SCHOONER DAMAGED. The three masted schooner Wandrian, which has been loading for New York, fell from her loading berth at Hilyard's wharf yesterday morning and is badly damaged. CANADA'S CONTRIBUTION

There is danger that the people of Canada may become unduly self-important, and neglect some things which lie at the base of true national greatness. This country is growing very rapidly, and as the years pass the extent of its resources is shown to be greater and still greater, as more and more regions are opened up by the explorer and the railroad builder.

A CANADIAN NAVY

The Tory Toronto World has no doubts on the subject of the navy. It calls for a money contribution if that is really needed, but declares also that Canada must have her own fleet. It is the time to say it, in Canada becoming a great maritime power.

There is only one standpoint, in our opinion, from which the spending of money for warships in a time of peace is justified, and that is when the expenditure serves to stimulate industry in the country.

The French press joins that of England in protest against the action of the American congress in the matter of the Panama canal. Treaty violation is not profitable in the long run.

The habit of pressing addresses to the Duke of Connaught should not be too common. His Royal Highness might fairly be trusted to take something for granted. One comprehensive and very brief address should suffice.

Mr. Winston Spencer Churchill classes Mr. Boar Law with that other agitator Mr. Ben Tillet. The blamey stone did not soften Mr. Churchill's speech, nor all Ben Tillet is the man who should be asked God to strike Lord Devonport dead.

Geneva, Aug. 12.—In remote Alpine hamlets and villages, especially in the Bernese Oberland, there still exist ancient and pretty customs of proposing marriage by the language of flowers.

TO EXPLORE GREENLAND'S CAP OF ICE

Daring Dane Leading Expedition to Study Glacial Movements MOTOR BOATS AND PONIES Novel Experiments While Risking Life to Find Secrets of Unknown Land—Their Outfit

New York, Aug. 12.—Daring explorers are to plunge into unknown frozen regions and study Greenland's cap of ice.

The present Danish expedition is under the leadership of Captain J. P. Koch, who has already spent a number of years in geographical research in both Iceland and Greenland.

One Signurdson, an Icelandic, accompanies the scientists as chief of material. He is now in his native land securing ponies for the expedition, and will have charge of these animals in the unusual service to which they will be put.

SPLENDID ACHIEVEMENT OF NEAL LIQUOR CURE

Elicits Commendation From All Interested In Overcoming the Drink Habit Excellent Work Being Done at the Neal Institute Recently Opened in St. John—Particulars of This Three Day Treatment

With that splendid measure of success which has characterized the work of the Neal liquor cure elsewhere, the Neal Institute recently opened in St. John at 46 Crown Street, is achieving those excellent results which have so generally commended this famous treatment to all those individuals and organizations striving to overcome the liquor habit.

There are fifty-three Neal Institutes in the United States and ten in Canada. Last year these Institutes successfully treated thirty thousand patients. In September of last year the Australian government after a thorough inspection of all liquor cures of the kind, adopted the Neal three-day drink habit cure, and that country is now operating Neal Institutes as a government proposition.

With the numerous endorsements which the Institute have to offer it is not surprising that since opening in St. John some four weeks ago they have treated a very large number of cases most successfully.

FOUND $21,000 OF BECKER'S GRAFT MONEY

Known to Have Reached The $3,000 Limit in Seven Savings Banks

QUICK PROSPERITY

A New York Police Inspector's Profits—Known to Have Got $62,000 a Year From Gambling and Disorderly Houses

New York, Aug. 10.—The "J. G. Cullom" who deposited $3,000 in a Newark bank last June was Lieut. Charles Becker.

The "H. C. Kennedy" who put $3,000 in an Elizabeth bank at about the same time was Lieut. Becker himself who took Lawyer John W. Hart and Notary Public Richard G. Barter to call on Jack Rose at Harry Pollok's house on the Wednesday night after the murder.

It was Becker who hired the notary. It was Becker who gave instructions as to affidavits to be secured not only from Rose but from Harry Pollok. Pollok, at Becker's request, was to have backed up Rose's statement that Becker was not a grafter, but Pollok, suspecting that Becker and Rose were implicated in a worse crime than grafting, kept away from home that night.

Stanich Saw It All While investigating Lieut. Becker's bank accounts and Becker's communications with Rose after the murder Mr. Whitman found time also to question Giovanni Stanich, an Austrian business man, who was in front of the Metropolitan when Rose was shot down.

