Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. This sum, as is stated in the Resolution, is "To assist in defraying the expenses of the meeting in Montreal of the British Association for the Advancement of Science." It is well known that this Association contains among its members not only the first men of science in England, but very many from the continent of Europe. It was proposed a year ago that they should pay a visit to Canada, and should hold a meeting of the Association here. It was resisted very strongly in some quarters, especially by the London Times, which for some reason or other has always been unfriendly to Canada. However, the Times was beaten, and those who desired to prevent its leaving England were in the minority, and I think Canada gets a great advantage in having a meeting here of these great scientists, including such men as Huxley and Tyndall, and men of that kind, and continental scientists as well-if I may use such an American word as "scientists"-numbers of whom are coming to Canada. We believe it will be of the greatest consequence to Canada to have this great Association come here, not only as a matter of science, as show ing that Canada is taking its position and is recognized as such an important part of the British Empire that this great meeting should be held within our bounds, but, also, in a more practical, and perhaps, more commercial sense, we believe the best advertisement that could possibly be given to Canada is the assemblage of these gentlemen here. They propose to come out here this summer, to assemble at Montreal in the end of August or beginning of September. They will visit all the points of interest in Canada. They have, I understand, taken great pains, as this is their first visit out of England, to have all the papers which will be read before the Association, of very great interest, and with some reference to the place of meeting. It is also proposed for them to go across the continent, and the railways of Canada-the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the Intercolonial, of course-have offered them the most advantageous terms, so that they can visit various portions of Canada at their ease and comfort, and with as little expense as possible. One of the great objections raised by the Times was that these men of science, professors and others, are very few of them men of wealth, and that it would prevent many of them from enjoying the pleasure and the advantage of being present at an annual meeting of the Association. They could not come to Canada, and as there would be no meeting in England, it would be to them, as members of the Association, a lost year. However, the Times has been obliged to change its noie, as it does to change with the times, because it was found to be a most popular move, and instead of there being a gene. ral objection among the members of the Association to come to Canada, when it was known that the Government here, subject to the sanction of Parliament, were anxious to promote this meeting, and assist in it, instead of its being a disappointment to any of the members, there has been a large accession to the numbers of the British Association because they are coming to Canada.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

home, we hope, fully impressed with the country, and will become a good emigration agent. The proposal is to assist the passages of these gentlemen. They will come across at a comparatively small expense. They will be conveyed by the great railway companies through the country, and we hope, that as a body, they will see Canada thoroughly and favourably. We have a right to think so, because all those gentlemen who came out on the invitation of the Department of Agriculture, farmers and agents of farmers in England, were of one mind and sounded one note of praise of Canada when they went home, and they have been acting ever since as gratuitous emigration agents for Canada. I have no doubt the House will vote with great pleasure this sum.

Mr. GAULT. A very large Committe of our foremost citizens has been appointed in Montreal, and a large amount of money has been subscribed by citizens, who are determined to give a right royal welcome to the members of the British Association, and to admit them to their homes. I believe that their visit will be productive of great benefit to Montreal and to Canada. These gentlemen are intending to visit the whole continent, so far as they can, and I believe they will have passes over all the principal railways of Canada; and the American railways are propared to give them passes as well. They will, therefore, very likely see a very large portion of this continent, and I have no doubt they will return home with a very high opinion of the character and resources of this country. I believe the citizens of Montreal, and the people of Canada generally, will have great pleasure in receiving them, and will endeavour to make their visit agreeable. I understand, also, the city of Ottawa is about taking measures to receive them officially, when they will visit the Capital.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman has not stated what the expectations are as to the number of those gentlemen who are to visit Canada; nor has he told us how this fund is to be expended. Is any portion of it to be given in entertaining them in particular localities?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No.

Mr. GAULT. We expect there will be between 700 and 800 members.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I heard 500, and I thought even that was a large number. If there are 700 competent men coming to this country, they will do us yeoman service when they go back.

Mr. BLAKE. Has any arrangement been made with the Allan Line for reduced passages?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. All the leading lines of steamships coming to Canada and New York have given reduced rates of passage to members of the British Association coming to the Montreal meeting. Communications have been made between the Committee in Montreal and the Committee of the British Association, who have been acting in concert; and communications were made through my office in London with the various steamship agents, and the lowest terms of passage were obtained in favour of the members of the Association. By the arrangements, those persons who are officers of the Association have their passages paid; the others receive more or less assistance. according to circumstances. So far as the Intercolonial Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway are concerned, members of the British Association and their families will be carried free over those lines to any part of Canada which they may wish to visit, even to the foot of the Rocky Mountains. 1 communicated with Mr. Hickson, Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, what was proposed to be done by the Intercolonial Railway and the Ganadian Pacific Railway, and he said the Grand Trunk Railway Company Every man who comes to Canada in this capacity will go would willingly co-operate with the other railways in assisting our distinguished visitors to move through Canada free of charge, so that both themselves and their families will be able to travel gratuitously over our three great lines of railway. My hon. friend from Cardwell (Mr. White), who is better informed with regard to this matter than any one else, as being Chairman of the Montreal Citizens Committee, will be able to give full information on all these points.

Mr. BLAKE. Of course the hon. member for Cardwell is not the Ministor in charge of this vote, and although he may make the explanations, I am afraid we shall have to hold the Government responsible for the use of the money. It will be understood that the Government is speaking through his mouth-which is anticipating events a little, perhaps.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). I may say that the proposal is that $20,000 of the $25,000 are to be appropriated by the Committee of the Association in England for assisted passages. Of these assisted passages fifty will be absolutely free-those of the officers of the Association; and the balance of the money, some $14,000, will be appropriated as assistance to other members of the Association who may come to this country. In order to avoid any abuse of these assisted passages, the Council of the Association in England have adopted the principle that no one will receive assisted passages unless he was a member of the Association at the Southampton meeting, that is the meeting that preceded that at Southport, at which it was decided to come to Canada, by that means excluding persons who may have joined the Association at the Southport meeting merely with a view of getting cheap passages to Canada; so that every protection has been afforded by the Council of the Association in relation to that matter. I believe the Min-ister of Railways has already explained what has been done with reference to passages on this side. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company have agreed that every person who comes here as a member of the Association, himself and his family, shall have free passages over their line, during the whole time they are in Canada. In addition to that, there is to be a special excursion to the end of the line at the foot of the Rocky Mountains. The excursions, which are con-ducted at meetings of the Association in England, are always limited in numbers. At the Southport meeting, there were several excursions, and they were all limited, some to 200, others 300, the persons desiring to take part in them sending in their names, and if a larger number applied than could be accom-modated, the Council selected the persons. The meeting of the Association will take place in Montreal on 27th August, and continue for one week. On the morning of the 4th September a special excursion of 150 persons will leave Montreal bound for the Rocky Mountains, going part of the way by water, the excursionists returning, if desired, by the American lines. These excursionists are to have the trip free in all respects, except as to their meals, and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company have agreed with the Montreal Committee that they will make arrangements to furnish meals on the route at 50 cents or two shillings per meal. So it is estimated that six shillings a day will be all that is absolutely necessary to be paid by the excursionists on that trip. The time occupied will be probably two weeks, and the general impression is that very great advantage will be derived from the fact that 150 distinguished persons, occupying prominent positions in England, will have an opportunity of visiting in that way the North-West. $5,000 in addition to the $20,000 is to be devoted to the necessary expenses connected with the actual meeting itself. The citizens of Montreal have undertaken to provide all the hospitalities connected with the visit to Montreal itself, without touching one dollar of the amount voted by this Parliament; they ask no assistance from Par-liament to enable them to do what Montreal citizens, as well as to what our country is doing, which will be circulated as the citizens of all Canadian contres, are always ready to do on such occasions,-perform the duties of hospitality to the visitors who may be present at that meeting. In the meantime, much correspondence is going on; a permanent Secretary has been appointed; rooms have been taken and a good deal of work is to be done, and $5,000 is intended to be applied in payment of expenses of that kind. I may say, in regard to this matter, that it is very important if possible that the people of other cities as well as those of Montreal should be thoroughly enlisted in the gathering that is to take place. We have undertaken in Montreal that the Association shall lose nothing by coming to Canada. At the meetings in Great Britain the Association has members, associate members, and life members, and out of the fees paid by the various classes of members they are able to pay for the publishing of their proceedings, their secretaries and other expenses connected with the meetings. The largest number of members at any meeting in Great Britain was 3,300 or 3,400, and it is proposed that in Canada we shall secure an equal membership, so that, as 1 have said, the Association shall lose nothing by its visit here. It is not intended by the Montreal Committee that any part of this money voted by Par-liament should go to that object—that is a matter of an entirely voluntary nature, rosting with the people of the Dominion. A guarantee fund is now being established in Montreal, which will ensure the Association against any loss of funds from their Canadian visit; but it is most desirable that in all Canadian cities, Committees should be formed and members of the Association secured; so that we will be able not simply to have a Montreal meeting, or a meeting of Montreal people, but a gathering of the leading people of all parts of Canada. In addition to the excursion to which I have just referred, other excursions have been proposed-one to Ottawa, another to Quebec, another covering a day to the neighbourhood of Belle Isle Mountain, which is a district of great geological interest, as well as some others, and in that way it is hoped the members of the association will find in this country abundant sources of interest and that the result of the trip will be of great advantage to them in all respects. I think that Canada will derive great advantage from the presence of so many distinguished people in this country. the latest information from England being that at least 700 or 800 will come here as members of the Association.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman has told us of excursions to distant points, in which it is proposed to almost annihilate space. Success in obtaining a very large gather-ing in Montreal of persons from other parts of the Dominion will largely depend on whether distance is also annihilated to the inhabitants of Canada. I hope the Committee will devote attention to securing even better than usual rates for those who are going to attend the meetings of the Association. I was sorry not to hear that an excursion was proposed to Niagara Falls.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). There is one proposed to the Falls.

Mr. BLAKE. Because the excursionists will then pass through Toronto.

Mr. ALLEN. It is very important that the distinguished visitors from England should receive special attention in this country. I received a letter a short time ago from the Secretary of the British Association, stating that 150 members were going by way of Owen Sound to the North-West. I sent the letter to our Mayor, and I am happy to say that action was immediately taken, and an official invitation sent to the Association to partake of the hospitalities of Owen Sound. Luncheon and other entertainments will in England and elsewhere, will more than compensate any city or town for any outlay. I hope other cities and towns in the country will follow the example furnished by Owen Sound.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. This is an argument, not a vote.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Then no explanation is required.

Mr. BLAKE. This appeared in the Supplementary Estimates last year. I recollect we discussed it to some extent, and the Minister of Finance said he was not able to give full information on it, and would bring it down later, when full information could be given. I am now asking for the full information.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon. gentleman somewhat forgets the circumstances. I remember the hon. member for King's made a strong speech on the item.

Mr. DAVIES. The First Minister, I am sure, was not present, and the Finance Minister said, that inasmuch as the right hon. gentleman was absent, and he was the only one who knew all about why it was put in the Estimates, he would withdraw it.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That is true.

Mr. BLAKE. And it did not come back.

Mr. DAVIES. The hon. gentleman did not bring it up again last Session. I would like the hon. gentleman to explain to whom this money is to be paid, and in what proportions.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I expect a memorandum on the subject in a few minutes. I think, however, the hon. gentleman has forgotten something in connection with this matter. I think he took exception to the vote and it was intimated that if the hon. gentleman did not wish it to pass we had no objections to drop it; that as he was representative of the Island, we would drop it, at any rate, for that year, and it was dropped accordingly.

Mr. DAVIES. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will tell the whole story of why I took exception to it. He knows that the grounds of my objection were that no explanation whatever was given of why we should vote for it, or of the parties to whom it was to be paid, or the proportions in which it was to be paid: Another ground was, that it was stated that a good many were not to get this money, while others were to be paid. These were the reasons, so that the hon. Finance Minister did not explain all the why. I contended that we should have the reasons given for paying the money, and that it should be paid to all the persons who stood on the same footing.

Mr. Allen.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It may be true that I was not here when it was first discussed, but I know that when I heard that the hon. gentleman had taken objection to it, I said to my hon. friend who sits next me: Well, if he chooses, as a representative from Prince Edward Island to object, there is no necessity for the Government to give it. Afterwards the hon. gentleman was told by the Finance Minister, when I was present, that in consequence of the opposition which was made to it, the Government would not press it.

Mr. BLAKE. That seems to be a new notion of responsible Government. I presume that the votes presented to this House are upon the recommendation of the Government, by whom alone they can be presented, the assent of the Crown having been obtained, and they are presented because the Government is of opinion that justice and public policy require that they should be passed. The course the hon. gentleman took last Session was a course which I do not think was worthy of him. We asked for further information; we asked for the names, the amounts to each, and we could not get them; we were told, amongst other things, that it was late, that objection was taken, and that they would drop it for that Session. Now it comes up again, and we want the information which we vainly asked for last Session.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. It may be necessary to state brieflythe circumstances under which this claim is presented. It is known perfectly well that the Government of the United States submitted a proposition to the different Provinces of Canada, and Prince Edward Island, which was not then a part of Canada, that if we would allow the use of our fisheries to American subjects, they would admit the fish taken and cured by our own people to be received into the United States free. That was the proposition distinctly made. It was declined on the part of Canada, and accepted in good faith on the part of Prince Edward Island-accepted by the men employed in these fisheries and the Government of Prince Edward Island. What was the result? The result was, the American fishermen had the use of the fisheries of Prince Edward Island, the duty was exacted upon the fish taken there by the inhabitants of the Island, notwithstanding what I consider to be as solemn an engagement as one Government could make with another. They demanded the duty, and I may say for myself, as an individual, that I scarcely know of any transaction, between one Government and another, as discreditable as the conduct of the United States Government with reference to this question. That being the case, it was supposed that the Prince Edward Island fishermen had a just and equitable claim upon Canada for the amount of this money-upon this principle, that it was taken into account by the Commissioners sitting at Halifax.

Mr. DAVIES. No.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. We enquired into that matter, we enquired if it was taken into account in the award which has been made, and we felt that there would be a just claim, one about which there could be no question. It was considered a desirable and proper thing by the Minister of Justice, who had the matter in hand, to state the whole matter in these Resolutions. It did not form part of the engagement, part of the consideration to Canada. Under these circumstances, after it stood for a number of years, it was considered that these parties now being a portion of Canada, not being able to obtain their just rights from the United States, the Government should come to the House and ask for the amount of money they had expended to reimburse them, or at least those of them who are British subjects. It is not intended to pay those who are not British subjects, because if the United States Government failed to do justice to their own subjects, let them look to their own Government for consideration. We desire simply to protect our own people, who are now part of the Do minion of Canada, and who feel that they have not been fairly dealt with. I have a list of the names, though, of course; the amounts will be subject to investigation, and I find among the parties, Hall Merrick, Geo. Howell, H. M. Churchill, Carvell Bros., and a number of others.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman does not give the sums.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. These claims have not been finally settled or disposed of yet.

Mr. BLAKE. How has the total, including the ten cents, been arrived at?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. That covers the gross amount of all claims.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It is not advisable to state all the amounts, as that would be a sort of admission that the claims are all correct, and the matter has to be investigated. These are the amounts of the claims, by those who are British subjects; but these amounts may not all be allowed.

Mr. BLAKE. Is the gross amount of all those claims $30,086.10?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. That is the gross amount.

Mr. DAVIES. The hon. gentleman has stated very fairly and very correctly, I think, the circumstances in connection with the breach of faith on the part of the United States Government. There is no doubt that they were guilty of a very great breach of faith. They undertook expressly that if American vessels were permitted to fish in our waters they would recommend to Congress a remission of those duties. Their vessels were permitted to fish, and they refused to recommend the remission of duties. I understand that they claimed that it was a general undertaking between themselves and the Dominion of (anada, and that inasmuch as Canada refused to admit their vessels, they could not recommend the remission of the duties on behalf of Prince Edward Island, although they took advantage of the privilege we allowed them. So far, the facts are correct, But the list the hon gentleman read does not tote up the amount he is taking a vote for. In 1879, for the first time, application was made to this Government for the payment of Of course this Government had nothing these duties. special to do with it. The First Minister said I opposed the vote last Session. I did not oppose the vote. I pointed out several reasons why the mode in which the vote was given was unjust; and I pointed out that some statements made in the vote were not correct. I intend to do that again to-night. A great deal of capital was made of the fact that I brought these matters before the House, and in every paper in Prince Edward Island belonging to the party opposed to me, I was denounced. One paper, under the head ing of "Grit Treachery to Prince Edward Island," went on to say:

"They have no legal claim for this amount. It is justly due by the Government of the United States, and refnaal by that Government to refund is an act of bad faith, which is worse than the repudiation, by Philadelphia, of its debts, in days gone by. Our merchants have no claim whatever against the Dominion Government; they have no such legal claim for any portion of the Fishery award as might be enforced in a court of law."

Then follows a column and a half of abuse of your humble servant, because I ventured to do—what? Because I ventured to call the attention of the Ministry to the fact that the statement they put in this vote was not correct. The statement here is:

"It not having been deemed advisable, in the general interest of the British case, to put forward and press the claim of those merchants before the Halifax Commission."

Now, the hon. gentleman knows very well that it was not on the part of the United States Government, and he wanted in the province of the Halifax Commission to consider this the Lieutenant Governor to give him an assurance that in 165 claim at all. They were appointed for a distinct purpose -to decide the sum of money that should be paid to Canada for the use of her fisheries between certain points of timebetween 1873 and 1883. This was a transaction which took place in 1871, and if this statement is allowed to go on our record, it will appear that we pressed claims before that Commission which the Commission had no authority to recognize, and which, had they considered them, would have invalidated the award. Now, as one of the counsel, I want to assure the hon. gentleman that nothing of the kind took place. These claims were not pressed, as they did not come within the province of the Commission; and if the Commissioners had included a dollar of that amount in their award, they would have rendered the whole award liable to be set aside. and the United States would have been justified in repudiating it. They were not appointed to consider whether or not the United States was guilty of a breach of faith. I admit that they were guilty of a breach of faith, and to use the language of the First Minister, I cannot understand on what ground the United States can refuse to pay this claim. You may decide to pay this claim as a matter of generosity; if you do, I am not going to oppose it; but I want it to be done in the proper way, and not by putting on record statements which are inconsistent with the facts, and which would militate against my action as one of the counsel and against the action of the arbitrators at the Halifax Commission. The hon. gentleman will see that the amount he proposes to vote here covers only a portion of the claims. He only read a portion of the names of the claimants; I will read the rest of them. The claims which make up this sum are: Hall & Myrick, for themselves, $20,818.69; Hall & Myrick, for British subjects, $9,883; G. W. Howlan, $9,106.60; H. M. Churchill, $4,889.50; Carvell Bros., $1,228.50; Baker & Nickerson, $987 20; A. A. Macdonald & Bros., $2,234; Macdonald & Owen, $492; Samuel Prowse, $386; J. A. Matheson, $262; A. Matheson, $24; J. A. Macdonald, $146; Wise and Russell, $166; John Cairns, $165; Owen Connolly, $146; Reid Bros., $30. In that list there are five Americans, and the hon. gentleman docks off one. I objected to that last year. He happens to be a supporter of your humble servant. I asked on what ground could you pay Churchill, Baker & Nickerson, and Wise & Russell, and refuse to pay Mr. Hall? The hon. Minister could not support his vote at that time, and he withdrew it; and then the public papers turned round and heaped obloquy on my shoulders, because I contended that if you are going to vote this money—and I am not going to oppose it—if you are going to vote it on generous grounds, you should be generous all round, and vote it justly and fairly. Why do you refuse to pay Hall & Myrick's claim? Although an American, Myrick has for a quarter of a century been doing the largest fishing business in Prince Edward Island. He resides there with his family; he has put over $100,000 into his fishing business; he has seven of the principal fishing stations on the Island; he has nearly 400 hands employed during the summer and a very large number in winter; he has from seventy to ninety boats; and he does as much fishing as all the others put together. He is not an American in reality, because he has been living amongst us for a quarter of a century, and has done more to open up the fisheries of Prince Edward Island than any other man, and is essentially a British subject. He invosted his money in that business on the assurance given him by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province, that if he did so he would have his money refunded. In the Sessional Papers of 1880 is the letter which Mr. Hall wrote to the Lieutenant-Governor, dated in September, 1871, in which he called attention to the fact that, from articles which appeared in the Boston papers, he thought there was going to be a breach of faith on the part of the United States Government, and he wanted that case his money would be refunded. The Lieutenant-Governor writes him a letter the day afterwards acknowledging the receipt of his communication. I will not read the whole letter. He first gives an ϵ pitome of Mr. Hall's letter to him, and then goes on to say:

"The Lieutenant-Governor is of the opinion that your apprehensions are unfounded and an arrangement, sanctioned by Her Majesty's Government, has been entered into between the Governments of the United States and Prince Edward Island; and the Lieutenant-Governor does not apprehend that the action of Uanada in withholding her assent to a similar arrangement, will be attended with the prejudicial result which you have recently been led to anticipate."

Mr. Hall's letter and the Lieutenant Governor's reply were forwarded in the dispatch to Earl Kimberley, on the 30th September, 1871, and the Lieutenant-Governor asks that the Home Government shall take steps to ascertain whether there was any truth in the suspicion Mr. Hall had in this matter. A dispatch was sent in reply, on the 30th December, after the fishing season was over, to say that it was only too true; that they had made enquiries on the subject in Washington, and they found the United States refused to carry out the proposal. Application was then made to the British Government, asking them to refund the duties, and the British Government, on the 1st of July, refused to do Messrs. Hall & Myrick applied to the Lieutenant-80. Governor to know if it would be safe for them to invest their money, and he assured them it would be a safe investment, and they invested it so; and so did other gentlemen mentioned in the schedule, British as well as Americans; and having all done so, they are all in the same boat. There is no legitimate reason therefore, why we should pay some and refuse to pay others; and I cannot see sufficient grounds, if the right hon. gentleman determines to vote this money, for drawing the distinction he has drawn between Messrs. Hall & Myrick and the others. He simply has deducted their claims from the $51,000, and is prepared to pay the balance. If the hon. gentleman detormines to ask us to vote this money, and inasmuch as we are voting it, not on legal grounds, but simply as a matter of generosity and equity, he should em-brace in the sum to be voted the claim of Messrs. Hall & Myrick, for although technically an American, Mr. Myrick is practically a British subject. He is the largest fish dealer we have on the Island; he has been there twenty years; has employed more men and done more to develop the fisheries than anyone else. I think the hon. gentleman must see that my contention as regards this vote is correct.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon. gentleman says that Messrs. Hall & Myrick are entitled to their claim. I think the Resolution shows the money is to be divided among British subjects, and if the others are not British subjects they will stand in the same position as Messrs. Hall & Myrick. The hon. gentleman will understand why American subjects are not intended to be included in this vote. They are citizens of the United States; the United States has committed a great wrong on them, and as citizens of the United States they can go to their own Government and get redress. If they do not get redress, they suffer from the wrongful act of their own Government, and certainly there is no reason, either in equity or generosity, why we should save them from an injury inflicted on them by their own Government. The hon. gentleman says that the Arbitrators would have nothing to do with this. I am not so sure of that; I do not want to dispute the hon. gentleman's position, but I say it is not free from doubt. The question submitted to the Arbitrators was the value of the fisheries of British North America for twelve years from the time of ratification of the Treaty; and it could be argued, with a good deal of plausibility, that quoad the United States and the Island, the ratification dated from argument, it is drawn up by the Minister of Justice as the the time of this argument. That might well be held; it recorded justification of this vote. What does it mean? If would be held in morals, though, perhaps, not strictly you say it is because it was inadvisable in the interests of according to the law as stated by the hon. gentleman. At all events, it was likely, from the reason the hon. gentleman stated, for fear it might raise a question as to the validity of the award, not thought advisable it should be pressed. I think these gentlemen have in fairness a claim for consideration. The hon. gentleman, as a guardian of the rights of Prince Edward Island, has pressed very strongly the view there should be a specified sum handed over to the Island out of the $5,000,000 that were awarded; we agree with the hon. gentleman as far as this vote is concerned, by giving those people a certain portion of it.

Mr. BLAKE. Besides some namesakes of the hon. gentleman, 1 find namesakes of other members of branches of the Legislature in the list. I do not know whether there is any connection between them.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Very likely they are members; Mr. Howlan is a Prince Edward Island man and so is Mr. Carvell.

Mr. BLAKE. It struck me their names were in the vote. It is important we should understand on what principle we are asking to pass this vote, even if we do not come from the Island, and are, therefore, not called on specially to vindicate its claim to the generosity of the Dominion. The clause, "It not having been deemed advisable in the general interest of the British case to put forward and press the claim of these merchants before the Halifax Commission, is put in as the reason why Canada is called on to vote this money. It is, of course, but right, if there was a valid claim on the part of these individuals which were not prosecuted before the Commission in the general interest-if we sacrificed the interests of certain individuals, whether of the Island or of any other Province, in the general interest— that they should be reimbursed for that sacrifice. That is a correct principle, but I deny the application of the principle in the case in hand, and I want to know whether the hon. gentleman has a report from the Commissioner of Canada, or from the counsel in the case, stating that, as a matter of fact, they believed that there was a claim which could, with propriety, be brought forward by those individuals, but which for some mysterious reason, in the interests of the British case, was not brought forward. Now, why was it thought inadvisable to put it forward in the interests of the British case? Is it because it was an invalid claim? Is it because, if granted, it would have vitiated the award? Then there is no reason. If it was thought inadvisable to put it forward because it was not a claim that could properly be brought forward, because it was not a claim which it would be right to press, because it was not a claim which was within the terms of reference, then of course there is no claim against us, because the reason for not bringing it forward is that it is an invalid claim, and that it is a claim which does not exist; and I quite agree that, if it is not a claim within the terms of the reference, in the opinion of the British Commissioner and the British Consul, it would have been extremely improper to bring it forward, because their first duty was to bring forward only such claims as were valid within the spirit and the letter of the reference. But if it is a valid claim within the spirit and the letter of the reference, if it is such a claim as, while having regard to the interests of these individuals, it would be proper to press, they determined it would be inadvisable to press in the interests of the British case, I want to know the reason why. Let us have no secrets about it now. What are the reasons why a claim which was valid within the letter and the spirit of the reference was not put forward in the interests of the British case. This memorandum is a formal opinion, it is a legal the British case to press an invalid claim, I agree with you; but I say that cuts away your ground for making a present of this money now, because, then under the circumstances, it is a present. But, if it was a valid claim in your opinion, and yet, notwithstanding its validity, there was some reason why it was inadvisable in the interests of the British case to press it, I agree with you, if there was such a reason, but I want to know what that reason was.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon. gentleman must allow another proposition to enter into the consideration. The counsel for Canada may have said : "We believe that this is a valid claim, that it fairly comes within the terms of the reference; but there is a doubt about it; it is a small amount, and we are not going to sacrifice the whole of the interests of the award for the sake of this sum" At all events, they did not press it. Then, how does it stand? The hon, gentleman must admit that a great wrong has been done to these people by the United States; Her Majesty's Government would not press it-that the hon. gentleman states; we have no means of pressing it —that the hon. gentleman knows. There being a wrong done to our fellow-subjects by the United States, they having no means of getting redress from the United States, and Canada having got a large award, there is, I think, a fair claim that we should not allow our fellow-subjects in Prince Edward Island to suffer from the wrong inflicted upon them. Under the circumstances, I think it is a fair and equitable claim. Though it is not exactly in point, in circumstance, to this case, yet the doctrine is well understood that, if any subject of any nation suffers a wrong from a foreign Government he has a right to claim redress from that Government through his own Government; but, if his own Government refuse to press that claim from any cause whatever, he then has a fair claim against his own Government. I think that is law. I think it will be found so decided by Lord Cottingham in the famous De Bode case. The law is simply this. He says:

"It is admitted law that, if the subject of a country is spoliated by a foreign Government, he is entitled to obtain redress from the foreign Government through the means of his own Government, but, if from weakness, timidity or any other cause on the part of his own Government, no redress is obtained from the foreigner, then he has a claim against his own country."

Here there is a wrong. There is no chance of their getting any redress from the United States. Then, I think they have a fair claim from their own Government for redress for this wrong. And I put it upon the further ground that we ought not to be niggardly in this matter, and we ought to remedy this wrong, when it is considered that Canada, as a whole, has been the gainer by that arbitration, and perhaps saved the award by not pressing the claim.

Mr. DAVIES. Then, let the hon. gentleman act in a generous spirit, and embrace them all. Mr. Hall was induced to act in this way upon the letter of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province. It is true that technically he is an American citizen, but everybody knows he has no remedy there.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. He can look to his own Government,

Mr. DAVIES. He cannot look to the Government. He has no remedy at all.

Mr. BLAKE. I think the American Government acted in a spirit entirely unworthy of that great nation in this matter. But, as I understand their excuse, they do not say, "We will not." They say, as I understand, "We made a proposition through the British Government to all the colonies, to all the various dependencies which were concerned in the negotiation of this Treaty. We proposed to them all to open their ports in anticipation of the Treaty. One did it; others did not; and, as the letter of our proposition was not acceded to, we decline to recognize the claim of that one." That is as I understand it.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes; that is it.

Mr. BLAKE. Now, having taken advantage of it as far as Prince Edward Island was concerned, their own fishermen having taken advantage of it, and having obtained the benefit, I say it was a course of conduct entirely unworthy of a great country not to make the compensation, not to refund the duties; but, on the other hand, I suppose in point of law the contention of the United States Government may be correct. I think that is probably the case. They made an offer to all, and that not being accepted by all, it was one and indivisible, and, in the strictly pettifogging spirit of an attor-ney, it does not lie against them. Then the case does not apply where a Government through timidity and feebleness -and no one who knows how this Government have dealt with important domestic questions this Session can accuse them of timidity or feebleness-or through some other cause not having pressed a claim against a foreign nation, the citizen has a claim against his own Government. That is very reasonable, but I am inclined to think that the Government which has, from weakness or timidity or any other cause, declined to press the claim against the foreign Government, will dec ine to recognize the claim of the citizen against itself. It will not plead guilty to the causes which gave rise to the claim of the citizen not being pressed. In this case, it is also not to be forgotten that the claim is not the claim of Prince Edward Island as a part of the Dominion. This was before Prince Edward Island became a part of the Dominion. This was a claim to be prosecuted by Prince Elward Island, through Great Britan, through the Empire; not by Canada, on behalf of Prince Edward Island, through the Empire, but by Prince Edward Island direct, through the Empire; and if before she brought forward the claim, she became part of the Dominion, it would be a claim in reference to the rights of the Prince Edward Islanders anterior to Confederation, in which we would be the mere vehicle or official conduct pipe of the Government, and the Government which has behaved ill under these circumstances is not the hon. gentleman's Government, but the Government of Great Britain, which, through feebleness, timidity or some other cause, has declined to bring this forward, if the claim was ever presented to them. But I do not suppose it was ever presented, because I fancy, in the strict letter of the law, it has been recognized that the United States, in this matter, have no quasi-legal liability. Then, if the case is so weak as has been brought forward, if in point of fact, it is an act of generosity, if it is to be bolstered up by the statement that Canada has received a large award and that it is not unreasonable, under the circumstances, that she should make good the loss, I think the hon. gentleman has some difficulty in meeting the argument of my non. friend behind me, because he finds that the very gentleman who made the application to the Lieutenant-Governor, who received the Lieut-enant-Governor's assurance that such and such would be the result, and upon the faith of that assurance invested his money, is to be cut out on account of his tech-nical citizenship of the United States, while he is making a present to all these other worthy gentlemen. It proves, under the circumstances, that it is better to be a Senator of Canada than a citizen of the United States.

Mr. DAVIES. I do not think the United States have even the poor excuse that they can get out of it by the letter of their agreement. The proposition they made was, that if Great Britain would recommend to Canada and Prince Edward Island to pass the necessary legislation to admit United States fishermen into the waters of these two Provinces, on their part the President would recommend to Congress to admit fish free of duty; in consideration of Great Britain doing a certain thing the President would do a certain thing also. Great Britain did discharge her part of the compact in recommending such legislation to Prince Edward Island and Canada, who adopted it, but the Presi-dent refused to discharge his. The consideration the United States asked for was granted, and that country, in neglecting to perform its part of the compact, committed as gross a breach of faith, legally and morally, as could be committed by any country; and I think, under the circumstances, the First Minister ought to see his way clear to close this mattor up.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. We cannot do it by this vote without a new Message.

Mr. McLELAN. The House will see, on the next page, wherein changes are made and wherein the salaries have been increased or decreased. In many of the ports additional officers are required, and in some cases the salaries have been increased.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. There seems to be tolerably large increases on which some explanation should be given. For instance, at Prince Arthur's Landing the hon. gentleman wants $1,120; at Toronto, he requires $3,450. 1 see at Ottawa there is a sum of $680 of an increase

Mr. McLELAN. At Ottawa a new officer, Scott, has been appointed at $800, and the extra pay has been decreased $120, making a net increase of $680.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Has there been any increase of trade here?

Mr. McLELAN. I cannot say.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Am I to understand that this is practically taken out of contingencies?

Mr. McLELAN. No; the $120, I think, was taken out of contingencies. In Toronto there has been a number of new appointments made, aggregating an increase of $8,200; there has been a decrease in the extra pay of $4,750 by transfers to the permanent list, making a net increase of $3,450. These new appointments were largely taken from parties paid by the day. The additional appointments were made over and above those paid by the day.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. 1 understand that four or five additional officers have been appointed at Toronto. This is a large increase, and although business has been increasing at that port, yet those additional officers can scarcely be required. Judging from the official returns, it tleman will make a note of it, so that explanations may be given on Concurrence.

Mr. McLELAN. In regard to Montreal, a number of the salaries have been increased, and some officers who were paid by the day have been made permanent. There have been two new appointments, at $1,400 each.

Mr. IRVINE. Why is there a decrease of $250 for the Woodstock, N.B., Custom House?

Mr. McLELAN. It is in consequence of the Collector having been suspended in April last.

Mr. IRVINE. I observe that the Government still persist in having a merchant act as Preventive Officer at Florenceville, at a salary of $200 per annum. If this is not changed, I will make a motion on this question and test the opinion of the House.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. If the statement of my hon. friend is correct, the appointment is quite contrary to the rules of the Department, which provide that a person actively engaged in trade cannot be employed.

Mr. BLAKE. I hope the Government will consider this matter before the Session is over, because the complaint is not a new one. The hon. member mentioned the subject last Session and discussed it fully, and the Minister of Customs said he was not aware that the person so employed was a merchant, and promised to make enquiries into the subject, at the same time conceding the fact, that if the officer was a merchant, the appointment was not in accordance with the rules of the Department.

Mr. IRVINE. The name of the officer is Charles Kearney. I told the Minister twice that all he had to do was to apply to the Minister of Inland Revenue, who knows as well as I do, that this gentleman is a merchant.

Mr. BLAKE. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will give an answer on Concurrence, as there is no use in persisting in a violation of the rules.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Is the hon. gentleman aware whether any Excise officers are also acting as municipal officers?

Mr. COSTIGAN. In one or two cases my attention has been called to the fact that some officers of the Department were otherwise engaged. I have a distinct recollection, in appears that the volume of trade has been diminishing one instance in the Province of Ontario, that an officer of largely within the last few months. Perhaps the hon. gen- the Department, while receiving a considerable salary, is the Department, while receiving a considerable salary, is also engaged in insurance, I believe, and in several other branches of business, and is besides a municipal officer. Complaint has been made on that ground. The question was submitted to our inspector, and he reported that there is nothing to prevent the officer from engaging in other business, so long as it does not interfere with the duties he is paid by the Department to discharge, and we have taken no step one way or the other.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. That may be; but it seems to me that the precedent is likely to lead to mischief, if Excise officers engaged in other occupations, or become even municipal officers. The hon. gentleman may be correct in stating that it is not expressly prohibited by law; but it the Collector, but certainly not to the Inspector, and that strikes me, and I think I have heard the hon. First Minister officer is at present receiving less than any officer in the express a similar opinion, that it is not advisable that Excise officers should be allowed to engage in other businesses, and on that ground we pay them larger salaries than we otherwise would.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I may say that, in this particular case, I felt some delicacy in taking rigourous action, because the gentleman to whom I refer is supposed to sometimes take an active part in politics, and against the present Government, and I thought any interference might look like retaliation. I agree with the hon. gentleman, however, that it would be advisable if the officers should confine themselves to the work of the Department.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I speak without knowledge or concern whether the parties in question employ their political influence either pro or con. I am speaking simply in the general interest of the service. Of course, if the matter has been acquiesced in by the hon. gentleman or his inspector for some time, it might be harsh to put a stop to it at an hour's notice. But I think it should be put a stop to within a reasonable time.

Mr. COSTIGAN. The vote of $50,000 for travelling expenses, rent, fuel, stationery, &c., shows an increase of $6,000, which will be easily understood when I say that we are increasing the number of meters and extending the operation of gas inspection every year, and for this purpose we must rent offices and increase the staff; but I think I shall be able to give the House a statement which will show that the increase which has taken place since 1878, in the number of officers and in the 'expenditure, has not been out of proportion to the increased duties imposed on the Depart-ment by the new industries under the regulation of the Department, which have been established in the country. The vote for stamps shows, apparently, an increase of $8,000. Last year $12,000 was voted in the ordinary Estimates, and $13,000 in the Supplementary Estimates, which brought the vote up to $25,000. The year previous there was $37,000 expended for the same purpose. So that this vote has really been reduced in two years by $17,000.

Mr. BAKER (Victoria, B.C.) I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Inland Revenue. what became of the $500 voted last year in the Estimates as an allowance to the Excise officers in British Columbia, to compensate for the increased cost of living as compared with the older Provinces. There has been no distribution of that amount, and I believe there is an Order in Council which precludes the possibility of its distribution in the direction in which it was put in the Estimates. What does the hon. gentleman intend to do, both with respect to this amount and the amount now in the Estimates

Mr. COSTIGAN. The hon. gentleman is quite right in stating that I was unable to expend that last year, on account of an Order in Council, which, I must say, appears to be a very reasonable one. That allowance is based upon the claim of increased cost of living, but an order was passed some two years ago declaring that when a salary of a person in Quebce, Manitoba, the North-West or British Columbia, was based on the scale of salaries applicable to the whole of the Provinces, he would be entitled to this allowance, but if fixed at a higher rate to meet this increased cost of living, it wou'd be unreasonable to expect a further sum for that purpose.

Mr. BAKER. The hon. Minister, although nearly accu-rate, is not strictly so. When these salaries were arranged for the officers of the Department in British Columbia, 15 per cent. was allowed, not 25 as allowed to Manitoba. know that the additional amount was not given to the Inspector of Inland Revenue; it may have been given to same position in the other Provinces. I would like to impress this on the hon. Minister.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I am sorry to see this sum increased and the receipts diminished. Last year, apparently, we only had $41,162 deposited to the credit of the Receiver-General; and, under the circumstances, being out of pocket every year some $30,000, we are asked to increase this vote. It does appear to me that this is really a very considerable abuse in practice, and that we ought not to be paying two dollars for every one we get, for the purpose of culling timber which really does not belong to us at all.

Mr. LAURIER. Can the hon. gentleman explain as to these superannuated cullers? I know it has been paid in former years.

Mr. COSTIGAN. That is to make up for the decrease we propose in the pay of cullers. The decrease having been made in that item, an increase appears in the other.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Still the increase is larger than the decrease. The increase is $5,600 and the decrease is $4,500, and the increased contingencies $3,700. The result is, as I stated, that we got last year $40,100, and on this we are called upon to pay $4,500 more. We are paying $31,800 more than we received in 1883. It does look like an abuse.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I stated that the $6,215 increase on the expenditure went to the Inspectors, Deputy Inspectors and Excisemen. As to Gas, there is an increase for travelling expenses.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. But here is a precisely similar item. "Rent, fuel, travelling expenses, &c., for Weights and Measures;" and immediately below, "ditto, ditto for Gas." If the hou. gentleman is taking here $6,500 for gas, I do not exactly see how he reconciles that with the statement he made a little while ago, that the in-crease of the last vote under the head of "Travelling ex-penses, rent, fuel, stationery, &c.," was largely due to the necessity of providing additional accommodation for Gas.

Mr. COSTIGAN. No; not accommodation for the officers, or anything like that. The $6,000 there, I stated, was largely on account of the additional travelling expenses incurred by the additional officers we had to appoint by extending the gas inspection to different cities, and by officers travelling more, on account of the great increase in the manufacturing establishments they had to visit.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The hon. gentleman specially refers to Gas, and here is a special vote for Gas.

Mr. COSTIGAN. If I included that in the previous item, I should not have done it.

Mr. BAKER (Victoria). I desire to ask the hon. the Minister of Inland Revenue if, in the aggregate here for the salaries of Inspectors of Gas, provision is made for the Inspector of Gas in the Province of British Columbia, and if it is his intention to put the Inspector of Weights and Measures and the Inspector of Gas together, to form a position separate and distinct from the Collector of Inland Revenue in that Province, and if provision is made in these Estimates for that.

Mr. COSTIGAN. 1 cannot answer the hon. gentleman as to the combination of the different offices he alludes to. I think I may say it is the intention to provide for the inspection of gas in British Columbia, and to appoint an officer.

Mr. BAKER. Hitherto the Collector of Inland Revenue in Victoria has performed the duties of Inspector of Weights and Measures. Now, in addition to that, I understand that an Inspector of Gas will be appointed. What I would desire to see, as representing that constituency, would be that the Inspector of Weights and Measures and the Inspector of Gas should be one and the same person, and that that same person should be separate and distinct from the Excise officershould not be the same individual.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I think the hon. gentleman is quite right, and it is upon that principle we generally act in making appointments.

Mr. BAKER. There is provision made in these Estimates for the appointment of an officer of that description.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Yes; there is provision made.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What does the hon. gentleman, want the additional $3,000 for?

Mr. COSTIGAN. It is a very small increase, I think. Under the vote of $12,000 we were enabled to maintain an analyst and provide for the inspection of food and drugs in There is also salary of the accountant, Macdonald, $1,200 ; Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

Montreal, London, Halifax, St. John, Quebec and perhads one or two more cities that I do not recollect now. It is desirable, of course, to extend the operations of that Act, and I am sure the hon. gentleman will admit that we cannot extend it very far with $3,000. We have made arrange-ments to extend it to Winnipeg. That will take part of the $3,000, and the balance will be used to extend it to any other city that we can with the means at the disposal of the Department.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. How comes that to be so expensive? and what do the lines in Manitoba and British Columbia pay?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The revenue has been largely increasing in British Columbia during the last three years, but I cannot tell how much these lines pay. I will give a statement for both lines on Concurrence.

Mr. BAKER (Victoria, B.C.) In British Columbia the receipts last year were close upon $13,000.

Mr. GAULT. The Department is doing so well in British Columbia with the telegraph service that I hope the Government will very soon take over the whole of the telegraphic and telephone lines of the country into their own hands.

Sir RICHARD CARFWRIGHT. That is a big question, which the Government will do well to consider. If I am rightly informed, the results in England have not been altogether so satisfactory as were expected. However, there is room enough for discussion.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. This is a big question, and I do not think that after midnight is a proper hour to discuss it.

208 Telegraph and Signal Service generally...... $9,500 00 209 Agent and Contingencies, British Columbia. 4,000 00

Mr. BAKER. I was not aware there was an agent specifically of the Department of Public Works in British Columbia. What is his salary?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The agent is the hon. Mr. Trutch, and the amount paid to him for the services he performs for the Department of Public Works is $600.

- ----

sllowance to Gamble, engineer for services rendered in connection with works under the control of the Department of Public Works, $360; messenger, $400; stationery, $200; fuel, $200; advertisement for tenders, &c., $200; travelling expenses and contingencies, $840; total, $4,000.

Mr. BAKER. When Mr. Trutch was appointed agent, were the members for the Province of British Columbia consulted or asked about who should be appointed to the position ?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The members of Parliament were not consulted. The appointment was made under the responsibility of the Government. We appointed a gentleman of high standing, and we have found him acting towards the Government in a very straightforward way, and I must say he is one of the best officers we have.

Mr. BAKER. I quite endorse what the hon. gentleman has said, but I desire to know whether members of particular constituencies or the Province generally have any say, or should be considered in these matters. That is all I wish to know. I am not casting any reflection on the integrity of the Minister of Public Works, or the ability of the gentleman so appointed. I have the very highest regard and esteem for both. At the same time, I desire, being a young politician, to know whether I have any right as a representative of a constituency, to have any say as to who shall be appointed to certain official positions in my constituency or not.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. In answer to the hon. gentleman, who says he is a young politician and does not know exactly what position he holds, I may say this: Of course a member has a perfect right to make representations and give advice to the Government, and the Government having received such and having weighed them well, act on their responsibility, and they appoint those whom they think best qualified for the service, and for those appointments they are responsible to Parliament.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I would suggest to the hon. member that the extent of the power of members in respect of recommending persons to offices is very apt to depend on the majority possessed by the Government. I have seen the time, ten or eleven years ago, when the hon. gentleman could have got exactly what he wanted from hon. gentlemen opposite.

Mr. BAKER. I am speaking generally, not particularly in regard to this matter, and I thought it a very opportune moment to ask for the information I desired. I believe the appointment in question was made previous to my representation, and I heartily endorse the appointment; but, at the same time, I am looking a little into the future, possibly into the near future, and I desire to know whether I am to be consulted in regard to matters appertaining or pertinent to my constituency.

Mr. CARLING. That depends on the amount of business done. If the mails go by the fast train, 8 cents; if by ordinary trains, 6 cents and 4 cents, according to business done, Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. We used to pay the Grand Trunk so much per mile over its entire length.

Mr. CARLING. That was a special arrangement with the Grand Trunk and also with the Great Western.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGAT. Then I understand that as regards the Canadian Pacific Railway, the arrangement is 8 cents, 6 cents, and 4 cents per mile.

Mr. CARLING. Yes; according to the business done, the number of trains and the speed of the trains.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I should like to have a statement showing what was paid last year to the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the estimate for the present year.

Mr. CARLING. They will be brought down.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What is the present allowance paid the Grand Trunk and Great Western per mile?

Mr. CARLING. The present rates are: Grand Trunk, $160 per mile; Great Western, $124; Intercolonial, $132; Prince Edward Island, $40. The other companies are paid by the mile according to work done.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Is it the intention of the Government to make a mileage arrangement with the Canadian Pacific Railway?

Mr. CARLING. It is not at present the intention of the Government to do so.

Mr. LANDERKIN. Is it the intention of the Government to increase the mail service on those railway lines which have now only one service a day? I wish to draw the attention of the Postmaster General to the fact that the railway from Palmerston to Wiarton and Durham passes through a thickly settled country, and the people wish two mails per day each way. The expense would be light, as we have now two trains to Palmerston, and I hope the Minister, as he is increasing his vote, will be able to give the people along that line all the convenience and benefits which may arise from proper postal facilities. The people in that locality, in common with the people in the country generally, have been giving the people in the cities free delivery and additional mail service, and they think it is a reasonable thing that the Postmaster-General should increase the service in that part of Canada. On the one line, the places which would be benefited would be Palmerston, Mount Forest, Holstein and Durham; and on the other, Palmerston, Harriston, Ayton, Neustadt, Hanover, Elmwood, Chesley, Tara, Alapford, and Wiarton-all thriving business places: I believe that the increasing revenue from this change would be such that the increased outlay would not be folt.

Mr. CARLING. I may say that an application was made to the Department for the increased mail accommodation the hon. gentleman has spoken of. The matter has been referred to the inspector for a report and as soon as that report is made to the Department, it will be favourably considered.

Mr. DESJARDINS. I would call the attention of the Minister to the necessity for increasing the service in the outlying municipalities around Montreal. The hon, gentleman has already considered the service in the post office in Montreal, and the new Hochelaga ward, but he is aware that outside the limits of the city there are a number of towns, such as St. Cunegonde, St. Jean Baptiste, and St. Gabriel, all large towns, which though not included in the municipal organization of Montreal are, to all intents and purposes, part of the city, and as such their postal service ought to be under the central office of Montreal, as there are large manufactories going on there all the time. I think the organization which has been adopted for Hochelaga ward should be adopted in all those municipalities. I hope the hon. Minister will give his attention to the matter. Mr. CARLING. The Chief Inspector of the Department has been at Montreal for some time examining into the working of the post office system there, and I expect that shortly some of the improvements which the hon. gentleman has mentioned will be carried out.

Mr. WATSON. I would ask the hon. gentleman if it is his intention to put on a daily mail between Portage la Prairie and Minnedosa, on the North Western Railway, as the people of Minnedosa only get a mail twice a week, although the trains are running daily. At Brandon, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, which is about the same distance, they have a regular mail, while in the case of Minnedosa, they have only two mails a week, and these mails are taken by stage a distance of 32 miles across the country.

Mr. CARLING. I understood that up to this time trains have not been running daily.

Mr. WATSON. Yes; they have.

Mr. CARLING. I believe a report has been sent in from the inspector, in regard to this matter, and if the railway company are running trains regularly, no doubt the arrangement will be made.

Mr. WATSON. Trains have been running daily for about six months.

Mr. GAULT. I am glad to see the great improvement in the postal facilities of Montreal, and I believe, before long, Montreal post office will be the model post office of the Dominion. I am glad the Postmaster-General is determined to make it so.

Mr. BAKER (Victoria, B. C.) I may state, that before leaving the capital last year, matters were arranged for the appointment of a city postmaster at Victoria, British Columbia. The salary of a second-class clerk was provided, $900 and, an addition of $600 to the inspector, making $1,500. My colleague and myself left here with the distinct understanding that that amount would be appropriated for the payment of the salary of city post-master, separate and distinct from the Post Office Inspector. At that time the Post Office Inspector was also the city postmaster, receiving $2,400. The gentleman who holds the joint position is 63 years of ago, and certainly has not the activity necessary for the position of city postmaster, so as to look after the young clerks in a proper way, and see that they perform their duties efficiently and persistently, as they should in so large and thriving a city as Victoria. I have no doubt that what has been done has been done unwittingly by the Postmaster-General, a gentleman for whom I entertain the highest respect, and I wish him to understand that when I protest against the change which has taken place, I do so in the interests of the public service of the constituency which we have the honour to represent. My colleague and I have advocated that the two positions should be kept separate and distinct. We were perfectly willing that the original Post Office Inspector should continue to hold that office and receive the salary which he then received; but what we really wanted was, a live man who would look after young fellows in the office, and see that they did their duty and would give satisfaction to the public. This can hardly be expected of a man who is sixty-three years of age. I think it would have been wiser to have left that gentleman in his position as Post Office Inspector, and to have appointed a gentleman whom we could recommend, under forty years of age. To my surprise and great chagrin, before reaching Ottawa this Session, the first notice I had of any change there was in an American paper, where I saw that the Post Office Inspector had been disrated, so to speak, and his subordinate, the assistant inspector placed over his head. I have every desire that Mr. Wallace should be retained in the position of inspector until he reaches the age of sixty-five, when I believe he should be compulsorily retired under the Civil Service Act, and the assistant inspector promoted in his place. Now, I notice that provision is made in the Estimates that that unfortunate individual who has been disrated to the city postmastership shall receive a salary of $2,400. I think the House will agree with me that under the Civil Service Act a city postmaster of the fifth class cannot receive more than $1,800. I am just as much one of the custodians of the public money as the members of the Cabinet, with all respect to them, and I would be failing in my duty if I did not point out this discrepancy. I move that $2,400 be struck out, and that $1,800 be substituted therefor. I appeal to the hon. Minister of Public Works if I am not correct in the statement I make.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. As the appeal is made to me, I will answer the hon. gentleman is perfectly right, that if the present officer should die, and another man were appointed in his place, we should have to act according to the Civil Service Act. But as this officer occupied the double position, and received this salary, he must be left with the salary he had before.

Mr. BAKER. I would like to have an explanation from the Postmaster-General.

Mr. CARLING. I would say to the hon. member for Victoria that if a new postmaster had been appointed, certainly his recommendation and that of his colleague would have been taken; but in the interest of the public service, and of the Post Office service in British Columbia, it was thought well that the gentleman who was acting as postmaster and inspector should cease to hold the two offices, and should be appointed to the office of Postmaster in the city of Victoria, and that his assistant, Mr. Fletcher, who has had considerable experience in the Department at Ottawa, and been a considerable time in British Columbia, and who was a younger man than the gentleman who was acting as inspector and postmaster should be appointed inspector. I believe that Mr. Wallace, who was the inspector and postmaster, is a very efficient man, and fills the office very satisfactorily to the Department, and that Mr. Fletcher also gives great satisfaction. As my hon, friend, the Minister of Public Works, has stated, if Mr. Wallace should cease to hold that office. then the person appointed in his place would come under the Civil Service Act, and would receive a salary of something like $1,800; but so long as Mr. Wallace lives, we give the salary that he had when he held the two positions.

Mr. BAKER. If the Postmaster-General is perfectly satisfied with the incumbents of these offices, I have no complaint to make against them, or that they should receive these salaries. At the same time, I say it was very unfair to promote the junior over the head of the senior, and I know, of my own personal knowledge, that a gentleman who was at one time inspector and ci y postmaster went to his bed and was sick for a week on the subject. So he evidently was not satisfied. As a matter of justice to him, I would say it was unfair to promote his junior over his head, and I desire that this error should be rectified.

Resolutions to be reported; Committee to sit again.

FIRST READINGS.

The following Bills (from the Senate) were severally read the first time :-

Bill (No. 132) to extend to British Columbia certain criminal laws in force in other Provinces of the Dominion.— (Sir Hector Langevin.)

Bill (No. 133) to extend to the Province of Manitoba an Act for the more speedy trial, in certain cases, of parties charged with felonies and misdemeanours -(Sir Hector Langevin).

Bill (No. 134) further to amend the Act respecting the Public Works of Canada.—(Sir Hector Langevin).

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The right hon. First Minister, having been obliged to leave the House, has asked me to say that a statement has appeared in the Globe newspaper that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company have applied to the Government for a further loan of $5,000,000. There is no foundation at all for this statement. There has been no application, either by the Company or by any member or director of the Company, for any such loan or any loan whatever.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to; and (at 1:20 o'clock, a.m.) the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, 4th April, 1384.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS.

THE PRINTING OF PARLIAMENT.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell), in moving the adoption of the Seventh Report of the Joint Committee of both Houses on the Printing of Parliament, said : This report was presented yesterday, and appears in the Votes and Proceedings to-day. It contains a report of the Sub-Committee in which is recommended the payment of a small gratuity of $100 for services rendered last year by Mr. Romaine and his assistant in the stationery office, for special work performed in making indexes and work of that kind, the amount to be divided between those two officers. It also contains the printing accounts of the Printing Committee, and although they had been audited by Mr. McDougall, the Auditor-General, the Committee considered that it would be well to continue the practice of auditing the accounts which they had adopted in the past, and they caused them to be audited again, and now submit them to the House. The report also recommends the granting, in answer to applications made by Mr. Romaine and Mr. Sloane, of $300 to one and $200 to the other, for special services rendered by them in the stationery office. The duties of that office are set forth in the report which is presented, and I need not here specially refer to them. I may mention, however, Mr. Speaker, that up to within the last three years the proof reading of all Parliamentary documents has been done by persons outside that office, with the exception of two documents, the list of bank shareholders and the penitentiary returns, which were read in the office of the Clerk of Stationery. The proofs of all the other documents were read by persons ontside, and at one time there were as many as four per-sons engaged outside the office in the work of proof-reading which is now done entirely within the stationery office. Then, Sir, the practice has also been recently adopted—and it is one of the services which it is proposed to reward in this report—of going carefully through all the documents and excluding from them dupli- No. 2 to the Report of Inland Revenue, 1883,-and Report cate matter and matter which is really not at all necessary on Adulteration of Food, being Supplement No. 3 to the

to be printed ; and when I tell the House that during the last year no less than 1,159 pages of manuscript were thrown out, without reference at all to the great care which had been exercised in condensing the matter which was put ir, it will be admitted that a very substantial service has been rendered by that department in this connection. I may also say that the preparation of the index with the Sessional Papers and Journals of the Session, is done now in the office, though it had always been done previously by clerks outside the office. In addition to that those members who are familiar with the work in the office itself as to the manner in which the stationery is now kept, and as to the economy which has been effected in the purchase of a cheaper class of envelopes and a cheaper class of paper for the translators' office and the Hansard, will, I think, all admit what was testified to by a Committee of the last Parliament on the subject, that very much more than the salary paid in that office has been saved by the officers who are now in charge of it, by the skill and industry which they have displayed in conducting it. The proposal is that, in accordance with what has always been the practice of the Printing Committee, they shall receive a small gratuity in addition to their salaries, for special services rendered to the Committee itself.

Mr. MACKENZIE. When was the stationery office placed in charge of the Joint Committee on Printing ?

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). The stationery office, 1 think, is not under the Committee; but this is work done in the stationery office-such work as proof-reading. The work of going through manuscript and excluding all unnecessary matter, and the work of preparing indexes for the Journals and appendices is certainly within the control of the Printing Committee.

Mr. MACKENZIE. No.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). The work is done in that office.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The position is this: The Printing Committee appear to have assumed the charge of certain offices in the building which are in connection with the House of Commons. The Printing Committee have nothing to do with the stationery office or with the Journals; they have simply to do with the printing of documents referred to them by both Houses. I object to the motion for the adoption of the report on a point of order: the Committee's report deals with matters which were never committed to them. I ask that the report and appendix be read.

The motion was allowed to stand.

MEGANTIC CONTROVERTED ELECTION.

Mr. SPEAKER informed the House that he had received from the Registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada, a certified copy of the judgment and decision of the said Court in the Election Appeal relating to the Electoral District of Megantic, in the Province of Quebec, wherein Louis Israel Colé, alias Fréchette, Appellant, and Jacques François Goulet, et al, Respondents, by which the said election was declared void.

Mr. SPEAKER also informed the House, that in conformity with the Act 37 Victoria, Chapter 5, Section 36, be had issued his Warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, to make out a new Writ of Election for the said Electoral District.

REPORTS PRESENTED.

The following Reports were laid upon the Table :-

Report on Weights and Measures, being Supplement

Report of the Department of Inland Revenue, 1883.-(Mr. Costigan.)

Volume 2 of the Census of Canada.-(Mr. McLelan.)

CONSOLIDATED RAILWAY ACT.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER introduced Bill (No. 135) further to amend the Consolidated Railway Act, 1879, and the Acts amending it. He said : The first section repeals section 46 of the Consolidated Railway Act, 1879, and substitutes another in its place. The amendment consists in, first, providing for a temporary or permanent diversion of a street or highway, where otherwise the railway would cross on a level. Secondly, in giving the company power to enter upon lands not more than 200 yards distant from the centre of the railway, and not being a garden, or orchard, or park, &c., for the purpose of repairing the railway and for carrying out the requirements of the Railway Committee. Section two provides that the Consolidated Railway Act, 1879, shall apply to all railways and railway companies subject to the legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada. It will be remembered that a year ago an Act was passed in respect to this matter, exempting certain companies that had express legislative sanction, and the clause removes that exemption. Section three provides first, that a railway company shall not with its funds purchase its own stock; and second, that it shall not with its funds acquire the shares, bonds or other securities of any other railway company whose line competes, or may compete, with it. A proviso is, however, inserted that the s ction shall not effect the right of any railway company in Canada to purchase shares, bonds or other securities of railways in the United States of America. It will be remembered that when the River du Loup Branch was purchased from the Grand Trunk, a condition was made that the amount paid by the Government for that branch should be applied in accordance with the view of the Governor in Council. It was also stated that the intention of the Grand Trunk was to promote the extentson of the line to Chicago. Under these circumstances we feel it is right to make this exemption, otherwise we would prevent their carrying out the objects that were sanctioned. Section four provides for the appcintment of commissioners to make enquiries into accidents on railways causing loss of life or damage to property. I may say that in consequence of the very terrible accident which occurred near Toronto by a collision in which there was a great loss of life, and in which a great many persons whose lives were not sacrificed were seriously injured, application was made to the Government by some of the public authorities asking the Government to cause a strict examination to be made into the accident; but on looking into the matter it was found that it was doubtful if the power was possessed by the Government to hold such investigation; and the object of this clause is to enable the Government in cases of that kind, to make enquiry into accidents on railways causing loss of life or damage to pro perty. Section five adds to the powers of the Railway Committee, and gives them authority: First, to regulate the rate or speed at which trains and locomotives may be run in any city, town, or village; second, to regulate the use of the steam whistle within any city, town or village; third, to impose penalties for contravention of this section. Very many complaints are made in various sections of the country as to the use or rather the abuse of the steam whistle; and complaints have reached me from many localities where church congregations are thus disturbed on Sunday during service.

Mr. MACKENZIE. That is a matter of municipal regulation. The municipalities have power to deal with it, and power to regulate it, and I know this has been done in very many cases.

Mr. SPEAKER.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. At all events that question will come up when we deal with that clause of the Bill. I am inclined to think, however, that it would not be outside the authority of this Parliament, with regard to any railway under its control to provide for anything of that sort. I think it will be found that that authority will not interfere with any municipal right, or prevent the municipalities from taking such action as they may desire. The third clause imposes penalties for contravention of that section. The sixth section provides that trains shall not be allowed to stand on highways longer than five minutes at one time, and provides penalties for the contravention of this provision. After a good deal of examination into this question the Raiway Committee came to the conclusion that five minutes was a reasonable time and this amendment provides for carrying out the views then expressed. The seventh section provides that railway companies are to keep crossings in proper condition, and that persons for whose use such crossings are made shall keep the gates closed and shall be liable for a penalty for contravening the provisions of this clause. There has been a great deal of difficulty about this question of crossing and of keeping gates closed in connection with the killing of cattle on railways, and it has been a question as to where the fault lies for the killing of cattle which have had access to the road. The eighth section repeals the fourth subsection of the 15th clause of the Consolidated Railway Act of 1869, and substitutes another for it. The effect of the amendment is to make the section applicable to cases where a roadway is carried under as well as over a railway. Section nine provides that a Judge of the Superior Court or County Court, or in the North-West Territory a Stipendiary Magistrate, and not the Minister of Railways and Canals, shall appoint the third arbitrator. There is found to be a good deal of difficulty in these remote sections of the country, in obtaining the third arbitrator, as the law now provides that he shall be appointed by the Minister of Railways. That provision occasions a good deal of delay, and it is thought it will be better to place the appointment in the hands of a Judge of the Superior or County Court, and in the North-West Territory, a Stipendiary Magistrate. These are the general provisions of the Bill which I have the honour to introduce.

Bill read the first time.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved that when the House adjourns this day it shall stand adjourned until Saturday at three o'clock, and that Government Orders shall have precedence on that day. He said : I have adopted the suggestion of the hon. gentleman.

Mr. BLAKE. Of course it is understood that we will have an evening session.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes.

Motion agreed to.

SUPPLY-PUBLIC EXPENDITURE.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY moved the House again resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Mr. CHARLTON. Before you leave the Chair I wish to place a motion in your hands, and before doing so I will speak to the subject matter of the motion as briefly as I can. The rapid increase of the expenditure of this country, especially for the last two years, is in my opinion a matter that ought to excite alarm. And although the increase in the Customs taxation in this country has been very large indeed, that increase amounting to $12 per head of a family in the year 1883, as compared with 1878, yet, in the face of that very material increase, the public debt is increasing very rapidly, and will continue to increase still more rapidly in the near future. The financial history of this Dominion naturally divides itself into three periods, the first period extending from the date of Confederation to the year 1873, when the Reform Administration came into power; the second period extending from 1873 to the year 1878, when the gentlemen now occupying the Treasury benches came into power again, and the third period ex-tending from the time these gentlemen came back to office, down to the present day. The expenditure chargeable to Consolidated Fund in the year 1867-68, was $13,486,092; in 1873-74, it was $23,316,316, or an increase in six years of $9,830,000, or an annual average increase of $1,635,000. The expenditure for the first year of the second period, commencing with 1873-74, was $23,316,316. The expenditure for the year 1877-78 was $23,503,158, an increase of $186,842 for the period, or an average annual increase of $46,710. For the third period the expenditure, commencing with the year 1877-78, was $23,503,158, and the expenditure, based on the Estimates for the current fiscal year, will be $32,009,747, or an increase of $8,506,559, or an average annual increase for the third period of $1,417,761. And if we were to add one important item, now charged to capital account, which during the regime of the Reform Administration was charged to income, to wit, the expenditure on Dominion Lands Surveys-if that were added, as it should be added, to the current expenditure chargeable to income, the sum would be $652,000 larger. In that case, the total increase would amount to $9,058,589, or an average annual increase of $1,509,444. As is well known, Sir, the expenditures of this country are placed under three distinct heads-first, expenditure for debt and subsidies, an expenditure over which Parliament has very little control; second, ordinary controllable expendi-ture; and third, charges upon revenue, for carrying on Customs, Excise, post offices, public works, &c. Now, Sir, the desire of a Government to exercise economy must be shown in the matter of controllable or ordinary expenditure; and that expenditure, we shall find, increased in the first period I have named, the period from 1867 to 1873 with extraordinary rapidity. In 1867-68 the controllable expenditure was $3,630,298; in 1873-74 it was $8,324,076; or an increase in six years of $4,693,778, or 123 per cent., the average annual increase being $728,296. The record of the Reform Administration presents a great contrast. Commencing with an ordinary controllable expenditure in 1873 74 of $8,324,076 they reduced it to $6,542,510 in 1877.78, a decrease of $1,781,566, or 21 per cent. Coming down to the third period, we find that the controllable expenditure increased from $6,542,510 in 1877-78 to $9,253,870 in 1882-83, an increase of $2,711,360, or 41 per cent. Briefly, then, the controllable expenditure shows an increase in the first period from 1867 to 1873 of 128 per cent., a decrease from 1873 to 1878 of 21 per cent., and an increase again from 1878 to 1833 of 41 per cent.; and if we summarize these results, and place the first and the third period together, amounting to 13 years, we shall find that the total increase in the expenditure chargeable to the Consolidated Fund during those periods was $18,336,812, or an average annual increase of $1,410,524, while the average in the annual increase under the Reform regime, second period was $46,710; or, to place the contrast in another light, the average annual increase under the Conservative Administration during those two periods was thirty-fold greater than the average annual increase lunder the Reform Administration, from 1873 to 1878.

Now, Sir, I have hitherto assumed that my hon. friend at my right was only responsible for the expenditures in the years 1875, 1876, 1877 and 1878. The Reform party, if my recollection serves me, took office on the 8th of November, 1873. At that time a little over three months of the financial year had passed away, and seven months and twenty-two days of the financial year were under the supervision of my hon. friend at my right. The Reform Government resigned on the 10th of October, 1878, giving to our friends opposite eight months and twenty days of that financial year. Now, Sir, a more accurate mode of making a comparison between the expenditures of the two Administrations can be adopted than that which I have pursued. If we take the sum which my hon. friend opposite took power to expend for the year 1873-74, and; if we find that that sum was not oxceeded by the expenditure actually made, then I think we may reasonably assume that the hon. gentleman was responsible for the expenditure of that year. Now, I find that my hon. friend opposite took power to expend in the year 1873-74 $23,685,000, made up as follows:—

By original Estimate	$20,941,183
By first Supplementary Estimate	368, 340
By second " "	57,300
By third " "	100,000
By 36 Vic., chaps. 30 and 41, and New Brunswick Subsidy (assumed Pro-	, vincial debts) By 36 Vic., chap. 31 (provided increased	819,349
Balaries, &c)	300,555
of Prince Edward Island) By 36 Vic., chap. 35 (provided organiza-	418,000
tion of Mounted Police By balance carried forward under Order	200,000
in Oouacil	480,282
Total	$23,685,009

This sum was not exceeded by the actual expenditure made by my hon. friend at my right. On the contrary, he re-duced it by $369,000, his actual exponditure being $23,316,316. For this reason we can properly hold hon. gentlemen opposite responsible for the total expenditure of 1873-74. Now, Sir, the Estimates of my hon. friend at my right, including the Supplementary Estimates, for the year 1878-79-of which year hou. gentlemen opposite were in office for eight months-amounted to $23,669,000. Now, the question is, had my hon. friend remained in office, would the expenditure for that year have exceeded this estimate? I believe I am warranted in saying that it would not, and I will cite some corroborative evidence bearing on the matter. I find that the expenditure of 1876-77 was $23,519,301, and the expenditure of 1877-78 was $23,503,158, a docrease of $16,143. Well, Sir, the Estimates for 1879-79 provided for an increase over the expenditure of 1877-78 of $165,842. Bearing in mind, therefore, the fact that the expenditure in the preceding year had decreased, as com-pared with the expenditure for the year which preceded that, I think I am warranted in saying, that had my hon. friend remained in power, the expenditure of 1878-79 would not have exceeded the Estimates for that year. I think we are warranted in saying, and I think my hon. friend will bear me out in assorting that the expenditure for 1878-79 would not have exceeded the estimates made by my hon. friend, to wit $23,669,000. This, therefore, establishes a basis upon which to make a comparison as to the expenditure during these different periods; and upon this basis we find that my hon. friend opposite did expend in 1878 79 $786,381 more than my hon. friend on my right had estimated the expenditure for that year would be. On this basis, the expenditure for 1873-74, when the Reform Administration came into power, was $23,316,000, while the expenditure for 1878.79, under the Administration of hon. gentlemen opposite was $23,669,000, or an increase during that period of $352,684, making an average annual increase of $70,536. In making a comparison upon this more accurate basis, we find that the increase during the third period, the period from 18.89, to the present day, has been from $23,669,000 to $32,009,747, or a total increase of $8,340,747, being an average annual increase of $1,168,165. Now a comparison of the increases on this true basis would show as follows:-From 1868 to 1874, the incience was $9,830,223, averaging annually $1,638,370; the annual average increase in the period from 1878-79 to 1883-84 was $1,668,165, based upon the estimates of the current fiscal year; and the average annual increase under the Reform Administration was $70,536. This reveals this startling fact that the ratio of increase in the first period from 1867 to 1873-74 was 23 fold greater than the increase under the Reform Administration, and that the ratio of increase in the second period from 1878-79 to 1883-84 was 23 6-10 fold greater than the ratio of increase in the preceding period under the Reform Administration. This shows a remarkable contrast between the first period and the second-showing an increase 23 fold greater in the first compared with the second; and a still more remarkable contiast between the second and third, the increase in the latter being 23 6-10 fold over the former. What greater financial contrast could be presented between the Administration under Reform and the Administration under Conservative control? I am well aware that my hon.friend will say that the increase in expenditure is more apparent than real; I am well aware that he will advance the argument that many public works were created, and that from the cost of management of these public works which is set down in the expenditure should be deducted to the revenue derived from these public works, to arrive at a true estimate of the increase of the expenditure of the country. I admit there is force in that contention, but if it were applied to the second period, the period of the Reform Administration from 1873 to 1878, if from the cost of managing the public works created by that Administration had been deducted the revenue derived from these works, the expenditure under the Reform Administration would have shown a large reduction instead of a slight increase, as compared with that under the preceding and subsequent Conservative Administrations. The truth is that our expenditure for the purpose of creating public works has gone on with tolerable regularity since 1871. The expenditure on public works in the second period of which I have been treating, the period when the Reform Administration was in power, was largely in excess of that in the first of these periods from 1867 to 1873, and was very little less than that in the third period from 1878 to the present time; and the population increased as rapidly in that period of the Fefo m Administration as in the previous one and more rapidly then in the subsequent one. The Reform Administrat on were called on to provide increased postal facilities and neur increased expenditure in consequence of increased popu ation; our settlement had already commenced in the North-West; and the Reform Government spent over $40,000,000 in the creation of public works. I hold therefore that the argument that the increase of expenditure is more apparent than real, in consequence of the fact that public works have been created and the cost of maintaining them charged to expenditure, will apply with equal force to the period from 1873-74 to 1878-79 as to the preceding and subsequent periods.

So much for the question of increases in expenditure. I now propose very briefly to refer to the increase in the public debt under the Reform Administration as compared with the increase in this debt under the present Administration. It is well known that an estate may be encumbered by its possessor and that his heirs and assigns are bound to pay the obligations incurred by him; and it is well known that a Government may incur obligations which its successors are obliged to dis-charge. Were the Reform party to get into power to morrow, they would be bound to carry out the obligations of 'the Government now in power; they would be bound to cerry out the clions Syndicate contract which they fought with all the energy they possessed; they would be bound expenditure, on this basis of calculation, under my hon. to carry out the arrangements made this Session by which friend, amounted for five years to seven tenths of one per the Government has become sponsor and partner in a great railway monopoly. They would not be responsible for these obligations; but in carrying on the Government of the country, they would be obliged to fulfil the obligations entered into by their predecessors in office. When my hon. friend from East York (Mr. Mackenzie) became First Minister, he found certain obligations resting on the country; and in discharging these obligations, he was compelled to expend large sums of money. The expenditure in each of these years, therefore, increased largely, not in consequence of any motion or act of his, but in carrying out the obligations entered into by his predecessors, obligations for which he was not responsible and against the incurring of many of which he had strengly protested. As First Minister, however, he was bound to see that they were discharged. On the 30th of June, 1874, our public debt amounted to $108,324,964; on June 30th, 1879, it had increased to $142,990,187, or an increase of $34,665,223. There is the fact admitted then of the increase in the public debt; the next question to examine is the cause of that increase. Was it in consequence of any act of my hon. friend (Mr. Mackenzie)? I answer it was not. What then was the cause? The hon. gentlemen now in power had made a certain contract or arrangement for the construction of a railway from the St. Lawrence river to Halifax, the Intercolonial Railway. The increase in the debt in consequence of this work amounted to $5.283.965: the increase due to the Canadian Pacific was $11,032,617, and the increase through work on the canals and other public works, $17,645,985, and out of this entire sum, my hon. friend was only responsible for an expenditure of $250,000 on the St. Peter's Canal. These expenditures make up the increase of the debt less $682,656 and that deficiency is more than accounted for by payments into the sinking fund. Or we could make a comparison extending over a little broader period. The debt on the 30th June, 1873, was $99,848,461, and on the 30th June, 1879, $142,990,187, or an increase of $43,041,726; and it was caused by these expenditures— debts allowed to Provinces in 1873, $4,927,060; increase due to Intercolonial Railway, $8,701,626; increase due to Canadian Pacific Railway, $11,362,841; increase due to canal enlargement and public works, $18,172,796; total, $44,164,323, or an expenditure for these objects in excess of the increase of the public debt for that period of $1,122,597, for all of which again the Government now in power were responsible, except the paltry expenditure upon the St. Peter's Canal. It may be said that my hon. friend might have cancelled these contracts, that he might have ceased these expenditures.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. There were no contracts made.

Mr. CHARLTON. What would have been said if the expenditure upon the Intercolonial road, which was almost half completed, had been suspended? What would have been said by the Opposition if the policy of the Government as to the expenditure for the enlargement of the canals had been suspended ? What would have been said if no attempt had been made to afford the North-West an outlet, which it had become apparent was necessary? Why, my hon. friend was obliged, under the very circumstances of the case, to proceed with these expenditures that had been entered upon by the preceding Government and with these works which had been largely advanced by them.

We may hold, then, that the Administration of my hon. friend from East York was characterized, first, by an arrest in the increase of expenditure. The Government that had preceded him had increased the expenditure $9,800,000 in round numbers in six years. He arrested this increase, and it only amounted to $365,8:2, on the correct basis of comparison, in five years. The percentage of increase of expenditure, on this basis of calculation, under my hon.

cent. only, while the increase of the population of this country during the same period was over 8 per cent., or the ratio of the population increase was eleven times greater than the ratio of increase in expenditure. The Administration of my hon. friend was characterized, secondly, by an arrest in the increase of debt, except as due to the obligations incurred by his predecessors. It was characterized, in the third place, by honesty in the mode of letting contracts. A clause was incerted in the Canadian Pacific Railway Bill of 1874 which debarred that Government from letting any contract for more than $10,000 without having first advertised for tenders, a clause which was entirely disregarded by their successors when the Syndicate contract was entered into, although that Statute was still in force. He made provision in reference to tenders for public contracts requiring a deposit of 5 per cent. of the amount as an evidence of good faith, and to prevent a species of thimblerigging and log-rolling by which other than the lowest tenders were saddled upon the Government. In all this we had an example of frugality, of economy, and of honesty, and that example stands in striking contrast to the example of extravagance, waste, and reckless increase in expenditure that characterizes the period before and the period subsequent to the period when my hon. friend was in office.

Now I intend to make two or three pertinent comparisons between the debt burden, the interest charge, and the expenditure of this country and of the United States. And, Sir, if these comparisons should be unfavourable to Canada, I trust I may not be accused of lack of patriotism, for cer-tainly I do not believe it is the duty of a patriot to conceal the truth from his fellow citizens. In the intimate relations in which the United States and Canada are placed towards each other, the financial condition of one of the countries, if much worse than that of the other, must necessarily exercise an unfavourable influence upon its progress. Both countries have large areas of unoccupied lands, both countries are desirous of having their latent resources developed, both countries desire to prevent an exodus of their own citizens, both countries desire to secure immigration of the right class; and, in order to retain their own citizens at home, in order to offer inducements to foreigners to emigrate to either of the countries, it is desirable that one country should not have a heavier debt burden, a greater amount of expenditure, a heavier interest charge than the other; and, if Canada is advancing rapidly to a position where its debt charge per capita will be very much larger than that of the United States, where its interest charge and its expenditure account will be heavier, where its Customs duty taxation will be heavier, all these things will exercise an unfavourable influence upon the prosperity of the country; and it is the duty of the Government of this country to avoid any such result as that. Unfortunately we have advanced very far towards obtaining a position were a contrast between our elves in this respect and the United States would be very unfavourable to us, and for this reason I hold, among others, that it is necessary we should call a halt in the progress we are making towards financial embarrassment. I shall make these few compa-risons and then conclude. I take the population of the United States in 1883 at 54,000,000, and the population of Canada at 4,400,000. I find that the Customs and Excise of the United States for that year amounted to $359,426,864, or $6.65 per head of the population; that the Customs and Excise for Canada amounted to $29,269,698, or $6.65 per head-identically the same. I find that the Customs duties, leaving out the Excise, for the United States were $214,706,496, or $3.97 per head; and for Canada, $23,009,582, or $5.22 per head; excess of Canada over the United States, $1.25 per head, or 31 per cent. I find that the gross expenditure, including capital account, stood as follows :-United States, $265,408,131, or per head, $1.91; Canada, public debt-was $163,578,402, or an amount per head of $42,901,560, or per head, $9.75; difference per head, $4.84 $36.33 on an estimated population of 4,500,000, which against Canada; difference per cent., 98 against Canada. I find, if we compare the United States gross expenditure, capital expenditure and all, with our own expenditure chargeable to income, we get the following result :--Gross expenditure of the United States, as stated before, $265,408,131, or $4.91 per head; expenditure of Canada chargeable to Consolidated Fund, $28,730,151, or $6.52 per head; difference, $1.61 per head against Canada's Consolidated Fund expenditure compared with the American gross expenditure, or 32 per cent. The expenditures of the United States are exceptionally large, because that country is placed in exceptional circumstances. It is not many years since the country passed through a great civil struggle, and it has an enormous pension list. That pension list, for the year 1883 amounted to $66,012,000. In addition to that it has a large army and navy list amounting to $54,194,000 for that year. The total under these three heads was $130,206,000. Now, Sir, our expenses for the same items, including mounted police, for that year were $1,310,625; and if we make these deductions in each case from the expenditure the statement will stand as follows: Gross expenditure in the United States, deducting the three items of pensions, army and navy, $135,10.,000, or $2.50 per head; Canada, gross expenditure chargeable to income only, after doducting these items, $27.419,5.32, or $6.23 per head. If we take Canada's gross expenditure as compared with that of the United States it would be deducting these items, $41,590,935, or $9.38 per head. In the one case, comparing Canada's gross expenditure with that of the United States, the excess in Canada would be 275 per cent. over that of the United States, and in the other case, taking the gross expenditure of the United States and deducting the items of pensions, army and navy in each country, and comparing that with the expenditure of Canada chargeable to the Consolidated Fund, the excess for Canada would be 149 per cent. In addition to this the United States have their consular and diplomatic service to provide for, which is another expense in excess of any we have in this country to speak of. If we go back a few years in the history of the United States, and take that country when its condition nearly resembled our own in regard to development and wealth per head, if we take, for instance, the period from 1850 to 1849 inclusive, a period of ten years, I find that the revenue of that country from Customs and Excise duty amounted to $217,411,000, or an annual average of $21,741,000 for that period, on an average population of 20,130,000. Take Canada from 1874 to 1883 inclusive, when our condition more nearly resembled that of the United States in the period mentioned, and we will find in that ten years that the revenue from Excise and Customs amounted to $210,936,000, or an annual average of $21,093,000 on an average popula-tion of 4,070,000. The average annual taxation from Customs and Excise per head was, in the United States, $1.08 per head, while in Canada it was $5.15, or 4.9 times greater in Canada than in the United States. Now, when we contrast our present condition and state of development with that of the United States during the period of ten years I have mentioned, and when we consider that our expenses now are nearly five times greater per head than were those of the United States at that time, I think we may reasonably assert that our expenses are altogether too high. In the matter of the public debt, I find that the public debt of the United States on March 1st, was $1,483,501,000; that debt was reduced in the month of March by $15,000,000 in round numbers, making the debt on the 1st of April, $1,468,501,000, or an amount per head of $26.68 on an esti-mated population of 55,000,000. The public debt of Canada according to official returns, on the 1st of January-the net is undoubtedly too high. I find, Sir, that the debt of of Canada exceeds that of the United States by $9.65 per head, or 36 per cent. Now, the United States debt is rapidly decreasing; there was a reduction of $15,000,000 last month, and the reduction during the present year will probably be more than $100,000,000. We may reasonably suppose that in three years from this time that debt will not exceed $1,300,000,000, or a per capita charge on the present population of $23.63; while we may assume with equal certainty that within the next three or four years our own net public debt will reach the sum of $200,000,000, or a per capita charge upon the present population of $44.44, or in three years from this time it will be within a fraction of double that of the United States. I have no doubt that when the three years have elapsed we will find that the net charge is double, per capita, that of the United States, which will be a very bad showing for this country The interest charge per head was 95 cents in indeed. the United States for the past year, while it is $.75 per head in Canada, an excess of interest charge in Canada of 80 cents per head, or an excess of 84 per cent. as compared with that of the United States. Now, Sir, it is but a few years ago-I do not remember the exact number, but not more than six years ago, certainly-when the case was reversed and when the interest charge in the United States exceeded that in Canada. It is only five or six years since the orbits of the two countries crossed; and since that time our interest charge has been increasing over that of the United States until to-day it is 84 per cent. greater. I will not trouble the House further with comparisons. These figures challenge attention.

An hon. MEMBER. Yes.

Mr. CHARI/TON. An hon. gentleman says, "Yes." S^o they do, Mr. Speaker. The fact that the annual expenditur^e of this country has increased in the last five years over $8,300,000 as compared with an increase of $365,000 in the preceding five years; the fact that notwithstanding the great increase of taxation the public debt of this country is rapidly advancing in volume; the fact that the policy of the Government is distasteful to a large portion of the people of this country in the matter of its Syndicate contract, in the matter of its partnership lately entered into with the Canadian Pacific Railway, in the matter of its land policyall these facts are producing their legitimate and natural result; and, Sir, there will doubtless be a greater exodus from Canada in the present year than this country has ever seen before. Rumours of this come from every part of the West. From my own riding I hear that sixty families are moving from one township to the United States; I hear that the very best men in that Province are moving, not to the North West, but to the United States. I hear complaints coming from all parts of the West, that the country is ruined, that it is no longer prudent to remain in this country, that the Government of the day are involving it in difficulties so great that the property of this country must continue to decrease in value, and that its development and prosperity are likely to be arrested if this policy is continued. That feeling, Sir, is producing its natural results; that feeling, Sir, is one that is going to produce disaster in this country, and, unfortunately, that feeling has, to a certain extent, good ground for its existence; unfortunately, Sir, the management, or rather the mismanagement of the affairs of this country, has been so reckless and has increased the taxation so largely, and the prospective increase of the public debt is so great, that business men deem it only prudent to flee from the wrath to come. I think, Sir, that we ought to do something to avert the ruin to which we are hastening. I shall not detain the House any longer, but move the following amendment:

The Expenditure for 1878, was $23,503,158.25; —that the Estimates for 1884 amount to $32,009,747.48, that the increase of expenditure chargeable to Consolidated Fund between 1878 and the succeeding years, is as follows :—

	1879	increase	over 187	8	$ 952,223	31
	1880		"	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	1,347,476	20

That the expenses of Dominion Land Surveys, amounting to $652,000 in the Estimates of 1884, which are charged to Capital Account, are of a character more properly chargeable to Income, as was done in 1878;

character more properly chargeable to income, as was done in 1878; and they increase the excess of expenditure over that year to $9,058,589.13. That the revenue from Customs for the year 1878 was $12,782,824, being a tax of $15.60 per head of a family on the estimated population of Canada in 1878, while the revenue from Customs for the year 1883 was $23,009,582, being a tax of $25.70 per head of a family on the estimated population of Canada in 1883. population of Canada in 1883.

That a very large proportion of the expenditure consists of fixed charges, or charges of a permanent character, which, when once created, are difficult of reduction.

That recent legislation, and the completion of existing engagements will result in a large increase of the public debt, and a steady increase of the public charges.

That this House views with regret the great increase in the burdens imposed upon the people by Customs duties, and the undue and rapid increase of the expeuditure.

Sir LE NARD TILLEY. Mr. Speaker, if such statements as have been made by the hon. member had been presented to the House for the first time, and had not been many times answered, I would have felt it to be my duty to have occupied more time in answering them than I think it necessary at this late period of the Session; and I think I will meet the wishes of the House by dealing with them as briefly as possible, and by taking up only a few of the leading points in order to show the fallacy of those statements. The hon. gentleman has drawn a contrast between taxation in the United States and taxation in Canada. The hon, gentleman had a perfect right to do so, and this course could not be objected to, because in dealing with the condition of our country it is quite natural we should consider it as compared with that of the country lying alongside of it. If the hon. gentleman had confined himself to the statements he made on that subject, instead of launching out to speak of the dissatisfaction that existed in his locality with respect to the state of affairs in Canada driving, as he says, people out of the country by hundreds and thousands, he would have acted more wisely, and he would have shown more patriotism than he has shown on this and former occasions. It must be borne in mind that the condition of Canada differs very materially from that of the United States. The General Government contributes nothing whatever to the support of the different States. Under our constitution it is provided that a very large proportion of the money required for education, railways and bridges, and other objects, which otherwise would compel direct taxation, is furnished by the Dominion Government and the Provinces are relieved to that extent of taxation. I recollect when visiting the United States some years ago, in conversation with a friend relative to the taxation of the country, he said the taxation of the General Government was nothing compared with the State and local taxation; and he brought out a statement to show that he paid that year no less than 3 per cent. on the value of his property for local and State taxes. We have comparatively no direct taxation in this country for Provincial purposes. The different Provinces are sustained very largely out of the subsidies granted by the Dominion Government, for which the people generally are taxed; and if the hon. gentle-man had been fair and desired that the country should occupy its true position in the eyes of our American neighbours and the outside world, he would have said that it is but right I should point out that such difference between the taxation in the two countries is more apparent than real. It would have been better for the hon, gentleman had he done so. We know that a large portion of the debt of the United States was created by the civil war, we know that the debt of Canada has been created-and I have the declaration of the hon. member for West Huron in support of my statement-that in the expenditure for public, works we have indirect value, if not direct value, for the expenditure. We have subsidized railways, and constructed railways; we have the best canal system in the world, which has cost millions; we have indeed a great deal to show that the net debt of Canada has been in a large degree created by the construction of these valuable public works. The hon. gentleman should have called attention to that fact, and he might have taken the prospectus issued by the late Finance Minister in London, and shown that although our debt is large, and has been increasing for a number of years, yet we have good value to show for it. That would have been a better line to have taken, and one more in the interests of the country, and it would have shown the condition of the Dominion more fairly than it has been represented by the hon, gentleman. Now, Sir, it has been a common thing for the last six or seven years or more-aye, for ten years-to speak of the debt of the Dominion of Canada in 1867, and compare it with 1873.74. Why, Sir, do we not know that a large portion of the increase of that debt was not oppressive to the people of the Dominion of Canada-was not in fact a tax on the people of Canada; it was simply assuming on the part of the Dominion of Canada the debt which had rested on the Local Legislatures, they having the general power of taxation, which the Local Legislatures had not; so that it was simply taking the money out of one pocket and putting it in the other, and was not increasing the burdens of the people. Still we are told that this increase of debt, which was perhaps $14,000,000 or $15,000,000, assumed by the Government of Canada in 1873, was an increased burden on the people, when as a matter of fact, it was no such thing. Then, Sir, the hon. gentleman prides himself on the fact that there was no great increase of expenditure from 1873 to 1878. Why, Sir, we had no new Provinces coming in during that period. But what had we done from 1807 in 1873? We had brought in Prince Edward Island, and with her we had necessarily to have an increase of debt, because we gave to that Province what we had ourselves, and a little more, as the debt which her people were permitted to come in under, owing to the peculiar circumstances of the case. We brought in an increased population, and with them we brought in an increase of the debt. We brought in British Columbia, and with her came an increased population, increased territory, and an increased debt. With Manitoba and the North-West we brought in an increased population, a largely increased territory, and an increased debt-all these Provinces adding to the debt and adding to the expenditure. And yet the hon. gentleman affirms that the increased expenditure from 1867 to 1873, was a proof of the extravagance of the Government of that day. In 1867, when this Union was formed, we did not know what our revenues would be, what our circumstances financially were to be; and the greatest economy had to be used for the first two or three years. Scarcely any money was spent on public buildings and public works, and the Finance Minister of the day gave as a justification for his asking for only a tew hundreds of thousands of dollars for public works throughout the Dominion, that he wished to see what our position was to be, what revenue would be at our disposal; and as the revenues came in under the Tariff of 1867.68, and as they increased, the Government and Parliament felt that they might increase the expenditure, and they went on to establish lighthouses, to increase the facilities for the commerce and trade of the country, erecting public buildings, finishing the Parliamentary and public buildings in Ottawa, and other public buildings throughout doue it; I do not take that view, because they the Dominion. They did this because they had the means, were in a position of carrying out in good faith the en-because it was in the interest of the country that the expenditure should be made, it was in fact demanded by the people. And now we are to be told that at that day we were extravagant, because we used the means at our disposal-not incurring any debt, but had surpluses every year, in order to give the facilities and advantages which the country felt they ought to have, and which as a matter of fact they did receive. It was natural that we should do so-we could not have done otherwise. If the hon, gentleman extended his own business operations, so as to double them within two or three years, would any person say he was extravagant if he showed, at the end of the period, double his former expenditure, providing his profits had equally increased—providing they were sufficient not only to cover that double expenditure, but to give him a double profit at the end of the year? Who would say that under these circumstances he was reckless or extravagant in the administration of his affairs. That was exactly our position. We had enlarged our territory; we had added to our Dominion Provinces and Territories extensive and valuable. We had developed the resources of the country, and were then having surpluses, notwithstanding this increased expenditure, notwithstanding that we had not increased the taxation of the people so far as increased duties were concorned. But if we were extravagant, why did not hon, gentlemen in 1873.74 lay their hands upon the expenditure; why did they not reduce it? But we know that they did not do it. And what was the fact? The fact was simply this, that in addition to the other expenditure I have referred to, one of the conditions of Union was that the Intercolonial Railway was to be constructed, and that as rapidly as the means of the country would warrant, we were to enlarge and extend our canal system. In compliance with these terms of Union we commenced the construction of the Intercolonial Railway and our successors did what was right and proper, did what they were bound to do, they went on to complete it, adding to our expenditure and adding to our debt, during the time they were in power. But hon, gentlemen did not diminish the expenditure chargeable to consolidated revenue. It is true they did not increase it very largely, though they did to some extent increase the expenditure from 1873 to 1878; but, Sir, to say that the two Admin-istrations were to be judged by the increased expenditure as between the one period and the other is a fallacy. Sir, it is not logical, because we had increased our population, we had brought in new Provinces bringing in with them new debts and new expenditures, and we had not at the same time increased the taxation. The hon, gentleman refers to the large sum of money they were compelled to expend. He says they spent $19,000,000 on canals, and he has assorted that the only increase of debt during the period from 1873 to 1878 for which they were responsible was $200,000. Why, Sir, where are the deficits to begin with? Was the debt of the Dominion not increased by the deficits, and were not they responsible for those deficits? Were they not responsible for the construction of the canals. I do not complain, I do not say that they should not have constructed them, but still they were not bound to carry out all those works, or to expend much of the $19,000,000 which the hon. gentleman claims we had thrown upon them; because it is wellknown that while tenders were in the hands of the Minister of Public Works when they came into power in 1873, we know that they did not accept those tenders. We know that they advertised anew. They were not bound to do so: they were not under contract for a great deal of the work entered into. If the Government considered it wise and judicious that the expenditure on canals should be suspended they might have done so. I do not say they ought to have gagements made under the terms of Union, as rapidly as should derive some of the advantages from these expendi-the means of the country would warrant; but they might tures. have been justified, under the condition of things which then existed, in not carrying them out; because the condition of the finances of the country was not perhaps such as to compel them to do it. But they did go on. and they increased the debt from $37,000,000 to $40,000,000 during that period. Now, that itself is an important item, and it cannot be shown that they were compelled to incur it. When the hon. gentleman points out that the expenditure was twenty-three times greater from 1867 to 1873, or from 1878 to 1883, than it was in their time, I do not see how he works it out. But there is one way of solving this question, and I defy hon. gentlemen opposite to show that I am in error. I assert it as a true test of the comparative extravagance of the two Governments, and the taxation upon the people. I say, as I have said before, that if hon. gentlemen opposite had paid all their expenditure chargeable to consolidated revenue during their term of office, and we had simply collected what was necessary to pay the expenditure, including this year-in which is the largest expenditure we have had, because we will have $3,750,000, or $1,250,000 more than usual—the taxation for Customs and Excise, which is the direct and only taxation our people have to pay, has been less per head of the population during our five years than it was during their Administration. I make that statement, and I am prepared to stand by itthat the taxation imposed upon the people from 1873 74 to 1878-79 was as much per head of the population as it has been in our period, though we have expended large sums of money since 1878 upon public works-upon our canals and our railways. It is quite true, we have collected more taxation from the people; but what have we done with it? We have expended $37,000,000 in public works during that period; yet, while their debt increased by $37,000,000, ours increased only by $15,000,000. Under these circumstances, I cannot see why there should be that fear and dread that the hon. gentleman has spoken of among his friends in the West, unless he has engendered it, as some of his friends have stimulated the discontent in Manitoba and the North-West. He calculates that the Estimates for this year are $32,900,000. They are, but the expenditure will not amount to that; I do not think that the total expenditure of the present year will exceed $31,300,000 or $31,400,000; and for the next year it is to be hoped, even with the Estimates which we are yet to bring down, that the expenditure will be even less than that of the present year. Sir, I do not feel that, in incurring the expenditures which the Government of Canada have been incurring during the last two or three years, for the rapid extension of the Canadian Pacific Railway, for deepening and enlarging of our canals,-about the propriety of which there may perhaps be some doubt-although it gives us one of the largest and best inland navigation systems in the world-and for the development of all our resources-I do not feel that least, the enormous sum they pay in pensions, incurred there is any ground for the distrust which the hon. gentleman has spoken of. On the contrary, while it is true that we are incurring larger expenditures, and while Parliament will be asked in a few days to take upon itself an additional burden-and yet not really additional burden, because it is to relieve the Provinces of an amount of taxation that they would have to pay into their local treasuries-while we are doing all this, we feel, and have a right to feel, that the people of this country will not be discouraged and disheartened as to the future, and will not be dissatisfied with the course that the Government have been and are pursuing for the development of the country; but, on the contrary, will feel that life is short, and that if we are to have any benefit from these expenditures, we are not to wait for a century or a quarter of a century for them, but that we and our children States there are very heavy municipal and state taxes.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to detain the House any longer than I can help; but it is a matter of regret to me, and I think it ought to be a matter of regret even to the hon. Minister himself, that it has been found necessary to defer the consideration of Supplementary Estimates of such magnitude to so very late a period in the Session. It is little less than a public scandal that we should be called upon at this time to deal with questions involving the addition of $1,000,000 to the expenditure of 1883-84, and with other questions involving the addition of many millions to the public debt. Why, we have not even all the Supplementary Estimates for the year 1884 85 before us.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. We did not force this question now upon the hon. member.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. No, but I say it is a very bad practice indeed, for which the hon. gentleman and his colleagues are responsible, that they wait until the Session is within the very last days, when they know that every hon, gentleman here is impatient of discussion and so anxious to get home, that they could hardly listen even to the temperate and admirably reasoned speech of my hon. friend beside me in patience. That is the time that the hon. gentleman and his friends choose to submit to us questions of the very first magnitude, involving the imposition of additional burdens of millions upon the people; and I repeat my statement, that it is not creditable to the management of public affairs in this country that year after year-because this is far from being the first time-the Budget debate goes on without the House having before it one half the information it ought to have to enable it to form an honest judgment upon the propositions of the Government. I say this is not the first time. Ten or twelve years before, under somewhat similar circumstances, when there was another Canadian Pacific Railway on the tapis, we had the hon. gentleman bringing down estimates which were found to be utterly inadequate to the wants of the year. Why, Sir, I found, when I succeeded that hon. gentleman, that he had made no provision in his original Budget for about $3,000,000 a year, which he had added to the public expenditure; and but for the increased taxation which we were compelled to impose, there would have been in 1873-74 and in 1874-75 very large deficits which were daverted by that taxation. Now, the hon. gentleman complained that my hon. friend beside me compared our position with that of the United States, unfairly, as he said. Sir, it is quite true that in making a comparison with the United States, the Minister, on the one hand, is justified in taking credit for the subsidies which we pay to the Provinces; but my hon. friend was equally justified in deduct-ing from the expenditures of the United States, at the very during the late war. I say nothing of the expenditures on account of the army and navy, which are expenses incidental to the position of an independent nation. But let me call attention to this—that if you offset the subsidies on the one hand, and the pensions on the other, the comparison will be greatly more to the advantage of the United States, because they pay $66,000,000 in pensions, while we pay $3,500,000 in subsidies; so that, although their population is thirteen-fold or thereabouts that of ours, still the amount of their pensions is much larger relatively than the amount of our subsidies; and therefore my hon. friend was quite correct in calling attention to the unfavourable condition of things which now exists as between ourselves and the United States, but which did not slways exist. The hon. gentleman also spoke of a fact which is partly true, that in the United Does the hon. gentleman suppose that in the Province of Ontario, at any rate, there are no municipal taxes to be paid; that there are no heavy taxes in our cities to be paid?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. Nothing like in the United States.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The hon. gentleman is mistaken. He does not know practically the expenses which are inflicted on the holders of property in a very large number of the towns, villages and cities of Ontario. I know well that the municipal administration of the United States, is a blot on their system, that the people are plundered in many of the cities of the United States; and I know that we in Canada are not so much behindhand. I know that in Canada the burdens of the people are in many places very heavy, and that they are very largely caused by the same evils of administration which prevail in certain parts of the United States, though not in all. Although it may not be true of all the Provinces, it is true, at any rate, of the chief Province, that taking an average State of the Union, not one particular State selected by the hon. gentleman, but an average State, you will find Ontario is paying in proportion just as much for those purposes and in some case : more, as the hon. gentleman will see if he will make the comparison, than many of the States of the Union. There are isolated cities where such a state of things as that to which he alludes prevails, but they are only isolated and not a fair average in the United States in general. He said another thing to which I will call the attention of the House. He stated we incurred no additional debt by assuming the provincial debt. That is a very great fallacy and a very great mistake. When he chooses to relieve a Province by assuming its debts, as the hon. gentleman has done once and is going to do twice, I can tell him that he will remove from the Provinces every kind of inducement to the exercise of a wise and wholesome economy; he will teach them the worst lesson they can be taught. The whole of this system of subsidising the Provinces was known to be a weak spot, an unfortunate expedient, necessary and unavoidable perhaps; but if the hon. gentleman will look at the original debates which took place in Parliament, he will see that many of us who knew the risk warned the Government that it was likely to bring the Provinces again and again to apply to the Dominion Exchequer, that it was likely to remove all wholesome restraint and tend in a very great degree to extravagance, corruption and mismanagement in the conduct of Provincial affairs. What is more, of these taxes more comes from the public than goes into the Treasury. I am not speaking of the hon. gentleman's financial system, I am not speaking of a protective Tariff; I waive that, but the hon. gentleman knows that every tax which brings a dollar into the Public Treasury takes, at the very least, $1.25 out of the pockets of the people; and it is by no means true, for that reason alone, that it is a mere shifting of the burden when we assume the Provincial debts at the cost of the general public. The hon, gentleman asks why we did not reduce expenditure in 1873? We did reduce it and very largely. Let him take the book laid on the Table of the House by himself a few weeks ago, and he will see that the reduction amounted to a reduction of $1,500,000 in controllable expenditure alone during that period. If he wants to know why we did not reduce the other expenditures, I will tell him. The hon. gentleman then, as now, had committed the country to enormous contingent liabilities. Then, as now, he had undertaken to construct the Canadian Pacific Railway on most unduly onerous terms to the people, against the protest of every member of the Administration that afterwards succeeded his; he had engaged in very large commitments for canals; he had begun and we had to finish the Intercolonial. The hon. gentleman's memory is gravely at fault when he says that the works on the Welland and Lachine Canals better wait. I think in the last few weeks we have added 167 were not commenced before my hon. friend took office. My hon. friend found that contracts had been actually commenced and that work was done in both those cases. Was that not the case?

Mr. MACKENZIE. Yes.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. My hon. friend says, "yes," and his memory is seldom at fault in those matters. It was not possible for us, nor for any Government coming in, especially under such circumstances, to break off hastily the policy to which the country has been committed. As my hon, friend from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) truly said, the successors of any Administration are, to a very great extent, bound, of necessity, to carry out the policy their predecessors had actually inaugurated and to which the public faith was pledged. For that vory reason, much as we disapproved the conduct of hon. gentlemen in committing Canada to the task of building the Canadian Pacific R ilway during the next ten years, we were bound to go on with the absolutely necessary portions of that obligation. It was impossible to delay opening up the North-West, and I always held that to be the bounden duty of my hon. friend. He did it in the teeth of obliquy and in the testh of the attacks brought against him by some of the colleagues of the hon. gentleman; and if he had not done it, the hon, gentlemen knows perfectly well that not for many years to come would it have been possible to have had a railway through Canadian territory to the North-West. He cannot therefore hold him responsible for the expenditure on the Intercolonial, or the Canadian Pacific Railway, or the canal system. That was so, at any rate, as regards the Welland and Lachine Canals, which are the two works on which the vast bulk of this $19,000,000 was expended. When he charges us with having had deficits, all I can say is this, that had our advice been taken, had our warnings been attended to, had the cautions we gave borne fruit, as they ought to have done, there would have been no deficits, no difficulties. Those deficits and difficulties were produced through the fault of the former Parliament of Canada in undertaking works too great for the strength of the people, and by just such steps as the hon. gentleman had recourse to in assuming those Provincial debts which, he says, do not add any burden to the people. Moreover as a mat-ter of fact his contention is not quite correct. ter Taking the four years to which he alluded, there was no addition to the public debt through deficits. If the hon. gentleman will add together the surpluses we had in 1874 and 1875 and the sums expended for sinking funds from 1874 to 1879, he will find that in 1874-5-6-7-8 there was nothing at all added to the public debt, after having deducted the surpluses in the first two years and the amount expended in sinking funds in those five years. That is a calculation which the hon. gentleman can easily make for himself. He told us that the tax per head from 1879 to 1884 was less than from 1814 to 1879. He tells us that when we were paying $29,500,000 in the last year on a population of 4,300,000, deducting Indians, the burden per head was less than when, with a population of 4,000,000 we were paying $20,000,000. Let that statement go. We pay $9,500,000 more in taxes, having an addition to our population of perhaps 200,000, although that is doubtful, and yet the hon. gentleman says the taxation is not more per head. I say nothing of the fact that the hon. gentle-man under his system has taken many millions of dollars out of the pockets of the people each year than has gone into the Treasury, but I give the simple fact that with an addition of 200,000 people to our population we are paying pretty nearly $ 0,000,000 more in 1883 than in 1878, and yet the hon. gentleman says the tax is less per head. Then, Sir, the hon. gentleman boasts that he has only increased our debt $15,000,000. The hon. gentleman had

COMMONS DEBATES.

$30,000,000 to our debt for the Canadian Pacific Railway alone. Possibly we may get it back; possibly we may not; but at any rate there it is, an addition to the debt of Canada of $30,000,000. How many millions more is the hon. gentleman going to add before these resolutions of which he has given notice are put through the House? How many millions more for the additional provincial debt? How many more for the various railway subsidies which are alluded to? I am not including the subsidy to the Canadian Pacific Railway, which has all to be paid within the next two years if the work goes on as fast as he supposes; but, taking those alone, we would find that practically to day the hon. gentleman has increased our debt $60,000,000 instead of $15,000,000. The hon. gentleman is right in saying that a reasonable increase cannot be complained of, but my hon. friend gave full credit for that. My hon. friend's position—and it was a fair position—is this that the increase at present is not a reasonable increase, that the increase is an inordinate increase; that, when you find Estimates brought down like those the hon. gentleman laid on the Table the other day, which show an increase over the actual expenditure of 1878 of nearly $8,500,000 per annum, we say that is not a fair or reasonable or proper increase; that, make what allowance you like for the additional sums received for public works and for the additional sum received for post office, both of which are fair and reasonable enough-although I might remind him that there was an increase on that score of $600,000 in our time as well as in his-let him allow as he pleases for that, still there remains an exceedingly large and an exceedingly unreasonable increase. These excuses are the invariable excuses which are always made by spendthrift Governments and spendthrift individuals whenever their extravagance is brought before their notice. You never yet found a spendthrift debtor who was not willing to explain to his creditors that, although he had spent more than he ought to have done, it was not possible ing to the estimates for the last year, amounted to for him to live becomingly or conduct the necessary improvements in his business or in his house or in his style for railways, including a vote for army and navy of of living for anything less. I will for a few moments call the attention of the House to a point which has possibly not attracted as much attention as it deserves. Here in be very well compared with our own total expen-Canada, no matter what the hon. gentleman may say, we diture, because in Sweden they have also, as are not a very large country or a very rich country. I probably the hon. gentleman knows, been engaged in con-hope we may soon become one, but I know that this system structing a great number of railways at the public cost. of taxation which exhausts to such an extent the resources. The Swedish railway system is now about as large or nearly of the people is not the way to make us rich and prosper-We began moderately enough. For the sake of ous. argument I leave out of sight altogether everything except the amount collected for Excise and the amount collected for Customs, and the amount collected during a portion of the time for Bill Stamps, and I would just call the attention of the House to this simple fact, that in the 16 years which elapsed from 1867 to 1883 we have paid in actual taxation, under these two heads of Excise and Customs $307,150,000 as per these Public Accounts, that in 1884 we are going to pay $26,000,000 more, so that this poor and young country in 17 years has been obliged to pay $333,150,000 in hard cash in taxes. And, as it is perfectly well known to everybody who has studied the subject, that the exaction of those taxes involves a very large further addition to the amount taken out of the public pocket, even in cases where the utmost possible pains are used to ensure that the taxation, be it much or be it little, shall take as little as possible out of the pocket of the people more than goes into the Treasury, you would find that in all human probability not less than $420,000,000 have been taken in taxes out of the people of Canada in that interval. Now, I have put, all through this discussion -and I was glad to see that my hon. friend did-entirely on one side all disputed questions of policy as between Free Trade and Protection; but I say every hon. gentleman who which, as the hon. gentleman probably knows, is one of the Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

knows anything of the mode in which public expenditure has increased, and who chooses to compare it with that of other countries, either old or new, under similar circumstances, must agree with me, if he gives the subject one moments' reflection, that our financial position is becoming a serious one. What we warned hon. gentlemen of in the early part of this Session has happened. They have carried their point, but they know best at what cost. They know perfectly well that such another victory as they obtained, when they induced an unwilling. House to sanction an advance of $30,000,000 to the Canadian Pacific Railway, would be another name for ruin. These hon. gentlemen object to comparisons made with the United States or to comparisons made with England. My friend beside me is right in saying that you cannot escape or elude comparison with the United States. Every man in Canada, every man who comes to Canada, will of necessity compare our position with that of the United States; and it is a very grave subject for reflection that, as I showed, and the figures were not disputed, because they could not be disputed, our position as regards that of the United States has become enormously worse within the last few years. But, lest the hon. gentleman should say that the position of the United States is peculiar, and that therefore we should not make a comparison with it, I will take two other countries in Europe, of almost similar population to our own, one a very rich country, another a country which compares in many respects very closely to Canada; and I will call the attention of the House and of the country to the position in which those countries are financially as compared with Canada. And first of all, I take the Kingdom of Sweden-not Norway, which is a very poor country, but Sweden-which compares very closely as regards a large part of its territory with ourselves. The population of Sweden, according to the last statistics was 4,565,000 souls. The total expenditure in Sweden, accord-£1,374,000 sterling, including some extraordinary expenses $1,250,000; so the total expenditure per head in Sweden was considerably less than $4.50, and this may as large as our own, and has been constructed under circumstances of considerable difficulty, through rocky and mountainous regions in many places. You find, whereas we had an expenditure to our population of something like $7.25-a gross expenditure—the gross expenditure of Sweden was barely $4.50, and it will not do for the hon. gentleman to say that Sweden is not a fair example. Sweden, in many respects, is in a very good position, has a very fair trade, and a trade, too, largely similar to our own trade in many respects. Or, if he objects to Sweden, let me take the case of Belgium. Belgium had a population of 5,500,000; the actual revenue of Belgium, excluding the amount received from public works, they being a large owner of railways, and I believe of vessels also, amounted to £7,160,000 sterling; their total expendi-ture, deducting the same amount, was £8,000,000 sterling; they had to pay for their army alone $9,000,000 a year, having to maintain by reason of their position a rather considerable army. I will deduct our public works, which amount to $3,000,000; we have then an ex-penditure similar to the Belgian expenditure, of $29,000,000 a year, as by the present Estimates. So, Sir, that it follows we are spending for head on her perpenditor as much as Sweden is spending per head on her population, and we are spending a little more, apparently than Belgium, richest and most populous States in Europe, is spending for its total services. Moreover, the case is worse in our respects than most. We have, as my hon. friend pointed out, an enormous proportion of fixed charges. Our fixed charges amount to something like $12,500,000, and in that I do not include expenses for collection of revenue, although it must be regarded to a great extent as fixed; I do not include the Treaty allowances to Indians, and I do not include the very considerable number of items which are really, as the hon. Minister knows very well, to all intents and purposes fixed. I say that alone ought to cause the hon. gentleman to speak more seriously than he does-perhaps not more seriously than he thinks-of the present position. But I further point out that under these very measures the hon. gentleman is passing, a very large addition is going to be made to our fixed charges. He will have to make a large addition for the advance to the Canadian Pacific Railway-it may be repaid; that remains to be seen. He will have to make large advances in aid of railways. Now, as to the probabilities of the future, the hon. gentleman cannot have shut his eyes to the fact that almost from the first day of July, 1883, to the present moment, our trade and revenue have been steadily decreasing. The hon. gentleman knows perfectly well that in all human probability there will be a loss of probably not short of $4,000,000 on the tax receipts for this year. He has not as yet laid on the Table the statement of receipts and expenditures for which I asked,

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. They did not reach me, or I would have sent them.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. We had this information before; the information we will have in a few days will be only too good evidence of the truth of the statement I make. Now, the House ought to remember that the position of any country which depends, as we do, so largely on Customs revenue is of necessity exceedingly precarious. I do not propose to detain the House by going into a minute disquisition as to the causes which lead to these reductions, but I will call the attention of the House again to this fact, that within the last ten years the reduction of our imports has been larger than it has been in almost any other country of which we know. In 1873 our nominal imports were $127,000,000 fo: consumption; in 1880, a year which the hon. gentleman holds up to us as an example, because then for the first time the exports a little exceeded the imports, the imports had shrunk to $71,000,000 entered for consumption: that is to say, they had shrunk nominally about $56,000,000. I do not think that our statistics are strictly accurate in that respect because I believe that the nominal importation in 1873-74 was considerably in excess of the real importation. They included, as I have always pointed out, a good many millions of goods which were really merely passing through this country on their way to Europe; so that every gentleman must see that even if you do deduct ten millions, a falling off from $117,000,000 to $71,000,000 is a monstrous reduction, and yet it is a reduction which the hon. gentleman has always contended was desirable and which it was the special object of his policy to produce. Since that time the imports have increased -he says have increased far too much-they have been increased from $71,000,000, or thereabouts, to $123,000,000-they have increased by $52,000,000. Now,Sir, it is quite on the cards, and the hon. gentleman knows it well, that there may be-I do not say a decrease of $50,000,000 -but] there may be a very large decrease within the next year or two, in which case he also knows his revenue from Customs will shrink enormously, and it will shrink even more, perhaps, than the number of millions would indicate, because the first things reduced are usually those articles of luxury which properly enough pay the highest duty. Sir, we are therefore in this predicament in looking at the future; we have at present a falling revenue, and an almost certainty that it will continue to fall. The hon. gentleman knows that there is no better barometer of the position of a country than the price at which exchange is going. Now, Sir, exchange is becoming more adverse to Canada from day to day; exchange, perhaps, is more adverse to Canada to day than it has been for fifteen years, if I am correctly informedat any rate it is very adverse. That is very clear proof to every mercantile man, I think, that in all probability for many months to come the condition of trade will be very unfavourable to Canada, inasmuch as we will have very little to sell, and consequently we will be able to buy comparatively little. Then, Sir, he has got to consider, as my hon, friend truly pointed out, the effect on the country. There is no use in the hon. gentleman's disguising from himself what is patent to us all, that these excessive and exorbitant additional taxes have had a bad effect, both directly and indirectly; directly, by exhausting the resources of the people, and indirectly by the effect on their mind. Why, Sir, when you add $8,000,000 a year to the annual public expenditure, it is just equivalent to borrowing $200,000,000, a sum greater than the whole of the existing debt, as he states it. And he will remember this, that at any rate, in the Province of Ontario, whereas formerly our lands and population were both increasing in value, all of us who know anything practically of the state of westernOntario; all of us, I may say, who know anything practically of the value of real estate throughout Canada, are painfully well aware that real estate over almost the whole country, with the exception of one or two towns, is decreasing, or at least is stationary in value. The hon, gentleman must know that; if he does not know it, if he has not had that information given to him in the course of his various journeys through the country, he certainly could not have fallen in with many men who were conversant with the real estate of the rural population of Canada at this present moment. I have pointed out-

An hon. MEMBER. Cut it short.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. It is not my fault, I may remind these hon. gentlemen, that these Estimates were brought down at so late a period, and the least I think that can be done when we are asked to vote so many millions of the people's money, is to give as many minutes to the discussion as there are hundreds of thousands of dollars in the Estimates. I say nothing, Sir, except barely to allude to it, of the discouragement of the settlers in the North-West produced by heavy taxation; but I must say this, that whereas it ought to be our object to make these people's capital go as far as it possibly can, the direct effect of our system are that these people are compelled to pay probably one third, certainly one fourth, more for the very tools of trade which are absolutely necessary to develop the country than they need to, and that is a great discouragement to them. I assert that this immeuse taxation has produced a great absorbtion of the resources of the people. The hon. gentleman boasted the other day that the deposits in the savings banks were going on increasing. Perhaps they are, but the hon. gentleman did not tell us that the bank returns, quite as useful a barometer, show that there has been no increase, if I am correctly advised, in the deposits in the banks between December, 1882 and December, 1883; that important index is perfeetly stationary; the doposits in the banks remain without increase. They had increased rapidly, they are now stationary, and there is some danger that they may be diminished. Sir, it is quits true that in a new country like ours the natural tendency ought to be to advance. I have always recognized that, and the House will remember that just as I was condemned without stint by the friends of the hon. gentleman, because, in 1873, and again in 1874, I dared to warn the people of Canada that they and the Government had been grossly extravagant, that there was danger of include that for municipal purposes-reaches $61,434,095. That is a tax, as I say, to which we have nothing analogous in this country. But that is not the only feature trouble ahead, that there was danger of depression, that there was danger of our extravagance producing its natural and legitimate results, and that it was time to take precautions-why, Sir, just as I was abused for doing that in 1873 71, so was I abused in 1878, because I refused then to be dismayed, because, under very peculiar circumstances, the finances of this country were less pros-perous than the country could wish. Events in both cases justify my hon. friend and myself. A depression which we told the people must come, did come, and the revival which we told them would come, whether they chose to eject the late Government from power or not, did come. The difference was this, that the revival was not wisely used; that revival and the prosperity that accompanied it were made the excuse for boundless and monstrous extravagance; for improperly entering into many obligations, which the hon. gentleman has pointed out, and which the Minister of Finance has not attempted to deny. The hon. Minister did not dispute a single fact or a single figure advanced by the hon. member for North Norfolk. A greater compliment could hardly have been paid him, unless indeed it was the groans which were extracted from the other side of the House by every paragraph of the hon. gentleman's Resolution. I am afraid it is an unfortunate fact, whether the hon. Minister chooses to admit it or not, that there is an undercurrent of political unrest in this country. I tell the hon. gentleman that men, perhaps not in this House, perhaps not on a political platform, but men all through this country, are looking to the future with alarm and uncertainty; and l, for one, dread sincerely the results of the monstrous additions which the hon. Minister has made, and is constantly making, as the mouth-piece of the Government, to the indebtedness of this country and to the annual expenditure. The fact of the matter is that, just as they acted before, the Government are staking their future, and staking for some years to come the future of the country, on a mere chance. If things go well, if we happen to have good harvests, if good prices are received for those harvests, if trade revives in the United States, if trade is good in England-if the whole chances go in the hon. gentleman's favour, then it is possible, by good luck and not by good management, we may obtain a good deal of relief from the position which otherwise I dread we shall occupy. But the truth is this, that at the present moment, notably in their dealings with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, the people of Canada have been taking a leap in the dark, and neither in this House nor out of it is any man justified in saying that the future is reassuring, or that there are not very good reasons for serious amprehension as to the future financial position of this country.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). I do not intend to delay the House more than a moment or two, as I rise simply for the purpose of referring to the comparisons which hon. gentlemen opposite have made. As the hon. Finance Minister has pointed out, there can be no possible objections to comparisons being made between Canada and the United States, provided they are fairly made; but when they are made in a manner calculated to mislead those who may read the speeches of hon. gentlemen, and those who are desiring to settle in this country, I think they are mischievous, and ought, if possible, to be promptly corrected. The hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), stated that the expenditure of the United States was about $265,000,000. That is quite true; but as the hon. Finance Minister pointed out, the hon. gentleman did not mention State taxation, to which we have nothing analogous in this country. I find the aggregate State debts in the United States amount to $267,762.075, and I find the annual taxation, that is, the regular direct taxation for State purposes-and I do not Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

in which the comparison made by the hon. gentleman is hardly a fair one. We have in this country expenditures by the Federal Government which are not made by the United States Government. We find, for instance, that the Dominion Government make large expenditures on harbours and rivers, whereas in the United States those improvements are made by the State and not by the general Government. To the expenditures on the harbours of Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and New York, the States contributed very largely, for which they receive no tonnage dues, they have given the improvements as a free gift to the commerce of the country. In addition to that, we have large expenditures made by the Federal Government in other ways in this country to which there is nothing analogous on the other side of the line; and we may fairly say that, looking at the position of the two countries in regard to those expenditures, any attempt to prove that this country is in a very inferior position, with regard to the taxation of the people, is one which cannot be successfully maintained, if the statements are fairly and reasonably made. When we come to find that the hon. member for South Huron (Sir Richard Cartwright), in order to maintain the comparison made by the hon. member for North Norfolk, actually compared the expenditure on pensions with subsidies to Provinces, I think we may fairly say that hon. gentlemen opposite must be driven to their wits-end to find some means of making comparisons which will prove injurious to the interests of this country. The amount of $60,000,000 spent for pensions goes into the pockets of the pensioners. The subsidies go into the treasuries of the Local Governments, and are expended by them for purposes for which, in the United States, the respective States have to resort to direct taxation. So we may fairly say that an attempt to make a comparison between the expenditures on pensions and the subsidies to the Provinces shows how unfair is the impression which will be conveyed by the statements made by hon. gentlemen opposite. The hon, member for Sonth Huron (Sir Richard Cartwright) has undertaken to compare this country with the old countries of Europe, as if there were any analogy between the two cases. Canada is a young country; we are developing its resources; we are building it up; we have an enormous territory and a comparatively small population; and in the nature of things, we have to incur large expenditures in order to accomplish that development. A fair comparison would be, not with the old countries of Europe, but with the Australian colonies, which are at this moment in fact, competitors with this country for the emigration of Great Britain especially. And what do I find with respect to those colonies? That Australasia, which includes the group of colonies, has an aggregate public debt of $479,827,910, and the annual expenditure reaches $95,709,230. Remember these colonies are doing exactly what we are doing. They are young countries, developing their resources; they are seeking to make the countries suitable for the homes of people who may come from the old world. On coming to deal with particular colonies, I find these results. New South Wales has a population of 817,464. Its annual expenditure is £6,347,810 sterling, or in round figures, about $32,000,000. That small colony of 817,000 people has an expenditure greater than that of the entire Dominion. New Zealand, with a population of 563,800, has an annual expenditure of £3,824,735 sterling, or in round figures, very nearly $20,000,000-more than $19,000,000 at any rate. Then in Queensland, which has a population of 248,255, the annual expenditure is very nearly $10,000,000. In South Australia, with a population of 293,509, the annual expenditure is about $10,500,000. In Tasmania, with a population of 122,479, the annual expenditure is about $2,500,000. In Victoria, with a population of 906,225, the annual expenditure is $25,000,000. In Western Australia, with a population of 30,766, the annual expenditure is over $1,000,000. Now I think these figures show that, as compared with countries which are situated as we are, young countries seeking to develop their various resources, with a view of making them as attractive as possible to settlers who may go to them-I say the expenditure, of this country will compare most favourably with the expenditure of such countries as those. And when you remember, when dealing with the United States, that that country has a population of about 50,000,000; that it has reached that advanced state of development; that it has had to incur in its earlier history large expenditures, and bearing in mind, that in its earlier history there were not those methods of expenditure which exist now, through railways and canals and other public improvements of that kind-when they reach that position it is not fair, it is not true to this country, to make comparisons such as the hon. gentlemen have made. Then we had another comparison. I understood the hon, gentle man to say, that the Customs duties in the United States are about one half per head what they are in Canada, and that statement is quite true. But we have heard speeches on the floor of Parliament upon the assumption that in this country, in consequence of the protective Tariff, we must add to the taxation paid to the Customs officer the increased cost of the goods manufactured in Canada equivalent to the duty which is paid on similar goods coming in. Well, if that be the case, what is the position of the United States? They have a smaller Customs import, it is true; they pay less per head of Customs duty, it is true, but they pay double the percentage on the goods they get in; and if the argument of the hon. gentlemen be true, then they pay upon manufactured goods, within the country itself, double the percentage we pay; and no one would pretend to say that the people of the United States do not, man for man, consume as much as we consume in this country. So we find that hon. gentlemen when they want to make a point against this country, when they want to show that we are an overburdened, over taxed community, we find them laying down the fiscal proposition that for every dollar which is put on in the way of Customs, we have to pay a like dollar on the article produced in Canada; while, when it comes to a question of drawing comparisons in the interest of the United States, and against this country, we find an opposite course taken, and they say that they are only taxed for the Customs duties they pay on the frontier. That is the manner in which these hon. gentlemen deal with this country and with the United States. The hon. gentleman has told us that the people of this country are leaving He says that the people in his neighbourhood are leaving by the hundreds—that he knows of 100 families who have left or are leaving that neighbourhood.

Mr. CHARLTON. No, no.

An hon. MEMBER. Sixty families.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). Sixty families, then, who are leaving his neighbourhood and settling in some part of the United States. Well, Sir, I venture to say that those sixty families have received from the hon. gentleman not only his own speeches, but the speeches of his friends, and if they believed those speeches they were quite right to leave the country, for a more God forsaken country than Canada does not exist, if the statements of the hon. gentleman are reliable. Sir, comparing this country with countries simiharly situated, countries devoting themselves in the same way to the process of development which we must under take in youth, in order that we may, as a nation, a rive at a hale and hearty old age, I venture to say that Canada stands as well and as favourably as any other country on by Mr. Himsworth, before his death, to prepare an Index the face of the earth, and offers as good homes as any other to those who choose to come and settle on our lands.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT. PRIVY COUNCIL.

For allowance to Private Secretary ... $600 00 To pay J. L. Burpee, extra remuneration for special work authorized by Mr. Himsworth, Clerk of the Oouncil, from June, 1878, to 213 March, 1982..... 200 00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What are the circumtances under which this $200 was granted?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. Mr. Burpee was instructed to the proceedings of Council, from 1878. He has continued to do that work up to 1882, and on the recommendation of the Minister, this was allowed.

Mr. MACKENZIE. That was surely part of the routine work of the office.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. No; this was done after office hours.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Well, there was no necessity for doing it after office hours, because the Privy Council staff was large enough to do it.

Mr. BLAKE. Besides, there is an express Statute on this subject. The law says that no one employed in the public service shall be paid for extra work. The very moment we lay down the principle that an employé in the office for doing s mething extra shall have extra pay, then everything more or less becomes extra; there is a desire to make everything extra, and therefore the law lays it down that this shall not be done. We are now asked to make a vote in bulk for four years' extra work.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I observe that this was done in 1878. I have not the slightest recollection of authorizing it.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. It was Mr. Himsworth who authorized it

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. This sum was for special work, in the way of preparing an analytical index. He was employed by Mr. Stewart and worked at night. The hon. gentleman says the staff in the Privy Council office has always been full enough for all work; he is gre tly mistaken. The business has increased enormously since his time, so much so that with a very diligent set of clerks, they have been quite unable to keep up with the work. Before Mr. Burpee's time, Mr. Côté, the late Assistant Clerk, was specially paid for this work, and Mr. Himsworth, thinking it was a valuable one, instructed Mr. Burpee to do it at night. It is like the work of preparing an analytical index done by Mr. Alfred Todd. This is a special work, very remotely connected with the every-day work of the staff.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not see how Mr. Himsworth should have authority to promise this payment in violation of the law. Even the promise of the Head of a Department ought not to be given in violation of the law, much less that of his Deputy.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It was done under a special rule, and is not a precedent to be followed; but the work has been done and must be paid for.

DEPARTMENT OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE.

 To pay the following clerks additional to their present salary:

 $250 00

Mr. CARON. Mr. Aldrich came to my Department from the Department of Agriculture, where he had been working for a couple of years. He was appointed to my Department by an Order in Council of the 23rd of May, 1882, as a third-class clerk, at a salary of $700; on the 1st July last he received the statutory increase of $50. It was intended he should be paid from the 1st July, 1883, and the amount was placed in the Estimates passed last Session; and in the re-organization of the staff, his salary was increased by that amount of $250. However, in putting down this amount in the Estimates last year his name was not entered, and as this was not in accordance with the requirements of the Act, the money could not be paid over to him. That is the reason it is placed in the Supplementary Estimates. He belongs to the Accountant's Branch and is considered by the Deputy and the officer who has charge of that branch as one of the very best clerks we have.

Sir LBONARD TILLEY.

Mr. BLAKE. Is he not also the hon. Minister's Private Secretary?

Mr. CARON. Yes; at a salary of 300.

Mr. BLAKE. That makes $1,300 under this arrangement, when he entered at $700 two years ago; that is an enormously rapid rise.

Mr. CARON. What he receives as Private Secretary is altogether outside his salary. At any moment he may lose his position as Private Secretary, and have to return to his branch of the Civil Service.

Mr. BLAKE. When this gentleman is having the benefit of the law which provides for his statutory increase, when, besides, it is proposed to add one third to his existing salary in a lump sum, the fact must not be disregarded, that he is also receiving $300 a year as Private Secretary. This system of proposing modifications of the Civil Service Act in the way of increasing the salaries beyond the statutory increase is fruitful of great evil. It is likely to render the whole Act more or less nugatory, so far as the salaries are concerned, and produces jealousies, heart burnings and difficulties in the service generally, calculated to demoralize the service by leading to the belief that there is partiality and favouritism. I am not making observations especially with reference to this case, for I have heard nothing of Mr. Aldrich whatever, but I say that is the natural tendency of proceed-ings of this kind. I do not think the hon. Minister has given us sufficient reasons for departing from the law. Will the hon. gentlemen also explain the case of Mr. Holt?

Mr. CARON. Mr. Holt is a third-class clerk, who was appointed by Order in Council on the 3rd of May, 1882, at a salary of $700. On the 1st of July last he received a statutory increase of $50, which made his salary up to $750. The amount placed in the Estimates for this year and passed last Session for this salary was $900, as it was intended that he should be paid that salary from the 1st of July, 1883. About Mr. Holt, I may say that he comes immediately after the chief accountant of the Department of Militia, Mr. O'Meara. Mr. Holt has had a large experience. He was employed in a bank as Chief Accountant, at a salary of $2,000, I believe. That bank closed, but I may say, not from any financial disaster. It was more lucky than most banks; it paid every cent in the dollar which the investors had placed in it. When Mr. Holt, being out of employment, came into the Department, from his antecedents, the salary which he was receiving was very small indeed, and so small that, if it had not been that he was out of employment at the time, 1 am perfectly certain we could not have secured his valuable services for that important branch of the Department-the Accountant's Branch. I thought, in reorganizing under the Civil Service Act the various Branches of the Department, he was entitled to that increase of $50. It was only an increase of $50 this year, and I think it is a very small increase for the services he has rendered. His case is altogether similar to the case of Mr. Aldrich, but from the fact that his name was not given it was considered that under the requirements of the Civil Service Act, he should not be paid that amount, and the amount was placed in the Supplementary Estimates for this year.

Mr. BLAKE. There again, Mr. Chairman, this gentleman entered the service at the salary prescrited for him. He had the option of entering it or of not entering it. He entered the service at the prescribed salary Parliament had fixed, and he knew perfectly well the conditions of his salary, that he should have an increase of $50 a year if he deserved it. The hon. gentleman says that he filled an important and responsible position in a bank, but notwithstanding, he came into the service at this smaller salary.

Mr. CABON. He was out of employment,

Mr. BLAKE. I suppose so. It does not seem to me that, in this more than in the other case, there is any reason for departing from the ordinary rules of the service. If this gentleman is efficient, not merely to keep correct accounts of the expenditure of the Department, but also to restrain and moderate and limit the expenditure of the Department, I am willing to go the $50.

Mr. CARON. I think the hon. gentleman is quite right to agree.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not agree, because I do not believe.

INLAND REVENUE DEPARTMENT.

Fo pr	ovide for the following payments :
<	To E. Chateauvert, for performing the duties of J. A. Doyon, during the latter's illness
215		$410	42
	To pay Extra Clerks in connection with oper- ations of License Law	600	00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Will the hon. gentleman state who Mr. Chateauvert is? Is he an officer of the Department, or a person brought in from outside?

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. Chateauvert is not a permanent employé of the Department. He was employed to do certain work in the absence of one of the officers who was seriously ill, and he was employed because it required knowledge and experience beyond that possessed by those who might have passed the qualifying examination, because Mr. Chateauvert had been in the habit of doing work for years before in the same Department similar to the work required to be done in the absence of Mr. Doyon.

Mr. BLAKE. I think this case was up last Session. Was there not a vote last Session for the extra services in the place of Doyon?

Mr. COSTIGAN. Some vote was taken last Session.

Mr. BLAKE. The statement was made that this poor man was affected with paralysis?

Mr. COSTIGAN. Yes; that is the case.

Mr. BLAKE. Is there any expectation of his resuming duty?

Mr. COSTIGAN. He has, since that.

Mr. BLAKE. Is the payment made here under the provision of the law? The late Act makes some provision for the payment of services performed during the absence of an officer, and for their being paid out of his salary.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I think the law only provides for the payment out of the salary in case he is absent on leave. I do not think that the salary paid to one who replaces an officer who is unfortunately stricken by illness should be taken out of his salary.

Mr. BLAKE. "For performing other duties, $97"-what is that?

Mr. COSTIGAN. That is extra work, in regard to some statistical work which was behind in the Department.

Mr. BLAKE. Here we find him performing the work of another officer in the Department, and then doing extra work besides.

Mr. COSTIGAN. He is a very useful officer.

Mr. BLAKE. A handy sort of man. Do you intend to keep him about you?

Mr. COSTIGAN. No; the present staff is enough, I think, to do the work, but he is a remarkably efficient officer and did his work thoroughly.

Mr. BLAKE. But he is gone?

Mr. COSTIGAN. He is gone.

Mr. BLAKE. "Extra clerks in connection with operations of License Law "—is that the License Law of last Session?

Mr. COSTIGAN. Yes

Mr. BLAKE. Then we will want all the explanation the hon. gentleman can give.

Mr. COSTIGAN. In reference to that small item. I do not think it requires much explanation. The hon. gentleman will admit, of course, that enforcing that law will increase the work of the Department.

Mr. BLAKE. That depends on the Act which is coming down.

Mr. COSTIGAN. We have had to do something already. We had to prepare the work.

Mr. BLAKE. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will explain how many extra clerks have been employed—what the general character of their duties is. We do not know how much has been expended, or what has been done.

Mr. COSTIGAN. This $600 is provided in case extra clerks may be required to do the work. It may not be necessary to spend the amount. If it be not necessary, I can a-sure the hon, gentleman I have no desire to spend it. We may require some extra help, and sometimes when extra work is required to be done, owing to the strictness of this Act, it is difficult to provide for it. I cannot say that the whole amount will be spent.

Mr. BLAKE. I presume, from what the Minister says, that no part of it has been spent as yet, else we would have heard something about it, as he has given a candid admission of what he wants. We have arrived at a period less than three months from the close of the financial year, so that, if he is going to spend it, he has got to commence at once. A measure is promised to suspend to a certain extent the operation of the Act itself. When he brings down a vote for additional clerks in his Department, we should know what he imagines he will have to spend, how many clerks he intends to employ, and in what way he thinks this extra service will be required.

Mr. COSTIGAN. There was a good deal to do in order to prepare forms and instructions for the License Commissioners. At the same time, each Commissioner has to be furnished with information from the Census, a work which involves a very large cost. We found it would be cheaper to employ a clerk to prepare such information and statistics from the Census for the use of these Commissioners, as to population, &c., than it would be to send a complete set of the Census to each Commissioner. That will easily explain this very moderate vote. At present there are two clerks employed at a salary of $2 per day. They will only be retained a short time.

DEPARTMENT OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS.
217. To pay F. A. Dixon the difference between the salary now payable to him under an Order in Council, dated 30th June, 1881, appointing him a first-class clerk from lst January, 1881, $1,275, and the minimum salary allowed to a first-class clerk
under the new Act	$125 00

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The Civil Service Act provides that no employé's rank or position shall be affected by the Act, and being a first class clerk before the Act passed, he remained a first class clerk. But although a first class clerk his salary was under the minimum, therefore, to put him in the same position in respect to salary we ask for a special vote.

Mr. BLAKE. I understand that in the reorganization the salary was taken as the ruling indication and not the class. A man was classed as a second class, and if his balary was not up to the minimum of the first class, it requires the action of the Governor to raise him to the position of the first class. I believe that certainly two employes similarly circumstanced have been examined in order to rise from the second class to the first, although they were first class clerks under the old régime—I refer to the case of Mr. Barrett, of the Post Office Department, and Mr. Henry, of the Department of the Interior. I believe they were both in the same position as Mr. Dixon, and both went up for examination as preliminary for getting into the first class. I do not see why a different rule and measure should be meted out to one than to another.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I imagine these gentlemen went voluntarily and offered themselves for examination; I fancy so.

DEPARTMENT OF INDIAN AFFAIRS. 218. To Increase the salary of Mr Brooke, book-keeper, from $650 to $800 a year, from 1st January, 1884...... $75 00

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. There was no appropriation to pay him this $75, although he was promoted and got that salary of $800 for this half year, therefore we had to put it into the Estimates.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not think that can be precisely accurate. If there was any vote taken last Session it was defective on the same grounds as the other votes we have dealt with this evening, in that the particular name was not given, that the attention of Parliament was not directed to it, and, therefore it was a fresh case. There is something that is objectionable in the Government departing from the law and increasing the salary from $$650\ t>$800\ a\ year$. That is an increase beyond what the Civil Service Act prescribes, and I think the hon. gentleman ought to explain why it is that this exceptional increase is proposed to us.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I will tell the hon. gentleman the state of the case, and he will see that this person deserves a higher salary. Mr. Brooke, though a man of education, entered the Department many years ago as a messenger, and he had the nominal salary of a messenger. He proved to be a very good officer, and was employed from year to year as a clerk. He has turned out to be not only a good clerk, but a vory good book keeper. Mr. Brooke has been for fourteen years in the employ of the Government. His salary at present, dating from November, 1883, is $650 per annum, but being fourteen years a messenger, he could not get his promotion from the maximum, because the rank is that of a third-class clerk. He is represented by the Deputy-Head of the Department to be a most efficient book-keeper and deserving of better compensation than he receives. He has a large family, &c. Had he been made a clerk, as he ought to have been made years ago, he would have stood, I think, high in the ranks of the employes. He is really a very deserving man, and it has always proved very difficult to obtain a good accountant.

3 19	To pay to the undermentioned Clerks the anounts granted under the provisions of an Order in Council of the 15th F-bruary last, being $50 for each and every op- tional subject passed by them at the exami- nation of the Civil Service Board, viz : Privy Council-L. Sir LEONARD TILLEY. It was stated in the House some time ago, and the proposition seemed to be generally accepted, that clerks entering the service who passed in one optional subject should obtain $56; two optional subjects, $100; and three, $150 extra pay. The persons named here Mr. BLAKE.

passed their examinations before the Government arrived at the conclusion to which I have referred. This vote is simply asked, so that justice may bedone to all parties.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman has removed a difficulty I felt about this proposal. I do not wish to be understood as having expressed by silence, and I certainly did not by my speech, assent to the optional plan. I should like to know more about it and ascertain how it works. I was apprehensive that the intention of the Government was to allow clerks to pass their examination and afterwards go up for options; but it seems this money is to meet the cases of persons who passed examinations before the Government adopted the Order in Council. I hope the hon. gentleman does not intend in the future to allow persons who do not take options at the entrance examination to afterwards do so.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. We do not.

Mr. BLAKE. So long as the principle laid down in the Order in Council is maintained, it seems reasonable to place these persons on the same footing as those who went up for examination after the Order was passed.

Mr. BLAKE. Is this amount for the last removal expenses or for the next?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. The amount is for the expenses of the High Commissioner.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The expenses of the High Commissioner when he came out in December to attend the Session?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. Yes; and for his return. He said that would cover the whole amount.

Mr. BLAKE. Is it going to be chronic?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No; only acute.

BOARD OF CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINERS. 221. To provide for the payment of the expenses of the Board of Civil Service Examiners... $3,909 10

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The amount asked for was necessary to meet the payments for the services of the chairman, the secretary, the examiners and the sub-examiners in connection with the Civil Service examination, being the amount in excess of the appropriation for the year.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I have been informed that the examiners, in preparing the papers for the candidates, although paid at a very high rate, have been allowed to employ other people to value the answers.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The only complaint I have heard made is that the examiners were rather too strict in conducting the examinations.

Mr. MACKENZIE. What I desire to know is whether parties, other than the examiners, have been paid for valuing the papers.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The papers are sent by the subexaminers to the examiners. The papers are corrected by themselves and valued by themselves.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I am a little surprised to receive this information, because I was told by a person who ought to know that parties were engaged to value the answers, as the Commissioners were not able to do it themselves.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I can assure the hon. gentleman that I can contradict that statement.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I understand from the Secretary of State that the answers are valued by the different sub-examiners.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. No; on the contrary, the sub-examiners do not correct the papers. They conduct the examinations and forward the papers to the examiners, who exam-ine them and value them. I know one of the examiners who has had 3,000 or 4,000 papers to look over. These papers are valued only by the examiners, and not by perrons outside.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What precautions are taken by the examiners to ensure that a knowledge of the questions should not be conveyed in any way to parties about to be examined?

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The ordinary procautions which mon of sense usually take.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What is the custom?

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I can tell the hon. gentleman that the examiners have taken every precaution and have evinced a great amount of prudence and care in regard to the examinations, and in sceing that the papers are communicated to nobody. The discretion of the examiners has been so great, indeed, that I am sure none of the members of the Council have had any communication with them as to the examinations. The personnel of the examiners is well known to hon, gentlemen, and it is a sufficient guarantee of their probity and of the care and prudence they exercise in their duties.

Mr. CASEY. It is not a question of the intention of the examiners to do right, but we know that examiners, with the best of intentions, have sometimes been deceived by those who deal immediately with the candidates, those having the mechanical work to do. This happened in the Province of Ontario, in connection with the written examinations for school teachers, where the candidates got access to the papers by bribing somebody, and the result was that a new system was adopted, which is considered to be perfectly invincible. Although the Commissioners are mon of the highest intelligence, they may not be up to all the tricks which may be played by candidates, and I hope the Minister will consult with them as to what precautions they adopt and see whether they meet his approval. We have not seen the report of the Civil Service Examiners this year. Has it been brought down?

Mr. CHAPLEAU. Yes; it was brought down within fifteen days of the opening of the Session-including all the examination papers, &c., as required by Statute.

Mr. CASEY. It is strange we have not got them, but I suppose the distributing clork has been careless.

The report, I believe, has been Mr. CHAPLEAU. printed. It is very short, but the examination papers would make an immense volume. A list of the successful candidates at the different examinations has been printed and published in the official Gazette.

Mr. CASEY. Then the part to which I specially refer-red has not been printed. In England and the United States, and other countries, it is the custom to publish ex-amination papers, and they should be published here as they are the gist of the ordinary report of the Board of received the promotion by Order in Council. Examiners,

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I am told by one of the examiners that there were 6,000 papers for one examination.

Mr. CASEY. Those are the answers, but I mean the questions.

Mr. BLAKE. I understood the Minister to say that this vote was, in fact, to make provision for a deficiency in the vote of 1882-83, and therefore it is not really to complete the service of 1883-84. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would state what the total expenditure was for the financial year which this sum is asked to complete; also the total expenditure for the current financial year.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I have not the exact figures of the amount appropriated, but it is in excess of that voted last year.

Mr. BLAKE. I understand that examinations are held in various parts of the country on named days. I presume these examinations take place simultancously, and that the papers are sent under seal to the sub-examiners, and opened only at the instant of examination. I would ask whether any candidate has been permitted a second opportunity of answering the papers.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. In two or three cases of examination for promotion, where, by some accident, which was not the fault of the candidate, but an error in the communication of the papers, the examiners have been authorized by an Order in Council to re-examine the candidates, of course from entirely new papers. This has occurred in two cases; for instance, in one case the papers were sent for one examination, but the wrong papers were given, in which case, of course, a certificate could not be awarded.

Mr. BLAKE. It was a mistake on the part of the oxaminors?

Mr. CHAPLEAU. Yes.

Mr. BLAKE. What is the first item?

Mr. McLELAN. This amount is given Mr. Lowe under the eleventh section of the Act of 1882. Mr. Lowe per-formed the duties of a Deputy-Head, and this amount is to bring his salary as Chief Clerk to the amount provided by Statute.

Mr. BLAKE. And the second item?

Mr. McLELAN. This was provided for in the Estimates of 1884, under the head of Patents. The increases were given, and they were promoted for responsible and technical duties; but the Auditor objected to paying these particular persons without having their names specified. Therefore, the amount is just revoted here, with the names given.

Mr. BLAKE. Is it intended that these promotions shall take place without an examination for promotion?

Mr. McLELAN. They were promoted a year or two ago upon the certificate of the Deputy-Head for special technical qualifications in the examination of patents, and they

Mr. MILLS. I observe that in this vote the hon. gentleman takes an appropriation for the purpose of supplementing the salaries of officers of an inferior rauk, who have been engaged in the discharge of the duties of those of a higher rank. I understood the First Minister to say, when we were discussing this subject before, that the Government invariably acted upon the rule, in that case, of giving the inferior officer the compensation of the superior officer.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I think that is the practice.

Mr. MILLS. Well, I wish to call the hon. gentleman's attention to a case in the Department of the Interior. Mr. Austin retired some time ago; and I have been looking into the Public Accounts, and I find that there is a clerk engaged in the discharge of his duties, who holds the rank of third class clork, which he held when appointed in 1876 or 1877.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I think Mr. Austin has retired within the past year.

Mr. MILLS. I think he was frequently absent before he was put on the retired list.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Who is the officer.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Keycs.

DOMINION POLICE. 223. Further amount required to meet the expendi-

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. For what purpose is this wanted?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. There has been temporarily an increase of the force, from twenty-five to thirtyfour. The memorandum I have on this subject says that the military guard has been withdrawn from Rideau Hall, which cost $3,000 annually, and the duties are altogether done by the police. Then, four watchmen, formerly employed by the Public Works Department, have been superseded by two policemen, who perform the duty more efficiently. A mail rervice is also performed by the police, between the various Government offices every half hour, during office hours. This system operates exceedingly well. Instead of a messenger being sent with a single letter across the square, sometimes having to wait for an answer, the policemen who are here go every half-hour to a box, into which every Department drops a letter intended for any other Department, and the messengers are kept for more important matters.

Mr. CASEY. If this practice saves any pay for messengers, it is certainly an economy, but I fancy that putting on extra policemen to do the work for which messengers are appointed and paid is not economizing.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That is merely a part of the work they did before the increase; but the increase is necessary.

PENITENTIARIES.

To meet sundry payments in connection with the British Columbia Penitentiary, to 30th

$1,948 44 June, 1883. Amount required to meet expenditure of Mani-toba Penitentiary. 224 -

6,500 00

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. This is to recoup the appropriation for the current year, for the following reasons, viz. : In the latter part of July, 1882, $2,128 was paid to the Kingston Penitentiary for clothing furnished to this institution in May of that year. This amount should have been paid in 1881-82; but as the account for that year was closed, it was paid out of the appropriation for 1882-83, in consequence of which there was not enough left to pay the June accounts of that year, amounting to $1,948.44, and they had to be paid out of the appropriation for 1883-84.

Mr. CASEY. What is this vote for Manitoba Penitentiary for ?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Four hundred and fifty dollars of this amount is to pay extra guards who have been employed at different times during the year, in consequence of the illness of several members of the regular staff; $475 is for an allowance to Mr. Little, the late steward, who was compelled to retire on account of ill health; $1,807 is for maintenance on account of the large increase to the prison population, the amounts asked for under the sub-heads of rations and clothing having been found insufficient to meet the requirements to the 30th of June, 1884. For heating, there is $2,000, the amount voted for 1883-84 having been insufficient, in consequence of the severity of the winter. For the farm, there is $1,768, the amount, $100, voted for 1883-84 having been insufficient.

Mr MILLS.

Mr. CASEY. In connection with the Manitoba Penitentiary, some facts have come to my knowledge which I think the attention of the Government should be called to. It appears that Major Bowles, an American, was a contractor for material to build the proposed fence around the penitentiary, and that Mr. Lecours was the architect instructed to look after the work. Mr. Lecours, it is said, certified to an account for $4,000 for fence material, for which Major Bowles was paid, and it was suspected afterwards that the material had not been furnished. An officer was sent from here to investigate the matter, and he found this suspicion to be correct. Mr. Lecours was consequently recalled and given desultory work in the service here at half salary or something of that kind. If it be correct that he certified to the account when there was no material furnished, his punishment should have been more severe. If he did not do so, then the hop. Minister should explain why he was recalled and remove this suspicion in reference to his conduct. I have also been informed that at a subsequent date Major Bowles furnished the material and received a second payment of $4,000, so that he came out of the affair with a clear profit of $4,000. He is, however, reported to have said to his friends at Winnipeg that but a very small share of that came into his pocket, and he was grumbling on this account. I understand also that the fence has not been put up of wood, but is being erected of stone.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I am sorry the hon. gentleman did not give me notice privately that he was going to bring this matter up. I could not expect this to come up under this or any other item in these Estimates. The hon. gentleman is right in calling the attention of the House to this matter, but it is unfortunate he did not give me notice, because I am not in a position to give the explanations I would desire to give in answer to his remarks. I think the statement about the lumber is very much exaggerated. I think there was some lost, or some mistake made, but I do not think there was anything like a loss of $4,000. Mr. Lecours had been there as architect, but we found that the presence of an architect there was not necessary, in view of the expense, and therefore, without censuring Mr. Lecours, I thought it better that the position of architect should be abolished. I consequently recalled Mr. Lecours and gave him a position in the Department, continued him in the Department at a reduced salary which was very proper, because the salary he was receiving up there was in conformity with the larger expenses rcquired by an officer there over those required at Ottawa, The fence the hon. gentleman speaks of has not been orected; my attention has been specially called to it by the Department of Justice, and I may say by one of the hon. members from there, especially the hon. member for Lisgar. I think the hon. gentleman will see that we will have some vote in the Estimates that are to come down which will enable us most likely, not to erect now a stone wall, but probably put up temporarily a wooden fence. I understand there is no fence at all there, but the bulk of the sum to be voted will have to be devoted to the increased accommodation of the penitentiary, which is very crowded and re-quires a number of new cells. We try to accommodate the convicts there, but I cannot give the hope that we will erect a stone wall.

Mr. CASEY. I am sorry I had not an opportunity of asking the hon, member privately about this matter as he would then be able to tell us more about it, Perhaps he may be able to say something more about it on Concurrence. I understood, however, that another officer had been appointed in Mr. Lecours' position, to the same office that. Mr. Lecours had held. That was incorrect?

When the vote for the Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Manitoba Penitentiary comes up, I hope I will be in a position to give the information.

Mr. CASEY. I had been told that another gentleman had been appointed to the same position in Winnipeg as that which Mr. Lecours held.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. No; there is a clerk of works, Mr. Dan. Smith. He is not an architect.

Mr. CASEY. Not the same salary or position?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I did not say that.

Mr. BLAKE. I am sorry that I cannot but think that this vote of $6,500, added to the other votes which have been taken for the Manitoba Penitentiary, shows that it is not an economically managed institution, and I think it deserves the serious consideration of the Minister of Justico.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I believe Mr. Bedson, who is the warden, enjoys the confidence of the Minister of Justice. I think Mr. Moylan, who is the inspector, also speaks very well of him. Of course, I have not watched the expenses; but I have no doubt the Minister of Justice will observe my hon. friend's statement in the Hansard, and will give it every consideration.

Mr. BLAKE. I hope he will observe it in some other way. I hope the hon. Minister who represents him in this House will bring it to his attention. I do not trust to the Hansard as the medium of communication between myself and the Government.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It is very convenient.

Mr. CASEY. The man who has succeeded Mr. Lecourshis office is not called by the same name. How do the salaries compare?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. He is paid $3 a day, whilst the other was an architect, and was paid $2,400 a year.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGH Γ . What were the circumstances connected with this return of $200.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. It is the case of a candidate who paid the $200. The sheriff paid that over to the credit of the Receiver-General, instead of holding the money, and, when the election was over and the man, having received over a third of the votes, was entitled to his money, it was not to be had, the sheriff having made a mistake and paid it over ito the Receiver-General.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Lent and returned, in fact?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. This is to return it.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman is quite sure that this is the case with reference to Bastien?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. Yos; with reference to that item.

Mr. BLAKE. That it was money which the candidate was entitled to.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Which the returning officer should have returned to him, because he had more than a third of the votes.

Mr. BLAKE. What election was it, pray?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I forget.

Mr. BLAKE. I think the hon. gentleman will find that the person did not get a third of the votes, did not go to the poll, and was not entitled to the return of the deposit.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. On enquiry, I find that is not the statement of fact. In order to got it exactly, we will have this struck out, and have it put in the sub Supplementary Estimates, if it is all right. In regard to the item in reference to the Sessional indemnity, Mr. Vail was taken ill while coming here. I believe he had some difficulty in getting across, and did not get here until some time during the Session. It was thought right, following other procedents, that he should have the whole of his indemnity. Mr. Robertson's case was the same. He started for Ottawa, but could not come to the House on account of a severe bronchial attack. Mr. Colby and Mr. Nelson, the Senator whose name is mentioned in the next vote, were both tossing on the sea in their vain attempt to get here in time. They were on board the Celtic, which was tossing about for six weeks, and I think that is suffering enough and this is a small enough compensation for it.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I observe that the return of my hon. friend, the member for Stanstead (Mr. Colby) to this House, coincided exactly with the return to this House of another hon. member who was kept tossing about most improperly and unfairly on the billows of an election petition, my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Mills), and I think, in all conscience under the circumstances, if this kind of thing is to be done, my hon. friend from Bothwell, who was most improperly excluded from the House last Session, ought to have the whole Sessional indemnity this Session. I do not propose to oppose the other two, but in all conscience and justice I think the name of the hon. member for Bothwell should be added.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That was not suggested to us, but now that it has been suggestel, we will take it into consideration.

Mr. MILLS. I do not make any claim, because I do not think there is any claim. I think those members who are here for the full time should receive their Sessional indemnity, and those who are here for a portion of the time should receive an indemnity for the portion of the time they are here.

Mr. TUPPER (Pictou). I think the hon. member for Lunenburg (Mr. Kaulbach) is entitled to the same consideration as the member for Bothwell.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. member for Lunenburg is here under a new election. The hon. member for Bothwell is declared to be elected under the election of 1882.

Mr. TUPPER. I think that is a distinction without a difference. The hon. member for Lunenburg was unfairly kept out of the House last Session.

Mr. BLAKE. The election was void in that case. In the other, it was a due election of the hon. gentleman who is now sitting for the county of Bothwell, but he was not only kept out of his seat improperly, but an intruder was imposed upon the House in his place; not but what I agree in the view of my hon friend for Bothwell, that he should not be paid for any time that he was not here, but the one being a case of void election, and the other that of a member who has been kept out of the seat improperly, to which the courts have declared he was entitled from the first, I do not consider it is at all a parallel case with the election for Lunenburg. I wish to ask how it is with regard to the vote to cover expenditure for French translation during recess. Is that the Debates or House work?

Mr. SPEAKER. House work.

Mr. BLAKE. Is it for extra services?

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. There is a great deal of extra work[•] The French translation is much greater than it was in former years. Any one who looks at the Sessional Papers will see that they have almost doubled in ten years. There are twelve volumes. The staff cannot do it all during the Session, and we have to employ extra labour during the locess. Last year there were some heavy papers ordered by the House, a great many Sessional Papers, and they have involved this extra expense.

Mr. BLAKE. Then, as I understand from Mr. Speaker's observations, the view is that the work has so increased that the normal staff is no longer adequate to the performance of it. If it be the case that the regular course of work has overrun the capacity of the staff, it would be better to consider the reorganization of the staff. As a rule, I believe, it would be more economical, when in any Department the present staff is found insufficient to discharge permanent duties, to appoint more permanent officers.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. I do not ask for the appointment of permanent officers at present. I think we will probably be able to get on without asking for this vote again. I shall try to keep the expense down.

Mr. BLAKE. The next item is to cover the amount necessary to complete the publication of the Debates for 1884, $16,000. I would like to know what the total estimate now is of the Hansard for this Session.

Mr. DESJARDINES. Referring to the vote of $1,000 for the French translators during recess, I think this is a proper occasion to call the attention of the Speaker to the fact that the French translators, although their work has increased very much since last year, still remain with the former salaries. As we have been increasing the salaries of the French translators of the Debates, who have only three months' work to do in the year, I think it is only fair that the permanent translators, who are kept here during the whole year, should be paid somewhat in proportion.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). So far as I can make out at the moment, the cost of the Hansard this year will be about $27,000. The printing will cost about $10,000—at least that is the estimate; my impression is that it will hardly come to that cost, from the fact that the number of pages will not be quite equal to what we anticipated.

Mr. BLAKE. Then if it is to cost $27,000 with existing salaries, I suspect the hon. gentleman's estimate is too low. But there is $20,000 already voted; what is the want of $16,000 more, if the total expense is only going to be $27,000 ?

Mr. CHARLTON. 1 think we are to give five bound volumes to each member, and the expense of printing will be somewhat larger than my hon. friend estimates.

Mr. MACKENZIE. If the Chairman states $27,000, I move that the $9,000 be struck off.

Mr. WHITE. I estimated $10,000 for the printing, but as my hon. friend remarks, there are to be five copies for each member, instead of two, and that may increase the changes, it will be something like $42,000 or $43,000. We estimate for printing. This vote is to cover the possibility of increased printing.

Mr. BAIN (North Wentworth). I would like to say, in the interest of the friends of the Hansard, that it strikes me it would be better to revert to the old system of supplying members with two rather than five copies of the Hansard, if the result is going to be an addition of $16,000 to the cost of the work. As I remarked last Session, I think it is a mistake to distribute five sets of such a valuable and costly work to each member, because they are too valuable to distribute to any extent through the Riding. As long as we are confined to two copies, we are not expected to make any distribution. But the moment that it is known that the members have four or five sets at their disposal, they will have a number of applications from friends in their constituency whom it will be impossible to supply. I think, therefore, it would be wiser for the Committee to revert to the old system of distributing only two sets to members. I also think that a synopsis or a short summary of some of the more important returns could be drawn up and printed in a concise shape, so as to be distributed throughout the country, and I think they would be much more beneficial, and that it would be a better way of spending the money.

Mr. WHITE. That matter was decided last year. It was represented to the Committee that in many constituencies there are four or five Mechanics' Institutes, and it was very desirable that the members should be able to supply these institutions with a copy of the Debates. It is, of course, a question whether it would not be better, perhaps, to give to each member only one copy, and give the other copies to the institutions, but the other course was adopted last year by a vote of the House, and it is too late now to change it because the volumes are already being printed.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. I can give the hon. gentleman the figures showing how the increase has taken place. The reporters were formerly paid $9,967; now they are paid $11,400; amanuenses, formerly $1,116, now $1,344; printing, $10,473, now $13,600; translating, $2,724, now $5,400; printing paper, $2,343, now $3,500; binding, $1,350, now $2,500; miscellaneous, $514, now $1,000; making a total of $36,144 now as against $28,494 formerly. This is due to the change giving the increased number of volumes as a sked for by the Committee and adopted by the House.

Mr. BLAKE. Only partially owing to that; there are increases in some of the salaries and in the number of employees.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I think it is well worth consideration whether next year we ought not to return to the old number of two volumes instead of five to each member. As my hon, friend from Cardwell has stated, in some constituencies there are literary institutions, mechanics institutes, &c., which would all like to get the bound Hansard, and I think the House ought to consider whether it is well to continue this system, because, with the growth of the country these institutions will be increasing, and it will be a large additional burden to the nation if we are able to supply a copy to each institution. They may not all have equal claims, but they will all be disappointed if they do not getany. We cannot help it this year, as the edition is now being printed, but it will be well, perhaps, before we prorogue, to make some other arrangement for the future.

Mr. BLAKE. The increased number of copies will make a difference of $4,000 or $5,000, which is, of ccurse, not a very large proportion of the total expense. We find from the estimate that the amount which the Debates will cost this year is $36,000. I cannot say what the increased cost for next Session will be; but, in view of the proposed changes, it will be something like $42,000 or $43,000. We ought to consider the other question to which the hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Bain) has alluded, namely, the practical utility of it. I may say it is one of those things in regard to which it is a little difficult to retrace one's steps. If we distribute four copies among our constituents it is somewhat difficult to explain to them why only one copy should be distributed next year.

Sir JOHN A, MACDONALD. Ascribe it to the economy of the Tory Government.

Mr. BLAKE. That is exactly like the Tory Government. First, they make extravagant expenditures; and, afterwards, they claim great credit for having retrenehed their own extravagance.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. We become repentant, which hon. gentlemen opposite do not.

Mr. CHARLTON. I hardly think we can consider five copies an extravagant number. In the United States every Senator and Representative receives forty copies; thirtynine copies for distribution. I apprehend that most of the members will find it easy to distribute four copies. The expense is triffing compared with the benefits to be derived.

Mr. MILLS. A member of Congress hardly ever returns to the House, and the effect of such a large distribution might be the same here. I see a great deal of difficulty in reducing the number of copies. You excite expectations which you will be obliged to meet in some way or other. Hon, gentlemen opposite say we can attribute the change to the economy of the Tory Government. There is no one who would believe it, and I am perfectly certain the organs of the hon. gentlemen opposite would insist that it was a base calumny.

Mr. MACKENZIE. As whatever action is to be taken for next Session must be taken this Session, the matter should be considered fairly. For my own part, I am against a continuance of five copies, and I see no difficulty in going back to the former number-two. We had a very large vote, 60 to 100, in favour of abolishing the system of official reporting altogether. That showed a very strong feeling in the House against the expenditure as now proposed. I merely rise to give expression to my own views in favour of returning to the system of distributing to members only two copies, or abolishing the reporting altogether, which I would much prefer.

Mr. SPROULE. Year after year the reports from the Debates Committee are in the direction of increasing the expense; and there can be no doubt that at no very distant time the House will be compelled to reconsider the whole question, and do something to reduce the expendi-I believe the reporting at the commencement tare. of last Parliament was introduced more as an esperiment than otherwise. It was then considered that the work could be done for a certain sum. Experience has gone to prove that the expense could not be kept within that limit; and during the last part of the Session, the Report of the Debates Committee recommended the appointment of additional officers, so as to get out the work with the expedition demanded. I do not see any reason why members should receive more than one copy. When they receive two or three copies, members are liable to give offence in their distribution. If a copy is required for a Mechanics' Institute, it could be sent there direct. In view of the fact that the expense is increasing, and that the Committee, from time to time, in their reports, recommended the appointment of another translator, another reporter, or another officer, or clerk, the House will be compelled before long to reconsider the whole subject, with a view, if not to abolish it altogether, at least to curtail and very considerably decrease the expense.

Mr. MULOCK And also consider the propriety of diminishing the length of speeches.

Mr. LANDRY (Kent). I think the Committee should devise some means by which the expenditure on this item might be reduced. I would not advise the suspension of the publication of the Debatcs, although I voted the other day in that direction; but 1 would like to see some means adopted by which the expenditure would be very much reduced. Had the mover of the motion for the abolition of the Debates given the details of the expenditure to the House, and had the House thoroughly understood how large the expenditure was in proportion to the results, the vote in favour of that motion would have been still larger than it was; and, therefore, I say that it is well worthy of the attention of the Government whether something cannot be done next Session to reduce the expenditure. We know that early this Session the Chairman of the Committee in a report, or in his penditure. remarks in moving the adoption of a report, expressed the opinion that the expenditure was considerably too large, and that the Committee were considering some means by which it might be reduced. I do not find fault, because I know it is difficult to retrench; nevertheless, instead of reducing the expenditure it has been increased from $28,000 for this year to $42,000 for next year. After the expression of opinion given by the House, it appears to me that something must be done in some way or other to curtail the expenditure. And, Sir, I feel that unless this is done, the sentiment which was expressed by the vote a few days ago, for abolishing Hansard, will grow stronger and stronger, if the expense increases, or even if it remains where it is, and that year after year we will have votes proposing to do away with it altogether.

Mr. BLAKE. There is an item to cover extra claims of certain returning officers at the last General Election, on which no explanation has been given.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. This item is to pay the claims of some returning officers, especially in the city of Montreal. These claims have been before the Government since the last election. One large item of their expenditure was the copying of the municipal lists, according to the new method, and distributing them at the places of voting in the cities. By a clerical error in the law, the expenditure which is allowable has not been paid, this section of the Statute having been inadvertantly, I am sure, taken from the electoral law of Quebec. The election law of Quebec, section 64, says, that the lists shall be taken in such a manner, and the expenditure allowed by the Act was referred to the wrong clause. The item for the copying of the lists, I think, alone amounts to the sum of $300 for each of these three returning officers. The auditor and the officers of the Government will have to examine the different accounts, and I am sure that a sum of $1,500, or perhaps a little more, will have to be paid those gentlemen for regular and necessary expenses which they have incurred. In two or three instances the cases have been taken to court, and judgments have been given against the returning officers, but the Auditor-General here was unable to authorize the payments. This amount will be to cover those expenditures if they are found to be regular, according to the disposition of the Statute.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not think the explanation is at all satisfactory. We know that there is a Statute which prescribes what a returning officer shall receive and for what services, and the Government is entitled to pay for those services by virtue of that Statute, without a special vote they are entitled to pay all that the law authorizes. The hon. gentleman says, with reference to the copying of the lists, that there has been an error in the law, and that there fore the returning officers cannot be paid the sum of $300, which they ought to be paid, because the law is wrong. Now, if that is the case, the hon. gentleman should have introduced a Statute to correct the error, and make it large enough to embrace what in his view—and he can obtain the consent of Parliament to that view—are the legitimate expenses of the returning officers. But it is not because there has been an error in the law which can be amended or altered, that we should be asked to pass a special vote of this character. The hon. gentleman has mentioned one item as to which, of course, we cannot usefully engage in a discussion without any notice, without having had an opportunity of looking into it—an item of $300, but there are $1,700 more.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. No; the copying would be $900.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman says they are extra services; that they are within the disposition of the law; but if they are within the disposition of the law, they should be paid without a vote, and if they are beyond the law, the Auditor General will have no control whatever. It will be at the determination of the Executive who shall be paid, and what they shall be paid, within the limits of the $2,000, and that is in my opinion very objectionable. I think, on reflection, the Administration will see that what they ought to do is to make the law conformable to what they think it should be, and then there will be no necessity for the vote.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I did not know that this item would come up, or I would have given an opinion which I think the hon. gentleman would respect; that is, the opinion of the ex-Minister of Justice, the hon. Mr. Laflamme, who has explained the subject better than I can. I think, however, that perhaps the item had better be suspended, and it will be shown that the Auditor-General was, perhaps, a little strict in his interpretation of the law. I may say, also, that the Auditor himself recommended that this vote should be asked from Parliament, to remove doubts, if there were any.

Mr. BLAKE. I maintain that it is of the last consequence that the general Statute Law should prescribe what are the classes of services for which returning officers are to be paid, and it is the introduction of a vicious system to propose extra votes for special services. We know that all sorts of demands are made by returning officers after elections, and that the audit of these claims has been a sort of special science; and to pass a special vote of Parliament for extra services, not warranted by the Statute, will inflict a great deal of inconvenience and difficulty in the future. If it be true that there is some error in the law, by which the real intention of the Legislature has been thwarted, there can be no objection to the passage of a Bill to make the general law right in the future. There will be less objection to dealing with any number of returning officers in the spirit of that legislation which Parliament shall have sanctioned as the true meaning and proper effect of the law for the future. 1 hope the vote will be suspended, and that if there is any doubt in the law, a short Bill will be introduced to make the matter right.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. Will the hon gentleman allow the next item to be called.

Mr. BLAKE, Cortainly.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The case is this. In the last election in the county of Vaudreuil there were several candidates at least three. On the nomination day, I think immediately after the nomination, by the interposition of mutual friends, one of the candidates was induced to withdraw, before any expenditure was incurred, more than the necessary expenditure for the two candidates who remained. The candidate retiring held that the interpretation of the law was—not as I do, though I would not give myself as an authority—that a candidate who retires withdraws his nomination papers and with it the deposit he made with the returning officer. Of course, the object of the law is to prevent the unnecessary expenditure of money by the people for polls and for the preparation of papers for the election. In the present case, as the election was contested, there was no extra expenditure incurred by the returning officer, and no extra trouble caused to the people of the county in which the election took place, on account of the candidate who retired. Under these circumstances, the candidate requested from the returning officer the withdrawal of the deposit of $200; and the returning officer, knowing that his nomination had not added to the expenditure, and that his resignation left things exactly as they were, so far as expenditure was concerned, thought proper, before handing over the deposit, to solicit the opinion of the officer who sent him the writs; and the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, having been asked his advice, declined to give it. The returning officer immediately afterwards applied to the next best man to whom he thought he could apply; he applied to the then Secretary of State, and the then Secretary of State, my predecessor in office, sent him an answer, both by telegram and by letter, telling him that according to law he was right in reimbursing the retiring candidate his deposit of $200, as no extra expenditure had been incurred on his account. I do not want to give an opinion, as I do not claim to be an authority on this subject; but I say that the returning officer, in applying to Parliament for this amount, is coming to the proper place. The Auditor General, I dare say, advised by the Law Officers of the Crown, having decided that in strict law the returning officer should not have returned the deposit to the candidate, he comes and, by petition to Parliament, says he has acted in perfect good faith. Of course, the personality of the returning officer has nothing to do with the matter; but I think the peculiar position he occupies, and his good faith, as shown by his whole action in the matter, at least entitles him to the good will of Parliament.

Mr. BLAKE. The short and the long of the matter is, that before the returning officer returned the deposit, he consulted the late Secretary of State, and the late Secretary of State communicated to him that he would be right in point of law in returning it.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. He was both telegraphed and written to that he would be right in returning it.

Mr. BLAKE. The Secretary of State was not then a judge, I believe ?

Mr. CHAPLEAU. A practising judge.

Mr. BLAKE. I observe that his successor is more cautious than he was in expressing an opinion. I have not looked at the Statute, but my recollection is that it makes no provision, and I do not see how there could be a provision for returning the deposit. I never was a very great friend to the deposit, but the system must be worked alike for all; and it is important that no action of Parliament should take place which should throw doubt upon this question. If it is intended by this vote to decide that third candidates may have their deposits returned, we had better know it; for, after the hon. gentleman shall have succeeded to some higher position, we might have a recurrence of a Secretary of State giving the advice which has been given on this occasion. After the statement of the hon. gentleman, I can see that the returning officer is, in a partial sense, exonerated from an improper proceeding, though I do not think the Secretary of State should have advised him. It is a vory improper thing for Ministers to give advice to returning officers, on any subject whatever. The returning officer ought to have obtained independent advice, which it is impossible that the advice of a Minister could be, under such

-orvations, I feel that as the Government, through one of its members, chose to take the course of giving this advice to the returning officer, he may be said, personally, to occupy a better position, with reference to the present demand, than he otherwise could; but I think it ought to be distinctly understood from the other side, that no advice at all is to be given to returning officers by the Executive, and that this payment is not in any sense to form a precedent.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I can assure the hon. gentleman that during the time of office of the present Secretary of State there need be no fcar. I happened myself to be in a similar position. The candidate opposed to me withdrew during the contest, and I was consulted by the returning officer as to whether he could not return the deposit made by the retiring candidate. Pleased as I was to see my opponent retire, I was obliged to give the opinion that the deposit was forfeited.

Mr. DAVIES. I wish to call the attention of the Govern ment to the next item, which relates to Sessional allowance I understand that the practice adopted is that members of Parliament, who have been detained by sickness or other unavoidable causes from attending, shall be allowed their full indemnity. There is the case of the hon. member for Napierville, who is exactly in the same position, having been debarred by illness from attending during fifteen days of the Session, and of course, if the principle is adopted, it must be applied to his case.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. The attention of the Governmont was called to this matter and it was intended to insert that in the Estimates to come down, and ask the Hou e to vote it.

231	To provide for pay of extra Militia Force in Manitoba, authorized to drill	2,500 00
	Public Armouries and care of arms	9,544 00

Mr. CARON. This item of $16,000 is to supply military clothing for the year 1883. This supply is absolutely necessary. The contractors are Messrs. Auclair & Gagné, of Ottawa, who were the lowest tenderers. The number of tunies required is 7,560. The item for contingencies, $3,000, is for type-setting, printing and binding the Militia Mr. CARON. The work the hon. gentleman refers to is Regulations and Orders of 1883; the item $2,500, is to pro-the Militia List, containing the names of the officers compos-vide for the pay of the 19th Battalion of Rifles, in Mani-ting the Militia force of Canada.

toba, which was organized last November, and has gone through this year's drill. The amount of money voted last year was for the force as it existed at that time. It was considered advisable to authorize the organization of that battalion, and the drill having taking place, it was nocessary to pay the amount required, and it was therefore put in the Supplementary Estimates.

Mr. WATSON. I would ask the hon, gontleman if it is the intention to establish any more volunteer battalions in the North-West. There are several towns in Manitoba where there might be good companies organized. I should like to know if it is the intention to furnish them with accoutrements as soon as they are ready to organize.

Mr. CARON. The organization of the volunteer force in the North-West and in Manitoba is a very large question. It has been, and still is, engaging the attention of the Department. Under the estimates as they now exist, it would be impossibe to get up anything like a proper organization in that district, but the battalion which has just been provided for is the beginning of what I believe will be a proper organization of the force there.

Mr. WATSON. I think probably too much of this money is spent in Winnipeg. There are rural towns which might have a company, and have their headquarters in Winnipeg. There is Portage la Prairie, Minnedosa, Rapid City, and also Brandon. It should be distributed more through the Province and not confined to Winnipeg.

Mr. COCKBURN. I may also remind the Minister of Militia and Defence that in the constituency I formerly represented, which contains 27,000 inhabitants, and several large villages, one with as much as 2,000 inhabitants, no volunteer company has ever been organized. There is most excellent material. Plenty of good men would be volunteers, and have been offering their services for a long time, but they have never had an opportunity to organize.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I thought some attention had been paid to the organization of a brigade in your county.

Mr. COCKBURN. We do not care about the whiskey brigade. I would ask the Minister not to forget that section of the country, if he recruits more volunteers.

Mr. SOMERVILLE (Brant). I understood the Minister to say that part of this $3,000 for contingencies was to pay for printing the books, the Militia General Orders, at the Queen's printing office. Is not that the work printed by Foote, of the Quebec Chronicle office?

Mr. CARON. I stated it was for the purpose of paying for the printing, binding and type-setting of Militia Regulations and Orders for 1883, $2,500; 4,000 copies were re-quired, at 623 cents per copy. This was carried on through the Queen's Printer. Immediately after the passing of the Bill consolidating the Militia last Session, it became imperative to prepare new regulations under that Bill, and they had to be printed and distributed to the force. This amount is for the purpose of meeting that expenditure.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. Do I understand that they are printed by the Government contractor?

Mr. CARON. Yes.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. I thought that was the work performed by the proprietor of the Quebec Chronicle.

Mr. CARON. No; that is different.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. What is the work he does ?

Mr. CARON. The work the hon. gentleman refers to is public armouries and care of arms?

Mr. CARON. This amount is required for payment of services in connection with public armouries and care of arms for 1883-S4. The estimated expenditure will be as follows: Allowances for care of arms, 650 companies, at $40 each per annum, $26,000; 40 troops of calvary, at $60 each, $2,400; total, $28,400; pay of storekeepers, caretakers, armourers and labourers in public armouries and stores, $33,144; total amount required for 1883, $61,544; amount voted, $52,000, leaving a balance required of $9,544. I must tell the hon gentleman that for years past this vote has been taken out of other votes which belong more particularly to another branch of the service, but I considered that it was far better to have it under the proper heading, from the fact that these various votes from which this amount was taken were not large enough to cover the expenditure, and I thought it far better to bring down a vote so that Parliament would see what the public armouries and care of arms entailed in the way of expenditure.

Mr. BLAKE. Is the excess or deficiency generally dis tributed over the vote, or was it in one or two items the original vote was found to be deficient?

Mr. CARON. The deficiency applied to the pay of storekeepers, caretakers, armourers and labourers. Hon. gentlemon will remember that in discussing the estimates which were brought down, I stated that the expenditure had been increased from the fact that some valuable property had been transferred to the Department of Militia, which entailed some increase in the way of caretakers. I can also say that, from the fact that the force was increased by the establishment of the permanent force, it was necessary to employ, in the various stores which were required for the purpose of transmitting the arms and clothing and various articles, an increased number, in some instances, of caretakers. The vote for allowances to the various companies and to the troops of cavalry remains stationary, and has not been exceeded; but of course, whenever there is an increase in the force-take for instance the battalion I have just provided for in Winnipeg-an increase of that kind would naturally entail an increase of expenditure from the number of companies which would be added to the permanent force.

Mr. CAMERON (Middlesox). The hon, gentleman says the increase is largely due to the fact that there is a permanent force. That permanent force is under 600 men. Surely the duty of distributing the necessaries required by these 60 men should not require $9,514.

Mr. CARON. No; I have given that as an instance of the increase, of a partial increase, to the vote, but I have also stated that the number of carctakers and the number of storekeepers have been increased. Of course, hon. gentlemen will understand that, if the permanent force or the Militia force is increased by a certain number of new companies, naturally the expenditure must be increased. The mere fact of paying $40 per annum to a company and $60 to a troop of cavalry is enough to show that, if you increase the number, the vote must be increased also.

Mr. CAMERON. Will the hon. gentleman give us to understand how much of the increase is due to the increased number of companies in the force ?

