How Dreams Are Weighed.
An ingenious instrument which demonstrates the close connection that exists between dreams and brain calculation is known as the "tilt board." A long, shallow tray big enough for a man to recline upon is balanced exactly upon a steel blade. A subject is placed upon it and put to sleep, whereupon the end containing his feet generally falls. But eventually the subject begins to dream, and then the tray containing the sleeper's feet responds, the extent to which it moves varying according to the vividness of the dream. The explanation is that the blood leaves the brain of a sleeper directly the mental activities cease, and the head as a result becomes lighter, that end of the balance rises. When the sleeper dreams small quantities of blood are recalled to the brain to supply the dreams, and the balance is gradually changed. In this way dreams may be weighed.

When flattery is applied to friendship it's a case of make or break.

A big voice is too often mistaken for the gift of oratory.

WOMAN'S WORLD

CAROLINE M. SEVERANCE.

She Organized the First Woman's Club in the United States.

America's oldest clubwoman, Mrs. Caroline M. Severance, spending her last days beneath the sunny skies of Los Angeles, Cal. One says "last days" upon discovering that her age is eighty-five, but it is hard to realize that Mrs. Severance has celebrated so many birthdays, for she is as active and as interested in life and people as she was at forty. The Friday Morning club of Los Angeles, which she founded, calls her "eighty-five years young." The nearly 5,000 clubwomen of Los Angeles also lovingly refer to her as "the mother of clubs," and she is also known by this title wherever in any part of the country a woman's club is founded.

Mrs. Severance was born in New York in 1820 and was the daughter of Orson Seymour, a member of an old Connecticut family. In 1840 she married Mr. Severance, who has been dead for several years. When the Severances lived in Cleveland, O., for seven years in the early fifties, their home was the Mecca of all the cultured people who visited the city, including Emerson, Alcott, Wendell Phillips, Garrison and others equally well known.

MRS. CAROLINE M. SEVERANCE.

In 1855 the Severances moved to Boston, and it was there that Mrs. Severance, in 1860, organized the first woman's club of the United States, the New England club of Boston. In speaking of the object of forming this first society Mrs. Severance says:

"We had our social life, and our church life, but we wanted some gathering in which the women could meet on equal mental grounds without society or the church and be helpful in every way to one another."

She was the president of this club for three years.

Mr. and Mrs. Severance went to California and made their home in Los Angeles in 1875, building the home in which Mrs. Severance now lives. Since that time the "Red Room," as the cottage, now "El Nido," was called, has been the rendezvous of cultured and noted residents and visitors. For many years Mrs. Severance was the president of the first woman's club of Los Angeles, organized by herself soon after her arrival.

Although her memories of the past are so delightful and are filled with days and hours spent with the Alcotts, Emersons, Hawthornes and others whom just to know was an honor, Mrs. Severance does not live in the past. She has more interests and demands on her time than the majority of younger women. She is interested in kindergarten work and started the first kindergarten in Los Angeles. She is womanly, motherly and altogether charming.

Mrs. Severance's good deeds are by no means all in the past, but so modest is she about them that one seldom hears of the many kind acts of this young old woman.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Women Should Sit More.

"Women don't sit enough to their kitchen work," declared the elderly housewife. "There's a heap of ills and ailments that could be avoided by using just a little common sense. Now, no woman would think of sewing or darning while standing up, yet they do equally foolish things in the kitchen."

"Take peeling potatoes or other vegetables, for instance. The majority of women stand near the sink for such work, whereas they could do it equally well by sitting down. How many do you see beating eggs while sitting down? Precious few, I'll warrant. They stand when mixing dough for pastry or biscuits. After the dishes are washed they stand up to dry them when it's just as easy to sit down. There's a hundred little things to be done while preparing meals which are just as easy to do while sitting as standing. Then when the day's work is done they drop into an easy chair and wait about how tired they are. There's a chair in nearly every kitchen, but it's mostly used for standing on to get things from the shelves. Sit down more, I tell you, and you won't have that tired feeling so much."—New York Press.

Mending by Machine.

With little practice all sorts of mending may be done on a two threaded sewing machine, without turning the work at all, by placing the article under the presser foot and sewing forward across the tear or thin place. When at the point where the work would ordinarily be turned, lift the presser foot ever so little with the right hand and with the left pull the work gently and steadily toward you, without stopping the machine at all, says the Brooklyn Times. Sew backward to the point where you started from. Then release the presser foot with the right hand and sew toward you again until it is time to reverse. By this means you gradually move over a long tear with the right side of the article resting on the table of the machine and on your lap.

Mend the torn scallops of Hamburg embroidery in the same way. For a small boy's trousers seat this method of mending has no equal. Baste a good thick patch on the wrong side. Place in machine with ragged side up, then stitch up and down until all the thin part is well covered. Literally you can mend a pair of trousers while the small boy waits.

Door and Window Hangings.

After years of striving after ornate methods of arranging door and window hangings the interior decorators have returned to the more simple designs, news that will be gladly welcomed by the housekeeper who does her own decorating. Hangings should be arranged so that a person looking at a hanging will know instinctively that it leads to the dining room, library or a bedroom, etc., by the color, pattern of the material and the fashion of drapery. Even the size of the room will be apparent if a careful housewife follows an old rule observed by furnishers of select small designs for little rooms and big patterns for large apartments.

Potatoes on the Half Shell.

Bake large, smooth potatoes of uniform size until they yield to the pinching fingers. Divide each carefully in half, lengthwise. Scrape out the interior, taking care not to break the skin. Mash the potato with a little hot milk and melted butter until you can beat it into a cream. Salt and pepper beat in two tablespoonsful of grated cheese for two cupsful of potato and return to the waiting shells. Set into the oven until hot through and slightly browned. Serve in the skins.

When Machine Stitches.

"One of the most annoying things in running a sewing machine is to find that the lower thread has run out just when in the middle of the seam," says a writer in Good Housekeeping. "Now, I run my seam and wind the next bobbin at the same time. I put a spool of cotton in the little top drawer of the machine, leaving the drawer a little open to allow the thread to pass more easily, then use the winder as usual and never have to wait for a fresh shuttle."

Barley as Food.

Barley is rich in nitrogenous substances and contains large quantities of iron and phosphoric salts. Weight for weight, both barley and rye contain quite as much nutritive material as wheat, but it is in a less digestible form, and the flour of both grains makes a compact bread which is considered difficult of digestion. When cooked whole in soup for a long time it is easily digested and nutritious.

To Remove Bad Odors.

Lumps of fresh charcoal tied inside of fish nets and hung wherever there is a convenient place is a marvelous power to remove all bad odors in the cellar. As its power is strictly proportioned to its freshness, which heating restores, the charcoal bags must be taken down each week and emptied, the charcoal heated hot and returned to the bags, which in turn are replaced.

Lavender Scented Sheets.

Lavender scented sheets are said to induce sweet slumbers. The odor is exceedingly fresh, clean and wholesome, and old fashioned housewives always scented their linen and drapery with sprigs of the sweet old flower. Italian orris root and French violet, a dried root, may be substituted for the lavender if the latter cannot be procured.

Don't Be Blue.

The remedy for the blues lies with us ourselves. On your dark days put on your brightest and prettiest gown and see how it raises your spirits. It is difficult for cheerfulness to express itself in somber surroundings. If one does not feel like laughing, lift the corners of the mouth and one laughs for force.

Kitchen Furniture.

One of the most fascinating pieces of furniture in the modern kitchen is an old fashioned settee. Its high back lifts up and rests on the sides to form a table or ironing board, while the seat, when raised, reveals many compartments filled with ingeniously devised cooking utensils.

Say the Nice Things.

A woman should not be afraid to say the pleasant things that rise to her lips. There is no reason on earth why frankness should consist in saying all the disagreeable remarks one can collect and that the kind words should be thought insincere.

Don't make home irksome. If you would not have your children lost to you in after life make home happy to them when they are young. Don't force the children to look elsewhere than at home for pleasure.

Lemon juice will whiten lard, the grated rind of an orange strained through a cloth will give a yellow tint and strawberry or cranberry juice will produce a pretty shade of pink.

Put a few grains of rice in the salt-cellar to keep the salt from caking. As the cellar is shaken the rice will keep the salt moving.

In filling a lamp in which it is impossible to see the height of the liquid use a definite measure.

PROMINENT CANADIAN OWES LIFE TO PE-RU-NA.

Suffered Ten Years—Lost 100 Pounds in Flesh.

Mr. J. N. Latrelle, the well known grocer and liquor dealer of Montreal, Can., has been one of the leading business men of that city for thirty years. He writes as follows:

"I had catarrh of the head, throat and stomach for about ten years, and for the past two years had been growing weaker and weaker. I felt exhausted and weak, and coughed continually. When in health my weight was 260 pounds, but I lost 100 pounds in a year. Catarrh had made me almost blind and deaf. I felt discouraged."

"Finally I tried Peruna, took three bottles, and now I must say that my health is much improved, and have gotten rid almost entirely of the effects of that dreaded disease."

Auctioneers in England.

The auctioneers of the United Kingdom cannot claim to belong to a very ancient profession so far as that country is concerned. Though auctions were familiar institutions in ancient Rome, to have been held about 1700, when Sir John Yalden, governor of Fort George (Madras), put up for sale his trophies of the east, and although "auction" was defined in 1673 as "a making a public sale and selling of goods by outcry," it does not appear to have been recognized then as a British institution. The word "auctioneer" does not occur before the eighteenth century.

