Determined Pacifists.

On Saturday last Kaiser Wilii. an celebrated his 58th birthday and he did it by issuing to his soldiers an address praising them and proclaiming his love for peace. His only stipulation was that the enemies of Germany should keep off from her long enough to allow her to get a peace of her own preparation.

The Kaiser is a determined pacifist—in theory. In every address he issues he proclaims that the war was forced upon Germany and that his own activities and those of his soldiers have been confined to battle for peace.

Until the beginning of the war many people believed that the Kaiser was desirous of peace. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, he of multitudinous errors, once painted the monarch of Germany as a being whose sole desire was to establish the peace of the world on a firm foundation. Sir Wilfrid did not require much evidence to establish what he wanted to believe.

But Sir Wilfrid was not alone. There was Viscount Morley, whose "Recollections" were recently published. The learned Viscount makes references to the German Emperor which are decidedly interesting at this time. The first refers to the year 1907 when the Kaiser visited England, and on that occasion Viscount Morley writes to Lord Minto, formerly Governor-General of Canada, but then in India, as follows:

"Nov. 22. The visit of the German Emperor has been a great event, and will much improve the chances of a little decent calm all over Europe. Even those who were most sceptical about any good coming of it, now admit that the result has been in every way advantageous. I saw much of him at Windsor, and was surprised at his gaiety, freedom, naturalness, geniality and good humor—evidently unaffected.

About the Emperor's personality. One impression—and in my eyes it is a golden impression—appears to have left in the mind of everybody, namely that he does really desire and intend to have peace. You may laugh at this in view of the fine brand-new naval programme which the Germans have launched at a moment supremely inconvenient to H. M.'s Government."

Evidently Lord Morley did not worry in the slightest about the fine brand-new naval programme of the Germans, seeing that the Kaiser looked so peaceful. The British had stopped building battleships to please the Germans, and the Germans had responded by doubling their rate of building. But Morley did not worry. The Kaiser was making a fine impression.

Since the outbreak of the war many evidences have come to light that the Kaiser's peaceful temper was the temper of a tiger which sometimes does not happen to be hungry or annoyed, but which is always ready to start something and generally looking for a chance. Particularly noteworthy as regards Lord Morley's satisfaction in 1907 is the fact revealed by Russian state papers recently published by the Bolsheviks that the Kaiser had a couple of years before been busy trying to get the Czar to cut loose from France or England or both, and join Germany in plans which inevitably meant war in Europe. This was the exchange of ideas which has become famous as the "Willy and Niek" correspondence. The Kaiser was plotting spoiliations which meant war, and piling German money into battleships, but as long as he smiled and looked gay in London, he was alright to determined pacifists like Lord Morley.

Then, when war came, and Germany violated Belgium, Lord Morley left the British cabinet because he didn't approve of war. Determined pacifists are clearly of two supreme kinds. One kind, like the Kaiser, are magicians who love pacifism so much that they aim to cut the throats of everybody else who will not accept their will without fighting. The other kind, like Lord Morley, will neither fight nor countenance the idea that anybody else is likely to fight.

Death Of Mrs. McDonald

The sympathy of the entire community goes out to His Honor, Lieutenant Governor McDonald, in the sad affliction he endures in the demise of his beloved life-partner, Mrs. McDonald, whose death as recorded in our obituary column, took place on Friday last, 1st inst. was a most estimable lady, and enjoyed the respect and esteem of a large circle of friends and acquaintances. She was the last surviving daughter of the late John Small McDonald Esq. and sister of the late John Andrew McDonald Esq. formerly Postmaster of Charlottetown. Although lately somewhat indisposed, her death came quite unexpectedly. She had not been seriously ill more than three or four days. This is the third bereavement sustained by our esteemed Lieutenant Governor within the last six months or so. First, the death of his brother, then of his daughter, and now of his wife. Besides her husband she leaves three sons and three daughters to mourn. Her funeral took place from Government House Saturday afternoon and was largely attended. The cortege proceeded to the Cathedral, where the Liberia was sung and the absolution given, his Lordship, the Bishop, officiating, assisted by Rev. Fathers Hughes, and W. V. McDonald. After the services the funeral procession reformed and proceeded to the Railway Station, whence the remains were taken to Monrage by train. The interment took place at Montague Sunday afternoon, Rev. Father Croken officiating. R. I. P.

