The Lost Will; OR, LOVE TRIUMPHS AT LAST!

CHAPTER XIII

"Sorry, can't," he said, wistfully, and with an unnecessary gravity that remained with him as he walked to the station.

He felt curiously dissatisfied, if not actually unhappy. The sunshine of the luncheon-hour had become overclouded; he felt as if something unwelcome had happened, and his mind dwelt uneasily upon Lord Ferndale, his rank, his handsome face and grace of bearing, and highly polished manner.

The sort of man girls go down before, get perfectly mad about—and he was a near neighbour of Nora's, Jack told himself. He and his sister were going to be great friends of hers, no doubt.

"Oh, didn't it!" he exclaimed to himself, as he woke to the real state of his feelings. "I'm no end of a pig. Why, it would be the very best thing for her; they'll draw her out of herself, make life pleasant for her. Oh, yet, I'm a pig; that's what's the matter with me."

CHAPTER XIV

JACK did not go down to Chertson the next day, and, although he tried to drive the subject from his mind, he could not help remembering that Nora was paying her visit to the Abbey; he mentally pictured her walking through that historic building with Ferndale beside her as a guide; and the mental picture was not a pleasant one to Jack, notwithstanding the benefit which Nora undoubtedly would get from her visit to her new friends.

The following morning he received a brief from Mr. Horton. It was a small case, but it was Jack's first brief, and he was somewhat excited over it. Of course, he took it downstairs to Jiggles, who received it with a groan, but cheerfully enough brought his stupendous mind to it. Jack worked at the brief all the morning, snatched some lunch at the railway station, and got down to Chertson a little before four. He had forgotten completely his appointment with Maud, but the sight of the wood reminded him of it, and, with a little gesture of impatience, he went towards the rendezvous.

Maud was there before him; she was pacing up and down in front of the fallen tree; her book in her hand, her face upturned, her lips moving as she went over her part. At the sound of Jack's footsteps, she turned swiftly, her face lit up and she sprang to him.

"Oh, you have come! I was afraid—but no, I wasn't. I was sure you ever broke a promise, did you, Mr. Chalfonte?"

"Don't remember," said Jack; "though there are some promises that it would be as well to break. For instance, you know, I'm no good at this sort of thing, Miss Delman."

"Oh, don't!" she said pleadingly, "it sounds as if—as if you were angry with me, were sorry you were going to help me. Call me Maud."

"Well, Maud, if you like," he said, laughing easily, for she seemed such a child, and so irresponsible. "I see you've got the book. Know your part?"

"I think so," she replied, nodding.

"You sit down on the tree, and let me walk up and down. I can recite better that way."

"Well, you've pitched upon a pretty difficult part," he said, as he glanced at the book and sat down. "That's one of Lena Ashwell's. Well, all right, fire away!"

"Just give me one moment," she said, softly.

She moved away a few yards and stood looking fixedly at the ground; then she returned to him and began.

For the first few minutes Jack followed her, indifferently enough, in the book; but presently he raised his head, forgot the book, and sat listening to her and watching her. She was well-nigh word-perfect, and, not content with merely repeating the part, she was playing it as much as was possible in the place and circumstances. And, though Jack was no critic, he knew that she was playing it uncommonly well; in fact, he was filled with amazement that a girl so young and inexperienced could throw herself into a part under such unfavorable conditions.

In spite of himself he grew not only interested, but absorbed, and presently spell-bound. The actor's art is a very wonderful thing; it has more immediate and direct effect even than that of the painter or the musician. Jack had seen the play, had seen the famous actress in the part Maud Delman was now assuming; and he knew that the young girl standing before him was going to be a successful, if not a great, actress.

He felt for his pipe mechanically, and as he smoked he thought of this wonderful thing that was taking place before him. And he thought also of the tremendous responsibility he had undertaken; he was going to be the means of removing this girl from her present quiet and secure sphere to quite a different one—one of excitement, of triumph perhaps, of perils certainly. It was a chance of a business. But while he pondered this he still listened and watched; and when she had played her last scene—and played it, considering her inexperience, with wonderful effect—he sat and looked at her in dumfounded silence.

She was pale, her girlishly-moulded bosom was heaving, the pupils of the beautiful eyes were distended, and her lips were apart, as she breathed painfully, slowly.

"Well?" she demanded at last, her hands lightly clasped, her eyes fixed on him with the expression of a person awaiting the sentence of life or death.

"It's spiffing!" he said. "It's absolutely top-hole—ripping! But look here, I'm no judge, you know."

"Oh, yes, you are," she said, softly, her face flushed by his praise, her eyes dazzling brilliant. "You know what it ought to be; you've seen all the best actresses. Oh, yes, you're a judge, Mr. Chalfonte; at any rate, I'm satisfied with your decision. Do you think that I—I shall do?"

"Don't worry, I think you will!" replied Jack, wishing to goodness he could say that she wouldn't. "I think you do it very well; in fact, precious well. Yes; I think you've got the makings of an actress in you."

She glided towards him and sat, not on the tree, but at his feet, and her warm young hand stole to his and closed on it gratefully.

"Oh, that's enough for me," she said. "I am satisfied. I don't mean with my playing of the part; I know that a good deal of it's quite wrong. But I know that it's because of my inexperience; and I'm willing to learn and can stand any amount of teaching. I'm sure that a stage-manager would pull a great deal of it to pieces; but he'd tell me where I was wrong and set me straight."

There was a pause, then she turned her face up to him; her big eyes were full of tears, her lips were quivering. It was so beautiful a face, and rendered so tragic by her intensity, that Jack was startled, and not a little moved.

"I shouldn't take it so seriously, if I were you, Miss—Maud," he said, warningly.

"I can't help it," she responded, smiling and driving back the tears.

