FEMALE FREEMASON.

Story of the Hon. Mrs. Aldworth's Initiation into the Sublime Mysteries of Freemasonry.

In the City of Cork, not many years ago, a Mr. Maberly kept a house of entertainment, and in it was held a Freemason's Lodge. The Hon. Mrs. Aldworth, a lady of rank and fortune, resided in the neighborhood of the city, and hearing much of the mysteries of the craft, had a most unquenchable desire to acquaint herself with them, and being a woman of resolution and perseverance, she left no means untried to come to a knowledge of the secret.
She contrived various stratagems to accomplish her purpose, but was as often defeated by obstructions impeding her progress.

It is a proverb that, "a golden key can open every lock." Mrs. Aldworth appeared to have been aware of this, for she made a proposal to Mr. Maberly, the landlord, to assist her in effecting her determined purpose at all risks to be initiated into the mysteries of the craft, but little did she know of the inflexibility of a free and true-hearted Mason. The landlord may, it is true, yield to temptation on any other subject, but on the one in question Mr. Maberly was temptation proof, and Mrs. Aldworth gave up her efforts with him, adding, that she may as well think of moving the world, as to prevail on him, he being a true and accepted mason.

Though the lady's powers of persuasion failed with the landlord, she had some hopes of making an impression on the landlady, and soon succeeded in gaining her over to assist the project, and between Mrs. Aldworth and the landlady, many plans were projected to effect the purpose, but they were all frustrated by impediments in superior variety. Mrs.
Maberly acquainted the lady that though her husband was a man of unshaken integrity, something might be done with Tim Jinkins, the tyler, to whom they communicated the lady's desire, promising a large reward, should he connive at the several plans laid down to effect a private and secret admission (unknown to the craft) and during the long hours, whereby Mrs. Aldworth might inspect the proceedings and acquire the secret of Masonry.

But here again they failed, for it is an axiom that since the first institution of this ancient and sublime order no other member of the craft ever revealed the secret, nor can they, it seems, were they disposed, or however necessitous their circumstances might have been. Be this as it may, Tim Jinkins, a faithful and true-hearted Mason, marched about the lobby, brandishing his flaming sword, and his apron on, hat in his Sunday clothes with a capacious hat grown rusty in the service—to the terror of the prying and inquisitive. And, faithful to his trust, he informed the master of the lodge that efforts were used in a certain quarter to come at the secret, which made the officers more circumspect & vigilant. On this disclosure, brother Maberly was brought to the task, and fearing that the lodge would be removed from his house, insisted that his wife should not meddle in so fruitless and so dangerous an experiment, which for the time being, disconcerted the lady's schemes.

Weeks and months went by, still Mrs. A. was determined to effect her purpose, and to prevent all suspicion, did not appear at Ma-berly's, but effected an interview elsewhere, through the intervention of a remarkable character residing in Cork, in those days, called Bounce the cobbler. These interviews were occasionally renewed, until their plans were determined and ripe for accomplishment. Mrs.
Maberly had experienced so much kindness from Mrs. Aldworth, in the way of favors, that she heartily entered into the lady's views.
Both resorted to every device that female inguenitry could invent, to procure for Mrs. Ald-worth, the accomplishment of her sanguine wishes, but without effect. The plagues Tyler, Judas ad urnam, and his flaming sword thwarted every project.

After more mature deliberation, the landlady proposed to have a chest conveyed into the lodge-room, and there let remain for some time, and at a farther opportunity, to assist the lady into it, and then to fasten the cover with a padlock to prevent suspicion and search. But on further consideration this was given up, first, because of the want of ventilation, and secondly, it being so very low in situation, as altogether to exclude a view of the actors while engaged in their most sublime avocations.

