These are things the electors of Western Canada should remember when they are being urged to subscribe for the Daily Free Press at one dollar a year. It is not a newspaper's offer, it is a grafters' offer. It is not to enlighten the public mind on election issues; it is to poison the public mind.

Further, let the people remember that in reality it is out of their own pockets the money is being taken to make good the loss the Free Press must sustain in this last desperate effort to secure the public ear.

Commercially the offer is impossible. As a straight newspaper proposition it would wreck any paper in Canada, and it would wreck the Free Press if the timber deal funds were not being utilized to compensate it for its losses.

The game that is being worked on the public is the most desperate, the most unscrupulous and the most insolent that has ever been attempted in this country. We have heard of buying the people with their own money, but this is a case of poisoning the people with their own money. Let the people of Western Canada bear in mind that the offer of a dollar daily paper, which goes to them in the form of a canvasser or a circular, is really the offer of poison concealed in a capsule. It is designed to misrepresent facts, to befog their reasoning to divert them from the dangerous conclusion that property stolen from the people should be restored to the people. It is one of the last stages in the game the Sifton-Burrows combination is playing with the people. It is playing with loaded dice, but it can only win if the people themselves wilfully submit to the deception.

An Unscrupulous Druggist Will Try and Sell You a Substitute for DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY Why?

Because "Dr. Fowler's" is the oldest and best known cure, having been on the market for 63 years, for DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY, COLIC, CRAMPS, PAIN IN THE STOMACH, CHOLERA INFANTUM, CHOLERA MORBUS, SUMMER COMPLAINT, SEA SICKNESS, AND ALL FLUXES OF THE BOWELS.

When they offer to sell you a preparation "just as good" they have not the welfare of your health at heart but that of their pocket. All honest druggists will give you what you ask for. Ask for "Dr. Fowler's" and get the best.

Mrs. Thomas Miller, Allandale, Ont., writes:—"I suffered terribly with diarrhœa and asked the druggist for something to cure it. He gave me a small bottle of medicine of his own manufacture, but I got no relief from it. A friend advised me to get Dr. Fowler's Ext. of Wild Strawberry and I was cured after taking a few doses.

NATURAL GAS.

(Hardware Review.)

The closing years of the nineteenth and the early years of the twentieth centuries were remarkable for the results achieved by man's inventive genius in harnessing the hidden resources of nature and compelling them to be subservient to his will, thus adding commercial value to those elements and phenomena which our forefathers considered simply a menace to their lives and property. Among these notable achievements the development of natural gas into a great national industry, in which many millions of dollars are invested, must go down into commercial history as one of the most illustrious examples of human endeavor and enterprise.

Like electricity, this pure and perfect fuel is as old as the earth itself, its existence having been known as a curiosity of nature according to the most ancient records of the human race. It may be briefly noted that the early accounts of its use take us back to the dawn of history itself and into the realm of mythology. The "eternal fires" of the Apsheron Peninsula of the Caspian Sea, resorted to by the Parsees who worship fire as a symbol, are burning springs of natural gas, still flaming after the lapse of many ages; and natural gas is believed to have been used at the oracle of Apollo at Delphi in Greece long before the Christian era. The Chinese, who appear to have had knowledge of almost everything for centuries before other nations, are credited with having made practical application of natural gas for fuel in the evaporation of salt brine long before it was believed to possess commercial value in civilized countries.

There is a small consumption of natural gas in England, in Sussex County, Holland makes use of natural gas in the partial illumination of two villages on the Zuyder Zee. Galicia, Roumania, Russia, Persia, India, Japan, and Cuba produce a limited quantity of natural gas, which is associated with the petroleum produced and is consumed in the generation of steam used in pumping wells. The Canadian production is described in detail further on in this article.

The early use and development in the United States of this product of Nature's laboratory was due chiefly to its observed presence in natural springs, afterwards to artesian-well drilling in search of salt brine. In subsequent years the search for petroleum, with which it is usually associated, developed large areas of high-pressure reservoirs of this remarkable hydrocarbon which is today and has been for the last thirty-six years, a most economical and convenient source of power, light and heat. Outside of the United States its prodction is insignificant— not more than 1¼ per cent of the quantity produced in this country; and of the amount Canada is by far the largest producer. There are but two fields in Canada worthy of mention; the Ontario field, on the north side of Lake Erie, averaging from 15 to 40 miles in width, and lying between the Niagara River on the east and the Detroit River on the west, and the Medicine Hat field, in the Province of Alberta, which as near as can be estimated covers an area of 100 miles in length by 50 miles in width. Within recent years the latter field has been considerably developed and it is estimated thatthis land covers an area of 3,200,000 acres; whereas in the year 1906 the lands held by the natural gas companies of the United States were 5,244,943 acres. Canada possesses, therefore, the largest individual gas field in the world, which is destined, before many years pass, to give birth to a giant industrial movement in Alberta Province.

The first gas well was drilled in 1815, by Captain James Wilson, within the present city limits of Charleston, West Virginia. The captain had not found as good salt water as he expected, but, instead of being discouraged, he declared, in language emphatic, that he would have better brine or bore the well into lower regions with a higher temperature. Shortly after this the auger struck a cavity which gave vent to an immense flow of natural gas and salt water. The gas caught fire, and blazed with great force and brilliancy, much to the consternation of the natives. Captain Wilson thought it would be a reckless tempting of Providence to go any deeper, and ordered the drilling stopped. This well produced gas in small quantities until quite recently.

The earliest economic use of natural gas in the United States was in lighting the village of Fredonia, N.Y., in 1821. In that year a well 1¼ inches in diameter and 27 feet deep, was bored, and this was probably the first well sunk for the purpose of obtaining a supply of this fuel. This well produced gas sufficient for thirty burners, each two candle-power. The gas was conveyed from the well in woodod pipes. In 1824, on the occasion of Marquis de Lafayette's visit, the village was lighted with natural gas. In Ohio the first known use of this product was in 1838, at Findlay, and the gas from this well was utilized for nearly fifty years. In 1884 the regular development of the Findlayfield took place. In 1841 a strong flow of natural gas associated with a large flow of salt brine, was developed on the Great Kanawha River, in West Virginia. As far back as 1859 more or less natural gas had been noted in Pennsylvania, as the drilling became general on Oil Creek. It was then considered a dangerous nuisance, as it was the source of numerous explosions and oil fires, which often resulted in loss of life.

One of the first applications of natural gas for fuel purposes was that of the Jarecki Manufacturing Co., of Erie, Pa., about 1868. The first well was 500 feet deep and yielded largely at first, but it gradually declined. In 1872, near Titusville, Pa., a powerful natural gas well was drilled on the Newton farm, 5½ miles out of the village. Light and fuel were furnished to 250 consumers in Titusville. This was the first natural gas plant which supplied light and heat in a large and permanent quantity by methods and appliances that are practically the same as those used today, and it is looked upon as the beginning of the industry which has since assumed such vast proportions. In the following year this fuel was first used in the manufacture of iron in heating and puddling furnaces at Leechburg Pa., by the firm of Rodgers and Birchfield. The first pipe line of any considerable length, used to transmit the gas, was built in 1875 from the iron mill of Spang, Chalfant & Co., Etna, Pa., near Pittsburg, to the Harvey well, near Lardens mills in Butler County. The line was 17 miles long, 6 inches in diameter, and one-fourth inch in thickness, screw joint.

By the close of 1883 several pipe lines were supplying the factories and the domestic service of Pittsburg, especially the iron, the steel, and the glass works, where its application increased by leaps and bounds. In 1886 the Findlay field in Ohio began to be a prominent factor, and was followed soon after by the development of the Indiana field. With these sudden discoveries of such quantities of natural gas that were heretofore unknown the general impression was strengthened that the reservoirs of this remarkable fuel were practically inexhaustible. Wells were permitted to discharge immense volumes into the air for months and even years, and, with numerous prominent torches and escape pipes, they illuminated the night throughout the gas belt. Northwestern Ohio and Central Indiana vied with Western Pennsylvania in consuming the greatest quantity of natural gas in the shortest time by almost turning night into day. This was a most wasteful and extravagant display, involving the utter loss of untold millions of cubic feet of the most perfect fuel that has ever been offered to mankind.

The extravagance did not end here, but in the mills and factories no attempt was made for years to consume the gas in an economical manner. The gas companies usually permitted the purchaser to help himself to any amount he cared to consume. This condition of affairs was, in a measure, brought about by several natural gas companies owning wells in the same field, in which case the pressure adjusts itself over the entire area. As the pressure began to decline there was a scramble among the companies to realize the greatest amount possible before the pressure became too low to make satisfactory returns.

The climax was reached in 1888, when it has been estimated that not less than 750,000,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas were consumed and wasted. For this immense quantity only $22,630,000 was paid. This includes what was received for all the natural gas consumed in the United States that year, at an average price of three cents per 1,000 cubic feet. If sold for only ten cents per 1,000 cubic feet, the gas would have yielded $75,000,000. It took the place of about 18,000,000 tons of coal. The total value of the petroleum produced in the United States that year was only $18,000,000.

The decline in value and quantity continued until 1895 and 1896, when the value of the product for each of these years was only $13,000,000. From this time there has been a general increase in value and an increase in quantity. The new production, chiefly from West Virginia, has more than made good the decline of the older fields. The value of the product in 1906 was $46,873,982, representing 388,842,562,000 cubic feet of natural gas at an average price of 12.1 cents per thousand cubic feet. Since 1906 the total value of the annual production has further increased.

In 1890 and 1891 many reforms tending to improve the methods of storing, transporting, and consuming natural gas were inaugurated. Systems of telephones between the general offices and the wells were installed by many companies, so that when the supply was not required the wells were shut in and the gas was held in its natural reservoir.

During the past eighteen years cast iron pipe has given place to steel; leaking lead joints to rubber packing; hand regulation to automatic; common perforated or pipe burners in coal ranges and furnaces to modern appliances; and today the most perfect steam power equipment is being rapidly displaced by natural gas engines throughout the Appalachian field. Pennsylvania, Western Ohio-Indiana field, Central Ohio field and the Kansas-Oklahoma field. It is estimated, upon the authority of president of the Natural Gas Association of America, that the year 1907 has been the most profitable in the history of the industry and that the total gross earnings may be safely estimated at $60,000,000.

Sources of Natural Gas.

The source of natural gas is usually an open, porous, or pebbly sandstone, or a limestone whose structure presents cavities caused by rearrangement of crystals, or whose sandy beds have prevented the complete solidification of the limy structure. The rock pressure and the output of gas wells are usually measured when the well is new and they are at their maximum. Even the longest life of the gas well is short, and the rock pressure decreases with every foot of natural gas taken out. It is not usual for wells having the greatest rock pressure to produce the greatest volume of natural gas, as an open pebble sand gives up its stored products more rapidly than a sand of closer texture; therefore, the more open the texture of the strata, the shorter but more vigorous will probably be the life of the pool. Many pools that were most vigorous are almost entirely destitute of natural gas, today. The gas in some of them has been so far removed by gas pumps that when they are opened the air flows into the vacuum in the porous strata once packed with high-pressure gas. In many virgin fields, especially in the beds of streams, innumerable small vents and bleeders are often found, from which there is an escape of more or less natural gas in the form of bubbles. These innumerable vents, during the ages that have passed have acted as safety valves and have allowed the escape of many millions of cubic feet of gas into the atmosphere. The contents of the known reservoirs are probably but a small fraction of the gas that has been dissipated in the air.

The West Virginia Field.

At the second annual meeting of the West Virginia Board of Trade, held at Charleston, W. Va., October 4th and 10th, 1906, Dr. I. C. White one of the vice-presidents of the board, chairman of the committee on statistics and information, addressed the assemblage as follows on the subject of the natural gas resources of that state and the tremendous waste which was allowed to continue:

"As you are aware, beginning in the Northern Pan-handle and extending across the State, there is agreat belt of this natural fuel. Every fuel of every kind, wood, coal, or any other substance, must first be converted into gas before it will burn. You see that even in wood where the flame spurts out, and you know it is the gas, carbon and hydrogen. Here nature has in her laboratory converted for us into gas free of charge billions and billions of cubic feet of the purest fuel, and yet we have permitted it to go into the air and to be wasted in various ways, and the first thing we know we will wake up and it will be gone. We have the richest heritage that has ever been given to any State in the Union, and yet through the lack of interest, lack of action, and I regret to say, but I think it is true, through outside influences from other States, we have permitted the largest portion of this fuel to be wasted. I estimate that for ten years there went into the air in this State, without any attempt to stop it, at least five hundred feet of gas every day in the year; during the last ten years there has gone into the air unconsumed at least eighteen hundred thousand million feet of gas. I have called the attention of the Legislature to it in three formal biennial reports, and yet has been done. I would like to give you a few statistics right on that line, showing the value of gas. There is taken out of the State, I estimate, now, about two hundred and fifty million cubic feet of gas a day, to be sold in adjoining States. None of it is sold for less than twenty-five cents a thousand, and some of it brings as high as fifty cents. That taken to Cleveland brings fifty cents, some places pay forty cents, some thirty, some twenty-seven. Pittsburg I think, pays twenty-seven. You can yourself figure the cost of that. The price of it even at ten cents a thousand is from nine to ten million annually, and if you figure it at 25 cents it is worth twenty-three millions annually. We figure that a thousand feet of gas is equivalent in heating value to a bushel of coal. When five hundred million cubic feet of gas is going into the air every day, we have lost five hunhred thousand bushels of coal. You can figure the cost in the last ten years. In this period the State has lost by waste over one hundred million dollars, if you value the gas at only ten cents a thousand."

The "Maggie Vanderpool"—Largest Gas Well Ever Struck.

A "wildcat" well drilled for oil by the New York Oil and Gas Company, about four and one-half miles southeast of Caney, Montgomery County, Kan., in Indian Territory (now the State of Oklahoma), about one-half mile south of the State line of Kansas, was dry in the Bartlesville sand (the oil bearing sand of that section), and instructions were given to continue the drill to the Mississippi lime, which should be reached in that locality at about fifteen hundred feet. A gas bearing sand was found at 1,430 feet on the nineteenth of Februbry, 1906. At two or three feet in the sand a strong flow of gas abruptly terminated the drilling.

The tools were pulled and preparations made for tubing. The well was cased with two joints of ten-inch and 360 feet of eight-and-a-quarter-inch. At one time the well was closed, and a test showed a volume of thirty million cubic feet in twenty-four hours and a rock pressure of over 600 pounds.

On February 23rd, a severe electrical storm arose. As the lightning played closer and closer, as a matter of precaution the men quit the derrick. Before the men could reach the shelter of a nearby tree there was a blinding flash, a deafening roar, a descending column of fire, wide at the top and narrowing at the bottom. When the derrick was consumed there was a burning jet of gas, 140 feet in the air, issuing from the six-inch pipe forty feet in the air, and a fierce fire about the top of the eight-and-a-quarter-inch casing deflected in various directions by the elevators.

After five weeks of constant battling with the fire, the courageous and determined band of men, led by Mr. J. C. McDowell, the general manager of the company, finally succeeded in extinguishing the giant flame at a cost of $30,000. The extraordinary feat was accomplished by means of a huge iron hood and small piping, but only after days of unceasing toil and many disappointments.

The well was at night a beautiful and majestic spectacle. The flame rose to a height of 225 feet, symmetrical and splendid, swaying to and fro in the wind, lighting up the country for miles around. One could read a newspaper at a distance of a mile, and its light was seen from twenty-five to sixty miles away. The noise of the escaping gas, combined with its combustion, was terrifying and the vibration of the atmosphere in the immediate vicinity was very disconcerting.

The Maggie Vanderpool home, a log cabin about 300 feet from the well, was abandoned by Maggie and utilized by the company as a storehouse, and the well has since been known as the "Maggie Vanderpool."

The flow of the well was gauged after it was under control andfound to be over seventy-two million cubic feet per day of twenty-four hours —probably the largest well in volume on record.

After the men in charge of the work were practically worn out, when the task had been accomplished, the nervous strain induced by the terrific roar of the flame, the vibration of the atmosphere, the fear of accidents and injury to the workmen, the foolish advice offered, and the determination to succeed was intense; yet there was a fascination about it that drew and held men to the work with all the hardships it imposed. The public took a great interest in the well and the efforts to extinguish it. People came by the thousand, special trains were run from great distances, regular hack lines ran night and day from Carey to the well. It was found necessary to establish a danger line and enforce it by an Indian police force, furnished by the United States Government. Booths were set up by the vendors of all sorts of articles, and 10nch counters did a thriving business. It resembled a country fair, the crowd at times exceeding three thousand people.

Editor of The Times:

Some of the settlers in the Josephsburg district are rather put out on hearing that the position of inspector of roads has been taken from Mr. Duncan Black.

Mr. Black is a very efficient man in handling men and in estimating the cost of any grading, cutting, or filling. We understand he was the first man who started waterworks in the city of Medicine Hat, he was brought from a lucrative position in the West by Mr. Finlay then mayor of the town and gave the height of satisfaction, he has grown old in the service of the public, but still retains the use of his faculties and is as bright and energetic as ever, and if he is turned down its a downright shame. Has there been any investigation of his work and it found improperly done? I think not. Has he made false returns? It has never been so shown? Then what is the matter with the old man.

The present inspector Mr. Vigar, is a practical man and is turning off excellent work with dispatch and is giving general satisfaction, and if Mr. Black is permanently relieved should get another job as good the one he lost.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

(From our own correspondents.)

What Wideawake and Reliable Correspondents throughout This District Find Worthy of Recording for Publication in their Home Paper.

Seven Persons

Mr. Royer of Osage, Sask., is at Seven Persons having a house built on his homestead, he has bought a section of land joining his homestead and is going into farming and stock raising at this place.

There seems to be a good deal of dissatisfaction in regard to the pre-emption law as passed, it seems to give some homesteaders the benefit to the exclusion of others.

Mr. Trome of Winnifred was here passing through to his homestead.

Quite a gang of harvesters and threshers left this place going west to get work.

Mr. Peter Welch is busy haying yet he has been delayed some by the wet weather. Mr. John Meyers is hauling in for himself three loads a day.

Farmers are beginning to realize that winter wheat is just the thing for this country, a number here have put in quite a little.

Mr. Murray and wife and Mr. North drove to The Hat Saturday.

J. F. Leonard has about completed his harvesting (300 acres) and will soon be thresding.

J. F. Butler of Brooks spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Butler.

Thanks to the good marksmanship of A. W. Butler the Coyotes, gophers and hawks are getting scarce here.

Little Plume

Mr. Dixon of Little Plume suffered a serious loss by fire a week ago Monday. It is supposed that children playing with matches, set fire to the stable, which was consumed together with a democrat and sixty loads of hay.

Bowell.

A successful dance was held in the section house at Bowell on Friday last. W. Flynn's extra gang was largely represented at the gathering. Several people from Bowell and the surrounding district were present.

A sneak thief answering the description of the Golden prisoner was operating throughout the east some months ago, and was convicted several times, but was let down rather lightly because of his afflictions. It is thought that perhaps this is the same man for he has worked from the east toward the coast.

EDMONTON PAPER SOLD.

Edmonton, Alta., Aug. 28.— The Bulletin today announced the Edmonton, Journal had been purchased by a Vancouver newspapermen and a formal announcement of the completion of the deal will be made shortly. Practically all the stock has been secured by M. McConnel, editor of the Vancouver Sunset and he will take over the management in a few days. The Journal is Conservative in politics.

BRANDON LOST HEAVILY.

Professional ball has been a costly sport in Winnipeg and Brandon to the promoters this year. The Winnipeg club is known to have lost heavily but the Wheat City club have been hit hard especially for its opening season. It is likely that the fans there will form the opinion that pennants come high. Brandon had a more expensive team than Winnipeg and the shareholders as a result of the fiasco of the league series will be called upon to put up a deficit of over $3,000. Referring to this yesterday afternoon, the Brandon Sun says:

"It is learned today that the amount which the shareholders of the Brandon baseball club will have to pay will be even higher than expected a few days ago. There is an overdraft at the Bank of Hamilton of about $1,500 and about $300 in other debts. To raise $1,800 to square up the affairs will require another call of about forty-five per cent. on the shareholders, making the loss seventy-five per cent. of the amount subscribed, a thirty per cent. call which netted $1,200 having been made some time ago. The shareholders generally who have heard rumors of the coming call for more money are very much dissatisfied. Most of them allege they had been practically assured the first call would be all that would be made. The victims however, have reason to be thankful that things are not much worse, as they would have been, had some of the directors who were practically ignored during the season not jumped in at the last moment and straightened things out.

This rather discounts the livid yarns spun by American yellow journals about British injustice at the Olympic games:

"Young Mr. Hayes, Marathon winner, has the heart of a sportsman, as well as the lungs and legs of the same. He has no sore toe to exhibit. He has no fault to find with the treatment of America's Olympic athletes by the British officials, and says so. Of the same kidney is J. P. Halsted, another contestant. 'I am perfectly satisfied with the treatment we received,' he says, 'and think that the English tried to give us a square deal throughout. I didn't see any attempt at what should be called unfairness.'

"This is manly talk, more generous, and, we guess, more just, than some that is credited to our always valiant and striving, but in certain cases rather querulous, Olympians."

New York Evening Mail.

Edmonton, Alta., Aug. 24.—The first championship athletic meet in Alberta was held today, and was a great success. There were a large number of entries, but few from the south of the province. The weather was favorable, and there was a large crowd in attendance and it was civic holiday for Edmonton. No records were broken, but some good initial records for Alberta were made in the various events. J. F. Fitzgerald, of Edmonton, a member of the Canadian Olympic team, won the 5 mile race in 29 minutes, and the one mile race in 4 minutes, 55 3-5 seconds. Eric McLean, of Strathcona, won the 100 yards in 10 2-5 seconds, and the 220 yard dash in 24 1-5 seconds. J. F. Carmichael won the grand aggregate with 17 points and $50 donated by the Acme company of Edmonton. The competition in the junior events was good.

The following are now the champions of Alberta with the records made today:

Five miles—J. F. Fitzgerald, Edmonton, time 29 minutes.

One mile—J. F. Fitzgerald, Edmonton, time 4 minutes, 55 3-5 seconds.

100 yards—Eric McLean, Strathcona, time 10 2-5 seconds.

220 yards—Eric McLean, Strathcona, time 24 1-5 seconds.

220 yard hurdle—D. Miller, Edmonton, time 30 1-5 seconds.

Running broad jump—J. F. Carmichael, Strathcona, distance 19 ft.

Running high jump—J. H. Wallace Edmonton, 5 feet 3 inches.

Pole vault—G. A. Tremholme, Edmonton, height 9 feet.

Shot put (16 lbs.)—M. McLean, Edmonton, distance 38 feet, 8½ inches.

Running high stan and jump—J. F. Carmichael, Strathcona, distance 42 feet 6 inches.

Throwing baseball.—T. T. Purdy Strathcona, distance 99 yards 2 ft.

Kicking Football— J. F. Carmichael, Strathcona, distance 135 feet, 2 inches.

Not a Miracle But Medical Science

Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Gentlemen:—

"Some time ago I began to lose flesh and failed every day until I had to quit work. My physicians and all my friends said I had contracted consumption. I failed from 165 pounds down to 119. I was advised to go to the Rockies or to the coast. I went to both places under heavy expense. I continued to fail, and was advised by the doctors to come home as nothing more could be done for me. Hope seemed to have left me.

"I tried Psychine and since starting its use I have gained from 119 to 141 pounds. I have used $10.00 worth of the medicine. I am a well man and I cannot say too much in praise of Psychine. The strongest recommendation would be weak in view of the fact that I believe it has saved my life. It is without doubt the best remedy for run-down conditions and weak lungs.

"I sincerely hope and trust that you will continue your good work of saving run down people and consumptive from the grave. Wishing you and Psychine continued success, I remain, one of Psychine's best friends."

ALEX. McAE, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Almost every mail brings us letters like the above. Psychine will repeat this record in every case. It is the greatest medicine known. At all druggists, 50c and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, Toronto.

Lethbridge Herald:—Taber, Aug. 27.—Mr. John McNeely, manager of the Medicine Hat Milling Co., came to town this morning in the interest of his company. He is well known to the farmers of this district and it will be remembered by the early settlers of Taber, that his company bought the first bushel of wheat raised here, and has continued doing so ever since. When shown a sample of the spring wheat that had just been placed in the elevator he declared that it was "par excellence," and would make the best of flour.

Fall Wheat Growing

Success this Year Induces Others to Plant

The large field of fall wheat planted by T. L. Corbett as an experiment was so much of a success that a score of local farmers are departing from the spring wheat limit and going in for the hardier, earlier crop.

Among those who are going to have crops of fall wheat next year are T. L. Corbett, W. R. Bellington Jas. Fleming, W. B. Marshall, T. Littleford, J. Trimble, J. Rae, Wm. Baker, etc.

Samuel Baker of Bull's Head thinks this country the best onearth for farming. He has a crop of alfalfa this year that cannot be beaten.

National Association in Town

This morning about 160 of the National Editorial Association came into the city and spent a couple of hours. All of that time there was a constant stream into The Times office, and everyone spoke highly of the plant and convenience.

The editors are having a fine trip and return home onS aturday. They have five sleepers and a diner on their train. A third of the number are women.

A Speechless Advertisement

One of those flim flam artists, that sells you nothing for something with additions to both, has been doing up the city during the past few days.

He is a fine looking, strong, healthy well-dressed young fellow, with a droop on his face as long as the school book contract and as touching as a pretty girl in a park. He walks like a strike-breaker going to work and in general looks like the last rose of summer with the outer petals still in the ring.

He comes slowly into the office and you unconsciously prepare to get out your handkerchief to be ready for anything. A gloom settles over your spirit deep enough to hide the Liberal graft game. The sun goes under a cloud as if turned off in sympathy.

A beautiful yellow prescription envelope with a bulge in it showing there is something more than tears inside, is shoved in your face, and while you read a pathetic tale of "deaf and dumb from scarlet fever," an atmosphere like an old slough or the back yard of a canning factory is playing around you until you can almost count the glasses that made it.

You hesitate whether to kick the second-hand bar-room out or send him back to Calgary for re-bottling. With a pressing danger of getting a second-hand jag on you give him a dime, throw the laces out of the window, and have the office boy eat onions to drown the smell.

What's the use of a voice or hearing, if you can get drinks in such quantities and distribute the knowledge of it from a distance of ten yards?

MATINEES.

The Star Theatre have an attractive programme this week. The subjects for tonight are entitled, "They want a divorce," "A lady who likes moustaches," "An African Legend," and "An Unfortunate Mistake."

A successful matinee, the first of the season, was given on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock. The matinee is not a continuous show as in the evening, so that in order to enjoy the full programme it is necessary for all to be in punctually at the hour stated.

Every child attending the Saturday matinees has a chance of winning the handsome dollar box of chocolates.

At these afternoon shows the pleasures and interests of the youngsters are especially catered for.

Richard Clark was arrested on the 22nd for being drunk and incapable. He was fined $2 and costs.

Of late John Paul has been quite a frequenter of the city hall. On the 24th he visited the court room to answer a charge of breach of the health bylaw. He was fined $25 and costs, with the alternative of one month's imprisonment. On the 26th the proprietor of the Cypress restaurant was up again for refusing to pay wages, and an order was issued for $70.40.

C. H. Wagner was fined $1 on Friday for not having his horses sufficiently secured to prevent them running away.

Robert McCutcheon, Jr., who was summoned to appear before the Magistrate on the 20th July for assault on one Daniel Smith, absented himself from the city for a month'stime Returning last week he was arrested on Friday night and on Saturday was fined $5 and costs.

FOSTER'S FORECAST

Washington, D. C., Aug. 29.—The last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbances to cross continent Aug. 3 to 7, warm wave Aug. 2 to 6, cool wave Aug. 5 to 9. This disturbance is expected to take a mid-latitude route and affect northern and southern sections about the same time and to increase in force from time it reaches the Pacific coast till it reaches the middle of the north Atlantic along the European steamship route.

The next disturbance will reach the Pacific coast about Sept. 11, cross Pacific slope by close of Sept. 12, great central valleys, Sept. 13 to 15, eastern states Sept. 16. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about Sept. 11, great central valleys Sept. 13, eastern states Sept. 15. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about Sept. 14, great central valleys Sept. 16, eastern states Sept. 18.

This disturbance will cause a great rise in temperature following the very low temperatures that will reach meridian 90 about Sept. 10. This disturbance will be most severe on the Pacific slope and will gradually decrease in force till it reaches the middle north Atlantic about the 19th Sept. Temperatures will probably not go so low in the cool wave of this disturbance as in the proceeding cool wave.

Showers will be quite general on most parts of the continent from Sept. 7 to 25. I will again mention the two cool waves to cross continent reaching Meridian 90 about Sept. 10 and 23. They will probably cause some frosts north of latitude 08 and this warning will enable my readers to protect their tender plants from the early frosts. The cool wave to cross the continent Sept. 21 to 25 will probably injure northern vegetation.

VOL. 6. No. 1. MEDICINE HAT, ALTA., CANADA, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 8 1908. $1.50 PER ANNUM

LABOR CELEBRATION

BIG CROWD ENJOYS ITSELF AT POLICE POINT

WEATHER INTERFERES AT NIGHT

Yesterday the people of Medicine Hat took their pleasures under difficulties. Though they cherished the privilege of the Anglo-Saxon, "The right to struggle," they bore their troubles cheerfully, and having made up their minds to enjoy themselves, refused to be discouraged by the weather man. In the afternoon at Police Point they celebrated Labor Day right royally.

The morning parade which was announced for 9.30 was delayed until after 10 o'clock as a number of the labor men in the interim hunting up stragglers and the late risers. Shortly after starting men left the Labor [illegible] themselves for a [illegible] by J. S. Miles. They then lined up in double file and headed by the city band, paraded the principle streets, passing along S. Railway St. up Toronto St. as far as Fifth Avenue, across to Main St. thence across the track as far as the general hospital, and returned by way of Toronto Street and North Railway. The turn-out was rather disappointing and their were more labor men on the sidewalks watching the procession go by, than taking part.

At 2.30 in the afternoon the conveyances began to leave the Finlay Bridge for Police Point, and for an hour there was a continuous stream of people on the way to the popular picnic resort, happy making the trip on foot as the transportation facilities proved inadequate. Over at the point, the latest which means things are unplanned is town, seated to take the full of the sun's rays and under the shade of the trees. No [illegible] a brief space was found to be ideal. It fronts the genius of [illegible] provided everywhere, and many [illegible] and responsible for his success in full as his social comforts to the possibility of the matter. [illegible] and thought [illegible] made [illegible] of good things.

The Labor Day committee had arranged a report that they were awaiting the weather-man, vide-[illegible] Porter, but negotiations [illegible] through.

The band had been playing to [illegible] the course of half an [illegible] the risks brought the ever-[illegible]programme of enjoyment to [illegible] and [illegible] the holiday [illegible] began to move for home, as [illegible] were able taking advantage [illegible] the rain, but the majority returning on foot.

The lacrosse game and the sports in the afternoon were witnessed by a large crowd, and thanks to the gentleman who undertook the management of the races at the last minute, Andy Patterson, C. W. Elliott, [illegible] Slater and others, these were made a success. The most notable feature was probably the eight jump by Eagle, who made a jump of 8 ft. 3in. With alittle training the Indian would doubtless make a record breaker. A collection taken up in his behalf realized considerably over $4. In addition he received the shirt and tie which was the first prize for this race. Benson won second prize. Eagle and Bannon were also first and second respectively in the long jump.

There were seven entries for the mile race. In this the first honors fell to Art Halward with Collier and Finch a pretty close second and third. Jackson, L. Perkins, J. Baller and E. Gowan were the other competitors.

The young children's races were provocative of much amusement and despite the rough-and-tumble which characterized the finish of one or two of these the toddlers all kept their good humor and these were no disgruntled ones. In the relay race between the two city schools, Toronto Street school was victorious with Earl Morris as fleet to breast the tape.

A press gang was organized for the purpose of providing judges for the baby competition; and for the space of twenty minutes while the hunt was going on, no more man felt his life safe. Several judges were captured but refused to act, and it was proposed to apply the barbage to procure a verdict. At last, however, Andy Patterson, after full deliberation as became a man accustomed to weighing in the balance insurance risks, agreed to act, and the prizes were awarded to Betty Chapman and Cecil Simpson.

The C.P.R. beat all comers in the tug of war.

Below are a few of the results.

Mile—1, A. Halward, 4 minutes 57 seconds; 2, Collier, 3, A. Finch.

Girls Under 14—1, E. Ingle; 2, Leppard.

Boys Under 12—1, Brotherton, 2, Smith; 3, B. Glover.

½ Mile, Open—A. Halward, J. Halward, Gawley.

Married Ladies Race—Mrs. Sharp, Mrs. Watkins, Mrs. Wright.

100 Yards Open—1, Halward, 2, J. Halward, 3, Barreau.

Girls Under 14—B. C. Taylor, M. Lussier, T. Gowan.

Boys Under 15.—W. Brotherton, Rutherford, T. Gowan.

Long Jump—Eagle, Bannon.

High Jump Eagle, 5 ft. 7 in.; Bannon.

The Labor Day committee tender their thanks to all who contributed towards the celebration. A full list of donors will be published in the next issue.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents, nor does it necessarily agree with them.)

Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—I wish to give publicity through the columns of your paper to a most high handed piece of work that is being carried on by the C.P.R. in the draining of Ektwater Lake. This lake is one the pride of our citizens and a pleasant resort for the many who solicit a holiday that would afford pleasant fishing and boating and other means of amusement and pleasure without much cost or expense of any kind, not to say anything of the damage to property bordering on the waters of this beautiful lake, the Killarney of the Cypress Hills.

Mr. Clifton, the C.P.R. have no doubt, under the Irrigation Act [illegible] and they have [illegible] for rights to [illegible] for, for rights to [illegible] and bring as they did this [illegible] throughout the district, and the public generally which say "hands off."

[illegible] are they (the C.P.R.) [illegible] into the lake and let the [illegible] so as to supply their tank [illegible], thereby reducing the lake considerably. Last year the ditch was further extended into the lake reducing it to almost half its original size, and now this fall they are again at it, and if not stopped, Ektwater lake will be no more.

I hope we are not reduced to the condition where we have to consent to might is right. I hope, Mr. Editor, you will give us the use of your paper to bring this outrage before the public, so the proper course may be taken to stop further destruction of the people's lake and also [illegible] the C.P.R. fill the ditch so that the lake may fill again to its natural height.

If the C.P.R. had any lands joining the lake there might be some excuse, but they do not own any land for miles around, and even entered on private property to execute their work of destruction. We have suffered this thing to be in hope the C.P.R. would themselves see the injustice to the people, but withthis gang now to further their task of destruction, it is proverbal lost straw. We cannot stand to be further deprived of our heritage.

VOX POPULI.

Editor of The Times:

During the past few days there has been things happening in this city that make me wonder what the water commissioners think of themselves. It is a surprise to me that they dare show their faces on the street. Had I been responsible for a condit on in the water supply during the summer months, that led even to deaths, I would leave the city by railway or shot gun. I'd be afraid that if I didn't some sufferer would assist me by the latter means.

There is every sign of a satisfactory water supply hereafter, but typhoid is not from the pleasant supply but from what we had to endure during the summer months. When one thinks that this was only the result of the inability, self-confidence, inattention or worse, of our water commissioners or a couple of them, he must stop and figure out what kind of people we have in the city to endure such a condition.

They will conttnue in the even course of their way, I have no doubt, but if any of them with a conscientc reada the black bordered notice he must feel his position very keenly.

One Who Has Escaped So Far.

Police Court Items.

Jerry Adams appeared in court on Tuesday charged with being drunk and incapable on the previous day. He was fined $3 and costs with the alternative of 14 days.

Robert McIntyre, after an evening's hard boosing, began to make a nuisance of himself. His indulgence in filthy language got him into trouble, which got him into the hands of the police which in turn got him a month in jail.

John D. Simpson, and C. E. Knittel were each fined $3 and costs for being drunk and incapable on Wednesday.

A case brought up by the C.P.R. police was dismissed by the magistrate. Charles Burgin was arrested by one of the special men on Wednesday night, brought before Mr. Kealy on a charge of sleeping in a box car.

CAME OUT IN THE LAUNDRY

WAGES AND WAGES AGAIN

Two interesting wage cases were heard before Mr. Kealy on Friday and Saturday last, both due in the first place to the lack of a business like agreement between employer and employed, and both in connection with the steam laundry.

The first was an action by C. H. White to recover wages alleged to be due him from Mr. Pruitt for two months running of the laundry. White claimed that he was engaged by Pruitt for the months of July and August at a salary of $125 a month. After White had stated his side of the case (a letter was produced showing that he was engaged by Pruitt, to work for a salary of $125 a month, and John Younger the porter at Beady's pool room and Mrs. White had given evidence the accused L. H. Pruitt was put on the stand. After a long and tedious examination evidence was elicited to the effect that witness hired White in May last, that after work for some time in the laundry the salary of $100 a month was arrived at as a starting figure for complainant. The latter had received that salary for his work in May and June. At the end of July the laundry was rented to White and Jordan, who ran the business as equal partners. They were to pay a rent of $125 a month for the use of the premises and machinery, etc., in connection with the business. The lessees were to pay the gas and water bill and other running expenses. White left his old accounts with them for collection and they agreed to look after these. Jordan seems to get hold of most of the money as it appears to witness, and each said the other was stealing. White's side of the case seems to be the fact, and as the two men could not get on, together, Jordan was at last got rid of. Previous to his quitting the business he had observed on a certain occasion while talking with wife mate, "White is a thief, I can prove it to you." When the books were referred Jordan could not prove anything. During the course of the dispute which arose witness struck Jordan a light blow. He did not recollect having a knife in his hand at any time while discussing business affairs, but if he had a pocket knife in his heart it was with no intention to use it, he would only be [illegible] with it.

The whole trouble which led to putting Jordan out of the business was that "Old Bob" Jordan couldn't work with Charles White and Charlie White couldn't work with Old Bob Jordan. Jordan had had some bills printed, without his partner's knowledge, in which the former was described as manager, and all accounts were stated to be "payable to the manager." After Jordan had been put out of the business it appeared from the evidence of witnesses that the said gentleman had been making hay for himself while the sun shone). White took over the entire business himself and was to pay $125 a month for rent. He owed witness $125 for August and half of a similar sum for his share of the July rent.

Jordan had also advertised in the Medicine Hat papers without his partner's knowledge.

A document signed by Jordan and White was produced in which it was stated that these men agreed in consideration for what they owed, to turn over all a counts to L. H. Pruitt.

Cross-examined by Mr. Mahaffy, witness admitted that White had turned over to him a number of accounts, whether these totalled $127 he could not say. He had collected $55 from the Royal hotel, and $12 in smaller accounts.

Mr. Kealy decided to send the case up to the district court judge.

The other case was a claim by Mrs. White for $50 alleged balance of wages due for her services in taking care of the rooms in the Pruitt Block. Mahaffy appeared for complainant C. White for accused.

On the stand Mrs. White said she had taken charge of the rooms since May 17. Pruitt had asked her to do this and also to collect the rent. He would pay her whatever she thought right. From that time allshe had received was $12 in cash. She had asked the previous week for the balance of her money, setting the salary at $15 a month. Defendant had refused to pay. Witness had turned over from time to time she supposed about $60 for rent.

C. H. White deposed that he had been present on one occasion when Pruitt agreed to pay his wife for the rooms and collecting rents from the regular lodgers and transients. The conversation took place on the 17th of May, when Mrs. White arrived in the city. Pruitt said he had been having a tough class of people about the place and everything was in bad shape. He wanted Mrs.White to look after things.

Witness corroborated his wife's statement that she had scrubbed the hall way and steps on an average of about once a week. He had seen her at the work.

L. H. Pruitt, placed on the stand swore that he had never engaged Mrs. White to do the work named. He had only offered her a commission on rooms rented by complainant. She had only turned into him $12.

She had never done any work about the place to his knowledge, except to clean about her own rooms, and once he had seen her sweeping down the stairs.

The court was adjourned till Saturday morning to enable the prosecution to obtain witnesses to corroborate the evidence of complainant and White as to the work she had performed while resident in the Pruitt block.

On Saturday morning a number of witnesses were called and gave evidence as to the duties performed by Mrs. White.

Mrs. L'Hommidieu deposed that she had seen complainant scrubbing the stairs in the Pruitt Block, and that complainant had also kept the rooms clean. "Mr. Pruitt asked her to do this in front of me." Witness was rooming in the block with her husband for three months. They paid one half of the rent, and were still owing $21. Mr. Pruitt had asked them to pay up or vacate the room.

Mr. White—"You're a little sore at him?"

Witness—"Not at all. The trouble is Mr. Pruitt insulted me three times."

A. J. Smith, driver for the laundry, said he had seen Mrs. White scrubbing the steps three or four times. He never saw Mrs. Pruitt do any work around the block. He had boarded with the Whites.

Henry L'Hommidieu had seen Mrs. White doing work around the premises, washing stairs, etc. Mr. Pruitt had told him if he did not pay for rent he would have to go.

W. Cato, Chas. Rodneizher and John Young were called for the accused. The two former deposed that they had rented a room togetherfrom Pruitt on Aug. 24. Mrs. White made up the bed only on the first day, since then all the work had beendone bythemselves. Pruitt had told them they would have to keep their own rooms tidy.

Mr. John Younger had lived in the Pruitt block since December 1907, to June of the present year. Mrs. White had never done any work for them. Witness had seen her scrub the hall on one or two occasions.

Mr. Kealy said he was confident that an agreement had been made between Pruitt and Mrs. White, that the latter would not do scrubbing just for the sake of the renting of the rooms.

An order was made for the payment of $30 and costs, the magistrate stating that he was sorry the amount could not be greater, but on a technicality he was unable to make an order for more than two months back.

Strike News

A couple of members of the strikers committee called on The Times on Friday and made the following statement:

Thirty-five men, were brought in by the C.P.R., under contract to go to Field on construction work. When they arrived at Medicine Hat they were told that their tickets would not carry them further. On learning that a strike was on here, they refused to go to work. Their baggage was shipped on to Field, where they supposed they were going to work on construction on the Kicking Horse Canyon. The railroad officials tried to induce the men to sleep and take supper at the shops. Some of them refused and, on Friday morning, interviewed the strikers as to the best way of getting out of town as they were determined not to work here.

Witness hired for the Kicking Horse they were promised $1.75 a day and board. When put off here they were informed that they would get $1.50 a day, and board themselves. Some of them went before Inspector Parker, who asked the Company to return them to their homes, or to take them to the place at which they contracted to work.

This is the way the company has recorded the number of men employed in the shops, by giving numbers who have not remained. This all tells against the strikers."

The Times was requested to print the above statement, and gives it in the men's own words.

On Saturday morning The Times interviewed Inspector Parker in regard to the matter. He stated that the strikers were misinformed in so far as they say that he gave any orders to the Company as to the employment of these laborers. The Inspector, on hearing the complaint of the laborers, that they were hired at $1.75 for construction work at Field, and that on arriving here they were ordered to work in the roundhouse at $1.50, went round to see the company's representative. He was informed that the 35 men had been left off here bymistake and were going out Friday evening on delayed No. 1 to Field.

On hearing the Company's statement, the men expressed themselves as satisfied. They would go on to Field.

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—Although no official statement can be obtained from the labor department as to whether or not negotiations are in progress for a speedy settlement of the C.P.R. machinists' strike, there is reason to believe that pourparlers are now being exchanged through the medium of the department of labor looking to the settlement of the strike. It is not improbable that the company will consent to take the strikers back to work this week in their old positions on the wage scale agreed upon by the majority report of the board of conciliation in Winnipeg, pending a further investigation by a second board to pass on the points now in dispute. However, no official action has yet been taken to this end.

Stealing a paper from a doorstep is looked upon as no light offense by Magistrate Jelfs, of Hamilton, who last week sentenced an employee of that city to a week in jail without the option of a fine.

POLITICS

Believing that in no other way can the cause of temperance receive the legislation it desires, a number of Temperance men gathered last night in Manitoba hall intent upon the formation of another political party in Canada.

The meeting was enthusiastic enough but in point of numbers could hardly be considered as successful. The ones who gathered expressed themselves as pleased with the start, however, and are looking forward to an increased attendance when the next meeting is called.

The general political situation was rehearsed but no definite measures were taken in connection with drawing up a platform or announcing any other policy than that the chief aim would be to prevent the importation manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in Canada.

It was decided to invite the members of all temperance societies in the city to the next general meeting and the officers of these will be notified of the time and place of the meeting.

It was stated last night that the men promoting the cause did not expect to have candidates in line for the coming Dominion campaign, but that they would be heard from four years later.

St. John, N.B., Aug. 31.—Dr. A. W. MacRae, barrister of this city, was tonight nominated by the Conservatives of St. John city and county to oppose Hon. Mr. Pugsley.

St. Stephen, N.B., Aug. 31.—W. F. Todd was nominated by the Liberals of Charlotte county tonight, to oppose G. W. Ganong, M.P.

Montreal, Sept. 1.—Laval county Liberals this afternoon nominated C. A. Wilson, barrister of this city for the Commons.

Owen Sound, Ont., Sept. 2.—W. F. Telford, M.P., for North Grey, announces his retirement.

Kenora, Ont., Sept. 3.—The Liberal convention met here tonight to nominate a candidate for the constituency of Rainy River, as Conmee, the present member was [illegible] chosen.

That Hon. Clifford Sifton will direct the Western end of the campaign for the Government at the Dominion elections, if not as a Minister of the Crown, at least, as master of ceremonies, is the latest assertion with regard to that gentleman. It has been stated that the ex-Minister of the Interior may be appointed a minister without portfolio, if is not taken into the inner circle. The reason assigned for Mr. Sifton's activity in politics, is not that he hopes for a permanent Cabinet position, but that he wishes to protect the interests of Mr. Burrows, the "brother-in-law," and the others interested in the famous timber deal scandals. The cry for restitution has taken a hold with the people of the West, who have listened with interest to the lectures of Mr. H. H. Ames, M.P., who has made a study of the subject.

Brandon, Sept. 3.—Hon. Clifford Sifton has stated definitely that he is willing to again accept the Liberal nomination for the Dominion constituency of Brandon.

The candidates so far nominated for the federal seats in Saskatchewan are:

Moose Jaw—W. E. Knowles, Liberal; Dr. Wheeler, Conservative.

Regina—W. M. Martin, Liberal; J. K. McInnis, Conservative.

Assiniboia—J. G. Turiff, Liberal; C. C. Smith, Conservative; R. L. Richardson, Independent.

Qu'Appelle—J. T. Brown, Liberal; R. S. Lake, Conservative.

Battleford—A. Champagne, Liberal; Dr. Morrison, Conservative.

Saskatoon—J. H. Dinnin, Conservative; W. F. Paynter, Comrades of Equity. No Liberal has as yet been nominated.

Mackenzie—Dr. E. L. Cash, Liberal; Buchanan, Independent. No Conservative named as yet.

In the remaining three constituencies of Humboldt, Saskatoon and Prince Albert no candidates have been nominated for either party.

The Conservatives have 17 candidates in the field so far in Quebec Province. These are in Argenteuil, Beauharnois, Brome, Charlevoix, Compton, Huntingdon, Jacques Cartier, Laval, Megantic, Missisquoi, St. Antoine and St. Lawrence division of Montreal, Pontiac, Richelieu, Sherbrooke and Stanstead.

PRESS ASSOCIATION TO MEET

This year the Alberta and South Eastern British Columbia Press Association will meet in Nelson on Sept. 24th and 25th. The delegates will be the guests of the Nelson Board of Trade during the Fruit Fair which is held in that city during those days.

Arrangements are being completed to take a trip to Vancouver and Victoria after the Convention.

YOU CAN'T KILL 'EM

Badly Smashed Up But Delightfully Drunk

The first sensational event to take place since the outbreak of the strike took place on Friday and was apparently, the result of a quarrel or of treachery amongst some of the strike breakers now at work in the roundhouse.

At about four o'clock on Friday afternoon Jas. Hurd, a C.P.R. employee, noticed a man on a flat car between the roundhouse and the flour mill lying on his back with a head-wound, from which the blood was flowing freely. The man was apparently dead. Another man was hustling away from the spot and making for the outskirts of the town.

Mr. Hurd rushed up to inform the police, and meeting Judge Mitchell, whose automobile was in the vicinity of the station, the judge took him in his car and drove down to the Mounted Police Barracks.

Inspector Parker and Constable Meyrick and Capstick immediately left the Barracks in pursuit. The inspector at the outset visited the injured man; at first he thought him dead but the man's pulse was found to be beating faintly. Dr. Smyth had been at the scene meanwhile and ordered the ambulance.

The fugutive was caught near the Indian camp. He denied having any knowledge of the cause of the affair and said he was one of a gang of harvesters. Later he admitted that he was unconnected with the harvesters, and had just drifted into the city. He acknowledged that he had stolen rides on C.P.R. cars. Hisname was Wm. McEwen.

When the injured man, who was a boiler-maker of the name of Geo. Williams, recovered consciousness, he was too dazed and too drunk to give a rational account of what had transpired. All he knew about it was that a "short stout fellow had hit him on the head with a piece of iron," causing the wide gash behind his right ear. He thought it was a piece of iron pipe. His watch was gone, but whether he had any cash or not he couldn't say, as he was too drunk at the time the assault took place to remember these minor details. As the man McEwen did not answer the description given, and as Williams said he was not the man, the prisoner will not be charged with the assault. McEwen was brought up before Mr. Kealy on Saturday and sentenced to one month in jail for vagrancy.

Williams, who was thought to be very seriously wounded, recovered consciousness in a short time after being taken into the hospital, and three hours later walked out and returned to his boarding car. Where the Inspector had to hunt him up later in the evening. He was found in the car in his normal state—not quite blind to the world and able to answer questions in a connised way.

That a serious fight took place in one of the C.P.R. boarding cars on Friday is a matter of common rumor, but exactly what the nature of it was, is not known. It is said that the trouble began in a complaint about the food. The Chinese cooks, one white man and a couple of blacks are said to have taken part in the little scrap which arose out of the dispute. Whether this had any connection with the wounding of the drunken man found in the afternoon is not known.

LOST HIS MONEY

The Benefactor Act No Go

A. J. Brower, the city bottle and scrap metal man, was robbed of $40. on Friday night. Louis Boyer called on him at 9.30 on Friday night, said that he was tired and asked for a night's lodging. Brower allowed him to share his shack, and went to sleep trusting to the honesty of the half breed. This faith was rudely shattered on his awakening in the morning. Boyer had been up before him and taken his departure. A bag in which Brower kept his money had been gone through. The bag was lying losely on the floor. Brower's attention was first attracted by a silver dollar and a pocket book which he noticed on the mouth of the bag. It was evident that Boyer had made a hurried departure, since he had not found time to load himself with all the old man's money.

Brower complained to Inspector Parker and a warrant was issued for the alleged thief's arrest.

Boyer has not yet been captured as the paper goes to press.

Fake Advertising

We sometimes read advertisements in newspapers that at the very outset brand themselves as fakes, and in no instance is this more prevalent than among the ready-to-wear clothing advertisers. Imagine an advertisement stating that the average merchant tailor does not know how to turn a coat sleeve or to turn out a good fitting suit, when the person with average intelligence knows how all ready-made suits are produced—that it is the cheapest kind of labor that is employed in their manufacture, and that the average ready-made suit will hold its shape about while you are carrying it home. These are some of the reasons why merchant tailored suits are coming more and more into demand every day, and why the ready-made handler has to resort to fake advertising in a vain attempt to stem the tide.

☞ We make clothes that fit, and if they don't you don't have to take them.

ATHLETICS

Calgary Y.M.C.A. and Moose Jaw are organizing rugby football teams.

Longboat has had so many ups and downs that the public is losing much interest in his half-hearted efforts to retain the lead. A couple of weeks ago Sellens, a clubmate beat him at the Toronto Police games and everybody started to bid goodbye to the Indian as a record-breaker. He got mad and for three days took care of himself with the result that he beat Sellen quite handily at Hamilton. Sellen was bound to recover his laurels so both runners competed at Halifax. Longboat had kept in fair shape and Sellen was half a lap behind at the finish.

There is not much doubt that Longboat can walk over the best of them if he only had the brains of a rooster. But an Indian with nothing to do is as likely to keep in shape as he is to refuse whiskey.

At Halifax Kerr was beaten by Schaefer in the 100 yards Canadian championship. However Schaefer got away five feet before the pistol and beat Kerr by only a few inches. It is serious for Kerr as he loses the championship thereby. The referee said he could not order the race run over again as the pistol had been fired.

For the great Futurity race in New York only 12,000 were present. As a rule 40,000 or 50,000 attend.

Montreal, Sept. 1.—Ten French-Canadian athletes left the city this evening for Rome, where they will represent the Societe Nationale Gymnastique at the international games to be conducted in the vatican gardens before Pope Pius X.

The athletes were tendered a civic reception by Mayor Payette this afternoon and left on the light train for Boston, where they will sail for Naples and thence to Rome.

The federal government at the last session voted $300 towards the expenses of sending them to the vatican on their athletic pilgrimage.

All are French-Canadians except one, an Irish-Canadian, P. O'Grady, of St. Annes.

Burns had a cinch last Wednesday, he put Lang, of Australia, out in the sixth round.

The proposed baseball tournament has fallen through. Several of the teams invited wrote that they could not come as their local seasons had ended and it was impossible to keep the players together. None have promised to come so the tourney is off for this year.

The Brewery Cup in Calgary is said to be for the championship of Alberta in baseball. It is unfortunate our C.P.R. team couldn't show them how to play.

BLUISH GREY ARE MARKSMAN'S EYES.

Just what color is most prevalent among the noted shots of this country—the country that has produced more celebrated experts than any other nation in the world?

If we are to size up conditions from the men who are now appearing successfully at the traps, we find that one incidental bit of history is corroborated—for all old stories tell of the "cold, grey-blue eye," of the experienced marksmen.

Writers of the west have often drawn comparisons about the type of eye most fitted to deliver the goods either with revolver, derringer, rifle or shot-gun. And that peculiar color, so often called similar to the appearance of a "new bowie knife" is generally believed to have had the quickest sense behind it, ready to deliver the bullet in crucial times as deftly as human brain and nerve could work in unison.

If we were to go down the list of frontier heroes, to include the noted revolver shots, to take up the celebrated marksmen and to wind up with those whose history as experts has been made chiefly by practice at the target traps, we will find that this color scheme still holds good to a great extent. Exceptions there are to prove the rule, of course. This condition exists everywhere. But the predominating shade of eye is usually akin to that immortalized by the old writer.

For instance, Fred Gilbert, Lee Barkley, J. H. Cumming and Fred Stone all have the light bluish gray we read about. Captain Adiran C. Anson, once a noted trap shot, has the same hue of eye. Col. Cody, better known as "Buffalo Bill," was one of a large generation of noted scouts who had eyes of the recognized color. Crosby has eyes of different hue, but their predominating shade still remains as grey.

There are plenty of experts with eyes of dark blue, of course. For instance, Joe Bacto, Lem Willard, Tom Marshal of Keithsburg, George Roll and J. Graham have dark optics. But the majority of those who shoot regularly at the traps and who hold the lead in shooting events throughout the country seem to live up in general color of their orbs to the old traditions of the "cold, grey eye."

It is believed that if the average run of marksmen who have appeared at the various trap shooting plants throughout the country were to be lined up, it would be found that the majority would incline to the "historic" variety of eye.

NOTICE.

Odd Numbered Sections.

As already publicly announced, odd numbered sections remaining vacant and undisposed of will become available for homestead entry on the coming into force of the Dominion Lands Act on the 1st September next.

As the records of only the even numbered sections have hitherto been kept in the books of the various land agencies in the western provinces, and the time having been very limited since the passing of the Act within which to transfer the records of all odd numbered sections from the head office at Ottawa to the local offices, it is possible that the transfer of records in some cases may not have been absolutely completed by the 1st September. In any case where the record of any quarter section has not been transferred, application will be accepted but will have to be forwarded to head office to be dealt with.

As it has been found impossible as yet to furnish sub-agencies with copies of the records of odd numbered sections, and in view of the large probable demand for entries, all applicants for entry upon odd numbered sections are strongly advised to make their applications in person at the office of the Dominion Lands Agent and not through a Sub Land Agent. Applications for even numbered sections may be dealt with through the Sub Land Agent as before if desired.

The Hound of the Baskervilles

Another Adventure of Sherlock Holmes.

III.

We stood with bitter hearts over either side of the mangled body, overwhelmed by this sudden and irrevocable disaster which had brought all our long and weary labors to so piteous an end. Then, as the moon rose, we climbed to the top of the rocks over which our poor friend had fallen, and from the summit we gazed out over the shadowy moor, half silver and half gloom. Far away, miles off, in the direction of Grimpen, a single steady yellow light was shining. It could only come from the lonely abode of the Stapletons. With a bitter curse I shook my fist at it as I gazed.

"Why should we not seize him at once?"

"Our case is not complete. The fellow is wary and cunning to the last degree. It is not what we know, but what we can prove. If we make one false move the villain may escape us yet."

"What can we do?"

"There will be plenty for us to do to-morrow. To-night we can only perform the last offices to our poor friend."

Together we made our way down the precipitous slope and approached the body, black and clear against the silvered stones. The agony of those contorted limbs struck me with a spasm of pain and blurred my eyes with tears.

"We must send for help, Holmes! We cannot carry him all the way to the Hall. Good heavens, are you mad?"

He had uttered a cry and bent over the body. Now he was dancing and laughing and wringing my hand. Could this be my stern, self-contained friend? These were hidden fires, indeed!

"A beard! A beard! The man has a beard!"

"A beard?"

"It is not the baronet—it is—why, it is my neighbor, the convict!"

With feverish haste we had turned the body over, and that dripping beard was pointing up to the cold, clear moon. There could be no doubt about the beetling forehead, the sunken animal eyes. It was, indeed, the same face which had glared upon me in the light of the candle from over the rock—the face of Selden, the criminal.

Then in an instant it was all clear to me. I remembered how the baronet had told me that he had handed his old wardrobe to Barrymore. Barrymore had passed it on in order to help Selden in his escape. Boots, shirt, cap—it was all Sir Henry's. The tragedy was still black enough, but this man had at least deserved death by the laws of his country. I told Holmes how the matter stood, my heart bubbling over with thankfulness and joy.

"Then the clothes have been the poor devil's death," said he. "It is clear enough that the hound has been laid on from some article of Sir Henry's—the boot which was abstracted in the hotel, in all probability—and so ran this man down. There is one very singular thing, however: How came Selden, in the darkness, to know that the hound was on his trail?"

"He heard him."

"To hear a hound upon the moor would not work a hard man like this convict into such a paroxysm of terror that he would risk recapture by screaming wildly for help. By his cries he must have run a long way after he knew the animal was on his track. How did he know?"

"A greater mystery to me is why this hound, presuming that all our conjectures are correct——"

"I presume nothing."

"Well, then, why this hound should be loose to-night. I suppose that it does not always run loose upon the moor. Stapleton would not let it go unless he had reason to think that Sir Henry would be there."

"My difficulty is the more formidable of the two, for I think that we shall very shortly get an explanation of yours, while mine may remain for ever a mystery. The question now is, what shall we do with this poor wretch's body? We cannot leave it here to the foxes and the ravens."

"I suggest that we put it in one of the huts until we can communicate with the police."

"Exactly. I have no doubt that you and I could carry it so far. Hallo, Watson, what's this? It's the man himself, by all that wonderful and audacious! Not a word to show your suspicions—not a word, or my plans crumble to the ground."

A figure was approaching us over the moor, and I saw the dull red glow of a cigar. The moon shone upon him, and I could distinguish the dapper shape and jaunty walk of the naturalist. He stopped when he saw us, and then came on again.

"Why, Dr. Watson, that's not you, is it? You are the last man that I should have expected to see out on the moor at this time of night. But, dear me, what's this? Somebody hurt? Not—don't tell me that it is our friend Sir Henry!" He hurried past me and stooped over the dead man. I heard a sharp intake of his breath and the cigar fell from his fingers.

"Who—who's this?" he stammered.

"It is Selden, the man who escaped from Princetown."

Stapleton turned a ghastly face upon us, but by a supreme effort he had overcome his amazement and his disappointment. He looked sharply from Holmes to me.

"Dear me! What a very shocking affair! How did he die?"

"He appears to have broken his neck by falling over these rocks. My friend and I were strolling on the moor when we heard a cry."

"I heard a cry also. That was what brought me out. I was uneasy about Sir Henry."

"Why about Sir Henry in particular?" I could not help asking.

"Because I had suggested that he should come over. When he did not come I was surprised, and I naturally became alarmed for his safety when I heard cries upon the moor. By the way"—his eyes darted from my face to Holmes's—"did you hear anything else besides a cry?"

"No," said Holmes; "did you?"

"No."

"Oh, you know the stories that the peasants tell about a phantom hound, and so on. It is said to be heard at night upon the moor. I was wondering if there were any evidence of such a sound to-night."

"We heard nothing of the kind," said I.

"And what is your theory of this poor fellow's death?"

"I have no doubt that anxiety and exposure have driven him off his head. He rushed about the moor in a crazy state and eventually fallen over here and broken his neck."

"That seems the most reasonable theory," said Stapleton, and he gave a sigh which I took to indicate his relief. "What do you think about it, Mr. Sherlock Holmes?"

My friend bowed his compliments.

"You are quick at identification," said he.

"We have been expecting you in these parts since Dr. Watson came down. You are in time to see a tragedy."

"Yes, indeed. I have no doubt that my friend's explanation will cover the facts. I will take an unpleasant remembrance back to London with me to-morrow."

"Oh, you return to-morrow?"

"That is my intention."

"I hope your visit has cast some light upon those occurrences which have puzzled us?"

Holmes shrugged his shoulders.

"One cannot always have the success for which one hopes. An investigator needs facts, and not legends or rumors. It has not been a satisfactory case."

My friend spoke in his frankest and most unconcerned manner. Stapleton still looked hard at him. Then he turned to me.

"I would suggest carrying this poor fellow to my house, but it would give my sister such a fright that I do not feel justified in doing it. I think that if we put something over his face he will be safe until morning."

And so it was arranged. Resisting Stapleton's offer of hospitality, Holmes and I set off to Baskerville Hall, leaving the naturalist to return alone. Looking back we saw the figure moving slowly away over the broad moor, and behind him that one black smudge on the silvered slope which showed where the man was lying who had come so horribly to his end.

CHAPTER XIII.

"We're at close grips at last," said Holmes, as we walked together across the moor. "What a nerve the fellow has! How he pulled himself together in the face of what must have been a paralyzing shock when he found that the wrong man had fallen a victim to his plot. I told you in London, Watson, and I tell you now again, that we have never had a foeman more worthy of our steel."

"I am sorry that he has seen you."

"And so was I at first. But there was no getting out of it."

"What effect do you think it will have upon his plans, now that he knows you are here?"

"It may cause him to be more cautious, or it may drive him to desperate measures at once. Like most clever criminals, he may be too confident in his own cleverness and imagine that he has completely deceived us."

"Why should we not arrest him at once?"

"My dear Watson, you were born to be a man of action. Your instinct is always to do something energetic. But supposing, for argument's sake, that we had him arrested to-night, what on earth the better off should we be for that? We could prove nothing against him. There's the devilish cunning of it! If he were acting through a human agent we could get some evidence, but if we were to drag this great dog to the light of day it would not help us in putting a rope round the neck of its master."

"Surely we have a case."

"Not a shadow of one—only surmise and conjecture. We should be laughed out of court if we came with such a story and such evidence."

"There is Sir Charles's death."

"Found dead without a mark upon him. You and I know that he died of sheer fright, and we know also what frightened him; but how are we to get twelve stolid jurymen to know it? What signs are there of a hound? Where are the marks of its fangs? Of course, we know that a hound does not bite a dead body and that Sir Charles was dead before ever the brute overtook him. But we have to prove all this, and we are not in a position to do it."

"Well, then, to-night?"

"We are not much better off to-night. Again, there was no direct connection between the hound and the man's death. We never saw the hound. We heard it; but we could not prove that it was running upon this man's trail. There is a complete absence of motive. No, my dear fellow; we must reconcile ourselves to the fact that we have no case at present, and that it is worth our while to run any risk in order to establish one."

"And how do you propose to do so?"

"I have great hopes of what Mrs. Laura Lyons may do for us when the position of affairs is made clear to her. And I have my own plan as well. Sufficient for to-morrow is the evil thereof; but I hope before the day is past to have the upper hand at last."

I could draw nothing further from him, and he walked, lost in thought, as far as the Baskerville gates.

"Are you coming up?"

"Yes; I see no reason for further concealment. But one last word, Watson. Say nothing of the hound to Sir Henry. Let him think that Selden's death was as Stapleton would have us believe. He will have a better nerve for the ordeal which he will have to undergo to-morrow, when he is engaged, if I remember your report aright, to dine with these people."

"And so am I."

"Then you must excuse yourself and he must go alone. That will be easily arranged. And now, if we are too late for dinner, I think that we are both ready for our suppers."

Sir Henry was more pleased than surprised to see Sherlock Holmes, for he had for some days been expecting that recent events would bring him down from London. He did raise his eyebrows, however, when he found that my friend had neither any luggage nor any explanations for its absence. Between us we soon supplied his wants, and then over a belated supper we explained to the baronet as much of our experience as it seemed desirable that he should know. But first I had the unpleasant duty of breaking the news to Barrymore and his wife. To him it may have been an unmitigated relief, but she wept bitterly in her apron. To all the world he was the man of violence, half animal and half demon; but to her he always remained the little wilful boy of her own girlhood, the child who had clung to her hand. Evil indeed is the man who has not one woman to mourn him.

"I've been moping in the house all day since Watson went off in the morning," said the baronet. "I guess I should have some credit, for I have kept my promise. If I hadn't sworn not to go about alone I might have had a more lively evening, for I had a message from Stapleton asking me over there."

"I have no doubt that you would have had a more lively evening," said Holmes, drily. "By the way, I don't suppose you appreciate that we have been mourning over you as having broken your neck?"

Sir Henry opened his eyes. "How was that?"

"This poor wretch was dressed in your clothes. I fear your servant who gave them to him may get into trouble with the police."

"That is unlikely. There was no mark on any of them, as far as I know."

"That's lucky for him—in fact, it's lucky for all of you, since you are all on the wrong side of the law in this matter. I am not sure that as a consulting detective my first duty is not to arrest the whole household."

He stood upon a chair and curved his right arm over the broad hat

Watson's reports are most incriminating documents."

"But how about the case?" asked the baronet. "Have you made anything out of the tangle? I don't know that Watson and I are much the wiser since we came down."

"I think that I shall be in a position to make the situation rather more clear to you before long. It has been an exceedingly difficult and most complicated business. There are several points upon which we still want light—but it is coming all the same."

"We've had one experience, as Watson has no doubt told you. We heard the hound on the moor, so I can swear that it is not all empty superstition. I had something to do with dogs when I was out West, and I know one when I hear one. If you can muzzle that one and put him on a chain I'll be ready to swear you are the greatest detective of all time."

"I think I will muzzle him and chain him all right if you will give me your help."

"Whatever you tell me to do I will do."

"Very good; and I will ask you also to do it blindly, without always asking the reason."

"Just as you like."

"If you will do this I think the chances are that our little problem will soon be solved. I have no doubt——"

He stopped suddenly and stared fixedly up over my head into the air. The lamp beat upon his face, and so intent was it and so still that it might have been that of a clear-cut classical statue, a personification of alertness and expectation.

"What is it?" we both cried.

I could see as he looked down that he was repressing some internal emotion. His features were still composed, but his eyes shone with amused exultation.

"Excuse the admiration of a connoisseur," said he, as he waved his hand towards the line of portraits which covered the opposite wall. "Watson won't allow that I know anything of art, but that is mere jealousy, because our views upon the subject differ. Now, these are a really very fine series of portraits."

"Well, I'm glad to hear you say so," said Sir Henry, glancing with some surprise at my friend. "I don't pretend to know much about these things, and I'd be a better judge of a horse [illegible] didn't know that you found time for such things."

"I know what is good when I see it, and I see it now. That's a Kneller, I'll swear, that lady in the blue silk over yonder, and the stout gentleman with the wig ought to be a Reynolds. They are all family portraits, I presume?"

"Every one."

"Do you know the names?"

"Barrymore has been coaching me in them, and I think I can say my lessons fairly well."

"Who is the gentleman with the telescope?"

"That is Rear-Admiral Baskerville, who served under Rodney in the West Indies. The man with the blue coat and the roll of paper is Sir William Baskerville, who was Chairman of Committees of the House of Commons under Pitt."

"And this Cavalier opposite to me—the one with the black velvet and the lace?"

"Ah, you have a right to know about him. That is the cause of all the mischief, the wicked Hugo, who started the Hound of the Baskervilles. We're not likely to forget him."

I gazed with interest and some surprise upon the portrait.

"Dear me!" said Holmes, "he seems a quiet, meek-mannered man enough, but I daresay that there was a lurking devil in his eyes. I had pictured him as a more robust and rumianly person."

"There's no doubt about the authenticity, for the name and the date, 1647, are on the back of the canvas."

Holmes said little more, but the picture of the old roysterer seemed to have a fascination for him, and his eyes were continually fixed upon it during supper. It was not until later, when Sir Henry had gone to his room, that I was able to follow the trend of his thoughts. He led me back into the banqueting-hall, his bedroom candle in his hand, and he held it up against the time-stained portrait on the wall.

"Do you see anything there?"

I looked at the broad plumed hat, the curling love-locks, the white lace collar, and the straight, severe face which was framed between them. It was not a brutal countenance, but it was prim, hard, and stern, with a firm-set, thin-lipped mouth, and a coldly intolerant eye.

"Is it like anyone you know?"

"There is something of Sir Henry about the jaw."

"Just a suggestion, perhaps. But wait an instant!" He stood upon a chair, and holding up the light in his left hand he curved his right arm over the broad hat and round the long ringlets.

"Good heavens!" I cried, in amazement.

The face of Stapleton had sprung out of the canvas.

"Ha, you see it now. My eyes have been trained to examine faces and not their trimmings. It is the first quality of a criminal investigator that he should see through a disguise."

"But this is marvellous. It might be his portrait."

"Yes; it is an interesting instance of a throwback, which appears to be both physical and spiritual. A study of family portraits is enough to convert a man to the doctrine of reincarnation. The fellow is a Baskerville—that is evident."

"With designs upon the succession."

"Exactly. This chance of the picture has supplied us with one of our most obvious missing links. We have him, Watson, we have him, and I dare swear that before to-morrow night he will be fluttering in our net as helpless as one of his own butterflies. A pin, a cork, and a card, and we add him to the Baker Street collection!" He burst into one of his rare fits of laughter as he turned away from the picture. I have not heard him laugh often, and it has always boded ill to somebody.

I was up betimes in the morning, but Holmes was afoot earlier still, for I saw him as I dressed coming up the drive.

"Yes, we should have a full day to-day," he remarked, and he rubbed his hands with the joy of action. "The nets are all in place, and the drag is about to begin. We'll know before the day is out whether we have caught our big, lean-jawed pike, or whether he has got through the meshes."

"Have you been on the moor already?"

"I have sent a report from Grimpen to Princetown as to the death of Selden. I think I can promise that none of you will be troubled in the matter. And I have also communicated with my faithful Cartwright, who would certainly have pined away at the door of my hut, as a dog does at his master's grave, if I had not set his mind at rest about my safety."

"What is the next move?"

"To see Sir Henry. Ah, here he is!"

"Good morning, Holmes," said the baronet. "You look like a general who is planning a battle with his chief of the staff."

"That is the exact situation. Watson was asking for orders."

"And so do I."

"Very good. You are engaged, as I understand, to dine with our friends the Stapletons to-night."

"I hope that you will come also. They are very hospitable people, and I am sure that they would be very glad to see you."

"I fear that Watson and I must go to London."

"To London?"

"Yes, I think that we should be more useful there at the present juncture."

The baronet's face perceptibly lengthened.

"I hoped that you were going to see me through this business. The Hall and the moor are not very pleasant places when one is alone."

"My dear fellow, you must trust me implicitly and do exactly what I tell you. You can tell your friends that we should have been happy to have come with you, but that urgent business required us to be in town. We hope very soon to return to Devonshire. Will you remember to give them that message?"

"If you insist upon it."

"There is no alternative, I assure you."

I saw by the baronet's clouded brow that he was deeply hurt by what he regarded as our desertion.

"When do you desire to go?" he asked, coldly.

"Immediately after breakfast. We will drive in to Coombe Tracey, but Watson will leave his things as a pledge that he will come back to you. Watson, you will send a note to Stapleton to tell him that you regret that you cannot come."

For Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Stomach Cramps, Colic, Summer Complaint, Cholera Morbus, Cholera Infantum, and all Looseness of the Bowels There is no Medicine Like

It has been a household remedy for 63 years. You can always rely on it in time of need to do just what we claim for it. Do not allow an unprincipaled druggist to palm off a cheap substitute on you.

The genuine "Dr. Fowler's" is manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE ONLY CURE FOR DIARRHŒA.

Mrs. Robt. Rahm, Burketon, Ont., writes:— "I have used Dr. Fowler's Ext. of Wild Strawberry for diarrhœa, and I think there is not a better remedy to be found, as I have a large family and all subject to it. I would not be without it in the house as it is a quick cure, and 'the only thing' that will cure them."

"STOP MY PAPER!"

(Paw Paw True Northerner.)

Some people, as soon as they observe anything in the columns of the paper that does not exactly meet their approval, immediately proceed to ruin the publisher by sending the above quoted message "Ston my paper." It is said that once upon a time Horace Greeley met an irate subscriber on the street, who said to him, "I have stopped the Tribune Mr. Greely. Oh! I mean," said the man, "I have stopped my subscription to the Tribune, ordered it discontinued." Well, my friend," replied Mr. Greely. "My advice is that you go home and stick your finger in a bucket of water and when you withdraw it, just look for the hole."

Preacher's Opinions

Rev. P. K. McRae, Forks Baddeck, C. B.: "I always count it a pleasure to recommend the Dr. Slocum Remedies to my parishioners. I believe there is nothing better for throat and lung troubles or weakness or run-down system. For speaker's sore threat I have found Psychine very beneficial."

Rev. W. H. Stevens, Paisley, Ont.: "Psychine seemed just the stimulant my system needed. I shall add my testimony as to its efficacy at every opportunity."

Rev. R. M. Browne, Amherst Head, N.S., "I have often recommended Psychine since taking it myself, for it is a cure for the troubles you specify."

Rev. Chas. Stirling, Bath, N.B.: "I have used Psychine in my family; the results were marvelous. I have visited people who state that they never used its equal, I strongly recommend it.

Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, Markdale, Ont.: "I have taken two bottles of Psychine and am pleased to say that I am greatly improved in health. I was troubled with my throat, but now I find it about restored to its normal condition. I find my work very much less taxing. I believe Psychine is all claimed for it."

These are earnest preachers of the gospel of Psychine. They know whereof they speak. Psychine cures all throat, lung and stomach troubles. It is a great voice strengthener, acting directly on the vocal, respiratory and digestive organs, thus specially adapted to public speakers. At all druggists, 50c and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. The Plain Vernacular

Have you ever noticed some little store that for years has remained the same old "76?"

The proprietor having gone into a trance at the same time he went into business and has sweetly dreamed on, obvious to the fact that the possibilities he is missing would sink a ship.

Sure you have. So have we. Then we have seen some fellow open up a little two by four outfit, and begin to toot his bazoo and before three or four years would roll around he would own the entire block.

You have seen the same thing. If you are in business take heed from the busy bee and get busy yourself. DON'T ADVERTISE A LITTLE, ADVERTISE A LOT. Whoever heard of a man giving away libraries that never ran over an inch ad. in a penny weekly? People take you by the value you set on yourself. Then again don't be a cheap skate when you put out advertising matter. A man's business receives a bad impression by bum literature—poorly written and badly printed—just as the ragged red nose of the hobo would impress you that he was not a man you would want to hook up with. It is true that the clothes do not always make the man, but they invariably make an impression if they are good ones off the latest fashion plate.

So with advertising. If you can't see the point get out of business for it is sure to lag unless you advertise Of course, we don't know it all, but we know what we are talking about when it simmers down to advertising. If you don't give it to us that's alright, but advertise. If you don't like our way of doing things try our other home paper, but ADVERTISE.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Last Tuesday was Alberta's third birthday. For a three-year-old the Province is a lusty youngster. There has been no wearing, no teething difficulties, no croup, cholera, or convulsions. Nothing has transpired to interfere with the amazing growth that has fallen to it. Alberta was born with all the marks and possessions of mature age and her maturity will ever be in evidence.

Alberta's Government has worked thus far with an eye to the advancement of the Province. The work of the Provincial Government is a pleasant relief from the corruption that has crept into the Dominion House. Alberta, Liberal and Conservative, has a right to acknowledge the honesty that has thus far characterized the general conduct of the Government.

The thousands of harvesters who came to the West this year unfortunately congregated in a number of centres until many of them could secure no work. The idea of most of the harvesters seems to be not only to demand all the money they can squeeze out of the Western farmer, but to get just as long a ride on the railway as they can. Thus hundreds of them gathered at Regina, the last station on the regular ticket.

They had come to have a good time more than anything and when work was not throwing itself in their way at Regina, they set up an awful howl. Everybody in the West was to blame. The West owed them a living and a pleasant holiday and when Westerners demanded the same energy in the new arrivls as they themselves had to show to succeed, scores of lazy "harvesters" lounged around the parks and demanded free lunches and transportation back to the East.

As the demands were so unreasonable the C.P.R. and Regina and Moose Jaw did not bother to reason; they gave them food and transportation. The C.P.R. offered them work on the railway at $1.75 per day, but these "harvesters" saw a chance to pull more for nothing and refused. Then the C.P.R. took a lot back and gave hundreds of them work east of Winnipeg, taking them there and feeding them on the way free of charge.

Now, just because the West didn't meet them with a brass band, provide a continuous banquet and open its parlors, these "harvesters" will go back east and hand out a lot of that knocking about the West that so many of the Eastern papers are always hungry for.

The National Associations of Editors which visited the city last week was made up of a fine lot of men—most of them really anxious to learn, and willing to acknowledge that they had been misinformed about the Canadian West. But there remained a few hard-headed newspaper men whose disgust at losing so many good citizens would not allow them to see anything desirable in the country that was robbing them.

We soon found it was useless to argue with them. One of them talked about seeing frost that morning on the bushes as he came along on the train. Of course it was a waste of time to draw his attention to a generally known scientific fact that frost has not a habit of showing itself with the thermometer above 50 degrees. Had he seen a gopher one couldn't convince him it was safe to go on the prairie alone.

It is possible that the water commissioners at last see some of the serious results of the water supply they were responsible for during the past summer. It is terrible that the city must now suffer for their incompetence. Should their own families be in the position of other families in the city now, they would have pity shown them in spite of it all. You who are now suffering—what do you think now of the men who claimed it was nobody's fault? Should fatalities ensue—then is the time to get out with the horsewhip or worse. Until then, they may be left to their conscience.

We do not need to be more specific.

Some one has started the rumor that the latest move is to have Clifford Sifton run in Calgary. If the Hon. Clif. wants to know what a really hard fall feels like he had better try a round with McCarthy.

The great rush for the pre-emption privileges proves that the people who know the country best are anxious to get as much of it as the law will allow.

(Wetaskiwin Times.) Don't ask the editor to write up or rebuke every evil in the town or community but when convinced that such things need attention, write an article for publication and sign your name to it. The man who is too big a coward to thus express an opinion is the man who stands on the street corner and talks about the cowardice of the editors.

It is a pretty hard fight to get any support for the Government in the Ross rifle contract. The objection that the rifle is no good is the hardest one to handle. Lately a well known shot was doing bigthings at Bisley with the Ross rifle and the London papers gave it every praise. This was what the Canadian Liberal papers wanted, and they took advantage of the opportunity to "rub it in."

But alas! It now transpires that the Ross rifle that made itself famous was a special make of "match rifle" with longer barrel, longersight and better mechanism, made solely with a view to placing it in the hands of paid experts to demonstrate what an excellent rifle the "Ross" is.

At any rate the Ross rifle puff has no influence in this district where local riflemen have tried it. At the matches in Calgary recently, where marksmen were gathered from all over the province and where the make of rifle didn't matter as long as the score was right, every man who started with a Ross discarded it before the end of the matches. There was not an exception.

When it is considered that 51,000 of this style of rifle has been bought and paid for out of our pockets by the Dominion Government—and paid for, in many cases long before the rifle was delivered—it is little wonder that the Government finds it necessary to bolster up its case with special rifles in the hands of experts.

Here is a partial record only of the men employed by the Liberal party to carry the elections. Three in Montreal have been in the penitentiary. Four in London are awaiting sentence. Two—one from Hastings and another from Frontenac—are fugitives from justice. Two statesmen are disqualified, and two from Nova Scotia have held their seats only through the process of appealing to higher courts.

And then most of the representatives of our country abroad—such as Preston and Jackson—have been convicted of close connection with bribery and corruption.

The Liberal papers have rather changed their tones since Ames has given his address through the West. At first they ridiculed it. It was not going to be taken seriously—oh no! 'Twas only fit for ridicule. It was a peep-show, a circus, a clown act, etc. etc., with all the circus parlance at their disposal.

But now it's different.

Most of them have spent wakeful nights trying to discount the effect of the speech. Not one of them has a word to say on the sinister look of the tenders thrown on the screen. They daren't fool with what every one saw with their own eyes. So they settle down to say nasty things about Ames. Everything is mentioned but the fact that no sensible man would deny the corruption in the land deals.

One of the Liberal papers thinks out a point that looks good, then all the other papers publish it until every point that might appear to lessen Ames' effect appears in every Liberal paper throughout the West. Rather stirred them up apparently! And they can't sit still under it.

One of these papers that can't sit still is the so-called independent paper The Edmonton News, the editor of which is honest but unfortunately has had the misfortune of an early Liberal training. However the weakness of its arguments against Ames must be evident to itself. A cursory glance at the long defence of the Government is sufficient to show this. The stand of an independent paper in defending a corruption it does not deny the existence of, is surprising.

For the benefit of those who were not at the Ames' meeting The Times may discuss the Edmonton News arguments next week. Those who were at the meeting don't need it.

The strongest and most serious indictment of its kind that the Liberal party has sustained has just come. The Vancouver World which has been the great British Columbia Kiberal paper has openly broken away from the party. Last Wednesday this important Western paper came out with an editorial announcing its separation from The Liberal party, and gives as its reason the servitude expected of it, and the graft in the party.

When, under the same management a paper breaks away from the party it has always supported, the graft must be utterly unbearable. The honesty of The World will place it high in the estimation of the people.

More papers will find it necessary to do this in order to retain the respect of the people.

(Calgary Herald)

The Herald is not a Liberal Independent, nor yet a Conservative Independent. It is just an independent newspaper holding no brief for any party but holding views of its own; and one of those views is that the best interests of Canada would be served by a change of government at the next Dominion elect ons.

THEY HAVEN'T GAS

St. John, Newfoundland, Sept 1.—The electric power at Petty Harbor is at present out of working order owing to continued drought. It is quite possible electric power will not be in working order for a month, although a few days of continuous rain would probably put an end to the trouble.

The streets are almost in darkness the local street car service tied up and most of the big industries closed down.

C. P. R. NEW STOCK.

New York, Sept. 1.—The most interesting announcement made in Wall Street today was one to the effect that the Canadian Pacific Railway would issue $50,000,000 new stock. The feeling is general here that the Canadian issue will be disposed of much more readily than the best bonds of the American roads.

The Canadian Pacific situation is becoming more interesting and a careful study of the Dominion map in connection with the big stock issues leads to the belief that news of tremendous importance to New York City and the farmers of the far northwest will soon become known. Canada has taken control of the grain carrying trade away from the United States for good and all, as this stock issue will shortly prove. Retribution is about to overtake the managers of American roads who have capitalized their graft and issued bonds to pay dividends on it.

MILBURN'S

LAXA-LIVER PILLS

Many people make a mistake in thinking that the only office of a pill is to move the bowels, but a properly prepared pill should act beneficially upon the liver and the entire glandular and secretory system.

This is just what Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills do, and by their specific alterative action cure Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Flatulency, Heartburn, Headache, Dyspepsia, Water Brash, Catarrh of the Stomach, Coated Tongue, Foul Breath, and all diseases arising from impurities clogging the system.

They are small and easy to take, and do not gripe, weaken or sicken. They may be used as a mild laxative or a strong purgative according to the dose.

You May Choose for Yourself

But we go to much trouble to make your choosing easier

We think we have the same ideas on GROCERIES as you have and we put our ideas into practice. That is why you can come here and be sure of groceries of such a quality and freshness as to show just now CAREFULLY we handle this Department. New goods arrive almost every day.

Just now

Preserving Fruits

are of immediate interest. We can sustain that interest.

Other Departments are just as complete. For Railwaymen the Overalls, Smocks and Gloves we show are the right things in the right place. Stanfield's Underwear is another specially full line of serviceable clothing.

And this mention of a few lines does not mean that we are less observant of the needs of our DRY GOODS customers. The proof is in the buying.

Spencer & Todd

The Spectacle.

Whenever anyone suggests that fruit is raised or can be grown any other place than in British Columbia that young fruit growing district sets up a bawl at the infringement on what it considers its rights. It is just like any other spoiled five-year-old. It imagines everything in sight belongs to it. Itc an't by any manner of means use all the toys or privileges, but it wants them all gathered around it on the floor, where it can grab any that are eyed with envy by others.

The Kootenay Liberal of Nelson, has put into words this resentment at the article on the growing of apples and other fruits which appeared in The Times of two weeks ago. And it finds its only weapon of defence to be what was always intended for offence—it gets nasty. Here is its tirade:

"If it were not for the prominence given the article, the recent effort of the Medicine Hat Times to draw attention to the "fruit growing prospects" of that wee gas and sand town it would naturally be taken as a somewhat elaborate joke. But evidently it was not intended as a joke. The Times seems to have been serious. Under such circumstances the Kootenay should refrain from being so impolite as to laugh visibly. But inward mirth is absolutely unavoidable.

"Those who have visited Medicine Hat and have noted how the citizens of the junction town have to stand all day with the hose, dodging sand storms, if they want to keep a tree alive or a square foot of grass green, will appreciate the following:

And then the article is quoted.

...a to Kootenayans this bit of unnecessary abuse may seem a fitting answer to the presumption of any other district that attempted to grow fruit, but there are a few things that, when known, seem to spoil the general effect.

In the first place the yarn about the sand and hose-play is too utterly nasty to carry any belief with it. There are winds here that raise a dust as there are in most places but Nelson, where there probably is nothing but water and rock to blow. That's nasty too, I know; but the conclusion is only one of inference.

Friend Odlum of the Liberal, who is responsible for this jealous sneer has visited Medicine Hat a very few times. His business here has been connected solely with the sale of fruit lands in the Kootenay, owned or controlled by him. Little more need be said. He was zealously pushing what he termed a special deal, when here last, and after a lot of difficulty got some local men interested to the extent of helping him out with a few acres which would not sell elsewhere as readily as desired.

Possibly it was the hard work and excess of talk necessary to put through the deal that made him sore on the place. Possibly it was the hopelessness of bamboozling Medicine Hatters. However, it does not go down well, to take in citizens of a town and then go away and laugh at the town. The editor of the Liberal is working on some stale stories that are pumped into everyone who looks verdant enough to believe them Undoubtedly he has whole books of such tall tales back in his memory.

As for considering "junction town" a snub, we rather like it here. At any rate it is so much more preferable than being a town several hours beyond the terminus that we can afford "to laugh, invisibly." It is also a cause for laughter for an 8,000 town to call a 6,000 town "wee"—another evidence experience gives him opportunity for looking down on the healthy boy. When it comes to trees and grass there is no town in the prairie provinces more beautiful than Medicine Hat. Of course, unlike Nelson (to get nasty again) we have spaces level enough for streets and gardens and some space is occupied with those. Also we can build a house without seeing that the architect considers the centre of gravity in his construction, and our houses are not three storey one side with the roof running into the mountains on the other side. The problems of building are simple here—as simple as grass, tree and fruit-growing. We don't grow grass because it is the only way known on earth of covering a rock that is not too steep to hold dirt.

Perhaps if the Liberal would come to this city after three months of practically no water for lawns or trees, it would open his eyes.

But the most amusing part of this "joke" of the Liberal's, is that it is within the memory of every four year old in the country, when the Kootenay wasn't considered fit to live in, let alone grow fruit. Now it has discovered its bent and talks as if it was fore-ordained and worked out before the flood. Medicine Hat has grown fruit as long as the Kootenay. The difference in the progress of fruit growing in the two districts is accounted for by the fact that there are here dozens of other ways of making money.

There is room for fruit both in the Kootenay and here and the Liberal need not show so much fear.

Clever Crooks to Lecture

London, Aug. 31.—A sequel to the cleverest and most gigantic series of forgeries ever perpetrated has been announced.

