CONSTIPATION.

The Best Means to Combat a Very Prevalent Evil.

The most potent remedy for this condition is habit—the habit of fixing upon a regular hour to try to have evacuation. The bowel can taught to empty itself at a given time. When the bowel has acquired the habit of expelling its contents at a fixed will not fail to do it. No per son, unless suffering from a recogniz-ed disease of the intestinal tract or the nervous system, need suffer from constipation.

The first thing to do to correct con stination is to so arrange one's time so as to have a regular hour for going to the closet, and then to keep rigidly to the hour. The majority of people having work to do every day may say,
"Oh I nevel have time to think of taking care of myself." This type of becomes ill from his lack of attention to himself, and all too frequently pays a heavy price for his neglect of his body's need. The human organism cannot run smoothly if it is poisoned by retained waste products in the digestive tract. No one would willingly taste or eat poisoned food for fear he might die. Indeed, death does occur all too often when people eat or drink anything poisoned. When man is poisoned by fermented and decomposed food products retained in his body he dies by degrees and Any one can recognize a man ho is poisoning himself by this slow process. The stench from the gut-ters choked up with filth from decom-posing vegetables, etc., is familiar to every one, and no one would willingly lynging locality where such appears live in a locality where such unsani-tary conditions existed. Yet every day in our own homes we live with people who are suffering from poison more deadly than that contained in drains of a city. What a sad picture these people make, suffering from toxaemia (this is the name of oisoned condition, resulting from

It is imperative that there should be a daily and free evacuation from the bowels if we wish to be in health and present an attractive appearance. Headache, irritability of temper, restlessness, laziness and palpitation of the heart are some of the most frequently recognized symptoms of con-stipation. A coated tongue, dry lips and a dry feeling in the mouth clear-ly show that the intestinal canal is mactive. The appearance of the skin is noticeable, too. It is cold and clammy or it may be hot and flushed, or it is sallow and dingy-looking. Pimples disfigure the skin whenever there is constipation. when constitution has been long to tablished it cannot be quickly broken up without the aid of medicines; those are always needed for immediate relief. It should be borne in mind by all persons that constipation can be pre-vented by habit, and even after it has existed it can be cured by establishing bowel at a fixed hour every day. Probably of all hours during the 24, after breakfast is the most satisfactory time to attend to this feature of the tollet. the habit of trying to evacuate

In recent years, tendency to reduce the vitamine content of the diet of the population at large. Changes in our economic ntions, tood production and methof of cooking seem to reduce the vita-mine content of the diet of a large number of persons to the danger-point. Observations which I have made in conection with studies on the cause of pellagra bear out this asser-tion The population of a large portion of the souinern states, in which this disease is prevalent to such a serious degree, lives on a diet which is, to say the least, not rich in vitamines. Highly milled cereals, purk fat, in addition to cabbage and turnips, and similar vegetables, form the staple article of the diet. The customary use of baking soda in the preparation of food, furthermore, lowers the vitamine content of the diet. I have been able to demonstrate on animals that corn bread made from cornmeal and milk, with the addition of soda loses its high initial content of antineuritic substance in the process of baking as a result of the destructive action of the alkali.—Dr. Carl Voegtlin in the Scientific American.

AN EXCELLENT REMEDY FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. Laura Jackson, Brantford, Ont. "I have found Baby's Own writes: Tablets such an excellent remedy for children that I have no hesitation in recommending them to all mothers. ### What Memory Is.

The correct way to increase the productivity of the memory is to link every new thing with an understood thought already in hand. Merely to memorize the Bible and thus to be able parrot-like to speak it "by heart", is not memory. Intellectually and emotionally to appreciate and understand one psalm or proverb is memory. To knew where to put your finger on the right verse or passage of the Bible on your table is practical and useful re-collection. Dictionaries, directories, encyclopedias, indexes and reference books do the mechanical part for you. Reason, association, adaptability and the perception of relationships are better than much Latin and more Greek, however beautiful and instructive these may be in themselves.

Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

of the bowels. Water-drinking also is an urgent nocd; water flushes the intestinal canal, disiedges and dissolves masses of heird waste materials and sween them downward for evacuation. Medicine to take for the temporary relief of constitution may be given at beddime or carly in the morning half an hour or so before breakfast, What cre known as saline laxatives are the medicines which give the quickest relief, such as a soldlitz powder, the contents of the blue paper dissolved in a reant half-glass of cold water; then people the two glasses of liquid tor ther and Grink it all. This dose, taken anytime during the day, relieves a several headache or sickness in the stemach. ### Children's Pets.

Luther Burbank voices his sentiments in favor of children's pets in his system of "Training the Human Plant." "Every child should have mud pies, grasshoppers, water bugs, tad-poles, frogs, mud turtles, elderberries, wild strawberries, acorns, chestnuts trees to climb, books to wade in, water lilies, woodchucks, bats, bees, butterflies, various animals to pet, hay fields, pine cones, rocks to roll, sand, snakes, huckleberries and hornets, and any child who has been deprived these has been deprived of the best part of his education. By being well acquainted with all these they come into the most intimate harmony with nature, whose lessons are, of course, natural and wholesome."

Physical Formation of Mexico.

Mexico possesses a curious physical formation. Rising rapidly by a succession of terraces from the low, sandy coasts on the east and west, it culminates in a central plateau running in a northwesterly and southeasterly direction and having an elevation varying from 4,000 to 8,000 feet above the High above this plateau tower the snow capped crests of several vol-canoes, most of which are extinct. Ten of them are over 12,000 feet in height, and three look down upon fertile val-leys from altitudes of 17,782, 17,356 and 16,060 feet. These are Popocate-petl, Orizaba and Iztaccihuctl.

