Pennicuick smiled and they himself back in the carriage. If Mr. Major really supposed that he had put that horrid placard up himself, so much the better. It would save him a great deal of torture in the way of examination and investigation. It had been upon the thip of his tongue to answer, "I know no more than the Dead about this thing," but the thought of "the Dead' had restrained him. What hateful conspiracy had been at work to remind him of what had happened at Dhulang, which was unknown by living me, except a few Chinese? What personal enemy could have set the thing on footh be burned to know; but he also shrank from all enquiry into the subject. It was much better to let it drop, and Mr. Major's suggestion offered the readiest way to do so.

Moscow, Russia, Feb. 28.—A glamor of the East hangs over Moscow. The water-carriers till ply their trade about the streets. Armenians, Persians, and the dwellers of far-away khanates, may be seen among the crowd at the markets, and, really looking more at home in their quaint garbs than do, the Western traders, in hat and trousers. Nowhere else does the illusion grow upon so much as in the numerous traktirs which surround the markets. The Oriental hangings, divans, and lamps swinging censer-like from the ceilings, all have an Arabian Nights air, which is heightened by the appearance of the mute servants gliding siture, to wait for a friend, who was to accompany me to the markets to see the Mouse of the seen and the seen and Indeed, the hum of such other conversation as you might chance to hear will be lost in the great peals of the instrument. No Russian traktir would hold its custom for a moment without music of some kind; and the patrons of the Moskovaki would leave in a body and transfer their custom to another establishment if it boasted a better organ. This one was built at Wurtemberg expressly for the Moskovaki, and cost the proprietor about $15,000. It plays, I am told, airs from about twenty operas.

Probably many years have elapsed since two thunder storms equalling those of Friday night and Monday have occurred here within so short an interse would be difficult to decide, as they both appeared to have reached the climax in severity. That of Friday night was accompanied with the greatest amount of thunder and lightning, and also proved most destructive. While Listowel escaped any serious damage, other neighborhoods did not fare so well. During the storm James Leonard, living on the 6th con. of Elma, had a horse instantly killed by the lightning. The animal, which he valued at $100, was in close proximity to his barns when struck. In Grey township, a barn, the property of Thos. Mitchell, lot 15, 9th con., was fired by the lighting and entirely consumed, together with the contents, consisting of a threshing machine, buggy, 200 bushels of oats, 100 bushels of wheat, all his field seeds and a large quantity of dried pork. Two farmers named Daniel McLean and Andrew Edmonson, one living near Bayfield in Huron, and the other near Jarvis in Norfolk, also lost their barns and contents through the lightning during the same night. At Cranbrook the chimmey of V. Gramm's dwelling was destroyed by the electric fluid; while in Berlin and elsewhere much damage was done to buildings and property.

HOLY WEEK

Palm Sunday and Other Days Pre

Of all the seasons in the ecclesiastic year, especially in the services of the Catlic Church, there is none that presents great rattractions than that upon which we now entering. The solemnity and antique fall the observances, so symbolic and is pressive, cannot fail to be of interest to a general reader. The services of holy we proper commence on this day.

general reader. The services of holy week, proper commence on this day.

PALM SUNDAY.

The brief popularity which Jesus experienced on his last entry into Jerusalem, when the people "took branches of palm trees and went forth to meet him, crying Hosanna," etc., has been commencerated from an early period in the history of the Church on the Sunday preceding Easter, which day was consequently called Palm Sunday. Throughout the greater part of Christendom, in the defect of the palm tree, some other branches or evergreens are blessed by the priests at the mass and distributed among the people, who carry them in their hands, in memory of the Saviour's triumphant entry into the holy city. After this it is the custom to burn the branches thus used, the ashes of which are laid aside, to be sprinkled upon the heads of the congregation on the ensuing ash Wednesday, as a reminder of their origin, and that unto dust they shall return.

MAUNDY THURBLAY, OR HOLY THURBLAY.