Edwin Noyes Hills, one of the four participants in the famous $5,000,000 Bank of England fraud committed in 1873, has just had his ticket of leave cancelled by the home secretary.

Hills was released on license in 1892, after serving twenty years in prison. He is now 74 years of age, and, in conjunction with John P. Quinn, the converted sharper, is about to start a lecturing tour under the auspices of the International Anti-Gambling Association of which George D. Lane is secretary. He is also bringing out a book entitled "One of Four in a Million of Money," in which he will relate the full story of the crime, his object being to devote the balance of his life to rescuing men from gambling.

Details of the Swindle.

In an interview Mr. Hills gave an account of how this great swindle, unparalleled in its magnitude and the consummate skill and daring with which it was carried out, was planned.

The four men concerned in the plot were the brothers George and Austin Bidwell, George Macdonnell and Hills all well educated, well connected and business trained Americans of commanding appearance and manner. Macdonnel, who spoke seven languages fluently, was the "penman" or forger; the Bidwells engineering the crime, and Hills acted as private secretary and cashed the securities at the bank.

The fraud consisted of forging bills of exchange on the leading commercial houses, getting them discounted at the Bank of England and drawing huge sums—amounting in all to $5,000,000—on account.

"The forged bills," said Mr. Hills, "represented more than $5,000,000, and but for a trifling accident the crime would not have been discovered, and it would have been possible to swindle the Bank of England of several millions."

Many months were spent in preliminary preparations. The two Bidwells and Macdonnell came over to England in 1872, and went on a tour of the principal European cities. They swindled people in England, France, Germany, Austria and Russia, and then went to South America, finally returning to England with $80,000.

First of all it was necessary to gain the complete confidence of the Bank, Austin Bidwell accordingly obtained an introduction to the manager to whom he explained that he was a contractor in Birmingham in a large way of business. He deposited $6,000.

The men then went on the continent and bought bills of exchange from well established commercial houses, including the Rothschilds, and had them discounted by the Bank of England, the amounts being placed to the credit of Bidwell. Thus it was that Bidwell secured a reputation with the bank as being a man of high commercial credit and integrity.

These genuine bills served another purpose. They were the models of the forged bills which were eventually sent to the bank. No fewer than ninety-four forged bills on which the names of the drawers and acceptors had been cleverly forged by Macdonnell, were duly honored by the bank Most of these bills were drawn for three months.

Six weeks before the first of them was due for payment the Bidwells and Macdonnell made arrangements to escape from the country, and Hills was sent to the bank to cash what they had decided to be the last check.

On that day, however, one of the bank officials noticed that a bill sent in by Austin Bidwell was not dated. Not suspecting anything wrong, the official sent a clerk to the drawer's office asking him to supply the omission. Then it was that the bill was found to be a forgery.

The bank authorities were astonished when they discovered that all the other bills were bogus. They were convinced that Hills would be cashing a check, and they waited for him. Two or three hours after the discovery was made Hills went to the bank and presented a $5,000 check for payment. He was immediately seized by the police.

Meanwhile the other three had heard of the disaster to their scheme and they cleared out. Austin Bidwell with a retinue of servants, fled to Paris, where he married a beautiful English girl, whom he took to Havana, where he was at length arrested. Macdonnell was caught in New York and George Bidwell in Edinburgh.

Even the trial at the Old Bailey of this ingenious quartet was marked by a sensation. The Bidwells' friends made a desperate effort to plan their escape from Newgate. They bribed warders on night duty with hundreds of pounds, but the plot was discovered.

Sixteen years later George Bidwell was released because the prison doctor reported he was dying, while Austin obtained his liberty after 19 years in prison. They both died in America in 1898, within two days of each other.

Macdonnell died some time after his release in 1852, and Hills, on whose behalf the others pleaded hard for mercy, is the only survivor. The law has released its long grip of him and now, in his last days, he hopes to save others from drifting into crime.

A brother and a nephew of the Bidwells were recently convicted on a swindling charge in Chicago.

Who Gets the Strike Pay?

(Calgary Albertan.)

The arrival of strike pay for a portion of the men on strike yesterday has led to some dissension in the ranks.

The machinists received the strike pay. The helpers and unorganized forces received nothing and got no intimation that they would receive anything.

The helpers point out that the machinists have been in receipt of $90 to $120 per month and the helpers $50 to $60 per month. They say that if the machinists want these men to keep from going back into the shops that something must be done.

MAGISTRATE SPEAKS FOR ZAM-BUK

Magistrate Perry, of Goldfields, B.C., believes in making a good thing known. Writing of Zam-Buk, the great household balm, he says:—"After a very fair trial I have proved Zam-Buk eminently satisfactory. In my case it cured a skin rash of five years' standing which no doctor had been able to do any good for. I would certainly encourage any person to keep Zam-Buk in his home." The magistrate is quite right. Every home needs Zam-Buk! Unequalled for cuts, burns, bruises, eczema, blood poisoning and all skin diseases. All stores and druggists sell it at 50 cents a box. Sure cure for piles.

DON'T NEGLECT THAT SORE!

A Chicago man has just died from blood poisoning arising from neglect of a small sore. Don't neglect a cut, a patch of eczema, or an open sore of any kind. The air is full of poison germs, waiting to start up their evil results in neglected sores, wounds, etc. In Zam-Buk is safety. Zam-Buk is so highly antiseptic that applied to any skindisease or injury it makes blood poisoning impossible. In using Zam-Buk you have three processes going on at once for Zam-Buk is healing soothing and antiseptic. Try it without delay.

A GENUINE OFFER.

TEST ZAM-BUK AT OUR EXPENSE!

We appreciate the position taken by the man or woman who says:—"If your preparation is what you claim, you should have no objection to letting us try it before spending our money on it." To every person taking this view we say, send one cent stamp (to pay return postage) and name and date of this paper to Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, and we will mail you a free trial box of Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is purely herbal, suitable for the delicate skin of little children, yet powerful enough to heal chronic sores of long years' standing. All druggists and stores, 50c. per box, 3 for $1.25.

Tuberculosis Among Cattle

(Prof. George P. Grant, University of Minnesota.)

St. Anthony Park, St. Paul, Minn. Aug. 22.—Tuberculosis is an infectious disease common to man and domestic animals. It is the most widely spread of all diseases and follows civilization wherever it advances. There is hardly a country where tuberculosis is not found. The importation of bovine breeding stock has been instrumental in carrying the disease to countries where heretofore it was little known as for example Japan. The agricultural press has considered and treated the subject largely in its relation to the human race and to cattle, yet it is also common in pigs, often appearing as so called "scrofula" and is frequently found in dogs, cats as well as among domestic fowls. In college laboratories where cats are commonly dissected for biological purposes it is not uncommon to find the "children's pet" literally filled with tuberculosis. While it is koown that the tuberculosis affecting poultry is not of the same variety as that affecting man, still the human type is common to both cats and dogs.

Only about twenty-five years ago Koch discovered that the disease is due to a bacillus. Since that time rapid progress has been made in understanding the disease. After the bacilli have gained entrance and lodged in a section of the body and are not thrown off, they grow and multiply forming lesions which are filled with a cheesy substance more or less yellow ine olor, and often of a hard calcareous nature. In the human body the walls of these lesions break down very rapidly allowing the bacilli to escape, where they spread and by development form new lesions. Among cattle these walls do not give way as rapidly and consequently, being kept together, develop into larger nodules. These nodules, which are white in color, in many cases develop rapidly in the interior of the body clustering together like grapes and growing to the size of a pea. This resemblance gave tuberculosis the name of "grapes" long before much was known about it or its true character understood.

Every stock owner should make it a point to see and know the characteristic tubercle nodule that he may not only protect himself and family from using meat badly infected with tuberculosis but be able to determine for himself when tuberculosis is present in his herd.

Bovine Form Exists.

It may seem strange at first thought that tuberculosis exists among cattle by permission of the owners, yet such is the case and a little reflection on the subject will convince the most skeptical that this is true. The tuberculin test commonly known among stock raisers has been found to be a most satisfactory method of diagnosing the disease. It has been determined time and time again that it is impossible to point out the tuberculosis animals from the herd by the looks, yet the tuberculin test will fail of giving accurate information only in rare cases, notwithstanding some menwho are called doctors are condemning the test, Why in the light of present science anyone should consider the tuberculin test inaccurate is a conundrum and leads one to suspect such a person's having some financial reason for disapproving of the test. There are cases where post-mortem examinations have beenmade and no lesions of the disease found, yet it is very reasonable to suppose that had every gland and cell in the body been examined, traces of the disease would have been located. Careless operators have failed to tave necessary things into consideration when applying the test and so failed in obtaining accurate results, condemning animals which did not have the disease, yet a careful man or a skilled doctor will hardly make a mistake and the results may be depended upon. Occasionally an animal far gone with the disease will fail to react, due possibly to the fact that the bacilli in the body have become used to their own tuberculin In a case of this kind the disease has usually made such progress that it is visible to the eye, and one has but to consider the natural symptoms. The animal becomes poor, the coat is dry and does not lie well or in common terms is "hide bound." There is shortness of breath and a hacking cough. An animal which has tuberculosis well developed in the lungs will some times cough in the morning when turned out, if it is a little chilly or upon drinking cold water or eating dry feed. These then are a few of the more common symptoms of the disease which will be apparent if a tuberculous animal fails to react to the test. It is therefore plain that there are very few cases of bovine tuberculosis existing which cannot be located wither by the test or at sight. If this is true we then have a safe and effective method in tuberculine for determining the presence of the disease and for pointing out the animals which must be weeded out if we would eradicate the disease.

The next point to consider is the likelihood of the dam transmitting the disease to her offspring. Will the calf from the tuberculous dam be dropped with the disease germs in its system. This is a questionwhich has been often asked. All the best authorities are agreed that the calf is born free from the disease and whit it may possibly have a weak constitution which will readily succumb to the tuberculosis if introduced into the system, still nogerms of the disease are present at birth. This being the case we have an opportunity of heading off tuberculosis if we isolate the calves from all tuberculous animals as soon as they are dropped. The calves can then be kept free from disease if fed on the milk from cows which do not react to the test or by feeding them on pasteurized milk.

The tubercle bacilli are not extremely resistent against heat and if the milk be heated to a temperature of 150 degrees F. to 155 degrees for about 20 minutes, or to a temperature of 190 F. for five minutes, you may feel sure there are no lying tubercle germs present in the milk. Direct sunlight kills the bacilli in from ten to twenty-four hours, which fact is a strong argument in favor of well lighted barns.

Tuberculosis Eliminated.

There is no surer and more practical way of eliminating the bovine disease than to make the breeding of tuberculous stock decidedly unprofitable. It is not an easy matter to suggest a practical way whereby this matter can be adjusted because it is not best in all cases to kill off at once all animals found affected with the disease. There are many states where it is so prevalent that it would be ruinous to the stock interests were every tuberculous bovine at once killed. Many of the best pure bred herds are badly infected with the disease.

The fact that an animal is pure bred should not give him any more license to live and spread the diseasq than a scrub, although the extra value for stock purposes will sometimes compensate for keeping him isolated from nontuberculous animals. The wise farmer will see to it that infection is not introduced into his herd by purchasing tuberculosis breeding stock, but on the other hand if he finds it in his herd of fancy stock he cannot always afford tokill the infected ones at once until he has raised a few crops of calves to raise the standard of his stock. He should be content, howeber, to sell only the young stock and see to it that they were not allowed to become contaminated by runningwith tuberculous animals.

Pass a Law Requiring Sale Animals to be Tested.

It is often hard to purchase bovine stock subject to the tuberculin test, and trouble often arises even when such agreement is made. A lawshould be passed making it necessary that every animal offered for sale be tested and no animal allowed to change hands for breeding purposes that is not free from the disease. "Require the seller to prove the merits of his goods."

There should be no objection to the sale of tuberculous animals for the block provided rigid inspection of the carcass follow. If thedisease is found only in one organ of the body the meat is perfectly safe if well cooked.

The use of milk from tuberculous herds is a very fruitful means of spreading the disease. This is illustrated in sections of the country where milk is hauled to the creamery and skim milk returned to the farm without first pasteurizing it. If tuberculosis is present in a few of the herds it spreads rapidly. A comparison made between sections where the milk is hauled to a commonpoint and returned after the cream hasbeen separated, with sections which keep their milk at home, shows that the percentage of tuberculous youngstock is much larger where the milk is received at a common point and the patron's milk turned in together Since it has been found by actual statistics that the disease is spread to an alarming extent by this means we should avail ourselves of the advantages to be derived from pasteurizing the skim milk before returning it to the farm as well as the cream for buttermaking purposes and milk for the city trade until we have the disease under control.

To check the disease then, all animals changing hands and the dairy herds from which milk is offered for sale should be officially tested, tagged and recorded. This would allow every stock owner to get the value of his stock on hand, unless it be the city milk man, but would make him very cautious about raising young stock and allowing them to become exposed to the disease. After this precaution it would hardly seem necessary to suggest the removal of superfluous cats and dogs affected with the disease.

To recapitulate:

1st. Tuberculosis is a very infectious disease common to man and domestic animals. Its presence should be ascertained as soon as possible and steps taken to stamp it out.

2nd. Every stock owner should make a postmortem examination of a tuberculous animal and examine the characteristic nodules that he become familiar with their looks for self protection as well as that of his herd.

3rd. Bovine tuberculosis exists by permission of stock owners, because in tuberculin we have a practical means of determining the presence of the disease and secondly because the calf is born free from tuberculosis.

4th. The disease can be wiped out only by making the breeding of tuberculosis animals unprofitable. To this end a law should be passed preventing the sale of tuberculous cattle for dairy or breeding purposes.

Washouts on the C.P.R.

After 10 hours of blockade the main line of the C.P.R. east was cleared Tuesday and traffic resumed. Between Ingolf and Ignace there is hardly a continuous mile of the track that is in good condition, while at several points considerable stretches of the new double track have been washed away or has slid down the muskeg. Five wrecks have occurred, but in none of them have been any fatalities, the only man injured being the engineer of one of the passenger trains who was hurt when his engine went into the ditch two miles east of Tache on Sunday night. The first train reached the city at 1 o'clock yesterday and was followed twenty minutes later by the Toronto express which was due Monday morning at 10.30.

First Delay at Tache.

The first delay to the west bound trains occurred Sunday night at Tache, where the south track was washed away at a muskeg. The engineer saw the trouble in time to cut off steam and set the brakes, but the engine and one car went into the rails. No. 95 was an hour or so behind and was also held up. It was run back to Raleigh and the balance of the coaches of the train ahead were also pulled into the siding. Work trains were rushed in from Ignace and the track was cleared by 8 o'clock Monday night. From there on in to Kenora the line was in bad shape and it took nine hours tomake the run.

West of Kenora

The greatest trouble was west of Kenora, where there were a number of bad washouts. At Deception the engine of a work train was running up to the water tank, but struck a soft spot and rolled over on its side. At Kalmar, where there have been a couple of slides this summer, there was a boarding train on the new double track, which is not yet in commission. While the men were in their bunks the water cut away the bank and seven cars rolled down the embankment. A careful check has been made of the men, and so far as can be learned there were no lives lost.

A short distance farther west a stop a washout when it was caught work train was putting in gravel to on a soft piece of track. The engine cleared all right, but five cars rolled off the dump and are piled in the ditch. At Ingolf the last break west occurred. A considerable section of the new track went out and the old line was also somewhat weakened. A couple of trainloads of ballast were ploughed in and traffic resumed. At Deception three eastbound trains, two passengers and a cattle extra held, and three passenger trains were held at Ingolf. These were all cleared shortly after 10 o'clock yesterday morning.

Nineteen Hours Without Food

There was little complaint made by any of the passengers except on train No. 95, where the passengers were kept nineteen hours without food. A meal was served Monday night at Raleigh and the dining car was cut off at Kenora to send back east. It was expected that breakfast would be secured from the diner of No. 97, which was being held at Deception. The passengers went forward to breakfast, but the crew of the diner aheadrefused to serve them the dining car conductor using most disgraceful language, and refusing to give a woman and her little child anything to eat.

It is roughly estimated that the washouts along the line will cost the C.P.R. between a quarter and a half million dollars in repairs. The dump in many places looks as if it had been by a cloudburst, huge gaps being cut into the earth and sand. Fortunately there are construction gangs and ballast shovels at frequent intervals along the line, and it will be only the matter of a few days' work to put it back into condition.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

(Calgary Daily News.)

Not one voter in seven belongs to any labor organization. There are in the United States more Odd Fellows and Freemasons than members of the American Federation of Labor, the Knights of Labor, the Industrial Workers of the World and all the unaffiliated unions. The 10,104,561 members of fraternal organizations outnumber more than 2 to 1 the bearers of union cards.

Comparing by trades the United States census figures with the numbers in the labor unions, it appears that the men not belonging to such oeganizations generally outnumber those who do belong.

Organized labor has never cast its vote in block. With isolated exceptions its members, no more than the Knights of Pythias or the Odd Fellows or the Maccabees, cast their votes as an organization. When the Amalgamated Association was strong in the Pittsburg iron district it used officially to endorse the republican ticket, provided that its members shared by their wages scale in tariff made high prices. But since the steel trust took the benefit of the tariff this condition no longer exists.

In the anthracite region of Pennsylvania the miners of recent years have been voting democratic ticket since their chairman became the democratic congressman, and they control the democratic primaries. None of the national unions has taken united political action though local unions have frequently endorsed or condemned local candidates.

Members of labor organizations have hitherto been more prone to split their vote than members of business organizations. Farmers' alliances and granges have regularly gone into politics in the western and southern states where they arestrong. Officers of railroads have habitually united for political action. So have the proprietors of the tariff-protected industries. However, obedient to orders to strike, however submissive to direction in trade matters, the members of labor organizations, much more than members of chambers of commerce, boards of trade, and merchants' and manufacturers' associations, have refused to take part in politics as a body.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 31.—In consequence of the failure of the coal mine operators and mine workers toreach an agreement at a conference which was held in this city last Friday and Saturday all of the mines in the state of Wyoming under the control of the Mine Operators' association of Wyoming were closed down tonight, and will remain closed for an indefinite period.

Calgary, Aug. 27.—At a meeting of the strikers, G. Clark, of the O. R.C.J.A. Carson of the B.R.T., and W. Pullar, of the B. of L. E. addressed the men on the political subject. He advocated that the best way for organized labor to make itself felt in the government of the country, in a way that would be helpful to both themselves and to the other classes of people, was to choose from either Liberal or Conservative party, men who were known to be supporters of organized labor. In that way they contended that much power could be obtained by labor than if they should run men on a third ticket.

Montreal, Que., Sept. 1.—At a meeting held by the C.P.R. firemen in Montreal today, in connectionwith some dismissals in Ontario, it was decided to appeal for a conciliation board. It is stated authoratively that all the organizations have decided that they have to remain neutral and cannot aid the striking C. P. R. shop men by a sympathetic strike or financial assistance from their funds. The Grand Trunk train men have been holding a meeting here and it was owing to this that the mistaken idea arose that they belonged to the C.P.R. The C.P.R. general repair shops at Carleton Junction, which have been running with a dozen men or so since the beginning of the strike, will re-open tomorrow with its complement of men.

Here are a hundred and one little useful things for the home that should appeal to every good housewife—those little labor-saving necessities that make house-keeping a pleasure, and not a drudge. The prices, too, are so moderate that you really cannot afford to be without them.

Lord Northcliffe

The Most Talked of Man of the Day

Alfred Charles William Harmsworth Baron Northcliffe of the Isle of Thanet has recently acquired control of TheTimes, the great English "Thunderer." He was borne at Chapelizod, a suburb of Dublin, on July 15th, 1865. His father was a barrister. Educated at Stamford Grammar School, he entered the Civil Service from which he retired to establish "Answers," the foundation of the Harmsworth series of publications. He was created a baronet in 1905 and was advanced to the Peerage in the following year.

Lord Northcliffe is almost as well known in this country as in England. His encyclopedia, issued in monthly editions has had an enormous sale in Canada. He owns large forests and pulp mills in New Found land and lately has acquired a coal field, so that he manufacturers his own raw material with his own coal for his own papers, of which he has a dozen.

In view of his purchase of The Times' stock the following studyfrom The London Daily News is interesting:

I was talking the other day in the garden of a friend of mine on the subject of Stevenson when he brought fourth a file of "Young Folks" for 1881, containing the "SeaCook" and another for 1884, in which appeared the "Black Arrow." Turning the yellow pages, he casually pointed out an article, one of a series on "Amateur Photography."

"There," said he "are the modest beginnings of greatness. Today the writer of that humble article is master of "The Times," a member of the House of Lords, owner of half the papers you see in the hands of the people, the Napoleon of the Press; whether you like it or not, the most influential man in this country." For the name under the article was "Alfred C. Harmsworth" "How has it been done?" he asked. "What manner of man is this Lord Northcliffe?"

"I have," I said, "the privilege of not knowing Lord Northcliffe. I am that miracle in these days—a journalist who has never been through the mill ,never written a line for him, nor met him, nor except when he has been in the peers' gallery of the House of Commons, even seen him. I am therefore well qualified to answer your question, for I can view him without any personal feeling, which, I believe, is a rare thing in a journalist. Lord Northcliffe is the common man in an uncommon degree. There is no psychological mystery to be unravelled here, no intellectual land. He is obvious and elementary. He is simply the type of the man who wants material success and nothing else. He has no other standard by which to judge life. Napoleon's question was, 'What have you done?' Lord Northcliffe's question would be "What have you got?' For he not only wants success himself; he admires it in others. It is the passport to his esteem. It is the thing he understands If you will watch his career you will see that, as far as he has a philosophy at all, it is this, that merit rides in a motor-car. You become interesting to him, as Johnson became interesting to Chesterfield, immediately you have succeeded. When he went down to that memorable meeting at Glasgow at which Mr. Chamberlain formally opened his fiscal campaign he changed his policy in a night. His papers had been full of denunciations of what he had christened "the Stomach Tax"; but this meeting so great and so enthusiastic, seemed the presage of success. He was going to be left in failure. The thing was unthinkable, company with that dismal thing, failure. The thing was unthinkable, and he leapt the fence on the instant. For he believes with Mr. Biglow that

'A merciful Providence fashioned us hollow
So that we might our principles swallow.

The one principle to which his loyalty never falters is to be on the side of the big battalions.

* * * *

"This habit of swift decision dictated without regard to principle, is the key to his success. He carries no intellectual or moral impediments, has no sentiment, is anchored in no theory, hokis no view of life. He simply asks. 'What will win?' and then to quote Mr. Biglow again, 'goes it bakheaded.' He is, in a word, the Stock Exchange man in the sphere of journalism. He represents the conquest of Fleet St. by Chapel Court. Go on the Stock Exchange and you will find it crowded with Lord Northcliffes, men of that rapid, decisive type who bull and bear with happy indifference to intrinsic merit, and to whom the issues of peace and war are of importance only as they affect the price of stocks and shares.

"When Lord Northcliffe set out to feed the war flame in South Africa he did so, I think, without any real feeling against the Boers. He is not I fancy, a man who bears malice. For to bear malice involves attachment to some point of view, indicated some reality of character. Had the Boers won he would probably have written them a letter of congratulation. But the mood of the country was high and turbulent. We were full of

Such boastings as the Gentiles use, And lesser breeds without the law.

And his conception of journalism is to give the public the meat it craves for. If it wants a war then it is his duty to paint the enemy black and horrible; if he wants a sensation then it is his task to provide it. Does the temper of the moment demand the immolation of France, then he is the fiercest of Francophobes:

If the French cannot cease their insults (he says in 1899) their Colonies will be taken from them and given to Germany and Italy.

The French have succeeded in thoroughly convincing John Bull that they are his inveterate enemies.

England has long hesitated between France and Germany. But she has always respected the German character, whereas she has gradually come to feel a contempt for France.

Nothing like an entente cordiale can subsist between England and her nearest neighbor.

Does the mood change and Germany become the object of ntional suspicion, then who so ready to throw faggots on the flame—

Yes, we detest the Germans and we detest them cordially (he says in 1903) They render themselves odious to the whole of Europe. I would not tolerate that anyone should print in my journal the least thing which might today wound France; but, on the other hand, I would not like anyone to insert anything that could please Germany.

* * * *

"He, in fact, regards himself simply as the purveyor of a popular commodity. If the public taste changes, then he is the man to change with it. He is wedded to no old clothes. He, is truly considered, a humble-minded young person. His opinions are of so little consequence that, he is always prepared to adopt those of other people, provided that they represent the majority. In 1954 when the Progressives looked like they represent the majority. In 1904 when they were certain to lose, he filled his papers with fantastic stories of their misdeeds. It was not that he disagreed with them, for disagreement implies convictions of some sort. It was simply that he was with the crowd. He backs an opinion as he would back a horse—because he believes it will win. He reminds me of that story of Lord Chancellor Thurlow and the Nonconformist deputation that went to him to protest against some unjust advantage he had given to the Established Church. 'Why,' asked the deputation, 'do you always show this partiality for Established Church?' 'I show partiality for the EstablishedChurch,' said Thurlow, "because it is established. Get your —— sect established and then I'll show partiality to you.'

"It is this absolutely commercial conception of journalism which is Lord Northcliffe's contribution to his time. Journalism was a profession; he has made it a trade. It had a moral function; in his hands it has no more moral significance than the manufacture of soap. The old notion in regard to a newspaper was that it was a responsible adviser of the public. Its first duty was to provide the news, uncolored by any motive, private or public; its second to present a certain view of public policy which it believed to be for the good of the State and the community. It was sober, responsible, and a little dull. It treated life as if it was a serious matter. It had an antiquated respect for truth. It believed in the moral governance of things.

"Lord Northcliffe has changed all this. He started free from all convictions. He saw an immense, unexploited field. The old journalism appealed only to the minds of the responsible public; he would appeal to the emotions of the irresponsible. The old journalism gave news; he would give sensation. The old journalism gave reasoned opinions; he would give unreasoning passion. When Captain Flanagan from the calm retreat of the debtors' prison was drawing up the prospectus of 'The Pall Mall Gazette' he said proudly, that it 'would be written by gentlemen for gentlemen.' Lord Northcliffe conceived a journal, which in Lord Salisbury's phase was 'written by office boys for office boys.' It was a bitter saying; but Lord Northcliffe has had his revenge. He, Lord Salisbury's 'office boy' of journalism, was raised to the peerage by Lord Salisbury's nephew.

"It was not the only case inwhich time passed an ironic comment on Lord Salisbury's views of the Press. When Gladstone repealed the stamp duty and made the penny paper possible, Lord Robert Cecil asked scornfully what good thing come out of a penny paper. A cheap Press, like an enlarged franchise, meant to his gloomy and fatalistic mind 'red ruin and the breaking up of laws.' And he lived to see himself kept in power by the democracy, which he had feared, and deriving his supportfrom the halfpenny Press, at which he would have shuddered. He lived, in fact, to realise that there is a better way with the office boy than to drive him into revolutionary movements. It is to give him a vote and the 'Daily Mail.'

"I have said that Lord Northcliffe is the common man in an uncommon degree. You see it in this article in 'Young Folks.' Amateur photography had just become popular. He, a lad of eighteen, seized on it as a stepping-stone to fortune. A little later came the boom in cycling, and Master Harmsworth, still in his teens, became a cycling journalist in Coventry. Sir George Newnes had touched the great heart of humanity with 'Tit-Bits,' and Mr. Harmsworth, now a man of twenty one, felt that here was a field for his genius also. He, too, would tell men that the streets of London put end to end would stretch across the Atlantic, and that there were more acres in Yorkshire than letters in the Bible. Why should he conceal these truths? Why should the public thirst for knowledge be denied? And so, in an upper room in the neighborhood of the Strand, 'Answers' came to birth, the prolific parent of some hundred, or perhaps, two hundred—I am not sure which—offspring, ranging from "The Funny Wonder' to the 'Daily Mail,' all bearing the impress of the common mind in an uncommon degree, the freedom from ideas, the love of the irrelevant and the trivial, the admiration of the flagrant and the loud, the divorce form all the sobrieties an sanities of life. The fate of 'The Times' was long in doubt, and the secret of its new control was carefully concealed. But one day it anpeared with several columns describing the dress at same society 'function,' Lady Midas' wonderful creation from Worth's and the Duchess of Blankshire's raptuous pearls, and I knew the touch of the master hand. The marvellous 'office boy' had no more worlds left to conquer.

"Perhaps the crucial moment of his life was that day in the early nineties, when a young man who had been a reporter on the 'Birmingham Daily Mail' and afterwards on 'The Star' called on him with a scheme. 'The Evening News' was for sale, and the enterprising young man had got the refusal of it, and gave Mr. Harmsworth twelve hours to decide whether he would buy it, his own reward being the editorship and a share in the business. So far Mr. Harmsworth had only adorned the sphere of 'tit-bits' journalism. He seized this opportunity to serve his country in a larger sphere, and out of that day's work came 'The Daily Mail,' with which the ideals of American journalism were brought into our midst, and all the multitude of daily papers with which he has endowed us. He is, you see, a man of bold and swift decisions. When he found the women did not want a women's daily paper, he changed it in a night to a halfpenny picture paper. And instantly he found his way to the feminine heart. He is doubtful whether women want votes, but he discovered that they do want pictures 'stuck in anyhow, with hardly any words at all.'

"He has adroitness too. When 'The Daily Telegraph' started a Sunday issue, he followed suit. Instantly there was a great outcry in the country against the Sunday newspaper. To that outcry Lord Burnham and Lord Northcliffe bowed with grave professions of respect for religious opinion. Subsequently Lord Northcliffe purchased two Sunday papers already existing, and nothing was said, though we may assume that Lord Burnham thought a good deal. There are few earlier birds about than Lord Northcliffe.

"He touches nothing that he does not—shall we say?—adorn. The note of his mind is over all he does. I was looking the other day at one of his multitudinous publications—a children's cyclopaedia. It contained a picture of the solar system, the sun blazing in the centre and the planets careering round it. And each planet was depicted by a motor-car! He can make even the splendors of the midnight sky speak in the terms of the momentary and sordid earth. No doubt the men sitting in those motor-cars were reading the 'Daily Mail.' I am told that in his office he has a favorite phase about 'the shop window.' 'What is wrong with the shop window to-day?' he will say, as he points to the offending issue. It is an eloquent phase. He is the 'shop window' journalist. The sign over the journalist's office in the old days was 'Marchand d'idees.' Now it is 'The Latest Novelties,' and the editor is the chief shop walker.

"He is all that is summed up in that desolating word 'smart.' He is a 'smart' man, the representative man of a 'smart' age. It is an age which, if it has ever heard of Lord Courtney, regards him only as a dull old gentleman who bores you with talk about principles. It delights in the man who will advertise himself in twelve-foot letters. It worships success, however it is achieved. You may be exposed as often as you like; all will be forgiven if only you will be smart. You may espouse one cause today and another to-morrow, one cause here and another cause there; it does not matter so long as you do it with effrontery and success. Its patriotism is that strange, inverted thing which makes "Little Englander" a phrase of withering reproach, as though to love England was impious.

"It is not that it believes the wrong things; it is that it has ceased to believe anything. Its drama is the music-hall; its moral teacher Mr. Hall Caine; its instructor the inspired office-boy. As I came along in the Tube to see you I took notice of the papers in the people's hands. The fat gentleman on one side of me was reading the 'Globe,' the slim lady on the other the 'Daily Mirror,' the smart office-boy in front the 'Daily Mail', the meek person next the 'Sunday Companion,' the lad in the corner 'Comic Cuts.' There were 'Evening Newses' and 'Red Magazines,' 'Puck' and 'The World.' The papers were different, but the accents were one. Where Lord Northcliffe was not, there was Mr. Arthur C. Pearson, his pale shadow. The revolution is complete. The old journalism is dead, the voice of 'Answers' speaks in the thunders of 'The Times,' and Lord Northcliffe 'bestrides the world like a Colossus,' the type of power without the sense of responsibility—of material success without moral direction.''

"You have spoken well," said my friend, "though I think Watts has put the thing more tersely in his picture of 'Mammon.' But you paint the timeto o gloomily. It is a time of change and disturbance and fickleness, and strange forms come to the surface; but out of the welter the new England is emerging with a new social gospel and a new vision. Lord Northcliffe, with his shop-window novelties, is but a transition phase. He is only the echo of the passing mood and the shallow craze. The great movement is comingf rom below and is independent of all the inanities of the Press. Be of good cheer. We are a people yet.

No Disease is so Quiet and Stealthy in its Approach as Kidney Disease

That is why it is so dangerous. It may become deep-seated before you realize the danger.

It is therefore of great importance to recognize the early warning symptoms; pain or dull ache in the back, bladder pains, smarting sensation when urinating, frequent or surpressed urination, sediment in the urine, etc., because in its early stage kidney disease is easily cured by Doan's KIDNEY PILLS.

Mr. Elgin Brisebois, Vernon, Ont., writes:—I was troubled a great deal with kidney trouble. I had to get up four or five times every night, my urine contained a thick brick-dust sediment, I had a pain in the small of my back, and could not sleep at night.

Gas is liable to puff out of the front door of any furnace unprovided for gas escape.

"Sunshine" Furnace has Automatic Gas Damper directly connected with smoke-pipe. Gas pressure sways damper sufficiently for it to escape up chimney (see illustration), but heat doesn't escape.

What does "Sunshine" Gas Damper mean to "Sunshine" Furnace? Means protection to the furnace parts against evil effects of gas.

What does "Sunshine" Gas Damper mean to "Sunshine" householder? Means furnace can be operated without fear as to "puffing" gas; furnace can be left without doubt as to whereabouts of gas.

What does "Sunshine" Gas Damper mean to "Sunshine" coal account? It means, instead of owner with "ordinary furnace" fear having to keep check-draft indefinitely closed to "let off" gas—when there's two-thirds parts of heat-energy to one part of gas passing up chimney—draft can with all safety be opened, and coal saved for another day's duty.

Pre-Emption Regulations

The following notice relating to regulations as to pre-emptions under the new land bill passed at the last session has been sent out by the Department of the Interior:—

Pre-emptions may be taken on either odd or even numbered sections south of township 45, east of Calgary and Edmonton Railway and west line of range 26, and west of third meridian and the Soo Railway line, but townships within that area in which a railway company has selected eight sections of its land grant are excluded from the pre-emption privilege.

Persons entitled to a pre-emption entry holding homesteads within the townships in which pre-emptions may be taken, and alongside whose homestead there is a quarter section available as a pre-emption, are entitled, if the first applicant, to enter for such quarter section as a pre-emption on or after September 1st next.

If such homesteader, whose entry must be in good standing notifies in writing over his own signature, or by telegraph from a Sub land agent, the agent of the land District in which his homestead is situated before September 1st that he desires to pre-empt an available quarter section lying alongside his homestead, or separated from it by only a road allowance, the land agent shall hold such quarter section reserved from homestead entry and for pre-emption entry, only until the end of September 15th, and no longer.

If more than oneh omestead adjoins a quarter section available for entry as a pre-emption in connection with such homesteads and if notice has been given as above provided, that one of the homesteaders desires it as a pre-emption, the pre-emption entry for such quarter section shall not be granted until the agent has decided which homesteaher has first right to a pre-emption entry.

The agent shall decide on or before September 15th which of the homesteaders has first right to the pre-emption under Sub Section 8 of Section 27 of the Dominion Lands Act' which provides that the homesteader in good standing who holds the first entry for his homestead has the first right to the pre-emption and the agent shall give the pre-emption accordingly.

A homesteader who holds entry in a township which is not available for pre-emption if there lies alongside his homestead in an adjoining township available for pre-emption an available quarter section may pre-empt such quarter section.

Index maps showing the pre-emption tract and the townships not available for pre-emption are available for free distribution at all land agencies in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Bridge Whist.

(By George Fitch in Canadian Colliers.)

Bridge whist is ordinary whist with a wheel-of-fortune attachment. It is a cross between double-entry book-keeping and roulette, and is played with a deck of cards, an adding machine, and a promissory note. It is listed as a game, but generally varies between a vice and a life-calling.

Bridge whist can easily be explained to any one who knows all about ordinary whist, compounded fractions, Robert's rules of order, wireless telegraphy, mind-reading, and silent signals. The rules of ordinary whist prevail as far as they go, but, in order to make the game appear more like real financiering, each suit is given a different value in the counting. Each trick over six when spades are trumps counts two pennies or automobiles, depending upon the location of the game. Clubs count four, diamonds six, and hearts eight. It is also possible to cut out trumps altogether by a simple mechanism, in which case each trick counts twelve.

Then in order to add a Wall Street zest to the game, the values of these tricks can be doubled or quadrupled by any one with a taste for plunging, and in order to complicate matters still further, so that the experienced player may get her just dues from the beginner, each count card is permitted at times to break into the score with a count of its own. This explains the double entry feature of the game. After a hand has been played, and the winner's extra tricks, have been multiplied by 2, 4, 6, 8, 12, 48, or 96, according to the value of the trumps and the intensity of the proceedings, the losers appropriate the pencil and do a little harvesting of their own. If they have held a majority of court cards in the trump suit, they may count themselves twice the value of the trump suit. If they have held four court cards, they get four times the value of the trump, and if they have held five they get five time its value. That ought to be enough but it isn't. To show that the game was invested by a firm believer in monopoly, it is possible, if you hold four court cards in one hand to count yourself eight times the value of the trump, while five court cards in one hand gives you ten times the trump's value.

Thus it will readily bes een that, while the winners of a hand in bridge may cord up to a total of two points by skill, thelosers may make ten times that much, simply by standing in with the royal family. This makes it evident, without explanation, that the game was invented in England.

The fascination of bridge lies partly in the fact that the game continues to be interesting long after the last card has been played. The participants generally play a rubber of three games, and thenspend the rest of the evening doing sums in simple addition, to find out who won. Tonight they will find out who won last night's game, but they will not find out who won tonight's game until some one remembers to bring home another tablet of scratch paper.

Counting Them Out With The Lead Pencil.

The varying values in bridge account for its peculiar qualities and its skill in breaking up families. The lead pencil is forever elbowing its way into the game and nullifying the most brilliant playing. The winners may by the most magnificent and superscintillating whist, manage to drag out a trick in the face of great odds and win a rubber. Yet, at the end of the game, the losers may excuse themselves, and, after half an hour's work with a bank examiner, demonstrate that the winners owe them anywhere from thirty cents to a month's house rent, simply because the losers were skilful enough to hold the honor cards that were dealt them.

Thus, as in pugilism, the strong point in bridge whist lies in counting your opponents out. There are other and more harrowing ways of doing it, too. When your opponent has made the trump, you may decide that you have the requisite seven tricks in your hand. If you are a sport, you will then "double"—that is, double the amount which the extra trick will win. If your opponents are people of nerve and recklessness, they will "double back," thus quadrupling the values. You are then likely, after a hasty mental inventory of your securities to double once more, thus multiplying the trick by eight, after which the game will proceed with clenched teeth, each trick lost meaning another opera ticket gone. It is under these circumstances that ladies who are otherwise lovely and amiable have been known to whip out a trump after "revoking," and sweep the boards with a cold and haughty air which defies criticism, providing their social positions are sufficiently above those of their victims. Such incidents lead the wrathful losers to make remarks, which in time become rumors, and before any one realizes it another social centre has been shaken to the core.

Just how bridge whist got its name is not generally known. It is possible that it is called "bridge" because so many people get 'cross' over it. It is sometimes called the "bridge" of cusses, to distinguish it from that other famous bridge in Venice.

Bridge is a quaint and ceremonious game as far as the actual playing of cards goes, though often resembling a stock market afterward. It is as full of etiquette as fencing. It doesn't matter what you do to your opponent, but you must do it just so. The cards are dealt just as they are in denaturred whist — 13 to each player. This proves that there is something in the thirteen superstition, for every player immediately remarks about his or her bad luck. When the dealer has finished his nefarious work, he loovs over his hand and figures out which suit is most likely to make his opponents wish they were dead. If he can't find a good suit, or if his partner kicks him under the table, or if he thinks it is more fun to criticize some one else's choice of trumps, he "passes it over" to his partner, compelling her to choose. When the trump has been decided, the eldest hand, which may or may not be long to the youngest player, coyly inquires:

"Shall I play, partner?"

And the latter answers.

"Pray do."

This is positively the only time that prayer and bridge whist get in to the same room together.

When the game really starts, a most important thingh appens. The dealer's partner spreads her cards down on the table, face up, neatly arranged in suits, and retires from the game, leaving her partner to play both hands. This provision has been found necessary from the fact that the game affords 400 times more chances for getting mad than ordinary whist. By giving each player a chance to goo ut on the porch and cool off, by kicking the spindles out of the porch balustrade, the wise inventor of the game has made it possible for four mad people to play through an entire evening without biting each other.

Having everything his own way like the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the dealer goes gaily through the game playing both hands with a confident, "I-know-what-you're going-to-get-next" expression that is most disconcerting. Formerly by-law 94, section 6, prescribed that if the dealer led from his own hand when he should have led from the "dummy" hand he must be penalized one trick. This rule, however, led to so much nervous prostration and temporary insanity that it has recently been suspended from all the bridge whist that is played on the low gear.

When the hand has been played the winners add un their extra tricks, multiply the score properly, and enter it in the proper place on the scorecard. Both sides then quarrel over the question of "honors" or court cards, and the side which wins enters its honor score in another part of the ledger. Thirty points constitutes a game and two games out of three make a rubber. The winner of the rubber gets 100 extra points for its honor score. When the evening's play is over the players retire for refreshments, leaving their secretaries and tellers to post up the books and compute the returns. When the game is played merely for amusement this ceremony is often omitted, the books being balanced once a month.

Bridge has become immensely popular in society circles for several reasons. In the first place, it takes reasons. In the first place, it does away with the necessity for conversation, thus putting the rich and the intelligent on an equality. In the second place, it provides a polite and comparatively painless method of distributing wealth, into which the Socialist would do well to look. In the third place, a good knowledge of bridge gives the player unlimited facilities for showing calm superiority, haughty disdain, amused contempt, and other expressions which distinguish the realthings from the bargain counter brimade.

As a rule a special costume is prescribed for bridge players. In London, however, women are supposed to play the game in tight-fitting costumes with short sleeves. Formerly, when long sleeves were the style, it was found in certain circles that when a society leaderis hand was very poor she generally managed to sweep a few cards off the table with her voluminous cuffs, thus mixing up the game and putting the auditor under a great disadvantage. Long, flowing sleeves were abolished in poker games in the West many years ago, but for a different reason. Whereas the London sleeves got the cards off the tables the Nevada sleeves got them on to the table. The former was harder on the reputation, but the latter was more detrimental to health.

The Rules of Bridge for Blood.

There are two kinds of bridge whist—bridge for fun and bridge for blood. The rules of play in the former are comparatively simple, but in the latter there are as many rules as there are in golf when it is being played by two Scotchmen. In a game for blood where each player is counting on paying grocery bills if the right card is turned nothing is left to chance. The conversational lid is clamped tightly down, and the only words allowed during play are prescribed by the rules. This is necessary, owing to the great chance for signalling between partners. A milk and inoffensive word, like "pshaw" may mean only indignation to the opposition, while to your partner it may mean: "Lead trumps and divide the swag in the alley later." In the highest circles where bridge is played with the passion of the true artist, a wink or a sneeze may be as serious to the winner's or sneezer's reputation as a fifth ace is in another and popular card game.

As a celebrated authority on bridge has remarked, perfection in the game is accomplished slowly and after long effort. One may learn the political game in a year, and in the course of a few years may perfect himself in astronomy, Sanskrit, biology and bridge building. Perfection in bridge, however, is not so easy a matter. It requires not only a knowledge of the 1,111 rules and penalties, the best plays, and the best methods of settling large debts on a small income, but it calls for great skill in deduction and mind-reading. The accomplished player is supposed to read by the play of a card not only the intention of the player but the hand which he holds. Naturally, only long practice will enable you to know when an opponent has put a three-spot of clubs on your ace of trumps she holds four more clubs, is short of spades, will take the second trick in diamonds she wears, and has a hole in the heel of her left stocking. Yet this is child's play to the accomplished bridge player.

Before the beginner attempts to play he should devote at lease four years to a study of the game. The first year should be devoted to learning the rulesand penalties, the conversation of the game, and the meaning of the mysteries as "chicane," "cross ruffing," "eldest hand," "established suit," "guarded honors," "dummy," "grand slam," "little slam," "Yarborough," "Singleton" and the other 99 terms which are used to fog up the game for the beginner anh make him easy meat. At the end of the first year the novice should have acquired such a vocubulary that the ordinary citizen will be able to understand only one word in seven of his bridge conversation.

The Art of Card Talk.

The second year should bespent in the study of bridge from the standpoint of anathematics, telepathy, psychology and astrology. By the end of this year the student should be able to know the results which will follow from leaving a seven of diamonds in the last game of a rubber in an established suit against the dealer in the dark of the moon. He should also be able to diagnose his opponent's hand so well that it will be plain to him, when the latter discards a weak spade on a high heart, on the defensive during the third hand with the score 10 to 8 against him and the thermometer at 78 degrees Fahrenheit, that he is holding protected honors, will lead through if he gets a chance, and that, moreover, in a moment of intense excitement he has broken a suspender button in the rear of his wardrobe. There are 17,876,422 combinations of this sort in bridge, and the good player knows all of them.

The third year should be devoted to the reading and translating of signs. Bridge abounds in signs, which are permissible and highly useful. You are expected to tell from the cards your partner leads whether she expects you to trump, to discard, to lead from your strong suit, or to have a convulsion and delay the game until thetrump is forgotten. You can also tell by signs what your partner thinks of you. When she lifts her eyebrows, after you have played, she means "chump." When she shrugs her shoulders she means "idiot." When she glares pleasantly she means: "Why didn't you return my lead?" When she smiles politely while grinding her teeth she means: "Why do I play with a numskull?" It is not pleasant to the beginner to understand these signs, but it is useful, for as soon as the student has learned all the plays he will not be content until he can use these signs himself.

The fourth or senior year can be spent profitably on the fine points of the game—how to make the novice feel happy and contented when he is losing $5 a minute; how to quarrel with a lady in a gentlemanly manner; how to quote Rule 39 to an opponent in such a manner as to make him feel that when it comes to playing bridge your game is of the cantilever variety, while his is only a culvert. This is also a fine year in which to learn how to play $7,500 worth of bridge a year on a $5,000 salary and come out even or better.

With his education thus finished, the beginner need have no hesitation in entering the most refined and exclusive circles, and mingling freely with the best players without leaving his watch at home. Knowing bridge, he will need to know neither conversation nor manners. In a good stiff game there is no time for either.

A Few Helpful Definitions

These few remarks would not be complete without some definitions of bridge terms which will be found both useful and necessary. The following are the most important:

"Dummy": The leader's partner, your partner.

"To Ruff": To trump.

To "Cross Ruff": To make your partner cross by trumping.

"Grand Slam": To show temper in putting down a card.

"Revoke": A riot signal, produced by refusing to follow suit when you have it.

"Finesse": To economize in spots when taking a trick.

"Pass it over": During the game, to allow your partner to name the trump. After the game, to settle up.

"Eldest Hand": The hand which is dealt first.

"Old Hand": The player who comes out ahead.

"Loge All": Something which happens at the beginning of a game and never again.

"Odd Trick": To play something of which your partner does not approve.

"Points": What you make money on, the same as in Wall Street.

Demonstration Stations Needed

(Nor-West Farmer.)

We have recently been impressed in a special way with advantage that would accrue to our prairie agriculture through the establishment of a few of the more important centres, of small demonstration stations. In establishing these, our provincial governments would find plenty of precedent. In a recent issue we published an article in which reference was made to the way in which the county farms in Iowa are being used for trial and demonstration purposes; in Minnesota there are now about twelve or fifteen trial stations given over entirely, or at least almost entirely, to trial and demonstration work in horticulture; and in some of the provinces of our own Dominion demonstration work is carried on at certain centres.

Perhaps no better evidence is needed that the time is ripe for the undertaking of this sort of work in our own country that was furnished less than a month ago, when so many thousand of our Saskatchewan farmers took advantage of the excursions to Indian Head. It is true that the pleasures of a "day off" and the opportunity of a cheap trip have their effect in helping to swell the crowd that comes out on an occasion of this sort; but we are of the opinion that the really impelling the five or six thousand who were present was the honest desire to learn from the work at the government farm many lessons that might be put intt practical use at home.

But, good as may be the annual excursions to our large experimental farms, it is an absolute impossibility for the average man, with his natural limitations of observation and memory, to grasp and retain any considerable part of the great bulk of information that a close study of the work at such a place should convey. At such a place he may get one hundred ideas in a day, but how many of them will be left, clear, and unconfused, when perhaps six or eight or ten months afterwards he might have occasion to put them into practice?

What we believe should be done—and we have on previous occasions offered about the same suggestion—is to have our provincial government establish at as many of the principal centres as possible small stations where there would be demonstrated to our farmers, close to their own homes, a number of the more important discoveries of these larger establishments. In all kinds of educational work the advantage of teaching by demonstration rather than by mere assertion is becoming more and more recognized, and it is very evident to anyone that many facts that could easily be made to take living shape before the eyes of all who wished to study them would soon die a natural death and be buried beneath the accumulated dust of the years if their perpetuation was to depend entirely upon the publicity possible through a set of government blue books.

Such stations as we have suggested need only be a few acres in extent. They could contain named plots of say half a dozen of the best varieties of each of our cereals they should show samples of all the grasses and clovers adapted to the district; the advantages of good as against poor seed should be evident; there should be a good demonstration of vegetable and root crop growing, and the hardy trees, shrubs fruits, and perennial flowers should be well shown off.

For information along all the lines that we have suggested in the last paragraph there is going to be in the near future a much greater demand than has yet been evident. The campaign that has been carried on for some years by the agricultural press and through the farmers' institute shows more evidences than ever before of bearing fruits. In the older parts of the country at least the days of mere pioneering are fast passing away, and our agriculture is entering a period of evolution out of which it shall emerge with many changes, and we hope, much improved, on a much more permanent basis and a much more profitable vocation. In this process of evolution—in this enlargement of the scope of our agricultural activities—there is much that is now ascertained fact thatwill have to be demonstrated openlywhere it may be seen by the masses; and we believe that a series of demonstations, such as we have suggested, would render good service, when to response to its preaching of better farming methods, the people answer the government by saying: "Show us a sign."

Swimming the Channel

One of these fine mornings we shall wake up to find that a man has swum across the English Channel. His name is likely to be Burgess, or Holbein, or Wolffe, or Rees. These men are probably the greatest long distance swimmers living and with a little luck any of them is likely to duplicate the feat with which Capt. Webb startled the world 33 years ago last week. Webb later on lost his life in the Whirlpool Rapids at Niagara Falls, and thus perished the greatest swimmer of history. Ever since Webb swam from Dover to Calais in 21 hours 45 minutes, other swimmers have been attempting to equal his performances. Several times they have come almost within hailing distance of the French coast, but invariably they have been carried back by the tides.

The Tremendous Tides.

Indeed, the real problem, of the enterprise is the ebb and flow of the water. The distance between land and land at one point is only 21 miles, and there are probably hundreds of swimmers who can go that far. It is impossible, however, for any man to swim the English Channel as the crow flies. He must be content to be swept for miles out of his course, and to tack across. Burgess who reached within a mile of the French coast a few days ago, swam 50 miles. He was accompanied by a party of friends and newspaper men in boats, and they all agreethat until the swimmer encountered the strong ebb tides along the French coast it seemed certain that hewould succeed. Judging by a chart published in the Morning Leader, Burgess must have swum within a couple of miles of the French coast for 10 miles, attempting time after time to battle through the tide that swept along, barring him out as effectually as though it were a floating bulwark.

Fighting the Tides.

Indeed, the feature of the wonderful performance was Burgess' magnificent efforts in racing to make certain points by a certain time of the tides. A chart was displayed to him several times over the side of the boat, and the swimmer, who has studied Channel tides and conditions for years, would calculate the chances of success. He had a long, hard race from Folkestone to get round the Varne Buoy. This accomplished, he set out in a new direction to weather the ridge sandbank a few miles further across the Channel while the tide was slack. Hour after hour he swam through the broken sea with long, sweeping strokes, which scarcely ever varied from 26 to the minute. He scarcely paused in his struggle except for a minute or so to take some hot chocolate or beef extract. For hours the lights along the French coast twinkled in the eyes of the little party, and already cheers for the great swimmer was sent up.

Swimming Fifty Miles.

But the wind freshened, and about four o'clock in the morning the flood tide set in, evidently the offset from the Boulogne breakwater, and Burgess was swept along for miles, swimming parallel to the coast. It then became plain that he could not succeed, and at 24 past 5 o'clock in the morning he gave up and pulled himself over the side of the boat that accompanied him. He had been in the water for 20 hours 11 minutes, and had covered 50 miles. He returned to Dover, and when a London newspaper man sought an interview with him six hours after he had finished his wonderful feat he found Burgess again in the water, good naturedly teaching a young bather how to swim. He should know. Burgess is confident of success, and calculates that if he had entered the water half an hour later he would have found the tide on the French coast settling, and could have landed in France in about 15 hours. He will shortly make another attempt.

A Swimmer's Record

T. W. Burgess is a Yorkshireman, and has made ten attempts to swim across the channel, with the following results:

Sept. 7, 1904—Retired 6 miles from France.

July 23, 1105.—Retired 4½ miles from France.

Aug. 9, 1905—Retired after 14 3-4 hours.

Aug. 24, 1905—Retired after eight hours 5 minutes.

Aug. 26, 1905—Retired after nine hours.

Sept. 11, 1905.—Retired after 3 hours 7 minutes.

Aug. 18, 1906—Retired after eight hours 49 minutes.

Aug. 28, 1906—Retired after six hours.

Aug. 30 and 31, 1906—Retired after covering 42 miles in 18 hours 1 minute.

His last attempt was over the route traversed by Capt. Webb. He now thinks that if three strong swimmers set out on the same course at slightly different points, to allow for tricks of the tide, one of them at least, would be sure to reach the opposite coast in about 16 hours.

The Greatest Swimmers

Montagu Holbein, is another swimmer who expects to make the crossing this Summer. Recently he swam 50 miles in The Thames River, and finished strong. He has also come within hailing distance of the French coast. So has Jabez Wolffe, while Jack Rees, the Welsh swimmer, is capable of swimming 40 miles or more on a good day. Long distance swimming is one department of athletics which the Old Countrymen occupy without serious rivalry.

J. J. Carrick, M.P.P., of Port Arthur, reports that there is a great deal of dissatisfaction in the constituency of Port Arthur and Thunder Bay with the operation of the Aylesworth election act. The time allowed for preparation of the lists has been reduced to fifteen days, which is entirely inadequate. The thirteen enumerators appointed by the judges, are, strangely enough, all active Liberal partisans, and one of them is an employee of James Conmee, the member for the constituency. These men must do in one month the same work as occupied the provincial ennumerators three months previous to the Ontario elections in June. The secret of the situation according to Mr. Carrick is Jas. Conmee's desire to enroll as voters the two thousand men or there abouts employed on the construction of the railway.

W. S. Calvert, chief government whip, has again been nominated by the Liberals of West Middlesex. Mr. Calvert is already actively campaigning and, as in duty bound, he declares himself sure of re-election. His opponent is Robert McLaughlin, a gentleman who has not hitherto been engaged in political life.

Andrew Broder, M. P., (Dundas), will make a trip to the western provinces, where he will join in the Conservative campaign which is bringing before the people the facts of the invasions of the public domain permitted by the present Ottawa government. He will assist M. S. McCarthy, M.P., of Calgary, and R. Lake, M.P., of Qu'Appelle.

Walkerton, Ont., Sept. 4.—South Bruce Conservatives today nominated J. Donnely of Pinkerton, as their candidate.

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 3.—Conservatives in Richmond, N.B., today nominated R. Ferguson, of Lordoise and in Inverness they nominated Dr. R. C. McLeod of North Sydney.

Lachute, Q., Sept. 3.—At the Liberal convention held in the court house today to nominate a candidate to contest the county of Argenteuil, Mr. P. R. McGibbon, a local lumberman, was unanimously chosen as the standard bearer.

St. Stephen, N.B., Sept. 3.—G. W. Ganong M.P., was today nominated by the Conservatives of Charlotte county for the commons.

The following nominations took place in Ontario on Aug. 29th.

Peel Liberals—E. G. Graham.

North Essex Conservatives—O. E. Fleming.

Brant Conservatives—T. P. Numan.

Glengarry Liberals—J. A. McMillan.

The Conservatives of North York want Hon. J. J. Foy to run for the federal house.

The School Board

A special meeting of the School Board was held last evening in the City Hall, every member being present.

A letter from the department of education pointed out that the authorization to borrow $30,000 by debentures, granted May 25, 1907, had expired in May of the present year and that in consequence proceedings would have to be repeated. After some discussion it was decided to drop the $20,000 and a by-law was passed, subject to the approval of the rate-payers for the raising of $40,000. It was explained that the $20,000 would not be sufficient in any case, and another supplementary issue would have been required.

THANKSGIVING OCT 19

Ottawa, Sept. 4.—It is expected that Thanksgiving day will be fixed for Monday, Oct. 19. The date will be definitely announced in the course of a few days.

A DAY'S SPORT.

A half dozen young fellows had a furiously exciting holiday yesterday. With all kinds of guns, wading parapernalia and determination they went out to Seeley's ranch to get duck to provision a half dozen families. A large rig was taken to accomodate the killing.

But the duck were sly.

After a day's desperate work and a few minutes hot chase on foot they got their hands on a lame duck.

The start for home was too late to do the trip by daylight. After the excitement of the day the tired young men got tangled in the wire fences and had a night of it on the prairie.

At 6 this morning they wandered into town half-frozen, not caring a —— who got the duck. Probably one of the boys will display it in a store window.

Gentlemen:—

"Some time ago I began to lose flesh and failed every day until I had to quit work. My physicians and all my friends said I had contracted consumption. I failed from 165 pounds down to 119. I was advised to go to the Rockies or to the coast. I went to both places under heavy expense. I continued to fail, and was advised by the doctors to come home as nothing more could be done for me. Hope seemed to have left me.

"I tried Psychine and since starting its use I have gained from 119 to 141 pounds. I have used $10.00 worth of the medicine. I am a well man and I cannot say too much in praise of Psychine. The strongest recommendation would be weak in view of the fact that I believe it has saved my life. It is without doubt the best remedy for run-down conditions and weak lungs.

"I sincerely hope and trust that you will continue your good work of saving run down people and consumptives from the grave. Wishing you and Psychine continued success, I remain, one of Psychine's best friends."

VOL. 6. No. 2. MEDICINE HAT, ALTA., CANADA, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 15 1908. $1.50 PER ANNUM

One on Us

Chicago Record-Herald Man Has a Laugh at Our Expense

The first of the articles written about us by the magazine and newspaper men who visited us a few weeks ago has come out. Those who heard Richard H. Little, the leader of the visitors, speak at the banquet will realize how much pleasure he got out of the article below. Mr. Little's keen sense of humor served him well, and although he obviously follows Mark Twain and his "Christopher Columbo" the genuine, original humor make his hit at us most readable.

Medicine Hat is, as every one knows, where the weather is made. Also it is the common belief in these United States of America that Medicine Hat is about a mile and a half the other side of the north pole, and so cold that the inhabitants look upon ice cream as hot consomme.

Naturally we were surprised that we did not go north from Edmonton to Medicine Hat. Instead of that we came south and then east and found Medicine Hat on the Canadian Pacific railroad only about sixty miles north of the boundary line between the United States and Canada. By that time Explorer Tyrrell had left us. He did not say so, but we feared that it was because hardened explorer of the frozen north though he was, he dared not penetrate the icy perils of Medicine Hat.

Ideas of Cold Melted.

We were greatly surprised that, although it was only August, we ran into Medicine Hat without a snow plow in front of the engine.

But there was nothing like that. The committee of Medicine Hatters on the station platform wore the conventional sack suit garb, and his worship, the mayor of Medicine Hat, looked not unlike his worship, the mayor of Saskatoon, or his worship the mayor of Edmonton, or his worship, the mayor of Calgary. In place of dogsleds they had regular automobiles and there were no Eskimos and no performing seals. It was a great disappointment. Also the sun shone down brightly and several citizens lounged about in shirt sleeves, and in a drug store across the street a big red sign proclaimed:

"Here is the Place Where You Cool Off! Ice-Cold Soda Water."

It was hard to believe we were in Medicine Hat. As we alighted from the train his worship, the mayor of Medicine Hat, and the prominent citizens and members of the Medicine Hat board of trade handed us large folders on which were printed in big black letters:

"Medicine Hat, the Town That was Born Lucky."—Kipling.

The folders contained reprints in full and numerous extracts of an article Mr. Kipling had written, and which was published in an American magazine not many weeks ago. Mr. Kipling seems to have been favorably impressed with Medicine Hat and Medicine Hat had certainly been very favorably impressed with Mr. Kipling.

"Well," said one of the committee, "I suppose you want first of all to see our natural gas wells, Mr. Kipling thought they were the most wonderful thing he had ever seen in his life. He said: "Medicine Hat has 'All Hell' for a Basement.' Jolly good, that."

"I want to see the weather man and watch him make weather," I said.

The chairman of the committee laughed.

"My dear fellow," he said, "Mr. Kipling did not go to see the weather man."

That settled it. Mr. Kipling did not go to see the weather man. We went over to observe the natural gas wells.

On the way the committee presented us with copies of the magazine which had published the remarkable words of Mr. Kipling. Then they gave us little folders on which only this wonderful quotation was printed:

"Medicine Hat Has All Hell For a Basement.—Rudyard Kipling."

"What do you think of that?" said the committee proudly.

"I don't think it was ladylike of Mr. Kipling to use such language," I observed primly.

The committee looked around at me and seemed pained.

We saw the natural gas wells and were told how it was hot enough to melt copper in a few minutes and that there was enough to run all the factories in Chicago if they were picked up and carried through the air and set down in Medicine Hat.

"Wonderful, is it not?" said his worship, the mayor. "Kipling said that Medicine Hat has—"

"Can we see the weather man now? I ventured timidly.

"My dear fellow," said the committee in chorus, "we are now going to Medicine Hat club."

"I want to see the weather man," I insisted.

Bow to Honored Precedent.

"Mr. Kipling went to the Medicine Hat club from here," said his worship, the the mayor. We went to the Medicine Hat club.

At the club the members removed their hats and stood in silence around a piece of paper in a frame. I thought it was some kind of shrine. We approached reverently and found written on the paper these words:

"'In Medicine Hat I rode in an automobile.—Rudyard Kipling.'"

"It's his own handwriting," said one member of the committee in hushed tones.

"Can I write 'So did I' under that and sign my name," I asked.

The committee was embarrassed.

"You see, old chap," said one of the committee, "that was Kipling."

"Suppose it was," I said, "I can write as plain as he can and a good deal plainer.'

"But, my dear fellow," said the citizen of Medicine Hat, fidgeting nervously, "Mr. Kipling, you know, of course, he's the greatest writer in the world."

"Who says so?" I demanded.

"Why, my dear fellow," said the citizen of Medicine Hat, "everyone says so."

"Well," I demanded "what has he written?"

The citizen of Medicine Hat and three other citizens stared at me in horror.

"What," they gasped, "you don't know what Kipling has written?"

"No," I said hotly, "I never heard of him. Who is he? What paper does he write for? Is he an American or German or Canadian or what?"

The committee grew pale and gasped for breath.

"Never—heard—of—Kipling, wot?' said the head committeeman in gurgling tones. The other committeemen held onto each other for support and said: "He never heard of Kipling."

I grew indignant.

"No," I said. "I never did. Show him to me. Is he the editor of your paper here in Medicine Hat? Is he a press agent? Does he write for the magazines or is he compiler of the government land reports? Who is this fellow Kipling, anyhow?"

The committee only looked hopelessly at me and murmured: "He never heard of Kipling."

Not Jim Kipling of Omaha.

"Well, wait a minute," I said. "You don't mean Jim Kipling from Omaha? I used to know a family of Kiplings or something like that out there. Jim Kipling used to write pieces for the paper. But the last time I heard of him he was in the penitentiary. You don't mean, surely Jim Kipling?"

No, I could see from the faces of the committee they didn't mean Jim Kipling. It was some other Kipling I pondered deeply and then turned to ask if this was the Kipling that used to make a tooth paste down in Chicago. But the committee was gone. I had been deserted.

I was alone the rest of the day in Medicine Hat. Nobody took me out in the automobiles. Nobody invited me to the club. Nobody took me back to look at the natural gas. Wherever I went I was a parian, a social outcast. I felt like a leper walking down the street and ringing a bell and wailing: "Unclean, unclean, unclean."

Men turned aroud and faced the other way when I approached. Mothers called their children in from the street. The dogs turned tail and scuttled under the houses as I came near them.

Everywhere they pointed at me the finger of scorn and I heard the words repeated, "He never heard of Kipling."

And when, neglected and alone, I clambered on the train that night the policeman on the platform pointed me out to the conductor and whispered behind his hand:

"That's 'im. That's the mon. 'E never 'eard o' Kipling, gor blime me; 'e never 'eard o' Kipling."

Death of Old-Timer

Well-known Railwayman Dies Suddenly

Heart Disease the Cause

The death of John McGary, one of the old-time railwaymen of the city took place suddenly at the Cosmopolitan Hotel on Sunday at 3.15 p. m.

Mr. McGary had come in on No. 96 from Calgary apparently as well as usual. While in the city he stays at the Cosmopolitan, and from 7.30 a. m. when the train arrived until about 10 he sat on the verandah smoking and chatting. Going to bed at that time nothing was heard of him until noon when "Shorty" one of the bartenders upon passing the room was called by deceased to get another blanket as he felt cold. The blanket was procured and a hot drink taken up.

Shortly afterward "Curly" was summoned to the room by McGary who said he didn't feel well and wondered what was the matter with himself. "Curly" got him a drink of lemonade and at the same time called up Dr. Boyd. Going up later he found McGary perspiring very freely his underclothing being saturated with perspiration and his face very wet. Another drink was brought up but McGary complained of the gas affecting his heart.

"Curly" left him with the glass in his hand and went down to meet the doctor. Together they went up to the room and found McGary lying on his left side, dead. Artificial respiration was tried but with no effect, the doctor giving the cause of death as heart failure.

Deceased was 43 years of age, and unmarried. He had been railroading in this city for about 20 years and was one of the best-known railroaders in the West. He was a very large man, weighing 310 pounds, when weighed only a few days ago. Lately he has missed a few runs on account of not feeling well, the heat having affected such a large man.

His sister and brother came up yesterday from Maple Creek.

The funeral took place last night from W. H. Patterson & Co.'s undertaking establishment, the body being taken to Maple Creek.

The pall bearers were:—J. H. Millican, Thos. White, W. R. Kelly, J. R. Dalton, W. G. Niblock, T. C. Blatchford.

CORRESPONDENCE

(The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents, nor does it necessarily agree with them.)

Editor of The Times.

Could you give me any reason why the Agricultural Society, which is supported by public money, has let the contract for the new building which it is erecting, without calling for tenders? There are a dozen contractors in the city, most of whom have been supporting the Agricultural Society for years, but now when there is any work to do we have no chance to get it. Is it possible that the Agricultural Society is spending its money only among friends? Is it politics or patronage.

A CONTRACTOR.

Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—Please insert in your paper my thanvs to the people who have subscribed to the uniform fund for the Medicine Hat Cadet Corps. We have received forty five ($45.00) dollars up to date, and we need a little more, the uniforms will cost $4.00 a suit and we have 65 boys enlisted, all equipped with rifles and belts and bayonets, and I can say they are well deserving of good help along. I am having drill every night this week, and any person wishing to see the boys drill, will have a good chance between six and eight each night.

I would also like you to accept subscriptions for the fund, if it would be convenient to you to do so.

W. J. REID,
Lieut. 21st A. H.
Inst. Cadet Corps.

Editor—The Times will be pleased to receive subscriptions to this worthy cause. Acknowledgements will be made in the columns of the paper.

MINING ENGINEERS

The Mining Engineers' Institute of Canada is on a tour through the Dominion, in compay with members of the profession from Europe, and on Sunday, 40 leading engineers of Canada, England, France and Germany, spent an hour in the city. The Board of Trade secretary and Mayor Cousins, Ald. Morrow and F. L. Crawford, met the party, who were afterwards conducted through the roundhouse and shown the various applications of our product, by Mr. Winters.

Mr. James Rae was a visitor to Lethbridge yesterday.

BASEBALL ON FRIDAY

The last and best baseball match of the season takes place on Friday at 3 p.m. The long delayed struggle for the city championship is going to be pulled off, when the C.P.R.'s will meet the Fire Brigade consisting of the pick of the Fire boys and Bachelors. As the C.P.R. has beaten Calgary, this match will decide the championship of Alberta.

The admission will be 25 cents and there should be a rattling game. Most of the merchants will let their clerks go, and a big crowd is expected.

The City Fathers

At the adjourned meeting of the City Council last evening there were present: The Mayor, Aldermen Baker, Morrow, Forster, Tweed, Huckvale.

By-law covering the inspection of bakeries, was introduced by Ald. Baker and considered in committee. The by-law provides for penalties for using deleterious material in the manufacture of bread, the right of entry is given the health officer or inspector or the chief of police, to all bakeries; bread vans must be covered or the bread covered in some way. The committee reported progress and the by-law will be redrafted to make one penalty clause applicable to breaches of the various sections, and a clause will be added fixing the weight of a loaf at 1½ pounds or 2 pounds.

By-law to prohibit spitting in public places was passed. A penalty not exceeding $50 or 30 days imprisonment may be inflicted for breach of the by-law, which will come intoforce on October 1. Spitting on any sidewalk, station platform, or in any public building or place to which the public resort, except in a proper receptacle is thus penalized.

By-law for raising $15,000 by debentures, for completion of waterworks plant and making of connections was gived a first and second reading, and committees report adopted subject to verification of figures of indebtedness. Plebiscite will be taken on October 9.

The solicitor wrote with regard to the proposed sewer by-law advising the council that the raising of the $27,000 by debentures was not legal, as it only covered part of a work, it was not possible to issue debentures for a partial system. If the septic tank were included the undertaking could be considered a complete work.

The power of organized labor made itself felt in the council chamber and won a sharp victory. A communication from C. A. Krauss stated that if the dog and cattle pound were not removed by Thursday next the whole of the volunteer members of the fire brigade would resign in a body. A long and at times somewhat piquant discussion followed. Ald. Tweed thought the brigade would be perfectly justified unless the pound were removed by Thursday, in going on strike. He would like to see them go on strike for once. The matter had kept being referred to the license and police committee all summer, and they had reported in favor of doing nothing. Ald. Baker supported the chairman of the fire committee, remarking that the brigade had been kicking about the nuisance for a year. A motion was carried that the location be changed (below the Canneries was suggested as a new location) and that the carrying out of the change be left in the hands of the license and police committee.

A communication from the Canada Foundry Co. was read pressing for payment for new engines. This was referred back to the water commissioners to get a report on the engines.

Mr. Ansley wrote asking to hire a hoisting engine for two weeks' if possible with an engineer supplied. After Mr. Ansley had explained at length his reasons for wishing to borrow an engine for coal mining purposes, the matter was referred to the water commissioners.

Ald. Huckvale had received a verbal application from an advertisement man who wanted to paint the Athletic Grounds fence. It was not considered desirable to disfigure the fence with advertisements and the application was turned down by the council.

A communication from a firm at present in Moose Jaw, making enquiries with regard to power price, will be dealt with at the next regular meeting. The firm is engaged in manufacturing grain stooking machinery and will employ about 100 hands.

Enquiry were made whether any steps were being taken to ascertain the cause of the typhoid in the city, and suggested that the council request the provincial sanitary inspector to visit the city and endeavor to find out the cause. A motion to that effect was carried and it was stated that the Board of Health had already taken similar steps.

Ald. Tweed called attention to several instances of the water services being used after hours.

NARROW ESCAPE.

On Saturday night Dr. Smith met with a rather nasty automobile accident. He was driving up to the station with Dr. McKim of Calgary, when being blinded for the moment by the light from one of the platform lights, he drove into a telephone guy rope. The rope struck him across the face and he was badly bruised: the dash-board of the car was broken and it sustained minor injuries.

Dr. Smith was up and around on Sunday, his injuries not having incapacitated him in any way.

Only Three Glasses

And The Trouble That Followed

Shortly before the witching hour of mid-night on Saturday a much alarmed citizen rang up the mounted police from somewhere near the flour mill, and made a strong appeal for a constable to be sent down post haste. A man in a neighboringhouse was exercising his vocal powers in a most unorthodox manner, and the informant was convinced that some awful crime was being perpetrated. Inspector Parker immediately sent a couple of constables to the scene of action, and while the latter were on their way the telephone bell was ringing almost continuously; every few seconds the distressful plea for police aid was repeated.

Arrived on the spot the constables (Chalkley and Mollison) found a man named Martin Jordan in a highly excited state, and bawling at the top of his voice in Esperanto. A number of women in the house hung onto him, endeavoring to prevent his arrest.

At the barracks Jordan was placed in the cell with another prisoner, but the latter's efforts at pacification proved of no avail and eventual ly the foreigner had to be removed to a separate cell in the court house building, where he could indulge in a heated argument with the bars and walls. On Sunday morning he had exhausted himself, and, brought before the Inspector, he dropped on his knees in abject apology for his conduct of the previous night. He couldn't speak English, but through the interpreter it was ascertained at the hearing before Inspector Parker on Monday morning, that he was a brickyard worker, that the only trouble with him was that he had got drunk, that he has never tasted drink before and it had made him crazy. He had drunk in all three glasses of beer that evening!

Martin was fined $2 and costs and left the barracks, resolving, it is to be hoped, to join the new prohibition party, and imbibe nothing stronger than ice-cream soda for the future.

It is now almost certain that the date of the general election will be either Wednesday, Oct. 28th, or Thursday, Oct. 29th. An announcement of dissolution of parliament will be made tomorrow.

Union Picnic

There wasn't a man in town who didn't wish he could take in the picnic last Saturday with nothing more serious to bother him than the relation of his capacity to the size of the baskets. Almost every youngster in town, up to 75 years, was in attendance, and those who weren't look upon it as a Visitation.

Five cars of Presbyterian and Methodist children and many of the young and old friends were carried out to Johnston's Grove by the C.P.R. Here the entire day was spent in games—what wasn't spent in eating. The Toronto St. baseball team beat the Montreal St. boys by a score of 11 to 0, Morris and Lussier as battery for the winners doing big things. Then there was football and sports consisting of running and jumping.

The train brought the old and the young kids back by six o'clock.

ALBERTA THE BEST.

That financial conditions in Alberta are as good, if not better than in any other part of the continent is the opinion of Dr. Smith, who returned last week from a tourthrough the Eastern States. In New York, the doctor stated to The Times representative, the business world is still suffering from intense depression; though a slow and steady improvement is going on. In all the American cities which he visited the some conditions prevailed, and one of the most striking features wasthe enormous depreciation in land values which has followed the period of inflation. In Minneapolis and in Milwaukee the doctor saw blocks right in the heart of the business district which were drawing rentals no higher than are paid on Toronto or Main or South Railway Streets in Medicine Hat. As a matter of fact to anyone who has first-hand knowledge of the American depression, it is evident that the people of the Prairie Provinces have been peculiarly fortunate, and have enjoyed comparative prosperity all through the bad times.

Socialist for Medicine Hat

(Lethbridge Herald)

R. P. Pettipiece, organizer of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, and a leading Socialist, has accepted the Socialist nomination for the Medicine Hat riding.

Word to this effect was received by the local Socialists today. They offered Mr. Pettipiece the nomination shortly after he addressed a public meeting here.

Mr. Pettipiece resides in Vancouver where he conducts a labor paper.

POLITICS

One of the most interesting fights in the coming campaign, thought one of the most hopeless from the Liberal standpoint, is Vancouver City, where Fighting Joe Martin has announced that he will run as an independent. Joe will put ginger in the campaign if nothing else and it can be taken for granted that the machine Liberals with ex-Governor McInnes as their candidate will stop at nothing in their attacks upon the man who has refused to continue his support of Laurier since his desertion of the famous policy of 1893.

Joe has recently returned from England, where he addressed the International Trade Congress in London. He took occasion to open the eyes of England as to the Laurier government. Among other things he said:

"Never in all the history of Canada has there been as much corruption in public life as in the last twelve years. It has permeated every department of the government and it is safe to say that much the greater part of the time of Parliament is taken up with investigating charges of graft and corruption against department officers and ministers of the crown.

"One can well understand that under the very best administration there may be cases of wrong-doing on the part of officials of departments, but it would naturally be expected when charges of this kind were made in Parliament and committees appointed for their investigation that the government of the day would lend every assistance in their power to expose and punish the wrong-doers.

"So deep-rooted, however, is the corruption in public life in Canada, that we find the government employing every means at their hand to suppress and nullify the investigations of these committees.

"Witnesses refuse to answer the questions, and when the Conservative members of the committee ask for their committal for contempt, the Liberal majority refuses to exercise its power.

"Members of the Government become enormously rich while in office without any apparent means of enrichment, except the power placed in their hands by virtue of their positions.

"When these matters are referred to in Parliament the ministers in question make no explanation whatever of the enormous riches which they have accumulated, but defy the opposition to lay charges against them and prove them."

Vancouver, Sept. 9.—Conservatives tonight nominated George H. Cowan city solicitor, as the next to contest this city in the next federal election.

Victoria, Sept. 9.—G. H. Barnard was tonight nominated by the Conservatives.

Antingonish, N.S., Sept. 9.—Antigonish Liberals nominated Wm. Chisholm, M. P., for the commons.

Picton, Ont., Sept. 9....H. C. Mullen, B.A., a prominent citizen and ex-mayor, announces himself as a candidate for the commons in Prince Edward county as independent.

Montreal, Sept. 9.—Two Mountain Liberals renominated J. A. C. Ethier for the house of commons.

Armprior, Sept. 9.—South Renfrew Liberals nominated Thos. Low, lumberman, Renfrew. This is a surprise, as turning down A. A. Wright, their representative in the house for the past eight years.

Pembroke, Sept. 9.—North Renfrew Liberals nominated Henry Barr to oppose the sitting member, Gerald White.

The Liberals of Argenteuil have nominated P. R. McGibbon.

The line-up of Liberals in N. B. at present, is as follows:

St. John City
St. John City and Co., Pugsley.
Kings'Albert, McAllister.
Queens-Sunbury, McLean.
York,
Carleton, Carvell.
Victoria-Madawaska, Michaud.
Restigouche, Reid.
Glouchester, Turgeon.
Northumberland, Loggie.
Kent, LeBlanc.
Westmorland, Emmerson.
Charlotte, Todd.

Ottawa, Sept. 7.—E. B. Devlin, M. P., was nominated by the Wright county Liberals, as their candidate.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 7.—A. C. Boyce was re-nominated unanimously by the Soo Conservatives to-day.

Montreal, Sept. 10.—Following additional nominations occurred yesterday:

Queens Shelburne, Hon. W. S. Fielding, Liberal.
Cape Breton, J. W. Madden, Conservative.

Renfrew, Ont., Sept. 11.—John Mackay, mayor of Renfrew, was nominated today by the South Renfrew Conservatives.

Montreal, Sept. 11—Roche Lancelot last night received the nomination for St. Edouard in the Liberal interests.

Alisa Crag, Ont., Sept. 11— The North Middlesex Liberals nominated Alex. Smith, of Alisa Craig, today.

Railway North of Medicine Hat

C. N. R. buildings from Regina to Calgary

In Regina Wm. McKenzie, President of the C. N. R. announced the other day that his railway will immediately proceed to build a linefrom Regina to Calgary. The line will start from the Regina and Prince Albert branch, about 40 miles north of Regina and run straight west to Calgary, passing about 50 miles north of this city, through a large tract of land that has been untouched on account of poor railway facilities.

A resident of the Red Deer says the surveying parties were through that district a few weeks ago.

The strikers have received word from headquarters that there is some thing in the air which may lead to a settlement. No definite information is given.

A lot of smoke from a smudge fire opposite the Toronto Street school got on the nerves of one of the teachers that she rang up the fire department.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Hara have returned from spending a couple of weeks camping in the Cypress Hills. They have nothing but good to say of the outing in the picture spot of the Medicine Hat district.

Dr. Barrow, the provincial sanitary inspector, came into the city this morning in response to a request sent by Dr. Boyd. He will look into the causes of the typhoid trouble.

The sad death took place at Gleichen last week of Stewart Wallace, the four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wallace. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wallace and their family have spent the summer at the camp near Gleichen where Mr. Wallace is surveying on the Souther Alberta Land Co.'s irrigation ditch. Stewart was only ill five days. The funeral took place from the home of his Grandfather, Mr. J. H. Wallace of Lethbridge.

Lethbridge Herald:—Warden Johnston, assistant postmaster at Medicine Hat, is visiting his sister, Mrs. D. May for a day or two.

A petition has been circulated requesting the school board to submit the proposed $40,000 debenture issue to the ratepayers.

A horse attached to a rig returning from a picnic on Sunday broke through a fence opposite the Catholic Church. The horse went on its head, broke the shafts, and proceeded to distribute the occupants of the buggy along the road. Nothing was hurt but the buggy and the city treasury.

Mrs. Millar, "Rose Cottage" was the hostess at a leap year tea given in honor of the Misses Millar, on Saturday from four to six. The novel feature of the occasion was that the honors were done by young men under the leadership of Mrs. Nelson. The tea room, decorated with white astors, sweet peas and similax, drew many compliments from the young ladies. Mr. Inwood received with the ladies of the house and conducted the guests to the tea room. Messrs. Dew and Hansuld poured tea. Messrs. Dunham and Holmes assisted Mr. Parker in answering the door. Musical selections were provided by the Misses Parker, Barreau and Millar and Mr. Inwood and added to the keen enjoyment of the unusual event.

SETTLING UP THE NORTH.

Last week J. W. Imes from the Red Deer district was in the city attending to the pre-empting of a tract of land in that district.

While travelling in the north district Mr. Imes came across a 1,000 acre tract of blue joint hay and immediately took steps to secure it. Himself, his son, and a friend have taken the whole tract and claim they have the richest bit of land in Alberta. Mr. Imes states that he has been all over Alberta looking for such a piece of land. The soil is black and rich and will burn when dried. There are four inches of solid grass roots and water was struck at 18 feet. The location is 75 miles north and 20 miles west.

There are several rich grassloughs in that district, but none that he has seen are as good as his. The new C.N.R. will run through not far from the property.

Mr. Imes is undertaking an irrigation scheme near the Red Deer.

School Board

There was a long meeting of the School Board last evening, which The Times is unable to report in full in today's paper.

Polling on the $40,000 debentures was fixed for October 6th.

C. W. Webb submitted his resignation, stating that it was his intention to go into college.

Miss Simpson applied for the maximum salary. The board while expressing appreciation of her services, could not see their way clear to establish a precedent.

The principals report was submitted and adopted.

In response to communications from the bricklayers and carpenter's unions it was decided to insert a fair wage clause in the contract for the new high school building.

V. C. James wrote urging promptness in connection with the bonds.

VOL. 6. No. 2. MEDICINE HAT, ALTA., CANADA, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 15 1908. $1.50 PER ANNUM

One on Us

Chicago Record-Herald Man Has a Laugh at Our Expense

The first of the articles written about us by the magazine and newspaper men who visited us a few weeks ago has come out. Those who heard Richard H. Little, the leader of the visitors, speak at the banquet will realize how much pleasure he got out of the article below. Mr. Little's keen sense of humor served him well, and although he obviously follows Mark Twain and his "Christopher Columbo" the genuine, original humor make his hit at us most readable.

Medicine Hat is, as every one knows, where the weather is made. Also it is the common belief in these United States of America that Medicine Hat is about a mile and a half the other side of the north pole, and so cold that the inhabitants look upon ice cream as hot consomme.

Naturally we were surprised that we did not go north from Edmonton to Medicine Hat. Instead of that we came south and then east and found Medicine Hat on the Canadian Pacific railroad only about sixty miles north of the boundary line between the United States and Canada. By that time Explorer Tyrrell had left us. He did not say so, but we feared that it was because hardened explorer of the frozen north though he was, he dared not penetrate the icy perils of Medicine Hat.

Ideas of Cold Melted.

We were greatly surprised that, although it was only August, we ran into Medicine Hat without a snow plow in front of the engine.

But there was nothing like that. The committee of Medicine Hatters on the station platform wore the conventional sack suit garb, and his worship, the mayor of Medicine Hat, looked not unlike his worship, the mayor of Saskatoon, or his worship the mayor of Edmonton, or his worship, the mayor of Calgary. In place of dogeleds they had regular automobiles and there were no Eskimos and no performing seals. It was a great disappointment. Also the sun shone down brightly and several citizens lounged about in shirt sleeves, and in a drug store across the street a big red sign proclaimed:

"Here is the Place Where You Cool Off! Ice Cold Soda Water."

It was hard to believe we were in Medicine Hat. As we alighted from the train his worship, the mayor of Medicine Hat, and the prominent citizens and members of the Medicine Hat board of trade handed us large folders on which were printed in big black letters:

"Medicine Hat, the Town That was Born Lucky."—Kipling.

The folders contained reprints in full and numerous extracts of an article Mr. Kipling had written, and which was published in an American magazine not many weeks ago. Mr. Kipling seems to have been favorably impressed with Medicine Hat and Medicine Hat had certainly been very favorably impressed with Mr. Kipling.

"Well," said one of the committee, "I suppose you want first of all to see our natural gas wells. Mr. Kipling thought they were the most wonderful thing he had ever seen in his life. He said: "Medicine Hat has 'All Hell for a Basement.' Jolly good, that."

"I want to see the weather man and watch him make weather," I said.

The chairman of the committee laughed.

"My dear fellow," he said, "Mr. Kipling did not go to see the weather man."

That settled it. Mr. Kipling did not go to see the weather man. We went over to observe the natural gas wells.

On the way the committee presented us with copies of the magazine which had published the remarkable words of Mr. Kipling. Then they gave us little folders on which only this wonderful quotation was printed:

"Medicine Hat Has All Hell For a Basement.—Rudyard Kipling."

"What do you think of that?" said the committee proudly.

"I don't think it was ladylike of Mr. Kipling to use such language," I observed primly.

The committee looked around at me and seemed pained.

We saw the natural gas wells and were told how it was hot enough to melt copper in a few minutes and that there was enough to run all the factories in Chicago if they were picked up and carried through the air and set down in Medicine Hat.

"Wonderful, is it not?" said his worship, the mayor. "Kipling said that Medicine Hat has——"

"Can we see the weather man now? I ventured timidly.

"My dear fellow," said the committee in chorus, "we are now going to Medicine Hat club."

"I want to see the weather man," I insisted.

Bow to Honored Precedent.

"Mr. Kipling went to the Medicine Hat club from here," said his worship, the the mayor. We went to the Medicine Hat club.

At the club the members removed their hats and stood in silence around a piece of paper in a frame. I thought it was some kind of shrine. We approached reverently and found written on the paper these words:

"In Medicine Hat I rode in an automobile.—Rudyard Kipling."

"It's his own handwriting," said one member of the committee in hushed tones.

"Can I write 'So did I' under that and sign my name," I asked.

The committee was embarrassed.

"You see, old chap," said one of the committee, "that was Kipling."

"Suppose it was," I said, "I can write as plain as he can and a good deal plainer.'

"But, my dear fellow," said the citizen of Medicine Hat, fidgeting nervously, "Mr. Kipling, you know, of course, he's the greatest writer in the world."

"Who says so?" I demanded.

"Why, my dear fellow," said the citizen of Medicine Hat, "everyone says so."

"Well," I demanded "what has he written?"

The citizen of Medicine Hat and three other citizens stared at me in horror.

"What," they gasped, "you don't know what Kipling has written?"

"No," I said hotly, "I never heard of him. Who is he? What paper does he write for? Is he an American or German or Canadian or what?"

The committee grew pale and gasped for breath.

"Never—heard—of—Kipling, wot?' said the head committeeman in gurgling tones. The other committeemen held onto each other for support and said: "He never heard of Kipling."

I grew indignant.

"No," I said. "I never did. Show him to me. Is he the editor of your paper here in Medicine Hat? Is he a press agent? Does he write for the magazines or is he compiler of the government land reports? Who is this fellow Kipling, anyhow?"

The committee only looked hopelessly at me and murmered: "He never heard of Kipling."

Not Jim Kipling of Omaha.

"Well, wait a minute," I said. "You don't mean Jim Kipling from Omaha? I used to know a family of Kiplings or something like that out there. Jim Kipling used to write pieces for the paper. But the last time I heard of him he was in the penitentiary. You don't mean, surely Jim Kipling?"

No, I could see from the faces of the committee they didn't mean Jim Kipling. It was some other Kipling I pondered deeply and then turned to ask if this was the Kipling that used to make a tooth paste down in Chicago. But the committee was gone. I had been deserted.

I was alone the rest of the day in Medicine Hat. Nobody took me out in the automobiles. Nobody invited me to the club. Nobody took me back to look at the natural gas. Wherever I went I was a parian, a social outcast. I felt like a leper walking down the street and ringing a bell and wailing: "Unclean, unclean, unclean."

