Which Was The Heir?

CHAPTER XXXV. (Continued.) THE autumn sun was shining brightly as he walked along the sea-front, but neither the brightness of the weather nor the brilliance of the crowd who walked or drove past him had any interest for him; though in a casual way he did notice an admirably appointed victoria which passed him—a victoria in which a red-haired lady sat in a most striking, not to say dazzling, costume reclined in the most indolent and graceful of attitudes. Mrs. Richards is more striking than ever," he heard a man say. "Wonder who she is? Stylish little woman, but mysterious—deuced mysterious!" Geoffrey paid no attention to the words; he was thinking of Ronnie, wondering whether he was safe, or whether he had fallen into bad hands and was in trouble. As he went up the steps of 24 Montague Square, Mrs. Sefton, who happened to be on the balcony, caught sight of him. Her colour changed, and her eyebrows went up with an expression of perplexity. She had been half-expecting him for some time past, and had been asking herself—and still more perplexity—what Cottie would do if he arrived. She and Cottie had been at a dance the preceding night, and she had in-

Anyone who has had this most painful disease will understand her suffering—and her joy when she found Father Morrissey's "No. 7" had cured her. She says: "I took Father Morrissey's Prescription for Inflammatory Rheumatism. I had suffered everything with it, but in three weeks after starting Father Morrissey's Prescription I was able to do my work, and after taking four dollars worth of medicine I was well. I highly recommend it any sufferer with Rheumatism." Rheumatism comes from bad kidneys. The poisonous Uric Acid which they should remove stays in the blood, accumulates in joints and muscles, and causes agony. Father Morrissey's "No. 7" puts the kidneys right, removes the Uric Acid from the blood and the whole system, and cures the Rheumatism. which seemed a dream, and only that past a reality. She told herself that it was shameful and unwomanly—for she was a woman now, no longer a boy—to think of a man who, if he had not forgotten herself, only thought of her as a boy, and was in love with another woman; but thoughts are not only free, they are the most despotic of things—more despotic than a kaiser or a czar; and, try as she would to distract her mind, she could no help thinking of Geoffrey. Ever since the first night she had seen him, he had been the center of being, the pivot on which her life had turned; but now, now that she knew, to her shame, that she loved him as a woman loves a man, he absorbed all her life. Vain indeed were all the luxuries and comforts of her present existence, the adoration and attention which were lavished upon her. No one, under the most favourable circumstances, can be happy while the one crying want of the heart is unsatisfied; and Cottie wanted Geoffrey with every fibre of her body. The door opened and Mrs. Sefton entered. "Cottie, my dear child, prepare yourself for a shock!" Cottie rose, with one hand gripping the head of the couch. She knew what had happened. "He is here!" she breathed, almost inaudibly. "He is ringing the bell at this very moment," said Mrs. Sefton. "My dear, my dear, you are not going to faint, are you? For Cottie's face had gone very white, and she leaned against the couch as if all her strength and deserted her. "I am not going to faint," she said in a low voice. "I—I have expected it. You must send him away. I could not see him." "But how can I send him away, my dear girl?" said Mrs. Sefton, almost tearfully. "He is not the sort of man you can send away. He'll ask me all sorts of questions, and I'm sure to break down, with those eyes of his upon me. Besides, it will seem unkind; and whatever I may have done," she added, piteously, "I do hope I've never been unkind to anyone. What shall I tell him?" "Tell him you have not found—Ronnie," replied Cottie, with a catch in her voice. "Tell him that you think he must have gone back to Australia. No, don't tell him that, or he may go back there. But no, he would not leave her. She put her hand to her brow and drew a deep sigh—a sigh went to the other woman's heart. "Tell him what you please, only get him to go away. I could not bear— Mrs. Sefton went up to her and kissed her. She felt that the girl was trembling like a leaf. Cottie put her away from her gently and sank on to the sofa, and Mrs. Sefton, in a tremor of emotion, went down-stairs to the drawing room. She started when she saw Geoffrey. "Oh, you've been ill!" she exclaimed. "Very ill, I'm afraid!" "Yes, I've been rather bad," said Geoffrey, curtly, with all the strong man's hatred of his own weakness, and horror of a fuss. "Met with an accident. All right now, though. Have you heard any news? But I suppose you haven't, or you would have written to me." "No, I've heard no news of—Ronnie Bell," said Mrs. Sefton, quakingly. Geoffrey sighed. "In a sense I've been more lucky than you have, then. I've heard of him at a place called Starborough. I was actually near him, while I was lying with a broken head—a useless kind of idiot!—but I only heard of him to lose him again; and, though I've been hunting him for weeks in London, I can get no trace of him." "Dear, dear me!" said Mrs. Sefton. "You look worn out. Were you staying with friends at Starborough?" Geoffrey warmed up for a moment. "The best friends a man ever had," he replied, his face flushing for a moment. Poor Cottie! thought Mrs. Sefton, with a sinking of her heart. "And now, I suppose you'll go back to them?" she said. "Yes—presently," he said, with a sigh. "Oh, yes I'm bound to go back." "You don't look fit to be travelling about," she said. "Why don't you stay in Brighton for a day or two? The air would be sure to do you good; and I am sure you want a rest." Geoffrey gazed at the carpet apathetically. It did not seem to him to matter very much where he went or what became of him. "Perhaps I might," he said. "Why not go to The Bedford and stay there? And will you come and dine with me to-night? I have a few friends coming. I have a young ward staying with me. You—you would perhaps like to meet her." In her confusion she had blundered out the invitation, scarcely knowing what she said. If she had had time to think, she certainly would not have given it; but she had uttered it.

on the impulse of the moment, and to her surprise—and to Geoffrey's own—he accepted it, perhaps because he was too apathetic to refuse. "Thanks, very much," he said. "It's a long time since I was to a dinner-party." "Oh, it isn't a party," she stammered, "only a few friends of mine and—my ward's. Have you tried 'Fer Brevais'? It is such an admirable tonic! I am sure you want a tonic of some kind; but the air here will do you good. And—and I wouldn't worry about the boy. Boys have a knack of falling on their feet—" "But this boy of mine is quite strange to England; and I'm anxious about him," said Geoffrey. "But I mustn't worry you; you have already taken too much trouble. I'll stay here for a day or two. As you say, it may set me up." He rose, and Mrs. Sefton gave him her hand. Hers trembled; his felt dry and feverish. Of course Cottie could have not made no mistake, and yet he had not the appearance of the manner of a man who had been successful in love; but then he had been ill.