Travels of a Sapphire.

Dynamite.

Dynamite if carefully made and kept will not explode except by shock or a blow; hence a cap or de onator is affixed to a charge just before firing to set it off. Set fire in open air dynamite burns fiercely with a smoky flame, but does not explode unless several sticks are closely piled together or packed in a box. The most common cause of premature explosion of dynamite is separation of its ultroglycerin, slight friction or shock causing this to explode and in turn, explode glycerin, slight friction of shock cate-ing this to explode and, in turn, explode the dynamite. Separation of nitro-glycerin usually occurs when frozen dynamite is being thawed out; hence many cases of explosion by careles or ignorant persons who use a per-fectly good stove in a course of in-struction in how to handle dynamite. The force of a dynamite explosion is usually greatest downward. Thus a stick of dynamite exploded on a rock stick of dynamite exploded on a rock without being covered will shatter the rock, but will produce little effect in other directions. Like all explosives, dynamite must be inclosed to produce its maximum effects. Dynamite is sometimes prepared in granular form for producing certain explosive effects, but its action is too rapid and intense for use in rifles or cannon. use in rifles or cannon.

He Knew Their Weakness.

During the reign of Louis XV. of France the light chaise came into fashion, and great ladies of Paris were accustomed to drive in them about the city. But beautiful hands are not always strong ones. Accidents began to occur more and more frequently in the streets. Consequently, says "Das Buch Fur Alle," the king besought the minister of police to do something, since the lives of pedestrians were constantly in danger.

"I will do whatever is in my power," replied the police minister. "Your policy and the police minister."

majesty degires that these accidents cease entirely?"

The Ring replied, "Certainly."
The next day there appeared a royal ordinance that ordered that in the future ladies under thirty years of age should not drive chalses through the streets of Paris. That seems a mild streets of Paris. That seems a finite restriction, but it is said that scarcely a woman from that time on drove her own chaise. The police minister knew that few women would care to advertise the fact that they were over thirty and that the rest would probably be too old to drive anyway.

Main Factors Are Initial Velocity and Angle of Elevation.

The distance a shot can be thrown depends primarily on two things—the velocity with which it leaves the muzble and the angle of elevation above the horizontal. Other things affect it also, but these two are all important. Of course a light shell will lose its velocity quicker than a heavy one, for it has less stored up energy to overcome the friction of the air. Temperature and the humidity of the air both have their effect. But the two great fea-tures are initial velocity and angle of elevation.

Any one who throws a ball knows that it is higher near the centre of its flight than at either end. The farther is thrown the higher it is at the centre. It was long ago found that any projective to reach a maximum range just be thrown at about forty-five degrees above the horizontal. This applies to a baseball as well as a 1,000 pound shell. If it is thrown higher it falls short in distance, for too much of our effort has been expended in giving height. If thrown lower gravitation pulls it to the ground before it has covered its maximum distance.

Another thing—the ball or shell falls at a greater angle than that with which it started. If it is thrown at forty-five degrees elevation it will fall forty-five degrees elevation it will fall with nearer sixty degrees because of the retarding effect of the atmosp. ric friction. This friction is continually slowing up the projectile and eventually all but stops it. But meantime the action of gravitation is pulling it farther and farther downward from its initial path. The net result is to bring it to earth much sooner than if the second half of its flight were the counterpart (reversed) of the first half.—Sidney Graves Koon, M. E., In lessie's

I have been present at most of the great battles since the beginning of the war. They have all followed one gen-eral plan. First comes a series of diversions at various points, then a general advance along a considerable front, which narrows as the action defront, which narrows as the action develops, and fighting is concentrated on two or three main points. Amateur critics probably are discouraged because of the dry brevity of the official communiques, which indicate a complete lull in the lines after the series of minor attacks which seemed to threaten a general action on the salient.

The truth is, the British are waiting and watching for any sign that the enemy intends to take the offensive elsewhere than at Verdun when all attention is directed to that point, and that meanwhile they are holding great German forces in line which cannot be thinned because of their strength. enabled them to concentrate greater strength in men and guns behind the fortress city, which is now attacked, and they know the troops along the Somme relieve them largely of any anxiety in this regions should the enemy be tempted to try another and shorter way to Amiens and Paris.

It is improbable that the German headquarters staff has dared to dislodge many units, if any, from the positions which the British confront. The series of minor attacks which they hazarded during recent weeks were sufficient to prove that the defenders were more formidable than ever in men and munitions. Whatever in the infailure or success at Verdun, they know their losses will be staggering to the national morale of Germany. They must still keep a big army opposed to the British or lose ground most essential to their safety and pride.

How long it will remain a big army depends upon the battle in which they are sacrificing their youth with utter disregard of the human life flung into the furnace fires.

In the meantime the British are thinning them down by a daily wastage which must reach dreadful figures.

DEADLY WORK BY THE CANADIANS

In Daring Night Attack Through the Wires.

British Headquarters in France, Cable—The Canadians have won a reputation as good fighters in handto-hand encounters. Their ability in this respect was lately demonstrative when an expedition of twenty-five started out on a trench raid and returned with twenty-three, having accounted for about double their number and destroyed two machine guns.

ber and destroyed two machine guns. There had been a certain liveliness in the German trenches, and a bombing attack was planned. When darkness fell the bomb-throwers crept forward. A false move, a cough or sound of any kind meant instant death. At last the barbed wire entanglements, were reached. It took a long time, but the barrier was cut. Another party further along Another party further along the line was not yet ready for the final rush. At length the signal came. The Canadians bounded forward. A Prussian sentry started up to sound the alarm, but he was shot dead by the efficient.

to sound the alarm, but he was shot dead by the officer.

