Lord Cecil's Dilemma
—OR—
The Picnic
—in—
Woodall Forest

CHAPTER XI.

He turned the horse into a magnificent avenue of pines, and a minute later a couple of servants were in charge of the dogcart, and the two men jumped to the ground, vigorously stamping their feet to increase the blood circulation, for the day was bitterly cold.

"We couldn't wait lunch for you," said Stanhope, as they passed into the hall, "but you will find your apartments ready for you, and you can order just what you like, and enjoy it yourself. I haven't told Lady Stanhope that you were coming, but I must let her know before dinner. My mother, you know," he added, by way of explanation. "Come along, I will show you your rooms. My valet will then look after you. We shall not talk business to-day."

Herbert Gardner followed Lord Cecil up a magnificent flight of marble stairs, through several arched corridors as broad as an ordinary street, whose walls were covered with pictures from floor to ceiling.

At length they were met by a deeper, middle-aged man, a perfect gentleman's gentleman, courteous, affable when desired, and always self-possessed.

"Hartley," said Lord Cecil, "this is Mr. Gardner. Look after him well. His luggage won't be here for an hour or two. I'll see you at dinner, if not before," he added, turning to Gardner. "My man is a gem in his way. Just tell him what you want, and it's done! If he gets in your way by being zealous in his attentions, kick him out."

Not a muscle of the valet's face relaxed, although he heard all that his master had said.

The barister smiled, and Lord Cecil turned and left him, while Hartley awaited commands in respectful silence.

Gardner was assisted out of his ulster, his wraps were put away, and he found himself in a handsome sitting-room, warming his hands before a ruddy sea-coal fire.

"Hartley," he said, "I have tasted neither food nor drink since seven o'clock this morning."

CUTICURA HEALS LARGE ERUPTIONS
On Face, Sore and Disfiguring, In Blotches and Burned.

"Small pimple-like eruptions came first on my face. They were sore and disfiguring, and were also large and red. They festered and came to a head, and they were in blotches and burned."

"I had these on my face for about a month before I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I could find the pimples getting better after a few days' treatment, and I used one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment when I was healed."

(Signed) Miss Florence Thayer, Wright, Quebec.

Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Tablets promote and maintain skin purity, skin comfort and skin health when used as directed.

Prepared by J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass., U.S.A.

"Yes, sir."

Hartley bowed himself away, and in ten minutes a footman had supplied all that Gardner had mentioned. He made a comfortable meal, and when the footman and the empty platters were gone, he told Hartley that he intended having a nap.

He slept until four o'clock, and the instant he rose from his couch the valet appeared and announced that his luggage had come. Not only had it arrived, but an entire suit had been well aired, and Gardner went to his dressing-room to take his bath and dress.

A little before six Lord Cecil came in to see how he was getting along. "Quite ready, I see," he laughed. "Yes; but don't let me monopolize your man."

"I prefer to attend to myself; I must get used to it, you know! I want you to come downstairs and be introduced to Lady Stanhope before we go into dinner. It's deuced awkward meeting strange people at the dinner table. There's nobody here to-day but Lady Craythorne and her daughter."

"Craythorne? I think I met a member of the family at Emden Hall a few days since," exclaimed Gardner. "Yes? That was Ada, the eldest daughter—a tall handsome girl. Make a fine woman, won't she? I didn't know that you had seen Hastings so recently; but you always were after the Damon and Pythias order. How did you find him?"

"Not at all well," replied Gardner, guardedly.

"No? I'm sorry for that. He and I fell out over a lady. We were both in love with her, but I have withdrawn my claim. I was surprised to hear from Lady Craythorne only this very day that he has engaged himself to Ada."

Gardner started, and with difficulty suppressed the exclamation that rose to his lips. He could not believe it; no, there must be some mistake.

He followed Lord Cecil downstairs, and when he entered the drawing-room a tall old lady, with white hair, came forward to acknowledge the introduction made by her son. She resembled Lord Cecil in no respect; her manners were quiet and full of grace and dignity; her eyes keen and intelligent; her very atmosphere was pervaded with refinement.

It was at once apparent that she was favorably impressed by her son's friend, for until recently he had been in the habit of bringing men to the Towers with whom she could not possibly associate.

LADY IRIS' MISTAKE; —or the—
Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER I.

An old gray church, half hidden with trees. Round the stone porch, in letters worn with age, ran the quaint legend, "To pray best is to love best." In the cool shade one bright May morning a young girl stood with her face turned to the legend.

"To pray best is to love best," she said to herself. "Ah me, is it true?" It was a pale beautiful face, the eyes were heavy with unshed tears, and the expression was one of happiness mingled with fear.

A footstep sounded under the limes. The girl turned from the contemplation of the legend, and her eyes brightened as she saw a tall handsome man coming quickly toward her—brightened and then drooped.

"My darling," he said eagerly, "you are first. You must have risen early."

"I could not sleep," she whispered—"I was so frightened!"

"Frightened! What nonsense! What have you to fear?"

"What will the world say? What will my aunt say? I am really afraid."

"You must not be. We will leave here at once and go to Italy. Have no fear. See what I have brought for you!" He placed in her hand a bunch of lovely white lilies, gathered while the dew lay on them. "Forget all your fears; we will go where no one will know us or think of us, and we can live for love. Let me see you smile once before we go into the church."

A bright smile lighted up her face, and then they entered.

Half an hour passed, and once more the man and the girl stood in the porch, with clasped hands—husband and wife now; once more she looked at the old legend. Her face was as pale as the lilies she carried. He kissed the low brow and the white lips.

"You will meet me at the station," he said gently. "We have not many minutes to spare."

"I will be there in a few minutes," she promised, and disappeared under the drooping lime-branches.

In the vestry of the little church a clergyman stood looking at the marriage register, and the names upon which his eyes rested upon these—"Hugo Fayne," "Isabel Hyde."

For many years Hugo Fayne, Earl of Caledon, had withdrawn from the fashionable world. He had been abroad, and when he returned to England, had shut himself up in his palatial residence, Chandos. At first people had discussed his absence from society, had wondered at it, and then had gradually forgotten it. But now Fayne House in Belgravia was reopened, refurbished, and redecorated in the most superb fashion. And there was a rumor that Lady Iris Fayne, the only daughter and sole heiress of the Earl of Caledon, was at the next Drawing Room to be presented to the queen. In society the rumor caused a sensation for three reasons—first, there had been a dearth of beauties lately; secondly, much had been said of the loveliness and pride of the heiress of Chandos; thirdly, unlike those of most noble families, the estates were not entailed. Failing sons, the daughters of the House of Caledon could succeed to them, the only condition being that when a daughter married her husband should take the name of "Fayne." It was well known that when her father died Lady Iris would be mistress of magnificent Chandos, of Fenton Woods, and of Fayne House—a glorious inheritance.

Lady Iris had been educated abroad, and was in her seventeenth year when she returned to England. The earl knew then that a change must come. He must give up his wanderings and his pleasant bachelor habits for the sake of his beautiful daughter.

Madame La Motte, who had superintended the completion of her education, had written to the earl, saying that the Lady Iris "Fayne" was now of an age to be removed from school and introduced to the world. The earl was half pleased, half puzzled. He went at once to Paris; and he owned to himself, when he saw the rare and dainty loveliness of his daughter, that she was ready for introduction to the great world.

