Comment on Cleveland's Letter. London, Sept. 27 .- The Post considers Mr. Cleveland's reference to the contemplation of a fair distribution of tariff burden rather than the precipitation of free trade as the most substantial part of his cautious address. "It is clear," says the Post, "that the American public is still a good way from the penitence which their European teachers in economic science await with such confidence."

The Democratic Nomination for the

And Voices His Views on the Tariff and Other Important Issues.

Grover Cleveland, in his letter accepting he Democratic nomination for the Presidency, says:

We have undertaken to build a great nation upon a plan especially our own. To maintain it and to furnish, through its agency, the means for the accomplishment of national objects, the American people are willing, through federal taxation, to surrender a part of their earnings and income. Tariff legislation presents a familiar form of federal taxation. Such legislation results as surely in a tax upon the daily life of our people as the tribute paid directly into the hand of the tax gatherer. We feel the burden of these tariff taxes to palpably to be pursuaded by any sophistry that they do not exist, or are paid by foreigners.

Such taxes, representing a diminution of the property rights of the people, are only justifiable when laid and collected for the purpose of maintaining our Gevernment, and furnishing the means for the accomplishment of its legitimate purposes and functions. This is taxation under the operation of a tariff for revenue. This theory of tariff legislation manifestly enjoins strict economy in public expenditures and their limitation to legitimate public uses, inasmuch as it exhibits as abolate extertion, from the substance of the people, beyond the necessities of a careful and proper administration of government.

Opposed to this theory, the degma is now boldly presented that tariff taxation is justifiable for the express purpose of promoting especial interests. Such a proposition is so clearly contrary to the spirit of our constitution, and so directly encourages the disturbance by selfishness and greed of parfotic sentiment, that its geets the three big corporations should pay their share in bonds to mature in 21 years, the company to guarantee interest meantime at 4 per cent. Mr. Smith says he is ready to put up $25,000. Chairman Saunders does not see how the city could go into the business with fairness to the present hotelkeepers.

When Mr. Henry Moyle woke up this morning he found his wife lying dead in bed. She had been suffering from malarial fever, but it is supposed her demise was due to the shock caused by the death of her brother, Wm. Davies, a few days ago. James Weir, a well-known young farmer, residing near Brown's Corners, Scarboro, was inetantly killed last night in a runaway accident, which occurred at Fred Smith's hotel at the foot of the Norway hill. The deceased was a prosperous young farmer, 35 years of age, living about a mile and a quarter from Malvern. He was well known and very popular throughout the district. ## A Clever Monkey's Behavior During a Conflagration in His Own Cage,

A Clever Montesy's Behavior During a Conflagration in His Own Cage.

[New York Sun.]

Prof. Garner in his endeavor to acquire a knowledge of the monkey language, could learn something to his advantage by visiting Fort Hamilton, where he could observe and, perhaps, commune with one of the most intelligent and interesting specimens of the monkey tribe in captivity. This monkey is small and black, and betrays an unusual amount of curiosity even for a monkey. Associated with the agile creature are a little Skye terrier and a monkey of light complexion and open countenance. The three comrades are confined in a cage near the electric railroad station. All of them are exceedingly active; even the dog occasionally resorts to tricks in imitation of his companions. The black simian, however, is the observed of all observers as he skips about indulging in his pleasantries, or seats himself before a crowd of spectators and chatters with extraordinary volubility, to their intense crowd of spectators and chatters with extraordinary volubility, to their intense extraordinary volubility, to their intense delight.

One Sunday recently the black monkey was more than ordinarily mischievous, and the concourse of sightseers was therefore large and attentive, almost surrounding the cage. On the floor-of the cage lay a pink programme. Someone threw a parlor match into the cage, and it fell in the six dusting a flash, sized it and instituted an investigation. He snifled it, took a little bite of it and sputtered, looked steadfastly at it, and then, with unmistak.