Mr. CARON. I could not exactly say. I could not give the exact amount, but the vote has been too short for years past, as I have explained to the hon. gentleman, and the deficiency upon this vote was taken out of other votes belonging to the Department. I thought it was better, after the experience of three or four years, seeing that this vote was short, to add to it the deficiency which has been provided for in that way, and make one vote which comes up before Parliament under this particular head, for the purpose I

Mr. CARON.

Mr. BLAKE. Why is this extra amount required for of providing for the requirements of the public armouries and care of arms.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Halifax Extension. $17,000. That is composed of an over-expenditure of $16,000, and provision for two cranes of 15 tons capacity, $10,000 which, torether with subdries and outstanding accounts, make up the $17,000. Increased accommodation at St. John, $20,000. That is to complete the building and other works now in course of construction. The total estimated cost of the passenger station was $123,000. There is available to the 30th November, 1883, $103,000. We expect it will be finished before the 1st of July. Dalhousie branch, $33,000. This work was done by the authority of the appropriation of last Session. The total estimated cost of that work is $93,000; the appropriation was $60,000, and it requires $33,000 to complete. That also will be completed during the present year.

Mr. BLAKE. It seems the cost of the work was $93,000, though it was represented as likely to cost only $60,000.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The details of the expenditure for the six months ending 31st December, were: For land and damages, $1,100; inspection, $378; transportation of materials, $160; together with sleepers, bridging, track-laying, cattle cars, fastenings, &c. Then, the next six months' estimated cost show: Contract price for grading, $35,420; land and damages, $500; rails and fastenings, $27,000; sleepers, ballasting, new stations, extension of wharf and freight shed, $5,000; frogs and switches, $200; legal and ongineering expenses, $1,021; making, in all, $81,482. There is another list of details : Rails, fastenings and spikes, $27,006; sleepers, $1,883; ballasting, $8,400; new station, $1,500. The freight shed and wharf extension will be the property of the Government, I presume.

Mr. BLAKE. But there seems to be no vote for the wharf.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I presume it is all included in the land and damages. On Concurrence I will give more explicit explanation. Rivière du Loup, town branch, $19,000. The total estimated cost of that is $14,000, and the appropriation was $25,900; that leaves a balance of $19,000 to complete.

Mr. BLAKE. That is nearly double the vote of last vear.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The Rivière du Loup branch is four miles long. Land and damages were $2,692; contract price for grading, $14,104; sleepers, $2,587; rails, fastenings and spikes, $18,207; frogs and switches, $200; ballasting, $5,600; legal, engineering and other expenses, detail.

Mr. BLAKE. How was it that the contract was only for $25,000, when the actual cost was so much greater?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The road had not been surveyed nor located when the appropriation was asked for, and it was found that to make it useful we had to extend it further than was originally intended. Repairs and im-provements, Rivière du Loup Branch, $500. This is to pay old land claims.

Mr. BLAKE. Hardly. You would not put them under repairs and improvements.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER Yes.

Mr. BLAKE. What sort of an improvement is an old land claim?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. These old land claims may involve making certain improvements in order to meet the claims with reference to damage to lands. I think that is an item that generally comes under repairs and improvements.

Mr. BLAKE. It would be well in the future to know that in Parliamentary parlance repairs and improvements mean old land claims.

St. Charles Branch $230,000 09

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman promised to give full information on this item.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. With respect to the expenditure on the St. Charles Branch, the first expenditure was made in 1881-82, $660; 1882-83, $482,197; from June 30th, 1883, to 31st December, 1883, $196,242; total, $679,099. The details of expenditure for the year ending 30th June, 1883, and the six months ending 31st December, 1883, were as follows: Grading, $113,378; bridging, $30,202; removing buildings, $640; land and damages, $302,710; ballasting, $597; tracklaying, $1,761; rails and fastenings, $60,449; steam shovel, $7,408; fencing, $4,898; crib work, $105,294; surveying and inspection, $7,362; advertising, $1,328; sleepers, $11,461; engine and car hire and transport, $10,326; crossings, $236; Hadlow engine house, $19,420; total $678,439. Expended previous to 1882-83 $660; making a total expenditure up to 3 1st December 1883, $679,099. The estimated cost of work remaining to be done is as follows: Grading, bridging, &c., $50,200, land and damages (depends on awards) $51,700; rip-rap, $2,000; fencing, $3,200; read crossings, $1,000; sleepers, $600; rails, $22,200; frogs and switches, $5,700; ballastirg, $14,400: track-laying, $400; station building, $20,000; engineering, superintendence, &c., $8,600; coal wharf, $40,000, being a total of $220,000. This gives a gross total of $899,099. Adding $50,000 for probable extra cost and damages, it gives a total probable cost of $949,099.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman's estimate in this case as well as in other cases has been largely exceeded. The estimate was about $500,000, whereas the cost as now estimated will be $950,000. Under what headings has the great difference occurred ?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The principal point of difference is in regard to the cost of right of way and the property required in connection with it.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman estimated the total cost at about $500,000, and I find that the land has cost about $400,000.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I have already stated that I found myself entirely astray in regard to the estimate made. I took the precaution before I made my estimate of applying to the best sources of information within my power. I had the road carefully surveyed; I employed what I sup-$707; total, $14,099. That is the estimated cost given in posed to be the most competent persons to make an estimate of what the land damages would be; and my estimate has proved to be entirely fallacious. The land and property were placed at a value which I thought was simply impossible. Every effort was made on the part of the Government to keep the cost at the lowest possible amount.

Mr. BLAKE. Who were these mistaken valuators?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will furnish the hon. gentleman with their names.

Mr. BLAKE. I believe the road is about thirteen miles long.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will give the exact distance.

Mr. BLAKE. I hope the hon. gentleman will not have occasion to buy much more land in that part of the country. I am glad real estate is so very high there, and I trust the remainder of the real estate possesses the same value as that which the hon. gentleman found himself obliged to buy. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will explain with regard to the item of steam shovels.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. We found it was cheaper to buy steam shovels and carry out the work by the Department than to have it done by contract. The engine and cars were engaged from the Intercolonial, and the cost price was charged.

Construction Account...... $10,000 00

Mr. BLAKE. What is this construction account?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That is another case of repairs.

Mr. BLAKE, I do not like paying these old claims under this head. Where is this?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This is on the main line of railway. They are for claims which have been resisted for years, and we were compelled to send them for arbitration. One of them is the case of James Faulkner, a very old claim, which was resisted as strongly as possible, but it seems that when these claims for damages to land or property arise we must deal with them as they come up.

Halifax Street Railway Company vs. The Queen $906 59

Mr. BLAKE. What is this case of the Halifax Street Railway against the Queen?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This ralway was cros ed in carrying the extension of the road when my predecessor was in office. They put in an enormous claim, which was resisted, and finally it was taken to the Exchequer Court. These are the expenses.

Mr. DAVIES. Were no damages paid?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. They got a small amount-I think $200.

Mr. DAVIES. Did it go to the Supreme Court?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes. There is an account of Mr. D. O'Connor for $424.89, so it must have been in the Exchequer Court. I am under the impression that they have appealed it to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Then there is $471.70 to Mr. Wallace Graham. These are evidently the expenses of the Crown.

To pay Fabien Rochette for land taken $1,702 66

Mr. BLAKE. What is this claim ?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The claim was to pay Fabien Rochette for land taken, $1,702.66. In the land expropriated from Mr. Gabriel Lemieux, was a small plot occupied by Mr. Rochette under a lease known as "bail à rente constitute," which is equivalent to a sale, and for which he has to pay the sum of $34 forever. Mr. Lemieux continued to demand the payment of this rental, notwithstanding the fast that the property had passed into the hands of the Government, and finally took legal proceedings to enforce his rights, the consequence being that Mr. Rochette was condemned to pay the rental due and his goods and chattels were seized to satisfy the judgment of the court and the costs incurred. The full Board of Arbitrators awarded to Mr. Rochette the amount of $1,702.66, without interest, the costs of the arbitration to be paid by the Government. Mr. Rochette's claim was $3,095.35.

To pay Alexander MacDonell & Co., contractors for Section 5..... $47,005 98

Mr. BLAKE. Will the hon. gentleman explain this item, to pay Alexander Macdonell & Co., contractors for Section 5, the amount due them for work done.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This is an account which stands in an entirely different position from all the other claims submitted for the consideration of the Commissioners. They found, on investigation, and so reported to the Government, that this amount was due to Alexander Macdonell & Co., for work at the St. Fabien and Bic stations, $47,005.98, and so far as would appear, there was no possible question as to their right to receive this amount. These claimants were the contractors for the construction of Section 5, under a document in the form usually adopted for this railway. As the work under that contract approached completion, Mr. Hazlewood, the District Engineer, acting under instructions from the Commissioners and the Chief Engineer, made a verbal bargain with these contractors to undertake a new work, namely, the preparation and levelling of the ground and other things necessary for the stations at St. Fabien and Bic, the prices agreed on being according to a schedule of rates for the different kinds of work. The following are the particulars of this claim as submitted to us:-Then follows a description of the work done, with full details. The Commissioners say: "All the work was done under the new agreement and a separate account rendered for it, for the same amount and with the same details as that laid before us. The evidence taken by Mr. Shanly and by us shows that the quantities here stated were actually done by these claimants and the prices are according to the agreement with Mr. Hazlewood. In fact there is no reason to suppose that there has been at any time any contention on the part of the Government or their officials that the amount claimed as aforesaid was not fairly earned by Mr. Alexander Macdonell & Co., as the work done for St. Fablen and Bic stations; and we have seen no reason for withholding from them the amount so earned, unless it was the allegation alluded to in our report on Section 5, by Mr. Chandler, that they had been overpaid on their contract for that section. Although there was an enquiry into that subject before the Public Accounts Committee of the House of Commons, there was no conclusion reported on the question, and it seems never to have been definitely settled until now. Our investigation into the demands of these same claimants concerning their contract for Section 5, leads us to say, as mentioned in our report thereon, that they were not overpaid, but on the contrary, that there is a balance still due to them on that account. This being the case, we have to report that the sum of $17,005.98 was due to these claimants on the first of August, 18,3, for their work at the St. Fabien and Bic stationsthis is of course irrespective of interest." This is signed by Geo. M. Clarke, F. Broughton and D. E. Bolton. Upon that an Order in Council was passed recognizing the validity of the claim.

Mr. BLAKE. I am sorry the hon. gentleman did not adopt another course. I think it was the understanding on arbitration to Mr. Falconer in full settlement for his Sir CHABLES TUPPER, of the House that whatever reports should be made by this Commission they should be laid on the Tables so that we could see them before the votes were taken. We know that there has been one step after another taken-the original discussion before the Government, these discussions before the Chief Engineer, certificates and the refusal to grant them, suits in the Exchequer Courts, and other dispositions of that kind. With reference to claims of such an age as this, it seems to me that we ought to have been furnished in proper time with the important materials necessary to enable us to understand whether or not a proper and just decision was reached. I cannot yet understand, if this claim be so plain and straight as the report represents it to be, why there was any difficulty about paying it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The hon. gentleman will see that this matter stands on an entirely different footing. When this claim came to be investigated, it was admitted by Mr. Hazlewood, the engineer in charge, that the work was done, and that the prices were fair; and the only reason why the account was not paid was that a statement was made by Mr. Chandler, that on a previous contract these contractors had been overpaid. But the moment the Commissioners found that in this case they were entitled to prompt payment, it was impossible for us to refuse to recognize their claim.

Mr. BLAKE. Who are the other parties in the firm?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not know at this moment.

Mr. BLAKE. The report which the hon. gentleman read makes out so plain a case that I do not understand why it was not settled before.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Upon investigation, this was found to be a good claim, but it was left unpaid, under the impression that the firm had been overpaid on another contract, and that instead of money being owed to them, they owed the Government.

Mr. BLAKE. When was the Order in Council passed?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I think about July last,

Mr. BLAKE. Has the money been paid?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The money has been paid.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not think we ought to be asked to vote the money, as if it had not been paid. I understand that no part of this is for interest?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. No; none for interest.

Mr. BLAKE. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will bring down, before Concurrence, the Order in Council, the names of the firm, and an extract from the report which gives the reason why the payment was resisted.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will make a note, and have the papers prepared.

Mr. BLAKE. How do the other Intercolonial claims stand?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I expect to lay the whole before the House within a week.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not observe that there are in the main Estimates or in these, any vote for rolling stock on the Intercolonial Railway.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. If my memory serves me, no rolling stock is required for the Intercolonial Railway, except some additional coal cars, for which a vote will be taken in the Supplementary Estimates of next year.

To pay James Falconer, of Newcastle, N.B., for land damages..... $677 85

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The amount has been awarded

To pay William Ferguson, of Moneton, N.B., purchase money of land, and interest thereon $2,800 00

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This is to pay William Fergu-son for land expropriated for a siding to connect the railway with the Moncton Cotton Mill.

Prince Edward Island Railway.

233. Rolling tock $9,916 16

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The railway on Prince Edward Island was altogether deficient in rolling stock. The original vote was sufficiently large, with the exception of an over expenditure of $1,616, which forms part of this vote, and the balance, $8,300, lapsed, of the appropriation taken last year, so that, in point of fact, the appropriation is only $1,6Ŏ0.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The practice of charging that $65,000 for rolling stock to capital account is wholiy misleading. It is not contended there was any deficiency of equipment on the Prince Edward Island Railway at that time calling for a vote of $10,000.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That is where the difficulty The equipment of the railway was utterly inadearose. quate for the service; I would like to ask my hon. friend where he would get the means of equipping it when there is a deficiency in the earnings of the road.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I would include it in the annual expenditure chargeable, to the Consolidated Fund, for that railway. That would make the deficit greater, but would not make us any poorer; whether we charge it to capital account or to Consolidated Fund will not make us any better or worse off. As an illustration of the extraordinary fashion in which capital account is made up by the hon. gentleman, I would point to the fact that compensation for injuries received by persons through an accident are to be charged to capital account.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That is a mistake. I stated last year, when this question came up, that it was decided to charge compensation for injuries to the working expenses of the railway, and that is chargeable to collection of revenue. It appears here by mistake. I have a memorandum of that, and I will have it corrected.

Mr. BLAKE. There will have to be an alteration made so as to indicate that it is not to go to capital account.

Mr. BAKER (Missisquoi). To destruction account.

Compensation for injuries received by various persons through an accident which oc-curred in August, 1880 $23,250 00

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. My hon, friend has asked for details. This $23,250 is in compensation for injuries received by various persons through an accident that occurred in 1880. Very large claims were made which were resisted by the Government, and the subject was referred to a Judge of the Exchequer Court, who gave a very large amount to one of the claimants and substantial amounts to the others. The Government appealed against that judgment and the Supreme Court set it aside; but, at the same time, expressed the opinion that the Government should give full consideration to the claims of those who were injured. That became the subject of consideration and the Government decided to pay to Mr. McLeod $10,000, to pay Mrs. Mary A. Murphy, who was very seriously injured, $2,500. That was the amount of the judge's award in the Exchequor Court; in fact, all the the amounts were awarded, with the exception of that due Mrs. McInnis whose case did not come before the court were allowed too much damages. The only case in which because the husband who brought the action died in the there was a contention was McLeod's case, which was cut meantime. The same as that awarded to Mrs. Murphy was given as compensation in that case.

Mr. DAVIES. This sum was voted last year.

Mr. BLAKE. It was not voted last year? $400 were only voted.

Mr. DAVIES. $400 had been paid previously, but when the Supplementary Estimates came down, the remaining sum was voted.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I think not. At all events, the amount is included in the $23,250, and it is not intended to give Mrs. McInnis any more than was awarded by Order in Council. I think you will find that case stood in precisely the same position as all the others to be dealt with by the Government, and charged to collection of revenue for the road. To Mr. T. Stewart, $1,000; to Mr. Charles Holliwell, $750; Mrs. Catherine Macdonald, $1,500, making, altogether, $18,250. Subsequently Mr. McLeod made an appeal to the Government with reference to the very large amount of expenses he had incurred in endeavouring to prosecute his claims against the Government, and the Government decided to allow him $5,000 to cover any actual disbursements made in prosecuting his claims, and in medical attendance. Mr. McLood had furnished the Government with a satisfactory statement showing a still larger amount expended than the $5,000, and that $5,000 was asked for in the Supplementary Estimates for the purpose of meeting the additional claim, and giving Mr. McLeod, for expenses and injuries sustained, $15,000.

Mr. DAVIES. While I think the hon. gentleman was right in allowing Mr. McLeod his expenses, it would have been fairer to have allowed him the whole amount actually expended. The amount awarded him was cut down from $35,000 to $10,000, and when he furnished the Minister with a statement of the actual expenditure, the Minister should have taken the whole subject into consideration.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The actual expense was not $7,000; that includes an item of $1,000, for a prospective trip to England.

Mr. DAVIES. I was going to say he had been advised by his medical advisers here to take the opinion of Dr. Errickson, in London, and he went there for that purpose. That was part of his expenses, and I think it would be a legitimate sum to pay him, considering the Government had cut down his claim from $35,000 to $10,000. With respect to the other claims, the hon. gentleman only allows them the exact amount awarded, although the Government compelled each individual case to fyle a petition of We endeavoured to induce the hon. member to right. settle on one claim and let the others be stated on that settlement, but the officers of the Crown would not yield to that. The people were all very poor, and the fact of the matter was the appeal had to be borne in the first instance by the legal advisers. A very large amount of costs were incurred which were deducted from the claims when paid. Take Stewart: he was awarded $1,000. and has never been able to do anything since then, and over $400 was deducted from the amount he received He only got $600, I think, or $620, and he would not have got that much, but the lawyers who represented him in Ottawa made a very handsome deduction from their bill, on the ground that he was a very old, infirm man, and a member of the profession to which they belonged. In the case of Catherine Macdonald, she got a less amount, and so with Mrs. Murphy. I think, as these were test cases, and the Crown insisted on appealing each individual case, it would only be fair on the part of the Government to allow them those costs. The hon. gentleman never contended that they were allowed too much damages. The only case in which down, but the damages in these cases were never alleged to be excessive, and I think it would be but justice to these people, having adopted the principle in the case of McLeod by allowing him $5,000 for his costs, that they should adopt the principle in the case of the others.

Mr. BRECKEN. The case of Mr. Stewart was brought to my notice in the Island. He sustained very serious injury indeed. He is an elderly man, a barrister; he is a very philanthropic man, was some years Indian Commissioner in the Island, and has certainly laid by nothing out of his profession. He sustained very serious injuries indeed, so much so that when he was in the hospital, his life was despaired of, and now one affliction he has got is a stiff neck. He can scarcely walk along the street. He was awarded $1,000. That was considered very low indeed, but that was awarded by the Court of Exchequer, very much out of proportion to the damages which were awarded in other cases, and the costs he had to pay were over $400. He did not net $600.

Mr. DAVIES. He got $600. Allowances were made by the attorneys.

Mr. BRECKEN. Perhaps, next to Mr. McLeod, his in juries were more severe than any of the other people who suffered by that accident, and he is a very old man now, over eighty, and I do not know what his means of support are, scarcely. Although he is a very philanthropic, kind old gentleman, he is almost without means, and he felt it very hard indeed. If he had got the $1,000 he would not have been adequately compensated for the irjuries he sustained, and I know as a fact he has not quite netted $600.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I presume that is the principal item. You say these other parties were very poor, and I suppose there was not much loss in their cases.

Mr. DAVIES. The costs were about the same in all the cases. The petitions of right had to be filed in each case, and the costs, of course, were small compared with McLeod's, because the witnesses were called in his case and paid by him, and the evidence was accepted in the other cases without being gone over the second time, so the costs were com paratively small. When the cases came from the Exchequer Court the Crown appealed in each case, and certain costs could not be avoided. There were agents at Ottawa and the counsel on the trial on the Island.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am surprised to learn how much less generous the legal profession are to their professional brethren than the medical. Such a thing as a medical man making a charge to one of the same profession is unknown. No matter what length of time or is – the services might be, it would be unheard of in the profes-sion to which I belong. But my sympathies are greatly excited, finding that this respectable member of the profession has suffered so at the hands of his professional brethren. If the particulars are furnished to me, I certainly will submit to my colleagues whether that question should not be considered, and some means found of giving a little more redress than he seems to have obtained.

Mr. BLAKE. I hope the hon. gentleman will not confine it to the lawyer. Of course, an anchorite like the hon. gentleman has not the sympathy I would have with the women. but my hon. friend has referred to Mrs. Murphy and others who were sufferers.

Mr. DAVIES. The hon. gentleman has referred to the lawyers. I may say that Mr. Stewart's associates in the Island did not charge him anything at all.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am glad to hear that.

Mr. DAVIES. But Mr. Stewart had nothing to do with the gentlemen in Ottawa. Of course, they did not know | count of the Canadian Pacific Railway? Mr. DAVIES.

anything about him, and they charged the ordinary fees, and made a very handsome deduction when I represented to them that he was a solicitor.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. If my hon. friend will give me a statement of the actual amounts that these parties have been compelled to pay in order to discharge the costs that they incurred, it is worthy of consideration whether the same principle ought not to be applied to them to some extent that has been applied to Mr. McLeod.

Mr. BLAKE. May I invite the hon. gentleman's attention to the rearrangement of this item.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That is already done. It will go to collection of revenue.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What is the position of this crection at Emerson? What does it cost?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The position is this. There was an appropriation of $20,500, and this is a revote. At the two last Sessions, $50,000 was voted for the expenditure for the year 1882-83, but at that date the amount voted ceased to be available. The expenditure had been only $15,000, and the remainder consequently lapsed. An amount of $10,000 being afterwards required on account of this subsidy, an Order in Council was passed to issue a special warrant for the amount. On the 15th November, the Chief Engineer reports that if an assurance is given that an ice pier will be constructed to protect the work from the ice shove, the work is sufficiently completed to justify the payment of another sum of $10,000. The Order in Council is dated November 24th, 1883.

Salaries and expenses Inspecting Engineers, &c ... $9,000 00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Will the hon. gentleman explain this vote for inspecting engineers, &c.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. These are the inspecting engineers in connection with the work that is now going on on the Canadian Pacific Railway, under the contract-the engineers that are inspecting the work and making the returns to the Government as the work proceeds.

Mr. BLAKE. But it also is a sort of omnium gatherum. It embraces "land and other unsettled accounts." I do not see anything about repairs and improvments, but almost everything else.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. There is $2,000 for that. Salaries and expenses of inspecting engineers, land and other unsettled accounts are expected to cover $9,000. Of that, the salaries and expenses of four engineers take $6,000; land and other unsettled accounts, $2,000; and printing Minister's speech, $1,000; in all $9,000.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What is the cost of the Minister's speech?

Mr. BLAKE. Is that to be charged to the capital ac-

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I should say so-yes. I should say it is a capital charge.

Mr. BLAKE. It is a capital account to charge it to. It is almost a capital crime; but really I do not think it ought to be covered up here. The hon.gentleman is not ashamed of having his speech printed at the public expense, is he?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Not at all.

Mr. BLAKE. Why does he not come out like a man, and say what it is for?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Especially when it is done by the authority of the Committee on Public Accounts.

Mr. BLAKE. No, no.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes.

Mr. BLAKE. It is "land and other unsettled accounts." It is extra. Salaries and expenses of inspecting engineers, $6,000; land and other unsettlod accounts, $2,000; and the hon. gentleman's speech—why, it is a vacuum; there is no heading under which you can put it in this $9,000. I dare say that is quite appropriate; there was not anything in it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER It is an unsettled account.

Mr. BLAKE. No; that is $2,000. It is the $1,000 there is nothing for. Let us put in "and printing of Minister's speech." Does this include the French edition of the speech?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes; it covers all, I hope.

Mr. SOMERVILLE (Brant). Was this work done by Government contractors or by outside parties.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The English edition certainly was done by the Government contractors.

Mr. BLAKE. Is there any item in the Accounts for my speech on this subject ?

Thomas Temple, for use of Patent Flanger $300 00

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I have no doubt there will be at a future date. Then we ask for $300 to pay Thomas Temple for the use of the Temple & Miller Patent Fianger on the Canadian Pacific Railway, during the winter of 1880-81.

Mr. BLAKE. Who is this Tommy Temple, who is to get $300?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Mr. Temple is a gentleman whose acquaintance you had the pleasure of making this winter, the member for York, N B.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. How came the services of this gentleman to be ignored by the Government until now? This is the ee years old, apparently.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This is a claim for the use of a patent flanger on the Canadian Pacific Railway during the winter of 1880.81. It was purchased by the Canadian Pacific Railway when we operated the road ourselves. The Chief Engineer states that this flanger was fitted on to two or three engines during the winter of 1880, and tried for a couple of months, and he recommends that Mr. Temple be paid $300 for the use of it. It is an old claim, which was pat in long ago, and this is the first time it has been brought forward. It was submitted to the Government before the hon. gentleman became a candidate for election.

Mr. BLAKE. What is the date of the Engineer's recommendation?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will furnish that later on. The claim for payment has been in controversy for some time. It has been a long time before us.

Mr. BLAKE. It was tried on two or three engine, experimentally, I suppose, and found not to succeed. I hops the hon gentleman will give a little more information about that.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will give the date of the account being sent in, and what the claim was.

Mr. MILLS. Was this the whole amount of the election expenses?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I thought the hon. gentleman knew more of the character of such expenses than to ask such a question.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I would like to know whether this valuable flanger is used on the Intercolonial Railway, which is under the hon. gentleman's special care.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will give a full statement.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Don't forget that particular. We want to know also what the Canadian Pacific Railway are doing with it now.

Claim of Smith & Ripley, Georgian Bay Branch $83,000 00

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The next item is $83,000, to settle the claims of Messrs. Smith & Ripley for work on the Georgian Bay Brauch. This is a claim somewhat of the category of the others to which we referred a short time ago. I had, perhaps, better read the Order in Council which contains all the facts: On a report, dated 3rd March, 1884, from the Minister of Railways and Canals, submitting that under date the 2nd of August, 1878, a contract was ontered into with Messrs. Heney, Charlebois & Flood, for the construction of a portion of the Canadian Pacific Railway, namely, the Georgian Bay Branch, extending from a point near Nepissigon to the head of navigation on French River, the whole to be completed by the 1st of July, 1880. The Minister represents that under the authority of two Orders in Council, one dated the 25th July, and the other the 14th August, 1879, and for reasons therein given, the works comprised in this contract were stopped and taken out of the hands of Messrs. Heney, Charlebois & Flood, the contract itself being annulled; and that on the 5th August, Messers. Smith & Ripley, who had previously identified themselves with the works, informed the Department, by letter, that they had purchased all the interests of the original contractors therein, and that they desired to be recognized as the successors of the original contractors, and with this letter they forwarded deeds of agreement, the last dated the 30th June, 1879, under which the contract had been transferred. The Minister observes that whatever arrangements had been arrived at between these parties and the original contractors, were effected without the consent of the Crown, and were entirely opposed to an express condition of the contract, whereby Messrs. Hency, Charlebois & Flood were prohibited from making assignment without such consent, and that Messrs. Smith & Ripley were accordingly on the 11th August, 1879, notified to the effect that the contract had been cancelled prior to the receipt of their letter, and further, that the assignment of the contract without consent was prohibited. That after the aforesaid cancellation of the contract, namely on the 24th of October, 1879, Messrs. Smith & Ripley procured from Messrs. Heney, Charlebois & Flood "for a valuable consideration" an assignment of all their rights and claims and moneys due, with claims for damages and loss of profits, &c., being constituted their law-ful attorneys for the suid purposes. The Minister further observes that upon the submission by Messrs. Smith & Ripley of certain claims in this connection, a petition of right was granted them and these claims were heard before the Court of Exchequer, the result being a decision in their favour as against the Government, the amount awarded them being $171,040.77 with costs. Of this sum, $100,000 was for prospective profits, and $71,040.77 for expenditure directly in connection with the contract. That this decision was thereupon appealed from on behalf of the Crown, and the case was ultimately re-heard before the Supreme Court of Canada, Messrs. Heney, Charlebois & Flood being joined as co-suppliants, but not as beneficially interested. The Minister also observes that the judgments severally given by the judges of this court are, with one exception (the judge before whom the case was heard in the Exchequer Court, who maintains his previous holding) decisive in asserting the rights of the Crown to cancel the contract under the provisions therein contained. The majority of the judges, however, express opinions to the effect that in view of the integrity and good faith shown in the conduct of the works, the suppliants are entitled to receive the most favourable consideration, one of the judges stating his views in the following words : "I have come " to this conclusion (adverse to the claimants) with great "reluctance, for I see that an injustice is done to the re-" spondents by such a judgment. I am sure, however, that "the Government will not avail itself of this judgment " and of the strictness of the law, to refuse to the respon-"dents the justice they are entitled to at their hands." The Minister further represents that on the 6th of October last, Messrs. Smith & Ripley memorialized the Government, asking that consideration might be shown them, and under date of the 18th ult., they submitted a statement of moneys expended by their firm in connection with and in and about the Georgian Bay contract, during the years 1878 and 1879, the total amount being $127,296.40. Against this they set the amount paid by the Government for work done and received by themselves for plant sold, namely, $21,053.27, leaving a balance of $106,243.13, upon which sum they asked that interest should be paid from the date of the cancellation of the contract. They also asked that a further sum of $10,000 should be paid them to cover legal and personal expenses since 1879, bringing the total amount up to $116,243.13, with interest as aforesaid. The Minister states that this statement has been explained by the Chief Engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and under date the 22nd ult, he has made a report thereon, advising a settlement with the firm, upon the following basis, which includes the sum of $29,000, excluded from the judgment of the Exchequer Court. Expenditure; --- plant. $18,134.05; general expenses, hay, grain and materials used on the works, $44,807.24; expenses—office, travelling and private expenses, $7,057.83. Settlement with Sub-Contractors: — John Shields, $2,427.58; John McDonald, $4,159.76—$6,587.34. Hamilton Powder Company, account of $13,157.40, which was settled at 50 per cent. by returning the powder, $6,578.75; A. Charlebois, account for derricks and tools, $2,412.17; total, $85,577.38. Buying out original contractors:—A. Charlebois, $15,000; J. Fiood & Co., $10,000; John Heney, $4,000; total, $29,000. Grand total, $114,577.38, less the following credits.—Paid in estimates, $11,000; proceeds of sale of plant, $10,053.27; total, $21,053.27; leaving, $93,524.11. The above items should, the Chief Engineer considers, be paid; certain other items for legal expenses, salaries, &c, amounting to $22,719, he regards as inadmissible, and he expresses the opinion that the question of payment of interest from the date of the cancellation of the contract is also worthy of consideration. The Minister, considering that the view of the case taken as above stated, by the majority of the judges of the Supreme Court, and coincided in by the Chief Engineer to the extent set forth in his report, is such as the Government would desire to adopt in furtherance of the principles of equity and fairness, rather than those of strict law, recommends that the the Government rights in the premises having been conclusively established, the petitions be dealt with upon the basis of equitable settlement proposed by the Chief Engineer, and that the sum of $93,524.11, together with a further sum of $27,683 14, representing interest thereon from the 25th of deposit? works, up to the 30th of June next, or a total sum of $121,207.25, be placed in the Supplementary Estimates for the year 1883-84, to be laid before Parliament during its present Session, for the purpose indicated. The Committee concur in the foregoing report and the recommendation therein made; they submit the same for Your Excellency's approval, deducting however the $29,000, the amount paid for the contract to the original contractors and the interests on the same. The Government felt that in view of the opinion rendered by the court, although in strict law the parties were excluded from pressing their claim, yet as the expenditure had been made in good faith and under the belief they would be paid, the Government decided to ask Parliament to vote this amount.

Claim of Sifton & Ward, Red River and Cross Lake Branch...... $17,460 00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What is this item, $17,400 for Sifton & Ward?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This is a claim by Sifton & Ward, who were contractors on Section 14. Their claim was for $275,000. It was resisted by the Government, who allowed the contractors to go to the Exchequer Court. The court found in favour of the suppliants on the first four items, amounting to the sum asked for.

OANALS-CHARGEABLE TO OAPITAL. St. Peter's.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The matter stands in this way: The St. Peter's Canal was constructed under the superintendence of Mr. Perley, who is Chief Engineer of the Department of Public Works, and whatever expenditures have been required to be made in relation to the canal have always been done under his supervision. As that officer was not in my Department, and was called upon to perform extra services, we consider he is entitled to this amount for four years' services in that connection. There are now some extensive repairs in progress, which are being made under his direction. I suppose, however, this amount will cover the present year.

Mr. BLAKE. I suppose as that officer was connected with the work of enlarging the canal, his services might be valuable in finishing the work; but the regular engineer should be able to attend to repairs.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What is Mr. Perley's present salary?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. $3,500.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Does he receive any other allowances except this one?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. No; only this one.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. How did the Government come out of this contract; was there a loss sustained?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am afraid there was.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. But was the work done by these parties equal to the amount paid at various times, apart from this?

Mr. BLAKE. The accounts say that $1,926 was due to the contractor, and the residue must have been lost.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Was there any cash deposit?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I suppose so.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That does not follow; but if the hon. gentleman wants further particulars, I will get them on Concurrence.

Mr. BLAKE. On what principle is the payment made? At at an early period of the Session enquiry was made with reference to numerous claims of a somewhat similar character, as to another enterprise which the hon. gentleman has taken under his fatherly protection, in another part of the Dominion, and he said that no arrangements had been made. What are the special circumstances which induced the Government to recognize a claim for an amount in excess of what was due to the contractor?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will give fuller particulars on Concurrence.

Mr. FERGUSON (Welland). I may say that the contractors got the amount and ran away with it to the other They kept the money and the labourers were left side. unpaid, and this sum is to pay the balance due to the labourers. The contractors paid no wages whatever.

Mr. BLAKE. I have no doubt that the labourers have not been paid, else we would not be called upon to pay them. The point I desire to enquire into, is the principle of action in this matter, because it is obvious if we begin with a small amount like this we may have to pay $150,000, which is, I believe, the amount in question in the other case to which I alluded. I wish it to be understood that further particulars shall be furnished, and that we shall have freedom of discussion on Concurrence.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Certainly.

Mr. FERGUSON (Welland). I may say that I think there is a precedent for this in the Administration of the hon. member for East York (Mr. Mackenzie), in connection with one of the canals near Montreal, where the contractor was in default and the labourers were paid by the Government.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I think that in that particular case the Minister of Public Works considered that the Government got full value, and of course if the Government received value, the question would not arise in the shape in which it arises now. I would like, however, to know, in addition to other particulars, what amount was taken on deposit and how it was applied, because prima facie there should have been enough to meet this claim.

Mr. FERGUSON (Welland). As a matter of fact, the Government have received full value, because the contract was taken at 60 cents per yard, which is not more than half value for the work. For that reason I think the principle of letting contracts to contractors, if they only furnish 5 per cent. security, is entirely wrong. In this case the work was really worth $1 or perhaps $1.20 a yard. The country has received full value for the amount, when it is considered that the work was done at so low a rate.

Carillon.

237. To pay John Page, Chief Engineer of Canals, for services as sole arbitrator in the case of R. P. Cooke & Co., $535; and in the case of F. B. McNamee & Go., $635 $1,170 00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. This appears not only an unusual but an objectionable item. This practice of paying officers of the Department who act as arbitrators, in aduition to their regular salaries, does not seem to me a desirable thing to encourage. I should think it would be of the arbitration besides. On the whole, I do not see that far better, even if Mr. Page be, as I believe he is, a very the system is one that ought to be pursued.

competent officer, to employ somebody else than to pay him for work which belongs particularly to his own Department.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. There is no doubt a great deal in what the hon. gentleman says, and this case has been treated rather exceptionally. The belief on the part of the Government, of course, was that Mr. Page was able to settle these claims upon more advantageous terms than would likely be obtained if we had sent them to the general arbitrators. I am inclined to think that although the sum appears to be somewhat large in the aggregate, the expense would have been much greater if the usual course had been resorted to. I agree that as a general principle it is not desirable to have officers of the Department paid for acting as arbitrators in addition to their salaries. This matter, however, was brought before Parliament last Session, and I believe with the general approval of the House. It has been continued, but instead of allowing the sum to accumulate, I requested Mr. Page to make an account for each arbitration.

Mr. BLAKE. It was understood that there were special circumstances with reference to the cases last Session. I certainly felt a great deal of reluctance to acquiesce in that vote, and I suppose that those special and exceptional circumstances, whatever they are, which we have heard so often pleaded, had ended the matter. Mr. Page's salary is $4,500 I believe, and we find here a sum of $1,700 added to his emoluments for the performance of this duty. I say you are entitled to have a fair extent of the services of the public officers in high positions for their salaries. If you impose upon them extra dutics of this kind without emolument, they are very likely to shirk them. On the other hand, if you arrange to give them these extra duties. you are taking away a large portion of that time and energy which are wanted for the work of the Department itself. This duty must have consumed a large portion of Mr. Page's time. If his salary be $4,500, this amount is equivalent to about one-third of his ordinary emolument for the year, for which we are supposed to get all his time; and so large a gap in his time cannot possibly have taken place without detriment to the affairs of the Department. More than that, I do not think it is necessary to at there should be three arbitrators. I think that is a very expen-sive tribunal. Ordinarily, I do not think the Gov-ernment would have any difficulty in arranging for a single independent arbitrator; and then you would save the expense of such a tribunal as this, and Mr. Page would then occupy his proper relation to the Government, which is not that of a judge between them and the contractors, but of the person who brings forward the Government's side of the case, and sees that everything favourable to them is presented. I think the whole system is one which ought not to receive that sanction which the hon. gentleman now challenges for it. Last year, when a number of these awards were before us, I think it was understood that this system should not continue. May I ask whether, in each case, a claim was presented, and the claim was very much larger than the amount awarded?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes.

Mr. BLAKE. If so, on what principle do the Government pay the expenses of the arbitration? It is Mr. Page's duty, as Chief Engineer, to investigate any claim, to point out to the Government what portions of that claim are fit to be acknowledged and what portions ought to be disputed; and if he is afterwards to arbitrate upon it, and to decide as he thought beforehand, the result is, that what the Government would have given without the expense of an arbitration they afterwards give, or thereabouts, and pay the whole expenses

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. There is no doubt a great deal of force in what the hon. gentleman has said, and as I said before, we have been inclined to treat Mr. Page's case as an exceptional one. He possesses, in a very eminent degree, as Chief Engineer, the confidence of all parties in this House, and of every person who has come in contact with him.

Mr. BLAKE. Certainly.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. We were therefore disposed to look with a great degree of favour upon any application of this kind. Having been called upon to perform this service, which was outside of his professional duties —for he was not obliged to act as an arbitrator—and having been weighted with very heavy and responsible duties as Chief Engineer, to which he devoted himself with unceasing assiduity, these extra duties involved the nccessity of his devoting extra hours outside of office hours altogether, at home in the eveninge, to the investigation of these cases. I think we have saved a large amount of money in these investigations, and I think we have probably got through them at a smaller expense than would have been incurred had they been referred to persons who had not an intimate knowledge of the work. But even that would perhaps be preferable to the adoption of a system which is certainly open to a great deal of objection, as a matter of principle.

Williamsburg-Rapide Plat Division.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This is a very old story. On the 12th of March, 1849, a lease was granted to Mr. James Holden of part of a wharf at the lower entrance of the Rapide Plat Canal, with the right to build a storehouse immediately in rear of the said wharf. The lease provided that on the Government requiring to retake possession of the wharf, it might do so on giving three months' notice, and that it might acquire possession of the storehouse in question on payment of the cost of materials, with 10 per cent. added, according to valuation. The property appears to have been re-transferred to the Government in the year-1852, and in 1853, £30 was offered to Mr. Holden as compensation for the storehouse. That sum, however, he declined to accept, not having been able to obtain a settlement of other claims he had against the Government, and that building has remained in possession of the Government ever since, but no payment has been made on account thereof. Mr. James Holden is now dead, and his son has recently put in a claim for $1,350-being $150, the alleged value of the said building, and $1,200, thirty years' rent at $40 a year. The Chief Engineer of Canals recommends to pay to the lawful representative of the late Mr. James Holden the sum of $660, being $120 for the storehouse and $540, the amount of thirty years' rent at $18 per annum, in full settlement of all claims against the Government in connection with said storehouse.

Mr. BLAKE. I think that statement indicates the utter preposterousness of this demand, with the exception of $120. Upon the face of the statement, the Government offered thirty years ago to this man the amount they now say his successors ought to receive; but he refused it, because he said he had some other claims upon the Government. But now, after he is dead, it is agreed to pay his widow what he refused, with interest of $18 a year for all that time. It is absurd, and worse than absurd, that we should be called upon to pay this claim. Besides that, it is a claim against the old Province and not against the Dominion, and he must charge it, if paid, against the old Province of Canada. If the Government offered £30 and the man refused to take it, that should be an end to it.

Mr. BLAKE.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The age of a just claim does not bar its claim to payment and it appears the Government offered £30 for the property; it was not paid and we have had the property ever since. Under these circumstances, the Chief Engineer recommended we should settle this claim in full. I have no objection to charging it to the old Province, but do not see how I can collect it.

Mr. BLAKE. If it is a debt now, it is a debt of the old Province, and there is no obligation to pay interest.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Had he accepted the money he would not have lost interest.

Mr. BLAKE. But he did not take it, and I have no faith in claims of thirty years standing.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. We know the facts exist and we have the report of the offer, which was not accepted.

Mr. BLAKE. As I understand it, Mr. Holden merely had the right to claim rent for the materials which were in his storehouse; if he was offered the money and did not take it, and if the executors to day changed their mind it is quite sufficient to pay them the £30, that is all they should have.

The said cargo is insured in the Ancher Insurance Company, who subsequently brought a claim against the Government, which was referred to the official arbitrators for investigation and award. The arbitrators decided, March 3rd, 1883, that the accident was caused by the negligence of the canal employees, the floating fenders being placed in such a position that they afforded no protection:

the old Province and not against the Dominion, and he must charge it, if paid, against the old Province of Canada. If the Government offered £30 and the man refused to take it, that should be an end to it. Sir CHARLES TUPPER. These claims are contested; they become the subject of discussion, are continued from year to year, and no doubt the hon. gentleman had this claim pressed on him while he was in the Government.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Not before me.

Mr. BLAKE. When was it referred to arbitrators ?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The report is dated 3rd March' 1883. On the 25th October, 1875, the schooner Jennie Gra ham struck upon some obstruction and sank her cargo which consisted of 21,000 bushels of barley, being conse quently damaged. The Anchor Insurance Company, with whom the cargo was insured, subsequently brought a claim against the Government for compensation, and the case was referred to the official arbitrators for investigation and award. On the 3rd March, 1883, the arbitrators made their award, determining that the obstruction had been negligently left in the lock, and adjudged that the Anchor Insur-ance Company should be paid the sum of $12,514.76. On the 13th March, the Company claimed interest stating, that the sum awarded was the exact amount paid by them on 4th December, 1875, in settlement of the loss. On the 10th April, the arbitrators reported that their award was intended to carry interest at 6 per cent, from the 4th December, 1875, to 4th September, 1883, $5,819.36. The award, having been adverse to the Crown, the costs are to be paid by the Government. Bill of costs presented by Company, $1,200.62, making a total of $19,624.74.

Mr. BLAKE. When was this claim presented first?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The Order in Council was passed on the 18th August, 1883.

Mr. BLAKE. Again it strikes me I have never heard before of a Government recognizing the right of an insurance company to have compensation in respect to injuries. It is entirely novel to me.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The hor. gentleman would know better than I, but I would suppose, that if an insurance company insured a cargo or a vessel against damage, and the damage was caused by any negligence on the part of the Government, they would stand in precisely the same position as the owner would. Why should they not? If the insurance company has to pay $12,000 on account of some lache on the part of the Government, why should they not pay it the same as any other individual?

Mr. BLAKE. Because it is their business to take these risks. They receive the premium and take the risk. But what I have been asking is, whether there has been, up to this time, any claim on the part of any insurance company which has been recognized by the Government, and whether the legal department of the Government advise that claims of this description should be referred to arbitration without a special consideration of the question of the relation of an insurance company to the Government.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will get that information.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Is it the same company that has recovered in both instances?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes; the Anchor Insurance Company.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Where are its headquarters? Is it an English Company?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I really do not know who the Company are at all.

24. To pay L. W. Marchand, advocate, for professional services rendered in 1837-58-59, in connection with the settlement of the claims arising out of the construction of dams at head of Beauharnois Canal.......... $1,207 00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Surely the statutory prescriptions ought to apply some time or other.

Mr. BLAKE. Ought not the hon. gentleman to wait thirty years more before paying this?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This is, I believe, an award. Mr. BLAKE. Oh, no. We do not refer lawyers' bills to the arbitrators.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. No; it is not an award. Do you want explanations?

Mr. BLAKE. Indeed I do.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Upon the construction of the Beauharnois Canal, in 1849, it became necessary to raise the waters at the head of the canal, and for this purpose dams were built, the consequence being that a large quantity of land adjacent thereto was submerged. The Minister represents that, upon a soltlement of various claims for compensation arising out of the damages sustained, a special Commission was constituted, the whole matter being subsequently placed in the hands of the Board of Provincial Arbitrators, before whom the interests of the Government were watched by advocates appointed for the purpose, and amongst the advocates was Mr. L.W. Marchand, whose connection with the Board continued during the years 1857, 1808 and 1859. The Minister further represents that, though divers sums of money were from time to time paid to Mr. Marchand on account, this bill of charges never received a final settlemont. On the 2nd of July, 1868, a letter was sont to the Department of Justice, in which it was stated that the accounts had been referred when received to the Attorney. General for Lower Canada, but mislaid by him. Copies were, however, enclosed, showing the total amount of charges and disbursements for the three years to have been $6,207, and the payments made $5,000, leaving a balance of The Minister states further, that his Dopart-$1,207. ment had no means of certifying to the number of days during which Mr. Marchand was engaged; yet the list of cases prepared by him agreed with the returns of the arbitrators, and the clork to the official arbitrators at the time of Mr. Marchand's employment has, by a document dated the 4th April, 1830, cortified that the charge of $10 a day made by Mr. Marchand is the same as had been allowed to the advocates preceding him, and that tht number of sittings, to the best of his belief, are correctly given, and the travelling charges moderate. The Minister reports that no action has been taken upon this claim. The Minister recommends that authority bo given for the payment of the said sum to Mr. Marchand, being the balance of his account, and that the said balance shall be placed in the Supplementary Estimates for 1883-84.

Mr. BLAKE. What is the date of that report, pray?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That is an Order in Council of June 7th, 1883.

Mr. BLAKE. Is it the case then that no application was made for the payment of this money between 1868 and 1880?

SIT CHARLES TUPPER. I think I have stated all the facts.

Mr. BLAKE. He says some action was taken in 1868, some reference or a note of some reference, and the next thing appears to be in 1880, fourteon years afterwards.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. A letter was sent to the Department on the 2nd July, 1868.

Mr. BLAKE. This also, it seems to me, if it is a debt, is a debt of the old Province of Canada.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. And it was referred to the Attorney-General of Lower Canada, who, it appears, mislaid the papers, and copies of them were produced.

Mr. BLAKE. There appears to be in the Supplementary Estimates of every Session of late years a certain number of these old claim⁴. Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I hope we will get rid of them all soon.

Mr. BLAKE. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will say if he has any more before him that will come in the Further Supplementary Estimates.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I hope not. They are very tiring.

Mr. BLAKE. I think so. Does he propose to charge this to the Dominion or to the old Province of Canada?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am afraid it is too small to have an arbitration of the old Province on it.

Mr. BLAKE. I think perhaps he would be more careful about paying these claims if they were charged to the right account, because I fancy the Province would be indisposed to recognize such claims as this. I think, if paid at all, it is clear they should not be paid by the Dominion. It is only by virtue of the proposition that they are debts of the old Province that the claims can be made at all. I do not approve of the vote. I think these claims ought to be supported by much stronger evidence, and in any event they should not be charged to the Dominion.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. In any case, I think the representatives of the old Province ought to be consulted about these matters. If it is a debt at all, of which I have the gravest possible doubt, I confess, after the explanation, it is, as my hon. friend has said, a debt due by the Provinces of Ontario and Quebcc, and it is the Provinces of Ontario and Quebce which ought to decide whether it is a just claim, not the hon. gentleman. He has no right to saddle the Provinces of Ontario and Quebce with this claim that I can see.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am afraid, under the Union Act, we are responsible for the engagements of the old Province in regard to everything that comes under the purview of this Parliament.

Mr. BLAKE. No doubt; the Act of Union makes the Dominion responsible for the debts of the old Province, but on condition that they are charged to the old Province.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. If a claim is made, if it is felt that it is a legitimate claim against the old Province, we are responsible and obliged to pay it, although we have a right to look to the old Province for it.

Mr. BLAKE. We pay it only by virtue of a special statutory obligation, part of which is that you shall not charge it against the rest of the Dominion. It is because it is a debt of old Canada that it comes to us at all, and in view of the division of old Canada into Ontario and Quebec, for book-keeping convenience Canada was called upon to bear the payment in the first instance. But she does not bear the debts of the other provinces.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes.

Mr. BLAKE. The consolidated debts, but not such debts as this.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes; in regard to works which came over and became our property.

Mr. BLAKE. On another principle; that would be the obligations incurred in respect of the work. This is not the case of a doctor charging nothing for his services, but of a lawyer, who for fourteen years, forgot to ask for his bill. I never heard of such a case before.

Rideau.

243. To pay land damages between Lower Brewers and Kingston Mills $326 00 M. BLAKE. Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Claims have been preferred for compensation by several individuals on account of damages to their properties by high waters. The superintendent and engineers have reported on these claims and have submitted a valuation. The Chief Engineer has expressed the opinion that the amounts are reasonable and should be paid in full of all demands, past and present, provided the respective claimants can show satisfactory title to the land.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. It is rather odd. I know something of the land in that vicinity, and I should say it has been forty or fifty years since the dams and other works in that neighbourhood were constructed, by which any land could be flooded. It is difficult to see how new damage could be done now.

Mr. BLAKE. It is not the damage that is new; it is the claim that is new.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. These are quite recent.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. We are asking $5,000 to pay H. J. Beemer in full and final settlement for all claims in connection with his contracts for Kent and St. Louis Gates, which claims amounted to $21,300. After a careful examination of the matter, it was decided, on the recommendation of the chief architect, to allow him the sum of $5,000. Mr. Beemer was pressing his claim, and wanted it to be referred to the arbitrators, but I told him I would not consent, that I thought his case should be decided by the chief architect, like other claims of that kind. I desired to avoid the cost of arbitration. Mr. Fuller, the chief architect, looked into the matter, and reported that the claim of $21,300 should be met by an award of $5,000 in full of all demands.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I think the hon. gentleman's attention was directed to the fact that Her Majesty specially contributed £500; and it was suggested that, as was proper, that sum should be specially expended in some way to commemorate the Duke of Kent.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The amount was paid over to the Roceiver-General, and placed at the disposal of my Department, and when we built the gate opposite St. Anne's street, it was named the Kent Gate, in honour of the Queen's father. The amount of money that was contributed by Her Majesty was expended on that gate. The plans were prepared and revised by the Princess Louiso when she was here, and changed to suit her taste. Special lamps were imported, at her request, and we have put a tablet in the gate, upon which an inscription will be made during the coming summer.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. This is to complete public buildings in several towns in Ontario. Stratford Post Office and Custom House will have cost, when completed, $42,500; this $1,000 completes. We ask for $5,000 to complete the Clifton Post Office, which will have cost altogether about $35,000. On Port Hope Post Office and Custom House we Public Works that he intends to prevent the repetition of have expended, to the 31st of December last, $20,400; the total estimated cost of the work will be $39,000 altogether. The Gananoque Custom House will require $1,000; this will cost altogether not quite $12,000.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. My attention has been called to the excessive charges made in the legal department, for which I do not hold the hon. Minister responsible, but which are uttorly out of all reason. Work for which an ordinary business man would charge $50 or $100 is charged at the rate of $600 or 700 to the Government. All sorts of charges, such as never before heard of, are made.

The charges made are refreshing to Mr. DAVIES. The charges made are refres lawyers coming from the Maritime Provinces. Take the account for the Hamilton building. For search of title there is a charge made of $603.90. After the gentleman, J. A. Macdonell, has made every possible charge of which the imagination could conceive, he charges 1 per cent. on the cost of the whole building, $359, which is practically a commission. This gentleman was away nine days, and for that service $185 are charged.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I thought, in legal matters, there was complete protection, by having the costs taxed by the proper authorities. These costs, I understand, were properly taxed.

These costs were not properly taxed. Mr. DAVIES. They were referred to Mr. Barwick.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Mr. Barwick was employed to get the costs reduced.

Mr. DAVIES. If it is to be understood that lawyers employed to search titles for the Government are to charge 1 per cent. on the total value in addition to all other costs, it is well that the fact should be known, as there will be some very heavy bills to be submitted in future. The next case was in regard to the St. Thomas building, and Mr. Macdonell was more moderate. Il is account was $145. He charged for the deed alone $35, and fee on title, $70. His account for Chatham bailding was $106, and again wo have the 1 per cent. fee. No person ever heard of such a charge in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

Mr. WOODWORTH. Is not the reason given by the leader of the Opposition and the Promier why judges' sala ries cannot be equalized, this-that the emolument and fees in Ontario are much larger than the fees in the Maritime Provinces?

Mr. BLAKE. I never heard before of such fees as these for such services.

Mr. DAVIES. The charges are first amusing, and after a time they strike one as utterly outrageous and indefensible. There is a charge in connection with the Toronto conser-vatory, of $131; for the Learnington lighthouse, $169. In the bills were paid at $37.61, said to have been the every case the percentage charge is brought in.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. My attention was called to some of these accounts the other day by some remarks made, I think, in the Public Accounts Committee, and I accordingly looked into some of them. After doing so, I called the special attention of the Minister of Justice to them, and he told me that he certainly will take care in the future that these accounts are revised and such sums not paid. In regard to the certificate of the registrar, it must be remembered that the lawyer is responsible for examining the title. Of course, I have not gone into the matter closely, but I may assure hon. gentlemen that I think the accounts rendered were rather high, and I have called the attention of the Minister of Justice to the matter.

Mr. MULOCK. I am glad to hear from the Minister of such charges as these being sanctioned and paid out of the public moneys. I am sorry the attention of the Minister of Justice was not called to these circumstances before the public moneys were expended, as I submit, to a large extent, improperly, in the payment of these bills. They are not more trifles, for I have before me a list, of which I shall give some of the items, though I have not added the total. There are, amongst others, the following items :-The Leamington lighthouse, $169.89; Toronto observatory, $401.33; St. Thomas public baildings, $145.76; Hamilton public buildings, $603.90; Chatham public buildings, $106 78. Those are the bills of costs rendered by a professional gentleman practising in Toronto, Mr. J. A. Macdonell, to this Government. I find that these bills were rendered to the Government, and a letter was written by the Deputy Minister of Justice, a part of which I will read. This letter was written to Mr. F. D. Barwick, barrister, Toronto, and sent along with the bills, asking that the bills should be taxed. The letter states:

"It has been arranged with Mr. Macdonell that these bills should be taxed by Mr. Thom, the taxing officer of the Chancery Division, and the Minister has directed me to forward them to you with the request that you will procure an appointment for this purpose and attend the taration on his behalf. Will you be good enough to do so and to report the result to me as soon as possible."

That letter is dated on the 18th November, 1881. There is another letter dated on the 27th of December, of the same year, from the Deputy Minister of Justice, referring to these bills, with some particulars, and some special instructions. Having set forth the bills at the head of the letter, we find that the meaning of item No. 4, re St. Thomas buildings, is that this charge is made for investigating the title to cer. tain lands, in the city of St. Thomas, and the charge made in the account rendered for searching that title is $145.79. Then he goes to No. 5, which is an item for searching title to a piece of land for the purpose of a lighthouse at Learnington. He says :

"I would request you to procure an appointment with Mr. Thom, and have them taxed by that officer. To enable you rightly to represent to the Department the taxation | make the following explanation respecting the several cases referred to in the bills."

Then he goes on to No. 1. I may say that No. 1 is a num. ber of bills against five different persons. I will not mention the names, because I do not desire to draw the names of suitors into the case :

"No instructions were ever given to commence proceedings, as it was known that the gentlemen would pay upon being written to. This they did do. I observe that Mr. Macdonell has made out five separate bills, charging instructions and attendances, &c., in last bill, though the matter was really but one transaction. The Department objects to the charges being multiplied by five."

Well, according to the instruction of the Department, Mr. Macdonell was instructed to write five separate letters to five different persons, and he made out five separate bills result of the taxation. The letter goes on :

"No. 2. Re Toronto observatory. The Department thinks Mr. Mac-donell very excessive. This Government own the observatory and certain property surrounding it, but as there was nothing on record in the Department of Marine (which Department is charged with the administration of the observatory) to show the nature of the Govern-ment title, Mr. Macdonell was desired to make necessary enquiries and report the nature of the title. You will observe that he has framed his bill as if the case were one in which he acted as counsel. He was employed as a solicitor, and the case was not one in which counsel's services could be, or would be, either useful or required. I am desired by the Minister of Justice to Bay that the Department wishes to pay Mr. Macdonell fair and reasonable fees for any services which he may per Macdonell fair and reasonable fees for any services which he may per-form, but that excessive charges, and charges for which there is no warrant, are objected to."

No. 3 refers to some small bills. No. 4 refers to the title of the St. Thomas property. This is an ordinary case of rearching title to land, but it cost the country no less than $145.79 for searching title, that being the amount allowed after taxation. This appears to be an ordinary case of searching the title to a piece of land bought by the Government for a lighthouse, and yet it cost this country $168.89 to have that title investigated. As an evidence of the skilfulness with which the taxation was carried on, and of the attention that was given to the interests of the Dominion, I may say that the result of the taxation of that bill was to reduce it by the magnificent amount of one dollar. Now, the instructions sent by the Deputy Minister of Justice to Mr. Barwick were, that he should cause these bills to be submitted to the taxing officer of the Court of Chancery, Mr. Thom, a person peculiarly fitted to speak on such matters, because they largely embraced what are known as conveyan-cing charges. They were not submitted to Mr. Thom. The instructions of the Deputy Minister of Justice were ignored, and the bills were taken to another gentleman. It is true, he was a taxing officer of the Court of Qucen's Bench. At that time, the taxing officer was the gentleman who is now the hon. member for East Toronto (Mr. Small). He is supposed to have taxed these bills, and Mr. Barwick is supposed to have represented the Dominion and to have keenly looked after its interests on that cccasion. Now, let us see how be did it. Take the case of the Hamilton public buildings. A piece of land was bought in the city of Hamilton for $35,900, on which to erect certain Dominion public buildings. Mr. Macdonell was employed to search the title, and he has rendered a bill for that transaction. According to the bill, his services began on the 5th of May, and terminated, so far as getting the deed is concerned, on the 3rd of June-one There are some items involved in closing month. up the transaction after that, such as sending the deeds to be registered, and sending the papers to this Department. But for services alleged to have been rendered during that month Mr. Macdonell succeeded in preparing a bill largely making up the gross charge of $650.80. I am not blaming the Government for the amount of the bill on its face, but I do blame them for the sum they paid in settling it. It was submitted to be taxed. Mr. Barwick disregarded the instruction to have it taxed by the proper officer and had it taxed by another gentleman-the gentleman I referred to; and, with all respect to him, I would say that he is not qualified to tax this bill. He has never had any considerable experience-and I speak what I know-in work of this kind. Mr. Small's professional experience as taxing officer has been almost entirely limited to taxing costs in common lawsuits, and he has not been accustomed to accounts such as these.

Mr. BLAKE. I hope so.

Mr. MULOCK. I hope so sincerely; for theresults here are not what is right between man and man. In this bill, he has allowed $180 to Mr. Macdonell, for going up to Hamilton. I am satisfied that no evidence could have been supplied to show that it was necessary for Mr. Macdonell to te absent from the city of Toronto nine days for any such purpose. We know the proximity of Toronto to do so, that this was not a case in which counsel fees should Hamilton, and the simple mode of communication between | be allowed; yet, we find this bill allowed the large sum of neighbouring towns. There are plenty of lawyers in Hamilton, as well as in Toronto, and the ordinary method is to write to some solicitor in any town where a title is to be searched, and get him to make the necessary search. But if the Government desired Mr. Macdonell personally to attend to this matter, he could not, I think, have been necessarily absent on the Government business in contection with this matter for that length of time. Now, we find such items allowed as "Fee, registering deed received from vendor's solicitor, $5;" "Fee on title, 1 per cent. on $35,900, $359." That bill is, in my opinion, simply outrageous, and the interests of the people were in no way looked after in the matter of that taxation. Now, I come to the next bill, which is for searching the title to a piece of land in the city of St. Thomas. According to this bill, the work was begun in the month of June, 1881, and the bill was rendered for $176.79, from which $31 were taxed. I find in that bill such items allowed as $34 for various charges in connection with the preparation of the deed. Now, no person, I think, can say that this is a fair charge. It is beyond all reason. I do not desire to be unreasonable. On the contrary, considering the relation of the parties, I would not have taken exception to a charge, even slightly above the ordinary charge. But I am satisfied that it was a surprise to every legal gentleman here, to find that it cost about $34 to get an ordinary deed, through the agency of Mr. Macdonell. We find that item is made up of such items as: "Rough draft of deed, twenty-seven folios, $5.40;" "Fee for revising it, $10." He is allowed by this taxing officer $10 for looking over his own draft.

Mr. WOODWORTH. Do you call that too much?

Mr. MULOCK. I am telling you what it is, and leaving you to judge for yourself. The next item is, "Engrossing copy for vendor's solicitor, $2.70;" and there are a number of small items, making up the sum of $34.14, for a deed of conveyance. I think the allowance of those charges must satisfy you that these bills were not honestly taxed in the interests of the people.

Mr. WOODWORTH. How did they come to put on 14 cents ?

Mr. MULOCK. By postage; it is a case of "the lie with a circumstance." Even, then, he is allowed $1 for the preparation of the bill of costs, a thing which is never allowed in the tariff when a solicitor renders a bill to his own client, which is the case here; and then, in conclusion, he allows an item of $10 as a fee on the title, making altogether, for searching for that ordinary title, $145-a work which, 1 presume, would have cost a citizen, perhaps, $20. Then we come to the next item in the account, the Chatham public buildings. This appears to be just another case of an ordinary title investigated, and we find such items as these allowed:

"For perusing an abstract, two hours, $4; receiving title deeds and perusing same, $7.20; requisitions as to title, $5; receiving answer to requisitions and perusing same, $4; further requisitions as to title, $3; attending Crown Lands Office to examine papers fyled when patents issued, and to investigate title of the Van Allens, two hours, $1."

And to conclude it all, he charges, on passing title, I per cent. on purchase money, $50, which makes the account foot up to $106.78 for passing on this title. In this bill the disbursements amount in all to $5.18, leaving $101.60 as the net profit to the gentleman in question. Then we come to the Toronto observatory. You will remember that the Deputy Minister of Justice said that this bill was made up on an entirely erroneous principle; that he believed the charges excessive, and especially called the attention of Mr. Barwick to the incorrect manner in which the bill was made up, intimating, as strongly as language could as these: "Special report on title, 33 folios; engrossing and counsel fee, &c, $9 90; counsel fee, $10 (reduced by the taxing officer to $30.)"

And then there is another long story: Fee on long and special consultation with Chief Justice Moss, Vice Chancellor of the University, explaining matters to him, going over all papers, Orders in Council, &c.-which need not have appeared on this account. What did that interview cost this country? It cost us $40. There is another little item. He has draited a report; so he has sent a report to the Government about the title, for which he has not forgotten to charge, and then he comes down again with "Drafting a second report of title, fourteen folios, $4 20, and fees on same, $20;" reduced by taxation to $10. Thus he is allowed $10 for his fee on drafting a second report. Then we find such an item as this. You must remember what was this matter. The Government had written to Mr. Macdonell, asking him to state what he thought about a certain title to a little bit of land in the city of Toronto, and arrange some matters connected therewith, and in the bill for that work we find such an item as this: "Instructions for brief for Mr. Lash, Q.C., $2;" Mr. Lash gave Mr. Macdonell general instructions, yet the instructians to prepare a brief of the papers for Mr. Lash to look over are charged and allowed. I do not object to the charging; I am simply deploring that the item was allowed. He then has a brief for himself and charges for it as follows :

"Brief for Mr. Lash, $7.50. Instructions for brief for Mr. Macdonell, $2, brief, $7.50."

And all allowed-$2 for instructions from himself to himself and $7.50 for a brief for himself. Then there is attendance with Mr. Langton for plans. This item, I must say is, I think, without foundation in fact, and there rever could have been an enquiry into this charge or it would have been found, I think, that there was no foundation for it. Then there is the charge: "Counsel fee on meeting of arbitration, $50." There was no arbitration of any kind, and if the taxation had been properly looked to, if it had been an honest taxation and not a colourable one, there would have been some evidence required to prove that item, or it would have been disallowed. There was no arbitration, nothing like an arbitration, there was never anything to arbitrate about, and that is a pure fiction in order to swell this bill. There may have been some friendly adjustment, nothing more. Then, take another item, a scandalous item :

"Counsel fee on meeting Mr. Langton and Mr. Wells at observatory when it was settled that $20 per annum, 6 per cent. on amount ex-pended, should be paid for rent of both cottages erected by the Uni-versity on our land. As to compensation for land appropriated by them for the purpose of a road, the University will grant us, on the same terms as we hold the observatory land, so much of the land to the south of the observatory as they can spare without detriment to their building lots, $50."

That meeting with Mr. Langton and Mr. Wells to settle the rental for a cottage, and in the face of the letter of the Deputy Minister of Justice to Mr. Barwick, informing him that it was not a case for counsel at all, yet a counsel fee of $50 was charged and paid. No one ever heard of a counsel fee being allowed in settling the terms of a rental of a cottage between two persons. This bill is a gross overcharge. To summarize some of these transactions, we find as follows:-That it cost the people of Canada $603.80 solicitors' charges in connection with the purchase of a picce of land in Hamilton $105.79; for similar services in connection with the purchase of another parcel of land at St. Thomas $106.78; for like services in connection with another parcel of land at Chatham; and $169.89 for similar services in a similar transaction in Leamington. Surely it is not a mere coincidence that the titles to all the lands that the Government buy are so intri- bills taxed by Mr. Thom, the taxing officer of the Court of cate that such charges as these are proper. Therefore, I Charcery, and instead of that he had them taxed by Mr.

was glad to hear the hon. the Minister of Public Works express, very strongly, I may say, for him, his regret at the charges. Now, unfortunately we have to regret that they should have been paid; and I am glad to have the Ministers assurance that the Public Accounts are not again to be d.sgraced by such entrics as these in them.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. We ought to have some further explanation about these things, surely. Has the hon. gentleman nothing to say in relation to this ? All I can say is, that according to the statement made by my hon. friend, this person-I will not call him a gentleman-has committed a deliberate fraud. If the statement made by my hon. friend. that $50 were charged for an arbitration that never took place, is correct, it is simply fraud, most dishonest and scandalous fraud, and I do think the Government owe it to themselves to take steps to recover some of the money which has in this way been robbed from the country.

Mr. BLAKE. I do hope that some steps will be taken in this matter. I never heard of such charges as these being made. I never heard before of such a principle of charging as has been adopted with reference to the titles. I am not very conversant, I confess, with convoyancing charges, but I have never heard or seen such a principle of dealing with the question. This young man, whose professional earnings might, perhaps, amount to $2,000 or $3,000 ordinarily, for searching one title has charged $600; for nine days' absence at Hamilton he has charged $20 a day, day in and day out, and then, at the end, $359 of a fee in addition to all the other charges, including this $20 a day, which is in itself too much. These bills are not honest bills. The taxation by the officer was not an honest taxation, and the protection of the rights of the Crown by the person who was appointed to protect them was not an honest protection. That is the state of the case. Neither the officer the Grown employed served it faithfully in presenting such bills as these, nor did the officer who was appointed to protect its rights protect them faithfully, nor the judicial officer, who was either ignorant of his duty or discharged it in a shameful manner; and it does look to one as if this was an arrangement, in some shape or other, to remunerate for his services a gentleman who, for some years, was the political agent of the political party in Ontario.

Mr. McLELAN. Two of the cases mentioned come from my Department-the Toronto observatory, and the Leamington lighthouse. I am not very familiar with either of them, because they were about closed when I came to the Department; but in regard to the Toronto observatory, there was a great deal of correspondence and a good many papers connected with it, and I saw it was a case which required a great deal of attention on the part of some one, and had received a great deal of attention. It was quite involved as to the boundary lines of the land of the observatory and the University in Toronto. I saw that the bills were pretty large, but on enquiry I was told and learned that they had gone through all the regular forms, and there was no avoiding their payment. I must say that the bills appeared to me, coming from the Maritime Provinces, rather higher than we had a reason to expect, from the custom of that country; and I have been very careful in my Department to see that as few legal expenses were incurred as possible, seeing that the practice of this section of country is so much in advance of the charges paid in Nova Scotia, as far as I have had experience in legal matters. I think, with the exception of these two cases, for the last few years you will not find very many charges for legal expenses in my Department.

Mr. MULOCK. Could the hon. gentleman tell me why the instruction of the Deputy Minister of Justice was not carried out when he instructed Mr. Barwick to have these Small, the then taxing officer in the Court of Queen's Bench?

Mr. McLELAN. I cannot give that information.

Mr. MULOCK. Then, it would appear that the taxation under the instructions of the Department has never yet taken place.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. In answer to the hon. gentleman, I may say that when a property is chosen and is bought, the papers are sent to the Department of Justice, in order that the title may be investigated. The Dopartment of Justice then investigates the title by appointing or selecting a barrister to do the work. When the Department of Justice sends a statement or a letter to the Department showing that the title having been investigated, the Department of Public Works, for example, may pay the amount; then the amount allowed by the Order in Council is deposited in the proper name, or in the proper hands, and paid over when the title is obtained. Therefore, from the moment we ask for the title to be investigated until the bill comes back taxed or allowed by the Department of Justice, the Department that has bought the land has nothing to do with this. Of course, I am not saying that to throw the onus on another Department; that is well understood; but I want to explain how the thing stands.

Mr. BLAKE. Quite so; that is understood.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. In two or three of these cases, I see that the instructions of the Department of Justice were not followed, and certainly my intention is to call again the attention of the Minister of Justice to this discussion, and to the facts that have been brought out by the hon. gentlemen on the other side, so that he may investigate the matter, and see what course he has to take in order to have these accounts properly overhauled.

Mr. BLAKE. Hear, hear.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I have no doubt he will do that. Of course, hon. gentlemen know---my hon. friend the leader of the Opposition knows-having been at the head of that Department, that a Minister cannot go into all the minutiæ and see everything in the Department; that abuses may occur, and that as soon as we see them we correct them. I have no doubt the Minister of Justice will look into the case.

Mr. BLAKE. Not merely was the hon. gentleman not improperly endeavouring to shirk responsibility by the statement he has made, but I believe the grossest abuses would arise if any other course were pursued by the Departments than that which he has indicated. The only proper and efficient check on legal charges is to see that they all pass through the crucible of the Department of Justice. I always insisted upon that when I was Minister of Justice, and not only so, but I in-isted that, if I was to be responsible for the legal work of the Government, I should have the appointment of the legal agents of the Government throughout the country who were to discharge the business. But, while he has stated the only correct course which ought to be pursued, it is quite evident, on the other hand, that when the responsibility rests with the Department of Justice, it is an effective responsibility and has to be discharged. I do not accuse the Minister personally; I do not suppose he looks over every bill of costs, but I think there has been departmental neglect in this matter. The letters which have been read, so far as they conveyed comments, seem to have conveyed very proper comments to the intended officer who was to cause taxation to be made, but I did not hear the letter in so far as it dealt with the conveyancing charges. It seems to me that the letter might have indicated the extraordinary character of these charges, if it does not indicate it. What I not wish to disturb them in their places. I must also say that complain of is: a direction being given to tax before a parti- before the skylights had been arranged, we found it was much cular person, that the direction is not carried out; the bills are returned evidently only colourably taxed by another person, and are recommended for payment and paid. The hon. Minister has only done what is proper in going further than the original statement which was made, and saying that steps will be taken to overhaul the accounts. I think anything less than that would be less than justice.

Mr. MULOCK. I may say that I am more than pleased at the attitude of the Minister of Public Works.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Hon. gentlemen must have seen that, on both sides of the building, in the Senate and in the House of Commons, we have had a trial of electricity. On this side, we have had the United States Company, and on the other the Edison Light Company. The matter has been looked into. We had to have that light for a certain time during this Session, in order that the trial might take place. I have had an expert to look into the matter and report to me on the best light to be selected. I am not yet in a position to say what is the result of that test, because I have not had time to look into it, but as soon as the House rises we will see whether we had better keep two lights or only one, and which of the two will be the best; also, whether we will extend that light to other parts of the building. Hon. gentlemen must not be disappointed if we do not have the electric light next year, because I desire to wait until it has been tried elsewhere, either in Washington, Albany or London.

Mr. BLAKE. I observe that the next vote has some reference to this same subject.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Yes; the next vote is for a number of matters which were suggested by hon. members at the end of last Session. We had a discussion, as hon. gentlemen will remember, about lighting this Chamber, the ventilation, the draft on both sides near the walls, and several changes were suggested. These changes have been made, both in this Chamber and in the Senate Chamber. While we were at work we found that the glass over our heads was very thin and we were in constant danger from its falling on our heads; therefore I had it removed and replaced by plate glass so that there would be no danger, in case of a light object falling on the glass of its breaking through and injuring anyone on the floor of the House. We did the same in the Senate Chamber. In our own Chamber we took good care to protect the Opposition side of the House, because. of course, we liked to see them sitting there and do not wish to disturb them in their places. I must also say that darker on the Opposition side of the House, and I determined to throw more light upon them, so that they might see as well as we do. There is an item of $2,500 to meet expenses of some repairs we did ourselves, and an item of $7,500 for the engines below, wires and lamps connected with the electricity. These we have purchased. When we called for tenders, our idea was that, if we found the experi-When we ment a success we would purchase the engines and other apparatus at the rate tendered for, but if we did not find it a success, then the tenderers would have to remove their engines without any cost to the country.

Mr. BLAKE. I have not seen the electric light on the Senate side, and do not know how it works there, but I must confess to some disappointment from the result on this side. The light does not commend itself to me, as I had hoped, from what I had seen of the Edison electric light in other places. But I do not think it has had quite a fair trial, and I should be sorry to see the hon. gentleman adopt permanently any such plans of electric lighting as is now adopted. The lights are too low. The great advantage of the electric light is that you can get it high up, first of all; and secondly, with a comparatively small expense, you can diffuse it through the whole room. In the dining room of the House of Commons the light is so low that when you are standing it is almost on a level with the eye, which makes it very disagreeable. The same observation applies, to a considerable extent, in the other rooms where the lights are used. I have seen them in very high rooms of a private mansion, just up in the ceiling, and diffused all over the room. I have seen a large drawing room which, I suppose, was about 20 feet high, with forty-two lights all over the ceiling, and the result was a diffused light all over the room, of a most delightful kind. Instead of that, when you have the light concentrated, as in the House of Commons restaurant, with three groups of three or four lights each, and when it is as low as it is there, it is not satisfactory—it is disagreeable from its brightness, being near the level of the eye. If, therefore, the hon. gentleman proposes to adopt the electric light permanently in the building-I hope he will not do so without considering these suggestions. The real advantage of electric light, apart from the question of coolness, of its heat rays being so few compared with its light rays, is the possibility, in consequence of the coolness, of its being put House do not mean to sit any such length of time. If the high up in a room, and in consequence of the facility of sending the wires wherever you like, you can, with very little additional expense, diffuse the light all over the room. These are the two advantages, but we do not gain them at all by the present plan. I must confess that I would preferif I was offered a choice of the old gas lights in the dining room and the electric light-I would prefer the gas lights.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The hon, gentleman is perfectly right about these lights being too low down, but we placed them there for the reason that we did not wish to disturb the gas lights, so that we might be able to use them in case the electric light did not work well. Therefore, in order to avoid the danger of a failure of the new light and the danger of expense, we directed the workmen to put their lights on the gas chandeliers. It was an experiment. If it answers tolerably well in that way, then we shall remove these lamps and put the electric lights at the proper height, so that we may have all the benefit which the hon. gentleman has mentioned, of having the electric lights at the proper height. If hon. gentlemen will be kind enough to go to the Sena'e they will find that the light there is much more brilliant. It is placed higher up and seems to be a better light than that on this side—I must say that frankly, and I expressed that opinion to my officers. I said to them that, in my opinion, the light on the Senate side was the pass it, that it should be brought in at this time. It makes stronger and brighter light, and that seems to be the gen-eral impression. I am glad the hon. gentleman has men, tioned the matter, because it has only confirmed my opinion-bearing on the subject, I will be happy to act as such.

and if we adopt the light we shall have to change the lamps.

Resolutions to be reported; Committee to sit again.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to; and (at 2:15 o'clock, a.m.) the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

PRAYERS.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON PRINTING.

Mr. WHITE moved the adoption of the Seventh Report of the Joint Committee on the Frinting of Parliament. Motion agreed to, and Report concurred in.

PRIVATE BILL LEGISLATION.

Mr. BEATY moved that the time for receiving Private Bills be extended to Monday, 7th instant, and that for presenting reports, to Saturday, 12th inst.

Mr. BLAKE. Are we to understand that all hope of pio roguing at Easter has been abandoned?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Perhaps the h n. mover will explain the object of the Committee in making the recommendation.

Mr. BEATY. From the observations made by hon. members it appeared not quite certain that the House would not sit on the week after next. It was thought that this Bill (London Life Assurance Company's Bill, which is deemed of public importance, might not reach its final stage until next Saturday.

Mr. MITCHELL. I am satisfied that members of the time were extended to Monday next it would be sufficient, as business can be got through in that time.

Mr. BLAKE moved to strike out Saturday and insert Wednesday.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). It seems to me that the House ought fairly to consider whether the practice which is springing up is one which should be encouraged. This Bill is simply a Private Bill regulating the internal affairs of an insurance company. There is no public interest connected with it, and the Bill is not of such a character as to justify the House in setting aside its rules. If this practice is to be continued, then those who have doubtful Bills to introduce should not give notice, but petition the House at the end of the Session for permission to bring in the Bills, and the very fact that this is permitted will be taken as showing the urgency of the legislation. I will vote against the amendment if I stand alone. We should at once stop the practice which is growing on the House.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I entirely concur with every word uttered by the hon. member for Cardwell. It is perfectly monstrous, unless a Bill is of such importance that the Government deem it is in the public interest to

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). If we simply negative the motion and refuse to extend the time, no Bill under our rules can come in.

Mr. BEATY. This Bill is in the hands of the hon. member for West Middlescx (Mr. Cameron). The importance of the Bill arises from the fact that the company, if they do not obtain this Bill to increase their capital, is liable to be injured thereby, and it is of great importance that this company should have the Bill passed. They gave the regular notice, except as to one point, and that is, that they did not say that they wanted to increase their cupital stock. They have found it necessary to increase the capital stock, and they come in at this late hour of the Session, not knowing that the matter would be of much importance as they find it to be after the change of management which has taken place within the last few weeks, and after discovering certain defects connected with the management of the company. These considerations make it of importance to them and to others that the Bill should pass. Personally I do not care anything for the Bill in that respect, but it is of importance in the interests of the company and I hope if it is possible within the time to have the Bill passed it may, under the peculiar circumstances, be allowed to pass. I may say I have acted as Chairman of the Committee strictly on the idea that Bills should not come in if possible later than the rules allow. We have acted on that principle in all cases except in these two which are of an exceptional character.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I may say that the hon. member for West Middlesex conferred with me as to the possibility of this Bill passing, and I gave him to understand that I did not think there would be the least chance, because it was understood on both sides of the House that we were not to be asked to go beyond the extension of time which was previously allowed. I have read this Bill, I may say, and though it may be of importance to the com-pany, I cannot see that it is. I think it would not be expedient that the time should be extended at this stage of the Session. It would make a precedent which might render it possible for other Bills, perhaps of a doubtful character, coming in at the close of the Session.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Would the hop. gantleman who made the motion state in what position the Bill is. Has it been allowed by the House before it was sent to the Committee.

Mr. BEATY. Yes.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. At what stage is it now?

Mr. BEATY. I propose to move the first reading now, as it has not been moved. The Committee on Standing Orders passed the Bill, and we propose, if the House allows, that the first reading shall be taken.

Mr. MITCHELL. I ho, o the amendment will be with-drawn so that the House may act upon the question in the main motion.

Amendment agreed to, and main motion, as amended, negatived.

SICK AND DISTRESSED MARINERS.

Mr. McLELAN moved the second reading of Bill (No. 129) to amend the Act respecting the treatment and relief of sick and distressed mariners. He said: This Bill of which I give notice some time ago is intended to relieve some abuses which arose under the operation of the old Act. Under the old Act, very little was collected from fishing vessels other than those that had sick mariners on board; and in 1882 I asked Parliament to pass a Bill exempting fishermen from the payment of dues to the sick and distressed mariner's fund, and exempting them from messengers and box inspectors, but of course the resolutions the benefits of that fund. But cases of great hardship has artsen, which have been brought to my notice, and I pro-pose in this Bill that all fishing vessels that pay before leaving the first port of outfit shall be entitled to participate in the benefits of the fund-making the matter optional. That is, if a vessel pays the fees at the port of outfit before sailing, she will be entitled to the benefits of the sick mariners fund for that voyage; but if she neglects to pay before sailing, she will not.

Mr. WELDON. I suppose that if a fishing vessel leaves on her first voyage, and pays afterwards during the summer, she cannot get the benefits of the fund?

Mr. McLELAN. She must pay before sailing on her first voyage, and if she goes upon a second voyage she must pay before sailing on that voyage in order to participate for that voyage. Vessels under 100 tons, by paying once before sailing, participate in the benefits of the fund for the calendar year, but vessels over 103 tons must pay for three voyages in the year, in order to participate in the benefits of the fund for that year.

Mr. BLAKE. So that, as the hon. gentleman understands his Bill, it is to put fishing vessels on the same footing as others, except that it makes it optional for them to $pa\bar{y}$ or not, and if they do not pay they do not receive the benefits of the fund?

Mr. McLELAN. Yes. Foreign vessels arriving in a port of the Dominion of Canada must pay their dues on ontering.

Mr. GILLMOR. Supposing a fishing vessel should get an outfit in an American port, and on coming back should pay her dues before clearing, could she participate?

Mr. McLELAN. She must make the Canadian po.t her port of sailing on the first outfit.

Bill read the second time, considered in Committee, read the third time and passed.

CIVIL SERVICE ACTS AMENDMENT.

Mr. CHAPLEAU moved the second reading of Bill (No. 130) to amend the Civil Service Acts of 1882 and 1883.

Bill read the second time.

Mr. CHAPLEAU moved that the House resolve itself into Committee to consider a certain proposed resolution (page 1215) providing for salaries of Assistant Post Office Inspectors and others,

Motion agreed to; and the House resolved itself into Committee.

(In the Committee.)

Mr. CHAPLEAU. By the Act as it now stands, assistant post office inspectors are paid on appointment $1,000; after ten years they get $1,200, and after twenty years $1,500. These officers I understand must be first-class clerks and are placed over officers receiving larger salaries. In giving them $1,200 on appointment and the statutory increase of $50 per year, they will after eight years' service, be in receipt of $1,600. The clause providing the salaries of the superintendents of letter-carriers shall begin at $600 and be annually increased by $40 will be struck out. The mail transfer agents will receive $400 with an annual increase of $40, until the salary reaches the maximum of $600; and the letter-carriers will receive $360 instead of $300 on appointment, as it is found difficult to obtain men fit for the work under a dollar a day.

Mr. BLAKE. What is the expected increase to the public charge in consequence of these changes?

will not affect those. How many new ones will have to be appointed, it is difficult to say.

Mr. BLAKE. As the new appointments get their increase and their salaries run over those of the old and faithful public servants, the hon. gentleman will come down and appeal to us, with that good which is always beaming in his countenance, to place these old servants on an equal footing with the new ones.

Mr. CARLING. There are very few old servants whose salaries are not over $360, as they get the statutory increase of $50 a year.

Mr. BLAKE. What will be the additional charge on our revenue in the case of assistant post office inspectors.

Mr. CARLING. I cannot say for the moment. There are some nine or ten divisions, and the post office inspector in each division has an assistant.

Superintendents of letter carriers struck out; and resolution, as amended, concurred in, and ordered to be reported.

SUPPLY,—FLAG TREATY, UNITED STATES AND SPAIN.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY moved that the House again resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Mr. VAIL. Before you leave the Chair, Mr. Speaker, I desire to refer to a matter of some importance affecting the trade of Canada. I wish to make a simple statement with reference to the Flag Treaty entered into between the United States and Spain, which will occupy only two or three moments, and I am, though it is some-what irregular, sure the House will permit me to do. A treaty, which is called a "Flag Treaty," has recently been made between the United States and Spain placing the American flag in Cuba and Porto Rico on the same footing as the Spanish. It appears that formerly goods by Spanish flag paid 10 per cent. more duty in United States than by other vessels. The American Government have agreed to abolish this 10 per cent., and Spain in return admits American products under the American flag on same terms as their own. This arrangement applies to Cuba and Porto Rico only, and on the general Tariff makes a difference in favour of the American the flag of near 20 per cent. In Porto Rico the duty on our fish by our own vessels is 55 cents per 100 pounds, while American fish by American vessels pay only 42 cents, a difference of 13 cents per 100 pounds, in favour of the American flag. In Cuba it is still more, the difference being 27 cents per 100 pounds in favour of the American flag. In Porto Rico British vessels pay just double tonnage duty, say \$1.25 per ton for discharging cargo, and \$1 per ton; while the Americans by this treaty will only pay $62\frac{1}{2}$ cents for discharging and 50 cents per ton for loading. Our annual shipment of codish to Porto Rico is about 150,000 quintals, besides large quantities of pickled fish, and they are in fact our best and largest cus-tomers. We also ship largely to Cuba, and the demand there is steadily increasing, so it is important there also. This treaty only applies to fish shipped direct from the United States in American vessels, and consequently fish shipped by American steamers from Halifax to Cuba via New York are subject to the same duty as if shipped in British vessels. Then, again, the Americans have been for some time complaining of the Spanish Consular charges for papers, which is 10 cents per 1,000 kilos, equal to one ton. They considered this an export duty imposed by Spain on United States products, and should not be allowed, and it is expected that this will also be removed. If so, our mer-chants should be relieved of this charge as well. It will therefore be seen that this is a very important matter, and be able to make the statement which the hon. gentleman places our fish dealers at a great disadvantage to the has asked that I should make.

Americans, and the result of it will be, that our trade will be ruined and the Americans will be in future the suppliers of these Islands with all the fish they require. I hope the Government will, after this statement, take the matter into their consideration and communicate the facts to the British Government, and see if we cannot be placed on the same footing as the Americans are. It is a very important matter, and I hope will receive early attention.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. The attention of the Government has been called to this subject previous to the state-ment of the hon. gentleman. We have obtained some information with reference to the effect of this treaty or arrangement between the two countries, but, as far as we have received it, if it includes the question of tonnage, it does not bear out the statement the hon. gentleman has made, though I dare say he may be right. The arrangements between Spain and the United States were not really as favourable as those between Canada and Cuba or Porto Rico. There were charges made that did not exist here. I'hey have been removed and the United States have been placed in the third list of duties. The Government are quite alive to the importance of having our trade on as good terms as that of the United States, and no time will be lost in endeavouring to bring about such arrangements as will place us on quite as favourable terms as they have.

Mr. MACKENZIE. What treaty is it that governs the traffic at present? Is it a recent treaty?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. It is an arrangement made, such as this, I presume. It is not a treaty.

Mr. MACKENZIE. It is independent of any commercial treaty?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. Yes. This is an arrangement by which this anomalous state of things is to be removed, and, as far as I have seen the correspondence, they propose to go still further and make treaty arrangements even wider and broader in their operation than those referred to by the hon. member for Digby (Mr. Vail). This is an arrangement made by the representative of the United States and the Spanish authorities, placing the imports entering into Cuba or Porto Rico under what is called the third list. There are four rates of duties and charges, and they are now placed in the third column. The exact effect of this we have not yet been informed of.

Mr. MACKENZIE. But British subjects have a right, have they not, under the existing commercial treaty, to be placed on an equal footing with the most favoured nation? Is not that the case ?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. No; I think not.

TRADE WITH NEWFOUNDLAND.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I want to enquire of the hon. gentleman-he can answer it now or on Monday, as suits his convenience-what is being done with the Government of Newfoundland. They have been making of late some serious complaints as to the effect of our inspection, if I am correctly advised, of their main export to us, and have passed, or threatened to pass an Act-I think they have actually passed it—which enables them practically to re-taliate on us to a considerable extent. No doubt, that has not escaped the hon. gentleman, but it would be of interest that he should make a statement on the subject at an early date.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. The subject has been receiving only this day the consideration of the Government, and I think a communication has been sent within the last two or three hours to Newfoundland, and I hope on Monday to

The House then again resolved itself into Committee of Supply.

(In the Committee.)

PUBLIC WORKS-CHARGEABLE TO CAPITAL.

248 Repairs, furniture, heating, &c...... $26,185 00

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Though it appears that Resolution 248 was passed last night, it was understood that I should give some explanation in reference to the second part of it. A vote is asked of $1,805 for "temporary offices in court yard for use of Post Office Department." was impossible to get along with the staff of that Department. The space alloted to it was much too small, and we had to erect a temporary wooden building in the yard, on the same plan as I think my hon. friend from East York (Mr. Mackenzie) had one erected in his time. Of course, it will disappear in a couple of years, when the new building is erected on Wellington street.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Does the hon. gentle man mean to say the post office is to be finally sent to Wellington street?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. No.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Or is he going to divide the staff of the post office, part in Wellington street and part in the present building

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. No; it is supposed that two or three Departments, probably three, will be put in the new building and that will relieve the Eastern and Western blocks, and the other Departments will thus have more space, and be able to manage their business without this extra wooden building. In the Ottawa Geological Museum certain repairs were required. The beams required to be propped up as the weight on the floors was very heavy; the roof had to be put in order, and some other small repairs done. In the Ottawa Post Office we had to expend $1,550. This sum was absolutely necessary, and a larger amount than that will be required to put the building in proper order. Removal of snow-public buildings, Ottawa-we have asked for $800 more than usual. We had made a contract as usual for this work, but the contractor failed on account of the extraordinary quantity of snow that fell this winter, and the result was that we had to undertake the work ourselves, and we require more money. Victoria Post Office, British Columbia-This item is necessary to complete the work there, and to put in new lock boxes, patent fittings, some furniture, and to provide a small sum for superintendence. The Ottawa Drill Shed-making good damage by storm of 12th November, 1883.

Mr. MACKENZIE. As the Finance Minister keeps a prophet in his Department to prevent storms, I should like to know why he did not avoid the necessity for such an item as this.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. He is there to raise the wind

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. It appears he did raise the wind, because he destroyed our drill shed. The next item concerning the Victoria Chambers, Ottawa, is to pay for rent and improvements, as there was not sufficient space in the Geological Museum.

Mr. BLAKE. What is the "technical branch" of the Department?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. 1 think it may mean the draughtsmen.

Mr. MILLS. Is it true that the Geological Museum is being overcrowded?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I do not think it is overcrowded now. We have done all we could to give space, and I have not heard lately of any complaint in that direction. I understand that the officers in charge find the museum is sufficient, at all events for the present, but I have no doubt that before very long we shall require more space, and perhaps put another story on the present building.

PUBLIC WORKS-CHARGEABLE TO INCOME.

HARBOURS AND RIVERS.

Prince Edward Island.

Payment to the Government of Prince Ed-

249 3,000 00 Rustico harbour, revote of lapsed amount.....

Sir RICHARD CARTW.RIGHT. We would like to have very full explanations as to this, and to know in particular what amount of annual charge, if any, will be inflicted upon the country in consequence of this vote.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The Government of Prince Edward Island made application a year ago for the Dominion Government to assume the wharves and piers of the Island. The Government of Canada decided that there should be an examination made during the year of every pier and wharf on the Island, and the First Minister of Prince Edward Island and his colleagues asked that the local authorities might be present to give explanations. They were notified at the proper time, and when my officers examined these wharves and piers, the local authorities were present to give information, to call attention to the necessity of a pier, or the reason why the pier was made, and to give all necessary details. This work took, probably, six or seven months, and finally, a report having been made this Session, it was revised, examined and collated by the Chief Engineer of my Department. The work is very complete, and gives a full account of each one of these wharfs and piers. The result of that work and the report prepared by my Chief Engineer, make a volume as thick as a ream of paper. There is a plan of each wharf so that we can see at a glance where each wharf or pier is situated, and what por-tion of the country it benefits. The Chief Engineer made this report, and made a statement showing what each pier had cost, where situated, and what revenue it yielded; and then in another column it stated whether the pier was a local one or a Dominion one, and whether it was merely of a purely local character. The Chief Engineer reported in favour of accepting a number of wharves and piers, and the matter was then reported by me to the Privy Council for their information. A Committee of the Privy Council was appointed to examine the report and statements made by the Chief Engineer. I was a member of the Committee, and we reported to the Council in favour of a number of piers, but a number less than the number recom-mended by the Chief Engineer. That report was adopted by Order in Council which has been laid before the House.

Mr. DAVIES. Did the Sub-Committee report to the Privy Council that in their opinion the Council should accept fewer wharves and piers than the Chief Engineer recommended?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Yes.

Mr. DAVIES. Which did they reject of those which the Chief Engineer recommended?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. It is difficult to specify them just now. The hon. gentleman can find out from the papers which the piers were. The statement shows in one column the piers and wharves which were recommended by the Government of Prince Edward Island as the piers we should accept. In another column there is a statement of the piers and wharves which the Chief Engineer thought might be accepted. Then it is defined by Order in Council how many we have accepted; and, therefore, by comparing these statements, the hon. gentleman can obtain the information desired. I could give the names of the piers, but they would be of interest to only a few members. I may state that the total value is $53,222; the tolls collected from 1st February, 1873, to 1st January, 1883, eleven years, amounted to $6,096. The cost of the repairs will this year reach about $12,000, because these piers have not been kept up as they would have been kept up if the Local Government had not been satisfied we would accept them. They were somewhat neglected during the last twelve months as regards repairs,

Mr. DAVIES. They were totally neglected.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. They were not kept up as usual, because the Local Government thought, no doubt, we would assume them. Under those circumstances, $11,000 or $12,000 will be required this year to place them in good repair. The ordinary repairs will amount to between $3,000 and $4,000 yearly.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The hon. gentleman has failed, however, to state the principle on which this transaction is based-why it is applicable to Prince Edward Island and not to the other Provinces.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN, When Prince Edward Island entered Confederation, there was no selection of piers made, and they were left in the hands of the Local Government. We took over only three or four, and the Local Government have repeatedly called the attention of the Federal Government to the fact that the piers in the Island should be maintained in the same way as the piers in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. Our difficulty was to know which piers should be placed on the same footing as those kept up by the Dominion Government in other Provinces, and we had to make a thorough investigation, which resulted as I have stated.

Mr. DAVIES. I have examined the papers very carefully and I have failed to find that any principle has been adopted, or adhered to, in the selection of the piers and wharves. I do not think the management of the business reflects very much credit on those who had charge of it-I say this with due respect to the Minister-either as representing this Government or the Local Government. The application was made before the Session of the House last year. A deputation of the Local Government came here last year; brought all the information, and pressed the matter on the Dominion Government, telling them that they, the Local Government, would not assume the repairs of the piers during the then ensuing year, and if something were not done, the piers would go to wreck. The Local Government made no provision for repairs. The hon. Minister of Public Works did not determine whether the Dominion Government would maintain the piers, or any of them, and consequently, during last year, the piers and wharves were allowed to go to wreck, and thousands of dollars were absolutely lost to the tax payers, because some decision was not arrived at on this question. During the summer of last year wharves were falling to ruin, and one was almost floating away, because they were not looked after. The two Governments acted like children in this matter. Not one dollar was expended by either of the Governments, and the consequence was that a great many thousand dol-lars will nave to be expended to place the piers and wharves in the condition in which they might have been kept by the expenditure of a few hundreds. Leaving that point, I fail to see that the hon. gentleman has adopted any sound principle in the acceptance or rejection of these piers. The that he accepts or rejects these works accordingly as the re-Local Government claimed that the Dominion Government turns are large or small. Under these circumtances I would should accept 82, on which there had been expended since ask the hon. gentleman if the Federal Government did or 1873, $145,283. They claimed that the money which they did not take charge of these works, under the third schedule had expended on the piers, which now belong to the Do-minion Government, should be returned to them. The hon. gentleman did not allow that claim. He sent down inspectors, which was no doubt very proper for him to do, before arriving at a conclusion. He has accepted, on the report of the Chief Engineer, 25 piers. On what principle has he acted? The hon. gentleman or the Chief Engineer has accepted all the piers likely to pay any money, and the piers which are commercially failures are thrown on the hands of the Local Government. The hon. gentleman smiles, but the taxpayers of the Island do not smile. The hon, gentleman, I say, has taken those from which any revenue is obtained and thrown on the Local Government the balance.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The hon. gentleman is not fair. I stated we had assumed 26 piers. The hon. gentleman says we have assumed all the good piers which will furnish any good revenue. The hon. gentleman will see what revenue may be expected from the 26 piers, from my statement that the revenue for the last eleven years was $6,096.

Mr. DAVIES. What has been the revenue from those you have rejected? On what principle have you acted? These piers either belong to the Dominion Government or they do not. If they belong to the Dominion, you have a right to accept them; if they do not, you have no right. The hon. gentleman has not acted on that principle, but he has selected those which furnish most tolls and rejected those which do not pay well. And if I had time to do it I could show the hon. gentleman that the engineer has not proceeded on any principle. I assume that in accepting certain piers and leaving others to the Provincial Government, the hon. gentleman has been acting upon his construction of the British North America Act, which shows in the third schedule what works of this character belong to the Dominion. I say I suppose that is the principle upon which the hon. gentleman acted.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. No.

Mr. DAVIES. Then on what principle?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The hon. gentleman has stated that we did not accept them on any principle, and now it will be for him to show on what principle we should have acted.

Mr. DAVIES. Attached to the Engineer's report, there is a statement showing the names of the piers, and the amount of money expended on each since Confederation, the amount received in tolls, and the explanation of the grounds on which they are received or rejected. In one case, I find that a wharf is rejected because it is said, owing to the existence of a railway wharf in the vicinity, there is no necessity for assuming it. Now, Sir, this is not a question of whether the work is a necessity or not. It is surely not to be left to the discretion of a Chief Engineer to declare whether or not certain works shall pass to the Dominion Government under the British North America Act. The next one I can understand, as it is reported to be for local purposes only. The next is not recommended as Dominion property, as the Engineer states the traffic is nil. Now, Sir, I say that they do not become Federal property or Provincial property accordingly as the traffic is large or small; that is a question to be decided by the terms of the Act. In another case the Engineer says the revenue was not very large, and therefore he recommends that it be thrown upon the Local Government. I say the hon. gentleman is not acting on a fair principle, for the returns show of the British North America Act, and if they did not, on what principle did they take them?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The principle which has guided the Government in this matter has been this: That it was no reason for taking over these works, that the Local Government of Prince Edward Island thought proper to build piers at any particular place. We think that if they had built 200 or 300 or 500 piers, if they had built one at the door of every man living along the beach, that is no reason why they should assume them. We thought that we should assume only such as were of general benefit for Federal purposes. And when the returns show that there were only a dollar or two of revenue during eight or ten years, and that the pier was only for the benefit of three or four individuals in a neighbourhood, we said that that was absolutely a local matter and that we should not assume it. In some of the other Provinces there are numbers of piers which may be serviceable to particular localities, but we cannot assume all those piers. In this case we are asking Parliament to assume the piers which we think, after weighing all the circumstances, should be assumed by the Federal Government. The hon. gentleman says there were about 80 piers which were suggested by the Local authorities as piers which we should assume, I have not counted up the number, but no doubt the hon. gentleman is right. Well, we have recommended 25 or 26, which shows that we have been discriminating and trying to do the best we could for the Dominion Government and for the country, and at the same time we were looking to the interests of the Island, without forgetting that our duty was and is, not to assume all these little piers, but only such of them as may be considered of a Federal character. I was told the other day by a gentleman from the Island-I do not say he was a member of Parliamentthat there were three piers at a particular place, and that we had assumed only one. The idea apparently being that we should assume them all though they might be within a quarter of a mile of one another. I said to him we are assuming the important pier in such cases—the one to which the trade comes in that region; but previous to the railway being built the Island Government built a number of piers because the wants of the locality required them. Now that the railway has been built, a number of these piers and wharves have become about useless, being purely of a local and a very restricted local character. We have not assumed the use of these, and it is for the House to say whether we are right or not. The hon. gentleman must see, when he stated that we assumed those of the largest revenue, that during those eleven years the revenue has not been large. The largest revenue, I think, at one place during the eleven years, has been $1,300, and that is for the one at Georgetown. Another at Port Selkirk had a revenue of $860 for the eleven years. I have no doubt that these piers will not pay, but they are for the benefit of the country. They are for the export trade of the Island, and I think, under these circumstances, we have done what we could, and we can do no more.

Mr. DAVIES. So far as the case of some piers go which the hon. gentleman has rejected, I quite agree with him that they were not of a Federal character. But I say the Government should have proceeded upon a principle in each case-on the principle that those piers of a Federal character should be accepted, while it appears from the returns that he has rejected many of that character because the tolls upon them were not as large as he thought they ought to have been. And on the very report the Chief Engineer submits says that is so. But the hon, gentleman must come back to the reason why he accepted these piers. The fact of the matter is, I fear very much, that this money is voted to help the Local Gov-ernment out of a difficulty. They would not put on the taxation their predecessors put on in order to carry on the We have not to consider the interests of the Local Governaffairs of the Government; they ran in debt to the amount of $53,000, and that is the amount voted here. Now the British North America Act declared that certain wharves and piers which were the property of the Local Government at the time of the Union should pass into possession of the Dominion; and it is under that provision, and that alone, that the hon. gentleman can take these piers; but he should proceed on the principle he laid down in his speech, that those of a local character should be left, and those of a Federal character accepted. He has put a clause in his report to the effect that this money is not to be paid to the Local Govern. ment, unless they agree to accept it as a full discharge of their claims. Now, I understand that a Minute of Council has been passed by the Local Government, setting forth reasons why they should not accept this amount as a full discharge. I would like the hon. gentleman to state whether he laid down in his report to the Privy Council the principle he laid down in his speech, that those of a Federal character should be accepted. Now, I wish to call his atten-tion to the pier at Cape Traverse. That is a Dominion work; it has nothing local in its character. Some $9,000 was expended on that pier. Why did the hon. gentleman not accept it? Here is the reason given:

"The Dominion is now, through the Department of Railways and Canals, expending a large sum of money in the construction of a branch lice from the main line of railway in the Island to Cape Traverse, and the wharf at that place has been selected as the terminus on the Strait of Northumberland, and it is being repaired and extended for that pur-pose. In view of the great benefit to accrue from the construction and operation of this branch line, it is considered that the wharf in question wight the banded over towards facilitating the operations of the might be handed over towards facilitating the operations of the railway."

Now, if there was one pier in the whole number which the hon. gentleman should have accepted, it was that one. That pier forms part of the railway wharf at Port Traverse, and yet it was constructed at the expense of the Local Government. They have taken this pier, incorporated in their railway wharf and paid nothing for it. Now, I say that the Government in this matter have not adopted a principle that can be defended. The hon. gentleman knows right well that if this report is placed on our State Papers, there will be constant claims made by the Local Government on this account. If the Government had desired to accept only works of a Federal character, I could understand that principle. They have only taken those which they thought would pay well, and they have ust given the Island Government sufficient to enable them to pay the deficit with which they had to meet the Legisla-ture the other day—$53,000. The hon. gentleman has not adopted in his report the principle he laid down in his speech, of accepting those works of a Federal character, and rejecting those of a local character. It is not fair to ask this Parliament to pay for works of a purely local character; but you have rejected works which are more of a Federal character than those you have accepted.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I have not the same reasons which the hon. gentleman has for using this matter as he is using it at present-I have not to fight the Local Government of Prince Edward Island; I have no quarrel with them; and therefore I need not try to demolish them in this House where they cannot present themselves. If I wished to attack them, I would certainly try to obtain a seat in the Local Legislature, where I could attack them before their faces, and not here where they cannot defend themselves. With regard to the Minute of Council, which the hon. gentleman speaks of, I understand that some document has been received during the last few days; but my time has been so occupied that I have been unable to take up the matter. But I repeat that in this we have done the best we could for the Dominion. We took the piers that were considered Federal, and left those considered local. ment, but the interests of the country at large, and the interests of the Island at the same time. When the hon, gentleman is a little cooler, I think he will find that we have not done badly for the Island.

Mr. DAVIES. You have done very badly for the Island, but very well for the Local Government. Has the hon. gentleman come to any conclusion as to the tolls he is going to adopt for the wharves he has assumed ?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. As soon as Parliament has allowed us to assume these piers, we shall have to let them by public auction or public tender. As soon as they come into our possession, I have no doubt that either the Department of Marine or the Department of Inland Rovenue will take up the question of tolls.

Mr. BLAKE. We should have been better able to discuss this matter if the Government had laid on the Table the materials on which a judgment was formed. We are really voting this upon confidence. It is quite impossible for us to form any judgment as to whether any one or each of these piers came fairly within the spirit of the British North America Act, but the hon. gentleman says he has carefully considered the matter and the Government have reached a conclusion; and we have to assume that that conclusion is right instead of being able to judge for ourselves.

Mr. DAVIES. Will the hon, gentleman bring down before Concurrence the representations made by the Local Government which he says have just been received.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Isaid I knew some document had been received from the Island, but I do not know what it is.

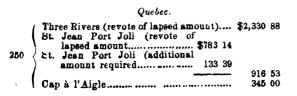

Mr. DAVIES. In all the Island papers, it is said a Minute in Council has been passed on the subject of the hon. Minister's report, and the Island Government in this paper attempt to show that he has not allowed sufficient money. The paper is said to be a very exhaustive one dealing with the whole subject, and I would like, before this matter is finally decided, to have an opportunity of discussing it.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The vote for Rustico Harbour of $3,000 is a revote.

Mr. DAVIES. The contractor for that breakwater, Mr. Pearce Doyle, has forwarded to the hon. Minister a memorial asking that certain allowance be made to him on account of damage to that breakwater through a fishing schooner being driven against it during a storm. I do not know whether that memorial has received the hon. Minister's attention or whether his reply is likely to be favourable.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I am not in a position to say whether such paper was received or not. A good deal of arrears has accumulated, and unless this matter is very pressing it must stand over until after the Session. If this gentleman has sent any claim of that kind, it will be investigated and he will be treated with justice.

Mr. DAVIES. I called the hon Minister's attention to it last Session.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. This amount of $916 was I think at a place in Cape Breton we promise voted for removal of a large shoal opposite St. Jean Port Joli. only this year that we will be able to send it.

It had been voted by Parliament last year, and when the Accounts came in, this amount had lapsed, and they asked to have it revoted with the addition of $133 required to complete the work. Cap à l'Aigle, the amount is a small addition to that voted last year for a wharf.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The statement is this: To cover a special warrant of His Excellency the Governor General to compensate Mr. Tait to the extent of $3,000 for the loss of the steam scow Adelaide, which was leased by him to the Government for use in connection with works of improvement in the River Assiniboine. It sunk while in the possession and under the superintendence of the Government clerk of works. The Chief Engineer instructed the clerk to raise the vessel, and he made an attempt to do so, but failed. Mr. Tait made a claim of $4,000, and the Chief Engineer reported, that in his opinion, the Department was liable for the loss, but that according to the information from the clerk of the works, he could not recommend the payment of any sum exceeding $3.000, and that if Mr. Tait would not accept this, the matter should be referred to the Arbitrators. Mr. Tait accepted the amount.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What part of the Assiniboine?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I cannot say the spot.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Did the charter of the vessel provide for the payment in case of shipwreck?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. She was entirely under the control of the Department, manned by our own people, and under the circumstances we could not help ourselves. I delayed as long as I could, but the proof was strong and it would have been useless to refuse payment.

Mr. MACKENZIE. It is a very unusual and improper arrangement to charter a vessel on such conditions.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The hon. gentleman will find out where this accident occurred and tell us before Concurrence.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Yes.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman says that in his opinion the Government was liable, but I concede it is a very unusual thing for those who charter a vessel to be liable for the perils of the sea.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I obtained the opinion of the Department of Justice that the Government was liable.

253 Dredging - Maritimes Provinces...... $8,000 00

Mr. VAIL. Is the hon, gentleman going to send a dredge again this year to Annapolis Basin?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I am not in a position to say where the dredges will be sent. There are some places where there is a necessity for them at the opening of the season, but the list will be made, and those which are most pressing will be taken first. At some places, we have been obliged to delay two years before the dredge could be sent. I think at a place in Cape Breton we promised it, and it is only this year that we will be able to send it.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. It seems to me rather odd, bracketing these two together, unless the High Com- missioner proposes to take charge of a detachment of infantry and cavalry. Perhaps these are to furnish guards. That would add greatly to the dignity and status of the hon. the High Commissioner. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will keep the second half of it for further discussion, and tell us what he pleases about these infantry school buildings.	Mr. CARON. The works which have been carried on so far by the Department of my hon. friend could not be completed so as to allow the infantry schools to be started at the time necessary to make them available for this season, and the expenditure so far has been carried on to as great an extent as possible in the time allowed. In the Supple- mentary Estimates for 1854-85, there will be an amount of money for the three schools of infantry, in Toronto, St. John's and Fredericton, and also for the cavalry
Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. At last Session, Parliament authorized the new school of infantry, or two or three of them, and these schools of infantry were announced to be, one at Toronto, one at St. John's, P.Q., and the other at Fredericton. The result of that decision was that we had to put in proper order the barracks and other buildings we had at Toronto, St. John's and Fredericton. The Depart- ment of Militia desired that we should proceed at once, and this work is now going on and will be completed in a very short time. Mr. WELDON. At Toronto, the building where the school is located, was a very good building, but was in a very bad state of repair. The structure itself was just as good as it was possible to get one. It was the old stone building constructed by the Imperial Government, but naturally, as it had not been re- quired for a number of years, it had fallen into very bad repair, and it was necessary to put it in proper repair in order to allow the infantry school to take possession of it. The same occurred in regard to the other schools, the buildings

Mr. BLAKE. Do I understand that some further expenditure beyond this amount has already taken place?

Mr. CARON. Not already-will take place.

Mr. BLAKE. I understood him to say some work was already going on.

Mr. CARON. The repairs which are being done now are being done by my hon. friend.

Mr. BLAKE. Are they covered by this vote?

Mr. CARON. No; I understand the repairs which are being made now are covered by the vote my hon. friend has brought down. The repairs which will be required, of course, I can only carry out after the 1st of July.

Mr. BLAKE. Then it is proposed that a portion of these repairs shall be carried on by the Minister of Public Works until the 1st of July, and from that date they shall be transferred to the hon. gentleman?

Mr. CARON. Yes.

Mr. RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. In regard to this item of $42,000 for house and furniture for High Commissioner for Canada, London, England, we want some information. Will the hon. gentleman explain whether everything is being done in a style suitable to the dignity of the high functionary who is to occupy this imposing mansion; and where is it, in the first place ?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. My hon. friend on my right will give these explanations, and I have no doubt the hon. gentleman who has just asked the question will be glad to find that this building will be put in such a position and such a style as that when any one of the hon. gentlemen opposite goes to replace my hon. friend, he will find this building a good and proper one for such a high functionary.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am sure, $Mr._{1}^{T}$ Chairman, that my hon. friends opposite jwho are willing to relieve me of my position here will be only too glad to learn that proper provision is made for the High Commissioner in London.

Mr. MACKENZIE. If you will only stay in one place.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I can promise that I will not be in two places at once. The facts are simply these: the High Commissioner for Canada has had no fixed residence in London, and the circumstance has given rise to a good deal of inconvenience. It was not found either desirable or convenient that the residence should be changed from one lodging, or from one hotel, to another, as would inevitably be the case unless there was some fixed and permanent residence. Under these circumstances I informed myself as well as I could where I could find a suitable position, and upon what terms a suitable building could be ob-tained. I made some enquiries through house agents and found that in Cromwell Road a very desirable part of London, a residence could be obtained at what was considered to be an extremely moderate rate. The negotiations were all made in reference to this matter through Mr. Thomas Reynolds, and I may say that Mr. Reynolds is himself the purchaser of the house-and when I say owner, I mean the owner of the lease for a term of years, and of the house adjoining the residence it is proposed to purchase. am glad to say that the Speaker of this House has had an opportunity of personally visiting and examining this residence, and he will be able to bear testimony that it is in every respect a desirable locality, and is a very suitable and appropriate residence for the representative of Canada in Kagland. Finding that this house could be purchased Mr. Reynolds negotiated with the owners and with the result of bringing down the price of the house to a very reasonable figure. It was built in 1877, and it was held at £9,000, or thereabouts.

chased for a term of, I think, about 70 years, which is the term the lease has to run-the figures are here now; in fact they have already been laid upon the Table of the House—with a ground rent of £70 a year for the sum of £5,125. Mr. Reynolds purchased the house on those terms, and he estimated that the sum required to place the house in a thorough condition, with the necessary sanitary arrangements, drainage, &c., and everything necessary to put it in a first class condition, will be embraced within the sum of £6,000. The estimate for the furniture is about £2,500, which sum will furnish it in a first class manner; and I believe that both the locality and the price of the building are such as will commend themselves to the judgment of the House as securing a proper and appropriate residence for whoever may have the honour of representing Canada in London in future, and upon terms that will be found very advantageous. As I said before I do not expect any opposition on the part of my hon, triends opposite to this proposed arrangement.

Mr. BLAKE. As well as I could judge from the papers the arrangement was that the House is leased for the sum of £575 a year with, I think, an option a purchase at £5,125, or 5,000 guineas. As well as I could make out the arrangement was effected between the Government and Mr. Reynolds, and at the present time, and, until this, arrangement for purchase is consummated, the House will be under lease.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I may say to the hon. gentleman that the case stands thus: Of course, the Government have no power or authority to purchase the house; all we could do was to lease it. But an arrangement was made in this way, that Mr. Reynolds became the purchaser and the Government became the lessee on these terms, but with an obligation on the part of Mr. Reynolds to transfer the ownership of the House to Canada for the amount paid by him with 5 per cent. interest until it was paid. But it stands in the meantime as a lease, until the purchase is consummated by an appropriation made by Parliament giving authority to my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works to purchase the building; but it is a lease with the option of purchasing.

Mr. BLAKE. This arrangement will stand, somewhere until October or November.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The time of assuming the purchase would commence about the first of January—not certainly before the last week of the present year. It was not to take place until the title was perfected and everything of that kind arranged, and possession was not given, nor any liability assumed until the very last week of the year.

Mr. BLAKE. So, practically, the result will be, if this is carried out, that we will pay 5 per cent. interest until the first of January, and, of course, pay the ground rent and taxes in the meantime.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes.

Mr. BLAKE. When we voted $4,000 a year for allow ances to the High Commissioner I enquired, not being aware that this arrangement had been made, whether that $4,000 was to be applied towards the expenses of house rent, taxes, &c., and the First Minister answered yes. But, under these circumstances, is would appear as if the public was to provide the house. What is to become of the $4,000 a year?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I understand the $4,000 was in lieu of house rent.

n the price of the house to a very reasonable Sir CHARLES TUPPER. If the hon. gentleman will as built in 1877, and it was held at £9,000, or allow me, I will state the way in which the matter stands. We found that the building could be pur- The House is aware from the papers laid on the Table, the communications that passed and the accounts submitted from the late High Commissioner that it was arranged that the rental of a house for a High Commissioner should be charged against $4,000 for contingencies; and I assume under the existing arrangement that the interest on the amount paid by the Government for a residence will be a charge against the contingencies to that extent, because those contingencies embraced the amount paid to the High Commissioner up to the present time for rental, or in whatever shape it might be.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Then the better way probably will be to reduce item 22.

Mr. BLAKE. The arrangement was this: Under the original arrangement, as I understand it, $4,000 were appropriated by the Government to provide for rent, fuel, light and taxes for Sir Alexander Galt during his residence in London. That continued only about a year. The Government then determined by Order in Council to give $3,500 out of the $4,000 as an allowance in lieu of rent, light, fuel and taxes, and from that time forward he recoived that in a bulk sum, and what became of the other $500 I do not know. When the present High Commissioner was appointed it was stated that his expenses were to be paid in the same way as were these of Sir Alexander Galt. If that had been literally carried out, he would have received a gross allowance, for the year commencing 1st July, and ending 30th June following, of $3,500. and the $500 would have been applied to some other contingencies of the office. Instead of that, although the statement was made that his expenses were to be paid in the same manner as were those of Sir Alexander Galt, a sum of £800, being as nearly as may be equivalent to $4,000, was applied for and received by the present Commissioner, I think in the month of August last; and a return was made by him some time-the date is not given on the paper, but it appears to have been some time in November or Decembershowing that he had expended £800 less £3 or £4. Therefore, the £300, which was an allowance to pay for rental, light, fuel and taxes for the whole fiscal year from 1st July last up to 30th June next, was expended during the six months the Commissioner was in London; and on the assumption of this purchase of a house, interest on $12,000 at 5 per cent. will have to be provided. With respect to this allowance I made enquiries from the hon. First Minister, and he answered that the matter would go on as before. It is clear that it cannot go on as before, because under the present arrangement, instead of a house being rented, the Government is purchasing a house.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. A simple plan would be to reduce item 22 from $1,500 to $2,500. How many years has the ground lease to run before the buildings fall in.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I think about 70 years.

Mr. BLAKE. How does it happen that this house in London, for which $\pounds 9,000$ was offered a year or two ago, is now offered for $\pounds 5,125$.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I said that in 1877 that amount was asked when the Heuse was first constructed.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not know how it comes about that this House is offered at such a reduced price, except from the fact that, when I was in London, I found that in some districts there was a considerable reduction in the value of property, owing to some apprehension existing in regard to sanitary arrangements. I heard of one case in which a gentleman built a very handsome mansion and disposed of it for one-third of its cost, and of another gentleman who sold for one-half what he had expended on his House. I should be sorry if this London house should prove to be in an unhealthy situation, as we understand that it is for the Commissioner's health we are making this arrangement, and we are expending a considerable sum in order to make the neighbourhood as healthy as possible. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would afford the Committee some information in regard to this investment in London, which is being made for the benefit of Canada.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. There has been no time for many years when house property has been so much depressed all over London as it is at present. Houses can be purchased at a much lower rate than formerly, so much so that parties are investing in house property, expecting an early return to normal prices, when they will secure a large interest on their investments. The chief attraction of Cromwell Road is its sanitary condition, and it is regarded as one of the most healthy parts of London. It is a gravelly district, which is especially sought after on account of sanitary considerations. There is no part of London which is looked upon with greater favour, and in fact so many persons were attracted there that house builders went into large speculations, in putting up enormous rows of buildings in that part of London, and in the meantime the place is technically overbuilt. The value of household property as I know from the investigations I made-is in a depressed condition, and we have purchased the property at a lower price than we could have had it for years. The house was held at a much larger amount, and in fact the parties had refused a larger amount at a comparatively recent date.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Is Canada alone in this business? Have the Australian colonies supplied their agents general with houses?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not know; but I do know that several of the agents of the Australian colonies and other countries are living in proximity to this property.

Mr. MILLS. In the same democratic neighbourhood.

Mr. BLAKE. Is this practice of providing residences for Ministers to be continued on this extensive scale?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I am afraid the hon. gentleman will have to give notice of that question, for it has not been considered yet.

Mr. BLAKE. Well, I object to it, at any rate.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I have no doubt we will have considered it before the hon. gentleman is ready for his residence.

Mr. MULOCK. I think it is to be regretted that it has been deemed necessary to submit such an item as this for the consideration of the House. It involves the permanent investment of a considerable sum of money in the purchase of property in another country, property of a more or less perishable character, and so long as the country is unfortunate enough to own it, a continued bill of expense will be the result. Every year we shall find provision in the Estimates for various expenses connected with this property. We know very well that when a person is provided with house-rent free, his demands on the landlord are generally much greater than if he were obliged to meet such demands at his own expense. In this case I believe it is proposed to spend £2,500 in the purchase of furniture. That is, I think, a wholly unjusti fiable expenditure, that class of property being of an espe-cially perishable character. There is no way of having supervision over it, no accountability, except the accountability of the tenant for the time being, and we shall constantly be having items in the Estimates for repairs, and improvements, and changes according to the whim of the High Commissioner. When we look at these figures, £6,000 for leasehold, and £2,500 for furniture, making as a mere start $42,000 in round numbers, and add to that the fact that we do not own the property, that there is a ground rent of £70 a year, also taxes I suppose, which will not be a light item, and when we consider that the investment on the future resources of the country, I for one object to the item, as I think it is wholly unnecessary for the proper management of the affairs of this country in England. Take the case of the United States they have what we might call Commissioners in various parts of the world. I believe it has been mentioned that in some parts of the world they have chosen to invest in this way. But the comparison is not a good one; we are not the United States. It may be necessary for them to invest such sums of money, but surely it is not justifiable for a young country like Canada to launch out in this way. I have not the figures showing what the office of High Commissioner costs, but if we take the salaries, the incidental expenses, and what is now proposed to be added permanently, we will find that the expenses of that office are something alarming. I regret that the item has been included in the Estimates, and I hope that the Minister of Railways will still think it better to have it omitted, and allow whoever may be for the time being the High Commissioner, to select his own quarters, and let us make an appropriation of cash for that particular purpose. We would then, at no sacrifice, be able to reduce the expenditure any year, by discontinuing the present system and making a change. But permanently to invest this amount of capital in this way puts us in the position of being compelled to pay a large sum of money in annual additional charges, and if we desire to discontinue the system and sell the property we are most unlikely to get back any considerable portion of the money.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The hon. gentleman deolores very much the expense of office of High Commissioner. When I tell the hon. gentleman that in one item alone the saving, since the appointment of a High Commissioner, in connection with the coinage required in this country, would pay the entire expense of the office of High Commissioner, over and above the amount expended for the same service by the late Government, the hon. gentleman need not be anxious on that score.

Mr. MULOCK. Would not the hon. gentleman be as well able to discharge the duties of the office, and effect these savings, if he had a house selected by himself, as well as if he occupied one which is owned by Canada? I was speaking of the expense of the office.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The hon. gentleman must not be captious. I was dealing with his statement not as to the residence but as to the office; the hon. gentleman knows it, and he cannot escape it. I say there is no increase of expenditure in connection with this arrangement. The hon. gentleman knows that all he can do is to raise the question of the expense of the office, and I say that in one item alone, independent of the other services of the office, the entire cost of the office from the day of its creation down to the present hour has been discharged by the money saved by the Government in that item, over and above what the late Government paid for the same service.

Mr. MULOCK. I say that the hon. gentleman should not himself be captious. I did not object to the office itself, but to the cost; the increasing cost in connection with incidental and other expenses.

Mr. BLAKE. I cannot agree with the hon. gentleman in the view that this will not ultimately add to the expense. Nominally it may, but in reality it will not. I make out that the interest on the cost of the building, $30,000, when the repairs are made, at 5 per cent., will be $1,500. The furniture costs $12,500, and the usual rental allowance for furniture, having regard to the wear and tear, is 15 per cent., which would be $1,875. The ground rent is $350, making a total real charge of $3,725 per annum, irrespective altogether of the items of repairs, fuel, light, taxes and insurance. Unless, therefore, some other arrangement is to be made, it is obvious that the substantial result will ultimately be a very considerable increase of cost.

Mr. BLAKE. What is this extra voto for ?

Mr. McLELAN. A considerable expenditure was made last year in renewing and lengthening the police boat, which is represented by part of this vote. A portion of it has also been necessitated by an increase of the force, during the strike of 1882.

Mr. BLAKE. How much is due to the boat, and how much to the other expenditure?

Mr. McLELAN. The expenditure on the boat, I think, is $1,500.

Mr. BLAKE. Is the other part for additional pay to the same men, or more pay because there were more mon?

Mr. McLELAN. There were more men, and some of the men we kept employed during the winter.

Mr. VAIL. May I ask the hon. gentleman whether it is his intention to confine the bounty to the same sized boats that he did last year?

Mr. McLELAN. Last year fourteen feet was established as the minimum length.

Mr. VAIL. I am told that a great many fishermen use a much smaller boat—not more than twelve feet in length and that a great many have lost their share in the bounty in consequence. I am quite aware that there must be some fixed length; but if the Minister had asked for information on this subject, I think he would have found that many fishermen using such boats ought to get a share of the bounty. I think he might fix the limit at twelve feet top, instead of fourteen feet keel.

Mr. McLELAN. I gave the matter considerable attention, and I concluded that fourteen feet was the lowest limit we could properly adopt. If we adopted twelve feet, there would be complaints from those who use nine and ten feet boats.

Mr. DAVIES. Who are the officers for whom this vote is taken, and what is the nature of the services they perform?

Mr. McLELAN. It is necessary that we should employ some persons to examine the claims that come in, to certify to their correctness, and to see that the cheques are given to the right person. We have employed the Customs officers and certain fishery wardens and overseers, who only receive nominal pay, and it is proposed to pay them so much per claim-15 cts, or thereabouts-for the claims that they return. We cannot fix a regular rate, because in some localities very much more work is to be performed that in others; but it is thought that we shall require this sum.

Mr. DAVIES. Are these officers to travel from station to station, or will the fishermen be required to go to the Custom house officer to make their claims? If so, there is no reason for any distinction.

Mr. McCLELAN. Very often the return has to be sent back for correction, and in that case the officer must go round and make enquiries regarding it.

Mr. BLAKE. In what part of this vote shall we find Mr. Ogden ?

Mr. McLELAN. Mr. Ogden was employed about eight months altogether the past year to vorify claims in the County of Halifax, and other counties where there are a great many presented.

Mr. DAVIES. How can he verify the statements? A declaration is made by the fishermen of the quantity of fish caught and the declaration is sworn to.

Mr. McLELAN. Ho can see that no fraudulent declarations have been made.

After Recess.

Mr. BLAKE. Could the hon. gentleman give us further explanations about this item. I do not think that the course he suggests as to the payment of these subordinate officers who are to obtain the necessary information is one which will be found to work well in practice. As 1 understand the hon. gentleman, he said they could not make a regular tariff, because in many cases, the returns would be defective and the officers would have to send them back again. It would be better to establish a tariff inclusive of anything of that kind, because if you establish extra remuneration in the case of defective returns, you will find more defective statements and more correspondence than by the arrangement I propose. What is the scale of remuneration, because this matter has now been in operation for some time? Is any portion devoted to the inside service at Ottawa? Has the hon. gentleman ascertained that frauds have been committed? If so to what extent?

Mr. McLELAN. A number of claims have been sent back for investigation, and some of these have been found to be fraudulent and have not been paid. In one or two localities, complaints have been made that claims have been paid which were fraudulent; investigation is being made into these complaints, but in no case have these investigations been concluded. It has been intimated in giving notice to present claims that where parties made fraudulent claims they would be debarred from any participation in the benefits of the bounty, and it is to be hoped this will prevent the presentation of fraudulent claims. Last Session a sum was voted for the payment of clerks in the inside service who had devoted extra time to this work. There is an enormous amount of work connected with the payment of this bounty in so many small sums, involving the necessity of issuing about 45,000 cheques in the year 1882. It was decided that it would be more satisfactory to make the payments to these fishermen claiming it who wore in the v(ss)ls rather than to the owners or captains of the vessels. This work was thrown suddenly on the Department, and it was considered advisable to train clerks in the Department for this work, and to even use them fors extra services in extra hours in order to meet the emergency thus thrown on the Department. Last Session, the House will remember, $3,000 or $4,000 was voted for that purpose, which was for the appointment the fish caught. It is very important, as the hon. member of some of the officers of the Department for that extra ser. for Queen's, Prince Edward Island, said the other night, vice. For the present year, I have not called upon the officers of the Department for so much extra work, having taken in several hands and having, perhaps, more time to apportion the payments. The principal portion of the sum asked for here is for the outside service. The officers of Customs more particularly declined to have this work thrown upon them unless there was some intimation given to them that there would be some remuneration for it. I propose that the sum fixed for each claim forwarded by each officer shall be the same as a basis, but that where extra labour has been imposed on the officer before the claim has been verified, he shall receive special consideration. As a rule, however, the remuneration will be the same, and that will be fixed at from 10c. to 15c. for each claim. I think about 12c. will be fair unless it is shown afterwards that there have been extraordinary services performed.

Mr. VAIL. I can easily understand that collectors cannot be expected to do this work without some remuneration. and I think it would be better to confine this work to the collectors. I think it would be more satisfactory than to give it to the wardens and inspectors. The collectors, as a rule, know all the fishermen in the districts in which they reside, and I am sure they are a class of men who would keep a pretty bright look out that no frauds were committed. The Minister says there have been some frauds. I would like to know if that has been since the last circular was issued.

Mr. McLELAN. Previous.

Mr. VAIL. Under the circumstances, I think that, unless it can be proved that these returns which are made under oath have been falsified in some way and are not reliable, we may infer for the future that the returns will be satisfactory, and that there will be very few frauds. My opinion of the fishermen is that, as a rule, when there is this strict instruction that they shall be debarred from receiving the bounty in future if they make a fraudulent return, taken in connection with the fact that the return is made under oath, you may be pretty sure in future that the returns will be reliable. I think it would be better that the collectors should do this work, but I quite agree with the Minister that they ought to receive a fair remuneration. They have to attend to other duties, and, though the remuneration might be small, it would be something of a compensation for the work done. and their salaries are small as a rule.

Mr. KIRK. I do not agree with the hon. member for Digby (Mr. Vail) in his conclusion that this work should be confined to the collectors of Customs, because there are very few of them throughout the country, and the fishermen must travel to the place where they can make these returns, and, if they have to travel to the collector of Customs, they would in many cases rather lose the money than do so. That is the complaint now in Guysboro' that they have to travel too far, and would rather do without the money. Many of them had to travel 30 miles, and 30 miles going and 30 miles coming is worth almost $5. The Minister knows very well that very few fishermen keep horses and carriages to allow them to drive cheaply to make out these returns, and I think it is very necessary to appoint officers in convenient places for them to make the returns out.

Mr. McLELAN. I quite agree with the hon. member for Guysboro' (Mr. Kirk) that it would be as well to place it as much as possible in the hands of the fishery overoers and wardens. There are more of them. They are located where there is fishing, as a general rule, or should be; they are in the neighbourhood of the fisheries, and it is their business to make returns to the Department of that there should be reliable statistics of the catch of fish in the Dominion, and that there should be some inducement held out to the fishery officers scattered over the Dominion to make correct returns of the catch of fish. I think, by giving them some remuneration in connection with this bounty, their attention will be more turned to the matter, and they will be better able to get the correct catch of fish than the collectors of Customs would, or than they now do, not having this inducement, and not being brought so directly in connection with the fishermen. Of course, they should be in connection with the fishermen during the season of catch, but I fear very many of them are a little lax in their duties. If this additional inducement were given to them, they would pay more attention to the service, and would be more likely to send us correct returns, which, in connection with the Treaty of Washington, it is now very important to have. I hope to be able to organize statistics of fisheries in connection with this, and to have the assistance in that matter of the different wardens and overseers of fisheries throughout the Dominion.

Mr. GILLMOR. I am very glad to hear the Minister of Fisheries state that he proposes to ascertain by some means or other the catch of fish in the Dominion. I, of course, can only guess at the catch of fish in the county I represont, but it is very large, and we get only a very small account of the fish that are caught in that locality. It is situated on the frontier, and their salt fish and their fresh fish and their herrings go in year after year without any return at all. I venture to say the Customs returns do not show more than 25 per cent. of the fish caught in the county of Charlotte. Now, with regard to this question of the bounties, I think the Minister has suggested the very best mode. There is no one can tell so well to whom the bounty should be paid as the fishery wardens. There are several of them in convenient localities, and they are all fishermen and know the fishermen in their localities, in the area over which they have supervision. The collectors of Customs cannot begin to do it. They know very little about the fishermen, who are and who are not fishermon, and the wardens and overseers are the very best men to attend to the matter, and I think that very little would be required of any other class of officers, unless it were to go and investigate some misunderstanding or difference which might exist. I think, too, that the wardens are entitled to pay for their services, because you are aware they get a very small remuneration now for their duties as wardens. They know every man who is a fisherman, they know all about the matter, and you could not get any class of men so competent to discharge these duties as the the fish-wardens. Certainly I think the business could be done very well without the oversight of the collector of Customs at all. I do not think there is to-day any other class of officers better qualified for this position. Of course some of them may not be reliable, but as a rule I think you can depend upon them to attend to this matter more efficiently than any one clse. I will just take this opportunity to speak to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries with regard to the catch of fish. Nearly every portion of that part of the Dominion is convenient to the frontier. Smoked tish goes from the fish houses on the shore into the United States, but no, account of them is taken. Fresh herrings all go that way and many other kinds of fish, yet we have no account of them whatever. I think the fish wardens, with very little difficulty, would be the very class of men to keep an approximate account of the catch of fish in their own localities, and would be able to give very nearly the correct figures. This is an important matter in view of the negotiations that may arise with the United States in reference to our fisheries.

he has said of the fish wardens visiting the rivers. I do not scarce and dear. Now, Sir, those who are capable of judging hesitate to say that, as a rule, they do not leave their homes once a year to visit the rivers.

Mr. KIRK. In the Province of Nova Scotia the Minister must be aware that the fish wardens are only appointed for the rivers, to protect the river fisheries. There are no fish wardens on the shore at all. For instance, in county of Guysboro', for a distance of nearly 100 miles, there is but one fish warden that I know of in the whole district, and I think that is the case all round the coast of Nova Scotia. The wardens are up on the rivers, not on the sea coast at all. I would like to enquire from the Minister whether it is the wardens or the collectors of Customs whose duty it is to receive declarations and see that they are filled out properly, and whether they have authority to return to the fishermen the declarations that they think are not properly made out. If I am correctly informed fishermen last year were allowed to make out their declarations at home before a justice of the peace, and swear to them, and then the wardens sent them to the fishery overseer or to the collector of Customs. In cases of that kind I would like to enquire whether it is the collector of Customs or the fishery overseer who has a right, if he thinks these declarations were not properly made out, to return them to the fishermen themselves for correction-or should they forward them to the Department?

Mr. McLELAN. If it is apparent to the official that they are incorrect, he should return them to the party making them out, certainly.

Mr. VAIL. It has been the practice, and I want to know if it is the rule of the Department that the fish warden's duty is confined to the river fisheries.

Mr. McLELAN. No.

Mr. VAIL. That is the way I understood it. Of course, I do not wish to be understood as laving down a cast iron rule for the whole Province, but I am not aware of any duties of these officers which cannot be done by the collectors of Customs. Speaking of my own county, which is one of the largest fishing counties in Nova Scotia, I find there are four fish wardens in the county, and another one was recently appointed, and every one of these five men all live within a stone's throw of the collector in their respective ports. These men have to see that the returns are made out in proper shape, and pay over to the fishermen the amount that may be due them, and I do not see why these duties may not be just as well performed by the collectors, who are all responsible mon. Of course the wardens are also very good men, but I cannot help think. ing that the business would be better done by the officials in charge.

Mr. DAWSON. There can be no doubt that the exhibition at home last year did a great deal of good to this country by attracting the attention of the civilized world to our inexhaustible resources in fish, both in the ocean and in the great lakes. We had a magnificent display, the nature of which can be seen in Ottawa now at the Victoria Hall. I think, Mr. Chairman, that it will have a good effect in the future in drawing the attention of the business men of Europe to the resources of this country. But we have resources of other kinds as well as of fish which we ought to make known to the world. Now, during the coming summer, in the month of August, I believe, there will be held a great Forestry Exhibition at Edinburgh, in Scotland. I think it very desirable that we should do as we did in the case of fisheries-have a collection of the products of the country and a collection of our forest trees at this great International Exhibition. We have woods now of very great value but which are little known abroad. It is well known that very valuable kinds of wood in Europe and other Mr. PAINT. The hon. gentleman is mistaken in what countries, such as walnut, and mahogany, are becoming very believe that we have in this country woods which are equally valuable, equally ornamental, and equally as good in every other respect as the woods of Europe. Take, for instance, the beautiful birds eye maple; if that could be brought into notice I have no doubt a great trade would arise in that article. At present, I am sorry to say, it is being burnt off in great quantities by the settlers in the district I have the honour to represent, more especially on the Islands of Manitoulin and St. Joseph. There were magnificent forests of the finest maple which are now being swept away. Now, if people in Europe knew about this wood, and knew its value, it is quite evident that a very good trade might arise in it. There are certain kinds of our woods which are well known, such as pine, which goes home every day, but we have other woods which may be in the fature equally valuable that are not so well known, such as our black birch and oak. Our pine is well known at home, but there are many other kinds of woods that are not so well known. I would, therefore, suggest to the Government the desirability of making a small appropriation for the exhibition of Canadian woods at home, and to draw attention to the value of our forest products.

Mr. SPROULE. 1 endorse every word of the hon. Mem-ber for Algoma. I think we cannot over estimate the importance of the Fisheries Exhibition last year, particularly in view of the fact that the fishery arrangements with the United States are likely soon to terminate, and we shall have to look for another market. The suggested exhibition of native woods would possess great importance. I am aware that a gentleman in Ontario has employed a large number of men during the last few years in getting out small sections of woods and taking them to the old country, and he has found it very profitable. If the exhibition was made, as suggested by the hon. Member for Algoma, it would result in opening up a very extensive and desirable market for Canadian woods, which to day are being burnt up for fuel.

261 To er enable the Department to rebuild indian houses in the Village of Kemisquit, on the West coast of Vancouver Island. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The estimates state fully the purpose for which the vote is required. It seems a rather extraordinary proceeding-it sounds more like an action on the coast of Madagascar or Africa than on the coast of British Columbia. Her Majesty's ship Rocket went to that coast five or six years ago to look for witnesses as to a murder committed when the ship Geo. S. Wright was wrecked there. The Indians took to the woods, being frightened, and the captain of the ship coolly canonaded the village and destroyed the buildings. The case was stated very fully in the report of Superintendent Powell, made two years age. That officer reported :

"The natives of Kemisquit have never recovered from the destructive a steamer that had been lost a couple of years prior, the crew of which at that time, it was supposed, had been murdered by the Indians. The witnesses had escaped to the woods, and not being produced, the village was, I tink, unfortunately and too hastily shelled. "The Chief, who was absent at the time, informed me that bearing firing from the ship, his people had been greatly frightened, most of them running away. They complained greatly of the injustice by which they had been, without warning, treated in this affair, and as there was no lumber to be purchased in the locality, they had been unable to rebuild their village and were driven to shift as they beat could in the bush—a number of them dying from exposure and want during the following winter.

winter. "The Chief begged for my intercession, and hoped some assistance would yet be granted them. "There is, after all, no reason to believe that the crew of the ill-fated steamer Wright had been foully dealt with, and, in this view, their case is certainly a hard one and deserving, in my opinion, of practical and humane consideration. There being no saw mill within three hundre i miles, they can only hue out building material in a rude manner by "These Indians being remote and isolated, they have not the same opportunities of making money and of consequent recuperation, and I earnestly hope that you may concur in the desirability of some appropri-ation for relieving their distress."

Mr. BLAKE. Who was captain of the vessel?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. We know who he is, but I have forgotten his name. I think the papers were sent home to England, to the Imperial Government. I think the Committee will agree to Superintendent Powell's recommendation.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I think Her Majesty's Government should have been called on to pay this amount; but it is not worth while disputing a matter of $1,200 with the Imperial authorities.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not think we should apply to the Imperial Government for payment of the amount. We obtain the benefit of the service of the Imperial officers, and must take the rough with the smooth; but I must say that this was a most inhuman and barbarous action on the part of this officer, and may be productive of lasting results. Wo know that, although these Indians are isolated, there are means of communication between the bands, and a report of an affair of this description will spread far and wide after a time, and the consequences, apart from the act itself, may have a lasting ill effect. So I hope the First Minister will make sure that a report has been sent to England; because while I would not claim the $1,200, I would claim that the officers in the Imperial service who discharge a duty of this description, in which they committed a very grave error, and who would be sharply dealt with if it were committed elsewhere, should be equally sharply dealt with by the Imperial authorities in this case.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I quite agree with everything the hon. gentleman has stated. We cannot ask Her Majesty's Government for the money, because they are not obliged to assist in the administration of justice. They are, however, always ready to do so. It is known that Her Majesty's Government and the Admiralty had a serious intention of removing the squadron to Valparaiso. That met with a strong remonstrance, however, as it was thought that our trade might be interrupted, and that, beside, it might be necessary to get assistance in case of a sudden émeute among the Indians up in the vicinity of Alaska. It was promised that one ship or more would always be stationed there for such emergencies. As the hon. member for West Durham said, we must take one thing with the other, and not press for any demand, as there will be a discussion in the English House of Commons about the matter, and they will be asked why they did bombardment of their village five years ago by the Rocket, now, "The ship had visited the village with the police for the purpose of Mr. Davsers." Mr. Davsers not employ the fleet. At the same time, I may say, that the conduct of the officer was such that it was brought under in accordance with Treaty stipulations, 1,000 00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Perhaps the hon. First Minister will give some information in regard to this vote.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The Indians, I am happy to say, have settled on their reserves very well. Last year on some of the reserves, crops of wheat of moderate dimensions were raised, showing that the Indians have taken to the growing of wheat. There were, however, no means of grinding their grain, and the Indian Commissioner has recommended, and pressed his recommondation very strongly, that four small mills should be put up on the Indian reserves, so that the grain may be ground up into food. I may say with reference to these mills, that it is not the intention of the Department to set up the mills, as that is rather an expensive operation, along with employing millers, &c. This money will be used as bonuses to get millers to start mills in the vicinity of the reserves. These mills will be useful for the purpose of grinding the Indian products, and the bonuses will be given to induce the parties to build larger mills, so as to supply the settlements as settlers come in.

Mr. WATSON. Do the mills require to be a certain size in order to get the bonus?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Of course, we will see that sufficiently large mills are built, and if there is any immediate prospect of a white settlement in the vicinity, of course we may have to give a large bonus. I may say, that an arrangement has been made at Battleford for the the erection of a large mill there, a gentleman agreeing to build such a mill if he got the bonus.

Mr. MILLS. Does the hon. gentleman propose to ask for tenders stating the smallest bonus for which parties will erect the mills, or will private arrangements be made ?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I may say that at Battleford, there were one or two offers made, and a gentleman who represented considerable capital, and who was, in fact, a large trader, agreed if he got this bonus, that he would put up a large mill. If you offer it by tender, parties who are without capital may offer to put up a small mill for this money, whereas the object is to get a larger class of mills, so as to meet the future necessities of the country.

Mr. WATSON. I suppose that it will be advertised in the papers that these bonuses will be given.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Full notice will be given.

Mr. WATSON. I suppose the man who builds the largest mill will get the money.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The largest and best.

Mr. BLAKE. Let it be understood that a certain amount of bonus will be given for a certain minimum sized mill, with a certain power and capacity. Then there will be an opportunity for several persons offering, and it might be the means of getting exactly the right man. This might not be done unless there was public notice.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. We will, of course, give every publicity. Of course one man may offer to put up a steam mill, another may say that he will put up a water mill or a windmill, and it is of great importance that we should have large and good mills, so as to meet not only the requirements of those who get their grain ground by toll, but for future purchasers as well. Full jublicity will be given and we will try to get the best men.

to the family of the late Geo. E. McLaughlin, Engineer in charge of works in the Maritime Provinces	$333 32

Mr. BLAKE. What is the meaning of this vote?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. This officer was an engineer of the Department since the 1st of June, 1872, and like a number of other engineers he was not on the Civil Service staff. But he was continued from year to year, and was a little over cloven years in the service. He has always been a most faithful officer, and we thought that under the circumstances we should ask Parliament to allow his widow the two months' gratuity which we generally allow to the officers of the Civil Service.

Mr. BLAKE. It is of course difficult to object to a vote that appeals to one's sympathies for a widow, but after all it is a question of principle. We have adopted the rule, right or wrong, that we shall allow two months' gratuity to the widow of those who die in the Civil Service; but we have not extended it beyond the permanent service thus far. I have always felt that in the case of those very highly placed in the Civil Service, such as judges, the gratuity was rather out of the way, though in the case of those who are more moderately salaried it may be reasonable. But if you are going to extend the rule beyond the permanent service, I do not see why it should not be done on some principle.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I agree with the hon. gentleman that there might be a rule adopted. But it should be somewhat elastic, so that the Government might be allowed to recommend, or not to recommend, its application according to the services rendered. In this case, Mr. McLaughlin entered the outside service of the Departmenton the 1st of June, 1873, and was constantly engaged, up to the date of his death, on works in the Maritime Provinces. He had very superior attainments, and his place will not be easily filled. Though not of a very robust constitution, he gave himself up entirely to his work, and during the eleven years that he was in the service he did not take a holiday. He worked until it became physically impossible for him to continue, and he was obliged to ask for leave of absence. He had hopes of recovery, but the anticipated change did not take place, and he died in October, 1883, in harness. Under these circumstances, we thought Parliament would not object to this vote.

Mr. BLAKE. I think if there were any rule, it certainly ought to embrace Mr. McLaughlin.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What will be the total cost of the exhibition?

Mr. McLELAN. About $36,000.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Will the hon, gentleman give us the details of this item?

Mr. McLELAN. I had hopes that the reports would be published by this time. The memorandum I have does not give the details very fully. The expenditure for preparing specimens was $24,583; the expenditure in London was $3,843; and the expenditure in Ottawa, $10,100. This statement is for the fiscal year. The total expenditure in London was about $16,000. I do not think the cost of the exhibit has been excessive, considering the difficulties that beset us, and the fact that we had to purchase almost everything that was exhibited. In the case of many other exhibitions, private exhibitors furnish the exhibits themselves, and defray a considerable portion of the expense of transport; yet the cost of this exhibit has been something less than that for the Paris exhibition. This vote covers the cost of bringing back a number of the specimens, which are in Ottawa. A considerable portion were also left in London, with the agency of the Dominion Government. It was believed that they would be useful for exhibition at various exhibitions in the country, where the immigration agents desired to have Canada represented by some display of her products.

Mr. MILLS. This no doubt made a very handsome show, and I dare say the hon. gentleman had an agreeable trip; but apart from that, the hon. gentleman has not stated what advantage the country has derived and what advantage he expects will be derived from this exhibition. We know that " gentleman of very great experience connected with this Department came to the conclusion there would be no real or substantial gain to the country by a Fishery Exhibition in London. The hon. gentleman speaks about sending those specimens into the various parts of the United Kingdom where our agents are seeking to persuade emigrants to come to this country, but in what way does he expect these ex-hibits will induce immigration to Canada. Certainly he does not expect to induce parties from the interior of England, Scotland and Ireland to engage in the business of fishormen. When so large an expenditure as this has taken place, we ought to have had very full explanations; the hon. Minister should point out in what way he expects the country is to be recouped for this expenditure.

Mr. McLELAN. If the hon, gentleman had followed the reports given throughout the press of that exhibition, he would see that the very fact that we make an exhibit of the fish of the Dominion, which surpasses the exhibit of fish from any other country, must have had a great effect on people who were considering the question of emigration. It must have had a great effect in inducing them to come to a country in which there is not only on the sea shore, but in the lakes and the rivers, as the specimens exhibited demonstrated, abundance of excellent fish, and this must have an important bearing on the decision which a man will arrive at, as to whether he will emigrate to Canada or to some other country. I may state that during the six months that exhibition lasted, there was a continual throng of visitors examining | cost printed under our contract?

these products, and very many were examining them specially with the view of emigration to this country. At that exhibition, we had the large map which is now in the Railway Committee room; we had a gentleman from Ontario stationed there to point out the different localities, the different rivers and lakes in which these fish may be found in abundance. An immense number of pamphlets bearing on immigration were distributed there by that gentleman. The Government of Ontario, at the same time, had their officer also distributing immigration literature, and the Canadian Pacific Railway had also a stand there for the same purpose, showing the products of the North-West in grains, minerals, &c. A full report of the whole matter will be published at an early day.

$28 CO of a steamer, and other expenses in con-nection with survey of Georgian Bay.... 22,000 CO

Sir RICHARD CART WRIGHT. Is it necessary to buy a steamer for this work ?

Mr. McLELAN. It will be more economical in the long run. Last season we had one hired ; this year we have invited tenders, and we think we will have the offer of one at a very low rate, which will be run very economically and be disposed of after the survey is over.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Is this an annual vote?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. There was a vote last year, and it was decided we would give another vote this year to start the Royal Society and to enable them to publish their transactions. I do not know if the hon. gentleman has seen their first volume, but is a most creditable work, not only in the way it is got up but in the value of the papers on scientific, geological and historial subjects. They are really very valuable papers, as far as an inexpert like mysolf can judge.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What on earth is the explanation of this? Here is not only a vote for printing but for absolutely buying type for preparing Civil Service Lists. What can there be in Civil Service Lists to make it necessary that type should be bought at the expense of the country?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. My colleague the Secretary of State not being in his place, I have not the papers to explain them. As far as I recollect the case, this work was given to that gentleman, the publisher and proprietor of that paper, for the printing of the Civil Service Lists in French and English, and it was found that some of these lists would have to be published every year; that it would be more economical that, at the same time, the type might become the property of the Government and the type could remain standing and corrections only take place each year; and the publication every year would thus cost very little, apart from the first investment; therefore, this type has been purchased and the publication of the work paid.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Will the hon. gentleman show me what those lists are.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The hon. gentleman must have had a copy or two at the beginning of this Session. Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What would they have

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I cannot say, but the account was certified to by the Queen's Printer.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. We ought to know what possible occasion there can be to take this out of the hands of our contractor and hand it over to Mr. de la Bruère, the publisher of the Courrier de St. Hyacinthe, unless it be for the purpose of providing a job for that gentleman and providing him with the type. This is one of the most extraordinary items I have ever seen in all my life put down in the Supplementary or other Estimates, and I can only suppose it is designed to make this gentleman a present of a large sum of money at the public expense for services not herein described, but which may be known to the hon. gentleman.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The hon. gentleman is rather too suspicious. The type was not given to that publisher; it was purchased for the purpose from the foundry and kept by the Government. It is in the office of the Secretary of State, and is to be used for the purpose I have mentioned just now. By the change of a few words, the lists will be ready each year at very small expense, and apart from the first year, the publication will be very inexpensive.

Mr. BLAKE. Could not all this have been done through our contractor? Could it not have been done in Ottawa by McLean, Roger & Co.? Is it only at St. Hyacinthe this could be done?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Perhaps so; but perhaps also the work to be performed at that period was so heavy that it was found necessary to give this as outside work.

Mr. SOMERVILLE (Brant). I understand that this work was not done at a time when the contractors were busy at all. In the course of the Session I moved for a return in reference to this expenditure, and 1 may say a few words of explanation in regard to it. The practice I wish to refer to was adopted after the discussions which took place in the Public Accounts Committee last year, with reference to outside printing, which amounts to a very large sum annually. Last year it was $42,000 for outside printing and lithographing. The attention of the Public Accounts Committee was called to this expenditure last year, and several accounts of the same character were asked to be certified by the Auditor-General, who refused to do so, and, in refusing to do so, stated :

"The work done comes under the head of Parliamentary printing, for which there is a special contract with Messrs. McLean, Roger & Co. As my duty under section 32 of the Audit Act, I have ascertained the rates at which the work could have been done under the contract, and I enclose a statement comparing these rates with those claimed. I am unable to authorize payment of a greater amount than the $188.05 therein named."

To pay an account which amounted to $368.60. He goes on further to say:

"I have given the subject of Parliamentary and Departmental print-ing much consideration since it was discussed before the Public Accounts Committee last Session, and I cannot see that I am justified in passing any account, unless one of the following conditions is fulfilled: "1. That when the work would naturally be done at Ottawa, the rates are those allowed to the contractors.

"2. That when the work could not be done at Ottawa, without incon-venience, the rates are current ones for transactions of the same magnitude.

I may state here that this decision of the Auditor-General, who I believe is an independent officer of this House, was overruled by the Treasury Board, and these accounts were ordered to be paid by that Board. With reference to this account, which was brought down in answer to a request for a return, the Auditor-General says, in transmitting the account:

"You will notice that no expenditure has yet been made under the warrant for $2,688.74."

from it, to show the extraordinary charges which are made for work which ought to have been done by the contractors at the contractors' prices. The type was not taken into consideration in his calculation at all. The Auditor-General reduced the amount of the account, which was $3,757.62, to $1,900.38, taking off $1,857.24. For composition, the Queen's Printer allowed $1,400, at the rate of 50 conts por thousand. The contractors' rate is 25 cents, and the Auditor-General reduced the amount from $1,400 to $700. For press work, the Queen's Printer authorized the payment of 50 cents per token, amounting to $67.50. The Auditor General reduced the account to the contractors' price of 10 cents per token instead of 50 cents, and allowed $13.50. For the composition in the French edition, the account certified by the Queen's Printer was $1,612. The Auditor-General reduced it to $806. The press work was charged at 50 cents and it was also reduced to the contractor's price of 15 cents, amounting to $15.60. The translation was allowed at $56.76; the total reduction was $1,857.24.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. On how much?

Mr. SOMERVILLE. On $3,757. The Auditor-General, I see by the return, states that the amount has not been paid under the warrant, $2,683.74 being yet unpaid. Other accounts of this character were before the Public Accounts Committee this year, and I had the word of the Finance Minister that he would take the matter into consideration, and give us an answer as to the mode to be adopted by the Government for outside printing in future. I think if the Government choose to subsidize their supporters in this way, it is altogether wrong that the public should be made to pay for it. I think when an account of this kind is reduced about one half, it is time for the representatives of the people to see if some other method cannot be adopted in regard to the public printing. It is certainly outrageous that this book-work, which ought to have been done by the regular contractors, should have been taken out of their hands for the purpose of favouring some particular friend of the Government, and that this extraordinary amount should be paid for the work. I trust the Finance Minister will now be able to say what he intends to do with regard to the payment of this account.

Mr. BLAKE. I think my hon. friend omitted to point out, in mitigation of this double charge, that while the Queen's Printer supplies his own type, this contractor had it supplied at the public expense, which I suppose accounts for the double charge.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I suppose the House would conclude, if they did not know to the contrary, that there is something new in the course pursued by the present Government in reference to printing. It is a well known fact that the late Government as well as the present Government have, from 1873, been in the habit of giving to printers this confidential printing, and printing outside of the con-tract, to a very considerable amount. The arrangement tract, to a very considerable amount. The arrangement made by the late Government was, I think, that the cortract price in Ontario made by the Ontario Government should be the basis on which the Queen's Printer was to settle the prices at which these accounts were to be paid. It is well known, and it will be an item in the Supplementary Estimates, that a verdict for $69,000 has been obtained by the contractors against the Government of Canada for work performed between 1873 and 1878.

Mr. BLAKE. All between 1873 and 1878?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. Yes, I think so.

Mr. BLAKE. No.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. Well, very nearly all. I can only say the present Government followed in the steps And then he gives a copy of the count as certified to by of our illustrious predecessors in reference to that matter. the Queen's Printer, and I will just give a few extracts A certain portion was given outside. The Queen's Printer stated the rates at which the accounts were to be paid, and they have been paid. Within the last five or six months new arrangements have been made and practically a new contract entered into for the balance of the term, and under this arrangement very little of the work, if any, will be given outside of the terms of the contract. That is the arrangement as it stands at present, I think, shutting out the parties, if that is agreed to, from any claim they might have for any extra work since 1879. The contract has been transferred from Mr. Drummond, in whose name it was, to the parties who are practically the printers at the present time. So, whatever the sins may have been in the past of both Governments, I think the matter is brought pretty nearly to a close under the new arrangement.

Mr. SOMERVILLE (Brant). I understand it is not being brought to a close, because I am aware of the fact that a large amount of printing is now in the hands and has been in the hands of outside printers within the last few months, not exactly similar to this, but in connection with the Agriculture Department, and that system is being carried on the same as it always was. I do not know that this Government has any right to excuse itself because a former Government carried out perhaps the principle laid down by the Government which preceded it. I think, if we follow such a course as that, we would never make any amends for any evils we might fall into. We should adopt a new system.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. We are adopting it.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. And this is the proof?

Mr. SOMERVILLE. As to the amount claimed and obtained by McLean, Roger & Co. for loss sustained through this work having been given out, I think the Minister is wrong in that, for I understand from the contractors that at least one year of the present Government was included in that suit.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. There may be a portion of it.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. And I am satisfied that they have as good a claim for the last five years as they had for the previous five years. I am satisfied, notwithstanding the statement made by the Finance Minister several times in the Public Accounts Committee, that there was a clause in the contract which would shut them out from making such a claim in future, that he is mistaken in that.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. That is not the question now; it is under the recent arrangement made.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. I understood from the hon. Ministor last year, in the Public Accounts Committee, that by the arrangement that then existed they would be shut out from any further claim.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. That is what we claim.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. Now, I have ascertained that the arrangement never was in force with regard to the present contract. Of course, if the hon. Minister succeeds in inducing the contractors to abandon their claim on the Government with regard to outside printing during the last five years, he will succeed in saving a large amount of money, probably as much as had to be paid under the old contract. The Minister says that this matter will receive the consideration of the Government, and that in the future outside printers will not be given the printing of documents that ought to be handed to the contractors, to be paid for at rates double the amount that would be paid to the contractors under their contract. I think there can be no justification for the expenditure of public money in such a manner as that. It is no justification for this Government to say that another Government did the same thing, and I doubt very much, if the matter was

Sir LEONARD TILLEY.

Government has been in this matter; because I understand that a great deal of the outside printing that was done under the former Government was in connection with the Intercolonial Railway and the Maritime Provinces-printing which it was the practice at that time, and the practice of the previous Government under the present First Minister, to give to parties in those Provinces who had formerly been doing the printing for that section of the country. Since that time a different arrangement has been made. Therefore, I hope that in future these contracts will not be given out at such exorbitant rates, and the country be made to pay for the support of gentlemen who publish newspapers in favour of the present Government.

Mr. MILLS. The hon. gentleman's observations, it seems to me, are no defence at all, nor do they in any way answer the complaint made by the hon. member who has just spoken. The hon. gentleman says: "We have made arrangements with the contractors, which will prevent them from bringing suits against the Administration, when the Administration gives out printing to private parties." Suppose the hon. gentleman is right, suppose the contract he has made with the printers would have the effect it is intended it should have, and suppose he takes three fourths of the printing from the contractors and gives it to private parties, that may protect the Government against a suit with the contractors, but it does not protect the public against paying money misapplied. The hon. gentleman will see that he has simply made this statement, that we are now in the position of taking a large portion of the public printing and doling it out to private parties and enabling them to do it on such terms as the Government may choose to make with them.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I do not claim the Government have a right to do that, under the new arrangement.

Mr. BLAKE. When was this new arrangement made?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I think four or five months ago.

Mr. BLAKE. Why was it not laid on the Table?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. It was a transfer of the contract, in which arrangements were made by which they should be shut out.

Mr. BLAKE. I think Parliament ought to have been informed of this arrangement. If the Government make arrangements for transferring a contract and altering the conditions of the public printing, the people's representatives have a right to know all about it.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. The hon. gentleman might have had the papers if he had asked for them.

Mr. BLAKE. We never asked for them, because we did not know they existed.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I think the hon. gentleman did know.

Mr. BLAKE. I understand that the case is this: that whereas the Government was contending that the new contract was in different terms from the old contract by which they had this right, they have now made some other arrangement by which they concede they have no right to give out the printing to others than the Queen's printers for the future, and by which the Queen's printers agreed not to collect damages against them for the past. If that is so, I would like to know when that arrangement came into force, and if there is any current printing being done out-side on the terms of the old arrangement. I desire to know if that system still continues by which the Government have been giving out, with respect to immigration literature, the previous Government was guilty to the same extent this pamphlets, to another newspaper 10,000 more, and paying another newspaper for three different editions of the same pamphlot.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. That is some time ago.

Mr. BLAKE. I know the hon. gentleman is old in iniquity, but it has been going on, and I want to know whether these things are discontinued under the present arrangement, and whether this printing is to be given out hereafter to the Queen's printers.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. The most satisfactory way will be to lay the arrangement on the Table of the House, and then he will understand it fully.

Mr. BLAKE. I want to know, irrespective of the papers, what the practice of the Government is to be. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will answer me that now?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. No; I cannot answer you that. We will stand by the contract.

Mr. BLAKE. We want to know whether this system is being continued. We know that the mere circumstance that it was against the law and the contract did not prevent its going on, therefore it is important to know when the time comes that the Government intends to give out its printing, whether it intends to give it to the Queen's Printer. I think the time is arrived when an issue ought to be made on that subject, and I should be glad to take the sense of Parliament on that subject, unless the Minister is prepared to say that the Queen's printers are to do the work.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. We will lay the papers on the Table.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I hope we will get the papers in time to consider their contents before the Session closes. In the mean time, I call the attention of the Committee to this: that according to the statement of my hon. friend, as well as the statement of the Minister of Railways, the effects of this vote are these—that we are called upon to pay for $4,000 worth of type, or thereabouts, for which we have no use that I can understand, in order to oblige the Hon. Boucher de la Bruère, publisher of the Courrier de St. Hyacinthe and President of the Quebec Legislative Council —that we are to oblige him by getting for his convenience $4,00J worth of type that we do not want; and that we are further to oblige him by paying $3,683, or thereabouts, for printing which would have been as well or better done here for $1,800. We give him double the price that our contractors would have done the work for, and we lose $1,800 directly, probably, and indirectly $4,000. That is the position, so far as I can make out from the explanations I have had.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. That did not come in connection with my Department, but if my memory serves me right it was for the publication of a list of the employes. The House ordered a return containing the nances of the employés in the Civil Service, the Province to which they belong, their age, origin, and religion. Every year returns were being asked for in relation to this subject, because there has been a good deal of jealousy with reference to the representation of the different Provinces in the Civil Service. It was decided that the report should be prepared and amended each year. It is quite a large volume, and it was considered to be an act of economy to purchase the type and have it set up, as in the case of the Militia List, and instead of re-setting it every year, simply change the names, and the publishing would thus be effected at one tenth of the expense of resetting it each time. There-fore, on the recommendation of the Queen's Printer, it was set up, and the type is in his possession.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Where is it? 178 Sir LEONARD TILLEY. It is in the possession of the Queen's Printer-in his care.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. At St. Hyacinthe?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. It is in the Secretary of State's Department. It was sent here to be ready for correction, year after year.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman says this was done for the purpose of economy. But he supplied the type to the person with whom he made the contract, and afterwards allowed him to charge as much as would have been charged by the Queen's Printer, as if the type had not been furnished. I can well understand that the hon. Minister will see that next year an economy is effected; but we are not talking about the future, but the present. This seems to be an indefensible transaction.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The Finance Minister says the type is here in possession of the Queen's Printer. Has it been sent here from St. Hyacinthe?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I understand so.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. That is for purposes of economy. The type, I suppose, was bought in Montreal, sont here—sont from here to St. Hyacinthe, and sont from there to Ottawa. Next year, I suppose, it will be sent to St. Hyacinthe?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. Perhaps not there.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Is it the idea to distribute the favour, to send the work round to different papers.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. We would have a precedent for doing so.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHF. For buying type and sending it round?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. For distributing favours.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Surely the work could be done in Ottawa; and if it is necessary to buy type, as the hon. gentleman has shown, the work could be done here for $1,800 instead of $3,600. These are double the rates for which the identical work could be done here. It, moreover, was not work of great urgency. I cannot for the life of me see what possible excuse there can be for sending type down to St Hyacinthe to have lists printed there.

Mr. SOMERVILLE (Brant). $46.40 was paid for boxing the type, freight, &c. The hon. Finance Minister is altogether wrong with respect to the statement that it would cost ten times more to set the matter up each year. I have made no calculation on the point; but I am confident that the work could be done annually for the sum audited by the Auditor-General as that proper to be paid for the work, namely, $1,900. I am not positive, for I have not made a calculation, but I am satisfied the work could be done for that price without any purchase of type being made. I desire to give the Committee an illustration of the manner in which printing work is being done. A pamphlet called "Misrepresentation Exposed," was printed by the Montreal Gazette. There were five editions from November 18th, 1882, to April 25th, 1883. The first edition was one of 50,600 copies; another on January 8th, 50,000; another on February 19th, 50,000; another in March, of 51,600; another on April 25th, of 56,000; and each time composition was paid at full rates, and not only was the rate paid that for outside work, which is nearly double what the contractors' price is, but the composition was paid for five times over for this one pamphlet. $1.75 per thousand ems was paid, while under the Parliamentary printer's contract the price was 25 cents. The press work was in proportion. I do not see how the Government can justify this method of getting out printing. I should like to ask hon. gentlemen opposite what is being done with respect to payment of the item now under consideration. The Auditor General tells us that $2,688.74 is not yet paid on this account. I think the Auditor-General should be supported in the decision he has given with respect to outside printing. He has declared in his Report that he cannot justify the payment of these excessive prices for outside work; and he has laid down a rule which he embodies in this year's Report. I should like a statement from the Government as to whether they intend to sustain the Auditor-General in his ruling on this matter with respect to outside printing, and particularly so in this case, or whether they intend to overrule all his decisions by orders passed by the Treasury Board. This is a case in point, because according to the Auditor General's letter which accompanies the return, we have still $2,688.74 in hand. If this be so, the Government have the matter in their own hands, and I think they should adopt the Auditor-General's view of this transaction. I should like an answer from the Government as to whether they intend to deduct the amount taken off from the account by the Auditor-General, Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Certainly not. Because a contract has been made with these people and they have got to be paid.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. The contract was surely not to pay them double prices.

Mr. BLAKE. I presume this is to wind up the second volume.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes; the Ontario Government pays one-half of the cost and we pay the other half.

Mr. BLAKE. If any arrangement is made at some future time with respect to continuing this publication-and there are a sufficient number of cases for a third volume-I think it is worthy of consideration whether steps should not be taken to obtain a larger edition. I do not mean an edition for fiee distribution, but so as to enable the public to acquire copies. I am told that this edition is practically out of print; it is a very small edition.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I believe that is the case. I told the Minister of Justice that he and Mr. Mowat had been too economical, and had not arranged for a sufficiently large edition. There should have been a considerable numler of volumes in reserve for sale for legal purposes.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. In 1882-83 a vote of $30,000 was taken; in 1823 84, $60,000, making, with the present vote, in all $160,000. To this sum we have had barracks at head. quarters at Regina, at Fort McLeod, at Medicine Hat, at Maple Creek and at Calgary. The sum of $30,000 has been expended on the buildings at Calgary. Several log huts with mud roofs were erected there in 1875-76, but they became quite unfit for occupation, and had to be torn down. I know the question will be asked, if the buildings were put up by public competition. They were not, for the reason that Mr. Walker was the only person there who had any lumber, and perforce the contract was given to him. At Fort McLeod the buildings will cost $45,000. They were originally the same as at Calgary—log huts with mud roofs. Some of these had to be removed or they would have fallen on the occupants. A few build- under the head of Public Works. Mr. SOMERVILLE (Brant).

ings of better construction were subsequently erected, but large expenditure had been made from year to year to keep the fort in a condition fit for habitation. This expenditure was most unsatisfactory. It was simply wasting money in patching old huts, which could not be possibly made weatherproof or comfortable. Another objection to further expenditure on the old site was the possibility that the island on which the buildings were erected might be washed away, the river having changed its course since the post was first established. Substantial and commodious barracks have been erected on a new site, about two miles from the old fort, at a cost of $45,000. The buildings there were erected by the North-West Transportation Company, the manager of which is Mr. Elliot Galt, a son of Sir Alexander Galt. The contract was made with that company for the same reason as in the other case. I understand that the buildings have been put up at a loss to the contractors, and that they are admirable and substantial. Fort Walsh has been abandoned, and it was demolished last spring. They had to pull the buildings down in order to get the Indians to move away. As they had been in the habit of assembling there for years, they could not be got to remove to the reserves. Any portion of the material which could be transported with advantage was sent to Maple Creek, but this was very small in quantity or value, as the cost of freighting through the Cypress Hills would have exceeded the value of the material. The log building had become very unhealthy, the sick list at Fort Walsh being larger than in all the other posts together. Four years ago there were about 7,000 Indians-Canadian and American-in the vicinity of the Cypress Hills. These were gradually removed, but it was found impossible to persuade the remnants of the bands to go north, so long as they had police protection at Fort Walsh. It was therefore decided to abandon the post, and the result is most satisfactory. The In-dians are now on the northern reservations. Then there are the Maple Creek barracks, $15,000, and the Medicine Hat barracks, $15,000. The changed condition of the country, consequent upon the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, required the establishment of police coast posts at Maple Creek, about thirty miles north cast of Fort Walsh, and at Medicine Hat, north west of Fort Walsh. The men stationed at these posts will control all the trails leading north from the American frontier, for a distance of about 200 miles. They will also prevent Canadian Indians wan. dering from their reserves in the north to their old hunting grounds south of the railway. The Regina buildings will cost $50,000. They are part portable and part permanent. If the hon. gentleman will look at the printed report of the Commissioner of Mounted Police, he will find full particulars of the new barracks. It was thought proper to build the headquarters of the force at Regina, directly on the railway. There were two firms with patents for these portable buildings, one at Ottawa and the other at Montreal, and both systems were tried. The buildings proved to be thoroughly satisfactory, though the Ottawa patent was found by the Commissioner to be, on the whole, the better one.

Mr. BLAKE. Why is this voto under the head of Miscellaneous, instead of under the head of Mounted Police; or, if it is an expenditure on capital account, in some of the other heads in connection with the North West?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Perhaps it happened in this way: that it is not an expenditure on the maintenance of the Mounted Police, and as it was done by an officer immediately in connection with the Mounted Police, it could not be charged against the Public Works Department, though there was a certain amount of supervision by an officer of that Department. I think perhaps it should be

Mr. BLAKE. Of course it is of the greatest importance that these items should appear under their proper headings from year to year, so that we can compare them in the Public Accounts, and easily obtain the results.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I may add that the new police barracks were built under the supervision of Inspector Perry, of the Royal Military College, who is an officer of the Mounted Police.

277 For the purchase of new type for print-ing the Report of the Commissioners and for printing the Consolidated Statutes. $11,000 00

Mr. BLAKE. What about this? Where was this printed?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I understand that this type was purchased for the purpose of printing the Report of the Commissioners who consolidated the Statutes, on a report from the Queen's Printer. I suppose a new and better style of type was required than is used for the ordinary Blue Books.

Mr. BLAKE. Who printel it, at what price; how much of this for type, and how much for printing?

Mr. SOMERVILLE (Brant). As I understand, the contractors did not consider that this work came within their contract, it was more convenient for the Government to have the printing done at the Government printing office than elsewhere. I believe they acted properly in this matter. This type was obtained in order to facilitate typesetting and proof-reading, as the type had to be kept standing for a long time.

Mr. BLAKE. Are the contractors doing the work?

Mr. SOMERVILLE. They are doing it at the contract price.

Mr. BLAKE. There are two exceptional circumstances, then, I believe-one, that this work is supposed not to be in the contract, and the other, that the type had to be kept standing for a long time-which may justify the purchase of the type.

27². Payment to the Hon. Oliver Mowat for pervices rendered in connection with the Northern Railway Commission, 1876-77... $820.00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. That ought to have been paid by the Northern Railway. If I had known it, I would have included it.

280 Rental allowance to H. Richardson, Stipendiary Magistrate, in lieu of the free quarters occupied by him at the late seat of Government £500 00

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Mr. Richardson was the Stipendiary Magistrate at Battleford, and while there he had a house furnished to him. He is the most experienced of the Stipendiary Magistrates, and he has been brought down to headquarters at Regina, as he is a sort of legal adviser to the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West, and it was thought better to give him an allowance for a house, instead of putting up one for him just now, and he is quite satisfied with that arrangement.

281 To pay legal and other expenses in connec-tion with the Boundary question $5,000 00

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. This is the fee to be paid to Mr. Justice Armour, who before he went on the Bench was retained by the Government as counsel for the Dominion. He acted in that capacity for six months before he was elevated to the Bench. He sent in an account which the Government did not feel warranted in paying. They offered him $2,000, which he indignantly refused. He said that, on account of the importance of the subject, he had devoted himself to this work at the sacrifice of his general practice, I expended. It is just possible, by the time the additional sum which the hon. leader of the Opposition knows to have been very considerable. I think he claimed nearly twice this amount. The Minister of Justice referrel the case to Mr. Christopher Robinson, of Torento, who settled the fee at $5,000.

Mr. DAWSON. It is reported-I do not know how truly-that the Dominion Government are to join with the Governments of Ontario and Munitoba in referring the whole boundary question to the Privy Council. If they do, I hope every care will be taken to make out a good case, and to have it presented in all its bearings, because the Government of Ontario have for a number of years, with the greatest industry and by employing the ablest men they could find, been making up their case until they have volume after volume-first a great book of reports, in the preparation of which, I believe, my hon. friend from Bothwell assisted, and another book of documents arranged in chronological order, containing statements of every event and all the correspondence connected with the whole question. So far as 1 know, there is as yet no proper statement of the case of the Dominion Government at all, except the report of the Boundary Committee of 1880 with the accompanying documents, which was hastily got up, has no index, and is altogether very imperfect. I would just refer to a rather singular circumstance. The Attorney General of Ontario, in referring the case, says :

"The Province of Ontario claims that the westerly boundary of that Province is either the meridian of the north-westerly angle of the Lake of the Woods, or is a line west of that point."

So that, after all, after being told that the Government of Ontario were going to abide by the award, and were to have nothing but the award, which described the true boundaries of Ontario beyond cavil or question, the Attorney-General, in his agreement with Manitoba, says that the Province of Ontario claims that the boundary is west of the point decided upon by the arbitrators. I merely take the occasion of this vote to point out to the Government the necessity of having a clear case made out to meet the very ably got up case of the Ontario Government, which now occupies five large volumes, so that the case may be fairly heard.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman knows that we voted $8,590 to Mr. O'Connor to get up this case.

283 To provide the expenses of an Expedition (by water) to Hudson's Bay, t) test the practicability of the route for commercial

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What does the hon. gentleman propose to do?

Mr. McLELAN. The plan is not yet fully matured. I have been gathering information from different sources as to the best means of deciding the practicability of the navigation of Iludson Bay.

Mr. BLAKE. What is the Government plan? Here is a specific sum voted; how do you arrive at this sum?

Mr. McLELAN. We are gathering information as to whether it is better to purchase a steamer and equip and send her out, or charter a steamer for the service, placing different parties along the coast to make observations during the season of navigation. This is a matter still under consideration. We are industriously gathering information from people who have experience in that matter, and we are only taking the necessary sum to cover the expenses this year. This amount is as much as we suppose will be expended during the balance of this year; and we propose to ask a larger vote for 1834-5.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman ought to give us more explanation as to the principle on which this vote is to be will be asked for, we may have determined on the mode of proceeding. This sum will be necessary this year.

Mr. MILLS. For the sake of encouraging the hon. gen-tleman, I will just read one sentence from the journal of Mr. James, who went into the southern part of the Bay shortly after it was discovered. "On the 14th June," he says, "we had snow, sleet and hail, and it was so cold that the water in the pitchers was frozen indoors.'

Mr. McNEILL. That was in June, which is much earlier than the season of navigation. Navigation does not begin till September, and in September and October we expect to be able to navigate the Bay."

Mr. BLAKE. Has the hon. gentleman any communication from the Imperial authorities on this subject at all?

Mr. McLELAN. They have declined to take any part in the expedition.

Mr. BLAKE. When was that decision arrived at?

Mr. McLELAN. I cannot give the hon. gentleman the dates just now.