The day before Good Friday has been marked from an early age of the Church by acts of humility, in intimation of that of Christ in washing the feet of his disciples on the eve of his passion and death. Ecclesiastics, small and great, laymen of eminence, not excepting sovereign princes, have thought it fitting, in the spirit of their religion, to lay by personal dignity on this occasion, and condescend to the menial act of washing the feet of paupers. It is in consequence of an associeted act of charity, the distribution of food in baskets, or maunds, that the day has come to be distinguished in England as Maundy Thursday. In Home, however, and indeed throughout the Catholic world, the day is known as Holy Thursday. On this day the ceremony of blessing the holy oils, used in baptism, ordination and extreme unction, takes place.

GOOD FRIDAY.

The services in the churches on this day are of the most solemn character. The priest and his ministers lie prostrate in solemn prayer before the altar, and in the meantime two acolytes spread a single cloth upon the altar aid place the book upon the epistle side. Then are read the lessons and tracts, after which the priest puts off his chasuble and uncovers the priest puts of the world," to which his responded "Come, let us adore." The priest then places the cortifix on a cushion in front of the altar, then, the clergy first and then the service which takes place in the early addended the cort of the observance of the latar, then, the clergy first and then service which takes place in the early addended to the cardy afternoon, the bells of St. Peter's are run brief notice of the observance of MILY SATURDAY IN ROME.

On the reading of a particular passage in the service which takes place in the early afternoon, the bells of St. Peter's are rung, and all the bells in the city immediately break forth, as if rejoicing in their new liberty of ringing. The blessing of the firs and the paschal oandle, the water and fire grains of incense, are among the principal ceremens ies of this day. New five, as it is termed, is employed. At the beginning of mass a light, from which the candles and the charcoal for the incense are enkindled, is struck from a film. Formerly all the fires in Rome were lighted anew from this holy fire, but this is no longer the case. Catechumens are baptized, deacons and priests ordained and the tonsure given on Holy Saturday.

A .SCOUNDREL'S LIFE REVIEWED.

How a Great City Was Robbed, With a few Interesting Personal Notices of the Thief and His Methods of Stealing.

William M. Tweed was 55 years old on the 3rd of this month. He was born in 1823 at 9 Cherry street. His father was a chairmaker, a partnef with Hezekiah W. Bonnel, He was in good circumstances, and gave his children a fair education. Young Tweed was sent to school to Gould Brown, the well-known author of "Brown's Grammar." Mr. Brown kept his school in Pearl street, near Franklin square. Tweed's old schoolmaster give him a good regutation. He was an apt scholar, and had a most retentive memory, He was not quarrelsome, but

and would fight before suffering imposition. One of his boyish companions says that the was witty, and as "full of the devil as an egg is of meat." At three he is said to have been stubborn and mulish, but was always generous and ready to take the part of the smaller boys when suffering from the arrogance of their larger playmates. When-about 12 years old William was sent to a boarding school kept by the Rev. Mr. Halsey in Eizabethtown, N.J. Here he finished his education. He studied nothing but the English branches. The Blue Book says that he is a graduate of the New York Law School, but his relatives pronounce this incorrect. On his return from boarding school, young Tweed entered his father's shop and

BECAME A CHAIRMAKER.

He is said to have been a good workman. Afterward he ran the business on his own account. His earnings were spent either in theatres or in engine-houses. Like most New York boys of that day, he fancied the life of a fireman. He became a runner with Twelve Engine in the Fourth Ward, before he was of age. In 1847 he joined that company, Meantime Tweed had married and moved into the Seventh Ward. He joined Engine Company No. 9. on Jan. 1849. Within six months he was elected foreman of Big Six, as she was called, became the most famous engine company in the city. She dashed through the streets, aiming to be first at all fires. Tweed led the ropes with a silver-mounted transfer in his hand, a white fire-coat over his arm, and one of the old-fashioned stiff hats on his head. He was well known to all bunkers and volunteer firemen. His personal popularity was so great, and the friends of Big Six so numerous, that the company became a powerful lever in municipal politics. The American Club was the offspring of its popularity, and its influence was felt in political matters years after its disbandment. With larity, and its influence was felt in political matters years after its disbandment. With THE FOREMANSHIP OF BIG SIX Tweed began his political career. In 1850 he ran for Assistant Alderman of the Seventh Ward, but was defeated by the Whig candidate, Mr. John B. Webb. The following year he again contested the district with Mr. Webb and was elected by a large majority. His business tact and vigor were recognized in the board, and the leaders of the party predicted his rise to power.

