The Romance of Marriage.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"I'm afraid I never tried 'em," says Sir Herrick; "but I'm sure if I had, I should find that I was awfully bad."

"Cie," he worse than I am," says Bob, carefully. "I can't add up a column of figures without muddling them. If you'll believe me, I've made—I have tried it three times—it comes to 128, 248, and 376. I've given it up now. Have you had any breakfast? Yes? Oh, I say, speaking of breakfast, you don't happen to have seen Paula anywhere, do you? She has cut off somewhere." Then he stops, arrested by the look on Sir Herrick's face.

"Your sister is outside," he says. "No, don't call her. Bob—yet don't mind me calling you Dick, I hope?"

"Not a bit. Well?"

Sir Herrick pauses a moment; then he looks straight into Bob's honest eyes.

"I've come to ask you if you have any objection to my marrying your sister Paula," he says, simply and calmly. Then, as Bob sits silent, he adds, with infinite grace, "I love her very dearly!"

Bob colours.

"I—I think we'd better ask Alice," he says, stammering. "Alice generally manages these sort of affairs; not that I mean Paula has ever had any, but that my sister manages everything. I'll ask her to come."

But Alice spares him the trouble of calling, and enters the room at the instant almost—really—as if she had been listening outside.

Sir Herrick bows over her hand, she gives him with her sweetest smile; she looks charmingly cool and nice in her new morning-dress, which she slipped on when she saw him crossing the meadow.

"How kind of you to call so early," she says, "and what a lovely—"

"Alice," cuts in Bob, speedily. "Sir Herrick wants to marry Paula."

Alice gives an admirably feigned start, one that would have done credit to the best of London actresses, and utters a little "Oh!"

"Yes, Miss Estcourt, your brother has spoken truly. What have you to say? Wait a moment. If I were speaking to her father I should have to tell him how I stand in the world; I must tell you. I am afraid that I have not much to offer her. I might almost say nothing. I am awfully poor; but I think you know that?"

Alice sighs and casts her eyes down.

"Does she—does Paula—"

"Paula says 'yes,'" replies Sir Herrick, calmly, but with a sudden light in his eyes.

"And—and your uncle, Major Vericourt?" murmured Alice.

"There is a moment's silence; then, as Sir Herrick is about to reply, the door opens, and Mary says:

"Major Vericourt, miss," and they turn to see the major, posed in his most graceful attitude in the doorway, and regarding them with a benevolent smile.

CHAPTER XIX.

Speak of an angel, and you hear the rustle of its wings. The appearance of the major could not have produced a greater sensation in the little group if he had taken the guise of a ghost, instead of standing there exqu岸itely dressed, his fur cloak falling in graceful folds around him; his speckless, aristocratic face wreathed in its finest, most polished smile—the smile, indeed.

Bob stares, and Alice utters a pretty little cry of surprise; but their astonishment is as nothing compared with that of Sir Herrick—he who knows the major's, the Honourable Francis Vericourt's, habits so well, fully appreciates the fact of his being twenty miles from home at noonday.

As a rule the major does not face the living day until twelve o'clock, when he comes from his valet's hand, a thing of beauty and a joy which lasts until midnight. The major gives them a moment to recover from their surprise with highbred politeness, and then advances, hat in hand, and with his matchless bow.

"A thousand pardons!" he says. "More than a thousand! Don't say that I don't intrude, because I am quite conscious that I do; but you must forgive me, dear young lady!" and he takes Alice's hand and holds it with reverential tenderness.

"Has anything happened?" asks Sir Herrick, drily.

"Happened?" echoes the major, suavely. "Do you allude to the un-naturally early hour of my appearance? No, my dear boy, no! I could not resist the beauty of the morning, that is all; and my steps—or, rather, that of Hursley's admirable horse—naturally turned in this direction. Pardon an old man's anxiety to renew the acquaintance so charmingly, so romantically commenced yesterday," and he bows to Alice. "I do trust that you are not unduly fatigued after the excitement, and, may I say, perils of the day?"

By this time Bob has recovered sufficiently to permit of his closing his mouth, and allowing his eyes to look a little less like saucers, and hands a little less like saucers, and hands

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

Tells How to Stop a Bad Cough

Respirator trouble from the common cold is accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with cough and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 3/4 ounce of Pink (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes 16 ounces of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief. You can feel this takes hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such pleasant ease and certainty that it is really astonishing.

Pink is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe cough, throat and chest aches.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "3/4 ounce of Pink," with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pink Co., Toronto, Ont.

his guest a chair; while Alice, with her gentlest smile, insists upon relieving him of his gold-headed cane and hat.

"Will you have anything to drink?" says Bob. "It's very warm."

"It is very warm," admits the major, suppressing the shudder which runs through him at the bluntness of so abrupt a question. "If I might venture to ask for a glass of milk—may I, really?"

Bob rings the bell. Sir Herrick leans against the mantelshelf, "smiling inwardly," as the French say. A glass of milk! The major asking for a glass of milk!

Bob rings the bell. Sir Herrick leans against the mantelshelf, "smiling inwardly," as the French say. A glass of milk! The major asking for a glass of milk!

"Do you want to see me?" he says in his calm fashion.

The major smiles.

"By and by, dear Rick. Yes, a little matter of business has come upon the tapis which I wished to discuss with you; but—as Alice and Bob prepare to fly the apartment—"pray, pray do not go. My dear young lady, I should never forgive myself if I drove you from your charming apartment. Ah, do not let me have to reproach myself, in my old age, with driving beauty from my bower."

Alice may be a beauty, but the parlor is scarcely "a bower," but no one smiles; the most extravagant phrases fall from the major's honeyed lips, with such apparent sincerity, that they pass for truth.

"No, don't go," says Sir Herrick, putting his hand on Bob's arm. "We'll go down to the inn—"

"My dear Rick, I would not tempt your anger by tearing you away from your friends!" exclaims the major. "If Miss Alice will permit us to wander to the verandah—"

"Very well," says Sir Herrick, coolly, and he leads the way out, the major following, with his smile "turned full on," and his deprecatory bow nicely distributed between Bob and Alice.

"Wonder what that old humbug means?" says Bob, almost before the old humbug has scarcely got out of hearing.

Alice looks thoughtful.

