What if Your Home Burned To-Night?
Would to-morrow and the years to come be clouded with remorse by the loss of treasures that nothing can replace?
Photographs, heirlooms, gifts, personal letters and mementoes—could you state their value to you in dollars and cents?
If fire suddenly came to-night, where would you find your silverware, jewels, rare collections, your inventory of household goods, and such private papers as you keep at home?
How about the days, weeks or months that your house is shut up and empty while you are out of town? Suppose fire should visit it then?
Keep your valuables in the SAFE-CABINET, installed in your own home, where it will be instantly accessible and convenient to use.

Sweet Eva!

CHAPTER XVIII.

She looked at him as he sat opposite to her in the carriage and saw the worry in his eyes, and with sudden impulse she leaned over and touched his hand.

"Philip—I am sure there is no cause for alarm. I am sure he will be much better when we get there. I daresay he asked Mr. Calligan to send for you."

Philip looked down at the hand resting on his, he said with an effort "Yes, I hope so, too."

He let the window down and stared out over the darkening country. How everything had changed in the three days since they left it; then the sun had been shining gloriously; now it might have been a chilly October day judging by the keen, damp air, and the pungent smell of the wet earth and fields.

He rose to his feet with unutterable relief as the train ran into the station. He was out on the platform before it had properly stopped, looking eagerly up and down.

"Someone ought to be here to meet us," he said. "I wired. I thought perhaps Calligan . . . Here he is."

He turned eagerly as Calligan came quickly towards them. He was muffled to the eyes in a big waterproof coat. He glanced once at Eva and hurriedly away again.

Philip caught his arm.

"How is he? Better? What happened? He was all right when we went away."

"It was a stroke. I—Phil, old man—I'm so horribly sorry, but—but you're too late. He died half an hour after I wired."

There was a very real emotion in Calligan's kind voice. He knew what a bitter blow this would be to his friend.

He was desperately sorry for Eva, too. What a home-coming for her! For a moment Philip stood quite still. Great as the dread in his heart had been, he had not expected anything so bad as this. The shock robbed him of all power of speech or even thought. Then he began to walk on blindly.

Eva followed with Calligan. The tears were running down her cheeks. She had had such a happy life, even in the days when they were poor, and now it seemed as if it was to be nothing but tragedy upon tragedy.

A car from the Highway House was waiting for them outside. Calligan put Eva in to it and Philip followed. "I'm going in front with Banks," Calligan said. He gave them no time to object; he shut the door.

Philip leaned forward with his face buried in his hands. He had forgotten his wife; he had forgotten everything—the awful shock of the news.

It had been a vain sacrifice after all. He had striven at the very foundations of his own happiness in a blind endeavour to save his father from disgrace, and now his father was dead.

Eva sat beside him silently till she could bear it no longer. She slipped her hand through his arm.

over this afternoon to say that we'd wired for you."

She looked at him gratefully. "You seem to think of everything," she said.

She held her hands to the fire and watched the light shifting on her wedding ring. There was a little silence. Calligan was watching her with thoughtful eyes.

He was more glad than he could express to see her again. He was conscious of a sort of quiet content at being with her.

Eva looked up suddenly and met his earnest gaze.

"What are you thinking about?" she asked impulsively. Calligan started guiltily.

"I was wondering why you hadn't finished your coffee," he said, with pretended severity. "Haven't I put enough sugar in it—or too much—or—"

He stopped as the door opened and Philip came into the room.

Eva rose at once and Calligan slipped away.

"I've been wondering what is the best thing for you to do," Philip said. He spoke to his wife without looking at her.

"I don't want you to stay here if you would rather go to your own people, but my mother, of course—"

Eva interrupted, her colour deepening a little.

"I shall stay here; at least—I I shan't be in the way," she added rather pathetically.

Philip seemed more of a stranger to her now than ever before, and yet she knew that deep down in her heart she had never cared for him so much. Ever her first romantic love for him had not touched the depths which these last three days had reached so easily.

He looked a little relieved. "Thank you—I am glad," he said. "Your rooms are ready for you and mother would like to see you, if you will go to her."

She waited a moment, but apparently he had nothing more to say, and she passed him with drooping head. Her heart seemed to be breaking with passionate love and pity for him. She longed to go back and tell him that she could not live this life any longer, but she went on steadily, and the door closed behind her.

She met Calligan in the hall; he saw the tragedy in her eyes, though Philip had been blind to it.

He asked a hurried question. "Are you all right? Is there anything I can do for you?"

"No—nothing, thank you."

He went to rejoin his friend.

He was sure now that disaster of some kind had befallen these two, and already, without the least knowledge of facts, he condemned Philip; his face was a little untriedly as he entered the drawing room.

"The winter tells me that you've been a brick," Philip said. Calligan shrugged his shoulders.

"I happened to be here—that was all."

"I wish to God that I had," said Philip.

There was a little silence.

"It's rough on your wife—coming home to this," Calligan said then deliberately.

"Yes," Philip got up and began roaming restlessly round the room.

"I suggested that she went to her own people," he said presently. "I thought it would be better for her; but she preferred to stay here."

Calligan stared.

"You suggested—" he began blankly, then stopped; he was afraid of saying too much.

There was a little silence.

"I should have thought you would have wanted her here rather particularly," he said then dryly; for the life of him he could not have kept the words back, but Philip hardly seemed to have heard. He came back to where Calligan stood by the fire.

"I hope you'll stay here for a bit with us," he said. "Can you manage it, do you think?"

Calligan laughed rather dryly.

"I can manage it—but . . . wouldn't you rather I cleared out? I should have gone back this morning, only . . . well, you know."

"I should like you to stay if you haven't anything better to do."

"My dear chap, when have I ever had anything better to do?" Calligan had been thinking lately with a sort of chagrin of the rather aimless existence he had led since his "various days."

A small income, just sufficient for his not very extravagant wants, had been his ruin.

There had been a time when he had had great ambition, and when people had prophesied a future for him; but he had drifted—there had never been any real incentive to get on; he was a singularly friendless sort of man.

He had often thought in an abstract sort of way of getting married and having a home of his own, but he had never met a woman who had helped the abstract idea to mature until a week ago when he came to the Highway House and met Eva Dennison.

And she, of course . . . He looked at Philip with a cynical smile in his eyes.

Matrimonial Safety Valve.

DIVORCES MADE EASY.

Buenos Aires.—The Uruguayan divorce laws have made the city of Montevideo the Mecca of the ill-matched couples of the neighboring republic of Argentina. The Buenos Aires newspapers refer to Montevideo as a "matrimonial safety valve" and drily observe that up-to-date divorce legislation has been rendered unnecessary in Argentina by the enterprise of the Uruguayan law-givers. According to La Razon of Buenos Aires, the Montevideans (possibly in a fit of repentance for having dissolved so many Argentine unions) are now endeavoring to hold the balance even by making marriage an easy and expeditious matter in their capital. So far have they gone in the latter direction that they have been condemned by both Uruguayan and Argentinians. One cynical scribe, however, remarks that the "marriage while you wait" system should serve as an excellent feeder to the divorce court in the slack season.

Philip seemed more of a stranger to her now than ever before, and yet she knew that deep down in her heart she had never cared for him so much. Ever her first romantic love for him had not touched the depths which these last three days had reached so easily.

HENRY BLAIR

A Million Hours Ago.

FIGURES TO MAKE YOU GASP!

Scientists are fond of telling us of things which happened ten, twenty, or thirty million years ago; but does anybody realize what these immense periods of time mean?

