SIXTIETH ANNUAL REPORT.

The Annual Meeting, preparatory to the Anniversary Assembly, was held at the Home, on Thursday, November 7th, 1895, at 8 o'clock p.m.

In the absence of the President the chair was occupied by Mr. R. M. Esdaile, Vice-President.

Robert Adair, Secretary.

PRESENT.—Rev. J. Edgar Hill, Dr. Wanless, W. J. Common, Lieut.-Col. Gardner, Chas. Alexander, David Robertson, W. W. Ogilvie, Dr. Proudfoot, Jas. A. Ogilvy, Jno. Ogilvy, Jas. A. Cantlie, Wm. Stewart, W. H. Black, Rev. Jas. Patterson, Dr. Chas. McEachran, Rev. G. C. Heine, Col. Caverhill, Jas. Wright, Geo. A. Cameron. D. Seath, W. B. Smith, Jno. McDonald, J. H. Stewart, Ewen Maclellan, A. F. Riddell, Geo. R. Starke, Alex. McFee, W. A. Caldwell, J. M. Campbell, Duncan McIntyre, A. G. Thompson, John Allan, S. C. Stevenson, Kenneth Robertson, Dr. Kenneth Cameron, Major Macauley.

The Minutes of last Meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. Ewen Maclellan read the Report of Charitable Committee as follows:—

Annual Report of the Charitable Committee, 1894-1895.

The Society's year having come to a close, your committee presents the following report of the work done since last we met in this place.

The home has not failed to prove itself worthy of its name, though there has been a marked decrease in the number admitted —92 as contrasted with 147 last year. These have been almost entirely men, mechanics, laborers and non-descripts; a very few families, and not a domestic servant! A party of fifteen Latter Day Saints from the Colliery District of Scotland, were detained here a week on suspicion of being Mormons, and were accommodated in the Home. They were decent well-to-do people, and caused much interest and amusement in their excitement over the publicity given to their case, the whole trouble having arisen from their ignorance of the meaning of the word "polygamist." Relatives who have been prosperous in Utah, paid all their travelling expenses from Scotland. These people have acknowledged very gratefully the kindness shown them in St. Andrew's Home. 75 Hungry Scotch tramps were given meals, but could not be admitted.

Your Committee has to report an increase in the applications for relief from the poor residents in the City, as many as 125 families requiring the weekly aid given by your bounty during the winter months. The faithful few of the Ladies' Committee visit all new or doubtful cases, thus aiding us materially in preventing imposition. Two old women, and a family of eight young children, who are no better off in summer than in winter, have had to be assisted all the year.

In the work of the Out Door Relief we have distributed as follows :—

3,186 Loaves of Bread.	410 Pounds of Tea.
22 Barrels of Oatmeal.	113 Tons of Coal.
6 Barrels of Flour.	89 Cords of Wood.
1,640 Pounds of Sugar.	24 Pairs of Boots and Rubbers.

$400 Worth of new and cast-off clothing.

Extra for Christmas Dinner :

500 Pounds of Meat.	25 Pounds of Currants.
26 Turkeys.	25 Pounds of Raisins.
7 Geese.	2 Barrels of Flour.
5 Chickens.	120 Loaves of Bread.

13 Persons were sent to Scotland at a cost of ..... $153.10
(Of which $76 was collected from friends.)

8 Persons were sent to points in Canada and the United States,
costing ..... 21.25

Home expenses, Servant's wages, etc., were.....	514.75
City Poor in small sums.....	30.25
3 Persons were buried at the Society's expense.

It is with heartfelt sorrow we record the death of Mrs. Campbell, who for over twenty-five years devoted her best energies to the management of the "Home."

Mrs. Campbell was no ordinary woman. She was noted for her kindness of heart, cheerful disposition, even temper, great shrewdness, an exceptionally good judge of character, a thrifty Scottish housewife, thoroughly unselfish, and, in fact, in herself, combined all the qualities of an ideal Matron. In carrying out the Society's work all these years her great aim was to do all the good she could to those committed to her care, and to-day thousands who have passed through the Home can bear willing testimony to how well this work was done, and many of them have reason to be bless the day they were brought under her motherly influence. We are glad to say that the work of the Home will be carried on as before, by Mr. Campbell, and his daughter, Mrs. Black; the latter being well qualified to follow in the footsteps of her lamented mother.

