A. & B. SOCIETY 1863.—Rev. Director. McPhail; President, D. c; Sec., J. F. Quinn ninique street; M. J. rer, 18 St. Augustin on the second Sunmonth, in St. Ann's.
Young and Ottaws. 30 p.m.

UNG MEN'S SOCIE-1885.—Meets in its wa street, on the deach month, at ritual Adviser, Rev. C.SS.R.; President, Treasurer, Thomas -Sec., Robt. J. Hart.

CANADA, BRANCH
d, 13th November, 26 meets at St.
l, 92 St. Alexander
Monday of cach egular meetings on of business are on of business are and 4th Mondays at 8 p.m. Spiritual M. Callaghan; Chan-pars; President, P.J. ec., P. J. McDonagh; Jas. J. Costigan, H. Feeley, jr.; Medi-ors. H. J. Harrison, and G. H. Marrill

H BELLS

HANE BELLS Ils a Specialty

ELL COnpany N.Y., and

NEW YORE OILY. rior ENURCH BELLS

LANHOUS.

When You Buy

an's Chocolate

LEBRATED RAISING FLOUR

and the Best. ivenifer the empty bas

St., Montreal.

18

blob

The True Cuitness

Vol. LIII., No.

MONTREAL, SATURDAY, MARCH 12, 1904.

PRICE FIVE CENTS

* ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

(By a Regular Contributor.)

rick's day, 1904, will have come her chieftains, her orators, an opportunity of giving our readers pens of more apt biographers, ticipated. There will be concerts, matic representations, banquets, thy wrote: orations from leading representatives of our race in Canada, all of which go to make up the expression of a patriotic sentiment that wells up in every true Irish heart. One feature, however, of the day's celebration will be general; in it all will participate; it is the religious phase of the occasion. Prior to any display of purely national sentiment, the children of the "Ancient Race" will proceed to the temple of God, and there do honor to the Patron Saint, after courage of their convictions should Faith of St. Patrick, alive toages of glory and ages of sorrow, since the Apostle of Ireland plucked the triune leaf to illustrate the greatest of all mysteries, at Tara.

But even this week the spirit of the day is upon us; and while do not seek to anticipate that which will take place, we may be permitted to glance at the situation in general as this year 1904 presents it for our contemplation. We might warm to our subject, as did the bards or old, by reviewing the triumphs and glories of our ancestors, by recording the claims of Ireland to the glorious titles she has received, by telling how she was the "Land of Song," the "Home of Sanctity and Learning, the "Shrine of Heroes and Pa-Martyrs," and the "Emerald Gem of the Western World." But all these sources of a legitimate pride are so

Before another issue of our paper, history; leaving the fame and great-Ireland's National Festival, St. Pat- ness of her patriot sons, her bards, and gone. Next week we will have preachers and emancipators, to the a full account of the various ways come down to the less inspiring, less in which the day will be celebrated enthusiastic, but certainly more These are details that cannot be an practical level of the present.

It is only fifty years since McCar-

"Oh, Erin, thou desolate mother, The heart in thy bosom is sore,

And wringing thy hands in despair, Thou dost roam 'round a plague stricken shore;

Thy children are dying, or flying, Thy great ones are laid in the dust And those who survive are divided, And those who control are unjust.'

Fifty years of wonderful agitation, do honor to the Patron Saint, after of stupendous endeavor, have come which a gnand procession, will be held and gone, and; as Ireland beheld the in which all Irishmen possessing the Nineteenth Century dawn upon her fatal Union, so does she now seem to behold in the morning of And with our general review of the day shall we have the consolation and pride of incorporating the account of that traditional evidence of pair," for she looks up with a hope day as it ever has been, throughout fulness born of conscious strength Her shore is not "plague-stricken," for the famine years are things of a past that, with the wonderful industrial advancement of the present, can never be repeated. Her sons are not dying by the wayside nor are they flying from her ports; the convict ships, the emigrant vessel, carry not off the flower of the land,—not appli-cable to-day would be that outburst of McGee's :

"Like cloud on cloud o'er the azure

sky, hen winter storms are loud and When Their dark ships shadow the ocean

God of our persecuted Race !"

Nor can it be truly said that "Those who survive are divided."
Those who control may still be unsources of a legitimate pride are so clearly set forth on the page or history, have been so eloquently and vibratingly celebrated, in prose and in verse, that it would seem but a cold repetition were we to attempt, in our humble way, to repeat them to-day. Leaving the sunshine of glory to wrap the hill-tops of Iroland's past; leaving the clouds of sorrow and misfortung to roll over the slopes of long centuries of her

tives; fratricidal factions have vanshed in presence of a combined aim, and a steadfast purpose. Conditions in fifty years have become so radically changed that we of to-day can scarcely realize all that we are told regarding the Ireland of half a century ago. It seems like a long nightmare vision that never had a reality, that was the creature of poetic fancy. And yet no more terrible reality ever existed. Let us simply contrast the two situations, and surely our common judgment will ordain that the most optimistic view of Ireland's near future may be logically taken. The very House of Parliament that expelled O'Connell because he would not subscribe the oath that grated on nis Catholic conscience, beholds four score Inish representatives holding so firmly the balance of power, that both parties may be said to be at their mercy. The Government benches from which were launched Arms Bills, Insurrection Acts, Coercion Acts and all manner of legislative enactments calculated to crush and ruin a people have witnessed the introduction and passage of a Land Act that has brought landlords and tenants together, and that opened up-perhaps unintentionally-the avenue to Home Rule legislation in the near future. The Sovereigns of Great Britain purposely shunned Ireland, as men would avoid a land of plague and earthquakes; systematic seemed to have been this antipathy towards the Green Island at Britain's door. A Sovereign of the same realm now breaks away from the traditions of enmity and extends the hand of friend ship, walks freely amongst the people of Ireland, and proclaims affection for the land and his intention of cultivating more closely knowledge of its needs. It would seem as if he were repeating the St. Patrick's Society

"MacJohn I stretch to yours and

This hand, beneath God's blessed sun And for the wrong that I might do, Forgive the wrong that I have done"

St. Patrick's Day, 1904, finds the British Parliament in full session; it finds a compact phlanx of Irish representatives with a solid and uncompromising programme in attendance. The year in which we live may not behold the full realization of Ireland's dreams nor of the aspirations of her sons; but certainly, on no national festival, for many a long generation, has there been greater cause for rejoicing. It is clear to all who will see that Ireland's long Lenten season of trials and expiation is drawing to a close, and that the Easter morning is at hand when the smile will remove the tear, and when the shadows-if not wholly vanished-will become golden, like flush of dawn, and the Angel of her national Resurrection will descend to roll away the stone and command he to arise to her rightful position amongst the nations.

ROUTE OF PROCESSION - The lelegates of the various Irish national societies met at St. Patrick's Hall, last week, for the purpose of drawing up the programme for the procession to be held on St. Patrick's Day and to appoint a Marshal-

Rev. Martin Callaghan, P.P., St Patrick's parish, presided, and Mr. Robert Warren acted as secretary.

Mr. W. P. Ryan, of the Young Irishmen's Literary and Benefit ociation, was elected marshal-in-

The following will be the order and oute of the procession:

The Societies will proceed direct from their respective halls to St. Patrick's Church for Grand Mass at

After Grand Mass the procession will form on Radegonde street, and will form on Hadegonde street, and proceed by way of Craig, Little Craig St. James, Inspector streets, Chaboillez Square, Notre Dame, Seigneur, St. Patrick, Laprairie, Centre, Wellington, McCord, Ottawa, Colborne, Notre Dame, McGill and Alexander streets to St. Patrick's Hall.

ORDER OF PROCESSION. W. J. Ryan, Marshal-in-Chief. Band-Flag.

-The Ancient Order of Hoernians 2-Congregation of St. Michael's. 3-Congregation of St. Gabriel. (Not members of any society.)

4-St. Gabriel '98 Literary and Depating Society. 5-St. Gabriel Total Abstinence and Benefit Society. 6-Congregation of St. Anthony. 7—Congregation of St. Mary.

(Not members of any society.)

Band-Banner. 8-Holy Name Society of St. Mary. Band-Banner. 9-St. Mary's Young Men's Society

10-Congregation of St. Ann. (Not members of any society.) 11-St. Ann's Cadets in uniform. Band-Flag.

12-St. Ann's Young Men's Society Band-Banner.

13-St. Ann's Total Abstinence and Benefit Society. Band-Banner.

14—Congregation of St. Patrick's.
(Not members of any society.) 15-Boys of St. Patrick's Christian Brothets Schools.

16-St. Patrick's Cadets, Company No. 1, in uniform. 17.-St. Patrick's Cadets, Company

No. 2, in uniform. Band-Flag. 18-Young Irishmen's Literary and Benefit Association. Band-Father Matthew Banner. 19-St. Patrick's Total Abstinence and Benefit Society.

Band-Banner. 20-St. Patrick's Society.

The Mayor and invited guests. The Clergy.

Will Hold Banquet

One of the important evening celebrations of the National festival in this city will be the banquet to be given by the parent Irish organization of Montreal. Mr. Justice Do-herty, the president, will be in the chair, and the guests will include the Hon, Charles Fitzpatrick, Minister of Justice; the Hon. R. Prefontaine, Minister of Marine and Fisheries; Mr R. L. Borden, M.P., Mr. F. D. Monk, M.P., the Hon. Dr. Guerin, M.L.A., His Worship Mayor Laporte, and the presidents of the following sister societies: -St. George's, St. Andrew's, Caledonian. Irish Protestant Benevolent Society, St. David's and St.

Jean Baptiste Society. The vicechairs will be occupied by Dr. Devlin

Mr. F. J. Curran and Mr. Frank J.

The programme of toasts will be "The King," "Ireland," "Canada," "Our Guests," "The Press," and "The Ladies."

St. Patrick's Entertainment At the Windsor Hall.

Rev. Dr. Luke Callaghan has com pleted all arrangements for his tertainment on St. Patrick's Day. which will be held at the Windsor Hall, afternoon and evening. torical sketches portraying striking scenes in Irish history, will be presented by leading performers of this city. The afternoon will be devoted to the entertainment of the young folks, when the pupils of St. Patrick's (Boys) School will put on the boards a drama, and in the evening the seniors of both sexes will be en tertained.

A. O. H. and St. Patrick's Day.

Division No. 5, A.O.H., has com pleted all arrangements for their cuchre and social, which will be held in the Royal Bank Hall, Notre Dame and Seigneur streets, on St. Patrick's

It is expected that a large gathering will join the members of this progressive and enthusiastic branch on the occasion.

Young Irishmen Will Hold Celebration at Monument

National.

The Young Irishmen's L. & B. Association will stage a grand Irish drama in the Mounment National on St. Patrick's night. As already announced in the "True Witness," the cast of characters will comprise some of the most clever amateurs in Irish ranks in Montreal. Not effort is being spared to secure all the accessonies that go to make the presentation realistic in all its details. Costumes, scenery and music will be elaborate. The sale of seats is progressing and it would seem from present indications that the old organization will attract a grand gathering to join it in fittingly celebrating the day of all days of the year.

Ireland's Feast In San Francisco

Some idea of the enthusiasm displayed in San Francisco, in connection with th celebration of Erin's national festival, may be had from the following clipping which we have taken from the Monitor of that city:

"K. R. B. Hall was taxed to its utmost limit when Chairman M. Casey called the St. Patrick's Day convention to order Sunday afternoon. Every seat was occupied, and standing room within the hall was at a premium. The hall committee, through Mr. Mulhern, reported hav-ing secured Mechanics' Pavilion for the evening entertainment and ball. Michael Casey informed the convention that he invited Bishop Conaty of Los Angeles to deliver an oration of the 17th, but up to that time had received no reply. Mr. Mulhern also stated that he had invited Mr. Michael Davitt, but owing to business engagements that great Irish champion could not leave New York in time to reach the Pacific Coast on The afternoon celebration will all likelihood consist of athletic events at the Presidio athletic grounds, together with a hurling game and Gaelic dancing. A committee will be appointed at the next meeting to request the Mayor and Board of Supervisors to raise the Irish flag with the American over the City Hall, and also ask the School euchre prizes were Mr. W. A. Hodg-Board to allow children of Irish parents to absent themselves chool on the 17th without loss attendance, credits to take part in the celebration. The press will be requested to give space in its umns for the purpose of asking business houses to give a half holiday to those of their employes who wish to attend.

Ecclesiastical Notes,

His Grace Archbishop Bruchesi has made several important appointments of which the following are the most noteworthy: The Rev. George Gauthier has been appointed a titular Canon of the Cathedral of Montreal. Rev. Father Leccq, the able and distinguished Superior of the Seminary, and of the Sulpicians, as wen as the Rev. Father Villenenue, have been created honorary canons of St. James' Cathedral, Montreal. Rev. Father Philippe has been made chap-lain of the Cathedral. Rev. V. Du-puis, the pastor of St. Cuthbert, and Rev. G. M. LaPailleur, the beloved pastor of the Church of the Infant troy him.

Jesus, at Mile End, have been invested with the dignity and titles Vicars of the diocese. Rev. M. Dezeit Labreche has been appointed chaplain of the Institute of St. Benoit-Joseph at Long Point, under the charge of the Brothers of Charity.

And, finally, Rev. J. Dupuis has been named chaplain of the Convent of the Sacred Heart at Sault au Recollet. From time to time changes are rendered necessary by the death of priests, by promotions, on by other causes, and it is thus that His Grace perfects the grand work of this diocese, by placing the proper workman at the post where he can do the most good, and by honoring the faithful priests who have labored in Christ's vineyard.

IN OUR PARISHES,

ST. PATRICK'S-The last week of the Lenten Mission, now in progress as we go to press, for the men of this parish, is a great success. Seldom, if ever, in the history of the old mother Church has such an as-semblage been witnessed within its walls. The exercises are conducted by the Paulist Fathers

ST. ANTHONY'S-The proceeds of recent entertainment, which amounted to $600, were presented to the pastor a few days ago. The amount will be applied to the redemption of the debt on the Church.

Miss Mary Doyle, who sold 130 tickets for the entertainment, presented with a gold ring.

ST. MICHAEL'S .- On Sunday last statue of St. Joseph, presented by a parishioner, was blessed and placed in position. Rev. Father Perier, Chaplain of Archbishop's Cathedral, preached the sermon. Leaving aside the dignity of St. Joseph and the confidence we ought to have in him, Father Perier drew attention parti-cularly to the virtues of St. Joseph. He was humble, devoted and pious. Although he might have drawn almost the praise of the world, he lived in obscurity, always prepared to follow the instructions of heaven to secure the welfare of Mary and the

Fraternal Societies,

C.M.B.A.—The members of Bnanch 26 of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association of Canada will attend in a body at 8 o'clock Mass at St. Patrick's Church, on Sunday, March 13, to receive Holy Communion.

Mr. W. F. Wall, President of Branch 26, entertained the officers or the Branch to a Progressive Euchre and dinner, on the occasion of his elevation to the Presidency of this Branch The winners of the very hand son and Mr. J. H. Kelly. the course of the evening Bros. G. A. Carpenter, J. H. Maiden and Blanchfield rendered songs in their usual good voice, and a very pleasant evening was brought to a close by three cheers for the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Wall.

British Parliament,

A very brisk and interesting discussion on the Somaliland expedition was originated recently in the British House of Commons by Mr. Charles Davlin, who drew attention to the immense sum—already £2,400,000—squandered on this ridiculous enterprise, while Ireland was refused even the most trifling contribution to such a purpose as Technical Educa-tion. He moved a reduction of the vote, and was supported, among others, by Mr. Joseph Devlin, who, in the course of a few vigorous and pointed remarks, expressed a doubt whether the Mullah was half as mad as the expedition sent out to des-

SATURDAY, MAR

The Saci

Eng., in his Lenten Pa. Of all the signs of de none is more alarming

sent day than the perni largely prevailing respectament of Christian in ing as they do amidst prevails, Catholics are the danger of assimila

nicious errors which per mosphere they daily breathe. Now we kn some of the common vic outside the Catholic Cl subject. Marriage is r merely natural contract, ed as a very ordinary n

as a not very serious is looked upon more as arrangement to last ju suits the convenience of or other of the parties.

the civil law recognize contract, but does it no divorce? And does it the remarriage, if such called, of divorced part

At best marriage is r

as a Sacrament, though religious sanction be at ceremony. If we seek these confused ideals as ate of the wedded state found in the action of Reformers, who denied

tal character of marnis

tioned the principle unions. Next came th

vorce, the prolific paren

ude of evils, wrecking of countless homes an abroad sin and misery.

differentiates the Church of marriage from that sacrament of the New .

a great sacrament," settle, "but I speak in C

the Church" (Eph. v.,

Our Lord and Lawgiv

ness of His power rest

primitive unity, and wi view He sanctified the tract by raising it to tal order. Hence it is of the Catholic Church

baptised persons the nat

of marriage becomes ip sacrament of the Law

moreover, there can be nial contract between is not at the same tim in its character. Thus

Lawgiver attached His nuptial union, sanctifie

obled it, placing it hig pernatural order, and a perpetual sign of union with His Spouse This He did in order to

ciety in its very sour human love with heav

This sacred rite is or craments of the living, n the fear of God, and right intention, receive measure the graces of t and along with the Chi

tion they ensure for the

for a divine purpose.

Not unfrequently

OUR TORONTO LETTER.

(From our Own Correspondent.)

rish is having its Forty Hours. Long before the hour appointed for Vespers was filled even the vestibules and the on Sunday evening, the large Church s being crowded. J. McCann, V.G., sank Vespers, assisted by Rev. Father Kelly and Rev. Father Williams. The main altar and Sanctuary were beautifully decorated, and the entire Church was lighted by numerous electric bulbs of white light. Rev. Doctor Teefy, Superior of St. Michael's College, preached an eloquent and soul-stirr sermon on the Blessed Sacrament singing, under the direction Mr. Douville, with Mr. F. Fulton at the organ, was exceptionally fine, the voices of the young boys in particular showing the results of training they are receiving, being in many parts like the musical voices of girls, and noticeably correct and pure in tone throughout the entire The devotion closed at St. Mary's on Wednesday morning.

WILL OF FATHER BERGIN.-The will of the late Rev. Wm. Bergin has entered fon probate. is valued $9,298, of which $8000 was in-The property goes to brothers and sisters, subject to a be guest of $500 to St. Vincent de Paul Society, $500 to the House of Providence, and $500 to the housekeeper goes to Rev. Doctor The library Treacy and certain vestments to two Churches in Tipperary, Ireland.

DEATH OF MRS. E. McGOVERN-On Sunday of last week occurred the death of Mrs. Eleanor McGovern, of sister of Mr. Justice Mc-Mahon and Dr. James McMahon of Toronto. The deceased lady was over eighty years of age and had lived in Dundas during the greater part of her life. She had been ailing some time, but retained possession of her faculties to a remarkable degree.

FORTY HOURS .- The Forty Hours have been already held at St. chael's, St. Paul's, the Sacred Heart Church and the House of Providence. They are now going on at St. Mary's and are to commence on Friday, the 11th, at the Church of St. Francis. A week from the Sunday following they will begin at St. Helen's.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN SERIOUS .-During the electric storm last week the Parliament Buildings had a very the electric storm last week narrow escape from being utterly des-The apparatus connected the telegnaphic system was struck by lightning, and in a minutes the front hall, in which the machinery is installed, was in The vigilance of the night watchman, who gave the alarm, and set the local appliances in motion, together with the city firemen, who soon arrived on the scene, succeeded after some time in extinguishing the flames. Men are actively engaged in repairing the injury done.

MONDAY'S STORM .- As a general thing the weather is not worthy remark, but the storm of Monday. the last day of February, was something phenomenal. It was the most perfect blizzard ever witnessed by the The resent residents of Toronto. city was altogether demoralized. For regard were catalogued as it stuck bravely to their work, but at ness. belated pedestrians in many instances | their knowledge of their religion, yet no Catholic paper enteres their house experienced something of the exhaustion occasioned by travelling in a snow storm. extraordinary winter.

NO PLACE FOR THE INSANE-The death of Margaret Wright, an old woman eighty years of age, which jail, adds one more to the many sad instances which emphasize the crying need at present existing for more mmedation for those mentally afflicted. In a rider to their verdict, is a friend and teacher whose influ-the jury urged the necessity for ence is incalculable and can never finding other accommodation for the be sufficiently estimated.

AT ST. MARY'S .- St. Mary's pa- insane in the jail at the present time The subject, during the past five years at least, has been brought before the public by different bodies and yet there seems no remedy. Despite the publicity given, there are doubtless many who are not aware that for those without money or influence there is no refuge for them other than the jail, should they come mentally deranged. The injustice of this is apparent and acknowledged by all. Yet nothing is being done. Mental sickness is not crime, and yet the environments of the criminal is imposed upon the one afflicted with a disordered mentality. And not this alone, but the friends of the one afflicted are subjected to the humiliation of going to the and there visiting the sick one, who forms one of the mixed congregation of sick and criminal who are lodged there. About three years ago young Catholic girl died under those circumstances; physical disorders had led to the derangement of an already delicate constitution. Her only crime was her poverty; had she had money another refuge would have been found for her. The priest who visited her for her. protested against the surroundings in which he found the girl; in the end she died alone and it was some time before her friends were notified. This and similar instances rouse the com-munity at intervals. The blame is said to lie with the different counties which are generally too persimonious

> THE OLD STORY:-"A journal exclusively devoted to Catholic news will probably furnish you with the desired information, which is out of

to provide a home for the few who may come under their jurisdiction, and so shirk the matter by foisting them on the jails. The late instance is only one more call for immediate action.

my province." The above quotation is an answer given by "Kit" of the Mail and Empire, to one of her correspondents, who is probably a Catholic, and who is thus directed by an outsider as to the sources from which he may obtain information pertaining things Catholic. This of course more or less conjecture; the enquirer may have been a non-Catholic. Yet the probability is largely in favor of the first theory, sufficiently so at least to suggest the question is the Catholic newspaper so little To those who support and appreciate one or more Catholic papers or magazines, the question may seen uncalled for; they may think all Catholics are as they; but to one on the watch for figures in this regard the number of supporters are amaz-ingly few. It is surprising, too, to note the tone of patronage with which the Catholic press is spoken of in many instances. Do you take such and such a paper? one asks. O ves. we take it; but we never read it; it is such a dry old thing, nothing in it but sermons. The answer, of course, is purely conjectural;

the one answering has probably never handled the paper long enough to ascertain its contents. There people too in every large city, wellto-do people, who are mean enough to go on week after week, and year after year, borrowing a Catholic newspaper; yet these people consider themselves honorable, and would be much offended if their action in this detime the men on the street cars serves to be, as the essence of mean-Others there are who pride and themselves on their culture and

The Catholic home in which February's farewell | Catholic paper enters is like the nonshot was an extraordinary ending- sectarian school; the atmosphere is it is to be hoped-to an altogether chilly and the germs of religion find little encouragement. papers provide the daily pabulum; nothing read during the w pares for Sunday, consequently Mass to in a frame of mind so non-recen occurred last week in the Toronto tive as to be little productive of the good intended. On the other hand those who value and read a good upto-date Catholic weekly, get to look upon it as a most welcome visitor; it

A memorial to the victims of the Iroquois theatre fire in Chicago is to be built. It is proposed to erect a

CATHOLIC EMIGRATING SOCIE-

ganized "Old Boys and Girls Asso-ciation," will hold a meeting at the rooms of the Catholic Emigrasing who regards not the sanctity Association to-morrow evening, wh another, step will be taken in the practical work of the new organiza-tion.

Wr Cecil Arden, honorary secret ary of the Catholic Emigrating ciety, will leave on the 20th instant for a trip to England. The "True wishes Mr. Arden a plea sant vovage.

St. Ann's Young Men Will Stage an Irish Drama On St. Patrick's Day.

On St. Patrick's Day, March 17th, St. Ann's Young Men's Society, as matinee and evening performance, will present "An Irish Rival" The play is fresh from the pen of Mr. J. Martin, the member-dramatist of the Society, being a revisal of the play produced years ago under title of "O'Rourke's Triumph."

It may be remembered by som the old patrons of the Society that the plot of the play is one of absorbing interest, telling a tale at onc sympathetic, simple, beautiful and true in every other detail to the racteristics of the good old Celtic

It may be frankly stated that the play loses nothing in the retouch it has been given by the author, Mr Martin.

The production is in the hands a cast with both ability and resolve to do it justice, and this confidence is emboldened by the pre-sence of Mr. Ed. Varney, who, it may be said, has cradled the drama tic talent of St. Ann's Young Men's Society, and made it what it

Prof. P. J. Shea has a number of new songs, choruses and Irish reels arranged and nicely adapted to the production.

The stage, its properties and the lighting apparatus are undergo-ing new and modern changes necessary to the staging of "The Irish Rival.

The orchestra chairs will be made stationary, numbered in theatre fash-

The plan of St. Ann's Hall will be on view every day at T. O'Connell's (Cor. Murray and Ottawa streets.)

JOURNALISM, RULING POWER.

(From the Catholic Forum)

Writes Bishop Spalding: "I should e willing to continue to live, if for nothing alse that I might keep hoping that the people will at last choose as their governors and makers, wise, brave, just and enlightened men, wholly incapable preferring private gain to public welfare. Would they not long since have risen to this vintue had not ignorance and sensuality been fostered in them by those who have held authority ?

made that our men of power have fostered ignorance and sensuality in the people for the sake or private gain, the which they have amassed at the sacrifice of public welfare. passions have been fattened, to-day our people are as slaves powpersonified vice and selfishness. do not elect wise, brave, just and enlightened men to office when we place there those who buy our preinal, enable right of suffrage with filthy lucre, or, worse still, win do not elect wise, brave, just and enlightened men to office when we place there those who have accumulated wealth and gained notoriety by catering to man's lust for things of the home, the purity of individual life, the preservation of morals,—know of national honor or integrity? \ The public mind is, to-day, all too fami-liar with the lower side of life what has made it so? Largely such yel-low journalism which has painted lurid pen pictures of crimes unmer tionable and unnumbered, and most graphically described the sensational appenings of police courts. The minutest details of these crimes ter cause, and their most passionate phases "featured" in many papers of to-day. Whatever applies the enkindling spark to the passions is given precedence—and for what? To increase the sale of one-cent news sheets most of which mix an ounce of fact with tons of fiction-for this, the souls of men, redeemed by a priceless sacrifice, are gladly thrown into the flery furnace of temptation. Is such traffic worthy of our support? -are such editors the proper mrectors of public thought and action? True, there are other agencies potent in this evil influence—as cheap, immoral "shows"-but these own much of their destroying strength to undue prominence and heralding given them by the press.

They may be very popular with certain classes—they may be powers in the world of finance—but such men must not be given the upper hand of our government. What can he—

Journalism is the great power of the present, will be the paramount ruler of the future, but journalism must rise above this grovelling mire. It must assume the throne of honor and, sitting in dignity upon a chair of justice, teach, as it alone can essons of virtue, recognizing that public virtue is but a manifestation of individual virtue, and that for a nation's honor, the honorable living of the individual is responsible. It must cheate a noble public by instilling ennobling principles into individual minds; it must right wrongs and denounce evil wherever mamfest. It must, when crimes are committed, remember that its readers are not all of calm, impassible, and unswervably-principled minds, and, regarding the young and those of wavering virtue, it must pass over, in silence sensualities, emphasize the baseness of the act, and call attention to the punishment sure, swift and severe which it evokes. Here, indeed, is a fit ruler for our people-the ruler of the future. Here is a lifework for any man, perfectly in harmony with the Divine intention that each should labor for his own and his neighbor' betterment.

A Patriotic Irishman Gone to His Reward.

(From our Own Correspondent.)

On Tuesday evening, Feb. William O'Neil, of Buckingham, Que., passed away to his reward. He was born in the County Clare, Ireland, near by Cratloe Castle, on July 16th

Mr. O'Neil was the second eldest of a family of twelve children, of which there were six brothers and six sis-His father, Mr. John O'Neil, ters. was descended from the O'Neils Ulster, who so valliantly contended with the armies of Elizabeth Cromwell for the sovereignty of Ireland. Mr. O'Neil's mother's name was Susan O'Shaughnessy, whose brother came into considerable prominence in Australian political life in the middle of the last century. With the blood of the O'Neil's O'Shaughnessy's coursing through his anything short of an Irish patriot in the person of the deceased gentleman, and certainly this expectation

Few indeed of the exiled children of Inisfail in these parts have taken such a life-long interest in the affairs of the Old Land. Every great designed to help towards the politi-cal emancipation of Ireland, had the hearty and practical support of the late Mr. O'Neil. In days when it was not so popular with the mas of our people as it is now, to advocate the cause of Ireland, he pleaded with eloquence and perseverance, and gave his financial support to

At the age of thirty, Mr. O'Neil left his native land to seek fortune in Australia. Melbourne, in Victoria; Sydney, in New South Wales, New Zealand were the principal scene of his labors there, and, at the end of six years, he returned to Ireland. The same year he crossed the Atlantic to Canada, and here settled down in Buckingham, Co. Ottawa, Que. He opened a general store and met with well-merited success. His reputation was that of a man of the strictest honesty with both his patrons and the wholesale houses where his purchases were made. Nothing in these long years since 1861 to the Young Irishmen's L. & B. Association ST. PATRICK'S NIGHT, ST. PATRICK'S NIGHT, Thursday March 17th, 1904. MONUMENT NATIONAL, ST. LAWRENCE ST. ARRAH-NA-POGUE IN THREE ACTS, BY THE DRAMATIC SECTION. erved Seats. 75c. General admission 50c & 25c. Boxes. $4 00 Further particulars to be had from Special Programme, which will be issued March 13 Reserved Seats on sale at MULCAIR BROS., 1942 Notre Dame street. TELEPROFE J. J. RANKIN, Secretary-Treasurer. GOD SAVE IRELAND.

