Lady Wyverne's Daughter.

CHAPTER III.

"To my nephew, Philip Lynne, who succeeds me, and who by right of entail inherits Lynneville, I give and bequeath the exact half of my fortune, the sum of two hundred thousand pounds, on one condition, which is, that within the next two years he shall marry one of my daughters, Thes or Agatha Lynne. To my daughter I leave the sum of one hundred thousand pounds each."

"If my nephew does not comply with this condition, I leave to my daughters the sum of two hundred thousand pounds each, the whole of the fortune I received from my late wife being thus equally divided between them."

Four executors were appointed, and with the usual formalities the will closed.

"A very just and equitable will," remarked Sir Harry Leigh, as Mr. Gregson folded up the parchment; "this condition, to my mind, being a remarkable pleasant one."

Lord Lynne made no remark. Of all possible contingencies, he had least expected this. He had thought it very probable that his uncle might not leave him any money at all, but that this enormous sum should be his on so strange a condition bewildered him. To his honor be it recorded that he did not make up his mind then and there that the money should be his. More than that, if he had spoken those few words which he intended to speak to Florence Wyverne, he would have at once made known his engagement, and there would have been no further question about the money. But he had not done so; he was a free man; and several times during the last few days it had crossed his mind that he had been too hasty in thinking he loved Lord Wyverne's daughter. She was gifted with a strange, winning beauty; her charming, half-wild, half-childish manner had fascinated him. Had he remained with her much longer he would have asked her to be his wife. But when the charm was at its height, he was separated from her; and when he came to reflect upon the last few days, he was surprised and half-shocked to find how small was the share she had in his thoughts and plans.

The solicitor bade him "good-morning." Sir Harry Leigh, and the others who had assembled to hear the reading of the will, left him; and Lord Lynne sat alone by the fire in the large library thinking very anxiously of the future that lay before him.

CHAPTER III.

Every family has its skeleton, its strange incidents, its romantic story, its secrets that the world faintly guesses but never knows. The Lynnes of Lynneville had a romance, but it had not been hidden—it had been partly forgotten; that romance, was the marriage of Stephen Lord Lynne to the beautiful Andalusian whose life had ended so suddenly. No one knew much about it; the English papers had announced it; but no one ever saw the fair and ill-fated Lady Lynne.

The only thing known of her was that she was the daughter of a widow lady, who was inconsolable at her death, and who begged from Lord Lynne permission to keep the little child. He gladly consented; some said because he did not like to see the little Inez, as she reminded him of his lost wife; be that as it may, certain it was that he made no effort to see her. An English governess was provided for her; so that she was brought up not only with a thorough knowledge of the English language, but also of English polite literature. A sum of money was paid annually to the Senora Monteleone, and twice every year the father received a letter giving him all details of the child's health and progress. He was satisfied to have things as they were; he knew the child was well and happier than she would be in his house, where another Lady Lynne lived and ruled. He had formed fresh ties, and that one early romance of his life was nearly forgotten. But there were times when the remembrance of sunny Spain, her myrtles, orange-groves, and olives, her dark-eyed daughters and chivalrous sons, came upon him—that one year of wedded life, when the warm love, the deep devotion, the almost adoration of the beautiful Spaniard had been his own. His English wife's calm, quiet affection paled before it; there was no romance about that gentle lady, whose vast wealth had been so great an acquisition to the Lynnes of Lynneville.

Lord Lynne looked back upon that past as upon a beautiful poem that he had read in his early youth. He shrank selfishly from inflicting pain upon himself. He knew, for they had told him, that his daughter resembled her lost mother. She had the same dark, passionate, beautiful face; the same wondrous southern eyes and hair. He did not wish to be obliged to suffer the old pain of that loss over again. So he allowed his eldest child to grow up in a foreign land, under another's care. In his own heart he wished that she would marry and settle there. He intended to endow her most liberally; but one day there came a message from that far-off home, saying that the Senora Monteleone was dying, and Inez must be sent for. Then Lord Lynne sent a trustworthy agent to bring his unknown daughter home. Lady Lynne was dead, and his younger child, Agatha, was only too pleased to have her sister with her. They were prepared to see a pretty girl; but nothing like this dark-eyed Andalusian had ever been seen at Lynneville. No mere words can do justice to that wondrous beauty—to the proud, dreamy eyes, in whose liquid depths there lay a world of beauty and of love—to the rich, rippling hair, black as night, yet soft and shining as the wing of a bird—the graceful figure, so perfectly molded, the dainty, white jeweled hands, the rare mixture of languid ease and dignity. Yet what made her the most wonderful, was the passion and genius that seemed to emanate from her. Every one who saw her felt instinctively that she was capable of great things—either great evil or great good. There was no mediocrity in Inez Lynne.

When once the old lord had recovered from the first effect of seeing her, he could never rest out of her sight. He did all that was possible in order to atone for his indifference and neglect. He lavished jewels and money upon her; and when he made the curious will, that some people thought a just one, he secretly hoped that his beautiful Inez would be Lady Lynne.

"She is so dazzling, so new, so piquant, so unlike other girls," he thought, "that Philip will be sure to fall in love with her, and then my darling will be mistress of Lynneville."

Inez, on her part, did not evince any very great affection either for her father or sister. Her heart was sore from her long neglect; she could not forget all at once that for many a long year she had been kept away from her rightful home, deprived of her share in the grandeur and magnificence of the Lynnes. She had not even been known by her rightful name. No one had ever called her Inez Lynne. In her grandmother's house she had always been addressed as the Senorita Monteleone. When she thought over these things, Inez did not feel any great affection for the father who had neglected her, or the sister who had taken her place. She was quiet and passive, rarely making any remark, when Lord Lynne crossed her and loaded her with presents; her beautiful passionate face never lighted up for him as it could light up for one she loved.

When Agatha Lynne grew more accustomed to the presence of her sister, she wondered much why she made no mention of that past life. She never alluded to her home in Andalusia. She never talked of love and lovers, as young girls do; she had no story to tell of sweet words whispered under the shade of the myrtle; no story, no love secrets; and yet she was beautiful as a houri, and only twenty-two.

Agatha had related all her life's history; it was not an eventful one. She had had lovers, but none that she cared much for. She liked Philip Lynne best in the world, next to her father. She blushed as she told how Allan Leigh, Sir Harry Leigh's son, had sent her a valentine, and Captain Hope had written some verses to her. All these little secrets, sweet, simple Agatha had confided to her sister; but there was no confidence given in return. Inez listened with a far-off, dreamy look in her beautiful face, but she said no word of herself. She had nothing to tell in return.