Crucifixion of a Miner.

Crowned With Thorns and Nailed to a Cross in a Pennsylvania town. Wheeling, W. Va. April 23—Tortured with a crown of thorns and nailed to a cross. George Rabbish, a Slav, died to-night from the most barbarous and sacrilegious punishment ever devised by modern man. The crucifixion of the Slav occurred at Avella, Pa., a small mining town on the Wheeling and Lake Erie railroad in Washington country just over the state line. The foreign miners about the mines of the Pittsburgh and Washington Coal Co., at Avella, accused Rabbish of being a company spy. It was charged by many of the workmen that Rabbish had caused the dismissal of several of his fellow employees. Friday afternoon Rabbish was taken from the mines by a gang of drunken foreigners and rushed to the side of the town, where he was brutally beaten. He was rescued by mine officers headed by Mine Supt. Nelsner, and four of the alleged persecutors arrested and heavily fined. Saturday, a gang of men burst into Rabbish's home, dragging him from his bed and carried him to the same spot, where he was stripped of every garment. Nude, he was accused of being a spy. When he denied the charge, a crown of thorns, already prepared, was forced upon his head and as the blood ran down his face and covered his form, the miners jeered him and warned others of his fate. After a mock trial, during which Rabbish suffered untold torture from the thorns, he was convicted and sentenced to die. His tormentors fashioned a cross out of great timbers used in bracing the mines. A hole was dug and the cross firmly planted. Rabbish was then bound to it hand and foot by ropes that cut deep into the flesh. Whiskey was distributed among the foreigners and crazed by drink they drove a nail through the palm of his left hand impaling it to the arm of the cross. They began a weird dance about the writhing form, stopping now and then to hurl stones at the suffering man. News of the act reached the ears of the officers, and mine Supt. Borgs gathered a posse of officers and rushed to the scene of the crucifixion. When the officers arrived the drunken foreigners were dancing about their victim, who, crazed by fright was alternately praying and heaping imprecations upon the head of his tormentors. The miners showed fight and a number of shots were fired before they dispersed, four of them were arrested. Rabbish, semi-conscious, was cut down from the cross and the nail withdrawn from his hand. He was taken to the hospital, where he died several hours later.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"And that is the strangest part of it all," said the mother whose daughter had wandered very, very near to the precipice of ruin and disgrace, "was that Alice was such a quiet, studious girl, and a girl that I always thought didn't care anything about men."

I have heard other mothers say that or something similar, such as, "Boys really seem to bore Ethel. She is such a serious-minded girl," or, "Jane really doesn't have any use for men. I don't believe she'd care if she ever saw one."

I always feel terribly tempted to ask, "Dear lady, would you mind telling me what state you are from?" I don't believe there is a girl in this city who does not care anything about the opposite sex.

There are—thank goodness—a good many girls, and I think a good many more girls than there used to be, who have common sense on the subject.

There are girls who can talk about something other than what HE said at the dance, and what a nice time they had at the theatre with HIM, and how cute HE looks with his hair parted in the middle, and how unbecoming a red tie is to HIM.

There are girls who can have a perfectly good time without masculine assistance, who can heartily enjoy a lark with members of their own sex.

There are girls who decidedly prefer superior feminine to inferior masculine society, and who have the common sense to realize that a life of cheerful, useful spinsterhood is infinitely better than to be Mrs. of any but the right man for Mrs.

And there are also girls who adopt a pose of complete indifference and absence of interest in the masculine sex to cover a lack of success with the same.

But girls who don't care anything about men—well, I guess you'll have to go where the white crow nests and the sun rises in the West to find them.

So don't be deceived, mothers, if your Ethel or Jane or Alice does act as if she cared more for her Latin lexicon or her music lesson than the best looking pigskin coat that ever carried the pigskin over the goal line.

Don't be fooled if your Emma Jane does appear to prefer a quiet evening with her books to the society of the handsomest young eligible in town.

Don't be put off your guard that way, and think as that mother, who was almost too late, thought, that your supervision and guidance isn't at all needed in that direction.

Underneath that indifferent exterior you may be sure, though it may even be as unknown to her as to you, sleeps the human, ordinary little girl who does "care for men."

And it may be, too, that what you take for indifference is really repression, and the personality that you think so weakly sexed is really just as much oversexed.

It may be that your quiet little girl who doesn't appear to care for men really needs your guidance and attention very much more than that other daughter who has talked of and flirted with masculinity ever since you began to let her frocks down below her knees.

Who knows?

Tor's Cove Affairs.

"For ways that are dark, and for tricks that are vain," politicians are sometimes peculiar. With apologies to Bret Harte. It is said that money has been given for improvements on private property, that men have not been paid for work done a considerable time ago, in force of the fact that our roads are rough, narrow and dangerous, because money has been spent in less important places in the neighbourhood of certain people who, gossip says, get all the "pickings", that men were refused employment on public works because they were "not on the right side," the most competent for the work, being boat builders; that railings over dangerous embankments are left in a bad condition just to show that the powers that be have the "upper hand" of the majority; that work is delayed till certain men who cannot by reason of asheny preparations avail thereof, though they want it as badly as others, and that money is held back to be divided up among a certain clique who are always ready to put themselves out when any public work is going ahead, and many other things. I cannot vouch for the truth of all those charges, yet, as you know, there is never smoke without fire. But if such corruption and abuse ever existed it will be all at an end, when a man with a conscience gets at the head of affairs we can rely upon it that there will be no coniving at such petty tricks any longer, and that the public mind need no more be ill at ease on matters of public import.

