Corner Stone Laid At Brantford's New Public Building At Noon Today

Magnificent Structure Which Will Cost Over $300,000 is Now Well Underway --Hon. Mr. White, Minister of Finance, Performs the Ceremony in Presence of a Vast Throng.

Under a waving Union Jack, Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance in the Dominion Government, at noon to-day laid the corner stone of Brantford's magnificent new public building. A temporary platform had been erected at the corner of Dalhousie and Queen streets and a vast throng witnessed the ceremony. Those to whom invitations had been issued included the members and ex-members of parliament for the four Brants, the Mayor and Council, Warden of the County, members of the Boards of Health, Hospital, Water Commissioners, Public Schools, Collegiate, Library, Board of Trade, Separate School, Sanitarium, the Commanding officers of the two local regiments, President of Trades and Labor Council, County Judge, Postmaster, Collector of Customs, Collector of Inland Revenue, Sheriff, Ven. Archdeacon Mackenzie, Police Magistrate, Parks Board, and so on. Most of these were in attendance. Hon. Mr. White arrived on the morning train at the Grand Trunk depot and was met by the Mayor, W. F. Cocksbutt, M.P., Ald. Spence and others. Mr. Cocksbutt introduced him to those present. He was driven down town, other motors following his car and the Dufferin Rifles band playing an inspiring air as he stepped off the train. Promptly at 12 o'clock in the presence of a large throng, which blocked that portion of Dalhousie street, the proceedings commenced. The building, roughly speaking will cost $250,000. The furnishings and general equipment will be of the most up to date nature, involving over $300,000 in all.

HON. MR. WHITE Who Laid the Corner Stone at New Public Building To-day

Mr. Spence, the chairman for the occasion opened the proceedings with a neat speech, referring to the great pleasure which he experienced in being asked to officiate at such an important event. He considered it an honor to be the presiding officer at the laying of the corner stone of such a magnificent public building, and he felt that the city of Brantford had just reason for being proud of the building. Under course of construction. Ald. Spence welcomed those who gathered to witness the ceremony, referring with pleasure to the large number of workmen in attendance—the brain and sinew of the city. His Worship, Mayor Hartman, who was the next speaker, said the citizens had reason to rejoice in having such a magnificent building. On behalf of the city he welcomed Hon. Mr. White and expressed the hope that it would not be the last time that he would honor the city with a visit. The citizens of Brantford, the Mayor said, associated a building of this kind and he felt that in years to come the residents of this Manchester of Canada would be able to point with pride. In conclusion, Mayor Hartman, took great pleasure in presenting to the Minister of Finance, a handsome silver trowel which was to be used in the laying of the corner stone. The Dedicatory Prayer. Following the Mayor's remarks, the Venerable Archdeacon MacKenzie made the following dedicatory prayer, those in attendance standing with bared heads bowed as the pastor of the local clergy asked for God's blessing on the new structure and all those connected with it: "Heavenly Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, from whom cometh every good and perfect gift, we thank Thee for stable governments, ruling in Thy fear and righteousness, and for the good and well-being of all Thy people; we thank Thee for our civilization and progress, that we are living in a day and generation when many benefits, privileges and blessings are within our power and reach.

PASSENGER COACH FLYING IN FLAMES

Train Makes Record Run Between Port Credit and Hamilton.

(Canadian Press Despatch) TORONTO, Oct. 16.—With the roof of one of the new compartment cars enveloped in flames the Canadian Pacific Railway New York Express train No. 706 made a record run from Hamilton to Port Credit yesterday before it would stop at a station with a sufficient supply of water. Shortly after the express had left Hamilton the fire was discovered between the ceiling and the roof. At the time the coach was filled with passengers, and when the flames suddenly burst into view they made a rush to the rear entrance. Although the train was rushing at a speed of over sixty miles an hour the crew succeeded in clearing out the coach without any person being injured, and in removing the baggage without damage. Port Credit is not a regular stop for the Canadian Pacific trains, but as a large water tank is installed there for the use of the Grand Trunk engines the conductor decided to rush to that place and use the water supply to extinguish the fire. Before the station was reached however, the entire roof was ignited, and the flames streamed behind the burning coach for some feet as the train dashed towards its destination at full speed. The train crew formed themselves into a bucket brigade, and although every facility was exerted in fighting the flames, it was some time after the train pulled in that the blaze was extinguished. The entire roof of the coach was practically burned away, and the interior completely ruined by water and smoke. The cause of the fire is unknown, but it is believed by the crew that a defective lamp ignited the ceiling above, and that the fire gradually worked its way along the space between it and the roof. The blaze was fanned by the train speeding to the station, and spread over the train.

The Vacant Position

The position of Registrar at the Institution for the Education of the Blind, recently made vacant by the lamented death of Mr. W. N. Hossie, has attached to it a salary of $100 a month. In addition to this sum there is a commodious house, free light, heat, help, horse and rig and so on. Appointments to the institution are Provincial and not local, for the reason that the upkeep is borne by all the residents of the Province of Ontario. However, the two representatives of Brant in the Local House, Messrs. Brewster and Westbrook, will, of course, make a strenuous effort to have a Brantford man selected. In this regard the name of Mr. Geo. H. Ryerson among others is quite freely mentioned. He is now in California for the sake of his health.

HUNGER AND PRIVATION

Forced a Leper to Seek Aid From City.

(Canadian Press Despatch) ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 16.—Driven to desperation by hunger and privation a leper, thought to be suffering in the last stages of the disease, applied for food and treatment at the city dispensary here last night. To shield his wife and son he assumed the name of John Kouch. "Kouch" said he was 45 years old, and that he came here from Jackson, Tenn. He said he had been confined in the places of isolation, but always made his escape. The last of these was in Utah. He said his wife and child were now in that state but would not discuss his identity. "Kouch" declared he had contracted the disease in the Philippines while on a business trip in 1898. Four years ago the symptoms appeared, he said. He probably will be sent to the isolation camp to make his home with Wong Wing, a Chinese leper.

JUDGE AND JURORS BELTED WITH APPLES.

Friends of Suffragettes Create Disorder in Glasgow Court LONDON, Oct. 16.—Lord Salvesen while imposing sentence in the Glasgow court yesterday of 8 months' imprisonment on two Suffragettes for attempted arson, was pelted with apples and other missiles by Suffragettes, who packed the court. The judge was not hit, but one apple struck a jurymen in the face. The women cried "Shame," and sang the "Marseillaise."

Annual Meeting Borden Club

The annual meeting of the Borden Club will be held to-night in the rooms, Dalhousie street. The meeting commences at 8 o'clock. All members and those interested are asked to attend. The election of officers and other important matters will be considered.

IMPORTANT MATTERS AT COUNTY COUNCIL MEETING

Decision Reached Not to Join in the Prison Farm Scheme--Some Reasons Why.

Afternoon Session. Moved by Councillor Cook, seconded by Councillor A. L. Davidson, "That this council do not go into the scheme of a county industrial farm with any other county or counties at the present time, but if the scheme proved a success we might in the future enter into an agreement with Wentworth or some other county or counties which have plenty of stone suitable for road purposes." This means that for the present Brant County will not enter into an industrial farm scheme which some have so zealously advocated. The decision of the county council, which passed this resolution at the afternoon session yesterday, will not be received with a great deal of surprise as the county fathers have, that is the majority of them, not been favorably impressed with the scheme. The resolution was passed as an amendment to the following resolution made in the earlier stages of the discussion: Moved by Councillor Simpson, seconded by Councillor Jennings, "That a committee from this council be appointed to draft an agreement with other counties for the institution of a county industrial farm, and to obtain the necessary information as to cost of instituting the farm and the maintenance of the same; also the saving, if any, of the cost the counties are put to in maintaining the county jail system by reason of such county farm, and to report to the council before entering into any agreement on behalf of the county." Councillor Simpson was asked by the Warden to give a short review of the industrial farm scheme. There was no doubt in Councillor Simpson's mind but that the scheme had come to stay, and that in the course of from five to ten years, the scheme would be province wide. Probably some may think because the scheme is a new one that it is almost too generous in dealing with the people serving time. The speaker said that there could not be much hope of reforming a prisoner in a tight cell. Hon. Hanna was asked by the speaker what had led him to become so interested in the scheme. The speaker was told that it was the weakness exhibited by the prisoners. (Continued on Page 4)

A FIERCE FIGHT OCCURED TODAY

Between Union and Non-Union Men in the States.

(Canadian Press Despatch) INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 16.—One man was shot and probably fatally wounded, another seriously hurt when struck on the head with a stone and 14 others arrested, the result of a fierce fight in the heart of the business district here last night between union and non-union street railway employees. All of the police reserves were called out and were unable to quell the riot for more than an hour. Of the men arrested 12 were wounded. For several months attempts have been made to unionize employees of the traction lines centering in Indianapolis, and numerous fights between the union and non-union men have resulted. The union men held a meeting last night, and after the session marched through the business district. Arriving at the centre of the district they met non-union men and a few words started the fight.

A SPANISH SENSATION

(Canadian Press Despatch) NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—A cable from Madrid says a great sensation has been produced by the publication of a royal order to court martial General Primo de Rivera a veteran of the Spanish-American war, charged with contempt of the orders of the King. It is said that the charge originated in the refusal of General Primo de Rivera to attend some of the ceremonies in connection with President Poincaré's visit to Spain.

COUPLE ON BOARD VULTURNO COMMITTED SUICIDE AT SEA

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The Red Star Liner Kroonland from Antwerp, which was one of the ten ships helping in the rescue of passengers from the burned steamer Vulturno, was steaming slowly toward port to-day, delayed by accident to its shaft, but it was expected that it would reach its dock by nightfall and set ashore Captain Inch of the lost steamer and ninety other survivors of the disaster, including many members of the crew who were among the last to leave the doomed vessel. Wireless advices from the approaching rescue-ship report that among the Vulturno's passengers on board are several women separated from their families and three little children whose identity is unknown, there being no relative or guardian with them on the Kroonland. One is a five-year-old boy who speaks German, and the other two are girls, three and four years old respectively, either Russian or Polish. The passengers on the Kroonland raised a fund of $714 for both rescuers and rescued. They are warm in their praise of Captain Inch of the Vulturno and Captain Kreibohm for the courage they displayed. A wireless from C. W. McClure, a passenger on the Kroonland, reports a tragic incident, which, viewed from the Kroonland's decks appeared to be carrying out of a suicide pact between a young married couple. The man and woman were seen to take each other's hand and jump together into the ocean. Passengers taken from the Vulturno later said that the suicide couple were from France, but they did not know their identity.