Lorenzo Dow and Burr.

When the timid colonial clergymen were afraid to criticize Aaron Burr's treason they asked Lorenzo Dow what he thought of Burr's meanness. He raised both hands like a great V and shouted: "Aaron Burr means! Why, I could take the little end of nothing whittled down to a point, punch out the pith of a hair and put in 40,000 such traitor souls as his, shake 'em up, and they'd rattle."

Eminent Doctors Praise Its Ingredients.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Dr. F. C. Ely, one of the Editorial Staff of THE ECLECTIC MEDICAL REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription":

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorant for normal activity. It continues in Helonias we have a medicinal agent which is seldom met with in any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of the above purposes it is a most valuable agent. It is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. F. C. Ely further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Painful action of the back with menorrhagia; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women, constant emission of blood from the vagina; abnormal condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhea (absence or absence monthly periods), arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and anemic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medicinal properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says: "It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In catarrhal conditions and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root: "In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is unconditionally regarded as the tonic used in all debilitated states."

Prof. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal: "Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhea (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

Don't laugh at the man who has made good resolutions. Help him keep them. You may need a crutch yourself some day.

International Bible Lesson for Tomorrow.

The Wise Men Find Jesus.—Matt. 2, 1-12.

Golden Text—"My son, give me thine heart."—Prov. 23, 26.

God guided and inspired these wise Gentiles to seek and find Jesus, the infant King of the Jews. The Chief Priests and Scribes and these wise men all agree in expecting He would be born in a natural way, of earthly parents, and to assume rule as an earthly king. They had no idea, as we have, of His being the Divine Son of God, conceived by the Holy Spirit, nor of the spiritual nature of His dominion in the hearts of His people throughout all the ages.

Contrast, their seeking, a success, and that of our poor Doubt-habors, a miserable failure.

The faith of these wise men was not shaken by the lowly condition in which they found him, because it was a God-inspired faith, and they were moved to give generously for the service of the King, just when His treasury seemed to need it most.

"Being warned of God in a dream"—see verse 12—reveals to us that He had them specially in His gracious care, and that their communion and fellowship with them was the secret of their wisdom in seeking and finding the Lord Jesus Christ. "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are the sons of God," and never in the history of our earth are so many being led to our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, as there are at the present time in all lands. Yet, He is despised and rejected of men as much and more than in the days of His flesh.

May all who teach and who are taught this lesson be led to find their King and Saviour, who once was found in a manger, but who now waits to be gracious on His throne of Grace.

Ask and it shall be given unto you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.—Matt. 7, 7.

You are wise men if you do.

The LUST of HATE

BY GUY BOOTHBY

Author of "A Beautiful White Devil," "A Bid For Fortune," "The Marriage of Esther," "Dr. Nikola," Etc

The Fiji Princess was a fair-sized vessel of an old-fashioned type, and very heavily laden; indeed, so heavy was she that she looked almost unsafe beside the great American liner near which she was berthed. Having clambered on board I enquired my way to the steering quarters, which were forward, then stowed away my things and endeavored to make myself as comfortable as circumstances would permit in the place which was to be my home for the next five weeks or so. For prudence sake I remained below until I heard the whistle sound and could tell by the shaking that the steamship was moving. Then, when I had satisfied myself that we were really under way, I climbed the gangway that led to the deck and looked about me. Slowly as we were moving, we were already a hundred yards from the wharf side, and in a few minutes would be well out in Southampton Water. Right aft a small crowd of sailors were grouped at the stern railings, waving their handkerchiefs and hats to a similar group ashore. For as I soon discovered, the passengers consisted only of myself and a circumstance which may be very sure I did not by any means regret.

By mid-day we were in the Solent, and by lunch time the tide of light lay over our taffrail. Now, unless we were stopped at Tenerife, I was certain of a month's respite from the law. And when I realized this I went to my berth and, snoring as I was, knelt down and offered up the heartiest prayer of gratitude I have ever in my life given utterance to.

CHAPTER V.

If any man is desirous of properly understanding the feelings of gratitude and relief which filled my breast as the Fiji Princess steamed down from Southampton, he must begin by endeavoring to imagine himself placed in the same unenviable position. For all I knew to the contrary, even while I stood leaning on the bulwarks watching the coast line away to starboard, some unlucky chance might be giving the police a clue to my identity, and the hue-and-cry already have begun. When I came to consider my actions during the past twenty-four hours, I seemed to be at my enemy's elbow, innumerable opportunities of discovering my whereabouts. My letter to the manager of the hotel, which I had posted in the Strand after leaving the Covent Garden restaurant, would furnish proof that I was in town before five o'clock—the time at which the box was cleared on the morning of the murder. Then, having ascertained that much, they would in all probability call at my hotel, and in instituting enquiries there, be permitted to peruse the letter I had written to the manager that morning. Whether they would believe that I had gone north, as I desired they should suppose, was difficult to say; but in either case they would be almost certain to find me all the southern seaports watched. I fancied, however, that my quickness in getting out of England would puzzle them a little, even if it did not baffle them altogether.

Unfortunately, the Fiji Princess had been the only vessel of importance sailing from Southampton on that particular day, and owing to the paucity of steamer passengers, I felt sure the clerk who gave me my ticket would remember me sufficiently well to be able to assist in the work of identification. Other witnesses against me would be the porters at Surbiton railway station, who had seen me arrive, tired and dispirited, after my long walk; the old man who had given me my key on the journey down; and the people in the restaurant where I had been taken ill would probably recognize me in my favor that I was ever, it was in my favor that I was here on the deck of the steamer, not devoid of anxiety, at least free from the clutches of the law for the present.

The afternoon was perfectly fine, though bitterly cold; a clear, starry sky, with scarcely a cloud from horizon to horizon; the sea was green as grass, and almost as smooth as a millpond. Since luncheon I had seen nothing of the passengers, nor had I troubled to inquire if the vessel carried her full complement. The saloon was situated right aft in the poop, the skipper had his cabin next to the chart room on the hurricane deck, and the officers' quarters on either side of the engine-room. In the alley ways below, my quarters—I had them all to myself, as I said in the last chapter—were so roomy and comfortable as a man could expect, for the

With this avowal of my settled opinion he took himself off, and left me sitting on the hatch, hoping with my heart and soul that, if in this way my chance of safety, the world might long retain its present opinion. While I was ruminating on what he had said, and feeling that I would give five years of my life to know exactly how matters stood ashore, I chanced to look out at the little covered way on the hurricane deck below the bridge. My heart seemed to stop still. For the moment I thought I must be asleep and dreaming, for there, gazing across the sea, was the same woman's face I had seen suspended in mid-air above my head on the previous night. Astonishing as it seemed, there could be no possible doubt about it—I recognized the expressive, the sweet mouth, and the soft, wavy hair—plainly as if I had known her all my life long.

"Thinking it was still only a creation of my own fancy, and that in a moment it would fade away as before, I started back at it, resolved, while I had the chance, to still further impress every feature upon my memory. But it did not vanish as I expected.

passage-money I paid, and when I had made friends with the cook and his mate, I knew I should get, through the voyage in comparative comfort. At this point I am brought to the narration of the most uncanny portion of my story: a coincidence so strange that it seems almost impossible it can be true, and one which I have never been able, in any way, to account. Yet, strange as it may appear, it must be told; and that it is true, have I not the best and sweetest evidence in the world? It came about in this way. In the middle of the first afternoon, as already described, I was sitting smoking on the fore hatch, and at the same time talking to the chief steward. He had been to sea, so he told me, since he was quite a lad; and, as I soon discovered, had seen some strange adventures in almost every part of the globe. It soon turned out, however, that he was a quiet, unassuming man, and in a few minutes we were upon the most friendly terms. From the sea our conversation changed to China, and in illustration of the character of the waterside people of that peculiar country, my companion narrated a story about a shipmate who had put off in a sampan to board his boat lying in Hong Kong harbor, and had never been seen or heard of again.

"It was a queer thing," he said impressively, as he shook the ashes out of his pipe and re-choked the ash-tray, "a thing as ever a man heard of, and I spent the evening with the chum myself, and before we said 'good-bye' we arranged to go up to Happy Valley the Sunday morning following. But he never turned up, and I was left to set eyes on him from that time to this. Whether he was murdered by the sampans' crew or whether he fell overboard and was drowned in the harbor, I don't suppose will ever be known."

"A very strange thing," I said, as bravely as I could, and instantly thought of the bond I had in common with the sampans' crew.

"Aye, strange," he replied, "replied the steward, shaking his head solemnly; 'but there's many strange things now-a-days. Look at these here London lads that have been going on a wise man as could put an explanation on them."

All my blood seemed to rush to my head, and my heart for a second stood still. I remembered the notice of apprehension I had seen in the paper, and I was evidently too much agitated with his subject to pay any attention to my appearance. I knew I must say something, but my tongue was cleaving to the roof of my mouth. It was some moments before I found my voice, and then I said as innocently as possible—

"They are certainly peculiar, are they not? Have you any theory to account for them?"

This was plainly a question to his taste, and it soon became evident that he had discussed the subject in all his bearings on several occasions before.

"Do you want to know what I think?" he began slowly, fixing me with an eye that seemed to imagine bored through me like an augur.

Well, what I think is that the anarchists are at the bottom of it all, and men who want to know what I think, I sat before him like a criminal.