Finally, as in previous years, we would express our hearty thanks to the kind friends who aid us at Christmas and all the year round by special donations, a list of which may be found appended to this report; to the Allan, Dominion, Beaver and Richelieu & Ontario Lines of Steamers for reduced fares; the Bell Telephone Company and City Ice Company for half rates; Mr. Stewart of New York for a weekly copy of the "Scottish American Journal"; the Physicians and Chaplains, and the Rev. Mr. Patterson and Mr. McLeod.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES A. OGILVY,
WM. REID,
JAMES TASKER,
E. McLENNAN.

SERMON

PREACHED BEFORE ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY, IN CHALMERS' CHURCH, MONTREAL, BY G. C. HEINE, B.A.

THE MINISTRY OF CHRIST.

"The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them."—Matt. xi, 5. "These brief but pregnant words set before us the object of Christ's earthly ministry. The occasion which called them forth had a melancholy and pathetic interest, which touches the heart. On the eastern side of the Dead Sea a few miles inland, was situated the castle of Machærus, known as the Black Castle, the residence of Herod Antipas, governor of Peræa. In the dungeon of that castle lay a notable man, incarcerated by Herod, because of his stern and faithful rebuke of that ruler, for marrying the wife of his half-brother, Philip. He had been in prison now for many months. Tidings had reached him of the wonderful works of Jesus. His soul was deeply moved by them. He had himself borne witness to Him, as the Messiah. But why, if He were the Christ, did He let him languish in the prison-house of Herod? Could He not, would He not, deliver him if He were really divine? Could it be that He would permit him to remain there, and possibly die? With a full heart, he sent two of his disciples from the Black Castle away up to Capernaum, where Jesus was preaching and healing, to ask Him if He were the real Messiah; "Art thou He that should come, or must we look for another?" In the presence of John's disciples, Jesus performs many miracles of healing, and tells them to go and report them to their master. "Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see. The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear; the dead are raised up, and the poor have the Gospel preached to them, and blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in Me." Not one word about John's future, though He knew it well. Not a word about his release. It was a better message. It said: He that should come is here; the Christ is come, and here is the testimony—the blind receive their sight, and the lame walk. We hear no more from John. He was satisfied. He would trust, and not be afraid. Jesus knew all about him; he was safe in His hands. He knew and would do what was best. This was John's faith, and it is the faith of many troubled souls to-day, who, if they are not in prison, are yet suffering from poverty, pain, or trial. Let us consider some characteristics of the ministry of Jesus here indicated, that so we may be encouraged, not to be weary in well-doing.

I. ITS OBJECT. In its widest scope, it might be defined as the salvation of the world. God sent His Son into the world. "that the world through Him might be saved." "The Son of man came, not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many." But here we find Him in the midst of the suffering and the poor, healing the one, and preaching to the other, and indeed to all. The object therefore of His ministry as here given was two-fold. First, it was to heal the sick, and secondly to preach the gospel to the poor. Christ came on a grand mission—to save the world, to redeem it from the power of the devil, by laying down His life for it. But that mission included not merely the soul; it included the body as well. The body frail as it is, and destined to corruption, is as truly the subject of Redemption as the soul. Hence, He addressed Himself to the work of healing the sick poor. He could and did stoop from the grandeur of His ideal to occupy Himself with the ills that flesh is heir to, and to heal them. He turned from teaching the multitude to give sight to the blind, to heal a centurion's servant and to rouse the daughter of a ruler from the sleep of death. He had a deep and overflowing sympathy for the suffering, which manifested itself in restoring them to health and activity. And in so doing He did not take from His glory, but rather added to it. For what greater work can one do than help to lighten the burden, however little, of a poor afflicted brother or sister, struggling against fearful odds! Christ showed His high estimate of such work by doing it Himself, and pronouncing a blessing upon everyone who shares such noble service. But He also preached the gospel to the poor. What gospel? The gospel of peace, and hope, and help, through faith in Himself. He was the helper they needed, "a brother born for adversity." They needed more than healing for the body. They needed help for their souls, as well; the feeling of guilt and unrest, and darkness removed; Christ saw and met this need. His work would have been an imperfect one, had He left the real man out. And we may well learn from Christ's example, that if we would minister to the poor effectually, then we must provide for the needs of the soul as well as those of the body. He is a very poor disciple of Christ, indeed, whose sympathies do not measure the deepest need of a poor brother, who does not know that to lift the burden of guilt from the heart goes a long way to lighten the burden of poverty, aye, even make it a stepping stone to higher living.