"It's all my life to me, all my soul. And I want to thank you, and I can't; and that makes me unhappy. Oh, Mr. Chalfonte—"

With a gesture of her hand, as girl-like as it was pathetic and eloquent, she bent her fresh young lips to his hand, kissed it, and laid her cheek against it.

Jack sprang up, alarmed and aghast. "Here, look here; you mustn't give way like that! I've done precious little for you—"

"You've done everything," she broke in, in a low voice, but passionately. "You're the only friend I've ever had; you've helped me as no one else could have helped me. Oh, you are good, good! And I shall never forget it, never! And you will help me still, Mr. Chalfonte?" she pleaded. "You'll see that manager and get him to hear me?"

"Yes, yes; that's all right," said Jack, hurriedly. The scene was growing too tense, almost painful; he wanted to cut it short and get away. "I'll see Telby; I'll manage it for you. But look here; don't you let yourself be carried away too much. You keep that little head of yours straight; it doesn't do to go soaring into the clouds, the way you're doing. Don't know much about it, but I believe an actor's life is a deuce of a hard one; and—"

She had risen with him and stood, panting a little, her eyes fixed on him. "Oh, I don't care, I don't care!" she said, throwing back her head. "I'm prepared for any amount of hardship. I know it's a struggle; but I can live through it, as others have done. You can't frighten me, Mr. Chalfonte—even if you wished to do so; but you don't, do you? I know I shall succeed, because—because you are going to help me."

"That's all right," said Jack. "As I said, I'll see Telby, and I dare say he'll give you a hearing before long. Now I must go. By George! I'd no idea it was so late."

"You mean that you were interested, carried away?" she said, with a smile, her head on one side, her eyes peering up at him under their long lashes.

"That's it," said Jack. "Absolute truth. Well, good-bye!"

She held out both her hands, and he took them and gave them a friendly, fraternal shake and left her.

As he passed through the wood he saw some one, a man, walking down one of the tracks. He could only see the man's back, and it looked to Jack as if it were Stephen Fleming's. But he did not give the man a moment's thought; for he had spent nearly an hour with Maud, and he wanted to be—well, at the Hall.

Maud sank on to the fallen tree, her clasped hands between her knees, her eyes glowing softly as she listened to Jack's departing footsteps. Her attitude was that of one of the love-stricken maidens in Marcus Stone's charming pictures; and, in truth, Maud was in love, very much in love. To her Mr. Jack Chalfonte was just the king of men; she had fallen in love with him the first time he had spoken to her, and it was her love for him, as much as her talent, her desire to win his approval, admiration, that had inspired her acting. As she sat, dreaming of him, she knew that he had admired her. And perhaps—Maud was not unconscious of her prettiness; she was clever, she was ambitious; she might become a famous actress—even duked had married actresses; perhaps—

She heard steps approaching, and the blood rushed to her face as she thought they might be those of Mr. Chalfonte coming back to her; then the blood retreated and her heart sank as Stephen Fleming came from amongst the trees. She rose quickly, but sank down again as she reflected that Fleming would certainly accompany her if she started to walk home. Time had been before, she had met Jack, when Maud would have been quite willing to accept Stephen Fleming's company; but that time had gone. Stephen no longer seemed desirable in her eyes, and, as is always the case in such changes, she was anxious to avoid him.

"Good-afternoon, Mr. Fleming," she said, in conventional tones; but her heart was beating a little nervously, for the big young man was standing, with his hands in his pockets, looking down at her with a lowering countenance.

WAR REVIEW.

The formidable German defense system between Cambrai and St. Quentin has been utterly demolished and British, American and French troops are out in the open country eastward in pursuit of the retreating enemy. Cambrai the pivotal point in the former line and over which there has been so much bitter fighting is in British hands. Numerous villages and hamlets to the south have been overrun by the Allies and thousands of Germans have been made prisoners and hundreds of their guns captured. The victory seemingly is a complete one and with General Foch's strategy working smoothly in bending back the German line in one converging movement the Germans apparently are in a serious predicament. From the region northwest of Rheims to the Meuse River north of Verdun the French and Americans are slowly but surely pushing the German backwaters toward the Belgian border. In Macedonia and Asiatic Turkey the troops of the Entente still have the enemy in a state of no more than light rearguarding, giving ground when the pressure becomes too strong. Under the avalanche of steel hurled against them on the Cambrai-St. Quentin sector the Germans could not live and were forced to flee eastward. Heavy casualties were inflicted on those of the enemy, who had the temerity to endeavour to make a stand. On the other hand the casualties of the Allies are declared to have been relatively small, those of the Americans being less than half the number of prisoners taken by them. Where the enemy purpose to make his next stand cannot be foretold but probably an effort for a turn about will be attempted along the Valenciennes-Sedan front. After this line the only known German defensive position west of the Rhine is the Meuse River. The Americans already are threatening to make this line untenable having started an advance upon the valley of the eastern side of the stream towards Sedan. The manoeuvres of the French northwest of Rheims are cutting more deeply into the German line despite the serious resistance that is being offered by the enemy to postpone the fall of the great St. Gobain Massif, and the highly important strategic positions of Laon and La Fere which seemingly are likely to be pinched out of the battle front by the successful operations around St. Quentin and Berry au Bac. Strong resistance is also being imposed by the Germans against further advances by the French and Americans in Champagne and east of the Argonne Forest. Particularly heavy counter attacks have been launched by the enemy on various positions but without results otherwise than increasing

WAR REVIEW.

