master of the situation.

"I am to be obeyed," he cried, "implicitly, without question, without hesitation!"

"Aye, aye!" "We'll wait!" "That's well. Heave that cannon overboard!" kicking the heavy piece over the side. "Now we'll go back and pick up Sawkins," he continued. "Ready about! Station for stays!"

"Look you, Captain Morgan!" cried Hornigold, pointing to the mainmast. "The squall! 'Twill be soon on us! We'd best reduce sail and run for it!" "Nay," said Morgan. "I'll allow not even a storm to interfere with my plans. Fly the head sheets tight. Hard down with the helm! Aft here, some of you, and man the quarter boat! I said I'd pick him up, and picked up he shall be!"

The ship, like all Spanish ships, was unhandy and a poor sailer. Morgan, however, got all out of her that mortal man could get. With nice seamanship he threw her up into the wind, bore her to and dropped a boat overboard. Teach had volunteered for the perilous command of her, and the best men on the ship were at the oars. Sawkins had managed to catch the grating and was clinging feebly when the boat swept down upon him. They dragged him aboard and then turned to the ship. The sinister squall was rushing down upon them from the black horizon with terrific velocity. The men bent their backs and strained at the oars with all their might. It did not seem possible that they could beat the wind. The men on the ship besought Morgan to fill away and abandon their comrades.

"No!" he cried. "I sent them there, and I'll wait for them if I sink the ship!" Urged by young Teach to exertion superhuman, the boat actually shot under the quarter of the galleon before the squall broke. The tackles were hooked on, and she was run up to the davits with all her crew aboard. "Up with the helm!" cried Morgan. The instant the boat was alongside, "Swing the mainyard and get the canvas off her! Aloft, tomen! Settle away the halyards! Clew down! Live, now!"

W. H. BELL, Manager, MARITIME PEOPLE SHOULD GO WEST.

MONTEAL, Aug. 9.—"If the people of this part of the country knew the advantages of the maritime provinces as summer resorts and would spend their holidays there in greater numbers than they do at present, and if the young folks of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia were made aware of the golden opportunities which await them in the Northwest, it would be to our mutual advantage." This is what Ald. Ames, M. P., says today on his return from a three weeks' trip through the lower provinces.

Mr. Ames specially deplored the large influx of young Nova Scotians into the United States, particularly into Boston, and suggested that the immigration department should make known to these people the glories of the Canadian west, rather than trying to attract to this country undesirable immigration from Continental Europe. "As a remedy to the present state of things I think that if the immigration department would devote some of its money to an endeavor to decry the stream of immigration from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick to the Northwest instead of letting it flow into the United States, and instead also of attracting to Canada immigrants of a very doubtful character from southern Europe, the country would greatly benefit by it."

Simple Designs for Embroidered Belts

The Summer Work of Making Lingerie

PERHAPS the most popular kind of summer fancywork is the making of exquisite bits of lingerie, done, of course, entirely by hand. Some of the pieces American girls turn out rival the most beautiful of those brought from the city most famous for their manufacture—Paris.

Especially noteworthy are the fine, sheer, cobwebby bits of linen—fine enough to make a handkerchief of—have their edges finely rolled and whipped, with almost invisible stitches, to the rolled edges of embroidery, or to the strong little threads which border lace insertion.

Fashions follow dress—fashions—though remotely. German valencienne lace, used so freely for blouses and summer dresses, is used in preference to the lighter, finer French mesh even for lingerie this year. And broderie anglaise, which has wandered over every sort of thing, from sheer blouse to breakfast evening coat, is lavishly used.

Hand embroidery—the sort that shows off a single false stitch—is best liked for these bits of fineness. But some machine-made embroideries are to be had, almost as delicately executed, if without the stamp of individuality that hand-work always bears.

Motifs of embroidery, framed in bits of lace, strips, separated by lace strips; or the delicate foundation used as a setting for either embroidery or lace—there are countless styles to pattern after.

One of the easiest corset covers to make is the wide edging that comes already combined with lace. The corset cover is nothing but a strip of this, gathered at the waist line—perhaps shaped slightly under the arms, and with wash-ribbon for shoulder-straps.