The Prussians were now aroused. Flares burst out all along the line, and revealed a trench full of the Prussian Guard. The Canadians rushed in throwing their bombs and bayoneting freely. Their leader already was wounded. The Guardsmen rushed in confusion from their dugouts. One of them held up his hands and shouted in English that he wished to surrender, but a rifle nointwished to surrender, but a rifle point-ing from behind through his upraised arms revealed the ruse. A revolver bullet settled the first man's account and the second went down with a bayonet in his chest

Hand-to-hand the Canadians exacted a heavy toll. They carried every-thing before them, and at the end could go no further, as a heap of bodies and demolished trench harred the way.

The return journey had to be made across a bullet-swept area. The Can-adians halted while a bomb was thrown. It was the luckiest shot of the night. It fell right on the ma-chine gun, which was most danger-ous, silencing it.

THE CURIOUS KANGAROO.

Theory Its Queer Style of Animal The kangaroo family is unique and is found only in Australia. It is the most remarkable branch of the order of the marsupials, or pouched animals, the bouch being a kind of pocket in which the young are nourished and protected for a long time after birth. The opossum is an example of a marsupial inhabiting America, but it bears no outward resemblance to a kangaroo.

The marsupials arose in very ancient geological times somewhere in the me-sozoic age, and later on nearly disap-peared except in Australia and neighboring islands, where today they constitute the characteristic native fauna.

There is one curious fact about the kangaroo which appears all the more singular when we reflect upon the great antiquity of the order of the marsupials. It almost looks as if this extraordinary Australian animal represents a survival of a style of animal architecture which was once a favorite with nature, but has since been aban-

The frames of these creatures are characterized by an enormous development of the posterior parts, including gigantic tails and massive thighs and hind legs. If any of the dinosaurs had a leaping power comparable with that of the kangaroo the terror inspired by their forms must have been matched by that arising from their movements.

HIS DAY OF REST.

A Town In France Where a Legal Holi-

The jeweler's face expressed bewilderment and astonishment and amusement. He looked from the artist to me and back again at the artist. He started at the end of every sentence to say something, but the artist didn't give him a chance. The artist kept on talking, while I kept on trying to control my sense of humor. I wanted to shriek. I longed for the ability to write shorthand, so that I could put it all down for posterity.

The artist had left a watch to be mended, and we were standing in front of the jeweler's shop on one of the nar-row streets of Douarnenez, a town in the extreme west of France. The shutters were up in front of the shop, and the jeweler was in his shirt sleeves, looking as if he had been waked up by our knock from an enjoyable after dejeuner sleep. The artist and I were leaving by the 3:15 train for Pont Croix, and we didn't intend to come back this way. It was Thursday, but the jeweler had politely explained that he could not give igh it was all ready and was hanging from its little hook in the shop at whose open door we stood. The reason was that Thursday had been chosen by the jeweler for his repos hebdomadaire—the one day in seven rest imposed by law.—Herbert Adams

Light of a Deep Sea Shrimp. One of the most extraordinary crus tacea ever discovered was dredged up by the Prince of Monaco from a depth of 16,000 feet. It has been named Oplophorus grimaldi. It is a sort of shrimp, and its peculiarity is that it squirts from two holes near its mouth a liquid which, on coming into contact with salt water, produces a fine pale blue light. Absolute darkness reigns in the depths where it lives, but the little shrimp does not find it necessary to keep its light always burning. This would use up too much energy, so it squirts out the illuminating fluid only when it wants to look at something, or perhaps to attract the minute animalculae that form its food. A Poverty Stricken Queen.

Partly owing to the fact that she was wedded to an avaricious king and partly because she was generous with the little money allowed her Elizabeth of York, queen of Henry VII., spent but a small amount for dress. She was very often in debt, and the sums she spent were ridiculously small, 20 shillings ($5) being the greatest amount expended at any one time. Her gowns were mended and turned, and new were made for them, as i shown by the record of bills paid to her tailor. These bills prove that she wore her clothes for a long time, for her gowns were obliged to be newly ed, and also that, though a princess of the great house of Plantagenet, she wore shoes costing but 24 cents, which were decorated with tin buckles.

Crown Prince Fails to Break Through at Verdun.

Saturday Night Attack is Repulsed and Sunday Morning Effort is Likewise a Fiasco-After Fourteen Days of Fierce Conflict the Position is Deadlocked With Chief Fighting Around the ont Plateau

PARIS, March 6.—Another attempt by the Crown Prince's army to break through the French line was made Saturday night, but the line held and the Germans fell back to their own trenches under the fire of the French artillery. Sunday morping a German force attacked in the woods just east of Vacherauville, a little to the west of the line against which the assault of last night was directed, but with no success.

Verdun the operations have narrow-ed for the time being to the short sector about the plateau of Douau-mont. The Germans concentrated their artillery fire Saturday on the restricted front between the Haudro-mont wood and Douaumont village. The bombardment was very violent. After great quantities of heavy shells had been thrown, the German infantry made its charge at six o'clock Saturday night. The attacking waves at once were brought under the barrage fire of the French guns and rifle-firing co-operated, and were unable to reach the French trenches. At the village of Douaumont itself, where the Germans hold the village proper and the French are entrenched in the southern outskirts, fighting of considerable liveliness lasted well into the night, without changing the and Martyrs of Faith .-- He brews 11: 1-12: 2.