The formidable German defense system between Cambrai and St. Quentin has been utterly demolished and British, American and French troops are out in the open country eastward in pursuit of the retreating enemy. Cambrai the pivotal point in the former line and over which there has been so much bitter fighting is in British hands. Numerous villages and hamlets to the south have been overrun by the Allies and thousands of Germans have been made prisoners and hundreds of their guns captured. The victory seemingly is a complete one and with General Foch's strategy working smoothly in bending back the German line in one converging movement the Germans apparently are in a serious predicament. From the region northwest of Rheims to the Meuse River north of Verdun the French and Americans are slowly but surely pushing the Germans backwards toward the Belgian border. In Macedonia and Asiatic Turkey the troops of the Entente still have the enemy on the run. Nowhere is the enemy able to do more than fight re- luctant battles, giving ground when the pressure becomes too strong. Under the avalanche of steel hurled against them on the Cambrai-St. Quentin sector the Germans could not live and were forced to flee eastward. Heavy casualties were inflicted on those of the enemy, who had the temerity to endeavour to make a stand. On the other hand the casualties of the Allies are declared to have been relatively small, those of the Americans being less than half the number of prisoners taken by them. Where the enemy purposes to make his next stand cannot be foretold but probably an effort for a turn about will be attempted along the Valenciennes-Sedan front. After this line the only known German defensive position west of the Rhine is the Meuse River. The Americans already are threatening to make this line untenable having started an advance upon the valley of the eastern side of the stream towards Sedan. The manoeuvres of the French northwest of Rheims are cutting more deeply into the German line despite the serious resistance that is being offered by the enemy to postpone the fall of the great St. Gobain Massif, and the highly important strategic positions of Laon and La Fere which seemingly are likely to be plucked out of the battle front by the successful operations around St. Quentin and Berry au Bac. Strong resistance is also being imposed by the Germans against further advances by the French and Americans in Champagne and east of the Argonne Forest. Particularly heavy counter attacks have been launched by the enemy on various positions but without results otherwise than increasing his casualties. Along the Sulppe River the fighting is furious but the French have been able to make further crossings of the stream. Steinae has changed hands several times. In bitter combats west of the Argonne Forest the Americans have driven their line forward to the region of Cornay on the Aire River where they have effected a junction with the French troops, and seemingly the Argonne Forest soon will be in Allied hands. On the eastern side of the Meuse the Americans have advanced and taken several small villages and also straightened out their line which was being enfiladed by the German guns from the east. Reports persist that the Turkish cabinet has fallen and that the new Grand Vizier will be Tewfik Pasha whose sympathies are declared to be pro-Ally rather than pro-German. Rumor also has it that the Turks have despatched a peace note to the Allies through the Spanish Government.

CANADIANS IN CAMBRAI.

LONDON, Oct. 9. The whole of Cambrai is in British possession, F. M. Haig reported from headquarters to-night. The Canadians were the first to enter the town. In the great defeat inflicted on the Germans yesterday, 11,000 prisoners and more than 200 guns were captured.

APPEALING FOR HELP.

VLADIVOSTOCK, Oct. 2. Another appeal to the Allies for immediate help for the Czecho-Slovak troops on the Volga front in European Russia, was made to-day by Dr. Girs, of the Czecho-Slovak National Council. Unless help is sent to them, Dr. Girs declares, the fruits of their sufferings will be lost. Nevertheless, he says, the troops, through their commanders, assure "Father" Masaryk, the Czecho-Slovak Provisional President, that they will perform their duty to the end and die rather than tarnish the honor and glory of the Czecho-Slovak arms. Dr. Girs says the troops on the Volga are in poor physical condition from lack of sufficient food and clothing.

ADVANCING IN ALBANIA.

ROME, Oct. 9. Italian troops pushing northward in Albania entered the city of El Basan on Monday afternoon, crushing stubborn Austro-Hungarian resistance, the Italian war office announced to-day. The Italians are continuing their advance.

CLIMAX REACHED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9. The Associated Press this morning issued the following: There is every reason to believe that the great offensive of the Allied armies in France has reached a climax, and that the next few days may witness events which will mark an epoch in the history of the war. On a front extending from Roulers on the north on to Verdun far down toward the other end of the battle line the Germans are being battered by successive blows and in some of these sectors they seem to be in a very precarious position.

HURRIEDLY EVACUATING.

PARIS, Oct. 9. The Germans are hurriedly evacuating the Argonne forest and the battle is continuing.

MAKING A DESPERATE STAND.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY N. E. OF RHEIMS, Oct. 7. (By the A. P.)—German forces holding the line of the Sulppe river are making their stand there. It looks like a desperate measure to re-establish a situation rendered most difficult by blows against the front in other sectors. The entire north bank of the Sulppe is lined with machine guns behind which are massed several fresh divisions of infantry along a secondary Hindenburg line. A strong force of artillery supports them by a heavy and well sustained fire. Every advance by the French across the river provokes immediate counter attacks. Entire divisions are thrown against the small detachments of the French which forced the passes of the stream.

ATTACK RESUMED.

LONDON, Oct. 9. The Anglo-American attack was resumed this morning on the entire front south of Cambrai. Field Marshal Haig reported to-day that rapid progress was being made.

GRAVEST APPREHENSION IN ENEMY RANKS.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY N. E. OF RHEIMS, Oct. 8.—Replying to the Allies tactics of launching heavy blows against the extreme wings of the position attacked, the Germans are reinforcing their line on the flanks of the counter-attacks. Their reaction all along the Champagne front thus far has been productive of only one result, relatively favourable to them in the region of the Grand Pre-Gap, which they have been able to keep open up to the present, although the Gap is under the heavy fire of the French guns. The latest American advance northward to the east of the Argonne forest now practically neutralizes that result. The Grand Pre Gap is now virtually closed, and the only real made 11,000 prisoners and captured 200 guns.

HOLDS IMPORTANT RAILWAY.

LONDON, Oct. 9. For all practical purposes, the Allied troops now hold the Cambrai-St. Quentin railway. The maximum advance at 2 o'clock this afternoon was five miles at Busry, four miles south-east of Le Chateau.

SURRENDER OF TURKEY FORESHADOWED.