I'll tell you why. Look at the class of first? A Major-General in the army, wasn't he? Who was the second? A member of the House of Lords. Who was the third?

He felt me so searchingly at me glance as if he had detected me in my guilt. Who could tell him better than I who the last victim was?

And the third—well, he was one of these rich men as fattens on Society and the workin' man, he was not?"

He pounded his open palm with his fist in the true fashion, and his eyes constantly challenged me to refute his statements if I were in a position to do so. "Heaven help me!" I thought, "I sat before him like a criminal."

I was in the dock, conscious of the danger of me to avert it. Still, however, my tormentor did not notice my condition, but returned to the charge with renewed vigor. What he lacked in argument he made up in vehemence. And he bore me an hour I had to sit and bear the brunt of both.

"Now, I'll ask you a question," he said for the twentieth time, "he had paused to watch the effect of his last point. 'Who do the Anarchists mostly go for? Why for what we may call the safe side of argument, the millionaires. Those are the peers, therefore, that they want to be rid of.'"

"You think then," I said, "that these party crimes were the work of a few individuals?"

He half closed his eyes and looked at me with an expression upon his face that seemed to implore me to contradict him.

"You know what I think," he said; then with the same consent, "If only other folk had as much sense as we have, the fellows who did the work would have been laid by the heels by this time. As it is they'll never catch them—no, not 'till the moon's made of cream cheese."

With this avowal of his settled opinion he took himself off, and left me sitting on the hatch, hoping with my heart and soul that, if in this way my chance of safety, the world might long retain its present opinion. Free to You,
My Sister

Free to You and Every Sister Woman Suffering from Woman's Ailments

I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from woman's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, your mother, your sister, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor.
Men cannot understand woman's sufferings.
What we women know from experience we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or White Discharge, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths, also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, hot flashes, weakness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete ten days treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial, and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about a cent a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment, for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost,

Pulman Jumps Track.

St. Louis, Jan. 12.—Plunging from the terminal elevated tracks at Carstreet, the Pullman sleeping car Harcourt, attached to the Wabash train, dropped sideways 15 feet to the granite paving of the levee yesterday morning and seven passengers on board were injured. The remainder of the train continued to the Union Station.

Smelter For Cobalt.

Montreal, Jan. 12.—N. A. Timmer, a head of the Larose mines, in the Cobalt district, announced yesterday that his company had decided to establish a smelter of their own, at the cost of $250,000. Until it was completed their ore would be shipped to England.

CONTRACTED CHRONIC DIAR-

RHOEA WHILE IN THE PHILIPPINES.

"While with the U. S. Army in the Philippines, I contracted chronic diarrhoea. I suffered severely from this terrible disease for over three years and tried the prescriptions of numerous physicians, but found nothing that did me any good until I tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two small bottles of which entirely cured me and I have since had no return of the disease. Herman Stein, 212 N.

Fatally Burned.

Napanee, Jan. 12.—About 9 o'clock on Tuesday night, Mrs. Uriah Sils, who lived about three miles from town, was terribly burned by an exploding lamp. Mrs. Sils was trimming a lamp over a stove and the flames spread to the lamp, causing the explosion. Her suffering was ended by death early yesterday morning.

SMART FURBELOWS.

Swagger Ideas For Fur Boleros—Fascinating Boas of Different Kinds.

The newest fur boleros are supplied with vests or some other decorative detail such as embroidered cloth or velvet. There are also some delightful touches of embroidered suede.

A moleskin bolero has a vest, collar and turned back cuffs to the full, rather short sleeves and a shaped belt of rose pink suede embroidered in silver tinsel.

Be careful what you wear with the empire coat. The entire costume should be in keeping.

The very pretty feather, tulle or ribbon boas shown this winter afford a becoming finish to a toilet.

There is a perfectly tight sleeve threatened by modistes, admitting of only a comfortable fullness at the top.

There is a fad now to follow the French idea and gown all the bridesmaids at a wedding in frocks that in no way resemble each other. The hats, too, are of entirely diverse models.

The new velveteens have a soft chif-fon finish.

The gown pictured is of pastel pink brocade elaborately trimmed with braid a shade darker picked out with gold thread. JUDIC CHOLLET.

DAINTY DRESS NOTIONS.

Lingerie Has Felt the Empire Influence—Pretty Theater Bags.

The empire styles have touched fine lingerie. Corset covers, chemises and drawers are made in one, with exquisite ribbon and beading defining the waist line.

Pretty little bags for the theater to carry one's handkerchief, powder puff and purse in are made in white, with conventional designs in flowers and figures in green, blue, orange, mauve and rose. They are mounted in dull gold and have gilt chains and are lined with soft dull lined kid. Some are more elaborate and are trimmed with bean fringe.

There is a new walk, something of a prance, which has been brought into fashion by the sweep length skirt.

Charming shades of pink are worn, and while cloth of this shade is rather startling for street wear, there are not withstanding tailored gowns of rose pink to be seen in the afternoon promenade.

A lovely tea gown is of champagne liberty satin in empire style covered with filmy bows of champagne valen-tiennes.

Lace drapery is much used for hat trimming. It is no unusual thing to see a long lace veil floating from under the brim down the back.

Among the best models of walking skirts one finds many pointed examples not of the killed variety, but skirts plaited in groups of fine side or box plaits. There must always be the elegant goring which gives the snug hip line and flaring fullness at the bottom.

The skirt that hangs straight or limpy at the feet is hopelessly lacking in style, and as the ordinary walking skirt has no lining especial care must be given to the petticoat under it.

The picture displays an afternoon blouse of dotted chiffon velveteen with shoulder collar and deep cuffs of pointed lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

JUDGE OF NATAL
SUPREME COURT

Mr. Justice Finemore Tells of Remarkable Cure of Distressing Eczema by Cuticura—Grew Worse
Under Professional Treatment.

OTHER SUFFERERS
CURED BY CUTICURA

"I suffered a severe attack of eczema on the scalp, face, ears, and neck, and was for several months under professional treatment, but became worse. My face was dreadfully disfigured, and I lost nearly all my hair. My wife prevailed upon me to try the Cuticura Remedies, which I did with most satisfactory results, the disease disappearing and my hair growing thicker and glossier than before my illness. My wife has purchased Cuticura for other sufferers, with good results in each case.—

Natal Supreme Court), Pietermaritzburg, Natal."

PLANS FOREST POLICY

As a Business Proposition to Business Men.

Sheldon F. Clark, Forester for the Province of Ontario, Outlines a Practical Scheme—Protection First in This Policy, Especially Protection From Fire—Progress Desirable Among Three Lines Immediately.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—Earl Grey was a special guest and Sir Wilfrid Laurier presided at yesterday morning's session of the Forestry convention.

The first paper was by Mr. Joseph Sheldrake, chief engineer of the Canadian Pacific, read a paper on the "Wood Supply of the West." His paper was a technical discussion of the species of woods needed by railways and of the sources of their supply.

Mr. W. T. Chief engineer of the Canadian Pacific, read a paper on the "Wood Supply of the West."

Mr. J. P. Mackay, of the Globe, spoke as a representative of the Canadian Forestry Association. He advocated the restriction of the export of pulpwood to the United States.

Mr. Frederick Keefe read a paper on "The Forest and the Mine."

Mr. J. Kerr Osborne read a paper on "The Wood Supply of the West." After making the replacement of wood by steel and iron for many purposes, Mr. Osborne noted the disappearance from Canada of woods like hickory, white ash, rock elm, and oak. He attempted had been made at replanting.

Quebec's Attitude

Hon. Jean Prevost, Minister of Colonization for Quebec, then gave an address, declaring that though the forests are under the control of the Provincial Government, it was within the constitutional power of the Federal Government to provide a general scheme of forest protection. The development of the new policy was due to the fact that the province had been obliged to explore the forest to take out its revenue. Quebec had greater reserves than was generally known, and the Government would increase them by setting aside the best of the forest lands, and reserve the natural forest lands. He urged the establishment of forestry schools to receive both Federal and Provincial aid.

At the afternoon Mgr. J. N. K. Laflamme, of Laval, gave an address on "Forestry Education."

A Forest Policy.

Mr. Judson F. Clark, Forester for the Province of Ontario, outlined the Canadian Forestry Policy. He described forestry as a business proposition to business men, and especially to statesmen. He also laid it down that the state is the best, if not the only good forester. After reiterating the three paramount reasons for a forestry policy—the securing of the permanence of lumbering industries, the conservation of stream flow and water powers, and the public convenience to be gained—he declared that the wood famine is in sight.

Protection Is First.

First in his policy Mr. Clark placed protection, especially protection from fire. Further progress is needed along three lines, namely:

Improved fire laws.

More efficient administration of the fire laws, and the Disposal of debris incident to lumbering operations.

Nova Scotia has at present the best fire law, though it is in some respects surpassed by that of New Brunswick, and Ontario the most efficient administration.

On the disposal of debris Mr. Clark said that it had been proved that on igneous lands brush can be burned for $2.50 to $3.00 per thousand of the timber cut. A system of regular burning of lands is an urgent duty. It will repay any province vastly better to take fifteen or fifteen cents less per cord for its pulpwood and secure the safety and the advantage to reproduction which goes with the burning of the debris than to secure the utmost cash return and leave the areas cut over for pulpwood in the deplorable and menacing condition which is today characteristic of Canadian pulpwood slashings. The state, not the lumbermen, should bear the expense.