Commentary .- I. The nature of faith (11:1). 1. Now-The subject of faith is introduced in the discussion in the preceding chapter, and the writer stops here to consider the nature and operations of faith. Faith-Trust, anwavering confidence, a conviction that brings certainty. Substance—'The original word means basis or foundation. Things hoped for—One cannot truly hope for something unless there is a basis upon which the hope rests, otherwise he is indulging a false hope. What God has said in his word or the conviction that he gives by his Spirit furnishes something definite and positive for the faith to grasp. The submitting, trusting heart believes it. The evidence—The demonstration or proof. A demonstration is equivalent to a certainty. When a proposition in mathematics is demonstrated, it is clearly shown that it cannot be otherwise. Things not seen—"Things not seen" are the realities of God and his universe outside the visible world, which are revealed to our higher mtuitions by nature, by divine manifestation, or by the written record. The animal man, the sensualist, never thinks of or truly embraces these truths. The worldly forget them. The atheist denies them. And these are all incapable of that spiritual heroism recorded of the ancient worthles.—

II. Examples of faith (11: 2-40). 2-31. It was because of their faith that the forefathers attained such excellence of character and accomplished such results that their names have down to us connected with high rs. If they had failed to believe God, their names would have been unknown and unhonored. We know the beginnings of things because we believe what God has said. The faith of the Old Testament worthies led them to do something. Their faith was active. Because they believed God, they obeyed him, and great re-sults followed. Their faith led them to take a course that seemed in many cases unwise and impracticable. They believed that God was able to do what was apparently impossible. The omis-sion of these illustrious examples of would have been a loss to us of nach of the inspiration which we now receive. What Christian has not been again and again encouraged by the example of Moses, who made a cinice seemingly against all reason because he believed God! So many and so various are the examples of faith given in this chapter that they ever all possible—circumstances—in

32. What shall I more say—The list of the heroes of faith is a long one. To recount the deeds of all the men and women of faith would include practically all of Old Testament history. Gedeon — Gideon, one of the judges of Israel, who delivered his people from the Midianites (Judges 6, 7). Barak—Associated with Deborah he defeated the hosts of Jabin the Cananite (Judges 4, 5), Samson—The history of this judge is given in Judges 13-16. Jephthae—The heroes of faith, mentioned in this verse, are not given in chronological order. Jephthas subdued the Ammonites and thus brought deliverance to Israel (Judges 11, 12). David—The second king of Israel, Samuel—The last of the judges. 33 Subdued kingdoms—The converse. 32. What shall I more say-The list Israel, Samuel—The last of the judges.
33, Subdued kingdoms—The conquest of Canaan and the victories won by David are alluded to. Wrought right-eousness—The decisions of the judges and the work of the prophets are pro-perly included in working righteous-ness. Obtained promises—While many promises were not fulfilled during the lifetime of the heroes of faith (v. 39), yet they realized the blessed fulfilment of some of them. Stopped the mouths of lions—Samson, David, Daniel and Benalah may be mentioned here (Judges 14. 5, 6; 1 Sam. 17. 34, 35; Dan. 6, 22; 2 Sam. 23. 20). 34. Quenched the violence of fire-The Hebrew youths (Dan. 3). Escaped the edge of the sword—David, Elijah and Elisha. Made strong-Hezekiah (2 Kings 20. 5), and others Turned to flight the armies of the aliens—Joshua, the judges and David succeeded in defeating the enemics of Israel. 35. Women received their dead—See 1 Kings 17, 22; 2 Kings 4, 32-26. Were tortured—Literally, broken on the wheel. Better resurrection-They refused to save their lives by denying their faith. They looked forward to an eternal life with God 36 Bonds and imprisonment --Joseph, Jeremiah and Hanani may be named here.

37. They were stoned-This was the was stoned to death (2 Chron, 24: 20, 21). Sawn asunder—Tradition that Isalan thus met his death. sheepskins and goatskins-There wer heroes of faith who were clad in these ccarse garments because of their pov 3x. Of whom the world are worthy-The world considered that these heroes of faith were not worthy to live, but they were too good for their surroundings. "The Greek would also admit the meaning that they out weighed in value the whole world. Farrar. 39. These all—Both th all—Both whose names are given and those occignated by their deeds. Having obtained a good report through faith -"Having had witness borne to them through their faith." -R. V. Received not the promise- The complete fu'filment of the promise was not realized be realized until the resurrection; but they received specific blessings, Abraham received the fulfilment the promise regarding a son. 40. God having promised some better thing for us—The apostle and those whom he addressed were living in the gospel

Thad auful sharp pains in the Could only was back and left hip. Rheumatism and Lumbago

Mr. Wm. Parker, 105 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills:—"My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to see me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enlivened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble. I had awful, sharp pains in the lower part of my back and left hip, and was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

When you have pains and aches put Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to the test. By enlivening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels they cleanse the system of all poisons, and thereby remove the cause of rheumatism, lumbago and other painful diseases.