Social and Personal

Mr. and Mrs. John Burbank and daughter, Mrs. Fry spent yesterday at Rockton Fair.

Miss Margaret Baird, 161 Sheridan St., after spending a few days with her brother, Mr. W. H. Baird Lynden, has returned home.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Campbell, Burch, Ont., was the scene of a jolly gathering on Monday evening when about fifty of the young friends of Miss Elsie Bryant took this opportunity of presenting her with a 'variety shower' in view of her approaching marriage to Mr. Wilson Campbell, which took place Wednesday, Oct. 15th. A social evening followed which was much enjoyed by all participating, and countless good wishes were extended to the guest of the evening. Mr. Wilson Campbell, on behalf of the bride, thanked their friends for their many gifts. Mr. Robert Bradshaw acceptably replied. The party broke up in the wee small hours of the morning, all extending their best wishes to the bride.

Lady members of the Golf Club journeyed to Hamilton yesterday and spent a most enjoyable time. In the match Mrs. Gibson and Mrs. Geo. Watt won, and Miss Wilkes and her partner tied. The net score showed Hamilton to be three up. The teams:
Miss Morrison Mrs. Webster
Miss Howell Mrs. Gibson
Mrs. Walker Miss Schell
Mrs. Mitchell Miss Scarie
Mrs. Burbridge Miss Powrie
Mrs. Adam Miss M. Wilkes
Mrs. Mills Mrs. G. Watt
Miss Clinie Miss C. Jones

Miss Webster gave a delightful tea. The Hamilton ladies play a return match here next week. On the ladies' links this afternoon the ladies are playing the last game of the season for a candlestick, put up for competition each month.

It was a very pleasant and happy family reunion that took place on October 1 at the beautiful home and old homestead of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Miller of Burford, when they celebrated their golden wedding. One of the most pleasing features of the gathering was the youthful appearance of the bride and groom who are still very active and fully appreciate and enjoy the great and numerous blessings God is daily bestowing upon them. The family of five children were all able to meet at the old home and were: Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Miller and son Bernard and daughter Christine of Wallaceburg; Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Miller and six children, Leslie, Frances, Holda, Brock, George and Gertrude; and Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Miller and son Gordon of Burford; Miss Marie and Miss Mabel at home; Mrs. Miller's nieces, Mr. and Mrs. F. I. Matthews and family and Mr. and Mrs. J. Fair of Brantford. Also Rev. J. M. Horton, wife and son of Kingsville, who are intimate friends of the family. Mr. Horton having been rector of the Church of England at Burford of which Mr. and Mrs. A. Miller are faithful and consistent members. Mrs. Miller being a life member of the W. A. Many beautiful presents and hearty congratulations were received by the happy couple.

The advance guard of the Duke of Connaught arrives by "Virginian" this week in the shape of two hundred and twenty-five pieces of baggage, all of which according to ancient tradition, is passed without a murmur by the Customs officers as "Settlers effects" without as much as a lock being disturbed or a rope cut. Of these pieces, one hundred, consisting of the heavier pieces, containing household equipment and utensils, will travel by freight, but one hundred and twenty-five of the lighter cases will be transferred from the wharf at Montreal by motor truck to Windsor Street Station, and will be shipped in a specially guarded C. P. R. baggage car on a passenger train to Ottawa. One piece of "baggage" will however, have the honor of travelling all by itself. This is the Duke's automobile, a magnificent equipage, which will be driven up the gangway into the back end of a Dominion Express wagon—the type that is usually reserved for "race horses and pedigree animals"—rarely fully constructed that there is the minimum of vibration in transit. The first arrival of the Duke of Connaught in Canada caused considerable perturbation in the breasts of the baggage men. They were instructed to take particular care of two cases containing the Duke's medals and the Duchess's jewels, both totalling in value well over two million dollars. A soldier was detailed with a loaded gun to sit on the two cases, and deep was the breath of relief when the cases were safely delivered at Rideau Hall. On this occasion however, there is no such concern for the jewels and medals have already been delivered at Ottawa, and are securely shut in the strong rooms of one of the banks pending the arrival of the Royal party.

NOTED PREACHER IS COMING TO BRANTFORD

All are cordially invited to attend.

The address was delivered by Mr. J. R. Seavey, Normal School, Hamilton, who took for his subject "Art and the Child". The speaker traced art from its inception which dates back to the Stone Age to the present day. Mr. Seavey dealt at length on the progress of art in the child's life until the child reaches 14 years of age.

President D. H. Coates in his address dwelt upon the educational needs of the child and told several ways in which the school could be adapted to the needs of the child. The following were appointed as a nominating committee: Inspector Standing and Kilmer, Principal A. W. Burn, Principal A. E. Green, S. George, Principal Fyle, Miss Hollinrake, and Principal Rowe.

The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock. An address was given by Mrs. Eakins, East Oakland, on "The Advantage of a Garden in a Rural School" also an address by Mr. Seavey on "Practical Hints in the Teaching of Art."

HEATHER GREEN CLOSED:
Yesterday was the last day for bowling at the Heather Green, for while the rinks are still in splendid shape it is necessary to look ahead and make ready for next season's play, and the Directors are determined, if such a thing is possible, that it shall be better than ever next year.

The closing game was played with eight bowlers from Paris who motored over yesterday afternoon and played Scotch Doubles, with four pairs of Heather bowlers. The local bowlers were victorious by a total of 47 shots which makes up for the bad beating administered to the Heather bowlers at Paris last week.

In its games with other clubs the Heather club has had a most successful season as the following summary will show:
Games played 24
Games won 16
Games lost 6

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL MEETING

Resolution Passed in Favor of Hydro Electric Store.

That the Trades and Labor Council is highly in favor of the idea of a depot in the city in connection with the Hydro Electric system, where electric fixtures can be purchased at a low rate, is manifested by the following resolution, which was passed and adopted at their regular meeting held in the Labor Temple last night.

Whereas it is proposed to establish in connection with the Hydro Electric department of this city a depot to supply to the citizens electric fixtures and other electric supplies at as near cost as possible.
Be it resolved that the Brantford Trades and Labor Council endorse the principal of supplying to the citizens any or all necessities or luxuries of life by the community and at cost, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the chairman of the fire and light committee, Ald. A. MacParland.

President George A. Moore was in the chair, and a considerable amount of business was transacted.
It was decided that a letter of condolence should be sent to the family of the late Patrick Haffey, who for many years took such an interest and active part in the Trades and Labor Council.

Delegate Bert Brown was elected Treasurer to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Patrick Haffey.
The educational committee will endeavor to make arrangements with the Galt Trades and Labor Council for the purpose of holding joint debates and discussions on questions concerning organized labor. These discussions by inter-city delegates should prove very interesting and instructive.

President Geo. A. Moore, Vice-President Sleeth, and Secretary H. Symons were appointed to represent the Trades and Labor Council on the Brantford Beautification Board.
Delegates Symons, Edwards, Maycock, Foran and Brown were appointed a committee to look carefully over the clauses of the Workmen's Compensation Act. W. S. Brewster, M.P. P. requested that the same be done.

The city council came in for a scorching for stopping at $50 on the purchase of a pulmotor. It was intimated that if the city council was so desperately hard up for $50, the Trades and Labor Council would be willing to pay the interest on that sum if the city council should care to borrow same from one of the banks.
The scaffolding by-law and the building inspector also came in for a little "coasting." The factory inspector too was referred to in connection with the recent accidents in Brantford manufacturing establishments.

It was decided to raise the price of the rental of the hall for special meetings from $1.25 for the large hall to $1.50 per night, and also to charge outsiders in the future $2 for holding meetings there.
A strong plea was made for the better attendance of delegates and members at the regular meeting, and an effort will be made along that line to get the delegates out for the coming winter's work.

BRANTFORD'S NEW PUBLIC BUILDING.

The laying of the corner stone today, by Hon. Mr. White, of Brantford's new public building may rightly be regarded as a notable event.

For many years such a structure has been necessary and warranted. Over one million dollars per annum goes to Ottawa from the three departments involved—Customs, Inland Revenue and Post Office—and all will agree that such a volume of public business should be done under right conditions.

For years the Courier called attention to the need with just about the same result as asking the Sphinx to tell the story of the ages.

Then Mr. Cocksbut, M. P., while a member of the Opposition secured the admission from the government that a new building was fully warranted but there was nothing doing until Mr. Cocksbut again captured the seat in 1911 when hope long deferred at last commenced to receive a realization.

When completed it will easily be the finest building in this city and one of the best of its kind in the entire Dominion. Citizens of all shades of life and of political belief very rightly joined together in helping to make the inauguration a success.

Hon. Mr. White is one of the younger members of the Cabinet. It does not seem so very long ago when he was a member of the assessment department, Toronto. His progress was rapid and deservedly so, and he at present occupies one of the most responsible positions in the Dominion with great credit and foresight.

THE ORIGIN OF THANKSGIVING DAY.

On Monday next Canadians will celebrate Thanksgiving Day, and they should do so with full hearts, for there is no greater laid on earth and this season's yields have proved a record.

The first Thanksgiving Day celebrated on the American Continent was held at Plymouth, Mass., by the Pilgrim Fathers, 293 years ago.