Mr. BLAKE. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will lay the correspondence on the Table before he asks concurrence. I observe the question was asked and answered in the House of Commons, not with reference to any obligation on the part of the Canadian Government, but as to whether the Imperial Government would sent out a vessel, apparently on their own motion. A very unfavourable reply was given; not merely a negative, but a reasoned negative, and I was sorry to see the expressions contained in it were so strong. One would be glad to know what the proposals made on this subject were and what the answer was.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. My impression is that sometime ago a refusal was given to enter into any expense with respect to any such matters, including the Hud-son Bay expedition, and the hon. gentleman's recollection is quite accurate as to the statement made there the other day. Mr. Stavely Hill asked the question whether Her Majesty's Government would contribute to the fitting out of a vessel or vessels to examine into the question of the navigation of Hudson Bay. It must have been an Under-Secretary or an officer who represents the Admiralty who replied to the question, and the reply was given that the Government would not undertake any further explorations as, according to the documents and evidence at the disposal of the Admiralty, they considered the Hudson Bay route was not eligible as a commercial route. We know very well that similar condemnations of various waters have occurred in the early history of those waters. We know that at one time the St. Lawrence was considered altogether unfit for navigation, and also the Baltic and the North Sea, until English enterprise found its way to Archangel. Then we have the evidence that for years one or two vessels of the Hudson Bay Company have go ie through the Straits and into the Bay, which shows that it is open to commorce to a certain extent, and it is stated by very many parties who profess to have acquaintance with those waters, that a steamer well protected, as scaling vessels and whaling vessels are protected, against the ice, could navigate the Straits during three or four months of the year. Evidence was given to that effect here the other day by persons who have lived in that country and can day by persons who have have here is fitting and right speak with authority. At all events, it is fitting and right the network state of affairs should be discovered. There is the actual state of affairs should be discovered. There is no doubt that the fisheries are exceedingly valuable, there is little doubt that the mineral wealth is very great in that country. I think my hon. friend can state that an American gentleman offered to fit out a vessel for the purpose, on condition of getting certain rights in the such a type that that they may expect profitable Bay, of getting certain tracts of country and certain advan- paying charters for the remainder of the year.

tages in the way of the discovery of minerals, and so on; and this gentleman is a practical man, hailing from the wellknown whaling port of New Bedford. We do not think. however, it would be well to hand over to a foreigner large tracts of our country, the fisheries and valuables, and no doubt, as far as the Bay is concerned, there is no difficulty about navigating it; the only difficulty is the Straits. We will require to have a vessel fully fitted for such a hazardous experiment, able to box about the ice, and which will remain in those waters more than one season, for any given season may be an exceptional one, and we cannot ascertain from it really what the navigation of the Straits amounts to. We owe it to our position of proprietorship that we should ascertain what we have got there. This vote is only an estimate. We do not know whether we can get a good vessel, strong, well adapted for the work at a charter, or whether we will be obliged to buy one, so that my hon. friend was obliged simply to put in a sum which ought to cover all that will be required for the present season.

Mr. BLAKE. The difficulty about the case is, that it is not an estimate at all, but simply a guess. I hold that as very early this Session it was announced the Government intended to take steps to send out this expedition, the hon. gentleman might have ascertained what the cost of a vessel would be, and what the charter of a vessel would cost. And he might have obtained some further information which would enable us to judge what the merits are of the plan the Government proposes to adopt for the exploration of the Bay. As to the policy of exploring the Bay, I have already stated that I was very glad the Government pro-posed to explore it. I do not at all object to that; on the contrary, I approve of it; but I believe at the present time our main subject of exploration must be the subject of navigability. Incidentally, the other subjects which are also of great importance—the minerals, fisheries, and so forth—may come under consideration, but it would be a very great mistake to in any way subordinate the main purpose, which is the ascertainment, first of all, of the season of navigation of the Straits, and secondly, the har-bourage and the shore difficulties, because there may be difficulties in getting close to the shore, owing to shallow water and owing also to the existence of ice. I think this also is to be observed, after what the hon. gentleman has said with reference to the prolongation of the period of navigation by vessels of peculiar construction, with peculiar strength, that in my opinion the particular commercial value in the present cra of steam navigation of this parti-cular navigation will be the period during which, with vessels of the ordinary construction which carry cheapest, you can navigate.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Ob, yes; cortainly.

Mr. BLAKE. And for this reason, that the season is unquestionably going to be a short one at best. You cannot have vessels of a type that cannot be profitably employed during the longer or the whole period of the year, when they will have to find their market elsewhere. If you have vessels which are to be used for two or three or four months in Hudson Bay, and then to be laid up for eight or nine months you cannot have a profitable trade. To be profitably employed, they must be adapted to the world's commerce elsewhere during the other portion of the year, when they have to earn their freights, and we know that competition is severe, and is getting more and more severe every year in the world's markets, with reference to steam navigation. The question we have to devote our attention to is, therefore, seeing that it must be a short season, how long a season we may expect vessels to be able to navigate that particular route, which are of such a construction and such a type that that they may expect profitable or expenseSir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Of course. It would never do to consider this as an eligible water for commercial purposes if it could only be navigated by vessels specially strengthened for the purpose. The waters must be open to the ordinary run of vessels or it will not be eligible; but in fitting out a vessel to go there, that vessel has to run great risks.

Mr. BLAKE. Of course that must be specially strengthened.

Sir RICHARD CARFWRIGHT. I think there are some whalers peculiar to the Port of Hull which are in the habit of going to the Hudson Bay every year.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD, Yes.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Vessels of that type would answers the hon. gentleman's purpose very well.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. And Aberdeen.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. And perhaps could be chartered at reasonable rates. I am vory glad the Government are going to explore this Bay, because it is of moment to know what is the length of the navigation. Can the Government state whether they are advised as to the existence of coal deposits along the shore of Hudson Bay or not?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That I do not know.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I think the geological reports indicated the existence of coal.

Mr. PAINT. In the examination in the Special Committee on the Hudson Bay navigation, Mr. Bell could give us no information in regard to coal.

Mr. MILLS. Are we to understand beyond all doubt that the Government intend sending an exploring vessel this season?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Oh, yes; beyond a doubt.

Mr. McLELAN. As to the prices of vessels, I have had tenders from New Bedford, where they have steam whaling vessels, and also from Montreal firms, agents for Newfoundland parties, and I have also had enquiries made as to the cost of a vessel in Dandee and Aberdeen, where steam sealers are built very largely. Nearly all the Newfoundland fleet are built in Aberdeen and Dundee. Until these offers are examined by a gentleman who has some experience and knowledge of the value of vessels, I have no information to give to the House as to the cost. The offers vary from £3,000 to £15,000 for the cost of a vessel, and I have offers by the month of from £500 to £800 a month for a charter.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I have the information now with reference to this item which stood over. Allan was storekeeper in the Rockwood Asylum from 1867 to 1874. His salary was $500 a year, but he always claimed that he was promised lodging and board in addition. During the last year the claim was again pressed on the attention of the Minister of Justice and referred by him to the Inspector of Penitentiaries and the Warden of Kingston for invostigation and report. Mr. Allan claimed a sum of $300 per annum, or $2,400. After careful investigation, they both agreed that Mr. Allan was entitled to be paid part of his claim, and recommended the payment of this $1,000 in full settlement. This it is understood Mr. Allan is willing to accept. I am informed by the hon. member for Frontenac that he is aware that Mr. Allan's health broke down altogether and he has never been able to work since he left the asylum, in 1874. At all ovents, this was the investigation and the award on the reference.

Mr. BLAKE. While I cannot speak with any dogree of positiveness about this, I have a sort of recollection of Mr. Allan's name coming up in my time in connection with some claim. At that time the Superintendent was Dr. Dickson, who I think is now dead.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It was Dr. Dickson's prodecessor who employed Allan, and afterwards Dr. Dickson.

Mr. BLAKE. He was employed from 1867 to 1874, and I think Dr. Dickson had been for a considerable portion of that time Superintendent.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. Dr. Dickson was appointed in 1863.

Mr. BLAKE. So that from the year following, that in which this arrangement was made, until 1574, that is to say, for almost the whole of the period during which this is alleged to have existed, Dr. Dickson was the person in charge and Mr. Allan had not those accommodations. I am almost certain the claim came up in my time; in point of fact, if it did not, it would be the strongest evidence against its validity, and we are asked to suppose that it was running along under Dr. Dickson's superintendency for 1868, 1869, 1870, 1871, 1872, 1873 and 1874, and then Mr. Allan, I suppose, left the institution; and then that two Gov-ornmonts had charge of it after that, one from 1874 to 1878, and the present Government from 1878 to 1884; and that it is only now that it is found and established that the claim is a due one, which runs from 1867 to 1874. It is just another of those stale, old, unsubstantial claims that I think ought not to be paid. I think Dr. Dickson was a just man, and I believo, if a subordinate under him from 1868 to 1874 had a just claim, we would have heard of it, and it would have been adjusted during all that time. I do not believe, if it was a just claim, it would have been left over for ten years after this man had left the Service, and now it is proposed to pay it. We have not got the evidence before us, we cannot speak possitively, but an investigation made for such an interval of time as this, which is based upon allegations that there was an arrangement made as long ago as 1867, which the public official did not enjoy the benefit of, during all this time, to 1874, that he was in the service, is almost a farce. I suppose they took Mr. Allan's statement; probably it was the only one they found available, and they said upon that statement he ought to have his claim. Really, Mr. Chairman, during the whole period of 16 or 17 years that I have been in public life I never heard so many old, stale and unsubstantial claims being recognized by a Government, and submitted for votes to Parliament, without any fair evidence of their validity, as I have during the last two years.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Perhaps we have been too liberal; perhaps we ought not to have paid Mr. Oliver Mowat for his services in connection with the Northern Railway.

Mr. BLAKE. I suppose that vote is all right, for I am quite sure if it was not the hon. gentleman would not have put it there.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon. gentleman is quite mistaken; perhaps I may have been misled by kindness.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman's public utterances with reference to that gentleman quite convinces me of the truth of that statement.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I think we asked for that the year before. It has lapsed, I think. There were $3,000 or $4,000 paid out of the regular appropriation, and this is for the current year.

Mr. BLAKE. I think it is unfortunate that the arrangements made on this subject are such as they have been. Some important returns were moved forearly in the Session, from one of the Departments, and one of the officers came to me and pointed out it would be impossible to have these returns during the Session. I said: "Why, there is a large vote being granted for extra clerks;" he said all the clerks of the Department were busily employed and could not make out that return, and that there was no money provided for engaging extra assistance.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. This is to pay for the present year. The attention of the Government was called to the lack of clerical assistance by some of the Heads of the Departments, and to the fact that they had no funds for the purpose, therefore it was considered desirable to bring down this vote. We find that in many cases returns were made in some of the Departments which were not paid for, but where we employ persons outside they receive pay.

Mr. BLAKE. There ought to be some systematic arrangement, so that Parliament may get important returns during the Session, because, as I have just remarked, in one Department I was told that with reference to returns that I myself had asked for, it was impossible to get them because there was no money to employ any extra clerks. Now, if it is to be the arrangement that extra clerks are to be obtained to prepare returns, the Departments ought to know this and the Minister ought to know that if a return is particularly important he is authorized to employ extra services.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. There are some returns that c in only be furnished by the employes themselves.

Mr. BLAKE. The returns I speak of were of a very simple character, but the lack of ordinary clerical force prevented their being brought forward. I am pointing this out with reference to the next Session. If there is to be a system of obtaining returns rapidly, it should be systematic arrangement, so that each Minister may know that a certain sum is available for that purpose.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. There will be no delay in the future.

Mr. COSTIGAN. The $13,000 is to complete the cost of stamps for the present year, which is $25,000. For 1884-85 only $20,000 is asked, or $17,000 less than under the old Act. With respect to the payment to Mr. Reid. He was one of the surcties of a party carrying on a distillery and vinegar factory in Hamilton. Owing to a breach of the law committed some years ago, proceedings were taken against the firm and the whole business was confiscated and sold, the proceeds going to the Government. Mr. Reid was one of the surctics at the time, but entered into some arrangement to continue the business with some other party; and at that time a license could not be renewed to Mr. Reid, on account of some doubt prevailing as to his being a party to the fraud or not. The license would not be given until he paid in $3,000, represented in the bond he had given. He paid $3,000 under protest, and has repeatedly applied to be refunded the money. I brought the matter up once or twice before the Treasury Board; but it was thought well to let the matter stand over until we obtained the opinion of the Minister of Justice, and upon the report of the Minister of Justice being received, to the effect that the Government had no right to hold the $3,000, they having confiscated the whole property and having sustained no loss, or taken no legal proceedings to recover the amount of the bond it was decided to refund the money, and this vote is to enable the Government to do so.

Mr. BLAKE. As the Government suffered no loss, it is quite clear, as a matter of justice, that the money should be returned. With respect to stamps, perhaps the Minister will explain the reason of the reduction.

Mr. COSTIGAN. One of the results of the Act passed last year was to diminish the variety of stamps and effect economy.

231 To pay E. Miall, as Commissioner of

June, 1893	400 00

Mr. BLAKE. This is a practical addition to the salary of the officer.

Mr. COSTIGAN. It is the same amount as was granted to his predecessor.

Mr. BLAKE. Yes; but we are endeavouring to make improvements under the Civil Service Act. It is held desirable that we should get rid of the very objectionable system of paying officers additional sums for supposed extra work. It is of the first consequence, particularly as regards men high in the Service, that the Government should give them an amount of salary to cover all branches and vocations in which they may be employed. But do not adopt this plan of paying something under one head and something more under another head—a plan which is growing to serious proportions, and which I had hoped the hon. gentleman was not going to bring forward again.

Mr. BLAKE. I thought this Act was not going into operation.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes.

Mr. BLAKE. Will the hon. gentleman explain this item ?

Mr. COSTIGAN. We ask for $10,000, because we know there will be considerable expense incurred in providing the license and other forms, books, &c., which are required under the Act by the different officers throughout the Dominion. The licenses themselves will be a considerable item, being something about $35,000 at least. There is another cause of expenditure, though I cannot tell what it will amount to. The receipts of the different license districts are to go to pay the Commissioners and the Inspectors, and the surplus goes to the local account; but in case of a deficiency, I presume some provision will have to be made to pay the officers who put the law into execution. We have also to provide for officers in districts in which the Scott Act is in force, in which no funds will be collected, although Inspectors will be appointed for the purpose of carrying out the Scott Act. These and other items make up an amount which, of course, we cannot name exactly, but we ask for $10,000 to cover those expenses.

Mr. BLAKE. I think this vote is very objectionable. The hon. gentleman says he has to pay salaries or compensation to officers, but he does not give us any idea of the rate at which they shall be paid, or the principle upon which they are paid. We are simply asked to give him a lump sum, and he is to decide upon the amount. Last Session it was pointed out, when the Act was going through the House, that the mode by which the Commissioners were to be compensated was very objectionable. The First Minister admitted that it was, and he said that he would bring down a measure to provide for the salaries of these officers-not a vote for a lump sum, without any intimation of what the salaries were, or the principle on which they were based. The hon, gentleman mentions two kinds of compensation. He says the local contributors for licenses will form a fund, but that he expects there will be a deficiency in some instances. How can the hon. gentleman say that, unless it is under-stood what these officers are to get. This is an enormous business, with a great number of Commissioners all over the country, and I think we should not be asked to give a lump sum to the Minister to apply as he or the Government pleases, on no stated principle, no minimum or maximum stated to the Committee, with reference to the rate of com-pensation. Then, with reference to the question of printing. I suppose a great deal of this printing has been done. If not, there was plenty of time to obtain an estimate of what the printing will be from the Queen's Printer or some other authority, and also a statement of what quantities are likely to be required.

Mr. COSTIGAN. As the hon. gentleman knows, under the Act the Commissioners fix the salaries subject to the approval of the Governor in Council. These salaries cannot be fixed yet; in fact, they cannot be properly fixed until we have before us the returns from all over the country, so that we can fix the salaries at just and fair rates for the different divisions, according to the amount of labour to be done. I have no means of knowing what the cost will be, and this is more of a guess than an estimate. I simply ask for this amount to enable me to pay such expenses as the Department will be called upon to pay under the Act.

Mr. BLAKE. Yes; but with reference to the salaries: while the Act made this provision Parliament had no interest in the matter as far as the public charge was concerned; because, until this vote came before us, we were told that public moneys were not to be expended in addition to the fees exacted from the license holders—it was simply a question of discretion. The Government asked Parliament to give them authority to check—to approve or disapprove of the action of the License Commissioners—as to the salaries of the Inspectors, and these salaries were to be paid out of locally paid sums. Now we are told that public funds are to be used as a supplement to these local funds, and when we are told that these general public funds are to be so used, surely it is not upon guess work that we should do that. If the Government is to pay salaries out of the public funds, then the Government will have to fix the salaries; they will not allow the License Commissioners to determine what the salaries of the Inspec tors are, which are to be paid only partially out of local fees, and partially out of the general fund. It is obvious that those who are to spend the money are to fix the salaries, and if is intended to bring this Act into execution, and appoint this host of officers, and they are to be paid out of the public funds, we should have had before us the plan upon which the Government propose to pay them. He ought to have been able to give us some idea of what the cost to the public would be, and also what principle of fixing the salaries he conceived to be just and proper. Now, this vote is for the expenditure during only three months. As yet, the hon, gentleman has not told us how much is for printing and how much for salaries. Of course, if this is to be the expenditure for three months, it is an indication of a much larger expenditure for the next fiscal year.

Mr. McMULLEN. Is it the intention of the hon. Minister to have the Scott Act enforced in counties of the Province of Ontario where it has been adopted?

Mr. COSTIGAN. There will be inspectors in the different districts.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT. 293 Amount required to cover the expenditure the year......$58,500 fo

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. In the absence of my colleague, the Postmaster General, I may say that the estimates of the Department last year fell short to the extent of this amount. This is for every branch of the Department. It has been found that the printing and advertising have been larger than they were expected to be, as well as the charges for mileage and allowances for night duty.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. This expenditure has been increasing at a very rapid rate.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The revenue also increased last year, I think, by $200,000.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. One of the leading items of this amount is $22,000 for charges of management, $12,000 of which was for the printing of $4 notes. The whole cost of printing notes last year was $46,000, which was largely in excess of the previous year. The experiature of contingencies in excess of the vote is $42,000, ∇ hich is largely for printing and paper for the various Der atments.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I abserve that the item for police has increased largely.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. At the close of last Session, as the hon. gentleman knows, a considerable number of additional police were employed.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Under the heading of penitentiaries in Manitoba, the expenditure is $1,294, more than the estimates.

DOMINION LANDS-CHARGEABLE TO CAPITAL.

To provide for further amount required for sur-294

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. This sum is required to complete the payments earned by surveyors last season, and to enable the Department to make the necessary advances to surveyors going out this season. The Government are obliged to make advances to surveying parties in order to start them on their work. The season of 1883 was an unusually favourable one for the prosecution of surveys. The spring was an early one, and surveyors were able to remain on the field much later in the fall than any previous year in the experience of the Department. Over 1,300 town-ships were outlined, and 1,220 sub-divided into sections and quarter sections and set out for settlement. This result was in excess of the estimate of the Department, and of course involved a corresponding excess in the expenditure. When the accounts for last year are finally closed, it is expected that the cost per acre of the season's surveys will be less than the average heretofore, while the quality of the work was vory fair, considering the area surveyed and the number of inexperienced men necessarily employed. I think I have maps here which would be very interesting to the Committee, only I am afraid we will not have time to look at them to night.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Will those maps be distributed ?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No; they are single maps, to be laid on the Table for inspection by the Com-mittee. As to the $2,000 for the examination of surveyors plans and field rates. The number of experts qualified to examine and determine the accuracy of surveys is comparatively limited, and the demand for them, after the close of the field work of 1883 was, as can be readily understood, abnormal. Many of these men had, during the last twelve years, received permanent appointments on the staff of the Department of the Interior, and had been charged with the performance of duties in other branches; while others still had been appointed to positions in other Department, and under the Civil Service Act these permanent employees were not eligible for extra work and could not receive extra pay except by especial authority and with the sanction of Parliament. The importance of throwing open to settlement lands surveyed during any season, as soon after the completion of operations in the field as possible, cannot be overestimated; and surveys made in the field are of no practical use until examined and confirmed by the Surveyor-General, and the townships plans are lithographed and sent to the agents of Dominion lands. Nor until his work has been examined and confirmed, can a surveyor be paid in full, 15 per cent. of the amount coming to him being retained pending the verification of his work by the Inspector of Surveys and the acceptance of his plans and field notes by the Surveyor-General. Under the circumstances it became necessary for the Minister of the Interior to avail himself of the services of every man upon whom he could lay his hands, whether in the Civil Service or outside, who was known to be capable of examination and confirmation of the plans and field notes; and in order to enable him to pay permanent employees for these extra services rendered in addition to their ordinary duties in the Departments to which they severally belonged, and after the usual office hours, it also became necessary for him to ask for this special vote. It may be added that a very large proportion of the Survey work of 1883 has Mr. MILLS. Now he proposes to survey 14,000,000 or already been completed, accepted, and the township plans 15,000,000 of acres this year, in addition to what has been lithographed; and it is expected that fully three-fourths of done.

the townships sub-divided will be open for homestead and pre-emption entry by actual settlers by the beginning of May. The results more than justify the exceptional steps taken by the Minister of the Interior, to give incoming settlers the full and immediate benefit of the liberal appropriation made by Parliament last year for the survey of the public lands in the North-West. That work would be valueless unless done con amore by these experts. It is very laborious, and requires great skill and knowledge to read the field notes, look at the plans and decide whether they are regular or irregular, well or ill done, whether they are to be confirmed, or reserved, or thrown for amendment. It is necessary to get the work well done, and as it had to be done by night, you could not expect the employees, who are employed in their usual avocations during the day, to do this night work without extra pay.

I would draw the hon, gentleman's Mr. WATSON. attention to the importance of making surveys of land north of Gladstone, towards Lake Dauphin, west of Lake Manitoba. Many people would like to settle there, and it is important the surveys should be made. It is also important to have the surveys already made properly inspected before the land is taken up. There are a number of settlers anxious to go and settle there as soon as the lands are surveyed. I would also draw the hon. Minister's attention to the importance of having an inspection of the surveys more correctly attended to. There have been some mistakes through the surveyors planting stakes not in line, and I believe in some cases patents have been issued for lands in which the surveys are not correct and there may be difficulty in correcting them later.

Mr. BLAKE. How will the work compare generally in quantity as compared with that done last year?

Sir JOHN A, MACDONALD. It will not be more than half that done last year. There was a very large grant last year, and the survey was pushed forward very rapidly, in very considerable excess of any probable demand by settlers.

Mr. BLAKE. The estimate of the Department brought under the attention of Parliament last year was that $58,000,-000 in cash would be realized by the Government by the year 1891. I think the hon, gentleman had better push on the surveys if he is going to realize that estimate.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD We will try; we will have the money, 1 think.

Mr. BLAKE. Yes, the money we vote you here.

Mr. MILLS. I observe the income of the Government last year was $1,900,000 and the expenditure $880,000, so that the net gain was not very large-something less than $180,000.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The surveys must be made; you cannot sell the land without surveying it first

Mr. MILLS. The hon. gentleman has a large quantity surveyed. In the year 1882, 9,500,000 acres; the previous year upwards of 9,000,000 acres, and the year before that upwards of 4,000,000 acres. In fact, up to the present moment the hon. gentleman has surveyed in Manitoba and the North-West Territories something like sixty six millions of acres, I think an extent of territory as large as that surveyed in all the rest of the Dominion put together. Are not the surveys outranning the settlement? We have in other parts of the Dominion upwards of four millions of people. The hon. gentleman has perhaps 200,000 or 150,000 all told in Manitoba and the North-West, and he has more land surveyed than there is in all the rest of the Dominion put together.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY.

Sir. JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yos.

Mr. MILLS. Many of these boundaries, I understand, aro obliterated, and the work will all have to be done over again.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No.

Mr. MILLS. A part has been done over again alrealy.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. In the original surveys; in the sub-divisions there were wooden posts, but now they are all of iron.

DOMINION LANDS-CHARGEABLE TO INCOME 293. To provide for expenses in connection with settlement of land claims at Prince Al-bert, Battleford, Edmonton, & $5,000 00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What is that for? That, I suppose, is for settlement in regard to lands as to which disputes have arisen? I would like to call the attention of the Minister to a case which will serve as well as another as a type of other cases that have occurred, and I would like the hon. gentleman to state what is the policy of the Government in regard to it. This was a case which I, myself, brought under the notice of the Department a few days ago. In September, 1881, a certain quarter section -I need not trouble the hon, gentleman with the particular quarter-section-was sold by an agont of the Department, and the whole purchase money wis paid and the receipt issued. This was subsequently sold, after the receipt was issued, for a considerable advance, to a second party, who paid the money. On applying for the patent, it was found that this land had been promised to be patented to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company by the Government, and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company had agreed to sell the land, and the Government repudiated the action of their own agent in favour of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. I would call the attention of the First Minister to this question, because it involves a question which may, I suppose, come up in a good many other cases. Now the Government offers to return the original purchase money or to give the party his choice of a quarter section, but he cannot find any quarter section which would suit him, and ho has already expended three or four times the amount of the sum which was paid to the Government. It does appear to me that, where a thing of this kind arises by the fault of the agent of the Government, it is hardly fair to put the man off in that way, and that either he ought to get the patent and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and its purchaser should take the second place, or he should be indemnified for the actual sum paid by him in all good faith, on the production of a receipt from the Government agent for the quarter section, in full. The hon. gentleman understands the position.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Quite.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Of course, in ordinary cases I would say nothing. The offer to return the original sum paid or to give another quarter section would be enough, but here the fault appears to lie with the Government, and if they prefer to carry out the agreement made by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, it appears to me they should indemnify the purchaser from the original purchaser from the Crown. The sum is not very large, not more than $1,000 or $1,200.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. These mistakes do occur occasionally, and a percentage of mistakes must arise almost ex necessitate, but I believe the percentage is very small. I suppose the Government had no choice. If this land is within the railway belt and the railway has earned it, of course it belongs to the Company, and it is a case where the Government has unwittingly, or their agent has mistakenly, sold land which did not belong to it. Then the Each case would have to be judged on its merits. The Gov-ordinary law is that they are obliged to return the amount of the purchase money, I suppose, with interest. But the Government should do more than that in a case of this kind. They should give land of equal value.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. That appears to be out of their power. They cannot give a quarter section of equal value.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. They might give more than a quarter section.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. If they would do that, I dare say the party would be satisfied enough, but the reply made by the Department was that they would return the money or give acre for acre, would give a quarter section of equal value. They did not propose to give him a half section or a three quarter soction, as the case might be, but a quarter section. The case is one of considerable hardship.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It is so; ycs.

SIT RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. On the faith of a regular certificate, signed by the Government agent, the man purchased in all good faith. The hon. gentleman knows that in that country it is impossible to wait until patents issue. That might involve a delay of cighteen months or two years. That would be fatal to transactions between parties, and all reasonable precaution seems to have been taken to see that the transaction was fair. Then, I understand that the hon. gentleman would be disposed to recommend a larger allowance of land being made to this purchaser? What would suit him best would be to get his money back as he cannot get his land, but of course thas might involve a principle which would be inconvenient in its application. A man might have bought for a few hundred dollars and sold for many thousands, and I am not prepared to say the Government should lay down a principle which would involve them in considerable liabilities. As to the Cansdian Pacific Railway, I have known cases which appear to go on all fours with this, where the Canadian Pacific Railway had bond file disposed of property which the Government had previously disposed of, and the Government would not help the Canalian Pacific Railway Company in that case.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I suppose that would be under the terms of the Act. The Canadian Pacific R ilway Act provides that they shall get all the land at the disposal of the Government, and if the Government had, before the land was earned by the Company, given any legal or equi-able title, of course the Pacific Railway Company would have to get their land elsewhere. It was morely a suggestion of mine across the floor, that possibly more land might be given to make the value the same, but I would not like to commit the Department on that point. If the hon. gentleman will send me a memorandum, I will charge myself with it.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I have already brought it to the attention of the Department.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. If he will give me a note of it, I will charge myself with making enquiry into it.

Mr. MILLS. It seems to me a reasonable proposition that, where a mistake was discovered which is irreparable, it is only right that the party should got a quantity of land of equal value, because the land might be much more valuable than any that remained at the disposal of the Gov. ornment

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon. gentleman will see, as the hon. member for South Huron admits, that it would not be well to lay down any general principle to that extent, because there would be no end of a rush and claim that the land which had been lost was of immense value, and that the person who has unfortunately lost this pecuniary value must get twice the quantity of land elsewhere. ernment have no interest but to do what is just and fair to all parties.

Mr. BLAKE. Upon that question, I would like to ask the hon. gentleman if he will kindly direct the Deparment to get the papers and lay them before us on Concurrence or a little before?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Certainly.

Resolutions to be reported; Committee to sit again.

FIRST READINGS.

The following Bills (from the Sonate) were severally road the first time :-

Bill (No. 136) to amend the Canada Temperance Act, 1878.—(Sir John A. Macdonald.) Bill (No. 137) further to amend the Act respecting the duties of Justices of the Peace out of Session, and in relation to Summary Convictions and Orders .-- (Sir John A. Macdonald.)

Bill (No. 138) to amend the Dominic n Lands Act, 1878.-(Sir John A. Macdonald.)

PUBLIC BUSINESS.

Mr. BLAKE. Before the Orders were called, I called the attention of the Government to the state of public business, and the Minister of Finance said a statement would be made later on. I called the attention of the House, I may say, to the fact that the reported measure to amend the License Act, of which we had got preliminary notice, had been for many days on the Paper but had not been moved, and that we had not the slightest information as to what the form and provisions of that measure would be; that the measure with reference to the Provincial subsidies, a notice of which the Minister of Finance has had on the Paper, had not been proceeded with, nor the first stage taken, and we did not understand as yet what the financial obligations which were proposed to be incurred in respect to that matter would be -because I believe it depends on certain contingencies which were not developed by the Resolution; that we had no information as to the proposed railway subsidies, which we had reason to believe are yet to be brought before us; that the proposition with reference to aid to Quebec, promised last week, and then promised early this week, had not yet been brought before us; that the Supplementary Estimates for next year were not yet brought down; that that condition of public business was one that certainly demanded the attention of the House, and particularly of the hon. gentleman, in view of the statoment that prorogation is to take place before Easter. I said then what I now repeat in his presence, that without some little time for consideration of these various important proposals which I have indicated, without some little time to get information upon them, and to receive information from the country upon them, our legislation will be a farce; we will be, to use an oft-quoted phrase, mere registers of the Ministerial decrees; and I invited the hon. gentleman opposite, as I now invite the First Minister, to make some definite statement as to what these proposals are, with reference to the course of public business, and when we may expect to receive and to have some opportunity of considering the details of these important measures which yet remain to be disposed of before prorogation.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I hope to proceed with the Resolution on the Liquor Licence Act, 1883, on Monday, and of course a Bill will be introduced founded upon that Resolution. On Monday, or on Tuesday at the latest, all the Brydges, appointed by the claimants; Judge Clark, by the Estimates connected with the railway subsides and the Sup-plementary Estimates for 1884.85 will, I presume, be brought down. I hope that the railway subsidies will be brought down on Monday-or Tuesday at the latest. Government measures are thinning off very much, and Government will press with all convenient speed the consideration of the remainder.

Mr. MILLS. Within convenient speed.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. With all convenient speed. I do not know whether we can exactly rise before Good Friday, but if not, I have overy hope that we will rise early in Easter week.

Mr. BLAKE. I have another suggestion. I do not know whether the hon. gentleman has given notice to take next Wednesday, but if he has not, I will gladly second a motion that Government business have precedence on Wednesday.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I am much obliged to the hon. gentleman for reminding me of it; I intended to have dore it. I move, seconded by Mr. Blake, that next Wednesday Government Orders shall have precedence after Questions.

Motion agreed to.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to; and (at 11:50 o'clock, p.m.) the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, 7th April, 1884.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

The following Bills were severally introduced and read the first time :-

Bill (No. 139) respecting the London Life Insurance Company.-(Mr. Beaty).

Bill (No. 140) respecting the Department of Marine and Fisheries.-(Mr. McLelan.)

THIRD READING.

The following Bill was considered in Committee, reported, and read the third time, and passed.

Bill (No. 131) to amond an Act to incorporate the Winnipeg and Hudson Bay Steamship Company.-(Mr. Came-ron, Victoria.)

SECTION "B" CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

Mr. McMULLEN enquired, Is there a Section "B" Board of Arbitrators or Commissioners? If so, who are they? What are their per diem or monthly allowances? Are they allowed travelling expenses in addition? Have they a secretary? Who is he? Who appointed him? What are his salary and allowances?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. In reply to hon. gentleman I have to say that the Government has appointed no Commission to make enquiries concerning section "B" of the Canadian Pacific Railway; that the matters in question were reforred to the award of three arbitrators, Mr. C. J. Government, and receive no salary, but, are entitled, as other arbitrators are, to receive from the party taking up their award, the usual fees paid to persons acting in that capacity including necessary disbursements. They have had no secretary since the 16th February last, previous to which they had appointed Mr. Hugh C. Dennis, paying him the sum of $100, he bearing his own expenses.

INTERCOLONIAL BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS.

Mr. McMULLEN enquired, Are the several members of the Intercolonial Board of Commissioners still in receipt of pay? If so, who are they? How many days did they sit during the last month? Were any members of the Board absent? If so, who and how often; are they paid only for And from what date is it to be paid? the days they sit, or by the month, or how?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The commissioners appointed to investigate the claims arising out of the construction of for the Department of Public Works in the North-West, the Intercolonial Railway have finished their work with the exception of details which will yet occupy some days. The Commission is composed of Judge Clark, Mr. Broughton, and Colonel Boulton. Judge Clark and Colonel Boulton are still receiving their usual compensation. Mr. Broughton accepted, about the 1st of February, an important situation on a railway, which prevents his attendance at Ottawa, and since that date he takes part principally by correspondence in the business carried on, which is a statement in extenso of their reasons for conclusions previously formed, and for that period he has not been paid for his services, but the Government intend to make him an allowance at a reduced rate. As already stated in returns to the House last Session and this Session, the allowance to the Commissioners is by the month; their business may be and is at times carried on without their sitting together, as the business of courts is, and therefore no record has been kept of the times they meet together, except when it is to record evidence or hear arguments. They have had no sitting for that purpose during the last month.

SUBSIDIES TO SANITARY JOURNALS.

Mr. HICKEY enquired, Is it the intention of the Government to increase the subsidy to The Dominion Sanitary Journal, and to subsidize a sanitary journal of Quebec?

Mr. MoLELAN. This matter is under consideration of the Department of Agriculture, and whatever subsidy is given to the English journal will also be given to a journal published in French.

WHARFINGERS ON THE LACHINE CANAL.

Mr. AUGER enquired, Whether the question as to the jurisdiction of the two wharfingers on the Lachine Canal has been settled? If so, how?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Some difficulty occurred in reference to the wharfingers on the Lachine Canal, in consequence of a wharfinger being under the control of the Inland Revenue Department, while his dutics were mainly connected with the administration of the Department over which I have the honour to preside. Measures are being taken to arrange these difficulties, and to assign the proper duties to each officer in a manner which I trust will entirely dispose of all difficulty in connection with that case.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY CROSSING IN MONTREAL.

Mr. HOUDE, in the absence of Mr. DESJARDINS, enquired, Whether the Government has been informed that the traffic is so seriously impeded by the level crossing of the Grand Trunk Railway Company on Wellington street, in Montreal, as to make it necessary for the Railway Committee to man.

authorize and require the said railway company to carry the road over or under the said street?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The attention of the Government has been called to that matter, and it is now being investigated by the Dopartment.

S. J. ST. ONGE CHAPLEAU.

Mr. CHARLTON, in the absence of Mr. CASEY, enquired, Whether S. J. St. Onge Chapleau, Sheriff in the North-West Territories, has been appointed to or recommended for any other office or employment additional to or instead of his shrievalty? If so, when? What is such office or employment? What salary or allowances are attached thereto?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Mr. S. J. St. Ongo Chapleau has been appointed by Order in Council an Inspector and in that office he receives $500, and, when occupied as such, travelling expenses in addition. His office dates from the month of September last.

Mr. BLAKE. Has the appointment been made lately? Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Yes.

JUDICIAL SALARIES.

Mr. BAKER (Missisquoi) enquired, Is the right hon. the leader of the Government correctly reported in Hansard as having stated last Session "That if the Minister of Justico was spared, and the Government lasted till the next Session, they would be prepared to submit a measure upon the subject (the re-adjustment of judicial salaries) for the consider-ation of the House?" Has the Minister of Justice been spared? Has the Government lasted? When is it the intontion of the Government to submit the promised measure?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I have no reason to doubt that the Hansard is correct in substance. The Minister of Justice has been spared; the Government has lasted; it was the intention of the Government to submit such a measure this Session, but the difficulties have been found to be so great that they have not been able to carry out that intention.

Mr. BLAKE. Does that answer apply only to judicial salarios?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Give notice of that question.

Mr. BLAKE. I will.

REPORT ON AGRICULTURAL INDUSTRIES.

Mr. GIGAULT enquired, Whether the Government have considered the report made by the Committee appointed to enquire into the best means of encouraging and developing our agricultural industries, and whether they purpose giving effect to the recommendations of that Committee by providing for the establishment of a Board of Agriculture and of an experimental farm?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The report made by the Committee to the House not having been printed, the Government have not been in a position thus far to take up the report and master it, although we have been informed that the report, with the evidence taken, is a valuable one. Therefore, we are not in a position to say whether we can give effect to the recommendation of that Committee by providing for the establishment of a Board of Agriculture and an experimental farm; but the report will come under our notice during the recess, and we shall be in a better position next Session to give an answer to the hon. gentle.

Mr. MACKENZIE. If the Government lasts,

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That goes without saying.

Mr. BLAKE. You say it without going.

NORTH SHORE RAILWAY.

Mr. HOUDE, in the absence of Mr. OUIMET, enquired, Whether the Government have received any communication from the Grand Trunk Railway offering to place the North Shore Railway, from St. Martin to Quebec, at their disposal, with a view to an arrangement of such a nature as to enable the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to reach Quebec by that line; and if so, what is the nature of the said communication, and have the Government taken any action in relation thereto?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The Government as a Government have not received any communication from the Grand Trunk Railway Company on this subject. But I have received a communication from the manager of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, in which he informs me that should it be an object with the Dominion Government to secure the control of the North Shore line, he had no doubt that terms could be arranged for its transfer to them; although there is no desire on the part of the Company to dispose of their interest in that railway.

Mr. OUIMET enquired, Whether it is to the knowledge of the Government that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has adopted measures for the acquisition of the North Shore Railway, or that it has taken any steps for that purpose?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. It is to the knowledge of the Government that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, in accordance with their determination to obtain connection with the port of Quebec as a summer terminus, are now engaged in negotiations to attain that object, from which they anticipate a favourable result.

CIVIL SERVICE ACTS AMENDMENT.

Mr. CHAPLEAU, moved that the report of the Committee of the Whole on the Resolution respecting salaries of assistant post office inspectors and others be received.

Motion agreed to, and Resolution read the second and third times and referred to the Committee of the Whole on Bill (No. 130).

Mr. CHAPLEAU moved that the House resolve itself into Committee on Bill (No. 130) to amend the Civil Service Acts of 1882 and 1883. He said: Before that motion is adopted I might mention a few slight amendments to be moved in Committee. In the second section, after the list of those who are qualified by preliminary examination, will be added "Persons seeking temporary employment in the Department as copyists." The main reason of this amendment is that a certain number of female writers seek employment in the Departments who should not be assimilated to third class clerks because they are not getting any of the benefits of the Act for superannuation or promotion; no person should be employed as copyist without passing that examination because penmanship is one of the first qualifications required. Another amendment will be this: The sixth paragraph of the fourth section reads:

"In the case of attorneys, barristers, engineers, military or civil, officers of artillery in the Militia Department, architects, actuaries, land surveyors and draughtsmen, when employed or when seeking promotion in the line of their prefession, the examination may be dispensed with on a report from the Deputy Head, concurred in by the Head of the Department, that it is not necessary."

The following addition will be made to this section: "Nor shall such examination be required for the employment or promotion of Excisemen who passed the Departmental

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN.

Examination for the special class in the Excise service be-fore the passing of the Acts hereby amended." This amendment is suggested for this reason, that before the Civil Service Act came into force the Excise men were subjected to a special examination, and when applying to be promoted in what was then called a special class, they had to undergo very severe examination in the merely technical nature of which the duties of their office consist. Some of the officers have attained high positions in the Department in their class and are entitled to promotion. Their examinations are not at all examinations of ordinary officers; they have been already examined and were already entitled to promotion after passing those special class examinations. It is proposed to put them in the character of special officers employed in a special line and asking to be promoted in that special line. However the amendment only applies to those Excise men who had their special class examination certificate before the Civil Service Act came into force. An amendment is also proposed to the fifth sub-section of the fourth clause by adding the following words: "And such officer or servant may receive an appointment in the Civil Service, for which he is otherwise eligible, if at the date of his appointment to such temporary or supernumerary office, his age did not exceed 35 years." This applies to supernumerary officers who have been employed for a long period of time in the Department, and who would like to submit to the ordinary examination to enter the service, and as they have been employed a long time their age should be counted from the time they entered the service.

Motion agreed to; and the House resolved itself into Committee.

(In the Committee.)

On section 1, sub-section 2,

Mr. CHAPLEAU. By the Act the Examiners are paid $5 per diem for a term of sixty days. They have been obliged this year, by the press of business, to work extra days, and it is not expected the work will be less next year. We propose to amend the Act by saying that they shall be paid for eighty days instead of sixty days, and it is also proposed that the pay shall be $8 per diem for members of the Board of Examiners who are not members of the Civil Service or superannuated.

Mr. BLAKE. It was $5 a day all round.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. It was $5 a day for sixty days. It is now $5 a day for eighty days, and, if a Board shou'd be composed of those outside of the service or superannuated, it would be $8 a day.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not think the hon. gentleman has taken any resolution for this.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I think I have.

Mr. BLAKE. I thought the resolution applied to the packers and sorters and so on.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. No, I see I omitted this. I suppose it was thought unnecessary as there was no change in the salary, but only in the number of days.

Mr. BLAKE. But there is a change in the salary.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. Not in the salary of the present Board.

Mr. BLAKE. It is impossible that the first clause can be carried by you, Mr. Chairman; it is not in order.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. You can take away this second sub section; that is all.

Sub-section 2 struck out.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not know whether there is any change in the third sub-section.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. It is the same as before.

Mr. BLAKE. And the fourth?

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The same as before.

Mr. BLAKE. No alterations at all.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. No alteration whatever.

Mr. BLAKE. The sixth you took the resolution for.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I took the resolution for that.

On section 2,

Mr. BLAKE. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will explain the changes.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. There is no change except that the wording of the Statute was not clear, and it is proposed to remove the obscurity. Every one of those presenting themselves for examination was obliged to submit, first, to what is called the preliminary examination, and the successful candidates in that were qualified for the offices mentioned in that list. But those who were looking for appointment as third class clerks were also obliged to submit to that preliminary examination first, and then had to undergo a second examination. We have divided it, so that those who want to apply only for situations as packers, sorters, mail transfer agents, box collectors, and, I intend to add, persons seeking temporary employment in the Departments as copyists, will have to undergo this preliminary examination, and those who present themselves for third class clerkships will proceed immediately to the qualifying examination. The only other difference is that I want to add persons seeking temporary employment in the Departments as copyists to the list of those who are to pass the preliminary examination.

Mr. BLAKE. Then the amendment which the hon. gentleman proposes is to call on those who are seeking for temporary employment as copyists to pass the preliminary examination?

Mr. CHAPLEAU. Exactly.

Mr. BLAKE. Which they do not now do?

Mr. CHAPLEAU. That is a question. Some interpret the Act as if they are obliged to do it, and some do not. This will remove the doubt. They will have to receive the certificate of proliminary examination except in special cases

Mr. BLAKE. Then, may I ask the hon. gentleman if it is the understanding at present that persons who are seeking temporary employment are not submitted to any examination, that they do not come within the rules as to examination at all?

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I would not be in a position to answer that at once. I think temporary copyists only wanted to do a pressing job, such as preparing returns to Addresses, have been employed in some Departments without examination.

Mr. BLAKE. So I understood. That was considered a question, and he wanted to make it clear. But I am referring to other persons. We know that hitherto, and I supis the understanding as to the law at present? Are such temporary employees submitted to any examination, either upon their first being employed or during continuance in the office ?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I think the Statute provides that the temporary clerks must be taken from the list the eminent English conveyancer of real estate, the head of of those who have passed the examination, if they are to be found. If they cannot be found, then their place will be hands: the first, that only himself and his clerk could read ; supplied for temporary work by persons who have not the second, that only himself could read; and the third, that passed the examination; but practically, in the temporary nobody in the world could read. These school masters may employment of clerks to prepare returns and so on, it is be very able men, but if they do not write a good hand, all impossible for that to be carried out. We cannot send from their ability and knowledge, even though they were as British Columbia to Halifax to ascertain whether young gentlemen or young ladies who have passed the examination can come here and copy papers during the Ses-sion, but as much as possible the Act is carried out. If the work is pressing, however, we must ex necessitate take the first person we can find who is ready and willing to do it, and capable of doing it. In the Department of the Interior, I believe, there are from twenty to twenty-five young ladies engaged at this moment copying returns, and none of those have passed any examination except one by the Deputy Head to see whether they write a good hand or not.

Mr. BLAKE. The explanation one wants is to ascertain what bearing the proposed amendment of the Secretary of State will have upon the general law. I quite agree that a preliminary examination which, as 1 understood him a while ago, has for one of its principal points to indicate the capacity of the person to be a good copying clerk is desirable. But if you insert expressly a provision that a proliminary examination shall be necessary for those who apply for temporary employment as copyist, the question is whether we may not be able to find other temporary employés without their being on the list at all; because you are inserting expressly an injunction that copy ists must pass a prelim nary examination.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The Civil Service Act provides for that. When returns are to be rapidly prepared-and the hon, gentleman has asked for a good many this Session-the head of the Department will not have to look around to find copyists before he can prepare the return. It is not in order to meet the necessity for proparing the returns rapidly that I propose this amendment; it is proposed on account of the difficulty already mentioned, viz., that women asking for employment as copying clerks in the Departments were obliged to be subjected to the same examination as those enjoying all the provisions of the Civil Service Act. As it now exists temporary and supernumerary clorks have to be chosen from the list of those who have passed the examination, and this amendment will give the Department a more extensive choice by providing that copyists will not be obliged to pass the examination for third class clerks. I do not see why women who are only employed as copyists should be subjected to an examination required for a pormanent clerkship. They will be required to possess good permanship and to write correctly, and I do not see what should be required of them more than that.

Mr. SPROULE. It appears to me that those holding the degree of B.A. ought to be exempt from passing the examination, and that some relaxation should be made in favour of school teachers.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. They may write a very bad hand.

Mr. BLAKE. I know some graduates who write very bad hands.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. Those who have been most successful in the examination have been school teachers, while pose still, there are a number of persons temporarily em-ployed, perhaps in other capacities than copyists. What applicant wants to be only a copyist then he will have to be examined as a copyist, and if he is a school teacher he will enjoy the exemption, which is a change in the law, of being subjected to the preliminary examination, and will come immediately to the qualifying examination.

> Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. We all know the story of conveyancers in England. He said that he wrote three lenrned as Sir Isaac Newton, would not make them good employés. They must stand an examination, and I do not think that any man can eap what he is fit for until after having passed the regular test. he is examined.

Mr. MILLS. The last hand of which the hon. gentleman spoke might be very useful when the Government wanted to make questionable returns.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon. gentleman speaks from knowledge; he has had to propare returns, and therefore he speaks very feelingly. I have no doubt the hon. gentleman followed the example of the English conveyancer when he prepared those returns which he did not wish to be quite true.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The hon. gentleman has a better plan-he does not bring down returns until a year after they are asked for.

Amendment agreed to.

On section 4,

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The third sub-section alters the present law-or explains it, rather. There was a complaint made that old officers in the Departments were obliged to pass an examination for promotion upon subjects which were quite outside of the circle of knowledge which they were required to possess. It is proposed that the examination for promotion shall be made in such subjects as after consultation with the Deputy of the Department in which the promotion is to be made, shall be submitted to the Board as the best adapted to test the fitness of the candidate for the vacant office; such subjects (and this is the main alteration) being determined according to the requirements of each Department and each branch thereof. It is no material change, but it is explaining that the Board of Examiners shall only take such subjects as shall be submitted to them by the Head or Deputy Head of the Department.

Mr. BLAKE. This amendment practically vitiates the whole Civil Service Act. 'There may be no general examination, and an officer may rise in the Department without being subjected to the same class of test to which another man shall be subjected in another Department. The hon. gentleman has given us frankly the reason. There are complaints from old officers. The amendment is a provision for leniency.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. For proficiency.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not think so. The complaint made, as I understand it, is not that the mon are examined too little, but too much-that some of the subjects in which they are examined should not be introduced. If the hon, gentleman proposed that, in addition to the subjects which the Board specify, there should be other subjects of examination relating to the special work of the Department, I could understand the proposal, and such would be an additional check on promotion in that Department. The Act states that all those promoted shall undergo the same test; but the hon. gentleman proposes, and he states the reason, that it is not found convenient that officers should be asked the same questions. The hon. gentleman says subjects may be added. It is true subjects may be added, but they may also be omitted, and it is more with a view to omission than to addition that the clause is inserted; but whether there will be fewer omissions or additions, there is no doubt that omissions may take place under it, aud, as the hon. gentleman says, they are not unlikely to take place. This renders the test wholly inefficacious. If an applicant for promotion is unable to pass the promotion examination, it is better that he should wait for three jects shall be deemed necessary in the examination, and vestmonths and get up the subjects and then pass the ing that power in the political Head of the Department, is ordinary test examination, than apply to the Head of the doing away altogether with the objects of the Act. If this

SIR JOHN A. MACDONALD.

Department to be relieved from examination in one or more subjects. In such an event the officer goes through without

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The hon. gentleman will see that practically what is desired has been done. An evil which the hon. gentleman cannot prevent, and what in fact cannot be prevented without this amendment, is remodied. The qualifying examinations are certainly sufficiently difficult, as regards general knowledge, to qualify an employé for the whole of his term in the Civil Service. What is required when promotion is sought is a thorough knowledge of the duties of the Department in which the officer is placed. I will give an example. Take an officer in the correspond. ence branch of my own Department. He requires to know something about our constitutional laws, about the organiza. tion of the Government, about the political history of the country. He should be a tolerably good scholar, and understand everything about the administration of the Depart-ment, precis-writing and correspondence, but he does not require some special knowledge needed in other Departments, such as book-keeping and a knowledge of accounts. The best officers in some of the Departments have at the last general promotion examination, passed most successful examinations on all the subjects necessary to the work of their own Departments, but have not obtained a sufficient number of points in perhaps one special subject, which is necessary in another Department, and by the iron rule of the Board these men could not be promoted, though known to be good and efficient officers. I do not deny that the Civil Service Act will have to be looked into and further amended in regard to the question of promotion if it is to be made a perfect Act. It will have to be considered as to whether it is not possible to classify the different examinations so as to attain the object aimed at by the hou. gentleman : so that a general examination for promotion in all classes might be arranged, and then for promotion in certain classes special subjects should be selected. This would require the remodelling of the Act, which we have not had time to do. I have studied a little the system in the United States which goes more in the direction indicated by the leader of the Opposition than we do: where the examination is according to classes and the different duties to be performed in each Department. This amendment does not exclude from examinations for promotion general subjects of information, which would certainly be satisfactory to any one of those who will look at the subjects on which examinations are held. Those general subjects will be retained. Although the subjects will be suggested by the Deputy Head of each Department, the examinations will be carried on under the rules of the Board of Examiners.

Mr. DAVIES. The change proposed is a much more radical one than the hon. gentleman has explained. It seems to introduce a very vicious system into Civil Service examinations. The object of the Act mainly was to afford promotion to experienced and able men, apart from political or other improper considerations. It was laid down that officers should be examined in such subjects as the Board of Examiners should decide, after consultation with the Deputy Heads of the Department. We had the security in that case that the political Head of the Departmont, for the time being, should not have any undue influence in the matter. The hon. gentleman now proposes to alter the Act by eliminating from the Board and vesting in the political Head of the Department the power of determining on what subjects candidates should be examined and what subjects should be eliminated from the examinations. I submit that the hon. gentleman, by taking away from the Board the power it now possesses of determining what subsection is passed the political Head of any Department can dispense with the examination of applicants in any subjects he pleases.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The hon. gentleman misunderstood me. The other subjects will remain and a minimum of points on them will be allowed, but the requirements for promotion will be special subjects necessary for promotion in the Departments. The Departments have not looked to the political side of their employés; the examinations are open to all those in the Department, or whatever shade of polities.

Mr. DAVIES. I am not accusing the hon. gentleman of introducing this section for political motives, or to advance political friends, but I am saying that that will be the effect of the section. The old sub-section provided that the subjects should be decided upon by the Board and the Deputy Minister. The Board had to consult with the Deputy Head of the Department, but now the hon. gentleman proposes to introduce the Head of the Department, and if a man comes up for examination who cannot pass his examination, the Head of the Department might dispense with particular subjects. I say that the effect of this will be to introduce those elements which it is the object of the Act to keep out, that is, political considerations and personal favouritism.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I think the hon. gentleman will find that the clause is not objectionable in that respect. In the sixth sub-section I propose to add to the list of other officers, Excise mon who have been in the service before.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I would like to ask the Secretary of State why officers of the artillery in the Militia Department should be selected specially for note in this clause? It seems to me that there is no reason why they alone should be capable of promotion under the clause.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. They are, I suppose, exactly the same as others, such as engineers, surveyors, actuaries, whose services would be of a special nature, and it is only when they are seeking promotion in that capacity. It does not prevent them being examined when seeking employment or promotion in any other capacity than their special profession, and it has the effect of preventing them from being made officers by special Orders in Council, as under the old Act.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I do not think our officers of artillery undergo any very serious professional training, and it seems rather absurd to mention them particularly. I could understand graduates of the Royal Military College being made eligible, because they receive a special and very careful training—a training as good as these engineers.

Mr. BLAKE. I think it would be better, in describing the preliminary process, in the third sub-section, to make the phraseology the same as in the sixth sub-section, that is to say "shall be in such subjects as by the report of the Deputy Head, concurred in by the Head of the Department shall be submitted to the Board."

Mr. CHAPLEAU. That phraseology would perhaps be better.

Mr. WHITE (Renfrew). I would like to ask the hon. gentleman a question in regard to the promotion examination, and it is this: Whether a candidate for promotion, having passed such an examination as would entitle him to rank as a first-class clerk, and there being vacancies only in the second class, would be be entitled to fill a position which might thereafter become vacant in the first-class, without passing a subsequent examination; or whether, in the event of a candidate passing such examination as would entitle him to a first class clerkship, any certificate would be given him to that effect? Mr. CHAPLEAU. There would be nothing just in that; if the candidates have been submitted to an examination for a second class clerkship, they cannot claim a certificate for the first class. If they have to undergo a second examination, I do not think they are badly treated. However, I may say that the Board might make by-laws to secure the object pointed to by my hon, friend.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Would the hon, gentleman not consent to exempt graduates of the Royal Military College, as well as the other classes named in the Bill. I think this ought to be done. We give them few enough privileges after the long course they have to go through. I hope the hon, gentleman will consent to include them.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I will ask the hon. Minister of Militia what he thinks about it. I would not wish to do it without his consent.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Perhaps I can appeal to the hon. First Minister for his influence.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. 1 am not at all sure that it is well to exempt any one. If you want a legal man to fill a position in the line of his profession, you should not subject him to the ordinary examination because it would be inapplicable to him. I am rather opposed to the idea that there is any humiliation in a man going up to this examination. If it is not a humiliation to a farmer's son, it is not a humiliation to a gontleman's son, because he is educated at the Military College vory much at the expense of the country, rather than at his father's expense. I do not think there should be an exemption.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I do not think there is any humiliation either; but why should a barrister be exempted, and not a graduate of the Military College? Would the hon. gentleman himself pass an examination?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes, I would pass an examination in law if the hon. gentleman was the examiner; but if his leader was the examiner, I am afraid I would be plucked in many directions.

Mr. MACKENZIE. If the exemption is a favour, why is there any exemption?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Becau-e these different classes may be wanted for special services. If a graduate of the Military Collego is wanted as a military man, to be an officer in the Mounted Police or in the Militia, he does not come within the purview of the Act; but if he is wanted for the Civil Service, that is another matter.

Mr. BLAKE. An engineer, military or civil, or an officer of artillery in the Militia Department may be exempt, while a graduate of our chief institution itself, designed to fit our own people to be military engineers, would have to pass an examination.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Because it is quite clear that a graduate, however great his theoretical knowledge, or however honourably he may have passed his examinations, is not capable of being consulted for the building of fortifications. He could not be employed except as an officer in some of the corps.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The hon. gentleman knows that civil and military engineers practically create themselves in this country. There are few colleges that give diplomas, and practically any one who happens to dub himself a military or a civil engineer would be exempt under this clause. I do not think they know anything in the world more than men who have been carefully trained by officers of the British service for years, and who have passed a rigorous examination.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. We mean those now in the Militia Department. Mr. MACKENZIE. The section says not a word of that, it only says "when seeking promotion." They may be seeking promotion when not employes.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The hon. Minister of Militia who gave me that amendment said it referred only to those who are in the Militia Department now. I may add the words "now employed."

Mr. MILLS. It seems to me that graduates of the Militia College at Kingston should be also exempt from examination. The training they have received will render them competent for actual service, and the Government unless they are prepared to vote a want of confidence in their own institution ought to include in this provision those graduates.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. 'To my knowledge' nothing is more common, both in England and elsewheres than for men to cram, especially for the purpose of qualitying examinations in the Civil Service; and men of inferior capacity constantly do cram to pass them, but a class of men having had a long training are by no means so liable to cram. A disposition to cram for this particular examination will be encouraged here by keeping the limit so high as thirtyfive years.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I move that the sixth sub-section be struck out altogether.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I quite agree with what the hon. gentleman has said as to the injurious effects of cramming, and that is one great argument against competitive examinations. I admit the value of a degree given at the Military College and think we might include graduates from that institution.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I have no objection; I think the domand very reasonable.

Mr. CARON. I think they should be admitted; after passing the examination they have to submit to in the college, it would be quite right to admit them without obliging them to go through a preliminary examination.

Mr. BAKER (Victoria). I would ask the hon. Secretary of State, if he has not altogether forgotten that there are such individuals as naval officers, whether they should not also be included. There are several already in the service, and I have reason to believe that others would come out, who have retired from the English service, to obtain positions in the Civil Service hore, and the day may not be far distant when Canada will find it necessary to have a navy. Naval officers, I think, should be exempt from this preliminary examination. As I have said, there are several in the service already; Capt. Scott is chairman of the Board of Examiners of Masters and Mates, the officer in command of the Princess Low'se was a naval officer, and the assistant in the Toronto Observatory is also a naval officer.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. Their duties are not at all those required in the Civil Service. Why not also include masters and mates?

Mr. BAKER. I hope the hon. gentleman does not put us on the same footing. Naval officers have to pass a very difficult examination at the Royal College at Greenwich, and surely are qualified in their particular profession. If the words "and naval officers" were introduced, you would make provision for the future.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I see no reason why we should not also put in clergymen.

Mr. BAKER. They are not like clergymen.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I do not know; a good many of them are at sea.

Mr. BAKER. The clergymon you mean? Mr. CUAPLEAU. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Of course; I would suggest that this clause be allowed to pass as it is, and my hon. friend will consider all the suggestions about the Military College and the Navy and bring down the results before he asks the third reading.

Mr. TASSÉ. (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, before the clause is adopted I desire to make a few remarks. In the first place, I am far from being an enthusiastic admirer of the system of promotion, I would now desire to see it abolished. I believe that so far, that system has not given satisfactory results - results which are in the interest of the service. Secondly, if we are to maintain this system, although I am opposed to it, I think that if exceptions are to be made in favour of advocates, civil and military engineers, draughtsmen, architects and others, the exemption from examination for promotion should also be extended to employés who have been at least ten years in the service, and who have fulfilled in a satisfactory manner the duties which have devolved upon them. In my humble opinion, the Deputy Head of the Department, the Deputy Minister, is the best judge of the ability, of the experience, and of the competency of the officials under his charge. He is more apt to know if an officer deserves promotion, and it seems to me, it ought to be left to him to decide whe her it should be granted or not, provided that the report of the Deputy Minister should be sanctioned and assented to by his chief. Therefore, I hope that the hon. Secretary of State, who has charge of this Bill, will have no objection to add to the list of exemptions the Government officials who have served for at least ten years in a satisfactory manner, and who have obtained the approval of the Deputy Minister, who is responsible for the public service in the Department of which he is in charge, and who has, besides, obtained the assent of the Minister himself.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. (Translation.) I hold in my hand an amondment which has been suggested to me the effect of which would be to add to the list of exemption all officials who have been fifteen years in the service. I have refused it for the following reasons: I think that the protection given to old employés by sub-section 3 of the Act, is fully sufficient to protect good employés who have been ten or fifteen years in the service. The examinations which they are required to pass will have to be made on such subjects as shall have been proposed by the report of the Deputy Head, and concurred in by the Head of the Department. Thus, they have all the necessary protection, and for this reason : that even if they should be exempt from examination, they cannot be promoted without a report of the Deputy Head. testifying as to their efficiency; and if they are only examined on subjects connected with their office, they certainly have no reason to fear that such an examination will be prejudicial to them. I believe that this protection will be fully sufficient for them. Moreover, there would be another inconvenience; if we should say ten years, why not say nine years, or eight, or seven? I have refused an amendment which only asked for exemption after fifteen years service, because the old employés have all the required protection, by virtue of sub-section 3 of section 4.

Mr. BLAKE. I quite agree with the hon member. My opinion is that the third sub-section will just do the business and will be just as the hon. member for Ottawa wishes.

On section 5,

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The first sub-section contains a very slight change. It was provided the money could not be paid unless a special sum was voted for such special purpose. We have made it in this Bill "unless a sum has been placed for that purpose in the Estimates submitted to and voted by Parliament."

Mr. BLAKE. The first sub-section is proposed to remove a most salutary check upon the course of the Administration in departing from the principles of the Civil Service Act. The Act which the Government themselves brought down and which Parliament passed provided, by its 49th section that:

"No extra salary or additional remuneration of any kind whatsoever shall be paid to any Deputy Head, officer or servant in the Civil Service of the Dominion unless such sum shall have been placed for that special purpose in the Estimates submitted to and voted by Parliament."

The result of that was, that if it was intended that these extra payments, which are a great source, in my opinion, of weakness and demoralization of the service, which ought to be restricted as far as possible, which ought to be given only under very exceptional circumstances, fully explained if it was intended that any extra sum should be paid to any employé, the Government had to consider it in Council specifically with reference to that employé, and had to bring down a special vote, making an estimate for that special service, and then the attention of Parliament was specifically directed to this deviation or departure from the general law; the explanations are given, and upon that the vote goes through. Last Session, in contravention of this law or without sufficient regard to it, several votes were brought down, and were not brought down epecifically marked; and they were inefficacious. The Auditor-General, as the explanations given in the Supplementary Estimates sufficiently show, indicated that these were not estimates for these specific purposes marked, and so the payments were not made. The votes have been brought down this Session in that way, to John Jones, Thomas Smith or whoever it might be, this specific vote. We have our attention directed to this proposed deviation from the general rule, and we make these enquiries which arise out of that proposal. Now, what is proposed to do is to do away with that salutary provision, and to say "unless a sum shall be voted in the Estimates."

Mr. CHAPLEAU. "For that purpose."

Mr. BLAKE. Yes, for that purpose, but then it is "a sum for that purpose." What is the object of the change? The object of the change is to prevent its being stated "for that special purpose," and the sum, the special sum. What we have at present is this protection, that, if the Government wants to pay to a civil servant more than the law and the general provisions require, the sum they propose to pay shall be specifically stated, and the purpose shall be specifically stated, and the purpose shall be specifically stated. ally stated. What the hon. gentleman proposes is that, under some general clause in the Estimates, under which, say, $10,000 may be taken for the purpose of paying extra remuneration to officers, he may apply in the course of the fiscal year further sums, special sums, to special officers. I say that the precaution which the Government themselves introducel is an admirable precaution. They thought it was reasonable two years ago, when they passed this measure, that it should be in the law. There is no inconvenience in complying with it. All that is necessary is that they should make up their minds before Parliament meets what sum they are going to propose for each man who is to have more money than the general law gives him, and should say in the Esti-mates, "We propose that Thomas Smith shall have $300 a year extra." Thus the attention of the Committee is directed to it, and they pass upon it after appropriate explanations have been given. Why not continue that law? It is a perfectly reasonable provision. Why remove it in order that you may take the vote in a more general form, less calculated to give information to the public and to the House, less calculated to provoke discussion, and which may be slurred over, as these special sums, in the past, before this law was on the Statute Book, were slurred over? It is mates last year, but it was not specifically stated, therefore in the interest of the Administration itself that all possible no effect could be given to it." All that is necessary is to checks should be placed upon these extra votes, and one of comply with the law as it stands. They did not comply those checks is the consciousness and the knowledge that they cannot be proposed without the name of the individual and the sum to be paid to him being specifically stated in the Estimates, thus challenging in the most pointed way the attention of Parliament and ensuring investigation and enquiry before the provision is made. I hope the hon. gentleman will not press upon us this which is not an amendment, but in my opinion a very great deterioration.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. My hon. friend is exaggerating a danger which will not present itself at all under this clause. The clause is explicit enough, and the Government and the House are particular enough not to be exposed to the danger that my hon. friend is pointing out. The clause says that no extra salary and no additional remuneration of any kind shall be paid unless a sum shall have been placed in the Estimates for that purpose. If it is not sufficient to say that the sum shall be voted "for the purpose" of the extra salary, or of the additional remuneration of any kind, I do not know what words can mean. If you say such a sum for such a special purpose, instead of doing good, you will put yourself in the difficulty which we have met. I will quote only one instance. A vote was taken last year for a third class clerk, to be employed as shorthand writer, in the Department of the Secretary of State, at $700. I thought there was a sum for that purpose voted by the House, but there was not a special sum for a special pur-pose, indicating the name of the person and the appointment and the sum could not be paid to the third class clerk who had been appointed shorthand writer, just because the was already in the Civil Service. He was obliged to resign bis position in the service and be re-appointed, because the interpretation of the clause prevented his receiving the money, For instance, a Commission is appointed, and $500 or $1,000 is appropriated for the Commission composed of the Com. missioner and the clerk. The interpretation of the law, as it was before, would be that such a sum could not be paid, because the respective salaries were not specially mentioned The clause as put here will prevent difficulties which have presented themselves, whilst giving a complete protection against the moneys of the public being squandered under any falso protoncos, because it is said that no extra salary or additional remuneration of any kind shall be paid unless a sum shall have been voted for that purpose. If that is not sufficient, I do not know what is required, unless we want to put the law into such a shape that the application of it becomes almost impossible. I think the clause is suffivoted by Parliament.

Mr. BLAKE. It is rather extraordinary for the hon. gentleman to say we are proposing to raise difficulties. The difficulties are here. They are taised already. Who raised them? The Government that introduced and passed the Act. It is the law they brought down to us, it was passed by themselves in this way, and what they are proposing to do is to alter and modify the law, because they find it not elastic enough to suit their purposes.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. No.

Mr. BLAKE. Perhaps then it is because it is too elastic, and they want to make it more rigorous.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. No, we want to take away the occasion of a too rigorous and too hair-splitting interpretation of the law, and this is, I am sure, what Parliament wanted when the other law was passed.

Mr. BLAKE. No. We have found it possible to comply with this law. We have been told half-a dozen times while these Estimates were going through, with reference to such a vote and such a vote, " This vote was put in the Esti-with it last Session, and they found it necessary to bring down a Supplementary Estimate, which does comply with it: therefore it is possible this Session to comply with the law as it now stands, by stating those cases with that particularity with which they have been stated this Session; and you have got the proof of the evil in the fact that these same votes passed last year were merely because information was not given; but this year in each case there was a scrutiny and that degree of discussion which I say are wholesome and useful in the public interest and are a very good protection for the Government themselves who, I presume, are beset, as other Governments have been before them, with frequent applications for extra remuneration and for a violation of the general principles of the law.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. 'The principle is that no person shall he paid either for extra remuneration or otherwise without the sum being previously voted by the representatives of the people. This clause says distinctly that no remuneration whatever shall be given to anybody unless the same is voted for that purpose; and if this is not sufficient I do not understand language.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Let us come to a practical application of the Act. Does the hon. gentleman propose next Session-if he should be in that position-to ask a vote of $8,000 or $10,000 for the purpose of providing for any possible extra salaries?

Mr. CHAPLEAU. No.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Then why is the vote to be taken?

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The vote is taken so that a certain sum shall be placed at the disposal of the Government for the purpose for which it is asked, and for no other. It is only a question of words, and not a question of principle.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Exactly. When he has this vote, every person wanting an extra salary and knowing there is a sum there for the purpose, will be making application, and the hon. gentleman will be beset with applications from his own officers.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I do not think there has been any complaint in that respect.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I think there has. If there is no complaint why is this change asked for? If the hon, gen-tleman will put after the word "purpose" the words "in each such case," I will have no objection to support it. But he now proposes to take a general vote without naming individuals, and then ask power to distribute that vote according to circumstances.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The sum must be voted, not for a general purpose, but for some particular purpose, namely, the remuneration of extra services, and the remuneration is proposed to be given in all such cases as may present themselves.

Mr. BLAKE. If there is no change between the views of the hon. gentleman and my own, let it just remain as it was last Session. If not, I have so much confidence in the superior efficacy of the clause as it stood that I shall propose at the proper time to restore it in its pristine vigour.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I will agree to put in the words sug-gested by the hon. member for East York, and to add after the words "that purpose" the words "in each case."

Section, as amended, agreed to.

On section 5, sub-section 3,

Mr. CHAPLEAU. There is a little change here. The certificate of illness shall only be given by properly authorized persons. It is an improvement.

Mr. BLAKE.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONADD. The hon. gentleman will see that employes, when they are absent, go to a friend who is a doctor, and get a certificate of illness.

Mr. BLAKE. Quite so-like the Halton doctors and the whiskey.

On section 6,

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The inspectors are put on the same footing as the postmasters and the collectors of Customs.

Mr. BLAKE. This proposal will place a very large class quite unnecessarily outside of the operations of the Act. Last Session it was provided that certain first class appointments should be kept as a sort of political prize, and that the ordinary Civil Service Examination Rules should not apply to them, these appointments so excepted being city postmasterships and collectorships. At the suggestion of the Minister of Customs, preventive officers were also excluded, it being stated that these officers in the country could not pass the examinations and that they were engaged in special work. I see no reason why inspectors of weights and measures should be added to this category.

Mr. COSTIGAN. These officers have not hitherto been considered as under the Civil Service Act, and the examination test has not been applied.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not see why they should not be compelled to pass the examination.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. These officers have not been subjected to examinations, and it is to prevent any difficulty or doubt arising that they are exempted.

Mr. BLAKE. That is to say that the law has been violated heretofore, and now it is proposed to altogether change it.

Bill, as amended, reported.

GENERAL INSPECTION ACT.

Mr. COSTIGAN moved the second reading of Bill (No. 128) to amend the General Inspection Act of 1874.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time; and the House resolved itself into Committee.

(In the Committee.)

Mr. COSTIGAN. One provision of this Bill is that inspectors may act in other districts than those for which they have been appointed, under certain conditions. It also provides that inspectors, duly appointed, may examine and appoint deputy inspectors, subject to the approval of the Governor in Council. It is found that very great inconveni-ence exists in calling upon the Board of Examiners to make examinations in all cases, as they are not remunerated for their time, and it is difficult to get them to meet and exam-ine individual candidates. We thought it would be perfectly safe to trust the examination to the inspectors themselves, who have been duly examined, and are duly qualified, subject to the approval of the Governor in Council, especially as after all they are responsible themselves for their deputies.

Mr. BLAKE. I suppose the inspector will not be at all likely to examine his son, or his sister, or his cousin, or his aunt?

Mr. COSTIGAN. Of course the Government will always have the approval or the disapproval of any appointments that may be made. Another amendmont which I now propose is to exempt fish oil from the operation of the amended section 64 of the Act.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwoll). Under this law will the inspection of herring be as it has been in the past?

Mr. COSTIGAN. As it has been-for the present,

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). The difficulty is that practically it is impossible to inspect the herrings. Last fall in the city of Montreal 30,000 or 40,000 barrels of herring were brought in for inspection within a period of eight or ten days or a fortnight. The herrings came in very late and it was almost impossible to get them inspected within that time. The result was that last year the herrings were not really inspected. The inspectors jumped at their quality, and made them No. 2 with the consent of all parties. But, really, there was no adequate inspection of the herrings at all.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I may here make a statement with reference to the communication of the Montreal Board of Trade. It has been under the consideration of the Government, and, looking at the law which has been acted upon up to last year, we have decided that there is no duty on packages containing oil imported from Newfoundland. With regard to the oil on which duty was collected last year and which was said to be the produce of the fisheries of Newfoundland, it appears that the oil had been shipped to England, and from England it was imported into Canada. But under the law there is no duty on packages containing oil from Newfoundland; that is the first point. It has also been decided to amend this Bill so that the inspection of oil from Newfoundland will not be necessary; that is the second point. Then as to the character of the inspection in Newfoundland it was not reliable at all, and after waiting fifteen months for the authorities of Newfoundland to amend their law, we put our law in force. But we have opened up communications with the Government of Newfoundland with the view of coming to an amicable arrangement with them with regard to the inspection of fish.

Mr. GAULT. It appears that herrings inspected at Montreal—No. 3 or No. 4—become almost spoiled after being turned out. No. 1 herrings that have been inspected have become quite unsaleable afterwards; and I understand that herrings are coming in by Boston and Portland and going to Toronto without any inspection at all.

Mr. MITCHELL. I am very glad the Minister of Finance has given the explanation he has, because I can assure him that a great deal of feeling exists in many quarters upon this subject. It is a pity that this explanation could not have been given before, as it would have prevented a great deal of angry feeling, not only among gentlemen connected with the Board of Trade, but in various commercial centres, owing to the collection of duty on packages of fish oil from Newfoundland. I endorse what has been said by the hon. member for Montreal West (Mr. Gault) that there is a great deal of dissatisfaction in Montreal with the inspection of fish at all. Many gentlemen in this House who have experience in regard to pickled fish, know that if pickled fish are put up for market, and after a month are taken out and inspected and repacked, they will not keep. First-class fish under those circumstances become second or third class. see the hon. member for Gaspé (Mr. Fortin) shaking his head. No doubt he has had a great deal of experience; but he knows a great deal more about cod fish I think than he does about herrings. I am satisfied that we shall never give satisfaction to the trade or to consumers in the country until we abolish the compulsory inspection of fish in the markets where they are sold. We should deal liberally with Newfoundland; it is a matter of vital importance that with a colony that gives us $2,000,000 of trade a year, we should have amicable arrangements; but the Newfoundlanders think that their interests have been outraged and injured in this matter. I repeat my satisfaction at the announcement of the Finance Minister, and I hope the negotiations will result in healing those wounded feelings which are very much strained at present,

Mr. FORTIN. I am surprised that my hon. friend should insinuate that the interests of the fishermen or the herring merchants of Newfoundland have been outraged. I proved in a speech I made at the beginning of the Session, not by assertions but by figures, that it is we who have been outraged; it is we who have been defrauded, not only by the merchauts and fishermen of Newfoundland, but by the Government of Newfoundland who used to give commissions of inspectors to the fishermen themselves, who, after packing their fish stamp indiscrimonately, all the barrels containing them as No. 1, without any real inspection, and that not only in Newfoundland, but sometimes on Canadian territory. When those fish came to Montreal last year, and we inspected them as we inspected our own fish, we did not outrage those people. Their fish were inspected by the same inspectors and under the same law as ours; and I would like to know if foreigners, as the Newfoundlanders must be considered in matter of trade are going to get special privileges over our own people. They must be considered as foreigners; they are not under the National Policy; and I call upon the First Minister to sustain the fishing industry under the tenots of the National Policy as well as the cotton industry. It is we who have been outraged. The Government have had reports from the different inspectors, in which it is proved that the Newfoundland merchants, sharp and shrewd as they are, knew that they could not make money in Canada unless they excluded our herrings from our own market; and they have done so. Is that National Policy? I am not surprised that the Free Trade Government of hon. gentlemen opposite allowed the Newfoundland herrings to come here free from inspection. But we are under the National Policy to-day, and I hope the Government will carry out the National Policy in regard to herrings as well as in regard to cottons; because, if they do not, I cannot support them any more. I do not believe in two weights and two measures-one weight and measure for the cotton manufacturers of Montreal, and another weight and measure for the fishermen and fishing merchants of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. I know that some of the merchants of Montreal-foreigners, most of them-have been saying that I have been fighting for the last two years for the herrings, because I have been looking after the interests of my constituents. Let me tell these men that the people of Gaspé trade mostly in codfish principally, and do not generally send herrings to Montreal. The people of Magdalen Islands which also belongs to Gaspe used to send herring to Quebec and Montreal, but have been prevented from doing so by the policy of the Government in allowing Newfoundland fish to come into our ports and be sold without inspection, while Canadian fish had to be inspected. Thus our fish has been excluded from our own market, and not more than ten Canadian vessels a year have taken to herring fishing for the last few years on the coast of Labrador. I asked the reason to some tishermen, while on that coast last year, and they said : "What is the use? The Newfoundland fish keep our herring out of the market.' What is the consequence ? The consequence is that with our National Policy in force, a large number ofour fisher-men of the coast of Labrador are, I will not say, starving, (because they are fed by the Federal as well as by the Loc it Government both of which had to send provisions to them) owing to their not being able to sell their herring as well as Newfoundland on our markets. They ceased to go into the trade and have been reduced consequently to a destitute condition. I am not afraid to expose this state of things because this is a question I have studied, and I appeal to the people of Nova Scotia and to New Brunswick to endorse the stand I take. The people of Nova Scotia are the most interested in this question. The people of Gaspé do not produce much herring; it is principally a Nova Scotia industry, because of 490,000 barrels produced last year, sbour 200,000 barrels were produced by Nova Soutia, and I am bound to say that whilst formerly we received a great quantity of fish fromNova Scotia in Montreal and Quebec, that has been excluded by the Newfoundland fish. Let me tell you, Sir, that when that fish, the inferior fish from Newfoundland, was inspected and found not to be up to the mark, what was the consequence? Many merchants in Montreal refused to buy it, and wrote down at once to get good fish; agents were sent down, and they got it at the Gut of Canso. Those are facts, and I am very glad this question has come up, so that I can state those facts to the Government which seems to be inclined to allow the obnoxious clauses of the Act of 1874, and repealed by the Act of 1882, to be revived. I do not see why we should be so good to the Newfoundlanders.

Mr. MITCHELL. We want to keep the trade.

Mr. FORTIN. The Newfoundlanders buy flour in Montreal and Quebec because it suits them better than to go to New York. We know what trade is; we go where it is cheapest. We are under the National Policy, and our fisher-men pay dearly to sustain that National Policy, and the merchants in Montreal and the owners of cotton manufactories in Montreal are very glad to get our fishermen to buy cotton, but how can they buy the cotton if they cannot sell their fish in Montreal, if that market is kept for foreigners. The merchants of Newfoundland who came from Newfoundland to Montreal to establish the herring trade said to themselves : "We can only make money by excluding the Canadian herring ; if we can do that we will be able to sell our fish at any price we like, and will be able to sell No. 2 and No. 3, for No. one, and make plenty of money." I cite these facts because I am afraid the Government will give way to please those Newfoundlanders who, when our vessels go to trade on their coast, with goods to sell in exchange for fish and with barrels and salt to bring back the herring, send a collector of Customs on board, who, not only make our merchants pay duty on the goods which they land but also on the barrels and salt which are never landed. Documents will be laid before this House to prove that. What more have they done? On two-thirds of the coast of Newfoundland it is Canada which build the lighthouses and maintains them. Only a few years ago they imposed light dues and what did they do? Our vessels were made pay double the dues paid by the New-foundland vessels, although it was we who built and kept these lighthouses.

It being Six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

Mr. FORTIN. Before six o'clock, I was stating facts to prove that Newfoundland had been unjust towards our traders and coasters and tishermen. I said that when our traders went to Newfoundland, the Newfoundlanders were not satisfied with exacting Customs duties on goods to be given for fish and landed, but they also exacted duties on the barrels and salt that were not to be landed but were to be brought back in Canada. I will cite the account of a merchant from Quebec who went to Newfoundland with a cargo of goods. This trader had 350 empty barrels and ten tons of salt on board for the purpose of bringing the herring back to Canada, yet he had to pay on the 350 empty barrels $25 Customs dues and on the 10 tons of salt $2, making a total of $27 collected by Mr. J. P. Kearney, sub-collector. Newfoundland. I cite this because this Government has exacted a duty on parcels; and I can tell you, Sir, that 1 thought it better we should not impose that duty. You see that we can make a comparison between these two ways of dealing, but whilst we impose the duty on parcels used here, you see that the Newfoundlanders were in the habit of imposing a duty on parcels which did not remain in that country. I mentioned also the case of light dues. Not content with charging our vessels Mr. FOBTIN, light dues, they doubled them, although it was Canada that built and maintains the lighthouses. Whilst our staple products of Newfoundland are imported into this country free of duty, everything we export to them is charged a duty. I do not think that is very liberal on the part of Newfoundland. Now I am going to speak of a question never raised here before, the question of the medicinal cod oil, which is made largely in Newfoundland; we are supplied entirely with that cod oil. Merchants along the Canadian coast have tried to manufacture it, but they cannot compete with Newfoundland, just as our manufacturers could not compete with the English goods until they were protected. If we were to ask the Government to impose a duty on medicinal cod oil in order to protect our manufacturers, we would be taking a step to meet the case. Now, Sir, with regard to the inspection of fish, I have heard some persons say that the inspection of fish has a tendency to injure the fish. I will ask the Government and I will ask the people who are not conversant with the question to ask fish traders and fish packers and they will tell them that the inspection of fish, instead of injuring the fish, is the best mode to keep it for a long time. The compulsory inspec-tion of fish in this country has not been established lightly, has not been established without consulting the whole country, and 1 hold in my hand here a report of a Committee of the House, 1869, which sat for two years and studied the question of inspection. This Committee sent questions all over the country, in Ontario, in Quebec, in Nova Scotia. in New Brunswick, and in Prince Edward Island, to ask their opinion about the inspection of fish, and the majority answered, "yes, the inspection of fish is necessary and ought to be compulsory;" and the law passed in 1873 was based upon the report of that Committee. I will ask the Government, if they consider the question, to do so with dignity, not through fear of Newfoundland, but to consult the interests of the Canadians and nothing else. I am not against trading with Newfoundland-far from it. I have studied that trade, I have been myself in Newfoundland, and have done all I could to extend that trade; but I ask the Government if they are ready to sacrifice the interests of this country to the interests of Newfoundland. I think they will not do it. In order to show that the recall of those clauses which permitted Newfoundland herring to come have freely was not done lightly, I have here a petition of the Board of Trade of Quebec asking that the obnoxious clauses be repealed, and they were repealed, and consequently they ask that the law remain as it is now; there is a petition of 43 merchants of Montreal asking for the repeal of the obnoxious clauses which permitted Newfoundland herring to come free of inspection, and consequently they are glad that the Government took action and put the Newfoundland on the same footing as ours; and there is another petition of forty-five merchants of Quebec, leading merchants, fish merchants and others, who also asked that the Government remove the obnoxious clauses, which was done, and consequently they are satisfied with the present law. Now, let me end these remarks by giving some figures to this House, so that they will remember the importance of this herring trade. In 1882, the production of the herring industry in Canada amounted to 423,042 barrels of pickled herring, 1,247,231, smoked herring, and 20,527,200 of single herring which were sold in a frozen state, amounting to a value of $2,135,-285. Now, by Provinces, Nova Scotia produced 193,361-barrels, amounting to $173,444; New Brunswick, 121,743 barrels, amounting to $486,972; Quebec, 57,640 barrels, amounting to $255,202, and Prince Edward Island, 31,545 barrels, amounting to $126,680; amounting in all, as I have said, to upwards of $2,000,000 in value. Now, I will ask this House and the Government whether they are ready to sacrifice this immense trade, which gave so much work to so many people, and which causes an immense trade between the Maritime an endeavour to induce a person to make a request in a Provinces and Montreal and Quebec and Ontario, for the particular manner—in a "threatening and defiant" it was, sake of about 10,000 or 30,000 barrels of herring which come from Newfoundland, because that is the question, there is no other question. If the Newfoundlanders did not want to send their herring into Montreal at a better advantage than the herring of this country, there would be no trouble. If they only wanted to be fair, they would say, "We cannot expect more than you have; your herring has to be inspected, we will submit to the inspection." What the fishermen and the fish merchants in Canada ask is fair play and honest treatment.

Mr. KAULBACH. I quite concur in the remarks of the hon. member for Gaspé, which are applicable not only for his county and the coast along the Gulf, but more particularly for Nova Scotia, whose catch of herrings is far in excess of all the other Provinces of the Dominion. It is all very well for Montreal to encourage a trade with Newfoundland and exchange flour for fish, but it should not be done at the expense of the fishermen of Canada. If we allow herrings coming into Canada to pass free of inspection, whilst our own under the Inspection Act are required to be inspected, we allow the Newfoundlander an advantage over our own fishermen; and an inferior article to be placed side by side with our own at competing prices, thus greatly reducing the price in our own market; and if sold to the merchant for foreign shipment affect the price of ours, a better article, in a foreign market. Newfoundland will not allow us to sell any of our products in her market without a heavy duty, and if we allow her to sell her fish in Canada free of duty, we allow her quite enough, and Montreal should not object to the inspection of herrings when imported from that Island, and I don't think the matter will be pressed.

Bill, as amended, reported.

INDIAN ACT AMENDMENT.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on Bill (No. 87) further to amend the Indian Act, 1880.

Motion agreed to; and the House resolved itself into Committee.

(In the Committee.)

On section 1,

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The first clause of the Bill is new. The Indians, we find, when left to themselves, are easy to manage, but when stirred up for improper rea ons by traders, good or bad, or by scamps of all kinds, it is found that great danger has occasionally arisen of actual bloodshed. At Edmonton last year there came very near being a serious collision and perhaps a very serious Indian outrage incited as was known, by whites for their own evil purposes. This clause, therefore, provides that

"Whoever induces, incites, or stirs up, or endeavours to induce, in-cite, or stir up, any Indian, non-treaty Indian, half breed or other per-son, to make any request or demand of any employé or servant of the Government, iu a threatening or defiant manner, or in a manner cal-culated to cause a breach of the peace; or to do any act calculated to cause a breach of the peace."

I propose to strike out " in a threatening or defiant manner" and to insert in lieu thereof "in a riotous manner."

Mr. BLAKE. It scems to me to be a very wide clause. I do not think I ever saw a clause of this nature in a criminal law. Certainly the proposal of the hon. gentleman obviates some of the objections to the proposed amendment; but the offence which is to be punishable, perhaps, by five years imprisonment in the penitentiary, may be an endeavour to induce a person to make a request in a riotous manner. He is only to endeavour; he may not succeed in inducing the person to make a request in a liotous manner, What is the nature of the proof to be of this grave offenceand now in a "riotous" manner?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. A routous manner,

Mr. BLAKE. I do not know what that is.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It depends upon one's acquaintance with criminal law.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not profess to be much acquainted with criminal law, but I do not think the hon. gentleman will find any precedents for that which seems to me to go far beyond any criminal law of modern days. An endeavour to induce a person to make a request in a riotous manner is to be punishable by five years in the penitentiary.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Oh no, it may be only one week.

Mr. BLAKE. And it may be for five years. He may not succeed, the request may not have been made, yet he is to be punishable, and may be imprisoned for five years. The proposal, though somewhat improved by the hon. gentleman, is of a barbarously wide character. It is not confined to Indians; it is general. It is "any Indian, non-treaty Indian, half breed, or other person," so that if I was to endeavour to persuade somebody to make a request in a riotous manner of the hon. gentleman I should be liable to five years imprisonment. Now, it is barbarous, the hon. gentleman will agree, as applied to white men, at any rate. It is outrageous to expose white men to these penalties for making such suggestions to Indians are mentioned in the clause. If it is to be a criminal offence, it ought to be so when results follow. Conceive the evidence to support this case. The Indian may never have made the request at all. He may not have made it in a riotous manner, but yet it is alleged by some rival trader that a white man endeavoured to stir up Indians to make the request in a riotous manner. The clause is of a barbarous character and liable to great oppression.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I must admit that this provision would not do in a settled community. But if hon. members will look at the legislation connected with the Indians, especially with the Indians of the North-West, they will find there is exceptional legislation, and there ought to be such. If hon, members consider that the country is in a wild state, that white men are going in there and that there is great danger of collision between whites and Indians, that white men for their own purposes, especially traders, stir up Indians to resist the authorities-hon. members will admit that it is not sufficient to say that a man shall only be punished when an insurrection occure, because no one can tell what the result will be. No punishment can be too great on white men who work on the feelings of the Indians. The hon. gentleman says there must be some result. If there is a riot, an Indian war, a massacre of the whites— that is in each case the result. The hon. gentleman says we must wait for the result. I say no. If the Indian acts on that incitement, the parties are liable to punishment for five years. If it is proved the parties tried to incite, they are in the same position; and a party is liable to be tried for conspiracy even if the conspiracy does not produce the desired results. I must appeal to the Committee, considering the exceptional state of the country, to arm the authorities with the power given in this clause. Cases will not be tried except by court of competent jurisdiction; they will be tried by a jury, and proper punishment will be meted out.

Mr. BLAKE. The clause says that if a white man endeavours to stir up Indians to do an act calculated to cause a breach of the peace, he is to go to the penitentiary. What is to be proof of the nature of the act; second, what amounts to stirring up or inciting; and third, is the act calculated to cause a breach of the peace? These are all important matters. The hon, gentleman has intimated that the Act will not be used unless the inciting produces results. If so, why should we arm the authorities with power to use the Act before results are produced. If the law is not to be used, do not enact it; if it is to be used, let us consider whether the law is one which should be enacted. I never heard of or read of such loose legislation as thisof legislation which gives an opportunity for so much oppression as this does. I do not remember precisely at this moment what the present position of the law is, a to the mode of trial of criminal offences in the North-West. There is considerable summary jurisdiction placed in the hands of the Stipendiary Magistrates, and there is some provisions for a small jury. But, however that may be, we considered when framing the law that we must provide for a somewhat ex-peditious and summary mode of trial of offences. Some exception was taken to the fact that the safeguards which exist in more civilized communities were not placed around the administration of Justice in the North-West. We have provided summary jurisdiction and trial by a very small jury-and there is no Grand Jury there. This makes it all the more necessary, that the Criminal Law which is to be administered in that way, should be plain and simple, and define the offences with as much exactness and precision as possible. I say there is in this clause no definition of the offence, and a few words ill-reported, perhaps incautiously said, may have the effect of condemning a man to prison. The hon, gentleman has said, that the circumstances of that country are wholly exceptional and that great difficulty has been found. If there has been great danger-I will not say on a single occasion, because I do not think that is ground for passing a Criminal Law of such a character as the present one-those circumstances should be stated plainly to the Committee, so that hon Members can judge by the facts as to whether the state of things is such, as to justify such extraordinary and wholly exceptional legislation as that proposed.

Section, as amended, agreed to.

On section 2,

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The next clause is a new one. It provides that persons selling ammunition to Indians shall incur a penalty of not more than $200, or shall be liable to imprisonment for a term of not more than six months, or to both fine and imprisonment. This matter was discussed a short time ago on another Bill. Formerly the North-West Police were able to prevent the selling of ammunition to Indians; but since the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway and other railways, this has been found to be impossible.

Mr. BLAKE. I asked the hon. gentleman for an explanation which was not given before when he alluded to this subject. He said the North-West Mounted Police were able to control the traffic before. Under what provision of the law do the North-West Police control the traffic?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Simply by stopping it.

Mr. BLAKE. But under what law?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I cannot say that it was ander any particular law.

Mr. BLAKE. Were they authorized from Ottawa?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. As a matter of general police they did it.

Mr. BLAKE. But were they ordered to do it?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That I cannot say.

Mr. MACKENZIE, I think they were.

Mr. BLAKE.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I do not remember as to that, but at all events they did so as a matter of police regulation.

Mr. BLAKE. I notice there was a statement in the newspapers the other day to the effect that an attempted landing had been made at Metlakatlah, or some such place in British Columbia, and that resistance was made by the Indians with some kind of weapons—I do not know whether they had fixed ammunition or not, but they were formidable enough to prevent the proposed step being taken. Is it proposed to deal with the Indians of British Columbia in this regard at all ?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No; this does not deal with the Indians there. There was an unhappy state of things at Metlakatlah. And Mr. Powell, Superintendent of Indians, went to the place in a ship of war, accompanied by the gentleman who was appointed to act as agent. The Indians had destroyed a church on the plains near Metlakatlah; and they had resisted every attempt to introduce law or order among them. They had set up a law of their own, and altogether there was an exceedingly unfortunate state of affairs. There had been a semi-religious war between Mr. Duncan, who was formerly the Missionary, and the Bishop of Caledonia. Churches and other property were destroyed, and Mr. Powell went for the purpose of attempting to introduce order, and place Mr. Mackay, who was to act as agent, there, but they were resisted and obliged to leave. There were some 300 men carrying arms of some kind, and they refused to allow anyboly near the place. With regard to these unhappy circumstances I may say that I have been in communication with the First Minister of British Columbia, Mr. Symthe, who is now here, and we hope to introduce into Parliament a measure on the subject. He has engaged to appoint a Stipendiary Magistrate, and we hope to be able to suppress the lawlessness which has arisen, and which, unless put down, it is feared by those who know the coast, will extend all along the northwest coast of the main land.

Mr. BLAKE. Is it proposed to deal at all with the supply of fixed ammunition and ball cartridge to the Indians of British Columbia?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It is impossible, I fear, to do that, as the coast is open to ships and traders of all kinds.

Mr. BLAKE. Then what is the principle in this clause? I could understand a clause which would prevent the supplying of Indians with fixed ammunition or ball cartridge, but this clause simply prevents anybody supplying to Indians fixed ammunition or ball cartridge, except with the written permission of the Superintendent-General, so that it can be made permissible to sell these arms to the Indians. This might result in one or more persons having a practical monopoly of the supply; it might result in some one or more Indians having fixed ammunition and ball cartridge, while others had not. What is the principle on which the Superintendent-General is to grant permission? Is it to be a permission to such persons as he confides in, as to their soundness of judgment in exercising the power to sell ammunition to the Indians? Is it to be a permission to sell to particular named Indians, or to particular bands of Indians, or what?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It is for the purpose of enabling a small supply of fixed ammunition to be given to those Indians who have weapons especially adapted to fixed ammunition and ball cartridges, for the purpose of shooting game. That is, the rationale of the clause.

Mr. BLAKE. Of course this ammunition and these eartridges would be of no use except to those Indians who had weapons adapted to them. Some time ago the hon.

gentleman told us of a plan he was devising by which the Indians were to be induced to exchange their Winchesters for the old Snider rifles, or something of that kind. Has the hon. gentleman succeeded in beguiling the wily red men of the forest into making that change?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No; not yet.

On section 3,

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. This is a new clause for the purpose of putting down the Indian festival known as the "potlach" which is the cause of a great deal of misery and demoralization in British Columbia. The representations made to the Government on this subject, not only by the Indian agent but by the clergy are very strong. They say it is utterly useless, especially on Vancouver Island, where the "potlach" principally exists, to introduce orderly habits while it is in vogue. They meet and carry on a sort of mystery; they remain for weeks, and sometimes months, as long as they can get food, and carry on all kinds of orgies. It is lamentable to read the accounts given by the clergy of British Columbia, and they urge that some legislation on the subject should take place. It was suggested by the clergy there that it would have some effect if the Governor General should issue a proclamation, warning the Indians against this unhappy custom, and though it did have some effect, it was not at all commensurate with the expectations which were founded upon it, and so it is proposed to introduce this clause. I have here a number of statements from both the Catholic and the Protestant missionaries, showing the awful effects of this custom, but I need not trouble the House by reading them.

Mr. BLAKE. I think anybody who has read descriptions of this feast will not doubt that it has a very demoralizing tendency in a great many ways. I have had accounts of men of apparently very considerable financial and com-mercial power among the Indians of British Columbia, some of whom I believe have accumulated considerable wealth, and it is all dissipated in the insane exuberance of generosity which seems to be encouraged by these meetings. But the custom is a very old and a very inveterate one amongst them; and without at all saying that the case is not ripe for the passage of such a clause as this, it seems to me that one should be very cautious in attempting suddenly to stop, by the harsh process of the criminal law, the known customs and habits of these tribes. I would therefore strongly recommend the hon. gentleman, with reference to the minimum punishment of two months, to alter the clause, so that for the first two years an almost nominal punishment might, it the authorities thought it expedient, be imposed in the first instance. The point to be attained is to the getting the Indians gradually to see that this practice is contrary to the law; and by the force of the trial and a very triffing punishment the first time, with a warning that would spread amongst them that a much severer punishment might be inflicted on the next occasion, would perhaps repress the practice. But the necessity of inflicting two months' punishment might turn out to be a calamitous necessity.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I will accept the hon. gentleman's suggestion and strike out the words "nor less than two," leaving the maximum, but not the minimum.

Mr. BLAKE. I have another suggestion with reference to the extreme looseness of the provision making those liable to indictment who directly or indirectly encourage an Indian to celebrate the festival, and liable to six months' imprisonment. This is certainly a very vague offence to bring a man for six months to gaol.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Does the hon. gentleman know whether this practice prevails universally in British Columbia? Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It pervades some of the tribes—I think not all; but Vancouver Island is the chief scene of these disorders. Mr. Lomas, who is a very intelligent agent on the west coast of Vancouver Island, says:

"The two customs are intimately connected, because without a donation (potlach) of food, a dance is never held, and these dances have been sadly on the increase during the present winter, and many young men have impoverished themsilves and their families because they had not the moral courage to opose the outtoms. Indeed this want of courage or inability to withstand the sceners of the old people always forms one of the greatest drawbacks in the advancement of the native races on the coast. But in the event of any law being passed, it would be advisable to allow a fired time for its coming into force, as potlaches are in reality a spending of a certain date with interest, or rather with an additional amount, which at some future date has also to be returned either by the recipient, or if he be dead, by some of his sons. Thus, young men themselves opposed to the custom are often drawn in it, but besides the expenses of the potlach, i.e., food, firewood, and attendance on the guests, a large amount of property is always thrown away, to be scrambled for by the invited guests. Local traders derive a benefit from these gatherings, and often encourage the Indians to keep them up, forgetting that were these Indians working their lands, they would be a constant source of profit instead of being, as now, only an occasional one. A few days age I called a meeting of all the leading men of Owichan, Chemainus, and Sasuich bands, on the above subject, and the matter was well discussed, but I regret to say only a few had the courage to stand up and says they would give up both customs, and 3 their best to influence their relatives to do so. Since that time several others have been to request that their names may be added to this list; and as several of these have had land allotted to them, I would auggest that they be supplied with their location tickets at once."

The clergy are exceedingly strong on this subject. Mr. Donckele, the Catholic priest at Cowichan says:

"For many years I entertained the hops that these heathenish practices would have disappeared as soon as the young people alopted the habits of the whites, and applied themselves to the pursuits of various ind stripes; but now I am sorry to state that many of the young men, who for years had improved their fertile lands, built houses and barns on them, and male for themselves and their families an almost independent life, have abandoned their farms and become again the adepts of superstition and barbarism. The evil reached its climax last winter, when some of the most prominent dancers insulted some of their Indian Chiefs, because they insisted on their subjects assuming the habits of the whites an i giving up the savage life of their ancestors. With a view to ameliorate the condition of the Indians and provide them with comfort and happines, I respectfully request you, Sir, in the name of the civilized indians, to beg the Indian Department to have a law to stop the disastrous practice of potlaching, and especially dancing, as it is carried on by the Indians of Vancouver Island. I am thoroughly convinced that unless stringent measures be taken, every effort will be fruitless; for parents bring up their chillren in such a way that it is impossible for anyone to inculcate in their minds any moral, social, or industrious knowledga. The ooly training parents bestow upon their children is cancerning the potlaches and dances. During the whole winter, schools are deserted by all those children whose parents attend the dances. When the winter is over they have squandered all their summer earnings, and are compelled to leave their homes and roam about in their cances in search of fo.d, and thus neglect cultivating their lands and sending their children to school. In the summer they leave again for several months, working abread to earn a few dollars, 1 order to give a dance in the vinier, and spend in one winter's night the earnings of a whole winter. I have lately visited the Indians residing between Cowiches and Nan

His statements are very grievous with respect to the chief dances, and I think we must have stringent legislation to put them down.

Mr. SHAKESPEARE. Not only is it the wish of the clergy that these dances and potlaches should be done away with, but it is the desire of a large number of the Indians on Vancouver Island. Last year I presented a petition to the right hon the leader of the Government from several hundred Indians on Vancouver Island, expressing the wish that the Government would take some steps to do away with these potlaches, as they were demoralizing in the extreme.

On section 4,

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). This seems to be a new clause. I would ask why it is introduced, or rather why it was that according to the old Act an Indian desiring to withdraw from a treaty must sacrifice any annuity he may have received. That is struck out, and now he must give his signification in writing, and the forfeiture is done away with.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It has been represented to the Department that it is desirable that half-breeds who are able and willing to support themselves should be allowed to give up their treaty relations with the Government, and by taking away the annuity, as provided in the old Act, the Government considered it was a bar to enterprise, for the half-breed would not have the same inducement to become self supporting if obliged to give up his annuity.

On section 5,

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. This is an amendment to the 20th section of the present Act and gives the right to the Indian, a right repeatedly applied for, to devise his pro-perty under certain restrictions. The provisions of the present Act will be retained in the case of the Indian who dies intestate, with the proviso that the widow, to be entitled to one-third of the property, must be of good character and have lived with her husband up to the time of his death.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). There are two points which are new in this clause. The power given to devise property is new, and it may perhaps be well to give such power. In devising property, however, the consent of the band is required to the Indian making the will. If an Indian dies intestate, the band has nothing whatever to do with the disposition of his property, but the law directs that one-third shall go to his widow and the remainder be devided equally among his children. In the clause giving power to will property, there is no proviso that the widow must have her third, and the Indian under it could devise his property and leave his wife without anything.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. If an Indian makes a will, he must get the consent of the band, and then the approval of the Superintendent-General, who would, of course, see that if the woman was a person of proper character and living with the husband at the time of his death, she should get her share.

Mr. PATERSON. But if it is provided that the widow shall get a share when there is no will, should it not also be provided when there is a will. Is it not the common law of the land that the wife shall have her dower?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. If an Indian makes a will and it is a reasonable and proper will, subject to the consent of the band as a whole, and to the approval of the Superintendent-General, the will will be made good; and I think, surrounded by these restrictions, the band having an interest in seeing that the widow and children are not thrown on the band, and the Superintendent-General, being the responsible officer, there is not much danger of the children and widow not being protected.

Mr. MILLS. How does the hon. gentleman suppose this clause will be worked out? If an Indian applies to the Superintendent for leave to make a will, must he say how he intends to dispose of his property before he can make the will?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes.

Mr. MILLS. That would be the will of the Superintendent. If that is the intention of the Government, it should be expressed in the Bill. What the hon. gentleman's intention is would be considered undue influence in the case of anybody else.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon. gentleman does not agree with the hon. member for Brant, who thinks the liberty given the Indian is too great, and that there should to be so guarded that an Indian could not jeopardize his be a special provision for the widow to get her dower not whole interest at any moment by any mistake he might withstanding any will. My hon. friend says the Indian should have no such restrictions.

Mr. MILLS. I do not say that. What I want to know is, what power the hon. gentleman intends to give the Superintendent General? In Ontario, at least, it is not in the power of a proprietor to devise it in such a way as to deprive his wife of her dower. The difficulty is this: supposing an Indian made a will completely devising all his property and granting a certain specific sum to the wife in lieu of her dower, the Superintendent General might put her in possession of the property no matter how the law may dispose of it.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes; I think I will alter that clause to read in this way :

"Any Indian who holds, under location ticket or other duly recognized title, any parcel or parcels of land, &c., may devise the same by will, provided that after his death the said will is consented to by the band owning the reserve, and approved of by the Superintendent-General of Indian Affairs."

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). The understanding of that is, then, that he may make a will such as is proper to him, and after his death, if it is not suitable to the Government or to the band, it is of no avail? That is the intention to let him make such a will as he pleases, but before it can be proved or acted upon the consent of the band and of the Superintendent must be had?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes. There is a good deal in what the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) says. If the Indian cannot make the will without the consent of the band and the Superintendent-General, it will be practically the band and the Superintendent-General who make the will. The thing is to encourage the Indian to assume the responsibility of property. He will make the will with the understanding that it cannot go further out of his family than a second cousin. Then he dies, and if it is a reasonable will, of course the local agent will see that the Indians are impressed with the idea that the will should be adopted.

Mr. PATERSON. Then, supposing the will is not approved, would you not require a clause stating that in that case the rule of property affecting an Indian who dies intestate should apply?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes; that is a very good idea. We might insert:

"In case the will is not assented to and approved as aforesaid, the Indian shall be held to have died intestate."

Mr. PATERSON. I think the third ought to be reserved. but I suppose the Superintendent-General will see that it is.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Oh, I think so.

Mr. PATERSON. Is there not a danger that the greatest difficulty the Department will experience in the future is in reference to this matter of the holding of lands by Indians? I do not know what this "location ticket or other recognized title" amounts to; I scarcely know what records are kept; but 1 am aware they have a system of transfers among themselves, and that some of them become possessed of large property and some do not. I suppose the Department are not bound to recognize that, but if it came to a que tion of the enfranchisement of the Indians, the whole question of the holding of property would be one of the most difficult the Department would have to deal with, and it is a question whether this will not give them a firmer holding than they have now.

Mr. MILLS. I am still of opinion that the Indian ought to have, after a certain time and on certain conditions, the power of dealing with the property to a limited extent, but that the law of real property, as applied to Indians, ought make. My observation upon reservations-I do not know how far the hon. gentleman has given attention to the subject-is that there is great inequality in the holding of property amongst the Indians on their reserves; and I believe that a measure somewhat radical in its character will have yet to be adopted with a view to the redistribution of property, to give them all an opportunity of again making a fair start. Then, after that, I think I would give them an opportunity of putting their property in jeopardy for their debts or other obligations, or of renting or disposing of it for a limited period of time, say for five, or six, or seven years, with a provision that, at the end of that time, the property should be free from those obligations, and should again revert to the Indian, if he were living, or in case of his death, to those who, according to law, as the Department thought best it should be provided, would be his heirs. In that way Government would be protected from the possibility of a large number of Indians being left without any visible means of support, or without having any opportunity of earning for themselves a livelihood. When the time comes for their absolute emancipation then they could be put in control of their property the same as the white population, but so long as they are kept as wards of the Government, it seems to me that some opportunity ought to be given them for improvement, but the opportunity ought not to be of so wide a character as to enable the Indian to lose all his possessions. I think it would be well for the Government to deal with the subject from that point of view.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The idea of the hon. gentleman is well worth consideration-not give them the absolute control of their property, because sometimes the Indian, when you give him a momentary advantage, and he feels himself a free man, the first thing he does is to waste his property. However, the idea I shall consider. Of course, I cannot well take it up at this moment. If the Indian has got his location ticket, and thereby shows that he has got individual property, as he must have before he gets the ticket, then he could cumber it or alienate it for a limited period.

Section, as amended, agreed to.

On section 6,

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. This is amended in this way: The old clause provides that if any person or Indian, after having been removed or notified, returns to settle, or hunt, or reside upon, or occupies or uses any of the lots, Sc., shall be liable to fine. But in addition to that, it will now run that "any person or Indian, after having been removed or notified, as aforesaid, or after any cattle or other animals owned by him or in his charge, have been re-moved as aforesaid," &c. Then if the Indian is turned off the reserve and his cattle are put off, we allow his cattle to come back.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). I notice all the words in the first part of the clause are stated again in the convicting portion of it. Now, the hon. gentleman is inserting other words, other things that constitute offences on the part of the Indian in the first clause, and it seems to me it is requisite to have them re-inserted in the convicting part, or else he would not be liable for his cattle; that is, a charge could not be made against him for letting his cattle go back because it would not be in that part of the clause.

Sir JOHN A MACDONALD. You are right, and we will attend to that.

Mr. MILLS. There ought to be some provision to allow the Indians to sell the surplus products of their soil for the year. The hon, gentleman knows that at present an Indian cannot legally dispose of his grain or cattle without a inconvenient. The clause is impracticable, because the Indians must sell sometimes. With those provisions there inconvenient. is no means of practically carrying the law into operation, because if he applies to the agent how is the agent to know whether he is selling too much or too little, whether he is acting providently or improvidently? Everything must depend to a large extent upon the judgment of the Indian himself, and when you say no one shall sell to him, and that he shall not dispose of his property, it seems to me this clause sufficiently protects him. If you are ever going to fit him for habits of self-reliance you must entrust him with the power to dispose of the surplus products of his industry.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon, gentleman must draw a distinction between the Indians of the North-West and the Indians of the older Provinces. The latter Indians always do seil. The Indians on the Brant settlement always sell what they raise, do they not?

Mr. PATERSON. Yes.

Mr. MILLS. They sell, but the man to whom they sell takes the risk, and of course deals with them as if he were insuring himself against loss.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I can assure the hon. gentleman this clause is absolutely necessary as regards the Indians in Manitoba and the North-West. They did a little last year; they will do it largely this year.

Mr. MILLS. What about the furs?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That is not as serious. We know well that they sell a great deal of their furs to the traders.

Mr. MILLS. But they get rid of them illegally.

On section 10,

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. This clause is for the purpose of empowering the Indian Council to pass rules regulating the attendance at school of children between the ages of six and fifteen ycars. The Council have general powers to enforce all their laws.

On section 11,

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. This section is to amend the 75th section of the old Act, by adding thereto the following words, "and no taxes shall be levied on the real property of any Indian, acquired under the enfranchisement clauses of this Act, until the same has beeen declared liable to taxation by a proclamation of the Governor General, published in the Canada Gazette." Experience has shown that many Indians have been prevented from taking advantage of the enfranchisement clauses from fear of being subjected to taxation.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). What rights have the Indians under this enfranchisement. If they acquire the Mr. PATERSON (Brant). same rights as their white brethren they should have the same responsibilities.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. They have not the same rights after they are enfranchised. They have not the right of alienation.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Does this confer the right to vote?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. We cannot confer the right to vote, as this power belongs to the different Provinces. An Act was passed by the Ontario Legislature the other day disfranchising all Indians who receive anything from the Government in connection with their reserve.

On section 12.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. 'The Grand Indian Counlicense or permission from the Superintendent-General, Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. 'The Grand Indian Coun-otherwise his sale will be invalid. That is found to be very cil have repeatedly strongly protested against the state of crime, is not only punished but his annuity is stopped. It seems rather hard that this should be the case, especially as the magistrates do not consider the additional punishment. It is proposed to remedy this state of things.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). In this section I think the word, "may" should be changed to "shall," in regard to costs being defrayed by the Superintendent General. Heavy costs have to be paid in some counties in respect of Indian cases, and it seems only a matter of justice that when so much time is taken up with their trials, and when large expenses are involved, the costs should be paid by the Superintendent General. Does not the hon. gentleman think this is a great hardship, as the Indians do not contribute anything to the municipal funds.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I should not like to make the change without giving it grave consideration. It might have a prejudicial effect on the Indians themselves.

Mr. MILLS. As my hon. friend says, take a county like Brant, for instance, where there are 7,000 Indians, where the expense is very great, where the lands owned by the Indians are not subject to taxation, it is, no doubt, a burden imposed on the county which they should not be called upon to bear, any more than in any other portion of the country at large. Perhaps it might be regarded as something like a hardship if the annuities belonging to our Indians in bands should hear this burden, but it is not so great an injustice as the imposition of the burden on the white population, who already suffer not a little by having the Indian lands wholly exempted from taxation. I think the law should go to the extent of making the annuities liable for the cost of the trial. I think after the discharge from the gaol he should not be longer deprived of his annuity, unless it be for the purpose of paying the costs the country has been put to.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I am afraid the adoption of that suggestion would make too great an alteration in the law.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). While I would be sorry to do anything unjust to the Indians, yet I would point out that the court is taken up one-third, or perhaps one-half its time, with the trial of Indians. If the hon, gentleman looks at the section, he will notice that it is only when a conviction is secured that the Governor General may do this, and I think when the hon. gentleman has drawn the line at that, it does seem to me that it should be made imperative on the Department to pay them in that case. do not ask the hos. gentleman, as I have urged in days gone by, that all the expenses of the trial of Indians should be treated in that way, but I think it would be only justice to insert the word "shall" instead of "may."

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I cannot, without consideration, agree to the amendment. However, I will consider it. and if there be no objection to altering the clause, so that in case of conviction the costs will be paid out of the Indian's own annuity, or may be paid out of the funds of the band, I may adopt it. I wish to get the Bill through, in order to send it to the other House; and if I come to the same conclusion as the hon. gentleman, I dare say I have influence enough to have it introduced in the Senate.

On section 13,

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I propose an amendment to the 95th clause of the existing Act, providing that any person giving the Indians liquor, or an order, verbal or written, shall be liable to the same penalties as if he sold it without such order; and also providing that any person found drunk in any house, tent or wigwam, upon a reserve, against him. I believe that very few Indians have so far if he refuses to leave after being requested to do so by the been enfranchised. The Dominion Act so far has not things under which an Indian, on being convicted of a agent or a constable, shall be liable to the same penalties as if he had supplied intoxicants to Indians, the fines and penalties to be recovered under a similar process. It is also proposed to amend section 95 of the old Act by making a tent or a wigwam used for improper purposes the same as a "house," which is the word used in the Act.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). It also makes the frequenter liable as well as the keeper?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes.

On section 14,

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The 14th clause is simply to add to the 97th clause of the Act the usual clause on summary convictions-that no conviction shall be quashed for want of form or be removed by certiorari, &c., provided there is a good and valid conviction. The 15th clause is an amendment of the 99th section of the Indian Act regarding the enfranchisement of Indians, with the view of facilitating the same. One of the obstructions to enfranchisement is that the majority of the band do not like an intelligent Indian to become enfranchised. Under the present law, an Indian has to obtain the consent of his band to be enfranchised. The amendment provides that the probationary ticket may issue on the authority of the Superintendent-General, after enquiry as to moral character and intelligence; and an Indian admitted to practice law or medicine or who has entered holy orders, &c., may, as already provided by the Act, ipso facto, on petition to the Superintendent-General, become enfranchised and receive an allotment from the lands of his band; and a proviso is added that such Indian, if he is not the recognized holder of a location on the reserve by ticket or otherwise, shall first obtain the consent of the band and the approval of the Superintendent-General of Indian Affairs to such allotment. This appears to be a proper provision, as it is scarcely proper that he should obtain the allotment without the consent of the band.

Mr. DAWSON. I am happy to see that this enfrachisement clause is a step in advance. It is an improvement on the old Act, in so far as it makes it easier for an Indian to become enfranchised. I am afraid, however, that it will still be very difficult for Indians to become enfranchised under this clause, they have to be such a length of time on probation, and have to go through so many formalities, which Indians do not usually understand, and which it is very difficult to make them understand. I think when Indians live like other people, acquire property, build houses, pay taxes, and live as other people do, I think they ought to be considered as enfranchised. Now, the Legislature of Ontario legislates for this Dominion in the matter of elections. At present the law of Ontario is the law of the Dominion. During the last Session, the Legislature of Ontario were legislating in regard to the Indians. In one respect their legislation is very liberal and very just; in another respect, it is very much the reverseit is very narrow and very unjust. Here is a clause relating to Indians in the Election Act passed at the last Session :

"Indians, or persons with part Indian blood, who are entitled to vote where there is no voters' list, shall be the following, viz : All Indians, or persons with part indian blood, who have been duly enfranchised; Indians or persons with part Indian blood who do not participate in the annuities, interest, moneys, or rents of a tribe, band, or body of Indians, and do not reside among Indians, subject to the same qualifications, in other respects, and to the same provisions and restrictions as other per-sons in the electoral dist: icts."

Now, that is a very liberal provision, with the single exception that it excludes Indians who draw annuities from the Government. It cannot be supposed that Indians drawing payment would be under political influences. My experience with Indians is, that they are just like other people part of them are for a candidate, and part of them are worked well. I express the opinion now, as I have expressed it before, that it is contrary to the spirit of our institutions, contrary to the system existing throughout this wide Dominion, that there should be such a large number of people as the Indians without representation in this Parlia ment. The Indians may not on all occasions have a Superintendent General so devoted to their interest as the distinguished gentleman who now occupies that position; and it probably reflects greater credit on the right hon. Superintendent-General himself than many other great things he has done, that he is taking the part of a people who are not in a position to take their own part. There are several hon. members of this House who deserve great credit for the interest they have taken in these poor people; but I think the Indians will never be properly taken care of until they have, in some shape or other, parliamentary represen-tation, like other classes of Her Majesty's subjects.

On section 16,

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). I do not quite understand the reason for this section, which provides for giving the Indians their patent. The old section gives them the patent at the expiration of three years, whereas under this section they will not get it for thirteen years. The old section does not prevent an Indian doirg as he pleases with his land. The new section does not allow him to sell, lease, or otherwise alienate his land, unless with the sanction of the Government. In that case why hold back the patent for thirteen years.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I agree with the hon. gentleman. I will strike that out.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). As to whether it is in the interests of the Indians that they should have their lands in fee simple without these restrictive powers preventing their selling, leasing or alienating them, is a question difficult to decide. We are still keeping them in the position of tutelage, and the enfranchisement may please the Indian a little, as the power to will his property may. After all, it seems to me the Indian will only recognize he is a man when he is made to assume the responsibility of manhood. We will have to come to that point in time, that when he becomes enfranchised the lands ought to be his, to deal with as he pleases. I know there is great danger that the white man will get the better of him, but the position of tutelage will prevent that development of manhood in which we can see the only solution of the Indian question applied to settlement in the country. Even the heirs do not get the land in fee simple. There is no provision that they or their heirs shall at any time have the land in fee simple. Would it not conduce to the well-being of the Indian who is enfranchised if his lands should be liable for debts incurred? He wants to make improvements; he feels the impulse of greater liberty; he wants to have a greater right of manhood conceded to him; he wants to make extensive improvements on his lands, and he will be restricted in doing this because his land is not liable for the debts incurred in making these improvements. I have struck a subject in which the Superintendent-General will not agree with me, and I am afraid to urge it too far, but after all I think the Indian will have to have these rights and responsibilities thrown upon him when we give him the other privilcges.

Mr. MACKENZIE. However much I would like to see the Indians independent, they must submit to a sort of tutelage system for a long time to come. If they were allowed to dispose of their lands, their lands would soon be taken out of their hands, as they are naturally reckless and improvident in incurring debt, and would be thrown on the community for support. So very few would be fitted to exercise this responsibility, that we could not make the law applicable to the whole. Mr. PATERSON (Brant). The safety would lie in the fact that an Indian could not become enfranchised unless by the consent of the Superintendent-General, and supposing a half dozen out of a thousand families were in a position to enjoy those rights, they could not obtain them under this Act.

Mr. MILLS. We can adopt the principle of the survival of the fittest and apply it to the Indians or adopt a tentative policy, one to secure their progress without putting in jeopardy all their possessions. If we adopt the first principle, the vast majority would soon be left without means of subsistence; but I think we have in the history of one people a system upon which real property may be held by the Indian population. In the history of an old and nomadic people taken from the desert, put in possession of real estate, allowed to control it for a certain l mited period, with the right of reversion, we find they succeeded in maintaining a Federal Democratic Government extending over a period of over 500 years, although surrounded by a population having a despotic Government and institutions.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. What case is that?

Mr. MILLS. The laws of Moses applied to the people of Israel. The redistribution, after a certain number of years, secured a Democratic Government amongst them, and prevented the growth of pauperism. I do not see any reason why the same system would not produce similar results among the Indian population. It woull be the best experiment the hon, gentleman could try with the Indians. The Indians could rent property for seven or eight years, and would be responsible for their own improvidence; the property would come again into their possession after a certain length of time, and the hardships they endured while out of possession of the property would be a lesson to them.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Perhaps the Superintendent-General would object to coming under the Mosaic law.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I am opposel, at all events, to the exodus that the hon. gentleman has been preaching so much about. I am afraid this would not do. I quite agree with my hon. friend from East York (Mr. Mackenzie). He is quite right in saying that, even if we enfranchise the Indians, it is not likely that 5 per cent of them would keep their property for ten years. The experiment has been tried. It is true that not many have been enfranchised, but there have been some in various parts of the country. The experiment has not been a success. They have lost their property. I have before me another description of people than the Jew-in the Eyptians. There is a nomadic race. They have never had any property. They are vagabonds and wanderers over the face of the earth, and our Indians would be deprived of all property and would be wandering, Egyptian-like, over this continent. I think we must, by slow degrees, educate generation after generation, until the nature of the animal, almost, is changed by the nature of the surroundings. The present law enables an Indian, after the expiration of three years or such longer period as the Superintendent-General deems right, to obtain the issue of letters patent granting him the land in fee simple. That is deemed to be premature. The Indian has not got far enough advanced.

Mr. PATERSON. Have there been any Indians enfranchised under that, and have the evils flowed from it?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. So it is reported to me. This is more carefully guarded, that, for this patent is issued, the parties shall not alienate the land without the sanction of the Governor in Council. If the Government ascertain that a particular Indian ought to get his patent free of the restriction, he will get it. It seems desirable that the final right of the enfranchised Indian to sell should only be given by the Governor in Council, which would be after investigation into the facts, and after report to the Superintendent General, and by him.

Mr. PATERSON. I would ask the hon. gentleman to strike out the word "lease." That will not allow the alienation of the lands, but will give the Indian some control over his land, and I do not see that any evil result would flow from it. The enfranchisement should carry some privileges with it, and that might be one. I think it is an advantage to have white people living among the Indians, though the whole Indian law and the action of the Department are against it, I know. It is only disreputable people who rent Indian lands now. Perhaps that is too strong a term, but people renting lands from the Indians do it illegally, and the best class of people will not do it. But, if it were legal to rent their land, there are good farmers who would rent it, and farm it in a way which would show an example to those about them. The Indian would get pay for it, and might be working, perhaps, off his reserve. Thus, a double benefit would be secured, for I hold that it is an advantage if you can induce an Indian by any means to leave the reserve for his own benefit. When the Indians increase, as in my county they do, at one one per cent. per annum, and you have only 54,000 acres there, with an ever increasing population, there is the problem: there will not be land enough for them, and any legislation which will encourage them to leave the reserve and spread out and engage in mechanical pursuits, or prepare themselves, by a course of study, for some of the higher walks, is desirable. I cannot see any objection to giving the enfranchised Indian the power to lease, or at all events the Superintendent-General should not divest himself of the power to allow it.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. He does not.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. On what system is the hon. gentleman proceeding in granting these increases? Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD, Mr. McLELAN. Length of service.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Is it intended that the salaries shall increase at the rate of $50 a year?

Mr. McLELAN. The increases have been given on length of service, after full consideration of each case.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Then it is not the intention of the Government to increase the salaries year after year?

Mr. McLELAN, No.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Are any agents employed in Germany or France?

Mr. McLELAN. One is employed, Dr. Hahn.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Out of what amount is he paid.

Mr. McLELAN. Out of the bulk sum for immigration purposes.

Mr. BLAKE. It is always a very difficult thing to unravel the immigration vote, as some salaries are paid out of the bulk sum and some out of special votes. I desire to enquire whether any different system will be pursued this year in regard to continental immigration, consequent on the report of the High Commissioner.

Mr. McLELAN. The system proposed to be pursued is very much the same as that which has been followed hitherto, namely, that of distributing immigration literature and agents' work in the different localities in which they are placed.

Mr. BAIN (Wentworth). I desire to draw attention to one or two circumstances in connection with the European branch of the immigration business. On turning to the Auditor-General's Report for last year, I notice that in every case there has been an over-expenditure in connection with the salaries and expenses of the various agencies. Take for instance the salaries of the immigration agents in Europe. $18,700 was granted, while the expenditure was $24,000 and a fraction. So it is all the way through, both in London and on the continent of Europe. In regard to contingencies, there is an increase from $24,000 to $30,000. In fact, on the expenditure on agencies, for which $61,000 was voted, there was an over-expenditure of no less than $23,000. At that time the vote devoted to immigration purposes was $250,000, and in anticipation of an increased immigration. $25,000 was voted in the Supplementary Estimates, and in consequence of the withdrawal of certain aid from Ontario, $29,000 more was voted. While $23,000 additional expenditure was made by the agencies, the increased immigration did not come, because the amount voted for transportation expenses were not taken up, only $3,000 or $4,000 being used out of a total vote of $29,000. I think there is an opening for explanation in regard to these items. We are rapidly approaching the time when it will be necessary to revise our whole immigration system. We are drifting in the direction of receiving an inferior class of immigrants and spending a great deal more money upon them.

Mr. McLELAN. I understand the gross sum of the vote has not been exceeded; that the expenditure on some particular departments has exceeded what was estimated, while in others it has fallen short of the amount

Mr. BAIN. (Wentworth). I would draw attention to the fact that last year the vote was increased very considerably. I referred, however, to the remarkable fact that the salaries and contigencies had increased so much more rapidly than the figures relating to the transportation of immigrants, showing that we did not receive corresponding returns.

Mr. McLELAN. The salaries have not increased within the last year, but in previous years there has been an expenditure paid out of the bulk sum, of which the hon. gentleman speaks.

Mr. BAIN (Wentworth). There is another item which the hon. gentleman will find by turning to the expenditure which is made for the general expenses of transporting immigrants. There is about $19,000 for special and exceptional travelling expenses, entirely separate from the vote which is taken for those expenses. It does seem to me that our agents are spending a good deal of their time in going back and forth at the public expense.

Mr. BLAKE. Can the hon. gentleman explain why Dr. Hahn, of Reutlingen, is paid out of the bulk sum, instead of the sum appropriated for agents?

Mr. McLELAN. Because he is a temporary agent.

Mr. BLAKE. How long has he been an agent?

Mr. McLELAN. About three or four years.

Mr. BLAKE. At an annual salary?

Mr. McLELAN. At a nominal salary of $500.

Mr. BLAKE. Well, if a man is three or four years in the Service, and is still in the Service, and likely to remain there, I do not think the circumstance that his employment is called temporary is any justification for not paying him out of the vote.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I may say that Dr. Hahn is a gentleman of very high standing, character and ability, in a very important district, and there is no doubt that his servicos have been extremely useful. At the same time, his salary is really only nominal. It is a nominal compensation for services which are considered very important, and still it was not considered desirable to put him in the same position as the permanent employés of the Department, because it was only paid to secure the aid and co-operation which has been zealously rendered, both as a public writer and as a gentleman whose position enables him to exercise a wide influence on a very large number of immigrants, whom it would be impossible to reach in any other way. I had the pleasure of meeting with him and discussing the subject very fully, and I have no hesitation in saying, that in so far as I was able to judge, it would be a great misfortune at present to lose his services for the small amount expended.

Mr. BLAKE. I was not objecting to bis employment. We have no means of judging whether his employment was wise or foolish, whether his services are good or not. I only pointed out that we have a vote for the salaries of agents in Europe. He is not paid out of that vote; the vote is not made large enough to pay him, and he is paid out of the bulk sum. I object, on general principle, to there being proposed a bulk sum of $450,000, of which an indefinite amount is used for the payment of salaries of officers. I say that whether his compensation is $500 or $5,000, if the sum asked for the salaries of agents is not large enough to cover his salary, it should be increased, and we should not have salaries paid out of other votes.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I think the hon. gentleman, on general principles, is perfectly right, and it was because these matters on the continent are, to a certain extent, inchoate and experimental, that it was not thought desirable to embrace him in the list of regular employés, at least until these matters had assumed a more permanent and definite character. There is no doubt that we should show what are the salaries of all these employés, and it would be better to embrace them in the one vote.

tour years; and I am sorry to say we are given no names on was made—and it was considered very important to obtain this list, and we have always great difficulty in reducing this vote to anything like order. All we have is a general statement for European agents, and when we enquire if that is to pay for all these agents, we are told it does not, because one is paid out of the bulk vote. Will the hon. gentleman say who are the agents who are paid out of this $6,900, and what is paid them?

Mr. MoLELAN. There are John Dyke, Liverpool; Thos. Grahame, Glasgow; Chas. Foy, Belfast; Thos. Connolly, Dublin; and J. W. Down, Bristol. There is also a Scandinavian agent, $1,200.

Mr. BLAKE. Where is the Scandinavian agent?

Mr. McLELAN. That office is not filled yet.

Mr. BLAKE. Is it a new office?

Mr. McLELAN. It is proposed to vote that sum to pay for agents in Scandinavia

Mr. BLAKE. Is there any other salary which is not included in the vote for salaries, except Dr. Hahn?

Mr. McLELAN. Not in Europe.

Mr. BLAKE. With reference to the continental work as I mentioned before, the Commissioner states in his report numerous points to be attended to and arrangements to be made, for the purpose of improving our condition with re-ference to continental immigration. I should like to know whether anything, and what has been done in the direction indicated by the Commissioner, with reference to the immigration for this coming spring?

Mr. McLELAN. I believe no arrangements have been completed.

Mr. BLAKE. The Commissioner says :

"I may add, in conclusion, that in my opinion the objects to be aimed at in order to obtain a fair share of German immigration, are a treaty between Great Britain and Germany, under which immigrants to Gazada shall enjoy the same immunity on visiting Germany that those have who become American citizens."

That is one point; then he says :

"Obtaining from the Prussian and Bavarian Governments concessions to the leading Canadian lines of steamers, to enable them to have agencies and book immigrants in Germany."

That is the second point:

"To induce the North German Lloyds to put on a steamer monthly from Hamburg to Montreal."

That is the third point :

"And to secure a rate of passage from New York to the Canadian North-West, not higher than that to the Western Stater."

That is the fourth point :

"It would also be very desirable, if practicable, for a time to set apart a tract of land where German emigrants might be associated together."

That is the fifth point :

" The same thing applies to Swiss emigrants."

That is the sixth point.

Mr. McLELAN. No definite action has been taken on any of these points.

Mr. BLAKE. On none of these points.

Mr. McLELAN. None.

Mr. BLAKE. Oh, dear. Well, does the hon. gentleman expect to get a share of the emigration from these places, because the hon. Minister says that in order to get that these things must be done.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I may say that these points Mr. BLAKE. Well, this arrangement has lasted three or are all being dealt with by the Department. The effort that concessions by which the Allan Line and the Dominion Line of steamships should be allowed to book passengers in Germany, has failed. That is a subject which one does not want to discuss at very great length, because the communications were to some extent confidential; but I need not say to hon. gentlemen opposite that the German Government are very much opposed to any emigration at all. They do not favour it in any way; on the contrary, they are very unwilling that people should leave Germany, and every obstruction is thrown in the way of their doing so. The German engigrants are a very valuable class, and we are very anxious to obtain such numbers of them as can be induced to come to this country. They are hardy, well adapted to our climate, industrious, frugal, and in every way a very desirable class. But the feeling in Germany is not only opposed to emigration, but is every day becoming more hostile to it. Every effort has been made to obtain concessions from the German Government, and I may say that I have had the hearty co-operation of Lord Granville and the British Government in these efforts. The concession that was given to the United States, or rather to an American line of steamers, to have agents in Germany and to book passengers is, I believe, the only concession of the kind that has been granted to any foreign line of steamers or any foreign country. While 1 was in the country, I found that a very stringent order had been issued by the Prussian Government prohibiting even the exhibition of placards pointing out the desirability of emigration to Canada. The Government are making every possible effort to overcome that restriction, and to obtain that for Canada which has been so advantageous to the United States- the means of advertising. No large number of emigrants can be obtained, in Germany at any rate, except through the medium of agents. The steamship agents have practically the control of emigration from the country upon any large scale. With reference to the question of naturalization, or rather denaturalization, people leaving Germany and going to the United States under the treaty between the United States and Germany enjoy advantages which emigrants leaving Germany and coming to Canada have not. Under that treaty, the naturalization in the United States gives them immunity from the obligations that otherwise would devolve upon returning emigrants, which does not exist in the case of persons who come to Canada. There have been, of course, a great many difficulties in connection with it, because parties are naturalized here after three years' residence, whereas in the United States they require five. There was a great deal of difficulty in obtaining that treaty on the part of the United States, and I suppose there will be great difficulty in extending it to Canada, unless the same period is adopted for the purpose of naturalization in Canada that has been adopted in the United States. With reference to the lines of steamships-the North German Lloyds-the United States have a very great advantage, in the fact that they have a first-class line of steamers, recognized by every intelligent person in Germany as a firstclass line, sailing direct from Germany to the United States, and of course that gives them very great advantage. It is impossible for a smaller line of steamers, with less complete arrangements, to at all compete, especially owing to the circumstance that the agents of lines of steamships coming to Canada have not the advantage of booking emigrants to this country. These are all points of import-ance that bear very directly upon the question of obtaining immigrants from that country, and no efforts have been or will be spared in endeavouring to carry this scheme to a successful termination. I am obliged to be, to a certain extent, reticent, because the negotiations had between the representatives of the German Government and myself are, to a certain extent, confidential, and the information obtained in that connection such as would hardly have been cannot help seeing that our expenditure is not yielding us obtained if it was intended that it should be made public. I any return. The most effective agents of German immigra-Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman has explained fully that nothing at all has been done as to the treaty and the concessions to the Canadian lines.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I did not say that nothing was done, but nothing has been brought to a successful issue.

Mr. BLAKE. Well, nothing has been accomplished. He, however, has not stated what steps have been taken with reference to the North German Lloyds placing a monthly steamer on our route.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The difficulty is, that it would probably require a very large subsidy, but that matter has been a subject of discussion between the North German Lloyds and the Government of Canada, and I attach the greatest possible importance to an arrangement being effected by which one of the steamers will be despatched monthly direct to Canada. If that should be obtained, I am quite sure it would enable us to take hold of a very large number of immigrants from Germany, that would not probably be obtained in any other way.

Mr. BLAKE. Has any progress been made in that line. Sir CHARLES TUPPER. It is a mere question of amount. By giving a sufficient sum, of course we could obtain a monthly steamer.

Mr. BLAKE. The next question is, as to securing a passage from New York to the Canadian North-West, on terms not higher than to the Western States.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That has practically been accomplished. Recent arrangements have been made, by which emigrants coming to New York can obtain a very reduced rate of passage and be carried into the North West on quite as favourable terms as to the Western States.

Mr. BLAKE. What about the question of having separate tracts on which German emigrants might be settled.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. There is a very great objection on the part of this Government to isolating particular nationalities in sections of country. We do not consider it desirable to bring together large numbers of persons of a particular nationality in a single district. It is much better for the general development of the country that parties should be freely intermixed. In the next place, it is difficult to do this, because the only means by which it can be done is to isolate a section of country and practically lock it up for settlement, except to a particular class. A great difficulty has occurred in that way; still it has been mot to some extent by enabling parties to make application six months in advance for a certain limited district, and in that way a large number of people may be brought out from one section. I find that in Switzerland, in Holland, in Germany, there is a very strong feeling that we could promote the bringing out of large numbers of useful and valuable emigrants, by giving them the prospect of being in the one neighbourhood, and having intercommunication with each other after they came into the country. I represented that strongly, and measures have been taken to accomplish it to some extent, by enabling agents to make applications for certain districts six months in advance, so as to give them an opportunity of holding them until they can bring out the parties they had arranged to settle on them.

Mr. BAIN. I regret to hear the statements of the hon. Minister in reference to German emigration. For the last five or six years it has been a matter of interest to the Immigration Committee here, how to secure a share of that immigration. When I look at the report of last year, I find we have expended nearly $5,000 in agents' salaries and travelling expenses to secure that continental emigration, and yet when we look at the numbers who reach our shores, we tion are the Germans settled here, who encourage their friends to come out; and considering the difficulties that surround German emigration, I was in hopes we would have secured a share of it by this means. After five or six years steady labour, the whole returns of German emigrants who landed at the port of Quebec, our chief immigrant port, including those who went to the United States, show altogether The Scandinavian emigration makes a still but 1.500. worse display. Last year but 4,700 continental immigrants landed at Quebec, a number of whom went to the United States; the year before 9,600 and the previous year 7,000 landed at Quebec. These figures show very unsatisfactory results for the large expenditure of money we are making on the continent. Our expenditure in connection with the from this country. agencies in Europe last year was over $16,000, not speaking of Dr Hahn's special services and some other allowance not included in that. It is high time to consider whether some other means should not be attempted by which we might more effectually accomplish the object we have in view. I think we are simply throwing away our money in trifling expenses there and elsewhere on the continent, with very unsatisfactory results.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The hon. gentleman is quite right in saying-first, that this is a very desirable class of emigration, and secondly, that the most successful emigrant agents that you can possibly have are the persons in the country, who write to their friends at home as to the character of the country. My hon, friend will see that in that statement he has given the key to the whole difficulty. The fact that the United States have for many years had a most attractive country, presenting to emigrants means of establishing themselves in successful and prosperous homes, and creating hundreds of thousands of the best class of agents, shows my hon. friend where the advantage is, and why it is that they should have the means of attracting so many more persons from Germany and Scandinavia than is possible to Canada, which only yesterday, as it were, was able to present equal attractions to those presented by the United States. My hon. friend will see that it is a matter of slow growth to draw people into the country and to obtain their aid and co-operation. Until that is done, until we have the opportunity of obtaining that influence which will always be a widening and increasing influence, and with the great disadvantage we labour under, of having no line of steamships that is allowed to expose advertisements for emigrants to come to Canada or that dares to book them in Germany, we must always have greater difficulty in obtaining that class of emigrants than the United States, and we must be content to move slowly; but I hope surely, by taking every opportunity in our power of presenting the advantages that Canada possesses as a field for emigration, drawing, if we cannot large numbers, small numbers into our country, and thus obtaining their aid and co-operation in the communications that they will send back to their friends. I can tell my hon. friend that last year, small as he considers the results to have been, we have had the most gratifying evidence that large numbers of communications have been sent back to Germany, to Switzerland, to Norway, to Sweden, and to Finland, from successful emigrants who have come to this country, and have written back in the most glowing terms to their fellow-countrymen, that no country in the world presents greater attractions than Canada; and I have no doubt that every year, making such progress as we can, greater numbers of these people will be attracted to our country. But we have been, as I have pointed out, under great disadvantage, and we cannot expect to obtain very great results in a very rapid manner until these disadvan. tages can be removed.

Mr. BAIN (Wentworth). I certainly agree with the Minister when he says that, so far as the German immigration is concerned, while the growth is slow, it is a growth There is a little increase for a number of years, although it is very slow from German ports. With reference to the news, the good news, the glowing reports that may have been sent home to their friends by the Scandinavians who have immigrated into this countay in former years, I would like to draw the Minister's attention to the report of the immigration from the Scandinavian countries. In 1881, it was 9,600; in 1882, 8,200; in 1883, it had fallen to 4,700. There may be exceptional circumstances that do not appear in the report to account for the decrease, but I should hope that that decrease would not be an index of the nature of the reports which have been sent home to their friends from this country.

Mr. HESSON. My hon. friend might have gone a little further. It might have encouraged the Committee in the work they have in view, which is to expend a little, as I think the evidences are fairly in favour of a very reasonable growth. If my hon. friend had gone a little further back, he would have found that the Scandinavian immigration in 1876 was 1,157; in 1877, 1,004; in 1878, 1,538; in 1879, 2,873; in 1880, 7,402—it appears as if we were getting something for our money—in 1881, 9,600; in 1882, 8,279. It is true that, in 1883, it had fallen to 4,763.

Mr. BAIN. Will my friend explain that, please,

Mr. HESSON. Still it is more than in the vory best years previous to the expenditure in that direction. Now, if we deal with the German immigration---and I am sure my friend is equally anxious with myself and every members of this House to have that immigration encouraged as much as possible, as that of a very desirable class-I think we will find much to encourage us. In 1876, the number of German immigrants arriving at Quebec was 104; in 1877, 84; in 1878, 238; in 1879, 349; in 1880, 307; in 1881, 530; in 1882, 1,024 and in 1883, 1,434. Now, I think these are very gratifying figures, and my friend might as well have given the Committee some encouragement, by showing that it is gradually improving, and that the very work he has, 1 am sure, as much at heart as we have, is very encouraging. I hope the expenditures are not unfairly expended in the interests of developing that very desirable class of immigration.

Mr. McLELAN. The information in the Department is, that in no year has there been so large a remittance of money from the Germans and Scandinavians in the Dominion for the purpose of bringing out there follow-countrymen as in this year.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT: What is the increase in the contingencies and other agencies, not European, caused by?

Mr. McLELAN. For some eight or ten years the sum had been put down at $24,000 and the balance paid out of the lump sum. In conformity with the request of the Auditor, the amount has been put in that has been expended during the past year as the estimate for next year.

Mr. BLAKE. What is the general nature of these contingencies?

Mr. McLELAN. Working expenses of all the agencies, not including salaries.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. That is rather vague.

Mr. BLAKE. Does it include any disbursements for services, any printing expenses or travelling expenses—what is the general character of it?

Mr. McLELAN. No printing expenses. General expenses. Mr. BLAKE. Is it travelling, then? Mr. McLELAN. At all the agencies where the immigrants arrive there are expenses connected with the care of them. It is expenses of this nature.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Is it virtually food and clothing bestowed upon these immigrants who arrive, or what is it?

Mr. McLELAN. Meals furnished to immigrants on the other side, as well as upon this, but no clothing.

Mr. BLAKE. It is principally for food supplied to immigrants on the other side?

Mr. McLELAN. Largely that.

Mr. BLAKE. What proportion of the whole $30,000 is for food?

Mr. McLELAN. I am not in a position to state what proportion that forms of the whole.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. It certainly cannot be bestowed on the other side of the Atlantic, because I find in the Report it is expended in Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Kingston and all the rest of the places here, and that the sums put down for contingencies amount to $29,957 for those on this side of the water entirely. Is the hon. member sure that travelling expenses do not form a large part of this—that these immigrants are not forwarded on ?

Mr. McLELAN. This is made up of the general care of the offices in connection with the arrival of the immigrants —with cleaning of the offices, and all the minor expenses connected with all the agencies throughout the Dominion.

Mr. BLAKE. Well, Mr. Chairman, we know about as much as we did before. In point of fact, the Minister's explanation is that contingencies are contingencies. How is the amount of $7,300, for travelling expenses of agents in Europe, divided up? Is that the continental agents, or the English agents travelling on the continent, or what?

Mr. McLELAN. This is the expenses of the English agents.

Mr. BLAKE. Travelling in the United Kingdom?

Mr. McLELAN. Their general travelling, both on the continent and the United Kingdom.

Mr. BLAKE. How much is supposed to be expended in continental travelling?

Mr. McLELAN. There is no particular sum limited for the Kingdom or the continent, but it is made up of an average not to exceed $4 a day. The expenditure in the Liverpool office last year was—Mr. Dyke, £1,114; Mr. Grahame, £509; Mr. Boyd, £435, and so on.

Mr. BLAKE. Are these all pounds sterling ?

Mr. McLELAN. Yes.

Mr. BLAKE. What is the scale?

Mr. McLELAN. Not to exceed $4 a day.

Mr. BLAKE. Is that the allowance besides the moving expenses, or what?

Mr. McLELAN. That includes all the expenses.

Mr. BLAKE. Including railway fares, and so on?

Mr. MoLELAN. That is the total allowance, including railway fares.

Mr. BLAKE. How much was Dyke's?

Mr. McLELAN. £1,114 4s. (d.

Mr. BLAKE. How many days are there in a year ?

Mr. McLELAN. He made a special journey to the continent and therefore it is a larger sum.

Mr. BLAKE.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman has mentioned the sum of £5,000.

Mr. VAIL. Is there a resident now in Germany, or is Mr. Dyke in the *habit of going over to Germany from time to time?

Mr. McLELAN. He goes over from time to time, under the directions of the Minister. Dr. Hahn, in Germany, is not on the permanent staff.

Mr. BLAKE. How is it that such a large sum appears to be spent in travelling expenses on the part of two or three of these persons? It does not cost more to travel on the continent than it does in England.

Mr. McLELAN. As I said before, special expenses were incurred by Mr. Dyke in travelling on the continent, and then there was Mr. Grahame's office expenses.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not see how a man could expend $15 a day all the year round in travelling.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I may say that Mr. Dyke is an extremely valuable officer: he is most energetic and painstaking, and early and late is engaged in every possible way in advancing the interests of Canada, and I think it will be found that his expenses embrace the employment of a clerk. If my hon, friend were to visit Mr. Dyke's office, and see how multifarious are the duties he has to perform, the persons with whom he has to communicate, and the great correspondence he has to carry on, I think my hon. friend would be the last to complain of the remuneration he receives. I do not believe there is an officer of Canada who renders more valuable service for the amount of money he receives than Mr. Dyke.

Mr. BLAKE. Mr. Dyke's salary has been voted, and I presume it is what the Government think his services are worth. No one objects to that. Then we ask what the contingencies are, and we are told those contingencies of $30,000 are for travelling expenses. I ask what is the scale for travelling expenses. I ask what is the scale for travelling expenses and I am told they are not to exceed $4 per day. Then I ask what is the amount, and I am told one officer gets £1,095 in England, a year, for travelling expenses. Then the Minister says there were special expenses. Now, Mr. Dyke, who has so much to do, cannot be travelling all the time when he is at work in Liverpool. Therefore, there are fewer days, and therefore the rates of travelling must be still higher—unless he travels all the time. The question is, how does he spend all this money.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The hon. gentleman is quite mistaken in saying he expends all this money.

Mr. BLAKE. I have it from the Minister.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. There is no such amount as $30,000 paid for travelling expenses.

Mr. BLAKE. I am speaking of this $\pm 1,095$ paid to Mr. Dyke.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. It includes office expenses; there is a very large office, and an enormous amount of work to be done. There is an important office in the heart of Liverpool to be maintained; it is thronged with people from Monday morning till Saturday night. Various products of the country are displayed in it, and there is an enormous amount of literature distributed, which requires the employment of assistance. This is not an unreasonable sum to pay a clerk and the travelling expenses of Mr. Dyke when he is obliged to visit the continent on business with the agents there.

Mr. BLAKE. We must take the information as we get it. I asked what this $\pounds 1,095$ was for, and I was told it was for travelling expenses. I asked how it was that there was special expenses, because Mr. Dyke was under the Department, and now the hon. gentleman says it is partly for the office. We want to know how much for one, and how much for the other.

Mr. McLELAN. I spoke before I had received all the information regarding Mr. Dyke's special service on the continent. Afterwards I learned that another portion of the sum was used in expenses for the office. We have the details of all that money, and can show them to the hon. gentleman.

Mr. VAIL. I would like to ask what sort of information is given to the immigrants on the other side-whether any inducements are held out for them to come to the Lower Provinces, or whether they are all advised to go to Ontario and the North-West. The reason I ask is because a letter was written on this subject by a gentleman in England addressed to one of the papers of Nova Scotia, and as it is very short I will read it. It is dated 26th of February, and it says :

"Allow me to trouble you with the correction of an error on the part of the printer of the letter I wrote to the Colchester Sun on the subject of immigration to Nova Scotia. The mistake unfortunately is a serious one, as it makes out Mr. Colmer to have said what he never said at all. The correction is as follows: In place of my having written 'yet as a friend (not as a friend, as you will imagine, of Nova Scotia, but of me) he advises no one to settle in Nova Scotia.' I wrote 'Yet as a friend (not as a friend as you will imagine of Nova Scotia, but of me) he advised me not to settle in Nova Scotia.' "This describes what actually took place, and fortunately my wife was present with me so that my version of the affair does not rest upon my unsupported testimony. The fact speaks for itself that we went to the Commissioner's office that day, thinking only of settling in Nova Scotia, and so completely were we influenced against such a step that we immediately wrote off to Galt, Ontario, to friends there, about stay-ing with them while we took steps to settle in Ontario. However, ing with them while we took steps to settle in Ontario. However, shortly after, very providentially, we made the acquisitance of the Hon. P. C. Hill, at Ilfracombe, Devon, and after conference with him reconsidered our decision. "I will only trouble you with one word more. I am at a loss to understand why an enquirer, visiting the Canadian Commissioner's office in London should have given to him a voluminous catalogue of farms for sale in Ontario, whilst no such inducement is held out with regard to Nova Scotia."

I read this letter so that the High Commissioner may take a note of it and make enquiries, because it seems to me that if immigrants desire to settle in Nova Scotia, they should have information furnished them as to whether they will have an opportunity, after arriving there, to purchase farms or not.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am very much obliged to the hon. gentleman for bringing up this matter, which I regard as one of very considerable importance. The moment I saw a statement made by a member of the Legislature of Nova Scotia, in which he gave the letter which the hon. gentleman has just read, I addressed a letter to Mr. Colmer, enclosing the hon. gentleman's statement and asking him for an explanation. I may say that the interview in question took place before I had the honour of holding the position of High Commissioner. It was held, a considerable time ago, I think in 1882; and in reply to my communica-tion, Mr. Colmer stated he was unable to remember the interview. When I tell hon. gentlemen that in the course of a week, as many as hundreds of persons have interviews in regard to immigration matters, at my office in London, they will see that it is not very easy to remember all the personal details of a conversation that took place more than a year ago. Mr. Colmer stated that he did not recollect what had taken place, but he forwarded to me the letter which he received from this gentleman, and the answer which he had sent to him. Certainly there was nothing in the correspondence of which to complain. Before Mr. Colmer received my letter he saw in a newspaper reference to this matter and he had voluntary explained it. Subsequently he received my letter, and made that communication an official reply, which I shall have great pleasure in laying on the one section of the Dominion than another. I am free to inform the Committee that if there is not more complete and authentic information in regard to Nova Scotia at the disposal of the High Commissoner in London, I think the hon. member for Digby (Mr. Vail) is very much to blame for it. What has Ontario been doing? She has sent her agents abroad. When I was at the the Royal Agricultural Exhibition at York, I found an energetic agent of the Ontario Government availing himself of every opportunity to place literature in the hands of the public who visited the exhibition of Canadian products, and of pointing out the enormous advantages possessed by Ontario over those of any other Province. If the hon. member for Digby, who occupied an important and responsible position in the Nova Scotia Government, and who has long been recognized as one of the leading members of his party, that party which had control of the Province since Confederation down to the present day, with the exception of a short period-if they had followed the example of Ontario in distributing information and pointing out the great advantages of the Province-and Nova Scotia undoubtedly possesses enormous attractions and great natural advantages—if those hon. gentlemen had done their duty to the Province there would have been no ground for complaint. Because the High Commissioner's office, instead of containing an old pamphlet published years ago, containing a very meagre description of the Province, justice would have been done to that most important sec-tion of this great Dominion. I therefore think the hon. member for Digby is greatly to blame. He will find, however, in the pamphlet just prepared, which has the great advantage of bearing the im-primatur of the Imperial Government, a pamphlet prepared by Mr. Colmer under my direction, that every possible justice is given to Nova Scotia-and this is the only pamphlet published for general circulation--and the great attractions and advantages which that Province presents are depicted in the most striking light. This result has been largely accomplished through the energy and enterprise, not of the Government of Nova Scotia, but of a private individual, Mr. Wm. Prior, one of the most intelligent and able citizens of Halifax, who sent me a pamphlet in which he detailed all these various advantages; and having culled from it a number of its most important and attractive features, the pamphlet itself was forwarded to the Minister of Agriculture, and is now in the press, to be published by this Government for the purpose of giving Nova Scotia the benefit of having its advantages portrayed by one of its own citizens in the most glowing colours warranted by the opportunities presented to immigrants. I am glad to be able to give the hon. gentleman this evidence that the Government are not wanting, that the High Commissioner is not wanting, and that Mr. Colmer is not wanting, in efforts to attract the emigrant to that most important field for emigration, Nova Scotia.

quite possible that in conversation Mr. Colmer may have dealt somewhat more emphatically and enthusiastically on

Mr. VAIL. I did not intend to find fault with the management of the emigration office in London. I was merely calling the attention of the High Commissioner to this letter, written by a gentleman who is a reliable man and a barrister of Lincoln's Inn. No doubt it will be very gratifying to the hon. gentleman to know that so long as I had anything to do with the Government of Nova Scotia, we kept a paid agent in England, and succeeded in obtaining a considerable number of emigrants for Nova Scotia. But instead of that course being taken by the present Government, they dismissed that gentleman, who was paid a certain sum for acting as agent for Nova Scotia as well as agent for the Dominion, and Nova Scotia has not had an agent there since. Table of the House, together with the other letter. It is I can well understand that Ontario, a rich Province, is able to keep an agent in England and distribute literature there. It is not so with Nova Scotia. Up to a certain time the Dominion Government granted to the smaller Provinces a certain sum from the Dominion Treasury, to be expended for immigration purposes.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. You stopped that.

Mr. VAIL. That was withdrawn; and in consequence of the straitened circumstances of the smaller provinces they were not in a position to keep immigration agents on the other side of the Atlantic. Now, I do not hesitate to say that the immigration which we want there is of a very limited character, and of a limited class. We do not want mechanics, nor do we want artisans to any extent. We want a certain kind of agriculturists, who are able to bring a little money into the country to purchase the farms of the people who have been obliged to leave the Dominion of Canada, in consequence of the course pursued by the Dominion Government, and take the place of the people who have been driven out. I say we want people of that class to a limited extent. Now, it is a very easy matter for the Immigration Office in London to inform people, when they go there asking for information with regard to Nova Scotia, to tell them that there is every advantage offered in that Province for that particular class of immigrants; and all I desire of the High Commissioner is, that when people go to his office who want to come to Nova Scotia, and who desire information with respect to that Province, he should be prepared to give them the same information with regard to that Province as he gives respecting other Provinces, to those who think of emigrating to them. I do not think that is at all unreasonable, considering that he is a Nova Scotian himself; and I hope that in the future the interests of Nova Scotia will be quite safe in his hands.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. What does the hon. gentleman want? The other day, fault was found because immigrants were sent to Nova Scotia.

Mr. VAIL. No, no.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes; the statement was made that Nova Scotia was not a place for immigrants. Just now he has said that the people of Nova Scotia were starved out, in consequence of the policy of the Government, and had to go away. He claims that we did not encourage emigration, and still we are starving out the people so that they go away. The honesty of the plan of the hon. gentleman is exhibited in this way : he says the people are starved out, but he wishes the people to come from England to take their places, and be starved out, too. That is the statement. In the first place, he objects that the Dominion Government do not work hard enough to bring immigrants into Nova Scotia, and then he says that those who are there already are being starved out and are going to the United States, and he wishes us to bring out new men to take the places of those who went away to avoid starva-tion. Then he also says we drove away the immigration agent who was there in his time, Mr. Annand. Now, how much did Nova Scotia pay of his salary ? Did it pay anything ?

Mr. VAIL I think, $2,000. At all events, he received a certain sum from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, which I thick in the aggregate amounted to $2,000 or else Nova Scotia paid that amount alone.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon. gentleman says also that the Government of the Dominion had formerly contributed to the expenses of immigration in the different Provinces, and he complains of that." He did that; his own Government, Mr. Mackenzie's Government, are to blame. We paid until we went out in 1872; and when we came back, we paid the balance which the hon. gentleman de-lassisted passages and in the publication of literature setting Mr. VAIL.

clined to pay when he was there. You may judge of the justice of the hon. gentleman's statement from that fact.

Mr. VAIL. I was not complaining of this money being withdrawn. I was only giving it as a reason why it was not continued on the other side. Now, the hon. gentleman thinks it strange that we should say that we want people to come into the country and take the place of those going away. Why, Sir, that is the way the Government have been acting all the time, bringing people into the country to take the place of those who have been going from Ontario and the other Provinces, to the United States, and they have scarcely been able to supply their places. All we want in Nova Scotia is a few, at any rate, to take the places of the great many who have been driven out.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The fact of the matter is, that for the last ten years, for every four or five immigrants you have bought into the country and paid for, you have not kept one. That is shown by the Census return. I say that the Census return of the last ten years, as laid on the Table, show that conclusively. If the hon. gentleman chooses to look at them and study them, as he never has done yet, he will see it for himself. We brought in 342,000 odd in the last ten years, and the Census shows that we have not kept more than 80,000 or 90,000. That is the result of the Census returns. Does the hon. gentleman doubt it?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I do.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Let the hon. gentleman take the Census returns of 1881. I will give him the details if he likes. Does the hon, gentleman admit them, or does he want them?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I shall be glad to have them.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. If the hon. gentleman does, I will give them, though I doubt it considerably.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That is hardly parliamentary.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I said I doubt; I do not deny. The fact was that in our old Provinces in 1871 we had a foreign-born population of about 593,000. We got 342,000 into Canada between 1871 and 1881 and even if you choose to allow 120,000 deaths among the foreign-born population, which is a very large number, you find that in 1881 we had 27,000 less, by these returns, in the old four Provinces; so that, practically speaking, of these 342,000, whom we paid for and brought into the country, we only succeeded in keeping about 90,000. Now, those figures are taken from the Census returns of 1871 and 1881.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. How many went to Manitoba, and how many died?

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Only 18,000 or 19,000 Europeans went to Manitoba, and I have allowed a reasonably large death rate. We have 27,000 less in 1881 in the four Provinces of foreign-born population than in 1871. That is the result, after nominally bringing in 342,000. That shows that the whole system is rotten and defective to the base. I hope the hon. gentleman representing the Minister of Agriculture will be able to give some more intelligible account than his report gives of the 133,000 people they say they brought into the country last year, and of whom I do not believe 20,000 have stayed here. I would like to ask what is going to be done with this sum of nearly half a million, which is to be spent towards assisting immigration and immigration expenses.

Mr. McLELAN. I do not suppose the system will differ very greatly from the system pursued in past years. The money will be expended in the transport of immigrants in forth the claims of the Dominion to intending immigrants. The question was asked what are the instructions to the immigrant agents. I may say that written instructions are given to present the attractions generally of the Dominion. If enquiry is made regarding any particular Province, in-formation is given respecting that Province. The Province of Ontario had an immigrant agent at the Fisheries Exhibition. He applied for a stand, and I allotted him one for the distribution of his literature. It was brought to my notice that he was presenting the attractions of Ontario at the expense of the other Provinces, and representing that Ontario was the only Province of the whole Dominion worth visiting. When I heard of this, I gave him to understand that he might present the attractions of Ontario alone, but that he must not disparage the other Provinces, and that if he wished to take that course he must leave the building. The instructions we have given to the agents have been to present the claims of the Dominion at large, and to give information of the different Provinces when asked for it. It is not probable that there will be a very large amount of money spent this year on assisted passages. An arrangement was made last year by which there was a considerable expenditure on this account. Major Gaskell, who represented the Irish Commissioners of Emigration in the Dominion, made an arrangement with the Government of Ontario that that Govcrnment should receive the emigrants sent out by that Board and find them employment if they were delivered at Toronto. He then came to the Department and communicated the arrangement that he had made with the Government of Ontario, and the Dominion Government agreed to give to ' That that class a certain amount in assisted passages. swelled the expenditure on that account last year very considerably. The Ontario Government, however, have found that 15 or 20 per cent. of those sent ont by Major Gaskell from the unions and workhouses remained in the city of Toronto as subjects of the charity of the public. The Ontario Government have therefore withdrawn from that arrangement, and of course the Dominion Government will not be called upon to pay any more assisted passengers for that class of emigrants. So that the amount will this year be largely reduced, and it will be confined to agricultural labourers and female servants. Otherwise, there will be no great change.

Mr. BLAKE. Will the hon. gentleman state what the arrangements were for assisted passages last year. I think that the different classes last year were $\pounds 2$ 10s., $\pounds 3$ and $\pounds 4$.

Mr. McLELAN. The rates of assisted passages were $\pounds 2$ 10s. for the Irish emigrants and $\pounds 3$ for servant girls and agricultural labourers; the $\pounds 4$ rate has been hardly ever in practice.

Mr. BLAKE. What portion has the Government contributed to each of these rates?

Mr. McLELAN. Many of the arrangements with the steamship lines are confidential, and without their consent ought not perhaps to be made public.

Mr. BLAKE. I am not asking about any particular steamship line.

Mr. McLELAN. About $\pounds 1$ was contributed to the $\pounds 2$ 10s. and the $\pounds 3$ rate.

Mr. BLAKE. What about the £4 rate?

Mr. McLELAN. That was practically unused, and the proportion contributed by the Government would depend upon the rate charged by the steamship company.

Mr. BLAKE. How much money was used in assisting passages last year?

Mr. McLELAN. About $50,000.

Mr. BLAKE. How much does the hon. gentleman expect to spend this year?

Mr. McLELAN. I cannot tell exactly. When the Ontario Government withdrew from that arrangement the question was asked of the Dominion Government if they were prepared to continue to receive that class of emigrants, and the answer was no.

Mr. BLAKE. So that the £2 10s. rate will not be in force?

Mr. McLELAN. The £3 rate is in force for domestic's servants and agricultural labourers. But the £3 10s. rate' will not.

Mr. BLAKE. There is a proportion, I suppose, for children, besides.

Mr. McLELAN. The children's rate is £2.

Mr. BLAKE. Then, what about the £4 rate?

Mr. McLELAN: The £4' rate is practically abshilding: The rate depends on the rates of passages of the steamshild? companies.

Mr. BLAKE. A £4 rate will not involve any cost to the Government, but the hon. gentleman intends to keep the £4 rate in force, so that if the rate is higher the passage will still be given at £4. But to what class of passinguts?

Mr. McLELAN. General labourers.

Mr. BLAKE. All sorts.

Mr. McLELAN. General labourers of all sorts,

Mr. BLAKE. Mechanics.

Mr. McLELAN. Not to mechanics. General labourers, agricultural labourers and female servants; during the pastyear also to the union people, but that has been struck out under the arrangement of the Imperial Government.

Mr. BLAKE. The £2 10s. rate is off and the £3 rate excludes all but agricultural labourers and general servatits; the £4 rate applies to general labourers, 1 suppose, not agricultural labourers. It would include navvies, 1 suppose, to build the Canadian Pacific Railway, and also labourers in the trades, such as hod-men—industrial labourers.

Mr. McLELAN. Yes; the hod-man is a labourer.

Mr. BLAKE. No person above the rank of an industrial labourer, such as the hod-man, shall get the advantage of it.

Mr. McLELAN. In particular cases the agencies may be imposed upon by individuals representing themselves to be labourers, but the understanding is that mechanics shall not be assisted, as they have the means of paying their passages.

Mr. BLAKE. Will the hon. gentleman state about how much he expects to pay for assisted passages this year?

Mr. McLELAN. I cannot make a close estimate of that.

Mr. BLAKE. The number is an average. Strike out the £2 10s. rate and you can find the average at £4 and £3.

Mr. McLELAN. These are not separated in any returns I have before me; the amounts expended in each are not separated.

Mr. BLAKE. Then the Department does not keep its accounts in such a way that it is able to tell the assisted passages of the different classes. Are there not, besides the ocean passage from Liverpool to Quebec, other expenses incurred in connection with assisted passages on the other side of the water.

. Mr. McLELAN. No; during the past year the practice was that where emigrants arrived at the port of Queber and _ had not the means of paying their fare to the other parts of the Dominion, assisted passages were given them to the nearest points at which there was known to be labour. The Ontario Government paid the passages of female servants and agricultural labourers from the port of Quebec to Toronto, where they were distributed.

Mr. BLAKE. Is that intended to be continued this year, as far as the Dominion Government is concerned?

Mr. MoLELAN. That has been the system in operation almost since Confederation.

Mr. BLAKE. This is a very large question, on which we have had general information, but on which details require to be furnished as to the rate from Quebec to the North-West, and also the details of the arrangement for a low rate from New York to the North-West.

Mr. McLELAN. An arrangement has been perfected by which a rate will be had from Quebec to the North-West, for about $30, and in the same way from New York.

Mr. BLAKE. Those interesting facts, in the bald form in which they are now stated, have been published for some time, but how far the Government contributed to the Quebec rate and how far to the New York rate we do not know.

Mr. McLELAN. There is no arrangement with the Government to contribute anything.

Mr. BLAKE. There has been no expense to the public in this direction?

Mr. McLELAN, No.

Mr. BLAKE. How is the arrangement as to the picking? Is it to be arranged by the steamship company or by the Government, who should be assisted?

Mr. McLELAN. The arrangement is that the Government shall decide on the parties entitled to receive cheap rates. The agents at Quebec will choose those who will get the $12 rate.

Mr. BLAKE. Then the railway company carries them but the Government does not pay?

Mr. McLELAN, No.

Mr. BLAKE. How is it the Government has to decide, then?

Mr. MoLELAN. That is a matter left entirely with the Government agent, to determine what European emigrants are to receive the $12 rate.

Mr. BLAKE. What is the arrangement for deciding that with reference to New York? Who determines that?

Mr. McLELAN. The emigrants have certificates from the other side that they are going into the North-West, and are emigrants.

Mr. BLAKE. What arrangements have been made with reference to repatriating our own people?

Mr. McLELAN. It is understood the same rates apply to them.

Mr. BLAKE. Has the Government anything to do with the selecting or the certificating of these?

Mr. McLELAN. The Government agent in the New England States gives the certificates.

Mr. BLAKE. What will the rate be from Worcester?

Mr. McLELAN. The arrangement is $10 from Montreal, and the Vermont Central will give them reduced rates to Montreal.

Mr. BLAKE. They are got at a reduced rate from the Eastern States to Montreal, and then?

Mr. McLelan,

Mr. McLELAN. And then go on by the Canadian Pacific Railway, at $10 from Montreal.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I want to understand from the Minister in charge where these 133,000 persons are distributed. Apparently 9,000 come to British Columbia; apparently 21,000 or so, Americans and Europeans together, although that is probably an excess, come to Manitoba; by a return which was brought down the other day, 37,000 are alleged to have come to Ontario. Is that correct?

Mr. McLELAN. Whatever is stated in the book is correct?

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Then it follows, if whatever is stated in the book is correct—and I suppose the hon. gentleman knows whether it is or not—that we have the statement that about 67,000 people have been brought in, chiefly from Europe, in the last year, and settled in the Maritime Provinces and in Quebec. Is that the statement the hon. gentleman makes? Are those 67,000 in the opinion of the Department, immigrants who have settled in the Province of Quebec and the Maritime Provinces; and, if so, in what proportions?

Mr. MoLELAN. The account is that they are settled in the different Provinces stated in the several reports.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I do not see any statement as to the proportion, for Quebec or the Maritime Provinces. Where is it? The only statements I have as yet seen refer to British Columbia, Manitoba and Ontario, and these collectively amount to 67,000. There are 132,000 to be accounted for, and I wish to know whether the Minister supposes that these 67,000 have come within the last year to the Maritime Provinces and to Quebec, and in what proportion?

Mr. McLELAN. The numbers of the immigrants are taken at the port of entry, and they are not traced and kept sight of so closely as to give the hon. gentleman the information he desires, but at the port of entry the different numbers of immigrants arriving there are stated, and these are held to be correct in so far as that they are published as the correct return of the immigrants arriving at the several ports. They may pass from one Province to another, and settle in another, or they may pass through one or two Provinces, but they are held to be correct in the main, as to the numbers entering at the different points and settling in the Dominion.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I have no doubt the Minister is stating accurately enough what is supposed to be the case, but I call his attention to this, that it seems scarcely humanly possible that there can have been 67,000 immigrants settled in the Maritime Provinces and in Quebec in the past year. The total number of those of foreign birth in those Provinces is very small, and it would be utterly out of the question that such an enormous immigration should come into them without everybody being acquainted with it. I would like to know from my friends in Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick, and Quebec, and Prince Edward, whether they have seen many thousands of immigrants during the past year. .

Mr. DAVIES. Not one in the Island.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Perhaps my friend from Digby could tell us of the number in Nova Scotia.

Mr. VAIL. I have not seen any.

An hon. MEMBER. There was one in New Brunswick.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. There must, I think, be something seriously astray in this matter. The return laid on the Table by the Department a few weeks ago showed clearly enough that, according to the information in the hands of the Department, about 37,000 had come to Ontario; the others we had, and it leaves unaccounted for about 67,000, who are supposed to have come to Quebec and to the Maritime Provinces. My own impression is this: It may be or it may not be that the accounts are accurately kept, and that 133,000 persons came here alleging themselves to be immigrants, but I am perfectly certain, from the evidence of the Census returns, that of those who come here and who are paid for, more or less, by this country, an enormous proportion do not stay here. They go through, but do not remain in Canada. If they do stay here, it would be only evident that the displacement of our own people would be even larger than any of us have supposed it to be. I am quite sure that of these persons, it would be very difficult to trace the 67,000 immigrants who are not accounted for to the several Maritime Provinces and Quebec.

Mr. BAIN. While we are discussing the question of the numbers who have arrived in these Provinces, I would call the attention of the Minister to two statements furnished to us officially. One—I dare say most of the members of the House have seen it—appeared in the Toronto Mail, under date of January 10th. It was headed "From he Capital;" and the total immigration for the month of December into the Dominion, including Customs returns, was set down as 7,139; previously reported, 175,000; which, with the additions to it, made the total immigration into the Dominion 183,105. The statement then went on to give the proportions that had passed through the American side, showing that 2,500 had gone west in that month, leaving, with those previously reported, a total of 72,851, and the report finished up in this fashion:

"There remained in the Dominion of the total movement of population during last year 110,284, against remaining in the country in 1882, 99,218, abowing a clear gain of a fraction over 11,000."

Perhaps the Minister would explain the subsequent sources of information by which that number was increased from 110,000 to 133,000.

Mr. MoLELAN. The returns were not perfected—the returns from some of the outer agencies—and it was from the information as to the numbers at that period. Subsequently, the correct returns were put in, and the figures corrected so as to be those found in the report.

Mr.BAIN(Wentworth). But the Returns that were published in the journal on that occasion go very much into detail. For instance, we have the entry by Halifax of 523 for the month of Dec.; Montreal, from various United States ports, 422; Suspension Bridge, 2,561; Emerson, from the United States, 176; Gretna, 193; various agencies, 189; Customs returns, 3,072. Now, if I understand this report correctly, these are the monthly returns, made by the various agencies, and you will observe that this report covers all the main points of entry into our Dominion, with the exception perhaps of St. John, which is not included. Now, it does seem to me that, when this return was presented to the Mail on the 10th January, ten days after the December returns had been completed and sent in, and they are in this detail from all these various ports, including not only that but the agencies, which I may say are the various inside points, such as Toronto and Kingston and several other points where parties pass back and forth, and make Custom house entries or entries in connection with the agencies, it shows that all these points had reported for the month of December, and it seems extraordinary that there should be this large discrepancy between 110,000 and 133,000.

Mr. McLELAN. It is extraordinary that a newspaper should get an incomplete report of the figures I had in my office at that time. As I said before, when the Mail procured that from the office the returns from all the agents had not been received and not been made up.

Mr. BAIN. I have already drawn the Minister's attention to this fact, that the returns are given for the month make up the 133,000.

of December for all the ports with the exception of St. John.

Mr. McLELAN. Not from the Province of British Columbia, where there were 9,000, which were not included.

Mr. BAIN. Would not ten days be sufficient to get in[•] formation from British Columbia? I observed, in looking over the returns brought down on motion of the leader of the Opposition, that they had been expeditiously furnished by some of the agents who telegraphed them weekly. For instance, here is a telegram from Winnipeg, dated 28th June, 1883, to John Lowe, Department of Agriculture:

"Une hundred and eighty-seven, via Port Arthur, week ending 16th. (Signed) "W. C. B. GRAHAME."

I admit that it is not very distinct, but it is the first telegram sent down of the number of passengers that went into the North-West by Port Arthur. The next one makes it a little more distinct:

"June 28th.-Number of passengers, via Port Arthur, ending 23rd inst., 284 souls.

(Signed) "W. C. B. GRAHAME."

Now, some of these agents were so careful as to make weekly returns, and some of them made regularly monthly returns: for instance, the agency at Emerson covers each month seriatim in succession, and the same can be said of the agency at Montreal, and also at Halifax and St. John. The returns with reference to the port of Quebec are not quite so distinctly given. I am at a loss to understand why the roturns were not all in, when some of the agents were so careful as to make weekly returns. With the exception of the agent at Coaticooke, who made quarterly returns, they appear to have been all made from month to month, with the exception of the British Columbia return, which appears to have been made in a lump on the 31st of December. That one reports 9,000 immigrants-6,000 whites and 3,000 Chinese. I do not know whether our friends in British Columbia will give the Government much credit for the importation of those Chinese; I do not know whether the Minister could tell us what agent it was that secured those Chinese. There is one comfort in it, and that is that the year before, the Chinese immigration was over 7,000, so it appears to be diminishing. But I complain of the report as not reliable.

Mr. HESSON. You are depending upon newspaper reports?

Mr. BAIN. But I take it from the paper which is recognized in Ontario as the official organ of the Government. It is dated from the Capital, and gives the returns in detail from the various ports. If they will tell us that these figures are the guesswork of the Mail correspondent, then I will accept the statement.

Mr. HESSON. I think the Minister has given all the information in his power. The report is very clear. There is a certain number set down as coming into the country; where they are a month after arrival, it is difficult for the Minister to say. He may be able to trace those who make entries at the Custom houses, and we find that some 35,000 of these were distributed through the various Provinces, but beyond that it is difficult for him to say where men who have entered to day will be a week hence. I do not think we ought to be called upon to answer newspaper statements in dealing with a question of this kind. I am sorry the Minister cannot give better information, but I am sure that if it were in his power he would gladly do so.

Mr. MoLELAN. I may say that in addition to the 9,000 in British Columbia, the Algoma return was not in at that time, which amounted to 15,000. This number brings up the total to nearly 126,000. There were some other points from which the returns were not completed, which would make up the 133,000.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The hon. gentleman. has just alluded to a matter that deserves consideration, as showing the probable value of these returns. There are about 10,000 alleged to have come in at Algoma, and I think at Prince Arthur. Now I take it those are all American navvies who were brought in by the contractors, and were in no sense immigrants. They are brought in for a particular work, just as they were brought in during the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway through Winnipeg to certain portions of Manitoba, and as soon as their work was done they took their money and went back to the United States. So I presume these 10,000 will in all human likelihood do the same as soon as the work on the Canadian Pacific Railway is over. Now, the Minister will hardly say that this class of people are immigrants in the ordinary sense and, acceptation of the term.

Mr. McLELAN. You cannot tell how long these immigrants will remain in the country, but the labourers who came in to work on the railway will no doubt remain until it is completed, and then employment will be given to a large number of them in working the road. I have no doubt that valuable agricultural lands will be occupied by them;; these men, will take up farms and become residents there, and in one way or another a large proportion of those who went to Algoma will be absorbed and remain as residents.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I greatly doubt it, and I may remark that those returns I quoted from were brought down by the Department, and if it be as the hon. member for Perth says, that the only returns that are of any value are those made through the Customs, as showing the des-tination of the settlers, it is a pity the Department brought down those returns if they are so unreliable. It is clear the Department have very little means of checking who those emigrants are, where they come from, or where they are going. Now, I would like to know from the hon. Minister what steps are really taken to ascertain who are the settlers coming into Manitoba. I have been in Manitoba several times, and never saw yet one of his agents attempting to take the numbers of people who were passing through in any train on which I have been.

Mr. McLELAN. They saw the hon. gentleman, and as they did not think he was a good settler, they did not put him down

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. They knew as little about the matter as the hon. gentleman who is now undertaking to pass this estimate, and took as little pains to ascertain the true number of settlers. The fact of the matter is, that the immigration statistics are worthless, in the most emphatic sense.

Mr. BAIN. In the report, Algoma is credited with 6,185, and north of Lake Superior with 4,250. I admit the difficulty under which the Department is placed. These immigration figures are made up to the close of the year, and while other Departments have from 30th June last to compile their returns, this Department is obliged to compile them between 30th December and the meeting of the House This report has been in our hands less than two weeks; it only reached the distribution office on March 25th, and the return asked for by the leader of the Opposition for a monthly statement was furnished only on Thursday. That only goes to demonstrate the importance of the agents being compelled to furnish their monthly returns. In speaking of the class of immigrants who have gone to the north shore, I find the information is furnished in some correspondence dated Toronto: Ontario and Quebec Railway, December, 1883. The first letter is from Mr. Ryan, who had the contract for the eastern section of the road, and his letter appears to have been; a reply to a letter written by the Department here. He said :

Mr. MOLELAN.

"ONTABIO AND QUÍBEO RAILWAY. "TORONTO, 12th December, 1883.

"Hon. J. H. POPE, "Minister of Agriculture.

"SIB.---I beg to inclose a statement from Mr. John Scully who acted as

"1 have, &c., ned) "HUGH RYAN." (Signed)

Mr. Scully wrote as follows :-

"CONTRACTORS' AGENCY, CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, "TOBONTO, 5th December, 1883.

"HUGH RYAN, Esq., "Superintendent of Construction, "Ontario and Quebec Railway, Toronto.

" Re Labourers from United States

Sig.—In reply to your enquiry as to the number of railroad labourers I shipped to your works on the Ontario and Quebec Railway, east of Toronto, I and from my books that 4,250 men were imported from the United States who found employment in this section of Ontario, chiefly on your line."

Further on :

"I forwarded 5,000 men to the Canadian Pacific Railway, Algoma and Lake Superior Sections; many of them shipped via Buffalo and Colling-wood, and Detroit and Sarmia. "I purpose going to England, Ireland and Scotland in January next, to advertise for good navvies, rockmen &c., for next year. (Signed) "JOHN SCULLY."

