I will sign myself, A FROSTY ONE. Ans.—The pretty towel-end pattern has been mailed you. For the inkstain try covering it with thick sour milk, as soon as it becomes discolored wipe up, and put a fresh supply over the stain; repeat several times if necessary; then go over the spot with warm water, which may be applied with a clean hand-brush; dry carefully, and I hope the stain will be almost, if not quite, gone. Success depends partly on the kind of ink. Some varieties are so much harder to remove than others.

It is at Heart.

Ans.—'Mary Jane' it will take someone a heap wiser than I am to find a really satisfactory solution, or rather answer, to these objections. The only one I can see at present, that seems to fit, is this: because one man shirks his duty, is a grafter, or not sufficiently loyal to his country to make sacrifice when demanded, does not exonerate the next man from serving the Empire. Jones may be a thief, but we do not expect Brown who lives next to Jones to go about walling, and cry, "What's the use of being honest when this man steals." Each man is his own "keeper" when it comes to patriotic duty, and the shortcomings of the few need not—should not—privilege every man to make it an excuse for "slacking."

Hankow, Aug. 14.—Reform newspapers are displaying some uneasiness about the possible movement of Yuan Ko-Ting, the eldest son of the late yuan Shi-Kai. Yuan Ko-Ting returned to Changethfu, his father's ancestral home, together with all the wives and children of the late president. While has remained constantly at Changethfu, engaged in mourning for his father, it is reported that he is in secret communication with many of the old military officers who enjoyed the confidence of Yuan Shi-Kai. and is preparing to assert his rights as heir to the lost empire.