Progress of the War

Rome, Jan. 30—More than 2,600 prisoners have been taken by the Italians in their successful attacks upon the Austrian lines on the Asiago Plateau, the war office announced today. Six guns and 100 machine guns also have been captured. The Italian official statement today says: "The Austrians have been bombarding with extreme violence the positions captured by the Italians. The Italian fire has been powerfully centered on points behind the enemy lines."

"Extremely heavy losses were suffered by the Austrians, two of their divisions being almost completely wiped out. Col. Del Bosso was taken on Monday, and the Italian success was extended yesterday by the capture of Monte Val Bella. "Our gallant troops in the plateau zone of the army successfully crowned yesterday the action begun on the eastern Asiago Plateau on Sunday by wresting from the enemy his positions to the west of the Frenze Valley."

"Col. Del Bosso and Col. Decels, which are on the descent towards the western edge of the valley, having been taken on Monday and since then held with valor, the enemy in the region of Sasso Rosso was hard pressed and his numerous counter attacks being repulsed with the bayonet, the success yesterday extended by the capture of Monte Di Vell Bella. "The enemy suffered very heavy losses, and two of his divisions were nearly completely destroyed."

"The war booty captured has not yet been completely specified but includes, so far more than one hundred officers and 2,500 men, six guns of various calibres, about 100 machine guns, very numerous trench mortars, several thousand rifles and a very large quantity of ammunition and war materials of all kinds. "The reaction of the hostile artillery on the positions taken was violent. Our fire was rapidly and powerfully concentrated on the most distant objectives. "The enemy aircraft attempted many reconnoitering and offensive actions, but were effectively met by our machines and anti-aircraft fire, which during two days accounted for seventeen enemy machines."

Transcending in interest even the victory of the Italians over the Austrians on the northern battlefield is that in the political and economic situation in Germany. Here apparently a large part of the country is in the throes of a great labor upheaval, due to dissatisfaction by the working classes over the failure of negotiations and over internal political conditions generally. Through out the country thousands upon thousands of the working classes both men and women—have struck and many of the great manufacturing and industries are affected. In Berlin, alone, nearly half a million persons are reported on strike, and hourly those who have quit work are receiving reinforcements. Likewise in Kiel, the great shipyard centre, at the Hamburg Iron Works and in the Rhenish Westphalian mine region workers have thrown down their tools and left their jobs. Leaders of the Socialists—both of the independent and the majority factions—evidently are in control of the movement and for their pains a number of the independents have been ordered imprisoned. Hugo Hasse, of the independents and Philipp Scheidemann, the majority Socialist leader in the Reichstag, are heading their respective followers. Advice received by way of Switzerland are to the effect that the Socialists have delivered an ultimatum to the government, demanding the conclusion of a general peace without indemnities or annexations, participation by the workmen in peace discussions, amelioration of the food situation, the right of public asylum, the release of all political prisoners and the introduction of equal electoral suffrage by direct secret ballot.

The strikes in Germany apparently are growing in magnitude. In Berlin alone, according to press despatches reaching neutral countries from Germany, 700,000 men and women have ceased work while in Kiel, in towns along the Rhine, in the Westphalian coal regions and other districts in the empire, including Bavaria, the situation is serious. It is asserted that martial law has been declared in Hamburg and other centres, and that in Hamburg the military commander has ordered a cessation of the strike and given the added order that further demonstrations of this nature be avoided. Additional Socialist leaders in various German towns have been arrested because of their activities in fomenting strikes or by reason of their hostile attitude toward the policy of the military elements with regard to peace and franchise reform.

Numerous industries necessary to the prosecution of the war have headquarters in towns where strikes are in progress and doubtless they are affected by them. Notable among these industries are the great shipbuilding yards at Kiel, the military aeroplane and balloon plants at Alldershof, the big arsenals and ammunition works at Spandau, and the great coal and iron mines and foundries in the Westphalian region. On the fighting fronts, the most important event has been another attack by the Germans on a small American post in which two Americans were killed and four wounded.