The Pilgrim Fathers were a body of English Puritans who were driven out of their native land on account of the harsh laws which then existed against religious liberty. They sought a land where they could worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience, and in a little vessel called the "Mayflower," they crossed the stormy Atlantic, the voyage taking over two months. At last they sighted the snow-covered sand mounds of Cape Cod. It was at best an inhospitable coast, and the time of their visit—it was in December—could not have been worse chosen. They were to be tested to the utmost. It sleeted, snowed, rained and froze, and they could find no place to get ashore on; their pinnace got stove and the icy waves wet them to the marrow. At last they stumbled upon a little harbor, upon which abutted a hollow between low hills, with an ice-bound stream descending through it to the sea. They must make shift with that or perish.

So on December 21st, 1620, a memorable day in American history, the little company of a hundred and two persons disembarked on a flat boulder known as Plymouth Rock, and set to work to make their home. With the snow under their feet, the dark, naked woods hemming them in, and concealing they knew not what savage perils; with the bitter waves flinging frozen spray along the shore, and heavy clouds hovering above them—memory may have drawn a picture of the quiet English vales in which they were born.

They thought of faces they loved, and would see no more, and of the secure and tranquil lives they might have led, but for the voice of conscience within their breasts, which would give them peace only at the cost of almost all that humanity holds dear. But none of them wished they had not come, or desired to return.

After all the hardships they had endured and in face of all those before them, when they landed they turned on their knees to give thanks to God for preserving them amid so many dangers and to ask Him for strength and courage to face the future.

A meeting was then held at which they promised one another, in the presence of God, to carry out the laws of the new community, and to act always for the general good. So here we find the origin of Thanksgiving, and it has become now an annual festival of thanksgiving for the mercies of the closing year. No where is it kept with such zest as in the New England States, where it ranks as the great annual family festival, taking the place which in England is accorded to Christmas.

THE ATTACK UPON HON. MR. CROTHERS.

At the recent Trades and Labour Congress held in Montreal attacks were made on Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour, because it was alleged he had refused to establish an arbitration board in the coal mine strikes on Vancouver Island. The facts of the case are the very opposite and the charges are absolutely without foundation.

Mr. Crothers on the day the first notice of trouble appeared in the press wired the secretary of the local union calling his attention to the Industrial Disputes Act and telling him that the requirements of the act did not appear to have been complied with and asking that an application for a board be made under the act.

The telegram was as follows:

Ottawa, Sept. 19, 1912.
Peter McNiven,
Secretary United Mine Workers Lodge, Cumberland, B. C.,
"My attention has been drawn to newspaper despatches announcing the occurrence of coal miners' strike at Cumberland Mines. The Industrial Disputes Investigation Act provides means for possible settlement of all matters in dispute by reference to an impartial board of three members, on which company and workmen concerned may each have a representative of their own selection. Law does not compel acceptance of board findings, but forbids strikes or lockouts pending inquiry under severe penalties. In present case requirements of the act do not appear to have been satisfied and I am desirous of learning particulars of dispute by telegram without delay. Department will furnish any fuller explanation of Industrial Disputes Act which may be required and is to-day mailing you copies of this law and forms of application thereunder. In the event of proper application being made, everything possible will be done to expedite procedure under Act."
T. W. CROTHERS,
Minister of Labour.

The Secretary of the Union for the district, J. J. McAllister, who got the telegram replied as follows: "There is no strike declared at Cumberland Mines. The company have openly discriminated against men who were taking an active part in union organization, they have also refused to meet a committee of men. The men decided to take a holiday after which the company gave orders for men to take their tools out of the mines." Later Mr. Crothers sent J. J. McNiven, the fair wage officer of the Department of Labour at Vancouver, to the scene of the trouble with instructions to endeavour to get an application from the men or the companies. Both sides refused and obstinately declared they would fight to the last. This has been the situation and one where there is no machinery to act, for the Industrial Disputes Act cannot be called into force unless one side asks for a board.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

White is his name and white is his record.

This must be a sorrowful day for the poor old city hall.

Brantford's new public building. The city had to have it; got it.

It remains for the faithful hen to utter the remark day in, and day out, of "Well and truly laid."

The latest dodge of the English Militant Suffragettes is to throw apples at a judge. As to that, they seem to think they are some pipping themselves.

So the Liberals have decided to protest Chateaugay. According to rumor the next thing is likely to be a counter protest for some of the grit workers are stated to have used something of a more persuasive nature than beating smiles.

MEMBERS OF DUKE'S HOUSEHOLD ARRIVES.

Eighteen in the Party Off the Victorian Proceed to Ottawa.

QUEBEC, Oct. 15.—Eighteen members of the H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught's household arrived from England at noon yesterday by the Alton Steamer Victorian. They left by the Canadian Pacific Railway train for Ottawa.

P. J. A. Cardin, M.P., was confirmed in his seat for Richelieu by the Supreme Court's decision on the Paradis election petition.

Important Matters

The speaker spoke of the work accomplished by the prisoners at the Guelph farm. The land had been greatly improved. The farm was by no means a poor land, as some of it lay along beside the Agricultural Farm land. He would suggest the buying of a little rough and stony land. This land would become improved. His opinion was that the council might appoint, as suggested, two representatives to co-operate with other counties.

Councillor Layton was very anxious to determine the exact situation as to financing of the scheme.

Warden Kendrick stated that he was with the deputation and was favorably impressed with the farm at Guelph. The Government was behind the Guelph farm, and it had proved a paying proposition. The Government was not behind the county scheme, and therefore the situation was quite altered.

Councillor McCann said that he understood that there was to be no elaborate buildings constructed.

This was emphasized very strongly by Dr. Bruce Smith when he spoke at the meeting held here recently.

Councillor Cook expressed himself to the effect that he would not place much confidence upon a report given by Dr. Bruce Smith as it might be inaccurate as the report on the Brantford jail.

Councillor Simpson said the buildings at Fort William had been built by the prisoners. He said that those committed to jail for a minor offence did not like to be severely punished.

Councillor Layton said he would not vote for any scheme that was not backed up by the government, owing to the Guelph scheme being backed up by the Government.

Councillor McCann thought that some of the councillors had before their minds the building of a monument.

County Clerk Watts pointed out a distinction between the farm at Guelph and the county scheme. The prisoners at Guelph were mostly long termers, and owing to this can be taught to be useful. If the local jails had to be going for the safe keeping of prisoners, not sentenced, this speaker cited as an objection. There was also the cost of transporting prisoners to be considered. Mr. Watts pointed out that a short term prisoner which are the class of prisoners which at the present time could be sent to the county industrial farm would not be very valuable for working purposes.

Councillor Layton said that a servant who was only in a parties employ a short time was not very valuable. He was in sympathy with the scheme from a humanitarian point of view. He could not see why the Government should not assist the counties to do the good work, the same as it had done at Guelph.

Councillor Simpson could not see why 500 acres worked by the prisoners would not pay.

Councillor Cook did not see any reason why the prisoners should make binder twine and other products and thus compete. He then moved the amendment to the resolution which was carried.

Mr. Watts said that if the act was changed to allow long term prisoners to be put on the county farm the county would have that additional expense.

Fruit Growers Receive Grant.
A deputation from the Brant County Fruit Growers Association consisting of Messrs William Dickie, J. W. Clark, D. Wilson and F. Lewis addressed the council with reference to that body granting $200 with which to put on an exhibit at the Toronto Fruit Show. After a talk in which Councillor Layton played a stellar role, the council granted the amount asked for.

Mr. Dickie was the first to address the council.

Mr. Dickie stated that it was the third time the association had been before the council for a grant and had each time been given a grant. The best exhibit possible had been put on but it did not compare with some of the others. The exhibit put on resulted in advertising the county. Norfolk, Durham and other counties were spending large amounts. Between thirty and forty boxes were exhibited last year. When the show was over the exhibits had been purchased and the same company desired to plan a large order this year. This order could not be accepted. It is becoming known that Brant can produce apples that compare favorably with apples produced anywhere on the American continent.

Councillor Layton asked who was deriving a benefit in the county outside of those selling apples.

Mr. J. W. Clark the next speaker, charged Councillor Layton with looking to his own pocket and not to the general benefit of the county. He thought the county might do something to assist the association in its infancy when other counties were doing so much. There was probably only 5 per cent of the apples of the county being purchased by the association.

Councillor Layton during the discussion declared, "I always find it a good thing to rile a man up and then something is learned."

BERLIN, Oct. 16.—At the age of thirteen years little Harold Delaney of Alton, has qualified as one of the youngest mariners on the New England coast. During a terrible gale on Tuesday he stood fast to the wheel of the two-masted schooner Robert Pettis and steered her safely through the storm.

"He's the nerviest little fellow in the world," declared Captain Nutter when the vessel arrived here from Tusket, N. S. "The mate had to be sent ashore for hospital treatment at a Maine port and only the boy and I remained aboard. When the storm broke I had to leave the wheel to shorten sail. The boy took his place and though great seas repeatedly dashed over him, he worked the craft along with the skill of an old skipper."

Edward H. being charged with being drunk and disorderly and with assault upon a man who went to a woman's rescue, and Bertram facing charges of assault upon Lizzie Smith and using abusive language to Winifred A. Evans.

According to the evidence both men came home under the influence of liquor and addressed insulting remarks to Mrs. Evans in whose home they boarded. Mrs. Evans resented the remarks and a row ensued. Mrs. Evans, Lizzie Smith and a neighbor all taking part against the two accused. High County Constable Hughes was called in and both men were placed under arrest.

Magistrate Livingston expressed the opinion that both men were under the influence of liquor and were directly responsible for the trouble. Edward Woodcock was fined $3.00 or 30 days while Bertram Woodcock was fined $5.00 or thirty days.

John Luke was assessed $10.00 on a charge of being drunk while on the "billed" list. ## Corner Stone Laid At The New Post Office

We thank Thee for the abundant and kindly fruits of the earth at this season, with which Thou has blessed our Dominion, filling our barns with plenty, bestowing peace, prosperity and contentment throughout our land.

We ask Thy blessing upon this structure erected by and for Thy people; that Thy Fatherly hand may be over each and every workman engaged in this building, defend them from all loss, accident and danger.