I cannot close this letter without saying a word in commendation of elected Road Boards. It was suggested in the Morris Manifesto, and happily referred to in a speech by Mr. Howley in the Assembly during last session, Road Boards heretofore, except, perhaps, where the influence of the clergy determined the selection, were appointed rather with a view to personal interests or indebtedness on the part of politicians than that of looking after public needs; but now that we may elect the fittest of the community to see to the expenditure of the people's money without fear or favor, there will be no more public corruption or quasi-bribery in the minor departments of the State. But when shall we see the several much needed reforms brought about? It is not yet (as far as I know) on the Statute Book that people may elect their Road Boards. Is there any Inspector of Public Works who may turn up occasionally and see the work done is value for the money? We had a public wharf repaired here lately, and it is no exaggeration to say that it is an object lesson in marine architecture. The only pity of it is the place is so infested with rats.

Is it true, Mr. Editor, that a copy of the returns for the expenditure of public money must be posted in some public place where he who runs may read? I am told that there are men in the public service who cannot write, and consequently, must employ a neighbour to do the needful. I am informed that there is one on the Shore so deficient in calligraphy that he could not put his initials on his sheep, and had to mark with an X, and he certainly got that from the ballot papers. No doubt Mr. Cashin is not aware if any such are in the district he represents, or they would get a pension in quick time; but I heard incidentally that there were some such on the shore.

I have gone to sufficient length in this letter, and must reserve a lot of interesting matter for another time. There is not an old salt about here but could furnish an item for the press or an Xmas number.

It is a long time now since I dropped you a line, but in future you may here from me on one topic and another. I see notes from Branch, Seldom Come By and many other places of minor importance, and I cannot see why we should not be heard from occasionally. I don't believe you will put this into the waste basket, though some may wish you did, and you will agree with me that men of prominence who make laudable efforts for the betterment of their fellows, would get some notice.

If you publish this I shall be encouraged to drop you another line. In the meantime, believe me,

Yours truly,

Went on Strike.

People by yesterday's express say that on Monday past most of the men working on the erection of the Albert Reed Co's. pulp mills at Bishop's Falls went on strike for a raise of wages at 10 a.m., and there was quite a disorderly scene there. Several carpenters and others refused to come out, whereupon the strikers pelted them with stones compelling them to leave their work. The water from the pumps were turned into several open cuts, causing serious inconvenience. The men were receiving $1.35 per day, and struck for $1.50. The company acceded to their demands but dismissed the ringleaders in the disorder, and young chaps who were not deemed good enough workmen to get the advance.

A SERIOUS WOUND.—While Wm. Bishop of Westville was cutting a spar out of his schooner Wednesday last the axe he used slipped and he inflicted a dangerous wound in his leg, just below the knee, taking a large piece of flesh completely out and cutting into the bone. He lost much blood and was attended by Dr. Saml. Kean. He must use great care if he is not to become permanently crippled.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

To destroy flies in a room take half a teaspoonful of black pepper in powder, one teaspoonful of cream, mix well together.

A florist says that the leaves of palms should be washed in milk and water, which will preserve them and prevent brown spots.

Sprinkle salt over hot coals and shake your damp, uncurled ostrich feathers over the fumes and the tendrils will curl up smartly.

To remove grease from garments, dissolve a tablespoonful of salt in four tablespoonfuls of alcohol, shake well and apply with a sponge.

If sheets are being worn at the corners from pinning to the line strengthen this part of the hem by stitching several times cross diagonally.

Steel knives not in use may be kept from rusting if they are dipped in a strong solution of soda, then wiped dry and wrapped and kept in flannel.

To renovate a fur rug rub in a liberal quantity of corn meal, let it remain for several hours, and then shake and brush out with a good stiff whisk.

Bunches of asparagus when cooked, should be in the water on end so that the ends will be above the water. Then the tops will not become too soft.

Milk bottles are washed most easily if filled with cold water immediately after being emptied. Later rinse with soap suds and then with cold water.

Tomatoes gruffed with asparagus tips and tipped with a generous amount of mayonnaise dressing makes a delicious salad. Serve on hearts of lettuce leaves.

Leather in writing cases and blotting pads may be sponged with a weak solution of oxalic acid in warm water without destroying the delicate olive tint.

A delicious salad is made from cancherries and pecan nuts tossed up with a well-mixed French dressing. Served on leaves of lettuce hearts it is as pretty as it is tasty.

Bananas mashed to a pulp, sweetened with sugar and spread between thin slices of bread and butter are very tasty. They make a wholesome luncheon dessert for the little folks.

If clothes are to be ironed soon after sprinkling, it is well to use warm water for sprinkling. Warm water spreads more quickly than cold, and the moisture spreads more evenly.

For almond cake filling blanche and pound fine a pound of shelled almonds, mix them with two eggs, a cupful of sugar and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Spread between layers and frost the top.

A salad dressing liked by persons who appreciate German cookery is made of thick sour cream, whipped stiff, and seasoned with vinegar, sugar and paprika. For a cupful of cream use a tablespoonful of vinegar.

Sewing cotton rags is a fad of the hour. The colours are carefully selected and the resultant rags are astonishingly pretty. The soft pinks, greens and blue woven with the pure white are unusually effective.

A Tonic

Tired? Just as tired in the morning as at night? Things look dark? Lack nerve, power? Just remember this: Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a strong tonic, entirely free from alcohol. It purges red corpuscles into the blood; gives steady, even power to the nerves; strengthens the digestion.

The Twentieth
A Day of Mourning.

As will be seen by the official notice we publish elsewhere in this issue, King Edward's funeral will take place on Friday morning next, the 20th of May. Hon. R. Watson, Colonial Secretary, informs us that by command of His Excellency the Governor the day will be proclaimed in the Colony as a Day of Mourning. On that day the official Memorial Service in Newfoundland will be held in the Cathedral Church of St. John the Baptist. The Lord Bishop will conduct the service. Particulars of this service will be published later.

It may be interesting to recall the course pursued on the demise of Queen Victoria, who was buried on Saturday, February 2nd, 1901. That day was observed as a day of mourning, offices and stores were closed and newspapers suspended publication.