LONDON, Oct. 9. The surrender of Turkey within the next forty-eight hours will not surprise well-informed circles in London, the Evening Standard says to-day. The British authorities, it adds, are in possession of information showing that a process of disintegration exists in Constantinople.

MAY BECOME BIG ROUT.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 9.—Within sound of the roar of the artillery of the front, but in a tree-dotted part of France, unmarked by battle, General Polo, who was a Captain in the Austrian army and fought against the Russians in 1914, was sworn in on Sunday as Commander-in-Chief of the Polish army. The ceremony took place in the presence of the first Polish division, 80 p.c. of whose members are Poles from the United States. The division itself took the oath of allegiance to the Entente Alliance. General Polo and a number of his men deserted the Austrians last winter, and escaped from Russia by way of Murmansk. The Poles wear uniforms of horizon blue. The division is complete in every particular, and has cavalry, artillery and hospital detachments. Notwithstanding the stubborn opposition the enemy is offering on the Sulppe and north of the Arnes, the impression still is that he is merely seeking to gain time to reduce the difficulties of the retreat, the extent of which, in view of the developments on the extreme left wing of the fighting front, it is impossible to forecast. The vigor and perseverance of the Allies' pressure appears to have demoralized all the German plans. Nowhere have the Germans, with all their genius in organization, been able to prepare a stable position upon which their defeated troops could retire in security, which suggests that they have again erred in their judgment of the strength and endurance of the Entente Allied fighting forces. They are being defeated not only at points chosen for attack by Marshal Foch and his Generals, but on ground selected by themselves for counter-attacks. Their reaction all along the Champagne front thus far has been productive of only one result, relatively favourable to them in the region of the Grand Pre-Gap, which they have been able to keep open up to the present, although the Gap is under the heavy fire of the French guns. The latest American advance northward to the east of the Argonne forest now practically neutralizes that result. The Grand Pre Gap is now virtually closed, and the only real lines of communication for the enemy forces operating in Champagne are northward by Couliers and Rethel, and most of these lines over considerable distances are being shelled by the French artillery. Unless by a supreme effort, and utilizing available reserves the Germans are able still to make a stand on the Saison line north of the Aisne, their elastic retirement may turn suddenly into a general retreat.

TURKISH CABINET FALLS.

LONDON, Oct. 9. The British Foreign Office has received indirect news of the fall of the Turkish Cabinet. Tewfik Pasha, who it is reported will be the new Grand Vizier, is understood to have pro-Ally rather than pro-German sympathies. According to the advices, which are not official, however, the Cabinet had decided to take military measures against Bulgaria, but found that the opinion of the country was against them. It is rumoured that the Turkish peace note has been despatched through the Spanish Government.

WILSON'S REPLY FORTHCOMING.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9. An early response to President Wilson's note of inquiry to the German Chancellor, is expected by American officials. While realizing that an answer to the three pertinent questions put to the Prince of Baden will be very difficult, if the original proposal of the German Government was not sincere, officials are confident that internal conditions in Germany and the tremendous exigencies of the military situation will force speedy action by the Chancellor if he hopes to prolong the existence of his Cabinet beyond a few days.

BERLIN ADMITS LINE BREACHED.

BERLIN, Oct. 9. Reporting the great battle in the Cambrai-St. Quentin sector, General Headquarters to-day admits breaches in the German lines on both sides of the Roman road towards Le Cateau, and also a German withdrawal to Fresnoy Le Grand.

ALREADY RETIRING.

WITH THE ANGLo-AMERICAN ARMIES NORTH OF ST. QUENTIN, Oct. 2.—German prisoners indicate that the enemy intends to retire first to Valenciennes line and then to the line of the Meuse. The bulk of the Germans in France are already retiring. However there will be undoubtedly hard fighting all the way back to the prepared positions, for the country is lined with machine-guns and obstructions of all kinds, but it will be fighting over open and new country, where the whippet tanks, motor cars and cavalry should have, if they are not already having the opportunity to do the work cut out for them. The German positions north of Cambrai are dominated by the new British gains on the southeast. The British are in a position to hasten the retreat, thereby turning an enfilading fire against the German positions.

AT THE END OF THEIR STRENGTH
PARIS, Oct. 9. General J. M. C. Malterre, the military critic for the Temps has written a letter from the front saying that the German armies are at the end of their strength and that the German high command is hoping to save them by an armistice even with the obligation to evacuate invaded territory and Alsace-Lorraine.

THE GERMANS STARTED BACKWARDS.
LONDON, Oct. 9. The German retreat from the Scarpe River southward to below St. Quentin enabled the British easily to advance from two to three miles this morning. The Germans started backward last night. The British have met with little resistance to-day, as they have not been in contact with the German main line. The weather is bad, otherwise it is believed the British would have advanced further. The Germans are burning further. The retreat lengthens the line which the Teutons so long have been trying to shorten, and the situation opens many possibilities of retreats elsewhere.

The Forgotten Few.