Grant that all the work and services to be rendered here may ever be done in faithfulness and integrity, as serving Thee the Creator and Father of all. And grant to Thy people here and everywhere, that in all our works begun, continued and ended in Thee, we may glorify Thy Holy Name and attain Thy Heavenly benediction, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

City Treasurer Bunnell then was called upon to read a statement describing to those assembled the contents of a large bottle which was to be placed in an aperture in the centre of the stone. The statement presented by Mr. Bunnell was as follows:

This corner stone was laid at Brantford, in the County of Brant, on Thursday the sixteenth day of October, in the year of Our Lord, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirteen, being the fourth year of the reign of His Most Gracious Majesty, George V. Field Marshal Her Royal Highness the Duke of Cornwall and Strathearn being Governor-General of Canada.

Sir John Morison Gibson, K. C. L., Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario.

The Right Honourable Robert Laird Borden, L. D. K. C., Prime Minister of the Dominion of Canada. The Honourable Sir James Pliny Whitney, Premier of the Province of Ontario.

The ceremony was performed by the Honourable W. T. White, Minister of Finance for the Dominion of Canada; the Dedication Prayer being offered by the Venerable Archdeacon MacKenzie, Rector of Grace Church, (Church of England).

The building is being erected by the Government of the Dominion for the use of the Post-Office, Customs, and Inland Revenue Departments; the plans being prepared by the Dominion Architect, acting under the instructions of the Honourable Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works. The Contractors being P. H. Secord & Sons, Limited, of Brantford. The Parliamentary Representatives of the County at the time were: William Foster Cockshutt, of the city of Brantford, and John H. Fisher, of the town of Paris, in the Dominion House of Commons; and Willoughby S. Brewster, of the city of Brantford, and John W. Westbrook, of the township of Brantford, in the Legislature of the Province of Ontario. Charles H. Hartman, being Mayor of the City of Brantford, Alexander David Hardy, County Judge, Alfred Kendrick, Warden of the County of Brant and William Wallace Ross, Sheriff. There is enclosed in this receipt a book containing the financial statements of the City of Brantford for the year 1912, and other information as to the assessment and taxation; also a list of the names of the municipal council for the year 1913 and of the various city officials. Copies of the Brantford Courier and Brantford Expositor, both newspapers published daily in the City of Brantford, are also enclosed.

Hon. Mr. White. Everything was now ready for the laying of the corner stone and silver trowel in hand. The Hon. Mr. White stepped forward and after examining carefully the level used by the builders, he declared the stone well and truly laid. The Minister of Finance was assisted in the undertaking by Mr. R. C. Blum, Superintendent of the cut stone work on the new building and Mr. R. E. Secord, one of the firm of contractors, and as the stone bearing the inscription, "Erected, 1913. Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works," slipped into place, a mighty cheer went up from the throats of hundreds of loyal Brantford citizens who rejoiced to see that the new building was now well under way.

Hon. Mr. White received another favorable demonstration as he turned to address the gathering. He declared that when he had said that the stone was well and truly laid, he felt that the stone was just as well laid as if he had done all the work himself. In being present on this occasion, he declared that he felt rather like an interloper, believing that either Mr. Pelletier, the Post Master General or Mr. Rogers, the Minister of Public Works should have been present to perform the ceremony which he had just completed. Unfortunately they were unable to be in attendance and so he had been called in as an eleventh hour speaker. After all, however, he was glad to be present and to witness the ceremony. To accept an invitation to speak, he declared, was like signing a promissory note, because both are done in a light hearted manner. To make a speech, was an altogether different matter, however, but he assured those present that if he did not do just as well as was expected, they would have to shove the responsibility on to the shoulders of Mr. W. F. Cockshutt, Brant's worthy member.

Proceeding, Mr. White stated that from what he had seen of Brantford he was very much impressed. It was very well said, he thought, that Brantford was the Manchester of Canada. During his tour through the city, he was much impressed with the evidence of prosperity on all sides and he congratulated the city upon being in such a condition at the present time, when other municipalities were feeling or beginning to feel rather hard times.

The speaker referred to the magnificent Collegiate Institute and the General Hospital, congratulating the citizens upon the great educational and philanthropic work they were doing.

Regarding the new post office building, Mr. White said he did not intend to say much, except to state that from what he had noticed, he believed that Brantford was to have a building which would be worthy of her and her greatness.

"You well deserve such a building, and there was no estimate that I saw pass with more pleasure than the estimate for this very building," declared Mr. White.

The site, the speaker said, could not have been better, while the plans were a credit to the architect. He congratulated Mr. Cockshutt upon the realization of his plans and the work he had done to get for Brantford such a magnificent building, at a statement made by Mr. Cockshutt that the building was going to pay for itself. It was not every town or city that could do that, he said, and he was pleased to see that Brantford was an exception to the general rule.

The speaker referred to the exceptional growth of Canada during the last few years, and predicted for the Dominion a great and glorious future. Few of us realize, he said, Canada's greatness as a nation. Mr. White pointed out that after all it is the people who make or mar the prosperity of a country, and upon the people of Canada, he said, depends what Canada's future is to be. The speaker referred to some of the difficulties which a government is called upon to meet in order to deal fairly with all classes and all sections of people, and informed his audience that the problem of public works was one of the big problems of the present day.

Mr. White spoke with pleasure of his visit to the Bell homestead, being the home of one of Canada's greatest inventors of a telephone, being a great means of communication to bind the provinces together. Another great means of communication, he said, was the post office, and in past years the problem of communication had been a great one for the Dominion. This problem, he said, would continue during the years to come, because the post office service would have to be developed with a great developing country. The post office, he said, was a great illustration of what public service could do, and he predicted that in the very near future this service would be placed upon an even higher and wider basis than ever before. Rural mail was referred to briefly, the speaker pointing out its advantages to the rural population.

In closing, Mr. White again referred to the wonderful growth of Canada and expressed the opinion that some of those present would still live to see the population of this country as great as that of Great Britain. With her magnificent resources, the Dominion, he said, was bound to grow.

and the responsibilities would be borne by the government of Canada correctly, he said, was a great trust for any government, one that occupied the entire time of those at the head of government affairs. Mr. White thanked the citizens of their magnificent reception and stated that he would most certainly come back again.

"You have been good to me," he concluded, "and I will go back feeling that Brantford has a public building worthy of her in every particular. Cheers and hand-clapping greeted Mr. White as he closed his address, while Mr. W. F. Cockshutt, M.P., the next speaker was also given a rousing reception.

He referred to the fact that for years he had desired to see in Brantford just such a building as was now being erected. He had worked hard and long towards a realization of his plans but he had finally come through with colors flying. It was a joy to him to be able to say there had been no bribe in connection with getting this building for Brantford. It came to Brantford, he said, on its merits because this city needed it. Mr. Cockshutt referred to the annual collections made in the old public building, amounting in all to nearly a million dollars and remarked that the new building would pay its own way. He also pointed out that it required about 1-3 of the annual revenue to pay for the new building, this being an exception to some cases which he had heard of where it took six times the annual revenue to pay for the building.

Referring to Mr. White's remarks that he thought Mr. Pelletier or Mr. Rogers should have performed the ceremony, Mr. Cockshutt said that he did not think that right. Mr. Pelletier, he said had ordered the building. Mr. Rogers had promised it and Mr. White had the purse and must pay for it. Therefore it was fitting that he should lay the corner stone.

In closing Mr. Cockshutt paid a warm tribute to the Minister of Finance when he said he was White in name and white in character and in his opinion the best financial manager ever made.

These remarks brought the proceedings to a close and the gathering dispersed with cheers and the singing of God Save the King.

The Luncheon. After the ceremonies, the party adjourned to the Kerby House when a luncheon was held. Mr. W. H. Littlefield, proprietor, had the spacious dining room decorated for the occasion. Mr. Littlefield set apart a long table running the full length of the north end of the dining room. Covers were set for forty guests. A smart corps of waiters were on hand and gave every attention to those seated around the festive board.

The following was the menu:
Purée of Tomato
Assorted Pickles
Queen Olives
Broiled Salmon Trout
Roast Chicken with Dressing
Mashed Potatoes

DAINTY NECKWEAR NOVELTIES

They carry us back to the olden times before the French revolution when the bewigged dandies and their ladies strutted about the gardens of the Tuilleries, when patches, tall canes and the richest of brocades were the vogue for both men and women. But even then nothing more elegant was ever devised than the beautiful ruffs and collars in the Medici effect, made of embroidered crepe with a ruffling of the same material. Robespierre in the new shades of satin over-trimmed with shadow lace, are among the strongest sellers in New York this year. Fichus made of fine nets with lace pleating are taking a prominent place and the novelty coat collars of crepe-de-chene in black and white will also be worn extensively. Knitted silk mufflers with roll collars and pearl fasteners will protect many a charming throat from the cold winds and the knitted silk scarves will also have much popularity, we are showing them in many lovely patterns and exquisite colors. Our last shipment brought a Robspierre which you will wish to see; it is made of broad velvet finished with a silk piping of a contrasting shade and is as chic a conception as we have seen.

WOMAN STANDS ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Oct. 16.—The preliminary over, the trial of Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, charged with the murder of her husband, Rear Admiral Joseph C. Eaton, started in earnest to-day. The court room was filled with spectators, eager to hear the outline of the government's case to be presented by Assistant District Attorney Katzmann. It was expected that the opening statements of counsel would be completed to-day and the first witnesses heard. Miss Dorothy Ainsworth, younger daughter of Mrs. Eaton by her first marriage, arrived here yesterday prepared to testify early in the trial. She was summoned by the prosecution and last night held a consultation with District Attorney Barker. His sister, Mrs. June Keyes, planned to come here to-day.

An Unusual Division Court Case

An unusual case came before His Honor Judge Hardy in the Division Court held yesterday. William Meats, who has a garden in the vicinity of the Canada Glue Co., sued the company for $60 for damages which he claimed resulted from their and other refuse from the glue company being carried at flood time across a road to his property. The plaintiff complained especially of the damage done to berry and current bushes and fruit trees. Mr. Lloyd Harris, president of the company, claimed the refuse was carried from the glue company and that $20 a ton is secured from a Buffalo firm dealing in fertilizers.