That compares closely with the 4,250 credited as having gone north of Lake Superior. On Mr. Scully's statement as to the labourers is the basis for these two items which figure in the report, and I confess that I think they go to explain the increase in numbers between the official returns and the return, which looked like official, published in the Mail in December. In regard to the question of navvies becoming settlers, general experience shows that these men follow railway construction and nothing else. They do not take any interest in local politics, but simply want to know where railways are going to be built, and as soon as they have completed one they move off to another road. So, the probability of any reasonable proportion becoming settlers on the rocky region north of Lake Superior is exceedingly remote. Mr. VanHorne writes as follows :-

"CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, "MONTREAL, February 16th, 1864.

"Hon. J. H. Pors, Minister of Agriculture.

"Sra,-In reply to your enquiry as to the total number of passengers, "Sra,—In reply to your enquiry as to the total humber of passengers, including children, arriving in and departing from Manitoba by railway during the year 1883, I have to report that the number arriving was 61,426, and the number departing was 22,453. The latter figure, how-ever, includes about 2,400 men going to Port Arthur to work on the Lake Superior section of the railway, and about 2,200 were returning to the States from our main line work, west. The greater part of these markers are into the counter in 1892. workmen came into the country in 1882.

"U. C. VANHORNE." (Signed)

If the fertile plains of the North-West offered no in lucements to those men to settle, what hope can there be of their settling on the rocky shores of Lake Superior, with the absence of good climate and anything like cultivatable soil. These figures have no business in the report, and I cannot help thinking, notwithstanding what the hon. member for Perth (Mr. Hesson) has said, that the statements in the Mail are a good deal nearer correct than the report of the Minister.

Mr. HESSON. I never said the Mail was unreliable; but I said that its statement should be accepted.

Mr. BAIN. I am willing to accept it on this occasion, because it commends itself as being nearer correct than the Minister's report.

Mr. HESSON. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will suggest some means of making those men permanent residents in the country:

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am at a loss to know what the hon. gentleman is driving at. Oan he tell us what the objects of his statements are? Are they made in the inte-rests of Canada? Is the hon. gentleman working in the interests of Canada or in the interests of the United States? No other construction can be put on the statements in which hon. gentlemen opposite have indulged, than that they are determined to do their best and their worst to keep people out of this country. No greater attraction can be presented to people in the over-populated countries of Europe than the fact that statistics show that this country is attractive enough to induce a large number of settlers to come here. Every word the hon. gentleman has said is intended to have the effect of discountenancing the statistics of this country, which are statistics compiled with the utmost care and with the utmost honesty, and with a view to show the world the important fact that Canada is a country that possesses an invit ing field for people who are seeking homes in the new world. Why, Sir, the hon. gentleman knows that with all the advantage which the United States possesses, all the enormous advantage of having for years and years possessed a great fertile prairie district, which offered an easy means of providing a competency, or providing bread for a man's family, while we have had no such prairie country, while the man who came to Canada had to attack the forest with his axe, and strive against natural difficulties for ten or twenty years before he could hope to have a competency and rear his family with comfort and supply them abundantly with bread; the hon. gentleman knows that we have only had for a comparatively few years the means of prov-ing to the world that we have a country which cannot be surpassed by any portion of the United States, by any portion of America; a country that is incomparably superior to a great portion of the prairie districts of the north-western portion of the United States, and that now that we have that advantage, and have the means of offering inducements to immigrants, certainly equal to any portion of the world, and have the means of showing that, notwithstanding the edvantage of older settlement, we have the attraction presented by that best of all classes of immigration agency, the communications from successful immigrants to their friends in the old world, and that by these means Canada stands to day in the proud position, that notwithstanding that there has been a great decrease in the immigration to America during the past year, the volume of immigration to Canada is greater than ever. And what is the result? It brings us to this conclusion-and a proud and gratifying conclusion it is to arrive at, to every man interested in the progress of this country-that at last the great advantages which we possess are telling in the scale, and that we are likely to draw into this country, year by year, a greater and always increasing number of that class of people who are necessary to build up our nation, and make this a great and progressive country. And what are hon. gentlemen opposite doing? Why, Sir, if they were in the pay of the land companies of the United States, if they were the paid enemies and rivals of Canada, they could not work harder, they could not use more persistent efforts, to decry our country and shut out people from coming to it. What is the danger that the hon. gentleman presents to-night? He says that if the fertile prairies which we boast about in the North-West do not induce people to come into our country, what can we do for the barren and rocky wilderness north of Lake Superior. Let me tell him that year by year we are disabusing prevailing ideas about this barren wilderness north of Lake Superior. Year by year are we not only offering as an inducement to the people of Europe the magnificent fertility of our prairie land of the North-West, but we are opening up, north of Lake Superior, a comparatively unknown country, possessing forests of timber, and arable soil for cultivation and possessing other attractions, independently of the enormous mineral resources which are known to exist in that district. Yet, Sir, the hor. gentleman's whole aim and object is to prove that nobedy is coming to this country ; that it is a lying delusion which is being palmed off on the old world, that we have such a country; that there are no attractions here, no country to which any man would come, and if he does come into it, it is only for the purpose of getting his wages and going out of it as soon as he can. 1 say, Sir, that this is too bad. I say that there is no party object which ought to be of sufficient importance to induce hon. gentlemen to do such a thing as that. What is the great advantage-the greatest of all-which the United States has had, and it has had enormous advantages; it is, that from one end of that great and magnificent country to the other, wherever you find an American, you find a man heart and soul devoted to his country; you find a man ready to use all the powers he possesses, all the ability God has given him, to exalt his country in the estimation of the world, and draw everybody into it whom he can. And why? Because he knows that it is by that means that the great American Republic has been built up to be the great power that it is; that it is by that means that its power has continually strengthened and increased; and Sir, I say that Canada must suffer gravely and deeply at the hands of her own sons, while any number of them can be found to decry the country, notwithstanding the evidences on every hand that there is no country in the world which at this present moment presents so many attractions-attractions felt so largely everywhere, and to such an extent that they are every year becoming more and more potent in drawing immigration into this country. The hon. gentleman talks about navvies, and gives a most emphatic contradiction to the statement made in this country that there is no dearth of labour here. I want to know, if there was no dearth of labour here, what compelled the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to send men down, and pay them well to go, into the United States, after ransacking this country-after sending agents through Ontario and Quebee, and offering labourers high wages-and what did they find? They found that the demand for labour in these older Provinces was so great, in this present condition of the country, that they could not get labour, and they were compelled, at large expense, to offer high wages to men in the United States, in order to get sufficient labour to operate their railways. So that the statement of the hon. gentleman has this advantage, of giving an emphatic and complete contradiction to the story circulated persistently by parties in this country, that it was no use for labourers to come here because there was no work. He asks if these navvies never remain. Why, Sir, I had a letter sent to me by twenty Finns, who were sent out by Mr. Dyke. That gentleman ascertained that they were coming to America, by the Port of New York, and he went to these people and gave them descriptions, in their own language, of the attractions of Canada, pointing out the advantages this country possesses, pointing out the demand there was here for labour. He cabled the Department here, and the Department sent an agent to meet the men on their arrival, brought them here, and sent them north of Lake Superior. I read the letter of these men, twenty of them, who came in with their wives and families and went to work or that road. And, Sir, if you compare the glowing descriptions that these men gave of the comforts they enjoy, and the advantages of the exchange they made, from their own country, of the great wages they were getting, and of the employment their wives obtained in connection with the operations of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and of the fact that they ascertained that when the road was completed they could get land of their own to settle down upon, with the money they saved, and make themselves prosperous-I say that if we compare the statements of these men, who spoke from the heart and from their own experience, with the statements we are compelled to listen to to night, they should bring a blush of shame to the face of any hon, gentleman who feels that these honest and fruitful statements, made by the men who were brought into this country; and who have found the advantages it possesses any man who feels that these men are infinitely better off than they ever were before-I say that comparing these statements with the statements of hon. gentlemen opposite, we must blush for our country, to know that any man or class of men in it, any party in it, can so far forget what they owe, not to party, but to Canada, as to stand here night after night, using all their powers in advancing the interests of a foreign country and decrying their own.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What we owe to Canada Sir, is to see that the money of the people of this country is not squandered and wasted by men on whose statements we cannot rely. That is our duty; and I tell the hon. gentleman that if he imagines that all this fustian rant is going to impose upon gentlemen on this side of the House, he never male a greater mistake in his life. Sir, we were not Cana-dians only yesterday; we have as great a stake in Canada as hon. gentlemen opposite, and greater; and I tell the hon. gentleman that if he dares to take that stand, if he dares to talk to us, on this side, of patriotism, or of regard for the honour of our country, I can tell him, Sir, that the record of their disgrace is stamped for the last ten years on every public record of Canada. Sir, they had better not bring us to talk of what we owe to the honour of Canada. We, on this side, have not been found bribing; we have not been found breaking our oaths; we have not been found placing ourselves in the hands of those very contractors to debauch the electorate, as I have told them again and again. Not one argument did he advance, not one truth did he utter to break the facts which my hon. friend presented to the House. Are the 130,000 men who are said to have come to the country accounted for? Are those 38,000 that the Department said came into Ontarioare they there? Sir, I would like to know where they are. We know from statistics, compiled by themselves, that ever since these hon. gentlemen came into power there has been an enormous emigration from the Province of Oatario and the other Provinces; we know that this is large'y due to the impolicy of these hon. gentlemen; and we know that if these emigrants have come into the country, as they say, there has been even a larger displacement than we had supposed of the people of Ontario and the other Provinces. Though we are trying to-night to drag some little explanation from these hon. gentlemen of what they have done with the $400,000 they spent last year, and what they are going to do with $450,000 this year, we have not had one word of intelligible explanation to-night of where this money has gone. We are told that 130,000 immigrants have come into Canada; but when we come to analyze these returns, we find that these hon. gentlemen have no information to give us that can be at all relied on. The navvies which the bon. gentleman spoke of are a class of men who never do settle, but who do follow the railway; and it is preposterous nonsense to put these 10,000 men as emigrants to Canada. 1 have here the London Economist, which states that all the emigrants who came to us from British ports last year were apparently 44,130. I do not know where these all went to. I do not think the American ports supply any great number; we know that they do not. The fact of the matter is, that although it may be true that a certain number of people have come into Canada, all that we have heard through this discussion tends to show that we have no proper means of checking the influx of people into this country or the influx from it either -- that we have no means of knowing at the present moment whether they go out again, and referring to the railway navvies, said 20,000 or 30,000 or 40,000 or 100,000 of the people who we have no right to count these. But the hon. gentleman Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

have come into the country are residing here; but the evidence of these gentlemen's own Census returns shows us that of the great number of immigrants who are reported as having come into this country, by far the majority-probably four-fifths, certainly three-fourths-have not stayed with us. Now, our objection to these gentlemen's policy is this: we see them bringing people here whom they cannot keep. I think that these Europeans, if any number go to Manitoba, probably stay there; but I do not think the bulk of the men we bring into the old Provinces do remain here, and I base that statement upon the hon. gentleman's own statistics and the evidence before us. Now, as I said before, if these statements which have been brought down by the Immigration Department are true, there has been a very large immigration into Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. Now, every man knows that that is not the case. I do not suppose that there is any gentleman who will get up here and say that he believes that there has been a larger immigration into Quebec and the Maritime Provinces last year than for several years past; and if they have gone to Ontario, they simply turn out a number they found there. All these are facts that have to be faced. Hon. gentlemen opposite have not faced the Ontario statistics, probably because they had no statistics to face them with. If these are to be relied upon, it is perfectly clear that we have lost 250,000 people from Ontario alone, and I protest, while that movement goes on, against spending the people's money for bringing to the country people whom we cannot keep, but who go away, and when they do necessarily injure us, because they become anti-immigration agents where they have gone. Now, I do not believe there is any use of bringing into this country people of the professional class, artisans or mechanics. There is room for farmers, for people of capital, and for a certain portion of domestic servants, but that is all. I doubt exceedingly whether we are doing wisely in continuing these assisted immigration passages at all; but if we are, we ought to confine them strictly to those particular classes, as the Minister rather intimated that they intended to do, but as they do not appear to have done; because men have been brought to our towns and cities during the last twelve months who do not belong to those classes, but are a burden on the charity of the people. Now, all these things we have a right to look into in the discharge of our duties, and we are not going to be put down by being told that we are unpatriotic, because we put questions and do not get the answers that we have a right to receive.

Mr. McLELAN. The hon. gentleman complains that people have been brought into Ontario to be a charge to the people of Ontario. I have already pointed out to the Committee that that was an arrangement made with the Ontario Government, and for which they are responsible.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. They deny that.

Mr. McLELAN. The Ontario Government entered into an arrangement with the Irish agent, that they would take these emigrants and give them employment if the Dominion Government would give them assisted passages; and under that arrangement these people were brought out, and became a charge on the charity of the people of Ontario. While the whole blame rests upon them up there, and when the Ontario Government withdrew from that arrangement, the Dominion Government was not prepared to continue it or to undertake it. The hon. gentleman has endeavoured to show that only 42,000 immigrants are reported as having come into Canada. He should bear in mind that that is only the number reported as sailing to Canadian ports; from the ports of the United States we received a large number which, added to the 42,000, will make up our immigration. The hon. gentleman said we bring them in and will take good care to count them when they go out of the Dominion, and will spread the report that the people are leaving by the hundreds of thousands, when these navvies return to the United States. A large portion, however, of them remain here. He said that we had no right to count 20 Finns who came out as navvies, but those 20 Finns have sent a very large portion of their own earnings home to bring out others to settle in the Dominion, so beneficial do they find the change. The hon. gentleman questions our expenditure, but if we go back to the year 1876, when he was responsible for our emigration policy, we find that the expenditure then was $264,880 for an immigration of about 25,000 people, so that it cost this country $11.12 per head to bring this people in.

Mr. BAIN. How many Chinese? There are 3,000 of them this year.

Mr. McLELAN. It did not matter whether they were Chinese or not. They left the country. The hon. gentleman was bringing people in at $11.12 per head to leave the country; whereas we, in the past year, expended but $3.15 per head.

Mr. DAWSON. I shall only add a single sentence to this animated and interesting discussion. The district I have the honour to represent has been mentioned in this discussion, and it is very desirable that hon. members who refer to the district of Algoma and the north shore of Lakes Superior and Huron, and the emigration of people from that district, should inform themselves a little before they attempt to make speeches on these subjects in this House. The facts are the opposite to what the hon. member for North Wentworth set forth. So far back as 1871, there was a Census taken of the whole population of Algoma, which then amounted to 7,018 souls. At the last Census in Algoma it was found that, not going beyond the height of land, there were 21,000 people in the district, showing that the population had trebled in ten years. The ratio of increase has been very much greater since then, and I believe now there are not less than 40,000 people in Algoma, including the disputed territory. As to navvies following railway construction and not becoming permanent settlers, I believe there is a class which always follows railways, but there are others, a great many of whom settle in the country; if you go to the Island of Manitoulin you will find that the people there are all happy and well off and that they include a considerable number of navvies who settled around Thunder Bay, at Vermillion Bay, Rat Portage and Rainy River. With regard to people living in Algoma, there could not be a greater misconception nor a more unguarded statement of the situation. The people of Algoma are now doing very well, and I do not believe there is a more thriving community in the whole Dominion. Of late years, since the railway commenced, they have got out ties, money has been abundant, and they are beginning to export wheat from that country, where it was supposed the climate was so bad that it could not be raised.

Mr. IRVING. Disparaging statements are being made all around this House to-night, but I have never Feard a more disparaging statement made of any country than that which has been made by the hon. Minister of Railways, with reference to the Maritime Provinces. I heard a letter read to-night, from a gentleman in London, who recommends settlement in Ontario in preference to any of the other Provinces, but the hon. Minister of Railways to-night stated that we had not suitable land in the Maritime Provinces as they had in the North-West, where a man could settle upon the prairie and not have to toil for ten or twenty years to clear it, as on timber lands, before he could make a competency or livelihood. Could a more damaging statement be made with reference to the Maritime Provinces? Have we not millions of acres of good land in New Bruns- | are wholly fallacious. Why does he attempt to show that ?

wick, good settlement lands of a most favourable character ? The most inveterate enemy of New Brunswick could not make a more damaging statement than that which the hon. Minister has made. Is it possible that he wishes to depopulate the Maritime Provinces in order to fill up the North-West? No paid agent of this country, no paid agent of the Ontario or Dominion Government, in London, could make a more damaging statement in reference to the settlement lands of New Brunswick than the hon Minister has made. We have excellent farming lands and well timbered lands, and a man can make a better livelihood in the woods, where he has timber to build his house and supply him with fuel, than on the prairie lands of the North-West. The hon. Minister has abused hon. gentlemen on this side, and charged them with making statements derogatory to this country, which were published in the newspapers of the United States; but does he imagine that the statement he has made to night will not be published far and wide throughout the country? And does he not know that he has made one of the most damaging statements in reference to the settlement of the lands of the Maritime Provinces? No paid agent could make a worse statement, and the hon. gentleman should retract and apologize.

Mr. WHITE (Renfrew). I am not at all surprised that the hon. member for South Huron should have adopted the rôle he has adopted to night. We know very well that these hon. gentlemen on the opposite side of the House have for the last three or four years been endeavouring to convince the public, both in this country and the older countries, that there has been an extraordinary exodus from Canada.

Mr. MILLS. Hoar, hear.

Mr. WHITE. During the present Session of Parliament the Committee on Immigration and Colonization have taken up that subject very thoroughly, and I think the hon. gentleman will see, when the evidence comes down to this House, that the statements they have been making in reference to the exodus from Canada during the last few years have been very thoroughly exploded. Knowing, I presume, that that evidence would be submitted to this House very shortly, they have changed their role, and instead of showing that there has been an extraordinary exodus from Canada, they are trying to controvert the figures of the immigration into Canada, so that they are working at both ends of the stick, and endeavouring first to show that we are losing a large number of people from Canada by an exodus to the United States, and then endeavouring to prove, if it be possible to prove, that the figures given to us by the Department of Agriculture, in regard to the immigration into this country, are fallacious and unreliable.

Mr. MILLS. Hear, hear,

Mr. WHITE. The hon. gentleman attempts, by the figures he has given to this House, to prove that, because, according to this statement a certain number of immigrants are shown to have come into the Province of Ontario and a certain number into the Provinces of British Columbia and Manitoba the balance; it is impossible that the 66,000 which he says are still to be accounted for should have settled in the Province of Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. But the hou. gentleman forgets, as has been stated by the Minister in charge of this Department, that the Department of Agriculture does not attempt to follow the immigrants to their respective locations after they are entered at the ports in this country. Is it possible for the Department of Agriculture to trace all the immigrants who land at Quebec to their respective locations? I think the hon. gentleman himself will admit that that would be almost an impossibility, and yet he attempts to prove that these figures, given to us under the authority of the Department of Agriculture, collated carefully from the different ports in this Dominion, Does he attempt to do it for the purpose of advancing the interests of the people of this country, or for the purpose of advancing the interests of Canada? There can be no such reason as that for the attempt the hon, gentleman has made here to night; and let me tell him, and the hon. gentleman who has made the statement that navvies who work upon railroads in this country never settle in this country, that that statement is wholly and entirely fallacious. know of my own knowledge, in my own county and in the district of Nipissing which adjoins it, that considerable numbers of these people who have worked on the railways and have earned enough money to settle in the country, have settled and are becoming some of the best settlers we have in that locality. And, with reference to that, let me tell him that in my own county, where Germans have been settled upon the poorer lands in the county, those who have been there for a number of years and those who have gone to that locality recently have been sending money, large sums of it, during the last two years to their friends in the older countries. Why did they not send moneys to their friends in the old country to enable them to come out, or to induce them to come out here during the time those hon. gentlemen opposite held office? It was because the country was in such a state of destitution that they were unable to collect a sufficient amount of money to send for their friends, and that they could not induce them, and dared not induce them, to come to a country in such a state as this country was in at that time. But, since the hon, gentlemen who now occupy the Treasury Benches have attained to office, all that is changed. The country is prosperous. They are not only in a position to induce their friends to come to this country, but are in a position to send them the funds to enable them to come here; and the result is, that a very large immigration has come into my own county, I know-and I presume the same operation has been going on throughout other parts of Canada-during the last three or four years, through the exertions of the people who have been located there for some time past. They have been bringing out their friends as fast as they could collect money to assist them to come, and those people are prosperous and contented; and notwithstanding whatever hon. gentlemen opposite may say, I venture to express the hope that the Department of Agriculture will use every means in their power to induce more settlers to come from the old countries and settle on the unoccupied and untenanted lands of this country. If they do, I believe they will merit the approval of the people of this country and, notwithstanding what may be said by my hon. friends opposite, they will have done what will be in the best interests of the people of Canada.

Mr. SPROULE. I think the hon. member for South Huron must shut his eyes to the facts by which he is surrounded every day in life, or he would scarcely have the audacity to make the statements that immigrants are not coming into the country in large numbers, and that those who do come are not settling in the country.

Mr. MILLS. Hear, hear.

Mr. SPROULE. In the section of country from which I come, they have been coming in in large numbers during the last few years, and have been settling and doing well. I do not think it is a fair comparison to take the Census of 1871 and compare it with the Census of 1881, because we know that from 1873 to 1878, when these hon. gentlemen were in power, the people were leaving the country in large numbers, until the population had been materially reduced. Then the country commenced to be built up again and people to come to it in large numbers. This was going on when the Census of 1881 was taken. I know this to be the fact in my own county. I know that, in 1878, I only paid $1 a day, and that the other day I had to pay $2.75 for are dealing with solid facts to-day, if we can get at them, Mr. WHITE (Renfrew.)

plasterers, and yet the member for South Huron says we do not require mechanics in the country. I paid $2 a day for carpenters, and very poor ones at that.

Mr. MILLS. Hear, hear.

Mr. PATERSON. And in 1878, plasterers only got a $1 a day?

Mr. SPROULE. No; I said carpenters, not plasterers. I went to Toronto and paid $2.75 a day for plasterers, and could not get them unless I paid their fare out there and back again. I paid $2 a day for carpet ters and found it im-possible to get them. I was asked by farmers to send to the agent there, Mr. Donaldson, to get hands for them, and out of twenty-five I managed to get three. As another evidence that the country is being rapidly settled up, and that the prosperity is increasing, I take the valuation of our county. It was made five years ago, and last year it was made again for the purpose of equalizing the assessment over the county. During those five years the county had about doubled in value, for the assessment was only a little over $12,000,000 five years ago, and last summer it was a little over $25,000,000. If that is not an evidence that the country is increasing in prosperity, I do not know what is. I know that, in our part of the country, there is a great dearth of agricultural labour-ers, a great dearth of servants—in almost every line, mechanics, farmers, or servants-almost every line; we find it impossible to get a sufficient number of people to supply the wants of the country, notwithstanding the fact that they are going in in large numbers and settling there. I could count them by dozens in my county-immigrants who have come from the old country and settled and done well within the last few years. When I went over the Pacific Railway through Manitoba and the North-West, I found Englishmen, I might say in hundreds, who had come from the old country and were doing well. I found Irishmen who had taken part in building the railway and have settled down and are doing well. I found Scotchmen in the same position. Another evidence that we have, which is one of the most unmistakeable kind, is that we have such men as Mr. Scully, who was allied with hon. gontlemen opposite, who was paid for every man he could bring into the country last summer, and he has been unable to supply the demands for parties to build the railway and to supply the wants of farmers and others through the country. He has been scouring through the United States and he has sent to Ireland and England and various other countries in Europe, and notwithstanding the number he has employed in his agency to bring men to this country, he was unable to supply the great demand at his office for men in the country during the last few years. They are not going away from the country, because we find that around Lake Superior 8,000 are employed to-day, and yet the word comes down that they want 4,000 more. I visited Manitoulin Island last summer and I can corroborate the statement made by the hon. member for Algoma, that large numbers of those who were engaged on that railway are settled down there and doing well. The same is to be found along the Sault, around Lake Superior; and if you go to Manitoba and the North-West, you will find the country occupied by settlers all the way from Winnipeg to the Rocky Mountains.

Mr. BLAKE. I wish to call attention to the fact that the returns I have frequently asked for of the monthly railway transport into and out of Manitoba and the North-West are defective. I asked for a monthly return.

Mr. BAIN (Wentworth). I have to apologize to the hon. member for Algoma, for I did not intend to say anything disrespectful with regard to that large territory, and I am proud to say there is no man in the House better pleased than myself to learn that the population is growing so rapidly. But we

and with all respect to the brilliant statements made by the Minister of Railways and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, I say they have not given us one solitary fact upon which to base a fragment of information with reference to these statistics. It did occur to me that when the Minister waxed so eloquent in compairing the return between the present period and the period of the Mackenzie regime, that he furnished us, perhaps, as effective an explanation how this 133,000 was figured up as it was possible for them to furnish us. I would like to know if those who are navvies have not been counted in to increase the apparent number and reduce the cost per head to $3.15. But these assertions do not bring people into the country, and we must not shut our eyes to the fact. It is idle to make glowing statements about these men who have come into different Ridings of Ontario; they offer us no basis as to numbers. The hon. Minister of Public Works asked how we could have the assurance to get up and decry this country. I want to tell that hon. Minister, so far as my interest in this country is concerned, I do not stand one iota behind him. I wish to say to the Minister of Railways that we are not going to be bullied out of our rights in this discussion, by his taunting us with being unpatriotic. Not one man on the other side of the House has attempted to face the facts as to whether this immigration is overstated or not, and it is impossible for them to back up by facts and figures that 133,000 immigrants had come into this country the past year. If my parliamentary experi-ence had not extended a few years back further than the time the hon. Minister of Railways last came into office I should have been misled by his glowing statements, and supposed he was so patriotic that he always stood up for the interests of this country, and never stated that a Government could mismanage or that the country could go wrong. The hon. member for Renfrew presented us with a sample of the diatribes that were raked up by the Mail, and now, forsooth, because everybody does not drop into their groove, they are unpatriotic. What were the actions of these hon. gentlemen when they were in Opposition? How did they stand by the country then? Nothing was too strong for them to say with reference to the administration of affairs by the Mackenzie Government, but as soon as they get into office again then everybody must quietly stand by and accept every statement they make with reference to the attraction of immigration into this country. I say, in the interests of truth, it is desirable we should have the absolute facts. If we cannot attract immigrants to this country by making a fair statement of facts, I say we had better give up the business, because I do not believe we can ever overtake our American cousins in the matter of over-statements unless we are all able to reach that magnificent height of exaggeration the hon. member for Cumberland has reached. With reference to the difficulties with pauper immigrants in Toronto, I can only say the Ontario Government deny they are responsible for that. I will read a little paragraph from a newspaper, with reference to the difficulties with immigrants who do not go to Ontario. The paragraph is written by a party who knows whereof he speaks, being connected with the Department, and he writes from Winnipeg and says:

"They can get work and I could get it for them, but they won't take it. Only the other day I got an order for a number of farm labourers, and out of the whole lot I could only get one man to go. I could get them all situations as farm hands, a: wages averaging from $25 to $30 per month, with their board. "They are living at the sheds free of charge, and with nothing to do but amuse themselves, and I guess they think they have too much of a soft thing to throw it up. I think on Monday I will get passes for them over the Canadian Pacific Kailway, and ship them west to either work or starve. These men are are no use for anything on earth. They even quarrel about which of them shall go for a pail of water to make tea with."

I am sorry we have not a monopoly of this class in Toronto, 3,415; Duluth, 3,200; total 51,244. Deducting 17 per cent. but some have drifted away to other points. This is not a Globe stander, but one published by a journal which has 42,772. There were Canadians, 25,301; Americans, 13,398, taken special interest in the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Montreal Hereald. I presume, in drawing a large number of immigrants to any country, we are liable to get some unfortunate louts. I endorse heartily the statement made by the Minister of Agriculture last Session, when he deeply deplored the idea of adding to our immigration to a large extent from unions and workhouses of the old country, for the purpose of filling up the great North-West. Nothing could be a more serious mistake. While we may sympathise with those persons at home, what we want here are men with sufficient self-reliance to take hold of the first job and make a success of it by sticking to it, and I believe in obtaining that class which have pluck enough to pull up stakes and leave the old land and try their fortunes here, rather than a population from the poor-houses of an overcrowded country, where circumstances beyond their control almost crush the man-hood out of them. I am sorry to say that even this discussion of the figures does not satisfy me that our state. ments with respect to immigration to the North-West are correct. This is a matter in which we are deeply interested. We have held up the North-West as a great country to which the European population are to be attracted in large num-bers. Out of the whole population which came in from Great Britain and other countries last season-55,000-only 10,000 had declared their intention of going through to Manitoba when they landed at our ports. It is plain to me that the great bulk of the people which make such an apparently large show in the movement of population to the North West, were from the older Provinces, and the return for our expenditure on immigration when these are deduction are very unsatisfactory. We largely increased the grant for that purpose last year, and comparing the figures with the previous year, we show an addition of less than 4,000, all told, from Great Britain and Europe. A large proportion of the number which goes to make up 133,000 are made up of the moving class. I should be glad if I could believe, with the hon. member for Renfrew (Mr. White), that we obtained 34,000 people from the American side; that we kept all our own population and lost none. But I do not think it is possible that any man can calmly look at the facts and arrive at such a conclusion. There is a large migration backward and forward over the boundary, and whether the American figures are exaggerated or not, there is no doubt there is perpetually a large number of people leaving the country. It may be treason to this country to say so; I suppose it is treason to this Gov rnment to say so; but I draw a wide distinction between what I owe to my coan ry and what I owe to hon. gentlemen opposite One word in regard to Manitoba figures. After a careful comparison of the figures, I should be pleased to know where the population comes from that enters that Province. The returns are made in this fashion: Manitoba and North-West, settlers entering at ports other than those above enumerated, and other than those from the old Provinces, namely, Emerson; 12,119; Gretna, 1,879; vid Port Arthur, 3,415; and Duluth, 2,200, and across frontier from Gretna to Benton, 1,400, total, 21,019. The following note is appended :

"The total number of persons who went into Manitoba and the North-West in 1893 was, in round numbers, about 51,244, ascertained as ollows: Reported at Emerson, 44,223; along the frontier, from Emerson to Fort Benton, 1,406. The nationalities were as follows: From E uope, 8.339; from Uanada, 23,301; from the United States, 13.998. Of the total number, 51,244, apart from the 1,406 along the frontier, from Emerson to Fort Benton, deduct 17 per cent. for floating population (?,472), making total settlers in Manitoba and the North-West, 42,772."

I desire to present to the Committee the following as the result of my deductions from the figures I have quoted: Reported at Emerson, 44,233; frontier, 1,406; Port Arthur, 3,415; Daluth, 3,200; total 51,244. Deducting 17 per cent. on 49,838, which amounts to 8,472, leaves a net total of 42.772. There were Canadians, 25,301; Americans, 13,998,

The proportion of 8,472 of 25,301 Canadians gives 5,454 to be taken off. The same proportions of 13,998 Americans gives 3,018; leaving the net number of Canadians 19,837, and of Americans, 10,980. Across the frontier from Gretna to Fort Benton there were 1,406, whom I will also call Americans. From Europe there were 8,339; via Duluth, 2,200. The number of immigrants entered for Manitoba at Quebec, Suspension Bridge, and eastern ports was 10,122. The net gain to Manitoba and the North-West from American citizens was 12,386, instead of 21,109, the over-estimate being 8,633. It would have been a much more pleasant duty to have accepted the figures as stated; but we are here for the purpose of getting at the facts, and if this discussion secures us another year regular monthly returns, and a carefully prepared return at the close of the year, I will accept all responsibility of bringing forward this matter, and I will think very lightly of the charge of denouncing the country with which I am so closely connected. We can appeal to the common sense of the community, and I am satisfied the community will agree in saying : first, let us have the truth and the facts, and a fterwards we can add the decorations as they suit ourselves.

Mr. HESSON. One word with regard to some figures which I think the hon. gentleman has omitted. It appears to me that the question really before the Committee is the distribution of the immigration which came into the country last year. We endeavoured to point out that it was impossible to say exactly where these immigrants are now; that all we can know is, that they arrived at certain ports, and that they remained in the country. According to the reports made by the agents, a certain number had declared their intention of settling in the country. The arrivals last year were as follows :--

At Quebec	26,084
Suspension Bridge	7,247
Hali'ax, N.S	7,484
St. John, N.B.	. 29
Portland, Me
Montreal, vid Boston and New York	4,455
Manitoba and North-West, settlers entering at	• ports other than those above enumerated, and other than those from the old Provinces	21,019
British Columbia	9,000

From United States.

At Algoma Costicooke	6,185 470
Ottawa Toron to Kin gston	1,538
London	876
North of Lake Superior	4,250 34,987
Total settlers	153,644

Now I wish to point out that the hon. member for Went worth (Mr. Bain) has never complained, nor I believe has any other hon. gentleman opposite complained, that the system pursued in getting these returns and publishing the reports in the years from 1874 to 1878 were found fault with by ada was in such a state of depression that if he had taken the hon. gentleman, as being incorrect. I presume the Department pursues the same system still, and I will trouble the taxation. Then the hon. member interrupted the Minister House with a few figures of those years, which will show the House whether or not the work which has been pursued by the Immigration Committee has prospered in our hands. I say that we have simply pursued the policy of the late Government in getting these figures from our agents, and if they will point out agents who have not done their work well, or if they can indicate a system which would secure better results, I think they would be doing the country a service. The immigration for the years 1874-78 was as follows :-

Mr. BAIN,

1874	39,373
1875	27,382
1976	25 633

1876...... 25,633 1877...... 27,082

1878 29,807

Total 149,278

Under the same system, and with the same agents, we have the following results for the last five years :--

1879	505 991
Total 373,0	070

So that we have a total of 373,070 for the last five years, against 149,278 for the preceding five years. I wish to point out further, what was evidently overlooked by the hon. member for Huron, in making his statement, comparing the population to-day with the figures as shown by the Census, contending that we had not gained anything in our population, and that is, that he omitted the operations of two most important years, because he evidently has not embraced in his calculation the year 1871 and the year 1.82.83, which accounts for 246,183 which could not have been included in the Census report which was taken in the spring of 1881; consequently, we would have over a quarter of a million added to the population distributed throughout the country. We cannot pretend to deny that some of our people are going away; we cannot prevent that sort of a movement. We endeavour to prevent it by providing employment for the people, and holding out inducements in the shape of liberal land regulations, and if these are not sufficient to retain our people, I think, if the hon. gentleman could suggest some remedy, he would be doing the House and the country a very great service.

Mr. WOODWORTH. On word with regard to the state-ment made by the hon. member for North Wentworth (Mr. Bain) that the reason—as I understood him to say—that he was so earnest in his objurgations against the Government to-day was, that while those who are the members of the Government were in opposition, during the five years of the Mackenzie Government, they had also objurgated, and shown that the country was going to the dogs, to use the hon. gentleman's own expression. I say in my place in Parliament, that that statement was incorrect and untrue. I say that if any people in this country, or any portion of the people of this country, ever decried Canada while they were in power, it was the Government from 1874 to 1878. Everybody knows, who reads the papers, and who reads Hansard, that you can hardly read a line of them that does not show that they contented that this country had a gloomy outlook before it, and that it was completely depressed in all its industries. The ex-Minister of Finance was asked to take the duty off tobacco, and he said he could not do it. He said that it would take $500,000 out of his revenue, and he did not know how he could replace it, except by direct taxation. He said, on the floor of the House and in the presence of the whole world, that Canoff $500,000 duty he could not replace it except by direct of Railways when he was speaking, to tell him that every corporation that ever invested a dollar in Canadian railways had lost that dollar. That stands to-day in Hansard, and how can these hon. gentlemen rise to-day in Parliament and say that we decry the country. He showed that the country was under a shadow, in a state of great gloom and depression while they were in power, and they themselves were showing it day after day. What was said by the members of the Government, from 1874 to 1878, was repudiated by the Liberal Conservative party, and was shown to be untrue. That party told them, it is true in any city or place that the United States is not a fit place you may be depressed at the present moment, but if you alter your hand, if you shift your policy, we can show you that by a truer administration of public affairs, and by a readjustment of the Tariff you can induce money to come into the country, you can build up the country, and it will not be going to the dogs. That was told them every day, until in the year 1878, the people took the power out of their hands, and returned the Liberal Conservative party by an overwhelming majority. Sir, from the beginning of this Session until the cannons boom and the drums beat announcing the prorogation, but one long wail has come from hon. gentleman on the other side of the House. They opened with a cry, they are pessimists from their leader to the bottom; they think that this country in not worth living in. They employ scribes to send to the newspapers of Chicago, of Philadelphia, of Buffalo, of New York, of Boston, to every American newspaper that will publish it, anything that can be said disparaging to Canada. And then they have the face to get up here, as the hon. member for North Wentworth did, as his great sense of justice and fair play and honesty and veracity compelled him to get up, and declare that these things are true. Why, Sir, the hon. member for Marquette (Mr. Watson), the man most interested in the North-West, coming from a county that is an agricultural county pure and simple, stood on his feet, after three days of incubation-after the hon. member for Lisgar (Mr. Ross) read from the Reform papers that he had always supported, and had read from his earliest days, from the Globe newspaper and the London Advertiser, diatribes against the country-the hon, member for Marquette, after three or four days of nursing on the part of his leaders, got up and pronounced - what? a eulogium on the country? no, a jeremiad—one long wail on the disastars that had overtaken it. Why, he told us that in that country men had to go 30 or 40 miles for wood. Someone interrupted him-I think it was the hon. member for North Leeds (Mr. Ferguson)-and asked him where. He said, at Regina; but he did not tell the House that coal at Regina was down to $6 a ton, and that a ton of coal was worth three cords of the poplar wood of the country. He did not tell that, because it would bring immigration into the country, which would have the effect of keeping the Conservative party in power, and that would be dis-astrous to the country. He did not state that the coal was $6 a ton, and that next summer there would be other mines opened and a plethora of coal in the country. And these are the gentlemen who say that during the five years of their misrule the Liberal Conservative party decried the country. It is not true; it is they who have decried the country. It was their Finance Minister who stated that every corporation that invested a dollar in railways in this country lost it, and when he was asked to take the duty off tobacco, amounting to half a million dollars, stated that he could not replace it except by direct taxation; and ever since they have been uttering one long, doleful, dismal wail that Canada is a country not worth living in. And the only men in this country who had hope in the future, who said that by a readjustment of the Tariff and a proper administration of affairs, prosperity would return to this country end Canada would become as it is to-day, despite the protestations and the maledictions of hon. gentlemen opposite-the only men who did that were the Liberal Conservatives who never ceased to hold up Canada as a good country for immigrants to come to. I say that the Liberal Conservative party to-day have not their encmies outside of this country so much as they have them in the country. They are build-ing the walls, sure enough, with the trowl in one hand and the sword in the other. Since Parliament opened, I ask if one of them has risen on his feet to say one word in favour of Canada. I ask them if they can point to a member of with reference to my period of existence in political life. I the United States Congress, who puts in his paper or says had the honour of being here when his political friends, on for immigrants to go to; and yet we hear of Cincinnatti riots, and Ohio floods, and frosts in Minnesota, and all that sort of thing. Do their papers state that because of these frosts and floods the United States is not a country fit for people to emigrate to? No, Sir. No matter whether they are Republicans or Democrats, they all agree that 2,000 people from the continent of Europe should land every day at Castle Garden and be distributed throughout the country. They agree in getting all the immigrants they can; and yet here in Canada, with half the American continent under our control and only 4,000,000 of people to occupy it, we find a party whose lines are demarcated as clearly from the people as the waters of the Gulf of Mexico are distinguished from the Atlantic Ocean by the murky colour of the stream—a party that declares to the world that nobody should enter Canada who wishes to find a home and to prosper. The hon. member for Bothell has done this often in his paper; and of all the hon. gentlemen opposed to the Government who are sitting there confronting me, not one of them has ever risen in his place and proclaimed Canada a home fit to live in.

Mr. IRVINE. None of us has got as well paid for it as you.

Mr. WOODWORTH, When the hon. gentleman says that, he says what he knows is not true, or he is too ignorant to know what is true. I give him the charity which is accorded to him by his friends, of believing he is not over-crowded with common sense. Not ap hon. gentleman opposite, since I have had the honour of a southere, has risen in his place to show that Canada was a home to live in. Not one of them could repeat Scott's familiar lines, "Breathes there a man with soul so dead-." The moment he would attempt to say it, the words would choke him. Imagine one of them giving away to a patriotic sentiment - he would have paralysis of the brain or the heart. They have got into the groove of saying this country is not a fit place to live in, and it will only become fit to live in when they get into power. There must, of necessity, be two great parties, but with a paucity of population, compared to our great extent of fertile area, we cannot afford to have two great political parties opposed to each other on national grounds; we cannot afford, while one side is trying to build up the country, to have an opposing party which never losses an opportunity to seize upon any small tittle of fact or of ficton that they can find in the papers and give uttorance to in Parliament to keep emigrants from this country. Let the two parties oppose each other on some other ground, but let there be at least a national feeling in this country. I tell the hon. member for North Wentworth that he is mistaken when he says that the Conservative party ever decried this country. I am not sure if he was a member of this House from 1874 to 1878, but if he was not, he should have read the Hansard and the newspapers, or if has really read them, he has read them with but little profit, when he states that this Government, when in Opposition from 1874 to 1878, had decried the country. He stated also what we all know to be untrue of his own party. We all know that Session after Session, down in Nova Scotia, whenever Parliament would open here, we would ask what was the news from Parliament. And though they would put in the Governor's mouth, in the Speech from the Throne, everything to help themselves, it was all blue ruin, and the only hope for Canada seemed to be in the Liberal Conservative party. In-stead of decrying the country, the only hope for the country lay in our party, and everyone who has studied Canadian history knows that the statement of the hon. member for North Wentworth is utterly unfounded in fact.

Mr. BAIN. I only want to correct the hon. member the occasion of the Pacific scandal, did not dare to face the House, but fled without facing a vote.

Mr. FERGUSON (Leeds). The hon. member for North Wentworth expressed doubts about the correctness of the figures as to the number of immigrants sent to Manitoba, and based his doubts on the ground of being unable to find them in the country.

Mr. BAIN. In the report.

Mr. FERGUSON. I think more of the country.

Mr. BAIN. I was thinking about the report; I was not up there.

Mr. FERGUSON. I will not take the trouble of giving detailed information, but will simply refer the hon. gentleman to a speech of one of his friends who sits immediately behind him (Mr. Cameron, Huron) made a few evenings ago. If the hon. gentleman was not in the House, it would would be worth his while to turn up the report of the speech delivered on that occasion, in which the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Cameron) put forward the claims of the Territories for representatives in the House, and instanced the larger settlements at Moose Jaw, Calgary, Fort Mc-Leod, Prince Albert and Edmonton, as being large, populous, prosperous and happy communities, and to-day possessing larger populations than many of the Territories of the United States, when they got representation in Congress. That speech will supply all the information the hon. gentleman requires, as regards the distribution of immigrants in Manitoba.

Resolution to be reported; Committee to sit again.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to; and (at 2:35 o'clock, a. m.) the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

TUESDAY, 8th April, 1884.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS.

LIQUOR LICENSE ACT, 1883.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved that the House, tomorrow, resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to consider the following Resolution :--

That it is expedient to amend "The Liquor License Act, 1883," in several respects, and especially as to the time for applying for and taking out licenses, —as to the appointment of Commissioners, and as to legal proceedings enacted and the penalties imposed by the Act, and by providing that any deficiency in the license fund, in respect of expenses may be made good out of moneys voted by Parliament for the purpose.

JUDICIARY OF MANITOBA.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved that the House, to morrow, resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to consider the following Resolution :---

That it is expedient that a salary of $4,000 be provided for an additional Puisné Judge of the Queen's Bench in the Province of Manitoba.

ADJOURNMENT-EASTER.

Mr. BLAKE. Before the Orders are called, may I ask whether the Government are prepared to make any announcement respecting their course as to Easter.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I intend to propose, with the consent of the House, that when the House adjourns on Thursday, it shall adjourn until Saturday, and that when it adjourns on Saturday, it shall adjourn until Monday, so that Friday will be the only holiday.

Mr. BAIN.

THIRD READINGS.

The following Bill was read the third time and passed:-Bill (No. 128) further to amend the General Inspection Act, 1874.-(Mr. Costigan.)

Bill (No. 87) further to amend the Indian Act, 1880.— (Sir John A. Macdonald.)

CIVIL SERVICE ACTS AMENDMENT.

Mr. CHAPLEAU moved that the House again resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on Bill (No. 130) to amend the Civil Service Acts of 1882 and 1883.

Motion agreed to; and the House resolved itself into Committee.

(In the Committee.)

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I propose that the Bill be amended so as to allow temporary or supernumerary officers who have passed the requisite examination to enter the service provided their age when they obtained temporary employment did not exceed thirty five years.

Mr. BLAKE. How many will this affect?

Mr. CHAPLEAU. It applies only to one case, that o an official who has been long time a temporary officer, who was considered, in fact, a permanent officer, and who submitted to the necessary examination. This amendment will apply only to those who have been constantly employed, not to those who were employed at one time and then removed.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman has suggested a possible difficulty. A man might have been employed a little while a great many years ago, and would still be entitled to the benefit of this amendment, for no exception, such as the hon. gentleman suggests, is made.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. WHITE (Renfrew). I beg to call again the attention of the hon. Secretary of State to a question I brought up yesterday, in relation to the promotion examinations. I am informed that in some cases where promotion examinations have taken place, successful candidates have not been furnished with certificates, which, I think, are required to be furnished to them by the law, or under the regulations. I would suggest that in those certificates furnished to successful candidates, the number of marks they received ought to be indicated, so that they may know whether they have passed an examination entitling them to a higher grade than that which they competed for; and if they have, they should not be requested to pass another examination to be rendered eligible for a position in such higher grade.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. The only examinations for promotion that have taken place were general examinations, and, in those examinations, the candidates who were successful were either entitled to a first class clerkship certificate or a second, according to the number of points they obtained. I have consulted a member of the Civil Service Board, and I.do not see any objection to providing that candidates for first class will not be obliged to submit to a second examination, even when the examination asked would be for another vacancy, if the number of points obtained entitled them to a first class certificate. I suggest another amendment, that the graduates of the Royal Military College be added to subsection 6 of section 4.

Bill, as amended, reported; and read the third time and passed.

INDEPENDENCE OF PARLIAMENT ACT AMEND-MENT.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on Bill (No, 111) respecting the Independence of Parliament Act, 1878, 41 Vic., chap. 5.

Motion agreed to; and the House resolved itself into Committee.

(In the Committee.)

Sir JOHN A MACDONALD. I desire to move an additional amendment to the 9th clause of this Act. The 9th clause contains certain provisions declaring who shall not be disqualified or rendered ineligible for sitting as members of Parliament. Sub-section c says:

"Any officer of the militia, or militia man, not receiving any salary or emolument out of the public money of Canada except only his daily pay when called out for drill or on active service, or allowances."

It will be seen that this clauss does not allow any officer of militia to receive any other sum except his pay when actually called out for drill. Now it appears that it is the practice in the Department, in addition to the pay given to officers for their daily drill, for them to receive a cortain annual sum, some $20, I believe, for the care of arms and for drill instruction. The object of the clause was to allow militia officers, or militia men, to be elected members of Parliament if they only drew their daily pay, and it is for the purpose of including staff officers who receive salaries like Adjutants General and the Brigade Majors. But the words of the clause strictly interpreted would really render ineligible every officer of militia who received this annual fee for the care of arms and for drill instruction; and I believe there are many hon. members here who, if the strict interpretation of the Act were insisted on, would be ineligible. My hon. triend, the momber for Montmagny (Mr. Landry), is one of them. He was surprised the other day by getting notice that he was going to be sued for breach of the independence of Parliament Act, and that he was liable to pay $6,000, I think. My hon. friend did not know what in the world he was going to be sued for; he was not aware that he had in any way infringed the independence of Parliament Act. But on enquiry it was found, that as captain of his company, he had received, like other officers, this fee of $20, for which he was now threatened with a suit. Subsequently he put the case in the hands of his solicitor, and his solicitor writes :

"I leadose you a letter which I received to-day from Mr. Mosgrove. I called on him for an explanation, and from what he says to me be expects $500 or $600 from you, otherwise he says he will proceed with his threatened snit."

In other words he attempted to levy blackmail because this officer, like other officers of the active militia, had received this annual sum for drill instruction. I move that the following section be added to the said Bill as the fourth section :--

4. The following words are hereby added to Sub-section (c) of Section 9, of the Act hereby amended,—" and any pay or remuneration allowed him for the care of arms or for dr 11 instruction," and shall be construed and have effect as if they had formed part of the said Act and Sub section at the time of the passing thereof :—

And any Member or Members of the House of Commons or any person whoseever being or having been such Member is hereby indemnified and exonerated from all liability to any penalty or other responsibility and from any suit, demand, or judgment which may have been or may be hereafter brought or rendered against him with respect to any such penalty or responsibility of sitting or voting in the House of Commons, while not otherwise disqualified, than by reasons of his having received any pay or remuneration for the care of arms or for dill instruction while an Officer of the Militia or Militia mao; and this Act may be pleaded as a bar and discharge to any action or suit pending, or which may be brought against any Member of the House of Commons or other person as aforesaid for any matter, cause, or thing mentioned in this Act, and shall also be a discharge of any judgment for any such penalty as is mentioned in this Section, and any costs or such judgment

Mr. BLAKE. I suppose the hon. gentleman will not press the third reading of the Bill, and that this clause will appear in the Votes and Proceedings to morrow, so that we may have the opportunity of examining it.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Certainly. Bill, as amended, reported, SUPPLY.

The House then again resolved itself into Committee of Supply.

(In the Committee.)

SUPERINTENDENCE OF INSURANCE COMPANIES.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. Part of the increase is due to one of the clerks being made a second class clerk, at $1,100 a year, and the other part of the increase is made up of the contingencies of the Department.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What did the fees amount to last year?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. An assessment was made to cover the expenses, and it did cover the whole.

DOMINION LANDS-CHARGEABLE TO CAPITAL.

211. Amount required for surveys $300,000 00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I hope the hon. First Minister will give the Committee some general idea of the policy of the Government on this subject. So far as I can make out an enormous quantity of land has been surveyed, much in excess I should imagine of the quantity which, for a good many years, can be required for settlers. I shall be glad if I am mistaken on this point, but the quantity seems to me to be in excess of the needs.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. When in Committee before, I laid on the Table a map showing what surveys had been made, the block surveys as well as those where town-ships had been sub-divided. The attention of the Department was, in the first place, directed to lay out the land on each side of the Canadian Pacific Railway; and that has been pretty well done, I think as far as Calgary. Next the Department proceeded to lay out as far as possible the various areas which had been selected by the colonization companies. Of course, the object of those companies was to obtain settlers as soon as possible; and they could not get settlers until their lands were sub-divided, and they covered very considerable arcas. Then there was special surveys at particular points-at Prince Albert, Edmonton, Battleford and elsewhere. Then there were general surveys which have been completed, except a small tract between the international boundary and the Canadian Pacific That small tract consists of land supposed Railway. to be of value only for grazing purposes, and not specially adapted to agricultural purposes. Whenever it is ascertained beyond a doubt that a region is chiefly adapted for grazing, of course it is a waste of money to subdivide it into quarter sections, because grazing locations must be of very considerable dimensions. That is, speaking genorally, the plan that has been carried out by the Surveyor-General's branch of the Department of the Interior. A large vote for surveys was taken last year, $650,000. The season was a particularly favourable one for the work, and a very large amount of surveying was done. It is thought desirable that we should diminish the amount of surveys to be carried out this year. It would not have been at all well to have decreased the work before this time. Both in the United States and Canada, settlers will not go where the Government wish them to go, but only wherever their caprice and fancy suits them, and it is not well to discourage that feeling. Although of course it prevents the settling of immigrants in large communities and interferes with the establishment of municipal institutions and self government, yet there are no means of checking that practice; and if the immigrant gets disappointed when he has set his heart on a particular place, he is very apt to become a member of the exodus party. So we must put up with it. It has been thought well under these circumstances to continue the surveys, but carry them out on a reduced scale. There is another reason why the surveys should not be stopped suddenly. It was with some difficulty that a satisfactory body of competent men was found. These men have been found, and on the whole they have done their work well. There are of course surveyors and surveyors-some who are competent and some who are partial failures; but the experience of last year and the fact that the extent of surveys will be diminished for this year, have enabled the Department to make a selection of the men. Unfortunately, Mr. Lindsay Russell, as everyone will regret to hear who knows him, is in bad health and is to be super-annuated, and Captain Doville, who is at the head of the surveying branch has been able to classify the surveyors from his experience and his acquaintance with their acquirements and capabilities. Of course, in choosing a surveyor you must choose him first for his professional knowledge, and in the next place for his reliability and honesty of purpose, and his economy as well. Some are wasteful, and some slight their work. They have been arranged, however, from first class down to fifth class, and I may say, on behalf of the head of the Department of the Interior, that they have been selected without the slightest reference to himself. It has been left entirely to the head of the surveying branch to choose the fittest men.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Have any of the surveys been conducted north of Edmonton, towards the Peace River District?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. There are some surveys on the north branch of the Saskatchewan, but to what extent I cannot say without the map. At Saskatchewan, Battleford, Edmonton, and some other points, the general system of survey, the equilateral system, has been of necessity abandoned. These were old settlements of the Hudson Bay Company, and the holdings have narrow fronts and great depth. I was anxious myself, I must say, for the sake of carrying out the principle all over the North-West, to have the new system carried out there, even by compensating the parties, or arranging with any of the settlers whose improvements were cut up by the new survey, but that was found to be exceedingly distateful to the people. They like to hold their old holdings, so that these are special surveys, which have been laid out according to the original plan of the Hudson's Bay Company. A very difficult question has arisen as to the settlement of the boundaries of these people, and as to ascertaining those parties who really have bond fide titles from the Hudson Bay Company, or have acquired the equitable title which is always recognized in the North-West from long actual settlement. That question is now in process of settlement, and will be settled this summer. Patents are issued as soon as they can be issued. The systom which has now been adopted since we were able to do so by the Act of last year, has enabled the Department to put an end thoroughly to the cry of delay in issuing ratents. Formerly there was the issue of patents by the old system, which had always obtained in Canada, and which we got from England. As legal gentlemen opposite know, there is great sanctity thrown about the great seal of England, and no matter how improperly it was affixed to a paper, the seal itself is conclusive evidence-no other is required, unless fraud, or something of that kind, has been proven before a court of competent jurisdiction. We have altered all that, and we have been issuing from 50 to 100 patents a day, and have really caught up with the demand. There is, of course, sometimes a natural hesitation on the part of the settler, who thinks that the day after the three years have expired, in which he has resided on his place he must get his patent. It is impossible that he can is expected to be built this season in that direction, and that Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD.

do so; there must be an inspection and evidence must be got; and we do that by personal inspection and not by affidavits, which are so many sources of fraud and misrepresentation by dishonest people. The agent goes along the line, and makes a report in each case, with special instructions that if there is real, bond fide evidence of actual residence, subject to the leave of absence allowed by law--if it is evident that he is not a bogus settler, a most liberal construction is given.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Am I to understand from the hon. gentleman's statement that from this time out, and for a period shortly preceding, a personal visit of the inspector is necessary in all cases?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I do not say so, but that is the general practice of the Department.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Not the invariable practice?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No; not the invariable practice.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Because, though there is a good deal to be said for a personal inspection, in some cases it might lead to a great delay.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Patents are issued generally in the United States about six years after the party has a right to it. There is, however, an intermediate certificate, which for most practical purposes amounts to a patent.

Mr. CHARLTON. Is the local agent authorized to issue a certificate?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That was the old law until we altered it two years ago, I think. We found that we had occasionally a dishonest or careless agent, who colluded with the parties, and therefore the certificate is given by the local agent, and is sent on at once to Winnipeg, to the Commissioner, or the Land Board, and unless they see any reason to suspect anything wrong they confirm the certificate at once. That is final, and thereupon on the certificate of the Land Board, or Mr. Walsh, the patent issues. Apropos of this vote, and of the map which I have laid on the Table, I will read the memorandum of the Department:

"The map herewith shows the localities in which the surveys for the next season are proposed to be made. The red skeleton lines thereon indicate the townships of which the outlines are to be surveysd; and the red colouring indicates where the lands previously outlined are to be sub-divided and set out for settlement. It is estimated that 4,200 miles of outlines will be run, and 216 townships sub-divided and set out for settlement. The outline work is almost wholly west of the fourth principal meridian, and between the Red Deer River on the south and the North Saskatchewan River on the north. The outline surveys in the Wood Mountain region, lying immediately west of the third principal meridian, will be completed as far as the western boundary of the 8th range, and as far north as the northern boundary of township 6. The scheme of sub-division includes seven to ten townships in the Province of Manitaba, mostly remnants of contracts of formeryears. The rest of the work is all west of the third principal meridian, and consists of scattered blocks of townships on the South Saskatchewan and Red Deer Rivers, not sub-divided last year, principal meridian, and consists of scattered blocks of townships on the South Saskatchewan and Red Deer Rivers, not sub-divided last year, although included in the scheme; a large block immediately north of Calgary, on the fifth principal meridian; about ten townships on the Red Deer River, about half way between Edmonton and Calgary; about seven townships on Buffalo Lake; seventeen on the Battle River, directly north of Edmonton. The larger portion of the sub-division work will be along the North Saskatchewan and Battle Rivers, from Fort Carleton to the fourth principal meridian, which intersects the North Saskatchewan about 10 miles west of Fort Pitt."

Mr. CASEY. Is anything to be done this season in the direction of surveying the districts lying south easterly from Prince Albert?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No; I think not.

Mr. CASEY. I would call the hon. gentleman's attention to the fact that the Manitoba and North-Western Railway there is a larger section of good land there likely to be soon settled upon than in many of the districts referred to.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I am glad to get the hon. gentleman's suggestion, and I shall ascertain in the Department whether, if the North-Western Railway goes on, the survey will not be carried on pari passu with the progress of the road.

Mr. CASEY. Of course, it is something in the future; but there is a railway going in that direction, whereas in the stretch of country towards Edmonton, there is no railway even in immediate prospect. It is very distant from the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and we have no pledge or statement from the Company that they intend to build a branch in that direction. It is quite possible that the Manitoba and North-Western may be the first road to reach that section.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I am told that all the lands through which the Manitoba and North-Western Railway will pass during the next year have been surveyed already.

Mr. CASEY. Probably as much as it will pass through next year; but people strike out ahead of the rollway, and you should have the country prepared for them.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That is quite true.

Mr. CASEY. With regard to the general expense, the reduction is very considerable, but it is quite clear that the surveys in those particular neighbourhoods will be ample for a great many years to come. I quite agree with the hon. Minister that for many reasons it would not do to stop the surveys, but it does seem to be possible that all that requires to be done this year should be done for a great deal less than $300,000, which will survey 10,000,000 acres, a very great addition to the surveyed territory to be made in one season.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon. gentleman will agree that it would be well that that portion of the country lying north of Minnedosa, and running towards Prince Albert, should be surveyed. Weil, there is scarcely a section of that country with regard to which you will not find people to say that it ought to be surveyed.

Mr. CASEY. But there is the general principle to be followed, I think, of surveying those districts where there is an early prospect of settlement, and leaving those where there is no immediate prospect of settlement. My hon, friend also referred to the surveying of tracts belonging to colonization companies. I should think that that work is pretty well completed by this time, because the number of colonization companies that have really made their payments and have a right to the land is comparatively small. I suppose that money has not been spent unnecessarily in surveying the lands of those companies that have failed to carry out their agreements.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The companies have selected their lands, which is a pretty good evidence to the Government that the lands of these companies are fit for settlement.

Mr. CASEY. A good many selected them without any inspection at all. Of course, it may be evidence as to the quality of the lands; but the hon. gentleman knows that many of these tracts are so far away from railway communication that unless with that stimulus of the forcing action of the companies, they are not likely to be settled for many years.

Mr. WATSON. I would call the attention of the hon. Minister to the necessity of having the large tract of land lying between the Riding Mountains and Lake Manitoba, immediately west of Lake Manitoba, and the tract even between Lake Manitoba and Lake Winnipeg, surveyed. Many people would take up land there in preference to going 1,000 miles further west, as it is close to settlement, and to railway and water communication. I would also suggest that some means be taken by which applications for patents could be made to some officer in Winnipeg and the evidence received there, as the system at present entails considerable correspondence with the Department at Ottawa.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The inspector reports, the agent signs the certificate, and the report and certificate go to Winnipeg for the approval or disapproval of Mr. Walsh. If there be any delay, the parties may appeal from the decision of the Land Board to the Department here. You cannot help that, unless you say there shall be no appeal from the Land Board at Winnipeg, and I do not think that will be satisfactory.

Mr. WATSON. It would be much better if a great many of the cases could be settled in Winnipeg where they can get the evidence. A man may apply for a patent who has had his land for four years, and still not have lived on it six months in every year, but have lived long enough to be justly entitled to his patent, though he may not have kept the strict letter of the law. Such cases have to be referred to Ottawa. But if they could be dealt with in Winnipeg, it would be a great relief to many settlers who are rather hard up, and not having got the patents for their lands, cannot borrow money on the lands to enable them to go on cultivating the soil and make improvements. I must say the Department has been generous in granting patents such as I have described, but still, if settled at Winnipeg, it would be a great relief.

Mr. MILLS. The hon, gentleman has laid on the Table a map showing the surveys which have taken place in the North West Territories and in the Province of Manitoba. I observe, in looking over the quantity of land surveyed, about 100,000 square miles are reported surveyed in that country, or 64,000,000 acres. In 1873, 4,790,000 acres were surveyed; in 1874, 4,237,000; in 1875, 655,000; in 1876, 420,000; in 1877, 221,000; in 1878, 306,000; in 1879, 1,130,000; in 1880, 4,427,000; in 1881, 9,147,000; in 1882, 9,460,000; in 1883, 27,000,000; or in all about 64,000,000 acres. I do not think the hon. gentleman's map discloses so large an extent surveyed as 100,000 square miles. This is a matter deserving our serious attention, because if lands are surveyed for any considerable length of time in advance of settlement and it is found that the marks of the boundary disappear and the survey has to be made a second or third time, it is pretty clear we are expending a consider-able sum of money on surveys to no particular purpose. Now the hon. gentleman has intimated that every homestead lot is to be personally inspected by some agent or officer of the Government before the patent is issued, in order to see that the homestead provisions of the law have been complied with. This, no doubt, will be a serious burden, and the hon. gentleman will be able to say what number of lots an agent will be able to inspect during the year. If settlement were to go on with any thing like the rapidity the hon. gentleman at one time anticipated, the expense of inspection before patents could issue would in itself require no inconsiderable vote. I observe that in 1877 there were 2,283 entries; in 1878, 4,065; in 1879, 6,782; in 1880, 4,200; in 1881, 5,819; 1882, 16,740; in 1883, 10,450. It is clear that in the course of two or three years there will be 16,740 patents to issue, and the numbers of homesteads being upwared of 7,000, there will be 7,000 in-spections to make. If the settlement were to go on with great rapidity, this inspection would entail a very large expenditure of public money. No doubt the question has been considered by the hon. gentleman, because he could hardly adopt such a means of determining whether the party was entitled to his patent or not, without first considering what for the fulfilment of those opinions, and what plan he prothe cost would be and of carrying such a means of verifying the good faith of the patent into effect. It would be seen from the report that the issue of patents has not kept pace with the issue of settlement entries, and there must be a great number of ontries that have been abandoned or a great number of patents in arrears. In 1877, the number of entries was 2,283, and the number of patents issued that year 2,438; in 1878, the number of entries was 4,065, and the number of patents issued, 2,357; in 1879, the number of entries 6,782, the number of patents, 2,663; in 1880, the number of entries, 4,210, the number of patents only 1,000. Now it is perfectly obvious that there must have been a great many more than that number entitled to receive patents. The next year, in 1881, the number of entries was 5,819 and the number of patents issued, 1,981. Of course, those who paid cash for their lots would all be entitled to patents, so the number of patents from the previous year should have been 4,065 besides the 1,417 who purchased in that year, and yet only 1,981 patents were issued or less than 20 per cent. of the number who were entitled to patents. Then, in 1882, the number of entries was 16,740 and the number of patents issued, 2,197. If we look back three years as to the number of persons entitled to patents, we find there were upwards of 6,006 people, unless the hon. gentleman will assume that a large number of those who purchased had failed to pay, and a number of those who had entered upon these lands under the homestead provisions of the law had abandoned their homesteads but take up their preemptions. Those pre emp-homesteads and given up the lands for which they were tions are on time. The party does not pay cash, and the homesteads and given up the lands for which they were entered. From these facts, it is pretty clear that the work of the Department must be falling very largely into arrear. The hon. gentleman shakes his head, but it is impossible that it can be otherwise, unless, as I said before, many who purchased failed to pay for their lands, gave up their purchases, and a large number of those who made homestead entrics abandoned the lands for which entries took place. Unless that is so, it is perfectly obvious that the work of the Department is very largely in arrear, as the number of patents issued has not been one-fourth of the number that ought to have issued, in case the returns made to us are perfectly reliable. and all the parties are in possession of the land for which entries were made. I observe, in looking over the revenues derived from the sale of these lands-and I have gone back as far as 1873-that the revenue has, so far, fallen very, very far below the actual expenditure that has taken place, and, that instead of the public lands of the North-West, as yet, being a large source of revenue to the public, up to this moment they have been a burden, and that those calculations that the hon gentleman submitted to the House a few years ago have not been realized. In 1873, the sales for which payments were made in cash or military bounty warrants, for both were authorized at that time, amounted to $28,586; in 1874, $25,987; in 1875, $25,161; in 1876, $8,724; in 1877, $143,645; in 1878, $138,211; in 1879, $255,119; in 1880, $155,812; in 1881, $164,451; and in 1882, $1,633,051; and the next year it had fallen again to $798,222, or a sum less than the expenditure for surveys and for the management of the LandOffice of the North-West, to say nothing about the cost of the administration of the Department of the Interior here. For I observe that the expenditure on behalf of the Land Office at Winnipeg was $140.000 odd, and the surveys $650,000, making considerably more than the amount of money actually received from the sale of lands in the North-West. I mention these facts in order that the hon. gentleman may have an opportunity of giving us further information upon this subject, that he may be able to inform us how far he expects those brilliant pictures of the large revenues to be derived from the sale of these lands are likely to be realized, upon what he counts in the North-West Territories. Now it may be as he has Mr. MILLS.

poses to adopt in order that patents may issue as fast as the public are entitled to them, and what means are to be adopted for actual inspection of the homestead lands with the view of seeing whether the patents ought to issue or not, because it is clear that, if a large number of persons take up homesteads, the cost of personal inspection will become a very large charge upon the revenue of the country.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I think the hon. gentleman has taken a great deal of trouble, and perhaps not too much profit. Certainly the chief expenditure in the North-West has been in surveys. The country has to be surveyed. Whether you give away the land to actual settlers or sell it, the primary expense is that of survey. Then the hon. gentleman says the patents must be in arrears.

Mr. MILLS. So they are.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Well, I do not think they are in arrears. In the first place, the experiment of having homestead inspection is a new one, having only been commenced last year. Before that, the Department of course, waited until the settler applied for his patent and sent in his affidavits, and very many do not choose to do that. They are quite satisfied. Having got their entry and built their house, no mortal man and no Government can disturb them. They are quite satisfied with their title, and do not apply for their patents. Then there are very many instances in which one patent covers a great many acres, and there are parties who not only get their settler wants to get the one patent for his homestead and his preemption, and he waits until he pays up for his pre-emption and gets his patent for both. But there has been really no delay, and I believe there are no arrears. There are only four homestead inspectors at present. There is an estimate made for soven, for fear that three more might be wanted. They will go over the country and verify the residence.

Mr. MILLS. Do they report on cach individual lot?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I cannot exactly say as to that.

Mr. MILLS. How many do they inspect in a year ?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That I cannot tell the hon. gentleman. The hon. gentleman must recollect that this system had only been introduced in the year 1883. From the immense number of claims that were bogus or believed to be bogus, and the immense number who claimed over the heads of those who had got the entries on the ground that they had abandoned them and tried to jump their claims, it was absolutely necessary to verify in some way the affidavits put in, and for this purpose the home-stead inspectors were employed. Of course, it does not relieve parties of the obligation, ex necessitate under the Statute, of putting in reasonable evidence of having satisfied the terms of the law. The homestead inspector goes through the country and makes up his mind whether the thing is altogether bogus or substantially correct. It takes very little time. A man can cover a great deal of ground in a day, or a month, and especially in a season. But we will be able to speak more definitely in a year.

Mr. MILLS. The hon. gentleman will see that he has not explained away the condition of things that I pointed out. I pointed out to him that from the returns made by the Department of the Interior, going back the length of time for which is necessary that parties should be in occupation before the right to get a patent for a homestead entry should accrue, will find that the number of patents issued do not make more than 25 per cent of the annual entries by sale or by homestead stated that these parties have not applied for their patents, they may be content to allow the matter to stand over. That may be quite trne-in all probability that is the case; but if that be so it is perfectly obvious that the work of issuing patents has not yet taken place; inspection has not yet taken place; that is yet to be done, and there is an accumulation of work to be performed at some future period which, according to the scheme marked out by the hon. gentleman, implies a very large expenditure, whether it be done this year or five years hence. Whenever it is done it will entail a very large expense on the country. For instance, in 1883 there were 16,740 entries either by sale or by homestead entrics. Well, in the course of a very few years there will be 16,740 patents to issue, and there will be 16,740 inspections to take place, less the number of actual sales. Therefore I say that a less expensive mode of inspecting the country and of determining whether a party is entitled to a patent, should be adopted than that which the hon. gentleman has suggested.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. May I ask if the hon. gentleman is aware what steps are taken to secure that in conjunction with this service some sort of record is made of the quality of the land surveyed? Now, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company have an uncommonly excellent plan, and I am not sure that it is possible for the Minister to adopt it. Still, I wished to know what step is being taken to see that as the survey goes on, a record is kept of the quality of the lands to which purchasers may have access.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The surveyors make their field notes; all surveyors do that, as the hon. gentleman knows. In their field notes they give a general description of the country, and of its quality, so far as they are capable of judging—and surveyors are pretty good judges of what land is—and of the timber, and I suppose any special indi-cations they observe; and these are returned to Ottawa.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Has the hon, gentleman ever seen the maps-the little books that are prepared by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company of each township of theirs?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No. But I understand from the Deputy Minister that the duties of a surveyor in surveying are quite different from those of the parties sent to examine land by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. The latter are not surveyors; or may not be. A surveyor lays out the boundary of the township and marks out the sub-divisions, the different sections and quarter sections of a township; but he does not go into the interior and does not examine every lot, whereas, the officers of the Canadian Pacific Railway value the land with the object of selling it; they go over the lot and look at the soil and make a report for the purpose of selling it. The Government could not do this, as the expense would be enormous. Our surveyors make a report, as all surveyors do, of the country which they actually traverse.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The Inspector of colonization companies' salary and travelling expenses $3,000. About how many companies has ho to inspect?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. There are twenty-six living existing colonization companies, and he inspected twelve last year, those that are in the vicinity of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Those living further north about the Saskatchewan were not inspected. They will be inspected this year. The object of inspection, of course, is to ascertain what sottlers there are within the area, and what credit shall be given for the settlers.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I should imagine the officer might have easily enough inspected twenty-six companies in the course of a year. Do I understand that his whole time has been taken up in inspecting twelve last year? Because that does not seem a superhuman amount of work to do.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The survey can only be made during the summer season. They lie many miles apart from each other, perhaps 300 or 400 miles; it is a country of such enormous distances.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I do not think the whole twenty-six lie 300 or 400 miles apart. They may lie thirty or forty miles apart, because they are most of them substantially within the same belt. I do not want to censure the officer, because it is quite possible in that country that the proper inspection of twelve companies may have occupied the whole time. But prima facie it did appear to me that he might have visited the whole twenty-six.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The object of his going is to see whether there is going to be deducted 100 per cent., or 50 per cent. The colonization companies paid $2 an acre for their land, and if through their endeavours they succeeded in settling the even numbered sections, they obtained a credit of $1 per acre; and therefore the Inspector of the colonization companies must see that the settlers are permanent residents and have made the necessary improvements before the credit is given. This has to be done carefully, or it will be no use to employ him. This work country.

Mr. CHARLTON. Is it necessary that the Inspector of the colonization companies should spend a large portion of the winter at Ottawa?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It matters not where he spends the winter.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Are the lands of any colonization company located in the county of Kent?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I do not know the names of the counties in the North-West.

Mr. MILLS. The hon. First Minister ought to be able to give the Committee a report from the Inspector, showing the colonization companies' lands which he has inspected. the number of settlers within their limits, and the character of the improvements which have been made. In this way we would obtain substantial ovidence as to the work of inspection performed. If the hon. First Minister has such a report it should be placed before the Committee.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The Inspector makes his examination as to the settlement and reports to the Department. His reports are considered very good, very satisfac-tory and very clear. They are not published, because to do so would involve a waste of public money.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. We all know the position which our esteemed friend, Mr. Stephenson, formerly occupied here; and I am informed that during part of the winter he was rather actively engaged politically in the county of Kent. I do not think that should be allowed; I speak in Mr. Stephenson's own interest. I would be sorry to make an attack on him; but officers of this class particularly should be instructed by the Department to keep them-selves clear of political contests. The hon. First Minister does not require to have pointed out to him the great prac-tical inconvenience arising, and the reflections that might be cast on the officer's work, if he interfered in political contests while in Ontario. I think it is to be regretted if that officer did interfere; and I think without depriving him of the right to cast his vote if he happens to be in the county, it should be understood that officers occupying such positions should not interfere in political contests.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I cannot say that he did interfere. Like an old coach horse, when he hears the whip crack he becomes excited at election times like the rest of us.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Is the hon. gentleman quite certain that he was not invited to come down?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Not by me. I will not speak for others.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will give us some information in regard to the item $8,400 for seven homestead inspectors.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. There were four Inspectors appointed, but one has since left the Service. The present Inspectors are Aikman, Rodgers and Park. It is proposed by the Department to appoint four more.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What are their duties; are they employed during the summer or during the whole year?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. They are employed outfide during the summer season, and work in the office during the winter.

Mr. MILLS. It is important that these officers should discharge their duties fairly and justly to parties who take up land under the Homestead Act. A case of hardship has been mentioned to me-the name of the party I do not re- to each of these officers?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD.

will be the means of saving a good deal of money to the member. But he took up land not many miles from Winnipeg a few years ago. He subsequently engaged in the service of the Hudson Bay Company, and according to their regulations he was not allowed to settle on the lot. He put another person on the lot, built a small house and made improvements, and he sent his earnings to Scotland, I believe, with a view of bringing out his family. His family were brought out, but a person in Winnipeg was appointed by the Commissioners to examine into the matter, because although he had improved the lot, and built upon it, he had no rights which were recognized, because he did not reside on it, and Mr. Aikins, a son of the Lieutenant Governor of Manitoba, became in some way or other the proprietor of the lot and all the improvements.

> Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The Act is precise. It is not the cultivation, but the residence with the cultiva-tion, which gives the claim. That subject was fully ventilated last year when the subject was before Parliament, and there seemed to be a concensus of opinion; that the cultivation clause would enable people who are wealthy to select favoured portions of the country, where there were chances of there being town sites or water privileges or something of that kind, put a man on it to cultivate it, and reside in Winnipeg all the time, keeping out the actual settler, and being in fact a speculator. Therefore it was considered that cultivation was not sufficient. That seemed to be the general opinion of the House, and that, I understand, is the general opinion of the Land Department at Washingtonthat residence is the only protection that the public have that the land will be occupied by the boná fide settler. You may get a man of capital; and he may acquire an enormous area of land, like the Dalrymple Farm, if the cultivation system is adopted. Some have considered the law to be too rigid with regard to residence, and some cases of hardship have been explained to myself. That, however, is to be remedied to a certain extent by the Bill which is now on the Table, from the Upper House, by which it is provided that if, say, the father comes and settles on the land, and the son takes the next free lot, they can live together, instead of requiring each party to put up a house, and have a separate residence of his own. The Act provides that within an area of some two and a half miles from a given point, the parties can live together.

> Mr. MILLS. That Act is not passed yet. I may say, however, that the case which I mentioned was evidently one of good faith and intent, the man having gone to earn means to bring out his family, with the intention of settling on the land. It seems to me that if a case such as I described does not come within the rule, it would be a very extraordinary rule indeed, for it is evidently within the spirit and intention of the law. The explanation which the hon. gentleman made with reference to the Bill in the Senate, shows a disposition on the part of the Government to meet cases of this sort, and it does seem to me that the person to whom I referred has been unfairly dealt with.

> Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That however is the construction of the Statute. There is the law, and we must carry it out, although if the law is unreasonable we may alter it. It may work hardly in some cases, and if it does so generally, it should be altered. If it works hardly in particular cases, the particular cases must suffer, if the general purview of the law is in the public interest. Will the hon. gentleman give me the name of the person he referes to ?

Mr. MILLS. I have not got the letter at present.

Sir. JOHN A. MACDONALD. If he is the particular individual I think he is, I scarcely think he was hardly treated.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What area is allowed

Mr. CHARLTON. We have been trying to get a return in regard to the granting of timber licenses, but so far we have been unable to get it. Perhaps the Minister will tell us what area of timber land has been put under license, what number of parties have taken out licenses, during the past year?

contain areas of land which are likely to be settled.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The report of the Department shows the number of licenses granted during the year. The normal size of each, is 50 square miles.

Mr. CHARLTON. I would also like to ask as to whether these licenses have been granted after competition has been solicited by advertisements, or as heretofore, without inviting competition.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. They have been granted to the explorers—those who go to the expense of exploring them, and make application, and pay the rental and the dues. In case there are more than one application in any given period, then they are put up to competition among the parties applying.

Mr. CHARLTON. A sort of private competition?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes, among the different parties. It they pay the Crown dues they get the license, and they are obliged to put up a saw mill, &c.

Mr. CHARLTON. The Government have not seen fit to make explorations on their own account, and inform themselves of the probable value and number of these timber limits, so as to be able to put them up at auction among the parties who may wish to acquire them. If that is not done, these limits are likely to be disposed of at a mere fraction of their actual value.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No doubt persons have sometimes had a bonanza; they have explored, and finding a particular limit, have applied for it and got it. At first for several years back, the great aim was to get down the price of lumber, and the man was considered the greatest benefactor of the North-West who would go and explore, obtain a limit, put up a saw mill, and send boards and timber to market. I quite agree with the hon. gentleman that with the increasing knowledge of that country that we have now, and with the large number of settlers who are going in, that competition may ere long be introduced to perhaps the same extent as it exists in Ontario and in Quebec, except in the outlying districts, where it may be very difficult to get people to tender, unless they have examined the land. They will not go to the expense of examining the land if they think that all their money may be lost because some person stays at home and tenders low.

Mr. CHARLTON. I think the policy had bet'er be adopted at once.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Perhaps so.

Mr. CHARLTON. We ought not to allow such a vicious policy to continue any longer. With regard to a reduction in the price of lumber, I judge, from the present price in the Winnipeg market, that that object has not been secured; and certainly the policy of the Government is not calculated to reduce the price of lumber. The granting to a person of a limit at $5 a square mile enables that person to sell it again at an enormous advance. I believe one limit that was got for $5 a square mile was resold a short time afterward at $2,000 a square mile. The policy in that case, had not the effect of reducing the price of lumber, but of placing a fortune in the pocket of a friend of the Government. The Government ought to lose no time in putting their timber limits up to competition, and ascertaining what their real value is.

Mr. COOK. I would like to ask if the Government have adopted the principle of bonusos, and if ± 0 , what amount rules as a bonus besides the ground rent.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. When there is more than one applicant, they are asked to tender, and the man who tenders the highest bonus gets the limit.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I quite understand the force of the remark, that the men who make explorations, ought to get the preference; and I quite understand that a few years ago, when the railway was not in existence, except from Winnipeg to Pembina, it was proper that large concessions should be made, to induce people to go in, particularly as the expense of transporting machinery and other material was very great; but that difficulty for two years past at any rate, has been almost entirely overcome. The valuable timber limits are now almost all within a comparatively short distance of the railway line, and if it be the fact, as my hon. friend has stated, that timber limits can be got for $5 per square mile and afterwards within a few weeks can be sold at $2,000, such a system would be trebly undesirable if the holder of these limits should happen to be a political friend of the Government in power. Such a thing would be justly looked upon, even though capable of explanation, as an entire departure from the true principle that ought to govern the regulation of these limits. Although I am not going to refer to the past, if the hon. gentleman admits the bare possibility of such a thing taking place, he ought to assure the House that he is going to put a stop to it from this time forth.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I do not know that it is a sin to be a friend of the Government, and I am not sure that a friend of the Government ought to be excommunicated if he complies with the regulations as other people. All parties are treated with perfect fairness on the principle of first come first served. If two people come at the same time, they are asked who will give the highest bonus. Whether we have arrived at that point that we should put all the limits up to the highest tender, I am not prepared to say. Perhaps in the outlying districts, the present course ought to be continued ; but in those districts where settlement is running close to the line of railway, I think the limits ought perhaps to be put up to competition. I shall call the attention of the Department to this discussion. Of course, the Minister of the Department will have the opportunity of seeing in Hansard all that has been said; and he has only one desire, that is, to do the best for the Department and for the country.

Mr. WATSON. In the past it has not been the case that the first applicant has received the limits. I wish to call the attention of the Minister to one case. Some four years ago certain limits on the shores of Lake Manitoba, which were represented to have large quantities of timber, were sold at public competition in Winnipeg. Some of these limits did not turn out to be as represented. One man cleared all the timber off his limit in one season. He built a tug and a saw-mill, and went to considerable expense, and for the last two years that plant has been lying idle. Other limits were granted on Lake Manitoba and Lake Winnipegosis, which have not been operated to this day. The gentleman of whom I speak has, I believe, applied for the privilege 1430 of cutting timber on these limits, but has not been allowed to do so. I think that should not be; but while he has his plant there, he should be given a license to cut timber on these limits until the parties who own them are prepared to operate them. This man, I believe, has $16,000 worth of plant. These limits should be operated, or the licenses for them should be cancelled, and the parties who are willing to operate them should be allowed to do so.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Certainly they ought to be worked or cancelled. I do not know anything of the particular case the hon. gentleman mentions.

Mr. WATSON. I think this matter was brought before the Department.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. What is the man's name?

Mr. WATSON. Mr. Pratt. His plant is lying there, and is of no service until the Department does something about his case.

Mr. ORTON. Mr. Pratt, I think, bought these limits some time ago at public competition. The limits, I think, could not be operated without improvements being made on Lake Manitoba, and he did not comply with the requirement, simply because it was impossible to do so, unless improvements were made in the navigation of the lake. He, no doubt, paid largely for those limits, and has a certain claim for consideration, and at the same time the question is one that deserves the consideration of the Government as regards the improvements on Water Hen River.

Mr. WATSON. What the hon. gentleman states is not the case. Mr. Pratt bought those limits and paid for them in cash. He has operated them and has taken all the timber off them. He did not require any improvements to be made on the Water Hen River, for he took all the timber off in one season,

Mr. ORTON. If he took all the timber off, he certainly has no claim.

Mr. WATSON. He bought the limits on certain representations made by the officer of the Government at the sale. There was only a month's notice of the sale, not time enough for an inspection, and he purchased those limits solely through the representations made by the Government officer, expecting to find them as represented. The limits did not turn out as represented, and consequently the parties who purchased them had to suffer.

Mr. COOK. The position taken by the hon, member for Centre Wellington (Mr. Orton) seems to be, that when limits are got for nothing and they turn out to be no good, the parties who got them must have other limits; but if the limits were purchased at public competition, the purchasers are not entitled to any compensation. That is the conclu-sion I would draw from the remarks of the hon. member for Wellington. In connection with what has been said already by the leader of the Government, I may say that, as far as my experience goes, only the outlying timber limits are the most valuable. In Ontario, you do not get the timber limits in the section of country generally settled, it is the lumbermen who get the outlying country under license and become the pioneers of the country. I suppose the same thing would apply to the North-West, and the Government should adopt the plan of selling limits at public competition, so that the limits not under license, if there are any-but if what I can gather is true, there are not many yet under license, as nearly all have been given for $2 a square mile and no bonuses; $2 per square mile with 5 per cent for Government dues on the gross receipts—but if I think that the price of the timber lands ought to have there are limits remaining, the Government should take the gone to the people, and I venture to say that, notwithstandplan of solling thom by public competition.

Mr. WATSON.

Mr. ORTON. The hon. gentleman is entirely wrong in his version of my remarks. I stated that Mr. Pratt, who has, I believe, expended much money trying to develop the limits he bought, had a proper claim for consideration. With regard to the limits granted in the North-West, my hon. friend must remember that he was granted 200 square miles of limits on the North Saskatchewan, during the time his party were in power, that he held them for a long time and I doubt if he ever saw them or knew individually, what they were worth, or took any steps to develop them.

Mr. COOK. The hon. gentleman is entirely mistaken when he says I got 200 miles of limits on the Saskatchewan. I never got a foot of limits. If he says such is the case, he knows what he says is not true. I have not received a foot of timber limits in that section. I received the promise of a timber limit from the Mackenzie Government the year before they went out of power, and the head of the Department in that Government brought down a return in which the name of Cooke & Sutherland appeared as the parties who had received a timber limit by Order in Council a few days before Mr. Mackenzie went out of power. That was taken advantage of in my constituency by my political opponents and was issued in the form of a circular through the constituency, under the heading of "A great timber steal." It was a falsehood on the face of it, and I blame the Department of the Interior for putting forward that falsehood before the elections. I made an application in May, and in June I received a reply that upon certain conditions a license would be granted to me. I made an application for 100 miles of timber limits, and the condition was that no more than $25 per 1,000 feet should be charged for the lumber to be manufactured from the limits. Lumber was then selling at $50 and upwards per thousand, and the condition was that a mill should be built and the lumber should not be sold at more than $25 a thousand. For two years before that, the Deputy Minister of the Department, Colonel Dennis, had frequently asked me if I would not go up there to assist in developing the country by accepting a timber limit and furnishing timber; and I have his letters to prove what I say. I declined to do it because I had all the timber limits I re-quired in Ontario, and I acquired them at public competition. I did not do as hon. gentlemen opposite have been doing in the North-West; I did not get them for nothing. There are gentlemen on that side of the House to whom I could point my finger, who, I know, got timber limits in the North West for nothing; and it ill becomes them to attack me by statements in reference to my transactions in regard to timber limits in the North-West. These hon. gentlemen made this charge for the purpose of injuring me at my elections, but it had not the salutary effect they expected. They did not succeed in defeating me, because the people in my county know that all the timber limits I have ever had were acquired by me at public competition in Ontario.

Mr. WHITE (Renfrew). From what I have heard respecting the policy of the Government in relation to the issuing of timber licenses in the North-West Territories, that policy is exactly the same as the one adopted by their predecessors. I have always thought the principle on which that policy is based is a vicious one. It is not a proper mode of disposing of public timber and has been found in the old Province of Canada and in the Province of Quebec, subsequent to Confederation, to have a prejudicial effect, and it seems to me that the time has arrived, indeed I think it arrived long ago, when the mode of disposing of those public lands should be altered. I do not think that the hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House, who adopted that mode when they sat on this side of the House, ever ought to have adopted it. ing the fact that gentlemen have obtained timber licenses is the North-West Territories, either from the present Administration or the Administration who preceded them, without going to public competition, they have not sold a single foot of lumber at a lower rate than they would if the licenses had gone to competition and the public had realized what they ought to have realized, the fair and reasonable price of those lands. I venture to suggest to the leader of the Government that the time has now arrived, at all events, when the mode of disposing of those public lands ought to be changed, and they ought to be submitted to public com-

Mr. COOK. The present policy was adopted by the present gentlemen in power. Before Sir John A. Macdonald's sent gentlemen in power. Before Sir John A. Macdonald's Mr. COOK. I would say, as to my holding the timber Government left power, in 1873, before he resigned, he limits of 200 square miles, that the Government only wrote three letters to three different friends of his, stating they could have certain timber limits in the country north of Port Arthur, or between Port Arthur and Lake of the Woods. These letters were written, I think, only two or three days before he resigned. The policy was one inaugurated by himself, and the hon. member for Renfrew was wrong when he stated that Mr. Mackenzie adopted that policy. It was the plan adopted by his present leader, and it was not a plan adopted at that time, but it was his plan always. Always, ever since the timber limit system came in vogue, the hon. gentleman gave limits in the Ottawa district and through this section of the country, gave them to his political friends, and to other parties perhaps who were not his political friends. That was his policy, and that was not changed till after Confederation ; but when Mr. Sandfield Macdonald came into power, he adopted the plan that was always held by the Liberal party of Canada, that they should sell timber limits. Therefore, the argument of the hon. gentleman falls to the ground.

Mr. WHITE (Renfrew). The hon. gentleman is entirely mistaken. Long before Confederation the policy had been adopted of exposing timber limits to public competition, and he knows it very well.

Mr. COOK. Yes; perhaps when there were conflicting claims, such as the leader of the Government speaks of now, but not as a general principle.

Mr. ORTON. The hon. member seems to speak on both sides of the question. He attempts to defend, in the first place, the position occupied by the Government which he supported before the present Government came into power, when they granted him 200 square miles, which he acknowledges he held; and I fail to see the provision, and I guarantee that it does not appear on the records of this Horse, that he was bound to sell his lumber at $25 a thousand. But, independent of that, the fact remains that he held those 200 square miles of timber limits and prevented their being developed by other parties. He acknowledges that he was asked to go and develop them and that he never tried to develop them. He has given us a history of his timber speculations in Ontario, and he forgot to mention that he is also a large timber speculator on the other side. He ought to have given us the whole history of his timber limit speculation, because it would be interesting to know how he got those limits on the other side of the water, and what reputation he gained for enterprise, for the vigorous way in which he advocated the timber interest of this country on the other side and realized, I hope, a large amount of money, as some state, to the amount of half a million of dollars. But this is a very important question, and we should consider it in a serious way, and I maintain that the effect of the policy, as far as the North-West is concerned, upon the timber sup-plied to the people of that country, has been very beneficial. Instead of lumber being sold, as it was a few years ago, at $30 and $35 a thousand in Winnipeg, you can buy it there to-day at $22 a thousand. Is not that a great benefit to the people of that country? We have here the hon. member for as some state, to the amount of half a million of dollars. But North Renfrew (Mr. White), who is a large lumberman, who can compete and offer probably larger amounts for timber limits than any other lumberman in this country, but is it to benefit the people to give the hon. member for Simcoe (Mr. Cook) and the hon. member for Renfrew, a monopoly of the timber limits of this country? I believe the principle adopted, if fairly and honestly carried out, is one that will develop competition, and benefit the people of this country.

Mr. COOK. One would think, from the hon. gentleman's remarks, that he was a colleague of Kirkland's.

Mr. FERGUSON (Leeds). And that you were McKim.

promised mo 100 square miles. I expended a large amount of money upon the timber limits. I immediately went vigorously to work to explore the timber limits, but I only held them a short time when the hon, gentlemen came into power, and because I happened to be opposed to them in politics, they made it inoperative, so that I never had another opportunity.

After Recess.

Mr. COOK. Before the House rose I made a statement that in March, 1882, a return was brought down to this House in reference to the amount of timber limits that had been granted in the North-West Territories, and in that return appeared the names of Cook & Sutherland, to the extent of 200 miles; and by an Order in Council passed by the Mackenzie Government on the 7th October, 1878, it would appear by the reports that the application for the timber limit had been made at that time. I have a copy of the application that was made by myself at the time, which I will read to the House:

" MAY 14th, 1878.

" Hon. D. MILLS, " Minister of the Interior, " Ottawa.

"Ottawa. "DEAR SIR,—I have the honour to make application to you for a timber limit, say for one hundred equare miles, to be relected and sur-veyed at my cost, in the vicinity of the Saskatchewan River, between Edmonton and the Rocky Mountains. My object in obtaining this is for legitimately manufacturing and supplying lumber, shingles, &c., to the settlers on prairie lands, in the Territories to the east. As you are aware, the supply of timber fit for making lumber in Manitoba and the Territories south of the river mentioned, is so limited that unless the Government facilitates to every reasonable extent the views of men having capital and accustomed to the lumber business, who are willing to develop the large timber district known to exist west of Edmonton, the price of lumber must be such, for years, as to operate powerfully against the settlement of the country. I now, therefore, respectfully urge the concession of the above privilege, requesting one year from the first of July next, in which to make my selection and to furnish you with the plan and description of the limit, when I will be prepared to accept the same on such terms as the Government may, under all the circum-stances, and considering the great expense of taking machinery to such a great distance, consider reasonable. " Hoping to reteive a favourable and early reply. " I remain, " Yours faithfully. " II. H. COOK, F. W.L." On the fith June following, the same year. I received the

In case the limit should be conceded you, a cervery profitable rates. In case the limit should be conceded you, a cer-tain bonus per square mile would be required, in addition to which you would require to conform to the terms and conditions as regards pay-ment of ground rent and royalty, as set forth in section 51 of the Domi-nion Lands Act, a copy of which is herewith transmitted. "I have the honour to be, Sir, "Your obedient servant, (Signed) "J. S. DENNIS, "Surveyor-General."

Then, on the 21st May, 1878, the following memorandum was made to the Council:

"Referring to Mr. Cook's application for a timber limit, as set forth in his communication of the 14th instant, the undersigned begs respectfully to remark that he considers that it would be very much calculated to encourage the formation of settlement on the line of the Saskatchewan, if facilities were afforded for obtaining lumber at a reasonable price. "The undersigned has been given to understand that the price of lumber at Prince Albert is from $55 to $45 per thousand, and shingles at $650 per bunch.

The undersigned is convinced that a reasonable competition would reduce the price of lumber to from $25 to $35 per thousand, and the price of shingles in proportion, and if Mr. Cook or any other capitalist accustomed to the manufacturing of lumber would undertake to supply settlers along the line of the Saskatchewan within those figures, it would appear to him that the Government should facilitate such person being placed is a position to do se, by a grant of a timber limit, upon reasonable con litions. "Bespectfully submitted nit, upon reasonation of a submitted, " Respectfully submitted, (Signed)

"J. S. DENNIS, "Surveyor-General."

On the 7th October, 1878, the following report was made by a Committee of the Privy Council, which was approved by His Excellency:

"On a Memorandum dated 4th October, 1878, from the hon, the Minister "On a Memorandum dated th October, 1878, from the hon, the Minister of the Interior, representing that being of opinion that it would encour-aggend facilitate settlement in the valley of the Saskatchewan if facili-ties were afforded for obtaining lumber at a reasonable price, which he learns cannot be done at the present time, he recommends that a timber limit to the extent of two hundred square miles on the Saskatchewan liver and its tributaries, in the North-West Territories, be granted to Messra. Cook & Sutherland, the same to be selected by them in blocks of not less than twenty square miles, the bonus payable on the said limit to be at the rate of $15 per square mile. And further recommending that the applicants shall have a period of three years within which to make selections of the limit, which shall not interfere with any lands which may be set apart for the Canadian Pacific Railway or for reserves tor Indians or with school lands or with any other timber limits which nor indians or with school lands or with any other timber limits which may have been previously granted or which may be hereafter granted and selected prior to the selection by said Cook & Sutherland, and shall in all respects to subject to the conditions contained in the provisions of the Dominion Lands Act. The Committee submit the foregoing recommendatious for your Excellency's approval. "Certified. "W. A. HIMSWORTH, C.P.C."

In this report the Council confounded the name of Cook with that of Sutherland, who had also applications in the same part of the country. Each one had an application for 100 miles, and the Government confounded the application made two years previous to the one I made. Mr. Suther-land's application was made two years previous, and in passing the Order in Council, they put the two names together, and made it as if it were a co-partnership. On the 20th March, 1879, I received a letter signed by Lindsay Russell, Deputy Minister of the Interior, in which he says :

"SIR, — Referring to your recent personal enquiry respecting the result of your application for timber limits in the North-West Territories, by letter dated the 14th May, 1878. I have the honour to inform you that on the 7th of October last an Order in Council was passed in favour of yourself and Mr. John Sutherland, for a limit of 200 square miles on the yoursein and mr. John Sutherland, for a limit of 200 square miles on the head waters of the Saskatchewar, on certain conditions, such limits to be selected and surveyed by you in manner as therein set forth. This Order was not, however, notified to you or Mr. Sutherland in the usual course, and a subsequent one was passed, on the 26th December, arrest-ing its operation. I may say that the extent of the limits proposed to be granted in your and Mr. Sutherland's favour was thought to be exceeding " excessive.'

The opinion which the then Minister of the Interior, the leader of the Government hold at that time was that 200 square miles was too much for any company or individual to hold. I do not know but that I agree perfectly with the hon. gentleman, but as I have stated, the names of Mr. accounts, which represent only a portion of the expenditure

Sutherland and myself were combined, although the applications of both parties were separately at stake. I wrote the Minister of Interior as follows :-

" TORONTO, March 26th, 1879. "R'ght Hon. Sir John A. MACDONALD, K C.B., "Minister of Interior, "Ottaws, Out.

"SIR,-I had the honour of making an application on the 14th May, 1878, for one hundred square miles of timber limits, to be selected between Fort Edmonton on the Saskatchewan River, and the Rocky Mountains. for one hundred square miles of timber limits, to be selected between Fort Edmonton on the Saskatchewan River, and the Rocky Monntains. On the 6th of June following, a reply was received, informing me that my application, upon certain conditions, had received the favourable consideration of the then Minister of the Department. In furtherance of this assurance, about the 7th of October of the same year, an Order in Council was passed granting my application, but including the name of Mr. Sutherland, with the addition of another hundred square miles, making it appear, I am informed, as if a co-partnership existed between myself and Sutherland, who, as I understand, was also an applicant for one hundred miles in the same district. The issue of this Order was immediately afterwards communicated to me personally by the late Minister of the Interior. Immediately on receiving this intimation. I caused, at considerable expense, an expedition to be equipped and sent to the Saskatchewan, for the purpose of selecting limits. That expedition is now on the ground; it is uncertain when communication can be had with it, and could not, under any circumstances, be recalled before the spring. I have been arrested. I presume this action was taken in ignorance of these circumstances, the arresting Order should be recalled. It has been suggested to me by the Depaty Minis-ter, that it is thought the grant of 200 miles to one party may be excessive. Without waiving my claim, in case this proposal is unaccept-able to ask the falfilment of the order, I beg to state that I am prepared, if that course will obviate the objection, to accept such a modification of the Order as will give me the 100 source miles for which I have anif that course will obviate the objection, to accept such a modification of the Order as will give me the 100 square miles for which I have ap-plied, independently of Sutherland, in which case I would relinquish all interest on the other hundred."

I stated on a former occasion that I had been requested by the then Surveyor-General, Colonel Dennis, to make an application for a timber limit in the North-West country, which he sets out in his statement to the then Minister of the Interior. The report having been submitted just before the last elections, a circular was issued in my constituency for the purpose of injuring me in that contest. The Mail and several of the lesser lights of the Conservative press in Ontario and throughout the Dominion endeavoured to make considerable capital out of the fact that I endeavoured to obtain a timber limit from the Dominion Government for which I would not pay a proper amount. They declared that it was a very wicked thing for me to do. I do not know, if the policy of the Government is such that parties can obtain timber limits under such circumstances, why I should be denounced for endeavouring to obtain a privilege which was accorded to doctors, lawyers and other professional men. Lumbering is my business; I am a lumberman and have always been so. What the Conservative party thought it was very wicked for me to do, they have been doing much more extensively. We have not had a full return brought down, as was asked for by the hon. member for West Huron last Session; but there is an old return before us-the full return, I suppose will never be brought down until a change of Government takes place, and then we shall know the depths of the iniquities perpetrated by the Government before the last General Election, by which they retained power. The Committee will remember that after the election in June, 1878, the Conservative party came into power. They denounced the action of Mr. Mackenzie's Government, because they had on one or two occasions granted timber limits-as I have already stated, I did not obtain a timber limit in the North-West. I made application by letter; the request was granted by letter, and an Order in Council was passed; but the license was never issued, from the fact that I had not time to complete the survey I was making before the Government went out of power. The Minister of the Interior knows very well that a large expenditure was involved in connection with that survey, and that copies of the accounts were presented to his Department. These paid, amounts to from $4,000 to $6,000. It has been stated that the Mackenzie Government should not have acted as it did in regard to timber licenses. The Government of Sir John A. Macdonald in the threes of defeat wrote letters promising licenses without any restriction to Fowler & Fuller, of Hamilton, and J. W. Macaulay. The Mackenzie Govern-ment carried out the intention of their predecessors although they had no right to do so. We will now see what this present Government has been doing since they came in power. On 14th December, 1881, Germain & Co., of Winnipeg, were granted a timber berth of fifty square miles, without any consideration whatever. On 14th December, 1881, John Bergin & Co. were granted a limit. I know there is a member of the House by the name of Bergin, and he has a brother by the name of John; but I do not know that he is connected with the company. On 6th December, 1881, a limit was granted to M. H. Cochrane, a Senator of the Dominion, for which he pays an annual rental of $5 per square mile. On the 4th of July, 1881, Mr. J. R. Stevenson, of Georgina, obtained a limit on Boggy Creek for $5 a square mile. I do not know what connection he has with the gum swamp gang, but I know he comes from that part of the country, which is very suspicious. On the 4th of July, 1851, Mr. Geo. Devey, farmer, of Ancaster, got 100 square miles, but no sum is mentioned, and I suppose he got it as a free gift. Then Mr. M.G. Miller, and Jas. Scott, of Teviotdale, got some limits on the Assiniboine River-50 square miles, for which they paid $5 a mile. On the 28th of February, 1881, James W. McLean, and Wm. Ross Sinclair, got a limit of 100 square miles for $5 a mile. Mr. Chairman, I have been in the habit of addressing public meetings in the country, large political meetings, and I find that it makes no difference whether a man is a member of Parliament or an ordinary voter as regards his respectability or fertility in making noises. I know, Sir, that these facts are not very palatable to hop, gentlemen and that is the reason they do not want to listen to them. They know that these statements will go broadcast over the country and that they will do them no good. I think these gentlemen has better get their Sessional allowances, so that they can get their boots vamped as they appear to be wearing them out by scraping the deske. There are a good many of them who do not earn enough money for that themselves, and who could not earn anything but what they get here. I find that Messrs. Armitage & McCalloch, of Minnedosa, N.W.T., got a limit of 72 square miles, on the 13th of November, 18:0, at $5 a square mile. Now, I would like hon. gentlemen to be quiet for a little while, because I am going to say something which will interest them. I have no doubt they will be pleased to hear that their old friend Shields, and Haggart, McLaren and Nichol, got 100 square miles, for $5 a mile, on the 17th of February, 1881. Again, I find that the same men, only their names are changed—that is, John Shields, John Haggart, Peter McLaren, and Thomas Nichol, got fifty square miles on the Saskatchewan. Then, Sir, we find that on the 2nd January, 1879, Joseph Whitehead got favours from hon. gentlemen, but as he was a Grit he did not get them so cheap; but as they wanted to get him out of Section "B" they gave him a timber limit, and he figures in several places in the same way. Then, Sir, we find that Captain Henry Moore, of Prince Albert, figures in the return as one who got timber limits. On the 4th of February, 1879, I find that Dick & Ban-ning, lumber merchants, Winnipeg, got a limit for $20 a square mile; but that was given to them in exchange for another limit, which, I suppose, they wanted for some other friend. On the 5th of April, 1880, we find that Mr. McCulloch figures again as receiving some more timber limits. On the 5th of July, 1880, S. H. Fowler got a of seven eighths of the members of this House. timber limit of 100 square miles. I know these Mr. MILLS. As this discussion has given the things are not palatable, and that hon. gentlemen | ference on two or three occasions to an Order in Council. 180 do not wish them to go to the country. I could give the names of license holders who have got their licenses in blocks of two square miles. I think it is unfair to miners and agriculturists that such large sections of the country should be encumbered in that way. I regret that the hon. leader of the Government did not instruct his Minister of the Interior to bring down the list that was ordered by the House to be brought down, on a motion of my hon, friend from Huron. I regret also that a return that was asked for in connection with the Saugeen Peninsula timber limit, was not fully brought down. I would like to know from the hon. gentleman if he has men in his Department who are paid for the special purpose of scrutinizing returns, and taking from them anything that he thinks should not be given to the public, in violation of the order of this House. I have heard rumours of that sort, and as rumours are frequently repeated in this House, I take the liberty of repeating that, and I would like to know from the hon. leader of the Government if that is true. Now, I will relieve you, gentlemen. I have more respect for your boots than I have for your heads, and I will spare your boots the difficulty under which they have been labouring for some time.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I do not think my hon. friend should have complained of the mode in which gentlemen opposite conduct their argument. He ought to have allowed them to conduct it in their own way.

Mr. COCKBURN. This is a subject of which you, Mr. Chairman, like myself, feel very strongly. The system of disposing of timber limits by public sale was recognized twenty-five years ago, and is still approved of by a majority of the people throughout the country. It is the system that is in vogue in the Province of Ontario, and that has produced a very large amount of revenue, and contributed greatly to the financial prosperity of that great Province. I disapprove of the course of former Administrations in giving large limits without competition. At the same time, I think that the conditions under which the limit was about to be given to Messrs. Cook & Sutherland were not so vicious as the conditions under which some licenses have subsequently been issued. Both of these gentlemen, who were known to be practical lumbermen, proposed to get the limits for the purpose of operating them. The succeeding Government, if they thought proper to cancel that license when they came into power, ought to have continued the same policy, and should have rofused to give timber limits, without competition, to anybody else. We know that they have not, but that there are many throughout the country, not lumbermen, but lawyors and others, who have been granted timber limits by this Government without any competition. The Government, if they desired to be consistent or to act fairly towards Messrs. Cook & Sutherland, ought to have ro-tored at least a portion of that timber limit to them, or else to have refused to grant timber limits, without competition, to others. I was told by a lawyer the other day that his share of a certain limit was 25 square miles. The Ontario Government have realized from $2,000 to $2,500 a mile for their timber lands, while this Government have granted licenses for $2 a mile. There may be instances in which it is expedient to grant a few isolated lots without competition; but large limits of 50 or 100 square miles ought invariably, as a general principle, to be put up to competition. I feel so strongly on that point that I would vote to censure any Government that would grant large timber limits without competition; and I think the present Administration are very culpable with regard to their dealings in timber lands and timber limits. In speaking as I do, I am sure that I voice the sentiments which was passed at the time I had charge of the Department of the Interior, and as the hon. gentleman who was at the head of that Department has on two or three occasions referred to that matter, and the press that supports him has again and again referred to it, I feel it to be my duty to make a few observations on the policy of the Government at the time, and to the circumstances which led them to grant a timber limit to Messrs. Cook & Sutherland. As the hon. gentleman who has just spoken has said, the First Minister, shortly before his retirement from office, proposed to grant timber limits to Messrs. Fowler & Macauley without complying with the provisions of the law, and my hon. friend who was at the head of the Government that succeeded him, or the Minister of Interior at the time, Mr. Laird, proposed changes in that law which authorized the Government to grant timber limits without putting them up for competition. This, no doubt, was justifiable under the circumstances at the time, because it was found most difficult to induce persons who were engaged in the lumber business to undertake to build mills in order to supply the very scanty population which were to be found in the vicinity of what is now known as Winnipeg, and a little further west in the Red River settle-That condition of things was not changed while we ment. were in office. The population at no time had become so numerous that men who were engaged in the lumber business could be induced to compete actively with each other for the possession of timber limits, and the Government, at that time, acted upon a commercial principle. They fixed what they believed to be a fair rental value per mile for the timber lands, and they sold to all lumbermen-persons who either had mills or were engaged in the busines of milling -cn the same terms. There was no distinction made as to persons and parties. At the time the hon, member for Simcoe applied for timber limits on the Saskatchewan, there was but one mill in that country, owned, I think, by Captain Moore, and lumber then was selling in that district to the people at Prince Albert and those who were going into the country in the vicinity of Battleford at as high as $100 per thousand feet. The Government, after mature consideration and obtaining what information they could in regard to the position of the population and the extent of the area covered with timber in the vicinity of the Saskatchewan and its tributaries, agreed to grant to Messrs. Cook & Sutherland 100 or 200 square miles, I forget which.

Mr. MILLS. As this discussion h is given rise to a re-

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Two hundred.

Mr. MILLS. Two hundred. I remember at the time it was pointed out to us that a mill would be erected of considerable proportions. It was known that the location of the Canadian Pacific Railway tended then to the northward and that a very considerable portion of the population that would go into the country would settle in the vicinity of Battleford; it was necessary that facilities should be afforded them for building purposes, and the area granted was thought not an unreasonable area, not one that would more than supply such a mill as it was proposed to build, for a very limited period. Under these circumstances, the grant was made, I think, at a rental of $25 por square mile, upon the same terms and conditions as those on which limits had been granted to Messrs. Fowler, Macauley, Dick & Banning, and others who were engaged in cutting lumber in the vicinity of Winnipeg. At that time we took care to protect the population. I remember very distinctly that those gentlemen who applied to us asked us to give them a reservation of the timber in a particular district for a certain period of time, that we should not grant license to other parties until a reasonable time was given them for the purpose of selecting the various tracts of limits that they were authorized to select under the Order in Council, but we did not agree to that proposition. On the contrary, the Government said to these gentlemen that if another party applied for a ' and it was in the public interest that those questions should terms as those on which we granted the limit to the firm referred to, and if others exercised greater diligence in locating the various portions of their limits, the reservation on their behalf would be made first; and you must, we said, take your limit subject to the limitations which they have marked out for themselves. We did more than that. We provided that as, in many cases, the area covered with timber was very limited, and as we believed it was necessary to protect these limited areas for the population that might settle in that country, for the purpose of fencing and building, we provided that no limit or portion of limit should be sold containing less than twenty square miles. I think that was the provision of the Order in Council authorizing the limit to be granted to Messrs. Cooke & Sutherland. These gentleman, if they chose, could take an area covered with timber, if it were but two square miles, but they would have to pay a rental on twenty miles. That was the extent of the limit, so that they could not go up some tributary of the Saskatchewan and pick up all the choice lots of timber which might be found in the valley of any one of those rivers. They were restricted to a minimum limit of twenty square miles, so that the people who might go into that country to settle were adequately protected against the whole timber of the country being swept away by those engaged in the business of lum-Now I understand all that has been changed. bering. I understand that the hon. gentleman has granted timber limits to parties who were not engaged in the business of lumbering at all, but who must have purchased for the sole purpose of speculating, and has granted them at a ground rental of $5 a square mile; I understand also that they have been allowed to select plots of timber as small as two square miles. My hon, friend behind me says that in some cases the rental charged is as low as $2 per square mile. It is perfectly obvious that the Order in Council which was carried shortly before the retirement of the late Government was not cancelled, because it granted terms that were unduly favourable to Messrs. Cooke & Sutherland and against the public interest; for, in referring to this subject on a former occasion, the hon. First Minister said they had cancelled this Order in Council, on the ground that it had been granted by the late Government after the elections had gone against them. That is, I understand the hon. gentleman laid down the rule that no Government, after the opinion of the country had been pronounced against them, were to be at liberty to administer the affairs of the country until their successors might be appointed. I do not subscribe to that doctrine; I hold to the view that there is certain business connected with the administration of public affairs which an outgoing Administration will be better qualified to dispose of readily than would be their successors in office. 1 am quite ready to admit that official appointments, new departures in public policy, questions of great moment, ought not to be dealt with by an Administration after the country has pronounced against it. But, with regard to the ordinary routine of office, there are, perhaps, in almost every Department of Government, questions coming up that a Minister has had an opportunity of considering, that he is prepared to dispose of, that, if disposed of at all, will be disposed of according to some uniform principle which has been recognized and acted upon before, and I say that, in all such cases, it is not only the right but the duty of the Administration in office for the time being to deal with them. I know that shortly before we went to the country there were a great many questions connected with the administration of the public lands, with the issue of patents, and with timber limits, questions such as that to which the hon. gentleman refers, that had been considered and the papers in regard to which were in the Department and ready be submitted to the Government, timber limit they would be granted the limit on the same be disposed of by the Ministers then in office, because they were familiar with all the facts and circumstances connected with them, which the new or incoming Administration could not be supposed to be equally conversant with. Under these circumstances, I believe it was the duty of the Government to deal with those questions, and it was, in my opinion, equally the right and duty of the Government to deal with the question of the application of Mr. Cook and Mr. Satherland. We were not laying down any new principle. We were not dealing with them in any way differently from the way in which others had been dealt with for three or four years preceding, and that being the case, we were simply discharging a routine matter connected with the administration of public affairs and in a way which was, we believed, in the public interest. What has since been done shows that the hon. gentleman has gone a very much longer way in the relaxation of these rules and regulations than had the Government which preceded him in office.

Mr. FERGUSON (Leeds). I think the Committee and the House and the present Government should feel very deeply obliged to the hon. member from Simcoe for realing that memorandum from the Minister of the Interior of the late Government. He sets forth that every facility should be afforded to the manufacturers of lumber, with the view of reducing the price. That is the policy which should be carried out, and I believe it is being carried out to day. I know, as a matter of fact, that the competition among our own people, as it reduces the price, causes the Americans to reduce their price for import. I know that when the price has been reduced by the lumbermen in our own country, the Americans have gone so far as to give a drawback on lumber sent into this country from yards in Minneapolis. That fact will completely obviate any obnoxiousness which may arise from that policy, besides affording plenty of lumber for building purposes.

Mr. SPROULE. In reference to what has been said by the member for North Ontario, that he was prepared to vote against any Government or any set of men who would abandon the principle of selling timber limits by public auction, I would say that, in that case, he would have to oppose Mr. Mowat and the Provincial Government of Ontario, because they abandoned that principle previous to the last General Election; and although it had been one which had obtained from the time Sandfield Macdonald was in power and was, as he says, a good one, from which they received not less than $2,000 a square mile, still, on the eve of an election, Mr. Mowat abandoned that and adopted the principle of selling timber limits privately to individuals at whatever price he saw fit. The member for Simcoe said, in reference to the member for Wellington (Mr. Orton), that he supposed he was connected with Kirkland in his timber affair. He seems to forget that the allegations made by Mr. Kirkland were that the hon. member for Simcoe and Caldwell were the parties who were taking from him what was his right; because, while he bought this land believing he had the timber on it, he found afterwards that it was bargained away to Messrs. Caldwell, of Streams Bill notoriety, and Cook, of Simcoe. I think, if any party in this House ought to be associated with that matter, it ought to be the member for Simcoe. The member for North Ontario made the remark that he was given twenty square miles, and that that could not be given in a block. If he had said twenty miles square in a block, I could understand it; but by getting that distance along the river of ten miles on each side, he would be taking virtually all the timber that was along the river. I think there is no comparison at all in this, except as showing the difference between the two systems. I think there is no justification for passing the Order in Council by a Government which was then virtually moribund, because the country had decided so strongly against them, and they were evidently not actuated by a desire to do right, but by a desire to do a service to a strong political friend.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I think it would be as well that the Minister should let us know what his decision is about this matter. I doubt if there is a question before the House which excites more interest in the North-West than the disposal of their timber, and I am bound to say I think, after all that has passed from the hon, member for North Renfrew (Mr. White) and other of his supporters, it would be high time, as has been said, that the Government should consider what course they are going to pursue in this matter. I can tell him that all over the North-West very curious stories indeed are floating about as to the dealings, especially on the part of members of this House, with the timber limits. How far those stories are true or false we have not got the evidence at this moment to determine, but even the First Minister does not deny, either now or on other occasions, that there have been instances in which men for perfectly insignificant trifles, have got possession of valuable portions of public property, which they have sold at enormous profits, nor did he deny that many of these people were persons who had no connection with the lumber trade whatever. I can understand quite well that, whether the principle be objected to or not, there may be occasions, like that of my hon. friend behind me, on which the First Minister might have found it in the interest of the country to grant special privileges to well-known lumber firms, especially if it were on the condition that lumber should be sold at moderate rates, but I do not think any case could by any possibility be made out for disposing of perhaps the most valuable part of the public domain at very small rates indeed to persons who were not lumbermon, and who, it must be known to all parties concerned, only sought these limits for the purpose of selling them again. I do not know that it is desirable at this moment to go into a discussion, with the evidence before us, of some of the cases to which my hon. friend alluded, but it is very desirable to know whether the Government propose to continue that policy. The First Minister spoke somewhat doubtfully on the point. He gave us to under-stand that it was under consideration. Now, I think in the case of timber limits, it is scarcely possible that any application could be made on the part of parties who have invested so much capital in searching out those limits as to give them a real prior right. I think the time has come when those timber limits should be disposed of by competition, but if any special cases did arise, it would be manifestly the duty of the Government, in order to prevent valuable public property being sacrificed for nothing, if it were not put up for competition, to cause every separate application to be specially examined and specially reported upon; and I would be glad to know what the hon. gentleman is going to do on that matter.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. In 1872, when the Governmont of which I was Premier were in office, the Dominion Lands Act was passed by us and that Act provided that timber limits should be put up to public competition. So it remained on the Statute Book until 1874, when the Government of which the hon. gentleman was a member came into power, and the first thing they did was to repeal that Act and do away with the clause in the Statute which provided that all timber limits should be put up to public auction, and from 1871 to 1878 they gave out the timber limits without putting any of them up to auction, without making any conditions whatever as to putting up mills, and granting many of them for twenty-one years. When we returned to power we amended the law and followed the practice that had been carried out for five years by the hon gentlemen opposite with this exception: We granted at first, after we came in, a few timber limits for twenty-one years, but on con-sideration we disapproved of that and limited them to be annual licenses, terminable on notice, and providing that every party must, within a year, put up a saw-mill for the purpose of consuming the timber within the license. The hon. gentleman will find it is so, and if it had not been for the interference, the administrative action and the legislative action of the hon. gentlemen opposite, the law would have remained to this day as it was in 1872, viz. that timber limits should be put up for public competition. The hon. gentlemen now say "Oh they ought to be put up!" Why did they alter the law? Why, Sir, between 1874 and 1878, when they were in power, they never found out that it was an unwholesome practice to grant timber limits to applicants. The hon. gentleman says that other persons besides lumbermen have got timber limits. I say they ought to get timber limits. Any man who will comply with the terms the Government lay down, any respectable men who are able to carry out the contract, have the same right as lumbermenlumbermen, like my hon. friend (Mr. Cook) who made a very eloquent but rather inaudible speech a little while ago-lumbermen have no right to monopolize the timber limits. Lumbermen would be very glad, no doubt, to keep out every other class of the community from getting timber limits. But every man who applies and every man who complies with the conditions has the same right as a lumberman to go and cut trees down in the woods, and to send oxen, and horses, hay, oats and pork, into the woods-because that is all they do. There is no mystery about it, there is no secret, everything is fair about it. A lawyer, or a parson for that matter, can get a limit and can buy pork and beans, and tea and coffee, and send them into the woods just as well as the hon. gentleman. It is all very well to raise this cry about there being a specially favoured class. Well, now, Mr. Chairman, the hon. gentleman from Both-well (Mr. Mills) said that they had granted limits so small as two square miles. Never such a thing has happened. The original law was, that timber limits should be put up to public competition, and that was altered by hon. gentlemen opposite. When we came back, we did not return to the Statute of 1872, but we provided that when there were conflicting applications, the several parties who applied should have the opportunity of competing, one against the other, and the man who offered the highest bonus should get the timber limit. That was the arrange-ment made by the Government. The hon. gentleman from Bothwell says that he does not agree with the proposal that the license to Cook & Sutherland ought not to have been carried out. The hon. gentleman took quite a different line of action from that of the previous Government when they went out in 1873; and there is a very remarkable document in the archives of the Government in which there is a solemn protest against any Government, who had forfeited the contidence, as it stated, of the people, doing any executive act but what was absolutely requisite to carry on the affairs of the Government. Well, was there any absolute necessity, a day or two before their resignation was given. to grant 200 miles to Messrs. Cook & Sutherland, along the line of the North Saskatchewan, from Edmonton to the foot of the Rocky Mountains? And what do you think were the terms of the license? There was no provision compelling the parties to saw a certain quantity every year; there was no provision for putting up a mill to enable them to do so. But those two gentlemen found out that the timber limit from Edmonton to the Rocky Mountains was not a continuous line of forest, but was in clumps of trees, about 20 miles square, and the license contained the provision that they were to have 200 square miles, but they were to pick out those 200 square miles in special areas of 20 square miles, in order that those two gentlemen could get a monopoly of every clump of trees, of every single tree, between Edmonton and the foot of the Rocky Mountains. There was a monopoly giving all the timber of that country from Edmonton to the foot of the Rocky Mountains. And that was the reason the Government did not think themselves at all bound to follow their course, especially after they had be- gentleman has not taken the trouble to read the application Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD.

fore them the precept of the hon. gentleman, in the strongest and most eloquent terms, and if the hon. gentleman would like to see that document produced, we will be most glad to bring it down, to show how indignantly virtuous the hon. gentlemen opposite were, because we, who had never had a vote of Parliament, never had a vote of the people against us, when we went out, made certain appointments and did certain administrative acts. There was a holy indignation in the House and out of the House, and in the press, at this Government making an appointment and taking care of their friends just before they resigned. But the hon. gentleman says: "Oh, this is an administrative act; this is a carrying on of the ordinary affairs of the the country." Why, the Government going out could not appoint a Tide Waiter. That would be a great breach of constitutional propriety, but they could hand over a whole region of country, 200 square miles of country, two or three days before they resigned.

Mr. MILLS. That is not true.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The practice we have carried out is simply this: We grant now fifty square miles upon terms of paying an annual rontal, and paying stumpage, and putting up a mill warranted to saw a certain given quantity provided in the license; and the license is only from year to year and, on notice, can be cancelled.

Mr. MILLS. No; it is not so. I have the return here, and the majority of the licenses are for twenty-one years.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I stated that when we first came in we followed the practice of our predecessors, but we soon found that it was prejudicial, and we altered the system from a twenty one years' lease to an annual lease. That is the course the Government take. Now, the hon. gentleman wants to know what we are going to do with respect to the timber limits in the future. The Government have been carrying out, up to this moment, the practice that has obtained since 1874; we have been granting limits only for a year; when there is more than one application, we call upon them to compete. That has been the practice of the Government. It is a matter well worthy of consideration whether, in future, or in certain districts, at all events, the practice of unlimited competition, and of putting up to public auction would not be the best. That is a matter which the Government will fully consider. They have not yet adopted it nor come to a conclusion upon that matter. The hon, member for West Huron says there were special cases in which men specially fitted, such as lumbermen, should have special privileges. If limits are put up at public auction there is no security that the highest bidder will be a lumberman. Every speculator, any man who chooses to go and invest his money in timber, whether a member of Parliament or a person outside, can buy if he is the highest bidder and makes the necessary deposit; and the hon. gentieman knows that timber limits, like land, form a legitim-ate matter for speculation. There is no reason why any class or every class should not go into that business if they choose. The only thing to be seen to is this, that the Government take care that the purchaser, whether a lum-berman, a lawyer, a member of Parliament, or a bishop, carries out the conditions of the license; that he cuts a certain quantity during the year, that he puts up a mill and pays his dues. That is the way the matter stands now. As to the question which I rose to answer, the Government have not yet come to any decision as to whether they will make it an invariable rule to offer all timber limits to public competition.

Mr. MILLS. The hon. First Minister has stated that the Order in Council granting limits of 200 square miles to Messrs. Cook & Sutherland had no conditions in regard to the building of a mill, or the cutting of timber. The hon. COMMONS DEBATES.

The Order in Council is for the purpose of giving effect to the application, and one of its provisions is that a mill is to be built. The conditions are set out.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. In the Order in Council-

Mr. MILLS. The Order in Council is based on the conditions set out in the application.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The Order in Council speaks for itself.

Mr. MILLS. It is to be read with the conditions given in the application.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No.

Mr. MILLS. The Order in Council has no force, apart from the terms of the application. The hon. gentleman says that the hon, member for East York had changed the law. The hon, gentleman undertook to act in violation of the law, The hon. gentleman, in his communications with Messre. Fu ler, Macaulay, and others, proposed to disregard the law, and to treat with them without putting up the limits to competition.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Did not Mesors. Macaulay, Faller and Fowler get their limits from the late Government and not from the present Government, in consequence of the joint arrangement made with the Mowat Governmont.

Mr. MACKENZIE. In the Macaulay case-I recollect it very well-he came pleading that some mistake had been made by the hon. gentleman with regard to his license. That mistake was corrected. That is my recollection of Mr. Macaulay's position. Mr. Macaulay was no supporter of mine.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I did not say he was.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Macaulay, it is true, did not have all his limits set out until the hon. gentleman had retired from office; but he was authorized to acquire 100 square miles, to employ surveyors, and was assured that he would secure the limits he surveyed. When the hon, member for East York came into power, he found that on account of the paucity of the population, the limits could not be put up for competition, and the result was, that after due enquiry a fair rate of payment was arrived at, the limits being sold at a cortain price, on condition that a mill was erected in the vicinity of the limits. The hon. First Minister knows these were the conditions. The hon. Mr. Laird stated the reasons for the change being made in the law, and my recollection is, that the present First Minister himself admitted that the old rule acted on in Ontario and Quebec could not, at that time, be adhered to in dealing with timber limits in the North-West. The hon. First Minister now suys that he objected to Cook & Surtherland's license because it was for a period of twenty-one years. But the hon. gontleman could not have cancelled the Order in Council on that ground, because he continued, during two or three years, to act on that principle and to grant licenses for that period of time. I have a report of the licenses granted in 1832, in which the principle of twenty-one years' leases was adhered to.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I did not say that was the ground on which it was not granted.

Mr. MILLS. I find that P. Kelly, Pratt & Smith, W. J. M. Pratt, William Smith, Joseph Whitehead, and others, all obtained twenty one years' leases. Then, the hon gentleman tells us that he did not care to give small areas, such as 20 square miles. I find by the return that the hon, gentleman has granted licenses for areas less than 10 miles. In one case it was for 6 miles; to R. Z. Rodgers, 7 miles were granted; to A. Watts, I mile was granted. And yet the hon, gentleman claims he has patriotically taken care to protect the public interests, ty providing that small limi's midlt state briefly what the intention of the Government shall not pass into the hands of lumbermen. The hon, gen-is with respect to them. I am not sufficiently acquainted theman tells us that he fails to see why lumbermen should with the forest ranges of the North-West, to know whether have any special opportunity of acquiring timber limits. The hon. gentleman moreover says that these lumbermen will take care that the hay and oats of the farmers will be purchased. I should like to know whether the hon, member for Lincoln and other hon, gentlemen whom I could name on the other side of the House, hon, members who acquired timber limits at $5 a square mile and sold them at $2,060. so acted in order that they might cut lumber and provide a market for the hay and oats of the North-West farmers. The reasons given by the hon. gentleman for the course he has pursued are not adequate reasons, are not true reasons, and are not these which appeared to have influenced his conduct in dealing with this particular matter, Now, Sir, the hon. gentleman says another reason for cancelling this license was, that my hon. friend had left on record a protest against his wholesale appointments to office before his retirement in 1873. Well, Sir, if I remomber aright, the hon. gentleman made some 609 appointments within a few days before he left office, adding thereby to the public burdens between $200,000 and $300,000, and his colleague made no provision for the payment of this amount. While he was quite ready to appoint any number of his friends to office, he did not ask Parliament to provide the salaries of those whom he thus appointed. And my hon, friend was not obliged to continue them in the offices to which they were appointed. There were no places for them; the public service did not require them, and the hon, gentleman did not obtain from Parliament the means of compensating them. I think there is no analogy between these extraordinary appointments and the oidnary routine work of the Department, which had been carried on during a period of five years, with the knowledge and sanction of Parliament, which the hon. gentleman, although he succeeded in displacing his predecessors in office, has not seen proper to change in the direction in which he would lead the public to believe the elections required him to carry on that change. The hon. gentleman has not put up these limits to public auction; he has not inaugurated the policy which he has intimated he was elected to give effect to. On the contrary, he has reduced the amount of the ground rent. He has granted those limits to his friends for the purpose of speculation; in fact, the public property has been taken out of the hands of the public and put into the hands of supporters of the hon. gentleman.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What about these siz forest rangers?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. They look after these celebrated timber limits.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHF. I am afraid they are rather late in looking after them.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No; not too late. The country is divided into timber agencies, and every agent has a forest ranger or so under him to look after the stumpage and see that the public revenue is preserved, and that these men pay their dues and carry out the terms of the timber licenses

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I understood that the hon, gentleman had some notion of attempting to create one or more Orown forests in the North-West. Is this vote in any way connected with such a plan?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I think there was a discussion in another place on that subject.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Yes; and the Bill is now before Parliament.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The hop. gentleman such a plan is practicable or not, but I must say that I believe that all over Canada a great deal of practical negligence has occurred for many years, on the part of all Governments, in not creating one or more Crown forests. In other countries, where these matters are more carefully attended to, a large portion of the public revenue is extracted from Crown forests, not in the hands of lumbermen, but carefully worked by public officials. I supposed that the hon. gentleman was going to try something of the kind in the North-West, and there would be a great deal that could be said for such a scheme.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No; the proposition is not so wide as the introduction of a system of forest planting.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. No; I did not mean forest planting, but taking the land on which valuable wood is growing and preserving it for the public use.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No; the object of forming these forest tracts is to lay aside forests, where they exist at the sources of various rivers. The hon. gentleman knows that there are countries, especially in the east, formerly flowing with milk and honey, rich and fertile countries, which have been rendered arid and uninhabitable almost, by the timber on the forest ranges, which are the sources of the rivers, being cut away. This subject has especially attracted the attention of the United States. The United States Government issued a Commission a year ago, and the proposition there is to lay aside, for instance, on the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, a strip of forest as a protection, or a shelter or covering, for the sources of the rivers. As is truly said in that report, a condensation of which I read in a leading American journal, the various States will look after the tree planting and the establishmont of forests on the plains, and the general area of the country; and if the country is denuded of its timber, it can be restored by judicious planting. But when the timber at the sources of the rivers is carried away, the character of the rivers is altered altogether. Then comes a period of inundations, and dry, waterless river beds. Besides this proposition in the United States about the Rocky Mountains, there is a great agitation in the State of New York and other States, for protecting the sources of the rivers in the Alleghany and Appalachian Ranges, and the proposition made in this Bill is, that the Governor shall be empowered to set aside an area of protective land, along the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, to protect the streams flowing into the North-West Territories. That is the scheme which is proposed in the Bill.

Sir PICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I am glad to hear it, although I am afraid, from what I hear of the character of the streams, that the evil does exist to a great extent already, and that these streams are more or less of the character of mountain torrents.

Mr. COLBY. The intention which the hon. gentleman has in view is of the very best, but I should doubt very much, from my experience in the Rocky Mountains-and I have had occasion to visit these regions for some yearswhether it could be practically carried out, whether the forest fires would not nullify the laudable purpose which the hon. gentleman has in view. In the case of spruce and pine forests, on almost every mountain side through the Rocky Ranges which I visited, in the vicinity of miners' camps and settlements, you will see the blackened trees which show the ravages of fires. Of course, with hardwood districts it would be quite different.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The same reason would prevent you from building a house.

Mr. COLBY. I think that as settlement enters a country it will be found that notwithstanding any precautions which may be taken, the good purpose could hardly be subserved, I Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

and I think that no policy should be hastily entered upon, until some observations are mule.

Mr. MILLS. I do not think we could depend wholly on the growth of timber on the Rocky Mountains, but we would have to depend on preserving the forests in the heights or table lands, in which the tributaries of the Saskatchewan and other large rivers take their rise. Take, for instance, the Riding Mountains Section, and the Beaver Hills, those large, swampy districts, in which considerable timber is found. 1 think it would be a great advantage if the Government should have a thorough exploration, and preserve all such timber districts as these as public property, in order that they might be devoted to the production of timber.

Mr. CHARLTON. What are the duties of these land guides?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. They are to convoy the immigrants to their homesteads after they have made their entries.

Mr. PATTERSON (Essex). I am not going to take part in the war that has been waging here for some time. But before this vote is carried, I wish to make a statement with reference to a remark that was made during the discussion on colonization companies. It was stated here, I have no doubt under misapprehension, that Mr. Stephenson, the Inspector, had taken part in the recent election in the county of Kent. I wish to state, from my personal knowledge, that Mr. Stephenson was not in the county of Kent during that election, or for some time before. Some members of his family took part in the election, and they were probably confounded with him; but Mr. Rufus Stephenson did not take any part in the contest.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The hon. gentleman I suppose alludes to what I said. I said that I had been informed by the public newspapers that he was there.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. It was I who called attention to the statement, and I am very glad to have the explanation, because I should regret, for Mr. Stephenson's sake, if he had taken part in that election. I am glad to hear that he did not.

Here is an item of Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. interest. Sir, I am not rising to oppose a vote of $18.75 for twenty-five copies of the biography of the High Commissioner. If I call attention to it, it is for another reason. When I first saw this item, Sir, I had doubts. I knew the magnitude of the subject, and I knew that it was scarcely possible for any ordinary person to do full justice to it; consequently, I made enquiries as to Monsieur Thibault. am happy to say that those enquiries were more than satisfactory. In point of fact, I think I may go to the length of saying that Monsieur Thibault's antocedents were all that could be desired or expected to enable him to fulfil the very onerous task he had assumed. It was not, Sir, that my standard was not high. My standard for a biographer, to do justice to the hero of this sketch, is high. I felt that the man who undertook that task ought to be a person of a very vivid imagination, and ought to be quite untrammelled by any regard for trivial conventionalities. In point of fact, Sir, he ought to be a prose poet, to do full justice to the sort of prose poet, to do full justice to the subject. Now, Sir, I found all this, and more too, in Monsieur Thibault-all these qualities combined. Perhaps, Sir, one single anecdote which has been given to me within the last day or two will suffice. Mr. Thibault is a man of resource, a man of ingenuity, a man of fertility of invention. I am told that on one occasion he was conducting a campaign in the interest of hon gentlemen opposite, I think in the county represented by my hon, friend from Digby (Mr. Vail). Questions arose-questions of a theological character. Monsieur Thibault had declared that no man who had a true regard for religious principles could help supporting the present Government. He was called on for proof of that assertion. The proof was forthcoming. He produced a document which I am led to understand was an unsigned patent from the Department of the Interior. And he displayed that as a rescript, signed by the very highest spiritual authority, in which eternal condemnation was pronounced against all infidels who might vote against Mr. Thibault and Sir Charles Tupper. Mr. Chairman, when I heard that anecdote, I was satisfied. I felt that for once we had the right man in the right place-the biographer was worthy of the hero, and the hero of the biographer. Since then I have been privileged to examine the work itself, and I am bound to say, Sir, that the style is equal to the matter. Mr. Thibault, as I have said, is a man of no ordinary attainments. Mr. Thibault has great powers of analysis. I will give the House a sample. Speaking of the hon. gentleman, says Mr. Thibault :

"In truth, if the member for Cumberland is impetuous, if his language jets out clear, bitter, aggressive, with volubility almost unequalled-

How true !

"If his assertions are hazardous even to temerity -----"

How true !

"It is none the less true that he, a thousand times, defied his oppo-nents, and they accepted not the defiance."

Well, there I draw the line. I think there are two or three hardened individuals who have accepted the defiance in times gone by :

"He has the qualities of a tribune ; his voice is sonorous,

"His voice is heard around,

Loud as a trumpet with a siver sound." His language attractive, his style correct, his phrase powerful, his gesture expressive, his appearance proud."

His appearance proud ! Mr. Thibault is a philosopher, Sir. Mr. Thibault reflects, and I would like the hon. gentleman to listen to one of his reflections:

'The people govern the land! Happy illusion!! • • Yet how highly is responsible government appreciated! The people are the direct source of power! The people really believe that they govern! Oh happy illusion; imagination plays its part in it. ''The real truth is that but only a few men govern the land; the re-mainder follow in their footsteps! It requires but a short examination of our Parliamentary debates to find this out. Fortunately the electors scarcely ever assist at the debates."

Mr. Thibault understands the case evidently, then he compares our hon. friend with those who sit around him, and it may be interesting to them to hear the comparison:

"Although sometimes too sarcastic, the House always listens to Sir Charles Tupper with great respect and close attention • • Sir John A. Macdonald charms his adversaries; Sir Hector Langevin con-vinces them; Sir Leonard Tilley coaxes them; Mr. Blake inspires them; Mr. Chapleau astonishes them; Mr. Pope perplexes them; Mr. Laurier mesmerises them; Sir Charles Tupper nails them down-masters them; one would think he grasped some solid and heavy weapon with which he mercilessly strikes his opponents. He holds above them the glisten-ing sword of Damoeles. A Conservative Danton advancing in power-ful strides towards the goal with an ever increasing audacity, heighten-ed by constant successes."

Then there is an interesting narrative-I will not trouble the House with reading the whole of it-as to how the hon. gentleman penetrated into the recesses of Manitoba:

"Major Cameron, son-in-law of Dr. Tupper, a brave and a cool man, tried to scale the barriers. "Take away that fence," he cried out to the half breeds that awaited him. For answer, they seized the major's bridle and forced the major to retrace his steps ; these Métis are not to be laughed at in war time."

Then he goes on to show how the hon. gentleman penetrated to the depths of Manitoba, the very confines of the besieged country :

"Like the celebrated Chevalier Bayard, it may well be said of him that he is sans peur et sans reproche."

And so he he goes on. I really regret I had not this publication earlier in the Session, because I cannot detain the House with all of it at this late period. But I must give one more quotation:

"It is by his deeds that we know the good man. Sir Charles Tupper has done everything in his power to promote great public interests. He may have been mistaken on the means to use, but his object is always commendable."

I trust after that we shall vote unanimously this $18.75. I feel that Sir Charles Tupper, if I may be excused for naming him, would be incomplete without Mr. Thibault, and Mr. Thibault would be quite incomplete without such a hero. As Macaulay once said, slightly modified :

> Where'er a Tupper sits on high, A Thibault you shall see, And wheresoe'er such chiefs are found, Such clients still will be.

If the hon. gentlemen choose to employ Mr. Thibault as their inspired bard, and if he will only take as his theme the life of one or more of them, and do it only half as well, I am prepared to supplement the Government grant of $18.75 with an equal sum at my own expense out of my own pocket.

282. To pay Mr. Justice Gray $,75 (part of $300) and interest thereon at 5 per cent. per annum, from the 22nd October, 1874, to the 22nd February, 1884, being for services rendered as arbitrator in a case between the services of the se the Immigration Department and the British Columbia Government, in 1863, "Prince Alfred Quarantine Claims," which was charged to Quarantine Claims, which Accounts, 1874 75, Part 2, page 128, but was placed towards the removal expenses of Mr. Justice Gray, and not paid to him....

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES, 1885.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY presented a Mossage from His Excellency the Governor General.

Mr. SPEAKER read the Meesage as follows :--

LANSDOWNE.

The Governor General transmits to the House of Commons Supplementary Estimates of sums required for the Service of the Dominion, for the year ending 30th June, 1885, and in accordance with the provision of the British North America Act, 1867, he recommends these Estimates to the House of Commons.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE, OTTAWA, 8th April, 1884. mates be referred to the Committee of Supply.

SUPPLY-CONCURRENCE.

Resolutions reported from Committee of Supply read the second time.

On Resolution 6,

Sir RIOHARD CARTWRIGHT. I think the Minister of Militia was to give some information about one or two items in that vote.

Mr. CARON. 1 gave the information when the vote came up in Supply. I state that the Estimates provided for the statutory increase of $50 to selaries of those who are eligible for the increase under the Civil Service Act. In addition to that, it makes provision for four new appointments, one second class clerk, at $1,150, one third-class clerk, at $850, and one second-class clerk, the increase being for the new branch created to take charge of the military buildings and fortifications under direction of a military engineer, and a third class clerk at $800. In regard to the item of $1,150, the hon. gentleman seemed to consider that it should have been kept within the limit, under the Civil Service Act. I have explained that in that particular branch it was necessary to have a man possessing special qualifications. I hope I may not expend the whole amount, but, after considering it and the amount having been placed in the Estimates upon the recommendation of the Deputy Minister of Militia, I think it ought to be left as it is. If I can secure the services of a competent person to fill the position without paying the whole of that amount, it will not be spent.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 22,

Mr. BLAKE. The House will recollect that when this was discussed it was pointed out that it was intended, in view of the proposed acquisition of the residence, that the rent should be paid as before. It turned out, on the vote being brought down, that it was not for lease alone, but also to provide furniture, and therefore it is necessary that the vote should be reduced by an amount equivalent to the proposed charge. This vote, as I explained, was taken in order to provide for these expenditures, which are now provided in another way. I therefore move in amendment :

"That the said item be reduced by $3,350, being 4 per cent. on $29,500, the cost of the High Commissioner's residence, and 15 per cent. on $12,500, the cost of the fu niture for the High Commissioner's residence."

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I would suggest that that item stand. We will not take Concurrence on it now, but we will consider it.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 41,

Printing paper and book-binding $10,000.00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I will take this oppor-tunity of enquiring what decision has been come to on a matter which has been mentioned twice or thrice across the floor, with respect to making some provision for distribution of books to gentlemen who have been members of Parliament. It was understood that on Concurrence we would be informed what decision had been come to by the Department. The First Minister is not here, but I think he intimated on that The occasion that Government considered it favourably, and would advise the Committee to have a considerable number of these

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

Ordered, That the said Message and Supplementary Esti-I books placed in the hands of the slork for distribution. I should be glad to know if that recommendation will be given effect to.

> Sir LEONARD TILLEY. The matter has not been considered yet, though I believe the leader of the Government did suggest that it was desirable to do so.

> Mr. BLAKE. I think the Committee on Public Printing should deal with this. It is part of the distribution of public documents, and I hoped that, after the intimation of the leader of the Government, the Committee would take it into consideration.

> Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). I may say the Committee on Printing will meet on Thursday, and will then consider the matter.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 48,

Arts, Agriculture and Statistics...... $99,500 00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Will the Minister in charge give us some information in regard to the collection of health statistics. He stated in Committee that the Government had no scheme arranged, but that on Concurrence some information would be given.

Mr. McLELAN. I can only state that returns are to be gathered from all the principal cities of the Dominion and ut as many other points as we may be able to enlist the services of medical or other gentlemon qualified for the work, showing the condition of the health in the several localities. This vote is to provide for a small salary for each person making a return, as well as for printing, compilation of statistics, and other incidental expenses.

Sir RIOHARD CARTWRIGHT. Is any special person in connection with the Department to be in charge of this work?

Mr. McLELAN. All these different services are placed under the charge of one special officer in the Department, who is supposed to have some special quilifications for the work, and he is held responsible for that branch of the Department.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Are we to understand by health statistics, simply the causes of deaths in different parts of the country, or is it intended to enter into an examination of the prevalent types of disease, and their causes ?

Mr. McLELAN. The causes of death are given, and when any special type of discase is prevalent, returns are made of the causes, in any particular locality

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. There is no provision for what one may call the bygienic conditions of the country at large—only in case of epidemics.

Mr. McLELAN. It is proposed that statistics shall be gathered of the causes of death and the general condition of the district at the time.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I see this is not a revote. What was done with the $20,000 taken last year?

Mr. McLELAN. Of that amount, $10,000 is practically a revote, as only about $5,000 were spent.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 63,

Maintenance and care of military properties trans ferred from the Ordnance and Imperial Gov-...... $12,000.00 ernment.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The hon. gentleman was to have given us the total value of these properties, I think.

Mr. CARON. The total value, from the roturns whichhave been handed in to the Department, is $12,000,000.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT, How much of that amount is land, what is the selling value of the land, and how much is military works?

Mr. CARON. The return which the hon. gentleman now asks is a very lengthy one-too long for me to do more than refer to it. The value I now give the hon. gentleman is the value estimated between the Imperial officers who transferred the property, and Mr. Walkem, who was acting as the Head of that Branch of the Department of Militia. Mr. Walkem went very fully into the matter, and made a lengthened report. I think, however, it will be sufficient to tell the hon. gentleman that the estimated value arrived at between these gentlemen was $12,000,000.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. How is it divided? In other words, how much is the estimated value of the fortifications, and how much the value of the land?

Mr. CARON. Some ordnance land and military property was transferred in 1866, the estimated value of which was $5,000,000. In 1870, on the withdrawal of Her Majesty's forces, the fortifications and buildings were transferred at an estimated value of $7,000,000.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I took a great deal of trouble last Session to ascertain the value of these lands, and a return was brought down from the Department showing what their actual cash value was. My impression is, that between two and three million dollars' worth of land had been disposed of up to last year.

Mr. VAIL. When this item was before the Committee, I stated that there was no necessity for a caretaker to be appointed for the military property in Nova Scotia, and if my hon. friend will examine the return he has brought down, I think he will find that that is the case. There are no fortifications and no buildings to be taken care of, and there are only small tracts of land here and there, that do not require any rerson to look after them.

Mr. CARON. If a caretaker is not required, he will certainly not be appointed.

Mr. GAULT. What value has been placed on the buildings on St. Helen's Island?

Mr. CARON. That is a very valuable property. The buildings are in a very good state of preservation, and are used for keeping our military stores. I think the property was estimated at £150,000.

Mr. LANDERKIN. I cannot allow this item to pass without making another observation with reference to some volunteers who belonged to the Grey battalion, and who took sick while on their annual drill, and without asking whether any provision will be made out of the large vote for contingencies, for sickness or accidents arising from drill. I felt it my duty last year to bring the claims of these volunteers before the House. I stated that six or seven had taken sick shorly after returning from their annual drill, which was held in Owen Sound and in Toronto. The volunteers were taken down to Toronto from Owen Sound in a flat car. It was wet nearly all the way down, and no doubt this was one of the causes of their illness. I stated then, as I state now, that I believe it is the duty of the Department to pay those members of the force who fell sick on that occasion. It is well known to the members of this House that the volunteers receive a very small remuneration for the services they perform; and if those of them who run the risk of contracting disease, or of suffering serious injury, are to be neglected and passed over, that neglect will strike a I strongly urge these claims and I believe I have strong on the volunteer force, and I would like to know, in the interests of that force, what is being done with this money, and why it is that these worthy men who fell sick on that occasion are not to be requited for the loss of time and the serious illness they suffered, resulting from their service in the force. Last year I brought before the Department affidavits from one or two of these volunteers, and I have since been furnished with affilavits from the others. The hon. Minister of Militia then declined to pay the accounts, because the surgeon of the battalion made a statement to the effect that he soarcely thought they contracted the disease in the service. I told the hon. Minister then, as I tell him now, that the battalion surgeon never saw any of these volunteers when ill, and had no means whatever of forming a conclusion as to how they contracted the disease. ex-cept on consultation with the medical men who attended them. It was my duty to attend two of them, and I am fully convinced they contracted the disease in the service. Some others were attended by Dr. Jamieson, a very respectable medical practitioner in the town of Durham, and he also stated they contracted the disease in service. Although they remained sick for a long time, they have not received compensation at all, and I have affidavits from five or six of them, in which they stated that they contracted the disease in the service. I want to show the hon. Minister of Militia that the surgeon of the battalion, however respectable and eminent a gentleman he may be, and I admit he is a very deserving man, had no opportunity of arriving at a conclusion with respect to those cases, except on consultation with the gentlemen who attended them, and they both stated distinctly to me that the men contracted the disease in the service and were entitled to compensation. The affidavit of John Willey is to the effect :- that he performed his term of drill in Toronto and Owen Sound in 1878; that while there he contracted a serious and pain. ful illness, typhoid fever, from which he suffered a long period of time; that the surgeon of the battalion did not see him at any time during his illness; that he was unable to resume work for several months; and that he received no compensation whatever from the Militia Department for the loss of time and the pain suffered during this illness, contracted in his country's service. Similar affidavits were made by the others; and in reference to James Allen, I have a very melancholy task to perform, in laying his claim before the House. James Allen fell sick while on duty, suffered for a long time and has since died, and I have an affidavit from his father, which I will read here, and if the hon. Minister of Militia is actuated at all by the impulse of a generous soldier, he will listen to the affidavit made by the father of this volunteer, who fell sick and subsequently died, his death, no doubt, having been produced by an illness contracted in the sorvice of his country. The affidavit is as follows : -

"I solemnly declare that my son, Samuel Allen, was a member of No. 4 Durham Company of Infantry, in the year 1879, which, in that year, put in their term of drill in Owen Sound and in the city of Torouto; that immediately after his return from said drill he was taken ill of typhoid fever, from which he suffered a long and painful illness, which, I believe, was contracted at the said drill; that he was under medical care for one month; that he was for a long time unable to do his regu-lar work; that he was never, while he remained at home, a period of two and a-half years after said illness, in as good health as he had been before; that he went to Manitoba, where he since died; that the bat-talion surgeon, Dr. Charles Bamhardt, never saw him during his illness; that I paid all bills for medical attendance on my sou during said illness; and that I have not received any compensation from the Militia Department or from any other source, for the expense and trouble con-sequent on the illness of my said son. blow at the service of the volunteer force of this country. grounds for urging them. I think they are of sufficient im-Now, we are spending this year over a million and a quarter portance to be brought before this House, and 1 wish to 181 draw the attention of the House to the fact that similar claims were paid last year. I would hardly like to believe, in the interest of the force, that these claims were paid because they were brought by some hon. member who happened to be a supporter of the Government, and that these genuine claims which I urge are refused merely because I consider it my duty, in the interest of the country, to give only an independent support to the Government and the Department. From last year's Public Accounts, I see that the following claims were paid:—

"Sergeant-Major McMinphey, injury sustained while at target practice, $200: Trooper Townsend, injury to horse, $18; Napoleon Girard, injury to horse, $100; Troop Sergeant-Major McDairmid, illness contracted, $123; Gunner Wallace, injury sustained, $17; Sergeant Tracy, injury to horse, $100; Trooper-Sergeant, Oobourg Cavalry, $38.70; Baadsman Thompson, illness, $25; Corporal Landry, illness, $175; A Desjardins, illness, $60; W. T. Dolan, illness, $147.50; and a number of other cases."

I know that none of these cases was more deserving of compensation than those I have brought to the notice of the hon. Minister. It is thought by every person in that section of the country from which these men come, that they should be paid. The gentleman who occupied a seat in this House as a representative of South Grey before I had the honour of being elected to represent that constituency, Mr. Jackson, also urged that those claims be paid, and the captain of the company also maintained that they had a right to compensation. I repeat that it is not in the interest of the volunteer force that these men, who only received the small pittance of 50 cents per day, should not be paid for the time they lost and the suffering they endured on account of this illiness contracted by them in the service of their country. I feel it to be my duty to bring their case before this House on this occasion. They were all young men, just starting out in life. One of them came and lived with his brother and his companion came and lived with him also, and both had to be kept without compensation from the Government, and when we are asked to vote a $1,250,000 to the militia service of the country, I think that if these honest, straightforward accounts are to be left unrequited, the country may well ask where is the money expended. When honest debts are neglected, when incidents arising out of the drill are unrequited, and when soldiers who fall sick are told they may fall sick, it is not likely that a loyal spirit will be i fused among the privates of the force when they are thus treated by the Militia Department.

Mr. CARON. I think the hon. gentleman will do me the justice of saying that, when he spoke to me and brought this claim before me, I was very anxious indeed to take it up, to look into it, and, if possible, to do what the hon. gentleman asked me to do; but the hon. gentleman must remember that these claims had already been submitted to my hon. predecessor who, when he was occupying the position which I now occupy, had the same claims submitted to him. Unfortunately, doctors differ. My hon. friend who has just spoken says that the disease which afflicted these unfortunate volunteers had been contracted in camp. As far as the Department is concerned, we had nothing to go by but the opinion expressed by the surgeon of the battalion. He was consulted about it, his report was sent to the Department of Militia, and in that report he stated that the disease had not been contracted in camp.

Mr. LANDERKIN. I have shown the affidavits of all these volunteers, who state that the Surgeon never saw them during their illness.

Mr. CARON. The report came before the Minister, and after looking into it and taking all the information it was possible for us to get, it was decided that this claim could not be paid. The hon. gentleman has referred to the Public Accounts to show that several injuries, some to men and some to horses, had been paid for by the Department of Mili is. Under our regulations, these injuries are paid for, provided it is established that they have been incurred when the men were on duty, and I believe, if the hon. gentleman looks into these cases, he will find they are quite dissimilar in every respect to the one refused by the Department. I would have been very glad indeed if it had been possible for me to have this claim settled, but from the information conveyed to us by the surgeon of the battalion, it became impossible for me to follow any other course.

Mr. LANDERKIN. The hon. gentleman is bound to follow the guidance of the surgeons of the battalion, although he never saw one of them, and although the medical men and every one else who saw them report that they did contract the disease in camp. I am speaking subject to correction; but I believe the surgeon of the battalion did not state definitely in his report that they did not contract disease in camp. He said that he scarcely thought they did, but he had no way of coming to a conclusion, except in consultation with those who attended them; and Dr. Jamieson, who attended three or four of them, states definitely that they did contract it in camp. The Minister of Militia says he is anxions to pay these men; yet he repudiates the evidence of those who saw and attended them, and accepts the evidence of one who never saw one of them. That is the anxiety of the Minister of Militia. He will accept the testimony of the surgeon of the battalion, who did not investigate the matter for nearly a year afterwards, as against my own testimony and the testimony of Dr. Jamieson, and the testimony of the captain of the company, and he says he is anxious to pay them. Does this look like anxiety? He has an affidavit from all the volunteers that the surgeon was never near them when they were ill; and yet he is anxious to pay them. I state that I attended two of them, and I believe my word is worthy of credence anywhere I am known. And I know that they contracted the disease there. I believe it is the rule in the Department not to pay claims. I believe the hon. gentleman has not paid the claim of the surgeon for making the investigation, and certainly he is entitled to pay. If the Minister of Militia is going to neglect all these claims, if he is bound not to pay them, we should know it. He says he is anxious to pay them, and yet the information on which he declines to pay them is that of a gentleman who never saw them at all, and the claims I have brought before him are on the authority of those who did see them.

On Resolution 111,

Harbours and Rivers, Nova Scotia $21,850 00

Mr. VAIL. The hon. Minister of Public Works promised to give me some information, with reference to the amount of $2,000 in the Estimates of 1882, for building a pier at Westport, Nova Scotia. Last year I asked the Minister what he proposed to do, and he replied that he intended to extend the time by an Order in Council for three months after the 1st of July, and expend the money before that three months had expired. I see no reference to it in the Estimates this year, nor in the Public Accounts.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Papers were received about this pier and the engineer made a report on it. The report enclosed the offer of a site by Mr. Titus, and recommended that the offer be accepted in case it were decided to build the pier. The engineer reported that \$10,000would be required for a pier of 200 feet, that would give $5\frac{1}{2}$ feet at low water; \$11,000 for 9 feet at low water, and \$14,500 for 12 feet at low water. As we only had \$2,000, we could not proceed with the work.

Mr. VAIL. Does the hon. Minister propose to give anything this year?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Not this year.

Mr. VAIL. When ?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. We will see about that in the future.

Mr. VAIL. I think the hon. gentleman should have got this information before the grant was made. It was made the Session before the election, and the people were told that they might depend upon the pier being commenced within the year. I referred to this matter particularly last Session, and after speaking to the Minister of Public Works about it, I put a question to him across the floor, when he replied that this $2,000 for a pier would be expended within the financial year. I thought that would be sufficient. I hope the hon. gentleman will reconsider the matter, because the work is one of great importance to the people at that place, and they would be greatly disappointed if they found no pier was to be erected there. At present the people can only reach the steamer by boats.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. It appears that after this $2,000 had been voted, and when we came to call for tenders, it was found by the report of the engineer who had been sent down to examine the place, that the sum was far too small to justify us in commencing the work. However, I may have said what the hon. gentleman has stated: it is quite possible; but after looking into the matter, I found that it would not be prudent to go on. The sum was not one-quarter of what was required to build the smallest pier.

On Resolution 112,

Harbours and Rivers, Prince Edward Island...... $1,250 00

Mr. DAVIES, The hon. Minister of Public Works promised to inform me whether he intended to take any steps with reference to the Victoria breakwater, for which $2,000 was voted last year. I told him then that it was no use spending that money at all, unless he made up his mind to prolong the breakwater, so as to make a natural harbour; that he might just as well pitch the money into the sea, as to leave the harbour standing as it is now.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 154,

Mr. VAIL. I find in a statement which has been put in the hands of hon. members, that there is provision made for the construction of a lighthouse at Shafter's Point. Will the hon. Minister inform us where Shafter's Point is, and at whose instance the application for this grant is made?

Mr. McLELAN. It has been urged very strongly that a lighthcuse is necessary for vessels passing up and down the river and basin. If it is found that the statements made in the application are not sustained on enquiry by the officer in charge, the money will not be expended.

Mr. VAIL. By whom is the application made?

Mr. McLELAN. By some in the locality, and others in Halifax.

Mr. VAIL. I know all about this place, and I know that there is no necessity for a lighthouse at this point. I fre-quently go up and down the basin by steamer, and I am quite sure that the time has never come yet that a light would be of the least service. I do not object to any grant in Annapolis county or anywhere else, in the interests of navigation, but I hope before the expenditure is made the Minister will make full enquiry into the necessity for such a work. I am quite sure that people who know anything from the Registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada a copy about the locality will tell him there is no necessity for it at all.

Mr. McLELAN. I may tell the hon, gentleman that careful enquiry is always made in such cases, and no lighthouse is erected unless it is found to be necessary in the interest of commerce.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to; and (at 11:55 o'clock, p.m.) the House adjourned.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS.

BILL INTRODUCED.

The following Bill was introduced and read the first time: Bill (No.142) further to amend the present Tariff of Duties of Customs.-(Sir Leonard Tilley.)

THE LIBRARY OF PARLIAMENT.

Mr. SCRIVER presented the Third Report of the Joint Committee on the Library of Parliament.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I would like to ask the hon. Finance Minister if the Auditor General audits the accounts of the Joint Committee on the Library.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I was under the impression he did until I read the report.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not think he does, because we find a year or two ago there was an over-expenditure. It would be a great improvement if those accounts were subjected to audit.

Mr. MACKENZIE. An order of the House will suffice to have the Auditor-General attend to it. If we were to pass a motion instructing him to audit the accounts, that would suffice.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I think there has been no such action taken. With reference to the auditing of the accounts of even the House of Commons, the accounts go there, but I think there is no legislation.

Mr. SPEAKER. The accounts go to the Auditor-General in consequence of a resolution adopted by the Public Accounts Committee three or four years ago.

Mr. MACKENZIE. More than that.

Mr. SPEAKER. Three or four years ago.

Mr. BLAKE. Perhaps the Chairman of the Committee on Public Accounts will take a note of it. It is said that the report which suggested the audit of the House accounts is wide enough to include the other, so it would be only necessary to call the Auditor's attention to it.

BERTHIER CONTROVERTED ELECTION.

Mr. SPEAKER informed the House that he had received of the certificate of judgment of the said Court in the matter of the Election Petition relating to the Electoral District of Berthier, in the Province of Quebec, by which the sitting member is declared duly elected and returned.

CUSTOMS EXAMINATION OF BAGGAGE AT ST. VINCENT.

Mr. HESSON enquired, Whether the Government have seen an article in the Winnipeg Sun to the following effect: "Trouble is likely to arise over the inauguration of a new system of having goods manifested at St. Vincent by the Canadian Customs authorities rendering it necessary to carry manifests with the way bills-that an immigrant who arrived with the first load of immigrants this season informed a reporter that a Customs broker named Chapman who lives in St. Vincent charged each member of the party who had beggage fifty cents a piece for passing it. Owing to some hitch the manifests were not signed and the immigrants had to pay another fifty cents to get their goods passed. Enquiry was made at the Canadian Pacific Railway offices about the matter, and the facts were in the main corroborated." And is there anything in such statements?

Mr. McLELAN. The Customs Department has no advice on the subject, and is not aware of any new arrangement respecting manifests. The same rules apply to Manitoba that apply to all other parts of Canada. Personal baggage is not manifested excepting in case a train does not stop long enough to complete the examination, or on the request of the owners that it may be examined at destination. There is no information in the Department of Agri culture from any immigrant of complaint of the nature indicated in the question.

EXAMINATION FOR MASTERS' CERTIFICATES.

Mr. BLAKE enquired, Whether the Board of Examiners have been instructed to grant James Chesnut a certificate as master? Whether such certificate has been granted? Whether James Chesnut had been refused a certificate of fitness, and also an examination on the ground that he was not under the Act entitled to either? Under what circum-stances has the special action been taken in his case? Whether any other persons have been allowed to go up for examination though not within the Act? If so, who? And under what circumstances?

Mr. McLELAN. The answer to the first question is no, they have not; to the second question, 10; 10 the third question, no. He was refured a master's certificate but not on the ground mentioned in the question. The ground of refusal was that he did not show he was a master previous to 1883, and that point is still under consideration, and enquiry is being made as to when he served. The Act debars no one from going up for examination. There have been cases in which persons have been up and have not passed, but it would require a return to bring all these cases down. If the hon. gentleman moves for a return of them, it will be brought down.

INSPECTION OF BANK RETURNS.

Mr. MASSUE enquired, Whether the Government have matured the plan they had under consideration for the appointment of inspectors to supervise the returns of banks in the Dominion, and if so, whether it is their intention to bring down a measure to that effect during the present Session ?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I am not aware that the Government have had any distinct plan under consideration on this subject. It engaged the attention of the Govern-Mr. SPEAKER.

ment some time ago when we had the Banking Act before us, but since then the subject has not been brought under our consideration or received our attention. It is not the intention to arrange for the inspection during this Session.

Motion agreed to.

PUBLIC WORKS OF CANADA.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN moved the second reading of Bill (No. 134) further to amend the Act 31st Victoria, chapter ?2, intituled : An Act respecting the Public Works of Canada. He said : The Bill is to repeal the 13th section of the Act passed in 1867 respecting public works and to substitute the following in lieu thereof:

All lands, streams, watercourses and property acquired for the use of public works or buildings shall be vested in Her Majesty, and when not required for the said works or buildings may be sold or disposed of under the authority of the Governor in Council, and all bydraule powers created by the construction of any public work, or the expenditure of public money thereon, shall be vested in Her Majesty, and any portion thereof not required for the public works may be sold or leased under the authority atoressid, and any portion of the shore or bed of any public harbour vested in Her Majesty, as represented by the Govern-ment of Canada, not required for public purposes may, on the joint recommendation of the Munisters of Public Works and of Marine and Fisheries, be sold or leased under the authority aforesaid; and the pro-cee as of all such sales and leases shall be accounted for as public money money.

It has been found that properties of that character could not be sold unless we had the special authority of Parliament.

Mr. BLAKE. As I understand it this is an enlargement of the existing clause 13. I have not read clause 13 but I am told it does not contain those words with reference to the shore or bed of any public harbour, and the practical effect of this Bill is to introduce a new power respecting shores and public harbours for purposes within the purview of the thirteenth section, and provides for their sale on the recommendation of two Ministers instead of under the authority of the Governor in Council. The addition of "any portion of the shore or bed of any public harbour" is accompanied with the provision that they may be sold on the joint recommendation of the Minister of Public Works and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. So it is introducing a new power to enable them to dispose of the shores or bed of public harbours. It is due, I suppose, to the decision of the Supreme Court which is supposed to the territorial acquisitions of the Federal neut, which I think was a surprise to enlarge Government, many, and I think the First Minister himself stated when the subject was brought up last Session, that it was a surprise to himself. The question cannot be taken to have been conclusively adjudged as yet because the court of last resort has not been called upon to decide it. However it does not, as I understand it, except indirectly, provide to vest in the Dominion Government these shores or beds which are spoken of, but speaks simply of those which may be vested in the Government of Canada. I do not myself appreheud that under the British North America Act public harbours, using those words in the general sense, are other-wise than vested in the Provincial Governments. I think that is a sound construction of the law; but supposing it were otherwise, we have a tolerably large question before We have the question of the mode in which these imus. portant properties ought to be disposed of, and I think there are two general considerations to which the House should address itself: the first is, what shall be the relation of the shore or bed of the harbour with the preemptive rights, so to speak, of the riparian proprietor of the ground in front of each shore or bed. Heretofore, at any rate, in the Province of Upper Canada, and I fancy elsewhere, the general mode of dealing has been to recognize a proemptive right in the riparian proprietor to purchase. Is that to be departed from? If not, it ought to be recognized. Secondly, we have the question, in what mode the sale is to take piace—is it to be by public competition, or by auction, or by private sale? If the right of preemption of the riparian proprietor is not to be guarded, there seems to be no reason at all why the ordinary principle of disposing of such valuable properties ought not to take effect, and why in all cases there should not be a tender or an option. I have not had time to consider the matter, and I do not know whether a Bill which provides for the disposal of a large portion of the public domain is in order in coming before the House in this way, and whether it ought not to be initiated by Committee of the Whole. I have just now seen the Bill, and, apart from the question of order, 1 would direct the hon. gentleman's attention to those two propositions.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The practice has been ever since I have been in Parliament to initiate such legis-

Mr. BLAKE. I will not raise the question just now, because I will have an opportunity later.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I think, under the circumstances, as Mr. Speaker is not in a position to decide on the question of order, that I had better withdraw my motion and leave the second reading for to-morrow. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to withdraw that motion.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman has leave to withdraw the motion and allow it to stand.

Motion for second reading withdrawn.

INDEPENDENCE OF PARLIAMENT BILL.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved that the amendments made in Committee of the Whole to Bill (No. 111) respecting the Independence of Parliament Act, 1878, 41 Victoria, chapter 5, be considered.

Motion agreed to.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved the third reading of the Bill.

Mr. BLAKE. Mr. Speaker, I do not propose, at this stage of the Session, to enter into a lengthy discussion on this Bill. I think the first clause of it shows, in a vory marked and significant manner, the great inexpediency there is of pursuing the course of altering the general law with a view to meet a particular case. The general law of the Independence of Parliament, which this clause proposes to alter, is one which prevents from sitting here those who hold a very large class of offices. All those office-holders who have been heretofore excluded from this House are by virtue of the alteration which is proposed in the first clause to be rendered eligible for this House and capable of sitting or voting here, provided that the patent or other instrument appointing him shall be so drawn as to show that the office is to be held without salary, allowance or emolument. We have not heretofore had occasion to deal with the question of the incompatibility of certain officeholders retaining their position and holding the position of member of Parliament irrespective of the question of emolument, because this long range of office-holders was excluded under the Independence of Parliament Act as they held offices of emolument. But the course which the hon, gentleman proposes to take, obviously and emphatically to meet one single case, and one single class of office, and that a political or quasi or political office, is to open the door wide, to open it altogether, and to and to permit persons who certainly are not considered to be capable of sitting here to sit here, provided their patents are in a particular shape. Your predecessor, Mr. Speaker, vacated his seat in Parliament by the acceptance of the office of Collector of Customs at the Port of Quebec. Had this Act then been the law, it would have been quite competent for the Government, within the spirit of this legislation, to have issued a patent to Mr. Blanchet as Collector of Customs without a salary during the last Session of the tenure of his scat here, and he might have remained sitting and voting in Parliament upon a tacit understanding that at the end of the Session, or such time as would be convenient to the Administration, he should disappear, a new patent issue, and become a salaried officer. And so with anyone of hundred, aye of thousands of offices in the gift of the Crown. A large power is being given by this clause to the Administration of the day to appoint members to offices, they not receiving emolument while they are members, but upon a plain and palpable understanding that at an early and convenient season, consistent with the convenience of the Government and the members, they would vacate their sexts and enter into, not merely the discharge of their duties, but also the receipt of the emotuments of the office. I view with great regret, then, the introduction of this as follows:--- clause, and I would have infinitely preferred-of two evils preferring the least-a special Bill directed to this particular office which has given rise to this question, and providing that so long as the occupant of this particular office filled it without salary or emolument of any kind, so long he would be eligible for a seat in Parliament. Thus could we have left the whole law touching the Independence of Parliament upon the sound footing, as I conceive, on which it now stands, altering that law only so far as the Ministerial exigencies required. But the hon. First Minister has preferred the more objectionable mode of dealing with the case. He has proposed to the House to alter, and we are about to alter, the whole law and destroy the Independence of Parliament simply in order to provide for a particular case. Turning to the other clauses, I recall the attention of the House to the fact that this Bill departs in an important particular from the arrangements which were made in 1877, when several members on both sides of the House were found to have unwittingly violated the existing Independence of Parliament Act. The law that was then brought forward and passed, against the remonstrances of the hon. gentleman now proposing this law, against the very vehement and urgent remonstrances of the First Minister, the Minister of Railways, and other members, not merely by vote, but by speech, was a law that provided that the members who had violated the Independence of Parliamont Act should be protected against liability to penalties for that Session. However trifling might have been the emolument obtained, even when it was of no pecuniary profit,-as it was in some cases-whether it was a transaction of trifling moment to the party in question or not, the law took no account of those things. So a disqualification which had been obtained by the voluntary act of the party, although acting under a misconception of the law, remained in force. There was no attempt to validate the seat of the party; the Act was only to save him from penalties during the current Session, and if at the end of the Session he did not choose to go back to his constituency, he remained exposed to the penalties of the law in all future Sessions, although the relation which had created the difficulty might be of a casual and tenporary description and have long ago terminated. Now what is proposed is, in contradistinction to that course, not merely to guard against the penalties for the present Session, but to guard against the possibility of recovering the penalties for all future Sessions, although the relation creating the disqualification shall be subsisting. It seems to me that in that respect the Bill is not covered by the clearest precedent we can find-that of 1877, and that, as I have said, was strenuously opposed by the hon. gentleman as going quite too far. I know not how to deal with the first clause, unless I should propose affirmatively, what I am not disposed to propose affirmatively-an amendment, agreeing to the proposition that this particular office should be held, under the circumstances under which it is now held, as not creating a disqualification for a seat in Parliament. My opinion is that the offices are incompatible on other grounds than those pertaining to the simple pecuniary relation, and that the state of things which is provided for in the first clause, under which the member is qualified only in case he does not receive any salary, fee, allowance, wages, emolument or profit of any kind, is not a case which applies to the case in hand, in which, though no salary be received, there are allowances and emoluments of other descriptions attached to the office. But, Sir, putting this case to one side, I see no ground why, in this case, we should depart from that portion of the precedent of 1377 to which I have referred, and I move in amendment thereto, that the said Bill be recom-mittel to a Committee of the Whole, with power to amend the same, by inserting clauses in the same words as those contained in the Indemnity Act of 1877 as clauses 3 and 4,

Mr. SPEAKER.

3. Nothing in this Act contained shall be held in anywise to in-demnify, exonerate, free or discharge the said Sir Charles Tupper from any pecuniary penalty or forfeiture, 'f any, to which he may render himself liable by sitting or voting in the House of Commons at any time after the end of the present Session of Parliament. 4. Nothing in this Act contained shall be held to affect any subsist-ing disqualification or incapacity te sit or vote in the House of C m-mons, or to validate any void election thereto, or to affect the vaca-tion of any seat therein, or in anywise to interfere with the operation of section 5 of the said Act, as to the said Sir Charles Tupper.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It is quite true this Bill was introduced on account of a question of doubt having been raised in the case of Sir Charles Tupper, but the alteration of the Independence of Parliament Act in the first clause, the amendment of it, does not affect Sir Charles Tupper; because the Committee on Privileges and Elections have already reported that Sir Charles Tupper did not vacate his seat, that he is still the sitting member for the county of Cumberland, and it he is still so during this Session, he must be, unless he forfeits it by some other Act, the sitting member for the whole of the present Parliament. The House having concurred in and affirmed the resolution and report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, that Sir Charles Tupper did not vacate his seat, that is boyond a doubt. He has got his seat. The House of Commons is the only authority or tribunal which can sattle that question. They have so settled it, that the acceptance and the holding of that office, and Sir Charles Tupper having received no salary, he did not vacate his seat. So that in so far as the sitting here is concerned he has this Session, and every Session of the present Parliament, a full right to sit and vote. In consequence of an action having been brought against him for penalties, and Parliament having decided that he had a right to sit, it follows as a logical consequence that the House of Commons shall sustain that decision, respecting the penalties of a legal tribunal. That is a neces-sary and logical consequence. The House of Commons says he has a right to sit and vote, and no mattor what may be the legal construction of the Act he would be indemnified. It was on that principal that the Act of 1877 affected Mr. Perry's case, and Mr. Macdonald's case was passed. The hon. gentleman moves an amendment that the indemnifi-cation shall only last this Session. Suppose Sir Charles Tupper comes back he is then, by the declaration of this House, the sitting member, but he might have another writ served on him, and that would only create the necessity of our passing the Bill sessionally.

Mr. BLAKE. Hear, hear.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Certainly; there is no doubt about that. As regards the propriety of the Bill, that was so fully discussed in the previous stages that I do not think I need weary the House by discussing it again. I cannot agree to the amendment, and I believe the House will not accept it.

Mr. MILLS. The hon. gentleman has expressed views in connection with the Bill now before the House very different from those to which he gave expression in 1877. The hon. gentleman has said it is necessary to provide that this indemnity should extend indefinitely through this Parliament, in order that Sir Charles Tupper may not have brought against him next Session a writ similar to that with which he is threatened on this occasion. If the first observations made by the hon. gentleman had been well founded in law, there would be no necessity for such a provision. The hon. gettleman knows right well that the view expressed in the Committee on Privileges and E ections is not necessarily the view that will be taken by the Courts. On the contrary, the opinion, I think, of a High Court of Justice in England upon Mr. Bradlaugh's case, very large majority of the members of this House-both of in which the court held that there was only one way in which those who support and those who oppose the Bill-is that a court could be seized of a question of this sort, and that was, the Courts would differ from the views expressed by a ma-l in a case in which penalties were attached to any person jority of that Committee and the view expressed by the hon. gentleman. Now, Sir, what objection does the hon. gentleman make to the adoption of this amendment, proposed by my hon frierd? Is it that it is not sound? Is it that the majority of this House ought to protect his colleague from the consequences of a violation of the law? That is practically the position taken by the hon. gentleman. Now, Sir, in my opinion, the Independence of Parlisment Act is a necessary Act. The majority of Parliament, ever since Confederation, have entertained that view; and if the hon. gentleman thinks that the appointment of a Minister of the Crown, or any other member of this House, to an office is in the public interest -an office which by the law he is not qualified to acceptthat may be a good reason for repealing the law altogether. But the hon. gentleman, while he in a great measure continues the Independence of Parliament Act, also undertakes to invalidate it, so far as one of his own colleagues is concerned. Now, I observe that by the first section of this Act the hon. gentleman declares that a party accepting an office, who is a member of the House of Commons, shall not be disqualified from sitting or voting therein, if by his commission or other instrument of appointment, it is declared or provided that he shall hold such office, commission or employment without any salary, focs, wages, allowances, &c. Now, Sir, this is a provision of a Bill to overthrow the policy of Parliament.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No.

Mr. MILLS. Parliament says that a certain salary shall attach to an office, and also provides that a person accepting such an office shall be disqualified from sitting or voting, and the hon. gent'eman undertakes to provide by this Bill that if a person accepts such an office without salary, and it is so stated in his commission, then he shall not vacate his scat; that is, he shall not do what Parliament declares he shall do in case he accepts such an office. I call the attention of the House to two English precedents on this point-that of Sir Henry Petty, and that of Mr. Addington, in which it was held that the agreement to accept an office before any acceptance had actually taken place disqualified the person to agreeing to accept from taking his place in the House. Now, if that is the law-and 1 believe it is the law-and the pro-vision which the hon. gentleman has introduced into this Bill, shows that he is precisely of the same opinion - then it is perfectly obvious that he has undertaken by this Bill to completely change the law of Parliament in this particular, in order that he may enable a colleague who has vacated his seat, and who is disqualified from sitting here, to continue to sit here. Why does the hon. gentleman wish that these penalties shall not apply to the hon. gentleman next Session? It is because he believes that the opinion of the majority of the Committee could not be upheld before any legal tribunal in this country. I am satisfied that he is right in that impression. But the hon. gentleman declares that Sir Charles Tupper is a member of this House-the Committee has said so, and that has concluded the matter. Now, I say it has not concluded the matter. In the opinion of a majority of the members of this House, Sir Charles Tupper has no right to sit here, and the Government propose by this Bill to take away the right to have that determined, not only for this Session, but for the remainder of this Parliament. I say that this Bill, in effect, clects Sir Charles Tupper a member of this House, and takes away from anyone of his constituents, or any elector in the country the right to ascertain whether he is lawfully sitting in this House or not. The hon. gentleman referred the Committee to a judgment of the sitting or voting illogally in Parliament, a party might raise the question of the right of the person to sit or vote, by prosecution. That is no doubt the case; and the hon. gentleman in taking away the penalties for sitting and voting in this case is taking away from the electors of Cumberland and the electors throughout the country the right to ascertain whether Sir Charles Tupper has a right to sit in this House or not. It is in fact an attempt on the part of the majority, by changing the law, to put Sir Charles Tupper in the House and keep him there in defiance of the law existing at the time he was appointed to this particular office.