Dimity of the rosebud variety—only the buds must be tiny and the quality of the dimity exquisite—makes pretty covers; and the dimities with pin-point dots and small rings of a pale color are very pretty combined with a lace which has dots for its design. But all-white is, of course, more satisfactory.

Handkerchief linen, batiste and Persian lawn make the loveliest of these, although the less expensive lawns make up into exceedingly pretty corset covers and chemises, and launder almost as well.

The French trick of sewing tiny casings of the material the chemise is made of around the low-cut neck as a change from the hand-worked eyelets, or the lace beading usually inset, is being copied, among a lot of other variations, but the sewing must be done as exquisitely as if it were embroidery.

EMBROIDERY, in one form or another, from the English and Danish and Norwegian cut work, which has taken the world of art needlewomen by storm, to the crude designs and crude colorings of Eastern races, has found its way into almost every article of dress this season.

Most of the new blouses have collars attached, so that the fever for separate stocks, which has raged directly for several years, has abated. Their sequel is the new embroidered belts, got up in a hundred ways.

Hardanger materials—Hardanger work, too—make the foundations of fully half of them. Linen, of all weights and colors, the most, and the kinds of work they are embellished with include every popular style of embroidery.

Heavy cotton braid, with a mesh something like canvas, is treated with Hardanger work, in motif-like designs; or is embroidered in doll blues and greens and reds—Bulgarian fashion, or perhaps, is simply attached to a buckle and worn plain.

The three designs pictured are easily worked and extremely effective. The single motif—the design at the top—is worked three times across the back of the belt, one motif exactly in the middle and one on each side. It should be heavily outlined in old rich shades of several colors, except for the dots in the centre, which should be embroidered solid and then outlined in a contrasting color.

The second design, blocks laid on each other, the lightest being used for the upper squares and for the ones nearest the front. The motif directly in back and one side of the belt are shown.

The third design is worked in outline stitch, except for the dots-like the top motif. The design shown is complete for the back and one side.

As the designs are the exact size for reproduction, it is only necessary to trace off the pattern, reversing the tracing when applying the design to complete the belt.

HEAVY THREAD BELT

Be sure to use wash embroidery silk or cotton, as the material used in the belt washes shrinkingly. And use a rather heavy thread—it should stand out a little, instead of sinking into the braid, as the finer threads do.

Broderie anglaise makes some of the loveliest belts, either a conventional bringing together of round and long eyelets into effective designs, or in lower designs, with petals made of eyelets. An occasional braid lace Anglaise belt is made up over a pale color, which shows through the eyelets—something in the way the white belt is shown.

out in great eyelets and made up over a colored silk.

This color effect is got at in Hardanger by doing the work with colored cotton.

Blind embroidery is used probably most of all. Sometimes the edges are seamed; sometimes they are hem-stitched, and sometimes they are just hemmed—by hand, of course, and here and there is a suspender and belt embroidered to match—the suspenders buttoning on to the belt in front and back.

Very few belts have the embroidery running all the way round. It is usually a decoration for the back, the front left plain except for the buckle. And the blouses worn with these hand-made belts are as a rule simple—the small harness buckles of brass next in favor to the mother of pearl buckles that everybody is wearing.

With colored linen suits belts of the same color are often embroidered, but usually in eyelet designs. It is almost impossible to match linen shades exactly in embroidery cottons. If the colors do match exactly at first they fade differently. But the eyelet designs make the white cotton used for the work unobtrusive, as they show the white of the blouse through.

But belts that match the skirt tend to shorten the waist (and were all after long waists) so that white wins by a great majority.

Don't Have All Your Skirts Short

WITH short skirts invading the ranks of almost every style of dress, a mistake often committed is that of having every skirt in your wardrobe short, instead of having an occasional long one for high days and holidays. And another mistake, even more often encountered is the wearing of several tailored skirts with exquisitely embroidered blouses, the excuse being that they are both white and so should be all right.

They're not all right, by a great deal. Short skirts belong, by the very nature of things, to the less formal side of things; and embroidered blouses—this, of course, refers to the more elaborate blouses, not the simple little ones that belong, by rights, to mornings and walking suits—to a rather more formal side.