"Did no one ever love you, Inez?" asked her sister, gazing at her in wonder. "You are so beautiful. I should have thought you would have many lovers."

"The fairy prince will come some day," said Inez, half impatiently. "Love and lovers have so great attraction for me."

Then again simple, sweet Agatha wondered. So beautiful, so young, and not even to care about love—never to have had a lover! She could not help thinking that there was something incomprehensible in this mystery.

Twenty-two, and never to have had a lover.

It was the morning after Lord Lynne's funeral. No one knew how the sisters had received the news of their father's strange will; but Mr. Gregson had been with them, for more than an hour, and then he left them with a smile on his face.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

GRANDMA. I know what makes a Grandma—grand always has a treat. A cookie or a piece of cake—something to eat. And when we go to visit her, she gets the good things out. And we don't have to ask for them. They are all there. You'll make them, if I know you will. To-night we'll walk the floor.

A Grandma never punishes her grand-children. She always takes us on her knee and tells us she is glad to have us racing round the house, and when we get too smart. And she always says, "You are all so good, she always takes our part. And once when I had told a lie. And had to go to bed. Without my tea. She came to me. And brought me jam and bread."

Ma says it's funny Grandma acts the way she does to-day. When she was Grandma's little girl she couldn't disobey. Or only eat the things she liked and get the stomach ache. Or pick the chocolate frosting off an' never touch the cake. When she was bad. She always had the punishment to bear. But we can be much worse than she. An' Grandma doesn't care.

Pa says that Grandma's are alike. Their job of training's done. They don't like to see a child come along and spoil the children's fun. They love to see the youngsters eat, an' though it isn't right they never have to walk the floor or stay up all the night. An' children know the times they go to Grandma's house to play. Though bad they are. Their Ma and Pa. Can't have a word to say.

Choosing Your Cue.

How many billiard players realize the importance of always playing with the same cue?

No two cues are exactly alike, and in order to get a good touch, which either enables a player to leave the balls in the position he wishes, it is essential to use a cue to the weight and balance of which you are thoroughly accustomed.

You may have some special ideas of your own in regard to the weight of a cue, but if you are like the majority of amateurs, you will approach the selection of a new cue with an entirely open mind.

Most people find that 15½ oz. is the most suitable weight, while one heavier than 16oz., or lighter than 14½oz. may be considered a "freak." It is true that one or two of the leading professionals use "freak" cues, but these are generally quite unsuited to the amateur player.

Having decided on the weight of cue you desire, the next thing to look for is grain. In a perfect cue the grain should be straight and regular, and should run longitudinally up the shaft. Good grain gives more drive, and enables clean, crisp striking.

But the most important feature of all is to ensure that your cue is properly balanced. If the balance is correct, it should be possible, by placing your first finger just above the end of the butt splicing (about the spot where the weight is stamped), to make it balance, as a pair of true scales balances on its fulcrum.

All the best English cues are hand finished. That is to say, the shafts are roughly turned on a lathe, and then they are "trued up" by hand and the butts are spliced on by expert craftsmen.

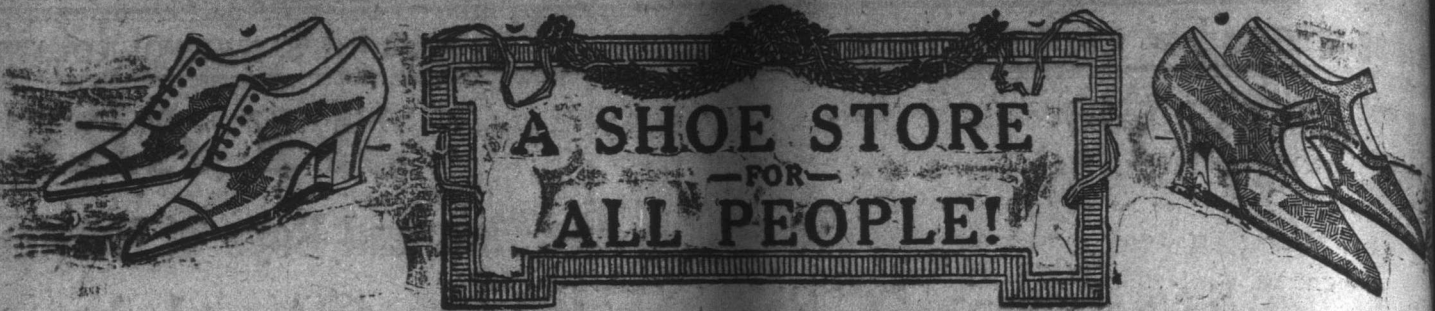

The shaft should run the whole length of the cue, the butt-end being cut square. On to the square end the butt, which is made of ebony or some coloured wood, is carefully applied in four separate strips, and then glued into position and planed smooth.

The difference in the weighing of the cue is not due to any alteration in the design of the shaft but is obtained by making variations in the butt. In fact, cues are made heavier by boring small holes in the butt-ends and inserting pieces of lead.

THE REEFING CROWD.

I walk along the village street, for ever more I rubber; and so much misery I meet I often sigh and blubber. We hear so much of Sunny Jim's you'd think we'd meet them daily, and see them prance on buoyant limbs to scatter sunshine gayly. But nearly all the chaps I know are specialists in sorrow, in their desire to corner we they'll kidnap grief or borrow. "Good day," I cry to Quentin Quack; "you're looking blithe and speedy." "I have a green pain in my back," he says, "and I feel seedy." "Ode hods," I say to Widow Frisk; "I hope you're stacking proper." "Oh, some one stole my Airedale pig, and now I hunt a copper." And when

Persons Killed in Rail- way Collision at Camasi.

Chinese Bandits Carry Off 150 Passengers
Passengers and Crew of Kyle Walk
13 Miles Over Ice to North Sydney.

CAPTURED BY BANDITS.

PEKING, May 6. A Chinese bandit party killed one foreigner and took off one hundred and fifty passengers on the Tientsin-Pukow railway today. Miss Aldrich of New York, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, and daughter of former U.S. Senator Nelson W. Aldrich were among the passengers, but the names of the others are unknown.

LED ASHORE FROM KYLE.

NORTH SYDNEY, May 6. A party of thirteen men, including the captain and crew of the Kyle, were landed on the shore of Sydney Harbor, twelve miles from the Tientsin-Pukow railway today. The Kyle is stuck in very heavy ice about eight miles off the shore and has abandoned her attempt to reach North Sydney. ### TWENTY-FIVE KILLED IN RAIL- WAY COLLISION.