To his critical eyes there was a little of the school-girl about her; but that would be easily remedied. He would travel with her for some months through Germany, Italy, and Spain. He did so, and in April returned to Chandos, intending to go up to town in May. While abroad it had struck him that she must have a chaperon for his fair and dainty daughter. He wrote to a distant kinswoman, a Mrs. Bellew, and asked her if she would give up her home for a few years and take up her abode with Lady Iris. Mrs. Bellew was only too willing, and it was arranged that she should be at Chandos when the travelers returned.

Mrs. Bellew had heard much of Chandos—it was considered to be one of the largest and handsomest mansions in England—but even she was startled by its size and magnificence. Noble avenues of ancient elms and ivy wreathed oaks led up to it, a park that was one of the finest in England surrounded it, and the river Rille, a broad and beautiful stream, ran through the estate. Chandos had been originally built by one of the Tudor kings, as a place where he could enjoy some rest and respite from the "cares that creep within the crown."

He gave it to his friend and favorite, Baron Fayne, and bestowed upon him the title of Earl of Caledon. So the Caledons of Chandos had for many generations been foremost in his land, and every honor had been lavished on them.

Why Does A Cup of Tea Taste Better?

Some of the "kill joys" will tell you it is imagination. But you mustn't mind them for that is what they lack.

The joys of trout are not for them. The music of the salmon reel they will never know. The beauty of the berry patch, the red of the partridge berry, the blue of the whort berry and the satisfaction of the well filled basket are not for them.

Even the beauty of our Newfoundland scenery, the glory of the Topsail sunset will leave them cold. But let us forget them and let us make for the old Southside Hill, now carpeted with the green and red of the partridge berry, or out to Topsail, or up to Manuels River, or let us make for the old "Cow Path" leading to beautiful Holyrood (and along the said "Cow Path" the whorts never grew thicker than they do this year) and let us "boil the kettle", and I bet you it will be a good "cup of tea", unless your grocer has done you dirty altogether. For the secret of it is, you steep the tea as soon as the kettle boils, and any old tea will taste pretty good, I'll bet you.

But it is just as well to take the best tea with you, it doesn't cost much more. The last time we were out we had a splendid tea and it only cost us 65c. lb. It had a sort of artistic name—"Mount View". We bought it at Henry Blair's. They had another good tea there at 50c. per pound, but the clerk said—"the best is the best", and we believe him.

Freshly boiled water is the secret of the cup of tea you drink out camping, fishing, berry picking or picnicking, but it is just as well to have the best tea.

You can get it for 65c. per lb. at Blair's "Mount View", that is the slogan.

AUSTRIA'S SERIOUS FLIGHT.

VIENNA, Aug. 23. Chancellor Seipel's sudden visits to Prague, Berlin and Rome are said, in well informed circles here, to mean the determination of the Austrian Government to force events and bring the country's situation to a precipitate head rather than continue a drifting policy. It is understood the Chancellor will flatly inform the Premiers of these three countries that collapse is morally certain and imminent. He will point out the danger of this eventuality to the neighbouring states and ask them what action they are prepared to undertake, singly or jointly, when the crash comes; whether they will interfere, and if so how. Upon Seipel's return to Vienna he is expected to convene the National Assembly and lay the whole situation before it. Spontaneous demonstration by unemployed workmen yesterday morning betrayed the high tension now existing in Vienna. Iron window shutters crashed, shut as by signal, and the populace faded from the streets.

SUN'S SUN SHINING.

PERKIN, Aug. 23. The Republican Cabinet announced to-day that President Li Yuan Hung was willing to resign in favor of Sun Yat Sen, deposed head of the South China Government, provided Parliament approves such action.

ANTHRACITE STRIKE CONTINUES.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22. Peace in the United States soft coal territory had spread to Illinois, Iowa and Indiana. The recent Cleveland settlement plan, negotiated between the International Union United workers and operators from seven states, was the basis for agreements in Illinois to-day and Iowa yesterday. The Department of Labor at Washington estimates that within a week bituminous coal production will reach nine million tons weekly. The Cleveland settlement provides for the old contract which expired on March 31st last to be effective until March 31st, 1923 with provision for fact-finding commissions, the personnel to be approved by President Harding, and the appointment of a sub-commission at a joint meeting of operators and miners at Cleveland on October 2nd next, to evolve a method of negotiating wage scales. Negotiations which had been expected to result in a settlement of the anthracite coal strike were broken off to-night and peace in the hard coal regions is apparently as far off as when 155,000 miners quit work on April first in response to a suspension order issued by officials of the United Mine Workers.

TWENTY PER CENT INCREASE FOR STEEL WORKERS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22. Three big United States steel corporations, employing normally 300,000 workers, to-day announced a twenty per cent. wage increase for all day laborers in manufacturing plants. The United States Steel Corporation took the lead, but was quickly followed by Midvale Steel, Ordnance Company and Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company. It is generally believed in financial circles that all important independent steel firms would announce increases within a few days. News of the increase came as a surprise to the financial district. No explanation of the increase is given by the steel corporations. However, it is known that the Immigration Law has cut off the supply of unskilled workers which formerly drifted to iron and steel centres. Resumption of coal mining and an increasing demand for laborers in other industries, combined with unexpected business revival this fall, are reported to have caused apprehension among mill managers, who fear higher prices elsewhere would cause sufficient desertions to hamper operations. Increase will bring the rate for day laborers in the United States Steel Corporation from thirty to thirty-six cents an hour, and swell the Company's yearly payroll by thirty-five million dollars on basis of full time.

WILL NOT RESTORE SENIORITY TO STRIKERS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23. The majority group of the Association of Railway Executives, by a vote of 254 to 4, to-day rejected proposals of the Big Five Train Service Brotherhoods, that the carriers end the nation wide shopmen's strike by reinstating the men with seniority unimpaired, and the strikers, declared that the Association had closed the door to peace and voted for a lockout to smash unionism.

STRIKE'S UGLY PHASES.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22. At walkouts by trainmen on the Southern Railway, resulting in tie-ups in Northern Carolina, bombings, beatings and investigations of alleged wreck plots marked the progress of the Rail Shopman's strike pending, the New York meeting to-morrow of rail heads and leaders of transportation Brotherhoods, mediators for the striking shopmen.

ONE WAR ENDED.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 23. Sun Yat Sen, leader of the Southern China faction, announced to-day that peace reigns again between North and South, and that "war is ended."

Burning of the Impetueux.

The British 74-gun ship Impetueux—one of Lord Howe's prizes in the Battle of the "Glorious First of June" and, with the exception of the Sans-Pareil, the finest and most esteemed ship among them—caught fire on August 24, 1794, while lying in Portsmouth Harbour, the flames spreading with such rapidity as to threaten the destruction of the whole dockyard. The inhabitants of the town were so much alarmed at the ship's nearness to the powder magazine, that they fled in every direction. The French prisoners in Portchester Castle—amounting to nearly five thousand—evinced feelings of the opposite kind; they shouted, "Vive la Republique!" and sang the "Marseillaise" hymn all the time the flames were raging. To their disappointment, however, the proper precautions had been taken, and the Impetueux after burning to the water's edge, drifted clear of the ship in the morning, and grounded upon the mud on the west side of the harbor.