Ripe in expedients, it was next proposed to make a peep-hole in the ceiling, and start a board in the chamber overhead, thro' which aperture it was theoretically obvious that the lady could gratify her curiosity to the fullest extent, she having, therefore, a bird's-eye view of the proceedings generally, and would experience no constraint from confinement & want of air. But this very feasible plan was relinquished for some reason that has not transpired.

About this time Mrs. Maberly attended an auction in Hanover-street, there one of the most respectable streets in Cork, and being in want of a clock, purchased what was then esteemed a handsome one, having a circular pane of glass of small dimensions in the door of it for ornament, and to satisfy folk that the clock was going, it was intended to command a view of the pendulum on which was printed the rising sun. In those days clocks were usually painted and japanned, & Mrs. Maberly had masonic emblems tastefully ornamented on it, and brought to the lodge room for which it was destined.

The clock-case was intended as a hiding-place for Mrs. Aldworth as soon as the novelty of its beauty was worn out, and it was agreed to leave the works with one Mr. Aicken, a clock-maker in Cork, who was informed that he was to take his own time in cleaning them, Mrs. Maberly having a plan in contemplation with which the pendulum and weights would considerably interfere. When matters were ripe for accomplishment, it was resolved on by Mrs. Aldworth and the landlady that the clock-case was the only resource that remained, and at all risks Mrs. Aldworth determined on concealing herself within it on the following Monday evening, about half an hour before the meeting of the members, on which one Mr. Skiddy, a merchant, and a Mr. Cop-pinger were to be made, also three officers of the lodge, then at quarters at Barrack-hill barracks, now employed as a depot for convict prisoners, since the building of the New Barracks on the hill over Patrick's bridge.

Accordingly the evening came, and all due preparations were made by the mistress and activity of the landlady, who had Mrs. Ald-worth introduced in disguise, aided by Mrs.
Macmahon, the barmaid, Mrs. Aldworth was securely placed in the clock-case, but from its limits the lady was much incommoded, she not having been able to change her position, and but for her firmness and resolution, any other person would, certainly relinquish the object in view, rather than endure the torture of remaining in one position during the protracted period of a meeting in lodge, with extra business to prolong the ceremonies. To screen Mrs. Aldworth from observation through the circular pane of glass in the door of the clock-case, it was partially obscured with black paint, leaving a space sufficient for seeing through, yet so small as to escape the most strict observation.

The brethren now began to assemble, at length proceeded to business, Mrs. Aldworth being all this time an attentive observer, though under circumstances of considerable pain and inconvenience. But something was wrong—the proceedings were thwarted, the craft could not work, and it was at once concealed.
The member next the door opened it, but there was no instruction from that quarter; Jin-kins, the Tyler, was at his post, and no man need suggest to him the necessity of his duty.

The apartments overhead were all diligently searched, and a general commotion amongst the members ensued. Baffled in every effort to find out the cause of the interruption, the members once more resumed their places.

At this period the lady in the clockcase exhausted from confinement in one position, and want of air, screamed faintly from exhaustion, and went off in a swoon. The attention of the company was now directed to the clockcase, and on forcing open the door the unhappy lady lay as stiff as a corpse, and with considerable exertion and difficulty extricated from her perilous situation.

Brother Maberly withdrew, and the screams of a female in an upper room attracted the attention of several of the brethren, who ran up stairs, and discovered him chastising his wife, well knowing that she was the cause of the mortifying scene that brought disgrace upon him, and all the consequences resulting therefrom. For a space of 20 minutes Mrs.
Aldworth continued in a swoon, the members of the lodge were debating on what was to be done under circumstances. Some voted for putting the lady to death—others, opposed so desperate a step, and one of the craft more sensible than the rest, addressed the lodge on the lady's behalf, contending as there was no law, human or divine, why a female should not become a free and accepted Mason, proposed on the instant that the hon. lady should be forthwith initiated into the sublime order of Masonry, which was carried with acclamation. The hon. lady was accordingly received into the confraternity, the only example on record, and she continued, through a long and useful life, to display for the benefit of her fellow creatures, the benevolent characteristic of a good and accepted Freemason.—Freemasons Magazine.