Mr. KAULBACH. Mr. Speaker, when this House convened some weeks ago it was promised by some and predicted by others that our friends on the opposite side were not intending to allow the usual routine or legitimate work of the Session to pass without giving us by way of variety a lively and stormy time, and if we can judge from what has already taken place in the endeavour to unseat the hon. member for Cumberland and what is taking place now I would judge that they were determined to see those promises fully realized. I would say that it does not reflect credit upon hon. members opposite that they should make the base of this attack an onslaught on the Minister of Railways, who is respected, loved, and trusted by his supporters both in and out of this House, and honoured by an ation he has done so much to build up and consolidate, and for no other reason than simply because he in conse-quence of his ill-health in Canada from overwork as Minister of Railways thought proper for a change of scene and air and to improve his health, to assume the duties of High Commissioner without salary. I repeat it without salary-cross the Atlantic and visit England. He being one to well qualified by powers of eloquence and strongth of will to a strong to strength of will, to wield the destinies of this Dominion was the very person best fitted for so important a position so that instead of assailing him in the manner in which i is being attempted, he should receive all the honours, culog and compliments that could possibly be extended and that by every person who is at all interested in the welfare of Canada irrespective of party feeling or party bias. More pa ticularly when it is considered that by his having accepte said office of High Commissioner without salary, he wa saving to Canada, in round numbers, $6,000 per annum Despite the utterances of hon. members opposite, it is a undeniable fact that he is held in the highest esteem in the Province to which he belongs, and throughout this Do minion, and is looked upon as the war horse of this nobl party-the party of purity, the Liberal Conservatives-h having successfully marshalled his way through every politi cal fight, standing shoulder to shoulder with his friends, no driven out of his constituncey or forced to beat a retreat as was the case with some hon. gentlemen opposite, and compelled to go seeking, but, on the contrary, through his geniality of manner, unswerving rectitude, and persistency of purpose, and indomitable courage to fight the battles o his country in advocacy of its rights, he has so endeared himself to the people of Canada, that he has represented the county of Cumberland uninterruptedly for twenty-nine year often returned by acclamation, and whenever his opponent have thought proper to array their forces against him the have taken ignominious defeat for their pains. The point at issue in this case have been so clearly and ably discussed that I am satisfied that all should feel that the hon. membe for Cumberland has not violated the law, neither in th spirit nor yet in the letter. The question appear to be a very simple one, and may be embraced in a few words, namely, when the hon. member f r Cumberland accepted the office of High Commis sioner without salary, did he infringe the Independence of Parliament Act? Todd and other authorities on the British Constitution hold that when salary is not accepted the seat is not vacated, and when salary is renounced such renunciation removes the pecalties. This appears most reasonable, and should be accepted by the sceptic and others willing to be advised on the question. Mr. Speaker, I believe there are very few members in this House who would desire to see the hon. member for Cumberland unseated, but I would say that if he this day were to retire from the arena of political warfare, his works as the result lasts he will continue to speak in the pages of the Hansard and in the annals of history as one of Canada's greatest and noblest sons. In fact, his record of good works since his commencement of public life, twenty-nine years ago, down to the present, is dotted year by year on the pages of the Hansard like milostones by the wayside marking the tra-veller's progress, and so completely does it commend itself to the people of Canada that it will be a plea-surable subject of conversation for many a Canadian fireside, and his name a household word in many a family for many long years to come-and I would say, Mr. Speaker, that if his strength will permit him to labour as zealously and as successfully in the future as he has done in the past for the advancement of his country, I believe many of his friends opposite will change their tactics, offer their commendations, or show a disposition to come over and join this happy family-(some possess it now, but lack the courage to desert their leader)-and testify in a more tangible manner than they have done recently, or are attempting to do now, to his greatness as a Canadian statesman, and one of her most honoured and respected

Mr. FISHER. I beg to move in amendment:

That the Bill be not now read the third time, but that it be referred back to the Committee of the Whole House, with instructions that they have power to amend it by striking out the first section thereof.

In explaining this motion, I will occupy the attention of the House but a very few minutes. This amendment is rendered necessary by the two chief parts into which this Bill is divided. In the first, there is a radical and important change in the law of the land; and in the second, the subject dealt with is entirely and wholly of a personal character, and, without wishing in anyway to belittle the importance of the hon. gentleman whose seat has been in question, I think this portion of the Bill is of far less importance than the first. In making such a change as this Bill contemplates, a change which may in the future materially affect the position of members of this House, the Government are taking upon themselves a very great responsibility; they are making a change in the law of the land which, I think, will have very dangerous consequences. There is no doubt that the discussions which have taken place on this Bill, the personal question has been brought prominently forward, and it is greatly to be regretted that hon. gentlemen, in discussing this question, should have allowed themselves to be actuated by personal or party feeling, thus losing sight of the far more important section, the first section of the Bill. It is to this section I wish to draw the attention of the House. There will be nothing in the law, should this Bill be passed, to prevent the most important positions in this country being held by members of this House; it is quite possible that Lieutenant-Governors of Provinces may sit here and vote and support the Government from which they received their appointments; it is quite possible that Judges of the land may sit here and vote and make the laws they themselves are afterwards to administer. In fact, the principle might be carried to such, an extent that the number of members of this House holding positions from the Government might be come so great that a Government could be kept in existence by the votes of their own creatures. In view of these possibilities, I doem it my duty to propose this amendment, so that the hou. gentleman who, in their votes already given on this Bill in its various stages, may have been largely influenced by personal fealty to the hon. Minister of Railways or by party considerations, may now record their votes free from any such considerations. The personal part of the Bill, the part which relates wholly to the seat of Cumberland which the hon. Minister of Railways and High Commissioner now occupies being eliminated from their consideration, hon. gentlemen must now vote upon the principle of the Bill as regards its general application. In doing this, I do not wish in any sense to belittle the importance of the personal consideration, or desire to be supposed to condone what I believe to be the great wrong which has been perpetrated by the Government in their course on this question; but still I consider the personal question very far inferior in its ultimate effects to the question of the Radical change in the law of the land. It is for this reason that I have moved this amendment.

Amendment negatived on the same division.

Main motion agreed to; and Bill read the third time, on the same division reversed, and passed.

SUPPLY-CONCURRENCE.

Resolutions reported from Committee of Supply read the second time.

On Resolution 196,

Intercolonial Railway (collection of revenues).....$2,500,000 00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The Minister of Railways was to have brought down cortain statements as to the tariff on the Intercolonial Railway.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER I think the question asked was as to the lowest rates of freight on the Intercolonial Railway. The lowest rate on coal going to points west of the Intercolonial Railway was $\frac{1}{10}$ of a cent per ton per mile. The lowest rate on experimental cargoes of grain carried from Chaudière Junction to Halifax for shipment has been about $\frac{1}{10}$ of a cent per ton per mile.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. That does not correspond with the Minister's statement that they had been paid at the rate of 6 cents per hundred pounds.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I took the statement of the hon. member for Halifax—I was not aware myself of the rate—as the amount he had been obliged to pay for cargoes he had carried over the line.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Is the Minister sure that no cargoes have been carried at the rate given by the member for Halifax ?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This is furnished to me by the General Manager, Mr. Schreiber, as the lowest rate on experimental cargoes, so there has been no lower rate given than this, according to his statement. I may take this opportunity of mentioning that the hon member for Queen's County, Prince Edward Island, was under the impression that a circular had been issued preventing employés from complaining of the rate of wages. I made enquiry, and I can confirm the statement I made to the Committee that no such circular has been issued either on the Prince Edward Island or on the Intercolonial Railway.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 70,

Canadian Pacific Railway-Stationac commodation ... $200,000 00

Mr. CHARLTON. The Minister was kind enough to hand me a memorandum with respect to the station house on the British Columbia section. There is a vote of $200,000 for station houses. I see that one of the items of that vote is $90,000 for engine-houses. I wish to enquire of the Minister whether that is for the erection of a round-house for the engines at the terminus, capable of accommodating all the engines of the British Columbia Division? It appears to me an unduly large sum for the section from Port Moody to Kamloops.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I presume that is so.

Mr. CHARLTON. There is an item of $55,000 for section men's houses, which seems to me to be disproportionate to the amount of $20,000 for station houses.

Sir GHARLES TUPPER. There are a large number of section-men on that division in comparison with the number of station houses.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I desire to ask the Minister of Railways whether a decision has been come to by the arbitrators on section "B" of the Pacific Railway, and if so whether the figures of that decision will be laid before the House before we are asked to discuss any further items in reference to that railway. Sir CHARLES TUPPER. An award has been made by two of the arbitrators, Mr. Brydges and Mr. Light, the arbitrator named by the contractors and the arbitrator named by Chief Justice Ritchie of the Supreme Court. It has not been signed by Judge Clark, the arbitrator named by the Government, and the award is, I believe, correctly stated as at $395,000.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Yes, but I want to get the details of it before we discuss any item for the Pacific Railway in the Supplementary Estimates, and I may find it my duty to call the attention of the Committee to something in connection with it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. At this moment, the award has been sent to me and has been referred by me to the Department of Justice for report. That is the present position of it. If it should become necessary to ask a vote of the House, as we have no funds at our disposal to meet that award, of course the papers will be laid upon the Table. In the meantime I will give the hon. gentleman any information in my power.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Would the hon. gentleman give me the heads of the award? I saw them in a newspaper, but I do not know that they are correct.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. There is $120,000 awarded, but from what I learn in a communication from Judge Clark, who was the Government arbitrator, I do not think at this moment that the award itself contains the headings; I think it gives simply the bulk sum awarded. But as far as I remember at this moment, the $120,000 awarded, as signed by these two gentlemen is for the losses that were sustained by the rock work being exchanged for trestle work, the change made by substituting a different mode of crossing the waters from that contemplated in the first place; and the balance of the award-I am speaking from memory and in general terms-was for the damage sustained by reason of the noncompletion of section 15, known as the Whitehead contract, and the change made in the character of the work after the contract was made. I may say while on this point that I believe, notwithstanding the very large award which has been made, I am safe in saying, that assuming all that we are compelled to assume-and I offer no opinion upon that in advance of the report of the Department of Justice-assuming all that we are compelled to undertake by the contract, the expenditure is still something like $1,000,000 within the estimate of Mr. Sandford Fleming, who was Chief Engineer at the time.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I only desire to say with regard to that, that the hon. gentleman himself estimated the graded portion, two years ago, at $600,000.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. There is no doubt that the change in the character of the work rendered it much less costly than it would have been if carried out on the original design.

Mr. CHARLTON. 1 would like to ask the Minister of Railways, in connection with the matter I referred to a moment ago, whether he considers it incumbent upon the Government to spend a sum sufficient for the round house accommodation of the entire British Columbia division of the Canadian Pacific Railway, while it is only ostensibly providing for 213 miles from Port Moody to Kamloops?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. We have limited the expenditure and provision for station buildings to the amount we felt we were compelled to expend under the contract with the company. Nothing has been done beyond what we considered we were legally bound by the contract to do.

Mr. CHARLTON. One round house would not be considered more than adequate for the 213 miles of road?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. No, I should think not. Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Mr. CHARLTON. I should imagine it would be sufficient for the whole division.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Engine houses are very expensive.

Resolution concurred in. On Resolution 170,

Indians, Manitoba and the North-West $648,271 90

Mr. MILLS. This item was to stand over until certain information was given with reference to the expenditure in that country of something like $30,000 in keeping up Indian farms; and the hon. gentleman promised to bring down a statement showing the amount of expenditure on each of these farms, the party in charge, and the amount of the products of each farm. Some of these farms have been established several years and instead of being self-supporting they seem to have become a heavy burden on the public Treasury. I noticed the amount expended last year, according to the report on Indian Affairs, was upwards of $80,000 for supplying these farms with various appliances, and furnishing provisions to the occupants. I understand these farms were established for the purpose of teaching the Indians how to farm and for the purpose, in part, of supplementing the supplies that the Indians were to raise for themselves. Now that they have had a full and fair trial I think the hon. gentleman should be in a position to state how it is that some thirty farms have been established, and so far from supplying anything for the Indians to enable them to be self supporting they have from year to year entailed a very considerable charge on the public Treasury. Those parties who have gone into the North-West as ordinary settlers have been obliged to provide for themselves. I have not gone back over the report during the whole five years they have been established to see what amount has been appropriated on their behalf, but certainly it has been a very large sum, and after five years' trial we find that they are still a charge upon the Treasury to the extent of $80,000. That does seem to me to indicate a very extraordinary condition of things, and the hon. gentleman promised to bring down a statement before concurrence which would inform us of the amount expended in each case, the party who is in charge of the farm, and the amount produced upon each farm.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon, member for Bothwell mentioned last night that he desired this information, and I sent a memorandum to the Interior Department to have it prepared. The Indian farms were an experiment; and I do not think that, on the whole, they have been successful—some have turned out well, others the reverse. Some of the most promising are kept up. The original idea was that the farm instructors should not be on the reserves, but on farms contiguous thereto; but that has not proved successful, and the arrangement has been altered. The farms are being sold.

Mr. MILLS. When the discussion was in progress on the Estimates I requested the information in question.

Resolution allowed to stand.

On Resolution 164,

Geological Survey $60,000 00

Mr. CHARLTON. When the Estimates were being discussed last Session some reference was made to the subject of explorations on the eastern side of Hudson Bay and Labrador, and the First Minister informed the Committee that steps were being taken by the Dominion Government, in connection with the Quebec Government, to secure an exploration of that part of the country with a view to ascertain its timber, mineral, and other resources. Perhaps the hon. gentleman is able to furnish some information to the House.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I understand a report of the Special Committee on the Geological Survey will be laid before the House, if it has not already been submitted. 1 am told it is a very full report on the state and prospects of the Geological Survey. A great deal of evidence has been taken-some of it of a personal nature, but the chief portion will be of great interest to the country, the House and the Government, and this evidence will be laid before the House. I do not know that I have anything to add to what has been already said on this subject. Dr. Selwyn has already indicated in the report attached to the report of the Minister of the Interior what he proposes to do during the coming season.

Mr. MACKENZIE. From a perusal of the newspaper reports of the Committee's proceedings, it appears that the examination was of a very peculiar character. Dr. Selwyn's subordinates were allowed to give evidence that he was unfit for the position. I question whether that was in good taste. He may not be just the man for the position, but those who are endeavouring to obtain his position are scarcely the persons who should sit in judgment upon him. Dr. Selwyn was understood to be an efficient officer, and he should have the moral support of the Government. If he is not a suitable officer for the position, and if we were misled in making the appointment, then the matter should be seriously reconsidered. But every man is entitled to fair play; and it appears to me that some of the remarks made by one gentleman who is an applicant for the office, and another who thinks he is hardly used in being second to Dr. Selwyn, were of a character more personal than they should have been for the benefit of the service. I am not personally in a position to give an opinion on the subject, though in my intercourse with Dr. Selwyn during my political life, he has always seemed to me to be very zealous and attentive to the duties he had to discharge. I may be wrong in all this; but it is evident the present state of things cannot continue. There is something very like insubordination in the ranks of the staff, and it will, of course, be very difficult for the director to carry on the business unless he has the formal support of the Government behind him. I think some expression of opinion by the First Minister is under these circumstances absolutely indispensable.

Mr. HALL. It is hardly fair to the Committee that their actions should be judged by the newspaper reports on the evidence taken. The whole evidence will be submitted to the House some time this week. As it was not intended to ask the adoption of the report, consequently it was thought there was no great haste in presenting it. How-ever, as the matter has been alluded to, it is only just to the Committee to say that the personal references made were drawn out, not at the request of members of the Committee, or by any question submitted on their part, but in consequence of statements made by Dr. Selwyn in regard to mombers of his staff. He was asked as to the efficiency of the survey, and in answer to that question he made some comments on the members of the staff, who, when afterwards called as witnesses, felt they had a right to answer those statements, and the Committee felt they had no right to shut their mouths in that respect; that, in fact, as those charges had been made against them, they certainly had the right to make their answer to them. We felt we had no right to stop the statements of witnesses who were regularly before the Committee; but we have not treated the personal matter as a matter of any consequence, considering that it is a matter relating to the internal arrangement and administration, and is one to be treated only by the superior officer of the Department.

Mr. MULOCK. I quite agree with the remarks made by the hon. member for East York (Mr. Mackenzie), that if a superior officer were on trial it would hardly be reasonable some of whom might be desirous of securing his place. But that was not the case in connection with the enquiry which took place before the Geological Committee, of which I had the honour to be a member. I may say that whilst the evidence of various members of the staff was taken, it will be found, I think, when the conclusions arrived at by the Committee are examined, that the Committee have not felt themselves bound by the evidence of any of those persons. Out of deference to all of them they took their evidence, but I do not think it can fairly be said that the enquiry took the direction of a mere attack of any individual connected with the survey.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I have heard, generally, of the enquiry of the Committee, and the general course of the examination of the witnesses, and I believe, as has been stated, it was for the purpose of carrying out the legitimate objects and purposes expressed in the resolution establishing the Committee, and that this personal matter arose in the way the hon. member for Sherbrooke (Mr. Hall) has described. However, as those personal matters are gener-ally the more piquant portion of any examination, the press took hold of them, and it was generally published that there was a war between the director and some of his subordinates, and their language was quoted as against Dr. Selwyn, and perhaps undue prominence given to it. But I have no doubt that the report of the Committee will settle all that, and show that so far as they were concerned the Committee carried out their whole proceedings pro-perly, and did not allow it to degenerate into a personal quarrel, though the evidence given by these gentlemen may have pointed to a personal feeling against Dr. Selwyn. I agree with the hon. gentleman, that so long as Dr. Selwyn is there, he should have the moral support of the Government. He has got that moral support hitherto, and I feel in no way disposed to withdraw that support from him, until it is shown that it ought to be withdrawn. I took occasion, in alluding to the matter before, to state that I would be slow to believe that there was either ignorance or want of zeal on the part of Dr. Selwyn in the conduct of his Department. I took occasion to say that he was specially selected by Sir William Logan, when that distinguished gentleman found that the time had come for his retirement-by Sir William Logan, whose heart and soul was in the survey and in the science of geology as applied to this country. When he retired he asked that no pains should be spared in getting a suitable successor. He was specially sent home to make that selection, and he put himself in communication with Sir Roderick Murchison, the great authority, official as well as personal, and woll known in connection with goological science, and Sir Roderick Murchison strongly recommended Dr. Selwyn, who had just arrived from New South Wales, where he had distinguished himself, and from the Government of which he had brought very high testimonials of their satisfaction with him as director of their Geological Survey. I should be slow to believe that he has changed in any way, or in any degree. Of course as the hon. gentleman says, this kind of thing cannot go on. Insubordination is a great vice in any Department, and especially in one of that kind, where science and the zealous application of the science or knowledge of the individual, is absolutely required to make the work of the Department of any service. If there is quarrelling amongst each other, a disparaging of each other or each other's work, it destroys the confidence of the country in the service. And I must say that I think it would have been well, if these gentlemen had at any time thought conscientiously that the public money was being wasted, that there had been a scandalous neglect of duty by the director, they ought to have brought it before the trov. ernment, and not have treasured it in their hearts until they to have the matter tried on the evidence of subordinates, took this opportunity of having a fling at Dr. Selwyn. On the other hand, however, it must be observed from the statement of the hon. member for Sherbrooke, that the director when asked as to the reliability of the surveying staff spoke with reference to the reports of some of them, and their conduct and their efficiency, and that perhaps might have brought out this personal attack on Dr. Selwyn. However, it is an exceedingly unfortunate state of things, and cannot be allowed to continue longer. The Government will wait until they get the report of the Committee, specially appointed by the House to look into the matter, and they will do what is necessary in order to restore the efficiency of the Department if that has been in any way impaired by these quarrels, these differences of opinion, these dissensions, and they will act vigorously in the matter, and see that this kind of thing does not occur again

Mr. MACKENZIE. I should be sorry if my hon friend on the Committee imagined that I meant to pass any reflection on them. I was not present when the Committee was appointed, and I had intended to take some part in the discussion, as to the mode of conducting the surveys, because that is not a scientific matter, but rather one of common sense and expediency. I understand that there was considerable difference of opinion as to the mode of conducting the surveys, the place where the surveys were being carried on, and that the operations of the Committee would be directed to a great extent to the point. With regard to the personal matter, I am satisfied with what the hon. gentle-man has said. I have no feeling either for or against Dr. Selwyn, or any of the staff, with reference to the survey. I only made my remarks on the general ground, because I felt convinced that something should be done to put a stop to the present condition of disorganization.

Mr. DAWSON. I rise for the purpose of correcting an impression which may have been created in the minds of some hon. gentlemen. Not only were the directors and the subordinates examined, but every person whom Dr. Selwyn suggested was called before the Committee to be examined, and among the number were two very eminent men, Dr. Hunt, who was formerly attached to the survey, and whose reputation as a scientist is known throughout the civilized world, and Prof. Chapman of Toronto, who also holds a very high position. So it will be seen that the examination was not confined to the subordinates alone. I think when the report of the Committee comes down it will be found that it was an exceedingly mild report, and that it deals very fairly and forbearingly with the matters in dispute, and the different persons connected with the survey. When that report is before the House I have no doubt members will be in a position to judge how the matter stands.

Mr. MILLS. I do not anticipate the contents of the report, but I would say that it is possible that the Geological Department has been left too much to the officers of the Department themselves, and not sufficiently supervised by the political Head of the Department. There is no doubt whatever that in a scientific branch like the Department of Geology, the head of the Department must, in a great measure, be guided by the director, but in working out the general policy and the publications, I think perhaps the political head may be best qualified to decide what is best to be done. Now, a good deal of the difficulty would be avoided, I think, if every man's field work was published. As a matter of course, it is perfectly obvious that when an officer is sent into the field for the purpose of making explorations and ascertaining the geological character of a particular district,^{*}a report of what he has done ought to be given to the public. It has been made a ground of attack on Dr. Selwyn, it seems to me unfairly, that he has made a change in the geological nomenclature of the valley of the St. Lawrence, and of this particular district. I believe Dr. Selwyn has simply made changes that were rendered necessary by the progress of geological knowledge relating to this section Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD,

In fact, 1 remember having a conversation of country. with him on this subject at the time I was at the head of the Department, and he pointed out that the changes he had made were necessary in order to bring the geology of Canada, especially of the Province of Quebec, into harmony with the views of geologists in the adjoining Republic. The progress of geological knowledge, the discoveries from more minute investigations, have rendered it necessary that the opinions formed with regard to the geology of this section of country in the time of Sir William Logan should be modified. Corresponding changes have taken place in the opinions of scientists in the eastern States during the same period, and what Dr. Selwyn has done is to keep the theoretical geology of this particular district up to the knowledge of the times. I think there has been a good deal of misapprehension on this subject; some newspapers have criticised Dr. Selwyn, as if he were condemning the work done by Sir William Logan. That is not the case. He has been simply adding to the knowledge possessed in the time of Sir William Logan; what he has done has been done by geologists all around him; and it would be absurd to suppose that he should not modify or change the geological nomenclature to make it correspond with the progress of geological knowledge.

Mr. BAKER (Victoria). As a member of that Committee, I wish to say that I consider it premature, if not altogether superfluous, to discuss this matter now. I believe the hon. member for Sherbrooke (Mr. Hall), the very able Chairman of that Committee, who has spent a great deal of time and taken much pains in drawing up a report, has stated that that report will be placed on the Table this week--I think it will be placed on the Table to-morrow; therefore I think the discussion ought to be deferred until that time.

Mr. MACKENZIE. It can be printed before the House rises.

Mr. BAKER. The report will be printed on the typewriter, so that every member of this House will be able to decipher it, and I think there will be an opportunity for every member to see it. I think it would be better that this discussion should cease until the report is laid on the Table.

Mr. BLAKE. We cannot discuss what the Committee have done because we do not know it; but we can discuss this vote, and that is what we are discussing.

Mr. CHARLTON. The hon leader of the Government told the House last Session that steps would be taken to proceed with the exploration of the country around St. James' Bay in connection with the Government of Quebec. I would like to ask if he can give us any information on that subject.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I think there has been a report made; I am not sure; I will ascertain that.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 125,

Mr. BLAKE. Is there any change in the destination of this vote? Does it go to the same companies.

Mr. CARLING. Yes; the same companies.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. It does not go to the vessels about to be put on by the Canadian Pacific Railway, then?

Mr. CARLING. No.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I thought some was for the Owen | of the Statutes, and as to the time when the work is expected Sound Company.

Mr. CARLING. It is the same grant as was made last year. No arrangements have yet been made with any of the companies for this year.

Besolution concurred in.

On Resolution 130,

To provide for one year's subsidy, to be granted at the rate of $50,000 per annum, to line of steamers to trade between Canada and the West Indies and Brazil, provided a like amount be paid by the Brazilian Government$50,000 00

Mr. BLAKE. Is there any expectation of this being carried out?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. There is a party negotiating ; a communication is now on the way. They cabled us that a proposition was coming-that is all.

Mr. BLAKE. Is there any intimation of action on the part of the Brazilian Government?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. This vote has been continued for five years, and still remains, so far as the Brazilian Government are concerned.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 129,

Steam communication between Halifax and St. John viâ Yarmouth...... $10,000 00

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT, The hon. gentleman promised to give us some information as to whether the Department would ask for tenders for the service between Halifax and St. John vid Yarmouth.

Mr. CARLING. I believe the work has been satisfactorily done, and it is intended to give it to the same man again.

- Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. There was a complaint from the hon, member for Shelburne that the work had not been very well done and the Minister promised to make enquiries.

Resolution concurred in.

After Recess.

On Resolution 178,

To meet expenditure to be required to putlinto force the A ct respecting the traffic in intoxicating liquors,$5,000 00

Mr. MACKENZIE, I observe in the Public Accounts that there is one charge of $128, I think it is, for advertising in the New Brunswick Gazette, and another sum for some advertising in New Brunswick. I do not think the Government are called upon to pay for advertising in the local Gazettes, and it is only the case in these two instances.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. Last year, I think, there was only about $330 expended altogether,

Mr. MACKENZIE. Yes; and that is almost all for advertising in the two local Gazettes.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 179,

To meet expenses connected with the consolidation of the Dominion Statutes $20,000 00

Mr. BLAKE. I should like some information as to the salaries and arrangements with reference to the consolidation to be completed.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. We will bring the information down.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 184,

Resolution concurred in on a division.

On Resolution 188.

To make good to those merchants of Prince Edward

Mr. McINTYRE. Before this item passes Concurrence, I wish to say a few words on it. As was stated by hou. gentlemen on both sides of the House when this item was discussed the other night, this is an amount which in justice and honour should have been paid by the United States Government, as they were the parties who profited by the duty paid by the shippers in Prince Edward Island in 1871. I have no doubt some of the shippers in Prince Edward Island are entitled to a certain portion, but I deny that they are entitled to the whole amount. I believe that the fishermen are entitled to a certain portion of the refund. There is no doubt that the shippers and merchants of Prince Edward Island, who kept large fishing establishments, ves-sels and boats, are entitled to and do usually receive, in consideration of furnishing all the gear, &c., used in fishing, half the fish caught by the fishermen, and I say these merchants are entitled to a refund of duty on the amount of fish which was taken on the half line, but I deny that they are entitled to a refund of duty on that portion of the fish which was bought from the fishermen, because at that time they bought the fish at the market value in Prince Edward Island, less the duty; in other words, they bought the mackerel and kept the duty out of the fishermen, and thus the fishermen are entitled to the refund on this amount of fish. To show that I am correct, I will quote from a letter I received the other day from a gentleman who dealt large-ly in fish in 1871. He speaks thus of this refund :

"I bought some mackerel in 1871 and, like the rest of the dealars, I deducted the $2 duty off at the time I bought the fish, and I can get, I think, hundreds of fishermen to come forward and swear to the same."

Another letter to which I may refer, received from Prince Edward Island, in regard to the same refund, is as follows :-

"DEAR SIE,—I see the refund of duty on mackerel in 1871 is to come before the Hquae this Session again. I happened to be one of the un-fortunates who was catching mackerel that year in one of the un-fortunates who was catching mackerel that year in one of the un-fortunates. Prices being very low, we naturally complained of the price Mr. Hall offered us. Mr. Hall told us that he would ship our mackerel and we could have whatever they realized, which he did honestly, and at the end of the fishing season, when settling with us, he gave each and every one of us a due bill for the refund of duty which was promised that year. Now, I cannot understand how they exclude Mr. Hall's name on account of his being a United States subject, as he was honest enough to give his fishermen a guarantee for the refund of duty, should he get it, all his fishermen being British subjects. I doubt it any of those parties who are so eager to get the refund of duty acted so square with their fishermen as Mr. Hall did. The due bill reads thus:

80 Square with their account of $18, as a refund of duty raid on '' Due Patrick Macdonald the sum of $18, as a refund of duty raid on mackerel in 1871 when refunded to undersigned, '' I. C. HALL,

"'I. C. HALL, "'Per P. S. MADGOWAN.' "

Another letter to the same effect, from a gentleman named Thomas Walsh, gives an account of a bill of sale that year of mackerel, which was shipped to Boston through Mr. Hall, This is a copy of the bill of sale;

"Sales mackerel r 24th, 1871, and sold	eceived from C on account Th	harlottetown, per Alham nomas Walsh: 25$	bra , August
"7 barrels No.	2 mackerel, $7	25	50 75
" 63 " "	3	25	393 75

"$444 50"

Then he gives the charges, and the first of those charges is the duty amounting to $157.50. I need not go on to enumerate the other charges, such as freight, wharfage, &c., but it shows what I want to make out, that these men were charged the duty, and on the list given to us the other night by the hon. the Finance Minister I do not find the names of any of these gentlemen whose letters I have read, and who are equally entitled to the refund with any of those whose names appear on the list. I am aware that this list does not cover a third or a fourth the number of actual claims against this refund. I am aware of one man living in my own town, who has a claim of $2,000 against this refund. He died last winter, but his estate holds it good. If these gentlemen choose to put in claims next year, I do not see, under the circumstances, by giving the gentlemen who are named on the list read by the Finance Minister the other night, the refund, how they are going to refuse those who may hereafter present claims. I do not think it is right that the whole of this money should be placed in the hands of these merchants. Some of them may be honest enough to refund to the fishermen a share of what is due to them, but there is no legal obligation whatever. Now, what I desire the Government to do is to hold this money until they receive the claims properly attested of those fishermen who are really entitled to a share of this refund. It will not do to place the money in the hands of the merchants, otherwise the fisherman's share will be very small indeed - if any at all.

Mr. YFO. I would like to ascertain by what mode the Government intend to distribute this monoy. It is well known in Prince Edward Island that the fishermen as a rule, and not the merchants, are entitled to the refund of duty which this vote is intended to provide. At the time the merchants bought the fish from the fishermen, they bought it at the current prices less the duty, with the distinct understanding that whenever the merchants would got the duty refunded they would return his share to every fisherman entitled to it. I had a letter lately from one of my constituents, a fisherman, whose name is Joseph Pineau, who writes as follows:—

"As fishermen are getting back the duty paid by them in mackerel shipped to the United States in 1871-72, and as I then sold two hundred and fifty barrels to Hon. George W. Howlan, for which he paid me, saying that he would give me two dollars more a barrel were it not for the duty on them. Therefore, I consider I have a right to the amount of duty deducted from the price, as the parties who bought and shipped fish on such terms did not lose anything by the payment of duty, as they gave so much less for the fish. I hope when the matter comes before the House you will protect our rights."

I also had letters from Meddie Gallant and other fishermen, to the same effect. I hope the Government will give due consideration to the claims of the poor fishermon. Merchants, as a rule, are able to take care of themselves, and on account of their more independent position are not likely to have their rights overlooked by any Government. There is no class of our population that toil amidst so many hardships and dangers as our fishermen, and I may add very often with so little result. $2 a barrel is a big consideration to a man who, perhaps, sometimes labours hard, days and nights, without having a dollar for his trouble. It is only persons brought up with or near these hardy and indus-trious fishermen who can understand their difficulties, and how cruel it would be to deny them their right. I hope the Government will not ignore these rights; I do not wish the merchants' rights to be ignored either, but I earnestly ask the Government not to allow themselves to pay to merchants or to any persons moneys that properly belong to our but their creditors have lost, and it seems to me that in fishermen. I wish to be distinctly understood as not those cases in which there have been bankruptcies and a opposing what Senator Howlan has a right to. What fish he caught with his own boats and men was his, and he is entitled to the duty he paid on that, just as an ordinary fisherman is entitled to the amount kept out of the price of his fish by Senator Howlan or any other purchaser. What I say of Senator Howlan's claim I can say of Mr. Myrick's. The latter has carried on an extensive fishing business for many years. Through his enterprise many fishermen have a right to a share of the money we are now voting. He has given employment, and I may say a livelihood, to many people, and I trust that his own claims and the claims of those who sold fish to him in the year in question will be recognized and paid by the Government. In conclusion, I would urge the appointment of a reliable person to take the evidence offered by the different applicants for this money. Such is most important. Fishermen are often easily deceived and imposed upon; it is therefore absolutely necessary that an honest, intelligent person should be selected to decide their claims.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. I may state to the hon. gentlemen who have just spoken, that no portion of this money will be paid by the Government until the most careful investigation has been had, to see that when it is paid it goes into the hands of those who are entitled to it in the spirit and letter of this Resolution.

Mr. BLAKE. Oh, but that statement is not satisfactory at all. The letter of the Resolution is to make good to those merchants of Prince Edward Island the amount of duties paid by them to the United States. Now, the point of the case is this: I was told last Session-and 1 am not sure but that it was stated across the House, though not in detail that these merchants of Prince Edward Island purchased from the fishermen who caught the fish large quantities of fish and told them that in the state of the question they were obliged to regulate the price they paid with reference to that question, but if the duties were allowed the money would be refunded and considered in other accounts. Well, the duties were allowed, but it was not refunded and considered in other accounts. But it is the merchants that the Resolution alone touches who paid the duties, and there fore, unless this Resolution is modified in some way, it will be utterly impossible to do that which is obviously justice. The merchant is the only person the hoh. gentleman deals with, and the merchant is the only one who paid the duties, but it was at the fishermen's expense who caught the fish that the duties were paid, because the amount was deducted from the price given to the fishermen, and it was really out of the price of their fish that these duties were paid. But they were paid by the merchant; therefore, under the letter of the hon. gentleman's Resolution, the merchant will get the money and the fishermen would lose it. It does seem to me that this Resolution must be modified in some sense, so as to secure that the money shall not go to the wrong party. If we are acting in a generous spirit, we must see that those who have really been wronged should obtain the fruits of our generosity, and of our gift; but in many cases, according to the statement of my hon. friends from the Island, it is not the merchants who paid the dutics, but the fishermen, out of the price of whose fish the duties were paid, and to whom the money ought to go. I will mention another matter which has come to my knowledge, and that is, that in the case of some two or three, I believe, of the persons who are making this claim, in the intervening period since these duties were paid, and the present time, have become insolvent, and been discharged of their debts without this claim being mentioned at all. Amongst their assets, of course, this claim could not be mentioned; their assets were diminished by the circumstance that this refund did not take place, discharge without payment of debt, it is to the creditors, to the assignee of the bankrupt, and for the benefit of the creditors, that the money ought to go, and not to the individuals who have become bankrupt.

Mr. DAVIES. I think, in view of the letters which have been read by the hon. member for King's, P.E.I. (Mr. McIntyre), and Prince (Mr. Yeo), some alterations should be made in the language of this vote, with a view of securing to these fishermen, from whom the duties were deducted, that when the money is repaid it shall pass into their hands. Last year when the vote was proposed the junior member for King's county, who has interested himself in the question and whose name is in the schedule, stated that this money was in many instances to go to the fishermen, because it had not been paid by the merchants, but the merchants had agreed to refund it to them if they could get it back. We We had that statement made by the hon. gentleman in his place last Session and that statement being corroborated by the numerous letters which the hon, member for Prince county and the senior member for King's have read, shows that it is a matter of common justice that the phraseology should be altered, so as to secure payment of the money to the fishermen. I move that the following words be added to the Resolution :-

"Due enquiry being first made with a view to securing that the noney shall not be paid except to those parties or fishermen who really lost by the refusal of the United Etates Government to refund those duties."

Mr. BLAKE. We cannot alter the destination of the money, but we can take care that it is properly applied.

Mr. DAVIES. I will read the remarks which the hon. member for King's made during the debate last year, which placed the matter beyond a doubt. He said :

"In regard to these claims, I may say that, while there are only perhaps a dozen gentlemen in whose names they stand, while there are only per-haps a dozen gentlemen in whose names they stand, these gentlemen represent a number of the fishermen of the Island. That season the fish was blught from the fishermen on the understanding that when the duty was returned the fishermen would receive that refund, and the shippers of the Province are still held accountable by the fishermen for every dollar, should the amount be returned."

So, the First Minister will see that it is a matter of common honesty and necessity that we should take precautions to secure that those people whom the hon, member for King's says really have a right to the money should have it repaid them, and it should not go to parties who have no right to receive it.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I think we can strike out the words "merchants" and insert "persons," and add, for the purpose of explaining what the words mean, "it being understood that deductions on any sales of fish to the amount of the duty shall be held to be a payment for the same."

Mr. BLAKE. It may be that that alteration will accomplish the object; but it will involve an enquiry. I should prefer that some arrangements were made by which there would be an enquiry provided for.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The Minister of Finance says there will be an enquiry. It will never do that in every sale of fish the parties should now say: I sold my fish at a lower price, because I had the duty to pay. The arrangement was this: Until that question is settled, they said, we will only pay you a reduced price, and if the duty is returned by the United States, we will refund it to you.

Mr. DAVIES. Surely some evidence must be taken in regard to this matter.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Some collector or officer of the Government will be appointed to make the enquiry. I that it belongs to the fishermen as against the merchant, the We will take care that the money gets into the right hands. Iisherman will get it.

Mr. DAVIES. I am very much afraid, if the question is left to local collectors, the hon. gentleman's object will not be obtained. I have no person in my eye, and I have no idea as to the persons whom the hon. gentleman thinks of appointing. The matter should be referred to some person who is capable of dissecting evidence and placing legal construction on evidence.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The Government will choose a proper person.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. There were two other points to which attention should be directed. One was a suggestion made by the hon. member that if this sum was paid there were a great many other claims of a similar nature involving a larger amount, which claims the Government might consider. And there is another point: what is to be done in the case of those particular gentlemen who have become bankrupt in the interval between 1871 and 1881, and have obtained a discharge. The money really ought to have come to their creditors and not to them.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I do not think we can go into that. That was not an asset, because there was not a debt. Some of these gontlemen have compounded I suppose, and some have had the property divided by the sheriff, but I do not think we can enter into that question.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHF. I do not think we are called upon in that case to give a present to two or three bankrupt gentlemen of several thousand dollars.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not think the statement of the hon. gentleman meets that portion of the case. Of course if these gentlemon have gone into bankruptcy and the estates have been paying a composition, it is clear that the deficiency in their estates, which might have paid less than twenty shillings in the pound, was in part occasioned by their not getting these refunds. These assets were so much the worse and they paid less to their creditors. Now if the estate is closed and the creditors receive 23 or 50 cents in the dollar, it is proposed that we shall hand over this money to them. It seems to me that there should be further enquiry, and in cases in which the applicants were persons who had been prevented from paying 20 shillings in the pound, by these losses occasioned by the refusal to make good this demand for a refund, that money should go to the persons who have lost by it. They have not lost by it; they failed and their creditors have lost, not they. They are clear, and now they are making a fortune out of it. That is the practical result.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The whole amount is only $.0,000.

Mr. BLAKE. But there are claims of $9,000 or $10,000 for one person, I think.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That is a claim. If the merchants are under engagements to repay the fishermen, the morchants will not get it, but the fishermen.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not think the merchants would have been so zealous in pressing the matter, if they were not prepared to dispute the claim or expected to have it divided with them if they get it.

Mr. DAVIES. In many cases the claims are not strictly legal claims that could be enforced by law, but they are moral claims, which we should recognize and take pains to secure to them. We should not be too particular to cut out the fishermen, and where a clear understanding has been come to I think the men should get the money.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That is a matter of the grace of Parliament and not of debt. The Government will feel at liberty to consider each case, and if it is evident Mr. BLAKE. That is a satisfactory result, if we arrive at a clear conclusion in every case, where it was clear between the two parties that it was the fisherman and not the merchant who lost. Of course, if the merchant had supposed, in getting the refund, that he would make that gain, he would have bought the fish in what would have been the open market, and he would have put the difference in his pocket. Now, it should not go further than this: wherever the price is less than it would have been if the duty had not existed, then the fisherman was the loser, and he should get the money. Again, I do not think, under the circumstances, with these persons high in the Island on one side and a lot of poor fishermen on the other, that collectors or others holding small offices at the pleasure of the Government are the proper persons to adjust these matters.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I agree with the hon. gentleman as to that, and we shall see that it is put in the hands of persons who are beyond dispute.

Mr. DAVIES. I must ask the hon. gentleman to strike out the last words in the Resolution, as originally brought down, because I think it is calculated to do a great deal of harm on the other side of the border. I beg to assure him of my own knowledge, as one of the counsel before the Commission, and having given the matter a great deal of study, that the language expresses an incorrect state of facts. The words I refer to are, "it not having been deemed advisable in the general interests of the British case, to put forward and press the claim of these merchants before the Halifax Commission." Now, that is not so. It was not possible to consider them legally; we coul not ask it; no counsel could stand up before the Commission and ask it It was not within the purview of the arbitration, and if we had considered it, it would have rendered the award illegal.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I am afraid the hon, gentleman is proving that the whole item should be struck out.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The whole matter is based on that,

Mr. DAVIES. The right hon. gentleman has already said that we are giving this as a matter of grace and favour. How can we, as a Parliament, say that it was not considered advisable to submit the claims in the interests of the British case, when the British case could not cover it, and never did cover it. It has reference to a matter which took place two years before. I remember that a claim was brought forward because bait was bought within the three-miles limit. A motion was made by the American counsel in the Board that no claim involving any commercial advantage whatever should be considered by the Commission; and a ruling was given by the three Commissioners unanimously that commercial advantages did not come within the purview of the Commission, and all claims in that regard were struck out; and we ought not to put in an Act of Parliament a statement that is not in accordance with the facts, as if we were trying to smuggle into the arbitration a claim that had no place in the Commission. I say it reflects very seriously on the conduct of the case. At any rate, I enter my protest here against these words, and if the hon. gentleman will not strike them out, I can do no more.

Mr. SPEAKER. Will these words be struck out?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No, no.

Mr. DAVIES. I would like, in addition to the letters read by the hon. member for King's (Mr. McIntyre), to submit to the hon. Minister's consideration certain other letters that I have received. It appears that a large number of fishermen who are British subjects worked for Messrs. Hall and Myrick, and they do not come within the purview of SIE JOHN A. MACDONALD.

this Resolution. For instance, I have here a letter which was written to myself, which says:

"My brother, W. W. McLeod, and I, owned two schooners in 1871one called The O lessa and the other The Dominion. We were fishing in joint account with J. C. Hall, and half of the duties belong to us. Would you kindly let me know if our claim is to be considered by Parliament."

As I stated before, Messrs. Hall and Myrick, although technically Americans, did the largest part of the fishing on Prince Edward Island, and the men who will lose by this arrangement are the British subjects who were fishing for these men. The British subjects who fish for Mr. Howlan will get their money, while the British subjects who fish for Mr. Myrick will not. I do not see how the hon. gentleman can make a distinction between Mr. Howlan and Mr. Myrick in this matter. They are both in the same boat

Mr. BLAKE. I think, as we have altered the Resolution, a British fisherman fishing for Mr. Myrick would obtain compensation just as well as one fishing for Mr. Howlan; because it is to be paid to those British subjects who have paid duty, and the fishermen are treated as having paid the duty.

Mr. DAVIES. The hon. gentleman's argument is correct enough, but the vote is not sufficiently large to cover the claims of these men. It is only large enough to cover the claims of the British merchants, and not those of the British subjects who fish for Hall & Myrick. The vote ought to be increased at any rate sufficiently to cover the claims of those British subjects who fish for Mr. Myrick, if not to cover his claims.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. We cannot alter it now.

Mr. BLAKE. There is an opportunity of increasing the vote, as the Minister of Finance has give us the pleasing intelligence that we are to have additional Supplementary Estimates. Unless the hon. gentleman does increase the vote, he will have to go into insolvency, and pay 60 cents in the dollar, because the acknowledged claims are much greater than the vote. So he had better, for the sake of his credit, invite the Minister of Finance to put in a little more.

Resolution, as amended, concurred in.

On Resolution 189,

Collection of Revenues-Customs...... $793,815 0)

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The Minister charged with this subject promised to give information on two points --first, as to the reason of the increase of $4,000 or $5,000 at Toronto.

Mr. McLELAN. It is owing to the transfer of a number of employés to the permanent staff, and the appointment of additional officers to attend to the delivery of bonded goods.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. That does not account for the increase. It is really a change from one mode of payment to another.

Mr. McLELAN. That is the explanation given by the Department. There has been an increase of landing waiters, owing to complaints having been made that there was great detention of goods coming in in bond.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Then the hon. gentleman told us that he would inform us what was to be done with reference to a cortain complaint presented by the hon. member for Carleton, N.B. (Mr. Irvine), respecting the employment of a merchant as a preventive officer.

Mr. McLELAN. The Department has not yet sent me the information with respect to that. I will get it.

fishermen who are British subjects worked for Messrs. Hall Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman will remember that and Myrick, and they do not come within the purview of he was distinctly begged to get this information, and was referred to a person not very remote from him, who would supply him with the full information-the Minister of Inland Revenue.

Mr. McLELAN. The hon. gentleman gave me the name, and I sent it to the Department. It has not reached me, and I will have to call upon the Department for information.

Mr. BLAKE. If there should be any difficulty in getting it from the Department, and there may be, because my hon. friend from Carleton commenced this enquiry more than a year ago, in my hearing in the House, and has been prosecuting it ever since without result, I would once again beg my hon. friend, if he is on speaking terms with the hon. Minister of Inland Revenue, that he should ask him, though, of course, I would not like to produce any disagreeable intercourse or familiarity between the hon. gentleman and his colleague.

Mr. McLELAN. It would be better to have the information officially.

Mr. COSTIGAN. As to what the hon. member for Carleton has said, I know this gentleman by name very well, and I believe he is a merchant, though I have no personal knowledge of it. I may mention that it has been generally understood that persons appointed in the outside service of the Customs Department have never been prevented from engaging in other business unless they drew salaries exceeding $400.

Mr. BLAKE. That is not the case.

Mr. MACKENZIE. When they receive less than a certain salary, they may earn money in some other way, but not by selling goods which are dutiable articles. That was never allowed.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. When I was Minister of Customs, we had, in different parts of the Dominion, persons receiving from $80 to $100 a year, especially in the Lower Provinces, engaged in business in that way. A deputy collector in receipt of $300 a year was engaged in business, and after the conversation here I addressed a note on the subject to the Minister of Customs, and he replied that the Audit Act prevented any Civil Servant from engaging in any other employment when his salary was $100 per annum or upwards.

Mr. MACKENZIE, That has no connection with the case.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. With reference to this case, the party receives $100 or $200 and is engaged, I believe, in business. But there is a good deal to be said, though not as a general rule, why a person engaged in business in a locality in the country not far from the boundary line where the smuggling is very general on the part of the residents, would make the best revenue officer, because his business is affected materially by such smuggling. There is nothing in the law against this. When I was Minister of Customs, we had a gentleman in the county of Westmoreland, Mr. Scholer, who received $300 a year in that capacity; that was the maximum, I understood. There is no law in the matter; it is a question of policy and propriety.

Mr. IRVINE. Notwithstanding all I have said, the hon. Minister seems to misapprehend my remarks or he does not quite understand the situation. The hon. Finance Minister would leave the impression that there is a real necessity for an officer there, but until 1874 there was no officer at all there. The Mackenzie Government appointed a preventive officer four miles from the American boundary, Mr. Scholer, at $300 a year, and every one knows that this officer was quite sufficient to do the work. But four miles from Centerville where Mr. Scholer resides, the Government appointed Mr. Kearney, a few days before the last elections. may go up towards what is was before.

Instead of this office being necessary there for the protection of the merchants, it has given bitter dissatisfaction to the trading community in that neighbourhood. I say further, Mr. Kearney is not an ordinary merchant, but does the most business of any man in that neighbourhood; he does a very large country business. I might give some reason here why he was appointed, but I will not do that. I bring no charge personally against him, but I only say what I said before, that he being a trader and merchant doing the largest business there, his appointment gives general offence, the people thinking he has privileges he should not have over the other merchants.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not at all understand it to be said there is a law of which this is a violation. I understood the hon. member for Carleton, when he brought this question up last year, to say the preventive officer was also the largest trader in the vicinity, and he complained of the incompati-bility of the positions. I understood the hon. Minister of Customs who, unfortunately, is not in his seat, to say he did not know this officer was a trader, and the point at issue was whether he was a trader or not. The Minister of Customs did not affirm that it was proper, under the circumstances, that a preventive officer should be a trader, but said he would ascertain whether he was or not. The question has gone on for a year until now, and we have got pretty well down to the view that he is a trader ; because, although the acting Minister has not been able to find out from the hon. Minister of the Department whether he is or not, the Minister of Inland Revenue has come forward under a subpœna and declared he has no doubt he is a trader, and the Minister of Finance has gone into the question whether, being a trader, it is fit he should be a preventive officerfrom all which it is pretty conclusive he is a trader. The hon. Minister of Customs, last year, did not say it was proper he should be a preventive officer, but said he was going to enquire whether any incompatibility existed; and it seems to me there are very obvious reasons, although no law, against the same man filling the position of importer of dutiable goods and being besides a preventive officer.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 191,

Collection of Revenues-Culling timber: salaries, culler's fees and contingent expenses$71,800 00

Mr. WHITE (Renfrew). Before this vote is passed, I desire to draw the attention of the Minister of Inland Revenue to the question of the salary of the supervisor of cullers at Quebec. I observe the amount in the Estimates is $2,000, which is the same salary that was paid for the same service thirty years ago, though it must be manifest that the cost of living has very materially increased in that time. I can testify to the efficiency of the supervisor of cullers at Quebec, and I might point out to the Minister of Inland Revenue that the position of deputy supervisor, which has not been filled since the resignation of Mr. Fraser two years ago, might very well be abolished, and a portion of the salary of the deputy supervisor given to the supervisor. Thus the cost of the service would not be increased and the efficiency would be just as thoroughly maintained as if a deputy supervisor were appointed.

Mr. COSTIGAN. The salary of the present supervisor . has been fixed at $2,000, because, although his predecessor was getting a larger salary, it is generally ackowledged to be a sound principle to appoint to a new position at a less salary than that received by an old servant, whose salary is often increased on account of long service. I have every reason to believe that the supervisor at Quebec is a first-class officer, and I thought of recommending an increase this year, but he is only newly appointed and there is no doubt his services will be recognized, and his salary

Mr. MACKENZIE. I think, until gentlemen interested in the lumber business make good the difference between expenditure and revenue, it is hardly a time to advocate higher wages. The Dominion at present loses $80,000 a year or thereabouts by having this in hand. It is quite evident that, if the expenses are to keep even with their present ratio as to receipts, the receipts must be increased in some way. I would like to know from the hon. the Minister of Inland Revenue what has been the exact loss in the last year or in the last four or five years ?

Mr. COSTIGAN. I cannot state the exact figure, but I can bring it down.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I hope there will be no attempt to raise salaries while we are losing money.

Mr. COSTIGAN. No; the tendency will be to decrease the expense of that Department.

Mr. WHITE (Renfrew). If the hon. gentleman goes back some years, he will find that a considerable surplus has been obtained from that office in former years, which may very fairly be applied against any deficit there is now.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Perhaps the hon. gentleman foreshadows the policy of the gentleman in front of him, but I think, from my recollection, that at present the surpluses are very nearly used up.

Mr. WHITE. I do not think so.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. They were, very nearly, in my time, and they have deen going on getting less.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 205,

Mr. MACKENZIE. What is the reason for a vote for this particular service? Is not the steamer in working order all the time?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. Ob, yes.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Then what does it mean?

Sir FIDCTOR LANGEVIN. The object of this vote is that should the Newfield be required for this service, as she has been several times before, the extra expenses may be met.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Is there a refund off the other vote?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. If she is not required, then the other rote will supply the expenses for the Newfield at some other service, but if she is required for this service, we will take out of this grant what is required for that service, and it will be saved on the other.

'Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 210,

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. When this item was under discussion, I called the attention of the Postmaster-General to the desirability of knowing what was the estimate of the sum he would pay the Canadian Pacific Railway during the present year, and how much had been paid to them last year? He promised to bring down a statement. Will he be good enough to make the statement now?

Mr. CARLING. The smount paid to the Pacific Railway for the year 1883-84 will be $74,000; the estimated amount for 1884-85 will be $96,000.

Resolution concurred in. Mr. COSTIGAN. On Resolution 221,

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I notice, in looking over last year's account, that no less a sum than $1,270 appears to have been paid to the assistant librarian for acting as Civil Service examiner. I dare say that gentleman may be a very fit person to assist in the preparation of papers and to act in that capacity, but it appears to be a very questionable proceeding to use the assistant librariau to the extent to which he must have been used to entitle him to domand $1,270; and I do not see myself, if an assistant librarian is wanted, as I suppose he is, how he can spare the amount of time which it appears to be necessary for him to have expended in that service, in order to earn that sum of money. The sum is entered in the Auditor-General's report. I should like to know, in reference to this vote, whether it is going to be repeated or not.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. This is not in my Department, but in that of the Secretary of State, who is not here. But I know something about the circumstance. The assistant librarian, Mr. Decelles, is one of the Commissioners, and being an officer of the Government in the Library, he receives, I think, $5 a day for the time he is employed in that capacity.

M. MACKENZIE. The hon. gentleman is mistaken.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I think not.

Mr. MACKENZIE. It is stated distinctly in the Auditor-General's report that he received $1,270 last year.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I say nothing to the contrary.

Mr. MACKENZIE. That is more than $5 a day.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. He had to go out of town for the examinations twice last year and, of course, he had to pay his travelling expenses and board while he was away, which must have increased the total charge. But I know that the salary, according to the Civil Service Act, was $5 a day; and the number of days new is fixed by the new Bill at eighty, and, of course, hereafter he will not be employed more than eighty days in one year. Then if he has to go to Montreal for the examination as he did twice last year, he will have to be paid his $5 a day during that time, as the others are paid, plus travelling expenses.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The fact remains, that this gentleman is paid a salary of $2,400 as assistant librarian, and he obtained $1,270 for acting as Civil Service examiner, charged under head of miscellaneous, so that he received altogether $3,670, considerably more than a good many Deputy Ministers. Now, this is entirely wrong. If he could be spared out of the Library for other work, and he chose to do that work, it should be retained out of his salary as assistant librarian. It is an easy matter to give an enormous salary in this way, and this system is constantly increasing. Some salaries are increased twice their usual amount in this manner. It seems to me altogether inexcusable. Now, if the Minister of Public Works will tell me how many days this geutleman, was engaged, we will see whether his statement of $5 anday is in accordance with this payment.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I am not in a position to say the number of days. The Secretary of State was unwell this evening and could not be here, but he sent me a note saying that a statement of the employes appointed to conduct Civil Service examinations under the Civil Service Act was ready, and would be laid before the House to-morrow; also, a statement of what their expenses have been during the year, which would be laid before the House to-morrow. Mr. MACKENZIE. In the meantime, the facts appear to be as I have stated.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I have not the details; it is not in my Department.

Mr. MACKENZIE. There is no detail about it. There is the amount that has been paid him according to the Auditor-General's statement. But I want to know from the Ministry before this is concurred in whether they approve of salaries being paid in this fashion; whether they are disposed to continue this-outrage I should say-upon ordinary practice. Does the hon. gentleman, speaking for the Ministry, approve of making the salary of the assistant librarian $3,670 instead of $2,400?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I do not know whether the hon. gentleman has a right to put it in that way. I may say this, however, that under the Civil Service Act, as it stood last year, and as amended by the Bill passed a day or two ago, the Civil Service examiners may be paid $5 a day for the time they are employed, the number of days not to exceed eighty. If he is employed as an examiner he will be paid $5 per day and his travelling expenses. If he is employed eighty days, that time at $5 per day would amount to $400, and ten days more for examining papers, at $5 per day, would make $50 more, and expenses.

Mr. BLAKE. The difficulty is, that the figures in the Public Accounts indicate a state of things entirely different. The amount paid to Mr. Decelles was $1,270. At the rate of pay in question, he must have been employed over 200 days, and yet he is engaged as an employe of the Library.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Last year was an exceptionally heavy year in respect to Civil Service examinations. The number of candidates who came forward for examination was very large. The Commissioners who had revised the papers had very heavy work to do, and it was two months after the examinations had taken place that the list was published. We think that in future the number of days now fixed by law will be sufficient for the examination of candidates and for correction of the papers. Of course, the remarks made by the hon. gentleman will induce me to call the special attention of the Secretary of State to this matter, so that if there is any abuse a remedy can be applied at once.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The old Act limited the time to sixty days, but it appears tolerably clear that Mr. Decelles must have received payment for a much longer period. This clause in the Act was inserted to prevent abuse. No man can discharge the duties of examiner and attend to his duties in the Library at the same time, and I apprehend that half that gentleman's time must have been taken up in connection with those examination papers.

Mr. BLAKE. This payment is not merely improper, in the sense that a Civil Servant has been thus engaged a large part of his time in performing examiners' duties, but there has been a violation of the law, because the Act provides only for payment for sixty days, and payment has been made for about 240 days.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I would ask the hon. gentleman to allow the vote to pass, and a statement will be brought down, and the hon. gentleman will be able to take up the subject any other day he chooses.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 225,

Mr. MACKENZIE. Perhaps the hon. Finance Minister will give some explanation respecting the item $2,000, to cover extra claims of certain returning officers at the last general election, Sir LEONARD TILLEY. These are olaims made not only in connection with Montreal, but with respect to other localities, where no provision is made by law for the copying of the voters' lists. The matter was referred to the Auditor-General, and he reported that the parties are fairly, if not legally, entitled to compensation, and a sum has been placed in the Estimates to meet the case. Therefore, it is proposed that we should place a sum in the Estimates in order to meet such cases, there being one or two other places where it is likely to arise. It is with reference to the copies of the voters' list. In Montreal the city is divided into districts, where there are not 200 votes, and these lists have to be furnished by the registrar or some other officer. There is no provision in the Act to pay for this service, and it had to be done at a considerable expense to the returning officer. I think there have been legal proceedings, and a judgment has been found against him. Some person was employed by the Auditor to investigate the matter, and he has reported that they are entitled to consideration, though there is no law providing for it.

Mr. BLAKE. I recollect the discussion which took place in the Committee, and I think it was clearly understood that we should have fuller information on Concurrence. We have not been informed how it is that the city of Montreal occupies an exceptional position—a position different from any other part of the Dominion. All over the Dominion, where-ever there are lists of voters, there is provision under which these lists are to be obtained by the returning officer. They are the foundation of his work. And how can it be, that in the city of Montreal alone extra expenses are incurred, and not in the other 200 odd electoral divisions, in which also voters' lists have to be obtained? I cannot see that there is any reason for it. Then it was said that this was only part of the expenditure, and I pointed out what I thought at the moment seemed to impress hon. gentlemen, though it does not seem to have done so, that if they want to have constant difficulties with the returning officers, let them propose votes like this. If the law is not wide enough to make legal all claims which ought to be legal, alter the Act and make it wide enough to embrace them, but do not propose extra and supplementary votes for claims which are not according o law; because these returning officers, it is known, are constantly sending in claims beyond what the law allows, and if they find Parliament setting this bad precedent of passing a special vote for the payment of some sums which are not warranted by the law, then you will find that course laugely pursued, and the Government would be pressed to repeat the operation of a special vote. If, therefore, it be the case that there is something peculiar in the city of Montreal, which requires a special vote to discharge the duty of a returning officer there, let us have an Act of Parliament providing for the payment and then it will be under the law; they will know then what they are bound to do, and what they are entitled to get, and they will not be dependent upon the generosity of Parliament, or the importunity they may be able to exert, in order to procure a special vote. We were told that this was the only thing of the kind. The form of the vote, is objectionable in the last degree. It speaks of extra claims of certain returning officers. Can the hon. gentleman tell me how many extra claims were made by returning officers, and what were the amounts? But we do not know which returning officers or which claims ; all we know is that they are extra claims. What does extra mean? It means beyond and outside. They are claims not warranted by the general Act, and therefore we are asked to pass this vote. It seems to me to be a very objectionable vote.

Mr. GAULT. I believe the hon. Secretary of State has a factum of this case. I may say that one of the returning officers was sued, and judgment was given against him for a large amount, and I know that they have had a great deal of trouble in Montreal, so much so, that in future, if this vote is not passed, we will not be able to get anyone to accept the position.

Mr. BLAKE. We will have to do without a member, then.

Mr. GAULT. I know that several have declined already.

Mr. MACKENZIE. They cannot decline. I will read the law on the subject:

"The returning officer shall obtain the different lists of votes, or copies or extracts thereof, from the registrars, town clerks, clerks of the peace, or such other officers as may by law be the proper custodians of such lists, or of duly certified duplicates or copies thereof; and every such officer who shall omit or refuse to furnish such lists, copies or extracts of the voters' lists, within a reasonable time to the returning officer requiring the same, shall incur a penalty of not less than two hundred and not exceeding two thousand dollars."

Now if we are to admit that because returning officers neglect their duty in Montreal, if we make that a reason for voting money in the case of one electoral division, it is equally a reason for voting money in every other electoral division. It is perfectly clear from the information we have before us that we should not be called on to vote this sum until we know precisely what the difficulty was, and then we will be able to judge where the sore spot is.

Mr. HESSON. I know for a fact that there has been difficulty in the matter of this sub-division of the voters' lists. The clerk of the peace is furnished with a certified copy of the list, a revised copy of the roll, but he is not compelled to put them into sub-divisions, as required by law, for the use of the voters. They are not required to go outside a certain division, and they must be embraced within certain districts in which there are net more than 200 voters. The clerk of the peace will not furnish it the subdivisions of the wards of towns or cities for polling or other purposes, and it falls on the returning officer, who is not in a position to make the sub-divisions, and as he has not the time, he has to employ some person to do it. This diffi-culty does not apply only to the city of Montreal, but to every town in Canada, where provision is not made by law to sub-divide the municipality into which including more than 200 voters. Many sub-divisions not including more than 200 voters. Many corporations have not done so, because they require to be revised from time to time, as the population increases or decreases. I know that in Stratford, my own town, the ward sub-divisions were not prepared, because in some cases there were some 300 or 400 voters appearing at the polling sub-divisions. These had to be prepared by the town assessor, who knew the residence of each voter, and having taken the list prepared by the clerk of the peace, he was enabled to sub-divide them within certain bounds. Now, it is impossible for any returning officer to accomplish that work. Neither the time nor the money allotted to him will permit him to do it. I think they are paid something like $75 for their services, and I know for a fact that it would be difficult to get any respectable man to undertake such work again, from my experience of what has taken place in the past, and because they have been threatened with suits. In such cases they have appealed to the Government, and very naturally, because it is from the Government that they receive their commissions.

Mr. BLAKE. According to the statement of the hon. member, it is all the more necessary that we should have the information, because he says the appeal has been made, and I suppose is to be granted, with reference to other places than Montreal. We were promised on Concurrence to have the information that would enable us to discuss this vote. We have no more than we had in Committee. I think, under the circumstances, that that the vote should stand. We are sorry that the Secretary of State is not here, but that is no reason why this vote should pass.

Mr. GAULT.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. As the hon. gentleman says, the vote should stand, because the information is in the hands of the Secretary of State, and we shall have it to-morrow.

Resolution allowed to stand.

On Resolution 234,

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Some information was to be given about this.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am very glad to be able to give the hon. gentleman information that will be quite satisfactory. When my hon. predecessor was in office, an arrangement was made by Mr. Brydges with Mr. Temple for a patent flanger for use on the Intercolonial Railway, for which the then Government paid him $4,500. The invention is one of such approved merit that it is also relied upon on the Grand Trunk Railway, for which it has been purchased for a large sum of money. When we undertook to operate the Canadian Pacific Railway, we also sent this flanger to be used on that road, for which a claim was made of $750, and it was finally settled for this $300.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 235,

Canals-Chargeable to Capital. St. Peter's Canal-To pay H. F. Perley, C.E., for four years' service, to 31st December, 1883, enlargement of the St. Peter's Canal $1,000 00

Mr. MACKENZIE. What is the reason for this vote? This is another case of an increase of salary by separate charges.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Not exactly that. The hon. gentleman will remember that when the St. Peter's canal was constructed—as it was under his administration—Mr. Perley had the supervision of this work, and was thoroughly acquainted with it. Since then, I have availed myself of hisservices in everything connected with the St. Peter's canal. He has been good enough, though not in my Department for he is now the Chief Engineer of the Public Works Department—to give me his services; and this vote is asked to pay him for duties performed outside of his duties as Chief Engineer of Public Works, and I am satisfied that under the peculiar circumstances it will not be regarded as an improper one.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 236,

Welland Canal—To meet payment of the balance of unpaid labourers' wages and board accounts in reJ. V. Browne & Co.'s abandoned contract. $2,436 08

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I was asked what had been done with the deposit which the contractor had been obliged to deposit with the Government. I am glad to be able to inform the House that the amount of work performed when Mr. Browne ran away and the amount of his deposit remaining, will be more than sufficient to discharge the entire payment of all the labourers' wages; but a question was raised by the auditors, and we were obliged to have the money voted by Parliament.

Mr. BLAKE. Of course, the vote indicates that the money in hand will not be enough.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The vote is asked because it was considered that we were not in a position to use the deposit. But the deposit will be sufficient, with the amount estimated impaired, to discharge the entire liabilities and leave something over.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 240,

Canals-Chargeable to Income.

Welland Canal

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The opinion of the Minister of Justice, concerning this question of damages to the cargo of the Jennie Graham, $19,624.74, was to have been laid on the Table.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This claim was made by Messrs. Mowat & McLennan, acting as solicitors for the insurance company, and they put forward a large number of English cases, which they considered entirely met the question of the liability of the Government to the insurance company, in a case in which negligence could be proven. This was brought forward in 1879, and has been the subject of discussion between the Department and the claimants from that time. An elaborate opinion was given on the subject by Mr. Lash, when acting as Deputy Minister of Justice, which opinion I hold in my hand. It was conceded a case which would warrant reference to arbitration; arbitrators, under that advice, went into the investigation and found the accident due to negligence on the part of the Government in the management of the canal, and they gave an award, of which this is the amount.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Why not have gone to the Exchequer Court, where it could have been treated legally?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I have not found the Exchequer Court much better than arbitrators.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I know a case where the court found there was $12,000 due to the Government, and the arbitrators found over $100,000 due to the contractors.

Mr. BLAKE. I have just read this opinion in a very cursory manner, and it seems to me to read different from what the hon. gentleman represents. As I read it, Mr. Lash states that the parties claiming compensation base their claims on the ground that the damage was sustained by reason of the negligence of the officers in charge of the canal, but that they state further they are advised they have no remedy under the Petition of Rights Act. This being admitted, he considers he is relieved from the necessity of expressing an opinion whether their claims could be enforced under the Petition of Rights Act. They, however, submit their claims as a question of justice and equity, and he proceeds to treat the case as between subject and subject. In this respect, the well settled law, he states, is, that where a canal is owned or worked by a company, or by an individual, who impose tolls, the common law imposes the duty on the proprietors or lessees to take reasonable care that the canal may be navigated without danger to life and property.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That is the point.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not think it is. Mr. Lash then proceeds to state that the question whether or not there has been negligence is a question of fact, to be determined on consideration of all the circumstances, and he does not understand his opinion to be asked on this question, as that is a question of fact and not of law. He sums up his opinion as follows:-First, there appeared to be no liability on the part of the Crown which could be enforced under the Petition of Rights Act; second, the claims having been sub-mitted to the decision of the Crown, it is for the Government to determine whether, under all the circumstances, any compensation should be made, and the authority of Parliament should be had before any payment should be made; third, if it be determined to make any compensation in the case of negligence, it will be necessary to investigate fully the circumstances of the accident, unless the Minister is prepared to come to a conclusion on the question of negligence; fourth, the legal right of the claimants to seek compensation in their own names may be doubted, and although he inclined to the opinion they possessed that that Mr. Lash suggested as right and proper in the case has right, they should be required to procure an assignment to them, from the owners of the cargo, of all claims. As far as I can understand this opinion-the only perusal I have made of it being this—it is that, firstly, there is no legal liability; and secondly, the law is stated as it would be between subject and subject, where a canal exists on which parties have a right to impose tolls, and the Government then has to determine, in the first place, whether they will or not adopt the proposition that compensation shall be payable in the case of negligence. If they determine this, then the question is, whether there was negligence, and the question of damage has to be investigated as a question of fact. The question which the Government had to determine was on what principle they would carry on the canal. There is a very wide difference between the control of a canal by the public, upon terms or tolls which we know are not compensating terms, and the control of a canal by a private party who works it at a profit. The circumstances are entirely different in this other respect also, that claims of a much more preposterous character are more liable to be established in the case of a Government working a canal, owing to the general current and drift of opinion against a Government in such matters, than in the case of private individuals. Mr. Lash suggests, should the Government adopt the principle that compensation should be made in case of negligence, that the matter should be referred to one or more arbitrators, to enquire into and report on the facts of the case. We have not before us the award of the arbitrators.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. It is here.

Mr. BLAKE. We have not it before us. We have not the evidence in the case. We do not know what the facts are, or whether from these facts a lawyer would draw the legal conclusion that there was negligence which would, as between subject and subject, have made the Government liable, because that is a mixed question of law and fact. Was there a report from the Minister of Justice or his Department upon this evidence, to the effect that it estab-lished a case of that description of negligence which would, if between subject and subject, make the owner at all liable? If there was not, there ought to have been, because it is quite clear that the arbitrators are not persons competent to form a conclusion on that subject. They can get at all the facts and make their finding, but after all, when they have got at the facts and made the finding, we have to see whether the negligence is of such a character as would, as between subject and subject, import a liability, and having done that, we have to see whether it is reasonable to apply the same rule to the Crown, working the canal not for a profit.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. There is an old maxim that common law is common sense, or if it is not, it ought to be; and I read the report of the Minister of Justice as establishing incontrovertibly the fact that, under the circumstances, he is relieved from the necessity of giving an opinion as to the legal claim. He sets out with that. In the next place, he states that he will deal with this as a question as between subject and subject, and he then clearly establishes, to my reading, the fact that a case is made out for investigation, and that it would be impossible to say what the liability was unless evidence was taken. He states clearly and distinctly that parties operating a canal and charging tolls for vessels and cargoes going through it, are bound to avoid wrecking those vessels through any negligence, and then he states that he is unable to give any opinion as to that question, because that is a question of fact and one that must be proved by evidence, and he finally says that, in case it is found that in consequence of the negligence of the Government or the officers of the Government this vessel was wrecked, Parliament should be asked to make the appropriation. Everything been followed exactly. The Government recognized the force of his statement that, as between subject and subject, negligence would involve responsibility; that that could only be settled by an investigation and the examination of witnesses under oath, and under these circumstances, the arbitrators, the officers of the Government, were instructed to take that testimony and report their finding to the Government. I will read the report of the arbitrators for the information of the hon. gentleman, and I think he will then see that we could not do less than put the item in the Estimates;

"And whereas the Anchor Marine Insurance Company, now known and designated as the Anchor insurance Company------"

Mr. DAVIES. Is the hon. gentleman reading the submission or the award?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am reading the award.

"hath preferred a claim against the Government of Canada for dramage to the cargo of the schooner Jennie Graham, on the 25th October, 1875, on account of said schooner Jennie Graham, on the 25th October, lock at Allanburg, through the alleged negligence of the officers in charge of the canal at this point, in this: that the schooner Jennie Graham, laden with a cargo of 21,060 bushels of barley, in attempting to enter the said lock, struck apon obstructions negligently left therein, and a hole was thereby made in her bottom so that she immediately sank."

And then they go on to say:

"Do adjudge and determine that the said Anchor Insurance Company be paid the sum of $12,514."

Mr. BLAKE. What is their finding as to wreckage?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I have stated their finding.

Mr. BLAKE. That is the recital of what the claim was.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. They find that it is due to negligence, and they find that "in attempting to enter the said lock she struck upon obstructions negligently left therein."

Mr. BLAKE. Is the hon. gentleman re-reading what he read before, or is he reading something new?

'Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am reading what I read be-

Mr. BLAKE. That is the statement of the claim, not the finding of the arbitrators.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. It is signed by Cowan, Compton & Simard. I will send it to the hon. gentleman, and he will find that it is a statement that it was caused by obstructions negligently left there, and they adjudged we should pay $12,000 for it.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The hon. gentleman. was also to have given us some special information as to the length of time which had elapsed.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I said this was preferred by Mowat McLennan, on behalf of the Anchor Insurance Company, in 1877, and has been the subject of discussion and controversy ever since.

Mr. MACK ENZIE. It is rather remarkable that the previous Government did not see that this opinion led to a favourable consideration of the case at all. I think I am right when I say that the Superintendent was not called before the arbitrators at all to give evidence. It was alleged that a piece of iron, or something of that sort, stuck in the bottom of the vessel, which made a hole and allowed the water to enter. The Superintendent had the chamber of the lock carefully dragged, and found nothing there, and so reported in his evidence, and gave very strong testimony to the effect.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. What period are you speaking of now?

Mr. MACK ENZIE. I am referring to the vessel. Sir Charles Tupper. Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Do you refer to the evidence given before the arbitrators in 198.??

Mr. MACKENZIE. No; I am told he was not called before the arbitrators at all.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Is he not in British Columbia?

Mr. MACKENZIE. He is, but British Columbia people can get here on business.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Whatever evidence was taken before would be submitted.

Mr. MACKENZIE. His evidence was most conclusive in the matter. I do not know what evidence they could have had stronger than his. He had the bottom carefully searched, and found nothing of the sort, and we found no ground upon which a claim could be entertained. But it was a sufficient reason for the hon. gentleman that the claim had been rejected by us.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not consider that it had been rejected at all.

Mr. BLAKE. It is obvious that the hon. gentleman has put this in the Estimates under a misapprehension, and I have no doubt he will withdraw it. He thought the arbitrators had found that this loss was occasioned by negligence. The award does not find that at all. What the hon. gentleman read himself, and read to the House as a statement of their finding, is merely a recital of what the claim of the company was:

"Whereas the Anchor Marine Insurance Company, now known and designated as the Anchor Iusurance Company, high preferred a claim against the Government of Canada for damage to the cargo of the schooner Jennie Graham, on the 25th October, 1865, on account of the schooner Jennie Graham, on the 25th October, 1865, on account of the schooner Jennie Graham, on the 25th October, 1866, on account of the schooner having sunk in the canal below the lock at Allanburg, through the alleged negligence of the officers in charge of the canal at this point, in this: that the schooner Jennie Graham, index with a compo $1,000 bushels of barley, in attempting to enter the said look, struck upon obstructions negligently left therein, and 'a hole was thereby made in her bottom, so that she immediately sank ; and whereas the Minister being the Head of the Department, having been unable to effect an amicable settlement with the company, hath referred the claim to Cowan, Compton and Simard; now therefore we, having 'fake upon ourselves the charge of the arbitration, &c., do hereby make and publish this our award, and adjudge and determine that the said Anchor Insurance Company be paid the sum of $12,514."

And I see the copy is centified by the hon. gentleman's biographer.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That is enough to settle it.

Mr. BLAKE. I think, if the award had been made by the hon. gentleman's biographer, we would have taken it with the same degree of pleasure as a certificate of the state of facts, as we take the biography. Unfortunately, it is only certified by him, and therefore we must consider it a little. There is therefore no finding by the arbitrators on the question of fact. They jump at a mixed conclusion of fact and law. Has the hon. gentleman read the evidence on which this report is based? I would like to know.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I might say, Mr. Speaker, that the Government dealt with this subject in my absence. They had the advantage of the presence of the Minister of Justice at the Council Board, and the subject was duly considered, and 'a report to Council adopted, deciding to put this item in the Estimates. I have given the hon. gentleman the evidence now, that the investigation took place under authority of the opinion of Mr. Lash; I have given him the fact that the arbitrators, after having the case referred to them, and with that opinion in their hands, adjudged and found payable this amount; and yet the hon. gentleman finds fault because there is not some roundabout, legal phraseology, which will cover two or three sheets of foolscap with what an ordinary person could put in half a dozen lines of plain English. The hon. gentleman wishes to raise the question that no finding has been had, that they did not find any negligence. They have recited the negligence, and they state, with the opinion of the Deputy Minister of Justice in their hands, that they could only find the Government liable, and that payment could only be required in case negligence was established.

Mr. BLAKE. Has the hon. gentleman got the evidence? Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I can obtain it.

Mr. BLAKE. I felt we ought to see the evidence. It is the clear the hon, gentleman has not read it. This quite clear the hon. gentleman has not read it. report was received at his office on the 13th of March, 1983, but I suppose he was then making preparations for his departure and did not see it. It was dealt with in his absence; therefore, he cannot say what occurred; but no member of the Government is able to say that the evidence itself was considered. It will be observed that the statement of the Deputy Minister is, that the evidence is conflicting-the evidence of the officers is conflicting. As far as one can judge from the Minister's statement, the evidence of the Chief Superintendent of the canal was not obtained, because the hon. gentleman said: "Isn't he in British Columbia?" There is no reason why his evidence was not obtained in this case.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I have no doubt it was obtained.

Mr. BLAKE. Then, I think we are not in a position to deal with this item

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I have brought all the papers the hon. gontleman has asked for; if he wants more, I will bring him more.

Mr, BLAKE. Very well; if the bon. gentleman will bring the papers that will satisfy me this vote ought to go, I will be delighted. Perhaps, at the same time, the hon. gentleman would inform us what has become of the officials who were found by the arbitrators to have been guilty of negligence ?- because, of course, if $26,000 damages has been caused by this gross negligence, some condign punishment must have been administered to those who wereguilty of it

.Mr. MACKENZIE. Can the hon. gentleman mention the names of the owners of the vessels?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The insurance company made a claim; the owners had not a claim. The claim is made by the insurance company, the cargoes were insured, and the company were compelled to pay; and having paid it, they made their claim upon the Government, so that the parties with whom we had to deal were the Anchor Insurance Company.

Mr. MACKENZIE. But I think you will find, in the Department, correspondence with the owners.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The correspondence placed in my hands was that of Mowat, McLennan & Downey, acting for the Anchor Insurance Company.

Mr. MACKENZIE. This particular case occurred in 1875; the Deputy's report was made in 1877. The hon. gentleman came into office in 1878, and he allowed this to remain for nearly five years before taking any action upon it, showing that he entertained a very similar opinion to my own, as to the morits of the case.

Resolution allowed to stand.

On Resolution 241,

To pay L. W. Marchand, advocate, for profes-sional services rendered 1857-58-59 in connec-tion with the settlement of the claims arising out of the construction of dams at the head of Beauharnois canal.....

Mr. MACKENZIE. If this claim is entertained at all, it is to be charged against the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario, for by arrangement with those Governments many years ago, it was understood no payment monid be made or fectory, but they were fully made: I read the report of recommended here until their assent was abtained. If you Council, and gave details.

make this payment without their assent, you cannot charge it to them. I wish to know whether the Government has communicated with them with respect to this item?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I presume not.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Then you cannot make a claim against the two Provinces for it and say the claim is a just one.

Sir CHARLES TUBPER. It has never been the custom with these small matters to make such communication, and if both Ontario and Quebec refused to ray this claim and it was found to be a just one, we are bound to pay it.

Mr. MACKENZIE. On the contrary, you are bound not to pay it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I beg the hon. gontleman's pardon. I say the Union Act put upon this Government the responsibility of paying all just debts due in relation to public works; if under the Union Act they were passed over to the control of this Parliament, and if Quebec and Ontario both refused to entertain the claim, and the parties estab-lished their claim against this Government, I tell the hon. gentleman that we would be obliged to pay it.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Then I have very little respect for the hon. gentleman's constitutional law if he says that. We are bound to pay acknowledged debts, but you have no right to adjudicate upon debts of the old Province of Canada.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. There is nothing about acknowledged debts in the Union Act. The hon gentleman is obliged to give an interpretation to the Act which it will not bear. There is nothing about acknowledged debts; it is debts, and debts are due whether they are acknowledged or refused. To say that debts mide payable by law shall be at the option of the persons owing the debts is, I think, adopting a line of argument which the hon. gentleman will find it difficult to sustain.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I do not think I will. If a party comes in and gratuitously offers to settle a dispute that he is not authorized to settle, will that be law?--and that is what the hon. gentleman is doing.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That is not the case.

Mr. MACKENZIE. That is precisely the case-there is no ground whatever for any other contention. We followed the principle out when I was in office, even with regard to the price of a map.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The enormous length of time which has elapsed since this occurred, renders it a very questionable claim indeed. These professional services were rendered twenty-five years ago. Now, no man could conduct his business on the principle the hon. gentleman is apparently laying down, of recognizing claims of this kind after a lapse of a quarter of a century without, so far as I can judge, the smallest means of checking these claims. We do not know how many days this gentleman seems to have been engaged; we do not know, in point of fact, anything about him, except that a claim of $1,200 is preferred by him. The gentleman is asking for the money, and after twenty-five years we give it. A very curious claim, indeed. I would like to hear from the First Minister about it, as a legal gentleman of eminence.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This was fully explained when the item passed.

SIT RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. No; it was not. Statements were made which were pronounced exceedingly unsatisfactory by everybody who speke about it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. They may have been unsatis-

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The hon. gentleman stated pretty much what I have stated. He said the other Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. day:

"The Minister states further, that his Department had no means of certifying to the number of days during which Mr. Marchand was engaged; yet the list of cases prepared by him agreed with the returns of the arbitrators."

And that was all.

Mr. BLAKE. I wish to make one observation and to withdraw one statement which I made when this matter was under discussion. I pointed out that the services were rendered in 1857-58-59, and that the hon. Minister read a paper which seemed to indicate that no claim was made prior to 1868. I pointed out that there was another interval, from 1868 to 1884, during which there had been no further application made, and I said that, so far as I knew this was the first instance I ever heard of in which a lawyer delayed fourteen years or more without asking payment of his bill, particularly when he had such an exceptionally good client as the Dominion of Canada. I am obliged to, withdraw that difficulty in the way of payment of the claim, as I have learned that this lawyer departed in 1868 to a region where bills of costs are not rendered. While I withdraw that difficulty in the way of the account being paid, I think it affords an insuperable objection to our paying this item, because it is proposed to pay L. W. Marchand, who is now in heaven.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. He is living.

Mr. BLAKE. If he is still alive, I want to know how it is that he waited fourteen years for payment.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The Minister of Railways said that both the Governments of Ontario and Quebec refused to pay the account. How is he aware of that?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I never said anything of the kind. I have not the slightest doubt either Government would pay it.

Mr. MACKENZIE. How do you know it is not paid?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The payment must be made here.

Mr. MACKENZIE. How does the hon. gentleman know it is a just debt?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. We have taken all the proper means to ascertain.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Did you refer to the Local Government?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The Local Government could not tell us anything about it. They have nothing to do with the Beauharnois canal.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The old Province of Canada had to do with it.

Mr. MILLS. Does the hon. gentleman know whether the claim has been assigned to any other party?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am not aware that such is the fact.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I suppose a claim for interest for twenty-five years will appear in the Estimates next Session, following precedents.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I hope not.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I understand a document of that character has been received, but we have not yet had time to look over it.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 270,

Miscellaneous.

To pay James Barry, for preparing tables of imports and exports of fish $28 00

What tables are these? Are they in the Mr. DAVIES. Minister's Report?

Mr. McLELAN. Yes; the report of last year. The tables were prepared and issued by the Commissioner last yearthat is, for the year ending the 30th of June, 1882.

Mr. DAVIES. Is Mr. Barry an officer of the Department?

Mr. McLELAN. No; he is an officer of the Customs Department, and the tables were prepared from the books of that Department.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 273,

To pay the account of the Hon. Boucher de la Bruère, publisher and proprietor of Le Courrier de St. Hyacinthe, for the printing of, and the type for, the Civil Service Lists, in French and English

$7,688 74

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. This is a most objectionable item. It is clear as daylight that $ 2,000 more than the work could have been done for is to be paid to this gentleman for the type and the printing of these lists. I say that although the amount is not a very large one, this is about as gross a job as ever was prepetrated for the benefit of a supporter of the Government.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 277.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Where is this new type?

Mr. CARON. I believe it is in the Secretary of State's office.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Is the printing going on there?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I understand that this type is in the hands of the printers, who are now doing the work. When that work is done, the type will be put into the hands of the Government, and under the care of a proper officer.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 288,

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The Minister was to state generally what that was for.

Mr. McLELAN. There was a balance on the year previous of $7,000, which accounts for the difference the hon. gentleman found between the vote of this year and that of 1885. The remainder is for the increases detailed in the vote for 1885.

Resolution concurred in.

On Resolution 49.

.....$526,375 00 Immigration

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I beg to point out to the House, that with respect to the immigration statistics that have been furnished to us, there are two or three things mont. In the first place, the Department have not contradicted, nor do I see how it is possible that they can contradict the evidence deduced from the Census of 1871 and 1881, which go to show that of the 340,000 immigrants, or thereabouts, who came into Canada in those ten years, barely one-fourth of the number-90,000 in round numbers-have remained in Canada. Neither have the officers of the Department brought forward, as yet, any sort of evidence in contradiction of the statement-which appears to be perfectly clear from the Census-that the total population of Canada, wholly apart from the question of additional immigrants settling in the country, has fallen considerably below the natural increase during those ten years. Nor have they dealt with the other fact, which also appears from the statistics of Ontario, that there has been an enormous reduction, taking into account the natural increase of population, in Ontario itself. Now, Sir, the other evening I called to the attention of the Minister in charge of the Department that, as was perfectly apparent from the returns of the Department, the strong presumption was that those people who have come in since 1881 cannot have stayed in Canada, but that even admitting, as is physically possible, though very improbable, that they did stay in Canada, then two things have occurred : In the first place, a very large additional displacement of our own people has taken place, and in the next place, there must have been a very large settlement in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, which nobody has heretofore claimed. Sir, I am not going to detain the House on this subject. But I simply point out further, that if the hon. gentleman's figures are correct--that 112,000 immigrants came in in 1882, and 130,000 in 1883-the equally strong presumption is, that the vast majority of these people have left this country and are not to be found here. I will merely content myself, on the present occasion, with making that statement.

SECOND READING.

The following Bill was read the second time :--

Bill (No. 139) respecting the London Life Insurance Company. - (Mr. Beaty.)

SUPPLY-PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY moved that the House again resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I am sorry to have to ask the attention of the House at this late hoar, but this is the first opportunity I have had since the publication in the Globe newspaper of an article which reflects on myself, not only as a private individual, but as a member of this House and a Minister of the Crown. If the matter referred to me only as a private individual, I might, as I have done many times before, when attacks have been made against me in the press, have passed them without calling the attention of the House to the matter, but 1 consider that my honour is not my property alone in the position I occupy. It is the property of my party; it is the property of this House; it is the property of the public at large; and therefore, when my honour is attacked in the way it has been, it is my duty to explain to the House how the matter stands. Of course, of the writer of that article or the writers of the Globe newspaper, I shall say nothing. I leave them and their articles to be appreciated as they should be by the public and this House; but, Mr. Speaker, in this correspondence from Ottawa, to which I refer, in the Globe newspaper and in an editorial in that paper also, it is stated that last year I received from my friends a testimonial which, of course, had nothing to do with this House and which could be presented to me as called for for these buildings. The tenders having been others have been presented at different periods to other received, were as follows. There were eight of them re-154 public men. But the articles go further; they say that con tributors to that fund or testimonial were contractors or other parties having to deal with my Department, and that their contributions to that testimonial have affected my in-dependence as the Head of my Department, and have induced me to decide cases against justice and against my duty as a Minister of the Crown. I feel it my duty to call the attention of the House to the different cases in relation to which these charges have been brought against me. I shall be very short, because I do not want to delay the business of the House, but I must clear myself of these accusations; I must show to the House and the country that they are without foundation. The first case brought against me is that of Mr. James Goodwin, whose claim was settled by my Department. Mr. Goodwin was a contractor for the wall surrounding this building, and the contractor's claim, after he had been paid for this work according to his contract, amounted to $9,500. That claim he made in 1879, but having other contracts to perform and having contented himself with making the claim without giving the details, his claim had to romain over until he could send in the details. He chose to send them in only two years atterwards, in 1881, and his claim was then estimated by the officers of my Department. The Chief Architect states in his report :

"That the construction of the work was attended with many difficultios unforescen at the time of tondering; that the specification called for excavation to an average depth of five feet: that therefore the excava-tion below that depth should be considered extra and the contractor tion below that depth should be considered extra and the contractor paid therefor at increased rates, as is the usual practice and as wis the principle recognized by the Royal Commission appointed, in 1872, to report on the works connected with the Ottawa Public Building. The amount allowed Mr. Goodwin was arrived at as follows:--""Additional rock excavation below five feet to be allowed at $1 a yard, previously returned at $1.37 a yard, or 1,517 yards at $1.63 a yard, $2,521.65; additional excavation in clay to be allowed at $1 a yard, previously returned at 37c. a yard, or 1,675 yards at 63c., $1.055.25; then the pumping, sheet pilling, scaffolding and staging, $700, making a total of $4,276.96. Add to that the balance due on the estimate for his contract, $1,082.60, and you have a total of $5,359.45, allowed him on his claim of $9,500.""

This I reported to Council, and Council adopted the claim. It was put in the Estimates; it was discussed in Parliament and passed. That is the claim of Mr. Goodwin, and it was a claim respecting which, any one who had it before him, would have done what was done in this case and have allowed it. I wish to show by this that there was nothing exceptional in this case, but that it was treated as all others have been treated that have come before the Depart. mont. The second case is that of Mr. Dunsmuir. Mr. Dunsmuir never had anything to do with my Department. He never had a dollar from my Department. He never had any deal-ings with my Department; and, if to-day he has anything to do with the railway in British Columbia, it is the action, not of my Department-it is the action of the whole Government, it is the action of Parliament, it is the action of the British Columbia Government and Legislature, and therefore I do not see how, if Mr. Dunsmuir has contributed to that testimonial, which I do not know, that could have affected this contract of Mr. Dunsmuir, with which I have had nothing to do except as a Minister of the Crown, assenting to the proposal which was laid before Parliament and sanctioned by this House. The third case is that of Mr. Charlebois, the contractor for this building on Wellington street. Well, I see to-day in the papers-though, of course, I could not say whether it was the case or not, because I do not know the names of those parties who were kind enough to contribute to that testimonial; the list was never shown to me, and therefore I donot know the contributors-I see in the papers a statement which is evidently coming from that gentleman, in which he says that he never contributed to the fund. At all events, what is the case about Mr. Charlebois? Public tonders were ceived. Mr. A. Charlebois was the lowest by far, and a report was accordingly made by me to Council, and Council passed an Order in Council assenting to the tender of Mr. Charlebois, and Mr. Charlebois has had the contract. Therefore, this is another of those cases in which the contributions to that testimonial must have affected this decision ! Well, I leave this also in the hands of the House to say whether there is any foundation for that accusation. There is then another name brought forward, that of Mr. Davis. Mr. Davis was not and has not been a contractor of my Department since I have been there in 1878, and therefore that is another of those charges without any foundation whatever. The other charge is that Mr. H. J. Morgan, the Chief Clerk in the Department of the Secretary of State, has contributed $200 to that fund, and that in consequence of that I gave him a promotion when I was acting Secretary of State, whilst the present Secretary of State was away last year, and that therefore the subscription of Mr. Morgan must have affected my action in that case. First, I am not aware whether Mr. Morgan has subscribed or not. I know nothing about that. And secondly, Mr. Morgan was not promoted or appointed whilst I was acting Secretary of State, but was appointed on the recommendation of the present Secretary of State. The report is dated 30th May, 1883, signed J. A. Chapleau, Secretary of State, and is as follows :-

"The undersigned has the honour to recomment to the Privy Council that Mr. H. J. Morgan, now Keeper of Records, and Chief Clerk in the Department of the Socretary of State, be appointed to the office of Chief Clerk in the Correspondence Branch of the Department, in the room of Mr. Grant Powell, appointed Under Secretary of State, at his present rate of salary."

Therefore, that is another of these baseless accusations brought by that correspondent, and I am sorry to say, endorsed by the editorial staff of the Globe. I should not have been treated so by the organ of the great Reform party of Ontario. Though I have always been an opponent of theirs, I should have been treated fairly. They should have con-sidered my reputation as a public man the property, not only of my party, but of their own, of the whole people; and therefore, I should not have been treated so, and I shall be very much surprised if the leader of the Opposition sanctions these attacks on the leading men on this side of the House, I am surprised that this should have been done after the great invitations and approaches made quite lately again by that paper, to the people of the Province of Quebec, those whom I am specially supposed to lead in my Province, that fair treatment they should have, and would have, from that paper and its friends; and I have been selected, no doubt, because I am the leader of these men, and their leader in my Province, to be treated in that way, and to have my reputation destroyed if they could do it. I must say that, after having been twenty-seven years a member of Parliament, after having been appointed a Minister of the Crown twenty years ago, and having filled an office as Minister of the Crown for sixte:n years, after having had millions and millions of dollars passing through my hands in my official capacity, and not a word having been said against the disposition of that money, the treatment I have received at the hands of these men is one that must be condemned all through this country and by this House. I must apologize to the House if I show some feeling in this matter. It is because I feel that, ofter having consecrated the best years of my life to my country, I should have had better treatment on the part of that paper and its friends.

The House then again resolved itself into Committee of Sapply.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What is all this $10,000 for?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. For departmental printing.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIHHT. We can read that without the hon. gentleman informing us. We want to know why?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It is an estimate of what will be required for the printing of the Department. The printing is enormous, of every kind.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Does the hon. gentleman mean that the reports require this additional sum?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Oh, no; there is printing of every kind; there is supplying the officers with books, papers, and paper; maps, plans, matters of that kind.

Mr. MILLS. I observe in the expenditure made last year there are twenty or thirty newspapers which received patronage for advertising. It seems a large amount.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon. gentleman has been bullying me a good deal for not offering everything to public tender, and those offers must be advertised, and, if advertised, must be advertised somewhat extensively. If we are going to sell lands or offer timber limits or anything of that kind, we must advertise in the different papers. I have no doubt the hon. gentleman knows the value of advertising to merchants or sellers in the disposal of any article. The Government does not sell a patent article, or, though it is a patent article in one sense, it is not a quack article. Then there are the mining regulations, and the land regulations, if for sale, &c., and all that costs money.

Mr. BLAKE. An additional amount of $10,000 for departmental printing in one lot is rather alarming, and I would like to know how it compares with previous years. Advertising is one thing—I do not understand this vote includes advertising. I think there must have been a considerable expenditure in maps; but this is a supplementary estimate for the financial year ending 30th June, 1885; therefore we have had probably as expensive a distribution of maps in former years. I think the hon. gentleman ought to have been supplied by the Minister of the Interior with more information on the subject of this vote than he has communicated to us.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I take it that the votes which I see paid in 1833 under the head of subscriptions to, and advertisements in, newspapers, and of printing, binding, and stationery, represent the total expenditure that was required for this purpose by the Department in 1833?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I cannot tell.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Because, if that be the case in 1883, which was in all human likelihood as expensive a year as this, all that was required was about $9,000.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Besides the printing I have mentioned, every township, as it is surveyed, is lithographed by a special process, which is carried on in the Department itself. The expense has been greatly increased by that operation, but the speed has also been immensely increased. Formerly, we had this done under contract by Burland & Co., I think, at not more than half the expense. Now, everything is done by a new process. It does not look so well, but the map is substantially as good as if done by a regular engraver. Of course, they are printed in large quantities, and sent to agents where the land is open, and wherever else they are required. That is a very large item of itself.

Sir RICHARDCARTWRIGHT. This ought to be added to contingencies in reality.

COMMONS DEBATES.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It is too large an item to put in the ordinary contingencies of the Department.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Where would the hongentleman put it, then ?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I will tell the hon. gen tleman before the Committee rises.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The increase in the number of clorks is nocessitated by an enormous increase in the work. Though we have a very industrious, active, and zealous set of officers, they were not able to do all the work, so much so that one or two complained that they could not keep up with the work. One of the most valuable officers, Mr. Sinclair, stated he could not remain unless he got assistance. There is a very much larger amount of work done in British Columbia, as the Indians are brought down on the reserves, and correspondence with the different agonts has largely increased. Settling them in bands under special agents has also increased the work. I can assure the hon. gentleman that the Department is not overmanned.

301. Department of Marine and Fisheries-To provide for new appointments and other experses in connection with the new pro- posed division of this Departmen ⁺ ,	$1,000 00
	ψ.,

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The hon, gentleman will perhaps explain this vote.

Mr. McLELAN. The work of the Department has grown so much since it was first organized that it is impossible for one Deputy Head to properly manage both the Marine and Fisheries Branches. The Marine Branch of itself has so largely increased that it is quite sufficient for one man. On the organization of that Department, we had about 227 lighthouses in charge; now the number has grown to 600. The baoy service has very nearly trebled, and six or seven steamers have been added to the service. The harbour police at Montreal and Quebec have been added, which take a good deal of attention. Among other subjects may be mentioned the registration of shipping, which has been transferred from the Customs De partment; examination of masters and mates; and the moteorological service, which has grown to very large proportions and requires a great deal of cure; collection of dues for wharves and piers; the shipping of seamen; inspection of steamboats and of machinery and hulls; examination of ongines, life saving apparatus and the steamboat service at not calculate by any means that this whole sum, or any Prince Edward Island. These matters have become as much considerable portion of it, will be an increased expenditure.

as it is possible for one Deputy Hoad to look after, however efficient he may be. The fishery branch is of very great importance and magnitule in this country. Returns show a value of $17,000,000 as the result of the fisheries; but outside of this, there is a large quantity of fish for home consumption which does not come within the returns. That is a branch of the service in connection with which we have about 600 officers employed, and considering the amount of work thrown on the Daputy Head and the importance of the fishery branch, I thought it was necessary, in the interest of the fishery branch, that it should be made a separate branch. independent of the other branch of the Department, and under the charge of a Deputy Head. It is with a view mainly of improving the efficiency of the fishery branch of the service that I desire to make the division and to reorganize that branch of the Department.

Mr. AMYOT. Does this itom cover $1,000 for a marine school in Quebec, which is so much desire I by all mariners in that Province?

Mr. McLELAN. This item does not do so. But there is an examiner of masters and mates now in Quebec, as there is a similar officer in other Provinces, under the pay of the Department, and I think he is giving every satisfaction there. It will depend on circumstances how long we may find it necessary to continue him in that Province. That gentleman who is in Quebec was employed some years ago in teaching a school of that kind; he gave great satisfaction, and he is giving satisfaction now.

Mr. AMYOT. That gontleman is employed for the examination of mariners, and earns from $5.) to $75 a year. That is not sufficient to keep up a school. The Local Government furnishes the house and materials, and only a salary of $1,00) a year is required from the Dominion Government. We are told that in other Provinces schools are maintained without such assistance. This is because there are more mariners there; Quebec has not a sufficient number. As the law provides that masters and mates must have certificates, the Government must place them in a position to obtain the necessary training. If the Government thinks that $1,000 is too much to pay, in order to secure a good body of mariners, then I do not see that we are in a position to give very much money for any other object. We are sometimes told that this does not belong to the Federal Government. It belongs as much to it as do militia matters. It is never claimed that the Local Government should have to pay for military instruction; and they should not have to pay for naval instruction. I deeply regret that the Government do not think fit to yield to the prayers addressed to Parliament on this subject. I still insist on pressing this matter, and I hope the Government will yield on the point

Mr. DAVIES. The hon, gentleman has not given the information sought. The hon gentleman asks for $4,000 to provide for expenditures in connection with the proposed division of his Department. Now, the hon. gentleman has a right to explain to the Committee what new appointments are to be made, what salaries are to be attached to those appointments, and what special work is to be done by the appointees, as well as what other expenses in connection with the Department he proposes to ask for.

Mr. McLELAN. As I said to the hon. gentleman, the proposition is to appoint another Deputy Head over the Fisheries Branch, with a salary of $3,200.

Mr. BLAKE. Is that to be in lieu of the Commissioner?

Mr. McLELAN. I expect to make such arrangements with regard to the Commissioner and the inspectors that there will be a considerable saving in this respect, and I do not calculate by any means that this whole sum, or any

Mr. BLAKE. Then, the hon. gentleman will be able to reduce the other votes?

Mr. McLELAN, Some of the others will not be used.

Mr. BLAKE. But you should reduce them.

Mr. McLELAN. I have not been able to perfect the scheme, so as to give all the details. Of this sum of $4,000, $3,200 will be for the Deputy Head, and I hope that in the re-arrangement the remainder, or perhaps more than the remainder, will be saved.

Mr. DAVIES. What is this $800 for?

Mr. McLELAN. We will probably require some additional expenditure in the reorganization of that branch.

Mr. DAVIES. Do you propose to appoint another clerk?

Mr. McLELAN. That will depend altogether on the amount of work thrown upon the Department. There are now a number of men engaged temporarily as extra hands, and I think it is better that as many as possible of those should be put on the permanent staff. The addition of the work in connection with the bounties and other extra work has necessitated the employment of these extra men, but I should like to get that branch of the Department in such a state that there would be very little necessity for employing these extra hands.

Mr. DAVIES. But the hon. gentleman asks for a specific sum of $4,000, and 1 assume he has made up his mind exactly as to what appointments will be required, and that he has not fixed upon this scheme without due considera-tion, or in a haphazard manner. I think, therefore, he should tell us for what this $800 shall be required.

Mr. McLELAN. As I told the hon. gentleman, the scheme has not been perfected, so that I cannot give him all the details, to the last dollar. I told him that the largest portion of it was necessary for a Deputy Head. We expect to make a saving in connection with the commissionership and some of the superintendents and inspectors, in connection with the outside service. But this $800 is asked in case it is found necessary to make some appointments, or to put some on permanently who are now temporarily employed, or to make some increases of salary. All the chief clerks are occupied in the Marine Department mainly, while the clerks in the Fishery Branch have the lowest salaries of any in the Department.

Mr. BLAKE. What is the Commissioner's salary?

Mr. McLELAN. $2,400.

Mr. BLAKE. I think the House should know, before it is asked to pass this vote, what the hon. gentleman's plans are. Presumably, this matter has been present in his attention for some time, and I suppose the commissionership is vacant.

Mr. McLELAN. Yes.

Mr. BLAKE. In consequence of the retirement of Mr. Whiteher, who has heretofore practically performed the duties of Deputy Head, and has been in charge of that branch of the Department. Now he proposes to dignify branch of the Department. Now he proposes to dignify that office with the title of Deputy Head, to give an equal rank, an equal facility of access to the Minister with the Deputy Head of the other branch. But I do not conceive that it is at all fitting to establish two officers, practically of the first class, for the Fisheries Branch-a Deputy and a Commissioner; and I think it was the hon. gentleman's duty, when he was about to reorganize his Department, to have laid down a scheme before asking for the vote-not perhaps is no reason why that should not be done, but certainly no doubt, as my hon. friend beside me has said, that the as to the capital expenses of the reorganization: moment you erect any of these services into a separate first of all, as to the deputy headship, and, branch, every man in it expects and contrives to get a large secondly, as to the commissionership. For my part, I increase of salary in a short time, and it is practically made Mr. MCLELAN. as to the minor details, the smaller clerkships, though there do not see why there should be a commissionership at all. I do not understand the object of having both officers. I believe, myself, that the hon. gentleman might have a firstclass clerk under his Deputy, but no officer of the character of a Commissioner, and therefore, I think the hon. gentleman should have brought down such a scheme with regard to this reorganization as would be proper, showing the necessity for appointing a Deputy Head, if he intended appointing one, and giving the salary of a Deputy Head, and show-ing, as I believe, that there is no longer any reason for keeping up the commissionership.

Mr. McLELAN. The Commissioner was not appointed under the Act, but by Order in Council. It is merely a title.

Mr. BLAKE. But the hon. gentleman says he proposes to reduce the Commissioner's salary-indicates that he intends to keep up that office, though he hopes to make the salary less. I say abolish the office altogether, and if you want to have a Deputy Head have a first-class clerk under him if it is necessary. The hon. gentleman makes another observation, pregnant with significance, in connection with the reorganization. He says the high class clerks in his Department at this moment are mostly in the Marine Branch, and the low class in the Fisheries Branch. But how long does he suppose the low class clerks will be in the Fisheries Branch if he makes it a separate branch, with a Deputy Head. There will be what always has been in such cases-a comparison of the two branches, a comparison of each branch with the other, and with other Departments, and it will be pointed that these clerks are away down in the third-class, though they are running this important branch of the Department. With a Deputy Head over them, whose dignity requires a certain number of highly paid high class clorks, the hon. gentleman will find that whatever takes place this year, next year at any rate, this will involve a considerable increase in expense. He says that the present Deputy is a very efficient officer, but he is not able to overtake the work. I presume it was because he was not able to overtake all the work of the Department that this exceptional arrangement of appointing a Commissioner of Fisheries was made-a person who should occupy a higher position than that of an ordinary clerk, who would have greater responsibility, and would probably be in more immediate communication with the Minister. I am afraid that the plan the Minister is about to adopt will result in a very considerable increase in the expense of the Department as soon as he brings into practice that theoretical organization of the Department which he has not yet worked out, and which, I think, he ought to have worked out before he asked us to pass this voto.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I cannot for the life of me see why the Deputy Head should be held to be necessary for the purpose of attending to the fisheries alone. The total sum we vote for that service is $105,000; and, with all respect to the objects of the hon. gentleman-which are important enough-I do not see that we are called upon to have, for administering that amount, a distinct branch, which will sooner or later cost $15,000. You have a res-ponsible officer at $2,500; he will have under him probably a couple of chief clerks; they will have other clerks under them, and so it will go on until the expenditure at headquarters will be out of all proportion to the disbursements. The hon. gentleman did not state to us that Mr. Whitcher had found any great difficulty in administering this Department when he was Commissioner of Fisheries. I must say that I think it is very unfortunate that the hon. gentleman has been led to erect this into a branch by itself. There is an excuse for giving maximum salaries to three or four men whose services otherwise would not get them. I am afraid it is going to be a very injurious vote.

Mr. DAVIES. The hon. Minister's reasons for this change in the Department are not good. He does not allege that the business of the Fisheries Branch, or that the responsibility of the head of that branch has increased, but that the Marine Branch has had a lot of extra business in the last few years. That may or may not be so; I believe it is to some extent; but the House has not heard that the Deputy Head of that Department complains that he has more responsibility than he is capable of assuming. For extra work extra clerks are generally appointed. One Deputy is enough for the Marine Branch, and the fact of increased work in the Marine Branch is no reason for the appointment of a Head in the Fisheries Branch. The question is: Is the work in that branch so increased, or is the expenditure so great, as to justify this increased expenditure? The hon, gentleman speaks of the increased number of lighthouses built during the last few years; but, if I am correctly informed, the building of these is not now in his Department.

Mr. McLELAN. It is.

Mr. DAVIES. I understood that the construction of these lighthouses was carried out by the Public Works Department.

Mr. PAINT. No; only when they are above $10,000.

Mr. DAVIES. Whether they are or not, the increase is in the Marine Branch, and not in the Fisheries Branch. I think a little reflection will show the Committee that so far from there being any increased work in that particular branch, it has decreased and it will continue to decrease. The hon. gentleman knows that a great part of the work in the Fisheries Department has consisted of the granting of licenses for fishing in rivers and the supervising of licenses. But he knows that by a recent decision of the Supreme Court, the whole of that work has been taken away from his Department, and the licenses that used to be issued by his Department and the fees returned from them, have ceased. Therefore, the reason for an increase does not exist, and will not exist in the future. With regard to the fish hatcheries, which the hon. gentleman says are increasing, I think he must acknowledge, from the debate that took place the other night, that that system is at least a tentative one. He has not yet arrived at the conclusion that the fish hatchorics are a success.

Mr. McLELAN. Yes.

Mr. DAVIES. Have the Government arrived at that conclusion?

Mr. McLELAN. Yes.

Mr. DAVIES. Well, all I have to tell him is, that a gentleman who occupies at least as high a position as he does in the Government-the Minister of Justico-has announced the very contrary. He has proclaimed, not what I have said, that the hatchery scheme is a tentative one, but that it is a failure. The hon. Minister of Marine was in England last year, and I received a pamphlet from his Department the other day about "Canada at the great International Fisheries Exhibition." I found from this pamphlet that the hon. gentleman presided at a conference held on July 2nd, 1883, at which a Mr. Joncas, who, I believe, is an official under the hon. gentleman, made the statement that these fish hatcheries were a success. This is his language :-

"Officers have been appointed to enforce the law; the coasts and rivers are well protected; from the eleven fish breeding establishments we are under the control of the Government, millions of young salmon are distributed yearly in our rivers, and we have every cause to hope that in a few years our rivers will be replenished, and we shall be again able to procure and send to foreign markets, at moderate prices, this delicious fish which rarks so highly smongst the luxuries of the table." Says: "Canada has eleven Government fish hatcheries now in operation, cight of which are occupied in hatching salmon eggs only, besides two private ones, which also hatch the true salmon; two are employed in hatching salmon, whitefish and trout eggs, and one hatches whitefish and pike-perch. The earliest of these hatcheries has been in operation tor about fifteen years, and the latest for two years; the principal ones

And then are printed in italics, so as to call attention to them, the following sentences :-

"This view is fully borne out by the official returns of our inspectors of fisheries and overseers, whose returns for the year 1852 give a most satisfactory account of the greatly increased number of salmon in the rivers and coast fisheries of the Dominion. Specially is this noticed in the rivers where young fry have been distributed from the batcheries. I am happy to say that letters addressed to me from Canada last week, state that the catch of salmon this season will be, according to all appearances, superior again."

Now, this was mentioned with the hon. gentleman's approva and published by him.

Mr. McLELAN. Not published by him.

Mr. DAVIES. I understand that this is published by his Department. It is a report of what took place. It says that the hop. Mr. McLelan, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, occupied the Chair, and the following remarks were made by L. Z. Joneas. I deny that the statements made there are borne out by these official returns. I challenged the hon. Minister the other night to prove his statements. The Committee had a right to hear from him and to have some justification of these statements, but the hon. gentleman has never given us any justification of them; he gave us some general information; he said he thought the hatchery was a success, but when asked to show by the official returns a verification of this statement, he did not do so. That statement was made the 2nd July, 1883, and at the very time the hon. Minister of Justice was paying a visit to the other end of the Dominion, and from the language he used there, I presume he had formed an opinion on this I find him reported in the Evening Post of the 3rd point. August, 1883, to have said :-

"Sir Alexander Campbell said the experiments in artificial fish hatching east have been to far unsuccessful, and he could not hold out much encourag ment of further experiments being made in the Pre-vince."

To show the Committee that was no haphazard statement, I will call its attention to a speech made by him the very next day before the Board of Trade, and reported in the British Colonist :

"Sir Alexander Campbell explained to the Board of Trade, as a reasou for not expending the money voted by Parliament for a fish hatchery iu British Columbia, that the establishment of fish hatcheries was of questionable utility. It was undecided in the last whether the quan-tuty of fish was increased or not by artificial hatching."

On the 15th of August, he is reported in the Weekly Stan. dard to have said :

"Relative to fish hatcheries, Sir A. Campbell said that the experience of the past had proved that they were not a success in the Dominion.

Here we have the hon. Minister of Justice in British Columbia making, day after day, statements that the fish hatcheries, for which we vote from $30,000 to $40,000 every year, aro a failure. We have more than that; we have a gentleman who has occupied the position of Commissioner of Fisheries for the last twenty years, publishing an open letter last year at this vory time, in which he collates the statistics that were published in the Census returns and shows from those statistics that Sir Alexander Campbell's conclusions are correct. The hon. gentleman, when I referred to this in a general way the other day, said something about Mr. Whitcher's motives. What Mr. Whitcher's motives may be I do not care; I understand he committed a breach of duty in publishing the letter at all. I do not defend the publication of the letter in any way; I am only concerned with the statistics he published as taken from the Census returns, and those show, so far from this experiment having been a success, it has been a failure. I will read what he to date is $259,400. "The whole number of fish bred and distributed from 1863 to 1831 is about one hundred and five millions, of which about twenty and a-half millions were salmon, and about sixty-nine and a-half millions were whitefish. "The total catch of these two kinds of fish in the five Provinces where hatcheries exist is given in the Census returns as follows :-

> 1831. 1871. Salmon. 3.263.200 lbs. 4,754,800 lbs. Whitefi h 4,603,400 lbs. 7,849,200 lbs.

" This difference is 17 per cent, under the natural increase during the "This difference is 17 per cent, under the natural increase during the decade next preceding. Considering the increased numbers of fisher-men and amount of netting in the last ten years, and the actual yield from new places and districts far removed from areas of the deposit of fry from the hatcheries, the general evidence of this exhibit is not thus far assuring of commercial benefit. Unfortunately the proof in special comparative instances is even less encouraging. Taking, for example, the two hatcheries which represent the leading fish products of the maritume and lacustrine sections of Canada raised in their precincts, salmon and whitefish, namely, the Bedford Basin Salmon Hatchery, at the sea-coast of Nova Scotia, near Halifax, and the Sandwich Whitefish Hatchery, between the great lakes, in Ontario, as easterly and westerly exemplers. Both of these hatcheries were started about the same time, and have been some seven years in operation. There is an ample margin exemplers. Both of these hatheries were started about the same time, and have been some seven years in operation. There is an ample margin of time for realization; and to be perfectly sure, I reckon, along with the salmon fry at Bedford, those hatheries the sydney, Cape Breton. also in Nova Scotia, and I add to the whitefish hatch reported at Sandwich the hatch returned from Newcastle, Ontario. The number of salmon fry distributed was 6,250,000. The catch of salmon in that Province, by the Census of 1871, was 843,600 lbs.; and for 1831 it was 316,600 lbs., the decrease in ten years being over 50 per cent., notwithstanding other causes which should improve the yield, such as protection, fi hways, &c., &c. The young whitefish distributed in Ontario, between 1876 and 1881, numbered 65,700,000. The catch of whitefish in the same Province, by the Census of 1871, was 4,289,000 lbs.; and by that of 1881 it was 7,660,200 lbs. This improvement in the whitefish may be due in a measure to artificial hatching, but is most noticeable in localities depen-dent entirely on natural sources; and it is indisputible that the yearly catch. from 1875 to 1>81, in the immediate vicinity of the Sandwich Hatchery, has declined. ""The tates of the salmon fi how is no starting and which due and the sandwich the Hatchery, has declined.

"The state of the salmon fishery in Nova Scotia is undoubtedly against "The state of the salmon fishery in Nova Scotia is undoubtedly against "3. But the weakest of all is the case where we ought to be strongest— at the parent institution, from which 5,600,000 young salmon have been distributed. The catch of salmon in Ontario, by the Census of 1871, was 17,800 lbs.; and by the Census of 1881 it was nil. The Superinten-dent's report for 1881 states that, so far as returns go, it is a complete failure. This settles the point that absolutely nothing has resulted in fourteen successive years from the repeated deposit, prolific incubation, and annual distribution of salmon at the parent establishment. "If, then, as it appears, the economic results from this large outlay and enormous distribution of salmon and whitefish, in two exemplary instances on the sea coast and inland waters of Canada, within the period of ten years are, as the official returns establish, comparatively maignificant, is it not fair to assume and wise to acknowledge that the tume has arrived to ask ourselves, if there may not be something want-time has arrived to ask ourselves, if there may not be something want-ing perhaps in our nursing and rearing of the broods, which want defeats fruition from the tried methods of impregnation and incubation that have thus far, from ova to fry, proven remarkably successful?"

Mr. DALY. Does the hon. gentleman maintain that the fish hatcheries are not doing good?

Mr. DAVIE3. I am trying to establish, from the best evidenco.

Mr. DALY. Do you confirm these statements?

Mr. DAVIES. I am reading the evilence.

Mr. DALY. Do you concur in it?

Mr. DAVIES. Would the hon. gentleman like me to read the opinion, on the point, of two hon. Senators who ropresent Halifax?

Mr. DALY. What is your opinion?

Mr. DAVIES. Perhaps you will allow me to give the evidence on which I base my opinion before I give my opinion. The gentleman who was Commissioner of Fisheries for twenty years based his opinion on certain statistics drawn from the Census return, and if these returns are correct, the only conclusion to be reached is that the fish hatcheries are absolute failures. That is the official report on which he bases his conclusions. I give you, in addition to that, the opinion of Sir Alexander Campbell, Minister of Justice, who, I presume, has had access to these returns and other data, and whose authority and opinion is stronger even than that of the ex-Commissioner of Fisheries. ments of the Minister had reference to the Marine Branch have existed since 1873. The entire cost of these public establishments I give you, on the other hand, the opinion expressed by Mr. Joneas, an opinion based, as he says, on the returns of 1832, which I have examined, and which I say do not support his opinion. I say the statistics to which he refers point to a conclusion exactly the opposite of that which he drew and submitted to the conference in England. The conclusion I come to is that at the most it is a more experiment, the success of which is far from proved and is more than doubtful; and if the hon. gentleman wishes to have the opinion of those who are more experienced than myself, if he will turn to the Senate debate -

Mr. DAVIES.

Mr. DALY. I have looked at it already.

Mr. DAVIES. He will find that both hon. gontleman from Halifax expressed as strong an opinion as I have, if not a stronger one. The junior member, Mr. Almon, expressed a much stronger one, and pronounced it a failure, and the Senator from Lunenburg went, I think, as far. S> far from the evidence before the Committee justifying us in launching out in further expenditure in that branch, it points to our, as prudent mon, curtailling it. At any rate, if it is desirable to increase the expenditure, let the expenditure not be increased in the direction of appointing new and unnecessary officials at Ottawa, but let it be increased if necessary at all, in developing still further your lish inteh-eries and testing wherein the cause of the failure lies. Failure there has been. It may be in the mode in which you have attempted to carry out the fish hatchery system. Some say you do not put them far enough up the rivers. That may be the case or it may not. The hon. gentleman might be justified in asking a vote to build a new hatchery on another system, to build one further up the river, to try another experiment, but he is not justified, in the face of the information we have, and in the face of the opinion of his own colleague, the Minister of Justice, and the opinion of the late Commissioner of Fisheries, in increasing the officials in that Department and appointing a new Deputy Head. As I have shown, the work of the Department is decreasing.

Mr. McLELAN. No.

Mr. DAVIES. That branch of the Department.

Mr. McLELAN. No.

Mr. DAVIES. All the work, and a great deal it was, in issuing licenses to private parties to fish in the rivers, and the revenue derived from the licenses, has ceased.

Mr. McLELAN. That was comparatively small.

Mr. DAVIES. It was comparatively large, and the supervision required over those rivers was very great. I have looked at some of these Commissioners' reports, and I find that the Commissioner of Fisheries spent a great deal of time over that branch of his Department, which is now swept away. His time was occupied very largely in carrying on correspondence and controversies with the licensees and those who objected to their exercising the rights granted under the licenses, and carrying on lawsuits and writing about them from time to time; and I have no hesitation in saying, from realing the Commissioner's reports, that the work in that branch of the Department has largely decreased and is now decreasing. I therefore submit to the Committee that no case whatever has been made out for the hon. gentleman asking us to establish a new Deputy Head, and we have my hon. friend in front of me and my hon. friend to the left telling the Committee what has been the inevitable result of appointing a Deputy Head. It means the appointment of a long tail of officials, whose dignity and pay must agree with the dignity and pay of those employed in the coordinate branch of the Department. It means not only this $4,000, but probably another $4,000 next year. What work is this new Deputy going to do? All the stateand not to the fisheries at all. What is the Commissioner of Fisheries going to do, if you put a Deputy Head over him? I think this is totally unnecessary.

Mr. McLELAN. The hon. gentleman is entirely wrong in his statement that the work of the Department is decreasing. There have been a few licenses for up river withdrawn from the Department.

Mr. DAVIES. From all the rivers.

Mr. McLELAN. From all the rivers above the tidal waters, bat if the hon. gentleman were familiar with the work of placed any fry, the catch has rapidly gone down from year the Department, he would know that the number of licenses I to year. in the fidal waters and in the lakes has largely increased, and added to that there has been the distribution of the bounty, involving an invostigation of a very large number of claims, and the issue of about 40,000 cheques a year for that branch of the service which has been lately placed upon the Department. So, the work has very largely increased, and, as I stated to the Committee a short time ago, the outside officers connected with the protection and care of the fisheries number between 600 and 700, and these have to be all corresponded with and kept in order. The hon, gentleman has referred to the question of fish hatcheries, and has quoted the statement of the Minister of Justice in British Columbia. The Minister of Justice denies that his statements wore as strong as reported. He expressed a doubt -an individual doubt-as to the success of the fish hatcheries that have been established by the Government; nothing more than a doubt as to the success of them. I stated to the House, when the Estimates were under discussion, my opinion as to the success of the fish hatcheries, and the grounds upon which I hold the belief that they have been I take it from the reports of all the fishery oversuccessful. scors, and I find from those reports that, in the salmon rivers, wherever we have placed, and have been for years placing the young fry, these rivers have held up or increased in their production, while rivers that have been continuously fished through that period, and have not been supplied with fry, are nearly fished out and have decreased in the yield. And so with reference to the figures given by the Commis-sioner. They show a considerable increase of between 30 and 40 per cent. in the total catch between 1871 and 1881. Taking the whole, there is that increase, but while there has been an increase in the whole, there has been a large decrease in the rivers that have not been supplied with the young fish and fed from the hatcheries, while all the reports from the officers for 1833, and for 1882 as well, show that the rivers that have been supplied with fry have maintained their yield, or largely increased it. The home consumption of salmon has very largely increased from what it was ten years ago, and the facilities given for distributing fresh salmon from the fisheries, by the opening of the Intercolonial Railway, have facilitated that distribution so largely that I do not believe we get a return of all the catch of salmon on the coast and in all the rivers of New Brunswick and Quebec. In addition to that, the establishment of freezers, I think, tends to keep us from getting the true returns. The mode of management of the freezers is this. The owner of the freezer makes his rounds in boats or canoes or vessels during the night, and gathers up the fish from the different fishermen, and takes them to his freezers as rapidly as possible, and there preserves them. It is the interest and custom of all the men engaged in freezing to keep secret the quantity of fish that they have in stock, in order that it may have an effect upon the Boston and New York markets in the winter. One of the gentlemen engaged in the freezing operations writes a letter in August, 1883, all the different counties of the Province. I have in which he deals with that question and explains why the official returns do not show as large an increase as is given the catch has been very large. From Colchester county by the river. He gives names of the different parties and the overscer reports fine runs of salmon in the North of the amount they had in stock at that time, making 142,744 pounds; the figures given in Mr. Vorge's report make a total of only 93,000 pounds, while the quantity actually in stock was 144,000 pounds. Now I believe this custom has spread through all the districts where the preservation of salmon by freezing has been followed. I refer to the districts of Restigouche, Bathurst, and a number of districts in Quebec. I make this statement, which is borno out by the roturns of the fishery officers, that wherever we have planted fry in a river that river has maintained its yield or increased it, and in rivers where we have not yet

Mr. VAIL, Has the hop. Minister any report from Sackville river?

Mr. McLELAN. We have, in the office. The general returns from Nova Scotia state that the catch of salmon has been about the same as last year, which showed an increase of more than 100 per cent. over 1881. The catch of salmon in the whole Province was, in that year, 383,550 pounds; in 1882, it was 580,000; in 1883, 575,940.

Mr. DALY. I gave my testimony of what I actually knew in the rivers of Nova Scotia, as a fisherman. There was an improvement in the river that had been stocked from the Bedford hatchery. 1 may further mention the fact that in 1878, when the then representative of the county of Halifax was addressing the electors, he took particular pride in referring to the fact that he had done a great thing for his county in establishing within it the fish hatchory at Sackville, on the Sackville river. He pointed to that as likely to produce in the future great results for that county. I am glad that that gentleman was able to point to that single thing as the work of his hands, and I am glad to say that, in some respects, it has met his anticipations. although not to the extent that we had hoped. But that the expenditure made from that time to this in this respect has been thrown away, I entirely deny; and I will put my evidence as a practical fisherman, having fished in rivers in Nova Scotia that have been stocked from that hatchery, against the opinion of Mr. Whiteher, or that of the hon. member for Kings, P.E.I., when they say that this experiment is still of only doubtful efficacy. I know it has been a benefit. I have had personal experience that the result of the fish hatchery has benefitted the rivers supplied from it. I am very sorry that the hon. gontlemen now opposite seem inclined to detract from the laurels which Mr. Jones assumed in 1878, before the people of the county of Halifax, when he spoke of this fish hatchery as one of the great achievements he had effected for that county; but now it appears, according to the representations of hon. gentiemen opposite to be, at most, of only doubtful utility.

Mr. VAIL. I have no doubt the former member for Halifax took credit for having established that hatchery. It was to some extent an untried thing, and the experience that other gentlemen had had in the hatching of fish led the public to suppose that the establishment would produce great alvantages. The hon, member for Halifax (Mr. Daly) knows that Sackville river formerly was a salmon river, and I would ask him if he has heard in the last three years of a single salmon having been caught in that river. I do not want to depreciate these hatcheries, but I think they have been established long enough to show some results by this time.

Mr. McLELAN. The hon, gentleman knows that the hatchery is not built on the Sackville river for the mere purpose of stocking the Sackville river; it stocks and Salmon rivers in October and November, and that soveral thousand frys have been put in those rivers. In Guysborough there has been a large increase in the catch of salmon, and salmon are now plenty in that county. In Halifax county salmon had not been so abundant for many vears. In 1883 the catch of salmon was about the same as in 1882. All the counties show somewhat similar returns and show that wherever the rivers have been stocked with fry there has been an increase, but where no fry has been placed there has been a diminution in quantity; and so it is in the St. Lawrence.

Mr. DAVIES. The hon. member for Halifax seemed to import some political feeling into this debate. I do not care what the motives of the hon. gentleman may have been in establishing the hatchery; we are concerned with the very important question whether it is successful or not. Senator Almon said :

"I think we are indebted to the senior member for Halifax for having brought this guestion before the House, because I think the subject, brought this question before the House, because I think the subject, particularly of renewing the fisheries by means of placing young fish in the rivers, has not been properly understood. I myself think—though my opinion on the subject may go for nothing—that the system is an entire failure. I judge from the results of experiments in the Sackville river, which flows into the basin near Halifax. There is a fish-breeding establishment at the mouth of that river, where Mr. Wilmot, one of the greatest authorities, I believe, on the subject, resides. There are few or no mills on the river; it was always a good salmon river, and it has been a protected river, yet I am told by the people who inhabit its banks (and it is only nine miles from Halifax) that fewer salmon rise in it now than before it was protected and spawn was planted."

Mr. MITCHELL. I have listened with a good deal of attention to this discussion, and I desire, even at this late hour, to offer a few remarks. This is a subject which has been very unfairly dealt with to night; and in my observations I will spare neither the Minister, on the one hand, nor hon. gentlemen opposite, on the other. I will endeavour to give fairly and candidly my opinion, not only in regard to the proposed division of the Department, but on the question of fish-breeding, and I will point out what the duty of the Government and the Department, in my opinion, is. First, with respect to fish-breeding, I hold myself responsible for having introduced the system of fish-breeding into Canada. While Minister, I took a great interest in this matter. I had a good deal of trouble to convince my colleagues, and after them the House, to give a moderate vote for the establishment of but one hatchery, and I think the House and the public have come to the opinion that fishbreeding, if properly conducted, can be made a success. The hon. member for Kings (Mr. Davies) has made some statements on this points, statements that are worthy of every consideration; and I will not say that I agree with those who protend that our fish-breeding, as at present conducted, is an entire success, but it certainly is not a failure. There is to be considered, in relation to fish-breeding, this fact : that elsewhere fish breeding has been a success. We go to Germany, France and the United States, and there we find, that so far from fish breeding having fallen into disuse, and public sentiment being opposed to granting money for its maintenance, the system is a success and is every year growing in public estimation, and moreover that savants and others have decided that fish-breeding is quite a success. In Canada it has been a success up to a certain point; but difficulty has been experienced after the fish have been bred. I have talked with Mr. Whitcher, a man of great information and great resource, who has studied the question, and with Mr. Wilmot, the father of the fish-breeding branch of the Service, and with other persons connected with it during the time I was in office, and since, in order to find out where the difficulty lies. I ask hon. gentlemen apposite who are decrying the granting of moncy for this purpose, when they are pointing out the defects and failures which, no doubt, do exist, to find out where the fault lies, and let it not be said that we in Canada are less successful in promoting this great industry, which will be so fruitfal in the future to the pros. Mr. McLELAN.

perity of our people, than other countries have been. I am told by some persons who know a great deal more than I do, that up to a certain time the fish-breeding is a success. Let anyone go to a fish hatchery. He will find thousands of salmon fry floating in the water, some of which have grown to very respectable dimensions. It is admitted that nature for the first ten days supplies, by means of a sack under the throat, food for the fry. After that food is exhausted, the young fish have to obtain their own supply, and it is a matter of great doubt in the minds of those with whom I have conversed, as to whether the difficulty lies in the further development of the fish some time after they have been brought to life, or whether the difficulty arises from the fact that those fish, being cared for during three months, lose their natural instinct of self-preservation and power to obtain food for themselves. It may be, as some contend, and I believe it is, the true theory, that the trouble arises from the fish not being kept sufficiently long in a protected state, and means should be taken to test the opinion as to whether, if fish kept for a season in a protected state, greater success would not attend fish-breeding. There is another theory connected with fish breeding, and I refer particularly to salmon, because it is the great commercial fish of our country, and that is, that the young fish are put into streams that are too often unsuited to them. They are deposited in streams where the water is too pure or not pure enough, or in streams where predaceous fish, such as trout and perch, frequent the shallow waters and prey on the young artificially-bred salmon. I would say to hon. gentlemen, and I say it in all good part, that this question should be treated apart from any party feeling of triumph over the Minister. We should endeavour to make as perfect as possible an institution which should be a credit to this country, and we should endeavor to find out faults, if faults there are, in the prosecution of this work, so that in the future fish-breeding may become a source of national wealth in place of being pointed at as a national disgrace. I will say no more on this point, because the hour is late. In regard to the other point started by the hon. member for Queens, if I were on his side of the House I no doubt would have acted as he has done. I would no doubt have taken up the report of Mr. Whitcher as condemning the course of the Marine and Fishery Department, and would have also read the speech of Sir Alexander Campbell, in British Columbia. Let me tell the House what I think of that speech. The fact that Sir Alexander Campbell dared to denounce the policy of one of his colleagues, and denounce a policy which was established not only by the Government of which he was a member but by Parliament, which is his master-this action was such an outrage on the other Cabinet Ministers, that if I had been the Minister the Council Chamber would have been too small to have held both of us. I do not know what passed between the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and Sir Alex. Campbell, when the latter returned from British Columbia, and the former from England-I suppose they had a pretty lively time: certainly I would have had one had I been Minister. With respect to Mr. Whitcher's course: the hon. gentleman has quoted Mr. Whitcher's statement in regard to the failure of fish-breeding. I have great respect for Mr. Whitcher and his statements? He served under me eight years, and I found him a faithful, upright and active officer. And I may say that I do not believe there exists in the Dominion of Canada a man who possesses so much varied information, which can be brought into practical use in the service of the country, in this connection, as Mr. Whitcher possesses. But, Sir, he was like all men who get disgusted with the position in which they are placed. He, Sir, it was, who helped to get up the case for the Washington Treaty. He attended at Washington with Sir John A. Macdonald, and rendered the very best service to his country there. He got up, under my direction, the case which resulted in the Halifax award, and if I am rightly informed, he got very little recognition for his services and very little compensation for them. Mr. Whitcher, with his peculiar temperament and disposition, a man of his proclivities, his knowledge and the power which that knowledge gave him, felt that he had not been properly treated. His temper got soured, and his judgment perhaps, not at the best of times the strongest, led him to do what no subordinate ought to have done under the circumstances, and led to his subsequent removal. I may say that I met him shortly after this event occurred, and he complained to me about his suspension. I say this, now, of a man I think well of, and a man who, I think, has not been rightly treated. I said to him: Do you know what I would have done to you if I had been the Minister and had found that that circular had been issued? I would not have suspended you, but I would have dismissed you, and you deserve to be dismissed. The man had mourned over his supposed wrongs, he had complained to one and another until he had got into a morbid condition, and I believe that the paper he wrote was the result of that condition. Sir, I know, beyond a doubt, that to Mr. F. W. Whitcher, in his perfect self, with the faculties of his mind all present, and his intelligence actively at work. I could quote hundreds of instances, penned by himself or under his direction, in the reports of the Department, which would have contradicted the statements he made there, and I say this with no desire of detracting from Mr. Whitcher, or attacking him. On the contrary, I do not think he has been as well used as he ought to have been by the Government he served. The head of the Department of Fisheries has given his reasons for this change in the arrangement of the Fisheries Branch, that the different branches of the marine service had increased so largely in numbers. Now, there is not a single one of those he enumerated which did not exist when I was in the Department. It is true they have extended, the country has grown, but we had British Columbia then as we have now. But the business has developed and I have no doubt the duties of the Department have grown and increased. But, Sir, the real reason why, in my opinion, it is justifable to divide this Department, has not been stated. I recollect when I formed that Department, and I think I can appeal to the country to say that it was formed on a basis which worked successfully, my recommendation was-and I speak in the presence of my old colleagues-that there should be two Deputy Heads, because the two branches of the Department are so distinct and so unlike, that a man who is fitted for the one, like Mr. Smith, the present deputy, would be utterly unfitted for the other. What value would the present Deputy Head put upon a salmon? Why, Sir, he would value it at so much per pound? And what is the actual value of these salmon to the country? You cannot estimate it by the pound. It is the money they bring and the sport they give to the men who come in by the hundreds, during the season in our own country, to obtain sport by catching these tish, which cost them, in many cases, from $5 to $10 apiece. It is the trade they bring, the intercourse they are the means of establishing with a foreign element, the traffic they give to railways and steamboats and hotels-it is these considerations which give value to the fisheries of the country. It is true they have also a commercial value, but that is not lessened by the fact that this nominal value exists and that it should be cultivated and developed. I believe it is in the interests of the country and the Department that the Department should be divided, and that a Deputy Head should be appointed over the Fisheries Branch co-ordinate in power with the Deputy Head of the other branch. I do not think, however, that there is any necessity for a larger expenditure than $3,200, and therefore. I think the hon. member for King's (Mr. Davies) was right in taking exception to the continuance of the office of a Commissioner of Fisheries, in addition to the Deputy Head of the Department. The Minister should at once state to the House that he intended to abolish the commissionership of fisheries, for there is no necessity for such an office. I will tell the House why Mr. Whitcher was appointed. When the Government of which I was a member refused to carry out my recommendation, and said that it was inconsistent and impolitic, to have two Deputy Heads, I recollect the opinion entertained of the Department when I took charge of it. My right hon. friend told me, when I took it as a choice between it and the office of Secretary of State, then and now one of the largest of the Departments, he said that the Department of Marine and Fisheries was just like the fifth wheel of a coach-there was nothing for it to do. However, I took it, and I said that I thought I would show that there was a good deal for it to do, and I think I did show that it was a Department which, at all events, had a good deal of work before it, and that it did good service for the country. I found Mr. Whitcher in connection with the Department joined on to the Board of Works. I found that he was an able man, and after six or seven months' experience with him, finding that he was not receiving the recognition which he deserved, and when I could not get him as my Deputy, I endeavoured to make him a Commissioner or something else, which would show that his services were appreciated; and the result was, that when I was in the Department I could always get him to work for me, day or night, because he felt that his services were recognized and appreciated. Now, I think a deputy over the Fisheries Branch is absolutely required. It has been said that there is less license work to do now than formerly. So there is, but there is the additional bounty work, which involves the making out and sending of 40,000 or 50,000 cheques annually with the accounts and correspondence, which adds immensely to the labour of that branch, and more than compensates for the lessened work in connection with the licenses. If there had been a Deputy equal to his work you would never have seen these cases entered in the courts, for the question would not have been allowed to get headway. These questions were as rife in my day as they have been since, but I always endeavoured to stop them and prevent collision, and during my time there never was a case in court as to the rights of the Dominion as against the Provinces. What is the duty of the Department and the Government to day? We are granting subsidies to Quebec and Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and these are really the three Provinces on the Atlantic where it is of great advantage to secure the fisheries-nach of these Provinces is about to receive large subsidies from the Dominion, and if I were Minister of Fisheries I would have endeavoured to bring before the Government, and impress on the Premier while granting those immense sums of money to the Provinces to relieve them from their financial difficulties, the duty and necessity of gettirg back from them what is of no use to them and what would be of great service to the country, the duty of repurchasing from them the fishery rights they possess, because the Provinces will not protect the fisheries. Can it be expected that they will protect them, when the Dominion derives the benefit of them? I think this is an appropriate subject on this occasion, and I am sorry the hon. Premier is not here to hear my observations. I have just one more remark to make, and it is this; I notice by the papers that were laid on the Table to day that a message has been sent by Lord Derby to Lord Lansdowne calling attention to the fact that we shall very soon again find ourselves presented with the question of the treaty rights of the Americans. If there ever was a time when we should buckle on our armour and prepare, it is now; and I hold that this is a fitting time to put at the head of that Department a man of intelligence and industry, whose taste will accord with the duties he has to perform, and whose capacity to grasp the duties of his office will enable him to take those precautions which are so desirable in the interest of the country. I do not know what means have been taken to face the difficulty that will in a little time confront us, but if immediate steps are not taken we will find ourselves unprepared to meet-what? Every day, since the Commission sat in Halifax, the Americans have been preparing. They have their deep-sea dredges at work; they have scientists on board their vessels, Consuls at every port, and people around our shores, gathering information; and instead of our being prepared and they unprepared, as was the case the last time, it will be just the reverse-they will be prepared, and we will not. I say, therefore, that it is very desirable that a person should be appointed over that Department, whose special duty it will be to prepare for the coming event. There are some other observations which I would like to make, but it is too late; but I thought it was my duty, as it has been my pleasure, to give the House the benefit of any experience I have had in relation to this subiect

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Are these all additional?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. These are third-class clerks in the service. If they pass optional subjects they receive $50 for each optional subject, but that does not apply to clerks with salaries above $500.

Mr. BLAKE. We had the statement the other day that two clerks had not been able to avail themselves of the Order in Council on this subject, because they had passed their examination before that Order passed. Are these new clerks, or are they old clerks who were in before the Order was passed ?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I think they are new.

Mr. CASEY. Is the opportunity of earning this increase offered annually, or once for all?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. Once for all; and then they get the statutory increases the same as other clerks.

Mr. CASEY. Then, clerks in the Department after this will not have the opportunity of offering themselves.

Sir HECTOR LANGLVIN. Oh, yes. Suppose a clerk offers himself at the examination next May, and at the same time wishes to pass in two optional subjects, for example, precis writing and shorthand; if he succeeds in these two, he will be appointed at $400 as a third-class clerk, and he will have $50 for each of the two optional subjects, which will make $500, and the next year he will get $50, like any other clerk.

Mr. CASEY. Are the subjects technical, subjects of use in the Department, or purely literary, as a rule?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. They are subjects determined by the Civil Service Board, and are such as are useful in the Department.

scribes a salary of $1,800, with an annual increase of $50, until it reached $2,000, at which it was to stand. He was not a Civil Servant under regular Civil Service orders.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I think he is now.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not know anything that has placed him there. I think that the hon. gentleman will find, that four years after his appointment, which was, I think, in 1876, he reached his maximum, and his salary has been standing at $2,000 ever since. I am not objecting to the item, but I do not understand it to be a statutory increase.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The hon. gentleman will allow the item to pass, and I will give him an explanation on Concurrence.

Mr. TUPPER. I would like to call the attention of the Government to a matter of considerable importance to the bar of Nova Scotia, in connection with the reports of the Supreme Court of Canada. At present, parties are compelled in many cases to wait for months after the decision is rendered before they can become acquainted with the reasons either of sustaining or dismissing the appeal. This causes considerable confusion and difficulty, both to the bench and bar. For instance, cases involving the same questions and the same rights as those which have been settled by the Supreme Court at Ottawa are often brought before the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, and could the reasons for the decisions of the Supreme Court at Ottawa be published in time they would be of great value in the discussion of similar cases in the Court at Halifax. And I might say, also, that to my knowledge many causes--over half-a-dozen, I think I am safe in saying, of important causes-have been decided by the Supreme Court of Canada on appeal from the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia years ago, and have never been reported; and I do not suppose, ever will be reported, because causes which have been decided since are reported. That, itself, is a matter of great dissatisfaction to the bar in Nova Scotia, and I might suggest to the Government, if it is possible to carry out the suggestion, which I do not know; but a very reasonable way would be found to meet the difficulty, and that is, that in causes from Nova Scotia-and the Government will understand that there are very many causes on appeal from that court to the Supreme Court at Ottawa, because it is really our only Appellate Court—it should be managed that a manuscript copy of the decision be forwarded to the prothonotary at Halifax. Then a copy of the decision could be had there, and these difficulties would be surmounted. I hope the Government will take this question into consideration, as it affects the profession in Nova Scotia very seriously.

Mr. HESSON. In view of the statement made by the hon. gentleman, I would draw attention to one point. The same gentleman who is paid $2,000 a year as précis writer is also in receipt of $100 for reporting cases for law journals and a further sum of $820 for law books, supplied I suppose by that gentleman. I think that ought to be taken into consideration. It appears to me to be an extraordinary charge, in connection with the fact just stated by the hon. the leader of the Opposition, that he was to be entitled to $2,000 as the extreme limit of his salary, and yet he is allowed $100 for supplying reports, I suppose as part of his duties. He is paid $850 for books supplied and other services; and now an additional item is included in the Supplementary Estimates for the current year.

Mr. BLAKE. As to the $820, my recollection is that we voted last year a sum for the purchase of a portion of the library of the late Chief Justice Duval, for the use of the judges of the Supreme Court, and I presume that is what is ary for 1883-34, $50; and for 1884-85, $100 $150.00 Mr. BLAKE. I do not understand this. This gentleman hon. gentleman speaks of, and therefore I can say nothing was appointed under special Order in Council, which pre-'about it. The difficulty the hon. gentleman from Pictou has mentioned, is one which is of considerable importance. I may say to him-he may not know it, but it is truethat the bar of the other Provinces has some interest in the question of reports from the Supreme Court. He seemed to imagine that it affected only Nova Scotia.

Mr. TUPPER. I did not know enough about the other Provinces.

Mr. BLAKE. He will observe that there is no special delay with reference to the Nova Scotia cases, and the general delay affects the bar of the other Provinces as much as that of Nova Scotia. I do not think the remedy he proposes is the fit one. I suppose any practitioner who is interested in a cause can obtain a manuscript copy of the judgment by paying a fee for it, and to require that the copies of all judgments—some are very long, too long in my opinion; I am not speaking of the Supreme Court alone, but the judgments, generally, of judges, have grown very long of latter days-should be supplied, would be an expen-sive thing, and we could not. I am afraid, decide that it would be a special remedy for Nova Scotia. It would have to go everywhere. I think the difficulty is one that ought to be got over by some effort to obtain an earlier issue of the Supreme Court reports than has hitherto occurred. I cannot say where the fault lies. I fancy, to some extent. perhaps, it is in the circumstunces that there is a habit of giving a great number of judgments in each case. Almost every judge gives a judgment, and then we all know that it is difficult to get the proofs, the devises of their judgments from all the judges, and that probably makes the delay all the greater, when you have six judges to handle in place of only three. I do not know if it is in that, or in the printing office, or in the officer; but however it may be, the hon. member is perfectly right in saying there has been too great a delay in the issue of the reports; and perhaps this conversation and a suggestion by the hon. gentleman who has this item in charge, to the Minister of Justice, may produce some expla-nation upon Concurrence. We would not tolerate such a delay at all in the publication, in the Province from which I come, with reference to our own provincial reports. There we have a system of check by the bar society. The law society publishes the reports, the reporters are under its control, there is a committee which looks after the reports, and it is necessary for the reporters to present certain certificates, and the work is kept up, I do not say quite satisfactorily, but it is kept abreast pretty nearly as well as you can expect; perhaps in two or three months you get the reports out. I know there are cases which have been some years here; I believe we are measurably more than a year behind with Supreme Court decisions. We have no right, I may say, to expect that all the decisions will be reported. There may be decisions which are very important for the litigants, which involve a large sum of money, but which may not involve any general principle, and we must not expect that they will encumber the volume of report, unless some general principle of law, which may be a guide, and which may be useful in other cases, is evolved by the decision. I would therefore be sorry to say that every decision by the Supreme Court should be reported, but I quite agree that we ought to get an earlier report than we do.

Mr. TUPPER. I wish to disavow any selfish object in having referred only to the Nova Scotia bar. I spoke from a provincial point of view, because I was not sufficiently familiar with the circumstances in other Provinces. disagree with the leader of the Opposition in one matter. think that all decisions ought to be reported. One reason I have heard given for not reporting some of the causes appealed, is that the case involved questions of fact or turned mainly on questions of fact, and therefore it was unwise to publish it. But that is a very nice question often. whether to all members of Parliament alike, with reference to these it is a question of fact or a question of law, and the court from which the appeal was taken may have decided, and often has decided, the question to be a question of law, when the Supreme Court has decided that it mainly turned on the facts. In a question of that kind, it would be well to know how the Supreme Court reached the decision. As to one's being able to obtain copies of the decision on application, I want to say a word to fortify the position I have taken in bringing this matter to the attention of the Government. I do not want to reflect upon Mr. Daval in the slightest degree, because I know nothing to the contrary of his being a very efficient officer and a good reporter. He may have many difficulties -some mentioned by the leader of the Opposition-difficulties in getting manuscript from the judges themselves. Whatever the difficulties may be, I know applications have been made to Mr. Duval not only by members of the bar, but by members of the bench, for the manuscript copy of decisions given in causes affecting Nova Scotia cases, and it has been found impossible, in several cases, to obtain those copies.

Mr. BLAKE. I think that ought not to be. I think the Minister of Justice, on application, will probably cause such a communication to be made as that the manuscripts will be in the possession of the officer of the court, and that a rule of court will pass that copies should be available on payment of the prescribed fee. But I think that is only a partial remedy, and that we ought to see a more expeditious printing of the reports.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The attention of the Minister of Justice will be called to this conversation.

To provide for the statutory increase to the 50 00 salary of this officer

Mr. BLAKE. This item of $112 to pay the Sessional indemnity to Mr. Catudal is a vote of a similiar character to several passed already. In reference to a conversation that took place the other evening, it has been intimated to me that during last Seession of Parliament an hon. member who became a member by virtue of a decision of the Supreme Court in an election trial in the course of the Session, received the full Sessional indemnity. If this is so, it is not according to law.

Sir HECTOR LAN JEVIN. It was not by a special vote of Parliament but must have been done by the accountant.

Mr. BLAKE. I think the same law ought to be applied exceptions from the general law. In this particular case, one hon. member was representing a constituency of the Dominion for a certain portion of the Session. The law provides that when a member is a member for part of the Session he receives pay on a certain principle, but another member who is a member for part of the Session receives pay on another principle. This gentleman received, of course, his proportion of the pay, and the other hon. gentleman, although a member for only a portion of the Session, received the whole Sessional indemnity, and that without a vote of Parliament. Now, it is apt to create a feeling of natural discontent when one finds the law strained in one case and an hon. member paid for the whole Session.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. I suppose the hon. gentleman refers to the case of Mr. Robertson.

Mr. BLAKE. Yes.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. In that case the Internal Economy Commission made an order that he should be paid the full indemnity, because he had been in attendance from the first day of the Session.

Mr. BLAKE. He was in attendance, not as a member of Parliament but as a suitor before the court. He was a member of this House for only part of that Session, and until the period at which that return came down, and when he took his seat here another hon. gentleman was member for that constituency, Mr. Jenkins, and the Internal Economy Commission violated the law, and took money without the warrant of Parliament when they ordered this payment to be made. If it was intended to make this payment it should have been put in the Estimates and then it could have been discussed.

Mr. MILLS. I think in all these cases we ought to have a report from the accountant laid before the House regularly, of the amount of allowance received as Sessional indemnity, and the amount of mileage. There is no more reason why the accounts of the accountant should be kept secret than any other portion of the public expenditure. I think the public are entitled to know this, and we have a right to know precisely how that portion of the public funds are administered.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. The increase in the salary of ten clerks really corresponds to the statutory increase that is made in the other Departments. This Department, as the hon. gentleman knows, is not regulated by the Civil Service Act, and there are no statutory increases. These gentlemen who have increases have been very long in service in the House, and their present salaries are very moderate indeed.

Resolutions to be reported; Committee to sit again.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to; and (at 1:45 o'clock, a.m.) the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, 10th April, 1884.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS.

ADJOURNMENT-GOOD FRIDAY.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. In the absence of the First Minister, I beg to move that, when the House adjourns this day, it remains adjourned until Saturday next, at three o'clock, and that Government Orders have precedence on that day.

Motion agreed to. Mr. BLAKE.

THE LIBRARY OF PARLIAMENT.

Mr. SCRIVER, in moving that the Third Report of the Joint Committee on the Library of Parliament be adopted, said: This report only contains the substance of the first report, referred back to the Committee for reconsideration, less that portion referring to the transferrence of the law books from the Library of Parliament to the Library of the Supreme Court, that portion being omitted.

Motion agreed to, and report concurred in.

MANITOBA AND HUDSON'S BAY RAILWAY.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to consider the following Resolution:—

That it is expedient to authorize the Governor in Council to make a free grant of not more than 6,400 acres per mile in Manitoba, and 12,800 acres in the North-West Territories, in aid of the construction of a railway from Manitoba to the Hudson's Bay.

Mr. BLAKE. Make it Saturday.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Why not to-day?

Mr. BLAKE. Because the rules of the House say so.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. That is the rule when it is a vote of money, but this is not a vote of money.

Mr. BLAKE. It is the same thing.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Very well, on Saturday-Mr. MACKENZIE. What is the northern boundary of Manitoba just now?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I really cannot tell my hon. friend unless I look at the Statute. It is a parallel of latitude, I think, but I forget.

Motion, as amended, agreed to.

THE LIQUOR LICENSE ACT, 1883.

Sir JOHN A. MACDOALD moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to consider the following Resolution:—

That it is expedient to amend "The Liquor License Act, 1583," in several respects, and especially as to the time for applying for and taking out licenses, as to the appointment of Commissioners and as to legal proceedings enseted and the penalties imposed by the Act, and by providing that any deficiency in the license fund, in respect of expenses, may be made good cut of moneys voted by Parliament for the purpose.

Motion agreed to; and the House resolved itself into Committee.

(In the Committee.)

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I would move that the Committee adopt the Resolution pro forma, as discussion really only can take place on the Bill.

Mr. BLAKE. We would like to know what it is now.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Very well. Owing to the special circumstances that exist in British Columbia it is proposed to make an amendment with regard to the Commissioners, and to have the Warden of the county one of them, and another shall be both Warden and Mayor. In Chicoutimi, Saguenay, Gaspé and Bonaventure, where there is no organised machinery, the Governor in Council is to appoint the Commissioner. The clause in the Act providing that the licenses should be on stamped paper was consi-dered inconvenient and is repealed. It is proposed to extend the time for the application of licenses till the 15th of May, and in British Columbia until the 15th of June. It is proposed that in case of application for hotel, saloon or shop license by a person who is not a holder of a license and for premises not then licensed, the petition shall be accompanied by a certificate signed by one-third of the electors of the polling district in which the premises is situated. There is a necessity for an amendment of the clause which that no other shops of any kind shall be attached to it. It is found that cuts off the Windsor Hotel, the Rossin

House, the Russell and a number of other houses, where the ground floor is occupied by shops, although they are separate establishments. There is a number of suggestions made which it would be no object for the Committee to learn now, inasmuch as they will have the Bill before them immedistely for the purpose of amending the Act and making it more workable. It is also proposed to make a change in the clause which was introduced by an hon. member from Quebec respecting the practice in municipalities up to the time of Confederation. It is proposed that all those by-laws which were carried out in consequence of the law which obtained before Confederation and were not repealed, shall be in force, up to the time of the passage of this Act. After full consideration it is not proposed to put in a clause doing away with the penalties by enactment. Most of the penalties are for breach of the terms of which the party is licensed; of course, those cannot be done away with, and the only other penalties will be for not taking out a Dominion license. Well, as it was stated here the other day in discussion on the point, it is settled that there will be an immediate reference to the Supreme Court to decide upon the constitutionality of the Act, and the Government have determined that they will remit all fines, and of necessity exercise the power of Parliament on-they will remit all fines and penalties where parties are prosecuted for not having taken out a Dominion license before the constitu-tionality of the Act has been decided. Those are the principal provisions in the Bill which will be founded on these Resolutions. It is proposed to strike out the last part of this Resolution, namely : "And by providing that any deficiency in the license fund in respect to expenses may be made good out of moneys voted by Parliament for the purpose." move the adoption of the Resolution.

Mr. BLAKE. Will the hon, gentleman state how many clauses there are in the proposed Bill.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. There are nineteen.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not think the hon. gentleman has dealt very fairly by the House in some respects with this measure. We had before us this Resolution of the hon. gentleman with reference to making a charge upon funds to be voted by Parliament, or of expenses for carrying out the Act, and the motion in the Estimates was referred to. I pointed out that if salaries were to be assigned, &c, it should be done by Statute, and we certainly understood it was to be done by Statute. Now, the hon. gentleman says, "I have got a vote in the Estimates for $10,000," a bulk sum with reference to which no explanation has been made, and we certainly expected that that would be done in the Bill which ought properly to te done, full explana-tions being made, and a full provision being made, in the clause for the expenditure of public money. We are not to have an opportunity, according to the hon. gentleman's proposal, to strike out the clause, of learning what the disposition of the public funds is to be, who is to be paid, at what rate, and from what source ; but a vote in the Estimates is to be taken. The hon. gentleman knows that this is not the proper way of paying salaries under the Bill; and this clause proves it, because he proposes to introduce among other amendments to the Bill this very clause providing for the payment of those moneys, but he now proposes to strike out the clause, and leave Parliament without any opportunity of considering, of being informed, and of confirming the disposition of the money with respect to the salaries. In another respect the hon. gentleman is not dealing fairly by the House. The motion of the hon member for Muskinongé (Mr. Houde), was defeated by the amendment moved by the hon. Minister of Public Works, which amendment was sustained by a Ministerial statement upon the faith of which the House, was asked to act, and that was that these penalties would be suspended and Council or the Supreme Court. Now the hon. gestleman says that after full consideration he proposes not to suspend the penalties, not to keep faith with the House, not to do that which he pledged he would do, and which was the means of inducing the House to accept his amendment to the motion of the hon. member for Maskinongé. It is now p oposed to do something very different, to give an intimation in Parliament that in case any man is prosecuted, and in case the penalties are imposed, the Government will exercise the power of the Crown to remit them. But that leaves the dealer subject to prosecution-it leaves him liable to payment of the costs of prosecution-it leaves him still open to the expense, annoyance, and trouble of prose-cution in the meantime. It is different in substance as well as in form from the course which the hon. gentleman told the House he would follow. The hon. gentleman minimises another statement: He says arrangements will be made-we do not know how, or with whom-for a reference. When the hon, member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Girouard) said that arrangements would be made, I asked how? Of course, he said, for a reference to the Supreme Court per Bill; and that answer was repeated by the hon. Minister when my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Mills) made a similar enquiry as to how the reference would be made, the hon. gentle-man stating that provision would be made by Bill. But the Bill does not contain any provision for the reference, which is yet essential in order to the proper treatment of the question. The mode which the hon. gentleman announced in that discussion as that which would be provided in order to obtain a decision on the constitutional question is therefore not to be followed up, and some other mode-we know not what, we know not how, we know not with whomis to be adopted for a reference to the Supreme Court. But the Supreme Court is not the final tribunal. It cannot finally dispose of the case. It may be a convenient thing to obtain the opinion of the Supreme Court; but the question will not be settled by it. In many cases, as we know, that court has unfortunately errod in the interpreta-tion of the law, and any individual may take the case to the Privy Council, and the decision of the Supreme Court may be reversed, as some of its decisions have been reversed. Nothing will be satisfactory except the decision of the court of ultimate resort, and, therefore, the hon. gentleman's statement that he does not propose -although he said he was going to propose by Bill-for a reference to the court of ultimate resort, is also very unsatisfactory. I was not able to gather what the hon. gentleman said with respect to special changes in the Province of Quebec. So far as I could judge, it is something rather minimising, or altering the effect of the clause passed last Session; but as to that I am unable to form an opinion. Then the hon. gentleman said it was proposed to extend the period for taking out licenses to 15th May; but he did not tell us why. What is the reason for the extension? The hon. gentleman has proposed an alteration in the law, but he has not given the House the least reason for proposing the alteration. Then the hon. gentleman said there was an infinity of amendments to be proposed, but he afterwards corrected that statement, and said there was a large number, with which he would not trouble us now. We heard a good deal last Session about this Act being a perfect piece of legislation; the labours of the Committee were spoken of as reflecting the greatest credit on the Committee, and the Ministerial party took the sole responsibility for the legislation, and declared it was a most excellent and admirable Act. The Act has not yet come into practical operation, yet we are told by the hon. Minister that there is proposed an infinity of amendments, perhaps not an infinity, but a great ariety of amendments. Under these circumstances I regret that the hon. gentleman has postponed to the that provision would be made for an appeal to the Privy dying hours of the Session the very first stage of this measure; that we are now told that we are practically to have but very little opportunity for considering the Bill, after it is printed and distributed; and in the proposal as regards the several respects to which I have referred, the hon. gentleman has fallen, I think, very far short indeed of fulfilling the expectations that he held out to the House, nay, of the pledges which he and his colleague gave to the House upon the occasion of the former debate. Puisné Judges. The Bill provides that three Judges shall form a quorum, but after full emisideration the Government have resolved not to ask for a silary for more than one Puisné Judge. The statement is very strong from Manitoba that the business of the court is getting hopelessly in arrear; I do not know whether it is from the litigious character of the people up there, or the numerous questions involved in contracts created by the sale of property and such matters

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. There has been no pledge broken in this case. I told the hon. gentleman that the Bill would contain all the amendments required. I stated that instead of the penalties being suspended, the Crown would exercise its undoubted right to remit all the penalties. That is the most speedy, efficient and satisfactory way of acting, because the moment it is known that the Government will remit all the penalties, that moment no penalties will be sought by any informer. With regard to the minimising of the arrangements made, this is not so, on the contrary they are enlarged and made more workable. Under the original Act passed last year the time for applying for Dominion licenses was limited to 1st March. The Act did not come into force until 1st January; the machinery could not go into force; and the time was found too short to enable persons to put in applications. Under these circumstances, and in consequence of the time for receiving the applications being extexded, the time for issuing the licenses has been extended also. As regards the work of ascertaining the constitutionality of the Act, how that can be done by Bill I do not understand. It can be done only one or two ways. First, by a reference by the Crown under the spe ial power it possesses to refer any question of law to the Supreme Court; and second, by proceeding by way of appeal. The first mode can only be followed by a reference by the Crown, and it is proposed to invite all the Provinces to appear by counsel and discuss the constitutionality of the measure. If by way of appeal, this can only be done by the ordinary mode. I do not propose-I do not think it is the duty of the Government of Canada-to ignore the existence of the Supreme Court, a tribunal created by itself and called into effect by this Parliament. We should give due credence to our own court. The motion moved in amendment by the hon. Minister of Public Works was to remit the question as to the constitutionality of the Act to the Supreme Court, or to the Privy Council, or both. The Government are quite ready to have the question submitted at once, and to one court after the other, either by asking Her Majesty to submit the question to the Privy Council, or by this Government asking the Supreme Court to answer certain questions, or it may be raised in the ordinary mode by way of appeal. I hope this discussion will be allowed to stand until the Bill is before us, when the House will be better able to discuss it.

Resolution reported and concurred in.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD introduced Bill (No. 143) to amend the Liquor License Act of 1883.

Bill read the first time.

THE JUDICIARY OF MANITOBA.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to consider the following Resolution : --

That it is expedient that a salary of $4,000 bs provided for an additional Puisné Judge of the Queen's Beach in the Province of Man: toba.

Motion agreed to; and House resolved itself into Committee.

(In the Committee.)

Mr. BLAKE. Will the hon. gentleman explain?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Last Session the Province of Manitoba passed an Act providing for two additional. Mr. BLAKE.

form a quorum, but after full consideration the Government have resolved not to ask for a salary for more than one Puisné Judge. The statement is very strong from Manitoba that the business of the court is getting hopelessly in arrear; I do not know whether it is from the litigious character of the people up there, or the numerous questions involved in contracts created by the sale of property and such matters during the boom. It is considered that it does not at all follow that there will be permanently such an amount of business as is now before the courts, but under the circumstances the Government thought it right and proper to apply to Parliament for the salary of only one additional Judge. The Act of Manitoba which I hold in my hand was passed in July, 1883, and it provides that the Court of Queen's Bench shall consist of a Chief Justice and four Puisné Judges, and the second clause provides that three or more Judges shall constitute the court. If we provide a salary for one Judge, there wil be a court of four, so that they can always have a quorum of three. The suggestion that we thought it our duty to make to the Province was this: that they should increase the jurisdiction of their County Court Judges, instead of increasing indefinitely the number of Superior Court Judges. As I understand the jurisdiction of the County Court Judges in Manitoba is not not at all so extensive as that which obtains in Ontario, where it is found that the ordinary business of any kind in the county, can be well conducted by the County Court Judges at less expense, with less delay, and with greater satisfaction to the interests of justice. I have no doubt they will accept the proposition, and that next Session they will increase the jurisdiction of the County Court Judges, and thus relieve to a considerable extent the pressure on the Court of superior jurisdiction. It is to be remembered, however, that the business of the courts in Manitoba is not confined to litigation arising in that Province only. It is provided that there is an appeal in certain cases, for a particular amount, or of particular importance, from the decision of the Stipendiary Magistrates in the North-West who are Judges, to the courts in Manitoba, and this greatly increases their business. At all events it is quite certain that they are not able to overtake the work, and therefore it is thought well that we should grant the salary for one additional Judge.

Mr. BLAKE. Of course it is quite impossible, except for those who are charged with the responsibility of enquiring into these matters, to form any definite opinion excepting this, that it is obvious to us all that the business of Manitoba has largely increased. Whether or not that increase will be maintained is a matter as to which the hon. gentleman expressed an opinion, which it is perhaps difficult to verify. But I suppose he has satisfied himself-I have not looked at the Provincial Statutes-that the appointment of one judge will make the Statute workable in all respects, that it will not require an alteration in the Statute to make the judicial system there complete, and that the details as to the circuits, &c., are such as can be worked with four judges instead of five. I do not mean to say that it necessarily follows that if they are not we should appoint five judges; but it is a question of whether there shall be immediate relief or not. The question with reference to the mode in which the judicial system of Manitoba can best be managed is one which it would be very difficult to answer just now. I think it will be prudent in the present condition of the Province, and until we know in what direction particularly the population spreads, to adopt as a temporary measure at any rate, the hon. gentleman's sugges-tion, and rather enlarge the jurisdiction of the inferior tribunals than appoint Superior Court Judges, until the Province settles down to something like its normal condition, when we will be able to see what is best suited to it. But there is no doubt a very large area of territory, and there will, I think, be a necessity for a greater decentralization in certain sections in the administration of justice. I would not have it supposed that I am a friend of decentralization -I believe that is bad for the country-but there will be a necessity of having justice administered nearer every man's door in minor cases, probably than we can at present have, whether by Superior or County Court Judges. I do not make any further observations on the hon, gentleman's proposal, but I would make this enquiry, whether it is proposed to carry out for Manitoba the principle that prevails in the other Provinces, and it seems to me that that Province is now ripe for its adoption, that the Judges shall be chosen from the members of the local bar?

Sir JOHN A, MACDONALD. The first point mentioned by the hon. gentleman struck me the moment this matter was proposed by the Minister of Justice, viz., whether, when the Act was passed for another Judge, we should not disorganize the whole Court, seeing that we only provide a salary for one Judge. I called his attention to that difficulty in the sense in which the hon. gentleman has spoken. The Minister of Justice is not himself satisfied that the appointment of one Judge will leave the Court thoroughly organized to work. As to the selection of the Judges from the local bar, that will engage the consideration of the Government when they are able to consider, on the report of the Minister of Justice, the appointment of an additional Judge under the Act which will be founded on this Resolation.

Resolution to be reported.

SUBSIDIES TO RAILWAYS.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER, in moving that the House resolve itself into Committee to consider a cortain proposed Resolution (page 1444), respecting subsidies to railway companies of Canada, said: Mr. Speaker, at this late period of the Session, I propose to condense into as brief a space as I possibly can the observations that it is necessary for me to make in regard to the very important Resolutions that are now submitted for the consideration of the House. I need not say, Sir, that all countries recognize the construction of railways as one of the greatest, probably the greatest and most important, means of promoting the advancement and progress of a country; and I need not say here that Canada is not behind the rest of the world in that regard—that in no part of the world is the important factor, that the construction of railways affords, more thoroughly recognized than it has been in Canada where the efforts that have been made within the last few years-the very great efforts-I think I may say the unequalled efforts, that Canada has made to span this continent from ocean to ocean, will compare favourably with any that have been made for the development and advancement of any country. The House, I think, will agree with me when I say that the Province of British Columbia - because I will begin on the Pacific coast has not been neglected in the provision made for railway construction. We have not only provided for the rapid completion of our great national work, the Canadian Pacific Railway, to the Harbour of Port Moody at Burrard Inlet, but we have during the present Session also made provision for extending a line of railway from Nanaimo down to the Harbour of Victoria, thus providing very fully and efficiently for the development of that section of this great Dominion. Then, Sir, I need not remind the House that the great North-West, which but yestesday was a trackless descrt, is now not only spanned with a line of railway throughout its entire length, from the boundary of Ontario to the boundary of British Columbia, but that, in addition, arrangements have been made-in connection with the con-furnished by the Government-for the construction of branches connecting the Canadian Pacific Railway with very important and leading sections of country. The Resolution which my right hon, friend has just submitted to the consideration of the House provides for an additional outlet for the great North-West-provides for an enormous grant of land as a free subsidy and contribution to promote the construction of a line of railway from Winnipeg to Hudson's Bay, with the view of obtaining an additional outlet for several months of the year for that great country. The appropriation of 6,400 acres of land per mile within the Province of Manitoba, and 12,800 acres of land per mile outside of that Province, to aid in the construction of the Hudson's Bay Railway is an evidence to the world of the great importance that the Government attach-and, when the Resolution passes, as I have no doubt it will pass, by the common consent of this House-of the value this Parliament attach, to affording every possible facility for the development of the great North-West. Nor need I remind the House that, in the carrying out of this great work of an inter-oceanic railway, we have provided for the rapid construction of no less than 650 miles of road from Port Arthur to Callander, involving the expenditure within the Province of Ontario of over $20,000,000 in connection with the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Then, Sir, my hon. friend who proceeded me in the office which I have now the honour to hold, obtained from Parliament authority to give $12,000 per mile as a subsidy for a road from Callander to Pembroke, as a link to extend the Canadian Pacific Railway down in this direction, to connect it with the Canada Central Railway at Pembroke, involving an additional expenditure for that service of $1,400,000, The House is also aware that this Parliament has provided, during last Session and the preceding Session, for a subsidy of $12,000 per mile for 110 miles of road, from Callander to Gravenhurst, to connect the great cities of Ontario and the Great Lakes with the Canadian Pacific Railway, by the shortest, and most practicable and best line that could be obtained; and I hope to be able, before this House rises, to lay upon the Table of the House a contract, made with a company incorporated for the purpose and acting in conjunction with the Northern and North-Western Railway Company-a contract for the prompt undertaking and completion of that work, so as to have it practically open in the early season of 1886, by the time the Canadian Pacific Rail-way will be completed. That embraces an expenditure within the Province of Ontario of some $22,760,000 in connection with the construction of that portion of the Canadian Pacific Railway lying between Port Arthur and Caliander between Callander and Pembroke and between Callander, and Gravenhurst. We now come to the Province of Quebec; and I may say no person in this House will question for a moment the fact that if provision had not been made by the Province of Quebec for the construction of a railway from Quebec to Ottawa, this House would have regarded, the country would have regarded, the Canadian Pacific Railway as entirely incomplete, and would have been prepared to deal with that branch of the question just as our hon. friends opposite dealt with the question of con-necting the Canada Central from Pembroke to Callander, by an appropriation of a sum of money sufficient to accomplish the purpose. The fact that the Government of Quebec anticipated that action, the fact that the Government of Quebec have since Confederation expended from their own treasury a sum, I believe, of over $14,000,000 in the construction of railways within the Province of Quebec, instead of diminishing their claim to consideration at this late hour, strengthens it, I think, very much; this fact increases the strength of their position in approaching the Government as they have done and asking to be recouped a fair amount of that money and to be placed relatively in somewhat the struction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and by aid same position as that which they would have occupied if they had not been so forward to promote that which is admitted on all sides to be the great national Under these circumstances, the work of this country. Government of Quebec, having contributed, as I say, over $14,000,000 in railway construction in that portion of the Dominion, came to this Government with a claim for fair and just consideration as regarded that section of the railway construction which they had engaged in and completed and which might fairly be regarded as a portion of the great inter-oceanic line of railway connecting, in fact, across the entire Continent, through Canadian territory, the two oceans. After full and fair consideration of the proposals that were made and of the fact that they had exhausted the resources of the Province of Quebec in this effort, this successful effort, to construct this most important link of the great national work, the Government came to the conclusion that the Government of Quebec were entitled to a grant of $12,000 per mile for that portion of the road that had already become a link and a section of the Canadian Pacific Railway, that portion lying between the City of Montreal and Ottawa; and as regarded the other portion, the only hesitation, the only doubt that existed as to the propriety of expending the $12,000 per mile from Montreal to the Harbour of Quebec arose from the fact that the Government of Quebec had parted with that portion of the railway, and that, at this moment, it did not afford that short and unrestricted line of communication for the Canadian Pacific Railway to make the Harbour of Quebec that which it is believed, in the interest of the whole of this country, it is desirable it should be made, namely, the summer terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Under these circumstances, it was thought judicious to appropriate $6,000 per mile to the Government of Quebec for that portion of the line extending from Montreal to the Harbour of Quebec, and to ask Parliament for an appropriation for an equal amount $6,000 a mile for the purpose of ensuring the extension of the Canadian Pacific Railway from its present terminus at Montreal to the Harbour of Quebec; and the Resolution states very explicitely the mode in which that appropriation will be used. I may now say that the amount embraced in these Resolutions for the extension of what may be called the national line of railway from the shores of the Pacific to Quebec, and its exteension from Quebec to the Maritime Provinces also embraces a connection between the Canadian Pacific Railway and the international boundary. It is proposed to ask for a subsidy for sixty miles of railway, extending from Quebec and covering the distance from Beauce Junction on the Quebec Central to the international boundary, which will add the sum of $211,200; this will make an appropriation, under these Resolutions, for the purpose of obtaining the shortest inter-oceanic line of communication from Quebec and through Quebec to the Canadian Pacific Railway proper at Ottawa, of $3,565,200. Then a very strong feeling has grown up in the Maritime Provinces, and not only in the Maritime Provinces but throughout Canada, because, I believe, that from British Columbia down through the North-West Territories, through the Province of Ontario, and in the Province of Quebec, there has been a strong and general sentiment that this great inter-oceanic line of the Canadian Pacific Railway would be incomplete if we were obliged to have our Atlantic terminus in a foreign country. I believe that sentiment is not at all confined to the Province of Nova Scotia, or Prince Edward Island, or the Province of New Brunswick, but I believe it has taken just as deep a hold of the minds of our friends in the other Provinces almost as it has in the Maritime Provinces. Although every effort has been made to render the operation of the Intercolonial Railway as successful as possible, although more has been accomplished in the development of the country, in the development of the trade and business of the country through the agency our own borders. The result of this short line railway will SIT CHARLES TUPPER.

of the Intercolonial Railway than any person on either side of this House a few years ago supposed to be possible, still we have found we were too heavily handicapped by the distance, and that we could not-reluctantly as we were driven to the conclusion, we have been driven to the conclusion, by the force of circumstances and by the practical results, that it is impossible for the ports of St. John and Halifax to compete with the nearer ports of Portland and Boston, in the United States. Under these circumstances, the attention of the Government has been drawn, as I have said on one or two occasions before in this House, to the best means by which we might secure a realization of that which we all desire, the Atlantic terminus being in Canadian territory as well as the Pacific terminus, and thus be placed in a position to fairly compete for the great transcontinental trade and traffic that we all know must flow over that line. Although that may involve the necessity of passing for a certain portion of that line through a foreign country, we believe that even that is a comparatively insignificant point compared with the great importance of having the ocean ports both on the Pacific and Atlantic coasts within the borders of our own country, and using the trade and business of that great railway to build up great ports and points of com-munication for the traffic of the eastern and western world, for the purpose of practically extending the Canadian Pacific Railway from Montreal, its present terminus, to St. Andrew's, St. John, Halifax and Sydney, it is proposed to ask a subsidy of $200,000 per annum for fifteen years, in addition to the present subsidies that have been voted on a portion of that line being the extention to Sydney, of $480,000. That amount of $200,000 per annum for fifteen years capitalized at 5 per cent. represents about $2,073,932. Add the amount of subsides granted during the last two Sessions for the same purpose, and you have $2,555,932, and it is proposed to give in addition to that, the 80 miles of railway from New Glasgow to Sydney, recently acquired, as the House is aware under the authority of Parliament, provision for the acquisition of which has, been made by the Legislature of Nova Scotia and the legislative action of this Parliament. It is true we paid $1,200,000 for that road and the Pictou Branch, but the House is quite aware that that it was not because it formed any portion of our policy to acquire the railway from New Glasgow to the Strait of Canso. The object of that appropriation was to enable us to obtain back into the possession of Canada the fifty miles of railway between Truro and Pictou, that had cost the Province of Nova Scotia over $2,000,000 to build-I think about $2,200,000, if I remember rightly at this moment, but certainly not less. Under that appropriation, we obtained back that which it was found necessary, in the interest of the whole country, we should obtain and retain, that is that portion of the Intercolonial Railway extending from Truro to Pictou. The eighty miles from New Glasgow to the Strait of Canso, as was trankly admitted in this House, we did not expect to derive any large return from, but it was acquired in connection with the acquisition of that portion which was found to be very important, and indeed essential in the operation of the Intercolonial Railway. I have stated the position in which this question stands from its national and larger point of view, and I believe I may confidently rely not only upon the kind support of our friends on this side of the House for carrying out a measure which has been considered by the Government in all its aspects and in all its bearings, with a view to the promotion of the best interests of the country, but 1 believe I can rely with equal confidence upon the support of gentlemen opposite in carrying out what we all recognize as most important, making a complete line of communication through Canada, and enabling us to have the great ocean termini, on the Atlantic as well as on the Pacific, within be to bring the port of St. Andrew's, which is not only an admirable harbour, but the port of all the ports in Canada the nearest to Montreal, within 377 miles of Montreal, and I believe that is only seventy seven or seventy-eight miles further than it is from Montreal to Portland.

