Tur third of the course of Lenten sermons was preached in St Dunstan's Cathedral, on Sanday night, by Father Arsenault. The subject of his discoruse was "Hell," and the words of his text: "De-part from me ye accursed into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels."

He first referred to the existence of hell. That there is a hell and that it is eternal That there is a hell and that it is eternal was shown by abundance of testimony. All nations and peoples, both before and since Christianity, bore testimony to this fact. Conscience was the same everywhere, and conscience admonished us there was a hell. Hell began with the fall of the angels. Take away hell and you destroy heaven. Justice was one of the attributes of God, and His justice demands that there should be a place of mands that there should be a place of punishment for the wicked as well as a place of reward for the just. The preacher then referred to the torments of hell and their duration. These torments would last for eternity. He here, by comparison, impressed on his hearers some idea of eternity. Did we keep the remembrance of hell and eternity constantly before our minds, we would not fall into sin, but attain the end for which we were created, Heaven.

Almighty God will not fail to reward all who remain true to this faith. Irish men wherever found should glory in this. It was a glory and a privilege that, it was a was shown by abundance of testimony.

Grewing Of A Soul.

Hear ye this parable: A man Did plant a garden. Vine and tree
Alike, in course of time, began
To put forth fair and pleasantly.
The rains of heaven, the persuading sun,
Came down alike on each and every one.

Yet some trees wilful grew, and some Strong vines grew daily in the sun, With gaudy leaves, that ever come To naught. And yet, each flaunting of Did flourish on triumphantly and glow Like sunset clouds in all their movingsho

The Widow's Mite. (Mons. de Segur.)

During the three years of His pub lic preaching our Lord frequently entered into the Temple, To Orie day he was with His Apostles in one of the halls leading into the sanctuary and called the Treasury, because the alms of those who went in to prayer were received in a kind of box placed there for that purpose. Here our Lord paused for a tew minutes, watching those who passed through and noticing the alms which they cast in.

Many rich men cast their gifts generously into the treasury. A poor widow came and gave two small pieces of money, equal to one farthing. When she was gone into the Temple now thou'rt gone,
And I who hailed thee stand upon this beach alone.

The Son of God turned to his disciples which pierced her foving heart? Are not these divine words very

The widow's mite is an evident proof that all men, the poor as well as the rich, are called by our Father in heaven to fulfil the great and holy law of almsgiving. The rich, in orde to accomplish the will of God, should give much and should give gladly the poor should give a little, and, a ships of poverty, it is scarcely necessary to add that the little they give should be given ungrudgingly. The ing in her mites, did not surely give than the abundant offerings of the The rich who had preceded her. God does not weigh the actions or men by the same measure as we do. Tradition tells us that after Christ's ascension the Blessed Virgin was wont daily to travel from Pilate's house to Mount Calvary, along the way over which Jesus bore the cross, and that she paused at those spots made memorable by some insult, injustice, or cruelty inflicted on Christ. can form an idea of the Queen of Martyrs as she thus, amid those silent witnesses of the passion, meditated on the sufferings of her divine Son? Must not every sight of the pillar at which He was scourged, of the tribune whereon He was mocked, of the spots whereon He fell, of the way marked by His blood, of the nails that transfixed Him and of the cross whereon He died, of the grave where in He was buried, have been a sword the Son of God turned to His disciples which pierced her loving heart? Should Read the Bible.

There was an immense congregation in the Baltimore Cathedral on Sunday the 3rd inst. Cardinal Gibbons preached. His text was taken from the gospel for the day, which treated of the fast and temptation of Christ in the desert. The Cardinal said that as our dear Lord on that occasion made several quotations from the Scriptures, I deem the time and occasion most opportune for commending to my hearers the sacred duty of hearing and reading devoutly the word of God. It is, he continuthat the Bible is the only book which Christ is known ever to have read or to have quoted in the whole course of the pertals of this temple of divine any allusion whatever to the classic gin and sublime destiny of man and the means of attaining it. It is the the veneration of the faithful."