The official Memorial Service was held in the C. E. Cathedral. Those entitled to wear uniform did so, and representatives of societies wore their regalia.

The appended extract is part of the report which appeared in the Evening Telegram, on Monday, February 4th, 1901:

"The services at the Church of England Cathedral on Saturday last in memory of our late Lady Queen Victoria was attended by a very large congregation, possibly the largest that ever was known. Drapery hung from every point of the building. The Royal Coat of Arms was placed upon one side of the Church, and on the other side were the Union Jack and the Native Flag, above which was written the words, 'Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a Crown of Life.' In the nave of the Building sat His Excellency Sir Henry McCallum, Right Hon. Sir W. V. Whiteway, P.C., His Lordship Chief Justice Little; the Judges of the Supreme Court; the Executive and Legislative Councils; the members of the House of Assembly, besides the heads of departments and a number of clergy. Rev. Canon Colley, the oldest clergyman in the diocese, preached the sermon. After the hymn 'O God our help in ages past,' was sung, Rev. G. H. Bolt, M.A., read the opening sentences from the burial service. The choir sang the 96th and 33rd Psalms, and Rev. Canon Cartwright read the lesson 1. Cor., chapter XV. After another hymn was sung, Rev. Canon Colley opened with the sermon, taking as his text the verses from Kings 2 and 10: 'So David slept with his fathers and was buried in the City of David.' Rev. H. Dunfield sang the prayers, after which the hymn, 'God of the Living and the Dead," was rendered. The congregation stood while the "Dead March in Saul" was played. Rev. Canon Pilot afterwards read the prayer for the King, the Benediction being pronounced by Rev. Canon Colley.

We believe that at this time the Lord Bishop was in his diocese of Bermuda.

Memorial services were also held in the same morning at St. Andrew's Church and at night in Gower Street Methodist Church. The Salvation Army also conducted a memorial service.

Bluffing is the Style.

No matter what a person may represent in this world, for the purpose of making a living, he is bound to do some bluffing. Everyone does a little of it, one more, the other less. Certainly some bluffs are the limit; for instance some merchants will advertise their bluffs as follows:—

"Ten dollar suits for $4.75; Three dollar pants for $1.00; Two dollar shirts for 60 cents, etc., etc."

We say we are not able to sell Ten dollar suits for $4.75, etc., etc., but we can sell you Ten dollar suits for $10; Three dollar pants for $3.00; Sixty cent shirts for 60c. for cash or credit.

GUARDS WILL ATTEND CHURCH—Next Sunday the Methodist Guards will attend Divine service in Cochrane St. Church. There will be a special sermon for the occasion.

Supreme Court.

(Present: Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Johnson.)
Timothy Hayden vs. W. J. Herder, Appellant.
This is an appeal from the order of Judge Johnson dismissing the appeal on the part of the defendant for an order for the consolidation of the above case with that of Timothy Hayden vs. Robinson Publishing Co. W. R. Howley for the appellant is heard; J. J. McGrath is also heard for the respondent. Howley is heard in reply. His Lordship the Chief Justice quoted the practice of the courts of England under the Libel Act of 1888 which was not applicable to this country and ordered that the appeal be dismissed with costs. Judge Johnson concurred.
In re the estate of Rev. Geo. S. Milligan, deceased, executor of the will of the said estate.—This is an application on the part of the plaintiff for an order confirming the report of the executor dated May 5th, 1910. After hearing J. P. Blackwood for plaintiff and McNeilly, K.C., for defendant, the court took time to consider.
In Chambers.
(Before Chief Justice.)
In the matter of Act 8 of Edward VII. in reference to Compensation to Workmen, the Anglo-Development Co., Ltd., and Donald Burt on behalf of herself and Lilly Burt, et al.—This is an application on the part of the plaintiff company which admits its liability to pay compensation to the defendants to the amount of $1,500 in settlement of the claim of the defendant whose husband was accidentally killed while working with the said company. W. E. Wood for the company admits this liability and moves for leave to pay the sum into court in settlement of the claim. R. A. Squires is heard for Mrs. Burt et al., and it is ordered accordingly.

"The King Is Dead."

And we cannot bring ourselves yet to complete the sentence and say, "Long Live the King." The King is dead! Our King—the Empire's King—the people's beloved Sovereign, Lord and King. From the "Northland to the Southland, and from the Orient to the West" are these sad words uttered to-day: aye, and realized all too truly, "The King is dead." When the "Dead March" sobbed forth from the organ to-day, I asked myself, "From how many churches are these sad strains pealing a tender requiem to our dead King?"

When Victoria passed, nine years ago, the regret was not so general as is felt now. She had lived her life, and it was acknowledged that he who lies dead at Buckingham Palace to-day, and who did the work of the State for the past twenty-five years, had come into his Kingdom at last! Nay, it is but now he has gained the mansion of his Father! "It is all over, but I think, I have done my duty!" Here are the words from the noblest, the highest, the most powerful figure the world had ever seen! Look at the position he occupied, the power behind him, the Empire he ruled and loved, and then try to realize his humility! Certainly he must have emulated the King of Kings and learnt of Him the "meek and humble of heart." None but those who have lived in England or visited it very frequently can understand the depth of affection, admiration, reverence and pride entertained by the nation for Edward VII. There's no doubt but he could safely pillow his head on the breast of his humble subject. The most accomplished diplomat the world had ever seen—Emperor and King of an Empire on whose limit the sun never sets—yet he has befriended the peasant and gone out of his way to show humble Sisters of Charity to their railway carriage!

Archbishop Howley's panegyric of him was superb. He was a gentleman, a Christian and every inch a King! O God, it were almost cruel to take him from us so soon! Since the first moment he assumed the responsibilities of the Empire his diplomacy was a wonder; but his tact was extraordinary and above all his works. It was a gift brought into play and wielded to perfection by his extraordinary knowledge of statecraft, a knowledge gained at the side of her whose burdens he was early called on to share, and from whose wisdom and counsels he obtained that experience which enabled him to cope with the most difficult problems with an ease which made the world gasp with astonishment. "Peacemaker" he was, but it was the tact of an accomplished mind with the brilliance of the manly King.