HAVANA, May 6. Twenty-five persons are reported killed and more than fifty injured in a head-on collision between Hersey Electric Railway trains near Camasi, Province of Matanzas, to-day.

SHOULD BE SENT TO RUSSIA.

SYDNEY, May 6. "I hope to see the day when the Union Jack will be dragged in the mud and the Red flag will be flowing in Canada as the standard of freedom for the workers," declared Malcolm Bruce, of Toronto, addressing a mass meeting which jammed the Savoy Theatre of Glace Bay today. The statement was greeted with applause. The only thing worth while that came out of the last war was Russia, he said.

THE REPARATIONS QUESTION AGAIN.

PARIS, May 6. Indications of an apparent feeling in London that Great Britain would like to re-enter the Reparations negotiations alongside of France and the other Allies, are received with great interest in French official and political circles; but the general opinion is that the time is not ripe for the resumption of negotiations unless the British Government had experienced a change of heart and was ready to approve the Franco-Belgian occupation of Ruhr.

THE COLOR QUESTION RAISED.

LONDON, May 6. Within the next few weeks a decision of prime importance to the whole British Empire will be taken here on the eternal color question. At present the situation applies more directly to the Crown Colony of Kenya, where Indian residents are claiming equal rights with the white settler and unrestricted admission; but no secret is made of the fact that in the event of the claim being granted similar questions will be raised with regard to Indians in all parts of the Empire.

CLUTHA'S CREW AT HALIFAX.

HALIFAX, May 6. Captain A. Burke and six others of the Newfoundland barquentine Clutha abandoned April 17th in a sinking condition three hundred miles off Cape Race, arrived here on the White Star liner Pittsburgh, to-day, from Southampton. They were taken on the vessel by the Newfoundland tern schooner Jean Campbell, also bound from St. John's for Brazil, and transferred from her three days later to the Royal Mail Steam Packet steamer Orduña. The Clutha was caught in the ice shortly after leaving St. John's and sprung a leak. Others of the Clutha besides Captain Burke were F. Foler, mate; Jas. Haynes, T. Mahoney, Jerry O'Toole, James Pike, Reuben Tizzard.

SEARCHING FOR DAVID'S TOMB.

LONDON, May 6. The recent announcement that excavations were to be made at Jerusalem in search of David's Tomb aroused anxiety in some religious circles as it was feared the work would devastate sacred sites, but the British Colonial Department has issued a reassuring statement. The actual location of the ancient "City of David" was not on the spot mentioned by tradition. Archaeologists long ago established, the statement says, that the city stood on a little triangular square of ground called Mount Ophel, south of the present Jerusalem.

RANEY WILL NOT RUN.

TORONTO, May 6. Hon. W. E. Raney, Attorney General of Ontario, will not be a candidate in the forthcoming elections. Mr. Raney was formerly a Liberal, but was elected by the Ontario Conservative Government after he received the Attorney Generalship in the United Farmer-Labor Government.

DAYLIGHT SAVING IN HALIFAX.

A Double Programme at the Nickel To-Day.

BILL INCLUDES HERBERT RAW-
LINGTON AND MABEL NORMAND.

To-day's bill at the Nickel is a double feature programme consisting of two big feature attractions, "The Slim Princess" with Mabel Normand and "You Find It Everywhere," featuring Herbert Rawlington and Catherine Calvert.

Something out of the ordinary, more like an extravaganza of the mythical kingdom type than anything else, "The Slim Princess" contains original ideas, is a burlesque on the "got thin" mania, and affords sprightly Mabel the opportunities she enjoys. The story is from the pen of the noted American writer, George Ade and this angle alone is sufficient guarantee of an excellent entertainment. The other picture, "You Find It Everywhere," is a melodrama from the Saturday Evening Post story, "The Gibson Upright" by Booth Tarkington. Miss Gladys Redstone commences her second successful week with to-night's performance, for which she has selected two very popular songs.

Very shortly the Nickel will show D. W. Griffith's big photoplay entitled "The Greatest Question." Definite announcement will be made in a few days.

Quebec is Rich in Water Power.

The paramount importance of the water-powers, many of them still undeveloped, and the wisdom of the policy adopted by the Provincial Government in its handling of these water-powers were set forth at length by Hon. Honore Mercier, Provincial Minister of Lands and Forests, addressing the Canadian Club.

The speaker estimated the water power available to Quebec province at approximately fifteen million horse-power, and, of this, nearly fourteen million was still undeveloped. The million horse power already developed, he calculated, was equal to the annual burning of 8,000,000 tons of coal, or a cash value of $80,000,000, at a conservative estimate.

Replaces Fuel. But for these eighty million dollars worth of white coal, it would have been impossible to find the necessary fuel to produce the power for the many vast industries in the cities, towns and outlying manufacturing districts of the province during the fuel shortage of the past winter. The industrial development of the province had kept pace with the development of its water power.

The original practice of the Provincial Government had been to sell riparian rights, including water powers, to private individuals and corporations at very cheap rates, in order to encourage the establishment of industries, and, through this, a good many water powers had passed into private hands. The Government, however, had come to realize the value of its water powers, and had taken steps to gain control over all its water powers, only selling them under conditions which prevented abuse. For instance, the Shawinigan Falls water powers were sold for $60,000 on condition that $3,000,000 were to be spent on their development in a few years.

Since 1909 they had made no more sales of water powers, but leased them for periods of 99 years, with full control and practically ownership of the property vested in the lessor, but with the provision that at the end of 99 years the ownership reverted back to the Province.

In this way industrial development was encouraged, and yet the public never lost their proprietorship and control of their public wealth. The speaker mentioned various water powers which, in recent years, had been leased out on these terms.

Women Who Lived as Men.

There are many women who have rebelled against femininity, donned men's clothes, and followed masculine callings with success. In some of the recorded cases the motive for masquerading as men is the desire to earn a man's wages. Love for a man, and the wish to be with him constantly and to share his work and amusements, is sometimes the sole reason for a woman desiring to adopt men's clothes and habits.

In most countries, even women have served in the ranks as men in order to accompany husbands or relatives to the field of battle. A passion for adventure urged the daughter of Colley Cibber, the dramatist, to spend a great part of her life dressed as a man. Mary Frith, known as Moll Cutpurse, had "a natural abhorrence to the tending of children," and wore men's clothing and adopted masculine habits.

Lucy Ann Slater was a woman of manly appearance who called herself the "Rev. Joseph Lobdell." She married when young, but soon left her husband. During her career this woman lived as a trapper among the American Indians, and was famous for her skill with the rifle.