Several days ago when a suggestion from Jack Rose led Mr. Whitman to the West Side Savings Bank Mr. Whitman began an inquiry as to whether Becker had been banking elsewhere. The district attorney's bank in Manhattan and Jersey towns. The deposit of $3,000 in the West Side Savings Bank here was made in May of this year. Similar deposits were made in at least four other Manhattan savings banks, the district attorney said yesterday.

While on the matter of bank accounts and while running Lieut. Becker's financial operations the district attorney investigated the bank accounts of two inspectors of police. The statements of gamblers and other witnesses as to the gleanings of one of these inspectors, a very active policeman of the old school and who was in charge of a tempting field, say they amounted to $62,000 in less than a year.

This inspector appears to have sent collectors to seventy-five disorderly houses and sixty-five gambling houses. The district attorney has an idea that he divided his profits with another inspector with whom he had a working agreement. At any rate the bank accounts of these officials seem a little too plethoric for their salaries or for their probable savings, according to the district attorney.

WEDDINGS

At the passage of the Westbourne Baptist Church, Calgary, Aug. 2, the Rev. Alex. Torrie united in marriage George Tremblin Hutchings, formerly of Hampton (N. Ancient Hidden Chamber London, Aug. 12.—A fugitives' room has been discovered at the Fern Farm, near Moat, Flintshire, a building dating from the early part of the sixteenth century, and once the manor house of the Hartshill estate. While repairing an old fireplace and chimney the workmen accidentally uncovered a revolving stone. When this was moved it revealed a hidden chamber, which had been quite unknown to the inmates of the house. The room was fitted with antique oak furniture, including a table, on which were antiquated weapons and feeding utensils.

THE DOG-KILLER

An Adventure of Peter Crewe—The Man with the Camera Eye

By Harold Carter

Copyright, 1911, by W. G. Chapman in the United States and Great Britain.

The story told me by Sir Arnold Blythe appeared to contain the elements of some mystery the solution of which required the aid of Peter Crewe. He had assisted me in the unravelling of many a case which baffled the detective forces both of New York city and London, chiefly by virtue of his invaluable gift of optical visualization. I therefore made an appointment at my office for the following day, when the two men were to meet.

"Now, sir, will you repeat your story as you told it to me yesterday?" I said to the Englishman, after the formalities of the introduction had been complied with.

Sir Arnold was an Englishman of international reputation as an expert on ancient textiles. He had, in fact, come to New York at the invitation of Phineas Boone, the multi-millionaire, to assist him in the classification of his rare collection of Oriental rugs.

"You had a valuable rug destroyed recently by vandals?" asked Crewe, before the Englishman could commence his story. "There was an account of it in last Sunday's paper together with illustrations of the mutilated corner."

"Yes, but it is not of that I wish to speak," replied Sir Arnold. "The matter is in the hands of the police, who hold out every hope of discovering the criminal. I want to tell you of my dog."

Crewe leaned back in his chair and allowed Sir Arnold to proceed with his story.

"The fact is," he said, "that both my wife and I are being shadowed by Syrians. She is almost prostrated with fear and has just reached her room and had just reached her room."

"Recently acquired?" asked Crewe. "Only last week," Sir Arnold answered. "Lady Blythe was passing down Broadway on Thursday afternoon and had just reached its intersection with Thirty-sixth street when her attention was attracted by a Syrian man, who was offering some puppies for sale upon the corner. My wife is fond of animals and of an impulsive nature. One of the creatures came trawling toward her, and she could not resist the temptation to purchase it. The animal is only a mongrel and the fellow demanded an undue price for it; finally he threw in a pretty Syrian dog blanket of modern make but an excellent imitation of an old Persian weave. This clothed the bargain, and Lady Blythe bought the beast and took it home."

"On the following morning, when she had the creature on a leash in the park, she noticed that she was being followed by the same Syrian. She sat down upon a bench to rest and the man passed her, traversed a short distance, turned back and whistled. Immediately the dog broke from her control and set off at full speed toward its former owner. Happily a gentleman who had witnessed the occurrence gave chase, caught the beast and restored it to Lady Blythe, while the fellow succeeded in making his escape. Much upset by this occurrence, Lady Blythe returned home."