SHAMROCK LACROSSE CLUB.

MONTREAL, 10th March, 1904,

The Annual Meeting of the above Club will be held on Monday, March 14th, 1904, at 8.15 p.m., at the Young Irishmen's L. & B. Association Hall, O'Connell street.

BUSINESS: -- Reception Of Annual Reports and Election of Officers.

Members are requested to pay their annual fees to be qualified to take part in proceedings.

W. J. McGEE, Hon. Sec.

picion on his integrity and honesty. In 1869 he was married to Mary E. O'Neil in the town of Buckinghan and this union was blessed with family of three children, two boys and one girl. Shortly after the birth of the youngest child, Mrs. birth of the youngest child, O'Neil died. It was a blow to the gotten. Mr. O'Neil was now called upon to bean the burden of bringing up his family alone. He did so, and with such success as to reflect credit on himself, for his children occupy places in the esteem of all with whom they have come into contact. His daughter, Susan, was married last summer to Mr. A. H. Kenedy, hardware merchant, of Buckingham his son William is still unmarried while the younger brother, J. Lewis, was married last autumn to Miss Minnie Wallace, daughter of Dr Wallace, Buckingham.

The two sons, William and J. Lewis have become by their father's death joint proprietors of their father's The children have all inherited their father's stability of character and love of the land of their ances tors. Mr. J. Lewis, through energy and patriotism, brought about the establishment of a division the Ancient Order of Hibernians the town of Buckingham.

The deceased gentleman, though advanced in years at the time of his death, will be mourned and missed in his district not only by near and dear to him, but by all who had the pleasure of acquaintance and friendship with him. Full of years made rich before God and man, closed his earthly career. Well then may we justly conclude that he went forth to a happy reward.

"One of the noblest works of God is an honest man." May his soul rest in peace.

NOTES FROM GRANBY

(From our Own Correspondent.)

Grandby, March 7th, 1904—A very successful mission, preached by the Oblate Fathers, closed last evening. The basement of our new Church although very large, was taxed to its utmost. The choir rendence some very fine selections, the solo by Mr. James Moriarty being much appreciated.

The contract for the building the new Catholic Church has been let contractors, for the sum of fifty thousand dollars, and our energetic pastor, Rev. Father Gill, is looking forward to an early completion o

Our trains, which have been run-ning so irregularly for the past few days owing to the bad condition of

(By our Own Correspondent.)

Tingwick, Que., March 8. The solemnity of the feast of St. Patrick was celebrated here Sunday. The high altar was tastefully decorated, and the statue of St. Patrick was ablaze with lights, and flowers tastefully arranged. Our pastor, Rev. Father Jutras, in a few chosen words, referred to the feast of the day, and the many virtues of this great Saint, especially his obedience in answering the Divine call to the Irish nation. In like manner he advised us to respond to the call of Divine grace, espectally during the holy season of Lent, and thus follow our Patron Saint. The choir rendered music appropriate for the feast. As St. Patrick is the patron of our parish, both the French and Irish Catholics vie with one another to render the celebration of this festival as solemn as possible.

At High Mass on Sunday, issued since his elevation to the See.

A very flourishing branch of the League of the Sacred Heart has been established here. The membership is over six hundred, with forty promoters. Many thanks are our director, Rev. Father Jutras, who is delighted with the success and the result, and also to oun President, Mrs. F. V. Lessard, who is a zealous promoter and indefatigable in her efforts to promote the love of the Sacred Hearf:

Two solemn Requiem Masses were celebrated this week, one on Tuesday for the repose of the soul of Willie Johnston; another for Emile Bourque

Last Friday being the first Friday our promoters and members of the Society of the Apostleship of Prayer received Holy Communion

Father Jutras was absent Wednesday to assist at the funeral services of Rev. Father Matte, of Plessisville. who died Saturday at St. Joseph's Hospital, Levis. On Thursday he attended the Forty Hours' devotion at St. Nobert, returning home Friday.

Patricia,

SMALLER HATS.

An American journal says: whether owing to the press campaign or a desire for novelty, quite a revolution has taken place in hats. Many smart women are wearing a small, close-fitting bonnet or beguin, made of jet and having a simple aigrette on one side of the front, or a large Alsatian bow of velvet, with an aig-

day of his death is there to be heard NOTES FROM TINGWICK

Father Jutras read a mandement from Mgr. Bruneault, the first one term it, that is, it is s its worthy reception t be in a state of grad quently free from all 1 Due preparation therefor made by every Catholic the name for its fruitfu is the Church's wish the circumstances permit th should be sanctioned Mass, at which the p previously confessed, sl Holy Communion. Th this way enter on their unfailing protection, wh shield, will cover them brief day of their earth It is indeed painful to the reverse of this would to God it were l forced upon our notice.

What a lamentable sig Catholic young man and young woman, childner parents, sanctified in t baptism and carefully in the Catholic faith, themselves as to think themselves for marriage the altar of God, or

CATHOLIC CHARITY

but before the civil re

Providence Row Spitalfields, was the of London's Lord Mayo

S L. & B. Association NICHT. 7th, 1904. AWRENCE ST.

RCH 12, 1904)

GUE

25c. Boxes, $4.00

ry-Treasurer.

CLUB.

, 1904, Club will 904, at s L. & B.

al Reports y their

ke part in GEE .

n. Sec.

A TINGWICK

f the feast of St. ated here Sunday. s tastefully decor-tue of St. Patrick ghts, and flowers ed. Our pastor, s, in a few well red to the feast of many virtues of especially his obeg the Divine call to In like manner he Mally during nt, and thus aint. The choir propriate for h the French and with one another oration of this fespossible. n Sunday, Rev. read a mandement vation to the See

ed Heart has been i, with forty pro-. Father Jutras th the success and to oun President, , who is a zealous atigable in her ef-he love of the Sa-

uiem Masses were the soul of Willie 10

g the first Friday arch, a number of members of the stleship of Prayer munion

as absent Wednes te, of Plessisville, On Thursday urning home Fri-

HATS.

urnal says : Whe

The Sacrament of Matrimony

his Lenten Pastoral, says : Of all the signs of decaying faith, none is more alarming at the present day than the pernicious views of largely prevailing respecting the sa-crament of Christian marriage. Living as they do amidst surnoundings which a low standard of morality prevails, Catholics are exposed the danger of assimilating the pernicious errors which permeate the atmosphere they daily and hourly breathe. Now we know too well some of the common views prevailing outside the Catholic Church on this subject. Marriage is regarded as a merely natural contract, and is treated as a very ordinary matter of busi-Not unfrequently it is treated a not very serious business, and is looked upon more as a temporary arrangement to last just so long as suits the convenience or whim of on or other of the parties. It is true the civil law recognizes the nuptial contract, but does it not also admit divorce? And does it not sanction the remarriage, if such it may called, of divorced parties?

At best marriage is not recognized as a Sacrament, though some kind of religious sanction be attached to the eremony. If we seek the cause of these confused ideals and low estimate of the wedded state, it is to Le found in the action of the so-called Reformers, who denied the sacramen tal character of marniage and sanctioned the principle of bigamous urions. Next came the law of divorce, the prolific parent of a multitude of evils, wrecking the happiness of countless homes and spreading abroad sin and misery. That which differentiates the Church's conception of marriage from that of the outer world is this, that matrimony is sacrament of the New Law. "This is great sacrament," says the Apos but I speak in Christ and the Church" (Eph. v., 32.)

Our Lord and Lawgiver in the fulness of His power restoned it to its primitive unity, and with this end in view He sanctified the nuptial con-tract by raising it to the sacramen-Hence it is the teaching of the Catholic Church that between of marriage becomes ipso facto a sacrament of the Law of Grace, and moreover, there can be no matrimonial contract between them, which is not at the same time sacramental in its character. Thus our Divine Lawgiver attached His grace to the nuptial union, sanctified it and en obled it, placing it high in the supernatural order, and making it a perpetual sign of His unbroken with His Spouse the Church. This He did in order to sanctify so human love with heavenly blessings divine purpose.

This sacred rite is one of the sacraments of the living, as theologians term it, that is, it is an essential of its worthy reception that the soul be in a state of grace, and conse quently free from all mortal sin the name for its fruitful reception. It is the Church's wish that as far circumstances permit the nuptial rite 6.) should be sanctioned by a nuptial this way enter on their married life in the fear of God, and with an upright intention, receive in unstinted and along with the Church's benedic tion they ensure for themselves God's unfailing protection, which, like a shield, will cover them during the brief day of their earthly pilgrimage. It is indeed painful to contemplate

What a lamentable sight to see the Catholic young man and the Catholic young woman, children of Catholic parents, sanctified in the waters of baptism and carefully in the Catholic faith, so far forget

the reverse of this picture, and would to God it were less frequently

Bishop Lacey, of Middlesborough, could for a moment suppose these parties retained one particle of Catholic faith, to see them thus calously profane a sacrament of God's Church and recklessly incur the guilt of sacrilege? Needless to say have made no preparation for this sacrament of the living. They have treated it as a profane thirg. They have shut out from God their mar riage, and we know that over the devil hath power (To. vi., 17.) But perhaps the parties betake themselves, not to the registrar's office, but to some non-Catholic church or chapel to go through a form marriage.

According to Catholic teaching this case is even worse than the former, inasmuch as they incur the additional guilt of implied heresy by receiving a sacrament of the Church, as it minister, and thereby incur also the censures of the Church. This surely is a serious aggravation of the evil. Nevertheless, whether the parties conthey go before some non-Catholic mimister to utter the marriage vows, provided they are validly baptised and no diriment impediment between them exists, they, in spite of them selves, receive there and then, amidst unholy surroundings, a sacrament o God's Church. A sacrament is no less a sacrament by being trodden under foot. If, as is often the case, a diriment impediment exists, the marriage is ipso facto null and void, even though it may happen to be ci-sacriligious act on that account. Mixed marriages, as they are called-that is, marriages in which one of the parties is a non-Catholic (but baptised), are not infrequently contracted in one or other of the abovenamed ways, and, of course, without the necessary dispensation of Church. It is needless to say that such an infringement of the Church's law constitutes a most grievous sin

Not infrequently, too, it happens in these apparently mixed marriages that the non-Catholic party is not baptized, in which case the marriage though legal, is canonically null and void until a dispensation has beer procured from the Church.

Thus much sin and misery, manifold complications follow the first false and fatal step of contracting marriage after the manner We will not stay to of unbelievers. enumerate the disastrous effects such unions on the unhappy offspring. Their sad lot is much to be deplored for they too often enter into an inheritance of woe. They are allowed to grow up in ignorance and frequently in depravity, and in all probability ge to swell that vast multitude of human souls who, alas! have not God in their knowledge. Thank God! it is hardly necessary mention the word "divorce." Howved may be the conduct of not a few tholic instinct revolts against divorce,, which they know full well can not dissolve the nuptial bond. They realize the Church's teaching on the unity and indissolubility of marriage made by every Catholic worthy of the name for its fruitful reception. It "What God hath joined together let no man put asunder." (Matt. xix.

We have deemed it well to address Holy Communion. Those who in gravest import, affecting, as it does, the well-being of society in its source. It is a subject on which oft.repeated instruction is very much needed, in pennicious views so widely spread. We trust the pastors of souls supplement our words, and from time to time enter more into detail, emsacramental character of marriage, the holiness of that state of life, and the vital importance of careful preparation for its reception by approaching the Sacraments of Penance and Holy Eucharist. May our Divine Lord grant us, through the all-powerful intercession of the Immaculate Virgin, whose sucour is unfailing, because perpetual, midst all the seductions of a corrupt world, to hold fast the faith which in His great mercy He has themselves as to think of presenting themselves for marriage, not before the altar of God, or His minister, but before the civil registrar! Who

CATHOLIC CHARITY IN ENGLAND

Providence Row Night Refuge, Spitalfields, was the scene of a visit of London's Lord Mayor and other

We take the following report of ad- sity of this city, has been named by dresses delivered on the occasion. They are well worthy of a careful perusal as they may remind us in this country, in the midst of the hurry and bustle of the age, of duties devolving upon us, not alone in regard to the homeless and afflicted but also towards those noble souls whose lives of sacrifice and probity, generosity of spirit made it possito thousands of human beings when circling them.

His Grace the Archbishop, in open ing the proceedings, said it was with himself able to be present that aftermoration of the foundation of this great work, to be present on occasion which was honored by the presence, to participate in that com-Lord Mayor of London. They were commemorating the memory of on who accomplished a great work indeed. Many pass from thein in London having accomplished much good. The clergy, having done their work, pass away, and because their work was confined to certain things alone there was little perhaps why their memory should live after them except in the grateful hearts of those to whom they had administered There were, however, some who were able to devote some attention work outside their particular sphere of labor. Pre-eminently amongst such was Dr. Gilbert. More than forty years ago he began the work of this Refuge in a small and humble way That work had steadily grown until it had attained proportions which were witnessed that day, and he was sure that those who were carrying on the work would not rest satisfied with what had been accomplished but look forward to do still greate things in the future.

They were gathered together honor the memory of the founder and to pledge themselves to do all in their power to encourage the work in sidered that the claims of the poor were ever increasing our charity and consideration for them would go on increasing in a like measure.

Lord Edmund Talbot, M.P., remin

ded those present that those who were sheltered in the home were re ceived absolutely without any refer ence to their religious creed. greatest care was taken to discriminate between deserving cases and those less deserving. As a proc of this His Lordship pointed that the Home was opened every night at five o'clock, because experi had taught the management that the less deserving were only too glad to remain out in the streets, only too glad to take advantage of

Mr. Justice Walton, in proposing a vote of thanks to the Lord Mayor for his attendance, mentioned that last year 50,000 free nights' lodgings and over 100,000 free meals given in the Refuge during that pe riod. Such a necord they had every reason to be proud of. He had the greatest respect and indeed all were under enormous obligations to those men who devoted so much time and thought to work amongst the poor but theories on this subject did appeal to him very much. The secret of helping the poor and titute was found out nearly years ago, and it was a theory sime ple in itself. The solutions was dis covered something like 2000 years charity. One example was to be met with in that Home. The speaker Mass, at which the parties, having you these few pastoral words on previously confessed, should receive this subject, which is one of the concluded by asking all present to

The Lord Mayor, in reply, assured the meeting that it had given him the greatest pleasure to take part in the proceedings that day. He had existed as he had driven through the ing. Day by day it was his duty to sit in a police court, and it was simply heart-rending to see poor wretched men and women charged offence mainly perhaps through not having a helping hand given them in time. The Crispin Street Refuge was very good, but it was necessary to take these wretched people from the beginning in order to affect some good. His ordship desired to express the opinion that such an institution might be greatly extended. He was glad to be able to take part in a teremony connected with a such a which had its foundation in such a the visitors made an inspection of the Home, and were heartly cheered by

A NEW PASTOR.

Archbishop Bruchessi to the pastorate of the parish of St. Louis France, rendered vacant by the appointment of Rev. Mr. Larcque visitor of the Catholic schools

NOTES FROM QUEBEC,

(By Our Own Correspondent)

COMING SOCIAL-Tara Hall has A.O.H., for Easter Monday, on which date that young, energetic and flourishing organization intends holding progressive euchre and social. They have already given a number of these social functions, each being more suc cessful and enjoyable than the preceding one. Under the presidency of Miss Katie Murphy, the Auxiliary has made rapid progress, an instance of which was witnessed at its last meeting, when six members were in tiated and several more balloted for. Miss Murphy is ably assisted by the other officers, whose ambition see to be to have the Ladies' Auxiliary in Quebec second to none in the Pro vince, and if they continue the work they are now doing it will not long till this will be an accomplished

ANNUAL RETREAT-The annual retreat for the married men of various societies connected with the Jesuit Church in this city came to a close on Sunday last. The preache was Rev. Father Turgeon, of Mary's College, Montreal. morning and evening the pretty little Church was literally packed men attending the exercises of the a retreat will commence in the same church for unmarried men, and continue until Palm Sunday.

THE MISSION AT ST. PATRICK'S -The men's mission at St. Patrick's Church commenced on Friday evening. As anticipated, it was attended, the sacred edifice being filled at all the exercises. The evening services are attended by a great many non-Catholics, who appear to take a profound interest in the sermons, and it would surprise no one if there were a number of converts in the future. On Sunday afternoon Father Sterne delivered a special dis course to married men. For hour and forty minutes he held 'his listeners spellbound, during which time he pointed out in no uncertain way the duties of husbands and fathers of families. The cause much unhappiness in the family circle was touchingly dwelt upon and the remedies to be applied to bring about a change were outlined in a manner which made a profound impression upon all present. About nine o'clock each evening the large bell is tolled, while prayers are being recited for the conversion of sinners, reminding those at home to also pray for the same intention. OBITUARY-There passed away last week another of Quebec's old residents in the person of Mrs. W. B. Vallean (nee Georgina Dorney) relict of the late W. B. Vallean, in his life time merchant tailor. Deceased had attained the good old age of 80 years, and leaves a family of several children to mourn her loss, one whom being Mrs. H. J. W. Carbray, of Montreal. The funeral service took place in the chapel of the Hotel Dieu, the celebrant of the Requiem Mass being Rev. Father Delargy, C. SS.R., assisted by deacon and subdeacon. The remains were interred in St. Patrick's Cemetery.

RETURNED HOME.-Mgr. Tetu, who has been spending some time in the South, has returned home, looking remarkably well.

ST. JEAN BAPTISTE CHURCH- standard of education and the gene-The Jesuit Fathers commenced a week's mission for the female portion of St. Jean Baptiste's parish, this city, on the 6th instant. On the 12th a mission fon the men of the same parish will begin.

AN INNOVATION .- In addition to the entertainment to be given on St. Patrick's night, under the auspices of Literary Institute, it is announced that a concert will be given in the Y.M.C.A. Hall (presumably by the Irish Protestants), at which it is said a choice prognamme of Irish songs and music will be ren-dered. This is something new in this

THREATENED STRIKE - The demand for an increase of wages, to take effect April 1st. Should the em-ployers fail to comply with the de-mand the men threaten to go on ship or favor. One of Chicago's most brilliant lawyers asserted few days ago that any average lawyer had ability enough to handle nine-tneths of the cases tried in any court, and the reason some men stary ed at the law and some grew rich was simply because some did not successful ones did. He maintained that there were few cases that 1equired unusual ability, and that al- least $10,000. It is not every one most any lawyer knew law enough that by minding somebody else's to handle any of the others if he business can hand out an idea worth could only get a chance at them. He $10,000; still it often happens that ples that the key to unusual success in the law was not great ability as a lawyer but preeminent ability in the art of making and keeping friends.

FRIENDSHIP AND BUSINESS.

As it is in the law, so it is in every other profession and business Is it the string of letters after doctor's name, indicating scholarship or the reputation among his coleagues for fine work in the hospitals or lecture room that insures his sucat all. But if he has a pretty wit. that will help him. If his table talk is sparkling so that he is in demand as a dinner guest; if he can lead a cotillon with grace and distinction he is sure to succeed if he has just good average ability as a physician. The young physician who lacks so cial graces often, if he is long-headed, selects a poor city district crowded with a foreign population. He knows that here he must often give his si vices, that he must work hard, but and a host of friends he must have all the more of them if they are poor and humble. When he has won reputation and built up a practice ere, then he will open an office in pleasanter neighborhood. This deliberate scheming to gain friends and adherents shows cold business sense on the docton's part, and based on the old belief that business is obtained through friendship. Many business men join certain expensive clubs for no other reason than to have a place to entertain handsomely men from whom they expect to get business. Nearly all men who have out of town customers whom they have a good excuse for entertaining do the. Others whose business is more narrowly restricted of their business capital, for to entertain a man at one's club seems much less crudely obvious than to entertain him at some public place. Some men go further and do not hesitate to use their social or family position to further their business interests. In the social world a single introduction is sometimes the favor with which business is bought.

But this "showing a man a good as a means of gaining his favor is less practiced than it used to be. Once you frankly treated a man to cigars and set up the drinks if you could get the opportunity in or phere of good fellowship before aslmake the opportunity you took him him with your raciest stories, and if you dared you ventured on a sly bit of flattery. But the tone of the comdegrees pretty much all over country in the last few years, and men in the same line of business as those who accepted your drinks and cigars ten years ago, to-day would be insulted if you offered them such a sop in order to gain business. The ral social tone of the commercial getting a man is as a customer would have been so raised you have long time before you ask him out to dinner.

ing business through friendship fallen | -John A. Howland in the Chicago into disuse? Not a bit of it. It is Tribune.

The old principle still holds true as much in force as ever it was-even more since competition grows fiercer and fiercer-only to-day the means of gaining patronage through favor are more subtle and require more delicate handling. To-day you must offer the business man something he cannot always buy: if you would please him give ideas that he can use in his business.

Mr. G. W. Perkins, of J. P. Morgan & Co., says that a valuable idea for his business is worth at said he could prove by many exam- an outsider may, from his point of view, make a suggestion that is valuable to the man who has concentrated his attention upon that business for years. And the wideawake business man of to-day is willing to take suggestions from any source; he recognizes the fact that the most valuable thing you can offer him is an idea that he can use to the improvement of his business. It makes no difference to him that the offering of any suggestion is a criticism, he is glad to learn by courteously offered criticism from any one. (licitation as well as many others pertinent to a man's business is the most valuable thing you can offer him in increasing their own business. Such men deliberately study up on to get his point of view, to see what he is aiming at, his means for securing that aim, and the degree of sucgestions for that man if they can, for the purpose of getting his Lusican give a man the least suggestion will help him in his business they have attracted that man's favorable attention to whatever they wish They have not only attracted his interested attention but they earned his lasting gratitude and special confidence.

For instance, the man who wants the contract to do the interior decorating of a big department building studies up on the building from more points of view than his own. If the building is under way before the contract for the decoration is let, looks over the foundations, materials on hand, etc., and if he finds out that the owner is paying too much for his materials on if he is not getting the materials he is paying for he makes use of those facts in his first interview. If he makes a practical suggestion that the owner can use, that decorator has the ,nside track. The owner will listen to him with special attention and confidence.

The travelling salesman who intends to talk the merits of a certain style of shoes to the owner of a department store in a small town or city looks over the store, and in parapproaching the proprietor. salesman comes from any metropolitan city perhaps he can suggest novel and effective window display, or something striking in the way of an advertisement, or perhaps he has money saving system of running a he tries to bring the merchant so as to gain his special attention.

Of course, it takes tact to tell another man how to run his own business, and here and there a man who would resent suggestions from dignity and returns nothing but sarcasm to the venturesome "suggester." But as a rule the more worth that are courteously and tactfully is for any idea that he can act upon. Thus the old idea still holds that, to great extent, business is obtained Has, then, the old method of gain- through special favor and friendship.

The devotion of the thirteen Tuesdays in honor of St. Anthony Padua, will be held every Tuesday, THIRD ORDER OF ST, FRANCIS leaving here on the 11th of June votion on the 13th June, the feast of St. Anthony.

BISHOP DURIER DEAD.

The Right Rev. Anthony Durier, Bishop of Natchitoches, Louisiana, died last week. He was 72 years old and had been Bishop of Natchitoches since March, 1885. For the pastitwo radus, will be neld every tuesday, ta 7.30 p.m., beginning Tuesday, the Hishop of Natchitoches, Louisiana, died last week. He was 72 years old and had been Bishop of Natchitoches since March, 1885. For the past two years he has been suffering from pargrimage to St. Anne de Beaupre, alysis.—R.I.P.

OUR O

00000000000

THE SESSION-Th

It had long been experal elections would pr

THE TRUE WITNESS AND CATHOLIC CHRONICLE

IS PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY THE TRUE WITNESS P. & P. CO., Limited.

UBSCRIPTION PRICE—City of Montreal (dalivered), $1.50; other parts of usda, $1.00; United States, $1.00; Newfoundland, $1.00; Great Britain, Ireland France, $1.50; Belgium, Italy, Germany and Australia, $2.00. Terms, payable in

All Communications should be admossed to the Managing Director, ''Taus Wir-"P. & P. Oo., Limited, P. O. Box 1136.

EPISCOPAL APPROBATION.

If the English-speaking Catholies of Montreal and of this Province consulted their interests, they would soon make of the "True Witsess one of the most prosperous and yall Catholic papers in this country. I heartily bless those who encourage this excellen I PAUL, Archbishop of Montreal."

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

IMMACULATE CONCEPTION:-We recently published the admirable letter of our Holy Father, Pius X., announcing the jubilee celebration of this year, in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the promulgation of the consoling dogma of the Immaculate Conception. It was on the 8th De cember, 1854, that Pius IX., of immortal memory, at the close of the Vatican Council, delivered "ex-cathe the decree promulgating then defined dogma of the Immacul-ate Conception. That was one of the most glorious days that the Church of Christ has known. The infallible Pontiff, seated upon the throne of Peter, announced to the world that the belief of the ages, the conviction of all the great Catholic theologians, the uninterrupted teaching of the Church in regard to Mary the Mother of God, must for all time to come be looked upon as a defined dogma of the Faith. This definition added nothing new to the teachings of the Church, it simply raised standard to meet errors that were cropping up, and declared the spotess of the one whom God had honored. No sooner had this just been paid to Mary than the delight of heaven was made manifest in a number of ways. It was after this recognition, so open and unmis takable of her prerogatives, had been made that the wonders of Lourdes commenced, and that in a variety of ways did the Virgin Mother make known to humanity the satisfaction that she felt and the pleasure experienced by Her Divine Son.

Fifty years have almost passed away since the day on which the world was made to understand that the one who had been chosen to carry the Son of God and to nourish Him with her own substance, had never known the taint of original sm. On the 8th December next, all over Christendom, two hundred and fifty if we can properly restrict ourselves millions of the faithful will proclaim loudly their faith in the consoling loveable dogma. Certain cate gories of men may deny this grand prerogative of Mary; certain others eer at the dogma; but surely the faith that claims the allegiance vast multitude of human beings, of all races, all colors. all ues, all conditions, is worthy of a respect that it not always accord-There are men who declare it impossible for them to believe that could have been absolutely without sin. Yet if we ask them their opinion of Christ as regards the taint of sin, they are sure to declare that the Son of God could not, under any circumstances, have contaminated by the moral infirmity that belongs to the human race. And in this they would be right, tf such. then, is the case, it stands to reason that the Eternal in selecting a human being whose flesh and blood were to give life-humanly speaking Christ, must have chosen one that had not even the slightest shadow of sin upon her. They do not ous ways becomes for us an object By the light of faith alone can we understand it, can we, con-ceive it, can we accept it. There is no reasoning process necessary.

When Christ preached . He asserted, He did not argue, nor plead, non reason—as did the ancient philosophers. He said : "I am the Way and : He said: "I am who am." He said a thousand and one things; but He invoked no rules of logic, no philosophic arguments to prove what He said. What He said men had to accept as such, and accept it without a doubt. The Church which He built upon a Rock, and which Ho declared to be the Pillar and Ground has followed His example roughout the ages and in all her She is infallibly inspirand she asserts the dogmas of faith; she has no occasion to spend time reasoning them out, or draw-ung deductions. She simply states and such a truth; and it is for the faithful to accept the same, because she speaks in the name Christ, and His assertions sufficed.

Hence it is that when the infallibl Pontiff, speaking as the Vicar Christ, as the Guide and Teache the Church, declared that the Mother of Christ was conceived without sin -without original sin-that she was spotless from the first instant of her existence, he merely promulgated doctrine that Christianity had was held, and declared that in future it was the duty of the faithful to believe the same without further explanation, elucidation, or argumen tation. And the Universal Church bowed down at once to that decision the act of faith was unanimous and the trumpet voice of Divine au thority sent forth from the Vaticar uttermost ends of the earth, and to the ultimate closing of time the sublime Truth that in her conception the Mother of God was imms culate.

On each 8th day of the month from this till the 8th December, special services will be held and special prayers for grace will be offered up, and one of the most beautiful confessions of faith that a Catholic can make will be the full participa tion in the benefits of the Immaculate Conception Jubilee.

FEAST OF ST. JOSEPH.-On the 19th March, a week from to-day, the Church celebrates the feast of By anticipation that feast will be solemnized to-morrow, Sunday, the 13th March. The reason of this anticipation is because the Sunday following the feast will be Passion Sunday, and no such solemnize tion would be possible on that day. The entire month secrated to special devotions to St. Joseph, who is the universal patron of the Church, and is the special pa tron of the Church in Canada. And to still narrower limits, we may say that Joseph is the particular general patron of our province.