Advocates Municipal Reserves.

Next came the taxation of privately owned forest lands. This should be arranged so as to restrain deforestation.

Exploration and classification of public lands is necessary. Arable land should be opened to settlement, areas where non-arable lands predominate should be constituted forest reserves.

A mistake in choosing too high a standard for the agricultural lands may be subsequently remedied at any time without embarrassment or loss, while the mistake of opening up for settlement lands unsuited for agriculture is certain to be a great and lasting injury.

Both settler and province and is well worth immediate attention as witness many townships in Muskoka, Haliburton and elsewhere.

Mr. Clark further advocated municipal forest reserves. The provinces might advance money for townships to buy non-agricultural areas and reforest them, and might organize a forest service for their management. "There are many municipalities in Europe having no higher prices for forest products than obtain in Western Ontario to-day, whose income from such municipal forests pays the entire expense of maintaining schools, roads, and other local improvements, and in not a few cases there is a surplus which is annually divided as a cash bonus among the citizens."

Practical Management.

Such a forest would begin to pay in from 15 years in Southern, to 30 to 35 years in Northern Ontario. The plan might be extended to the newer districts and townships started on their career with municipal forests.

The central feature of Mr. Clark's policy was the introduction of a system of practical and distinctively Canadian forest management, aiming at the perpetuation and improvement of the forest by judicious lumbering.

The provinces should undertake a systematic stock-taking of their timber resources.

The lumber should be sold under conditions making it the lumberman's interest to conserve the forest.

Trained foresters are needed, and a School of Forestry.

Knowledge of improved methods of forest management should be spread among private owners.

The Work Summarized.

At the closing session the committee on resolutions presented a lengthy report, which summarized the work of the convention.

The Governments, Dominion and Provincial, were urged to encourage the farmers in re-forestation by the designation of expert knowledge, the procuring of proper seedlings and further aid.

The fire ranging systems were approved, but the small expenditure of so valuable an asset was deplored.

The restriction of the export of pulpwood and other roads projected through coniferous forests were urged to provide proper patrols and other precautions.

Forest reserves were approved, and the Governments urged to establish a system of appropriation of settlement within view to selecting proper agricultural lands and saving the forests as far as possible.

It was also resolved that the time is now ripe for a general forest policy for Canada, and that the Federal Government be asked to inaugurate the same.

The opinion was also expressed that the retention of areas under wood and the replanting of depleted areas would be encouraged by an abolition of taxation.

Last night a large number of delegates left by special G. T. R. train to visit Mills near Madawaska. The train was arranged for by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier closed the convention with these words: "Gentlemen, we are dispersing, but our labors are not at an end; they are just beginning. Let everyone who has been back to his home become a missionary for forest protection."

PLUMBERS PLEAD GUILTY.

One Hundred and Twenty-Two Defendants in Conspiracy and Fraud Charges Admit Their Guilt.

Toronto, Jan. 13.—One hundred and twenty-two members of the Plumbers' Union, under individual indictments for conspiracy to defraud and to restrain trade, pleaded guilty before Chancellor Boyd in the Assizes yesterday, and they are to be sentenced on Monday next.

Nine of them, through Mr. R. Riddell, their counsel, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to defraud the Toronto Bedding Co. of $400.

Four others entered a similar plea to a charge of conspiracy to injure J. W. Reeves, and another quartet, represented by J. G. O'Donoghue, pleaded not guilty. An indictment against H. E. Jarman, who had given evidence, was withdrawn.

R. M. Yeoman, for whom Mr. Riddell pleaded guilty, with a group of others, stood up in court and changed his plea to not guilty. Mr. Riddell announced that restitution had been made in all his cases and this fact will be considered by Chief Justice Boyd in imposing sentence.

William Riches, barber on South Keele street, identified the man as John Halaney, and said he had been with him during the afternoon. Deceased was a familiar figure in the Junction. He was about 48 years of age. An inquest will be opened in the morning.

Big Pole Falls.

St. Catharines, Jan. 13.—Yesterday morning, while a large concrete pole was being put up by the lock No. 2, old Welland Canal, for the Cataract Power Co. to convey their power wires across the canal, some of the guy-wires broke, allowing the immense pole to drop and break in two. The pole is 160 feet long and weighs over fifty tons. The loss will be about $2,000.

Marvellous Escapes From Death

Experiences of Travellers in Switzerland, Workmen on Buildings, A Blind Boy and a Would-be Suicide.

Surely one of the most terrible experiences which ever befell man, says Pearson's Weekly, is that which befell the Hon. Gerald FitzGerald while on Monte Rosa, in attempting to descend to Macugnaga. He had left the Margherita hut, and was tied between two Swiss guides named Alner, father and son.

On the way down they were passing along a dangerous ledge, when Mr. FitzGerald and the younger guide fell over. The rope held, however, and young Alner succeeded in dragging himself up over the face of the rock. After he had saved himself he returned to the Margherita hut, whence he telephoned to Alagna for immediate assistance.

It was impossible for Mr. FitzGerald to raise himself, as he had broken his right leg. There he remained for seven long hours, supported by a rope and suspended over a precipice at a height of 10,500 feet. Could a more horrible situation be imagined? There he had to remain all those weary hours hanging between life and death.

It was the old guide who succeeded in supporting Mr. FitzGerald the whole of the time. Old Alner stood motionless for seven hours, with his legs propped against a boulder, the whole weight of Mr. FitzGerald being upon his body. Eventually, when help arrived, poor old Alner appeared utterly exhausted by the feat. Strain being put upon him. Eight guides and two physicians conveyed Mr. FitzGerald to Alagna. It is needless to say that all the inhabitants warmly cheered old Alner as he came down the mountain.

A tourist named Gregorex has been on the edge of a precipice a much longer time than this, but still he was not suspended in mid-air. Mr. Gregorex was found on a narrow ledge of rock on the Emir, where he had been six days. Of course he had not the whole of the time there without food or drink, and if he had moved he would have fallen down the side of a precipice 600 feet deep. It is surprising how long life may be maintained in the most desperate circumstances. In Westmoreland a sheep has been discovered which was buried on Dent Fell for twenty-two days. It was got from the crevasse and thawed out, when it was able to walk a mile and a half home.

IMPRISONED ON A HIGH CHIMNEY.

There has been built recently a great factory chimney in connection with Lowfield Mill, Belfield, near Rochdale. One day three workmen, named Walter Dempsey, Jos. Evans and Samuel Bardsley, were engaged in winding up some of the material for the top when it became entangled in the scaffolding and would move neither up nor down. Thus it was that the men were effectually imprisoned in their aerial position at the top of the chimney.

Eventually the Rochdale steeplejack, Joseph Smith, was summoned to the scene and he devised a method of escape. Acting upon his advice, one of the men tore his shirt into strings and tied the pieces together to form a rope. One end of this shirt rope was let down and it was tied a good stout rope which was hauled up to the top of the chimney and made secure. After this a saddle was fastened to the end of the rope and it was hoisted up, and eventually the men were lowered safely to the ground after four hours' imprisonment.

On the other day an errand boy, with a medicine box on his arm, jumped on the back axle of a cab at Teighmouth. The result was that the wheel of the conveyance dragged his box into the spokes and the boy after it. The boy's head was on the outside of the wheel and his legs inside, and in this position he was dragged a distance of 400 yards. At every turn of the wheel he revolved, and yet at the end of his remarkable ride he was not hurt.

Some little time ago the Keighley police were attracted to the pawnbroker's shop in Park street by the shouts of a man. There they found that the man had the upper part of his body protruding through the glass panel of a door. When the officers asked the man what he was doing, he replied that he was wedged in and could not get out. Then the constables tugged and pulled and jerked and pushed at the human carcass fastened in the door, but it was firmly wedged. It was necessary to break in the door before they could possibly release the man. When a policeman got inside the house to break the door he found a considerable number of articles of wearing apparel already packed in readiness for removal.

This is surely one of the most comical captures of a burglar ever known. When upon trial he appeared to be sent to Armlay gaol instead of having to lie on the bare boards of Keighley police station; he told the magistrate, amid a considerable amount of laughter, that for a long time he would not like to have to sit sleep on bare planks.

Lance Sergeant Murphy, of the Singapore water police, has had a remarkable adventure. It was set him to arrest two notorious gamblers who had taken refuge on a barge moored off the boat quay. Immediately the men sighted him they dived under the water. Sergeant Murphy, however, was not baffled, for he dived in after them and found the two criminals in the slimy mud at the bottom of the harbor. There he seized hold of them and brought them to the surface. He swam straightway to the adjoining steps with his captives, and took them to the police station.

A BLIND BOY'S ADVENTURE.

A blind boy, who was left in charge of a baker's horse and van near the Clifton Suspension Bridge at Bristol, had a most marvellous escape from a cruel death. The horse walked straight over the cliffs and fell to the bottom, a distance of 290 feet. The boy himself tumbled into a tree, whence he was afterwards extricated unhurt, while at the foot of the cliff the cart was found smashed to atoms. The miraculous escape did not end here, as it was found that the pony was uninjured.

The stout old ship Fannie Kerr has had a marvellous escape. She was abandoned on fire in the Pacific Ocean in May of last year, while on a voyage from Newcastle, New South Wales, to San Francisco. A short time ago this ship drifted ashore at South Cape, Formosa. She must have been a derelict vessel for over twelve months, and during the time she was abandoned it is calculated that she drifted nearly 4,000 miles. This is not bad for a ship that was abandoned as unseaworthy.