Congressmen were elected in the fall of 1852. There was a bitter contest for the Democratic nomination in the Fourth District. Mr. Tweed was Chairman of the Convention. The two wards presented one candidate and Williamsburgh another. Several ballots were taken, the vote standing 14 to 44. As a last resort, the Williamsburgh delegates dropped their man, and nominated Mr. Tweed. This shrewd politician cast his vote for himself, saying: "Tweedy never goes back on Tweedy—

goes back on Tweedy—

TWEED GOES FOR TWEED!"

Old Joe Hoxie was the Whig candidate.
He went through the district, working like a beaver, telling funny stories and filling the air with eloquence. Tweed confined himself subsequent campaigns, and beat Hoxie by a and Fernando Wood. In the contest between Fowler and Wood. Tweed was a firm supporter of the former. Wood called him a "political flat," and Tweed never forgot it nor forgave it.

While a member of this board, measures were passed that laid the pounds. His good nature was proverbial. In the height of his power he wore a moust staggering. Mr. Tweed was an active member of what was known as the old Supervisors Ring. He and his partners kept a political tollgate, and collected heavy tolls on every bill that passed the board. All the members of the board, with possibly one exception, became rich, during their term of office. His success as a manipulator of his associates undoubtedly emboldened him and lad him to plan and carry out the gigantic schemes that afterwards astounded the community.

To point Officia fine I and the special of Act intentions of the mothers of Madrid, they could not PURNISH THE INFANTS WITH DESIRELE BOARD because their systems were affected in a deleterous manner by the unwholesome atmosphere of the city. As for the auxiliary bottle, he condemned it with much ferceness. "Never with my consent," said this excellent man, "shall the youth of Madrid undergo the humiliation of the unaympathetic and unsatisfactory bottle." He announced that he would keep constantly on hand a large SUPPLY OF UNEXCEPTIONABLE NURSES on his suburban estate. There is some difficulty in translating his exact deforiptive phrase into English, but perhaps it will suffice to say that his nurses were warranted to be able to supply the wants of the Madrid infants without the aid of bottles. In short, they were to be self-acting, perrennial, and inexhaustible, and with their assistance Don Jose De Antiquedad y Vuelta-Abajo undertook to supply Madrid with pure Naranjos County—well! at all events the Madrid infants were to be fed. A few weeks later and Don Jose advertised that his establi-shment was in complete working order, and that HIS NURSES WOULD ENTER THE CITY DAILY to wait upon their customers. Apparently, he had a great many patrons, for a few days later a procession of at least a dozen extremely plump Spanish women, whose very appearance was sufficient to awaken the most dainty infant, made their appearance at the city gate. The Custom-house officers gazed at them with respect and admiration, and they made their appearance at the city gate. Don Jose de Antiquedad y Vuelta-Abajo was thus discovered to be an imposter. He had not furnished a single Madrid infant with pure Naranjac County—well, food. He was not a philanthropist, and he care in either for nurses nor children. He was, however, an audacious and ingenious smuggler, and the long success of his artifices has so overthrown Spanish faith in woman, that none but the thinnest and most level of the sex can pass a Spanish Custom-house without undergoing the most rigid scrutiny.

About four years ago a farmer of Surprise valley found in the crop of a wild goose a small quantity of grain, the like of which he had never before seen. He planted this grain, and it grew and flourished, producing more than a hundred fold. The straw and beardless head are said to resemble wheat, while the grain looks like rye, but is twice as large. The farmer has now many bushels of this new cereal, and has seet samples of it to be planted in various places in Calfornia, where food for cattle is not easily obtained at some seasons, as the stalk of the new grain, when cut before it is thoroughly ripe makes excellent hay.

An old sailor of this city, after reading an item which has been going the rounds or the papers in regard to the new cereal, the substance of which item is given above, finds his memory refreshed.