Jocko, as quick as a flash, seized it and instituted an investigation. He snifled it, took a little bite of it and sputtered, looked steadfastly at it, and then, with unmistakable disgust, threw it down. Its flavor evidently did not suit his fastidious palate. After blinking at it for a few minutes he made a grab for the match, and it was ignited on the floor of the cage. The monkey was astonished, but he held the burning match for a second, then flung it down on the pluk programme, which immediately caught fire. Then ensued a seene which impressed a beholder with the idea that this monkey was worthy of a medal for his bravery and promptitude.

The paper flamed up quickly, and the monkey fairly danced about it in his excitoment. Then, with remarkable rapidity, he ran around to a part of the cage where there was a basin of water in which lay a tin spice box. The wiry little animal quickly filled the box with water, hurried back to the blazing paper, shock the water out of the box directly on the fire, and it was speedily extinguished. Then, fearing the fire was not entirely out, he jumped on them, but still unsatisfied, and to make assurance doubly sure, he picked up what paper remained and tore it into many pieces, making certain that not a spark was left. His impromptu firemanic performance elicited shouts of laughter, and also expressions of wonderment regarding the intelligence and presence of mind displayed, but the little monkey, like all true heroes, bore his honors modestly and with becoming gravity.

Flying Roll People Are Selling Their Property.

DETROIT, Sept. 27.—Flying Roll Brother Johnston, who some time ago left his journation of the Johnston Optical Works and assumed the leadership of a seceding faction of the Hamlin avenue colony, has sold his house and lot to James I. Goodwin, who has also purchased the lot at the corner of Hamlin avenue and John R. street. This is the lot which Prince Mike and his clan bought and on which they purposed building an Israelitish church. Johnston got $2,500 for his house, which is easily worth $3,500. Bro. Johnston says he will linger in Detroit until Jan. 1, when he and his followers will locate in some clime where the Flying Roll doctrine is better understood.

POWERS OF COUNTY JUDGES. The Toronto Telegram, no doubt judging by some recent developments, reaches the conclusion that if "county judges are to exercise an extended jurisdiction there must be a change that will exalt men worthier of large authority or remove which render them unfit to discharge their high duties." Our contemporary adds: "Glorification of the county judiciary of Ontario as the wearers of the unsullied ermine amuses those who have an inside view of their honors. There are judges, as in York county, in whose integrity and ability all have confidence. There are others promoted to the bench out of a local law office who win a reputation for favoring the cause advocated by their professional successors. There must be some truth in the impression which prevails in so many county towns. It is common talk in these centers that no lawyer has a chance before the county judge except the barrister who is doing business at his honor's old stand. Justice is degraded by the favoritism and partisanship of some county judges, and the reformation of the inferior judiciary is one of the greatest works that Sir John Thompson can do." These are serious accusations and they should not be lightly turned aside. What is needed is probably more effective dealings with judges who fail in their duty, and prompt and thorough investigation into all cases of alleged misconduct. We are among those who believe that the law should be brought to the people, instead of their having to go to law. Therefore it is that we favor any reasonable scheme for decentralizing the higher courts as far as practicable, and for permitting the lower courts to decide as far as possible in all minor disputes regarding property or other rights and in general criminal matters. But there should be an appeal from a county judge to a higher authority in all matters affecting the elec toral rights of the people. If there had been that in the London voters' list case, Judge Elliot could not have been enabled to inforce his personal predilections, strengthened by his editorial plead-ings in the London Free Press, to the injury of over half the people of London, and despite the fact that six Superior Court judges have decided that his view of the question could be defended neither in equity nor in law. County judges, like the rest of us, are human, very buman, and Judge Elliot has destroyed the say an executive directly dependent on the confidence of the people in his decisions on electoral matters, while the conduct of the Dominion Government in refusing a William Pitt, when repudiated by the thorough investigation into the charges made against him by reputable citizens, has still further shown the absolute necessity which exists for a change in the regulation affecting these public servants.

