The wound is not serious.

Bursting of a Krupp Gun. BERLIN, July 27 .- News comes from Guayaquil, Ecuador, that on the trial of the new Krupp gun, lately mounted to defend that harbor, it burst at the second shot, mortally wounding the chief of the artillery and inflicting serious injury upon six other officers.

Earthquakes in Eastern Europe. BELGRADE, July 27 .- Earthquake shocks have been feit in Macedonia, Old Servia statement in the House of Commons today and Eastern Bulgaria.

Many houses at Varna, Bulgaria, have been damaged, and a number of people have been killed as a result of the shocks.

English u. L. of O.

London, July 27 .- The triennial two days' sittings of the English Grand Lodge of Orangemen was opened Wednesday in Westminster town hall. Forty-nine delegates representing the United Kingdom, headed by Col. Thos. Waring, M.P., grand master of the English Grand Lodge, were present. Among the colonial delegates were Clarke Wallace, grand master of the Grand Lodge of British North America; J. L. Hughes, grand master of Ontario west, and Simon Fraser, grand master of Victoria and a delegate to the recent Intercolonial Conference at Ottawa. Major Saunderson, M.P., in his speech ligion or political right, but claimed equal liberty for all, though it was a trick of their opponents to misrepresent them as the embodiment of fanaticism and bigotry. They had also been accused of being revolutionists and as saying that under certain circumstances they would resist the law. It all depended on who made the law. If Ireland were severed from Great Britain and placed under the authority of an Irish parliament the majority of that parliament would be hostile to the religious freedom of the Orangemen. They therefore claim the right to refuse to obey the authority before whom their forefathers never bowed, and before whom their sons would never bend. As long as they had a hand to strike with they would never accept the yoke. No man deserving the name of an Orangeman would consent to accept it. Orangeism had force, and it could not be denied that if the time came when it ought to be employed they could rely upon it that it would be.

Yesterday with Delegate Wallace in the chair of the council, resolutions were adopted approving the rejection of the Home Rule Bill by the House of Lords. Mr. Wallace said he was glad to be assured that the prospects of ultimate success of resistance to Irish separation, was becoming brighter every day.

The sitting concluded with the singing of National Anthem.

The Corean War. SHANGHAI, July 27 .- The Chinese transports sunk off the Corean coast by Japanese guns belonged to the fleet of eleven steamers which sailed from Taku on July 20 with 12,000 troops. The fleet left Taku under an escort of gunboats. The majority of the transports proceeded slowly with the gunboats, while the faster ones steamed at full speed, so as to land their troops as soon as possible. On the transports which arrived first at the Corean coast were a few hundred soldiers from the army of the Most of the force, however, consisted of coolies, with in-ferior firearms or merely bows and arrows. The firing was begun by a Japanese battery on the shore, while the Chinese officers were trying to debark their men from the first steamer. The cruisers then steamed up and opened fire on all the transsports which were lying to waiting to discharge the men. The Chinese were unable to make any effective resistance. They were thrown into great confusion and many jumped overboard to escape the hot fire. The Chinese officials here do not confirm these dispatches. They are exceedingly reticent as to every report con-

Gerning hostilities in Corea. The declaration of war has caused keen excitement among all classes here. Business is virtually suspended, although many smaller firms have made desultory efforts to sustain their trade. The Europeans have gathered at the Shanghai Club to discuss the meager reports from Corea. The position of the Japanese residents is pre- delphia, were in the city today, having arious. For weeks the more prosperous Japanese has been leaving the city, but many of the poorer and middle class remain. will be strong enough to protect them from Chinese fanatics. The Vicercy is confident that the northern army is sufficiently strong to cope with the Japanese force, and he does not intend to employ the southern army except in case of extreme necessity. The mobilization progresses rapidly, and the preparations to embark large bodies of troops are being made with unexpected energy. Singapore firms are providing many of the transports and stores. The Chinese Government bought two large steamers yesterday, and negotiations for others are in progress. The Japanese have announced that they will hold the King of Corea as a hostage until the internal reforms demanded by it shall have been satisfactorily guaranteed. In Seoul excitement is at white heat. There has been considerable disorder, and an uprising of the people may come at any

LONDON, July 27 .- A telegram received at the office of the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company says positively that war has been declared between China and Japan and that hostilities have commenced. LONDON, July 27 .- The officials at the Foreign Office and the Chinese and Japanese Legations reiterated this evening that no official news of the war had been received. Numerous cable dispatches were delivered at the Legation, but in no case could anything be learned concerning their contents. Many more merchants and shippers engaged in the eastern trade have received cablegrams this evening to the effect that war had been declared, hostilities had been begun, and business had dropped almost to zero. Sir Thomas Sutherland, M.P., chairman of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company, said in an interview this evening: 'China, in the long run, will be victorious owing to her enormous resources and unlimited wealth. This is not a vary fortunate position for Japan, which, in addition to her financial trouble, may have to cope with internal revolution. China is fortunate in having such a financier as Sir Robert Hart for her inspector-general of customs and such a solicitor as Li Hang Chang, her viceroy. China doubtless will employ only levies from the north and center. The Cantonese, although turbulent, do not make good soldiers. Doubtless Japan has an advantage over China as regards warships, but China will soon make this good. I expect she will, if necessary, purchase European war-ships. J. Henniker Heaton, M.P., who is familiar with eastern affairs, said: "The Japanese are the Frenchmen of the Pacific. The Chinese are the Germans."

The opinion among politicians here is that as the cruiser Baltimore has landed marines the naval vessels of other countries will do the same. The admiralty decline to give any information on the subject.

The Standard regards Mr. Buxton's as a satisfactory denial of the rumor that war has been declared. It says there is nothing very serious in the capture of the Corean king by the Japanese. The collisions of troops and naval vessels and the landing of Americad marines, it says, undoubtedly complicates the situation greatly. "The best pledge of a solution of the problem." it adds, "is to be found without an open declaration of a conflict." The Standard's Brussels correspondent says he has information that "Japan is willing to co-operate with Corean rebels and China welcomes the proposition."

Several morning dailies print the dispatch from Tien-Tsin: "War has not been declared officially either in Tokio or Pekin. It is believed in Government circles that it will not be declared for several days. If the exchanges of notes now proceeding result amicably the of welcome said Orangemen had sought to collisions that have already taken interfere with nobody in the matter of reotherwise they will be regarded as casus belli. The transport which was sunk by the Japanese was the Kow-Sung, owned by Mathieson & Co. It is reported that all were lost. The Mathiesons have taken over a number of Chinese coasting vessels; hereafter they will sail their steamers under the British flag.

"Telegraphing between Japan and Corea has been stopped; therefore no direct reports can be obtained in Yokohama, where nothing is known of a declaration of war. The Japanese authorities stopped on Sunday the Nagasaki mail steamer bound for BERLIN, July 27 .- The officials of the Chinese legation here express confidence that there will not be war. They say that the difficulties will be adjusted probably by negotiations now in progress in London.

The London Daily Chronicle says: "We hope that European statesmen will watch carefully for the first opportunity to intervene, and then bring the whole weight of their combined prestige to bear in favor of a peaceful solution. A month's experience probably will bring the combatants to a state of mind and body in which proposals for an armistice and arbitration will be readily

PARIS, July 27 .- The torpede boat Audacie came in collision with a cruiser mear Toulon this morning, and was so seriously damaged that it was necessary to beach her to prevent her from sinking.

St. Petersburg, July 27.—A large steamer came into collision with a forryboat near Grodno today, sinking the latter. Fourteen of the ferryboat's passengers were drowned and eleven fatally injured by being crushed when the boats came together. LONDON, July 27 .- The steamship Cambria, while docking at Cardiff today, seriously damaged her bow and cut-water by striking the dock.

YOKOHAMA, July 27.—The steamer City of Pekin, from Hong Kong to Yokohama and New York, which was ashore in Yeddo Bay, has been floated without damage and has arrived here. HALIFAX, N. S., July 27 .- The steamer Siberian, which arrived today from Newfoundland, brought four fishermen who lost their vessels in a fog. Two belong to the Gloucester schooner Landseer and the others to the Gloucester schooner David A. Storey; James St. John and Emanuel Greer, from first named, said they underwent terrible suffering from hunger and thirst, being in a dory on Grand Banks from July 11 to 18, when they reached Renews, half dead. Leon Maguire and Celestine Couchors were three days and three nights without food or water when rescued, and also suffered severely. They were sent here by the American consul at St. Johns, and will be taken to Boston by steamer tomorrow.

It is not known whether he has sustained internal injuries or not.

THE BODY CLAIMED.

The Remains of Mr. A. R. Hibbett Taken to Toronto.

Son of Wealthy Parents—An Inquest Com menced-The News at Home.

Coroner Flock held the preliminary inquiry last night into the circumstances surrounding the death of A. R. Hibbett, who was found dead at the Grigg House at noon yesterday. Constable Morgan got the jury together with his usual promptitude, and the following answered to their names: J. B. Smythe (foreman), Frank Barnard, Thomas Parks, Corbin Weld, Henry Yates, E. J. Whale, Jonathan Grieves, James W. T. Park, Adam Magill, Wm. Meaden, H. B. Ashplant, Hubert Ashplant, John Gentleman, Benjamin Albert Smith and Daniel Herrington.

The jury viewed the body which was identified by Mr. Horsman. He gave the same version of the affair as he gave to the ADVERTISER yesterday.

Foreman Smythe asked if no one about the hotel had smelled gas during the night or morning. Mr. Horsman replied that the attention of the night clerk was called to the smell of gas early in the morning, but he ascribed the smell to one of the hall gas jets. The inquest was then adjourned until Monday night at 7:30 at the police court.

THE BODY CLAIMED, Mr. D. H. Doust, Toronto, a member of the firm that young Hibbett traveled for, arrived by the C. P. R. at midnight last night. Mr. Doust received the news in Toronto about I o'cleck in the afternoon, but the family were at their summer home on the island and there was some delay in notifying them. They were completely prostrated by the news. Mr. Richard Hibbett, a well-to-do Toronto ailor, is the vonne man's father. He is an old settler of Toronto, and made his money through buying Toronto land when it was cheap, and became rich with its advance in value. Aibert Hibbett was a member of the Toronto Commercial Travelers' Association. He belonged to the association for the last ten years, and was insured in the benefit branch for the amount of $1,200. The young man, it appears, had kept remarkably straight until lately. He was in Windsor and Detroit before he came here, and he drew on the firm for $25, but the firm, suspecting from the scarcity of orders that he was not working, did not send on the money. They did not hear of him again until notified of his death. Mr. Doust returned to Toronto with the body at 8 o'clock this morning, Toronto Empire: The first news that reached Toronto of the said affair was a vaguely-worded telegram received by Mr. Joseph Doust, law stationer, Adelaide street, the young man's employer. Mr. Doust communicated the news to the parents of deceased, who live on Parliament street. Needless to say they were terribly shocked at hearing of their son's death, and Mr. Doust sent his brother to bring the body back here for burial as soon as possible. Mr. Doust himself seemed to feel the loss of the young man keenly. He scouts the idea of suicide, and is confident that Hibbitt had been careless about turning off the gas, or that it had been turned off at the meter perhaps when the young man was asleep and afterwards turned on again. There was nothing, he said, to make him commit snicide. Someone had suggested financial trouble, but that was ridiculous, for Hibbitt lived with his parents, and had no heavy expenses, as a married man would. In fact, he was very careless about his own money, and spent it in an open-handed way. He was 28 years of age, and had been in Mr. Doust's employ for six years. He was active and a good business man, but was in the habit of going out with other young men for what they called "a good time." Mr. Doust suspected that he had been drinking in London, for he had not reported himself to the office, and nothing was heard

ATEPAYERS OF THE CITY OF

London are requested to take notice that for 1894 they may, if desired, pay their taxes in two installments, the first of which must be paid during the first 30 days of August, and the second during the first 30 days of October.

Ratenavers paying the installments as they paid during the first 30 days of August, and the second during the first 30 days of October. Ratepayers paying the installments as they become due according to the above dates, will not be charged interest, nor will discount be allowed. If either of the said installments is not paid during the time above specified, a 5 per cent charge will be immediately added thereto. Any ratepayer paying the whole of his taxes during the first 30 days of August will be allowed a discount of 3 per cent off the second installment, the payment of which he might have deferred till October. Rates amounting to less than $6 are not subdivided. The collectors are not authorized to receive the second installment until the first installment, with all charges thereon has been paid. Special attention is directed to the fact that in order to enable the council to satisfactorily close its own financial year, the collectors have been directed by bylaw to return the rolls for 1894 to the city treasurer on the 15th day of December next, so that if the installments are not paid as above specified, they must be cellected previous to December 15th, with the 5 per cent added. When paying your taxes, bring marked check or even change. Do not wait to pay your taxes till the 30 days have nearly expired; by so doing you will run the risk of being crowded out in consequence of the inability of the collectors to receive same. Pay as early in the moath as you can. The 5 per cent charge must be added after the expiration of the 30 days without considering the cause of or reason for non-payment. By order payment. By order C. A. Kingston, city clerk. City clerk's office, 5th July, 1894. 23n xt

MRS. BOOTH IN LONDON.

A Noted Woman Visits the Forest City.

Sketch of Her Busy and Event.ul Career.

Mrs. Commandant Booth, of the Salvation Army, visits London and addresses mass meetings tomorrow and again on Monday. The distinguished visitor will arrive by the 8 o'clock C. P. R. train tonight, and will be given a grand reception at the station by the officers and soldiers of the Salvation Army. Mrs. Herbert Booth is the wife of the commandant of the Salvation Army in Canada. She is the daughter of Monsieur and Madame Schech, of Holland, and a descendant of a Swiss family, the members of which had for several generations served the cause and kings of Holland in high military positions.

After four years in the military academy Monsieur Schoch wintered at the court of the Kingof Naples, where he first began to grow dissatisfied amidst the gay scenes he daily found himself mixed up with. Returning to his garrison in Holland he determined henceforth to serve God. Here, too, his narriage took place with a young heiress, the daughter of a Dutch colonel-who, by the way, FOUGHT IN THE BATTLE OF WATERLOO. against the French, and successfully de-fending the citadel of Antwerp, won the golden opinions of king and country. At the garrison town of Hertogentosch their second daughter, Miss Cornelie Schoch (now Mrs. Herbert Booth), arrived to brighten their home, in the midst of every luxury and comfort that heart could desire, where her parents spared no pains to provide her with the very best teachers and governesses. She finished her education in Germany, having learned to speak in four different languages with ease. From childhood she was noted for her early devotion, and most especially for her great gift of music and song. Then, as the years rolled on, with this and her largeness of heart, she became more and more a universal favorite amongst both rich and poor, in the mansion of the courtly aristocrat or the hovel of the pauper.

In conjunction with her especial friend, the Hou. Miss Hartsen, the daughter of the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Holland, she MANCHESTER. ENGLAND.

to their aid financially, but afterwards himself joined these despised people, and allowed his beautiful and clever children to work with them-to the great astonishment and contempt of his distinguished asked to translate for the English officers traveling from town to town and living in the poor little quarters with them; but it was not until after the visit of the general to Holland that she donned the bonnet and became a fullfledged Salvation Army captain. She was summoned to London, and after passing through her training she was appointed to assist in the command of Regent's Hall, winning her way wonderfully in the hearts of the people. Here it was she met the general's youngest son, COMMANDANT HERBERT BOOTH. At this time Mrs. (Gen.) Booth was lying at the point of death, and no doubt the wedding took place a little earlier than it would otherwise have done owing to the wishes of Mrs. Booth, whose precarious condition increased her desire that her son should not longer delay the completion of a union which from the first gave her much satisfaction. Only ten days before the death of the "Army Mother" this remarkable marriage service was performed in the Clapton Congress Hall, when over 6,000 people were present, and when the London daily papers wrote with enthusiastic terms of the "sweet modulated soprano" of the bride, Mrs. Herbert Booth at once took her

Knowing that Canada was involved in some peculiar difficulties the commandant volunteered a year or so after the wedding to shoulder the responsibility, and sailed for the Dominion. Since their artival, in addition to the ordinary spiritual work, Mrs. Booth has had more especially the oversight and care of the rescue homes for fallen girls, the children's shelter, and the league of mercy, including the visiting of the jails and police courts and hospitals, ministering to the needs of the sinful and suffering wherever they may be.

DEATH OF DR. LYNCH.

A Pieneer Physician of Manitoba-Once Honored in This City. Dr. Lynch, one of the pioneer physicians of Manitoba, died in Winnipeg a week ago from blood poisoning and inflammation. The Winnipeg Tribune says: "Dr. Lynch was born near London, Ont., in 1841. He was educated at Toronto University and chose the study of medicine. After spending some time as surgeon on the Allan Line he decided to strike into the Far West, and arrived in Fort Garry in 1869. He was taken prisoner by Riel six months after arriving in this country, along with Lieut.-Governor Schultz, J. H. Ashdown, Archibald Wright, William Hallett, Thomas Scott, Geo. Faulkner and others. He was rescued after three months of imprisonment, and made his way through Minnesota and Dakota to London, Ont., where he was presented with an address by the mayor and council and received as Canadian patriot. In 1870 he returned to the Province, took up the practice of his profession at Portage la Prairie and shortly after removed to Winnipeg, where he had since resided. He contested Marquette for the Dominion House with Mr. Augus Mc-Kay, now Indian agent at Norway House. The result was a tie, and both were declared elected. They proceeded to Ottawa received the oath as members and sat one day in the House. The peculiar case was then referred to the committee on privileges and elections, which decided that it was best to hold a new election. Dr. Lynch did not contest the seat a second time. For twenty years Dr. Lynch had been the surgeon of and five children to mourn his loss.

The United States Tariff. WASHINGTON, D. C., July 27 .- In the Senate this afternoon the motion of Mr. Gorman that the Tariff Bill should be sent back to the conference without instructions was adopted by a viva voce vote. The president pro tem. announced the conferees. They are the same as before. There was much confusion owing to exchange of congratulations among Democrats on the happy passage of the crisis. Captured in New York. Avon, N. Y., July 27 .- Officer Dutcher, in company with United States Marshal Bardwell, last night arrested a man by the name of Edmond, who absconded from Canada two months ago with a large sum of money. He has been keeping books friends. Miss Corry Schoch was at once here for Breen & Bray, under the name of Wm. Johnson. When Marshal Bardwell read the warrant Edmond broke down and confessed. He was taken to Rochester, SHOWER BATHS FOR THE HORSES. No Wonder They Like It in the Weather We Are Having.

No observer of city scenes can have failed to have noted the kindness which drivers show to their horses in this waather. The introduction of cable cars has led to the weeding out of the old and sickly horses of the street car lines, and the superintendents of the big stables have learned that it is better to have frequent relays for their horses and keep their stock in good condition rather than save the wages of a few extra men at the expense of the borses.

Perhaps the most astonishing thing to a visitor to New York is the unblinking stoicism with which the street car horses accept a stream of water between the eves from a hose in the hands of one of the helpers. The horses are arranged along the street with their heads toward the gutter. and one of the hands in charge stands off a distance of ten or fitteen feet and plays a hose on them during the heated hours of the day. First their steaming backs are cooled off and then the stream is played on the horses' heads between the eyes. The spatter and splash of the water can be heard half a block away, and as the stream is shifted from one horse to another along the line the horses at the far end may be seen looking meditatively and curiously down at the ones who are getting the shower bath and awaiting their turn with as much of an expression of enjoyment as any car horses can possibly display .- [New York Sun.