A remarkable escape from death is that of a girl who was admitted to the St. Bartholomew's Hospital in Rochester. This female patient was the daughter of a local police officer, and by some accident she had a needle thrust right into her heart. A remarkable operation was performed at the hospital, as a result of which, after a considerable amount of suffering on the girl's part, the needle was successfully removed from the heart.

THE ESCAPE OF A WOULD-BE SUICIDE.

At the thirty-first congress of the German Chirurgical Association, held at Berlin, a very remarkable patient was introduced to the congress. This was a young man who, attempting suicide, shot himself with a small calibre gun. The bullet had penetrated his heart, but the wound had healed up very rapidly. The Röntgen rays were turned upon the man's heart and the bullet was discovered in the right ventricle, bouncing about with each beat. The man was for all the world as though his heart was a rattle. After some time the bullet gradually became encased, and now it moves rhythmically with the heart without causing the slightest inconvenience to the patient.

Equally remarkable was the temporary escape from death of a domestic servant, named Ellen Kiesby. Some years ago she was accidentally shot near Northampton and the bullet lodged in her head but could not be located. Recently the girl said she thought the bullet had moved its position; later in the day she died. An inquest was held at Weedon, and it was proved this death was caused through inflammation of the brain, the bullet having been in the young woman's brain the whole of the time. An almost miraculous escape from death was that of two little children in a Bungalow in Bengal. A tiger rushed out of the jungle and broke in after the children. As he rushed at them he came across a looking glass, and there he saw what he took to be another tiger rushing at him. Furiously he attacked his reflection, smashing the glass into ten thousand pieces. The noise and excitement so frightened him that he fled into the jungle, leaving the children unhurt.

FAMOUS PEOPLE

BY FANNIE M. LOTHROP

THOMAS A. EDISON

The World's Greatest Inventor

The eight hundred or more patents credited to Thomas A. Edison means one for every three weeks of his fifty-eight years, and even this calculation is unjust to his mechanical genius, for it does not include his many inventions which never ventured into the publicity that patents demand.

This wizard of invention was a model of precocity. Born at Alva, Ohio, he had only one teacher—his mother; at seven he became a wage-earner; at eleven he was reading Newton's "Principia"; at twelve he was a newsboy on the Grand Trunk Railway, and in an improvised laboratory in the baggage car he began to dabble in chemistry. A broken bottle of sulphuric acid filled the air with an odor that was unpalatable, and the cruel hands of the conductor registered his disapproval by a brutal blow on the ear of the young disciple of science, which made him deaf for life.

He soon learned telegraphy and became so expert that the most rapid operators on the line could not rattle him by their fiercest speed, and all taken down in his small, clear, copper-plate writing. He showed then the remarkable ability to meet any situation instantly and perfectly. When he was in Canada, and the terrible storms cut off all telegraphic communication, and it was necessary to get word to Sarnia, an American town across the border, he mounted a locomotive and "toted" a telegraphic message again and again until the answer came.

His first patent was for a machine for recording votes for the State Legislature. It worked perfectly, but it was the very thing the Legislature most cordially did not want. In the same year he went to New York friendless, penniless, in debt, hungry, footsore and heart-weary at times, but with eyes wide open for chances. The Laws Gold Reporting Co., that reported stock transactions, had an accident that put all its machinery out of commission. Wall Street patrons fretted, chafed, grew frenzied at the delay. Young Edison diagnosed the difficulty, treated it instantly, and was at once known and recognized. A short time later he had a $40,000 check in his pocket for a stock ticker he invented. Then real life began for him.

To tell of his inventions in a few lines is like seeking to condense a library into an epigram; but mention must be made of multiplex telegraphy, incandescent electric lighting, the phonograph, moving pictures, the microphone, the tasmeter, the odoscope, electric pen, his storage battery, the megaphone, which list faintly suggests a host of others.

Edited according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by W. C. Mack, of the Department of Agriculture.

A RIDE IN A GLASS-BOTTOMED BOAT

"Did you ever ride in a glass-bottomed boat, John?" asked Aunt Helen, who had been watching her nephew as he stood at the window, teasing to go out and sail boats in the gutter stream rushing along in front of the house.

"Never, Aunt Helen," he replied, still gazing wistfully toward the running water. "I don't believe it would be as nice as sailing my Cunard steamer and being the captain."

"Oh, yes, it would," encouraged Aunt Helen. "Would you like to hear about it?"

"Yes," admitted John. "If it won't take too long, for I think it is going to stop raining soon."

"Well, put down your Cunard and I will tell you about it. I'll begin by asking a question. Do you know that plants and trees grow in many places in the ocean—just as they do on land?"

"Why, no!" said John, growing interested.

"They do, and many other beautiful things are there also, and in order to see them one must go out in a glass-bottomed boat."

"Near Monterey, California, out in the Pacific Ocean, there is a sea garden, where plants and trees grow in the sea as they do on land. The trees and plants grow so tall that the place is called the Sea Forest. One time when your grandmother and I were there, we went down to the boat-house and engaged passage in the glass-bottomed boat that takes you out in the sea garden."

"The vessel is a very large row-boat with a high prow and stern. The center of the bottom is glass. Round this is a railing, on which we lean as we gaze down on the beauties below. Overhead is a framework, on which is draped a black curtain, shutting out the light from the top and sides. This is brought down back of us, and we sit on the edge, to hold it down."

"When we are comfortably settled, the oarsmen head right for the garden. The water is about sixteen feet deep, and so clear that we can see the bottom. At first we go through a patch of drifting seaweed, which, the guide says, breaks off from the plants and floats ashore. Then on the bottom we see a few shells, with turfs of moss, and here and there a frisky minnow darting in and out. As we row out farther the plants seem to grow under our very eyes, and we are delighted with a perfect fairy-land of pink and white seaweed, jellyfish and feathery ferns."

"We are slowly rowed over delightful beds of sea-anemone, at the roots of which grow mosses of bright red, yellow and green. Everything is in pleasant confusion—plants with broad, flat leaves and those with fine, straying tendrils, tumble-grasses and sponges, with goldfishes darting in and out, and many colored shells. Glistening pebbles are scattered about, sometimes in piles, as though a child had heaped them up, and sometimes singly. We are lost in admiration and wonder, when the oarsman recalls us by saying, 'But you are still to go to the Sea Forest.' As we are rowed out into deeper water, the bottom of the ocean grows rougher. Large gullies and wild gullies lie beneath us. Huge rocks covered with red and green moss form a hiding-place for fishes of all shapes and colors. The awkward flounder, with both eyes on one side of his head, tumbles through the water. The long, slender convict fish—named from the black and white stripes which run round its body—glides noiselessly between the closest rushes and grasses. Here are regular valleys and hills, on which grow tall sea-trees, whose feathery tops lap the bottom of the boat. Long golden plumes of kelp reach from one to another, and there are hanging vines."

"The sea animals are larger and coarser. We see one large devil-fish, reaching out with its many arms, raking in all its range. A sea-horse swims slowly through the water until it comes to a strong seaweed, and here it attaches itself by its tail. The boat stops for a few minutes, and we remain silently gazing into the deep. Then we veer round, and are taken by a new route back to the dock, where we pay the man a quarter, and feel that that was a very small price; for to us it has been the revelation of a new world."—Youth's Companion.

The Latter Day Saints form a church in Chatham and one in Buckhorn, some twelve miles south of Chatham.

We are informed that at a recent meeting of the Chatham Branch Agricultural Society held at Louisville, the following officers were elected: President, W. A. Everitt; Vice-President, Wm. McCubbin; Treasurer, Dupont McNaughton; Secretary, Robert Struthers; Directors, Duncan McVicar, Peter McKerrall, F. Davis, Jacob Killam, Samuel Everitt, J. B. Grover, S. Knapp, Thos. Martin and Alex. The sale of pews in Ward Beecher's church in 1863 amounted to $32,000.

Moore's friends desire him to fight Tom King again in Canada. Prize, $30,000.

Not a single person was injured or killed on the Great Western Railway in England in the year 1862, though eight millions and a half passengers were carried over it.

Tom Thumb retires on a quarter of a million. This is but a fair illustration of the freaks of fortune these topsy-turvy days. It seems much easier to make a fortune by littleness than by greatness.

Fuel is very scarce in Nashville. A car of wood brings $30 in greenbacks.

King Charles of Athens is trying to play the role of Citizen King. He goes about almost unattended, has had his throne in the Cathedral taken down, rebukes courtiers who wear gold lace, and has mounted his establishment on a moderate scale. Greek bonds have not risen in consequence; but these symptoms seem to show a rule under good guidance and willing to be guided.

The election of Reeves and Deputy Reeves in the county resulted as follows:

Harwich—John McMichael, Reeve; Geo. Young, Deputy.
Chatham—L. H. Johnson, Reeve; Samuel Everitt, Deputy.

Robert Hughson and Walter King Howes dissolved partnership as millers in Blenheim.

The River St. Clair is now frozen over between Sarnia and Port Huron. On Thursday the ferry boats ceased running and were laid up.

The Windsor Record says that a man with more daring than sense rode from Chatham to Windsor during the heavy storm of Tuesday morning perched between the tender box and the baggage car. When the train arrived he was completely covered with snow and scarcely able to walk. How he managed to retain his position during his intensely cold ride is a mystery.

Fire destroyed part of Kenneth Urquhart's store on King street.