What was happening a million days ago? If you make a simple calculation, you will find that a million days is 2,739 years; a million days ago, about the year B.C. 80, Rome had not been built, King Uzziah was reigning at Jerusalem, and two hundred years were to elapse before the Jews went into captivity in Babylon.

Counting for Two and a Half Days.

Of what happened a million weeks ago we know nothing except what we can deduce from prehistoric bones, implements, and weapons!

A million hours ago—in 1870—the Battle of Trafalgar, fought two years before, was fresh in men's memories; we were in the midst of our struggle with Napoleon, which did not end for eight more years.

A million minutes? Two years all but thirty-six days! Well then, what of a million seconds? Surely that cannot be a very long time! A million seconds is eleven and a half days. If you were to count rapidly, without stopping for a moment, it would take you from eight o'clock on Monday morning until midday on Wednesday to reach a million.

OR RENEW ITS LEASE OF LIFE!

When the Ford Car leaves the plant at Ford, Canada, it represents standardized production reduced to a science. There is no lost motion anywhere in its construction, and each part is of the material and temper best calculated to fulfill the function it has to perform. Parts here and there will require to be replaced in time, and it rests with you at this stage whether you cripple your Ford, or renew its lease of life.

Ex-Pres. Wilson Opposes Four Power Treaty.

Indians Demand Equal Rights -- Want Anglo-French Relations Perpetuated -- Canadian Premier Opposed in North York.

WILSON OPPOSES FOUR-POWER TREATY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17. The decision of former President Wilson to oppose ratification of the four-power treaty, because he does not regard it in harmony with the League of Nations, has become known Democratic Senators. His attitude is in sharp contrast with the opposition in the Senate, as well as doubt any arrangements of Far Eastern affairs which will be satisfactory to the United States, and to the League of Nations, makes the outlook as to the ratification of the four-power treaty uncertain.

Government's views and concludes "we desire only, as we are glad to note also the desire, to settle outstanding problems that nothing may impair the competence of the Executive to carry out the treaty, and thus carry the comradeship of war into the higher task of bringing the European peoples together in a just and abiding pact of peace."

KING WILL BE OPPOSED.

NEW MARKET, Jan. 17. Premier Mackenzie King will be opposed in the bye-election in North York by Armstrong, the defeated Conservative candidate in the riding in the last general election, who declared to-night he was entering the contest as a protest against the political tactics of his opponents in the last campaign in their endeavour to blacken his reputation.

ADVOCATING CLASS WARFARE.

CHRISTIANIA, Jan. 17. The Social Democrats are appealing to the Moscow red International and the Trade Unions of the Amsterdam International to summon a Conference of Trade Unions of all countries to discuss measures to promote and preserve world peace and of working class co-operation against the International capitalist class.

A DARING RESCUE.

CORK, Jan. 17. A daring rescue was carried out in the city here to-day, when two visitors asking to see Gen. Burke, charged with firing on a police patrol, held up the wardens with revolvers and with the aid of accomplices waiting outside with ladders, took Burke away.

WAGE QUESTION SETTLED.

MONTREAL, Jan. 17. Wage questions affecting 140,000 employees of the Canadian National Railways was settled harmoniously this morning as a result of a conference between union leaders and railway officials here. Representatives of the running trades agreed to accept "permanently" the twelve and a half per cent reduction introduced by the railways last July and which was accepted under protest at that time. The decree of permanency is confined to the clause which provided that the agreement is terminable within thirty days on notice from either party to it.

WATERWAY TREATY MAY BE NEGOTIATED.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17. Negotiations of a treaty between the United States and Great Britain looking toward the improvement of the St. Lawrence between Montreal and Lake Ontario, so as to provide a deep waterway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic Ocean may be expected to be undertaken soon, it was said to-day at the White House.

L. G. 58 YESTERDAY.

LONDON, Jan. 17. Lloyd George celebrated his 59th birthday to-day, receiving numerous congratulations. It is believed the fall of the Briand Cabinet, entailing disarrangement of the results hoped for from the Cannes Conference, has induced the Premier to abandon hope of an early election. Nevertheless party organizers are extremely busy.

A GOOD TRAPPING SEASON.

A TALE OF THE SEA.

BOSTON, Jan. 17. How four of his crew were swept overboard by a giant wave during the storm on Wednesday and three of them returned to the deck by the same wave, was told by Capt. Edward Fog, of the Boston fishing schooner Athena, when he arrived here to-day. The fourth man, Thomas Merchant, of Cape Breton, was lost.

Two Street Accidents.

CHILD INJURED. The 6-year-old daughter of Mr. Thos. Morgan of Hamilton Avenue was knocked down near her home yesterday evening by a horse driven by Mr. Peter Murphy, a wheel of the long cart passing over the child's leg and badly bruising it. After being taken to her home a doctor was called. Although no bones were broken the little girl suffered much pain.

KNOCKED DOWN BY MOTOR.

On Water Street yesterday evening a boy named Ryan was knocked down by a motor car owned by Mr. D. Baird and slightly injured. The lad was picked up by the chauffeur, Mr. Sullivan, and driven to Dr. Anderson's surgery where it was found his injuries were only slight. The lad was afterwards taken to his home near the Mill Bridge.

Sherriff's FLAVORING EXTRACTS NON ALCOHOLIC

Capt. Kean Takes Issue.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—In replying to Mr. D. on Square Rig versus Fore and Aft, or on what you are pleased to call "A Reasonable Hypothesis," it is not my intention to offer a theory in favour of fore and aft vessels as opposed to the square rigged. At the start I am prepared to admit I am no match for Mr. D. on theory, but I shall take the liberty of introducing some plain common sense matter of fact questions in this case, which I think Mr. D. will find he will have to answer a little more before he can give a satisfactory answer, which will satisfy the public. First of all I repudiate that any vessel has been lost by the fact that she was a fore and aft rig rather than square rigged. He says that the losses have been unprecedentedly large: perfectly true, but then we must remember that the number has been unprecedentedly large. The next thing we have to consider is how these vessels have been lost, and I make a statement right here that we have had more vessels abandoned this last ten years on account of their rudders than any ten years in our foreign trade for the last fifty years. Several of our vessels have been lost by contacts with the rocks, several have been burnt, some have been abandoned on account of the loss of their rudders. In these cases can we attribute these losses to the rig. The fore and aft rig did not save them: the square rig could not have prevented their loss. I am not disputing the fact that a number of our vessels have foundered at sea. I go further and say that the proper authorities have been (in my opinion) derelict in their duties in not causing a most rigid examination in connection with some of the losses which have taken place in this country the last few years. Out of five vessels, I am informed, that sailed on their first voyage three foundered before reaching their destination. The other two reached their first port but foundered before reaching their second port. Now will any man in his sane senses try to convince me by any stretch of imagination or theory that the cause is found in the fact that these vessels were rigged fore and aft instead of square, or to use the exact words of Mr. D. "the thrust of the spars in the fore and aft vessels is largely lateral, the direction in which the hull structurally offers the least resistance," was the cause. Incidentally he refers to our English built vessels of years ago. He could not have introduced an incident which more completely confounds his theory than that very question. And I want to say right here that if all our vessels were built out of the same class of wood and fastened in the same way as our English vessels are, you would hear of no foundering at sea regardless of whether they were rigged fore and aft or square. In proof of this argument I will give an incontrovertible answer. Every one of our sailing steamers came out to us square rigged, some of them full rigged ships. Every one of them for the last twenty years have had the yards taken off them. Some of these are now over forty years old, the youngest over thirty years old, and during her time has been in the hardest kind of work, has made a trip to the North and South Poles, and for the last six months has not been pumped. For the first fifteen years she carried yards and for over fifteen years she has sailed without yards. Her durability and fitness to-day is not due to the fact that she one time sailed with yards, and for some time without them, but due to the fitness of the wood and to the fastenings when she was built. Before closing my remarks I want to refer again to the many vessels that have been abandoned on account of their rudders. I have been working on two theories. One is the patent steering gear, which does not in my opinion give the rudders so much play as the wheel chains. The other is the rake of the sternpost to-day compared to the sternpost of thirty years ago. If these remarks bring forth some other suggestion, then I shall consider my labour has not been in vain.