MRS. LANGLEY'S CASE.

Dispatches to American Papers from London Cause a Furere Among the Good People of Lansing, Mich.

LANSING, Mich., July 23 .- A dispatch to local paper from London, Ont., concerning a former resident of this city, has crested a furore among our people. Mrs. Wm. Langley, of 21 Euclid avenue, South London, was, during the latter years of her residence here, constantly subject to fits, which the doctors of this city and Detroit failed to cure. The dispatch received here says that Mrs. Langley is now completely cured. Two months age she began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. From the first she improved and now is perfectly well. The natural inference is that her fits were caused by diseased kidneys, for which there is no remedy equal to Dodd's Kidney

THE PREACHER'S WIFE.

The Interesting Story of a Lady Who Had lived for Thirty Years in the thadow of Sudden Death.

(From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.) Mrs. S. S. Ballaine, wife of Rev. S. S. Ballaine, of Horine Station, Mo, has for many years led the life of an invalid to whom the dread summons might come at any moment, until a kind Providence threw in her way the remedy that has restored her health. Her recovery should be repeated in every paper in the land that others suffering might profit by the experience of Mrs. Ballaine and be saved. A correspondent of the Globe-Democrat determined to start the good work, and called at the Ballaine home, believing that the story would be of far greater value and interest if told in the lady's own words. She welcomed the visitor to the house and expressed her willingness to be interviewed. "My story," said she, "is a simple one of suffering and relief; I have had a disease of the heart from which few ever recover, and from which I never expected to escape. I had risen and lighted a fire one morning feeling in normal health, when I suddenly became unconscious. I knew no more until I recovered my senses in bed. They told me that I was black in the face, and that when first picked up no motion of the heart was perceptible. About six years ago I was attacked with a variety of affictions, such as short breath, extreme weakness, fainting spells, and, most annoying of all, a burning, irritating nettle rash, that at times rendered me almost frantic, and as you can readily understand, seriously aggravated my heart troubles. One day glancing over a religious paper published in Montreal (I was born in London, England, and was married in Canada, where we lived for a while), I read the testimony of a lady whose case was much like mine, and who had been benefited by Dr. Williams' Pink Pilis for Pale People. Having seen the remedy advertised in other reputable papers, I resolved to try them. It was a heavenly resolution. The first box had a most miraculous effect. The nettle rash disappeared as if by magic, and my trouble yielded to the medicine like the snow yields to the spring-time sun, and I feel better today than I have for twenty years. I cannot say too much about my improved condition. My blood is full and rich, my appetite is good, my nerves are steady. I sleep soundly and wake up refreshed, perform the manifold duties of the household, and surely my heart must be in good condition when I answer to all these

TRADE IN THE STATES. The Cutlook as Reported by the Com-

Leading influences affecting the course of article, showing forth genuine charity, is general trade throughout the United States | entitled, "A Colony of Mercy," by Kate T. gain. Prolonged drouth and hot winds have damaged corn and other crops in Nebraska and fears are entertained of like losses in Kansas. The outlook for the yield in the spring wheat States is regarded as unfavorable. Several thousand striking miners in Ohio, Indiana and Alabama refuse to return to work at rates agreed upon in conference, and this continues to depress business throughout tributary regions. Iron, steel and other industries are hampered throughout the Pittsburg district for lack of coke which restricts production in the face of a mildly improving demand. Continued exports of gold from New York are regarded as an unfavorable influence and there are more unfavorable reports of mercantile collection. More serious in its disorganizing effect on general business is the continued delay to tariff legislation. Special telegrams from Toronto report the wholesale trade quiet; farmers busy with harvesting and country merchants doing little. From Montreal it is reported business is light in all lines, and that there is no immediate prospects for improvement until after the settlement of the tariff question in the United States. Halifax reports crops throughout the Province all very favorable, which lends encouragement to all lines. Bank clearings at Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax aggregate $21,500,000 this week, a gain of about 5 per cent over last week and of nearly 25 per cent as compared with the corresponding week a year ago. There are 32 business failures reported from the Dominion of Canada for the week, against 43 last week and 33 in the week a year ago.

LINDSAY, Ont., July 27 .- About 4:30 last night a shock of earthquake was felt in this town. There was a tremor in the earth which lasted for two or three seconds and was followed by a report or explosion which sounded like a cannon that had been fired a long distance off. Houses were shaken and windows rattled. Quite a number resident in the south ward rushed out of their houses, thinking a mill boiler had exploded. No damage appears to have been done, nor have we heard of any. There is no doubt it was a shock of earthquake.

What the Midsummer Magazines and Novels Contain.

In Harper's Magazine for August Du Maurier's "Trilby" comes to an end. The readers of "Trilby" will not want anything to take its place, this month at all events; they will nurse their grief for a time. But there are other articles and stories in the number than "Trilby," and the magazine is very interesting. It is splendidly illus-

"The Queen of Ecuador," by R. M. Manley, author of "Some Children of Adam." New York: The H. W. Hagemann Publishing Company. Among the 50 cent paper issues of the day this story is notable. Told with skill, vigor and in a smooth, easily flowing style, it is very charming to read. The plot is highly original and sensational, but the author tells a startling story in so quiet a manner that he escapes the reproach of too great strain after effect. The tale can hardly be outlined in a brief notice, but contains pleasant love-making, some gentle satire and many dramatic situations.

"Fostering the Savage in the Young, is he promising caption of a paper in the August Arena, which comes from the pen of the editor of the review. It deals with the remarkable growth of military organizations within the very pale and under the auspices and encouragement of the Christian churches The writer views this development of. militarism from the standpoint of the Peace Society, and points out the incongruity of this lust for war. Lowell calls it murder, and the avowed purposes of the Christian churches.

Here is an agreeable story which Mark Twain is quoted as telling about himself: It gave him great pleasure, he said, to hear that his works were almost the only thing which Mr. Darwin read during the last year of his life, till he heard that Mr. Darwin suffered from a kind of mental atrophy, and was forbidden to read anything but absolute drivel.

The biographical sketches given by Littell's Living Age is one of its most attractive features. Recent issues give us two or three of special interest. No. 2610 contains, under the title of "The Wicked Cardinal," a delightfully readable article on Cardinal de Retz. A paper that will be, perhaps, more extensively appreciated, is a a long and valuable sketch of "Handel: Man and Musician," by Frederick J. Crowest, in No. 2612. Each number of this magazine can be relied upon to contain something to suit every taste. Its field is so wide and its range of subjects so limitless that it cannot fail to interest and intruct. "Light in Dark Places," describes mission work at the Florence Nightingale Mission, New York. The Scotch parsonage story, "Spindles and Oars," illustrated, gives glimpses of native character which are very interesting. The Cornish story presents some pathetic scenes. This number ends the temperance story of "The Dragon and the Tea-Kettle."

> Among the interesting papers in the August Arena are Rev. Minot J. Savage's The Present Conflict for a Larger Life in the Social World"; Hon. John Davis's on 'Money in Politics"; Rabbi Solomon Schindler's on "Insurance and the Nation"; B. O. Flower's "Then Dawned a Light in the East," comparing the civilization of Christendom today with that of the Roman Empire 2,000 years ago; Dr. Sydney Barrington Elliot's "Pre-Natal Influence"; S. B. Rigge on "The Land Question and the Single Tax"; Prof. Thomas E. Will, M.A., on "Criminals and Prisons," and a paper reviewing militarism in the public schools, by the editor, entitled "Fostering the Savage in the Young." Altogether it is a notable budget of social thought.

Our Little Men and Women for August is in good comradeship with boys and girls wherever they chance to be. It is summery in tone, artistic in touch and sympathetic with child nature in its many and varied phases. It is splendidly illustrated. Alpha Publishing Company, Philadelphia. El a year.

The July number of the Canadian Magazine contains an interesting variety of articles, some of them of striking merit: the illustrations, too, are excellent. Walter Townsend's "The Supernatural in Macbeth" is a valuable and most readable addition to Shakespearian studies. "Three Years Among the Eskimos," by J. W. Tyrrell, the explorer, is well illustrated, excellently written, and full of most interesting information. "Papineau and His Home," by the late Thos. P. Gorman, is a timely illustrated article on the history and invironments of that noted family. Hon. Donald MacInnes, Senator, contributes a copiously illustrated article on the Bahamas. The fourth of the series of articles, "In Northwestern Wilds," by Wm. Ogilvie, F.R.G.S., deals with the exciting narrative of his journey from Fort Nelson, on the Laird, to St. John, on the Peace River—a journey amid the grandest scenery, but full of danger. Amongst other contributions are "The Criminal and Artificial Production of Deformities and Monstrosities," by G. Archie Stockwell, M.D.; "Out Door Sport in Australia," by J. L. Fayne, and two capital stories, "Pandora," by Miss E. Yates Farmer, and "A Story of the Metropolis," by Mrs. H. Cameron Nelles Wilson. The Canadian Magazine is well deserving of the heartiest support of Canadians. Published by the Ontario Publishing Company (Limited) Toronto, $2 50 per annum.

NO RECIPROCITY IN COAL. It is likely that the United States Congress will retain the duty of 40 cents per ton on coal, which is a considerably less tax than that which the Dominion Government insists shall be levied on United States coal imported into Canada. For this, the defenders of the United States coal tax assert, the Dominion authorities are to blame. This is how a member of the House of Representatives put it when opposing the placing of coal on the free list: "If, when the bill came here, there had been coupled with free coal a fair provision for reciprocity we would have said: 'We will give you free coal. Your coal shall come in; we will give you the New England market, provided you in Canada will admit free of duty our coal from Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, western Pennsylvania and the Virginias west of the mountains. It would be possible to understand how a man who is in favor of free trade could advocate such a proposition. It was stated elsewhere by a responsible man that we would have this privilege from Canada; but it is not true. The very last act of the Canadian Parliament on this subject, which I have, although I have it not at hand, imposes, as Canada has done heretofore, on all coal which we send over the border of Canada from these great Western States 67 cents a ton of 2,240 pounds, or 60 cents as should we give up the American interest?"

While Mr. Foster in Canada and Mr. Gorman in the United States each play in with the "rings," and accuse the other of declining to reduce the taxes of the people, the public interests suffer.

Why did Mr. Foster not make coal free, either actually or conditionally, and render it impossible for such a charge to be brought against our Government as is contained in the speech given above?

-Suburban residents of London report that their vegetables are being eaten up by small armies of grasshoppers. Does any reader know of any means that can be adopted to ward off these pests?

WORK FOR THE NEAR FUTURE. The Toronto Globe has started a discusgion on law reform. When the new Judicature Act was passed in this Province by Sir Oliver Mowat it was asserted by experts, both at home and abroad, that for the first time in modern history common law and common sense had been put side by side. Experience, however, points to the necessity for further improvements in the public interest. There is yet a multiplicity of appeals and courts that should be remedied. There is an excessive number of interlocutory preceedings and the cost is too great. Technicalities of practice can be reduced, the jurisdiction of county courts may safely be extended, and the Court of Appeal and the Divisional Courts may be consolidated with great advantage to the public.

Here is work that the experts in both the Legislature and the Dominion Parliament could fitly set about as speedily as possible.

Simplicity in government, simplicity in law, simplicity in religious teaching, simplicity in every day life are all needed in this busy competitive age.

The commercial capital of Scotland has for years owned its own gas works, and now it has taken control of its street cars, thus leading the English-speaking world in an important experiment of municipal control, which promises to be most successful. Of this development, the London Daily Chronicle says:

"We congratulate heartily the enterprising city on the Clyde on this new development of her municipal life, which has been accomplished without friction and without one farthing of composition to the existing company. For a halfpenny any Glasgow citizen will be able to ride for half a mile in far better cars than existed before. The hours of drivers and conductors will be reduced to ten per day, the day being divided into three shifts of five hours each. Extra payment will be made to those who work on Sundays. Thus both the public and the employes will gain, and the municipality receives a magnificent asset. We in London-hemmed in by monopolies, and tied with red tape in every direction-may well envy and admire this new growth of rational collectivism in the progressive Scottish city."

Municipal ownership of these moneymaking monopolies is right. All that is needed is an electorate ready and willing to have the monopolies conducted on business principles-honestly and well-and to have principles—honestly and well—and to have pensible to the successful prosecution the best men in the community interested of their labors. Then does many a in and determined to maintain a high veteran heave a doleful sigh rd of municipal service, whether as he greets a voluble "better-half," councilors or as executive officers.

THAT MAJORITY OF ONE.

Referring to the discovery in this city hat a former Londoner, not yet the legal age of 21, voted for the Conservative candidate in Kingston, and thereby gave him his majority of one, the Toronto Mail | herring. And so, amid much chatting, says:

"Kingston is in a muddle over the late election. The Liberals announce that they have discovered that an elector who voted for Mr. Smythe was under the age of 21. Consequently an effort will be made to have his vote eliminated from the returns, and that will make the result of the elections a tie, provided a scrutiny of the ballot shows that the youthful elector voted for Mr. Smythe. When there is a tie the returning officer has the option of declaring either candidate elected, but in this case that official has already given his decision in favor of the Conservative. Can he alter it now? Another question likely to be raised is whether a vote can be discarded after an election for the reason alleged? The proper time to prevent such fraud, if fraud it is, would be when the lists are being revised or when the vote is tendered. To open such a question at this stage looks like revising the lists after an election." Our contemporary will find, on reference to the law, that the duty of the returning officers is simply to discover how many votes have been cast, and to report accordingly. When a recount takes place, it is before the county judge, but he has no power to go into the qualification of the voters. He has simply to examine the ballots and count or reject as he believes to be law and justice. A scrutiny, when bad votes may be attacked, can only be held by the judges duly assigned to act as an election court. The Mail thinks that the fraudulent vote should only be attacked when the lists are made up, as is the case under the Dominion Franchise Act, which has been productive of the worst forms of street. voters' list stuffing and personation. Under the Ontario law, when an election court is held the fraudulent voter can be got at and punished, or he may be pardoned, as is invaribly the case, when he reveals the greater criminal who induced him to commit the wrong. His vote also is struck off, if he had no right to vote. The objection of the Mail is not well taken. Let justice be done and wrongdoing be punished, even at the elevenh hour.

-A recent defalcation at Winnipeg reveals the fact that there was for years no audit of the municipal sinking fund. No municipality does its duty which fails to demand a searching audit, at short intervals, of its accounts. The honest official will always welcome it, and the interests of the community demand it. But sinking funds could easily be dispensed with. They are a bother, and in this enlightened age they levy it on a ton of 2,000 pounds. Why are not required. The proper way to pay back borrowed money is by terminable Thus do the "protectionists" in the two annuities, whereby so much of the principal countries play off against one another. with the interest added, is paid yearly until the whole is cleared off.

> ODDITIES AT THE SEAT OF WAR. Corea, which is the theater of war between Japan and China at present, is a great country for hats. A vessel owner in Australia often loads up a cargo of old hats and takes it to a Corean port, where he obtains profitable returns in Corean products. The Corean man's fancy runs to hats of every description. For the common people, a rain hat, made of oiled paper, and looking like a folded fan, is a favorite, but a well-to-do Corean is often seen with a high chimney pot adorned with variegated ribbons! The upper classes always wear overcoats; the poor use them as evening dress. When one pays for anything he uses money called "cash." It is a decidedly cheap article, over 3,000 of the commodity being required to equal the value of our dollar. A Corean pony cannot carry more than $15 worth of "cash." Squeezed between Japan and China, the unfortunate Coreans will not have much "cash" left when the war ends. The petty monarch of the East who does not put himself under the care of Great Britain or some other western power is always at the mercy of his rapacious neighbors, and he in turn squeezes the common people.

The gray of early morning beholds the arrival of the veteran disciples of Izak Walton, who proceed to take up their station 'neath the friendly shadow of the light-house, armed with hooks of most deadly character and bait most alluring, and a childlike faith in the gullibility of the finny tribe, which years of vain broiling, watching and waiting has been unable to quell. A visible shudder runs through this solemn assembly as the whistle of the morning train heralds the advent of the excursionists, whose arrival upon the hallowed precints of the pier is viewed with cold distavor by the "veterans," who hold quiet and tranquility to be indis-affording a certain grim amusement to the Postcard Responses to the "Adververtiser" Query.

FROM MR. RICHARD VICK. As you have asked for opinions of citizens respecting swimming baths, I state mine: That a good-sized bath should be erected on Victoria Park, immediately north of the green house. And as so many of our citizens take their walking and visability of collecting their spoils, and riding exercise there, so they also could take the healtful and life-saving exercise of swimming, or learning to swim. A bath house can be erected there cheaply, with plenty of good water from the fountains, which is now running to waste.

FROM MR. J. M'ARTHUR. My opinion re swimming baths is, that the city can for a small amount build a good one on Victoria Park, as Mr. Vick suggested to Acting Mayor Parnell and Ald. Scarrow on Tuesday morning, using the waste water from the fountains and charging a small fee of 5 cents, which would pay for caretaking and also bring something into the city treasury. If the services of Mr. Vick can be had to give further ideas about it, and his services sefree water and get him to lower his prices, which are really small now, to three baths for 25 cents.

CRICKET.

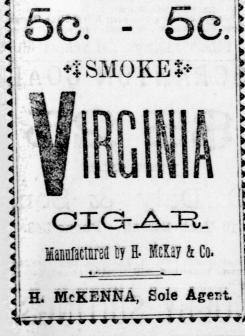

PHILADELPHIA VS. ONTARIO. TORONTO, July 27 .- The cricket match between Philadelphia and All Ontario came off today, and was composed of the strongest teams that the Phillies have faced, and a splendid exhibition of cricket was witnessed by a large and fashionable audience. Following is the Ontario eleven: Saunders, Martin, Goldingham, Laing and Wadsworth, of Toronto; F. W. Terry, London; McGiverin, Hamilton; Kenny, Chatham; Lyon, Bowbanks and Cooper, of the Rosedales.

The features of the day were the fielding of both elevens, which was characterized by neatness and accurate throwing, the after which they play a two days' match splendid bowling of McGiverin, of Hamil- at London. They then return home. ton, who is credited with 7 wickets for 21 runs, and the beautiful catch of Wadsworth, of the Torontos. The bowling on both sides was of a high order.

At 11:20 Capt. Patterson of the Phillies, having won the toss, elected to go to bat and took Dr. Thompsen in with him, facing the bowling of Laing and McGiverin. Both batsmen began steadily, but Thompson got in a beautiful hit to the boundary which elicited hearty cheers. When 39 had been tallied the tall American captain was caught by Lyon off Mc-Giverin. Score, 39, 1, 13. E. W. Clarke captain was caught by Lyon off Mc-Giverin. Score, 39, 1, 13. E. W. Ralston came in, but only for a short stay, as he succumbed to a clinker from McGiverin. Score 62, 3, 2. Biddle followed, but before he could score Clarke was caught at mid-field by Goldingham. Score 62, 4, 6. Brewster put up a high fly to leg which Wadsworth captured after a long run, making one of the best catches ever seen on the lawn; score, 67, 5, 0. Joe Patterson was bowled by McGiverin's first ball; score, 67, 6, 0. Etting and Biddle made a short stand, the former having contributed 8 before being bowled by Mc-Giverin; score, 79, 7, 8. J. S. Clarke was snapped up by Wadsworth without scoring; score, 83, 8, 0. Biddle was taken in at cover point by Bowbanks off Laing for 10; score, 88, 9, 10. Brockie joined Goodman, who was playing splendid cricket, and these batsmen played out until time was called for lunch at 1:30, McGiverin had 7 wickets for 21 runs.