In granting an increase of salary to all the employees of the Civil Service, including the hardworked and still underpaid school teachers, the Government have done hardly justice to as fine and competent a body of Civil Servants as there is to be found in any country. But there is one class, which, inadvertently or deliberately, (and we would prefer to think the former) has not been permitted to participate in any of the pay roll augmentations made in recent years. We refer to those men and women who have been placed on the Pension List, whose meritorious services in the various offices under the Government, which they filled, and length of service, qualified them for retirement with pay pro rata to the salaries they received when in active performance of their official duties. The best years of their lives were given in the carrying out of the work of their various offices, and it can be said of them that they never failed in accomplishing all that the public demanded. Had it been the case otherwise they could not have surrendered their positions with honor, or been rewarded with a place on the Pension List of Newfoundland. Their inclusion in that list, therefore, shows recognition of services well and truly performed, and the taxpayers of this Dominion, cheerfully acquiesced in the fixing of their reward. But must it be the impossible? Is it thought for a moment that they are unaffected by the high cost of living? Can it be that they are considered unentitled to the general advance which has been made in the pay rolls of the departments all round? It seems so, for no provision whatever was made for any pension augmentation, yet the dollar to-day can be made go no farther by the retired civil servant, than it can by those who have received the increase of salary. It possesses the same value for both. Neither must it be thought that out of the meagre wages allowed them when in harness that they saved any considerable sums. As a matter of fact in the halcyon days when everything was cheap, the salaries paid the majority of the civil servants, male and female, were barely sufficient to keep body and soul together. How can it be expected now to do so, when the retiring allowance is but two-thirds of the salary received. It may be all right in the few cases where the allowance is over $500.00, the recipients having no persons dependent upon them, but to those who receive anything under that sum, the amount is most inadequate. The 1917-18 estimates contain provision for 90 men and women on the Pension List, with allowances ranging from $40 to $1,800 per annum. These cover all departments of the service. No increases were made in the 1917-18 lists over the 1916-17 vote, and we think that none were provided for in the 1918-19 estimates. If the Government is inclined to be just to all, no better evidence of this can be shown than by completing the good work which they commenced and giving the retired employees, the like proportion of increase which has been made to all ranks of the Civil Service people. No Government desires to see its honored servants come "to penury, and we are sure that the omission of the list of pensioned officials from participation in the general augmentation of allowances will be speedily rectified.

In requesting the Government to consider the case of those on the Pension List, we would also ask the Acting Prime Minister and the Executive to make better provision for the Widows and Orphans. If any persons dependent on the country's bounty need an increase in their annual allowance these should be the very first to receive it. The Old Age Pension too might be enlarged reasonably. Much could be written on this subject. For the present however the recommendations which we have here made will suffice.

Notes and Comments

Kultur is cracking on the Western Front.

Spanish "Flu" begins to rival German peace propaganda in its pervasiveness.

Athanasian Creed "optical" says a contemporary. Of course we cannot all see eye to eye concerning it.

The statement, says the Kansas City Journal that Germany has no friends, is not quite accurate. There is Turkey and the taxpayers of this Dominion, cheerfully acquiesced in the fixing of their reward. But must it be the impossible? Is it thought for a moment that they are unaffected by the high cost of living? Can it be that they are considered unentitled to the general advance which has been made in the pay rolls of the departments all round? It seems so, for no provision whatever was made for any pension augmentation, yet the dollar to-day can be made go no farther by the retired civil servant, than it can by those who have received the increase of salary. It possesses the same value for both. Neither must it be thought that out of the meagre wages allowed them when in harness that they saved any considerable sums. As a matter of fact in the halcyon days

The wide observance of "gasless Sundays" has enabled the United States to ship to France 21,000,000 gallons of gasoline which otherwise would not have been available.

From Halifax, N.S., comes the news that dating from last Sunday, all "boy riders" who disregard the Fuel Controller's request to save gasoline, will be "marked men," officials intending to note down the names and numbers of all persons and their cars, so disporting themselves, with a view to future eventualities.

Historical Document.

Mr. H. F. Shortis has placed a most valuable document in the Museum. It is a Petition dated July 4, 1868, signed by thousands of our people in St. John's and throughout Conception Bay protesting against Newfoundland being a Province of the Confederation of Canada. This Petition was addressed to the British House of Lords and House of Commons, and forwarded to the Hon. Joseph Howe, the great leader of this movement in Nova Scotia to be delivered by him to them. Owing to the Hon. Joseph Howe's successful resistance for several years to the Confederate Party in Canada, this Petition was never presented, but held among his valuable documents until now presented by his son, Sydneyham Howe, Esq. of Nova Scotia to Mr. Shortis for the Newfoundland Historical Society, and for safe keeping he has placed this in the Museum. We are sure that many of our citizens will be delighted to look through this Petition, and find the names of their ancestors.

Ship on Fire.

A cargo steamer which arrived in port yesterday, with a fire in her fore hold, and was anchored off the oil tanks on the South Side, was this morning towed to the wharf of the harbor where the water is less deep, where in the event of her sinking, refloating would not be difficult. Another ship with engine trouble, has a fire in her bunkers, brought about by spontaneous combustion, but it is not expected that this outbreak will be serious.

Spanish Influenza!

A gargle which has been approved of by the most eminent authorities as a safeguard against infection of the throat and also a curative and preventative combined—if systematically used about four times a day—can be had at Stafford's Drug Store, Theatre Hill.

Price 25c.

This gargle is supposed to last for one week, using about a tablespoonful at each time of gargling.

Gave Their Lives

Yesterday's casualty list contains the name of Pte. William F. Reid, who died of wounds on the sixth inst. This young soldier was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Reid, Theatre Hill, whose two other sons enlisted in the regiment in the early days of the war. A sister of the deceased is Miss Reid, of the General Hospital. To the bereaved relatives the sincere sympathies of the community are extended. Likewise to the parents and friends of Pte. Harry Luff, of Exploit, N.B., who died of wounds received in action on October 5th, condolences are offered. The grief of the friends of those soldiers who so early summoned away, will be assuaged by the knowledge that they died in the greatest of fights, that for Right, Justice and Truth.

C. L. B. Dance.

The Warrant and Non-Com. officers of the C.L.B. whose dance was given in the British Hall last night are to be congratulated upon the success which attended that function. Among those present were representatives from the sister Brigades in the city, the resident band of the navy. The Brigade Band furnished the music, to which dancing was kept up till an early hour. Wedding Bells.