"Blest is the man whose softening heart

Feels all another's pain:

To whom the supplicating eye

Was never raised in vain.

Whose breast expands with generous warmth

A stranger's woes to feel,

And bleeds in pity o'er the wound

He wants the power to heal."

II. Observe, now, the CHARACTERISTICS of Christ's ministry, as suggested by the text. We shall allude to two of them. And the first that may be noted is self-sacrifice. Self-sacrifice is not a very welcome thought with many, but it is a cardinal one in Scripture, and in the Christian life. It was the great feature of Christ's life. He says: I came to minister, not to be ministered unto. "I am among you as he that serveth." It was not the self-sacrifice of giving. He had nothing to give. He had to be ministered to by others. "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." It was a far-higher self-sacrifice than that of giving. It was the expenditure of sympathy and strength in behalf of the poor. He was moved by the sight of the poor. He sympathised with distress, and want. His heart and hand went out to the wretched. He felt their troubles. They took hold of Him, so to speak, and He gave of Himself to them, so that they experienced relief—a relief which no liberality however great could convey. That service in behalf of the poor which is most like Christ's is that which enlists our heartfelt sympathy, which enables us to feel our brother's sorrow, to make it our own. It hurts more than it helps the deserving poor, to be assisted in a heartless way. He feels the slight. He would rather want, than take a pittance without heart. Sympathy is what the hearts of the poor ache for, and what they too seldom get. They want to feel that they are not cast out of the brotherhood of men, because they are poor; and they alone truly help them, who are willing to put the arms of brotherly sympathy around them, and love them as the great Elder Brother did.

A second characteristic of Christ's ministry was that it was personal. He Himself made the blind to see and the lame to walk. He Himself touched the leper and made him whole. He did not do it by deputy. When the centurion besought Him for his servant, He said: "I will come and heal him." He "went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed with the devil." Too much emphasis cannot be laid upon personal work in behalf of the poor and the suffering. One may help the poor and unfortunate by an annual subscription, or gift to a benevolent society such as this, and indeed it is a privilege to do so, especially when you know that its charities are wisely and carefully dispensed.

And in this connection there is a pathetic interest in our meeting to-day. During the past year there has passed away from the St. Andrew's Home, one who was long connected with its internal management—a bright, sympathetic, noble and faithful woman; a true mother in Israel to many who, within and without its walls, experienced its hospitality. A wise counsellor, a capable adviser, and a good friend of the poor, her place cannot be easily filled; and a fitting epitaph upon her tomb would be that which Jesus pronounced upon another equally worthy disciple: "She hath done what she could." Our heartfelt sympathies are with the members of her household. May the Lord sanctify their sorrow! It is especially fitting, also, that we recall the fact that some valued and worthy members of the Society have passed away to their reward during the year. Their names will not soon be forgotten, nor their generous liberality to the St. Andrew's Society, in behalf of its benevolent work. We trust that as one after another falls out of the ranks, others as kindly and faithful will take their places, and help us in caring for God's poor. Meanwhile we would proffer the sympathy of the members of the Society to the bereaved families of our members who have gone from us, and desire for them the Divine comfort in the hour of their sorrow.