Plain Talk to the Council.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—I noticed in this evening's issue of your truly called "People's paper" an article on the meeting of the Municipal Council and a delegation representing committee concerning the matter of badly needed employment, and during the discussion the Mayor referred to the necessity of still further taxation in order to meet a deficit in Municipal finances. Where or when will it end? Our new Council, making its debut has caused a slight ripple on the hitherto placid waters of security in the apparently safe haven of Municipal affairs. We hope that it will not be as it always has been a mere cat's paw, but a severe storm of indignation which will sweep up this city to its limits, and we suggest that the Mayor order the storm signals immediately hoisted.

We consider it to be quite unreasonable and intolerable that a little more than half the property holders of this city should be increasingly taxed in order to pay the expense of Municipal improvements and necessities while the one-third go scot free. The disfranchising of delinquents will fall very far short of the desired effect, reducing Municipal bills with a foot posture along those lines. A list published containing the names of all (without discrimination) of those in arrears would, we believe, bring thousands of dollars to the Municipal coffers. If any then would still persist in acting in defiance of the Municipal authorities, let their property be controlled by the Council until arrears are paid in full, especially in cases where gain is safely deposited in a bank or invested as part payment on a stylish motor car. We are not surprised at Municipal reports showing a deficit in finances when we are told that more than one-third of the property holders are in arrears, and probably in many cases this state of affairs has existed for twenty years or more. We were, in years gone by, receiving Municipal bills with a footnote which read something like this: "If this account is not paid in ten days legal proceedings will be instituted."

Now that surely must have been a typographical error, for instead of ten days it must have meant ten years or ten centuries. I have no idea of the amount of taxes on Municipal bills, but if it should be about one hundred thousand dollars and less than two-thirds of that amount being collected, there is a shortage every year of at least thirty-five thousand dollars, which amount would go a long way in solving the unemployment problem. I have always regarded the Municipal bill as being amongst the first demanding attention, and I still take with a footnote which read something like this: "If this account is not paid in ten days legal proceedings will be instituted."

German Confederation under the leadership of Prussia. On the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian War the South German states joined Prussia, and with the victory over France the whole of the German states and Prussia became united in the "German Empire." The coronation of the Prussian King as German Emperor at Versailles was attended with great pomp and ceremony, all the notabilities of both nations being present, including the Crown Prince (afterwards Frederick II.) the Grand Duke of Baden, Duke Ernest of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, Bismarck and Von Moltke. On that day the rise of Modern Germany may be said to have commenced, and under the stimulus of the union, the German empire developed rapidly until it became the second greatest commercial country in the world. At the same time her military power, fostered by Bismarck, and latterly by the ex-emperor, increased so enormously that she dominated the Continent of Europe. Happily for the rest of civilization, however, this military dominance was shattered in the recent great war, and the ex-emperor William II. is now an exile in Holland.

You are entitled to the benefit of the doubt Why not take advantage of it?

The law is very careful in protecting the rights of a prisoner charged with a crime. How about the Law of Common Sense and the man who has committed an error only? Isn't this a good place to use the benefit of the doubt, too? Take your own case: If you don't know for sure whether tea or coffee is harming you, you do know that many are harmed by the drug element in tea and coffee, and that headaches, nervousness, or high blood pressure are symptoms which often tell that the drug, caffeine, is giving the nervous system too much jolt. Probably you know, too, that some people can't drink a cup of tea or coffee at bed-time, and sleep well that night. Where many have been harmed by tea and coffee, and you may be harmed, isn't it well to put the benefit of the doubt on your side before doubt becomes an unpleasant certainty? There's charm without harm in Postum—a pure cereal beverage, rich in flavor, fully satisfying, the favorite table drink of thousands. Suppose you try giving yourself this benefit today, and keep up the test for ten days; then judge the results. See if you don't feel better and work better. You can get Postum wherever good food and drink are sold or served. Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tin) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger size) for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

The Present Problem

We have no desire whatever to become alarmists or to prophesy danger where no danger exists, but this we do say that St. John's is sitting on the edge of a volcano, and if something is not done speedily by the powers that be, there will undoubtedly be occurrences which will not only have the effect of arousing citizens from the apathy which at present enshrouds them, but will demonstrate that the times are ripe for revolution and Bolshevism. It is the paramount duty of the press in all cases where it obtains inside knowledge and information to utter a warning, and it would be recreant to that duty owing the general public if it failed or deliberately neglected to do so. The unemployment situation has become more acute this winter than heretofore. Hundreds of ordinarily employed laborers are without the wherewithal to support their families, and their difficulties appear to be increasing rather than diminishing. And the crux of the whole situation is that there is no regular employment, and it is next thing to an impossibility for either the Government or Municipal Council to find such as will take in the whole number of those out of work. What then can be done in the direction that employment is absolutely essential for the benefit of the community? Delegates of the body of unemployed met the Municipal Council on Saturday last and expressed their ideas on what should be done at once. But the Council, through the Mayor, explained their position from a financial standpoint and regretted that the Council could not do anything. The Government was the proper quarter to apply, or failing that body, the Citizens Unemployment Committee selected at Government House some little time ago. This Committee, we understand have arranged temporary employment for five hundred men, work to begin at once. But only the most deserving cases will be employed, and in this instance who is to be the final arbitrator? It is expressed that there are actually sixteen hundred laborers needing work, the majority of whom are family men. What remedial work is therefore being found for the extra eleven hundred. The Railway Commission or Committee of Management, acting perhaps on the advice of the Executive Government, promises employment for two hundred and fifty men on Conception Bay line Sections. The Board of Works agrees to take on a similar complement to be engaged in widening the Western part of the South Side Road. So far so good. Yet it is only natural to believe that this half thousand men will be inclined to hang on to the employment offered so long as it lasts. In that case how will the other out-of-work numbering at least one thousand make out? It is not enough that a solitary section only should be served. To avoid future trouble the Government must assure equal labor to all, and not grant special privileges to any. The unemployed of St.

John's to-day are not seeking either charity or relief. They want and demand work and it will have to be the prime business of the Administration to find that work quickly. They are extorting large revenues from the people and these revenues should be applied in the first instance to procuring the work which is so much needed.

St. John's Octette.

Some excellent solos, duets, trios and part-songs will be heard at the Methodist College Hall on Monday night. Many of those who attended the last concert given by the Octette Male Voice Party recall with pleasure the harmonious blending and beautiful tone effects obtained in the various choruses given.

One enthusiastic lover of music declared on that occasion that the Octette had infused a world of understanding and sentiment into the local conception of concerted singing, "because," said he, "it is such attention to expression, the numerous alternations of light and shade, the small nuances, &c., that put the breath of life into a piece of music."

The ladies taking part are well known to all concert goers. Mrs. Dr. J. Murphy will be heard in a violin concerto with Mr. Gordon Christian at the piano. Mrs. H. Outerbridge will give dramatic recitations.

St. Thomas's Parish War Memorial.