Mr. MACKENZIE. How much?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. It is about 299 miles from Montreal to Portland, and this will bring St. Andrew's within 377 miles, which will be about seventy-eight miles only further from Montreal than the port of Portland is; and my hon. friend will see that, if we could make a gallant struggle as we have made, to carry the traffic for Montreal and Toronto over the Intercolonial Railway, handicapped as we have been by such an enormous disparity of distance, if we can get a port in Canada within seventy-eight miles as near as Portland is, and a better port than Portland is today, and from fifty to 100 miles nearer to Liverpool than Portland, we have not only a fair prospect, but a perfect assurance that we will have within our own territory a Canadian terminus for the great Canadian Pacific Railway. Then, the port of St. John, which comes next in point of proximity to Montreal, will be brought within 427 miles, the port of Halifax will be brought within 672 miles, and it is found practicable to obtain a line which will bring the port of Sydney under the effect of this subvention, within 774 miles. There will thus be saved in the present distance from Montreal to Sydney, 219 miles, in the distance from Montreal to Halifax, 173 miles, and the distance to St. John will be reduced 159 miles. have only to read these figures to the House, I think, in order to show that the Government, in asking for this aid in extending practically the terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway, involving as it will the transport of the traffic of both the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway down to our own coasts and our own ports in the Maritime Provinces, are asking aid which will, without any question, assure the completion of that work. I have already stated that it is proposed that this shall not only be the shortest line to Montreal but the shortest line to Quebec, that the provision asked for by these Resolutions from Beauce Junction to the international boundary will bring Quebec by the shortest line that can be obtained to the ports of St. Andrew's, St. John, Halifax and Sydney, and I am assured by the gentle-men who are connected with the Quebec Central Railway, that the subsidy which is provided in these Resolutions, with such aid as the Province of Quebec has already given to that work, will ensure the prompt construction of that line. In fact, I believe that, within a very brief period -I have stated four years as the term in these Resolutions -this line of communication will be perfected, and we will have the satisfaction of finding that we have the complete realization of our hopes and expectations in reference to the transcontinental traffic of the Canadian Pacific Railway being brought down to our own ports. The House is aware that I have on former occasions discussed the propriety of this Government giving subsidies to local lines of railway. The questions with which I have been dealing up to this point, of course, are based upon broad and national considerations. They are founded upon a policy that is recognized and has been recognized from the first as the first duty we owed to our country, and that is to obtain by the construction of a national line of railway the closest possible intercommunication between one section of our country and another. The great disadvantage under which Canada has laboured, if it may be regarded as a disadvantage, was the remoteness of important sections of our common country from one another, and we have all regarded it as a first duty we owed to the country to endeavour to remove it, that the construction of that fifty miles of railway and obviate that as far as possible by diminishing the dis- will open up one of the most valuable districts to tance between all the important points of communication in be found within the bounds of Ontario.

the several sections of our country, thus bringing them as closely as we could together. Not only commercially but socially, the greatest possible advantage may be fairly expected from shortening the distance of intercommunication between the great commercial centres of the country and the outlying portions of it. I may say, however, that I rest the application to Parliament for aid to lines of railway that may be, to some extent, regarded as local, upon different considerations and upon other grounds; I rested my application to Parliament for the aid that was asked two Sessions ago, last Session and this Session upon the the broad principle that the construction of railways, wherever found to be practicable is the surest and best means for the development of the country; that the Government of the country, whoever they may be, will always find that there are no means of so surely and so successfully promoting the development and expansion of the country as by giving such facility and such aid as may be in our power to the construction of important lines of railway that are required to develop the resources of the country, and by giving a certain amount of aid for that purpose. Now, Sir, if I were proposing to this House to enter upon the construction of purely local lines of railway, apart from the agency of private capital, I should feel that it was a proposition that might fairly be challenged. But, Sir, I believe that the small amount of aid which we are asking for the construction of these local lines of railway, if judiciously apportioned and applied only where there is every possible reason to expect that the construction of those sections of railway will give such an impetus to the development of the country as will increase the trade and business of the country-I think, under these circumstances we may fairly anticipate that the indirect advantage to the Government in the increase of revenue derived from the increase of trade and business, will give a full return for the aid judiciously expended that was asked in the Resolutions of former Sessions, and is now asked for the lines of railway that may be to some extent regarded as local lines. I admit this is a policy that will have to be most carefully guarded; I admit it is a policy that will require the greatest possible care and consideration in the appropriation of aid, and in restricting it only to such roads as the Government have reason to believe that small amount of aid will place upon a commercial basis along with the aid of private resources and private capital, and such roads as will secure such a development, and such increased prosperity for the country as will fairly warrant the Government in anticipating that it will be done without any increased charge to the country. I say, Sir, if the appro-priation of $3,200 per mile will draw into our country the additional capital that may be required to construct the railway, if it is applied in such a way and on such local lines as are adapted for great development, I say the Government may fairly anticipate that they will create no additional charge, because they will find that the policy will be attended with a corresponding increase of revenue that will equal, if not overbalance, the amount that will be charged against that appropriation, and under these circumstances I think the House will regard it as a wise and judicious policy within these limits. I will now briefly draw attention to the roads that it is proposed in these Resolutions to provide for, in addition to those I have already referred to. It is proposed to give a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole $160,000, to the Irondale, Bancroft and Ottawa Railway Company for a line of railway from the Victoria Branch of the Midland Railway to the Village of Bancroft, in the township of Dungannon, County of Hastings. Now, Sir, I am instructed, and I have taken pains to get the best information I could in regard to will open up one of the most valuable districts to We know that the Governments of Ontario and Quebec have subsidised very liberally numerous lines of railway, and have pursued this policy to the utmost limit of their ability. So I say that the construction of this link of fifty miles will intersect one of the most valuable iron and timber districts to be found, perhaps, in the whole Province of Ontario. I may say here at the outset that this $2,300 a mile will never be expended, every dollar of it will reman in the Treas ury forever, so far as these resolutions are concerned, unless that section of country is sufficiently tempting to commercial enterprise, unless the advantages of constructing a railway there are sufficiently tempting to induce capitalists to come forward and furnish the large amount of money that will be necessary to enable them to obtain the advantage of this subsidy; because it is only as sections of ten miles of railway are constructed, and only after agreement has been made with responsible parties for the purpose of insuring the construction of the whole the that a single dollar is taken from the Treasury under these Resolutions. I have no reason to believe, from what I have learned, that this line will not only afford facitities for an immense traffic in iron ore, but from the character of the country, from the character of the forests in that section of the country there is every reason to believe that the construction of this road will lead to the establishment of blast furnaces and the manufacture upon a large scale of charcoal iron. Then, Sir, these Resolutions ask for the appropriation of $32,000 a mile, or a sum not exceeding in the whole $272,000, for 85 miles of railway from Aylmer to Pembroke, provided the Ottawa River is crossed within the County of Pontiac at some point not east of Lapasse. believe there has been a very great desire on the part of the inhabitants that that section should be opened up by a line of railway communication, and with such favour did the Government of the Province of Quebec view that undertaking, and so important did they consider it for the development of that Province, that they have offered a subsidy of no less than $6,000 a mile for the eighty-five miles between Aylmer and Pembroke. It was found, however, that that subsidy was not sufficient to provide for the construction of this line of railway, and the efforts that were made to carry it through had come to a sudden collapse. But it is believed that a line affording to that large section of country a connection longing to the Montreal and Western Railway Company, for with the Canadian Pacific Railway at Pembroke, will be attended with great advantage in the development of that section of country. Then, Sir, it is proposed to ask for a subsidy to the Gatineau Railway Company, for a line of railway from Kazubazua to Le Desert, a distance of fifty miles, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, and not exceeding in the whole $160,000. It will be remembered that Parliament at its last Session granted a subsidy for the first fifty miles of that road, of $160,000 in all, but it has been found that it was not sufficient to enable the company who were organized in connection with that work, to obtain the capital that was necessary. My hon. friend (Mr. Wright) I am glad to see, has just taken his seat and he will come to my rescue if I fail in demonstrating to the House the great importance of the construction of the Gatineau Valley Railway. That hon. gentleman on more than one occasion, has drawn a picture of that country which I believe, from all I can learn from outside sources, is not at all too highly coloured, notwithstanding that he has a command of the English language which, I may say, is unequalled. I believe that the section of country which this line of railway proposes to open up affords an opportunity for successful development that is not equalled in many portions of the older Provinces of Canada. But I am informed they found in impossible to finance this railway, to obtain the outside aid that was necessary to nothing that so commends a man to the confidence of his secure its construction, for the reason that the fifty miles fellowmen as patriotism, and I believe if there was ever a Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

was regarded as too short a line to warrant the railway company in organizing for the construction of a line to reach that country which has been most improperly called "desert," and which I think should rather be called "garden." I think that the extension proposed by these Resolutions will enable the company to obtain the necessary capital. I may say that the Province of Quebec has given the best evidence it could of the value of opening up that country if possible by railway communication, for the Province has subsidized that line to the extent of 6,000 acres of land per mile for 75 miles. I hope and trust, in fact I have reason to believe, that this additional subsidy, without increasing the amount per mile, but extending the distance fifty miles, will enable that company to make arrangements for the prompt undertaking of the work, and I believe we will all be gratified on finding that the company with the subsidy given by the Province of Quebec, and the small subsidy asked from this Parliament, have been able to open up so interesting and important a section of country. Then I am asking for the extension of the subsidy granted last year to the Napanee and Tamworth Railway Company for a line of railway from Tamworth to Bogart and Bridgewater, not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole $70,400. I am quite certain the hon. gentleman who repre-sents the county will join most heartily with me in asking from this House this additional aid for a railway to which we granted a subsidy last year. It was a subsidy of but $3,200 per mile for 28 miles; and yet I be-lieve it has been found sufficient to induce capitalists to undertake to carry on that work, and that 28 miles are in a forward state of completion. The subsidy, I think, has been drawn on some 10 miles of that line already, and it is believed that the effect of this subsidy will be to enable that Company to vigourously prosecute the work and extend the line to a point which will enable the Company by a line already constructed to Bridgewater to connect with the Ontario and Quebec Railway. It is not necessary for me to detain the House at any great length in regard to a description of the country through which this railway and the railway to which I have just reforred will pass, because I endeavoured last Session to depict its importance and the results which are likely to be attained by opening it up. Then it is proposed to ask a subsidy for 50 miles more railway bea line of railway from the end of the line subsidised last Session (because I find there is an error in the Resolutions) towards Le Désert, which is an extension of the line of rail. way from St. Jérôme, to which corporation a subsidy for 50 miles was given last year. But that enterprise stands in the same position as the Gatineau Valley Railway, the promoters being unable, in consequence of the fact that the short distance of 50 miles does not form a sufficient basis on which to organize a company to proceed with the work; but I have reason to believe, and I do sincerely hope, that the effect of granting this subsidy, as in the case of the Gatineau Valley Railway, will be to enable the promoters to obtain from outside sources the additional aid required in order to accomplish the work. This Company have an additional subsidy from Quebec of $4,000 per mile for 18 miles, and $2,500 per mile for 12 miles, together with 4,000 acres of land per mile for 35 miles. With these combined subsidies I trust the work will be carried forward, and I am sure when I mention this is the road that is required to open up the splendid section of country that Father Labelle has been so successfully engaged in colonizing, I can make no statement to this House that would more commend the road to its favourable consideration. I regard the work in which that reverend gentleman is engaged as one entirely suited to the sacred office that he holds. I believe that next to religion there is true patriot found within the borders of Canada that patriot is Father Labelle. I believe it would be impossible to overrate the value of the successful exertions that reverend gentleman has been making in opening up and developing one of the most important tracts of country to be found in the whole of Lower Canada. I believe he is not only detaining hundreds and thousands who otherwise might find their way across the borders, but he is steadily paving the way and providing the means for drawing back his compatriots from the United States, and at no distant day we shall see one of the most thriving, one of the most fertile sections in Canada repatriated by the sons of Quebec, who will be brought back, and who will devote their energies to the development of that section of country. It is proposed to grant a subsidy for forty miles to the Miramichi Valley Railway for a line of railway from Fred-ericton to the Miramichi River, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole (instead of the subsidy proposed in 1883), $128,000. At the last Session I asked this House to appropriate an amount of $102,000 for the purpose of constructing some thirty-two miles of railway from the Intercolonial at the other end of this line. No work has up to the present time been accomplished further than surveys and preliminary operations in regard to undertaking construction. But upon reconsideration of that question, looking at it in all its phases, the Government arrived at the conclusion that it was a wiser course instead of appropriating that subsidy of $102,000. For the construction of 32 miles of the Miramichi Valley Railway, from the Intercolonial Railway to Fredericton, we believe it would be wise to construct, as a branch of the Intercolonial Railway, 14 miles to that important point, connecting the Intercolonial with very large lumbering operations, and affording an admirable feeder to that road; and we ask Parliament to appropriate for the extension trom the town of Fredericton to the Miramichi River, so as to afford communication from Fredericton to the Intercolonial at that point, by means of a line constructed under this subsidy, and the water communication afforded by the Miramichi. I may say that the Government of the Province of New Brunswick have also provided a subsidy of $3,000 per mile for the entire extent of this road, from Fredericton to the Intercolonial. Gentlemen of both sides of the House are aware that a very lively controversy has been going forward in regard to the proper location of that portion of the Miramichi road, where it in-tersects the Intercolonial. I may say that it has, I believe, originated largely in a controversy between two rival towns in the County of Northumberland, namely, Chatham and Newcastle. My hon, friend who so ably represents the County of Northumberland, will be better able to deal with this question than myself, but when I say that the course the Government have adopted in regard to this matter has the entire and cordial approval of that hon. gentleman, that it has the hearty support of the gentleman who represents the County of Northumberland in the Legislative Council of New Brunswick, and the hearty support and cooperation of two of the local members-and gentlemen of very high standing and ability they are—in the Local Legislature of New Brunswick, I think I have given the House the best evidence that the Government have not made a mistake in the proposal they have made with regard to that work. Then, Sir, I may say that we propose to ask the House for a subsidy for thirty miles of the Erie and Huron Railway for the line from Wallaceburg to Sarnia, the subsidy not to exceed $3,200 per mile, or not exceeding in the whole $96,000. Hon. gen-tleman who have looked at the map of that part of the country will find that the construction of these thirty miles of railway, extending the forty miles already built from Martin's Junction; and here I may say that I propose to Lake Erie to Lake Huron, will connect Lake Erie at Ron-deau Harbour, on the one side, with Lake Huron at Point Jacques Cartier Union Railway with the North Shore Rail-

Edward on the other, by the best line of communication that could be obtained, and a very important and valuable section of the country will be opened up by the construction of that line.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Opened up?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. When I say opened up, I mean that it will have facilities of railway communication; and I need not tell the hon. gentleman that at this period of the nineteenth century people imagine they are devoid of the advantages of civilization if they are not in close proximity to a railway somewhere; and therefore, I say, that these important townships will have new life and vigour given to them by the connection of the waters of Lake Erie with the waters of Lake Huron, by means of the construction of this section of thirty-two miles, and if it can be secured, as I am told it can, by this insignificant subsidy of $3,200 per mile, I think the House will regard it as a wise and judicious appropriation of public money. Then, Sir, I come to a still more important section of the country-the subsidy on the eighty-two miles of railway by which it is proposed to enable the Ontario and Pacific Railway Company to construct a line from Cornwall to Perth-a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, or not exceeding on the whole $262,400. 1 need not say to the House how valuable that connection is, because that section of the country is so near to us that I hope we are all aware of the value and importance of establishing that connection, and if that Company can, by the aid of $3.200 per mile, for eighty-two miles, secure the capital outside and enable them to effect its construction, an enormous distance will be saved between these two points. The branch which the hon. gentleman who has been engaged in pressing this work, has asked to connect with the city of Ottawa is not embraced in this Resolution, but I dare say that if they are able to secure the prompt construction of the other section acce to secure the prompt construction of the other section of the road, by this small subsidy, I think he will be able to come back with a good deal of confidence, and ask for a branch to connect it with the city of Ottawa. Then, Sir, it is proposed to ask for the Kingston and Pem-broke Company,—of which possibly you may have heard—a subsidy for a line of railway from Mississippi to Benfree not exceeding $2,200 per mile and rot exceeding Renfrew, not exceeding $3,200 per mile, and not exceeding on the whole $48,000. I may say that that Company have been making great efforts, and most successful efforts, to push a line of railway connecting Kingston with the Canadian Pacific Railway at Renfrew; and I believe, Sir, in their struggles their resources have been largely exhausted. I am in hopes that this small subsidy for which I am asking Parliament, and which I have no doubt Parliament will readily accord, will enable them promptly to secure the completion of that line, and we will have that important section of the country served by the Kingston and Pembroke Railway, brought into communication with the Canadian Pacific Railway at Renfrew. Then, Sir, it is proposed to ask a subsidy for ten miles of the Great Northern Railway Company, for that portion of their line between St. Jerome and New Glasgow, in the County of Terrebonne, not exceeding $3,200 per mile, or on the whole $32,000. I am glad to see my hon. friend the Secretary of State in his place, because he will be able to give to the House, as he has given to me, such a picture of that section of the country as I am sure will satisfy the House as it satisfied me, that it will be wise and judicious to vote this small amount to accomplish so important an object. Then, Sir, it is proposed to ask the House for a vote of $200,000 for the purpose of constructing a link of about three miles, and a bridge, between the Jacques Cartier Union Railway Junction with the Canadian Pacific Railway at or near St.

way proper, the subsidy on the whole not to exceed $200,000. This question has been in a peculiar position. owing to difficulties between the North Shore and Canadian Pacific Railway Company there has been a great block in the traffic of a large portion of the Province of Quebec, and a great body of the people have been greatly excited in consequence of having suffered greatly, owing to the difficulty of getting over these few miles, and establishing communication between these two roads. I do not know, Sir, that it will be found necessary to expend this money, but if it is necessary we ask this Parliament to provide $200,000 to overcome the obstruction to the traffic and avoid the injury and difficulty which have been sustained by a large portion of the people of Quebec, I helieve we are thoroughly warranted in asking Parliament for this appropriation. I am in hopes that having the power to make that expenditure will render it unnecessary to expend it. The Government have not the power of dealing with that question; they found it could only be dealt with by a process of litigation, in the courts of law, of which no person could foresee the ending. Under these circumstances, we have thought it right to ask Parliament to enable us to cut the Gordian knot by this appropriation of $200,000, to be expended if it be found to be absolutely necessary. Then, I propose to ask for a subsidy for seven miles of railway, from Richibucto to St. Louis, not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole $22,400. I may say that though a subsidy voted by the Province of NewBrunswick, of $3,000 per mile, and the aid in furnishing the rails granted by this Government, 28 miles of railway have been constructed, connecting the Intercolonial Railway with this section of country at St. Louis; and it is proposed to ask for this st bsidy of $3,200 per mile for an additional seven miles of Railway, to extend that line from Richibucto. My hon. friend, the member for Kent, N. B. (Mr. Landry) will be able to fully explain the importance of that small appropriation, and the great advantage that it will be to complete that line of communication.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I hope he approves of it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Well, I am afraid that is not the hon. gentleman's ground for complaint. I am afraid that his grounds of complaint would not be that we had made this small contribution, but that we had not been able to meet his views in reference to larger works which he desired should be projected in that county, but which we were compelled reluctantly to postpone, at all events, for the and the Legislature of New Brunswick have already appresent. Then, Sir, we ask, in order to extend a line of priated $3,000 a mile towards the construction of that postpone railway from Hopewell to Alma in Albert County, in the of the short line railway. That furnishes a subsidy, both Province of New Brunswick, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 from the Provincial Government and from the Dominion per mile, nor exceeding in the whole $51,200. Through the aid furnished by the Government of New Brunswick, that railway has been pushed down to its present point, and it is felt that it would be extremely important to give connect it with the short line at Fredricton. In addition to it these 16 miles of extension, which would enable it to secure water communication, and to become a still valuable feeder to the Intercolonial railway than more it is at present. Then, it is proposed to ask, for a line of railway from St. Andrews to Lachute in the county of Argenteuil, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor in the whole $22,400. Any person familiar with that section of country is aware that the construction of these seven miles of railway will being into connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway the important town of St. Andrews, or a town that will become a very important town when this railway communication is obtained; because not only the picturesque beauty of this section of contry will render it extremely attractive, but the water power, I am instructed, that will be reached and developed this think the section of the developed, by this short line of railway, will give a most valuable impetus to the creation and development of indus-

Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

for a subsidy for 68 miles of railway from the Grand Piles, on the river St. Maurice to Lake Edward-there is a clerical error in the resolution-not exceeding $3,200 per mile nor in the whole $217,600. Some portion of that line of railway has already been constructed, and the construction of this branch will open up a very valuable timber interest, and give it communication with that important line which was subsidized two Sessions ago, running from Quebec to Lake St. John. For a line of railway from Annapolis to Digby, in the Province of Nova Scotia, a subsidy is proposed, not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole $64,000. My hon. friends on the other side of the House who represent respectively the County of Digby (Mr. Vail) and the County of Annapolis (Mr. Ray) know very well the immense importance of putting in this short link of communication between Annapolis and Digby. I may say that an appeal of the very strongest character was made to me for aid in this regard by my hon. friend, the member for the County of Yarmouth (Mr. Kinney), who is quite as deeply interested as the hon. members for Annapolis and Digby are, in seeing this short line of communication completed. When I tell the House that from Halifax to Yarmouth, from the commercial and political centre of the Province of the extreme western point, a line of railway communication is already constructed with the exception of this twenty miles between Digby and Yarmouth, it will be understood what important and larger results may be expected to flow from the completion of this work. The subsidy, though small, is such as I hope will induce the Western Counties Railway Company, the Wind-sor and Annapolis Railway Company, and the Province of Nova Scotia by combined action, to secure the construction of this twenty miles of road, which at the present moment leaves broken the railway communication for the whole of the western shore of the Province of Nova Scotia. I am quite certain that I need not say another word to secure the hearty approval of hor say another word to socale the hearty approval of hon. gentlemen on both sides of the House for the small appropriation asked for this service of $64,000. Then, Sir, we ask for a branch line of the Central Railway from the head of Grand Lake to the Intercolonial Railway, between Sussex and St. John a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole $123,000. I may say that, in connection with the short line of railway, it is expected that a railway will be constructed from Fredericton to the Intercolonial Railway at Salisbury, near Moneton, Government, for about 40 miles of this line of railway, which is proposed to intersect the Intercolonial Raliway at that point, or at some point between Sussex and St. John, and opening up a very important section of country, I believe that this line will provide access with the only coal mining district in the Province of New Brunswick, independent of the asphalt district—the only coal mines from which it can reasonably be expected that a large and important supply of coal may be obtained; and any person acquainted with the advantage of the proximity of coal mines for the development of all the industries of a country, will see how important it will be for St. John and Fredericton, and all that region of country, to be thus brought into easy and near communication with the coal mining district that is likely to be successfully operated in the event of this subsidy being granted. I may sately leave any additional remarks on that subject to my hon. friend the member for Kirgs, N.-B. (Mr. Foster). Then, Sir, at the last Session of this House we provided for a line of railway from the Intercolonial Railway to Caraquet, and it has tries in that section of country. Then it is proposed to ask been found, as in the other cases adverted to, that the line was too short to enable the parties to make the necessary financial arrangements. It is now proposed to ask the House to extend the subsidy granted last Session for 24 miles further, from Caraquet to Shippegan Harbour, thus making that short line of communication, to which great importance was at one time attached, I know by this Government, and I believe also by my hon. friend opposite, from the Intercolonial Railway to the Harbor of Shippegan; and 1 am instructed by my hon. friend, the member for Gloucester (Mr. Burns) that the appropriation of this $3,200 a mile for the additional 24 miles, will enable $3,200 a mile for the additional 24 miles, will enable him to secure the prompt construction of the 40 miles between the Intercolonial Railway and Shippegan, fur-nishing, as I have said, a most valuable feeder to the Intercolonial Railway. I also propose to ask for authority to construct a branch of the Intercolonial Railway, 20 miles from Metepedia eastwards towards Paspebiac. I may say that $3,200 a mile was appropriated last Session for, I think, 100 miles of road to enable the Paspebiac to be connected with the Intercolonial Railway at Metapedia, but it was found. Intercolonial Railway at Metapedia, but it was found, although the Government of Quebec had provided an additional subsidy, that it was impossible to obtain the capital required for the construction of that work. It is felt by the Government to be very desirable to afford facilities for communication with the Intercolonial Railway in that section, and I propose in this Resolution to ask authority to construct the 20 miles I have already alluded to as forming a branch of the Intercolonial Railway from the Iutercolo niel towards Paspebiac. And I believe that, in connection with these appropriations asked for as branches of the Intercolonial Railway, we will find the additional traffic brought to the line will abundantly repay us for the outlay that is involved. I need not refer again to the concluding Resolution as I have already dealt with it-the fourteen miles in the County of Northumberland to connect the Intercolonial Railway from Derby station to Indian Town. I am giad to be able to say that I have got to the end of the Resolutions, and, for fear that hon. gentlemen might be alarmed at the total amount that is embraced in these Resolutions-I do not now refer to that amount that is necessary to do justice to the Province of Quebec, I do not refer to that amount that is necessary to do what I believe on both sides of the House we all earnestly desire, and that is to secure the Atlantic terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway, in a Canadian port. I do not refer to these large questions, but I refer to these smaller subsidies for lines that may to some extent be regarded in the light of local subsidies,—I say that, although the outlay amounts to a considerable sum, I am sure the House will be relieved when I tell them that the evidence the last two years gives us proves the soundness of the premises on which I have started, that we need not fear the expenditure of any portion of this money unless it is going to be attended with commensurate advantages to the country, unless it is going to bring such an amount of private capital into the country, unless it is going to be attended with such commercial development as will increase the trade and business and revenue of the country proportionately. I think I can give abundant evidence of that by reference to the experience of the last two years. The House was good enough to vote a sum of no less than $1,508,000 in the Session before the last for railways; they were good enough to vote at the last Session a sum of no less than $2,138,400; or, in the two Sessions, no less than $3,646,400. I may say to the House that, of that, the total amount expended up to the present moment, although $1,508,000 has been an appropriation made two years ago, and the whole of it has been made for over a year, the total expenditure under that appropriation of $3,646,400 is only $208,000. Mr. HOUDE. Why is it?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will tell the hon. gentleman why. I have endeavoured to explain to him why I think that is, because it is only where the appropriation of this moderate amount, it is because of the smallness of the amount of the subsidy, it is because the Government have been so careful to guard the public treasury of the country----

Mr. HOUDE. It is because the grants, as they are this year, are in many cases illusory, and the Government knows it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Precisely. The hon. gentleman may say that, and that is the very basis and foundation of the policy of the Government.

Mr. HOUDE. It is a wrong basis.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. We do not propose to do anything illusory. I tell my hon, friend that, if he supposes one dollar of this money has been put in the Resolutions two years ago, or last year, or this year, for the purpose of leading the public to expect that something would be accomplished that we did not expect would be accomplished, my hon. friend is entirely mistaken. I never have done it, and I never will ask the support of my colleagues for the appropriation of a single dollar of public money for a work that, as I believe, is illusory or calculated to mislead. Instead of being an advantage to the country or to the Government, nothing could be a more mistaken policy. My right hon. friend has suggested what I was about to say, that there is not a dollar appropriated in any one of these years that has not been appropriated on the earnest application of the parties interested and their strong assurance that the appropriation would be likely to result in substantial benefit and advantage. But, while I say that, I say that the guarantee that the House and the country have that there shall be no appropriation of public money under these Resolutions and under the policy of this Government that is not warranted is to be found in the fact that we do not propose to construct local railways in this country. We only propose to give a moderate, a comparatively small amount of aid where we believe the advantages of opening up and developing a section of country are so great that, upon commercial principles and on a commercial basis, private capital will be induced to come forward and supplement the amount granted and enable the road to be constructed. I say that, if these enterprises are enterprises that have no commercial foundation in them, they ought not to go on; if these roads are roads which are not required in the interests of the country to be built, they ought not to be built; and I say the best evidence that they cannot be built and will not go on and that the treasury will not be depleted under these Resolutions by a single dollar, unless the enterprise is of a character to warrant the appropriation on the soundest principles of political economy, it to be found in the fact that the appropriation is only sufon the ficient where there is a commercial object to be obtained and a country to be developed which, by this small aid and assistance, may be made effective and may be obtained. I might turn the attention of the House to the result of the past as the best evidence to prove that an appropriation of public money, however large, if given in this guarded way and upon this matured principle and upon the basis we have submitted to the House, will not endanger any raid upon the public Treasury or deplete it to any extent whatever. I say the evidence furnished by the past is, as I believe the evidence furnished by the future will be, that the policy we start upon is a sound one, that, it great national objects common to the interests of the whole country from end to end are involved, we are entitled to come here and ask for any sum of money that is required to carry out a national object, but for local roads and enterprises we must be restrained within such limits as will give only such fair and legitimate aid and assistance to enterprises that have within themselves, sufficient commercial basis to enable them to be carried to completion. I submit these Resolutions to the House in the believe that they will not only receive the support of the great body of gentlemen behind me who have so generously in the past given their aid and support to the Government, in whom they have confidence and upon whom they know they may confidently rely to treat all these questions from the standpoint of what we believe, in the light of the best information we can obtain, is the best interest of the country, but I believe I may confidently rely upon the support of a large portion, if not the whole body, of gentlemen opposite to us, who, I am certain, are as deeply interested as we are, and I hope will not be less ready to promote the best interests of this country.

Motion agreed to; and the House resolved itself into Committee.

(In the Committee.)

On paragraph 3,

For the construction of a line of Railway connecting Montreal with the harbours of St. John and Halifax by the shortest and best practicable route, a subsidy not exceeding $170,000 per annum for 15 years, or a guarantee of a vike sum for a like period as interest on bouds of the Company undertaking the work.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I propose to amend this Reso lution by adding after the words "best practicable route" the words " after the report of competent engineers."

Mr. GILLMOR The hon. gentleman has omitted to mention St. Andrews.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The Resolution covers the case as it stands, because you cannot get to St. John by the shortest route without getting to St. Andrews by the road already constructed.

Mr. GILLMOR. Still it should be mentioned. I do not like to see St. Andrews slighted.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. St. Andrews never can be slighted, because nature has placed it in a position which gives it the greatest advantage over any other winter port in Canada.

Mr. MULOCK. I think I heard the hon. Minister name the capital sum represented by these annuities. I desire to ask the rate of interest?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Capitalized at 5 per cent., $200,000 for 15 years, I make $2,075,922.

Mr. BLAKE. But we borrow money at 4 per cent. and therefore the delay of payment in this case-

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. There has been no arrangement to capitalize at any particular sum.

Mr. BLAKE. But when we are considering what it will amount to, we want to have the calculation accurate. As the Dominion borrows money at 4 per cent. the value of the delay to the Dominion, should be based on a calculation at 4 per cent. and not at 5 per cent., and the cost therefore to the Dominion of the annuity for 15 years, ought to be calculated on interest at 4 per cent. and not at 5 per cent. The result at 4 per cent. would be, that for the $170,000 a year for fifteen years, the annuity is worth $1,890,000 odd, and the other $30,000 is worth $355,00 making an aggregate capitulization on the proper calculation, considerably more than that which the hon. gentleman has stated. I desire to receive some further information on this proposal besides that which the hon. gentleman has given. I observe the proposal is for the construction of a line connecting Montreal with the harbours of St. John and Halifax by the shortest and most practicable route, a subsidy to be given not exceeding $170,000 a year. The papers laid before the House consist of the petition of the Great American and known as the Montreal and European Short Line Railway Company. We are acquainted with that company to some extent from the moderate and accurate and rigorously just description, which the hon. gentleman gave of it last Session, and the assurances that he gave to us upon the vote that was proposed as to their capacity with the aid he was giving, to carry out the work they were then undertaking. I should not be surprised if he had heard something from the counties of Pictou and Cumberland on more than one occasion since that period with reference to those assurances and the present condition of affairs in those interested counties. It is the same company which stands to the forefront on this occasion as the Montreal and European Short Line Railway Company perhaps thinking that the sub-contractors and the farmers and the traders of Pictou and Cumberland would prefer to deal with them under some other name than that of the Great American and European Short Line Company, as which they know them too well. They say in their petition :-

"That the total length of this line is about 800 miles, of which there are, at the present time, some 290 miles in operation, leaving about 510 miles to be constructed.

"That during the past year your petitioners made extensive surveys over the greater portion of the line, and partially completed about 90 miles of it "That owing to certain defects in the Act of Incorporation—now about to be amended—and their failure to obtain certain and suffi ient subsi-to be amended—and their failure to obtain certain and suffi ient subsidies, the work of construction has been temporarily suspended. "That your petitioners and their contractors have already expended nearly bal a million dollars in the prosecution of the construction of the said 90 miles. "Y ur petitioners respectfully submit, that the construction and con-

"Y ur petitioners respectfully submit, that the construction and con-solidation of the railways on the proposed route, as contemplated by your petitioners, are of great national importance, as it will be the natural extension of the Canadian Pacific and Grand Truck Railway systems to the seaports of the Maritime Provinces, and will form the shortest practical route to all of them. "Your petitioners believe that the completion of its system through Care Breach, will develop the large agricultural and mining interests in that Island, &c. 'Your petitioners therefore humbly pray, that for the completion of their railway between Montreal and New Glasgow, the annual sum of $300,000 may be appropriated for a period of at least fifteen years, to aid in the construction of those portions not already built between these points, and that the said aid or subsidy be granted and paid directly to the company as the work progresses; or in the form of a guarance of interest on the bunds, to be issued by the company for the purpose of interest on the bonds to be issued by the company for the purpose of construction. "And for the completion of their railway and in continuation of it from New Glasgow to Louisburg, your petitioners further pray, that in addition to subsidies heretofore granted to them in Nova Socia (which are wholly inadequate in view of the natural obstacles to be overcome) in the solid heremoted by transferring to them the Eastern Extension further aid be granted by transferring to them the Eastern Extension Railway with its present equipment."

So that the proposition of the Short Line Company was that it should, by the completion of the whole work, obtain an annuity of $300,000 a year, the continuation of the subsidy already voted, and the Eastern Extension Railway with its equipment. Then there is the report of the Chief Engin or, dated 27th March, to the Minister, in which he says :

dated 27th March, to the Minister, in which he says: "Having been instructed to report to you upon a scheme proposed for the establishment of a short line of railway between Montreal, St.John, Halifax, and Sydney, C.B., I have the honour to state, that vory consider-able concern appears to have seized upon the public mind of Canata at the prospect of the winter port of our great trank lines being selected in the United States; and that a number of the representatives of the people assembled at Ottawa for their parliament duties, feeling how im-portant it is that the trade of Central, North-Western and Western Canada, should find its way in winter to the seaboard of Eastern Canada, have petitioned the Government for the construction of a line of railway connecting our two great trunk lines, the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railway, with the scaboard at St. John, Halifax, and Sydney, by means of a railway connecting with those lines at Montreal and proceeding by the shortest and most direct practicable route to be obtained. The action taken so far has resulted in two offers being made for the construction of such a line, one being for the construction being made for the construction of such a line, one being for the cons-truction of a road from Montreal to Halifax, St. John, and New Glasgow, for a subsidy of $30,000 a year for 20 years, and the other for a line from Montreal to St. John, Halifax, and Sydney, for a subsidy of $300,000 a year for 20 years, and the other for a line Note a bold can be set only in the subsidy already granted on the sections between Oxford, and new Glasgow, and Canso, and Sydney, amounting to $430,000, in addition to the transfer, free of charge, of the line from New Glasgow to Canso, 80 miles in length."

Now we have not got the other offer. Amongst the papers European Short Line Railway Company, to be hereafter | the hon. gentleman has brought down we do not find any Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

but the offer of the European, American and Short Line Railway Company.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I found that the letter was marked personal, and when preparing these papers for the public I had some doubt as to whether I should make it public.

Mr. BLAKE. Well, it is impossible that a man can tender for a public work, that this tender can be submitted to the Minister, that the Minister can order his engineer to report upon it, that the engineer can report upon it, and state its contents-

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will show it to the hon. member.

Mr. BLAKE. I don't want to see it at all; the question is, whether Parliament ought not to see it, and whether the Minister can lay upon the Table a report describing the document without laying the document itself upon the Table. It is impossible for us to judge of it. The hon. Minister must take one of two courses-he can receive a personal tender-

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. It is not a tender.

Mr. BLAKE. Well, an offer, which is a tender. The Minister can receive a personal offer, an offer which is so laid before the House that he can use it in the public interest.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. It was not in the nature of a tender at all.

Mr. BLAKE. Then it was an offer. The action taken so far has resulted in two offers being made for the construction of such a line-one being between Montreal, Halifax, St. John and New Glasgow, for $300,000 a year. Now we have only got one of these offers, the offer is not laid before us. Either the Minister ought to have placed him self in such a position as to be able to bring down that offer, or he ought not to have submitted it to his engineer, and he ought not to have brought the report to Parliament. At present we are not in a position to deal with this subject satisfactorily. Then the report goes on to give the distances. which I need not read, because they have been already stated. He goes on to point out the importance of shortening the distances, and he says:

"Should it be determined to grant aid towards the construction of such a line of connection, I beg to suggest that no particular company be specified, but that the subsidy be given to such company as shall satisfy the Government of its ability to carry the enterprise to a suc-cessful termination. I would also recommend that ample security be taken for the construction and efficient operation of the road, the condi-tions being that any failure, either in completion or in operation, be followed by forfeiture of the entire property. Of the two offers received, the first appears to be the most favourable and, in my opinion, affords sufficient inducement for the optionize to be taken up? sufficient inducement for the enterprise to be taken up.

Now, Sir, so far we have received the statement of the engineer that the Minister supplements now with two offers for the construction of this work, of which, he says, the first is the most favourable and affords sufficient inducement. But we have not got the first; it is not laid before us; the Minister says it is personal, and he does not feel that he can lay it before Parliament. That was on the 27th of March. What happened meanwhile we know not, but on the 3rd of April the engineer reports again :

"I have again the bonour to report upon the scheme for a short line railway connecting Montreal with St. John, Halifax and Sydney, and I now beg to suggest the division of the line, for purposes of construction, into two sections, the western section, extending from Montreal to Moncton, the headquarters of the Intercolonial Railway, and the eastern section, from Moncton to Sydney. The length of road to be constructed may be estimated approximately at:

(with Oxford Branch) 240 '' Western Section Eastern

and North-West, and to enable them to compete successfully with the and North-West, and to enable them to compete successfully with the American ports for the ocean-bound business to and from the west and North-West and the pacific coast; and it is believed that this object will be att ined by the consummation of the short line project. "In my report of the 25th ult., I stated that I considered than an offer which had been received was sufficient to induce the taking up of the enterprise. This offer was to build the missing links necessary to com-thet the direct short line from Montreal to Sydney. for an annual subsidy enterprise. Into oner way to our the missing mass necessity or com-plete the direct short line from Montreal to Sydney, for an annual subsidy of $300,000 for fifteen years, plus the subsidy of $480,000 already grant-ed, and the free git of the Eastern Extension Railway, eighty miles in length. I may now state, however, that the scheme might be under. taken on terms still more favourable, and I beg to submit the following suggestions: . That, for the construction of the western section a grant of $140,000 per anoum for fifteen years bo made for a guarantee, or a similar sum as interest on the bonds of the Company undertaking the work for fifteen years, in aid of the construction of the shortest and best line to be found from Montreal to St. John and Halifax, in accordance with the resolu-tion of last year, appropriating aid to the International Railway. In the case of the Eastern Section, I would suggest a direct subsidy of $60,000 annually for öfteen years, or a guarantee of a similar sum as interest on bonds of the company undertaking the work for fifteen years, also the present subsidy of $480,000, and the transfer in fee simple of the East-ern Extension with its present equipment; the conditions of such aid being the construction of a direct short line from Moncton to Sydney, comprising the section from Moncton to New Glasgow, with branches to Uxford Station, on the Intercolonial Railway, to Pugwash and Pictou (the line from Moncton to New Glasgow connecting with the Eastern Extension); also the ection from the Gut of Canso, at the eastern term-nus of the Eastern Extension to Sydney, Cape Breton. "The standard of the road should be-Western Section, that of the Intercolonial Railway, both in construction and equipment; the Eastern Extension, that of the Eastern Extension Railway between New Glasgow and Oanso. The location of both sections should be subject to the approval of His Excellency the Governor General in Council. "I would also recommend that from any company receiving these subsidies an ample guarantee be taken for the completion of the work within three years from 1st July next; and that the contract should we bedge to the provent on the tore the completion of the work from Montreal to St. John and Halifax, in accordance with the resolu-within three years from 1st July next; and that the contract should embody such safeguards as the Government may deem necessary to secure the public interest."

Now you will see that in the first instance the Chief Engineer recommends a certain plan consistent with one or other of the offers before him; that a few days later he reports, without any data, without any offer being made, without any suggestion that we know of, that the work might be undertaken under a more favourable plan by dividing it into two sections, and he proposes the allocation of the sum of $200,000, a year divided into two sums, $140,000 and $60,000. Well, that plan is not adopted. The Government has not adopted the suggestion of the Chief Engineer-I do not propose to deal with the other part of the line at this moment-with reference to the western part of the line, the incomplete links between Montreal and Moncton, where he proposes to give $170,000 a year instead of $140,000 a year as the subsidy. Now I should like some explanation of the reason why the report of the engineer was departed from, and why it is proposed to take for this a larger subsidy than he suggests. I should like further to know how it comes that proposals which seem to be much less than what are suggested in other quarters of his correspondence, are deemed by the hon. gentleman to be adequate to the accomplishment of the object in view. I will not, at this moment, use the expression which has been already used in this debate with reference to the several proposals of the Government, but I think the very circumstances to which the hon. gentleman alluded in proposing to give subsidies running into the millions, whereas up to this time there had been only a pledge of a comparatively trifling amount of $200,000, although we were assured on each occasion that these subsidies would be adequate to accomplish the object in view, which was the immediate commencement, and rapid construction of railways-I say these circumstances entitle us to some further information and some better assurances as to the financial basis and the statistical data upon which the hon. Minister to-day, with equal positiveness and, I apprehend, in many circumstances, with like results, assures us of the satisfactory character of the financial bases supplemented by this grant. As I have said. papers have been brought down which indicate a difference of opinion. I do not, however, wish to complicate this "The object of this proposed short line of railway is to bring the of opinion. 1 do not, nowever, wish to complicate this winter ports of Canada as near as possible to the wheat field of the west particular Resolution with that portion which belongs to the eastern end, and these papers to a considerable extent apply to that end. But one paper which is laid before the House, dated March 13th, 1881, is a paper eigned by a number of members of Parliament from the Maritime Provinces, and is as follows :--

"We, the undersigned members of the Parliament of Canada from the Maritime Provinces would urge upon the Government the extreme desirability of taking immediate measures for procuring the extension or connection of the Canadian Pacific Railway, from Montreal to or with the following ports of the Maritime Provinces, to wit: St. Andrews, St. John, Halifax and Louisbourg, by the shortest practicable line, and having reason to believe that the appropriation of $300,000 per annum for twenty years to whatever company may have satisfied the Government of their ability to promptly complete the line, will secure the immediate construction of this important work, request that Government be asked to make provision for such a subsidy."

That seems to me to bear a very strong resemblance to the offer which the hen. gentleman calls a personal offer; in fact, as far as the description goes, it is the same thing-it was an offer for $300,000 a year for twenty years, and you find the request of a large number of members was that $300,000 a year for ten years should be appropriated for this purpose. The other material which applies to this portion of the line does not give any suggestion as to the amount of What I would therefore desire from the hon. the aid. gentleman is, further information as to the offer to which I have referred, and which has not been brought before us, further information as to the circumstances under which the Chief Engineer, between 27th March and 3rd April, presented different reports; further information as to the date on which the Chief Engineer proposed $140,000 a year as adequate for the construction of the link respecting which we are now asked to vote; further information as to the circumstances under which, and the data upon which, the Government proposed $170,000 a year as adequate for that purpose. So much in regard to the finances, and in this connection I have no doubt that the Government has had under consideration the question of the route, and to some extent the difficulties of that route. And they will be able to give us information which has not yet been furnished in sufficient detail, but to which the Committee is entitled before being called upon to pass this item. For example, I would like to know what the present view of the Government is as to the route to be adopted; the general direction of that route; how much will be within the Province of Quebec, how much within the State of Maine, how much within the Province of New Brunswick; what the general character of the country will be on each of the three different routes through which the road might pass; whether, speaking generally-I do not expect precise details-the character of the country for the purpose of railway construction is about the same, or are some parts much more difficult than others ? Furthermore, I wish to know what mode the Administration proposes to adopt in order to grapple with the difficulty of subsidising the road, in so far as that road runs through the State of Maine? We recollect the mode by which they got rid of that difficulty, or evaded that difficulty, last year or the year before, when it was proposed to extend the Megantic line-I forget the technical name of the linethe Government asked the House to grant $3,200 a mile for a certain number of miles-I forget the number, but it was a considerable number.

It being six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

Mr. BLAKE. Mr. Speaker, at six o'clock I was pointing out that difficulty had been experienced last year with respect to the extension to Maine, and it had been got over by the Government giving a grant to a reilway already completed, as they said, with a view to its extension through Maine, but the grant was given on the mileage in the Province; and I fancy that the expenditure, the payment under that particular subsidy which was given to iron or steel Mr. BLAKE.

rails once again for that completed road, is the main payment which has been made by the Government under the subsidies. I fancy, when the hon. member stated that something under $200,000 had been paid out of the Treasury, he included in that statement $15,600, which, if I recollect rightly, was paid in respect of a road which had already been ironed before the subsidy was granted, in order to furnish it with new rails; and therefore, in respect of new enterprises, a much smaller sum than $200,000, not more than $30,000 or $40,000, has yet been paid under these subsidies. As I was saying, it is important to know what the scheme of the Administration is with respect to aiding a road through foreign territory. It is also important to know, with respect to the plan brought forward last Session, as to the extension of the road through Maine by means of the subsidy granted. As I have said, it was with the view to making arrangements for the extension through Maine. What has been accomplished? Has the road been pushed through Maine? If so, what arrangements are now to be made with reference to that particular enterprise? On those points, on the question of alternative routes, which pre-sented themselves to the hon. Ministers' mind, and which they must have had before them in considering what subsidy would be sufficient-because if they had relation to the route, they involved the question of mileage, and of the character of the work-on these and on other points to which I was referring before the House rose, I think we should have further information before the Resolution is adopted.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I need not say how gratified I am to find that the policy propounded in this Resolution, and so frankly and fully stated to the House, has met with the unqualified approval of the leader of the Opposition.

Mr. BLAKE. I have not said a word about it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I think when the hop. gentleman allowed the Resolutions to go into Committee without a single word, he gave the fullest and best assurance that he could give, that he had no objection to the policy so fully and frankly stated to the House. In addition to that it is extremely gratifying to me to know that the hon. gentleman is obliged to offer such weak and feeble critisisms of the position in which the question has been presented. On the great question contained in this Resolution, he hon. gentleman has not had a single word to say; on the principle, the largest feature of the public policy, and the largest appropriation of public money, the hon. gentleman has not said a single word. I think, having allowed the Resolution to pass into Committee without a single word, and having allowed these three grants to pass without a single observation, I am justified—I think the hon. gentleman will admit-in assuming that I have his entire confidence and support as regards so much of the Resolution.

Mr. BLAKE. Then the hon. gentleman is mistaken.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. All I can say is, that I have not discovered, on former occasions, that the hon. gentleman is wont to conceal his opinions; when he does not agree with the views of the Government, he is not in the habit of preventing the House from knowing it. I am glad, however, to be able to explain to the hon. gentleman that the discrepancy which he finds between the report of Mr. Schreiber and this Resolution has been occasioned by the fact that although a large number of the gentlemen sitting on both sides of this House arrived at the conclusion that the House would be warranted in appropriating $300,000 a year for twenty years, to accomplish so great an object—an object in which I entirely concur-and I have no hesitation in saying that this great and important object could not be obtained on easier or better terms than were stated in the memorial presented by a large body of gentlemen on both sides of the House, and the Government would, in my opinion,

But it is the duty of the Government not to provide outside and excessive means for accomplishing any object, however important. It is the duty of the Government to study and inform themselves by every possible means, not the largest, but the smallest appropriation of public money which will accomplish an object, however important. I am able to say to the hon gentleman, and I say it without hesitation, that I believe the means propounded in the Resolution, of $200,000 a year, for fifteen years, instead of $300,000 for twenty years, will be found quite sufficient to attain the very important object which is aimed at in the Resolution. And the Government having by careful enquiry, by communication with the ablest railway men in the country, by communication with gentlemen connected with the Province of Nova Scotia, the Province of New Brunswick, and the Province of Quebec, gentlemen who had the very best means of forming a judgment and arriving at a conclusion, we can safely calculate on accomplishing this important object without exceeding the amount proposed in the Resolution to which the hon. gentleman seems to take such grave exception. I am glad, however, to find that it is the smallness of the amount and not its largeness which has occasioned such an elaborate criticism. The hon. gentleman has had something to say with reference to the Short Line Railway Company. Well, Sir, that is quite foreign to the subject. The hon. gentleman knows, if he has taken the pains to read the Resolution, that it is not an appropriation to the Short Line Railway Company at all. It is provided in this Resolution that the Government shall have the power to make these arrangements in whole or in part, either for one section or the other, or with one company, covering the whole, or two companies, as the case may be found most convenient. It empowers the Government, within the limits of the Resolution, to make these arrangements with any Company that will give the Government solid and substantial and unqualified guarantees of their ability to carry the work to completien; and therefore, until the Short Line Railway Company is in a position to do that, they will not obtain any contract under the arrangement. The hon. gentle-man has reminded me of the opinion I expressed last Session in regard to that Company; and it is an opinion which I have no reason to qualify at the present moment. I say that if that Company had been able to realize the expectations which were held out to them by the Govern-ment of Nova Scotia and the Government of New Brunswick, there would have been no difficulty what-ever in carrying the work promptly to completion. They entered into a contract for the construction of a portion of the work, fully relying, upon the understanding with the Government of Nova Scotia, that they were to obtain the Pictou Branch and the Eastern Extension on favourable terms; and they entered into it with the understanding, on the part of the New Brunswick Government, that they were to obtain a subsidy for the line between certain points. In fact, at the instance of that Company the New Brunswick Legislature changed the charter, changed the line, changed the appropriation, that both these objects failed, and that it was found that men who were prepared to pay out any amount of money, men who themselves did furnish a quarter of a million of money, as fast as required, to go on with the work, and that without having, down to this hour, received a dollar of subsidy from this Government-I say they could have obtained any amount required in order to carry on the work. But when it was found that the object they had in view had been defeated and frustrated, the Company came to the conclusion that it would not answer to go forward with a comparatively small work, and the construction company employed by them consequently were unable to carry on the work. The project broke down, not from its magnitude, not from the large amount required, but from its smallness, and from the fact 187 that its proportions having dwindled down so much, they could not carry out the objects they had before them. The Company has been reorganized, and they will not only have to show, before making any arrangements with this Government, that they have ample means at their disposal, but they will have to give the most substantial guarantees of their ability to cover the entire cost. I trust that the observations I have made will be sufficient to meet the objections taken on that point, because they will show that we do not propose to be in the hands of any company, but to make arrangements with whoever is able to give evidence that they can promptly carry to completion any underta-kings they may make. Now, with reference to the question of route, the hon. gentleman has stated that when the proposed appropriation was taken last year for the International Railway, for the purpose of laying that road with steel rails, a portion of the short line to St. John and Halifax-and I may say, to embrace the views of the hon. member for Charlotte, to St. Andrewswhen I say that it was practically decided to furnish such means as would make that which was be one of the links of communication on the short line by a first-class road, by giving it steel rails, it was distinctly indicated, and was embraced in the law on the Statute Book, as the hon. gentleman knows, that it was with the view of obtaining a short line across the State of Maine. But if the hon. gentleman will read these Resolutions he will find that the proposal contained in them only binds the Government to thisto obtaining what is the shortest and best practicable route, after the report of competent engineers, to St. John, to Halifax. and to Sydney. So that the House will hold the Government responsible, under the obligation they assumed, that whatever route is selected, whatever route obtains the advantage and benefit of this subsidy, shall be a route that will be found to be the shortest and best practicable line within these points, and for the purpose of reaching those ports on the Atlantic coast, without any qualification whatever. I think, Sir, the hon. gentleman, in the absence of such surveys and explorations and examinations as may be found necessary, would not wish to commit the Government to any particular line more definitely. There would be no object in adopting a course of that kind, because it would only be calculated to fetter the Government and frustrate the project they have undertaken, which is, purely and simple, the project of reaching these ports in our own country by the shortest and best practicable ronte which can be found, after careful examination.

Mr. BLAKE. I cannot say that we have any further information than we had when the hon. gentleman rose, I may say to the hon gentleman, with reference to his prior remark that I obtained from other sources all the information which it was possible to obtain on the subject of the earlier two of these Resolutions, so that I did not ask him for it. I thought I might get something out of him. however, on the subject of this third Resolution, and I have not succeeded. I dare say there is more to tell about the first two; and if we were to hear all about them, no doubt he would have a long and interesting story to tell, as well as many others. But, after all, perhaps a time will come for the discussion of that subject. But on this Resolution, on which information is to be obtained, he has not given me an answer to any of the propositions I submitted for his consideration; and when he has not given us any information, I give my conjecture. I believe that the first offer was made by Mr. Stephen, or by someone else conected with the Canadian Pacific Railway, if not in his capacity as President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, in his capacity as a member of the New Brunswick Syndicate. When we find an offer of that kind made, when we find the engineer referring to it in his report, and without any reason being given, recommending that the grant should be given to one company for the whole of this work—when we find him reporting a plan which he does not say has been suggested to him by anybody, and when he refers to no document-I want to know on what plan it is proposed to divide the work. This is proposed for the Great Short Linethat we should have from the Pacific Coast, on the one hand, to St. John, Halifax, St. Andrews, Sydney or Louisburg; and the hon. gentleman proposes to cut it in two, and to give part to one company and part to another-at least the engineer proposes that, and the hon. gentleman accedes to it. This change was pointed out to the engineer, and the engineer adopted the proposed change. But he gives no reason for the change, and the Minister has given us no reason for the change from one line to two. Then he proposes a different distribution of $200,000 a year which is now to be voted; and the hon. gentleman, when asked for information, says: I have the assurance of gentlemen from the different Provinces who have considered this subject, and they are quite satisfied that this vote will be enough. Who are they? What is their data? He does not give us any data. He does not tell us anything on which we can form a possible conjecture. What proportion is this of the estimated cost? We are asked to deal with it purely on confidence, and the hon. gentleman himself felt that it was so loose that he must put in the condition that there is to be a report of competent engineers. Well, we have had reports of competent engineers before, and we have had results not the most advantageous from them. My opinion is, that it was the duty of the Minister to have formulated a plan, to have obtained information which would have enabled him to bring something intelligible before us. The hon. gentleman stated, in his first statement, then in his second, and now in his his statement, then posal to grant $140,000 a year is not based on the report of his engineer. On what it is based, we are not told. He says it will be enough. We are to take that on trust, and if it is not enough, I suppose there will be another application. The hon. gentleman says that I complain that it is too small. I do not complain that it is too small. I point out that it does not accord with proposals made by persons who presumably had calculated the cost; and I am entitled to enquire what his basis of calculation is; but I do not get the information. He does not tell me the cost of the missing link between Montreal and Moncton, what proportion of the cost this subsidy will be, or what the other resources will be? Nor has he explained why it is proposed to dissever this and make it an affair of two com-panies instead of one? Then the hon, gentleman says that the Short Line Company did not get the assistance from the Province of Nova Scotia and the Province of New Branswick that was bargained for. Now, their own statement, in the petition that I have read, is, that owing to certain defects in the Act of Incorporation now about to be amended, and their failure to obtain certain and sufficient subsidies, the work on construction has been temporarily suspended. They do not say that anybody broke faith with them, or had declined to give them something that had been promised. Therefore, I must maintain that the Committee has not been supplied with that information which is necessary to enable it to judge fairly of the expediency of this proposal. We have not the slightest idea, even in a general sense, of the route that is intended to be proposed ; we have I pointed out awhile ago, the report of the engineer sugnot the slightest idea of the plan which is intended to be gests a subsidy of $15,009 for fitteen years with the existing adopted. The hon. gentleman says it is not given to a com- subsidies and with the Eastern Extension Railway, as what pany, and therefore it may be given to any company that answers the exigency. He has not even told us what corporations there are with corporate powers adequate to perform this business; he has not even laid before us the names of those companies with which it is possible for him to con-tract in the present state of things. We do not know what $335,500 in cash, and therefore this is less by $335,000 than organizations have power to deal with the matter; we do the view of the Chief Engineer as to what would be necesnot know what arrangements are possible, or even what sary. There is also important information as to the views Mr. BLAKE.

arrangements may be made between now and next Session. And now, within a very few days of prorogation, we are called on, in this hurried manuer, to dispose of a very important question, on what I maintain is wholly inadequate information.

Mr. McISAAC. The hon. Minister is mistaken, when he attributes the failure of the Short Line Company to a disappointment met at the hands of the Local Government. According to his own report, the contract for building the branch between Oxford and New Glasgow was signed on the 28th July, 1882. The Local Government came into office on the 3rd August, 1882; he cannot, therefore, maintain that on account of any disappointment by the Local Government, the failure occurred. He may say that the preceding Local Government disappointed the Company, but that cannot be the case either, because the Nova Scotia Syndicate was under an engagement with that Government to get the Eastern Extension, so that no matter what view we take of it, the present and the late Government are innocent as far as disappointing the Short Line Company in finishing their contract between Oxford and New Glasgow is concerned. I want to ask the hon. Minister if the subsidies already granted, which are included in the vote here, are the $256,000 voted last year to the Short Line Company and the $224,000 voted in 1882?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes.

Mr. McISAAC. Does the Company forfeit or surrender the $256,000 voted last year?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I may tell my hon. friend that I propose in the Bill to amend that portion of it which assigns that subsidy, especially to that Company, so as to leave our hands. perfectly free.

Mr. MoISAAC. Has the Company received any portion of the $224,000 voted in 1882, to build the Oxford Branch?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Not a dollar.

Mr. McISAAC. Can the hon. gentleman give me the information I asked earlier in the Session, as to whether the labourers and sub contractors are to be paid?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. They have not been paid, to my knowledge, but I think they may expect payment soon. No arrangements will be made that will not cover their payment.

Mr. HOUDE. I propose, in amendment, to add after the words "the shortest and best practicable route," the words on Canadian soil."

Amondment negatived; and paragraph agreed to.

On paragraph 4,

For the construction of a line of Railway from Oxford Station, on the Intercolonial Railway, to Sydney or Louisburg, a subsidy not exceeding $30,000 per annum for 15 years, or a guarantee of a like sum for a like period as interest on the bonds of the company undertaking the work, in addi-tion to the subsidies previously granted, and also a lease or transfer to such company of the Eastern Extension Railway, from New Glasgow to Canso, with its present equipment.

Mr. BLAKE. I think the hon. gentleman ought to give us some further explanations in reference to this also. subsidies and with the Eastern Extension Railway, as what would be necessary to ensure the construction of this line of railway. What the hon. gentleman has proposed is $30,000 a year instead of the $60,000 which the Chief Engineer suggests; that is, as I have said, capitalizing it at 3 per cent., as I do, the $30,000 a year would be equal to $335,500 in cash, and therefore this is less by $335,000 than of others in this matter to be found in the papers on the Table. Several gentlemen, Dr. Cameron, Mr. Campbell, Mr. Dodd, Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Paint, have signed a memorandum in which they say:

"As it was found necessary to give the Pictou Branch which cost over $2,400,000-$600,000 in cash and 160,000 acres of Crown Lands-in order to induce a company to construct a railway from New Giasgow to the Strait of Oanso; and as the said Company and the Local Govern-ment of Nova Scotia successively sold their interest in the said Pictou Branch and Eastern Extension from New Glasgow to the Strait of Canso for $1,200,000, which is only half the original cost of the Pictou Branch alone, we consider that a subvention, consisting of the Eastern Exten-sion alone and $3,200 per mile, is totally inadequate for the construction of a railway from the Strait of Canso to Louisburg, in view of the facts: (1.) That the Pictou Branch pays each year about $60,000, as re-peatedly estimated by both political parties in Nova Scotia, over running expenses; and (2) that the Eastern Extension actually earned $9,000 less expenses; and (2) that the Eastern Extension actually earned $9,000 less than running expenses last year. "A railway from New Glasgow to Louisburg would prove a valuable feeder to the Intercolonial, &c."

They point out:

"The short line from Montreal to New Glasgow would not have as much interest in extension eastward of New Glasgow as the Intercol-nial from New Glasgow to Halifax."

And they point out :

"A larger subsidy would be required to induce the same Company

"A larger subsidy would be required to indice the same Company to undertake the Cape Breton section, concurrently with other sections of the short line from Montreal to Louisburg. "Any railway scheme, therefore, such as agreed upon by the Maritime members supporting the Government, having in view the shortest practical route between Montreal and St. Andrews, St. John, Halifax, and Louisburg, unless it provides that the Cape Breton section of that line shall be commenced, prosecuted and finished concurrently with the other sec-tions of the short line, either by the same company or by the Dominion Government, will unfairly discriminate in favour of the unconstructed sections of the line west of New Glasgow, and render it more difficult to secure extension from the Strait of Canso to Louisburg after the thort line will be finished to New Glasgow, than at Present?

I do not know whether these arguments had to do with the course of the hon, gentleman in proposing there should be a separation of the interests, and that the Short Line Company should be cut up into two short line companies, but it may be so. But in view of what I have here, in view also of the fact that the statement made by the hon, gentleman last Session has not been verified by events, in view of the fact that his engineer reported that an annual subsidy of twice the amount he is now proposing would be necessary in order to secure the construction of this line, in view of the fact that he is thus proposing to grant $335,000 less than the Chief Engineer considers necessary, the Committee is entitled to learn what the grounds are on which he expects this subsidy will be adequate to the construction of the line; and in order that the hon. gentleman may not fall innocently, of course, as usual, into a misapprehension of my meaning, I beg, in advance, to say I am not complaining of the smallness of the grant, but am merely pointing out to the hon, gentleman that his engineer indicates this grant is inadequate, and if he has other information to show Parliament that the grant is adequate, Parliament should be put into possession of it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am very glad to be able to remove the difficulty suggested by the hon. gentleman. The Chief Engineer reported on a line from Moncton. The Resolution provided for a line from Oxford station, or sixty miles less than in the former case, the Intercolonial Railway being used between Moncton and Oxford, instead of the construction of a new line, involving some sixty miles additional, which accounts for the difference between the two amounts.

Paragraph agreed to.

On paragraph 5,

To the Quebec Central Railway Company, for a line of railway from Beauce Junction to the International Boundary Line, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 permile, nor exceeding in

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman did not lay on the Table any papers at all connected with the Quebec Central Railway. I am consequently obliged to ask him to make an oral statement.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I thought I had laid a communication upon the Table, with reference to this. I think I laid it upon the Table this afternoon. I may say that I had an interview with the gentlemen representing that railway, and they stated that the subsidy such as I proposed, in addition to what they have from the Province of Quebec, would enable them promptly to take up and complete that connection, and this subsidy is proposed to cover sixty-six miles, from Beauce Junction or St. Joseph's, where the separation between the portion running to Montreal and the portion running to the international boundary would take place, to connect with the present International Railway, near the boundary of the State of Maine.

Well, the hon. gentleman is mistaken. Mr. BLAKE. The two papers he laid on the Table this afternoon do not comprise any statement with reference to this. Here we are dealing with a company, to which a grant is proposed to be given. The Committee will observe that this Resolution proposes that, where grants are not made to named companies, "the other subsidies shall be granted to such companies as shall be approved by the Governor in Council as having established, to his satisfaction, their ability to construct and complete the said railways respectively." Now, that is the proposition of the condition the Government thought it proper, when they asked Parliament to permit them to grant a subsidy without naming the company, to prescribe that the company must be such a one as should have satisfied the Governor in Council of its ability to construct and complete the railway. Now, we have a named company, with which we are dealing at this moment, and no doubt the rule is not more rigorous with reference to the unnamed than with reference to the named, and it must be presumed that the named Company has already complied with the condition which the unnamed companies are to comply with before they get grants or subsidies; that is, that the named Company has established to the satisfaction of the Governor in Council its ability to construct and complete the railway referred to. If that has been established to the satisfaction of the Governor in Council, the evidence by which it was established ought to be laid before Parliament, in order that Parliament may be able to judge in the matter. The hon. gentleman has laid no evidence before us, has not even made a statement; we know not who are the corporators, we know not what the capital stock subscribed is, we know not what the capital stock paid up is, and we know not what is the financial basis of the Company. We have nothing whatever to indicate with reference to this Company its bond fides, about which I say nothing, for I know nothing; or its ability, about which I say nothing, for I know nothing, but upon which we certainly ought to have some evidence before we are asked to grant a subsidy to it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I would draw my hon. friend's attention to the fact that, while it is quite true that, where the Company is named, the subsidy is voted for that Company, but the Company cannot obtain a dollar of that subsidy until they make an agreement with the Government, and before they make the agreement they will require all the evidences of their ability to carry out the contract and to meet such obligations as are prescribed in that agreement; so that the fact of the Government being empowered to make an arrangement with that Company does not involve that any such arrangement will be made, because it would. depend upon the Company being able to comply with the stipulations prescribed by the Government.

Mr. BLAKE. Then, has it been thought premature, before bringing down these Resolutions, to enquire what the premature to enquire into what their scheme is, in order to ensure construction, whether they will be able to construct and complete the road with this subsidy? Am I to be told that this is a matter to be done afterwards, after we have passed the legislation and are prorogued, and that the Government has not thought fit to enter into any such enquiry beforehand and are not ready to make such a statement to the Committe now as to the bená fides of the Company, as to who are its stockholders, as to what they have subscribed and as to how the road is expected to be completed. Is that the case?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I may say that where the Government have put in the name of the Company they have such general information as leads them to the conclusion that the Company will be able to carry out the undertaking on the terms prescribed, but that does not bind them. They are entirely free until they have made the agreement, and are satisfied of the ability of the parties to comply with the engagements they have entered into, and until those parties have made such an agreement as will carry out what the Governor in Council may require.

Mr. HALL. Although this line, which it is proposed to aid, is not exactly in the section of country which I represent, I have a general knowledge of the status of the Quebec Central Railway Company, and as this is a point of interest at this moment, I may say that this is not a new or unknown Company. It was established twelve or thirteen years ago, for the purpose of constructing a railway between Sherbrooke and Quebec. That railway has been com-pleted and running, 139 miles of it, for a number of years, entirely completed and equipped. Lat-terly, a section of road incorporated under the name of the Lévis and Kennebec Railway Company, a local road, got into financial difficulties, was brought to the sheriff's sale, and the Quebec Central became possessed of the road, as much of it as was in existence, and of its franchise. That Company was incorporated with the intention of building a road through the valley of the Chaudière river for local purposes, and the Quebec Central have taken that up for the purpose of completing it, and will, even without this aid, construct it as a colonization road; but it would be an important link in establishing the short line with the Lower Provinces, and in order that it might be improved and built of a character and construction to correspond with the through line, it is proposed that this additional aid should be given to it, and there is no doubt that, with that aid, the Company will be in a position to construct it and will construct it as a first-class road. I refer to these facts, with the view of establishing the position and competence of the Quebec Central Company, which is mentioned in this Resolution.

Mr. BLAKE. Of course, the statement of the hon. gentleman is very interesting, and I suppose it is news to the Minister of Railways as well as to myself, for it may be supposed that if he had possessed the information he would have vouchsafed it to the House. As we all knew, this is an existing Company, but with reference to this existing line of railway, the object, it appears, is to enable them to complete it in a superior style to what they would do if the sub-sidy were not given. They are about to complete it in an inferior style from their own resources, and the $3,200 a mile is to enable them to make it in first-class style. In the interval of time since these Resolutions were laid on the Table, I have not been able to acquire such information as I would have liked to acquire in reference to several of these links of railway, and can express no opinion whatever as to whether this is of that character, which under the hon. gentleman's elastic definition at present, of the conditions of of the North Shore road from the Grand Trunk Railway; Federal aid, ronder it desirable to grant this additional as- it may be by the building of another line, in case of a failure sistance. I should like to know the estimated cost of the to make that end.

Mr. BLAKE.

financial bases of these companies are, has it been thought [construction of the line, as it was to be before this good fortune happened. I do not know if the Minister of Railways has any information on the estimated cost of the line or not.

> Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The hon. gentleman ought, I suppose, to give to the Government of Quebec some little credit for knowledge of these matters which are under their own observation, and I suppose he is aware, as I stated, that we had evidence that the Province of Quebec had given $6,000 a mile for eighty miles to this Company.

Mr. BLAKE. To this line now to be built?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Not necessarily to this line, but to this Company, so that they are in a condition that will fairly warrant us in supposing that, with this additional aid, we could make that such a first-class road as it would need to be in order to become a portion of this short line of railway communication from Quebec to the Atlantic ports. The hon. member for Sherbrooke (Mr. Hall) has stated the position of the Company, and I may say that the deputation of gentlemen connected with that road, as well as some other gentlemen with whom I have had long interviews, made communications which were personal, so that it is impossible for me to make them public.

Mr. BLAKE. Then the hon. gentleman cannot give any idea of the estimated cost of this line?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not think it is at all necessary to go into it.

Paragraph agreed to.

On paragraph 6,

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I propose to alter that; by adding after the word "Montreal," the words "or some other point on the Canadian Pacific Railway." The object of the change is to avoid binding ourselves to St. Martin's Junction. The distance is defined; it does not affect the amount.

Mr. BLAKE. What are the possible alternative proposals?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. There are none, but we think it is better not to be tied to that particular point.

Mr. BLAKE. This is a very important matter, and I think the hon, gentleman might give us some idea of what alternative suggestions have been made to the Government as to the mode of completing this communication. Is it intended, for example, that this Resolution should be read so widely as to permit of the acquisition by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company of what is commonly called the North Shore Railway, or is it intended to be restricted to the construction of a new line of railway?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. It is framed so as to enable the Government to procure an extension of this railway from its terminus to the harbour of Quebec. There is no specific mode pointed out, nor is it desirable that there should be. It leaves the question open for the adoption of the best line that can be secured.

Mr. BLAKE. Why is it not desirable to state the mode?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Because another third, or fourth, or fifth mode may arise which may be preferred, and we wish to choose only the best line, the most proper terminus, and the best means of effecting the extension of the line from Montreal to Quebec-it may be by the acquisition

Mr. AMYOT. I have no objection to the country granting money to building lines of railway going to Quebec, or to any other large city in the Dominion; but I do not see that this proposition in any way changes the ill will of the ber for Bellechasse (Mr. Amyot), I must say this; the hon, Canadian Pacific Railway Company towards Quebec, which | gentleman speaks as if the extension of the Canadian Pacithat Company has manifested from the beginning. We have seen by the late correspondence between a member of the Government and the President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, that the Company has decided never to go to Quebec. I notice that this amount of $960,000 is only one-half of the first amount that was to be given to the Government of the Province of Quebec, according to the principle laid down in the first paragraph; so, in order to enable the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to reach Quebec, we take away from the Provincial Government the sum of $6,000 per mile, to which that Province is entitled, by what I may call the preamble of the resolution, as I take it for granted the Canadian Pacific Itailway Company is not willing to go to Quebec. I observe that the paragraphs that we have already adopted, instead of forcing the Canadian Pacific Railway to Quebec, sends it elsewhere through the United States, and I shall, on concurrence, ask that an amount of $960,000 be added to the first paragraph. I may say that the members of the Ministry will readily understand why I do that. They will remember certain previous conversations-I will not say agreement, but cortain previous conversations-which took place, and which secured a certain action. At all events, without going further at this moment, I may say that I see no reason why, under the pretext of sending to Quebec a company that we the House-because these are only Resolutions that must sent elsewhere by the same Resolution, we should deprive be introduced in Committee of the Whole and afterwards the Province of Quebec of this sum of money. The Province of Quebec has built the railway which forms part of the Cauadian Pacific Railway. It has been always understood that the Canadian Pacific Railway was to reach from ocean to ocean on Canadian soil, and it has been stated and reiterated from year to year, that Montreal and Quebec would benefit by the Canadian Pacific Railway. We have been told of steamboats that were to cross between Quebec and Lévis; we have changed the course of the Intercolonial Railway by the St. Charles Branch; we had brought the Grand Trunk Railway from Lévis to Rivière du Loup-all that to complete this great national route. But, now, Mr. Chairman, instead of doing that, we put aside three-fourths of the Province of Quebec and say, "You shall benefit to more from the Canadian Pacific Railway; we are going to send it elsewhere." To-day, under pretext of sending it to St. John or to other cities in the Maritime Provinces, we send it in the direction of Portland or Boston, or some other port in the United States, and there our commerce will consequently go. I think that before doing that we should, as far as possible, compel the Canadian Pacific Railway to remain in our own country, to benefit our own country, and to develop our cities at home instead of those of the United States. However, without going further into details, I repeat that I see no reason for giving that sum of money to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and taking it away from the Province of Quebec. The principle laid down is just, and we are entitled to it. The Province of Quebec has built the whole road from Quebec to Ottawa, and is just as much entitled to $12,000 a mile between Montreal and Quebec as it is between Montreal and Ottawa. We did not understand the first Resolution or we would have moved this amendment; but on concurrence we will move it.

Mr. HOUDE. Could not the Government provide, at the end of this paragraph and in the Bill which will be based on these Resolutions, that if the amount of $960,000 is not absorbed by the said subsidy, that is to say, if the Canadian Pacific Railway is not prolonged to Quebec, as is proposed, interest will be paid to the Government of the Province of the Resolutions.

Quebec in that case? I think this would be only just and right.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. In answer to the hon. memfic Railway was not to be in the Province of Quebec. That extension is to be from Montreal to Quebec. and in the Province of Quebec, and for the benefit of the whole Dominion, but especially for the Province of Quebec. The intention is to make the harbour of Quebec the eastern terminus, in summer, of the Canadian Pacific Railway. This has been asked-the people and the press have asked it, and we have come down with these Resolutions to carry it out; that is to say, we propose to give $6,000 per mile in order that the terminus of the Canadian Pacific shall be in the harbour of Quebec. The hon. gentleman goes further and says : "I do not believe that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company will go down to Quebec and make that its eastern terminus." Now, Mr. Speaker, we can judge of the disposition of the Company as well as of indivi-dnals by its words and by its writings. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company, by its President, has stated positively that the intention of the Company is to go to Quebec and make the harbour of Quebec its castern terminus, and that Company is now negotiating for that purpose. That assurance has been given; papers have been laid on the Table to that effect. Besides, the Government have brought down these Resolutions, and if the hon. gentleman would wait to that effect. until the whole measure was complete and the Bill laid before embraced in a Bill-he would find in the Bill the machinery by which this extension will take place. Certain powers will have to be given to the Canadian Pacific Railway to enable them to extend the railway from Montreal to Quebec, in order that they may build the line or purchase another line; and therefore the hon. gentleman should allow the measure to be completed and laid before the House, when he would be able to judge of the determination of the Government as well as of the Company, to build this line or purchase another line. The question asked by the hon. member for Maskinongé (Mr. Houde) is quite a different question. It does not arise now. We are convinced that this railway will be extended to Quebec; that is our desire; we show it by these Resolutions, and therefore we ask our friends and the House to help us in perfecting the measure, so as to bring the terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway to Quebec. There is no better proof of the determination of the Government than that furnished by these Resolutions. The hon. member for Bellechasse goes further and says: "The Province of Quebec is entitled to havo $12,000 per mile for the railway." We are giving $12,000 per mile from Ottawa to Montreal to the Government of Quebec. Then, as regards the other $12,000 per mile, we give half to the Government of Quebec and half to the Province of Quebec, by extending the Canadian Pacific Railway from Montreal to Quebec. It is a promise we have made; it is the desire of the Province; and we have to consider, in this matter, two powers, authorities and sets of men: the Government of the Province of Quebec who have made their representations to us, and, on the other side, the representatives of the people in this House, as well as the representatives of the other Provinces who, I think, have something to say also in matters which belong even to the Province of Quebec, in the same way as we have something to say when measures are laid before the House relating to the other Provinces and in the interests of the whole Dominion. And, therefore, I think that the policy of the Government is one which should commend itself to the approval and fair consideration of this House, and I hope the hon. gentleman will give his support to this measure and especially to

Mr. OUIMET. I am very glad to have heard the explanation of the Minister. He admits quite clearly that the principle on which these Resolutions is based is the right principle towards the Province of Quebec; that is to say, to give compensation to Quebec for the railway it built at an enormous cost, and in consequence of which its finances are now suffering very severely. The $12,000 per mile, the hon. gentleman says, are given from Ottawa to Montreal. He admits that the Province is entitled in the same way to the same indemnity for the line from Montreal to Quebec; but, for political purposes, to benefit the city of Quebec in particular, and to benefit the lower portion of the Province, the Government have thought it better to take part of the amount, in order to secure the extension of the Canadian Pacific Railway to the harbour of the city of Quebec. I do not grudge the city of Quebec that indemnity which was due to the Province of Quebec. If it is necessary to carry out the original scheme of having the Canadian Pacific Railway through Canadian territory, to have that road linked with our great national highway, the Intercolonial, I think it is quite a proper way to so act, and the policy of the Government must be approved on this subject. But, on the other hand, I would have rather seen the whole amount given to the party to whom it is due, to whom it is admitted to be due-that is to say, the Province of Quebec-leaving to that Province afterwards, if it is in the interest of certain parts of it, to grant a portion of the money for the purpose of securing the extension of the Canadian Pacific Railway to the city of Quebec-leaving, in fact, the Province itself to judge of the matter. I would certainly be more satisfied to see the whole amount given to the Province of Quebec; and when we are giving so many millions, I would have rather seen, and I suppose the whole people would have rather seen, that the Government's policy was the extension of the great Canadian Pacific Railway to Quebec and from that port down to Rivière du Loup, and thence by the shortest line on Canadian territory to St. John. That would receive the approbation of all Canadian patriots. As to what has been suggested by the hon. member for Maskinongé, I think if the policy of the Government can be changed on that point, that is to give the whole subsidy to Quebec, it would be only fair that interest on the amount which is recognized to be due Quebcc, until it is paid out for the purpose mentioned in this Resolution, that is to say, the securing of the extension to Quebec, should be paid to the Province of Quebec in the same manner as the rest of the subsidy until, as I stated before, the amount is paid out for the purposes mentioned in the Resolution. The Government should show them that it is not the intention to deprive the Province of Quebec of that amount, but it is only with a view of better benefiting the Province that they keep it, in order to ensure the extension of the railway. But on the other hand, until they see their way to secure that purpose they allow the Province of Quebec to enjoy the proceeds of that amount; and I think it is only a necessary conclusion by the Government, after what has been admitted by the Minister of Public Works, that they should allow interest on that sum to the Province of Quebec, until the money is paid out for the purposes mentioned in the Resolution. And I think that would be welcomed in the Province, and though some may complain, I am not disposed to complain. I think, as it has been asserted before, that Province had some right to expect that the whole sum would be paid to it, but the policy of the Government seems to have been modified in that sense, and I say-and I say it meaningly-that at least we ought not to be deprived entirely, and allow this $360,000 to lie in the public Treasury when it is admitted that it is the property of the Province of Quebec. I contend that the Province of Quebec should receive at least the interest, until the money is employed for the purposes mentioned in the Resolution.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The Minister of Public Works stated in his reply to the hon. member for Bellechasse, that the scheme, as laid before the House, is strictly in accordance with the promise made. Will the hon. gentleman tell me when that promise was made? I am waiting for an answer.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I did not hear the hon. gentleman.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I asked when the promise mentioned by the hon. gentleman was made?

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. If the hon. gentleman understood me to say that, he did not understand what I meant to say. I say we promised here that $12,000 should be given to the first section from Ottawa to Montreal, and that, as the hon. Minister of Railways has explained, that amount was given because that portion of the railway forms now part of the Canadian Pacific Railway-I need not repeat all that my hon. friend has said, but I was following what he stated-he showed that this was in consequence of the policy which had been adopted previously, for a similar portion of the Canadian Pacific Railway, that the Canada Central had been subsidized in the same way by giving $12,000 for that road, that in this instance the North Shore from Ottawa to Montreal had been built by the Government at their own expense, and inasmuch as that portion of the line had been made a portion of the Canadian Pacific Railway, therefore we should treat that portion of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the same way as the Canada Central, by giving it $12,000 per mile. We thought it a proper thing -and I was following that by saying that in accordance with the promise so made, the portion of the road from Montreal to Quebec should be treated in the following way. I did not enter into all the details, as the Minister of Railways had done so himself; that is to say : we were giving $6,000 per mile to the Quebec Government, not because the line was forming a portion of the Canadian Pacific Railway, but because we knew the wants, the financial wants, of the Province of Quebec; we knew the great sacrifice that Province had been making to develop the country by building railways : that the Province had expended over $14,000,000 for these railways; that under those circumstances the $12,000 which we would have given to the Government of Quebec for the railway between Montreal and Quebec, had it formed part of the Canadian Pacific Railway, in the same way as the first portion from Ottawa to Montreal wasforming part; that we would give one half that amount to the Government of the Province of Quebec, and the other half would go in helping to extend the Canadian Pacific Railway from Montreal to Quebec, and thus we would secure to the Province of Quebec not only the amount of money required for its wants, but also do what was asked of us on all sidessecure the extension of the Canadian Pacific Railway from Montreal to Quebec.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The answer of the hon. gentleman will not suffice. The hon. member for Bellechasse conveyed distinctly the information that the conditions on which some bargain or promise was made were not fulfilled—bis language would bear no other construction—and the Minister of Public Works, in replying to him, maintained that the scheme brought down was consistent with the promise made. I ask when that promise was made, and to whom it was made, and I think we are entitled to a full reply, especially as the hon. gentleman's followers expressed dissatisfaction with the manner in which the promise was fulfilled. I hope the hon. gentleman, with his usual candour, will give us a fair statement. I do not want a long argument—I understand the argument—but I want the reason of the promise which is said to have been made.

Sir HEUTOR LANGEVIN. I am always disposed to be fair, and I am always fair, I think; and I want always to answer in a kind, and proper way, especially the hon. gentleman after the high position he occupied, and still occupies, in this House. I am sorry I cannot give him any other answer than the answer I gave him just now. I think that is the answer I had to give, and I am sorry that the hon. gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. AMYOT. As I understand that we will have no opportunity to deal with questions of money upon any stage of the Bill which will be founded on these Resolutions, I think this is the time to say what we want, and to move what we desire, about the amounts of money to be granted to the divers companies. The beginning of the Resolution says :

"To the Government of the Province of Quebec, in consideration of their having constructed the railway from Quebec to Ottawa, forming a connecting link between the Atlantic and Pacific via the Intercolonial and Canadian Pacific Railway."

That is all very true:

"And being, as such, a work of national and not merely provincial utility-.

That is all true; we all admit that :

" a subsidy not exceeding $12,000 per mile for the portion between Montreal and Ottawa."

But I find that for the portion between Quebec and Montreal it is only $6,000 per mile. I do not understand why that difference. We say that the Government of the Province of Quebec has built a link of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and for so building it that Government is entitled to $12,000 per mile. Well, if we give only $6,000 per mile from Montreal to Quebec, we say to the Government of the Province of Quebec: you are entitled to $12,000 per mile for having already built a road which forms part of the Canadian Pacific Railway, but we will draw upon you again and we will ask you $6,000 more a mile to subsidize a new railway. We say to the Government of the Province of Quebec, you have done your share, you are entitled to $12,000, but we will take away $6,000 We help you because you are poor, and you are poor because you built the railway. Is it because the Province is poor that it gets $6,000 less per mile from Montreal to Quebec? We are now told, in the very clear explanation of the hon. Minister of Public Works, that this amount of $960,000 forms part of the cost of building the Pacific Railway from Quebec to Ottawa. So, it is directly told to the country at large that here is a Government that has built a link of the Pacific Bailway, that has rendered itself poor by doing so. Though in spite of its poorness, we will go on and draw upon it to the extent of nearly a $1,000,000. That is the proposition. 1 think the country is rich enough to dispose of a million of money for that purpose; I do not gradge the $960,000 to the Pacific Railway Company to build a line that is not wanted immediately. Give that amount, if you like, to the Pacific Company; but I do not think they will go to Quebec; I do not think they want to go to Quebec; and under those circumstances we should not deprive the Government of Quebec of a sum that they are entitled to. The hon. Minister says a promise has been made. I presume it is a promise that is just; and that promise is another reason which I add to the reasons I give now. I do not go into the details of these promises; but I say, on the merits of the case, that the Province of Quebec is entitled to $12,000 a mile, just as the Province of Ontario was entitled to compensation for other similar roads; or else obtain the consent of that Government which is interested, and which is responsible to the electors, before you take away from it $6,000 a mile. We are building railways to bring immigration into the country, to give value to our lands, to his denunciation of the Pacific Railway, and by the stateincrease our commerce; I am in favour of that; but do not ment that they do not yet know the way to Quebee; bucause lay at the bottom of that work an injustice-I shall not say I it is quite obvious that the Government are in the same box.

a robbery exactly, but at least a legislative robbery. Quebec only wants justice; it wants to be treated as the other Provinces are treated. We want these Resolutions to be complete; we want the preamble to be the basis of the amount that will be voted. That is what I meant the first time I spoke. Now, in answer to the hor. Minister of Public Works, as to the good will of the Pacific Railway to go to Quebec, I have only to refer to the correspondence. I do not know whether or not it is before the House, but I find it in the Montreal Gazette of the 9th instant. Any one who reads between the lines can easily see what Mr. Stephen, in his letter, means, which he ends by saying :

"It is, of course, impossible to defind the exact form or conditions which will characterize the arrangements for a summer terminus at Quebec, when finally made."

Mr. Chairman, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company know exactly where to pass among those mountains which have hardly ever been visited by man; they know exactly how to pass to the north of Lake Superior; they know what branches to buy here and there; they know where to go through the State of Maine, a country that has never been explored by them, so far as I know; but when it comes to the question of going from Montreal to Quebec, a place which, I believe, is known, it is impossible for them to understand anything, or to come to any conclusion. The correspondence published in the newspapers shows that they do not want to go to Quebec; but on the Minister of Public Works addressing a letter to Mr. Stephen, on the 14th instant, asking them to go there, Mr. Stephen, in answer, says: "It is impossible to say what we will do." That is his good will. I have no confidence in such good will, and that is one reason why I do not think the Province of Quebec should be despoiled of this $6,000 a mile, to which it is entitled.

Mr. VALIN. Will the hon. member for Bellechasse tell me why the Quebec Government did not secure the terminus of the Pacific Railway at Quebec at the same time that they secured it to go to Montreal? I understand that the Government now say that they give $6,000 per mile to the Government of Quebec for the road from Montreal to Quebec, and we are to grant $6,000 a mile in order to help the Pacific Railway to go to Quebec. Well, I say that is very just, and I am glad to see that the Government are willing to help the Province of Quebec. But, in the meantime, I would like the hon. member for Bellechasse to tell me how is it that the Quebec Government secured the Pacific road to go to Montreal? And how is it that they did not secure the terminus for the summer months at Quebec? I believe it is right and proper for the Government to reserve $6,000 a mile, in order to secure the terminus of the Pacific Railway at Quebec, or to give $12,000 per mile to the Government of Quebec, and let that Government fix the terminus at Quebec.

Mr. AMYOT. I will answer the hon. member for Montmorency. I am sorry that his numerous duties have prevented him from being here lately, or it would not be necessary for me to refresh his memory by referring to the correspondence which passed between the Government of Quebec and the members of the Syndicate of the North Shore Railway, by which he will find that if the terminus was not secured at Quebec it was because the Pacific Railway Company refused absolutely to buy the North Shore from Montreal to Quebec. If the Pacific Railway is no more to the interest of the country at large than it is to the Province of Quebec, I am afraid that it will be very little indeed-that it will be more to the interest of the members of the Company than it will be to the interest of the public.

Mr. BLAKE. I think my hon. friend from Bellechasse has placed the Government in a very awkward position by

We have been told-and the statement is so important that the Minister of Railways abandoned the rudder for the and put it in the hands of the expemoment, rienced pilot who steers the ship of State, to give the answer, so that there might not be a "t" uncrossed or It an "i" undotted-we are told that he does not know. appears there is an embarrassment of riches-that there are four or five ways in which the Canadian Pacific Railway might go to Quebec if they choose. I did not hear of more than three ways. And really the difficulty the hon. gentleman for Bellechasse will see, is not that there is a difficulty of obtaining a way to get to Quebec, but there are so many ways of getting there that the Government and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company between them, with the utmost good will to settle the question, not tortured by any dissensions between the Company and the Government, or between one wing and the other wing of the Government itself, have been unable, in the interests of the country and the Province combined, to ascertain which of the many ways to Quebec is the way by which the Canadian Pacific Railway should reach that port. We are told not merely that the Resolution is to be enlarged by affording the utmost scope to the Goverment to take a choice of all the various paths open to reach Quebec, but that it is not expedient to tell us anything about any of the paths just now. We are to make a leap in the dark; we are not even to be told by the occupants of the Ministerial benches what the choices are which are before them, which have been engaging their attention, and upon which they have had conferences with the Pacific Railway Company, and with one another, without having yet been able to arrive at any con-clusion. The hon. Minister of Public Works stated, as I understood him, that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company expressed their determination to go to Quebec, that the Company spoke by its officers and spoke as an individual would, and then he alluded to correspondence laid on the Table. I read that correspondence personally, and I must | upon which he thinks the subsidy will be adequate for the say I did not draw from it the inference of the Company's intention to go to Quebec coûte que coûte which the hon. Minister of Public Works seems to draw from it. I rather think it partakes somewhat of that judicious vagueness with which the Ministerial propositions in general, and those on this subject in particular, are involved. I do not charge the Canadian Pacific Railway Company with any ill will to Quebec, as the hon. member for Bellechasse does; I sup-Quebec, as the bon. member for Bellechasse does; I sup-pose the Company has no good or ill will to any place, but satisfied and prepared to go on and make further investments to an simply considers what is good for its own commercial amount sufficient to complete fifty miles of the railway and erect two simply considers what is good for its own commercial interests.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. No doubt.

Mr. BLAKE. No doubt it is considering the best bargain it may drive, and it has some capacities for driving pretty hard bargains, as we all know. I see the hon. Minister of Finance has laid on the Table a sweet little notice which is to appear in the Votes and Proceedings of to-day, and is to be discussed on Saturday, for a loan £2,000,000 to take up short loans and £3,000,000 to meet the demands of the Pacific Railway.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. Not to take up short loans.

Mr. BLAKE. A portion is-£2,000,000 sterling.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. A very small portion.

Mr. BLAKE, Of course, this is a very small portion. The hon, gentleman is so much accustomed to deal in millions-

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. The hon. gentleman must not misrepresent the facts of the case. The facts are, that but a small portion is to provide for short loans; the half of the £2,000,000 is already taken up and but a small portion of it is for short loans, and another portion what we have to pay to the Canadian Pacific Railway on account of the $12,000 per mile.

Mr. BLAKE.

Mr. BLAKE. He has borrowed half before getting the authority of Parliament and the other half, the remainder, is for the Canadian Pacific Railway and those other enterprises mentioned here in which we see the sign and the mark, not of the beast, but of the Canadian Pacific Railway, very legibly demonstrated in various quarters. We know the capacity of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to drive a bargain, and I presume they are just considering whether it will pay them to go to Quebec and by which way they can make the best bargain. They have no good or ill will towards that or any other quarter, but are simply considering what is best for themselves, and we have equally to consider what is best for ourselves. Under these circumstances, the hon, gentleman might have given us a statement of what the four or five choices are, which he says the Government have to considerd, and upon which they have to decide, and I should like to know whether there are any other assurances or promises or statements made by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, with reference to creating a summer terminus at Quebec, except those laid on the Table? If there are, we ought to know them; if there are not, we can judge as well as the hon. Minister of Public Works, or any one else, what, reading between the lines, is the meaning of the communications we have on the subject.

Paragraph agreed to.

On paragraph 16,

To the Irondale, Bancroft and Ottawa Railway Company, for a line of failway from the Victoria Branch of the Midland Railway to the Village of Bancroft, in the Township of Duogannon, County of Hastings, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole $160,000 00

Mr. BLAKE. Will the hon, gentleman state the ground purpose?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. With this assistance, they state they will be able to go on and finish the road.

Mr. BLAKE. All I can say is, that the paper I have Loro which is dated the 13th March, 1884, and is addressed to the hon. Minister, says :

charceal blast furnaces, provided : "1. That the Dominion Government will give a bonus of $6,000 per mile, to apply on the fifty miles extending from the Victoria Branch of the Midland Railway to the Village of Bancroft, in the Township of Dungannoc, County of Hastings. "2. That the Province of Ontario will give sufficient amount of wood-

Ind per mile, applying on the same fifty miles, as will justify our erect-ing and operating two furnaces. "We are prepared to proceed with the completion of the railway and the erection of the two furnaces, and to make such an investment of money as will ensure their successful operation, provided the grants are ensured to use a saked " assured to us as asked."

This is signed by Mr. Charles T. Pusey. It does not appear to me from this that $3,200 a mile is enough ; on the contrary, according to this, and it is the only statement we have before us, $6,000 a mile is required, besides a grant of woodland from the Province of Ontario, to an indefinite extent

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. When the hon. gentleman is Minister of Railways as long I have been, he will know that parties do not always ask the smallest amount sufficient to build their roads, but the largest they think they can get; and when they find they cannot obtain more, they are prepared to make a smaller amount suffice. If I had placed on these Resolutions all the money asked by parties who have approached the Government in reference to railways, the sum would be considerably increased. What I did in this case was this. Mr. Pusey was in town and I communicated with him, not directly but indirectly, and learned that if we would grant this amount, $3,200 a mile, the Company would be enabled to build the road.

Mr. BLAKE. I am not inviting the hon. gentleman to place on the paper all the amounts he is asked for. The hon. gentleman has said there are a very large number of applications which he has not granted, applications so large that he had not the opportunity to have them prepared and brought down, and I do not invite him to bring them down; but what I maintain is, that we are entitled to have some reasonable assurance that what we are asked to vote is going to accomplish the object for which it is voted, and when we find the only evidence forthcoming is a demand for $6,000 a mile, I am obliged to ask on what grounds he thinks $3,000 will suffice.

Mr. CAMERON (Victoria). Mr. Pusey assured me that with the grant of $3,200 per mile he and his associates were prepared to build the road. The grant from the Local Government was not for the purpose of building the road but for constructing blast furnaces and providing the necessary wood to be used in those furnaces.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. To make charcoal.

Mr. ROBERTSON (Hastings). I do not rise for the purpose of opposing this grant, but to express my regret that the hon. Minister of Railways has not embraced in this Resolution a grant or subsidy to the extension of the Belleville and North Hastings Railway, from its present northerly point of construction to the village of Bancroft, which has a junction with the Irondale, Bancroft and Ottawa Road. The hon. the Minister of Customs, who is unfortunately unavoidably absent, when he had an understanding with Mr. Ritchie, who was the promoter of the Central Ontario Railway, that certain amendments should be added to the Bill asking for the charter for the extension of that railway, had an impression that these amendments would pass the House; and, had they done so, it would not have been necessary to have asked for any aid or assistance as a subsidy for this extension, because we would have had reciprocal powers for traffic in connection with the Midland system. believe, were it not for this, and if the Minister of Customs were here, he would have probably got the consent of the Minister of Railways to have granted a subsidy to this extension that I now speak of. I believe that Mr. Ritchie is now willing to concede all that was asked by these amendments, that is, if he gets a bonus of some $6,000 a mile for twenty-three miles of his railway from Beaver Creek to Bancroft. We are aware that it was with the understanding that he was to build that road without asking any bonus whatever from this Parliament that he succeeded in getting his Bill through the House. It makes no difference to us whether we get it in the way of a grant to the Belleville and North Hastings extension or it is given to Mr. Ritchie, so long as the assistance is granted by the Government. We find, now, that the Irondale, Bancroft and Ottawa Railway Company are receiving $3,200 a mile, or about $160,000, to assist them in constructing a railway into the richest part of the mining district of North Hastings; we also find that the Napanee and Tamworth Railway are receiving $3,200 a mile, or in the whole $70,400, for the purpose of extending their railway also into the mining region of North Hastings; and while Belleville has granted some $200,000 to the Midland and North Hastings Bailways and the township of Madoc and county of Hastings have given almost as much, we find that we are, as it were, isolated and cut asunder allogether from the benefits and advantages which we should derive, as having the most convenient and expeditious route to market and the seaport. I agree with the importance of developing the material interests of the country, by extending our railway system as far as we can, and also granting subsidies to railways so far as we can afford to do so; and I also agree with what the hon. the Minister of Railways said this evening, that nobody now considers himself within the realms of civilization, who is living in a place of any importance whatever, unless he is somewhere in the vicinity, or is in proximity to some railway. I trust when the hon. Minister of Railways brings in his Bill based upon these Resolutions, we will have some assistance granted, at least, to this extension, and I hope at all events it will be, in my supporting these Resolutions, if not the understanding, at least the expectation, that the Minister of Railways will grant this assistance, or give us some assurance that a subsidy will be given for the portion of the extension asked for.

Paragraph agreed to.

On paragraph 17,

To the Pontiac Pacific Junction, for a line of railway from Aylmer to Pembroke, provided the Ottawa River is crossed within the county of Pontiac, at some point not east of Lapasse, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole $272,000 00

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I propose to ask to amend that by saying, from "Hull or Aylmer," after the word "from."

Mr. BLAKE. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will state whether he has any information as to the probable cost of this line.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This is a railway which, as I stated in my opening remarks, has been considered by the Government of the Province of Quebec worthy of a subsidy of $6,000 per mile, for the 85 miles from Aylmer or Hull to Pembroke, but that subsidy was not found sufficient to secure its construction. A contract was made but the company were not able to effect a sale of the bonds on the road, and hence they applied to this Government. I do not at this moment remember exactly what was asked, but I had various communications with my hon. friend, the representative of the county of Pontiac, who has pressed upon me the great importance of this road and the great advantage it would be to a very large section of country there to have it completed, and he has also quite satisfied me that, with the aid that is proposed in this Resolution, there would be no doubt of the road being promptly carried forward. The exact estimate for the cost per mile, I suppose, varies more or less, but as a rule from $12,000 to $20,00) and in some cases, where the work is more difficult, $25,00 a mile, I suppose, would be required, but I am told that with this subsidy, in addition to that given by the Province of Quebec, there is every reason to suppose the road will be promptly carried forward. In fact, 1 believe a company, and a very strong company, could be organized without making any addition to the subsidy here proposed to carry the road promptly to completion.

Mr. BLAKE. As far as I can hear, this is a very easy road to build, and it has received from the Government of the Province of Quebec $6,000 a mile, from the county of Pontiac, $100,000, and it has been fortunate enough to have made a contract for the construction of the road, in which the contractor has made default, and is to lose the work he has done, which is estimated at $70,000, which falls into the hands of the Company. It was also fortunate enough to have its preliminary survey made by the Province of Quebec. I have been told that an application was made some time ago, I think some time last summer, to the First Minister, by some gentlemen interested in this railway, for aid, and that he enquired of them how much they had put into the enterprise themselves, and that the answer was not satisfactory to the hon. gentleman. It turned out that the corporators had put very little into the enterprise, a merely nominal sum, $200 or $300 a piece, or something of that kind; the whole expenditure was nominal, in railway parlance, and the First Minister pointed out to them that they could not expect public aid unless they showed sufficient faith in the Company to put something into it themselves. I am told also that some very strong men offered to take the enterprise off the hands of the present directorate, and to build the railway, paying up the claims of the defaulting contractor if they pleased. Some of the names were so strong as that those of Mr. Ross, of Quebec, and Mr. Maclaren, of Buck-ingham, were included among them. That was refused, the directors insisting upon receiving a pecuniary consideration for their interest as the price for their sale of the concession of the railway. You know something about it, Mr. Chairman. I believe you are one of the directors, and the Secretary of State, I believe, is another, and Mr. Church, of Montreal, and Mr. R. S. White, of Montreal, are in the directorate. I believe there are some eight or nine gentlemen who have the control of the stock of this Company, upon which a nominal sum has been paid, and who are, no doubt, making an excellently good thing out of the Dominion Government.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. If the hon. gentleman looks, he will find this is not voted to the company at all. In certain cases these subsidies are voted in the company's name, in others it is left to be given to any company selected by the Government; and the hon. gentleman will see that in this case we do no ask Parliament to vote it to any company, but leave it entirely open, so that we may ascertain the lowest terms upon which it will be possible to secure the construction of that road, and we shall take very good care not to exceed that amount.

Mr. BLAKE. Will the hon, gentleman say whether there is another company than this incorporated for the construction of this line?

Mr. BRYSON. Last year, when the important Resolutions for granting ailway subsidies were being considered, 1 congratulated the Minister of Railways and the Government on their liberal policy in giving the sum of $3,200 a tmile as a subsidy for certain railways. I then requested he hon Minister to take into consideration the very important brainch in the county I have the honour to represent, the Pontiac Railway, and I am pleased now to be able to thank him for having remembered that railway in these Resolutions. I am satisfied this subsidy, along with the subsidy granted by the Quebec Government, of $6,000 a mile, will be adequate to secure the construction of this road; and I am satisfied that the large extent of country lying east and north of this railway will be greatly enhanced in value, and that its valuable mineral resources will contribute in no small degree to the revenue of the country. With reference to the remarks of the leader of the Opposition, in regard to the company who offered to take up this enterprise, I would say that his information is not correct, I am not aware that at the meeting here the president or the directors of the company made any concession to any individual or party, or that they were prepared to accept any sum or sums for their charter. It has always been asserted to me and to many of my friends by the president and directors of this road, that they were not prepared to dispose of the charter but were determined to go on and build the road. It is true that about sixteen months ago operations were suspended on this road the contractor having gone to England to dispose of his bonds-as he was to be paid in bonds of the company for building this road-but he was unable to dispose of them and returned here, expecting to be able to form a construction company to build the road. As will be seen by the railway statistics, there is now about 4 miles of that road laid with rails, and about 23 miles under construction. It that perhaps this company may be able to do it. This is the opinion of many men engaged in building railways that this subsidy of $3,200 a mile, along with the subsidy of $6,000 a mile granted by the Provincial Government, will enable the company, without difficulty, to go on and build the road. I think, Sir, that the desire which the Dominion Government has shown in subsidising this railway must be the best assurance to capitalists who are willing to put their money into this enterprise, that they are fully satisfied that it is in the best interests of the country that this subsidy has been granted.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I would ask the Minister of Railways when he abandoned what he has repeatedly announced lately to be his policy, of refusing a charter to competing lines. A few days ago he induced the Railway Committee to throw out a Bill giving power to construct a road on the other side of Lake Winnipeg, because another company had got a charter to build a road sixty miles distant. Now he grants Government aid to a line competing with another for existence. I cannot imagine that he has overlooked this. He must have changed his policy, if not, he should give some reason for the change in this Bill.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will answer the hon. gentleman and also the question of the hon. leader of the Opposition, as to whether there was another company chartered. I understand the position of the question to be this: A company has been chartered, and aid given by the Province of Quebec. They have made a contract for the construc tion of a portion of this road, or the whole of it; a large amount of money has been expended and a considerable portion of the road has been graded. Efforts were made to float the bonds which had been given to the contractors to secure the construction of the road, but those efforts failed, and the sub-contractors for the work done remain unpaid. A considerable portion of the work is done, but the fact that the contractors have not been able to go on and that the road has not advanced, is the best evidence that there was not sufficient means provided for the construction of the line. I am not now dealing with the question as to whether this road should be built or not. Parliament has chartered it already, the Province of Quebec has given a subsidy, a considerable amount of work has been performed, and the Government have come othe conclusion that, under these circumstances, one road being in the Province of Ontario and the other in the Province of Quebec, they being separated by a river, they are not in a position exactly of competing lines. The illustration the hon. gentleman has drawn from the Hudson Bay Railway is the best cvidence of how weak he considers his argument in the present case, as in the case of the Hudson Bay Railway the only possible chance of getting a railway constructed at all, or of obtaining capital for the purpose, is the assurance that there would be no competition. This subsidy is not granted to any company; it is granted for the road; it is a declaration made by Parliament that they consider the road of sufficient importance to entitle it to this amount of money. If the present company are not in a position to go on vigorously with the road-I say more, if they are not prepared to secure payment to the persons who have put their money and labour into the work-I for one would not listen for a moment to the proposition of giving that company this subsidy. They have got, in the first place, to establish their ability, with this subsidy, to complete the work; and they have got, in the next place, to cover the claims that have already been made for doing work, on the strength of which they obtained the subsidy. If they are not prepared to do that, and better arrangements can be made with other parties, it is quite competent for the Legislature, at a future Session, to charter another company, and thus secure the construction of the road on the best possible terms.

Mr. BLAKE. But the hon. gentleman says he thinks company is the one that has the $6,000 a mile from the Province of Quebec, and it is the company that has applied to the hon. gentleman. The hon. gentleman, awhile ago, in making his statement, pointed to the fact of that subsidy from Quebec as a reason for being sure of the ability of this company to construct the line; and to say that he proposes, if necessary, to legislate here to charter another com-pany to construct the line without a subsidy from Quebec, is to say something which, I think, is rather rash. With reference to the question of financial ability of the company there can be no question. The position I took was a different one. I pointed out, that, from the information I had acquired, this company had a very soft thing, and it was made softer by this subsidy.

Mr. BRYSON. I do not know whether I quite understood the Minister of Railways in his remarks with respect to another company. The hon. gentleman stated that this subsidy was for the Pontiac Junction Railway, not for any particular company.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. It is to the road.

Mr. BRYSON. Do I understand that, in the event of the present company being unable to go on and complete the road, the Government will be in a position to give a charter to another company; and, if such company should put up a sufficient amount of paid-up stock to insure the building of the road, will the Government grant another charter to that company over the same route?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The Government have no power to grant a charter; that can only be done by Parliament. The Government can, however, arrange with parties to support their application for a charter in Parliament. In such an event as that referred to, the Government would no doubt support the granting of another charter to a different company.

Mr. HOUDE. Has the Government been made aware of the fact that people who have worked on this line have not been paid?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I have not only been made aware of it, but I am prepared to say that I would not be a party to any arrangement with any company which would not secure payment for its workpeople, to those whose labour goes into the work.

Mr. MACKENZIE. If the hon. gentleman wishes this Resolution to be effective, a change must be made. The Ottawa River cannot be crossed in the county of Pontiac.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. We will strike out the words "within the county of Pontiac."

Paragraph, as amended, agreed to.

On paragraph 18,

To the Gatineau Railway Company, for a line of railway from Kazusbazus to Le Desert, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole $160,000 00

What is the hon. Minister's information Mr. BLAKE. as to this subsidy being adequate to ensure the carrying out of this work.

Mr. WRIGHT. I may inform the hon. gentleman that a company was formed to carry out the construction of this railway. We obtained a grant of 6,000 acres per mile from the Quebec Government; and, as the hon. gentleman is aware, last Session the Dominion Government granted a subsidy of $3,200 per mile for 50 miles, from Hull station to Kazuabazua, up the Gatineau. A difficulty occurred with respect of obtaining the necessary amount of capital, on account of the short length of the line, and it was suggested -and this was our proposal originally-to carry the line from Kazuabazua to Le Desert, 40 miles further. The prospects of the company are reasonably good. We know that difficulties are liable to occur in regard to all railway compa We have had the Canadian Pacific Railway Comnies. pany here this Session, and the Gatineau Valley Company may have difficulties as well; but there is every prospect of the road being completed. I may state to the House that the line will pass for 100 miles through a country well settled and inhabited by-as my constituents all are-a most intelligent and exceedingly industrious body of people. I may further state for the information of the House, that 100 miles due north there is an immense tract of exceedingly good land on which Canadian people could find happy homes. The products of the country are excellent. The wheat crop is a very fine one, and the cereals would be a credit to any portion of Canada. Under the circumstances, I think the House can very well afford to grant the additional subsidy, because it will be the means of opening up a vast extent of country in our immediate vicinity.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman has a little misapprehended my question, as, indeed, the Minister of Railways has done more than once. My question was as to whether the proposed additional subsidy would accomplish the object desired? I expected an answer from the Minister of Railways, but the hon. member for Ottawa county (Mr. Wright) interrupted, and I will now have his evidence in the case. The Minister of Railways, when I have brought forward the written information which he has laid on the Table, has pointed out to me that it would not do for him to give all the aid that was asked; that, if he were to pursue such a course, Parliament would be called on to grant a very much larger sum than the several millions which we are voting away this evening. But all persons are not alike, and all persons do not ask more than is necessary, and of those modest men who ask only what is right and necessary, the hon. member for Ottawa county, who has just spoken, is a distinguished example; and if I am able to prove, on the authority of the hon. gentleman, that it was only within a few days he found the subsidy was not adequate, I will be bound to ask for more specific information as to the ground on which the Minister expects a different result. The House will have observed that the hon. member was cautious in his observations; that he compared great things with small; that he pointed out a precedent which they would probably follow next Session, that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company had got a large subsidy, and cut and came again this Session. In a letter addressed to the Minister of Railways at a very recent date, over the respectable signature of Alonzo Wright, that gentleman said :

"The undersigned, on behalf of the Ottawa and Gatineau Valley Railway would respectfully submit the following: "4. That your petitioners had asked in their original application for $6,000 per mile. "They would further submit: "1. That it is found impossible to induce capitalists to guarantee money to build the road throughout, unless the bonus is specifically named and granted for the entire line. "2. That capitalists argue and very reasonably, that they might named and granted for the entire line. "2. That capitalists argue, and very reasonably, that they might build fifty miles of the railroad and find a difficulty in securing further aid, the result being that the line would end at no particular point of junction with the great trade centres north and east of the Desert. "3. That the engineering difficulties have shown that the portion of the first 50 miles will be the hardest possible to construct, and cost at least one-third more than the upper half. "4. That the railroad has been commenced, and 5 miles graded, and extensive surveys (involving a large expenditure) made during the past summer and fall. "5. That it is most important the work be continued, so that a con nection is established between the north and the Ontario system of rail-ways; and your petitioners fear that, unless the Dominion assists more liberally, this enterprise will be indefinitely postponed. "6. That your petitioners would suggest that the Government grant $6,000 per mile towards the entire line; or, "7. Failing this, that they grant for the first 50 miles the sum of $5,000 per mile, thus enabling the promoters of the enterprise to tide over the difficult work and accomplish the floating of their bonds. "8. Or the company would be in a position to float bonds, and can float them if the Government of Oanada will change the bonus or subsidy into a fixed guarantee for a given number of years, the subsidies being used as a guarantee of interest on the bonds of the company for a term of ten years.

"CHARLES G. BATE, Mayor of Ottawa "ALONZO WRIGHT." (Signed)

That was not all. There is a second communication to the hon. gentleman, as follows :---

"To the Hon. Sir CHARLES TUPPER, K.O.M.G. :

"'Sig.—The Government having through you as Minister of Railways annonneed as part of their policy aid for railways that were in the in-terests of Oanada, and having since carried out their policy, by grant-ing subsidies to several lines of railways, among others the Gatineau Railway, to the extent of $3,200 per mile for 50 miles, from Hull station of the Oanadian Pacific Railway, the subscribers would respectfully represent that the granting of an additional subsidy of $6,200 for 50 miles from the Kazuabazua, where the 50 miles already subsidized ter-minates, would be in the public interests, for the following reasons."

Then he gives a description of the hon. gentleman's constituents, which we have heard from him already, and which perhaps the House will spare my repeating. It also adds, in the terse and epigrammatic language of the hon. gentle-man, that it would "also add another Province to the Dom-inion." It points out certain local claims, and then you find the name, the respected name, to which I have just referred, at the head of this second letter. So that twice we have repeated the signature, not of a railway contractor or a railway solicitor, who asks twice as much as he expects, but we have the statement of my hon, friend that $6,000 a mile is wanted to do the business. Now, what I would like to know from the hon. gentleman is, does he think it will be done for $3,200?

Mr. WRIGHT. I am pleased with the statement of the hon. gentleman, and I hope the Government will consider this proposition, and will be disposed to grant an additional subsidy to our road. The document which he read is undoubtedly authentic. We did think that that great tract of country, which had contributed so much to the revenues of the Dominion in timber dues, and had received so little in return, might have received an additional subsidy. We submitted that claim to the Government, but in view of the exigencies of the case, in view of the numerous applications which were being presented, they found they could only give us the exceedingly small sum of $3,200. I hope that under the circumstances we will be able to build the railway; we will, at any rate, do the best we can, and if the Government, at no distant period, feel able and willing to supplement the present subsidy, aided by my hon. friend the leader of the Opposition, and, I have no doubt, by the entire feeling of the House, I hope they will grant us an additional sum. submit to the Minister of Railways the proposition that he might give us $6,000 per mile from Hull to the River Desert, which would greatly improve our prospect.

Sir CHARLESTUPPER. I am sorry that we are not able to increase the vote after it is once brought down, otherwise I would be disposed to yield to the solicitations of the leader of the Opposition. I am glad to find that the principal objection he finds in the Resolution is that the amounts are too small. I will bear that fact in mind, and perhaps I will have more confidence on future occasions in preparing these matters for the consideration of the House. I had a good deal of discussion with the hon. gentleman who represents the county of Ottawa, and who takes so deep an interest in this particular road, and with the gentlemen who have been actively engaged to raise the capital, and I came to the conclusion that it would absolutely give them a better and more substantial foundation to secure the capital required for the construction of the road, if we expended this amount on the 100 miles, and really touched and opened up this magnificent tract of country to which the hon. gentleman has referred, than if we gave $6,000 for the first $0 miles. In addition to that, as I have explained, there was the reluctance the Government had to depart from the general principle that they have applied to all these roads. But if there is any case which has been brought before the Government in which we feel disposed and warranted in considering the question of giving a larger amount than the usual sum, it would be the case of this very road to which I have referred.

Mr. BLAKE. I cannot permit the hon. gentleman to recur to the misappreheusion, the innocent misapprehension, of my remarks, without once again pointing out the unfortunate fallacy which seems to beset him. I have not com-plained of the smallness of the amounts. The hon. member for Muskinongé (Mr. Houde) at an early period in the discussion, told the hon. gentleman that the reason why so small an amount of the many millions was asked, was because the grants were illusory, and he knew it. Now, I am not a supporter of the Government, and I am disposed to use more moderate language than that; but I think I am entitled to point out to him that the difficulty one has in reconciling, from the papers before us, the proposition that there has been an investigation into these matters which would lead the House to believe that there is a practical business basis on which the grants may be expected to be adequate to construct the roads. I will tell him why-I will tell him one reason, irrespective of others : It is because we know very well that this is only the thin end of the wedge, and if we are told next Session that these grants are too small, that we must give more to complete the roads, it will be a case of, half begun is nearly done, and we will have the work to go on. I want to see the end, if I can, towards the beginning, and I want therefore to understand what the principles are and what the information is, on which the hon. gentleman proceeded in each of these cases. Now, then, the hon. gentleman has made one remark, so extraordinary, that I feel bound to comment on it. He says he really believed that he was giving the company a more solid basis for success, in dividing the same amount of money over 100 miles, as if ho had given them the opportunity of spending the money as they think would be best, on the most difficult 50 miles. He was not giving them any more money, or enabling them in any other way to construct the 100 miles of railway, but he gives the same amount of money, but pledges that it shall be divided over the 100 miles instead of giving it in the way which they think would best accomplish their object; and still ho thinks that this was a better basis of credit than the other. I do not say that he was wrong to prescribe that this $3,200 should be expended over the whole way, but I fancy, as far as the basis of credit of the company is concerned, it would not be hurt by its being known that if the company desired the subsidy might be spent on the first fifty miles.

Mr. WRIGHT. I would suggest to the Minister of Railways that with his parliamentary skill and knowledge, he might see his way to increasing this amount, and giving us $6,000 from Hull to Desert. I am quite sure that the House would sustain him in doing so.

Mr. HOUDE. As the leader of the Opposition has congratulated himself upon being more moderate in his language than I am in mine, I would say that I am glad of it, because I believe in moderation, although it happens to me sometimes, as to others, to be a little too quick-tempered. Perhaps I was so this afternoon; but in all frankness I must say that I did not take the argument of the hon. Minister of Railways as being very complimentary to the intelligence of the House, when he was telling us: Well, do not be afraid to vote so much money; we have already voted a large sum. but we did not expend much of it. Well, perhaps, I enterpreted that remark too severely. If I did I shall be sorry, and I will confess frankly that I have been wrong. But I was feeling pretty strongly against the basis of the policy which seems to underlie these Resolutions, with regard to the local railways. T do not regret that the Government propose to spend so much money, so much as I regret that they propose to spend it in this particular way. I should have very much preferred that the Government would have chosen a smaller number of railways, of most importance, and subsidized them to a larger amount, and ensured thereby their early construction, in order to develop large tracts of country where a great part of cur population can be placed, and contribute to the strength and prosperity and greatness of the country. When I examine the list of the railways which it is proposed to subsidize, I remark that there are some very important ones, as for instance, the railway in which the hon. member for Ottawa county takes so great an interest, and also the Montreal and Occidental Railway. But there are other railways of so little importance relatively, which induced the Government to subsidize them, that any railway company in the country will feel entitled to apply here for a subsidy. I do not pretend to say that the Government are subsidizing uscless railways; all railways are mole or less useful; but if we open the door to so many applications from railways, which will not add a single soul to the population of the country, I say that the Government will find it impossible to give efficacious aid to railways that would open up large tracts of country, such as the Ottawa and the Gatineau valleys, and other large vallays in the Province of Quebec, as well as in other Provinces. My opinion is that it should be the object of this Parliament to encourage the development of those regions in preference to subsidizing railways between cities and towns and villages which are already provided with railwayseven with several railways, in some instances. lt is useles for us to try to conceal from ourselves the fact that our people want to have opened more regions for colouization in the Old Provinces. We are making great efforts, and spending vast sums of money to settle the North-West, while if I am not mistaken, it is just as important to people the old Provinces, and to keep our own population, who are accustomed to our climate, our laws, and our usages, and who are more Canadian than the people in the North-West will be for years. I think it is important to take this view of the subject, and to prevent our population from going to the United States. I do not like to say anything disparaging to my country; but there are truths which it is more injurious to conceal than to admit; and I must admit that our population is constantly leaving our country, especially the rural population, at least in the Provinco of Quebec; and why? Because the valley of the St. Lawrence is already inhabited. People have to go far into the forest, and beyond mountains, into districts which have no facilities of communication; and they cannot have adequate facilities except by railways. And if we do not give them those facilities, they will continue to leave us as they are doing now. That is the idea I had when I said that the grants voted in past Sessions, and proposed to be voted this Session, are illusory. I did not mean to be offensive; if my expression was so, I beg to withdraw it, and to ask the pardon of the House for having used it.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. There are two lines of policy under discussion just now-first, that adopted by the Government as shown by these Resolutions, and the policy suggested by my hon. friend, who has spoken with his usual clearness. His policy is that we should take fewer lines, longer and more important lines, and grant them a larger amount of subsidy. Well, that has its merits. These large and important lines, if they are largely subsidized, will of course be of great benefit to the section of country in which they are built; but there are two objections to that. In the first place, I think that policy would not be acceptable to this House. This House is composed of representatives from House. This House is composed of representatives from have been granted; and if there is a case in which the different Provinces, and there would be great reluctance there should be an exception to the policy just among the representatives from a Province far away from propounded by the leader of Government, it seems some of these main lines, to voting for a charge to be put apon their constituents, in order to assist lines far away from them, and giving them not the most remote advantage. And there is this other objection-that if you grant large subsidies, you prevent the people, the capitalists, and the municipalities interested, from helping themselves. These two objections, I think, stand greatly in the way of the policy proposed by my hon. friend-first, that a few large and important lines, running in particular parts of the country, would not receive the general support required to carry out that policy; and, in the next place, it would cause the parties interested in promoting these lines to throw themselves altogether on the public purse, instead of trying to help themselves. The present policy has been already explained by my hon. colleague. There are very many tracts in the country which would be very much aided and developed by reasonable assistance. The people say : We would like to have a railway, but we cannot start it; we have not capital enough; we cannot interest capitalists in our line; our municipalities are not rich enough to commence these lines, and therefore we must do without them. So that, if a tract of country is really eligible for a railway, which is likely to be ultimately a commercial success, the Government are encouraging the people by giving them a subsidy of $3,200 per mile, and if there is anything in the scheme, the people will undertake it. 'They will go to the municipalities along the line of railway, get the stock lists up, and start a real basis to work upon. Thus, without overburdening the Dominion Treasury, you will have a number of really good schemes, having some real merits in themselves, started. As my hon, friend has said, that is a good test whether a railway scheme has any real merit. Parliament grants a subsidy of $3,200 a mile for a particular line. If it has any real merit, the road will be established; and if it has no merit, it must, to be built, throw itself upon the public treasury altogether, and then it will never be built. In all previous subsidies, a provision has been made -and it will be repeated in this scheme-that the road subsidized must be commenced in two years and finished in four years; and if it has any real merits, after this Parliament has voted for it $3,200 per mile, the parties and the portion of the country interested in the road will put their hands in their pockets and build it. At the end of the two years, if they have taken no steps to commence the road, that will be proof positive that it is not a meritorious scheme. The Treasury will not have lost the moncy and that money will be ready to give to another portion of the country and to another scheme which is really meritorious.

Mr. TASSE. (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, I cannot help saying that I feel disappointed to see that the sum of $6,000 has not been appropriated by the Government, instead of $3,200, for the Gatineau road, and that the same thing has not been done in favour of the Montreal and Occidental Railway, which is to start from St. Jérome, to reach the same terminus at the Desert, above the Gatineau River. Last year this same vote of $3,200 was granted for these two lines on a distance of fifty miles. Well, Mr. Speaker, one year has gone by since, and nothing has been done; still the promoters of these two undertakings, who take such a deep interest in the development of the Gatineau district and of the great valuey of the Ottawa, have used every effort, have taken every step to induce capitalists to come to their aid, and to build these two railways. The hon: Minister of Railways has told us this afternoon, that out of the $ 3,000,000 voted last year and the year before, there had been expended-if I am not misiaken-only $200,000. This fact is ample proof that the appropriations voted up to this day are inadequate to the purposes for which they to me, that it is the case of the Gatineau Railway, and of the Montreal and Occidental Railway, for both of these railways are to go through new territories, which could not, by any means, be compared to districts which have long been settled. The vast territories which extend far back on the other side of the Laurentians may be compared, in a measure, to our North-West country, for which we have already made such heavy sacrifices. The aid of municipalities is spoken of; but the history of the past is there to show that it is impossible to expect a great deal of help from municipalities, especially when these municipalities are poor, when but yesterday they were still unorganized, when but yesterday several of the villages, several of the townships, several of the counties which he in rear of the Laurentian range, were nothing more than a group of shanties, were nothing more than the forest, nothing but a vast wilderness. In spite of the good will of the first settlers, who went there to improve this fine portion of our country, it is impossible to ex-pect that these settlers, who can hardly make a living, will vote thousands of dollars, will saddle themselves with heavy taxes, in order to build railways. In the course of the debate on the Pacific question, a great deal has been said about the importance of building railway branches in the North-West Territories. Well, the Montreal and Occidental Railway and the Gatineau Railway have just as much importance for the Ottawa valley as the branch railways which have already been built, or which will be built, at a more or less distant date, in the North-West. These two lines, the Montreal and Occidental and the Gatineau Railway, are two important tributaries of the great line of the Canadian Pacific, and will do much towards ensuring its prosperity. Mr. Speaker, I attach the highest importance to the two undertakings mentioned in these Resolutions, and I am a great deal of the opinion of my hon. friend the member for Maskinongé (Mr. Houde), who has just spoken. Instead of dividing our strength, instead of scattering our resources on too great a number of railways, we should rather concentrate our means of action on our main lines, on lines which would favour the development of both trade and colonization, and on this point I am sorry to say I can not entirely agree with the leader of the Government, although it is very soldom my opinions differ from his own. Since the last seven or eight years, about twenty purishes have been established in rear of the Laurentian range. 1 have had occasion to visit that part of the country, in company with Rev. Mr. Labelle, of whom the hon. Minister of Railways has this afternoon made such a just and well deserved eulogium, and I was struck by the richness of its soil; I was struck by its progress, by its development, by the hardihood and manly endurance of its settlers, who only some few years ago, some few months ago even, had left the old parishes of Lower Canada, and who had already made comfortable homes for themselves in the midst of the forest. Since the last seven or eight years, at least 10,000 persons have settled in that great wilderness, and if Parliament only did that which we have a right to expect from it; if instead of granting a subsidy of $3,200 which, in my humble opinion, is entirely insufficient for the requirements of these two undertakings, if, instead of that, they should grant at least $6,000, as has been asked by the directors and promoters of these two undertakings, we might trust that, in a few years from now, a great country, interspersed by railways, would be opened to colonization. Mr. Speaker, by railways, would be opened to colonization. Mr. Speaker, a measure which would result in the increase of the popu-lation would be a measure essentially beneficial to the Government, essentially in the interest of the revenue of the Dominion; for the Dominion Government, the Federal Treasury, is about the only one interested, financially, in the development of the population. Every person which is added to the number of the population of Canada Mr. TASSE.

represents a tax payer, and the best means of increasing the population, both in the west and in the old Provinces of the cast is to do all in our power to give them railways, which will be the most powerful and influential agents to ensure the development of our population, and the comfort and prosperity of our country. I know that, frequently, letters have come to us from Canadians who had left the country to expatriate themselves on the other side of the frontier, and who, although living far away from their native land, had not forgotten their country and felt a strong desire to come back. They were anxious to give Canada the benefit of their labour and of the savings they have made abroad; they asked that these fertile lands should be put at their disposal, and should be put in communication with the large centres of trade by means of railways, by means of colonization roads. Well, Mr. Speaker, instead of facilitating this movement we have been obliged, in many cases, to stop it in a measure, because in the northern townships, where the poor Franch Canadians who had emigrated to the United States were desirous of settling, we had no surveyed land to give them, no land where there are colonization roads, much le s a lways. It is useless to conceal the fact that every year a large immigration goes to the United States. It is not so large as has been pretended by our friends opposite, but still it does exist, and one of the main causes of that emigration is the want of roads in that vast country, which extends north of the St. Lawrence and of the Ottawa, in the places where the French race is partly agglomerated. The want of roads is the main cause of the emigration of our race to the United States. I say that if we intend to do something for the French race in this country-for it is hardly possible to expect a large French immigration-if we wish to bring back here a great number of the thousands of French Canadians who have been obliged to expatriate themselves beyond the frontier, the best means for the Parliament and the country to adopt is to build railways in that great valley of the Ottawa and in that of the Saguenay, which, I am happy to say, for the district of Quebec, is soon to have its railway. The Gatineau road, and the Montreal and Occidental road have, for us inhabitants of the Ottawa valley, just the same importance as the Lake St. John Railway has for our fellow citizens of the Quebec region. I repeat it, Mr. Speaker, if we wish to adopt efficient means to bring back here a large number of our countrymen who have gone to the United States, let us throw a network of railways over these vast territories, which will enable our people to live there and make money, and will add to the comfort, prosperity and greatness of our country.

Paragraph agreed to.

On paragraph 19,

To the Napanee and Tamworth Railway Company, for a line of railway from Tamworth to Bogart and Bridgewater, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole.....$70,400 00

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This is for eighteen miles from Bogart to Tamworth, four miles from Bogart to Bridgewater, where it will connect with the Toronto and Ottawa.

Mr. BLAKE. With reference to the sufficiency of the subsidy, the petition says :

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. We have refused to give them any further aid on the twenty-eight miles already subsidized. We said, if you build that, you will obtain the subsidy that is voted for it, and then as you complete each ten miles of this distance of twenty-two miles, to Bridgewater, you will receive the same sum. The subsidy has been practically found sufficient to build the portion already subsidized, and the same thing will happen in this case.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman takes it for granted.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I will go further; I have a private note from the president of the road, stating that with this subsidy he would be able to go on with the road.

Paragraph agreed to.

On paragraph 20,

To the Montreal and Western Railway Company, for a line of railway from Lake Simon to Le Desert, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole $160,000 00

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I propose to amend this by striking out the words "from Lake Simon" and substituting the words "from the end of the line subsidized last Session." This makes no alteration, except to correct an inaccurate description.

Mr. BLAKE. How far does the present subsidy carry the railway?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Fifty miles; this will carry it 100.

Mr. BLAKE. There are no papers laid on the Table with reference to this.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I dare say the hon. gentleman may have seen a communication on this subject. I received a deputation of a large number of gentlemen, headed by Father Labelle, who stated the difficulty pretty much in the same terms as were used with regard to the Gatineau Railway. He stated they found the distance too short, and they asked for $6,000 a mile. I am told the difficulties will be much greater in the early portions of the road than in any other, and if so those portions will receive rather more per mile than $3,200. They will receive the subsidy in proportion to the whole work to be done. I hope, with the assistance this road will obtain from the Province of Quebec, which has given $4,000 per mile for 18 miles, it will be pushed through to completion. The Province of Quebec has given $4,000 a mile for 18 miles, $2,500 a mile for 12 miles, and 4,000 acres a mile for 35 miles. With these combined subsidies they will be able to make some considerable progress.

Mr. BLAKE. What have they done?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. They have not commenced. They found they could not organize with the 50 miles. The distance was too short.

Mr. BLAKE. I think the hon. gentleman will find it impossible to apply the clause in the latter part of the Resolution for the purpose he requires.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Perhaps so.

Mr. BLAKE. He cannot take the $3,200 a mile and apply it to any other part of the work. He can only allocate it to the 50 miles which is to be subsidized according to the value of the work done. He cannot take it for the carlier 50 miles.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes; it must be within the 50 miles.

Mr. BLAKE. Yes.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. But suppose the first 25 miles is very much more difficult than the second 25 miles, hastily looking upon it, I was inclined to think that out of the subsidy for the first 50 miles you might give a larger proportion if the value of the work done is greater in proportion to the whole.

Mr. BLAKE. My recollection of the provision in the subidies in previous years is, that the $3,200 a mile is to be paid as 10 mile sections are completed, and that there is no elasticity. If so, it will lie more. When he reaches the second 50 miles, he may apply that on the new sections, in the same way as he has decided in regard to the new sections of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Paragraph, as amended, agreed to.

On paragraph 21,

To the MiramichiValley Railway Company, for a lice of railway, from Fredericton to the Miramichi River, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole (instead of the subsidy proposed in 1883)$128,00 00

Mr. BLAKE. Of course, I have no personal knowledge about this matter, but I have received—and I communicated with the hon. gentleman on the receipt, and found he was in receipt of the same class of communication, as I suppose other hon. members of this House have received—communications on this subject. It appears to me there has been a somewhat inaccurate description of the subsidy to be now given as being "instead of the subsidy proposed in 1883," because really it is the other call of the Intercolonial that was in view in 1883.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. It takes the place of the other.

Mr. BLAKE. I am aware of that. The obvious intention is that the work the hon. gentleman is about to construct as a Government work at the other end shall take the place of, as far as the public interest is concerned, the work which was intended to be subsidized last year. That is the principle effect of the transaction, as the hon. gentleman has said, and being so, it is material that I should ask from the hon. gentleman an explanation with reference to the facts, as communicated to me and no doubt to him. These are the statements by telegram:

"" Northern and Western Company has purchased 6,000 tons of rails in England, and made other expensive preparations to at once build first thirty-two miles Miramichi Valley Railway, commencing at Intercolonial, under their contract with Local Government, and in expectation of existing Dominion subsidy, Ottawa Government, and in expectation of existing Dominion subsidy, Ottawa Government, and in expectation of existing Dominion subsidy, Ottawa Government, and in expectation of existing Dominion subsidy, Ottawa Government, and in expectation of existing Dominion subsidy, Ottawa Government, and in expectation of existing Dominion subsidy, Ottawa Government now proses to wipe out that subsidy and spend $140,000 for fifteen miles of road which will run generally parallel to and in places not more than a mile from company's proposed road. It is deliberate waste of public money to please small cotice party hacks in Newcastle and persecute Chatham and three-quarters county. Justice demands that subsidy provision of last Session should stand and Government abandon its proposition to build Indiantown and Derby branch. The proposition to build Government branch to Indiantown presents aspect of attempt to crush enterprising men of county who have already invested over $60,000, with intention to practically build what Government proposes now to undertake."

I have also received a communication, which I believe has been duplicated to other hon. gentlemen. It is in these terms:

"18th May last at telegraphic request of a number citizens this county Dominion Government resolution relating subsidy Miramiebi Valley Railway was changed by Government so as to apply to junction with Intercolonial on either side Miramichi River."

The hon. gentleman will remember that we had some discussion across the floor about that, and it was so stated that the change the Government made last Session was calculated to make the matter more elastic and make a provision by which the railway could be built on either side of the river:

⁴ Encouraged thereby, Northern and Western Railway Company was organized, survey made on both sides of the river, plans and pr.files made, contract entered into under Local Subsidy Act with Previncial Government, 6,000 tons of steel rails purchased, and necessary local legislation was secured last month so as to enable company to proceed forthwith construction which it has made advance preparation to do. So superior are advantages of route by south side to junction with Intercolonial two miles only from river, that three-quarters of actual rate ayers of county petitioned Local Legislature in favour of securing it and succeeded. If existing Domnion subsidy between Intercolonial and Dunphy village is withdrawn, will be great breach of faith with people of county and Northern and Western Company, who are catisfied with that subsidy of $102,400 for first 22 miles road from Intercolonial up river, which they will build forthwith, while proposed branch under Resolutions for to-day, from Derby to Indiantown, will run only 15 miles of the distance on opposite side of river, and cost $140,000. We ask as matter of justice to people and company, and for all interests involved, that paragraph of Resolutions relating to branch to Indiantown be withdrawn, so that company may go on with construction of whole line, which withdrawal of last year's subsidy will jeopardize."

That is signed by Mr. Muirhead, the Senator, by Mr. Tweedie, by Mr. T. F. Gillespie, M. P. P., President Executive Council, and by a number of other persons, making sixty-two names, and they add that there are 857 others. Of course, I merely make myself the vehicle upon this question of laying these statements before the Committee. The very late hour at which the hon. gentleman brought down the Resolutions, the very early period at which he presses them upon the attention of the Committee, and the short time which remains before prorogation, render it impossible for any hon. gentleman to make those enquiries he would desire to make before bringing these points before the House at all, but it is only just that I should place these statements before the Committee, and should ask the hon. gentleman to make such explanations as are to be made for what does seem at first sight to be a very extraordinary course; when we find, as stated here, that a considerable investment of money has taken place, large preparations have been made, 6,000 tons of iron has been bought, and arrangements have been entered into, that a subsidy granted should be withdrawn and that other arrangements should be made, irrespective of the question of policy. I think that there are two important questions involved; one is the question of good faith and the other the question of policy, and on both, I think, the circumstances demand a tolerably full explanation from the Minister, and I see my hon. friend from Northumberland (Mr. Mitchell) will assist and will become, if not the principal, the second in those explanations-I dare say the principal.

Mr. MITCHELL. The hon. gentleman is quite right, perhaps, in saying, that if I will not be the second, 1 may possibily be the first, in the explanations in regard to this matter. I can assure my hon. friend that the information which he has given is nothing new. I hold in my hand a copy of a similar telegram, signed by the same persons—857. It is a wonder that it is not 2,857, or 3,857. I have done nothing but open telegrams for the last twenty-four hours. I have them here by the dozen—not on one side only, as my hon. friend has, but on both sides, and if my hon. friend and this House are at all curious to hear them, it will afford me the greatest pleasure to read them.

Several hon. MEMBERS. Dispense.

Mr. MITCHELL Why, Sir, there is but one thing outside the wish of the Committee to cause me to dispense with the reading of these telegrams. I hold in this hand the telegram my hon. friend has got, with just one line of variation, which I will read for the benefit of my Conservative friends. I do not know whether my hon. friend, out of delicacy——

Mr. BLAKE. I read the whole.

Mr. MITCHELL. But they put this in :

"We ask, as a matter of justice to the people and for the interests involved, that the paragraph in the Resolution relating to the Indiantown branch be withdrawn, and that the company may go on with the construction of the whole line."

Then they go on to say ; Mr. BLAKE "On the south side will answer all purposes, and will run parallel with the proposed branch in several places, not a mile distant. If this is done it will kill the Conservative party in this county outright."

Now, Sir, I think my hon friends have taken a queer vehicle for presenting to the House their case, if they desired to avoid killing the Conservative party outright. My hon, friend has quoted the telegram from Mr. Smith, referring to the respectable people who signed these telegrams and the people who opposed this change in the line. Now, I have nothing to say against the respectability of the people who signed his telegram; they are respectable men, but they are respectable on the other side of the question, too, and I will just read one telegram in proof of what I say. I will read a telegram from the Hon. Allen A. Davidson, legislative councillor for the county:

"Best thanks for your noble stand for railway through Derby. Has gained you many friends. I was in Chatham to-day. The selfish grab combination is reprobated even there."

Here is another telegram :

"Thanks for services. Only adds another evidence of your ability and great public usefulness."

Mr. Chairman, this is a true telegram :

"Our people are rejoiced. On behalf of them we tender you hearty congratulations and a 'Cead Mille Failthe' on your return to us."

And it is signed by a long list of names. Now, I will place the respectability of these men alongside the respectability of those who signed the telegram of my hon. friend. My hon. friend has made a statement, based upon information which he has received, which may or may not be true.

Mr. BLAKE. I made no statement, I read the information.

Mr. MITCHELL. He made some statements in addition to the information. I find no fault with him. Mr. D. G. Smith, who furnished that information to my hon. friend, is the gentleman who conducts the newspaper organ of the Liberal party in that county, a man who has never ceased to villify the Government of the day, and represents the party who have persistently attacked the policy which this Government have honoured the country by adopting. What have these men done in relation to this matter? I hold in my hand a document I have written in reply to this telegram I received, which contains some twenty-five pages of replies. I do not want to take these people by surprise, and so while I answered their telegram by letter, I also stated that I would not consent to withdraw the Resolution, but I was willing to enable them to present their case here. If my hon. friend wants me to read the letter I will do so. I applied last year, in the month of February, to the Railway Department, for the purpose of seeing whether I could not get some aid to the Miramichi Valley Railway. I had not the honour to be a member of this House in the previous Session, when Mr. Snowball was the member and supported my hon. friends opposite. During the Session before last, a principle was introduced into this country of subsidizing private roads from the general revenue of the Dominion. At the time it was looked upon with some surprise. I must confess that to my own mind it was a policy that admitted of a great deal of discussion, whether it was wise or not; certainly it has opened a great door for applications for assistance, and it has given a great impotus to the development of the country. But, Sir, when that door was opened, and when the people of the county wisely selected me to represent their inter-ests, and when I find the echoes that come from all sides of this House to that sentiment, I know I have not only got right and justice on my side, but I have got the feelings, as I will have the votes of the people who elected me to this House. I applied to the Government last year, and I found a pretty tough customer to deal with in the Minister of Railways. When I approached him, I pointed out the necessity of opening up this portion of the country, and making a connection between the North Shore and Fredericton; and I asked that some means be taken to grant a subsidy to that road. I was met by two objections from the hon. gentleman. He said: "Government have not yet adopted the policy of granting subsidies to roads of a private character, but if you choose to put in your application, there are some others of the same character coming up, and they will all be considered together." I endeavoured to press upon him the necessity of giving aid to this road as a feeder to the Intercolonial, when I was met by another objection of a serious character. "Why," said he, "Mr. Mitchell, if we build this, the effect will be that, instead of feeding the Intercolonial Railway, it will take trade away from it." I felt at once the force of the objection; I put in my application, but I saw that the people of the county did not expect I would get the subsidy, and then I thought it would be desirable to meet the second objection, and I asked him to build either 10, 25, 48 or 60 miles of branch, just as I could persuade him. I then pointed out that there would be no connection with the St. John river, and therefore it would be a feeder to the Intercolonial. The answer I got was that the Government could not build it as a branch, but would grant it a subsidy. Up to the time I made the application, no party in the county had asked me to obtain a subsidy for them, but individuals, throughout the upper river parishes of Ludlow, Blissfield, Blackville, Derby, Nelson, South Esk and North Esk, had urged on me to obtain it; but on my own responsibility, as their representative, and taking an interest in the matter, I made application based on the fact that other roads had received support in previous Sessions and that our road had been passed over. The president of the Miramichi Valley Road or the Northern and North Western, as it is now called, came to Ottawa in March. In discussing with him, Mr. R. R. Call, about the matter, he told me he was going to make application for a subsidy; and I told him I had done so. He made out an application and I took it round the House and got three fourths of the members to sign it; I afterwards submitted it to the Minister of Railways and we had a lengthy discussion on the subject. When I found, some days ago, that subsidies were proposed to be granted, I found the Minister of Railways had not forgotten one who has always admired his pluck and ability and the courage with which he has dealt with great questions. I found he had remembered the county of Northumberland, and had inserted in the list of subsidies one for 25 miles of this road. This was not quite satisfactory, as some other projects had got a great deal more aid, and by means of argument I induced him to give a subsidy for 32 miles, so as to extend the road to a point named. Up to that time Mr. Snowball and Mr. Muirhead, the gentlemen who represent the telegrams which the hon. gentleman opposite has read, never hinted at such a thing as making an application. I asked Mr. Muirhead to go to the Senate and get a few names, which he did. None of them made any motion in regard to it. The motion was made by myself, on behalf of the people of the parishes, not on behalf of the town of Newcastle nor Chatham or other towns in the county. As far as Newcastle or Chatham are concerned, important and influential as they are both, they are not the most important factors in this matter. My duty is to the people for whom I secured that subsidy, who cannot present their views in telegrams and written documents, so readily as the townspeople, but they are, nevertheless, the people for whom the subsidy was obtained, and I made up my mind that I would do the best I could to open up their parishes. The moment I obtained the subsidy, telegrams were sent to the Minister of Railways and others, in regard to the matter, which was not very flattering to me, considering the fair treatment I had always given my opponents. I did not then adopt a dogin-the-manger policy; but I said I was willing to leave the matter to be settled by the people themselves, and for ten respect to the history of this matter. In 1872 a company months I never interfered, although asked by both sides to meet their views, one on behalf of Newcastle and the other on behalf of Chatham. I determined, however, to let them fight it out. I have no particular sympathy with either of the towns as regards this railway. My feeling is with the people of the parishes, for whom this railway subsidy was obtained and who will be benefited thereby; those are the people in whom I am interested, not in interests connected with either the one town or the other. I know it is very difficult for a man to take such a position in a county. am well aware that these are important towns and the inhabitants have influence, not only in the towns themselves but in outside districts; but I knew what it was my duty to do, and I did it. When the subsidy was given, Mr. Call, as representing the Northern and North-Western, wanted the subsidy for building a line from Derby up the river to Dunphys. Mr. Snowball, Mr. Muirhead and Mr. Gibson, of Fredericton, formed a new corporation and got a company organized, with a view new to obtain control of the money and build the road. The result was, that these companies got into the Court of Chancery and other litigation; and I made up my mind that it would be a very long time before the people of the parishes, to whom I have referred, would obtain the railway if they were to depend on companies which got into the courts and continued fighting over a carcase which they had done nothing to acquire. That was the position in which I found the matter. I came up to Ottawa, still prepared to see what I could do towards securing an amicable settlement, and I found the fight was still going on. In my absence, Mr. Tweedie, representing the Chatham people, had come up and, as I understood, sought to obtain control of the subsidy. He did not succeed, and the Government, in my absence, refused to deal with the matter. When I arrived in Ottawa I presented my case to the Government; I said, there is but one way to deal with this matter, and that is to build fifteen miles of the road, which portion will prove a valuable feeder to the Intercolonial; and if the Government would build the road, I said, it would put an end to all the difficulty. I thought the Government would do that, but they put the subsidy to the other end of the line and agreed to build the line themselves. Yet hon, gentlemen opposite find fault. They say we have 6,000 tons of steel rails. I will not say I doubt the statement; but if they have those rails they have forty miles of line subsidized with so much per mile at the other end to put the rails on, and no great hardship is done. When they talk about work done, I must say there has not been the first step taken, outside of litigation and the organization of the rival companies, towards going on with the work, and the matter stands where it did. In conclusion, I would say that this is a matter of vast importance to the people of my county. I stand here as an advocate, not of the rich and wealthy of the towns, but of the poorer farmers and lumbermen of the parishes; those are the people for whom I speak, and I ask the Committee to support the Resolution of the Government, in order that we secure a railway which I doubt we will ever obtain except in that way.

Mr. WELDON. The hon. gentleman is not quite right in respect to this matter. The people who have formed the Northern and North-Western Company are by this Act deprived of the opportunity of building the road. The Minister of Railways, in introducing his Resolution, said, it had the support of the members of the county. The hon. gentleman is not quite right in that statement, because there are four members for the county.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Having received a telegram from two members, I thought there were but two.

Mr. WELDON. There are four ; two reside in Newcastle and two on the Chatham side. I desire to say a word with alive, but nothing was done under it until last July. In 1882, a vote for local aid was granted to the road, and in consequence of the disputes which followed, it was to be carried to another point. Originally, the first grant was made to another parish on the south side of the Miramichi river, and was in consequence of the Act of incorporation. In 1882, the subsidy was granted to the parish of South Esk which, I think, is on the north side of the river. Nothing was done up to 1883, when a grant was made to the company. In July the company was organized, or an attempt was made to organize it by parties in Newcastle, but they got into court, and the judgment of the court was that the company was organized. The question came up in the Local Legislature this winter, and in accordance with the Act of incorporation, and by an overwhelming vote of, I think, 25 to 8, it was decided that the subsidy was altered, the contention being that the original corpora-tion was sustained by this vote. What will be the result of the present proposition? It will be that another road will be built parallel to this road, and as stated by the hon. member for East York, it is a direct contravention of the policy of the Minister of Railways to build competing lines of railways alongside of each other. He is now actually going to build these two roads in competition, though I believe the claim of the inhabitants of the southern portion of the county is as much entitled to consideration as those on the north, as the farmers and the lumbermen there are as poor as those on the other side of the river. The telegram which has been forwarded to the hon. member for West Durham and myself is signed, I believe, by a large number of gentlemen supporting the present Government, among them being Mr. Muirhead, Mr. Gillespie, one of the members of the Local Government of Nova Scotia, and also a supporter of my hon. friend, and a number of others. But this is not a question of party politics. The matter was decided in good faith and by a large majority in the Legislature, and after having entered into a contract and gone to a great deal of expense, for I find by this telegram that the rails have actually been purchased, it seems to me that they would now have a just ground of complaint if that subsidy were withdrawn, and the Government should undertake to build a branch line parallel with the other road and competing with it, thus destroying the usefulness of both roads. It seems to me that these parties have a right to be heard; they have a right to complain that the subsidy upon which they reorganized the company and entered into engagements with the Local Government should now be withdrawn, and that the Government should grant $140,000 for a line of fifteen miles, when they undertook to build for the $102,000, which was granted last year, a road thirty-two miles in length.

Mr. MITCHELL. I omitted to state to the House that the subsidy granted last year was supplementary to the Local Government subsidy, and that the Act of the Local Government in granting that subsidy was to bring that railway to the parish of South Esk, which is on the north side of the river. I do not wish to introduce politics into this question, but we know that a change of Government took place; and the hon. gentleman must know that the men who are taking this course are those who oppose my hon. friend, Mr. Temple, and supported his opponent, Mr. Greogery, doing all they could to defeat the one and to secure the return of the other. Now, with regard to the unfairness of this matter, I may say that last year it was the misfor-tune of the Conservatives of New Brunswick to have a change of Government, and when this Government came in, without, giving any opportunity of competition, they Mr. LANDRY. I have not seen the Act of this Session, entered into a contract with Mr. Snowball, Mr. Gib. as it has not yet been printed; but my opinion is, that all son, and Mr. Muirhead, to build it on the north side that Legislature did was to make it optional as to whether Mr. WELDON.

ealled the Northern and North-Western was incorporated to of the river, in accordance with the Subsidy Act. build a line from the town of Chatham. That Act was kept That is what they did, and they did not strike a blow, and they did not put a shovel in the earth, and I do not believe—notwithstanding these telegrams—that they bought 6,000 tons of rails. They have a subsidy upon 40 miles on the other end of the line, so I do not think there is any great hardship. When the Government came in which is hostile to the present Government, they altered the subsidy and transferred it to the south side of the river. These are facts which the hon. gentleman cannot dispute, and if he does dispute them, I know that there is an hon. gentleman in my eye who is prepared to corroborate what I state.

> Mr. LANDRY (Kent). I do not wish to enter into the dispute between these two parties, one of whom contends that the north side of the river is the better place for the railway, and the other that the south side is, not knowing which would be preferable to a majority of the people. But it may be well to state that the act of the Local Legislature, needed in 1882 was passed, and the line that was subsidized was this:

> "A line of railway from the city of Fredericton or the parish of St. Mary's, in the county of York, passing through the counties of York and Northumberland, to some point on the Intercolonial Railway, either in the parish of Derby or the parish of South Esk, in the said county of Northumberland, and thence, if advisable, to Beaubear's Point, so could ? called.

> Now, I want to draw the attention of the Committee to this fact-that these words bring the terminus of railway between the two rivers, which is contrary to the statement in these telegrams. That was the law adopted by the Legisla-ture of New Brunswick in 1882. Then, I believe, two companies were incorporated, one of which obtained authority to build a line starting from the town of Chatham, having no subsidy; the other starting from this subsidy. Then there arose a rivalry between the two companies; and what amount of litigation there was, or what the result was, I am not prepared to state.

> Mr. WELDON. The court decided that there was only one company-that which was organized by Mr. Gibson and Mr. Muirhead.

> Mr. LANDRY. I am willing to accept the hon. gentleman's statement, that the company organized by Mr. Gibson, which is the same company that bought these rails and entered into these arrangements, was the company recognized by law. What did that company do? Last summer, while this subsidy Act was in operation, which provided that the line should go between the two brar ches of the Miramichi, they entered into a contract for the purpose of building that road; and what sort of a contract did they enter into? I think I can safely assert that the contract was in accordance with the terms of this subsidy, and provided that the road was to go between the two branches of the river and not to the south side, contrary to what they represent now in these telegrams. If that was their contract, why should they make a contract for 6,000 tons of rails for a railway in another place. I know that, within the last month, the Local Government obtained a vote from the Legislature, authorizing them, if they thought proper, to change the terminus to the south side of the river.

> Mr. WELDON. The original Act, passed in 1872, provided that the road should go to the town of Chatham; and the question arose in the last Session of the Legislature whether the Act of Incorporation or the terminus should be changed. That was the contest in the lower House at Fredericton, and by a vote of 25 to 8 the House decided that they would not alter the Act of Incorporation, but altered the terminus.

the Local Government should apply the subsidy to the road going between the two branches of the river, or to a road going to the south side. The hon. gentleman speaks of their getting a majority of 25 to 8. How did they get that majority? Why, because they said : We do not intend to change the terminus. It may be best to go between the two branches of the river, but surely, the Government said, you will give us the privilege of making it optional where to apply the money. But what I want to show is, that the Act of the Local Government was to make the company build the road between the two branches of the river. I think it was only right that I should explain this to the Committee, in order that they might understand the true nature of the contract entered into.

Mr. MITCHELL. I wish to say one word more, by way of explanation. The hon. gentleman has spoken of a division that took place in the Legislature of New Brunswick. I will speak of a division which took place in the county council in January last, when this question was rife before the people. In the county council, with twenty-six members present, representing every division in the county, when the question came up where the line should be, a decision was given in favour of the north side, by a vote of 19 to 7.

Mr. WELDON. The Local Legislature are supposed to understand what is the best policy to be adopted for the two counties, far better than the county council, and after discussion, and after hearing everybody interested, the Legislature decided in favour of the contention of those who sent this telegram.

Mr. BLAKE. I do not intend to enter into this local question, though I must say I think rather harsh justice, if not injustice, has been done to this company. I desire to know if there is such a company as the Miramichi Valley Company?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I think the hon. gentleman is labouring under an entire misapprehension as to the relations of this company to the Government, when he talks about injustice. They have not the shadow of a ground of complaint, when it was distinctly provided by the Statute that the location of the road should be approved by the Gov. ernor in Council, and that an agreement for the construction of the road should be made in such specifications as we should require; and yet, down to this moment, they have never approached the Government, and have never asked to make an agreement that would entitle them to the subsidy. So that they have no claim to speak of injustice, or to raise the question of good or bad faith at all. In the next place, they have no ground of complaint, if they purchased the rails, when we are subsidizing the same road to a greater extent than before. And if they are prepared to make such an agreement as the Government will make with them, to entitle them to this subsidy, all they have to do is to send their rails there and lay them. I am sorry that this controversy has arisen; but after the statement made by my hon. friend, it is quite obvious that they are the parties who are changing the line from the place where it was to be built, according to the contract made with the Local Government, and for which the subsidy was originally intended. I think the Resolution is a good one. We have given a larger subsidy for a longer portion of the same railway, and we propose at the same time to construct a branch of the Intercolonial Railway that will meet the wants and requirements of the other end of the line.

Mr. BLAKE. I cannot agree with the hon. gentleman-I do not know what the company did or did not do; but I presume they had still time to do what was necessary to be done, on application to this Government; yet, without a moment's notice, the Government alter this arrangement, which seems to me to be a course which is not defensible. I remain of that opinion. I do not apprehend that the hon. gentleman is correct either, in his other view that this arrangement, as a whole, is equally advantageous, and for this reason. Besides the hon. gentleman is doing much more than transferring the subsidy. He is proposing to construct, at the public expense, a railway at the end of the line originally subsidized and running parallel to it and which obviously must very seriously interfere with the commercial prospects of the line as a whole line.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. On the contrary, it will help it very much, because we are bringing the Intercolonial Railway that much nearer to it.

Mr. BLAKE. That is assuming they will only construct a portion of the enterprise; that is assuming they do not go to neither Chatham or Newcastle, but to a point where the hon. gentleman will strike his branch from the Intercolonial Railway. What I rose, however, to ask was, what is the Miramichi Valley Railway Company? There is no such corporation.

Mr. MITCHELL. The road was always called the Miramichi Valley Railway Company, until it was altered to the Northern and North-Western Railway Company, and it is still generally known by the former name. My hon. friend has stated this will be a rival road, running parallel to the other road, but not a foot of that other road has been built, and this is subsidized to run on the line of which the subsidy granted to the other end is part.

Mr. BLAKE. I am glad to know that the road is called the Northern and North-Western.

Mr. WELDON. The subsidy last year was to the Northern and North-Western Railway Company.

Mr. MITCHELL. If the hon. member for York, on whose application the subsidy was granted, has given a wrong name, that can be easily corrected.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I propose to amend that resolution by substituting "Northern and North-Western Railway Company" for the "Miramichi Valley Railway Company."

Paragraph, as amended, agreed to.

On paragraph 22,

Mr. BLAKE. Has the hon. gentleman reason to believe this grant will be adequate ?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes.

Paragraph agreed to.

On paragraph 23,

To the Ontario and Pacific Railway Company, for a line of railway from Cornwall to Perth, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole. $262,400 00

Mr. BLAKE. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will make a similar statement as to this.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not know that this subsidy will be sufficient, but it is all we felt authorized to grant.

Mr. BLAKE. The president asks for $6,000 a mile; did he assure the hon. gentleman that the road could be built for $3,200?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. No; he said it was experimental.

Mr. BLAKE. It may be called speculative,

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Well, it is experimental.

Paragraph agreed to. On paragraph 7,

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. No doubt this will accomplish the object.

Paragraph agreed to.

On paragraph 8,

Mr. BLAKE. There is no paper before the House with reference to this subsidy.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. No; there is no paper, but I believe there is no doubt that will accomplish the object.

Mr. BLAKE. Why is there not any paper? I am sure the Secretary of State could write a paper; his business is to write papers.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. He tells me that it was a very useful line to build, and this would accomplish it.

Mr. BLAKE. Will the hon. gentleman take his word, without anything to bring down to Parliament?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. My hon. colleague had to leave the House, or he would be able to give the desired information.

Mr. BLAKE. I was under the impression he had run away and shirked the question.

Paragraph agreed to.

On paragraph 9,

Mr. BLAKE. We do not know what proportion of the whole cost of this is being paid by the country, and what by the company. Another thing, and one which I feel very strongly, is this: it seems, from the papers here, and from what information I have been able to gather of the conflict of the rival roads, as if a reasonable conduct on the part of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company would have rendered this vote unnecessary, and from the hon. gentleman's own statement made here this afternon, in which he stated he hoped they would not be able to use the grant, if it be the case that reasonable conduct on the part of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, with reference to the facilities required, would save to the country an expenditure of $200,000, it was the right and the duty of the Government to have imposed, as a condition, on that company, when we were granting them a loan of $30,000,000, and are to-night granting very large sums further in their interest, as a condition of these grants and benefits, the performance of reasonable conduct on their part.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I did not decide that the Canadian Pacific Railway were alone to blame. I believe that if these two companies had exercised the mutual consideration, good-will, and forbearance, they ought to exercise, Mr. BLAKE. Is the ho will accomplish the object.

the difficulty would have been avoided; but I am not a lawyer, I am not able to decide this question, which is a question of legal rights. I may say that the Canadian Pacific Railway took the ground that it was not possible for the other company to run their trains over this particular short piece of the line without involving danger in the carrying on the traffic, but they said to them, if you will arrange to construct an independent line, so as not to be made permanently dependent upon this, we will allow you to have what you want—the running powers; we will carry your freight now at a nominal rate over this piece of line, but we will not allow you to run over it with your engines; as a permanent arrangement we consider it fraught with danger to life and property," but if they would agree and make arrangements for the construction of a short piece of railway within any reasonable time, they were willing to allow them all they asked. So I am not prepared to say it was the unreasonable conduct of one party or the other; probably both were at fault, but while these companies are fighting it out and contesting their rights, their extreme legal rights, we should be in a position to solve the difficulty and cut the gordian knot, by preventing the obstruction to the trade and traffic of a large portion of Quebec.

Mr. BLAKE. I maintain this. There are two different questions. There is the question of strict legal right, whatever it may be. The Grand Trunk Railway Company, as I understand, raise certain contentions as to their rights, and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company raise certain contentions as to theirs. I maintain that a company, which is involving us in such enormous subventions this Session, ought not to raise strict legal rights to the detriment of the community at large, and at the cost of a tax of $200,000 more on us to cut the gordian knot. I do not say which is to blame. I dare say the Minister is right, that both are to blame. What I want is that the company on whom we may well impose conditions, we should impose conditions on, and then, if the Grand Trunk Railway Company is not reasonable, they must take the consequences. But the hon. gentleman says we had not any power to impose conditions on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. On either of these companies. I said we had not power to deal with this particular question at issue.

Mr. BLAKE. I say the hon. gentleman could take power to deal with this question, so far as it affects the Canadian Pacific Railway, and could arrange with them that they shall do that which is determined to be reasonable, as a condition of the great grants we are giving them, and so save this further expenditure we are asked to make.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I hope it will not require to be spent.

Mr. BLAKE. The Minister should make them do what is reasonable.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. We hope to do that.

Mr. BLAKE. He has not taken power to force them to do it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. They are not quite independent.

Mr. BLAKE. I dare say there is a mutual dependence. Paragraph, as amended, agreed to.

On paragraph 10,

For a line of Railway from St. Louis to Richibucto, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole...... $22,400 00

Mr. BLAKE. Is the hon. gentleman satisfied that this will accomplish the object.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes; I believe there is no doubt about that.

Mr. BLAKE. I believe there is some reason to hope that in this case the hon. gentleman will not be troubled :

"We may here state that, whilst other branches subsidized by you" Government still continue to annoy your Department with variou deputations to settle their intestine difficulties, we can assure you tha we will be satisfied with the subsidy requested, and pledge ourselves that we will not further trouble you in future in the matter."

That really is a splendid thing, then they say:

"The electorate of Kent county, which has, in the choice made of its representative, shown its sympathy for the present Administration in electing a man whose political tendencies were not equivocal, will be gratified should there be reciprocity on the part of the Government. Hoping that, with additional railway facilities Kent county may have the pleasure and honour to greet oftener the presence of dignitaries from this honourable and respectable body, and in all confidence leave the question in your responsible hands, being assured that, as true states-men and experienced politicians, you will grant bread and not stones to your deputed petitioners."

On paragraph 11,

For a line of railway from Hopewell to Alma, in the Province of New Brunswick, a sub-sidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole..... $51,200.00

Mr. BLAKE. I could not make out very well, from the paper brought down, what this was for. The statement which is laid upon the Table says: "Whereas a railway known as the Harvey Branch Railway."

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That is not it.

Mr. BLAKE. That is the only statement that has reference to it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That is the wrong paper then. There were two applications, and in sending there papers down they have been obliged to copy them in great haste, and they have put in the application for the three mile extension, which was refused, on the ground that it was practically built.

Mr. BLAKE. That is what appeared to me.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That was refused and the other granted. The sixteen miles, no portion of which is built, was to complete the extension of the Albert Railway from Hopewell to Alma.

Mr. BLAKE. What assurance has the hon. gentleman that this will be used?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am not quite certain that it will secure the construction of it, but there is a local subsidy of $3,000 from the Government of New Brunswick.

On paragraph 12,

For a line of railway from St. Andrews to Lachute, in the county of Argenteuil, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole...... $22,400 00

Mr. BLAKE. I see the stock subscribed is about $25,000 and the Local Government granted a land subsidy of 4,000 acres. Has the hon. gentleman satisfied himself as to its being adequate?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes; I did so.

Paragraph agreed to.

On paragraph 13,

For a line of railway from the Grand Piles, on the River St. Maurice, to Lake des Isles, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole..... $217,600 00

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I propose to strike out "des Isles," and put in "Lake Edward.

Mr. BLAKE. The only paper I have on this subject brought before the House is a letter signed by the hon. member, I presume, of the district (Mr. Montplaisir), in which he says that he has the honour to transmit a map, a plan, showing the route of the road, and he dares to hope the Government will do right and meet the just demands in giving $3,200 a mile.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I may say there are twentyseven miles already built to the Piles, and I am instructed that if this subsidy is granted, parties are ready to sign a contract for the completion of the road, in connection with the Lake St. John Railway. Twenty-seven miles from the St. Lawrence, running in this direction towards Lake Edward, are already built. There is a company already organized.

On paragraph 14,

For a line of railway from Annapolis to Digby, in the Province of Nova Scotia, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor ex-ceeding in the whole..... $64.000 00

Mr. BLAKE. There can be no question as to how this is to be done. It says for a line of railway from Annapolis to Digby, but it must be either to the Western Counties Railway or to the Nova Scotia Government.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. All I propose to do is to aid the Western Counties Railway, or the Windsor and Annapolis Railway, or the Government of Nova Scotia, provided they will make the necessary arrangements. It will be open for them to make arrangements with any parties or to make a combination of the whole.

Mr. BLAKE. Of course the policy of the Government will be to give it to whoever that corporation may be that represents the other interests.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This will complete the two interests. The Western Counties interest is one interest, and the Windsor and Annapolis Railway is another interest. They are connected at Digby. I leave it open, because the Government of Nova Scotia have aided both these companies, especially the Western Counties Railway. Of course, they are all desirous of having this connection completed, but I ask the vote with a view to aid either company, or the Government, or the whole thing combined.

Mr. BLAKE. It would be necessary to consider the question of who has the corporate power to build the link. I think this Western Counties Company must have the power; therefore, the hon. gentleman could not grant the subsidy to the Windsor and Annapolis, because it has not the capacity to build the link.

Mr. VAIL. My hon. friend knows that the Local Government has power now to take over the whole road if it chooses to do so. In the event of their doing so, and a new company being formed, would this subsidy be given to such company?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Certainly; any company building the link will obtain the subsidy.

On paragraph 15,

For a branch line of the Central Railway, from the head of Grand Lake to the Intercolonial Rail-way, between Sussex and St. John, a subsidy not exceeding $3,200 per mile, nor exceeding in the $128,000 00 whole ********

Mr. BLAKE. I suppose the meaning of these words "branch line of the Central Railway" means the Central Railway Company.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. No; it is called the Central Railway.

Mr. BLAKE. Is it intended it shall be an independent company, under guise of a branch, or that it shall be given to the Central Railway Company?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. All we propose to do at present is to take power to aid a company in the construction of this branch from the Central Railway to the Intercolonial Railway. The Central Railway runs from Fredericton to Salisbury, thirteen miles from Moncton, and this branch intersects it forty miles from Fredericton. There is a subsidy covering that line; therefore it will apply to a line from Fredericton to the Intercolonial Railway, viá this branch. It will apply for forty miles, and this will cover the district from that Central Railway down to the Intercolonial Railway.

Mr. KING. I do not think the Resolution properly describes the road; this line, I think, could not properly be called a branch of the Central Railway.

Sir OHARLES TUPPER. My hon. friend will see that the terms are wide enough to cover the case.

Mr. KING. I hardly think they are.

Sir OHARLES TUPPER. Are these words not embraced in the term, "between Sussex and St. John's ?"

Mr. KING. That is true, but still I think this is part of the Central Railway, and not a branch of the Central Railway.

Mr. BLAKE. Why not strike out the word "branch?" Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Very well, we will strike out the word "branch."

Paragraph, as amended, agreed to.

On paragraph 24,

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I propose to amend this Resolution so that it shall read "to the Caraquet Railway Company, for the extension of the railway from Caraquet to Shippigan harbour" which makes a distance of sixty miles. A company has already been organized for the construction of the work, and this is to enable them to cover the entire distance from the Intercolonial Railway to Shippigan harbour.

Paragraph, as amended, agreed to.

On paragraph 25,

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I propose to amend that by putting in the words, after Paspebiac, "twenty miles."

Mr. BLAKE. This vote demands some explanation. This and the succeeding vote seem to be based on a different policy. The hon. gentleman says twenty miles; that would be about $15,000 a mile. Now, has the hon. gentleman no data which he can give to the House for this vote?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes; we have examined the line.

Mr. BLAKE. My recollection is, that the statement of the petitioners on the former occasion with reference to the Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

proposed subsidy was, that it was an expensive line to build. Here I find a request on their part to grant $6,000 a mile from Metapediac to Paspebiac, 100 miles; that upon this demand, $3,250 had been voted; that capitalists were spoken to, but they thought it insufficient; that since the last Parliament the whole right of way has been acquired by a company, the whole line has been finally located, and all preliminary works have been completed. The company is alleged to have actually acquired the right of way.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. We will have the advantage of the right of way and location.

Mr. BLAKE. It seems to me that as the company has a large subsidy, they would be able to build a longer line than the Government would be able to build for the same sum.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. If the right of way acquired for this road was not handed over by the company, we would not construct a mile of it; in fact, we would not do so unless the entire right of way and every facility in connection with the surveys, &c., was handed over.

Mr. BLAKE. Does the hon. gentleman think it would be more economical and of greater good to the public to expend $15,000 per mile in order to obtain twenty miles, rather than give an additional subsidy to the company, which would enable it, with a large land grant, to construct a longer line, as that proposed is 100 miles in length. The rest, I suppose, is to come afterwards.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Not necessarily.

Mr. BLAKE. But probably. A departure from the ordinary principle is being adopted.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. We came to the conclusion that a feeder to the Intercolonial should be there, and we were prepared to ask the House to give an amount for its construction. We have, therefore, decided to build a branch of 20 miles rather than ask for a larger sum.

Mr. BLAKE. Two and a half times as much road could be obtained by granting a subsidy as by the Government proceeding to build the road. No reason has been given for a departure from the principle of granting a subsidy.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. $3,200 a mile is not sufficient to procure the construction of the road, with the aid the company already has.

Mr. BLAKE. If $3,000 per mile will not secure the road, it does not follow that we should pay $15,000 per mile.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The road will belong to us.

Mr. BLAKE. We will not make any money out of our investment. If we are able to clear ourselves, that is all we are working for. If the hon. gentleman will show me it is of greater use to build twenty miles at $15,000 per mile than to procure the construction of fifty miles for the same sum, I will be satisfied.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I see the hon. gentleman's point. This branch will, however, go into the heart of the country.

Mr. BLAKE. The hon. gentleman has not given an answer to my question. We propose to expend $300,000 in building a line to Paspebiac. The question is how the greatest good can be obtained from the investment of that money. There are two proposals. The Minister of Railways proposes that we should build twenty miles, at $15,000 per mile. The proposal of the company is that, if the Dominion Government will give them the $300,000, they will build fifty miles. I maintain that it is better for the country that the fifty miles should be built, and that it would be quite as well for the country if the company would work the railway after it was built. Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. The first 20 miles is the heaviest portion of the line, and by building it as a branch of the Intercolonial, a fair chance will be given to the company to construct the balance of the line afterwards. The company have a subsidy of $3,200 per mile from this Government and 10,000 acres of land from the Local Government, and the right of way, which has not been bought, but has been given by the municipalities; and as the Dominion Government would build the heaviest portion of the line, the company would afterwards be able to get along.

Mr. BLAKE. If the heaviest portion cost $15,000 per mile, the average of cost will be a low one. From the statement now made, it seems that $3,200 per mile subsidy is to remain for 80 miles out of the 100, and that the company is to build that portion. So the proposal is, that we are to spend $300,000 to build 20 miles, and then we are to give $3,200 per mile for the remaining 80 miles, which will be $256,000. So that no less than $556,000 will be given altogether.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The hon. gentleman will see that the Intercolonial Railway by constructing these 20 miles of railway will be in a very much better position to operate the line than any company could be. Suppose the Government build these 20 miles, much of the expense connected with operating them and the cost of rolling stock would be saved.

Mr. BLAKE. But what I pointed out was, that they could build fifty with this subsidy, according to their own statement.

Paragraph agreed to.

On paragraph 26,

For a branch of the Intercolonial Railway from Derby Station to Indiantown, fourteen miles, a sum not exceeding in the whole... $140,000 00

Mr. BLAKE. Is there an estimate from which you have formed a conclusion that it can be built for this money?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes; we have the surveys and we are satisfied it can be done.

Mr. BLAKE. Upon what principle is it that the hon. gentleman has departed here from the rule, with reference to the other Resolutions.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The subsidy has been for a year on the Statute Book, and nothing has been done. The Government have not even been approached by the company, with a view to making an arrangement. There is a very large and valuable timber district, and I believe it will be a very profitable branch, and will bring a great deal of traffic to the Intercolonial, and will also be of value in developing that portion of the country. We thought it better to provide for the construction of that branch than to allow the matter to stand longer.

Mr. WELDON. I have understood that letters have been sent to the Government:

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. There has been no application to make an agreement or anything of the kind.

Mr. WEDDON. Is it on the same condition, that the land for the right of way shall be given free?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not say that.

PRAYERS.

LONDON LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Mr. BEATY moved that the second section of Rule 65 be suspended, as respects Bill (No. 139) respecting the London Life Insurance Company, and that the said Bill be placed upon the Orders of this day for consideration in Committee of the Whole forthwith after routine, in accordance with the recommendation of the Select Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE – GRAND TRUNK RAIL-WAY BILL.

Mr. MITCHELL. Before proceeding with the ordinary business, I wish to bring to the notice of the House a matter which I conceive affects the reputation and character of this House, and perhaps I may best do it by reading a letter which I have addressed to the Minister of Railways in these words :--

"OTTAWA, 12th April, 1884.

"MY DEARSIE CHARLES: — I regret that I should again trouble you on the subject of the Bill entitled 'An Act respecting the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada' in which an alteration has been inserted in the Committee of the Senate at the instance of Mr. John Bell which completely alters the declared policy of the Commons, and I believe also the wish of the Senate in relation to the disposal of the money as provided for in subsection C of section 5 of said Bill. "You will resultant that had not be for the Deliver of the Senate in relation to the section C of section 5 of said Bill.

"You will recollect that both before the Railway Committee and in the House of Commons the subject of the disposition of the money was fully discussed and the will of that branch of Parliament fully declared, that after the redemption of the securities mentioned in sub-sections A and B of said 5th section, sub-section O provided how the balance of the money should be appropriated, and the order there of, viz.: "First upon putting down a double track between Montreal and Toronto, then on such portion of the railways as the Directors may from time to time data mine with all necessary works preching rout

"First upon putting down a double track between Montreal and Toronto, then on such portion of the railways as the Directors may from time to time determine with all necessary works, machinery and appliances connected therewith, and also to the purchase of necessary a ditional rolling stock, and lastly to the other general purposes of the Company. In that shape the Bill was sent to the Senate, and was amended by striking out the words 'the necessary' on the 38th and 39th lines of the second page of said Bill, and the words 'lastly to the' and also the word 'the ' on the 39th line of said page. "The effect of these alterations as I read them, in place of leaving as the Compittee designd the disperiitor of the belonce of the second page and the words of the second page of said by the belonce of the second page second the belonce of the belonce of the second page second the belonce of the belonce

My attention was called to this remarkable change by the publication in the Montreal Herald of sub-section C. as it originally stood, and the same clause as it came back from the Senate amended and subsequently passed by the House under the impression that the changes of the Bill were merely verbalones and did not affect the import or effect thereof—a copy of which article I herewith enclose for your information.

information. "The Bill as amended was assented to by the House on its meeting after recess at eight o'clock, and I happened to be out at the moment, or I should have made enquiries and looked into the effect of the charges, but immediately on my return within a few minutes after I entered I learned that the Bill had passed with several amendments, and I went to the Clerk to ascertain what they were. I could not see the Bill as it had been sent away, but the Clerk assured me they were mere verbal ones, and did not alter the effect of the Bill. I also asked His Honour the Speaker, who made the same statement to me. I then went to yourself and you repeated the same thing, and it was not until a short time after until I heard from outside sources that the Grand Trunk Railway people alleged that the changes in the Bill were of that important character that it gave them all they wanted in regard to the disposition of the money, that my suspicions were aroused, and I went to the Clerk and obtained from him a certified copy of the Bill as amended and passed.

particular the character of the Bill. He assured me that it was not, that the Committee had approved of what had taken place in the Commons, and especially of that portion of the Bill which required that the first application of the surplus moneys should be expended in double tracking the road between Montreal and Toronto, and until his attention between between the surplus of the surplus application of the surplus had tracking the road between Montreal and Toronto, and until his attention was called to it by myself be was not aware that any alteration had been made except verbal ones, but now saw that the disposition of the money was placed entirely in the hands of the Company, and he went with me at once to the Law Clerk who produced the original Bill and also the amended Bill and who states, as Mr. Dickey confirmed, that there was little if any discussion on the merits of the Bill, but that Mr. Bell, the Grand Trunk Railway solicitor, stated that he would like a couple of words struck off, viz.: 'the necessary' before the words 'additional rolling stock 'on the 39th line; as he stated that the effect of these words would be to limit the powers of the Company to the expenditure of money only on rolling stock on the second track and it expenditure of money only on rolling stock on the second track and it might be necessary to put rolling stock on the other track, and the Company desired power to do it if they saw fit, as it would improve the general character of the rolling stock on the road the amendment was

"This proposition so self apparent to be in the public interest, the Law Clerk was directed to make, which he did, and while doing so Mr. Bell suggested that the words 'lastly to the' on the same line and the second 'the' on the same line were surplusage and should be struck out as not affecting the sense of the Bill, which was done without discus-sion or comment and without the Committee being at all aware that there was any material alteration made by such change in the Bill, and that it was not their intention to make any such alteration as to the that it was not their intention to make any such alteration as to the disposition of the money as stated in the Commons Bill. Important changes in a country's legislation should not be dealt with in this manchanges in a country's legislation should not be dealt with in this man-ner, and as it is clear that upon a matter on which the Committee ex-pressed so decided an opinion, and so definitely expressed their policy, and after the manner in which the changes were effected in the Senate Committee as explained by the Chairman and Law Clerk thereof, it is beyond a doubt that Parliament his been misled into sanctioning im-portant changes in the Bill under misconception of the effect thereof if not under direct misrepresentation by the parties interested in such Bill.

"I have made to you a simple statement of the facts of the case as they have been developed to me by careful enquiry, and I have called your attention to them in order that the Government may institute enquiries for the purpose of ascertaining if the statements of the facts are correct, and as the responsibility of guarding the honour, directing the legislation and protecting the rights of Parliament rests after Parlia-ment itself, more especially with the Government of the day, I trust, should you find my statements to be true that you will at once introduce a short Bill repealing sub-section C as it now stands and restoring the a short Bill repeating sub-section C as it now stands and restoring the sub-section as it was when sent to to the Senate. "Should the Senate then desire to alter it, with a full knowledge of the facts of the case, of course no one would have a right to complain; but such an important change should not have been made on a misap-prehension of the facts and evidently without the knowledge either of the Committee of the Senate or the Serate itself "You are aware that when the Bill first came before the Railway Committee the effect thereof was outprecapily misrepresented by the

"You are aware that when the Bill first came before the Kallway Committee the effect thereof was outrageously misrepresented by the representative of the Grand Tru ik at that Committee, a misrepresentation which he had to confess to at a subsequent meeting of the Committee, and it would be a scandal on Parliament it by misrepresentations which have been clearly made in another quarter the interest of the country should be sacrificed and the will of Parliament set at defiance. "I have the honour to be, Sir, "Your obedient servant, (Signed) "P. MITCHELL.

"Sir CHARLES TUPPER, &c., &c., "Minister of Railways and Canals, Ottawa."