A woman supposed to be a man began life as a farm lad, and afterwards worked for many years as a labourer in Belfast Harbour under the name of "John Coulter." Her secret was not disclosed until her death through injuries caused by falling downstairs at the age of fifty.

Rosa Bonheur, the great animal painter, "felt herself to be a boy," and began to wear men's garments in her girlhood.

One of the most celebrated men-women was Charlotte Sarolta, a Hungarian authoress, who wrote under the name of "Count Sándor V."

This remarkable adventuress was the daughter of an ancient noble family. Until the age of twelve she dressed like a boy, but upon being sent to a boarding-school she put on womanly attire.

For ten years Sarolta lived as a man. She was a lover of all manly sports, an excellent fencer, and fond of carousing with men companions who believed her to be a man. To maintain her disguise she used to shave her face when staying at hotels.

For Clean Government.

ST. JOHN'S DOES ITS DUTY.

The electors of St. John's in turning down five out of the six Government candidates, have shown by the ballot box their disapproval of the manner in which the affairs of the State have been conducted during the past three and a half years. Pussyfoot propaganda and money scattered just as if it fell out of the sky like rain, did not induce the people to forsake their independence. The contest in St. John's West, perhaps the hottest ever fought there, brought a triumph to Sir Michael Cashin and his colleagues, Mr. Linegar and Mr. Hunt. Whilst Mr. Linegar, the Labor candidate, was not elected, the vote recorded in his favor is one that he may well feel proud of. In the case of Sir Michael Cashin his triumph redounds to the good sense of the people of the district who would not be swayed by appeals to passion. To Mr. Charles Hunt goes the proud distinction of not alone heading the poll, but of beating the highest vote ever polled by Sir Edward Morris. It was Mr. Hunt's first political fight and the result was a fair index of the pulse of the electorate. In the East End, the election was fought in a more open manner, and the defeat of the Government candidates was more pronounced. This was possible because the sectarian issue raised by the entrance of an independent candidate showed clearly at the outset its purpose. The move failed and St. John's has registered its protest against the Squires-Coaker Government, and there is no doubt that the rest of the country so far heard from would have been as pronounced had it the opportunity of fairly viewing the Government's record of the past three and a half years.

British Politics.

That the Budget speech made recently in the House of Commons by Stanley Baldwin places him one step nearer the premiership of Britain is admitted by the newspapers of England in general. The speech was greeted by the press and big financial men as being a very sound and reasonable one, even the Liberal papers commented favourably upon it. It received the warmest praise in the House itself and showed that Baldwin as Chancellor of the Exchequer has risen in the estimation of all politicians. The recent news of Bonar Law's retirement, which naturally caused a sensation in London, brought forth an official denial and that the Premier had no intention of giving up his post, which is true; but it is also true that the Prime Minister intends to retire as soon as party conditions permit and Baldwin's political growth brings the day of his release so much the nearer.

QUIET IN POLICE CIRCLES.—Things are at present very quiet in police circles. A few civil cases were disposed of in the Magistrate's Court this morning.

Reception for Victorious Candidates.

ST. JOHN'S WEST COMMITTEE CONGRATULATES CASHIN, HUNT AND LINEGAR.

On Saturday night the Committee of the West End Liberal-Labor-Progressive Party and a large number of supporters attended the Committee Rooms in the Star Hall to welcome and congratulate the victorious candidates Mr. C. E. Hunt and Sir M. P. Cashin; and last, but not least, Mr. Linegar, who received a splendid reception on the excellent vote polled by him. Sir Michael Cashin entered the room closely followed by Mr. Linegar and on an accord the crowd rose to their feet and gave them a tremendous greeting. When Mr. Hunt arrived on the scene he was likewise greeted by tremendous outbursts of applause and was borne to the platform on the shoulders of his admirers. Mr. Hunt bore his honors with his customary modesty and acknowledged the congratulations showered upon him in a heartfelt manner. When the deafening noise of the applause had at length been quieted, Mr. Caldwell, Chairman of the Committee, thanked the Committee for the splendid work they had done and referred to them as the greatest and finest bunch of men it had ever seen. There was no doubt that the Prime Minister and Dr. Campbell had used everything at their command to get elected and he felt that it was a great tribute to the clean and straight forward manner in which the committee had fought the campaign, that two of their candidates had been elected.

Mr. Hunt was again accorded a tremendous reception which he smilingly acknowledged. He was glad that, although they had not achieved the victory they hoped for, still they had a great measure of success and they were justly proud. Speaking for himself he felt he would not occupy the position at the head of the poll were it not for Sir Michael Cashin who worked through the campaign with great vim and ardor. No man never had more loyal colleagues than Cashin and Linegar. Mr. Hunt regretted that Mr. Linegar was not elected and said that he deserved every vote he got. He had made a splendid show and could be very proud. Mr. Linegar could be assured that Cashin and Hunt were deeply grateful to him for the support he brought them. Concluding his remarks Mr. Hunt said he felt so grateful that he could not express what he wanted to say. He hoped he would measure up to the high opinion the people had of him and he trusted that when the next election came the people of St. John's West would be able to give them the same hearty reception. He was sorry the fight was over and they could not be able to meet the men again and he was deeply grateful to each and every one for the confidence reposed in him. Mr. Hunt was given another hearty cheer as he concluded.

The Chairman next called upon Sir Michael Cashin who was also given a hearty reception. Sir Michael thanked the men sincerely for the confidence placed in him and he promised to do all in his power to safeguard their interests. If they did not win the Government he would see that the interests of the district were looked after to the fullest extent. He referred in grateful language to the help he had received from Mr. Linegar and he felt that Linegar could be very proud of the vote he polled. He felt that Linegar was quite satisfied with the result of the election and he felt that Linegar would be fittingly represented by Hunt and Cashin. He again thanked the men of the West End for their confidence in him and stated that although he was sorry he did not have the pleasure of representing the laborers himself he was satisfied that Mr. Hunt and Sir Michael would do the best by them. In resigning his position of labor candidate, Mr. Linegar pledged his full support to the "man who would be chosen as his successor."

Mr. Peter Cashin on behalf of Ferryland district congratulated St. John's West on its splendid showing. The odds were great as the Prime Minister had left nothing undone to secure his election, but like Ferryland the answer had been given him. On behalf of his father he thanked them and felt sure that when the next election came on St. John's West would be as proud of his work as Ferryland had been for 31 years. Speeches of congratulations were also made by Messrs. J. T. Martin, John Stone and W. Tucker, after which Mr. Hunt proposed a vote of thanks on behalf of the candidates to the Chairman and Executive of both Committees for the splendid work they had done. The vote was carried with hearty applause. Mr. Caldwell thanked the meeting and regretted that this was the last time they would meet as a body. The meeting was then brought to a close with the National Anthem.