On Monday morning next, Jan. 23, Thanksgiving Day, a war memorial to the men of St. Thomas's Parish who gave their lives in the Great War, will be unveiled by His Excellency the Governor, and afterwards dedicated by the Lord Bishop of Newfoundland. The Memorial, which is of carved oak from the famous workshop at Exeter of J. Wippl & Co., contains a not only the names of the fallen, but also of all from the Parish who served in the War. A space has been left in the centre for the old Royal Arms, which, when the Garrison Church was built, nearly a century ago, were placed outside the gallery, above the font, where it is proposed to erect the Memorial, which is very beautiful and a worthy tribute to the gallant men, whose sacrifice and service it commemorates.

Watson, however, made a splendid break of 32 and obtaining the lead, maintained it throughout. At the close of play the scores were Watson 250, Foster 199, and the breaks were:— Watson—11, 16, 17, 12, 32, 12, 13.
Foster—10, 17, 16, 10, 14, 11, 14.

D. R. Thistle (Masonic) defeated J. Maher (City) in the next game by 83 points. The game occupied an hour and 12 minutes. Both players tied at 123, but Thistle suddenly took the lead and when the game ended he was 250 to his opponents 167. The breaks were:— Thistle—13, 11, 13, 16, 11, 16.

The Final Game.
C. F. Taylor (City) and W. J. Martin (Masonic) contested for the honours in the third game, which was the shortest yet played, occupying only 58 minutes. The death of Mr. James J. Tobin, which occurred at the General Hospital this morning, will be learned with regret by a large circle of friends. The deceased was born in Ireland 64 years ago and came to this country at the age of 12 years. Mr. Thomas Fitzgibbon accompanying him on the passage out. He finished his education at St. Bonaventure's College and then entered the grocery business with his uncle, Michael Tobin, who carried on in the premises now occupied by the American Shoe Store. After some years there he started business for himself at the Beach, and up to the time of the great fire of 1882 conducted a successful general store. Rebuilding after the conflagration, the deceased continued his business and added a wholesale and retail wine and spirit store.

The late Mr. Tobin was one of the oldest members of the B. I. Society. He was also a member of the Academia Club. His wife, who was Miss Kate Dooley, daughter of the late Denis Dooley, butcher, deceased, died a couple of years ago. Three sons—John, Michael and Denis, are left to mourn. Denis, the youngest, was a member of the American Expeditionary Force and is due to arrive here by the Sachem on Friday. To the family the Telegram extends sympathy.

Unemployed Seeking Tickets.

All the forenoon from an early hour large numbers of unemployed men congregated in front of the Militia Department seeking employment. There was a great crush to get tickets for work, and several police constables were employed to keep order. This morning a gang of about 170 men were sent by train to repair the railroad bed near Seal Cove. Other men in a total of 250 will go out to-morrow morning. The Citizens' Committee appointed at a meeting held a short while ago at Government House, will meet to-night in the Board of Trade Rooms when details in connection with the Southside Road will be discussed.

Portia Arrives.

ALTHOUGH STORMY FOR FISHING.
Although fish is plentiful on the West Coast, weather has been too stormy to accomplish anything, according to reports brought along by S.S. Portia, Capt. Connors, which arrived in port to-day from the Westward. There is a good sign of fish at channel and bankers are getting ready at Belleoram, Grand Bank and Burin to prosecute the West Coast fishery. They will be leaving in a few days. The Portia brought a large quantity of herring from Curling to Sydney. The following passengers arrived on the ship—Miss Burridge, Miss Parsons, Mr. Facey, A. Farrell, E. Fleming, W. Hicks, E. Gibbons, S. Hearn, M. Walsh.

Municipality Not Responsible.

Dear Sir—I was very much surprised to find in the editorial columns of the Advocate yesterday an expression of opinion that the Municipal Government were responsible for the poor of the city and were under an obligation to provide work for the unemployed, instead of the Government of the Colony. Needless to say such is far from being the case. The powers and duties of city governments are such as are given to them by Act of Parliament. The duties and powers of our City Government are defined by the Charter passed last year. So far as I remember the Municipal Council is not authorized to spend money on education, administration of justice, hospitals and care of the sick (with the exception of the support of the Community Nursing Service), or charity or relief of the poor. Those duties and powers are performed by the Government of the Colony for the whole Colony. If it were possible for the Council in carrying out the duties which are given to them to find employment without adding to the cost of such work, no doubt they will do so. More than this is beyond their power. Yours truly,
Jan. 18, 1922. CIVIS.

There has been an epidemic of robbery and other crimes of violence in Dublin, and in rural districts, which demand strong measures from the Government in any steps taken to re-establish order; but the next few weeks, while English forces are being withdrawn, may be a difficult time in the interests of the followers of Mr. De Valera are said to have appealed for funds for the purpose of organizing popular opinion in favor of a Republic.

Effective Herring Packages.
NO REASON FOR THEIR USE.
For Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—Some time ago in order to make an effort to find employment for its members, the Cooper's Union appointed a deputation to wait on the Minister for the purpose of laying before him certain proposals in connection with the trade, viz. Herring Barrels, and the Premier as a sign of his sympathy and promise his assistance, and that the matter would be laid before a meeting of members to consider the relief problem, which would be called at an early date. Since then Sir Richard B. Boscawen has been called away and therefore, has inspired in the meantime there are hundreds (200) workless members, many of whom have been partially so, for the past twelve months. Many of those men have large families, and the future for them looks gloomy indeed. I might say that all the packages are idle owing in part to an influx of out-of-harbor fish packages, as there seems to be no hope in the direction thus thought turned naturally to the making of herring barrels. In speaking of a number of those in a couple of weeks ago our attention was attracted to some herring barrels pulled on carts in the direction of the Red Cross pier, which were in bad condition, and naturally we stopped at the conclusion, rather hastily I suppose, that while the street is full of idle men packages were sent out of the country in that direction. I then immediately wrote to the Press on the matter and the Department the wrong impression to any man much less like Mr. McFarlane, who is known to be a most careful and zealous official, and a man who gives time and thought to the betterment of the business, and he must know that by writing over my signature I was acting fairly and manly and not actuated by the motives ascribed to me. Notwithstanding all Mr. Boscawen's efforts in this direction he is mainly up against it. In fact he will make a success of it without co-operation on the part of all in connection with this industry. Now as the Inspector's statement he says was wrong in my assumption with regard to those packages. Alright—I accept his assertion unqualifiedly and reservedly. I think I am big enough for that, and I am also heartily glad to know I was mistaken, as I had to think of the result of packages that condition being exported. Sir—and this is a but—what are those packages to be defective? Is it the short journey from the pier center to St. John's for transport, or were they defective at the time of being packed? It's almost much to swallow, that they be such wrecks in transit. That is trouble that should be investigated, and the blame placed on the right riders. Presumably those packages when shipped from the packing were intended to be landed in New York, and not transferred to the wharf in St. John's. The Inspector's report as his reason the barrels being carried to Rendell's for inspection and repairs. Now, Sir, I consider a reason is never an excuse, is it a justification, but of course any Inspector are blameless here in that in the best they can under circumstances. Yet I venture the opinion that they have full knowledge that things are not as they should be, but they are powerless to do anything. This is the work of the Government. Now, Mr. Editor, this is the first I saw off for the present, as I am aware your valuable space is limited, but I will resume my remarks another issue, with your kind permission.
Yours very truly,
JAMES J. POWER.

Coughs or Colds take Ford's Phoronite, it will cure you.
FORD'S LINIMENT FOR COLDS, ETC.