"The next day she took the dog out again, but, on reaching Fifty-ninth street once more perceived the same man following her. She was so unnerved at the sight that she called a taxicab and came home and went to bed. That night a death threat was received. The dog must be delivered, blanket and all, at a certain spot, the following day, or her lives would be forfeited."

"I called in the police and it was arranged that a messenger should take the dog to the place agreed upon. But nobody arrived; however, in the next morning another letter was received by me. It was signed with a bloody hand and in effect repeated the former demand, but still more strongly. The creature is valuable; the blanket is new, at most two dollars, and I am wholly at a loss to understand the cause of this persecution. "This rug that was mutilated was cut with a pair of scissors," said Crewe. "Did not that strike you as strange?"

"I would prefer to discuss one thing at a time," replied Sir Arnold. "The mutilation of Mr. Boone's rug has nothing to do with the matter, having been speaking of."

"Nevertheless, I would like to hear about the rug," persisted Crewe. "There may be some immediate connection. Will you tell me, Sir Arnold, the circumstances of that affair?"

"There is nothing to tell, beyond what the papers said," answered the Englishman testily. "One of the rugs, a Persian textile of great antiquity, had a corner cut away with a pair of scissors, leaving a jagged tear. The set was perpetrated some time after midnight on Wednesday, and the perpetrator succeeded in making his escape undetected."

"The police have discovered no clue," he said. "They have searched every rug depository in the city in vain. It seems evident that the criminal has succeeded in making good his escape."

"But you said the police hold out every hope of discovering him?"

"Yes, of course, sooner or later the mutilated fragment will reappear somewhere, probably in the possession of a peddler. But to come back to the dog—"

"I have here a photograph of the rug," persisted Crewe, drawing a sheet of newspaper from his breast pocket. "The matter interested me exceedingly." He handed it to Sir Arnold. "What are those arabesques immediately above the tear?" he asked.

"Meaningless and conventional Persian borders," answered the Englishman. "They are a feature of all rugs of a certain century. That border was cut off by the murderer, apparently aimlessly. But now, sir, I insist upon discussing this affair of the dog."

"Let me see him and his blanket," Crewe answered. "When would it be convenient for us to call?"

"You can come back with me at once," Sir Arnold answered. "If you can solve the mystery I shall be most grateful, and Mr. Boone will reward you accordingly."

Crewe waved away the suggestion of the reward. He rose and took his hat. "Are you ready, Langton?" he asked.

"I rose and we two followed Sir Arnold out of my office. We descended to the street and took a Lexington avenue car to the millinery's town house, which was temporarily occupied by the Englishman and his wife. Once inside Crewe asked to be taken to the collection of textiles, and Sir Arnold led us into the chamber in which they were spread out for classification. The mutilated rug was not at first apparent, for the injury had been much slighter than we had supposed. Only one extreme corner had been holed, and the rest of the rug in a zig-zag fashion with a pair of blunt scissors, and the woolen threads were curled and warped over the texture. Crewe studied the rug long and earnestly.

"The arabesque was in the part removed," he said. "Then why was there no similar border woven into the fabric upon the other corners?"

Here Sir Arnold felt himself upon safe ground. This was his province. He turned upon Crewe somewhat pompously.

"My good man," he said, "the 'crease' for evenness of design being most important, it is said that the most fortunate artist the Persians of the date when this fabric was made. The weaver chose to place a border upon the corners of the rug, and that fact, in itself, fixes the date of it beyond all doubt. And now, if you have quite satisfied your curiosity, will you look at my dog or not?"

Before Crewe could answer there came a commotion of feet along the passage and the entrance, but still more strongly. The creature is valuable; the blanket is new, at most two dollars, and I am wholly at a loss to understand the cause of this persecution. "This rug that was mutilated was cut with a pair of scissors," said Crewe. "Did not that strike you as strange?"

have him lodged in jail, we shall not only put an end to the persecution but be enabled to restore the mutilated fragment to Sir Arnold."

"Do you suggest where it is?" I asked.

"I know where it is," he said. "Then why do you not restore it to its owner?"

Crewe stopped short and regarded me benignantly.

"Because," he said, "if I did so his life would not be worth three days' purchase. It is one of those cases where I must sacrifice my reputation as a detective to save my client. I hope that his dog is stolen, that the blanket is stolen and is never found. Unless we can find the dog seller."