THE ROYAL BRIDE.
Written in honor of Her Majesty's Nuptials, and respectfully dedicated to the Queen.
With rosy goblets brimming,
And wearing Pleasure's smile, We'll toast the lovely women Of this our native Isle.
But chiefly will we honor Victoria, England's pride, Oh, blessings be upon her,
Prince Albert's Royal Bride.

In maiden graces blooming,
Her beauty was a flower, Adorning and perfuming
Her lone and secret bower;
But now, fond expectation Cries out on England's pride, Thy buds shall bless the nation,
Prince Albert's Royal Bride.

Before the altar bending Behold thy goodly pair!
A smiling train attending,
The young, the sweet, the fair;
But still, the first is fairest,
And that is England's pride; Joy to the ring thou wearest,
Prince Albert's Royal Bride.

Peace o'er thee spread her pinions Throughout life's varying scene, And thy wide-spread dominions, Exulting, praise their Queen.
As maid, we blessed thy beauty, Old England's youthful pride;
As wife, thou hast our duty,
Prince Albert's Royal Bride.

Great Hymen! who, possessing Life's undeciding flame, Let thy prolific blessing Wait all who love thy name;
But chiefly let thy favor Rest on Old England's Pride, Who to thy worship gave her,
Prince Albert's Royal Bride.

Come, Youth, and swell the chorus—"Come, Beauty, lend thy breath; The mothers dear who bore us Once wore the bridal wreath.
As those who love to honor,
So let us, England's pride; Heaven's blessing rest upon her,
Prince Albert's Royal Bride.

PRINCE ALBERT'S BOOTS.—As a specimen of the minuteness with which every article worn by the Queen or Prince Albert is described, we subjoin an account of his Royal Highness's "magnificent" boots; which, by the way, were presented by the manufacturers.

The legs of Morocco, turned over with purple velvet, and elegantly embroidered with gold: in the centre are the royal arms, surrounded by the letters V. A.; underneath are the words nous servons, "we serve," on either side of the arms are wreaths of the rose shamrock and thistle, which are continued round the leg. The inside lining and straps are of gold, and the lower part of the boots of patent leather, beautifully stitched with white silk; the sole is most exquisitely finished, and the heels are of silver, secured with gold plugs, in the centre of which is a crown, and the letters P. A. in gold. The box in which they were presented is of the handsomest mahogany, lined with crimson cloth, and bears upon the cover the royal arms.

Montreal, April 37.
"About noon this day a fire broke out in the rear of a house situated on the corner of St. Urban and Lagachetiere streets, St. Lawrence Suburbs, in a shed in which carpenters were at work, and soon communicated to an adjoining back building occupied as a St. or-house &c. by Mr. John Tassie, baker. Both shed and storehouse were speedily burnt down, and besides other property, Mr. Tassie lost about 30 barrels of flour. As soon as the alarm was given the engines were hurried to the spot, but they came too late to be of any use further than to protect Mr. Tassie's dwelling-house, which was in great danger.
The property of lot has been lately purchased by Mr. Dickson, from Mr. Malcolm Leisheman, and no insurance was effected on either building or other property.
"In the course of last night about three inches of snow fell, which has made our streets very muddy to-day. It has nearly all disappeared, but the weather still keeps cool."

Montreal, April 28.
The New York mail, which arrived this day, brought the evening papers of Friday & Saturday. They, however, contain nothing later from Europe, nor anything particularly interesting.

The weather has been very fine to-day, tho' rather cool. The snow which fell on Sunday night has nearly all disappeared.
N. H. Baird, Esq. Civil Engineer, returned this day from St. John, after being engaged some days in collecting materials preparatory to making a report, &c. on the Chamby Canal, by order of Government. Mr. B. travelled through the line of the Canal twice, and has, no doubt, carefully examined every yard of it, and collected a great deal of information regarding the probable income that it would afford if completed.