France and Germany

That France is irrevocably committed to make Germany pay for the wilful devastation of French territory during the war is indicated by recent news service dispatches via Canadian Press from Bar le Duc, where on Monday was opened the General Council of the Department of the Meuse, which was addressed by Premier Poincare, who pointed out that rather than depart from this fixed intention France will act alone, in other words whether such action is pleasing to Britain or not. The French position is defined something after this manner. France won little but the return of the provinces of Alsace-Lorraine, of which she was ruthlessly dispossessed by Germany in 1871. In the course of the late war her country was laid waste: her most prosperous cities and towns destroyed; her industries were ruined and in addition she has been obliged to bear the imposition of a burden of debt which she finds it difficult to shoulder even without the expenditure required for the making good and restoration of areas devastated by the enemy.

Considering this, how, it may be asked, can France make any display of generosity toward Germany? Justice to its own first, is the lead which every country must take, and if it is to live at all amongst the nations its prime duty is to its own people, and a recovery of that which they lost in common. So France. That which the Germans stole they must not be permitted to retain for their own enrichment. Furthermore they must make good the sum of the amount of damage they wantonly inflicted. Germany did not give France any breathing space in 1871, when so many billions of francs were demanded as a war indemnity by the then conquerors. The last German bayonet only disappeared across the border when the final franc had been accounted for, and France has not forgotten, and may surely, in the present instance, be pardoned for insisting "that Germany shall not be helped to a speedy economic recovery, at her further expense, while her people drag out a long and slow, if not uncertain convalescence at their own charge." To preserve her own entity as a nation France must insist on the payment by Germany of the sum set down in the reparations demands. The proposal of a moratorium in favor of the latter country terrifies French financiers, for they perceive that unless restitution is made by the Berlin Government, the case of their country will be desperate indeed. For France is financially moribund, and it is nothing to wonder at that the French Government and people are impatient over the propositions of considerations for Germany while they are in such extreme needs of assistance because, as a contemporary puts it, "of Germany's gross misdeeds."

The Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Bond P.C., K.C.M.G.

AN APPRECIATION.

Dear Sir—Having a few hours between trains, in a recent visit to your interesting country, my traveling companion and I availed ourselves of the opportunity of seeing the charming little village of Whitbourne. I confess that the real attraction was the fact of it being the home of your most distinguished statesman—Sir Robert Bond.

Whitbourne is one of the brightest inland spots of your land hills and dales. From the station one can obtain a fine view of the farm and palatial mansions of the former Premier. The snow-white residence on one side of the blue little lake, with the evergreen hillslopes on the other makes one think of a mountain chalet in Switzerland.

The shadowy inlets of the wood-girt lake speak eloquently of the wars fought ready to "play the line" at the enthusiastic angler. At the further end the dense thickets give excellent cover to the half domesticated partridge. The patted paths near the clearings give unmistakable evidence of the finest possible sport in "rabbit runs." In a sequestered spot, behind the "byre and the bourne," is a miniature lake, teeming with brook trout, where thousands of spawns were deposited several years ago. The illustrious proprietor of this earthly dwelling place has confederated forces both divine and human to make it idyllic. The hills and forests, the brooks and the lakes are delicately frescoed by the hand of man, in fact the whole environment displays such a carnival of beauty that an Athenian would call it a place "fit for the gods."

Enclosed in this utopian habitation lives the Nelson of the political life of his native island. Meandering down the winding road toward the pasture fields, we came suddenly upon the very man whose premises we had been admiring. We were so abashed for a moment to be face to face with the proprietor, that speech left us. Our embarrassment did not continue long, for almost instantly we were greeted with a hearty "good morning sirs." The voice was rich and tender and the salutation was followed by a beaming smile from a fresh handsome face. The man before us was of medium size and was clad like an English Squire. He possessed a good supply of wavy grey hair and wore a beard trimmed in Vandeyke style. Sir Robert Bond appeared to us as a man in the vicinity of 65 years of age and exceedingly well preserved. He seems quite happy in his temporary retirement from political activities. Both in personal appearance, manner and speech, Sir Robert exhibited marks of culture to a very high degree.

The interior of his mansion is a veritable political shrine. Caskets of exquisite design, valued at thousands of dollars, containing elegant scrolls, adorn fine mahogany tables. These scrolls and their golden caskets are the gifts from Mayors conveying to him the "freedom" of many of the cities of the Motherland. Cabinets of rare relics, large cases of the best books and elegant articles of furniture occupy a large part of the area of the spacious rooms. Fine heads of forest game, with their great spreading antlers look down upon the visitor from the walls of the long hallways.

The colonial style of architecture lends itself favorably to the large sun parlors which run along the east and south sides of the house. The hall, the reception rooms and the dining room open out in these sun parlors. Throughout the whole dwelling the abundance of flowers of rare color and form give an almost tropical tone to the general appearance of the interior. A stroll through the flower garden was followed by an exceedingly appetizing lunch. A few hours were then spent in the rest room where we engaged in delightful conversation. We found Sir Robert very communicative and well informed on every subject we approached. He seemed most at home, however, in international politics. Our reference to his long and faithful services to his native country brought a slight flush to his face, and yet he seemed free to admit that he had guided the affairs of his native land with conscientious and patriotic devotion. We carried away the impression that his services were again required in the legislative halls, he would be able to demonstrate that his "arm had not lost its cunning."

After such an enjoyable fellowship, it was almost an affectionate farewell we exchanged as we parted at the foot of the garden path. If in any measure these lines of Foss apply to Sir Robert:—

"There are hermit souls that live withdrawn In the place of their self-content; There are souls like stars that live apart In a pillowless firmament."

I am sure it must be due to the bachelor life he has chosen to live and not to any lack of the spirit of genial sociability or genuine hospitality. Mr. Editor: I consider your little village of Whitbourne to be con-

Airman Flies From Wreck of Raleigh

Major Cotton Boards Yacht in Straits of Belle Isle for Breakfast—Still Hope That Raleigh May be Salvaged.

Flying from the scene of the wreck of H.M.S. Raleigh, Major F. Sydney Cotton saw his yacht the Hawke making for Forteau, and coming down alongside, he made fast and went on board for breakfast. This was a feat in line with the many other aerial stunts of this intrepid aviator.

Seen by a Telegram representative this morning, Major Cotton gave some hitherto unpublished details of the wreck of the big cruiser at Forteau, and he also stated that there was a possibility that she would be salvaged.

SWAM ASHORE WITH LINE.

As soon as it was seen that the ship was hopelessly wrecked, a boat was sent off in charge of a midshipman, with a light line attached to a heavier one. So severe was the sea, however, that the boat was swamped and eleven of the crew were drowned or died of exposure after gaining the shore.

SAVED BY RAFTS.

To get boats ashore was an impossibility, and the round rafts which were carried on deck were utilized. These were pulled up to the side of the ship, and some forty men were put on each. They were then hauled ashore with the line which Hooper had brought over.

FLYING ABOVE CLOUDS.

From the time that White Bay was reached, no sign of the ground was seen until the machine approached the Hawke Bay, practically the whole of the flight being made above the clouds. The distance from Botwood to Hawke Bay is a little over 130 miles and this was covered in a very short time. The landing at Hawke Bay was made in a gale of wind but the machine was safely brought to rest and was moored at Parson's Cove an anchor being dropped.

TOOK AERIAL PHOTOS.

Major Cotton stayed at Point Amour for three days, through a strong gale with rain, but the machine was unharmed at its mooring. Later pictures were taken from the air of the Raleigh and the yacht Hawke was ordered to proceed from Hawke Bay to Porteau with further photographic gear, and complete the pictures from the water. This work would be done by Major Hemming, who is associated with the Aerial Survey Company. The yacht was taken north by Capt. Olsen last Tuesday on the same day that Major Cotton left Forteau.