There is no life, save those Christ and His Mother, more worthy of study than that of St. Joseph If we were to ransack the Scriptures from Genesis to Revelations, would find only one special reference to the foster-father of Christ. In that he is called "the Just Man." Justus Est," says Holy Writ, referring to St. Joseph. And that one eulo gium contains the sum of all, that can be said in honor of any of God. No matter what praises we may add; no matter what virtues we may enumerate; no matter what biographical sketches we may duce; all of them are combined in that single term-and it is more than sufficient to express them all.

Of all the examples of humility that the records of history furnish none can compare with that of St Joseph. He was honored to highest degree, for he was selected to be the guardian of the Blessed Virgin, and to be the foster-father of something that belongs to the main of the supernatural, it is of the world. He was content to pursue and all that sue his humble pathway, to ply his trade of carpenter in the little. lage of Nazareth, and to obey each command of God to the letter. He went up to Jerusalem, and then to Bethlehem with Mary; he fled Egypt with the Mother and Child: -he returned to his lowly home at the appointed time; he worked at his bench and held intimate communion with Christ for thirty years; he knew of the wonderful Treasure that his humble dwelling held; he taiked with God, in the Person of the Divine Son, even as none other, save Mary had ever talked with him; and, in all this he was silent to the world, mindful only of the duties set before him, and grateful for the suprem happiness of being the secret guar. dian of the Master of the Universe He was humble to such a degree tha in proportion to the promise penned by the Psalmist, his exaltation been beyond compare. "Et exaltavit humiles," and Joseph has been raised to a royal rank in the Kingdon of God's glory, while the honors paid him by men, throughout long gene rations, and in all climates, and in every tongue, are of a character lime elevation, has been the power given to him. "Never was it known that any one who had recourse to St. Joseph was unheeded," never was it known that anyone who invoked him with humility and sincerity was abandoned; and " is this assur that imparts hope to the sinner; con solation to the afflicted, and gratitude to the redeemed. The Church in each of her temples is one them to be found. In the midst, then, of the special and extraordinary devotions that, during March of this year, claim our attention, let us not forget that St. Joseph is there ever ready to bring help to need and to impart strength to the weak. Especially in the hour temptation and at the hour of death are his bounties most manifest. "Go to Joseph" says Holy Writ.

PONTIFICAL ADVICE-The world has already come to recognize and unostentatious men, whose very humility is the guarantee of his greatness, and whose simplicity of life and of thought, is the most perfect proof of his close imitation of Christ. Each year, in Rome, on the Monday before Ash Wednesday, all the preachers of the verious Lenten missions are received by the Pope. Christ assembled His Apostles and them forth to preach to all nations; and year after year, since the days of Christ, His Vicars on earth have done the same. This year Pius X., who is himself essentially a preacher, addressed the Jesuits, Capuchins, Carmelites, Friars, and secular priests who were to commence preaching the Lenten sermons in the various churches of Rome. As they stood in a circle around his throne, the Holy Father spoke to them from the fulness of his heart, and this was the burden of his remarks:

"Preach the Gosper, do not preach yourselves; be simple, and avoid vain rhetoric and useless orna ment-preach the Gospel first, and all the time.'

In this exhortation of the great Pontiff we seem to again hear simple and sublime words of Christ to His Apostles. He did not tell them to astonish the would with the beauty of their diction, nor to draw vast congregations to listen to the histronic attractions that belong to the profane, He simply said : "Go ye forth and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Fathe and of the Son and of the Holy He sent them out with His Gospel and a mission to preach it to all men. And, after twenty centuries, Christ's Vicar reiterates the same command and insists on the predication of the Gospel. What a glorious faith is that of the venerable Head of the Catholic Church When we pass along the byways of non-Catholic Christianity, and tice the magnets that divide with the theatres the worldly-minded and the wealthy; when we perceive how they depend upon all the up-to-date me thods of advertising, all the sensa tionalism of the age, we cannot but contrast their religion with that of the Supreme Pontiff who asks simply that the Gospel be preached.

CELESTIAL WRATH.-Some our contemporaries have witty columns, others have columns that are intended to be witty; it is the same for tiny paragraphs scattered here and there through the columns of them are really original and consequently amusing; others are forced that it is like drawing a tooth to get at their meaning. Last week a portion of the Legislative Building in Toronto was struck by lightning— -and this is the manner in which the simple event is told by one of our prominent dailies: Lightning on Wednesday night set fire to the building in which the Ontario Legislature meets. Even the celestial wrath seems to have been kindled by the doings which place there." Here is a beautiful ex ample of wit, or humor, or common sense, or elegant English, or what ever else it was intended to be. We have heard of the wrath of God, and the wrath of man, but what on earth is "celestial wrath?" Probably is a species of anger that prevails over in China. Then the kindling of that wrath is a process that we fail to understand. It was lightning that did the damage; and surely the writer of that clever paragraph never heard of lightning being kindled. The lightning was more likely to have kindled the building that it struck han to have been kindled by an kind of wrath-celestial or terrestia But the writer says that this wrath was kindled "by the doings which take place there." Where? In the in celestial region or in the Legislative to Building?

REV. WILLIAM GODTS, C.SS.R.

the Presbytery of St. Ann's that Rev William Godts, C.SS.R., so well known in this city, had passed to William his reward quite unexpectedly.

Father Godts was a member of the first band of Redemptorists who came to Montreal, nearly a generation ago, to take charge of St. Ann's parish For many years he was a prominent figure on the streets in St. Ann's Ward, and a most welcome visitor in Irish households. His work in behalf of the poor and distressed was a striking feature of his years of residence in the parish.

Father Godts was the author of se veral well known books, among the number, "Why do Protestants Not Invoke the Name of the Virgin," and labored in many lands. His death had gone some years ago to organize where he died, stands the new Church of St. Augustine.

A solemn Requiem Mass was chant ed in St. Ann's of his soul, the attendance, represen tative of every household in the pa rish, and from other parishes in the city. May his soul rest in peace.

A VENERABLE PRIEST DEAD.

The Rev. James Quinan, of Sydney, C.B., passed away this week at the Grey Nunnery, Dorcheste street, where he had been an inmate for the past three years. Father Quinan, who was eighty years age at the time of his death, had friends all over Canada. A solemn be against the aim of any true education. The education a boy should Chapel of the Grey Nuns, after which the remains were conveyed to Syd-such as to develop all the faculties of cuments are printed both in Dutch

DR. H. LADOUCEUR-A promising young man in the person of Dr. Har ry J. J. Ladoucer, L.D.S., passed away Feb. 27th, aged 24 y He was the second son of the late Charles Ladouceur, merchant, of St. Andrew's East, P.Q. He received his education at Bourget College, Rigaud. He graduated from Bishop's College, Montreal, receiving his degree in dentistry (with honors) in 1900.

He was well known in Montreal, where he practised his profession. In 1902 he opened an office in Bucking-ham, Que. His health began to fall and he was obliged to give up his practice a few months ago. His et, unassuming manner and gentle-nly deportment won for him many who will sincerely mourn his mother's residence at 9.30 a.m. on March 1st. The pall-bearers were his establish for all time—even had it never been written—that he was "the Just Man." Death of Father Godts

LeBlanc, of Ottawa, Ont. R.I.P.

the "Confessional."

He had attained his 62nd year when the summons came, and during the 35 years of his holy ministry he occurred at Brandon, Man., where he another Mission. As a monument to his fervor and zeal in the district reached the grand old age of been suffering from enysipelas. Father Quinan was born in Halifax of Irish parentage, in 1826, the year before the granting of Catholic Emancipation. He atten in his native city, and from there went to St. Andrew's College, P.E. I. He finished his education in the Quebec Seminary, where he was ordained March 12th, 1853. He took charge of the parish of Sydney 1853, and continued until October, 1900, when he resigned, finding his strength unequal to the work which the duties towards his now greatly congregation demanded. During his pastorship the Church of the Sacred Heart, the Convent of the Holy Angels, and other edifices are evidences of his Apostolic energy and zeal.

The grand old priest had hosts of

OBITUARY.

ST. ANN'S LYDUNG MEN'S SOCIETY

In ST. ANN'S HALL, 157 Ottawa St.

On ST. PATRICK'S DAY, March 17, 1904

Evening, 8.15 o'clock.

A Beautiful Original Irish Drama, interspered with Songs and Dances, and in the hands of an able Cast. Prices-Matinee, 25 cts. and 15 cts. Night-Reserved Coupon Seat, 75 cts. Admission, 50 cts.

Plan or Hall at T. O'CONNELL'S (Ottawa and Murray streets), here seats may be secured.

R. J. HABT, Secretary.

GOD SAVE IBELAND.

three brothers, C. E., G. A. and C. A. Ladouceur, Dr. Harry Thorsby of Montreal, Frank E. White and J. O.

MR. JOHN McNALLY-A wellknown and much esteemed Irish Catholic citizen-Mr. John McNally, son of the late Mr. Bernard McNally, died ek after a brief illness

Mr. McNally was well known in busincess circles and was associated with several local organizations, religious, social and athletic. He was gentle and kindly towards all, and made hosts of friends amongst all classes of the community.

The funeral, which was held to St. Patrick's Church, on Thursday morning, where a solemn Requiem Mass was chanted, was attended by large number of citizens in every walk of life.

To Mrs. McNally, the bereaved widow, and to her daughter, and the other members of the family deceased, we offer our sympathy in their sad loss. R.I.P.

MR. PATRICK KING -Death has claimed another citizen of our section a .mar of sterling qualities and charitable disposition, in the person of Mr. Patrick King, who has been a resident of Montreal since the days of the pioneen Irish emigrants. Mr. King, at the time of his demise, had . 84 years. Two sisters entered upon religious lives, one known as Sister upon King of the Hotel Dieu, and other a member of St. Joseph's Convent, Toronto. R.I.P.

Secondary Schools

Society was held in the Lecture

Theatre of the Royal Dublin Society

recently. Rev. Dr. Crawford president The Very Rev. N. Tomkins, S.J. Belvidere College, opened a discussion "A Curriculum for Secondary (Boys) Schools." The intermediate programme had been changed from time to time, he said, which seemed to show that the Commissioners were dissatisfied themselves with the wonking of it for many years, working of it for many years, and now they were brought into a kind of specialized system by the Board. His idea of education was that in secondard school the brain should be developed by the acquisition of know ledge, not the contrary. And it was that any specialisation would his mind. It was only at the a 15 or 16 that very much could be French and English. Irish Nationalknown about the talents of boys. What were the essential faculties of a good curriculum for a secondary system of education? All were agreed tics should be taught, but then came the question as between ancient clas sics and science. He held that the ancient classics should hold the most prominent place in the curriculum, and not only the most prominent but the essential place, if they were give an education which would velop the mental faculties. He ed that Latin and Greek could be both taught, and, therefore, fixed on Latin as the most mindforming of subjects. None of modern languages had at all the scientific perfection that Latin had. In Germany, out of 243,0000 boys in secondary schools, 185,000 were greater headway than any others.
Science should undoubtedly the street important to the street importa

ERIN-CO-BRACH. GRAND EUCHRE AND SOCIAL

Division No. 5, A.O. H.,

ROYAL BANK OF CANADA HALL THURSDAY EV'C, March 17,

8.30 P.M. SHARP Double Tickets, 75c. Single, 50c. Valuable prizes given for Euchre CASEY'S ORCHESTRA.

M. D. TRACEY, Sec GOD SAVE IRELAND.

tical as it was fifteen years ago. In fact Professor Ramsay said that the heuristic system, as applied to chemistry, was pure humbug, He (Father Tomkins) did not go quite so far as that. In the curriculum of secondary schools at least in those schools the development of the brain and in which the object of education was making a boy fit when he left school to specialize whether for commerce or science and art, on for a profession, that classics !hould hold one of the most important positions, and after that mathematics and modern languages. Mr. Moore of Clonskeagh, said he would put mathematics and practical science as more important subjects in a secondary school curriculum than Latin As subsidiary subjects he would place the Irish language, short hand, and bookkeeping. The subjects were, however, not so important as the manner in which they were taught.

Very Rev. Father O'Reilly, Terenure College, said he thought Father Tomkins was under a slight misapteaching practical science at present, for it could not be said at all that any time was lost over it.

Other gentlemen took part in the discussion and the meeting concluded

The Larguage Question

The dismussal by the Irish Lord Chancellor of a gentleman from the Commission of Peace for persisting in signing his name in Irish to official documents may render it of interest ge of and English, and, in Canada, ist members, as Mr. William Redmond reminded the House, have placed their signatures in Irish on the roll of Parliament, and it should not be forgotten that Mr. Thomas O'Donthe House of Commons-or, rather, ker in delivering that language are the Parliamentary Debates in Irish characters. The action of the Lord Chancellor in rendering the use of the Irish language an offence worthy of dismissal from the Bench can easily be paralleled in the old Penal Law days. An edict was passed in 1655 ordering all Irish papists and all Protestants unable to speak the English language instantly to leave the city of Dublin. 'Lord. Ashbourne's view on the Irish tongue, which is generally believed to be stimulated by certain anti-Irish colleagues in the Cabinet, is somewhat strange when we remember that his eldest son and heir, the Hon. William Gibson, is an enthusiastic student of the Celtic Chancellor in rendering the use of the session, but matters he and it is not even countries one will not be f other session next year

Hill everything is in re as your corresponder members are flocking in threes, and the Hous resembles a large colle summer vacation, when returning for another t so much rushing about hands, glad greetings, one bent on the nece tions that he expects comfortable for the cor legislation. And then eternal question, "How session last ?" If we are to judge by of private legislation of the Government meas brought down, it would three or four months s to clear off the slate. ts with the Oppositi 106 notices of private come in; this time la were 196 notices. The pal item of the official the re-enactment of the Pacific Bill, with wha tions may be made in ment between the Gove the Grand Trunk Compa alterations have been as Government and have be London by the Grand pany. The principle of remains intact; but the ing what may or may opposition raised when i asking Parliament to sa It is asserted Speech from the Throne an outline of tariff amer will probably give rise able debate. But this is and before these lines wil speech will have been pu we will know all about t the programme.

There is little use in now to foreshadow any work before the legislate the details concerning economy of the House of I can beforehand, state t court, the senior member will be elected Speaker Hon. Mr. Brodeur, who the portfolio of Inland 1

This is about the sum information that can be this stage. On account o having no Speaker, the l ernor-General, Mr. Jus neau, will summon the Co Thursday and then send to elect a Speaker. On Sovernor-General will att the speech and open Parlis adjournment till mon in order, when the Addr moved by Mr, Grant and Mr. Rivet. This will be th menceement of the work

OBITUARY-During the

THE WA

A correspondence dated Petersburg and published York Herald thus describe around Port Arthur. It i

Although almost four w elapsed since the Japanese tacked Port Arthur here, considered hardly to have I Heavy land fighting, u the fate of the campaign of not expected much before t April. By this time Russia in the field, exclusive of the army of men required to g railroads, four army co tillery brigade. All that pened so far, or is likely until these forces are in th considered, according to th view, to be nothing more of

The crippling of the Porfleet was unfortunate, in the to the enemy the command to the enemy the command at the very outset. It is, felatively of small imports the standpoint of the main of the war, whether Por stands or falls. But as holds out and the fleets is

MEN'S SOCIETY

, 157 Ottawa St. rch 17, 1904 15 o'clock.

with Songs and -Reserved Coupon nd Murray streets). ABT, Secretary.

O-BRACH. HRE AND SOCIAL

o. 5, A.O. H., OF CANADA HALL EV'C, March 17, M SHARP' given for Euchre.

M. D. TRACEY, Sec E IRELAND

fifteen years ago. In as applied to chemhumbug, He (Father ot go quite so far as urriculum of secondeast in those schools of the brain and ject of education was t when he left the lize whether for comand art, on for a that curriculum old one of the most ons, and after that modern languages. Clonskeagh, said he matics and practical mportant subjects in ol curriculum than diary subjects ... he Irish language, short keeping. ver, not so importer in which they were her O'Reilly, Tereder a slight misap-the methods of 1 science at pres be said at all that took part in the e meeting concluded.

age Question

by the Irish Lord gentleman from th ace for persisting in ender it of interest the Cape official doted both in Dutch ad, in Canada, in Irish Nationalsh. r. William Redmond n Irish on the roll ad it should not be Mr. Thomas O'Don-ne Irish language in mmons—or, rather, he eluded the Speathat language-are uthorized reports o Debates in action of the Lord dering the use of the offence worthy of e Bench can easily he old Penal Law was passed in 1655 papists and all to speak the Engantly to leave the Lord Ashbourne's tongue, which is to be stimulated by colleagues in the hat strange when his eldest son and Ham Gibson, is an

OUR OTTAWA LETTER.

(By Our Own Correspondent.)

THE SESSION—This were octawais all agog, because the fourth session of the ninth Parliament opens.
It had long been expected that general elections would precede the next session, but matters have had a turn and it is not even certain now if this one will not be followed by another session next year. Up on the other session next year. Up on Hill everything is in readiness; even resembles a large college, after the summer vacation, when the boys are returning for another term. There is so much rushing about, shaking of hands, glad greetings, and each one bent on the necessary prepara-tions that he expects will make him the diocese of Pontiac. comfortable for the coming season of legislation. And then there is eternal question, "How long will the If we are to judge by the amount of private legislation on hand and the Government measures to bo brought down, it would seem as three or four months should suffice to clear off the slate. But very much rests with the Opposition. So far 106 notices of private bills have this time last year ther were 196 notices. Then the principal item of the official programme i the re-enactment of the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill, with whatever altera-tions may be made in the agreement between the Government and the Grand Trunk Company. alterations have been adopted by the Government and have been ratified in Lordon by the Grand Trunk Company. The principle of the measure nains intact; but there is no tell ing what may or may not be the opposition raised when it comes esking Parliament to senction the details. It is asserted that the Speech from the Throne will contain an outline of tariff amendments that will probably give rise to considerable debate. But this is all surmise, and before these lines will be read the speech will have been published and we will know all about that part of the programme

There is little use in attempting now to foreshadow any more of the work before the legislators. As to the details concerning the internal economy of the House of Commons I can beforehand, state that Mr. Belcourt, the senior member for Ottawa, will be elected Speaker to replace Hon. Mr. Brodeur, who has taken the portfolio of Inland Revenue.

This is about the sum total of the information that can be gleaned at this stage. On account of the House having no Speaker, the Deputy Governor-General, Mr. Justice Tascheneau, will summon the Commons on Thursday and then send them back On Friday the Governor-General will attend to read the speech and open Parliament. Then adjournment till monday will be in order, when the Address will be moved by Mr, Grant and seconded by Mr. Rivet. This will be the real commenceement of the work of the ses-

THE WAR.

A correspondence dated from St.

Petersburg and published in the New York Herald thus describes the posiaround Port Arthur. It is as fol-

Although almost four weeks have tacked Port Arthur here, the war is Heavy land fighting, upon which the fate of the campaign depends, is not expected much before the end of April. By this time Russia will have railroads, four army corps, each with a cavalry division and an artillery brigade. All that has happened so far, or is likely to happen until these forces are in the field, is considered, according to the Russian view, to be nothing more than the prologue to the real drama.

The crippling of the Port Arthur

The crippling of the Port Arthur fleet was unfortunate, in that it gave to the enemy the command of the sea at the very outset. It is, however, telatively of small importance, arom the standpoint of the main streakery of the war, whether Port Arthur stands or falls. But as long as it holds out and the fleets is harboned in the field, exclusive of the larmy of men required to guard considered hardly to have begun,

tion of the Russian forces in

THE SESSION-This week Ottawa | last week, Mr. William O'Meara, of Pembroke, died at the Russell House here. Mr. O'Meara was in his 75th year, and had been one of the most successful pioneers Irish Catholics of the Valley of the Ottawa. He was in the lumber business for years, and had gathered a fortune of some hundred thousand dollars. On the day after his funeral, his only son, John as your correspondent writes the members are flocking in, by twos and pointed County Judge for Carleton, threes, and the House of Commons to replace the late Judge Mosgrove of Ottawa. This speaks well for both the fathen and son, and is an evidence of the good use that Mr.
O'Meara has made of his exceedingly good fortune in life. He was one of the great supports of the Church and of all Catholic institutions in ST. PATRICK'S DAY-Great preparations are being made for the colebration of St. Patrick's Day, and amongst other features of the programme is a matinee, in St. Patrick's Hall, for the children of the city. Revolving pictures, illustrative of Irish history, will be shown, and accompanied with music and a lecture descriptive of the scenes. In the evening it is expected that Bourke Cockran, the now famous Irish American orator, will deliver an address at the grand concert to be given. It is anticipated that a very large attendance will be had, especially as the House will then be in session.

AN EXHIBITION.—Ottawa has been favored this year with an ceptional exhibition: it is a winter fair. The live stock producers the Dominion are here exhibiting their best horses, cattle and other farm stock. It is exactly like country fair, only that it is held in the season of snow and ice. While the exhibition is a grand success, es pecially for a first attempt, it might have been still greater had it been that scores of exhibitors were afraid to venture their live stock at such a season. But they will cer tainly be encouraged by the success of those who have taken the risk, and another year there will be a still greater demand for space at the exhibition ground. This is only trial; and if not a failure, it will be the beginning of a permanent exhibition of the same character.

A LECTURE - Next week, before the d. Youville reading circle of Rideau Street Convent, Mr. John F. Watters will deliver a lecture on the First Queen Mary. Mr. Watters has now a continental reputation as a lecturer. He is a most able man, a serious reader, a keen analyist history and literature, a pleasant speaker and one whose lectures calculated to instruct and to make poeple think-exactly what is needed OBITUARY—During the course of tion.

> there it will constitute a potential menace which will restrict and hamper the Japanese operations, and the Russian are determined to defend r as heroically as they did Sebastopol.

No large garrison will be retained there; ten thousand men are as good as one hundred thousand for defence, while the more men the more mouths to feed.

elapsed since the Japanese first at-There are enough provisions there now to last eight months. In addition, there will be a division of Cossacks, with mountain guns, on the peninsula to oppose landings and harass the enemy if he succeeds in investing the city.

Viceroy Alexieff still retains his headquarters at Mukden, through which three thousand or four thousand soldiers are passing daily to the positions which the main armies will occupy. The Russians believe that for military purposes there is only one road over which the Japaness can come from Corea. All the troops landed at Chemulpo, Mokpo and Chinampo must use the Pokin road. Consequently the landings at Plaksin Bay and other places on the east coast of Northern Corea are not considered important, the absence of river will serve to harrass the my in every possible way, as well as hold him in check until the Russian main armies and reserves are concentrated and disposed. Sharp fighting may occur between the advance parties, but nothing of a decisive character is expected.

The Russian plans do not contemplate taking any chances on the score of inferior numbers. By sheer weight of men and guns, if when the proper time arrives, Rus sia counts on overwhelming the Japanese and rolling them back through

It is realized that the vastne the theatre of war will make the protection of the railroad, the sole neans of transportation of troops and supplies from Europe, one of the most difficult phases of the Russian military problem. With the Japanese in command of the sea there always the possibility of their landing small bodies of men in unexpected places to make incursions into the interior to cut the railroad and telegraph lines and blow up bridges but adequate measures are believed to have been taken to guard against such misfortune. It is a mistale to suppose that the Russians underestimate the prowess of their adversaries. On the contrary, they admit mate the prowess of their adversar the fine marksmanship of the Japaese and their marvellous ability in determining ranges, yet Russians do not believe that the Japanese can face successfully the legions of the Tsar.

On the sea the maritime life of th Japanese gives them a natural advantage, but on land, where belong all the traditions of the Russian army, the men of the empire have per fect faith, born of their numerous ex with pagan tribes and the fatalism inherent in the Russian character. They believe that Asiatics cannot meet Europeans in battle array, that a vellow race cannot triumph over a white, or heathens over Christians.

General Kuropatkin, who leave for the front on March 12, is expected to be on the ground before the real campaign opens. He has purchased milk white horses from an officer of the school to ride in the Far East, thus following the example of the famous General Skobeleff, with whom fought at the siege of Keok Tepe.

A despatch from Vladivostock, under date of the 7th inst., says : A fleet of five Japanese battleships and two cruisers appeared off this place at 1.25 o'clock this afternoon and bombarded the town and shore batteries for fifty-five minutes. The fleet approached from the direction of Askold Island, at the east entrance of Ussuri Bay, and about 32 miles southeast of Entering Ussuri Bay the enemy formed in line of battle, but did not approach to a closer range than five and one-third miles. They directed their fire against the shore batteries and the town, but no damage resulted, as most of the two hundred Lyddite shells failed to burst.

The Russian batteries, commanded by Generals Veronetz and Artamo noff, did not reply, awaiting a closer approach of the enemy.

The Japanese fire ceased at 2.30 p.m., and the enemy retired in the direction of Askold Island, Simultaneously two torpedo boat destroyers approached near Askold Island two more near Cape Maidol.

The Japanese ships were covered with ice.

the Russians, but cost the enemy 200,000 roubles ($100,000), in ammunition. Most of the projectiles were six and a half inch shells.

The population of Vladivostock was wanned this morning of the presence on the horizon of a hostile fleet and of the prospect of an attack during the day, but remained tranquil.

St. Petersburg, March 6-A communication from Viceroy Alexieff to the Czar, from Mukden, bearing today's date, says:
"I' most humbly inform your Majesty that the commander at the fortress at Vladivostock reports that at 8.50 this morning seven vessels were south of Askold Island. At 9.35 they were seen to be warships, making for Askold Island. About noon the enemy's squadron was about mid-way between the coast and Askold Island, making for Ussuri Bay. They were out of reach of the shore batte ries. At 1.30 the enemy opened fire.

Two vessels in the squadron were probably the first class cruisers Idzume and Yakumo, but the names of the mention any Russian losses, but private advices say that four sailors and the wife of an engineer were killed. It is apparent the Japanese were afraid to risk exposing their ships to the plunging fire of the land batteries, and it is considered pro-bable here that the attack was really to draw the fire of the Russian forts. compelling the Russians to disclose the position and calibre of their guns, and also to ascertain whether the Russian squadron is in port. If this was the Japanese purpose, it is believed to have failed signally, as the batteries did not fire a shot, and if the squadron is in port it could not be seen from the Japanese position in the Bay of Ussuri on count of the high land which rises from the coast on that side, structing the view of the harbor. Cossack scouts report that a Japanese column from Plaksin Bay, on arriving at the snow-blocked defile of the mountains separating Corea from Manchuria, was forced to halt owing to avalanches and other obstacles. The scouts say that onethird of the strength of the column is invalid. It is now supposed that the column is returning for the purpose of seeking an easier route.

ST. PAUL.

In the columns of the "Catholic World" Magazine appears a full report of the magnificent sermon that was recently preached, on the "Mission of St. Paul." by Most Rev John J. Keane, D.D., in the Paulist Church, New York. It would not be possible for us to give the sermon in full, but there are portions of it that are of great historical interest, and in which the life and perigrications of St. Paul are so clearly and concisely set forth, that it woulld a really lost opportunity were not to reproduce them. The grand principle at the basis of the entire sermon is found in the truth that St. Paul discovered for himself and subsequently made known to world :-"That Christ is the Wisdom of God and the Power of God. Leaving aside, then, the admirable comments and the elevated deductions of the preachen, we take the following extracts, that will give our readers a splendid idea of the life of the great "Apostle of the Gentles."

HIS BIRTH AND YOUTH :-"Tarus, his birthplace, was a Greian city of Asia Minor. In schools, in its assemblies, in the disputations of its public places, he had ample opportunity to become acquainted with the sophistical philosophies of the day, with their influence on Greek thought and Greek habits of life. He found not in these the wisdom that he sought. What ever glimmerings of light were were not to be compared with the light of wisdom which shone in God's Revelation to Israel. Therefore did he waste no time on the ob scure, the fragmentary, the uncer tain, but gave all his time and all his heart to the fulness and the cer tainty found in the Word of God.

"Gamaliel was then the most mous teacher in Jerusalem, and Saul rested not until he among his disciples. At that great master's feet he studied the utter ances of Divine Wisdom given through Moses and David and Solomon and all the sages of Israel. From Isaias The attack resulted in no loss to and all the Prophets he learned the nations, the Desired of the everlasting hills, for whom Israel been praying and sighing these many centuries; the Emmanuel, God with us; the Wonderful, the Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Father of the World to come, the Prince of who was soon to come to fulfil all the desires of Israel, and to make her enemies the footstool of her feet As the light of that wisdom grew clearer in his mind, there sprang up in his heant a burning desire to not merely a disciple but a soldier of that all-conquering Messias. His zeal became like that of the stern Elias, and he longed for a fiery sword, like that of the great Prophet, to smite the enemies of the Lord. He craved not only for the wisdom of the Lord but also for the power of the Lord, to overcome all

'Thus did he spend his years until the ripeness of manhood; and then he was enrolled and commissioned as a Scribe, a Pharisee, and a Masten of onsidered important, the absence of and Yakumo, but the names of the control of the vessels are unknown."