And now he's dead—and we all have to acknowledge (though we must submit to the loss) that it's the greatest blow the Empire has received in many decades. Her adviser, her watch-dog, her prop, her King, gone in a few short hours! In fancy I can see the dazed crowds lining the way from Charing Cross to Buckingham Palace; I can picture the Standard floating half-mast on Windsor Castle for the King who shall tread its splendid halls no more. I can picture the magnificent horses in the news, mute and unconscious of the sad task soon to be theirs of taking all that is mortal of their late Royal master on his last sad journey; and I can see the Memorial Chapel in its splendid mortuary silence awaiting the gift to earth of another King. I am glad I am familiar with some of the scenes he loved—some of the spots where his revered footsteps trod; for now such memories come as a lingering echo of music heard in some favoured clime.

The writer had seen his late Majesty many times, notably when he rode with the German Emperor to Paddington after the funeral of the late Queen. I was quite near him on that occasion, on the edge of the crowd as the cortege passed out of Pall Mall. He had wonderfully blue eyes, which took in everything at a glance. I saw him again at the opening of his first Parliament. That was a gorgeous pageant; the State carriages had all been regilded and the assemblage of peers and nobles the largest for years. The King and Queen rode in one coach and they looked magnificent in their robes of State. His Majesty at that time did not look fifty; as for the Queen, her beauty was the talk of London.

How they did smile on and bow to the populace that day!

But it's all over now, and the heart of the Queen is "The heart bowed down" in deed.

Preparation for Lying-in-State.

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, May 12. From a life of comparative ease King George suddenly finds himself one of the hardest worked officials in the Kingdom. In addition to spending considerable time daily at Buckingham Palace, comforting his widowed mother, he has to attend to multifarious duties connected with receiving and entertaining the Royal guests and arranging the difficult details of the Lying-in-State and the funeral. Seven o'clock each morning finds His Majesty at his desk in Marlborough House to reply to the innumerable messages of condolences and to receive his Ministers and officials who have to do with the funeral. Today he had a long special interview with John Burns, President of the Local Government Board. The afternoon he spent with the Queen mother, and in the evening he went to the station to meet and escort the King of Denmark to Buckingham Palace. The procession to Westminster Hall on Tuesday for the Lying-in-State will be almost as great as the funeral procession. The cortege will include King George and all the foreign sovereigns on horseback and the Queen mother and the royal ladies in carriages. The body will be received by the members of the Houses of Commons and Lords, while the choirs of Westminster and the Chapel Royal and the band of the Coldstream Guards will take part in the musical services. When the funeral starts on Friday every tram in London will come to a standstill for a quarter of an hour. A note of discord in the universal mourning comes from Dublin which at a meeting to-day seven members of the Sinn Fein Society voted against the Lord Mayor's resolution to send a message of condolence to the Queen mother and the Royal family.

War Impending.

Chamberlain is Improving.

Special to Evening Telegram. CANNES, May 12. Joseph Chamberlain, the British statesman, appears to be much improved in health. He may be seen almost daily on the boulevards. Mr. Chamberlain who had been ill for a long time came here on February 21st to recuperate. A rumor originating in London last night had it that Mr. Chamberlain had died suddenly at his home in Birmingham. The veteran statesman took the oath as member of the new Parliament on Feb. 13th.

Trouble at Middle Cove

It has been the custom at Middle Cove for the people to erect their flasks on the beach, each one selecting his own site and refraining from interference with his neighbour. This unwritten law was recently broken and a resident not alone covered the ground he possessed last but took in that of another resident. The latter promptly demolished the erection over the land he occupied. To prevent trouble Sgt. Byrne went down there yesterday and gave the people their limitations, insisting that no man should encroach on another. This is a praiseworthy action on the part of the police, as it obviates the possibility of serious future trouble and verifies the adage that "an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure."

Women's Missionary Society Convention.

The 9th Annual Convention of the W. M. S. was held in the S. S. room of Gower Street Church on Wednesday, at 3.15 p.m. A bright and helpful Thanksgiving and Consecration Service was led by Mrs. Snowden. In the absence of Mrs. J. K. Curtis, Mrs. Story gave a beautiful paper on "Our Promoted Members." In choice language touching reference was made to Mrs. Swan, who had passed Home after a life of conspicuous loyalty to Christ. Very touching and sympathetic allusion was made to the bereavement of our Queen Mother Alexandra. Encouraging remarks from Delegates followed—Mrs. Vigus of Burin, Auxiliary, and Mrs. Bartlett of Brigus. The evening's meeting was devoted to the Mission Bands and Circles, the young people of which are doing a great work and are being trained to lead on the Missionary hosts. Mrs. Hackett was in the chair. The various parts were performed in a pleasing and entertaining manner. It is wonderful the enthusiasm which is being displayed among them. One had but to listen to the reports and note the progress made to be thoroughly convinced of this. The afternoon and evening sessions of yesterday were quite up to any previous effort. The Devotional Exercises were led by Mrs. J. D. Goodwin, when all present seemed to get in the secret of the presence of God. Miss Thorne next sang a sweet solo. A discussion on model officers followed. Business was then taken up relative of the Branch Meeting to be held at Sydney on June 2nd. Perhaps the greatest interest centered around the evening service. Mrs. J. W. Taylor presided. Reports of the three District Organizers were read when facts and figures of supreme interest were given in a telling manner. Mrs. (Dr.) Curtis the St. John's District Organizer was the only one who could give her report in person. Mrs. Osmond of the Northern District and Mrs. Paine of the Carbonar District being unable to be present. Special music beguiled away the moments. An address by Mrs. Barnes on "Our Opportunities for Work," was of special note. It was an earnest appeal to us as women to do great things for Christ who has left us such a glowing example and such a rare opportunity as the present. The meeting closed with the Benediction by Dr. Curtis. It was gratifying to note the splendid audiences of women present at every session. It augurs well for the future.—com.