But our gift is not enough. It should be followed up by personal sympathy. In giving, one has the general satisfaction that good is being done that suffering and poverty are being relieved. But beyond that, one experiences no sense of blessing. He only receives this, when he ministers personally to the poor; when he goes into the chamber or tenement where they dwell, shakes hands with them, hears their tales of sorrow, speaks kindly to them, interests himself in their circumstances, and tries to bear their burden for a little, and bring cheer into their lives. True, it involves some sacrifice; it takes time, and it takes something out of one's life, but it is time well spent, it is energy well bestowed, it is loving your neighbor as yourself, it is Christ-like, it is grand! It is, in one sense, the lowliest of earthly duties; in another it is the highest work under heaven. Let him, who will, strive for the honour and praise of the world, through scholarship, through heroism, through discovery, through courage; as for me, let me be found by my Master's side, among the suffering poor, helping to lighten their sorrows, to share their burdens, to heal their ills, and to dry their tears. Let me hear at last the welcome: "Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom.... For I was an hungered, and ye gave Me meat: I was a stranger, and ye took Me in: naked, and ye clothed Me: I was sick, and ye visited Me: I was in prison, and ye came unto Me." For, "inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, My brethren, ye did it unto Me."

"Do something do it soon, with all thy might;
An angel's wing would droop, if long at rest,
And God Himself inactive were no longer blest.

* * * * *

Rouse to some work of high and holy love,
And thou an angel's happiness shalt know—
Shalt bless the earth, while in the world above:
The good begun by thee shall onward flow
In many a branching stream, and wider grow;
The seed that in these few and fleeting hours
Thy hands unsparing and unwearied sow,
Shall deck thy grave with amaranthine flowers,
And yield thee fruits divine in heaven's immortal bowers."

It is matter for thankfulness that the St. Andrew's Society, with its sister, the Caledonian Society, is carrying on the good work which, sixty-one years since, it was organized to do. The record of all the good it has done would be a very long and worthy one, and inspiring as well. On us has fallen the mantle of our predecessors. Let us wear it worthily, and enlarge our hearts to meet the need ever arising for the manifestation of our liberality. With pride we note that the number of our nationality needing our help is not large. We observe, from recent returns, that the percentage of poor to the whole population is less in Scotland than in either of the sister kingdoms, being 2.5 per cent. in Scotland, 3.1 in England, and 8.5 in Ireland. Be it ours to meet our needy brethren, who, from various causes, appeal for our aid, and help them to rise to a condition of independence and thrift, and thus follow the noble example of the Elder Brother, assured that they who follow in His steps on earth shall share in His glory in heaven.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The Annual Meeting of the St. Andrew's Society was held in the Home on Saturday, November 30th, 1895, at 8 o'clock p.m. Donald Macmaster, 2nd Vice-President, in the chair.

Robt. Adair, Secretary.

Present—W. W. Ogilvie, Donald Campbell, Rev. Mr. McLeod, John Ogilvy, Jas. Wright, Ewen MacLennan, John Allan, W. B. Smith, Lt.-Col. Gardner, Gordon Melville, Jas. Williamson, Wm. McDonald, W. A. Caldwell, A. F. Riddell, Adam Thompson, John McDonald.

Moved by W. W. Ogilvie, and seconded by Jas. Wright, that the Committee appointed to report on deceased members be given power to add to the report.

Minute concerning members of St. Andrew's Society who died during the year 1894-5 :

1. John C. Watson, a worthy and successful merchant, whose genial disposition and honourable career reflected much credit on the Scottish name. He filled for one term the office of President of the Society, and in his last will and testament manifested his deep interest in our charitable work by bequeathing five hundred dollars to our funds.

2. Warden King, a generous contributor to the philanthropic enterprise of our city, and a willing helper in all our Society's kindly offices on behalf of needy Scots. Though he never held office, no member took a deeper interest in the prosperity of our Society, or was more ready to smooth the path of deserving immigrants to our new land.

3. G. W. Lundie, a loyal member of the Society, greatly esteemed by all who knew him for his sterling worth and unimpeachable integrity.

The Society desires to record its sense of the loss sustained by the death of the gentlemen above named, and hereby instructs the Secretary to forward a copy of this minute to the relatives of the deceased, with an expression of condolence with them in their bereavement.

Though not strictly within the limits of our remit, your Committee deem it not inappropriate to suggest that some reference should be made, in the records of the Society, to the loss sustained during the past year in the death of Mrs. Campbell, for so many years the faithful, kind and able matron of our Home. Many a Scottish family in Canada to-day has to thank the deceased for wise direction and kindly counsel given at a time when both were much needed. To her bereaved husband and family we send our hearty sympathy.