"As far as possible from the Syrian quarter," answered Crewe. "You remember him?"

"I only caught a glimpse of him through the window," I protested.

"Then you saw that he was dressed in blue, that he was freshly shaved, and that a pair of scissors bulged in his coat pocket?" asked Crewe with genuine surprise.

"Yes, I saw only a ragged, dirty Italian-looking man. But even if you can show me his picture, how will you locate him?"

"Well," said Crewe, "since the Syrian quarter lies far down town, and he naturally wishes to avoid it—"

"Why should he wish to avoid it?"

"He will not leave the Lexington avenue car until it is well up town. Now, since it is almost a matter of existence to him to keep watch upon Sir Arnold, he will take the Lexington avenue car downtown again this evening. In consequence, all that we need do is to watch the cars. And the best way will be to take a car uptown and keep our eyes fixed upon all cars that pass us."

I could make neither head nor tail of Crewe's reasoning. But I knew that he had his own way of procedure, and that, however unintelligible they seemed to me, there was always some motive in them deeper than I could fathom. Accordingly I went with him; we boarded the west-bound car along and rode uptown to the terminus. But though we passed many cars there was no Syrian on them.

"I got off at the terminus and took a car back. Crewe was plainly vexed at the disappointment.

"I am sorry, but I have left the car at some intermediate point," he said. "Well, sooner or later we will have him. He will probably attempt some disguise. The police will never know a Syrian from an Italian when he puts on a soft felt hat and a flowing turban. The matter is—"

She noticed that she was being followed by the same Syrian.

took the paper from me with a gesture of weariness. "Langton," he said, "what was your impression when you looked at the dog blanket?"

"That it was a dog blanket," I replied. "I saw nothing peculiar about it."

"Did you not see that it had a crooked seam?"

"No, that the seam ran in a series of zig-zags exactly corresponding to the zig-zag cut upon the mutilated rug!"

"I confess that I did not notice that."

Crewe smiled tolerantly. "Well," he said, "it is inexplicable to me that you should not have seen it. It seemed as plain as Pike's Peak that here was the missing fragment, right under the eyes of our host himself."

"Meanwhile Armenian B, the dog seller, elated by the possibility of becoming sole owner of the 'wealth of Arabian and the treasures of Mulik's castle,' gave his friend the slip. He wanted all for himself. He did not let him know who the purchaser was, or where she lived. Had he done so, the two together would undoubtedly have managed to regain the animal. Armenian B played a lone hand for several days, but the man whom he induced Armenian B, his friend, to place over a dog and sell the creature upon the streets. He was to keep watch over the animal and, as soon as the police search had been concluded, to steal it from his owner. By some extraordinary chance Lady Blythe became the purchaser of the dog and, with it, obtained the deed, in the form of a dog-blanket."

"I have been wondering how you obtained your knowledge of rugs," he said. "No man but one is able to contravert my judgment. Are you the author of the monograph on the Rugs of Kurdistan and the Lower Caucasus?"

"The conversation became too technical for me. I have no interest in the ravings of rug lovers. The rest of the evening passed, so far as I was concerned, less pleasantly."

"Because he asked for it."

ARREST OF SCHEEPS DRAWS NET CLOSER AROUND BECKER

The Man Who Hired Assassins Willing to Tell All — Six of Principals Have Confessed— Where Loot Went

Hot Springs, Ark., Aug. 11.—Sam Scheeps, wanted in New York in connection with the murder of Herman Rosenthal, was placed under arrest in this city last night. He is guarded by an officer, who, it is reported, is holding him pending advice from the district attorney's office in New York.

"I am ready to go back to New York without any requisition," said Scheeps, "but I want to know that everything is all right."

"I am the keynote to the situation in New York and if they want to treat the district attorney's office right they will have to treat me right."

Scheeps said today that he has not decided whether he will join with Rose, Vallon and Webber in a confession. The alleged go-between added that he would make up his mind on that question on the way east. The arrest was made through a detective agency.

Scheeps, it is charged, was in the conspiracy to murder Rosenthal, role in the gray automobiles in which the slayers were carried to and from the scene of the shooting, and paid off the gangsters after they had completed their work.

While Scheeps has been missing from his home since July 16, the day of the murder, it is said that he was in the city up to and including July 18. He was the go-between, it is alleged, for Police Lieut. Becker and Jack Rose, when the latter was hiding in Harry Pollock's house in Riverside Drive.