Two Fishermen Astray

We learn by passengers from Placentia who came in by train that the schr. "J. K." commanded by Capt. Bruce, arrived at Long Harbor from the Cape a couple of days ago with a fine catch of fish. It was very foggy for a while and two of her crew got astray in their dory and were adrift for a night and a day, to the great alarm of those on the "J. K." The crew remained up all night and fired guns and blew their fog horn hoping that the men would hear and get on board. The men, however, reached Castlett fatigued and hungry, but not much the worse for their experience.

A Dangerous Practice.

Small boys who frequent Water St. nightly seem to take great pleasure in crossing the street cars at close quarters. Last night opposite A. Mac-Namara's jewelry store this was specially in evidence, and one lad in running across the street was not 3 feet from the fender of an east bound car. Had he fallen, nothing could have saved him from being cut in pieces as the motorman, no matter how quickly he acted, could not save the tram from going over him. Such conduct must be stopped if a fatality is to be averted, and the conductors and motormen should get the names of such boys and prosecute them.

Labourers Required at Bell Island.

During the past week quite a large number of men who were at work at Bell Island during the fall and winter months left there and went to their homes to get ready for the fishery. As a result there is a scarcity of help on the Island, and agents for the companies are seeking men on the South Shore and other parts of Conception Bay, but find it difficult to secure them. It is said that to encourage men to work at the Island the rate of wages will be increased this summer.

CHOIR PRACTICE.—This evening the members of Pochrane St. choir will meet for practice. All are requested to attend.

Pleasing Presentation.

A deputation of the Shamrock Investment Club on Wednesday evening waited on Mr. John Murphy, a brother member, and presented him with a handsome Morris chair as a pleasant reminder of his recent marriage. Mr. Murphy heartily thanked the donors and a pleasant evening was spent by all.

Princess Juliania Well

Special to Evening Telegram. AMSTERDAM, May 12. Princess Juliania is perfectly well. The reports published in Paris and elsewhere yesterday that the little Princess was seriously ill are without foundation. On Tuesday Queen Wilhelmina took the Princess for a long drive in an open carriage.

DECLINED THE OFFER.—Mr. Joseph, who was waited on by a number of citizens yesterday and requested to come out as a candidate for the Mayorship, declined the offer as the demands of his business are too pressing at this season to allow him to give the time to city affairs that would be needed.

Children Had Eczema

Treatment prescribed had no effect. DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT made thorough cure. Mrs. Oscar Vancott, St. Antonio, Sack, writes: "I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment to be a permanent cure for Eczema and other skin diseases. One son, while nursing, broke out with running watery sores all over his head and around the ears. Many ointments were prescribed to no effect. The child's head became a mass of scabs and he suffered agony untold. He became weak and frail and would not eat and we thought we would lose him. "Providentially we heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment and it soon thoroughly cured him. He is seven years old now and strong and well. An older boy was also cured of eczema by this Ointment and we hope more people will learn about it so that their little ones may be saved from suffering. "As a cure for eczema and itching skin disease there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment. 60 cents a box, at all dealers of Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Dr. Chase's Recipes sent free.

137 Miners Killed.

Special to Evening Telegram. MANCHESTER, May 12. One hundred and thirty-seven miners lost their lives to-day in an explosion in the Wellington coal mine at Whitehaven. Rescue parties succeeded in saving four men, but fire has broken out, leaving practically no hope for those who are still entombed. Throughout the day the rescue parties made considerable progress at the mine, but their work was stopped to-night by the collapse of the roof. A curious fact is that a colliery warning was published in many of the newspapers in the mining districts of the Kingdom yesterday to the effect that unusually high barometric conditions rendered fire damp explosions extremely probable, and that underground workers ought therefore to be on the alert. The barometer reached the highest reading in the Whitehaven district. King George to-night sent a message of sympathy to the colliery.

The Municipal Election

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—During the past few weeks I have had an opportunity of reading in the columns of your esteemed journal letters and announcements of policy, etc., of the various candidates for the approaching civic election. Regularly, night after night, we read of the attitude of one or another of our aspirants for civic honors towards certain conditions that prevail at present in our city. These tasty morsels usually conclude with an appeal for support to be given the man whose name appears at the end of the epistle. Who, sir—who would not support such measures as we have had an opportunity of seeing in all the glory of typographical display of late? As one reads them, one is brought to think for a moment what an admirable set of men are presenting themselves for Councillors this time; what a prosperous looking future we are about to enter upon, what civic comforts and happiness will be ours when the next batch of Councillors assume control of our affairs.

There seems to be absolutely nothing dark in the outlook, nothing to mar the glorious dreams of the future; for are not the candidates unanimous in their proposed achievements for our betterment as a public and are we not to have a Council composed of men from them at last? Ye gods, what a pity we can't elect them all. The ever patient and long suffering inhabitants of the higher levels will revel in an adequate water and sewerage system. The troublesome tenants' tax will be shifted to the proper shoulders. We look forward exultingly to the entire abolition of the abominable night soil system which still exists and is a disgrace to a civilized community. We will have real roads, and what a novelty that will be. At present there are roads over which one cannot walk on a dark night without fearing that at the next step one will be precipitated into the very bowels of the earth. Such to some extent is the condition of some of our roads during dry weather. In wet weather—well, it defies description.

All this we expect to have remedied in the near future. These and many other blessings are we expectantly looking forward to. Why on earth these men were never called out before passes my understanding, as also no doubt it does that of many others. But, alas! have we not had such glowing pictures painted for us before? Yes, yearly we have—only too often, and only too often are we reminded of the utter unreliability of the promises of that being called man. Often before have we succumbed to the deceptive influences of the campaign handshake and counterfeit smile of assurance. We have received those neatly printed pieces of pasteboard on which are the sanctimonious countenances of the candidates and their promises, "if elected." Such things as these remind me forcibly of that well known piece of music, "The sweet bye and bye" with variations, or a piece of putty being continually battered into different shapes. Each candidate wishes to pose as a coming benefactor, but all use a different mode of expressing the same. I would like to ask our genial friend, Tim Shannahan, for he seems to size up such matters to a nicety, when did the election carcass come into existence, and at they all want to say the same things, why is there not a standard form made out for the purpose, thus saving the already overburdened candidates and their friends days and nights of aggravating toil in striving to have their appeals assume the most attractive appearance? I would also like Mr. Shannahan to inform me, if he can, why it is that we never hear of those promises after the election? There surely is not any opposition in the Council, as all are of the same opinions, or at least we think so when we put them there. My education has been sadly neglected, and I would be infinitely obliged to Mr. Shannahan for any insight he can give me into the complicated mechanism of a Municipal Council.