J. EDGAR HILL,
Convener of Committee.

A letter was read from E. B. Greenshields declining to act as President of the Society.

Moved by W. W. Ogilvie, and seconded by Lt.-Col. Gardner, that Mr. Donald Macmaster be elected President.—Carried.

The President was duly installed by Mr. Jas. Wright.

Moved by Ewen MacLennan, and seconded by A. F. Riddell, that Mr. Hector Mackenzie be elected 2nd Vice-President for the ensuing year.—Carried.

The following new members were elected: Principal Peterson, proposed by Ewen MacLennan and seconded by Prof. Murray; Duncan E. Bowie, proposed by Jas. Wright and seconded by Wm. Macdonald.

A cheque for $200 was handed over by the Caledonian Society, being its annual contribution to the Charitable Fund of the St. Andrew's Society.

Moved by Jno. McDonald, and seconded by Jno. Ogilvy, that a hearty vote of thanks be hereby tendered the Caledonian Society for its handsome donation to the Charitable Fund.—Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

ROBT. ADAIR,
Hon. Secretary.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY CELEBRATED WITH A DINNER.

For the first time in twelve years the St. Andrew's Society celebrated the feast of their country's patron saint by a dinner. It had come to be looked on as a settled fact that the celebration should take the form of a ball, but the powers that be decreed that for once a return should be made to the ancient fashion. Perhaps the presence of youth and beauty might have drawn a larger number, but the dinner last night at the Windsor was otherwise a decided success. Enthusiasm ran high, and everyone was pleased with himself. It was Scotland's night, and no other land was in it for the time being. For all that a ball would have been more popular.

All the leading Scotchmen in the city were present. Lieut.-Col. Strathy and most of the officers of the Royal Scots were present in uniform, and Mrs. Macmaster and a party of ladies graced the scene when the speeches began. The speech of the evening was delivered by Dr. Barclay, while Dr. Peterson also gave a fine address.

At eight o'clock President Macmaster and the guests of the society led the way to the Ladies' Ordinary, where dinner was laid. Pipers Mathieson and Ferguson headed the procession, playing the "March of the Cameron Men." The dining room was decorated with smilax and chrysanthemums, and the tables were prettily arrayed with the same flowers and with plants. Boutonnieres were placed beside each guest's plate.

Donald Macmaster, Q.C., presided, and at the table of honor were: Principal Peterson, of McGill University; Rev. G. Colborne Heine and Rev. J. Edgar Hill, chaplains of the society; Rev. James Barclay, D.D., Rev. J. Clark Murray, L.L.D.; Joseph Richards, president of the St. George's Society; James Wright, president of the Caledonian Society; Dr. Kennedy, representing St. Patrick's Society, J. X. Perrault, representing St. Jean Baptiste Society; Moses Parker, president Irish Protestant Benevolent Society; Ewan MacLennan, James Tasker, Charles Alexander, and others.

Rev. Mr. Heine asked a blessing, and the guests, 150 in number, sat down to an excellent menu, prepared and served in the Windsor's best style. After soup and fish came the dish of the evening, the immortal haggis, dish fit for kings. The smoking dish was borne in on the shoulders of four stalwart pipers, preceded by Pipe-Major Mathieson, and carried in triumph around the room amid the cheers of the company. The service was quick, and it was just a quarter past ten when the toast of the Queen was honored. That of the Governor-General was drunk to the enlivening strains of "Cock of the North."

"Rule Britannia" was played to the toast of "The Army, Navy and Volunteers." Lieut.-Col. Whitehead, a name which Lieut.-Col. Strathy said humourously was a good one for the senior colonel, replied briefly. Considering what was going on just now in the Dardanelles he thought the less said by the British nation the better. Lieut.-Col. Strathy, who also replied, said that he and his officers donned uniform that evening to show their thanks to those who helped them at their ball the other evening. He assured the gathering that the volunteers of Canada did not play at soldiering, but worked hard to do their duty as Canadians.