Home-made, but Has No Equal for Coughs

Makes a family supply of really dependable cough medicine. Easily prepared, and saves about 25¢.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a 16-oz bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes 16 ounces of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief. You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that it is really astonishing. Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds. There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Centenaries of 1922.

(From the Boston Transcript.) There is a certain increasing weariness with centenaries. Somehow we seem to have more and more of them with us. Yet verily life has always been one centenary after another. Something was always happening, somebody was always being born, a hundred years ago. Living in 1921 or 1922, why should we live back to 1821 or 1822? It may grow tiresome to do so. But the world somehow grows more conscious of its landmarks. Once it scarcely knew that it had any landmarks, and if it did know, it did not care. But ours is the age of consciousness of everything that has gone to make up what we are; and in the matters of great men and women, perhaps it is the guilty sort of consciousness that we are not now producing their like that leads us to think so much about the great ones that belonged to the last generation or the last but one.

At all events, we continue to observe the centenaries. We shall have occasion to observe several in 1922, beginning with one which is not a centenary but is another tercentenary. We refer to the three-hundredth anniversary of the birth of one Jean Baptiste Poquelin, better known by the stage name of Moliere, who was born in Paris, January 15, 1622. Moliere, who was a strolling player like Shakespeare, and also, like him, a great dramatist, is prized by the French as we prize Shakespeare. They find him gay and brighter than Shakespeare; he is their man; and truly he was great. The French stage will be almost completely devoted to Moliere in January, by way of the highest honor to his memory, but it is not apparent that the celebration will have more than an echo in America.

We shall have, moreover, our own centenaries to observe. On April 27, 1822, on a farm in Ohio, was born Hiram Ulysses Grant, whose name was afterwards listed at West Point and on the scroll of fame as Ulysses S.

Grant. At the outbreak of the Civil War an obscure civilian in a small Western town, Grant came out of that conflict the most famous American, for already the hero more famous than himself, Abraham Lincoln, had passed on. Grant's record justified his fame. He had earned all he got, and his name had richly deserved the centenary honors which, it is to be hoped, he will abundantly receive. With Lincoln's, his name stands for the most important thing we have next to liberty, which is Union. It stands also for America patient and indomitable endeavour. The hundred years that have passed since Grant's birth seem indeed to have been lived by the whole world that his great words may be spoken again and spoken now with authority. "Let us have peace!"

We have locally a centenary in which all Americans may heartily join, and that is the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Edward Everett Hale on April 3. Hale was of the finest fruit of New England blood and culture. It was proper that he should have written "The Man Without a Country," for no man ever had a fiercer grip than he had on all that makes one a lover and a servant of his native land. So many things he was born to—to letters, to friends, to helpers, to piety and goodness—and to Boston! The world had lent him its best hand, and he passed it on to thousands. The love of his countrymen and his townsmen was always his because love was in him. He walks our streets as a persisting influence, and so palpably, it seems, that it is well-nigh impossible to realize that it was a hundred whole years ago that he was born. The centenary almost takes us by surprise. But it will not be forgotten.

Abroad, the centennial of that mighty chemist, Louis Pasteur (December 27) will surely be observed by the scientific world, and may well be remembered by all, so universal was the boon which he conferred upon mankind when he discovered that the cause of fermentation was the living organism operating in the fermenting substance. We live, so to speak, in a Pasteurized world. After all, Pasteur had but one real maxim, but that will be just as good three hundred years from now as it is to-day—"Il faut travailler." A literary centenary of great interest to the "saving-remnant," but perhaps not to others, will be that of Matthew Arnold (December 21). Arnold was the apostle of sweetness and light," though he did not originate the phrase. He was the great aristocrat of modern letters, in that he pursued the best and nothing else; he worshipped at the altar of the perfect, though he knew his lips could never touch it. As a poet, his words will be remembered longer than those of many greater poets. Incidentally his saving influence in education will be cherished forever. No man of the year is better worthy of centennial honor.

There are lesser figures in the record of the children of 1822—Adelaide Ristori, the greatest actress of her time (January 29); Edmond Goncourt, one of the greatest of French novelists (May 26) who, writing in collaboration with his brother Jules, blazed the path for Zola and the other realists, and whose influence in French literature, though very large, was not always beneficial, since the Goncourt work lacked unity and the sound Latin form; and Sir Henry Maine (August 15), eminent English jurist and historian.

To close the list, we have the nineteenth President of the United States, Rutherford Birchard Hayes (October 1) who, though not a great man, and though his fame is associated in history with the first and only disputed presidential election, and is in the minds of some Americans even to-day believed to be tainted with an electoral fraud, was nevertheless a good and worthy man, and a wise President.

Lord Kitchener Avenged

Everybody remembers the shock that went through the allied countries when news came that Kitchener had gone down to his death in the New Hampshire off the coast of Scotland. The dramatic suddenness of that ending on the night of June 5, 1916, was especially felt in Great Britain, where the minister of war had made conscription possible, increased an army of 160,000 to 5,000,000, and in other ways won for himself the title of "organizer of victory." How the enemy had contrived the blow long remained a matter of speculation. For a time it was unknown whether the explosion resulted from a mine or from a torpedo. Quite recently it has been alleged that Kitchener's proposed trip to Petrograd for conference with the Russian government was betrayed to the Germans by a woman spy, but the story had hardly more than got abroad before it was disproved. The London Times now traces the explosion to its real cause and tells how the perpetrators themselves met the fate which they meted out to Lord Kitchener.

It is thus at last definitely known that the German U-boat 75 laid 13 mines in the western passage from Scapa Flow, that 12 of these were removed by mine-sweepers, and that it was the 13th which sank the vessel on which the minister of war had embarked. What became of the U-boat 75? On May 4, 1917, the British steamer Palmbranch, zigzagging her way with a cargo of munitions toward an inlet on the Murman coast, high up toward the Arctic, sighted a periscope 60 yards distant on the port beam; an instant later surface bubbles told of a torpedo on the way. But the aim had been poor, and the projectile passed below its intended victim. It was now the turn of the Palmbranch to turn a gun on the foe, and as it did so the submarine rose into full view barely 40 yards away. "A flash, a roar," says the eye-witness, "and the Palmbrecht's first shell struck the U-boat at the base of the conning tower just where it joined the deck, and tore great gaps and rents. Two rounds of a small gun sufficed. The submarine rolled slightly; then, taking a heavy list, and tilting on end with stern high out of the water, she sank vertically out of sight. That incident might have been of no more importance than belonged to many other fights with submarines during the war, but this particular U-boat left behind it the means of identification. The lookers-on noticed that as it sank a conical object floated up and remained on the surface. It was assumed to be a telephone buoy, containing a water-tight telephone, such as most of the German submarines carried in order to allow of a submerged crew communicating with the world above. Four weeks after the encounter Lapp fishermen picked up the buoy in a bay to which it had drifted, and within the apparatus was found a large brass plate inscribed with the words in German: "Do not open. Leave telephone buoy lying. Telegraph position immediately to U-boat base, Kiel. Submarine 75 sunk here." The discovery showed that the U-boat men were well prepared in advance for anything that might happen. It also showed that the crew of the Palmbrecht had avenged the tragedy of Kitchener's death.—Ex.