A friendly game of curling was played in Detroit and resulted as follows:

GREAT DECEPTION IN INSECTS

In certain magazines some curious stories of the deception to which insects resort are told. It says:

"Queerer still than the caterpillars which pretend to be leaves or flowers, for the sake of protection, are those perfidious Brazilian spiders, which are brilliantly colored with crimson and purple, but 'double themselves up at the base of leaf stalks, so as to resemble flower buds, and by this means deceive the insects upon which they prey.'"

"An Indian marks, or praying insect, a little less wicked, though no less cruel, than the spiders, deceives the flies who come to his arms under the false pretense of being a quiet leaf, upon which they may light in safety for rest and refreshment."

"Yet another abandoned member of the same family, relying boldly upon the resources of tropical nature, gets itself up as a complete orchid, the head and fangs being molded in the exact image of the beautiful blossom, and the arms folding treacherously around the unhappy insect which ventures to seek for honey in its deceptive jaws."—The Children's Tribune.

THE BISHOP AND THE WAFFLES

It would indeed be a queer bishop who could not tell a good story on himself. The late Bishop Dudley of Kentucky, was wont to relate with much relish an interesting experience which he once had in connection with waffles.

At a fine old Virginia homestead where he was a frequent visitor the waffles were always remarkably good.

One morning as breakfast drew near an end, the tiny little black-coated black boy who served at table approached Bishop Dudley and asked in a low voice—

Bishop, won't y' have 'n'er waffle? Yes, said the genial Bishop, I believe I will.

Dez ain't no mo', then said the also little black boy.

Well, exclaimed the surprised reverend gentleman, if there aren't any more waffles, what made you ask me if I wanted another one?

Bishop, explained the little black boy, you's done et ten 'waffles, an' I 'tought y' wouldn't want no mo'—Lippincott's.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS.

LET BANK CLERKS MARRY.

Since reading about the young teller who fleeced the Crown Bank in order to get married, and then skipped out, a good deal of information has come out as to how these young fellows get paid, but, worse still, the restrictions which practically prohibit them from getting married, says The Khan in the Hamilton Herald.

Some of these chappies don't hit the thousand-dollar mark, for instance, which entitles them to look upon the daughters of men until they are old enough to know better—I was going to say, not till they are so old and decrepit that they are a standing joke with the fair sex.

Now, I am a convert to female suffrage. Give the women a vote we would have a revolution in more directions than one. Down in Quebec the young people are openly encouraged to marry, even if they have nothing but the clothes on their backs and don't know where the next meal is coming from.

And Quebec is dominating this Dominion, and she is invading this Province on three sides.

The country is crawling with old bachelors who are waiting till they get rich enough to marry. They were rich enough twenty years ago, and the girls whom they should have married are framed pictures, school-ma'ams, dining room girls, stenographers, or book-keepers.

But when it comes down to barring matrimony like the banks do, it's too much of a good thing. A matrimonial committee of the House of Commons, half full of women, would do as much to banks as a railway committee half full of whiskey would do to a level crossing.

I know an old fool who, if he had to live his life over again, would marry the first nice girl who would have him as soon as he was out of his teens.

THE KINGSTON EXPERIMENT.

It is to be hoped that the Conservatives and Liberals of Kingston will faithfully carry out the agreement they have made with each other to make the coming election in that city clean and honest, comments the Hamilton Spectator. If the experiment succeeds it will greatly encourage other ridings to do the same thing, for the burden of elections has become well nigh intolerable in this province, and throughout Canada, and nowhere, apparently, is the burden heavier than in Kingston. The developments at the recent election trial showed that the Liberal party had been exceedingly corrupt, and men of that party claim that the Conservatives were equally corrupt. Be that as it may, the election trial revelations have set the Kingston people thinking, and if they are not ready, now, to go in for absolute purity in elections, it is doubtful if they ever will. It is earnestly to be hoped, therefore, that the zealous fools in both parties will be restrained, and a clean election result, that a good example may be set which will undoubtedly be followed by the sensible men of both parties in other ridings.

Both candidates in the bye-election and 150 followers of each have signed an agreement binding themselves in honor and good faith to absolutely refrain from and prevent as far as they can any infraction of the Ontario election law, among which infractions are: (1) Bribing voters by money or other valuable consideration or promises, (2) Procuring or promising office, place or employment for voters or unduly influencing them, (3) Subscribing, advancing or paying money for purposes of election, except money bona fide paid into the hands of the financial agent of the candidate, such agent to keep accurate account thereof, open to inspection of any party signing this agreement, (4) Corruptly treating or furnishing entertainment to voters, (5) Corruptly betting or wagering on elections, (6) Hiring vehicles to convey electors to poll or paying travelling expenses of voters, (7) Personation of voters.

That program should recommend itself to all honest men, and to all men who have borne the burden of election expenses. Looking at the matter from a purely business standpoint, one would imagine that both parties would jump at a chance to rid themselves of the necessity of subscribing and paying out of large sums of money, which, when done by both parties, gives neither party an advantage.

Take the matter of cabs, for instance. Cab owners, either by preference, or as a matter of business,

Packed at the Oven's Mouth

We do things right at the Mooney bakery. Crackers are packed piping hot from the ovens. The moisture-proof paper and air-tight tins retain all the freshness and crispness, no matter where or when you buy them.

They come to your table just as inviting and delicious as though you ate them at the ovens in the bakery. At all grocers in 1 and 3 lb. packages.

divide themselves among the two parties, and all are employed at fancy figures for election day. Each side having cabs, neither has any advantage, and the result of a heavy expenditure of money is the same as it would be if not a cab were hired. It may be said, incidentally, that the law should be so amended as to compel every elector to go to the poll—unless he can show a doctor's certificate or other satisfactory reason for his neglect—the penalty being disfranchisement. That would obviate the necessity of a very large expenditure of a very large share of what is looked upon as the "legitimate" expenses of an election—the money used in "getting out the vote." At present many good men are prevented from being candidates because of the fact that they cannot afford to pay the enormous "necessary" expenses of an election.

We shall watch the Kingston experiment with much interest, in the hope that it may be abundantly successful, that the result may induce a general adoption of the plan.

ADVENTURE OF A SHIP'S CAT.

Melbourne Argus.

The ship's cat or the mail steamer Ortona had a remarkable experience on the last homeward voyage of that vessel.
Soon after the Ortona left Australia the cat was missing, and it was thought that it had been left behind; but when the vessel was 32 days out from Sydney one of the engineers heard a faint mew in the refrigerating chamber. This chamber, which had not been opened since the vessel started, was promptly examined, and the unfortunate cat was found lying upon a box of butter in a very emaciated condition.

One of its ears and a portion of its nose had been bitten off by the cold, but its fur had grown to a great length during its imprisonment. The cat has since recovered.

Cured of Drunkenness

How a Montreal lady cured her husband of drunkenness with a secret home remedy.

"I want to tell you that I have entirely cured my husband of drunkenness so quickly and simply that I am astonished. I know that I am not a doctor, but I have written for your free sample package. The sample package I got from you checked his drinking, and before I had used the full treatment he was permanently cured. I gave him the remedy in his tea, and as it had no taste or smell, he never knew he was taking it. I want others to know so you can use this letter, but please not my name yet. I may say that my husband's health is better in every way than for years."

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Keep your temper. Nobody else wants it.

A considerate man will make his takes occasionally so that his friends may have something to talk about.

No one worth while will insult you the others can't.

Many pleasures are not pleasures at all after you get them.

Cupid, too often, alas, should really spell its name cupidity.

At any rate, a bald man does not part his hair after he parts with it.

Truth often takes a hard fall out of its enemies before they succeed in crushing it.

By brooding over a grievance you are apt to hatch out trouble.

Vanity is the armor plate that keeps many a man from being hit by the shafts of the world.

A girl who marries a rich man for love sometimes finds she has taken the gold cure for her malady.

For that tired feeling take a rest.

Upsets Things.

"Is love that makes the world go round. That's why a woman's frown Or story stare and haughty air Can turn it upside down."

Fame.

It is hard to convince a man who has never had a taste of it that fame is not a sure cure for insomnia and that tired feeling.

Few men have such weak eyes that they are afraid to trust them in the full glare of the limelight. It looks good to the man who has never had it turned on him, but those who have stood around on one foot and generously allowed the spot light to play on them from all directions insist that it isn't nearly so soul satisfying as would appear from the advertisement.

However, they never signal the man to turn it off. They stand there and allow it to glare on, although their complexions may be easily faded.

Those fellows who insist that fame is a hollow mockery because they have tasted about a quarter's worth of it never seek a quiet hamlet in the mountains to get away from the applause.

Although they know all about it, they wait until the public posts them up as back numbers, and then they go about saying it is not worth while.

A Cheap One.

He had the art of living. Worked out to save his pile. For when girls were the waiters He tipped them with a smile.

Just His Way.

A New York dentist who in fifty idle moments married fifty different women is about to take treatment for the marrying habit in a prison term. The doctors of law who have looked into his case think that is about the only thing that will cure him.

The first time a young man leads a blushing girl up to the altar and takes the preacher aside to ask him how much it will be he feels embarrassed and doesn't know what to do with his hands. By the time he has been married forty-nine times it comes about as easy to him as buying a cut rate ticket of a scalper.