Mr. Macmaster believed that few people properly appreciated the service done by the active militia. The next toast he had to propose was that of the Mayor, but as the chief magistrate of the city had to leave for Quebec, he amended this to "The Mayor and Corporation." There was a burst of laughter and a chorus of good natured protest at the idea of toasting the corporation.

Ald. Lyall told the ratepayers present that the much-maligned City Council was what they had made it. The energy of the much-abused aldermen had given them the city they had to-day. Mr. Lyall defended the real estate tax as being lower than either Toronto or Ottawa.

President Macmaster made an able speech in proposing "The day and a' wha honour it" In the course of his remarks he said:

That with regard to Scotsmen's national achievements it was not necessary to say much, because history had rendered its verdict on that question, and that verdict unqualifiedly was that no people of ancient or modern times ever made a more determined struggle against tremendous odds and under greater disadvantages for liberty and independence. National liberty and national life were secured forever at Bannockburn, and well might every Scotsman glory in that victory.

should never be forgotten that at the time of Bannockburn the whole population of Scotland did not exceed 300,000 souls—little more than the present population of Montreal. When they came to deal with national virtues, he felt that he must forbear to tread upon sacred ground. Principal Peterson, whom they welcomed not merely as a Scotsman, but as an illustrious Scotsman, Dr. Barclay and the Rev. Mr. Hill could more fully and effectually deal with these. The subject was too deep for him, but he could not refrain from quoting to them the splendid tribute of Aytoun to the greatest virtue of the Scot:—"That unbought loyalty and allegiance of the heart which would not depart from its constancy until the tomb of the Vatican had closed on the last of the Stuart line." That unbought loyalty and allegiance of the heart had, as Mr. Aytoun said, "long since been transferred to the constitutional sovereign of these realms." It was impossible that a people possessing so many sterling qualities, and discharging duty with such a stern sense of duty, should not have some angularities. Of course there were some who said that they were prone to fondness for the bawbees, and that they kept more than the Sabbath. These were base slanders of the enemy. Mr. Rattray, the historian, who deserved to be read by every Canadian, paid this tribute to the Scotch:—"The industry, the energy, the shrewdness, the probity, the caution, the enterprise, the noble daring, the frugality, the high sense of honour, the haughty pride and reserve, which have given to the Scot a place and renown in the world, far above any to be anticipated from his numbers or the importance of his rugged land, have all been hardly and honestly earned, and paid for in the blood and toil and constant suffering of an heroic and illustrious ancestry." Surely, then, some faults and foibles may be forgiven the people of a nation who have won distinction all the world over, and whose noble record may not unreasonably inspire them with proud confidence and self-reliant perseverance and self assertion. Principal Peterson would experience a new phase of the national character when he came to examine his "kin beyond the sea," for there he would find not only the Scotsmen "pure and simple"—and generally not too simple—but Scotsmen who never saw Scotland that out-Scotch the Scotch. They, too, verily should have their reward. Indeed, the situation seemed to be this—Their vices, if they ever had any, had passed under the eclipse of their virtues, and their virtues had passed beyond the sphere of contemporary criticism. There was but one thing seriously charged against them, and that was that they wanted the earth, and really, to be perfectly candid, there was a good deal to be said in support of this indictment. He thought that if he were prosecuting the charge he could, for a very moderate retainer, get a verdict of "guilty," and from a Scotch jury, too. He did not think they could find it in their consciences to say

"not proven." When they looked around upon all the lands and seas, and observed how the transported stock had developed and prospered; when they saw that, if he might say so, greater Scotland had laid hands—not hostile hands, but helping hands—on the sources of wealth of other nations, and when they saw how they had multiplied and replenished every section of the earth; when they reflected that at this very moment almost half the steam-propelled vehicles of commerce on the high seas were in charge of Scotch engineers; when they realized that at this season the numberless greetings that were exchanged between the cordon of Scotch national societies that encircled the earth, all expressive of fraternal greeting founded on national affection, then the verdict was more than half made out that they did "want the earth," and more than that, that the earth wanted them.

With keen prevision Burns saw this when he prepared the world for the transfiguration of the nations when he wrote that beautiful prayer:

"Then let us pray that come it may,
As come it will for a' that,
That sense and worth o'er a' the earth
May bear the gree and a' that."

S. S. Bain sang "The Highlandman's Toast," and the toast was drunk with honors.

It was fitting that such a late arrival from "Bonnie Scotland, the land we left," should reply to that toast. In introducing him Mr. Macmaster welcomed him as an illustrious scholar, and a distinguished literateur.

Dr. Peterson made a splendid speech, brimming over with wit and humor. He had never felt the love of his native land glow so warmly in his breast, he said, as when he saw the Mull of Cantyre fading on the horizon. He could hardly realize that he was 3,000 miles from his native land when he found here the haggis, tartan, bagpipes, and, he was credibly informed, even whiskey at prices varying with the degree of prohibitiveness. Certainly Canada had developed many specimens of the sturdy Scotch character, which was nurtured on the paraphrases, shorter catechism, and whiskey. (Laughter.) Having paid an eloquent tribute to the beauty of Auld Scotia, Dr. Peterson said the intellectual outlook was bright and promising, with such names as Crockett, Barrie, and Ian Maclaren. (Applause.) The references to home ties each one must fill in for himself. These were not the least potent of the many forces which united them in a common love of home. They could speak of old Scotland in the words which Burns used of a less enduring form of human passion :

"Though all the seas gang dry, and the rocks melt with the sun I'll love thee still, my dear, while the sands of life shall run. And fare thee well awhile, I'll come to you again across ten thousand miles." (Applause.)

"Canada, the land we live in," was entrusted to the very capable hands of Rev. Doctor Barclay, who made one of his characteristic speeches, full of dry humor and sparkling wit. Scotchmen had reason to be proud of their history and country, and of Canada, which gave so many of them a home. They had reason to be proud of the Canadians, who retained British connection, of all the statesmen who had federated its provinces, of the men who gave them a net-work of rail and boat and electric communication, of the private citizens who had endowed its institutions, its universities and hospitals, the Hudson Bay Company and its present president (Sir Donald Smith), the C. P. R., were all something to be proud of, and in all Scotchmen had a large share. As they were proud of Canada's past so were they hopeful for its future. It only needed wise legislation, honest government, prudent but enterprising development of its resources to attract millions of settlers. He hoped some modus vivendi would be found which would unite all classes without hurting the feelings of any, in which no man's conscience would be trampled on, no man's liberty infringed. If the Scottish virtues of industry, intelligence and integrity were acted upon the country that had adopted them would not be ashamed of them. (Applause.)

The chaplains of the society were remembered, Rev. G. C. Heine and Rev. J. Edgar Hill responding. Mr. Heine urged Canadian unity and the preservation of the constitution.

"Our Guests" elicited speeches from Messrs. Richards, Perrault, Kennedy, Parker and Wright.

Granville Cunningham returned thanks for the enthusiastic manner in which the health of "The Ladies" was drunk, and "Auld Lang Syne" and the National Anthem brought the dinner to a close shortly after midnight.

During the evening Rev. Mr. Hill, who always attends to the fraternal messages to and from other bodies of Scotchmen, read a number of greetings. These came from Ottawa, Toronto, Quebec, St. John, N.B., Brantford, Guelph, Windsor Mills, Winnipeg, Regina, Vancouver, Victoria, Kamloops, Cornwall, Trenton, Kingston, Peterboro, Philadelphia, Albany, Milwaukee, Chicago and San Francisco. Greetings were sent to all these places, as well as to Calgary, Danville, St. Paul, Nelson, London, Eng., Boston, New York, St. Thomas, St. John's Nfld., Halifax and Hamilton.

A delightful musical programme was provided during the evening by Cathcart Wallace's orchestra, which added greatly to the pleasure of the occasion. Charles Kelly sang "The Warning Voice," "The Land for Me," and "Come O'er the Stream, Charlie." S. S. Bain sang "Scotland Yet," and "Of a' the airts." Both were loudly applauded.

The Committee think it advisable to state that while they believe the lists to be exact and accurate, it is possible that errors may exist, and should such prove to be the case, any member of the society discovering such errors will greatly oblige by communicating to that effect with the society's secretary, Mr. Robert Adair.

The whole respectfully submitted.

JOHN McDONALD,