INSECTS.—Some kinds of vegetables, as soon as they appear above ground, are very liable to be cut off by insects. The best preventive is to roll the ground immediately after sowing. This should always be done, unless the ground is too wet. The insects are thus deprived of shelter behind the lumps of earth —are more exposed to winds, storms, and extremes of heat and cold. Small chickens, turkeys and ducks, the mothers of which are confined in coops, will destroy many insects in a garden. A mixture of dry wood ashes, lime, and gypsum put into the hills or drills, and covered with a little soil before dropping the seed, afford protection to the roots from these insects that prey upon these plants.
Infusion of waste tobacco, lime, ashes, soot, cowdung, elder, and some other leaves will, when moderately sprinkled over the beds, often drive off insects. Grubs may not be destroyed by searching for them; and these insects that adhere to the leaves, may be destroyed with the leaves. Slugs are said to be enticed by slices of turnips on the beds, and early in the morning may be killed.

Snow fell to the depth of six inches at a place called Hosack, 20 miles from Troy, (New-York) on Monday the 27th April.
It snowed at St. John same day.

The Frederickton Sentinel says, "it is rumoured that three additional regiments have been ordered to this Province, two from England, and one from the West Indies."

The Rev. Mr. Newton, of the Methodist connexion, arrived at New-York, in the packet ship U. S. from Liverpool, last week.
He is delegated from the Wesleyan Society of England, to visit the American churches of the same connexion, and attend the annual conference at Baltimore.

Glory.—Piny gives the following character of true glory—"Doing what deserves to be written, and writing what deserves to be read, and rendering the world happier and better for having lived in it."

Spirits.—It is a Spanish maxim, that he who loatheth wealth loatheth much; he who lo-seth a friend loatheth more; but he that loatheth his Spirit-loatheth all.

Restraint.—We appreciate no pleasures unless we are occasionally debarked from them. Restraint is the golden rule of enjoyment.

Cave of the Waldenses.—The following description of the caverns into which the Wal-denses fled from their persecutors, may give some idea of the ingenuity which these allured people were compelled to exert for their own safety, as well as the natural asyly in many of the mountains which were afforded them by divine Providence. Near the lofty and projecting crag which soars above Mount Vandelin, there was a natural cavern, which the inhabitants of the commune (department of district) of La Torre contrived to make a secret hiding place. This cavern in which 3 or 4,000 might conceal themselves, was vaulted and shaped not unlike an oven, with clefts in the rocks, which served for windows, and even for loop holes; and prepared with recesses, which answered the purpose of watch-houses, from whence they might observe the motions of their assailants. There was also several chambers within this vast cave, accommodations for cooking meat, and a large fountain well supplied with water. It was impossible to enter it except by the hole at the top, and those who were in the secret, could only let themselves down one at a time, and by a very slow and gradual process, with the assistance of steps or foot-holes cut in the rock.
In fact, it was like descending into a mine; and one or two resolute men might defend the entrance against the assault of any force that could be brought against them.—History of the Waldenses.

Lord Brougham, by special invitation, will visit the King and Queen of the French, at the Tuilleries, en route to England.

The Queen and Prince Albert paid two visits to Covent-garden Theatre last week—on Tuesday to see Charles Kemble in The Wonder, and on Thursday, to enjoy his performance of Mercutio, in Rome and Juliet.

Printers at N. S. Wales.—Printers continue in request at Sydney. The Monitor offers constant employment for able compositors, at £2 15s. per week, and overs hours.

Seventeen ships, with 4096 persons, sailed for Sydney, under the direction of the emigration agent; in 1838. Agricultural laborers received £25 a year, with board and lodging. All the emigrants of 1838 had been provided for.