"Don't you see?" she says. "It is as plain as a pikestaff. He means to stop the match, and posted over in the hope of getting here before the formal declaration. Poor Paula, and she smiles with a keen sense of amusement."

Bob grunts indignantly.

"Confound his impudence! Why can't he say so? What does he want to come smirking and smiling like a Cheshire cat? I tell you what—"

"Tell me what you please," says Alice in a cold whisper, "but don't shout it."

"I don't care," says Bob; "Paula's a hundred times too good for him," and he goes out and bangs the door.

The major follows out on to the terrace, over to the side away from that on which Paula sits waiting patiently, wrapt in her love-dream. Herrick can just see the edge of her white skirt, and doubtless the major sees it, too; but he appears quite ignorant of her nearness.

"Well, sir," says Sir Herrick, "what is it?"

The major sinks down gracefully into a garden-seat, and puts up his eyelids.

"What a charming view, my dear Rick; so truly pastoral. Why is it, I wonder, that the beauties of Nature have such power to move us? This scene, so peaceful, so—so Arcadian, quite touches me—touches me, I assure you, my dear boy."

Sir Herrick leans against a pillar, and thrusts his hands in his pockets, and an impatient, not to say angry, light comes into his eyes.

"I hope you haven't made the journey for the simple object of admiring the view, sir," he says, with quiet irony, "or, fine as it is, I am afraid you will deem your trouble poorly compensated."

The major smiles up at him, and covers one daintily gloved hand over the other on his stick.

"My dear Rick, how impetuous you are, it is such a pity. But there, dear boy, you cannot help it, I suppose. But I wish it were otherwise. Why, now, Rick, did you not inherit the exquisite calm of your sainted mother—of my side of the family? Ah! Rick, Rick, that old Powis impetuosity! What harm it has wrought!"

Sir Herrick is silent, but his foot moves impatiently.

"It is the dread that this impetuosity of yours may have led you to commit a folly which might be irreparable, that has not only brought me here at this unreasonable hour, but has kept me awake all night—yes, all night, I assure you, my dear boy," he adds, pathetically.

Sir Herrick glances at him, fully aware that nothing under the moon would keep his exquisite uncle awake, unless it were something that touched his very self.

"Awake all night, dear Rick!" murmurs the Honourable Francis, almost tearfully. "But I do not regret it if I can save you. My dear Rick, surely you were jesting last night—our good friend Mr. Palmer's wine was exceedingly strong and fruity—you were jesting when you made that really too ridiculous assertion that you intended to offer your hand to the pretty little girl with the red hair—I forget her name."

"Allow me to recall it," says Sir Herrick. "Paula. No, sir, I was not jesting. I don't think I was ever more serious in my life."

"God bless my soul!" murmurs the major, raising his fingers and his eyebrows. "It was really earnest. Then I have not taken my trouble for nothing. My dear Rick, have you fully considered this—awful piece of tomfoolery you say you contemplate?"

Sir Herrick frowns.

"Fully, sir," he says.

"Are you aware—I really cannot believe that you are, until I hear it confessed by your own lips—that this young lady is absolutely penniless?"

Sir Herrick shrugs his shoulders, and the major groans.

"Absolutely penniless—and worse—a mere nobody!"

"The Estcourts—"

"Spare me—spare me, my dear boy!" murmurs the major, sneeringly. "Did you ever know people in the position of our charming friend who were not descended from great people, or who had not seen better days?"

"I was only going to say," says Sir Herrick, coolly, "that in all probability the Estcourts were descended from Noah. I suppose the Powises—but certainly the Vericourts—go further back than that. What does it matter, sir?" impatiently.

"Nothing; not a whit," admits the major, "if she had money; but she hasn't, Rick—she hasn't!"

Sir Herrick nods.

Could Not Hold To His Pliers, States Myett

Hands Stiff, Arms Painful—St. John Man Quickly Restored By Tanlac.

While visiting friends in Halifax, his "Old Home Town," during the Christmas holidays, Daniel Myett called at Kinley's drug store and made a statement regarding Tanlac that will be of interest throughout this section of Canada.

Mr. Myett was born and reared in Halifax, but has lived in St. John, New Brunswick, for the past eighteen years. He is a valued employee of the St. John Power Company and resides at 121 Somerset Street.

"You may wrap me up a bottle of Tanlac," said Mr. Myett. "I don't know what the people here in Halifax think about it, but it seems like most everybody in St. John is talking about it. Speaking for myself and wife, we just think there's nothing in the world like it. For the past ten years I have suffered with rheumatism in my shoulders and arms, clean down to my finger tips, and have been in such pain many a night that I couldn't sleep a wink. All day long at my work I was almost frantic the pain was so great I could never get a minute's ease and have been in such bad shape that I was forced to lay off from my work two and three days at a time, and on one occasion was laid up in the hospital for eight days just suffering agony. My shoulders were so stiff and painful that I could hardly bear to raise my arms and my wife had to help me put my coat on. My fingers often go so stiff and ached so bad I couldn't hold a pair of pliers.

"Well, I have just tried everything, but nothing ever seemed to do me a particle of good until I began taking Tanlac. This medicine has relieved me so I can't describe it. I am on the job every day now and even in the worst sort of weather I never feel that rheumatism. I sleep as sound as a child at night and am feeling just fine.

"Another thing that makes Tanlac seem so remarkable is that it has done the same thing in my wife's case as it has in mine. She was in just as bad a fix with rheumatism as I was, it not worse. Her lower limbs were swollen and stiff and pained her almost beyond endurance. After seeing what Tanlac was doing for me she began taking it and today she is as well and hearty as I am. She says she never feels a sign of the rheumatism and, like myself, thinks Tanlac is the finest medicine in the world."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connor, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative in Harbor Buffet, by Thomas Wakely & Sons; in Pictouville, by James Murphy & Son, and in Topsail by J. K. Bursell—adv.

has been organized and nobody but an unofficial representative of the Castle met the party at the dock.

A Famous Fighting Soldier.

