UMPIRES.

As it is a well known fact that, in the words of a certain authority, "without professional umpires you can never feel sure of your decisions," and as in the majority of Canadian clubs it is next to impossible to find any one capable of satisfactorily filling this most important position, and as many gentlemen (especially in small clubs which play few matches) will be glad of a little assistance in the performance of the onerous duties which they so kindly undertake, we make these leading observations on the subject. As the basis of our remarks, we take the "hints" which form part of the late John Lillywhite's "Cricketer's Companion," repeated for several years but discontinued of late.

First in counting the "overs," as we generally take five balls, the fingers of the hand are convenient. Next the umpire must remember that in every case he is bound to give every doubt in favour of the batsman. Though he be morally certain that the batsman is out, if not absolutely certain of the fact, he must give him "not out,"—such is the law. Again, as to the vexed question of l. b. w. The words of the law are, "The striker is out if with any part of his person he stop the ball, which, in the opinion of the umpire at the bowler's wicket, shall have been pitched in a straight line from it to the striker's wicket, and would have hit it." The words "a straight line from wicket to wicket," clearly demonstrate the parallelogram formed by joining the opposite wickets from their opposing stumps. The wording of the rule is unfortunate but its intention is evident, and we repeat a previous observation made in this journal, that "from wicket to wicket" means "within the parallelogram between the wickets." Of course a case of l. b. w. can seldom happen with bowling "round the wicket," but it can happen, and, if only once in one hundred times, it is the umpire who must decide the point.

Of course, as we have no professional umpires, complaints are frequent, and both batsmen and bowlers have their grievances. In a recent match a bowler bowling round the wicket, taking advantage of the inexperience of the umpire, appealed almost every time the ball (on a bad wicket) struck the batsman. He had publicly to acknowledge having appealed when the ball (on very bumpy ground) struck the batsman between the shoulders. Comment is unnecessary, but we cannot help thinking that a true cricketer will never appeal to an uncertain umpire without being perfectly sure of the justice of his appeal.

"No ball" should be called the moment the foot is on or over the line (ball delivered) or the batsman loses the chance of a hit. Remember also that it is impossible for a bowler to lift his hindermost foot before delivering the ball. Before commencing a match the umpire should agree to signal byes by raising his stick or bat, leg-byes by striking his leg, and wides and no balls by calling. A "wide" depends entirely upon the judgment of the umpire, and here he may surely give the benefit of the doubt to the bowler. What would be wide to a short man (Jupp) would not be so to a tall man (W. G. Grace). Canadian umpires are unnecessarily severe on this point, and ought to consider what a man's reach is. We know a player who stands but 5 ft. 8, and can cover easily $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet to "leg," and nearly the same to the "off." It is most absurd to see "wides" called time after time when the ball is less than three feet from the wicket—any cricketer can cover at least $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet to "leg."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is thought that Law's Eleven will meet the Australians in September.

The following is taken from Lillywhite's remarks on Oscote College for 1881. The Mr. Daly referred to has lately joined the Toronto Club: "A. Daly (average 22), captain of the eleven, improved very much in batting this season, made several very high scores, has good style, and scores quickly when set; a good out-field, and bowls well—fast round-arm."

The results of the last two matches played by the Australians have caused much surprise in England, and many and ingenious are the excuses offered as reasons for the ignominious defeat sustained by the Englishmen. The match against the Gentlemen in 1878 was decided against Gregory's team in one innings, and it is strange that the order of things should be thus reversed. The eleven, composed of both classes of players, which sustained a still greater defeat to that experienced by the Gentlemen, was by no means a representative one. The amateurs were few in number, and the professionals were not by any means the best of their sort. It is a pity that a really good combined eleven had not been pitted against them.

The strongest objection against the existence of the Ontario Cricket Association is the unfortunate antagonism that it breeds. This objection, however, is not confined to the Association, for we have recent information of the very unpleasant treatment of an eleven at the hands of their hosts, in a purely friendly contest, with no honours at stake but the prestige of either club. Such conduct is to be deprecated in the strongest manner. In the case in point the captain is only indirectly to blame for allowing the uncontrollable temper of one of his fledglings to get the better of him. Novices at the game require more captaining than older hands, and so the steersman should be all the more carefully selected when greenhorns are to be guided. The sooner the club to which we allude learns that it will effectually banish all chance of further visitors coming to them by such displays of nasty temper and selfish tendencies as it was guilty of on Monday last, the better for itself.