Men turned around and faced the other way when I approached. Mothers called their children in from the street. The dogs turned tail and scuttled under the houses as I came near them.

Everywhere they pointed at me the finger of scorn and I heard the words repeated, "He never heard of Kipling."

And when, neglected and alone, I clambered on the train that night the policeman on the platform pointed me out to the conductor and whispered behind his hand:

"That's 'im. That's the mon. 'E never 'eard o' Kipling, gor blime me; 'e never 'eard o' Kipling."

Death of Old-Timer

Well-known Railwayman Dies Suddenly

Heart Disease the Cause

The death of John McGary, one of the old-time railwaymen of the city took place suddenly at the Cosmopolitan Hotel on Sunday at 3.15 p. m.

Mr. McGary had come in on No. 96 from Calgary apparently as well as usual. While in the city he stays at the Cosmopolitan, and from 7.30 a. m. when the train arrived until about 10 he sat on the verandah smoking and chatting. Going to bed at that time nothing was heard of him until noon when "Shorty" one of the bartenders upon passing the room was called by deceased to get another blanket as he felt cold. The blanket was procured and a hot drink taken up.

Shortly afterward "Curly" was summoned to the room by McGary who said he didn't feel well and wondered what was the matter with himself. "Curly" got him a drink of lemonade and at the same time called up Dr. Boyd. Going up later he found McGary perspiring very freely his underclothing being saturated with perspiration and his face very wet. Another drink was brought up but McGary complained of the gas affecting his heart.

"Curly" left him with the glass in his hand and went down to meet the doctor. Together they went up to the room and found McGary lying on his left side, dead. Artificial respiration was tried but with no effect, the doctor giving the cause of death as heart failure.

Deceased was 43 years of age, and unmarried. He had been railroading in this city for about 20 years and was one of the best-known railroaders in the West. He was a very large man, weighing 319 pounds, when weighed only a few days ago. Lately he has missed a few runs on account of not feeling well, the heat having affected such a large man.

His sister and brother came up yesterday from Maple Creek.

The funeral took place last night from W. H. Patterson & Co.'s undertaking establishment, the body being taken to Maple Creek.

The pall bearers were:—J. R. Millican, Thos. White, W. M. Kelly, J. L. Dalton, W. G. Niblock, T. C. Blatchford.

CORRESPONDENCE

(The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents, nor does it necessarily agree with them.)

Editor of The Times.

Could you give me any reason why the Agricultural Society, which is supported by public money, has let the contract for the new building which it is erecting, without calling for tenders? There are a dozen contractors in the city, most of whom have been supporting the Agricultural Society for years, but now when there is any work to do we have no chance to get it. Is it possible that the Agricultural Society is spending its money only among friends? Is it politics or patronage.

A CONTRACTOR.

Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—Please insert in your paper my thanvs to the people who have subscribed to the uniform fund for the Medicine Hat Cadet Corps. We have received forty five ($45.00) dollars up to date, and we need a little more, the uniforms will cost $4.00 a suit and we have 65 boys enlisted, all equipped with rifles and belts and bayonets, and I can say they are well deserving of good help along. I am having drill every night this week, and any person wishing to see the boys drill, will have a good chance between six and eight each night.

I would also like you to accept subscriptions for the fund, if it would be convenient to you to do so.

Editor—The Times will be pleased to receive subscriptions to this worthy cause. Acknowledgements will be made in the columns of the paper.

MINING ENGINEERS

The Mining Engineers' Institute of Canada is on a tour through the Dominion, in compay with members of the profession from Europe, and on Sunday, 40 leading engineers of Canada, England, France and Germany, spent an hour in the city. The Board of Trade secretary and Mayor Cousins, Ald. Morro& and F. L. Crawford, met the party, who were afterwards conducted through the roundhouse and shown the various applications of our product, by Mr. Winters,

Mr. James Rae was a visitor to Lethbridge yesterday.

BASEBALL ON FRIDAY.

The last and best baseball match of the season takes place on Friday at 3 p.m. The long delayed struggle for the city championship is going to be pulled off, when the C.P.R.'s will meet the Fire Brigade consisting of the pick of the Fire boys and Bachelors. As the C.P.R. has beaten Calgary, this match will decide the championship of Alberta.

The admission will be 25 cents and there should be a rattling game. Most of the merchants will let their clerks go, and a big crowd is expected.

The City Fathers

At the adjourned meeting of the City Council last evening there were present: The Mayor, Aldermen Baker, Morrow, Forster, Tweed, Huckvale.

By-law covering the inspection of bakeries, was introduced by Ald. Baker and considered in committee. The by-law provides for penalties for using deleterious material in the manufacture of bread, the right of entry is given the health officer or inspector or the chief of police, to all bakeries; bread vans must be covered or the bread covered in some way. The committee reported progress and the by-law will be redrafted to make one penalty clause applicable to breaches of the various sections, and a clause will be added fixing the weight of a loaf at 1½ pounds or 2 pounds.

By-law to prohibit spitting in public places was passed. A penalty not exceeding $50 or 30 days imprisonment may be inflicted for breach of the by-law, which will come intoforce on October 1. Spitting on any sidewalk, station platform, or in any public building or place to which the public resort, except in a proper receptacle is thus penalized.

By-law for raising $15,000 by debentures, for completion of waterworks plant and mating of connections was given a first and second reading, and committees report adopted subject to verification of figures of indebtedness. Plebiscite will be taken on October 9.

The solicitor wrote with regard to the proposed sewer by-law advising the council that the raising of the $27,000 by debentures was not legal, as it only covered part of a work, it was not possible to issue debentures for a partial system. If the septic tank were included the undertaking could be considered a complete work.

The power of organization of labor made itself felt in the council chamber and won a sharp victory. A communication from C. A. Krauss stated that if the dog and cattle pound were not removed by Thursday next the whole of the volunteer members of the fire brigade would resign in a body. A long and at times somewhat piquant discussion followed. Ald. Tweed thought the brigade would be perfectly justified unless the pound were removed by Thursday, in going on strike. He would like to see them go on strike for once. The matter had kept being referred to the license and police committee all summer, and they had reported in favor of doing nothing. Ald. Baker supported the chairman of the fire committee, remarking that the brigade had been kicking about the nuisance for a year. A motion was carried that the location be changed (below the Canneries was suggested as a new location) and that the carrying out of the change be left in the hands of the license and police committee.

A communication from the Canada Foundry Co. was read pressing for payment for new engines. This was referred back to the water commissioners to get a report on the engines.

Mr. Ansley wrote asking to hire a hoisting engine for two weeks' if possible with an engineer supplied. After Mr. Ansley had explained at length his reasons for wishing to borrow an engine for coal mining purposes, the matter was referred to the water commissioners.

Ald. Huckvale had received a verbal application from an advertisement man who wanted to paint the Athletic Grounds fence. It was not considered desirable to disfigure the fence with advertisements and the application was turned down by the council.

A communication from a firm at present in Moose Jaw, making enquiries with regard to power price, will be dealt with at the next regular meeting. The firm is engaged in manufacturing grain stooking machinery and will employ about 100 hands.

Enquiry were made whether any steps were being taken to ascertain the cause of the typhoid in the city, and suggested that the council request the provincial sanitary inspector to visit the city and endeavor to find out the cause. A motion to that effect was carried and it was stated that the Board of Health had already taken similar steps.

Ald. Tweed called attention to several instances of the water services being used after hours.

NARROW ESCAPE.

On Saturday night Dr. Smith met with a rather nasty automobile accident. He was driving up to the station with Dr. McKim of Calgary, when being blinded for the moment by the light from one of the platform lights, he drove into a telephone guy rope. The rope struck him across the face and he was badly brulsed: the dash-board of the car was broken and it sustained minor injuries.

Dr. Smith was up and around on Sunday, his injuries not having incapacitated him in any way.

Only Three Glasses

And The Trouble That Followed

Shortly before the witching hour of mid-night on Saturday a much alarmed citizen rang up the mounted police from somewhere near the flour mill, and made a strong appeal for a constable to be sent down post haste. A man in a neighboringhouse was exercising his vocal powers in a most unorthodox manner, and the informant was convinced that some awful crime was being perpetrated. Inspector Parker immediately sent a couple of constables to the scene of action, and while the latter were on their way the telephone bell was ringing almost continuously; every few seconds the distressful plea for police aid was repeated.

Arrived on the spot the constables (Chalkley and Mollison) found a man named Martin Jordan in a highly excited state, and bawling at the top of his voice in Esperanto. A number of women in the house hung onto him, endeavoring to prevent his arrest.

At the barracks Jordan was placed in the cell with another prisoner, but the latter's efforts at pacification proved of no avail and eventually the foreigner had to be removed to a separate cell in the court house building, where he could indulge in a heated argument with the bars and walls. On Sunday morning he had exhausted himself, and, brought before the Inspector, he dropped on his knees in abject apology for his conduct of the previous night. He couldn't speak English, but through the interpreter it was ascertained at the hearing before Inspector Parker on Monday morning, that he was a brickyard worker, that the only trouble with him was that he had got drunk, that he has never tasteddrink before and it had made him crazy. He had drunk in all three glasses of beer that evening!

Martin was fined $2 and costs and left the barracks, resolving, it is to be hoped, to join the new prohibition party, and imbibe nothing stronger than ice-cream soda for the future.

It is now almost certain that the date of the general election will be either Wednesday, Oct. 28th, or Thursday, Oct. 29th. Announcement of dissolution of parliament will be made tomorrow.

Union Picnic

There wasn't a man in town who didn't wish he could take in the picnic last Saturday with nothing more serious to bother him than the relation of his capacity to the size of the baskets. Almost every youngster in town, up to 75 years, was in attendance, and those who weren't look upon it as a Visitation.

Five cars of Presbyterian and Methodist children and many of the young and old friends were carried out to Johnston's Grove by the C.P.R. Here the entire day was spent in games—what wasn't spent in eating. The Toronto St. baseball team beat the Montreal St. boys by a score of 11 to 0, Morris and Lussier as battery for the winners doing big things. Then there was football and sports consisting of running and jumping.

The train brought the old and the young kids back by six o'clock.

ALBERTA THE BEST.

That financial conditions in Alberta are as good, if not better than in any other part of the continent is the opinion of Dr. Smith, who returned last week from a tourthrough the Eastern States. In New York the doctor stated to The Times representative, the business world is still suffering from intense depression; though a slow and steady improvement is going on. In all the American cities which he visited the some conditions prevailed, and one of the most striking features wasthe enormous depreciation in land values which has followed the period of inflation. In Minneapolis and in Milwaukee the doctor saw blocks right in the heart of the business district which were drawing rentals no higher than are paid on Toronto or Main or South Railway Streets in Medicine Hat. As a matter of fact to anyone who has first-hand knowledge of the American depression, it is evident that the people of the Prairie Provinces have been peculiarly fortunate, and have enjoyed comparative prosperity all through the bad times.

Socialist for Medicine Hat

(Lethbridge Herald)

R. P. Pettipiece, organizer of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, and a leading Socialist, has accepted the Socialist nomination for the Medicine Hat riding.

Word to this effect was received by the local Socialists today. They offered Mr. Pettipiece the nomination shortly after he addressed a public meeting here.

Mr. Pettipiece resides in Vancouver where he conducts a labor paper.

POLITICS

One of the most interesting fights in the coming campaign, thought one of the most hopeless from the Liberal standpoint, is Vancouver City, where Fighting Joe Martin has announced that he will run as an independent. Joe will put ginger in the campaign if nothing else and it can be taken for granted that the machine Liberals with ex-Governor McInnes as their candidate will stop at nothing in their attacks upon the man who has refused to continue his support of Laurier since his desertion of the famous policy of 1893.

Joe has recently returned from England, where he addressed the International Trade Congress in London. He took occasion to open the eyes of England as to the Laurier government. Among other things he said:

"Never in all the history of Canada has there been as much corruption in public life as in the last twelve years. It has permeated every department of the government and it is safe to say that much the greater part of the time of Parliament is taken up with investigating charges of graft and corruption against department officers and ministers of the crown.

"One can well understand that under the very best administration there may be cases of wrong-doing on the part of officials of departments, but it would naturally be expected when charges of this kind were made in Parliament and committees appointed for their investigation that the government of the day would lend every assistance in their power to expose and punish the wrong-doers.

"So deep-rooted, however, is the corruption in public life in Canada, that we find the government employing every means at their hand to suppress and nullify the investigations of these committees.

"Witnesses refuse to answer the questions, and when the Conservative members of the committee ask for their committal for contempt, the Liberal majority refuses to exercise its power.

"Members of the Government become enormously rich while in office without any apparent means of enrichment, except the power placed in their hands by virtue of their positions.

"When these matters are referred to in Parliament the ministers in question make no explanation what ever of the enormous riches which they have accumulated, but defy the opposition to lay charges against them and prove them."

Vancouver, Sept. 9.—Conservatives tonight nominated George H. Cowan city solicitor, as the next to contest this city in the next federal election.

Victoria, Sept. 9.—G. H. Barnard was tonight nominated by the Conservatives.

Antingonish, N.S., Sept. 9.—Antigonish Liberals nominated Wm. Chisholm, M. P., for the commons.

Picton, Ont., Sept. 9....H. C. Mullen, B.A., a prominent citizen and ex-mayor, announces himself as a candidate for the commons in Prince Edward county as independent.

Montreal, Sept. 9.—Two Mountain Liberals renominated J. A. C. Ethier for the house of commons.

Armprior, Sept. 9.—South Renfrew Liberals nominated Thos. Low, lumberman, Renfrew. This is a surprise, as turning down A. A. Wright, their representative in the house for the past eight years.

Pembroke, Sept. 9.—North Renfrew Liberals nominated Henry Barr to oppose the sitting member. Gerald White.

The Liberals of Argenteuil have nominated P. R. McGibbon.

The line-up of Liberals in N. B. at present, is as follows:

St. John City
St. John City and Co., Pugsley.
Kings'Albert, McAllister.
Queens-Sunbury, McLean.
York,
Carleton, Carvell.
Victoria-Madawaska, Michaud.
Restigouche, Reid.
Gloucester, Turgeon.
Northumberland, Loggie.
Kent, LeBlanc.
Westmorland, Emmerson.
Charlotte, Todd.

Ottawa, Sept. 7.—E. B. Devlin, M. P., was nominated by the Wright county Liberals, as their candidate.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 7.—A. C. Boyce was re-nominated unanimously by the Soo Conservatives to-day.

Montreal, Sept. 10.—Following additional nominations occurred yesterday:

Queens Shelburne, Hon. W. S. Fielding, Liberal.
Cape Breton, J. W. Madden, Conservative.

Renfrew, Ont., Sept. 11.—John Mackay, mayor of Renfrew, was nominated today by the South Renfrew Conservatives.

Montreal, Sept. 11—Roche Lancelot last night received the nomination for St. Edouard in the Liberal interests.

Alisa Crag, Ont., Sept. 11— The North Middlesex Liberals nominated Alex. Smith, of Alisa Craig, today.

Railway North of Medicine Hat

C. N. R. buildings from Regina to Calgary

In Regina Wm. McKenzie, President of the C. N. R. announced the other day that his railway will immediately proceed to build a linefrom Regina to Calgary. The line will start from the Regina and Prince Albert branch, about 40 miles north of Regina and run straight west to Calgary, passing about 50 miles north of this city, through a large tract of land that has been untouched on account of poor railway facilities.

A resident of the Red Deer says the surveying parties were through that district a few weeks ago.

The strikers have received word from headquarters that there is some thing in the air which may lead to a settlement. No definite information is given.

A lot of smoke from a smudge fire opposite the Toronto Street school got on the nerves of one of the teachers that she rang up the fire department.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Hara have returned from spending a couple of weeks camping in the Cypress Hills. They have nothing but good to say of the outing in the picture spot of the Medicine Hat district.

Dr. Barrow, the provincial sanitary inspector, came into the city this morning in response to a request sent by Dr. Lloyd. He will look into the causes of the typhoid trouble.

The sad death took place at Gleichen last week of Stewart Wallace, the four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wallace. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wallace and their family have spent the summer at the camp near Gleichen where Mr. Wallace is surveying on the Souther Alberta Land Co.'s irrigation ditch. Stewart was only ill five days. The funeral took place from the home of his grandfather, Mr. J. H. Wallace of Lethbridge.

Lethbridge Herald.—Warden Johnston, assistant postmaster at Medicine Hat, is visiting his sister, Mrs. D. May for a day or two.

A petition has been circulated requesting the school board to submit the proposed $40,000 debenture issue to the ratepayers.

A horse attached to a rig returning from a picnic on Sunday broke through a fence opposite the Catholic Church. The horse went on its head, broke the shafts, and proceeded to distribute the occupants of the buggy along the road. Nothing was hurt but the buggy and the city treasury.

Mrs. Millar, "Rose Cottage" was the hostess at a leap year tea given in honor of the Misses Millar, on Saturday from four to six. The novel feature of the occasion was that the honors were done by young men under the leadership of Mrs. Nelson. The tea room, decorated with white astors, sweet peas and similax, drew many compliments from the young ladies. Mr. Inwood received with the ladies of the house and conducted the guests to the tea room. Messrs. Dew and Hansuld poured tea. Messrs. Dunham and Holmes assisted Mr. Parker in answering the door. Musical selections were provided by the Misses Parker, Barreau and Millar and Mr. Inwood and added to the keen enjoyment of the unusual event.

SETTLING UP THE NORTH.

Last week J. W. Imes from the Red Deer district was in the city attending to the pre-empting of a tract of land in that district.

While travelling in the north district Mr. Imes came across a 1,000 acre tract of blue joint hay and immediately took steps to secure it. Himself, his son, and a friend have taken the whole tract and claim they have the richest bit of land in Alberta. Mr. Imes states that he has been all over Alberta looking for such a piece of land. The soil is black and rich and will burn when dried. There are four inches of solid grass roots and water was struck at 18 feet. The location is 75 miles north and 20 miles west.

There are several rich grasssloughs in that district, but none that he has seen are as good as his. The new C.N.R. will run through not far from the property.

Mr. Imes is undertaking an irrigation scheme near the Red Deer.

School Board

There was a long meeting of the School Board last evening, which The Times is unable to report in full in today's paper.

Polling on the $40,000 debentures was fixed for October 6th.

C. W. Webb submitted his resignation, stating that it was his intention to go into college.

Miss Simpson applied for the maximum salary. The board while expressing appreciation of her services, could not see their way clear to establish a precedent.

The principals report was submitted and adopted.

In response to communications from the bricklayers and carpenter's unions it was decided to insert a fair wage clause in the contract for the new high school building.

V. C. James wrote urging promptness in connection with the bonds.

Fake Advertising

We sometimes read advertisements in newspapers that at the very outset brand themselves as fakes, and in no instance is this more prevalent than among the ready-to-wear clothing advertisers. Imagine an advertisement stating that the average merchant tailor does not know how to turn a coat sleeve or to turn out a good fitting suit, when the person with average intelligence knows how all ready-made suits are produced—that it is the cheapest kind of labor that is employed in their manufacture, and that the average ready-made suit will hold its shape about while you are carrying it home. These are some of the reasons why merchant tailored suits are coming more and more into demand every day, and why the ready-made handler has to resort to fake advertising in a vain attempt to stem the tide.

☞ We make clothes that fit, and if they don't you don't have to take them.

ATHLETICS

PAPKE WON FROM KETCHELL.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 7.—Stanley Ketchell, of Michigan, former middle weight champion of the world was knocked out in the twelfth round at Jeffries Vernon arena this afternoon by Billy Papke of Illinois who is middle weight champion of the world. Both men entered the ring in apparently perfect condition. Neither had ever been knocked out. Ketchell had had a decision over Papke in a ten round bout.

The bout turned out to be one of the bloodiest in ring history. Ketchell was plainly the favorite of the crowd which had been betting on him 2 to 1. When James J. Jeffries, the referee called time and Ketchell walked to the centre extending his hand for the shake, Papke ignored the hand and went at the Michigan man with the impetuosity that has won him the title of "Thunderbolt." The fight was practically over in a minute and twenty seconds after the gong sounded.

From that time on it was mostly a question as to how long Ketchell would last. Papke fought with such fury that the defeated champion was simply lifted off his feet four times within the next minute.

ATTELL—MORAN TO A DRAW.

San Francisco, Sept. 7.—Abe Attell, the champion feather weight of America and Owen Moran, England's premier boxer in the same division fought to a draw at the Colma open air arena this afternoon before six thousand spectators. The fight lasted 23 rounds and at its conclusion Referee Jack Welch unhesitatingly grasped each lad by the hand, signifying that the fight was indecisive. The decision seemed to please the crowd and there were cheers for each fighter as he wended his way from the ring. The fight on the whole was rather tame but this was offset by the cleverness of the fighters. It was marked by Moran's aggressiveness and Attell's cleverness in blocking and his all around defense. The consensus of opinion was thatthe Californian did not snow up in as good form as in former contests.

Dan McLeod the point player of the Calgary lacrosse team has been selected by his mates as their representatives on the Canadian Olympic lacrosse team which sails for England on October 2. The Olympic committee gave Calgary the choosing of one player, to be selected from McDonell, McLeod, Dunne, Curliss or Sewell.

High River intermediate lacrosse champions were pitted against the Calgary seniors the other day in an endeavor to show that intermediate lacrosse was as fast as senior. The result of 17 to 1 against them cooled their ardor a little and now they are content to stay in their class.

Eagle, the young Indian who cleared 5 feet 8 inches, at the Labor Day sports is in a fair way to make a record for himself as did his fellow red men Longboat and now Acoose of Grenfell. Eagle has had no training whatever and does not know his own possibilities. The stick was put at 5 feet 9½ inches, and although he failed to clear it, it was throughlack of judgment on the take-off, his jump being clearly higher. When it is considered that 5 feet 3 inches was the record at the Alberta championship games and that 6 feet and a couple of inches is the world's record it can be seen that Eagle is already a star, and with a season's training could equal any of them. Were he in the east, some athletic organization would grab him up in a hurry and make a world-beater of him if he would train.

One of those disgusting "athletic" exhibitions is reported to have taken place recently in Banff. A Calgary boxer, Jake Fullerton met a negro, Bill Croker and after fowling him repeatedly lost the decision. A weak-kneed umpire reversed the decision a minute afterwards but Croker refused to go on. Then Fullerton jerked his gloves off and sailed into Croker with his bare fists. The umpire dived through the ring and from the audience awarded the fight to Fullerton, after a rough house tussle. A baseball bat in the hands of a Texas leaguer might have straightened things out a little and given the quietus to such "sport."

Ottawa, Sept. 8.—The central Canadian Olympic committee has asked the members of the Athletic Federation of Canada to resign from the membership of the committee as a result of the protest of Leslie Boyd against Tom Longboat in the Marathon race in England, and the federation's endorsation of his action. The Olympic committee has also relieved the C.A.A.U. from their agreement entered into in November last.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—The Canadian game of lacrosse will form a part of the White Sox training programme next season according to an announcement made by President Chas. A. Comiskey, of the south side club. The old Roman has watched the Indian game closely for several years and has taken such an interest in it he has presented the three localteams with the Comiskey cup—emblamatic of the local championship.

Comiskey has decided that thegame will be an excellent exercise to get the kinks out of his men and put them in shape for playing baseball after their long rest during the winter. Accordingly when the Sox leave on their trip next spring they will be equipped with the paraphernalia used and it is likely one of the local lacrosse stars will be taken along to coach them.

Manager Fielder Jones also sees the possibilities in the game for development of speed and endurance of ball players. He is as enthusiastic about the innovation as Comiskey and is eager for the team to have a trial at it.

Nelson again defeated Gans in the 21st round. Both men were terribly marked and blood was all over the ring. Gans led at the start but the younger man wore him out.

Mounted Police Notes

On Friday evening before Inspector Parker, Jas. Hassard of Sage Creek was charged with the theft of a mare and colt, the property of Daniel Gill. The crime is alleged to have taken place two years ago. Evidence was given to the effect that Jas. Hassard and Henry Weiss were riding round in the district of the Dreamers' camp on the day when the theft is alleged to have been committed. A few of the Dreamers were sitting aroundand Hassard began to chat with these, entertaining the People of God by his conversational powers, while Weiss drove away with a mare and colt. As soon as the animals were driven away, it is alleged, Hassard untied a buggy and team belonging to the elect and did the 23 act. Both of the men were mounted, and the dreamers were compelled to follow them on foot.

The defence did not produce any evidence, and the prisoner was remanded till Thursday.

Corporal Jenkyn prosecuted, D. G. White appearing for the defence.

WARNING.

In view of the fact that fresh cases of typhoid are still being reported, it is highly desirable that precautions be taken against infection. There are but two means known to the medical profession by which typhoid germs can be transmitted—through infected solid or liquid food.

These dangers can be avoided by:

(1) Boiling all water before using.

(2) Scalding or pasteurizing all milk before using.

(3) Keeping flies from alighting on and infecting—water, milk or solid food.

NOTICE.

Odd Numbered Sections.

As already publicly announced, odd numbered sections remaining vacant and undisposed of will become available for homestead entry on the coming into force of the Dominion Lands Act on the 1st September next.

As the records of only the even numbered sections have hitherto been kept in the books of the various land agencies in the western provinces, and the time having been very limited since the passing of the Act within which to transfer the records of all odd numbered sections from the head office at Ottawa to the local offices, it is possible that the transfer of records in some cases may not have been absolutely completed by the 1st September. In any case where the record of any quarter section has not been transferred, application will be accepted but will have to be forwarded to head office to be dealt with.

As it has been found impossible as yet to furnish sub-agencies with copies of the records of odd numbered sections, and in view of the large probable demand for entries, all applicants for entry upon odd numbered sections are strongly advised to make their applications in person at the office of the Dominions Lands Agent and not through a Sub Land Agent. Application s for even numbered sections may be dealt with through the Sub Land Agent as before if desired.

Another Adventure of Sherlock Holmes.

"I have a good mind to go to London with you," said the baronet. "Why should I stay here alone?"

"Because it is your post of duty. Because you gave me your word that you would do as you were told, and I tell you to stay."

"All right, then, I'll stay."

"One more direction! I wish you to drive to Merripit House. Send back your trap, however, and let them know that you intend to walk home."

"To walk across the moor?"

"Yes."

"But that is the very thing which you have so often cautioned me not to do."

"This time you may do it with safety. If I had not every confidence in your nerve and courage I would not suggest it, but it is essential that you should do it."

"Then I will do it."

"And as you value your life do not go across the moor in any direction save along the straight path which leads from Merripit House to the Grimpen Road, and is your natural way home."

"I will do just what you say."

"Very good. I should be glad to get away as soon after breakfast as possible, so as to reach London in the afternoon."

I was much astounded by this program, though I remembered that Holmes had said to Stapleton on the night before that his visit would terminate next day. It had not crossed my mind, however, that he would wish me to go with him, nor could I understand how we could both be absent at a moment which he himself declared to be critical. There was nothing for it, however, but implicit obedience; so we bade good-bye to our rueful friend, and a couple of hours afterwards we were at the station of Coombe Tracey and had dispatched the trap upon its return journey. A small boy was waiting upon the platform.

"Any orders, sir?"

"You will take this train to town, Cartwright. The moment you arrive you will send a wire to Sir Henry Baskerville, in my name, to say that if he finds the pocket-book which I have dropped he is to send it by registered post to Baker Street."

"Yes, sir."

"And ask at the station office if there is a message for me."

The boy returned with a telegram, which Holmes handed to me. It ran: "Wire received. Coming down with unsigned warrant. Arrive five-forty.—Lestrade."

"That is in answer to mine of this morning. He is the best of the professionals, I think, and we may need his assistance. Now, Watson, I think that we cannot employ our time better than by calling upon your acquaintance, Mrs. Laura Lyons."

His plan of campaign was beginning to be evident. He would use the baronet in order to convince the Stapletons that we were really gone, while we should actually return at the instant when we were likely to be needed. That telegram from London, if mentioned by Sir Henry to the Stapletons, must remove the last suspicions from their minds. Already I seemed to see our nets drawing closer round that lean-jawed pike.

Mrs. Laura Lyons was in her office, and Sherlock Holmes opened his interview with a frankness and directness which considerably amazed her.

"I am investigating the circumstances which attended the death of the late Sir Charles Baskerville," said he. "My friend here, Dr. Watson, has informed me of what you have communicated, and also of what you have withheld in connection with that matter."

"What have I withheld?" she asked, defiantly.

"You have confessed that you asked Sir Charles to be at the gate at ten o'clock. We know that that was the place and hour of his death. You have withheld what the connection is between these events."

"There is no connection."

"In that case the coincidence must indeed be an extraordinary one. But I think that we shall succeed in establishing a connection after all. I wish to be perfectly frank with you, Mrs. Lyons. We regard this case as one of murder, and the evidence may implicate not only your friend Mr. Stapleton, but his wife as well."

The lady sprang from her chair.

"His wife!" she cried.

"The fact is no longer a secret. The person who has passed for his sister is really his wife."

Mrs. Lyons had resumed her seat. Her hands were grasping the arms of her chair, and I saw that the pink nails had turned white with the pressure of her grip.

"His wife!" she said, again. "His wife! He is not a married man."

Sherlock Holmes shrugged his shoulders.

"Prove it to me! Prove it to me! And if you can do so——!" The fierce flash of her eyes said more than any words.

"I have come prepared to do so," said Holmes, drawing several papers from his pocket. "Here is a photograph of the couple taken in York four years ago. It is indorsed 'Mr. and Mrs. Vandeleur,' but you will have no difficulty in recognizing him and her also, if you know her by sight. Here are three written descriptions by trustworthy witnesses of Mr. and Mrs. Vandeleur, who at that time kept St. Oliver's private school. Read them, and see if you can doubt the identity of these people."

She glanced at them, and then looked up at us with the set, rigid face of a desperate woman.

"Mr. Holmes," she said, "this man had offered me marriage on condition that I could get a divorce from my husband. He has lied to me, the villain, in every conceivable way. Not one word of truth has he ever told me. And why—why? I imagined that all was for my own sake. But now I see that I was never anything but a tool in his hands. Why should I preserve faith with him who never kept any with me? Why should I try to shield him from the consequences of his own wicked acts? Ask me what you like, and there is nothing which I shall hold back. One thing I swear to you, and that is, that when I wrote the letter I never dreamed of any harm to the old gentleman, who had been my kindest friend."

"I entirely believe you, madam," said Sherlock Holmes. "The recital of these events must be very painful to you, and perhaps it will make it easier if I tell you what occurred, and you can check me if I make any material mistake. The sending of this letter was suggested to you by Stapleton?"

"He dictated it."

"I presume that the reason he gave was that you would receive help from Sir Charles for the legal expenses connected with your divorce?"

"Exactly."

"And then after you had sent the letter he dissuaded you from keeping the appointment?"

"He told me that it would hurt his self-respect that any other man should find the money for such an object, and that though he was a poor man himself he would devote his last penny to removing the obstacles which divided us."

"He appears to be a very consistent character. And then you heard nothing until you read the reports of the death in the paper?"

"No."

"And he made you swear to say nothing about your appointment with Sir Charles?"

"He did. He said that the death was a very mysterious one, and that I should certainly be suspected if the facts came out. He frightened me into remaining silent."

"Quite so. But you had your suspicions?"

She hesitated and looked down.

"I knew him," she said. "But if he had kept faith with me I should always have done so with him."

"I think that on the whole you have had a fortunate escape," said Sherlock Holmes. "You have had him in your power and he knew it, and yet you are alive. You have been walking for some months very near to the edge of a precipice. We must wish you good morning now, Mrs. Lyons, and it is probable that you will very shortly hear from us again."

"Our case becomes rounded off, and difficulty after difficulty thins away in front of us," said Holmes, as we stood waiting for the arrival of the express from town. "I shall soon be in the position of being able to put into a single connected narrative one of the most singular and sensational crimes of modern times. Students of criminology will remember the analogous incidents in Godno, in Little Russia, in the year 66, and of course there are the Anderson murders in North Carolina, but this case possesses some features which are entirely its own. Even now we have no clear case against this very wily man. But I shall be very much surprised if it is not clear enough before we go to bed this night."

The London express came roaring into the station, and a small, wiry bulldog of a man had sprung from a first-class carriage. We all three shook hands, and I saw at once from the reverential way in which Lestrade gazed at my companion that he had learned a good deal since the days when they had first worked together. I could well remember the scorn which the theories of the reasoner used then to excite in the practical man.

"Anything good?" he asked.

"The biggest thing for years," said Holmes. "We have two hours before we need think of starting. I think we might employ it in getting some dinner, and then, Lestrade, we will take the London fog out of your throat by giving you a breath of the pure night air of Dartmoor. Never been there? Ah, well, I don't suppose you will forget your first visit."

CHAPTER XIV.

One of Sherlock Holmes's defects—if, indeed, one may call it a defect—was that he was exceedingly loth to communicate his full plans to any other person until the instant of their fulfilment. Partly it came no doubt from his own masterful nature, which loved to dominate and surprise those who were around him. Partly also from his professional caution, which urged him never to take any chances. The result, however, was very trying for those who were acting as his agents and assistants. I had often suffered under it, but never more so than during that long drive in the darkness. The great ordeal was in front of us; at last we were about to make our final effort, and yet Holmes had said nothing, and I could only surmise what his course of action would be. My nerves thrilled with anticipation when at last the cold wind upon our faces and the dark, void spaces on either side of the narrow road told me that we were back upon the moor once again. Every stride of the horses and every turn of the wheels was taking us nearer to our supreme adventure.

Our conversation was hampered by the presence of the driver of the hired wagonette, so that we were forced to talk of trivial matters when our nerves were tense with emotion and anticipation. It was a relief to me, after that unnatural restraint, when we at last passed Frankland's house and knew that we were drawing near to the Hall and to the scene of action. We did not drive up to the door, but got down near the gate of the avenue. The wagonette was paid off and ordered to return to Coombe Tracey forthwith, while we started to walk to Merripit House.

"Are you armed, Lestrade?"

The little detective smiled.

"As long as I have my trousers I have a hip-pocket, and as long as I have my hip-pocket I have something in it."

"Good! My friend and I are also ready for emergencies."

"You're mighty close about this affair, Mr. Holmes. What's the game now?"

"A waiting game."

"My word, it does not seem a very cheerful place," said the detective, with a shiver, glancing round him at the gloomy slopes of the hill and at the huge lake of fog which lay over the Grimpen Mire. "I see the lights of a house ahead of us."

"That is Merripit House and the end of our journey. I must request you to walk on tiptoe and not to talk above a whisper."

We moved cautiously along the track as if we were bound for the house, but Holmes halted us when we were about two hundred yards from it.

"This will do," said he. "These rocks upon the right make an admirable screen."

"We are to wait here?"

"Yes, we shall make our little ambush here. Get into this hollow, Lestrade. You have been inside the house, have you not, Watson? Can you tell the position of the rooms? What are those latticed windows at this end?"

"I think they are the kitchen windows."

"And the one beyond, which shines so brightly?"

"That is certainly the dining-room."

"The blinds are up. You know the lie of the land best. Creep forward quietly and see what they are doing—but for heaven's sake don't let them know that they are watched!"

I tiptoed down the path and stooped behind the low wall which surrounded the stunted orchard. Creeping in its shadow I reached a point whence I could look straight through the uncurtained window.

There were only two men in the room, Sir Henry and Stapleton. They sat with their profiles towards me on either side of the round table. Both of them were smoking cigars, and coffee and wine were in front of them. Stapleton was talking with animation, but the baronet looked pale and distraught. Perhaps the thought of that lonely walk across the ill-omened moor was weighing heavily upon his mind.

As I watched them Stapleton rose and left the room, while Sir Henry filled his glass again and leaned back in his chair, puffing at his cigar. I heard the creak of a door and crisp sound of boots upon gravel. The steps passed along the path on the other side of the wall under which I crouched. Looking over, I saw the naturalist pause at the door of an out-house in the corner of the orchard. A key turned in a lock, and as he passed in there was a curious scuffling noise from within. He was only a minute or so inside, and then I heard the key turn once more, and he passed me and re-entered the house. I saw him rejoin his guest, and I crept quietly back to where my companions were waiting to tell them what I had seen.

"You say Watson, that the lady is not there?" Holmes asked, when I had finished my report.

"No."

"Where can she be, then, since there is no light in any other room except the kitchen?"

"I cannot think where she is."

I have said that over the great Grimpen Mire there hung a dense, white fog. It was drifting slowly in our direction and banked itself up like a wall on that side of us, low, but thick and well defined. The moon shone on it, and it looked like a great shimmering icefield, with the heads of the distant tors as rocks borne upon its surface. Holmes's face was turned towards it, and he muttered impatiently as he watched its sluggish drift.

"It's moving towards us, Watson."

"Is that serious?"

"Very serious, indeed—the one thing upon earth which could have disarranged my plans. He can't be very long, now. It is already ten o'clock. Our success and even his life may depend upon his coming out before the fog is over the path."

The night was clear and fine above us. The stars shone cold and bright, while a half-moon bathed the whole scene in a soft, uncertain light. Before us lay the dark bulk of the house, its serrated roof and bristling chimneys hard outlined against the silver-spangled sky. Broad bars of golden light from the lower windows stretched across the orchard and the moor. One of them was suddenly shut off. The servants had left the kitchen. There only remained the lamp in the dining-room where the two men, the murderous host and the unconscious guest, still chatted over their cigars.

C.P.A.

The steps grew louder and through the fog there stepped the man we were awaiting.

Western Grafters are Still Fighting.

If modern science succeeds in demonstrating that a cat has not nine lives, a number of political and social reformers will arise and rehabilitate the proverb by the substitution of the word "grafter" for cat. The most striking illustration of the theory in the notorious San Francisco cases that have attracted the attention of newspaper readers wherever the English language is spoken. The last the Canadian public heard of them, Schmitz, the boodling Mayor of San Francisco had been sent to prison, and Ruef, the Jewish "boss" of the city, had broken down in court and had made full confession. It is therefore with some surprise that we learn of Schmitz being a free man, and Ruef bringing energetic charges against the prosecution, and being as far from prison as ever a grafter is. Moreover, recent elections in California indicate that the people are ready to goback to the old regime that created Ruef and Schmitz, and to have them reinstated in control after the elapse of a decent interval.

How the Cases Stand.

It is hard to find out the exact status of the graft trials. They have created so many side issues and counter charges, which are being investigated simultaneously, that it is almost impossible to keep to the main issues and explain them clearly. Schmitz, however, is at liberty again There is no doubt of that, for the Supreme Court freed him. The jury disagreed over the guilt of Ruef on one of the most serious charges. However, there are a score of other counts on which he has been indicted, and the prosecution is determined to proceed with them. The preliminary hearing of one case before a police magistrate has just consumed 67 days. In the midst of it Ruef caused Detective Wm. Burns, of the prosecution, to be cited for contempt of court. It was charged that two detectives in the employ of Burns circulated a bogus petition, denouncing the graft prosecution, and got a number of men on the jury trial list to sign it, the idea being for the prosecution to unmask jurors who would favor the defence. Burns got off with a reprimand, for it was shown that the defence was adopting similar tactics.

Dynamiters at Work.

The most dramatic of the by-products of the charges, however, was the dynamiting of the Oakland house where "Big Jim" Gallagher lived. Gallagher, it will be recalled, was one of the boodling supervisors who was induced to confess, and who has since been the chief witness for the prosecution. The dynamiters were caught, and they confessed that they had been hired by a fellow Greek, who was one of Ruef's sub-bosses. Of course the theory of the prosecution is that Ruef and his friends are responsible. It is remarkable that the two obscure Greevs are being defended by eminent counsel. Even this side issue has its own little branches. One of them shows how desperately the defence is fighting. In the hearing of the case against the Greeks, Gallagher inadvertently referred to the dynamited house being in San Francisco, whereas it is in Oakland. Nowthe lawyers for the defence announce that they will proceed against him for perjury.

Getting Into Politics

After fighting for a couple of years and finding themselves blocked on technicalities on the part of judges and other officials who owe their position to the favor of the forces behind Ruef, in the possession of overwhelming evidence, and yet powerless to get the men they are hunting kept in jail for more than a week, the prosecution at last decided to get into politics, just as Folk, of Missouri, did in like circumstances. Political control of the State would mean the clarifying of ahopelessly muddled system of judicial procedure, the passage of laws to extend the meaning of extortion, and the placing of men on the bench independent of Southern Pacific control. For years the real boss of the State has been Wm. F. Herrin, chief counsel for the railroad and personal adviser of Mr. Harriman. Without his tacit consent Ruef could never have existed a month, although he was a Democrat like Schmitz, and the Southern Pacific is Republican.

Fighting a Railroad.

When the San Francisco Reformers ventured into politics, therefore, they found themselves opposed by the Southern Pacific and the Republican machine, just as they had been obliged to fight the local Democratic machine in San Francisco. However, they formed a Lincoln-Roosevelt League and plunged into State politics, with the support of President Roosevelt. The primary elections have been a disappointment to them, for apparently the old machine, belonging to Herrin, is still in control At the same time they have some reasons for feeling encouraged. They have won some districts hitherto strongholds of the enemy, and now Herrin seems to be holding out the olive branch. The fight, too, has forced the Southern Pacific to bring out some first-class men instead of the usual riff-raff of California politicians.

A Question of Staying Power.

Rudolf Spreckles, of the sugar trust, the prime mover in the war against Ruef, is determined to go on with the fight, and though the prosecution may be beaten it surely will not expire of inanition. It is without doubt the biggest and bitterest campaign against graft that has ever been waged on this continent. It is now a question of staying power between the two sides.

Grasping at Straws

In the general anxiety of the Liberal Press to devise some means of getting out from under the weight of proof of graft presented by H. B. Ames in his recent series of Western addresses the lengthy discussion given the address by the Edmonton News is seized as the best way out. It is not that the arguments of the News are strong, but that the evident desire of a so-called independent paper is to relieve the government of all blame.

The Edmonton News deserves credit for as much independence as any of its kind can can claim. The editor is undoubtedly honest in his convictions; but it is so impossible for a man who has lived Liberal for many years without conversion to be really independent that his remarks on political lines must needs be looked upon as Liberally colored, so to speak. In fact so strong a leaning has the editor to the Liberal side that his other publication "The Alberta Homestead" has had many an uppercut from farmers who resent their agricultural news served up in a Liberal dish.

A discussion, pro or con, of the grafts revealed by Ames is unnecessary to those who heard the lecture. This the Liberal press knows, and accordingly they confine themselves to certain details which were most unimportant in the address, or shade off Ames' sentences until their own maker would not recognize them.

The Edmonton News starts out with a nicely-worded bit of praise for Ames and his earnestness and conviction and deprecates the side issues included in the treatment of the subject by Liberal papers.

The first quibble—one of the many points which the Liberal press tries to make important enough to argue upon, and thus hide the main issue—is that Ames said "theGovernment has permitted the major portion of those lands to puss into the hands of speculators." By showing how much public land is left it is proven that the major part is still held. Ames' meaning of course, was that the major part of what was sold is in the hands of speculators pure and simple.

"What he did not tell his audience was that the system which he was denouncing was not adopted by this government, but simply continued over from that which preceded it." Later in the same paragraph The News contradicts this, but says Sifton's change of rules made no difference. If that is so, why did he make them? As a matter of fact the change made by Sifton was the one that encouraged the speculation in timber lands. Whereas, under Conservative rule the lands, the license could be cancelled at any time the Government saw the land was being held against the settler or worker. Sifton altered it so that the speculator could hold the land "while merchantable timber remains upon the area licensed." The News says this was done for the American lumbermen. Very considerate of us!

"If a man secured a limit at a certain price, he did so in open competition with the world." This too, The News contradicts later on, when it says "the shortness of time given for inspection" was wrong.

The News says Mr. Ames is incorrect when he says, "in addition to the newspaper notices, a few copies (of the advertisement) were sent to privileged friends." It draws attention to the fact that anyone could have obtained the notices. That is no answer to Mr. Ames' point which was that copies were sent to a few favorites.

"Mr. Ames did not tell his audience that this system which he was denouncing was abandoned by the present Minister of the Interior." Mr. Ames said nothing but that these things had happened during the regime of the present government. If the same Government went into the graft game so largely it does not obliterate the record, when after eight or nine years of misrule it makes a change when it sees how strong is public opinion. The claim of reform is much like the one made at the present time in the civil service. A man isn't making you a gift if he hands over his money at the point of a revolver.

"But there is nothing to prove that crooked work was done." According to that nothing short of a general all-round confession of the Cabinet would constitute proof. The Government would scarcely allow the kind of proof to be obtained that seems necessary to satisfy The News. If you lose a watch and it is found on another man, who wasthe only person with you when you lost it, it would be proof, but you didn't see him take it, nor did he confess.

"More than one check is a very general practice." No one considers it worth while to dispute that. But when the tender, with the checks, states no amount, when one check just exceeds one of the tenders made, and the additional check just raises the amount beyond the previously highest bid, a man's brains can be called into sertice without employing a detective.

The News attempts to prove that the Imperial Pulp Company was open and above board. Did the News follow Hansard more closely it would find what a task it was to discover the personel of the Company. And when the members include brother-in-law Burrows, the reason for this is evident. Why even the Departments did not know who the Company was as shown by the return through the dead letter office of a letter sent by a Department to them.

The fact is that the attempted defence of the Edmonton News in the face of what was overpowering evidence to every reasonable man who heard the Ames lecture is the best proof possible that The News is no more independent than a slyly Government journal could be.

EDITORIAL NOTES

About two months ago The Calgary Herald published a supplement advertising the Dominion Exhibition and supplied copies of it to several Western papers to enclose in their regular issue. Immediately the Post Office Department got after the papers that used the supplement and made them pay extra postage, thus taking away all the profit from the issue.

Now the Edmonton Bulletin, Frank Oliver's paper, has printed a supplement of eight pages devoted exclusively to a puff for the Alberta government. This has been supplied to the Liberal papers in Alberta and has been sent out exactly as The Herald's supplement.

It would be interesting to know how much extra postage is being paid on it, and if there is any, who pays it. Of course, there is a lifference since one is a Liberal paper and the other an Independent.

Modern Socialism has again shown to what depths it can fall. The latest act is one that should discredit it for all time under its present self-elected leaders. While the Duke of Connaught was visiting Glasgow recently, a crowd of Socialists attempted to mob him. They hissed him, shouted shocking language at him, and jeered the national flag. When the National Anthem was sung not a head was uncovered. Later an attempt was made to raid a cathedral while service was in progress.

The idea of these acts is to course the municipality to provide the Socialists (or laborers as they call themselves) with work or money. This is in a nutshell, the aim of modern Socialism—the securing of a living at no effort to them. No man should be in authority, according to them, and yet those in authority should provide them with all the necessaries of life.

Another evidence of the inconsistency of modern Socialism and the reason it becomes an unmitigated nuisance is seen in Calgary. Only the other day the police had to arrest a Socialist speaker for blocking the sidewalks. He dared the police to arrest him after he was warned. In his illegal act he was willfully breaking a law enforced for the good of the people. It is not as much for thegood of the rich as for the poor to keep the sidewalks clear.

Ald. Tweed made a point when he said at the last Council meeting that if as much trouble had been taken with regard to the expenditure in other departments as was being taken in his there would not be so much kicking around town.

It was a laughable objection made by Ald. Forster to the expenses of the fire-watchmen being charged to the water account, when the sole reason of their employment was the tangle in the water service.

At last The Times is relieved of fighting the water service alone. O. W. Kealy has bearded the council in its den. Read his remarks in the council report, and see how much satisfaction he got. Who turned the valve off, and why?

The Medicine Hat News copies the following from the Lethbridge Herald:

"The Medicine Hat Times is so wrathy over the Ames scandals, that one wonders why it neglects to expose that awful Robbins Irrigation deal about which it should be familiar."

In the columns of the Herald this was all right but in the Medicine Hat News it showed only another of those too common examples of very bad taste to say the least. The News knows that the Conservatives of this city are working just as strongly for the Southern Alberta Land Co., as are the Liberals. Every citizen of Medicine Hat is doing the same. Then for The News to strive in this manner to bring in dissension shows how little it has the interests of Medicine Hat at heart. Some sensible local Liberals should sit down good and hard on the paper which is no credit to them. The Southern Alberta Land Co. has the support of The Times in spite of The News efforts to make a disturbance.

It is the knowledge that the News is not in very close touch with its party, that such smallness is not a characteristic of the leading Liberals in town, that enables the Conservatives to continue their work for the irrigation ditch feeling that in this they are at one with their political opponents who are bigger than The News' standard.

The Times thinks neither the city nor the Southern Alberta Land Co. will feel any great sense of gratitude toThe News for its efforts to put obstacles in the way of irrigation simply to make a party point. To continue its work it can quote from the Winnipeg Free Press, The Toronto Globe, the Calgary Albertan, The Edmonton Bulletin and dozens of other papers which know nothing of local conditions.

High Tribute to Canada

Kaiser's Close Friend Buys Gerhard Heintzman Piano

Baron von Landsberg Orders One for His Castle in Germany

Those Canadians who have of late years taken pride in the phase, "Made in Canada," will be gratified to learn of the honor which has just been paid to Canadian industry and skill that could hardly be surpassed in its significance. It goes without saying that to be anything other than a reproach the phase, "Made in Canada," must carry with it a certificate of excellence, and one manufacturer, at least, has shown that it does.

Some years ago, in 1886, to be exact, the late Chancellor von Bismarck was struck by the tonal beauty and superb quality of workmanship of a piano exhibited at the Indian and Colonial Exposition by Mr. Gerhard Heintzman, of Toronto, Canada. So much so, indeed, that he purchased it and had it installed in his Castle of Friedrichsruhe, where it became the favorite instrument of the ladies of the family.

Now, in Germany musical taste is more widely diffused and more highly organized than in any country under the sun. It is a nation whose Kaiser himself is an amateur composer, and where the higher forms of music are the recreation of its statesmen. The endorsation of the greatest statesman in its history was naturally an honor prized beyond words by Mr. Gerhard Heintzman, who is one of those "old-fashioned" manufacturers, to whom the excellence of his output gives greater pleasure than immediate profit. Little did he dream, however, that the incident was to have a sequel.

This Summer he took a vacation in Germany, and early in August chanced to meet his Excellency Baron von Landsberg, one of the greatest men of the German nobility, and possessor of the highest orders in the Empire, than whom none stands closer as personal friend and adviser to the Kaiser. The conversation turning on Canada, the Baron spoke of the Canadian piano he had heard and admired at Friedrichsruhe. Learning that he was talking to the very man who had made it, he ordered one for his daughter, who is one of the finest musicians and pianistes in Germany.

Mr. Heintzman was commanded to visit the castle of Landsberg, and heard the Baroness play. It was then decidod that the instrument should take the form of a studio grand, built in conformity with the historic furniture of the castle, which is in rich mahogany. Orders were at once cabled to Toronto, and the piano will be shipped to Germany this week. A representative of The Mail and Empire saw the instrument, and in beauty of workmanship and exquisite quality it should amply meet the expectations of its recipient.

It must be admitted that so signal an honor from so authorative a source has seldom been paid to Canadian industry.

THE CITY FATHERS

The regular meeting of the city council was held on Tuesday evening last at eight o'clock. There were present: The Mayor; Alds. Baker, McKay, Spencer, Forster, Tweed, and Huckvale.

Pound keeper Morrey wrote in reference to Mr. Baillie's dog. He claimed that he had, to his knowledge, never had a dog belonging to Mr. Baillie in the pound, and that if such a dog had been impounded, it must have been destroyed long ago. The clerk said that Mr. Baillie had announced his intention to bring an action against the city, as the dog was a very valuable one and he had witnesses to prove that the dog was taken out the day after being impounded and sold. The Mayor thought the best plan was to leave the matter till an action was brought against the city, and if Mr. Baillie's version of the affair was upheld, to deduct from Morrey's pay any expense involved. This course was decided upon and the letter filed.

Hon. Frank Oliver wrote promising consideration for the city's recommendations regarding the Southern Alberta Land Co:

Thos. Littleford, weed inspector, wrote that he was informed by the chief weed inspector that it was up to the city to attend to the weeds, and not a part of his duty. Filed, and the requirements of the ordinance to be looked into.

Arthur Lethen wrote that he had met with an accident seven or eight weeks ago whilst going toward the depot on the west side walk of Montreal Street. The sidewalk was not paved, and as he was going along it caved in and he was thrown violently forward. As a result his foot was badly sprained and he had to go about on one foot, losing his employment in consequence. He now wished to know if a position could be found for him as a laborer for the city. Referred to Public Works Committee.

The secretary of the Citizen's Band wrote asking permission to purchase a cornet and music stands, the cost about $87. Referred to Parks and Market Committee for a report.

Two communications were read one from the Pacific Coast Fire Chief's Association, the other from a B. C. Association, asking that the fire chief be sent down to a convention to be held at the coast. The Mayor also stated that he had received a communication from Des Moines inviting him to attend a similar invitation. It was pointed out that Fire Chief Hatcher had recently attended a Fire Chiefs' Convention at Regina. Communication filed.

The secretary-treasurer of the Agricultural Society wrote making application for use of the exhibition grounds for the week of September 21—26, inclusive, and also asking permission to erect a temporary building 12 ft. by 60 ft. to the left of the main entrance. The Mayor, speaking of the latter request, stated that the structure would be built in sections so that it might be taken down for transportation. Application granted.

The Geo. A. Stimson Co. and Nay and James made enquiry as to the market debentures, and a letter from the W. A. McKenzie Co. stated the desire of that firm to purchase a hypothetical $40,000 issue. The Stimson Co. had "a client just waiting for" the market debentures. In the course of discussion it transpired that the market debentures might be held for four years before being placed on the market. It was decided to notify the two first named enquirers that the marvet debentures were for sale at par, and to explain to the Mackenzie Co. that no $40,000 issue was for sale by the city.

Fire Chief Hatcher wrote suggesting that the new man be put on by Sept. 15, also raising the question of increased pay to drivers after a year's service. The writer going away for a two week's holiday and thought the new man should be put on by the 15th to get accustomed to his duties. Another letter from Chief Hatcher called attention to certain needs of the fire department. With regard to the employment of the new man by the 15th, the Mayor thought it was a question of whether it was wise to hire two men to do one man's work. Ald. Baker thought that if the new man were competent, as he was supposed to be, he should not need much initiation into his duties. Ald. Tweed objected to the attitude of the council towards the fire department; he thought that if as much trouble had been taken with regard to expenditure in other departments as was being taken in his, there would have been "no kicking around town." The fire brigade were trying to prove themselves a credit to the town; though with some people the idea prevailed that they were merely there for show. All of the questions raised by the chief's correspondence, including his request for supplies, attention to leaking hydrants, etc., were referred to the fire, water and light committee with power to act.

The Commissioner of Irrigation, at Winnipeg, notified the council that a party of Scotch agriculturists would be in the city on Sept. 10, and requested that a cordial reception be given them. On Ald. Bakers motion it was decided to appoint a committee to work with the Board of Trade. The Mayor nominated Alds. Huckvale, Forster and Morrow.

The report of the special committee appointed to deal with tenders for brass goods, showed that the Marshall Co. had been the successful tenderers, their figures being the lowest, viz., $221.51. Report adopted.

Health and relief committee recommended that an item of $5,125 for wages for fire watchmen during the drought, should be transferred to the proper account. Ald. Forster objected to this charge being placed against the water department, but a motion that this be done was carried.

A report with regard to certain help in the treasurer's office recommended that $50 of the cost be paid by the city and $20.00 by W. N. Adsit. Ald. Spencer explained that Mr. Adsit had asked permission before the latter item was expended to have assistance in his office provided he himself paid for it, and had been informed that he was at liberty to do so, and he (Ald. Spencer) objected to the city now having to pay up.

Report of special committee presented by Ald. Huckvale recommended that Mr. Shepherd be employed in the stores and that Mr. Charlton work for the clerk and treasurer. Ald. Huckvale raised the question of how long Charlton would be required. Questioned by the council the clerk stated that there was not sufficient work for Charlton in his office all the time. He thought it would be more satisfactory if the assistant were placed under Mr. Adsit. A motion to that effect was carried by the council, the Mayor pointing out that hitherto Charleton had not considered himself in charge of anybody.

Ald. Tweed reported that Nelson Lott had been appointed on the recommendation of Chief Hatcher to fill the vacancy created by McBride's resignation.

Committee appointed to deal with resolutions to be brought before the Union of Canadian Municipalities in 1908, suggested resolutions dealing with the provision of a national consumptive sanitarium, and the adoption of a uniform system of public accounting.

It was decided on the finance committee's recommendation that a bonus of $1 per day be paid H. C. Cooper on account of bus service, from August 17 to October 17, 1903.

Wages items in connection with waterworks included $805.30 to permanent work, and $499.75 for maintenance. Ald. Baker understood that water connections were not to be gone on with as the account was already overdrawn. The gas committee was in debt and still going ahead. What were they going to do if the $15,000 debentures were turned down by the people? The gas dept. needed every dollar that was coming to them, to go on with the gas connections and the gas well. The Mayor did not remember just how the matter stood with regard to the water commissioners, but he thought the matter of the gas well was left to the finance committee.

On behalf of the Cypress Club and Bank of Commerce respectively, Mr. Kealy and Mr. T. L. Crawford whited on the council with regard to the provision of sidewalk on 4th Avenue in front of the property of the bodies named. Mr. Kealy pointed out that though it was of course for their own purposes that a sidewalk was desired, it was also a much-needed civic improvement. If the council were not in a position to put down a sidewalk at the present time they would ask that the street be graded around the buildings and a coating of gravel placed there for the time being. As it was at present, on windy days it was necessary to cross over a large quantity of mud.

There was another important matter to be brought before the council's notice. The lane by the Cypress Club was much higher than the grade. A gap there provided a great opportunity for a horse to slip, and possibly do serious damage. If any accident should occur the Club had no intention of taking any responsibility. The sidewalk was now about a foot higher than it should be.

Mr. Crawford announced that if the city were willing to have sidewalks put down, his institution would be willing to furnish the money and take the city's note. They would even wait one or two years if necessary, before demanding payment. Ald. Baker thought the most feasible plan would be to grade and place gravel around the buildings for the present, as next year the city would probably be in better shape to build concrete sidewalks. The Mayor was of the opinion that the matter should be referred to the public works and finance committees, that they might get together and see what could be done. Finally, on Ald. Baker's motion, seconded by Ald. Huckvale, the matter of lane and sidewalks was referred to public works committee with power to act. Speaking on the question of cost Mr. Crawford said that the engineer had estimated the cost of the work desired at about $800. The bank would be willing to take the city's note for the amount required, renewable at the end of six months. Mr. Kealy pointed out that the work could be undertaken at once, provided the city raised the money for its share of the expenditure out of taxes. It was Ald. Huckvale's opinion that if grading were undertaken at all it would have to be carried through to the corner of Toronto Street. The Methodist church and the Y.M.C., moreover, had petitioned the council some time ago for provision of a sidewalk.

The denizens of the semi-arid regions of the city have come to be looked upon, by the water-commissioners, as examples of Christian meekness and long suffering, or of Oriental fatalism. In consequence Mr. Kealy's timely protest came as some thing of a surprise. Asking permission for a few moments to address the council Mr. Kealy said: "I happen to be one of the despised ones of the city." It did not, he said, seem possible to get any satisfaction with regard to this cause of all the trouble. That morning he had tried to get Mr. Porter, he had tried to get the pump house on the telephone, but had been unsuccessful (and the city were paying for a telephone service). Later, the speaker's sister had telephoned and had been informed that the water-level in the standpipe was high—but still no water was available at the taps. Every man connected with the waterworks had a different version of the cause of the trouble. There was a shortage at the house on the previous day and on that day, the people at home got so tired of trying the taps that at last they gave it up. When Mr. Kealy tried the tap on his return home the supply was on, but during the greater part of the day it had not been available. That there was no stoppage in the pipes such as might interfere with the supply was evident from the fact that during the night air was coming through the water-closets. According to the speaker's recollection of physics wherever air could be forced water might be forced also. The matter was a sufficiently serious one to demand attention.

SOMETHING SHOULD BE DONE.

Unless something were done, the speaker wished to be STRUCK OFF PAYING FOR WATER DEBENTURES, for water rates. There was no reason in the world why, merely because a man lived on a hill, he should be subjected to such inconvenience and danger.

The engineer stated that he had been up to Mr. Kealy's house when he heard that the water service was not good, and had found that there was not very much flow. Going down to the pump house he discovered that an eight inch valve had been closed. Mr. Kealy, ironically, "That explains it!" In answer to a question by the mayor the engineer stated that if this valve were kept open, the hill would always get water whether the pumps were working or not.

The Mayor:—"What the objection to having this valve open?"

The Engineer:—"No objection."

Mr. Morrison brought up the pressure chart and the council spent a little time in its examination, and in theorizing as to the reason for the water's erratic conduct.

Anent the sanitary inspection of the city, Ald. Spencer reported that the police committee had met the other night. The committee were of the opinion that this work was not up to P. C. Beaumont, and they thought it advisable to engage a man to carry out the inspection. C. H. Evan had been engaged. Ald. Baker thought the action of the committee was correct, except that, in his opinion, a man more in need might have been hired. Matter was referred to the board of health with power to act.

MAGISTRATE SPEAKS FOR ZAM-BUK

Magistrate Perry, of Goldfields, B.C., believes in making a good thing known. Writing of Zam-Buk, the great household balm, he says:—"After a very fair trial I have proved Zam-Buk eminently satisfactory. In my case it cured a skin rash of five years' standing which no doctor had been able to do any good for. I would certainly encourage any person to keep Zam-Buk in his home." The magistrate is quite right. Every home needs Zam-Buk! Unequalled for cuts, burns, bruises, eczema, blood poisoning and all skin diseases. All stores and druggists sell it at 50 cents a box. Sure cure for piles.

DON'T NEGLECT THAT SORE!

A Chicago man has just died from blood poisoning arising from neglect of a small sore. Don't neglect a cut, a patch of eczema, or an open sore of any kind. The air is full of poison germs, waiting to start up their evil results in neglected sores, wounds, etc. In Zam-Buk is safety. Zam-Buk is so highly antiseptic that applied to any skin disease or injury it makes blood poisoning impossible. In using Zam-Buk you have three processes going on at once for Zam-Buk is healing soothing and antiseptic. Try it without delay.

A GENUINE OFFER.

TEST ZAM-BUK AT OUR EXPENSE!

We appreciate the position taken by the man or woman who says:—"If your preparation is what you claim, you should have no objection to letting us try it before spending our money on it." To every person taking this view we say, send one cent stamp (to pay return postage) and name and date of this paper to Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, and we will mail you a free trial box of Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is purely herbal, suitable for the delicate skin of little children, yet powerful enough to heal chronic sores of long years' standing. All druggists and stores, 50c. per box, 3 for $1.25.

Manly Statement by John Stanfield M. P.—Differs from Liberal Style

John Stanfield, M.P., has issued the following statement to the electors of Colchester:

"Gentlemen electors of the County of Colchester:—In view of the arrest and examination of Alonzo R. Bayne charged with violation of the Dominion Election Act in connection with my election on the 28th of November last, I feel that, in justice to my constituents, a public statement is due from me. I, therefore, now declare that I did not before, at the time, or since the election of myself, or through anyone else, have any dealings in any way with the said A. R. Bayne, in respect to politics or any other matter.

"In regard to the election, I say that I went into it, passed through it and came out of it with clean hands. I, in no way, violated the law. I instructed my friends and supporters to strictly observe the law in every particular, and they have since assured me they did so.

"It is true that after the election I heard rumors of wrongdoings, both in respect to myself and friends, and my opponent and his friends. I looked upon these rumors as the usual aftermath of sharply contested elections. My opponents have started investigations. I welcome them, and we shall see how clean or how besmirched are the hands of both parties and their principals before these investigations close.

"In the examination of Mr. Bayne no stone has been left unturned in the frantic efforts of my opponents to connect me with his doings, which has resulted in entire failure. Should the justice before whom the case has been tried find sufficient evidence to send Bayne up for trial and a jury of my fellow-countrymen find him guilty of the charges preferred against him, and that I in any way profited by his operations in my election, I will immediately thereafter, forward my resignation to the Speaker of the House of Commons at Ottawa.

"To be consistent and true to my constituents, I owe the above statement and proposal. My declaration for clean politics, a cleaner political life for Canada, stands for yesterday to-day and for the days to come.

(Signed) "JOHN STANFIELD."

(Lethbridge Herald)

There is considerable excitement in the Cardston country over the prospect of a railway being built from Browning, Mont., to Pincher Creek. The line is supposed to be built by the Great Northern. A prominent authority has stated that the line will be started next year as J. J. Hill is anxious to get in before the rush of settlement on the South Peigan Indian reserve which will shortly be thrown open for settlement. It is all being surveyed and after the allotment of land is made to the Indians, the balance will be for settlement. The trade from this rich district will be very great and the G. N.R. is after it.

Women's Ailments

There is no need whatever for so many women to suffer from pains and weakness, nervousness and sleeplessness, anæmia, hysteria and melancholia, faint and dizzy spells, and the hundred other troubles which render the life of too many women a round of sickness and suffering.

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

Have Restored Thousands of Canadian Women to Health and Strength

Young girls budding into womanhood who suffer with pains and headaches, and whose face is pale and blood water, or women at the change of life who are nervous, subject to hot flushes, feeling of pins and needles, etc., are tided over these trying times by Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They have a wonderful effect on a woman's system, making pains and aches vanish, bring color to the pale cheek and sparkle to the eye. The old, worn out, tired out, languid feelings give place to strength and vitality, and life seems worth living.

Railways To Do Sunday Work

After hearing further arguments and evidence in respect to the Grand Trunk's application for an order permitting the making up and movement of trains on Sunday when necessary, Judge Mabee, of the railway commission, announced that judgement would be given at the sitting of the board. The order when issued will probably apply to all railways in Canada. Mr. Cowan, counsel for the Grand Trunk, summed up the request of the company as follows:

(1) That its employees shall have permission to break through trains on Sunday when it is necessary, and to forward such shipments to their destination.

(2) To allow of furnishing of a through service to cattle shippers.

(3) To allow the company to deliver empty cars on Sunday to points along their lines for the loading of cattle on Monday.

(4) To allow the company to load and unload grain at lake ports and to forward grain trains to their destination on Sundays where traffic would otherwise be subject to undue delay.

Have You Suspected Your Kidneys as the Cause of Your Trouble

If you have backache, swelling of the feet and ankles, frequent or suppressed urine, painful sensation when urinating, specks floating before the eyes, great thirst, brick-dust deposit in the urine, or anything wrong with the urinary organs, then your kidneys are affected.

It is really not difficult to cure kidney trouble in its first stages. All you have to do is give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial. They are the most effective remedy to be had for all kidney and urinary troubles.

Mrs. Alfred LaBlanc, Black Cape, Que., writes:—I feel it my duty to say a word about your Doan's Kidney Pills. I suffered dreadful pain across my back so bad I could not stoop or bend. After having used two boxes I feel now most completely cured thanks to your pills. I highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills.

Price 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or sent direct on receipt of price by The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

The Scottish Agriculturists

The Scottish Agricultural Commission to Canada, on tour through the Dominion, spent Thursday of last week in the city. The commission, which is composed of twenty-two of the foremost public men and practical agriculturists of Scotland, hopes to follow in Canada the course of observation and enquiry which the similarly constituted commission followed in Denmark in (1904) and in Ireland in (1906), and to publish a report.

The main subjects of study are:—Land settlement, the constitution and operations of the Ministry of Agriculture; Agricultural education and research; experimental farms; live stock; mixed farming; wheat farming dairying; ranching; fruit and vegetable growing, agricultural co-operation; transit, cold storage and markets, etc.

The party came in on the morning train from the east, and were entertained during the day by a joint committee of the city council and the board of trade. In the afternoon an automobile ride was taken to the Canadian Land and Ranch Co. farm near Coleridge.

The chairman of the party is Dr. Carlaw Martin, editor of the "Dundee Advertiser," the principal Scottish newspaper of Liberal politics, and an important organ of agricultural affairs. Interviewed by The Times, Dr. Martin expressed himself as surprised at fitness shown by the prairie stock. For cattle whose sustenance is entirely derived from the prairie grasses their condition was remarkable.

Another member of the commission expressed regret that they were unable to get away from the main lines. They had hoped to inspect lands which were open for settlement, whereas the commissioners had only been able to see the lands already taken up.

Mr. W. Henderson, J.P., of the Scottish Chamber of Agriculture and a member of the Perthshire council and chairman of the committee of the council for administering the Diseases of Animals Act, expressed himself at length on the embargo question. He has taken a leading part in the movement for the free importation of Canadian cattle, knowing, in the words of the commission booklet, "that a resumption of trade would not only be of material benefit to both countries, but would tend to strengthen the relationship of Canada and Britain in a very especial manner. Mr. Henderson believes Canadian Cattle to be the healthiest in the world, and protests against their exclusion as live stock from the British markets. He is a member of the Free Importation of Canadian Cattle Association."

To The Times representative Mr. Henderson said: "We find that fat cattle worth 4c a pound live weight here, would be worth considerably more than double that amount in the Old Country. Computing the cost of transportation at from $20 to $25 according to point of shipment this leaves a considerable margin of profit. Leaner animals, worth only 3c a pound here, or the equivalent of 14 shillings per imperial hundred weight (112 pounds) would be worth in Scotland at least 24 shillings per cwt. Two million head of cattle have been shipped to Great Britain since the embargo, and there can not be the slightest doubt that from $20 to $40 a piece would have been obtained for these but for this protective measure. Cows worth $50 in this part of Canada are worth £21 ($105) in Britain." Mr. Henderson was confident that nothing would give such an impetus to cattle feeding as the removal of the embargo.

For the past twelve years Mr. Henderson has devoted himself to this important question, and has, through the press and on the public platform and by parliamentary lobbying, a continuous campaign against the obnoxious restrictions. The Irish members of parliament and the English breeders are today, he contends, the only forces working for its retention, which they desire as a protective measure. In view of the strength of the compact Irish party, all attempts to effect its removal have been unsuccessful. The objection raised from a sanitary standpoint is purely hypocritical; since Ireland has never admitted live cattle to her shores under any conditions. Even importations from Great Britain to Ireland, except for breeding purposes, are prohibited.

Among those in favor of repeal, the following may be mentioned: All the co-operative societies of the United Kingdom, Ireland included, (these representing 8,000,000 people) the Butchers' society, meat traders, the Chambers of Commerce and municipal boards of every large city in Britain, the convention of royal boroughs, the shipping, railway and dairy interests, and various agricultural societies such as the Scottish Chamber of Agriculture.

The Cabinet is practically unanimous on the question and is pledged to repeal. Mr. Asquith (the premier), John Morely, Lord Aberdeen, Mr. Haldane, Mr. Lloyd-George, Mr. Churchill, Capt. Sinclair (Secretary for Scotland), Mr. Ure (Lord Advocate), Mr. John Burns, have all spoken against the embargo.

What is now desired, said Mr. Henderson, is a strengthening of the hands of those across the water who are working for repeal. The weight of Canada's influence must be thrown in the balance and he believes that the next session of parliament will see this desirable consumation. The measure cannot be upheld by the present Free Trade administration. Canada's frontier regulations are of the best and the admission of diseased cattle practically an impossibility. Through Lord Strathcona she has offered to take still greater precautions in the event of the embargo being removed, and to restore the 90 days guarantee in force previous to its imposition.

In Glasgow careful record is kept by the municipality of the numbers of tuberculous animals slaughtered there, and in one year, out of 46,000 United States and Canadian cattle, less than .05 per cent were found with a taint of disease, and notone was condemned. Out of 48,000home bred cattle 13½ per cent. reacted and a large number were condemned.

Mr. Henderson denied the statement that if the embargo is removed, Canadian farmers will cease to fatten their cattle. He has many figures to prove that there was a spread of at least $10 on each beast between Canadian and English prices after allowing $25 for transportation each steer. If the embargo were removed the inland buyers, he claims, could sustain the price and the Canadian farmer would reap the benefit to the extent of $20 a head on his fat steers. At present in the case of large arrivals of live animals, the local buyers simply get together and name their prices, secure in the ten day clause.

Speaking on another issue, that of Tariff Reform and Colonial Preference, Mr. Henderson repudiated the suggestion that Tariff Reform, as understood in England, could be identified with Protection. The imposition of a tariff as proposed, would be merely retaliatory, and could be removed when the foreign countries at which the tariff was aimed, lowered their Protective wall. The ultimate aim of the Tariff Reform movement was the bringing about of a truer state of Free Trade between Britain and other commercial countries.

As to Colonial preference, the remarkable thing about the present situation was that the very people who posed as friends of the colonies, who wished to impose a discriminatory tariff to encourage the grain-growing colonies, were the most strenuous upholders of the present embargo regulations.

From Medicine Hat the commission went on to the Crow towns, thence they will go through to the coast province, visiting Calgary and Northern Alberta on their return, and leaving for Britain where they will present their report on October 2.

CORRESPONDENCE

(The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents, nor does it necessarily agree with them.)

Editor of The Times:

According to Mr. Harvey Hall's letter of July 22nd, we have at last obtained a definite amended Railway Act. It is a matter for congratulation to know that the travelling public are protected against carelessness of employees of the Companies.

Section 283 of the Criminal Code reads:—

"Everyone is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to 2 years "imprisonment who, by any unlawful act or by any wilful omission or "neglect of duty endangers or causes "to be endangered the safety of any "person, conveyed or being in or on "a railway or aids or assists therein. 55—56V, O 29, S251.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier appears to have fears that the present amended act may have a tendency to induce carelessness on the part of railwaymen, which would jeopardise the safety of the travelling public.

Everyone will join the writer in feeling grateful to our distinguished Premier for his earnest endeavors to have a stringent law for their protection whilst travelling.

It is also a matter for congratulation, to know that in the past allaws have been zealously enforced by the fact of so many recorded dismissals and convictions.

It is not the writer's intention to go into the rights and wrongs of the present C.P.R. strike, but to draw attention to the manner in which these laws are being ignored.

It is a daily occurrence at different points, for trains to leave in such a bad condition, that it is a miracle there are not more accidents, and to a man with practical knowledge, trains are daily leaving in an unsafe condition, and, each moment is a menace to the passengers. Sworn testimony can be produced of trains leaving without inspection, and an order has been issued to conductors trainmen, etc., that the responsibility of taking out trains without inspection will rest with the superintendents and other officials.

According to that order they are to take a train out whether safe or unsafe, and a man, who is perhaps 100 miles away, accepts the responsibility. It is quite clear that the passengers are being most carefully protected! It is also a fact that many instances are on record where engineers, etc., have refused to take out trains because of the dangerous condition, but have done so under protest after threats of dismissal, etc.

We should be glad to know whether any of the above Acts are indictable under the Crimal Code?

What appears to be a matter of regret, and deep sorrow, is, that the Minister of that department, which supervises these matters, in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Cabinet is well acquainted with all these conditions and breaches of the law, and has been informed of them for the last three weeks. Yet nothing in the way of prosecutions has been heard of.

There is no doubt that had any of the acts been committed under normal conditions by any ordinary railwayman, prompt action would have been taken.

The C.P.R. continue to coolly ignore the law, and, have become quite bold by openly breaking the Alien Labor Act. The Government have apparently dropped into a state of mental atrophy; forgetting that they made laws for the protection of the public. Perhaps they are scared to attack so gigantic a corporation; or is it, that Government laws do not apply to the C.P.R.

The writer's opinion is, that the Government make laws, with the sanction of the people, and does not enforce them with justice, and equity it is about time for the people to return to Parliament a body of men who will.

Yours faithfully,

R. M. NICHOL.

Secretary of the Federated Unions.

Alfalfa

By Professor Rutherford, Manitoba Agricultural College

(Farm Crops)

It is believed by many agriculturists that Alfalfa will some day be a more valuable crop to the prairie provinces of Canada than is wheat to-day. Alfalfa has revolutionized the agriculture of Arizona, Colorado Kansas and Nebraska. It has played an important part in the agriculture in California for more than half a century. At the present time this plant is held in such high esteem by the U. S. department of agriculture that experts have been sent to far Siberia in search of hardy varieties suitable for the more northern states where its presence is so much needed just now to rejuvenate the worn out wheat fields and to supply cheap nitrogenous food for cattle, sheep, pigs and poultry. Already this plant is being grown successfully in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Feeds	Dry Matter	Digestible Protein	Digestible Carbo-hydrates	Digestible Fat
Alfalfa	91.6	11.0	39.6	1.2
Wheat Bran	87.7	12.3	37.1	2.6
Red Clover	84.7	6.8	35.8	1.7
Timothy	86.8	2.8	43.4	1.4

Hays estimates its feeding value per acre as compared with red clover and timothy as follows:

	Yield Per Acre, Tons	Digestible Nutrients Pounds	Digestible Protein Pounds
Alfalfa	2.3	2461	506
Red Clover	1.1	1027	150
Timothy	1.1	1097	62

In some cases only acre plots are being tried, while in others large fields have been established. Alfalfa is coming slowly but surely.

Something of its History

The original home of the Alfalfa plant is Southern and Western Asia. The Valley of the Euphrates is its natural habitat. Long before the Christian era Alfalfa was an economic factor in the agriculture of the East. Even in Abraham's time, as a food for animals, it was esteemed of great value. From the Valley of the Euphrates it was taken to Egypt, and from there to Greece and on to Rome, and from there to Spain.

It found its way over into Switzerland and there got the name of "Lucerne." From Spain it was taken to Chili and Peru in South America, and from there it found its way to Mexico and Texas. More than 50 years ago it was taken from Chili and Peru to California. From California it has worked its way east until it has fairly overrun the mountain states and is fast taking possession of many parts of the Mississippi Valley. Where it goes wealth and prosperity follow in its train. In the early part of the 19th century it was cultivated and utilized in the eastern States as intelligently as it is now in the states of the West. It is believed that it came to the Eastern states from Switzerland under the name "Lucerne." It was introduced into New York state in 1820. More than twenty years ago seed was brought from Arizona into one of the counties of Eastern Ontario, where it thrived. For a number of years alfalfa has been grown successfully on the experimental farms at Guelph, and also on the several Dominion experimental farms, aswell as on many farms throughout Canada from the east to the west.

Description.

Alfalfa belongs to the same family as red clover, vetches, pease, beans and caragana. It is called a leguxe and belongs to the family known as the Leguminosae—a family of plants that bear their seed in a pod. The pod on the Alfalfa plant is a sort of spiral shaped, and the seed is kidney shaped, yellow in color, and twice as large as the seed of red clover. The blossams are purple—in rare cases, white—and are borne on the end of the branches. The young plant has but a single stem. When it becomes older, or after the top has been cut off, several stems start out from the crown—sometimes as many as a hundred have been counted on one plant. The leaves on a healthy plant are a dark green color. They are in whorls of three, and are rather long and oblong—ovate in shape. The plant has a long tap root that penetrates the soil to great depths. It is not uncommon to find hard pan a foot or more through penetrated by the root of the Alfalfa plant, and the roots have often been found at depths of from twelve to twenty feet. From the tap root, innumerable branching roots spring and scatter themselves through the soil at great depths. On the roots of healthy Alfalfa plants, little nodules or tubercles are found. These are the home of innumerable bacteria that have the power to gather the free nitrogen of the air and store it up in a form available as food for the Alfalfa plant. This alone is one of the most important features in connection with Alfalfa. In the case of wheat, oats, barley, timothy, bronce, rye, corn and other cereals, there are no nitrogen gathering bacteria living on their roots.

As a Food for Animals.

Alfalfa has long been regarded as a most valuable food for horses, cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry. In 1835 a farmer of Roxbury, Mass., wrote to the Genesee Farmer regarding the peculiar advantages of Lucerne grass (Alfalfa) as follows: "First, double as in wheat at least on the same extent of ground, having secured two good crops the first season in which it was sown; second, that it will endure the severest drought when all other grasses fail; and, third, that it is a favorite grass with the horse and cow, and will fatten them faster than any other grass; that it will do as much for a horse as an ample supply of grass and four pounds of grain, and aid in keeping flesh and strength."

It will be seen from the above tables that Alfalfa is high in protein or flesh-forming elements. On this account it is valuable to feed along with either corn or barley. When fed alone it forms a well balanced ration. It is excellent food for young and growing animals, such as calves, colts and lambs, and it is invaluable as a feed for dairy cows. In the table above bran is a little ahead of Alfalfa in digestible protein. However, good Alfalfa hay is better, pound for pound, than most of the bran we get nowadays, for there is more hull and less of the inside with quite a proportion of weed seeds thrown in. You can therefore grow on your own farm a feed stuff richer in muscle and milk forming elements than the bran you pay $18 to $20 for. The leaves are very rich in both protein and ash, and much care should be taken in the harvesting to preserve them. Alfalfa is a most valuable winter food for brood sows, and the leaves constitute a goodpart of the ration for poultry.

Alfalfa makes an excellent pasture for hogs. It is good, too, for sheep and cattle, but care must be taken to prevent bloating. Both sheep and cattle should be turned upan it for the first time well on in the day when they are full of dryfeed, and is wet.
should not be allowed on it when it

Alfalfa has a loosening effect upon the bowels, and acts as a tonic when fed either as pasture or as hay.

Its Productiveness

Alfalfa is a very rapid grower and produces in many sections enormous yields of hay. In California, Colorado, Nebraska and Kansas, where it is grown under irrigation, five and six crops a year are harvested; and in drier regions of the north, two and sometimes three good crops are harvested.

Its Effect Upon the Soil and Succeeding Crops.

On account of its deep roots, it is a deep feeder and brings up mineral matter such as potash, lime and phosphorous from deep down in the soil. It stores these mineral substances in its own stems and leaves to a great extent. If these stems and leaves are removed from the field, the soil will be so much poorer in mineral substance. Some mineral substances are stored in the roots, and as there is an immense root system, even near the surface, it will be seen that the surface soil is richer in these elements at the expense of the lower soil. Then the great number of roots penetrate the soil in every direction, and when these roots decay they leave the soil full of openings through which water willdrain away, and through which air will readily pass, both of which effect a wholesome and renovating influence upon the soil through various agencies. The soil is made richer in nitrogen on account of the work done by the nodule bacteria that live in the tubercules on the Alfalfa roots as explained above. Even thoughthe stems and leaves have been removed from the field, the soil is much richer in nitrogen than it was before the Alfalfa was planted. The free nitrogen of the air, of which there is an unlimited supply, has been gathered and stored in the tubercles on the roots and left in an available form for a succeeding crop. More humus has been added, and the soil is richer and possesses greater water holding capacity on this account.

Wheat, corn and other cereals produce larger yields after Alfalfa stubble has been plowed down because of added nitrogen, and because the mineral substances have beenbrought nearer the surface where the roots of these plants have access to them.

Where Alfalfa Thrives Best.

Alfalfa, like other plants, has its likes and dislikes as regards soil and location. It has been foundthat Alfalfa does well on almost every kind of soil on which it has been much better on some kinds than on tried, but that it thrives and yields others. Sandy soils give good returns, and even the rich alluvial river bottoms where good drainage has been affected. Alfalfa does its best on rich soil with a rather open subsoil, where water does not lie close to the surface. Alfalfa will not live in a soil that is wet and sour. It is worse than useless to try it in such a soil.

Seed Bed for Alfalfa.

A good seed-bed for wheat should be the very best for Alfalfa. The soil must be loosened to a good depth by the plow, and then well compacted with the harrow until the bed is firm and solid, with a loose mulch of about one and one half to two inches in depth on top. Moisture should be conserved, as hasbeen outlined in the pages of Farm Crops (see June number), so as to effect quick, strong germination. The seedbed should be free from weeds. All weed seeds should be induced to grow and then killed by cultivation. Alfalfa is a delicate plant at first, and requires careful nursing. This is accomplished by giving it the best kind of seed-bed. To insure a good stand, it is well to apply ten to fifteen loads of well rotted manure per acre.

The Seed to Sow.

In procuring seed, get it from someone who can guarantee it free from noxious and other weed seeds and also free from dodder. Itshould be sown at the rate of twenty to twenty-five pounds per acre. It is well to get a good close stand on the ground. The seed may be sown with a nurse crop, say a bushel of barley or oats, and this nurse crop cut green, made into hay and removed from thefield as soon as possible. It is better to sow without a nurse crop for several reasons:—first, weed seeds may be germinated in the spring, or killed up to the first or second week of June; second, the moisture stored in the soil will all be available for the young Alfalfa plants and their growth will be hastened; third, the danger of the sun's killing the young plants after a nurse crop has been removed will be obviated. Sow the seed about an inch and one-half deep, broadcast, in soil compact below and mellow on surface, harrow twice, once each way, and pack.

Inoculation.

When a soil contains the nodule bacteria that live on Alfalfa roots, the crop thrives well, and takes on a dark green color. In many soils these bacteria are not present, and have to be imported. They may be brought in the soil from a fieldwhere Alfalfa has been successfully grown. This should be sown broadcast over the field at the rate of one hundred to one hundred and fifty pounds per acre and harrowed in. In bringing in soil of this sort, there is always a danger of bringing weed seeds and dodder spores, so it is better to inoculate the soil by treating the seed before sowing with a pure culture of the Alfalfa bacteria. This may be obtained from Ottawa or Guelph, and no doubt in the near future it will be obtainable at the Manitoba Agricultural College. On many of our soils the bacteria already exists, but to ensure success the soil or seed should be inoculated.

Like everything else that is good the growing crop requires some care when it is young. Weeds, if allowed to grow, will rob it of moisture and standing room and finally kill it out, so these should be attended to. When the Alfalfa plants are eight to ten inches high to cut off the weeds and the tops of the Alfalfa plants. This operation may be done often, and will result in keeping down the weeds as well as thickening up the crop. This thickening is accomplished in this way. The Alfalfa plant has a crown. From this crown the single stem grows at first, and afterwards, when the top is cut, numerous branches spring out and grow rapidly. Every time the tops are cut new branches start at the crown.

Leave the cuttings on the ground. They will serve as a mulch to conserve moisture and protect theplants. Let it grow tall in the fall, so as to hold the snow for its own protection. Do not pasture the first year. Give the crop every chance to get well rooted and it will more than make up the second and succeeding years for the care and protection you have bestowed upon it the first. Never pasture an Alfalfa field close. If the crowns are eaten off, the plants die. Do not let sheep or cattle on when it is wet, and be careful about turning them on empty at first, as it will cause bloating the same as will clover.

It would be well if every farmer in the west would take an acre of a well prepared fallow and seed it next spring with Alfalfa as outlined above, in order to find out if it will thrive on his place. Have it near the barn where it will be useful for cutting green, and where visitors can easily inspect it.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

Nottingham, Eng., Sept. 9.— The Trade Union congress passed a resolution condemning British workmen who engaged themselves as strike breakers in Germany and the Colonies. The congress voted down a motion for amalgamation with the labor party, which is controlled by the Socialists. Two fraternal delegates from the American Federation of Labor, who are watching the proceedings, were received by the congress.

Glasgow, Sept. 8.—The Socialist leaders in the agitation among the unemployed which has been going on here for several days past still maintained a threatening attitude, necessitating constant vigilance and the employment of a large extra force of police. Last night one of the leaders after asserting that it had been decided to make a series of midnight marches into the wealthy sections of the city, after the extraordinary threat that unless the municipal council did something practical for the unemployed within a month, he would reveal all the secrets of the Masonic organization and put every man, woman and child in Glasgow in possession of all the tokens, grips and pass-words of the order.

Nottingham, Eng., Sept. 7.— At the opening of the Trades Union Congress, representing 750,000 workmen, today, the greatest railroad strike in the history of England was forecasted. A change of working conditions to be demanded by the congress is expected to bring on a bitter contest.

Montreal, Que., Sept. 8.—The G.T.R. conductors and trainmen who have been in session here for some weeks revising the present wage schedule which expires this year, had several conferences with officials but have returned to their homes for the present without a settlement. A report circulated in the west that the questions at issue had been settled and that the men had been granted a general increase equal to about five per cent, is incorrect.

The committee will return here again in the beginning of November when the executives of other organizations whose schedules expire this year will also meet to consider the changes considered necessary.

As far as the trainmen are concerned, it is the question of reduction of hours and rearrangement of train runs rather than wages. When asked today whether there would likely be trouble over the demands to be presented in November, one member of the executive said he did not think trouble was likely, if the officialsmet the men in a conciliatory spirit. The men recognizing that the present was not a favorable time to make big demands, had been governed by a spirit of moderation.

Cleveland, Sept. 7.—William D. Haywood, formerly secretary of the Western Federation of Miners, made the principal Labor Day speech here today. In the parade were about 20,000 unionists, including a large delegation of waitresses in caps and aprons, and a body of street railroad employees who still remain on strike against the Municipal Tract ion Company. Many of the former street railroad men now employed in other cities, came to the parade with their associates.

29,801 acres of valuable timber land.

Sold by the government for $9,017.50 to W. F. Wilson, D. A. Reeser and A. E. Philip, three political friends of Hon. Clifford Sifton.

Sold immediately by Wilson & Co. to an American syndicate for $101,830.00.