PARSONS-CLARK.
A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Thomas's Church on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 9th, when Miss Florence V. Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Clark, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. George H. Parsons of Bell Island, C.B., by the Rev. C. A. Moulton. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a traveling costume of navy taffeta silk with fox fur and picture hat and carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums, sweet peas and fern. She was attended by her sister, Miss Marguerite Clark, who wore a costume of cream serge with Tuscan hat and carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums and fern; while Mr. A. Rees supported the groom. After the ceremony the wedding party drove to the home of the bride's parents, Weston Cottage, Allandale Road, where a hearty supper was taken of and music and games followed in until a late hour. The groom's present to the bride was a gold piece, to the bridesmaid a birthstone ring and to the best man a signet ring. The happy couple left by motor this morning for Portugal Cove en route to Bell Island where they will in future reside.

Street Cars Collide.

At 8.25 o'clock this morning, street cars Nos. 1 and 7 collided at the Junction of Ordnance and Duckworth Sts., near the East End Fire Hall, No. 1 car was slightly damaged but fortunately no person was injured. The accident was caused by a misunderstanding of orders which is acknowledged by the regular car No. 2 which was replaced by No. 7 having to put back to the barn for some slight adjustment to its machinery. The motorman on No. 7 got a little confused at the time and instead of reversing the gear he accidentally put on full power ahead. There was only one passenger in the car at the time.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of Sergt. James Alexander Sandell, who was killed in action, Somewhere in France, Oct. 30, 1917.
Thou art gone but not forgotten,
We'll never see thy face again,
But we have to be contented,
For our loss is Heaven's gain.
Now in a lonely grave he's lying
He, our faithful soldier boy,
Leave you yonder calmly sleeping,
So beloved and hero true.
Where we all will dwell forever,
In the mansions of the blest,
Where all war will cease forever,
And the soldier be at rest.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of Sergt. James Alexander Bendell, who was killed in action. Somewhere in France, Oct. 24, 1917.

Now in a lonely grave he's lying
He, our faithful soldier boy,
Leave you yonder calmly sleeping,
Son beloved and hero true.

Where we all will dwell forever,
In the mansions of the blest,
Where all war will cease for aye,
And the soldier be at rest.

ABOUT FLOWERS.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

A woman who is an ardent flower lover seemed really quite shocked when I chanced to mention in her presence, the other day, that I didn't care for a certain flower.

"Why, I like ALL flowers," she said. "I don't—any more than I like all people. And yet I consider myself both a flower lover and a lover of people."

Do You Like Petunias?

The flower ament which the discussion arose, was the petunia. Never from a child have I quite liked petunias. In the first place I don't like their colors. Their white isn't a pure, perfect white like that of daisy or bloodroot or lily, and their red is that particular shade of red which the American beauty rose takes on when it begins to fade, and for which I have ever had a distaste. It lacks either the richness of a real red, or the piquancy of such off-reds as cerise and scarlet. Then, too, I think there is a tinge of patronage in my attitude towards petunias, left over from my childhood days when petunias had a way of making themselves cheap in our garden. We never planted them, and yet every year they came back and rioted over the whole garden, sometimes crowding out flowers to which I had extended a definite invitation and in whose fate I was more interested. There were utilitarian advantages from a child's point of view, to petunias; one could suck them and one could blow through them, sometimes producing a queer little trumpet sound,—but as a flower they were too common, too obstreperous, and not lovely enough to win my admiration. They seemed somehow a counterpart in the flower world of the omnipresent English sparrow.

Names of Flowers are Interesting.

And lastly I think the name itself antagonized me. Somehow it isn't a pretty flower-like name. Names of flowers are interesting to me. I think they do really help to influence our feeling toward the flower. Take that exquisite name, the "daybreak pink"—who can say that it did not help make that exquisite flower it connotes the more popular?

And to take a homelier example, when I knew that bane of the farmer, love of the artist, as wild carrot, I never appreciated it. It was not until I heard it called "Princess lace", or better still "Queen Anne's lace", that I realized how lacy and dainty and altogether lovely this roadside flower is.

Could Any Name Fit The Flower As Zinnia Does?

With flowers, as with people, some names seem to fit, others are off key. Zinnia is a truly marvelous example of a perfectly fitting cognomen. Could anything sound more like that queer, stiff, vivid, ugly flower than that name? On the other hand, Sweet William is a name that the flower never quite lived up to. I had loved the name when I met it in description of old fashioned gardens, and I was disappointed when I first met the reality.

To take some of the most common flower names, "rose" seems to me to have a suitable suggestion of exquisite sweetness and loveliness, and "daisy" to have some of the lilt and cheerfulness of that happy little flower. And yet I am not altogether sure that I do not, because of associations, read those qualities into the names.

The old problem again,—which comes first the egg or the hen?

Stick to the job you've got.

"I'm goin' to quit," said Dan McGann, when the evening whistle blew.

"So here's my badge and here's my tools and here's my pay checks, too."

"What's wrong?" the foreman asked of Dan, with a strange look on his face.

"Nothing at all," said Dan McGann, "but I've found another shop."

"I'm going to work in another shop an' stand at another drill; I've got a friend that has asked me down to work at the other mill. I've no complaint at my treatment here, you've always used me fine, an' the only reason I'm chasin' jobs is to help out a friend of mine."

"Do you know what it means when you're changin' jobs?" said the foreman then to Dan.

"You are hurtin' the boys that fight in France an' helpin' the Hun, my man."

You are hinderin' two machines that ought to run at their fastest speed, an' they'll both fall short for days an' days of makin' the shells we need.

"Would you like us to wire the boys in France to stand, for a day or two, for the shells they need while we find a man to work in the place of you?"

We'll forget the money an' time, my boy, that makin' the change will cost.

But while you're movin' from place to place it's life that's being lost."

"I'll stick where I am," said Dan McGann. "I'll stay till the war is done."

It shall never be said that I stopped one shell on its way to the dirty Hun.