Another soldier is believed to have been captured by the enemy. This position on the French front daily has been searched out by shells from the Germans for several days past, but Wednesday morning, aided by a heavy fog and covered by a violent artillery barrage, the Germans decided to attack. It is believed that the German casualties were great or as great as those of the Americans whose canon and rifle fire was played unstintingly on the marauders.

Washington, Jan. 31—Quick retaliatory measures were forecasted here tonight as the answer of the United States and the allies to Spain's interference with the shipment of goods across her frontier into France. In fact certain Spanish ships now in American ports ready to sail are being held up pending a clearing of the situation, although the war trade board in a formal statement tonight, denied that vessels under the Spanish flag generally were being kept in port. The American government is particularly concerned in the situation because of large orders placed in Spain by General Pershing for supplies for the American army. It holds, too, the chief weapon to force a lifting of an embargo placed by Spain, since Spain draws heavily on the United States for foodstuffs.

Allied officials have been given no end of perplexity by Spain. Although not so situated geographically as to ship supplies into Germany, charges have been made that goods from Spanish Morocco have gone through the Swiss port of entry in France, into Switzerland and thence into Germany. Charges also have been made that the German spy system has used wireless equipment in Spain to communicate with the Central Powers. A considerable element in the Spanish government, it is well known, is German in its leanings, and officials in Washington express no hesitation in intimating that this element is in a large measure responsible for the present trouble. The official reason given for the blocking of General Pershing's orders is said to be that the Spanish railroad system has broken down that it is impossible to handle goods destined for France. Through their control of bunker coal the Allies are in a position to stop not only the shipment of goods to Spain from the allied countries, but from neutral as well, consequently they are in a position to bring powerful pressure to bear to insure fair treatment in the Spanish markets.

London, Jan. 31—Kiev, which for some time has been invested by the Bolshevik troops, who are engaged against the Ukrainians, has surrendered, according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Petrograd. The capture of the towns of Kertch, Theodosia and Yalta, in the Crimea, is claimed by the Bolsheviks. It is said that the Cossack General Dutov has been defeated and the capture of Orenburg is imminent. Special despatches from Petrograd concur in the belief that all the Cossacks will declare themselves on the side of the Bolsheviks. The reports give instances of growing adhesion and forecast the downfall of the government of General Kaledines.

The city of Kiev, or Kieff, has a population of 325,000. It is called the Mother city of Russia, and in the eleventh century was the capital. It is picturesquely situated on the right bank of the Dnieper and is the seat of the governor-general of the provinces of Kiev, Podolsk and Volhynia, and has the leading university of Russia.

Petrograd, Wednesday, Jan. 30—The Moscow council of workmen's and soldiers' deputies has declared the German peace proposals unacceptable and has suggested that the council of national commissioners organize a Socialist army to fight against German imperialism. Representatives of forty-six regiments of Don Cossacks addressed the congress of Soviets, promising unlimited grain in exchange for munitions and implements and other manufactured products. They said that the enemies of General Kaledines were now in control of the Don Basin and that a great coal supply was ready to be moved towards Petrograd. The Petrograd Soviet held a meeting to discuss the food supply, at which Madame Smith-Falkner, a member of the food control committee, said that preparations were being made to prevent the fight for food from becoming bestial. The food commissioner announced that all first and second class restaurants would be closed and general dining rooms opened, where the Bourgeoisie must share the food with the masses. He further announced the five thousand agents would make an organized search of all the shops in Petrograd on February fourth to locate hoarded supplies.

The Enemy's Trouble

News of internal troubles in Germany and Austria continues to come to hand. A few days ago it was reported that Austria was riven with discontent and ready to desert Germany and seek a separate peace. More recently came the word that Germany was in the grip of labor disturbances and that dissatisfied workmen had made striking representations to the government. The reports may or may not prove true, and if true, may have much or little significance. We can only hope that there is trouble in Germany and Austria and that it is sufficiently serious to indicate the collapse of Teutonic militarism.