HI. Encouragements to faith (12.1, 2), 1. So great a cloud of witnesses—
The number of those who have witnessed to the reality and possibilities of faith, as well as to its rewards, is very great. The Hebrews were exhorted to let this great array of heroes of faith encourage them to stead-fastness and success in the Christian fastness and success in the Christian life, just as in the race the runners were encouraged to do their best by the presence of a large number of spectators. Weight—Whatever impedes progress, but more exactly, superfluous flesh. In the spiritual race it may include pride and every other hindrance. The sin which doth so easily beset us—The well-circumstanced sin, the sin that clings closely about one, which would make spiri-tual progress impossible. Run with with patience -Endurance characterized the debrew youths edge of the Elisha, Made Christ also endured the cross.—Cam. Bib. Race that is set before us-The course that leads to heaven. 2. Author and finisher of our faith-Jesus whom we are indebted for all the good that can come to us. In Him our faith begins and He is the glorious object of it. Joy that was set before Him-The joy of eternal triumph and of sitting at the right hand of God.

Questions.—To whom is this epistle addressed? What is its purpose? How does the apostle describe faith? What notable examples of faith are given in this chapter? What did Gideon accom plish through faith? Who quenched the violence of fire? How is the en-umeration of this army of heroes used for our encouragement? What are the conditions necessary to our running the Christian race successfully?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—A scriptural exhortation.

I. Called forth tried witnesses.

II. Portrayed the perfect Example.

I. Called forth tried witnesses. the closing of chapter ten the apostle spoke of faith as the principle of spir-itual life and the spring of patient endurance. He had been a student of the recorded experience of his devout ancestors. He recalled the most glorious names of Jewish history to confirm his brethren in their fidelity to the Lord Jesus Christ. His design was to convince them that in trusting Christ and bearing and enduring all things for him, they were exercising the same principle which made the elders of the Jewish nation the men they were. Those ancient worthies labored under great disadvantage in the extent of their privileges compared with the Christian Hebrews of Paul's day, and yet their confidence in God's promise was vigorous and persistent age and were favored with higher valiant and victorious. Each here privileges than those in any preceding mentioned was commended for some valiant and victorious. Each hero nge. They that without us should not be made perfect—Believers before the flood, after the flood, under the law, ness"; Enoch received a "testimon-"looked for a city." distinguished excellence and every one and since the law, make but one lat"; Abraham "looked for a city." church. The gospel dispensation is the last; and the church cannot be reality in God's promises and that considered complete till the believers they would be fulfilled. The first ex-was Abel, who lost his life for his faith. In him we see faith as the root of godliness. He was intimately acor gouliness. He was intrinsactly acquainted with God, in constant fellow-ship with him, full of confidence in him, engaged in service for him and was commended by him. He translated his convictions into actions His character was extraordinary and his re-ward was correspondingly extraordiacter In Noah we see faith as the principle of separation from the life and destiny of the ungodly. His purity and piety were conspicuous and commendable by reason of the terrible corruption and violence which were universal in his age. His faith is set before us in a very remarkable course of action. He had simply God's word and his faith rested upon that. Abraham's faith rested on a divine call, on a divine purpose, on divine guidance. He believed that God had a right to his obedience, that God would fulfil his promises however unlikely or even pear to him. He attentively heard, heartily believed, promptly obeyed. His faith was shown in his emigration, in his lifelong pilgrimage, during protracted childlessness and in the sacri-fice of his son. His faith was sorely tried and sublimely triumphant. Jacob believed in God. He was blessed in worldly circumstances, purified and ennobled in his character. Joseph had a grim assurance that a greatfuture awaited his family. His faith rested upon God who had so wonder His faith fully led and richly blessed him. That assurance formed a fitting conclusion to a life of distinguished piety. None of the heroes of faith in this illustrious group was more eminent than Moses. Being himself the only free Hebrew of his time he occupied the unique position of having it within his choice was made intelligently, deliberately and with decision. It was determined by his faith in Christ, in the future of his people, and in the realities of the unseen and eternal

II. Portrayed the perfect Example. The Christian Hebrews needed "like precious faith" with the ancient worthies to enable them to discharge the duties and endure the sufferings to which they were called in connect-ion with their Christian discipleship. The apostle probably had in mind the apostacy, the danger to which the Hebrew Christians were exposed. of drifting back into Judaism gathered up the practical lessons to be derived from an historical demonstration of the power of faith, and sum-moned them to the exercise of like faith, making their paramount duty the putting aside of everything exter-nal and internal which would tend to failure in the concentration of purpose and singleness of aim. Paul referred to Jesus as their great example, viewed in his humiliation and exultation as the author and finisher of faith. He surpassed all others in faith and obedience. The Hebrew Christians were to be guided and made victorious through him. T. R. A.

TESTS IN LAMB FEDING.

Much interest of late is developing in the fattening of lambs on the farm It has been proved to be profitable to the farmer, and as a result the indus try is growing.

Both the Purdue University Agricult tural Experiment Station (Lafayette, Indiana), and the University or Neb raska Agricultural Experiment Station (Lincoln, Nebraska), conducted a series of experiments that extended during 1914 and 1915.

For the Purdue University choice Western lambs were purchased on the Chicago market, and were fed for 90 days.

Before being started on feed, the lambs were divided into nine equal lots of 25 animals each. All lots were as nearly equal as possible as to weight, quality, condition, thrift, sex and breed. Lambs were fed twice daily at the same hours. Lots 1 to 8, inclusive, were fed in an open shed facing south, upon different rations Lot 9 was fed in a well ventilated

The following rations were fed: Lot 1—Shelled corn, seven parts; cottonsecd meal, one part, and corn

Lot 2-Shelled corn, two parts; oats, one part by weight; clover hay and corn silage.