National Calamities.—Three calamities of a very dreadful nature must have been remarked to be of frequent occurrence during the middle ages. These were fire, famine and pestilence. The first resulted from nearly all buildings being of wood, and in imperfect municipal police. The second originated not only in bad seasons, and the desolation of war, out from the absence of commerce, which prevented the scarcity of one district being relieved by the redundant produce of another.

Life.—The most learned doctors contend that this life is only our infancy, and that we shall not attain to manhood until we put off the swaddling clothes of the body. In proof of this, it may be remarked that memory, which is the first faculty of the mind that is developed in children, is also the one that is strongest in man.

Anecdote of a Sailor.—The following anecdote is so creditable to our countryman, the late lamented Admiral Sir F. Maitland, that we cannot withhold it from our readers. When in command of the Loire, Capt. Maitland agreed with Capt. Dixon, of the Apollo, that they should share between them whatever prize-money fell to their lot. Capt. Dixon's life was a short one, and he left a widow in circumstances far from affluent. Mrs. Dixon was one morning waited on by a gentleman, who tendered for her acceptance a Bank Cheque for £25,000. Surprised and hesitating, Mrs. Dixon objected to take so munificent a sum. Capt. Maitland's answer was quite characteristic, and does him infinite honor.—"My agreement with my friend Dixon was not an agreement for life, it was to continue during the war; this money, Madam, is therefore fairly yours."

The last Knight of Malta.—The Chevalier de Beaumont, one of the last of the French Knights of the order of St. John of Jerusalem, died at Malta last month in the 77th year of his age. It appears there now exists only one member of that order, and he belongs to the "langue d'Italie." M. de Beaumont, being a lunatic, was allowed to remain in Malta after its capture by the French.

Louis Philippe, has sent the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor to Prince Albert. He has sent Queen Victoria an autograph letter congratulating her on her marriage.

Verily, the day approacheth when it will not be considered a very extraordinary feat for a man to "put a girdle round about the earth in forty minutes!" Several travellers who passed over the line of the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad, a few days ago, reached New York in 7 days from Cuba! They had four days passage, from Havana to Charleston, and three from Charleston to New York.

A Quiet Mind.—Nothing contributes more to an easy and quiet mind than a disregard of the praise and despising the censures and reproaches of others; the man is still the same, which his own actions and the judgments of God make him; this is the standard of our worth and happiness; true friendship is like sound health, the value of which is seldom known unless it be lost.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

From Papers by the Great Western.
 In the House of Commons, on the 14th of April, Lord John Russell moved an address to Her Majesty for copies or extracts of correspondence relating to the boundary between British America and the United States.

The day before, Mr. Herbert Peel engaged him to leave to the American boundary would be laid on the table of the House.

Lord John Russell was understood to say that the papers would be laid upon the table of the House before the adjournment, which is all we find relating to the American Question.

The motion of Sir James Graham, condemning the course pursued by the wing ministers in their management of Canadian affairs, was lost in the House of Commons, after a debate of three days, by a majority of ten votes.

The corn law debate terminated on the 1st of April, without a division; and it was not anticipated that it would be revived again this session.

The Bishop of Exeter, on the 7th, brought forward his motion in the House of Lords respecting the Clergy Reserves of Canada, and concluded by moving a resolution annulling the recent act of the Canada Legislature which interfered with the Clergy Reserves.

He carried his motion by a majority of 17—the divided being 57 to 40.

A difficulty which has arisen between the King of Naples and the British Ambassador at that court, Mr. Temple, in regard to the Sardinian monopoly, has caused the latter to demand his passport, and other Admiral Spofford to bring before Naples and the Sardinian ports, a part of the British naval force in the Mediterranean. Every preparation was made for defence, and the King of Naples himself accompanied the works he had ordered. In the fear that the first attack would be made against Sicily, 12,000 men had been sent thither, and all the merchant ships which happened to be at the port of Naples were made use of to transport these troops.