If the people of Germany and Austria are commencing to take things into their own hands and are seeking to force their governments out of the war the reason for their action is that they realize, now more than ever that they are playing a losing game. There objection is not to war in the abstract or to the possibility of Germany fighting a victorious war. If they had felt that way about it they would have taken steps long ago to put a stop to the carnage and the devastation. It is the prospect of defeat rather than the hardships of war that causes the German and Austrian people to seek to stop it before it goes further. This is a comforting conclusion, but if it is employed only to comfort the people of Entente nations it has lost its value. We cannot pause in our effort and look on while domestic revolution runs its course in the enemy countries.

The proper thing to do is to increase the pressure against the enemy and follow up with renewed energy the operations that have brought the Teutonic coteries to such a pass. If by hammering away at them our armies have made the masses in the enemy countries hopeless and desperate, if the economic strangle-hold maintained by Britain's navy has brought want and suffering to the great majority of German families and thereby has provoked an uprising against the Berlin government and the Kaiser's war machine, more of the same exertion of power will increase this disaffection and ripen the situation for peace on the Entente terms.

The morale, determination and war measures of the Entente powers and of all their constituent peoples cannot be heightened by credible news of upheavals in the enemy countries. The more our adversaries become depressed, the more should every citizen in the British Empire throw himself into whatever national service he is counted on to take part in. Our fighting men ought to fight harder, our producers ought to work harder, our loyal people ought to practise thrift more assiduously, and everybody who is not at the front ought to do what he can to make the supply of our staple foodstuffs go as far as possible for the sustaining of our fighters.

Canadians who before had failed to catch the meaning and the seriousness of this war, ought now to awake and bestir themselves to help in what, let us hope, is the last rush, the winning rush, against the enemy. Whether the war power of Germany is or is not still far from being spent, now is the time for the whole national power of each of the Entente countries to be put forth to bring the fighting to a finish. Announcement of a steamship merger that may mean a great deal to the development of British and Canadian after-the-war trade, was made in Montreal on Saturday at the Montreal office of the Cunard Line.

After announcing that the court was going to make an example of anyone swindling persons who were trying to help the government in the prosecution and the winning of the war by purchasing Liberty bonds, Judge Malone, in the court of general sessions, in New York sentenced Frederick Jackson, a former Liberty Bond salesman, to five years in Sing Sing, although the jury in the case had recommended mercy.

Monoton advices of January 31st, say: Passenger train service, especially between Moncton and Montreal, continues to be very irregular. Both the Ocean Limited and the Maritime are hours behind time daily arriving from the west. Today's Maritime, which was in a slight wreck at St. Helene, Quebec, arrived this evening over eight hours late. The severity of the weather and drifting snow continue to hamper transportation, and make it almost impossible for trains to run on schedule time. Old railroad men cannot remember a more severe winter for railroading.

It is intimated from Ottawa, as probable that several judges will have to be named within a few days to assist Mr. Justice Duff in the Central Court of Appeal under the Military Service Act. Appeals to the Central Appeal Court from the decisions of the Local or Appeal Courts have been pouring in for weeks past and indications point to an aggregate of over more than 7,000 or 8,000 cases to be finally adjudicated upon by Mr. Justice Duff. Despite his energy and quickness of decision it will be obviously impossible for him to personally consider a docket of that size unless the work is kept up at the present high pressure of twelve to fourteen hours per day until well on into the summer. Under the Military Service Act the central appeal judge has power to call on other judges to help him and it is understood that this power will be exercised as soon as arrangements can be made.