An' I'll print this sign for the boys to read. Perhaps it will help a lot: "To win the war in the quickest way, just stick to the job you've got."

WHERE IS HE!

The German lose on every front; they make a botch of every stunt; their morale is to pieces shot—where is the good old German gott? The term is Kaiser Bill's, nor I think it good or fine; it is irrelevant, profane, the output of an added brain; but if there is a German gott, who smiled on all the damage wrought, and would the German old gott right now? Perhaps he's tired of standing back of such a false and cruel pack of Prussia's stained, dishonored flag, of Wilhelm's loud and endless brag, in which gott takes a second place if Hohenzollern shows his face. The kaiser's hosts are on the run, they're losing all the ground they won, and "Kamerad" they meekly whine, as they go pelting for the Rhine. How does the pious kaiser feel, as he beholds them drop their steel and strike the hardest kind of trot? Where is his "good old German gott?" When victories were coming thick, 'twas "Me und gott" that did the trick; and now that every written sheet brings Wilhelm tidings of defeat, he'll doubtless think that phrase is rot, and charge up all the blame to gott. Can any nation hope to win that quotes Jehovah with a grin?

DIET FOR BEAUTY.

Diet is, without question, the most essential and at the same time the most abused hygienic cannon among women who really desire to reign queens in the world of beauty and taste. Your diet must be well balanced as the body and blood should be provided with the proper quantity of food elements to make a harmonious whole.

The trouble with eating begins in girlhood. The average young woman eats a cup of coffee and perhaps some heavy indigestible griddle cakes for her breakfast. For luncheon she may eat a pickle, a piece of cake or pie and a doughnut. She will take tea in the afternoon with rich cakes, thus spoiling her appetite for a good dinner. She will eat all sorts of candies between meals and only perhaps once or twice a week will she eat a wholesome meal.

What is the result of such habits of eating? In her early twenties her eyes are dull, her teeth not white, her gums pale, her lips wan, her flesh unyielding. In fact all the sap of her womanhood is undeveloped or destroyed. Of course there can be no hard and fast rules on diet for "what is one man's meat is another's poison" is a trite saying. The idea that meat must be eaten to produce strength is proved false by the elephant and the horse—two of the strongest animals in the world. They never eat meat. The trouble is with we Americans. We eat too much meat. A good rule is never to eat anything that is found on trial to disagree with you, even though it is highly recommended.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

SOME OF THE RESULTS.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Oct. 9th (Via Ottawa Reuter Agency).—Yesterday's victory of the Allies, besides prisoners, 7 square miles of territory and a haul of field guns, trench mortars and machine guns. Moreover important tactical results were achieved. Enemy has been thrust back into open country beyond any continuous works. The heavy counter-attacks from the direction of the line, and the enemy's numerical inferiority compelled us at first to strongly fortified village of Nierges, just southeast of Cambrai, and just south of the Valenciennes. The Germans have started burning towns far to the line, on which they are now fighting. The Germans are being given no rest whatever, for in addition to the barrage falling on them as they vainly try to stem the British and Americans, British guns are hammering their rear lines, paying special attention to roads. As darkness fell yesterday night, the sky was dotted with airplanes, which dropped bombs on all sorts of targets. German prisoners indicate that the enemy intends to retire first to the Valenciennes and then to the line of the Meuse. The bulk of the Germans in France are retiring, but however, they will be hard fighting all the way to the prepared positions of the lines, but it will be fighting over new and new country, where the best tank armoured motor cars cavalry should have, if they not only are having the opportunity to work out for them. The main positions north of Cambrai dominated by the new British line in the southeast, the British in a position to hasten the recovery, by turning an outstanding against the German positions. The gains in yesterday's battle were wrung from the enemy only a desperate struggle. At Villers Outreaux, the British were met by a perfect storm of machine gun fire behind which German infantry massed in great strength. The doggedness finally subdued this resistance, the village was taken and cleared up while the front pushed well to the east. It was a counter attack, launched from the direction of Avion, resulted in the hand to hand fighting, before our lads had at first given a ground against the weight of prior numbers. Naval divisions led in deep waves through the newly fortified village of Nierges, many prisoners.

Allies Pursue Retreating Germans.

TRUSTING WILSON AND FATE.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 9. George Bernhardt, the German political writer, writing for the "Vossische Zeitung," of Berlin, says that Prince Maximilian's announcement in the Reichstag that an armistice had been requested, was received in stony silence. Like ghosts, remembrances of former Chancellors' speeches filtered through the Chamber, speeches invariably based on reports of the victorious marches of German troops, he says. Bernhardt bitterly complains that Prince Maximilian neglected the opportunity to declare that Germany was ready to discuss with France the fate of Alsace Lorraine and with Russia the question of border provinces. He says, this omission confirms the view that the new Government means to perpetuate the political conceptions of the old Government, and declares that this continuation of the old policy is extraordinarily dangerous. He concludes, the Government only puts its trust in President Wilson and a kind fate.

GREETED WITH SATISFACTION.

PARIS, Oct. 9. President Wilson's reply to the German peace note was published in the noon editions of the newspapers today, and was greeted with general satisfaction and expressions of approval throughout Paris. The note could not be improved upon. "Substantive Paris for Washington, as the date line and reply might have been dictated here," is an epitome of French opinion as indicated by the popular reception of the Presidential document. Paris was on its way to luncheon when the newspapers containing the note came out, and the people literally fought for copies of the edition. The note was reproduced in these journals in heavy black type under big headlines. The significant passage in the note, in which President Wilson refuses to entertain the possibility of a cessation of hostilities and demanding the immediate withdrawal of the German troops, is interpreted in military circles as meaning that the Allies will give the Germans no respite in their retreat. Commandant Mirbell, one of the best known military critics in France, expressed the view to the Associated Press correspondent in this connection, that if the Germans were harassed and pressed during the retreat to the Meuse, they would lose a third of their effectiveness and one-half of their material, and would find themselves comparatively as weak on the line of the Meuse as they are now. On the other hand, he declared if they were allowed to retreat to the powerfully fortified line of the Meuse with their line shortened by nearly 300 kilometers, 40 of their divisions would be available for manoeuvring. Commenting on the note the Inter-Allied press says the response of President Wilson, by its sincerity and faith, cuts with single stroke the snares laid by Prince Maximilian of Baden. President Wilson responds by asking Germany "What do you mean? Do you accept my conditions? Do you speak in the name of the Government and the People?" He requires before any negotiations, that Germany evacuate the invaded territory. This is a like answer to that given the Duke of Brunswick after his defeat at Valmy.