A PROTEST TO BE ENTERED

On Behalf of the Liberals in the Quebec By-Election. [Canadian Press Despatch.] MONTREAL, Oct. 16.—"The election in Chateauguay will be protested," said the Hon. Sydney Fisher, after a lengthy conference of the leaders of the Liberal party and prominent Liberals of Chateauguay held at the Windsor Hotel yesterday afternoon. Action for the appeal will be taken at once, it is said, as there is a strong feeling among the Chateauguay Liberals in favor of protest. "We have evidence that will undoubtedly quash the election," said Mr. Fisher. "I do not see how the guilty can escape when the evidence at the hearing has been given," said Mr. Fisher. "The prosecution will follow as a matter of course."

RACING AUTO KILLS 1, HURTS ANOTHER

Driver is Arrested, Being Charged With Reckless Driving. [Canadian Press Despatch.] SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 16.—Henry G. Farr, a saloon proprietor, was killed and Alfred Hoglund was killed and injured last night when a racing automobile, driven by a man named Duke, said to be a nephew of James B. Duke, president of the American Tobacco Company. The victims were replacing a tire when Duke's car crashed into them, killing Farr instantly. Duke was arrested and brought to the county jail, where he is held on a charge of reckless driving, pending an investigation by the coroner.

A Novelty In Battleships

PORTSMOUTH, Eng., Oct. 16.—A novelty in the way of battleships, the Queen Elizabeth, carrying an immense armament and using oil instead of coal for her motive power was launched at the Royal Navy dock yards here to-day for the British navy. The new vessel, whose keel was laid on October 21, 1912, is of an entirely fresh type and the details of her construction have been kept secret. It is generally believed, however, that her armament is to consist of ten 15-inch guns mounted in pairs in barbettes, while her secondary armament of 4-inch or 6-inch guns is also to be placed behind protective armor. This is a big advance over the armament of her predecessors. Under ordinary circumstances the carrying of such a big battery would imply a considerable increase in displacement, but this has been obviated by the utilization of oil fuel for the engines in place of coal. The substitution of oil tanks for coal bunkers means a great economy in weight and space and in this way it has been possible to increase the offensive and defensive armament and at the same time keep the size and displacement of the warship within limits. Should the oil fuel in the case of the Queen Elizabeth prove successful all large warships of the British navy will in future use it. The Queen Elizabeth therefore is somewhat of an experiment. The new vessel was not quite a year on the building ways and will be ready for service in less than two years from the time her first keel plates were laid. Far more work was done on her before launching than is usually the case in battleships. Her launching weight was about 10,000 tons, and she was the heaviest vessel ever sent afloat from a building slip in any of the British naval dock yards. William Sulzer will probably know his fate to-night. Anglians, in convention in New York condemned the "ritual murder" trial at Kiev, Russia, Federal League.

Uninitiated Ballots

MONTREAL, Oct. 16.—Some half-dozen uninitiated ballots found in the ballot boxes from polls 3 and 17, the former in the Parish of St. Chrysostome, and the latter in the Parish of St. Sacrement, caused Rejoice, the Chief Clerk in charge, to postpone the official count of the Chateauguay election at St. Martin yesterday. Mr. Bunbury returned to Montreal last night to secure legal advice on the question of rejecting these ballots, and announced that court will be resumed on Tuesday next. The election law requires that each ballot presented to a voter shall be initiated by the election clerk before the voter makes his mark. This seems to have been omitted in several cases, but it is stated that should all these ballots be rejected they will not make a material difference in the result previously announced.

BURKE'S DEATH A LOSS TO THE TURF

Canadian Racing Deprived of Service of an Eminently Just and Able Official.

The announcement late Tuesday night of the death of Mr. Joseph J. Burke came as a great shock to the numerous friends who parted with him at close of the Canadian racing season a few weeks ago with the evidence before their eyes of his renewed health and strength.

Mr. Burke has been a racing official for many years before taking up any duties as a newspaper man. He had served in New York and Saratoga, Chicago, St. Louis, Kentucky and California and brought here a high reputation which he more than maintained with the Canadian public.

Like many other racing officials Mr. Burke was a newspaper man, and could go back to an experience on the old Spirit of the Times, which he left to found the long defunct New York Sportsman, a weekly devoted to turf affairs.

His writing since has been chiefly for The New York Herald, though he contributed much valuable and interesting matter also to specialist journals.

Mr. Burke was the judge for the original Fort Erie Jockey Club, and first came to Toronto for the autumn meetings at Woodbine that were conducted by the Toronto Hunt Club. On the retirement of Judge Post he became a regular official at the Ontario Jockey Club meetings.

Hamilton, Blue Bonnets, Connaught Park and Dorval also had the benefit of his services, since racing was soundly established here. No person had a wider acquaintance among racing people, and their esteem is the best monument to his zeal, his efficiency, and his impartiality.

A skilful and conscientious handicapper, he produced results that were due to great labor and careful thought in that part of his work.

It was Judge Burke's conviction that his duty was to the public first and that by so doing he conserved the best interests of the particular racing clubs, and of the great sport which he so keenly enjoyed.

The sentimental side of racing appealed most to him, and he fought against any and every movement that did not give this factor primary consideration. A racing judge has much more to do than simply to place the horses, and the high principle, consideration for others, prudence, thorough knowledge of his business, justice and kindness which he brought to bear on the many important affairs he had to adjust bore fruit in the high regard in which he was everywhere held.

To those more closely associated with him there will always remain the memory of his fidelity to principle, his wholeheartedness, his unflinching courtesy and good temper, his absolute freedom from partiality, and his active mind, ever seeking ways and means for the continual betterment of the business in which he was engaged.

Another will take his place, for so the world goes on, but the filling of the place as he filled it is quite another matter.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 16.—Miss Muriel Dodd, English and Canadian champion, Miss Gladys Ravenscroft, last year's English champion, and Miss Mabel Harrison, the Irish champion, won their matches yesterday in the second round for the women's national championship on the links of the Wilmington Country Club.

Football Courier Cup Semi-Final

The semi-final game for the Courier Cup between Cocksbutt United and the All Scots will be played at the Agricultural Park on Saturday afternoon. The game will be handled by Referee Cassels. Both teams are in the best of condition, and the players are trained to the minute.

The game, no doubt, will be one of the best exhibitions of football of the season, and should attract a large crowd.

The winning team will play the final game with the Y. M. C. A. team next Saturday for the cup.

On Thanksgiving Day morning, a game will be played on Tutela Park between teams composed of English and Scotch players. Mr. E. Goutley will referee the game. The English team will be composed of the following players: Goal, Stanley, Tutela, backs, McLeod, (Tutela), Arbor, (Dragoons), halfs, Usher (Tutela), Clark (S. O. E.), Oliver (Tigers); forwards, Clark (Tutela), Hamilton (Tutela), Holland (Y.M.C.A.) (captain), Poynter (Y. M. C. A.) Johnson (S. O. E.), Reserves, Wheeland (Dragoons), Bowden (Tutela), Keatley (Tutela), Williams (Tigers).

The Scotchmen will line up as follows: Goal, McGill; backs, Morrow, Taylor; forwards, Cook, G. Richardson, W. Richardson, R. Richardson, Connachan.

FEDERAL LEAGUE INVASION FEARED Philadelphia and Other Eastern Clubs May Have Outlaw Clubs.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16.—This city and others in the east may be invaded by the Federal League next season. Agents of this organization have been in this section recently looking over the situation.

One of those who has spent more than a week here is Lloyd Rickert, secretary of the Federal League. Rickert was still here yesterday. He was very uncommunicative regarding the Federal League's plans for next season, and he would not admit that the promoters of the organization had any intention to establish a club here.

At the same time that Rickert was interviewed in the lobby of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, P. T. Powers, the well known promoter of sporting events, was in a room upstairs conferring with several men.

Should a Federal League club be located here its home would doubtless be at Point Breeze, where an effort was made last Spring to start a club in the United States League, an organization which did not last long enough to have a half dozen games played.

Official Story of the Somaliland Camel Corps Disaster.

BRITISH HEROISM

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The reverse which befel the Somaliland Camel Corps at the hands of the Derwishes on Aug. 9, when thirty-six men were killed and twenty-one wounded, is described in graphic language in a blue-book which was issued on Tuesday.

The Derwishes, who made eight or nine determined rushes, soon enveloped the right flank, which immediately commenced a disorderly retreat to the rear, but were eventually rallied, and succeeded in driving back the enemy.

The Maxim gun mounted in the centre of the line was early put out of action by Derwish bullets. Mr. Corfield was shot, and died instantly. The Derwish rushes at times almost came within touch of the small circle into which, behind a zereba of dead camels and ponies, Mr. C. de S. Dunn (who took charge afterwards with great coolness and forethought) had gathered the few remaining men.

Captain Summers was then unable to take much part in the action, owing to loss of blood from several wounds. He says the action, which commenced at 6.50 a. m., continued in full force until about 11 a. m., when the Derwish attacks seemed to be weakening. At 12 noon the friendly tribesmen (who had early sought refuge in the bush, and had operate against the Derwishes" by cutting off their retreat. The following morning at 4.30, the force moved off on a line parallel to that of the Derwishes, whose course could be clearly traced by clouds of dust rising from behind an intervening ridge. At 6.45 a. m., when at a point about a mile in advance of the Derwishes, and in thick bush, the Camel Corps disposed itself in skirmishing line, with a mob of 300 armed friendlies posted on the left.

Captain Summers declares that he advised the formation of a square, in view of the numbers of the Derwishes and the danger of a flanking movement, but Mr. Corfield did not appear to think this necessary, observing that the volume of his fire would in consequence be greatly diminished. The force was prevented from taking up a more favourable position in an open plain owing to the rapid advance of the Derwishes.