Mr. James Grant, of Ottawa, probably the last surviving member of Canada's first confederation parliament, has received from Sir Lomer Gouin, premier of Quebec, a reply to a message of congratulation he had sent on Sir Lomer's attitude on the recent debate in the Quebec House. "Kindly accept," Sir James wrote "my warmest congratulations on the charming manner in which you supported the policy of confederation, in which I took part in 1867." To the foregoing Sir Lomer Gouin replied as follows: "It gives me great pleasure to see that you approve of my last speech and I thank you very sincerely for your kind letter of congratulation. Confederation has been a success and Quebec has contributed too much to this success not to be proud of it. Though my province has deeply felt the injustice of certain attacks which were recently directed against its population, it remains and will continue to remain, faithful to the high ideal that has inspired the Fathers of Confederation, as well as of whom you are one." In this connection it is recalled that Sir James Grant made the first speech on Confederation in Ottawa in 1862 before the Mechanics' Institute.

It is stated in a Paris Press despatch that the condition of wheat on January 1, compared with a year ago, shows a gain of eight per cent. It maintained to maturity, this means a remarkable increase per year in the acre. The Journal d'Officielle gives the acreage of winter wheat this year as eight hundred thousand acres more than a year ago.

Replying to a question in the British House of Commons Sir Leo G. Chiezza, Money parliamentary secretary for the Ministry of Munitions on behalf of the Shipping Controller, said the ocean convoy system continues to work satisfactorily. Since its inception, in the middle of 1917, more than fourteen million tons of shipping had been conveyed with a loss of only 1.45 per cent, including ships sunk through the dispersal of convoys and through bad weather.

The steel plates for Canada's ship building programme will first be procured in the United States. If the Government contemplates starting on the national fleet about June, the time is short for establishing rolling mills in Canada for ship-plate. But the ultimate establishment of the industry ought not to be lost sight of. We hope to see steel plates for ships made at both Sydney and New Glasgow.

Ottawa advices of January 31st, say: Owing to the illness of Sir Louis Davis and the circumstances that Hon. Justice Duff's time is fully taken up with his duties as Central Appeal Judge under the Military Service Act, the Supreme Court which would have commenced its mid-winter sittings on Tuesday February 5th, will not have a quorum until the end of February, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick and Hon. Justices Idington Anglin and Brodeur will hear appeals on consent in the meantime on dates to be arranged with the registrar. In cases where the court is equally divided, a re-argument will be directed before a quorum of the court.

A Winnipeg dispatch reports that the new Government standard flour milled by all city flour mills in compliance with the regulations of the Food Controller has been put on the local market at a price of 50 cents less per barrel than the first grade patents. These were selling in carload lots at $11 per barrel. The new flour is listed at $10.50 per barrel in carload lots, with an additional 40 cents per barrel on ton lots and 20 cents on smaller lots.

To the Electors of Ward Five.

Ladies and Gentlemen: Having been nominated at the recent civic meeting as a Candidate for Councillor for Ward Five, I have decided to enter the contest. I do not intend to make any personal canvass of the ward and have no promises to make at this time other than to say that if you show by your votes on election day that you consider me competent to fill the position, will devote my time and any little ability I may possess to further the best interests of the City.

As our street lighting contract will expire in the near future, it will be the duty of the incoming Council to make new arrangements and may say that I am in favor of Civic ownership of our lighting plant which I believe can be operated in connection with our water works at a reduced cost to the citizens for both light and water.

I am in favor of doing everything possible to encourage industries to locate here, also to urge the Government to start the building of cars etc. in our railway shops thus creating more employment for our laboring men. I also think a strong effort should be made to have the income tax paid by our citizens refunded to the City.

There are many other matters such as the inspection of meat and milk, medical inspection of schools, an up-to-date fire alarm system, improved methods of street cleaning etc., which will receive my favorable consideration should I be elected. Yours truly, J. J. McKINNON. Feb. 6, 1918—11.

To the Electors of the City of Charlottetown.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: Having decided to nominate as a Candidate for the office of Commissioner of Sewer and Water Supply, I take this opportunity of asking you to support me by your votes at the forthcoming Election. Should it be your pleasure to elect me to represent you in this important branch of the City's service I shall endeavor to perform my duties faithfully in a manner to merit your approval. Yours respectfully, JOHN McKENNA. Feb. 6, 1918—11

To The Electors of ward Five.