The illustrious roll of Indian soldiers contains no name more honoured than that of Field-Marshal Sir Neville Chamberlain, who was born on Jan. 20, 1820, and died in 1902 at the age of 82 a British field-marshal, having been raised to that rank in 1900. Originally, he was an East India Company's officer, and it was as a dashing leader of irregular horse on the frontier that he first achieved distinction. His campaigns were many, and so were his wounds, for he was always being wounded. For instance, in the Afghan war of 1842, in which he first saw service, he was wounded no fewer than six times. He fought at Maharajpur in the Gwalior campaign of 1843, and at Chillianwallah and Gujrat in the Sikh War of 1848. In 1857, just before the Mutiny broke out, he became adjutant-general, and on all the operations of the Siege of Delhi he was a leading spirit, until he was again wounded very severely. He remained in the camp on the Ridge, however, until the close, and ranks only second to Nicholson in his contribution to the successful issue of that desperate undertaking. It is, indeed, possible that but for his insistence, the siege might have been raised before Nicholson arrived, with incalculable results to British rule in India. For Sir Archdale Wilson, who succeeded Sir Henry Barnard, was not a strong man, and, if left to himself, in all probability would have abandoned a task beyond his powers. After the Mutiny, Sir Neville was soon back on the frontier, where he commanded against the Waiois (and was again wounded) and in 1863 against the Bunnarwals. This closed his record of fighting in India; and in fact, though thirty-nine years of life remained to him, he fought no more.

monia afflicted 227 persons with thirty fatalities.

Downfall of a Monarchy. "Just Forty Years Ago."

JANUARY 21, 1793, will always be memorable in the history of France as the day on which an agonised nation threw down the head of their king as a pledge of defiance to all gainayers. Innocent and amiable, but fallen on evil times, Louis XVI. warmly engages our interests as a victim who suffered for the misdeeds of the French monarchy and aristocracy, which had culminated in the previous reign. The story of his imprisonment and death, including the final parting with his family, is one of the saddest on record. Parisians early astir on that gloomy winter morning, saw large bodies of troops forming a guard along the road from the prison to the scaffold. Louis had made all religious preparations for his death, but the unsubmitive spirit which he manifested led to the belief that he still entertained hopes of rescue. The scaffold in front of the Palace of the Tuilleries was reached at ten minutes past ten, and Louis was three minutes in descending from his carriage. He was attired in a brown coat, white waistcoat, grey breeches, and white stockings. His hair was not disordered, and no change was visible in his countenance. Round the scaffold was an open space, with cannon ranged on every side; beyond this as far as the eye could reach, an unarmed multitude. When his hands had been tied, and his hair cut off, he began to mount the steep steps of the guillotine slowly, and with sullen demeanour, leaning on the arm of his confessor. On the last step he roused himself, and walking across to the left side of the scaffold, he exclaimed, after having commanded silence: "I die innocent of the crimes imputed to me." The rolling of the drums drowned his voice, and prevented him from continuing. "Silence! Silence!" cried Louis, losing all his self-control, and stamping violently on the ground. Richard, one of the executioners seized a pistol and aimed at him. It was necessary to drag him away from the side of the scaffold by force. Scarcely had he been bound to the fatal plank, when he uttered terrible cries, which were only cut short by the falling knife carrying away his head. The executioner—Samson—immediately took it up and showed it to the mob, who cried out "Vive le Republique!" Thus was repeated in France the tragedy of Charles I. in England.

(Lines suggested on seeing a policeman take away a small boy's slide) with a shout and a "wallop" or "down" he came Down the hill, on his trusty slide, And grazed the shin of an ancient dame And upset most her "tarnal pride; A precious youth—and he took a peep Just to see if a "Cop" would show Or he'd lose that slide—like his daddy's went Just forty years ago.

'Cause he didn' know, 'bout a foot or so Stood a policeman with wabbling eye, Awaiting to "gobble" all small boys up And, particular—THAT small boy— So to win a name, and a life's reward (Promotion now-a-days, is slow) He chased that urchin over town Just—like forty years ago.

He chased that youngster up—then down And that "Cop's" chest swelled with pride, When he "collared" the kid and brought him in (With one hand—in the other the slide "Leggo"—the youngster sniffed complaint, But that "Robert" replied "not so,—"I gotcha," or it sounded like Just forty years ago.

And the eye of His Honor, sprung a tear When they brought him that toy next day; For though he's a "Big 'un," none more fair, With a heart all for mercy's way What the "Bobby" said—or the court remarked. Well, that Judge, Sir, he didn't know He was thinking 'bout a slide he lost Just forty years ago.

And when they got him to listen to The story of that brave "Cop," And he thought again of the criminal And the "crime" he was guilty of That Judge he just swelled his lungs out big And hollered "DISMISSED—Now, go." There wasn't a "Cop" could catch ME kid, Just forty years ago.

MORAL.

Sure History will repeat itself, And when our cheques have gone in The boys to come, in the same old way Will slide down Barter's Hill, And a "Bobby" as ever, will be chasing In the same old way we know, For "boys will be boys" in spite of "Cops." P. J. KINSELLA. St. John's, Jan. 19, 1920.

Drawing Near.

The day for which the electors of St. John's West have waited is near at hand, and to-morrow they will be given the opportunity of choosing their representatives for the next four years. They have a choice of two of four men presenting themselves as candidates. Two of these are seeking re-election, at the polls to be held, for the purpose of confirming them in their appointments to portfolios under the Crown. They are Hons. R. A. Squires, Prime Minister and Colonial Secretary, and H. J. Brownrigg, Minister of Finance and Customs. Every voter knows just what to expect from the gentlemen who represent the Government. Each one of the qualified electors of St. John's West has viewed, with more or less apprehension since last November, the perils which confront Newfoundland, if the present administration is to continue in office. Following closely every development in an extraordinary situation, created solely by those to whom was given authority at the general election, they have observed that the dominion is approaching critical times, and that days of trouble are ahead, trouble which can only be averted by the destruction of the menace which looms dark and threatening and dangerously near.

Against the Government candidates the electors of St. John's West have two men soliciting their suffrages, representing in their individual selves, the people. Men of, by and for the people, born and bred and raised among the people, and therefore more calculated to be in entire and close sympathy with the desires of the people, and their immediate needs. Messrs. James T. Martin and William F. Linegar need no introduction to the men of whom they are typical. Familiar with every phase in the varied and multitudinous conditions of life in the city, and knowing nearly every man by name, they are the only men who can give to the masses the long denied right of representation in the House of Assembly. They are the only men, in contradistinction to their opponents in the political fight, who thoroughly know and appreciate the rights for which Labor has sought in the past but never was successful in gaining until now. The recognition of Labor and of Labor's cause has come in earnest and the opportunity which has been placed at the disposal of Labor must not be lost, or cast lightly aside. The future of Labor depends upon the allegiance of the laboring men to their chosen candidates to-morrow.

And even greater principles, if that can be, than Labor's future are at stake in to-morrow's bye-election. The attitude of the Coaker-Squires Government toward certain established institutions, particularly education, is distinctly hostile. The appointment of a Minister of Education, before legislative sanction created a department, shows a decided opposition to the present prevailing system by which the various educational matters are denominationally administered. The Prime Minister has repeatedly stated that neither he nor his Government intends to interfere with or change the present methods of superintending and conducting education, but though questioned and challenged he has not yet given any definition whatever of the duties of the new minister, who is still without a department. But there can be no doubt of the purpose. The breaking up of Newfoundland's denominational control of education is contemplated. The thin end of the wedge has already been inserted, by the appointment of a Minister, and that wedge will be driven home, if St. John's West fails in its duty to-morrow. Why should there be a Minister of Education? What is the reason for such an appointment altogether at variance with the needs and desires of present day affairs. Why, if there is no intention of a change, should the Prime Minister hesitate to define the extent and scope of the new department to be created to fit the newly appointed Minister. This is one of the main issues at stake in the contest of to-morrow. It is one which cannot be shirked, avoided or forgotten.

Then there is the future of St. John's to be considered; that future in which Labor plays so prominent a part: that future in which, according to how the vote goes to-morrow, either the grass will grow in the streets, because of a transfer of all the industries in which Labor is concerned, to some other place, or there will be a return to the prosperous, happy, plenty-of-work conditions of the days before the city's workmen were strangled by Coaker's Fish Export Regulations. St. John's has already felt the crushing effects of one stroke delivered by the dictator, after only a few days of power. How much more severe and injurious will be the punishment meted out if Coakerism prevails. The President of the Fishermen's Protective Union, stated without contradiction by twelve members elected to the House of Assembly who heard him, that the country approved of Coakerism. Let St. John's West repudiate once and forever this boastful assertion made by the man who is Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and who has further boasted in public that the three great spending departments of the Government, —Board of Works, Postal-Telegraphs and Marine and Fisheries—are being directed by himself and two colleagues. Let St. John's West pause and consider the significance of this boast. Then when it has been brought home to the voters that the purpose of Coakerism is domination and the destruction of every interest that conflicts or competes with it, they will, as defenders of freedom, of liberty, of democracy go to the polls in their thousands and by marking their ballots for MARTIN and LINEGAR demonstrate to an anxiously awaiting and expectant Newfoundland that the spirit of their forefathers, yet animates them, and they refuse to submit to any power excepting of their own making.

A Destructive Policy

The strangle-hold of Coakerism on St. John's West, will be broken to-morrow, and this will be the beginning of the end—the end of the Tory Government. The people have had two months and a half of Tory rule and fully realize that if it is allowed to go on for four years, St. John's would become a town to let, and the whole country, with the possible exception of Port Union, would be ruined and all trade and business paralyzed. It has always been the cry of the economist and the statesman in this country, that what we wanted to make the people prosperous, especially the fishermen, was new markets for our fish and new methods of putting fish up. The ballots were hardly counted when Mr. Coaker announced a programme which is exactly the reversal of this policy. He has made regulations which not only are manifestly against independent action in sending fish into new markets, but has also placed a serious and damaging restriction on the exportation of fish to the old ones.

What we regard as a most serious setback to the opening up of new markets, is the stopping of shipping fish in casks to New York. This trade had increased in a remarkable manner the past eight or ten years, and it would be a mistake to suppose that all this fish was sent to Greece and Italy, entering into competition there with the direct shipment of our large exporters. A great deal of it was re-packed in boxes and sent to customers in South America, Texas, Mexico and the West Indies to markets which it would not be convenient for Newfoundland to exploit direct. This trade was gradually increasing and last fall extended out through the Panama Canal by the usage of small parcels. Now is not this what our statesmen and economists have been seeking all the time, viz., the finding of new markets to relieve the possible congestion in Brazil and Southern Europe in years when we had a large catch? Mr. Coaker's resolutions are tantamount to saying, "No new markets, no new customers and no new modes of packing."

The most important feature in his programme seems to be that all our fish should go through the hands of a gentleman in Spain, named Hawes. Instead of encouraging the finding of new markets and new modes of putting up fish, he places restrictions to trade on the old ones, and antagonizes a large number of the customers who, under free trade, were satisfied to do business with Newfoundland for over 300 years. Mr. Hawes cables that he has come to satisfactory terms with the Consorzio. He says he can sell 150,000 qtls. of our fish. Can is a very uncertain word, and we should put the interpretation on his cable that he wants us to put on it, viz., if he had said, "I have sold." However, taking it that he has sold to the Consorzio, he will have to admit that the terms according to his own message, are quite different from those so bravely laid down by Mr. Coaker in his regulations, and that they have been ignominiously beaten by the Consorzio. If they have given in to the Italians they should now give way to the small shippers and those outside the combine in Newfoundland. If the Consorzio would undertake to buy the whole 800,000 quintals of our codfish that goes to Europe each year, we probably would be safe. But what about Greece? What about our good old customer, Spain, 1,000 miles nearer home, discriminated against to the tune of over $2.00 a quintal? Will Spain lie down under this and make no retaliation? Time will tell.

The more we consider these export regulations of the present Government—which is another name for W. F. Coaker—the more do we fear that they are—if persisted in—going to ruin this dominion. We believe in keeping up the price of fish and in making every reasonable effort to prevent congestion in foreign markets, but if it can't be done in any other way than in the way planned by Coaker, Hawes and the Midas ring here, then for goodness sake cancel them at once and let us all get on in the old way.

Electors of St. John's West!

Hold What You Have, Risk Not Your Heritage!

WEDGING IT HOME.

What will happen after the 22nd if you elect Squires and Brownrigg. Don't have it happen, Mr. Elector, Vote for MARTIN and LINEGAR.

Mr. Brownrigg Answered.

In last evening's Daily Star the query is made as to why Sir Michael Cashin withdrew an application for a certain lot of bonds of what Mr. Brownrigg is pleased to term "His Million Dollar Loan". The reason is best given in the copy of telegram hereunder from Messrs. Wood, Gundy & Company, the Brokers who handled the last two Government loans. The telegram is an acknowledgment of an offer made by these brokers to Sir Michael Cashin, ten days after he had left office, for the disposal of a block of Newfoundland Bonds which were remaining on their hands, and which they apparently found not easy of disposal, because of the floating at the time of Canada's last Victory Loan.

"The telegram speaks for itself and shows that Sir Michael's investments were in the same Newfoundland loan as he had applied for, except under more favourable circumstances to himself, because the telegram discloses that he was allowed to purchase Newfoundland Bonds for which the Brokers had paid over 100 in May for 97.5."

Political Subterfuges.

The slim sham in yesterday's Star that Coaker was offered the Premiership by the Cashin Party if he would betray Squires and "come over," is only equalled by the fairy tale in the Advocate that Brazil has recommenced purchasing fish from Newfoundland. Both these political catch yarns are unsupported by any authoritative testimony, and their purpose is plain. A correspondent in the Advocate states that teams are now hauling drums for shipment to Brazil, and that several cargoes for that country are in stores waiting for tonnage to move them. Fina prospects, eh Coopers! So far as the Star yarn is concerned it would require several hogheads of that salt of which Spain threatens to deny us, to assist the swallowing process. The fight in St. John's West is against Coakerism, not in its favor, so far as the Opposition is concerned. Coaker is already the real Premier, and it is with the object of putting an end to his dictatorship that the Liberal-Labor party are battling for the future of St. John's. Coaker is no friend of Squires. That is well known from the former's writing as well as from his public speaking. Only political exigencies have brought them together and Coaker has bested Squires in getting control of the Government, and therefore is the ruling and dominating power of its Councils. By defeating the two Coaker marionettes, Squires and Brownrigg, to-morrow, the electors of St. John's West will be delivering themselves from greater perils than they know of at present, and will free Newfoundland from the clutches of the political schemers who have fastened themselves upon the Government. The slogan for to-morrow then should be MARTIN AND LINEGAR and a solid unmistakable majority for the Liberal-Labor candidates.

I. O. O. F. CARD TOURNEY.—The Oddfellows are holding a Card Tourney in their club rooms on Thursday night, to which every member has been given the privilege of bringing a friend. An enjoyable evening is assured all who participate.

G.W.T.A. DANCE.—All those who wish to attend this dance would do well to secure their tickets without delay as positively no tickets will be sold.

Snapshots From St. John's West.

Coaker called you drunken bums, men of St. John's West, then fire back this insult to-morrow by firing out the Coaker candidates—Squires and Brownrigg.

Coaker wouldn't have a St. John's man go to the sealfishery. Port Union is the capital of Newfoundland and Coaker can do it. Then workmen keep what you have and don't make a mistake that will bring misery to you and your families.

Coaker took all his business away from St. John's. How then can you support the Coaker candidates to-morrow. This is a question to ask yourself seriously.

Coaker rules Squires, Coaker rules Brownrigg, but the sturdy voters of Liberal old St. John's West are not going to allow Coaker to rule them.

Coaker hasn't a cent invested in the industries of St. John's. All the tollers in St. John's West would starve if they had to depend on Coaker. What fools we would be to support the Coaker candidates and cut a rod to beat ourselves.

Your last chance to retain your independence awaits you to-morrow. Think on it seriously when you take the pencil to mark your ballots. Think of the duty you owe to your children and do not allow yourselves to be fooled. Vote for Martin and Linegar and keep Coaker, your enemy, from lording it over you.

HANG 'ER DOWN.

Sparks From the Anvil.

Voters of St. John's West you will state through the Ballot Box to-morrow if you are satisfied with Freedom or Servitude.

Freedom from Coakers tyranny and domination by returning Martin and Linegar as your representatives to the House of Assembly.

Servitude if through any weakness or bad judgment the Tory Coaker Candidates should receive your support.

Martin and Linegar in the House of Assembly supported by the Cashin party will give Labor that say in its Country's affairs which has been denied it for years by successive Tory Governments.

The return of two more Labor Candidates in the next Election in the East End of the City will check F.P. U. domination and prevent Coakers threat of making "the grass grow on Water Street."

Nothing in the world would give "Kaiser" Coaker greater pleasure than to be able to pick Dandelion on our principal business streets—his dream then of Catalina being the Capital of the Island instead of St. John's would be near its fulfillment.

Crush forever to-morrow this mad desire of Coaker's to starve you and your children and make your Home "A Town to Let" and follow the example of St. John's East by snowing under the two Tory puppets who are endeavouring to "steal" the seats that belong to the old Liberal district of St. John's West.

DINNA FORGET — "Burns' Night", under the auspices of St. Andrew's Society, to be held in the C. C. C. Hall on Monday, Jan. 26th, at 8 p.m. Music by the C. C. C. Band. Concert programme will be advertised later. Tickets may be had from the following members of Committee: W. B. Eadie, A. Ross, J. M. Irvine, D. Ferguson, W. B. Gunn, G. Wallace, D. McIntosh.

TO ARMS!

Brave Voters of St. John's West! Strike and Strike Hard to Slay the Rule of Tyranny!

"When nature embellished our land with the tint Of its valleys, its fields, and its hills tops so fair, Did she ever intend that a tyrant should print The footsteps of slavery here?"

No! Freedom, whose smile we shall never resign, Go tell this usurper that reigns, That 'tis sweeter to bleed for an age at thy shrine Than to sleep for a moment in chains."

To arms then to-morrow! brave voters of St. John's West, and let not the sun go down upon your noble work till you have won for Liberty and Freedom a victory that will ring with recollection in the years that are to come. Redeem for the cause of freedom, and for the self respect of your noble district, the honor of St. John's West by forcing aside the nominees and upholders of the black rule and ruin of Coakerism which has already begun its withering blight around you; and strike so hard to-morrow, with the slashing opportunity that the ballots give you, in order that St. John's all over, both East and West will show to the other suffering districts of the country that it is a unit now against oppression; that the determining of tyrannical rule has been gun by the victory you will have won, and that speedily upon its ruins there is about to be erected the free institution of Liberty, a true Government of the people, and for and in the interest of all the free people of the country. The cause you are thus so privileged to defend is a great one, worthy of the greatest sacrifice possible to make, but to no more worthy hearts and hands could it be left to carry to a complete and successful issue than to yours; you the brave and highly intelligent voters of St. John's West. The eyes of the free lovers of our country look beseechingly upon you now and from the bottom of their hearts extend to you the fervent hope that you will be inspired to put forth all the energy you are capable of in making your victory a most brilliant one. Let it shake the oppression and tyranny of Coakerism so completely that never again will its automatic exponent sway the destinies of our Island Home.

Hang 'Er Down.

There's a sound of feet advancing,
There's a murmur on the air,
And expectantly we listen
As to who are coming there;
Nearer, clearer—now we see them,
And they swell this cheering song,
"We are here, the sons of Labor
And we're Thirty Hundred strong!"

"Yes, we're here, we're here to battle
For a right too long denied,
Banded for ourselves together
We are not to be defied.
This is now the destined hour
For which we've waited long,
And we'll make our mark for Labor,
For we're Thirty Hundred strong!"

"We are coming from the factory,
From the workshop and the mill,
From the store, the wharf, the foundry,
And we're coming with a will:
Loudly rings our chosen slogan,
As we pass the streets along:
"We are here to strike for Labor
And we're Thirty Hundred strong!"

It is ringing thro' the city,
And it stirs the countryside,
Where the farmers are assembling
In the valley of Kilbride.
Maddock's Cove and Petty Harbor
Catch the strain and join the song,
And they'll Hang 'Er Down to-morrow,
For the tide runs full and strong.

Yes 'twill swamp the Coaker heeled,
And the Squires' boat shall toss
On the beach with motor muddled,
And his hope a total loss;
While Linegar's and Martin's vote
Is steadily growing long,
Ours will add to swell the total,
That is Thirty Hundred strong!"

From Broad Cove to the Ropewalk,
From Southside to the Gouls,
They're lining up with ardour,
In spite of Coaker's "tools";
Who from the brow of Labor
Would try to snatch the crown:
But Thirty Hundred toilers
Have sworn to
HANG 'ER DOWN!

TO-MORROW IS THE DAY

On Which West End Electors Will Save or Starve St. John's.

It is all in your hands West End electors. On your verdict in the ballot boxes depends whether you have prosperity or stagnation in St. John's for the next four years. This is not mere political talk to influence your vote. It is a hard, cold fact. All that has been done by the Tory Government and what has been neglected and left undone since last November, is the proof of what we say. You will not deny that we have had good times during the past ten years of the Tory Government. They may have had their faults, they may have spent public money with a too liberal hand, but they kept the country going prosperously and there was not a real destitute man or woman in the land. They were men of experience and knew what best to do for the country's welfare in all emergencies. They were the real Liberal Government. This is the Tory Government. Did you ever hear of good times under a Tory Government, controlled by a few merchants? We never did and never will. Mr. W. F. Coaker is behind this stagnation movement that has fallen like a plague on St. John's. His fish exporting policy is doing it. It may be a good thing for him and Mr. Hawes and others, but assuredly it is a bad thing for you. Mr. Squires and Mr. Brownrigg, who are asking you to elect them to-morrow, must take their share of the responsibility of this industrial injury that is being brought on St. John's. We do not know whether they even warned Mr. Coaker that his fish regulations would ruin St. John's, but we do know that if they did, their words would not be heeded any more than a warm dew from the southwest in summer. If they are helpless in this they will be helpless in everything, and will be of no use to you as representatives. They hold their offices on the nod of Mr. Coaker, and should he choose to say the word, they would have to get out. How then can they be of any use to you in these great public emergencies where men are wanted to say, "you must not do that, as it will ruin the people." It will be the same when the educational question comes up. Don't forget that St. John's West lives largely by the handling and preparation of codfish for export. The money that is earned at this industry is circulated among the people who live by keeping shops. In fact all trades and occupations get a share of it. You can see then, quite plainly, that if small exporters are cut out and no fish is sent away in casks, that a very big sum of money will go away from the people. The coopers are the first to feel it. The past two months was a veritable "Bank Crash" time for them. The money is not spent because the fish to cut Mr. Coaker and Mr. Hawes, et al. is going out in bulk. Why? They can make more money out of it that way, and they want all the money that is going. There are many things like this that six merchants in this town have done long ago, to their own monetary advantage and to the great loss of the people. They had the wish, but not the power. The Government of the day and the laws of the land would put them in the Penitentiary. Now they have a Government that they can work; they are full of new-born courage to trample on the people and put them back where they stood fifty years ago. You will help them to carry out their designs if you vote for Squires and Brownrigg to-morrow. The news, you may be sure, will be cabled to Hawes and Coaker. It will stiffen their backs to lay it on to you in their future dealing with St. John's. The less handling of fish, the less labor and the less money for the laborers; the less cask cargoes, the less work for the truckmen and the poorer they are made, the more easily they can be kept down. Every laboring man who records a vote for Squires and Brownrigg to-morrow, forges a link in a chain for his own neck. A slave's chain. He votes to keep in place, but not in power, two impotent men who can do no good only for themselves. If they could do anything for you they would have done it long ago. They would have said to Coaker in Council, "Hands off the industries of St. John's West, or we leave you." They would if there had been anything in them of the spirit and backbone of men, have said to Coaker, "We are going to insist on stopping the profiteers from putting up the price of flour on our people; you must stop the advance in prices on butterine, kerosene oil and sugar, and you must not put in force these crazy, unjust fish exporting regulations that will ruin the West End and bring on misery and starvation." They did not take this stand, and why not? The answer is easy; $2,000 a year and pickings. They did not make any effort to see that enough coal was imported. There was enough in the cellars of Messrs. Squires and Brownrigg, and the people could go to Sydney or somewhere else. They have brought the whole country to a serious predicament, and the fish industry at home and abroad has fallen flat. The next news that comes from the foreign markets—if it is allowed to come—may reveal a condition of affairs that will shake the commercial fabric to its foundation. We hope not, but that is the way. The only way that the coal industry is by turning down Government responsible. Men of the West End, it is in your hands to-morrow to save the country from impending ruin by rolling up such an overwhelming majority for MARTIN and LINEGAR, that it will initiate the beginning of the end for this very worst of Tory Governments, and in a few weeks the whole rotten edifice will fall to the ground. So our warmth without weight Wool Socks in pretty heater mixtures. BISHOP, SONS & CO., LTD.

Coaker Walks The Plank

Coaker is appealing to the men of St. John's West; He sees Squires and Brownrigg Slipping, and he feels a great unrest. He knows we have the weight of them, but he himself must thank, For he tried to do us dirty, so To-morrow walks the plank.

The coopers, they swear vengeance On Coaker's brutal law, That would rob them of a living; Sure the truckmen, too, they saw Starvation thro' the city, a walking Lean and lank; But to-morrow all the truckmen say— Coaker walks the plank.

The Laborers are up in arms Against Coaker's insane rule, And all that Squires and Brownrigg Say, will not the workmen fool; They know that Coaker lacks in Sense, they know he is a crank, But to-morrow, Boys, we'll all act wise Make Coaker walk the plank.

When Coaker called us "drunken bums," We all made up our mind When some fine day we'd get the chance We'd pay him back in kind; And now that day is drawing near, Sure you may on it bank; Squires and Brownrigg, out they go, And Coaker walks the plank.

HANG 'ER DOWN.

They're On The Run!

Keep Them Running, Boys and Hang 'Er Down Till Thursday!

The Star and its associate newspapers are beaten to a frazzle. The Government candidates for the West End are worrying themselves sick. The whole Government is looking with anxious eyes at the stampede which has been forced on its candidates. The game is up for them and they know it. They had their chance and now they must go. Meanwhile there is jubilation and rejoicing in the Liberal-Labor camp and the one cry heard on all sides and from every mouth is "Hang 'Er Down!" The fight in the West End is over. The Liberal-Labor party has won. All that remains is the polling of the votes. The victory is won and all we have to do is "Hang 'Er Down!" till Thursday. They're licked boys, and we will keep 'em licked.

Kerosene Oil Shortage.

Owing to a shortage of Kerosene Oil, people in Conception Bay who have not electric light in their houses (over 50% of the people) are obliged to go to bed at dark. Some shipments of oil ordered over a month ago for Bay Roberts and adjacent places are hung up somewhere, and the people are not too well pleased at the prospect before them. Reports have come from Whitehouse section that expected feed for horses at logging has not arrived and in consequence the animals are starving and will have to be shot. Truly Tory times are hard times.

Keen interest aroused among the diners by these announcements was not, however, rewarded by any sensational statements when the Admiral finally arose to speak. He refrained from all personalities and the only direct reference he made to his recent testimony before the Senate Committee in Washington, was the statement that he was "embarrassed to find himself referred to by a clever correspondent as the best British Admiral in the American Navy."

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE UNFORGIVABLE SIN.

Who was it said "We can forgive anyone more easily than the man who has done us a favor?" I cannot recall, but that does not matter. Whoever he was, he certainly knew human nature.

It takes a big nature to feel genuine gratitude—and keep feeling it.

Two Kinds of Debts.

How a man treats his financial debts is one of the tests of his character. How he treats his debts of gratitude is another. And for 10 men who pass the first test with 100 per cent marks I think there is not more than one man (or woman) who will get 100 per cent on the second.

I have two friends who are brothers and who have recently become embittered towards each other.

Did one of them do a mean thing to the other? No—he did him a great favor. The offender was the older brother. He set his younger brother up in business, and after he had gotten him started, he gave hours of his time to advice and suggestions, as he had been in the same business for some years.

Both Sides of the Medal.

The younger brother is on his feet now and they have quarreled. "He was always wanting me to thank him for what he did for me," says the younger brother. "Wouldn't he know I was grateful? Doesn't it stand to reason? When I asked him for his advice, didn't that show I valued it? Did I need to say so in so many words? Besides, I've worked mighty hard for my success night and day, and I think I owe more to myself for it than to anyone else."

Says the older brother: "I didn't do anything for him that I wasn't glad to do, but I would have liked to feel that he felt grateful. If he had just said now and then to me, or to someone else in my presence, how much it had meant to him, I would have been more than satisfied. But he almost never did. And like a fool, I used to make him—and then it was all off. He's bound he won't be grateful now, and he's got it all fixed up in his mind that I didn't do very much after all, and that in some ways he would have gotten on better without me."

One is Sorry for Both.

One is so sorry for both the brothers, and one understands something how both of them feel. For while most of us have suffered from the person who never seems grateful for what we try to do for him, we have also suffered from the person who is always asking for gratitude.

Of course, the really fine and beautiful way to give is without any thought of praise or gratitude, freely and naturally, as the sun gives us heat, or the earth gives us sustenance. But only the very greatest people and mothers ever reach and stay long on these heights. And I shouldn't be, to his disgrace, An' he will find it, like as not, Behind some radiator hot.

HOW TO REST VARICOSE VEINS.

Douglas H. Stewart writes in the Medical Council: "When a person with a varicose leg goes to bed, he usually sits upon the bed, and draws his leg in after him. The veins of that leg are dilated and remain more or less so for hours, therefore the vein walls do not rest. Let that person go to bed, hoist his feet up in the air, the higher the better, let him keep them there for five minutes, and let him lower them slowly to the recumbent position. The veins are empty and the vein walls rest. After a few weeks of this exercise many patients declare that their whole sleep is more restful."

Household Notes.

Knives can be sharpened on the emery on a safety match box.

No canned food should stand in the tin can after being opened.

Cold hotcakes can be cut very fine and beaten into the fresh batter.

A homemade wood box is a handy thing in the kitchen, or sun porch. Be sure that the water is boiling before pouring it over meat to stew. One pound of molasses counts as three-quarters of a pound of sugar.

Old-fashioned gingerbread is one of the cakes which requires no sugar.

Plain furniture and simple curtains are great labor savers in the home.

Mincing parsley stirred into the mashed potatoes makes a pleasant flavor.

If furnace and pipes are covered with asbestos a good deal of heat will be saved.

Put a piece of apple in the cake box with the gingerbread, and it will not dry.

Even when the sugar shortage is less serious it is wise to be sparing of the sugar.

BUD'S HAT.

It's funny 'bout a feller's hat—He can't remember where it's at. Or where he took it off, or when. The time he's wantin' it again. He knows just where he leaves his shoes.

His sweater he won't often lose, An' he can find his rubbers, but He can't tell where his hat is put.

A feller's hat gets anywhere. Sometimes he'll find it in a chair, Or on the sideboard, or maybe it's in the kitchen, just where he gave it a toss beside the sink. When he came in to get a drink, An' then forgot—but anyhow He never knows where it is now.