House of Commons, April 11.
CHINA.—Sir Robert Peel having given notice that he would move for the production of the order in Council directing reprisals on vessels belonging to China, said that the necessity for such action was suggested by the return of the paper itself, directing the reprisals and ordering a commission for the institution of Courts of Admiralty and Vice Admiralty. He begged to ask whether, as the Commission was not prepared, there would be any objection to placing a copy of the table as soon as it was ready?

Lord Palmerston replied in the affirmative. Sir R. Peel apprehended that the order in Council contained positive instructions to all her Majesty's vessels of war to seize all vessels belonging to the Emperor of China, or to his subjects, not only on the coast of China, but in all other parts of the world. Then, in the event of seizures taking place, he begged leave to ask what would be done with the property seized? He apprehended that the process would be to detain the vessels, and the property to be adjudicated upon by the Admiralty Courts, which adjudication would depend upon ulterior events. The main question which he wished to ask was, whether the order in Council gave instructions to all her Majesty's vessels of war to seize all vessels belonging to the Emperor of China, in whatever seas they may be found.

Lord Palmerston replied that the order gave full authority to all her Majesty's ships of war that might fall in with Chinese ships to detain them. Of course the order in Council would apply practically only to such of her Majesty's ships as were on the coast of China.

Sir R. Peel said that the order in Council was carried on only on the coast of China, and in ordinary circumstances, that was perhaps the case; but, under new circumstances exceptions might occur. He begged to ask if the actual proclamation as to the distribution of prize money had been issued?

Lord Palmerston said that there had been no such proclamation.

Luxembourg.—For the last eight or ten days our streets present great numbers of intelligent farmers and their families on their way to the quays where they await ships advertised for the States and Kingdoms. The bustle and excitement on Merchants Quay since Monday have been incessant; not does an hour pass that a family consisting of 20 or 30 individuals, with horses, carts, and luggage, does not arrive. These people who have broken up their establishments—some selling their interests, where interests existed of course, for a return not half equivalent to their value—others abandoning their farms, but in most cases hard pressed by the demands and necessities of the times—are about to seek an asylum in a distant land. A large portion of our countrymen and women are thus about to emigrate themselves from scenes of horror, come from the western and southern districts of the country.

Dublin, April 11.
THE TEMPERANCE REFORMERS.—The presence of Father Mathew in the county of Wick has been a matter of great interest. He was on his way to the town of Wexford, where he was to deliver a lecture on the 15th inst. On Tuesday and part of Wednesday, he administered the temperance pledge to 10,000 persons of all ages in the small town of Lismaculiffe. On Wednesday afternoon he returned to the town of Wexford, where he was received with a demonstration of thirty miles from the country, and on the 15th inst. he was on his way to the town of Wexford, where he was to deliver a lecture on the 15th inst. WEXFORD.—The Wexford papers state that on the morning of the 17th inst. this noble monarch was sent from top to bottom by the discharge of a quantity of powder which had been deposited in it, by some unprincipled villain or villains. The fact is still in doubt, though it is considered dangerous to approach it. A reward of £250 has been offered by Government for the discovery and apprehension of the perpetrators or perpetrator of this diabolical deed.

France has been the theatre of a great many extraordinary events since the 1st of April. ESSENCE OF SMOKE.

FORMERLY manufactured at the Chemical Works, Hampton, by Mr. G. Riley, now by the subscriber, who prepares it equal to its former merits. It is a powerful Antiseptic preservative of Meat and Fish, together with the economy, simplicity, and expedition in applying it, have caused it to become an indispensable article in every respectable family in the Province. Beef, Pork, Mutton, Veal, &c. may be preserved for any length of time by simply washing them over twice with the Essence of Smoke; then hang them up to dry, if very large, repeat the process three times, allowing 24 hours to elapse between each washing. Shortly after, upon examination it will be found that the Essence has penetrated through every part of their substance, imparting a most delicious flavor.