RAKE-OFF for the three grafters and their unnamed associates $91,812.50

The foregoing is in brief the story of the Indian land scandal.

The facts are contained in Hansard of July 15, 1908, columns 13473 to 13517.

Apologists for the governmentdeny that there is a scandal.

The facts speak for themselves.

The official records prove the case against the government.

The Minister of Interior, Hon. Frank Oliver, could not dispute the facts.

He only spoke for a few moments in reply to Mr. Boyce, the member who made the charges.

In the course of those few moments the speaker had to call him to order several times for unparliamentary language.

His defence consisted of an angry and abusive tirade against Mr. Boyce

Away back in 1899, when Mr. Sifton was minister of interior, application was made for the lands by a person signing himself "A. H. Gale, Oxford, England."

Gale was merely a stool-pigeon.

The grafters came into the game later on.

A letter was written by one of the grafters, Wilson, April 20, 1899, to the department and on file in the records (see column 13495 Hansard) shows the fine Italian hand of Clifford Sifton.

The letter says:

"Mr. Sifton wanted the application put in Mr. Gale's name at the time."

Further, it says:

"You will notice an applicationwas put in by A. H. Gale dated July 25, 1899, covering all the lands in the district. This, however, will not interfere with my application, as Mr. Gale is with me in the matter and we can work under either application,"

What does this show?

The fact that Clifford Sifton, minister of interior and trustee of the Indian lands, was deliberately conspiring with three of his political friends to make a gift of the lands to those friends; and that, to cover his tracks he arranged that an unknown person, A. H. Gale, of Oxford England, should put in the first application for the land.

By that trick he expected to give the transaction an appearance of good faith,

There was, apparently, no hurry about concluding the matter.

It dragged on for several years.

But there were, in fact, reasons for the delay.

While the grafters, Wilson & Co., were negotiating with the government, they were, at the same time negotiating with the American syndicate.

Wilson & Co., wanted the lands but they only wanted them if they could immediately sell, at a large profit, to the American syndicate.

On April 18, 1900, Wilson was notified by the government that he and his friends could have the land on several conditions. The principal of these conditions were:

1. That the land should be valued t a sworn valuator.
2. Settlers to be placed on the parts reported for settlement.
3. The sale to be subject to existing timber licenses.
4. A saw mill with capacity of three to five million feet per annum to be operated on the land.

These conditions did not suit the grafters,

Why?

Because they could not make a deal with the Americans subject to such conditions.

The Americans wanted the lands; but they wanted them free from conditions, so that they could carry the timber to the United States and manufacture it there.

The first care of the grafters was to procure a low valuation.

So they recommended a man, McCawley as valuator.

And the interior department appointed the purchaser's man.

He did the work he was expected to do, and reported the value as $9 987.15.

At the very time that this bogus report went to the department there also went to it from Mr. Orr, the officer who forwarded it, the important statement that Thomas Bishop, a lumberman of experience, who was well acquainted with the district, estimated the value to be very much greater than McCawley's bogus valuation.

But the department pigeon-holed the statement and went on with the deal.

The next business of the grafters was to get rid of the conditions; and the official correspondence shows that they succeeded.

First, the condition for a permanent saw-mill was modified to a portable mill.

Secondly, the portable mill clause was entirely struck out.

Thirdly, the condition about existing timber licenses was struck out.

And, fourthly, the condition about settlers was struck out.

This negotiation took up a good deal of time; but there was big money in it for the grafters.

A most damaging fact is that the government knew that Wilson & Co. while they were intriguing for Cancellation of the conditions, were negotiating a sale of the land, free from conditions, to the American syndicate.

This fact, is proved by two letters: One, written from Chicago, September 17, 1903, asking if Wilson's representation that the timber could be exported to the United States, was true. The other, written from the department in reply, September, 22, 1903, stating that Wilson had not completed the purchase, and in dicating that the timber could not be exported,

But Wilson and his friends prevailed.

They got the land free from all conditions.

They got more than that out of the country.

The deal was not concluded until 1906.

In the meantime Sifton resigned, and Frank Oliver became minister of the interior.

The deal had run over six years; and the department of justice ruled that Wilson & Co., owed the interior department $1,167.32 for interest on deferred payments.

But on February 12, 1906, Frank Oliver, caused the whole of that interest to be remitted; and the grafters thereby received a further gift of $1,167.32 from the country.

Wilson, Reeser and Philip, the favored trio, thus received a grant of the land for $9,017.50.

They had it sold to the American syndicate for $101,830.00 before the grant was issued to them.

By the infamous conduct of Sifton and Oliver, two traitors to public interest and public duty, the three grafters were enabled to pocket the substantial rake-off of $91,812.50.—Halifax Herald.

A Doctor's Statement

Baie St. Paul, C.C., Que.
March 27th, 1907.

"Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited,
Toronto, Ont.

Gentlemen:—

My many thanks for Psychine and Oxomulsion. I have used them with very great satisfaction both in my own case and in that of my friends. It affords me much pleasure to recommend a remedy which is really good in cases for which it is intended. I am, yours very truly,"

DR. ERNEST A. ALLARD.

Doctors recognize that Psychine is one of the very best remedies for all throat, loung and stomach troubles and all run down conditions, from whatever cause. It is the prescription of one of the world's greatest specialists in diseases of the throat, lungs, and stomach, and all wasting diseases. Ask your druggist for it, at 50c and 1.00, or T. A. Slocum, Limited, Toronto.

But Don't Mention This

While the Liberal Press is so interested in the Colchester case a few more Maritime Province incidents might be mentioned where even Liberal Cabinet Ministers are concerned. Somehow the party press forget them.

It will be a pleasure to the citizens of Halifax to express, in the way now opening to them, their condemnation of the scheme which deprived them of Mr. Borden's services at the last election. In Nova Scotia in 1904 the Government carried every seat. It was a most extraordinary operation, and the entire province was surprised.

When the facts became known election petitions were entered in ten constituencies. At once the Government resorted to technicalities to escape trials. In the case of Sir Frederick Borden, the Minister of Militia, the courts were dodged on the plea that the Minister had been served with notice of the protest in Boston, a foreign city. Sir Frederick was too loyal a subject to be upset as a allow his election to be upset as a result of a notification placed in his hands in Boston. In several other cases the petitions were averted for minor reasons. It was alleged, for example, in certain constituencies that the petitioner had hired vehicles thus breaking the law. This reported violation of the statute saved the sitting members from trial, and enabled them to hold on, no matter to what extent the law had been broken in their case. Mr. Fielding tried to retain his seat without investigation, but the technicalities raised in his behalf were insufficient. As a consequence, there was a trial. It was then found that the Ministerhad ...d as his agents the Speaker of the Legislature, and a mass of officials. Large sums of money and quantities of liquor had been distributedamong these persons, and from them the money and liquors passed to voters, the purpose being the influencing of the elections. Mr. Fielding was unseated, and the question of his disqualification was left over for later consideration. While Mr. Fielding was being exposed, Messrs. Roche ...d Carney, the men who defeated Mr. Borden and his colleague in Halifax, were making a furious fight against the attempts to ventilate the schemes which had resulted in their return to parliament. They were summoned to court, and immediately their counsel entered objections which passed through all the lower courts, and, finally, reached the Supreme Court at Ottawa. By the final tribunal the technicality was brushed aside, and the trial was ordered. When the court assembled again, another technical objection was raised. This point was also argued in all the courts, and was finally carried to the Supreme Court. Again the Supreme Court ordered the trial to proceed. For a third time the trial was commenced, whereupon another objection was taken, and this, in turn, was carried through the lower courts, and finally appealed to the Supreme Court. The litigation commenced in December, 1904, and on September 8, 1907, the last appeal was taken to the Supreme Court. Meanwhile, the two members occupied their seats as if they had been duly elected, and they hold them to this day.

At the first trial some evidence was taken. This testimony indicated that Mr. Borden had been cheated out of the seat through the expenditure of money and the distribution of liquor. The judge who heard the witnesses strongly advised the two men to resign; but the Government would not permit this, and so, at great expense, the cases have been drawn out that the illegally acquired seats may be retained and that the truth might not be made public. There can be no doubt that Mr. Bordenwas one of the victims of the conspiracy to swindle the people in Nova Scotia. The electors did not know, when this manoeuvre was being practised upon them, that any man would be guilty of it, and were, therefore, unprepared to meet it. But they are better informed now, and may be expected to frustrate the schemes that will no doubt be made to steal seats once again.

Fact and Fiction of Hydrophobia

(Toronto Mail).

A Toronto veterinary surgeon, who makes a specialty of the diseases of dogs, declared the other day his belief that the dog that bit Mrs. Sherwin did not communicate rabies to her, despite the fact that an examination of the woman's blood revealed an organism said to be rabies. The truth is that rabies is one of the most mysterious of malalies, and exact knowledge on the subject is scarce. There are two or three facts however, that are pretty well established, and if dog owners were guided by them, there would be no rabies As a matter of fact there has never been an authenticated case of the disease in Toronto in the memory of local veterinary surgeons, with the exception of the case of Mrs. Sherwin.

Hydrophobia a Misnomer

As has been said, knowledge of rabies is scant. It is chiefly of a negative character. For example, its vulgar name, hydrophobia, means dread of water, and it is an old, old idea that a mad dog will not drink. This is not true, except of the last phase of the disease or of the sort of rabies called "dumb rabies." In these cases the dog's jaws cannot close, and it is, of course, unable to drink or even bite. In the earlier stages of the disease the dog drinks in a frenzied manner, rushing headlong into the water as though dying of thirst. About this time his appetite may be abnormal, and the owner might suppose thedog to be in fine fettle. Soon, however, he fails to discriminate in his choice of food. He will knaw his kennel, bite on stones or pieces of coal, and chew up anything that comes in his path.

The Progress of the Disease.

At first the hog is dull and morose, but gentle and affectionate to his master. He is restless and crawls away into dark corners, scratches with his forepaws, makes sudden, blind rushes forward. His voice changes. At this stage he pays no attention to external pain, such as a whipping, his internal agony apparently giving his sensory nerves all the business they can attend to. He becomes violent at the sight of other dogs, and is apt to bite them. It is a significant fact, however, that the other dogs seem to know his bite means death, and keep clear of him, as though he were a fighting dog. Toward the end of his suffering the poor brute runs away from home and may roam the streets for a couple of days. With his last few ounces of strength he crawls home again and dies.

The Rat is to Blame.

It seems to be pretty well established that rabies does not generate spontaneously. No dog has it unless he has been bitten by another dog also infected. Tracing it back we may find that a rat brought the disease into a given country. It is well known that rats play an important part in the dissemination of other diseases, such as the bibonic plague, and probably they are responsible for the spread of rabies. It has been carried into all parts of the world but Lapland, Australia and some of the Pacific Islands. Virginia and Maryland are hotbeds of the disease, for there every shiftless negro has two or three prowling curs continually cleaning their teeth in each other's flesh. The fact that one dog gives the disease to another is a very good reason why close watch should be kept on the dogs in the neighborhood of the Sherwin house. In the early stages they can be handled with impunity, and on the first sign of unusdal behavior should be turned over to the authorities for observation.

The Deadly Saliva

Of all the erroneous ideas concerning rabies, none is more prevalent than that it is caused by hot weather. A record of 2,520 cases mentioned in the New York Sun shows that 621 were in Summer, 609 in Autumn, 587 in winter and 704 in Spring. The reason there are more cases in Spring and Summer is that dogs prawl about more then, digging out vermin, and it is usually when they are roaming about that dogs get into trouble. It is also interesting to note that valuable dogs very rarely develop the disease, because their owners do not let them tramp. Another fact not generally known is that the saliva of a rabid dog is enough to communicate the disease without a bite. There is a case on record of a girl whose dress was torn by a mad dog. In mending the rent, she carelessly bit off the thread, and became infected. A boy cleaned a sword with which a mad dog had been killed, scratched his hand and died.

A Record of Life-Saving.

The Pasteur Institute at New York which is treating the unfortunate Torontowoman, has a grand record of successful cases. Out of 962 cases treated in seven years only twelve died, seven within fifteen days. As the treatment requires twenty days those who came when they had only a fortnight to live were cutting things a trifle fine. There are also two cases on record where people have been bitten by rabid animals but failed to become infected. Just why this sometimes happens is one of the many mysteries of the dreadful disease.

For Diarrhoea, Dysentery AND ALL Summer Complaints
DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY IS AN INSTANTANEOUS CURE.

It has been used in thousands of homes during the past sixty-two years and has always given satisfaction.

Every home should have a bottle so as to be ready in case of emergency.

Price 35 cents at all druggists and dealers. Do not let some unprincipalled druggist humbug you into taking so-called Strawberry Compound. The original is Dr. Fowler's. The rest are substitutes.

Mrs. G. Bode, Lethbridge, Alta. writes: "We have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and found it a great remedy for Diarrhoea, Summer Complaint and Cramps. We would not like to be without it in the house."

though dying of thirst. About this time his appetite may be abnormal, and the owner might suppose thedog to be in fine fettle. Soon, however, he fails to discriminate in his choice of food. He will knaw his kennel, bite on stones or pieces of coal, and chew up anything that comes in his path.

The Progress of the Disease.

At first the hog is dull and morose, but gentle and affectionate to his master. He is restless and crawls away into dark corners, scratches with his forepaws, makes sudden, blind rushes forward. His voice changes. At this stage he pays no attention to external pain, such as whipping, his internal agony apparently giving his sensory nerves all the business they can attend to. He becomes violent at the sight of other dogs, and is apt to bite them. It is a significant fact, however, that the other dogs seem to know his bite means death, and keep clear of him, as though he were a fighting dog. Toward the end of his suffering the poor brute runs away from home and may roam the streets for a couple of days. With his last few ounces of strength he crawls home again and dies.

The Rat is to Blame.

It seems to be pretty well established that rabies does not generate spontaneously. No dog has it unless he has been bitten by another dog also infected. Tracing it back we may find that a rat brought the disease into a given country. It is well known that rats play an important part in the dissemination of other diseases, such as the bibonic plague, and probably they are responsible for the spread of rabies. It has been carried into all parts of the world but Lapland, Australia and some of the Pacific Islands. Virginia and Maryland are hotbeds of the disease, for there every shiftless negro has two or three prowling curs continually cleaning their teeth in each other's flesh. The fact that one dog gives the disease to another is a very good reason why close watch should be kept on the dogs in the neighborhood of the Sherwin house. In the early stages they can be handled with impunity, and on the first sign of unusdal behavior should be turned over to the authorities for observation.

The Deadly Saliva.

Of all the erroneous ideas concerning rabies, none is more prevalent than that it is caused by hot weath. r. A record of 2,520 cases mentioned in the New York Sun shows that 621 were in Summer, 602 in Autumn, 587 in winter and 704 in Spring. The reason there are more cases in Spring and Summer is that dogs prawl about more then, digging out vermin, and it is usually when they are roaming about that dogs get into trouble. It is also interesting to note that valuable dogs very rarely develop the disease, because their owners do not let them ramp. Another fact not generally known is that the saliva of a rabid dog is enough to communicate the disease without a bite. There is a case on record of a girl whose dress was torn by a mad dog. In mending the rent, she carelessly bit off the thread, and became infected. A boy cleaned a sword with which a mad dog had been killed, scratched his hand and died.

A Record of Life-Saving.

The Pasteur Institute at New York which is treating the unfortknate Torontowoman, has a grand record of successful cases. Out of 962 cases treated in seven years only twelve died, seven within fifteen days. As the treatment requires twenty days, those who came when they had only a fortnight to live were cutting things a trifle fine. There are also two cases on record where people have been bitten by rabid animals, but failed to become infected. Just why this sometimes happens is one of the many mysteries of the dreadful disease.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

(From our own correspondents.)

What Wideawake and Reliable Correspondents throughout This District Find Worthy of Recording for Publication in their Home Paper.

Seven Persons

Mr. Sam Carlson takes his place again as Section Foreman Oct. 1st.

Mr. J. W. Babbage returned last night from Brooks, suffering from sun stroke.

Mr. Bissett takes Mr. Leonard's place here as pumpman for a short time.

Mr. Colin McAskile is spending Sunday in Medicine Hat.

Miss Annie Touberg left for B. C. Sunday night.

Mr. P. Chudleigh was in town today.

Mr. Geo. Murray and sons passed through here with a drove of cattle to load at Dunmore. H. H. Foster taking another drove through by Mr. Miller's to the same place.

Mr. Robb was here and took home another load of 200 fence posts for Mr. D. Cargill.

A premium list of the Medicine Hat fair would be appreciated, tacked up in the post office here as a great many are making inquiries in regard to same.

Mr. Bellrichard and Mrs. Boucher returned home last week.

What is the matter with the secretary that he hasn't the fair advertised in this part of the community? We might want to send some of our fine vegetables in for premiums.

The corn crop is ready to cut and no frost yet.

Mrs. Reed and children were in town Thursday shopping and calling on friends.

J. F. Leonard threshed his grain this week to the tune of 700 bushels of wheat and 300 bushels of oats.

Bowell.

(Too late for last week.)

A car of settlers arrived this morning. We expect a few more before winter.

A very enjoyable evening was spent on Friday, when the Bowell Church gave a very entertaining concert, after which was served, a relish lunch. Those who took part in the entertainment coming from a distance were Miss N. Ellis, Mr. McLaren and Mr. Ware of Medicine Hat.

Mr. G. Simpson came down from Gleichen last week and reports seeing good crops.

M. Slatterly, J. Darrow, A. Battersby and D. Slatterly all left for Gleichen this morning.

E. Woolven left this morning for a shoot vacation west.

We are all sorry to part with Mr. Omand, who has done very good work all summer, but hope to procure his valuable services again next summer as minister of our church.

Miss N. Ellis was a visitor here on Saturday.

Messrs. Neill and Popinwill passed through this morning on their way to Mr. Neil's homestead.

FOSTER'S FORECAST.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbances to cross the continent Sept. 18 to 22, warm wave Sept. 17 to 21, cool wave Sept. 20 to 24. It was predicted that moderate temperatures would precede and accompany this disturbance, that very cool weather would follow it, with killing frosts in northern and midlatitude sections.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about Sept. 25, cross Pacific slope by close of Sept. 26, great central valleys Sept. 27 to 29, eastern states Sept. 30. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about Sept. 25, great central valleys Sept. 27, eastern states Sept. 29. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about Sept. 28, great central valleys Sept. 30, eastern states Oct. 2.

This disturbance will cause severe storms on the Pacific coast about Sept. 25, and these storms will continue to be severe during their passage across the continent. The warm wave will cause a great rise in temperatures following the frost wave and the good old summer time will seem to have returned.

Severe weather may be expected immediately following Sept. 12, and general showers will be the rule. The rise in temperatures that will come with the warm wave that will reach meridian about Sept. 14 will make a great change in temperatures, causing almost summer heat.

J. G. Anderson, Wetaskiwin, is in the field as an independent candidate for the Commons in Strathcona constituency, Alberta.

Dr. Coulombe, of St. Justin, has been nominated by the Conservatives of Maskinonge to oppose Mr. Mayrand, M.P.

R. L. Borden will probably be opposed in Carleton by J. E. Caldwell of City View. Mr. Borden will attend the York Conservative convention at Fredericton, N.B., on Sept. 15, and will speak there, together with the leading members of the provincial cabinet. O. S. Crockett, the present member, will be nominated for re-election.

The East Toronto Independent Conservative Association has decided to nominate Joseph Russell, candidate in the provincial elections, for the federal House in opposition to Kemp Conservative. The Liberals expect to nominate their candidate later.

Lindsay, Ont., At a largely attended meeting of the Liberals of Victoria and Haliburton, held in the Academy of Music this afternoon, Dr. Giles, of Haliburton, was unanimously nominated to contest the riding in the coming election.

Walkerton, Ont.,—A large and enthusiastic meeting of South Bruce Conservatives assembled here today and unanimously selected Mr. James J. Donnelly, of Pinkerton, to contest the riding.

Louis Lavergne gives a flat denial to the rumor that he is about to accept a position under the government. He will again be the government candidate in Drummond and Arthabaska.

John Champoux, of Disraeli, was nominated by the opposition to contest the Richmond and Wolfe counties sent in the Conservative interest.

Simcoe, Ont., Sept. 9.—At the Norfolk convention, Hon. D. Tisdale declined nomination owing to his health, and Alex. McCall, merchant, was the choice.

Peterborough, Sept. 6.—West Peterborough Liberals have nominated Hon. J. R. Stratton as their candidate for the Commons.

Montreal, Sept. 8.—The following nominations occurred yesterday: Champlain, D. M. DeGuise, Liberal. L. J. Papineau, Liberal.

Toronto West—Cawthra Mulock, the young millionaire son of Sir Wm. Mulock, may be the Liberal candidate.

North Wellington—W. A. Clark, Palmerston, is the Conservatipe candidate.

South Toronto—J. C. Eaton, of the T. Eaton Co. may be the Liberal candidate.

Vancouver, B. C., Dr. Quinlan, of Prince Rupert, is to be the Conservative candidate in Comox-Atlin, in opposition to Wm. Sloan, M.P.

Halifax, N.S., Sept. 10—The Nova Scotia Liberals are rapidly closing up their ranks. Four candidates were nominated today: A. K. Maclean, M.P. in Lunenburg; Charles Hill, who was defeated in the Stanfield bye-election in Colchester; Dr. Chisholm, in Inverness; and Judge B. D. MacKenzie, in North Cape Breton and Victoria.

R. D. Wilmot, M.P., was nominated by Queens-Sunbury Conservatives.

J. B. Caron, who withdrew his candidature in Ottawa, has been nominated as the Liberal candidate in L'Islet.

Roche Lancelot, M.P., has been renominated for the House of Commons by the Liberals of La Prairie Napierville.

A. K. McLean, M.P., has been renominated by Lunenburg, N.S., Liberals.

Inverness Liberals nominated Dr. Chisholm.

Judge D. G. McKenzie has been nominated by the Liberals of Sydney and Victoria.

Renfrew, Ont., Sept. 12.—South Renfrew Conservatives have nominated John McKay of this place for the Commons.

Important Announcement

Owing to a legal dispute, the SEMI-READY Clothing Manufacturers have decided to appoint a new agent at Medicine Hat. I have been offered the control of these well-known tailored garments, and from this date the C.P.R. MEN'S STORE will be the only depot for

Semi-ready Tailoring

Men from east to west know that SEMI-READY clothing stands preeminently above any brand in Canada to-day, and when you ask for one of these suits you have the assurance that you are getting satisfaction in Fit, Material, Workmanship, Wear and Price. It gives me much pleasure to announce that the FALL SAMPLES, the pick of British and foreign mills, are at your disposal. I shall be glad to have you drop in and look through these cloths. No trouble to show—rather a pleasure, because they have the value.

You take not the slightest chance about the fit—I GUARANTEE IT, and you could not buy a suit at any price if it were not up to the mark. When SEMI-READY stamps the price on a garment you can guarantee to yourself four facts:

1. That you have got full value for your money.
2. That you will gladly pay the same again for another suit.
3. That it will give you at least a year's wear.
4. That the dealer cannot overcharge you.

On account of this change I must reduce in every possible manner my present clothing stock.

NOTICE.—From SEPT. 15th until the night of SEPT. 26th I will slaughter every garment in this store. Profit and cost will be sacrificed by 35 per cent. in order to clear the goods. ALL NEW FALL GOODS.

I must have the room and the money to handle my SEMI-READY stock thoroughly.

Magrath Club Formed

Conservatives Organize Club to Support Candidate

Enthusiastic Meeting

On Friday night an informal meeting of the Conservatives of the city was held for campaign organization. In spite of the fact that only verbal notices were given the most enthusiastic Conservative party meeting ever held in Medicine Hat took place.

It was decided to form a Magrath Club. Mr. C. A. Magrath was elected president; Mr. F. O. Sissons, chairman; and Mr. F. F. Fatt, secretreas.

The old Bijou Theatre on Main Street, next to the Electric Theatre was hired for use until after the elections. This fine hall will be seated and fixed up with the leading papers and will be open at all times of the day for the supporters of Mr. Magrath to meet in.

Already a number who have previously voted Liberal have expressed their intention of joining the Club, both to express their disapproval of the conduct of the Liberal Government and to support such a man as Mr. Magrath against his opponent in this riding.

All those interested in the Conservative platform and in the overthrow of the Liberal rule of graft will be warmly welcomed at the Club rooms.

A grand opening will be held tonight in the Club rooms.

Lethbridge Paper Makes Unfounded Claim

"Something never seen before in Lethbridge, nor in Alberta, nor in the whole of Western Canada up to the Rocky Mountains. 200 apples, on a small tree, not crabs, but fine large apples.

"Hunhreds of people have gone to see it and in order to encourage tree planting, Father Van Tighem has been induced, and has consented, to show it to all and everyone tomorrow, Saturday, from 1 to 4 p.m."—Lethbridge Herald.

There is just one city in the West where the Lethbridge crop is excelled, where fruit growing has been established for a number of years.

Last year in Ald. McKay's orchard in the city, one tree alone produced over 300 apples—luscious Duchess apples, as big and fine a fruit as one could wish. A similar crop has been borne by the same tree this year, and this is only one of many.

But Medicine Hat has reached a stage at which these things are taken as a matter of course, and not as causes for wonder. Ald. McKay introduced three or four varieties of Ontario fruit in 1906, and he has met with success in every case. This year three varieties hitherto unknown between Winnipeg and the Rocky Mountains are proving healthy young trees and give promise of fruit bearing next season.

We may congratulate our sister city on reaching second place, which goes to show what an immense field of possibilities along fruit-growing lines is still almost unexploited in Alberta.

Annual Shoot

The following is the programme of the 8th annual meeting of the Medicine Hat Rifle Association, Sept. 28, 29, 30, 1908.

1. Tyro Match—200 yards—7 shots
2. Finlay Match—200 yards—seven shots, kneeling, 300 yards—7 shots prone.
3. City of Medicine Hat Match.—200, 500, 600, 800, 900, 1000, seven shots at each.
4. Militia Match—500, 600 yards, 10 shots at each. This match is for the trophy presented by Major Sissons, and is open to all members of the C.M.R.
5. Merchants Match.—600 yards, 10 shots.
6. Twa Friends Match.—1000 yds. team of two men, 5 shots each.
7. Team match.—500, 600 yards. Team of 5 men. 7 shots each range.
8. Ladies Match—500 yards, seven shots.
9. Members Aggrogate—Total of scores in matches 2, 3 and 5.
10. Tyro Aggregate—Total of scores in matches 1, 2 and 3.

Mounted Police Notes

On Saturday afternoon Jean Baptiste Cayon, a half-breed, was charged by Mrs. Mary Desmerais with having stolen a quantity of clothing, the property of the complainant, of David Boyer and Solomon Boyer. The accused was brought to the barracks on Friday night, and appeared on Saturday before Inspector Parker and D. Milne, J.P. Pleading guilty he was sentenced to four month's imprisonment with hard labor. At about six o'clock on Saturday night he was taken seriously ill and Dr. Smith, who was called in immediately found that Cayon had a severe attack of typhoid fever, and ordered him removed at once to the hospital, where he now remains.

A message from Zahmeizer's ranch was received at the barracks at about 6 o'clock on Saturday, conveying the alarming information that there was a violent maniac concealed in a straw stack. Constable Capstick immediately bounded the trail and brought in a mild vag in the person of one, Edward Russell. Appearing before Inspector Parker at nine that same evening, Russell was remanded till Monday.

Russell appeared before Inspector Parver yesterday, and being found to have no visible means of subsistance it was decided to turn him over to the government for support during the next six weeks, and at Lethbridge he will have an opportunity to eradicate constitutionst laziness.

On the 17th inst., J. Hassard was sent up for trial in connection with the case of alleged horse stealing. The second charge, that of branding a colt belonging to Daniel Hill, was withdrawn, as was the case against Weiss.

H. A. Bratney of the island, reported to the police a couple ofweeks ago, that someone had broken into his house and stolen a number of articles, including a razor and a revolver. A Calgary pawnbroker had bought a revolver the description of which closely resembled that of the stolen firearm. The revolver was sent down here for identification and Mr. McBratney found that it was not the one which he had lost.

MAGRATH MEETING

BORDEN, MAGRATH AND A SQUARE DEAL

MAGRATH MEETING

Tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Opera House, the voters of Medicine Hat city and district will have their first opportunity of hearing Mr. C. A. Magrath, the Conservative candidate for this riding.

Mr. Magrath will address the electors on current matters of political importance and will give his reasons for requesting support.

The attendance of every voter is requested.

Ladies and their escorts will have seats reserved for them.

The Pioneer's Plaint

Mary and I, we were both country bred,
But came to the city when young.
And worked up through hardships to riches and ease,
While to country ideas we have clung.

My business, I sold to a nephew of mine,
And then with investments secure,
We found a small farm, 'twas the picture of peace;
That we'd end our days there we felt sure.

We scarcely had settled, when some mining chap
Came nosing around; he got all.
And the place that had offered us documents of peace,
Was the centre of noise, dust and toil.

We moved. After looking at dozens of farms,
To a rugged hill country we went;
But someone found gold in the land joining ours
When scarcely a month there we'd spent.

You know what that means, how the people flock in
And a city builds up in the night—
I sold to advantage and so we moved on
To the plains, not a dwelling in sight.

'Twas lonesome, 'twas quiet, 'twas bliss for a year,
When they swarmed from the south and the east,
And built all around us a flourishing town,
And the price of my land had increased.

Then we moved to Alaska; we laughed, Mary said,
She thought it would be Iceland next;
But there, though the winters were long and severe,
Without an excuse or pretext.

A settlement followed us, and we gave up;
Hence we shall live for the race;
And so, if you have worthless land at your hands,
If you'll let me move onto the place.

I can promise a speedy demand for your land,
For people will come by the score,
And offer such prices, you'll have one regret;
You will wish that you owned acres more.

Just send through this paper, they know where I am;
To the first one who writes, I will go.
And we'll talk of the terms when your land has been sold.
The reward will be liberal, I know.

—E. LUCILLA PAYZANT, Boston, Mass.

Local Notes

Mr. James Porter leaves in a few days for Rochester.

The ladies of Knox church will hold their Bazaar Thursday, October 22nd, not October 25th as announced last week.

The annual report of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. has been received.

It is said that one cow and one dog were released from pound on Thursday night so that the Fire Brigade would not go on strike.

The new windows in A. C. Hawthorne's store make up one of the brightest spots on Toronto Street now.

There was no meeting of the Council last night, as a quorum could not be formed. A meeting will be held on Friday night.

Work is proceeding apace on the new Coleridge hotel. The foundation has been under way for some time, and this week the carpenters start in.

The current number of the Alberta Gazette contains the notice of the erection of a new School District at Bow Island; J. Hopkins, Senior Trustee, Wm. Wellington, Medicine Hat treasurer of State School District No. 1817, is empowered to borrow $900.

Rev. W. M. Rochester, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance will preach in the Methodist Church on the morning of Sunday, Sept. 27. In the evening he will take the pulpit in the Baptist church.

Dr. Smith was induced to have his picture taken after his attempt to run his auto up a guy-wire. Below the picture appears the old Kipling slogan: "this is to certify that I have been in an auto."

The shortage of cattle cars in most serious. Reports from every station in the district show that thousands of head of stock have been taken back to pasture, as no cars are in sight. Walsh, Coleridge and Seven Persons send complaints.

Mr. McElheacy, who was assisting Mr. A. G. Stacey when the latter died during his survey work near the border, is in the city, having completed the survey.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is not coming West. He is confining his attention to the east, thinking he can "do" the West, anyway.

There was a very good exhibition of the game yesterday afternoonwhen the C.P.R. met the Fire Brigade, the latter being beaten by 7—3. The double play of Arcell and Douglas was the feature of the game.

A children's service will be held in St. John's Presbyterian church on Sunday next. Mr. Irving of Lethbridge will give an address. In the evening the harvest service will be taken by the Rev. Jas. W. Morrow.

Bruce W. Palmer, a Detroit Electrical Engineer, F. J. Campbell of Detroit, and G. A. Marshall of London, Ont., interviewed the Mayor and board of trade secretary last week, in regard to the granting of an electric lighting and power franchise.

C. H. Wagner has found it necessary to have made for him, a second rig, to cope with his increasing transfer business. He is a Times advertiser. See his ads.

Miss MacLean a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston,, whose card appears in this paper has opened a studio at 238 River Street. Miss McLean comes very highly recommended.

Anniversary services will be held in St. John's Presbyterian Church on Sunday, Oct. 4th, and on Monday night the annual "Tea" will be held in the basement of the church.

The Woman's Literary Club will hold their first meeting of the season on Tuesday evening, Oct. 6th instead of Oct. 5th, at the home of Mrs. DesBrisay, Toronto Street. The subject will be "The Canadian Club Movement."

The new store added by Spencer and Todd at the back of their present store is almost ready for occupation. Shelving and counters are being installed and a door into the old store has been cut. The new place will make a fine stand for their men's furnishings department.

On Friday the 18th inst., a meeting was held in Dept. 8 of the Montreal Street School for the purpose of reorganizing the Public School Base Ball Club. The following officers were elected:

Hon. Pres.—Mr. Hill.
President—Ruben le Blanc.
Vice President—Roy Trider.
Captain—Albert Johnston.
Sec.-Treas.—Paul Page.
Committee—Ralph Satterthwaite, James Weir, John Sillak.

The Y. M. C. are holding a mass meeting for men in the Gymnasium Hall on Sunday at 3.30 p.m. The meeting will be addressed by Rev. W. M. Rochester, Secretary of Lord's Day Alliance. All men are invited.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. McKinnon leave tomorrow for Calgary and Banff and the Coast.

Miss Sherwood of Calgary is spending a few days with her brother Mr. Clifford Sherwood.

A Co-operative bill has been introduced into the United States Senate Senate file No. 1069. It is understood that Mr. F. W. Monk, if re-elected will introduce his Co-operative Bill into the Dominion House. It is reported that the banking interests of Montreal andToronto, the organized retail traders of those cities and the Montreal section of the Canadian manufacturers Association were largely responsible for its defeat in the Senate, at its last session.

Business Change

Mr. C. G. Milne, formerly in Miers' Art Parlors, has bought out Mr. De Savoye, the photographer, and took over the business yesterday morning.

Extensive alterations are being made to the building and a neat, artistic studio will be ready for business somstime this week.

Mr. Milne has had long experience in high-class photographic work, including several years in Scotland and five in Canada. His work is well-known in the city.

Strike News

On Tuesday night, when the strike-breakers received their pay and came into town to blow it in, it was anticipated that the police would have a busy time. Though there were one or two cases of angry alterations in the bars, nothing of import occurred in town, thanks largely to the discretion of the strikers, who made every effort to avoid anything in the nature of a collision.

At about two o'clock on Wednesday morning a heavy bolt was thrown through the cab window of an engine in the yard, just missing the engineer's head. The switchman and another man in the yard saw the act and gave chase, and the rowdy was arrested in the roundhouse by one of the C.P.R. special constables. P. O. Bruce had been called up and asked to affect the arrest, but as he saw the offending strike-breaker in charge of (presumably) two railway constables, he did not interfere. The hobo was merely taken to his sleeping car, and there the matter ended. It afterwards transpired that one of the special "constables" was a strike breaker himself.

It is thought that the strikebreakers were making an effort to discredit the strikers, in order to get more police protection. Several of the special constables have been taken away as they were found unnecessary for the preserving of the peace, and the men who are working in the shops are anxious to get them back again.

The man who created the disturbance has since been quietly fired by the company and has gone east.

Good Gardeners

Medicine Hat excels in gardens as it does in lawns, and shade and fruit trees. To increase this interest the D. Milne Co. recently offered prizes for the four best gardens in the city, Mr. Uberheim of the Roseries to act as judge.

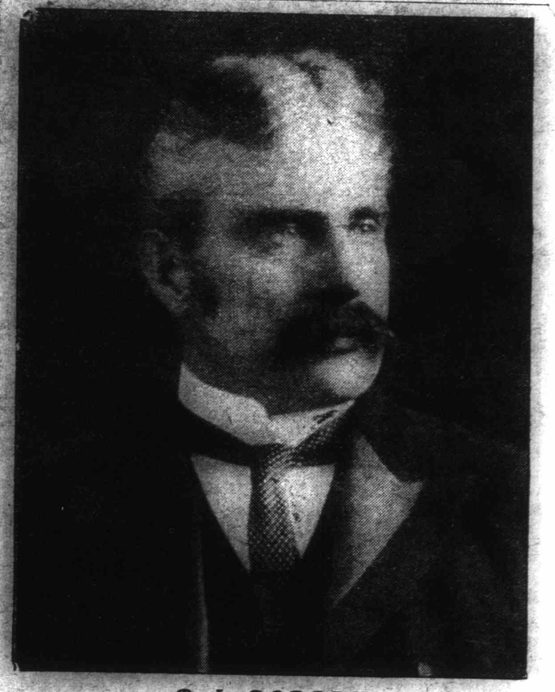
Printing Plant Burnt

Quick Job Print Co. Wiped Out

Just before midnight on Tuesday night at 11.54 to be exact, the fire whistle was blown for a fire in the Quick Job Print Co.'s premises. The flames were first noticed by "Shorty" Young of the Bank of Commerce and two companions who were crossing the traffic bridge from the other side of the river. They ran to the firehall and roused the fire-boys. Constable Bruce who was coming out of the City Hall, blowing the fire whistle.

When the fire waggons dashed out they were going too fast to turn at Main street and the chemical engine had to go around the block. The hose waggon, which followed, turned down the lane between Toronto and Main streets. As soon as the water was turned on the fire was quickly put out, but not before the building was scorched past future use.

The old frame building occupied by the Quick Job Print was one of the oldest buildings in the city and was one of the eyesores that are rapidly disappearing from the streets. It belonged to Mrs. T. W. Ireland and was fortunately situated so that it was not a menace to other buildings there being a vacant lot on one side and a two-storey cement store on the other.



The Quick Job Print Co. of which Robt. Collier was manager, lost almost everything in the fire. Much of the type was melted, the cases were burned, the wood-work on the press burned, and only the engine being uninjured. A full insurance was carried.

The cause of the fire is unknown. Robt. Collier had been working late on a rush job, and F. Pingle, W. H. Storry and C. Toms had been in the shop only a short time before the fire, and had left after eleven. The manager had closed up only a few minutes before and had just gothome and to bed when the alarm blew.

For some reason very few people heard the whistle, and were surprised to learn of the fire in the morning. The whistle had not been sirened and this may account for its lack of noise.

ELECTION DAY ANNOUNCED

Monday, October 26th, has been selected by the Cabinet as the day of the general elections. On this day all of the elections will be held except Chicoutimi, Saguenay and Gaspe in Quebec; Conox-Atlin, Kootenay and Yale-Caribon in B. C., and the Yukon Territory.

R. L. BORDEN

Leader of the Opposition, whose motto for the coming election is: "I prefer a defeat after an honest election rather than victory dishonestly."

They are:
1st—James Rae, 91 points.
2nd—John Huston, 67 points.
3rd—F. G. Forster, 65 points.
4th—John Benson, 46 points.

The two latter contestants are on the hill and had all the difficulties of the water supply last summer to contend with, so that their standing is worthy of praise.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

It is announced that in all probability Monday, Nov. 9th, will be Thanksgiving Day. This is the King's birthday.

Returning Officer Appointed

It is reported that F. G. Forster, editor of The News, has been appointed Returning Officer for this constituency. The report has aroused considerable hard feeling among the Liberals, as there are several who consider their claims stronger than Mr. Forster's, having done more effective and consistent work for the party.

Fake Advertising

We sometimes read advertisements in newspapers that at the very outset brand themselves as fakes, and in no instance is this more prevalent than among the ready-to-wear clothing advertisers. Imagine an advertisement stating that the average merchant tailor does not know how to turn a coat sleeve or to turn out a good fitting suit, when the person with average intelligence knows how all ready-made suits are produced—that it is the cheapest kind of labor that is employed in their manufacture, and that the average ready-made suit will hold its shape about while you are carrying it home. These are some of the reasons why merchant tailored suits are coming more and more into demand every day, and why the ready-made handler has to resort to fake advertising in a vain attempt to stem the tide.

ATHLETICS

CHAMPIONSHIP OF ALBERTA.

As the C.P.R.'s had beaten Calgary ball players the game on Friday between the C.P.R. and the Fire Brigade was said to be for the championship of Alberta. A fair crowd was on hand but several causes kept many away.

The C.P.R.'s were handicapped by the loss of Lemieux and Sinclair but even at that, played snappier, cleaner ball than their opponents. The Fire Brigade, however, with the assistance of Ireland and Finch and a new battery pulled the game out in the last innings by a big batting rally.

Squance for the C.P.R. pitched a steady game. McCart and Wells the Fire battery were largely responsible for the winning of their team. These men were picked up here on their way to the coast, the former having pitched in Fort William. He has great speed and very wide curves, and although he was touched up for thirteen hits, they were largely of the scratch and luck order. McFarlane alone seemed at home with the delivery. Mixing in a little dropwith his wide curves McCart should develop into a first-class pitcher. Wells handled him well (no joke), and made the star play of the game, picking a high fly off the grand stand net.

In the first the Fire Boys scored three runs, but the C. P. R. came right back with the same, both teams hitting well. In the second the C.P. R. got a big lead with three more which they maintained until the seventh, adding two more in that period.

When the Fire Brigade went to bat in the last the score was 10 to 6 against them and everything looking better for the railway team. But the unexpected happened. When the best batters came up three of the team had staved off defeat with only one out on a long fly to centre. Ireland got a life on an error of Biettes and Finch scored. Krauss' long 3-bagger brought in two runs and then Switzer and Buchanan touched up Squance for 2 more runs, putting the Fire Brigade one ahead. McCart succeeded in shutting out the C.P.R. boys in their half.

The score:

The Edmonton Journal says: A move is to be made at once on the part of the local owners of the baseball franchise to resusticate the Northwestern League and get it into shape for next season. Letters are being sent out from local headquarters to Calgary, Wetaskiwin, Medicine Hat, Moose Jaw, Regina and Saskatoon, asking the baseball promoters to appoint delegates to attend a meeting at a point yet to be named, for the purpose of re-forming for next year. The calculation is for a six-club league, including the leading cities of the Northwest, and should Winnipeg and Brandon discover in time the folly of dallying with the Copper-Northern fiasco, a place may be found for them as well.

Frank Gray and Deacon White are taking the initiative in the matter at this end.

This is Jimmy Collin's last year with Philadelphia under the contract he had with Boston, which pays him $8,000 a season. Jimmy is about due to pass from the fold. He is rich, happy and fat, and doesn't care whether he dons a uniform any more. He plays simply because his contract "calls" him. If you had written on a piece of paper that you were to get $8,000 you'd stick a while longer. It's a cinch he'll not accept any cut in his wages such as Connie Mack will make next spring.

And then, too, Jimmy is getting old, and the papers in the cities on the American League circuit say he has been doing considerable "stalling." Jimmy has been playing for thirteen years. He was at his best from 1897 to 1903. He started to go back in 1904, and recently Mack has been trying Nicholls at third.

It is the last season of the greatest of all third-sackers.

"Big Gus" Thompson, the mainstay of the Aberdeen pitching staff has been drafted by the Boston Americans. This announcement will cause some surprise among North-Western league fans. "Big Gus" spent a part of the season with St. Louis and was then turned over to the Omaha Club in the Western League. He pitched great ball for Omaha, but was turned over to Aberdeen in exchange for Eddie Householder. He pitched two games for Canmore in 1895, when that team defeated Calgary and held the Brewery trophy.

Definite steps are being taken to form a professional baseball league for next year. A meeting will be called in Calgary shortly and the outline drawn up. At present the Edmonton and Calgary fans favor a league composed of Edmonton, Calgary, Medicine Hat, Moose Jaw, Regina and Wetaskiwin or Saskatoon.

NOTICE.

Odd Numbered Sections.

AS already publicly announced, odd numbered sections remaining vacant and undisposed of will become available for homestead entry, on the coming into force of the Dominion Lands Act on the 1st September next.

As the records of only the even numbered sections have hitherto been kept in the book of the various land agencies in the western provinces, and the time having been very limited since the passing of the Act within which to transfer the records of all odd numbered sections from the head office at Ottawa to the local offices, it is possible that the transfer of records in some cases may not have been absolutely completed by the 1st September. If, any case where the record of any quarter section has not been transferred, application will be accepted but will have to be forwarded to head office to be dealt with.

As it has been found impossible as yet to furnish sub-agencies with copies of the records of odd numbered sections, and in view of the large probable demand for entries, all applicants for entry upon odd numbered sections are strongly advised to make their applications in person at the office of the Dominion Lands Agent and not through a Sub Land Agent. Applications for even numbered sections may be dealt with through the Sub Land Agent as before if desired.

Doctors no Strike.

Geneva—Fifty-three of the fifty-five doctors in the old Town of Bellinzona and its suburbs have "gone on strike." They are paid by the municipal authorities, the salaries ranging from $600 to $1,000 a year, and by contract they must give their services free to poor and rich alike.

The town and its environs are divided into "Medical districts," and the residents pay a small tax to the municipality for medical assistance. The result is that a doctor is at the beck and call of every one at all hours of the day and night.

The doctors have almost unanimously broken their contract with the Bellinzona authorities, and demand a fixed salary of $500 a year and the right of charging fees varying from 12 cents to $1.25 to patients who are in a position to pay and special charges for night visits. They agree to attend the poor without payment.

The local authorities will shortly examine the question. All the doctors meantime, are charging the usual fees. No other town in Switzerland has this system of municipal doctors.

Mr. Borden On The Platform

Addresses Immense Gathering at Halifax

Mr. Borden's Speech.

The meeting was a splendid one for the Conservative cause in Halifax, and in Nova Scotia. The following is Mr. Borden's speech in full:

At your recent convention Mr. O'Mullin, my worthy and valued colleague in the last contest, has moved the nomination of Mr. Crosby, who, as alderman and mayor of the city during a long term of years, has rendered splendid service to the citizens of Halifax and who in the wider sphere at Ottawa will guard the interests of the people with equal zeal and devotion. You chose me once as one of your candidates; and both Mr. Crosby and I have accepted the honor. One condition I made imperative in my acceptance. The campaign must be a clean one; no corrupt practices must be employed in our behalf. I do not fear defeat in a clean campaign, but I prefer overwhelming defeat to victory won by improper means. I stand upon my platform of a year ago. Fight the ballot thief and the briber. Fight also any influences within our own party which favor corrupt methods.

Justice Must Prevail.

Rely on the justice of our cause and upon a thorough exposure to the people of our opponents' evil record. Great exultation has been manifested by the Liberal press at the alleged discovery of improper practices at the bye-election in Colchester. Mr. Stanfield has declared that if the charge is made good he will resign his seat, even although the acts were committed without the knowledge or consent of himself or his committee men. The case is still before the courts and it would be improper to assume in advance either the guilt or the innocence of the persons accused. If there has been wrongdoing by Conservatives I denounce it. I denounce those who committed it or are responsible for it and I declare that they should be punished with the full legal penalties. No man who resorts to corrupt acts in the supposed interest of our party, is a true friend of the party. If we preach purity, and practice corruption, we shall be worthy of all the scorn that can be poured upon us.

Issues of Campaign.

I now come to consider the issues of the campaign and the record of our opponents. In 1893 the Liberal party met in convention at Ottawa under the leadership of Mr. (now Sir Wilfrid) Laurier, and declared its policy, the ten planks of which may be summarized as follows:

1. Denunciation of the principle of protection as radically unsound and unjust to the masses of the people.
2. Promotion of a reciprocity treaty with the United States and closer trade relations with that country.
3. Purity of administration.
4. Strong expression of alarm at the large increase of public debt and of the controllable annual expenditure and the consequent undue taxation of the people and a pledge to strictest economy in the administration of the government.
5. Affirmance of the ancient and undoubted right of the house of commons to inquire into all matters of public expenditure and a denunciation of any reference to such matters royal commissions created upon the advice of the accused.

6. Declaration that the sales of public lands should be to actual settlers only and not to speculators, upon reasonable terms of settlement and in such areas as can be reasonably occupied and cultivated by the settler.
7. Repeal of the Franchise Act and return to the provincial franchise.
8. County boundaries for electoral divisions.
9. Declaration that the present constitution of the senate is inconsistent with the federal principle and is in other respects defective and should be so amended as to bring it into harmony with the principles of popular government.
10. Declaration of the admittedly great evils of intemperance and a pledge to ascertain the mind of the people by means of a plebiscite.

Have Ignored Platform.

Putting aside two minor planks, 7 and 8, relative to the Franchise act and the delimination of electoral divisions, the present government has not pretended or even attempted to carry out its declared and avowed policy except with respect to closer trade relations with the United States. This departure from their announced policy in regard to the seven leading planks which I have summarized has led to the charge of insincerity; but it must be admitted that no such charge can fairly be made against those who possess no political principle save that of party expediency.

Have they stood by their first plank? Have they carried out their denunciation of protection as radically unsound and unjust to the masses of the people? In their speeches they pointed to free trade as it is in England as their ultimate goal and vowed never to cease their efforts until that goal should be attained. The tariff is as protectionist in principle today as it was before their advent to power. In the tariff revision of 1907, Mr. Fielding and Mr. Paterson repeatedly defended the present tariff upon the principle of protection.

Pose as Free Traders.

In portions of the country they still pose as free traders—in fact during the past session a meeting of the Liberal free trade members was summoned for the purpose of discussing the situation. It is stated upon the best authority that the meeting proved a dismal failure. They practice protection as a matter of political expediency, and not of principle, hence the protective element in their tariff is put to party uses, being founded upon no sincere belief. It is in this way that those who call themselves leaders of the Liberal party have carried out the principle of plank No. 1.

As to unrestricted reciprocity with the United States the Liberal leaders violently assailed Conservative governments from 1878 to 1896 by reason of their failure to obtain better trade relations with the United States. They declared that sunny ways and conciliatory methods were alone effective. They have been in power for twelve years and they have attempted much but accomplished nothing. Thus they have absolutely failed as to plank No. 2.

Only a Name Changed.

Let us turn to plank No. 3, "Purity of administration." The substitution of the word "Liberal" for "Conservative" in that plank is exceedingly apt and cogent at the present. It would then read:

"That the convention deplores the gross corruption in the management and expenditure of public moneys which for years past has existed under the rule of the Liberal party, and the revelations of which by the different parliamentary committees of inquiry have brought disgrace upon the fair name of Canada. The government which profited politically by these expenditures of public moneys, of which the people have been defrauded, and which, nevertheless, have never punished the guilty parties, must be held responsible for the wrong doing."

The record of corruption is so long and so startling that the whole evening might be occupied in enumerating the various scandals brought to light during the past three years.

Exposed the Scandals

For two years the opposition fought hard in the face of obstructive tactics to bring many such matters to light in the public accounts committee. Some of them were exposed and others were successfully concealed. The whole policy of the government and its followers was to shut off investigation and prevent publicity. When facts discreditable to the government were elicited the opposition who made and profited by the 'muck' Notwithstanding this, public attention was aroused by the exposures. The Moncton land deal and the remarkable profits paid to A. E. Walberg and George T. Merwin were made public. The government paid the latter gentleman more than $18,000 for goods which he had purchased the day before for less than $12,000. The $6,000 thus presented to Mr. Merwin were wantonly and unnecessarily taken from the public treasury of Canada. A private trustee so administering his trust would be subject to the penalties of the criminal law.

Some More Scandals.

The celebrated purchase of files from Charles Strubb, the operations of the Eastern Supply company, the enormous sums paid to the North Atlantic Trading company, the outrageous waste of money in the notorious expenditure of the Arctic, the payment of nearly $2,000 to a tailor for superintending the construction of a building costing $4,700, the absurdity luxurious outfit of the Moncalm, an ice-breaker employed for a few days each year in the St. Lawrence, the dredging contracts involving the loss of millions of public moneys, the enormous profits paid in patronage prices and to the middlemen were in some measure exposed in parliament and in the public accounts committee. The party press subsidized during the past 12 years to the extent of near $6,000,000 strained the resources of the English language in denunciation of the members of the opposition as scandal mongers. They seemed to forget that the opposition did not create but merely exposed the scandals. But in 1907 the government appointed three gentlemen to investigate the operation of the Civil Service Act and to make suggestions with respect thereto. The three gentlemen appointed were well Known Liberals —Mr. Courtenay, Mr. Fysche and Mr. Dazin.

Condemned the Actions.

The authority conferred upon them by the commission was crouched in terms which justified the commissioners in entering upon an investigation of a much more thorough and sweeping character than the government contemplated or desired. The time at the disposal of the commissioners did not permit them to touch more than the fringe of many of the departments, but into the branch of the marine and fisheries department, they made a more or less thorough examination. No member of the opposition has ventured upon a stronger condemnation than that found within the pages of the commissioner's report. A few quotations will give you an idea of its unsparing criticism.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

David Lloyd-George, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, recently paid a visit to Germany for the purpose of studying the old-age pensions and state insurance schemes in vogue there. The British Old Age Pension Law, passed during the present year, is admittedly in the nature of an experiment. It would appear, from the statements given to the press by the minister, that Mr. Lloyd-George is much impressed with the success of the contributary scheme in the Fatherland, and that any amendments which may be made in the British law, will be in this direction.

It is worthy of note that the Labor party, to whose agitation the passage of the present law was primarily due, are willing to accept nothing short of universal pensions, to all aged persons, without regard to income, and demand that the whole of the funds shall be provided out of the exchequer.

It is anticipated that there will be thousands of persons entitled to pensions up to five shillings a week, who will not claim, owing to their ignorance of the law. In Southwark the proportion of illiterates among the poor is enormous, and many old people, seventy years and upwards, would never have entered a claim but for the efforts of a political agent. Many of them, who had never been able to read a daily newspaper, were entirely out of touch with the world, and one old fellow, who was interviewed by the agent, refused to believe that the State had made provisions for him until the money should be placed in his hands.

Paris, Sept. 14.—In one of the most remarkable decisions ever handed down in a French court, the secretary of the Electrical Workers' Union has been sentenced to pay damage to two members of the union because they were thrown out of work on the night of August 6, with Paris dark. The court held there had been an abuse of the right to strike. The strike had been as the result of a sort of military alarm, he said, and must be recognized as malicious intention since it overthrew the citys economic life and deprived those who wanted to work of the right to work.

There is no appeal from the decision of the court.

Paris, Sept. 10.—Pataud, the secretary of the Electrical Workers' Union, who was compelled yesterday to damages to three music hall singers because they had suffered loss of work through a strike of his union, says he is determined to bring the case before the Court of Cessation. He says he is insolvent, and the treasury of his union is empty, so the complainants are not likely to receive their damages of eight francs each.

Pataud says he intends to claim damages before the magistrates who condemned him from Sargent, the secretary of the printers' union, because he (Pataud) failed to receive two copies of Socialist newspapers, to which he was a subscriber, which did not appear for 24 hours because of a strike.

EDITORIAL NOTES

There is no doubt that a good deal more publicity regarding the inside workings of the Agricultural Society would be better for all concerned. Whereas during other years every meeting of the Society and its directors was fully reported in the papers this year everything has been done so quietly that none, not even some of the directors, know what is going on.

Apropos of the letter from a contractor in last week's Times, it might be well to have made public everything in connection with all expenditure as well as with the general actions of the directorate. The Society is a public one, supported by public money, and having no relation whatever to one political party or private ends. One of the directors, who states that he has attended every meeting tells The Times that he knew nothing of the new building being erected on the grounds. No report of it has appeared in the local papers, except as was contained in a letter from the Secretary to the City Council.

However, whether this was decided privately by a few in control, or not, there is no doubt that more publicity as to the doings of this public society is demanded by the public. There is too much of this quiet work going on in Medicine Hat, and strangely enough there are two or three particular men interested in each instance of it.

Without pledging to the Agricultural Society especially—some day there are some revelations going to be made that will make the citizens wonder they hadn't stopped it all before. Could it be stopped without the revelations it would prevent a great deal of embarrassment in certain quarters. The expenditure of moneys by the different public bodies of the city, comparing the different business men in the same business, would show a wonderful game of—partiality, to say the least.

The anti-spitting by-law is at last to appear on our books. After a year's delay since The Times commenced the campaign, the Council has found time to squeeze it in between the vagaries of the water service. And speaking of the water service, it's a safe wager that not one Alderman knows what is on has been the matter. While not technical men themselves, they have technical services which they pay for. Then, why all this vagueness?

The vale-dwellers are perhaps not aware of the fact that the water supply on the hill is still an uncertain quantity. The reasons are prolific—one time it is a valve wrong somehow, another it is a pipe of a wrong size, and so on. Lightning strikes, bush fires —and incompetent officials are still to be offered as excuses.

The Lethbridge Herald is bound that it will bring politics into the irrigation ditch enterprise of the Southern Alberta Land Co. Knowing well that when we get the ditch, farming will jump ahead to the detriment of Lethbridge district, the Liberal paper of Lethbridge is determined to prevent the digging of the ditch, if at all possible.

The Herald tries desperately hard to get Mr. Magrath aroused to fight the scheme. The Herald's experience being with Mr. Simmon's style, it cannot realize that Mr. Magrath feels that anything that builds up his constituency, is a good thing to work for. No matter how they try, the Liberal papers of this riding can take it as final that they cannot get the opposition of the Conservatives of Medicine Hat district nor of Mr. Magrath. Mr. Magrath, fortunately, works for his district.

The stand of the Medicine Hat Conservatives on the irrigation ditch is easily defined. If the Government should locate a $500,000 Court House at Lethbridge, when dozens of other places needed a building much more, would the Lethbridge Herald object? Well! We don't object no matter how the land for the ditch was acquired, but we don't expect Halifax, or Ottawa, or Montreal (or Lethbridge for that matter) to keep mum and let it all pass.

This is as far as The Times cares to go on this subject, as the ditch is entirely out of the sphere of politics here.

In the coming election a safe way for the farmers to figure out how to vote is to decide whether they are willing to work day and night in order that a few Government favorites might become millionaires. While the farmer is slaving early and late to save enough after his taxes are paid to make a competence for himself, a score of Government favorites are feathering their nests at the expense of the farmer and the laborer. The names of a dozen Liberals can be given who went into Parliament comparatively poor, but are now wealthy. This money all comes from the pockets of the workers.

While a few of the farmers of this district think they are under obligation to the Liberal Government for being allowed to spend their time in road-building at five dollars a day, what a mere breath that is compared with the hundreds of thousands made by the men who do nothing but engineer crookedness.

The farmers are fast finding out that the little sops thrown them by the Government are merely for their votes in order that more millions can be handed over to the lucky few.

What can you do with elections run like this?

When the ballot boxes were opened in the Saskatoon County recount the other day, it was found that the boxes were unsealed so that the recount is more or less of a farce. These boxes had of course never been out of the hands of Liberal officers.

Mr. Simmons has been brought up sharply again. Owing to desparaging remarks made by the Liberal candidate on Labor Day, a prominent Socialist has challenged him to debate the question: "Is Socialism Destructive to Labor."

The editor of The Edmonton Saturday News, in answer to The Times says that his early training has nothing to do with the discussion of Mr. Ames' charges. It is hardly reasonable to suppose that a man who has been a strong Liberal all his life and has never renounced the party, can prevent his early training coloring his present discussions. A sufficient answer to the "independence" of the editor of The News is contained in the fact that a defence of the Government carefully thought out and extended to the length of a full page. If independent no DEFENCE of the Liberal party was required or in place.

The feeling of Labor against the Government is sharp. It has been suggested that W. L. Mackenzie King Deputy Minister of Labor be nominated for East Hamilton. John A. Fleet, the well-known Labor leader of Hamilton in an interview, said: "He will be opposed by the Labor element of Hamilton. Mr. King is a bright young man, but his being in the pay of the Liberal party would be sufficient to set the seal of disapproval upon him so far as the working classes of Hamilton are concerned."

The attempts of the Liberal press to prove that the Liberal Government has done a lot for Labor do not go down with intelligent Labor, and they are not slow in expressing their disapproval.

(Toronto News.)

In Medicine Hat natural gas is so plentiful that the citizens claim it is dangerous to smoke while digging a post hole.

There is a widespread impression, not unsupported by evidence, that the enquiry by Judge Cassels regarding the administration of the marine department is being allowed to become a good deal of a farce. In fact the proceedings are gradually assuming a somewhat humorous nature, owing to the reiteration of evidence and the lack of effort to probe affairs very deeply. The whole affair, so far, has been absolutely one sided, Messrs. Watson and Perron, who appear for the government, not unnaturally, are not working overtime in their efforts to produce material that might prove valuable for opposition campaign purposes. There is no opposition representation, so that only one side is taking part in the investigation, and little effort seems to be made to bring forward evidence to substantiate the report of the civil service commission.

"Well," said a facetious local Liberal worker, "I hear Magrath has decided not to run."

"No," answered his friend. "He doesn't need to run; he'll do it in a walk."

Although fully fifteen minutes was spent in discussion of the water question brought up by Mr. Kealy two weeks ago in the Council meeting, The News dismissed the subject in its report with three lines. This is the most important matter before the ratepayers at present and yet our contemporary will not report any discussion of it. It all goes to prove what The Times said before the last civic elections—that the editor of a newspaper should not sit on the Council, since he is certain to use his paper to further his own ends rather than to give unbiased reports. Ald. Forster, the editor of The News is a water commissioner, hence his refusal to allow his paper to report the discussion of the water service.

Add to this the fact that The News has throughout the water trouble made only a couple of limited comments on the situation, and those confined to minimizing the seriousness of it, while scores of people never had a drop in thier houses for three months, and the ratepayers can readily see how a newspaper can be utilized to hinder the development of a city and the amelioration of existing evils, and to work only for private ends.

Several of the Alberta Liberal papers have been sending out a supplement confined to the doings of the Provincial Gopernment. As there is not a cent's worth of advertising in the supplement, the Edmonton Bulletin, which printed the supplement, receives its remmeration elsewhere. Of course it is paid by the Government with the other thousands handed over to that fortunate paper. This means that each of us are contributing our share towards boosting the present party in power. That's rather a new idea, and one worthy of the general Liberal ideas.

If the Liberals run J. E. Eaton and Cawthra Mulock in Toronto, there is no difficulty in discovering the reason. These two men are among the wealthiest in the city, and personally are out of the question as candidates. John C. Eaton, before the death of his father Timothy Eaton was but a figurehead in the office of the store, drawing $10,000 a year for doing nothing but cashing his checks. As a man he was looked upon as a joke in the city and "J. C." was synonymous with a style of frivolity that was not commendable.

Cawthra Mulock is the son of the ex-Postmaster-General, and inherited the Cawthra millions from his grandmother, when only seventeen years old. Only about twenty five years old, now, he has never earned a cent of money in his life. A harum-scarum, weak, dependent youngster in intellect and actions he would make a peculiar member of parliament.

With not a single personal qualification, and lacking even popularity, the reason for the bringing out of these two canbidates is so obvious as scarcely to provoke a smile. The Liberals need the money to carry on their special style of campaign. The only way to seat a Liberal in Toronto is by wholesale corruption, and that requires money.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is giving out his pre-election talk down East. He promises free rural delivery in Ontario. At the same time here are dozens of post offices in well settled districts of the West, which not only will get no free rural delivery, but can secure a weekly stage service only. Farmers around Eagle Butte, Elkwater, Woolchester, Josephsburg, Little Plume, Norton, Graburn, Gros Ventre, etc., have to be satisfied with a weekly service, while Ontario farmers will have their mail delivered every day at their doors.

Another case of favoritism. However, the farmers will have something to say about it at the elections.

High Tribute to Canada

Kaiser's Close Friend Buys Gerhard Heintzman Piano

Baron von Landsberg Orders One for His Castle in Germany

Those Canadians who have of late years taken pride in the phase, "Made in Canada," will be gratified to learn of the honor which has just been paid to Canadian industry and skill that could hardly be surpassed in its significance. It goes without saying that to be anything other than a reproach the phase, "Made in Canada," must carry with it a certificate of excellence, and one manufacturer, at least, has shown that it does.

Some years ago, in 1886, to be exact, the late Chancellor von Bismarck was struck by the tonal beauty and superb quality of workmanship of a piano exhibited at the Indian and Colonial Exposition by Mr. Gerhard Heintzman, of Toronto, Canada. So much so, indeed, that he purchased it and had it installed in his Castle of Friedrichsruhe, where it became the favorite instrument of the ladies of the family.

Now, in Germany musical taste is more widely diffused and more highly organized than in any country under the sun. It is a nation whose Kaiser himself is an amateur composer, and where the higher forms of music are the recreation of its statesmen. The endorsation of the greatest statesman in its history was naturally an honor prized beyond words by Mr. Gerhard Heintzman, who is one of those "old-fashioned" manufacturers, to whom the excellence of his output gives greater pleasure than immediate profit. Little did he dream, however, that the incident was to have a sequel.

This Summer he took a vacation in Germany, and early in August chanced to meet his Excellency Baron von Landsberg, one of the greatest men of the German nobility, and possessor of the highest orders in the Empire, than whom none stands closer as personal friend and adviser to the Kaiser. The conversation turning on Canada, the Baron spoke of the Canadian piano he had heard and admired at Friedrichsruhe. Learning that he was talking to the very man who had made it, he ordered one for his daughter, who is one of the finest musicians and pianistes in Germany.

Mr. Heintzman was commanded to visit the castle of Landsberg, and heard the Baroness play. It was then decided that the instrument should take the form of a studio grand, built in conformity with the historic furniture of the castle, which is in rich mahogany. Orders were at once cabled to Toronto, and the piano will be shipped to Germany this week. A representative of The Mail and Empire saw the instrument, and in beauty of workmanship and exquisite quality it should amply meet the expectations of its recipient.

It must be admitted that so signal an honor from so authorative a source has seldom been paid to Canadian industry.

$10.00 down and $10.00 per month will buy a Gerhard Heintzman or any other piano in our store.

Also,
During the month of September we are giving a discount of 20 per cent. on every piano in our store.

20 per cent. off the regular price and $10.00 down and $10.00 each month is a wonderful bargain.

"lower grade. * * * In the out-
"side service politics enter into ev-
"ery appointment. * * * The polit-
"ics of the party is of greater im"portance in making appointments
"and promotions than the public in"terests of the Dominion. Those who "have the political pull use it for all
"it is worth. Large amounts have "been spent for supplies bought from
"those enjoying political patronage
"at what may be called retail rates.
"Heavy expenditures have been in"curred without necessary considera-
"tion or supervision.

"The time has come when this prac
"tice of paying retail prices to a few
"favored merchants should be discon-
"tinued."

Of General Application.

The foregoing criticism was of general application. Then coming to the department of marine, the commissioners use still stronger language.

"Organization, discipline, zeal for
"the public service and regard for "economy are all conspicuous by
"their absence.

"There is no sign visible of a sin-
"gle directing hand or an intelligent
"purpose, unless it be that of spend-
"ing as much money as possible.
"Zeal for economy and good manage"ment, or pride in the work is not "visible.

"There is not only a lack of effici"ent organization and method in the "department, there would also seem "to be a lack of conscience. In con"nection with the enormous expendi-
"tures which are deemed unnecessary
"the word 'discount' never appears.
"It is placidly assumed that there is "no such thing; but the whole com"mercial world knows otherwise. If
"no one gets any benefit from trade
"with the government except the "trader, then it must be clear in
"these great purchases made for the "government, without discount, its "officers must be assisting the trader
"to get better prices from the gov"ernment than he can get anywhere
"else; for everywhere else he has to "give discount. In other words, some "of the government officers are serv-
"ing two masters and apparently
"succeeding with both, Scripture not "withstanding.

Means of Great Increase

"One officer is quoted as stating "that a saving of $25,000 per an-
"num might be made in lighthouse
"expenditure by the Quebec agency
"alone. Again it is reported that
"$8,000 to "$10,000 a year might
"be saved in one agency by buying
"at wholesale instead of retail prices
"The lighthouse board in 2 years
"approved of application for aids to
"navigation amounting to $1,691,-
"813. "The commissioners say that
"this board has been the means of "greatly increasing the expenditure
"of the department and much of the "increase has been wasted."

"There is a statement from the di-
"rector of the Sorel ship yard that
"the prices paid by the government
"for supplies purchased at Quebec
"averaging fifty per cent. higher and
"sometimes one hundred per cent a-
"bove that paid by the Sorel shops."

The commissioners also strongly criticize the department of militia, pointing out that in less than five years the expenditure has sprung from $8,500,000 to $6,500,000 without any corresponding increase in efficiency.

During the session of 1907, I moved for a thorough and searching investigation into the affairs and management of the marine department by a parliamentary committee. Sir Wilfrid Laurier characterized my statements as "froth and wild talk," and he appealed to his followers to vote down my motion which was consequently defeated. The government never dreamed that the civil service commission would undertake anysuch investigation. Their purpose throughout has been concealment. The condition of the marine department was known to the prime minister long before the report of the civil service commission.

Laurier's Purity Promise.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier promised purity of administration. He has abandoned the public exchequer to the plunder and pilfering of unscrupulous party friends and has permitted the public domain to become the prey of his strongest partizans. The patronage system has been employed in its most extreme form to subserve party interests. The deputy minister of marine and fisheries has admitted on oath that the government could have saved $200,000 within a few years in his department alone were it not for the patronage system. It is the same story throughout the entire public service—in the appointment of public officials, in the purchasing of supplies and materials, in the administration of the railways and canals, the rewarding of party service, and the advancement of party interests have been the supreme consideration over-riding all regard for economy and efficiency.

Same Principle Prevails.

The same principle has prevailed in appointments to public office. I do not deny that many good appointments have been made by the present government, but whenever party interests demanded the reward of public office for unscrupulous party service that reward has been forthcoming. Criminals have been appointed to positions in the public service—men engaged in the most nefarious electoral crimes have been appointed to positions of public trust. No heeler in his zeal for party interests need fear that the most outrageous disregard of law and decency would prevent his appointment to public office.

There is little wonder that a much respected Liberal of the old school, S. H. Blake, K.C., who enjoys a remarkable gift of forcible expression has referred to "the Falstaff brigade which it (the Toronto Globe) calls the Liberal party." Another strong Liberal, Joseph Martin, who was a warm supporter of the present administration, a personal friend of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and a former colleague of the Hon. Mr. Sifton, and who has contributed valiant party service to the Liberal cause, has recently made the following statement before the international fiscal congress in Great Britain.

"Never in all the history of Canada has there been so much corruption in public life as in the last 12 years. It has permeated every department of the government and it is safe to say that much the greater part of the time of parliament is taken up with investigating charges of graft and corruption against departmental officers and ministers of the crown.

"One can well understand that under the very best administration there may be cases of wrong-doing on the part of the officials of the departments, but it would naturally be expected when charges of this kind were made in parliament and committees appointed for their investigation that the government of the day would lend every assistance in their power to expose the wrong and punish the wrongdoers. So deep-rooted, however, is the corruption in public life of Canada that we find the government employing every means at their hand to suppress and nullify the investigations of these committees. Witnesses refuse to answer the questions, and when the Conservative members of the committee ask for their committal for contempt the Liberal majority invariably refuse to exercise their power."

Mr. Martin is perfectly correct in saying that maladministration may occur under the best government. That which condemns the present administration is the desire to conceal wrong doing, the willingness to continue and condone it and the disinclination to punish it.

The pledge was for purity of administration. Honest Liberals of the old schools, what do you think of the performance?

Laurier's Strict Economy

Let us look at plank 4 on which Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Fielding raised the slogan of "strictest economy." Has the burning zeal for economy which actuated these gentlemen in 1893 been manifest during the past twelve years of their administration? What has been the record of the men who vowed to heaven that the expenditure of forty million dollars would be reduced by from four million dollars per annum when they came to power? "It is a disgrace and a shame to the government that they ask for an expenditure of $38,300,000 a year," shouted these gentlemen in chorus in 1893. In 1896 the expenditure of the Conservative government was $41,702,388; in 1908 the Liberal government spent $110,500,000, and the estimates for the present year, including bounties and railway subsidies, amount to $164,522,681. During ten years of Liberal rule the expenditure has been 232 millions greater than in the ten years of Conservative rule. Where has the money gone? A portion of it has been properly expended for legitimate purposes, but how many millions have been wasted upon useless expenditure, in absurd prices and unjustifiable profits. Ask the middleman, ask the partisan friends upon the patronage list.

Evidence of Wasted Money

Look around Canada, look around each province, consider the expenditure of public money in each separate community, and ask yourself what has become of this enormous expenditure. Is the present rate of increase to be maintained? We are confronted with a probable deficit of more than thirty million dollars for the present year. We have yet to pay for the Transcontinental railway, the revenue has been decreasing by nearly two million dollars a month, the public debt is increasing at an enormous rate and there are numerous demands upon the public exchequer at the present time for legitimate public works. Liberals who voted for economy on the 23rd of June, 1896, consider the record of the men for whom you voted, consider the pledges they gave, and say at the polls whether you are satisfied with their performance.

"Independence of Parliament."

What of the independence of parliament for which Sir Wilfrid and his friends disclaimed in 1893. The government had hardly been formed before the premier wrote the following letter to one of his supporters then a member of parliament, who had demanded consideration. He said:

"This is what I propose. The position of lieutenant-governor will be at our disposition at the end of 1897, and if from now till that time you are not appointed judge, I propose to place the lieutenant-governorship at your disposal."

The gentleman to whom that letter was addressed was appointed to the bench. Since then no less than seventyfive members of parliament have been appointed to positions of emolument or to the Senate. We can only conjecture how far such considerations may account for the solid phalanx which obstructs parliamentary inquiries. Sir Wilfrid Laurier proclaimed the hostility to investigation of public expenditure by royal commission or by judges. He declared that judges do not get one half the truth. Mr. Justice Cassels is sitting as a royal commissioner at the present time for the purpose of investigating question of public expenditure which, according to Sir Wilfrid, ought to be investigated by parliament and by parliament alone.

Policy Has Been Falsified.

The avowed policy of the Liberal party with respect to public lands has been outraged and falsified in the most astonishing manner by the present administration. The sixth plank laid down at the Ottawa Liberal convention was as follows:

"That in the opinion of this convention the sales of public lands of the Dominion should be to actual settlers only, and not to speculators, upon reasonable terms of settlement, and in such areas as can be reasonably occupied and cultivated by the settler."

Under the present regime the settler has had small chance in competition with the speculator. A brief enumeration of some of the larger deals is all that time will permit. Certain gentlemen formed themselves into a company known as the Saskatchewan Valley Land company and the government handed over 250,000 acres of land at one dollar per acre, payable one-half in scrip worth 25 to 50 cents on the dollar and the balance spread over a term of five years. This land was disposed of at from eight to fifteen dollars per acre.

An Underhand Grant

The grant was made behind the back of parliament and of the people Its complicated conditions were all in favor of the speculator and all against the settler. 371,749 acres were presented to friends of the government by "closed" grazing leases, the greater portion of which was suddenly granted between April 9 and July 17, 1905, after which no further "closed" leases were granted. This future restriction naturally increased the value of these grants to the fortunate holders. The expression "closed" lease means that the land is withheld from settlement for a period of twenty-one years no matter what influx of settlers may occur. The total area comprised more than 580 sq miles. The circumstances connected with certain of these grants are very suspicious, but time does not permit their consideration this evening. In each case the lucky grantee obtains the right to purchase at one dollar per acre ten per cent. of his holdings. At a moderate estimate this would be worth from ten to fifteen dollars per acre. It is needless to add that in every instancethe grants were made without any opportunity for public competition.

Timber for All Friends

Timber limits without number have been granted to friends of the government. There has been no opportunity for public competition, no reserve bid, no upset price, no examination or estimate by the government of the value of the areas granted, no opportunity to any competitor to make such examination as would justify him in bidding. One very prominent member of the Liberal party has thus secured 309,320 acres of timber limits. Others have been almost equally fortunate. The greater portion of the valuable timber lands of the northwest has passed into the hands of prominent friends of the government. A Liberal campaign pamphlet bears this legend in bold letters: "Liberals have made good." It must be admitted that certain Liberals have made good—at the expense of the people.

Will Give Country Away

It is safe to prophesy that in another five years little will be left of the public domain if the present administration is continued in power. And yet from the subsidized organs the cry goes up that Laurier should be allowed to complete his work. The timber limits thus given away for a mere song are held at fabulous prices and for purely speculative purposes, only a trifling portion being worked or operated. The net result of the transaction is simply this: The timber remains uncut, the title has passed from the people to the speculator, and enormous yearly increase of value will go into the capacious pockets of Liberal members of parliament and their friends instead of the public treasury. The United States government has inaugurated a great system of irrigation whereby its arid lands are reclaimed at a minimum cost and parcelled out to settlers in small holdings at the cost of reclamation. Our government overrides the reports of its own officers in order that the settler may be compelled to pay toll to speculative promoters of irrigation companies. President Roosevelt has withdrawn the public timber lands of the United States from sale and proposes to conserve them as a great national asset. Our government on the contrary burns with impatience to hand over all the great natural resources of Canada to its grasping partisans. Thus has been fulfilled the pledge that our public lands should be for the settler and not for the speculator.

Will Make Redress.

How far restitution may be possible we do not know. If fraud or imposition has been practiced, if the trustees and servants of the people have conspired to plunder the interests they were bound to protect, there must be a remedy for the wrong, and we have pledged ourselves to pursue every legitimate means of redress which can be made available in the interests of the people and consistently with the principles of constitutional government.

Coming now to plank No. 7 and 8 the government has repealed the Dominion Franchise act and has to a certain extent observed county boundaries in delimiting the electoral divisions; but after reverting to the provincial franchise they attempted during the recent session of parliament to provide a special Dominion Franchise act for the three provinces under Conservative rule. There was no justification for the attempt and no excuse except that of party advantage. Eventually the bill was withdrawn as to British Columbia and Manitoba, but persisted in as to Northern Ontario where new lists are being prepared notwithstanding that equally good lists prepared under the provincial laws are now in force.

Reformation of Senate.

Plank No. 9 called for the reformation of the senate and declare dthat the present constitution of that body is inconsistent with the federal principle and in other respects defective. Twelve years have elapsed and there has been no pretense of fulfilling this pledge. Liberal partisans alone have been appointed to that body; and, while some of the appointments have been good, others are astonishingand utterly unjustifiable. A Liberal majority having been secured all effort at reform has been abandoned and another broken pledge is thus recorded.

The tenth plank of the Ottawa platform pledged the Liberal "party to a plebiscite for the purpose of ascertaining the mind of the people on the question of prohibition. There was a direct implied promise in this pledge that the will of the people thus ascertained would be carried into effect. This pledge was violated. The plebiscite was taken and its verdict disregarded. Plank No. 10 must thus be numbered with the other abandoned planks of the Ottawa Liberal platform.

Has Disregarded Pledges

Such was the policy, such the platform, not of the Liberal leaders but of the Liberal party assembled in convention in 1893. From whom did the members of the present administration receive any mandate to abandon that policy and to disregard the pledges thus given? Who authorized them to drag the fair name of Liberalism through the mire of forsaken pledges and political degradation? It has been boasted that the Liberal leaders went to the people in 1893, had this policy framed and adopted by the people in convention andthus testified its admiration and regard for the great principle of democracy. Where did Sir Wilfrid Laurier receive any mandate to withdraw from the pledges and the policy to which he was thus committed by the vote of the Liberals of Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific? His disregard of the pledges thus made to his party assembled in convention absolves from his allegiance every honest Liberal who stood for the principles which were embodied in that policy of 1893.

Conservative Platform Adopted

The subsidized Liberal journalshave sought to pour contempt upon the platform which I laid down in this city on August 20, 1907. The present government has been in power for more than twelve years. Youhave heard to what extent they have carried out their policy of 1893 during that period. I have had the unique satisfaction of seeing the government of the day forced by public opinion to carry into effect a very substantial portion of the policy which I advocated a year ago. I unhesitatingly make the assertion that within one year the Halifax platform has been carried into effect to greater extent than their own platform during their twelve years of power.

Look at the facts. Our policy demanded cerein specified reforms in the electoral laws. Some although not all of these have been brought about. For that purpose we introduced a bill into parliament early during the recent session and several important provisions of that bill were adopted in the government measure eventually passed.

Civil Service Reform.

The fourth plank of our platform demanded a thorough and complete reformation of the laws relating to the civil service so that future appointments shall be made by an independent commission acting upon the report of examiners after competitive examination. The force of public opinion and the conditions disclosed in the report of the civil service commission have compelled the government to adopt this plank although they have restricted its application to the inside service and have thus retained very extensive powers of patronage.

Our platform required the reorganization of the railway commission and the extension of its powers and jurisdiction to telegraph lines. This part of our policy has been carried into effect by the present government during the recent session.

Rural Free Delivery

Another plank in our platform provided for rural free mail delivery. The Liberal press and many Liberal leaders thundered against this proposal. The postmaster-general strongly opposed it. But he has seen new light. In a speech at Megantic, reported in the Montreal Herald of August 20, Mr. Lemieux made this statement:

"In a few days I expect to have "the pleasure of announcing that my "department is to make delivery of "mail in the country districts as well "as in the cities of Canada. I have "gone into this question carefully, "and I am convinced that the rev- "enue of my department is sufficient "to admit of this great improve- "ment, an improvement which is de- "signed for the exclusive benefit of "the rural population."

Thus another of our planks has been adopted by the government, which evidently realize that to the Halifax platform of 1907 and not to the Ottawa platform of 1893, they must look for guidance and inspiration.

It has been the fashion until recently, although not during the past session, to deride the opposition as weak and inefficient. An opposition which can force great reforms, such as these upon an unwilling government, has every reason to congratulate itself; and the party it represents has no cause to fear for its efficiency.

Remove Unnecessary Inequalities

As the labor of the producer, whether on the farm, in the forest or within the factory, is the real foundation of national wealth and prosperity, and as the principle of democracy should give to the people a fuller measure of hope and a firmer grasp of opportunity, so it should be the task of good statesmanship to remove unnecessary inequalitos and anomalies which oppress the producer and which to further generations will seem not only unjust but absurd. Especially if we expect our young men to remain on the farm, the convenience of communication and transportation and the comforts of life, which modern canditions make available, should be as as far as possible be brought within the reach of every farmer. Our wage-earning classes must not be driven by unequal competition to standards of resistance which will result in the deteriorgtion and degradation of our labering population.

Commands People's Confidence.

The Halifax platform of 1907 has regard to these considerations. It has been ratified and approved at nearly every Conservative convention since held. It commands the confidence of the people and has received the enthusiastic approval of every meeting which I addressed during my campaign of last year. It is an adaptation to conditions of today of that great national policy upon which Sir John A. Macdonald and his colleagues swept the country thirty years ago, and it is not too much to hope that at the general elections now approaching it will receive the same enthusiastic endorsement and approval as that which inscribed victory upon the Liberal-Conservative banners, of the 17th September, 1878.

Quebec Bridge Bungle.

I have spoken of corruption in and about efficiency? What branch of administration has not been mismanaged by the government? What great public undertaving have they not bungled? They declared the Quebec bridge a national work. They made provision for its construction by bond guarantee and they handed over all control of the enterprise and the expenditure to a company with practically no capital. Today it lies a wreck at the bottom of the St. Lawrence at a loss to this country of no less than six million dollars. To complete that work will involve a total expenditure of no less than fourteen million dollars. This statement made by me in parliament has not been challenged by any member of the administration.

They extended the Intercolonial railway to Montreal at an excessive cost, although the then Conservative majority in the senate saved the country at least four hundred thousand dollars on the Drummond railway deal. They proclaimed that deficits on the International railway would then become a thing of the past; they declared that the international railway would thencefort have its terminus in a city instead of a field, and would command the trade of the west. The western trade has not been secured the deficits on the International railway have been greater than before and that promise also remains unfulfilled.

The All-Red Project.

They cancelled a contract made by Sir Charles Tupper for a fast Atlantic service and they announced with shouts of triumph that they had secured an equally good contract at a much smaller figure and that that the fast Atlantic service was accomplished. Their bottle-necked fast Atlantic service has long since passed into the limbo of forgotten things although its memory was revived when the country was required to pay interest on the deposit which had been declared an absolute guarantee that the enterprise would reach a successful issue.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier declares himself the author of the All-Red project. It was hardly necessary for Sir Charles Tupper to remind us that the proposal was his own, and that Sir Wilfrid Laurier defeated than twelve years ago. The Liberal Conservative party originated, and still stands for the project of a fast Atlantic service, and it also maintains that the interests of our producers demand more efficient freight service, more favorable freight rates, and a thoroughly complete system of cold storage.

Extravagance Over Railways.

After five months of the session of 1903 had passed they suddenly rushed into a contract for the construction of a national transcontinental railway against the protest of the minister of railways, Hon. A. G. Blair. In vain we protested that there was not sufficient information. They laid certain venerable documents and reports upon the table of parliament and affirmed that there were mountains of information. They owed that $13,000,000 placed at interest would pay the cost of the whole undertaking and that the entire road from Winnipeg to Moncton would not cost more than $52,000,000. Their own official returns brought down to parliament during the present session show that the road will cost the country from $175,000,000 to $200,000,000 and there is good reason to believe that the public debt will be nearly doubled before its completion. The cost of the enterprise will amount to nearly one million dollars for every constituency in Canada. How much of this is being squandered? The Hodgins enquiry has been burked, but the protests of the Grand Trunk engineers are on record declaring that hundreds of thousands of yards of common earth excavation, payable at twenty-one cents per yard, has been classified as solid rock payable at $1.50 per yard. These charges were in the possession of the Government before Hodgins made his public statement. The Government through its majority on the committee of inquiry has refused any investigation.

Precipitated Japanese Influx

They undertook the negotiation of treaty with Japan, procured its ratification by misrepresentation to parliament, deliberately abandoned the Conservative policy of controlling immigration of laborers and artisans from that country, brushed aside the repeated warnings of the British government, handed over to Japan all control of immigration to Canada from that country and thus precipitated an influx of Japanese laborers which brought about the Vancouver riots. Having raised the storm they sent the postmaster-general to Tokio, humbly beseeching Japan to forego her treaty rights and advising the Japanese government to exercise that control over the situation which Canada might have exercised if the treaty had been accompanied by the stipulation upon which the Conservatives had insisted and which Japan has agreed to accept.

Is Time for a Change

In a time of business depression and financial stringency there have poured into nearly every important city and town in Canada hundreds of immigrants unable to find work and helpless to provide for themselves. An altogether too large and even startling proportion of these are country first pays a bonus to have diseased or physically unfit. The country pays a bonus to bring such undesirables to our shores and then each individual community is obliged to assume the burden of providing food and shelter as well as accommodation in asylums and hospitals. Careful statistics computed in Ontario show amazing and outrageous conditions brought to pass through lack of ordinary care and prudence by the federal government.

Upon this record of maladministration and inefficiency our opponents do not meet the people with much confidence, and unless public opinion is utterly dead their plaintive appeals for a further mandate willmeet with a chilling response. Canada believes it is time for a change.

Compliments Other Speakers

Let me say, in conclusion, that I rejoice to see on our platform tonight the Conservative leaders from other provinces, who have honored us with their presence. Sir James Whitney and Hon. Richard McBride are unavoidably absent. The former has sent a splendid representative in the person of the provincial secretary of Ontario, Hon. W. J. Hanna.

Mr. Roblin needs no introduction to this audience. He has given to Manitoba honest and progressive government, which has won for him the confidence and affection of that province as evidenced in his recent well-deserved victory. I had the pleasure of his splendid aid upon the platform at many of our meetings in that province last autumn.

Mr. Hazen and his more recent victory, is still fresh in your recollections. After fighting for many years in opposition, he has been called to the premiership of his province and has inaugurated an era of efficient, progressive and honest government too long denied the province of New Brunswick.

These Conservative victories, as well as that of Sir James Whitney and Mr. McBride, are but the precursor and augury of that still greater victory which we believe awaits us when the people of this country next record their votes at the polls.

When that triumph shall come let us receive it not so much in a spirit of elation as with a thorough and abiding sense of the tremendous responsibilities thus imposed upon us and with an earnest determination that our record shall be worthy of that great party which for eighteen years guided the destinies of this country, laid the foundation of your national unity and greatness and wrote in Canada's history so many glorious pages of honourable achievement and progress.

The Hound of the Baskervilles

Another Adventure of Sherlock Holmes.

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

Author of "The Green Flag" and "The Great Boer War"

Copyright (1902) by A. Conan Doyle.

Every minute that white woolly plain which covered one half of the moor was drifting closer and closer to the house. Already the first thin wisps of it were curling across the golden square of the lighted window. The farther wall of the orchard was already invisible, and the trees were standing out of a swirl of white vapour. As we watched it the fog-wreaths came crawling round both corners of the house and rolled slowly into one dense bank, on which the upper floor and the roof floated like a strange ship upon a shadowy sea. Holmes struck his hand passionately upon the rock in front of us, and stamped his feet in his impatience.

"If he isn't out in a quarter of an hour the path will be covered. In half an hour we won't be able to see our hands in front of us."

"Shall we move farther back upon higher ground?"

"Yes, I think it would be as well."