LANDED BY YACHT.

Passing down the Straits, the airman saw below him the little yacht had decided to go aboard her for breakfast. He came down and landed a few feet away, and had soon made fast to her stern. Going aboard, he made a hearty meal, and after handing the command of the yacht over to Oates, the Chief Engineer, he flew back to Hawke Bay, taking Capt. Olsen with him. Leaving Hawke Bay yesterday, Major Cotton with Mr. V. S. Bennett, flew to St. John's, making a beautiful landing on Quidi Vidon pond, in the view of thousands of citizens attracted to the pond by the noise of the machine's impending approach.

CHARTING FROM AIR.

Major Cotton told the Telegram that from the air, it was possible to see clearly through the water to a depth of 200 feet, and that all shoals and rocks could be easily discerned. Near Trinity Bay and Notre Dame Bay, several uncharted rockheads and channels were plainly seen. They were so plain, in fact, that they could be photographed and charted. Major Cotton hopes to be here a week, and he will then return to Botwood and Hawke Bay. He expects two or three machines to arrive about the end of the month. Mr. A. S. Butler's new Bristol plane has already arrived and is being erected at Botwood.

THE STORY OF THE WRECK.

Owing to the reticence which the Admiralty always shows in matters of this kind, full details of the cause of the wreck have not yet been made known. All that can be made public is that the Raleigh was carried by the strong incoming tide, which differs so frequently that it cannot be charted, and by a strong gale, further north than her navigators had calculated.

Michael Collins. THE IDOL OF HIS COUNTRYMEN. On Tuesday night in the beautiful, wild heather covered countryside near Macroom in the County Cork, Michael was killed by the hand of one of his own countrymen. But a week before he had been the chief mourner at the funeral of his friend Arthur Griffith, marching sadly along the weeping Dublin streets to Glasnevin at the head of the procession. And now he will follow along that route again and the multitude will weep at his passing too. Has any nation ever experienced tragedy like Ireland? The brave young men full of promise must follow the other leader of his country to the grave. He has borne a double burden since Arthur Griffith died, but yet he went straight from the grave to the front lines of battle. He was fighting Ireland's enemies, and he would not rest till his work was done. Full of enthusiasm and reckless bravery, for which Irish soldiers are famous, he must have been the idol of his new army. He was a leader in very truth as his death in action shows. He was a hero of a hundred fights, all tinged with an element of romance and chivalry. At one time he was the most wanted of the wanted men with a price of thirty thousand pounds upon his head, and yet he never shrank a danger. He was the very life of the old I.R.A. No wonder that a thousand stories of ingenious disguise and daring escapes have been woven around his magical name. But of his actual history very little is really known. He was a man of action in a circle of literary men, who in 1915 at the age of twenty six left his work as a Civil Servant in London to join the newly formed National Volunteers in Dublin. He fought in the Post Office during the Easter Rebellion of 1916, and after the general amnesty of 1917 became the organizer of the Intelligence Department of the Irish Republican Army. Like most of the other leaders of his time he was not personally known outside Dublin except amongst the I.R.A. commandants. When the truce came in June, 1921, he was the chief member of the "murder gang" to whose presence in London Mr. Lloyd George objected—but this objection was subsequently forgotten when the irresistible gaiety of "Mick" Collins burst upon the solemn scene in Downing Street. He did not leave Dublin last October with the other delegates. He left before them, thereby baffling a hundred photographers who had tried in vain to snap him. His youth, his courage, his fascinating explosive laugh, marked him as a man of the greatest promise; whilst the mystery that surrounded his deeds gave him a certain capacity for greatness with Hood or Rob Roy. He shared the burden of the Anglo Irish Negotiations with Arthur Griffith, and they were the real negotiators of the Irish side whilst Lloyd George and Lord Birkenhead represented England. He possessed the qualities that appealed to the Englishman, and was at the same time the most admired and most feared of all present day Irishmen. At the formation of the Provisional Government he became its leader, and in that capacity he displayed both the ability and zeal that stamped his military career. He was first in peace, and first in war, and even the tragedy of Tuesday night will not prevent his being said to be the first in the hearts of his countrymen. His enemies can feel no satisfaction at his death. Ireland's two greatest leaders of this generation are now dead. One man died in bed, and the other man died in battle, but each gave his life for his country. Once again, as so often before in Ireland's tragic story, the bells of Dublin will peal out the sad requiem and the streets be filled with weeping men and women. At this most critical juncture in Ireland's history, it must be asked "what is going to happen now?" The three trying years before the Treaty did not wreck such a havoc in Ireland as the past three months of civil war. There is every probability that there will now be a renewed effort to effect an arrangement between the remainder of the Irregulars and the National Army. Not everyone must feel that it is not over the dead body of their leader and hero that the Free State soldiers should surrender what they have already won. The memory of his remarkable courage and his personal magnetism will be their inspiration for the future. There will be no peace in "the most distressed country" while there are two armies, and while the single practical policy of the two great statesmen and heroes, Griffith and Collins remains unfulfilled. The darkest hour is before the dawn. Perhaps for Ireland the day is dawning when St. Malachy's prophecy will be true "That greater than all telling is the destiny that God has in store for Ireland the peerless."—W.J.B.

The Dual Drowning.

NEED FOR INVESTIGATION.

The search for the bodies of the victims of the dual drowning tragedy in Conception Bay has not yet been successful. The circumstances surrounding the accident and the loss of time in getting the news to town and in sending a boat to the rescue are so peculiar that an immediate investigation by the authorities is necessary. If, as seems probable, the two occupants of the capsized boat were afloat for several hours after the accident occurred, the blame for the delay in sending out a rescue party should be placed on the right shoulders, and efforts should be taken to see that similar inaction does not again occur in matters of life and death.

Some English firms, aware of this exchange situation, are facilitating payment in escudos for cargoes coming to our port. This state of things must continue at least as long as the decree of the Portuguese Government—which was intended to stabilize the exchange but which has merely made business maine in force. Garrulous.

(From Public Opinion.)
The reason given by Wundt why people don't talk, is because they have nothing to talk about. Sir Richard's case men, especially Sir Richard's case men, Mr. Coaker and Mr. Coaker over talkative gentlemen had the wisdom of animals how silent they might be.

Richard has been doing some over in England, he also did talking here in Newfoundland especially before and just previous to the elections.
Hypothesis may be a fine thing to do with as long as it does not clash with an established or demonstrable fact. Sir Richard's hypothetical idea may use words without regard to honesty and the consequences has run full against the fact that you cannot, the result is Sir Richard is landed completely in the meshes of his own garrulity.

Richard has been found out, his own foolish cackling has led to the discovery of his nest.
The Advocate says, "are people things to deal with?"
Richard has been found out, his own foolish cackling has led to the discovery of his nest.
The Advocate says, "are people things to deal with?"

Richard runs foul of many a modern fact in that tilt, and there thousands in this country to-day whose indignance gives the lie direct to the publishing statement.
Another fact against which this Ananias butts his front is that his government makes it a plea for the squandering of millions and the destruction of our country, that unemployment must be.