Separate skirts, of batiste or handkerchief linen of about the same weight as the material your "best" blouse are made of, combine with those blouses into the prettiest little white dresses. And if you keep the skirt fairly plain, trimming it only with tucks, or with dowers, or perhaps with just a little valencienne lace of some simple, unob-

USEFUL SUGGESTIONS—MAKING A BEGINNING ON YOUR CHRISTMAS GIFTS

SOMEWHERE tucked away in the bureau of that prodigy whom the rest of us long to believe purely mythical, the girl who is always ready for every occasion, and the first of her Christmas gifts, carefully laid in tissue paper, with some delicate, sweet-smelling powder as accompaniment.

It's not a bit too early to be about it, and the long, lazy summer days are all the pleasant whiff away with dainty work and thoughts of Christmas and the friends the world more appreciated nothing in the world more appreciated than hand-work—it can't have been got in a hurry, a careless last-minute gift.

quiet in quality, but too small to have been a great item. The chemistess could have been duplicated probably for fifty cents, and the work has been sheer pleasure. Your true needlewoman revels in placing each piece of work.

The other stitch, which we call "French seed-stitch" and the French call "grains of sand," makes even more unusual work, there are fewer people doing it, so many stitches must be placed to get the same effect, and so much time is apparently lost.

Chemistess and collar and cuff sets—with cuffs deeper than ever—are being open spaces held firm by buttonholed threads. The work is done by buttonholing around bits shaped like the old jewelry work designs, and is cut out carefully—the opening filled in with the prettiest of the lace stitches, those that are firm and close used more often than the loose lace stitches that can hold the lines in shape. for table dainties and centerpieces, although an occasional wonderful application of it to a blouse is still used—one enthusiast making herself a blouse with a hat to match it.

Among the little things—the gifts that are made more than the designs Christmas card—are pin-cushions. Those with beads arranged with blue and red lines, with black-headed pins stuck around the edge, make mighty useful and acceptable gifts. They are the sort of things that it pays to have a couple of extra ones of—they're sure to be needed.

Hardanger work is used now mostly

The exquisite chemistess, made of a bit of linen, lifted out of the class of linen by the fairytale traceries which wander over them and resolve themselves into a set but beautiful design, are too expensive for most of us to indulge very freely in. One, the simplest sort of thing, was priced fit-and-would-sold for that, too. Yet the broderie anglaise design, which made it beautiful, is easily done, and the material was only a bit of handkerchief linen, ex-made now for Christmas giving, and the same work is applied to table linen. Some ambitious embroiderers are even applying the more delicate forms of the work on handkerchiefs, ready hemstitched, and decorating the corners with napkins and the small table covers that are hardly more than large centerpieces—Hedebro work is newest. It is a sort of cross between Richelieu and lace work.

In the Hedebro too a novel form of drawn-work is very successful, and is cut out carefully—each other until a design is worked out in the same sort of squared lines that cover stitch and delicate work show.

Richelieu work for the deep cuffs and collars is very popular—founder buttoning and cutting out for a design, with the toopenative, by the way) as among the new fans.

Sweaters—and there is a new twist to the knitting stitches every little while—and afghans are made often than any other knitted or crocheted things this summer. And there's a new wool with a dull, strawlike strip that winds round the threads, breaking it up into lights and shadows.

And back to embroidery for a moment—colored embroidery always has a big following, and the art pieces are especially lovely this year.

A close watch is also being kept along the shore below the Falls, with the hope that the body might be carried in.

IMAGINARY DANGER AVERTED.

Miss Maggie Fitzgerald lives with relatives on North street, and at times has caused them considerable uneasiness and often much trouble. At one time she was an inmate of the Lunatic Asylum, but of late has been living home and conducting herself in a fairly good manner. This morning she made considerable trouble, and Officer McCallum was summoned. Miss Fitzgerald explained to the officer that some of her friends were contemplating using a knife on her. The officer assured her that he would not allow any operations of that kind on his beat, so she desisted from shouting her fears from an upper beam window.

The salmon season has been a particularly good one but is now about over, only a few fish being caught each night. Mackerel and fall shad are next in order but the outlook is not particularly bright.

PROFESSOR DAVIDSON DEAD.

Late U. N. B. Professor Passed Away in Edinburgh—Scottish Papers Speak Highly of His Great Ability.