Amundsen on Way to New York. Seattle, Jan. 7.—Roald Amundsen, explorer, is en route to New York, where he will confer with directors of the Carnegie Institute with regard to his scientific work in the polar regions. With him are Cakonita, Little Siberian Eskimo girl, and Camilla Carpenter, daughter of a Siberian trader, whom he will send to Norway to school. The trip is Capt. Amundsen's first away from Seattle since his arrival last July from the Arctic. His ship, the Maud, is lying in Lake Union here, provisioning for a resumption of the voyage in which Capt. Amundsen expects to drift past the north pole in the Arctic ice. A Filipino Boss. The average Filipino conception of independence is well illustrated by a story which was told me in Manila. A provincial political boss, who had been a candidate, but had been overwhelmingly defeated at the polls, burst into his party headquarters, shortly after the results of the election had been announced, livid with rage. "I'm for independence at once! If only these cursed Americans were out of here, 24 come into town with a thousand of my bolo men and wipe out the gang that defeated me and get the governorship. It's all the fault of the damned interfering Americans. They're insisting on law and order! Viva la Independencia!" Now that man, opera bouffe as he may seem, represents the sentiments of a by no means inconsiderable number of Filipino politicians. Such men, in order to attain their selfish ends, would prefer to see the Philippines saddled with the brand of "independence" that Mexico enjoyed under the rule of Carranza, or that Russia is enjoying today under Lenin and Trotsky, to the reign of decency, justice, and security which Lord Cromer gave to the Egyptians. As a matter of fact, the Filipinos are ready as free, under the existing form of government, as the peoples of Canada and South Africa and Australia, and they enjoy what experienced and impartial observers have declared to be the most just, the most honest, and the most advanced government in the world, but to this truth they stubbornly close their eyes, insisting that they must have independence in name as well as in substance.—E. Alexander Powell in HARBOR.

Convicts' Queer Forger

Most Daring Counterfeiting Record.

To students of crime it is remarkable that while forgery as an advanced considerably during the few years, the biggest counterfeiting coup on record is by no means a recent date.

The story of this conspiracy, one of the most amazing in the history of crime, is another illustration of truth is stranger than fiction.

Twenty-two years ago the Treasury Department of the United States threw into a state bordering on the discovery of a number of spurious currency notes, which were so cleverly that experts were pleased deceived by them. Many notes had in fact been returned to the Treasury Department, and it decided to call in the entire issue, which more than 24,000,000 was circulation.

Baiting the Police.

The problem which confronted Secret Service authorities was the finding, among America's 190,000 population, the two or three, possibly half-a-dozen, men responsible for the forgeries.

Secret Service agents started a rumour that the Government was about to establish another espionage department, and skilled experts were invited to apply for the posts. Out of the scores of applicants received those of two Philadelphia men, Wright and Jackson—their names are withheld for the sake of that, having paid the penalty of offence, they are now leading a life—were selected among others being likely to lead to a possible solution of the problem; and the movements of the two men were watched carefully.

They were shadowed to a house, which the detectives suspected they had no proof that Wright and Jackson were the men they sought. The only way to get in was to obtain the lock being of the type known as "individual" and workable on one particular kind of key. It was there would not be more than two in existence.

Precisely how this difficulty was overcome is an interesting story. A case that bristled with difficulties. Wright and Jackson employed an office-boy who was quite unscrupulous in the illegal activities of his master, was his custom to steal rides on steam-wagons and other vehicles, even he found himself in the line of one of these trips by a rough-looking man who explained that he was a scene-shifter in a hurry to the theatre.

"Was I was on the stage?" asked the office-boy.

"Well, why not see the manager?" suggested the scene-shifter. "He might be able to fix you up."

Flood of Spurious Notes. Half an hour later the office-boy, being interviewed by an extremely snappy "manager," who told him of one of a number of gaudy costumes that littered the floor.

Some moments the office-boy had changed his own clothes for the "super" in a flashy revue, and the warehouse had found its way to the "manager's" pocket.

Late that night detectives searched the warehouse, where they found complete engraving outfit, with several bundles of counterfeiting notes. Wright and Jackson were arrested and sent to prison.

But the story does not end here. Months after their arrest spurious notes began to reappear in circulation, and investigations revealed an astounding fact that they were made by the prisoners in the cells of their cells.

The necessary apparatus was covered, had been smuggled into the prison by relatives. Jackson had signed, and an accomplice had small press, and with this outfit these two counterfeiters in prison enough twenty-dollar notes to cause almost as great a panic that into which they were freed. Treasury when they were freed.

FOREWORD.

Probably very few appreciate the difficulties which face any one attempting to conduct a sporting column in a Newfoundland paper. To the local copy to keep the column daily is an impossible task. This can only appear occasionally to be able to make a regular feature of this column, but will only be feasible if I receive support, in the way of contributions and suggestions, of the sporting men. In the words of Councillor "Nix", I thank you.

MOTHER!

Clean Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to cleanse the liver and bowels.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

Intercollegiate hockey promises to be very interesting this year, and last year's champions will be compelled to look to their laurels, for there seems every prospect of their having to surrender them to either the Methodist College or Bishop Field teams.

MOTHER!

Clean Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to cleanse the liver and bowels.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

Intercollegiate hockey promises to be very interesting this year, and last year's champions will be compelled to look to their laurels, for there seems every prospect of their having to surrender them to either the Methodist College or Bishop Field teams.

A Reminder!

RECITAL AT COLLEGE HALL TOMORROW.

We would call the attention of our readers to the Piano and Violin Recital which is being given at the Methodist College Hall to-morrow evening by one of the most talented of local artists, Miss Theresa M. Power. This talented Newfoundland young lady only returned from the United States last Spring where she was successful in graduating from the Chicago College of Music. Previous to her departure Miss Power had already secured the coveted Associate of the Trinity College, London. During the war period here and at charity entertainments Miss Power's kindly services were too well known by the musicloving public to cause us to elaborate on the valued aid she gave to them, and how much her efforts were appreciated by those intimately connected therewith. Mere common courtesy would compel us to show our appreciation now by returning in some tangible measure the good that Miss Power has done, and no appreciation could be more marked than the large and representative gathering which will undoubtedly be present at the College Hall to-morrow night. Miss Power is very fortunate in having assisting her such artists as:—Mrs. Fraser King; Misses Mary Ryan, Kitty Fraser, and Hilda Krentzlin; Messrs. Fred J. King, T. H. O'Neill, Gordon Christain, and Karl Trapnell.

WANT.
It's wanting keeps you young and fit. It's wanting something just ahead. And striving hard to come to it shortly. That brightens every road we tread.

That man is old before his time Who is supremely satisfied. And does not want some hill to climb Or something life has still denied.

The want of poverty is grim. It has a harsh and cruel sting. But fill the cup up to the brim. And that's a far more hopeless thing.

A man must from day to day. Must want to reach a distant goal Or claim some treasure far away. For want's the builder of the soul.

He who has ceased to want, has dropped. The working tools of life and stands Much like an old-time clock that's stopped. While Time is mouldering his hands.

I'm truly sorry for the man, Though he be millionaire or king, Who does not hold some cherished plan. And says he does not want a thing.

Want is the spur that drives us on. And oft its praises should be sung. For man is old when want is gone. It's what we want that keeps us young.

HIS DIARY.
January 17th.—News comes to me of a great cabal of unemployed that was held yesterday, and how they will attack Water Street, if there be no work found for them. But the committee about unemployment finds labour for 500 of them, and so all quiet. I to lunch with the Rotarians, to my great content, and sitting by Mr. E. G. Winter, we to have discourse of things:—talking to air coaches, Rev. E. C. Earr, to speak, and a mighty fine address. So to walk with my wife and our discourse of the difficulties of this life, and how we are to make both ends to meet. And with the present frost, and the price of coals, this is indeed like to be a hard winter in divers ways.