Official despatches concerning the bombardment of Vladivostock by a light guns now across the Yalu

Jesus of Nazareth had come and gone of COMING OF CHRIST:-Meantime, parition of the Nazarene. But now that he was gone, his disciples were proclaiming that he was the Messias, the Savior of Israel, and of the world. To Saul this declaration was a blasphemy against the Law of the Prophets, against all the wisdom of God. In the wrath of Elias he rushed forward to denounce this usurpation; to quench the lie, necesslary, in the blood of its vota

"Thinking that the massacre Stephen had sufficiently inflamed the zeal of the Israelites and dampened the courage of the Christians in Je rusalem, he rushes toward Damascus with a picked troop to the pernicious error and hinder from gaining a foothold among Gentiles. And lo! at midday light beyond the brightness of the sun flashes on him from heaven; he (and all that are with him are stricken to the ground; and they hear a voice saying to him : "Saul. Saul why persecutest thou me? It is hand for thee to kick against the goad."

"Who are thou,

O Lord ?"

claims Saul. "I am Jesus of Nazareth whom thou persecutest. But rise up and stand on thy feet; for to this end have I appeared to thee. that I may make thee a minister and a witness of those things which thou hast seen, and of those things concerning which I shall yet appear to thee, delivering thee from the people, and from the nations unto which now send thee, to open their eyes that they may be converted from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God; that they may receive forgiveness of sins and a lot among the saints, by the faith that is in me." (Acts xxvi.)"

"Trembling and astonished, he exclaims: "Lord, what wilt thou have me do ?" "Go into the city" answers the Lord, "and there it shall be told thee what thou must do.' He rises and finds that he is blind. They lead him by the hands into the city. Three days and three nights he remains blind, neither eating nor drinking, prostrate in spirit at the feet of the Lord, dying to the pnide and the self-sufficiency that have hitherto swayed him, sinking deeper and deeper into those depths of humility in which alone true noble ness of soul is developed, in which alone a man becomes fit to be the instrument of the wisdom and the power of God.

At last, Ananias comes and bap tizes him, scales fall from his eyes, and his soul is illuminated by radiance of Jesus, the Light of the World

"Instantly he makes atonement both the Christians and Jews of Damascus, by proclaiming his conver-sion and declaring to them all that Jesus is the Son of God, the Messias of Israel, the Savior of the world.'s

ST. PAUL'S PROBATION .- "But he knows full well that as yet has no fitness to be a preacher of the Gospel. He remembers, too, the promise of the Lord, that he would appear to him again and instruct him n all that he must know and all that he must do. As soon as possible, therefore, he retires to a secluded spot in Arabia, not far from the confines of Palestine, and there remains hidden for three years, the fact of a greater Master There he learns Christ is the fulfilment of the Law and the Prophets, destroying nothing but accomplishing all things. Day by day his love for Israel twines itself more and more around Jesus, his Messias. More and more clearly does he(see and understand how the Wisdom of God is summed up in the Word made flesh. And his proud soul trembles, as it did that day on the road to Damascus, while contemplates the humiliations of the Son of God, and beholds all cherished notions of a haughty, conquering Messias sink out of sight in those blessed depths; and thus comes gradually to appreciate that the abasement and the crucifixion of the Saviour of the World are the very power of God that shall break in pieces the pride and sensuality and all the waywardness of the sons

"Thus does he learn his mighty lesson that Christ Crucified is the wisdom of God and the power of God And now he is ready to begin the work to which his Divine Master has called him."

PAUL AND PETER -"But the work of Divine Wisdom is always a work of orden and sweetness. Therefore Paul's apostolate was to blend harmoniously with the Apostolic ministry already established by our Lord. By direction of a special revelation, then, he comes to Jerusalem to commune with Peter. ing fifteen days each pours out his whole mind and heart to the other. Together they adore the providence of the Lord, who has clearly marked the limits of their respective ministries. The mission of Peter is especially to the children of Israel; the mission of Paul is esperially to the Gentiles. Peter has universal jurisdiction as holder of the Keys of the Kingdom of Christ; Paul has a universal commission, as the Apostle of the Gen-tiles, to bring the scattered children of God in all the earth into the salvation of that one fold. Thus they, are to work together.

(Continued on Page Eight.)

DENTIST.

Walter Q. Kennedy, Dentist.

883 Dorchester Street GORNER MARSFIEL

100 Pails Scotch Cured Labrador Herrings In 20 Pails, only $1 25 per Pail.

PEERLESS MESS MACKEREL, in 5-10 tins, $1.25 per tin. PEERLESS MESS MACKEREL, in 10-Ib kits, $2.00 per kit.

Sliced Smoled Halibut in boxes, Boneless Herrings in boxes, Boneles Herrings in jars, Neufchatel Cheese, Camembert Cheese, Zimmerman's New, York, Vienna Sausages and Bolognas, Smoked Tongues and Smoked Breasts of Beef, Deerfoot Farm Little Sausages and Deerfoot Farm Sliced Bacon, McEwan's Portland Finnan Haddies

California Prunes. California Prunes.

table or stewing purposes, 15 cents per pound 2 pounds for 25 cents.

Fancy Evaporated Pears, 20 cents per pound.

Fancy Evaporated Apricots, 20 cents per pound. Fancy Evaporated Peaches, 20 cents per pound.

ENGLISH BREAKFAST TEA.

Only 35 cents per pound.

The Tea for the masses and the Tea for the classes At 35 cents per pound this is the best value in Canada to-day.

FRASER, VIGER & CO.

Selected No. 1 King Apples

For baking and stewing purposes the finest apple in the market to-day a selected (Nova Scotia) King. Try a baked King apple, only 40 cents per large basket.

Extra fancy Fameuse Apples, 25 cents per dozen. Large Valencia Oranges, only 15 cents per dozen.

Jumbo Valencias, 15 cents per dozen.

Seedless California Oranges, 126, 150 and 176 to the case, $3.25 per case, 00, 40 and 50 cents per dozen.

TITIAC TITA

"The Best India and Ceylon Growths." 50 cents per lb. in 1-2 and I lb. packets.

FRASER, VIGER & CO., ITALIAN WAREHOUSE, E-TABLISHED 1806.