At 2:40 play was resumed, and Goodman was shortly afterwards caught at the wickets off Kenny for a splendid inning of 22. Brockie, not out, for 2, closed the Phillies' first inning with a total of 110.

At 3:31 Goldingham and Saunders, for the Untarios, faced the bowling of Capt. Patterson and E. W. Clark, Goldingham cut Patterson to the ropes for 4, and then drew another for 3. He then hit Clarke beautifully to the off for 3. Saunders punished one of Clarke's for 3, when he was stumped by Ralston. Score, 21, 1, 4. Martin followed, but was snapped up by Brockie off Clarke for 5. Score, 31, 2, 5. Terry joined Goldingham, and these two put up some excellent batting. Goldingham cut Patterson for 4, and then drove Clarke to the western ropes for another quartet. Goodman relieved Patterson, bowling at the south end. After Terry had put one of Clarke's to the boundary for 4, Goldingham was caught by Geo. Patterson off Clarke for a well played 30. Score, 52, 3, 30. Laing, the

A delightfully cool place to spend the summer in is a dress made from our lightweight Crinkles or Zephyrs. Those who have them pronounce them very cool, very comfortable and very fashionable That's what everyone wants these warm days. And it di esn't cost much to procure nem. You see, although there are yet two months of the summer season, we desire to make a clean sweep of all our lightweight, fluffy summer goods. That's why we say, take our Zephyrs at 18c a yard and our Crinkles at 12½c. But the sports who played against him in the races at Cleveland yesterday are unable to see the humorous side of his nature today. As a usual thing Ryland T. wants to get away well in front, let the field pass him on the back stretch and then put on a full head of steam and beat them all home. Yesterday he trotted the greatest trotting race in history on the Cleveland course. Lord Clinton was the favorite and Ryland T. had no friends, but he took the bit into his teeth and went around he track like a railroad train, getting under the wire in 2:084 as steady as if hauling a milk wagon. Next heat, the sports figured, Ryland would be distanced. Lord Clinton went beautiful grounds, where a pleasant hour at him faster than before, carrying him to the half in 1:033. Ryland shot ahead, from club house at 7:15 sharp, and Captain reaching the three-quarters in 1:36. His lordship gave it up, and then Ellard came out to equal the one held to St. Johns this out of the ruck to take the heat from the "inded leaders, but Ryland's blood was up and his heart was strong. William Says He'll Marry Jessie Any

CLEVELAND, O., July 27 .- Favorites won WINDSOR, July 27 .- The courtroom rang in all the events at the grand circuit trotwith cheers yesterday afternoon during the ting meeting today. The free-for-all pace otter-Hiland trial, when Wm. Hiland, the was the star event of the day, and the over of the fair Jessie Potter, was giving upon Robert J. The game little gelding was held back in the first heat, finishing his evidence.

"Do you know where the young lady is now!" inquired Lawyer Cowan, and the witness replied that he understood that she was staying with some triends in Detroit. "Yes, and you will never see her again," chimed in her father, who was sitting behind him. "I will see her again, sooner than you expect," exclaimed the young man, "and what is more, I will marry her." Cheers and laughter tollowed, and the magistrate himself appeared to be one of the most amused persons in the room. The first witness was George Potter, brother of the heroine. He said he was a Ings. medical student in Detroit and did not like Farmer Hiland keeping company with his "Do you not think it would have been more manly on your part," said Mr.

Cowan, "to have gone quietly to Hiland in place of making such a disgraceful exhibition in front of a church?" "I don't know," replied George, and Mr. Cowan dismissed him with a wave of his

"When will you be 27?" "On my next birthday," was the reply, amid rears of laughter. Nicholas Terrough said that he was subpænaed by both parties, and that the evening previous to the trial Mr. Potter called on him and asked him not to go. He also said that he would stand all the expense for his non-appearance. His evidence favored Hiland. At 5 o'clock the case was closed. Mr.

Cowan contended that only one blow was struck by the Hilands, that being when the hero struck the man who refused to have him for a son-in-law. On the other hand, he contended that the evidence clearly showed that the young man had been struck on the head twice and that blood was running down his face. Mr. Clarke admitted that the young lady had a right to marry whom she pleased, but that no father would care to see his daughter keeping company with any man who was forbidden the house.

"One thing which pleases me," said Mr. show that his intentions were not honorable. He made no attempt to meet the young lady on the sly, but went direct to her house and took her from there to the church. I must say that I am much pleased with his conduct. I will reserve my decision, however, till next Tuesday." Last night Mr. Potter brought his daughter over from Detroit and took her home with him.

CHICAGO, III., July 27.

To corn belongs the credit for causing a temporary advance in wheat today, and because form was unable to preserve the full appreciation, there was a corresponding decline in tion there was a corresponding decline in the tion. A total disregard of direct influence was seen, a careful watch being kept on the was seen, a careful watch being kept on the usually less important grain. Corn at the opening prices shot upward on the unprecedented high range of temperature that was reported in the Northwest and Southwest. Later on, advices of rain being received from the West and Northwest, a decline took place. Oats were in close sympathy with corn, Shorts were the buyers when the advance was in progress and during the later period of easi-ness there was a disposition to put out their lines again.

A FOOLISH MOVE.

The Sale of the Thousand Islands a Stupid Blunder-Why Mr.

Daly's Haste? A Toronto dispatch says: Among the distinguished guests at the Rossin House yesterday was Sir Richard Cartwright, who arrived in town shortly before noon, and who looks none the worse after his arduous and protracted labors at Ottawa for the past four months. A Mail reporter sought the financial critic of the Opposition last evening, and was kindly accorded an inter-

"What is your opinion of the action of the Dominion Government in selling a large number of the Thousand Islands between Gananoque and Brockville?" asked the reporter. "I do not approve of it," answered Sir Richard. "The Ontario Government made proposition to purchase these islands and convert them into a public park, if the consent of the Legislature could be obtained, but the Legislature having been dissolved, they asked the Dominion Government to delay the sale until they could obtain the sanction of the new Legislature to the proposal We had two reasons for objecting to the present sale," continued Sir Richard. First of all we thought that the time for selling was very inopportune just now. The people have very little money to spend in matters of recreation or luxury, and also we disapprove of the method of conducting the sale. The Government did not exactly sell secretly; but, on the other hand, no human being had any opportunity to know of the conditions of it, and it was quite possible for parties who had the ear of the department to secure islands they took a fancy to by going a very little above the prices another man might choose to offer." "Do you think the project of the Ontario Government to convert the islands into the park a good one?" "I think it might have been. They would have to have appointed guards to look after it. The islands have been very much neglected, there is no doubt." "What do you think of the figure that is said to have been obtained for 300 of them, $40,000?" "I think a great deal more might have been got for them by waiting a year or two. Many purchasers would, no doubt, have come from the other side if due notice of the sale were given. There is no necessity for selling the islands just now. The Government has selected a very bad time. A pretense was made that the interest of Saunders without scoring. Etting was the Indians necessitated the sale, but when next. Ralston drove McGiverin to the Government disposed of the Indian's timber limits a while ago their interests certainly were not considered." "It is said that most of the islands have been sold to Canadians?"

"Yes, but there is no saying how long they will remain in the hands of Canadians. Once these islands get out of the control of the Dominion or local Governments the work can never be undone. All that was asked was delay until such time as the 4 on the next over from Laing. Clarke cut Ontario Legislature could have passed on Laing for 3. Etting was caught by Mcthe question."

ST. MARYS TO LONDON.

ST. MARYS, July 27, 1894.—To the Editor the ADVERTISER: Kindly all through the medium of your most valuable paper, to reply to the letter of July 26. written by the field captain of the London Lacrosse Club. In the first place he makes did not answer the letter received from London till Monday. Well, I think there is a good reason for not doing so. The letter being received Saturday night, it was impossible for an answer to be given till Monday. He also says he notified the referee that the game would not be played on the 25th inst. Well, that may be true, but the writer would like to know where he gets his authority for so doing without first consulting the visiting team. Another thing he seems to be a little weak-minded on is about the

St. Marys Alerts being very unsportsmanlike in coming to London on the 25th inst. I would like to know what else we could do, when London never advised us about defaulting. In fact, judging from the tone of his letter on the 25th, he is not capable of judging a sport. Had the London boys that sportsmanship that he speaks about they would not have allowed the Alerts to have traveled so far without some one of them showing up on the ground to claim some of the spoils of the day. In fact, even their most worthy field captain failed to put in an appearance. Now, I would just like to give the London boys one little piece of advice, and that is, if they want to encourage and foster the game in their town they want to give the visiting team a better reception. There is just one other thing before I close, and that is, if London would like to cross sticks with the St. Marvs Alerts ! again, we will be perfectly willing to go to their own city and play them a friendly game, or for any stake that they choose to

A ST. MARYS ALERT. CRICKET. ONTARIO VS. PHILADELPHIA. TORONTO, July 28.-It was 11:15 this morning when the match between the Philadelphians and Ontarios was resumed. G. S. Patterson and Mr. Biddles, the not outs of yesterday, took their places to the bowling of McGiverin and Laing. Runs came slowly. McGiverin and Laing were bowling beautifully and the batsmen were apparently unable to do anything with their deliveries. Patterson was stumped by Saunders, 22, 2, 60. Mc-Giverin had bowied 10 maidens out of 13 overs for 5 runs. Ralston joined Biddle, but no runs were forthcoming. Biddle was clean bowled by McGiverin. Clarke was the newcomer, but was run out after scoring one. Goodman followed Clarke, but was immediately caught at the wicket by the southern boundary for 4, and Etting drew Laing for 4, and followed up by hitting McGiverin's next two balls for 4 each. Ralston was given out, leg before wicket, after playing a splendid 18. Score, 65 runs for 6 wickets. Brewster followed, and was clean bowled by McGiverin for nothing. J. S. Clarke took Brewster's place. Etting hit McGiverin for 4 and got another Giverin off Laing with the top score so far—27. Clarke was then bowled by a full pitched ball by Mc-Giverin. J. H. Patterson, the next man, hit Laing for 2 and then punished McGiverin for 3. He then hit Laing to the boundary for 4. Cooper relieved Laing at bowling. Cooper's second ball found Patterson's wicket for 10. Brockie, not At 12:50 the Philadelphias were all out for a score of 93. The Ontarios' second innings started at 1:10 with Saunders and Martin at bat with 108 runs to make to win the match. W. Clarke started the bowling for Philadelphia, Martin cut for 2.

Goodman started bowling at the south.
Martin hit Goodman for 3. Saunders fellowed with a boundary hit off Goodman. At 1:30 an adjournment was made for lurch. Score 21 runs without the loss of a

CHAPTER I. "Interesting people have tempers." It was my sister Kate who made that remark in a calm and even tone of voice which nettled me. I had been nettled all that morning and I knew it. So did she, which made her utterances more pointed. She was leaning back in a very comfortable easy chair, the most comfortable one in my possession, and she was darning at the

I cannot say darning is a very graceful act at any time, but with Kate it is aggressively ungraceful, it is almost defiantly so, and she knows this also.

She was darning my socks, for these, I grieve to say, have a perpetual knack of running into holes in an undignified manner. It is clearly not my fault. I think the wool of modern times is decidedly inferior to that of our forefathers. I say so to Kate, who receives the information with a toss of the head and a little "Umph !"

I watch Kate with interest when she darns. It is nice to know she is useful. I am at an interesting age myself. My sister occasionally believes in me, the other young women of the township do so at all times, and I may candidly state at once that I believe in myself. Holding the important curacy of St. Anne the Martyr, I teel myself a person of importance, and that my adventinto the place is calculated to raise the town in the opinion of the whole country. I am neither tall nor short, neither stout nor thin, but a happy midway between extremes, which is a convenient arrangement on the part of nature. The people whose opinion I value say I am goodlooking, but, being very modest, I decline to believe that in its entirety, and Kate, who abhors flattery, says composedly that I am not. "It is better to speak the truth," she says lam not sure that she always does so herself. Kate has many faults.

She lives with me by the judicious desires of my patents. My vicar, who is unmarried, lives in the old vicarage across the road. He lives alone, is very self-contained, abrupt, and imperative. I am not sure that

Kate said once that she had never given him a second look; that she had come here to look after me. I feel duly grateful, but think I could have managed very comfortably without her.

Kate is small and, some say, pretty, but I am no judge of my sister's looks. This parish is large, weil populated, and semirural; it contains many young women-they are under my care. I have no time to look at Kate. She believes in me with certain reservations. She is not an ardent admirer of young men, as a class. She is 27, slight and fair; I am dark, and 23. That, I find, is the most interesting age at which a ourate can place himself. It is an age that commends itself to all minds. All one's faults are con loned, all one's excellences are overestimated. It is so in the case of Jenkins of St. Edmund's, as I can say from personal knowledge.

Kate has darned my stockings, sewed on my buttons, and looked after my comfort, but she has "choked off" my admirers in a most distinct manner; and I cannot sav I upprove of this part of her conduct. We had an altercation about it just now, which led to the singular remark I have recorded flavor about them, and can be at times more

Some of these oracular utterances have worked disastrously for me; they have arrested the flow of slippers, smoking-caps, and pen wipers, and have materially affected the jampots, cakes, and "creature" comforts" that filled my cupboard she ves. My landlady is not infatuated with Kate. On the contrary, she takes good care to tell me "as it were vastly diffurunt in th' late cooerat's daay." Well, here my sister is, and here she must stay, I suppose, for the present.

I have distinguished myself. I have fallen in love. It is not the first time, or the second, that I have performed that feat, but this time I have done it with a vengeance.

I am 23, the proud possessor of £150 per annum, and no prospects to speak of. Yet I have persuaded one young woman to take me "on tick," as it were, and to believe in me. This is a feather in my cap.

me. This is a feather in my cap.

It came about in this way. My voice is a deep sonorous bass; it echoes through the building when I read prayers, and when I preach it rings through the rafters in the most mellow of melodious accents. I sing, too-not lively little ditties that melt one to tears, but stirring, powerful lays, like "Ruddier than the Cherry," and the recitative, in which "I rage, I burn," in such overwheiming tones.

Ciara is musical; she sings and plays, too pretty little "pieces," which please the ears of my parishioners, and are very acceptable at our local assemblies. They afford a fine cover for conversation, chiefly tit-bits of a scandalous character, which are confidentially whispered into sympathetic ears during the performance.

The dear girl plays away conscientiously, as if conscious that she is doing her duty; and so I dare say she is. Kate, who says disagreeable things, remarks that duty is a much abused word, and that different people judge of it from different stand-points. I don't accept her as an authority. She has no soul for music—"like that," she said, with a finely curved sneer; but then, Kate's soul is rarely stirred by local events, and so, it may be, she is not moved in the same way as others by the strains of har-

Clara De Grey Stranton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. De Grey Stranton, the parental authority being solely vested in Mrs. De Grey Stranton, as her husband rests in peace in the churchyard-if his bones have not been disturbed at the recent restoration. It does not matter if they have or have not. In his lifetime he is said to have played second fiddle to Mrs De Grey Stranton, and his death has made no change in her domestic arrangements. Clara is named after a certain abbess who inhabited these parts about a thousand gears ago. It is considered quite a delicate way of showing piety and respect by naming all the little girls who arrive after this lady, of whom we know little or nothing, while the boys-worst luck-continue to be Johns and Georges and Josephs-until the penny novelette alters public opinion. There will in future be Vincents, Geralds, St. Clairs and Athelstans. The penny novelette is a public benefactor. The reigning family has done its share of good in influencing the nomenciature of the people. But Edward is old-fashioned and Albert is of no use; and for the rest, they ring the changes too much upon the same names in those exalted circles. The leading aristocrat of our district is no good. She is plain, unvarnished Lady Jane-a prossic matter-of-factness about that, which com-mends itself to no one—and her daughter ickets when obtainable.

It is

rejoices in being Ellen Greytown-Ellen, mark you, not Helen, or Elinor, or Helena
—E len. It is almost a defiance brandished by the noble house of Greytown in the eyes of the oi polloi. Clara De Grey Stranton may not ride in a carriage or boast a footman or flourish a coronet, but her name is music and rolls on the ear like a sweet strain.

Kate puther hands over her ears when I discoursed in this style. "For goodness' sake," said she energetically, "think of your sermons, think of your work, think of your next exam., and don't torment me with your eloquence! I am not in love with Miss Stranton." Then I became disturbed in my mind, and gave Kate a lecture which naturally upset her, and provoked a storm. And after this she was good enough to say apologetically. "All interesting people have tempers." I did not consider this an apology; instead of soothing it irritated me still more.

I went to finish the evening at the house of Mrs. De Grey Stranton, being admitted by the sooty hands of Gemina, and ushered by her with unnecessary giggles into the presence of my beloved. Why do some people always giggle? 1t is a most annoying piece of mistaken mirthfulness, and I don't admire it. Whenever this miserable Jemima giggles I grow wrathful and frown. And thus I appear in the bosom of my Clara's family with so forbidding an expression on my counten-ance that the young De Grey Strantons turn tail and fly incontinently without wasting too many words on me.

There are two young De Grev Strantons -two only. One is Vincent Maltravers De Grey Stranton, and the other is Octavius Stanley Cornwallis, etc. These names being somewhat long for daily wear and tear, their unfeeling schoolfellows have shortened them into Trotters and Tommy. Trotters represents Vincent, etc., and Tommy stands for Octavius and the rest. Mrs. De Grey Stranton, it is needless to add, uses no abbreviations: she ignores

My godfathers and godmothers, as represented by my mother's judicious taste and state of feeling, bestowed on me the simple old Saxon appellation of Edwin. It suits me, and, thank goodness, it suits Mrs. De Grey Stranton. If it did not, I feel sure she would rechristen meon the spot.

"Edwin Graham," says my beloved, "is sweetly pretty; don't you think so, Kate?"
But Kate — Kate looks furious. "Of course it is nice, because my mother chose it," see says abruptly; "but, for myself, I think Edwin is ian uncommonly soft kind of thing to call a low." of thing to call a boy."

Whereupon I vow undying enmity to Kate, or should do so if I were not a parson. I think a good deal of this fact. If it were not so, would I go in for such expensive suits of clothes? That is quite sufficient evidence in my eyes; if others don't agree with me the fault is theirs, not mine. I am at least resolved to be an ornament to my profession, and Clara-dear girl-says I am certainly that. (To be Continued.)

A Good Appetite

Always accompanies good health, and an absence of appetite is an indication of something wrong. The universal testimony given by those who have used Hood's Sarsaparilla, as to its merits in restoring the appetite, and as a purifier of the blood, constitutes the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine.

WELCOME TO MISS WILLARD.

Reception in Her Honor at Evanston, ill.

Mrs. C. T. Reiley Makes the Opening Address of Greeting and Rev. H. A. Delano Reads an Original Poem-Miss Willard's Response.

(Chicago Times.)