You wouldn't think that a man could find fifty women with enough money and jewelry to make them attractive who would marry him without demanding a moving picture of his past, but there is the evidence. The moral is that the bashful young man should take courage. He can find a wife if he will ask enough women, and the chances are that it will be the first one he asks.

Unusual Way.

"How do you want me to cover this story of scandal in high life?" asked the newspaper reporter.

"With a mantle of charity," replied the unusual editor.

Incompetent.

"He got a job in the depot calling trains, but couldn't hold it."

"Pronounced the names so people could understand, I presume."

Wife Would Tell Him.

"He is crazy, but doesn't know it."

"Evidently isn't married."

Every Speaker or Singer Should Read This

Harry Bennett would as Soon Travel Without His Music as Without Psychine.

His Throat Was Saved at a Critical Moment by Psychine When Nothing Else Helped Him.

Harry M. Bennett makes his living by his voice. He makes a good living because he has a good voice. He continues to have a good voice because he has the brain to take care of it. Harry Bennett is a man who would as soon cut off his arm as do anything to his throat that would injure his voice and destroy his earning power. He would not touch a throat remedy, a mucous membrane, or a throat lozenge, for an experiment. Much less would he speak so highly of one as he does of Psychine if it had not proved its value and surpassed any other remedy in its wonderful power of healing and curing throat troubles.

Mr. Bennett got acquainted with Psychine in this way. He was engaged to sing twice a day at Massey Hall for a week last winter. In the middle of the week his throat got raw and sore, and he became so hoarse he could not sing without painful effort, and couldn't speak above a whisper. He confided to a friend that he could not sing any more, and would have to cancel his engagement for the rest of the week. His friend told him to try Psychine. He did. The result was his throat felt well enough to get him through that evening's performance. From that time his throat healed up and his voice cleared, and he was soon in first-class condition without losing an hour from his professional work. Harry Bennett was so grateful for what Psychine had done for him that he sent the accompanying testimonial, with the statement that he was willing the proprietors of Psychine should use his name whenever they chose, and that he would always be glad to recommend the remarkable remedy. Such cases are frequent with Psychine, but as Harry Bennett is so well known as an entertainer and as a thoroughly reliable gentleman, his voluntary testimonial will carry conviction to many who are suffering with throat or lung trouble, or who are struggling against stubborn colds. If they follow up Harry Bennett's experience and advice, they will try Psychine. It cures where others fail, and if you are suffering from chills, cold, sore throat, hoarseness, cough, bronchitis, asthma, lung trouble, or la grippe, you will find Psychine the best remedy you ever had, and a great strengthening to the system besides. Don't lay this aside as an ordinary advertisement. It represents the earnest, dear-bought experience of one who knows the value of Psychine, and who is eager to help others to relief.

Harry M. Bennett, Vocalist and Entertainer

"I take pleasure in sending you a testimonial on the excellence of your PSYCHINE, also a photograph of myself with my permission to use it if you wish to. For the past three years during my busiest seasons my throat has given me no end of trouble in the way of irritability and tickling sensation owing, I presume, to overwork and occasional colds, a thing, I can assure you, not very pleasant to sing. I tried many remedies, but none gave me any relief, and I am pleased to say I derived great benefit from the first bottle of PSYCHINE, and since then I have never been without it. Besides its healing and soothing qualities it is an excellent tonic for the nerves. I highly recommend it to all having throat and nervous troubles. Yours sincerely, 'HARRY M. BENNETT.'"

BLOOD HUMORS

PIMPLES Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face is sadly marred by unsightly eruptions, pimples, eruptions, flesh worms, and humors, and various other blood diseases.

Their presence is a source of embarrassment to those afflicted, as well as pain and regret to their friends.

Many a cheek and brow—cast in the mould of grace and beauty—have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost, and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Why, then, consent to rest under this cloud of embarrassment?

There is an effective remedy for all these defects, it is,

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

This remedy will drive out all the impurities from the blood, and leave the complexion healthy and clear.

Miss Annie Robin, Madoc, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in recommending your Burdock Blood Bitters to any one who may be troubled with pimples on the face. I paid out money to doctors, but could not get cured, and was almost discouraged, and despaired of ever getting rid of them. I thought I would give B.B.B. a trial, so got two bottles, and before I had taken them I was completely cured and have had no sign of pimples since."

Burdock Blood Bitters has been manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, for over 30 years, and has cured thousands in that time. Do not accept a substitute which unscrupulous dealers say is "just as good." "It can't be."

His Christ—Paul's Message.Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1906, by Frederick Dyer, of Toronto, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 7.—Appropriate for the new year as the season for good resolutions and "turning over a new leaf" is this sermon, the text for which is taken from Acts xvii, 30,
"And the times of this ignorance God winked at."What a tremor of excitement must have stirred the minds and the hearts of his men when Horatio Nelson, the celebrated English admiral, gave the order to clear the gun deck for action at Trafalgar! Ah, yes, we can truly say the one armed naval hero whose body now sleeps in St. Paul's cathedral by the side of the Waterloo chieftain has no novice in the art of war. Way back in the uprising of the American colonies he fought as a young captain of twenty-one under Lord Howe. He was in the midst of the British struggles off Cape Vincent in 1788. He was the commander who destroyed the French fleet in the harbor of Aboukir when Napoleon was making his Egyptian conquest. He was part of the naval history of England from 1770 up to the time of his tragic death, but all his previous engagements were mere preparation for his great battle of Trafalgar. Then he gripped Napoleon's admiral—Villeneuve by name—and grimly said, "Thou shalt not make it possible for the conquerors of Prussia and Spain and Austria and Italy and Holland and Westphalia to cross the channel and fight under the shadow of Westminster Abbey and Windsor Castle." Truly that Trafalgar order, "England expects every man to do his duty," must have aroused the heroic in every British heart, for Trafalgar was the extreme battle of Horatio Nelson's life.What the quarter deck of the British line of battle ship Victory was to Nelson at Trafalgar Mars Hill was to the great gospel warrior Paul. Like Nelson, Paul was no novice. He had fought in many a conflict for Christ.
He was a scarred veteran of many gospel campaigns. In Damascus, at Jerusalem, over in Corinth, in Ephesus, we can follow his martial footsteps.
But though he had fought many battles for Christ the supreme battle of Paul's life was witnessed at Mars Hill.
"No moment in the annals of the church," wrote the historian, "has larger significance than that in which the gospel of the living Christ came in its first contact at Athens with the worship of paganism, its philosophy and its science." Here it was that Paul not only had to grapple with Plato's philosophy and with the teachings of the Stoics and the Epicureans, but here also he had to preach Christ in the home of the drama and preach Jesus from the rostrum made memorable by the orations of the greatest orators of the past, whose silver tongues had created armies and made laws and started forth Greece on its conquest of the world.When Paul looked up and waved his hand above him he saw the famous Acropolis crowned with its many temples. There is the Parthenon with its statue of Athena, the guardian goddess of Athens, which city was the home of Demosthenes and Lysias and Lycurgus and Aeschines, the orators, and of Aeschylus and Sophocles, the dramatists, and of Thucydides and Xenophon, the historians, and of So-lon, the lawyer, and of Socrates, the teacher, and of Pericles, the poet, and of Phidias, the Michael Angelo of the Greeks. To the right of this famous temple was the marvelous colossal statue of Athena Promachus. And there is a beautiful poem in marble called "The Temple of Wingless Victory." Every column, every shrine, every intricate covering of that citadel of ancient Athens was chiseled by the hand of a master.When Paul ceased to look up and as a student of the beautiful looked down his eyes in amazement wandered over the massive proportions of the great temple of Jupiter Olympus, which was one of the seven wonders of the world.The few huge columns of this mighty temple still standing inspire more awe in the minds of the modern students than do even the gigantic stones of the pyramids or the ruined foundations of the ancient statue of the god Helios once bestriding the harbor of Rhodes.
There was also the beautiful temple of the Theseum, perhaps the most perfectly preserved temple of all the ancients. And there before him was the gigantic temple of Mars, the god of war. Paul was not preaching Christ among a set of ignorant savages. He was preaching Christ to the greatest students of architecture, of sculpture, of poetry and of oratory the world has ever seen. Wherever Paul's eyes turned he could see the beautiful statues and shrines erected not only to scores but to hundreds and thousands of Grecian gods and goddesses. The city was literally full of beautiful idols of all sorts. It was easier to find there a god than it was a man, Petronius once quipped. Yet it was on Mars Hill that Paul dared to defy all the faiths and the intellectualities of paganism.How did he do it? After presenting Christ as only Paul could preach Jesus he lifted up his hands and waved them toward the countless shrines and wicked deities of Athens. Then he uttered the memorable words of my text, "And the times of this ignorance God winked at, but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." As God bore with the ignorance of the Greeks of old God has been bearing with our ignorance, but now our eyes are opened as were those of the Athenians. Now it is time for us to repent of our past sins and surrender our hearts to Jesus Christ. Could we have a better time to do this than on this first Lord's day of the new year? As the year 1906 has slipped into the year 1906 we seem to be in almost as dramatic a position as were the Athenians when listening to the preaching of the mighty Paul.God in the first place has borne with our ignorance theological. He has been dealing with our creeds a great deal as he has been dealing with the shrines of the Athenian worshippers. To use a homely figure, he has been shutting his eyes to our superstitions as a mother sometimes pretends not to see the wrongdoings of her little child, because she does not think it best to correct the boy now. Man in the past has been holding the Baptist creed and the Episcopal creed and the Methodist creed and the Presbyterian creed and the Lutheran creed and the Catholic creed sometimes with as little intelligence as did the Athenians worshipping at the altars of a Mercury, an Apollo, a Jupiter, a Juno and a Hephaestus, but now men are beginning to realize that while it is important to adhere faithfully to the creeds of their respective churches the supreme necessity is that they give their loyal worship to the Holy Trinity, of whom God is the Father and Jesus Christ the elder brother and the holy spirit is the paraclete.
And yet, my friends, there was a time when Christians people built their secretarian fences so high that they could not see any good in any church unless that church belonged to their own household of faith.No sooner did John Wesley come into touch with the Moravians and get a broader conception of Christ than had the Episcopalians than at once the channel of the Church of England was filled with a spiritual outcast. No sooner did John Bunyan attempt to start forth as a Nonconformist preacher than at once he had to surrender his pulpit for Bedford-jail. No sooner did Albert Barnes, the St. John, get a broader vision of heaven than had his ministerial brethren than he was deprived of his Presbyterian orders, and the greatest Bible teacher and commentator of his generation had to sit in the law of the Presbyterian church of Philadelphia as a worshipper instead of standing in the pulpit as a preacher. All the persecutions of the dark ages were due to the worship of sectarian creeds. All the horrors of a St. Bartholomew were due to the murderings of the Covenanters among Scottish hills and the fiendish works of a "Bloody McKenzie" and of a "Bloody Mary" were due to the worship at a denominational altar instead of the crucifix of Jesus Christ. Religion, religion, what awful crimes have been committed in the name! The demons of the darkest caverns and the most bestial of sins have drenched their garments with human gore because under the helmets of sectarianism they have been prompted to unsheath the sword of bigotry. But now all things are being changed. Paul revealed the "Unknown God" to the Athenians. Jesus Christ has revealed God to us. Now our religious teachers have become so broad that they areThe finest flavoring for