Lot 3-Shelled corn and clover hay. Lot 4—Shelled corn and alfalfa hay. Lot 5—Shelled corn, seven parts; tottonseed meal, one part, oat straw and corn silage. Lot 6-Shelled corn, clover hay and

Lot 7—Shelled corn, seven parts; cottonseed meal, one part; clove rhay and corn silage.

Lot 8—Shelled corn, four parts; cottonseed meal, one part; clover hay and corn sllage. Lot 9—Shelled corn, clover hay and corn silage. (Fed in barn).

For the University of Nebraska crials the lambs were purchased on the Omaha market. They were of average quality, and weighed 52 pounds. They were divided into five lots of 50 lambs each, and were fed the follow

Lot 1-Ground corn, ground alfalfa and corn silage.

Lot 2—Ground corn and ground alfalfa. Lct 3-Shelled corn and good alfalfa

Lot 4-Shelled corn, good alfalfa hay and corn silage.

Lot 5—Shelled corn and poor alfalfa hay.

RESULTS AT PURDUE.

The feeding of corn silage in addition to hay and corn resulted in more rapid and more economical gains on he lambs. There was a saving of an increased profit of 40 cents per head by the use of corn silage.

Corn silage without dry roughage was not as satisfactory as when fed in combination with hay or straw. The lambs were harder to keep on feed and mede less rapid gain when no dry roughage was fed. The addition of cat straw greatly improved the ration and provel more economical than the addition of clover hay.

Clover hay was slightly superior to Clover hay was slightly superior to alfalfa hay as roughage for fattening alfalfa hay as roughage for fattening lambs. There was no difference in the quantity of feed eaten by lambs on the two rations, but the rate of gain was more rapid and the cost of grain was less when clover hay, instead of alfalfa, was fed. There was a greater profit when clover hay was fed. The use of cottonseed meal in a ration of corn, corn silage and clover hay was economical. The rate of gain was higher, the cost of grain was less and the profit per head was increased by the use of the cottonseed meal. The lambs fed a ration of corn, corn silage and clover hay returned a pro-silage and clover hay returned a pro-fit of $1.04 per head; those fed corn, seven parts; cottonseed meal, one-part; corn silage, and clover hay re-turned a profit of $1.15 per head, and those fed a ration of corn, four parts; cottonseed meal, one part; corn, silage of the parts of the pa cottonseed meal, one part; corn sil age and clover hay returned a profit of $1.32 per head.

The addition of oats to a ration of corn, corn silage and clover hay decreased the rate of gain, increased the cost of gain and decreased the profit per head. Lambs fed corn alone as grain returned a profit of $1.04 per head as compared with 87 cents per head when oats were added to the ra-

Lambs fed in a well ventilated barn ate the same quantity of feed and gained practically the same number of pounds in weight as others fed the same ration in an open shed. The lambs fed in the barn did not develop into as firm-fleshed animals as those fed in the open shed and were not as valuable for selling purposes. There was a difference of 10 cents per hundred pounds in selling value and a dif-ference of ten cents per head in pro-fit in favor of feeding in an open

RESULTS AT NEBRASKA.

The ration composed of shell corn and alfalfa hay gave somewhat the best results, although shelled corn, alfalfa hay and corn silage proved to be and alfalfa and feeding the two as a mixture was not profitable. The gains were scarcely as great as where the whole grain and whole hay were fed, and the cost of grinding made the feed considerably more expensive.

The feeding of a poor grade of al-falfa hay, namely, typical first cutting, off-colored hay, with shelled corn, in comparison with the feeding of a good, clean grade of leafy alfalfa with shelled corn .indicated that the former was not nearly as valuable as the latter in producing mutton—In fact, the good hay proved to be twice the value of the

FARM NEWS AND VIEWS.

That more farmers are keeping their hogs on clover pasture in summer, and in light, clean well-ventilated pens in winter, is given as a reason for the greater prevalence of hog health during the past year. And it is undoubterly correct.

The practice of selling calves, yearlings and other cattle by weight has become common in the Eastern States, where a few years ago it was the custom of the cattle buyer to visit farms, inspect the herds and select the stock he wanted at so much per head, basing the price on his own estimates of weight. Under this system the drover took no chances, and the farmer usually lost out in the deal. The only business-like method of selling cattle, sheep or hogs is by actual weight, and the farmer should be on hand to see the weighing done.

The secret of the farmers' success is, 'We have learned to feed ourselves. The man who expects to harvest a full chop will not wait until planting time to plow.

Il looks as though the year 1916 will prove another year of exceptionally high prices for cattle.

BAN HUN GOODS AFTER THE WAR

London Cable - The Daiyl News learns that the inner circle of the Cabinet will recommend the incorporation in the budget of announce ment that German imports will be prohibited after the war, and also that measures will be taken, probably in the nature of preferential duties for the purpose of encourage ing exports from the British colonies to the countries of the Allies. No decision is likely to be reached in the matter, adds the newspaper, until it has been considered by the entire Cabinet, as well as by the economic conference of the Allies, the forthcoming meeting of which Reginald Mckenna, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced in his speech at the Guildhall yesterday.

The true greatness of nations is in those qualities which constitute the greatness of the individual.—Charles Sumner.

Sir E. Grey On German Charge of Armed Liners.

London, Cable. — Sir Edward Cgry, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, authorizes for publication the following statement: — "The assumption apparently made by the German Government that all British merchant stips are armed is entirely incorrect. Practically all British merchant ships employed in trade before the United States of America and the United Kingdom have hitherto been unarmed.

United Kingdom nave interests the time armed.

"The claim, therefore, made by the claim of the serman Government to sink all Bissis merchant ships at sight because of their armament is one which examp proved by be justified. This is clearly proved by the statement issued last night giving a list of British and neutral enarmed merchant ships which have been torrespend by German submarines without warshap."

"Yes, but I would not have married | What rooms shall we give them? The Harry for all the world," Mildred declared. "He is very kind and good! I know, but he would not suit me; and there are so many Harrys in the world. Besides, if I am to be married, mamma, why, I am, you know, and I dare say 'he' will condescend to come even so far as this for me. Indeed, it will be better for us to stay at home quietly this year."

So the matter was settled and the family stayed at home. Sir George fretted and fumed over it a good deal for a few days, and finally tried to insist upon their going, offering to sell all manner of things about the farm to enable them. But Mildred was firm and after a time the question was dropped. Sir George, however, going up to London himself on business for a day or two toward the close of July. brought back to Mildred a very hand some bracelet, which she felt was meant as some sort of compensation loss she had sustained so bravely, and prized it accordingly.
The Trevanions were determined

The Trevanions were determined also to follow up their lately begun economical designs by having a quiet autumn and winter at home, and had actually made up their minds, with Spartan heroism, not even to invite their usual number of friends for the hunting season at King's Abbott—a determination that agreed very ill with poor Sir George's digestion, as it was his delight to see the old house crammed with visitors of all ageswhen there reached them the unlucky letter from the Younges, saying how much the head of the family desired to see the friend of his boyhood, namely, Sir George.

This letter put a full stop to all their plans, and was looked upon as a brain blow in more ways than one. not only did it ensure an expensive winter, but, what was worse, upon examination it was discovered that these friends of Sir George's youth were most disreputable in their antecedents, having been in trade. A cotton merchant! It sounded horrible. Cotton could not possibly mean anything but low pirth, and low birth, of course, the room.

whereupon Lady Caroline groaned in spirit, and thought dismally of what the Deverilis and the Blounts and the Stanleys would say, finally going off to consult with her Prime Minister, Mildred.

twenty at the cone, and had not as yet felt the slightest inclination to "com the girls who would have gially given their life's happiness into his keeping. he could have married almost whom he pleased, with his handsome Saxon face and reputed wealth; and indeed it was an undisputed fact that Lady Julia Hortington, down in his part of the world, would willingly have gene to the kingdom's end with him. In fact, to such an extent did the infatuation of that foolish young helress reach that "my lord," her father, who was one of the proudest men in Eng-land, and "my lady," her mother, who was one of the proudest women, were obliged to promise that, if the young man came to the point, their consent to the union would not be withheld.

But Denzil, having no designs what ever in that aristocratic quarter, be-yond a quiet little flirtation now and then in the hunting field, or in retired conservatories, never did come to the point; whereupon Lady Julia, having found, after a few weeks of blank despair, that she was not likely to die of it, like a sensible girl, went up to London, and married the old Marquis of Tonwyn, very much to her parents and the rest of the world's satisfaction uBt of course all this was supposed to be strictly private, and by no means to be told in Gath, or published in the streets of Askelon, lest the daughters of the Philistines should rejoice.

Miss Trevanion, having made up her mind that there would be plenty of time just before dinner to get through the introductions, stayed in her own room until exactly five minutes to seven o'clock, the usual hour for dining at King's Abbot, when she swept downstairs and into the drawing room in her beautiful graceful fashion, cladin pure white from head to foot, with in pure white from head to foot, with exception of a single scarlet rose fresh from the conservatory, in the middle of her golden hair. And cartainly Mildred looked as exquisite a creature that evening, as she walked up the long drawing-room to where up the long drawing-room to where her father was standing, as any one could wish to see.

"This is my eldest daughter-unmarried," said Sir George, evidently with great pride, taking the girl's hand and presenting her to his guest, who had been gazing at her with open honest admiration ever since her entrance.

"Is it indeed?" the old man answerlated poor Lady Caroline, elevating

"Right, right!" cried old Younge approvingly; and those two became friends on the spot, the girl chatter ing to him pleasantly the greater part of the evening afterward, although the old man's eyes followed Mildred's rather haughty movements with more earnest attention than he bestowed upon those of her more light-hearted

Miss Trevanion, when Mr. Younge had called her a "bonny lass," merely flushed a little and flashed a quick glance toward her mother which said plainly, "There, did I not tell you so-Yorkshire farmer, purt and simple, and all that?" and moved on to be introduced to the other members of the unwelcome family. She could not forget, even for a moment, how intru-sive their visit was, and how unplea-sant in every sense of the word. She was only three or four years Mabel's senior, but in mind and feeling she might, so to speak, have been her When she remembered Eddie always required money, and how difficult they found it to send Charles regularly his allowance and still to keep up the old respectable appearance in the county, she almost hated the new-comers for the expenses their coming would entail. an inch higher, and went through her inclinations to the others with a mixture of grace and extreme hauteur that made her appear even more than commonly lovely, and caused Densil Younge to lose his place in the languid conversation he had been holding with Eddie Trevanion. She had not so much as deigned to raise her eyes when bowing to him, so he had been fully at liberty to make free use of his own, and he decided, without healtation, that nothing in all the wide itation, that nothing in all the wide carth could be more exquisite than this girl who, he could not fail to see, treated them all with open coldness.

He took her in to dinner presently. but not until soup had been removed did Miss Trevanion think it wor worth her while to look up and discover what style of man sat beside her. Glancing then suddenly and superciti-ously at him, she found that he was the very handsomest fellow she had ever seen—well-bred-looking, too, and in appearance at least, just such a one as she had been accustomed to go down to dinner with even in the best houses. But then had she best houses. But then had she not frequently heard her father say that the largest amount of good looks was always to be met with in the lower classes? So she considered the Younges, and, therefore, according to that theory, this man's perfect features need not surprise her. Doubtless when he onened his lips, his less, when he opened his lips, his breeding would proclaim itself.

He was staring across the table now to where Mabel sat, laughing and con-versing merrily with old Younge, and seemed slightly amused with the girl's gayety. Was he going to fall in love with Mab? Very likely, she thought. It would be just the very thing for an aspiring cotton man to do—to go and lose his heart ambitiously to their eautiful "queen.

Then Denzil turned to her and said: "You were not in town this season, Miss Trevanion?"

"No; mamma did not care to go." she answered, reddening a little at the plous fib, and feeling intensely wrathful, as she came to the hurried con-clusion that he had heard all about their straitened circumstances, an had asked the question knowing she could not have gone there had her mo-ther wished it ever so much. This was unjust; but her pride and dislike had brought her to this—that she, the open-minded Milared, could feel ungenerously toward this stranger, who under the circumstances could by no possibility have learned anything about her father's affairs.

"I do not think you missed much." Denzil went on, pleasantly; "it was the slowest thing imaginable; and the operas were very poor. You are fond of music, of course? I need hardly ask you that.' good music, Miss Trevan when I Trevanion said it," to all sweet sounds than have to listen to the usual run of so-called singers, private singers, I mean."

"One does now and then hear a good private singer, though," Denzil returned. "There were several in town last year."

"Lady Constance Dingwall was greatly spoken of," Mildred said; "I have heard her sing several times."

"So have I, and admire her voice immensely; her pet song this season was Sullivan's 'Looking Back,' and it suited her wonderfully. Lots of fel-lows raved about her, and old Douglas of the Blues was said to have pro posed to her on the strength of it. She refused him, however. Odd man Douglas; you know him, of course-Odd man. everybody does. He is slightly crazy, I fancy. By the byc, you have not told me what you think of Lady Constance's singing."

"I would guite as soon listen to a barrel-organ, I think," Miss Trevan-ton answered, ungraciously; "there is just as much expression in one as in Miss Trevanion raised her head half the other. She has good notes, I grant

THE PREVENTION OF DISEASE. Without a good foundation no ms would expect to build anything of great value. The health and strength of a flock of poultry depend largely upon its foundation. start your strain from a line of ancestors which have been physically perfect and free from illness of any kind. Like breeds like, and with strong ancestors there is no difficulty in raising a flock of strong young birds. Filth breeds alsease and the greatest care to avoid filth is necessary even from the time the hen is set or the incubator is started.

If one is buying his foundation stock, whether young birds or old ones, it is wise to be pretty sure there are no germs of disease lurking near and great care should be used in making your selection. If all is clean about the place where the birds you are looking at are keep the chances are that it is a good filth everywhere it is here are signs of filth everywhere it is here are signs of filth everywhere it is light there is pretty sure to be disease.

Disease germs do not often penetrate the oviduct and a fresh laid egg is usually free from them, though germs may be acquired under a hen in a short time. Eggs—rubhed with a dampened cloth dipped in alcohol will be absolutely free from germs, and if then placed under a hen that is free from lice and mites will hatch chicks that are free from disease of any kind, for interited diseases are rare and can be absolutely gavoided by never using for breeding purposes hens that have ever shown signs of sickness.

In the first days of the chicks' life, even if they have been hatched under the perfect condition just described, there are two great dangers—that they will be overfed and that they will be come chilled—either of which is likely to prove disastrous. Although overfeeding is not as dargerous as chilling, either is likely to lead quickly to white diarrhoe, and the two conditions combined are likely to result fatally to the entire flock, or at least the greater part of it. But this does not make it necessary to keep them; there is a happy medium both as to feeding and protecting them from cold, which is not difficult to reach if one uses judgment and eare.

A little food oftens, removed before it can become fitthy

Knocking On Wood.

"Knock on wood" is one of the most antique expressions in use to-day fnstead of being modern stang, according to Professor William F. Blade. The expression dates from a custom in vogue 5,000 years ago, when wood was regarded as the antipathy of evil geniuses. Metals were regarded as tabooed by certain spirits, and if a man han-dled these metals he immediately touched wood to appease the spirits. Ancient records show that King Solo-mon's temple was built with wooden tools and implements made of precious netals, for iron was tabooed and would have polluted the temple.-Exchange.

The "Land of Cattle."

Italy may fairly claim to be senior among the nations of Europe, so far as its name is concerned. The penin-sula has been "Italia" almost as far back as even legend reaches. According to Mon. asen, the "Itali" proper were the inhabitants of the southern part of the country. As to the origin of the name, there is the normal legor the name, there is the normal leg-end of a King Italus, but his name must have been pronounced Vitalus and Vitulus, which means a buil calf, and it is easy to recognize in it an allusion to Italy as the land of cattle.-Spectator.

There is nothing like polar exploration for increasing one's susceptibility to smells. Dr. Nansen told how, when approaching Franz Josef Land, he knew when he was in the neighbor-hood of a friend whom he had left here in charge of a base. "I st his scented soap long before I saw him, and afterward as we approached his hut I believe I could have given a sort of inventory of everything it contained without entering. The odors of the petroleum, coffee, cheese, tea, etc., reached me quite separately and distinctly."