Ladies and Gentlemen: At the earnest request of a large number of electors I have consented to nominate as a candidate for Councillor in the above named ward. As this is a large ward it will be impossible for me to make a personal canvass of the electors within the same limit at my disposal. I therefore avail myself of this opportunity to solicit your votes and influence.

Should you do me the honor of electing me as one of your Councillors, I will exert my utmost energies on behalf of the City in general and of Ward Five in particular. Considering the strenuous times through which we are passing it will behoove the incoming Council to practice strict economy in all departments of the City service. I am however in favor of paying the working man a good living wage and am also disposed to encourage the establishment of industries by reasonable exemption from civic taxation. I favor all these in order to benefit not only the working man but the city in general. Should you see your way clear to give me your support I pledge myself to do all in my power for the improvement and advancement of our city. Yours Faithfully HUGH F. CONNORS Feb. 6, 1918 11.

Death.

Ah, fool! Ah, fool! 'Tis time to go Thy sun has set. Its fading beams Are lighting up thy years. There are no flowers, no flash of wings. Along thy life of tears. You spent your days with idle things. The bubbles of the hour. You had no hearth. No baby face; No love was thine. No broken heart Is bleeding, mourning at thy grave. You played the thoughtless, clownish part— Thou fool! Thou wast a slave! When light of life is burning low, Mine eyes are growing dim, I pray an honest tear will flow. Some voice cry, "Pity him!" I fear no death, I fear no life, If I but have a friend or wife To kiss my eyelids when I sail across the seas of night Unto the shores of dawn, Where Angels with their wings of light Will greet me in the morn. —Walter J. McIntyre, in The Missionary.

The Fisherman's Will

"I've heard, Monsieur le Recteur," and his voice now was quite respectful, "I've heard that there are plenty of others besides myself in sickness and misery just now. If that's the case your time must be filled up. What is it then that makes you come to a hardened old renegade like me? If it is to try to get me to go to Confession, I tell you once for all it's no good. If it's not that, then you are welcome to come and stay and come again."

There was a prayer of thanks in the Abbe's heart at even such a reception as this, and he did not fail to profit of the leave that it gave. He did not speak of Confession, or even of approaching death, but after doing what he could to make the old man more comfortable, he proposed the saying of one of those paternosters, the use of which old Yves had not denied.

Yves had never been really bad, only careless, first of his prayers, and later, after his wife's death, of the practice of his religion. He had got out of the habit of going to Mass, and from that neglect of the Sacraments had followed. Then knowing himself to be in the wrong, he had first merely shunned, and then turned bitterly against the priests. His son, as boy and as young man, had been brought up to hear the Church abused and the priests insulted. Now when the last day's of the old man's life were eased and calmed by the visits, the son-like care of the young priest, whom he had driven from his door with insults and abuse, he began gradually to realize something of the love of the Divine Master which prompted such return for injury. Before the end came he made the request the Abbe longed to hear, and asked of himself to be reconciled to the God he had insulted to the Church he had reviled.

He went to confession, and once again he received the Holy Eucharist, but there still remained something to be done. "You see, M. le Recteur," he explained, "I have not only offended God and injured myself, I have also injured my boy; for he has always heard me deny the truth, and mock at Church and priests, especially priests. Oh! it was the devil's work that made me feel such hatred towards the ministers of God. When he comes back from the fisheries I want you to tell him this. Tell him—No, the old man broke off, "you are too humble; you would not tell him in the way I wish. I am weak, but still I think I could hold the pen. Give me writing materials, M. le Recteur, and let me make my will for my boy. The old man, shook and trembled. It was only with a supreme, last effort that he feebly held and guided his pen, and this is how his last will ran: "My dear boy," wrote the trembling fingers, "my last thoughts go to you. I was Wrong. We want priests—we want as many as we can have. He would have written more but his hand could no longer guide the pen. And thus death overtook him, his cold fingers holding fast the lasting testimony of repentance and faith. —Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