STOLEN RUNS.

Overheard in the North!—"Do you think we can beat 'em, Jack?" "Well, you might—you'll be wanting a good local umpire, though!"—Sporting Times.

Rather late in life he took to boating with the not altogether unexpected result of being upset almost every day. When this wild excitement began to pall, he transferred his athletic attentions to cricket. By-and-by, he was invited to make one of a team assembled at a country-house for the purpose of annihilating a local eleven. The day was hot, the drink was plentiful; and when the shadows of the tall elm-trees began to lengthen on the green sward beneath, the novice was nobody's enemy but his own. Friendly hands steered him to his bedroom, and it was thought that there he would be all right. But presently the inhabitants of the neighbouring apartments were startled by a loud shouting and splashing. Rushing into the novice's chamber they found him head downwards in a huge bath, which an unforeseeing housemaid had left filled for the morning. Seizing him by some of his garments they endeavoured to extricate him from his unfortunate position, but he continued to strike out valiantly with his feet, landing one of the rescue party in the mouth and a second in the stomach. When at length the little man got his head above water he gurgled: "Shave your shelvish, you fellowsh. I can swim."—Sporting Times.

On the other hand, if the object be improvement, and the practice be really undertaken for the more skilful playing of the game, I would earnestly impress upon my readers this often-forgotten fact, that the more nearly the practice-game approaches to a match, and the more steady and painstaking the player is, the better. One of the best methods of practice I know of is for sixteen people to play amongst themselves; eleven to go into the field, two to go to the wickets, two to be umpiring, and one scoring. An afternoon's practice, to last say for four hours, will thus give a quarter of an hour in each position to every player, and each player will gain experience in every department of the game, getting half an hour's batting (fifteen minutes at each wicket, no matter how often out), half an hour's bowling (fifteen minutes at each wicket), half an hour's umpiring (fifteen minutes at each end), a quarter of an hour's scoring, and two and a quarter hours' fielding, being fifteen minutes at each place: overs of four balls being bowled and discipline kept up throughout as in a match, a note being made of the results of the batting, the figures being arrived at by dividing the number of runs gained by each player, by the number of innings, and the bowling record worked out in the usual way, showing so many wickets for so many runs. One or two afternoons, devoted to steady practice of this kind, in which each player has a fair chance of improvement, cannot fail to be valuable. Parties of less than sixteen could work on a similar principle, and in cases of fewer players nets could be used—double wicket being played whenever possible.

The advantage of having eleven in the field when you are practising is that you thereby best learn how to judge the runs, and there is nothing so important to a cricketer as to be able to do this well. Quickness between wickets is most essential, but quickness without judgment is useless. A man at the bowler's end who knows what he is about will always back up, that is, go a few paces up the wicket after the bowler delivers the ball, and thus make many a run which could not be secured were he like some players, to stand as still as a scarecrow waiting till the ball is played. When a man backs up properly he has a much shorter distance to cover in making the run than when he remains level with the wicket and has to run the whole twenty-two yards. Tip and run is good occasional practice for smartening up a field, but two good batsmen should be at the wickets, it being shockingly bad practice as far as batting is concerned. The way in which runs can be scored when, as in this game, the batsmen are determined on making them, is astonishing, and calculated to considerably open the eyes of a sleepy field.

In running, batsmen should always keep straight up and down by the side of the wicket and never cross unnecessarily: they should not run on the pitch, or they will spoil it by heel marks, and they should always keep their wits about them and avoid collisions. The rate of running must be the rate of the slower of the two, as there is no use in running a man to a standstill, and of course there is no gain in running him out. In running a four or five run moderately, not at top speed, and do not begin batting again until after you have recovered your wind.

The striker should judge all hits in front of the wicket, the other batsmen those behind, and when a run is to be made one should call to the other. Call in a decided tone, not hesitatingly and apologetically, and mistakes will never occur. It always takes too long to make a run, so neither should start off on his own judgment and advance too far to return to his wicket before the ball gets there, in case the other man declines to move.