THE NORDHEIMER Building, 207, 209 & 211 St. James St. THE EARLY BARDS OF IRELAND

``````````````````````````````````` vious to his ordination and mission was chief doctor and I in | Torna. He grateful to the lovers of Ireland than general interest that is being in the ancient music and song of that "land of song." earliest ages historians tell us that the inhabitants of Ireland were the most musical in the world. Its music is not only as old as any ancient music that has come down to us, but is infinitely abundant. The origin of the poetry and music of Ireland, ancient architectural remains can be traced to an oriental source It is to the period of the Scotic or Milesian dynasty that historians as sign the institution of the bardic or-

Tradition has it that Amergin, the younger brother of Heber and mon, sons of Milesius, King of the ern origin), accompanied the leaders Iberian Spaniards (a people of Eastearly invaders of Ireland, about five hundred years before the era, in the capacity poet and harper. To Amergin was assigned the post of Arch-Druid and or high-priest and chief Ard-filea. bard of the realm. Though the ori ginal of this bard's poems have been preserved, (in "The Book of Leins Trinity College Library) they have never been given an English dress. Their subject is chiefly a description of the island as he say it, sailing along the shores.

The time occupied in the education of the musicians and bards in the Druidic colleges was twelve years Their native tongue, extremely supple and melodious, formed the basis of a lengthy special training. Their me ear were cultivated in phenomenal way. The musician had to know at least three hundred and fifty airs before he was allowed to perform in public, and had to thoroughly acquainted with the endless resources of the Gaelic tongue. The period of probation completed, the bards were admitted to all the honors of their order. They were the rich scarlet robes of kings and took first places amongst the princes. They received for their rewards not merely cups and beakers of massive gold, but vast estates also. It is said that the whole barony of Carbery, in Cork, was once given to a singer as a fit reward for his skill as a harp-The harp, as is well known, is mentioned in all old Irish docume Its music is compared to the warbling of song birds, and to the zephyrs blowing sweetly over stately trees, in the song of Amergin.

At some unrecorded period a division took place in the bardic . office The order was divided and duties. into four classes: The Fileas, chief bards; the Brehons, whose di ties were legislative; the Seanachies, whose functions were antiquarian and historical, and the Orfidighs, or instrumental performers.

The Fileas were the chief poets and were in constant attendance on the king or chief. They accompani king to the field on battle surrounded by the instrumentar musi cians, for the purpose of describing their feats in arms: and the warrio ing's highest hope was that, in returning triumphant, his name might be immortalized amongst his fellow the bardic verse. In times of peace sed birthday odes, OF chanted tales to the sound of the

The Brehons assisted in framing and promulgating the laws which at certain times, seated upon a com manding eminence (This custom still of the Western Gael. exists in the Isle of man) they recited aloud in brief, sententious rhyme hich were transmitted at first oral w. and afterwards in writing ch generation of bards to their sucthe Christian era the bards had exclusive right of expounding the law and pronouncing judgments.

The reign of Ollamh Fodhla (3.0 archs formed an important er the bardic annals of the "Land of Song." This monarch was an illustrious patron of letters and the arts The most notable act of his reign was the institution of the terrory in Meath, the residence of the Ard-ri (the "over-king"), or supreme mo-narch. This national assembly of obles and learned men met on the the days of St. Patrick. One of the st. of November every three years | Femien lays (published with a transfor the threefold purpose of enacting laws, of verifying the chronicles of the land, and of transcribing them into the Psalter of Tara.

THE SERVICE OF THE PRESENCE OF THE PROPERTY OF

The monarch's palace at Tara wa famous for its music; indeed, its name neans the hall of music. Its glories have been immortalized by Moore in "Irish Melodies."

As we approach the dawn of the Christian era we find several bards some of whose remains have been handed down to us in grave histori cal treatises, many centuries old. This period of Ireland's history has illustrious not less in her annals than in song as the bright period

When her kings, with banner gneen unfurled. Led the Red-Branch Knights danger, Ere the emerald gem of the western world

Was set in the crown of stranger."

During the reign of Conary I., in the first century A.D., these Red-Branch Knights of Ulster became fa mous. Their greatest commander was Cuculainn, the mightiest of all the Irish before of antiquity. and the finest of the romantic stories the "Book of Leinster" and other old Irish manuscripts, have as their subject those Red-Branch Knights. One very interesting poem is written on this hero of Cualnia by some anonymous bard. From the language and idiom, it has been pronounced Gaelic scholars one of the oldest heroic poems in the language. It is founded on a tale of unfortunate love and female revenge; and judging by the excellent poetical translation of it by Miss Charlotte Brooke in her 'Reliques of Irish Poetry (1789),' the original must have been one those masterpieces which, by a few delicate strokes of nature and sent ment, show us the soul of a hero oppressed with a weight of woe, stung to madness by the most peig nant grief.

The reign of Cormac MacArt, the illustrious of all the pagar most kings of Ireland, forms another brilliant period in the annals. Among important acts of his reig many was the founding of three colleges at Tara ' one for the teaching of law one for history and literature; and third for military science also established a standing body of militia for the defence of the throne, very like the Red-Branch Knights of an earlier period. They were called the "Fena of Erin," Fianna Eireann. (In peace these warriors numbered 9000, in war 20,000. In winter they lived in small parties with the inhabitants of the country, while in summer they maintained themselves by hunting, etc.) Their most cele brated leader was King Cormac's sonin-law, Finn MacCool. The names of this hero and his sons, Oisin and Fergus, are intimately connected with Irish song.

When Finn was on the point of be ing married to his first wife, Grainne she eloped with his friend Diarmuid, rings of the lovers Finn's pursuit formed a most fruitful theme for the Fena romances Diarmuid eventually met his death from the thrust of a wild boar rival's death is the subject of one of Sir Samuel Ferguson's beautiful Lays

It appears that Finn was outshone by his son, Oisin, in many accom plishments, especially poetry be found in the "Book of Leinster. is valuable as a record of the great battle of Gahhra (now called Skreen near Tara), which was fought A.D 284. A perfect and very accurate copy of this poem was published by Ossianic Society in the 1854. Another poem by this hero and bard (Oisin), preserved in the "Book of Leinster," is of much grea-"Book of Leinster," is of much greater length than the first. Oisin him self fought at Gahhra, where th Fenil power was completely broken He is labled after the battle to have been spirited away to Tin-na-Og (the have appeared again on earth untilation by the Ossianic Society 1875)-"The Lamentation of Oisin after the Fenians'-gives an account of his interview with the saint, longings for the great pagan past his grief at the loss of his Fenian companions, and his tempt for Christianity and its pro To Oisin's brother, Fergus, called fell the duty of chief bard to the Fenii. He is credited with extraordinary power over the militia, who were very often disturbed by the heartburnings of the rival septs of their respective leaders. There is a nota-ble example of his persuasive cloble example quence exerted in evoking the halcyon of peace. On one occasion, when a chief was at fault, and the contention for precedence had assumed serious aspect, and threatened such consequences that the bards had to use their utmost authority to soothe the chafed spirits of the chiefs, and pour oil upon the troubled waters To effect this they shook the chain of silence (a practical figure or rhe toric) and flung themselves among the ranks, extolling the sweets peace, and the achievements of the combatants' ancestors. Immediately the contending parties laid down their arms, listened with attention to the harmonious lays of their bards and in the end rewarded them with precious gifts. Fergus composed an ode on this occasion, from which the following passage is taken:

"Hear O Finn ! thy people's voice! Trembling on our hills, we plead-Oh, let our fears to peace incline thy choice.

Divide the spoil, and give the hero's mead ! For bright and various is his wide renown. And war and science weave his glori ous crown !" *

(*Ode to Gaul, the son of Morni Translation by Miss Brooke.)

Another interesting ode by Fergus, which survives through Miss Brooke's a good specimen of the war songs of these far-off days. It is addressed by the bard to Osgur the son of Oisin, on the occasion o the battle of Gahhra. Osgur commanded and achieved incredible hur fruitless feats of heroism with little band of Fenian militia against Cairbre, the supreme monarch of Ire land, who had determined to crus out this celebrated legion, of which

'Rise, might of Erin! rise O Osgur of the generous soul! Now on the foe's astonish'd eyes Let thy proud ensigns wave dismay Now let the thunder of thy battle roll, he had long been jealous.

And hear the palm of strength and victory away !

'Son of the sire whose stroke is fate Be thou supreme; Let conquest on thy arm await

In each conflicting hour; Slight let the force of adverse

Till o'er their prostrate ranks thy shouting squadrons pour !

'Oh, hear the voice of lofty song ! Obey the bard !-Stop-stop McGarat! check his pride.

nd nush resistless on each regal foe! Thin their proud ranks, and give the smoking tide Of hostile blood to flow! Mark where MacCormac pours along Rush on-retard

His haughty progress! Let thy might Rise, in the dreadful fight, O'er thy pnime foe supreme.
And let the stream

Of valor flow, Until the brandish'd sword Shall humble ev'ry haughty foe.

And justice be restored. Thine he the battle-thine the sway! On, on to Cairbre hew thy conquer

And let thy deathful arm dash safety from his side ! As the proud wave, on whose broad

The storm its burden heaves

Its ruin leaves;

So let thy sweeping progress roll
Fierce, resistless, rapid, strong;
Pour, like the billow of the alood, o'erwhelming along!

The last of the pagan bards

arch-bard at the close of the fourth and the beginning of the fifth cen-He fostered Niall of the Nin plished and ambitious warriors of all the Irish monarchs. Eugene O'Cur an interesting account of such of Torna's poems as have tome down to our day, amongst the most valuable being one enumerating the great men interred at Ratherognan, County of Roscommon.

The introduction in the early par of the fifth century, of the light Christianity to Ireland, far from proving prejudicial to the pagan hards only served to give a more exalted direction to their powers; for the music of the bards had a very powerful and controlling influen the character and impulses of the people, and the bards themselves were prepared and attuned by the refining strains of their own sweet music for the reception of the truth; they listened eagerly to the inspired eloquence of the Apostle Patrick at Tara, were the first to abandon Druid ism, and spent the rest of their days diffusing the more elevating faith. In fact, music was a powerful agent in the conversion of the people, for as music flowed into their ears, truth was instilled into their hearts. old Irish phrase, "Bocht an Eaglass bhios gan cheol" (the church that has no music is very poor indeed), aptly describes the high esteem the use of music in divine service had already attained The old hards and the 'files," or poets, became the friends of St. Patrick, and put the Brehon journeys, and literally sang their way into the hearts of the Gael. Two of the most celebrated bards of the next century-the sixth- were Dallan Forgaill and Senchan. The compositions of Dallan are continually referred to by Eugene O'Curry in his work on the Manners and Customs of the Ancient Irish; the known is his elegy pn the death of St. Columcille. He died about A.D. 600, and was succeeded as chief poet of Ireland by his pupil Senchan. was a native of Connaught. Of his poems his "Lament" over the dead body of Dallan is best known. the spirit of the renowed chief, Fergus McRoigh, is fabled to have revealed to Senchan's only son, Murgen, the whole of the celebrated tale of the Tain Bo Chuailgue (Cattle Spoil of Cuailgue) is beautifully told in Sir Samuel Ferguson's laws into a metrical form for him-

'put a thread of poetry' nound then and his disciples on their apostolic and were wont to accompany

Quest." one of the Lays of the Western Gael. From the natural fondness of the Inish for music, and the great honors and privileges that were extended to the bards, their numbers swelled to such an extent that about this perio i they comprised nearly a third of the male population. No one had any control over them, and from being idolized by every one, from the kin to the peasant, they came at length to be regarded as a crying national evil. Besides burdensome to the state, because of their numbers, they dered the the nobility, whom they did not scruple to lampoon, that they three times requested by Aedh, of Ainmire, High King, of all Ireland to quit the country; but the province vengeance of the other Irish length a convention was called discussed, and only for the Drumceat in Donegal, about the year 610, at which the momentous question of their banishment was disarrival of Columcille from Scotland, this would have been decided upon.

On the saint's proposition it was agreed that the numbers of the bards king should have his ard-ollamh, every provincial king his own ollamh ch great noble his own poet and free, and were to be protected from harm or damage to their per-son or goods. The convention also passed a law as to the reward which the poets were to, receive for their poems, and were forbidden to ask or for the music of ancient Erin, and greatly revered the old poets and musicians who sang of the brave deeds of their kings and heroes. Pre-

Hebrides, he studied poetry at one of the bardic colleges in Clonard Besides his well-known Latin pe eleven Irish poems have been j The best known of are his "Lament for his Native Land," and his "Farewell to Aran" translated by Aubrey de Vere.

The reign of the illustrious Brian Boru served for a time to check the devastation caused by the Danes and Norsemen to the numerous institu tions of learning scattered over the Island. Neither poet nor musician said the historian Dr. Keating could follow his profession. The schools were broken up, the bards slain, and for upwards of two hundred years the people were so continually gaged in war and conflict that they had little time or thought to give to music and poetry. But when the invaders were routed the gentle sciences of life in Ireland began and blossom again. The grow chools, poets, bards, learners teachers, were multiplied again as o old. Bereft of its illustrious mon arch, Brian Boru, the kingdom con tinued for some years a prey to spirit of internal discord. Learning spirit of internal discond. Learning which had greatly declined since the eighth century, when the Danes made their first piratical incursions, had almost disappeared, and with it, in great measure, the spirit of song.

Though the poetical art languished its twin sister, music, was cultivated. Few writers have said harde things about the ancient Irish their manners and customs than Ge rald De Barry ("Giraldus Cambrer sis"), who lived at the close of the Norman invasion. Yet he praises the highest terms the musical gifts of the Irish. "This people," he writes, 'deserves to be praised for their suc cessful cultivation of instrumental music, in which their skill is, vond comparison, superior to that of any nation we have seen. For their modulation is not drawling and morose, like the instrumental music of Britain, but the strains, while they are lively and rapid, are also sweet and delightful. It is astonish ing how the proportionate time their music is preserved, notwith standing such impetuous napidity of the fingers.'

Indeed, the music of Ireland wa the many charms precisely one of that acted so potently on the Norman English who came into tact with the people. John of Salisbury, writing in the twelfth century. says of the Irish: "The attention of these people to musical instruments I find worthy of commendation." So too we find the Italian historian, Polydore Virgil, at the end of the sixteenth century, loud in his praises of the skill and elegance, the accuracy and rapidity of execution of the instrumental performers in Ireland. Well he might, for did not Lord Bacon say also that "no harpe hath the sound so melting and prolonged as the Irish harpe.' The harp is peculiarly adapted express the larguage of song. one who has heard it well played could be callous to its charms. withstanding the assertions of some Scottish and English writers, the harp is indigenous to Ireland; purely and simply, it has been th musical instrument from the dawn of Irish history. Some writers have erted that the Irish harp was crude instrument, of small compass place effects. This is as we know wholly disproved by many old harps in preservation. Among the most historic is the harp of Brian Boru which is noted for its elegance symmetry and artistic beauty. several old harps in preservation prove further that the Irish makers of harps had a good knowledge of acoustics, for the best authority, Dr George Petrie, tells us that from 1622, when the magnificent Dallway harp, which has fifty-two strings, was constructed, back to the Anglo-Noman invasion in-1169, the Iris bards were in possession of harps of sufficient power and compass to pro-duce those instrumental effects so highly eulogized by Giraldus Cam-assembled in Limerick that "any person who shall make verses to any one after God on earth except the King," should have his goods confiscated. A bard in those days would sometimes receive about £300 for a poem from the nobles of the country. Almost every prince noble, or great family had a special. bard employed to write poems in their praise. With the independence of the northern chieftains in the middle of the seventeenth century were lost the castles and lordly homes where the minstrels flourished. occupation of the bards was gone, and with it almost the sources the world's loveliest melodies all but died out. The soldiers of Cromwell and the thrifty settlers sent over by the London trading companies were not concerned with such things as poetry and music

A famous Ulster poet named O'Guire, chief bard to the O'Nials of Clanboy, about the year 1620, sang the following lament on the downfall of the bards :

"Fall'n the land of learned men The bardic band is fallen; None now learn a song to sing, For long our fern is fading. stir

In Ulster's land and Leinster, Southward 'tis so, nine in ten, From fine and foe have fallen. Connacht, crafty forge of song Is also hurled headlong: Doom and gloom has hushed heart. For us no room, no rampart."

But the musical genius of Irish could not be wholly suppressed, 'The charms of song," says Moore, were ennobled with the glories of martyrdom, and the laws against the minstrels were as successful beyond doubt in making my countrymen mu sicians as the penal laws have been in keeping them Catholic." In the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries there were sevenal bards of note. Donough Mor O'Daly, lords abbot of Boyle ("The Ovid of land"); O'Cassidy, a learned historical poet; O'Dun, bard to the Prince of Leinster; Conway, chief bard to the O'Donnells of Tyrone; and Carol O'Daly (brother of the poet abbot), the author of the beautiful song "Eileen Aroon," which contains music in fewer notes than almost any other lyric in existence. Handel is stated to have declared that he would rather be the author of that air than of all his grand oratories.

During the Fifteenth century few pards of any note illuminated annals of our country. The bards, aswe have said, were a proscribed race now, and the chiefs whose deeds it had once been their pride to sing were fallen from their high estate, like mighty oaks prostrated their hills by the strife of the ments; the halls that had resounded to their song were silent and deserted. But the spirit of Irish minstrelsy only slumbered struck their harps in solitude, and in plaintive strains mourned over desolation of their loved land, until the stirning events of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries made those sons of song once more break forth the glories of their land, and on their countrymen to

Burst the foreign yoke as their sires

Or die like their sires, and endure it

Among the principal bards of this period may be mentioned Teige Mac-Dany, bard of the O'Briens of Thomond; O'Hussey, last hereditary hard of the Maguires of Fermanagh (who, the escape of Hugh Roe O'Do from Dublin Castle; Malmurry Ward. one of the bards of the O'Neils us the beautiful ode on the deaths of the Earls of Tyrone and Tyrconell (which has been so heautifully turned into English verse by Clarence Mangan); Maurice O'Dugan, the author and composer of "The Coolin," and Thomas O'Sonnellan, who united to the most unrivalled skill on the harp high excellence as a post. Many of his melodies were introduced into Scotland, and have continued, under different, titles among the two principal Jacob John O'Neachtan, of M Claragh MacDonnell, The numerous song acobite were originally pa hiefly written in a s rical style; and though ons were obvious to eve he time, they would require splaining nawadays. Some Jacobite songs are still rend sung in Ireland, songs sh and Scottish origin. ngs are more pathetic in and melody, the Scotch th rring and bold. The Iri sed to clothe the aspiration ople for freedom in a Erin, the goddess worship, is often re a beautiful maiden, who l within the grasp of the op all the wealth of his langua ided in praise of her cha nstancy, her sufferings, a ncient glory. Her met mes were many: "Roisirainne U'aille," "Drim Grainne c.; in this disguise the ba oice to their patriotic pass o an earthly mistress.

each of Aughrim."

Nearly all the poetical pr th the political spirit of

But all these bards mus irst place to Turlogh O'Car ast of the famous minstre and harpers-whose genius f souls of the Irish people in This well-know enturies. as born in Nobber (County in 1670, of humble parer education was confined alm usively to the Irish langu family of the O'Conors of Be nterested themselves in dire romoting the mental imp the youthful bard. While outh he lost his sight durin ack of the smallpox, which deprived him of the aid o His harp then became his empanion and solace; an wentieth year he commence ofessional minstrel by vis ouses of the nobility an throughout the country. Hi taste and feeling in music im a hearty welcome in pa cabin, where he was always as a guest, as he maintaine dignity of his profession, a above receiving any pecunia uneration. compos beautiful airs, had a wonder nory, and extraordinary po mprovisation. He was at poet, a musician, a composer sung his own verses to l Goldsmith, in one of his c essays, tells us that being o the house of an Irish ne where there was a musician who was eminent in his pr to a trial of skill. To carry orward, the host persuaded sician (Geminiani, a famous violinist) to accept the cl and he accordingly played o his fiddle the fifth "concerto" valdi. Carolan, immediately up his harp, played over the ece after him, without miss make a concerto in the san mself, which he instantly Carolan's compositions are to have nnumbered in all ab thousand. His muse delight only allow me to give the n a few of his beautiful lyrics cription; so I must refer der to the translations of t Samuel Ferguson, Miss and to Hardiman's Irish M "Bridget Cruise," "O'More's Fair D or the Hawk of Ballyshanno Monody on the Death of H note, though he had never before, which produced some their astonishment

when he assured them that

In 1733 Carolan was bereft wife, and five years later he away at the age of sixty-eig ing that his hours were not the blind bard called for h and, in the excitement of wl "Farewell to Music," to wh gave an expression so cap and touching as to dissolve sent to tears.

Much of his beautiful music tered to the four winds of her intervals since 1721 about dred of his pieces have appearing roughly estimates the number at two thousand. remainder of these priceles ever be brought to light?

ssembled in Limerick son who shall one after God on earth should have his ed. A bard in those metimes receive about em from the nobles of Almost every prince t family had a special to write poems With the independence chieftains in the mid enteenth century were and lordly homes es and lordly strels flourished. the bards was gone lmost the sources veliest melodies all but e soldiers of Cromwell y settlers sent over by ading companies were with such things as

Ulster poet named bard to the O'Nials of t the year 1620, sang ament on the down is : nd of learned men, n a song to sing, fern is fading. nd and Leinster, s so, nine in ten nd is fallen;

foe have fallen. ty forge of song headlong; om has hushed

m, no rampart." sical genius of be wholly suppressed. of song," says Moore, I with the glories of d the laws against the as successful beyond penal laws have been m Catholic." eenth and fourteenth were sevenal bards of ugh Mor O'Daly, lord ("The Ovid of Iresidy, a learned histori-

, bard to the Prince of ray, chief bard to the Tyrone: and Carol the beautiful song "Eiwhich contains notes than almost any declared that he would author of that simple his grand oratorios. Fifteenth century few note illuminated country. The bards, aswere a proscribed race chiefs whose deeds it en their pride to sing om their high estate, aks prostrated upon the strife of the ils that had resounded were silent and dehe spirit of Irish minlumbered. The bards rps in solitude, and in ns mourned over their loved land, until once more break forth their land, and rymen to eign yoke as their sires ir sires, and endure it principal bards of this

mentioned Teige Mac-the O'Briens of Thoey, last hereditary bard s of Fermanagh (who, lad, celebrated in verse Hugh Roe O'Donnell astle; Malmurry Ward, ds of the O'Neils ven Roe Ward, who left ul ode on the deaths of Tyrone and Tyrconnell O'Sonnellan, who united unrivalled skill on and have continued, titles, among the airs of what has been ochaber"—the original titles of hich were "Planxty Davis" and the

Nearly all the poetical production this period were, of course, this the political spirit of the times principal Jacobite bard John O'Neachtan, of Meath, and John Claragh MacDonnell, of Char-The numerous songs terme Jacobite were originally party songs leeply tinged with prejudices. They rere chiefly written in a sort of all orical style; and though the ons were obvious to every one at plaining nawadays. Some of these the time, they would require Jacobite songs are still remembered and sung in Ireland, songs both of Irish and Scottish origin. The Irish ongs are more pathetic in words and melody, the Scotch the tirring and bold. The Irish bards sed to clothe the aspirations of the for freedom in a figurative Erin, the goddess of the worship, is often represented a beautiful maiden, who has faller within the grasp or the oppressor,-all the wealth of his language is ex ended in praise of her charms, her stancy, her sufferings, and glory. Her metaphorical imes were many: "Roisin Dhu," Grainne U'aille," "Drimin Dhu, "Grainne in this disguise the bards gave voice to their patriotic passion as in to an earthly mistress.

But all these bards must yield first place to Turlogh O'Carolan, the last of the famous minstrels—bards and harpers-whose genius fired the souls of the Irish people in the past This well-known harper enturies. was born in Nobber (County Meath) in 1670, of humble parents. His education was confined almost exusively to the Irish language. The family of the O'Conors of Belanagare nterested themselves in directing and omoting the mental improvement the youthful bard. While still outh he lost his sight during an at tack of the smallpox, which for ever deprived him of the aid of books His harp then became his constant and solace; and in his wentieth year he commenced as ofessional minstrel by visiting the houses of the nobility and gentry throughout the country. His great taste and feeling in music insured him a hearty welcome in palace and cabin, where he was always treated as a guest, as he maintained dignity of his profession, and was above receiving any pecuniary rebeautiful airs, had a wonderful me ory, and extraordinary powers mprovisation. He was at once poet, a musician, a composer, his own verses to his harp. Goldsmith, in one of his charming ssays, tells us that being once at the house of an Irish nobleman where there was a musician present who was eminent in his profession. Carolan immediately challenged him to a trial of skill. To carry the jest forward, the host persuaded the musician (Geminiani, a famous Italia violinist) to accept the challenge and he accordingly played over his fiddle the fifth "concerto" of Vi-Carolan, immediately taking up his harp, played over the ce after him, without missing note, though he had never heard it ore, which produced some surprise; their astonishment he assured them that he could make a concerto in the same taste himself, which he instantly compos-thousand. His muse delighted xpatiate on the theme of female loveliness. The exigencies of space will only allow me to give the names few of his beautiful lyrics of this cription; so I must refer the reader to the translations of them by Sir Samuel Ferguson, Miss Brooke, and to Hardiman's Irish Minstrelsy for "Bridget Cruise," "Mild Mabel "O'More's Fair Daugnter, or the Hawk of Ballyshannon,' nody on the Death of His Wife' and "Grace Nugent."

In 1733 Carolan was bereft of his wile, and five years later he passed away at the age of sixty-eight. Feel-ing that his hours were numbered, the blind bard called for his harp and, in the excitement of what he felt to be a final effort, produced his "Farewell to Music," to which he gave an expression so captivating and touching as to dissolve all pre-

Much of his beautiful music is scattered to the four winds of heaven. At intervals since 1721 about two hundred of his pieces have appeared. Bunding roughly estimates the entire number at two thousand. Will the remainder of these priceless gems ever be brought to light? Have we to the key to these empling strains? Will a day come when the frish people will cultivate once more g at their Eistedfodds, and the Scots by their devotion to the incom parable music of their Highlands? All three have in common the spirit of sic that was sung before the Knights of the Round Table. and Wallace, and fired with immortal bravery many an Irish soldier on a thousand fields of battle—Robert M. Sillard, in the Catholic World Maga-

Bishop Whiteside On Parental Duty.

The Right Rev. Dr. Whiteside (Bishop of Liverpool) paid his visit to St. Augustine's Church, Preston, last end, and on Sunday evening delivered his visitation address to a crowded congregation, who listened with deep interest to his remarks. His Lordship said that in studying the life, passion, and death of our Lord, we must often have been struck the value which He set upon an immortal soul. In addition to His own sufferings, for the souls of mankind God had instituted the Church, priest hood, and sacraments in order to as sist the soul to save its life. All this showed us that we had a serious duty to the souls of those m we mixed with every day, and were true of those towards if this whom we had not any special duty except in charity, how much was it true of those towards whom we had serious responsibilities? If this applied to anyone, it applied to parents with regard to their children Both father and mother had serious obligations which neither could shirk Each was bound to support the other. At the same time, as a rule, the responsibility of the father rested upon him when the children more grew into their teens, and got out of the mother's control, while that of the mother was at the time when the children were young, and their minds impressionable as wax, when every word and action had an influence o them. Therefore he (the Bishop) con sidered no responsibility greater than the mother's, for they all knew how children drank the example given even when the mother went about he duties, or spoke to child's brother and sister it observe her, and she was its one authority She should realize that responsibility and if through her fault, by word or action, the child's soul was jured or lost, at the door of tha mother lay the responsibility, and she would have to answer to God fo She should teach her children by word about God. How many thers hesitate to speak to children about God and their religious duties? though teaching them a lesson, but a mother should feel she had to influ ence hen children by word and example.

number of mothers everywhere, and unfortunately they were on the in crease, who gave had examples their children by drink, he did no say drunkenness, because that would be an extreme case. They knew that was a sin which excluded from the ther must lose all sense of decency and responsibility when she drank but he meant those who drank a little now and then more than they Carolan's compositions are stated should do. Those were the ones who ly and themselves. First of all, the incurred responsibility before God for wasting money. How many people their responsibility with regard to money 1 Some people seemed think they could do what they liked with what they earned. Of course regard to man, but they had not with regard to God, who gave them strength to obtain it. allow them to use their earnings fo egitimate recreation, but after that they could not squander it as they a strict account of everything spen-in that way. Again, how often did they injure their health? They would also have to answer to Goo dissipation or excess of drinking. But these were secondary considerations. They were injuring their own souls, Phey were injuring their own souls, and also giving scandal to their little ones. What a shock a child got when it saw its mother had gone too ar in the matter of drinking. Mothers could not be too particular about this, but unfortunately there were too many indulging in the hambers.

He was afraid there was a certain

Parents had also another duty with egard to their children. When they reached a marriageable age, if they wished to marry a non-Catholic, they would probably tell the parents that they were sure the one they wished to marry would become a Catholic after the marriage. Against this His Lordship warned parents, quot ing from the statistics of the parish of St. Augustine's figures snowing that in their congregation at pre sent there were 233 persons who had contracted mixed marriages. doubt, the Bishop said, in the gener ality of the cases the Catholic had expected the Protestant to turn Catholic, but out of these 233, had become converted, while in cases the conversions had been the other way, the Catholic turning Protestant. In that congregation there were 140 children of mixed marriages being brought up as Protestants. He blamed many mothers for these things. How often mothers were veak on this subject. If they not help, at least they connived at it. If the Catholics would stiffen their backs and force the nonmarriage they would thus make many converts.

His Lordship then spoke strongly about Catholics marrying at the gistar's office, and in Protestant Churches, and said they had far too many in that congregation who had contracted marriage outside the Catholic Church. He compared this to a child running away from home where her parents had always lavishses upon her to get married kindnes ed. Perhaps the parents would in time forgive her, but would they con tinue to treat her as before? tain,y not. And so these people could not expect God to continue to lavish his blessings on them as they had contracted marriage in their own Church -London Universe.

The Redemptorists In France.

The Paris correspondent of the Dublin Freeman says:

"The Redemptorists continue to maintain a bold and firm attitude, like the Barnabites of Paris, in presence of M. Combes and his myrmi-Father Riblier, formerly Superior of the Redemptorists at Sables d'Olonnes, on the French west ern coast, is still in conflict with the government bailiff who has to collect fines and taxes. This emergency per son wanted Father Riblier to notify the Redemptorists who had been pro ceeded against the fines which they had been condemned. The venerabl Redemptorist replied that his brethren were no longer with him. Three lodged in the towns so as to avoid judicial proceedings, and the others have gone to countries wherein they find much more liberty than in France." Father Riblier facetiously added that he could send the notifica tions to the Redemptorists who had gone to the lands of liberty; but, unfortunately from the bailiff's point of view, he was not a local, Parisia or international postman, nor did he see why he should render such a service to the government which the bailiff so worthily represented. The bailiff has threatened to have course to the gendarmes, but Father Riblier says he does not mind the Riblier says gendarmes in the least, and that he would rather enjoy going to prison.

Patent Report.

Below will be found a list of patents recently granted by the Canadian Government through the agency of Messrs. Marion & Marion, Patent Attorneys, Montreal, Can., and Wash ington, D.C.

Information relating to any of th patents cited will be cheerfully fur. nished free of charge by applying to the above-named firm.

85 118Frannk Whitcomb. Smith's Falls, Ont., threshing machine. 85,486—Joseph V. Martel, L'Assomption, Que., acetylene gas genera

85,554-Messrs. Picard & Bureau, Quebec, Que., automatic pump. 85,566—Gavin Shaw, Lindenwood,

Ont., feed trough. 85,567—Theodore H. Strehlow, Chicago, Ill., clothes pole tip. 85,608—Bohn D. Landers, Winning

Man., train signal.

85,631-Wm. S. Bagley, Lorne, Que., wire stretcher.

85,712-Messrs. Michaud & Desjardins, Montreal, Que., sleigh.

A ST. PATRICK'S CROSS.

"What a typical March day, said young Mrs. Loughlin, glancing tween the curtains of a dressing room window, which was now ther muffled by the haze of the mosphere within.

Only a sense of maternal duty assisted the lady in this, her u tomed effort at early rising, for not withstanding all the luxurious acces sories of fleecy gown and lurred shoulder wraps, her imagination persuaded her that the chill of the oute world must certainly be noticeable within the shelter of her luxurious home. The gilded time-piece on her dresser told her that it still lacked some minutes to seven, and she had promised—in fact proposed—that seven o'clock she should be ready to take the nurse's place by the preside of her own small son, now convales cing from a tedious uillness- "Miss Keating has been so self-sacrificing while dear Gerald really needed her -Mrs Keating explained to her hus band-"that I could not but offer to do this when she spoke of wishing to go out early this morning, and yet being unwilling to have Gerald per wake up during her absence.

"I should think Winnie or the new maid could have taken her place, i you had arranged it so," remarked Mr. Loughlin, accustomed to wife's partiality for late rising. to his

"They were going out, too; I for got to ask them why, but I know it was to Church, and I am sure I heard them pass downstairs before daylight. This is not Sunday What is it, Jim?" With her hand on the doorknob, Mrs. Loughlin wait ed her husband's reply, and in the instant's pause realized, too, that she was perhaps breaking a settled rule of her married life, which was never to recall to his mind the religion or religious observances he had apparcommitted to oblivion their wedding day.

His hesitation in answering question was no affectation.

The Hon. James Loughlin, capitalist and politician, had managed to forget many things with which Jin-mie Laughlin, the bright faced Irish immigrant of twenty years before, was pleasantly familiar.

"Let me see-vesterday was March 17th ! O. this is Patrick's Day-an Irish holyday; the girls like to go to Church, I suppose !

"I should say they did !" thought Mrs. Loughlin, as she hastened through the dim hallway to her apartment, "they must like to or they would never venture out on such a morning as this."

Pretty Miss Keating, the trained nurse, was a Catholic too, and al ways during Gerald's illness, arrange nents were made for her attendance at Sunday Mass. Now she outside of the sickroom, drawing or her warm gloves, while she waited mother's coming.

"I am sure he will not trouble you she whispered, "he may any, wake before I come in, but I thought it was best to be certain.

"O of course I shall enjoy sitting with him now that I am realiy awake, but must you go to Church this cold morning? Would not the afternoon do; can I take your place then just as well?

'Thank you for the offer, It is not at all compulsory for us to go Church to-day, but father and mother -they are both dead now, said the pretty nurse sadly- liked to this day as it was kept in their old They always went to Mass and took us, too, and now I like to offer a Holyday Mass for them."