Frances E. Willard, president of the World's Women Christian Temperance Union, was formally welcomed home by a reception in her honor yesterday at the residence of Mrs. E. B. Stuart, 1,492 Sherman avenue, Evanston. Members of the organization assisted Mrs. Stuart in receiving. Shortly after the guests began to arrive, at 2 o'clock, Mrs. C. T. Reiley, president of the fourth district organization, made the opening address of greeting, Mrs. Reiley said: "We welcome Miss Willard because we love her and because we wish her to know this while she is present with us. Personally no human life has been so helpful to me as that of Frances Willard. Twenty-five years ago and more I was attracted by a short article in the Ladies' Repository by F. E. Willard. I cannot recall the writing now, but it changed the current of my soul's thought. I little dreamed that when I had reached life's meridian I would be privileged to say this word of greeting to her and call her friend. The pleasure of this moment is brightened also by the presence of our own Anna Gordon, also of Rest Cottage. To both of these we bring, in the name of 600 loyal women, grateful love that they have been returned to us after journeying by land and sea. The Rev. C. Van Andu, of Emanuel Methodist Church, then read the "Crusade Psalm," and Dr. H. F. Fisk, president of the Northwestern University Academy, offered prayer. "We All Belong" was then sung by the guests assembled, and the Rev. H. A. Delano of the First Baptist Church, read an original poem to Miss Frances Willard (a recital of the calamities during her absence in England.) Among other stanzas were the following:

Missed you? Guess we have so much; Why, we couldn't bear to touch Things a bit, and left 'em, dear, Just till you got safely here.

Uncle Sam will welcome you, He's got lots for you to do— Big housecleaning still on hand, Whisky running o'er the land.

Things is mighty out of fix-Debs and Pullman will not mix, Country supering same old loss. Drink bill? Don't it need a boss? "Fifty-five" most? Weighing well, Looking bright—I'm goin' to tell If another decade's lent, What of you for president?

Lots of foiks are sayin' it. Hintin', gossipin' a bit,
And just here I show my bait— I'll be poet laureate.

But there's one condition lone, This your native, natural zone, Can't afford to lose you more, For by you we set a store.

From the White House down to that Blessed old Angora cat
All United States loves you.
Don't you think we're pretty true?

Father Smyth, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church, Evanston, who followed Dr. Delano, said that the Catholic Church was awakening to the great cause of temperance and that he personally wished to ledge himself to do all in his power to advance the movement.

On behalf of the students, W. C. Levere, president of the Northwestern University Prohibition League, welcomed Miss Willard in a few general remarks.

Miss Willard replied to the welcome extended by the various speakers, saying that she was glad to be home again in Evanston. That she rejoiced in the demonstration of love which the women of the Fourth District Women's Christian Temperance Union had extended to her, and hoped that she might continue to retain their affection and respect forever.

Other pleasant features which marked the afternoon's enjoyment were: A greet ing to Miss Anna Gordon, Miss Willard's secretary, by Miss Johnson, vice-president of the Evanston union; poem, recited by La Juene Forrey; poem, written by Mrs. Kate Lente Stephenson, read by Mrs. H. B. Kells; reading of messages and telegrams from friends not present by Mrs. Jennie Just. district secretary; music by Duffell brothers. Refreshments were served by the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Irving Park. A total membership of 700 was represented by the officers of the Fourth District Women's Christian Temperance Union, who were present.

Death of John Tanton. A pioneer of London died yesterday when Mr. John Tanton passed away at his home on King street. Mr. Tanton came to this city from St. Giles, Devonshire, England, in 1849, when the town of London was surrounded by virgin forest. He went into business and literally grew up with the city. He was the oldest established grain merchanton the market and the name of his firm (John Tanton & Son) has been familiar to the farmers of the countryside for a couple of generations. Deceased was of a retiring disposition and did not seek civic honors to any extent, yet he filled the position of school trustee for No. 3 ward for several terms with much ability. Although he had been ailing for some time the end came suddenly and he breathed his last at noon yesterday after a painful attack of his malady of two days' duration. Mr. Tanton was 65 years and 6 months old, and was of Conservative principles. He was a member of Dundas Street Methodist Church, a Mason, and a member of St. George's Society. Mrs. Tanton (nee Rebecca Fitzgerald, sister of F. A. Fitzgerald), a son, B. P. Tanton, and a daughter, Edna R. M. Tanton, survive him. The funeral will be private to Mount Pleasant at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

THE CHILDREN.

Eva A. Madden Discourses Wisely on Restrictions on Children. We hear much of the spoiling of only children, but little of what we shall term the restrictions which are often laid upon them by parents, who in their relation to these, their most precious possessions, see something which belongs exclusively to themselves, upon whom they are to shower benefits, and demand in inturn an amount of affection proportionate to the benefits. There is a higher do ty to a child than this. It is the recognition of the rights of that child's individuality, the right to exist, the right to grow, the right to make use of itself when developed. Parents who study the future welfare of their child will recognize that any training or restriction which interferes with these rights becomes paternal selfishness.

In a family of a number of children these rights are more apt to be respected than where the love of both father and mother is centered on one. In the first place, he is often denied the right to exist as a separate nature. The mother, in her intense love desires to know every thought and act of his small life, will say, "Who cares for him as I do?" and will probe him with questions, will torment him with embraces and kisses until he longs with all his small heart to escape into a less loving atmos-

Under what the mother terms "interest," she will endeavor to penetrate into the child's secret thoughts, into every act, into every dream. This interest, springing from a desire to be first with the one she loves best, is a development of maternal jealousy or selfishness.

There is nothing which incenses a growing boy like this constant inquiry into his movements. Let him confide, if he feels so disposed, but above all things do not force his confidence. Often puzzled with the increasing complexity of life, boys and girls hardly know the reasons of their conduct. If every act has to be explained, accounted for, or even related, life becomes intolerable, and duty to parents takes the place of love. If proper relations exist between parents and children, confidence will be spontaneous. For a mother to insist on reading her daughter's letters implies a suspicion which in its way is insulting to the daughter. This constant exaction on the part of the mother will often lead to deceit in the child. Part of his actions will be suppressed in the daily relation to the interested mother. Little by little he will make his own life, withdrawing himself more and more from spontaneous exchange of confidence with the parent.

Another restriction ofen laid upon ant only child is the one which shuts him off from the normal conditions of child life. The parents, ignoring the fact that in becoming the father and mother of a child they bind themselves morally to do for that child the best that will fit him for the struggle of life, keep him perpetually under their protection. "I must keep my child with me as long as I can," the mother will say, "I cannot bear to see him go among rough boys. He will never be the same to me again. It will break my heart to let my boy grow away from me.' So the boy or girl is kept away from other children. He is made a companion of father and mother. He is often taken to evening amusements, he is permitted to be present at grown up affairs at his own home, or he is shut up in a nursery or taken daily walks with a maid or nurse. We have all seen these children. They are all peculiar. They are either unduly precocious, or painfully shy. There is no evil like keeping a child shut off from other children, watching over him and pretecting him, only suddenly to land him unprepared and unfortified in the midst of boy or girl life with its oftentimes unsympathetic brutality. It is not the man, ignorant of evil, who is commended, but the one who in the midst of sin "thinketh no evil."

There is nothing more pathetic than to see one of these tenderly cared for children at some gathering to which against his will, he has at last been taken. See how bored he looks. Assuming an indifferent air, and yet longing to join in the fun, resenting the neglect of the other children who, having endeavored to persuade him to join them, leave him to his fate.

The mother, feeling for her child, will blame the other children in his presence, and a feeling of bitterness will begin to grow in the small heart. A thoughtful mother will neither torment a child with endless questions as to his welfare, nor will she so shut him up in her love that his nature cannot freely expand.

Parenthord means an eternal sacrifice and yet not only a sacrifice of doing for the child, but a sacrifice of not doing, and the negative sacrifice is often the harder. How many mothers force an only son into uncongenial occupation that he may remain with them? How many fathers, loth to lose the companionship of son or daughter, will refuse consent to departure from home when for the best interest of his child? The child, weary of the contest between what is best for himself, and what is his duty to his parents, generally in a spirit which we unwisely call unselfishness, yields to the solicitations of his parents, and makes but a poor success of life. The foundations of these errors is laid in childhood. The mother sacrifices herself to the child. rather than to the child's welfare. Having surrounded him with every maternal comfort and given him her love, she thinks her duty done.

The chief joys of childhood lie in in. tercourse with other children, in unconscious and natural enjoyment of life. When a child becomes conscious by over solicitude he will grow either priggish or bashful. He will either weakly yield his rights, or he will break bounds sooner or later. Has the mother of an only child the right then to keep a child shut up in her love, has she the right to not prepare that child for the struggle that must be made later on, has she a right to prevent a child from developing in a manner in conformance with the existing conditions of child life? Let such a mother ask herself these questions and make her conduct to her boy or girl conform to her answer. - Eva A. Madden, in the Housekeeper.

A RUSTIC HAT-RACK.

of Beauty Rambles in the Woods Supplied. We needed a hat-rack, says Edmond S.

Meany in American Agriculturist, and one day asked a young friend if he thought he could make a rustic one from the materials he had noticed in our rambles in the woods. He set at the task with confidence, and the accompanying sketch gives some idea of the result.

The hat-rack is about four feet wide and a trifle over six feet high. The seat is a plank made from a fir tree (Pseudotsugs taxifolia). The legs of the seat and the two uprights of the rack are the trunks of young hemlock trees (Abies Mertensiana). The intertwined boughs, with the small sprigs, extended outward for hat pegs, are made from the limbs of the madrona tree (Arbutus Menziesii). This is one of the most beautiful of Pacific coast trees. It is not a cone bearer, but it is, nevertheless. an evergreen. Its long, oval and serrated leaves, in glossy brightness, making it a great favorite, while its beautiful, smooth, shiny and bright red bark has endeared it to the people to such an extent, that you rarely learn of one being cut down or destroyed. This part of the rack is, of course, the main, and at the same time most attractive feature of this prized article of furniture. The back of the seat is made of a straight trunk of a young hemlock like the uprights, and the interwoven boughs are from the great cedar (Thuya plicata), from which the Puget Sound shingles are made. These boughs were used here instead of the madrona, because they could be obtained in such shapes as to lessen the danger of catching one's clothes when sitting down to remove overshoes. The frame of the umbrella stand is made of a branch of the yew tree (Taxus bubifolia), and the sides are covered with the pliable but serviceable cedar bark, which is used so extensively by the Indians in weaving the cloths of their primitive garments. A common tin baking pan is placed in the bottom to catch the drippings from the Altogether it is an article of beauty and usefulness, and constructed at little or no expense This speece has inspired my young friend to such an extent that I shall soon expect to see about me a rustic summer house, trellises for the ivy and roses, rustic chairs and benches in the garden, and I shall welcome each new arrival-for I am a lover of the woods, and these little contrivances will keep me constantly reminded of my friends-the trees.

Baby's Pillow.

One summer day on lifting my baby from his cradle after a protracted nap found his little head wet with profuse perspiration, moreover his small pillow-feathers, of course-was soaked through. This led to an investigation, for I felt that such heat boded ill to the sensitive brain. Looking into the matter I discovered the following advice given by an eminent physician, long since deceased. He "The proximate, if not the original, cause of great mortality among babies is some malady of the brain. When we suppose death to result from dysentery or cholers infantum the immediate cause is frequently affection of the brain supervening upon bowel disease. The heads of babies are, for the most part, little furnaces. What mischief must then result from keeping them buried hour after hour in feather pillows! It makes me shiver to think of the deaths among these precious little ones, where I doubt not that cool straw pillows would have saved them. Do not fail to keep their heads cool while

The material which I then deemed best for baby's pillow-for straw seemed rather hard-was deer's hair. One woman employed hair combings, which makes a soft cushion. Paper clipped fine is recommended, as well as pine needles.

There are other ways, however, of injuring baby's brain-ah, how much they must work ere they arrive at maturity! It is claimed that the brain is more heavily taxed the first five years of existence than during the remainder of life. One baby who very nearly succumbed to brain disease was taught the catechism ere his second year. It sounded cunning to hear him lisp, "Absoum," in reply to who was the father of the faithful, or "Ot's ife," when asked who was turned into a pillar of salt.

Of course the family physician soon stopped this needless cramming, giving imperative orders that nothing should be taught the child .- St. Louis Republic.

When Sweeping a Room.

For sweeping a room neatly there is nothing like newspaper. Take a page of newspaper or other paper at a time, wet in hot water and squeeze it until it ceases to drip. Tear into pieces the size of one's hand and cast them all over the carpet. Then sweep, and most of the dust in the room, if you use your broom judiciously, will be gathered into the papers.

After a velvet or other heavy pile carpet is thoroughly swept a sponging with ammonia and water will preserve its brightness wonderfully.

Shirt Waists.

The comfort and daintiness of white and colored shirt waists cannot be denied, and since their earliest vogue, after improvements in shape and style, nearly all women have become converts to their utility. The new "tailor made" waist has a slightly starched shield front, collar and cuffs, the plain flat shield ornamented with a fine vine embroidery. It comes in pink, cream and blue linen, in single colors, in chambray and gingham and in combination of dainty cotton fabrics, and is to be worn with and without an outside jacket.

Scientific writers affirm that without dust the sky would never look blue to us, but be colorless as that of midnight. Only one woman in the world is an ad-

HOME DRESS-MAKING.

SUGGESTIONS FOR SENSIBLE AND INTELLIGENT HOUSEWIVES.

Some Details of Progress That Cannot Fail to Benefit Those Who Need and Heed Them-The Reason Why Many Women

Fail in This Work Making a dress at home is not a hard task if done properly and not in hap-ha-zard fashion. The first thing is the pattern, or else to study a system. If you have a nicely-fitted basque or skirt save the lining as this will be a good guide. For lining, silesia is best for the waist and undressed cambric for the skirt. Two yards of the former will be required and six yards of the cambric. Include sewing silk, buttonhole twist, whalebone or cov-ered stays, shields and belt of webbing for the waist, for the skirt hooks and eyes, facing canvas and velveteen binding. If there is but a scant pattern, it is better to cut the skirt first, as the waist may be pieced out with velvet or silk cuffs, vest, and collar, or a waist of different material may be made.

Cut the basque fronts first, allowing half an inch for all seams but the shoulder. and an inch for those. Leave an inch and a half hem on front edges. In basting, begin at the top of both skirt and waist, and taper the darts to a point. Try it on wrong side out, so alterations may be readily made. Stitch the seams outside the basting and press them flat with a hot iron, having first overcast or finished them with silk binding. Covered bones may be feather-stitched on; real whalebone must have a casing. The lower edge of the waist should be turned up with a piece of crinoline, covered with a facing of silk or of the dress material.

The sleeves must be basted and tried on, then basted in the armhole and tried on again. The edge is turned under and faced with silk or the material. The seam should come directly under the arm. the fullness all on top and may be tacked in place while on the person. The seams should be overcast and pressed. The belt must be sewed securely at the back seam, the shields sewn at each side and in the middle of the armhole. Baste with a rather fine thread, which must be carefully removed before the last pressing given. Silk or velvet cannot be pressed, but the seams should be laid open over a

After cutting the skirt lining, the outside is well basted to it, so that it will not draw or sag in the stitching. The canvas is sewed on the bottom after cutting it on the bias, also the velveteen facing; then the belt and the pocket. It is better for a novice to begin on a cotton dress that requires little or no lining, and having mastered that in detail, a woolen gown will soon become an accomplished fact.

A tight fit is never to be desired, but a snug one, without wrinkles, is to be kept in view. If there is any piecing to do, be careful to match the goods, and manage so that it will not show. In plaid or striped goods, there will be found considerable difficulty, as unless matched perfectly the result is bad. In fitting a dress over a corset, it should be just right and arranged over the underwear as it is to be worn, so when the waist is finished, there can be no cause for complaint. Keep every little point in mind and you will not fail. -The Housekeeper.

Dainties for the Sick. In providing dainties for sick people it should be remembered that sweet things are seldom as tempting to the sick as they would be if the person were in health. Tart sweets, such as crab-apple jelly or current jelly, are generally acceptable, but strawberry preserves or jelly will sicken. They belong to the cloying sweets. As a general thing salty things taste best to the convalescent; a weak bouillon, rather salt, or a bit of nice, sweet ham, with some butter toast tasting of the salty butter, a softboiled egg well salted, a slice of bacon, with dry toast-all these will be eaten by a sick person who would not want to touch them if well. One prime requisite in catering to sick people is to be neat about it, and serve things daintilv .- Medical News.

THE TOILET TABLE.

Some Unique Fancies That May Be Successfully Homemade.

The illustrations (which we re-engrave from the American Agriculturist) accompanying this sugestion show several little fancy trays for jewelry, hairpins, or any small toilet appurtenances that are easily lost unless they have their special holder. The material used may vary with one's fancy. Celluloid is very pretty and easily manipulated in this way, and as it comes in so many pretty colors, can match or contrast tastefully with the silk used for lining. The diagram for the bit of a "light cance" is seen in Fig. 1. Small holes are made where the dots appear in the diagram, and through these the stitches are taken which keep the little craft "shipshape," as shown in Fig. 2. The lining is prettily fluted about the edge of the boat, and bits of bows "fore and aft" finish the whold. The lining may be lightly padded, and sprinkled with sachet powder, before fitting it to the outside, though, while this certainly adds to the sweetness of the gift, it rather hurts the transparent effect of the celluloid, if cellulcid be used. But other materials may be fashioned into the little boats. If one is still wedded to the good old ways of one's youth, perforated board might be used, as seen in Fig. 3. Or, if one is fortunate enough to possess an artist's souland fingers-the material may be rough parchment paper with a bit of a "sea scape" outlined upon it in sepia or water colors. Any of these tiny crafts, when finished in dainty agreement with the toilet

Rules for the Napkin at Table. While the following rules for using the napkin will be found valuable as authority, it must be remembered that practice, not precept, makes perfect; that mere knowledge of the "correct thing" to do is not sufficient to give one easy, graceful manners, and that daily observation is the only way to attain these and form one's manners into habits that will never forsake

On being seated at the table the napkin should be partly unfolded and laid across the lap, where it should remain when not in use. It should not be pushed to one side of the plate and left there throughout the serving of the menu. There is no breach of table etiquette more noticeable or unpardonable than this, not even excepting that of eating with a knife.

When through eating the napkin should be laid down carelessly on the table unless one expects to take the next meal or another in the same house, when it should be folded and laid beside the plate or be rolled and placed in the napkin ring, if one is included in the table appointments. This rule should invariably be observed for these reasons: In folding a napkin a guest for one meal only assumes that his napkin will be used again before visiting the laundry; in not folding a napkin, a guest implies that it is not possible for him to use the same napkin twice, making a deviation from either almost a reflection on his hostess' daintiness.

The Care of the Body.

In speaking of the care of the body Mrs. Jenness-Miller says: But few of even the best informed women could tell the specific results of nitrogenous, carbosaceous and mineral foods upon the various tissues of the body. Owing to this ignorance many a child enters upon womanhood actually in a starving condition, though the mother would resent such an insinuation as a genuine insult to her kindly intentions.

"Food should be studied chemically, and until this is done flesh will be flabby and complexions muddy. "It does not mean cleanliness to take a bath once or twice a week, dabbing on a little soap and rubbing off with a linen towel. To be clean you must bathe every day in tepid water, washing with pure soap, and then with a circular motion using a woolen towel until the body is in a glow and the pores of the skin have thrown off the minute excrescences that we say are a part of our skin, but which is dirt. pure and simple. In addition to this a Russian or Turkish bath once a week, and then you may consider yourself reasonably clean, but not until then.'

Rimoldi, of the Hotel Jefferson restaurant, gave me his recipe for "Tomato soup a la New Orleans."

I ate it the other night, and it was so very good I asked the amiable proprietor how it was made.

This is what he said: "Fry two good-sized white onions to a golden brown in two ounces of butter, add a couple of ounces of raw ham two large carrots, one gallon can of tomatoes, two quarts of good broth, two small garlies, tour bay leaves, a pinch of thyme, salt, and black and cayenne pepper to taste. Let this cook slowly for two hours; press through a seive, remove the fat; add ten or a dozen okra, and let it come again to a boil until the okra is tender, then put in two heaping tablespoonfuls of hot rice, which has been separately cooked for the purpose, and serve."

THE KINGDOM OF COREA

THE STATE OVER WHICH CHINA AND JAPAN ARE QUARRELLING.

Corea's Other Name is Tsyosien—It Means "Morning Calm," but a Glance at This Distressed Country Makes the Title Seem Inept-The Country Described.

The kingdom of Corea, which China and Japan are quarrelling over, is not quite twice as large as the Province of Ontario. Its population is estimated at 9,600,000, or in the neighborhood of 6,000,000 more than the population of this province.

Corea is a peninsula stretching out from the continent of Asia in a south-easterly direction, between Japan and China proper, with the Yellow Sea on one side and the Sea of Japan on the other. The average width is 135 miles, and the whole length is about 600 miles. The native name for the country is Tsyosien, or Chosen. The Chinese call it Kao Lee. The Japanese know it as Korai, from which comes the English name.

The climate is cold, and in the summer rain is frequent. The mountain range running through it lengthwise is precipitous on the eastern side, but the gentle slope of the west side, well watered by rivers, is exceedingly fertile.

There are eight provinces, each with a Governor. The King's revenues, which are considerable, are obtained chiefly by the letting out of lands and from a tithe of all the produce. The King owns nearly all the landed property. The people are great sufferers through this system of land-grab. bing and tax-farming. Grinding poverty holds them in a relentless grasp.

Chemulpo—where the hostile troops are glaring at one another, and where a British warship and the U. S. Cruiser Baltimore have landed marines to protect the British and American Legations-is the port for the capita, Seoul, a walled town of 250,000 inhabitants, about twentyfive miles inland, and joined to its seaport by a badly made road. The harbor of Chemulpo is picturesque, but the water is very shallow, and the trade of Corea is so small that only about once a month can the small steamer of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha (a Japanese company) be seen in the bay. At Chemulpo there are three so-called European hotels, one kept by a Chinaman, the second by a Japanese, the third by a Hungarian. Seoul is the heart of Corea, and it is the one aim and object of every Corean to live there, for in the city every pleasure and vice is more easy of attainment, and the chances of getting favorite posts by judiscious flattering and canvassing of super. iors are multiplied. The contempt shown for provincial life by all officials and every Seoul-born man is most amusing, and those who are obliged to live in the country do nothing but lament their sad and uninteresting existence, and get together wealth as fast as they can, that they may return to the capital and its pleasures. The King is a puppet in the hands of his Court, and the country only preserves its independence through the jaalousy of the Chinese, Japanese and Russians, all of whom covet the land.

Corea is run by the Japanese and Chinese, and it is difficult to say which race

the inhabitants hate most: they are, however, more frightened of the Chinese, who always assume superior airs, as belonging to the dominant power.

Corea is rich in minerals; gold, silver, copper and coal are all common. The Government shows itself thoroughly alive to this fact-gold-mining is strictly prohibited, the permission to work silver mines have been revoked, the copper mines are neglected and the use of coal is confined to a few districts. There are a good many cattle, horses, dogs, pigs, sheep and goats. The sheep and goats are a royal monopoly, and are only used for sacrifice. The people eat the dogs.

The principal ministers are the Sengeitsieng (or Admirable Counsellor; a very useful official to have at hand), the Tsoaei-tsieng and the Ou ei-tsieng. There are also judges, whose main function is the free use, as an incentive towards veracity, of dislocation of legs, carding of calves with batons, cutting of thighs by continual friction with a cord or suspension by the arms. After this one is but faintly moved by the information that the usual form of execution is decapitation.

All officials are paid very high salaries. But as it is the first social law of Corea that when in office a man has to support all his relatives, the system seems to work out pretty even all round. The nature of the language can hardly case the perplexities that will be seen to beset the average Corean in discharging the duties of citizenship. True, there are only fourteen consonants, but the vowels muster eleven and the diphthongs thirteen. There are many Chinese words, but they submit to the Corean declension. The full sifinificance of this announcement is only realized when it is said that the noun has nine cases, and the verb affirmative, conditional, interogative, causative, honorific and other moods. Indeed, there is a special mood for each grade in the Corean table of precedence, which is say-

There are books, but in Chinese. The most popular is a sibylline one, which is prohibited, like all the other joys of life mainly for military and agrel defense by the Government. The editions de luxe are printed on marble interspersed with cushions of scarlet silk, but it may be doubted if this format lends itself to constant perusal, and it certainly is almost prohibitive of pocket use. Learning as in China, is held in high respect, but nobody learns particularly. Still there are competitive examinations for the Premiership and such public posts, and a man takes his degree by having his face sprinkled with Women hold a low position in Corean estimation, and count for little in the sight of the law. As, however, they are not held personally responsible for any of their actions, they presumably miss the favoring eye of the law less than

To the Chinese and Corean mind even approximate truth is absolutely useless and superfluous. The telegraph has penetrated to Corea, and a wire runs from Wan San, a seaport town on the east coast, to the capital, and to Chemulpo, on the west coast, but the railway has not been introduced.

It is the fate of weak eastern kingdoms to be the prey of their powerful neighbors. Corea has not only to endure the rivalries of China and Japan, but is threatened with the dangerous assistance of Russia. The Russians have long wanted an open Asiatic port to replace Vladivostock, which is ice-bound in winter time. Port Lazareff, or Gen-San, as the natives call it, about the middle of the east coast, would exactly suit them, but a Russian harbor there could hardly be accepted by Great Britain, considering that she gave up Port Hamilton on the condition of no Russian port being established in the Japanese

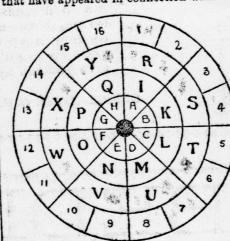

Civil war has gone on in Corea for three years. Ground down by official tyranny and extortion, the people rose in despair. A "National party"—the "Tong Hak"—took the lead and lately succeeded in securing a whole privince. Then Japan appeared upon the scene, sending troops to suppress the insurrection on the plea of protecting her subjects. The Mikado's Government next proposed to China to jointly reorganize the weak Corean administration after a more modern fashion, but China, as suzerain of Corea would brook no interference with her rights and bluntly refused. Now, therefore, the question resolves itself into a trial of military force between the rival

The assassination of Kim-ok-Kiun, if not the prime cause of the trouble between Japan and China, has had much to do with precipitating long-standing national enmities into active preparations for war. He had been a refugee in Japan since the Corean massacre of December, 1884, and was assassinated by order of the King of Corea about the 27th March last. His murderer was Sjyong-ou, a Corean of good position, well known in Paris, France, and it is said he was purchasing immunity from the Corean king for his complicity in the massacre of nine years ago.

HOW REPORTS ARE RECEIVED. Cipher Showing Shots on the Target as Cabled From Bisley. The Toronto Telegram has had very full reports showing the actual face of the target at Bisley Commons in England, when the Canadians were to the fore in the recent rifle matches. In speaking of the matter that paper says:

Some of the Telegram readers may have entertained a suspicion that the targets that have appeared in connection with the Bisley competition are "made up" in the editor's room. To dispel this illusion, if such exists, the method in vogue is here shown and explained. The figure of the target as divided in the cut was forwarded to the Telegram's special correspondent in England, and the key of course kept in the office in Toronto.

As Sergeant Jones fired his shots in any match, the special who is standing behind the firing point would record the shots as they are signalled on the target, and the score would be cabled "Sergt. Jones, A.C. K.E.D.O.S." The editor in Toronto with the key transcribes this on a blank target,

And the score appears 5, 5, 4, 5, 5, 4, 3-

It will be seen then that the whole business is very simple to practical men who understand the matter. Fortunately for the Canadian team, the two outer rings of the target were seldom used, all their shots being bulls eyes or inners.

If I Only Had Capital.

"If I only had capital," we heard a young man say, as he puffed away at a 10-cent cigar, "I would do something."

"If I only had capital," said another, as he walked away from a dram-shop, where he had just paid ten cents for a drink, "I would go into business."

The same remark might have been heard from the young man loafing on the street corner. Young man with the cigar, you are smoking away your capital. You from the dram-shop are drinking away yours and destroying your body at the same time, and you upon the street corner are wasting yours in idleness, and forming bad habits. Dimes makes dollars. Time is money. Don't wait for a fortune to begin with. If you had $10,000 a year, and spent it all, you would be poor still. Our men of power and influence did not start with fortunes. You, too, can make your mark if you will. But you must stop spending your money for what you don't need, and squandering your time in idle-

ON LEARNING TO SWIM.

EASIEST AND QUICKEST WAY FOR GIRLS TO ACQUIRE THE ART.

The Method Differs With Boys-How to Go About the Necessary Work-Hints That Will Help the Timid and Points That Should Always be Remembered.

The best way to teach a boy to swim is to toss him over the side of a boat with a rope about his waist, and let him plunge and tumble in the water until he catches the movements of the arms and legs that carries him lightly along the surface. A girl should be sent to swimming school if there is such a convenience in her town or city. Or, if at the lake or seaside this summer, many a girl who was never in the water before can quickly acquire this most graceful and serviceable accomplishment by a very simple method. A comfortable fiannel bathing suit and a strongarmed brother or other companion who swims well are the chief equipments for this practical beginning. Wade into the water until it is waist deep and then ask your brother to put one arm under your body about the waist line and place his other hand under your chin Then lift your feet off the bottom and lie in the attitude shown in the picture. Have never a bit of fear; you are well supported : your face is out of the water, and you will feel your body lifted up by it as though pushed from beneath. Now, with arms and legs stretched to their full length, make the first stroke. Draw your hands up to your chest, the finger tips nearly straight on either side from your body. Your legs meanwhile must also be drawn up until your toes almost touch, then stretched out quickly, the feet far apart. When your hands are drawn up against your chest, your knees must be simultaneously crooked to bring your feet together and arms and legs propelled through the water at the same moment. Go through these movements for at least ten minutes every day in the water, having someone to hold you up and resting for a bit every two or three minutes. By perhaps the fifth morning you will be able to be in the water with only your chin in

THE STROKE. your brother's hand. You are feeling by this time how buoyant the water is and you are beginning to trust it. After that you will feel yourself moving along an inch or two, and anyone's forefinger lightly pressing up will keep your head up at the level shown in the picture. About the tenth morning you will be able to dispense with even a helping finger and will swim a few feet at a time.

After that the old rule of practice making perfect must be followed in order that you may learn to swim twenty yards at a stretch, which is a fine feat for one's first summer in the water. To hasten your progress as a beginner

Aluminum Watches, The latest fad co the Parisian swells is the alumnium timepiece. They are very light in weight, but a trifle more than the works. The cases are in a dull black color -very effective. Some are open-faced, some are open in a small, three-quarterinch disk in the center, with small gilt hands on the black face of the watch, but they are in all sorts of inlaid decoration in colorings, but the best of it is they are very reasonable in price. It is the custom at the gay capital for the gentry to carry this timepiece in the right-hand trousers pocket along with the keys, coin, matchbox, and other parapher-nalia of the masculine pocket. It is, however, the wont of the owners to rush the hand down into the pocket with great show of devil-may-care and bring forth the watch, of which the material is unscratchable, from among the other articles, glance at the time, and carelessly replace it with an air of certainty in its infallibility. -Clothier and Furnisher.

THE LATE BISHOP HAWKINS

outside of his own communion and to many outside of his race he was a link that emphasized the truest brotherhood of man, irrespective of race, creed or color. Three times the writer met him, and the first instance, albeit it reflects no credit on the scribe, demonstrates the kindly heart and the Christ-like nature of the deceased. Never mind where it was. The scene was the African church in one of our thriving minor Ontario cities when "Pathfinder" was just out of his teens. Out of bravado he and the "boys" went to the church and he was to take part in the services. He did. His "prayer" was fervently attuned, was much more in earnest than he wished his companions to believe; but a member of the congregation discovered his hypocrisy and the fervent "Lord, bress de good white brother," which had echoed through the little building on that spring night in the early seventies, with hand-clapping accompaniment, was suddenly changed to indignation that was righteous. The late Bishop was presiding on the occasion, a fact which made less spiritual members of the church more wrothy, but he was equal to the calming of the storm.

"My friends," he quietly and in his quaint way said, "the erring brother has more need of our love than we thought. Let us pray.'

And one soul at least that night on departing from that little chapel felt the rebuke of "the woman of the town" to be just as she said as he passed out: "You're worse than I be."

Three years after and at a still later Emancipation Day celebration picnic I was introduced to the Bishop, and before beginning to speak on the cause of liberty as invited by the then joyous and free repre-If served iced, during warm sentatives of the down-trodden race, who first tasted liberty when they set foot en British soil, I discovered my identity and was made more of in his effusive way as one who had sinned but who had come right. I cannot close this sketch better than by quoting the Toronto Telegram's tribute to this large hearted and devoted Christian lover of his race. The Telegram said: "Old Bishop Hawkins had au individuality of his own. His race may have as able a son, and his church as devoted a servant, but the student of human nature will look vainly for another figure as interesting. The nobility of nature was in all these peculiarities of the eld man. His unstudied oddities were not the biggest part of his utterances. His language was simple and una-dorned, and in his sermons there was a great deal of thought to very little froth. A slave himself and a child of a slave, Walter Hawkins rose by the strength of wonderful natural gifts. Great is the difference between his position and the position from which distinguished white men have risen, but consider how much greater was the difference between the starting point of the slave and the starting point of the white man who rises to distinction. The old bishop was one of the slaves who 'followed the north star to Canada,' and never ceased to love this country. To his latest day he would sing -"I'm on my way to Canada," that song of the fugitive slave. As age came on him there were cracks in his voice and his notes quavered, but the earnestness of a personal experience was always in his song. He loved the name Britain with a fervor that born freeman cannot know. He first saw the Union Jack at the moment he was passing from bondage to liberty, and a ways loved the flag that made him free,"

PATHFINDER. Sewers as Chimneys. A suggestion made by Wigham Richard son for dealing with the smoke nuisance has at least the merits of novelty. Why not experiment upon a method of sucking the smoke from house and other fires into the sewers, he asks, and by so doing kill two birds with one stone? But it is a stone that might kill more birds than two. Mr. Richardson assumes that the effect of smoke on sewer gas would be to act as an antiseptic. He is, we believe, a practical man, and probably his suggestion may be feasible, but it has been objected that the risk of sewer gas entering into our habitations under such circumstances would be rather serious, and in that case any possible benefit would be counteracted by the annihilation through diphtheria and typhoid of the inhabitants of the district where the experiments were carried out. All things considered, this remedy would, perhaps, be more dangerous than the smoke nuisance itself,-Invention.

Au Orang-Outang's Nest.

The nest of an orang-outang has been placed in the natural history museum at Berlin, by Prof. E. Salenka, and Prof. Mobius has discussed it in the Berlin Academy. Prof. Salenka removed the nest himself from a tree in Borneo. The nest, which was situated about thirty feet from the ground, in the crotch of a tree forty. five feet high and about one foot in diameter, measures four and one half feet long, and one to two and one half feet wide, by about seven inches high. It is made of twenty to twenty five branches locked and wined together, and is large enough for a fully grown erang to lie in at full length, though this monkey probably always sleeps as it does in captivity, with legs drawn up and arms crossed over its body. The so-called nests of the orangs are not skillfully built huts or closed shelters for new-born young, but simply sleeping-places, as many careful observers of these monkeys in Borneo have established.

Motto for the Week:

Do the duty which lies nearest to you. Every duty which is bidden to wait returns with seven fresh duties at its back .- [Kingsley.

The address of Mr. Thomas W. Casey, of this office, will be Napanee, Ont., during the summer vacation and until further notice. Correspondents will please bear the change in mind.

Archdeacon Farrar, one of the ablest and best known of the present English writers on Biblical and temperance subjects, says: "Wine means primarily the juice, and often, as I believe, the unfermented juice of the grape; and that the drugged beers, and stupefying porters, and fortified ports, and plaistered sherries, and abominable draughts of liquid fire that are called "spirits" in England are no more the pure fruit of the vine than the mariner's compass is intended when we are told that St. Paul 'fetched a compass and came to Rhegium."

"No man liveth unto himself." The Bishop of London, in a recent able address at a meeting of the liberal profession gave this fine practical rendering: "If we so reconstituted society that we all emptied our cellars and turned total abstainers, we should do more for the poor man than with ten times the amount of charitable money-help we give them now in times of privation and distress. . . I know well that I should enjoy a glass of Madeira," said his lerdship, smiling, "but after all, the feeling of sacrifice peace and harmony throughout. Never soon passes away, while the good it does among your fellowmen remains. I do not hesitate to say that the sacrifice a man makes by becoming a total abstainer is better worth making at this moment than almost any other sacrifice | American visitors all went away filled

A Boston paper got the happy idea that the recent great "sympathetic" railway strike would about settle the "Coxey army" question, because the strikers were leaving enough places for all the members of that tramp army to fill. The trouble was, however, at the time that if any men attempted to fill them the strikers would create another "vacancy" at once by making way with have witnessed nearly the same thing. whoever undertook any such perilous experiment. That is just how such "strikes" become so interesting to the whole business community. People are willing to concede the right to men to refuse to work at reduced wages, but when it comes to admitting their right to terrorizing everybody else from working at such rates, then it becomes quite a different matter.

It begins to look as though the iron age was going to give way to an age of aluminum. That very light and uncorrodable metal is becoming cheap and the supply is inexhaustible, as article this morning, which I am inof its lightness and immunity from rust it will be extensively used in ship building and also in bridge building. It may yet be used extensively for roof and other small boats, easily handled, are now being constructed of it Probably it will be largely used in bicycle making and light carriages. Artificial limbs are also being manufactured of it. One of the last purposes the Province of Ontario could give mentioned is the printing of bank notes and the like, for which it is superior, in many respects, to paper.

One of the standing arguments with many against woman franchise is that a large number of them would not at his word. They supported him bevote anyway. That argument is a lieving him to be honest in the potwo-edged sword and will cut both ways. It applies, of course, to the one diocese alone, but other leading bishops in the same church are now awake to the importance of the evils of the drink traffic, and will, no doubt, take similar action. It is now becoming a trite saying that the liquor traffic will end whenever the churches rise up against it. The indications are that the time is hastening.

The Toronto Evening Star, which is very favorable to the prohibition movement, says: "The News instances the fact that fraternal orders are shutting out liquor dealers, and Mgr. Satolli favors the suppression of Catholic societies among whose officers are liquor men, as evidence that the day is approaching when the traffic will be completely outlawed. That may be true, but all the breweries of Canada are more than keeping pace with the population, and the same is, of course, true of other countries. Only by the prohibition of the manufacture and sale will the liquor traffic be stamped

The convention of the Baptist Young People's Union of America, held in Toronto last week, was, all in all, the most successful gathering of that kind ever held in Canada. Over 5,000 delegates were present, representing about twenty States and nearly all the Provinces of Canada, from Nova Scotia to Texas and from North Dakota to Florida. Everything was were as many representative people gathered on our soil before for the same length of time, and considering so many questions with so little discord of sentiment of any kind. It is predicted that, because ferring to the recent Provincial election you make the statement that "in the main there was no prohibition vote for the Government." In another part of the same article are these words, "The liquor men, naturally covering for houses. Light canoes enough, voted for their business; the Prohibitionists for their party." You admit that this was not "universally true," but you leave the impression that it was the general condition of Nearly any working Prohibitionist in you the names of many earnest temperance men, formerly Conservatives, who in the recent contest voted for the Government candidates because of the definite and straightforward pledge that Sir Oliver Mowat had given in regard to prohibition. They took him sition he took, and sincere in his determination to act accordingly. They have seen no reason to change their views. They still look to Sir Oliver Mowat to carry out his promise. A fully 40 per cent of them did few strong partisans have unreasonably expressed doubt as to Sir Oliver efore qualify themselves to Mowat's sincerity. They are equally unjust with those who sweepingly denounce Prohibitionists as partisans first and not true to their principles.

> You argue that the liquor men to a large extent voted against the Government. Yet that Government came out of the campaign with flying colors. Why? Largely because temperance men accepted the issue and voted with the Liberal party. To infer from a few isolated cases that they did otherwise is unjust to the thousands who that time. Two and a half per cent of the prohibition voters is a large estimate of the proportion who are Royal Templars. Even for that 2½ per cent the Templar did not speak, for it is a well-known fact that a great many Royal Templars were dissatisfied with the Templar's course in the late election. It is true there may have been exceptional cases where the return of the Liberal candidate would not have been an addition to the temperance sentiment or his party in the House, and conscientious Prohibitionists may have been influenced by this fact to withhold their support from such candidates. Such cases were exceptional. As a rule temperance leaders stood by the Liberal candidates. The Liberal party won. It is not wise for the victors to discredit the value of the support of their allies. The best Prohibitionists of Ontario were Sir Oliver Mowat's he would have suffered a crushing defeat. Let the facts be known. The lesson from them is a wholesome one. It is a lesson to political leaders that coming out fearlessly and definitely for moral reform is not only right action but wise policy.

HORNBY, HALTON COUNTY-Hornby Division was instituted about four years ago with 25 charter members, a number of whom had been good workers in "Harvest Home" Division, in whose success we have always taken a deep interest. There has been a gradual and healthy increase in the membership and we now number 140. We have an excellent staff of officers, about every one of whom words of commendation may be well spoken. Robert Pewtress is W. P.; Maggie Preston, W. Chaplain; Lizzie Coulson, R. S. We have a good orchestra and the music adds much to the attractiveness of our meetings. We have an excellent organ. Our orchestra consists of four violins and a bass violin, played by the Robinson brothers and Shanks. There services are often sought after for other entertainments. Ida Wigglesworth presides at the organ and with excellent skill. Our members attend well, some of them coming miles to do so, and are seldom or never absent. We have excellent and interesting debates. Maggie Coulson, agent for the HOME GUARD, is doing what she can to add to the circulation of that excellent paper.

LOWVILLE, HALTON COUNTY .-Lowville Division has been making healthy progress since the resuscitation some months ago. We have entered upon the second quarter of its new career with good prospects of success. Joseph Nicholson is W.P. and Grace Langton, R.S. Our membership is not as large as in the old time days of the division, but it consists of welltried material. Our experience has been the need of better tests of full membership and some system of degrees to qualify for all the full rights of membership, and especially for the holding of the most important offices. The admission at once of all sorts of Edward Island, at Charlotteto persons, of all ages and states of experience, or lack of it, making all such equal owners and equally qualified for every position is open to such serious objections and dangers as results, no doubt, in discouragement and disaster in many instances. Traveling down the Mississippi the bishop, who was evidently taking a dose of his own mixture, as given under No. 2, noticed upon the water a long, black object. It was at some distance and appeared to wander around in an erratic and aimless manner-now making for the shore and then heading in any public project has been an opposite direction. A few minutes perly wound up unless a procession later and another black object, slightly larger to his vision, came in sight. This latter kept close to shore and skirted along its uneven edges with a method that aroused the spectator's curiosity. Inquiry of the captain and a glimpse through his field glass revealed the fact that the first was a large log, and the second a very small black tug, used to run between shore settlements.

Teach Tom to be a tug, and not a log; was the evident moral of this incident. Let him start out on life's sea determined to make it subserve his purposes, not to be upon its surface as only a bit of helpless drift-wood.

We have added, "Indeed, I sometimes wonder not read God's Word as we should if we have not yet found our commission so cold and my prayers receive few The Templar seemed to think that in it. Just take one passage—the seventeenth verse of the 22nd of Revelations—"The Spirit and the Bride say come, and let him that heareth say come, and let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will let him take of the water of life freely." Here we are told of three agencies empowered to issue the Gospel invitation-"The Holy Ghost," "the Bride" and "him that heareth." Now, the theologians are not agreed as to how much ground this word "bride" may cover. Some say it means all believers. Others contend that it refers only to the inner circle—those who live peculiarly near the Savior. We will let the doctor of divinity settle that point, for the third commission at least, includes us all. Jesus—for these words are Christ's own-rings out this parting command to the multitude that had heard, or would hear the glad news of Savior from sin-"let him that heareth say come." Have you heard? Then you are commanded to spread the news.

One of these you will find in Mark chap. xiii., verse 34.

> and read a chapter out of the Book and say to yourself: "Those are wonderful words, and yet somehow they don't seem to take hold of me!" But some day as you read the spirit of God flashes out of those texts into your heart and it is yours forever. This one came so to me. Jesus was trying to prepare his deciples for the parting that was so near at hand, and to point out to them that his going away was not the end, but the beginning of all left his house and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch." back to his Father, leaving his house, the new-born church, behind. you by the King himself. Have you found that work? Perhaps most of you have and these words are to you, as they were to me, just a precious assurance that the call you heard and followed was from the Master. And when the tempter gets jealous for God's glory, and creeping into the vineyard whispers into the ear of some tired or discouraged worker, "Have you any right here anyway? Are you fit to help another?" he can answer, "I have a right to labor; the householder didn't engage me that I might sit down in a fence corner and wait for sun-down, but he has given me my work." What will this personal work do for us as Christians?

How Hetty Higden Helped.

"I don't understand it, wife," sighed the minister, as he sank wearily into an easy chair, after his morning sermon. "The church was crowded as usual this morning, but in spite of my earnest appeal for closer acquaintance and more hospitality in the church, immediately after the benediction the congregation hurried out as if there were no such thing as friendliness or hospitality or my appeal for both. I suppose I ought not to complain for I never met a more generous people. They help willingly toward any good cause and always pay my salary. They are cordial enough in their homes, but they freeze when they come inside those walls. What can it be? Is it the church or the pastor?"

"I'm sure it isn't you, dear," soothed his wife. "Besides, I don't believe that our congregation is more so than any other city church."

"Oh, yes, it is," said he. "This morning I looked in vain to see the Barnhams speak to the Whithams, or the Ottars speak to the Fords, or the to their pew. It must have been my Fords shake hands with those new people who have taken the pew next to theirs. Why! If that whole congregation had been congerled to blocks of ice there could have been no less

The next Sunday he preached from the text: "Bear ye one another's burdens," and pleaded again for a closer friendship among the members on Hetty's banner. Sometimes her so earnestly that at least one hearer went out stirred with a determination to help the minister all she could.

The more she thought about it the more her determination grew. Her ace became so earnest with the thought, that her rosy lips were compressed and every freckle on the stubby nose stood out prominently. She gave the lock of red hair that strayed across her forehead a sharp twitch, which process seemed to open the floodgates of speech: "See if I don't do it another Sunday! The idea of you, Hetty Higden, calling yourself a the pastor in every way you could, standing there selfishly letting your pride, that you call bashfulness, rule you and stand in the way of your doing your duty! Now you've got to go and shake hands with those folks and stop thinking yourself too good !"

Hetty was only a little, unfashionlittle jacket and a hat that had done several seasons service never attracted the least bit of attention in the fashionable throng; nor did this disturb her mind, for her ideas of the world were as yet limited to "mother's" opinion.

Her parents were devout Scotch people, who were still old-fashioned enough to believe in bringing up their children in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord," and if they couldn't afford a seat among the select, they must still sit under the "preached word" if they had to resort to the doorstep. So they sat in the humblest seat in church. Each Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Higden marshaled in a seat full of bright, rugged children, all shining and clean. Hetty was the eldest and sat between restless Tom and wriggling Peter, and proved a sort of safety valve for them.

She had queer ways of wondering at things, and this morning she wondered why the Murdstons swept into their pew and looked neither to the right nor the left, and did not speak to the Brownells, who sat just behind them, or why the Amhersts sat alone in their front pew when the old couple who church, or why Mrs. Fordam came so late. From her unfashionable perch Hetty saw all the great ones sweep into church and out again with merely a cold bow here and there. She had often noticed the minister looked a little sad as the great audience passed coldly out. The yearning in his face touched her. When Hetty told her answered: "Be sure you are in earnest, to get stagnated by the process. child; that only succeeds."

Of course many went by Hetty, but she succeeded in giving a friendly grasp to many who had never seen her before and introduced them here and there to the one next. Sometimes these introductions occurred between persons who had met the night before at a reception or banquet or had known each other always. It was a little amusing, but Hetty was innocent that she had disturbed the conventional! It was enough for her simple good will if they only seemed glad to meet. When the church was well emptied Hetty stood flushed for a moment, then slipped out like the modest little lass that she was.

That day at the dinner table Mr. Marvel said: "Wife, I guess your prophecy has come true. Why, somehow, people seemed to see each other a little today. I saw Mrs. Richman shake hands with a dozen, and the Amhersts told the usher to bring strangers rousing sermons."

"I never heard you preach better," said his wife. "I am sure it was!"

And so it was, but through a most unknown medium. Each Sabbath Hetty took her post. People began to look for the queer little woman with her short jacket surmounted by a rosy face. Triumph did not always perch brave heart went down to her toes when the haughty Mrs. Highmind swept past her, almost over her, and looked with disdain upon the plump, red hand held out in greeting, when just behind her followed Mrs. Proudfoot, who aped Mrs. Highmind-unless a greater magnet appeared; but when Mrs. Rockford, the wealthiest of "the four hundred," caught Hetty's hand, and putting her arm about her, kissed the sweet, plain face and called her "my dear," Mrs. Proudfoot wavered between the two magnets for a moment, then gave Hetty her cold I am for the open meadows, Christian, and after your pledge to help finger tips and swept on, wondering what the great Mrs. Rockford found to admire in the queer little creature.

Not that it had more money back of it to pay larger salaries or give to missions in greater sums; but that the men and women, whether in silk or cotton, came to know and trust one another. The church became a place where tired people went to rest and get refreshed spiritually and physically. Rock Street Church was fulfilling its mission because one brave spirit dared to do what seemed right even though it was very unconventional. - Mary J. Hesse in Union Signal.

NEW LOUD-SPEAKING TELEPHONE. -The editors of the London Electrical Review, May 25, say that they have personally used and inspected the new Graham telephones, and that no description can do them justice. They believe that the instrument will create a sensation and revolutionize all present systems. The articulation is perfect and the loudness wonderful, no call bell being required, as the talking can be heard plainly all over the room.

CURE OF LOCKJAW.—The plan of curing a germ-disease by the injection of serum from animals that have been rendered immune to the disease, has been referred to before in this column. It is meeting with great success, of which an instance is the cure of a bad case of lockjaw by injecting serum from a horse and a dog, reported by two Italians, Giusti and Bonaiuti, in the Gazette degli Ospitalia, May 12. The entire amount of immune cerum used was twenty cubic centimeters. A remarkable feature of the case was the rapid success of the specefic treatment after the complete failure of ordinary measures.

AMMONIA MOTOR FOR STREET Cars-An ammonia motor-car recently built in New York was given a trial on the afternoon of June 19. The car is about the size of an ordinary horse-car or trolley-car, and about onehalf of its space is occupied by the motor. The general principle of the motor is well known. A reservoir, which is surrounded by a tank filled with hot water, is charged with dry ammonia gas under pressure. From the reservoir, the gas passes into the cylinder, where it acts on the piston expansively, precisely as steam does. The exhaust from the cylinder is conveyed into the water-tank, where the ammonia is condensed, and can afterwards be recovered, the inventors claim, with very small loss. In the trial, the reservoir was charged until the pressure was about 150 pounds, and the car was run about a mile backward and forward before the pressure ran down to 100 pounds. The Engineering and Mining Journal, June 23, in reporting this trial, says that where the circumstances are such that the ammonia can be cheaply made and supplied, the system could be well applied. It can be used in cities where a steam motor would not be permitted, and it presents the advantage which any separate motor does over an electric or cable system. where a failure at the cetral powerhouse will stop the entire system, The motor in question had several objectionable features; but with a better design of engine, and with cheap ammonia the motor may be able in many places to compete successfully with the electric road.

New Zealand's Experiment.

To reassure those who base their objections to woman suffrage on fears of the result, may I be permitted, through your columns, to quote from a recent interview with the Rt. Hon. Sir George Grey, K.C.B., now visiting England, by the representative of the Illustrated London News, May 26, 1894?

I call myself a Conservative. Old machinery won't drive a new world; the old changes and must be replaced. Take the woman's vote, which is now a hard and fast and excellent fact in New Zealand. You'll have it in England, by-and-bye, but for the present you are losing half the intellect of the nation, and more, I make bold to say,

The Lessons of Sickness. We are constantly hearing of the discipline of sickness. The spectator, severe illness of his life, is inclined to doubt whether the sickness from which patients recover, ordinarily teaches any lessons either in patience or selfrestraint that are worth learning. He is rather inclined to believe with Dr. Weir Mitchell, who from his large experience felt justified in saying, I have seen a few people who were ennobled by long sickness, but far more often the result is to cultivate self-love and selfishness, and to take away by slow degrees the healthy mastery which every human being should retain over her own emotions and wants." Dr. Mitchell was writing about women, but his remark is every bit as applicable to men. If really ill people are much more so, for they exert pretty nearly all of their fresh strength to tyrannize over those who during the illness have been all attention and selfsacrifie. And the egotism of the convalescent! It is something colossal. It is the biggest thing about him, and pretty much all that there is to him. The tender solicitude of family and friends for his welfare and the condition of his health confirms the convalescent in his use of a false personal standard, and he thinks of himself, his aches and his pains, and the dangers he has passed in an entirely false proportion, and magnifies them far beyond their actual importance. And, what is more, he is ever ready to talk of these things, with an egotistic particularity of description that would shame a modest healthy man out of countenance of himself. Distributing Educative Literature.

In the important matter of educating the public mind up to the proper standard on the temperance and prohibition questions the importance of the judicious distribution of the right kinds of literature can not be overestimated. A great deal more thorough educative work is yet needed or very successful election campaigns need not be looked for. We are bound to say that a good deal of the education of today of the ordinary temperance sermons and lec tures is of a very superficial character. battle with the devil for that lad's soul. The teachers themselves have need to be taught, in many cases at least Near New York a society has been established for the distribution good attractive enough. The devil of literature. Every member agrees to distribute each three months at least 12 cents worth of literature. In this way a few persons in each community would do a great deal of judicious educating. Could not some such plan be adopted among ourselves? Not only should societies and temperance organizations do their work, but individuals should do their share also, as individuals. How can that be better done than the judicious distribution of a clean and interesting paper, like the Home Guard, containing every week suitable matter in various phases of these great reforms and also much next best to girls and sometimes even other interesting reading such as most virtuoso, with a smile, "better that a little better when they are especially people will be glad to see? For such Temperance work in Canada, and in Ontario especially, has now reached the stage where some immediate extra indicious work will accomplish such results as never before, and where the dack of such work will prove very unfortunate. The campaign of the coming fall and winter should be a practical and earnest one. An occasional meeting here and there with an old time story or amusing anecdote will not touch the case. Public opinion must needs be more thoroughly edurated regarding the economic importance of the great prohibition movement-that it pays the taxpayers, outside of all moral considerations, to get and of the drink traffic as speedily as possible; that the burdens of the drink traffic, and the dangers too, lie at the doors of the abstainers as well as of those who drink; that the peace and safety of the community demands the abolition of the drink traffic, and that nothing short of that will accomplish the work.

The people have not been at all as well educated regarding these important points as they should be. Our decided conviction is that such an education will be necessary before efficient prohibition laws are enacted and well enforced. Educate the great mass of the electors that they cannot afford to bear the great extra taxes and be exposed to the great extra dangers because of the existence of the drink traffic, and there is little fear but the politicians will wheel into line pretty fast. They trim their sails to the direction of public opinion very readily. There must be bountiful sowing before we can expect to reap bountifully. So far temperance talk has been too much on mere sentimental lines and too little on the lines that appeal to every citizen's self interest, whether an abstainer or not.

Whoever read intelligently the newspaper reports of the opinions given before the Royal Commission a few months ago must have been greatly struck with the fact that a very Large number of prominent men in society, including numbers popular ministers, leading officeholders and others, have even yet very imperiect ideas regarding even the nature and importance of a prohibition law. Some of them mean well, but they need more teaching. Their idea seems to be that it is just a plan of preventing drinkers from getting drunk, and outside of that few have any interest in it—that the people who stake to warrant them interfering with the personal liberty of those who do. It hardly seems to have occurred to many such that the burdens of pauperism, crime, insanity and misery profall on the entire community, whether they ever drink at all or not, that the many dangers because of drunkenness are the dangers of all, and therefore all have a direct interest in removing the sources of the evils they must meeds confront.

Within a few months the question of constitutional jurisdiction will be settled by the courts, and our Provincial Legislature will know just how far it can go in the matter of legislation. The action of the Legislature then state of public opinion. Any reaction from the state of feeling at the much more harm than good. plebiscite will surely tell when the time for legislative action really comes.

In all probability some time next year the Dominion elections will take place. Already the politicians are making ready for that great contest. The success of the prohibitionists at those elections will largely depend on the activity in rousing public opinion before that time. The campaigns of the coming fall and winter will largely decide matters of legislation both in our Provincial and Dominion Parliaments. They should not be confined prohibition." A "knee deep of literature" campaign is needed, with good organizations and such platform and pulpit work as will well convince the people that the movement is not one of "mere sentiment," but one of real practical and economic importance to every elector. Arrangements should at once begin for a most thorough and effective educational campaign. T. W. C.

Sunday School Teaching.

We take the following from the Christian Guardian, which is well worthy of the serious consideration of all concerned. In addition to the suggestions it contains we would like to suggest also that neat and attractive pledge rolls should be hung in every school, signed by the children themselves, that they may know are permanent records of their pledges. Also that certificates of the same, neatly prepared for preservation, shall be given out. These are supplied in some places.

Our contemporary says: "The subject of temperance should be more frequently presented in our Sunday schools. The children should be made familiar with the evils of intemperance and the duty of abstinence. We are in danger of thinking that our children do not need to be warned unsatisfactory enforcement of the law this side of human affairs has not been Little Minister," Mr. J. M. Mistaken Zeal.

According to the Templar, the class of Advanced Prohibitionists of which it claims to be the exponent resolved not to support the election of any candidate during the late Provincial campaign unless "he publicly indorsed" Sir Oliver's prohibition platform, no matter how willing he might be to give private assurances. If we understand its position this is the very reason it refused to help the election of either Liberal candidate in Hamilton, though both were opposed by anti-teetotalers and anti-prohibitionists, and though both were avowed supporters of the Mowat Government.

"Masterly inactivity" was the only true policy under such circumstances, according to the ideas of the Templar. The candidates might be personal temperance men, and might be personally favorable to prohibition, and might be well known supporters of the Mowat Government, but if there was a shrinking from an "open avowal" of prohibition principles, and some antis were induced to support them on that account, it was then clearly the duty of all "true Prohibitionists" to leave them severely alone, no matter how unfit and objectionable the opposing candidates may have been.

The liquor interests took an entirely different course, however. Their policy was to approach candidates privately, and not on the public platform. Where they could obtain a satisfactory "avowal" of any such that, if elected, they would oppose prohibition, they were given to understand that no "open avowal" was needed at all, but, on the other hand, they were at perfect liberty to say nothing about it, but to "scoop in" just as many temperance voters as possible. They now claim, and very correctly, too, no do not drink have too little interest at doubt, that by such a policy they secured the election of a number of "reliables" whom any "open avowal" would have surely defeated.

The chances are that the anti duced by the drink traffic inevitably the two. Time will tell. As it is, a terest. good many prohibition electors who had had considerable previous election experience were well convinced that the measure in the House of Reprethe "open avowal" policy was a big mistake. They are of that opinion still. It is one thing to be very logical, and to "stand up for principle regardless of consequences," and it is often quite another thing to be successful in electing your men. We have a number of able and worthy Prohibitionists who mean well, but who never succeed in being elected, and never will, because will then be much influenced by the they lack gumption. About Prohibition Plebiscites.

Both political parties, it seems, are now advocating more plebiscites on the prohibition question. The Globe, on Saturday last, in enumerating the planks of the Liberal party, closes with this: "A plebiscite on the question of nounces the platform of a plebiscite to indorse prohibition after it has been passed by the Legislature. Is not the plebiscite business on the prohibition question being a little overdone? It looks very much as though there is an amount of caution entirely unusual in making doubly sure that there shall be no > legislation in advance of public opinion. Besides all this the Dominion Parliament has, first and last, voted about $130,000 of the public funds for that Royal Commission, largely to ascertain the drift of public opinion on the feasibility and desirability of prohibition, and three years have been spent in "inquiries." That expensive report has not yet come to light, but even in advance of it leading party men on both sides, who seldom unite on any question, chime in together for still further votes to ascertain what public opinion may be!

Is there any wonder a good many people who want to see definite action with the least possible delay are getting discouraged with some legislators and disgusted with others? T. W. C.

Satolli's Decision

Cause of Temperance to be Benefited Greatly by the Ruling of the Pope's Representative.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The decision of Archbishop Satolli, approving of the stand taken by Bishop Watterson, of Columbus, O., on the liquor question, has fallen like a bombshell among the liquor dealers of this city. The decision is, in effect, that Bishop Watterson was right when he said that no liquor dealer in his diocese could be a member of any Catholic society; that no good Catholic should have any connection with the manufacture or sale of liquor, and that the last rites of the church should be denied to all tion who abuse the liquor traffic.

In the city of New York there are hundreds of Catholics engaged in the liquor business who heretofore never considered themselves under the ban of the church. They scarcely know what to make of the decision, and many of them were up at the archepiscopal residence to-day to find out. The archbishop is not in town, however, nor is the vicar-general, Mgr. Farley.

The Rev. Father Lavelle, rector of the cathedral parish, a member of the archbishop's council and who generally assumes direction in the absence of his superior, wrote the following reply as to what he thought of the papal delegate's opinion:

"The decision seems to be on the right of the Bishop of Columbus, or of any other bishop, to pass laws similar to those enacted by Mgr. Watterson in his pastoral letter of last Lent. The decision not only affirms the aforesaid right, but commends the spirit whereby it is animated. I don't think it is meant to be mandatory for the country at large. But it manifests clearly the mind of the church to promote the virtue of temperance, and to repress as much as may be the many frightful excesses and abuses connected with the liquor traffic. "I do not care to New Zealand Woman Suffrage. be quoted on the main question further than that," he said. "As to its application locally, I do not think any hard and fast rules will be laid down. The decision was, of course, intended for a diocese whose conditions necessarily are much different from ours. I want it understood, however, that the Catholic Church, during the past twenty years or so has made every effort to suppress the liquor traffic in big moral effect at least. The Rev. Alex. P. Doyle, general secretary of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America, said the effect would be most far-reaching. He thought the decision of Archbishop Satolli authoritative, and that there could be no mistaking its utterance. He thought the cause of temperance would be aided materially.

The Boston school committee is discussing the question of discarding sloping writing in the public schools. It is said that in Cambridge the sloping system has been discarded for the verticle. In the office of the Registry of Deeds no copyist is employed who does not use the upright style of writing, and the Boston Transcript asks why the children should not be taught to use that style of penmanship which is of most value in commercial work. The school comsister, wife, mother, daughter, or some mittee is discussing the matter from a hygienic standpoint. It is claimed by the advocates of the vertical writing that the children sit more upright, and that there is less strain on the eyes. The Boston schools have also dispensed with the written examinations.

The Black Plague.

A correspondent in Shanghai sends the following translation of an article from the Senpao, Shanghai:

"We have spoken in several issues of the ravages of the pestilence in Kwangtung Province. For 100 years there have not been so many deaths during a single pestilence. It has entered even into official residences and attacked both civil and military officials, and their servants, generally from other places, are fleeing to their nomes. Charitable institutions are those liquor dealers within his jurisdic- giving coffins, and within three months have distributed several thousands, one institution alone giving over 1,ooo. The people who have bought coffins are without number - altogether, so far, over 10,000 persons have died of the plague. Still the ravages of the pestilence are worse day by day. The coffins of the charity homes are used up, given all away, and now matting has to be used to wrap up the dead bodies (a deep missortune from a Chinese point of view). As to the nature of the disease, it begins with a rising about the size of a plum at the largest, or a bean at the smallest, very painful, accompanied by a pain in the stomach. In a little while, unconsciousness or deliriousness follows, and medicine is unavailing. The only remedy is when the disease is taken at its beginning needles inserted in the patient's body in several places, and on the needle is burned moxa made from mugwort. This seems to be a relief. The disease is called the 'Serpent Mark.' The cause seems to be atmospheric. There was one noted physician successful with the disease, but his patients, after he had made them well, again took the disease and died. This physician named Li - gave it up, saying: 'Heaven, not man, can control this pestilence,' and he-not a Kwangtung man—has returned to his home. The

The Union Ibero Americana, Madrid, describes the finds in this new Pompeii as follows:

"Already there has been discovered in different places, at a depth varying between fifteen and twenty feet, a great quantity of domestic utensils, such as ancient pottery and arms. The earthenware is chiseled with care and painted in brilliant colors. There is also some delicately made glassware. Everything seems to be well preserved, especially the vats and cooking utensils. The finds next include hammers, swords, clubs and daggers of flint, well sharpened and carefully made.

A great number of stone idols have also been discovered, nor is jewelry wanting, especially pearls and turquoises. Some of the glass bears inscriptions put on with very brilliant colors; they look, in fact, as if they had only recently left the hands of the artist. Among the statues is one of large proportions. It represents a reclining figure and is chiseled out of a black rock, apparently basalt. The face and beard of this statue are exehigh state of culture in the artist. The figure is that of a soldier wearing a wonder is that all this has been executed with stone tools only, for, as yet, no trace of metal tools has been dis. covered. The Indians who made these articles belonged to the stone period. Measurements taken of some skeletons prove this pre-historic race to have been very tall, the average height being seven feet."- Translated for the Literary Digest.

The First Claimants.

Mrs. Russell Sage, in presiding over meeting held at her house, referred to the 27th chapter of Numbers as containing the first mention of woman's rights. "In that chapter," she said, "the daughters of Zelophehad came to Moses and told him how their father had died without any sons, and all the property was to be given to his brothers; and they asked for a share. You would think Moses could have decided easily enough, but he couldn't; so he took it to the Lord. And what did the Lord say? Why, he said, 'Give the women their rights.' And Moses did."

In the United States Senate, recently during the progress of the discussion of the Revenue Bill, Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, replying to a speech of Senator Peffer, of Kansas, against the undue accumulation of wealth in the hands of the few, said:

Mr. President, there is more than $1,000,000,000 a year expended in this country for the single articles of beer and whisky alone. Adding to that imported liquors, adding to that several hundred million of dollars expended for tobacco, and you have probably an expenditure of $1,500,-000,000 or $2,000,000,000 annually in this country for those things, which if not vices are at least self-indulgences. I think before you distribute the property of the rich man, man for man, among the people, you want to know some way by which you can distinguish between the man who has earned the money and has laid it up, as these men have in their saving banks, and the other man who has earned his money and might have it if he chose to lay it up, but has preferred to spend it in whisky and in tobacco.-National Temperance Advocate.

We Are Not Our Own.

The claim of God to Christ's service is the claim that rests upon us all. The Lord did not die to give us an opportunity for self-seeking. We are not here on a vacation from God. He sends every man of wealth forth to be a savior of his fellow-men; and the business man who fails to be a little Christ to the world has made a disastrous and irreparable business failure. A man of business has no more right to make personal profit the supreme purpose of his store, his shop, his capital, his factory, his railway, than Jesus had to work miracles for personal profit. We have no more moral right than our Lord to direct our social, domestic, or financial affairs for personal ends. The Christian has no more right to an unconsecrated horse or house or dress than Christ to an unconsecrated cross. We are not our own; we are bought with a price; and nothing short of an unreserved surrender of self interest to God's interest in humanity is moral or just. Not to be self-sacrificing in other's service is injustice. To be unloving, even the unlovable, is to be ungodly, - Rev. George D. Herron.

that of the monument at Washington.

calculably greater than the monu-ments of the Egyptian kings. I visited it where it runs through the Mongolian mountains, about ninety miles from the city of Peking, and I found there an even more solid structure than that at Shan Hai Ewan, on the edge of the sea. It begins here at the head of the Gulf of Pechili and runs up and down the mountains, clear across the boundary of northern China, separating the country from its vast tributary provinces of Mongolia and Manchuria, till it reaches the great desert of Gobi. above the Thibet. It is more than 1,200 miles long in a straight line, and with its windings up the hill and down the valleys it measures all told a distance of more than 1,500 miles. This wall is about thirty feet in height, or as tall as a three-story city house. Its width at the points where I have visited it ranges from fifteen to thirty feet. The average parlor is not more than fifteen feet wide, and if you will imagine a solid block of three-story houses fifteen feet deep, built across the United States from New York to Omaha you can get a faint idea of the size of this wall.

The great wall of China is built right over the mountains. It climbs up crags so steep that the bricks had, it is said, to be carried on the backs of goats. It crosses peaks taller than the Alleghany Mountains, and at one point goes over one which is 5.000 feet above the sea. A large part of it has a foundation of granite blocks from two and a half to four feet thick, and the base of the wall is ten feet wider than the top. The bricks of which it is made weigh from forty to sixty pounds, or as much as a 6-year-old boy, and the clay for these bricks had to be transported long distances from the interior at some portions of the wall. These bricks are of a slate color. According to measurement they are fifteen inches long.

nine inches wide and about five inches thick. They are put together in a solid masonry by means of lime mortar, and they are built up from the foundation in two walls, each about three feet thick, running parallel with each other, the space between being filled with earth and stone well rammed down. The top of the wall is paved with these bricks, and its average width is about fifteen feet. It is everywhere so wide that two two-horse wagon loads of hay could be driven along it and the hubs of the two teams would not touch. Six horses abreast could be easily driven upon its paved highway, and on each side of the road along its whole 1,500 miles of length there is a brick crenellated wall as high as your head, which would prevent them falling off in case of a stampede. At short intervals the wall is crowned by great two and three-story towers, made of these big blue bricks, and at the passes in the mountains there are arched gates of stone, some of which are beautifully carved. Here and there the wall is double, a second wall running over the country some distance back from the first, and on the peaks near it there are often watch towers, in which the guards stood in times past and warned

Much of the great wall is still in perfect condition. Standing upon it at the city of Shan Hai Kwan we could see it climbing up the Manchurian mountains, jumping the gorges and scaling the peaks. Gray with its life of twenty centuries, it seemed to grasp the earth of the present with its mighty hand, and where it crosses the mountains it seemed as imperishable as the hills whose hoary brows it crowned. At other places, however, time has gained the mastery, and nearest the railroad there is a breach at least 100 feet wide, and one side of the wall where it bounds the city of thrown. Its sides are covered with moss.

and the grass has grown upon its pavements. No arches now guard it, and it only remains as a monument of the hundreds of thousands of almond-eyed men who 2,000 years ago thus sought to protect their homes and those of their descendants from the savages of the north for all time to come. No one can stand upon its ramparts and not be impressed with the strength of this great Chinese nation. Seventeen hundred years before America was discovered;

at a time when our blue-blooded ancestors, half naked and altogether savage, were wandering through the wilds of Germany,

France and England, when Rome was still a republic, fighting her last battles with the Carthaginians; two hundred years before Christ was born these same Chinese people built this mighty wall. Their history states that it required an army of 300,000 men to protect the builders, and millions must have been employed in the undertaking. I have seen enough of the building of railroads and other works in China during my present tour to understand how it was probably constructed. There was no machinery used, and few cattle and horses. Every foot of it was built by man, and in its

1,500 miles of mountain climbing there are to-day bottled up within this structure the vital force of millions of the Chinese of the past, a monument to the thought that while man dies his work remains, as does the hand that carved the Venus di Medici

In the vice regal special train running through North China, from Shan Hai Kwan to Tien-Tsin—by railroad to the great wall of China. On a special train through some of the least known parts of the Chinese empire. Dashing along at the rate of forty miles an hour through the plains of North China. The steam demon of the present cutting his way into the most famous vestiges of the celestial past. These are some of the wonders of the journey I am now making over the new imperial road of this vast empire in company with the party of ex Secretary Foster in the private car of China's most powerful statesman and ruler, Li Hung Chang. We have traveled already nearly 200 miles through the agricultural and mining distriets of this part of China and have planted ourselves on the bor-ders of Manchuria. We left the great trading city of Tien Tsin, and its million almond-eyed people, in the early morning of two days ago, and plowed our way through tens of thousands of brown grave mounds to the eastward. We passed the myriad huts of the city of Tong Ku, at the mouth of the Peiho river, and turned to the north almost under the shadow of the frowning battlements and of the Krupp and Armstrong guns of the Taku forts. We stood on the platform and saw the scores of queer windmills which with their square white wings pump the brine of the Yellow Sea into the salt pools of the government reservoirs, and watched the gangs of yellow coolies cutting down the mountains of salt and loading it for Tien-Tsin, whence it will be shipped off at high prices as a government monopoly for the people of the interior. We rode for an hour over salt marshes, upon which Mongolian ponies, red cattle and donkeys grazed, and then entered the rich gardens of the great plain. Here every inch was cultivated, and the farmers were everywhere laboring in the fields. We saw the wheat planted in rows, two feet apart, springing from the soil in its luxuriant green dress of the early spring, and could note the curious methods of work of these the best farmers of the world. The crops are planted in small tracts, and everything is cultivated with the hoe and the plow. There is no sowing of grain as with us, and the rows of wheat, corn and millet are weeded and fed with manure.

The trip from Tong Shan to the wall has been over the new government railroad, and our special train is the first of the kind which has gone ever it. The line itself has only been opened to traffic for a few days and this will be the first report given to the civilized world of its character. It is a railroad that any country might own with pride. Well ballasted and well laid, the steel track is as solid as though it had been used for a generation, and its stations and bridges have been built to stay. The Lan Ho bridge, which we crossed near the walled city of Lan Chow, is nearly 2,000 feet in length and it has five great spans, each of which is 200 feet long. It has a number of smaller spans, and it is built upon arches of solid stone, the iron work being made by the same company that made the great Forth bridge in Scotland, and the heavy arches were sunken by the pneumatic process. Crossing this we rode onward-part of the time at a speed of forty-five miles an hour-past other cities, till we came in sight of the mountains of Manchuria and stopped with the end of the railroad, almost on the edge of the sea and within a stone's throw of the breach in the great wall, through which the railroad is to be extended hundred of miles further on into the wilds of the almost unknown country of Manchuria, Here under the shadow of the great Chinese wall, gray with its age of 2,000 years, we ate our luncheon in the viceroy's car, nine representatives of the most progressive nations of the present at home and in comfort among the ruins of the greatest work of China's historic past. It is indeed a curious sight for China.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON, VI, THIRD QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, AUGUST 5.

The Baptism of Jesus-Text of the Lesson, Mark i, 1-11-Golden Text, Mark i, 11-Commentary on the Lesson by Rev. D.

1. "The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God." This is the gospel specially of service. In it we are reminded of the words, "Behold, I will bring forth my Servant, the Branch!" while "Behold, the Man whose name is the Branch!" is seen more clearly in Luke's gospel (Zech. iii, 8, vi, 12). Here Jesus is the patient servant and sacrifice for others, spending and being spent to serve the sons of men This gospel is written that the same life of 11), but as we are in this first verse introduced to the Son of God so we must be sons of God before we can serve "Let my son go that he may serve me," said the Lord of Israel (Ex. iv, 23)

2. "As it is written in the prophets, Behold, I send my messenger before Thy Behold, I send my messenger before Thy face, which shall prepare Thy way before thee!" The whole story of His sufferings and glory is written in the prophets (I Pet. i, 11; Luke xxiv, 25-27). They also spake of the heralds who should precede Him, John the Baptist, in the spirit and power of Elijah before in the spirit and power of Elijah before his first coming, and Elijah himself before his second coming. Compare Mal. iv, 5; Luke i, 17; Math. xvii, 10-13. As to preparing His way, every believer can, in a measure, be His messenger to do that. What an honor to be sent of Him in His name!

"The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord; make His paths straight." When John was asked if he was the Christ or Elijah or the prophet, he said that he was neither, but only a voice proclaiming the Christ (John i, 23). He sought no honors for himself, but rejoiced to decrease that Christ might increase

(John iii, 29, 30). 4. "John did baptize in the wilderness and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins." A sample of his preaching may be found in Math. iii, 7-12, and Luke iii, 7-18. He made it plain that unless their lives afterward manifested that they had become new creatures their baptism would amount to nothing. One of the last commands of Christ was that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem (Luke xxiv, 17). 5. "And there went out unto him all the land of Judaea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins." There must be a sense of sin, a true conviction of sin, and the deeper the better, before any one will come to Christ, for He came not to call the righteous, but sinners, to repentance, This is the work of the Holy Spirit (John xvi, 8, margin). and He uses the word and the lives of believers. In Acts v, 31; xi, 18, Christ

hn was clothed with can hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins, and he did eat locusts and wild honey." Thus was Elijah clothed (II Kings i, 8), and, as to locusts, they were among the creatures which God had permitted Israel to eat (Lev. xi, 22). John was certainly not extravagant in the matter of food and raiment. What a contrast was Isaac, who loved Esau because of his venison and would bless him only in connection therewith (Gen. xxv, 28; xxvii, 3, 4). Jesus has taught us not to think too much about either food or raiment (Math. iv, 4; vi, 25), but has assured us that if we make His kingdom and His righteousness our first concern He will see to all our need in that direction (Math. vi, 33).