When Rose surrendered Scheeps dropped out of sight and no trace was found of him until he was rounded up in Hot Springs. It is said that Scheeps was furnished with $1,000 for the purpose of paying off the assassins.

Jack Sullivan, "King of New Boys," has already broken down and agreed to go before Mr. Whitman tomorrow to tell all he knows about the alleged connection of Lieut. Becker with the murder. Sullivan made this agreement with assistant district attorney James E. Smith, who visited him today in the West Side prison, where he is confined in company with Rose, Webber and Vallon, who have confessed their part in the crime.

Unwilling to tell his full story until he has seen Mr. Whitman, Sullivan said to Mr. Smith that he had seen Becker in conversation with Rose and Webber a few hours after the murder. This corroborates the statements of other witnesses that have pointed to close relations between Becker and the men involved in the murder plot.

Sullivan makes the sixth of the nine men under arrest for the murder who have "confessed" and the effect of the addition of another "recruit" upon Police Lieut. Becker, who still maintains that he has nothing to confess, will be watched with interest by the prosecution.

EARTHQUAKE KILLS ONE THOUSAND AND INJURES MANY MORE

Turkish Towns Laid in Ruins and Flames Lick up the Debris— Lighthouse Sunk

Constantinople, Aug. 11.—Reports here today indicate that the great earthquake which was felt through a great part of Turkey yesterday was accompanied by much heavier loss of life than at first stated.

The newspapers today estimated the number of victims at a thousand killed and the injured said to number from five to six thousand.

The details of the earthquake, which are coming in slowly owing to the interruption of the wires indicate that the seismic disturbance was widespread. Several hundred persons have been killed. Thousands are homeless and outbreaks of fire have occurred in many of the towns and villages.

The centre district between Constantinople and Adrianople felt the shock severely. Fugitives from Myrtilopol report three hundred killed and six hundred injured. The town was still burning when they

Union of Canadian Municipalities

The twelfth annual convention of the Union of Canadian Municipalities is to be held at Windsor (Ont.), on Aug. 27, 28 and 29, at the invitation of the mayor of the city and the council.

The president of the Union is J. W. McCready, city clerk at Fredericton, and the executive officers for the maritime provinces are:

New Brunswick—First vice-president, F. C. Robinson, mayor of Moncton; second vice-president, D. G. Lingley, chamberlain, St. John's; third vice-president, F. L. Poirer, mayor of Newcastle; fourth vice-president, T. C. L. Ketchum, mayor of Woodstock.

Nova Scotia—First vice-president, F. W. W. Dore, city engineer, Halifax; second vice-president, G. W. Stuart, mayor of Truro; third vice-president, town solicitor, Bridgewater; fourth vice-president, A. D. Gunn, mayor of Sydney.

Prince Edward Island—First vice-president, C. Lyons, mayor of Charlottetown; second vice-president, James Paton, ex-mayor of Charlottetown; third vice-president, T. Campbell, alderman of Charlottetown; fourth vice-president, T. A. Morrison, mayor of Summerside.

Clarence Bragdon, of Old Orchard, Me., harassed off shore there Monday a sunfish that weighed between 700 and 800 pounds. It took Bragdon five hours to land the fish. This species of fish has been found in southern waters and is rarely captured so far north.

RAIN DAMAGING CROPS

The climatic conditions during the last four weeks have been abnormal, to say the least. Since July 13 there have been but nine days on which rain has fallen in measurable quantities, while on several of these days there was fog or a slight mist, or cloudy weather, leaving a half dozen or less real fine days in a whole month. This is a record seldom surpassed.

The quantity of rain which fell during that period was not excessively large, but was spread over a great many days. The month so far an inch and a quarter of rain has fallen. As of this fell on Saturday. The unusual record had weather is not peculiar to St. John, but has also prevailed in the whole eastern section of the continent.

Reports from the river districts of this province are to the effect that the river is very high at present—as high as ten feet above the ordinary height at Hartland. It is feared that unless the weather changes with the full moon today great damage will result to the meadows and lowlands in the valley districts. Already it is said, some damage has been done.

The general in command of a 63d day during manoeuvres was watching the work of the ambulance corps and asked the commander of one section who he was supposed to be treating a man for.

"Concussion and total insensibility, sir," was the reply.