Scottish papers, of July 31st, bring the sad news to his many friends in this city and elsewhere through the province of the death of Dr. John Davidson, lately professor of philosophy and political economy in the University of New Brunswick. Death was due to the pulmonary trouble which caused his prolonged leave of absence from his chair in 1892 and 1893 and his resignation last year.

Prof. Davidson, who was only 36 years of age, was the eldest son of W. Davidson, of 15 Craigmillar Park, Edinburgh. He was educated at the High School and at Edinburgh University, where he had a distinguished career.

He went to Berlin University in the spring of 1892, intending to take a three years' course of political study at Continental Universities, but in October of that year he accepted the chair of philosophy and political economy in the University of New Brunswick. In 1893 he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from his alma mater for a thesis, entitled "Wages Theories and Wages Factors." Among the works he had published since then are "The Bargain Theory of Wages" and "Commercial Federation and Colonial Trade Policy."

He received a year's leave of absence in June 1902 to do research work in Scotland for a complete history of the economic relations of Scotland with the continent, but pulmonary disease caused him to get a second year's leave. He had not recovered by the end of that, and a third year was offered by the university senate. Prof. Davidson, however, was so uncertain of recovery that he resigned the chair. Edinburgh papers contain long and eulogistic notices of Dr. Davidson's death. The Scotsman after an appreciative sketch of his career says: "Dr. Davidson's attainments as an economist were exceptionally promising and his untimely death cut short a career which was confidently anticipated by the best characters of his work and the temper of his mind."

The Despatch says: "During the months of his forced seclusion from the duties of chair, Dr. Davidson was by no means idle. Articles on subjects related to the branch of science in which he was a specialized student appeared steadily in British and American journals and periodicals; he did a large amount of work upon the Nelson-Harnsworth Encyclopaedia; and he week by week contributed valuable political and economic articles to the columns of the West-Scotland, since it changed hands in December last. Only on Tuesday last he insisted upon sitting up in bed to complete an article on 'The History of the Home Rule Movement,' saying that he had never failed anybody yet. But this time the task was beyond his power, and he had to lay down his pen for the last time. Death ensued on Friday. He is survived by a widow."

In the premature removal of Dr. Davidson, the schools of political economy have lost a clear-headed thinker, a lucid expositor, and an indefatigable worker, who must, in course of time, have secured an ever fuller public recognition. A wide circle of men engaged in educational, historiographical, and journalistic work have lost a tried friend and colleague. His more intimate friends have lost in Dr. Davidson one whose wide sympathies, broad-minded outlook, and brave struggle with an unkindly environment had fostered in them the warmest regard and appreciation."

POLICE COURT.

Witnesses Describe Free Fight in Brussels St. Bar-Room—Principal Offender Doesn't Remember Anything.

This morning the police court proceedings occupied but a few minutes, all the prisoners being remanded with the exception of one drunk, who was fined $4 or ten days.

Those remanded included Mary McCallum, charged with not guilty charges of drunkenness and profanity; Thos. O'Brien, on similar charges, the place being the ferry boat; and Henry Wright, on a charge of indecent behavior on Water street.

Later on in the morning the charge against George Gilbraith for assaulting Joseph Pilling and Gilbert Pinder; and against John Ryan for assaulting Wm. Marsden was gone into.

Marsden, who has a bad black eye, said that he, Pilling, Pinder and a man named Holden, all went into Phil Doherty's bar room on Brussels street about 9:30 on Tuesday to get a glass of ale. Inside they saw Gilbraith and Ryan. The former was very drunk, in fact witness said he was suffering from the "horror." Gilbraith landed Mr. Pilling, who is an old man, one in the stomach with his head, following which he turned his attention to Pinder, and landed him one in the mouth. Then Ryan, who had been trying to stop Gilbraith from fighting up to this point, hit Marsden in the eye.

In answer to Ryan, witness said, it was quite true that Ryan had previously tried to pull Gilbraith away and had also told the latter he ought to be ashamed of himself to hit an old man. But he (witness) was quite positive that Ryan struck him deliberately, as were also Pilling, Pinder, and a witness William Holden.

His honor asked where was the saloon keeper to allow this sort of thing to take place as it seemed very strange.

Ryan said the blow was struck in a general "mix-up" and not intentionally. Gilbraith didn't remember a thing about the affair. Both were remanded until tomorrow morning. D. Mullin, it is understood, will appear for the defense.