So as the fog-bank flowed onwards we fell back before it until we were half a mile from the house, and still that dense, white sea, with the moon silvering its upper edge, swept slowly and inexorably on.

"We are going too far," said Holmes. "We dare not take the chances of his being overtaken before he can reach us. At all costs we must hold our ground where we are." He dropped on his knees and clapped his ear to the ground. "Thank God, I think that I hear him coming."

A sound of quick steps broke the silence of the moor. Crouching among the stones we stared intently at the silver-tipped bank in front of us. The steps grew louder, and through the fog, as through a curtain, there stepped the man whom we were awaiting. He looked round him in surprise as he emerged into the clear, star-lit night. Then he came swiftly along the path, passed close to where we lay, and went on up the long slope behind us. As he walked he glanced continually over his shoulder, like a man who is ill at ease.

"Hist!" cried Holmes, and I heard the sharp click of a cocking pistol. "Look out! It's coming!"

There was a thin, crisp, continuous patter from somewhere in the heart of that crawling bank. The cloud was within fifty yards of where we lay, and we glared at it, all three, uncertain what horror was about to break from the heart of it. I was at Holmes's elbow, and I glanced for an instant at his face. It was pale and exultant, his eyes gleaming brightly in the moonlight. But suddenly they started forward in a rigid, fixed stare, and his lips parted in amazement. At the same instant Lestrade gave a yell of terror and threw himself face downwards upon the ground. I sprang to my feet, my inert hand grasping my pistol, my mind paralyzed by the dreadful shape which had sprung out upon us from the shadows of the fog. A hound it was, an enormous coal-black hound, but not such a hound as mortal eyes have ever seen. Fire burst from its open mouth, its eyes glowed with a smouldering glare, its muzzle and hackles and dewlap were outlined in flickering flame. Never in the delirious dream of a disordered brain could anything more savage, more appalling, more hellish be conceived than that dark form, and savage face which broke upon us out of the wall of fog.

With long bounds the huge black creature was leaping down the track, following hard upon the footsteps of our friend. So paralyzed were we by the apparition that we allowed him to pass before we had recovered our nerve. Then Holmes and I both fired together, and the creature gave a hideous howl, which showed that one at least had hit him. He did not pause, however, but bounded onwards. Far away on the path we saw Sir Henry looking back, his face white in the moonlight, his hands raised in horror, glaring helplessly at the frightful thing which was hunting him down.

But that cry of pain from the hound had blown all our fears to the winds. If he was vulnerable he was mortal, and if we could wound him we could kill him. Never have I seen a man run as Holmes ran that night. I am reckoned fleet of foot, but he outpaced me as much as I outpaced the little professional. In front of us as we flew up the track we heard scream after scream from Sir Henry and the deep roar of the hound. I was in time to see the beast spring upon its victim, hurl him to the ground, and worry at his throat. But the next instant Holmes had emptied five barrels of his revolver into the creature's flank. With a last howl of agony and a vicious snap in the air, it rolled upon its back, four feet pawing furiously, and then fell limp upon its side. I stooped, panting, and pressed my pistol to the dreadful, shimmering head, but it was useless to press the trigger. The giant hound was dead.

Sir Henry lay insensible where he had fallen. We tore away his collar, and Holmes breathed a prayer of gratitude when we saw that there was no sign of a wound and that the rescue had been in time. Already our friend's eyelids shivered and he made a feeble effort to move. Lestrade thrust his brandy-flask between the baronet's teeth, and two frightened eyes were looking up at us.

"My God!" he whispered. "What was it? What, in Heaven's name, was it?"

"It's dead, whatever it is," said Holmes. "We've laid the family ghost once and for ever."

In mere size and strength it was a terrible creature which was lying stretched before us. It was not a bloodhound and it was not a pure mastiff; but it appeared to be a combination of the two—gaunt, savage, and as large as a small lioness. Even now, in the stillness of death, the huge jaws seemed to be dripping with a bluish flame and the small deep-set, cruel eyes were ringed with fire. I placed my hand upon the glowing muzzle, and as I held them up my own fingers smouldered and gleamed in the darkness.

"Phosphorus," I said.

"A cunning preparation of it," said Holmes, sniffing at the dead animal. "There is no smell which might have interfered with his power of scent. We owe you a deep apology, Sir Henry, for having exposed you to this fright. I was prepared for a hound, but not such a creature as this. And the fog gave us little time to receive him."

"You have saved my life."

"Having first endangered it. Are you strong enough to stand?"

"Give me another mouthful of that brandy and I shall be ready for anything. So! Now, if you will help me up. What do you propose to do?"

"To leave you here. You are not fit for further adventures to-night. If you will wait, one or other of us will go back with you to the Hall."

He tried to stagger to his feet; but he was still ghastly pale and trembling in every limb. We helped him to a rock, where he sat shivering with his face buried in his hands.

"We must leave you now," said Holmes. "The rest of our work must be done, and every moment is of importance. We have our case, and now we only want our man.

"It's a thousand to one against our finding him at the house," he continued, as we retraced our steps swiftly down the path. "Those shots must have told him that the game was up."

"We were some distance off, and this fog may have deadened them."

"He followed the hound to call him off—of that you may be certain. No, no, he's gone by this time! But we'll search the house and make sure."

The front door was open, so we rushed in and hurried from room to room, to the amazement of a doddering old manservant, who met us in the passage. There was no light save in the dining-room, but Holmes caught up the lamp and left no corner of the house unexplored. No sign could we see of the man whom we were chasing. On the upper floor, however, one of bedroom doors was locked.

"There's someone in here," cried Lestrade. "I can hear a movement. Open this door!"

A faint moaning and rustling came from within. Holmes struck the door just over the lock with the flat of his foot, and it flew open. Pistol in hand, we all three rushed into the room.

But there was no sign within it of that desperate and defiant villain whom we expected to see. In stead we were met by an object so strange and so unexpected that we stood for a moment gaping at it in amazement.

The room had been fashioned into a small museum, and the walls were lined by a number of glass-topped cases full of that collection of butterflies and moths the formation of which had been the relaxation of this complex and dangerous man. In the centre of this room there was an upright beam, which had been placed at some period as a support for the old worm-eaten balk of timber which spanned the roof. To this post a figure was tied, so swathed and muffled in the sheets which had been used to secure it that one could not for the moment tell whether it was that of a man or a woman. One towel passed round the throat and was secured at the back of the pillar. Another covered the lower part of the face, and over it two dark eyes—eyes full of grief and shame and a dreadful questioning—stared back at us. In a minute we had torn off the gag, unswathed the bonds, and Mrs. Stapleton sank upon the floor in front of us. As her beautiful head fell upon her chest I saw the clear red weal of a whiplash across her neck.

"The brute!" cried Holmes. "Here, Lestrade, your brandy-bottle! Put her in the chair! She had fainted from illusage and exhaustion."

She opened her eyes again.

"Is he safe?" she asked. "Has he escaped?"

"He cannot escape us, madam."

"No, no, I did not mean my husband. Sir Henry? Is he safe?"

"Yes."

"And the hound?"

"It is dead."

She gave a long sigh of satisfaction.

"Thank God! Thank God! Oh, this villain! See how he has treated me!" She shot her arms out from her sleeves, and we saw with horror that they were all mottled with bruises. "But this is nothing—nothing! It is my mind and soul that he has tortured and defiled. I could endure it all, ill-usage, solitude, a life of deception, everything, as long as I could still cling to the hope that I had his love, but now I know that in this also I have been his dupe and his tool." She broke into passionate sobbing as she spoke.

"You bear him no good will, madam," said Holmes. "Tell us then where we shall find him. If you have ever aided him in evil, help us now and so atone."

"There is but one place where he can have fled," she answered. "There is an old tin mine on an island in the heart of the Mire. It was there that he kept his hound and there also he had made preparations so that he might have a refuge. That is where he would fly."

The fog-bank lay like white wool against the window. Holmes held the lamp towards it.

"See," said he. "No one could find his way into the Grimpen Mire to-night."

She laughed and clapped her hands. Her eyes and teeth gleamed with fierce merriment.

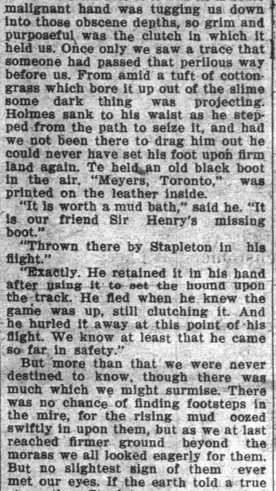
"He may find his way in, but never out," she cried. "How can he see the guiding wands to-night? We planted them together, he and I, to mark the pathway through the mire. Oh, if I could only have plucked them out today. Then indeed you would have had him at your mercy!"

It was evident to us that all pursuit was in vain until the fog had lifted. Meanwhile we left Lestrade in possession of the house while Holmes and I went back with the baronet to Baskerville Hall. The story of the Stapletons could no longer be withheld from him, but he took the blow bravely when he learned the truth about the woman whom he had loved. But the shock of the night's adventures had shattered his nerves, and before morning he lay delirious in a high fever, under the care of Dr. Mortimer. The two of them were destined to travel together round the world before Sir Henry had become once more the hale, hearty man that he had been before he became master of that ill-omened estate.

And now I come rapidly to the conclusion of this singular narrative, in which I have tried to make the reader share those dark fears and vague surmises which clouded our lives so long, and ended in so tragic a manner. On the morning after the death of the hound the fog had lifted and we were guided by Mrs. Stapleton to the point where they had found a pathway through the bog. It helped us to realize the horror of this woman's life when we saw the eagerness and joy with which she laid us on her husband's track. We left her standing upon the thin peninsula of firm, peaty soil which tapered out into the widespread bog. From the end of it a small wand planted here and there showed where the path zig-zagged from tuft to tuft of rushes among those green-scummed pits and foul quagmires which barred the way to the stranger. Rank reeds and lush, slimy water-plants sent an odor of decay and a heavy miasmatic vapor into our faces, while a false step plunged us more than once thigh-deep into the dark, quivering mire, which shook for yards in soft undulations around our feet. Its tenacious grip plucked at our heels as we walked, and when we sank into it it was as if some malignant hand was tugging us down into those obscene depths, so grim and purposeful was the clutch in which it held us. Once only we saw a trace that someone had passed that perilous way before us. From amid a tuft of cotton-grass which bore it up out of the slime some dark thing was projecting. Holmes sank to his waist as he stepped from the path to seize it, and had we not been there to drag him out he could never have set his foot upon firm land again. To held an old black boot in the air. "Meyers, Toronto," was printed on the leather inside.

"It is worth a mud bath," said he. "It is our friend Sir Henry's missing boot."

"Thrown there by Stapleton in his flight."



"Exactly. He retained it in his hand after using it to set the hound upon the track. He fled when he knew the game was up, still clutching it. And he hurled it away at this point of his flight. We know at least that he came so far in safety."

But more than that we were never destined to know, though there was much which we might surmise. There was no chance of finding footsteps in the mire, for the rising mud oozed swiftly in upon them, but as we at last reached firmer ground beyond the morass we all looked eagerly for them. But no slightest sign of them ever met our eyes. If the earth told a true story, then Stapleton never reached that island of refuge towards which he struggled through the fog upon that last night. Somewhere in the heart of the great Grimpen Mire, down in the foul slime of the huge morass which had sucked him in, this cold and cruel-hearted man is for ever buried.

Many traces we found of him in the bog-girt island where he had hid his savage ally. A huge driving-wheel and a shaft half-filled with rubbish showed the position of an abandoned mine. Beside it were the crumbling remains of the cottages of the miners, driven away no doubt by the foul reek of the surrounding swamp. In one of these a staple and chain with a quantity of gnawed bones showed where the animal had been confined. A skeleton with a tangle of brown hair adhering to it lay among the debris.

"A dog!" said Holmes. "By Jove, a curly-haired spaniel. Poor Mortimer will never see his pet again. Well, I do not know that this place contains any secret which we have not already fathomed. He could hide his hound, but he could not hush its voice, and hence came those cries which even in daylight were not pleasant to hear. On an emergency he could keep the hound in the outhouse at Merripit, but it was always a risk, and it was only on the supreme day, which he regarded as the end of all his efforts, that he dared do it. This paste in the tin is no doubt the luminous mixture with which the creature was daubed. It was suggested, of course, by the story of the fam-

Baseball Costly

What do Americans spend for baseball in a season? To fix the sum at 17,000,000, might seem like an exaggeration to some people. Yet this estimate is conservative. In the $17,000,000 is $3,000,000 for six months of baseball by the sixteen clubs in the two great leagues; $1,000,000 or thereabouts, taken by 244 professional nines in the minor leagues, and estimates, as near as may be of the money spent by amateurs who follow the sport in thousands of parks and open lots.

The $13,000,000 spent at the gates of 38 leagues covers every large city and the towns of consequence, with very few exceptions, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The total attendance at the National and American league gameslast year was estimated at 6,136,557 persons. They paid at least $2,356,000 to get through the gates.

Minors Draw Money

The people of 34 towns like Portland, Kansas City, Louisville, Buffalo and Providence, R.I., pay 2,370,000 for a season's games by the class A means. The American association, with eight clubs in the middle west, east of the Mississippi, and the Eastern league, with as many more clubs in the east and Canada, have receips averaging $100,000 for each club. The Pacific Coast league, with four clubs, and the Western league, comprising six clubs in the Rocky mountains and states west of the Mississippi, average $65,000 receipts for each club in a season. The Southern league comprises eight teams. The receipts of each average $60,000 a year.

Class B consists of seven leagues in 54 cities like New Haven, Albany, Scranton and Springfield, Ill. From these 54 cities comes $2,430,000 as a tribute for baseball.

The same figures apply to the 48 clubs in seven leagues belonging to Class C. The games of these teams draw 52,160,000 from cities like Galveston, Savannah and Richmond, Va.

One hundred and fourteen clubs in as many smaller cities from Maine to the Pacific Coast, from 17 leagues, which complete the minor association's list. Each of these clubs has receipts averaging $30,000 a year. The 114 take in $3,420,000 in a season.

Expenses Heavy.

The American and National leagues use 1,000 bats in a year, and the best sell at $1 a piece. These 16 clubs also use from 800 to 1,000 dozen balls, at $12 a dozen. The clubs in the minor leagues require from 2,500 to 3,000 dozen balls. They use an average of 60 bats each in a season.

More than $1,000,000 a season is spent by the managers of the big league clubs for running expenses. Crack clubs, like Pittsburg, the Chicago and the New York team in the National league, cost $65,000 a year. If an average is struck at $50,000 and the 16 clubs in the two leagues are counted, expenses run up to $800,000 for a season.

To the salaries is added an allowance of $30 apiece for each player on the league teams for uniforms. This means two flannel suits in a season at $15 apiece. For the 320 players in the 16 clubs in the big leagues this item would come to $9,600. A similar allowance for the 4,300 players in the minor league would swell the tailors' bills to the professional players to $138,600.

When the fans yell at the umpire and agree that he's a "piker" and "no good," they seldom think that these useless luxuries are costing anywhere from $24,000 to $42,000 a season. There are six umpires in each of the big leagues, or 12 in all. Their salaries range from $2,000 to $3,500 for the season.

Novices Spend Lots.

How much amateurs spend for baseball it is impossible to tell, except by a very general estimate. If each of the 493 colleges, universities and technological schools in the country had a baseball team and the latter used in a season 20 dozen balls at $11 a dozen, and 50 bats at $1 each the annual expense bill would be nearly $142,070. When it comes to the sales of equipment for other amateurs, the trade is divided among scores of manufacturers and thousands of small shops. If one-half the 28,000,000 spectators at the professional games in a season should play ball, be divided into nines, and each should be given a ball and bat, it would take $4,000,000 to pay the bill.

The sums tied up in grounds, grand stands, and bleachers, of course, vary considerably. The National league grounds in Boston, St. Louis and Philadelphia are elaborate. The American league has fine properties in Boston and Cleveland and is running costly improvements in Philadelphia.

Fire Guardians Busy.

The Chief Fire Guardian reports that upwards of eighty convictions have been secured by the R.N.W.M.P. and Fire Guardians under the Prairie Fires Ordinance since the first of January. Owing to the number of fires and the great amount of damage caused thereby it is hoped that settlers, campers and sportsmen will use every precaution to prevent the spread of fire. The department would recommend that every farmer and rancher construct fire guardsaround buildings and stacks by ploughing to a width of not less than twenty feet, the wider the guard the better. Do not attempt to guard property by burning a guard without having the space to be burned surrounded by a ploughed guard of not less than 20 feet in width, otherwise the party so doing will be liable to prosecution for infraction of the Ordinance.

The Times for Job Printing

The Plundering of The West

The timber berth manoeuvre is one of the clever dodges invented by the Laurier Government for the enrichment of its friends. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier came in nobody could buy a timber limit in the North-West outright. The best that could be done was to get a license to cut over a certain area. This license was good for but one year, and was revoked if the holder did not promptly put up a saw mill. The Laurier Government altered the terms. Under its new rules the party having a timberberth was entitled to hold it so long as any merchantable timber remained on the property. Thus what was formerly a yearly lease because a freehold and was saleable.

After this change had been made in the law—and it was effected secretly by order-in-Council—a rush was made for timber properties, with Burrows, Sifton's brother-in-law in the lead. As a consequence all the best timber in the country was seized. The politicians who secured the timber did so for speculative purposes. One of the early arrivals on the scene was Alex. Smith, the party organizer. He received seven berths of 50 square miles each. The cheapest cost him $450, the dearest $930. Another Smith to be favored was James, of that ilk, resident at Kamloops, John Hall, of Edmonton, had sough a certain limit in the neighborhood for business purposes; but the Government gave the property to James Smith for $52. James at once wrote to Mr. Hall about his limit. He said:—

"If you wish to purchase the same I am willing to sell it very reasonably. My price is $500, which is a fraction over $1 an acre. If you wish to purchase kindly let me hear from you at your earliest convenience."

James wanted to make $448 on this transaction, which was reasonable compared with what others have done.

Take, as an example, the case of Theodore Burrows, and Mr. Cowan, of Prince Albert. Mr. Cowan is a Conservative engaged in the lumber business. He wanted to get limits near Prince Albert. But it was impossible for him to do so. He therefore had to negotiate with Burrows. Burrows secured the Prince Albert property from the Government for $6,000. Then Mr. Cowan had to buy from Burrows, to whom he was forced to pay $80,000. On this operation the fortunate Theodore netted $74,000. Another good example is that of the Elliott limit on the route of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Mr. E. J. Elliott received this berth, which covers 24 square miles, for $7,500. He has advertised it for sale. He says it contains spruce and white pine. Then he adds:

"The limit occupies a most favorable location at the junction of the two rivers with the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, ensuring splendid facilities for the material cut, and for the delivery of the logs at the mill. Price of above limit $72,000."

This will give Mr. Elliott a profit of $64,500. Nobody could complain of a turnover such as that. But it is a small thing compared with some of the others that have gone through

Mr. A. W. Fraser, the president of the Liberal Association at Ottawa, and the Government candidate for that city, either for himself or for Burrows, captured a huge timber berth on Cedar Lake, and all he had to pay the Government for it was offered for sale by Heffner and Son, of Winnipeg. The firm says of it:—

"The timber isof good quality and fairly clean, more so than the timber in the Erwood and Red Deer districts. The prices for this block is $500,000."

On this transaction the profit was $499,500! No wonder Mr. Fraser wants a seat in Parliament. A man with all this wealth ought not to rank below Burrows or Turriff. Another berth bagged by Fraser, but transferred to the Imperial Pulp Co., of which Burrows is the shininglight, was disposed of by the Government for $7,000 to the politicians. That limit was put up for sale on a partnership basis. That is to say the buyer, instead of paying down half a million, was to give a royalty to the politicians. The announcement of Heffner and Co. with regard to it described the terms thus:—

"The estimate of this limit is between 250 and 300 million feet, and the price asked for same is $2 a thousand, to be determined in bulk or established by arbitration. Terms 50 cents cash, and the balance to be arranged."

What Burrows here proposes is that the quantity of timber on the limit shall be established, and that the buyer of the limit shall pay, first 50 cents a thousand, and then, as the timber is cut, $1.50 a thousand more, making a royalty of $2 a thousand in all. If there are 250 million feet, as estimated, the buyer will put down $125,000 in cash, and $375,000 more as the timber is cut. This is a pretty good return upon an investment of $7,000.

Besides these splendid properties, the Burrows coterie holds 50 miles on Cormorant Lake, which was got from the Government for $1,800, and can be bought from Burrows for $150,000; 150 square miles on Goose Naireau, and Amiak Lakes, which was sold by the Government for $12,000, and is held at $3,000 a mile, or $375,000 in all; 250 square miles north of Prince Albert, which cost $5,000, and contains timber worth $500,000; and the following further concessions:

250 square miles north of Prince Albert, granted by the Government for $1,000.

40 square miles sixty miles from Edmonton, granted by the Government for $3,500.

50 square miles in the same neighborhood, bought from Ottawa for $1,075.

50 square miles in the same locality, bought for $5,500.

110 square miles in seven different blocks along route of G.T.P., west of Edmonton, $11,000.

100 square miles at the headwaters of the North Saskatchewan, cost $500.

20 square miles at Lacombe $600.

118 square miles on the North Saskatchewan, $31,575.

One township at Brazeau, $800.

A second township at same point, $500.

100 square miles at Brazeau, $1,000.

40 square miles at Brazeau, $2,500

Altogether the Burrows group has 1,586 square miles of timber territory—all of it acquired from the Government for sums of money that are ridiculous when compared with the prices these politicians are asking for these concessions.

Is this system to continue? Shall Laurier "finish his work"? Or shall graft be exterminated and restitution be insisted upon? It is difficult to believe that any responsible citizen can support this wholesale conspiracy against the Public Treasury and against the settler of the West. Why should any man, be his politics Grit or Tory, tolerate these timber operations? Why should any man, Grit or Tory, vote wealth into the pockets of Burrows, Fraser, and the other men who are engaged in this speculative business?

Laymen's Missionary Movement

A National Campaign

The Laymen's Missionary Movement has been introduced into several cities and towns in the older parts of Canada. Wherever it has entered it has been the means of greatly intensifying the missionary zeal. Men have had their spiritual life quickened, their conception regarding the mission of the Church to the world enlarged, and their interest in the expansion of Christ's Kingdom made more practical. In these places better means of educating the people on Home and Foreign Missions are employed, and scriptural, business-like and systematic methods of giving are being introduced. Already congregations are doubling or trebling their missionary contributions, in many cases even more generous offerings are being made. Though the largest results of this movement are spiritual, yet it is interesting to note the greatly increased standards of missionary giving for 1908 set by some of the cities touched by this movement, such as:

Halifax	150 per cent.
St. John	100 per cent.
Montreal	150 per cent.
Toronto	200 per cent.
Hamilton	150 per cent.
Brantford	100 per cent.
London	100 per cent.
Sarnia	100 per cent.

This movement has proven so valuable as a stimulus to larger missionary effort and as a means of interesting men in the church, that the Canadian council in conference with Mr. J. Campbell White and representatives of the mission boards of the various churches, decided to enter into an extended campaign, having for its object the development of the movement throughout the whole Dominion. In this project the Canadian Council is fortunate in having the leadership of Mr. White, he having consented to spend over seven weeks in Canada, visiting all the centres where meetings are to be held.

The Home and Foreign Mission Boards of the churches have decided to join forces with the Laymen's Missionary Movement and make this campaign the chief feature of their work during the coming Fall and Winter. The Canadian Advisory Council of the Young People's Missionary Movement has also agreed to co-operate and it's Secretary will co-operate with the Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement in directing the work of organization.

The plan in brief is to hold a series of meetings of about three days' duration in each of the following cities: Halifax, St. John, Montreal, Ottawa, Kingston, Toronto, Hamilton, London, Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver and Victoria. Possibly, also, it may be deemed advisable to hold meetings in other cities.

The dates within which meetings will be held in the various sections of the Dominion, are as follows:—

Maritime Provinces, Sept. 13-20.

Ontario, Sept. 20-27.

Ottawa and Montreal, Sept. 27 and 30.

British Columbia October 4—11.

Alberta, October 11—18.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan, October 18—25.

The programme will be of a character that will secure the attention of business men. No appeal will be made to arouse the emotions, but each address will be a sane, straight forward statement of facts calculated to convince men that never before were the opportunities so great, the responsibility so pressing, nor the call so clamant as at the present moment, for the Christian church to press forward in a wisely planned, determined effort to extend Christ's Kingdom throughout our own and other lands. In each city the series will begin with an afternoon meeting, the general theme of which will be "The Spiritual Basis of the Missionary Enterprise." In the evening a men's missionary banquet will be held at which the progress of this movement will be described and the need for developing it demonstrated. The forenoon and afternoon of the next day will be devoted to a study of the Home and Foreign Mission fields, followed in the evening by a gathering of Young People's societies and Sunday School workers, and where advisable a simultaneous mass meeting of men to consider the question of responsibility in the case of world-wide evangelization. In the forenoon of the third day there will be a discussion of organization methods, and in the afternoon a meeting of the delegates and leaders of each denomination to plan a forward policy. The closing meeting in the evening will consist of testimonies as to the value of the movement, and reports from denominations and congregations indicating their plans for more aggressive missionary work The Sunday preceding should be given to sermons and addresses on missions, and on the Sunday following the church services should follow up by application of the interest generated by the series of meetings.

No subscriptions will be asked for or appeals for money made at any of these meetings, the effort being solely educational, informing the delegates regarding the Home and Foreign Missionary enterprise, the ideals of the Laymen's Missionary Movement and the modern methods of securing interest in and support of the missionary cause, thus inspiring and equipping them to launch the movement in their various congregations and cities.

In addition to Mr. White at each series of meetings speakers will be present representing the missionary interests of all the churches. Among the Laymen already secured are:—N. W. Rowell, K.C., S. J. Moore, H. H. Fudger, Jas. Ryrie, John A. Paterson, K.C., A. A. Alyer. Others are endeavoring to lend their services to this campaign. All the leading five denominations will be represented by laymen, missionary secretaries and missionaries.

A recent tour of all the Provinces by the secretaries of this national campaign found representative men of all denominations in every city most cordial in their reception of the project and unanimous in their desire to enter into active preparations for the meetings. Executive committees are now at work in all the cities arranging for this campaign and planning to secure delegates from the surrounding territory, thus carrying out the provincial and national idea of the series.

The present is a most opportune time for such a campaign. The claims of our Western Home Mission work are more insistent than ever, because of the increasing tide of immigration and of the complex problems which face Church and State as a result of the many races which comprise this incoming population. The open doors in non-Christian lands present an unparalleled challenge to the church to send forth and maintain an adequate force of missionaries, in order that the whole world may be speedily evangelized. The women, the students, and the young people all have their missionary movements, and now God is calling the men—his reserve forces—to devise more liberal plans for the extension of the Kingdom of His Son. To consider the Church's distinct responsibility toward this two fold task, the Canadian Council of the Laymen's Missionary Movement and the Missionary Boards send forth this call to the Christian men of the cities concerned, earnestly entreating their prayerful consideration of the plan and trusting that their hearty co-operation may be given to make this campaign a success. Let only one thought dominate as this scheme is deliberated upon, to crown Christ Lord of all.

The meetings for Southern Alberta (Red Deer South) will be held from October 15 to 18th, inclusive.

The committee having the arrangements in hand consists of Hon. W. H. Cushing, chairman; H. Ballantyne Box 1304, Calgary, Secretary; and Dr. A. M. Scott, Thos. Underwood, W. G. Hunt, Geo. S. Dingle, Dr. Frank M. Smith, A. A. Ward, J. McMillan, E. E. Taylor, Thos. Humphries, John Irwin.

The C.P.R. extra gang is here this week ballasting the side and passing track.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown drove in last Sunday. Mr. Brown taking the 11 train for Pincher Creek and Mrs. Brown returning to the ranch Monday morning.

Mr. H. H. Foster, George Murray, and Mr. Brown, after taking their cattle to Dunmore for shipment, have to hold them in pasture for eight to ten days before they can get cars.

Mrs. A. W. Butler was a Hat visitor this week.

Among the ladies from the ranches this week were Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Ross and Miss Endersby, Mrs. Leonard, Mrs. Marsden and daughter, Mrs. Boucher, Miss Logilin, Mrs. Ullery, Mrs. Rover, the Misses Miller, Miss Butzon, Mrs. Tonberg and Mrs. Nesting. The proverbial rain came but not in sufficient quantity.

H. H. Foster captured the big wolf (old Sandy they call him) that has done so much damage on the ranches south of us this summer. He had just killed a nice Clydesdale colt when Mr. Foster started in pursuit, and after a hard chase, succeeded in roping him. Mr. F. claims he is entitled to fifteen boxes of cigars prize money, for his performance.

There is on exhibition at the Post Office, ears of white and yellow flint corn 9 to 10 inches long and well filled, raised at this place.

Miss Annie Tonberg was married at the Hat last Friday to Mr. Charles Nelson, they go to B.C. to locate.

J. W. Butler is here from Brooks, spending Sunday with relatives, and J. W. Babbage returns to Brooks to commence work again, having recovered from his sun stroke.

Ed. Levine and family, John Meyers and family, Sam Carlson and family, T. Nesting and family and Mr. McAskile attended the wedding supper at Mr. Tonbergs Friday night.

Mr. D. Cargill arrived here this evening on his way to The Hat with a string of fine horses for exhibition at the Fair.

Police Court Items.

August Madsen, a Dane with a military bearing, appeared before Mr. Kealy on Saturday morning charged with trespassing on a C.P.R. car. He pleaded guilty and said he had walked from Cheadle to this city along the railroad track, breaking his journey at Calgary. He had lost his employment a fortnight ago at Cheadles and had since been in search of work. He didn't take anything from the car. It was the first time he had trespassed.

Mr. Kealy warned the accused against trespassing on the railway company's property, remarking that the man had not the appearance of a bum. The accused was remanded till Monday to give him a chance to find employment, and the special constable took the husky Dane round to the Roadmaster's office to try to secure him a job.

Two school boys appeared in court on Saturday, and pleaded guilty to a charge of discharging fire-arms within the city limits. The ladswere members of the Cadet Corps and after drill they amused themselves by firing blank cartridges with thecorps rifles. Mr. Kealy pointed out the seriousness of the offense, and stated that such actions might easily lead to the rifles being taken away and the corps disbanded. It was not an honorable or manly thing to act as the boys had done, especially in view of its unfairness to the other members of the corps. Such conduct brought the whole corps into disrepute.

The boys were allowed to go with a warning.

On Tuesday night, when the strike breakers got their pay, they invaded the town in large numbers, and unloaded their cargo of cash in royal style. John Douglas Thompson was one of the heavy drinkers, and after a while he began to use abusive language to one or two of the strikers who had spoken to him. The chief appeared on the scene and ordered Thompson to get back to his work. This the man refused to do, and he was accordingly arrested. The following day he was fined $10.

FUNERAL OF JOHN McGARRY

(Maple Creek Signal)

The body of the late John McGarry who died at Medicine Hat on Sunday afternoon in the Cosmopolitan Hotel, was brought to Maple Creek to be buried in the cemetery here.

The news of the sudden death of Mr. John McGarry, was a great shocke to many, and especially to his relatives, who were expecting him home in a few days to spend his holidays with them. On receiving the news the deceased's brother James, and sister Mrs. J. Cheeseman, left for Medicine Hat to take charge of the body and have it removed to Maple Creek. The body was brought down on Monday and placed in the Presbyterian Church where the service was conducted by the Rev. John G. Bitcon. A very large gathering of friends attended the service, among them being a number of his railway companions and members of the Order of Railway Conductors.

About 2:30 the funeral left the church for the cemetery. The coffin and hearse were loaded down with flowers and wreathes, the last token of friendship shown the deceased by the conductors.

Following are the names of the conductors who attended the funeral: J. R. Millican, Medicine Hat; J. M. McLaugham, T. A. McIntyre, H. Bailey, A. E. English, T. Clarke, W. H. Price, all of Calgary and W. G. Niblock and Thos. C. Blatchford, of Medicine Hat.

ECZEMA AGAIN OVERCOME.

Zam-Buk cures a Case Which for Two Years had Defied Every Remedy Tried.

A FARMER'S GRATEFUL TESTIMONY.

No case of eczema, skin disease, or ulceration, should be despaired of until Zam-Buk has been applied. The case of Mr. Francis Renoit, of St. Anne's (Man.), is a powerful illustration of Zam-Buk's efficacy. He says: "I suffered from eczema for two years, and tried a great number of remedies. None of them, however, seemed to do me any good.

The ailment was mostly in my legs and both these were actually raw from the knees down. A small sample box of Zam-Buk was given to me, and even so small a quantity as that did me a little good. I then obtained a proper supply, and by the time I had used a few boxes I was completely cured."

Zam-Buk differs from ordinary salves and embrocations in containing no animal oil or fat. It is compounded from rich, healing, essences, and is an ideal natural combination of power and purity. It is highly antiseptic, and instantly kills bacilli and disease germs, which settling into wounds and skin diseases set up festering, blood poisoning, etc.

For cuts, burns, bruises, ulcers, abscesses, pimples, boils, skin eruptions, scalp sores, spreading sores, children's skin troubles, chafing sores etc., Zam-Buk is unequalled. It also cures piles. All druggists and stores at 50c. a box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 3 boxes for $1.25.

The Oliver-Simmons Meeting

Good Crowd Hears Liberal Speakers

A large crowd assembled in the Opera House on Saturday night to hear the Hon. Frank Oliver's defence of the government record and the first election speech in the city by the Liberal candidate. Considerable expense had been incurred in the decoration of the hall, and among the punting, in prominent placeswere tacked up many catch-phases. There were many Conservatives in the audience, and while the speakers were given a thoughtful hearing the applause which punctuated the speeches was anything but unanimous.

After a few remarks by the chairman, Mr. Jas. Rae, the Liberal candidate was introduced, and Mr. Simmons, expressing his gratification at seeing so many ladies interested in the national issues, proceeded to deal at once with the political situation. He claimed that the tariff question was today as live an issue as ever it was, that the Liberal party stood true to its principles of a tariff for revenue only, while their opponents were, now as ever, high protectionists. On the lands question it was unnecessary to draw issue as the large numbers of homesteads and pre-emptions recently taken up were sufficient evidence of the success of the government policy.

The speaker then went on to deal with the subject upon which he had been announced to speak—the relation of Liberalism to the laboring man. The most important function of government, he claimed, was the improvement of the conditions which surrounded the great laboring class—and the prevention of accumulation of the workers' earnings in trusts, combines, and in the creation of millionaires. "If the government has not something better to offer you than the opposition, it is up to you to brush them aside and try your fortunes with the opposition," said the Grit candidate. The coming parliament would be devoted to "the sweeping and rounding out of Liberal policy."

Mr. Simmons then left the arena of Federal politics and devoted the greater part of his speech to an eulogy of the Alberta government and its deeds. For the provincial legislature he claimed a record of advanced labor legislation. The buying out of the Bell Telephone company was one of their good deeds; another was their action in regard to the lumber combine. On the passing of the miners 8-hour law, Mr. Stanfield claimed especial credit to the government and scored his opponent because it was alleged he had been opposed to the eight-hour law introduced many years ago, during the N. W. T. regime, although Mr. Magrath had been heartily in favor of the law passed last session at Edmonton.

The workmen's compensation act, the speaker claimed, was the most advanced piece of labor legislation on the American continent. The great British tribune, Gladstone, was the first statesman to preach the doctrine of the responsibility of the employer in this matter, and since his day the common law had been suspended by several enactments, culminating in the measure of 1906, passed by the Liberal administration with the aid of the "great accretion to the Liberal party through the Labor Party." The Albertan law was really a replica of the English measure.

The introduction of a fair wage clause in 1897, the recent withdrawal of the obnoxious clause of the rail way act, were other actions by the Federal authorities which showed their friendliness to labor.

Next the Railway employees Conciliation Act and the evolution from it, the Lemieux Act, were eulogised, the speaker claiming that the latter, though subjected to criticism, had not in all cases been given a fair trial.

The recent stroke of the Government in creating a Department of Labor was instanced as another evidence of their zeal in the cause of the laboring man.

The Liberal candidate then announced himself as an advocate of "constructive Socialism," which he described as meaning the regulation of corporations, and the upholding of the sacred principle that the people must rule. He claimed that there were corporations in Medicine Hat opposingnim tooth and nail because of his attitude in these matters.

THE MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR.

In a long and well-delivered speech the Hon. Frank Oliver defended the record of his party in power, contending that in the matter of principle there was an essential difference between it and the Conservative party. The Liberals believed in the "tariff for revenue only" theory, while the Conservatives were in favor of a protective tariff for the benefit of a class. The one system was absolutely right, the other absolutely wrong. The Liberals since coming into power had first reduced the fiscal burden, secondly, they had equalized it, and thirdly, they had provided that the proceeds of taxation should go into the treasury. In consequence the trade, the revenue, and the wealth of the people doubled in twelve years.

The minister then went on to repudiate the charges of graft preferred against the government. There had been "one continual shriek of scandal" in each and every instance of development.

The Hudson Bay Railway, it was claimed by the speaker, would be of incalculable benefit to the stockmen of the district, as it would bring about a reduction in freight rates.

The Robins Irrigation Scheme was touched upon, the speaker stating that the company had not bought an acre of land and could not become owners until a million dollars had been expended.

On the Strathcona horse question, Mr. Oliver expressed his private opinion that the encouragement of the military spirit through theimprovement of the volunteers was preferable to an increase in the number of permanent corps.

TIMBER LIMITS.

As to the alleged timber limits scandals he repudiated the suggestion that his party had attempted to suppress inquiry. The public accounts committee which has power to examine witnesses under oath, had closed the investigation at the request of a Conservative member. Not one of the Ames insinuationswas provable. The speaker claimed that there had not been either political favoritism or graft in any of the timber transactions. One case was cited in which Conservatives had successfully tendered for timber. (Here a voice in the audience called for "them all." The minister, however, found it convenient to avoid close handling of the actual Burrows—Fraser deals upon which Mr. Ames had lectured. As he expatiated on some particular innocent deal, a heckler interjected the query. "Were there two cheques?" A slight embarrassed pause, and the minister went on to deal with some other matter, conveniently ignoring the awkward question.) One or two instances were given in which, it was alleged, political favoritism had been shown under the Conservative regime.

Mr. Oliver wound up with a commendation of Liberal principle, which stood for fair play, for a square deal, and depended on the common sense of the common people. Theirs was a policy good for the coal miners, good for the railroaders, good for the rancher, and good for the settler.

The meeting closed with cheers for Borden.

Scarcely a Success

Conservatives Pleased With Liberal Meeting

The Oliver—Simmons meeting on Saturday will never be described even by its best friends as a great party success. Mr. Simmons, while speaking fluently and clearly carried no enthusiasm or conviction because he confined himself almost entirely to the acts of the Provincial Government, which of course, has no bearing whatever on the present election He claimed the honor of introducing the 8-hour law in the Provincial House, whereas everyone knows, and it was reported in all the papers at the time, that when Cushing went down to Fernie to settle the miners' strike he promised an 8-hour day.

Mr. Simmons was listened to with perfect quietness, but Mr. Oliver was interrupted a little towards the end of his address, when his anxiety to slide around the graft charges, and his insinuations against Magrath, became displeasing to the audience. While it was a Liberal meeting, the applause at an Opposition opportunity was almost as great as at any Liberal point. In fact the mention of Magrath's name created more applause than the appearance of either of the Liberal speakers. In fact Mr. Magrath's name aroused enthusiasm every time it was mentioned.

While there were more interruptions than there should have been, they were about the same as at the Magrath meeting, and for a political meeting the order was fine. Mr. Oliver's speech, at the best, was a failure, as far as the answering of charges or the making of points went and very little enthusiasm greeted him. In addition he made a number of statements which are so far from the truth that they will be handled next week by The Times.

The sale of the Eye-Opener at the meeting door was a great comment upon the anxiety of the people to hear the other side.

In view of the fact that the meeting was the big meeting of the campaign, conducted by a Cabinet minister and the local candidate, the Liberals can carry away very little encouragement. The labor men present seemed almost solidly against the Government, and well they might be. Lack of space prevents giving the meeting the consideration it deserves.

Some of the mottos on the wall were most interesting and were worthy of comment.

"A Cabinet Minister for the Laboring man"—but a darn sight more than that for the Cabinet Minister and the other favorites.

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier and a United Canada"—"united" in the pockets of the favorites.

"Simmons, the People's Candidate"—Most people think he is Oliver's candidate.

"Free Rural Mail Delivery." What gall in a district where several post offices receive mail only once a week

"Hudson's Bay Railway"—Stolen from the Conservative platform.

"Pre-emption for the Settler," should read "Pre-emption from the settler for Burrows, Sifton, Fraser, etc."

"Progress, Prudence and Prosperity"—if the Liberals are put out.

And after it was all over—after all the signs were read, the big one, "spitting strictly prohibited," stared the readers in the face and those who were not strong enough to overcome their feelings had to go outside.

When truthful James and Honest Frank appeared on the platform together, there seemedno sweet epithet left to attach to Willie—unless it was Poor Willie!

The orchestra at the Liberal smoker naturally was composed of all wind instruments.

A prominent local Liberal worker spent Sunday in Suffield, naturalizing foreigners.

Was not Mr. Simmons electioneering in Coleridge on Sunday?

Mr. Simmons has run his length in Lethbridge. Last week, A. E. Ives, a relative of W. C. Ives, a prominent Conservative worker, was informed by the provincial government that his commissionership of oaths had been taken from him. Of course Simmons was at the bottom of it, and in his paper the next day he admitted that he had been so small as to do this, giving as his reason that Mr. Ives had solicited funds for the Conservative campaign from Liberals. This is really too mean and petty for even the worst of the Government party. And Lethbridge is not slow in showing it thinks so.

When a number of railwaymen asked, "what about the Japs?" did you notice Oliver ignore it. His remark that the Japs were gentlemen, while his questioners were not, is typical of the stand of the Liberal Government on the Jap question.

UNITED WITHOUT A LICENSE.

Nowadays a license isn't necessary to union. All you need is a C.P.R. constable, a pair of handcuffs, and a girl willing to get within shouting distance.

Last week a handsome C.P.R. constable got himself firmly enough established in the graces of an emigrant girl on her way to Lethbridge to show her the mechanism of his big toy—a pair of hand cuffs. Just to illustrate things, he snapped them over one of his wrists and one of hers, and proceeded with his flirtation.

The girl was waiting to go out on the Crow train and as time passed the links became monotonous so Mr. Con was prevailed upon to unlock the cuffs. But lo! he found he didn't the key. And there they were the girl wanting to go on the train and the cop wanting to crawl through any hole that was small enough to keep everyone else out. The cop had a fellow cop up on the hill where he boarded and a hasty visit was paid to the hill to get his friend's key, but the friend was away.

Staring the girl in the face was the missing of the train, and the discomfort of a night's siesta with a strange man and a chaperone. At last soap and water was resorted to and the girl slid her hand out with much effort and caught her train.

MORAL—When a license is omitted, publication of banns is necessary.

Police Court Items.

Ferdinard Salmoneth, Felip Achille, and Necola Manzaliki, three natives of Italy, were brought up by the C. P. R. last week, for breach of contract, but on their promising to return to their work the men were allowed to go. Ferdinand was then brought up on a second charge, of unlawfully carrying a revolver, and for this offense he was fined $5, with the alternative of 14 days imprisonment with hard labor. He paid the fine and was released forthwith.

AN EXCITING CHASE

For two weeks past Constables Ashe and Chalkley have been engaged in an exciting chase of Louis Boyer, the half-breed who some weeks ago abused the hospitality of Brower, stealing a considerable sum of money from the host who had given him a night's lodging.

Near Sounding Lake the policemen had got within six hours ride of the thief, when Boyer stole relay horses and gave them the slip.

Last night the constables returned to the barracks in the city and three hours later a wire was received stating that the half-breed had been captured by a member of the Battleford division, asking that a man be sent up to Battleford to fetch Boyer to Medicine Hat.

While preparations for a constables departure were going on, however, a second telegram was received to the effect that Boyer had escaped and was again at large. No further word has been received.

Mrs. W. G. Niblock will not receive until the first Wednesday in November.

Mrs. Springett and daughters have gone to the coast with Mrs. Springett's brother, Mr. Gault.

Mrs. Krauss is spending a few weeks at Mr. R. S. Starks ranch.

Mrs. Fewings and Miss Cameron returned Friday evening from a month's visit in Banff.

Mr. Fred Alexander has gone to Toronto for the winter.

A party of eight young men have gone north antelope shooting. It is reported that Terrence Finlay and Allan Ellis have already secured prizes.

Mr. E. S. Martin has a successful shooting trip to Crane Lake last week.

Magrath Club in Irvine

Enthusiastic Meeting Forms Campaign Club

About thirty enthusiastic Conservatives met in Irvine last week to discuss a campaign for Mr. Magrath. Mr. Sizer was called to the chair with C. Calkins as secretary pro tem. A number of those present spoke on election issues and it was then decided to form a Magrath Club Amid great enthusiasm the elections took place.

Hon. Pres.—C. A. Magrath. Movers Sam Kalmbach and J. Beltz.

President—Mr. Sizer. Movers, Lew Harris and J. Bollinger.

Secretary—C. Calkins. Movers J. Strong and A. Cornell.

The president addressed the meeting urging the members to work, and leave no stone unturned to overthrow the corruption that was increasing the tax on every Canadian. The meetinz closed with cheers for Mr. Magrath.

All those present were prominent influential men of the district. They will be assisted by a great many others who were unable to be present, and it is assured that around Irvine Magrath will secure a huge majority. Most of the intelligent German farmers are working hard for Mr. Magrath.

Irvine Fair To Day

The Irvine Agricultural Society is holding its first annual fair to-day. Through the hearty co-operation of the farmers and the people of Medicine Hat and Irvine about $600 is offered in prizes. Judgingtakes place between 10 and 11 this morning. There is a baby show and a number of other special attractions such as a Calithumpian procession, and a baseball match between Irvine and Walsh.

School Field Day

Successful Day of Sports.

The school field day and sports on Wednesday last brought a large crowd to the baseball grounds, and, under the most favorable auspices, the events every one duly contested, were pulled off.

The first event on the programme was the march of the pupils of the two schools to the Athletic Park. The Cadet corps under Lieut. Reid's command, left the Toronto Street hall at 1.30, leading a procession of the pupils, who paraded the principal streets of the city, being joined at the C.P.R. depot by the Montreal street pupils. Then they proceeded to the grounds.

The Battle of Batoche was reproduced by the Cadet corps, under Lieut. Reid, and the splendid discipline shown by the boys and the clever way in which the manouevres were carried out, spoke highly for the officer under whom their training was acquired.

The basket ball match for the girls which proved a very exciting and interesting event, was played under the captaining of Alma Worth and Thelma Muir. The line up was as follows:

Captains.

Alma Worth — Thelma Muir

Guards

Isabel McDonald — Gertie Calkins
Elsie Gordon — Phyllis Becker
Mabel Johnson — Mary Stewart
Ethel Lalonde — Katie McCaslin

Forwards

Edith Sinclair — Arlotta McNeely

The result was a win for Alma Worth's team, by six goals to 4.

The baseball match between the Montreal Street and Toronto Street pupils, was the next item on the programme. The line up:

Toronto Street—Lussier, Morris, Cory, Niblock, Greaves, DesBrisay, Smeaton, Gordon, McLeod.

Montreal St.—Johnson, Curry, R. LeBlanc, Barreau, Baldwin, Vair, W. LeBlanc, Bennett, Tridell.

Toronto Street were victors by a score of 4 to 1.

The winners of the basket ball and base ball matches were the recipients of souvenir pins given Messrs. Elliott and Becker.

The following is the list of other events:

100 yards dash, over 14—Gordon Cunliffe, Jack Barreau, James Rice.

100 yards dash, 14 and under.—Willie Brotherton; Merill DesBrisay, Wilbur Cory.

100 yards, 10 and under—Frank Milligan; Willie White; Cyril Westwood.

Girls' race ten and under—Della Greaves; Lizzie Sellens, Lizzie Baldwin.

Girl's race, over ten.—Birdie Taylor, May McCaslin, Rubina Smith.

Girls' race, over ten, juniors—Della Greaves, Dorothy Rutherford, Tizra Goweb.

Throwing cricket ball, open — Earl Morris, Kennedy Colter, Jas. Rice.

High Jump, open—Jack, Barreau, Gordon Cunliffe, Kennedy Colter.

Broad jump, open—A. Desbrisay, Hall Lawrence, Kennedy Colter.

Hop, step and jump—Archie Desbrisay, Jack Barreau, Kennedy Colter.

Eagle the Indian who won the high jump at the Labor Day sports at Police Point, gave a splendid exhibition of high jumping.

The prizes were presented at the close of the day by Mrs. Niblock, assisted by Miss Fraser and Mr. Sanson.

The success of the day's athletics is due largely to Mr. Hill and Mr. Ware who took the full responsibility of organizing and carrying ou the programme.

HIGH SCHOOL DEBENTURES

The voting for the issue of $40,000 of debentures for the erection of a High School takes place in the City Hall to-day. It will be an open vote with Chairman Brotherton of the School Board officiating.

No More Accidents

Safety Device Adopted Between Med. Hat and Coleridge

The possibility of a recurrence of any such railroad catastrophe as that of July last between Dunmore and the city is to be entirely eliminated for the future. The electric staff system of signalling, in use on the English railways and most of the large American roads, is to be adopted. This system has never been known to fail; in fact, failure is impossible, and there is no case on record of a collision occurring on any road where in its modern form, it has been adopted.

The system is now being installed between Medicine Hat and Coleridge by W. J. Hails, assistant to Mr. H. H. Boyd, the company's electrical engineer at Winnipeg, and in the course of a few weeks' time it will be in use. Since coming up from Winnipeg a week ago, Mr. Hails has been working steadily on the installation.

Briefly, the idea is to give the engineer or conductor of a train the right to be in a certain section of the line with no other engine in the section at the same time.

At a station X for instance (which may be taken as representing Coleridge) the conductor coming west must obtain from the operator a staff which entitles him to the sole use of the section X—Y (Coleridge to Medicine Hat). At X and Y are instruments electrically connected and synchronized, so that the withdrawal of a staff from either can only be effected by the joint action of the operators at X and Y, and but one staff can be out of both instruments at any one time. The operator at X presses a bell key notifying Y, who presses the key in return, making possible the release of one of the staffs which was previously firmly locked in the instrument. The instrument is put out of synchronism with instrument Y by the withdrawal of the staff, and the latter must be turned over to the operator at Y and inserted in the instrument. When synchrony is restored and another staff can be released. With a description of the operation in detail would take considerable time, yet as a matter of fact, the removal of a staff actually takes less than five seconds and the operation of putting one in an instrument less than two seconds under ordinary conditions.

In addition to the "absolute" instrument just described, it has been found necessary where traffic is heavy to give some tangible right for more than one train to occupy a section of the line at the same time. In fact, on the English roads, as many as 300 trains are sometimes in the same section simultaneously. A "permissive" attachment is thereby introduced. In this a number of rings are provided in place of the single staff, but an "absolute" staff must be released by the ordinarys procedure, before these can be obtained. The eleven rings and the steel rod on which they are held, must be returned to the instrumeot at Y before another staff can be released at X. Each ring entitles a train to occupy the section, so that in all 12 trains may be given this permission. The whole operation is very simple in practice. The staffs are delivered by hand if the train is passing at less than 25 miles an hour. For higher speeds a special "staff-catcher" is provided on the engine tender.

The staff system has been in use on the English lines since 1848, when a purely mechanical device was employed. The electrical instrument was devised by Mr. Tyer, an English inventor of railroad appliances, and improved upon by Mr. Webb, mechanical superintendent for the London and North Western Railway, and Mr. Thompson, the company's signalling superintendent.

The electric staff system is in use at Field, B. C., on the heavy grade.

CORRESPONDENCE

Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—In looking through your paper of Sept. 29th, I happened to take a glance at your report of what the "City Fathers" are doing, and I was much amused at the recommendation of two of the water commissioners to pay an item of ninety dollars (90) to one Reid an engineer for five days work, which just figures out to eighteen ($18) per day—a pretty fair wage to be handing out considering we have other engineers on the city pay-roll who are drawing good round salaries and who are paid for knowing all about the water works plant.

After reading the council's report I turned the pages of The Times over and I discovered a heading which reads "By-Law No. ——" "A by-law for the City of Medicine Hat," to provide for raising the sum of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) for completion of the water-works plant and to make new water connections in the said city.

Very good:—We surely need water extensions and the betterment of any pumping plant, but, are the ratepayers going to vote the money or would they be justified in doing so, if our "city fathers" are going to hand it out to people who happen to be spending their holidays in town at the rate of eighteen dollars ($18) per day.

Another thing in connection with this council meeting in question—a certain alderman asked one of the water commissioners some questions with regard to this item of ninety dollars, and he was at once answered by that high and mighty individual that it was "none of his business anyway, as he had nothing to do with it."

Let the rate-payers turn down the this water by-law and perhaps it may dawn upon Mr. Water Commissioners that it was very much the alderman's business, as well as every rate-payers business in Medicine Hat to know [illegible] eighteen dollars per day.

Yours truly,

RATE-PAYER.

Public Meeting Thursday

Pump Engineer Engaged

The regular meeting of the city council was held last evening in the city hall. Present, the Mayor, Aldts. McKay, Spencer, Tweed, Huckvale, and Penhale.

The solicitor wrote stating his reasons for not drawing up a sewer by-law. In his opinion the passage of the by-law in question would be illegal, as it only covered part of a "work," whereas, according to statute, debentures must be issued for the whole of a work to be undertaken. This letter was read at a previous council meeting but no action taken. Referred to finance committee for a recommendation.

D. McEwen wrote on behalf of the Knox church, asking the use of the court room on the 22nd inst., agreeing to pay the fee of $5. There was some difference of opinion on the matter,but a majority of the council decided that it would be unfair to grant the loan of the City Hall to one denomination without giving the same treatment to all and the application was refused.

Mr. Ansley wrote submitting a proposition for the grading of the Macleod Trail. He agreed to grade a 16 foot roadway from the lane between Montreal and Ottawa streets to do the work at his own expense, providing teams, plows, scrapers, men and two shovellers were provided by the city for five days, with Jackson as overseer. Mr. Ansley addressed the council, pointing out that the grading on Toronto street was of no use to him. The Toronto street grade was 83 feet as compared with 21 foot on the Macleod Trail. If the city would not do anything for the coal company, they would go to the C.P.R. and get a siding elsewhere. They were determined to get a better road by some means. After considerable discussion the matter was referred to the public works committee with power to act. Ald. Huckvale expressed the opinion that the council should do all in their power to help Mr. Ansley out; it was dangerous to haul heavy loads across the rocky piece of land above the Toronto Street grade. The public committee were to meet Mr. Ansley at eight o'clock this morning.

It was decided that the application for a license for the opera house be accepted and a license issued.

Mr. Fewings wrote applying for the usual hospital grant of $1,000. Referred to finance committee with power to act.

Judge Mitchell wrote requesting a discount on 1908 taxes, assessed by mistake to W. R. Johnston. Discount ($23.60) allowed.

The following accounts were recommended for payment:

Walton Hardware Co.	124.67
Jas. Rae	23-16
Dr. Boyd	9.10
Gas City Lumber Co.	23.75
Revelstoke Sawmill Co.	7.16
J. K. Drinnan	6.00
T. J. Shepherd	1.00
C. Sellens	7.61
H. C. Cooper	98.10
John Hay	3.60
Watson and Keynes	1.00

An item of $63.80 claimed by Watson and Keynes for loss through accident to a horse and buggy in the city was referred to the solicitor.

Ald. Huckvale reported that Mr. McAffer had been appointed by the water commissioners to take full charge of the pump house at a salary of $100 per month, with free house and free water and light. Ald. Spencer thought the salary was too high. The Mayor pointed out that this figure had been agreed upon by the council at a previous meeting; if the man was going to save the city money, it would be well worth their while to pay a high salary. Ald. Spencer enquired whether the application of Mr. Jack Millar was given consideration and wanted to know why it was turned down. Eventually it was decided to enter into a contract with Mr. McAffer at the salary named. Ald. Penhale thought the new man would be able to take full charge for the whole day. The plant was now only working ten hours a day; Mr. McAffer could attend to the whole thing.

Ald. McKay reported that theBank of Commerce through Mr. Crawford had offered to loan money to the city at 6 per cent. for the laying of the sidewalks along 4th Ave., and the corner of Main Street, if the city's bankers were not willing to do so. The offer was accepted and the work will be proceeded with at once.

Ald. Spencer stated that the chief of police had called his attention to the fact that during wet weather, especially, in the spring, the water from the roofs of business places, conveyed down the walls in pipes, was allowed to run over the sidewalks. It was desirable that a connection should be made with the sewers. The engineer was instructed to fix this matter up, and to fill up the sewer catch basins with sand. The Mayor spoke of the advisability of calling a special meeting on Thursday evening for the purpose of discussing the sewer by-law. Ald. Tweed gave notice of a by-law to appoint a poll tax collector.

The Mayor brought up the matter of granting Mr. Roberts a holiday and the suggestion received the unanimous endorsation of the council.

A bill for $5 for medical attendance, sent in by Jas. Baxter was considered by the council. Baxter was injured while working at the power house. The fact was pointed out that the Workmen's Compensation Act did not come into force until next April, and the council decided that the bill be not paid.

STRIKE IS OVER

MEN RETURNING TO THEIR WORK---GALA DAY FOR WESTERN CANADA

The strike is settled. The award of the Conciliation Board is accepted by the men in its entirety, and the company are taking back their old employees as vacancies occur. The terms of settlement are honorable to all concerned.

This settlement has been brought about by the good offices of the Manitoba government. The agreement was signed at the Hon. Colin Campbell's residence on Sunday afternoon.

The following are the terms of settlement:

(a) The men to notify the labor bureau that they accept the award.

(b) The strike to be declared off east and west separately and at once.

(c) The company to use all reasonable means to find situations for the men and to prevent discrimination against those who have been on strike.

Locally, a telegram was received from Bell Hardy, early yesterday morning, stating that all men would go back as soon as possible; meanwhile they should interview the locomotive foreman. At nine o'clock the strikers interviewed Mr. Mallinson, whose telegram from headquarters differed from theirs. The strikers had understood that they were to return to work in a body, whereas the foreman understood that they were to be taken back individually, as vacancies should occur. Master Mechanic Woodhouse was communicated with at Calgary, and he confirmed the official view. Then followed another telegram to Bell Hardy asking for furtherdetails and as no reply was received, the two members of the committee, Mr. Stephenson and Ald. Baker who met the locomotive foreman at 20 K. were unable to come to a definite arrangement.

This morning it was decided to send a committee to make arrangements to get all back to work as far as possible. The result is that 65 men out of the 95 will return to the shops tomorrow and places for the remainder will be found at an early date. Many of the strikebreakers are leaving already, and it is improbable that the others will remain many days. Thirty-five carmen; seven machinists; four helpers; and all the apprentices; one boilermaker and helper; one blacksmith and helper; three washout men and a locomotive carpenter will be taken back into the company's employ immediately.

The men are thoroughly disgusted with the Lemieux Act and the government that passed it. One local striker who has taken a leading part in the fight expressed the opinion that no working man of any intelligence could possibly cast his vote for the Liberal party. The whole attitude of the Liberal government during the course of the strike, they consider, has been an object lesson in Liberal indifference where breaches of the law by a powerful corporation are concerned. The result will be a large accretion to the Conservative ranks.

The Rev. A. C. Farrell, who returned this week from his holiday in the east, will occupy the pulpit of the Methodist church next Sunday.

Mr. Alex. Middleton of Coleridge, has the sincerest sympathy of The Times and the entire district in his sad bereavement. Mrs. Middleton was well-known and well-liked by all who knew her.

Messrs. Mayhew and Harlow are in the city from Victoria. They intend to spend a few weeks in the district. As the cold weather approaches they seek a warmer climate.

The ladies' aid of St. John's church desire to express their thanks to Joseph Tetley, London, Eng., for the tea and serviettes used at their anniversary tea.

Through a misprint in last week's issue, the date of Thanksgiving Day was given as November 2, instead of November 9.

ATHLETICS

THE RIFLE MATCHES.

Great interest was taken in the annual meet of the Medicine Hat Rifle Association held last week and the results were in every respect gratifying to the organizers of the competition.

Mr. T. J. Fleager the old captain, who has unfortunately been unable to take part in this year's practices, was among the con[illegible]ors, and proved that he still re[illegible] much of his old-time skill in s[illegible] of a long off-season. The "Twa Freens" match was won by Mr. Fleager and G. Jenkins.

After one o'clock, luncheon was served by the Ladies'. On Wednesday the Ladies' Match was shot off.

The Man on The Street

"A solid Alberta for Laurier" says the Lethbridge Herald; but forgot to add the word "defeat."

The News publishes an editorial note in which it endeavors to throw oil on the waters disturbed by its attempts to force Conservatives opposition to the plans of the Southern Alberta Land Co. Then a few pages further on it copies an editorial from the Free Press in order to stir up the Opposition again on the sly. That enlightened and patriotic journal has missed editorials in the Edmonton Bulletin, the Lethbridge Herald and the Calgary Herald. But perhaps they'll be published this week. Great boomer for this district is The News —I don't think.

After the dead Liberal wood has been thrown out on October 26th, Guy Fawkes' Day will be celebrated by burning it up.

The J. Y. Griffin pork packingplant has commenced operations in Edmonton. All of which puts one in mind of a cannery proposition which has almost lost its interest locally. Who will apply the hypodermic injection—or the explanation.

Canada's national game—lacrosse. United States' national game—lynching.

A report from British Columbia tells of a man who was burned out in the morning and killed in the afternoon. Further reports of burning in the evening are not given.

NOTICE.

Odd Numbered Sections.

AS already publicly announced, odd numbered sections remaining vacant and undisposed of will become available for homestead entry on the coming into force of the Dominion Lands Act on the 1st September next.

As the records of only the even numbered sections have hitherto been kept in the books of the various land agencies in the western provinces, and the time having been very limited since the passing of the Act within which to transfer the records of all odd numbered sections from the head office at Ottawa to the local offices, it is possible that the transfer of records in some cases may not have been absolutely completed by the 1st September. In any case where the record of any quarter section has not been transferred, application will be accepted but will have to be forwarded to head office to be dealt with.

As it has been found impossible as yet to furnish sub-agencies with copies of the records of odd numbered sections, and in view of the large probable demand for entries, all applicants for entry upon odd numbered sections are strongly advised to make their applications in person at the office of the Dominions Lands Agent and not through a Sub Land Agent. Applications for even numbered sections may be dealt with through the Sub Land Agent as before if desired.

Commissioner of Dominion Lands

The Hound of the Baskervilles

Another Adventure of Sherlock Holmes.

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

Author of "The Green Flag" and "The Great Boer War"

Copyright (1902) by A. Conan Doyle.

"Then we had the visit from our friends next morning, shadowed always by Stapleton in the cab. From his knowledge of our rooms and of my appearance, as well as from his general conduct, I am inclined to think that Stapleton's career of crime has been by no means limited to this single Baskerville affair. It is suggestive that during the last three years there have been four considerable burglaries in the West Country, for none of which was any criminal ever arrested. The last of these, at Folkestone Court, in May, was remarkable for the cold-blooded pistoling of the page, who surprised the masked and solitary burglar. I cannot doubt that Stapleton recruited his waning resources in this fashion, and that for years he has been a desperate and dangerous man.

"We had an example of his readiness of resource that morning when he got away from us so successfully, and also of his audacity in sending back my own name to me through the cabman. From that moment he understood that I had taken over the case in London, and that therefore there was no chance for him there. He returned to Dartmoor and awaited the arrival of the baronet."

"One moment!" said I. "You have, no doubt, described the sequence of events correctly, but there is one point which you have left unexplained. What became of the hound when its master was in London?"

"I have given some attention to this matter and it is undoubtedly of importance. There can be no question that Stapleton had a confidant, though it is unlikely that he ever placed himself in his power by sharing all his plans with him. There was an old manservant at Merripit House, whose name was Anthony. His connection with the Stapletons can be traced for several years, as far back as the school-mastering days, so that he must have been aware that his master and mistress were really husband and wife. This man has disappeared and has escaped from the country. It is suggestive that Anthony is not a common name in England, while Antonio is so in all Spanish or Spanish-American countries. The man, like Mrs. Stapleton herself, spoke good English, but with a curious lisping accent. I have myself seen this old man cross the Grimpen Mire by the path which Stapleton had marked out. It is very probable, therefore, that in the absence of his master it was he who cared for the hound, though he may never have known the purpose for which the beast was used.

"The Stapletons then went down to Devonshire, whither they were soon followed by Sir Henry and you. One word now as to how I stood myself at that time. It may possibly recur to your memory that when I examined the paper upon which the printed words were fastened I made a close inspection for the water-mark. In doing so I held it within a few inches of my eyes, and was conscious of a faint smell of the scent known as white jessamine. There are seventy-five perfumes, which it is very necessary that a criminal expert should be able to distinguish from each other, and cases have more than once within my own experience depended upon their prompt recognition. The scent suggested the presence of a lady, and already my thought began to turn towards the Stapletons. Thus I had made certain of the hound, and had guessed at the criminal before ever we went to the West Country.

"It was my game to watch Stapleton. It was evident, however, that I could not do this if I were with you, since he would be keenly on his guard. I deceived everybody, therefore, yourself included, and I came down secretly when I was supposed to be in London. My hardships were not so great as you imagined, though such trifling details must never interfere with the investigation of a case. I stayed for the most part at Coombe Tracey, and only used the hut upon the moor when it was necessary to be near the scene of action. Cartwright had come down with me, and in his disguise as a country boy he was of great assistance to me. I was dependent upon him for food and clean linen. When I was watching Stapleton, Cartwright was frequently watching you, so that I was able to keep my hand upon all the strings.

"I have already told you that your reports reached me rapidly, being forwarded instantly from Baker Street to Coombe Tracey. They were of great service to me, and especially that one incidentally truthful piece of biography of Stapleton's. I was able to establish the identity of the man and the woman, and knew at last exactly how I stood. The case had been considerably complicated through the incident of the escaped convict and the relations between him and the Barrymores. This also you cleared up in a very effective way, though I had already come to the same conclusions from my own observations.

"By the time that you discovered me upon the moor I had a complete knowledge of the whole business, but I had not a case which could go to a jury. Even Stapleton's attempt upon Sir Henry that night which ended in the death of the unfortunate convict did not help us much in proving murder against our man. There seemed to be no alternative but to catch him red-handed, and to do so we had to use Sir Henry, alone and apparently unprotected, as a bait. We did so, and at the cost of a severe shock to our client we succeeded in completing our case and driving Stapleton to his destruction. That Sir Henry should have been exposed to this is, I must confess, a reproach to my management of the case, but we had no means of foreseeing the terrible and paralyzing spectacle which the beast presented, nor could we predict the fog which enabled him to burst upon us at such short notice. We succeeded in our object at a cost which both the specialist and Dr. Mortimer assure me will be a temporary one. A long journey may enable our friend to recover not only from his shattered nerves, but also from his wounded feelings. His love for the lady was deep and sincere, and to him the saddest part of all this black business was that he should have been deceived by her.

"It only remains to indicate the part which she had played throughout. There can be no doubt that Stapleton exercised an influence over her which may have been love or may have been fear, or very possibly both, since they are by no means incompatible emotions. It was, at least, absolutely effective. At his command she consented to pass as his sister, though he found the limit of his power over her when he endeavored to make her the direct accessory to murder. She was ready to warn Sir Henry so far as she could without implicating her husband, and again and again she tried to do so. Stapleton himself seems to have been capable of jealousy, and when he saw the baronet paying court to the lady, even though it was part of his own plan, still he could not help interrupting with a passionate outburst which revealed the fiery soul which his self-contained manner so cleverly concealed. By encouraging the intimacy he made it certain that Sir Henry would frequently come to Merripit House and that he would sooner or later get the opportunity which he desired. On the day of the crisis, however, his wife turned suddenly against him. She had learned something of the death of the convict, and she knew that the hound was being kept in the out-house on the evening that Sir Henry was coming to dinner. She taxed her husband with his intended crime, and a furious scene followed, in which he showed her for the first time that she had a rival in his love. Her fidelity turned in an instant to bitter hatred and he saw that she would betray him. He tied her up, therefore, that she might have no chance of warning Sir Henry, and he hoped, no doubt, when the whole countryside put down the baronet's death to the curse of his family, as they certainly would do, he could win his wife back to accept an accomplished fact and to keep silent upon what she knew. In this I fancy that in any case he made a miscalculation, and that, if we had not been there, his doom would none the less have been sealed. A woman of Spanish blood does not condone such an injury so lightly. And now, my dear Watson, without referring to my notes, I cannot give you a more detailed account of this curious case. I do not know that anything essential has been left unexplained."

"He could not hope to frighten Sir Henry to death as he had done the old uncle with his bogie hound."

"The beast was savage and half-starved. If its appearance did not frighten its victim to death, at least it would paralyze the resistance which might be offered."

"No doubt. There only remains one difficulty. If Stapleton came into the succession, how could he explain the fact that he, the heir, had been living unannounced under another name so close to the property? How could he claim it without causing suspicion and inquiry?"

"It is a formidable difficulty, and I fear that you ask too much when you expect me to solve it. The past and the present are within the field of my inquiry, but what a man may do in the future is a hard question to answer. Mrs. Stapleton has heard her husband discuss the problem on several occasions. There were three possible courses. He might claim the property from South America, establish his identity before the British authorities there, and so obtain the fortune without ever coming to England at all; or he might adopt an elaborate disguise during the short time that he need be in London; or, again, he might furnish an accomplice with the proofs and papers, putting him in as heir, and retaining a claim upon some proportion of his income. We cannot doubt from what we know of him that he would have found some way out of the difficulty. And now, my dear Watson, we have had some weeks of severe work, and for one evening, I think, we may turn our thoughts into more pleasant channels. I have a box for 'Les Huguenots.' Have you heard the De Reszkes? Might I trouble you then to be ready in half an hour, and we can stop at Marcini's for a little dinner on the way?"

THE END.

Indians Are Pagans Still.

Rev. J. Samans, Indian agent, has just completed his annual trip among the Indians on the Lake of the Woods and the Lake Winnipeg districts, and he states, in an interview at Winnipeg, that the Indians both in Western Ontario and Manitoba, as far as he has visited them were in the best condition, having plenty of money, an abundance of food and being in an excellent state of health. The Indians in the Lake of the Woods, he says, are still pagan, and the attitude of these natives to religion is quite decided. They refuse absolutely to allow their children to attend any school where religion is taught in any form to any extent. They have no objection to their children learning to write, read and cipher, but they are most determinedly opposed to the teaching of religion. The best means of dealing with the children of the Indians are in the boarding schools. There are schools at Norway House, Kenora, Shoal Lake, Fort Frances and at Port Alexander. In the Lake of the Woods district there is much more evidence of the influence of liquor, and its harmful effects of the natives of the country.

One of the Big Swindles.

Every member of the Ottawa Government who appears upon the platform finds it necessary to make explanations. The last to explain is Finance Minister Fielding. The politician in a speech at Glace Bay, N. S., explained the Quebec bridge disaster. He alleged that the Government has dealt with the bridge in a manner that is satisfactory. The only trouble about the bridge is the fact that it has fallen down. For this, however, the Government is not to blame. The Opposition, observed Mr. Fielding talks much about the bridge, but it would not dare criticise the course of the Government in Quebec.

How these politicians fall back upon Quebec, and yet it is in Quebec that the indignation aroused by the action of the Government on this subject is most keenly manifested, well may it be so. Pinned down in the St. Lawrence are the bodies of some ninety good Canadians—men who would be living today had the structure been properly built. The Royal Commission which enquired into the cause of the terrible slaughter divides theblame between the engineers, who made mistakes, and the Government, which neglected to test the plans, and to inspect the work as it was proceeding. So busy were the Fieldings and Siftons in the plunder department at Ottawa that they had not time to order the supervision of the great enterprise for which they were paying with the money of the country. To-day we are taxed some four millions for this huge blunder, ninety men are dead, ninety families are without their natural supporters, and the men who are adjudged by the Royal Commission to have been guilty of negligence, swagger about the country and tell us they are the instruments appointed by Providence to govern Canada! This bridge affair is possibly one of the most imprudent of the rogueries designed by the Laurier Government. From first to last the Government has been manoeuvring with a view to giving the projected bridge for absolutely nothing to the politicians they appointed to handle it. The first scheme pushed through by Finance Minister Fielding, who had the thing in hand, provided for the building of the bridge out of subsidies and the proceeds of bond flotations. The politicians were supposed to put up some $65,000 as their contribution to the cost of this ten million dollar affair. But the necessity of providing the money was avoided by the simple process of paying salaries to these men. The salaries were large enough to buy the stock. So that the Ottawa Government practically gave the control of the undertaking to men who had put nothing in it. For nothing the favored politicians were to own the bridge, and to enjoy the profits that would accrue after expenses had been paid. This scheme fell through owing to the difficulty experienced in floating the bonds. As a result of the failure Fielding came to the front with another plan, the underlying principle of which, as before, was that the politicians in charge should put in little or nothing, and enjoy all the profits. This new deal called for $200,000 more stock from the politicians, and pledged the country to guarantee the bonds of the company to the face value of $6,678,000. Under this dodge there was to be $265,000 of private capital in the bridge, and the Government was to lend $6,678,000. That the $265,000 was put in is open to question. But supposing it was provided, what can be thought of a bargain under which a company with but $265,000 invested in its enterprise, gets a loan of $6,678,000 from the Government?

Now the Government, under this arangement, became a partner in the scheme. But it was not to get any of the profit. The scheme was to work thus:

Total revenue from bridge	$470,000
Interest on the $6,678,000 of bonds	$200,346
Worving expenses ...	85,000
Sinking fund	33,391
Total annual outlay	318,737
Yearly Profit	$152,015

And the profit of $152,000 annually was to go to the politicians who are supposed to have subscribed $265,000 towards the cost of the undertaking. It will be observed that this arrangement made the country responsible for all the money that was borrowed, but gave the politicians all the profit that was made. Mr. Fielding, one of our trustees, designed this lopsided bargain. We undertake to say that if the trustee of an estate were to make a similar arrangement he would be prosecuted.

MILBURN'S

LAXA-LIVER PILLS

Many people make a mistake in thinking that the only office of a pill is to move the bowels, but a properly prepared pill should act beneficially upon the liver and the entire glandular and secretory system.

This is just what Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills do, and by their specific alterative action cure Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Flatulency, Heartburn, Headache, Dyspepsia, Water Brash, Catarrh of the Stomach, Coated Tongue, Foul Breath, and all diseases arising from impurities clogging the system.

They are small and easy to take, and do not gripe, weaken or sicken. They may be used as a mild laxative or a strong purgative according to the dose.

The Council Boses.

Well, isn't that a great bunch of water commissioners we have? Now you're quite likely beginning to believe that the water commissioners (Alds. Penhale and Forster alone doing everything on their own responsibility), are about as The Times has described them. In Council last week a bill was presented from Engineer Reid of Lethbridge for $90 for five days work—$18 a day. Ald. Tweed's fight against this imposition of the water commissioners has brought him into the limelight in a most favorable manner.

Now this man Reid comes from a smaller city than Medicine Hat to teach our own engineer, who naturally should be teaching Reid. If we have to look toLethbridge for help it is about time we employed men who knew their own business without such assistance.

Then, too, the water commissioners (Alds. Penhale and Forster, for Ald. Huckvale thought with the rest of the Council and Ald. Morrow is never consulted by the "two cronies") never bothered to consult the Council about the expenditure of this money. As it has been pointed out often in The Times, Alds. Penhale and Forster run the Council with an ease that makes one wonder what kind of men the others are. They seldom consult the Council, but go ahead and do as they please—and it has turned out a disastrous "do." Ald. Tweed and the other heads of committees have to secure the consent of the council before they can spend a cent, but Alds. Penhale and Forster—oh, they're above applying to their fellow aldermen.

This Reid, according to Alds. Tweed and Huckvale (the latter of whom is a water commissioner) was here only on a holiday looking around at water systems, and willing to help out a fellow engineer a little, just for fraternity's sake. Then when he got home came his big bill, and Ald. Penhale fought for the payment ofit until he secured what he wanted. Ald. Forster hung his head in silence most of the time but was in favor of payment. Did anyone ever see Ald. Forster oppose Ald. Penhale?

It was said that Reid was paying $6 a day to his substitute in Lethbridge. Then Medicine Hat had to pay Reid $18 a day for a holiday jaunt which was costing him $6 a day. The bill was exorbitant, and the payment of it was only one of the many signs of weakness of the present council. Ald. Penhale, as usual bluffed it out by saying there would be a lawsuit. What an easy Council to let that bluff work. A law-suit would have brought home to the ratepayers the kind of water commissioners we have.

Here is the matter in a nutshell. Alds. Penhale and Forster engaged an engineer, who should not be able to teach our engineer anything, without asking the permission of the council. Ald. Tweed states definitely that one of the water commissioners had told him that the man was only looking around, and all the other Aldermen said the same. The man coolly sent in his bill for $18 a day and Alds. Penhale and Forster alone supported the payment of it. Ald. Penhale tried to squelch Ald. Tweed by saying that he "didn't see if at it had anything to do with him, anyway," which was quite Penhalian.

Some day—surely—some day, that council of prominent men will turn on Ald. Penhale and his little shadow, Ald. Forster, and sit on them so hard that they will see several kinds of fireworks. The ratepayers have been looking for it for a long while.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Steadily a stream of old-time Liberals, disgusted with the corruption in their party, is flowing over to the Conservative side. T. Murray, a former prominent supporter of the Liberals, a Liberal member for North Renfrew and Pontiac in the Dominion House, and for North Renfrew in the Ontario House, has come out against the party he has so long supported. In a speech in North Bay, Mr. Murray said his change was not from disappointed office-seeking, but on account of the "corruption, dishonesty and extravagance of his former associates" and the loss of confidence in Sir Wilfrid Laurier, to whom he referred as a weakling.

Thousands of the strongest Liberal workers are proving their honesty by deserting the party. In the district scores of men who are above acting the rogue to support a corrupt party have declared their intention of assisting in putting the present government out of power. All honor to them!

It is an ominous comment on the reputation of Sir Frederick Borden, one of Cabinet Ministers exposed by the Eye-Opener, that his candidature in King's County, N.S., is being actively opposed by almost every minister of the gospel. So intent are they upon keeping such a man out of Parliament that they have formed an association with a Baptist minister as organizer in one district and a Presbyterian Minister as leading speaker. The sole work of this ministerial association is to oppose the discredited Sir Frederick. The corruption is so open in support of the Liberals that a staff of detectives is being employed to watch for it.

The Free Press is publishing pictures of various Western cities, 12 years ago and now—and laying the cause of the growth to Liberal rule. Many of the pictures show so little difference that the ad for the Government is doubtful. The latest set of views is of Medicine Hat. The namesof local merchants gives a spicy flavor, and the figures given are interesting if untrue.

And the Liberals claim it all. Now the Free Press should publish a picture of Fernie last year and as it is now since the fire. They might picture the Strathcona Barracks as they are. Everything is caused by the Liberals according to them. Providence and hard-working Canadians have nothing to do with it all. Oh, no! Do the Liberals claim the credit of the hard times we have been having? Sh-sh!

Once again The Times has been proven correct. The report of the Board of Health of The News' Mr. Owens both support The Times in what it has contended from the first even in the face of considerable opposition—that the water service has been responsible for the typhoid fever which is now almost put down. When The Times called the water commissioners to account for it, many thought it a little hard. Mills, restaurants, etc., were all blamed, but not the water by these few.

Now even the government official whom The News reported as saying we were just O.K., has said it in the water. By the way, just here The Times would like to ask The News to repeat that interview and to say definitely whether the interview was manufactured out of whole cloth or was a reporter's dream.

And where were the water commissioners to blame, may be asked. Well when you drink water from a pail with filth settled in the bottom you may easily escape infection. But if you stir up that filth your chanees are small. With the constant churning of the pipes under the old engines all the filth of these pipes came out of our pipes. Isn't the point very obvious now? Isn't the clearness of the water different under the new pumps from what it was under the old wrecks for which the water commissioners were responsible

And Ald. Penhale (always supported by his shadow, Ald. Forster) dismissed the serious report of the Board of Health with the characteristic remark" just one big guess, the whole thing." Where there isn't a thought it would often be well to have even a guess.

The Lethbridge Herald devotes a column to an attempt to answer The Times' statement of the stand of the local Conservatives on the irrigation project. It denies any interest in defeating the project but merely strengthens the conviction. It says the Conservatives must either fight the scheme or "share stolen property." As The Times has said before it is not the recipient who is to blame, when no other roguery is used. It is the Government who gave the land who must take the blame. If the government is willing to give us the Strathcona Barracks, we're not fools enough to try to find out if we shouldn't give it up for some other city.

Later the Herald says that The Times in supporting the irrigation ditch must consistently support all these timber and land grafts. Well, hardly! A grant which is used to develop the country is different in The Times opinion from a speculator's holdings. Perhaps The Herald doesn't recognize the point of development as a distinction. To support the timber steals as it does demands some weakness in recognition.

If anything more were needed to prove that the Ames' charges were true, Oliver's alleged attempt to answer them would provide the last proof. In a talk on the timber question for twenty minutes, he never even attempted to handle a single one of the charges. His entire defence was a statement of one tender Burrows lost (the only one out of twenty) and two others lost by Liberals, with two examples of tenders won by Liberals through much higher tenders. He stated that Bristol, the Conservative leader in the Public Accounts investigation committee asked that the investigation close, when he had found no evidence, and that a report was brought in accordingly. Oliver, the honest Frank, did not explain that Bristol asked a conclusion to the sitting because he saw it was all a farce, the witnesses being allowed to refuse to answer anything they pleased, that a report was brought in by the majority (all the Liberals) as the committee report, but that the minority with Bristol at its head brought in a very different report and an explanation of their desire to stop the farce.

Think it over, you who were at the meeting. Does it not prove Ames to be correct, when not one of his accusations was even touched upon, although the audience reminded him of this.

Ask yourselfs, did Oliver explain any one of the following features of Ames' address?

(1) The two checks.

(2) The omission of the amount of tender in the tender itself?

(3) The fact that Burrows secured 19 out of 20 berths tendered for?

(4) The fact that it was physically impossible to examine the limits put up for sale, in the time given?

(5) The Fraser bids in the name of men who knew nothing of the tenders?

(6) The securing by Fraser and Burrows of limits for a paltry $500 that were immediately offered for sale for $500,000?

(7) The fact that in the two-check tenders, one always just exceeded the second highest tender, and the second check the previously highest tender.

(8) The fact that Burrows, who is Sifton's brother-in-law secured all his births at a total excess over the second highest bids of only 6 per cent.?

These formed the entire Ames exposure, and yet Oliver never touched one of them. In all reason, you sensible Liberals, has your cabinet minister not proven the charges correct?

Of the utmost significance is the fact that Fraser, the notorious timber grafter in the Burrows group, has been withdrawn from the candidature at Ottawa, after he had been nominated in regular convention. Fraser's name is connected with all of the Burrows transactions and it was at the demand of the Liberal supporters in Ottawa that Sir Wilfrid was forced to pull him out of public notice. Sir Wilfrid now knows that the people recognize his part in the timber grafts.

On October 1st, the anti-spitting by-law came into force, but it has not yet been enforced. On Saturday October 3rd, a group of men in front of the Liberal Club Rooms were making the sidewalk almost impassable for ladies, by their filthy expectorations.

Wash Day a Happy Day.

The local council, Royal Templars of Temperance, held a debate on Monday night, Sept. 28th, and a number of invited guests were present. After a programme by several members, the oratorial combat was commenced. "Resolved that Wash day is a Happy Day" was the cause of the skirmish. Select Councillor McKim acted as chairman, while Bros. E. S. Frost, C. E. Neff and Sister Blake took the affirmative and Bros. C. M. Fowler, Snowden and Sister McNeely the negative. The arguments pro and con were made in a lighter vein and proved productive of much merriment. Sisters Hunt, McKim, and Meldrum, who acted as judges, after due deliberation, decided in favor of the affirmative. It is probable that another entertainment of a similar nature will be held in the near future. Three new members were initiated during the evening.

Sir Charles Tupper's Open Letter.

Sir Charles Tupper, Bart, has issued an open letter to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The text is as follows:

To the Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, G.C.M.G., Ottawa, Ont.

Dear Sir Wilfrid,—In your recent speech at Sorel I find the following reference to myself: "My old friend, Sir Charles Tupper, who, after many defeats, has withdrawn from the struggle has come out from his retreat to predict our defeat. He has done this regularly since 1896."

I do not know what you mean by my "many defeats," as I was elected in my native county of Cumberland fourteen times, and twice in Cape Breton, being defeated only once there owing to my having devoted practically all my efforts to other constituencies. If you refer to the "defeats" of my party, which carried the country in 1867, 1872, 1878, 1882, 1887 and 1821, I would remind you that the Liberal party has only been successful in the elections of 1874, 1896, 1900 and 1904.

Trick of the Grits.

It is a matter of history that the Liberal party only obtained power in 1873 by giving six of their opponents seats in the cabinet, and that in 1896 you defeated the Conservative party by denouncing the government for not having disallowed the Manitoba school act, which took away the rights of the Catholics, and when the government brought in a measure declared necessary by the judicial committee of the privy council to restore those rights you joined with the Orangemen in defeating that measure by obstructing a large majority of the house of commons, and then securing the support of Quebec by declaring the act did not go far enough, and that if you obtained power you would, if necessary to secure their "rights in their entirety," bring in a stronger measure.

In 1900 you maintained yourself in office by trampling under foot all the principles to which your party had been pledged, and resting upon the support of your race and religion.

Desperate Remedy.

In 1904 you sustained yourself by fastening upon the country a gigantic debt for the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway, which you declared would involve a charge of 13,000,000 on the public exchequer whereas it has now been proved that the cost will be nearly $200,000,000.

Your statement that you had achieved something in the negotiation of treaties not previously obtained requires no notice from me, as it has been already emphatically contradicted by the declarations of the Colonial Secretary, Lord Crewe, in the house of lords, and by Sir Edward Grey in the house of commons, who was the under-secretary in the Foreign office when I negotiated the treaty with France in 1898, and is now secretary of state for foreign affairs. He said, in the house of commons, that "The plenipotentiaries for the conclusion of the commercial convention between France and Canada, of Sept. 19, 1907, were Sir Francis Bertie, H.M. ambassador at Paris; the Hon. W. S. Fielding, and the Hon. L. P. Brodeur. They were not appointed by letters patent, but were furnished with full powers under the Royal Sign manual, similar 'mutatis mutandis' to those furnished to the late Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, and to Sir Charles Tupper in 1893." Nor must it be forgotten that, by boasting of what you had accomplished for Canada, you have prevented the adoption of your treaty up to the present time, and that the only treaty in existence today is that negotiated by me in 1893.

Apology is Due

You claim great credit for your efforts to secure the "All Red" line, whereas you should apologize for killing that enterprise after I had secured from the British government a subsidy of £75,000 a year for ten years, and made a contract with the Messrs. Allan, of Montreal and Glasgow, which would have given a 20-knot service to Montreal in summer and Halifax in winter, on the first day of May, 1898.

Your claim that you have promoted harmony between different races and religions is best answered by your speech at Richmond, Nova Scotia, when you were obliged to admit that you found greater harmony between those of different races and religions in Nova Scotia than in any other part of Canada. I read that admission with much pleasure, as from the first hour of my public life I had made equal rights for all, irrespective of race and creed, a cardinal principle.

Great Conservative Policy.

Allow me now to tell you on what I base the opinion I expressed when asked what I thought would be the result of the impending general election. The political history of Canada shows that all our great prosperity is due to the policy of the Liberal-Conservative party, carried in the very teeth of the most bitter and persistent opposition of the Liberal party.

No intelligent man can be found who can question the fact that our present position has been attainedby Confederation, the adoption of a protective policy and the construction of an inter-oceanic railway.

The proposal to complete the confederation of British North America the inclusion of British Columbia on the only terms by which that could be attained, giving that province railway communication with the rest of Canada, was fiercely denounced by the Liberal party as ruinous. The result of this opposition was a large reduction of the Conservative majority in the election of 1872, and the party thus weakened was defeated in 1873 by the action of six of its supporters, who thus obtained seats in the Liberal cabinet.

Earlier Liberal Record.

The Liberal government then formed dissolved the house and obtained a large majority. They pursued a free trade policy which brought the country to a deplorable condition. The Opposition propounded a protective policy and carried the country in 1878 by an overwhelming majority. That policy was established in the face of the most determined opposition. The increasing prosperity enabled the government to vigorously prosecute the construction of the railway to the Pacific ocean. In April, 1880, Mr. Blake, the leader of the Liberal party, moved a resolution in the House of Commons to compel the government to suspend all construction beyond the eastern side of the Rocky Mountains, and implored the House not to ruin Canada for the sake of 12,000 white people in British Columbia. He was supported on that motionby the entire Liberal party, including yourself. In October of that year the government entered into a contract with the Pacific Railway syndicate for the completion of the railway, and it was opened for traffic from ocean to ocean in 1886. That contract was strenuously opposed by the Liberal party, although no man can deny that it has resulted in untold benefit to Canada. The company is now operating more than 13,000 miles of railway, and has provided a fleet of steamers affording the most rapid communication between Canada and Great Britain. Who, then, I ask, will dare to say that without these great measures whichyou and your party have so bitterly opposed, Canada could have attained the great position it now occupies?

American Statesmen's Predictions

But that is not all. It will never be forgotten that our position as an important part of the British Empire was imperiled by your party. When all efforts to obstruct the national policy and the construction of the Canadian Pacific railway ended in failure, you, as leader, joined with Erastus Wiman, whose avowed policy was to induce Canada to abandon allegiance to Great Britain and become part of the United States, in advocating unrestricted reciprocity with the United States, although you knew that it involved the adoption by Canada of the American tariff against England. The Liberal-Conservative party saved Canada and secured to us the priceless continuation of British institutions in that crisis, which was so grave that the Hon. Edward Blake refused to go into the battle with you, because he would not fight under false pretences and imperil British institutions. You know as well as I that Republicans and Democrats alike agreed in the desire to possess Canada, as they were well aware of its potentialities. The Hon. A. Steward, the secretary of state under President Lincoln, penned the following prophetic words "Having its Atlantic seaport at Halifax and Pacific depot near Vancouver Island, British America would inevitably draw to it the commerce of Europe, Asia, and the United States. Thus, from a mere colonial dependency, it would assume a controlling rank in the world. To her other nations would be tributary, and in vain would the United States attempt to be her rival, for we could never dispute with her the possession of the Asiatic commerce nor the power which that commerce confers." And the late Mr. Charles Sumner, in the senate of the United States, in 1867, in reference to the purchase of Alaska, said: "The present treaty is a visible step in the occupation of the whole North American continent. As such it will be recognized by the world and accepted by the American people. But that treaty involves something more. By it we dismiss one more monarch from this continent. One by one they have retired; first France, then Spain, then France again, and now Russia, all giving way to that absorbing unity which is declared in the national motto, 'E pluribus unum.'" In conference to the Pacific railway of the United States, completed May 10, 1869, the late Mr. Asa Whitney assured his readers in 1845: "You will see that it will change the whole world, allow us to traverse the globe in thirty days, civilize and Christianize mankind, and place us in the centre of the world, compelling Europe on the one side and Asia and Africa on the other, to pass through us."

United States' View.

When, at the request of the late Hon. Mr. Bayard, secretary of state, I visited him at Washington in 1887 he said: "Well, Sir Charles, the Confederation of British North America and the construction of the Canadian Pacific railway have brought us face to face with a nation, and we must now deal with international matters from that point of view."

No one can read these opinions of the public men of the United States without seeing the vital importance of those great measures from a national standpoint.

Beaten on every issue between the two parties, you owed your success in 1896 to a Janus-faced policy when the interests af your French coreligionists were at stake, and I think you will agree with me that under the circumstances I had reason to expect a fair share of support from Quebec.

Disgraceful Frauds

The bye-elections in Brockville and Huron proved that in Ontario most disgraceful frauds were resorted to by Liberals in 1896. In the election of 1900 in Ontario I was opposed by two governments, with all their patronage and unlimited means, while there was but a small subscription made for the Conservative party by a few friends in Torooto, which only consisted of a slight contribution to aid in meeting the legal expenses. Notwithstanding these disadvantages however, although you had a majority of twelve when the dissolution took place, at the close of the election I had a majority of eighteen and my defeat was secured by a solid French vote and the influence of the governments in the smaller provinces all of which were supporting you except Manitoba. Am I not warranted under these circumstances, when your opponents are in power in Ontario, Manitoba, British Columbia and New Brunswick, is expecting that the great party who have, despite all the obstructions of the so-called Liberals, made Canada what it is, will receive from the electorate the support to which they are entitled?

If further evidence is wanting to show that yours is a lost cause, it is to be found in a session wasted by the frantic efforts of your government to conceal the information on public matters to which the house and public are entitled, and to pass an act to enable the same frauds to be perpetrated in connection with the electoral lists in British Columbia, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec, as wete used in your support at the last Dominion election in Manitoba.

Hoping that I have satisfied you that I have sufficient reason for the confidence I feel in the triumph of my able successor, Mr. R. L. Borden, in the coming contest, I remain,

Yours faithfully,

CHARLES TUPPER.

The most powerful healer in the world is Zam-Buk, and we offer you a free trial box. Zam-Buk combines the knowledge of the ancients with the science of the moderns. The charioteers, gladiators, and wrestlers of ancient Greece seldom emerged from their contests without some gaping wound or severe bruise, and to anoint their injuries with secret balms was part of the day's program. In Zam-Buk you have the modern representative of these ancient healers. Ordinary ointments contain mostly rancid animal fat or poisonous mineral substances. Leave the lid off these ointments for a few days and note the result. Zam-Buk, on the contrary, is absolutely free from any trace of animal fat or mineral poison. It is made from purely herbal essences, is so concentrated and purified that it is suitable for the delicate skin of children, and yet so powerful as to be equal to the most stubborn sore, ulcer, or chronic wound. Zam-Buk never goes rancid. It always keeps clean, fresh, and sweet.

Nature has given man the instinct to rub a place that hurts. She has also given him Zam-Buk. Nature's own herbal healer, with which to rub.

Apply Zam-Buk to a sore, a cut, a scratch, a poisoned wound, a patch of eczema, and at once the healing process begins. It Prevents suppuration, blood poisoning, etc. It draws out inflammation, ends pain and smarting, and heals. The best test is a personal test. Send in for a free box and let Zam-Buk prove its own case. See coupon below.

ZAM-BUK

THE GREAT SKIN-CURE.

POISONED WOUND COMPLETELY HEALED!

MR. WILLIAM MUMFORD of 12 Louise Street, Stratford, writes: "While walking about in sock feet I trod on a rusty nail, which penetrated the flesh deeply, leaving an ugly wound. I bathed this well and applied a lotion, but next morning my foot was in a shocking condition, very much inflamed and swollen, and I suffered acute pain. I had to lay off work, as I could not bear to put my foot on the ground. I feared blood-poisoning. For six days I suffered intense pain. Just at this time a friend brought me some Zam-Buk, and after using it a few days my foot was wonderfully improved. I persevered with Zam-Buk, and it soon worked a complete cure. It is a wonderful balm."

Zam-Buk heals sores, eczema, skin eruptions, ulcers, ringworm, itch, barber's rash, blood poison, bad leg, salt rheum, abrasions, abscesses, cuts, burns, scalds, and all skin injuries and diseases. Of all stores and druggists, 50c box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

SUNSHINE FURNACE

And Coal Economy

COMBUSTION taking place in the dome or top chamber of furnace fire-pot is the result of air and heat mingling with fumes. This combustion produces heat-energy, which the radiating surfaces above and around fire-pot absorb or draw in and then deflect or throw off. Incoming cold air receives this heat-energy, the result being heated air. Now, if the combustion takes place at a faster rate than the radiating surfaces can absorb and deflect, the surplus heat-power will pass up the chimney or into cellar—a waste of coal.

There is no waste of coal in "Sunshine" Furnace. Circuit of radiator is so complete, and air-circulating space so large, that every bit of heat-energy is quickly absorbed and quickly deflected on the circulating cold air, which is thus quickly heated and ascends through the hot-air pipes to rooms above.

The check-draft of a furnace is situated on the smoke-pipe. When this draft is closed—especially on an "ordinary" furnace—heat particles can escape up chimney. When check-draft is opened the incoming cold air from the cellar drives all heat particles back into furnace proper. If the grates and fire-pot of furnace are not constructed properly, there's a clogging and gathering of ashes, and fire does not burn up readily. If no provision is made for gas escape, the check-draft must be left closed indefinitely—a waste of coal.

There is no waste of coal in "Sunshine" Furnace. No clogging can take place in the 4-piece grate, no ashes can gather on the straight fire-pot walls, and the Automatic Gas Damper makes every provision for the escape of gas; consequently, check-draft can be opened shortly after coaling and all heat-energy saved for radiation.

AGENT'S TESTIMONY 3

We can vouch for the "Sunshine" virtues mentioned above. We have installed this furnace and kept records of its performances, and know it to be exactly as represented.

And more important we supply Special Gas Burners, so that Natural Gas may be used as fuel and give perfect results.

No Disease is so Quiet and Stealthy in its Approach as Kidney Disease

That is why it is so dangerous. It may become deep-seated before you realize the danger.

It is therefore of great importance to recognize the early warning symptoms—pain or dull ache in the back, bladder pains, smarting sensation when urinating, frequent or suppressed urination, sediment in the urine, etc., because in its early stages kidney disease is easily cured by Doan's KIDNEY PILLS.

Mr. Elgin Brisebois, Vernon, Ont., writes:—I was troubled a great deal with kidney trouble. I had to get up four or five times every night, my urine contained a thick brick-dust sediment, I had a pain in the small of my back, and could not sleep at night.

I commenced using Doan's Kidney Pills and in a very short time I was all right again. I am very thankful to have found a cure so speedy in its action.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c. per box or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

(From our own correspondents.)

What Wideawake and Reliable Correspondents throughout This District Find Worthy of Recording for Publication in their Home Paper.

Seven Persons

The extra gang left here last Wednesday.

After many days waiting, the ranchers who were shipping their cattle secured cars, and have returned to their homes.

Mrs. Moss the section foreman's wife of Bull's Head, has been seriously ill.

Mr. Sigfrid Olsen has returned to work on the section.

Another snow storm west of us has driven the threshing boys home again.

Mr. S. W. Davis of Pelgan Creek, went to the Hat this week.

Mrs. Brown and son Rex were in Seven Persons Friday remaining over night at the Carlsen House and taking the train for the Hat Saturday morning. Mrs. B. will then take a trip west with Mr. Brown.

A registrar of births, marriages and deaths has been appointed at this place.

J. F. Leonard and crew will finish up threshing in this neighborhood Monday or Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Butzon of Whitla were in town Saturday.

Josephsburg

Miss Elizabeth Barschel of Canora Sask., is visiting her brother, Corporal Barschel.

Gotlieb Weiss has gone south of the Hills to meet Mrs. Weiss who will return with him.

As yet, no trace of John Lehr, Jr. has been found.

Corporal Barschel made a trip to Lethbridge last week.

The many friends of Constable Harris rejoice at his recovery from his recent illness.

Constable Fisher has been appointed to take the place of Constable Coleridge recently removed to Grassy Lake.

The threshing in this district is nearly done the people of this district are finding it difficult to obtain water for their families and stock and most are obliged to bring water from some distance. The season has been unusually dry.

Was A Total Wreck From Heart Failure

In such cases the action of

in quieting the heart, restoring its normal beat and imparting tone to the nerve centres, is beyond all question, marvellous.

Mr. Darius Carr, Geary, N.B., writes: "It is with the greatest of pleasure I write you a few lines to let you know the great blessing your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been to me. I was a total wreck from heart failure and my wife advised me to take your pills. After using two boxes I was restored to perfect health. I am now 52 years old and feel almost as well as I did at 20."

Price 50 cents per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

VOL. 6. No. 6. MEDICINE HAT, ALTA., CANADA, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1906. $1.50 PER ANNUM

THE OLIVER--SIMMONS FIASCO

The Kind of Thing Served to The Electors

Oliver's Misstatements Most Conspicuous

When Hon. Frank Oliver came to Medicine Hat on the third to support the candidature of W. C. Simmons, the Liberal nominee, the local Liberals were looking for a conclusive answer to all the charges of graft which have been made, as well as an able defense of the administration of the Liberal Government. To say that they heard neither will not be denied by any but the most hide-bound.

Mr. Oliver's speech, while delivered with an evident knowledge of political questions was a studied evasion of all the delicate questions of the day. There was not one definite statement in the entire speech that was an answer to the charges, nor was there anything but generalities that tended to the support of the Liberal party. Such statements as that "the Liberal platform is better than the Conservative platform," "We're all right, and they're all wrong," "I plead for honest government and honest politics," are indefinite, intangible things that would not be necessary if there was a plank left to stand upon.

After hearing Oliver's reiteration of "honest government and honest politics," one sees where he got his nickname "honest Frank." Certainly he was not honest in his treatment of the questions discussed, and what is more, many of his statements were absolutely false. Even the dog of such a good Liberal as Mr. Benson had to yelp at some of the remarks made.

Mr. Simmons, who led, had his lesson off by heart and delivered it in that manner unfortunately for himself and the audience he scarcely touched on any matter of the least interest to his hearers. Announcing his address as dealing with labor matters, he confined himself entirely to Provincial legislation until the crowd yawned. What Provincial labor legislation has to do with what the labor men were there to hear of the Dominion platform and history as regards labor is more than anyone has been able to discover up to the moment of writing. The one statement made that he was responsible for the miners' eight-hour law will not bear the light of day as Cushing when in Fernie, endeavoring to settle the miners strike, promised an eight-hour day if they would return to work.

Nothing was said of the railway strike by either speaker. No reason for not enforcing the alien labor law in the conduct of the strike was given. Oliver carefully avoided the Jap question although he was asked about a half dozen times by the labor men present. Oliver thought it a sufficient treatment on this question to turn on a labor man seeking information, by telling him he was no gentleman while the Japs were—a remark that received hisses and groans as it deserved.

The labor men throughout the meeting were not backward in expressing their disapproval of the government Oliver was supporting. Interruptions at points where questions were being sid around, were frequent. After one remark of Oliver's that drew applause the speaker stopped to take a drink. A labor man said "you need to wash that down." "I believe in honest Government," brought the answer "a long time since we had it." When Oliver followed up with "I believe in honest politics," a labor voice said, "let's hear it." The speaker happened to remark, "when we get busk next term the answer was, "you won't if we can help it." And so it went along with apparently a solid antagonistic labor voice.

When Mr. Oliver rose to speak the applause was very weak, and there was no doubt that the unsympathetic air of the meeting affected him in his address. The first few minutes were devoted to a eulogy of Mr. Simmons, who was Oliver's own selection as a candidate for this riding. At the first mention of Mr. Magrath's name the applause was as hearty as any time during the meeting.

"The money has been spent in works of national development—transportation, etc." In this we suppose he meant in the erection of those hundreds of useless wharves of which everyone knows, and which were used only as vote bringers.

"The underlying principle of land grant is actual settlement." To every Westerner who knows of the hundreds of homesteads which are secured purely for speculation, and are never worked or lived upon, this remark is ridiculous. In answer to this we all know that there are fifty homesteads within 20 miles of this city upon which the homestead regulations are not being fulfilled—and in every case the homesteads thus favored are Liberals.

"The Liberal Government has built more railway than any other Government." This must have been said in the heat of the moment, as the remark is not even worth discussing.

"Look at the Crow's Nest Line." Mr. Oliver was very careful not to look at it too closely, or to give his audience time to hark back to the early years of the present Government. The facts are that early in the 90's the B.C. government gave a charter to a company to build a line to develop the Kootenay. With the charter went large land grants. The Conservative Dominion Government offered $5000 a mile bonus for fifty miles, but later increased the mileage to 1330 miles. This Cartwright and The Globe opposed as a "great defalcation." In '96 Sir Charles Tupper was defeated and the Liberals with the support of The Globe increased the bonus to $11,000 a mile. It developed that Cox and Jaffray, two of the owners of The Globe had in the meantime acquired the charter, and they immediately sold out to the C.P.R. for $85,000 cash and 260,000 acres of coal and oil bearing lands without having spent one cent.

"The Liberals impose duty only for revenue, the Conservatives for protection." It is a significant fact that the Liberals had to tax us $27150 per $100 for revenue while the Conservatives secured both revenue and protection for $28 per $100. A striking comment on the administrative ability of the two parties. Also Oliver is proven to have endeavored to convey a wrong impression in this. It was the present Government which three years ago added an anti-dumping clause to the customs laws. By this an American manufacturer cannot send goods to Canada lower than his regular prices, forcing us to pay the duty.

The Hudson's Bay Railway was the great theme of Oliver's speech. He said that if the Liberals did not build it it never would be built. Oliver knows that Tupper had this railway planned before he was defeated in 96, and if he had been retained in power it would have been built now instead of merely being used as an election dodge twelve years after the Conservatives had decided upon it.

One of Oliver's fallacies of argument came in here. When arguing on the expenses of transportation and the tariff question he said the Medicine Hat consumer paid the costs of duty. When talking up the railroad he said that the Medicine Hat shipper pays the extra freight now. In one case it is the receiver who pays in the other it's the sender.

THE STRATHCONA HORSE

"I believe that the money that would be spent on a permanent force such as the Strathcona Horse would be better spent in perfecting the volunteer corps." This roused a cheer from a great many Liberals who were looking for some way of escaping from resentment at the turn-down Medicine Hat got in the Strathcona Horse deal. The fact is that Oliver was merely talking for effect. The Strathcona Horse was a corp to be organized for no other purpose than the training of the volunteer corps about which Oliver seems to be so anxious. It was Oliver alone who was responsible for our losing that building and he cannot explain it away so easily as that. The Cabinet were supposed to have thoroughly threshed out the advisability of such a force and to have decided in favor of it and its establishment at Medicine Hat. A local deputation visited Ottawa and returned with assurances that it was to be stationed here.

Plans and specifications had been made out by the Public Works Department and Colonel Steel of Calgary had been ordered to proceed with the work immediately. McVittie, a local surveyor, had been written to and Steele was expected on a certain day. That day Oliver was in Calgary—and Steel never came. There is not much doubt but that the Calgary Liberals got at Oliver and bluffed him into refusing it to Medicine Hat.

THE ORIGINAL DOCUMENTS

Mr. Oliver asserted that no opposition was made to the viewing of original documents in the House. This he has said several times on his trip. This is so easily proven false that it is a wonder he would dare say it.

Quoting from Hansard, the verbatim report of all Parliamentary proceedings:

"Hon. Frank Oliver:—It is my understanding of the trust placed upon me that it is not the right of any individual, whether he be a member of parliament or not, to have access to the documents in that department. The fact that a certain gentleman has been honored with a seat in this parliament does not give him any more right to investigate the private business of other people which is in charge of the department of the Interior, than it does any other citizen.

Mr. Lake—Does the Minister still intend to refuse to members of parliament the privilege of looking at the files in this department.

Mr. Oliver—UNLESS OTHERWISE INSTRUCTED BY THE HOUSE, I CERTAINLY DO.

Mr. Oliver—I do not wish him (Mr. Ames) to examine the documents in the department because I do not want to allow anyone to do so."

And all this is spite of the fact that Laurier who had previously said: "I am sorry to have to say that I have no hesitation in endorsing the doctrine laid down by my hon. colleague the Minister of the Interior," had seen how the country was up in arms at the refusal, and had changed his belief on the same day on which Oliver made the above remarks, and said: "No one denies that members of parliament have the right to have access to all the records of the government and to all the archives.—Nor do I conceive that this privilege has been denied on the occasion to which my hon. friend has referred."

This fight for the production of original documents was the one that led to a 52 hour's continuous sitting of the House, and which resulted in the retreat of the Liberals. The documents, when seen, proved the timber limit steals, showing clearly why the Government did not wish to show the original documents.

Mr. Oliver also said that it proved there was nothing in the timber limit steals because Bristol, a Conservative lawyer had asked for a close of the investigation, and a report was brought in accordingly. Bristol did ask that the investigation cease, because he saw it was nothing but a farce. Witnesses refused to answer questions and the Opposition minority was prevented from investigating anything. "A report was brought in accordingly" by the Liberal majority but the minority also made a report explaining the farce.

THE TIMBER LIMIT STEALS.

Oliver's attempted answer to the Ames charges was pitifully weak. Not one charge was touched upon, but instances were quoted where graft was not apparent, and the Conservative Government before '96 was also blamed. The case of Wm. Cowan of Prince Albert was quoted as that where a Conservative got a limit. One limit Cowan secured was secured in this way: The notorious Fraser of the Burrows-Fraser-Sifton group made out the tender in Cowan's name and Burrows gave the check. Cowan had nothing to do with it from the beginning. He afterwards secured the berth by paying Burrows $80,000 in three checks. All this was admitted by Fraser during the investigation. Mr. Oliver's statement that "they lied and they knew they lied," has done good service as a cheer-bringer in every speech he has made, and his affected reluctance and apology for saying it is amusing.

But the crowning falsehood of Oliver's speeches, even after telling what the Conservatives did, he shouted: "And the Liberals never gave one square mile of timber limits at less than eighty dollars a mile." To quote him, "he lied and he knew he lied." A list of a score of limits could be given which sold lower that eighty dollars a square mile. A few that went to the Liberal favorites can be cited:

Berth No. 1098 to the Imperial Pulp Co. at $62.50 per mile.

Berth No. 965 to Mackie, a Liberal member at $60 per mile.

Berth No. 1097 to Imperial Pulp Co. at $50 per mile.

Berth No. 1119 to Nolan, a Fraser Bluff, at $30 per mile.

Berth No. 1191 to Burrows at $21 per mile.

Berth No. 1048 to Cowan through Burrows at $20 per mile.

Berth No. 1118 to Nolan at $5 per mile.

Berth No. 1049 to Fraser at $4 per mile.

And these are not the worst, but are collected in a few minutes hasty glance at Hansard.

Oliver's reading of letters away back in 1881 only roused a laugh and showed how hard pressed he was.

The entire fabric of Oliver's address was either a tissue of falsehoods or a badly veiled effort to avoid rocks. On the Monday following the address a great many men who had waited for the Liberal meeting before deciding, came to the Magrath Club rooms and signed their names and a number who had hitherto talked Liberal were disgusted at the weakness of the Liberal defence and will vote Magrath.

Altogether it was a fine Conservative meeting.

Another Convention

W.C.T.U. Will Meet here next Year

At the session of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union just closed in Regina it was decided to hold the next Convention in this city There was a struggle between Calgary and Medicine Hat as to the place of meeting and a standing vote had to be taken, Medicine Hat winning out.

Sunday School Convention

The Alberta Sunday School Association will be held in this city on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, November 3 to 5. The principal speaker will be Mr. W. C. Pearce, international superintendent of the adult department.

The general theme of the convention will be "The Twentieth Century Sunday School organized for effectual work."

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT

A convention organized by the local workers in the laymen's Missionary Movement is to be held in the city during the week 4th to 11th inst. with a meeting in the Methodist church.

The movement is a comparatively new one, but since its inception it has spread with wonderful rapidity throughout the Protestant Christian communities of North America and business and professional men of national repute are devoting their time and energy to the furthering of the object of the new organization.

Rousing meetings are now being held in all the cities of importance from coast to coast.

In this city meetings are as follows:

On Saturday evening, 17th October a conference at 8 p.m. in the Methodist church.

On Sunday afternoon, a Men's Mass Meeting at 2 p.m. in the Presbyterian church, to be addressed by Mr. J. Campbell White of New York, the greatest missionary speaker in America, and Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., of Toronto.

Mr. N. W. Rowell, will speak at the Methodist Church on Sunday morning, and at the Presbyterian church in the evening.

The Rev. A. E. Armstrong, of Toronto, will preach at the Baptist church on Sunday evening.

It has been found necessary to cancel the banquet proposed for Saturday evening, owing to the business places being opened on that evening, and the business men whose presence is particularly required, finding it impossible to attend.

The Executive Committee is as follows:

Methodist—R. Dunn, D. Reeves.
Presbyterian—J. Henderson, S. T. Hopper.
Anglican—H. P. Binns, W. G. Rowe
Baptist—C. Neff, M. N. Lean.
Knox Presbyterian—Wm. D. Cowsley, M. B. Fowler.

THE PUBLIC MEETING

Ratepayers Forced to Pass By Law

But Tell The Water Commissioners Some Things

There was a fairly large attendance of ratepayers in the council chamber on Thursday, at the public meeting called for consideration of the waterworks by-law, and the meeting proved a valuable and educative one in many respects. It was the first time the ratepayers had had an opportunity of expressing themselves in public on the matter of the water shortage last summer, and naturally there was some straight talking.

The mayor briefly explained the reason for which the meeting had been called, that a canvass was being made against the by-law and in consequence a likelihood of its defeat. The $40,000, he said, had not been sufficient to complete the water system, and now it was found necessary to take a new pipe line from the stand pipe to get an adequate supply for the people on the hill. The speaker did not agree with what the water commissioners had done, but now it was necessary to meet in some way the expenditure which had been incurred. If the by-law was turned down it would be necessary to pay for the extension out of next year's taxes. The time to protest against the water commissioners was at the coming elections.

Engineer Morrison briefly explained the purpose of the extensions, to give a direct supply to the residents of the hill, and in answer to a question stated that at the present time the hill was supplied from a 6 inch pipe at the corner of 5th Avenue and Montreal Streets.

Mr. Kealy enquired as to whether the poor hill climber who now got a good supply of water (since that famous valve was opened), would get as good a supply of water under the new arrangement. Ald. Forster was understood to say that the source would be better than it had been. The service had improved of late largely on account of the new pipe which had been put in, and also because the lawn services were now out of use. Next summer there should be no trouble at all.

The Mayor pointed out that the $15,000 was not required for the putting in of the new pipe line alone. A number of extensions which would yield a revenue of 18 per cent. were to be provided for.

Mr. McCutcheon wished to know when "this expending of money before it's voted for" was going to cease.

Ald. Huckvale, in rising said he must plead guilty to being a water commissioner, and though his name had been left out of the attacks on that body, he must admit that he was cognizant of most of the actions of his colleagues. If the city was to grow they must continue to make extensions. And when the $15,000 was used up, the commissioners could not go to the city and ask for permission to carry out a work of $25 or $50; if such extensions were petitioned for and would yield 10 per cent., they must be carried out.

The Mayor stated that he had always considered that the $40,000 debentures last issued would be inadequate.

Mr. Hopper expressed himself as one who would vote for the by-law, as there appeared to be no alternative. It was unfortunate, however, that the expense should be brought on so soon after the payment of the city taxes.

The water commissioners came in for caustic criticism. Mr. Benson being the first to ventilate his views. He opened fire with a question, "Do the water commissioners ever meet and have they any control of the expenditure?"

Ald. Huckvale replied that meetings had been held and whenever any substantial amount had been spent the chairman had consulted his colleagues; there might be instances where small amounts were involved, when the chairman had spent money without conferring with them. All the commissioners had spent a great deal of their time at the power house. It had been a very difficult season, and a legacy of trouble has been left to this year's committee. Mr. Milne (then Councillor Milne) years ago had advised the replacing of the old steam plant, and when a man of his conservative temperament saw the necessity of superceding the old plant it could be imagined how great the necessity was in view of the city's growth.

In answer to Mr. Brotherton, who enquired: (1) Who drew plans for the original water system? (2) For the addition, and (3) for the pumping house, the Mayor stated that Engineer Rattan was responsible for the first, which had been added to from time to time as the necessity arose.

Ald. Forster gave a list of figures, showing the various items, including $2,730 for extensions to pumping plant, which created the necessity for the new issue. The total estimated amount was $12,913.36, and $15,000 would cover this and leave a small margin.

Mr. Brotherton could readily understand the caustic criticism of the water system as a system, and of the water commissioners as commissioners (a voice "and as Aldermen"). He could also understand that it might be more difficult to make the old system satisfactory, than to put in a new one.

Answering Mr. Ansley, Ald. Huckvale said that water maintenance last year cost $12,612, as against which there was a revenue of $14,582—not quite enough to retire the debentures.

Ald. Spencer gave figures for the present year, showing an amount of $14,917 still owing.

Mr. Ansley understood that it was legal to levy a rate of 5 cents a foot on vacant lots, or $2.50 on a fifty foot lot. If a man built a house and enhanced the value of the city property the city under present conditions, came along and taxed him for his improvements. It would be a fair, wise and profitable plan, for another year to adopt a frontage tax on vacant lots. The Mayor replied that he had always been in favor of such frontage tax, although he was not generally considered a large owner of vacant property which would be taxed under the system proposed. As a matter of fact he had only one vacant lot past which a water service was carried.

Mr. Kealy stated his intention of voting for the by-law. As straight dealing business men the citizens had got to meet the expenditure which had been incurred. Mr. Stewart said that as a matter of justice to the hill people, he would have no hesitation in voting for the by-laws.

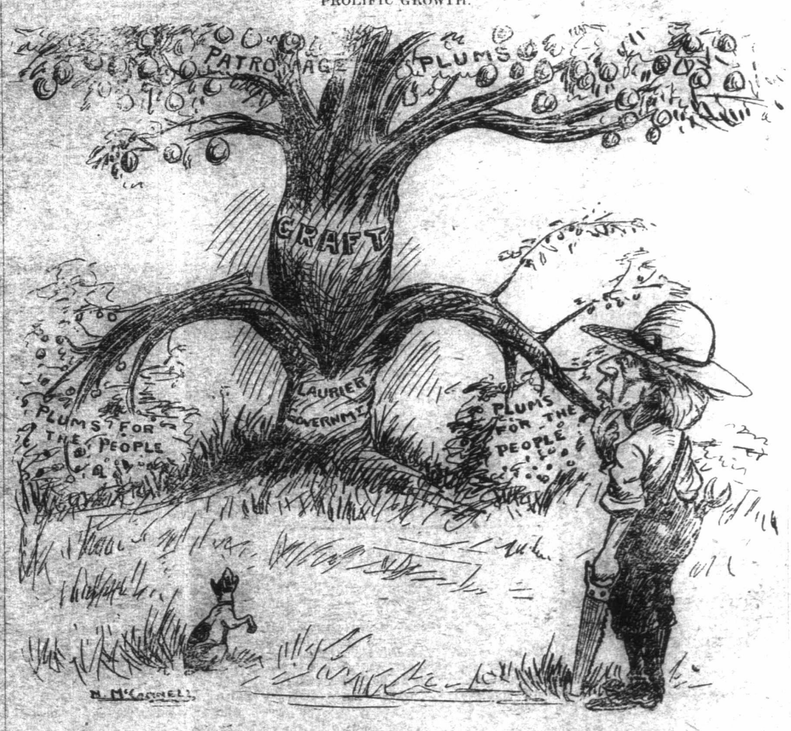
One branch of the water system which had been overlooked by the previous speakers, was referred to by Dr. Boyd. The water from the river had been condemned by the sanitary authority. The doctor had pointed out the urgency of setting the filter plant in operation a couple of weeks ago, and yet nothing had been done and contaminated water was in general use. It was difficult to realize the danger of drinking the bad water. The council HAD TAKEN NO STEPS WHATEVER to alter this state of affairs. Mr. Curry put a question to put in regard to the drinking water being used in the schools, and in reply Dr. Boyd said he had tried to impress the board with the necessity of filtration. Mr. Brotherton said it had been found impossible to boil the water without considerable trouble. The recommendation made by the board of health had been carried out.

Mr. Curry enquired of the water commissioners if the filter plant was not working; and in answering the query Ald. Forster stated that in June and July owing to the condition of water it had been found impossible to work the plant.

Further criticism of the manner in which the water problems had been dealt with was made by Mr. Curry, who said that no other town in the West, and no other people would stand for such muddling. Mr. Benson thought the kernel of the question was in the waste of public money round the waterworks plant. The filters, which had cost $27,000, were apparently useless, according to Ald. Forster. Someone was to blame for the bingling by which a 2 inch pipe had been connected with the filter when a 6 inch pipe was needed. Sufficient care had not been exercised around the waterworks and it would be unwise to give the present commissioners any more money to spend But as honest citizens we were bound to honor the debts already incurred Then when the proper time came the ratepayers should say, "You've not done your work satisfactorily; we must get someone else."

Mr. Benson then moved "that in the opinion of the ratepayers present it is desirable to pass the by-law."

Ald. Forster seconded the resolution, at the same time expressing his conviction that the kernel within the kernel was that the city would never be able to get a perfect service until they were willing to pay men to devote their time to the work. The year's work had been a hard and nasty job, and it had been made doubly nasty by the attitude of the people of Medicine Hat.



Mr. Brotherton referred to the want of agreement between city officials. The officials were pulling against each other, and when a house was divided against itself the result was disastrous.

Mr. Ansley thought it was the duty of a man who accepted public office to perform his work as efficiently as he was able and not to come back as Ald. Forster had done, saying that "you can't get the service without paying a salary." Here Ald. Forster explained that his opinion as to the payment of a salary had not affected his course of action, he had devoted his best energies to the city and was prepared to stand upon his record of service to Medicine Hat.

Mr. Benson supported the claim of the water commissioners that they had spent a great amount of time at the pump house. He had himself spent a large part of his leisure time there and must say that the Mayor, Alds. Forster, Huckvale and Penhale, were as busy as he.

The resolution was carried unanimously and the meeting adjourned.

The Father Objected

A Wedding Interrupted by Objecting Father

A few days ago a wedding of a couple within a few miles of the city, which was taking place in a local church received a startling interruption. When the minister came to the part of the ceremony where he asked if anyone present knew "any just cause why these two should not be united," the father of the girl spoke up and said, "Yes, he is not capable of taking care of her."

The interruption staggered everyone, but the minister recovered himself and went on with the ceremony.

It is said that the groom is proving his unfavorable father-in-law wrong by pitching in to work.

Samuel Dunn, who was fined $3 for being drunk and disorderly complained that he had lost a cheque for $200 and $20 in money. It was found that Dunn's employer, Mr. McCormick of the Many Island Lake Ranch Co. had noticed that the man was drinking too heavily in the bar and had thought it wise to take the nay cheque from him and leave it in charge of the bartender, "Curly," until Dunn should become sober.

H. C. Cooper was summoned for refusing to pay wages by a German carpenter named Grundennan. Grundenman had received $18 from the accused and had been unable to obtain the balance which he claimed was due to him, of $18. Accused stated that he had employed John Draudson to build an ice house; Draudson had quit the job, leaving the complainant (whom he had hired), working, and Cooper claimed that he was not responsible for the payment of the wages in question. The case was sent up to the next district court.

ATHLETICS

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Detroit won today the American League pennant for the second successive time, defeating Chicago handily by a score of 7 to 0 Donovan pitched for Detroit in one of the best games of his career, holding the Chicagos to only two hits, while the team behind him played errorless ball. White was knocked out of the box by Detroit in the first inning, when two runs were put across. Walsh was brought in, but before the inning closed Detroit had gained four runs. Only once did the Chicago enthusiasts have a chance to cheer; that was when in the sixth men were on first and second bases with none out. Donovan, however, disposed of the succeeding batters with ease. Detroit finished with a percentage of .588 and Chicago with .579. Detroit's runs resulted not only from the hits the team accumulated but from five errors made by Chicago.

Birmingham, Eng., Oct. 3.—At a general committee meeting of the Amateur Athletic Association here today, the report of the judges on the running of J. C. Carpenter, of the American team, at the recent Olympic games, in the 400 metres race, was taken up for consideration and it was decided to permanently suspend Carpenter.

It was Carpenter who won the 100 yards Olympic by fouling an English runner.

New York, Oct. 8.—Chicago's Cubs, the greatest ball club the world has ever known, are champions of the National league for the third time.

Winning over New York today by a score of 4 to 2 in the face of heavy handicaps before the greatest, wildest mob that ever saw a ball game, the Cubs won their pennant for the second time in five days and tonight are rushing westward to open the series for the world's championship in Detroit on Saturday.

Today's desperate struggle, the climax of the wonderful race of the Cubs ended in one of the most disgraceful riots ever seen on a ball field. The crowd, worked up to a pitch of frenzy by the efforts of McGraw and Brush to take the pennant in spite of everything, attacked the victorious Chicago players as they were racing off the field, and gave them a terrible beating. That they escaped with their lives and without serious injury is little short of marvelous.

On Friday Chicago, champions of the National League, beat Detroit, Champions of the American League, a score of 10 to 6.

At a time when there is a tendency to decry athletics, on account of the assertion that the craze for physical exercise is retarding the mental development of the rising generation, it may not be uninteresting to mention a few distinguished men who have owed their fame as much to the fitness of their bodies as to the greatness of their intellect.

Take, for instance, the Lord Chief Justice of England—Lord Alverstone In his youthful days he was the best runner of either Varsity, and his equal has never been seen in the two-mile inter-University race. His great strength, which he was most careful to maintain, made him popular at Cambridge, and successful in the Temple; for only a man of exceptional power of endurance could have done the work he was called upon to do when Attorney-General.

"It is easy to see, as he walks along one of the corridors in the courts, that he possesses a frame of extraordinary power. The broad shoulders, the well-proportioned body narrowing at the loins, the massive features furrowed by responsibility and thought, and bearing the unmistakable stamp of ceaseless intellectual activity, tell their tale with ease."

This paragraph is quoted from Mr. William Blaikie's book, entitled, "How to Get Strong" (Sampson Low, Marston and Co.)

Amongst other legal lights who have distinguished themselves in the realms of learning and the arena of athletics, Mr. Blaikie mentions Mr. Justice Benman, who rowed twice in the Cambridge eight; Judge Hughes (Tom Brown of Rugby, who reveled in a bout with the gloves; Sir Joseph Chitty, "of the massive shoulders," who excelled alike as a footballer, cricketer and oarsman; and Lord Esher, a noted athlete in his early days, who rowed three times in the Cambridge eight.

Statesmen and politicians, too, are to be found amongst the men who, while making history, have paid the closest attention to the healthiness of their bodies. Bismarck was a swift runner, a capital jumper, swimmer, fencer, oarsman and shot. With his rifle he could decapitate a duck at one hundred paces; while with a revolver his aim was equally deadly. Gladstone, in his youth, often spoke of himself as being good any day for a forty-mile walk, while as is well known it was not until he was well advanced in life that he took, partly as an amusement and partly for for exercise, to the practice of felling trees. In this difficult art he attained a skill which was the marvel of professional woodsmen.

"We put him in a wherry once at Harvard and he made her gallop." Thus wrote an American once concerning Sir Charles Dilke, who even to-day can often be seen on the upper reaches of the Thames pulling a sturdy oar. With the foils Sir Charles has defeated several of the most celebrated maitres d'armes, who were simply staggered by the rapidity of his manoeuvres, especially with his trick of changing the foil from one hand to the other, and although now sixty-five years of age, scarcely a day passes but what Sir Charles devotes an hour to this branch of sport. The new Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith, is fond of golf, and plays a good game.

Cornelius Vanderbilt and Daniel Webster were two of the strongest manliest, and greatest men America has ever produced. Both were as passionately devoted to open-air life as President Roosevelt. Webster was a capital wrestler, and often when his two sons had become men, he would challenge them to wrestle, and could readily throw either of them.

Admiral Dewey is also a fine, all-round athlete, while Pierpont Morgan, who was blessed in his youth with a body to match his big brain, has always endeavored to develop his strength as he developed his enormous monetary interests. It is certain that a weak or unhealthy man could never have done what he has done.

Mounted Police Notes

Constable Green arrived in the city on Sunday with a couple of prisoners whom he was escorting to Coleman. The male prisoner, Hees, eloped last week with the wife of a miner resident of Coleman, and the two are charged with having stolen goods from the husband in the case. In the evening the eloping couple were taken down to Coleman on the Crow line.

On Sunday Inspector Parker was notified that a child of Jas. Johnson, a homesteader of Winnifred, had died suddenly with indications of poisoning. The child's mother, it appeared, had been using strichnine, mixed with rice and placed it under a cupboard for the purpose of destroying vermin. One of the victims was discovered by the dog, and the animal came into the house after playing with the dead mouse to die a few minutes afterwards in great pain. Later Mrs. Johnson's infant child was taken suddenly ill, and after a brief spasm of intense agont, died. It is thought that the child found some of the rice while playing about the house.

Yesterday Dr. Boyd left for Winnifred in company with Constable Capstick of the R.N.W.M., to conduct a post mortem examination. Mr. Johnson who was away at the time of the child's tragic death, also returned home yesterday.

OWES CURE TO ZAM-BUK.

Prominent Manager's Telling Testimony.

Mr. D. R. Gourlay, advertising manager for the well-known piano firmof Gourlay Winter & Leeming, Toronto and Winnipeg, is amongst the prominent men and women who testify to Zam-Buk's great curative power. He writes to the Company as follows:

"Gentlemen,—I have pleasure in stating that upon the recommendation of a relative I purchased a box of your remedy (Zam-Buk), and by a few applications entirely cured a very severe sprain of the back. While not to indiscriminate use of, or belief in, patent medicines, I can conscientious ly recommend Zam-Buk.

"Sincerely vours,

"(Signed) D. R. Gourlay."

That is just where Zam-Buk proves its superiority! It is treated by men and women who have tried it, as altogether different from ordinary preparations. Doctors, hospital nurses, trainers, matrons of convalescent homes—all give Zam-Buk a good word; and better still they use it. Zam-Buk is as good for muscular stiffness, sprains, rheumatism and sciatica as it is for skin troubles. Hockey players and athletes in general find it invaluable. For eruptions pustules, scalp sores, itch, eczema, ulcers, boils, abscesses, blood poison, cuts, burns, bruises, and abrasions, it is a speedy cure. Takes the soreness out of wounds almost instantly and kills all disease germs, thus preventing festering and inflammation. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. a box, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto for price. 6 boxes for $2.50. Send 1c. stamp for trial box.

CORRESPONDENCE

(The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents, nor does it necessarily agree with them.)

Editor of The Times:

The Hon. Frank Oliver in his speech at the opera house on Saturday, made a strong appeal for "honest politics," for political sincerity, and a truthful presentation of the principles involved in the present political contest.

It will be of interest to examine a few of the claims put forward by the Liberal candidate, to note in what degree the protege of the Minister of the Interior comes up to this standard of political rectitude, and to see whether, after all, the Lethbridge lawyer's pretensions as a friend of Labor, the pretensions of his party as friends of labor, are not after all the merest clap-trap and despicable demagogy.

Mr. Simmons devoted almost the whole of his speech on Saturday to an attempt to prove that the Liberal party has always stood as essentially a party with the interests of the laboring man at heart. And in his role of advocate for a desperate cause, he did not scruple to misrepresent the facts, presuming on the gullibility of the working men who will pass judgment, and on an ignorance of the facts of labor development and organization and of the means by which the working classes of the Empire have in the past, been enabled to better their condition.

In the first place, he attempted to prove that a parallel existed between the policies of the Liberal parties of Canada and of the Old Land, and then he went on to claim for the British Liberal party credit for the labor legislation which has done so much to raise the workman's standard of living.

He spoke of "the great accretion to the Liberal party through the Labor party" formed in the British House at the last election!

It is scarcely necessary to remark in regard to this deliberate misrepresentation, that the Labor party was formed largely as A PROTEST AGAINST THE LIBERAL PARTY with its record of fair promises and foul betrayals of the working class cause. Every old countryman who had been in touch with the political evolution of the past twenty years, knows this.

The first duty of the Labor Party is to smash the Liberal party," was the dictum of Robert Blatchford, the gospel of emancipation which the able editor of the Clarion, one of the most influential of Labor journalists, preached from week to week. And yet the opportunist—Simmons, either through woeful ignorance of political history, or wilful misrepresentation of its facts, (possibly a combination of the two), speaks of "the great accretion to the Liberal party" through the Labor members. This from the protege of the simon pure Frank Oliver. Honest politics forsooth!

Mr. Simmons confined his speech almost entirely to the record of the provincial government, partly, no doubt, because the less said of the record of the Ottawa Government the better, and partly because, hopeless of being returned to the Dominion house, he is already preparing to make a bid for a seat in the provincial house at the coming election.

He spoke of the Workmen's Compensation Act, claiming for the British Liberal party the establishment of the principle of employer's liability. Here again, it is worthy of note that the first Workmen's Compensation Act was passed by a Conservative government, thanks largely to the efforts of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, and the amended bill passed by the present government was largely in response to outside pressure from the Labor party, whose passion for "smashing the Liberal party" must be appeased at all costs.

Mr. Simmons claimed, moreover, that the Alberta Compensation Act was modelled on the English Law. In reply to this it is sufficient to say that the defects of the first English act, brought to light by nearly a decade of experience, are nearly all included in the Alberta measure. The expensive procedure which precludes a poor man from taking advantage of the act and the very limited scope of the measure, are tributes to the love of the working man which filled the hearts of the government starting in a new country with a clean sheet, and none of the powerful established vested interests of the older countries to contend with. Verily the workers ask bread of their paternal Liberal Government, and are given a stone!

AN ENGLISH WORKMAN.

Editor of The Times:

Election on the 26th inst., the newspapers tell us. What does this call to the men of Canada mean today.

It is quite within the memory of man wnen, to be a Liberal-Conservative meant to be a Canadian. Away down by the sea where the ships came in that bore the message from the old home, in the motherland, mothers taught their children with prophetic voice. They dipt into the future, saw the wonders that would, be, when the children of this land should join to build a nation—but only in the home of the Liberal-Conservative could the child receive the impression from this teaching, this thought, this hope—called Confederation.

In the home of the Liberal the child was taught all good must come from our neighbors across the border—draw closer to them and a day would come when Canada could abandon allegiance to Great Britain and become a part of the United States.

We can here easily recall a very clever lawyer whose ambition in early youth brought him dreams of a day when he should be president of the United States. He served the Liberal party long and (we may suppose) faithfully and is now a Canadian judge.

If a backward glance cannot call up the facts, the political history of Canada will show them.

The Conservative party proposed to complete the confederation of British North America by including British Columbia, through giving that province railway communication with the rest of Canada. It might be said for the people who supported the Government they did not have time to "think it over." British Columbia was far away across the great lone land, the Pacific Ocean washed its shores, and when the Liberal party denounced the proposal as ruinous it had the enect of greatly, reducing the Conservatives majority in 1872 and helped to bring about the defeat of the party in 1873.

The Liberal party once in a position to pursue their Free Trade Policy soon proved it a ruinous thing for the country.

In 1878 the Conservative Party carried the country by an overwhelming majority through the policy by them propounded.

The prosperity that followed the establishment of a Protective Policy was unquestionable. The Free Trade Policy of the Liberal Party could never again make a battle cry, so it died a peaceful and natural death.

Increasing prosperity enabled the Government to push railway construction to the Pacific ocean. The Conservative Party at this stagemay claime to have accomplished enough for British North America to make the Canada of today. No intelligent men will deny that the present position of Canada has been attained by Confederation, the adoption of a protective Policy and the construction of an inter-ocean railway.

The eighteen years of Liberal-Conservative administration that followed the election of 1878 made many changes in the Party. Death had removed Sir John A. MacDonald and Sir John Thompson. Kipling had not written, "Lest we forget," and it might be said of others, too much success may have impaired their usefulness and the result of the election of 1896 was not unexpected by many Sonservatives. Few Conservatives were not ready to admit we had in Wilfrid Laurier, a man of brilliant intellect, kind heart, courtly manner, and clean life. To-day we are forced to ask ourselves, is this man fool or fiend? If, as his admirers declare, he does not know of the ingnitous deeds of his colleagues, does this not stamp the man a fool? Wilfrid Laurier was a lawyer, admittedly a clever lawyer and if Sir Wilfrid Laurier is not a fool he must be a fiend, chief fiend calling off this devil's dance to those monsters of iniquity known as cabinet ministers.

Who is still interested in this play where the curtain rises in the wrong place disclosing actors, with stage manager rushing on, exclaiming; "Be kind enough, ladies and gentlemen, to turn your head the other way. I will at once adjust the curtain and the play shall go on to your satisfaction. We are really a very clever lot of fellows and can give you a very good time if you will only do us the kindness to be patient?" Who wants to be patient? Who is not sick, sick to the soul of it all? What does the country need of a fool or fiend? Are there not men with human hearts who can do enough before the 26th, to save the country from Sifton.

If the lone trails under the Arctic skies had voices to tell of suffering, there endured through the Sifton gold lust no effort would be needed to force him into retirement.

We here recall his departure for the Klondike. The Liberals announced through the newspapers that their "Young Napoleon" was about to undertake the journey into the Klondike. We did not know why they should call Sifton their Young Napoleon" but afterwards learned to believe it was because he had gone to be a law unto himself. The suffering gold seekers were there waiting between hope and despair for some sign by the government that would insure them lawful possession of the claims for which they had perilled life and limb, hungered and froze, longed and waited to obtain, when Sifton arrived in the country and discovered the most crying need to be a railway and to meet the emergency must be built at once. There was no time to waste over passing bills or bringing it before the House The Young Napoleon, and Mackenzie and Mann were all that were needed to give a railway consideration. We will admit there was some consternation in his own party that led to strong opposition, but it remainedfor that grand old figure on the opposite side to step out and say, this wrong shall not be perpetrated.

Sir Charles Tupper's will carried Sifton's railway was not built. Sifton's railway to the Klondike.

From the day Sifton entered the Yukon and looked over its possibilities for himself, until the day Thompson reached Ottawa, what law did the Yukon know but Sifton's will? Ask the miner who toiled and waited for better days. We hear much of the gold lust in our day but we can hope man's inhumanity to man will not be sufficient to return Clifford Sifton to power again. In this great and growing country surely men in sufficient numbers can be found to form a government that will teach the right, smite the wrong, and work for a nation's good.

France's Old Age Scheme.

An old-age pension scheme of a novel character is just about going into operation in France. The necessary legislation was passed at the last session of the French Parliament, but because the proposal created little discussion public attention was not directed to the scheme. The promoter of the measure is M. Ribot, and his aim is to give workingmen in the towns and laborers in the country an opportunity to acquire on easy terms a plot of land and a modest homestead. He argued that this would be a more practical kind of provision for the evening of life than any Old Age Pension fund.

It was, indeed, while the British Old Age Pensions Bill was under discussion that the idea occurred to M. Ribot. Some of his constituents in the Pas de Calais had suggested that they would rather invest their savings in this way, and he at once sought to secure them the option of setting aside this prospective pensions as part payment of the purchase money required to buy a plot of land and a homestead.

The field or garden must not cost more than $240, and its extent is limited for the present to a little over half an acre. The intending purchaser must possess 240 francs (about $48). If not, he is helped by the State, and the moment he deposits the money he becomes proprietor of the holding. He must undertake that he or his children will cultivate it and he must also insure his life.

The state does not deal direct with the purchaser, but with an intermediary and guarantee company formed in each district. A capital of $20,000,000 has been set aside for loans at two per cent., and each local company must have a capital of $40,000 of which half is to be held in reserve.

The original idea was to provide town or country workers with a home when they reached the age of 50 or 60, but anyone who has saved one-fifth of the purchase money less than $50 can at once become the possessor of "half an acre and a homestead."

At the ages mentioned the family is generally dispersed, but it is hoped that the liberal facilities accorded will induce younger people —soldiers on completing their period of service for instance—to settle on the land, marry, and bring up a family.

Should the experiment succeed its promoters will come back to Parliament and ask for larger credits.

Free Rural Mail Delivery

Halifax Platform, Section 12, Aug. 20, 1907:—"The improvement of existing postal facilities, specially in newly developed portions of the country, and the inauguration, after proper inquiry as to cost, of a free rural mail delivery."

THEN

Free Press, Dec. 13, 1907.

"Free Delivery Buncombe"

"As long as our British parliamentary system endures, so long—unless a marvellous metamorphosis takes place in political human nature in this country—will the opposition be found thundering against the bulk sum of the government's expenditure and taking good care not to vote against the individual expenditures when they are before parliament to be passed item by item. A striking illustration of this is furnished by the present declaration of the opposition at Ottawa in favor of the establishment of rural mail delivery routes throughout the Dominion."

The Free Press then quotes Mr. Cockshutt's resolution against extravagance and continues:—

"Before the echoes of that applause ceased reverberating underthe roof of the Commons chamber, fresh outbursts of opposition applause punctuated the speech of Mr. J. E. Armstrong Conservative member for East Lambton, in Ontario, in support of his resolution declaring that rural mail delivery systems would cost many millions of dollars. But what of that?"

Statistics of cost in the United States are then quoted and the Free Press continues:—"These figures are highly instructive in connection with the declaration of the Armstrong resolution in favor of rural mail delivery throughout the Dominion.

a proposition which no Dominion government in its senses could, with the present population of the Dominion, think of carrying into operation, but which the present opposition seems to regard as good bait for votes in the rural districts."

The Free Press estimates the cost to Canada as $10,000,000 and comments as follows:—

"Without saying anything of the immense patronage possibilities this would provide for politicians in power who considered their political necessities first and the public service second, it is to be pointed out that the establishment of rural mail deliveries would have to proceed upon the principle of density of population, as in the case of city deliveries. This would mean that the old and thickly-settled portions of Eastern Canada—like Mr. Lambton's constituency of East Lambton—which already have conveniences which we cannot have in the west for some time to come, would enjoy another convenience, the cost of supplying them with which would soon turn the post office surplus into a huge deficit; and when requests came from the west for postal extensions and improvements, the reply would be that there was no money. The inevitable necessity, no matter what government was in power, would be that the west's postal service would be starved, while an enormous addition would be made to the taxation of the whole Dominion.

"The farmers of Canada will size up for themselves the entire significance of the rural mail delivery cry of the opposition. . . . It would be a poor compliment to their intelligence if they could fail to estimate the free delivery buncombe at its real value."

R. L. Borden at Halifax, Sept. 14, 1908:—"An opposition which can force great reforms such as these upon an unwilling government has every reason to congratulate itself; and the party it represents has no cause to fear for its efficiency."

NOW

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux at Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 15, 1908.— Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, postmaster-general, speaking at the Laurier demonstration here tonight, made an important announcement in regard to the inauguration of rural mail delivery and collection in the near future. The postmaster-general capped the climax of a particularly effective and eloquent speech by announcing the intention of the government to inaugurate at once a system of free rural mail delivery throughout Canada, thus conferring a great boon to the whole farming community of the country. After briefly reviewing the history of the adoption of free rural mail delivery in Great Britain, France, Germany and the United States, Mr. Lemieux declared that hitherto the vital objection to the adoption of such a system in Canada had been the great cost involved and the comparative sparsity of the rural population, but with a post office surplus of $1,110,000 last year and the growing postal revenue the government now felt justified in taking another step in advance in the matter of postal reforms. After carefully studying the question for the past two or three years his department had now evolved a scheme of rural delivery and collection by utilizing the present system of stage routes, whereby the rural population would be able to receive and post all ordinary mail matter at their doors instead of having to drive two or three miles to the nearest post office for that purpose. "With the consent of my colleagues," he said, "I have determined to equip all the existing mail routes in Canada with rural delivery boxes under regulation to be published and enforced shortly. At the junction of every concession line with the main road the farmers will also be given the privilege of having boxes located for the receipt and collection of mail if so desired.

"The department has made all arrangements," continued Mr. Lemieux, "for carrying out this scheme and will at once proceed to operate it. I think the Government can and will afford to pay the cost."

Where the Money Goes

The scandal in connection with the payment to Superintendent Reid of Lethbridge of $18 a day for five days for some reason known only to Alds. Penhale and Forster, has shown up those two aldermen again, as the ones that are largely responsible for the high rate of taxation we are forced to pay. That they carried with them in the vote, Alds. Tweed and McKay is only what happens almost every time the two cronies open their mouth Ald Tweed, after fighting the payment, voted for it for reasons unknown. The ratepayers will be interested in knowing the names of the Aldermen who supported this unjust draft on the treasury. Yeas were Alds. Penhale, Forster, McKay, Tweed; Nays, Alds. Spencer and Morrow. Ald. Baker did not vote. Had Ald. Tweed stuck to his guns the payment would likely have been defeated.

In connection with this man Reid, who can hold up our easy water commissioners, it develops that he receives a salary of $1,200 a year in Lethbridge, or $3.50 a day. But he can come up here and in five days carry away almost a whole month's salary.

Also consider this: Reid, a $1,200 a year man was engaged by our spendthrift water commissioners to come up and teach our pump-house engineer to whom we pay a salary equal to about $2,000 a year. Of all the schemes that savor of graft this payment of $18 a day to a $3.50 man when we employ for ourselves a $5.50 man, is about the worst.

And here is another of thoseschemes whereby our water commissioners are robbing the people and forcing us to pay a tax equal to 24 mills on the dollar without considering gas revenue: Reid, the man who superintends the Lethbridge water works and electric plant receives only $1,200 a year. But our water commissioners have imposed upon us an official to handle only our water-works at the big salary of $1,500 a year with free house, water and gas, or equal to $2,000 a year; and the city has to build the house for him.

But not satisfied with this Ald. Penhale, who said Mr. McAfee could do it all, as the engines are running only ten hours a day, has engaged an assistant and a night watchman at salaries that will run our pump house expenses up $1800 more at the least. The assistant is said to be learning the business (at a good salary) to relieve Mr. McAfee when necessary; and then at night we have another man to kind of hold down the building while the city's asleep.

However, since Mr. Reid was here, his own city has decided that the man who could come up here and bamboozle Medicine Hat into paying $18 a day, was worth more than $3.50, so they have increased his salary to $1,800.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The two Aldermen who are standing out conspicuously in their fight against the reckless expenditure and waste that has made our taxes 16 mills this year, are Alds. Spencer and Morrow. Ald. Baker, lends valuable assistance. Wherever there is a question of waste you will find these Aldermen conscientiously fighting it. These three Aldermen can be kept on with great profit to the city. What have the others done?

It will be most interesting to know what the local Liberal (?) paper, The News, intends to do now that we are denied the Strathcona Horse. In an editorial of July 16th (written we suppose by its editor) it says: "When the Strathcona Horse Corps is formed the headquarters will be at no other place than Medicine Hat. With such telegraphic assurance as this from Ottawa, we have watched the efforts of Calgary to steal this proposition away from us."

"The only objection cited by Sir Frederick Borden when there a traffic bridge over the river—has been overcome." "At Medicine Hat we have to see the Government deliver the goods." "If there is to be any change in the plans of the Government, we would like to know where we are at."

"We have set our hearts on this, have been assured that it was ours, and are not prepared to see the location changed or the dog in the manger policy of the Albertan carried out." (The Albertan's "policy" was a suggestion that the Corps might not be established).

Now then, News, are you a paper of conviction or party apologies? Do you back up your editorial of July or do you have to draw in and be a Grit at all costs?

On Aug. 20th The News reviewing Mr. Ames' exposure said: "It is the Government's duty to give us the other side." "If it can be disposed of the people look for a statement from the Government, and it will no doubt be forthcoming."

Does The News consider that the Hon. Frank Oliver attempted to answer one of the charges?

The manner in which the granting and protecting of homesteads is being, and has been manipulated to pull votes for the Liberal Government is a disgrace to the country. At the last election their homesteads were held over the newer Germans to such an extent that when they were asked how they were going to vote they said "homesteads", and that was what they thought they were voting for when they cast their votes for the Liberal candidate. The same thing is being tried now, and it is accompanying nothing. The Germans have discovered that the local homestead office is powerless to interfere with their patents, and they are taking the opportunity to show the Liberals what they think of a Government that would allow such mean electioneering.

To the Germans, The Times can give this assurance; neither the local homestead agent, nor the Liberal Government can take your homesteads from you. The threat will be used to its fullest, but youcan dare the man who threatens you, to do his worst. As a matter of fact, the Liberal Government is going to go out of power at this election, and if you are influenced to vote for them through fear you will have lost your vote. If the homesteads are to be held over you it won't be the Liberal Government that will be able to hurt you after October 26th.

Don't be frightened into supporting a party that will have nothing to say in the country after October 26th. Help to elect a clean Government that will protect you in your rights. You will never have to fear for your homestead afterwards, ifyou are fulfilling the regulations.

If any threats are used to force you to vote Liberal let The Times know about it. The threats will soon be lifted.

Already bets are being placed on the election in this riding. The other day a former Liberal bet with a Simmons supporter that Magrath would be elected. And he gave odds of 4 to 1. That Magrath would have a majority of four hundred votes, he bet on even terms.

Every day the enthusiasm for Magrath grows. With the open secession of Liberals from the grafters' ranks there is something like panic in the local Liberal organization. Every night the Magrath Club rooms are filled to overflowing and a number of former Liberals have made speeches. The labor men are particularly strong in favor of Magrath. The recent strike has justly made them very bitter against the Liberal Government, until it is doubtful if Simmons will carry a handful of labor men.

The carelessness and indifference of the Government has been a sample of their thought of the railway men. No attempt was made to enforce the Alien Labor Act to prevent the importation of strike-breakers and a deaf ear was turned to the men's protests. A report from strike headquarters to the men said: "Efforts have been made to stir the Government to activities, both as regard the Railway Commission and also regarding the enforcement of legislation now on the books, supposed to have been written in the interests of the men. In consequence the representatives of the Government have stated that the emigration and alien labor laws will be enforced to the letter from now on, now that THE COMPANY HAS REPORTED NEARLY ALL THE SCABS THEY REQUIRE, and don't care whether the laws are enforced or not."

The city has discovered that, owing to a mistake of the assessor, John T. Hall, theywere counting on $1,100 more in taxes than they were entitled to. It is a fortunate thing that the estimates for the various departments allowed some margin.

One of the worst knocks and most untruthful statements ever sent out concerning this district has emanated from the pen of our publicity commissioner over his name as secretary of the Agricultural Society. This Society, which is composed of Liberals almost to a man saw fit to make use of the irrigation ditch prospects for issuing a resolution that should secure for them a free train ride out of the district. With that resolution, John T. Hall, as Secretary enclosed a letter of his own that added to the insult. Were it not that it would be adding publicity to this scandalous letter, The Times would be pleased to publish it to let the citizens judge for themselves.

While that letter was sent privately to the Hon. Frank Oliver in order to hasten the irrigation ditch, the latter gentleman saw fit to use it for campaign purposes and it published in the Manitoba Free Press.

We pay John T. Hall $2,500 a year to help this district to grow, and not to send out knocks like this.

An Agricultural Society that would forget its sphere to such an extent as to turn out such an epistle, and allow John T. Hall to add his bit of thoughtlessness has lost its usefulness. The sooner it resigns, and allows a Society to be formed with no ulterior motives than the good of the district, the better for this city.

Another Liberal dodge in this district has come to light; but it is apt to become a boomerang. There has been considerable trouble over the Cypress Hills timber limits, and a local man had stated his intention to vote Conservative because of the trouble. It is now rumored that an Irvine merchant has been promised, on the quiet, a certain limit in the hills. Also the local man is supposed to have had a promise of the same limit. At least he suddenly turned Liberal when Oliver came to town and the only reason he could assign was the interruptions at the meeting. It is suspected that both are being held solid on the same limits until after elections.

When a few local Conservatives returned from Irvine the other day and told of the wonderful enthusiasm for Magrath among the better class of Germans in Irvine and vicinity, the announcement was received at the Magrath Club with loud cheers. The earnest work of the Irvinites on behalf of clean Government has spurred the local club to even greater efforts. The influential German settlers who have come out for Magrath assure a great sweep in that district.

R. C. Edwards in his clearest moment, never penned a plainer Eye-Opener than that which appeared in The Calgary News last week, and for which Editor McGillicuddy was arrested next day. The Times has not the least sympathy with the style of journalism favored by "Bob," but it, at least, is of as high a quality as that of the man who would write a letter like the one signed "Nemesis" without signing his fullname. Edwards' comments were sent out as his own, frankly, but Nemesis did not have the manliness to come out over his name. It is the greatest surprise that an experienced editor like McGillicuddy would lend his paper to the publication of an unsigned attack on the character of an individual.

The Eye Opener has undoubtedly done harm, but it has also done so much good that all of Edwards' friends (for he has many personally) are longing for the day when he will trust to his literary ability to bring him fame, when his exposures of men in high places will not be accompanied by unsavory stories.

However, in this case the criticism is all coming to the Calgary News for publishing an unsigned article. It is no stretch of imagination to picture the writer of such a letter as a prominent politician who is using it, not to do good, but to discredit Edwards' startling exposures of the past few months.

Laurier is telling of how Sir Fred. Borden made an English magazine apology Now, what is he going to do with the Eye Opener which originally published the scandal and has now proven it. There is very little doubt in the mind of readers as to Sir Fred. Borden's personal character.

And Sir Frederick is one of the Cabinet Ministers who make our laws. It is a crying disgrace to the country.

Even the Lethbridge Herald, Simmons' paper, admits that the Duncan Marshall meeting in Magrath "had a Magrath flavor."

A tale of how Sifton rose from a position of bankruptcy to that of a millionaire would make a fine serial story. Just before he went into parliament he tried to compromise with the City of Winnipeg upon a $4,000 judgment for fifty cents on the dollar.

The last issue of The News says: "The plain unvarnished truth which

McClary's "Caloric" Gas Range has A "Safety" Lighter

Nine out of ten women are afraid to light the oven burners of an ordinary gas range. But the owner of a "Caloric" never hesitates to light the oven burners. "Caloric" has a "Safety" Lighter, which is directly connected with oven burners. Just place lighted match at Safety Lighter and turn on oven burners. A mall flame first appears at the "Safety", and this small flame is immediately carried to the oven burners which are lighted instantly. No accumulation of gas or possibility of explosion on the "Caloric." The "Caloric" is not an ordinary range, but is "different" in many ways as you can see for ourself by calling at the Minister of the Interior handed out, in reference to the timber limit scandals was effective in removing any lingering doubts which may have existed regarding Mr. Ames' irrational charges."

The Times hereby challenges The News to publish two statementsmade by Oliver that refuted two charges made by Ames. Ames charges, his exposures of suspicious circumstances surrounding the tenders were as follows:

(1) The two-check tender.

(2) The omission of any price from the tender.

(3) The securing by Burrows of all his tenders at an excess of only five per cent. over the next highest tender.

(4) The insufficient time given to examine limits put up for sale.

of the Prince Albert City Council

(5) The ignoring of the protests and Board of Trade.

(6) The reluctance to show the original statements.

(7) The signing to tenders of names of men who had nothing to do with them.

(8) The exceeding of the second highest tender by the first check of Burrows by only a few dollars, and the exceeding of the tender above that (handed in at the last moment to prevent such schemes) by the second check byonly a few dollars.

(9) The offering for sale by Fraser for $500,000 of a limit which he had secured for $500.

Now, News, it's up to you. Prove it or take it back. We allow one statement ofOliver's as answer because he asserted that Burrows secured only 18 out of 25 tenders, whereas Ames said he secured eighteen out of nineteen. Oliver's statement may or may not be true.

Now what's your answer News? Examine your "verbatim report" of Oliver's speech and see how funny your remark sounds.

The News accuses The Times of unfairness in dividing the water commissioners into two parts and getting after Alds. Penhale and Forster. The division was made at the beginning by the two Aldermen mentioned themselves, so that The Times has no choice. It is a fact that Ald. Morrow, one of the water commissioners was never notified of but one meeting of the committee. So even the News will admit that he is exempt from the charges that rest against Alds. Penhale and Forster. In the same way Ald. Huckvale has not figures, partially because he is out of town some of his time, and partially because he is a new member of the Council. But in this Reid case Ald. Huckvale was distinctly against the employment of Reid as he had told another man that he thought Reid was just here on his holidays. Doesn't that show how the division is made? Alds. Penhale and Forster alone of the water commissioners votes for this Reid graft. Ald. Morrow voted against it and Ald. Huckvale sent a message in his absence that he thought Reid on his holidays. It is consideration for the honest work of Alds. Huckvale and Morrow that makes The Times follow out the division made in the water commissioners by "the two cronies." The Times regrets exceedingly that Ald. Forster happens to be the editor of The News as it enables him to blame part of The Times criticism on business rivalry. The assurance of The Times to the contrary would mean nothing, but if the worthy Alderman knew what we have concealed that has comewithin our knowledge he would recognize that his business position has been a protection rather than an excuse for attack.

It was practically the knowledge that any criticism of Ald. Forster might be laid to business rivalry that made The Times very loath last year to see him accept an Aldermanic position.

The News promises some plain talking on the water situation before the civic elections. The promise is grating except for the fact that it is too long delayed to be worth anything. The talking should have been done when the water situation was on and not delayed until it will necessarily be a monologue.

The Times opposition to Alds. Penhale and Forster on the water question is too well supported by the ratepayers to need further comment. The Times "enmity" towards Ald. Penhale is not continued outside the Council Chamber, and this Ald. Penhale will freely admit, there is no doubt. He will give us credit for opposing him openly.

Laurier has always counted on the Catholic vote but this time it is forsaking him. United Canada, the organ of the Irish Catholics says:—

"The great task before the young Canadian, and especially in the new provinces, is not the out-throwing of one government or party and the installation of another party, but to prevent a small band of pirates from getting possession of the soil, and the great natural resources of the country, which belong to the people.

Is it any wonder that the decent men of the country, of both parties, are indignant and are loudly demanding in angry tones that the thieves be driven out of the temple at Ottawa? The government owns most of the news-papers—almost the entire press of Quebec and New Brunswick—but still they are unable to stay the rising tide of indignation against this discredited and dishonored government.

This is the task of the young Canadian.

The manner in which the West is being held up and retarded in its development to pull votes for the Liberal party is a scandal that has aroused the opposition of such a prominent Liberal paper as the Free Press. Before the election campaign came on the Free Press said:

"The Free Press has reason to believe that this fraud is being practised on a large scale. In some districts homestead lands are all tied up in this way. No doubt the official records in the land offices show that each of these quarter sections has been duly entered for in the nameof some individual and the conditions fixed by the act complied with. Superficially the record is probably quite correct, but behind the forms of law A DARING, COLD-BLOODED HOLD-UP AND SWINDLE IS BEING PERPETRATED."

"There are districts in which every homestead of any real value is blanketed with names, many of them fictitious, a practice which necessarily drives the bona fide settler a long distance from railroads or makes him turn away with disgust."

This is the style of development the Liberal Government claims credit for. To anyone doubting the hold-up all that is necessary is to drive anywhere south of the main line of the C.P.R. and north west and see how few within thirty miles. And yet almost every quarter section he will pass is taken up in the name of someone.

During this campaign the homesteads are being worked for all that is in them in order to turn votes to Simmons. Several instances havebeen reported to The Times where well-known Liberals have approached homestead owners, and told them to go to Simmons and he'd see they got their patents all right. In every case yet known the adviser was given a hasty dismissal with a few comments thrown in. The homestead scheme has lost its power during this election.

Some of the Liberals are asking what the Conservatives will do for a leader when they get in. They asked the same thing with apparently much more point down in Ontario when Whitney led the Opposition. The Globe said: "throw a stone in any country lawyer's office and you hit a Whitney." But when Whitney got control he administered the law and controlled the province as it has never been controlled before. So pleased were the people that a majority of 37,000 votes at the previous election was changed at the election in June to the huge figure of 97,000.

Whitney showed that he knew more of administration then any of his pompous and spectacular predecessors Borden will do the same.

It was an enlightening meeting that was held Thursday night to discuss the water by-law. While the citizens present recognized that their hands were tied, they were not backward in telling the water commissioners a number of plain truths.

Ald. Huckvale, as he is not chairman of the commissioners and therefore is not in a position to verify what he said, stated that meetings of the water commissioners were held and that the chairman had consulted his colleagues. The Times is sorry to have to contradict Ald. Huckvale on this point. Ald. Morrow is a water commissioner and has been notified of only one meeting this year. Of course, Ald. Huckvale thought he was right and Ald. Penhale was not present to correct him. If thewere meetings will Ald. Huckvale show the minutes, and verify The Times contradiction by asking Ald. Morrow.

Mr. Benson took advantage of the opportunity to make some remarks that were correct and to the point, his question, "have the water commissioners as a body any control of expenditure" being strictly to the point. They had no control in the Reid case. His remarks on reckless expenditure were also well timed.

Messrs. Ansley, Kealy, Currie, Brotherton, McCutcheon and Hopper also made things interesting for the water commissioners. Dr. Boyd should be supported strongly in his indignation that no notice was taken of his report on the danger in the unfiltered water. Mr. Currie said "no other town in the West, and no other people would stand for such muddling" and he was right.

And this $15,000 is needed largely to rectify some more muddling. A has to be laid for the hill climbers, which should have been laid at the stand pipe when it was built. The mistake in placing a wrong size of pipe to the filtration plant is another costly one—and we have to pay for it.

Ald. Forster says he will stand upon his record of service to Medicine Hat; which was a most conclusive answer and shows that Ald. Forster has a very level head—able to stand on an exceedingly small surface.

And the water question is not yet at an end for the commissioners. There are several revelations yet to be made.

If as Ald. Forster says, the only solution of the difficulty is to pay men to look after it, and if as he said in answer to Mr. Ansley, he had devoted his best services to the city, then he acknowledges his incapacity for the work, and includes the other water commissioners.

Editorial Notes

It is a most significant comment on the work of the water commissioners that the only ward in which the water extension by-law did not pass was the ward which the chairman of the water commissioners represents. The next step is going to be a demand for resignation.

So incensed are the ratepayers at the Reid bill that some of them are talking of combatting its payment in court and forcing the Aldermen who engaged him to pay him out of their own pockets.

In order that such a gross waste may never occur again it is the duty of some Alderman to see that the by-law is changed, in order that the water commissioners may not have the power to employ and dismiss at their pleasure. Why should they be empowered to do this any more than the other committees in their own sphere? Can the police committee appoint and dismiss the police? Can the chairman of the fire, water and light control the employment of firemen? Can the public works appoint the engineer? Then why allow the water commissioners to be little gods in their department? Had they not felt this power the city would have been saved this $90 and hundreds more.

There promises to be some very interesting revelations before long unless Mr. Simmons ceases to interfere with the granting of patents to homesteaders.

What has Simmons to do with it any more than any other private individual? The Eye Opener has said some interesting things that place Simmons in a light in which both parties would rather have seen him avoid. The Times learnt many things of Mr. Simmons homestead interference that were not published in the Eye-Opener and they are going to given publicity unless it stops immediately. We give Mr. Simmons a chance to fight fair, if he refuses the results will be on his own head. Already he has lost scores of votes by his work in this respect. The elections will show that. If he wish to lose his deposit he can continue his work in this district.

Here is a sample of the disgust many honest Liberals have for the graft in their party. The Huntingdon Gleaner of Quebec a strong Liberal paper commenting on the denial of a Liberal member of any graft in the Government, says:

"We could wish that this was true—that there had been no giving away of Western lands, timber limits, coal mines, and townsites to party followers; that the Quebec bridge and Ross rifle transactions were prudent and honorable, and that the expenditures of the militia and marine departments have been economical. It is past understanding why, if everything was so straight, the government had a legal bully in every investigation to confuse witnesses and prevent critical questions being asked. To pretend that nothing was brought out that reflects on the Government is folly."

The Proclamation of the polling places has been posted and besides it is another document which says that any person unlawfully mutilating, defacing or altering any proclamation shall be liable to a fine of not less than $50 and costs, and if a returning officer does this he is liable to a fine of not less than $100 and costs or one year at least in jail with or without hard labor.

On the margin of the proclamation is PASTED AN EXTRA POLLING booth at Coutts. As Frederick Geo. Forster, is Returning Officer and is responsible for this "defacing or altering a proclamation," it will be interesting to know whether he will pay the fine or take the term.

At any hour of the day or night, C. H. Wagner, the city transfer man is at your service. Day phone 245. Night (after 18K) 69.

Labor & Labor

(Winnipeg Telegram.)

The government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier has contrived to make of the labor-union sentiment which supported it a slightly greater dupe than any other specific interest in the country.

In words the government has always been fair and generous to organized labor. But its deeds belie its words. The whole immigration policy of the government has been based on quantity not quality for classification.

Immigrants were brought in without discrimination who were vastly inferior in standard of living to Canadian working men, and whose presence had a tendency to deteriorate and impoverish Canadian labor. And Canadian working men were forced, as taxpayers, to contribute a bonus on their introduction.

If did not matter whether immigrants could only work, or would only work at trades already fully served in Canada. The North Atlantic Trading company got $5 a head of the Canadian working man's money and booking commissioners, and retainers from employers, and so forth and so on. And the North Atlantic Trading company dumped them into Canada as fast as it could secure them.

But the government went further that. It went into the strike-breaking business directly. A gentleman named Lazarus established what is known as the Canadian Labor Bureau. He had his office in thesame building as the Government Immigration office in London and he used the Canadian Coat-of-Arms on his letter-heads.

On February 17, 1903, W. T. R. Preston wrote to the manager of the Allan line that he knew a very responsible fellow who "has had correspondencewith a number of large employers of labor in Canada, to furnish them with the labor which may need from time to time and which, of course, for very obvious reasons, cannot be handled through the department."

The graft was pretty plain. The employers paid, the steamship companies paid, Canada paid, while Preston and Lazarus received.

Preston was not nearly finished, however. He again wrote on June 10, to the same man:

"For reason which you can understand, i.e., in view of the opposition of the labor unions of Canada—and you have had some experience in connection with the dock laborers at Montreal—against any propaganda among prospective emigrants who are likely to engage in any other calling in life than agriculture arriving in Canada; and also incident to the fact that they have demanded from the government the recall or dismissal, alleging encouragement on my part respecting emigration other than agriculturists, the department is debarred from furnishing any specific information respecting the possibilities of labor in Canada by mechanics, artisans and others. This has therefore led to the establishment of a labor bureau by large employers of various kinds of mechanical and skilled labor which has taken shape in the Canadian Labor Bureau.

It is not necessary that I should say whether I welcome this adjunct to the Canadian work or not, but in view of the action of the Labor Party in Canada, I am free to admit I am not surprised that an institution of this kind has commenced operations.

Of course I am writing you this fully and frankly on the question but I do not wish that my letter shall be made public."

The Crow's Nest Coal Company, (Jaffray, Cox and the rest) contracted with the Canadian Labor Bureau for over 2,000 miners to break a strike and the money for transportation was remitted to Preston to be paid out by him on Leopold's or rather Lazarus' certificate.

When a man named Jury "peached," the government promised todeal with Preston adequately. It did. It sent him to Japan at an increased salary to stimulate the immigration of Japanese coolies to drive Canadas sons from the labor market of the Pacific Coast.

That is the labor record of the Laurier government, part of it at least. The Conservative party believes in the rule of all Canadian citizens, and sometimes may not meet the full demands of any one class or organization. But it may safely be said that in all its history it has never been guilty of such wanton lyin- treachery and villainous deception in its relations with any class in the community.

The Liberal argument is that because of its belief in adequate protection the Conservative party is friendly to the manufacturers. The Conservative party's answer is that it cannot believe in adequate protection if it does not protect Canadian labor from unfair competition as well as Canadian materials, since human beings are more important than dead materials.

All political parties are extremely genial to workingmen at election times. Goniality is one thing; fair dealing is another. The workingmen of Canada could stand a little less of the "sunny smile" for a larger allowance of the "square deal." The Conservative party says what it does and does what it says, as the workingmen of Canada have reason to know.

ONE LIBERAL METHOD.

Cobourg, Ont., October 8.—Richard L. Ralls, postmaster at Fenella, 16 miles north of Cobourg, is under arrest here charged with the theft of Conservative campaign literature sent from Ottawa under frank at the close of last session. It is understood application will be made for bail.

More About Wool

(Hamilton Spectator.)

In view of the approaching dissolution of the Dominion parliament, and the coming on of an election campaign, the Globe recently attempted to apologise for, or to explain, the failure of the woollen industry of this country. That the woolen manufacturers and the sheep farmers of Canada have been hard hit by the reckless trade policy of the government is a matter of history. There are not less than one hundred woolen mills standing idle today in Canada that might have been in operation and given work to thousands of skilled operatives had the mill-owners been fairly treated by the Laurier government. The most suicidal policy has been adopted in giving special preferential rates of duty to British woolen mill owners, while at the same time the consumers of woolen goods in Canada have not benefited in buying goods at a lower rate existed before the preferential tariff went into effect. What special grievance the Laurier government had against the mill owners and the sheep farmershas not been explained, yet both have felt the blow. Out on the prairies of Alberta and Saskatchewan the farmers raise a class of wool that has heretofore found a ready market in some of the mills that were specially fitted with machinery to convert it into cloth, blankets and other woolen fabrics. There is no sale for this wool now in Canada, and the farmers must either kill their sheep or sell their wool to other countries at whatever prices it will bring in competition with finer grades of wool.

At the Canadian Manufacturers' association banquet the premier referred to the tariff commission; which he claimed had reached the happy medium. He admitted that the woollen industry had not been in a flourishing condition for some years. During those years the manufacturers have from time to time beseeched the government to give them adequate protection so that the Canadian mills and the Canadian sheep farmersmight have a fair show in the battle for industrial life. Under the preferential tariff, Great Britain undersell the Canadian manufacturer, and as a result not less than one hundred woollen mills are today standing idle, and the thousands of men and women who depended upon those mills for their daily bread, are thrown upon the labor market to compete in other branches of trade. It may be a generous act for the Laurier government to furnish a demand for the woollen mills of the old country to supply the goods, but at the same time thousands of Canadian operatives are idle. Now that an election is at hand, Sir Wilfrid is ready to promise relief that is to come in the future. In the meantime the mills remain closed, and the operatives are idle. It reminds us of the old story of the starving horse that was told to wait patiently, and he would get grass some time in the future.

Down at Chambly in the province of Quebec, is one of the best equipped woollen mills in the Dominion. It has been one of the chief sources of employment for the people in that section. Its output of machinery is specially adapted to using the wool raised out on the prairies of Saskatchewan and Alberta. The owner of the mill has passed the fourscore milepost in life's journey, and all of his life has been spent in building up a great woollen factory. He prided himself on the equipment of his mill and the quality of the goods he was able to manufacture. That mill, representing the savings and accumulations of a lifetime, is now standing idle, and the hundreds of operatives who depended upon their labor in that mill for daily bread for themselves and families are now wistfully asking when relief is to come. They cannot see eye to eye with Sir Wilfrid in giving the Canadian market to another country, while native-born Canadians are suffering because of idleness. Every dollar owned by the venerable mill owner is tied up in the idle mill, and now in the closing years of his life he is left a comparative beggar, for he cannot dispose of his mill at any price. He has been a follower of Laurier during all of his political career, but he now declares that henceforth he will devote the remaining days of his life to the advocacy of a protective policy for Canada against the world. To come nearer home, in the village of Haspeler is a splendidly equipped woollen mill that cost $750,000. The doors are closed, and the operatives are waiting and hoping for the day to come when there will be a change of government, so that the wheels of the mill will again revolve. The owners of that mill have offered to sell it for $75,000, and no man with capital can be induced to invest in it. If the Laurier candidates do not hear something drop when these woollen mill men and their operatives march up to the polls at the coming election, then we will be much surprised.

—:o:—

In Labor Circles.

London, Sept. 27.—The first week of the cotton mill lock-out endedwith less prospect of a settlement than in the beginning when the mills stopped on September 19.

There was a general belief that the card loomers would abandon opposition and that work will begin again in a few days or at the outside two or three weeks.

Now a settlement seems the last thing likely. The card loomers' executive resolved not to take a second ballot, which would have given the members a chance of altering their decision not to yield to the employers.

While the latter, many of whom welcomed a stoppage, owing to the depression in trade, have been completing arrangements for a long idleness and trying to bring into line the firms outside the federation, whose mills are still running, the only gleam of hope in the situation is that the operative spinners whose willingness to accept five per cent. reduction was nullified by the unyielding attitude of the card loomers, may force the latter to come to terms.

The pinch of wagelessness has not begun seriously to affect the outlook ed who at present are cheerfully making it a holiday, but the resources of their union are limited and this week end sees the disbursement of about $50,000 from their funds.

In the Winnipeg Saturday Post, Knox Magee severely scores the government for their attitude of indifference in the C.P.R. strike and neglect in regard to the enforcement of the Railway Act.

How Liberal Members are Seeking Covers in the Tall Timbers.

Another Liberal member is seeking shelter in a government office. C. H. Parmelee, member for Shefford is slated to be King's Printer. The way in which government members have been scrambling for cover is one of the most significant signs of the way in which the tide is flowing.

The continual anpointment of members of Parliament to Government jobs should not go to strengthen the Liberal party, in view of its strong condemnation when in opposition of the appointment of members of parliament to positions of emolument. The seeking of office by members and the promise of office to them by ministers, constituted, it was declared, a menace to parliamentary independence, and a means for easy and widespread corruption.

The following list of members Rho have taken fat jobs should make interesting reading for the public. This does not include recent appointments.

Writing Us Up

Here are a few things about us written by the editors who visited us a month ago:

FULTON GAZETTE, MISSOURI.

Medicine Hat was celebrated in the ranch annals of western Canada a few years ago. Kipling said it was "born lucky," and his prophecy has come true, for it is now a dignified town of six or seven thousand people, reveling in the riches of a bountiful Nature and looking forward to a day of dazzling opulence because of the presence of natural gas which is sold to manufacturers at five cents a thousand cubic feet.

ELMWOODS FREE PRESS INDIANA.

Medicine Hat is a live, prosperous town with a great future, it has coal and natural gas in a seemingly unlimited supply. The city owns the gas wells and furnishes it at 13 1-2 cents per thousand for domestic and 5 cents per thousand for manufacturing purposes. Until recently it has been thought that the Medicine Hat district is suited only for ranching, but mixed farming is now carried on successfully, and the government of the province in conjunction with other interested parties, is establishing an experimental farm, to demonstrate the Campbell system of dry farming.

GENEVA SIGNAL, NEBRASKA

The first stop of the editorial excursion after leaving Lethbridge was Medicine Hat, Alberta, Tuesday at 9 a.m. This is the "town that was born lucky," as Rudyard Kipling described it last May. It is situated on the South Saskatchewan and here the Crow's Nest Pass line to Spokane joins the main transcontinental Vancouver to Montreal line of the Canadian Pacific which we had left at Calgary when we went down to Macleod. It is 660 miles west of Winnipeg and only seventy miles north of Montana. It is a natural gas town having an abundant supply. Consumers pay 13½ cents a thousand and manufacturers 5 cents. Coal is also mined here and largely shipped. It has a population of 5,000 and beautiful public buildings. It has a country well adapted to live stock, which by irrigation, is now raising fine crops. Fruit is successfully grown also. It is a progressive live city, with a delightful climate.

MONTICELLO EXPRESS, OHIO.

We reached Medicine Hat early on a Tuesday morning. For a place that has the reputation of being thestarting point of the blizzards and cold waves of the country, the town looked very innocent and comfortable under the rays of a warm September sun. A party of four of us hurried to an Indian village in the outskirts of the city, and spent so much time trying to get some snap shots of Indian home life that we saw less of the town than the other members of the party. Kipling said such nice and striking things about Medicine Hat that its people appear quite proud of the distinction he conferred on the town. They like him better than they do the weather man and the pert paragrapher. The town has an unlimited supply of natural gas of good quality, which costs only 13½ cents per thousand cubic feet for domestic purposes and five cents for manufacturing purposes.

KOHOMO TRIBUNE, INDIANA.

The next stop was at Medicine Hat the town recently visited by Rudyard Kipling,and which he said was born lucky. It is situated on the South Saskatchewan river at the intersection of the Crow's Nest railway, with the main line of the Canadian Pacific, 660 miles west of Winnipeg, 200 miles east of the Rocky Mountains, 800 miles from Vancouver and seventy miles north of the state of Montana, U.S. All sorts of jokes are current everywhere about Medicine Hat being the breedingplace of storms and bad weather, and one of the first things the tourist wishes to see is the little observation station on the big high bank of the Saskatchewan where the weather conditions are recorded and then reported throughout the world. "the place where the weather for the United States is bred," as they jocularly designate. As a matter of fact all this unenviable notoriety is undeserved. The weather there is quite decent, not less favorable than is general in the northwest country. The one big attraction at Medicine Hat, which all Howard county is able to appreciate, is all abundance of natural gas. It was this fact that prompted Rudyard Kipling to say: "This part of the country seems to have all Hell for a basement, and the trap door appears to be in Medicine Hat." Thegas is there, all right and apparently in unlimited abundance. It sells for domestic uses at 13½ cents per thousand cubic feet and at five cents for manufacturing.

HASTINGS GAZETTE MINNESOTA.

Arrived at Medicine Hat on Tuesday, at nine a.m. This is the town said by Rudyard Kipling to be born lucky, has a population of five thousand, and was probably named from the great bend in the South Saskatchewan River, upon which it is situated. The abundant supply of natural gas at five cents a thousand has not only proved a great inducement to manufacturers, but the immense repair shops of the railroad are fired from its own well. Coal is plenty and cheap, and they are prospecting for oil. The buildings are of good material and substantial.

GRIGGSVILLE PRESS, ILLINOIS.

Our next stop of any consequence was Medicine Hat, located in the south-eastern part of Alberta. This is the natural gas city, where they get 600 pounds pressure to thesquare inch. The gas is obtained so easily, and can be had so cheaply, that it is never turned off, but permitted to burn night and day in the stores and houses. Rudyard Kipling on his visit to this city in October last year, said Medicine Hat "had all Hell for a basement," and from the great abundance of natural gas, it may be that Kipling's version is correct.

Medicine Hat is 600 miles west of Winnipeg and 70 miles north of the Montana State line. The city has a population of 5,000 people, and is strictly up-to-date in the matter of modern public buildings, stores and residences. One million dollars were spent last year in improvements. There are four banks, six churches, and business lines of all kinds arewell represented. The Western Canneries located here have a large plant and employ many people. They also have brick yards and factories of various kinds. The city is located on the South Saskatchewan river, and has a splendid water supply. A great deal of live stock of all kinds is raised in the surrounding country, and the annual shipments show a large increase each year.

The "Thin Red Line."

A brief reference by The Mail and Empire to the "thin red line" scandal in Manitoba has provoked a sermonette from the party organ. The "thin red line," it may be observed, was the Government scheme for the cheating of the electors in Manitoba at the last election. When polling day was approaching the voters' lists printed at Ottawa were sent to the various returning officers for use. Those printed for Manitoba, after reaching the returning officers, were transferred to Mr. Leech, the Liberal organizer at Winnipeg. When they left the custody of Leech, and were returned to the officers, they were found to have been "revised." A thin red line had been run through many names, and the citizens whose names had been thus treated were disfranchised.

An examination of the lists made by the Manitoba Government has revealed the fact that voters to the following number were cheated in the constituencies named:

Marquette	1,919
Provencher	563
Portage La Prairie	1,395
Souris	1,250
Lisgar	1,131
Macdonald	1,721
Selkirk	1,406

There can be little doubt that this manipulation of the lists affected the elections, and enabled the Government to capture constituencies that otherwise it would have lost. After the election Leech was appointed by Sifton to the position of inspector of agencies, and it was announced that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had agreed to this appointment, with a salary of $3,000 per annum, because Mr. Leech had exercised that "quiet "efficiency and conscientious devotion to the interests of Liberalism," which makes victories possible! The Toronto Globe, seeing that the roguery is incidentally alluded to in The Mail and Empire, says:—"If Mr. Leech was guilty of some offense, how comes it that the Attorney-General of Manitoba failed to "prosecute?". From this question the reader gathers that Leech was not prosecuted, and that, therefore, he was not guilty the cheating was not committed, and that the Laurier Government is blamed in this "thin red line" matter, for fraud for which it was not responsible. The intention of the organ in putting this question is toc onvey the idea that there was no litigation, and that the entire story is a fabrication. This line of defence is fraudulent. There were prosecutions. The following persons were proceeded against:—Leech, chief organizer for the Government; Abbotte, Duggan, Jickling, returning officers, and McDermott, Kitson and Menu, deputy returning officers. When these men were prosecuted the Dominion Government furnished counsel for their defence, and undertook to pay all expenses. Thus the responsibility for the crime against the people was shouldered by the really guilty parties—the big politicians who profit by the cheating. A trial was commenced. At that trial the Laurier Government took exception to the procedure on the ground that the men were being proceeded against under wrong clause of Criminal code. The judge sustained the point; and the issue was appealed. Appeals were carried from court to court. One tribunal, the Appeal Court of Manitoba, maintained that the course pursued was correct, and that the trial should therefore go on. Meanwhile many of the documents dis-appealed. Some of them were sent to the Parliamentary Committee at Ottawa, which enquired into the swindle during the session of 1907. There they were carefully retained.

In November last four of the "thin red line" artists were called for trial at Winnipeg. The point was then taken that the documentary evidence—the lists upon upon which the "thin red line" had been made—were at Ottawa. And, as a result of this convenient state of affairs, the trial had to be put off again. There the matter stands. The Attorney-General of Manitoba did prosecute; therefore; the plea of innocence on the ground that there was no prosecution is misleading. The failure to reach a trial owing to the intervention of the Ottawa men, shows that the ballot is unsafe so long as those politicians rule. Their money, their legal machinery, are employed, not in the defence of the rights of the people, but in the protection of operators who are charged with cheating the electors, and with thussecuring the return to Parliament of men who will vote for every form of graft.

A KNOCK KNOCKING KNOCKED KNOCKERS.

Every little while we have articles stuffed down our throats pertaining to knockers. Let us remember that the most competent knockers are the ones who knock those whose knocking can not be kept down. By so doing they prove themselves pretty good knockers, and likewise thorough bred asses. They fail to realize that every man is a knocker, whether he points an accusing finger at his brother or not. The most contemptible knocker is the one that knocks the knocker who comes out into the open stand for a knocking.

knocking all before him that will

From the moment of birth until the time of death every man is a knocker. He may be narrow enough not to notice it, but he is a knocker just the same. Truthfully, there are different breeds of knockers as well as different breeds of men.

It's a wonder those fellows who are always knocking the knocker would n't take a tumble to themselves and knock where knocking will do the most good. People in glass houses should not throw cobblestones. As soon as they knock a knocker they prove themselves clean imitations of knockers. The only people who don't knock are corpses—dead ones. The only people who do knock are real lives ones.—Ex.

Another Scheme of Graft.

In the maritime Provinces business men are advocating what would be a very good thing if carried through by honest administrators, namely, the purchase of the company-owned lines of railway in the East, and their incorporation into the Intercolonial as branches. The project has been seized upon by ex-Minister Emmerson and has received the endorsation of Mr. George Graham. A Liberal, writing to the Halifax Herald, exposes the object of the Government in putting this affair to the front. The thing, he says, is a grafting manoeuvre by means of which the Ministers, if permitted to go on with it, will take from the public chest, on behalf of politicians, millions of money.

We have an illustration of the manner in which the country can be robbed in the purchasing of additions to the Intercolonial in the Drummond railway affair of 1898. The Drummond Railway was built by a private company. The company received the following subsidies:

From the Dominion Government	$287,936
From the Quebec Government	347,420
From municipalities	15,000
Total	$650,356

The actual cost of the road, as given by the chief engineer at Ottawa, was $1,535,000. If we deduct the cash subsidies from the actual cost, the conclusion is reached that the private capital invested was $884,644. When the Government bought the road it paid the company the sum of $1,600,000 for it. This money the politicians who controlled the undertaking received. These men thus put into the scheme $884,644 of private capital, not necessarily their own, and pulled out, through the sale of the line to the Government, no less than $1,600,000.

Their account stands thus:

Paid to them by the Government	$1,600,000
Amount of private capital invested	844,644
Profit by politicians	$715,356

In a word, these men had all their money returned to them, and the subsidies were paid twice over. On the first occasion, the subsidies went into the road. On the second, they went into the pockets of certain of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's friends. This scheme of building railways out of subsidies and borrowed money and then selling them to the country for about twice the amount they have cost the politicians who are in the deal, is one of the latest of the Ottawa inventions. In New Brunswick the Hazen Government is enquiring into a trick of this kind. A railway called the Central of New Brunswick was projected by politicians high in favor at Ottawa and Fredericton. Both Governments gave large subsidies to the company. So far as can be learned the politicians who own the property never put a dollar of their own money into it. It has been stated to the Royal commission of enquiry that men who hold stock gave nothing for it, and it appears that construction was paid for out of subsidies and borrowed money. When the Laurier Government buys this road, as it will if Laurier is allowed to "finish his 'work,'" it will pay the supposed value of the road to the politicians, and by this process these men who have put up nothing will come out with fortunes.

"In the Maritime Provinces there are numerous lines which the country has subsidized. If the Emmerson-Graham conspiracy against the Treasury should succeed all these will be purchased on the plan pursued in the case of the Drummond. Thus the taxpayers will pay the bonuses to these projects twice over, and the amount by which we are robbed will go to the hungry politicians who are asking us to "let Laurier finish his work." It may be good policy to incorporate the various railways into the International. This is a business question. But the tax-payers of Canada ought not to allow the Laurier Government to do this thing, because if carried out by that crooked Administration the Treasury will suffer.

Young Egyptians Pine for Freedom.

Turkey's bloodless revolution brought about by the Young Turks, and sealed by the approval of the British Government in a remarkable message, has encouraged the Young Egyptians in their campaign against the British occupation. It has also stimulated the Hindu agitators, but the analogy between Turkey and Egypt is closer, and the propaganda is carried on with better chances for ultimate success. That some say India and Egypt will be self-governing is certain and it is highly probable that Egypt will manage her own affairs a generation or two, before India escapes from the British raj. Both are remote, but Egypt's constitution is nearer at hand.

Egypt's Chances.

Egypt has not to overcome the barrier of caste that forbids patriotic combinations in India. Egypt is smaller, and could be better organized. Moreover Egypt is not isolated from other powers as is India. Finally Egypt is not a part of the British Empire, John Bull is the landlord in India; he is bailiff in Egypt. As the Young Egyptians point out, Egypt is a country belonging to the Sultanate. The population—let them tell it—is the most enlightened, the most civilized of all the Turkish States. Why then, they demand, are we to be precluded from enjoying the political advantages which the beneficence of our Padishah has guaranteed to all his people? The answer is, in brief, that the Egyptians are not fit to rule themselves, and that England has too much money invested in the country to permit experiments at self government.

The Official British View.

Lord Cromer, after a lifetime spent in Egypt, gave it as his opinion that there is a fundamental incompatibility between Mohammedan civilization and Western ideas of good government. His successor, Sir Eldon Gorst, in answer to a petition sent to Sir Edward Grey by the Egyptian reformers, replied that at present he could not encourage them to expect the establishment of a constitution. He is also on record to the effect that "the great majority of the upper and middle classes of Egypt have no leaning toward the principle of self-government." Although this interpretation of Egyptian sentiment is vehemently contradicted by the Young Egyptians, it is extremely probable, on the face of it, and in the absence of evidence for or against. The present regime means security of life and property, and to middle and upper classes generally the world over this is more desirable than the boon of a ballot box. The lower classes in Egypt, having little or no property to secure, are naturally anxious to have an elective assembly, which they hope may, by some magic, give them property belonging to somebody else.

Encouraging the Agitation.

Some English papers, and many English Radicals, are extremely sympathetic in their treatment of the Egyptian agitation, which has been stimulated as a result of events at Constantinople. The London Daily Chronicle insists that in the near future British statesmen will have to consider, in a new light, "the awakening East." It encourages the reformers to continue their efforts, and hints that if the Turkish constitution proves successful the right of it to self-government will have been proved. A Cairo agitator is permitted to air his views in so important a journal as Public Opinion. He winds up thus:—"Enemies of Egypt must learn now that intrigues do not terrify us, threats cannot arrest us, insults cannot seize hold of us, treachery does not trouble us, death itself cannot step in between us and the great end which we pursue—independence." The average Englishman will be inclined to wonder what more liberty does a man need when he can talk like this.

A German Opinion.

Germania, the Clerical organ of Berlin, takes the view that Egypt should have a constitution, and denounces the statement of Freeman that "a Mohammedan Government cannot reform." It says that the three existing Egyptian parties, the Nationalists, the Reformers, and the Popular Party, antagonistic generally now unite in their demand for a Parliament. Although not one Egyptian in ten can read the Germania assests that "a nation of 13,000,000 is thirsting for domestic liberty." It is not clear what concern the subject should have for Germany, and interference like that of the Berlin rater will do nothing to help the Young Egyptians. The possibility of the triumphant Young Turks interesting themselves in behalf of their fellows in Egypt is one not to be omitted from calculations, and with this end a propaganda is being promoted.

Time for a Change

(Calgary Herald, Independent.)

The Liberal government is on trial before the people of Canada, today. What vetdict should be rendered? For twelve years a set of men who mounted to power on the bowed shoulders of a disorganized party have been entrusted with the administration of this country. Their record in opposition had not been entirely such as to command confidence In a mad desire for office they had boxed the compass of fiscal policies, offering everything from free trade to commercial union with the United States as incentives to the people to place them in the seats of the mighty. They had made many promises. Their Ottawa platform of 1893 foreshadowed a millennium of economy and reform. But the electorate remained suspicious.

Finally in 1896, through the disintegration of the Conservative government and by the silver-tongued eloquence oft heir leader, they came into power. And the country setback and waited, with some tremors it is true, for the promised reforms. Sir Wilfrid Laurier had explicitly pledged himself to a reduction in expenditures of three millions per annum. The reform (or even abolution) of the senate had been decided and the senators were shaking in their shoes. The iniquitous Tory tariff was to be abolished, Land was to be reserved for the settler and the vast resources of this great dominion were to be conserved to the people who really owned them.

How have those promises been kept? It is hardly too much to say that not a single plank of the Ottawa platform has been left unshattered instead of practicing economies the Liberals have increased the country's expenditure beyond necessity and even beyond the safety line. As against forty-four millions in 1896 we have this year a budget that will reach somewhere near one hundred and thirty millions. With an increase in population of say thirty per cent. expenditures have advanced two hundred per cent. The wonder is that Sir Richard Cartwright lives to read the tale.

True, Canada has struck a busy gait in the last few years but between that fact, due to providence and the energy of the people, and a government expenditure so largely due to favoritism, graft and private exploitation there is a wide gulf fixed. Some Liberals who once shed honest tears over the extravagances of Sir John A. Macdonald now smile with easy cynicism at the financial jamboree in which Mr. Fielding is indulging. But other Liberals feel a deep sense of shame as they realize from what high precepts to what base practices their leaders have descended.

The reform of the Senate instead of an earnest scheme for governmental improvement, has become a joke at which even Sir Wilfrid smiles. The reform of the tariff, so much desired in the west, has been relegated to the status of a "desirable theory" The land for the settler—watch them all laugh. A half-million settlers could be started in business in western Canada on the proceeds of the lands, linits and mines that have been stolen from the public by party favorites with the knowledge and connivance of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's government. Never, surely, has a young country been subjected to such a systematic process of exploitation as has this dominion in the last ten years.

And the worst of it is that each year seems to make the grafting element stronger and the respectable element weaker in the councils of the Liberal party.

This is what has shaken the Laurier government until today, instead of looking confidently to the result of next month's vote, a sense of anxiety seems to pervade it from one end of Canada to the other. There are certain signs which politicians are quick to read and these are not propitious for the government. One of them is the attitude of the independent party man,—he who, unseeking political benefits, is used to casting his vote on a sincere belief either in principles or men. As for the principles of the Liberal politicians now in power, they are hard to find, while the men, with few exceptions, fail to represent the ideals upon which Canadian Liberalism was founded. Disgusted Liberals put J. P. Whitney in power in Ontario. Disgusted Liberals turned the election in New Brunswick and placed a Conservative government in office in Manitoba. A Liberal administration animated by the spirit and the patrigtism which marked the Liberals in opposition, and which effaced even their many errors of judgment, would be proof against any attack from without. The downfall of Liberalism in Canada will come whether this time or next, from its betrayal of the principles which it so long advocated and the canker of corruption which has permeated its ranks.

It is time for a change right now.

Good Ending for Up-to-Date Novel.

"Where am I?"

As Claude feebly uttered these words he looked up at the face of an old-fashioned clock. Owing to the hard times, the clock had laid off one of its hands.

Claude was reclining on a lot of sofa killows, and all about the room stood Castillian furniture, the kind usually found in the wealthy Spanish homes.

Claude's inspection of the place was suddenly interrupted by the tread of tiny feet.

"Are you longing for anything, sir?" asked a sweet feminine voice.

"Yes," gasped the injured young man, "I am longing to know how I got here."

"I'll tell you," responded the pretty woman, seating herself on a costly tiger rug beside Claude.

"Day after day, from my latticed window I have watched you laying bricks on yonder skyscraper. Strange as it may seem, my heart went out to you. I became infatuated with you. Perhaps my loneliness helped, for, you know, my husband is a coffee salesman and hies himself to our coffee plantation eight months out of every twelve. But he has been away so long now that I fear he will never return. Yesterday, at the thought of this, and in a fit of despondency, I wanted to throw my weak form to the cold pavement below; but, on reaching the window, I caught a glimpse of you. My horrible attention was arrested. Upon realizing that I had near committed suicide, I let out a hysterical shriek. The shriek started you. I saw you step back suddenly into a tub of mortar. In endeavoring to extricate yourself, you made a fatal misstep and went down, down, down through the forty short stories, as a magazine reader would say. On seeing this, I lost notime. Changing my clothes and putting on all my rings, hat, and furs, I rushed down to the street just in time to ——"

"See my mangled form lying on the architect's blue print on the ground floor," interspersed Claude.

"No; but just in time to place where I thought you would fall this —my powder puff. It saved your life."

"How can I thank you," began the rescued man. "Perhaps if I am allowed to remain here——"

"No, no, no," almost shrieked the woman, "it is impossible. My husband is of a frightfully jealous disposition. He once threatened to kill a doctor for looking at my tongue. I am certain he would kill us instantly should he enter and find that I am sheltering you, a stranger."

"For our safety, then, I will stagger away. But I beg of you permit me to take with me just one little token of your kindness; something that I can remember you by."

"But what can I, the wife of a poor millionaire, give you?"

"A kiss!" Claude whispered the words nervously, anxiously.

"You forget! I told you my husband is liable to return and kill us both—"

"But my dear, he is thousands of miles from here."

There were a few moments of deathlike silence. Then, after looking cautiously all about her, the sweet little woman bent over Claude, and her lips were just touching his when the door flew open, and there, eyes filled with jealous rage and fingers twitching nervously, stood — Claude's wife!

THE END

Now, honestly, didn't you think it was the woman's husband?—E. P. Pitzer, in Harper's Weekly.

FRAMIN

Dear Sir or Madam, Medicine Hat, October 13, 1908.

We have written you so many letters on the subject of how to buy, or rather how not to buy a piano that this letter might seem to be superfluous.

But there is always somthing fresh happening in the piano business, and the latest is the advent of the Mason and Risch piano general agent who commences today to drum up the city in the interests of that paino and a REGINA house.

We make no apology for writing as we do for we count all fair that honestly keeps good Medicine Hat money in Medicine Hat and out of Regina and Calgary.

When this agent interviews you we only ask that you remember three things and we will leave you to draw your own conclusions.

First: The sale of the Mason and Risch pianos is controlled by a Regina firm The sale of the Heintzman & Co. piano is controlled by a Calgary firm. The Gerhard Heintzman piano is controlled by a Medicine Hat firm—ourselves. Calgary and Regina each have a Medicine Hat agent who gets 10 per cent. of the sale price of every piano which the firm which they represent sells in Medicine Hat. Each of these firms has also, as you know, a travelling salesman, who gets approximately 15 per cent. either in a straight commission or in salary and EXPENSES. Whether the general agent is paid a salary and his expenses or a straight commission the general agent's commission plus the local agent's commission approximates 25 per cent. Here is a great waste as far as you are concerned.

WHO pays it?

Second: In view of the above we have adopted the method of rebating 20 per cent. of the sale price to the buyer. We absolutely refuse to pay commission or waste our energy, time and money in an elaborate system of soliciting business. If you cannot see the advantage of doing business with us direct then we must forego the pleasure of doing business with you. but on the other hand

CAN YOU AFFORD to go down 20 per cent. deeper in your pocket for the pleasure of having a general and a local agent drum you up?

Third: The wiles of the professional piano agent are legion, and a proverb amongst them is "it is not the piano that sells; it's the agent," and unless you are exceedingly wary you will be caught one way or another. The most frequent scheme is to boost the price. That is, a $300.00 piano will be quoted to you at $400.00. You can't possibly tell that the price is boosted and when it is offered to you for $325.00 on easy terms you are apt to think that this is the only real piano snap that you will ever get, and you will sign up a contract to pay $325.00 for a $300.00 piano. This scheme of boosting the price is the only one that can be used to "beat" our system whereby the two agents' commissions remain in your own pocket.

We would rather sell you a piano without any profit to ourselves than that your money should go to build up Calgary and Regina industries. We guarantee to place a piano with you at 20 per cent. less cost to you than can either of the firms mentioned.

We cannot write everything in one letter and you must take it for granted that we can and will do what we say.

To say that the piano we handle, the Gerhard Heintzman, is the peer of the Mason & Risch or the Heintzman & Co. is needless, and therefore you have nothing to lose and much to gain by turning down these agents from other towns.

Yours truly,

THE ASSINIBOIA MUSIC CO.

THE IRVINE EXHIBITION

THE FIRST ANNUAL A HUGE SUCCESS

The crowds that attended the first annual exhibition of the Irvine Agricultural Society and the excellence of the exhibits fully justified the directors in their efforts and hard work for its success. It was a big undertaking for the men who interested themselves in it, but encouragement was met from the start.

Medicine Hat responded nobly, as the city felt that it would profit from the good work to be done in the Irvine district.

The officers were:—Pres., Dr. L. H. Dawson; 1st Vice-Pres., H. Hassard; 2nd Vice-Pres., Oliver Mayberry; Sec.-Treas., G. P. White; Directors, A. Woolley, E. H. Earl, Wm. Hawthorne, Wm. Summers, Wm. Keffer, Wm. Foster, T. G. Hawn, E. G. Benwell, Fred Weiss, James Crawford, Carl Berry, P. Draudson.

The Society will probably offer a prize for gopher tails, as the gophers have wrought so much destruction. A seed grain fair is also talked of for this winter.

Quite a crowd went out from the city, including Messrs. Morrow, Spencer, Harris, Rae, F. Pingle, Hopper, and B. Allen, and they brought back reports of a good time and lots of interest.

The prize winners were:

On the 21st of September, when Frederick Mock of the Gros Ventre was returning from Medicine Hat, where he had taken a load of wheat, he mistook the road home and wandered into Mr. Kesinger's field where he came into contact with a barbed wire fence. He did not know how he got in but on October 5th, he was tried before James Robinson, at the latter's residence, for destroying and cutting the fence. Constable Harris prosecuted. The defendant pleaded guilty to the charge but said he only cut one side of the fence. He was fined $5 and costs and $5 damages. This is the third time Mr. Kesigner's fence has been cut and perhaps this case will be a lesson to others who are in the habit of taking a near cut.

There was a heavy rainfall on Monday of last week.

Mr. Miller of the Marine and Fisheries Department, inspected Elkwater Lake, Tuesday, October 6th.

The Liberal candidate, W. C. Simmons is to speak at the Berry Centre School House on Thursday, October 13th, at 2 a.m. and at the Condordia School House at 2 p.m. the same day.

It is rumored that Mr. W. E. Martin, late of Irvine, may surprise this district by a visit soon.

Where Lemieux Act Fails

At this time, when the Lemieux Act and its short-comings are a subject of vital interest, not only to the workers affected by industrial disputes, but to the public in general; it may be of interest to note the present tendency of arbitration legislation in other parts of the empire. Of especial interest is the latest move by the English government to lessen the evils of strikes and lockouts at a time when the whole country is suffering from acute industrial depression, and the unemployed problem assuming the most alarming proportions.

The present scheme is described by Mr. Winston Churchill, president of the Board of Trade, as an application of powers already vested in that body by the Conciliation Act of 1906, "to appoint a conciliator in trade disputes and an arbitrator at the request of both parties." Under the Act of 1906, the Board of Trade is given power "on the application of employers or workmen interested . . . . . (to) appoint a person or persons to act as conciliator or as a board of conciliation."

Under the new scheme put forward last month by Mr. Churchill, it is proposed to set up a body of a permanent nature with powers as above, to consist of three panels: (1) employers; (2) working men; (3) persons belonging to neither of these classes but possessing "eminence and impartiality." One representative of the last named will be the chairman of the conciliation court, with either one or two from the two former panels.

It is especially worthy of note, in view of the dissatisfaction which the Lemieux Act in its present form has given that under the British scheme the element of compulsion is carefully kept out. Long experience of labor disputes in the oldest industrial country in the world, has left the conviction in the minds of both workers and the public, that where one or both parties to a dispute are compelled against their will to submit to an arbitration court the point of difference, the party so compelled will not feel itself bound to accept the finding. When, on the other hand they have voluntarily submitted their grievances for settlement by a well-constituted body, they must feel bound in honor to abide by the decision.

The London Standard, a Conservative organ which carried much weight in the country, has this to say:

"The main feature of the scheme, and the one which commends it most to us, is the absence of any attempt to alter the perfectly voluntary character of the operations by which the court is to be called into existence. The Conciliation Act conferred no compulsory powers on a Government department, or on the employers or workmen in any dispute. There is practically no desire on the part of any important section of the community to compel the parties to a dispute to submit their differences to an arbitration tribunal. At the Trade Union Congress at Nottingham last week a proposal in favor of compulsory arbitration was defeated, on a "card" vote, by 978,000 to 616,000. It is true that the majority is less than on previous occasions, and that it comprised mainly a "bloc" vote of the three large unions—the cotton operatives, the miners, and engineers. There might thus appear to be some development of working class opinion in favor of compulsion. Nevertheless, we believe that any attempt to introduce the least element of compulsion in the settlement of the economic relations between masters and men would be fraught with the greatest danger to the national interests. Even if the examples of compulsory arbitration in several of the Australian States and in New Zealand were much more successful than they have been, we should doubt the wisdom of introducing a compulsory system. The Board of Trade memorandum is careful to point out, and in this respect it does no more than is allowed by the Conciliation Act upon which it is based, that it is not intended "in any respect to depart from its (i.e., Conriliation Act) voluntary and permissive character;" and again, "no element of compulsion will enter into its proceedings;" and finally "the court will only be called into being if, and in proportion as, it is actually wanted."

The Canadian experiment has gone far to show the unworkableness, not only of compulsory arbitration as carried out in Australasia, where the findings of the court must be accepted, but of the compulsory submitting of industrial disputes to a tribunal against the wishes of one or both parties.

Mr. W. G. Niblock has resigned from the School Board on account of the turning down of the High School.

Gleichen Call:—C. A. Millie was called to Medicine Hat Monday afternoon, owing to the illness of his little girl.

Mr. Asselstine, the successor to Mr. Webb in the high school department commenced his duties yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. McKinnon returned on Saturday from a months' trip to the coast and mountain resorts.

The three lone lights on the standpipe, are at last securing the assistance of the other three after a couple of months of dismal flickering.

A freight smashup near Seven Persons last week destroyed 12 cars of merchandise, lumber and coal. The cause is not known.

Mr. C. W. Webb left last week for Stratford Collegiate Institute, where he has accepted the position of English Master.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Roberts leave the city this evening for a short visit to the Adsit ranch.

Mr. C. G. Milne has completed the interior decoration of his new photo studio opposite the Methodist church, and has secured very artistic results.

The issuing of debentures for the building of a High School was turned down by the people by a vote of 66—61.

The Magrath Club rooms are getting fuller every night. Come over and join the boys for honest government—government for the people and not for the favorites.

A new cement walk is being laid on the south side of Fourth Avenue between Toronto and Main Streets. It will add much to the appearance of one of the main streets of the city.

The Ladies Aid of the Presbyterian church cleared $95 at their tea-meeting. They wish to thank Mr. D. H. Williamson for the draying which he so kindly did free.

Dan Williams has taken over the Cypress Restaurant and has thoroughly fumigated it and cleaned it up. The restaurant is open to inspection throughout.

The C.P.R. Men's Store has opened a branch store in Coleridge, where a general stock of groceries, boots and shoes and men's wear will be carried.

The Ladies of Knox Church have secured the use of the new brickstore on Main Street, the property of Mr. R. Mitchell and will hold their sale of fancy work on Thursday, Oct. 22. Dinner will be served from 6 to 8.

Much regret is felt over the departure of Judge Mitchell and his mother, Mrs. Mitchell, and their household from Medicine Hat. They left last week for Calgary. Judge finds more convenient for his work.

The Methodist Church has consolidated its funds under one committee, consisting of Messrs. P. Patmore, W. J. Kennedy, W. McF. Evans, W. J. Brotherton and M. A. Brown. Mr. Curtis Hollinger has been appointed secretary.

A Liberal caucus was held on Sunday afternoon in the Royal Hotel at which there were present Hon. Mr. Cushing, Hon. W. T. Finlay, Messrs. J. H. Binns, Wilson, O'Connor and N. Binder of Edmonton. Afterwards Mr. Cushing went to church.

Last Wednesday night Mr. Magrath dropped into the Magrath Clubrooms unannounced. Although no notification had been sent out there were fully 200 crowded into the room, and a fine programme of music and speeches was provided.

Hon. Mr. Cushing was in the city yesterday and attended the Methodist Church. As Mr. Cushing is supposed to be on his way to electioneer East of here, he was undoubtedly taking a long farewell of things religious and churchy. His missionary ardor is to be directed towards the reclaiming of doubtful constituents.

After the Duncan Marshall meeting in Lethbridge, the professional mountebank said to a friend, "I don't know what was the matter, but I couldn't seem to get the people with me tonight." The "matter" is that the people are getting on to Marshall's twaddle and big Jolly that has heretofore served. It's good-bye Marshall, now.

Cranbrook Herald:—The funeral of the late Chief Pennyquick, of the Fernie police force, took place this morning at 10.30 from the undertaking parlors of W. R. Beatty, the Rev. Flewelling conducting the service. The casket was covered with the Union Jack and the service was conducted in the presence of practically all the ex-members of the R. N. W. M.P. in town. The pall bearers were Chief Dow, of the city police; F. R. Morris, of the provincial force; A. Ward, J. Angers, A. Morris and Veterinary Inspector R. M. Nyblett, of Medicine Hat.

The Ansley-Pruitt Coal Mining and Manufacturing Co. are going ahead with the erection of buildings, the laying of rails and general preparations at the mines. They will in all probability have coal on the move by the 20thof the month.

The enthusiasm for Mr. Magrath the Conservative candidate, is acknowledged even by Mr. Simmons' own paper, the Lethbridge Herald. Mr. Magrath's meeting in Lethbridge last Friday night was the largest political meeting held in that city during the campaign.

The first meeting of the Reading Club will be held on Thursday evening at eight o'clock at the residence of Mr. W. G. Rowe, corner of Main Street and Second Avenue. Work for the year will be decided on and a good attendance is requested.

Very successful anniversary services were held in the Baptist church on Sunday, large congregations attending morning and evening. The Rev. Benj. B. Goodfield, B.A., of Red Deer, conducted the services. Last evening Mr. Goodfield delivered a lecture on "John Bull."

Things are being made interesting for a boarder at one of the local hotels. The man is a strike-breaker and makes himself generally obnoxious by his table manners. The other day some of the boys flavored his hat with limburger cheese, and for some time he was socially ostracised.

Mr. Simmons has imported a German from Edmonton to do his work among the Germans in the Irvine district. Is this man Binder paid in the same way as is Duncan Marshal, the political carpet-bagger and professional mountebank who draws $60 a week for telling funny stories and converting any old Liberal graft scheme which no respectable man would dare force? Binder will not get paid so much, but someone pays him and it is not likely to be the candidate.

J. Bowen Davis, who has just completed a six months' term in jail at Lethbridge for obtaining money under false pretenses, was brought up to the city during the week end by Sergt. Humby. Yesterday he appeared before Inspector Parker for similar offences alleged to have been committed in Medicine Hat, and was sent up for trial. Davis, it will be remembered, was arrested over six months' ago in Medicine Hat, where he had been soliciting subscriptions for the Canadian Courier and the Ladies' Home Journal.

Maple Creek News:—Mr. Jack McCullough of Medicine Hat was the guest of Frank Irwin over Sunday.

Maple Creek News:—Mr. Gorrell of the Merchants Bank Medicine Hat, arrived in town Monday to take Mr. Watson's position as teller, the latter, we regret to say, being confined to the hospital with typhoid fever.

Mr. and Mrs. Biette returned Saturday night from their wedding trip. They spent some time in Field and Laggan.

Ted Knight leaves on Wednesday for Medicine Hat where he will spend his vacation.—Calgary Herald.

Mr. Louis Boyer, the half-breed, who gave the Mounted Police the slip last week at Battleford, is again in the clutches of the law. This morning the alleged thief was seen in the vicinity of the town and his presence was reported to the police. Corporal Jenkyn and special constable Frank St. Denis immediately left the barracks in search of the the slippery character. At the Island off Police Point they found Boyer's horse and shortly afterwards, at 12 o'clock noon, to be precise, came across the half-breed himself, sleeping the sleep of the just. The prisoner will probably appear before Inspector Parker tomorrow.

SMOKERS.

The Magrath Club is holding a smoker to-night in the Club Rooms. There will be a musical programme and short speeches.

And, by the way, don't forget the the Liberals are holding one, too. The Magrath Club has a limit, for capacity and sorry as the officers are, the room will not hold everyone. So, three or four had better turn out to the Liberal smoker. Nobody will consider you a Liberal just because you do.

THE FAMOUS TOM MARKS.

Moose Jaw Times:—It's no use talking, Tom Marks has them all going when it comes to pulling a big house in Moose Jaw. It would be a fatal move for anyone else with as large a company as his to play Moose Jaw for nine nights, but it is safe to say that Tom Marks will have a good audience at every show.

Last night the place was almost jammed, and the crowd was delighted with the play, "In North Carolina." The specialties were good and added largely as a diversion to the main drama.

In his presentations Mr. Marks has the happy faculty of blending humor with pathos, skipping nimbly from one to the other, and giving the usual pleasurable emotions to the hearers while he is in transit. Tom Marks as Old Man Rogers, is, of course, the central figure, well supported by the whole company. Special mention might also be made of the work of Lydia Hayden, Miss Bowie and E. E. Perry.

There will be plenty of opportunities of seeing the company while in the city. A matinee is to be given Saturday afternoon.

"IT'S TIME FOR A CHANGE."

LABOR AND THE LIBERAL GOVERNMENT

Local Labor Man Shows Government Up

Challenges Local Apologists to Public Debate

Although it was only announced in a quiet way at a Magrath Club meeting on Tuesday night that a speaker would give a talk on Thursday night on the Lemieux Act, the hall was packed on the night annourced. Outside it was pouring rain and the mud was ankle deep, but fully 200, mostly railwaymen, gathered to hear one of their number express their views on what the Liberal Government has done for Labor.

The speaker was J. L. Jamieson, and what he said that night brought as much enthusiasm and carried as much conviction as any big political meeting held here. Mr. Jamieson had his subject well in hand, and touched on the main points in a convincing manner and with fine oratorical effect. Treated as the subject was from the man's standpoint the crowd followed every word easily and with the greatest interest and applauded every point vociferously.

At the door the son of the Returning Officer was distributing bills for the Liberal Association and the scheme while intended to discount what was said was turned to good advantage by the speaker, who told the boy to be sure and give one to everybody. Most of those who received the bills threw them away when they saw what they were, but the few retained were called into use to emphasize the points made by Mr. Jamieson. Even this document containing the statement that Hon. R. Lemieux has refused to alter his act, even at the request of the railway union leaders. It also showed that the telegraphers' bill was refused. The new code of rules is still in abeyance and only one matter had been considered by the Railway Commissioners.

Of course all this issued by the Liberal Association proved good Conservative literature and Mr. Jamieson was not slow in making use of it.

The speaker confined himself to the Railway Act and the Lemieux Act, and showed that while the former had been altered to what the railwaymen demanded, it had only been done after two years hard work and the expenditure by the Unions of $40,000, and changed just before a general election when the solid 40,000 vote of the working railwaymen would have meant certain defeat for the Government. Mr. Jamieson pointed out that by the Railway Act any railroad official could bring an employee into court whether there was "any harm done or not" by his breaking of the rules. Then he could deduct his fine from his pay and fire him afterwards.

"We haven't had an instance of this prosecution in Medicine Hat," said Mr. Jamieson, in a burst of indignation, "but they have in Moose Jaw. There a poor conductor badly battered up and unable to move was guarded night and day by a Mounted Policeman so that the poor injured conductor could be arrested as soon as he was well, as laid down in the Railway Act.

When the committee of the men made up of the leaders of the unions called on Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the latter told them (as shown in the bill distributed at the door) that he was afraid "the amendment as suggested might have a tendency to induce carelessness on the part of the railwaymen." But when the same committee interviewed Mr. Borden the Opposition leader said the clause was wrong undoubtedly, and being wrong there was some way to improve it, and if elected he would see to it that the clause was eliminated. It was only when Sir Wilfrid was forced to it by the plain criticism of the Conservative leader that he yielded.

A committee in Calgary had seen Dr. Stewart the Liberal candidate and he said there was nothing could be done. McCarthy, the Conservative member, closeted himself with [illegible] drew up a resolution towards the alteration of the objectionable clause, and then, in order to make sure that it was passed, handed it over to the Government to introduce as their own measure. McCarthy had taken no credit for this, but it was made known by the railwaymen themselves. Laurier had admitted there was something wrong but delayed pushing the amendment the Opposition, in the meantime was afraid to move for fear the Government would throw out the amendment because it was supported by the Opposition. Then Boyce, Conservative membee for Algoma asked on June 30th, why nothing was being done. The Government answered that it was under consideration. A week later with the end of Parliament in sight no move had been made and Boyce again demanded attention to the amendment. Shortly after it was passed. "I tell you," said the Jamieson, "it is to the Conservative party all through that we owe the credit of the amendment. McCarthy drew it up and the Opposition saw that it was put through before the House broke up."

The speaker dwelt at some length on the Railway Commission. Here was a body of men appointed to handle all railway matters, disputes etc., and the Government had refused to select a railwayman as a member, although not one of the Commission knows anytning about the men's side of railway affairs. Appointed as they were purely for railway work they had not a practical man among them. R. L. Borden had said that this was folly and he would see that the railwaymen had representation if he had the power. McCarthy had worked hard for it also. But the Government had turned it down.

Again, the railwaymen had endeavored to have the homestead law changed so that a man could hold his homestead by keeping his family on it, or by living up to the improvement clause without having to leave his other work to live on it himself This was urged for the railwayman, who, when he arrived at the completion of his term of usefulness on the railway would like to have a homestead to go on. As these homesteads were now being rapidly taken up it meant that when the railwaymen quit the railway they would be unable to secure a good homestead. This was defeated on a straight party vote.

The Liberals to a man voted against the suggestion, and the Conservatives all voted for it. So that it was easy to see which party was working for the railwayman.

Coming to the Lemieux Act, the railwaymen had asked to be exempted from it as it was only bringing hard feelings into the relations of the men and the companies. Under the act of 1903 the unions interviewed the railway officials criticised and were criticised and no hard feelings aroused, the whole thing being forgotten afterwards. But under the Lemieux Act the complaints were carried before a tribunal and the outspoken criticism of the unions before outsiders roused enmity in the railway officials and it was vented in the men at the first opportunity. Several instances of this were given. It was pointed out that in 35 years the public had been put to almost no inconvenience by strikers as an arrangement was always made. Now the company officials knew the men couldn't strike and they just refused everything and sat back and waited. They were naturally willing to take their chances of winning out in the arbitration. And the correspondence between the union officials and Hon. R. Lemieux was read to show what the men thought.

"The strikers in the recent strike wondered why the other organization did not help them out. Well we couldn't on account of this Lemieux Act." However just a grievance may be nothing can be done to correct it until this slow arbitration business has got to work and given a decision."

"Gentlemen," said the speaker, "I'm willing to meet Mr. Simmons, J. H. Binns, the president of the Liberal Club, or the Editor of The News in debate on this subject at any time and any place." And the crowd cheered to the echo.

"It's to the Conservatives we owe almost everything that has been done for us. And not only that but had they their way we would have had this obnoxious Lemieux Bill out of the way. To them we owe the change in the Railway Act, and R. L. Borden can be trusted to observe our interests in the future legislation. That is the party we want to vote for, gentlemen."

"I think these Liberals must be Political Scientists," concluded Mr. Jamieson, "you know we have Christian Scientists, men who believe if they have faith ills will be cured. Well these men must think that faith will cure their political ideas. They are Dreamers. They dream that they see the Strathcona Horse Barracks in Medicine Hat and expect us to dream the same.

And the labor orator sat down amid great applause.

Pettipiece Has Withdrawn

Saw No Hope of Winning

R. P. Pettipiece who was to run in the interests of the Socialists of this riding has retired from the fight. Upon his return from Halifax he found that no work had been done in his behalf, and recognizing the uselessness of running now, has withdrawn. He will perhaps run for the Provincial house.

The fight is now a straight anti-graft fight. Which do you want?

ARE YOU ON THE LIST?

The voters lists are posted up Every man of the age of 21 who has lived in Alberta one year and in the constituency 3 months prior to the writ of election has the right to vote. See if your name is on the list. If not, call at the Magrath Club and register. Your name will then be put on if you have the right to vote.

Remember that you can vote by taking the oath at the polling division in which you live, whether your name is on the voters' lists or not. Canada is looking to you to vote.

POLITICS

Political Notes.

The withdrawal of Mr. Pettipiece leave out of the question everything but the work of the present government. Are you in favor of continuing in power the grafters, or of trying another party and forcing purity into politics? "It's time for a change."

Mr. Simmons has come to the conclusion that his fight is useless. After the Irvine meeting last week, he is said to have remarked "Well I don't expect to get in, but I'm going to have a fight for my money."

The Simmons Irvine meeting was a laughable affair. Only a few went into the hall, but crowds of voters stood outside to show they were not under the influence of Government machine work. At the close of the meeting those who would vote Simmons were asked to come forwardand sign their names, and everybody left the building.

At the Liberal smoker the other night about 75 turned out to hear Dr. Calder as announced on the dodgers, but the Dr. didn't turn up. Then many of them came over to the Magrath Club where their hearts are.

"It's time for a change."

The two men who came from Calgary to Medicine Hat on Tuesday and told a Conservative on the train whom they took for a Liberal that they had a big amount ofmoney to spend in this constituency, will find their wings clipped. It is significant that the day after they arrived a prominent local Liberal went south to work for Simmons. "It's time for a change."

The farmers out Eagle Butte, Josephsburg and Rikwater way are naturally very angry at the pre-emption clause which prevents them from securing a quarter section, while new comers get all the advantages of preemption. Simmons couldn't get around the question. "It's time for a change."

Are you in favor of making millionaires out of Sifton, Burrows, Fraser etc., out of your own pocket, or would you rather have that money forthe country?

The famous trial of Bayne in Colchester, which was made such a big thing by the Liberal Press has been dropped, and it is now well known that the whole thing was a joke from beginning to end. Bayne has been found to be a personal friend of B. F. Pearson, M.P.P., the Liberal member for Colchester. So, that it is easy enough to work out that the trial was put up between Bayne and the Liberals. Not a word of the dropping of the trial has appeared in any Liberal paper.

It is the earnest wish of the Magrath Club that all who have intended to vote Liberal will read the pamphlet, "Facts vs. Slander" sent out by the local Liberal executive Those who have not read it can secure it from the Liberal Club rooms There is one copy in The Times office which is open for use. As a delightful bit of Conservative literature it is as effective as the Oliver-Simmons meeting.

Cardston Star: It is reported that Mr. W. C. Simmons the Liberal candidate, received a frost at Mountain View on Wednesday evening. At the close of the meeting when asked to remain to organize, only three persons responded.

The Liberal Government is claiming the support of Labor. Read J. L. Jamieson's address to the Magrath Club. It has developed that although there is a fair wage clause in the G.T.P. contracts one contractor at least has got 25 per cent. of his work done at $1.50 per day of ten hours. He charges $1.50 per week for board, $1 a month for medical fee and 25 cents a week for mill and three prices for stores. This uating from the provincial normal scab schedule of $1.50 for lumbers and rock men was fixed by the Department of Labor and in spite of the fact that $2.50 was being paid by the C.P.R. in the same district.

R. L. BORDEN
Leader of the Conservative Party.

In order to get a crowd at Simmons' meetings in the country last week, a dance was held after them.

Another way to corner votes is to go to those who owe you money and tell them if they don't vote Liberal they'll have to pay up immediately. If they do you'll give them more time A prominent local Liberal has been trying that game.

For your country's sake don't let Liberal money buy you. Be men, be good Canadians. It's Canada that is at stake. What do a few paltry dollars or a concession on your homestead mean when your country is at stake?

There is a paragraph in the election Act which reads as follows: "Each enumerator shall complete copies of the voters' lists. Two of the said copies for each polling division he shall forthwith post up intwo of the most public places . . . . one of the places where copies of the lists are to be posted up shall be the post office nearest to the place appointed as the polling station for the polling division." This has to be done eight days before the elections, and yet this morning (Tuesday) two of the Medicine Hat lists are not in the post office. Only another breach of the Act.

The School Board

The regular meeting of the school board was held last night at 7.30 in the secretary-treasurer's office.

Report of appointment of Mr. Assistine to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Webb was read andfiled.

Mr. Niblock's resignation from the board was read and gave rise to some discussion. Mr. Milne briefly explained Mr. Niblock's attitude, which was that the alternative was one of "high school or disintegration." The citizens preferred disintegration while Mr. Niblock was in favor of the schools. Mr. Milne was in much the same position, but as he was dropping out at the end of the term he preferred to act until that time. Mr. Colter remarked that it appeared that an entirely new board would be necessary next year. On Mr. Milne's motion the following was adopted: "The board regrets the resignation of Mr. Niblock after the very efficient services rendered to the board and expresses its appreciation of the good work he has done in the board towards bringing the schools up to the present height of efficiency, and that the secretary be instructed to forward the resignation to the council requesting them to take the necessary steps to fill the vacancy."

Mr. Brotherton stated that Miss Simpson had accepted a position on the hospital staff and it was too late to ask her to consider her resignation. A motion was carried that "the board accept the resignation with regret and express their appreciation of Miss Simpson's ability and character as a teacher."

Applications for the vacant position were read and referred to committee on teachers, as was also a communication with reference to 98 students who would shortly be graduating from the provincial normal school.

Mr. James wrote that the Aemilius Jarvis Co. had been placed in an awkward predicament in reference to the bonds, which they had sold to a client who had money awaiting delivery. Secretary [illegible] form Mr. James that the option of office of the board expires at an early date and that the board woulddraw the attention of their successors to the matter.

The secretary was authorized to borrow sufficient money to pay the accounts in connection with new school building.

On Mr. Milne's motion it was decided that the secretary write to the council demanding the payment of $10,000 owing to the board with accrued interest from the time the amount was due.

Among the many recommendations contained in the principals report, was the providing of more school accommodation for next year. Last Easter 50 new pupils entered the schools and conditions seemed to indicate that next Easter there would not be accommodation for a single beginner. As it was, to relieve con-Street school a number of pupils had gestion in Standard I. of Montreal been sent across the track to Toronto Street. Further chaages would be necessary to cope with the influx up to Christmas.

The report further called attention to the prevalence of truancy and asked the board to take some steps to put a stop to the evil.

NEW MACHINE FOR STAR THEATRE

The Star Theatre is installing the most up-to-date machinery, and in the course of a few days' time the eight horse power engine at present in use will be supplanted by an engine of 16 horse power capacity. The increased power will enable Mr. MacDonald to considerably improve the shows by the introduction of dissolving views and several new features which could not be adopted under the old conditions.

The new engine is a beautiful piece of machinery.

This week a particularly interesting series of pictures is to be thrown upon the screene.

LAYMEN'S CONVENTION.

At three o'clock Sunday afternoon a men's mass meeting was addressed by Mr. J. Campbell White of New York, who gave a description of some of the religions of India. A conference on the matter of Medicine Hat's share of missionary responsibility called forth many expressions of opinion. Mr. Rowe, on behalf of the Anglican church, said he felt that his church could undertake to raise ten or fifteen times the amount of previous years.

At another meeting in the Presbyterian church, at the close of the evening service it was decided that each church should appoint a committee and arrange for a banquet at which the matter of support for the movement shohld be discussed.

An interdenominational committee will be formed after a canvass of the church members has been carried out, and a complete scheme formulated before the end of November.

HOLDING UP THE HOMESTEADER

How The Liberals Are Trying to Win

And This is Only One Case of Many

That the Liberals are willing to resort to anything to get votes is known. That the homesteads of the hard working settlers are being used to corrupt the elections is also known. A dozen cases right in this district could be given but the following is a fair sample of what the Government stoops to for holding up the honest settler:

Irvine, Oct. 19th.

Editor of The Times:

I should like you to print in your paper the following facts in regard to one particular case in which a homestead is blocked illegally because of political malice.

Four years ago last month I filed on a homestead, N.E. ¼ sec. 6, tp. 11, range 3. I looked up the requirements as to improvements, residence, etc., in order to prove up in three years and laid my plans accordingly. Early the first spring I broke up 15½ acres, seeded it and fenced the entire quarter section. The next year I cropped 15½ again and put up three stacks of hay. The third year I summerfallowed the 15½ acres and broke up more land but as it was so excessively dry I could not quite complete the total 80 acres required to be broken. So I waited until this last spring and then completed the requirements and immediately applied for my patent.

The proper papers were made out in Medicine Hat and on the 17th of July I received a letter from Mr. J. W. Stafford, agent Dominion Lands at Lethbridge, stating that my application had been "forwarded to the Department at Ottawa for favorable consideration." Which, of course, meant everything was O.K. so far as their inspection could see.

On the 20th of August Mr. Stafford [illegible] and this time saying, "My application for patent has been rejected by the Department at Ottawa and I am to point out that where residence is completed on land other than the homestead itself, it is necessary to crop at least ten acres of the homestead each year. It appears that you did not crop any of the land during the years 1907 and 1908 and before your application can be favorably considered it will be necessary for you to crop at least ten acres."

I knew this to be a lie but before re ly ng I sent to my lawyer and obtained a copy of homestead regulations issued by the Dominion Government and I quote you here in full the clause governing the cultivation and cropping of my homestead. "A settler performing his residence duties by living in the vicinity of his homestead either with parents, or with son, daughter, brother or sister, or on land owned by him, must bring a total of at least 30 acres of the homstead under cultivation. A reasonable proportion of the cultivation must in all cases be done in each year."

You can see by this there is no stipulation whatsoever as to 10 acres of crop each year.

I wrote Mr. Stafford on August 27th, '08, saying:

"In reply to your letter of August 22nd, I beg to say that although I did not crop 10 acres each year for three years, I did crop 15½ acres each of the first two years and summer fallowed the third year, which made a total of 31 acres cropped." In order to prove that I am a bonafide settler I also stated that on other land, near by and better adoptedto cultivation I had broken and cropped 265 acres, reserving the balance of my homestead for hay land. I begged him to forward my letter to Ottawa that the mistake might be righted.

He replied on Sept. 2nd, "I beg to inform you that until you have complied with the conditions stated in my communication to you of the 22nd ultimo no further action can be taken in connection with your application for patent for the N.E. ¼ sec. 6, tp. 11, range 3."

As you see from the above I am thus requested to crop 10 acres more making 41 acres in all, while the Dominion law only requires me to "bring under cultivation" 30 acres and says nothing whatever about cropping.

The reader may draw his own conclusions from the above facts. As to my own, I believe that because I became disgusted with the Liberal party, I am thus illegally and undeservedly oppressed.

Sincerely yours,
GEO. P. WHITE.

In addition to the above Mr. White was told by a Liberal to see Simmons, who would fix it up all right. Mr. White refused to do this as he does not recognize Simmons right to interfere.

MONEY FLOWING IN

Money has been in evidence for the past ten days and there is undoubtedly a large amount in this district being used to influence votes.

Last week two strangers came down from Calgary carrying very carefully a small grip. They asked the porter who a certain man on board was, and were given a name which they evidently knew to be a solid Liberal name in this city. Accordingly they got into conversation with the man and told him their errand thinking it was all in the party. As it happened, however, the porter had given the wrong name, amd a Conservative instead of a Liberal heard the story. The men said they had $200,000 to send in the four south constituencies of Alberta, because the Liberals were very doubtful of them. They batted the grip and said Medicine Hat's share was there. They got off the train here and the next day drove south. A local Liberal leader went south the same day.

Are we going to keep in power a party that holds the homesteader up, that floods money into the district and wins by corruption only?

"It's time for a change."

C. A. MAGRATH.
Conservative Candidate In This Constituency.

Be sure and hear C. A. Magrath at the Opera House on Thursday night.

Business Change

Mr. A. E. Whiffin has sold out his wholesale liquor business on South Railway Street to Mr. W. B. Marshall. The business will be managed by Mr. N. Charlton, at present of the city treasurer's office.

SAN FRANCISCO OPERA CO.

Big Opera Company in Medicine Hat Next Friday and Saturday Nights.

Themost brilliant musical event of an operatic nature ever offered in Medicine Hat is the San Francisco Opera Company billed to present "The Toymaker" on Friday night and "The Strollers" on Saturday night next, October 23rd and 24th. For two years and a half Mr. Healy the manager of the San Francisco Co. has earned for his organization the reputation of being the best high opera company in America. In every city along the Pacific Coast from Vancouver to Los Angeles, they hold records for large patronage. In Calgary and Edmonton where they have recently played all previous records for big box office receipts were completely exceeded, and this week they are doing the biggest business of the season at the Walker Theatre in Winnipeg. Messrs. Willis and Cosgrove managers of the Lyric theatre Calgary, have given a large guarantee for Mr. Healy to return over the C.P.R. and present his company in some of the best cities along the line. From previous appreciation of good musical attractions shown by the people of Medicine Hat, Messrs. Willis and Cosgrove have arranged two nights here, feeling sure every one will cooperate to make this notable engagement a financial success.

MISSIONARY SPEAKS.

On Sunday Rev. J. L. Stewart of West China spoke in the Methodist and Presbyterian churches ard gave two of the most interesting addresses heard in the city for a long time. In the morning Mr. Stewart touched on the work of the young missionary in China, and spoke of the remarkable development of the Chinese.

In the evening Mr. Stewart held a large congregation in rapt attention while he traced some of the history of the Chinese Empire from the days of the first European traders to the mighty awakening of recent years.

Louis Boyer was brought up before Mr. Kealy on Friday, charged with stealing $40 from Brower. The accused pleaded guilty to the theft of $26 and was sentenced to six months imprisonment at Lethbrige, with hard labor.

On Saturday the 10th inst., W. Craft laid information against Robert ssault. When Cor. poral Constable Meyrick cal 's house on Ross St., the man evaded them and later obtained cash in town. He was arrested at 6 o'clock in the evening in the bar of the American Hotel. Tried the same evening McAulay was found guilty and sentenced to 30 days imprisonment at Lethbridge.

J. Bowen Davis appeared before Inspector Parker on Monday, the 12th inst., charged with obtaining money from J. K. Drinnan under false pretenses. The accused had represented himself to Mr. Drinnan as a servant of the Rat Portage Lumber Co., and on the strength of this obtained cash on a draft which afterwards proved to be a bogus one. Davis was committed for trial.

The Case of John Lehr Jr.

Merely Newspaper Copy

The Case of John Lehr Jr.

A sensational report has been published in several papers as to suspected foul play in reference to the sudden disappearance of John Lehr Jr., of Josephsburg. The young man who disappeared from the district on September 24, is the adopted son of the John Lehr who brought action against the Dreamers some months ago for the alleged burning of his house. Young Lehr, it appears, has several times expressed a wish to go to Montana and also to work in the coal mines. It is thought that he has left to gratify his wanderlust, and the Mounted Police, who are investigating the case, are convinced that there was no foul play on the part of the Dreamers. As a matter of fact, the police have recently been working with the Dreamers in regard to some horse-stealing cases, and the sect have every reason for keeping on good terms with the laws.

ATHLETICS

London, Oct. 10.—The English long distance runners again went down to the foreigners today, when Henry Siret, a Frenchman, won the Marathon race over the course from Windsor to the Stadium. It was organized by the London News.

It was a close and exciting finish, as Siret got home by only 400 yards from White of Ireland. Heywood, England was third.

The time of the winner was 2 hrs. 33 mins. 4 sec.

The race started in the Windsor great park, Prince Christian sending the runners off at the appointed hour Siret, the winner, beat the time made by Hayes when he won the Marathon race at the Olympic trials, by 20 minutes 17 seconds. The Frenchman had just before coming to England competed in the 26 mile race organized by the Secolo newspaper of Milan and was placed third after starting fifteen minutes later.

In the events at the Stadium, Eastman of Canada was the winner in the 100 yards dash, with Todd, England, second, and Postle, Australia tuird.

New York, Oct. —Deaths from heart disease increased last week, due, the health department physicians say, to the acute baseball situation; last week the deaths were 154 as compared with 129 for the week corresponding in 1907.

London, Oct. 12.—In the professional sculling race, for the English championship, which carries with it the world's championship, rowed today over the Kew to Putney course, Ernest Barry defeated George Towns the Australian by two lengths, after a hard fought race, in which the Antipodean led for the first half, the time being 21 mins., 12 2-5 seconds.

Barry won the toss and chose the Surrey side, which side Towns said he would choose if he won the toss. Towns went away with thelead, and when Hammersmith Bridge was reached, one mile and six and a half furlongs from the start, Barry was catching up slightly, Towns leading by three-quarters of a length.

But in the next mile Barry caught up and passed him, and was leading at Barnes Bridge. Just before Stratton Gentry coal wharf, at Mortlake, was reached, Barry was leading by two and a half lengths, and although Towns spurted he only succeeded in reducing this by half a length.

HANS WAGNER'S EXPLANATION

Hans spread his huge frame out on an empty soap box and made a very wry face when asked to explain his system of hitting the ball, says a New York writer. He rebelled outright when pushed for an answer to the question' "How did you come to be the greatest hitter in the world?"

"The main reason, I suppose," he finally replied, "is because the scorers gave me the most hits." There was no getting around that answer. It was straight on the nose. Finding a cross-examination useless, the big fellow was steered into a general conversation, and that is when he got down to cases.

"It's no use trying to make a study of pitchers," he observed. "The only way I have ever been able is to study the ball. The minute a batter begins figuring on what kind of a curve the pitcher is going to give him he gets nervous and will be fooled more than half the time. The batter must simply watch the ball, and if he sees it is coming within easy reach of his bat, he must step out and meet it. Most any batter after he has reached the big league can tell which way the ball is going to curve the minute he sees it start. All this bluff about a pitcher sending in an outcurve when the batter is looking for a straight one and fooling him is bosh.

"The greatest faculty a batter needs is that of being able to meet the ball squarely. All batters can hit the ball, but the greater part of them do not hit it squarely. The art of placing a batt is not nearly as necessary as the art of hitting it on the nose. If you hit a ball squarely on the nose with a good swing it will fall safe nine times out of ten, no matter in what direction it goes.

"While judging the ball is an art in itself, explained Hans, "making the bat land where you aim is more important. Many batters know exactly where a ball is coming, but they swing so hard that they lose their balance and do not hit where they intend to. It is not the pitcher who fools them. They fool themselves.

"There are two distinct kinds of good hitters," he continued, "those who use the short, choppy swing, and those who start them from the hip and come all the way around. That old notion about a batter not being able to hit a ball as far by swinging hard as he can as by chopping it is rot. Whenever those hard swings land you will see the fielders backing up to the fence.

"But there are mighty few ball players who can swing hard and not lose their aim. That is the trouble They either hit the ball too low or too high. Consequently they are thrown out on grounders or lift up flies to the outfield. You will notice that the men who hit the ball hard are the good batters. Look at Mike Donlin and Lajoie. Both of these fellows sting the ball every time they meet it. No lightlicks for theirs. On the other hand, Willie Keeler chops scientifically and wins out on his ability to place the ball. He can also hit it hard when he wants to. Don't fool yourself about that.

"I really think that good batters have it born in them. Very few bad batters at the start ever get to be good ones. I was a good hitter, if you'll excuse me boosting myself, when I played on the town lots. In some way I got the knack of hitting where I aimed when a kid and of course that's all there is to it. I am naturally strong in my shoulders and arms and that helped me out.

"What kind of pitchers can I hit best, did you ask?" he went on. "Well, I'll tell you—it doesn't make much difference. Sometimes I can pound a certain kind of pitcher all over the lot, and the very next game I cannot hit him at all."

Hans didn't mention it, but this was proved during a recent series in New York. On the opening day he got two two-baggers off Wiltse, the first two times up. Three days later he faced the same pitcher seven times and didn't get a hit.

"Sometimes slow pitchers get me tantalized and then again fast ones bother me. It's altogether due to the way a fellow feels, I guess.

"The best pitchers in the world are those speedy ones who have a jump on their fast ball. The batter will know what is coming, but the ball is liable to jump differently every time. If it varies the fraction of an inch he will either hit it low or too high. Somehow, I like to hit a fast ball, though. There is a certain feeling in the batter's handwhen the bat lands squarely on a fast one that is pleasing. It's pretty hard to explain it, but any ball player will know what I mean.

"The fellow who is considered a good hitter has many advantages over the man who is far down the line," was a rather surprising statement from Hans. "I'll tell you why," he said. "The man who is put well up the list is put there because he is supposed to hit the ball when given a signal. That is, he must be sure, and hit it somewhere whether safely or not. Often he is given a signal to hit for the 'hit and run' play. If the shortstop should happen to cover second and the batter hits the balltoward left he will send the ball right through the vacated position and get a hit, when otherwise he would have been thrown out easily.

"Oh, you can talk about the hitting business all you want to" concluded Hans, with a half yawn, "but I guess Willie Keeler sized the thing up when he said the secret of hitting was to hit the ball where the man ain't.

A MAGISTRATE INVESTIGATED ZAM-BUK.

Says it is a Wonderful Healer and Does More Than is Claimed for it.

No household remedy in existence has won such glowing tributes from people in high places as has Zam-Buk. Mr. Roger F. Perry, Justice of the Peace for British Columbia, tested this famous balm and this is what he says of it:

"The Pavilion.
"Goldsfields, B.C.

"To the Zam-Buk Co.,

"Gentlemen,—After a very fair trial I have proved Zam-Buk eminently satisfactory. In my case it cured a skin rash of five years standing which no doctor had been able to do any good for.

"I would certainly encourage any person to keep Zam-Buk in their home. It truly does even more than you claim for it. For my own part I would not now be without it inthe house. Yours very truly.

(Signed) "Roger F. Perry,
"Justice of the Peace for B.C.'

Zam-Buk differs from ordinary salves and embrocations, for while these mostly contain animal oils and fats, Zam-Buk is purely herbal. It soothes and heals cuts, sores, ulcers, eruptions, boils, ecz ema, chafing sores, etc. In the household it is the handiest possible remedy for burns, scalds children's injuries. It instantly cleanses any wound to which it is applied; prevents festering, inflammation, or blood poisoning. It cures piles, varicose ulcers, and fistula. All druggists and stores sell it at 50 cents a box, or from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto for price, 6 boxes for $2.50.

MACHINERY FOR HORSES AND CATTLE.

A. P. Burns is offering to exchange any of his big stock of Frost & Wood farm machinery, including binders, mowers, rakes, seeders, discs, plows, harrows, also the famous Lorne wagons and the Brantford buggies for good horses and cattle.

Dominion Grange.

The following circular has been issued by the Dominion Grange of Canada. It has been sent out to all parts of Canada from the headquarters of the Grange at Burlington, Ont. While discussing many economic questions in a controversial way, it is absolutely condemnatory of the extravagance of the Laurier Administration, and is significant as coming from an organization which includes a large number of the intelligent and progressive farmers of Ontario. The circular reads as follows: To all Subordinate Granges:—

The Executive of the Dominion Grange respectfully directs the attention of all members of subordinate Granges to the opportunity which the pending Dominion election affords for pressing forward certain demands to which the Grange has on more then one occasion committed itself. We do not ask that any member of a subordinate Grange shall abandon the party with which he is allied. What we do ask is that all those who are connected with either one of the great party organizations shall endeavor to make use of that organization to advance the reforms which the Grange has been steadily urging for years. This can be done by endeavoring where nominations have not yet been made, to secure the nomination of candidates in sympathy with our views, by pressing, by letter or personal interview, those views on candidates already in the field, by making the questions in which we are so keenly interested, subjects of discussion at meetings to be held during the campaign about to open.

The Chief Objections

Chief among the subjects on which the Grange has pronounced, so far as Federal questions are concerned, are the following:—

1. The salary grab.
2. Military expansion.
3. Bounties to private interests.
2. Railway subsidies.
5. Increasing expenditure.
6. The tariff.

We believe all increase in the sessional indemnity of members of Parliament to $2,500 was wholly uncalled for, and has been one of the chief causes of the waste of time in useless discussion at Ottawa, with all this involves in adding to the general cost of legislation. We believe $1,500 an ample allowance for all the time that the members of a business Parliament really need to spend at Ottawa. We also disapprove of the annual vote of $7,000 to the leader of the Opposition.

Eighteen years ago our expenditure on militia and mounted police, aside from cost of armories, was a little over $1,000,000. In 1906, the last full year for which official figures are available, the cost of the same services was $6,000,000. In the expenditure on armories, which is carried out under the Public Works Department, a proportionate increase has taken place. It is now proposed to go still further in this same direction and make military training a compulsory part of the Public school system. Against this tendency to emulate the military madness of Europe farmers, on whom the chief burden of all this falls, should make vigorous protest.

Opposition to Bounties

According to the Canadian year book, issued by the Department of Agriculture, there was paid out in bounties to iron and steel manufacturers, by the Dominion Government in the thirteen years from 1895 to 1907, inclusive, over nine and one-half million dollars. This money was not paid for goods bought by and delivered to the Government. It was an absolutely free gift by the Government to this favored interest.

Nor is the iron and steel industry the only beneficiary of this county system. From 1882 to 1907, inclusive, over $4,000,000 was paid in bounties to the fishermen of Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. In the nine years ending with 1907, thesum of $772,813 was paid in lead bounties, and in three years ending with 1907, petroleum producers received $907,757 in the same way. Farmers on whom the chief burden of meeting these exactions falls, should unite in demanding a discontinuance of the whole system.

Between the beginning of the fiscal year of 1884 and the end of the short year of 1907, a period subsequent to the $25,000,000 donation to the Canadian Pacific, almost the even thirty-five and a half million dollars was paid out of the Federal treasury in railway subsidies. In addition to this, millions of acres of land have been granted by the Dominion and the various provinces. Many of these subsidies were granted for lines in parts of Ontario settled for 100 years. These lines pay a little more than nominal taxation, while in adjoining states railways, built without subsidy, pay $400 per mile and more in taxation. Surely the time has come for farmers to insist that, no matter which partymay succeed in the coming election, this particular form of misappropriating the people's funds shall absolutely cease and determine.

The Increase in Expenditure

Eighteen years ago the total disbursements of the Dominion Government under all heads, was less than $42,000,000. In 1906, the last full year for which we have official figures, the total was over eighty-three and one-quarter millions. The appropriations for the current fiscal year, aside from the railway subsidy voted, amounted to over $180,000,000. True the country has expanded and population has increased, but expenditure has run far ahead of development, and it is up to farmers, who stay on the ground, whose capital is in a sense fixed and immovable, to demand that a check shall be put upon this rapid increase in an annual burden which rests mainly on their shoulders.

In 1906, the last full year forwhich we have the official figures, $173,000,000 worth of goods, subject to duty were imported into Canada, and the amount paid in duties on those imports was $46,671,000. This was at the rate of nearly 27 per cent. In other words, the first cost of a dollars worth of goods was increased to $1.27 by the tariff. By the time the profits of the wholesale and retail merchants were added on, the cost was at least $1.40. And this is not all. By reason of the protection afforded home manufacturers the latter were put in a position to add a proportionate amount to the selling price of $718,000,000 worth of manufactured goods produced in this country. Still, in the face of all this manufacturers are seeking to secure an addition to the protection now enjoyed by them. They are endeavoring to obtain this by working through both great political parties. It is up to farmers to use the same means to compel a reduction, rather than an increase in the burdens imposed.

Our brethren in Michigan some years ago carried on a similar campaign in the matter of railway taxation. They made use of their connection with both political parties in that State to urge the fair taxation of railways, and as a result railways in Michigan to-day pay about $400 per mile in taxation, as against $100 here. By following the example so well set, we may secure the reforms herein advocated.

Inside History of Famous Crow's Nest Co. Deal.

Senator Robert Jaffray has at last made a statement about the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company, and the Crow's Nest Pass Railway company It took a long time to incubate the story and now it is clear to the Toronto Globe and Senator Jaffray that neither the Globe nor Senator Jaffray, nor Senator Cox had received a dollar, or an acre of land from the Liberal Government in theCrow's Nest Pass transactions. But nobody over said they did.

Might Give Information

Indeed, Senator Jaffray tries to make it clear that he bought with good, honest money Crow's Nest stock and he brought it only after the Canadian Pacific had arranged with the government to donate back 250,000 acres to the Crow's Nest company. Senator Jaffray, according to his story, made a straight, out and out commercial purchase of shares in the Crow's Nest Coal company after the government and the Canadian Pacific and the British Columbia promoters had arranged for the building of the railroad. To simple and innocent minded to believe Senator Jaffray's story, neither the editor nor Senator Cox had anything to do with fixing up the matter between the Canadian Pacific and the government. They had apparently nothing to do with the Canadian Pacific paying $85,000 and deeding back 250,000 acres of coal land to the Crow's Nest company. When that trade between the government and the people who owned the Columbia and Southern Railway charter was completed Robert Jaffray bought stock in the company and paid for it and became its president. Perhaps to allay suspicion anddoubt and unkindly thoughts Senator Jaffray had best make a clean breast of it and tell how much stock he bought and how much money he paid for it. The people have no interest whatever in railroad tariffs but they are interested to find out how Senator Cox and Senator Jaffray happened to edge in or rubberneck into the control and management of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal company.

Fool Babes and Sucklings

Senator Jaffray's story is written to fool babes and sucklings, but it will fool nobody. It will make people who know George Cox and Robert Jaffray laugh. They will laugh loud and long for there are lots and lots of people who know the true story of the Crow's Nest Coal Company and how Robert Jaffray and George Cox wedged their way or broke into the transaction.

The whole story is luminous. An Englishman, William Fernie, had discovered coal in the Crow's Nest Pass and in 1890 a group of business men in Victoria organized a company to build a railroad and develop these coal mines. The British Columbia government gave them a railway charter and a grant of four hundred thousand acres, conditional to the building of their line. Colonel Baker, brother of the celebrated Baker Pasha, and at that time minister of mines and lands in British Columbia, was the most active of all in promoting the Columbia and Southern railway to develop the Crow's Nest Coal mine. He plagued all the railroad men in the continent about the mineral resources of the Kootenay and Crow's Nest coal, but through the Tupper government offered an additional $5,000 a mile for the building of the Crow's Nest railroad, neither Mr. J. J. Hill nor Sir William Van Horne were tempted to undertake the enterprise.

Heinze Makes Contract

In the fall of 1895 F. A. Heinze entered in a contract with the British Columbia government to build a smelter at Trail and to build a railroad to Trail and Rossland and another road from Trail to the boundary, and received a railroad charter for the Columbia and Western railroad and a grant of20,000 acres of land per mile. Having built the Trail smelter and a railroad to Rossland, he entered into an agreement with Col. Baker and the owners of the Columbia and Southern charter and land grant to build the Columbia and Southern railroad to secure a proper supply of coke for the great smelter works he planned. Heinze and Governor Dawdney, of British Columbia, then went to London to make the arrangements to finance the building of this railroad. This was in 1896. Burdett-Coutts offered to arrange the financing, but the Canadian Pacific suddenly realized the great importance of the Kootenays and started to block Heinze. Moreover, the Conservatives were overthrown and the Laurier government installed in power, and Heinze found himself compelled to leave London and to return to Ottawa. He had to find out if the Liberal government would continue the subsidies promised by the Tupper government.

Needed the Road.

The success of Heinze's whole smelting and mining and railroad operations in British Columbia depended on cheap coal and coke. The building of the Columbia and Southern railway was to him a matter of life and death, and the British Columbia government was helping him in order to develop the resources of that province. The Canadian Pacific railroad was most anxious to build that Columbia and Southern railway themselves and to get possession of the charter and the land grant. In 1896 there was no question but the railroad would be built. It was merely a question whether the Columbia and Western Railway company or the Canadian Pacific Railway company should build it. This was the actual position of affairs when the Laurier government assumed office. Then while Heinze was still in London negotiating with Burdett-Coutts, Robt. Jaffray and George Cox heard about the Crow's Nest coal deposit and the rivalry between Heinze and the Canadian Pacific for their possession. Messrs. Cox and Jaffray controlled the Toronto Globe, the great Liberal organ, and that gave both these eminent and highly respectable gentlemen unbounded pull with the Laurier administration. Messrs. Cox and Jaffray got hold of Colonel Baker, and Colonel Baker knowing their power with the Globe and government, listened to their story andtold them that he was open to do business with them the moment his contract with Heinze expired. Thereupon Mr. Jaffray rushed to Montreal and sought an interview with Sir William Van Horne to find out whether the Canadian Pacific would not combine with Cox and Jaffray to secure the Columbia aod Southern charter away from Heinze. Sir William Van Horne knew that Cox and Jaffray owned the Toronto Globe and had an omnipotent pull at Ottawa, and of course told Jaffray that he would gladly deal with anyone who could help the Canadian Pacific to get the Crow's Nest charter and aid the company in securing desirable subsidies from the Laurier government. Senator Jaffray and Senator Cox and the Toronto Globe were the very influences which the Canadian Pacific wanted to secure the Crow's Nest enterprise away from Heinze.

Keeps Story Hidden.

This part of the Crow's Nest story Robert Jaffray keeps carefully hidden away. He may think it slander to tell it, but multitudes know it, and there is no reason why Sir William Van Horne and Colonel Baker and hundreds of other people who know it should hide it. Sir William Van Horne wanted that charter and he wanted it bad, and the men that could deliver it controlled the Toronto Globe and had an omnipotent pull at Ottawa, and the Canadian Pacific had to deal with them.

George Blair, the minister of railways, made a sturdy fight for Heinze but the Toronto Globe was too powerful, and Heinze sold out his Columbia and Western railway and his smelter at Trail to the Canadian Pacific and abandoned the field to Geo. Cox, Robert Jaffray and the Canadian Pacific.

Raised the Subsidy.

Then the cards were shuffled and the Laurier government raised the Tupper subsidy from $5,000 a mile to $11,000 a mile, or an increase of $2,000,000 in cash. The Canadian Pacific got one hundred thousand acres, twenty-five per cent. of the land subsidy given by the British Columbia government, and the Dominion 50,000 acres, and the Cox and Jaffray people turned up in control of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal company. Robert Jaffray and George Cox were the controlling factors in the Crow's Nest company and the Canadian Pacific donated it $85,000 and deeded to it 250,000 acres of the coal lands that British Columbia had given as bonus for the building of the Crow's Nest railway.

Moreover, the Canadian Pacific bound itself to mine no coal for ten years, so that the Cox and Jaffray concern might have a free hand and a monopoly. Then the Cox and Jaffray people drew Mr. J. J. Hill and the Great Northern railway into the company, and finally gave him the control and management and direction of this great and rich Canadian coal company, out of which Cox and Jaffray have made millions.

C.P.R. Had to Give Up Lands

All the world knows that Cox and Jaffray succeeded in breaking into the Crow's Nest enterprise because they controlled the Globe and onthat account had an omnipotent pull with the Laurier Government. That was why Sir William Van Horne accepted their assistance in putting Heinze out of the way and in securing the Columbia and Southern charter. That was why the Canadian Pacific had to give up 350,000 acres of these coal lands to a company controlled by Cox and Jaffray and $85,000 in money besides. But, then, the Laurier government raised the subsidy to $11,000, and thus enabled the Canadian Pacific to give Cox and Jaffray the 250,000 acres.

In future when Robert Jaffray rushes into print and take about slander, let him remember the words of the queen in Hamlet, "Methinks the lady doth protest too much."

Our Unfair Representation

An interesting and instructive paper has just been read before the Canadian Society of Social Economy by Mr. J. B. Archambault, on the subject of the representation of the people in Parliament. Mr. Archambault maintains that Parliament is not a fair exposition of the political views of the country, for the reason that it gives to one party a degree of voting strength to which it is not entitled, while it withholds from the other party the power which the people have endeavored to confer upon it. The figures of the last election, according to his calculation ought to give the Liberals 113 seats and the Conservatives 100. In practice, however, they give the Liberals 138 seats and the Conservatives 75.

When the statistics are closely examined it appears that every Conservative member represents 6,504 electors, while every supporter of the Government represents but 3,886. The disproportion is very marked in Quebec. There 144,991 electors elected 54 Liberals to Parliament, while 111 538 other electors returned 11 Conservatives. In other words, every supporter of the Government from Quebec speaks for 2,685 people, while every member of the Opposition from the same province speaks for 10,139 people. In Nova Scotia the situation is much worse. There were polled in that province 55,743 Liberal votes, and 46,299 Conservative votes This expression of opinion resulted in the return to Parliament of 17 supporters of the Government and not one Conservative. Thus, in Nova Scotia 46,299 people have no voice on the floor of parliament. A strange state of affairs is also exhibited in British Columbia. There 11,683 Liberal voters elected six members, while 10,541 Conservative electors elected one member. For every 1,947 Liberal voters in British Columbia there is a representative in Parliament. For 10,541 Conservative voters from the same province there is just one member. The figures of the polling at the last general election, as given by Mr. Archambault are as follows:

Prov.	Lib. votes.	Cons. votes.	Libs.	Cons.
Ont.	220,049	223,547	38	48
Que.	144,991	111,538	54	11
N.S.	55,773	46,229	17	0
Man.	23,295	23,413	6	4
N.B.	37,302	36,493	7	6
P.E.I.	14,441	14,986	1	4
B.C.	11,683	10,541	6	1
N.W.T.	27,251	19,269	8	2
Yukon	1,495	2,113	1	0
Total	536,280	488,199	138	75

Mr. Archambault, as already mentioned, holds that this expression of opinion by the people ought to give us a Parliament composed of 113 Liberals and 100 Conservatives. Seeing that it has not this effect he urges that the law be amended so as to make the House of Commons truly representative to the people.

It is to be remembered, however, that the inequality is produced, not altogether by the law, but, in a large measure, by the fraud practised at the polls by the ruling men. In Manitoba, for example, the Laurier Government franchised more than 9,000 electors at the last election as a part of its scheme to hold the country contrary to the will of the people; while elsewhere its agents stuffed the ballot-boxes in a wholesale manner. The rectification of the representation is one of the necessities of the period. But as a preliminary to that operation we ought to have the dishonesty which now renders the present system so bad driven out. Let the country declare that the ballot-boxes shall be protected from the emissaries of Laurier, and that the votes of all men shall be free and unpurchased, and the fight for a representative Parliament will be half won.

Political Nursery Rhymes

(With apologies to Mother Goose)

Mail and Empire.

Sing a song of slickness,
Grafters very spry,
Four and twenty timber berths
Offered on the sly.
When the bids were opened
They sold to the "Ring,"
Wasn't that a dairty way
To do a crooked thing?

Hey-Diddle-Diddle, the man in the middle,
The price jumped up very soon.
The Minister laughed as he offered the dish,
And the Middleman filled his spoon.

Laurier, airy, smooth and wary,
Where does the money go?
Timber steals and crooked deals
And grafters all of a row.

There once was a Premier
Whose prospects were blue,
He had so many scandals
He didn't know what to do.
He smothered them and buried them,
At least so he said,
But somehow or other
They would not stay dead.

Mark—mark—the easy mark;
The Grafters are coming to town,
Some for land; a hungry band,
And some for money down.

Bye, Baby Bunting.
Laurier votes is hunting;
Fielding is appealing,
Pugsley's still a-squealing;
Graham is amusing,
Others are condoning sin
To rope disgusted Liberals in.

COUPLE OF DOSES CURED.

Mrs. W. J. Wilson, Tessier, Sask., tells of her experience in the following words:—"I wish to tell you of the good I have found in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. Last summer my little girl, aged two years, was taken ill with Summer Complaint, and as my mother always kept Dr. Fowler's in the house when I was a child, I seemed to follow her example as I always have it also. I at once gave it to my baby as directed and she was at once relieved, and after a couple of doses were taken was completely cured."

The Pollards.

The forty pretty, witty and talented children who compose the Pollard Lilliputian Opera Company will return to the Opera House, Monday, October 26th, for an engagement of one night, and will present "Floradora." Every one who was fortunate enough to see these children during their former engagement will testify to an artistic ability which many an adult company are striving to attain. The only small thing about the Pollard Company is the stature of its individual members and whatthey lack in this respect is more than made up in cleverness.

The True History

The apology of Le Canada, the Government organ in Montreal to Hon. Geo. E. Foster brings to mind the facts in connection with the land deals of Mr. Foster which have been so generally described by the Liberal press as "taking from the mouth of the poor orphan and widow the bread which their fathers and husbands had given them." It was for saying this Le Canada apologized and did it very humbly. Mr. Foster has entered action against J. W. Levesque of Laval for saying similar things.

Something less than three years ago the Dominion Government roused perhaps by the insurance scandals that had been revealed in the United States appointed a commission to examine into Canadian insurance companies. Some say the commission was for this purpose; others assert that it was for the delving into matters connected with Hon. G. E. Foster. Whichever is true the latter was an end in view as developments proved.

At that time there was a judge with a most unenviable reputation—Judge McTavish—who seemed to be best fitted for the work. This McTavish had been the judge in the celebrated West Elgin Commission and had reported, in defiance of the confessions of guilt by the principal offenders, that no wrong had been committed in this notoriously corrupt election. This judge was in receipt of his regular salary as judge, but for this work the Government added $30 a day.

Then for counsel the Government secured the services of G. F. Shepley K.C., paying him $25,000 for his work. With him was associated Mr. Tilley, a Toronto lawyer and to him was handed over $13,700. And the Commission was ready for work.

Some days had been spent in a desultory glance at a few of the insurance companies. The Hon. Geo. A. Cox, who was at the head of a number of companies such as The Canada Life and the Imperial Life, had been allowed to go with a part of a day's appearance at court, although his companies are as large as all the other insurance companies put together. People began to wonder if the Commission was just another of the great graft games to put a few thousands in the pockets of some favorites.

And then things got interesting. The $30 a day judge, the $25,000 lawyer, the $14,000 lawyer sat up and began to work. The Union Trust Company and The Foresters Order were under inspection. Hon. G. E. Foster was asked some questions and then a galaxy of witnesses were called. For a long time nothing developed; but a $25,000 lawyer had to earn part of what he is paid for, and he never tired. And at last the horrible thing came to light.

Hon. Geo. E. Foster had used some money belonging to the Union Trust Co., for land speculation, and had made money on it for humself and Union Trust Co., now it must be remembered that the Union Trust Co. handles the funds of the Foresters and that is the ground for all the twaddle about the "money of orphans and widows."

Then it was declared that Mr. Foster received a commission on the land he bought. Well, if he could get it from the sellers, why shouldn't he? It must be remembered that the Hon. G. E. Foster merely borrowed the money from the Union Trust Co. And this is only an ordinary form of business in financial companies. For instance, every bank that was ever organized lends to its directors; or in other words the managers of these financial institutions use the money of the institutions for their own purposes—and no one has ever said a word about it. This is exactly what Hon. G. E. Foster did. Do those bank directors turn over to the bank the profit they make out of their use of the moneys?

And these are all the facts revealed, except that Mr. Montague, secretary of the Foresters and Dr. Oronhyatekha the head of the order were engaged with Mr. Foster in some of these transactions, and therefore the men who controlled the funds were all interested.

But most important for consideration in all this "exposure" was the fact that although the commission spent several days on the matter, after occupying only a few hours with the larger companies of a Liberal like Cox, Judge McTavish positively refused not only to allow Mr. Foster to secure a lawyer for his defence BUT WOULD NOT PERMIT HIM EVEN TO QUESTION THE WITNESSES. The investigation was so openly "cooked" that even the Liberal papers of Ontario did not conceal their contempt. Can anyone imagine fairness in an investigation that allowed not one word of defence that had absolute control of the witnesses called, that was entirely in charge of one side to a discussion.

THE HON. GEO. E. FOSTER WAS FORCED TO SIT DUMB WHILE HIS POLITICAL OPPONENTS CALLED ONLY WHOM THEY PLEASED AS WITNESSES, ASKED ONLY WHAT QUESTIONS THEY DESIRED, AND DREW OUT ONLY WHAT INFORMATION SUITED THEIR PURPOSE. Was there any attempt at fairness in that?

In short the whole matter upon which the Hon. Geo. E. Foster, against whom no other charge has ever been made, the best finance minister Canada ever had, the man whom the Deputy Minister of Finance for many years up to a couple of years ago described as the "most painstaking conscientious and thorough minister he ever sat under"—the whole matter upon which he is condemned by the partisan Liberals was a cooked investigation, managed by political opponents, carried on by a Judge with an undesirable record, and handled with an eye only to one purpose the sullying of the reputation of a strong opponent.

In the recent clamor regarding Foster, the reverend politician of The Globe has been the leader. With the control of a big paper he made himself heard. But when the man he was accusing in his paper and on the platform challenged him to a joint meeting at any time, the Rev. Macdonald "flunked." He daren't meet the man he was accusing of every dirty thing in the dirty vocabulary at his command. The ministerial coward published a couple of letters. Mr. Foster quietly requested to see the letters and was refused. In fact the accused man has tried by every means to meet his gowned accuser and answer him while the charges were hot, but the reverend gentleman who has sold himself to a corrupt party slinks into his office an locks his door while he pens more accusations.

In every stage of the game the Liberals have given the Hon. Geo. E. Foster no chance to defend himself. But the people will speak, and that loudly.

How Will You Vote

On Monday, October 26th the electors will be asked to cast their votes in support or condemnation of the present Government. And the question is a serious one.

If you say you are going to vote Liberal, what are your reasons?

Do you consider the Liberal party responsible for the good times? Then they are just as responsible for the good times in the States. And they are assuredly responsible for the hard times and tight money of the first half of this year.

Do you like the Liberal Tariff plank better? They have only reduced the tariff one half of one per cent. on dutiable goods in twelve years. At any rate it is United States manufacturing enterprise that is the aim in Canada, and this was brought about by the highest tariff in the world, and has made goods cheaper in the United States than anywhere in the world, as well as increased the wages of the workingmen. Protection has brought them prosperity, well-filled dinner-palls and cheap manufactured goods.

Do you favor the Hudson's Bay Railway? The Conservatives introduced that scheme before they went out of power. Borden has sworn to rush it along. But what is more important, if the Conservatives build it, it will be built by the Government for the people—not as the G.T.P. is being built, with Government money to cheat the people for friends of the Government.

Are you voting for the G.T.P.? Whatever the Conservative party considers of the graft in connection with the contracts for the construction, the country is bound to it now and the Conservative Government will hasten it.

Did you like the Liberal platform of '96. Everybody knows that not one plank of that platform has been lived up to.

Are you favoring the Liberal party because the West has opened up so fast during their regime? It was the C.P.R. entirely that made that possible and the Conservative Government built it with the opposition of the old MacKenzie Government. And you all know how the development is delayed by the rankness of the homestead manipulations. And you know how the West has been used to make millions for the favorites.

If you vote Liberal, but not for these reasons then why?

When you vote Liberal you sustain the Government in its colossal graft schemes, dozens of which they have never attempted to deny. If the Government sees the country supporting them after all this undefended boodling, you can imagine how utterly uncontrolled their grafting will be for the next term. Why would they reform if they feel the people behind them. Already Sifton Ilurrows, Fraser, Merwin et al have made millions out of the country are we going to hand over our revenue to another list of favorites for four years more?

The Liberals say: "What proofhave we that the Conservatives will not be as bad if they get in." No party can get as bad as the present Government in four years. Give the Conservatives a trial and if they show dishonesty, fire them and replace the Liberals. But give the Conservatives a chance, they can't be worse.

Enforce clean politics at any price.

When you vote for the Conservative party, what do you support?

1. The Halifax platform as given on another page.

2. The Hudson's Bay Railway built by the Government for the people.

3. The end of graft—of stealing the people's funds to make Sifton's wealthy.

4. The restitution to the people as far as possible of lands and funds illegally held by the favorites.

5. The harding over to Alberta of Alberta's land, instead of holding them for distribution at Ottawa.

6. Honest homesteading and protection of the rightful holders.

7. Pure politics.

8. A local candidate above suspicion.

9. The using of revenue for the people only.

10. The party that has the interests of the laboring man at heart.

Will you vote for this or for corruption?

In the name of our fair country, choose honestly.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Upon further investigation into the Cypress Hills timber limits The Times is convinced that so far as the local man interested is concerned, there have been no dealings with the Government.

In 1896 Rideau Hall cost $20,302 to run and one of the planks in the Liberal platform was a reduction of this expense. Yet during the first nine months of the last fiscal year the bills ran up to $72,652. Only another plank broken.

It is little wonder the workingmen of Canada object to the little Jap coming into this country as allowed by the Liberal Government. The wages of Jap workmen in Japan are as follows:

	Cents a day.
Blacksmiths	24
Carpenters	24 1-2
Laborers	17
Plasterers	25
Roofers	24
Saddlers	23
Printers	17 1-2
Storecutters	27 1-2
Tailors	29

Last week the Calgary Albertan published a map showing why Calgary should vote for Stewart, the Liberal candidate in that riding. The map showed the railways planned for Alberta by the Liberal Government. There are no fewer than 14 railways shown entering Calgary. BUT NOT ONE ADDITIONAL RAILWAY TOUCHES MEDICINE HAT. What is a drawing card for the Liberals in Calgary should tell against them here.

And Hon. Frank Oliver has been telling Cardston that the south country will have more railways; but he didn't tell us that. If the Liberals get in there is nothing planned for Medicine Hat.

However, the Government was kind enough to grant a charter to build a railway to a few local Liberals many years ago—men who will never spend a cent on construction, but whose holding of the charter will prevent other railways coming in. That is one of the evil effects of the promiscuous charter-giving adopted by the Liberal Government.

Hon. Mr. Lemieux has come out strongly in favor of rural delivery. This was a plank in the R. L. Borden's platform as set forth last August, but Lemieux laughed at it. Now he has adopted it as something very new and worthy of drawing votes for the Liberal party.