stand, but she said no more, when sitting idly beside the sleeping child, whom even the rustling of the norning paper might disturb, continued the train of thought started by this simple evidence of her em ployees' devotion to their parents faith. Why did it mean so much to them and apparently nothing to her Was it because world own husband? ly success and riches sufficed as substitute? Not in all cases, knew, for there was their neighbor Judge Grace-moneyed, influential with the added prestige of descen and inherited position, and he was the acknowledged pillar of that same little Church, frequented by Winnie the cook, and Margaret Keating. In deed she had heard the former refer casually to Judge Grace "taking up the Sunday collection" there, and it was well understood that from private purse were supplied the deficiencies of Church income, It was true, she reflected, that her Preshy has assisted young James Loughlin to his sudden rise, might have refus-gagement, to introduce into the gey circle where she moved a lover such straight laced tendencies as Catholics must needs possess.

"Jim" had been simply perfect in this light, never mentioning religion that she could recall, and since their marriage he was equally satisfactory. Only once she remembered-when Ge rald was extremely ill, the father had spoken some incoherent words, in which mention of his own sins and his boy's baptism were strangely mixed, but then he was entirely un strung by excitement and suspense and Miss Keating had led him from the room and talked soothingly him in the library while his wife stayed with the relieving nurse, to await the doctor's verdict.

With such thoughts as these, which meant little and led nowhere, Mrs. Loughlin was engaged until the nurse's pleasant voice sounded on her ear, and she roused herself to reporthat the little patient had hardly moved duning and that his sleep was so tranquil she would not even kiss him lest he be disturbed.

A gloomy day of gain and chill verified the morning's threat, and Mrs Loughlin welcomed gladly that afternoon hour with her little son, lowed her by the doctor's rules. She found him bright and merry despite the weakness that still remained, and now quite busy, arranging against the white cuunterpane, and amongst the white cuunterpane, and the snowy pillows of his bed, the snowy pillows of his bed, with which he had learned to while away the long hours of his unoccupied day. In a curtained alcove of the big room, the nurse sat, arranging the contents of a neat portfolio, in anticipation of her nearing departure from the house where she had

"Miss Margaret gave me these pic tures, mother!" the patient announced gleefully, "fast as she found them in her box, and I'm to keep them all cepting just this one, and it belong Miss Margaret's mother, so of course she must keep that."

almost the entire winten.

With a child's instinctive delicacy, the little fellow lowered his voice while he drew the special picture rom its yellowed envelope and held it towards his mother. "It isn't just a picture, is it?" he said in a puzzled way. "Soon as Miss Margaret is through writing, she will tell me about it."

"And she may tell me, too, pet, for do not know what sort of picture it is. What is this, Miss Margaret?' Mrs. Loughlin asked, lifting between her jewelled fingers the circle of stiff white paper, on which was laid a ross formed by bright colored ribbon outlined by shining beads.

O! that," answered the nurse, coming forward-"is something I neant to explain to Gerald; it is called a "Patrick's Cross'; in dear mother's time all the Irish children wore such 'crosses' on their shoulders on St. Patrick's Day; this is St. Patrick's Day," she added in an explanatory tone

"So Mr. Loughlin told me this morning," said Gerald's mother, still examining the Patrick's Cross with "Perhaps he remembers-As she spoke the heavy portieres that helped to exclude all household oises from this guiet room were par-

ped to his little son's bedside. father." exclaimed Gerald. "See. even while he lifted his face for kiss of greeting, "this is a Patrick's Cross the Irish boys and girls wear them to-day, Miss Margaret says."

ted quickly and Mr. Loughlin step-

"I do not know that they wear them to-day, dear," corrected Miss filment of your vow. Gerald was Margaret gently, "they wore them baptized during that dreadful spell when my mother was a little girl badge of some sort ?" inquired Mrs. Loughlin, who as a member of the in the city, was naturally "keen" on hour I, for one, date his recovery."

(c) lk lore.

"Thank God," came from the lip

suppose we should say," Miss Keatanswered. "The cross is the Miss Keating for this, Louise?" central idea. That was St. Patrick's gift to Ireland, of course, and while the men wear the shamrock, be- | ber with gratitude that my boy was cause he used its leaf in explaining the Holy Trinity, the little folks derstand the Faith that is so much wear the pretty Patnick's crosses as to Miss Margaret, and was so much a kind of pledge, I think, that they, to your mother, but I am satisfied to too, would follow the Faith he have my boy trained in it, if his

Perhaps, for the moment, Miss Mara Catholic, Gerald's father should be one, a fact she had learned in the entered with him the cherished darkdays of Gerald's danger; at all events ing of his home, and where, too, tively now, the child with parted receive the treasure from his father's conscientious seeker after Truth-hold—the mother fingering the pencil on her dainty chateleine as though eager to note down this new item for her club paper.

But the father, the busy man, who found it difficult to spare these few afternoon moments to the boy he idolized-why did he not relinquish the badge at once, and proceed with his usual inquiries regarding the pa

His delay and silence attracted his wife's attention.

"Have you ever seen one before, ear?" she inquined, divining easily dear ?' enough, that her silent husband was deeply moved.

"I have worn such a Patrick's cross," he answered-not hesitating now, as he had done in the morning when she questioned about the holyday-"It was pinned on my breast by a mother who would rather have seen me lifeless at her feet, than to know that I should live to deny it." There were tears surely in his voice but the listeners could not see his eyes, for he rose quickly and passed from the room, laving the "cross"

gently on his boy's pillow. There was no use in trying to ignore the happening, so Miss Keating turned to the wife who had also riser

"I am more sorry than words can tell," she said, "but how could foresee this ?"

'There is no need to be sorry or mbarrassed at all, Miss Margaret. Come to me, when Gerald can spare you, and we will talk about it; tell him now, something more of the customs of his father's country, for father is so busy, he had to hurry away to-day."

In the library Mrs. Loughlin found, as she expected, a distressed and unnerved man, in whom his associates would never have recognized the daring organizer of financial and political parties.

"Tell me what this means, Jim." she said bravely, without any at-tempt to ignore the situation, and the man who had been so long sunk in the depths of moral cowardice recognized the challenge and rose to

"It means that I see myself noment as God's angels see me-that pitiful thing-a renegade from Faith in which I must always lieve! I wore the Patrick's Cross: the childish pledge that Miss Keating speaks of, and to-day when touched these faded ribbons, they seemed like scorpions, stinging me into remembrance of my dastardly Oh, what am I to do?'

"Perhaps I am not competent to answer that question," replied the weeping wife, "but I know where it can be answered—you can go to the Church where Winnie and Miss Margaret go, and the priest there seems to solve all their difficulties will help you?"

"O, my wife, you do not even yet understand what a traitor I have been. When Gerald appeared almost lost to us, I vowed that if he were spared— I should do something—I handly know what, but I meant baptism for him in the Catholic Church. Miss Keating heard my promise."

"Let us call her, then-perhaps she can help," and at Mrs. Loughlin's call the nurse came, looking pale and disturbed for all her effonts ceal matters from little Gerald. She listened to the wife's few words explanation, for Mr. Loughlin, with his head resting on the carved mantel against which he leaned, made no sign at her entrance.

"And now for my confession," said the nurse firmly. "I had meant to defer it a few days longer, but may ease your conscience, Mr. Loughlin, to know that I saw to the fulof unconsciousness, on my assurance to the priest, whom I called in that day while Mrs. Loughlin was forced to rest, that you, his father, only consented, but had promised ost advanced women's literary club God it should be done. From that

"Well, a badge of Catholicity, I of Gerald's father, and then he turned to his wife, "You will not blame

"There is no room for blame," was the answer, "rather should I remem miraculously restored. father leads the way."

And so it was that through a Patgaret forgot her surroundings, and rick's Cross of "faded green and tar-that while Gerald's mothen was not nished gold," one weakling was restored to the fold of his fathers who entered with him the cherished darlthere came later for admission, the wife whom that Patrick's Day ex-

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

eat meat, you know, Rodgers," said

"Monks is a terron," whispered another, "you had better."
"I can't," expostulated Rodgers.
"Catholics can't eat meat on Fri-

"But you'll have to," continued

"I shan't," was the quite answer.
"See here," said Monks, "if you don't I'll make you. We shall stand none of your bigotry here."

"Try," Monks reflected, made a mental es timation of the newcomer's fighting powers, and seemed to hesitate, then stammered: "Well, I would, only I don't like to hurt you."

Rodgers smiled. He was a newcomer ot Seaforth's Boarding School. Seaforth's, you know, was one of the most successful schools in the colony. It was a Presbyterian school, professed to be perfectly impartial in matters of religion. To this acade-Willie Rodgers was sent by father who was ambitious that his son should carve his name on the future history of Australia. Mrs. Rodgers ventured to expostulate. She had been so careful of her son's training from the cradle that she looked with some anxiety to the prospects of his living in such an un-Catholic atmosphere as a Presbyterian school. Her husband was inflexible.

"My dear," he said to her "yo shut your eyes to Willie's best inter-The boy has talent, remark-.ble talent, and it would be unfair to him as to ourselves if we were to deprive him of the advantages such an education as may be had at Seaforth's. There are already prenty Major Hardy of Catholics there. told me last summer he was sending his two boys there."

So Willie was sent to Seaforth's late in the term, too, which caused every one to talk of the newconner He had been put on to bowl cricket the first day and took Monk' wicket the first over. Every one was delighted except Monks, for Monks was a bit of a bully, and was, of course, secretly hated by the boys. His first night, the newcomer knelt down by his bedside to say his night prayers, as was his unfailing tom. There was a titter in the dormitory. Some on threw a pillow at him, another hit him with a sponge but he didn't appear to mind. Monks hit him with a slipper. That hurt. Rodgers seemed 'Twas mean, too. Rodgers vexed when he looked around, Monks pretended to be engaged with his toothbrush, but the night prayers were finished without further intenruption. This was the beginning of it, but the real trouble came on Fri-

On Friday the newcomer found that no provision had been made for any one who did not wish to eat meat The dishes came one after another but, with one exception of som vegetables and a potato, he found there was nothing he could eat. This was hard for a hungry youth himself. Potatoes and vegetables are never satisfactory in such a case. It still harder to see his neighbors on all sides watching his evident discomfort. They were staring and sneering at him so. He could hear whispered remarks and polite inqui ries about his health and appetite He felt the shame burning on cheeks at so much attention being paid to him, yet it no more occurred to him to eat meat than to cut off his head. At length Monles, the biggest boy at the table, took it upon himself to compel the newcomer to eat his meat. His attempt failed ingloriously, as we have seen above.

in the midst of a crowd of boys re garding him with feelings of mixed wonder and curiosity, as the boy who cheeked Monks and refused to eat meat on Friday. "What a silly boy he is," he over heard one say.

"Oh, yes, a little bigot," responded another; "this is the first time a Catholic refused to take what he got on Friday. We'll soon teach him

"Oh, let him alone," said a bigge boy, who had just forned the group "He will soon get tired of his ab rest of us next Friday. Let the grew rather thin, as time went on, youngster alone. It is not quite fair from the constant worry and absti-

day. Why, what a stupid lot of duf- one of the eleven's bowlers in the fers they are, he thought, not to coming year,

THE NEW BOY,-"You had better | know that a Catholic can't eat meat on Friday. But I wonder if it is true that the Catholics here eat meat Here comes Hardy. I'll ask him."

Hardy had been a distant, former acquaintance, and had acted as the newcomer's patron since his arrival Rodgers' surprise when this young at Seaforth's. Great, then, gentleman called out:-

"What the dickens did you to make such a fool of yourself the refectory to-day? The sooner you drop such nonsense and do as every one else does the better. I though you were a fellow of some sense."

"Sure, Hardy, you don't mean to say that you eat meat to-day, Friday ?'

"Why, you little idiot, do you sup pose one can live on potatoes and bread? One can abstain on Friday at home if he likes, but in Rome one must do as the Romans do. Have a little sense in future. Rodgers.

"And you call yourself a Catholic Hardy?

There was such a degree of tempt in the voice and gesture of the newcomer that Hardy blushed for Muttering something very shame. about narrow-minded bigotry, he hurried away to hide his confusion. As Rodgers knelt by his bed that night he was assailed with quite a shower of stockings, sponges, pillows etc. Without showing the slightest alarm or irritation, he finished Many whispered from their beds, "the newcomer is a plucky fellow, anyway." Henceforth he was seldom disturbed at his devotions.

There was trouble yet in store for him. He found next day that many of his friends looked coldly at him; some even refused to let him join in the games, alleging that they wanted no bigots there. He found a few indeed-and in every school such a few will be found-who showed him some kindness and defended him from the worst of his enemies, though they per sisted in advising him to give in. But what grieved him above all was that he had to suffer most from his fellow-Catholics. They persecuted him most unrelentingly, and tried to make his life as miserable as they could. They little knew the strong character they had to deal with Rodgers weathered this storm. had many qualities that endeared him to the schoolboy heart. Sharp and quick of intellect in class, in the play ground he promised to become a champion. He was overflowing, too, with good nature, which no amount of annoyance could stamp out. . Be fore many days had passed he was popular among an ever-widening circle of friends. Friday came, ever, bringing with it a fresh load of troubles. There was some excitement in the refectory as all eyes were fixed the newcomer to see if he would stick to his colors. The soup was passed

"Go it, Rodgers, or 'twill be worse for you," said Monks.

"Don't be an ass, Rodgers," Hardy shouted up from the end of the table.
"He's a bigoted little chap," they said, "but he has plenty of grit. If they let him alone he will do just as the others do after a time."

But Willie Rodgers did not do as did the others. Friday followed Friday; the systematic persecution from the clique which seemed bent on his conversion never ceased, but neither did his resolution falten even for an instant. They tormented him in many ways, striving to prevent him ead on fast days; still his good humor did not forsake him. They called him nicknames, to which he replied with interest. They cut endless jokes at his expense; he joined in the laugh. They did their best to sit down on him at cricket, but he soon became a leader Beaten at every point Monks and his crew had sadly to confess: "No, there ain't no flies on Rodgers. Strange to say, they never tried to make him attend their religious services. Perhaps they saw how use less the attempt would be; perhaps it was only the fasting that wounded their self-esteem. But nevertheless, scarcely a Friday passed without its trials. Finally Lent came, bringing with nence, but his spirit never wavered, The majority of the boys began to this cherciulness memained constant. In his letters home there was not a ried off to their cricket and tennis, single line of complaint of the treat leaving their recent victim in peace. In his class He repeated, more than once, "He he made steady progress, and at criwill eat meat like the rest, next Fricket it was whispered he would be Good Friday proved to be the la day of his trials. On that day he resolutely abstained from everyth except a piece of dry bread at break-fast and dinner. It was rather a feast day at Seaforth's. In the refectory the boys were watching his table very quietly and intently. It was known that Monks had resolved to make him break his fast. For this purpose he had changed his place at the table and seated himself opposite Rodgers.

"You're not looking well to-day, Rodgers," he began. "You're eating too much lately, I'm afraid."

He sneered at .he slice of bread that lay on Rodgers' soup plate. "It's very kind of you, Monks, to take such an interest in my health.

replied Rodgers, with perfect good "So you fast to-day, do you? This is feast day here, you know; must join us." "No, I shan't."

"You'll try a slice of this Ham, won't you? I can recommend it." "No, thanks, Monks. Better attend to yourself."

"Well. if you don't eat, you'll drink.

So saying, Monks inverted the halffilled soup tureen over Rodgers The soup flowed over on the plate. table cloth and on Rodgers' clothes This was too much even for the new comer's patience. Without a word he rose to his feet, caught the soup plate, and emptied its scalding con tents over his tormentor; then, leaning across the table, he struck the bully with all his force in the face.

There was never such a scene wit-nessed in Seaforth's before. For an nstant there was a death-like silence, all eyes rivited on Rodgers, as stood erect, with pale cheek flashing eye, confronting the bully he had so deservedly punished. Then such a cheer! Willie Rodgers become the heno of the school.

After dinner the boys crowded round him, clapping him on the back and overwhelming him with congratulations. The captain of the house approached him, and, shaking hands with him, said:

"You are a plucky fellow, Rodgers quite right in punishing Monks. We have treated you most caddishly, and we are very sorry for it. Three cheers for the newc boys !

When Rodgers became captain the school a little later, new boys always wondered why he had a spe cial cover at table on Fridays, and the smaller boys never tire of telling how he defied the whole school punished a bully in the golden days of old .- New Zealand Tablet.

MISSION OF ST. PAUL

(Continued from Page Five.)

"Already Peter, guided by the hand of the Lord, has gone beyond the limits of Palestine, lished the Church among the Gent, les in Antioch, the capital of Syria Compelled to return to Jerusalem he had sent Barnabas to Antioch to direct the faithful in his stead. The spul of Barnabas hungered for salvation of the vast multitudes of Gentiles among whom the poor little flock of Jewish converts was hidden He learned that his old friend Sau -for they had been companions youth-had returned from his solitude in Arabia, and, after having communed with Peter, had gone to hide himself again in his birthplace with all haste, and tells him of the Tarsus. Thither Barnabas work awaiting him in Antioch. God's will is plain, and he hurnies to task. With all the intensity of his nature, and with all the fervor of his love for God and for souls, he toils by day and by night for a year among the gentiles of that great city, convincing them that Christ Crucified is the wisdom God and the power of God. Multitudes yield to his zeal; the becomes numerous and flourishing; and here for the first time the disciples of the Lord receive the name of Christians."

IN ASIA MINOR-"Then farther and farther to the nonth and to th west he evangelizes the cities of Asis Minor. Everywhere he finds vast populations totally given up to errors and the corruptions of thenism, with just enough of Greek culture to make them despise . the fittle Jew who comes to tell them of a crucified God. But ere long they discover that his insignificant is the casket of a giant soul. from his lips is eloquent, "not with dom, but with the showing of dom, but with the showing of the spirit of God and his power." The power of Christ Crucified everywhere gains the victory. The Galatians, the Colossians, the Ephesians, and RAILROADS.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

OTTAWA

Has been resumed.

Leave Windsor Station 10-10 P.M. You may remain in car until 9 A.M. Price of berth $1 50.

City Ticket and Telegraph Office. 129 ST. JAMES STREET, Next Post Office.

GRAND IRUNK ROPE

WORLD'S FAIR. ST. LOUIS, Mc April 30. Dec. 1. 1904. Cost of Exposition, $50,000,000. Size of grounds, 1,240 acres.

REDUCED FARES

VICTORIA, VANCOUVER, SEATTLE, PORTLAND, SPOKANE, ROSSLAND, NELSON, TRAIL, ROBSON, $46.40 ANACONDA, BUTTE, HELENA, SALT LAKE, $45.90 COLORADO SPRING DENVER, PUEBLO, $45.50 SAN FRANCISCO, LOS ANGELES. $49.00

CITY TICKET OFFICES, 87 St. James Street Telephones Main 460 & 461. and Bonaventure Station

numbers of other populations rally to the standard of the Crucified, give to Paul the consolation of their grateful love, as well as the solicitude of their guidance in the ofter thorny paths of Christian duty.

"But during all these years that he is thus engaged one thought, one craving, pursues him unceasingly. He longs to carry the Gospel to Athens and to Rome. Athens, the city Minerva, the fountain of philosophy, is the centre of the world's wisdom; Rome, the city of Jupiter, the in comparable metropolis of arms and of laws is the centre of the world's power. Therefore does he wish to to them the wisdom of God and the power of God, that the one might teach the world wisely, the other might rule the world right-And the Lord had made known to him that one day he should do those two things. But he must bide the Lord's time, and grow more and more fit to be the Lord's instrument for the great work."

AT ATHENS .- "At last the tim

arrives. "He enters Athens all alone. had left Luke and Timothy and Silas in Macedonia, to carry on and solidify the work so well tegun there. Solitary and alone he stands at last amid the artistic splendors of the teacher of the world. Long he had sighed and prayed for this moment and now that it has come it overwhelms him with trembling dread. Timidly he enters the Agora. the central public square, which was like the great pulsating heart of Athenian life. He feels himself lost amid such a throng. They pass and repass him-smiling Sophists, sneering Cynics, languid Epicureans, dark-Stoics, and dignified disbrowed ciples of Plato, the keen-eyed followers of Aristotle-they pass him and repass him in the avenues of Agora, pausing every now and then to wonder who that little stranger could be, with so superhuman an earthly a light in his eyes. Silently he passes from one to another of the groups who here and there are gethered to talk and discuss. Everywhere he hears only levity, only the eloquence of speakers who seek nothing but applause, only the merry laugh of a people desiring nothing but to be amused. And yet there, to the right, is the statue of Minerva. shining down upon them from splendors of the Acropolis; and there, to the left, is the mount of Areopagus, where sits the assembly that is ready to pass sentence on all the pro-blems of mankind,

"The heart of Paul grows sick as, day after day, he listens in these as-semblies to all that remains of the vaunted philosophy of Greece. And still more sick does it grow as, day after day, he studies the religion of Greece, and gazes on its manifesta-tions in statuary and architecture and stately ceremony. He sees that they have deified all Nature and especially all humanity. From Miner-va, the deification of the human inva. the deification of the human in-telligence, he follows the line of gods and goddesses, deifying every human faculty and every human instinct. And lest anything in nature might

S. CARSLEY CO.

Sleeping Car Service Arrange for the 17th!

Men's Silk Plush Hats.

Other Styles of Men's Hats.

One line of BLACK FUR FELT HATS is made in either the new Derby or Panama shapes, expressly for The S. Carsley Co., Limited; that fact accounts for the value excellence. $1.65

Better qualities in BLACK FUR FELT HATS, fashioned on the latest American and English blacks. Extra good value as usual $2.15 and $2.70

$1.00 SHIRTS for 90 Cents.

The description of this particular line is-

Early selections are advised—the range of choice is greatest now

Ladies' New Style Kid Gloves.

Haven't changed the names, or the prices, simply improved the qualities where opportunities presented, and introduced the trifling alterations that were necessary to bring them into line with the fashions of the moment.

Flags for St. Patrick's Day.

All styles, degrees of quality and sizes, from the small button-hole size to the Bunting Flags.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY BADGES.

RIDING SADLES and BRIDLES A Special Discount of 25 per cent. during the remainder of the month MARSHALS IN THE ST. PATRICK'S DAY PARADE should be interested in this offer. One example of what 25 per cent. means:—Gentlemen's Genuine Hogskin Saddles, well padded, extra well finished, together with Riding Bridle. Regular price of the outfit is $17.75; sale price........$13.25

S. CARSLEY Co.

1765 to 1788 Notre Dame Street, 184 St. James Street Montreal

THOMAS LIGGET

Empire Building-2474-2476 St. Catherine St.

Carpets and every description of Floor Coverings, Rugs, Art Squares, Ourtains, Draperies, Window Shades, Fancy Table Oovers, Cushions, Cosy Corners Fittings, etc. Novelties in High Class Brass and Enamelled Bedsteads with Springs, Mattres etc. Exclusiveness in designs characterize our Carpets and House Furnishings.

Estimates cheerfully given for Hotels, Corporations, Public Buildings, etc. Also for Upholstering work in all its branches Mail orders receive careful attention.

escape them, here and there they have altars "to unknown gods."

"This thought Paul seizes upon as his starting point in approaching such an auditory. "In words such as that assembly had never listened to, Paul tells them of the true God, the Infinite Being the Creator; not deified nature, the Author of nature and all its cation of humanity, not such as they weakly imagined it, but in the submystery of the Incarnation. He tells how all the treasures of the wis dom and the power of God are Christ, the Light of the world, the Redeemer of the world from its iniquities, who, having died to delive lead us to newness of life, and would one day be the Judge of all the good deeds and all the evil deeds of man kind."

BACK TO THE EAST - "And now more than ever is his mind drawn towards Rome. Peter has preceded him there, and has estab-lished there the world-centre of the Apostolic Ministry. But the needs of the universal Church have called Peter to Jerusalem and have detained him in the churches of the East ed him in the churches of the East.
Meantime dissensions have arisen among the Christians in Rome which threaten the existence of the faith among them. The converts from Judaism and the converts from gentilism are quarrelling as to their rospective standing in the Church and even as to the essentials of Christian duty. The dispute is similar to others in the East, which Paul has been chiefly instrumental is bringing. been chiefly instrumental in bringin to a peaceful solution. Therefore is is here impelled to be once peace-maker and feacher. 'H Epistle to the Romans.

(To be Continued.)

Choice Novelties from the World's Great Fashion Centres

Choice Novelties from the world's great fashion centres are being placed into stock daily. The aggregation is already large on our ground floor in such lines as Ladies Collars & Cuffs, Ladies' Turnovers, Ladies' Seeks. Ladies' Belts, etc-rom among many others we direct attention to the following—

Novelties in Neckwear

Collars and Cuffs in embroidered scrim, a full range from 35c to $1.00 per set.
Bulgarian Embroidered Collars and Turnovers, and Fancy Silk and Lace Socks, from 35c.
Fifta Ave. Bows, in black and colored silk, with white turnover, also in scrim—gives the finishing touch to a smart tailor-made gown gown Plauen Lace Socks, special lines 20c, 35c and 50c.

Novelties in Belts.

Bit ek Elastic Belts, cut steel trimmings from $4.25 to $18.00.
Black Moire and Silk Plaited Belts, high back, gilt and oxydised buckles front and back, from 25e to $2.50.

A large assortment Colored Silk Plaited Belts in sky, white and red, gilt and oxydised buckles, $1.00 and $1.25.
Special line in Red, White and Sky, Steel Buckles, all round, dip buckles, $150.
Git Belts, Maple Leat design, $2.50.
Git Belts, front and back buckle, $1.25 and $1.50.
Folded Kid Belts, in black, red, white, tan, and gray, 650. $1.25, $2.50, $4.00.
Folded Kid Belts, red, 500.
Gilt and Oxydised Belt Sets, 500.

JOHN MURPHY & CO.

Turms Cash Talephone Up, 274

SATURDAY, MAI

MR, REDM

The deliate on Mr. Mo ment to the address in King's speech was resu day night. Several members havi Mr. Wyndham, who ered by Ministerialist not disguise the fact th ernment's policy did in departure in, not from Free Trade, but from of budget making, but dent that at all events of the Conservative par low the Prime Minister for Free Trade (Ministe After further discussion dmond (rising at 10. Irish cheers), said: my intervention in this very few moments is r by any desire to take pa cussion of the controver tween free trade and pr the contrary, my object ing for a few moments clear that in the action Irish Nationalist member take on this occasion absolutely to commit th this stage to one side o versy or another (Irish it otherwise, and were my mind upon the merits tion before the House, myself in a great difficu

I do not know what the the Government is (Iris sition cheers.) I do no a vote in their favor to mean; whether it would in favor of protection simple or of some sort preference, or of some v called the power of retali so far as I know, rests i at the present moment (and which, as far as I House can never remove On the other hand, we sider the merits of the moved by the right hono man, the member from should find it impossible contained in that amend The removal of protection for more than half a cer ly conduced to the vast the trade and commerce of and to the welfare of Sir. I suppose I cluded in the phrase "r so far as Ireland is conspectfully submit that in ment that statement is untrue (general cheers unfortunately, has in the ed equally from the prote the free trade policy of

Anything more disgrac thing more shameful, the of the deliberate destruc industries by the action tish Parliament it is im conceive.

I remember well that fa nade by the Prime Minis in the year 1895, in wl that many of the ill sprang from her poverty England and Scotland responsible for that pove those days to which he w before the introduction of land was in truth a form to Great Britain in comp manufactures; and as "The mere rumor at th a rise of industries in Ir ed a panic in commercial England; the commercial England were possessed o Irish rivalry.

Which could not be ex Bnitish manufacturers car and again and again per British Parliament to say the rivalry of Irish man (Irish cheers). And final liament listened to their when it tools action it ce

Mr. Lecky has pointed book that the navigation hibited the importation cattle into England as a common nuisance. Irish beef, Irish pork, I butter and the growth of a grade was the direct restrictions. That trade minated by the action of Parliament, and the exportant of woollen anufact Ireland was problisted pain of forfeiture of the the ship, and a fine of every offence, under the William III.

The Irish glass trade w a statute of George H. In were crushed by a prohibit 25 per cert. At one to was supplying all the clo

Z Go.

Hats. The S. Carsley Co.,84.35

n's Hats. the new Derby or Panama mited; that fact $1.65 the latest Ameri-.....$2.15 and $2.70

O Cents.

g designe, embracing neat and back, detacholoe is greatest now

d Gloves. simply improved the atroduced the triffing ntroduced the trifling m into line with the black, as well as DRA—Ladies' 2 Dome Kid 14 to 7. Colors tan, brown, e, as well as black or ilk points. Per pair $1.55

c's Day. all button-hole size to the BADGES.

BRIDLES the remainder of the Co.

nes Street Montreal

iGET

Catherine St.

verings, Rugs, Art ancy Novelties in High prings, Mattresses, Carpets and House

orporations, Public

URPHY&CO.

Novelties from rld's Great ion Centres bities from the world's neentree are being ook daily. The aggre-eady large on our nsuch lines as Ladies 's, Ladies' Turnovers, s. Ladies' Belts, etc-many others we direct to following-

s in Neckwear

s in embroidered scrim, a a 35c to $1.00 per set. bidered Collars and Turn-ncy Silk and Lace Socks, in black and colored silk, nover, also in scrim—gives such to a smart tailor-made ks. special lines 20c, 35c es in Belts.

elts, cut steel trimmingso $18 OO.
d Silk Plaited Belts, high oxydised buckles front and to $2.5 O.
ent Colored Silk Plaited white and red, gilt and les, $1.00 and $1.25.
ed, White and Sky, Steel und, dip buckles, $1.50.
Leaf design, $2.50.
and buck buckle, $1.25

, in black, red, white, tan. , $1 25, $2 50, $4.00 , red, 500 d Belt Sets, 500

URPHY & CO. ine Street, corner of

....Telephone Up, 274

MR. REDMOND ON THE FISCAL POLICY.

The deliate on Mr. Monley's amendment to the address in reply to the King's speech was resumed on Mon-Several members having spoken,

Mr. Wyndham, who was warmly cheered by Ministerialists, said he did not disguise the fact that the Government's policy did involve a great departure in, not from the doctrine of Free Trade, but from the routine of budget making, but he was condent that at all events the majority of the Conservative party would fol-low the Prime Minister in his fight for Free Trade (Ministerial cheers). After further discussion, Mr. John Redmond (rising at 10.30 amid loud Irish cheers), said: Mr. Speaker, my intervention in this debate for a is not prompted very few moments by any desire to take part in the discussion of the controversy as be-tween free trade and protection. On the contrary, my object in intervenmoments is to make clear that in the action which the Irish Nationalist members intend to take on this occasion they decline absolutely to commit themselves at this stage to one side of the controversy or another (Irish cheers). Wene it otherwise, and were I to make up my mind upon the merits of the ques tion before the House, I should find myself in a great difficulty.

I do not know what the policy of the Government is (Irish and Opposition cheers.) I do not know wha a vote in their favor to-night would mean; whether it would mean a vote in favor of protection pure simple or of some sort of Colonial preference, or of some vague thing called the power of retaliation, which so far as I know, rests in this House at the present moment (Irish cheers), and which, as far as I know, House can never remove from itself.

On the other hand, were I to consider the merits of the amendment moved by the right honorable gentle man, the member from Montr should find it impossible as an Irishman to subscribe to the statement contained in that amendment that 7the removal of protection duties has for more than half a century actively conduced to the vast extension of the trade and commerce of the realm, and to the welfare of its popula-tion." Sir. I suppose Ireland is in-Sir. I suppose Ireland is included in the phrase "realm": and so far as Ireland is concerned I respectfully submit that in my judg ment that statement is notoriously untrue (general cheers). Ireland, unfortunately, has in the past suffer ed equally from the protectionist and the free trade policy of Great Bri-

Anything more disgraceful, anything more shameful, than the story of the deliberate destruction of Irisl industries by the action of the British Parliament it is impossible to conceive.

I remember well that famous speech made by the Prime Minister. I think in the year 1895, in which he said that many of the ills of Ireland sprang from her poverty, and that England and Scotland were largely responsible for that poverty. Sir, in those days to which he was referring before the introduction of steam, Ireland was in truth a formidable rival to Great Britain in commerce and in manufactures; and as Mr. Froude

"The mere rumor at that time of a rise of industries in Ireland created a panic in commercial circles in England; the commercial leaders in England were possessed of a terror of Irish rivalry.

Which could not be exorcised, and British manufacturers came together, and again and again petitioned the British Parliament to save them from the rivalry of Irish manufacturers," (Irish cheers). And finally this Parliament listened to their advice, and when it tools action it certainly was

Mr. Lecky has pointed out in his book that the navigation laws pro-hibited the importation of Irish cattle into England as a public and common nuisance.

Irish beef, Irish pork, Irish bacon, butter and cheese were all excluded; and the growth of a great woollen trade was the direct result of these restrictions. That trade was exterminated by the action of the British Parliament and the source. rainated by the action of the British Parliament, and the export of wool and of woollen anufactures from Ireland was prohibited under the pain of forfeiture of the goods and the ship, and a fine of £500 for every offence, under the statute of William II.

William III.

sails in the British navy, and that trade was also extinguished

An end was put to it by imposing duties upon all Irish-made sail cloth, and so with all Irish products that day, and the result is summed up in these words, which I will read from Mr. Froude, who was not witness very friendly to Ireland,

"England, said Froude, "governed for what she deemed her own interest, making her calculations in the gross balance of her trade ledgers, and leaving her moral obligations to as if right and wrong had been blotted out of the statute book of the universe. England determined to keep Ireland poor and mise rable as the readiest means to pre-vent her from being troublesome."

Froude continues: "She destroyed her shipping industry by her trade navigation laws. She extinguished Irish manufactures by preferential duties. She laid disabilities even upon its wretched agriculture, for fear the Irish importation might injure English farmers. With their shipping destroyed by the Navigation Act, their woollen manufactures taker from them, their trade in all its branches crippled, the only resource the only resource left to those Irish who cherished dreams of improving their unfortunate country was agriculture." (Irish cheers).

So the whole Irish nation was driven back upon agriculture; and then. having destroyed Irish industries by your protection policy, and having driven the whole nation back upon agriculture, then you stepped in with your free trade policy to complete our ruin (Irish cheers and some Mir. nisterial cheers). Mr. Speaker, don't question for a moment truth of the statement that for this country free trade at the time it was established has conduced to the welfare and prosperity of the people of Great Britain (Opposition cheers).

But, sir, Free Trade came to Ireland in a different guise. It brought to Ireland all its disadvantages, and brought to Ireland none of its boons. (Ministerial cheers.)

A good free trader and a good liberal, the late Mr. Childers, said in his draft report of the Financial Relations Commission of 1895: "The change," he said, "in financial policy is usually considered to have been advantageous to a population, the great bulk of which had come to depend not upon agriculture, but on manufacturing industries and commerce But it is evident this change was not advantageous to Ireland, a country in which there was little, trade or manufacturing industry; and it must be said that just as Ireland suffered in the last century from protection and the exclusive commercial policy, so has she been at a dis advantage in this century from adoption of the almost unqualified free trade policy in the United Kingdom," (Irish cheers.)

Now, I say, under these circumstar ces, it is no worder there is a state of apathy and indifference on this subject in Ireland (Irish cheers). The spectacle presented by Ireland at this movement is very strange. She is an integral portion, so you say, of the Empire. She is supposed to have Empire. She is supposed to have common interests with the Empire (Irish laughter). Well, Sir, this country is ringing from end to end is the topic of conversation in Senate and in the street. Go to Ireland and to-day it is the topic no one is talking about. (Cheers). There is no interest at this moment taken in the question in Ireland at all. Ireland might as well be portion of any other Empire as of this, so far as an interest in question is concerned. So you may as well find yourself in Iceland as Ireland, so far as this question goes.
(Irish cheers.)

We are told that Irish prosperity will revive if only a tax is put or food. We are told that Irish industries will spring up again if only a tariff is put on the importation of foreign manufactured articles. Sir, we are somewhat sceptical about that in Ireland (Irish cheers). For myself, I may be allowed to say that I think