I have brought this matter before the House because I think it is one in which the honour of Parliament and the credit of the country is involved. After such a full and able discussion as was given to the Bill in the Railway Committee and before this House, it appears that the security provided has been got rid of, namely, first, to double track the road between Toronto and Montreal; second, to provide the necessary rolling stock; and, lastly, for the other general purposes of the road. The word "lastly" was struck out under colour of its being a mere formal amendment; and the Bill thus changed was sent down to this House. I was not in the House when the Bill came down, and I entered the Chamber a few minutes after the Bill had been disposed of. On looking up Hansard I find that nothing appears in regard to it, and the Bill must have been disposed of before the shorthand writer got to the table, as I find that Senate amendments to Bills are noticed in other portions of Hansard. I have now done my duty in this matter. I have called the attention of the House to the fact that an important feature of our legislation and the declared policy of the House in regard to one of the most important Bills of this Session has been deliberately altered by some means or other. I make no charge and I make no insinuation against anyone; but I have stated the fact, and I feel that it is the duty of the House to deal with the matter and thus protect its own honour and the interests of the country as it may seem fit. In my opinion the Government should indicate what they are prepared to do. If the facts, as I have stated them, are true-and I challenge enquiry-and the Government should find out if they are true, it is the duty of the House to deal with this matter so as to prevent the recurrence of such a scandal, and. at all events, see that the express will of this House is enforced, and not quietly set aside by chicaneary, or any such means, as have been used in this case to deceive the Committee of the Senate and this House. Does anyone doubt that if the House had been aware that such an important change had been introduced into the Bill, it would have been allowed to pass without comment or remark? By striking out the word "lastly," the disposal of the whole money is placed in the hands of the Grand Trunk directors, and the country has no security for the double tracking of the road. That, I take it, is in direct violation of the expressed opinion of this House. Is this House, when such means have been resorted to as are described in this letter, to sit quietly down and allow such a proceeding to go without remark or any effort being made to remedy it? I trust it will not be so, and that the Government will tell the House that they will make enquiry into the matter, and if they find that the statement I have made is true, they will introduce a Bill to remedy the defect and prevent those persons so acting from securing the advantages they sought, and depriving the country of the rights ensured to them by the original Bill.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. BLAKE. Mr. Speaker, I find reported in a daily paper that a member of the Administration, in another place, made these observations:

"I was merely going on to say that Mr. Blake began his Ministerial life by making the wreck of one whom he induced to betray his leader, his stepping-stone to office. He did not then descend to bidding for worthless characters as McKim, but boldly bid for a minister, and caught him, and rewardéd him out of the public treasury with a salary of $6,000 and a seat upon the Bench, which he degraded by placing such a man on it."

I am not aware whether the report is accurate, but I beg to say the statement is false.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY BILL.

Mr. HAGGART. In regard to the question raised by the hon. member for Northumberland (Mr. Mitchell) and the statement made that the expressed will of this House and the Railway Committee has been set at naught by the statement being made that the Senate amendments were unimportant and did not affect the character of the Bill, I beg to say that I did not know whether the amendments altered the Bill or not; but if the statement made by the hon. member is correct, it seems extraordinary that such an occurrence should take place without any comment being made on it-that the whole character of the Bill, the expressed will of the House and of the Committee, should be altered on the third reading, on the plea that the amend-ments were unimportant and did not alter the character of the Bill. If the statement is correct, some attention should be paid to it.

Mr. MACKENZIE. If I understand the alteration made, it was made in the other House, not here; and when it came here I had no recollection of any person making a statement about it. It may have been done-I was present at the time-but I did not hear anyone making a statement

Mr. HAGGART. If the alteration is an important one then it is required by the rules of the House that the Bill should be sent back to the Standing Committee, but if the alteration is only a verbal one, it is so stated by the Speaker or the Clerk, and on that understanding, it does not go to the Committee. But the House have a right to know whether the alteration is an important one or not, and if it is important enough to alter the whole character of the Bill, and the House has been led to understand that the amendment is a verbal one, and not important, and it has been led on that statement to pass the measure, surely there should be some remedy.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not understand that it is the duty of either the Speaker or the Clerk to make any statement to the House with regard to a Private Bill. A Private Bill is sent from this House to the Senate. The Senate deals with it making such amendments as they in their wisdom think proper. The Bills come back here, and the parties, those who as representatives of the people in this House, should be in their places, and if they are not in their places, and take an interest in the Bill, they should get some person else to take notice of it, and call attention to the alterations, if any are made. It would be intolerable that the Government, or any person should be held responsible for amendments made in the Senate, to any Bills which may come down from that House. My attention was called to the amendments and I did not consider them important, nor do I now consider them important. The hon. gentleman, as we all know, takes an extreme view in regard to everything connected with the Grand Trunk Railway, I will not say he is too ready, but I think the keen interest he feels in regard to that question induces him to take a very extreme view in regard to everything connected with it. I gave great attention to the Bill in Committee, and when it was passing through the House, and considering it a very important measure, I hastily glanced over the amendments made by the Senate, as I do in regard to any Bill of an important character to which my attention has been turned, and I did not consider the alterations made were of an important character, or that they would at all interfere with the objects Parliament had in carrying that legislation through the House. And notwithstanding the long letter which the hon. gentleman has been good enough to address to me, and still more kindly, to read to me in the House, so that I should hear it as well as see it, I am convinced that no injury has been inflicted on the country, or that any damage will result from it.

Mr. MITCHELL, I wish to make one or two observations in reply to the remarks made by the hon. Minister of Railways. In the first place he made reference to the fact that it is the duty of hon. gentlemen to be in their places. I wish to say that I was in my place that evening, just as early as I was on any evening for the ten or twelve days before, or seven or eight days after. I was in about the usual time, and I found that the Bill had just gone through. I went to make enquiries, and was told that the changes were merely verbal-the Minister of, Railways told me so himself-and that they did not affect the sense of the Bill. Now, I have taken the opinion of a number of legal gentlemen, and they tell me the amendment alters the whole character of the Bill. That is my own conclusion, too, and if that be the fact, I say it is the duty of the Government to look into the question and see whether the policy which was decided upon by this House should be over-ridden in the way I have stated. I can understand Your Honour allowing that or any other Bill to pass, if attention is not called to it. The rule of the House is :

"When any Private Bill is returned from the Senate with amendments the same not being merely verbal or unimportant, such amendments are previous to the second reading, referred to the Standing Committee, to which such Bill was originally referred."

And, Sir, it is the duty of the gentleman in charge of the Bill to state to Your Honour, whether or not there is Private Bills was very loose and liable to lead to accidents. 190 any material change, and if there is a material change it should be referred to the Committee. Now, Sir, that was not done in the present case; and the fact that it passed at all is not even noticed in Hansard, showing how quickly it was pushed through; and, I think, taking the whole of the circumstances into account, there is an element of peculiarity about it -I will use moderate words-which calls for remark. It occurred in the Senate upon what I believe to be a misrepresentation of the facts, a statement which I can make good by the Chairman of the Committee on Railways, as well as the Law Clerk, who is responsible for the altera. tions. I invite the attention of the Government to these matters, and I ask them to make enquiry and see if I have stated the facts; and ascertain if the change alters the character of the Bill, and if it does, I ask them if that was the will of Parliament? If these are the facts-and I defy them to be contradicted-I ask if they are going to sit down upon it? It is not for me to take charge of the honour of the House, or to guard its Private Bill legislation, but I have simply done my duty in calling attention to the matter. And as the Minister of Railways has publicly indicated that I have taken an extreme view with regard to Grand Trunk legislation, I think the series of allegations made by their solicitor, the gross misrepresentations which he made before that Committee, and which he nad to take back, and the facts that were developed in connection with that legislation, show that the representatives of that Company require careful attention. I have done my duty in the matter, and I place the responsibility of it on the Government of the day, whose duty it is to guard the honour of the House and look into this matter; and if they find that the facts are as I have stated, they have to assume the responsibility of seeing whether the will of the House shall be defeated by a side wind got up in this way.

Mr. CAMERON (Victoria). It is certainly the practice whenever amondments come from the Senate to a Private Bill of this character, for the gentleman taking charge of the Bill, and who moves concurrence in the amendments, to pledge his word to the House that they are verbal and not important, and if they are otherwise the rule is perfectly explicit that they require to be referred to the proper Committee. I have myself often been asked by the leader of the Opposition, on occasions when concurrence is moved, what the nature of the amendments made by the Senate is; and it does seem to me that whoever moved the Bill, pledges his word to the House that the amendments and alterations are verbal and unimportant. I should be glad to be able to agree with the opinion the Minister of Railways has expressed, that these amendments are verbal and unimportant, butI have read the original clause, and the clause as amended, and I confess I must agree with the hon. gentleman for Northumberland that the alteration made is of a most material character. It leaves it in the discretion of the directors of the company to apply the funds dealt with by this clause, either for the general purposes of the company, or in double tracking the road, as they think proper. That certainly was not the intention of the House. If the statements in the letter read to this House are correct, that certainly was not the intention of the Senate, and that amendment has been made inadvertently, and what seems to me to be very like a misapprehension. If that is the case I think the matter is so important that it should be dealt with in some way, and if the House or the Senate did not intend to legislate in the way in which as the Bill now stands it has legislated, some steps should be taken to put the matter in the position in which Parliament intended it should stand.

Mr. BLAKE. I think this whole discussion is of a peculiar character, and I may say that I have long thought that our practice with reference to Senate amendments to

We find for instance to day that the Minister of Railways declares in his opinion this amendment is unimportant, while the hon. member for Victoria and the hon. member for Northumberland declare it to be of great importance. Well, I think it is a fact that a substantial alteration in the powers of the company has been made. I have not been able this Session to pay that attention in Private Bill matters I gave in former Sessions, but I was here on the evening when the Bill went through, and, speaking from memory, I have no recollection of any enquiry being made, or any statement made in return, with regard to the character of the amendments. My own opinion is that it passed amendments. My without any remark being made by any person. am rather inclined to agree with the hon. T member for North Victoria that if an hon. member has an amendment which he knows to be an important one in the Bill he has in charge, it is the understood practice of the House that it should be mentioned to us; but I say we ought to take warning from this. I have long felt that the present practice would lead to difficulties. The question is whether we ought to allow it to be decided by an hon. member in charge of a Bill or by the House at large whether an amendment is important or not. I think, where it is merely verbal, we may take the opinion of the hon. member; but if it goes beyond that, and the question be whether it is more or less important, my opinion is that either the Clerk at the Table or some one else should read the amendment, so that the House could form a judgment upon it as to whether it is important or unimportant, and then the responsibility would rest upon the House of deciding whether it should be referred back or adopted.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I was just about to enter my dissent to the doctrine laid down by the Minister of Railways that it is not the duty of the Government to supervise private legislation. There is a certain kind of private legislation to which my remark does not apply; but it does apply to the prosent measure. This Bill was introduced as being in the public interest, and it is one of a class of Bills which I think the Government are bound to see is in the public interest. That duty, I think, has been neglected in this case.

Mr. McCARTHY. I just rise for the purpose of pointing out that, as I understand it, this Bill has not been substantially altered, although 1 agree with the hon. member for West Durham that the power is changed. The Bill, as passed by this House, directed that the money should be applied, first to building a double track between Montreal and Toronto, second, to building double tracks elsewhere; and third, to the general purposes of the company. The Bill as passed by the Senate provides that the track between Montreal and Toron o shall be built first, and then, instead of building double tracks anywhere else, which I suppose was not contemplated, that the money should be expended for other purposes in the discretion of the company, so that I do not think that there has been a substantial change, though there is a difference in power between the Bill as it passed this House, and as it has been returned from the Senate.

Mr. MITCHELL. If my hon. friend looks at the Bill, he will find that the word "lastly," which defined that the directors should only devote the money to the general purposes of the road after the double-tracking, is struck out; so that, with that word "lastly " struck out, the directors are at liberty to spend the money first in the general interest of the road, and secondly, upon the double track between Montreal and Toronto. That, I think, my hon. friend fails to catch.

Mr. McCARTHY. I think not.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I quite agree with the hon. leader of the Opposition that our practice has been too lax, and more care and supervision must be exercised by the between Mentreal and Toronto. Mr. BLAKE.

House in future. Of course we are obliged to take the statement of an hon. member in charge of a Bill when he says that an alteration is merely verbal; but if it be more than verbal, as the hon. gentleman truly says, it is not for the hon. member in charge of the Bill to decide whether it is important or unimportant. If the alteration is merely verbal, such as a change in the grammatical construction, or the substitution of one word for another which is synonymous, without altering the sense, we may accept the statement of the hon. member in charge of the Bill; but if it be anything further than that, I think the responsibility should be thrown, not upon the hon, member but upon the House to decide whether it is important or unimportant. With regard to Government supervision over private legislation, I am quite sure that my hon, friend the Minister of Railways did not at all intend to speak in the sense suggested by my hon. friend opposite. Over the general current of private legislation of course the Government cannot be expected to take charge; but legislation which is technically private, but in every sense concerning the general interest of the public, the Government of course exercises supervision. With reference to the amendment in the Bill, it occurs to me that the hon. member for North Simcoe (Mr. McCarthy) is correct. Here is the clause :

"And the remainder of the said consolidated debenture stock by this Act authorized to be created and issued, and any sums remaining out of the sums mentioned in the preceding paragraphs after the said existing charges and debenture stock mentioned therein have been purchased or exchanged for consolidated debenture stock, shall be applied to the putting down of a double track or second line of rails, first upon the portions of the line between Montreal and Toronto, and then upon such portions of the 0: mpany's railways as the directors may from time to time de ernine, with all necessary work, machinery and appliances connectde ermine, with all necessary work, machinery and appliances connect-ed therewith, and also to the purchase of the necessary additional rcl-ling stock, and lastly to the other the general purposes of the Company." The word "lastly" being struck out. From a cursory examination, one would say that these purposes should be carried in the order in which they are stated. Perhaps on reading the clause a second time-

Mr. BLAKE. I think if you will read it a third time you will find it means what the hon. member for North Victoria says it means.

Mr. CAMERON (Victoria) The clause is doubtful without this word; there was no doubt with the word "lastly" in; and I do not think we ought to allow the doubt to remain. I have again carefully looked at the clause, having heard what the right hon. leader of the Government and the hon. member for Simcoe have said, and have no doubt whatever that the omission of this word "lastly "altere the sense of the clause.

Mr. BLAKE. There are two sets of purposes stated, the one stated specifically and the other generally; and in dealing with these purposes, the order in which the power is to be used is stated, viz. : It is to be applied to double the track, but they could not double any part before the piece between Montreal and Toronto, and then the general purposes are provided for; and as between these two, there is no order of time or proportion, as far as I can judge, one attaches more importance to the change in the wording by leaving out "lastly."

Mr. GIROUARD. A doubt is created which did not exist before.

Mr. McCARTHY. I still think there is not really any doubt about the matter. It says that the money shall be applied to the putting down the double track or second line of rails upon that portion of the line between Montreal and Toronto and then with regard to the residue, the residue is to be applied for general purposes.

Mr. BLAKE, You begin with the double track first

Mr. McCARTHY. A certain sum to be realized from these debentures, they wish to be used in putting down a double track.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. We might consider the two purposes and leave the distribution of powers as to putting down the second line of rails. "The remainder of the consolidated debenture stock shall be applied to the putting down of a second or a double line of railway and also to the purchase of the necessary additional rolling stock and the general purposes of the Company." It must be applied to these three purposes, but does not say in what proportion.

Mr. BLAKE. Supposing the money was sufficient or supposed to be sufficient for all, it might be given to the rolling stock.

Mr. MITCHELL. It is evident to the solicitor of the Grand Trunk Railway, when he got this changed for some purport. We know how he voted against it in Committee and how he had to submit to the Committee. If it is not important why should he obtain that change in the Senate? It has been obtained to enable them to do what they like with the money, and that is what they have the power to do by means of this alteration, notwithstanding the opinion of the right hon. First Minister and the hon, member for Simcoe. I took the opinion of many legal gentlemen, and almost all of them agree with the opinion I have stated, and it is for that reason I brought the matter before the House. There must be grave doubt when the hon, leader of the Opposition and the hon. members for North Victoria and Jacques Cartier express their opinion in the same sense, and I do not see why we should leave a Bill involving millions of dollars with this doubt. The Government should provide a remedy. The hon. gentleman may say it is not a Government measure, but he took a great deal of interest in that Bill when it was passing through the Committee and the House, and it is a quasi public Bill affecting the interests of the Government of the country and it is the duty of the Government to say what course they will take with relation to it.

Mr. SPEAKER. In consequence of these observations in regard to the practice of Parliament, in future all amendments to Bills coming from the Senate must go on the paper, and the amendments will not be taken into consideration immediately after the Message has been announced from the Chair. It has been the practice, when the amendments made by the Senate were not of importance, to take them into consideration at once, but the practice in future will be that they go on the paper.

Mr. MITCHELL. I would like to ask the right hon. First Minister what he intends to do in relation to this Bill?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I have already said we will take it into consideration.

LONDON LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Mr. BEATY moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on Bill (No. 139) amending the Act incorporating the London Life Insurance Company.

Mr. BLAKE. As this Bill comes before us under rather exceptional circumstances and hon. members have not had the opportunity of reading it, I would ask the hon. gentleman to depart from the usual practice and give us a brief statement of its objects.

Mr. BEATY. The leading object of the Bill is to authorize the London Life Insurance Company, incorporated under the laws of Ontario in 1874, to increase their capital stock from $250,000 to $1,000,000, the shareholders being ready to take up that amount of stock. It has happened, however, unfortunately for the company's progress, that a part of the company's capital was impaired, amounting to some $15,000 out of the $33,000 which was paid up, and the shareholders wish to place the company on a stronger footing than before. They have deposited in Ontario $75,000 as security under the laws of Ontario, and they now wish in addition to increase the capital stock and to extend the operations of the company throughout the whole of Canada. These are the two leading objects of the Bill. The details, in other respects, simply concur with the laws of the Dominion.

Mr. BLAKE. Was there a reference to the Committee to ascertain the financial condition of the company, and whether it has been verified that there remains unimpaired of the capital paid up stock the difference between $15,000 and $33,000?

Mr. BEATY. No, there was no reference to a Sub-Committee. There is no doubt that that is the only loss or impairment of the capital.

Mr. BLAKE. The Committee on Banking and Commerce was satisfied of that, on evidence?

Mr. BEATY. Yes, it was satisfied of that.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The Superintendent of Insurance was before the Committee, and he had the latest report of transactions of this Association as rendered to the Legislature of Ontario, and that was consistent with the general statement made by the promoter of the Bill. There was no absolute investigation into it, but from the statement made by the Superintendent of Insurance, there appears to be no reason to doubt that the statement made is correct. The Bill, as it came before us, contained some extraordinary provisions, and one extraordinary provision remains in it, that is the one allowing the company to insure preference shares. I do not like that. It is a provision that ought to be carefully considered, at any rate. Another section provided that sections 5 to 12 of the Act which they had from the Ontario Legislature should constitute part of the present Act. The Committee resolved to print these clauses in extenso, and have them printed with the Bill as forming part of it as independent sections. The Bill as it stands is not more than half of the original Bill, and I do think it should be printed before we are asked to consider it. I do not wish to prevent the progress of the Bill, but it is utterly impossible to consider it carefully in its present shape; and, as the attention given to it in the Committee was necessarily cursory, it is of the more importance to have it printed before it is passed.

Mr. BEATY. Those added clauses were clauses from the General Act.

Mr. MACKENZIE. From the Ontario General Act.

Mr. BEATY. And they are clauses well understood.

Mr. BLAKE. One does not wish to interfere with the progress of necessary legislation, but we must see that it is correct. It seems there was some investigation, though not as satisfactory as I would have liked, into the question of the impairment of the capital. I would ask the mover whether the Bill, as amended by the Committee, proposes to arrange for that impairment of capital. Heretofore. when a corporation has come to us for legislation-a bank or an insurance company-which declared that its capital was impaired, we have said, "We must find out what the extent of your real remaining capital is; we give you a new mint mark by giving you an amended Act, and we must not allow the public to be deceived by stating that so much is your real capital in cash if the real capital be less;" so we have made the legislation show on the face of it what we thought the real capital was. Banks have come to us to reduce their capital stock; we have not been satisfied with their statements of what their stock was. Either the Consolidated or the Royal Canadian came to us themselves was largely reduced by the Committee, and was found to be altogether illusory, even so. The examination was not adequate; still it did some good. I say we ought, if we grant a charter or an amendment of a charter to a company here, to declare what its real capital is, and we ought not to emit it with $33,500 paid up if in fact nearly half of that has been lost capital. Still less ought we to do that when it is proposed that we should take hold of a company which has heretofore been a local company. Of course, we have done that several times, and there is no objection to it when a company desires to enlarge its operations; but we ought to be very careful, when we give an enlarged and Dominion character to a corporation, to with the see that the charter is in accordance genuine status of the company, and, if that has been reduced by $15,000 it ought to be stated here, and provision ought to be made for the restoration of that impaired capital, unless the Committee think the amount is otherwise adequate to carry on the operations of the company.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The Committee struck out the section altogether which declares the amount of the capital paid up. The section now only provides the extent to which the capital is to be subscribed, and the existing capital is to form part of the new capital to be created.

Mr. HALL. This seems to be a different case from the reduction of bank capital to which the member for West Durham has referred. Banks often ask for a charter to recognize the impairment of their capital and enable them to start anew. This company did not come here with that view. It was a local company, and desired to enlarge its sphere of action. It was only incidental to that that this impairment of capital came out. We were informed in the Committee on Banking and Commerce that the matter had been examined by the Superintendent of Insurance to see that the capital was sufficient for the company to go on with, and all we thought necessary in the Committee was that the necessary provisions were secured to give the com-pany the power they asked under a Dominion Act. The clause in reference to the amount of capital was struck out, and the only provision contained is as to the deferred capital, and the view was shared by the whole Committee that it was in the interest of the public, which, of course, we had principally in view, that provision should be made to enable preferred capital to be subscribed. The Superintendent of Insurance was satisfied that the company, as it at present existed, was authorized to go on, and that, if we furnished power to provide additional capital, even if it were in the nature of preferred stock, it would be in the interest of the public.

Mr. BEATY. The object of the promoters of this Bill is that the preferred stock should be taken at a premium by the present shareholders. Though that is not in the Bill, that is the expectation, and the amount of premium will be added to make up the impaired capital so far as it goes.

Mr. CAMERON (Middlesex). The statement of the hon, member for West Toronto (Mr. Beaty) is quite correct. Instead of wiping off the impaired portion of the capital, they say to their present shareholders, we give you the added capital at 4 per cent., thus replacing the amount of the impaired capital. Before the Bill was submitted to the House, I had an opportunity of seeing the Inspector of Insurance for the Dominion, and he highly recommended this course as being in the interest of the policy-holders and in no way likely to affect them prejudicially. I felt therefore that the interest of the public was protected in that respect. Our Inspector of Insurance also inspected the affairs of that company, and I presume, as he was present at the meeting of the Banking and Commerce Committee, that he would have taken exception to it in any respect that he might have discovered, after making that investigation, that the legislation was not in the interest of the public. He made a report which I have not with me at present, but it speaks of that impairment, and, having his statement that their mode of making good that impairment would be satisfactory to him, I have no doubt it will be satisfactory to the policyholders, because he stands largely as their representative when legislation of that kind is proposed.

Mr. BEATY. I should have added that there is a section providing that this Bill shall not take effect until it is adopted at a general meeting of the shareholders.

Mr. MACKENZIE. By a vote of three fourths in number and amount.

Mr. BLAKE. I think the explanations given remove the objections as far as I am concerned.

Motion agreed to; and Bill considered in Committee, and reported.

Mr. BEATY moved the third reading of the Bill.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I understood the third reading was to be taken on Monday.

Mr. BEATY. I was anxious to have the first reading in the Senate on Monday.

Mr. MACKENZIE. There will be no trouble with the Senate, I think.

Mr. BLAKE. My hon. friend must remember this is a Private Bill. No doubt there are many important Public Bills with which there will be no difficulty in the Senate, but there might be with a Private Bill.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Very well, I have no objection.

Bill read the third time and passed.

Motion agreed to.

SUBSIDIES TO RAILWAYS.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER moved that the report of the Committee of the Whole (page 1511) on Resolution respecting Subsidies to certain Railway Companies be received.

Motion agreed to; and Resolution read the first time.

On motion for second reading.

Mr. BLAKE. I thought this would be the most convenient time for the general discussion of these resolutions, because the case is one in which the application of the principles and policy of the Government as indicated in the Resolutions depends very largely on the facts and circumstances with reference to each particular line of railway proposed to be aided; and the further information which is ex. pected to be obtained, and which to some extent was obtained in the Committee, seemed to be material in order that the House might be in as good a condition as possible to apply these principles of action or the policy to which I have referred to particular cases. Now the resolutions before us are, of course, extremly important. They are important in view of the very great pecuniary interests involved; they are important in view of the multi-plicity of different interests involved; they are important, some of them, in view of the principles involved; and they are important in respect of the consequences which they will probably entail upon Canada. I think it doubly to be regretted that it is at this very late hour of the Session, and with the very short interval for deliberation which we are to have, that we should be called upon to deal with Resolutions possessing all these elements, and possessing the addi-tional element that in many respects they deal with enterprises about which it is impossible that the members of this House could have acquired that information which is necessary to an intelligent assent to, or dissent from, the views of the Administration as to granting the aid or otherwise; and, as I said on a former occasion, these considerations apply much more potently now, because we are members of a Confederation involving a very large area of territory divided into many Provinces; and although those of us who pay attention to these matters may have some general knowledge of what are the wants and needs and geographical location and other interests which are involved in our Provincial railway system, whether as completed or as proposed, it cannot be expected that we should have the same familiarity with, and the same capacity for forming a judgment from pre-acquired information, upon the plans proposed to us with reference to the other Provinces. I maintain there has been no excuse whatever given to us for the delay upon this occasion. With respect to many of these proposed grants, they are continuations of the policy of Parliament, and with respect to others there was ample opportunity to have reached a conclusion as to what the Government should propose to Parliament much earlier in the Session, to have formulated the proposals much earlier and given the House that means of enquiring, of deliberating and of forming a sound judgment which we ought to have had. The proposals involve an appropriation of some where about $8,500,000 in cash, calculating interest upon the annuities at the rate of 4 per cent., which is the rate at which we borrow money, besides the cession of a road by a restrictive sense. They are exceptional. They acknow-an Act to be assented to, on the same day as that ledge the possibility that a particular road, though lying on which the policy of this Parliament receives the assent of the Crown. These joint appropriations will amount to between $9,000,000 and $10,000,000. Nor is it pretended on this occasion that this policy is to be carried out by means of the surplus. Time was, when that was the glowing statement. Time was, when it was stated that this was a means of disembarrassing the Government respecting its surplus. I recollect when the hou. member for Ottawa county last Session, or the Session before, said that one of the reasons which probably induced the Administration to grant such appropriations was, that it was a means of extricating the Minister of Finance from the embarrassment in which he found himself as to the disposition of the surplus; but the Minister of Railways differed from that hon. member, and said these appropriations were not expenditures out of the surplus; that he recollected an instance in Nova Scotia when the Government expended $6,000,000 or $7,000,000 on railways, and so far from the Dominion Government disembarrassing itself with regard to its surplus we made a good investment. The hon. Minister pointed out that the result of the policy would be not to trench on the surplus but to leave it unimpaired; that it would be an investment of the same business-like character as the hon. gentleman was making in regard to another enterprise for which we are borrowing $20,000,000 odd at 4 per cent. to lend it at 5 per cent., thus making a net profit out of the transaction of not less that $22,500. But upon this occasion, Ministers do not make this proposal. Before this order was called, the hon. Minister of Finance had taken the preliminary step to borrow a large sum in order to imploment obligations to be croated under the Caradian Pacific Loan Act and this measure. It is, therefore, not out of the surplus or in spite of the surplus, according as we take the observations of the hon. member for Ottawa county or the observations of the Minister of Railways, but by mortgaging the future resources of the country, that we are now expected to carry out the present policy of the Government. I think in view of the general prospects of the country at large, and in view of the general of the other railway proposition made by the Government during this Session, and in view of those prospects which open out from the proposals now before us, we may well pause, take breathing time and endeavour to consider for a moment, where the present proposal is about to lead us. The proposition we have before us en bloc is one divisible, as it seems to me, into three heads; and I frankly acknowledge that of these three heads, two have been to some extent disposed of as to the principle, apart from their application to the particular object in hand, by the decision of the last Parliament in its last Session and of this Parliament in its first Session. I say there are three lights in which one may consider this proposition. First, as Federal aid to railways of general advartage to Canada, within the meaning of that phrase as it exists in our constitution, and as interpreted up to a comparatively late date; those railways, which properly speaking, fall within the jurisdiction of the Dominion of Canada exclusively because they were either inter-national or inter-provincial, or, although they were geographically altogether within the limits of one Province, yet from some particular circumstances they were of such a character as might lead them to be properly described as of general advantage to Canada. Of course there is a sense in which every railway that can be proposed, is of advantage to Canada. So is a high road, cross road, a country road, every house, every factory, every man-they all more or less in one way or other conduce to the safety, strength and prosperity of the State. But it is not in that broad sense that the words are used in our constitution. The words which apply to railways are used in a restrictive sense. They are exceptional. They acknow-within the limits of one Province, may be declared to be of general advantage, and in that case this Parliament should obtain jurisdiction over it. But they never were intended to convey the view, and until a very recent day the view was never contended for, that all railways might be declared to be for the general advantage of Canada, or at least all railways which touch, intersect, or go near any leading line of railway. But then, as I have said, the first proposition is, Federal aid to railways which come within even my comparatively limited construction of these words, -the words, "general advantage to Canada." The second is aid to build local railways; and as to these, of course, there is a question of degree. You may find it very difficult to decide where the line is to be drawn between railways which are truly for the general advantage of Canada, and railways which may be properly excluded from that cate-gory. We have had just now an illustration of the difficulty of deciding whether an amendment is important or unimportant; and so here you have very great difficulty in deciding this question as to railways, in which local patriotism - no doubt that local patriotism which induces members for the county or locality to take a very strong view as to the importance and magnitude of the interests of that particular county-may unconsciously of course, but none the less potently, sway their judgment as to whether a particular road is for the general advantage of Canada or falls fairly within the category of local railways. But even with respect to local railways, although confessedly such by both sides of the House, the principle of granting aid to them has not been, unless it is done by these resolutions, conceded. The third point which I hold to be an entirely new one in point of principle and which is to be sanctioned now for the first time, is, that aid should be extended in respect of past local railway expenditure-in respect of railway expenditure in a locality in which a railway has already been constructed. Now, as I have said, the question we have to deal with is one, as to the first two points, largely of degree. It was not difficult to foresee that it was to come; in fact it was obvious from the year 1882, in which year we entered upon this policy. In that year the hon. Minister of Railways in propounding the policy was disposed to cast as far as he could some veil over. In opening the discussion, when he came to defend and expound the application of the policy he found it necessary, with reference to roads of an important character, and compared to some of those which it is now proposed to aid, transcendent, to point out their Federal character as distinguished from the local Provincial roads. When he came to deal with the railway from St. Raymond to Lake St. John, he said :

"At first sight this may appear to be somewhat of the character of a local Provincial railway, but there are features connected with that work that take it out of that category, and place it on a broader and more substantial basis that will commend it to the approval of this House and the country."

He proceeds to state those features. I read this to show that with reference to an enterprise confessedly so important as the Lake St. John Railway, the hon. gentleman found it necessary to say that at first sight even that railway assumed rather the aspect of a local Provincial railway, and therefore not one to be aided by him, but he went on to show that the first view of the case was not one which could be sustained, in his opinion, and to give the reason why. Then I ventured in reply, to say this:

"I will only say just now that the subject the hon. gentlemen pro-poses is one of the very greatest importance, as being, however he may disguient, very largely a proposal that the Domision Parliament shall area aid to local or providal enterprises. It is of the greatest impor-tance, both as regards the enterprises which it is supposed to assist, and the principle of the rate of aid which it is proposed to apply, and the money assistance which it proposes to extend, and above and beyond all, in the prisedent which it proposes to create." Mr. BLAKE,

Then, Sir, we got a little further, and in the following year, when the hon. gentleman promode his railway aid policy, there was some further discussion upon that subject, which is interesting. Having brought forward a much more extensive policy, I used this language with reference to it :

"There is one sense in which I have no right to be surprised at any of the proposals which the hon, gentleman might bring down in this direction. I told him last year, when he brought down his proposals, that it was impossible to deny, with respect to some of them, at any rate, under whatever cloud of works they might be submitted, that he was, in point of feat siding provincial and local works, and they the door was but whatever cloud of words they might be submitted, that he was, in point of fact, aiding provincial and local works, and that the door was but opened, and he would find it difficult, if not impossible, to close it. He has found it perhaps difficult or impossible to open it as wide as he would have desired; others may have attempted to close it, but found it too late; but it is open wide enough to admit the various subsidies which the hon. gentlemar has brought before the House."

Then, Sir, in replying to me, the hon. gentleman said this, speaking of myself:

"The hon. gentleman said that it was opening a very wide door; but I think that he has already learned from the sentiments of some of the hon. gentlemen who sit behind him, who have on this occasion given an independent expression to their sentiments on this question, that some of these hon. gentlemen would be prepared to open the door a little wider. The most cursory examination of this question is sufficient to satisfy the House that it is absolutely necessary that we should look at these measures proposed for the development of our country from a somewhat different standpoint to that from which we have been accustomed to look at them. The hon, member for Middlesex especially takes exception to interference with provincial legislation. I am under the impression that the Provincial Legislatures will be very l am under the impression that the Provincial Legislatures will be very much obliged to us for coming, with our great resources, to aid of the country in its developement, let it be in one Province or the other. So far as its being regarded as an interference, the great sentiment of the country will be, that when the public works of this description are shown to be essentially necessary for the development of the country they should receive the careful consideration of the Federal Government and the Federal Parliamen." the Federal Parliament."

Then the hon. gentleman proceeds to say that the resources of the various Provinces are come to an end :

" I am sorry to say that there are very few Provinces that are in a position, however anxious, to give that aid and support to the develop-ment of the country it is desirable they should give, on account of the condition of their resources; and I believe they will only be too grateful to find that there is a disposition, when works are of general importance to the whole country, to give their careful consideration and assistance when practicable."

Then, Sir, those results to which the hon. gentleman advorted have received a great expansion this Session, in which it is perfectly clear, from the hon. gentleman's own statement, clear from even a cursory perusal of the Resolutions, clear from a very limited enquiry into the subject, that as to many of the proposed enterprises, they come properly within the name of local railways, and cannot be deemed to be more than of provincial importance, though I quite concede, as I have expressly stated heretofore, in this and former Sessions, that the general advantage of this country is, in the other sense to which I have referred, enhanced by the construction of railways. Now, we have come to the full blown applica. tion of the principle that local railways, and strictly local railways, are to be assisted by this Parliament, and that is the progress we have made in the first Session from the first adoption of that policy. Speaking generally of the whole proposals, it is to be observed that during the debate upon the Canadian Pacific Railway Loan Bill the rumour spread that a large additional expenditure would be proposed, under the statement that it belonged more or less immediately to that scheme; and I proposed that we should have before us, at one view, and before being called upon to decide on any one of the parts, the whole plan of the Administration with reference to Pacific Railway expenditure; that we should not be called upon to vote a loan to the Canadian Pacific Railway and that portion of the policy, and to the British Columbia settlement, and that portion of the policy, separately; but that we should know what the plans of the Government are, which they were about to bring down to this House as part of the trans-continental railway policy

-that was should have all that before us before being called upon to decide on any one. But that proposition was negatived. The wisdom of the House was opposed to my proposal. They decided to proceed piecemeal. They determined upon arrangements with the Canadian Pacific Railway without being aware, at any rate, as a House, however much individuals may have been aware, of what the remaining portions of the policy of the Administration were, and that portion was carried out. Now, so far as can be seen, in addition, the British Columbia settle-ment involves something which, I am afraid, before the hon. gentleman gets through with it, will approach $1,000,000-$750,000 for the advance for the railway, and between $190,000 and $200,000, according to his present estimate, for the dock. I am afraid we cannot hope to get these quite within his figures, and so I say it is more than probable that the figures will amount to something close upon a million. Then, on this transaction there is directly or indirectly, in connection with the scheme of a trans-continental railway, including the aid in respect of railway construction by the Province of Quebec, the aid towards new railway construction, if necessary, between Quebec and Montreal, the aid towards the Short Line Company and other incidentals, about $7,000,000 which will be granted, including the Eastern Extension, if you rate that at the cost at which we acquire it. I am quite aware that the hon. gentleman says that we ought not to rate it at that cost; but if you do so, there is something like $7,000,000 in addition to the $1,000,000 for British Columbia, making $8,000,000 for the trans-continental railway, irrespective altogether of the loan to the Company and the guarantee, involving liabilities of $30,000,000 more. All these liabilities of one kind or another approximate to close on $38,000,000, which have been assumed by the Legislation of the present Session.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. What does the hon.[•] gentleman say that we pay for the Eastern Extension ?

Mr. BLAKE. $1,200,000 in cash.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon. That embraces the 50 miles of railway between Truro and Picton.

Mr. BLAKE. I was not speaking of the Pictou Branch as part of the Eastern Extension. I am aware that the hon. gentleman does not agree with my figures. He says that we purchased the Pictou Branch, which is a profitable enterprise, and therefore we are paying less than the sum I have mentioned for the Eastern Extension. It is impossible for me to obtain information on the subject. I know he agreed to pay what the Government of Nova Scotia paid to the Halifax and Cape Broton Bailway Company. I think it is $1,200,000 at least, and added to that, something for rolling stock, which has to go over for the moment. Not being able to divine this amount, I shall assume that the price of the Eastern Extension to us is what he pays-$1,200,000 or $1,300,000. Thus, we get the sum of $7,000,000. If you say that the Eastern Extension is only costing $600,000-

Sir OHARLES TUPPER. According to the statement of the hon. gentleman, the Eastern Extension costs us nothing. The hon. gentleman stated, when that measure was passed, you expect that the road you get back from Truro to Picton will give you enough to warrant you in taking the other, which is of no value. He knew that we were paying $1,200,000 for the 59 miles from Truro to Pictou, which would give us a net profit, and which we could only get back in that way, and he stated that that included the cost of the Eastern Extension, which we took only to secure that which was valuable.

Mr. BLAKE. That is the hon. gentleman's own statement, which he gave me in answer to my questions. I asked him if I understood his views to be so and so, and he said, yes. I was anxious to acquire from the hon. gentleman information as to the grounds on which he brought this proposition before the House, and I re-stated it, so as to ascertain what his views were. I had no information. I have accepted what I read the other day, in which the hon. members from Cape Breton stated the cost as I have given it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not think the hon. gentleman wishes to state this matter in a way to mislead the House—

Mr. BLAKE. Certainly nct.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. For he charges against this subsidy the 80 miles of railway which were acquired, not by this Government paying $1,200,000 for it, but in connection with the 50 miles from Truro to Pictou, and states it as costing $1,200,000. Although we have the fact before us that the entire object of the Government was to obtain the 50 miles from Truro to Pictou, which had cost $2,000,000, and which the Government got for $1,200,000, and this Eastern Extension in addition, knowing that we had acquired by that expenditure what was the only paying portion of the Intercolonial Railway, the hon. gentieman misleads the House if he charges this $1,200,000 as for the portion, which was the price of the whole line.

Mr. BLAKE. When I made the statement, I said that it was on the assumption that the $1,200,000 was paid for the eastern branch. I added that the hon. gentleman disputed that, though I understood that it is was partly paid for the Pictou Branch, and I say that I cannot allocate the money to the different portions of the line.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. And therefore you will put the whole amount on the Eastern Extension.

Mr. BLAKE. No; I think the hon. gentlemen is unreasonable. I gave to the House the information on which I based my calculation that the $1,200,000 was to go for this portion. If the hon. gentleman tells us now that the Eastern Extension is worth nothing, I wonder why he is giving it away to a railway company, and what he expects the railway company to do with it. What addition will it be to the resources of the company that is to build a railway to Louisburg to get a piece of railway that the hon. gentleman says is worth absolutely nothing at all. If it is worth something, we paid something for it; it was included in our bargain; I do not know how much the hon. gentleman estimates it to be worth, therefore I charge this $1,200,000 to it. I leave the hon. gentleman to solve that matter further.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not wish to interrupt the hon. gentleman, but will he allow me to suggest that it may be worth nothing at all to us, and I did not, in the calculation which I laid before the House, say that it was worth anything. I said that the value we received was in connection with that portion which we desired to obtain and retain. But the House can see that, while it would be worth nothing in its present position to us, yet, as a portion of the short line between Montreal and Sydney, it might become of the greatest possible value to the parties engaging to construct that line.

Mr. BLAKE. Well, Mr. Speaker, if we have an article that may be worth nothing to us just now, but may be of great value to others who want it, I presume that our capacity to sell it for a price is the measure of its value. The hon. gentleman, when he leaves for England and wants to sell his house in Ottawa, does not say that it is worth nothing because he cannot live in it, but that it is worth what he can get for it. So, to those who are going to build the Short Line Railway, the Eastern Extension is valuable and, therefore, it ought to be worth something to us, it is a little difficult, in making a statement such as I am making, that one should have so many interruptions----

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon.

Mr. BLAKE. Not that I profess to be discomposed by them, but they of course a little interrupt my argument. Now, that you have got here these grants, these obligations amounting, in all, to about $38,000,000, it matters comparatively little at what price we estimate the Eastern Extension, for take it at the highest, it only amounts to $1,000,000 or a little over, out of $38,000,000. I do not propose to go into the details of all these new schemes at this moment, or, at any rate, I do not propose to go into them at great length. In my opinion, though, there again I occupy a different standpoint from the hon. genteman. We are paying dearly to-day for the fault of the route chosen for the Intercolonial Railway. We are called upon to expend large sums of money in order, if possible, to accomplish the great interprovincial objects which were to be served by the construction of that line of communication. I know all about the military argument, and knowing all about it, I have never been able to valuo it as a strong argument Мy opinion has always been that the great difficulty which exists in the consolidation of these Provinces, in the consolidation of the interests of Confederation, in the association of all things that go to make a nation is distance, and that to shorten distance between their different ports is the most important political object which we could have had in view; and, therefore, that to adopt about the most circuitous route upon the map as the means of making a great interprovincial line of communication, was sacrificing, to the fancy and phantasm of a possible invasion, that material prosperity, that building up our country as a nation, that moral prosperity and strength which would accrue to a nation by its nearer and closer association — sacrificing those things which would make us one and really strong, to the fancy that, some day or other, we might want to send troops by railway. As I have said, we are now called upon to recognize that, at any rate, as far as the arts of peace are concerned, the Intercolonial has not answered its purpose. I do not say it has been useless; far from it. I am quite free to admit that it has developed a traffic far greater than I, for my part, expected it would; I am free to admit that it has done more good than I expected it would, and I rejoice to know it; but 1 say that we are now recognizing. in the most formal manner, that it has failed to accomplish its real, its main purpose, which was, not to protect us in case of war, but to benefit us during a time of peace and to give as real and as close a connection with one another as geography allowed. The hon. gentlemen has acknowledged this; he stated it a Session or two ago, and he repeated, in his speech the other day, that he was obliged to give up as beaten in the effort to promote a through trade by Halifax.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. No.

Mr. BLAKE. Yes.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Not altogether failed. We have a through trade now.

Mr. BLAKE.

which, if possible, we may get the trade to our own port and in that effort we are building a line to compete with our own; we are to give large subventions to a railway which is to compete with our own; and whatever may be done in the way of a through trade by the Intercolonial now, whatever magnificent account the hon. gentleman himself may be able to give-and no one that I know of can make more of slender material-I should not be surprised, if we had not got down to "hard pan" on this question of the grain trade, that he would have talked of it as flourishing, or at least promising-I say whatever may be done to-day, I wonder whether the hon. gentleman expects, with his short line, to compete successfully for the through trade to Halifax. Of course he does not, because it would be runious-whatever may be the present results of the work on the Intercolonial-it would be absolutely ruinous to engage in competition with a line, the advantages of which he has pointed out are so enormous. And our subsidizing this short line, depends upon the very proposition which is, of course, destructive to the through trade by the Intercolonial; that that which the hon. gentleman found it impossible to do by the Intercolonial there is a chance of our doing by this line, viz., competing with the Atlantic ports not in our territory. If that can be done by this line, there is an end to the Intercolonial through trade. If we are to do that, according to reports, as far as I can judge-as well as we are permitted to conjecture, for conjecture is all that is allowed to us at present-we are doing that by actually paying our own money to build a railway through the State of Maine.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. BLAKE. Go through the State of Maine! Canadians to travel through the State of Maine! Does the hon. gentleman suppose that any hon, member of this House, on either side, after this line has been finished, will venture to attend this Parliament by means of the short line? Does he suppose we will allow the dust of Maine to adhere to the soles of our boots when we come up here? I, cannot be. We must go around by the good, old, reliableroundabout route that we are accustomed to, and in respect to which we are accustomed to the hon gentleman's managet ment. Now, I do say that this is a wonderful change. I am not myself horrified at it; the hon. gentleman knows that quite well, because I have never perceived the same reluctance to use the shorter way to get from one part of the country to the other on the part of really sensible people. I do not perceive that the nationality which the hon. gentleman is constantly throwing up in the faces of us, in the Opposition, as being a nationality that always seeks their country's benefit, will even do what ambassadors used to do in the old days, now happily passed away, since the hon. gentleman has accepted the position of High Commissioner, go abroad to tell lies for their country. I have not observed, living in a section of country which happens to possess the shortest line of communication between two parts of the great Republic, that even the most enthusiastic citizen of the United States objected to pass through the western peninsula of Ontario when he could, in a more convenient, expeditious, and in a cheaper manner, get from one part to another part of his country in that way. And, therefore, Mr. Speaker, I cite the instance of that community as an instance which perhaps may protect me against the charge of want of patriotism in having, even earlier than the hon. gentleman came to the conclusion that it was not wrong to take the shortest road. Nor have I failed to express that view because there was a time when I was accused of something like treason because I suggested that it would be a good temporary arrangement for us to take advantage of the Sault line in order to make communication between our east and our the hon. gentleman himself before, which he had been rather inclined to at one time, I was told it was traitorous on my part to make the suggestion. Subse quently, it is true, as scenes changed, and when the Canadian Pacific Railway announced that they were about to build either a branch or the main line to the Sault, I was told it was a capital thing for the country that there should be that connection; but there was a short spasm, or a short frenzy of patriotism, when I was accused of these traitorous designs, because I had made those suggestions. But, of course, this matter is to be disposed of, now that we are in the region of hard fact, upon the basis of hard fact. I told my hon. friend from Bellechasse (Mr. Amyot), the other day, when he was accusing the Canadian Pacific Railway of possessing an ill-feeling towards the city in which he takes so deep an interest, that I thought he was doing that corporation an injustice. I think now with reference to this question, as I thought then, with reference to that city, that it is possessed by the idea of getting as much as it can from us, and of using all the concessions that we will give to it, to its own commercial advantage; and whatever is for its best, commercially speaking, it will do, so far as we allow it to do it. That is my opinion, which is based upon such slight observation on human nature as I have been able to make during fifty years, and I do not believe that human nature is very different, when it is formed into a corporation like the Canadian Pacific Railway, from that which we find pursuing its avocations in life, not under the guise of a corporation. Now, my own im-pression is, that it will be found that this scheme is of doubt ful advantage, in the aspect in which it is mainly brought before us. I think that we see, from the statements that the Canadian Pacific Railway itself has made, from the statements that Mr. Stephen made at Portland, last fall, or the fall before, very clearly what, after a full consideration of the whole question, that corporation believes to be its commercial terminus. I cannot conceive that the statements which he then made were made without having fully considered the whole subject, and having come to a conclusion as to where his transatlantic ocean trade should and we know that he talked of Portlandgo, and Boston has also been hinted at-as the winter port, and of Montreal as the summer port. It is true that I have seen the letters which the hon. the Minister of Public Works laid upon the Table, and we, of course, know that various events, various exciting events have been transpiring this Session, and it is quite possible that, in the course of those negotiations and discussions, affecting largely the material interests of the corporation in other respects, respects in which they had to look to the assistance and good-will of men highly placed, of men who compose Governments, and of men who can retain or subvert Governments, it is quite possible I say that hopes may have been held out; but I must say that, upon the whole, as far as the published letters of the corporators are concerned, I see no pledge, for my part, which would lead me to the conclusion that there is any other view present to the minds of the Company, even to day, than the view which was stated by Mr. Stephen, at Portland, last fall. Now, if we can, by any plans of ours secure an equally advantageous port in Canada, I have no doubt they will adopt it; if we can secure a more advantageous port, of course they will adopt it; but, unless we can secure as good a port in all the respects which go to make up an ocean port-and I need not say that these involve many considerations; they do not involve simply consideration of mileage, they do not involve simply considerations of harbourage; they invole certain other considerations, with reference to ocean freight, which are important-I say, if we can get that, then we may get the trade there; but without that, unless we pass an Act | ceptible of practical attainment, but if I find that it is posof Parliament to prevent them going abroad, we shall find sible to attain it by the conjunction of the second, if there the trade go where it will go to the best commercial advantage of the Company that controls it. You find, however, other reasons, no doubt, why they should favour these lines. Mr. Stephen is largely interested, as is wollknown, as he him-self has said in the letter which I think the hon. member for Halifax read to the House a little while ago, he, and I believe certain other members of the Company are interested in New Brunswick lines, and it is very natural that they should desire to make communication with those lines, and very probably, making communication with them, it will be to their individual interest, and they will use their influence, as far as they have it with the Company, to throw traffic upon those lines, so far as the great objects of the Company can consist with that course; and, therefore, I think there is reason why we may hope that more will be done, and that a smaller demand will be made upon the public purse than we might otherwise hope for in this connection. But I wish to say that my strongest feeling, with reference to a short line between the Provinces, doubtful as I am of what may be done in the way of a through trade, is that to which I advorted a little while ago. I have always thought, and I repeat, that I consider it of high political consequence that we should get as near to one another as possible; and for our own local trade, for our commercial intercommunication, our business intercommunication, as well as our social intercourse, it is of considerable consequence that we should have a line which will bring us as near together as may be; and on general grounds I am, in railway construction, for the shortest line between the objective points. Of course, we know that in railway construction the shortest line is not always the line which counts the least number of miles. We know that grades and curves are equivalent to mileage, and that a level road, with many miles more of extent, may be really, for all practical purposes, of time and of cost and of convenience, as short or shorter than a road with sharp grades and sharp curves, whose miles number less. But we are called here to deal with the question in a fresh aspect. It is not merely to sanction expenditure on the construction of railways within our own bounds, which are, probably, to perform their function of a continuous short line of railway by means of a link through a foreign country, but we are called upon to expend our own money in the construction of a railway through a foreign country. This subsidy is in part for the construction through Maine, or may be, if that turns out to be the shortest practicable route; and, of course, I need not say that that raises a different question. The question is this: there are always two objects to be considered, the primary and the secondary. The primary object here is to obtain a feasible line of communication between different parts of the Dominion; the secondary object, which is not to be overlooked, and which is an important adjunct of the primary object, is that we know that we are giving considerable local advantages which also benefit the country at large, while we are stimulating railway construction through any part of our own country; therefore, if we can combine these two we accomplish a double good. In my opinion, the second is entirely subordinate to the first in a case of this kind-I do not hesitate to say so, but I do not disregard the second, for all that. I think, for instance, that if the balance were nearly equal, it ought to be turned in favour of the railway which, besides accomplishing all, or almost all, that the other would accomplish, would add to that advantage, that our money was spent in the development of our own country. I think that is a circumstance which we cannot put out of the account. I think we must consider that we are doing a great good in that; at the same time, I repeat that I would not sacrifice the primary to the secondary object. I must see that the primary object is sus-is any doubt in my mind, the doubt is solved when I find that I can join the first and second. Now, Sir, I cannot discuss the details of the hon. gentleman's plan. As I have said, it is a very important plan. It involves the expenditure of a very large sum of money. The grant to this portion, the short line, the piece between Montreal and Moncton, is $170,000 a year for fifteen years, equal, calculating interest at the rate at which the Dominion pays interest, and which is the proper basis of cal-culation, to something over $1,890,000 in hard cash. Therefore, the cash we are going to expend is very con-siderable. The policy is also a very important ques-tion, because I am quite sure that those who are, according to the hon. gentleman's view, more patriotic than myself, would be disposed to add the patriotic consideration, and to say that they would rather under go a certain amount of inconvenvience, a little more detention to travel through our dearly beloved country, than to cut across a foreign one; and, therefore, from those who have so pointedly, and for so many years, hoisted the flag, waved it in the air, flung it in our faces on this and analagous subjects, I anticipate a very large share of approbation towards the more moderate and, as I flatter myself, the more practical and sensible view of the case, which I am just now presenting. Now, the hon. gentleman proposes that he shall settle this. He proposes that we shall give him authority to decide what this line shall be. He says: "I do not know where it is. I have not acquired sufficient information to enable me to form a judgment. I have been thinking of it for a long time; I have looked at it a great deal; I have talked to a good many people, and yet I am entirely in the dark. I propose," he says, "that it shall be by the shortest, the best and the most practicable line"—I forget the exact words, —"between two points, after report by competent engineers." Well, we have had reports of competent engineers before; we have had reports of competent engineers with reference to the Canadian Pacific Railway; we have had reports of competent engineers with reference to the Intercolonial Railway; we had results which were not gratifying to various Parliaments, as due to the reports of competent engineers. I highly approve of the report of a competent engineer; I think it is an admirable thing, but I think it ought to be laid before Parliament, with all the information, with all the knowledge, and with the decision of the Administration, and that the people's representatives should take it upon themselves to decide and to fix the route. Let the investigation take place. Let competent engineers report to the hon. gentleman as long as he pleases and as often as he pleases, and when the matter is ripe for decision let his plans be submitted to the people's representatives, with all the comparative advantages and disadvantages of the different routes, and let us, for ourselves, freely decide which route is, upon the whole, that which is in the best interests of the country. I believe, as I believe with reference to the Intercolonial Railway, that we ought to have a voice in the selection of the route. I believe that it is not a fit thing to be left to the sole and uncon-trolled discretion of Ministers. It is quite true that if they go wrong we may turn them out, but that won't change the route of the railway; and it is more important that we should have the right to fix the route of the railway than that we should be able to turn out the hon. gentlemen afterwards. Now, as to another point—the hon. gentleman's plau—no information was vouchsafed to us, and I feel myself inclined to think that at the first blush, at any rate, it is objectionable. I refer to that which proposes, under guise of a short line between Montreal and the ports of Halifax and St. John, that the work should be accomplished by giving a subsidy to one company to build any uncompleted links between Montreal and Moncton, then to go over a portion of the In- man's proposition. I regret that he should have said so. tercolonial Railway, and then deal with another company My belief is, that if the hon. gentleman had appealed to the

with reference, at any rate, to one of the termini which are to be served by the completed links-I refer to the terminus of Louisburg or Sydney. I say I should have been better pleased if the hon. gentleman had pointed out to us why it is that he proposes the divided instead of the unified system for this short line of railway; why it is that he proposes that it shall be in three pieces -at least three, because there are links in the westernly part of which we do not know that they are to be under the control of the company—at least three, one under control of the Dominion, and one each under control of two different companies; but I do not know whether he intends to provide arrangements which shall secure that unity of action which is essential to a through line, as the hon. gentleman himself has stated, when he told us that it would never do for the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to have stopped at Callander, and to have used other lines of railway as its means of communication with the Atlantic; that it was essential to its success that it should be under one management until it reached its terminusthat it should indeed be one line of railway. If it was necessary, in order that the Canadian Pacific Railway might do this, it must be equally essential with reference to the through business to be done at St. John, Halifax or Louisburg; and therefore I think, as at present devised, the hon. gentleman's scheme has elements of weakness. I observe that the great unknown who made the personal proposal to the hon. gentleman, proposed for the completed line, and the offer which has been accepted, or the plan which had been adopted, is not that one. As to the financial question, it is, of course, limited. Our concern at the moment is limited to this: first, what is it proposed to cost us; and secondly, is the proposed cost reasonable and likely to accomplish the result. We know what the cost to us will be as now proposed, but we have not had any practical information whatever as to the grounds of the hon. gentleman's expectation that that proposed cost will really accomplish the object. We have, therefore, no means of saying that we are really doing anything more in this respect than making, what it has been said we have made in other cases, an illusory grant. Now, Sir, without longer, at the present time, engaging in the discussion of that part of these Reso-lutions which deals more or less with matters of real interprovincial concern, I wish to refer for a moment to the local railway part of the scheme. As to these roads, of course they are of different classes. They are of different classes even in this set of Resolutions. T fully recognize that there is a very material difference in point, not merely of intrinsic merit, in a local sense, but also in the interest that Canada has, as a whole, between the different roads, in these railway Resolutions. But, as I have said with respect to them, taken as a whole, and including all, even the thin pretence with which, on the first occasion, the hon. gentleman veiled his arguments of Canadian, as distinguished from Provincial interests, is now abandoned; and the hon. member for Maskin-ongé (Mr. Houde), when he pointed out his theory of the Federal idea, was answered by the First Minister himself, who took that question in hand, and who stated to us that there was an obstacle in the way of its accomplishment. He pointed out two or three reasons; but it was like the case of the Irishman and the sailorthere was one reason which overbore all others, and that was it could not be done. And why could it not be done? Because the members would not vote for it. He said the country is a large one, and the members represent various localities, and (I am not quoting his words, but I am giving the spirit of his remarks) they must have some sop or solatium, and they would not support a large measure for really an important purpose. That was the hon, gentle-patriotism of this Parliament, had drawn his line as he might have drawn it, at enterprises which were clearly on the safe side, the Federal side, the Canadian side, and had said this is what we propose to you, this is in the public interest, as we conceive it, this is the true limit of our juris. diction, there would have been an effective response to such an appeal made by that hon. gentleman. But he did not choose to make that appeal; he preferred to adopt the other policy, that of granting aid to railways, no matter how small, how short, how purely local their interests may be. And so I told him that this was the almost inevitable consequence of the expectations he held out, of the line he adopted when he began this policy, And we know not where it is to end. We see the portentous growth of it, the proportions it has assumed. I remember the first speech on this subject delivered by the hon. Minister of Railways, when he mentioned that numerous enterprises had been pressed on him for aid by the hon. member for Ottawa and other hon. gentlemen, and he said he could not see his way to aid them. Then, next Session, they were all down in the list for aid for 50 miles each. These are all again down in the list for other 50 miles, and numerous others have been added. And yet we know not the end, because when the hon. gentleman placed a large quantity of papers on the Table, he told us that there was an immense number of papers connected with proposals which had not been favourably considered, and that they were so long he could not possibly get them copied and brought down. We have only the papers connected with those enterprises which have been favourably considered so far ; we have not any idea of those which are reserved for further consideration, for further pressure, for the anti-election period; for then it is we may expect the full fruition of this policy. I say the policy of the hon. gentlemen is a degrading and demoralizing policy, and that the ground on which he sup ported it is one to which I think he might have induced this House, with the influence he has over the majority, to have declared itself superior. It is objectionable on other grounds, It is an assumption of provincial functions, and it is central ization in its most dangerous, because in a material way, and in its most inviting form. I see the Finance Minister and the First Minister laugh. We all know about it. When the late member for West Middlesex (Mr. Ross) declared last year that the grant of railway aid was an interference with the Provinces, the Minister of Railways stated that the provincial revenues were exhausted, and he thought the Provincial Legislatures and the Government would be obliged to the Dominion Parliament for the aid granted. This is not the only case in which suggestions of the same dangerous character have been brought forward. We have had a suggestion that the administration of justice, which belongs to the Provinces, should be paid for by the Central Government; and if that course were adopted, it would of course follow that those functionaries whom the Central Government pay should also be appointed by them, that that administration which they pay for they should also control. And so, I will not say by slow, but by rapid degrees, the hon. gentleman, instead of invading provincial rights, may buy them from the Provinces one by one—he may acquire them under the guise of being a benefactor. Such is far from being the principle on which the Confederation of Canada was framed; it is far from being the principle on which the Confederation of Canada can last. If it be the fact that the Provincial Governments and Legislatures, after an experience of seventeen years, are not in a position, financially, to discharge those functions which belong to them, the whole subject ought to be reconsidered. If, in consequence of their impecuniosity, they are unable effectually to discharge from the rule, with reference to $3,200 per mile, and 1 their own functions, you may do one of two things. You may say, we propose to alter the Constitution, so that the central Government shall take this, that and the other, and that twenty miles of that road should be built as a Govern-so relieve you both of your importance, dignity, power and provincial autonomy, and of expense at the same time; or you may propose a new adjustment of the financial question, which will enable you efficiently to continue the discharge of those functions which for seventeen years you have been discharging. But the proposal of the hon. gentleman is neither of those propositions; it is a proposal, I do not say the word offensively, under the guise of a bribe. The hon. gentleman says the Provincial Gov-ernments will be very much obliged to us if we give railway aid here and there, but this is a proposal calculated to sap the independence of the Local Legislatures and Governments; calculated to lead them to look to this House for pecuniary favours not based on some general principle, not under the lines of the Constitution, and so to lead towards the hon. gentleman's great goal. Now, I consider, therefore, that we ought to deal with this question after a full development of the tendencies and principles of the policy, and deal with it, as indeed I think the time is ripe for us to deal with several other questions, upon a revision of the Federal Constitution. I think it is not at all unreasonable to say, that even if the Constitution had been framed in a very different manner from that in which it was framed, which was a manner not very likely to produce a perfect instrument—I say, even if it were framed in a dif-ferent manner, it would not be unreasonable to say that seventeen years' working and experience would have developed difficulties and defects; and I believe all true Cana-dians, without distinction of party or political creed, ought, if they want Confederation really to prosper, to address themselves without further delay to the question : in what respects does our Constitution at present work well, what frictions and difficulties have been discovered in the working of it, what alterations should take place, and endeavour to arrange it so that it will endeavour to do the work it ought to do, smoothly and to the advantage both of the Provinces and of the Confederation of Canada, as a whole. But I do not think that is any reason why we should proceed upon a false policy, a policy which is leading us with rapid steps in a direction which I think, if presented plainly to the majority of this House, they would effectually disavow and repudiate. Now, Sir, I decline to agree to the proposal that we should undertake any of the proper functions of a Local Legislature by our vote. If we are going to undertake any of the functions of the Local Legislatures, it should be on an alteration of the Constitution, which places any part of those functions within our grasp and leaves to them their diminished functions. I agree with my hon. friend from Maskinongé (Mr. Houde), that these grants are in many cases such as we have no reason to believe will be adequate, and what has passed seems to be a reasonable proof of that. It is stated, and with great force, with all the greater force when you apply it to a peculiarly local line, that the subvention of $3,200, which is estimated to be the cost of the steel rails, is a good limit to adopt, because it insures local backing and intrinsic merit. But then you do not stick to it. Can anybody doubt that we have, thinly disguised under these proposals, an additional subven-tion, at any rate, in one case. Who can doubt, with reference to the line from Metapediac to Paspebiac, that the practical result is an increased subsidy?

It being six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

Mr. BLAKE. At six o'clock, I was pointing out that the Government, even while the hon. gentleman was laying it down as unanswerable, had in fact already departed instanced for example the road from Metapediac to Paspebiac. You will recollect that the present proposal is ment work, at an expense of $300,000, while there remains the subsidy of the company for the remaining eighty miles, granted last Session, at $3,200 per mile. The result, supposing the calculations of the Administration are realized, supposing it to be true that twenty miles can be built for $15,000 per mile, will be that the 100 miles referred to will have cost the country to construct, between $500,000 and $600,000, and if you add the rolling stock, it will amount to a sum nearly double the prescribed maximum subsidy. Now, the pretence under which this is done is, that the 20 miles will be a sort of spur or branch of the Intercolonial. But it is not pretended it would be a satisfactory way of working, to have this branch worked by the Intercolonial, and the other 80 miles worked by a private company. I suggested to the Minister that it would be better to divide this sum of money in the way of subsidy, thus getting a result that would be cheaper for the country, and the hon. gentleman said that his plan was to be preferred, because the first 20 miles was the heaviest part of the work, and they would be also able to go on easier with the rest, if the Government built the first 20 miles. Mark that statement. And yet the Minister estimates that the first 20 miles will cost only $15,000 per mile. Now, to prove to you with how little regard to care are the estimates made and submitted to this House on this subject, it is only necessary to allude to the estimate the Minister gave us last year, when he asked us to vote a subsidy for this same 100 miles of road. He told us, then, that the road was estimated to cost $25,000 per mile, or $2,500,000 in all, to which he added $100,000 for the rolling stock. There is an average cost of $25,000 per mile, and the Minister of Public Works says that the first 20 miles is the heaviest part, and the other is lighter, and it therefore will cost more; but he proposes to add $300,000, or $15,000 per mile, in order to build the heaviest part of the work which, last year, he estimated would cost on the average $25,000 per mile. Now, this shows that it is not an estimate, but a more guess or conjecture upon which we are asked to act, and I shall be surprised if it turns out next year that the hon. gentleman is able to construct the work for the price he now states. We have not here information of any kind which would lead us to believe that the company's estimate of last year is erroneous or extravigant and yet, with those figures before us, he presents these figures this year, and tells us these results will be produced at an expenditure of $300,000. But I say, even if that be true, the real substance, the real essence of the transaction, with reference to that railway is, that it involves a subsidy of $5,500 per mile instead of $3,200. Again, no proof has been given of the capacity of the companies in many cases to construct the road; nor has it been shown that they have evidenced their view of the boná fides, or the merits of the enterprise, by subscribing or pay-ing for any considerable amount of capital stock. I am not therefore satisfied that we should be asked to vote this large number of subsidies to these railways, in the manner in which, and upon the information upon which the hon. gentleman has asked us to decide that important branch of the question. Now, Sir, I come to the third of the points of policy into which I have endeavoured to divide these Resolutions, and that is, the recoupment of past provincial expenditure upon railways, which, I think, is a very great and serious question. It is certainly a novel question; it is presented to us now for the first time. In reference to some roads, the hon. gentleman has repudiated the application of this principle. We know that the sugges tion has been made, in more than one instance, but he has declined to have anything to do with it, and we have to deal with it as a new question, untouched by any decision of this or any previous Parliament. Now, upon this subject of recoupment, I may say that I think our Federal system, besides other defects, has one Pacific Railway locally served the Provinces of Nova Scotia, of New Brunswick, and of Quebec, particularly the counties and localities through which it passed. The Canadian Pacific Railway locally served the Province of Bri-Mr. BLAKE.

that is, I will not say fatal, but a very scrious and radical defect; and that is, the mode in which arrangements are made for the provision of funds for the Local Governments. It violates the wholesome maxim that he who spends should pay; and so long as it continues without some change of system, so long I, for my part, expect nothing but recurrent applications to this Parliament for assistance. The average taxpayer does not realize-it is difficult to get him to realize -that he is actually paying, or at any rate the extent to which he is actually paying, these taxes which are levied upon him indirectly through the Custom houses. He does not understand it, even when these taxes are spent by the Government which levies them. Nor, indeed, have we any right to complain much of that, because I have heard some Finance Ministers declaring to him that he does not in fact pay these taxes, and therefore it is not to be complained of, under these circumstances, if he inclines to such a very pleasant belief. But whatever difficulties of good Government may be occasioned by the impossibility of convincing the multitude of the expensiveness of the system, or of the fact that they are paying, when the same Government that lays the taxes spends them, those difficulties are intensified to an enormous extent when-as according to our system-the Government which lays the indirect taxation pays over a certain portion of it to the Local Government, and that Local Government spends the subsidy. Under these circumstances, the taxpayer is too apt to suppose that whatever is so received by the Local Government is clear gain-that whosesoever pocket it comes out of, it does not come out of his; and, therefore, what is lightly gained is lightly spent; and the result is that proper care and attention and earnestness are not exhibited by the taxpayer or Legislature in reference to the extent of the funds so provided. This is a difficulty easier to state than to remove; but it behoves us to remember that there is that difficulty, and to consider its existence, both when we were called upon, as we are to-day, to deal with questions which grow out of this very difficulty, and when we are called upon to lay down a principle which may have important bearings in the future, Now, at the very first interference which took place in the financial arrangements with the Provinces-as long ago as 1869, I think-I ventured to point to the dangerous path on which we were entering; and I believe our experience since then leads to the conclusion which I endeavoured then to press upon the attention of Parliament that a change in the financial basis was a serious thing-to be engaged in only with the assent of the different Legislatures concerned, and that the system itself was defective. If we could devise a plan under which certain sources of revenue should be apportioned to the Local Governments for their own use, I believe it would be a very great boon; for I think the present system contains in itself the seeds of recurring difficulty—nay, mayhap, of ultimate dis-organization. Now, Sir, how stands this question of recoupment for past provincial expenditure on railways? At the start of Confederation the question of railway construction was the subject of local, and also the subject of Federal action, but in two entirely distinct lines. We had, with reference to the Federal Legislature, the first national railway, the Intercolonial; and we had, a few years later, the project for the other national railway, the Pacific; and these two railways being generally conceded to be in their nature for the general advantage, they were prosecuted by this Government. They necessarily combined local advantages with the general advantage to the country. The Intercolonial Railway, designed to complete, as far as the old Provinces were concerned, a system of intercommunica.

tish Columbia, the North-West Territory, the Province of Manitoba, and a portion of the Province of Ontario; so that, besides its general advantage, it was also of local advantage, as tending to develop the various territories through which it passed. Now, in dealing with the Canadian Pacific Railway, the policy of the Administra-tion which propounded to Parliament that great work was that Lake Nipissing should be its terminus, and from that point it was proposed that the Province's should make whatever connection was required by local enterprise. That was at that time the utmost goal to the eastward. There is no question or doubt upon that question. As it stood, a very considerable gap had to be filled up in order that by a short and direct line, the ocean termini-at any rate, for the summer-of the Canadian Pacific Railway should be placed in communication with it; and the Province of Quebec set itself to work, as far as it was concerned, to supply the missing link within its own territory. And I am not surprised that that Province should have anxiously considered and energetically acted in that relation; because, as I said years ago, if there be any of the older Provinces of Canada which may expect a traffic return from the through trade of the Canadian Pacific Railway, it is those Provinces in which the ocean termini of that enterprise are placed; and so far as their rail-borne trade is concerned, it has always seemed to me that if you can arrange a through road by which the wheat of the North-West is to come down and take ship at Montreal or at Quebec, that of itself involves the proposition that the return freights of imported goods and local manufactured goods, such goods as are manufactured there, or in that neighbourhood, will find their point of departure at the same port at which the grain takes ship, and that therefore there will be a very great and important advantage to whatever point is the ocean terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Such was the view which, on former occasions, on the occasion of the discussion of the very contract under which the road has been built, I ventured to state in this House and elsewhere, and I conceive it is the only sound view to take as to the probabilities of the through all-rail route which has been designed and built by the aid of the subsidies of Parliament. Now, then, as I have said, Quebec was alive to this and set about making those local railways through the Province which would serve to enable her to reach these advantages. My hon. friend, the member for East York, pro posed, in 1874, to subsidize a line or lines reaching somewhat beyond Lake Nipissing, in order to assist in making connection with existing and projected lines of railway. That was the policy of my hon. friend as was shown by the votes that he proposed to Parliament, namely, to assist in the extension of the Canada Central. At first, it will be remembered, by those who sat in this House at that time, that the road which was supposed to be the best and most direct was somewhat more southern than the route which was ultimately adopted. It was, I think, by the valley of the Bonnechère, which would have taken the road to Renfrew, and that was the link supposed to be subsidized. That proposal did not meet with assent from my hon. friends, many of them Conservative members, from the Province of Quebec, because they said that the best route, the route which would most suit them, the route which was directest and fittest for the connection they were proposing to make, was a more northerly route, of which the terminus would be at or near Pembroke, and there was a considerable controversy on that subject in Parliament, and subsequently further surveys and information satisfied my hon. friend from East York that that was on all grounds the best route, and accordingly the route that was subsidized was settled to be to Pembroke. It is not necessary for me to enter into any lengthen-ed discussion as to the purpose and object for which this link was subsidized, because I have under my hand the statement made by the Minister of Railways, as expounding the policy of the Government, in the year 1882, and in the year 1883, when he proposed to carry out still further that policy of my hon. friend from East York, by subsidizing another link stretching from Lake Nipissing, or from Callander, which was the then fixed terminus of the railway, towards Gravenhurst, and he then stated distinctly the circumstances under and the principles upon which my hon. friend from East York had acted, and upon which he himself was acting. In the year 1882, in moving the first sub-sidy for the Gravenhurst and Callander branch, he said this:

"It will found, upon reference to the Canadian Pacific Railway Act of 1874, that it was therein contemplated that aid should be given to the li es of railway connecting railways in Ontario and those in Quebec with the Canadian Pacific failway. The 14th clause of that Act provides: "The Governor in Council may also grant such bonus or bonuses. subsidy or subsidies, to any company or companies already incorporated or to be hereafter incorporated, not exceeding $12,000 per mile, us will secure the construction of the branch lines extending from the eastern sectore the construction of the orange interaction are externing from the eastern terminus of the said Canadian Pacific Railway to connect with eristing or proposed lines of railway; the granting of such bonuses or subsidies to be subject to such conditions for the securing the ruaning powers and other rights over and with respect to the whole or any portion of the said branch railway, to the owners or lessees of the main line of the said railway, or of any section thereof, or to the owners or lessees of any other point and with the said branch railway as the Governor other railway, of other section introduction of the other of railway, as the Governor in Council may determine; but every Orler in Council granting such subsidy shall be laid before the House of Commons for its ratification by

"Under the authority and in accordance with the proposal to subsidize lines of railway to connect the railways of Quebec and Untario with the Canadian Pacific Railway, extending from Pembroke to Nippissing or the point new called Callander Station.

Then, Sir, remember that he makes this statement in support of a Resolution to grant aid from Callander or Gravenhurst. He says:

"The object of this portion of the Resolution is to provide the same facilities for connection with lines of railway connecting the comfacilities for connection with lines of railway connecting the com-mercial centres of Ontario, and the existing lines of railway permeating the Province of Ontario, with the Canadian Pacific Railway. It will be at once apparent that no steps could be taken more calculated to pro-mote the industries of that Province, or to subserve the railways of that Province, or develop the North-West itself by furnishing the most direct, cheap and easy means of communication between the North-West and these great commercial centres. The provision itself is entirely within the neare of the provision of the law and there is no doubt if was in the scope of the provision of the law, and there is no doubt it was in contemplation at the time that that Policy was adopted that aid should be contemplation at the time that that Policy was adopted that aid should be given to the trunk lines of railway connecting with the Ontario railway system in the same manner as was done in reference to the Canadian Pacific Railway, connecting in a direct line with the railways in the Province of Quebec. It will be seen, by reference to the discussion, that, when my hon. predecessor was introducing this Act and submitting his policy to the House, I took the liberty of asking the question as to whether it was intended to subsidize one or both lines, and the auswer showed the hon gentleman they had in view the subsidizing of both lines of railway. It is possible that the then financial condition of the country induced the hon, gentleman to panse and hesitate about carry showed the hon gentleman they had in view the Subsidizing of both lines of railway. It is possible that the then financial condition of the country induced the hon. gentleman to pause and hesitate about carry-ing out the original proposal of giving the lines of railway in Ontario the same facilities for connection with our great national line of railway to the Pacific as has already been provided by Parlianent for connection with the east. I may say that the Government have been solicited by the company, the Northern and North-Western, for a subsidy of $12,000 a mile for these 110 miles."

That seems to be the end of the passage material to the present question. Then he says again :

"We may now practically take Quebec as the starting point for our traffic, because, as I have stated to the House, the Uanadian Pacific Railway, having purchased the line from here to Montreal, and thus having a through line from here to Montreal, and having made traffic arrangements over the line from Montreal to Quebec, Quebec now practically becomes the ocean terminus of the Pacific Railway, because they not only have traffic arrangements, but are entitled to make a rate to Montreal and also to Quebec itself."

Well, then, the hon. gentleman, in the following year, when he proposed to increase the subsidy, which had been but $6,000 a mile in Ontario, discussed the question again, and he said this :

a manifesto, stating what the policy of the Government was, and how they proposed to deal with the great question of the Canadian Pacific Railway. And in their manifesto he stated that a part of the policy of the Government was to subsidize lines of railway connecting with the Ontario and Quebec systems. Hon, members will remember that when that hon, gentleman, at a later stage in the Session of 1874, brought down his Canadian Pacific Railway policy for the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and when he spoke of the subsidies he proposed to grant to these lines of railway to connect the Canadian Pacific at Callander with the Ontario and Quebec systems of railway, I interrupted the hon, gentleman, and asked him, as will be seen by reference to the report of his speech at the time, "Do you mean to subsidize one line or two lines? Is it to be a line to connect with the Quebec system?"--for he was explaining that, and the hon, gentleman's answer was: "two lines." Now, this subsidy provides for the Gravenhurst and Callander section, 110 miles of railway, and is instanded to fulfil the pledge that hon gentlemen made previous to the elections, and in Parliament after the elections, that not only was there to be a direct line of railway communication by the subsidy to the Canadian Oentral Railway, but there was also to be a line of communication from Callander to connect with the Ontario system of railways. If the hon. gentleman had not said that, if he had made no reference to the subject, I do not believe there is a gentleman on either side of this House who will say that not only is it fair and just to have this provision to connect with the Ontario system, as the Canadia Central subsidy, which was given by the late Government, enabled us to connect the Quebec system with the Canadian Pacific Railway. But that, apart altogether from any question of pleadings, apart altogether from any question of even-handed jusice, I do not believe that there is a gentleman on either side of this House who will not

Thus, you will see that the statement of the Minister in 1882, and his statement in 1883, was that the policy of the Government-which, in that respect, agreed with the policy of the late Government, which policy he was implementing, and which he thought just-was that there should be a subsidized extension by the Canada Central Railway to connect with the Quebec system, and a subsidized exten sion by a line to be subsidized from Callander to Gravenhurst, to connect with the Ontario system, and that justice to Ontario required that the facilities for connection with Quebec, which had been given by the extension of the Canada Central, should be balanced by facilities to be given by the construction of the Gravenhurst and Callander line. in the Province of Ontario. The Province of Ontario itself had at one time proposed a subsidy of no less than $8,000 a mile for this railway. At that time, no one in the House that I know of pretended that anything more should be done; certainly that was not the view of the Government. The view of the Government was, that the governmental assistance to the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the original view having been Nipissing, the original extension having been, as I have just described, by the Canada Central to Pembroke, for the benefit of Quebec, should be implemented by what the hon. gen-tleman conceived was simply the completion of the pledge, and an arrangement for doing even-handed justice by assistance towards the construction of another link from Gravenhurst to Callander for the benefit of Ontario. The hon. gentlemen has laid upon the Table, in compliance with the demand that all the papers on this subject should be brought down-and I asked him whether this was the only one, and he said, yes-a request from the Local Government of Quebec, dated the 13th February, for assistance in connection with the Quebec lines: and this, therefore, is the first proposal on the subject from the Province, of which we are informed and, as I have said, no member of the Government, during all these years, made any such proposal up to this time. Now, Quebec is not the only Province that has exhausted her resources in building railways. The hon. gentleman, himself, stated that last year and the year before, and notably last year, when he told us that the Provinces had so depleted their resources that they were unable to continue in the course of giving aid to the building of railways, and that he himself had to undertake the task, in consequence of the deficiency in the provincial resources. I do not intend to enter into any great detail, but I wish to give this Honse a statement of the general results, as far as I have been able to gather them, of the operations of the different Provinces in this connection; and in doing so, I omit cancelled grants, lapsed grants, grants which appear upon paper, but which, for one reason or the other, have not actualy become [operative. Now, as I understand it, what were called the Government roads in the Province of Quebec, which comprised more than the lines now proposed to receive the attention of Parliament, because they comprised certain branches of a very considerable mileage-the Government roads, I sayincluding certain valuable lands, city lands, terminal lands and lands of that description, which the Government parted with for the Company, and including as cash, also, certain land arrangements which were made by some of the city municipalities in connection with the adjustment of the bonuses-cost, including these lands and including such sums as are yet payable, for I believe some are yet payable, about $14,700,000; and speaking with a very rugged approximation, for I am sorry I have not been able to get figures which would enable me to do more, I deduct for the branches about $1,500,000 from that cost. That would leave the cost, if I am correct in that deduction, of the main line, about $13,200,000, and on this cost there has been received and is receivable in municipal grants of land and money, paid and payable, about $1,400,000. A much larger sum appears in the Blue Books, a sum of $1,500,000 larger, but as far as I can gather, that sum is no longer exigible, and I have dealt only with the grants not lapsed, such as the grants to the County of Ottawa and other places, which have lapsed and are cancelled-deducting the municipal grant already paid and payable, $1,400,000, this would leave, paid and payable by the Government, in land and money, for the main line, inclusive of the branches, about $11,800,000. There has been received and is receivable, from the sale of the railway, $7,600,000, which would leave a balance of $4,200,000, as the present contribution of the Government to the line between Ottawa and Quebec. If you assume for a moment that the proposed relief is, as some people suggest it should be, as some people say it was to be, practically equivalent to $12,000 per mile over the main line, you reach a figure of $3,360,000. If you withdraw from that this $6,000 a mile, which is suspended, at any rate for the present, you find, of course, a lesser figure; but you will perceive that if the net expenditure on the main line of Quebec is reduced to $4,200,000, the proposed subvention, from either point of view, reduces to a comparatively light sum the remaining subvention to the Government of Quebec towards the construction of this line between Ottawa and Quebec itself. That is not the only thing to be considered, because it is true that the Province of Quebec, whether through its Provincial Government or its municipalities, has expended other considerable sums on other railways; and for the purpose which I have in hand it is necessary to take into expenditures. I have to state that account those the net expenditure by the Government, less the pro-ceeds of the sale, on the main line from Quebec to Ottawa, would be, according to my calculation, $4,200,000; payment on the branches, $1,500,000; Government subsidies to other railways, in cash paid and promised, $4,160,000; municipal aid, paid and payable, excluding cancelled grants on account of Government railways, $1,400,000; municipal aid to other railways, excluding cancelled grants, $1,500,000; making a total of $12,760,000 of provincial expenditure, governmental and municipal, paid and payable on railway construction in the Province since Confederation, after crediting the amount with the proceeds of the sale of the Government railway. To this is to be added an indefinite amount as representing possible grants of a very large acreage of land, which latterly has been the form in which the Quebec Government has proposed to subsidize the undertakings. The total acreage offered to various companies is between five and six million acres; but it is impossible to estimate either the value of that land to the Province-because I hold that the value of the land to the Province is a very different thing to what its value may be to the railway company—or the number of acres which will be actually excluded by reason of enterprises towards which, with perhaps somewhat too lavish a hand, it has been expended; therefore, I am unable to do more than in point out that to the gross sum of $12,760,000, as representing all the expenditure, governmental and municipal, after giving credit for the cost of the railways, is to be added a certain number of acres of land. Now, in the Province of Ontario, in accordance with her system of Local Government which has developed to a much greater extent than in any of the other Provinces, minuter systems of Local Governments, by means of municipal institutions, municipal taxation, and municipal expenditure, the Local Government has provided more largely for railways through municipalities than that of any of the other Provinces. And there was a reason why, irrespective of that greater development of the municipal system in Ontario, there should be such a large expenditure through munici-palities, which reason is to be found in the distri-bution of a very considerable proportion of the surplus revenues of that Province to the municipalities, on condition that they were to be expended on useful public works, a very large proportion of which was, in fact, expended on railways, through the medium of the municipalities. The general results in the Province of Ontario are as follows: Government aid, paid and promised, $6,520,000; to this is to be added the settlement of the claim of the Canada Cen-tral for a large specific grant of lands in the Province of Ontario, made by the Legislature before Confederation, but not provided for in the adjustment of the debt, and earned after Confederation, and in respect of which the courts held that there was a legal claim against, not the Province, but the lands of the Province, for an indefinite amount. That was settled for $550,000, in respect of railway construction which took place after Confedera-tion. This makes a total of $7,070,000 as the governmental expenditure made and to be made. To this is to be added, of municipal aid-I am sorry I have not been able to get all the grants, but the grants I have obtained information of are about $8,000,000, making a payment in all of over $15,000,000 by the Province, irrespective of a very large amount of the old municipal loan fund debt, which was an asset of the Province of Ontario, and which was remitted to the municipalities and had been expended in earlier railway construction. That I do not take into account at all, as my effort has been to ascertain what has been expended in the Province on railways since Confederation. One other observation is fit to be made, with reference to the expenditure of over $15,000,000, to which I have just alluded, in Ontario, and it is this: that no less a sum than $3,200,000 of that expenditure has been made on lines which have been declared to be now, practically, parts of the Canadian Pacific Railway -the Canada Central, an expenditure of $850,000; the Toronto, Grey and Bruce, which it is said is to be the main artery to the Canadian Pacific for a considerable time to come and which has been leased under arrangements, to which Parliament has given its sanction, by the Canadian Pacific Railway as part of the Ontario and Quebec-$1,450,000; the Credit Valley, which forms a link in the line of through communication, which Parliament has sanctioned the acquisition of by the Canadian Pacific Railway, $1,900,000. So that, as I have said, $3,200,000 of provincial and municipal money has been expended in the Province of Ontario for enterprises now practically part of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and deemed to be of very great importance for the proper working and complete realization of the benefits to be derived from that enterprise; and under the demands made upon municipalities in respect to these liberal railway grants, very considerable difficulties have arisen, and very great burdens have been imposed upon many thriving Well, Sir, as regards Nova Scotia, the municipalities. account requires a brief statement. I do not take into account, as I have said, railway obligations which had been contracted before Confederation, and which were in effect provided for by the excess allowed in repect of the debt of the Province upon it entering Confederation, subsequently increased in 1869 by the Readjustment Act; nor do I take into account the expenditure which was made on railways after Confederation, in so far as the balance of that excess of debt provided funds for them. It may be disputed, I dare say it will be disputed, but it seems to me a reasonable ground, for the reason, first of all, that we have nothing to do with the obligations which were contracted before Confederation that were to be met out of funds which were provided by the financial adjustment before Confederation. Consequently, in so far as the subsequent expenditures were made out of the excess of capital upon which the Province was entitled to draw, it may be said that those provincial debts may be placed upon one proportionate level with reference to public works executed, or to be executed, and that those Provinces which had not executed public works up to the same level of indebtedness as the other Provinces, may not fairly ask to have that taken into account which was required to bring them up to the same level, and the funds for which were provided by the financial adjustment on which they entered Confederation. The result of that, however, is that a sum of $990,000-of which about $830,000, I think, was in respect of railways contracted for before Confederation-is omitted from the nominal expenditure since Confederation, and which leaves expended in Nova Scotia, by the Government, $2,267,000, and by the municipalities, $445,000, or a total of $2,712,000, besides 500,000 acres of Crown lands. Now, taking New Brunswick and regarding the account in the same way,-the Province of New Brunswick had not gone so largely into railway construction before Confederation, and it had a very large amount, consequently, to its credit upon capital account, an account in respect of which it was entitled to incur debt. The omitted items, comprising partly that amount and an amount about one-third of the works constructed before Confederation, amount to no less than $1,830,000; and they leave for Government expenditure, in excess of the allotted debt for railways, agreed upon after Confederation, $1,580,000, and in municipal expenditure, $296,000, or $1,876,000 altogether, besides no less an amount than 1,660,000 acres of Crown lands; and of those, I believe a portion was permitted to be selected by the companies which were entitled to them, and were specially valuable. I am unable to add the value of those lands in any of those cases. But if you add such a value as I would be disposed to put on them, not as the value to the companies or their value now, but as the value to the Province at the time of the grant, I would suppose that the general result would be, so far as Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Ontario are concerned, that their railway expenditure, provincial and municipal, since Confederation, is not very far removed from, but on the contrary, closely approximate to those bases upon which we have ordinarily calculated the financial arrangements-I refer to the population basis; and that in Quebec the expenditure is somewhat in excess of that basis, although not very materially-somewhat however in excess of it. Speaking roughly, it is very extraordinary how closely in the whole of the four Provinces the railway expenditure aproximates the basis of population. In the Province of Manitoba over $900,000, I believe, has been given municipally to various railways, either to the Canadian Pacific Railway or to railways which have had more or less connection with the Canadian Pacific Ruilway. I have shown you an expenditure in the five Provinces of over $30,000,000, and there is this observation to be made with respect to that expenditure : that the railways upon which it has been made are, many of them, aye the most of them, aye almost all of them, of infinitely greater importance, railways which can infinitely more properly be called railways of great advantage to Canada within the meaning of our Constitution, than many of those lines which the hon. gentleman has sought to bring within our jurisdiction and many of those proposed railways for which he is now advocating a Federal subvention. I do not intend to go over the list, but this fact is notorious. Let each member consider the lines in his own Province which have been built since Confederation, and he will see, with the very greatest facility, that the observation I have made is just and correct, namely, that those lines which have been constructed are of infinitely more importance, of infinitely greater consequence and infinitely more national in their character than many of the lines now proposed to be aided, and indeed more important than any line which can be projected. They are the main lines that were required at that time. As I have pointed out, there were two different areas of jurisdiction and action upon which railway legislation and railway subvention procoeded, up to the comparatively recent time at which the new departure has been projected. The Federal which embraced the construction of the great interprovincial railways, the Intercolonial and the Canadian Pacific Railways, and the Local which embraced the construction of all other lines, no matter of how high consequence each was within its own Province. But there can be no doubt that there has been, within the last two or three years a change in the situation, and that change, so far as we are concerned, has been, up to this Session, in two directions. The first, that which I have discussed, namely, the adoption of the principle that we should grant Federal aid to what I call local or provincial railways. The second, that to which I have not heretofore particularly alluded, the proposition for declaring by one fell swoop, almost all-not quite all-the provincial railways, which had been constructed before Confederation and which were constructed with so much pain and effort upon the responsibility, entirely so far as legislation was concerned, of the various Governments—to be railways under Federal jurisdic-tion, on the plea that they are roads of great advantage to Canada. They are adopting a very great change in policy; each step, in my opinion, having a tendency against the spirit of our Constitution. Now, a third proposal is made, namely, that there should be payment to a Province in respect of past expenditure on certain of its provincial railways. I maintain that that is a principle now brought forward for the first time, and which, if it is to be applied at all, must have an application more extensive than that proposed to be given to it. I maintain it is not just to apply that principle to one Province and not to the other Provinces. I maintain that the claims and rights of the other Provinces ought to be recognized when this new policy is inaugurated. We know what the truth is in this matter. We know perfectly well, it is quite notorious to us, that the finances of the Province of Quebec are in a distressed condition. The statement has been made by both parties in the Province, by successive First Ministers and successive Treasurers, and it is evidenced to local sources of taxation, to the principal of municipal in the very memorial which is upon the Table, as it has taxation, would have been advisable in the condition of the been evidenced by prior memorials, that further assistance | Province of Quebec. And though that may be the case, it is needed in order to establish equilibrium in the finances is clear that the Province of Quebec at present, on the state-Mr. BLANE.

of that Province. I observe the present Treasurer, Mr. Robertson, who has a very extended acquaintance with Quebec finances, having filled that office in former years, and having lately returned to it, declared-I quote from a speech of Mr. Mercier in the Local Legislature on 31st March, which gives these extracts from Mr. Robertson's speech, delivered at Sherbrooke on 14th February-that:

""For the year ended on 30th June last, 1883, there was to the account of the revenue and expenditure of the Province a deficit of about $300,000."

I observe that that hon. gentleman further stated, calcalating the state of things for the current year, and as I understand it, for the future :

"If these credits are not exceeded, which may well happen, and that the revenue of the year as estimated is all collected, there will be this year a difficit of about $350,000. That is to say, that the deficit will be $350,000 if the credits are not exceeded and all the receipts as estimated are collected. * * Thus we can conclude that we will have an annual deficit of from $300,000 to $400,000 in the ordinary affairs of the Province-in other words, in the ordinary revenues, without taking an account of loans and extraordinary outlay for railways and permanent works.'

That is the statement made by Mr. Robertson to his constituents in a speech delivered by him at Sherbrooke on the occasion of his election by acclamation. It is not, of course, necessary to enquire in any detail how those results, which all lovers of Confederation must deeply regret, have occurred. There can be no doubt that the railway expenditure of the Province of Quebec has had much to do with it. The figures of the Public Accounts, to which I have referred, indicate that. Although I think the statement of the Minister of Railways, which did not take into account the municipal expenditure, which did not take into account the amount received and receivable for the sale of the railway, and which spoke of $14,000,000 as the governmental expenditure, was not calculated to lead to an exactly accurate impression, without considerable modification, of the extent to which that is a charge. But still, with all allowances, placing it on the bases on which I have endeavoured to place it, there is no doubt that railway expenditure has had much to do with that difficulty, particularly as we are to remember that anterior to the sale of the railway, they were producing nothing to pay interest, and there was a large accumulation on that account. I do not myself attribute the condition of the Province of Quebec entirely to that. I attribute the condition, as I attribute the condition more or less of all the Provinces, in part, to our vicious system of subsidies, to which I have referred. I have pointed out-it is human nature-lightly come is lightly spent, and the truest spur of economy is the knowledge on the part of the taxpayer that he is paying any governmental expenditure, and the knowledge on the part of Governments and members, that the taxpayer will hold them to account for that expenditure; and I believe our system which, instead of supplying the Local Governments with certain sources of revenue, which they might lessen or increase at their pleasure, providing as it does these subsidies, which are to a considerable extent regarded as a clear gain, has been, in the case of Quebec and other Provinces, a reason why the expenditure has risen faster than it otherwise would. There also has been, to a considerable extent, an extravagant expenditure: That will not be questioned, because we find now that the policy of the late administration, that of Mr. Mousseau, was one of retrenchment, and that he announced officially on several occasions, that by retrenchment, by abolishing useless offices, by diminishing extravagant salaries, by economizing in expenditures in other ways, he had found that he would be able to promi e, and that he would succeed in saving a large sum of money. Therefore, something is to be blamed to that account. And it may be also that more liberal resort ment of its provincial officers, a statement made with authority, vouched upon the statement of the provincial politicians on both sides, is in a condition which demands the serious consideration of the Confederation. But she is not alone in that condition. You will find statements made from the Province of Nova Scotia, for example, and those who have endeavoured to analyze, I know with difficuly, with very great aptitude to err for want of information, those who have attempted to analyze the expenditures of that Province will, I think, find that there has not been a very great deal to complain of in the way of extravagance. At least that was the result of such cursory investigation as from time to time I have been able to make into the expenditures of that Province, and I am not singling out any Government from another-there has been alternation of Governments-I do not find that there has been much extravagance, or that the expenditures have been in excess, to a large amount, if at all, of the demands of that Province. We know, however, that its resources are cramped, that it is more or less in a state of difficulty and distress locally. So with reference to New Brunswick, which was better off. It also turns out to have been exhausting its revenue; it has been drawing from the Finance Minister in advance of its subsidy, until, I believe, somewhere about a year or perhaps more of the subsidy, turns out to have been overdrawn in advance, and the proposal is now made, I understand, to create a funded debt in order to meet the deficit on current revenue in that Province. And in the Province of Ontario, there can be no doubt whatever, that affairs there are assuming such a shape that notwithstanding a very large amount of municipal taxation which exists in that Province, the Government, as the hon. Minister of Railways has said, has been obliged entirely to give up any effort to assist further in railway construction and the expenditures and receipts have got to that point that if the expenditure is to be progressive that Province also will be in a condition in which it will be pinched. That is my opinion of the condition of that Province. Now, I do not allude to the Province of Manitoba, because we know that it is in an exceptional and transitory condition. It is generally recognized that the condition of that Province is such that the proposals which the hon. gentleman made a couple or three years ago, cannot be held to be adequate, and we must review its situation from time to time, according to its progress. Nor shall I allude specifically to the Provinces of British Columbia or Prince Edward Island, inasmuch as I am not able to point out to the House any questions of rail-way expenditure, with reference to those Provinces, but I will say, as to them, that their situation requires to be considered. Now, Sir, I think that the condition of the Province of Quebec, as I have pointed out, has demanded for sometime past, and is now demanding, the attention of this Parliament; and for my part, I have always been prepared to deal fairly by that or any other of the Provinces, but on condition of equal and fair justice to all. And I do not suppose my hon. friends from the Province of Quebec will ask more, or those sitting on the other side, though they might view my proposition differently from what I view it, I do not think they will dissent from the spirit in which I now address myself to them, namely, that it is fair and reasonable, under these circumstances, when a new policy of this kind is being proposed, to consider what its real basis is, to consider what the real condition of the other Provinces is, rela tively to that basis and otherwise, and to see whether what is being proposed as it stands, and without effecting proper remedies for the application generally of the new principle you propose, can be called just. I say, Sir, that for my part I should desire, and it is one of the things which is most important for us to consider, next to the constitutional question-I should desire that we should address ourselves very early and very earnestly to the solution of the quespermanent and lasting basis. I believe it to be destructive of the independence and automony of the Provinces that they should be looking to Ottawa for favours, that they should be dependent on the Central Government for the means of carrying on their affairs. I believe it to be destructive to Confederation itself, that a system should continue under which it might be said: O, we will go on, we will expend more, we will go into debt, and when we get to a pass that we cannot carry on any longer, the Ottawa Parliament must relieve us. Any sentiment of that kind, any feeling of that kind, any notion on the part of provincial Ministers or politicians, or the citizens or electors of the Provinces, of that kind, must be destructive, in the first place of good economical Government in the Provinces, and, in the second place in its influence, moral and financial, on the Confederatio,n-destructive, ultimately, of the Confederation itself Therefore, I think it is a pressing and incumbent duty upon us to endeavour, if we can, to devise a plan which will set these matters permanently upon a basis different from that upon which they now unhappily stand. But, Sir, we are dealing at present with only one aspect of this subject-with the question of the difficulties which have been created, not in Quebec only, but in Quebec and elsewhere, by an expenditure on railway construction beyond the resources of the different Provinces; and, as it is proposed to deal with that question, I say that it ought to be dealt with on a general principle applicable to them all; and I maintain that the proposal of the hon. gentleman, isolated and exceptional as it stands, is not just. If just, why was it not proposed in this House years ago? If just, why does it come now, and in the way it comes? We know now quite well how it The hon. Minister of Railways, when bringing comes. down the railway policy of the Government, which touched this very subject, in 1882, said that in order to balance things and to do justice to Ontario, having regard to what had been done for Quebec in the mattter of the Canada Central, he was going to assist the Gravenhurst and Callander line. In 1883 he argued in just the same way. Did he then think that justice to Quebec required him to give her, without considering the railway expenditure of the other Provinces at all, a railway subsidy for her railway expenditure? If he thought so, why did he not say so? Instead of justice to Ontario requiring that a subsidy should be given to the line from Gravenhurst to Callander, justice to Quebec required an expenditure on the line from Ottawa to Quebec. Justice this Session has been justice last Session, has been justice for years past. But it is only now that the Government have found out that this proposition, as it stands, is defensible: and how do they find it? We know that the Canadian Pacific Railway loan measure was brought down early this Session; we know what was the attitude towards that measure of the hon. gentleman's supporters, or the bulk of them, from the Province of Quebec. We know that they pointed out what they thought the interest of their Province required. We know, because we have had a statement in the various Ministerial papers in the Province of Quebec, that the First Minister declined to assent to their proposal. We know that there was a hitch and a difficulty. We know that there was a settlement of that difficulty. We know that assurances were given by the hon. Minister of Public Works and the hon. Secretary of State to their supporters. We know that there was subsequently an agreement with the First Minister, who was understood to ratify those assurances, and the loan passed. We know that the debate upon that question was not conducted in a full House. We know that the bulk of our hon. friends from the Province of Quebec did not do us the honour of attending when we were endeavouring to point out what the evils of the Government measure were. We know that there tion, by the adoption of some plan whereby once for all the was a parliament of their own in Room No. 8, in constant question of the Provincial subsidies should be placed on a Session, during the progress of that exciting debate; and we was a parliament of their own in Room No. 8, in constant know that into that Committee Room No. 8, after some difficulty and some demur and a good deal of pressureconstitutional pressure-1 believe that is the hon. gentleman's phrase-the First Minister himself in propria persona was drawn, and there announced -not to representatives of the people of Canada in Parliament, with the reporters to hear it-there announced what the policy of the Government would be. And now the Government say : New light has dawned upon us, and we perceive suddenly, what for these many years we have been wholly blind to, what we never saw before, that justice to Quebec requires this particular and exceptional treatment which is involved in these Resolutions. Well, Mr. Speaker, I am a little suspicious of this justice, which was so long delayed, so long denied, and which is at length granted under the peculiar circumstances which attends the grant of it on this occasion. I am inclined to believe that the hon. gentleman did not think, at the commencement of this Session that this was justice, else he would have proposed it. I am inclined to think that at former Sessions the Government did not think it was justice, or they would have proposed it; and I am inclined to think that they have brought it down now under the constitutional pressure to which the hon. gentleman referred on a former occasion -not because they thought it just, but because they thought they must. It was yielded, Sir, at the point of the bayonet. Now, I do not want this distress of the Province of Quebec to continue and, as I say, I believe it is disorganizing, not only to the Province of Quebec, but to the whole Confederation, that the present condition of things should continue. I have been amused to watch the various views taken on this subject, and the various suggestions made by hon. gentlemen on both sides, on this question. I was amused to read yesterday, in Le Canadien, a slight forecast of the future. It is from Ottawa, dated the 9th of April:

"Toutes sortes de rumeurs circulent. On assure que des amendements "Fources sorres de rumeurs circulent. Un assure que des amendements aux résolutions ministérielles seront proposés par des députés conserva-teurs dans le but de protester contre l'adoption de la ligne du Sud. Je n'en crois rien ; nou pas parceque les députés ne comprennent pas l'énorme faute qu'ils vout commettre, mais parce qu'ils sont indécis, ci-convenus, et que chacun redouts de prendre la direction d'un mou-vement de cette importance pendant que les ministres du Bas-Canada cardent leurs portaréguilles. gardent leurs portefeuilles.

"Pour tâcher d'effrayer nos amis, certains coulissiers répètent que les tories du Haut-Oanada menaçant de voter contre les résolutions en haine de notre province. Ces gens-là nous détestent, c'est sûr; mais voter contre nous c'est autre chose, car nous sommes leur seule planche de salut. Cette rumeur me parait un tour de passe-passe de Sir John."

Well, just consider a little the details; just consider how they hang together with the general proposition of the Ministry to deal exceptionally with the Province in this direction. The present course is taken because this railway from Montreal to Quebec is considered a part of the national road, of the Pacific road, and for that reason $12,000 a mile are given in recoupment of the expenditure between Ottawa and Montreal, and $6,000 a mile are given in recoupment of the expenditure between Montreal and Quebec. Well, why $6,000 a mile only? Because everybody knows it is not a part of the national highway ; everybody knows that the Quebec Government and people sold it away, so that it may not be, unless it be acquired at a great price now, a part of the national highway, because everybody krows it does not fill the character in respect to which especially it is proposed the Province of Quebec is to receive this grant. On the other hand, you find therefore that the scheme cannot properly be pressed between these narrow lines. I admit the railway is a very important railway, no matter who owns it, or whether it is part of the national highway or not. I consider it one of the most important that could be constructed in the Province of Quebec, and I do earnestly hope, whatever may be the fate of these resolutions, it may be found possible to utilize that railway instead of conbe found possible to utilize that railway instead of con-structing another, for the purpose of obtaining communica-try and show him what the other is. If we believe the hon, tion between the west and Quebec by the Canadian Pacific Railway, and that the $6,000 a mile which is devoted now for the construction of another railway, if necessary, may be placed in the position in which it will do most good, viz., placed against the indebtedness of Quebec. But there are difficulties about that. Once the general principle is agreed on, the details have to be settled and then the forces, up to that time tolerably united, are divided, and it is said the Ministerial forces themselves exhibited symptoms of disorganization. In this, as in the other particulars of this scheme, we find proposals to take leaps in the dark; we are to leave this thing to be settled in some shape or other, and left as it is, I dare say it will be a good while before arrangements will be made for this latter $6,000. I have pointed out the railway expenditure of the Provinces which have expended money on railways, and have shown you it bears approximate relation to the population and resources of the various Provinces. I have shown you that other Provinces stood in the same position as Quebec, with reference to this railway expenditure; I have shown you, for example, that the Province of Ontario has, through her municipalities, expended $3,200,000 on railways which are now part of the Canadian Pacific Railway; and I say that in dealing with these lines, dealing with the question of railway expenditure, proposing to recoup Provinces in respect of railway expenditure, the proper, just and equitable mode of dealing with the case is, to place all the Provinces on the same relative footing-to do justice not to one but to all. I have no desire to interfere with the aid it may be necessary to give, in the interests of Confederation at large, to place on a somewhat better footing the finances of Quebec; but whether the hon. gentlemen of that Province agree with me or not, I am prepared to advocate in this House, while I yield what I think just, the claims of justice to all, and I believe that justice to all is not done by these Resolutions. I believe that justice to all requires a wider application and a sounder basis for the application of the principle which the hon. gentleman proposes to incor-porate in our legislation, and I move the following amendment thereto: that the following words be added to the said motion:

"But this House feels bound to express the opinion that Canada, when (as proposed by the said Resolution) recouping of the Provinces for part of the past local expenditure on railway3, should have regard to the past local expenditure in other Provinces on railway8, almost all of which have been declared to be for the general advantage of Canada; and this House regrets that the Government, while proposing a measure of relief to one Province, has not taken steps with a view to a fair and proportionate measure of relief, in respect of local expenditure, in the other Provinces" other Provinces "

Mr. CHAPLEAU. As I do not propose to speak the language of the majority of this House, I must ask hon. members, while exercising my right to address the House in French, to bear with me in patience during the few moments in which I will occupy the attention of the House, and if I speak in the French tongue it is not to have our representation by population in the columns of the Hansard, but to be able to expedite business, by making my remarks in my own tongue, and not in a language with which I am not sufficiently conversant. (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, I will not undertake to answer all the questions that have been raised in this debate by the hon. leader of the Opposition. According to his custom, he has included in the discussion of the subject on which we are engaged the whole range of questions which it comprises, and has dealt with them in a manner no less lucid than comprehensive. I will leave to those of my colleagues to whom that task belongs to reply to the charge of undue pressure exercised by the Govern-ment, according to the hon. member for West Durham, on the representatives of the Province of Quebec. I would, nevertheless, inform my hon. friend that he has revealed member "the Government awaited with anxiety, when the great Pacific question came before the House, the attitude which a portion of the members would assume regarding it. Every one was a king what would happen; Parliament was not sitting with its ordinary number of members, and the denouement was anxiously expected. After interviews between the Ministers of the Quebec Government and the members of that Province-after interviews between the heads of the Canadian Government and the representatives of the Province of Quebec-the result was announced. Faces brightened up, peace was restored to the camp, and the Pacific Bill was voted." My hon friend should have said that it was on the side of the Opposition that the faces of members betrayed most anxiety. The smallest rumours that escaped through closed doors were eagerly caught up, and whatever secrets were thus exposed were immediately transmitted by telegraph, corrected and enlarged, to the great organ of the Liberal party in Ontario. On one occasion that journal announced that the members of the Province of Quebec had thrown themselves into the open arms of the leader of the Opposition who, in return, promised them an era of prosperity before unheard of in that Province. But the denouement soon destroyed that hope; the loan was voted and the faces of the Opposition fell accordingly. It is a wonder the Globe did not come out in mourning the next day, as if for the loss of a political friend. Certainly its cherished dream had faded away into thin air : for the fact is that all those conjectures were false. The Conservative party had remained faithful and united as in the past. The leader of the Opposition may be assured that the Quebec Conservatives were unanimous in following the Government on that great question. It is true that a certain number of members had asked that all the questions connected with the Pacific should be settled at the same time, and it was quite legitimate for them to enquire if the Government had the intention, not to purchase their votes, but to make good a claim which had been made constitutionally by the Quebec Cabinet and which had already been for several days before the Privy Council. What! Mr. Speaker, will the hon. chief of the Opposition deny that the Quebec members had a right to ask just treatment for the Province that they represent ! Do such rights belong only to the other Provinces ? Did not British Columbia submit to the Government the questions in which it was concerned, and who hesitated to acknowledge its right to ask if the Government had given them due attention, and had come to a decision regarding them? Did not the Globe cry out indignantly because the grievances of Manitoba had not been definitely redressed when the hon. Premier of that Province left Ottawa for Winnipeg? What reason is there why the same consideration should not be shown to the Province of Quebec? That Province had laid its claim before the Dominion authorities. The Federal Government had concluded not only to give it attention, but to take it into favourable consideration, and that is the business which occupied the attention of the Quebec members. No, Mr. Speaker; the hon. member for West Durham has no reason to reproach either the members of our Province or the Government for their action in the circumstances. The hon. member, as I have just said, looked at the question from every point of view. I will only answer him on one point which has been raised in this debate, and that is, in my eyes, a most essential one. It is embodied in the motion which the hon member has just placed in your hands. It is a captions motion, directed evidently against the Province of Quebec, and all the more dangerous as it asks the members of the other Provinces to refuse Quebec what is legitimately its due, by giving the representatives of the other parts of the Dominion to understand that what the hon. member calls a great favour on the part of the Federal Government should federation, by absorbing rights that justly belong to the be shared with all the Provinces. This motion is most in- Provinces. I believe it my duty to protest against the sidions, as while seeming to be based on a principle of equity charge. It has been said that the leader of the Govern-for all the Provinces, it is really directed against the Province of Quebec, whose claim is qualified as extravagant and the result of maladministration. This motion, Mr. Speaker. will not be more successful than those which the hon. member has already presented, and to which the House has done justice. The leader of the Opposition said that in all the Provinces there had been an excess of zeal in the construction of railroads, and that several Provincial Governments had, in their desire for progress, exposed the financial means at their disposal. Mr. Speaker, I would not on this occassion have broken the silence which I maintained since [have been a member of the House, that is, during the almost two years that I have been one of Her Majesty's advisers in the Privy Council of Canada. In keeping a silence, which is not at all my wont, I must have disappointed the expectations of my friends and no less the curiosity of my opponents. More than one person must have said: What has become of that former vivacity, that asperity in debate which provoked combat rather than remain at rest? Others may have thought it the result of calculation. No one that I know of is likely to have attributed it to fear, and with that conclusion I am satisfied. I am the youngest member of the Council, and I think it my duty to practice here what I preach elsewhere-subordination. I have kept silence, which is useful at times, but I must say, it is also tiresome. To day, if I think it right to engage in this discussion, it is because the question that occupies us is one that interests the Province whose affairs I administered as head of the Cabinet for more than two years. This question not only interests the Province from which I come, and which I more especially represent in the Privy Council, but it also concerns not a little the administration of which I was the head. I would gladly set aside my own personality in the observations which I have to make. But I cannot do so. My name and my administration are constantly coming up in the discussion of this question The hon. member for West Durham has asked for the reason of the Quebec claim. He said the source of it seemed to him to be the extravagance of the Government that had the direction of this Province; and if he has not brought forward all the objections that are made in the press, perhaps some of his friends may do so. I think it my duty to reply to the attacks that have been made and which have not only stirred up, but, it may be, deceived public opinion. During the last eighteen months there is no charge that could be brought against an Administration that has not been preferred against that of which I was the head, especially in relation to that question of railways which is now before us. In the press I have been subjected to all kinds of ill treatment, not only by my natural enemies, who are logically impelled by their position to make war against those who differ from them, but even in the circles where I had reason to expect to find friends. The Province of Quebec has a right to the subsidy which the Government gives it, because it has constructed, at a great expense, a line of railway which, sooner or later, must be the continuation of the Pacific to the ocean. But the expenses thus incurred are not the only causes of the deficit in the Quebec Budget; other causes which I will enumerate have also contributed to that result. I will even go further, and say that the Province of Quebec has more right to the consideration, to the spirit of justice, of the members of the other Provinces, than any other portion of the Dominion. Before entering on this subject, Mr. Speaker, let me be permitted to make a protest against on of the accusations made by the member for West Durham-an accusation which has been for some time made a pretext for attacks on the Government of Canada-the accusation of centralizing, not only all the forces, but even all the powers of the members of the Con-ment, the leader of the Conservative party, entertained ideas of centralization—was inclined, in fact, towards legislative union, and yet he protested eloquently against these very tendencies himself not very long since. "How could I," said he, "almost at the close of my political career, after having created the Confederation as the solution of political agitations so lively and so dangerous to the whole nation, destroy with my own hands the fabric erected with the toil of so many years?" How, we may well repeat, could that old leader, held in veneration by all, destroy the glorious work which he accomplished in and for the country? How could he sacrific his reputation and the right which he has won to the gratitude of future generations destined to see in him the founder of a great nation on this continent? How could he wilfully prove recreant to the mission which he undertook, and so well discharged, by demolishing his own edifice? No, Mr. Speaker. And the best reply to such a charge is found in the generous, liberal and paternal measure which is just now before the House, and which, by aiding the Provinces in their material development, furnishes new guarantees for their autonomy. If he had been disposed to force the Provinces to part with some of their political rights in exchange for material advantages, the moment could not have been better chosen. He had only to refuse them what they asked and which he now so generously grants them. The hon. member for Durham said that it was, perhaps, time to think of revising the Constitution, so as to obtain for the different Provinces a political compromise by the creation of conditions more advantageous. I think, Mr. Speaker, that instead of ac-cepting that proposal, it is the duty of each of us to repudiate it as an innovation, dangerous and menacing to the rights of the Provinces. On any occasion that presented itself, I believe that the Ministry was found repudiating any centralizing tendency. For my own part, I have been accused of being too federalist or anti-centralizing. I have not been too much; I have merely been sufficiently so. I am one of those who think that the autonomy of each Province is one of the most solid foundations of the Confederation. When I was Premier of Quebec, I was charged, strange to say, When with a disposition to yield to the Federal power what ought to belong to the Provinces, and since I have been in the Dominion Cabinet I have somehow had the name, in certain quarters, of being too devoted to Provincial institutions, and not being in harmony with my colleagues on the question of Federal authority. Well, Mr. Speaker, when I had the direction of affairs in Quebec, I was opposed to all doctrines that jeopardized the peace among the different groups that constitute our Confederation. Now that I am a Privy Counconstitute our Confederation. Now that I am a Privy Coun-cillor, I consider it my duty to respect the interests of the in a profound national sentiment. We must not forget Provinces, whose harmony with each other forms the firmest i that it is with that exaggeration of the national feeling, guarantee of vitality and focundity in the central power. that it is by the confidence of nations in their own star, If, when I was at Quebec, I contemplated my duties as a that they have become great in the world, while citizen of Canada, having come to Ottawa I did not forget the system of blackening one's country has never that the Federal compact was the art from which none could, without sacrilege, remove the sacred tables on which are inscribed the rights and liberties of the Provinces, made one by intelligent patriotism. That is my political programme, and I have never had any other, nor shall I complain if they accuse me of practising it. That sentiment of Provincial autonomy is one which calls for distrust, in so far as being natural and legitmate, it may easily lead us to an exaggeration which might have deplorable consequences. And yet we must not repudiate it; far from it. But to avoid falling into exaggeration, it behooves every member of this House, from whatever part of the Dominion he may come, to study the different needs of each of the Provinces, and always to bear in mind that the other Provinces have as much right as his own to the protection of the central power. The Government of Canada, Mr. Speaker, is right in giving to each Province of the Dominion as much latitude as possible in the exercise of its rights, and whenever the assembled Sir George Cartier in 1872, in connection with the Pacific Mr. CHAPLEAU.

members have been asked to favour, by energetic action, the general interests of the country, the co-operation of all the Provinces has never been wanting. The loan to the Pacific, of which the hon. member for West Durham has spoken, is the most speaking evidence of the fact. It was a bold measure on the part of the Government. The Ministers never said to the members that the sacrifices asked were not most important, as touching the resources of the Dominion. Neither the leader of the Government nor the proposer of the Bill denied but it was one of those pressing necessities that called for an appeal to the generosity of all the Provinces. And if that measure overcame all the obstacles which it encountered, it was because the Government could depend upon a party which is as intelligent as it is loyal. By the adoption of that measure, the Government wished to prove to our neighbours across the frontier that this country does not fear the financial machinations of Wall street brokers, and that when the Government of Canada makes an appeal to the intelligence and patriotism of the Provinces, it finds a faithful echo, whenever the object is to maintain the credit of the nation and the honour of the The leader of the Government has been Government. accused of endangering the existence of the nation by imposing upon it, by such legislation, a burden which it was unable to bear. He has been told that he was mistaken in his estimate of the resources of the country when he thought them capable of extinguishing so enormous a debt. But he was not mistaken, or if he was, it was on the right side of the account, on the side of hope, of confidence, of ideas of progress; and it is with such ideas, with such hope and confidence, that a people becomes great. I prefer that he who has the direction of a nation's destinies should err in the direction of its greatness, by showing an exaggerated sense of the national progress, to seeing a people cramped and held back by a policy of timidity and distrust. That policy fears no comparison with that of the Opposition. On the one hand, the aim is greatness, prosperity, national happiness, while on the other it is a mean peddling calculation and a belittling of the country's resources rather than a launching out on the broad path of progress. Nations grow great by confidence in the future. There are different expressions in the vocabulary of different nations for rendoring the same idea. Thus, in France there is chauvinism, in England there is jingoism, while our neighbours have their spread-eagleism. In other words, what is meant is the national pride and confidence in their own civilizing mission of the British people; the optimism of the French, and the vaunting go-aheadism of the Yankee. Those are and anything bankruptcy led to but ruin. It is a long time now since the claims of the Province of Quebec were first presented to the Federal Government, although the member for West Durham affects to regard the question as a new one. The demand, it is true, was not previously invested with that official character which it has to-day, but it has not the less occupied the attention both of the present Government and their predecessors. My hon, friend is strangely mistaken if he thinks the claim of the Province of Quebec only originated in the difficulties of the Government during the present Session. My first duty, when I took in hand the reins of power at Quebec, was to insist on the Federal Government granting compensation to Quebec for the sacrifices incurred by the construction of what was destined to be the most important link in the Pacific Railway. My hon. friends of the other side can hardly forget the defeat which they brought upon terminus queetion. Sir George Cartier, at that time the colleague of the present Premier, openly declared, in the electoral campaign of that year, that the Pacific terminus was the harbour of Montreal. I did not forget those declarations, when on the 13th of May, 1880, I addressed an official memorial to the Federal Government, claiming its co-operation in the cost of constructing that road. It was not a refusal, but an encouragement that Quebec then received. Our demand was not secret, for the hon. Mr. Robertson, at that time Treasurer of the Province, said, in his Budget Speech of June 16th, 1880: "The Quebec Cabinet has made representations to the Federal Government with regard to our railroad; we have represented to the Federal Government that it had contributed $12,000 per mile to the construction of a part of the Canada Central Railroad, in Ontario, at the expense of our Province as well as of the others; that the line will form part of the Canadian Pacific; that the Intercolonial was built and other lines purchased in the Maritime Provinces for their special advantage, also at our common expense; that Manitoba, the great west, and British Columbia, must have the Canadian Pacific to open up their territories, and that it will be likewise built at the general expense; that other Provinces had benefited, and would still benefit by lines for which we had con-tributed; and, moreover, that for the lines built in this Province since 1867, and particularly for the North Shore, destined, as well as the Canada Central, to form part of the Canadian Pacific, we did not receive a single cent, although we had thus contributed to lines in the other Provinces. We have accordingly made those representations to the Federal Government. I insist that we have as much right to be aided at Ottawa for the cost of our railway as the Canada Central had. The building of that line may be advantageous and, no doubt, is so to the North Shore Railway, but this latter is of equal necessity, as it offers the shortest and most direct route from the west to the ports of St. John and Halifax, and has equal rights to a sudsidy from the Federal authorities. We therefore wish one of two things; either that the Dominion take over the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental Railway, or that we be paid a subsidy per mile equal to that paid to the Canada Central. Those questions are now under consideration at Ottawa, and we await a decision. My opinion, after careful deliberation, is that we are sure to succeed." And Mr. Robertson still further emphasized this demand in his speech of May 30th, 1881:

"I also said last year that the Quebec Government had memorialized that cf Ottawa that justice be rendered us in the matter of the provincial railway. It cannot be doubted that the sister Province of Ontario received from the Federal Government, at the expense of the other Provinces, subsidies for the construction of railways which were not granted to Quebec. (Hear, hear.) In this respect we have not rereived justice from the Federal Government, and we are not disposed to leave the matter in its present unsatisfactory position. It may be recalled that the Hom. Wr. Mackenzie, when be was Premier of the Dominion, replied to a deputation asking for the development of railways in Quebec the same subsidy that had been granted to Ontario, that our Province ought to receive and should receive, the desired aid."

And since then, the Federal Government must have perceived that the Province of Quebec had no intention of allowing its rights to be sacrificed. There had been recrimination. Some had gone so far as to say that the Province had no right to such an indemnity, because it had been too extravagant, because its Governments had shown themselves unworthy of such assistance. I will not reply to personal questions addressed to Administrations, but I will reply to those who say that the Province of Quetec has no right to that just claim. If Quebec's debt were due to maladministration, I would say that those reproaches were just, and that its claims of indemnity ought not to be satisfied. But the contrary is the truth. With less resources, Quebec has done more in the way of progress than any other Province; and, to-day, among the motives that should induce us to vote for the Resolutions, it is well to recall that Lower Canada has always shown broad views, and has never been animated by a sectional spirit. In 1840, with a population of 550,872 souls, and a surplus on hand of $189,306, it accepted the Union, on a footing of equality with Upper Canada, which had a population of 427,441 souls, and a debt of $5,925,779. If I give these figures, Mr. Speaker, it is from no desire to discredit the Province of Ontario, which has succeeded in gaining so enviable a position in the Confederation. It is simply to make good my argument that the Province of Quebec has a right to expect, especially from the Province of Ontario, the liberality, the spirit of justice and consideration which it deserves to have. The figures I have given, Mr. Speaker, I will allow myself to support by a citation, which perhaps, will be new to some members of this House. In 1840 Lord Sydenham wrote these lines:

"In the summer of 1839, Upper Canada was on the eve of banktuptcy. With an annual revenue of not more than £78,000, the interest on the debt amounted to £65,000, and the ordinary expenses of the Government amounted to £55,000, thus leaving an annual deficit of £42.000, while the absence of a seaport deprived it of the power of augmenting its revenues by the ordinary and less onerous means of imposing taxes."

In a letter, written in November, 1859, Lord Sydneham had said:

"The finances are still more dilapidated than is believed in England. The annual deficit is already £75,000, and exceeds the revenue All the jublic works are suspended. The emigration from the Province goes on rapidly and in great numbers The union offers the only means of settling the finances, inasm ch as it will determine England to aid Upper Canada to fill its empty treasury."

Such was the position in 1841, as described by the British Governor, whose name I have just mentioned. It may be said, perhaps, that it is an old story, to say that Upper Canada in 1841 was in a deplotable financial condition, while Lower Canada was advantageously situated. But these facts cannot be effaced from our history, and are not to be condemned to oblivion because they are to our advantage. Since the Union, it is the Province of Octario that has the largest share in the sums expended for public works. Another matter to which it is well to draw attention, is that then, as to-day, almost all the funds-and they were considerable-that were expended for immigration, were given to Ontario, until within the last few years, and The Province of Queto the new Provinces more recently. bee has hardly had any share in those grants; and yet Queboo has never dreamed of making a private grievance out of that partiality. Less daring in busidess than the race beside which it lives, the French race has been impelled by its character in other directions of effort. It has somewhat neglected the material, but it has shown great judg-ment and political insight. Nor must we lose sight of the difficult conditions in which it was developed. At the conquest, the noblesse, all of them who could turn their property into money, and a considerable portion of the clergy, returned to France, so that only a handful of Canadians, without much resources and almost without education, remained in the country. This population had to educate itself in a conquered country, receiving no more from the mother country than the aliment of thought, and unable to receive this aliment from the new metropolis whose lan-guage it did not understand. Only one element of strength was left to the people, the few members of the clergy who remained in Canada. But those true shepherds of men were equal to the task. They gathered together the scattered fragments of the decimated community and by their own efforts made and kept them compact and united, Those who speak of the ignorance in which the clergy has kept the Lower Canadians do not know what they say, for it was the clergy who, by dint of onerous sucrifices, founded and maintained our great classical institutions. It was a task, slow, painful, ungrateful, but it gave a sure direction to ideas and morals. Neither zeal nor good-will was wanting to the Canadian clergy; what it suffered from was lack of means and men.

As it was recruited from the population itself, education became general, and manners and ideas improved. Go into our country places, where you will find peace and contentment, and if you consult the registers of the civil authorities you will see that, thanks to the action of the clergy, morality which, in other countries, Catholic as well as Protestant, seems to diminish with the progress of civilization, has followed an upward path, until to-day it has reached a point of remarkable purity. And now that the task of the clergy has attained such a success, and that we can boast of having joined with the sister Provinces in the domain of education, it does not hesitate to throw itself into the incvement of industrial progress in which the others have distanced it. Needless to say that I share with all my heart the praises accorded to that great promoter of railroads, to that apostle of colonization (as clergy and laity have united to call him), who has done so much for our province, Curé Labelle. This digression was necessary to establish my assertion that Quebec, instead of being in the rear, has always, in the domain of ideas, answered to the first appeal, and through a pure spirit of chivalry has defended the great projects with more energy than material interests. During the crisis from 1860 to 1864, when the two great Provinces were waging war against each other, Lower Canada had only to persist in order to win back her liberty of action by separation from Upper Canada. But it could only have obtained liberty at the expense of its own expansion, and so, setting aside the sectional spirit, it entered boldly into the consideration, notwithstanding the dangers that might arise from a majority. With that majority it ventured to ally itself, though neither their language nor laws nor character were alike. The rage and struggle in Upper Canada against French domination might have its reaction on our part, exciting the prejudice of some and the fears of others. But Lower Canada, strong in its vitality, and having faith in his future, would not allow these sectional interests, however dear they might be, to be an obstacle to the formation of a great Canadian nationality. When the seat of Government was decided to be fixed in Upper Canada there was scarcely a mumur. When the Intercolonial question came up, Lower Ca-na'a never thought of opposing a project that placed twenty millions at the disposal of the Maritime Provinces. The first cries in favour of the Pacific came from Lower Canada, although it was to cause the expenditure of scores of millions outside of the Province of Quebec, and although the road was to open up a territory that would soon be its formidable rival. The policy of Protection originated in the Province of Quebec, at a time when almost all Ontario held the British views on the question. The Province of Quebec has, in fact, been the centre, the strength, the life of all the great ideas that have made the Canadian Confederation prosperous. I mention these things to prove that the Province of Quebec has from the first understood the Constitutional regime, that it is worthy of the confidence which the metropolis placed in it, in granting the boon of responsible government, and that it has neither retarged the progress of the sister Provinces nor been in any way a cause of regret to them. Its loyalty to the British Crown has been unalterable. It defended the British flag in 1775 and in 1812, with all the more disinterestedness, that it never received a cent for its services. If the other Provinces are proud of their spirit of initiative, of their enterprise, Quebec may be proud of its ideas. Its public men have ever, before the adoption of a great scheme, given the keynote that indicated its possibility and expediency. They have been the pioneers of politics, as their missionaries have been the pioneers of exploration and civilization on the American continent. On the coasts of the Pacific, as in the far retreats of the west, from Louisiana to Alaska, you still find, in the names of its lakes and rivers, the old French names of bold adventurers who were first on the ground ; and, in like manner, in the region | surpluses :-

of politics, all the stages in the conquest of the liberty which we now enjoy have been make i by French Canadian names. Is it surprising that, with this chivalrous character, this abnegation that has made it ever loth to claim its just share, this dominant breadth of view, so conspicuous in its whole career, Lower Canada, when inspired by the sudden desire for railway development, should have thrown itself into the work of construction, with characteristic ardour ? The difficulties in which the Province finds itself to day prove nothing against its aptitude. It was never favoured like Ontario. If the Province of Quebec had been in an ordinary conditions, it would not have needed so many sacrifices, and it might have followed the other Provinces without exhaustion, as it did before 1841. From the conquest until that date, there had been spent in Upper Canada $5,592,746, and in Lower Canada $4,253,436. The works that were finished by the Canadian Government in Upper Canada, from 1841 to 1867, cost a total of $30,029,063; those of Lower Ca ada for the same period cost only $20,335,353, making a difference in favour of Upper Canada of $9,693,710. During the same period the other works constructed, either by the Imperial Government or by other means, amounted to $84,828,450 in Upper Canada and to $37,336,301 in Lower Canada, showing a difference against the latter of $47,492,149. These authentic figures are taken from the Sessional documents of 1867. To these statements we may add the following :-

Balance in hand in Lower Canada in 1481 Debt of Upper Canada assumed by the Union	$189,306 •5,925,779
· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
Total	$6,115,085

I may say, therefore, without tear of contradiction, that in 1867 Upper Canada had, over Lower Canada, the following enormous advantages:—

Surplus received from Lower Canada and debt of Upper Canada	$5,115,085 of Upper Canada Surplus of works completed in Upper Canada by the Government	9,693,710
Surplus of works constructed by the Imperial Government or by private capital	47,492,149
Plus excess of works before 1841	$63,300,954 1,339,310
Balance against Lower Canada	$64,640,251

Such are the enormous advantages that, in 1-67, Upper Canada was found to have over Lower Canada. Since Confederation there was spent by the Government, up to June, 1882:

OTABLC

QUADRU.
Railways (Intercolonial)	$ 8,400,000 11,000,000
	$19,400,000
ONTABIO.
Railways Canais	$13,100,000 21,000,000
Add since 1882 :	$34,100,000
Works on the Pacific, in Ontario	$ 2,500,000
Quebec	$36,600,000 19,400,000
Difference in favour of Ontario	$17,200,000

Seventeen millions! An important factor in the financial economy of a young Province! Mr. Speaker, the Government has not, in the ordinary management of its affairs, been convicted of extravagance. Since Confederation, in fact, with a subsidy of over three hundred thousand dollars less than that of Ontario, with an administration more difficult and more costly than Ontario, it has shown the following surpluses :—

1867-68	203,598
1868-69	350,913
1869-70	79,091
1870-71	57,979
1871-72	106,756
1872-73	268,104
1873-74	116,189
	1,182,630

I might add to the amount the sum of $625,000 which had remained of the Federal subsidy itself, in the hands of the Canadian Government, and was paid into the Provincial Treasury as follows :---

Drawn by the Joly Government i	n 1878–79	500,000
And by the Chapleau Governmen	t in 1879–80,	125,0 00

$625,000

Never have the ordinary expenses exceeded the ordinary revenue in the Province of Quebec. On the contrary, there has always been a considerable balance on the side of receipts. I will have occasion, later on, to examine the circumstances which imposed a debt of $19,000,000 on the Province. I only make allusion to it now, in order to observe that, were it not for the obligation to pay interest on that debt, a charge which has nothing to do with ordinary expenses, the Province would always have maintained a surplus. The four or five figures following show this to be the case :--

Froin 1867 to 1882— Expenses Receipts	 $33,968,413
Apparent deficit Interest on debt from 1875 to 1882	and the second se
Real surplus	Statement of the second se

The Province has incurred an onerous debt, because it stood in absolute need of railroads. It must not be forgotten that in 1867 however, Quebec had only the following lines :---

	Miles.
Grand Trunk, from Rivière du Loup to Montreal	.290.50
Richmond to the trontier	. 55 00
Montreal to Lancaster	. 4 4·00
Arthabasca to Doucet Landing	. 35.00
Montreal to frontier (via Caughnawaga)	 40 .00
St. Lambert to Rouses Point	. 43 00
Carillon to Grenville	. 12.75
Joliette	. 12:00
Stanstead, Shefford and Chambly	. 43.00

Total...... 575.25

Those were all the railroads that Quebec had at that time. As for the Province of Ontario, let us see what railways it had at the same date. On consulting the public documents for 1867, we find that Upper Canada had then, of the Grand Trunk, 451 miles, and 912 miles of the following lines, through different portions of the Province :---

Ottawa & Prescott	5 4 00
Brickville & Ottawa	86 40
Vobourg & Peterborough
Peterborough & Lake Chemung
Port Hope, Lindsay & Beaverton	66 ·50
Northern
Erie & Onitario	17.00
Welland	25.00
Graat Western	363-25
London & Port Stanley	25.00
Buffalo & Lake Huron	160 00
Total	912.00

Thus, we have in all a length of 1,393 miles of railway for Ontario, against the 575 miles Quebec possessed, giving a surplus of 818.14. It was in these circumstances that the Province of Quebec had to make encrifices amounting to nearly $13,000,000 for railways. My hon. friend the member for West Durham has quoted at random, it would seem, the sacrifices made by each Province for its railways. He regretted not to have complete and exact statistics on the subject. I have endeavoured to supply the want, as far as regards Quebec. During the fifteen years, from July 1st, 1>67, and July 1st, 1882, the Province of Quebec subsidized 1,678 miles of railway belonging to private companies, the total amounting to $4,146,164.94 in money, and 5,829,000 acres of land. In estimating the value of those lands, on which my hon. friend would not put any estimate, at $1 an acre-and that is certainly not exaggerated-the total of the subsidies granted by the Province for the encouragement of railroad construction by private companies, up to the 1st of July, 1882, amounted to $9,987,038.99. At that date there had been paid of the subsidies in money a sum of $2,410,441.54, so that there remained due to those sudsidized companies $1,757,597.45 in money and 5,829,000 acres of land. These statistics relate only to railways built by private companies. To those we must add the amount paid up to the 1st of July, 1882, for the construction of the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental, namely, $12,537,980.48 (more than a quarter of a million has been added to that amount since then). As I have already said, on the 1st of July, 1882, there remained due of the subsidies granted to those companies $1,757,597.45 in money and 5,829,000 acres of land, or in all, a balance representing $7,586,597.45. By adding these different sums, we shall find that at the above-mentioned date the amount of the debt contracted by the Province of Quebec for the construction of railways was, if one adds the interest on the sums paid, a total of $25,347,542.14, thus divided:

Making in all	$25,847,542 14
Making a total of	$19,518,542 14
Land, at $1 an acre	5,829,000 00
Money really paid	$17,760,944 69
Subsidies to pay	1,755,597 45

These figures clearly prove that the different Governments that have administered the affairs at Quebec since 1867 have not shrunk from sacrifices in order to place the Province in a position worthy of itself, worthy of the role which it is called to play in the Confederation, and to prevent it being left behind in the march of general progress. Those railways have, moreover, stimulated, in a powerful manner, the commerce and resources of the Province, and to this cause is, in a large measure, due the progress and rapid increase of $103,540,000 or 59 per cent. in the value of property, from 1857 to 1881. In the former year the figuro was $174,978,174, and this had increased to $278,482,068 in 1881. In the summer of 1882 there were in the Province of Quebec 1,812 miles of railroad, or one mile for every 104 square miles, and every 750 inhabitants. The following table indicates the position occupied by Quebec in this respect compared with the other Provinces of the Dominion:

The proportion of the Province of Quebec compared with the other Provinces was as follows : Prince Edward Island. 198 miles of railway; Nova Scotia, 608 miles; New Brunswick, 876 miles; Ontario, 3,843 miles; Quebec, 1,812 miles; Manitoba, 504 miles; British Columbia, 50 miles, and the Territories, 226 miles, making at that date a total for the Dominion of Canada of 8,147 miles of railroad. But, said my honourable friend, following those who stoke before him, why does not the Province of Quebec tax itself. Mr. Speaker, when Quebec entered the Confederation it was not to make its position worse. It was, on the contrary, to be assured of its autonomy, institutions, language, laws. Does not all that constitutes autonomy-the character and habits of the people make part of it. Direct taxation is then opposed to the feelings of the people of Quebec. Ill treated under their old French governors, who transplanted to these shores the absolutist monarchy of Europe, without the restraint which the kings there thought it their duty to impose upon it; later on taxed under the military regime and the half-constitutional regime that succeeded it, until 1841, our population imbibed such an aversion to taxation that to-day it has become a part of their character. It has been said that we should, as they do in Upper Canada, tax the municipalities for expenses of justice. Why adopt a plan which would leave the impression that Confederation had made our position more intolerable than it was before? In 1866, before Confederation, Upper Canada had, for the expenses of justice, with its excess of population, only $336,257; Lower Canada had already $413,903. The administration was common to both Provinces which formed the united Province of Canada; and still the expenses of administering justice in Lower Canada were much more considerable. It was concluded that circumstances, or the nature of our organization, rendered the administration of justice more costly. The reason is not far to seek. There is first, the collection of the population and of capital in the large cities and in the seaports, which tend to considerably increase such expenses. Although the population of Ontario is larger than that of Quebec, circumstances multiply business in the latter Province in a manner out of proportion to its population. Almost all the commerce of Ontario has t) pass through the Province of Quebec, and to stop on the way at Montreal or Quebec. The consequence is a series of transactions, insurances, transports, storage and other business movements tending to cause disagreements and judiciary expenses. And, independently of these transitory causes of lawsuits, there is the amount of imports and exports in each Province. The imports of Quebec, according to recent returns, were $53,105,257, and of Ontario, $41,690,760. The exports from Quebec were $38,972,121, and those of Oniario, $40,765,921, making a total for Quebec of $92,077,378, and for Ontario of $82,456,681, a surplus in favour of Quebec of $9,620,697. The capital embarked in oceanic navigation, consisting of from thirteen to fourteen lines of steamships, and which is almost exclusively centred in Montreal, and to some extent at Quebec, amounts to a least $15,000,000, and creates a business of at least $10,000,000 a year, the freight alone amounting to $1,000,000 per annum. The capital of the banks imposes on the Province of Quebec another class of business in the courts, of considerable importance, as may be seen by the following statement :--

QUEBEC.

Capital of Banks and reserve fund	45,000,000
Bank deposits	55,000,000
Discount and loans	81,000,000
ONTARIO.
Capital of banks and reserve fund	525,000,000
Bank deposits	40,000,000
Discount and loans	62,000,000
SURPLUS.

We obtain, therefore, on these points alone, the following statement of business which Ontario has nothing to meet and which creates considerable judiciary expenses:

Mr. CHAPLEAU.

Thus, Mr. Speaker, the general expenses of the Province of Quebec are necessarily greater than in the other Provinces, and it is not surprising if it is not in the same financial condition as the other Provinces are. We must also bear in mind that Quebec is inhabited by a mixed population, and that there is thus occasion for more considerable general expenses in order to satisfy the majority. We have:

For the Legislative Council from 1867 to 1883	$680,000
For the same period for parliamentary translations, printing in both languages, double subsidies to education and charity (the last from 1867 to 1883)	700,00 0

Total..... $1,350,000 I will not speak here, Mr. Speaker, of the position which we assumed by arbitration after 1867. In fact, on the division of the assets and liabilities in 1867, it would seem that the least that should have been done was to give us each in the same proportion. Far from that, however, our proportion of assets was augmented, so that our debts, the assets being deducted, stood thus :

Onter o 3,107,432 When the Federal Government assumed our debts, in 1879, it allowed :

For On ario's debt Amount due	$5,013,608 3,107,432
Surplus of assets for Ontario For Quebce's debt Amount due	4,487,179
Surplus of assets for Quebec Difference in favour for Optario	$ 293,759 $1,612,527

Then, Quebec receives only $1,014,712 of subsidy against $1,333,563 which Ontario receives, or a difference of $318,-000 a year. Now the expenses of administration are the same. The expenses of government do not increase in exact ratio to the increase of population. We have, therefore, to contend with three disadvantages: surplus necessary for the administration of justice, $100,000; surplus for the Legislative Council and expenses necessitated by the use of two languages in parliamentary procedure, $55,000. If we add the d fierence in the subsidy $318,000, we have every year, in the Province of Quebec, for the carrying on of the Government and the working of our institutions, an excess of expense of over $503,000. This amount is sufficient to show that in the respective situations of Ontario and Quebec since Confederation, our Province has been placed in a position of inferiority, which gives it a right to look for the good will, if not the liberality, of the other Provinces. The debt contracted in the Province of Quebec during the period, from 1873 to 1883, is here set forth:

Loan of	· 1874	$5.893.333
	1876	4.185.335

	1880	4.275.853
"	1880 1882	3.000.000
"	1883

$18,854,521

The dates indicate the obvious responsibility of each Government. The Government of Mr. DeBourcherville augmented the debt by $8,078,668; the Government of Mr. Joly, $3,000,000, and that of which I had the direction by $7,775,853. Such is the responsibility of the DeBoucherville, Joly and Chapleau Governments respectively, in regard to the railway debt. The following sums were paid for the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental Railway by the Governments specified:

The total expended for the year ending June 30, 1880, was $268,129, but there was a sum of $68,129 chargeable to the Chapleau Government, which came into power at the close of 1879:

I have not to justify the Administrations of Messrs. DeBoucherville and Joly, which are not attacked, but I may justify myself against the attacks that have been made on me, and which have served as a pretext for those who are really opposed to granting Quebec her claims. The expenses of the Administration of which I had the direction, the employment of all the sums that were borrowed under it, have been verified dollar for dollar. Besides, the accounts and statements of these expenses are at Quebec and accessible to everyone. I defy any person to point out the expenditure of a cent that was not legitimate and profitable. But I will spare this House the enumeration of figures that would weary it. Nevertheless, I had thought it proper to bring them together in such a way as to be able to give any desired information in the nost complete manner possible. I will, for the present, content myself with a mere recapitulation. There was paid for the railroad:

For completing the works, for rolling stock and furnishings (the last having added $1,200,000 to the value of the road, that valuation having been accepted by the Pacific Company). Mr. Speaker, the Cabinet of which I was head has been blamed for having sold the railroad, and the hon. member for West Durham has said that the Quebes Government had robbed the road between Quebec and Montreal of its character as part of the Pacific Railroad, by selling it to another company. Moreover, I have been accused of having sold the road on terms disadvantageous to the Province. Let us first discuss the former charge. I must say, Mr. Speaker, that from the very beginning of my parliamentary career, since my earliest utterances in the Legislative Assembly, I have had two object in view : I made up my mind that the Province of Quebec should be a manufacturing as well as an agricultural community. A country which for five months in the year is covered with snow cannot be exclusively agricultural. Agriculture should always have the first place, for the returns of the soil are the surest and the most considerable, and their abundance or their scarcity determines whether the year shall be one of prosperity or of general crisis. But I always said that in the Province of Quebee the efforts of legislation should be turned towards the development of its industrial and manu- from it with all haste, fearing a total loss. I regret that the facturing wealth. We have a country of splendid water hon, member for Montreal West is not in his seat, as he powers. In the advantages which it thus offers for industrial operations, it is second to none. All that it needed was railways, and these it behooved us to give it at any cost. Another object that I had in view was that the region north of the St. Lawrence, even as far as the Laurentides, a region which if ever evil days should come again, may be the bulwark of our liberties, should be developed and connected with the great centres of population. For that end it was necessary to build a railway from Quebec to Ottawa, along the north shore of the great rivers St. Lawrence and Ottawa, with branches towards the interior. I differed, however, from those who thought that the Government of Quebec should undertake that work. When, in 1875, the Hon. Mr. DeBoucherville undertook the construction of the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental Railway, I thought, with one of the companies that commenced that enterprise, that the Quebec Government ought not to assume charge of it. At the time I wrote an article, which I have since had occasion to quote in the House, asking that the construction of the road should be left to the Northern Colonization Railroad Company, of which Sir Hugh Allan was president. The Hon. Louis Beaubien, who has changed his mind, was then of the same opinion as I was. We asked the Government to give an additional subsidy of $1,000,000 to each company, rather than undertake the construction of the road itself. I do not mention this to exonerate myself from the responsibility resting on the DeBoucherville and succeeding Governments. My advice was not followed, and then, seeing the generous effort made for the construction of the road, I supported the DeBoucherville Administration, and to-day I take, as I took then, upon me, both by vote and utterance, all the responsibility of the construction of the line. When the question of the advisability of keeping and operating the road came before my Government, I said, as I still say, that it was better to sell it. I declared that a Government could not administer a road so as to make the income proportionate to the capital spent in its construction. In the General Elections of 1881 I enunciated these views, saying that the road should be sold, and that the Government should sell it. I described the method I thought the sale should be effected, bv which and stated what price I would accept. As soon as the Legislature met I submitted my plan for the sale, and a discussion arose in the press, which is not yet ended, and of which more of passion than of reason is brought to bear in the argument against my policy. I will not go back to those struggles of the past. It is not my desire to recriminate against those who have wrongly interpreted my policy, my words and my acts. Nor will I weary this House with the recital of all the charges, more or less malevolent, of which I have been the aim. Jealousy and animosity bore their natural fruit, but I would forget all that. A statesman who would serve his country must not bear rancour for the contests of yesterday. A politician who cannot stifle his resentment is unworthy of his position. Let it suffice for him that he has the consciousness of having done his duty. There is one remark I would like to make in defence of the course which has called forth such bitter comments. It is this: The sale of the road which I was able to make-one portion to the Pacific Company, another to a syndicate-was made on conditions not only advantageous, but such as could only occur at the time when the sale was effected. I may say without vainglory that I had the good fortune to com-plete that transaction just at the moment when all the American railway companies were quoted at their highest figures-at a moment when rival companies believed the acquisition of a line to be a fortune for the shareholders who acquired it. Three months after the sale the members of the syndicate that bought the east end of the line and had invested some thousands of dollars in the enterprise, withdrew could edify us on this point. I said that the Pacific people had refused to buy more than the portion between Montreal and Ottawa. It was a great mistake on their part, and if I were to avail myself of expressions of the hon. Premier, I would say that it was not only a mistake but a blunder. We see some of its consequences to-day. Mr. Speaker, I told those who attacked my Administration, those who imputed bad motives to me, those who condemned my sale, that I would defy them, as I do now, to find a man acquainted with the administration and value of railroads who will say that our road did not bring its full value. Some have retorted, that if the east side, from Montreal to Quebec, had been sold for $4,500,000-$4,000,000 in money and $500,000 in works to be completed-how is it that the purchasers re-sold it to the Grand Trunk with an evident profit of $1,000,000? I must ask the House to pardon me this digression, which is of a personal nature. I am obliged to establish my position before this House and before the country, and I do so to-day, because it is the first opportunity that I have had. When it was said that the part of the road between Quebec and Montreal was sold for $4,000,000 by the Government, and that the purchasers re-sold it for $5,000,000, one thing is lost sight of, and that is that after the sale the purchasers had finished works at Montreal valued at over $100,000, on the road for over $75,000, while at Quebec they had spent $250,000 to change the route and transfer it by getting along the St. Charles. Nor did the objectors state that the purchasing company made the acquisition at the city of Quebec of 600,000 feet of land, that had been offered to my Government at the rate of $1 a foot. It is not surprising then that all those acquiitions and improvements should have increased the value of the road, and that the owners made their estimate in accordance with the fact. Besides, the profit, if it exists, is not a profit in money on the price of the re-sale, but the amount of debentures issued on the roaddebentures whose realization will greatly depend on the state of the market of railway property—debentures, more-over, foreseen in the legislation Act authorizing the sales, and the profit of which was to serve for the completion of the road. In fact, there was no re-sale of the road. Those who control it to-day have only assumed the responsibilities of the debt of the first acquirers towards the Government. They have given, it is true, their guarantees to the deben-tures authorized by the Act, and have assumed the interest by means of a new traffic, augmenting by so much the pro-ductive value of the road. In vain has prejudice tried to play upon the popular credulity. It was well enough that the holders of the bonds, eager to find buyers in the European markets, would not contradict the fabulous value ascribed to them. Once more I repeat, I defy my detractors to find a man competent in railway business to say that the road did not receive the highest price the Government could then obtain, and higher than could be got to-day if the road were in the same condition as when it was sold to the Syndicate. If I take so much time in explaining this matter, it is because circumstances have associated me with the financial destinies of the Province, and that my past share in its affairs identifies me in a manner with its present condition. It would have been well nigh impossible for me to explain the situation of the Province without occasional reference to the Administration which I had the honour to lead before being called to the post which I occupy at present. It must be well known that in all the attacks directed against the Province of Quebec it is the period of my Administration especially that is in question, and I whom they charge with being responsible for the deficits in the Provincial Budget. In fact, it is with this false pretence that my enemies tried to destroy my reputation, and to ruin me in the Parliament where I had obtained a seat. I thought, therefore, Mr. Speaker, that I would not be abusing your good will, and that of my fellow members in this future the latter would be the terminus of the Pacific. House, if I profited by this occasion to vindicate my It is not for me to reproach Ontario for its Mr. CHAPLEAU.

personal honour and political credit in the country. I have nothing to conceal; nothing to fear. I never looked for the approbation of every one. In the numerous and eager political frays of which our Province has been the theatre, we had to take blows as well as give them. I have had my share of wounds, but the only ones that rankled were those inflicted by my own friends. It was my ill-fortune to be attacked in my own camp. I deplore and still regret this division. But I declare that in spite of those attacks, in spite of the natural impatience which they have caused me, there remains in my mind neither bitterness nor resentment. Having never acted through passion, I can speak without bitterness, and it is with the desire and the hope of bringing those who combat me to sentiments more just regarding me that I have entered so minutely into the details of that railway policy on which they have based their attacks. So much for the railway policy of the Quebec Administration of which I was the head, and so much for the position of the Province of Quebec on that question. I have showed that the Province of Quebec, in making that sacrifice, did so to place itself on a level with Ontario, to which the Treasury of United Canada had been so lavish, while it forgot Quebec. The railway policy of our Province was a Federal rather than a Provincial work. Its debt, as shown by the figures which I have laid before the House, was not caused by its bad administration, for, notwithstanding the difficulties under which it laboured, with its more costly administration consequent on the use of two languages, the ordinary expenses have generally been balanced by the receipts, its debt grew to $15,000,000 in the space of ten years by the construction of railways, which give benefit to the commerce of entire Canada and yield revenues to the Canadian Government, without any compen-sation for the Provincial Treasury. Every piece of iron purchased, every instrument imported, every man brought to the Province of Quebec to build that railway, was a profit to the Canadian Government and an expense to Quebec. In such circumstances the Province of Quebec asks only one thing. It asks the Federal authorities to relive Quebec of the burden of that part of its debt which was contracted in the execution of an undertaking essentially Federal in its character. Mr. Speaker, I have no hesitation in saying that, in consideration of what the Quebec Government has done for the Dominion, it merits the indemnity which is offered to it by to-day's measure. My hon. friend, the member for West Durham, tries to maintain that the subsidy given the railroad from Pembroke to Lake Nipissing represents an expenditure in favour of Quebec, the equivalent of which was devoted a couple of years ago and last year to the building of the Gravenhurst and Callander line, which is intended to direct the commerce of the West by the Pacific into the Province of Ontario. I beg to differ from my hon, friend. What was spent on the road from Lake Nipissing to Pembroke was spent in Ontario and serves the local traffic of that Province. According to the argument of the hon. member, the harbour of Montreal would be no profit to the Province of Quebec because its immense trade is to a great extent that of an entrepot. But no, the geographical position is what should guide us in the distribution of public improvements. Moreover, if the territory in dispute between Ontario and Quebec falls ultimately to Ontario, the portion of the Pacific built in that Province will be doubled and its local trade benefited in the same proportion. Even if an indemnity of $12,000 a mile had been given to the Province on the line from Quebec to Montreal, it would not have been unjust. The Government, in its solicitude, would have given a portion of that subsidy, under the form of useful works, to the part of the Province that extends from Montreal to the port of Quebec, with the assurance that in a near demeanour in dealing with this part of the question. I have only tried to appeal to the sense of justice of the members of that Province. I am glad to say that that great Province deserves our admiration and our praise for the immense progress that it has achieved, both to its own credit and to the profit of the whole Dominion, and I am sure that my appeal will not have been made in vain, that we may rely on the good will, the spirit of equity and liberality of those members. And now, Mr. Speaker, I draw to a close, with the remark that the motion of the hon. member for West Durham is one that ought to be rejected by the Ontario members, to whom especially it is addressed, As for the Maritime Provinces, the Government has treated them liberally. Ontario, richer, and better endowed with the fostering help of the last half century, would be lacking in justice if it now told the Government that it would not support its policy unless it received an equivalent to Quebec's subsidy. That Province is wealthy, its Treasury is well filled, and no one is jealous of its properity; but every one has a right to demand that Ontario shall deal in no mean and jealous spirit with the claims of a Province which begs no favours, but only seeks what it is fully justified in seeking. My hon. friend, unless I am mistaken, will not find his sentiments echoed in this House. His proposal may be a good stroke of party management, but it cannot command the sympathy of those who regard the question from the lofty standpoint of a generous and enlightened patriotism. That motion was meant to allure public opinion, by raising sectional prejudices under the disguise of equity. It is essentially unjust in its character, and for that very reason it will be rejected by this House, in favour of the equitable Resolutions which are now submitted.

Mr. LAURIER. (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, I will not attempt to answer the oratio pro domo sua which we have just heard from the hon. Secretary of State. In the first place, the hon. Minister has defended his administration of the affairs of the Province of Quebec from the charge of extravagance. He has continued in the same strain during the whole of his argumentation. In my humble opinion, the time was ill-chosen to make a panegyric upon the ad-ministration of the hon. gentleman. This is neither the time nor the place to discuss the affairs of the Province of Quebec. I do not propose to wash our dirty linen here; it is better to wash his dirty linen at home, and the time and place to discuss the affairs of his administration is not here in Ottawa, but in Quebec. I simply propose to deal with the question now before the House. The hon. Minister has answered, in a rather laconical way, I must admit, to the amendment of the hon. member for Durham (Mr. Blake), and I was astonished, I must say, to find that he had so badly mis-understood the meaning of this amendment. He has dealt with this amendment as though its effect would be the withdrawal of the subsidies granted to the Province of Quebec by these Resolutions. Such is not the object of the amendment. The amendment only asks that the same measure of justice which is dealt out to Quebec, be also extended to the other Provinces, which have the same right to it as Quebec has. The amendment commends itself to the sense of equity and of justice, not only of the members from the Province of Quebec, but also of all the other members from other Provinces which have expended moneys for the construction of railways. The Resolutions begin with the statement that the Government of the Province of Quebec is entitled to an indemnity from this Legislature, because the Province of Quebec has spent a large sum for the construction of a road which, owing to its character, must not be considered as a provincial road, but should be looked upon as a national route. Since the Government has adopted the policy of route. Since the Government has adopted the policy of Pacific line. I have heard other reasons-this is not the aiding the construction of future railways, even of those of only one I have heard-given in the course of the a provincial character, when these railways are, in their debate, in the press, for the subsidy which it is opinion, of a general usefulness, there must be just as good intended to give to day to the Province of Quebec.

reason to say that the Provincial Legislatures who have aided the construction of such railways are entitled to a compensation. But the moment the principle is adopted, it is certainly equitable and just that this principle should not apply to one Province only; it must apply to all the Provinces, which are placed in the same position as the Province of Quebec in that respect. Now, it may be asked, when is a road of a purely local character, and under what circumstances it happens to be of general usefulness to the country. On this point, so far, we have had nothing but the arbitrary statement of the Government, but according to the precedent just established by the Government themselves in the Resolutions now on the Table, it may be said that there are now no more local roads, but that we have now only Federal roads. For instance, when the small road from Lachute to St. Andrews, which only covers a distance of 7 miles, is considered as having such importance that it must be subsidized by the Dominion; when the road between St. Jerome and New Glasgow, which is only 6 or 7 miles long, is also of such importance that it must be subsidized, it follows that there are no more local roads, but that all railways, without exception, must be considered as roads in the interest of the Dominion. Mr. Speaker, Quebec is not the only Province which has granted subsidies to lines of railways. Ontario, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Manitoba have all equally subsidized local lines within the limits of their territory. It is now proposed to give a compensation to the Government of the Province of Quebec for the aid granted by that Government to lines of railways in its own territory. The hon. member for Durham simply asks, by his amendment, that the same justice be dealt out to Ontario, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Manitoba, and that it should not be given to Quebec only. Can there be any reason why this justice should not be dealt out to these Provinces as well as to the other? For my part, I do not object to a subsidy being granted to Quebec, nor does the hon. member for Durham, but we ask that the same measure of justice which is dealt out to Quebec be also dealt out to the other Provinces.

Mr. HOUDE. (Translation.) It has been dealt out to them before this. There is all the difference.

Mr. LAURIER. (Translation.) It has been dealt out to them before this. In what manner?

Mr. HOUDE. (Translation.) My hon. friend asks in what manner? I shall tell him: It is through the millions which have been expended in Manitoba and British Columbia, through the millions which have been expended in the Maritime Provinces, on the important branches of the Intercolonial Railway; in Ontario, on the Canada Central, and then on the branch railway from Gravenhurst to Callander.

Mr. LAURIER. (Translation.) If the hon. member says, that is the recompense which has been given in advance to the other Provinces, I am far from agreeing with him. Whatever has been expended in British Columbia and Manitoba, was expended in the general interests of the Dominion; what was expended on the Intercolonial, in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec, was also expended in the interest of the Dominion. What was expended on the Canada Central was also expended in the interest of the Dominion; and if there has been a particular advantage, it has been for the Province of Quebec, as has been said two years ago by the Minister of Railways. Now, people will come here and say that the Province of Quebec is entitled to a special compensation, and for what reason? Because it is said that the Quebec provincial railway, built between Quebec and Ottawa, forms part of the

In the different memorials presented by the Province of Quebec, through the Secretary of State when he was Prime Minister, or through the Hon. Mr. Mousseau or through Dr. Ross, now Prime Minister of the Province, I have seen no other reason given why it should be entitled to a compensation on account of this line, which it has built from Quebec to Ottawa, but that it forms part of the Pacific. Therefore, I do not hesitate to say, for my part, that the Government of the Province of Quebec has no claim on that account, any more than the other Provinces. They have themselves acknowledged that they have no claim, and that, on that account, they have received that special compensation to which they are entitled. Let us start from the beginning: when it was decided to build the Canadian Pacific Railway, it was decided to build this road, not from ocean to ocean, as has been said, but from British Columbia to the Eastern Provinces. The object of the scheme was to build the road from British Columbia to the shores of Lake Nipisssing. Lake Nipissing was then a wilderness, and if the road had stopped there it would have been perfectly useless. However, it was then supposed, and rightly supposed, that private enterprise would build the lines from the old settlements of Ontario and Quebec, and so it happened. The Canada Central was the first line built; they applied to this Parliament to obtain a special subsidy, which was granted. A subsidy of $12,000 per mile was granted, between Pembroke and Lake Nipissing. This took place in 1874, and four or five years before that two companies were organized in the Province of Quebec, for the construction of a railway to connect the Quebec harbour with the Pacific line at Ottawa. Two different companies were organized, to wit: the North Shore Railway Company, who undertook to build the line between Quebec and Montreal, and the Northern Colonization Company, whose line was to extend westward, through the Ottawa valley. It is not within my knowledge that these two companies, or either of them, applied to the Federal Government to obtain any aid whatever; still, they were both largely subsidized by the Provincial Government; they were expecting aid from the municipalities, and they did get aid from the municipalities, to a certain extent; but notwithstanding this aid from the Provincial Government and from the municipal-ities, the undertaking was not a success. The work was given up and the Government of Quebec took hold of it, in 1875, and undertook to build the whole road from Quebec to Ottawa-and how? Simply as a provincial line. and without any aid on the part of the Federal Govern-ment. It may be said, and with reason, I believe, that the Government of the Province of Quebec might have been entitled to a subsidy from the Federal Government, just as much as the Canada Central Company. There was this point of similarity between the line of the Canada Central and that of the Quebec Government, that both lines were to be used as an outlet for the Pacific Railway; but there was this point of difference, that the line of the Canada Central was passing, for the most part, through an unsettled ter-ritory, and that for years it could not be of any local usefalness, while the St. Lawrence valley road, and the Ottawa valley road, were passing through land which had been settled for years, through settlements which were comparatively rich, so that that part of the country was to reap immediate benefits from the construction of those railways. It might have been said at that time that the Province was entitled to a subsidy on the same ground as the Canada Central was entitled to it, for the reasons I have just given. The idea to which I now give expression was not unwonted in the Province of Quebec. Mr. Joly, the leader of the Opposition, was of opinion that the Provincial Government Opposition, was of opinion that the Provincial Government ought to receive aid from the Dominion Government for the construction of that line of railway, and during the Session of 1875, he moved in the House an amendment to that effect: When the Provincial Government announced their Mr. Laurer intention to undertake the construction of a railway to ttawa, Mr. Joly moved the following amendment :

"But this House is of opinion that after the great sacrifices which Quebec has made to promote these enterprises, it is fair and just that the Dominion of Canada should come to our aid, since these two roads, the North Shore and Montreal, and the Ottawa and Occidental, virtually form part of the great Pacific line."

Mr. CARON. (Translation.) That is just what we are saying now.

Mr. LAURIER. (Translation.) That is what you are saying now, but why did you not say it then? You are saying it now, but at that time you did not wish to say it, and you have commenced the building of that road as a local line. The idea of Mr. Joly was repudiated, and it was rejected in an abusive manner. Mr. Speaker, the Quebeo Government then made for themselves the position which they now hold; they refused the aid of the Dominion Govment.

Mr. DESJARDINS. (Translation.) Did they refuse it?

Mr. LAURIER. (Translation.) Certainly they refused it, since Mr. Joly's motion was supported by only 15 members against 43.

Mr. DESJARDINS. (Translation.) The hon. member should tell us when was it that the Government of the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie offered us this aid, as long as we have refused it.

Mr. LAURIER. (Translation.) Well the Mackenzie Government never had any occasion to refuse this demand which has never been made. It would be strange, to say the least, if Mr. Mackenzie was to be held responsible for the refusal of a demand which has never been made. At all events the Provincial Government chose to take that position; they decided to build the road as a Provincial line and without any aid from the Dominion Government. I know that they have repented since, and by and by I shall state under what circumstances. After having decided to build the road as a provincial line the Government carried out their intention; they built the road and when it was completed or nearly so, the Government found themselves in a critical position from a financial point of view; I will not say that it was owing to the construction of this railway, I might say it was rather due to their own extravagance; but as I have said before, this is no place to discuss local affairs, and 1 shall limit my remarks to the question now between the House. When the Provincial Government found themselves in the difficulties to which I have referred, they changed their policy; they thought that what they had refused in 1875 they might demand it in 1880, and after having refused the aid of the Dominion Government, they applied to that same Government to demand of them that which they had refused in 1875. The whole history of what took place then has been given by the hon. Secretary of State, when he was Prime Minister of Quebec, in the speech made by him on the Resolutions which he bimself introduced for the sale of that road in 1882. He said :

"As far back as the 13th of March, 1860, the Local Government waited upon the Dominion Government to ask aid for our road. The Pacific Railway question was then being discussed, and as the Pacific had always been spoken of as being intended to connect with our Pro-vincial railway, we went there to ask the Federal Government to do their utmost in order to make of our provincial railway an integrant part of that great line of railway."

The hon, member then went on to speak of a letter sent to the Federal Government in 1881. That letter said :

Mr. LAURIEB,

ent line to the future traffic of the Pacific Railway, and at the same time would give a great impulsion to the commercial prosperity of the Province.

The hon. Minister then represented to the Government that the Province of Quebec had expended over $11,000,000 for the construction of the railway between Quebec and Ottawa, and that, in his opinion, it was entitled to a compensation from the Dominion Government, and he went on to determine the nature and extent of such compensation. He stated, among other reasons, that the Dominion Government ought to buy the local road from Quebec to Ottawa for the sum and price of $7,000,000; that, it was true the road had cost $4,000,000 more, but that the Province of Quebec would consent to lose these $4,000,000, that it was its contribution for the benefit it would reap from the entreprise. This proposition was not accepted by the Dominion Government and the road was afterwards sold by the Provincial Government, under circumstances which the hon. Secretary of State has explained a moment ago. It was sold for even more than the compensation which the hon. Secretary of State had asked from the Dominion Government. The amount of the com-pensation asked for was $7,000,000, and the road has been sold for $7,600,000. It matters very little from what source comes the money which is to be deposited in the Quebec Treasury, as far as the finances of the Province are concerned. It matters very little whether it comes from the Dominion Government or from another source; although the road has been sold to a company the result is the same; that is to say, the road only costs $4,000,000 or the amount which the Province of Quebec had decided to pay for the benefit of having this road. It has had the amount asked for. More than that: a section has been sold to the Pacific, and that part has naturally been paid out of the money furnished by the Federal Parliament to that Company. But the question is, not to know from what source came this money, which it has received for the sale of its railway; the financial result is still the same; that is to say, the Province of Quebec has only paid out the $4,000,000 which it had decided to pay out for having this road. It is said : Why, since the Federal Government have not bought the railway they ought to grant a subsidy of at least $12,000 per mile to the Province of Quebec, as a compensation for the sacrifices which have been made by that Province. If the Province of Quebec, after having realized $7,000,000 out of the sale of its railway, should now receive a subsidy from the Dominion, it would repudiate what it said through its Ministers in 1880, and it would not be contributing in any measure to the construction of this railway for which it had decided to pay at least $4,000,000. What I am now saying is confirmed by the position taken by the Government of the Province of Quebec on this question. The Government did not ask for any aid over and above that sum. They merely asked one of two things: either to sell the road for $7,000,000 or else that they should receive a compensation from the Federal Government. In a subsequent letter, sent by the hon. First Minister of Quebec, Mr. Chapleau, to the First Minister of this Government, he expressed himself as follows:-

"I think it is my duty to inform you that an offer of $6,500,000 has been made to me for our provincial railway, such as the road will be atter the completion of the Chaudière bridge." "Under these circumstances I hope that you will allow me to ask you:

"1st. Whether your Government would be willing to guarantee to our Province, as the price of our road, a fixed amount, which would enable you to transfer it to the Syndicate?

"2nd. Whether you think that the Syndicate would be willing to offer a higher price for our road than that which I have just mentioned, or more advantageous conditions for the lease of our Provincial railway?

"3rd. Whether, in case that the Government of Quebec should keep their railway (Q.M.O. & O.), you would be willing to recommend to the Ottawa Government the granting of a bonus equal to that which was granted to the Canada Central."

The proposition made to-day before the House is to grant a compensation equal to that which was granted by this Government to the Canada Central. The circumstances are not to-day the same as they were in 1880. At that time, when he wrote this letter to the Government, Mr. Chapleau declared that if the present Government bought the Quebec road, or caused it to be bought by the Pacific, he would be satisfied; and if the Government did not buy it themselves, or if they did not cause it to be bought by the Pacific, in that case, he asked for a grant of $12,000 per mile, which was equal to the subsidy granted to the Canada Central. Circumstances have changed, the Government of the Province of Quebec have sold their railway and, according to the very words of the letter, the Government have no more right to the compensation they claimed at that time. I say this, Mr. Speaker, simply to prove one thing, not that I object to the Resolutions before the House, but I say that the Province of Quebec does not hold, on this question, a particular position which might invoke to the exclusion of all the other Provinces of the Confederation. The position I take is this: the Province of Quebec holds, with respect to the grant which it is about to receive, the same position as the other Provinces may occupy with respect to the expenses which they may have made for railways of a general usefulness to Canada. As I said a while ago, I am not opposed to the Resolutions. The Resolutions grant a subsidy to Quebec. 1 accept it. But the question to which I shall refer again, because doubts have been raised by hon, gentlemen opposite, is that the Province of Quebec has no special reasons of its own to invoke in favour of this subsidy. Therefore, 1 seek, outside of the statement that the road built by the Province forms part of the Pacific, the reason for these grants. As I have said before, the Province of Quebec has already received from the sale of its railway the compensation to which it was thought to be entitled. Consequently, as it does not occupy a sui generis position in that respect, it necessarily follows that the advantages which are given must be granted equally to all the Provinces, which, like Quebec, have made sacrifices to build railways whose usefulness is general. The Province of Quebec is just like other Provinces on this point. All other Provinces, without any exception, have made sacrifices, and enormous sacrifices, considering the means at their disposal, for the purpose of building railways for themselves. Last year we passed an Act by which it was declared that nearly all the lines of railway in Canada had been built for the general interest of the country. Well, it follows from this principle that we have the right to ask that the same measure of justice which is to be dealt out to the Province of Quebec should be dealt out to other Provinces as well. The motive of the Resolutions now before the House must be sought for outside of the particular position of the Province. This motive is easily known Unfortunately, the $7,000,000 which the Province of Quebec has already received or is to receive from the sale of its railway, have not saved her from the financial embarrassment in which it was then, and this embarrassment still continues. I desire, as much as anybody else, to see it rescued from this embarrassment and I hope that the aid which is about to be granted for that purpose it will go far towards doing away with it. But after the Government had found out that the sale of their railway had not brought them out of difficulty, they continued to apply to the Dominion Government. Mr. Mousseau, the successor of the hon. Secretary of State, presented, last year, to the Federal Government, a memorial in which he set forth the claims of the Province of Quebec. These claims are based not only on the expenses which the Province of Quebec has made, for the construction of the railway between Quebec and Ottawa, but also on all the other railway expenses made in the Province. This is not, however, the main argument of the memorial. The main argument is that the Federal subsidy now given to the Provinces is inadequate and should be readjusted, and again this year, the First Minister of the Province of Quebec, Mr. Ross, has presented a memorial in which he, himself, sets forth the claims of the Province. He endorses all that has been said by his predecessor, but he especially sets forth the pretensions of the Province with respect to the enormous expense which the Province has made for the construction of the railway. But one thing is notorious: it is that the memorials which have been presented by the Province to this Government, when they were presented through Mr. Chapleau, have not received an answer. The claims put forth through Mr. Mousseau have equally been left without an answer, and the same thing may be said of the claims presented by Mr. Ross.

Mr. HOUDE. (Translation.) They were being taken into consideration.

Mr. LAURIER. (Translation.) They have been for three years under consideration, and no answer has been given as yet. The proposition of Mr. Chapleau was first considered, then Mr. Mousseau's proposition was considered, and the matter is still under consideration. But an event which took place in this House has hastened the consideration of the memorials of the Province of Quebec. Three years ago the Federal Government considered them, without being able to arrive at a conclusion. But the conclusion has been reached we know when. It was when the Government came before this House, during this Session, with the Pacific Railway Resolutions. I do not know personally what took place between the Government and their supporters. The hon. Secretary of State has pretended that the public had been informed by the Globe correspondents who, according to the hon. Minister, had been listening through the key-holes. Now that is a very gratuitous insinuation against the Globe correspon-What we know about what took place between the dents. Government and their supporters has not been revealed by any Opposition papers, but by the most influential organs of the Conservative party in the Province of Quebec, and it is known, by what has been disclosed by their organs, that this Government have given way to the pressure which has been brought to bear upon them.

Mr. HOUDE. (Translation.) Under the pressure of the surplus ?

Mr. LAURIER. (Translation.) What surplus?

Mr. HOUDE. (Translation.) The surplus of $7,000,000.

Mr. LAURIER. (Translation.) I thought it was under the pressure of the surplus of members. What took place then, has been revealed to us even the day next to that on which the Resolutions were voted, by La Minerve, the most influential and the oldest Conservative newspaper. The Minerve said :

"The Ministrial Resolutions were adopted last night on a strict party vote. We must make an exception as regards Mr. Ross, the mem-ber for Liegar, who supported the policy of the Government. "In the course of the debate which took place on that question, we have strongly advised our friends not to consent to the new sacrifices which were asked of us without protecting on all points the just rights of the Province. "The French members of the House have endorsed our opinion, and the energetic and firm stand which they have taken has given satisfactory re-sults. It is certain that a compensation of $12,000 per mile will be granted to the Provincial Government in consideration of the millions we have exto the Provincial Government in consideration of the millions we have ex-pended for the construction of the Northera Railway, which forms an important section of the Pacific Railway. The amount is just the same as that of the subsidy granted to the Uanada Central and to the pro-posed railway between Gravenburst and Callaoder, in Ontario. This is an act of justice which we have been claiming for a long while, but which, for all that, will be accepted t with feelings of great satisfaction. "During last night's sitting Sir Charles Topper has d-clared, besides, that the Pacific Railway will have to take means to reach Quebec within a very short time. This statement which is of great importance has been a very sairt time. This statement where the Ministers and members "We owe our sincere congratulations to the Ministers and members whose energy and devotedness to our interests have enabled them to ob-ain such material advantages for our Province."

Now, the modus operandi is explained to us by another paper. What is stated in the Minerve is related more or less vaguely, but this energetic and firm stand taken by the Quebec contingent to obtain justice from this stubborn Government is explained to us by the Monde, of the 21st of March:

At the caucus held on the 15th of February, Mr. Ouimet, on behalf of the French Conservatives, made the following requests :

"1st. That the Government should grant a subsidy of $12,000 per mile, to the Province of Queeec on the railway which has been built by that Province between Ottawa and Quebec. "2nd. That the Government should guarantee to the city of Quebec the prolongation of the Pacific Railway to Quebec Harbour."

Here is the answer given by Sir John A. Macdonald to these two requests :

"1st. The Government will have no objection to grant $12,000 per

"1st. The Government will have no objection to grant $12,000 per mile on the road between Ottawa and Montreal. "2nd. Although the road beetween Quebec and Montreal does not form part of the Pacific, $12,000 per mile will also be granted on this part of the Q. M. O. & O. Railway with the understanding that if the Government should so,desire they may take $6,000 out of this, to aid the Pacific either to buy the Northern Railway or to construct another line." line.

Another journal, also an influential organ of the Conservative Party and of the Government, Le Canadien, has made revelations still more definite in its issue of the 4th of March. It says :

"On the 5th of February. Sir John A. Macdonald put on the Order of the Day a motion for the purpose of giving precedence to the debate on the Pacific Resolutions, which in other words implied that he intend-on the Pacific Resolutions, which in other words implied that as included to press the vote. On the 6th, Messrs. Ouimet, Amyot and Houde were appointed by the Conservative members of the Province of Quebec to notify Sir Hector Langevin that they objected to the steps taken by the First Minister, and that before voting on the Pacific question, they intended to bring before Parliament the question of the readjustment of the subsidy. "Sir John had to give way, and the question of the subsidy was discussed by Messrs Ouimet, Amyot and Landry. "Sir John did not have the courteousness to answer to the claims of a Province which has kept him in power for more than a quarter of a century.

century. "Our friends understood what his silence meant: they had made this move in order to find out the intentions of the chief of the Cabinet; they knew what these intentions were and governed themselves accord-ingly." "The Ministers from Quebec went to the Capital; Mr. Ross' memorial was presented. It was understood that a position would be taken before the vote on the refunding of the $12,000 per mile for the con-struction of the Northern Railway and on the terminus at Quebec. Sir John was obliged to give way on the first point, and on the second he made promises of which the members of our district declared themselves contributed.

satisfied. "It is an undoubted fact that Sir John was very near being over-thrown, and that if he had not given us a beginning of justice, he would not be in power to day.'

What was then a beginning of justice has now become, I suppose, complete justice. Such is the origin of the Resolutions now before the House. On a question like this, it is useless to delude one's selfand it is better to take the position as it is than try to disguise it. From the standpoint I have taken, I am not to examine whether the claims of the Province of Quebec are just or unjust.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. LAURIER. (Translation.) This is a question to be decided by the hon. members opposite, but if it is admitted that they are just, it is strange, to say the least, that the Government should not have done justice, except under the pressure if their own supporters. Neither is it for me to characterize the conduct of my colleagues from the Province of Quebec on this question. In my humble opinion they have committed a fault in this circum-stance. It is always a fault, I think, on the part of a minority—and we are a minority in this House-in any legislative assembly to attempt to throw obstacles in the way of a Government in order to force them to do a thing against their will. According to my humble way of thinking, all questions coming before this House must be decided simply according to justice, equity and fairness. If the Pacific Resolutions were just and reasonable, it was the duty of the members to adopt them, if they were unjust and unreasonable, it was their duty to object to them. However, I think that if there is in the Dominion, a body of men who should always adhere to the principles of justice, it is the Quebec contingent in this House. I ask no favour; for my part 1 have often thought and I have often represented, that the peculiar position held in Confederation by our Province was put in jeopardy by the frequent encroachments of the Federal Governments on the rights which belong to the Province. But it would also be at least dangerous for the Province to accept favours which it would not be willing to grant to other Provinces having just as much right to them as Quebec has. In my opinion, the position which we of the Province of Quebec should take on this question, as on all other questions, should be, to be always ready to give justice to other Provinces, justice equal to that which we demand for ourselves, and what is proposed by the amendment of the hon. member for Durham is nothing but equal justice to all.

1545

Mr. GIROUARD moved the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to, and debate adjourned.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY BILL.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. In consequence of the discussion which took place to-day with reference to the Bill which was passed by this House, amended by the Senate, and returned to the Senate, respecting the Grand Trunk Railway, after the remarks made by my hon. friend from Northumberland (Mr. Mitchell), and also by my hon. friend from Victoria, and by the hon. member for West Durham, and the opinions expressed by them as to the effect of the amendment, in which, after due consideration, I concur, it must be understood, I think, that those amendments were more than verbal. Under the circumstances, I think the matter must be reconsidered. I find a precedent which arose in 1865, in a similar case, and I will read the Resolutions which were passed on the 16th September, 1865:

"On motion of Mr. Currier, seconded by the Hon. Mr. Dorion, "Ordered, That the entry in the Journals of this House, of the 12th Septemeer, instant, in respect to the consideration of the amendment: made by the Legislative Oouncil to the Bill initialed 'An Act to incor-porate the Ottawa City Passenger Railway Company,' be now read; "And the same being read, "Ordered, That the said proceedings be declared null and void; "Resolved, That a message be sent to the hon. the Legislative Council, informing their Honours that the amendments made by them to the Bill sent up from this House, initialed: 'An Act to incorporate the Ottawa City Passenger Railway Company,' were concurred in by this House in error, and requesting that their Honours will return the Bill with the said amendments, in order that they may be reconsidered. "'Ordered, That Mr. Currier do carry the said Message to the Legislative Council.''