EASY MONEY AT HOME

BIRD BREED 10 CENTS.
"CANDY" vs. CHICKENS—showing how to make money at home. To get your information quickly we send you a BIRD SEED, 10 CENTS. Address: COTTON BIRD SEED, 10 CENTS, London, England.ready to join all Protestant churches in one great federation for Christian work as long as the one cardinal doctrine of those churches is "Jesus Christ the Saviour, who has come to save man, a sinner."And, mark you, this revelation of Christ has not been gladly acclaimed by the churches during the past centuries, but only within the last few years. God has revealed himself to us theologically. We know, and we well know, that foreordination or Armin-ianism or belief in apostolic succession are not essential for salvation.
"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and be saved," was the slogan of Paul and is the slogan of the modern Christian pulpits. Sectarian intolerance is being rapidly demolished. We might have clung to our sectarianism in the past as the Athenians clung to their altars of gold and silver and marble, before Paul appeared. But we cannot, we dare not do so now. There is but one true altar, and that is the altar of Jesus Christ. "And the times of this ignorance God winked at, but now com-mandeth all men everywhere to repent." Repent! Repent! Repent in Christ's name or ye shall all likewise perish.But God has borne with our moral ignorance as well as our theological intolerance. He has been overlooking for generations the sins of the flesh, which men have unconsciously committed as well as the sins of false creeds. And when I speak thus I could room over a very wide territory if I would, for you have no more right to judge a man of the fifteenth or sixteenth centuries by the moral standards of the twentieth century than you have a right to condemn the Puritans because they called Roger Williams from Massachusetts in 1635 or because, under the leadership of Cotton Mather, they burned the supposed witches of Salem on 1691.But I find God bearing with the social sins of our fathers, as well as the theological and moral faults. I find that he comes to us, as he did to Cain of old, and says, "Thou art thy brother's keeper." And when God speaks thus he means even more than when Christ spoke the parable of the Good Samaritan to the Jews as well as to the Greeks. You cannot judge the Greeks who assembled about Mars Hill to listen to the eloquent words of Paul by our social laws any more than you can judge them by our theological or moral criterion.In the first place, you must remember that the Greeks for generations had been a slave holding people. You remember how that matchless orator of Massachusetts, Wendell Phillips, tried to make the Haytian martyr, Toussaint l'Ouverture, the acme of all virtues and human perfections. In his peroration he used these words: "I would call him Napoleon, but Napoleon made his way to the empire over broken bones and through a sea of blood. I would call him Cromwell, but Cromwell was only a soldier, and the commonwealth he founded went down with him into his grave. I would call him Washington, but the great Virginia held slaves." Oh, Wendell Phillips, is that right? Is that honest? Is that fair? Had Toussaint l'Ouverture grown up on the banks of the Potomac with a white skin, would he have done any differently from our Washington or our Jefferson, both of whom held slaves? For centuries the law of conquest in olden times meant enslavement. You should judge the Greeks by the standard of their time but not by ours. God has declared that we have another duty to our brothers than toput the yoke of bitterness about their necks and make them sweat blood in the factory or upon the plantation.
Hear it, ye capitalists. Ye are your brothers' keepers. Blood money can stick to your hands as well as to those of Judas. A mark of God's condemnation for financial sins can be upon your brow as well as upon Cain's for killing his brother with a club.Not only are we our brother's keeper in a financial or in a mercenary sense, but also in a physical sense and in a mental. Aye, we walk in wonderment among the beautiful columns of Athens. We can think of the charioteers driving their flashing eyed chargers over those hillsides. We can see the runners, with the speed of the winds, coming back to that capital telling of victories won. We can picture the altars of gold and silver. We can see the palaces filled with the richest art treasures and see the vast amounts of money squandered for the worship of the god of wine called Dionysus. But right under the shadow of the prison in which Socrates was compelled to quaff the poisonous hemlock, ignorance and filth were everywhere. And when the poor became sick they were not cared for as we care for our sick; but they were left alone to starve and die.
Or they were driven out upon the mountain sides as the Hebrews drove their lepers to the tombs of the dead, crying "The leper, the leper! Room for the leper! Room! Room!" Ah, yes, the Greeks in a social sense had a duty toward their poor fellow men. Have we not as great a duty as theirs? "Thou art thy brother's keeper." Thou art his keeper in a financial way—you must give him work; in a mental way —you must build for him schools; in a physical way—you must care for him when he is sick and helpless. Are you doing it? "And the times of this ignorance God winked at, but now com-mandeth all men everywhere to repent."But God has borne with our past missionary ignorance well as our past social ignorance. We have a duty to fulfill in reference to the kind of homes in which our brethren sleep and eat. We must see that they have the right kind of schools in which to be taught. But above all we must see that they are made acquainted with the gospel of Christ and the mercy of the true God. And yet some people who are members of Christian churches profess to believe that they are not responsible for the kind of God in the heavenly brethren worship. By their actions they practically say, "Christ did not mean anything when he said, 'Go ye therefore and teach all nations,' baptizing them in the name of the father and of the son and of the holy ghost." But he does mean for us simply to go and teach our friends and our own families and our own kith and kin."Ah, my brother, when a man is indifferently to the missionary cause, to preach Christ unto all men and send Christ's missionaries into the farthest most parts of the earth resembles in his righteous selfishness the Sultan of Turkey. Tourists who have been to Constantinople and who have seen the man of Europe is living in daily terror of his life. His bloody hand has been against all his enemies. Murder and rapine have gone wherever his rule has gone. He has deposed his elder brother and shut him up in prison for many years. He is said to have slain two of his nearest relatives, either one of which would have become Sultan had he died. He has killed scores and hundreds and thousands of his subjects in the hope that their deaths might make his life more assured, and yet there he trembles in his palace, year in and year out, afraid of his foreign foes and fearful of his enemies, skulking within his own capital.But once a week the Sultan, even in spite of his own fears, goes regularly to the mosque to pray. He goes there with one motive—to insure his own salvation. It is of himself, his eternal safety, that he thinks and not of the welfare of his people. Can he be possibly that any Christian resembles him in this? Is there a Christian whose sole desire in worship is his own salvation and who cares for nothing for the salvation of the heathen at home and abroad? There were such in the past history of the church. But the broader conceptions of the gospel never seem to enter their lives.
That because Christ is their Saviour they should try to present him to those who know him not, ah, this indeed has never been the purpose of their hearts.
Now, all this narrow conception of Christianity must stop. We must be eyes to the blind and ears to the deaf and crutches to the lame and food for the hungry. But we must be the means, through the missionaries, of bringing Christ to a dying world. Jesus commands it. "The times of our past ignorance God winked at, but now com-mandeth all men everywhere to repent."Thus in closing I would point you to Mars Hill, the most glorious pulpit in the world with the exception of Calvary. And then I would point out for your example the mightiest gospel preacher of all times with the exception of Jesus Christ himself. And I would tell you that Paul did not go to Athens to preach Christ. He was worn out with work. He was resting there for Silas and Timothy to come to him. But while he rested he saw the Athenians in sin. Then he could not rest any longer. The Bible says,
"His spirit was stirred in him when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry." Therefore he went forth to tell the Athenians about his Christ. Ah, my friends, in our modern Athens of America will your hearts burn within you as Paul's burned within him when he saw the wickedness of mankind?
Will you here and now promise not to rest this side of the grave until you have told as many people as you can about the Jesus who alone can save them from their sins? May every hour of every day of the coming year find you proclaiming the gospel tidings from some Mars Hill until at last you stand before the throne of heaven, where Christ shall reveal himself to all his redeemed ones face to face.Paris in London.