A far more important question is the question of transit in Ireland. (Irish cheers). I think that Irish (Irish chears). I think that Irish industries, even as they are to-day, are strangled and destroyed by the high cost of transit, and by the absence of proper facilities for transit. (Hear, hear.)

Why, sir, transit to-day in Ireland costs from 30 to 35 per cent. more for goods than in England and Scotland. As far as protection is concerned those people who have thought the question out at all in Ireland have not understood by the term "protection" anything like the policy of the right honorable gentlenan, the member for West Birmingham. (Hear, hear.)

When the people of Ireland talk of protection they have in their minds protection against England, (Loud Irish and Opposition cneers.)

It is not Germany or any other foreign nation, it is England that is the great dumper in Ireland (Irish, Opposition and Unionist Free Trader cheers). For reasons such as these public opinion in Ireland to-day is apathetic as regards the situation that has arisen. For these reason my colleagues and myself refuse t commit ourselves at this stage one side or the other of this controversy. We prefer to hold ourselves in reserve and await develop I put this to the House Commons—What a strange result it will be of your refusal of Home rule to Ireland if the ultimate cision of this question, and if this vast issue on which so much pends for you, should in the end be dominated by the votes of a body of men who are in this House, but not of it (loud Irish cheers), and who in casting their votes, in all human probability in deciding this issue in the future, will refuse to "think im-perially," but will be guided by one consideration alone, and that is-What course will conduce most speedily to the freedom and happiness of Ireland. (Irish cheers).

There is one consideration which re lieves me, at any rate, and all my colleagues also (hear, hear), of any difficulty whatever in coming to a decision. I agree with the Chief Se cretary for Ireland, and with others who have spoken in the same sense, that this amendment is above and beyond all else a vote of want of confidence in the Government. (Irish and Opposition cheers.) As that, and as that alone, I regard it. (Hear hear.) The Irish party in this House have no confidence in the Government. (Loud Irish cheers.)

Not only has the Government quite recently betrayed its solemn pledges to Ireland on the question of University education, but far more impor tant, it has opposed an absolute non possumus to Ireland's claim for selfgovernment; and I say that no English Government, I care not what party it may be drawn from, which denies Ireland's claim to self-government can possess the confidence Irish Nationalists in this House (Irish cheers). On that broad sufficient grounds, and reserving to ourselves full freedom of action in the future development of the fiscal controversy (a Unionist member laughed in a demonstrative way)-I notice that an honorable member laughs; to se a vulgarism, perhaps he laugh with the wrong side of his mouth before this question is finally concluded (Irish cheers) - I repeat that on this broad and sufficient grounds, and reserving full freedom of action in the future developments of this fiscal controversy, my friends and I will vote to-night in favor of the motion of want of confidence in the Government. (Loud Irish and Opposition cheers).

The House divided. For Mr. Morley's amendment ... 276

Government majority 51

The New York "Evening Post" of with this great fiscal controversy, It | Monday, 29th February, contains a very strange editorial under the still stranger heading "The Crime of Being a College President." are not very specially interested in the gentlemen to whom this article refers, and if we were we would have considerable difficulty in making out what the writer has in view. All we can understand of it is that the most recent indictment against the College Presidents "Accuses them of cowardice about taking the popu lar side on a public question, of truckling to rich patrons, and of pretending that their young prizefighters are their best students.

The Presidents to whom reference is made, needless to say, are the directors of the non-Catholic institu-tions. As to their cowardice in politics, we know nothing, nor it quite clear to us why they should be expected to have aught to do with us that they have sufficiently impor-tant duties and responsibilities, to make it very difficult fon them to make it very difficult fon them to levote time to the mere political issues of the day. Then, as to the question of seeking the patronage of the rich, we are under the impression that the same may be said of the leads of all institutions—be they educational or otherwise. Where rault night be found would be in the case is a College President displaying such marked partiality for the wealthy that injustice would be done those less fortunate in the possession this world's goods.

The only point upon which could comment would be that of athletics; and here we do not quite see how the Presidents of Colleges in general should be condemned-for we do not believe that they are all affected with the athletic or sport mania. In the very last paragraph of the same article we read the following: "On the last count most of our College Presidents can plead not guilty. few of them may be stunned by the shouting of undergraduates, and few may imagine that noisy young graduates voice the mature vie the alumni; but such misguided men are uncommon. Indeed, our College Presidents have, on the whole, offer ed the sanest and most caustre criticism of athletic exercises. They, if any, are in a position to note the disastrous effects of the craze intercollegiate games, its inroads upon the true efficiency of a univer-When we observe the hysteria of the daily and weekly press on the occasion of a football game between Harvard and Yale, when we listen to the chatter about muscular Christ anity in which enthusiastic but shortsighted clergymen indulge, we always turn to the reports of President Eliot and refresh ourselves with his calm indifference to the shrickings of the mob. He and his fellow-laborers are not yet deserving of utter reprobation. This is certainly one of the queer est editorials that we have read in a long time. All this talk about the serious heads of great colleges being deserving of reprobation, and this lengthy criticism of the athletic side education imparted, seems to us to be far-fetched. We are perfectly willing to admit that in some institu tions these inter-collegiate games are carried to excess, and that not a few students have learned their principles of betting and sport-gambling on the College grounds. But there is medium between the excess of athle tics and the condemnation of them It must be remembered entirely. that while instruction is the principal factor in a perfect education, there are also other and very indis pensable elements. There is the cultivation of the mind by means of instruction, the cultivation of the heart and soul by means of moral and religious training, and, finally the cultivation of the physical part the development of the body, in der that the old Latin axiom- "a healthy mind in a healthy body"may be exemplified in each member of the rising generation. Gymnastics, games, athletic exercises, in moderation, and properly regulated, are a necessity; they aid in the up-building of a physical manhood that is the foundation and support of the higher and more intellectual life of individual. But no matter what may or may not be the attitudes of different College Presidents in this regard, no matter what the ideas of the editors of large dailies, certainly there is nothing to be gained, and no in struction to be imparted by such editorials. They are highly calculated to mislead the public, to create wrong impressions regarding whose life-business it is to educate the young men of the day. In fact we are averse to all such light and superficial criticism, especially when dashed off by pens that have training in the great work of educationalist. There is a safe field for those writers in politics they can there say what they like.

ST. BRIDGET'S NIGHT REFUGE

Report for week ending Sunday March 6th, 1904 : Irish, 121; French, 95; English, 27; other nationalities, 15. Total, 258.

Premium Subscribers.

: We ofter as a premium o each Subscriber a neatly bound copy of the Golden Jubilee Book, who will send the names and cash for 5 new Subscribers to the True Witness

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain a most interesting chronicle of the works of Irish Catholic Priests and laymen in Montreal during the past Fifty years

※ ※ OUR CURBSTONE

ON SHAMROCKS

OBSERVER. 承承

rick's Day approaches, it may not be untimely for me to have a word to say about Shamrocks. I do purpose touching upon the poetic side of the subject and quoting the 'chosen leaf of bard and chief," nor yet the historical aspect of the theme All these I leave to writers of patriotic emotion, facile pen and ade quate knowledge of the "Dear Little Shamrock." I am only going to record, in my own homely way, couple of my recent observations or the city curbstone. I am not learned in the folk-lore of the past nor do I pretend to any special knowledge on the subject of national emblems; but I have always had a great love for the shamrock, I hav always thought it had a peculiarly delicate and noble appearance, and to me it has ever been as unique as the nationality it represents. I have never tired of noting the different forms in which Shamrock badges are gotten up for the seventeenth March. Some, certainly, have no connection with the emblematic plant beyond the color green; but still they are for the one purpose and that is

AN EXPERIENCE-On the first of March in the afternoon I was rampling along Rachel street. Between St awrence and St. Denis streets I notice two or three small shops in the windows of which bunches of Shamrocks, green ribbons, with golden harps, and other emblems suitable for the seventeenth of the month were displayed. One little candy store where newspapers and tobacco sold, attracted my attention. As I looked in the window I noticed one large card of green velvet triple-leaved bunches, on which was written in large letters, "DES CHAMROQUES, 5 ET 10 CENTS." I could see behind the counter an elderly French-Canadian, who was evidently the proprietor of the shop. For amuse ent sake, more than anything else, I entered and bought a copy of "Le Canada." Then Y asked the old gentleman what those things in the vindow were. He looked at me in evident astonishment, and possibly pitty for my supposed ignorance, but ne was too polite to give expression to his thoughts. He simply repeated the words on the card: Chamroques." And he added, French, "they come about the time of the marbles and tops." asked, are they not a little early this year ?" "No," he replied, "it is well to have them before hand, for two or three weeks is not a fong time." I then asked him if he expected to sell them all. "Of course " was his emphatic reply, "There no people." he said, "like the Irish to buy national emblems, and as soon as they see them in the windows they will buy them, even though they should purchase more elaborate ones elsewhere." I said that I was under the impression that there were few Irish in that section. He said that they were not very numerous, but that French-Caradians also bought them, and he was sure of selling his weather, I came back to the Shamock question, for I was interested in the old gentleman and his stock of green. I asked him why French-Canadians bought Shamrocks, since they were only for St. Patrick's Day. His reply surprised me: "Do you suppose we are heathens?" he asked. And then he went on : "French-Canadians were them out of respect for the Irish, and for the Faith—for our Faith is the same; and the Shamrock represents the Trinity, and we all believe in the Trinity; and St. Patrick was a Frenchman; and when he went to Ireland he taught the Irish love for the Church and love for

As March advances and St. Pat- | troubles with England, the French went over to help them: and when the Irish came to Canada the French Canadians received them and gave them a lift when they were in need, and when the French-Canadians had to fight for their language and their schools, the Irish sided with them: and when St. Jean . Baptiste Day comes the Irish wear maple leaves and when St. Patrick's Day comes the French-Canadians wear Sham-rocks—and I sell my stock."

THE LESSON:- I need scarcely

draw the obvious lesson from that little speech. It was in an uncultured style, rough and ready, but there was a deal of historical truth in it. And I then and there bought a Shamrock from the old gentleman; and I purpose wearing it on the seventeenth of this month. It is not an elaborate one, but it represents to my mind a something that I would gladly see realized. It will remind me of the honest faith, the sincere conviction, the genuine patriotism, the generous sentiments of that old vendor of candies and papers. As I left the little shop I could not help asking myself if these were truly the sentiments that prevail, in regard to our race, amongst our French-Canadian fellow-citizens. It is a wrong thing to base one's opinions on the vaporings of interested journalists, or the outpourings of self-seeking politicians: to know the people, to appreciate their true sentiments, you nust do what Davis advised, "Go down into the Liberties and the coal quays." You must walk amongst them, penetrate into their homes, mix up in their daily conversations, purchase in their small shops, trade with their less pretentious dealers, and draw your information, not secondhand, from their own mouths. And this is exactly what I have been doing for some years back, and I have come to the conclusion-based on my personal observation-that amongst the French-Canadian elenent there is an undercurrent of great sympathy in regard to the Irish people and a deep sentiment of which too rarely finds liking mouthpiece either in the press or in the voices of public exponents of popular thought.

MY CONCLUSION:-With a positive knowledge of the conditions, as I have just described them, I have come to the conclusion that it is matter of vital necessity, as far as Catholic interests are concerned, that both French and Irish should learn to have more thoughts in common; a greater union as regards their aspirations, and a mutual kindliness of sentiment. And in the ordinary affairs of life all these things could be manifested. I was forced, by my observations in the shop on Rachel street, to contrast that old papen and candy dealer's knowledge of the Shamrock and the history of the Irish with the lack of information regarding the French-Canadians, their and he was sure of selling his history, language, literature and After some talk about the national characteristics, that would mark an Irish person of similar occupation on social status. There is one evident fact, and I have proven it to my own satisfaction, not once but a thousand times: it is this; the less a person knows about the language, the literature and the beauties of another race, the greater the pre-judice against its people. It is so as regards the French-Canadians, in this country. I recall one day, when Dalton McCarthy was waging war on the French language, to have heard him declare that he had never learned one word of that language. course not; his very ignorance of the language was the source of his preudice. It is in better acquaintanceship alone that we can hope to smooth over the roughness on the over and fought for the French, the Ismooth over the roughness on the when in their turn, the Irish had road to prosperity and contentment.

CANADIAN MILLIONAIRES.

France: and when France was trouble with England the Irish went over and fought for the French; and

Lord Strathcona, the Canadian High Commissioner in London, has, according to Mr. James Lumsden, in his work "Westward," a fortune es-timated at no less than $125,000,000 Lord Mount Stephen, who commenced life as a pioneer in Western Canada, is worth $75,000,000, and Mr. Ross, of Montreal, is the possessor of a like amount. Mr. Reid is according with a fortune of $50,000, QUEER PHRASES.

In a Manchester, N.H., newspaper, an undertaker advertises himself as a 'mortician." In a Cleveland, O., nagazine an inn-keeper is said to nave had a rapid rise in "the hotelic field." Yet in the schools and coleges of the land more money is now pent on instruction in English than ver was spent before.—Providence

A REVIEW BY "CRUX."

A few weeks ago, before an audience of four thousand people, in Chicago, Bishop Spalding delivered an address that has been justly characterized as one of the ablest and most instructive expositions of the politi cal and social evils of our day in the United States, that for a long time has emananted from platform press. It would not be possible to give the full text of that lengthy ad However, there are portions of it that apply to Canadian politics and the social conditions here, and from these I purpose taking a extracts.

The opening remarks, which con tain a wonderfully striking proposi tion, deserve to rank with the most truth-conveying axioms They are the basis of the entire argument and they lend themselves countless developments. These may wide in their application.

'In the social as well as in natural body all is bound together in organic unity; and hence it can be well neither with individuals societies unless the inner source of life is ceaselessly refreshed and purified. Where men love money more than justice; have more faith in steam and electricity than in God and goodness, no effectual remedy can be applied to the ills from which they suffer. He who lacks wisdom and virtue is degraded by wealth and leisure; and prosperity is a people's curse if it cause them to fall away From religion and righteousness. It is folly to proclaim the sacredness of property where the sacredness human life is ignored. Institutions cannot emancipate those whom dishonesty and greed enslave. Opporbut widens the way that leads to The environment is improved to little purpose for those who feel of animal impulse; and the wits are sharpened only the better to do evil if conscience be not strengthened. our national welfare be not based on a foundation of religion and morality will vanish.

No comment is needed to illustrate these trite and perfectly just statements, nor do they require the amplification of detail. My object in quoting them in full is to leave them before the reader as a basis of the sage arguments that follow, and which I, unhappily, can only give brief synopsis.

HOW WEALTH IS DISTRIBUTED -The Bishop points out that if few go on accumulating vast fortunes, and the numbers of those holding the mass of the country' grows smaller, these individuals will become invested with power the equal of which is not to in history, Beside greed of the capitalist goes the improvidence and wastefulness of, the workman. Turning then to the me thods and means of social improve ment, under such conditions the lea turer leaves out all consideration of whose only issue is crime." The prin cipal order, socially speaking, deserves consideration is Socialism which is not, or at least, need not be anarchic. "Its aim is the trans formation of private and competing capital into a united collective capi tal." After a careful and impartial occupied all the space I can ask fo agitation will not soon cease. It has a broad proposition as this: The clamorous proclamation of the ness of property are those who have the Socialistic state will remain theory, a visionary entity, and could it become a reality the cataclysm which would accompany speedy overthrow would swallow priceless treasures which are the gains of thousands of years of heroic struggles and sacrifice.'

POLITICAL CONDITIONS:- Here

is an indictment that is all the stronger because it is based on facts and is true : "Our politics are notor iously corrupt and in spite of sporadic neactions the tendency is still greater corruption. The public conscience is ready to condo cessful crime, whether committed by private individuals or by officens the Government. The most fervid advocates of the sacredness of property rights are those who have made fortunes by bribing legislatures and municipalities, or by crushing com-petition. In our cities laws are enacted which those who pass them, as well as those who are appointed to see that they are executed, have intention of emforcing. The administrative lie prevails, and transgressors, instead of suffering legal pun ishment, become victims of a system of blackmail, which enables officials to fatten on the sins and miseries of fallen women, gamblers, and criminal saloon-keepers.

Having thus launched his accuse tion the Bishop proceeds to prove it, and, after telling the story the age's wonderful material and scientific progress, he says that science is a mighty force and has wrought wonders. Culture adorns the minds and imparts charm to manners, art exalts the imagination and gives a firmer insight into the possibilities of human achievement wealth ministers in many manifold ways to man's more immediate and urgent needs,, "but his true life, in dividual and social, rests on foun dations which only faith, hope love can build and make enduring."

This leads to the crucial part the entire lecture. Discarding the hypercritical employment what is divinest in human nature to serve as a bulwark to protect tyrants and mammonites who work iniquity and drink the blood of human nearts, we must come down to great and undeniable principle that 'The sovereign good is spiritual.' bring this within reach of all is the purpose of religion, education, free

"Institutions are but the means the end is an ever-increasing commu nication of divine benefits to men and when institutions fail to pro mote this, they cease to be cherished thing but justice and beneficence can satisfy us; and in the degree which injustice and indifference the miseries and hardships of the weak overcome us, in the same gree shall those who are not blind feel that the radica or perverse wrongs calls for radical measures of

It is exactly here that I am sirous of accentuating the Bishon's teenth century, and his magnificen that devolve upon the men of the wentieth century. Having thus fa to this conclusion: "The Socialistic next week the consideration of such done good, and will do good by its most fervid advocates of the sacred wrongs which the tolling masses have under fortunes by bribing legisla suffered and continue to suffer. But ed that the private audie that I would visit the H visit the Holy Father in the small Throne Room next one to his private study in company with half a dozen or more persons, which is always valued as a private audience indeed. But more than was to be my favor. At 11.30 the rector and myself arrived ut apartments on the top floon of Vatican Palace, once occupie the Cardinal Rampolla, Secretary State to Leo XIII., but now used by X. whilst his pred rooms are being renovated. We were shown to the adjoining room, Pope's study. Two of the Noble Two commendatori were waiting to be presented by Monsignor Piccoli. After this party had spent five min-utes in audience, the Monsignor who looked after the visitors beckened to us to approach. With light and grateful hearts and a thrill of us? Our Lord died for all and His pleasure we entered the Pontiff's Church much care for all.

To the left of the entrance stood the small desk-table with its cru cifix in the centre of a number documents; on the right were windows facing the great Square St. Peter's. The Vicar of Christ came from behind the desk, advanced a couple of steps towards us, and, as we knelt and kissed his ring, blessed us and expressed himself, in a warn condescending manner that surprised us, as much 'pleased to greet us. Our names had been announced by Mon signor Cameriere. Then he gracious ly hade us to be seated at his right From Monsignor Kennedy he inguired about the North American College, and said that he had read with great interest the catalogue prizes, which recorded the splendid the recent "concursus" at the Propaganda, in which they had received twenty-seven "cuts" for first and second places. "They did magnificentsaid, "I congratulate you, and them, Monsignor, and give you room.

all my blessing." Turning to me he said : "And you my son, are laboring among the colored people? But you are not colored man," he added, with a twinkle in his eye and quite a hearty laugh.

To my lips came a reply which he would have appreciated had I uttered but I refrained from answering. "No, Holy Father, but I have a black

I told him that I had come Rome to celebrate my twenty-fifth anniversary Mass in St. Peter's, where had celebrated my first Holy crifice, and that the event took place on the very day of his election. holy coincidence, indeed," he marked. He was gracious enough to add, "Let us hope that you will return to celebrate at the same altar your golden jubilee Mass.'

en, recurring to my work, inquired about the number of negroe n the United States, asking especially concerning their employment and means of livelihood, their habits, how many were Catholics, and to what religion the others belonged. I told him that of the mearly 10,000,000 people not 200,000 are Catholics that surprised and affected him. spoke of the prejudice against "th olored man and brother..'

"Yes, I know it." he said, and his "But tell them never face saddened. to lose faith in Oun Blessed Lord who will reward their goodness and ompensate them for their troubles and condition. Teach them to be and condition. holding fast to the moral law; duties served, you know, will beget rights. Let the few Catholics keep together in obedience to the teachings of the Church, receiving the Sacraments, and giving the example of a good life and industrious habits to all. Tell the men in particular how much they can do by unity and keeping the moral law to bring others to Church. They must be missionaries to their race."

We were held captive by his heaven ly talk, which was then interrupted by the solemn tones of the great bell of St. Peter's, ringing out the midday "Angelus."

That's the ball, let us say the Angelus." We three knelt down and recited that commemoration of the tor and myself alternating in its re-citation with the Vicar of the Word made Flesh. After the triple dox ology he added in Italian that inology he added in Italian that invocation so often sung after Benediction in the college chapel. "Sacred Heart of Jesus I implore thee," to which we answered, "That I maglove Thee more and more." It was one of the sweetest incidents of my life, a cherished scene, a pious remembrance forever. Since then I recite the "Angelus" as the Pope recite the "Angelus" as the Pope recites it, with the addition of a couplet invocation to the Sacred Heart. And now the congregation of St. Henedict's and the colored children in pected that the visit was ended; but no, he told us to be reseated and continue the conversation. A Monsigno holding a document for presentation opened the door, dropping on one knee, but the Pope beckon away. The intruder quickly left and of the small number of priests work ing for the negroes of the South, and their hardships because of the pover ty of the negroes. "Your laity who wish to work for these people, will they not ?" he There was not enough sympathy for the work, so many of the laity sympathizing more with the priests with the people. "Oh! what a pity, he said, Do you not all belong

If our wealthy Catholics, I thought could have heard those earnest, pleading words of the Holy Father, how their hearts and purses would have opened to establish missions for the colored people of the South, how the Bishops could easily schools and fine churches for them.

"What kind of converts do make?" he then inquired. I assured him that from my 'experience twenty years I could bear testim to the steadfastness in the perform majority remained faithful, taking a pride in their Church, even as their white brethren, and leading others into the fold.

What a message of love from the Vicar of Christ ! a message from hea ven itself, a call to the true Church direct from the Supreme Pastor, prayer that there may be one and one Shepherd, as there is in the words of St. Paul, "one faith, Lord, one baptism, one God, Father of us all." Let the non-Ca tholics remember this message from Rome. Let the Catholics bear it fa and wide to their separated brethren Kneeling down I received his bless ing for our work in New York another for my relatives, and kissing again the Fisherman's ning, arose, when he actually accompanied us to the door, bowing us away and humbly saying "many thanks" for the photograph of His Holiness which I brought to Monsignor Bisleti, asking him to leave it on the Pope's desi that he might write on it some message, some words of blessing to priests of the missions in the South and to the benefactors of St. Benedict's mission. It is prized as great favor to secure the autograph and delight then, when upon my calling at the Vatican with Monsignor Kennedy on the following Sunday evening. I found that His Holiness nad taken the pains to write under his picture forty-six words of a mes sage couched in classic Latin. When Monsignor Bisleti uncovered the picture he exclaimed: "Why, the Pope has written a page; you are fortunate indeed." He then read aloud for us the inscription, of which the following is the translation:

"To our beloved son the priest John E. Burke, pastor, likewise to the other beloved priests who zeal ously labor to call the negroes America to the Catholic faith America to the Catholic faith and to train them holily in it. that the richest fruits may accompany a full harvest; and also to the benefactors of the mission and to the negro faithful, we most lovingly impart the Apostolic Benediction.

PRIMARY EDUCATION

(By an Occasional Contributor.)

All over the civilized world principles of primary education the same, and what applies in land, as far as methods are cor ed, equally apply in other lands. has been contended in the United States-against the Catholic theorythat an hour or so, after hours, should suffice for the inculca tion of religion. No better answer to this false premise could be given than that of the Anglican Bishop of North Queensland, Rt. Rev. Georg H. Frodsham, in his article on "Pri-Education in Australia, appeared recently in the 'Nineteenth Century." The Bishop's remarks need no comment. He says:

giving religious teaching outside school hours have been found to which is sufficiently long already, and econdly, they place religious teachmanbles, which is not calculated religious ministrations. As a matter of fact, numbers of devoted clergy en endeavor to take advantage the provisions of the acts either the state school buildings or holding daily instruction classes their respective churches. A few are successful in gathering together terested bands of children, and the amount of good they do in the sert of secular teaching is incalculable. But even these successful ones, with scarcely an exception, allow that the number of children that pass through their hands is infinite simally small compared with thos whose inclination leads them to out door games, and whose parents do not exercise any compulsion upon them. In the vast majority of schools the provisions are inoperative either through the remoteness of the school or because the number of pupils is so great that a dozen men would form too small a band to effectively undertake the task during the very restricted time allowed by the act. And again he says on this subject: "The airy assertions certain doctrinaires that the clergy can teach just as effectively after before school hours as in them fail when touched by the verdict of perience. The wniter has had ex ceptional opportunities for inquiring into this matter in many parts Australia, and he has no hesitation in saying that such provisions practically useless and visionary Those who offer them are only offer ing the veriest shadow of religious education to the children. Side by side with this opinion of a Bishop, a Protestant, and one who speals from experience, we have statement of how the Methodists Australian country, accept a system that their co-religionists in America deny as a right to Catholics. The following passages are taken from the official report of the Department of Public instruction for New South

tion Act provides that general religious teaching shall form part of the course of secular instruction. This religious teaching is placed on ex-

force of character—the fortier as an other type—with a heart full of sympathy for the poor and charity for the week. It is a deep inspiration the week.

the week. It is a deep inspiration and a lasting encouragement for a priest to listen to his words of zeal for souls and his feelings for the suf-fering and oppressed.

Subscribe to the

actly the same footing as geography, gramman, or any other the annual inspection of schools the failure of any class to reach standard in Scripture wou against the teacher, just as satisfactory work would tell in his favor. In the junior classes, when children are unable to read, all lessons are given orally, in the form of lectures, enerally cover a complete course of Old and New Testament history. The standards, pages 34 to 43, under the heading "Scripture," show how the lessons are distributed. All teachers irrespective of creed, are required to teach these Scripture lessons, and in no case has any refusal to do taken place, nor has any complaint ever been made to the department that the lessons have been ridiculed or made light of. Section 18 of the act and 118 of the regulations allow a panent to withdraw his children from all religious instruction by notifying his wish in writing to teacher. As a matter of fact, such notifications are so few that for statistical purposes they may be said not to exist. "Outside of this 'general' religious instruction, section 17 of the act provides for what is called 'special' religious instruction. Any recognized clergyman, or other teacher, auby his church, has right to give to the children of his own denomination one hour's religious instruction daily. general instruction, this may consist of worship and purely sectarian teaching. It is given DURING THE ORDINARY SCHOOL HOURS, and where two or more clergymen of different denominations visit, the teacher, the clergyman and the school board fird no difficulty in making arrangements to suit all concerned. As a rule, no teacher of special religious instruction visits more than once week."

The most clear-cut comment that could be made upon this important question is that of the editor of the "New World," who says: "For a large number of children a secular system means spiritual starvation. The individuals from the folly of those who should be to supply their spiritual needs. The nation will suffer most when the grand-children those who have never learned to know God have multiplied and possessed the land. Is there not warning in these words? Decidedly there is a warning in all this; and that note has been sounded over and over again by the Catholic Church, through the press as well as the pul-pit, and it has not been heeded. But the world is slowly beginning to awaken to a realization of the necessity of religion in education; State is commencing to discover that its own most deadly enemy is the offspring of the godless system that obtains so largely; and even the sneer ing infidel, who has any conception of social and political rights, is learnequally the hot-bed of crime. world may be wayward, but it not devoid of common sense, and it its own interests and knows how closely they are bound up with the religious education of the rising generation. Ultimately the Catholic systlem must triumph

FATHER McLAUGHLIN DEAD, sonality. The Pontiff has a sturd figure of medium height. His hea is large and hair white, with a face that is contemplative and not quite English exchanges announce the eath of Rev. John McLaughlin, of ruddy. At repose his countenance is not attractive, rather expressive of Blackpool, well known in this country as the author of "Is One Relifatigue, but it brightens up charmingly when he speaks on a subject of interest, his blue eyes, seldom found among the Italians, adding much to the kind sympathy of his on as Good as Another?" which had a circulation of 50,000 copies, and "The Divine Plan of the Church" Father McLaughlin was seventy-two years of age. Born in the North of Ireland, he joined the Redemptorface. He has a real sense of humor. His speech is simple and earnest, his Has speech is simple and earnest, his voice melodious and clear. He carries himself with a simple dignity that is averse to pomp and ceremony. He impresses one as a man deeply religious and humble, a man, too, of great force of character—the fortifer et suaists at an early age and became fa-mous as a missionary preacher. R.

I. P.

CHRISTIAN HUMILITY.

In our struggles against the evil-one, we should first of all keep our-selves in humility, always distrust-ing our own strength, and leaning upon God alone, in Whom and by Whom we shall be able to become Tue Witness,

CHAPTER VII.-C This was very galling of the young man, a pleasant home where ty, but he would not I olf to apply, for help knowing how severely the sure him for his folly. he sank lower, and s when driven to madness he had beaten his youn she had borne it pati that he might reform. the day she came to the landlord came to dema which had not been paid weeks. Her husband, w than half intoxicated, informed him that he whenewith to pay as he

Many angry words

the landlord threatened

out, but at the earnest

the young mother, who

SATURDAY, MA

to let them remain unti when she would try to for her sick child, he let very amiable mood. A was gone her husband demanded what she into with the baby, and on 1 ed that she was going have her cared for at an lum, until she could get came more enraged that said that no child of his be taken to an orphan a In vain did she try to him; but finally, after s ing her, he turned her the child and bade her saying he could take ca daughter. In about an the house and stealing in took hen child and flo wandering fron street ta constant dread of the pol she had a horror, lest take her darling from he from her the story of he cruelty, thus causing fident that she would fine asked and obtained admi After telling her sad young woman said, "I w you much longer, Sis shall soon be able to go then all I ask is that y baby a little while, and you for your trouble. I ing her with you because were always so kind to nally, long after dark, worn out with cold and the door of the convent

had never seen before, but know she would be well o As she had promised, trouble them much longer most tender care failed to to health, and in a short died, leaving her baby in of Sister Agnes Bernard. been the little one's cons dant during an illness whi promised to prove as fate mother's. But a sadder ed the child, for over the eves which had beamed s was falling a veil of dark parents were fruitless, so was sent to the orphan as thither Sister Agnes Bern transferred in a short time Alexia in conclusion, "and are all greatly attached t have often wished that son could give her a good hor adopt her; but," she added

seems that no one cares to

ed with a little blind girl. "Poor child," said Mi "it is too bad, but some person may adopt her." Virginia's interest in t had become so deep that got to resume the converse had been so unpleasant to and very happily did the away until she was ready home. Little Agnes had with Arthur the whole de begged his mother to let sightless companion, who pleased and puzzled him, with him, but Virginia by telling him to wait by telling him to walt time. In less than a week ceived two pretty dolls a of candy and fruit as a gi Arthur; and Virginia, thin had done her duty, the more of the blind orphan, she visit her cousin again

CHAPTER VIII.

Father Burke Tells of an Interview With His Holiness

The Rev. John E. Burke writes as follows in the Catholic News of New

An account of the very deligntful and important "talk" which it was my happiness to have with our Holy Father recently will, I think, inter-est your readers. My first audience with the new Pontiff was on August 5—the very day after his election when the American pilgrims were presented by Cardinal Gibbons. Thoug on that occasion he paternally said:

"I bless them all, my son," to any petition for a special blessing for my colored congregation and for the benefactors of St. Benedict's mission, I was not fully satisfied, and had i in my hopes that later on I would be privileged to have a chat with His Holiness in regard to the colored missions of the United States, and receive from him special favors that would stimulate and encourage the laborers in that part of God's vine

Upon my return to Rome from the Holy Land in December, Monsignor Kennedy, rector of the North American College, arranged with Monsignor Bisleti, the papal "Maestro di Camera," that on December 18, at 11.45 I should be presented to the Pope. In my diary I have written: "Friday December 18, 1903, one of the days of days, such a one as I have never

"The so-called opportunities useless for two reasons. In the first place, they add to the school ing in competition with tops impress the average boy with the dig nity of religion or with a love for

I stated that the colored people made good converts, because they are ous and have no fight with the church and have a childlike desire to love the Lord Jesus and that the harvest of souls would be abundant if had more priests for this special field. He was deeply interested all the while I spoke, and then rising he placed his hand on my head and, after some special word to me for my own consolation and encouragement, he impressively uttered these words: 'When people that I send them the Pope's ssing, and moreover tell that I grant them a plenary indulgence, and also tell the colored people of America that I embrace them in the charity of Christ.'

That afternoon I purchased a large