How Father Algernon Lost His Housekeeper

"When a pastor has office unsaid, returns to his hotel, from a long country call and finds that a drummer has dropped into his room to pass the time, he yearns for the quiet of a parochial residence. Father Algernon had the residence, but not its presiding genius. The work of taking a census of his extensive parish had made him acquainted with several women, whose outward appearance fulfilled all the requirements of the Council of Trent. Mary was his first choice—for there were, and perhaps will be, others. Age—superdulia; but the rest, even in the minds of the venerable Fathers of Trent, was guess work, as it has always been about every important woman since Eve answered the first door-bell. To tell the truth after age qualification, Father Algernon selected her for her cooking. He had sampled the good Mary's viands when he arrived unexpectedly at her place of employment, and she became his housekeeper for a brief time. Her downfall came about in this way:

One day, her maid, she drew a chair to the table, when Father Algernon was breakfasting, and placing her arms thereon for an extended talk, began: "I thought I would put you on your guard against Katie G. She is very gossipy and tells everything you say to her. She told Mrs. Casey about the fine prayerbook you gave her, and Mrs. Demers told Lizzie Duggan that Katie told her aunt, who told it back to me, that you tipped your hat to her, but didn't to Mary McIntyre; and Mrs. Casey told me that if I only knew what a talker Katie G. is, that I'd tell you and not have you making a fool of yourself!" "Woman, silence!" interrupted Father Algernon, pale with anger. "It is you who are the gossip. And to presume to criticize the action of your employer yes, of your pastor—"

Some heated words followed this righteous indignation, and Mary discharged herself. Father Algernon was a Ballerini in his knowledge of theology, but a Simple Simon in the ways of women. Poor man! Thinking that restitution was due Katie G. for the slanderous remarks of his late housekeeper, he engaged her to succeed to Mary. Speedily there developed two factions in the parish, the "Marys" and the "Katie's." Katie always pecked out the parochial windows until she saw Mary coming to Mass on Sunday. Then she ran as far as the door, thence timed her gait to encounter Mary at the entrance of the church, where each Sunday an exchange of sweet sarcasm took place between the two. This worthy interchange before Mass was nothing to the gossip after the "Katie's" got together, criticised the "Mary's" and praised the pastor; the "Marys" criticised the "Katie's" and abused the pastor. Unhappy man! If he could not, and would not, hear this small talk, all would be well. But Katie had the gift of tears, and Father Algernon that of sympathy. When he found her sobbing, as she took care she often did, his heart went out in pity to her; and on these occasions Katie managed to let glide into Father Algernon's unsuspecting ears all the sayings of the "Mary's." Again he made the unfortunate mistake of noticing in his remarks from the altar this contempt in the parish teapot. Result, all the children of "Mary" faction were withdrawn from the intended entertainment on St. Patrick's Day. The "Katie" faction were long on talk, but short on children, so the next parish was asked to send its choir to give a concert and save the day. Now, if there is one thing worse than another, it is to insult home talent by the importation of foreign genius. The receipts showed this. But Katie's hour was approaching, fast and furious.

One evening, after waiting over an hour for a delayed train, Father Algernon postponed a visit and returned to his house. It was brilliantly illuminated. He slipped in quietly, and saw the parlor and his study filled with Katie's friends playing "forty-five." As he entered the room he found Mrs. Quinn vainly trying the door of the safe in search of the baptismal records to find out if Mary Murphy was not over twenty-five, and to satisfy Mrs. Murray's curiosity as to the date of James White's father's marriage. After a few moments of gasping suspense, Katie recovered her pose and invited Father Algernon to have a hand.

"Is there any one I can trust?" angrily exclaimed Father Algernon. "Is this the respect shown your pastor—to make a club room of his house?" Father Algernon's voice failed him. He opened wide the door and motioned them to be gone. There was no delay to see if hats were on straight.

The next Perpetua, by name Margaret, came from a distance, which fact, however, did not prevent a speedy acquiring of all parish knowledge. She was of middle age, her cooking was superlative, as were also the grocer's bills; her reticence was pleasing to the pastor; her prudence was evident in her ministrations in answer to the door-bell, which now rang less frequently than before. Father Algernon attributed this to the chilly feeling occasioned, by the difference between the "Marys" and the "Katie's," but grew wiser one day when he overheard this conversation at the door: "Is the priest in?" asked a man. "Maybe he is and maybe he isn't," answered Margaret. "I'd like to see him."