"What have you done?" asked the general. "Given him some brandy, sir," was the prompt answer.

"Because he asked for it."

RUBE MARQUARD MAKES A FORTUNE PLAYING BASEBALL

That baseball can make real fortunes for owners of major league clubs has been demonstrated time and again. That it can do almost as well for ball players is about to be proven by Rube Marquard, this year's sensation in a pitching way.

The recent opinion is that the other famous Southpaw, Rube Waddell, in his best days, outclassed the New York City pitcher, but Marquard's triumph over him is a record that has been hit hard.

Nothing but the Giants' downfall in the race for the pennant can prevent Marquard's making more money than ever was accumulated before in a single year.

It is the Giants' repeat and then capture the world's championship, so much the better. But if they only succeed in getting the National League flag and if Marquard can pitch one good game, the big series his fortune is made.

It is the first place, there is his salary. Because of the fact that he was $7,000 a year, he will be a bonus this year for him amounting to at least $1,000.

And then comes the real money. One of the big vaudeville syndicates has offered Marquard a two-year contract for $100,000 a year, which is a weekly salary of $1,000.

PALZER AND O'Rourke PATCH UP DIFFERENCES

When Albert Palzer, the Iowa heavyweight, enters the ring again, he will be under the management of Tom O'Rourke.

After defeating Bombardier Wells for which his end was $1200, Palzer deliberately refused to go through with his agreement to box Luther McCarty in the Garden on July 19.

Palzer's associates, who tried to manage his affairs after the split with O'Rourke, have severed their relations with the burly boxer. Palzer refused to pay them for their services and advice.

O'Rourke's contract with Palzer is in effect, but it is believed that Palzer will soon decide to live up to it; but he must first agree to obey O'Rourke in every particular.

Palzer will probably secure a match with the winner of the Lather McCarty-Jim Stewart bout in the Garden next Monday night. In fact, Manager Gibson, it is said, has secured O'Rourke that he can have a date for Palzer as soon as their former relations have been renewed.

GALLANT RESCUE OF DROWNING LAD AT BAY SHORE.
 Through the daring and perseverance of a young man of north end, Thomas McGowan, of Main street, the life of another young fellow, Wm. James, was saved yesterday afternoon in the water near the bay shore. Young McGowan, James, from the Fernald Bay Shore, from being a young boy, was swimming and the waves were rolling very high. Most of the lads had not ventured far from shore and were in the water as long as did young James, and soon the heavy waves began to exhaust his strength and he was unable to battle for his life in the billows.

His cries attracted the attention of those on shore but there were no prizes for strong swimmers in the party. McGowan realized that it was a matter of life or death and though the surf was rolling high and the waters surging heavily he swam with steady strokes towards the weakening lad, who had almost succumbed a young McGowan reached his side, and then a difficult struggle to bring him ashore, as the drowning boy clung to him and made it hard for him to swim. Then began really a fight for life for the two of them, McGowan struggling for mastery and eventually succeeding after three distinct struggles on the part of the youth who was being rescued.

Clinging to young James he made for shore, but the burden was hard to manage through the heavy surf, and soon the plucky young fellow realized that he must have help. He began to shout for aid, and another of his companions, Joseph Dever, put to his assistance. Both of them grasped young James and between them he was brought ashore, in a very weakened condition. Gradually he was re-associated, and his strength began to return. His rescuer was heartily congratulated upon his courageous act, many having witnessed the pluck and heroism of the struggle for life several yards from shore.

OFFER EXPERT AD TO DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS.
 Walter E. Foster, president of the Arboricultural Society, and H. E. Good, the florist and landscape gardener, called upon Commissioner of Public Works Agre this morning and talked over with him matters in connection with beautifying the city. The object of the talk with the commissioner was that the city and the society might work together. Among other things they asked that in tying up trees and general care of them by the city that Mr. Good might be consulted so that those working with the trees might have the advantage of his expert knowledge in such matters. Commissioner Agre was in thorough accord with President Foster and Mr. Good in this matter and felt that the city would do well to avail itself of Mr. Good's expert advice. They also asked that a connection with the water main might be situated beside the new grass plot in Market Square as the hydrant is now the only means for obtaining water for sprinkling the grass. Commissioner Agre agreed to give this matter consideration with a view to meeting the wishes of the society in the matter.