When a ball is hit you should make the first run at the top of your speed, and thus often get a couple where you would only have made one; in the same manner threes are made out of twos, and so on. Never over-run the bowling crease, as bad players invariably do, for it is a very common cause of runs being lost. Always watch the fieldsmen, and be ready to make a run at the slightest mistake. Two good judges of a run in together will often find that these runs from fieldsmen's blunders are the easiest made of any. If a ball is thrown in from the long-field you can nearly always score one while it is on its way. The effect of stolen runs upon the opposite side is not to be despised—first, the fielding gets wild and loose and the men demoralized, great becomes the temptation to bang the ball at the wicket when there is not half a chance of a run out, and should the savage hurl come, away it will generally go for an over-throw for two or three, to the still further demoralization of the adversaries, particularly if the excitable man of the team has had anything to do with it. Such performances will put the best of bowlers off their bowling, and many times be the means of winning what looks, until their commencement, a completely hopeless match.

COMMUNICATION.

THE TORONTO CRICKET CLUB.

To the Editor of the Canadian Cricket Field.

DEAR SIR,—I am delighted to see a cricketer interested in the Toronto Club at last calling attention to its marked weaknesses. Is it not strange that in Toronto, where there is as good or better cricket material than in any city or town in Canada, cricket has been and is at so low an ebb? Our club exhibits what is often really only a caricature of metropolitan cricket. With an excellent ground and every opportunity for practice, and, I may add, good play shown in practice, it is a matter of surprise to a superficial on-looker that our record is from year to year a disgrace. For this there are no doubt many reasons; one cause of it is well pointed out by "Veteran," in your last issue. "Veteran" ascribes it to scarcity of matches; and in conclusion calls for abuse from the "youngsters," as one of the latter, I refer to him, not by any means for purpose of abuse, but to assist him in accounting for our fallen condition. I would like "Veteran" to understand that he is hitting at, not the "youngsters" but the "oldsters" of the Toronto Club. I believe it is the apathy and indifference of the latter class, coupled with their cricket conceit and conscious air and feeling of superiority, that mainly hinders our club from making the progress it should and might make. Here is the rotten spot in the State of Denmark. Every cricketer knows that those who practise most regularly and most distinguish themselves in practice, ought to constitute the teams. Yet in our matches, and particularly in all important matches, the places are monopolized almost entirely by old players who are rarely or never seen before the wickets in practice. A club whose representative teams are chosen from those who, from season to season, play only in matches, cannot expect to rank very high. Numerous examples could be adduced of clubs in this Province suffering from this drawback, which have degenerated from respectability to insignificance or dissolution. The method pursued by the best clubs in Canada in keeping up good teams is simply this: as soon as an old player gives up practice, drop him, and supply his place with young blood and enthusiasm; depend on present play, not on past reputations; this is just the plan not adopted by the Toronto Club. Here the colts are ignored, unless, as now, they are an absolute necessity, and superannuated patriarchs are chosen, not for what they can do now, but on the reputation of what they have done, or it is believed they have done, in the past. The folly of this system is shown in every match played this season. In the opening match of the season, under thirty easily defeated those over; in the match against Toronto University, the 'Varsity team (almost all junior members of Toronto) did as they wished with their older opponents; in the match between the Toronto Club and the Toronto Cricket Club, which resolved itself into a match between the oldsters and the youngsters, the former puffed and struggled for a bad defeat. The match against a weak team from Trinity College would have been ridiculous but for the bowling services of one of the youngest members of the club. And the other day an ignominious defeat was only prevented by the chance good play of a man who had not handled bat or ball for years. It is time the personnel of teams had a shaking up. If the experiment suggested were tried, it ought to be found to work satisfactorily. All reference to the T. C. C. considered in good part.

Toronto, 6th July, 1882.

I am, yours truly,

YOUNGSTER.

ENGLAND

On the same days that the Australians met the Gentlemen, Kent and Sussex played. The former won in one innings and 175 runs. For Kent, Lord Harris made 176 out of 521 runs. Sussex got 128 the first and 218 the second innings.

The forty-eighth Inter-University match ended on the 28th ult., at Lord's, in a victory for Cambridge by seven wickets. At the commencement of the season it was thought that the Light Blues would have no chance; but Oxford did not maintain their form of the early part of the year. Score: Oxford, 165 and 257; Cambridge, 275 and 148.

AUSTRALIANS v. GENTLEMEN OF ENGLAND.