MR. MEREDITH'S SUSPENSION.

that pertains to our former fellow-townsmar Mr. W. R. Meredith, M.P.P. Quite recently, whether with or without his consent we know not, the country has been treated to the novel spectacle of W. R. dangling midway between a department of the Government at Ottawa and his law office in To ronto. He has been retained in this position, according to the testimony of his friends, because, while a section of them desire to have him enter the Dominion Government ss a great Protestant champion, to balance the scales with Sir John Thompson, who is not trusted by this section, another divisany such arrangement. Thus, after the fashion of Mahommet's coffin, our former fellow-townsman is kept suspended, awaiting the development of events and the pacification of opponents. When the sus-pense will be brought to a close no one seems to be able to say, but some are doing a great deal of thinking. One of the thoughts audibly expressed takes the form of the conundrum why the Dominion Government should be regarded as in need of a Protestant champion while it has the edoubtable Mackenzie Bowell in it? Has be proved but a trader in religious proGLADSTONE'S REPLY TO ARGYLL Mr. Gladstone has been 60 years in public life this month, and he is now approaching the 83rd anniversary of his birth; but he appears to be just as young and vigorous in his methods as ever. He ards' wives in Hamilton? has been visiting Wales, clambering around the mountains of that romantic principality with the agility of a man half his age, addressing large bodies of citizens on public topics, and at the same time finding opportunity to reply to the Duke of Argyll's attack on his home rule scheme. It would not be in accord with the

as to a legislative proposition to be laid before Parliament some months hence. But Mr. Gladstone, in reply to a paper previously written by the Duke of Argyll, has given to the readers of the North America Review considerable information in regar to the scope of the forthcoming measure for granting self-government to Ireland. The Duke of Argyll is a territorial magnate who has never looked with favor upon land to the democracy a greater shate in the management of their country. He has railed at the Irish because he believes they will not be good managers of their own local affairs; and he gave a good opening to Mr. Gladstone when he asserted that while the Liberal leader had represented the bill of 1886 as only giving back to Ireland a limited share of what she had once enjoyed, the fact was that "she never had bad a Parliament with one-tenth of the enormous power given by that scheme," All property and all liberty were, the Duke averred, left absolutely by the bill of 1886 at the mercy of the Irish Parliament. "So monstrous proposition," the Duke declared, "had never been made before by any statesman." In the North American Review Mr. Gladstone vindicates his assertion. The Irish Parliament of 1782—what is known as Grattan's Parliament-was in itself overeign and independent in the very ame sense as then was the Parliament Great Britain. On the other hand, the the 1rish Parliament proposed by Mr. Glad-stone in 1886 was explicitly accepted on behalf of Irish Nationalism by Mr. Parnell as "a subordinate Parliament." The Dublin Parliament of 1782 enjoyed the power to act upon peace and war and to control commerce and national taxation exclusively. The bill of 1886, as we all know, retained to imperial power the control of all these departments. To this the Duke of Argyll might answer that the Irish Parliament of 1782 was a Protestant assembly, and that the Irish tive was not responsible to the Dublin Legislature, Mr. Gladstone reminds his critic that the Irish Legislature of 1782 Mr. Gladstone reminds his admitted Roman Catholics to the franchise in 1793, and in 1795 was ready to make them eligible to take seats in the House of Commons when the recall of movement and rekindled the spirit of faction. At that time, too, the Protestants of the north declared that the recent changes had removed all ground of differ ences with England and had "united the lissolable mass." This declaration was to their numbers. As to the objection raised by the Duke, that the Irish Executive under the system of 1782 was not responsible to the Dublin Legislature, Mr. Gladstone points out that House was unmistakably on the side of his opponents during the interval. Mr. Gladstone further asserts that within his SIR WM. Dawson, the eminent scientist, in giving evidence before the Prohibition Commission, expressed the conviction that the Scott Act and a conviction that the scott Act a of responsible government except that exbut for the Act of Union responsible government would have followed the concession subscribed by 45 corps of Protestant volunteers, proving that the Ulster men were not afraid to acknowledge the prin-ciple that their Catholic fellow-citizens should have a representation proportionate of legislative autonomy in 1782. Thus are the bugbears of the Duke f Argyll effectively laid. What are the inferences that may be drawn from Mr. Gladstone's contrast between the Irish Parliament of 1782 and that advocated in We are naturally interested in everything 1886, and which will be proposed when Parliament meets in 1893? It is indisput able that the Irish executive shall be re sponsible to the Dublin Legislature. But the Irish Parliament will not have power to act upon peace or war, upon the army the navy or defense in general, or upon the regulation of commerce. It will have no ore right to impose tariffs than has the Government of Ontario. Powers over tax-ation it will have, or it could not meet its bligations. If it had the right to regu late the land laws, it need never be with out a decent revenue. Absentee landlord ism, which has taken so much out of Ire-land, may yet be made to pay something back to aid in running the country. But for a time, acting on a suggestion throws out by Mr. Parnell, the British Parliament may retain control of legislation on this critical question. The establishment of a State religion will be absolutely prohibited but the control of the constabulary and o the local judiciary will be relegated to the Irish Government, subject always to an appeal to the Privy Council, on which, it is understood, Ireland will have due representation.

Others of more continental importance are by the Bishop of Albany on the "Excise Law and the Saloons," by Senator Vest on "The Real Issue"—meaning, however, the question of high or low taril; and by Mr. Theodore, Voorhees, general superintendent of the Central road, on "The Buffalo Strike." Mr. Elgar's letter in reply to the summons of the Caron commissioners to lay before them the names of the witnesses he proposed to call to give evidence in support of the charges formulated against Sir Adolphe Caron, was just what everythe, we suppose, expected it to be. It was, in fact, just what he gave Parliament pretty clearly to understand it would be, at the time of the appointment of the commission. clearly to understand it would be, at the time of the appointment of the commission. The way in which the letter has been received by the party press on either side is also just what might have been foretold with uncering certainty. The Government journals denounce his refusal to appear between the commissions of the property and appear between the commissions of the property and appear between the commissions. Journals denounce his retuest to appear be-fore the commission as prosecutor as a cowardly retreat. The Opposition applaud it as the only manly and self-respecting course. We must confess that, after giv-ing the matter the most impartial considercourse. We must confess that, after giving the matter the most impartial consideration of which we are capable, we are forced to agree with the latter view. Had the Government contented itself with simply referring the charges to a commission instead of to a Parliamentary committee, without changing their form in any way, the accuser, however he might deprecate their action as an infringement upon Parliamentary right and dignity, could scarcely have refused to produce his evidence before the tribunal chosen by the Parliamentary majority. But when the Government took the remarkable if not unique course of eliminating one of the principal charges and changing and adding to others, we cannot see how any wise man could be expected to step into the snare thus spread before his eyes. To us the issue seems to be in a nutshell. The changes made in the form of the charges either do materially modity their meaning or they do not. If they do, the evasion is apparent. If they do not, there could have been no valid reason for making them. In other words, the natural inference seems to be that, had the accused minister been impelled by the indignation

Then, as a revolver was found in his possession when he had given his name as Paul Bacht, an additional charge of carrying concealed weapons was made against him. The bear was held as an accessory. Man and bear spent the night together in one cell.

On being arraigned before Justice Ryan, Bacht told his story through an interpreter. He pleaded ignorance of the law prohibiting the exhibition of bears in the city, and explained his carrying of the revolver by saying that he had it to use against the bear if it became obstreperous, and not against any human being. Justice Ryan discharged Bacht and gave him back his revolver. Bacht communicated the good news of their discharge to the bear, who had been establishing friendly relations with Court Officer Gallegher, and was engaged in poking his nose into that policeman's pocket in a search for peannts, and the two, after making a polite bow each to Justice Ryan, left the court.

MARRIED AT LODGE. How Brantford Royal Templars Make Their Meetings Attractive.

Their Meetings Attractive.

Brantford, Sept. 27.—A novel wedding was celebrated on Monday evening in the lodge-rooms of Brantford Council, No. 24. R. T. of T. It was the marriage of Mr. Fred Trueman and Miss Lillie Squires, both of the city. The young people are members of Brantford Council and their brethren and sisters conceived the idea of having the marriage celebrated in the lodge-room at an open meeting last night. The pretty lodge-room meeting last night. The pretty lodge-room meeting last night. The pretty lodge-room was made even prettier by the decoration of the sisters. A large number of invitations had been issued, and at 8 o'clock the hall was crowded, nearly two hundred being present. The marriage ceremony was per-formed by the Rev. R. Hobbs, pastor of the Collorne Street Methodist Church. The bridal party stood before the seat occupied by the select councilor. Miss Cynthia Brown assisted the bride, and Mr. Joseph Minshall acted as best mar No Room for Corbett's Crowd. Albany, Sept. 27.—"Gentleman" Jim Corbett was refused quarters at one of the principal hotels Saturday and yesterday in this city. It is not because of Mr. Cor-bett's personnel, but because of the dis-tasteful crowd such a man attracts.

Only Two of the Thousand Alive. Only Iwo of the Incusand Alive. CINCINNATI, Sept. 27.—It is believed that only two of the I,000 members of the Forty-ninth New York Volunteers, who left Buffalo in 1861, are alive to-day, and both are residents of this city. One is Jacob Kessler and the other G. G. Messner, foreman of the Commercial Gazette job rooms.

Love vs. Locks.

KEYPORT, N. J., Sopt. 27.—Miss Eva Decker, the "belle of the town" and the leading soprano in the Methodist Church, eloped with George Mason, a popular young man, yesterday. The girl had been locked up by her "stern parent," Captain Decker, for a number of days, but she made her escape and me: Mason by appointment.
They were married by Rev. J. E. Lake.

The honor of instituting the first quarantine is claimed for the Venetians. Vessels were kept from intercourse with the shore for 40 days. The Italian quarantina means a space of 40 days, which is also the original meaning of the English "quarantine."

A Biblionbur.

[London Vanity Fair.]

A lady left some very precious first ditions of a book in three volumes in a hansom while she went into a shop—a risky thing in itself to do. When she came out of the shop she couldn't find the hansom, which had been made to move on by a policeman, and in despair took another, and just saved the train which she had to and just saved the train which she had to catch at Charing Cross. After waiting for an hour and a half, the cabman thought there was something queer going on and endeavored to find his fare, without success of course. Then he looked inside of the cab, saw the books and some parcels, and conveyed them all to Scotland Yard. And here comes the pith of the sbory. The lady applied the following day for her precious books and got them. It was suggested that she should nay a cerfor her precious books and got them. It was suggested that she should pay a certain quite adequate sum as recompense to the cabman. But the lady was indignant. That sum, she averred, did not in any degree represent the acceptance. Inst tum, she averred, did not in any de-gree represent the percentage due on the enormous value of the tomes. They were worth something stupendous. She men-tioned what Quaritch valued them at. And quite cheerfully she paid a sum that made a comfortable nest egg for the cabman. She also made the Scotland Yard official understand something about books that he hadn't a notion of before.

It is found that masonry may be readered impervious to water, especially in positions exposed to direct contact with that element, by the application of collater. The latter is employed in a boiling state, in one or more layers, or it may be made to flame up before being used, the first being suitable for surfaces exposed to the air, while the accord is appropriate in the case of parts intended to be covered up. This method of treating foundations is declared to be of special utility in all public buildings, particularly those designed for the preservation of works of art, preventing, as it does, exudations of water shared with a self-preserved by saying: "Ladies and gentlement, the pitomiess bott," with a selemnity which was changed to confusion when he perceived his error.

Western Chtarlo Art School.

The Government School of Art will reopen on Monday in the Mechanics' Institute building, Dundas street. This school has an established reputation. In class 97 at the Western Fair, open to pupils of art schools, ladies' colleges, academies of paintings, collegiate institutes, high and common schools, this school carried off a total of 37 prizes. There were fourteen sections laid out for competition, and pupils of this art school were awarded first prize in each, besides four second prizes. This must have been especially gratifying to the instructors and directors. At a meeting of the directors held on Tuesday Mr. J. H. Griffiths was appointed principal. It is proposed to have a public exhibition of the work of the students some time about the middle of January, and we understand that a considerable number of the works shown will be exhibited at the World's Fair next summer. A number of prizes will be offered for the best work done during the term, and will be presented to the winners at the January exhibition, when the programme will be interspersed with music and various other attractions. FOUND DROWNED. Old James Potter Discovered on Nev Orchard Beach.