Forest Cutting Wastes Capital.

"That the millions of logs taken from the Canadian forests this spring represent a destruction of capital and that the Governments should spend large amounts on restoration without computing costs on an interest basis, is the contention of Sir Clifford Sifton in a letter to the Canadian Forestry Association.

"In my judgment the money spent in planting trees should not under any circumstances be regarded as an investment upon which interest, either simple or compound, should be calculated," he states.

Train Notes.

The cross country train from Port aux Basques reached the city at 9:40 a.m.

"A Cashin Day."

Saturday last was a veritable "Cashin Day" in triumph for this popular family. The veteran head of the family, Sir Michael, was elected in the West End triumphantly in spite of all the miserable and unseemable tactics used against him. He beat the Premier "to a frazzle" and put him on his back at the foot of the poll. This is his fifth political victory and he has come out head of the poll in eight of the elections since 1893 with big majorities. In this he holds a record in public life that no former politician has ever equalled. He beat the Premier in spite of the enormous amount of Government money spent to defeat him. His son Peter has been elected in Ferryland for the first time with a majority of 700 votes over his opponents in his father's old District which will be known in history for all time as "Faithful Ferryland." His son-in-law Mr. Cyril Fox, the "Orator of the House" was also elected over the opposing Government candidates by a big majority. On the heels of this good fortune there came a telegram from the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, to the effect that his youngest son Dr. Martin Cashin, who recently completed a successful medical course, had been appointed to the coveted and honorable position of House Surgeon at the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, which position is purely competitive and goes by merit. Surely then Saturday was a red letter-day for the Cashin family. It is told of Philip of Macedon in history that on one day he received the news of three auspicious events (1) a son (Alexander) had been born to him, (2) his general had won a great battle that involved the fate of his kingdom, and (3) his horse had won in the Olympic races. He was so elated over the three great strokes of fortune that he asked the gods to send him an installment of bad fortune to mitigate the unanny events of good luck they had sent him. The point is that if the Opposition do not win out, Sir Michael and his family will be compensated in this good fortune for the disappointment. We congratulate him, Lady Cashin and their sons on the splendid triumphs of Saturday.

St. George's Count.

The count for St. George's District began at 1 p.m. by the returns announced at 1 p.m. being:—Macdonnell (Opp.) ..... 100

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

FERRY STEAMER HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

ST. JOHN, N.B., May 7.
The ferry steamer E. Ross had a narrow escape from being carried over the Reversing Falls here early Sunday morning when engine trouble developed in the Middle River and the craft started to drift towards the Falls. Leonard Burke hearing her distress calls broke into a race to get a motor boat and put out to the rescue. He succeeded in getting a line to the steamer and towed her to safety. Six passengers were on board and the prompt attention of Burke apparently saved one of the grimmest tragedies in the history of the River.

He said "Labor must learn to tolerate differences in thought."

FRANCE'S ATTITUDE.

LONDON, May 7.
According to the Times, the French Ambassador in an interview with Lord Curzon, British Foreign Secretary, on Saturday, replying to Curzon's objection, stated that it would have been better had France conducted the Allies before replying to Germany's note, maintained that prompt rejection of German note was necessary and much consultation would have involved delay.

Defeating Man's Deadliest Foe.

According to a famous lung specialist, we are in sight of the complete removal of tuberculosis from the face of the earth.

Advanced cases of the disease will be cured by a serum, but children will be vaccinated against tuberculosis; just as they are vaccinated against smallpox, with the result that cases of pulmonary consumption, tuberculosis joints, glands, and so on will be few and far between. The serum cures, but does not protect. The vaccine both cures and protects.

This recently perfected remedy, discovered by Dr. Spahlinger, the Swiss scientist, does all that is claimed for it, as testified by the Paris Academy of Science and many experts in this country.

A ROMANCE OF SCIENCE.

Thanks to the British Red Cross Society, the discoverer's financial preoccupations are nearing their end, so that his work in the laboratory need be held up no longer. But it will take a long time before the remedies can be produced in quantities sufficient to meet the enormous demands which daily reach Geneva from every quarter of the globe.

The story of the way in which this Swiss scientist has been able to circumvent the tubercle bacillus, which even its discoverer, the great Koch, could not vanquish, is a romance of science.

Lister proved that germs in general were easily overcome by carbolic acid, cleanliness, and common sense. It was consequently and naturally believed that Koch's bacillus, as the tubercle bacillus was then called, was in the same class of simple organisms as those which Lister had overwhelmed and routed, and could therefore be banished by similar measures. It soon became evident, however, that antiseptics strong enough to kill the bacillus destroyed the lung tissue also, so that the cure was quite as bad as the disease. Then the open air or oxygen treatment, was given a thorough trial, but while often successful in early or slight cases this method has by no means fulfilled expectations.

The reason is not far to seek. Formerly it was believed that consumption was a pulmonary disease, pure and simple. It is not so. It is a general disease, a specific poison, that may declare itself in glands, joints, brain or skin as well as in the lungs. In its later stages consumption, or phthisis, is not a pure tuberculosis, but the result of infection by a variety of associated microbes, causing a mixed infection.

The tubercle bacillus is subtle, and the Swiss scientist began to fight it with its own weapons. While ordinary bacilli, like those of tetanus or diphtheria when cultivated outside the body, part with their poisons to the medium in which they are cultivated, the tubercle bacillus cannot easily be induced to do so. And it is these poisons that do all the damage to humanity.

The Swiss scientist argued that as the cuttlefish did not give up its ink until pursued, it was possible that the tubercle bacilli would decline to give up their poisons until they were attacked. He therefore attacks the bacilli in the laboratory by various physical and chemical methods which cause them to yield up their venom. Having found these poisons, he found that they were of twenty distinct and separate kinds.

To prepare their serum, therefore, he has to inject these twenty poisons into twenty horses. Their blood immediately produces the antibodies to each. The sera are then brought together and the complete serum, known as Serum Global, is the result. The best substitute manufacturer is a well bred horse of dark color, of the Irish hunter type.

Renovating a Black Lace Veil.

As a good black lace is fairly expensive, it is worth while remembering that it can be freshened by being dipped several times in water strongly coloured with laundry blue. Wrap the veil in a cloth and iron on the wrong side while still damp. Fold in tissue paper.