"What do you want with him?" "I don't think that's any of your business." "It is, I'm the housekeeper, and it's my business to know what you want before I'll trouble the pastor." "Suppose I want to ask him about marriage?" "Who's going to be married?" "I'll not tell you. But you'll be sorry if any one dies without the priest." "Who's sick?" "I'll tell the pastor." "Tell me first." "All right. It was not a marriage, nor it wasn't a sick call, but it was about a matter of $500 that my aunt was going to leave Father Algernon in her will, and she sent me to ask him would he take it and how does he spell his name; and now," said the man, as he turned to go, "you're the cause of his losing it." "Come back!" called Margaret. "I have that way with me just joking like. Come in and I'll call Father Algernon."

The tramp got the price of a lodging from Father Algernon for his wit, if not for his needs and Margaret received a severe reprimand. Shortly after, as Father Algernon sat in his study, Margaret announced Mr. McKenna. Bidding his visitor to be seated, Father Algernon closed the door opening into the dining room, where Margaret was reading. When the visitor departed, a firm rap on the dining room door preceded the majestic entrance of Margaret. "I have been insulted for the last time," she began with dignity.

HAD WORST CASE OF CONSTIPATION DOCTOR EVER KNEW.

Although generally described as a disease, constipation can occur unless some of the organs are deranged, which is generally found to be the liver. It consists of an inability to regularly evacuate the bowels, and as a regular action of the bowels is absolutely essential to general health, the least irregularity should never be neglected. Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have no equal for relieving and curing constipation and all its allied troubles. Mrs. F. Martin, Prince Albert, Sask., writes:—"I had one of the worst cases of constipation my doctor said he had ever known, and Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills cured me of it. My father-in-law had used them, in fact he was the one who gave them to me. A number of people around here use them, and they all say that they are the best pills they ever used."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a box, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"What?" gasped Father Algernon. "You shut the door in my face, and before John McKenna!" "Quite proper," answered Father Algernon in an icy tone. "He came on business that did not concern you."

"That makes no difference. I was insulted before him. Do you think I can't be trusted? If I was in the habit of listening, well and good. But to shut the door so that I could not hear what you were saying was just as bad as to say to John McKenna 'that woman is a gossip.'"

Father Algernon's astonishment was mistaken for weakness by Margaret, who waxed bolder and suggested that she should be treated as "one of the family." Father Algernon sprang up from his chair and, with suppressed anger, exclaimed, "But you are not one of the family! You are a servant."

"I'm not a servant," indignantly exclaimed Margaret. "And what are you, pray?" "I'm the housekeeper!" And Margaret's regal chin pointed heavenwards. "A housekeeper," she continued, "is no servant. She is as good as any one in the parish, and just as well brought up. She'll go behind none of them, even of John McKenna and she'll not be pushed aside by priest or people."

FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST TO MAKE GOOD BREAD You must have Good Yeast GOOD BREAD is, without question, the most important article of food in the catalog of man's diet; surely, it is the "staff of life." Good bread is obtainable only by using the Best Yeast, the best flour, and adopting the best method of combining the two. Compressed Yeast is in all respects the best commercial Yeast yet discovered, and Fleischmann's Yeast is indisputably the most successful and best leaven known to the world. It is uniform in quality and strength. It saves time and labor, and relieves the housewife of the vexation and worry she necessarily suffers from the use of an inferior or unreliable leaven. It is, moreover, a fact that with the use of Fleischmann's Yeast, more loaves of bread of the same weight can be produced from a given quantity of flour than can be produced with the use of any other kind of Yeast. This is explained by the more thorough fermentation and expansion which the minute particles of flour undergo, thereby increasing the size of the mass and at the same time adding to the nutritive properties of the bread. This fact may be clearly and easily demonstrated by any who doubt that there is economy in using Fleischmann's Yeast. If you have never used this Yeast give it a trial. Ask your Grocer for a "Fleischmann" Recipe Book.