The unusual interest shown in this match, played at Kennington Oval on the 22nd, 23rd and 24th ult., was shown by an attendance far in excess of anything ever recorded on the Surrey ground, with the one exception of the match between England and Australia in 1880. The heavy rain just after luncheon on Thursday reduced the numbers considerably on the first day, but still 10,028 paid for admission, and on Friday and Saturday the numbers were 18,540 and 11,030 respectively, so that in all 39,598 persons paid the entrance fee of a shilling. The sudden indisposition of Mr. A. H. Evans left the eleven without a fast bowler, but the comparative weakness of the eleven in bowling was thought to be fully compensated for by their general excellence in batting and fielding. Murdoch, in winning the toss, gained a decided advantage in the wicket, and the out-cricketer of the Gentlemen was so weak that the Australians were able to make a very creditable total of 334. Mr. Steel was kept on far too long, considering how plain his delivery was. Mr. Ramsay might fairly have been tried a great deal more, and it was a matter for general surprise that Mr. W. G. Grace should hardly have been allowed a ball until a long innings was nearly over. The fielding, too, fell decidedly below expectations. Mr. Lucas made two fine catches, one, that which disposed of Bonnor, as good as has ever been seen, but generally the display was not up to the mark, and Mr. Leslie's misjudgment of the chance Bonnor gave when he had got only seven cost the Gentlemen quite a hundred runs. As to the batting of the English eleven, the mildest that can be said is that it was altogether unworthy of the individual reputations of many of the players engaged, and that collectively it was much below the ordinary standard of English amateur cricket. AUSTRALIANS v. UNITED ELEVEN.

This match, which had been advertised locally as Australians v. England, was finished at the Priory Park Ground, Chichester, on the 28th ult. The united team was not only one short, but was utterly incapable of giving the Australians anything like a trial, either in batting or bowling, and the result was a somewhat inglorious defeat by an innings and 263 runs. The Australians were in until nearly the close of the second afternoon for 501, and Bannerman was at the wickets all the first day, for 76 not out. Reid, of Surrey, played fine cricket each time, but otherwise the colonial bowlers had things very much their own way, and in the second inning four of the United made 49 out of 37 from the bat. UNITED STATES.

A series of matches are now being arranged, in which the English team who played in the late match against the Americans are to combine and visit several of the cricketing centres of the States. Matches will be played with an eleven of all-Philadelphia, and with teams of eighteen in New York, Pittsburg, Chicago, St. Louis, and Detroit. It is now proposed to have the series initiated by the Englishmen in a game either at New York or Philadelphia about August 15th. The other cities on the list will be visited immediately thereafter. The team, as now arranged, will be composed of the following players: T. Hargrave, W. Jarvis, and J. Myers, of the Girard; Capt. T. L. White, W. Hunt, W. Brooks, and H. Cleverly, of the Manhattan of Brooklyn; A. M. Wood, of the Belmont; George Bromhead, of the Germantown; H. Tyers, of the Philadelphia, and George Lane, of the Staten Island.

ENGLISHMEN v. AMERICANS.

This match was begun on the 4th inst., but rain stopped play before one innings had been concluded. It is probable that another date will be fixed to test the relative abilities of the teams. The following is the score:

TORONTO v. ALL NORTH.

The above teams played at Toronto on Thursday last under very favourable circumstances. As in 1880, the Northerners were easily defeated in one innings. The only noteworthy pieces of play on their part were the excellent, patient innings of Marston, and Hammet's score in the first innings, which latter was well got. For Toronto, Helmcken played in very good form indeed; Gosling ran up his score of 10 in half as many minutes, while Brown took half an hour to compile his 12 not out. Score :

PARKDALE v. AURORA.

Following is the score of this unfinished match. Morrison's batting, and the bowling of Wright and Shaw, speak for themselves. For Aurora, McDonald played a good, careful innings, and Stevenson hit well. Stevenson and Tracey also were well on the wicket, and the ground being bumpy, the latter did great execution, while the fielding of the home team was excellent. The visitors had by no means a strong team, and their bowlers therefore deserve all the more credit for their excellent performance. When stumps were drawn it was "anybody's game," and it is much to be regretted that rain in the morning prevented its completion. Some annoyance was caused to the home team by three Parkdale batsmen going out purposely at the end of their second innings. This has seldom been openly done of late years in this vicinity, but is certainly not "sharp practice," as it involves no unfair advantage. The dodge was used in 1878, by Mr. W. P. Pickering, for Toronto v. Trinity College, and no one dreamt of grumbling. In the present case, the Parkdale captain saw clearly that while he had a chance of lowering all the wickets in an hour, his opponents were not likely to knock off the runs in that time, and he therefore desired to have all his men out by five o'clock. Opinions differ on the subject, but it is difficult to assert any valid reason why a man should be debarred from resigning his chance of individual distinction for the sake of a conjectural advantage to his side. Score:
