PLATE GLASS DOOMED London Starts New Era of Window Dressing.

London, Aug. 9. - A revolt has bee organized within the last few years by London tradesmen against the tyranny credit to the artistic taste and com mercial good sense of the organizers. There was no reason why the tyran ny of plate glass windows should con tinue forever, Plate glass was but passing phase, though certainly stood an unconscionable time upon the order of its going before it went.

The honor of having taken the proverbially difficult first step in modern times belongs, if report says true, to the firm of Marks & Durlacher. The services of Norman Shaw were enlisted, and he designed a window com posed of two arches, to which was attached on one side a small three-sided, projecting window. To this pioneer shop front there hangs a tale. After shop front there hangs a tale. After the shop, which was in Oxford street, westward through Fifty-seventh street had passed into other hands this window was taken out and broken up, and one part went one way, while the second half, with the small bay window attached, migrated to Regent street.

Westward through Fifty-seventh street last night. There was a rope around his horns to which was attached Frank Larkin. Near Eighth avenue Larkin gripped the rope between his knees while he lighted a cigarette. attached, migrated to Regent street.

When the ice had been broken artistic shop fronts at once sprang up with marvelous ubiquity. Sufficient instances have been given to prove that a new era in window dressing is gradually head, flirted his tail and charged full dawning throughout London. It has tilt into the machine, between the crept in almost unnoticed, partly be-cause so many people think only of The a the actual goods to be bought, and of Rockaway, and with him were John

GOAT DINED OFF DYNAMITE

Now It Is Avoided by All Residents of the Village. Wilmington, Del., Aug. 9. - A goal loaded with dynamite, which roams at will about the Italian colony in Wooddele, is causing consternation among the residents of that village. When Antonio Pasqualle, a quarryman, went home a few evenings on his back porch. After supper he went for the dynamite and it was missing. His little son gravely informed him that "de goat eata de big bag.' Pasqualle started for the animal.

The four-legged mine retaliated by lowering its head and preparing for a spring. Thereupon, Parqualle, realizing that two sticks of dynamite might wreck the entire colony, made a break for his home. When neighbors learned of the dynamite lunch they were thrown into a panic, and were afraid to venture from their homes. imal was left in full possession of the