Hints for Housewives.

Apples will not burn when baking if a line is made round the centre with a sharp knife before cooking. Powdered magnesia, slightly warmed, is excellent for cleansing soiled brocade shoes.

The flavour of tea is improved if the leaves are heated in the oven for a quarter of an hour before being put in the pot. Spread the tea on a dish; the oven should not be very hot. Less tea is necessary than when it is used in the ordinary way.

To store silver forks and spoons so that they will remain bright, place in a cardboard box, and cover thickly with flour.

The taste of onions can be removed from a knife by rubbing it well with raw potato.

To stiffen delicate voile curtains, add a little borax to the rinsing water.

To prevent colours "running" in an embroidered cloth, soak it before washing in a solution of one tablespoonful of vinegar and a teaspoonful of vinegar and a teaspoonful of salt added to a quart of water. Soak for three hours, dry thoroughly, and then wash with salt in the water.

"The Merry Duchess."

ELIZABETH CHUDLEIGH, WHO CAPTIVATED EUROPE'S COURTIER.

In the days of our second George there was no merrier madcap at the Royal Court than Elizabeth Chudleigh, maid of honour to the Princess of Wales. In the first bloom of her radiant young charms, she was at once Queen of Beauty and of Hearts, drawing them all to distraction by her alternate coquetry and coldness. She was the despair of all until the Duke of Hamilton brought the battery of his fascinations—the handsomest face and figure, the most supple tongue, and the most courtly graces in London—to bear on her. Then, and only then, she capitulated. For a time the course of love ran smoothly—for she had given her heart to her handsome young duke—but Elizabeth's dream of happiness was destined to be short-lived. An intriguing aunt, Mrs. Hammer, with whom she went to stay, had had no love for the Hamiltons, and set to work to dash the cup of happiness from her niece's lips.

HER AUNT'S CRUEL PLOT.

She intercepted the duke's letters, and poured into Elizabeth's ears poisonous stories of his infidelities and entanglements to account for his silence; and, when the poison began to work, whisked her niece off on a visit to the remote country house of her cousin, Mr. Merrill, where, among her fellow-guests, was a dashing young naval lieutenant, the Hon. Augustus Hervey, son of the Earl of Bristol.

SECRET MARRIAGE.

No scheme could have been better designed to complete Mrs. Hammer's plot. When the lieutenant, after making violent love to her, asked her to be his wife, she consented, reckless of the fact that she had not a scrap of affection or even respect for him. She even consented to a secret marriage. The wedding took place in the dead of an August night in 1744, in the church of Lainston, a few miles distant. Fortunately for the newly-made bride, the man she had married in pique, and already had begun to hate, was called away to Portsmouth, within forty-eight hours to rejoin his ship. Within a few days she went to the Continent. Now she is at Berlin, with the great Frederick himself at her knees; now at the Dresden Court shocking the ladies by her laxity and the prodigious display of her charms, and by the same arts bewitching the men.

Back again in England, she was consumed with a desire to obliterate that fatal episode in the dark church; and with this object she made a journey with a friend to Lainston, and, while the vicar's back was turned, tore the damning page out of the marriage register. But before many months had passed she had cause to deplore this second folly when her husband blossomed into an earl on his father's death, and himself was brought to death's door by a dangerous illness.

If the new earl should die, as seemed almost certain, she would lose both title and fortune in the absence of evidence that she was his lawfully wedded wife; and in her dread of this calamity she made a second journey to the village church to replace the record in the register—an object in which she does not seem to have succeeded.

A WEALTHY CAPTURE.

Still her bad luck pursued her. Her lord made a complete recovery, and she found herself condemned to wedded life with a man she hated and whose infatuation for her had been completely cured. Thus for both a few wretched years of hickering passed, when once more the lure of a duchess's coronet dazzled her eyes. The aged and wealthy Duke of Kingston lost his gentle heart to the beautiful countess, and vowed that he would ask nothing better of life than to make her his wife. Her lord refused point-blank to give her her freedom, although she promised to supply abundant material for a divorce. Her only hope was to get her marriage annulled, and by a legal use of bribes and capstays she at last succeeded in procuring her freedom by a decree of the Ecclesiastical Court, and within a month had blossomed into Her Grace of Kingston.

After nearly five years of splendour such as she had sorely dreamt of, the duke's death set her free to indulge her passion for adventure as a richly gifted and still lovely widow. Then followed a round of dissipation in England and on the Continent, which shocked all Europe, a career which was brought to a dramatic close when news reached her in Rome that her late husband's heirs were planning a prosecution for bigamy, with a view to setting aside the will made in her favour.

FARICAL TRIAL.

Returning to London to "face the music," she found all arrangements for her trial already made, and herself the object of universal derision and abuse, to which she presented a smiling and contemptible face. Probably never has Westminster Hall been crowded with such a distinguished and excited assembly as when the duchess made her frowning entry, followed by her retinue of seamstresses, chamberlains, her doctor, apothecary, and secretary; and proceeded to her seat, in front of her six bewigged counsel, with the dignified step and haughty mien of an empress. But although the duchess was convicted of bigamy, no punishment was hers. "She was dismissed," as Walpole tells us, "with the single intimation of paying the cost of the prosecution," and the "solemn farce" was ended. Returning to France, she purchased a palace in Paris and a stately estate in the country, and prepared to spend her last years in the luxury and license to which, as "the most high and pious-estate Princess, the Duchess of Kingston," she considered herself entitled.

But her prosaic luck was now drawing to its close in sudden tragedy. One day she broke out in a violent passion and burst a blood-vessel, and the end came soon afterwards.

Doing His Best.

There's a song for the man who is lucky and bold.
For the man who has Fate on his side.

There are cheers for the folk that are jangling the gold
And are drifting along with the tide.

But the man who is striving to get at the land,
And facing the hungry wave's crest.

We quite overlook, for we don't understand
The fellow that's doing his best.

But he has his rewards when the story is done,
As obscurely he stood in the fray.

As he knows the affection of home
And the pleasures of honest-earned rest.

There are peace and good will, as the twilight descends,
For the fellow that's doing his best.

Painting With Pharaohs.

Egyptian mummies were preserved with the very finest bitumen obtainable, and the remains of a body thus treated show, when unwrapped, a colour like pale leather.

In times when mummies were thought less of than to-day, many were exported and purchased by colour manufacturers, who ground them down by machinery and turned them into a delicate brown, liquid paint, which was the delight of all artists.

These dealers kept their mummies locked away in air-tight cases, to be used as required, for a single one made a great deal of paint.