A feller's hat is never where He thinks it is when he goes there; It's never any use to look For it upon a closet hook. Coz it is always in some place It shouldn't be, to his disgrace, An' he will find it, like as not, Behind some radiator hot.

A feller's hat can get away From him most any time of day, So he can't ever find it when He wants it to go out again; It hides in corners dark an' grim An' seems to want to bother him. It disappears from sight somehow—I wish I knew where mine is now.

Important!

Every man starting out in business will have to go over a hard road and find out its turnings for himself. But he need not go over his road in the dark if he can take with him the light of other men's experience.

Grand Duke Nicholas

LEADING VERY QUIET LIFE IN ITALY.

At Sant Margherita in Italy is living Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholavitch, former commander-in-chief of the Russian army, and his brother, Grand Duke Peter, and their wives.

To a correspondent of the Associated Press the Grand dukes said: "We desire on our past life, on our experiences, on all we have left, that silence should reign. This is our dearest wish, our most fervent request."

"We have come to Italy," Grand Duke Nicholas said, "in this fairylike corner of the world, on the beautiful, smiling Gulf of Sant Margherita, seeking only peace and repose for our spirits and our nerves. We have determined not to talk with anybody on past sad events. All the tortures we endured must, for the outside world, be hidden in our own breasts. The only request we make is that our silence and our sadness be respected."

"For this reason we lead most retired lives in this villa of Spinola, half hidden in the woods, spending part of the day on the delightful shore of the gulf and the remainder with my brother Peter and his wife Militza, who live nearby at a place known as Due Pini (Two Pines). Our whole life is circumscribed within these narrow limits."

Replying to an inquiry whether they would remain long in Italy, the grand dukes said:

"We have rented this villa until 1920, but between now and then many things may happen to decide us either to prolong or to shorten our stay here."

The Grand Duke and Grand Duchess Nicholas take their meals in their own villa and in the evening generally receive a visit from Grand Duke Peter and his wife. Every day Anastasia either drives with her husband or walks to the nearby village of San Michele, which is celebrated for handmade lace.

The correspondence of Grand Duke Nicholas is attended to by Baron Steel, who acts both as private secretary and master of ceremonies.

The visit of King Victor Emmanuel with the Russian grand dukes appears to clear up the mystery of the whereabouts of Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholavitch. He has been at one time or another reported dead, in captivity of the Bolsheviks, and living incognito in various places. The last report had him residing on Prinkipo Island in the Sea of Marmora, between Asiatic and European Turkey.

PAYING RENT.

Some kind of home you'll have to own, a humble shack of brick or frame, or one of stucco, mud or stone, if you would beat the landlord's game. For long sad years I paid my rent, and there'd be sunshine in my soul if I now had the coin that went to swell the landlord's gorgeous roll.

Motor Car and Motor Truck Owners.

I have a splendid equipment for general automobile work and can guarantee first class overhauling. Every engine tested under its own power before being put back in the car, thereby getting over the greatest enemy an engine can have, that is oil leaks. All oil leaks are detected and made right, consequently you can be sure of a good and lasting job. I also have a Hempy Cooper reabbing and reboring machine for crank shaft and connecting rods, which insures quiet running, as all bearings are in perfect line. With this equipment we can do work quickly and much more practical than heretofore.

Deep Sea Monsters.

Imaginative sea captains and their followers on returning to local ports entertain their friends and unsuspecting strangers with highly colored narratives of great sea serpents and other unfamiliar monsters of the deep that they have encountered on their voyages. That monsters of the deep exist to-day as in olden times is well known by science, but they are quite different from those described by the old sailors.

Americans Evade Lipton's Challenges.

New York, Jan. 8.—In a recent issue of the London Observer appears an article which gives a clarifying view of the situation with regard to the challenge by Sir Thomas Lipton for the America's Cup. The New York Yacht Club's spokesmen have possible changes in the rules, though it is believed that an amicable arrangement of all possible differences will be made in the near future.

Mainly About People.

Miss Helen C. Frick, who inherits many of her father's millions, is noted for her charities. She is 30. It was she who induced her father to purchase a park and recreation grounds for the people of Pittsburgh. She is specially interested in shop girls and has a vacation place for them at Prude's Crossing. She induced her father to rebuild a French town and give the people a new start.

Fashions and Fads.

Parlour silks are in larger and bolder patterns than ever. Changes in the silhouette are chiefly below the waist line. Bright-colored gumpes are worn with dark tailored costumes. The royal combination, velvet and ermine, is seen much of late. Novelty beads are made of tiny wooden beads crocheted in silk. Redingote styles are favored for the toulard dresses for spring. Tiny garlands of fruit or flowers are worn with the dance frock. Some of the latest slip-over jackets are made like middy blouses. Bright scarlet leather on blue serge is a delightful combination. A silver-thread sweater of heavy mesh has an old-pink satin collar. A coat of brick-red cloth has a novel collar and cuffs of Hudson seal. Black corsets are necessary for the very low-cut black evening gowns. An evening wrap of white caracul has collar and hem of Australian opossum. The chief attraction of many of the new gowns is the many small plaits. Most favored of all for the narrow girldie is the crisp, new waxed ribbon. Black velvet is very popular, and is used for suits, frocks and evening gowns. Many smart French frocks have separate straight collars which fasten in the back. A charming evening frock of white chiffon voile is belted and bound with gold cloth. Waxed satin and cords figure among the favorite trimmings for suits and street dresses.

Bulls Shamrock IV.

Sir Thomas then offered to challenge with a boat smaller than the full-sized ninety-footer, which is allowed under the old rule. The New York committee took up the attitude that if Sir Thomas challenged with a seventy-five-footer a boat of ninety-foot waterline length on equal terms—that is that the larger boat would not be called on to make any time allowance to the smaller craft. The attitude of the New York authorities was, of course, absurd, but it served the purpose of postponing another contest for the cup for the time being. Not to be beaten after sundry other proposals had been made, Sir Thomas Lipton ultimately issued a

If OXO Cubes save you only 5 minutes per day—that means the tremendous saving of about 30 1/2 hours in the course of a year! Reason enough for using OXO Cubes if that was the only reason. But they do more than save time; they save the expense of meat—make other foods go farther—and build up and maintain the health of the whole family.