A MESSAGE FROM A WOMAN TO WOMEN

"Every Woman Should Take 'Fruit-a-lives'"

LAKELAND, ONT., MAY 12th, 1911
"Kindly publish this letter of mine if you think it will benefit other women who might be afflicted with the disease I have had in the past, but am now, thanks to 'Fruit-a-lives', completely cured of. It is my firm belief that every woman should take 'Fruit-a-lives' if she wants to keep herself in good health. Before taking 'Fruit-a-lives', I was constantly troubled with what is commonly known as 'Nerves' or severe Nervousness. This Nervousness brought on the most violent attacks of Sick Headache for which I was constantly taking doctors' medicine without any permanent relief. Constipation was also a source of great trouble to me and for this the Doctors said 'I would have to take medicine all my life.' 'Fruit-a-lives' banished all these troubles and now I am a well woman."

practically taken no part in the engagement, approached with the news that the Derwishes had run out of ammunition, and were retreating after their looted stock, and not likely to return.

The camel force eventually commenced its retirement on Burao about 3 p. m., with twenty-six men fit for further action, and about sixty wounded on camels. Captain Summers believes it was the Derwishes' intention to wipe the force out, and only shortness of ammunition prevented them doing so. He estimates the Derwish killed numbered 200, though friendly Illahos afterwards reported their dead numbered not less than 600.

Telegraphing on Sept. 8, Mr. Archer stated that Mr. Corfield's remains had been reinterred in a deepened grave, and all traces of the spot obliterated.

The burial party counted 377 dead Derwishes at the scene. The final return of the Camel Corps casualties were thirty-six dead and twenty-one wounded.

Blame for the Disaster The despatch of the Acting Commissioner, Mr. G. F. Archer, explains how the ill-fated commandant of the Camel Corps has come to be blamed for the disaster.

Writing to the Colonial Office on Aug. 19, Mr. Archer says that he had misgivings as to the wisdom of retaining the Camel Constabulary at Burao, in view of renewed Derwish activity, but the commandant of the constabulary, Mr. R. C. Corfield, had considered there was no danger.

I decided to proceed in person to Burao to consult with Mr. Corfield and to form my own conclusions on the spot. I arrived at Burao on Aug. 6 and two days afterwards my report was received by Mr. Corfield that Derwishes were severely raiding the friendlies in the district between Idowaina and Burao. I ordered a strong reconnaissance by the Camel Corps in the direction of Bur.

Mr. Corfield appears to have received information on the road near Bur that a large Derwish party had in truth arrived, and were making Idowaina water their rendezvous. He thereupon decided to proceed rapidly in this direction.

Had the commandant at this juncture fallen back and reported to me a valuable service would have been rendered, even though some risk had incurred.

"My standing powers to him gave no discretionary powers whatsoever in the matter of engaging the Derwishes, or even proceeding on these extended patrols. Contrary to orders, however, the commandant decided to engage the Derwishes, a need scarcely comment on the hazardous nature of such an undertaking with the force at his disposal.

The Constabulary was severely attacked by a force numbering, at a conservative estimate, 1,500 riflemen. Mr. Corfield fighting gallantly, was shot through the head and died instantly. The Derwishes evidently made three desperate assaults upon our position, coming on in waves. There can be no doubt they were fully determined to annihilate our small force.

"It was fortunate that there were no spearmen with the Derwish force. A party of 200 spearmen could undoubtedly have carried the zereba by assault and killed every man at his post. The small British party probably fired 300 to 400 rounds of ammunition per man. There was no shade, the heat was intense, and they had no water.

"I wish to say, Mr. Archer concludes, 'that it is with feelings of the greatest reluctance and the most profound regret that I should have had to lay to the charge of a dead man and a gallant officer that he acted in a hazardous manner without a full sense of his responsibilities.'"

"A rash act has involved the Government of the Protectorate in a severe setback, and under the circumstances it is a politically disastrous withdrawal from Burao. For this Mr. Corfield, who had previously done such excellent work has paid the penalty with his life.

"It can only be said that he allowed his attribute of great personal bravery and the complete confidence he had in the men under his command to outweigh his better judgment. The action of Dul Madoba should never have been fought.

Once committed to the action—and in this matter no responsibility can attach to them—the outstanding feature is the gallant and the prolonged and determined resistance offered by Captain G. H. Summers, 26th Cavalry, and Mr. C. de S. Dunn, Somaliland Camel Constabulary, with a small body of men against odds never less from the beginning than 15 to 1."

Mr. Hartcourt's Comment. Replying to this despatch on Sept. 5, Mr. Hartcourt wrote:—"It is evident that the whole responsibility for this ill-advised and Commercial Library. The Corporation of Glasgow has instructed the Libraries Committee to consider the propriety of establishing a Commercial Library in Glasgow.

Long Journey of Two Lads. James and Albert Bonner, two brothers, under twelve years of age arrived in Liverpool on the Pacific liner Orcoma, on their way to Edinburgh. They travelled alone from the Falkland Islands, in order to be educated in Edinburgh.

Child Murderer Executed. A labourer named Patrick Higgins was executed in Calton Gaol, Edinburgh, on Thursday for the murder of his two children, William and John aged four and seven years respectively, by tying them together and drowning them in a disused quarry.

Prison Van in Collision. An alarming accident occurred in Glasgow through a motor prison van containing eight prisoners colliding with a lorry. No one was injured, but the prisoners were a good deal alarmed. Another motor prison van was obtained to convey the prisoners to Duke-street Prison.

Flax Growing Development. Recently the growing of flax has occupied the attention of a number of landed proprietors in the south of Scotland. In view of the satisfactory experiments, it is believed that steady progress will now be made with the development in Scotland of this important branch of the agricultural industry.

Increased Sunday Travelling. The returns of the turnstiles at Dunoon Pier, showing the Sunday traffic for the months of June, July, August, and September, establishes that Sunday travelling is on the increase. The total number of passengers using Dunoon Pier on the Sundays alone for these months was 45,065, as against 31,685 for a similar number of Sundays last year—an increase of 13,380.

Interference in Love Affairs. David Sutherland, a baker, was fined £3 at Glasgow for pointing a revolver at his landlady and her husband in the house where he lodged in Cathcart-road. The parties are related, and accused's landlady and her husband having it was stated interfered in his love affairs, he threatened them with the revolver, and so alarmed them that they hastily left the house.

Poisoned by Unripe Brambles. An unusual cause of death has occurred at the Bankfoot Mining Rows, Kilsyth, the victim being Christina Moffat, eight years of age, daughter of a miner. Along with several companions, the girl had been bramble gathering, and had eaten a considerable quantity of unripe fruit, from which she suffered terrible agony before succumbing.

"Playing Cowboy." The effects of the moving picture craze were apparent in a case in Peebles Court, when a boy of seventeen, Russell Bathgate, was charged with firing three shots through a pane of glass in new buildings erected by the town council. Two youths spoke of seeing the accused shooting at the window with a "Lord Roberts" pistol. He said he was "playing cowboy," and threatened to "riddle" with bullets anyone who told on him. He added that he was going to the cinema house to see the pictures. He was fined 5s.

"The Cock of the North" at Funeral. The remains of Colonel Leith Hay, who resided in Lochaber, were on Monday interred in Glen Nevis burying ground, Fort William. The deceased left instructions that no clergyman was to attend his obsequies, and that on the approach to the grave a piper should play "The Cock of the North." Those instructions were carried out, and the incongruity of a military band accompanying a soldier's funeral rather shocked the people of the district.

Century Old Craft. In the boatbuilding yard of Mr. John Fife, Ardmoleish, Bute, there is to be seen the boat used by the grandfathers of the present Margolis of Bute in crossing from Mountstuart to the mainland at Largs in days before there was any regular steamer communication. The boat, which was named Guildford, is 110 years old. When recently launched and towed from Mountstuart to Ardmoleish, a distance of five miles, she made little or no water.

disastrous action must rest with the late Mr. Corfield. He has paid the penalty with his life, and I have no desire to dwell on this aspect of the matter.

But I am compelled if only in justice to the other officers concerned to record my opinion that the disaster is due to his complete disregard of the instructions issued by His Majesty's Government, by Mr. Byatt, and by yourself.

Mr. Harcourt concludes by announcing his intention to recommend Mr. Archer for appointment as a Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. That appointment was gazetted on Tuesday night.

NO DRINKING MAN NEED DESPAIR

The Neal Cure—Greatest of All Modern Discoveries—Offers a Means of Escape from the Curse of Drink. A cure of the Drink Habit is Guaranteed in Three Days no Matter Whether the Patient is a Hard and Constant Drinker, Social Tippler or Goes on Occasional Sprees.

There was wandering in the streets of Toronto lately a homeless man, who at one time held a splendid position, but drink was his downfall. To-day his wife, a cultured woman, works out by the day, endeavoring to support herself and little family. Think of it, you wives and mothers, who have homes of comfort and all that makes life worth living, what it would be to you to be deprived of these and forced to face the wash tub for an existence, as this poor wife has to do today?

But this home which was made a hell on earth through strong drink—as every drunkard's is—may be made into a heaven upon earth, as many have been made, as a result of the Neal Treatment. Three days only—the wonder of it—to effect a cure and make the victim of strong drink a new man, physically, morally and mentally.

We undertake to guarantee to effect a cure of the Drink Habit in Three Days, no matter whether the patient is a hard and constant drinker, social tippler, or goes on occasional sprees. Are you interested in a poor fellow going down, down, through the curse of drink? Then bring your influence to bear on him and bring him to the Neal Institute for treatment, drunk or sober, and we will undertake to remove the awful appetite for strong drink and deliver him to you a new man.

Here is an opportunity for REFORMATION SOCIETIES for INEBRIATES or any institution for the reformation of the drunkard, to test our ability to change the hard drinker into a new man, physically and mentally, in THREE DAYS' treatment.

We invite these Societies or any institution interested in the poor drunkard and the problem of dealing with him, to send us for treatment any victim of the drink habit, it makes no difference how much enslaved, and we guarantee to effect a cure in each and every case. Can you spend your money to better advantage or in a way that will bring in greater returns than in redeeming these victims of strong drink and giving back to their families kind fathers, brothers, husbands, and to the country most desirable citizens?

GRAY HAIR BECOMES DARK, THICK, GLOSSY

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.
Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.
Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. It is used by this old, famous recipe because no one can possibly get the same darkened your hair, as it does so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application of two, your hair becomes beautiful, dark, thick and glossy, and you look years younger. Agent T. George Bowles.