One is thankful to be able to say that to-day the dead bodies of these ancient folk are treated with greater reverence.

New experiments are constantly being made in the manufacture of artists' colours. There is a Japanese painter, who, like the old masters, makes all his own colours, and gets a very beautiful red by grinding up coral very finely and mixing it with certain oils.

The best ultramarine is still obtained by grinding up a precious mineral known as lapis lazuli. While a great many modern pigments are obtained from coal tar, some of the best still owe their origin to less artificial sources.

Prussian blue, for instance, is made from the hoofs of horses treated in a certain manner; raw sienna is a natural earth, and burnt sienna the same earth baked.

Turkey red is a product of the madder plant, and the dark fluid discharged by the cattle ash. The best carmine is obtained from the cochineal insect, and gamboge is the sap of a tree which grows in the East Indies.

Graphite Mines in Mexico Will Re-Open.

Plans are being made by the United States Graphite Company to resume operation on its large graphite mines at La Colorado, 16 miles West of Torres, Sonora, Mexico, according to C. E. Hallier, Manager, says the engineering and Mining Journal-Frees of New York. These mines were formerly the largest producers of graphite on the continent. It is stated. The minerals were marketed chiefly in the United States. The revolution caused the mines to close down, but now that peace has been restored they are to be re-opened. The Company is advertising for bids to haul the graphite from the mines to Torres, the nearest railroad point.

Obituary.

ALLAN FINDLATER.

It is with profound regret that the Telegram has to chronicle to-day the passing of one of our most esteemed townsmen, in the person of Mr. Allan Findlater. The deceased for sometime past had been in failing health, and although everything possible was done by his physician to effect a cure, the disease had gained such inroads that an operation was found necessary. On Saturday morning he entered St. Claire's Hospital and had an operation performed, from which he soon rallied, but later in the day, a change for the worst took place, and yesterday morning he breathed his last. The late Mr. Findlater was born in Twillingate in 1858, the son of the late Dr. Findlater. During his early years he was employed by the well known firm of Hodge Bros. in his native town. Mr. Findlater moved to St. John's in 1890 and joined the firm of T. and M. Winter, where he remained for the past thirty years. Few men were better known in the commercial life of this city than he. A man of quiet habits and sterling integrity, coupled with unflinching attention to those he served, whether customers or employees, he was held in high esteem. The deceased was prominently identified with the Masonic Fraternity and for 25 years he filled the office of Treasurer of Lodge Tasker. He was a staunch member of St. Thomas's Parish and will be greatly missed and mourned by old parishioners. The late gentleman always took an active interest in the affairs of his church, and in whatever work fell to his lot, it received his faithful attention. The deceased leaves to mourn, a wife, three daughters and one son; the latter is at present residing in the United States. The sympathy of the whole community will go out to the family in their time of sorrow, and in this the Telegram offers its deepest sympathy. The funeral takes place from his late residence, Ordinance Street, on to-morrow, Tuesday, at 3 o'clock.

Portia in Port.

A LENGTHY PASSAGE.

S.S. Portia, Capt. Connors, which left this port for her usual run on the Western Coastal Service on Jan. 17th last, arrived in port at an early hour this morning, after the lengthy trip of eighty days. The Portia, after leaving here, met with terrible ice conditions, and although she managed to reach several of the Western ports of call a stop had to be made at Hermitage, but when she got in there it was impossible to get out. The Bay was filled with heavy, close packed ice, which was impossible to steam through. The Portia made several unsuccessful attempts to get clear, and only succeeded in doing so early last week. Since then the Portia landed the balance of her freight in Fortune Bay. At 10 o'clock yesterday morning the ship left Trepasser, but the thick fog made it impossible to proceed very far and she put back. The fog lifted later in the day, and she made a very good run until arriving off this port at 10 o'clock last night, when she had to heave to, owing to the dense fog and after several hours of waiting she managed to get in when the fog lifted. The following passengers arrived: Messrs. Tuff, Burns, Hoern, Burke, Pudge, Whalley, Lush, Riggs, Pike, Rennie, Pike, Lake; Messdames Lake, Smith, and 23 in steerage.

Meteor Lost for a Century Has Been Discovered Again.

Buenos Aires.—The whereabouts of an aerolite of great size, which was revealed to the Spanish conquerors by Indians about the middle of the seventeenth century, and of which traces have been lost since the year 1812, have again been ascertained, according to a communication received by Professor Clemente Onelli, an Argentine naturalist, from a Señor Laborer, who claims the rediscovery. The aerolite is located in the Province of Santiago del Estero, in the uninhabited Otuampa pampa, which is also known as "Sky Pampa" after the celestial origin of the stone.

Up to the year 1812 the situation of the aerolite was well known, and from the minerals which constitute its mass several flint-like minerals were made. It was about the middle of the seventeenth century, that the Spaniards, guided by the Vieles Indians, discovered the great meteoric mass, half buried in the sands. Reports say that a large portion was brought to Buenos Aires and a part sent to the British Museum.

After the war of independence and the long period of formation of the Argentine nation had passed, several expeditions were sent out to search for the aerolite. Other attempts were made in more recent times, and it was only this year an attempt made by the authorities of Santiago del Estero province ended in failure.

According to certain analysis alleged to have been made in 1812, the meteorite was constituted of pure meteoric iron, nickel and cobalt.

ON THE SUBJECT OF HOSPITALS.

Speaking of hospitals, which I did some weeks ago, and which my Letter Friends have been doing ever since, some in approving tones and some quite the opposite, I certainly did not mean the tremendous work for the hospitals all over the world, and, I trust, will be done and, I trust, will be done.

Individual institution. I was in the vicinity, as I have experienced here.) I was in the vicinity, as I have experienced here.) I was in the vicinity, as I have experienced here.)

What I think I was there was a tendency to let red tape and routine and discipline take the place of a business.

Another Letter Friend, however, gave me much greater appreciation of one factor of the situation, and that was the way in which the nurse is bound hand and foot by red tape.

She took up the part of my talk in which I told of the patient who asked for morphine, was told it was not ordered, fell asleep and then was awakened up by the nurse, who had telephoned the doctor and was told she could give a pill, and did not dare not to even if the patient was asleep. To wake up a patient to give her something to make her sleep seemed foolish to me.

It seemed less foolish after the nurse had told me what would have happened if she had not.

"Nine Times Out of Ten," She Writes.