key that interprets his relations to his Creator. It is the foundation of our heritage. Its moral code is the standard of our lives. If our Christian civilization is so manifestly superior to all actual preexisting social systems, it is indebted for its supremacy to the ethical teachings, of Holy Writ. Viewed as an historical chronicle, the Word of God is the most ancient, the most authentic and the most instructive and interesting record ever presented to mankind. It contains the only reliable history of the human race before the deluge, embracing a period of more than fifteen hundred years from the creation of Adam to the time of Noah. Were it not for the Hebrew annalist the antediluvian age would be a complete blank to all succeeding visable, if not well nigh impossible, to generations. The Decalogue is 700 years older than the jurisprudence of Lycurgus; it is 2,000 years older than the Justinian; it is 2,700 years older as much as those "who bore the heat than that of the Magna Charta; it is 3,300 years older than the code of older than the American Constitution—and yet the Decalogue is better

It gives us the narrative of the most memorable and momentous events and of the most eminent men that have ever figured in the theatre of the world. There is scarcely a notable incident recorded in Scripture that may not serve as a text for some moral reflections. Bible facts are sermons as well. Read Massillon's discourses and you will perceive the truth of this assertion. If history is philosophy, teaching by example, this definition is specially applicable to the Word of God, for the apostle says that 'what things soever were written were written for our learning.' There is not a single virtue that is not embellished by the luminous example of some patriarch or prophet or apostle or king or matron in the Sacred Book. If you look for an example of unshaken faith and hope in God, where will you find it more beautifully portrayed than in Abraham ? In David you have a conspicuous marvel of tender piety toward God and of magnanimity toward on enemy. Chastity and filial affection shone forth in the life of the patriarch Joseph. Tobias and Job were held up as types of patience and resignation in adversity. Martial heroism are strikingly exnibit ed in Gideon and the Machabees an domestic affection by Jacob and Ruth Susana is a sublime pattern of con-jugal purity, and St. Paul of burning real and apostolic courage.

Where shall we find a more graphic and impressive picture than that of Paul, with his face emaciated after two years of imprisonment and led in chains into the hall of Felix, the Govchains into the ball of Felix, the Governor of Cesarea? Felix is presiding with his adulterous wife siting beside him. The apostle with uplifted manacled hands preached to Felix on righteousness and chastity and the judgment to come. Felix trembled before the prisoner and hastily withdress from the chamber, atoms he the drew from the chamber, stung by the words of Paul and oppressed by a guilty conscience. What a striking instance is this of the superiority of innocence enchained over guilt en-through! Wellmight Felix tremble at those three words, justice, chastity and the judgment to come, for justice he trampled upon, chastity he had violated and the judgment to come he had reason to dread.

While these great luminaries shine forth like stars in the firmament, guiding the wayfarer in the path of rectitude, the lives of others recorded in Holy Writ who had fallen from their high estate serve as beacon lights warning us to shun the rocks which isobedience, Sampson's and Solomon's licentiousness, the vengeful spirit and cruelty of Jazebel, with the ey to loan. awful retribution which followed; the treachery of Judas, the falsehood and avarice of Ananias and Saphira, these and other examples of the kind are striking object lessons to the reade: to show that no crime can be committed with impunity, and that 'what a man soweth, that shall be reap also.'

The Bible is the unfailing fountain from which the theologians, doctors and fathers of the Church have copiously drunk. Who have surpassed in pulpit eloquence the fathers of the There is a freshness and virility in their sermons which have rarely been equalled and never excelled by modern preachers. Their great strength was the result of the invigorating nourish-ment on which they fed. The only book of divinity they consulted was the Word of God.

Apart from its inspired character the Bible is a model of literary ex cellence. What classic author, ancient or modern, can excel Isaiah or St. John in sublimity of conception or the books of Samuel or Kings and the gospels in the charm and conscise ness of historical narrative, or Jeremiah's Lamentations in pathos and tenderness, or the Apocalyse in descriptive power, or Job in majestic and terrible images, or David in poetic thoughts?