In pursuance of that I move ----

Mr. BLAKE. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will move that on Monday. I want to consider it; we all want to consider it. I think it is a very grave step.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Then I give notice for Monday.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock, midnight) the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, 14th April, 1884.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS.

REPORTS OF PRINTING COMMITTEE.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell) moved the adoption of the last paragraph of the Eighth Report of the Joint Committee on the Printing of Parliament. He said : The report was adopted at a previous meeting of the House less the last paragraph, which was to the effect that the Committee recommended $50 additional per Session to the Sessional messengers in the Distribution Office. That portion was not adopted when the other portion was, because some mis-apprehension prevailed. It was thought that the proposal was to give the Sessional messengers $50 more than the other messengers were receiving. On enquiry it was found that this is simply to place them on the same footing as the other messengers of the House and to pay them the same amount.

Motion agreed to, and Report concurred in.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell) moved the adoption of the Ninth Report of the Joint Committee on the Printing of Parliament. He said : This report recommends the printing of a number of documents, and also that a number of other documents be not printed. It also recommends the transferrence of the contract for the binding of the Journals and Sessional Papers. The contract was with Mr. A. Mortimer, who was compelled, owing to financial business difficulties, to assign. The Committee recommend that his son be given the contract; but they insisted before they would recommend its transferrence that a new deposit of $1,000 should be made by the new contractor, the other deposit being given up. The report also makes reference to a subject which has come before the House once or twice, namely, as to the distribution of the Jour-nals and Sessional Papers to ex-members of Parliament. The Committee considered this matter very fully, and in view of the indefinite and considerable expense which would be involved they cannot recommend its adoption by the House. I have it in charge from those members of the Joint Committee who are members of this House to call attention to another matter which unfortunately could not appear in the report of the Joint Committee as it does not affect the other branch of Parliament, and that is the employment of additional assistance in connection with the Distribution Office. It appears that formerly during the recess of Parliament public documents were in the habit of being sent to the post office and there put up by the postmaster and his assistants and addressed to members. But last summer the postmaster discovered that it was not his duty to put up Sessional Papers in that way, and that they should be sent to the post office properly put up and addressed, and he declined to receive them otherwise. The result is that some additional assistance will have to be given to the Distribu-tion Office; and you, Mr. Speaker, will have to give orders to the permanent messengers, who really have not a very great deal to do during recess, to answer Mr. Botterell's call and do any work that may be required. The messengers in the Distribution Office are employed in going messages be-tween the Departments and the Distribution Office, and packing up papers for general distribution, to the press and other parties, and their time is fully occupied. I am quite aware it would be a very serious thing for you, Mr. Speaker, to instruct the messengers of the House to obey the orders of an officer of the Printing Committee, because I do not know what might be the consequences to the country if a messenger should do anything not strictly in the line of his duty as appointed by this House,

But at the same time if it were done, if the Constitution was strained to that extent, that a messenger would be compelled to perform duties of that kind, we might possibly save the expense of an additional messenger in the Distribution Office. The matter could not be made the subject of a formal report by the Committee, but I was asked by the Committee to make this statement on the floor of the House.

Motion agreed to, and Report concurred in.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

Mr. WOODWORTH. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I wish to call the attention of the House to a report in Hansard, of a speech delivered in this House by an hon. gentleman on the 17th of March last. The speech, which was delivered to the people of this country, occupied some four hours in delivery, dealing with secret societies, and dealing with them in the masterly manner in which that hon. gentleman's felicitous command of language enabled him to deal with it. And, Sir, when he closed his speech I had the honour of addressing the House for a few moments, in which, I think, I said that he had attacked the Masonic and other secret societies. I did not hear the hon. gentleman's reply. But when I read the Hansard report, I found that he said-I presume he said it-the following :-

"I repudiate entirely that the language I used to-night had any reference whatever to the Masonic order."

Well, Sir, I think his speech had reference to it, if it had reference to any thing.

Mr. BLAKE. I rise to order. The hon. gentleman appears to be referring to a past debate.

Mr. WOODWORTH. It is a question of accuracy,

Mr. SPEAKER. Of course it is referring to a past debate, but I understand that the hon. gentleman is endeavouring to bring out some matter touching the accuracy of the Hansard report. Is that it?

Mr. WOODWORTH. It is. The hon. gentleman need not be so restive. I can refer him to a case last Session in which he inveighed in somewhat warm terms against my hon. friend from Simcoe, and on exactly the same occasion as the present, namely, the speech on the Orange Bill, in which some words were left out, and the hon. member for West Durham took him to task in the following language, in closing his speech:

"It is worse than useless that we should have a publication, bearing the stamp of authority, issued as a correct report of our debates, from which important passages in the speeches of hon. members are either deliberately or accidently omitted."

Now the present discussion comes up in the same way and on the same Bill, and I think I am strictly in order. say, Sir, that the hon. gentleman rose to his feet and repudiated the idea that he meant the Masonic order. I did not hear him say so, and I think some other hon. members on this side did not hear his remark, or some reply would have been made. The hon. gentleman went on at great length-

Mr. BLAKE. I rise to order. The hon. gentleman is not impugning the accuracy of the Hansard report, but he is discussing the question.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman will please state his point.

Mr. WOODWORTH. I am coming to that, but I have first to lay the foundation, to show why I have risen to my feet at all. The hon. gentleman knows that there is no one who takes up the time of this House in useless discussion.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order, order.

Mr. SPEAKER. Will the hon. gentleman read the paragraph from Hansard. Mr. WHITE (Cardwell).

Mr. WOODWORTH. I will read it, and I say that the hon. gentleman's speech was reported in Hansard, and reported verbatim et literatim. Hansard has given his speech as he delivered it, and his speech declares that all secret societies

Mr. BLAKE. I rise to order.

Mr. SPEAKER. Will the hon. gentleman please state, in a few words, in what respect the report is inaccurate.

Mr. WOODWORTH. The hon. gentleman is a little bit restive, and he has published a letter. I do not wonder at it, because this is a sore point with him.

Mr. BLAKE. Not at all.

Mr. WOODWORTH. I do not blame him for being a little bit alarmed. The Hansard report of that speech, which I was trying to give without reading it, says :

"That is my general proposition with reference to secret societies. I believe it brings with it the possibility of evil."

Mr. MACKENZIE. That is not disputed.

Mr. WOODWORTH. I wonder what would suit the hon. gentleman?

Mr. MACKENZIE. The point of order is that the hon. gentleman should either show that something was not reported in Hansard which was said, or that something appeared in Hansard which was not said.

Mr. SPEAKER. The only reason the hon. gentleman can have for rising now, is to show that something was put in Hansard which should not have been put there, or that some change was made after the speech was reported.

Mr. WOODWORTH. I think, Sir, I will manage to say what I intended to say.

Mr. SPEAKER. I hope the hon. gentleman will speak to that point.

Mr. WOODWORTH. I will, and if it is necessary to move the adjournment of the House, I will do it, or get some other member to do it. I will now read from Hansard what the hon. gentleman said :

"That is my general proposition with reference to secret societies, a point on which, [dare say, as I said before, [am in a small minority." And so on. Then he goes on :

"As we know professedly loyal societies have gone in days gone by-how far this may be the case you cannot determine; and, therefore, I say, that State recognition ought not to be given to secret societies. You cannot tell what sort of tyranny may not be exercised by them. It is in the nature of these societies to become tyrannical and despotic. Openness and public discussion are the great guarantees of order, freedom, fairness and moderation. It is in private gatherings of men, all of one turn, all of one thought, all of one opinion, that bitterness and misrepresentation and malignity revel and hold high carnival."

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order, order.

Mr. WOODWORTH. What is the point of order?

Mr. BLAKE. I understand you, Sir, to have ruled that the hon. gentleman cannot on this occasion refer to a past debate except simply in this sense and to this extent: that he should point out that an error had been made in the report of Hansard. I think it is the first duty of the hon. gentleman to say what the error is, and to point it out.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I think he can go a little further. He can state that the report of the Hansard has been impugned on authority, and he can show that the Hansard is right, and the authority which impugned it is wrong.

Mr. BLAKE. No, Hansard speaks for itself.

Mr. SPEAKER. As I understand there is a question of privilege, and the hon. gentleman can only impugn the accuracy of the report by showing that something has been put in which should not have been put in, or that something was omitted which was said. I think the hon. gentleman should state his point, and then I will rule upon it.

Mr. CASGRAIN. Let the hon. gentleman state his point.

Mr. WOODWORTH. My point? I can understand the hon. member for L'Islet for he did the same thing last Session which I am doing now. I intend to say that the hon. member for West Durham has by a letter to the Globe newspaper, over his own signature impugned the accuracy of the Hansard reporters, and has declared that they are entirely wrong.

Mr. SPEAKER. I really do not think that that, which is a matter outside of Parliament, can be made a question of privilege. An hon, member may make a different statement of what he has said, but the Official Report is for the purpose of showing accurately what he said in Parliament, and it must stand on itself.

Mr. WOODWORTH. I move the adjournment of the House.

Mr. MACKENZIE. You cannot do that.

Mr. WOODWORTH. In doing so I wish to say--

Mr. SPEAKER. It has been decided in England that an hon. gentleman cannot allude to a matter in an irregular manner, under cover of a motion of that kind; he cannot, for instance, refer to a past debate. If the hon. gentleman moves the adjournment of the House and then alludes to what appears in Hansard, that will be alluding to a past debate.

Mr. WOODWORTH. Then I will allude to what took place, according to the Globe newspaper. I think Your Honour will permit me, in moving the adjournment of this House-

Some hon. MEMBERS. Chair, chair; order, order.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Hon. gentlemen opposite cry out because it is inconvenient to have this matter explained. They do not like to have it explained. It is exceedingly inconvenient.

Mr. MACKENZIE. It is a pitiable object, Sir, to see the leader of the House defending disorder here.

Mr. WOODWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I am entirely within the judgment of the House; and you, Sir, as head of the House, have the right and privilege to direct how its debates shall be conducted. When you say I am out of order, I shall bow to your decision; but I want the point of order to be clearly stated, and your ruling upon it as clearly stated. I am now rising to speak on the motion for the adjournment of this House, and if, speaking to that motion, I say anything outside of what I am permitted to say on a motion of that kind, I am willing to be called to order, if the point of order is clearly stated. I wish to state, then, on that motion, that on the 17th of March last, the hon. member for West Durham made a speech of some three or four hours length in this House on the Orange Bill. He has been reported in Hansard, and I believe correctly reported-

Mr. SPEAKER. Of course it is for the House to say whether my ruling is right or not-I am only guided by what I find in the precedents in England in deciding that it is impossible for a member, under the cover of a motion to adjourn, to commit an irregularity by referring to a matter which it is irregular to refer to in any other way.

Some hon, MEMBERS. Chair, chair.

Mr. WOODWORTH. I would like Your Honour to state where that decision in England is.

Mr. SPEAKER. It is irregular to anticipate any question which is on the Order Paper by referring to it, and it is irregular to refer to a past debate. Both are irregular-May lays it down that a member cannot, under cover of a motion for adjournment, discuss the subject of use the words : "Have often been the fruitful mothers of any Order of the Day that the House has appointed another time for the consideration of; nor can he discuss in advance any motion of which notice has been given, because it is irregular to anticipate the discussion upon it. May says :

"On a member proceeding to advert to a Bill in anticipation of its consideration, the Speaker interposed and stated that it was highly ir-regular to anticipate the discussion of the order of the day, more par-ticularly as the hon. member had a motion on the paper for the post-ponement of the Bill."

If it was an irregularity to anticipate the discussion, it was also irregular to refer to a past debate; and I take it that on these grounds an hon. gentleman cannot commit an irregularity under the cover of a motion to adjourn.

Mr. WOODWORTH. Well, I am not anticipating.

Mr. SPEAKER. It is out of order to refer to a past debate,

Mr. WOODWORTH. Well, I will do something else.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Chair, chair.

Mr. WOODWORTH. I will say this to the hon. members-that if that game is commenced, they will not hear one of themselves, unless it is the leader of the Opposition, this Session. I am reading a letter from the Globe newspaper, addressed by the Hon. Edward Blake, to J. B. King, Esq., Grand Section, Grand Lodge of Ontario, Independent Order of Oddfellows:

"DEAR SIR,—I am much obliged by your letter of the 26th inst., in which you make some enquiries (very natural in view of the misrepre-sentations which have been circulated) as to the bearing of my recent remarks on secret societies. The most satisfactory reply which I can make is to enclose you (as I do herewith) a print of my speech —.""

He does not say from Hansard-

He does not say from Hansard— 'From which you will see what I did in fact say, and the connection in which my different remarks were made. You will observe that, speaking in the first place, of secret benevolent societies, such as that of which you are a member, I used the following language :— '' I have never joined one, though many of my best friends are mem-bers of socret societies, which are, as this professes to be, benevolent— secret societies that do not meddle with political topics—secret societies whose real action, so far as one of the public can know, is not incon-sistent with or does not go beyond the avowed purposes of their asso-ciation. But I believe the tendency of secrecy itself to be injurious. I believe that it brings with it the possibility of evil; I believe that it involves a certain amount of sacrifice of individuality and indepen-dence, and gives v ry great facilities for the misleading of members by designing leaders—very great and mischievous facilities for that pur-pose. That is my general proposition, with reference to secret oath-bound societies, a point on which I dare eay, as I said before, I am in a small minority; for I suppose the vast buik of at least the Protestant members of this House belong to one or other of those societies; and I do not wish to be understood as saying that these mischievous tendencies ar as I know, are beneficial.'"

Now, Sir, if the hon. member delivered that speech last year, I can refer to it. I can say that I was in this House last year, and no such words were uttered by the hon. member for West Durham, and they are not in the Hansard to-day. You will find the words "secret societies," but the words "oath-bound" he did not use, and the words "oath-bound" are not in the Hansard. The hon. member in his letter goes on to say:

"I then proceeded to refer to secret societies of a very different elass, of which I gave as an instance, 'the Ribbon Society,' the Phenix Society,' the Fenian Society,' and pointed out the great evils which had resulted from their existence. You will see that it is after having discussed the second the second form this latter plane. discussed the evils which had arison from this latter class of secret societies, and exclusively with reference to quasi-political societies that I used the following language :--""But we have no right, because we have no necessity, to engage for these purposes in secret societies which, as I have indicated, have often been the fruitful mothers of malignity, misrepresentation and bigotry."

If I can point to a speech the hon. gentleman made in this House, not this Session, for 1 am not infringing the rule by discussing a past debate, as I would be referring to this Session-but if I can show you he did make a speech in this House during one of its sittings, and in it did not malignity, misrepresentation and bigotry," and if I can show you he has published a letter in which he has declared, over his own signature that he did use these words, that what he stated in this House was "that they have often been" thereby inferring that sometimes they have not been, "the fruitful mothers of malignity, misrepresentation and bigotry "---I can point to a statement made over the hon, gentleman's own signature, as to what he said which is not a correct statement of what he did say; I can point to a statement as clearly incorrect as if, in the case of the verdict of a jury finding a man not guilty of murder, the hon. member for Durham, in refering afterwards to that verdict, said the jury came in with a verdict of "guilty" leaving out the word "not" which makes a sad difference to the man tried. When I can point out that he has published a letter to the Grand Master of the Independent Order of Oddfellows in which he declares he used in this House the words : "Oath-bound secret societies"-he did not use the words "oath-bound "-" have often been "-he did not use the words "have often been" but said are-" the fruitful mothers of malignity misrepresentation and bigotry,' I can point to a case in which the leader of a great party who, for four hours, delivered a studied phillipic against all secret societies-he did not exclude one-and then, over his own signature, eliminates the whole pith and germ and sting of his speech, after sending out tens of thousands of copies of it through the country. When the hon. member for West Simcoe was taken to task by the hon. member for West Durham in precisely the same manner as that in which I have risen to take the hon. gentleman himself to task to-day, no one objected to his doing so, and the hon. member for West Simcoe defended himself as he knows how to defend himself; but when I take the same course, I am met with opposition on a point of order and have to take another course in order to bring to the notice of this House the fact that the hon. member for West Durham, in reply to a letter which was written to him evidently for the purpose of drawing forth the reply, sought to explain away the statement he made in this House by telling the Independent Order of Oddfellows that, not being "oath-bound," they were not included in his denunciation of secret societies—although the term "oath-bound" is not to be found in the statement referred to. I say that although the words may seem immaterial, yet if he had delivered the speech in this House he said he did, he would not have got the encomiums from certain hon. gentlemen that occupy an independent position in this House that he did get. Had he delivered the speech which he declares in this newspaper, over his own signature, he delivered, he would have not got credit from hon. gentlemen here who do not believe in secret societies; but finding the shoe was pinching the Masons, the Grangers, the Templars, the Odd-fellows, he writes a letter in which he gives an incorrect version of what he did say, in which he declares that Hansard has not reported him correctly, and yet we all know that Hansard has reported him, word for word; and when I take five minutes to bring to the notice of the House this flagrant violation of its privileges, I am met by cries of opposition. I do not think I have been treated by the hon. gentleman in the way we have always treated him; we have always listened to him with the attention that becomes hon. gentlemen in discussions with one another, and I do not think it will add to the courtesv of our debates hereafter to know that when an hon, member rises for the purpose of bringing to the notice of the House that which every hon. member is interested in, we are to be governed by blind party zeal and not by calm reason; and it must be acknowledged that every hon. member is interested in knowing whether the hon. member for West Durham said the words ascribed to him by Hansard or whether he used the language he claims, in a public letter either of those companies, there should be an absolute for-over his own signature, to have used. I have brought this feiture by them of the Gravenhurst Branch. It was not in to the attention of the House because I have been met by the statement that the hon. gentleman, in his speech, did not refer to the Masonic society, when we all know that his whole speech meant nothing at all if he did not include that society in his denunciation of secret societies.

Mr. BLAKE. I rise to say that the words which are stated in the letter which the hon. gentleman has read to have been used by me in this House are the words I used in this House.

Mr. WOODWORTH. I withdraw my motion.

Several hon. MEMBERS, No, no.

Motion withdrawn.

NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY OF CANADA.

Mr. SMALL movedt the second reading of the amendments made by the Senate to Bill (No. 57) respecting the Northern Railway Company of Canada.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The alterations consist in the elimination of a large portion of the Bill and they leave intact two clauses.

Mr. MACKENZIE If the amendments are important, they must go to the Railway Committee.

Mr. SMALL. The Senate appear to have struck out all the lauses in reference to the consolidating of the debeature stock of the company, and the issuing of terminal bonds. They have simply left in clauses 5 and 6. By the fifth clause, it is provided :

"If the directors of the company may enter into any agreement with the Hamilton and North-Western Railway Company for the payment during the term of the joint working agreement between the two com-panies, or any extension thereof, by the joint executive committee appointed thereunder, out of the net earnings of the respective com-panies, of the interest on the bonds or debenture stocks of the respective companies, not existing or hereafter created and issued according to their respective priorities."

The sixth clause gives the company power,

"The Northern Pacific Junction Railway Company shall undertake the construction of the line between Gravenhurst and a point of junction with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and the Government shall grant to the said company the subsidy provided for in that line, alone or jointly with the Hamilton ond North-Western Railway Com-pany, to acquire and hold in the name of such company or companies, or in the name of trustees, capital stock in the Northern and Pacific Junction Railway Company to such amount as shall be approved by the Governor in Conneil, and such trustees shall have and may exercise all the rights of ordinary shareholders."

And another clause reduces the number of directors to solutes than seven, of whom four shall constitute a quorum. These are the amendments made in the Bill.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Will the hon gentleman state the clauses which have been eliminated?

Mr. SMALL The clauses relating to consolidating the bonds, the debenture or preference stock of the company, and issuing new preference stock or bonds. All these have been eliminated from the Bill. Only the 5th and 6th clauses have been left in.

Mr. MITCHELL. How many clauses have been struck out?

Mr. SMALL. Only the 5th, 6th, 8th and 9th are left in.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). There was one very important clause put into this Bill in the Railway Committee, as to the result of an amalgamation of this company with the Grand Trunk Railway or Canadian Pacific Railway. It was put into the Hamilton and North-Western Railway Company's Bill and afterwards into this Bill. It provided that, in the event of an amalgamation of this company with the Bill as introduced, but was inserted by the Railway Committee.

Mr. BLAKE. Is that struck out ?

Mr.WHITE. It was ordered to be put in by the Committee; there is no doubt about that. It was agreed upon as to the Hamilton and North-Western Bill, and this came on immediately afterwards, and it was agreed that this provision should be put in. If it came down to the House without that clause, it did not come as ordered by the Committee.

Mr. McCARTHY. This Bill, as amended by the Senate, appears to have eliminated from it all clauses with regard to consolidation of the debt, and also as to an agreement with the the Hamilton and North-Western Railway Company. That is struck out. There are but two clauses left, and they are quite independent of those which have been eliminated. The two clauses left provide that this company may acquire stock as stockholders in the Gravenhurst and Callander Junction road. That is all that is left. It is quite independent of what is left out. They have abandoned, in point of fact, the principal part of the Bill.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I think it is unfortunate that the Bill, as it has now come from the Senate, was not printed and distributed. I do not wish to delay the Bill, but we ought to have that in some way before us.

Mr. BLAKE. Which are the clauses which are left?

Mr. McCARTHY. The 5th and 6th clauses. They are not in the Bill as introduced.

Mr. BLAKE. Then nothing of the Bill as originally introduced is left?

Mr. McCARTHY. No, nothing at all; but the two clauses that are left were assented to by the Railway Committee, though they are not in the Bill as printed.

Mr. MACKENZIE. I cannot refer to the Bill at all, because it has never been printed. I would suggest that the best plan would be to get it struck off to-day, and so give us an opportunity of seeing it.

Mr. SPEAKER. The rule is that:

"When any Private Bill is returned from the Senate with amendments, the same not being merely verbal or unimportant, such amend-ments are, previous to the second reading, referred to the Standing Committee to which such Bill was originally referred."

Mr. BLAKE. The question is whether the amendments are unimportant.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not think these would be covered by the term substantial amendments. The Bill, as it went up from the Railway Committee, as I am advised, contained a large number of provisions which the Senate had struck out, but the clauses which were left in were assented to by the Railway Committee. I am afraid it would be impossible to get a meeting of the Railway Committee, and, if the Bill were printed as suggested by the member for East York, it could be compared with the Bill as if it came from the Railway Committee. Although the Senate have eliminated a number of provisions, they do not change the intention of this House, in reference to those clauses which are left in.

Mr. BLAKE. But they may have very seriously changed the intention of this House by eliminating the clauses which have been eliminated. The clauses which have been left may themselves be unaffected by the others, but the elimination of the others may very materially affect the whole Bill.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The Bill, as it passed this House, contained certain clauses at the request of the Northern Railway Company, giving them additional power for the issue of bonds, debentures and preference stock. Grand Trunk Railway or the Canadian Pacific Railway, They asked that for their own purpose. They also asked and as a result the Bill was referred back to the Committee that the Committee might agree with the Hamilton and North-Western Railway Company to extend the duration of their agreement. That was for their own purpose also. They have abandoned that. All their request to issue additional bonds and debentures is struck out. Of course they had a right to do that. They asked it as a favour and have abandoned that. Then they asked for leave to make an extended agreement with the Hamilton and North-Western Railway Company. They have abandoned that. So it is as if this had never been asked for. The first of the two clauses which remain is :

"The directors of the company may enter into any agreement with the Hamilton and North-Western Railway Company for the payment, during the term of the joint working agreement between the two companies, or any extension thereof, by the Joint Executive Committee appointed thereunder, out of the net earnings of the respective com-panies, of the interest on the bonds or debenture stocks of the respec-tives companies, not existing or hereafter created and issued, and according to their respective priorities."

That clause has no reference to the additional powers asked for to issue debentures or in reference to the agreement with the Hamilton and North-Western Railway Company. That was adopted by the Railway Committee, and approved by this House. The next clause is :

"The company may, if the Northern Pacific Junction Railway Com-pany shall undertake the construction of the line between Gravenhurst and a point of junction with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and the Government shall grant to the said company the subsidy provided for in aid of that line, alone or jointly with the Hamilton and North-Western Railway Company, acquire and hold in the name of such company or companies, or in the name of trustees, capital stock in the Northern and Pacific Junction Railway Company to such amount as shall be approved by the Governor in Council, and such trustees shall have and may exercise all the rights of ordinary shareholders."

That clause has no connection with the other clauses, which the company have voluntarily abandoned. The 3rd clause is in the original Act:

"The company may, by by-law, from time to time, to be passed at any special meeting to be called for the purpose, reduce the number of elected directors to a number not less than seven, of whom four shall constitute a quorum."

That was passed here. The 4th clause is :

"This Act may be cited as 'The Northern Railway Act, 1884.'"

So the two sections I have read, giving them substantial powers, and the two last clauses and the title of the Act, are all that remains of the original Bill, the rest being abandoned by the company, and having no connection with the enacting clauses.

Mr. BLAKE. And no part of the clauses now eliminated were in any way restrictive of their powers? The member for Cardwell said something of a clause which was inserted. Has that no bearing on the present clauses?

Mr. McCARTHY. No bearing at all.

Mr. BLAKE. I agree in the general proposition that if the company asks six or seven things which are considered for their benefit and then consent that three or four of them should be struck out, I think that the latter could hardly be called important.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The preamble remains the same, does it not?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. There is no preamble.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). The point raised is not touched in this matter at all. It seems to me the clauses which remain in this Bill authorizes the company to become owners of the Gravenhurst Branch by becoming stockholders in it. When we discussed this question before I gave notice in the House that I would move to insert a clause preventing the possibility of an amalgamation of either the Northern or North-Western, or both combined, by either the Grand Trunk Railway or the Canadian Pacific Railway, on Railways, to discuss it. We are giving to day $12,000 a mile to the Gravenhurst Branch upon the distinct understanding that it shall always be an independent line. When the matter came before the Railway Committee on the Hamilton and North-Western Bill it was agreed that the clause of which I had given notice should not go in, but instead of that it was agreed that a clause should be put in, or words be put in, which would forfeit absolutely the Gravenhurst Branch to the Government in the event of amalgamation at any time taking place; and then when this Bill we have before us now, came up, it was agreed that the same clause should be put into it; and I presumed that that clause had been added when it came down here. The clauses now proposed are precisely the clauses that would effect that object, because they authorize the Northern to become possessors of the Gravenhurst Branch, and inasmuch as the Northern to day have powers of amalgamation in the existing charter. After we have given $12,000 a mile to build the Gravenhurst Branch, instead of $6,000, we may find this Northern Railway with that extension united either with the Canadian Pacific Railway or with the Grand Trunk Railway. It seems to me that some mistake has occurred, at any rate, in bringing this Bill down from the Railway Committee. The clause was not put in but, as is very commonly done, the simple statement was made that a similar clause should be put into that which was put in the Hamilton and North-Western Bill, a clause forfeiting absolutely the Gravenhurst Branch to the Government in the event of amalgamation of either the Northern or the North-Western with the Grand Trunk Railway or the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I may say with reference to this matter that I stated to the Committee that it was the intention of the Government to provide in any agreement made with the company for the construction of the Gravenhurst Branch, that in case the Northern and North-Western railways became amalgamated the road would be forfeited to the Government upon the Government paying the amount the road had cost, not to exceed a certain sum to be estimated by the Chief Engineer. That is the statement I made. Some hon. gentlemen in the Committee took exception to that proposal, and said that we ought to forfeit it without any payment outside of the $12,000 per mile. Mr. Boulton was present and acting for the Northern Railway, and he said they had no intention of forfeiting their charter, and consequently did not object to that proposal, and that was the impression upon the minds of the Committee when the clause passed. Mr. Parker and the gentleman con-nected with the Northern Railway proposed to make an arrangement for the construction of the Gravenhurst Branch, and upon learning Mr. Boulton's statement they declared it was quite unauthorized by them, that he was entirely mistaken as to the position of things, and that it would be utterly impossible to construct the Gravenhurst Branch with an arrangement of that kind. I said then if that is the case, this Bill having passed the Committee with that understanding and with that statement on my part, no arrangements can be made unless that contract is made in Committee and laid upon the Table of the House and subject to the disapproval of the House; and that is the position in which the question stands at this moment. I take the earliest opportunity of calling the attention of the House to the fact that the proposal forfeiting the railway absolutely in case of the road losing its independence, would render it entirely impracticable for them to build it, and as I said before, the only means for getting over that difficulty is to have that contract made and submitted to Parliament to take such action as it sees fit.

Mr. BLAKE. Is it a fact that that particular clause was put into the North-Western Railway Company's Bill ? Mr. WHITE (Cardwell) Mr. McCARTHY. I am in a position to say that it is not so. I was informed by the Minister of Railways that the clause was in both Bills, and I went to the Senate to see the Bills, and found they are exactly the same in that respect—the 5th and 6th clauses in this Bill are exactly the same as in the North-Western Bill. I may say it does not appear to me possible that that clause could be put in. It is a mere enabling clause to permit these railway companies to acquire an interest by stock in the road, and the Government must protect the independence of the Canada branch in the contract.

Mr. BLAKE. The whole question is under the control of this Parliament, and if Parliament insists upon particular terms in granting a subsidy to a particular line, then Parliament can reject the hon. gentleman's proposal or modify it. If at this stage it is found impossible to carry out what he and others thought would be good policy at the time, and he lays upon the Table a different proposal not containing the guarantees which were understood to be assented to, he will accompany that, no doubt, with a statement of the reasons why he has altered his view, and he will invite the House to assent to that modified proposal. We will have the whole before us to say nay or yea to it and, of course, we will say yea to it.

Mr. SPROULE. As one of the members of that Railway Committee I distinctly understood that some such clause was to be put in the Bill, providing that if amalgamation took place the Hamilton and North-Western Company building this road should forfeit to the Government whatever work they had done. If that had not been the understanding the Committee would have rejected the Bill.

Amendments read the second time and concurred in.

THE NIAGARA FRONTIER BRIDGE COMPANY.

Mr. CAMERON (Victoria), in moving that the amendments made by the Senate to Bill (No. 91) to incorporate the Niagara Frontier Bridge Company be concurred in, said: The only amendment that may be for a moment considered important in that Bill which was made by the Senate, is the limitation of the time for the commencement of the work from three to two years—they substitute two for three.

Amendments concurred in.

THE SCOTT ACT.

Mr. TUPPER enquired, Whether the view of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, having decided the Scott Act not to be in force in many counties in Nova Scotia, and the recent legislation introduced to amend the said Act, is it the intention of the Government to make any provision to indemnify those parties who have incurred expense in the said counties of applying for licenses under the provisions of the McCarthy Act in consequence of the Scott Act being inoperative?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I am afraid it is impossible for the Government to answer this question until they know the fate of the recent legislation introduced.

INDIAN AGENT AT PARRY SOUND.

Mr. COOK enquired, Whether the Government are aware that the present Indian Agent at Parry Sound, Dr. Walton, keeps a dry goods, provision, drug and seed store, in violation of the regulations governing such officials?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The Government are not aware that Dr. Walton acts in violation of the regulations governing such officials. All I can say is that Dr. Walton stated, when he was appointed, that he did not keep a store of any kind. His appointment is dated 1st April.

FRENCH REPRESENTATION IN THE SENATE.

Mr. TASSE enquired, Whether it is the intention of the Government to take advantage of vacancies which may occur to give to the French element a representation in the Senate proportionate to its numbers? And whether it is the intention of the Government to give the 102,000 French Canadians living in the Province of Ontario a representative in the Senate?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I can only say to the hongentleman that the intention of the Government is to make the best selection they can of Senators, and they will in making such selection have due regard to the number of French Canadians in the Province of Ontario.

THE SCOTT ACT IN NOVA SCOTIA.

Mr. TUPPER enquired, Whether the Government intends to provide for indemnifying parties who have prosecuted in good faith, under the provisions of the Scott Act, in counties in Nova Scotia where the said Act was proclaimed to be in force, but where, according to the recent decision of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, the Act has been declared inoperative?

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The Government have not made up their minds to provide for indemnifying such parties.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL O'MALLEY.

Mr. VAIL, in the absence of Mr. WILSON, enquired, Whether any charges have been preferred against Lieut. Col. O'Malley, of the 25th Battalion of Ontario? If so, when were they made, and what were the charges? Was Lieut-Col. O'Malley suspended by the Government on account of those charges, if so, when? Has an investigation taken place into those charges? If not, why not? And is it the intention of the Government to do so, and when?

Mr. CARON. In answer to the hon. gentleman, I desire to say that charges have been preferred against Lieut.-Col. O'Malley. That officer has been suspended. Pending the investigation of the charges, and until a result is obtained, it would not be in accordance with the regulations of the service to make public any details connected with the case.

Mr. BLAKE. Has the investigation taken place?

Mr. CARON. It is going on.

PUBLIC BUSINESS.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved that on Wednesday next Government Measures have precedence after Routine Proceedings and Questions.

Motion agreed to.

THE JUDICIARY OF MANITOBA.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD moved that the report of the Committee of the Whole on Resolution (page 147^a) to provide for the salary of an additional Puisné Judge of the Queen's Bench, in the Province of Manitoba, be received.

Motion agreed to; Resolution reported, and read the second time and concurred in.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD introduced Bill (No. 146) to provide for the salary and travelling allowances of an additional Puisné Judge of the Court of Queen's Bench, in the Province of Manitoba.

Bill read the first time.

SUBSIDIES TO RAILWAYS.

The House resumed the adjourned debate on the proposed motion of Sir Charles Tupper for the second reading of the Resolution (page 1444) reported from Committee of the Whole respecting subsidies to certain railway companies of Canada, and the motion of Mr. Blake in amendment thereto.

Mr. GIROUARD (Jacques Cartier). Mr. Speaker, in offering a few remarks in answer to the hon. member for Quebec East (Mr. Laurier), I hope the hon. gentleman and the French members of this House will pardon me for not using the French language. I will use the language of the majority of this House, considering that they are as much interested as ourselves in the present debate. Sir, I listened with much attention to the speech of the hon. member for Quebec East; in fact, the members on this side of the House always listen to his s, eeches with interest and respect. I am sorry, however, to say that on the present occasion I listened to his speech with regret and with disappointment. I was surprised to hear the hon. member declare publicly from his seat that the Province of Quebec had no special claim to the indemnity which is embodied in the resolution under consideration, and that the in-demnity had been finally admitted by the Government in consideration of the votes of the French members on the Canadian Pacific Railway resolutions. Reference has been made to a caucus of the French members of Quebec-to a little Parliament of their own, to use the expression of the leader of the Opposition, which was held in Room 8 of this building. I know not what took place in that little Parliament, not having had the honour of a seat in it. I presume there was no official report of the proceedings, and we know what weight to attach to newspaper reports of the proceedings of any Parliament. As a member from the Province of Quebec I was in favour of the Canadian Pacific Railway resolutions upon their merits, upon public grounds, and in the general interest of the country at large. I was not in the least influenced by any consideration that the Province of Quebec was to receive one farthing from the Government of this country. But. Mr. Speaker, even if I had exacted from the Government as a condition sine qua non, a promise that the Quebec claims, or what is known as the Quebec claims, would receive favourable consideration, where would be the wrong? Is it wrong for a creditor, from whom a further advance of money is asked, to put the question, how the money due him already is going to be refunded? The claims of the Province of Quebec were a portion of the policy of the Government in connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway. If the money was due to the Province I fail to see that the members were guilty of such a grave mistake or fault as has been represented by the member for Quebec East (Mr. Laurier). So far as I was concerned, I did not think any promise was necessary from the Government. I had confidence in the fairness of the present Govern-ment and that was the reason why I was willing, as I am always willing, to vote on any question which comes before the House, on its merits. I believe I was right in holding that opinion, as shown by the facts since that time. Did not the present Government grant to the Province of Quebec more than was supposed to have been promised at the French caucus? Did not the present Government grant a good deal more to the Province of Quebec in the adjustment of the interest account on the debts between the Provinces, although no promise was made in that respect? But, Mr. Speaker, what was the nature of the promise which was made? Was it of a nature to do harm to any Province? Was this Government going to give away any-thing which belongs to any of the other Provinces? Were they going to give any undue advantage to Quebec over the other Provinces? No, Mr. Speaker, nothing of the kind. From the reports in Le Canadien, La Minerve and Le Monde which were read by the member for Quebec East last Saturday, it would appear that in the first place a change of the Provincial subsidy was advocated by some French members. Mr. Speaker, it is admitted I believe that this change was not promised. It is admitted all round that the Government was not willing to touch the basis, the foundation, of the Provincial subsidy, because all the Provinces were not represented. What was promised was purely and simply, it appears-if we are going to pay any attention to the reports of the newspapers-the payment of the rail-way subsidy. Why was it so promised? Because that road was a portion of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Rail-Was this claim an extraordinary one? We have W8V. heard a good deal about the bad administration of public affairs in the Province of Quebec. We have also heard a good deal about the good and wise administration of public affairs in that Province. I believe, Sir, this is not a question of administration of Provincial affairs. Whether those affairs were badly or wrongly administered or not, has nothing to do with the foundation of the claim now before the House. Even if Quebec had to-day a surplus to its credit in the Provincial Treasury, she would still be entitled to the indemnity mentioned in the Railway Resolutions, for the simple reason that the road between Ottawa and Quebec is a portion of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The claim, Sir, of the Province of Quebec is based on a public Statute of Canada. That Statute was passed in 1874, at the time when hon. geutlemen opposite were governing this country. That Statute says :

"The Governor in Council may also grant such bonus or bonuses, subsidy or subsidies, to any company or companies already incorporated or to be hereafter incorporated, not exceeding $12,000 per mile, as will secure the construction of branch lines extending from the eastern ter-minus of the Canadian Pacific Railway to connect with existing lines of railway.

The Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental Railway, otherwise known as the Quebec Government Railway was not then in existence - I refer to the year 1874. It was then in contemplation, or was at the beginning of its construction; but it was more than a branch line. It was the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway-it was the most direct route to the summer seaports of this country; and unless Quebec is to be less considered than a private railway company, I do not see how we could refuse Quebec the $12,000 per mile for constructing a portion of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, when we see that same bonus granted by the laws of this country, in favour of a private company willing to build only the branch line. Is it not also a fact that in 1878 a further subsidy was granted to the Canada Central, from Lake Nipissing to Pembroke, as an extension of the Canadian Pacific Railway? Did the Government at that time exact that the Canada Central should be sold to the Canadian Pacific Railway? No, Sir; the only thing exacted was that running powers should be reserved or stipulated in favour of the Government and the lessees of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Mr. MACKENZIE. And some others.

Mr. GIROUARD. What others?

Mr. MACKENZIE. The Kingston and Pembroke, and another which might be mentioned.

Mr. GIROUARD. What others?

Mr. MACKENZIE. There were others.

Mr. GIROUARD. No running powers except in favour of the Government and the lessee.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Yes; there were others.

Mr. GIROUARD. Whether there were or not would not make any difference to my position, which was that a certain amount was to be granted in favour of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Now, what is the position of the Canadian Pacific Railway to-day, with regard to what is known as the Quebec 'Ottawa to Quebec. In face of the Statute of 1874-in

Mr. GIBOUARD.

Government road? It has acquired the western section from Ottawa to Montreal, which is to-day its eastern extension. It has acquired traffic arrangements between Montreal and Quebec, which arrangements have been secured to the Canadian Pacific Railway under its deed of purchase of the western section. More than that; under its deed of purchase, no company, not even the Grand Trunk Railway Company to day, can have any advantage over the Canadian Pacific Railway for the section between Montreal and Quebec. I believe these traffic arrangements which the Canadian Pacific Railway Company have secured over the eastern section of the Quebec road are equivalent to running powers; and, as I said before, if the Canada Central was entitled to $12,000 a mile for extending the Canadian Pacific to Pembroke. I do not see why the Quebec Government is not entitled to $12,000 a mile for building the road from Montreal to Quebec, considering that traffic arrangements equivalent to running powers have been secured to the Canadian Pacific Railway. In a letter which has lately been addressed by Mr. Hickson to the hon. Minister of Public Works, which I find printed in the public press, and which I believe has been laid on the Table of this House, I read:

"You are, no doubt, sware that in the agreement for the sale of the western section of the Quebec line to the Pacific Company, it was stipulated that traffic should be carried over the North Shore line to and stipulated that traffic should be carried over the North Shore line to and from the Pacific Railway, on terms which are mentioned in the deed. These conditions the North Shore Company have been and are quite willing to carry out, and I really do not see that there should be any difficulty in making such arrangements under this contract as would admit of the Pacific Company's traffic being transported satisfactorily over the North Shore Railway, that company, if they should desire to do so, performing their own terminal work in Montreal and Quebec. I would like also to add that in so far as the Grand Trunk Company are interested in the question, they are quite willing that running powers should be given to the Pacific Company for their through traffic over in case of difficulty, settled by arbitration ; there has been no desire on the part of the Grand Trunk Company to place difficulties in the way of the traffic of the Canadian Pacific Company reaching Quebec." In answer to this letter Mr George Stenhen the President.

In answer to this letter, Mr. George Stephen, the President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, on the 7th of April, instant, wrote:

"I shall be glad if in the future the terms of the agreement can be carried out. In that case, all through freight must be carried over both roads at rates to be fixed as established by the agreement, and arrange-ments must be made for the sale and for the shipment of freight at Que-oec to points at or beyond Ottawa, exclusively vid the Ganadian Pachic. I quite agree with Mr. Hickson that if the arrangements are made and carried out in good faith the traffic of the company can be satisfactorily transported over the North Shore Railway to Quebec as its summer port. As regards Mr. Hickson's surgestion as to the running powers to Que transported over the North Shore Railway to Quebec as its summer port. As regards Mr. Hickson's suggestion as to the running powers to Que-bec, I must say that until our traffic is more fully developed, and con-nection is made at Quebec with the Intercolonial Railway so as to increase the value of the through traffic, such running powers would be of questionable value; indeed, I doubt if, without precipitation in the local traffic, any amount of competition in through traffic would make running powers desirable. If the provision of the existing contract, between the Government of Quebec and the company, relaung to the interchange of the traffic, are carried out, the interests of the city of Quebec and of this company will be as well protected as by the conces-sion of running powers." sion of running powers.

Now, these traffic arrangements, great as they are, are under the immediate supervison and protection of the Minister of Railways; and if they are not used by the Canadian Pacific Railway to-day, it is certainly not the fault of the Province of Quebec, which has secured them to that road. The Province of Quebec should therefore get $12,000 a mile on the whole line. I hope that these traffic arrangements will be carried out in good faith between the Grand Trunk Railway Company, which owns the largest portion of the stock of the North Shore, and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company; and if they are carried out, the $6,000 a mile which has been retained by the Government for the purpose of extending the Canadian Pacific from Montreal to Quebec, will be hereafter paid to the Province of Quebec, and thus will be completed the full indemnity to that Province for the construction of the Canadian Pacific from face of the subsidy given to the Canada Central in 1878in face of all these circumstances, we are told that the Province of Quebec has no special claim to the subsidy mentioned in the Resolution. The policy of this subsidy has been established, not only by the late Administration, but also by the present Administration. Did we not at this Session, and at a previous Session, grant to the Gravenhurst and Callander Railway Company a bonus of $12,000 a mile—$6,000 at the previous Session, and $5,000 at this Session—and for what purpose? Only to establish a branch line of the Canadian Pacific. For what purpose? For the purpose of putting the Province into direct communication with the Canadian Pacific Railroad and the West. Notwithstanding the great danger that exists that, through that branch line from Callander to Gravenhurst and Toronto, a considerable portion of the traffic of the Canadian Pacific Railway will be diverted to the ports of Philadelphia, Baltimore and New York, by way of the American lines which pass near the Suspension Bridge at a short distance from Toronto; and notwithstanding the fact that this line is less a national line than the line constructed by the Quebec Government from Ottawa to Quebec, it has received a bonus of $12,000 a mile; and yet we are told that the mainline from Ottawa to Quebec deserves less consideration. A Bill came under the notice of this House at this very Session regarding the Northern and North-Western Rail-way Company—a company which I believe received in 1875 or 1876 the sum of $2,000,000, besides interest, from the Treasury of this Dominion, notwithstanding that at that time that railway could not be constituted even a branch line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, although to day it has become such. Have we not also provided at this very Session for the purchase of the Pictou Branch and of the Eastern Extension Railway in the Province of Nova Scotia at a cost of $1,250,000 for the purpose of extending the Intercolonial Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway? The Resolution for the purchase of this Nova Scotia Government railway was laid on the Table of this House at the very time that the resolution on the Canadian Pacific Rail-way was being discussed. Did it occur to the mind of any hon. member that it was done in that way for the purpose of influencing the deputation from that Province. No; that did not occur even to the mind of the hon. member for Quebec East; he had to select the Province of Quebec as his point to make his insinuations of corruption. The hon. leader of the Opposition, in his speech on the amendment, has referred to the immense sacrifices which have been made by the various Provinces to promote railway interests, but the hon. gentleman forgot to state what everybody knows as having a great bearing on the consideration of the question before us -- he forgot to mention that nearly 600 miles of railway have been built in the Province of Ontario by the Canadian Government; and with regard to these 600 miles of the Canadian Pacific Railway from Port Arthur to Cal-lander, I would ask is not Ontario going to benefit by the construction of that railway? Will it not open up a large territory of the Province of Ontario? Is not the construction of that railway going to open valuable timber limits belonging to that Province?—600 miles of railway entirely built by this Government, not only $12,000 a mile but the whole of it. In fact if Quebec were to get full justice, if she were to get that justice which has been given to Ontario, she should get the full cost of the construction of the Quebec road between Ottawa and Quebec. Looking to what has taken place in all the Provinces, I find that every railway expenditure, every local expenditure, in connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway, has been or is about to be paid in whole or in part by this Government, and it is no doubt with the view that all the Provinces should be short line between Montreal and the Maritime Provinces to secure an extension of the Canadian Pacific Railway to the Canadian winter ports. I think that all the Provinces have been equally treated; perhaps the one that has received the least is the Province of Quebec, but I hope that hereafter we shall have full justice. The other Provinces have no reason to be, and I am sure are not jealous of the Province of Quebec. As justice has been done to all, either before or during the present Session, if Quebec were left out as seems to be the wish of the hon. member for Quebec East, a gross injustice will be committed, an injustice condemned by the policy of the late Administration, as well as by the policy of the present one. The hon. member for Quebec East has referred to the motion made by his friends before the Legislative Assembly of Quebec in 1875, declaring that considering that the Government railway between Ottawa and Quebec was practically - the French expression is virtuellement-a portion of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, it was but just that Federal aid should be asked. It would appear that the friends of my hon. friend for Quebec East were more patriotic than he was himself.

Mr. LAURIER. What were yours?

Mr. GIROUARD. I will come to that in a moment, and you, Mr. Speaker, will see the reason why they could not show their patriotism; but even in this case the friends of the hon, gentleman were not sincere, they were not serious. How did this motion come before the House? It came as an amendment to the Speech from the Throne, as a vote of non-confidence to defeat the Government. If the friends of my hon, friend were sincere, if they really desired that Quebec should receive ail from this Government, they would have made their motion at a more opportune time, but they did not do so; and in this respect they followed the policy of my hon friend and his political friends. My hon, friend was then not only a member of this House but a member of the Cabinet.

Mr. BLAKE. No.

Mr. GIROUARD. If not, his political friends were in the Cabinet and he had as much power, as an influential member of that party, as had almost a Minister of the Crown. If the Liberals were so patriotic as they wanted to make it appear they were before the Quebec Assembly, why did not the hon. gentleman, who was not a member of the Cabinet and was therefore more free to act in the defence of his Province, not rise in Parliament to make the same motion his friends in Quebec had made? Why? Because he was no more patriotic than were his friends in Quebec. No, Sir, that satisfaction was not and could not be given by hon. gentlemen opposite to the Province of Quebec. Do hon. gentlemen want to know the reason why? The reason was because the Province of Quebec was Conservative, and we ought not to be surprised if it has become more C nservative, considering that Liberals like the hon. member for Quebec East have continued since that time to mis-represent that Province, and run it down. Do you want to have an idea of the tender feeling of the Government of those days towards the Province of Quebec, especially in connection with this rail-way? During the Session of 1 > 78, at that very time when a subsidy of $12,000 a mile was granted to the Canada Control the Hon Mr. Tupper, now the Minister of Canada Central, the Hon. Mr. Tupper, now the Minister of Railways and Canals, moved, seconded by the hon. the then leader of the Opposition and now leader of this Government: "Whether any negotiation is pending as to the purchase of the Quebec Government road?" Here is the answer of the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie, then the leader of the Government : "All he had ever heard on the subject was a remark made by a Minister in the House of Assembly in treated alike that the Government, by this very reso- Quebec. When the question was asked he gave as an lution, has granted a subsidy of $200,000 to build a answer that the Government of Quebec should make no approach to the Federal Ministers until they were chased out of Parliament by whips and cords." Mr. Speaker, the General Elections took place about six months after that speech, and hon gentlemen opposite. who were then on the Treasury Benches, were so badly whipped, and the cords were so strongly tied around them, that ever since they have not been able to leave their chairs on the other side of the House, they have not been able to cross the floor of the House. They were not only defeated, but they were chased out of Parliament by the voice of an indignant people. I will vote against the amendment of the hon. the leader of the Opposition, and I will give the reasons why. I will vote against that motion because the question is not to consider the past local expenditure of the Provinces, but to consider whether the indemnity given to the Province of Quebec is connected with the Canadian Pacific Railway. If the question was whether Quebec should be indemnified for her general expenditure on her local railways, which she has built or contributed to build in the Province, I could understand ; that the leader of the Opposition might have some reason to make that amendment; but the question is whether the Quebec Government road is a portion of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and I believe there cannot be two opinions upon that point. If the hon. gentleman or any of his friends beside him or behind him can quote a single instance of a railway, in any of the Provinces, built by the Provincial Government, which is to-day a portion of the Canadian Pacific Railway, I for one, and I believe all the members from the Province of Quebec, and not only the Province of Quebec, but all the other Provinces-because we all wish to give fair play to everyone-will give a fair hearing to that case and give it a favourable decision. Now I may be permit ted, in concluding, to make a few observations on what has been called the Provincial subsidy question. A change in the Provincial subsidy means a change in our Constitution. I for one am not willing to consider that question until all the Provinces ask for it. I hope, however, that the Legislature of Quebec especially—I am not referring to any other—will consider seriously the consequences of taking the course of asking for a change in the Provincial subsidy or in the Constitution. If the subsidy is changed, the door to changes of our Constitution is opened and remains widely open. To day that door may be open only to consider financial questions, but, when once it is open, you do not know whether it will not be open also for the purpose of touching upon rights more sacred than money. I hope that, with the aid which this Parliament is going to give to the Province of Quebec, there will be no necessity for that Province to ask for a change in the subsidy. But, even if it be found that that aid will be insufficient to meet the yearly financial deficit, I hope that other means will be adopted to come to the relief of that Province. Our people are not so much afraid of direct taxation as has been represented. Our people are in the habit, every year, of paying direct taxation in municipal affairs, and I believe we can educate our people to pay direct taxation to maintain Provincial institutions. Considering, also, that the Quebec Government has undertaken seriously the work of public retrenchment, I hope there will be no necessity for the Province to impose direct taxation or to come any more before this Parliament, except perhaps to get the $6,000 a mile which is kept to day. But, if it is found necessary in the interests of Confederation that a change in Provincial subsidies should take place, I may tell hon. members of this House, no matter from what portion of the country they may come, no matter to what Province they belong, that the Province of Quebec will act in harmony with them in their common and joint interests, and also to the bost advantage of the whole Dominion of Canada.

Mr. AUGER. I will not detain the House long, but I have a word to say, and that is in reference to what the hon. Mr. GIRO UARD, the Secretary of State said the other day in speaking on this question and accusing this side of the House of being keyhole listeners. Now I deny the imputation. We are not spittoon scratchers; we are not men who sell the secrets of office for money, and we would have been foolish to listen through the keyholes, because all we had to do was to stand in our places and read what was going on in the faces of members on the other side of the House. I watched the countenances of the members of the Government at the time, and I could read there what was going on in Room No. 8. I never had much sympathy for the leader of the Government, I must confess, but on that memorable Tuesday I did feel for him; and I rather blamed his supporters for putting the screw on him so hard. I will not detain the House much longer. The question has been well discussed on both sides of the House. I rise to move, in amendment to the amendment, that the following words be added to those proposed by the amendment:---

And this 'House regrets that the Government has not seen fit to propose that, pending the expenditure of the sum of $960,000 reserved and provided for the extension of the Canadian Pacific Railway to Quebec, the interest thereon should be paid to the Government of the Province of Quebec.

Mr. CHAPLEAU. I am very sorry my hon. friend who has just taken his seat has accused me of having said in the House something which I did not say—or certainly never intended to say—namely, that members of this House on the other side have been listening at the keyholes of doors. I said that what had passed in that Committee might have been obtained through keyholes and telegraphed to some of the newspapers. I never intended alluding to the members of this House, but only to parties outside.

Mr. HOUDE. I suppose the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Auger) approves of the amendment offered by his leader, and makes his own amendment to complete the first one. It seems to me his sub-amendment is what we call in French a comble. What is the amendment proposed by the leader of the Opposition? It is, Sir, in effect, that we ought not to vote the amount which the Government propose to give to the Province of Quebec in connection with the construction of the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental Railway----

Some hon. MEMBERS. No, no.

Mr. HOUDE. Let me finish my sentence—unless the same compensation is given to other Provinces.

Mr. BLAKE. That is not the amendment.

Mr. HOUDE. That is the meaning it conveys, it amounts to the same thing; and the amendment of the hon. member for Shefford is that we ought not only to pay this subsidy, amounting in all to $3,354,000, but that we ought also to pay the interest on $960,000. Well, that is about what I suggested myself. I would not be opposed to that, only I find it rather inconsistent on the part of the hon. member for Shefford to propose that amendment, if he is going to v te for the amendment of the leader of the Opposition. I would not have made any remark on this occasion, but that the hon. member for Quebec East (Mr. Latrier) has mentioned my name in connection with a paragraph in the Canadien which he read.

Mr. LAURIER. I did not mention your name; I read the paragraph.

Mr. HOUDE. It amounts to the same thing. I understood that the paragraph he read states that about ten or twelve days before the vote was taken on the Canadian Pacific Railway Resolutions, I went with the hon. member for Laval (Mr. Ouimet), and the hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Amyot), to interview the Minister of Public Works, and that we asked something of him—I do not remember exactly what the paper says it was—and that we threatened to oppose the Government if they did not comply with our request. Sir, I did nothing of the kind on that day. When I believe that the Government is inclined to do injustice to any particular Province, I shall not take the trouble to go to the office of Ministers and threaten them with voting against the Government, I shall stand up in the House and tell them what I think. But if I do not remember exactly what the Canadien says we asked, I remember very well what we did ask. We did not ask anything, in reality; we only suggested that some members wanted to lay before the House on a certain day-I think it was on Thursday, according to the notice of motion given by the non. member for Laval-the question of the readjustment of the Provincial subsidy, and that we would be glad if the leader of the Government would not press the Canadian Pacific Railway resolutions to a vote until this question had been discussed in the House. At the same time we expressed a hope that considering there was a large surplus this year, the question of the indemnity to the Province of Quebec for the construction of the North Shore Railway would be taken into consideration this Session, and we further suggested that if the Government thought proper and were able to do so with the means at their disposal, they should subsidize colonization railways, and that we would prefer, as I briefly stated the other day, that they should subsidize a fewor number of railways but select the most important of them. That is what we said. About that time some one spoke to me of the article in the Canadien, and when I met the editor of that paper in the Russell House, I remarked to him that he had incorrectly reported what took place. The hon, member for Montreal East (Mr. Coursol), and the hon. member for Joliette (Mr. Guilbault) were present when I stated to the editor of the Canadien that he had incorrectly reported what took place. It has been asserted in the papers, and it has been binted in this House, that the Quebec members had sold their votes on the Canadian Pacific Railway Resolutions. Well, Sir, we discussed those resolutions among ourselves, as we had a right to do, I suppose, and as the hon. members of the Opposition doubtless discussed them among themselves. For myself, I considered the reasons for and against the said resolutions, and I thought that those against them were the strongest, and I accordingly voted against them. But I must say that when the members from the Province of Quebec asked the cpinion of the Government about certain questions affecting their Province, as has been done by members of almost all the other Provinces of the Dominion, I do not think that we ought to be accused of selling ourselves to the Government, as has been stated by certain hon. members and by certain newspapers. I was not bound at all to vote for the Government. I was not present when the hon. gentleman told us as far as he could, according to constitutional practice, what they proposed to do in connection with the question which interestel the Province of Quebec. But the proof that the members from Quebec were not bound to vote for the resolutions is, that I for one voted against them, and in doing so I did not commit any breach of promise or honour, for if I had promised to vote for them, I would have kept my word. I did not bind myself, and I do not think any member bound himself-any member from the Province of Quebec. After the answer of the Government was known, it was understood that every man was left free to vote according to his convictions, and I suppose every hon. member so voted. It is known that members vote for measures to which they have objections, and even strong objections. I have voted several times in favour of measures against some of the details of which I had strong objections, but I so acted considering the whole measure, and not a part of them only. That is what was done in that case. I do not wish to appear to be ill dis-posed towards the other Provinces. If the leader of the Opposition and the hon. member for Quebec East come here and state clearly the case of any Province of the Dominion which has not been treated with justice, I will unite with them in supporting a measure to treat that Province with justice. But to day the leader of the Opposition -I do not mean to say that he denied the justice of the claims of the Province of Quebec, for I did not understand him to do so-having admitted, at least impliedly, the claim of the Province of Quebec in connection with this railway question-moved an amendment which sets forth that other Provinces will be treated with unfairness and injustice unless a money grant is paid them at the same time. Tho hon gentleman supported his argument by elaborate and cleverly prepared statistics, as he well knows how to do. But I must say that in my opinion at least, his statistics are not complete. He comes here and tells us that all the Provinces have paid about the same subsidies in aid of the construction of railways according to their population, and that Quebec has not paid more than other Provinces.

Mr. BLAKE. I said Quebec had paid rather in excess. Mr. HOUDE. The hon. gentleman stated, I think, that the excess was not great. I think the leader of the Opposition and the hon. member for Quebec East must also take into consideration what has been paid out of the Dominion Treasury to Provinces in connection with railway construction in the different Provinces. I have not had time to make my statistics as complete and accurate perhaps as are those of the leader of the Opposition; but they are at least approximately correct. And what do we find? It must be remembered that the money voted has not all been paid out, but I follow the same basis of argument in regard to all the Provinces. As early as 1874 we find that the Government of the hon. member for East York (Mr. Mackenzie) proposed to subsidize the Canada Central Railway to the amount of $12,000 per mile. That resolution was ratified in 1878, if I remember rightly.

Mr. MACKENZIE. No. If the hon. gentleman will allow me—and at the same time I may correct the hon. member for Jacques Cartier—I will say that on March 13th, 1875, the Government ratified an Order in Council granting a subsidy to the Canada Central Railway of $12,000 per mile for 120 miles, it being provided that the company should enter into an agreement to grant running powers on terms to be approved by the Governor in Council to the Northern Colonization Railway (that is the road from Montreal to Ottawa), the Kingston and Pembroke Railway and all such other companies as may be designated or approved by the Governor in Council.

Mr. GIROUARD. I ask the hon. gentleman to read the Order in Council of 1878. That is the last one, and it is the one I have read. The grant was given in consequence of the Canadian Pacific Railway being extended eastward from Lake Nipissing.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The route, according to this Order in Council, was defined generally as ascending the valley of the Bonnechère from the vicinity of the village of Douglas, vid Golden Lake and Round Lake, thence by as direct a line as may be found to Burnt Lake, and thence to the proposed terminus of the Government railway at or about the 85th mile from the Georgian Bay. But it was deemed necessary to change the route in consequence of alleged difficulties met with in surveying the line, and the Order in Council of 1878 was passed in order to effect the change of route—not affecting, however, the original Order in Council in the least.

Mr. HOUDE. In 1880, under the present Government, that promise of a subsidy to the Canada Central was made good, and the Government undertook to pay that railway an amount of over $1,800,000.

Mr. MACKENZIE. No.

Mr. HOUDE. Yes.

Mr. BLAKE. That was merely because the Government agreed to defer further payment for some time, the subsidy remaining the same, $1,440,000.

Mr. HOUDE. There is therefore an excess in my calculation of the difference between those sums. In 1881 we granted money to the Canadian Pacific Railway to build different sections, which were not under construction; and I may fairly assume that, if I state as a contribution by the Federal Treasury to the construction of the eastern section of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which has a length of over 600 miles in the Province of Ontario, north of Lake Superior from Callander to Port Arthur, at $3,500,000, it will be considered a very moderate amount. Before that time we had given to the Northern Railway over $1,800,000 beyond that. The hon. gentleman says it was not to help that railway, but it was the Government of his friends who gave that money to the Northern Railway Company to help them by affording them the means to continue to serve the local traffic in an important part of the Province of Ontario, and insuring to that Province competition against a monopoly by other roads. In 1882 we voted to the Gravenhurst and Callander line, $660,000. In 1883 we voted to the Napanee and Tamsworth line, $89,600. And in the same year to the Gravenhurst and Callander road a further sum of $660,000. By the resolutions before the House we propose to vote to the Irondale, Bancroft and Ottawa Railway Company, $160,000; to the Aylmer and Pembroke Railway, $272,000, of which amount, as that road runs between the two Provinces, I will assign one-third to Ontario and two-thirds to Quebec-making $90,000 more to Ontario. To the Napanee and Tamworth line we propose to vote another sum of $70,400; and to the Erie and Huron Railway, $96,000. To the Ontario and Pacific Railway Company for their line from Cornwall to Perth, we propose to vote $262,400, and to the Kingston and Pembroke, $48,000. There is besides that the subsidy to the Canada Central Railway, which the hon. gentleman says amounts to $1,400,000. Now let us take the Province of Quebec, and as I have counted the balance remitted to the Northern Railway Company. I shall include for the Province of Quebec $1,500,000 which was paid for the purchase of the Grand Trunk Branch from Lévis to Rivière du Loup, though it did not add a mile of railway in the Province. In 1882 we voted $384,000 for the Lake St. John Railway, and to the Rivière du Loup to Edmunston, $240,000. As this railway is partly in New Brunswick, and partly in Quebec, I shall assign one half to each. making the amount for Quebec, $120,000; for the Baie des Chaleurs Railway, we voted in 1883, $320,000. I understand that this year the Government instead of that amount have decided to vote $300,000 for a part of the construction of that railway, and I take both amounts against the Province of Quebec. Then there has been voted to the Gatineau Valley Railway, $160,000; to the International Railway, $156,000; to the Montreal and Western Railway, $160,000; and in 1883 to the Lake St. John Railway, $80,000; and in 1884 to the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental Rail way, from Quebec to Ottawa, in all $3,354,000.

Mr. MACKENZIE. The hon. gentleman has forgotten that part of the Intercolonial from Rivière du Loup to Restigouche. He has counted the Northern Railway which was done long before Confederation; but he has not included this other road from Rivière du Loup to Restigouche, a distance of about 200 miles, I think.

Mr. HOUDE. I said I was only going to speak of railways for which money was voted after the basis of Confederation had been established, and the Intercolonial was taken charge of by the Government of Ottawa as being a basis of Confederation;

Mr. HOUDE.

Mr. MACKENZIE. But as the hon. gentleman has included the Northern Railway, he should include the other.

Mr. HOUDE. But the money was voted after Confederation.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Not a dollar; on the contrary we compelled the company to pay back one million of what they got.

Mr. HOUDE. The hon. gentleman says we did not pay the money properly, but the money was due to this Government and the Government remitted part of it, so it was given in that way.

Mr. MACKENZIE. What about the Grand Trunk?

Mr. HOUDE. I have counted the Grand Trunk against the Province of Quebec—though it was built before Confederation—from Lévis to Rivière du Loup. Then we have the Quebec Central, $211,200; the road from Aylmer to Pembroke, two-thirds of the subsidy we voted this year, $182,000; the Gatineau Railway, $160,000; the Montreal and Western Railway Company, a further sum of $160,000; to the Great Northern Railway, $32,000; the Jacques Cartier Union Railway, $200,000; to the line from St. Andrews to Lachute, $22,400; for the line from Rivière St. Maurice to Lake des Isles, $217,100, and to the road from Metapediac to Paspebiac, $300,000. I would like to enquire of the Government, with regard to this road, whether this sum of $300,000 is in addition.to the amount voted last year to the Baie des Chaleurs Railway.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The case stands in this way: The subsidy last year was $3,200 per mile for 100 miles. It is now proposed to leave that subsidy standing, with the exception of 20 miles, and instead of allowing so much per mile, to construct, as a branch of the Intercolonial, at a cost of $300,000, the first 20 miles, leaving the $3,200 a mile standing on the balance of the distance, 80 miles.

Mr. HOUDE. At any rate I was leaving the two items standing against the Province of Quebec. These sums will make for the Province of Quebec $7,719,003, deducting $64,000 for the twenty miles in question, and for the Province of Ontario, $3,836,000. Coming next to New Brunswick, I count half of the subsidy for the branch from Rivière du Loup to Edmunston, $120,000; to the Caraquet Railway, in 1883, $115,000; to the Northern and Western Railway, in 1883, $102,000; to the line from Petitcodiac to Havelock Corner, 1883, $38,000; to the St. John Bridge and Railway Extension Company---

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. That is a loan,

Mr. HOUDE. I saw by some Orders in Council that the Government undertook to make an advance of 80 per cent. of the cost.

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. It was merely a loan.

Mr. HOUDE. Bearing interest payable to the Government?

Sir LEONARD TILLEY. Yes.

Mr. HOUDE. In 1884 we propose to grant a subsidy to the Short Line Railway, of which I charge half against New Brunswick and half against Nova Scotia. The subsidy is $170,000 a year for fifteen years, making $1,275,000 for each of the two Provinces. Again in 1884 we propose to subsidize the Northern and Western Railway for $26,000 which, added to the grant of last year, makes a total of $128,000; also the St. Louis and Richibucto Railway, for $22,400; the railway from Hopewell to Alma for $51,200; a branch of the Central Railway for $128,000; the railway from Caraquet to Shippigan, for $76,800; and the railway from Derby to Indian Town, for $140,000; making a total for New Brunswick of $2,094,400. Now, what have we voted to Nova Scotia? In 1877 we transferred 75 miles of the Intercolonial Railway, the Truro and Pictou Branch, to a company to insure the construction of the New Glasgow and Canso line; and in 1879 we transferred it to the Government of Nova Scotia. If I value that property at $750,000, I think it will be regarded as a moderate estimate, as it represents only $10,000 a mile.

Mr. VAIL. Only 54 miles of road was transferred. The other part was taken back by the Government.

Mr. HOUDE. In'1882, we granted for the Oxford and New Glasgow Railway $224,000; in the same year we transferred to the Government of Nova Scotia, the Windsor Branch of 32 miles —

Mr. VAIL. That is still owned by the Government.

Mr. HOUDE. It belongs to the Government of Nova Scotia as long as they take the means of using it and enjoying the benefit of it. The hon. member will notice that I am not calculating the amount of money or property represented by money, which has actually been expended, but what this House had the good will to vote to the several Provinces. That 32 miles of railway, I estimate as worth $10,000 a mile, making $320,000. In 1882 we also voted $150,000 per annum for 25 years for the Chignecto Marine Transport Railway Company.

Mr. BLAKE. I believe it is abandoned.

Mr. HOUDE. Well, it is what Parliament had the good will to vote for the benefit of Nova Scotia, and it amounted to $3,750,000. In 1883, we voted for the Short Line Railway, from Canso to Louisburg or Sydney, a subsidy of $256,000; and in 1884, we propose to vote for the Short Line Railway again, $170,000 a year for fifteen years, half of which I charge to Nova Scotia, or $1,275,000. For the line from Oxford to Sydney or Louisburg, we propose to vote $450,000; we propose to transfer the railway from New Glasgow to Canso, for which we paid $1,200,000, half of which I charge, $600,000; and to the railway from Annapolis to Digby we propose to grant $64,000; making, in all, of money voted for the benefit of Nova Scotia, $7,689,000. Now, if we deduct this subsidy which the Government propose to vote to the Province of Quebec for the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental Railway, that is $3,354,000, from the total amount voted by this Parliament since Confederation in the interest of the Province of Quebec in connection with railway construction, there remains only $3,365,200, against $7,000,000 and more for Nova Scotia, $2,000,000 for New Brunswick, and $8,800,000 for Ontario. 1 have prepared these figures to show that the subsidy of $3,000,000 and something proposed to be voted by the Government to the Province of Quebec in connection with the Quebec, Montreal and Occidental Railway, taken with all the rest of the subsidies voted to the Province of Quebec or proposed to be voted this year, will not give proportionately more to the Province of Quebec than what has been already voted to the other Provinces.

It being Six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

Mr. HOUDE. Mr. Speaker, I have quoted these figures, but I do not pretend that they are exactly complete or perfectly accurate. As I said at the beginning, I believe them to be approximately correct. Of course if I had time to go over the same work again I would find, doubtless, that I had omitted some amounts either in Quebec or in the four Provinces of which I have spoken. But I have quoted enough to show that the representatives of Quebec in this Parliament, to whom the hon. member for Quebec East has thought proper to appeal for justice to the other Provinces, have not waited until to-day to manifest a spirit of justice to the other Provinces, and that on former occasions they have not hesitated to vote large sums of public money in order to assist in the progress of the other Provinces. That is my argument, and I will not insist any longer on this point at this stage of the Session, and when other hon. members wish to speak on the same question. But before resuming my seat, I desire to say a word in regard to the Short Line route question. In Committee of the Whole I proposed an amendment to the effect that the shortest route should be sought for on Canadian territory. I did not press the vote as there were not many members in the House, and perhaps the House would not desire to alter the Government's resolution in that way. But I would suggest a slight change which might be made in the wording of the Bill to be founded on these resolutions, that is, that instead of the shortest route, it should be the most advantageous route.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The words used are "shortest and best," which will no doubt cover what the hon, gentleman desires.

Mr. HOUDE. That meets my objection, at least to a certain extent. I should also like the Government to insert a clause in the Bill to the effect that Parliament shall be consulted before the final choice of a route is made. The Government have the confidence of a great majority of this Parliament, and I think the Government must have some confidence too in Parliament itself, and I believe it is the right and it is the duty of Parliament to insist on being consulted before the choice of such route is finally determined, this not being the case of an ordinary railway route. When the Intercolonial was contemplated we all remember it was the policy of the Conservative party to have that railway built on Canadian territory although it lengthened the road very much, because we wanted our national railway to be entirely on Canadian soil. I do not pretend to say that we must sacrifice all other considerations to that one, but that consideration, to my mind, must have very great weight in the choice of a route for any national railway. When we contemplated the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, that idea was again propounded by those in favour of that great national enterprise. I want to call the attention of the Government to an important fact. Article 29 of the Treaty of Washington, guarantees to Canada the advantage of the bonded system, but only from the ports of New York, Boston, Portland, or any American port. When, however, the privilege will operate so as to give an advantage to a Canadian Port and to the detriment of an American Port, are we sure the United States Government, which is essentially practical, and acts in the interests of its own people, will not adhere strictly to the letter of that article? It is true that just now, and for some time past, the United States Government have allowed our goods to go through American territory to Manitoba and back; but perhaps the Government have a less interest in preventing us from enjoying that bonded system through the western States than they would have to prevent the building of the Canadian seaports at the expense of their own eastern seaports. Besides, there is another important fact, that the United States Government have denounced the Washington Treaty. Are we sure they will not delay for several years the renewal of that Treaty; and even if they consent to renew it, are we sure they will insert in the new Treaty a clause to guarantee to us the privilege of the bonded system through the State of Maine in order to favour one of our seaports to the detriment of their own seaports? They expect from our railway system a share of the through traffic, and they will be only too glad to enjoy that traffic, as they are a practical nation and a selfish nation too, I dare say. This is another reason why, if we can find a route, although not quite as short but nearly as short, on Canadian territory,

State of Maine. I have spoken of through traffic by way of the State of Maine; I have spoken of difficulties which may eventually arise in regard to through traffic by a route a portion of which is through American territory; but there is also an important question in regard to passenger traffic, and that is the annoyance to which they would be subjected by being submitted to two examinations of baggage, namely, by the Custom house officers of the Dominion and the United States. Many of us would prefer to travel 40 or 50 miles further by a route on Canadian territory, than submit to such an annoyance. With respect to the amendment of the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Auger), I do not think hon. members who accept the resolutions of the Government as a whole, can vote for that amendment. It is not offered in the place of the amendment moved by the leader of the Opposition-it is an addition to that amendment; and to my mind the amendment of the leader of the Opposition expresses regret not well founded and blame not deserved.

Mr. GIROUARD. I rise, Mr. Speaker, with respect to the correction made by the hon. member for East York (Mr. Mackenzie) as to the subsidy granted to the Canada Central in 1874 and 1878. If I understood the hon. gentleman correctly, he said that running powers were secured not only in favour of the Government or the lessees of their road, but also in favour of other railways, and he mentioned the Northern Colonization, the Kingston and Pembroke road, and perhaps also some railways connecting with the Canadian Pacific Railway. I was under the impression that those running powers had been secured in favour of the Government or the lessees of their road; but I find I was mistaken even in that. The Order in Council of 1878 reads as follows, with respect to this particular measure :—

"That the company shall enter into an agreement to grant running powere, on terms to be approved by the Governor in Council, to the Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental Kailway now in progress of construction from Montreal, on the northern side of the Ottawa river, or any railway in extension thereof, from any point of intersection west of the town of Renfrew, that many be approved of by the Governor in Council, and also to the Kingston and Pembroke Railway, from the point of intersection of their sine, provided such point of intersection is at or west of Renfrew, and to such other companies as may have the termini of their systems on or towards Lake Huror, and which may be designated by the Governor in Council as entitled to such running powers; Provided that the terms of such running powers to any of the said companies or roads may be mutually agreed upon by the Oanada Central Railway Company and the Quebec Government, and the other companies named, and in the event of disagreement, the conditions to be settled by arbitration, one arbitrator to be selected by each party and one by the Governor in Council.

in Council. "The Government of Canada and the lessees or future owners of the Government line, westward of the western terminus of the subsidized line, shall possess running powers on the said railway on similar terms to the companies designated."

What is the meaning of it? Nothing was secured by the Order in Council.

Mr. MACKENZIE. It is very plain.

Mr. GIROUARD. Yes; but not in the sense of the hon. gentleman.

Mr. MACKENZIE. Wholly so.

Mr. GIROUARD. Nothing was secured by the Order in Council. The Government did not even secure running powers over the Canada Central, but only such running powers as would be agreed to between the above named companies, and suppose the above companies never came to an agreement, as was the case? Where is the agreement which took place afterwards, setting down the terms under which these running powers were to be exercised? I say the agreement never was made, and until the agreement was made there was no power secured over the Canada Central. Those powers, moreover, were to be settled by mutual agreement or arbitration. Suppose these companies agreed to pay the Canada Central $6,000 a mile for running powers over their line, the Government would be obliged to pay the same amount, because the Order in Council says the Government shall have no powers over the said railway except on similar terms to the above named companies. This is the agreement the hon. gentleman mentioned as securing greater powers than those stipulated in the charter of the Gravenhurst line and the charters of other companies that have passed this Session, in connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway. I believe the hon. gentleman was mistaken.

MR. HOUDE.

Mr. MACKENZIE. What was he mistaken in?

Mr. GIROUARD. I think I have explained the matter clearly enough.

Mr. MACKENZIE. 1 wish you would explain your explanations.

Mr. GIROUARD. There is the Statute; it is very plain. You have secured nothing. The whole thing depended upon an agreement which was to be passed, but which was never passed.

Mr. MACKENZIE. It was passed.

Mr. GIROUARD. Will you produce it?

Mr. MACKENZIE. I will, when I go there.

Mr. GIROUARD. It will take you a long time to go there.

Mr. VALIN. (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a few remarks in order to explain my vote on the Resolutions now before the House. I must say, in the first place, that I shall vote against the amendment and against the amendment to the amendment. For the last five or six days we, the members of this side of the House, have been receiving telegrams, and from what party did they come? They came mostly from our political opponents. For this reason, I thought absolutely strange the fact that the member for East Quebec (Mr. Laurier) was so much at variance, so little in harmony, with his party at Quebec. The hon. member who has the honour to represent me here, has stated that the Province of Quebec has no right to a subsidy. Mr. Speaker, he knows the contrary; he knows that since the last three or four weeks, a delegation from Quebec has come to Ottawa; the mayor of Quebec, the member for Quebec East in the local House, and all the Quebec councillors formed part of this delegation. On that occasion they have met the hon. member for East Quebec, and they have asked him to join the delegation. He answered them : What do you expect me to do there, what do you expect me to obtain ? He was perhaps right in stating that he could not obtain anything. Then the Mayor of Quebec insisted on my join-ing the delegation. Before starting to go and wait on the Minister, they explained to us that the Province of Quebec had a deficit of at least $750,000; that this deficit would not be so large this year on account of the lumber trade being pretty good, and that a good deal of money had been taken in, but on account of this trade it was impossible to conceal the fact that the deficit was large. Well, Mr. Speaker, under those circumstances, I went with these gentlemen to see the Minister. I thought I should meet some of my colleagues there, but I found I was the only one from the Province of Quebec, at least on this side of the House. Perhaps the Opposition did the same thing as the member for East Quebec, who did not wish to save the interests of the Province of Quebec, since he stated that there was no use for him to go. I advocated the cause of the Province. and I asked for an increase of the subsidy for the railway, or for such other aid as would save the Province. Well, the friends of the member for East Quebec did the same thing. The Mayor of Quebec spoke at length, and so did the local member, to ask for assistance. Since that time we have been constantly worried to obtain this subsidy, and we have been asked to endeavour to obtain the terminus of the Pacific at Quebec. This is of the utmost importance for us. The first thing which is needed at Quebec is the terminus of the Pacific Railway. Well, what are the Government doing? They are helping both; they can not do any more. I ask my hon friend, the member for Quebec, if he has done anything to bring the Pacific to Quebec when he was one of the Government. I say he has not. When asked to do anything, he always said: "Why there is not only one side of politics to be looked at; we must bear heavily on the workingmen who are Conservative, they will expatriate themselves and we will get rid of that class." Now he does not want to give anything to the Province of Quebec; he would prefer, as the Mayor of Quebec said in my presence, to vote the imposition of direct taxation in order to drive the remaining Conservatives from the Province of Quebec. Well, Mr. Speaker, there is another question which is being strongly agitated in Quebec at the present time; it is the question of the bridge which is to connect the Intercolonial with the Pacific. The Mayor of Quebec and many other influential citizens have telegraphed to us lately, and even to-day I received dispatches asking why the Federal Government had not mentioned this bridge in their Resolutions. We know that an Act of incorporation for that bridge has been passed during the present Session. The company is not yet organized, but a day will come when it will be organized, and then an appeal will be made to all those who are asking to-day for the construction of this bridge; but perhaps nobody will be found to take stock in that company. In fact, it is usual for these gentlemen to clamour. Well, I hope that when the company shall ask for aid, I am even certain that the Government will be well disposed towards that company and that they will do their duty. As to the subsidy to the North Shore Railway, between Quebec and Montreal, for which the Provincial Govern-ment wishes to get $12,000 per mile, I think, myself, that the railway, as it is, forms no part whatever of the Pacific Railway. It belongs to a private company, and it is an act of generosity on the part of the Dominion Government to grant a subsidy of $6,000 per mile to that part of the road. I am glad to see them in this mood, because this will help the finances of the Province of Besides, I know that the Dominion Govern-Quebec. ment has kept a reserve of $6,000 per mile to aid the Pacific Railway to prolong itself to Quebec, and this strikes me as being very natural. Some members are asking, by amendment to the Resolutions, that the interest on these $960,000 be given to the Quebec Government. Well, I say that it would not be fair to give us the interest on the subsidy granted to that part of the road, for it would te paying us interest on a thing which we have not got. We have nothing which concerns the Pacific between Quebee and Montreal. I must say that I am satisfied with these Resolutions, such as they are; for my part, 1 shall vote for these Resolutions, and let me repeat it, it is because we have nothing of the Pacific Railway between Quebec and Montreal. If we take these Resolutions as a whole, for my part, 1 would certainly wish to see them altered or modified, but as a whole, if, at all events they contain anything which is not absolutely as we should wish, they are good, and we must not reject them, for they are a protection for the Province of Quebec, by giving it a subsidy which will enable it to straighten its finances without having recourse to direct taxation, as the hon. member for East Quebec (Mr. Laurier) would wish. Then we will have no need of the version of the Mayor of Quebec, that we must have direct taxation. This will enable the members of the Province of Quebec to avoid this taxation, for either the electors or the members elected by them would have to act in bad faith to bring it on. Well, Mr. Speaker, I think that on this point the Government have done their duty as they ought, under the present circumstances, and that they have not been remise in aiding the Provinces which form between Montreal and Portland, it may still be possible that part of the Dominion; and whenever they will need the help of the Province of Quebec in favour of the other Provinces, for my part, I will be ready to give them my support.

Mr. BOSSÉ. (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, as the representative of the electoral division of Quebec Centre, I think I ought to add my protest to the numerous protests which have been brought forth by the expression of opinion which fell from the lips of the hon. member for East Quebec (Mr. Laurier). Both as his elector and as his colleague in this House, I cannot help regretting, and regretting very deeply, the position which he has taken, as the representative of one of the most important electoral divisions in the Province of Quebec, as a French Canadian, and above all, as the representative of East Quebec. I shall not undertake, Mr. Speaker, to do anything besides qualifying the position which he has taken, and when I have qualified it, I shall leave him with the regret of having said it, and with the remorse of having thought such a thing. I shall vote against the amendment and against the amendment to the amendment. Against the sub-amendment, because it allows the amendment to remain as a whole, and the theory expounded by the leader of the Opposition, and unfortunately by the seconder of the motion. I must say at once that the amendments which have been made by the Ministers themselves to the Resolutions, as originally worded, have greatly facilitated the hearty support which we are asked to give them. In this respect, Mr. Speaker, I must say that especially the amendment which promises us a complete and entire survey of the line which is to connect Montreal with the nut Fime ports, has reference to one of the most important of the Resolutions, perhaps for all the Provinces, but certainly for the Province to which I belong. From the origin of the idea of the con-struction of the Pacific Railway, we have been accustomed to consider this gigantic work as being a thoroughly Canadian enterprise; we have been accustomed to say, and we are glad to believe, that the railway which we are building will connect all the Provinces together, and will go through our own territory, without interruption, from ocean to occan. Truly, if there is anything which is flattering to our national pride, it is this idea, and above all the carrying out of this idea. But at the same time, we have understood that, flattering though it may be, it must be set alongside of another idea, that of the commercial results for the enterprise itself, and of the commercial result for the greater prosperity of the Provinces. So it happens, Mr. Speaker, that the road commenced in the western part of the country has now got as far cast as Montreal, from where it seeks an outlet to the Atlantic coast. We have also to consider that the idea of the road is connected with the interest of both our soil and of the property of the company, and of the country, by reason of the railway itself. And we have now to ask ourselves whether it is not proper to prolong the road from Montreal to the Atlantic coast entirely on Canadian soil. Still, we have here a danger to run and a great difficulty to avoid We have the proximity of Portland, which is hardly 300 miles distant from Montreal. We know that trade seeks its level; we know that traffic will take the shortest, the most advantageous line, the line which will afford the best conditions for cheap transport. We know equally well that the access to our ports is comparatively more difficult; but still, if we can escape the dangers which are in store for us in the American ports, and if it is possible, while constructing our railway on our own soil, to give to the company and to our trade, as profitable an outlet, and as practicable an outlet, as that which exists between Montreal and Portland, we must not hesitate for a moment to adopt it. I will say even more. Even if the route on our own soil should be, us to its length and practicability, less advantageous than that there should be an advantage in keeping the road for ourselves, and we must strive, by all means in our power, to attain this end. If, on the other hand, however, it was shown that the great idea of which I have spoken a moment ago, and of which we all feel proud, cannot be realized by reason of difficulties of locality and of navigation; if it was clearly proved, that in order to be able to keep the trade of the Pacific; in order to make of this company a prosperous company; in order to secure to our country all the advan tages which may arise from the prosperous condition of that company, it is necessary that that part of the line should pass through American territory, and I should still say: Well, we must let it pass through American territory, but only on condition of seeing it clearly shown, without circumlocution and without restriction, that this sacrifice is necessary-is absolutely necessary—to ensure the two conditions of which I have just spoken. A few miles more or a few miles less would not be any object, Mr. Speaker. A few miles more or a few miles less will not count much in the enormous length of the whole line; the difference in length is still lessened by reason of the difficulties, of the annoyance, of the embarrassment of a Customs system to which we would be submitted if the line was built partly on our own soil and partly on the territory of the State of Maine. I say then, that unless there is an utter impossibility of doing so, we must keep our enterprise such as we intended it to be from the beginning, such as I, for one, still believe it to be practicable. But, Mr. Speaker, on this point we are obliged to take the judgment of other persons, to have recourse to the experience and to the observations of men of science, to find out what are in reality all the routes among which we are to choose, in order to decide properly on the question submitted to us, viz: which is the most practicable route from Montreal to St. John or Halifax, by going through by Sherbrooke on the one side, and by Quebec on the other? The question which we have to decide has reference to the choice of the most advantageous line. This problem must be solved by us, whatever may be the responsibility we assume in solving it. The only question we have to examine is : which is the most advantageous, the cheapest and the shortest route between Montreal and a Canadian port on the Atlantic. As I said before, in order to decide this question, we must have recourse to men of science; surveys must be made, but these surveys must be made with a view to the immense results which are to grow out of the decision we are to take. We must have them complete, entire, without any hidden thought, without any preconceived object, without any fixed idea. We must have them complete in the general interest of the country, as well as in the interest of the Province and city of Quebec, which are interested in having the shortest and the most advantageous route, and I ask, and we shall ask, on behalf of our Province, that it be represented by engineers. We will ask that on account of the special interests of our Province, and also for all the Dominion. We shall ask that these surveys be made by the most able and competent of men, by those in whom the public have confidence. This being the case, the geographical position may be advantageous to some and disadvautageous to others. If it is advantageous to us, we shall adopt it, and the others will have to submit. And I say, Mr. Speaker, in spite of all the discussions which have taken place so far, that if it is ever shown to me, but clearly shown; as 1 said a moment ago, after operations shall have been made and conducted with all possible care, that the shortest line, that the most advantageous line, not only a little shorter, or a little more advantageous, but that the only practicable line to make of the Pacific Railway, such a work as it was intended to be, is a line which must not pass through the Province, of which 1 am one of the representatives, I shall be obliged to give way in favour of a line which would in reality be a benefit to the country. But until that has been shown to me, I shall insist, and we shall insist together, on the greatest ment, it does not propose to take out anything from the Mr. Bosst.

care being taken to obtain a clear and conclusive result. Such is, besides, and I am fully covinced of that, the idea which predominated in the Council of the Ministers when these Resolution were drawn up. And if until now, they have acted with the wisdom we have remarked in all that pertained to the construction of the Pacific Railway; if, up to this time they have shown in the Resolutions which we are now discussing, the discernment which we now observe, we are equally certain that the same discernment and the same wisdom will preside to the carrying out of the idea which they have always carried out till now, namely, the combinations of the two ideas, and a railway on our own territory if possible, and if practicable, a railway which will be the true realization of the great Pacific Railway line. Again. Mr. Speaker, let nobody think that what I ask here is from a sectional standpoint, from a local point of view. Oh, no; it is in the interest of all the Provinces; their interest is the same. The Maritime Provinces, the district of Montreal, the Province of Ontario, and all these Provinces and all these places, are interested in the same measure to have the line, if possible, on Canadian territory. Allow me, Mr. Speaker, to add a word on this subject. We have the Intercolonial, to the south of Quebec; we have the Quebec Central, the building of which, owing to the Resolutions now submitted to us, will be pushed rapidly and which will soon reach the boundary; we have also the Grand Trunk, in the same direction, on the north side; we have the North Shore Railway, which will soon become the terminus the Pacific Railway. We have the Lake St. John Railway, of which, I am sorry to say, has not received the subsidy to which it is entitled, but will recive it in a very near future, and will develop, above all, the immense territory north of Quebec, a territory, Mr. Speaker, to which very little at-tention is paid and which is deserving of all the care bestowed on other parts of the country, a territory which has been called the Manitoba of Quebec, and which will eventually be the Manitoba of Quebec, and the future granary not only of the city, but also of the district and Province of Quebec; all of these lines bring us to the desired end, which is to connect them at or near Quebec, not only to serve private interest, but to serve also public interests 1 y making the Pacific Railway an independent line to the Atlantic ports. I think we can, I think we ought, to hope to have a statement of what the intentions of the Govern-ment are to be in that respect. The company to which we have granted a charter is not yet organized, but when it shall be, or even independently from that company, through other means, we may attain the end to which I have just referred. I repeat it once more, I think we are entitled to a statement which will inform us of what we may expect from the Government in this respect. Under these circumstances, Mr. Speaker, 1 am bound to vote for the Resolutions and against the motion in amendment, and the motion in amendment to the amendment.

Mr. BECHARD. (Translation.) Before recording my vote on the question now discussed before the House, I desire to say a word, in order to explain the position I intend to take with regard to the Resolutions submitted by the Government. I declare that I am in favour of these Resolutions. I shall vote in in favour of the Resolutions which have been submitted by the Government, because I believe them to be eminently just and fair. In making such a statement, Mr. Speaker, I refer to that part of the Resolutions which concern the railway built in the Province of Quebec, and which is called the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental Rail-way. But while saying that I am in favour of these Resolutions, that I believe them to be eminently just and fair, I must say, at the same time, that I see no reason why the amendment proposed by the hon. member of the Opposition should be rejected. If I have rightly understood the amend-Resolutions; it only proposes the affirmation of a principle which appears to me to be just and reasonable; that all the Provinces should be put on an equal footing, and it is only through the application of this principle that we can maintain the Federal union of all the Provinces in the Confederation. Now, as to the sub-amendment, moved by my hon. friend from Shefford (Mr. Auger), I see nothing in that amendment which should make it appear objectionable to the members from Quebec. On the contrary, it appears to me that it adds something to the Resolutions of the Government which are considered by all members from that Pro-vince as an act of simple justice. My hon. friend from Maskinongé (Mr. Houde) said a moment ago, that this amendment contained what he had suggested the other dry. I do know whether or not I have rightly understood my hon, friend.

Mr. HOUDE. (Translation.) I suggested, in Committee of the Whole, that if the amount was not expended, the interest should be paid to the Province, and the hon. Minister of Public Works has stated that the amount would certainly be expended.

Mr. BÉCHARD. (Translation.) The amendment of my hon. friend does not contain anything else. At any rate, the suggestion has been made by the hon. member for Laval (Mr. Ouimet) If I have well understood his remarks the other day, and I am satisfied that the hon. member has not made this suggestion without believing it to be to the advantage of the Province of Quebec. This amendment, or what is contained in this amendment, has been suggested by some of the hon. members from the Province of Quebec who are sitting opposite. It must necessarily meet their views, and 1 have no doubt that they will vote for the amendment, as I intend to do myself.

Mr. TASSE. (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, I do not intend, at this advanced stage of the discussion, to prolong the debate on this question. However, I cannot refrain from offering a few remarks on the important question now before the House. I desire, especially, to take exception to certain more or less wonderful statements made by the hon. member for East Quebec (Mr. Laurier) in support of the no less wonderful motion made by the hon. leader of the Opposition. In order to be excused from referring to certain points dealt with in the speech made by the hon. Secretary of State, the hon. member for East Quebec has told us that it is better to wash our dirty linen at home. Well, I wonder when my hon. friend has commenced to be troubled with such scruples and reluctance. Why, not very long ago that hon. gentleman, without the least provocation, without any proof, without any form of trial, was denounding, on the floor of this House, a man who has played an important part in politics, and who had just been elevated to one of the highest positions in the country, to the Judiciary Bench. Indeed, the hon. member was arraigning this man for trial, without any formality, without any vouchers, and now he declares that it is better to wash our dirty linen at home. Medice cura te ipsum / No doubt it was to show his patriotism, that, not satisfied with giving the support of his vote to the motion of the hon. leader of the Opposition, he has thought fit to make an exceedingly wonderful speech in favour of this motion. He has dared to uphold a proposition which virtually states that the Province of Quebec gets too much from the Government, while the Liberal papers are clamouring for all they are worth, and stating that the Province of Quebec is being shamefully sacrificed. Let my hon. friend explain as he may this amazing contradiction. We have seen such men as Joseph Howe, inveighing in this House against the wrongs done to their Province; we have seen the members from British Columbia, from Manitoba and from the Maritime Provinces, raising their voices, one after another, in support of the claims of their Provinces, but I think it is the first time that a member of this House ever declared that his Pro- be expended, in the Province of Ontario, $20,000,000 for the vince was receiving too much. Most assuredly the hon. gentleman cannot be taxed with exclusiveness. We are told that the Province of Quebec is being exceptionally well treated. I say that if an exception is made, as to the construction of the Pacific Railway, Quebec is that exception. In the other Provinces through which the Pacific Railway passes, the road has been either built or subsidized by the Government, while Quebec has not received one cent from the Dominion Government to compensate it for the cost of the construction of the Pacific Railway. Under the Act of 1872, the terminus of the Pacific Railway has been fixed on the shores of Lake Nipissing; under the Act of 1874, this place was maintained as the terminus. Well, who were the first to insert in the Canadian Pacific Railway Act of 1874, a clause stating that a subsidy of $12,000 per mile might be granted to any railway company who would establish railway communication, either through the Province of Outario or the Province of Quebec, with the terminus of the Pacific Railway on the shores of Lake Nipissing? It was the Government of which my hou. friend has been a member. The then First Minister, the member for Lamb ton, said, in his speech made at Sarnia, and in which he explained his policy as to his plan for connecting Georgian Bay with the south shore of Lake Nipissing:

"This will involve the construction of a short line of railway from the mouth of French River and Georgian Bay to the south-mast shore of Lake Nipissing, and a grant in aid of the extension of the existing and projected lines in Quebec and Ontario."

Well, Mr. Speaker, I say that my hon. friend, I say that hon gentlemen opposite are at variance with the r policy, with their Act of 1874, when they refu-e to day to grant to the Province of Quebce what has been granted to the Canada Contral.

Mr. CASGRAIN. (Translation.) They have not refused it at all.

Mr. TASSÉ. (Translation.) The hon. member says that they have not refused it at all. But what are they doing with respect to the Resolutions now before the House? They pretend that the Province is receiving too much.

Some hon. MEMBERS. No, no.

Mr. TASSE. (Translation.) The logical, the nocessary conclusion which may bedrawn from the motion of the hon. leader of the Opposition is, that Quebec is being treated exceptionally well. If the motion of the hon, leader of the Opposition does not signify that, then it is of no use whatever. The hon. member for East Quebec has not always been as scrupulous as that, when he was a member of the Mackenzie Administration. At that time he never hesitated to vote large amounts for other Provinces, and I fail to see why he is so reluctant to accept a subsidy for his own Province. I am astonished to see that he does not want to accept a piece of the Ministerial pie. When he was on the Treasury Benches, some years ago-and it may be some few years yet before he has a chance to sit there again-he not only voted in favour of a law granting $12,000 per mile to railways intended to open out communications with Lake Nipissing, but he also voted, at the same time, $2,830,000 to build the Georgian Bay branch. He voied $3,000,000 in favour of the Northern Railway, which is intended to connect with the Pacific at Gravenhurst. Last year he voted $12,000 per mile for the railway between Callander and Gravenhurst, which makes in all $3,500,000, and he now says that Ontario is unfairly treated as regards the Pacific Railway. But is it not an acknowledged fact that 650 miles of the Pacific happens to be in Ontario, while not a mile of it is in the Province of Quebec, and the hon. geutleman would have us believe that the Province of Ontario is unfaily treated. As the hon. Minister of Railways said the other day, there has been expended, or there will construction of the Pacific Railway, and we are told that the Province of Ontario is treated unfairly. Moreover, should the Province of Ontario gain its point against the Dominion Government, as regards the settlement of the boundary question, and succeed in extending its limits, we would have to pay $10,000,000 for the benefit of that Province; and still, in order to prevent us from giving justice to the Province of Quebec, it is asserted that the interests of other Provinces are being sacrificed. The hon, member for East York has himself admitted, in 1878, in a speech which he made on the Canada Central question, that much had been already done in the past for the great Province of Ontario. Here are his words:

"He noticed that the Quebec members thought the arrangement was not fair to Quebec, while those from Ontario thought it would militate against Ontario. Under these circumstances, he thought the Government might assume that they had found the golden mean. He did not deny for a moment that this road was it tended as a short and rapid connection between the east and the west. That was the sole purpose of building it. He had pointed out that the Government had abundantly aided enterprises going through Ontario in former years, and that this was intended to connect the valley of Ottawa with what would be a great trans-continental line of railway when completed, though under existing circumstances it would be partly by railway and partly by water communication."

The other day we voted $1,250,000 to buy a railway, not in the west this time, but in the extreme east, in the Province of Nova Scotia—the railway between Truro and Pictou and the railway known as the "Eastern Extension." This line is intended to become the eastern extension of the Pacific Railway. This is a new proof that the policy of the Government is based on broad principles and that it is intended to deal as fairly and as equitably as possible with all the Provinces with all parts of Contederation. As a last shift, the member for East Quebec has tried to convince this House, the other day, that the North Shore Railway, built by the Quebec Government, was only a provincial railway, which could not be considered as a part of the Pacific line. I think that was what my hon. friend said.

Mr. LAURIER. (Translation.) No.

Mr. TASSÉ. (Translation.) You have not said that?

Mr. LAURIER. (Translation.) No; I said that it had been built as a purely provincial road, on the proposition of the Quebec Government.

Mr. TASSE (Translation.) I thought that my hon. friend was more conversant with what takes place in the Province of Quebec. If he is not already aware of that fact, I may inform him that even before the North Shore Railway was built, that line was considered as the first link of the great Pacific chain. And if my hon. friend wants to hear the proof of this, I am in a position to give it to him. On the 17th of February, 1872-it is a long while ago, as will be seen ; it is twelve years ago-there was not a rail laid along the shore of the St. Lawrence or along the shore of the Ottawa river, where the North Shore Railway was to be constructed. Well, on that day a great public dinner was given at St. Jerôme and Sir Hugh Allan, Mr. Chapleau, Mr. Thomas White and several other distinguished politicians were present. Even at that time the Northern Colonization Railway was spoken of as the first link of the great Pacific line. Here is an extract from a speech which Mr. Chapleau, with his wonted eloquence, delivered on that occasion:

"Among these works the Northern Colonization Railway ranks with the firs', I might say, by reason of the importance which it derives from the prospect of the construction of the Pacific Railway, of which it will be the first link. The colonization of the immense valley of the Ottawa also depends, for its future, on the construction of this road. And what an immense field for agriculture, trade and industry, will be offered in this valley, where millions of men might live and prosper."

Now, here is what was said by my hon. friend, the member for Cardwell, who was then Mr. Thomas White. MR. TASSÉ. Mr. LANDRY. (Translation.) He is still Mr. Thomas White.

Mr. TASSÉ. (Translation.) He is still Mr. Thomas White, but he is not in parliamentary language. He said:

"This work is entitled to a great deal of confidence as a means to develop the country between Montreal and the mountains in rear of St. Jérôme. But I admit it is specially entitled to the confidence of the population of Montreal for purposes of the highest importance. In fact this railway is intended to connect, by a direct and independent route, the Ottawa region with the Lake Huron and Lake Superior country, with the fertile valleys of the North-West and of British Columbia beyond the Rocky Mountains, with the great sea-port of Montreal, the commercial metropolis of the Dominion."

Rev. Mr. Labelle used still more forcible language:

"Three years ago people laughed at me, when I declared I was strongly in favour of wooden railways, but I always answered to those who thus spoke with scorn to me: "Whoever shall laugh the last shall laugh the most." What has been the result? Not only shall we have a road between Montreal and St. Jérôme, but a great trunk line starting from Quebec on the north shore of the St. Lawrence will pass through the wholountry which extends away off to Ottawa, and away beyond to the Pacific Railway, and I wrote to Sir George E. Cartier, who promised to take my notes into account. I have always had the ambition of seeing a Grand Trunk in the north, which would be the first link of the great international route, and which would go far in developing trade, industry, agriculture and colonization.

"The Dominion Government cannot do otherwise than to aid our railways, for Sir George E. Cartier, at a great meeting held in Montreal, stated that he considered the Northern Colonization Railway as the first link of the great chain which is to bind together the whole country between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. To pretend that he is opposed to that would be an insult to his character. Every true statesman must adopt a national policy; if he does not, he is unworthy of managing the affairs of the country. And it might be said of any man that would be opposed to this work, that his stars have paled."

To use the language which I have just quoted, I may say that the stars of the hon. member for East Quebec have paled on this occasion. In endeavouring to explain—I will not say to justify, for it is impossible, from his standpoint in endeavouring to explain the course he has taken, and to put the Conservative party{in contradiction with the Resolutions, he has quoted the debates which took place in the Quebec House in 1875. A resolution moved by the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Joly) said:

"He regretted that Government had not taken its proper stand with regard to the claims of the Province, the North Shore and Nuthern Colonization flailways being links in the Pacific Railway chain $\bullet \bullet \bullet \circ$ "

And yet this proposition is opposed to day by the hon. member for East Quebec-

••• "And as such should have been taken hold off by the Dominion authorities in the same manner as the Georgian Bay Branch of the Canada Central Railway. He moved, seconded by Mr. Marchand: "That this House is of opinion that after the great sacrifice the Province of Quebec has made in aiding these two enterprises, this Dominion of Canada should come to their aid, inasmuch as the North Shore and Montreal, Ottawa and Western Railroads formed part of the great Pacific line."

Well, that is just what we are saying to-day. We perfectly agree with the member for Lobinière, while he and the hon. member for East Quebec, who belong to the same party, seem to be utterly at variance on this question.

Mr. LAURIER. (Translation.) There is that difference, that at that time you did not want anything, and now you want all.

Mr. TASSÉ. (Translation.) Nothing is more incorrect. The Conservative party opposed this motion for the best of reasons, as my hon. friend, the member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Girouard), has said. They did not wish to vote for this motion, first, because it was proposed as a motion of non-confidence in the Government. The hon. member has been very careful not to give the second reason, but he should have given it, if he wanted to make impartial history. What was that reason? The year before, the Quebec Legislature had unanimously adopted a petition to the Dominion Government, praying that the Pacific Railway terminus should be located on the shores of Lake Nipissing, and that the extension of the Pacific from Lake Nipissing to Ottawa should not be located before an exploration should be first made in order to determine whether the north shore or the south shore of the Ottawa was best suited to the purpose. It might be thought that a petition adopted by so important a body, unanimously adopted by both Houses, should have received from the Ottawa Government that consideration to which it was entitled, but instead of that, the petition might have been forgotten in the pigeon-hole of the Secretary of State, had not Mr. Masson, who was then one of the leaders of the Opposition, asked what had become of it. The hon. member for East York answered that he did not even know that such a petition had been received. Here is an extract from the Hansard of the 5th March, 1875, to prove the truth of my statement:

"Mr. MASSON. Has not the Government received a petition from the Local Legislature ?

"Mr. MACKENZIE. We have received none. "Mr. Masson. Does not the hon, gentleman know that there is such a pe'ition ? "Mr. MACKENZIE.

I do not not know that there is. "Mr. MASSON. I regret to see that the hon. gentleman does] not fol-low public events any better."

Indeed it was a notorious fact that the Legislature of the Province of Quebec had unanimously adopted a petition, praying that the Province of Quebec should be equitably treated with regard to the railway extension from Lake Nipissing to Ottawa. Neither has my hon. friend stated that this petition was treated with the greatest contempt by one of the leading Liberals, the late Hon. Mr. Holton, who declared that that document was not worth the paper on which it was written, and came from "a dying and dishonoured Parliament." Neither has he stated that the member for East Quebec, instead of defending the honour of the Province, gave to this shameless insult all the authority of his own name. It would be useless for him to deny that fact, for his words are recorded in the Hansard And that is the reason why I said at the beginning of these remarks that he had no right to boast that he washes his dirty linen at home. However, the hon. member for East Quebec did not think it would be prudent for him to quote the remarks of the Conservative leaders who opposed Mr. Joly's motion. This would not have been of any use for him, as may be inferred from the following extracts. In the first place, here is an extract of a speech delivered by Mr. Angers, who was then leader of the House of Representatives, and who explained why he refused to adopt the amendment of the hon. member for Lotbinière. I take it from the report of the Montreal Gazette :

"He referred to the petition of the Assembly, sent 40 the Federal Par-liament, and said he believed it had scarcely been read. Hon. Mr. Holton had said it should not be taken up, as it came from a dying Parliament. The member for Terrebonne, in the House of Commons, had pressed the subject as far as possible, but the hon. Mr. Mackenzie had refused it. He went on to argue that, from the acts of the Federal Government the province of Quebec must not expect to obtain any justice from Ottawa till they had upset the Government there."

That is just what took place since. The Conservatives have driven away the Liberals from power and the Province of Quebec is now on an equal footing with the other Provinces. Now, let us see what was said by Mr. Taillon, the present leader of the Legislative Assembly:

"He declared their demand last year upon the Federal Government was not for money but for their rights; the demand was just and de-served to be treated in a far different manner than with the contempt it received. He continued to speak on the subject, following the line taken by the previous speaker on the Treasury side; he advocated the right of the House to criticize the action of the Uttawa House, and added that, it being unaltared, there was no better chance of receiving justice now than they had given in the past. He had no objection to receiving money from the Federal Government, and if they offered it he thought it would be unwise to refuse it."

And the Hon. Mr. Church, who was then treasurer of the Province, denounced the action of the Dominion Government in still more forcible terms :

"He did not pretend to know much about railroads, but there was "He did not pretend to know much about railroads, but there was something that struck him in the action of the Ottawa Government in connection with the Pacific Railway, —it seemed to him to be the custom to construct all great lines between two great termini, and what better • terminus could be found than their city of Quebec? The Ottawa Gov-ernment treated the Canada Central Railroad with the utmost generosity, but had treated the Northern Colonisation Railroad with the spirit they treated all enterprises in the Province of Ouebec " treated all enterprises in the Province of Quebec."

Not only were the members of the Province of Quebec not adverse to a subsidy from the Dominion Government, which would have been absurd and detrimental to the best interest of the Province, but when my hon. friend the Secretary of State, became first Minister of the Province of Quebec, he memorialized the Federal Government, asking them precisely for a compensation equal to that which had been granted to the Canada Central.

Mr. BLAKE. In what year was this memorandum presented ?

Mr. TASSÉ. In 1880. Here is what the first Minister said in this memorandum :

"I think it is my duty to inform you that an offer of $6,550,000 has been make to me for our Provincial railway, such as it will be after the completion of the Chaudière bridge. Under these circumstances, I hope you will allow me to ask you: lst. Whether your Government would be willing to secure to our Province, as the price of our road, a fixed amount, which would allow you to transfer it to the Syndicate as a portion of the great Canadian Pacific Railway?"

This extract shows that the Quebec Government has always been willing to sell the North Shore Railway to the Pacific through the Dominion Government. But let us keep on:

2nd. Whether you think that the Syndicate would be willing to offer

2nd. Whether you think that the Syndicate would be whing to oner a better price than that to which I have just referred for the sale, or more advantageous terms for the lease of our Provincial railway. 3rd. Whether, in case that the Government of Quebae should keep their railway (the Q.M.O. & O.) you would be willing to recommend to the Ottawa Government the granting of a bonus equal to that which has been granted to the Canada Central, on condition that running arrangements would be the same in favour of the Canadian Pacific Railway, as those which have been made with the Canada Central." Railway, as those which have been made with the Canada Central."

We have in this document the proof that this aid of $12,000 per mile, in favour of the North Shore Railway, has not been asked to day for the first time by the Conservatives. They have not waited until this Session to submit their claim to the Government, for, as far back as 1880, the Hon. Mr. Chapleau, who was then leader of the Provincial Government, asked for this same compensation, which we are called upon to vote to day. Another argument of the hon. member for East Quebec, against the indemnity to Quebec, is that that Province has already received or is to receive from the Pacific, the sale price for the section between Montreal and Ottawa. This statement, in order to be sustained, should at least be based on the fact that the Dominion Government should have given to the Pacific the necessary funds to buy this We know that the Federal Government has not road. furnished one cent of the sale price of the railway section between Montreal and Ottawa, and that for a very good reason; the road is sold for the sum of $3,600,000; during six years the sum of $100,000 a year, with interest at 5 per cent., must be paid to the Provincial Government, and twenty years may elapse, before the balance of $3,000,000 shall be recovered from the Pacific Railway. Hence it is quite evident that the Federal Government has not yet given one cent to the Canadian Pacific, to enable them to buy the road or part of the North Shore Railway. I noticed that the hon. leader of the Opposition and his lieutenant the member for East Quebec, have tried to make fun of the firmness shown by the Conservative members of the Province of Quebec on this same question. Evidently, our hon. friends are not accustomed to as much independance as that on the part of the little rouge plëiad which surrounds them. My hon, friend has quoted an article from La Minerve, in which the Conservative contingent is congratulated on the energy which they have shown on this occasion. I do not know that there is one single word that ought to be struck out of this article. As to himself, I regret that his organs have not had many occasions to congratulate him on his patriotism or his independence. Besides, there is a newspaper in Montreal, which my hon. friend forgot to quote, on the independence which members ought to show once in a while, whatever may be the political party to which they belong. This paper, in which I believe he has been writing, is named La Patrie.

Mr. LAURIER. I never wrote a line in La Patrie.

Mr. TASSÉ. At all events La Patrie is your organ, is it not?

Mr. LAURIER. No; I do not mean to say that.

Mr. TASSÉ. I would like to see here Mr. Beaugrand, the director of that newspaper, hearing the statement of the hon. member.

Mr. LAURIER. If the hon. member pretends that La Patrie is my personal organ, I shall tell him that it is not so, but I do not mean to say that it is not the organ of the Liberal party in the Province of Quebec.

Mr. TASSÉ. I did not say that La Patrie was your personal organ, but I supposed that my hon. friend was more or less identified with the Liberal party in the Province of Quebec. I thought that he was the leader of the Liberal party in the Province. If he is not, the hon. member for L'Islet (Mr. Casgrain) must be the leader. It must be one or the other, or perhaps both; two are not too many for such an important task. Since my hon, friend is so fond of quoting newspapers in this House, he might have quoted an extract from La Patrie, of Montreal, bearing date the 28th of November, 1880. It was as follows :-

"Mr Dorion although serving under the direction of Mr. Mackenzie, was really the leader of the pary. His withdrawal from the Oabinet was soon followed by that of Messrs. Fournier and Letellier. It is use-less to recall the events which followed; the power being in the hands of Messrs. Mackenzie and Cartwright, without any control."

Such is the opinion of the organ of my hon. friend, on the independent and patriotic part which he played as a mem-ber of the Mackenzie Administration. But this is not all. In this City of Ottawa there is a grit journal, the Free Press, in whose columns my name is mentioned from time to time, and not always mentioned in a flattering manner. On the 12th of October, 1878, that paper said :

"The Montreal Gasette says that the liberal party of Quebec has added neither strength nor brillancy to the party in the Federal Parliament for the last five years. This assertion is somewhat exaggerated, for there are but few who will deny that Mr. Dorion has brought an increase of both strength and brilliancy to the party."

This assertion is somewhat exaggerated-

"The remarks of the Gazetie might apply to the situation of these two last years during which the new Ministers which have entered the Oabinet have not always brought to it both strength and respectability."

I will with great pleasure take exception as regards the respectability of my hon. friend, but I beg to be allowed not to carry my exception any further. Such was the opinion of the iriends of the hon. gentleman on the part he played as a Minister of the Mackenzie administration. The hon. leader of the Opposition, speaking of a small Parliamentto use his own word-which was pretended to have been held in another part of the building, has thought it very im-proper, that a certain number of conservative members should have met to discuss what was best to be done in the interest of their Province. I see nothing improper in that. not content with undermining his leader, but if I remember They may have lost a few bursts of liberal eloquence, but aright, on more than one occasion, when a vote was about to be such a loss is not irretrievable. They have met, and for taken, he was seen, with the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mr. TASSE, what? The Government had just submitted to the House a proposal asking that a vote of $30,000,000 be granted to settle once for all the Pacific Railway question. As they were convinced that they had just claims, the represen-tatives of the Province of Quebec asked that such claims should be taken into consideration, as they were connected with this great work.

Mr. BLAKE. Were you one of them?

Mr. TASSE. Although I am not obliged to satisfy the hon. gentleman's curiosity, I have not the least objection to say that I was one of them.

Mr. BLAKE. I thought he was a member of Ontarionot of Quebec.

Mr. TASSE. According to that, my hon. friend and the other members from Ontario are very wrong when they take an interest in the affairs of other Provinces. But the part which is assigned to us is much wider. We are here, not to deal with sectional interests, but to deal with Dominion interests. I regret to say my hon. triend, who has such a high reputation, looks at this subject from a purely provincial point of view, from a sectional point of view, although he always denies this.

Mr. BLAKE. Not at all.

Mr. TASSÉ. You reproach me with having attended to meetings where representations were made by my friends from the Province of Quebec. I do not look at this question as a Quebec question only. True, the interests of that Province are more especially involved, but if the claims of the Quebec members are just, because I am a member of On-tario, am I to refuse to hear them and to give them justice? It is in the interest of Confederation that no injustice be done to any of the Provinces.

Mr. LAURIER. You should vote for the amendment in order to do justice to all.

Mr. TASSÉ. Not at all, for everybody has received justice except the Quebecers. And you? I suppose you will vote for the amendment?

Mr. LAURIER. Certainly.

Mr. TASSÉ. And you will also vote for the proposition made by your hon. leader?

Mr. LAURIER. That is the amendment.

Mr. TASSE. The amendment and the sub-amendment are so contradictory that my hon. friend will, on the one hand, declare that the Province of Quebec is receiving too much, and on the other hand, that it is not receiving enough. What a logical reasoning. But to revert to the fact that the hon, leader of the Opposition has reproached the French Conservative members with being absent from the House during the debate. I think he had somewhat forgotten his own history when he made that statement. If that was a fault, it must have been far more serious in his own case. I had not the honour of sitting in this House when the hon. member for East York was ruling the country, but I know that at that time the member for West Durham was not content with conspiring against his own chief, if I may use such language; it may not be parliamentary, but if it is not, I will withdraw it with pleasure.

Mr. BLAKE. That is not true.

Mr. TASSÉ. If my language is not parliamentary, I would like to know if the language of the hon, member is parliamentary. An old parliamentarian, as he is, does not generally forget himself to that extent. My hon. friend was Mills), who gravitates within his orbit; these two gentlemen and two or three of their colleagues were seen to disappear as if by enchantment. Am I unjust towards the hon. leader of the Opposition when I say that at a given moment, on the eve of an important vote which, I think, concerned the Nanaimo Railway, he declined to give his vote?

Mr. BLAKE. I voted on the question of the Nanaimo Railway, but abstained from voting on two or three other occasions.

Mr. TASSE. I could not ask for a better witness than the hon. gentleman himself. He has been good enough to prove my assertion, that is to say, on one or two important occasions, he declined to record his vote. It matters very little whether it was the Nanaimo Railway or another question. If my colleagues of the Province of Quebec were wrong in defending the interests which were confided to their trust, it is a fault which will be easily forgiven ; it is a happy fault, and I do wish that my hon. friend from East Quebec hal his conscience loaded with such crimes, but, unfortunately, he has not many to his credit. If he had had more nerve when he was in the Mackenzie Administration, if he had not violated several of the principles which he had advocated during his public career, especially protection to manufactures; if he had floated higher and held more firmly the flag of his nationality, the political storm which, at a given moment, passed over the counties of Drummond and Arthabaska would not, perhaps, have forced him to seek shelter in the harbour of refuge at Quebec. Indeed, if my hon, friend had been more anxious to protect the interests committed to his care, he himself and his friends would not have been decimated, as they have been, on the 17th of September, 1878, which has been the forerunner of their disaster of 1884. I think I have proved that the Province of Quebec asks no favour and that it only wishes to be treated with the same justice and the same consideration as other parts of the country. It has been proved that its debt has been incurred in order to build railways, and particularly an important part of the Pacific line. Therefore, it is perfectly just that the Domi-nion Government should come to its aid. If we refer to official statistics, we find that up to last year the Quebec Government had expended $14,429,326 on railways, while the subsidies given by the Ontario Government only amounted to $4,478,749. It is also found that all the deficits which occured in the financial administration of Quebec, began with the railways, since the great North Shore Railway was built. Until then the Province had had yearly surpluses which amounted in all to $2,250,000. The compensation which the Province of Quebec now claims is intended to indemnify that Province for the enormous sacrifices with which its people have saddled themselves in order to construct a link of the Pacific. Shall this request be refused or granted by this Parliament? If we should vote in favour of the amendment moved by the hon. leader of the Opposition we would certainly be refusing to give it justice. But if we vote in favour of these Resolutions, and I am convinced that they will be supported by the great majority of the House, the Province of Quebec may hope to have order restored in its finances. That Province now finds itself between two alternatives, either it must adopt direct taxation or obtain an indemnity from the Dominion Government. Without stopping to discuss the merits of direct taxation, I am opposed to it, because public opinion is not prepared for it. It is true that the Liberal party seems to be intent on imposing it in the Province of Quebec.

Some hon. MEMBERS. No, no.

Mr. TASSÉ. Who says no?

Mr. CASGRAIN. Where do you take that?

Mr. TASSÉ. My hon. friend wants the proof of this.

Mr. CASGRAIN. Yes.

Mr. TASSÉ. I am ready to give it to him. My hon. friend knows that Mr. George W. Stephen is one of the leaders of the Liberal party in the Province of Quebec and that he will probably be Treasurer in the future Cabinet of Mr. Mercier, if ever such a Cabinet is formed.

An hon. MEMBER. It will take some time.

Mr. TASSÉ. I believe so. Meanwhile, here is what Mr. George W. Stephens said on the 31st of March, 1882, at a sitting of the Quebec House:

"This country will never be anything as long as people will not consent to tax themselves after the fashion of municipalities, and to take the necessary means to carry out the enterprises which they need. The time is fast coming when municipal and direct taxation will become necessary here."

And what did Hon. Mr. Irvine, another Liberal leader, say in the Quebec House the other day? He declared that he was in favour of direct taxation, and that if he could have his own way he would impose it on the people. It will be remembered that when the hon. member for West Huron (Sir Richard Cartwright), was Minister of Finance, and when he was accumulating deficit upon deficit, he himself declared he was in favour of direct taxation. He said :

"Under these circumstances, it might naturally enough be asked of me, if it would not be proper, seeing that we have had large deficits for the last two years, to adopt such measures as would naturally make it impossible to have another deficit. Well, my answer is that if we had in Canada a tax which would be equivalent to the income tax in England, it is probable that i should not hesitate to recommend to this House to have recourse to this means of increasing the revenue."

I may add that the late Hon. Mr. Holton also advocated direct taxation when he was Minister of Finance. All these evidences are sufficient to prove that the Liberal party, or at least, several of its leading men, are in favour of direct taxation. I am thankful to the hon. member for l'Islet for interrupting me and giving me occasion to show what the tendency of the Liberal party has been, with regard to that question. Before concluding, let me state that the Province of Quebec deserves to be treated not only with justice, but also with sympathy. Whenever the other Provinces have asked Paillament for a legitimate remedy to their grievances, Quebec has generously come to their assistance. It has never shown indifference towards anything that could tend to promote the progress or development of the country, anything that could be done to consolidate our political institutions. Quebec is rightly considered as the pivot of Confederation. It has been made the basis of our system of representation. It is of the highest importance that it should continue to prosper, to increase and to develop its resources. Its fate is intimately bound with that of the Federal system. Let us to-day extend to it a helping hand, and it will ever remember the generous support received from us under trying circumstances, and will work with more energy than ever to promote the prosperity and advancement of the Dominion at large.

Mr. FISHER. If I would search for reasons to explain the position of hon. gentlemen opposite who have opposed the sub-amendment of the hon. member for Shefford, I could perhaps find them in some of the assertions of the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat. When the hon. member for Ottawa (Mr. Tassé) and the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Girouard) alluded to the proposition of the hon. the leader of the Opposition from the Province, of Quebec, in the Legislative Assembly of that Province, that this project to obtain assistance to the North Shore roads was a legitimate subject for Federal aid, what reason did they give for their friends, the Conservative majority in that House, voting down that proposition ? The only reason they could give was that the proposition had been advanced by a member of the Opposition, by a member of the party which they opposed. In that, they showed that they were imbued with that spirit of placing party before country which influenced them in not voting for what was right and proper for their Province, so now they oppose simply because the proposition to do what was right and proper to the other Provinces was proposed by a gentleman who was opposed politically to themselves. Is that the prin ciple on which these hon. gentlemen oppose the amendment of the hon, member for Shef ford? If it is, it shows but a very poor regard for that Province of which they boast to be the special champions in this House. I maintain that hon. gentlemen on this side who represent the Province of Quebec are just as much in favour of the advantages that Province will obtain by these Resolutions as any hon. member opposite representing that Province. We demand justice for Quebec. We believe that in these Resolutions, in this advance to Quebec, the Government of the day are granting justice to that Province. 1 suppose the Government are of the opinion that what they are granting is only just; if they are not, why do they give the grant? But I find in the general Resolutions which are before this House, that while the Government agree that justice to the Province of Quebec demands that $12,000 a mile should be given to it for the railway from Ottawa to Quebec, they have not given this grant to the Province of Quebec. On the contrary, instead of that they give only $12,000 a mile on the railway from Ottawa to Montreal, and on the road from Montreal to Quebec they are only giving $6,000 a mile; while, for reasons best known to themselves and to their supporters, they retain, to be advanced to the Canadian Pacific Railway at some future day, $6,000 a mile, for the purpose of obtaining a link between that road and the city of Quebec. The proposition of the hon. member for Shefford is that, in the meantime, until this advantageous arrangement may be completed, the Province of Quebec shall obtain the immediate advantage of this $6,000 a mile in addition to the other grants on the part of the Federal Government. If it is just, and I say it is just, that the Province of Quebec should obtain this $12,000 a mile for the whole road from Ottawa to Quebec, it is just that, in the meantime, until this amount of $12,000 per mile for the road from Quebec is paid over to a company, the Government of Quebec should obtain immediately that advantage. This is, in sum and substance, what the amendment of the hon. member for Shefford proposes, in addition to the amendment of the hon. member for West Durham. The hon. member for Maskinongé shows by his assertions that these two amendments are incon-sistent with one another, and he shows also, by several other remarks in his speech, that he has entirely misconceived the original amendment of the hon, member for West Durham. I understood him to say that this amendment of the hon. member for West Durham, this advantage which we, from the Province of Quebec, hope to obtain from the Federal Government, is opposed by the hon. member for West Durham. If the hon. member for Maskinongé would simply read this amendment, he would not attach that significance to it. In this amendment the hon, member for West Durham, while acknowledging the justice of this grant to the Province of Quebec, on the part of the Government, and if accepting the justice of this principle laid down clearly and distinctly in these Resolutions, says, since this is a new principle which is to be adopted in the arrangements between the Dominion Government and the Provincial Governments, it must be carried out with regard to all the Provinces alike; and I am convinced that the members from the Province of Quebec in this Parliament are not disposed to deny to the other Provinces that justice they demand for their own. I have not so understood the intention of the hon. member for Maskinongé, or other members of this leader was a complaint that it had got too much. The House, but that is simply what the amendment of the hon. speech of the hon. gentleman is that justice is denied to Mr. FISHER.

member for West Durham asserts and wishes to carry out. The hon member for Maskinongé, the other night, interrupted the hon. member for Quebec East, by declaring that the other Provinces had already received justice. If the carrying out of this principle, which is now adopted by hon. gentlemen opposite, and by which the Federal Govern-ment is called upon to recoup the Provincial Governments for their past aid to provincial railways which are not now taken, be in the interests of the general development of Canada, if, when the other Provinces make their demands, the Government here can show that these demands have already been fulfilled, that these demands have already, in part or in whole, been complied with, it stands to reason that these Provincial Governments cannot then make the demand which the Province of Quebec has now made, and which is being complied with. If the other Provinces fail to make the same proof of the justice of their demand, I take it that it would be the duty of the Dominion Government to then refuse the demand they would make. I understand the hon. members on the opposite side of the House to say that in this case Quebec has proved the justice of her demand. I take it, from the action of the Government, that the Government believes that Quebec has proved the justice of her demand. I, myself, and I believe other members from the Province of Quebec on this side of the House, believe in the justice of that demand, but when this demand was made, I do not suppose that the Government took it for a matter of course that the demand was just. I take it for granted that they enquired into the facts and premises, that they enquired into the justice of it, and that, when that justice was clearly shown to them, they complied with the demand. If, in the event my hon. friend from West Durham has proposed to the House, the Government continue the same policy in reference to the other Provinces, it would be the duty of the Government to enquire into the justice of their demands, and only when the Provinces proved the justice of those demands would the Government be asked to comply with them. This being the case, I think it is very clear that the amendment and the sub-amendment are in no sense antagonistic. The amendment, accepting the principle, simply wishes it to be applied to all other Provinces; the sub-amendment, accepting the principle, simply wishes that that principle should be carried out in its entirety, and that this just advance to the Province of Quebec should accrue to the benefit of the Province of Quebec immediately. If any member from the Province of Quebec, in this House, votes against that, he says distinctly and clearly that, although that demand is just, although this advance to the Province is just, he is quite willing, for the sake of his party, because it happens to be proposed from this side of the House, to vote against it although his Province will suffer thereby. I conclude, by simply appealing to the House to vote on this amendment and on this sub-amendment according to the true reading of their meaning, and not to allow any misconstruction or misconception of their meaning to interfere with their decision.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I am afraid I must postpone the natural anxiety of the House for a division for a few minutes, in consequence of the Resolution in amendment, moved by the hon. member for West Durham and the speech which went before it. I do not think that I need trouble the House with many remarks about what is called the sub-amendment, the amendment to the amendment. The hon. gentleman who spoke last, and spoke well, as he always does, on the matter, I think had not weighed well the effect of the sub-amendment, and had not, I think, weighed well the speech of his leader and the Resolution after it. The hon. gentleman's speech, if it means anything, is a complaint that Quebec has not got enough; the speech of his Quebec, and he appeals to the House that justice should be done to Quebec; his hon. leader stated, in his elaborate and able speech, that more than justice was done, that Quebec had no right, they had built the road, and in the category of the three classes into which the hon, gentleman divided the roads, the last was where the Government went to recoup an enterprise which had already been commenced, which had already been finished, which had already been built. But the hon, gentleman ought to know very well that this Resolution states that this House regrets that the Government have not seen fit. What is the meaning of a regret that the Government have not seen fit to propose the granting of the interest? It means simply a censure on the Government for not granting it, and we know that a censure means a vote of want of confidence; it means, if this motion is carried, that the Government must retire, or must appeal from the majority of the House who carried the censure, to the people, to see if they will sustain the censure. That is the inevitable consequence of this motion; and, if that motion carried, then I think for this Session there would not be very many railway grants voted to any railway. But it is rather odd that the hon. gentleman should regret that the Government had not proposed a thing that had never been proposed before. It had not been proposed by the Quebec Government, it had not been proposed to the Government in any way, and the hon. gentleman says he regrets, that the Government is consurable, that they ought to receive the condemnation of this House, because they have not granted what nobody has asked for until the discussion took place within a day or two. That is the conrequence of this Resolution. However, that, I think, may test quietly. I rose to speak on the style of language that has been used with reference to the conduct of the Government in granting this aid to the Province of Quebec, for their expenditure on the North Shore Railway, and with respect to the conduct of the hon. members from Quebec who usually support the Government with reference to these votes. Sir, although it was done in parliamentary phrase-the hon. gentleman always, I must say, greatly to his praise and greatly to his credit, because we do not always observe those proprieties, observes parliamentary phrase-to reduce it to plain English, the hon. gentleman has stated to this House that the Government was compelled, by the pressure from their friends from the Province of Quebec, to grant this vote willy-nilly; that they were compelled to do it; that it was a case of putting the pistol to their breast, and that the Pacific Railway Rosolutions depended upon this aid being granted to the Province of Quebec. I take occasion to deny that assertion altogether. The hon. member for West Durham (Mr. Blake) assorted it again and again. He stated that it was well known that, when the debate went on, none of these gentlemen were in the House, they were in No. 8. He stated that it was well understood that there were negotiations going on. I knew of no negotiations; did the hon. gentleman know of any? The hon. gentleman denied that he had communication with my hon. friend from Laval (Mr. Ouimet); but there were negotiations going on, he heard communications; I do not know that he was open to them, but he heard them; the rumour reached him. Did not the rumour reach him?

Mr. BLAKE. No.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No rumour reached him?

Mr. BLAKE, No.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Then he is as deaf as the deaf adder. Everybody else in the House, everybody in the country heard it, every newspaper heard it, every newspaper correspondent heard it. The hon. gentleman, wrapped up in his cloak, wrapped up in his shell, deaf, the only deaf man in this House, never heard there was a chance of 'net think it necessary, in fact it is a small business to dis-propositions being made for a coalition between himself and the Conservative Bleus of Lower Canada. I would like to ask my hon. friends from Lower Canada if they were deaf to it, if they did not hear this little rumour running round the House, if they did not know that these rumours were running round the House. But, I tell the hon. gentleman that these rumours and these little coquettings met with no response from the large majority of the Conservative gentlemen who represent Lower Canada in this House. I say more, Sir; it was not that the Government of which I am the responsible and, perhaps, unworthily the First Minister and the chief exponent, was forced to the measure. it was not from any pressure, direct or indirect, from the members of this House, that the Government came to the conclusion which they have asked this House to sanction by these Resolutions. If we look back for some years to the time when the original project of building the Canadian Pacific Railway was initiated, we find that Callander was selected as the most casterly point of that railway. It was chosen so long ago as 1872. It was then understoodbecause our ideas wore not so large, and our means were not so great, and the prospect of the development of this country was not so assure I then as it is now-it was understood that under the terms of the arrangement with British Columbia the railway should start from British Columbia and come east until it joined the Canadian system of railways; and it was held that if the eastern terminus was ixed at Callander that would be a convenient point, where Toronto, which represents the great commercial portion of Ontario, could join it, and that the eastern portion of Ontario and the Province of Quebec could work westward as fast as they could and all join at Callender. But, Sir, afterwards, by the action, I do not say injudicious action, of the Mackenzie Government, that scheme was enlarged, and instead of Callander being the point where Ontario and Quebec could both, by their own unassisted efforts, as far as the Government was concerned, join the Canadian system of railways with the great Canadian Pacific Railway, it was extended down to Pembroke, and in fact to Ottawa. Then, Sir, from that moment I saw, and everybody of common sense must have seen, that Quebec had, with unwonted energy, pushed a railway from the city of Quebec, which everybody admitted must be eventually the Atlantic terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway; that Quobec, taking time by the forelock, in order to give to their Province an immediate conneotion with the far North-West, pledging their fortunes and pledging their credit to complete the road, I foresaw and every man of common sense foresaw that the road they had been constructing must form a portion of the great national highway, and be aided like the rest, Oh, but, says the hon. member for West Darham, if it were just, why did we not do it before? Well, Mr. Speaker, the Dominion had heavy weight enough; it was time enough when the Province of Quebec came and asked for aid, asked for justice to be done to her, it was time enough for the Government of the Dominion to entertain that matter. I take it that when the Central Railway got that assistance it was not a suggestion of the Mackenzie Government; I take it that those persons forming the corporation of the Central road went to Mr. Mackenzie and made that arrangement. And when the Quebec Government came and presented their case-not as a matter of relief, as the hon. gentleman's amendment states, not as a matter of grace, but as a matter of justice -they said: "You have built the road from Callander to Red River; you have built that road from one end of Ontario to the other; you have subsidized it down to Pembroke, and the consequence is, that it has now come through Ontario to Ottawa; therefore, as we join you at Ontario, and as we have built that road, we have a right to the same measure of justice, to the same aid, as the whole Canadian Pacific "Ido cuss the comparative advantages of one Province to the other, but we cannot forget that all the advantages hitherto have been to the Province of Ontario, to my own Province. Why, Sir, the whole of the railway from Ottawa to the far North-West, until it strikes Manitoba, runs through Ontario; and besides the subsidies that have been given, the railway running round the north shore of Lake Superior has opened up a country magnificent in its future ; magnificent forests have been found to exist there, and its minoral wealth is enormous; and, Sir, that whole country has been developed; the $12,000 a mile granted to the Canadian Pacific Railway, so far as Ontario is concerned, will pour an enormous wealth into her Treasury by the opening up of that country; good, as we know, for its forests; good, as we believe, for its agricultural capabilities; good, as we believe also, in its mineral resources; therefore, we are only granting justice to the Province of Quebec in paying them the same amount that we have done to the Province of Ontario. Now, Sir, since I am on my feet, I may as well say a few words with respect to the motion of the hon, member for West Durham. Everybody heard \mathbf{his} patriotic speech; everybody heard his condemnation of the degradation and the demoralization that was going to come to all Canada by this subsidizing of roads. In parliamentary phrase, he stated that we were bribing the different Provinces; in parliamentary phrase, he says it is unwholcsome that different Provinces and different interests should come to the Government and ask for aid; and he suggested, Mr. Speaker, a change in the Con-stitution, so that giving subsidies should be wrong. We must have no subsidies; grants to railways were wrong and we must have no subsidies; grants to railways were wrong, and we must have a change in the Constitution. The various sections, the various Provinces, the various interests come to Parliament and ask for bread, and the hon. gentleman gives them a stone. He says: "You cannot, you ought not to get aid"-that is his speech -" you ought not to do it, because it is degrading, it is demoralizing, it is unconstitutional; we must have the whole thing altered.' And yet we do not find a word of that in the amendment the hon. gentleman has moved. When I, taking the common sense view-which the hon. gentleman says was a very low point of view-that we had better give a small reasonable grant of $3,200 a mile to roads and help them, that if they wore gool for anything they would take the money, and if they were not good for anything they would not take the money, the hon. gentleman said we ought not to do that; that it is a wrong system; that we ought to have appealed to the country; we ought to have said no; we ought to take a few large lines of railway and appeal to the patriotism of the country, and set aside their little roads; that they would give up their small interests; that the members would patriotically give up all their constituents wanted, all the chief sections of the country wanted, for the sake of one, or two, or three, or four lines of railway. That was the line of the hon. gentleman's argument. Then, what was he bound to do? He was bound to follow it up by a Resolution, by a direct negative to our unconstitutional system, a direct negative to the system he doclared is degrading and demoralizing, and to have moved a direct censure of the whole railway policy as developed in the Resolutions now in your hands. Did he do that, Sir? Oh, no, he did not do that; he swal-lowed the whole thing. And why didn't he do it? Why, Sir, Shakespeare tells us, in Henry IV, "that whon mine ancient Pictol insultant the Welshman Function most with ancient Pistol insulted the Welshman, Fluellen went with a club or sword in one hand and a leek in the other and said to mine ancient Pistol, eat that leek. No, says Pistol, I will not. Then, said Fluellen, here is my sword. Then Pistol, drawing himself up, said, I eat the leek in earnest of my revenge." The hon. gentleman is cating the leek, he is bringing in these Resolutions, and what was the club? Why, Sir, the corporal's guard from Lower Canada were against SIR JOHN A. MACDONALD.

him; the whole of the Maritima Provinces-gontlemen who usually supported him in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick were against him; he ate the lock, and he is going to do it in earnest of revenge. Twenty years hence, when he is Minister—and I am bound to say that his speech on Saturday rather postponed that day—twenty years hence, he will quote that speech and say: I warned you; here is my speech delivered on a certain day of April, 1884, showing that you should not have done it. He spoke brave words like Pistol, but all the same he ate the leek. We know, Mr. Speaker, with respect to this same relief, as this Resolution calls it-other men call it justicewith respect to this relief, I will tell the hon. gentleman that before there was any meeting for conference, so far as I could 1 arn, of my Quebec friends in Parliament-the Quebec supporters of the Government-there was a deputation came from the Government of Quebec, consisting of a certain number of the members of that Government. Dr. Ross, my old friend and supporter, was in too frail health to come, but this deputation came, and they laid a case before us. The Government made up their minds that the case those gentlemen had laid before us could not be resisted, and they made up their minds that this relief, this justice, this contribution, should be given to the Province of Quebec. And, Sir, it is said, O, but there was a good deal of hanging back about it. Sir, the Government had made up their minds before it was suggested, before the rumour which the hon. gentleman alone did not hear, the rumour that went abroad that there was going to be force put upon the Government; and so long as that force was threatened, so long we rosi-ted. And my hon, friend from Maskinonge (Mr. Houde), with that candour and fairness which has always charactorized him, at once took the course that every Ministerial and every Opposition supporter, every member of a party should take-he did not take me by surprise; he wrote me a note, telling me he could not support the Pacific Railway Resolutions. He, at all events, did not put a pistol to my breast. And so these gentlemen, the Ministerial supporters, the main body of them, almost all of them, one after another, came to me and assured me they would not allow the two questions to be commingled. They would not allow the one to hang to the other. I appeal to hon. members from the Province of Quebec if that is not so; if they did not indignantly repudiate the idea that one set of Resolutions would depend on the other; and they assured me, and they assured us, that they would support the Canadian Pacific Railway Resolutions; and ther, and not till then did I feel myself at liberty to go to their meeting and state to them, which I did, what we had already determined-not upon their action, but, Sir, upon the appeal to the Government by the Provincial Government of Quebec. That, Sir, is the true, unvarnished story of the rumours which have been made, rumours injurious to the honour of the Government, and injurious alike to the honour of the vast majority of the representatives from Quebec-this is the answer to all such untrue, such unjust charges. Now, Sir, this Resolution says that it was a false principle to grant any of these subsidies. The Resolution is this:

"And this House feels bound to express the opinion that Oanada, when (as proposed by the said Resolution), recouping one of the Prov-inces, or part of the past local expenditure—"

Sir, it was not local expenditure-

"local expenditure on railways, should have regard to the past local "local expenditure on railways, should nove regard to the past local expenditure in other Provinces on railways, almost all of which have been declared to be for the general advantage of Canada; and this House regrets that the Government, while proposing a measure of relief to one Province, has not taken steps with a view to s fair and propor-tionate measure of relief, in respect of local expenditure in the other Provinces."

The hon. gentleman had just declared that these subsidies were degrading and demoralizing, that they were corrupt from their inception, corrupt in spirit; and yet he says: Ah, since you are going to do a corrupt thing, you had better go a little further. In the western islands of Scotland, in days of old, the wreck of a ship was considered a better crop than the usual crop of oats, and they used to pray sometimes for a good season, and plenty of wrecks. It is said that on one occasion, on a Sunday, while a clergyman was giving a good Calvinistic sermon, a person rushed into the church and evident uneasiness came over the congregation. The parson twigged at once that there was a ship in distress in the offing, so he said, my friends keep your seats; listen to the words of wisdom, do not be carried away by feelings of love for filthy lucre. But he unbuttoned the door of the pulpit, and making a dash towards the door said : but let us have a fair start at all events. So it is with the hon. member for the West Riding of Darham. Oh ! this is demoralizing, it is ruinous, it is unconstitutional; we must put it down, we must even have a conference and alter the very basis of the Constitution rather than have this corruption. But, meantime, since you are going in for a wreck, see if you cannot do something for Ontario, for Prince Edward Island, for Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and British Columbia. That is the whole style of this Resolution. Well, Sir, it is like other resolutions the hon. gentleman has moved. In 1871, he moved them in Ontario-exactly the same kind of resolutions-and I am sorry to say with more success than the hon. gentleman is likely to get here. Now, Sir, the hon. gentleman in his speech argued very strongly against the short line. Well, I am not going to discuss that short line much, except to say that the hon. gentleman is very anxious that he should get his friends in the Maritime Provinces to help. Sir, the whole policy of this Government, from the time that the Canadian Pacific Railway was taken up, was to make a railway from sea to sea. That was the whole policy. And we are carrying it out, notwithstanding persistent opposition from the beginning till now. Not a single proposition has been made for this great work, not a single resolution proposed by the Government, not a single measure has been submitted, but it has met the steady, consistent-I was going to say factious, but that would be upparliamentarybut the persistent opposition of the hon. gentleman. Well, Sir, I have had that all my life. I have been in Governments and I have carried a great many measures, from 1854 to now, and never one great question for the development of the country has ever been proposed by the party of which I have been a member—and no other other party has ever proposed any great measure for the development of the country-

Some hon, MEMBERS. No, no.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I say that no great quest on that will be read or remembered in history, that will last over the present generation, has ever been introduced except by the Governments of which I have been a member. I state so, and we have not only had to fight these questions through on their merits, but we have had to fight against the party-I won't say factious-the consistent party opposition of the hon. gentleman opposite. And what has been the consequence? The country has recognized that we are the party of progress, that we are the party of development, that the future destinies of Canada, if prosperous, must rest with the members who sit on this side of the House. By what malignant power, by what divinity, or semi-divinity-whether it arises from the inferior or the supernal deities-by what malignant power is it that the Opposition, like the Democratic party of the United States, have persistently attached themselves to the losing cause? They have opposed every measure for the development of Canada, every measure for its progress; but they have always failed, and Canada has always progressed, and Canada is what it is to-day. Look at what greatest Democratic leader in the United States could have was the condition of the country in 1854; look at its con- made such a grave mistake as the hon. gentleman has made dition now; and look at the period during which the Conservative party has had the guidance of its affairs. What would be the consequence if, in a fit of temporary insanity, the country should drive us from office? But, Sir, these hon. gentlemen are blinded-judicially blindedon every subject that comes, and that has come before Par-liament. A Republican was asked the other day how it happened that the Democratic party, consisting, like the Liberal party in this country, of so many able men, should yet be so uniformly unsuccessful-why it made so very many blunders-why it seemed to be in constant Opposition. "Well," said the Republican, "I don't know, but I think the Democratic party took out a patent for folly, and no one has tried to infringe the patent." Now, Sir, what does this Resolution say? It says that the Province of Quebec is asking relief. Well, relief sounds very much like a poorhouse; and my hon. friends from Quebec have already in their speeches, resented that phrase being applied to their claim for justice. This Resolution also says that if the Province of Quebec gets relief, this House regrets that the Government, while proposing a measure of relief to one Province, has not taken steps with a view to a fair and proportionate measure of relief for the other Provinces. Well, how can there be a fair and proportionate measure of relief, if it is all degrading, if it is all unconsti-tutional, if it is all demoralizing? Sir, it is just as I say— the hon. gentleman says: Well, I do not like to rob that house, but if that house is to be robbed, give me some of the swag, give me some of the plunder. That is really, Mr. Speaker, the argument of this Resolution. Well, I will simply say to the House, do you want the railways or not? Do you approve of these Rerailways or not? Do you approve of these Re-solutions or not? If you do, you must meet both of the amendments with a direct negative. The hon. gentleman's Resolution declares that he regrets-actually regretsthat we do not go further than we have done-regrets that we do not spend more money-regrets that we do not go around to all the Provinces and say: Now, we are going to give Quebec so much money; they have built the North Shore Railway; they have built the last link of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and therefore you will grumble unless you have some too; and now, how much do you want? That is the Resolution of the hon. gentleman; he says he regrets that we did not go around and get from the different Provinces, in dollars and cents, how much claim on the Treasury they would have if we granted to Quebec this measure of justice. That is the Resolution. It is a hypocritical Resolution; it is a factious Resolution. The motives of the hon, gentleman are parliamentary; but while his motives are unexceptionable, the motion is hypocritical, and more than that, it is very bad hearted. It is an attempt-a fruitless attempt, because the country will see through it-to set Province against Province, to arouse jealousy, to call upon the other Pro-vinces to send in their little bills, and by constitutional pressure, by meeting him-not in No. 8, but in the different chambers allotted to the different Provinces-to come and make their demands. Sir, outside of this House, this resolution will be characterized as it deserves. It is a factious Resolution, an unpatriotic Resolution; it is a Resolution introduced for the purpose of setting man against man and Province against Province; and the country will meet it -notwithstanding what the hon gentleman's motives may be, notwithstanding what high and holy principles may have actuated him in proposing this Resolution-the country will meet it with condign condemnation, as a Resolution to ret man against man and Province against Province.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon. gentlemen may say hear, hear; but they feel it in their hearts. Not the greatest Democratic leader in the United States could have in moving that Resolution, and in making a speech, in which he denounced all such advances-in which he denounced, as corrupt and unconstitutional, and as requiring a change in the Constitution, all such advances by a Government, as being made for the purpose of demoralizing and buying up the different Provinces; and yet he comes down and says in this Resolution that the Government, since they have committed a crime, must commit more crime, must go deeper into degradation and demoralization; and instead of granting these three or four millions, must grant twice, or thrice or four times the amount; and he pronounces a censure on the Government because they have not adopted a course which he says is dishonest, corrupt, unconstitutional, and degrading.

Mr. BLAKE. As the hon. gentleman, Mr. Speaker, is strong, so he should be merciful. The hon, gentleman should remember that common men are not of his measure or up to his standard; and when he talks of other men as hypocritical or bad-hearted, he should remember that few of us can approach to that strict uprightness and sincerity of purpose, to that whiteness of heart, to that angelic purity of motive and conduct, which have characterized him, during a long course of public life, in which, whatever other inconsistencies we may have observed, I admit that these have been constantly present. I say therefore, that as he is strong, so he should be merciful, and from that elevated sphere of conduct, of character, of beart, and of intellect, from which he looks down upon us who move with motives so much baser and more hypocritical, with hearts so bad and corrupt, he ought to remember that we are not able to attain to his measure, that we cannot rise to his standard; and if he must place himself so far above us, he ought at least, to be merciful to our weakness. Sir, the hon. gentleman has made some slight errors in the discussion of this question. In the first place, I will say a word or two only with reference to the amendment to the amendment. The hon. gentleman says that my amondment is one indicating that the Province of Quebec is getting too much, and that the sub amendment is one indicating that she is getting too little; and he says the sub-amendment is one of censure, for it is one of regret and want of confidence, and must be voted down, because if it should be acceded to, that terrible consequence, which we all dread so much, would follow-the consequence of the defeat of the Government. Now, the hon. gentleman knows that both these motions are almost necessarily framed in the one way, for the reason that we cannot propose, without the assent of the Crown, any addition to the public charge, and we are driven, constitu-tionally, to particular forms of expression in which these motions are made, when we desire to indicate another course of action as the fitting course of action with reference to the public charge. It is the only mode practicable in which we can say what we think ought to be done in this connection, and if it should be carried, if it is to produce these terrible consequences, there is always a way, which the hon. gentleman has learned on former occasions, of averting such results. That way is to accept the proposals, and then the difficulties are obviated. Now, the hon, gentleman says that the proposal of the hon, member for Shefford was never made before. But how could it be made earlier than the proposal the hon. gentleman has made? It is a proposal which has its growth out of the particular terms and details of this measure of the hon. gentleman, and unless and until it were known that the proposal of the hon, gentleman was to take this particular form, as to the $6,000 a mile, which is reserved, no one, of course, could make that suggestion ; and very shortly after the proposals were put on the Table, the suggestion was made. Now, what I have to say with reference to that particular proposal of my hon. friend is this, that tells what he foreknows. In his secret soul the hon, gen-Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD.

disguise it as you may, we know, and we have it from the hon. member for Montmorency (Mr. Valin), to-night, that this is a measure of relief for Quebec. We know that it was so asked and we know that it is needed. It may be a measure of justice, but it is none the less a measure of relief, and we know that in the mode in which it is now proposed, without some arrangement of this kind. as proposed by the hon, member for Shefford, in case there should be long delays in making the arrangements for the extension of the Canada Central, that measure of relief, neither directly nor indirectly, will flow to the Province to the extent of the $960,000-not indirectly, because they will not get the connection at Quebec with the national highway for the time it is delayed; and not directly, for they will not get that addition to their annual resources which the interest of this sum will give. As I stated, when I made my motion, the Treasurer of the Province of Quebec has pointed out that there is an annual deficit in the finances of that Province of from $300,000 to $400,000 a year, and I pointed out that whatever he would do in the way of retrenchment or otherwise would, without Federal assistance, be inadequate; and I believe this portion of assistance suggested by the hon. member for Shefford would be an important element in bringing to an equilibrium the finances of that Province. The hon. gentleman began by a statement with reference to the mode in which this particular measure obtained its position on the Order Paper, and he said it was not correct that the Government was forced, by the pressure of Quebec, to make the proposal. He said that a ramour had reached him of a proposition made to me for a coalition with the Bleus of Quebec. Well, I told the hon. gentleman that that rumour had not reached me. He said I might have seen it in the papers; I did not understand him to refer to that. It is quite true I did see, in the Toronto Mail and the Montreal Gazette, a statement of that description; if that is what he means, I acknowledge that I saw untrue statements in both those papers on that subject, but I did not understand that was the mode in which he suggested the rumour had reached me. But if there had been any such proposal made to me, I call, inside and out of this House, for the person who made I remove all seal of confidence, if any there was, and 1 call for the person who intimated to me any such suggestion, to come forward and to speak now or for ever hereafter hold his peace. Now the hon. gentleman said there was no pressure on the Government whatever, and he proceeded to give the history of the transaction. He pointed out that originally the proposal of the terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway was to be Nipissing or, as he called it, at Callander, though Callander was not invented at that early day. He said my hon, friend for East York (Mr. Mackenzie) had made proposals which extended practically the terminus. to Ottawa, Not so. The proposal of my hon. friend was to subsidize the Canada Central until it would reach a point near Renfrow, in the first instance; when the route was altered, it was to reach Pembroke. Neither of these was Ottawa. The old proposal was, as I stated the other night, and proved by the reading of the speeches of the hon. Minister of Railways, in 1882, and again in 1883, when he was moving the votes for a subsidy for a line from Gravenhurst to Callander; and the hon. gentleman expressly stated that as that proposal had been made and carried in order to facilitate Quebec connection, justice for Ontario demanded something should be done for her; justice for Ontario de-manded that a line should be made from Gravenhurst to Callander, in order that she might have the same facilities for connection which my hon. friend had given to Quebec, by extending the connection further eastward towards Montreal. That was the state of things, but the hon. gentleman was a prophet; he foresaw the result. No, not a prophet, because a prophet does not merely foreknow, but tleman, from the moment the hon. member for East York hon. the First Minister of Canada, in his secret soul proposed that, in order to help the connection with Quebec, there should be the same assistance given to run the road a little further eastward towards Quebec -from that moment, in his secret soul, he fore-knew the road to Quebec would have to be assisted. It is a great number of years ago since that proposal was made to Parliament and assented to by Parliament. It was made in 1875, now nine years ago; so for nine years the hon. gentleman has been conscious of the fact that the roads which even then were being constructed in the Province of Quebec would, in consequence of that facility being given, have to be aided by the Federal Government. Then, he says, in answer to the question, why did he not do it before? Why, because Quebec did not ask for it before, because Quebec never asked it until the 12th of February last, when Dr. Ross sent in the memorial of the Quebec Government. Well, if it were just to have taken this up as an isolated proposition, and if it followed as a matter of justice, from the extension to which I have referred, that these roads should be exceptionally treated, I do not think it was neces-sary for the hon. gentleman to have waited until Quebec should ask before he would do Quebec justice. I think it follows, from the hon. gentleman's own statment, that he has been guilty of injustice, for "justice delayed," says the old proverb, "is justice denied," and one of those things which the King of England was solemnly sworn not to do in the great charter was not to delay justice. But the hon. gentleman has acknowledged that for nine long years he has been conscious that justice to Quebec demanded this special aid. For many of those years he was in Opposition, not embarrassed by the responsibilities of power, and not par-ticularly careful for the interests and convenience of those who were in power, and quite disposed, in the legitimate exercise of his functions, as leader of the parliamentary Opposition, to bring forward any proposition which might be difficult for them and suitable for himself. But his voice was never raised, here or elsewhere, during those years of opposition, in favour of a proposition that these roads in Quebec should be aided. Well, to a period of opposition succeeded a period of power, five years of power, and that at the head of a great majority, and that for the last four years of it with an abounding surplus in the Treasury, and that, during a period in which the hon. gentleman was pressing great schemes of railway extension, great schemes of assisting other railways; but he still kept in his secret soul, unmentioned to any man, not discussed in Council, not propounded to Parliament, this feeling: The Province of Quebec is suffering an injustice, she ought to be aided; I see her resources diminishing, I see a large yearly deficit, I know it is the interest on this money she has expended on this railway and which I ought to pay her, that is causing it, but I keep it to myself, I have no word to say of it; my word is all powerful; all I have to do is to bring down the measure and it will pass; and I will say nothing about it-why? Because she does not ask it. Then the hon. gentleman says that during the present Session it was asked, and they did it as soon as it was asked. Now, the hon. the Secretary of State, when he was First Minister, as was proved the other night by my hon. friend from Quebec East (Mr. Laurier), made a proposition which indicated the then views of himself and of his Government, and that was a proposition that the Government should arrange to take or, should themselves take over, these roads at a price of $7,000,000, the cost of them then to the Government being over $11,000,000, which would have made a difference of over $4,000,000, which the hon. gentleman said he was willing Quebec should bear as her portion of those advantages; and the practical result of the hon. gentleman's operations have been, in the sale of the railway not long afterwards for $7,600,000, as I proved the other night, by the figures, to at a cost of $1,000,000, which my hon. friend forgot; and I produce just about those results. So that, while the remind him of the fact that the Rivière du Loup Branch thought he ought to have helped to make up that difference, the First Minister of Quebec, now his colleague, was thinking that Quebec herself ought to bear that difference. He obviously, at that time, did not think that justice to Quebec called for a contribution of that difference specially for her in this respect. That is perfectly plain, for, if he had thought so, in tead of saying: The sum in excess of $4,000,000, which will have to be borne by the Province, I take as her share, he would have called upon the Federal Government to divide, in some such proportions as are now suggested, or in some other proportions, that difference. Then the hon. gentleman says that all the advantages have been in Ontario heretofore. Now, I did not, in the discussion in which I engaged, with reference to the construction of the national railways, onter into any investigation of the comparative local bonefits to the Provinces. I understood, and have always under-stood that, in contructing the national railways, we constructed them on national principles, and that the question was whether, between the termini which were proposed, geographically situated as they were, locally arranged as they were, it was to the interest of the Dominion at large that they should be built with the resources of the Dominion at large; and I pointed out that the national railways, which are two-the Intercolonial and the Pacific-had been constructed upon these grounds. And here I may pause for an instant, to deal with the arguments of my hon. friend from Maskinongé (Mr. Houle), in which he endeavoured to state an account between the Provinces, taking into account, though partially only, the question of the national railways. My hon, friend began by saying: I will not take any account of the Intercolonial, because that is one of the bases of Confederation. Why, it was the money of Confederate Canada that built the Intercolonial. It was out of the resources, not of the old Provinces, but of this Dominion of Canada that the Intercolonial was built.

Mr. MITCHELL. It was matter of bargain, though.

Mr. BLAKE. It was matter of bargain, it is quite true; but whose bargain? A bargain for Quebec? It was a bargain in the interest of the Maritime Provinces.

Mr. MITCHELL. It was a bargain in the interest of every Province.

Mr. BLAKE. There the hon. gentleman goes on just the ground I put it on. I say it is immaterial where the national railway is geographically situated; you agree that it is in the interest of the Confederation that it should be built out of the joint resources, and that ends the question. I deal with it in that way, and I am ready to deal with the Intercolonial in that way, but I am not ready to apply one measure to one national railway and not to apply the same measure to another national railway; and I would remind my hon from Maskinongé that, if the Intercolonial was part of the bargain of the original Confederation, the Pacific was part of the bargain of the altered Confederation, which introduced British Columbia; that it was part of the bargain of the new Confederation into which British Columbia entered, and therefore, on that ground as well as on the other grounds, it falls within the same rule. But I put it on no such grounds; only I say, if you take into consideration the local advantages of the Canadian Pacific Railway, one of the national railways, you must surely also take into account the local advantages of the other, the Intercolonial; and, if you take the number of miles of the Intercolonial in the Province of Quebec, 290 miles, you will find my hon. friend's statement of account very con-siderably altered. I alter it for him in two other particulars. I remind him of the St.Charles Branch, just being completed when bought, was bought in a worn-out condition, that the cost of putting it into a state to run was estimated by engineers, and that the price paid to the Grand Trunk was based upon the proposition: When put in a proper state the road will be worth so much, it will cost so much to put it in a proper state, we give you the difference-a million and a-half. I do not remember the exact figures, but I believe it was about a million and a quarter that it cost to put it in a proper state, which you have to add to the cost to the Dominion. I have now got two and a quarter millions, in addition to 290 miles of the Intercolonial, to be added to the state of account of the Province of Quebec, if you adopt that state of account, which I do not at all adopt. As to the Northern Railway in Ontario, my hon. friend is mistaken entirely if he supposes that it was of the slighest advantage to the Province of Ontario that a remission of the debt the Northern Railway owed and could not pay was made-entirely mistaken. The Northern Kailway was in this position. It was a built road, running in the Province of Ontario; it owed the Government of Canada, before Confederation, a large sum of money, which became an asset of the Confederation, and every shilling that was given up of that debt was a shilling towards which Ontario contributed, without getting anything whatever in return. All the Provinces contributed to the loss on that joint asset, whatever it was. We got nothing whatever as a Province by the remission of any portion of the debt of the Northern Railway. I will go further, and tell him there was, in the sense in which he would put it, no remission, because hon. gentlemen opposite had proposed, with reference to the Northern Railway, that that whole Government claim should be remitted for a very small sum-I think £50,000 -upon the report of the Auditor-General that that was all the debt was worth, and all the railway could pay. They, went out without having closed it. There was a subsequent investigation and enquiry, and a decision on the part of my hon. friend from East York and his Government, that the railway could afford to pay a larger sum, that the asset was worth more, and that the amount which was fixed was the extreme amount it was possible to obtain for that debt as I believe it was; and it was proposed, on those grounds, and I myself opposed the proposal, that it should go for a smaller sum, because I believed more could be realized. I knew of no Provincial interest which was to be served by giving one shilling to the Northern Railway. I know of none now. All was got that could be realized, and if any thing was lost Ontario lost her share of it, because she had nothing to gain by giving up anything for it. Therefore, without going further into that question, I say that if the account were to be stated on the principles on which the hon. gentleman proposed to state it, it would require a very different set of figures from those he presented to the House and which he fairly stated were without any pre-tention to exact accuracy. Now, Sir, the hon. gentleman says all the advantages, or the main advantages, have been to Ontario. I disclaim the argument, because, as I have said, you must treat your national railways as national railways, without reference to local advantages. But I said what has not been replied to, that the advantage to the country of a national railway as a means of development in the highest sense, is an advantage to that part of it in which its terminal port is situated. It is there that trade will flourish, it is there that manufactures will flourish, it is there that commerce will flourish, it is there that growth and development will take place; and while I do not at all deny the importance to any portion of country which possesses a capacity for local development of a railway running through it, I say that that is not the main advantage of a national highway. I have always stated my opinion where our national highway would go, and have never begrudged it-because it ought to go where nature has indicated it, and nature has indicated, at any rate, for when you yourselves came forward and claimed it, I didn't Mr. BLAKE.

the summer ports-the port to which so much allusion has been made, that one in the Province of Quebec. Then the hon. gentleman says, that because I spoke of the demoralizing system of subsidizing railways and suggested a change in the Constitution, I was bound to follow it up by a negative. Why, Sir, the hon. gentleman's motion is an omnibus motion. It deals with a great number of subjects; it deals as I pointed out, with the question of a national railway; it deals with the question of local railways; it deals with the question of the payment proposed to be made to railways; it deals with three distinct classes of subjects, and the hon. gentleman says, that because I found objection to the principle of part of these grants I was bund to follow it up by an amendment directed to that particular part. I pointed out to the House, that with reference to the question of bonuses, it is the principle of aid to local railways that I objected to, but I stated that Parliament had adopted it, they had acted on the hon. gentleman's suggestion and were merely going on in the same path, and I only reiterated my objections. But I contended that the other new question was the question which mainly deserved our attention, for was the question which hampy deserved out attention, for practical purposes, on this occasion. The hon. gentleman says that my speech has postponed my being made a Minister for a great many years—I think he said twenty. Well, personally, I am pleased at the long postponement of the period when I am to exchange, for the cares and responsibilities of office, the comparative ease and comfort of Opposition in this House. The hon. gentleman compared the attitude of myself and party to the attitude of the Democratic party in the United States, but the hon, gentleman seemed to forget that the Democrats were in a majority in the United States Congress to day. Now, Sir, the hon. gentleman says that the Government made up their minds to act before ever the hon. gentlemen from the Province of Quebec spoke to them about it. I asked, why did you delay, then, until this hour of the Session? Well, we delayed, he said, because there was a rumour which, more fortunate than myself, the hon. gentleman had heard somehow or other-I suppose through the newspapers. I did see one stated, with great circumstantiality, in the newspapers, a rumour of a difficulty in the matter, and so long as there was that rumor, he would not bring down the proposition. Well, the time came when it was understood that the attitude of the Quebec members had chauged, and then for the first time, magnanimous man that he was, the hon. gentleman felt himself at liberty to disclose those beneficent intentions of the Government which had existed in his own breast for nine years, which he had kept carefully concealed all that time, because he was not asked, forsooth; which, on the 12th of February, even after a demand from the Government of Quebec, he had still abstained from communicating his acquiescence in; which, so long as there was any danger, any danger that he might suffer in consequence from resistance, he refused to disclose; but the moment that that danger was dissipated, that the friends of whom there was a rumour that they might become enemies, had announced the restoration of their allegiance and friendly feelings, he felt himself quite free to go into the Committee Room and declare to them, not merely that he was going to do it, but, I suppose, that he had always intended to do it.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. Hear, hear.

Mr. BLAKE. In point of fact I dare say he told them something like what he has said there to night. I dare say he said to them: "Gentlemen, you see now how you have misconceived me; 'Short's your friend, not Codlin;' I always intended to do this; for years, for nine long years, I have kept it in my breast, because you did not do your duty, because you did not come foward and claim it; and when your Provincial Ministers came forward and claimed it, and do it, because you did claim it; but now that I understand, that having claimed it, you have cosisted from your demand, now that I understand your claim has become a disclaimer, I am relieved from all difficulty; I announce to you the concession I am about to make; I relieve my pent-up bosom from those feelings of emotion for Quebec under which it has been labouring for nine long years; now I am able to announce that during all those nine years, while none of you proposed it, while not a man of you said in Parliament that justice to Quebec demands this, I knew it all the time, and I have only waited till now to be able to announce it to you on the floor of Parliament." And then it was not to us it was told. Oh, no; the Parliament of Canada was not the recipient of the hon. gentleman's confidences; we could not hear anything about it here; the deputation from the Province of Quebec were told what the Government was going to do, but the Parliament of Canada was not to be told. They were told before the vote was taken on this Resolution what was to be done. Parliament was not given that information; hon. members were not told what the intentions of the Government were. They were the members from Quebec to whom the hon. gentleman communicated his intention. Now, the hon. gentleman says that I stated the proposition was corrupt, and yet I go further. Not so. As I have pointed out, we are dealing here with three different classes of propositions; and with respect to this particular class of proposal, I dealt with the House and with the question with the greatest frankness. I pointed out to the House what for a season of years had been the condition of the Province of Quebec, and I said it was not in the interests of Confederation that it should continue in that financial condition in which it was; and I declared my readiness to join in any reasonable and fair measure of relief for the readjustment of that condition; and I declared my readiness to look at this measure as being one in which the Government proposed to bring forward that relief, and in that sense I acquiesced in it to such an extent as I could. And I did not take the responsibility-so grave was the responsibility in view of the attempt to restore at an early period the finances of Quebec-of moving a motion which, if it were carried, would have the effect of intercepting the proposition of the Government. I might have made a motion very much more popular in other Provinces if had I been hunting for votes. if I had chosen, I might have said: No; I would not agree to anything of this kind. But I felt the interests of this country required that we should consider what the financial condition of the Province of Quebec was; and considering it, I could not reconcile it to my duty to make a motion which, if it were to carry, would have the effect of intercepting the aid proposed to be given to that Province. I proposed a motion, therefore, in form and in substance not having that effect, but which really suggested, if it were to carry, what the opinion of the House was, as to what further steps should be taken, without interfering with the steps which were being taken -consequential steps, as I believe them to be, and which I believe follow as natural consequences from the steps so taken. So much I asserted then, so much I assert now, and by that I will abide. I am prepared to contend in this Dominion for the soundness and justness of this proposal with respect to all the Provinces; but I say that I did not state that this proposal was a corrupt proposal. I pointed out the tendency of the hon. gentleman's proposal, with respect to advances to the small local railways; I pointed out its tendency with respect to our Constitution, and its demoralizing | effect on the people; but as to this particular proposal, I dealt with it on the principle to which I have referred. Then, the hon. gentleman said I argued most strongly against the short line. I appeal to the House whether the hon. gentleman could have heard me when he made that statement. I did not argue against the hon. gentleman's pro- and becoming heavier and approaching nearer-just as we posal for a short line. That statement shows how very ill the hon. gentleman conceives my argument. The hon. gentleman is very acute and quick of perception as to what hon. members are driving at, but he cannot have heard my speech.

Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The hon. gentleman simply stated that if the terminus was in Canada he did not see much objection to a road through a foreign country; but he did see an objection to any money being granted to

Mr. BLAKE. No; on the contrary, I stated I was for the shortest objective line, and that I was prepared to support it, even if it passed through a foreign country. pointed out how much opposed that was to the course which the hon. gentleman had taken before, and I conceived myself avenged by his present attitude, in regard to a matter respecting which I have been accused of something approaching high treason, because I suggested a road, part of which would pass through a foreign country. said that the proposition of the hon. gentleman, which involved the expenditure of money on a line through a foreign country, was a fact which made it all the more necessary that we should ensure, before we proceeded to expend money on the local development of the foreign country, that the short line to which we grant a subsidy should be one which would enable us to keep the business. I said I regarded it as a primary object that we should subsidize such a short line; but that if we could obtain the same re-sults by having a line through our own country, I should prefer it, not for patriotism, but because we would be developing our own country instead of a foreign country-not because of sentiment, but because of a tangible fact. I said the hon, gentleman had shown that the Intercolonial was not going to serve the purpose, and that he was now going to place in competition with it a short line; but I did not speak against the principle of a short line; on the contrary, I told the hon. gentleman that, irrespective of the question of the trans-continental trade having its ocean terminus at an Atlantic port within Canada, I can see that we have an important duty to perform with respect to our own interprovincial trade, and that is to reduce the distance between the Provinces by the shortest line possible. I really thought I was giving not a great opposition, but a somewhat plain and generous support to the hon. gentleman's proposal for a short line, so far as I could, in ignor-ance of his route, in ignorance of the cost, in ignorance of his financial scheme. In respect of these, I pointed out that we had nothing before us-that we had not what the Government proposed to expend on the route, and no assurance that the expenditure would accomplish the object. Thus, I could not do more than commit myself to the principle of the short line. The hon. gentleman has said the Conservative party have done all the good that ever was done in Canada, and he asked us to look at Canada to day and consider what it would have been if it had not been for the Conservative party. Well, I would have been very glad, at some earlier period of the Session, and some more convenient season, to consider what Canada would have been to-day it had not been for the misdeeds of the Conservative party. But I will not detain the House by a résumé of these matters just now. I can only say that I do not conceive the occasion was a fortunate one for the hon. gentleman to challenge comparisons; that I do not conceive that the future of this country, under his rule. under his auspices, by virtue of his policy and deeds, has been made so bright or so assuring that this night and this year he should challenge such a comparison as that; and that I believe, just as we have seen those clouds which I told him were in the sky, at the opening of last Session. though he would not recognize them, lowering during this year now see the difficulties of a reckless financial and fiscal policy more and more enveloping the country, the hon. gentleman was rasher even than he ordinarily is, when taking this as his occasion to say that to the Conservative party this country was indebted for its prosperity and its advancement. I believe, Sir, the hon. gentleman's general policy is one which will result in disaster to this country. I hope its recuperative force will be such as to overcome that disaster; but its measure of permanent, enduring prosperity will be achieved, not because of, but in spite of, the policy of the Conservative party.

Mr. SUTHERLAND (Oxford). Mr. Speaker, I wish to say a very few words on the Resolutions now before the House, representing, as I do, a district of the country deeply interested in this particular matter. While I would be willing to vote for and support any grant towards building a railway or any other public work that I should consider of national importance, there are one or two other questions contained in those Resolutions to which I wish to refer for a few moments. With reference to the granting of aid to local railways, and the recoupment of other Provinces for railways already built, I wish to point out the condition in which my district is situated in that respect, and to ask the House whether or not it is just and fair—in view of this policy being adopted—to ask that some share of justice be meted out to us. When I say that that district has, by provincial aid, and by aid granted by bonuses from municipalities, built its local railway, I think I am entitled to ask that consideration; I think I may go that far after an hon. gentleman who addressed this House went so far as to state that if any member could point out any part of the great national railway which has been built by provincial and municipal aid, he would be willing to give the same assistance as was asked for railways running through his own Province. I wish to point out that the Credit Valley Railway, running from the city of Toronto through the western peninsula of Ontario and connecting with the great system of American railways, was built by provincial and municipal aid. 1 wish to state that the different municipalities through which it runs have assumed heavy burthens of indebtedness for the construction of that road; that a great many private individuals, business men and others, have contributed of their means in their anxiety to build up those roads in the interest of that Province. When I state to the House that this Government have not only declared this railway to be for the general advantage of Canada, but have taken it out of the jurisdiction of the Local Government, and when I state that the grants and bonuses given by the different municipalities were often given on certain con-Caron, Chapleau, Cochrane, ditions, and that by the legislation of this House in taking that railway out of the jurisuiction of the Local Government, they have legislated away the right of the municipalities to have those conditions fulfilled, and when I point out further to the House, that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company have considered that railway so much in their interest, so necessary to them, that they have purchased it or in some other way become possessors of it, I think I have the right to say that if one Province or any section of the country has a right to be recouped for railways it has built, I think we have the right to come here, and in full justice, ask that some consideration should be given to those interested in that road. While I must say that I would be opposed to this Parliament adopting the policy of granting aid to local railways, I say if such a policy is adopted, and if we are called upon, after having built our own local railways, after assuming heavy responsibilities, heavy liabilities which we have to pay, if we are called upon to contribute -because that section of the country does largely contribute towards the revenue, towards the surplus which is being spent on these railways- if we are called upon to contribute towards the building of what are purely local railways in different sections of the country, no matter in what Province, then, 1 say, we should have some recoupment from this Parliament. I do not wish to take up the time of the House, but I felt it my duty to make these few remarks, even at this late stage of the Session. I, for one member representing that district, could not possibly support the Resolutions before the House, unless on some understanding that the policy would be carried out in the way I have indicated.

On the main motion,

Mr. LAURIER. Mr. Speaker, before these Resolutions are finally adopted, I desire to call the attention of the Gov-ernment to the question of the short line, upon which my hon, triend from Quebec Centre (Mr. Bos:é), when he spoke Fome time ago, requested a declaration of policy from the Government-a declaration which we have not had, but which we ought to have. By the third paragraph of the Resolutions, it is provided that a subsidy of $170,000 a year shall be allowed for fifteen years, for the building of a short line between Quebec and the harbours of St. John and Halifax. It is a well-known fact that the line contemplated by these Resolutions is a line which is to run for a large part of its course over foreign territory. While everybody will admit that it is desirable that the eastern and western Provinces of the Dominion should be connected by the most direct line possible, at the same time, every-onc, I am sure, will regard it as a great calamity if no such line can be found through our own territory. Of course, if a private company-actuated by the opinion that the present communications between the east and the west, the following by means of the Intercolonial Railway, are not adequatewere to seek to establish a short line, without asking any public aid, such a company would have a right to locate its line wherever it thought best, whether on domestic or on foreign territory. But when a company proposes to build a line across a foreign territory, and comes and asks this Parliament to constitute it a Dominion undertaking, I am sure every one will agree that this company should not receive a single cent of Canadian money until it has been fully established that no line, or the largest part of a line, cannot be secured on our own territory. Now, it is not certain that the short line proposed to be built through the State of Maine, is the shortest line between Halitax and Montreal. It is the opinion of competent engineers that a line as short, or almost as short, can be found by way of Quebec-that a line built vid Quebec, Rivière du Loup and Edmonston, would be almost as short as the American line. By this line the distance between Montreal and Halifax would be 784 miles, whereas the distance by the line through Maine would be 753 miles, a difference in favour of the American line of only 31 miles. Well, I am sure, Sir, that the most strenuous advocates of the short line in this House must be ready to say that such a difference of 31 miles in the whole distance of 784 miles is absolutely insignificant, and that if we can secure a line through our own territory which is only 31 miles longer than the American line, it is not worth while giving the subsidy for the completion of the American line, but that it should be given for the line upon our own territory. There are, I am informed, in addition, many advantages which militate in favour of the Canadian line. In the first place, as has already been pointed out, if we have a line upon our own territory we avoid the bonding system, which will become unavoidable if we adopt the American line, and which is a very serious annoyance to shippers of freight. In the next place, it appears that the American line is subject to heavy grades and to excessive curvature; and this fact will not be surprising to anybody who remembers that that line will run through a lengthy chain of mountains. I understand that the line upon our own soil via Quebec, Rivière du Loup and Edmonston, would be practically free from all these blemishes. So that, in point of fact, though the American line would be shorter by 31 miles, our own line would be practically shorter, in point of time and of hauling power. Well, Sir, these are important considerations, which ought to be investigated and reported upon before this vote is finally passed upon. There is another consideration. It is is the common consent of the whole population of this Dominion, as well as the settled policy of this Government, that the city of Quebec should be the summer port of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and that its terminus should be in the Maritime Provinces, and provision is made in these Resolutions for carrying out that policy. Now, it is manifest that if these Resolutions are carried, they practically take away the summer port from the city of Quebec. It is manifest, if this line is carried over American territory, as soon as the freight reaches Montreal, not a pound of it will find its way to the city of Quebec, but all of it will go over the American line. This is not in accordance with the policy we have adopted. Moreover, I question very much whether, once the freight has gone upon the American line, it will ever reach the ports of the Maritime Provinces. There is reason to believe that when it has reached Maine, it will be diverted to Bangor and to the other ports of that State, which would then be nearer to the Canadian Pacific Railway than any port in the Maritime Provinces. These, as I have said, are important considerations, and they ought to be investigated and reported upon before we finally pass upon this vote. They are considerations that have impressed themselves on the minds of the people of the city of Quebec. I am informed that the pre-sident of the Board of Trade, a few days ago, sent the following telegram to the hon. Minister of Railways:

"QUEERC, 8th April, 1884.

"R ferring to the annual subsidy of $170,000 mentioned, in the railway resolutions, I would respectfully represent that the shortest and most practicable line between Montreal, Halifax and St John can be obtained vi2 Quebec, and I would suggest that the disposal of this sub sidy be not decided until this can be proved.

"JOSEPH SHEHYN. " President Quebec Board of Trale.

"HOR. Sir CHARLES TUPPER, "Minister of Railways, Ottawa."

It seems to me that this proposition is a reasonable one; it asks nothing but that which must commend itself to the sense of this House. Of course, I quite agree that, if the shortest line cannot be found on our territory, the subsidy should go where it is intended by these Resolutions to go; but, at the same time, everybody must be of the opinion that if a line equally good can be found on our territory, the subsidy should go to it; and when it is asserted such a line can be found on our territory, it is only just that before we dispose of our money in favour of a line through a foreign country, we should take every means to have the matter fully investigated and a report laid before Parliament before we finally dispose of it. For these reasons, not wishing to delay the House longer, I beg to move:

That the said Resolution be not now read a second time, but that it be referred back to a Committee of the Whole, with power to amend the same by providing that the route for the whole, with power to amend the same by providing that the route for the line of railway connecting Montreal with the harbours of St John and Halifax, for which a sub-sidy of $170,000 a year, for fifteen years, is provided, should be subject to the approval of Parliament.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. My hon. friend who has just moved this amondmont is wrong in saying that no Ministerial response was made to the appeal from the hon. member for Maskinongé, on this point.

Mr. LAURIER. I said the hon. member for Quebec Centre.