THE CASE-BOOK OF A PRIVATE DETECTIVE

Inside History of the Methods Employed in Criminal Investigation, Embracing True Narratives of Interesting Cases by a Former Operative of the William J. Burns Detective Agency.

BY DAVID CORNELL

9—THE MAN HIGHER UP How a Blackmailer Was Foiled and a Family Restored

(Copyright, 1912, by International Press Bureau.)

"Go over and see this fellow," said the office manager of the Burns agency to me one day in June, 1910; and he handed me a card on which was written on the most prominent and powerful names in New York financial circles, and therefore one of the most powerful in all the country. For the purposes of this story the name shall be Handsykes.

"Go over and see Mr. Handsykes," said the manager. "You know who he is?"

"It's Handsykes who sprung the big bank merger, isn't it?" I replied.

"Yes, that's the Handsykes," said the manager. "Remember all the time you're dealing with him that he is the Handsykes. This agency is a pretty powerful proposition in its way, Cornell, but compared to Handsykes we're infants. Don't forget that. You'd better dress accordingly, too. I've picked you for the job because you don't look like a detective when you try to look like a business man. This is a big case, Cornell. It doesn't make any difference what it is, if Handsykes is in it at all it's big."

"What is it?"

"Oh, Handsykes doesn't tell things outside of his private office," was the answer. "He just sends for people, and they come. He sent over for a man. You're the man. And whatever you do, don't forget who the man is."

I went home and put on an outfit of clothing that made me look like a quiet, prosperous business man, and went down to Handsykes' office on Wall street within sight of Trinity church. It is about as easy for the average caller to get past the secretaries in this office, as it is for the proverbial camel to pass through the needle's eye, but my card opened the way right through into the great man's sanctum.

I had never seen Handsykes before, and my knowledge of his appearance had been gained from pictures I had seen of him. Now I saw that the pictures which had been printed labeled "Handsykes" were the pictures of another and totally different man. The pictorial Handsykes was lean and austere; Handsykes in real life was round and merry. Afterwards I learned that there never had been a single photograph of the great man, and that the pictures handed out as his were in reality the likeness of an old private secretary.

"Sit down," said Mr. Handsykes. "Have a cigar. Got a match?"

These were the first words that the power that made brokers tremble uttered to me.

"When we had got our cigars going well he said:

"Blackmail, my boy, is a dirty, low-down trick."

He smoked comfortably for several minutes.

"I don't mind giving up money," he continued. "I've been doing it all my life. I'm accustomed to it. If anything happens that I want to pay money for, I pay it. If anybody has anything he ought to get money from me for—or can get it from me—he gets it. Otherwise—no."

"Still more smoking."

"But blackmail—common, low-down, coarse, hold-up work—that I do not like. How do you feel about it, Mr. Cornell?"

I said, of course, that I thought blackmail was one of the lowest crimes in the calendar.

"Ever get any blackmailers?" asked Handsykes.

I had not.

"Neither have I," said he. "But this time—we'll get 'em!"

He tossed a letter across the desk to me.

"Read that," he said, genially. "I won't pay."

The letter was a gem. It ran: "Dear Sir: Allow me to assure you, sir, that this little incident is as distasteful to me as to yourself. Strange as it may seem to you, I am not a person who approaches an act of this kind with anything but a feeling of the greatest compunction. But as you know yourself, Mr. Handsykes, life is made up largely of compromises with our conscience and principles. Circumstances largely dictate our actions. Circumstances at present force me to raise a certain sum of money. Without this sum I am lost socially—aye, even morally. The sum is a large one—$100,000. No assets of mine of a tangible sort possibly could raise this amount. In fact, I have only one asset in this world on which I can hope to raise it. That asset simply consists of the possession of a secret. The secret concerns your son. Do you happen to know, Mr. Handsykes, that for three years, since the failure of the Battery Trust company, your son Clarence has lived under the shadow of a cloud which, should it fall, would cover him instantly with shame and ruin? Yes, even place him in a federal prison? I presume that you do not know this. But I do. I can prove it to you, Mr. Handsykes. And, because circumstances dictate it, the cloud shall fall unless you furnish me this sum of $100,000 necessary to save me from complete ruin.

"I sign my full name and address, knowing well that you dare not make it public, and that you cannot harm me in any way. Awaiting your reply, I am, sir,

"Respectfully yours,
"Walter Mandeville,
"Hotel LaGros, Fifth Ave."

"Whew!" I said when I had read through it. "He's the prince of 'em, whoever he is."

"Can't he?" said Handsykes, appreciatively.

"Probably crazy?" I suggested.

"Possibly," corrected Handsykes. "And—possibly not."

He sat silent, smoking carefully and looking at the ceiling.

"I—I remember the Battery Trust failure," I said. "There was no mention of any of your family in connection with it. The men involved were—"

"Figureheads," said Handsykes, bluntly. "Clarence was the man behind it. I gave it to him as a Christmas present."

"But—"

"His name did not appear even in the list of directors? I know. The directors were dummies. The officers were employees—Clarence's employees. One of them went to jail for a year. We took care of them all. I don't understand how the facts got out—the facts that this man is hinting at, I mean. We paid enough to keep silence, heaven knows."

"Then it is possible that this man is—"

"Not crazy? Certainly. He's probably got the goods on Clarence. How in heaven's name ever knew of his connection with the Battery bank more than I can see, though. But apparently he does know it. And if he knows that he probably knows the whole story."

"What is the story, Mr. Handsykes?" I asked boldly.

"Oh, Clarence used his little bank in a careless sort of way," he replied frankly. "It's a long story, but I can make it short. Clarence wrecked it to help me put through my merger, Loyal son, Clarence; but careless, very careless."

"Then there is such a cloud as this man speaks of?"

"Certainly. And it isn't too late for it to fall, either. Especially now when the federal attorneys are so active."

I sat back in amazement. I knew something of the crooked ins and outs of Wall street, but that Handsykes would sit and openly admit that his son, the justly celebrated society lion, Clarence Handsykes was walking with potential disgrace always on his shoulders, was a shock. Handsykes continued to smoke, not in the least disturbed by the thoughts that must have been running through his mind.

"I would pay this man without a murmur," said he, "but if you pay once, you've got to keep on paying. I sent for you to help me shut him up without paying."

I picked up the letter and looked at it.

"Do you happen to know anything about the man?" I asked.

"Oh, certainly," said Handsykes. "He's a good friend of Clarence's. They were in Yale together."

"What?" I cried. "It isn't the rich young Mandeville, is it?"

"Of course," was the calm answer. "Who did you think it was? There's his name, as plain as can be. Walter Mandeville. I believe the boy is telling the truth; he needs $100,000, and this is the only way in the world that he knows how to get it. I suppose he has become involved in some way and is desperate."

"I should think he would have gone to Clarence," I suggested.

"No; that wouldn't have been ethical. He and Clarence are friends. He is Clarence's best friend, really. He and I are not friends. He likes Clarence and wouldn't harm him for the world. He doesn't like me, and wouldn't give a damn no matter what happened—to me. You see, he isn't willing to take a cent from Clarence, but he would like to gouge me for $100,000, and do it without the slightest feeling of compunction. I can understand the young man's feelings—"

"None," I said. "I don't say one cent."

"Then the case, so far as I am concerned," said I, "is to render Mr. Mandeville harmless without stirring up any trouble or paying him any blackmail."

"Just that," said Handsykes. "Your job is to bury Mandeville's desire to blackmail me—and bury it so deep it will never come to life."

"Good enough," I said, rising. "Have you any suggestions to make?"

"None," said he, "except that the Handsykes interests can raise more money than anybody in New York except Morgan—if necessary."

Then he smiled and bowed me out.

Here was as delicate a task as ever I had faced. The name of Handsykes must be protected beyond all else. As it stood now, it was a power in New York finance because of its reputation for absolute integrity. Let the Battery Trust scandal become known, and that power would be gone, or greatly diminished. And Mr. Walter Mandeville had the power to make this known, and was apparently determined to use it. And my job was to make this impossible. Delicate! If Mandeville even so much as got a suspicion that he was being shadowed he would as likely as not spill the eggs.

My first move was to discover all that I could concerning the young man in question. I found that he was one of a type quite common in New York, but rare in other parts of the country—the young man who has squandered every cent of his fortune, but who manages to keep up appearances, no one knows how. Mandeville had run through several hundred thousands of dollars—all the way through. It was common knowledge that he was dead broke, yet he was living in a suite at the Le Gros hotel in a manner that no small income could have supported. He went around in his accustomed circle among his old acquaintances apparently the same as ever. His fortune was gone, and everybody knew it, but he certainly did manage to keep up his end in great fashion. He must be getting money in some way. I reasoned that it might be a good thing first of all to find out how he was getting it.

I went up to the LeGros hotel and engaged a suite of rooms as near to Mandeville's as I could and began to make myself part of the hotel's barroom and club life. I reasoned that Mandeville would be the sort of a young man who would be found wasting his time in the way so popular among certain hotel dwellers of Manhattan, and I was not mistaken. He spent little time in his rooms. When he wasn't in the barroom he was playing poker in one of the many high-staked games that always run in this hotel, or was dining and winning somebody in one of the restaurants, or in some other fashion spending money and time in a perfectly useless fashion. I began to ape his ways and soon Mr. Mandeville and myself were on fairly good terms. That is, we offered one another drinks whenever we met, and he invited me upstairs to be trimmed by the same gang of poker sharps that had been getting his money for the last month. In spite of the man's absolute uselessness it was impossible not to like him. The more I studied him the less could I fancy him cold-bloodedly proposing to ruin a bosom friend in order to get even so large a sum as $100,000.

"Mandeville isn't the evil genius in this proposition," was my decision after associating with him for a week. "There is somebody else who is driving him to it."

There was nothing about the young fellow that made any other theory possible. He was too careless, and too honorable, in an easy-going sort of way, to rob a friend to satisfy his own needs. I could picture him becoming a hobo and a bum through careless habits; and I believe he would have done that before he would go to the length of blackmail.