"PIUS PP. X"

The priests working for the new will convey this message to their ple. The memory of that and with the Pope and his cheering we and zealous interest in the work

Y, MARCH 12, 1904.

ne footing as geography, any other subject. At nspection of schools the y class to reach teacher, just as satisfacould tell in his favor. In asses, when children are ad, all lessons are given form of lectures, er a complete course of Testament history. The ges 34 to 43, under the ipture,' show stributed. All teachers f creed, are required to cripture lessons, and in any refusal to do nor has any complaint ade to the department ons have been ridiculed of. Section 18 of the of the regulations allow withdraw his children flous instruction by no-ish in writing to the a matter of fact, such are so few that for sta-ses they may be said this 'general' religious section 17 of the act what is called 'special' uction. Any recognizor other teacher, auhis church, has the to the children of his tion one hour's religidaily. Unlike the ction, this may conp and purely sectarian is given DURING THE SCHOOL HOURS, and more clergymen of dif-ations visit, the teachdifficulty in making ar suit all concerned. As her of special religious ear-cut comment that upon this important at of the editor of the who says : "For a of children a secular spiritual starvation.

will suffer earliest of those who should b supply their spiritual tion will suffer grand-children multiplied and pos-Is there not ese words? Decidedly ning in all this; and the Catholic Church lowly beginning alization of the necesin education; ncing to discover that eadly enemy is the offly; and even the sneer has any conception of tical rights, is learn-ursery of irreligion is -bed of crime.

not been heeded. But interests and knows lucation of the rising timately the Catholic lumph.

LAUGHLIN DEAD,

nges announce the known in this counor of "Is One Relis Another?" which on of 50,000 copies, Plan of the Church' llin was seventy-two Born in the North age and became fa-ionary preacher. R.

N HUMILITY.

es against the evil first of all keep our-ty, always distrust-trength, and leaning in Whom and by

COUSINS.

By MARY ROWENA COTTER

CHAPTER VII.-Continued.

This was very galling to the pride of the young man, who had lived in a pleasant home where there was plen ty, but he would not humble if to apply, for help to his parents knowing how severely they would cen-sure him for his folly. Each day he sank lower, and several times when driven to madness by drink, he had beaten his young wife; but she had borne it patiently, hoping that he might reform. At last, on the day she came to the convent, the landlord came to demand his rent. which had not been paid for several weeks. Her husband, who was more than half intoxicated, very angrily informed him that he did not have whenewith to pay as he could get no

Many angry words followed, and the landlord threatened to put them out, but at the earnest entreaty the young mother, who implored him to let them remain until to-morrow, when she would try to find shelter for her sick child, he left in a not very amiabla mood. As soon as he was gone her husband very angrily demanded what she intended to do with the baby, and on being informed that she was going to try have her cared for at an orphan asylum, until she could get work, he be came more enraged than ever and said that no child of his should ever be taken to an orphan asylum,

In vain did she try to reason with him; but finally, after severely beating her, he turned her out without the child and bade her not return, saving he could take care of daughter. In about an hour he left the house and stealing in the mother took hen child and fled with her wandering fron street ta street constant dread of the police, of whom she had a horror, lest they might take her darling from her, or from her the story of her husband's cruelty, thus causing his arrest, Fi long after dark, she arrived, worn out with cold and fatigue, at the door of the convent, which she had never seen before, but feeling conasked and obtained admission.

After telling her sad story the young woman said, "I will not trouble you much longer, Sister, for shall soon be aule to go to work and then all I ask is that you keep my baby a little while, and I will you for your trouble. I prefer leavher with you because the Sisters were always so kind to me that I know she would be well cared for."

As she had promised, she did not trouble them much longer, for the most tender care failed to restore her to health, and in a short time she died, leaving her baby in the care of Sister Agnes Bernard who had en the little one's constant attendant during an illness which at times promised to prove as fatal as the mother's. But a sadder fate awaited the child, for over the pretty blue eyes which had beamed so brightly was falling a veil of darkness. All for the father and grandchild parents were fruitless, so the was sent to the orphan asylum, and transferred in a short time.

"She is a beautiful child," said Alexia in conclusion, "and though wa are all greatly attached to her have often wished that some one who could give her a good home would adopt her; but," she added sadly, "it seems that no one cares to be troubled with a little blind girl."

"Poor child," said Mrs. Hurley. "it is too bad, but some charitable person may adopt, her."

Virginia's interest in the orphan had become so deep that she got to resume the conversation which been so unpleasant to her cousi and very happily did the hours glide was ready to return home. Little Agnes had remaine with Arthur the whole day, and h begged his mother to let his little sightless companion, who had both eased and puzzled him, go home th him, but Virginia quieted him by telling him to wait until next time. In less than a week Agnes re-ceived two pretty dolls and a lor of candy and fruit as a gift from Arthur; and Virginia, thinking she had done her duty, thought little more of the blind orphan, neither did she visit her cousin again.

CHAPTER VIII.

then in one short day and with scarcely a moment's warning, the sad climax came. In the early spring she had shed many tears over ewly made grave of her mother, and although it would be long ere she without deep feeling of sorrow, the still light-hearted Virginia could not be unhappy as long as her husband and her darling boy remained.

It was the eighth anniversary her marriage, and the usual reception was to be omitted on account of her mother's death. Unwilling to re main alone in the house of mourning, what to them had always been such a happy day. Mr. and Mrs. Hurmost intimate friends, had planned an excursion to a lake not far from the city.

It was a beautiful morning, and when they reached the lake, which was not nover five miles wide, everything gave promise of a delightful About one o'clock a few fleecy day. clouds were seen over the lake, but little heed was paid to them, after eating their dinner in the grove the party took two boats and start ed to cross the lake to visit some friends who were camping on the opposite shore. At first a gentle breeze almost carried the boats along and although the sun had disappeared behind a cloud, no danger apprehended until when they were near the middle of the lake it commenced to rain and the wing drew

Virginia's heart beat with a vague fear that something was going to happen, and spoke of furning back, but as the wind carried them onward her husband told her that it would be safen to go ahead and he bent all his energies upon the oars. When a mile from the shore a sudden gust capsized the frail bark. Virginia had clung to her boy, and she linew nothing until she felt her husband's arms around hen. "Never mind me, Robert." she said, thrusting the child into his arms. If you will only save Arthur I can take care of myself." She felt herself drifting away and soon relapsed into unconscio

When she opened her eyes they rest ed upon the black habit she had once so despised, but when she saw beeath the white gathered band that covered her forehead the kind face of her cousin she felt that she was safe. "Alexia," she asked, "how came I here in the convent."

"You are not in the convent," said the Sister. You are in your own

"And how came you here?" asked Virginia, "I thought you nuns were never allowed to visit your relati-

"They sent for me when you were first brought home," said Alexia.
"How kind of you to come, dear, Alexia, after I had remained away from you so long."

paused and a wild, frightene expression came into her eyes as she added, "I remember it all now, Alexia, I remember it all now; tell me where Robert and my baby are. must see them."

"Not now, Virginia," said hen cousin, calmly controlling herself, "You are too weak and you must try to rest a little.

Virginia looked at her, but not a muscle of the calm, sweet face re-laxed to betray the terrible truth she was hiding, and trusting that might be well, she soon fell into a Agnes Bernard and her companion, Sister Cecilia, watched in silent prayer, dreading the time when she would awake and they must tell her exhausted in his efforts to row the shore that little strength remained when he was thrown into the water; however, with only himself he night have reached the shore in safe ty, but with only one arm free, while with the other he tried to keep his half drowned child above the water, he struggled bravely for some time, when both sank to the bottom. It were recovered. Virginia and the other occupants of the boat had in the meantime been rescued and taken sms of tears she listened to the story told as gently as possible by Sister Agnes Bernard, and leaning on her arm she went to see the two corpses which were laid out in the parlor.

Until the day of the funeral she spent most of her time with her beloved dead, leaving them only when coaxed away by her cousin, to whom she was becoming greatly attached.

Once when alone with her cousing she threw her arms around her, and bursting into a passionate fit of weer "Dear Alexia, will you forgive me for all I said to you the last time I visited you, for I am

'Fongive you Virginia: for myself I have nothing to forgive," said her cousin, "for though it grieved me sadly to hear the religious spolen of in such a manner, I was fully aware that it was because you knew us not, and I loved you too tenderly to take any offence."

"Thank you, Sister," said Virginia deigning for the first time to address her cousin as a religious. I think I know you better now, and I glad to see you still happy while I am a broken-hearted, childless widow. If you know not what it is to have a husband and child to love you, fortunately you will never know what it is to lose them." Here her Here her tears flowed afresh and her cousin, instead of trying to soothe her. prayed that God might give her more strength to bear her loss

For several days after the funeral Virginia remained in her own room, refusing to see any of her fashionable condolence, and never had she longed for the company of her cousin much as she did now. When she thought how happy Alexia appeared to be in the place that once filled her with horror, she almost envied her and wished that she, too, might live in the convent. Not as a nun oh, no; for Virginia Hurley was still too fond of her liberty and the world nor even as a Catholic, for she could not think of submitting herself to a religion which in her blindness she believed to be so severe with its mem bers. It was well enough for gentle retired cousin, but for her to feel that there was an obligation resting on her to attend church on Sundays, to abstain from meat on Fridays, and keep the other fasts as she had seen Alexia do, and worse still to humble herself to confess her sins to a priest, besides keeping other rules of which she was ignorant, but believed very difficult, was too much. No, she could never do it. All the bereaved young widow cared for was to find a place where, away from the world, her husband's friends and the pleasures in which she had participated with him, she might in a measure forget her sorrow. Ac cordingly one morning about three weeks after the funeral she went visit her cousin and ask if she might emain a few weeks at the convent. "I am so lonely at home," she said, with no one but the servants to speak to, and although they are very kind to me, they cannot console me as you Sisters can.

Sister Agnes Bernard hesitated and looked at her cousin as if meditating upon how to answer her. Virginia continued: "Please do not send me away, Sister, ask your Superior if I may not remain here, for my home is so lonely that I cannot remain there alone and see everywhere sad reminders of them. It is so sad, dear cousin, she added, her tears flowing freely, and only one who has suffered matters not what room I enter my eyes are sure to rest upon some treasure of Robert's, while in every part of the house I find my darling's toys

"Sister Agnes Bernard, are you nere?" asked a sweet childish voice, which seemed to revibrate with my Virginia started at the sound. which only a short time ago had been to her the sweetest of music, but was now stilled forever.

"Yes, dear, I am here," and the Sister stepping to the door led the child into the room saying. "This is our little Agnes whom you saw when

"Yes, I remember her," said Mrs.
Hurley, looking admiringly at the beautiful child whose face turned toward her at the sound of her voice, and as if fearing that the sightless lips and Agnes was not to be Choking a sob Virginia ceived. said, "Do you remember me, Agnes? I am Sister's cousin, Mrs. Hurley, who was here with my little

"Yes, Mrs. Hurley, I remember you," said the child, "but why are you crying ?"

"Because I have no little boy now," was the reply.

"Sisten told me about it," Agnes, "and I am so sorry for you; but Sister says he is happy Jesus, and our blessed Mother

"Yes." said Alexia, who was pleas ed to know that in spite of her indifference to religion. Virginia had not neglected to have the child baptized, "it ought to be consoling to that your child is happy in heaven.

"But Sister." said "you know not what it is to be mother, and can never realize what it is to lose an only child. If my darling could only have been spared it would not seem so hard, but what have I done that I must be bereaved

"I know it is very hard, Vinginia," said her cousin, fixing her eyes upon the little girl whom she pressed clos er to her bosom, "and I sincerely sympathize with you, but do you not know, did you ever stop to consider that others have been bereaved more than yourself ?"

"What can be sadder," asked Virginia impatiently, "than to lose all who are dear to you without warn

In the presence of the sensitiv child, who, young as she was, had a keen intellect which had been intensified by the loss of her sight, the Sister dared not speak as she might otherwise have done, so pointing to Agnes she said, "Virginia, it is true you have lost a dear husband dear child; but you have been left with a home and can care for yourself. Would it not have been much sadder had your child, instead of yourself survived that accident and been left to the care of strangers as

Virginia understood her, and laying her hand caressingly upon the golden curls of the blind orphan, who had thus been left among strangers, she said: "No, Alexia, I would not wish to leave him alone; but I have wished that I too might have been taken. I know it is wrong, but I could not help it."

"Yes, Virginia, it was wrong," said her cousin. "You should try to keep up your spirits, for God may have had some wise purpose in view sparing your life and you know what good you may be able to do." At that moment Sister Agnes Bennard was called away and she bade little Agnes remain with her cousin until her return. The last had sunk into her heart, and in deep meditation she silently gazed upon the golden curls, so like those which her eyes had often lovingly rested. She could not find voice to speak until addressed by the child, who said innocently, "I am so sorry for you, Mrs. Hurley, because you dead. I have heard ter talk about you so much that I love you and I would like to be your little girl." Virginia was startled by these words spoken in such childish cence, and her heart went out more than ever to the orphan. Half hour before she could not have be lieved that any child could ever again find a permanent place in her affec tions, but here was this orphan say ing that she would like to be little girl, while her cousin had just told her that she might be able to do some good,

"Would you really like to be my little girl?" Mrs. Hurley asked.

"Yes, ma'am," was the reply. "And go home with me?" was Virginia's next question.

'Yes," said the child, then after ent's hesitation, she added, "I would like to go, but I love Sister Agnes Bernard and the other Sisters so much that I do not wish to leave

"You cannot take them with you," aid Virginia, but you might them often, and I know I could make you very happy in my home."

Virginia had no intention of taking upon herself the burden of bringing up a blind child; but if the Sisters would permit it she would like to de- of good for her, or defray her ex- winning ways increased Virginia's rginia penses at an institution for the edu- love for her, until at the end of a cation of the blind. When her cousin returned she asked to be allowed to take Agnes home with her for a few weeks, and having obtained permission from the superior she gave up the thought of remaining at the convent, and late in the afternoon started for home with her.

Agnes being quite tired after her ten mile ride, Virginia spoke of her retiring soon after tea. After undressing her and putting on hen little night robe as tenderly as she - had done for her own child, she kissed her goodnight and was about to lead her to the bed when she said, "You have forgotten, Mrs. Hurley, have not said my night prayers."

A slight pang of reproach into the heart of the proud woman, who never thought of saying her night prayers as she saw the sinles blind child kneel as reverently by her bedside as if she had been a church. "May I say them aloud,"

"Yes, dear," was the reply, and in voluntarily Vinginia knelt beside her In a voice filled with sweet, childish plaintiveness Agnes lisped Lord's Prayer ending with "And lead us not into temptation but us from all evil Amen" and was about to say the Hail Mary.

Virginia intermpted her saying You haven't said it all. dear.' "All of what, Mrs Hurley," Agnes

"All of the Lord's Prayer," the reply. "You should say "For thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory, forever and ever, Amen.'

"Sister never taught me that, said the child in a mystified tone, and I do not wish to say it.'

"Very wall," said Mrs. Hurley, not caring to dispute with a child, and thinking that it mattered little how her prayers were said. "Is that all?" "Oh, no," said Agnes, and she commenced the Hail Mary.

Again she was interrupted by Virginia, who asked, "What is that you are saying ?"

"The Hail Mary," was the reply "don't you say it?"

"No, dear," replied Vinginia, "but go on," and she did not interrupt her again but listened in amazement as the little one proceeded with the Apostles Creed, Confiteor and Acts of Faith, Hope, Charity and Contri

When she had finished she reverent. ly made the sign of the cross and arising from her knees she said. "How strange it is, Mrs. Hurley, that you do not know the Hail

"It is because I am not a Cathe lic," said Virginia, "and we always pray to God."

"And don't you ever ask His Bless ed Mother for anything?" asked the child.

"No, dear," was the reply, "it is enough to pray to God,"

"How strange," said Agnes, "I thought everybody prayed to the us so much.

mingled amazement and pity, the forthcoming. first excited by such wisdom of a The prelate child so young, and the second by the thought that such marks of Ro manism had thus early been instilled into her innocent breast; but she would say no more. But what was it she heard long after the sightless eyes had closed and she supposed her to have fallen into a peaceful slum "My dear mother Mary," lipsed the sweet voice, "pray for Mrs. Hurley because I love her, and teach her to love you because I know she loves Jesus and Jesus loves you."

ing Virginia never knew, but childish prayer was remembered long years after the child became, like h own darling, only a memory of the more the sound of childish laughter and the merry voice of child hood rang through the lonely rooms of Mrs. Hurley's home, for little Agnes, who knew not what the light was, was not old enough to realize her affliction; and, although at times almost too serious for a child of her age, she was still as merry and lighthearted as the most brilliant of children. From the first Virginia almost felt at times as if her own child month she had resolved never part with her. Like many others who had admired her beauty, Mrs., Hurley had been loath to take upon herself the responsibility of caring for a blind child; but that feeling was all gone now.

Once a week they visited the asylum and it was on the day of her fifth visit that Virginia told her plans to her cousin. Sister Agnes Bernard listened with a feeling secret joy, for she had hoped that this would be the result of Agnes' visit. Endeavoring to hide her senti-ments she said, "If you adopt her, Virginia, you must bring her up a Catholic. Do you think you can

"I know nothing of your religion myself," was the reply, "but Agnes is remarkably brilliant in the matter and knows more than could read sonably be expected of a child twice her age. My next door neighbors are Catholics and she has attended church with them every Sunday so I think with their help and a little assistance from you, I will have difficulty in gratifying your wishes

Alexia had hardly expected that her cousin would thus quickly promise to comply with the one condition on which she had intended to intrust her little charge to her. she knew that Virginia's word once given would be kept in spite every difficulty, so with a light heart she hastened to tell the superior. A few days later Agnes Malloy came the adopted daughter of Mrs. Hurley. Not a little negret was felt. at the asylum when it was learned that the child who, while her own life was spent in darkness, shed rays of sunshine upon all, was to neturn no more; but for her sake they were all glad when they learned of the beautiful home she had found.

(To be Continued.)

RUSSIAN EMPEROR AND CATHOLIC PRELATES.

At a grand reception recently held by the Czar, two Catholic prelates, the Latin Archbishop of St. Petersburg and the Rector of the Catholic Academy, were present. Arriving at the Imperial palace before the end of the Mass, they stood near the chapel door waiting fon the master of ceremonies to conduct them to their usual places, but no one took notice of the two prelates.

The Czar, leading the Czarina on his arm, came out, and finding his visitors standing behind the guards, showed plainly his surprise. Then leaving the Empress, the Czar advanced towards the prelates and shook hands with them. Some minutes later a colonel approached Blessed Virgin because she can help Archbishop and his companion, made inquiries, and found out where Virginia cast upon her a glance of fault lay. Apologies were not long

The prelates were informed that the Czar was much put out at their being left in a place so unworthy of their sacerdotal character, and that he desired more respect should shown to priests.

On the same day that this incident happened the Emperor conferred a de coration on Bishop Pallulon. Kovno. The honor is the more marked because it is not the custom to bestow such favors on ecclesiastics except at Easter. During sixteen vears Mgr. Pallulon was under sus picion and regarded at Court as enemy of the empire. His virtue has his persecutors. A new governor, recognizing the innate merit of the Catholic Bishop, brought the facts the case under the notice of the Russian Minister of Worship, with felicitous result above stated. Pitte.

SYMMETON'S EDINBURGH

GOFFEE ESSENCE

Of delicions coffee in a memont. No trouble owners in small and large bottles from all

PROGRESS IN IRELAND

There are many ways in which to study Ireland as she is apart from the purely political considerations. Recently Mr. Victor T. Noonan has contributed a very interesting article on the subject of Ireland in 1904. After dwelling upon many of the phases of progress to be noted in Irewriter deals especially with large cities, such as Dublin and Helfast. In regard to the former there is a passage in the article which is deserving of notice. Mr. Noonan

"Dublin is better equipped than any city in Europe with hospitals and asylums for the sick, the needy and the orphan. The Mater Miserlordia hospital under the Sisters of Mercy, is one of the finest hospitals There are nearly four hundred beds in this institution. It that the prople of Dublin are a religious people, from the num-ber of magnificent churches which are scattered throughout the city. There are over thirty large churches conducted by the secular clergy, Jesuits, Dominicans, Passionists, melites, Franciscars, Oblats, Capuchins, Marists and Vincentians.

This might lead one to suppose that the Catholic element in Ireland was entirely bound up in the Church and matters of religion, to the sacrifice of all temporar interests. In fact it has been boasted that the greatest amount of commercial prosperity in Ireland has been due to the I'rotestant section of the population. Mr Noonan turns to Belfast and presents us with some facts that go to counteract this wrong impression. dealing with the last mentioned city

"No city, however, in Ireland can compare with Belfast for industrial activity and modern progress. While it has always been a hotbed of prejudice and Orangeism, nevertheless out of a population of 350,000, the Catholics count fully 100,000, they are no small factor in the buildup of this fine city. Balfast is world-famous for its shipyards, linen factories and linen stones. The largest ships in the world, the Oceanic. Celtic. Cedric and recently the Baltic of the White Star line, have been launched from Belfast shipyards. In this respect Germany and America are not in line. It may be well to state here that Belfast posone of the largest tobacco factories in the world, owned by Gal-* * * * Belfast has sixteen large Catholic parishes accommodated by as many large and magnificent churches. The largest is St. Peter's, with a congregation of over 22,000 people. There are vices every hour in this Church on Sundays from 6 a.m. until noon, when the last Mass is celebrated. It takes twelve months to paint the inactive part." These extracts will suffice to show the upward and onward course of Catholicity in Ireland—ever coeval with Ireland's glory.

of this Church, which possesses two beautiful spires of 330 feet two religious orders in the city, the Redemptorists and the Passionists.

Under the personal direction of the

the city have a central club, the roll call of which numbers over 700 mem

cals and other social entertainments.

at which the good Bishop,

Henry, is often present, taking

Here they have lectures, musi-

Bishop, the Catholic young men

IRELAND'S DELEGATE TO AMERICA.

The Boston Central Branch of the United Irish League observed the anniversary of Robert Emmet's birth by a memorial meeting at the American House. Interest centered in the first speech in this country of Mr. Conor O'Kelly, M.P., for North Mayo the delegate of the United Irish Leawho arrived in Boston on Friday of last week. While there were but few at the terminal station to greet Mr. O'Kelly, his reception was none the less cordiaf and he was made to feel at home as soon as he alighted from the train He was greeted by the National Secretary of the United Irish League, John O'Callaghan, Mr. M. A. van, secretary of the Boston central van, secretary of the Boston tentral Branch of the United Irish League, and escorted to the Hotel Essex.

The Boston Herald says;

He is a young man who is full of enthusiasm for the Irish cause. Being asked how things looked for hope rule, with a smile the replied they were never brighter, and that the Irish Parliamentary Party, led by Catholic Statistics, John Redmond, was working solidly Catholic Statistics. together and success was bound to come soon, His mission in country, he said, was to help along the work of the United Irish League. In the evening Mr. O'Kelly went to the American House, where he met a large gathering of Irish citizens, who gave him a most cordial recep-tion. Dr. P. J. Timmins presided. tion. Mr. O'Kelly spoke in part as follows: "Those of you who follow affairs in Ireland will not think me guilty of exaggeration if I say that the prospect was never so bright and promising for the past twenty years as it is just now. Our organization and party are absolutely united. loyalty to Mr. Redmond is as cere and as genuine to-day as it was when he was selected our leader-

"Then the position in the House of Commons is of a most encouraging character. There are those, I say, in this country, who think that constitutional agitation has effected nothing for Ireland. But before the land act of '81 was passed the Irish temant was nothing more or less than a serf in his own country. The act of '81 made him practically a man, and act after act dealing with Irish land followed the act of '81, and all of them tended to give grip to the Irish people in the soil of their country.

"I venture to prophesy that three months we shall have a general election. Then it will be found that the question of Irish national selfgovernment will at once be as press ing and as embarrassing to the British House of Commons as it was between the years of '86 and '92. The British Tory party, as we knew it in the past is gone. But although is practically certain that the Tory Government will be defeated, it equally certain that the Liberal party will not go back to the House in dependent in numbers sufficiently large to make them independent of Irish Parliamentary party.

"Then, of course, our opportunity will come. If the Tories ing to meet us half way, they will have 80 Irish votes to support them. If they are not, these 80 votes go to the Liberals.

THE LAW IN GERMANY.

In a fit of temper a kitchenmaid on a Rhine steamer threw overboard all the pots and pans she had to clean There were two previous convictions accused of stealing the pots and pans The Cologne judges held, however, that as she had only thrown the utensils overboard the charge of theft could not be sustained, and they fur-ther decided that she could not be convicted of damaging her pots and pans were probably repos ing uninjured at the bottom of the Against this judgment an appeal was made to the High Court in Leipsic. The judges there also came to the conclusion that the case could not be dealt with as one of theft, nor could they see any evidence of damage to property had been adduced But at the same time the High Court imperatively demanded the punish ter was accordingly referred back to the judges at Cologne, with instruc tions to ascertain whether, after all, the pots and pars might not have been damaged by rust, or by the splitting off of the enamel, or by the shifting of the pebbles on the bot-tom of the Rhine! The end of the ase, which has already lasted months, has not yet been reached .-

POPE THANKS KAISER

The Holy Father has thanked the Emperor William for forbidding Evangelistic Union the use of the name "Luther" for a church to be erected by the German Protestants in

The Catholic Directory for 1904 says the Messenger Magazine, published by Burns and Oates, gives archbishops and bishops for England and Wales, 3205 priests, churches and chapels. This indicates substantial progress in one year here are, also, in England, one archbishop and four bishops retired, without Episcopal office. Amongst regular clergy are many of the exiled tish Empire there are at present 29 Archiepiscopal Sees, 104 Episcopal 30 Vicariates, 11 prefectures—in all 174. Twenty-seven of the 30 Vicariates are administered by bishops of titular sees. Four bishoprics, 3 vicariates and 3 prefectures are vacant. Including two delegates apostolic, nine coadjutors and two bishops-auxiliany, the Episcopate of the Empire now numbers 170, besides 5 prelates retired. This is a large proportion of the 1000 residential sees estimated Catholic population England is 1,500,000, Scotland 514,-000, Ireland, 3,310,028. The entire Catholic population of the Empire is about 10,500,000.

According to the new Catholic Directory (1904) for Scotland, the se-cular priests in Scotland number 417 and the regulars 90, making a total of 507, compared with a total of 483 in December, 1902. The number of missions is 226, being an increase of two on last year; churches, chapels and stations number 371, compared with 359 in 1902. Religious houses total 64, being an increase of two houses for men and three for women in the year. The building of con gregational schools now number 201. and the departments 250, being an increase of five; the charitable institutions number 34, compared with 31 last year. The Catholic population of Scotland is estimated 513,400. The tabulated returns of baptisms, confirmations and marriages in 1902 show similar progress compared with 1901. The number of baptisms was 19,809, an increase of 201; confirmations totalled 8261, decrease of 1774; and marriage 3228, an increase of 108. The total for the Archdiocese of Glasgow 1902 were 14,102 baptisms, 5753 confirmations and 2344 marriages.
The events of 1903 in Catholic scotland constitute an exceptionally teresting record, including an account of the celebration on March 5 last of the semi-jubilee of the Restored Hierthe latest available returns, the Ca tholic Church in Scotland shows won derful progress compared with 1878 The Catholic population shows an increase of over 40 per cent.; sions have increased by 61 per cent.; churches by 39 per cent.; priests by 86 per cent., and schools by 58 per interest recorded in the Calendar took place on September 10, when Archbishop Maguire was invested with the pallium in St. Andrew's Cathedral, Glasgow.

FRIENDSHIP.

Two persons will not be friends long if they can not forgive each other little failings.

NOTICE.

Dame Appoline Pauline, in religion Sister Marthe, Dame Marie-Emilie Auvert, in religion Sister Sainte Theodora; Dame Ellen Royston, in religion Sisten Marie de Saint Paul, Dame Elizabeth Mais, in religion Sister Marie du Sacre-Coeur, oi Montreal, will apply to the Legisla ture of Quebec, at its next session for a charter granting them civil personality under the name of "Les Soeurs de l'Esperance, vouces aux soins des malades," with such powers as are generally given to similar TAILLON, BONIN & MORIN, For the petitioners.

Professional

PRANKJ. CURRAN. LOUIS B. CURRAN

Curran & Curran Barristers and Solicitors

SAVINGS' BANK CHAMBERS 180 St. James Street.

R. F. OUIGLEY

Ph.D., L.L.D., K.O., ADVOCATE, BARRISTER and SOLICITOR,

Brosseau Lajoie and Lacoste. PLACE D'ARMES, Montreal,

C. A. McDONNELL,

CHARTERED ACCOUNTANT. 180 ST. JAMES STREET.

.. Montreal ..

Fifteen years experience in coune tion with the liquidation of Private and Insolvent Estates. Auditing Books and preparing Annual Report for private firms, and public corporations a specialty.

TELEPHONE 1182

PATENT SOLICITORS

DATENTS PROMPTLY SECURED

Building Association in Aid of St. Michael's Parish.

By a resolution passed at a meet ing of the Fabrique of St. Michael's dated the Srd of January, 1904, and with the approval of His Grace the Archbishop, the Fabrique binds itself to cause to have said in St. Michaels during four years two masses month according to the intentions of those who contribute 50 cents year-members of the Association towards the end of every month. They are said with the intentions of who contribute fifty cents a year Contributors may have any inter tions they please, they alone need what their intentions are; they may change their intentions from month to month—they may have a different intention for each of th two masses in every month, may have several intentions for the same Mass, they may apply the benefits of the contribution to the soul friend-These tickets of a deceased are excellent "In Memoriam Cards" to present bereaved relatives.

to the Pastor, Rev. J. P. Kiernan, 1602 St. Denis street', Montreal, P.Q.

Business Caras

Smith Bros.' Granie Co.

The following was clipped from the Granite," Boston, Mass.:

" Illustrated in the advertisement of E. L. Smith & Co., Barre, vt., on another page, is practically their complete plant, with the exception of their derricks. This Company was the first of the quarry owners to use compressed air for operating rock drills, and also the first to take up the plug drill. We can say, without exaggeration, that this concern has the best equipped granite quarry in the country."

THE SMITH BROS.' CRANITE CO-290 Bloury street, are the sole repre-sentatives of these famous quarries in Canada. The granite is princi-pally used for the finest class of monumental work.

T. J. O'NEILL, REAL ESTATE ACENT. 180 ST. JAMES STREET.

Loans, Insurance, Renting, and Conceing of Bents. Moderate charges, and prempt returns.

CONROY BROS...

228 Centre Street

Practical Plumbers, Gasand Steam Fitters ELECTRICAND MECHANICAL

BELLS, etc. 3552. Night and Day Services

TELEPPHONE 3833

THOMAS O'CONNELL Pealerin General Household Hardware Paints

Dils,and a fine line of Wall Papers.

Cor. Murray and Ottawa

STREET. PRACTICAL PLUMBER

BAS, STEAM and HOT WATER FITTER

RUTLAND LINING, FITS ANY STOVE

Orders promptly attended to . 1 -: Mederat harges .. -: A trialsolicited

MSTABLISHED 1864

G. O'BRIEN.

House. Sign and Decorative Painter PLAIN AND DECORATIVE PAPER-HANGER

Whitewashing and Tinting Orders prompthy thended to. Terms moderate.
Residence 645, Office 647, Dorchester street ast of Bleury street. Mentreal.

Bell Telephene. Main. 1466.

LAWRENCE RILEY.

PLASTERER. Successor to John Riley Establishedin 1866 Plain and Orassental Plastering. Repairs of all Finds promptly attended to Estimates fur-tabled. Posed order attended to 15 Paris Sweet. Point 44 Charles ROOFERS, Bto.

The Plain Truth Tells

your roof needs only a repair we will candidly tell you so, if a new goof is required we give a guaran for 10, 7 or 5 years, according to price. Our experts are at disposal, without extra cost. we do anything for you?

GEORGE W. REED & CO. Roefers, Asphalters, &c.,

785 CRAIG STREET.

Society Directory.

ST. PATRIOR'S SOCIETY.—Established March 6th, 1856, incorporated 1868, revised 1864. Meets in St. Patrick's Hall, 92 St. Alexander street, first Monday of the month. Committee meets last Wednesday. Officers: Rev. Director. Rev. M. Callaghan, P.P. President, United March 1986. Hov. M. Uausgnan, F.F. President, Hon. Mr. Justice C. J. Doherty; 1st Vice, F. E. Devlin, M.D.; 2nd Vice, F. J. Curran, B.C.L.; Treas-urer, Frank J. Green; corresponding Secretary, J. Kahala; Recording Secretary, T. P. Tansey.

ST. PATRICK'S T. A. AND B. SOday of every month in St. Patrick's Hall, 92 St. Alexander street, at 8.30 p.m. Committee of Manage-ment meets in same hall on the first Tuesday of every month at 8 p.m. Rev. Director, Rev. Jas. Killoran; President, W. P. Doyle; Rec. Secy., Jno. P. Gunning, 716 St. Antoine street, St. Henri.

ST. ANN'S T. A. & B. SOCIETY, established 1863.—Rev. Director, Rev. Father McPhail; President, D. Aallery, M.P.; Sec., J. F. Quinn, 625 St. Dominique street; M. J. Ryan, treasurer, 18 St. Augustin street. Meets on the second Sunday of every month, in St. Ann's Hall, corner Young and Ottawa streets, at 8.80 p.m.

ST. ANN'S YOUNG MEN'S SOCIE-TY organized 1885.—Meets in its hall, 157 Ottawa street, on the first Sunday of each month, at first Sunday of each mon 2.80 p.m. Spiritual Adviser Father Flynn, C.SS.R.; President, Kenehan; Treasurer, O'Connel; Rec.-Sec., Robt. J. Hart.

C.M.B.A. OF CANADA, BRANCH 26.—(Organized, 18th November, 1878.—Branch 26 meets at St. Patrick's Hall, 92 St. Alexander St., on every Monday of each month. The regular meetings for the transaction of business are held on the 2nd and 4th Mondays of each month, at 8 nm. Spiritus. of each month, at 8 p.m. Spiritual Adviser, Rev. M. Callaghan; Chancellor, F.J. Sears; President, P.J. Darcey; Rec.-Sec., P. J. McDonagh; Fin.-Secretary, Jas. J. Costigan; Treasurer, J. H. Feeley, Jr.; Medi-cal Advisera, Drs. H. J. Harrison, E. J. O'Connof and G. H. Marrill

OHUROH BELLS.

McSHANE'S BELLS

MENEELY BELL COMPANY

TROY, N.Y., and

Manufacture Superior, EHURGH BELLS

Remember, When You Buy

Cowan's Cocoa and Chocolate

BRODIE'S CELEBRATED SELF-RAISING FLOUR

is the Original and the Best. A PREMIUM given for the empty has IO BLEURY St., Montres

SUBSCRIBE NOW*

SUBSCRIPTION ORDER

P. O. BOX 1138, MONTREAL, P. Q.

If hereby authorize you to send me THE TRUE WITNESS for which lagree to pay to your order at the rate of One Dollar ner year.

Subscription Rates, Strictly in Advance—

Canada, Newfoundland and United States, 181.00 per ves City and Foreign, Si. 50 perye

All over the civilized men, or descendants o men, gathered, there special nejodcings of

17th March, this year

tetetetetetetete

The electric spark has i news around the globe fr. anjust rule were sent is convicts; from South Afri so recently struggles that main memoral in the annu closing Nineteenth Centur place; from the entire con Europe, from Paris, the Light, where the names O'Kelley's, O'Neils, Lally and McMahons are house from Spain, the chivalric, are to be met, in higher cendants of the O'Do graves of the Irish chief Jeniculum; from Rome to all over the vast American from where the Mississ down and Missouri chants ing requiem for the immorts to the shadow of the far 'neath which sweeps on the and the Amazon; from all come notes and the Amazon; come notes of rejoicing, of of assurance. And even fi land, herself, came echoes der as any that ever swept Atlantic. From Ireland of clad hills and the verds whose rivers are retire. clad hills and the whose rivers are rythm a streams are a song, whose carpet is clad with a myr flowers, and whose cliffs, w fending the coast, are entuthe gayest of garlands; the gayest of garlands; grand old land of Patrick

ridget's grace and of Co