If there is no unemployment, as affirmed by our wandering Minister, why all the spending on unnecessary works?
Why the Road de Luxe? Why the Lake Road? Why the Road to the Lake? Why all the pit-prop and wood cutting at starvation prices? Why, above all, the immense attempt to stampede this country into a guarantee to the promoters of the so-called Humber?

Trial Concluded.
WHAT TAKES TIME TO CONSIDER
Following the conclusion of the trial of Joseph Burnstein for arson on Tuesday afternoon, Judge Morice announced that he would take time to consider his verdict. There was a dramatic moment during Tuesday's hearing, when the Judge informed Burnstein that he would not accept the plea of his son in the case of the evidence for the crown. Burnstein conducted his own defence. Henry Galpert was the first witness for the defence. He stated that he left Burnstein in the shop at 10.30 p.m., on the night of the fire. It is the usual for accused to leave the shop at 11.30 p.m. Another witness, Charles, said he left the shop with his father before 11 o'clock. He had to deliver a parcel, and arrived home after 11.30, and found his father having supper. Twenty minutes later a constable called to inform accused that his father was on fire. Under cross-examination, witness failed to corroborate his own story.

Following some cross firing with the Inspector General of Police, Burnstein addressed the Court on his own behalf, complaining that he was a martyr, and was the victim of jealousy. He went so far as to complain that he had been ruined by the people of St. John's. H. A. Winter, B.A., for the Crown, said the evidence of witness with respect to the time Burnstein had been seen leaving the store, and the peculiar nature of the fire itself looked suspicious while Burnstein's own statements were contradictory. He thought the evidence for the prosecution was incontrovertible. The Judge declared that he could not accept the defence and would deliver judgment later.

Obituary.

ROGER CALLAHAN.
The passing of Mr. Roger Callahan occurred at his home, LeMarchant Road, yesterday afternoon after a short illness. For the past 40 years deceased conducted a tinsmith store at the corner of Waldegrave and Water Streets, and during that period he supplied extensively for the fishery. In addition to his business activities he took a keen interest in the political affairs of the country. In 1897 he was returned for the District of Placentia and St. Mary's which he represented till 1900 when he again contested the district, but was unsuccessful. During the World War his sons, Roger and William were members of "Ours" the former making the supreme sacrifice at Beaumont Hamel and the latter was taken a prisoner at Monchy and was in the hands of the enemy for some twenty months while Walter enlisted with the Canadians and saw active service in France and Belgium. Left to mourn are a widow, three sons, Walter and William of this city, and John, residing in Montreal; also four daughters: Mary at home and Madeline at New York, to all of whom the Telegram extends sympathy in their bereavement. The funeral takes place at 2.30 p.m. to-morrow, interment being at Belvidere Cemetery.

MURRAY'S LINIMENT USED BY VETERINARIANS.

Don't Delay Another Day!

The time to fix your roof is now—while the weather is warm.

If you put felt or rubber roofing on your roof in warm weather it will fit snugly to your roof, won't crack, won't bag and will give you greater satisfaction. DO IT NOW.

If your roof is in fair condition, just small cracks here and there, fix these cracks with LASTY-GUM—it stops leaks. Lasty Gum is sold in 5-pound pails, at $1.50 each.

If your roof is in good condition, give it a coat of Special Roof Coating, which will keep it good for another two or three years. Remember, Prevention is better than Cure.

Don't wait for your roof to leak; prevent it from leaking by coating it now. A 5-gallon can of Special Roof Coating will cost you only $3.50.

If your roof needs a new covering we recommend VULCANITE ROOFING, which we sell in full 36 inch size rolls to cover 100 square feet at $5.00 per roll; complete with nails and cement. Vulcanite is made and guaranteed by the Beaver Board Company.

We can also supply VULCANITE ROOFING in 18 inch widths, containing a double supply of nails and cement at $5.40 per roll, to cover 100 square feet.

Congo Rubberized Roofing full size rolls to cover 100 square feet, $3.75 per roll, complete with enough nails and cement to put on your roof immediately.

We can also supply you with Red or Green Sanded Roofing, but we do not recommend it. Vulcanite either 36 inch or better still 18 inch is more durable.

Hexagon Rubberized Shingles are better than wood shingles; they require no painting, won't turn up with the wind and are absolutely fire-proof; $13.00 per square of 100 square feet. You can see them on dwelling house No. 86 Duckworth Street; they're worth looking at.

We also have in stock Builders' Roofing Pitch in small barrels; Paving Pitch, Coal Tar in tierces and barrels; Pine Tar, Leptyne, a turpentine substitute, in 5-gallon cans for painters' use, at $5.00 per can.

We have just received one thousand rolls of Barrett's Red Seal Board Roofing Felt.

THE LOVE PIG.

"Love that asketh love again Finds the barter naught but pain. Love that giveth in full store Aye receives as much and more."

I know a woman who is considered by most of the people who know her as extraordinarily unselfish. And so she is in many ways. But on the other hand she is extraordinarily selfish about one thing. You would never guess what it is. Not clothes, nor jewelry, nor any material possession. Not even about having her own way. The one thing this woman is selfish about is love. She is absolutely greedy about getting all the love she can.

You don't call that selfishness? You call it a commendable ambition?

I don't agree with you. I think it is possible to cause almost as much unhappiness by love greediness as by any other kind. And I think this woman does.

Always Love Greedy.

It has always been so with her. If she had a friend she wanted all of that friend. She hated to hear that friend speak cordially of other friends; she hated to have her have a good time with other friends. She wanted not only to be first in her friend's affections but second and third and fourth as well.

In her family it was the same. She had a favorite sister and she did all she could to cut that favorite sister out from the rest of the family and have her for her own. I don't think she realized that she was doing it. But she loved her sister and was eager to do everything she could for her and in return she wanted an extraordinary amount of affection. And to attain this end she unconsciously (I know she would never have done it consciously) tried to make the sister feel that the other sisters did not care as much for her, and that she could not care so much for them.

She Would Think You Insane.

She is married now and, as in inevitable, her love greediness has intensified. She concentrates on her husband. She will do anything for him, sacrifice herself in any way for him, and she doesn't ask self-sacrifice

What is News.

(From the "Musings of Moses" in Newspaperdom.)

Recently this question came up from one of these somebodies who want to know something more: "What is News?" The Bulletin of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association brought it to light by reprinting an editorial from the Nashville Tennessean. Dana's definition was quoted—"If a dog bites a man it is not news, but if a man bites a dog, it is." The Tennessean editor took issue with Dana, saying it all depended upon who the man was that the dog bit. Then there is the older definition that "news is any violation of the Ten Commandments," which is pretty accurate at that.

My definition of news, in a broad sense, is anything that arouses in the human breast those emotions that your good mother failed to teach you when you knelt at her knees. The people want to feed upon unclean fodder, and the papers give it to them. If you don't give folks what they want they will go to another dealer. Anything that stirs up the wigglers in the lolls will find a far greater audience than anything that stirs up the molecules in the mind. It is sad to admit, but true nevertheless

Corns Go

Just say Blue-jay to your druggist

The simplest way to end a corn is Blue-jay. A touch stops the pain instantly. Then the corn loosens and comes out. Made in a colorless clear liquid (one drop does it!) and in extra thin plaisters. The action is the same.

Pain Stops Instantly

that human nature is not inherently "moral," as that term is generally understood.

The biggest piece of news to the average man is his own name in print. A little item in the local column saying he has just returned from a trip to the next county, or has traded off his Ford and a cow for a new Dodge, is to him of far more importance than the Genoa Conference or the Irish farce.