"Nine times out of ten," she said, "the story would have read as follows: 'Patient could not sleep, asked for something to induce sleep. The nurse had no order for it, but told the patient she would try to get one. The patient's mind is relieved. She stops worrying about not sleeping, and as a result drops asleep. In the meantime the nurse has gotten the doctor's order and takes the pill to the patient and finds the patient asleep.'"

The Nurse is Blamed.

"We will suppose the nurse doesn't give the medicine. The patient seems to have a fairly good night. The next morning the doctor comes and the nurse goes with him to the bedside. When questioned regarding her night, the patient replies that she had a perfectly dreadful night, that she had asked the nurse for something but did not get it. The doctor criticizes the nurse, says that his orders must be carried out or the nurse will be reported to the training school office. Her story that the patient seemed to her to pass a comfortable night goes for nothing."

Sounds very probable, doesn't it? And makes one see the nurse's difficulties in a somewhat different light.

I suppose the answer to the whole thing is that hospitals, like other institutions, are very hard to know the right thing to do and very easy to criticize.

How Banking Began.

People travelling to places abroad who grumble at the trouble of money-changing should consider themselves lucky that they did not live in days when the business of money-changing was in the hands of a Royal Exchanger.

The office of Royal Exchanger was first established in the reign of Edward III, but fell into abeyance to the time of Henry I, when the business of foreign exchange was undertaken by the goldsmiths.

Money-changing was carried out chiefly by the Jews, who, owing to their harsh methods of business, were subject to persecution, culminating in their expulsion from England in 1290; and by the Lombards, Italian merchants who settled in London about that date, and who have given the name to the street which is still the centre of the London money market.

Money-changing, declares a writer in "Pittman's Commercial Self-Education" (Waverley Book Company) was really the precursor of banking. Neither the Jews nor the Lombards seem to have made a practice of receiving deposits; and it was not until the middle of the seventeenth century that the goldsmiths began to take deposits from merchants and others, allowing interest and giving receipts for money deposited.

From this period modern banking may be said to date its beginning in England. Until 1826, the year in which joint-stock banks were first permitted by law, its history is one of steady development. The system of withdrawing money from banks by means of cheques was gradually developed, and the perfection of the system has attained in modern times was rendered possible by the institution of the Clearing House about 1770. The Bank of England was founded in 1694 with a capital of £1,200,000.

There are three times now when the average family must keep quiet nowadays. When there is a sleeping baby in the house. When somebody is ill and when the radio is being "tuned in."

Among the Boxers.

JOHNSON THE WINNER.

Jersey City, April 23.—Floyd Johnson (190) outpointed Fred Fulton (210) in their twelve-round no-decision contest here to-night in the opinion of a number of newspapermen at the ring-side. Johnson kept on top of Fulton throughout eleven rounds, pummeling him almost at will, but weakened in the final round and appeared on the verge of being knocked out. Fulton was not considered enough, however, to overcome the lead his young opponent had piled up in the early rounds.

In the first round Johnson shifted his attack to the head and jarred Fulton to the ropes. Fulton went to his knees from a right to the jaw, but was up immediately.

In the second round, Fulton shook Johnson with lefts to the jaw. Johnson was having trouble in getting inside Fulton's long arms. Johnson sent a straight left to Fulton's chin and nose, bringing blood.

The crowd booed them for loafing in the third and fourth, and in the fifth both men started whirling away with lefts and rights. Fulton appearing to have the better of the exchange.

In round 6 a sharp left brought blood to Johnson's mouth. Johnson sent heavy blows to the jaw. Fulton's long left swings fell into the youngster's jaw and stomach and Johnson seemed tired. He complained that Fulton was hitting low.

Johnson drove Fulton into a neutral corner with a hard right to the jaw in the seventh. He seemed to be hurt and was taking a lot of punishment. Both were tired in the eighth and staggered to their corners when the round ended.

Johnson landed on Fulton, as he pleased in the ninth and tenth but few of his blows appeared to hurt.

In round 11 Johnson pounded Fulton on the jaw and Fulton began to sag. Fulton was blowing heavily and slumped and fell on the ropes, but was up immediately. Johnson kept punching away, but the big man wouldn't drop.

Both were tired in the 12th. Johnson particularly so. Fulton staggered him with a left to the jaw. Johnson could barely stand. He held on however and weathered the storm and was holding as the fight ended. He fell into his seat.

Johnson will now meet Willard May 12th.

MOORE LOSES ON A FOUL.

Chicago, April 24.—Pal Moore, the veteran bantamweight, landed his first foul punch in 11 years of boxing and more than two hundred ring battles last night when he lost to Frankie Genaro, the United States flyweight champion, by striking him in the groin in the sixth round.

Moore, always known as a dancer and jumper, was out-jumped by Genaro. The blow landed with both Genaro's feet six inches off the floor, the little champion literally leaping into the punch, a left hook. The bout was fairly even up to then.

Genaro was unable to walk from the ring and was later taken to a hotel in an automobile.

It was announced Genaro had been matched to meet Joe Lynch, world's champion bantamweight, in a ten-round bout here on May 15.

Middleweight Champion, Johnny Wilson had been carded for a ten-round bout last night with Italian Joe Gans, but said he had twisted his ankle and returned to New York.

COOK DEFEATS GODDARD.

LONDON, April 23.—(Canadian Press Cable)—George Cook, the Australian heavyweight champion, outpointed Frank Goddard, the English heavyweight, in their 20 round bout at the National Sporting Club to-night.

Cook was too quick and clever for his opponent and scored well with lead hands to the face. He frequently drove Goddard to the ropes and landed left and right hooks to the jaw. Goddard was occasionally dangerous with his right swings, but on the whole was outboxed.

SAY CARP TO GET 25% OF EIGHTH MONEY.

NEW YORK, April 24.—(United News)—Georges Carpentier will fight Mike McGuire in New York or Jersey City July 14 for McGuire's light heavyweight championship, which once belonged to the Frenchman.

Francois Descamps, manager of Georges, in a cablegram received by Tex Rickard, Monday, accepted the terms offered—believed to be the 25 per cent. of the receipts—and said the blonde beauty of the boulevards would be ready to fight the rough Irishman any time after July 10.

Descamps recently said he and Carpentier wouldn't think of enduring sea sickness again for less than one-quarter of the gross receipts. McGuire's manager, who is in New York, has accepted on his man's behalf. What McGuire is to receive was not stated, except that it was figured at plenty.

Rickard also signed a contract with Jack Renault, former culling comrade of Jack Dempsey, to sit in the dugout as utility man when the heavyweights perform at the Tankers Hall, May 12. Renault must be ready to step into either of the big bouts as a substitute.