A Description of Him Leads to Identifica tion-Supposed to Have Committed Suicide Under Peculiar Circumstances.

The following dispatch from Port Stanley

The following dispatch from Port Stanley was received this afternoon: "A man found drowned on New Orchard Beach here, about 70 years of age, six feet in height, weighs about 165 pounds, gray wriskers, no mustache, gray hair, dark striped cottonade pants, laced shoes, tight fitting jacket and vest of black satin cloth, wearing a leather belt, supposed to have been in the water some days and supposed to be the retired farmer missing from Mrs. Murray's boarding house, London." The above description tallies exactly with that of James Potter, the old man who disappeared from Mrs. Mary Murray's boarding house on Wellington street last Thursday morning. There is no doubt but that he committed suicide. Mr. James Willkins, barber, Dundas street, had among his customers Mr. Potter, and probably he knew the latter as well as did anyone in the city. He says that last winter the missing man had an account of $150 in the Bank of Montreal, which amount the latter expected would pay his board as long as he lived. Eight weeks ago last Monday Mr. Wilkins accompanied him to the bank and draw out the balanco of the amount—$30. This he had done many times before, as the old man had a very poor memory. It is supposed that he had spent all of this, and not wishing to be dependent on any person that he had committed suicide, nad spent all of this, and not wishing to be dependent on any person that he had committed suicide, Some time ago he told Mr. Wilkins that on Labor Day he met a woman at Queen's Park, and that she showed him around and paid him great attention. At the time of which I am speaking, I is mad upon new remedy which I beyed I had descovered for the nervous ite consequent on the failure of the digeste powers in people of middle age; and it is upon this remedy I now and down to kin my little consulting room and dissery combined.

Think in my rite constituing from and dis-pensary combined.

I had been pondering over the subject then for months, and the more I thought, the more convinced I was that my remedy would work wonders, but for want of test cases I was completely in the dark. I had got so far, though, that I had given myself full confidence in the correctness of my de-ductions; all I wanted was a trial—experi-ment on the vile body of man, so as to make sure.

"How to proceed?" I said to myself, as I at among my bottles and drugs, tapping at among my bottles and drugs, tapping he table with my finger nails—"how to roceed? I must try it upon a patient, but is not fair or just to try experiments on ne who confides in you. Suppose my ideas re wrong—suppose it is a fallacy?"

These thoughts troubled me so that I grew warish, and my head burned.

Jumping up from my chair I took a clean umbler from a shelf, half filled it with a degree which stood on the table, tossed it the sparking water, put back the tumbler der e umed my seat, feeling decidedly betand ciearer.

CHAPTER II.

As I spoke I replaced the stopper, crumbled up the paper, and threw it in the waste bases. I then shock up the brandy, which looked turpid at first, but rapidly began to clear, as I set it down, took paper to my wife telling her what I had done, and my and was about to write a few lines to my wife telling her what I had done, and why, lest in the case of accident I might be

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband; but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they will make her "feel like a different person," at least so they all say, and their husbands say so too.

Jumping up from my chair I took a clean tumbler from a shelf, half filled it with a sol zogene which stood on the table, tossed off the sparking water, put back the tumbler and re umed my seat, it celling decidedly better and clearer.

"How to proceed?" I said again. "I cannot, I must not try is upon a patient. It would not be just. Upon whom, then? Mary!"

"Perish the thought!" I cried dramatically. "To deceive her would be ten times worse."

"But I might tell her first. She would take it, bless her, if I told her."

"No, no, no, no!" I cried; and then, half a oud, "If the experiment must be tried, and wou have so much faith in it, try tupon yourself, like a man!"

I sprang up once more with all kinds of unpicasant notions beginning to haunt meestable and the explain to a brother medical man what I had taken.

"Why, they would take me for a suicide, and my wife would be a widow." I exalimed, with a citil of horror, seeming to make my blood run sluggishly through my wins.