Outport Operators and Their Traducers.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—In two recent issues I have noticed complaints of the Postal Telegraph service at Catalina. The first was a complaint of the failure to report movements of steamers. It is a significant fact that neither the Operator nor the Hon. Minister of Posts have received any complaint in reference to the above matter. I happen to know positively the operator has not, and if the Minister did the delinquent would know it all too soon. The only complaint is one by a person who has not the decency to use his own name, one who works behind your back and in the dark. So much for that writer.
For the information of those interested I may say that at times it is impossible to report steamers. The Bay boats have many ports of call which are not Telegraph offices, and if a steamer happens to be delayed at one of these ports the only thing an operator can say is: "Sorry, no report." For this, he or she is subjected to attack in the daily papers by anonymous writers. Let the person enquiring for steamers be told the line is busy with "rush" messages and he is aggrieved; let him hand in a message and—oh, gee—clear the way—the Empire is at stake. The second complaint was concerning the privacy of offices. Again, the only complaint is an anonymous letter in the Press.

MAURICE DALY.
On Jan. 9th, an old and respected resident of St. Joseph's, Salmonier, in the person of Maurice Daly, passed to his eternal reward. He had long and useful life, and had reached the advanced age of 81 years. He was a most industrious and successful planter, as well as a shipbuilder, and many fine schooners did he build and launch. He was an exemplary character, possessing many sterling qualities with great determination of will. The younger generation were often guided by his sound advice, and many tales of the olden times did Uncle Maurice, as he was familiarly called, relate to them. His peaceful death, surrounded by his devoted family, and strengthened by the Rites of Holy Church, was a fitting conclusion to such a life. His burial took place on the morning of the 11th, presided by Requiem Mass, at which were present the members of the Holy Name Society, of which he was the oldest member. He leaves to mourn him four sons, Denis, Alexander, Peter, Maurice, and one daughter, Mrs. Thos. Kelly of Argentina. To these, and to his other relatives we tender our sincere sympathy.—Com. St. Joseph's, Jan. 14th, 1922.

Britain Not Interested.

Sir John Cadman, former head of the Petroleum Department of the British Government, declared in an address in Chicago at the annual banquet of the American Petroleum Institute that he was unalterably opposed to Government control of business and took pains to clarify impressions of British activity in the oil industry.
He denied British Government interests in the Royal-Dutch-Shell group and flatly asserted that the control and management of these properties was held by Dutch interests.
He said that the British Government's stock control interest in the Anglo-Persian Oil Company was acquired by the British treasury as security for a long term fuel contract made by the British Admiralty.
Regarding Mesopotamia, he asserted the ownership of oil deposits will be assured to the Arab State as a part of the administrative arrangements under the peace treaty and the mandate. He asserted, however, that due consideration will have to be given to rights secured before the war.
The renowned Baku oil fields in Russia, he said, were fast going to rack and ruin under the present form of government. "The supreme industrial search of to-day is for cheap power and the ramifications of the oil industry, in this regard, are practically without end, he said.

Fish Regulations and Exporters.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—In reading Advocate 31st Dec. I notice its Editorial commenting on the great work the Government has done the past year and its only regret is the outstanding mistake that was made in 1921 was the lifting of the fish regulations forced on the Government by the Opposition. To my mind Mr. Editor, the one thing only that was done to save the country from complete disaster was the lifting of those foolish regulations forced upon exporters by the Government benefiting two or three of the promoters of it and the ruination of all others. Six months while it was in force thousands of qtls. were laying up in stores and not allowed to go forward and thousands in vessels depreciating in value every week, both in home ports and at Oporto resulting in thousands of qtls. being destroyed and exporters barely received what the freight cost them, and one cargo alone of 4,200 qtls. which up to date of writing there has never been a cent paid for it. All this was brought on by the Govt. experimenting on other people's money—savings of a life time, through continuous work and hard labor. To my mind far better for the Govt. to attend entirely to matters for the benefit of the Colony, outside of interfering with the exporters of codfish, who have been in the business for half a century, and are all practical men, and want to get all and every dollar they can for their own good. Supply and demand always did govern, and always will. The comparison the Advocate makes with the flour man is quite different. If we were the only country producing codfish, we could say as well as the Canadian farmers give us $10.00 for our unit of production, knowing we have to have it. Not so with codfish. What we have many other countries have. If we say "give us 70¢ for our fish; won't sell less," then we get back to just where the regulations brought us. Norwegians sold their fish for 60¢; we wanted 70¢; result was Norwegian cleared up at 60¢ for theirs and ours perished in stores and vessels, and at last we had to take anything, owing to its being inferior stuff.
Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor.
Yours truly,

Wonderful Burmese Ponies.

During his visit to the East the Prince of Wales is to call at Burma, when, among other events arranged for his entertainment, will be a race between Burma ponies, writes a well-known English horseman.
In appearance the Burma pony resembles a miniature war horse. It is rarely over 14 hands high—more often 11 to 12—but in its proportions is well "up to weight." It is a common sight to see a stalwart Englishman of more than six feet height tearing along the dusty roads on what, in comparison with its rider, appears to be a child's pony. The rider's feet, when out of the stirrups act as brakes on the ground.
I have seen one of these sturdy little plumes carry a heavy man of the type described above 30 miles a day over rough, unbroken "construction" country, and at the end of the journey it was the rider who was stiff and sore, while his game little mount was apparently as fresh as when it started.
The favourite pace of a Burma pony is a fascinating gait called the "amble." It is a cross between a run and a canter, and by its means the animal covers the ground at an extraordinary pace.
To the writer it is extremely comfortable, and even a novice feels at home in the saddle. It is like sitting and yet being borne swiftly and smoothly along. No rising, not even much "gripping," is required.
The Burmese ride their mounts with the most weird harness. The reins is a bamboo bright green wool. The saddle consists of a piece of wood raised in front and behind, and also covered with brilliant green stuff. The stirrup and leather are a happy combination in the form of a long loop, through which the rider sticks his big toe!

The favourite color for a pony is a dun with black points, and the dun proper has a broad black stripe running down the backbone from next to tail.
During the Boer war hundreds of these ponies were sent to South Africa as they were found invaluable for the rough country. They can climb like goats and seem untirable.
They feed almost entirely on paddy.

Stafford's COD LIVER OIL Compound TONIC and TISSUE BUILDER

This combination possesses the curative properties of cod liver oil without any of the latter's disagreeable features, as well as the medicinal virtues of the other standard remedies that enter into its composition. It is palatable, effective, and does not, even in the most delicate, produce stomach disturbances and other bad after-effects that are such a drawback to the best action of cod liver oil in its crude state and many other disagreeable medicines.

—a crop grown extensively throughout the whole of Burma.
As polo ponies they excel, being most intelligent and as quick as lightning in turning and manoeuvring. They are used in all the "up-country" games, and any outsider may have a mount for the moderate fee of 8 annas (about 15 cents) per chukker. This puts polo within reach of the most impecunious subaltern, whereas in India, as in England, polo can be played only by the lucky few who can afford their own ponies.
On Saturday, however, the man did not appear, but Mr. Johnnies still suspected nothing. His failure to appear, dated the West Sixty-eight street stall, lieve, was because he had been held at nearby vantage points by the movements of customers' clerks going in and out of the studying his problem.
The detectives say he conducted readily that the time interval between the opening of the store and the arrival of Mr. Johnnies' clerk the psychological moment.
The gentleman's entrance was impressive, according to the police. He approached taking off his gloves. He hooked his stick arm. He unbuckled his coat, and a suit of expensive fabric, announced that he had called for jewels. He had.