ALLIES IN ACCORD.

LONDON, Oct. 9. The Press Association has issued an authoritative statement that the Foreign Office has received the text of President Wilson's note to Germany, and that all the Allies are in complete accord. The matter adds: "The fall of the Turkish Cabinet has great significance. It is not doubted that Turkey apprised Berlin of her intention to seek peace, and Germany sought to stave off such a development by an attempt to seek a general instead of a partial settlement."

THE GERMAN RETREAT.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9. (Associated Press)—The German armies are in full flight before the British, American and French forces on the front between Cambrai and St. Quentin. Cambrai, the strong point of the enemy in this region, has been taken by the British in its entirety, and north of Cambrai the Canadians have deeply penetrated the German line. Out in the open east of what once was the old Hindenburg line, cavalry is hustling the retreating foe in what virtually amounts to a rout. So fast is the retreat that columns of the Allied troops in parade formation have passed through numerous villages completely cut of contact with the Germans. More than 10,000 prisoners, and between 100 and 300 guns were captured in Tuesday's fighting, and a continuation of the battle on Wednesday resulted, in further large captures. In the fighting, 23 German divisions, or more than a quarter of a million men, have been severely man-handled. The maximum depth of the advance is between eight and ten miles. The Germans are declared to be fleeing to the east of Le Cateau, one of the most important railroad centers in this region. Behind them Germans are leaving the country devastated, burning towns and villages as they flee.

"Why Our Milk Macaroni is so Delicious"

The first thing you notice about this New Milk Macaroni, is its rich flavor. It is so different from the ordinary imported Macaroni. Because—Catelli's is made only from the famous Semolina flour and milk.—CATELLI'S Milk Macaroni has a richness, a smoothness, a bright clear yellow color, entirely different from the dull insipid unwhitening imported kind. Catelli's Milk Macaroni is so rich in gluten that it never breaks up in boiling, but retains its form and consistency perfectly. Ask your Grocer. This accounts for its wonderful food value—its flesh and strength building properties. Eat more Macaroni—Our book tells how to prepare it in more than a hundred different styles. ## COLIN CAMPBELL.

PRaise FOR BRITISH OFFICERS.

LONDON, Oct. 9. Premier Lloyd George has sent the following to Field Marshal Haig in the field: "I have just heard from Marshal Foch of the brilliant victory won by the Third and Fourth Armies, and wish to express to yourself, General Byng, General Rawlinson and all the officers and men under your command, my sincerest congratulations on the great and significant successes which the British Army with their American brothers-in-arms have gained during the past few days. The courage and tenacity which the troops of the Empire, after withstanding terrific enemy assaults in the spring of this year, again resumed the offensive with such decisive results, is the greatest chapter of our military history. The smashing of the great defensive system erected by the enemy, and claimed to be impregnable, is a feat of which all are justly proud, and for which the Empire will ever be grateful."

GERMAN CASUALTIES HEAVY.

PARIS, Oct. 9. The Hindenburg line no longer bars the path of the Allies. The definite rupture of it was achieved on the first day of the fighting in the new development towards the north of the great battle, now raging from the Escaut to the Meuse. To Anglo-Saxon forces went the honor of storming the last remnants of the extraordinary mass of defences in some places twelve miles in depth between Cambrai and St. Quentin. Apart from this achievement the results of the day's fighting were notable in that the enemy's losses must have run into tens of thousands of men during the

ADVANCE OF FIVE MILES.

PARIS, Oct. 9. The Anglo-French troops have forced the Germans to a general retreat north and south of St. Quentin. The first army pursuing the enemy rear-guard has advanced about five miles to the east of St. Quentin and taken 2,000 prisoners.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Oct. 9. We inflicted a heavy defeat on the enemy yesterday between St. Quentin and Cambrai, taking over 10,000 prisoners and between 100 to 300 guns. No less than twenty-three German divisions were engaged on this front.

The Farmer-ettes.

Whether from city or country find themselves living under an unusual strain. The unusual work necessitates the use of different muscles and this development demands a good supply of pure, rich blood. Because it goes directly to the formation of new blood, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is of the greatest assistance in building up new cells and tissues and strengthening the muscles.

through the southern portions of the town. Since August 21 the British first, third and fourth armies have broken through the whole elaborate series of deep defensive zones built up with successive belts of heavily fortified trench lines including the entire Hindenburg system on a front of over thirty-five miles from St. Quentin to Arras having penetrated this battle area to a depth of between 30 and 40 miles. Our troops are now operating far beyond and east of the Hindenburg defense. In the process of these operations and since the date mentioned we have inflicted very heavy losses on the enemy in killed and wounded, and have taken over 110,000 prisoners and 1,200 guns. This feat of arms has been performed by British troops who had already withstood the first heavy onslaughts of the enemy's main forces in the spring. Only the endurance and determination of these troops permitted them to pass to the offensive with such conspicuous success. By their heroic action in defence and attack the men from all parts of the British Empire have proved themselves soldiers of the highest order. The advance continued this afternoon. We have reached the general line of Bohain, Bussigny, Caudry and Caurior.