"Til try one drachm first," I said. "Too much. No; it would be ansured to trifle with it. How can I get a satisfactory result if do not proceed boldly with my test? And I going to play the coward after all?"

I went to the shelf where the bottles stood, and took down the one lateled Sp. Vin., having determined to combine a stimulant with the drug, which would, I knew, from former experience, dissolve in spirit, but to my chagrin, the bottle was completely empty.

"Brandy will do," I said to myself; and, after replacing the bottle, I went out and into the dining-room to fetch one of three from the spirit stand, but found that its contents were confined to about a wine-glassful. "That would be enough," I sold Scales, of Toronto, writes, "A series of the contents were confined to about a wine-glassful. "That would be enough," I sold Scales, of Toronto, writes, "A

"That would be enough," I thought, and going back into my consulting room, I set the little decanter down, removed the stopper, and my hand trembled a little as I poured in the white powder, a mere pinch, but full of potency.

"You are a coward," I said to myself contemptuously. You would have given that to a patient without a qualm, but you are all on the shiver because you are going to take it yourseif."

And myself seemed to answer, as if I then led a duel existence.

"I am no coward," it said, half aloud. The the benefit of medical science I am going to take that drug as soon as it is dissoved; and if it destroys my life, I have died in a great cause, as bravely as any soldier who ever faced the deadiy breach."

Death of Mr. Poter Grant, London West.

A respected resident of London West died yesterday in the person of Mr. Peter Grant, aged 60 years. Mr. Grant came to this country from Scotland, and was among the first to settle in the village of London West, which he did 30 years ago. He was a carriage-maker by trade, working formerly for the Hodgins and Moran works in this city, but for the last five or six years has been employed in the M. C. R. shops, St. Thomas. His death is due to the after effects of la grippe, which attacked him in April last. He recovered for a time, but sufa relapse and has been confined to the house for weeks. Mr. Grant was a trustee of the London West Methodist Church, and a member of King Soleman's Lodge, No. 37S, A. F. and A. M., under whose auspices he will be buried Friday afternoon. Deceased leaves a grown-up family of one son and four daughters, all unmarried and living at home. He had lost three sons by death. Death of Mr. Peter Grant, London West

The Wrong Kind of Rape.

ne of the seedsmen of England have Some of the seedsmen of England have made a very grave mistake in the rape seed which they sent to our seedsmen in the early part of the season. They have not sent it true to name; hence the larger portion of the rape grown during the present year in Ontario is a variety adapted to the production of seed for oil extraction rather than to provide pasture for sheep. The rape that has been grown in this country during previous years is known as the Dwarf Essex. The order was given as usual for the Dwarf Essex by our Guelph seedsmen, and the package came labeled rape that has been grown in this country during previous years is known as the Dwarf Essex. The order was given as sual for the Dwarf Essex by our Guelph seedsmen, and the package came labeled Dwarf Essex, whereas it is another variety of rape which seems to be a hybrid. It is a summer rape, while the Dwarf Essex is a winter variety that will not produce seed the same season. It is the same variety as rape grown at this station in a small plot which came to us labeled as the Broadleafed Dwarf Essex.

I do not regard it as being anything like so valuable for pasture as the Dwarf Essex. It pushes up a flower stock about six to eight weeks after it is sown; hence it grows less of leaf, and much more of woody matter than the reaf Dwarf Essex. It grows that the present time the fields containing it are one mass of yellow bloom.