Jeweller Victim of Crook

Wearing a smart black overcoat, his fingers and shirt front gleaming with diamonds valued at more than $1,000, a young man entered the jewellery store of Michael Johnnies at 2202 Broadway, near Seventy-eight street, New York, and poked a revolver at the head of the proprietor.
"This is a matter of business," he said without emotion. "Make no outcry for two moments and it will be much better for you. Please hand me those jewels."
Mr. Johnnies did—$5,000 worth which he held in a tray. The gentleman said "Thank you," repeated his warning and walked out. When Mr. Johnnies composed himself, found a revolver, and went into Broadway, the polished stranger was nowhere in sight.
The shrewd crook, according to the jeweller, had arranged his call exceedingly well. He had gone to the store on Friday to ask about jewels valued at $2,000. There were four unset diamonds and a lavalliere which he said he would take. He deposited $100 with Mr. Johnnies, saying he would call with the remainder on the following Saturday. He explained he

Side Talks

IT ISN'T FAIR BUT IT'S LIFE.
she is going to find are like that—they aren't."
I suppose you see now why I thought of this letter which said nothing about why more is written as to the wife keeping her husband's love—and yet so much.

Some of Them Do It.
Men ought to make just as much effort to keep their wives loving them, but the world is so constituted socially and economically that most of them don't have to.
Love ought not, for the sake of justice and balance, to mean more in a woman's life than it does in a man's. But as the world is constituted it does (I speak, of course, of the average case).
"The world is man's heart but a woman's heart is her world." I quote from memory and under correction, but you get the idea.
It has been often said that the happiest marriages are those where the men care the most. Why? Because women are apt to care too much, and that way makes sure that there shall be a better balance.
There May Come a Change.
It may be that as the years go by and women's lives are enriched by freedom from the more mechanical of domestic duties and her growing shares in the activities outside the home, the balance may become more even. I hope so. But I do not think the change will come in a hurry.

In the meantime, things are as they are and the best way to get happiness out of them is to face them and then make up your mind either to make your husband's love a less vital part of your life or to be willing to put yourself out to retain it.

SAFETY WEEK.
Our village had a "safety Week" when autos slowly ran, and victims were not heard to shriek—it was a splendid plan; all over town a gent must seek to find a mangled m. a. With windshields labeled "Safety First," our trusty horns we blew, and curbed all wild desires to burst such speed laws as we knew; and no pedestrians were heard until the week was through. The smiling voter went his ways and had no broken spine; no accident in seven days! A record truly fine; and rival towns, in stark amazement, beheld that record shine. But when the Safety Week was done the boys stepped on the gas; so swiftly did the motors run they burned up all the grass; as shot from some Big Bertha gun, we saw the autos pass. Our Safety Week had strained the nerves of speed fiends and their kin; a stretch of virtue often serves to start a stretch of sin; and cars went whooping round the curves, fine cars, and cars of tin. The coroner, on nimble feet, went questing here and there; he found a wreck in every street, and dead men everywhere; before his labors were complete he went and tore his hair. And while he left briny leak, he said, "My job's a frost; it's had enough when people seek the speed tops to exhaust, but when we've had a Safety Week, my landmarks are lost."

Commercial Travellers
ANNUAL MEETING.
The Commercial Travellers' Association held their annual meeting in the Board of Trade Rooms last night. The various reports of the year showed the Association to be in a flourishing condition. A special feature being the continued growth of the mortality fund. The meeting decided to hold their annual reunion and dinner at an early date, and a Committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements. The election of officers resulted as follows:
President—R. G. Ross.
Vice-President—C. McNulty.
Sec.-Treasurer—A. E. Chown.
Board of Management—Messrs. S. Elliott, Thos. W. Sparks and C. C. Stranger.
After the usual votes of thanks had been passed the meeting adjourned with the National Anthem.

Princess Mary's Marriage Lines.
HOW THE ROYAL LICENCE IS BEING WHITTEN.
The love romance of Princess Mary is linked up with a certain old-world office under the shadow of St. Paul's, upon which largely depends the completion of the ceremonies regarding the forthcoming Royal marriage.
Here, in the quaint Faculty Office of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the special licence sanctioning the marriage is being prepared. And the man who is doing it has been a party to more than one love story of Buckingham Palace.
There is old-world romance attached to the procedure of preparing the licence. Mr. Bull, the chief clerk, to whom the task has been entrusted, is spending many days over it. He is using nothing but quill pens. He has by his side no fewer than twenty turkey quills, which he uses in preference to those of the goose because they are stiffer.
Written With Quills.
As a matter of fact, Mr. Bull, during the fifty years he has spent in the office, has rarely used anything but quills, and when he drew up, among others, the licences for the King and Queen, Prince Arthur of Connaught, and Princess Patricia, he prepared them with the same great care, with special lasting ink and his array of old-fashioned pens.

The Royal licence, which differs in certain respects from an ordinary licence, is being drawn up on a large parchment nearly a yard square, and the lettering is being done in the old English style, lines drawn in red ink relieving the monotony.
The parchment must be of strong quality, or at least strong enough to support the heavy seal, which will hang below when the document is completed.
The terms of the licence which Mr. Bull is penning so carefully begin—
"Randall Thomas, by Divine Providence Archbishop, Primate of All England and Metropolitan, by the authority of Parliament lawfully empowered for the purpose herein written . . . Whereas it is alleged ye have proposed to proceed to the solemnization of a true, pure and lawful marriage . . .
It is a difficult task. Each letter has to be carefully drawn by hand, different pens being used for thick and thin outlines, and even a slight mistake might necessitate the work being started all over again.
The task has been left in capable hands. It is said that Mr. Bull is the only man in the country who can do the engrossed handwriting for such a document. And his long experience has made him a past-master of the craft.
End of an Old Custom.
These "lines" for Princess Mary will be the last he will write, for in future all licences are to be printed.

Before 1772 there was no necessity for a Royal marriage licence, but for the purpose of regulating the unions of the Royal Family the Royal Marriage Act was passed.
This enacts that "no descendant of his late Majesty (George II), other than the issue of Princes married or who may marry into foreign families, shall be capable of contracting matrimony without the previous consent of His Majesty, His heirs and successors, signified under the Great Seal."
Where the consent of the King has not been obtained, it is possible for a member of the Royal Family to marry after the age of twenty-five provided the sanction of both Houses of Parliament has been obtained. This procedure entails a wait of at least twelve months.
The Act of 1772 dispensed with the usual necessity of swearing affidavits and the personal application of one of the parties concerned, so that a warrant addressing to the Archbishop ordering the issue of a special licence and the Archbishop's fat to issue the licence were all that were necessary to start Mr. Bull off with his quills.
A Precious Document.
Considering the time and care spent over the licence, £50 seems quite a reasonable price, especially when it is remembered that the finely engraved parchment will be an historical document of great value, and as such will be preserved among the other State papers.
The Faculty Office, where the licence is being drawn up, is an old-fashioned three-roomed office, whose history is lost in the dim mists of the past. It is the only office of its kind in the country, and Mr. A. W. D. Moore, the Registrar, believes that for the past hundred years at any rate it has been used for the same purpose.
The first Faculty Office, established after the Reformation, was also situated in Doctors' Commons, so that if this is not the site of the original premises they must have been situated very close at hand.
The ancient office is a romance in itself. The quill pens in the ink-pots, the gas light, and the kindly-faced chief clerk might easily have stepped out of the pages of Dickens. And the dim light of the interior seems to breathe the fragrant atmosphere of love stories of the far distant past.—