I began to look for another party to the job. This made the task all the more delicate, because the more people knew of Clarence Handsykes' secret connection with the Battery Trust the more danger was there that the secret would become public property.

I went down to Handsykes' office at the end of ten days' association with Mandeville.

"Mr. Handsykes," I said, "will you give me a list of the names of the men who knew of Clarence's little affair with the Battery Trust?"

"Certainly," said he. "Here they are: Dawson, the president; James, the first vice-president; and old Davis, the cashier. Davis served a year in jail; he's an old retainer of the family, as you might put it. The other two have had their mouths stopped with a bad bill of lards enough to keep even Wall street financiers silent."

"Is there any one else who might by any chance know of this affair?"

"None," said he. "I don't know of any other of these gentlemen is behind young Mandeville's artistic letter," said I. "Mandeville hasn't the heart to hurt a flea. He would rather starve than steal a cent—for himself. Are these other men friends of yours, Mr. Handsykes?"

"Why do you ask?"

"Because it's probably one of them that we will have to put the screws on."

"They are all friends of mine," said he. "The best friends in the world. And the tighter you put the screws on, Cornell, the better I'll be pleased—no matter how dear the friend. Is that quite clear?"

"Thank you," I said.

"And I don't care how you get the screws on, either," said he, as he bowed me out.

A few days' work on the part of other men of the agency showed me that of the trio in question Dawson was in England, James in a sanitarium in South Carolina, and Dawson living in retirement in his country home on the Hudson. So I began to watch Walter Mandeville again. By watching him, I don't mean that I watched only his person; I watched everything that might concern him or his affairs, including everybody that called on him, every letter or note that he received, every telephone call that he answered. Naturally I didn't do all this myself, but from the minute this espionage was established I knew what Mandeville was doing about as well as he knew himself. He didn't move without my knowing where or why. Therefore when he made a hurried trip to Dawson's place up the river it wasn't remarkable that I knew he did it in answer to a presumptuous call from Dawson. And Dawson's telephone call didn't surprise me, either; for I had been looking up Mr. Dawson.

Mandeville went up on the New York Central to New Rochelle, where an automobile was waiting for him. Dawson wasn't in the automobile in the street, he stopped it and got in when the car had gone out of town about five miles. You see, Cluffer, my partner, had taken the place of Dawson's regular chauffeur, who had been taken suddenly ill two days previous—after Cluffer had shown him a roll of bills. So Cluffer got all that passed between Dawson and Mandeville on the road up to the Dawson house. And that was enough to give me the lead I sought to work on.

"Well," Dawson said as he climbed in, "have you heard from the old goat?"

"No," said Mandeville. "Not a word."

"Well," continued Dawson, angrily, "you write him another letter tonight, give him just another week to come across, and I won't give you the story to the public."

"But, Dawson," protested Mandeville; at which Dawson said: "Either that or—you know what happens. You will never, never know where your wife is living."

Mandeville almost choked at this. "Great heavens, Dawson," he pleaded, "don't give a human being such a stone for a heart as you have! You know that there is just one thing in this world that makes me want to live: that's to see my wife and son just once more—just once. And you happen to have found where they are living."

"And hidden so that you never will find them," sneered Dawson. "She left you because of your drinking at college. Mandeville. She thinks you're still the half-crazy boozefighter you were then. She's bringing the boy up to forget you. She's afraid you'll turn up—as you used to be."

"And you know that I'm decent now; that I'd be a man if I could find them and work for them, and you won't tell me," said Mandeville. "I ought to kill you, Dawson."

"Then you never would find them, would you, Manville?" laughed the old man. "No; you know the only way to get in touch with them is to get this $100,000 for me that I need to keep myself from disgrace. And that's to be got through Handsykes—the old brute. Well, you'll get it for me, don't fear my boy. I know old Handsykes; he'll give it to you."

"But he wouldn't give it to you, would he?" asked Mandeville. "He'd be deaf for you killed first, wouldn't he, Dawson?"

Dawson paled a little at this. Cluffer told me later. He was watching them in the mirror in front of him.

"Well," said Dawson, "you'll get me that money—or you'll never see your wife."

That was the story that I got from Cluffer that evening. By piecing it out with what I learned from Mandeville's friends I found that the young fellow had married a poor girl while he was at college, that she had left him because of his habits, that he had been deaf for five years, trying to find the wife and boy, and then had got careless through losing hope. Dawson's hold on him was the strongest in the world; it was the only thing that would have made him do what he was doing. It was the only hold on him: it was life itself to him, this hope that some day he would see his family.

I thought the thing over for a long time. I knew it would be next to an impossible task to find the woman. Dawson wouldn't have left any loose threads by which she might be traced. I knew of no way in which Dawson might be scared off the job. I thought of Handsykes. It was best to go before him and tell him all that I knew. I did. He listened, and as he heard of Dawson's perfidy his face changed as I never had seen a face change before. All the gentility—almost all the civilization—left it. I wouldn't have liked to meet him as an enemy at that moment.

"All right, Cornell," he said. "You've done a good job. Now you come with me and we'll go up the river and meet Mr. Dawson."

I shall never forget that ride up to Dawson's home. We went in Handsykes' big touring car with the curtains pulled down and the electric lights turned on. He never spoke a word during the whole trip. He just sat and looked straight ahead of him with that ugly, set expression on his face, and no movement about him that a graven image. When we got into the open country past New Rochelle he ordered the curtains pulled up and the lights turned off. We were near Dawson's home then. When we rolled up the driveway and stopped Handsykes said gruffly: "Follow me," and entered the house.

He seemed perfectly at home.

"Send for Dawson," he said to the butler. We went into a reception room and waited, standing. Dawson came in and found himself face to face with Handsykes, whose expression had not changed. For several seconds, long ugly seconds, they faced one another, and Dawson wilted like a boy before an angry parent.

"You cur!" said Handsykes in a whisper. "So it is you, is it? It's you who made the Mandeville boy write that letter?"

Dawson never spoke a word. His head hung down on his chest and his under lip was trembling.

"Dawson," came Handsykes' voice, more like a rasp from some mechanical instrument than a human voice.

"Yes, sir," said Dawson, coming to life. "Yes, sir."

"Go abroad, Dawson," hissed Handsykes. "Hide yourself away where you can't be found. If you're within finding distance in another week, Dawson, I'll—"

"Yes, sir," whimpered Dawson, trembling. "I'll go, Mr. Handsykes; I'll go."

Cheap Way to a Title.

Through the death of the duke of Fife two and perhaps three of his titles of nobility pass out of his immediate family to the nearest male kin, who is supposed to be Jekyl Chalmers Duff. This apparent new lord lives in St. Kilda, Melbourne, Australia, and was formerly a member of the Indian police.

The Earlom of Egmont. to cite a comparatively recent case, went to a man, a distant cousin, who had been a fireman. A naval officer succeeded by proving his claim to the earldom of Huntington after it had been vacant many years.

The barony of Sinclair was not filled from 1723 to 1752. The story goes that the claimant, who had not the means to make a contest, had himself elected to the house of commons and out his political opponents so the expense of proving that he was a peer, and not entitled to sit as a commoner, which they did, to his and their satisfaction.

Half a Million Animals.

There are 565,000 known species of animals, according to a paper read at the session of the American Society of Naturalists, held at Princeton, N. J.—The Argonaut.

Frenchman's Little Parliament.

Mr. Chaumet, under secretary for posts and telegraphs of France, has set up a substantial human buffer between himself and the general "kickers." He has appointed an advisory committee, 65 strong, and its members include senators, deputies, officials of all ranks down to a woman postal employee and a letter sorter, representatives of shipping and commercial houses and journalists. This committee, which Mr. Chaumet calls "a little parliament," will deal with the enormous mass of complaints and suggestions sent in daily to the postal administration by the public, and submit such as seem suitable as proposals to the administration.

Martian Canal Doubles in Size.

Observations show that the Martian canal Titan has doubled within a few weeks. The canal runs nearly straight north from the equator and far into the northern hemisphere of the planet. A perfectly parallel line has now appeared to the east of it, the distance separating the twins being somewhat more than a hundred miles. This doubling of certain Martian canals at certain seasons is one of the puzzles being to support the theory that the equator are of artificial construction.

Noisy Rest.

Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, who has done so much to diminish New York's noises, said in a recent anti-noise address: "I congratulate those New York hotels that have substituted lights for bells. A light, you know, flashes up beneath a room number. In summing-up servants that is quite as efficacious while it is ever so much less noisy than the ting-a-ling-a-ling of an electric bell."

Hotels need such devices. You have heard, perhaps, of that typically noisy hotel whereof a man once asked: "Is it an up-to-date place?"

"Up-to-date?" "Rather," was a friend's reply. "They bring you a very noisy sleeping powder with your tea water."

No Difficulty.

George W. Wilson was rehearsing with Edwin Booth at the Boston museum. Wilson, in one scene, asked the star where he should stand. "Where do you usually stand?" Booth. "Mr. Barrett had me over there," answered Wilson. "Yes," mused Barrett. "I usually have him there," indicating the other side of the stage. "But Barrett—did you wherever you are," said Booth.

you'll never hear of me again as long as I live."

"Or after," said Handsykes.

"Or after," repeated Dawson, quite humbly.

And that was all I had to do with the Handsykes blackmail case. I never found out what Handsykes would say to Dawson—what he would have done if he saw him again.

"Don't worry about it," said the office manager. "I told you Handsykes was a name to remember. And Dawson knew it better than I did."

"But how could Handsykes place such a secret in my hands so carelessly?" I asked. "How did he know I might not use it some time?"

"Try it," grinned the manager. "You saw what happened to Dawson."

Later on I happened to do another small job for Handsykes. I met Mr. Mandeville in the office. He was one of Handsykes' trusted men. And he had his family back in New York with him.

"How in the world can that man Handsykes do these things?" I asked the manager after this visit.

"I do not know," said he. "Nobody does, I guess. That's what makes him Handsykes."

"I was rather proud of my work."