Letters have reached me from several directions expressing the fear that if the seed or a portion of it were allowed to fall upon the ground it would be troublesome to get rid of, and asking what had better be chone with it in the meantime. In the absence of previous experience with this point. I do not apprehend that trouble would arise to any serious extent if some to get rid of, and rasking what had better be done with it in the meantime. In the absence of previous experience with this point. I do not apprehend that trouble would arise to any serious extent if some our lambs are turned in upon it they strip our lambs are turned in upon it they strip in the field. A number of our farmers are plowing it under rather than run any risk, but it is better not to run any risk, but it is better not to run any risk, but it is better not to run any risk, but it is better not to run any risk, but it is better not to run any risk, but it is better not to run any risk, but it is better not to run any risk, but it is better not to run any risk, but it is better not to run any risk, but it is better not to run any risk, but it is better not to run any risk, but it is better not to run any risk and the r steps that it shall not be repeated. To that end I would venture the suggestion to our seedsmen to lay in their supplies of rape seed this fall, and to test it by growing some plants in the green house. In the hope of rendering some service in this work, if the seedsmen of Ontario see fit to adopt the suggestion given above, and also to send some of the seeds to our department, we will carry on duplicate tests and report to them in due time. It would then be impossible that a mistake could be made next year.

Mr. Essery, the defendant's counsel, said he would reserve his defense. He asked that the prisoner be bailed out to appear at the Sessions.
The request was granted, and Starr's old father furnished the necessary security.
"Bringing stolen goods into Canada" was the charge against Robert Mackenzie, socalled, the man who hired a livery rig for two hours from Wm. Anderson, of Marine City, Mich, ferried it across to Canada and tried to sell the outfit to Dr. O'Neil, of this city.

The Magistrate—What's your right name. Mackenzie?

The Prisoner—Patrick Murphy. I'm a native of New York State.

The Magistrate—Do you wish to be tried before me or before a jury?
Prisoner—On account of belonging to the States I would rather be tried in Makhizen.

Michigan.

This was an impossibility, and the man decided to be tried by the magistrate and oleaded guilty.

Mr. McKillop-He may be sent to Mr. McKillop—He may be sent to prison for fourteen years, your Honor. The magistrate sentenced Murphy to one year and six months in the Central Prison. Mr. Anderson waited the horse, vehicle, harness, etc., at $200.

Drownings in the Delaware—Three Men Lost in the Connecticut—An Up-turned Boat's Tale.

turned Boat's Tale.

GREENFIELD, Mass., Sept. 28.—George Steiger, John Schmidt and Jacob Burkly have been drowned while running the rapids in a boat on the Connecticut River, a few miles above Turner's Falls. John Steiger, brother of George, and a man named Navely refused to shoot the rapids and walked home.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 28.—Edward Kaveney and Lizzene Maynard, each about 15 years old, left Wicktord Monday night to row to their home in Hamilton, two miles distant, and have not been seen since. The boat was found yesterday, and it is believed that it upset and the boys were drowned.

EASTON, Pa., Sept. 28.—Isaac Work-heiser and Edward Martin, brothers-in-law, were drowned in the Delaware River at this place yesterday morning. The water was rough and the wind high, and their boat, which was heavily loaded with stone, capsized. Wm. Rockafellow, another occupant, was rescued after being completely exhausted trying to save his companions.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY!

mother of Class. Brown in the absence of the Bogarts.

The guilty woman went to the police headquarters and gave herself up to Chief of Police Jobes, and the Bogart house was put under guard to await the arrival of Coroner De Worth, who is out of town.

Mr. J. R. Allen, upholsterer, Toronto sends us the following: "For six or seven years my wife sutered with Dyspepsia Costiveness, Inward Piles and Kidney Complaint. We tried two physicians and any number of medicines without getting any relief, until we got a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. This was the first relief she got, and before one bottle was used the benefit she derived from it was beyond our expectation."

REDUCED TO ASHES. A House and Two Barns Burned Near Stratford.
Str. Marrs, Sept. 27.—Martin Ready's house on the St. Marrys road, near Chowen's hotel, together with his barn and house on the St. Marys foat, the Chowen's hotel, together with his barn and stable, were destroyed by fire between 1 and 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The house and barns belonging to Joseph Monteith. The buildings were insured. Mr. Ready's loss will be heavy. Considerable furniture was burned and pocket-book containing nearly SloW was upstairs in the house when the fire broke out and was among the lost articles. The heaviest loss will be in the burning of the bearn and stables. All the crops were in these buildings waiting to be threshed. Nothing was saved from the outbuildings. A cow, which was unable to move by reason of a lame foot, was burned to death.