Any man who has sufficient fertility of imagination to conjure up in his mind's eye a picture of the capital of a colony like Newfoundland as it should be, and I believe would be with proper and judicious manipulation of affairs, and compares it with St. John's as it really is to-day, will readily see that while we aim no higher than making a Councillor or Mayor of any person who happens to be "called out," and then evincing no further interest in their work after that we stand small chances of any improvement of our condition at all.

Of course, if we blindfold ourselves when putting men into such important positions and then find that our hopes are not realized, we cannot reasonably find fault with the Council on the plea that they said they would do so—and so. Newfoundlanders ought to be pretty wise on this score by this time and words should not count. "By their deeds shall we know them." We need men of executive and financial ability; men who will always be alive to duty; men who will not wait for the other man to bring forward something for him to vote on. Any man can cast a vote, but give us the man who will always be on the alert to devise ways and means to better our local conditions. Of course we cannot expect to have a tile floor on the city and a glass roof over it; but we must and will have urgent necessities, and we don't want any useless facts. To have this we want our Council composed of men who, when they undertake any measure, know just where it will end, and who have the ability to successfully pilot it to that desired end with out useless waste or experiment which I think we have been subjected to but too often, not only in Municipal affairs, but in others involving far more serious issues.

Men have in the past, and unfortunately will in the future, vote for a man without considering his ability to fill the position to which he aspires, and thus a good man often has to give way to one of utter worthlessness just on account of the lack of thought of a few reckless voters. If such things are to continue our elections will soon develop into a huge fiasco, and men who would fill positions with honor and benefit to themselves and the community will retire in disgust from public life, and who can well blame them?

Let us take the matter in all the

The King Proclaimed WITH DAZZLING CEREMONY At the Capital of the Empire

LONDON, May 9.—The great city laid aside its outward symbol of mourning to-day, while quaintly garbed Heralds from four points in the Metropolis, with all the fantastic ceremonies of antiquity, proclaimed the accession to the throne of His Majesty George V., King of Great Britain and Ireland and the Dominions beyond the seas, Emperor of India, Defender of the Faith.

The day had dawned chill and grey with a raw wind snapping the thousands of flags that hung at half mast for the dead Sovereign whose body lay at rest in Buckingham Palace. But as the hour of 9 a.m. approached there was a stir throughout the city. Brilliantly uniformed officers with showy regiments of troops, including the famous Horse Guards, assembled in Friars Court at St. James Palace, where for centuries English Kings have been publicly proclaimed. It was a dazzling and imposing spectacle, and it appealed strongly to the pride of the thousands who had gathered to witness it.

Palace Grounds Crowded.

The precincts of the Palace were crowded with a great mass of people, many of whom could secure but the briefest glimpse of the proceedings. The balconies and roofs of the ancient Palace which had been draped with red cloth were reserved for the notables some of whom were in the deepest mourning. Members of the Royal Household, the Ministers and their wives and high officers of state all in brilliant uniforms were gathered around the coffin. General Sir John French, with the headquarters staff in full dress uniform stood surrounded by a troop of Horse Guards in their red tunics and breast plates of polished steel.

Long Live The King.

From the windows immediately opposite, the Duke of Cornwall, the young heir to the throne, the younger princes and princesses witnessed the ceremony. The Heralds having concluded their duties, the Officers of Arms, chief of whom is the Duke of Norfolk, the hereditary Earl Marshal and Chief Butler of England, took their places on the balcony, forming the great heraldic company. None wore mourning, this having been removed for the occasion. Sir Alfred Scott Gatty, Garter Principal King of Arms, with the Duke of Norfolk and two officers bearing the staffs of office, stepped to the front of the balcony and in a voice which could be heard across the court and in the streets adjoining, read the proclamation while great throngs stood uncovered in a drizzling rain. The Duke and Sir Alfred then called for three cheers for the King, and the crowd responded with deafening hurrahs, which were silenced only by the reappearance of the Heralds who sounded another fanfare.

God Save The King.

The last note had hardly died away when the band of the Coldstream Guards, which had taken up a position in the square, struck up "God Save The King."

The young princes, from their point of vantage in the windows of Marlborough House, stood with their hands at salute, and the officers and troops stood at attention. When the National Anthem was concluded, the seriousness its importance merits and size up one man before we attempt to vote. If only one seems fit for position, then vote only for one. "Better that six men should suffer than six thousand," is a fairly good motto sometimes. Some will say, "Oh, we've heard that stuff before." Yes, no doubt; but they have not needed it much apparently. It will bear telling, I fear, for some time to come.

I would suggest that the elected Councillors be compelled to have copies of their policies and photos, of which they are so profuse in their distribution to an innocent and unsuspecting public, enlarged and hung in front of their seats in the Council chamber where they best can be seen by their owners. Then perhaps shame will work when the sense of duty falls, and at any rate we will not have them circulated and inflicted upon us so mercilessly in the future.

My remarks have been rather scattered, and I fear I have trespassed greatly upon your valuable space. I hope to hear from Mr. Shannahan on my questions and to express myself in a more condensed manner in the near future. I remain,

Yours truly,
W. T. G.

first gun of the battery in St. James Park belched forth a royal salute, and the people in the square and streets at the same moment took up the refrain "God Save the King." This was probably the most impressive part of the ceremony, the fervent singing of the crowds, which first reached those in the balcony as a hum, growing in volume as more and more singers joined in, while at minute intervals the gun half drowned the chorus. Meanwhile the Royal Standard had been hoisted over Marlborough House, indicating that the King was in the royal residence and flags upon the public offices throughout the city were raised to the masts.