After a reader's own vanity has been satisfied, he or she will greedily devour anything with a Hollywood date line. Hollywood is synonymous with nastiness, and a high percentage of modern news is so saturated with sex that it stinks. News also consists of calamity, pestilence, violence, crime, lawsuits, prize fights, scandal and the jargon of the flappers. It is news if somebody succeeds in cutting off an additional quarter of an inch from a lady's bathing suit without exposing the source of the human race.

Jack Dempsey wearing a monocle supplied by his press agent is a bigger piece of news than a proposed bridge across North River from New York to Jersey.

HOMESICKNESS.

Some day, to soothe my homesick soul, I'll go to Punktown-in-the-Hole. I have town where I was born; by night I dream of Punktown friends, and when the happy vision ends I wake, distressed, forlorn. I yearn once more to walk around the Punktown square, Bowling Park And Bus Traffic.

CANNING PUBLISHES CORRESPONDENCE.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—As in the publicity given to the matter of the buses running to and from Bowling Park, my name has been used in such a manner as to lead the public to think that I am only come to a realization of my duty to them within the past two weeks. I ask the benefit of space in your paper to put the matter in its proper light.

On or about the fourth of June, Mr. Davey was given a practical demonstration of the chance of accidents occurring in the vicinity of the entrance to the Park when a serious collision between the auto of Mr. Walter Vey and the carriage of Hon. George Kennel was barely averted—as a matter of fact, the headlight of Mr. Vey's car was smashed by the shaft of the carriage. Mr. Davey was near the spot at the time, and I distinctly remember his agreeing with my contention as to the danger of serious accident. Within twenty-four hours work was commenced on the roundabout. This is the roundabout which was condemned by the Inspector General two weeks ago, and later allowed by him to do the duty for which it was intended.

The roundabout was finished in the first week of July, and I have watched the manoeuvring of the buses there. I am not satisfied and numerous people with whom I have conversed, agree with me, that the greatest measure of safety is not provided by this cut de sac.

On Saturday, August 5th, I met by chance, the following gentlemen, Mr. W. B. Jennings, Hon. John Davey and Mr. S. Churchill, who were on a tour of inspection of the work done on the Asylum Road. We entered into conversation on the matter of securing a portion of the Asylum property for the purpose of widening the road at the entrance to the Park. During the conversation, Dr. Parsons, Supt. of the Asylum for the Insane, was called from his residence by Hon. Mr. Davey, and took an active part in the discussion. He suggested that the buses be made to turn at Molloy's Lane. I asked Mr. Jennings for his opinion and he stated that he had none to offer.

Following this conversation, I wrote to the Minister of Public Works, sending copies of my letter to the Inspector General and to Dr. Parsons. My letter and replies received follow:—

August 7th, 1922.
Following our conversation of Saturday, 5th inst., when in company with Hon. John Davey and Mr. Sam Churchill, you inspected the work recently done on the Asylum Road, I would herein state a few facts for your future consideration. Permit me to point out that, as a Minister of the Crown, responsible for the Department controlling Public Works, you should have an opinion to offer, particularly when such a question as the protection of the lives and property of citizens is under discussion, whereas I understood you to state distinctly that you had no opinion to offer respecting the alteration to the road, asked for in the interest of public safety. Now my opinion and the opinion of hundreds visiting Bowling Park, is that some day, perhaps not very far distant, a very serious if not a fatal, accident will occur, due to sufficient roadway not being provided to manoeuvre in safety to all concerned. When such an accident does occur I want myself distinctly understood as having sounded the warning note in time—as having referred the matter to those responsible, so that the burden of neglect will rest in its proper place, viz., with the Minister of Public Works and his Department. There are five buses operating between the city and Bowling Park, and on Sundays, holidays, and other days, they carry a large number of visitors to the Park. It is not an uncommon sight to see these five buses arrive at the Park within a few minutes of each other, and at the same time a number of privately owned motor cars, motor cycles, taxis, perambulators and horse drawn vehicles. The wonder is that we have not had a most serious accident long before this. It is absolutely impossible for the man in charge of bus, motor car or cab, to avoid sooner or later causing such an accident, and when it does occur, it will be due to the fact that those in authority have not provided the proper means of protecting the lives and property of citizens generally. The Asylum Road has already been widened from Waterford Bridge to the eastern boundary of the Asylum property. Now, why not extend the widening of the road to the entrance of the so-called roundabout? If the lifting and transplanting of the trees in this section is suggested as being the obstacle in the way of this project, I would here and now state, as one who knows, that these trees can be lifted and transplanted without harm to them. This being so, we are not called upon to consider this point further. On the other hand, were we to admit that every tree involved were to perish, it would indeed be very insignificant and unworthy of our thought when we consider that the lives of little children and hardworking mothers in quest of fresh air and sunshine, are in danger of being snuffed out by reason of those in authority not realizing the responsibility incumbent upon them in consequence of their official position. The absolute necessity of widening this section of the road demands your immediate attention.

Yours respectfully,
A. E. CANNING.

The following is the reply of the Minister of Public Works:—

August 9th, 1922.
Apparently you misunderstood my meaning. I had no intention of expressing any opinion at that particular time, but that does not imply that I had not formed one.

Yours truly,
W. B. JENNINGS.

It is worthy of note that the reply received by me as above, is a carbon copy of a pencilled letter written in the Minister's own writing.

The matter reached no further stage until Sunday, August 13th when the Inspector General ordered the discontinuance of the use of the roundabout by the buses and that they manoeuvre at Molloy's Lane. This order was complied with for the time being. But on the following Sunday, realizing the danger of this proceeding, the bus men refused to turn at Molloy's Lane. They are the men on whom rests the responsibility for the safety of their passengers, and I presume that the grounds for their action are quite sufficient to themselves. The implied insinuation of collusion between them and me in their refusal to take passengers under the conditions imposed upon them is altogether uncalled for. Their position is amply borne out by the fact that the report of the conference held on Sunday, August 21st, states that they were authorized to turn in the roundabout—a complete reversal of the order given them by the Inspector General just a week previous.

In connection with my letter to the Minister of Public Works, dated August 7th, I received the following communication from the Inspector General:—

August 19th, 1922.
I duly received your communication of 7th inst., respecting traffic conditions near Bowling Park. A few days afterwards I received a letter from the Minister of Public Works, in which he suggested the turning of the large trucks at the back of Molloy's Lane. Last Sunday I had the feasibility of this demonstrated, and I have reported to the Minister, and presume same is now receiving his consideration.

Yours truly,
CHAS. H. HUTCHINGS.

Inspector General of Constabulary. I have felt it necessary to publish this correspondence, because as I have said, my position was not fairly described in the articles that have appeared in the Press. I have treasured on your space to a very great extent, but I trust that the importance of the question will be sufficient warrant for me.

Thanking you for space, and trusting that I have made myself perfectly clear, I remain,
Yours truly,
A. E. CANNING.

Spruce Bud Worm.

INSECT DESTRUCTION OF FOREST AREAS.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—Permit me to commend the foresight which prompted your remarks last Saturday on the insect pest known as the Spruce Bud Worm. Your suggestion that all infested trees be cut out and burned appears to me most sensible. The best way to do that, I think, would be to permit the fire to run over the slash as it lies on the ground. This method of burning will insure the destruction of the larvae as well as any of the adult form of the insect that may be in existence in the burnt over areas. Spraying adjacent woods where the insect may be discovered and careful watching for other outbreaks will also insure safety. Had the Department of Agriculture taken active steps even last fall, when I informed them of the presence of this destructive insect, much valuable time might have been saved and much incipient damage averted. Action should have been taken then to discover whether or not other and more important areas are not also being ravished. The first fifteen minutes at a fire outbreak are the determining ones generally, so it is recognized by those who have to fight fires and protect property against its ravishes. In like manner the incipient stages of an invasion such as this one we are now dealing with are the fatal hours, the hours that call for vigilance and action.

The callous indifference displayed by Dr. Campbell when I personally advised him of the menace and showed him the moth last fall, shall ever remain with me, an evidence of gross incapacity for office on the part of one whose position demands, not indifference but intelligent alertness and active interest in all such matters, especially as they relate to a department over which he has control. At that time Dr. Campbell was most active in promoting the interests of the Humber Deal, and so we can understand why he would avoid anything which might throw doubt upon the wisdom of guaranteeing any concern toward those to whom the perpetuity of our forests is most vital.

In like manner the Advocate refrained from any reference to the Spruce Bud Worm menace then, and even now (when the Department is forced to take notice), that paper is silent.

This attitude of silence is most monstrous and shows plainly that the sole organ of the Government is more concerned about the successful issue of the Humber guarantee scheme than it is over the destruction of our forests.

I showed Mr. Mews samples of the moth stage of the pest and told him something of its life history and its destructive powers, but seemingly he was unmoved to any display of interest, for not a word did he say in his paper about it. Had I related some yarn about a dog fight, or how the wind had blown the top off a chimney, or something of a like nature, I have no doubt the tale would have received such space as its importance deserved, but who would want to engage in an entomological study or the study of such an abstruse question as the preservation of our forests. Why use up one's mental energy on such unimportant matters. The film-fanning of the public in the matter of the Humber Deal is of more importance and is much easier in its processes on the brain.

It is something at any rate to have at last aroused the Department even to sending Mr. Bayly to investigate something which requires not investigation but immediate action along the lines suggested by the Evening Telegram.

Permit me to say in conclusion that the infested area is more nearly forty acres than three or four as told in the Telegram. In my writing on this subject last year I said eight or ten acres was the area then affected. It has not lessened since, and I cannot understand the carelessness of those who now would by inference make out that my story was an exaggeration.

While we are on this subject let me say that another pest is showing itself, our larch (Juniper) is now being killed. Every larch in this part of the country is dying. A few years ago the larch of New Brunswick and neighbouring provinces was entirely destroyed. I presume by the same pest which is killing it here to-day.

Yours truly,
ARTHUR ENGLISH.

The Murder of Michael Collins.

Story of the Assassination--The Culmination of Several Attempts.

HOW COLLINS WAS KILLED.

LONDON, Aug. 22. Michael Collins, head of the Irish Provisional Government and Commander-in-Chief of the Irish National Army, was shot and killed at Bandon, County Cork, tonight, a few hours after he had been given an ovation by the people of Cork City, who for the first time saw the Free State leader in the uniform of a Commander-in-Chief. Several attacks have been made against the life of Michael Collins, head of the Provisional Government, Commander-in-Chief of the Irish Free State army. The latest attempt was a bombing outrage when his car was ambushed last Friday afternoon on the Dublin side of Stillorgan. The official communication issued in connection with this attack did not indicate whether Mr. Collins was in the machine at the time the driver was wounded and the car wrecked by a bomb, and more than a score of shots being fired in Dublin on April 17th. While Mr. Collins was on his way home after having addressed a meeting at Haas, County Kildare, he was attacked by a group of men, some with rifles, who rushed his car and opened fire. The Collins party returned the fire, and one of the assassins was captured. Collins was not injured. Mr. Collins, in addition to being Commander-in-Chief of the Free State army, was Finance Minister in the Dail Eireann Cabinet. He was one of those who succeeded in obtaining a temporary injunction in New York, on Monday, restraining Eamonn de Valera or his agents from withdrawing funds collected for the Irish Republican cause deposited in banks in New York city. It became necessary, in view of the recent operations of the irregular forces, for Collins to assume active charge of the Free State army in the field, and for some time past he had abandoned the civil back of the army, and returned to the military. Recent arrivals in London from Dublin declared that the assassination of Collins was forecasted in Ireland. It was planned to secure the removal of the sole remaining figure in the Provisional Government, and it was said to be also in part a measure of reprisal against the shooting of Harry J. Boland, the close associate of Eamonn de Valera, by Free State soldiers. The first fusillade from the irregulars caused no casualties. Collins and members of his party immediately jumped from their vehicles, took to cover, and engaged the attackers in a heavy fight, which lasted half an hour. Shortly before the assassins were beaten off, Collins, who had been fighting throughout the attack, was hit by a bullet back of the ear, and fell mortally wounded. His comrades continued the fight after their chief had died, and Major-General Dalton was wounded. The driver of the car was also hurt, and a motor cyclist, accompanying the party, was wounded in the neck.

DIES IMMEDIATELY.

CORK, Aug. 22. The assassination of Michael Collins, Chief of the Irish Provisional Government, and Commander-in-Chief of the Free State army, occurred last night between Macroom and Bandon, about twenty miles from this city. Collins was accompanied by members of the Free State headquarters staff, who were visiting various military points in the South of Ireland. Large numbers of irregulars ambushed the Commander-in-Chief's party, en route to Bandon. An armoured car, which was accompanying the National Army officials, inflicted heavy casualties on irregulars. Just as the attack was beaten off a bullet struck Mr. Collins in the skull, and he expired a few minutes later. His last words, addressed to Major-General Dalton, were "Forgive them." The ambush occurred on a wild mountain road, between Macroom and Bandon at seven thirty. Collins was in an open touring car with Major General Dalton, Commander of Free State forces in Cork, Commander Dolan, Governor of M. Joy Prison, and Captain Montgomery, an officer of the General Staff. A party of National Army troops, escorting the officers, had just passed the little village of Beallathack, when a volley of shots rang out from a group of irregulars concentrated along both sides of the road. The body of Mr. Collins was brought to Cork this morning and transferred to a steamer for conveyance to Dublin.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS ARE BAD.

DUBLIN, Aug. 22. Guerrilla activities of rebels continue. A party of Nationalists were ambushed near Clonmel to-day and two killed. Irregulars snip National troops in Sligo Courthouse, and there was a brisk exchange of fire, but no casualties. Great activities on the part of Nationalists followed, and two prominent rebel leaders were arrested. Grave economic conditions follow in the wake of the policy of destruction in West Ireland of irregulars. The collapse of some big business concerns has only been avoided it is declared, by steady support of banks, but the fact that farmers and others have not been able to pay interest on advances for many months is bringing about a position in which bankers may be compelled to take action. Business prospects are extremely bad, prices falling rapidly, and the export trade upon which the farmers depend is suffering acutely from the dislocation of traffic, caused by the destruction of railways and bridges. Perishable products are spoiling as there are no facilities of cold storage.

PREMIER WIRES SYMPATHY.

LONDON, Aug. 23. Premier Lloyd George to-day sent the following message to William T. Cosgrove, Acting Chairman of the Irish Provisional Government, "Deeply regret to hear of death of Commander-in-Chief of Free State Army. In his death the Free State has lost a fearless soldier, a leader of great energy and devotion, and a man of remarkable personal charm. Please convey to the members of your Government my profound sympathy with them in the loss of one of Ireland's brilliant sons at a moment when Ireland most needed his special qualities of courage and resolution."

GENERAL ORDER TO SOLDIERS.

DUBLIN, Aug. 23. Early this morning the Chief of the Free State General Staff issued the following to the army: "Stand calmly to your posts, then be ready, undauntedly, to do your work. Let no cruel act of reprisal blench your bright honor. Every dark hour that Michael Collins met since 1916 seemed but to steel that brave strength of his, and temper his gay bravery. You are left, each, inheritors of that strength and that bravery. To each of you falls this undivided work. No darkness in this hour, no loss of a comrade will daunt you at it." During the Conference in London on the Treaty, and various other subjects connected with Ireland, David Lloyd George, Premier, Winston Spencer Churchill Secretary for the Colonies, and Lord Birkenhead, Lord High Chancellor, are said to have held Collins in the highest esteem. With the passing of Arthur Griffith, who died Aug. 12, and Collins, the Irish Free Staters have lost two men they will find hard to replace. When Mr. Griffith was buried, Collins, dressed in full uniform as Commander in chief of army, was chief mourner for the Government. Although threats had been made against his life, and his friends inveighed against his participation, Collins marched in the funeral procession to the cemetery. Collins was still in the thirties. Last May it was announced that Miss Kitty Kiernan, one of the leading families of Longford, was engaged to Collins. Little is known of the early life of Collins, except that it has been said he was born of humble parents in County Kerry, was educated at the National school, and after working with his brother in a grocery business, entered the Postal service. Collins sprang into prominence during October 1914, in connection with the Sinn Fein movement. He commanded a section of the Rebel Army in Ireland. Although a member of the Imperial Parliament, Collins never sat in Westminster.

HIS HOLINESS EXPRESSES SORROW.

ROME, Aug. 24. Pope Pius is deeply shocked over news of the assassination of Michael Collins, and expressed profound sorrow that Ireland, which was especially dear to his heart, was torn by civil war. He added that no cause ever was helped by violence.

RELIEF SHIP SAILS.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 24. Captain Joe Bernier, noted Arctic navigator, has sailed from Nome, Alaska, in the ship "Teddy Bear," with fresh supplies for the Stefansson party at Wrangel Island, which has not been heard from since September last.

DAVID'S PLATITUDES.

LONDON, Aug. 24. Addressing the people of his native village of Llanystudwy, Wales, Lloyd George said the continuous drift from villages to towns and cities was one of Britain's social dangers. Britain, he said, had the smallest proportion of people whose lives were associated with the soil.

AROUSING THEIR IRE.

CORK, Aug. 24. The Free State commander had great difficulty in restraining the troops when news of Collins' death first reached here. Officers and men arriving from the north gave way to tears when they learned of the tragedy. A vast concourse followed the body to the steamer which will bear it to Dublin.

ON THE WRONG SIDE.

REVAL, August 24. A despatch received from Moscow announces the arrest of two hundred Russian scientists and writers in that city and thirty in Petrograd. The despatch says accused are unfriendly to the Soviet Government, and will be expelled from Russia for varying periods.

A VARIED CHOICE.

DUBLIN, August 24. Dublin began to recover somewhat from the shock of the death of Michael Collins today, and plans went forward for a meeting of the New Southern Parliament Saturday, when ministerial changes, made necessary by the sudden removal of Collins and Griffith are expected to be made. Meanwhile William T. Cosgrove, acting head of the Provisional Free State Government, and Richard Mulcahy, as Chief of Staff, are directing the final phase of the National Army's campaign against irregulars.

The absorbing question, who is to succeed Collins, is voiced on all sides, and besides Cosgrove and Mulcahy, the names of Kevin O'Higgins, Minister of Economic Affairs, Gerald O'Connell, Assistant Chief of Staff, and Genera Gerid O'Sullivan are frequently mentioned.

COLLINS' DEATH DETERMINED ON.

LONDON, Aug. 24. A Belfast despatch to the Evening News says it is clear that Michael Collins had a premonition of death. Recently Collins, upon taking leave of Belfast friends said, "Good-bye," "I will say good-bye, because I don't expect I shall ever see you again." The correspondent adds that it is stated in Belfast that Collins "was sentenced to death" by the Irish Republican Brotherhood.

Election This Fall.

It is rumored that contingent on the successful negotiation of the Humber deal, the Government will force an election this fall. To this end it is stated that a list of voters has been compiled from the Census taken last year. It is contended that next winter will see a more desperate condition of affairs than existed last winter, and by forcing an election this fall the Government appears to have some small hope of being returned.

Took Charge of Train.

SIX young men lined up before the bar at the Magistrate's Court this morning to answer charges of using insulting language, doing wilful damage to the station at Whitbourne, and boarding a train without having tickets. The case gave an insight into the methods of working which certain people have in connection with logging operations. John O'Neill, Railway policeman, was the principal witness for the prosecution. Some 40 men went out to Whitbourne about a week ago, on passes, to work in the logging camps of M. E. Martin. Arriving at their destination, they decided that they did not want to go to work, and they waited around Whitbourne Station for a through train to St. John's. Witness found them making a row in the waiting room, and was compelled to turn them out. The accused protested and used obscene language towards him, later attempting to break open the waiting room door. Witness was forced to nail up the door to keep out the intruders. He went home at midnight, and some of the men followed him and used threatening language towards him. In the morning, the men boarded the Piacentia train without tickets, and the train was held up for fifteen minutes. The accused denied all but the charge of boarding the train. The Judge said that this was the first case of the kind to come before him, and in future he would deal severely with any similar breaches of the law. He fined accused $10 or 30 days each.

World "Breaking Up."
VOLCANIC PROPHECY FROM U.S.A.
Dr. Milton A. Nobles, a prominent Philadelphia geologist and student of volcanic disturbances, declares that within 30 days Southern Europe, Northern Africa, and the whole of Asia will be destroyed by earthquakes and their populations wiped out.
"The trouble is brewing," he says, "among 70 volcanoes in the neighbourhood of Budapest," and he recalls that when the famous Hecla (Iceland) eruption occurred in the latter part of the eighteenth century enough lava was emitted to girdle the earth with a stream 10 feet deep and 200 feet wide.
This, he adds, will give an idea of that "an earthquake era which began on March 15 will ultimately submerge a large part of Europe." Since that date earthquakes of a minor character have taken place in Italy and Serbia.

Testimonial from Bell Island!

August 19th, '22.

J. A. Basha,
305 Water Street,
St. John's, N. F.

Dear Sir,—
It is my duty to ask you please to publish the following testimonial re Dr. F. G. Kinsman's Heart Tablets in the local newspapers so others can read it for themselves, and oblige

Yours truly I am
(Signed) E. J. ROBERTS.

Dr. F. G. Kinsman's Heart Tablets are a wonderful medicine, and I wish all to know what they have done for me. Before I commenced taking them I could not lie on my left side at night; I had such a choking sensation in my throat that I could hardly breathe. I would have to sit up in bed at night and my heart would beat so much and so hard that I would think that my end had come. My left arm and side pained me. When I would walk any distance my heart would flutter terribly and I would have smothering spells. I have felt none of these symptoms since using Dr. Kinsman's Heart Tablets. Now I can lie on my left side with ease and can enjoy a good night's rest. I can walk for a long distance without being tired or exhausted.