7. "And preached, saying, There cometh one mightier than I after me. the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose,' John sought not to attract people to himself but to the Lamb of God, whom he came to herald. He had no ambition to make himself a name, but only to honor Him of whom he said, "He must increase, but I must decrease" (John iii. He sought not great things for himself (Jer. xlv, 5,) but his watchword was "Not I" (Gal. ii, 20; I Cor. xv, 10). "I indeed have baptized you with water, but He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost." Both Matthew and Luke add "and with fire" (Math. iii, 11; Luke iii, 16), which fire seems, from the context, to refer to the judgments of His second coming as King and Son of Man. 9. "And it came to pass in those days that Jesus came from Nazareth to Galilee and was baptized of John in Jordan.' In Luke iii, 23, it is written that He was about 30 years of age. In Math. iii, 14. 15, it is said that at first John forbade Him because of John's greater need to be baptized of Him. but Jesus said. "Suffer it to be so now, for thus it be-cometh us to fulfill all righteousness." He humbled Himself from heaven down to the manger of Bethlehem, and the home in Nazareth, and the life of rejection, even to Gethsemane and Golgotha.

all for us, and surely it is becoming in us to humble ourselves for Him, yet it seems strange to say so, for, whereas

He actually came down from great glory, we, being nothing, have nothing to come down from but sinful pride. 10. "And straightway coming up out of the water He saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon Him. Here in this gospel we meet the first "immediately," used about eighty times in the New Testament, and forty times in this gospel, and eleven times in this chapter, sometimes translated "anon" or "forthwith." It is the word for a good servant. The opened heavens make us think of Ezek. 4, Math. iii. John i, Acts vii and x, Rev. iv and xix, in each of which chapters heaven is opened and always concerning Christ or His church. The Spirit coming as a dove makes us think of the dove that found no rest except in the ark while the waters of judgment were on the earth. Jesus, the true ark, is the only place where the Spirit can rest fully. If we are filled with the Spirit, we will rest only in Jesus. 11. "And there came a voice from heaven, saying, "Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." See also chapter ix, 7, where the same testimony was given at the transfiguration. In John viii, 29, Jesus says, "I do always those things that please the Father," and in Rom. xv, 3, it is said, "Even Christ pleased not Himself." Since the Father is well pleased with Jesus, when we are well pleased with Jesus and accept and abide in Him, God is well pleased with us for Jesus' sake. Let us abide in Him (I Jehn, ii, 28).

HARE AND HOUNDS. All About the Above Famous English

Game for Boys.

Would you like to hear about a famous outdoor game that boys in England play? There, as in our own country, each season has its own sports. As soon as the warm, sunny days come, when the fields and roads are dry and firm, "hare and hounds" is the ery from boyish lips, and young hearts beat high for joy in the sunshine, and boyish feet almost spurn the earth as they prance along the highways and over the hedges, getting in training for their favorite sport.

It is confined principally to schoolboys between the ages of ten and sixteen, though often boys who do not belong to the school are members of the hunt, and very often, too, the little fellows are the best runners in the party.

The boys divide themselves into two parties, each having) its "champion runner," and lots are drawn as to which of these runners shall be the "hare" in the unwearied service may be in some first hunt of the season. Afterwards they measure reproduced in us (II Cor. iv, go by turn. The rest of the boys are the 'hounds," and the other champion is the huntsman, who marshals them to the "meet" (which is usually the school playgrounds), gives the signal for the start, calls them off by a shrill whistle when they get on the wrong scent, and, in fact, is master of the hounds. The hare is provided with a small, open satchel or pouch, slung across his shoulder, and filled with bits of white paper about an inch equare, heavy paper that the wind will not carry away. It is the privilege of the small boys, who are too little to take part in the hunt to prepare these bits of paper, and for a day or two before a "run" they have great fun in preparing "scent," as they call it. The hare is also allowed five minutes "head start," and is allowed to choose his own course, but is obliged to scatter the bits of white paper at short intervals all along the way he goes, as they are his tracks for the hounds to follow.

The five minues given him he usually spends in seeking for some obscure place at which he leaves a little package of yellow or blue paper to denote the starting point. This may be some blocks away or up a side street or just around the corner. He had his choice and a free opportunity to seek it, as the hounds go within doors till the five minutes are up. Then the huntsman cries "Whoop! halloo!" and away they all bound hither and thither, seeking till they find the package of colored paper, which they are obliged to do before they can start. The finder must cry
"Hark! forward!" Then off they go on the scent. Sometimes so long a time is taken up in finding the starting point that the hare makes famous headway, and can double on his followers; that is, retrace his way for a block or two on the other side of the street (leaving the bits of paper all along, of course), or go round the block. If they are in the country he probably makes for the woods, goes in some distance, then turns back, perhaps, till he finds some leafy tree, up which he climbs and hides himself till the hounds have gone by. Anything to put them off the track.

When the hare has gone far eneugh and wishes to return especial care must be taken, as, if he is seen, the hounds can rush after him "cross lots" and woe betide him if he is caught! He is no longer champion, but has to give up his badge to the fortunate catcher, and cannot even be one of the hounds till he has paid a certain forfeit, usually something good to eat. If the hare gets successfully home to the playground the opposite party has to stand treat; so you may imagine how hard each strives to win. It is a capital game when played really according to rules, and English boys think the rules half the sport.

Modern Gold Mining.

The quartz is taken from the mine, sorted and then hauled to the stamping machine. Here the ore is crushed and peunded as fine as flour. It is then run through a sluice-box that contains quicksilver. As the water carries the ore over the "quick" it is taken up and held by the mercury and forms an amalgam. The quicksilver is then placed in a retort and brought to the boiling point. The "quick" passes out of the retort through a tube and is collected in a basin of water, and hardly a bit has been lost, while the gold remains in the retort in the shape of gold dust and is now ready for market. Only about fifty per centum of the gold is saved by this means and those who can or have ore rich enough to justify it send it to the smelters, where ninety-five per centum is saved.

The Prince's Bravery.

Did you ever notice that when one has been badly frightened why sound makes them jump? The crowned heads and rul-ers of state have been so badly scared of late by bembs, that when some one threw flowers into the carriage of the Princess of Wales the other day she started as though she had been shot. The Prince sprang up and stood before her, to save her life if PIN WORMS. ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause than Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment. CARE OF WORKING HORSES.

Some Excellent Points Horse Owners

Would Do Well to Remember. There is as much difference in the disposition of horses as there is in men and require as careful training and education as boys do to correct evil habits. In fact the training must begin before the habit is formed. The disposition of the colt must be looked after and treated according so that when it reaches the working age, breaking will be unnecessary, for it will have already been trained into submission and obedience. Firmness in the handling of horses is essential but kindness is of more importance. A vicious disposition can be intensified by cruel treatment. A horse has an appreciation of kindness and responds to it by the more patient service. This noble and patient servant of man is not appreciated as it should be by many. No other animal compares with the horse in beauty, strength and agility and in nobleness of character. Dispense with him for a year and see where your dependence lies. Crops would fail, transportation would cease and hungry mouths would famish for want

Some herses are very nervous and easily scare at objects new to them. Such horses should be very carefully handled, says a writer familiar with this matter. The first thing to do with a horse strange to city scenes is to place him in a position to notice what is going on around him, without forcing him upon objects which he especially dreads, Take the electric cars, for instance: if your horse shows unusual uneasiness with respect to them, manage to approach them across street, and at a safe distance let him stand and look at them. He will examine them closely and with an intelligence which is marvelous. If he manifests undue anxiety, reassure and soothe him with your voice. The next time drive a little closer and repeat the soothing assurances. Nothing is so quieting and reassuring as the firm, yet gentle, tones of the voice to a terrified horse. In a very short time you will be able to approach an electric car within six feet without apprehension. The horse has learned that the object will not hurt him, and that is all he cares

And so with any other object which excites his fear. A firm hand, a cool head, and a soothing word will accomplish more than punishment under any and all circumstances. None but a fool punishes a horse for being afraid. A man that will whip a horse excited by fear should be forever debarred from handling a horse in any way. Whips are undoubtedly good things in their places. They come in well with a constitutionally lazy horse. They are very effective sometimes when horses are mischievous. A horse had a habit as soon as his bedding was put under him of scraping it all out of the stall behind him. He was watched, and at every attempt a vigorous application of the whip to his rear was made. In two nights he was thoroughly broken of the trick. If the personal safety of the occupants of a vehicle is endangered through a horse backing or turning around, use the whip vigorously, it will divert his attention. Never use the whip without warning, and never use it to cure a horse of fright; if you do, between the whipping and the fear he will soon become unmanageable when he meets the object he dreads.-Western Rural.

Something About Roses.

Most of our flowers are from across the Atlantic. But four varieties of the rose are native to America, and these are wild roses still. Man has not been able to effect material change from the original of many varieties. Other varieties have responded to man's efforts and have put on new beauty. Under the watchful and painstaking care of trained florists they have sported or been hybridized and new varieties have resulted. The law under which sports occur is not known, and yet we believe there is a law for their occurrence. As an example, the snowball of our yards is a sport from the dogwoods of our forests. All our double flowers have come to us in this way. They have done so in nearly all cases at the sacrifice of stamens and pistils, and hence seldom produce seed. The rose is in most cases an exception to this rule, and usually bears seed. By hybridization we often obtain fruit with qualities not larger profit. Assuming that she is in found in either parent. Sometimes the result is an improvement, while often it s not. By this means many qualities of the rose, such as size, color, scent, etc, have been greatly improved. Many of the most beautiful roses lack hardiness to withstand the rigors of Ohio winters without protection. The Damask rose, a direct descendant of the famous rose of Damascus, is that from which the ottar of roses is produced in large quantities in India and other warm countries. The famous Tea roses, which are too tender for outdoor culture here are of the best for greenhouse culture and ornamentation, But at the hight of beauty in the rose family stands the moss rose, and between the beauty of the red and the white, we may challenge any one to decide. - Prof. E. W. Claypole.

Talented Men Required for Farmers. There seems to be a belief among certain ignorant people, mostly residents of our cities and towns, that a man of talent, of brains and energy and busicity life, and that the occupation of of the best faculties with which mankind are blest.

Nothing could be further from the truth than such a belief. Life in cities does indeed offer rare opportunities to a few men of great enterprise and large capital to accumulate vast fortunes, acquired sometimes by means of honest work for the benefit of their fellow men, but not unfrequently by taking unscrupulous and cruel advantage of others with less knowledge of the state of trade or with less capital to control it.

But while a few in the cities become rich, the much larger number work hard for small pay, with unhealthy surroundings and little hope of improving their condition. Country life does not a Sussex ram with Hampshire ewes: offer such magnificent chances for sudden wealth nor such terrible temptations, but it offers ample opportunity for the use of the best powers with found them to be 62+1b. heavier than which mankind are endowed, and demands the best education offered by our lamb gaining 81 lbs., and the worst 511b. colleges to enable the farmer to use to in the ten days an average gain of 611b.

DAIRY STOCK.

Principles of Universal Application Laid Down at a Grange Meeting.

W. C. Whitman read a paper on 'Breeding Dairy Stock" before the Turner Grange, extract from which are from the Maine Farmer:

"Here in Turner our aim is, in the main, to produce cream. We want the best machines for converting our forage, grain, vegetables, etc., into cream; the final value of the animals is of comparatively small importance."

The writer then calls attention to the opportunities to study the prize win-ning dairy cows at dairy tests at fall fairs and the opportunities for study of the points that constitute a good dairy cow, and alludes to the culpable indifference of farmers to these tests during their progress. Mr. Whitman then describes these

"We have noticed that the prize winners have certain points in common. As a rule they have deep bodies, stand wide between the front legs and have large stomachs well filled; soft, velvety skins and their bones somewhat loosely knit together. In size they have been medium; we have never seen among the winners an over large animal or a small one, though many such have competed. From what we have seen we arrive at the following conclusions: First, the cow must have a good constitution; lots of them break down because of the want of it. Next, she must have good digestive organs, and she must also have the ability to turn the food she consumes into milk and cream, having these qualities and her keeper bearing well in mind the fact that nothing can be drawn from the cow's udder except what has first gone into her stomach. We may hope for good returns from our cow. "We will suppose that all of them have been selected with good judgment and all have a good inheritance, i. e., are descended from good producing ancestors. Difficult as it is to select the females of our herd, it is infinitely more difficult to select the males, for with our widely different herd of cows it will be useless to expect to find any one male fit to cross with them all, and really fine males, such as we are in search of,

are 'scarce as feathers on toads' backs. "Let us suppose, again, that we have been fortunate in our selection. When our calves are born we will rear all the females that are an improvement on their parents and discard the rest. If 25 per cent of them are desirable enough to keep we shall be fortunate. After a few years have passed we shall begin to weed out our cows that were purchased. Probably but a small per cent. of them will be retained to old age. As we go on year after year selecting the fittest and rejecting all the rest, our herd has gradually begun to assume a form something like our ideal."

Cultivate After a Rainfall.

The surface soil should be stirred as soon as practicable after a considerable rainfall, as soon as the tools will work well. The cultivation should, as a rule. be shallow, leaving a thin stratum of the surface soil finely pulverized and completely cut off from the soil below. ere this is not done, the extremely rapid evaporation which takes place from undisturbed wet soil on hot, clear days may even in a few hours not only dissipate that which has just fallen, but also a part of that which the rain has caused to be drawn toward the surface from lower levels, and thus leave the soil actually drier than before the rain, even though it may look more moist at the surface.

When a succession of showers follow each other at just the right intervals and are of the right intervals to strengthen the capillary flow into the upper stratum from low each time, without any percolation taking place, it is evithat such soils left to themselves under these condition may lose not only the water which falls directly upon them, but a considerable portion of that stored below down to at least five feet. -Orange Judd Farmer.

Profit From One Cow.

Recently the Pennsylvania experiment station tested a number of cows. One of the cows in the trial would, on the basis of her performance, furnish a yearly profit of $51.50; anothor but $31 .-50 for the same period, while still another would only yield a gain of $14.70 in a year. All these cows would furnish about the same quantity of milk and butter yearly, but varied in a marked degree in the cost of food necessary for its production. An illustration is furnished by the cow credited with the milk 300 days in each year, and that her profit making period covers six years, her earnidgs during that time will equal ten per cent, compound interest on an investment of $208. The smaller profit cow under corresponding conditions, and for an equal period, will only yield so large a rate of interest on $106. Language fails to add importance to these figures as to the necessity of knowing from the commercial standpoint, all that is to be known about every member of a dairy herd.

Dry Food for Chicks.

Wet mashes and other sloppy food is the direct cause of more chicken fatality than any other one thing. Feed dry food only. The chicks require very little water; when the food is damp they are compelled to swallow more water than is beneficial. A leading poultryman has claimed that he could raise more chicks by withholding water altogether than by giving a full supply, but we have no doubt the loss was ocness tact will meet his best reward in | casioned more by the water being given in vessels that permitted the chicks to farming gives no scope for the exercise | get wet rather than from the quantity consumed. The best results, however, have been obtained from dry food. Cracked corn, wheat, ground oats and even the dry ground meat has been tested with success. Such food may be placed in a small trough, from which the chicks may help themselves and it has the advantage of being less liable to ferment and spoil than when wet. The better way of feeding, however, is to feed at regular intervals, in order to afford a greater variety and avoid waste.

ONLY WAY TO SUCCESS.

A SENSIBLE ARTICLE ON CROP ROTA-TATION AND STEADY FARMING.

A Sure and Fixed Idea, With a Flexible Plan Within Certain Lines, Seems to Re the Best for the Ordinary Farmer-Pertinen. Examples.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman, who has evidently given much study to the question of crop rotation and steady farming, says: Much has been written on this subject, yet many cases have been within my observation in the past, and are before me at the present time, which go to prove that farmers many times disregard the fact (either from carelessness or ignorance) that to do otherwise than continue a regular rotation of crops and farm steadily is to impoverish their lands and bring calamity on their own heads. The cry "it don't pay," before giving an impartial and intelligent trial to some particular branch of farming, kills many a man as a successful farmer. Last season, and at present with the high price of hay, many will continue to mow the same fields five or six years, until the seeding is run out and the land exhausted. The result will be that the price of hay will go down-too low for profitable hayraising. Then we must raise something else, and that means grain, and in what condition will these lands be to raise grain? It does not need any expert to tell that unless they can be restored by heavy coats of manure, or something equally as good, the yield of grain will be very light, and the same result is true in continuous cropping with grain without seeding to clover or other grasses.

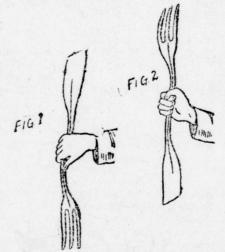

I have been over these "bare spots," to my sorrow, and know what it costs. Seven years ago last season sheep were sold here at a great sacrifice by many farmers; they said it did not pay; so the sheep had to go, and every one was in for raising hay, which was then high. In two or three years good hay sold at from $4 to $6. and then the same men were sheep crazy, paying from $6 to $9 per head for common stock. Now another change has come; sheep is down and hay is up, and many are slaughtering their sheep and mowing their lands to death.

About seven years ago horses were high, and every man who had a horse wanted to sell him or trade him for a mare, so great was the craze for raising horses. And where is the horse market to-day? Many farmers will answer the question with a long face; nearly every farmer's yard is filled with horses and colts for which he has little use, and cannot sell at anything like the cost of growing. Two years ago I reduced my own stock of horses at public auction, but did not escape a "big cut" in price in comparison with prices one and two years before.

has its "ups and downs"-also of hogs in the past two winters-in fact, it is the same with everything a farmer raises. If he undertakes to follow the high markets it will lead him a merry chase. Many men and women to-day are striving with the winter-laying hen, which is commendable, but I predict that eggs will soon reach a price even in winter that will sicken them of the hen business. Wheat is "flat," and many have not even sown any for their own bread.

In fact, the only rational view seems to be that steady work in the one direction of all and diversified farming is the only true way to success. Stop "plunging." Raise grain, hay and all the adaptable crops in rotation; keep a few sheep and cattle; raise now and then a good colt. Remember that the "rolling stone gathers no moss," and never allow high prices to be an incentive to abrupt changes.

An Effective Weed Destroyer. The sketch shows a handy garden tool which I would not do without for many times the few cents any village blacksmith would carge to make it out of a piece of scrap steel (mine is made of an old rasp that blacksmiths use for trimming horse hoofs). It is especially adapted for cleaning cut coarse weeds from the lawn and around the base of closely-planted perennials, roses and shrubs, and more so where the soil is rather hard and clayey, and no other weeder can take its place. To shift from position Fig. 1 to Fig. 2 just slip thumb underneath, at the same time turning the wrist half way round to the right, which can be done forward and back rapidly. A Newly Discovered Insecticide. A new and important discovery in the domain of promology has been made by F. C. Moulton of the gypsy moth commission, Malden, Mass. Arsenate of lead was the substance used which was prepared by dissolving 11 oz. of acetate of lead and 4 oz, of arsenate of soda in 150 gals, of water. These substances quickly dissolve and form arsenate of lead, a fine white powder which is lighter than Paris green, several reasons. If by any means the mixture happens to be used stronger than necessary to destroy insect life, even three or four times the necessary strength, it in no wise injures the foliage of the plants upon which it is sprayed. This is a great thing in its favor, for frequently in using Paris green for potato beetle larvae and for the codlin worms, as much injury results from the poison burning the foliage as would result from the insect if let alone. This is a better insecticide than Paris green under all circumstances and for all insects, says Prof. Fernald. It has the advantage of being readily seen on the leaves, so that one can tell at a glance which have and have not been sprayed, which is often evenly over the foliage. Short Furrows.