Renewed Cheers For King.

The Standard on Buckingham Palace alone remained at half mast. The flags will remain at masts until sunset this evening and again will be lowered to half mast to-morrow.

The Duke of Norfolk, Sir Alfred Scott-Gatty, the officers of state and others of the distinguished company at Friars Court continued in their positions until the people having concluded the singing of the National Anthem, turned towards Marlborough House and renewed their cheers to the King, a glimpse of whom was caught as he stood at the window with Queen Mary at his side. A moment later His Majesty lowered the blind. Beside the heralding officers, and members of the cabinet who had hurriedly returned from their holidays abroad, diplomats and other notables, watched the progress from the balcony.

Proclaimed in the City.

The officers of the new King's Household, Lords Roseberry, Crewe, and Loreburn and a few others, at the invitation of King George V., witnessed the ceremony from Marlborough House a scaffolding having been erected behind the wall, which shuts out a view of the grounds from the street that separates St. James' Palace and the residence which the King occupied while he was the Prince of Wales. The popular demonstration at an end, the Earl Marshal and his attendants proceeded to the Ambassador's Court whence they drove to Charing Cross and thence to the City of London to read the proclamation to the people at the designated points. The route to the city proper was lined with seven thousand troops while at the places at which the procession stopped and repeated the ceremony, troops and Horse Guards were stationed. The royal carriages of the Duke of Norfolk, Sir Alfred Scott-Gatty, and the officers of arms followed by General French with the headquarters staff and a troop of cavalry drove briskly from St. James' Palace to Charing Cross.

Thousands upon thousands who had waited since early morning silently watched the stately progress of the heraldic procession.

At Charing Cross there was such a crush that the public and troops had great difficulty in keeping a space clear for the Heralds. The Royal announcers again blew a fanfare and Sir Alfred once more read the proclamation. Again the people sang the National Anthem their voices keeping accompaniment to the music of the military bands. Along the Strand the procession continued through lines of troops and crowds of people to Temple Bar the boundary of the "City" where the Lord Mayor, the sheriffs, aldermen and officers of the City of London who wore their robes of office waiting the coming of the Earl Marshal.

At The Temple Bar.

The ceremony here was of longer duration and more elaborate, the City of London to this day retains its ancient privilege of barring the entrance of the King's men. In place of the barricade of olden times a red silken rope placed across the street halted the procession. Coming to a standstill the trumpeters sounded three loud blasts announcing the approach of the officers of arms. The City Marshal riding forward challenged the approach of the procession with the cry "Halt, who goes there?"

"The officer of arms, who demands entrance into the city to proclaim His Royal Majesty's accession," came the reply from the Pursuivant, who at the Lord Mayor's command stepped across the boundary and handed the chief magistrate the Privy Council order that the proclamation be made.

The Ancient Ceremony.

The Lord Mayor then alighted from his carriage and declared that our high and mighty Prince George has now become our only lawful and righteous Liege Lord George V., following these words with the cry "God Save the King."

The words were caught up by the crowd and there followed a mighty cheer that filled the Strand and Fleet Street. The ceremony was repeated at Chancery Lane.

Thence the Lord Mayor with His Majesty's heralds moved through streets lined with double files of troops. When the Heralds had taken their station on the steps of the Royal Exchange and silence had finally been secured, the proclamation was read to the multitude from whence rose thunderous cheers and cries of "God Save the King."

The bands played the National Anthem once more.

A meeting of the congregation of the Presbyterian Church was held last night for the purpose of deciding on the selection of a pastor. The meeting was largely attended. The committee discussed the question at great length and it was decided to wait to hear from several candidates with whom they are in treaty before finally deciding on a pastor. Another meeting will be held next week.

Tim Shannahan on Poetical Memoriams.

I have no faith in the sympathy for the dead that we get in rhyme, for the simple reason that I know how hard it is to get the last word in each line to suit the word ahead. A common, every-day man who writes poetry for the dead undertakes an awful hard job, for he is trying to shine and trying to be sad at one and the same time. He'll almost sacrifice the subject in order to round off the verse in good style. There's such a thing as wooden poetry; that kind which doesn't appeal to you and strikes home. One verse, supposing there are fifty in the poem, is just the same as the rest. Stretching out poetry is an awful mistake, especially sorrowful poetry, for you can't make up in quantity what you should make up in quality. Some poets around here could make up a nice piece about a lost dog or a stray away hen, but when it comes to anything heavy they should drop all and scoot.

Editors of papers are merciful and don't feel like turning down the gushing poet, but the public have feelings and they should obtain mercy at the hands of the editor also.

TIM SHANNAHAN.

S. U. F. Resolution of Sympathy.

At a meeting of the Grand Lodge, held on the 9th inst., the following Resolution was passed, and afterwards transmitted, by His Excellency the Governor, to the Secretary of State for the Colonies:—

As a mark of respect, the flag of every Lodge throughout the Island will fly at half-mast until after the funeral of the late beloved King, which takes place on the 20th instant. "GOD SAVE THE KING."

The cup which will be put up for the Star-C. C. Sports will be presented to the club taking part which has the highest number of points earned for success in the various events. Three points will be awarded for first place in any event; two for second; and one for third. This is a feature which must become popular as it will mean the encouraging of a club spirit and will be an added incentive for club members to put forward the best that is in them when taking part in Athletic contests. This feature will more than likely increase the number of athletic associations which will contest in these sports.

HOW CAN WE COUNTER-ACT

THE INCREASED COST OF LIVING?

A second's reasoning will supply the answer. Beef and pork are dear and getting dearer all the time, and the cost is out of proportion with their food-value.

EAT MORE BREAD.

There is more nourishment in a shilling's worth of bread than a shilling's worth of beef or pork. But the problem is not done with yet. The shilling's worth of bread is not always the same value. Breadmade from contains more nourishment than any other, because it contains the greatest amount of gluten, the health-giving nutriment of wheat.