Although Lemieux brought down a big surplus last year the farmers and ranchers of this district could never get more than a weekly mail delivery. Josephsburg, Elkwater, Little Plume, Woolchester, Gros Ventre, Graburn, Norton, Eagle Butte and the other post offices away from the railway can't get ever a bi-weekly service, whereas right here in the Calgary district the rural mail

For Natural Gas

Adjustable Orifice Provides for All Degrees of Gas Pressure

With the aid of the little wrench shown in illustration the orifice on the "Caloric" solid air mixer can be adjusted to allow just as little or as much gas to enter the burners as best suits your requirements. This adjustable orifice thus provides for all degrees of gas pressure. And, by mixing 25 per cent. more air with the gas than is consumed by ordinary burner, the heat is greatly increased and the gas correspondingly saved. Many more big features of the "Caloric" will be explained by delivery has already started. The Calgary district farmers have mail delivered to their doors while our farmers and ranchers have to drive long distances once a week to get their mail

And then here is the fine Italian hand of the grafters. The mail boxes are made in the United States, and if you desire to take advantage of the rural delivery YOU MUST USE THIS BOX AND NO OTHER, AND YOU MUST BUY IT FROM THE GOVERNMENT. And you have to pay the price set by the Government, which price has not yet been announced. It makes no difference how satisfactory a box you mayerect yourself in order to save the expense of the new box, you can't do it. Who is getting the graft out of the mail boxes?

Don't forget in voting on the 26th that if the Conservative Government gets in the G.T.P. and the Hudson's Bay Railway will go on but with the boodle cut out.

The Saturday Sunset, an independent weekly of Vancouver, says:

The Dominion Government has not proved itself to be the friend of labor except in a vote-catching sense. It has played to the labor gallery whenever it had a toy baloon to flash and it had waylaid labor with a stuffed club when it wanted to play up to the special interests which it has taken under its wing. It entered the Japanese alliance and opened the flood gates of coolie labor when it appeared that labor was to be scarce and high for the G.T.P. contractors. Sir Wilfrid Laurier told the Manufacturers' Association amid the plaudits of cheap labor advocated that he would not be stampeded by the labor interests into denouncing the Japanese treaty. The Laurier Government a friend of labor. Faugh!

Few people realize that in spite of the fact that the Liberals had 138 seats to the Conservatives 75 in the last house, the total votes cast were 536,280 for the Liberals and 488,199 for the Conservatives. Each Conservative member represents 6,509 electors, while each Liberal member represents only 3,886 electors. The worst example of the evil effects of the gerrymander are in British Columbia, Nova Scotia and Quebec. In B.C. 11,683 Liberal voters returned 6 members, while 10,541 Conservative voters returned only one. In Nova Scotia there were 55,743 Liberals and 46,299 Conservatives, but not one Conservative member was elected.

But it is Quebec that rules Canada. It is in Quebec that Laurier has always looked for his backing. All Canada is being held up by the choice of the people with the least enlightenment in the country. Although 54 Liberals were elected to 11 Conservatives, the polling was 144,991 and 111,538 respectively.

Surely it is time the rest of Canada put Quebec in its place. Is the West going to be ruled by Quebec? So much does the Government count on Quebec that Hon. Mr. Brodeur in a recent speech in the Toulange county said: "If the Liberals lose more than ten seats in the Province of Quebec, the Laurier Government will be defeated."

In 1904, although the Liberal Government was sustained there was a Conservative vote majority of 3,498.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has appointed no fewer than seventy-five members of the House of Commons to offices of emolument under the crown. The annual income of these amounts to $350,000.

In 1884 Frank Oliver seconded a resolution setting forth that the Northwest public lands should be in the hands of the Provinces. At that time they were no use to him. Now he has changed with his position.

Just before the session closed, Sir Wilfrid rushed through estimates for wharves, breakwaters, etc., that amounted to $11,000,000. And we have to pay for these useless wharves and breakwaters to help Sir Wilfrid to hold his constituencies.

Hon. Walter Scott is to make a last effort on Saturday afternoon for Simmons. There is no danger of Scott having much influence in Medicine Hat. He is too well known here for that.

During the past few weeks Liberal campaign literature has been franked from Ottawa. Fully $100,000 expense has been incurred and the country must pay for it.

Well! Well! In its desperate arxiety to say something that appears to hit The Times, our contemporary copies again from an outside paper. The quotation is intended to prove that Lethbridge is bigger than Medicine Hat, and says some nasty things about this city. During the past few months The News has copied all the jealous knocks to Medicine Hat published by the Lethbridge Herald and the Calgary Albertan. Somebody ring a cow-bell and awaken The News up. It isn't The Times you're knocking, friend News, it's Medicine Hat you are after. Some kind friend reason with "the other paper."

It was a squelcher to The Liberals' claims for the votes of the labor men, that was given by Mr. J. L. Jamieson at the Magrath Club the other night. Will Simmons, Binns, or Forster accept the challenge?

The Calgary News answers The Times criticism of The Nemesis letter by saying that a man like Edwards has to be fought with his own weapons. It says: "If you knew that a desperado was waiting for you with a Winchester you would deem it the part of wisdom to take a 'pot-shot' at him." Yes, but if you could go out in the open and dispose of the desperado like a man you would consider it the proper thing, would you not? No man would shoot from around a corner unless forced to it. And Nemesis was not forced to shoot around the corner. He could (and therefore should in all manliness) have come out in the open and worked just as effectively, in fact with much better results as he would have had unqualified support of every paper in the West.

Under the pressure of a losing cause The Lethbridge Herald has lost control of itself and is trying a new "tack." It has now come out flat-footed in charges against Magrath. Everything has swung towards the honest, independent candidate to such an extent that the evident "soreness" of the Herald creates no surprise. It says' Mr. Magrath has never inspeech or action indicated that he had the least sympathy with the cause of labor. His identification with a great corporation has imbued him with the spirit of antagonism to organized labor."

When this was shown to a number of local labor men a great laugh went up. In Lethbridge there is no doubt that the same laugh was heard It is too bad, however, when The Herald stoops to a deliberate falsehood (we won't say "lie" for Oliver and The News have a monopoly of that). The Simmons paper says: "Mr. Magrath has opposed labor legislation in the past and in the present campaign has not given any indication that his views have altered." The last part of this statement is so false that The Herald will only injure its own cause.

In its fit of desperation at the certain defeat of Simmons his paper in Lethbridge adopts a funny argument. For weeks The Herald has been giving unsolicited support to the Medicine Hat irrigation scheme, as opposed to what it calls the Conservative party. It has pointed out how this city is supporting the scheme, and has generally tried to prove the Conservative charges wrong But it has had a lapse of memory Mr. Magrath in speaking at Grassy Lake told the electors (so The Herald says) that what they wanted was irrigation down certain coulees, and if he was elected he would do his best to get it for them. Then The Herald considers it squelches that by saying that Mr. Magrath could not do this except by forming a company and getting the land from the Government, "and that this vast area would surround their homesteads and prevent the desired development of the country as long as it was held as a speculation."

Which is an argument against all irrigation companies; The Southern Alberta Land Co. included; also the irrigation companies that have made Lethbridge what it is. Then the Government did do wrong in selling land to any irrigation company, did it? Try and be consistent, Herald.

The Liberal Government is making its bid to power on the Hudson's Bay Railway. One would think to hear them talk that the contracts had all been let. As a matter of fact all that has been done is to place $100,000 in the estimates to pay the expenses of preliminary surveys. This binds them to nothing. In Medicine Hat we have a very vivid recollection of $40,000 voted year after year for the Strathcona Horse— and now there is to be no Strathcona Horse. The Liberals have consistently fought the Hudson's Bay railway for twelve years, and now use it merely as an election dodge. The Conservatives will build it.

The sole evidences of The News desire to help its party has been (apart from the famous original McCarthy editorial) have been clippings from Colliers and the Globe. The thinking of The News has been done in the editorial sanctions of those two papers, one an open Liberal, and the other edited by a former Liberal.

But somehow The News omitted the following from Colliers:

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES."

(Collier's Weekly.)

The deeping tints of the leaves signal that Autumn is here, just as the projected deepening of the Welland Canal shows that October 26th, election day, is not far off. The Soo steel mills, long idle, have received an order for 1,500 tons of rails from the G.T.P. Thus does one bonused enterprise help another, and both together proclaim their maker all abroad. The cold steel fellows get together long enough to see their benefactors through, and Sydney, Cape Breton, hums with factitious industry until the last vote is polled. After which that happens which may. A survey party leaves Winnipeg to survey the Hudson Bay Railwayright of way at a time no survey parties ever left before. As a rule surveys do not set their faces toward the North Pole when winter is drawing nigh. Everything tends to prove that the Givers of All Good at Ottawa are on their mettle and will stop at nothing to make a favorable impression. It is now two weeks since the first G.T.P. train left Winnipeg for the West. We are told that it marked an era, also that it drew out sharp on time. No doubt it did both. If it didn't, it wasn't up to the job the government had given it, and all that advertising was thrown away. The engine had a bottle of wine before it started, and it need-

SUFFERED FROM HEART and NERVE TROUBLES FOR the LAST TEN YEARS.

If there be nerve derangement of any kind, it is bound to produce all the various phenomena of heart derangement. In is combined treatment that will cure all forms of nervous disorders, as well as act upon the heart itself.

MILBURN'S

Mrs. John Riley, Douro, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer from heart and nerve troubles for the past ten years. After trying many remedies, and doctoring for two years without the least benefit, I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial. I am thankful to say that, after using nine boxes I am entirely cured and would recommend them to all sufferers."

ed it, for the six-hundred-mile journey was not unattended with danger. The ballast had not settled, and in many places the rails had sunk. This gave the cars an undulating motion, which had since been explained by pointing out that the voyage was through an ocean of wheat, which should account for the sickness. It's a safe bet that Conductor Niddery and Engineer Culbertson were mighty thankful when they got to the end of their run, for that train carried a prodigious load of politics over a terribly rough road.

Still another sample of Pugsley's grafting has developed. Premier Hazen the other day in St. John read an affadavit from a contractor showing that he had secured a tender on a bid of five cents a yard more than he had intended to make. The extra five cents a yard $36,000 went to the President of the Liberal Association and the Hon. (?) Mr. Pugsley asked for $2,000 and got it.

And now after all the shouting the Liberals have been forced to drop the Bayne charges of corruption in Colchester. When the trial came on the prosecution dropped the entire case, claiming it was a bad time to have the trial immediately before elections. The defence insisted that this was the proper time to expose corruption if it existed; but the Liberals knew it was all up with their case if it proceeded, and it was dropped. But you won't see any mention of it in the Liberal papers that made so much of the charges.

Foster's Forecast

Washington, D.C., Oct. 17.— Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent Oct. 15 to Oct. 19, warm wave Oct. 14 to Oct. 18, cool wave Oct. 17 to Oct. 21. This disturbance was expected to cause a great fall in temperature from Oct. 13 to Oct. 20, bringing frosts not far from last date that will penetrate the cotton belt.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about Oct. 21, cross Pacific slope by close of Oct. 22, great central valleys Oct. 23 to Oct. 25, eastern States Oct. 26. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about Oct. 24, great central valleys Oct. 26, eastern states October 28.

This will be the most important disturbance of the month. I am expecting about that time another tropical storm in the Caribbean sea and these hurricanes usually cause a cold wave along the Canadian line and frosts further south.

The warm wave of this disturbance will be remarkable for its high temperatures which will make the last half of October average warmer than the first half. Frost waves are expected both before and after that warm wave.

Severe storms may be expected on the continent Oct. 21 to Oct. 26, and boatriding on lakes and oceans will be fully as safe before and after the period when these storms are expected. Not much rain last part of October except in a few places while these storms are passing. Thunder storms and heavy concentrated rains over small areas are expected while this great storm wave and hot wave is crossing the continent.

Venus, mercury, saturn and the moon will be the principal causes of the great disturbance described above. Last month these bulletins said that October would come in cold and reach a period of very hot weather about Oct. 24. Thus far the forecast has been good; now watch for the important feature, the great hot wave and severe storms about Oct. 24.

Part of Ross Rifle Scandal

(Montreal Star.)

While realizing that, in its dealings with the Ross Rifle Company, the present Government has been lavishly generous as well as extraordinary ily considerate, few Canadians understand or remember the various steps in the procedure which has resulted in their paying nearly fifty per cent. more for the "Canadian National Rifle" which, as The Star has shown, is largely the product of United States factories, than would have served to supply the rifle with which the British Imperial troops are equipped and which is today the rifle used in practically all shooting competitions in Canada.

The Original Contract

The contract between the Department of Militia and Sir Charles Ross was made on the 27th day of March, 1902. Under this contract 12,000 rifles were to be delivered during the calendar year 1903. Subsequent orders were given for 12,000 to be delivered before July 1905; 8,000 before January, 1906; 10,000 during the calendar year 1906, and 10,000 during the calendar year, 1907; 52,000 in all.

The price to be paid was $25 each or $1,300,000 for the lot.

At the time this contract was made the Lee-Enfield was in use. The price of these was $17.59 and the weapons appear to have been satisfactory. At all events they are the rifles still used in all competitions, and by the militia corps wherever the officers and men have their own way about it.

The epst of 52,000 Lee-Enfields at this price would have been $914,680 or $385,320, less than the cost of the Ross rifle.

Expensive "Extras."

In addition to the contract price there are some extras. The Government seems to have paid $15.00 for changing the sights originally accepted, and a further sum of $26,237 for guages. The guage is not a part of the rifle but is an instrument for measuring the various parts. It is used by the Manufacturer and also by the Government inspectors.

The Government is also paying the contractor a rental of $1,160 for a room used in the factory by the inspectors and has paid several thousands for fitting up and equipping the room, all of which expenses were avoided in the purchase of the Lee-Enfield arm.

For bayonets to go with the rifle its contractor received $5 each.

Finally the Government pays three-quarters of the price of the Ross rifle, years in advance of delivery, thus financing the contractor's business and making an interest charge against the Dominion, whereas on previous purchases payments were not made until after delivery.

Special "Concessions."

Besides these cash payments the contractor received the following concessions:

A site, comprising 19 acres of Government reserve on the Plains of Abraham on a 99-year renewablelease at $1 per annum.

The privilege of importing all machinery for the factory free of duty.

The privilege of importing all raw material for rifles free of duty.

The privilege of importing free of duty all finished or partly finished portions of the rifle which are not made in the factory.

The reason assigned for paying 48 per cent. more than the previous price for these rifles was, "it is considered that the rifle required by the Government for the purposes of militia and defence should be manufactured in Canada."

How far this purpose has been accomplished has already been discussed by The Star.

Payments in Advance.

The contract provides for payment on progress estimates. The Government is to pay in advance of delivery "moneys actually expended upon the rifles or partsthereof, or fixtures therefor, to be delivered in that year an amount up to 75 per cent of the cost of the rifle."

That is $18.75, or $1.16 more than the whole cost of the Lee-Enfield, may be paid in advance. The other $6.25 is paid on delivery. The expression "to be delivered in thatyear" was for four years cheerfully disregarded by the department. The Auditor-General tried to give effect to it a year ago, but the Deputy Minister of Justice gave the opinion that the remedy he proposed was unlawful. The Auditor wished to stop the advances until the contractor delivered all rifles, on which the advance had been paid for more than a year. But the Deputy Minister held that this could not be done and that the thing to do was to pay the advances and exact some kind of a penalty. In the end the department released the advances and exacted no penalty, but squared itself with the contract by giving an extension of time to fulfill the engagements.

How it Works Out.

In detail the contracts have been worked out as follows: The first order was for 12,000 rifles to be delivered in 1903. The following payments were made during that year and the next:—

March 26, 1903	$250,000
August 5, 1903	57,971
February 24, 1904	25,000
March 5, 1904	38,704
March 12, 1904	40,559
July 26, 1904	60,000
July 26, 1904	2,568
Total	$324,802

This was only $200 short of 75 per cent. on the whole order, but it was a full year after the last payment, and a year and a half after the time when the whole order was to be delivered, that the first delivery of 1,000 rifles was made. At the end of another year, July 1906, only 9,000 had been delivered on this order. The other 3,000 are represented as having been delivered as Mark 11 rifles.

Second Order the Same.

The second order was made November 22nd, 1904, or nine months before the first delivery on the original order. The whole 12,000 of the second contract were to be delivered before July 1st, 1905.

As a matter of fact the first delivery of 1,000 rifles was in June, 1906, or nearly a year later, and the last of the 12,000 were not delivered until 1907. The first advance payments were made in February, 1905, sixteen months before the first delivery and six months before the first rifle was delivered on the first order. Before a single rifle had been delivered on either order the contractor had received $425,000 on progress estimates.

So it went on. The third order for 8,000 called for delivery in 1905. The first of this lot were delivered in February, 1907, and the last in October of that year.

The whole of the 75 per cent. advance was paid before the end of 1905. About two years before the order was filled.

The Last Two Years.

On the order for delivery of 10,000 in the calendar year 1906, only a few hundred had been supplied at the end of 1907, to whichdate the time for delivery had been extended after the Auditor-General held up advance payments.

It is now more than two years since the first advances were paid on these rifles and the whole 75 per cent payment was completed last August.

The final order of 10,000 for delivery in the calendar year 1907 is still outstanding. Not a rifle has been delivered on this, though the whole of the advances have been paid since the 1st of October. The time has been extended until June for the delivery of these rifles, but it will be long after that time before the previous order will have been completed.

At the end of 1907, 19,000 of the 52,000 remained to be delivered. Advance payments of $858,000 had been made on these for periods of three months to two years. During the time these payments have been going on the contractor has paid from $600,000 to $400,000 advances at all times, the Government paying from four to six per cent. on the money, or some $20,000 a year.

In the recent investigation, counsel for the company made a rather peremptory demand for further orders, setting forth that the factory would have to go out of business unless it was kept running by the Militia Department. This opens the question whether the country can afford to go on making army rifles indefinitely for the sake of maintaining the factory. There must be some limit to the requirements, more especially if the militia will not use the rifle.

Medicine Hat The Industrial Hub

(The Monetary Times.)

To fill a new country, sow, and reap, to populate it, to plant capital where it will thrive, to make factory wheels hum, to extend boundaries, these and others are big jobs. When finished—but they never will be. A limit there certainly is to geographical extension; but enterprise is a commercial repeater. The primary labor done; but enterprise is a commercial repeater. The primary labor done, men must turn around and hoe the other way. Then comes criss-cross work. National development has no end. It stops according to the personal vision; for which one may thank the fates for variety in humanity.

Capital is thrown out, not only in the West, but everywhere, with ulterior motive mucilage-attached. Capital usually brings back to its owners the something that has stuck. It does double good; it helps general progress and makes money for those who send out new monetary possessians to find financial friends.

The city of Medicine Hat, the up-to-date hub of its district, intends to attract capital with natural gas. It avers that commodity is airily helping to hold up the earth's crust. It awaits only the discoverer. In the Peace River country an explorer told me his camp fires were of natural gas, brought along in pipes to where lay men and maps. It has been found in many parts of the Province. The story goes that one important discoverer made a gas bore bigger with the aid of dynamite. He fled from the passing throng on top of the results. Ignorance there is concerning the extent of this natural commercial asset. That must be in a new country constantly affording surprises in the resources catalogue. But at Medicine Hat, the natural gas is yoked up to the everyday task. It is whipped into power-making and illuminative obedience by the men who know. Medicine Hat has an especially good card of Alberta's pack. Someone has said the city seems to have all hell for a basement. One might reasonably add—and consequently a possible manufacturing paradise for the ground floor.

So many so-called commercial possessions are in the naked experimental stage. This or that will drive engines or at least models. Such and such will illumine towns—or anyway models. At Medicine Hat it is different. Practical demopstration has vogue. The natural gas rounds one up at every corner. In business offices it roars its merits from the furnace. In the C.P.R. shops gas takes the place of coal. What little coal lies around just there is almost a mineral accident. The Canadian Pacific have a natural gas well, an exception to the rule. Leave well alone. Cold engines are under steam and ready for the road in little morethan one hour. Before the advent of natural gas, it meant three or four hours. Six thousand dollars a year are thus saved to the company. On the station platform, natural gas glares a welcome to east and westbound transcontinental trains. For the city is on the road's main line with the Crow's Nest Pass Railroad to make a steely intersection. From the street lamps, the gas wages war with daylight. At dusk it wins. Medicine Hat uses its natural gas as the average person does tap water. Wasting, running, spilling, all day, the whole night, it matters not. The city has too much of a good thing and it has taken on a fit of gascous intoxication. To the student of economy itgives heartache. But thefolk here argue that this particular bounty of Alberta's giving is good for one hundred years at least. Others figure with several centuries into the future. A guarantee of ten decades will probably satisfy the prospective manufacturer seeking cheap power. For every five cents one thousand cubic feet of natural gas are available for manufacturing purposes. The citizens keep well-lighted homes at thirteen and a half cents per thousand. In other words, nature's generosity means going shares in the gas bill.

This aeriform fluid is being clothed here with much publicity; it has been and it will be. Because if Medicine Hat imagination is stripped to the core, the fact remains that its natural gas chiefly will make Medicine Hat the manufacturing centre it desires to be. The captains of industry, the capitalist, will do well to learn something of the unique opportunities in this direction. Some will probably decide to chetail the daylight gambols of lamps meant only for darkness; in other words, divert part of the gas to turn factory wheels. The pressure from the gas wells is heavy and consistent. These facts give weight to the arguments of prophets who juggle with centuries. Medicine Hat will magnatize manufacturing capital.

As elsewhere in the West, one sees at Medicine Hat a cosmopolitan population. It is flavored, too, with a decided Scotch accent; but this is found more upon the ranches within a fair step from the city. Brawny, brown Japanese laborers were seen dividing labor with the slow-going Chinamen. They were giving an Oriental touch to the art of hose-cleaning ice for train travellers. Incidentally a new paint was being daubed upon the Canadian labor picture. Another man, whose sunny Italy complexion was hidden beneath black grime, was asked a question. "I don't know," he replied; "I have onlt been in thees city twenta-four hours." This Alberta centre, as are others, is absorbing new population. One man at least managed to get up to his neck in Medicine Hat soil within a day.

Difficult it is to guess who are the individuals making up the city's five thousand population. One little fellow, fifty years of age perhaps, walked into a local hotel. For three days he was a guest who spent money with recklessness. You could have stood with him upright beneath a horse's belly. But he was big enough to carry six thousand dollars added to his fortune in exchange for a beef sale. His annual celebration of this event occupied three days. Then back to the quarters where beef is brought up on four legs.

The Hat, as the city is familiarly known, possesses sufficient elasticity to suit any size in heads of enterprise. Medicine Hat has agricultural and other charms, but only its natural gas hustle will win the manufacturing honors.

The Man on The Street

One of the most gratifying evidences in the present campaign is the recent expression of opinion of a man who has generally been considered to have a slight leaning toward the Liberal side. Last week The Times in writing up the Oliver meeting said that even the dog of such a good Liberal as Mr. Benson had to bark at some of the remarks made; and the very next day the gentleman referred to paid up and cancelled his subscription he was so indignant. There are very few men who care to be accused of being a Liberal and The Times should have known better than to hint that Mr. Benson was one. The editor should apologize.

The President of the local Liberal Club is said to have remarked at their smoker last Wednesday that if The Times could prove Cushing was in town on Sunday he would vote Conservative. Well, if the president's vote is that easy to get, the Conservatives don't want it.

Ald. Forster says that Ald. Forster "effectively met the reflectionsor the work of the water commissioners." Well Ald. Forster ought to know in spite of Ald. Forster's terrible modesty.

Isn't it funny how a man, if he is a Liberal, can get on the voters' list although he has been in the constituency only a month or two, but a Conservative has to fulfil the obligations to a day or he is left out in the cold?

It is a couple of years since the Pollard Lilliputian Opera Company were here, since which time they have paid a visit to their native Australia and have gathered fresh laurels wherever they have been. The youngsters are to appear here on next Monday night.

They have added several musical comedies to their repertoire, including that famous opera "Floradora." It is also most too well known to require any extended mention. It is replete with tuneful melodies, and one of its notable features is the famous sextette with the song "Tell me Pretty Maiden." On account of its tuneful airs "Florodora" has attained a wide world fame and the "Tell Me Pretty Maiden" has been sung in almost every language known to civilized man. The comedy itself is fascinating in its plot and incidents and always finds a welcome from the patrons of amusements. In the hands of the diminutive artists it will be given an elaborate production, and as these little stars are as clever in action as they are in singing, an enjoyable treat may be anticipated.

Many favorites are still with the company, including Ivy Pollard, Freddie and John Heintz and Teddy McNamara, Irene Finlay and Olive Moore. In addition to the standard musical numbers of "Florodora" several new songs are included in the production, among them "Afraid to Go Home in the Dark," "I Want to be a Military Man," "I never Loved Another Girl as I Love You" and "We Parted on the Shore." A novelty was introduced at Seattle in the latter number, the chorus marching down the rendition of the song. The "stunt" evoked many recalls and nearly every member was given a trial at the solo part.

Election returns will be read from the stage.

Seats are now on sale at the usual place.

Liberty Was Brief.

F. L. Brennan, once a C.P.R. agent at Brooks, was brought before the magistrate charged with stealing a watch from the Dominion Express company. Mr. McLaws prosecuted and Stanley Jones defended. John Butler, C.P.R. operator at Brooks was the first witness. He testified that the watch belonged to Mr. Dowd the day operator and Dowd had left the article in the express company's box when he went away on vacation. Mr. Jones here took a look at the information and kicked because the charge read that the watch was the property of the Dominion Express Company. Efforts were made to get Dowd to swear out a different information, he refused and Brennan said he was willing to give the timepiece back to Dowd. The magistrate dismissed the case and Bowd walked away.

In the meantime the police had been busy preparing another information but when it was ready and Chief Inspector Foy of the C.P.R. special police force came to get his man he could not be found. Much repressed excitement rippled about the serene interior of the station; lawyers hustled here and there; detectives looked mysteriously and gumshoed about; ordinary policemen and reporters grinned with joy, but no Brennan was forthcoming. Finally Officer Douglas went out in a rubber-tired rig, drawn by the black charger. This manner of locomotion beat gumshoeing all hollow for Douglas discovered Brennan walking calmly along Eighth avenue and thinking of nothing but the pleasure of being free. He was taken back to the police station to await trial on a new charge.

Something farr emoved from the ordinary line of theatrical attractions is promised in the engagement of the Pollard Lilliputian Opera Company at the Opera House, Monday October 26. The Pollards are a notable organization among the worlds many and varied amusement attractions, as it is composed entirely of bright and gifted juveniles. They are now making their fourth tour of America, having performed in every city of consequence in the Orient, South Africa, China, Japan and the Phillipines.

Graft That Was Proven

Some of the charges which have been Verified

The charges of graft which are not answered even by the subsidized Liberal press, are so numerous, that the only defence the rank and file attempt is that the Conservatives would be as bad. Here are a few of the examples that show where the money of Canada is going to. This is the kind of thing that makes direct taxation a thing to be reckoned with. This is why a government that protests that it imposes duty for revenue has to maintain almost the same tariff as the Conservatives who imposed it for protection. These examples tell where the fortunes of the political favorites come from.

In 1900 the Liberal Government altered the contract for the lighting of the Cornwall Canal so that what cost $15,860 a year under the Conservative regime was increased to $52,575 a year for 79 years. It was for his refusal to pass such an account that Auditor-General Macdougall was forced to resign.

A timber limit was sold to E. J. Elliott, an Edmonton politician, for $7,500, which was immediately resold for $72,000. A. W. Fraser, president of the Ottawa Liberal Association secured one for $500 and resold it for $500,000; another for $1,650 sold for $100,000. T. Burrows, Sifton's brother-in-law, bought one for $7,000 and sold it for $500,000; another for $6,000 sold for $80,000.

J. N. Greenshields, a Montreal Liberal, and a few friends put $884,644 in a railway and were given a subsidy by the Government of $650,356. Then the Dominion Government bought the railway for $1,600,000, presenting to the shareholders $713,356.

A company made up of H. H. Dewart, a Toronto Liberal, and two friends of Sir Frederick Borden's, sold 1000 sub targets to the Government for $250,000. They cost to manufacture $64,000. Gross profit $186,000. The makers stated that they paid $50,000 for the patent, which still left them $136,000 profit. All the capital invested was $113,000.

Charles Strutbe, a Montreal politician bought 270 dozen still files from a French firm which had shipped them to a Canadian customer who refused to take them. Strubbe paid $2,315 for them and sold them to the Department of Marine for $4,786. There were enough files to last the Department for 100 years.

The North Atlantic Trading Co. whose personel was never divulged, but which included the notorious Preston at any rate, was paid $367,245 for sending emigrants to this country. Any old emigrant was accepted and the money is almost certain to have gone to Government favorites.

Charles Patton of Ottawa got an order for $9,000 worth of fire extinguishers he had to pay $2,400 as a rake-off.

Blairmore Townsite was secured by a Macleod Liberal for $480. He was sued by the Department of Justice, but Mr. Sifton ordered the case to be abandoned. The Government paid the costs $2,585 and the townsite is worth $200,000.

The townsite of White Horse in the Yukon was distributed among the following politicians:

W. B. McInnes, member for Vancouver, 40 acres for $400.

C. F. McIsaac, member for Antigonish, 40 acres for $400.

D. C. Fraser, member for Guysboro, 40 acres for $400.

G. H. Maxwell, member for Burrard, 40 acres for $400.

A syndicate has just received from Sir Wilfrid the townsites along the G.T.P. for $40,000. They will sell for at least $8,000,000.

The Government wanted to buy a building in Ottawa. It commissioned Hal McGiverm to buy it and gave him $1,000 for a few hours' work. It also employed a politician named Propel to buy land in Ottawa and gave him $9,200.

In 1904 Matthew Lodge of Moncton, N.B., an active worker for Emmerson, visited the latter in Ottawa and told him that certain lands in Moncton should be purchased for the Intercolonial. Lodge got the order to buy and paid $5,075 for four properties which he immediately turned over to the Government for $13,880.

G. T. Merwin, the most notorious of the middlemen has sold the Government $670,000 worth of machinery. He is but an agent and for one order which cost him $11,838 he received $18,012. Merwin could buy no cheaper than the Government.

The Quebec Bridge was one of the biggest of the swindles. The Government gave the promoters 874,000, then loaned them $6,676,000. The bridge broke down and the Government had to stand the entire loss. Ex-Premier Parent of Quebec was the leading promoter.

A contractor at Sorel, who was to receive fifteen per cent. for building a bridge, put in a bill for $243,000. The graft was only stopped by Auditor-General Macdougall, who found that the bridge had cost but $98,000.

Samson and Filion of Quebec supplied the Department of Marine with goods at prices that were two to four times as high as the prevailing prices. For instances lanterns, that cost $4.50 a dozen in Sorel were sold for $9.00. Washing soda worth 85 cents per one hundred pounds was sold for $3.00. Hammer handles worth 89 cents, brought $1.35. Candles worth 9 cents, brought 20 cents. Soft soap worth $5.00 per one hundred pounds, brought $10.00, and so on.

One newspaper in Montreal was paid $29,500 for one year's work. Another in Halifax drew $21,000.

Judge McTavishdraws his salary of $7,000 as judge and was paid $4,600 besides for the Insurance Investigation. The Government's lawyer got $25,000.

Hon. Brodeur got $8,813 for four months' expenses in Great Britain Hon. G. E. Foster had made the same trip at less than $1,000 a month. Brodeur was forced to refund the $913.

A contractor in St. John paid the President of the Liberal Association $36,000 for getting him a contract, an gave Hon. Pugsley $2,000 for his influence.

It cost the country $40,000 to reorganize the system of keeping accounts in the Department of Marine and Fisheries. It was proven that men were paid $4 a day for expenses when they amounted to only $1 a day.

Another lot of land for the Intercolonial cost the Government $24,070, when the middleman had paid only $13,375 for it immediately before. Still another such case cost the Government $45,500, when it had been bought just before for $18,588.

The brother of Hon. Lemieux, a lawyer by profession, sold fire extinguishers to the Government at a big commission.

The Ross Rifle was bought at an advance of $885,320 over the Lee Enfields which were a better rifle. And before the rifles were delivered, the Government paid the Ross Rifle Co. $224,802 in one year. In one case the payments preceded the delivery of the consignment by 2 years. The company is made up of Liberal politicians.

Theodore Burrows, M.P., brother-in-law of Clifford Sifton holds today 855,000 acres of timber lands.

A man drew plans for a dam that was never built and received $10,000. The Government sent him to Paris at a cost of $600 to learn how to draw the plans, and then sent him to the Soo at a cost of $30 a day. The same man drew plans for immigration sheds at Quebec, which were never built and is getting $12,000 for it.

The Government bought a tug for $4,000 and continue to pay rent for it at the rate of $12 a day for four months after they bought it. A tug which was hired for $30 a day, owner to provide everything was dropped for a smaller one owned by Merwin at $25 a day, Government to supply coal, pay wages, feed the men and make repairs. Merwin drew $3,675 in less than five months for a tug which cost him $3,700.

A few Ontario Liberal farmers exhibited some swine at St. Louis. While there some of the animals died and here are a few of the amounts paid the owners: boars at $180, $175, $160, $160, $160, $135, $135, $80, $65, $90, $80 and $35 each; sows at $80 to $150 each. And this was paid in spite of the fact that the Minister and quarantine officers said the bill should not be paid.

The new mint was to cost $350,000, and plans and estimates for that amount were brought now. When finished the mint cost $600,000.

Kearns, a Winnipeg Liberal, bought the location for the Grand Trunk Pacific terminals at Winnipeg for $99,000, and immediately resold to the Government for $222,000.

And so the tale of terrible graft could be continued ad infiritum, through the G.T.P. deal the fitting out of the Arctic and Montcalm, the building of wharves where there are no boats call, the timber grants, the land grafts, and the Siftonian companies which levy on the Government.

When the Liberals ask for your vote ask them to disprove one of these charges of graft. Ask them how they are getting out of it.

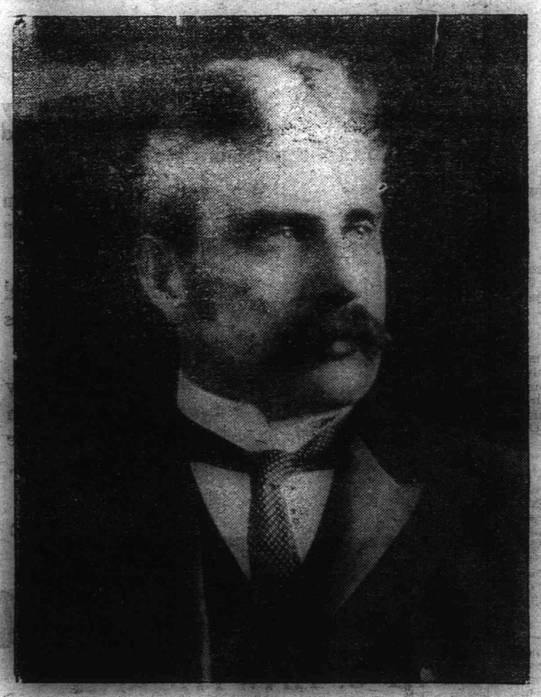
Writing Us Up

THE BANNER, CLANTON, ALA.

"And now for Medicine Hat, far famed for its weather predictions, as well as other things. I had expected to see an elegant building with all sorts of scientific instruments, and from which some learned men would get the data to prognosticate the weather that was due to arrive everywhere in the United States and Canada. But no, nothing of the sort. On the banks of the south Saskatchewan river, out in the open air, is a small globular instrument upon which the sun shines all day, and marks a record on a small piece of paper and from this we get our weather predictions. I don't know at all how it is done, but at all events there is not much to be seen.



Medicine Hat is apparently the most extravagant place in the world, for night and day they burn gas, never turning it off. Sunlight or moonlight, the street lamps are continually alight, stores and residences the same, and all because it is cheaper to let the gas burn all the time rather than to be so wasteful as as to spend time in turning it off and relighting. It looks funny to see gas burning brillintly away in the middle of the day with the sun shining brilliantly overhead, each trying to outshine the other. Of course it is natural gas and it is supplied to manufacturers at 5 cents per 1000 feet, and for domestic purposes for 13¼ cents. The city is prettily situated and has a population of 5,000, the surrounding country being largely engaged in raising cattle and horses, besides wheat growing where they have sufficient moisture.

THE LEADER, HOPKINTON, IOWA

People down this way have a sort of belief that Medicine Hat arbitrarily fixes the weather for us. It is true that there is where the first observations are taken of the storm currents as they bounce over from the mountains, but it was said to us that as a matter of fact the town enjoys about the mildest climate of any place in Western Canada. At Medicine Hat were found coal deposits again and two very large natural gas wells, which combined make an inducement for manufacturing enterprises. The railroad company uses the gas for all the work in its machine shops, round house and other work where coal would otherwise be used, and the manager stated that the saving at this one point alone would exceed $50,000 annually to the company. The gas comes from the well under a pressure of nearly 600 pounds and is reduced to a pressure of four pounds or less for commercial uses. The lights and street lights are permitted to run during the day because the material is so cheap.

THE FAMOUS HALIFAX PLATFORM THAT IS GOING TO CARRY CANADA AND WHICH THE LIBERALS ARE STEALING

1.—Honest appropriation and expenditure of public money in the public interest.

2.—Appointment of public officials under consideration of capacity and personal character and not of party service alone.

3.—More effective provisions to punish bribery and fraud at elections, to ensure thorough publicity as to expenditures by political organizations to prevent the accumulation of campaign funds for corrupt purposes and to prohibit contributions there by corporations, contractors and promoters, to expediate hearing of election petitions and to prevent collusive arrangements for the withdrawal or compromise thereof, to provide for a thorough investigation of corrupt practices and if necessary to appoint an independent prosecuting officer to enforce the laws so amended.

4.—A thorough and complete reformation of the laws relating to the Civil Service so that future appointments shall be made by an independent commission acting upon the report of examiners after competitive examination.

5.—Such reform in the selecting of members of the senate as will make that chamber a more useful and representative body.

6.—A more careful selection of the sources from which immigration shall be sought, a more rigid inspection of immigrants and the abolition of the bonus system, except under very special circumstances and for the purpose of obtaining particularly desirable classes of settlers.

7.—The management and development of the public domain (in which are to be included great national franchises) for the public benefit and under such conditions that a respectable proportion of the increment of value arising therefrom shall inure to the people.

8.—The operation and management of our government railways by an independent commission, free from partizan control or interference.

9.—Development and improvement of our natural waterways, the equipment of national ports, the improvement of transportation facilities, and subsequent reduction of freight rates between the place of production and market, whether at home or abroad and the establishment of a thorough system of cold storage.

10.—The re-organization of the present railway commission as a public utilities commission with power and more extended jurisdiction, so as to establish thorough and effective control over all corporations owning or operating public utilities or invested with a franchise of a national character.

11.—The establishment after due investigation af a system of national telegraphs and telephones under conditions which shall be just to capital already invested in those enterprises.

12.—The improvement of existing postal facilities, especially in newly developed portions of the country, and inauguration, after proper enquiry as to cost of a system of free rural mail delivery.

13.—A fiscal policy which will promote the production within Cagada of all useful articles than can be advantageously manufactured from or by means of our natural resources, having due regard to the interests of the consumer as well as to the just claims of our wage-earning population.

14.—The promotion by negotiation and other constitutional means of a system of mutual preferential trade within the empire.

15.—The restoration of the public lands to the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan upon fair terms.

16.—The unimpaired maintenance of all powers of self-government which have been conferred upon the provinces of Canada under the constitution.

The Open Door to Yellow Labor

No workingman whose labor is brought into competition with that of the Chinaman or the Japanese can poll an honest vote for W. C. Simmons or the Liberal party whose standard he bears.

And this does not only apply to organized labor. It is equally true with regard to that great body of unorganized labor which does not come under the classification of "skilled."

Winnipeg had had a most painful illustration of the damning results of the Laurier policy with respect to Oriental emigration, and it is well that the facts should be published far and wide as the concrete instance which proves the case.

During the recent strike of the machinists and boiler-makers on the Canadian Pacific Railway, an important body of the men involved was the "car-cleaners." These men are classed as skilled laborers, but their work is naturally not as important as, for instance, boilermakers, machinists and the like. They were, however, affected by the strive order and went out with their fellow workers, and their places were filled by Japanese who were brought into this country under the policy of the Laurier Government and who would not have been here to act as strike-breakers if the government of Canada had done its duty.

After the strike was declared off, no less than two car loads of Japs were shipped out by the C.P.R. They had been working for nine weeks taking the places of white men. They were filling the situations previously held by white men as car-cleaners. They were drawing the pay, the wages, that had previously been earned by white men. They had no families to support. The money they got they took away with them. Every dollar paid to these Japs was a dollar taken away out of the pockets of white labor, and the hundreds of dollars they draw was just that much dead loss to the white men who should have had them and a loss to the merchants, grocers, butchers and business men with whom the white laborers do business.

These Japarese Coolies would not have been in Canada if the Laurier Government had done its Duty.

The history of that shameful sacrifice of Canadian interests is told in the pages of Hansard.

It begins with the British treaty, negotiated by Japan in 1894. That treaty did not bind the self-governing colonies of the Empire, but by article XIX. it was competent for any of these self-governing dependencies, which, of course, includes Canada, to accede to it, and so take advantage of it and be bound by its terms.

The Conservative party of Canada then in power refused to assent to the treaty. By order-in-council dated August 3rd, 1895, it was determined that that portion of the treaty relating to the emigration of Japanese laborers and artisand was of vital consequence to Canada and that the treaty should not be adopted so far as this country was concerned without the inclusion of a clause similar to that contained in the treaty with the United States of the same date, making the stipulations subject to the right of the Canadian Government to make laws and regulations controlling the question of immigration.

In February, 1895, Lord Salisbury then Foreign Minister of Great Britain, was notified by the British Ambassador at Tokio, "that the Japanese government were willing to agree "that Canada in signifying her adhesion to the treaty might do so "with a proviso that the stipulation "in the treaty shall not in any way "affect the laws of either country in "regard to the immigration of labourers."

After the Conservative government went out of power in 1896, the Laurier government let the whole treaty question stand and took no steps to restrict Japanese immigration, notwithstanding the fact, which was officially brought to their attention, that between the first day of January, 1900, and the thirtieth day of April, 1900, there were 4,669 Japanese landed in Victoria and Vancouver, and the influx was increasing fed by the Canadian Government agent in Japan, the notorious W. T. R. Preston, the hug-the-machine Preston, for whose crooked political work he had been exiled from Canada although provided with a handsome salary at the expense of the Canadian people.

Almost ten years after the Conservative government had made its effective protest, the Laurier government found time to take up the treaty question again, and notified the colonial secretary that Canadian would accede to the terms of the treaty. The colonial secretary had before him the attitude of the Canadian government (Conservative) in 1895. He had before him the express declaration made by Canada in 1895 that Canada would not accede to this treaty except under stipulationswhich would enable the government to prohibit Japanese immigration if necessary, and he had before him the consent of the Japanese Government to the very restriction demanded by the Conservative party, and in a despatch dated July 14th, 1905, he expressly draw the attention of the Laurier Government to the existing protest of Canada and its acceptance by Japan, and asked whether the Canadian Government was now prepared to waive the protest and swallow the treaty Holus Bolus.

And again on September 6th, 1905 when the Laurier Government wanted the Japanese treaty proclaimed, Lord Lyttleton, colonial secretary, cabled to the Canadian Government drawing attention again to his despatch of July 14th, 1905, and again asking whether the government was prepared to waive the protest of the Conservative government of 1895. With what result?

That the Laurier Government waived the protest and handed over to Japan by Imperial Treaty the right to control and regulate the importation into Canada of Japanese Coolies.

Nor was this all. When the question of the affirmation of the treaty came before the Canadian parliament, the minister of agriculture, Hon. Sydney Fisher Deliberately deceived parliament as to the provisions of that treaty by declaring that he had a written stipulation with Japan that no coolies would be sent to this country, and by hood-winking the house of commons the Laurier government procured the ratification of the treaty, and has handed over the control of its immigration laws so far as the Japs areconcerned to Japan.

The Conservative policy upon this issue and upon every other issue of the campaign is clean cut and distinct.

The Conservative party propose, when returned to power to abrogate the treaty and retake the right to control and prohibit Japanese immigration.

A vote for C. M. Magrath, the Conservative candidate, is a vote against Japanese immigration. If you want this Canada of ours to remain a white man's country, vote for Magrath. If you don't, thenvote for Simmons and the Japs.

The Quebec Bridge Episode

(Mail and Empire.)

Mr. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, was one of the speakers at the Strathroy meeting. As wasto be expected from the politician under whose auspices Lott and Shibley, of bogus ballot-box fame, made their debut, he is in favor of putting the record of graft under the seven seals. With the seal of silence in particular would he stamp the whole business. He disapproves the publicity given to the timber scandals and is especially pained by the attention the Quebec bridgeenormity is receiving. me told his Strathroy hearers that "It is beneath the dignity, beneath what is expected of a "public man, that he should harrow "the feelings of people" by recalling the tragedy of the Quebec bridge.

Nearly a hundred unsuspecting workmen perished in that collapse, and very naturally the Government, on whom the blame for the disaster rests, would have us forget it and the series of acts of which it is the catastrophe. There is nothing more shameful in the annals of the country than the history of that bridge As the structure was to cross our St. Lawrence route, the building of it could not be undertaken except with the concurrence of the Government. To a company made up of politicians, Mr. Parent being the chief, a franchise was granted. To carry out the 910,000,000 project the company was to provide capital in the sum of $65,000. This was to be supplemented by the proceeds of bond issues, by grants from the cities immediately concerned, as well as from the province and from the Dominion. scheme failed because no market could be found for the bonds. More Government help was needed to set up this company of politicians as owners of a $10,000,000 bridge across the St. Lawrence. The Government was not wanting in friendship to the pushers of the enterprise at this crisis. If investors would not buy the bonds by the million dollars of a company whose paid-up capital of $65,000 was contributed, not in money, but in "services rendered," the Government would sustain the company's credit. With Mr. Fielding's approval therefore it was decided to guarantee the company's bonds in the sum of $6,678,000. By the terms of this new deal the company was required to find $200,000 more capital than the $65,000 which had been distributed among Mr. Parent and his associates in payment of salaries. This additional $200,000 was duly reported as paid in, but $119,900 of it was subsequently found to be represented by an uncertified cheque. There is a possibility that the remaining $81,000 was in hard cash. If so, this was all the actual money Mr. Parent and the other politicians of the favored company put into the work. But they received no more, for their powerful friends at Ottawa put the public cred it at their disposal up to $6,678,000. If that should not suffice to get their bridge built then some benefactors would doubtless see that the company had the national backing for further bond issues. Whatever, the cost to Canada, the bridge was to be the property of the company, made up of the lucky Mr. Parent and his fellow-politicians. It was computed that the net earnings, after ges were provided for, would amount to $152,015 a year. This would be ter working expenses and debt charge a nice income to be distributed annually among shareholders who had furnished no more than $71,000 of actual money for the creation of the $10,000,000 structure. But the bridge fell when it was far on towards completion. Had the politicians in possession of it not stood so high in the favor of the Laurier Goverrment, that Government would doubtless have felt bound to oversee the construction of this traffic way crossing the national water raute and built upon the national credit. Had there been effective Government oversight the awful tragedy could not have taken place.

The bridge is gone and the 90 odd The bridge is gone and the 90 odd workers who went down with it are gone, but the politicians who undertook the venture were not deserted by the Government in the hour of their trouble. They are relieved of the bridge and are to receive $358,000. Working men may perish in scores, the country may be saddled with millions of loss, but the politicians must come out ahead. Mr. Graham could not be expected to like the notoriety his Government had earned by this shocking Quebec bridge episode.

The Globe's Opinion

(Reprinted from the Toronto Globe, Feb. 1, 1908.)

Rich men, as a rule, do not voluntarily come out from the easeful quiet of their clubs to enter the storm and stress of public life with the definite objective of becoming a recognized force, either in municipal or national politics. The rich men who are in public life today have nearly all entered reluctantly at the behest of party politics. Mr. Herbert B. Ames, M.P., for the St. Antoine division of Montreal, is a conspicuous exception to the rule. He has of his own free will, forsaken the ruby light of the quiet parlors of the rich for the glaring limelight of the politician. First, because he has the virtue of being ambitious, and, second, because he believes he can be of service to the public. As a young man he inherited an ample fortune from his father, who was the head of the Ames, Holden company, of Montreal. His business interests have been all along sufficient to keep him decidedly busy. But he has for the last ten or eleven years given a major portion of his time and energy to public life.

He began with that most thankless of tasks, the reforming of municipal politics. In order to become an alderman of Montreal, he learned the French language thoroughly, going to France for that purpose. In 1908 he was elected to the council, and with Mayor Laporte, conducted a vigerous campaign for the cleaning up of the municipal government at Montreal. His work brought him many enemies, but it was undoubtedly effective. After serving three years in the council he turned his attention to federal politics. The manner in which he organized his forces in the electoral riding which he now represents, the thorough canvass of voters and the elaborate detail with which every part of the campaign was worked out now serve as a model to political organization. It was the campaign of a business man working on clean business principles and it resulted in a conspicuous victory.

Coming to the federal house in 1904. Mr. Ames has, as might be expected, been one of the most painstaking and diligent members, among the ranks of the Opposition. He believes in hard work and a definite objective. His special objective so far has been to make himself chief opposition critic of the Interior Department. The alleged scandals connected with Western lands, etc., which have been ventilated in the Commons during the past two sessions, have emanated from Mr. Ames' misroscopic scrutiny of every departmental action. In like manner he has undertaken lengthy journeys in Canada during recent summers for the purpose of personally inspecting public works under construction. His present prominence in the Commons as the mover of the long-debated resolution calling on the government to acknowledge the absolute right of any member of the House to personally examine any public records in the departmental files, is the result of the unique activity in looking after the department of the opposition's work to which he has been assigned.

Mr. Ames is still well under fifty, and he is politically ambitious, perservering and energetic. He is by no means a magnetic speaker, and will never become a popular political leader. But he is unquestionably a force to be reckoned with in the public life of Canada.

On The Eve of Exposure

(From the New York American)

"Many have won millions through the Laurier Pacific. A world of petty larceny, graft and doubtful financing has been uncovered and influencial politicians are said to have made fortunes that they have been hiding from the public. A lot of grafterssseem about to be exposed to the Canadian public with their hands full of Government loot. Sir Wilfrid Laurier dreamed that his great railroad scheme would be his monument and that it would perpetuate his fame, and the great hungry horde of grafters used that idea while still skilfully contriving to coin Sir Wilfrid's ideas and dreams into countless millions for themselves. The amazing story is developing slowly as the political campaign in Canada progresses, but the whole shameful history will undoubtedly be in full possession of the public before the elections, which will be held in about two weeks. The details will undoubtedly cause citizens of the United States to forget their own troubles for the moment in contemplating the stupendous story of frozen finance."

NEGRO IS UNBALANCED

Grand Forks, N.D., Oct. 12.—John Henry, colored, formerly of Medicine Hat, Canada, who confessed to the murder of Ellen Fulton, a colored woman, will be defended in the district court of Grand Forks county, by Charles Schrutchins, of Bemidji, Minnesota, the only colored attorney in this section, and a plea of insanity will be made to save the prisoner from hanging.

Since the murder of the Fulton woman, a little over a week ago, Henry has been acting peculiarly, and it is thought that he has become completely unbalanced mentally as a result of the crime.

Progress of Canadian North West Oil Co.

(B. C. Mining Exchange and Engineering News.)

Mr. Anthony Anderson, secretary of the Canadian Northwest Oil Co., Ltd. returned a few days ago from a trip to the Pennsylvania oil fields, where he purchased a large quantity of drilling and other machinery forwork on the company's Alberta properties

In an interview to a representative of the B. C. Mining Exchange, Mr. Anderson stated that his inspection of the development and conditions of the Pennsylvania oil district had still further convinced him of the excellent prospects of the Canadian North West Oil Company.

Of the new machinery purchased, one carload has already reached Macleod, the port of entry for the district in which the company's wells are situated, and two more carloads are en route. All this machinery is of the most modern type, and when it is on the ground and installed the work of sinkin- new wells will be vigorously prosecuted.

The directors have decided that the company's business demands the presence of a manager on the ground, and C. C. Johns, a large shareholder, has been chosen for the position. Mr. Johns will proceed to the oil field in a few days. A proposal from a big contracting firm to build and operate a sawmill on the property and an application for the use of part of the magnificent water power owned by the company are under consideration.

Mr. Anderson was enthusiastic by speaking of the prospects of the company. "The people I met back East," he said, "could not understand our selling stock at $1 a share when I told them the amount of our capitalization, $500,000, and the very large area of oil lands which we own and control, and seeing the conditions there, one can understand their astonishment. One instance of how things are done in Pennsylvania will illustrate. A man near Butler saw indications of oil on a certain farm. He approached the owner, and after considerable negotiation managed to get a 21 years' lease of ten acres. He sold or morgaged all he possessed to raise money to prospect his claim, and now he has two fairly good flowing wells on the ten acres. He gives the owner of the land one-eighth of all the oil and he has refused half a million cash for his lease. A property like ours would be capitalized for ten or twenty millions, and people would be jostling each other to get stock at any price."

From what I have seen," continued Mr. Anderson, "and from what I know about our property, I have no hesitation in saying it is quite within the probabilities that Canadian North West Oil will be selling for $5 a share by the close of the present year. The Union Oil Co., of Oleum, Cal., which recently increased its capitalization from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000, has declared a dividend of $2,000 a share in addition to the regular monthly dividend of 50 cents a share. That sounds like fiction, but it is fact, and as we have the oil, there is no reason why our share holders may not become equally fortunate in time. Why, our water power alone is estimated to be worth $500,000, the total capitalization of the company. Moreover, I may say without a breach of confidence, that certain of the directors have been buying all the shares they could get. Messrs. C. C. Johns, Wm. Turpel and W. Y. McCarter, who visited the company's property in Alberta recently are among these buyers. A few irresponsible people have been spreading rumors knocking the stock, offering shares for sale which they did not possess, but these "Teddy Bears" are harming only their own reputations."

During his eastern trip, Mr. Anderson visited a great many oil wells and talked with many oil drillers and operators, all of whom congratulated him onhaving secured for his company the services of D. A. Slater, who is recognized as one of the most experienced and reliable drillers in Pennsylvania. "Dan" knows the company's property, and he says he knows "the oil is there." He is now on the ground superintending the placing of the second plant and he promises his employers some first class well in a very short time.

"You can, therefore, say," said Mr. Anderson in conclusion, "that Canadian Northwest Oil is all right."

Another Conservative Meeting

Poor Simmons Has a Whale of a Time

The Labor Men Teach Him

A highly instructive evening and one of the hottest in the campaign was spent by Mr. Simmons among the labor men on Saturday. The Liberal candidate, whose weak defence of the Laurier Labor policy a fortnight ago had done so much to alienate the vote of Labor men of the most Liberal tendencies, had asked to be allowed to address the workers in their own Labor hall, confident that if he would get them together in a little tete-a-tete he might train them up in the way they should go. He promised to confine himself to the discussion of the problems of labor, leaving politics alone, his object being to instruct the labor men but before the little conference was concluded Simmons was compelled to admit that he knew far less about the labor legislation of the Laurier Government than did the men whom he set out to dupe. If any unionist came to scoff, he remained to pray for the enlightenment of the soi-disant labor expert. Simmons the friend of labor! Save us from our friends," was the fervent prayer of many a union man.

Mr. Simmons devoted a large part of his "address" to an eulogy of the record of the provincial government (his principal stock-in-trade), claiming for himself the honor of having two or three fingers in the pie when the Workmen's Compensation Act was under discussion. In fact, it appeared that the Compensation Act was mainly the work of "that great tribune of the people"—Simmons.

Provincial politics proved fairly smooth sailing, but in the arena of Dominion affairs, every issue touched by the Liberal candidate was turned into ammunition for the enemy, and as the ordeal became more trying the conviction grew in the mind of Mr. Simmons that he had surely struck a bunch of "those nasty Tories."

Mr. Simmons made a big blunder when the Lord's Day Act was brought up. Asked why the government had not enforced the law where the railroads were concerned he replied that he understood the act to be the work merely of the Lord's Day Alliance. He was blissfully ignorant of the part that organized labor had played in getting this measure on the statute book, and of the interest which organized labor took in its enforcement.

The erudition which Mr. Simmons has brought to bear on labor problems was illustrated when he was forced into a corner on the Alien Labor law. He had not heard, he said, of any proof being given of a single breach of the law by a corporation during the recent strike. When a machinist informed him that a dozen or so sworn affidavits had been sent to Ottawa from Medicine Hat alone, signed by men who had been brought across the line under contract, the Liberal-labor dilettante apologised and tried to look thankful for his enlightenment.

Why, asked a questioner, should it be up to the strikers to see that the law was enforced any way? This ignorant mechanic was under the impression that the law should be enforced by the proper authorities without the necessity of labor threats. He thought the officers of the law were supposed to enforce the law and see that its provisions were faithfully carried out. But of course, he was entirely wrong

Mr. Simmons had shown his inability to deal with questioners. In the Opera House meeting, and when he found himself in a hornet's nest of labor men, he fell an easy victim. He attempted to cut his visit short. As he took his hat in hand and prepared to beat a hasty retreat more hot shot brought him down, and he was forced for appearance sake, to remain and submit to further unkind criticism. His unadulterated praise of the Railway Commission made an opening for an other warm roast, but eventually Mr. Simmons escaped a sadder and wiserpolitician.

The rumor is denied that Mr. Simmons will address another labor conference, although he admits that he enjoyed on Saturday "the time of his life."

The News Can't Answer

But The Times will and Again Challenges The News

As was only to be expected, when The Times challenged The News to show a single charge made by Ames that was answered by Oliver, our contemporary had to acknowledge that it had nothing to stand on when it said: "the plain, unvarnishedtruth which the Minister of the Interior harded out in reference to the timber limit scandals was effective in removing any lingering doubt which may have existed regarding Mr. Ames irrational charges."

The Times challenged and The News flunked. As Oliver's address was given verbatum in The News, there was nothing else for it to do since anyone could read the way Oliver slipped around the issue.

The News flunked. But it tried to cover up its retreat by asking The Times questions. While The Times would be justified in ignoring these questions when the questioner refused the challenge, this paper will show that, unlike the Liberal party, the Conservatives have nothing to cover up, and will answer the questions.

The News said:

1. Will The Times tell us why Mr. Ames has not the courage of his convictions. Why did he not get up in his place in parliament and make formal charges against the members of the Government on his responsibility as a member of the House of Commons?

2. Will The Times tell us why Mr. Ames left the Opera House at Medicine Hat on August 14th, the night of his meeting here, one hour before the departure of his train from Medicine Hat.

3. Does it not fit into Mr. Oliver's explanations?

Question No. 1. The answer to this is one of the most severe censures to the honesty of the Laurier Government that can be brought in connection with the timber limit graft. Mr. Ames rose in the House, said that he suspected crookedness and asked that he be allowed to examine the original documents to prove it. This he was refused point blank by Messrs. Oliver and Laurier. The only evidence to be obtained was in those documents and Ames was refused access to them. He told what he suspected; he quoted the suspicious circumstances in connection with the tenders as far as known. But how (will The News please answer this) could any man make definite charges when he was deprived of all means of verifying his charges? If there were nothing in his suspicions why did Oliver and Laurier fight him so long on the original document question. Does it not seem reasonable that the men we elect to manage the country should have access to all the papers in connection with the government of the country. Then when the investigation was put in the hands of a committee with very limited powers, the Liberal majority on the committee prevented the proper examination of witnesses and so effectively shut out a close examination that the Conservatives in disgust called off the committee.

Is that question answered, News?

Question No. 2.—Mr. Ames left the Opera House on August 14th, just on the minute that the train had been announced for at the last information. Nelson Spencer, the chairman of the meeting had gone down to the telephone, called up the station and was told the train would be in in a few minutes. He told this to Mr. Ames before the audience, and the latter had hurriedly closed his speech. Had the train arrived at the time the station announced Mr. Ames would have been unable to get his trunks and lantern down to catch it. However, when he reached the station the train was late. The News wishes to imply that Ames was afraid to touch the Robins Irrigation deal here, but The News implied the same of Magrath, and has had to hang its head since our candidate showed he feared to discuss no question.

Is that question answered, News?

Question No. 3.—As Mr. Oliver made no explanation of anything in his address, this is the only unanswerable question.

Now that we have done this THE TIMES AGAIN CHALLENGES THE NEWS to show where Oliver answered one charge made by Ames. Either The News must answer or prove that it knows there was no instance, and that its twaddle about Oliver's "removing any doubts" regarding the timber scandal was only of the same nature as Oliver's "answers."

Police Court Items.

On the 10th inst., two foreign gentlemen, Mr. L. Naffock and Mr. Russian Pole (sic) were fined $5 and costs for disorderly conduct.

On the 11th Geo. Drant was fined $3 with 14 days imprisonment as the alternative. The money was paid.

James Smart, charged on the 13th with vagrancy was remanded till 10 a.m. on the 15th. He took advantage of the interval to emigrate.

Seyord, the man sent down to Lethbridge from Coleridge through the sleuth work of Jack McCarroll, escaped from the barracks last week.

On Thursday morning before Magistrate Kealy, E. J. Hunt was sued by S. Benson under a city by-law, for allowing his chickens to be at large. Mr. Benson, it appeared, had suffered annoyance from the trespassing birds, who were in the habit of raiding his garden. As this was the first prosecution under the by-law the magistrate treated the offense leniently, Mr. Hunt having to pay the costs of the court.

Magrath Sweeps Riding

Liberal Government Returned to Power by Smaller Majority---West Goes Conservative

When the returns came in from the city polling booths there was great jubilation in the Conservative Club rooms. Medicine Hat swamped Simmons so badly that it was merely a matter of waiting to see what Magrath's total majority would be.

But when the returns for Canada came in the Conservatives looked different. While many of the early returns favored the Conservatives, the big part was decidedly Liberal in tone.

Ontario might be said to have seated Laurier. Although Ontario has been almost solid Conservative, Laurier's triumphant march of the past month has shown his generalship. He spent his time trying to redeem the Protestant Province and his work was effective judging from results. Although his gains are few there, that he held his ground was a big thing for him.

Quebec, which has been steadily electing more Conservatives continued its good work, but in insufficient measure to seriously effect the general results.

New Brunswick was a disappointment for the Conservatives. Pugsley kept his seat, but detailed returns are very incomplete.

Nova Scotia has seen a big turnover for the Opposition, and although long a Liberal monopoly will send at least half a dozen Conservatives to the House.

Prince Edward Island turned Liberal, strongly reversing its majority of the last election.

In Manitoba the Opposition got in its strongest work. Haggart's majority in Winnipeg was an avalanche. Sifton just scraped in upon the early reports. The infamous Burrows was beaten as a fitting comment on the timber steals.

Saskatchewan looks as if it would be Liberal, but reports are incomplete.

Alberta has done nobly. Just what was expected of it has happened, and there looks to be four Conservatives out of the seven.

British Columbia has come out en masse for the Conservatives, and it is probable those not heard from will return Conservatives.

The lastest returns to the time of going to press give the Conservatives eighty-one, the Liberals one hundred and twenty-nine, and the Independents four.

The Provinces went something like this:—

Quebec, (sixty-five seats)
Conservatives	12
Liberals	50
Ontario (eighty-six seats)
Conservatives	45
Liberals	40
New Brunswick (thirteen seats)
Conservatives	2
Liberals	11
Nova Scotia (eighteen seats)
Conservatives	5
Liberals	11
P. E. I. (four seats)
Conservatives	1
Liberals	3
Manitoba, (ten seats)
Conservatives	6
Liberals	4
Saskatchewan (ten seats)
Conservative	2
Liberals	2
Alberta (seven seats)
Conservatives	5
Liberals	2
British Columbia (seven seats)
Conservatives	3
Liberals	0

Police Court News

The police have begun to reap the usual fall harvest of vags. Last week four were dealt with. Then Wednesday Jas. Murphy was given a months' employment on a government job at Lethbridge. Hans Fallex, was allowed one hour to quit the town. As failure to take advantage of his sixty minutes liberty would have meant a term of hard labor, Fallex hastily departed. On Friday Ernest Stewart and J. T. Thompson were both sent down for 2 months' imprisonment at Lethbridge for vagrancy.

J. Smallwood was charged on Thursday with drunkenness and disorderly conduct. The case was adjourned until two o'clock and in the meantime the man got out of the city.

Foster's Forecast

Washington, D. C., Oct. 24.— Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbances tocross continent Oct. 22 to 26, warm wave Oct. 21 to 25, cool wave Oct. 24 to 28. This was expected to bring the most radical weather features of the month with a tropical storm in the Carribean Sea, severe storms on the continent and a cold wave in the northwest.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about Oct. 27, cross Pacific slope by close of Oct. 28, great central valleys Oct. 29 to 31, eastern states Nov. 1. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about Oct. 27, great central valleys Oct. 29, eastern states Oct. 31. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about Oct. 30, great central valleys Nov. 1, eastern states Nov. 3.

This will be a dangerous storm on the Pacific coast and I warn all seagoing people to be on the alert for rough seas and boisterous weather. The storm will probably continue severe till it crosses the Rockies and then begin to lose force. From Manitoba westward rough weather will prevail during the passage of this storm.

When the storm had reached the Dakotas about Oct. 31, a great cold wave will develop west of Manitoba causing snows or blizzards and exceedingly cold weather. These early blizzards are dangerous to unsheltered stock. The cold wave will be very extensive, covering a large part of the continent east of the Rockies. It will enter the cotton belt and kill all growing cotton north of latitude thirty.

When that storm has cleared away will be an excellent time for gathering corn and picking cotton, particularly from Nov. 7 to 13. After that warm period low temperatures will prevail to near the end of the month and weather will not be so favorable for farm work. Another cold wave will come near Nov. 14, and still another about Dec. 1, but they will not be so severe as the one first described and which will reach meridian 90 about Nov. 2.

Athletics

Chgrley Crist who pitched for Edmonton last year was married last week in Calgary.

Chicago's champions of two world's series today lost to Detroit, seven to three, in the benefit game which netted the two teams over four thousand one hundred dollars and gave about six thousand six hundred admirers a chance to cheer. The chief interest of the afternoon programme was in the field day events that preceded the game.

Ty Cobb during those games, demonstrated that he is the fastest man in baseball. Cobb won the bunt and run event and captured the circling the cases prize, in which if correctly timed, he probably would have beaten the world's record, and then in a fast finish won the hundred yard dash from Davy Jones and Arthur Hofman.

Chicago's consolation in the field events came when Hofman, throwing into the teeth of a strong wind, won the long distance throw, with Sam Crawford second.

C. P. R. ELECTRIC PLANS

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 15.— Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who is in Winnipeg, said that the company had spent ten million dollars double-tracking the line between Winnipeg and Thunder Bay in the last year. It would now start on similar work through to the coast he said.

This, he said, was the cause of voting fifty million dollars of new stock last week. The company, he said, is preparing to operate trains over the mountains by electricity generated by water power for 700 miles, probably thebiggest railway undertaking in the history of the continent

DESPERADO CAUGHT.

Swift Current, Oct. 21.—Gobo Lavallee, a notorious Western desperado, wanted on charges of cattle and horse stealing here and in Montana, was captured last night by Sergt. Bottleley of the R.N.W.M.P. in a half breed shack here. The police have been after Lavellee for two years.

STRATHCONA ARREST

Strathcona, Alta., Oct. 20.—Thos. Oliver was arrested this evening by the city police, on suspicion of being the murderer of Thomas Burns on October 6. He was captured at one of the coal mines a short distance down the riverfrom this city, where he has been employed for some time. He had made the throat that he would never be taken alive, but when found this afternoon he was in a drunken stupor and was taken without any difficulty. He hes in the city jail tonight, and will come before the magistrate tomorrow morning for a preliminary hearing, charged with murder. The prisoner is a man fifty-six years of age, of strong physique and military bearing, having been a soldier in his younger days.

HAROLD NELSON AND A METROPOLITAN CASTE.

The most interesting of all the Salomesseen upon the stagein recent tears is the Salome shown in Clarence Bennett's masterly religious drama, "The Holy City" which is to be the offering at the Opera house on Tuesday, November 10th. Mr. Bennett's Salome is the most interesting because she is the most human of them all.

The Salome introduced in 'The Holy City' is a passionate woman of great beauty, but not the depraved and utterly sensual degenerate which Oscar Wilde sought to have accepted in the erotic drama which he gave to the world many years ago, and which has recently been made into a grand opera by Richard Strauss. The Salome shown in "The Holy City" is madly in love with a young Roman, named Marius, but it is not an unhealthy love. It is the love of a woman for a man, a passionate infatuation which fills her whole life and makes her frantically and insanely jealous of everyone who has any influence with the object of her affections.

This leads her, at the instigation of her mother, to demand and obtain from Herod, the Head of John the Baptist. The forerunner of the Savior has influenced Marius in to declaring that he would even sacrifice his love for Salome, for his faith in the Savior in whom he has come to believe. In a tragical scene in the last act at the gates of Jerusaleum, Salome accidentally kills Marius and then, stabbing herself, falls across his dead body, declaring her faith and belief in the lowly Nazarine who had met his death three days before on the Hill of Calvary.

Mr. Harold Nelson will be seen in the part of Marius, a young Roman soldier. Mr. Nelson is supported by the eminent actor Frederick Clarke and a strong metropolitan caste.

The Railwaymen and Lemieux Act

What the Union Officials Think of It.

Final Evidence of What Lemieux Act is to the Men.

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 3rd, '08.

To the Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux,
Minister of Labor,
Ottawa, Ont.

Dear Sir,

At a meeting held in this city on January 29th, 1908, composed of representatives of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Order of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and the Order of Railway Telegraphers from the different parts of Canada, it was directed that a copy of the following resolution, passed at this meeting, be sent to you in respect to the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907.

"Whereas, this Body, having carefully considered the application of the Industrial Disputes and Investigation Act, of 1907, with due regard to its operation in each case where it has been invoked in the dispute of Railway Employees and

"Whereas, it is the opinion of this body that no benefit has been derived therefrom that could not have been obtained by our well established methods of negotiating with the Railway Management, or throughthe operation of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1903, and that on the contrary, the operation of Act has in many instances, tended to disturb the harmonious relationship existing between the Railway Managements and the employees, and has further been a disadvantage in some cases, therefore be it

"Resolved that this joint committee representing the membership of the above named organizations, and voicing their expressed opinion and views hereby instruct our Legislative Representatives, to inform the Honourable, the Minister of Labor, that we are still unable to endorse the said act) and that the Government be respectfully requested to exempt the Railway employees herein represented, from its operation."

C. LAWRENCE, D. CAMPBELL,
Chairman Secretary.

Ottawa, Ont., March 16, '08.
Grand Union Hotel.

Hon. Lemieux:

Dear Sir,—

In reply to yours of February 8th, re Railwaymen's resolution in respect to the Industrial Disputes Act, I desire to apologize for the delay in answering. I expected to have had the gentlemen who were parties to the resolution in Ottawa, in connection with some business before the Railway Commission, but owing tothe death of the Chief Commissioner those matters had to be laid over and it was necessary for me to submit your letter to them individually I herewith submit for your consideration letters from Messrs. Campbell Murdock and Berry, in answer to mine, which speak for themselves also a resume of the experience of officers of other organizations effected by the Act.

In yours of that date you state, "I was not aware, however, that the operation of the Act has in many instances tended to disturb the harmonious relationship existing between the railway managements and their employees, and has further been a disadvantage in some cases, which is the reason assigned in the resolution why the meeting was unable to endorse the Act, and the Government requested to exempt the railway employees represented at the meeting from its operation," and you ask for these instances. I do not think that it is necessary that I should go very much farther than the attached letter which I have received from Mr. D. Campbell, Vice-President of the Telegraphers Organization. A gentleman who has had probably more experience in the application of this and the Act of 1908 than any other man in Canada. As a labor representative he having the experience in investigation under both Acts. The officers of the other organizations who have sent their objections to me have not had the experience that Mr. Campbell has had, but have had to contend with adverse conditions which they feel were brought about owing to the Act being upon the Statues.

Prior to Industrial Disputes Act being law, railroad organizations through their representatives dealt with the officials of railroad companies on an equitable basis, that is, one had the right of refusing or granting and the other had the right to ask and enforce. Today under the law as it stands, the one had the right of refusing and the other can do nothing until after a public body has investigated. This has brought about a condition which, in the minds of the officers of the organizations, is detrimental and creates enmity between the employees and the official that is very undesirable, and arguments against the bill on its introduction are shown to have been correct by the experience of Mr. Campbell and officers of other organizations.

You will recollect that in my arguments on the introduction of the bill, I endeavored to convince you that the railroad organizations were negotiators not strikers. We have succeeded up to the present in negotiating our differences, and that without striking, especially in later years Under the conditions as they exist, owing to the law, companies or officials are liable to sit back and refuse knowing that the men can only go to a limited extent. This prevents equitable negotiation and simply means that the millions of dollars that have been spent by the railway organizations in negotiating and on the education of experts within their organizations on the principles of negotiation has been lost. I might remind you of this one fact, that in order to have an equitable bargaining condition that the bargainers must stand on a level. The Industrial Disputes Act, I am forced to suggest to you, prevents the existance of that condition.

The law says that a strike or lockout is illegal until after an investigation under the Act. You must admit, however, a difference between a strike and a lockout. The one is an condition created by an individual, and the other is a condition which must be created by a number. You must also admit that a condition which is created by one person can be more easily evaded in so far as the law is concerned than a condition created by a number of men.

Under the law of 1903, these conditions did not exist. The parties to the differences negotiated their differences with the full knowledge that a possibility of a disagreement might result in an investigation which could be forced upon them by either party to the dispute, by the Minister or by any representative of any corporation. These conditions, you must admit, would bring about the same results as an investigation under the present law and at the same time allow equitable negotiation between the parties to the dispute. Mr. Campbell has pointed out in his letter that the Act of 1903 is much broader in its scope of investigation than the Act of 1907, and that the possibilities under that Act for an amicable adjustment of differences are better than those of the Act of 1907. I might say to you, that the Act of 1903, was constituted after a great deal of deliberation on the part of the then Minister of Labor, myself and other officers of the railroad organizations, with the object of bringing about just such conditions as you have no doubt endeavored to obtain under the Act of 1907, at the same time protecting the liberty of the organizations to act in their own protection if they deemed it necessary.

I must point out to you at this time that the railroad organizations are of too important a nature and are officered by men of too high character to disregard the principles of investigation if a demand is made at any time during a negotiation with officials. This being a fact, the conditions which have been brought about by the Industrial Disputes Act show no encouragement but rather a want of confidence in the Conservative measures which have always been the principal of those organizations.

In regard to the promotion of harmony that you expected to create between the industrial classes in Canada and their employers, I would call your attention to a paragraph in Mr. Campbell's letter in which he points out conditions as existingnow on the C.P.R. This, in itself, is an evidence that public investigations are not in the best interests of harmony, and should not be held, unless it is absolute necessity, and the questions at issue have gone beyond a point where harmony can exist. He very clearly points out there a condition that is sure to arise where officials statements or actions are being criticized by an employer before a public tribural for attempting to make an improper representation of a difference that is under consideration. It creates a feeling in his mind that would not have existed if the same arguments had been presented by a committee in negotiating with the officials alone.

Apart from the delay and the pretention of equitable negotiation, I look upon this as one of the worst features of the law. This may not be as applicable to men in other industrial classes, such as coal miners, where a mirer is discharged from a coal mine he can go to another and get a similar position and under the same conditions.

It is different with a railroad man who has worked for years to gain certain positions with the company, his ability being recognized, he is elected to represent his fellow employers in negotiation with the company, a position where he must defend their rights. Is he going to take the chances? Does it not follow that those positions are going to be filled by the more radical element?

If as Mr. Campbell states, men are discharged on account of the feeling that is engendered during an investigation before the Board of the working conditions such as wages and hours, it stands to reason that this unfortunate condition will be exceedingly magnified when the ill feeling which has prompted these dismissals becomes the subject of investigation.

The law has brought about a condition on which the representatives of the railway organizations realize that in the near future, will create a feeling of enmity between the men and officials, such as at present exist between some of the more radical organizations and their employers. We deplore this and hope and ask to be relieved from it, believing that we can negotiate our differences with more benefit to the men, and as much protection to the public, as exists under the Industrial Disputes Act.

Believe me,

J. HARVEY HALL,
Legislative Representative for the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Order of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and Order of Railroad Telegraphers.

Toronto, Feb. 19, '08.

J. H. Hall, Esq.,

Dear Sir,—

Referring to my letter of February 14th, in which I stated to you that I would furnish you with a resume of my experience of the operation and results of the Industrial Investigation Act, 1907, and which experience led me to endorse the resolution of the Joint Legislative Boards of the five railroad organizations in Ottawa, recently, in which exception was taken to the Act, I submit my views herewith. I also wish to offer you an apology for the delay, but wish to assure you that it has been due to the pressure of business in my office.

From the inception of the measure I had been opposed to it, but when it finally became law. I believed it my duty to accept the wisdom of parliament rather than my own, and patiently await the result. Let me also add, that it is my conviction that a strict adherence to any law will exemplify its merits or defects, and ultimately bring about its perpetuity or repeal. I would also like to add, in my own behalf, that I have honestly and conscientiously done my best to comply with the Act, and make the best of it.

I notice the Hon., the Minister of Labor states in his communication to you that the "special object of this legislation is the promotion of harmony among the industrial classes of Canada," it has also been urged by the ardent supporters of the Act, that it was also intended to protect the public from the suffering of the inconvenience of unnecessary strikes and lockouts.

This, then, appears to be the merit of the law. But should more be claimed for it, such additional claims can be obtained from the Railway Labor Disputes Act of 1903.

In regard to the rights of the public, I wish to state that the public should fully understand the nature and course of any trouble whereby it may be inconvenienced, but thisright is amply protected by the provisions of the Railway Labor Disputes Act of 1903, because the Minister of Labor can compel the parties to a dispute, to submit to conciliation investigation and arbitration. The power of the Board under the Railway Labor Disputes Act of 1906, is greater than under the Industrial Disputes Act of 1907, for while the findings of the Board are virtually no more binding upon the parties in either case, yet, morally, they are, because the force of the award in the former instance is greator because it is the duty of the Abritration Board to investigate the merits of the contentions of the parties and make their report accordingly. In the later case, after having heard the parties, and made their investigations, the Board makes its reports as to what in its opinion, would have prevented the strike. These interpretations have been arrived at by a strict application of the Act in the specific cases in which I have been interested, and in which the Boards have clearly stated their powers and duties under both acts.

A statement of the real merits of the rights of the parties would have much more weight in bringing about a settlement between the parties, and ought to be more satisfactory to the public.

There is not one single instance during the past 35 years, in this country much less since the enactment of the Railway Labor Disputes Act of 1903, wherein the public have been inconvenienced to any appreciable extent on account of a dispute between a railway company and their employees that would justify the application of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, to them.

In regard to the promotion of harmony among the industrial classes of Canada, let me say that so far as this applies to railroad employees, the results have been the very opposite. In the case in which our organization was concerned, and which was fully treated by the act, namely the recent dispute between the C.P.R. Co. and its telegraphers, I have before me now a report from one of the officers of that line, setting forth the discipline which has been meted out for trivial and trumped up offences, to eleven men on lines in the vicinity and East of Montreal four of whom have been dismissed, which clearly indicates that the Co. is attempting to retaliate upon us on account of the bitter feeling that was engendered during the recent negotiations before the Board of conciliation. It is the more pronounced in view of the fact that the dismissals are all either prominent officers of the order. In addition to this, it is further clearly pointed out to us by other sources of informatian that the company entertains very bitter feelings against our organization on account of our aggressiveness before the Board, and that they intend to make reprisals upon our ranks. Although we have gone through many negotiations with this Co. in the past and have had many serious difficulties to settle, never before has there been such a feeling engendered.

In regard to our aggressive action before the Board, I may say that such is necessary if our rights are to be protected, but Railway officials do not like to have their failings arrayed before a board of prominent men. The officials and committee may quarrel over these things as much as they will, but when once settled it is all forgotten, but when the dignity of the officer is stung by bringing up some of the unfair tactics that have been resorted to before a Board, it creates a bitterness that will live to retaliate upon the employees at a later date for railway officials are but men, and men are human.

In regard to the recent dispute between the G.T.P. and its telegraphers wherein the good officers of the very same board was had, I may say that a settlement was arrived at between the parties themselves without the Board having to make a final report. But if I may be permitted to express my humble opinion as to the results of things which might have happened had it been otherwise. I would say that if the Board in this case had made a final report and thereby conceded to the telegraphers anything of importance that the Co. has been unwilling to concede prior to that time, the company, if it had accepted the report at all, would have accepted it very much dissatisfied, and would ultimately have been disposed to retaliate upon the members of the Order. (Let me assure you that I do not make any such statements as these with any disrespect towards the worthy officials of either Company.)

ing with the railway companies, which have been followed by our organizations for years past, should be allowed to continue without interference by the theories of those who have had no practical experience in such matters. And should the re-

Therefore, I say again, in the strongest possible terms, that the well established methods of negotiationship between the parties in such cases become so strained that a settlement could not be reached, the Railway Labor Disputes Act of 1903 is then available.

In our negotiations with the C.P.R. Co. recently, the Company balked the negotiations and forced us into an investigation under the Act, apparently with the hope that by attacking favorable conditions which have been enjoyed for years andtheir apparent anxiety to withdraw those conditions provid weigh against conceding improvements in those conditions, when the matter was under consideration by the Board.

Let us also add that our recent troubles on account of the bitterness that was engendered through the working out of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act and the C.P.R. must now be borne by those upon whom it has been inflicted. Where will it all end? Who will support the families of the victims until justice is obtained? Who will pay the endless expense that will be incurred in the struggle to set matters right. True the Act is available but will not another application of it only create more bitterness rather than apply a remedy? Even though justice may be obtained through it, the treasury of an organization must suffer, I would like to express the hope that Parliament would relieve the railway men from the operation of this act, and that the trouble that has thus far been created,would be sufficient to warrant such results, but it is difficult for the timely involved theory of the highly cultured statesman or economist to bend to the experience of the humble uncultured toiler.

Yours, etc,

D. CAMPBELL,
3rd Vice President.

It is a Fact

That the competition in Bread Baking at our local exhibition was the keenest of all the different classes, and it is very pleasing to note that the bread baked from PRAIRIE PRIDE PATENT FLOUR won the sweepstakes over all others. This is as good a guarantee as could be had that the Medicine Hat Flour cannot be excelled by any of the so called high grade flours that are imported in here, and you can also buy it cheaper because there is no freight to be paid on it. It is manufactured locally, and sold locally by all dealers.

Phew! That's a Relief.

Well it's all over but the shouting.

How do you feel about it?

Are you on the defeated side or did you join in the cheering?

It depends upon that how you feel today. But next week you'll feel just about the same as usual, thank you, win or lose.

After all elections are not the only thing to live for. The Liberals didn't do as badly as they might when they had the purse strings, and most of us have made a fair success of things under them—some better than others.

The Government couldn't hold Canadaback, and it hasn't changed any now, Canada is bound to go ahead Liberal or Conservative. Canadians are too big to allow the Government too free a hard, and the party that does wrong is sure to come to grief sooner or later. That's one of the things we can lay to Canadians, and we're proud of it. A term more or less is only a hastener to the end if wrong is done. Sooner or later a country is bound to rise and demand a reasonable amount of honesty in the handling of the affairs of the country.

Providence holds no more protection for the crooked politician than it does for the dishonest merchant or workman. Justice will come.

Both sides have fought a great fight and the winners won it by fighting—the manner is left to their own consciences. The man who used money or undue influence has more to reckon with than the fear of being found out.

Every man has had something to fight for. Some worked for money, others for purity, others for position or fear or graft, or honest belief in his party. And the man who had an impure, unpatriotic motive will live to rue it.

It is not necessarily the right party that won. On earth things are not always worked that way immediately. But the winners had the popular support it is to be hoped—and that is almost everything.

In our personal warfares there has been more or less of harshness, of cunning of acrimony. A Liberal hit out at the first Conservative head he saw and the Conservative tried to forestall the blow by hitting first. Blows landed and cheeks flushed. Sharp words were said and a bitter immediate feeling was the result. At the moment it looked like eternal enmity, fight-on-sight and all that kind of hysterical sentiment. Men spat on their hands and took their coats off to men they had drunk with two months ago. Brother was against brother, father against son, friend against friend.

But now it's all over.

Go around to the friend you lambasted last week, and have a cigar with him. He's just looking for you because he's sure to miss you. Don't try to believe you can do without him. You can't—and you don't want to. Have a laugh at your brother and tell him the little schemes you worked. Don't rub it into "dad" because your side won. The chances are that he doesn't care so terriblymuch now it's all over. If you won you can afford to slap your political enemy on the back and take him to the picture-show. If you lost you're too good a sport to feel sore about it.

There are other things than elections. Here's Canada waiting for you to make it's name for it. Here's the Last Best West looking to you to protect its interests. Here's our own good city of Medicine Hat that has miles to grow in every direction. There's work enough to keep you so busy you won't miss the election hysteria. Buckle in and do it.

The Times in its fight for what it believed right has been just as square-jawed and as fiery-eyed as most of them. It fought for all it was worth, but it fought openly and above board, and no man can honestly charge it with a shady move. The Times has a respect for the man who fought back—honestly and openly. For the man or interest that was afraid to come into the open it has the same utter contempt it has always had. The thing that calls itself independent while it works on the sly is beneath notice. The thing that is afraid to take a stand is nailing down its own coffin lid. The thing that daren't attack an enemy or support a friend will have no friends. With that thing The Times isn't concerned.

But The Times may have said things that were part of this fight only. It may have hit hard, and it played no favorites. But The Times was always prepared to take its dose and now that it's all over, it extends its hands for united action in some work in which we are all interested.

A political opponent is an antagonist for very limited periods. And those periods are over. Come in and shake. We don't smoke but we have a brand of cigars some place here that is considered very smokable, and we'd like to talk it all over with you. But don't all come at once because our credit at the cigar store is limited.

Now we can all get down to other work—civic affairs for instance.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Did anyone notice the News answer The Times' challenge? Too many people know more of politics than The News for it to dare make an attempt? Must have felt awful to have to slink away out of sight when its reckless statements were taken up. But The News is getting used to that.

The Liberal Association sent out two leaflets Sunday which were supposed to show what Magrath and Simmons have done for labor. After the Simmons pamphlet was read it was found that Magrath's was blank. The Conservatives heaved a sigh of thankfulness for it would have been a terrible arraignment of Magrath to have had similar twaddle said of him as was inflicted on the reader in the Simmons pamphlet.

One of the first evidences of honesty in Liberal literature was accidentally presented on the last page of the Simmons pamphlet. After Simmons came here and said he was responsible for the 8-hour law, the booklet gives it all away by giving all the credit to Mr. Cushing. That took every point Simmons evermade away from him. And strange to relate Simmon's name is never mentioned in the pamphlet that is supposed to be praising him. Simmons had to give up his big closing rally at Lethbridge on Saturday night as everybody was going to hear Magrath?

The bright local correspondent for the Simmons sheet in Lethbridge got out of his system that laughable insinuation that Magrath didn't want to meet Simmons here and wouldn't come. However, he needn't be afraid to appearon the street again. The elections are over and nobody will bother to box his ears.

The Winnipeg Free Press says: The Medicine Hat Times having assayed a defence, after a fashion, of the notorious R. C. Edwards, etc. As everyone knows who read The Times comment, there was no defence of Edwards even hinted at, but rather the contrary. It was the equally offensive letter in the Calgary News that came in for criticism, and that very justly as that paper itself will now admit.

Here are a few names that are being suggested for the position of mayor: A. C. Hawthorne, F. O. Sissons, F. F. Fatt and J. Howson. Whatever the merits or demerits of these men they are at least entirely independent and thoroughly honest. Medicine Hat wants no revival of the clique that existed two and three years ago. The man independent of cliques is the only man for Mayor. We've seen enough of favoritism in the Dominion Government without bringing anything like it back into civic affairs again. No man has any strings on these men

A council that would include men like Hawthorne, Sissons, DesBrisay, Fatt and Hutchinson with two or three of the present council would soon turn things inside out over at the city hall and enable us to find out why our tax rate (with gas worth eight mills to us) is still as high as 16 mills. Is there any ratepayer in this city has the least idea where the money goes to?

Give us three or four of these men and we'd have saved at least five mills this year, by cutting out the expenditures that many of the citizens are openly characterising as much like graft.

During the next few weeks The Times will have something further to say about certain events in connection with the Council—nice little schemes that work out to the personal emolument of at least one Alderman, and some outsiders whomust at least be very close friends.

Well, The Times carried on a straight election fight and it is satisfied with that. This paper had nothing to conceal, no bones to pick, and cannot be accused of cowardice or underhand work of any kind. The only item that appeared in The Times that was taken so seriously as to make it possibly appear unfair, was the remark about Hon. Mr. Cushing being at a Liberal caucus at the Royal Hotel one Sunday. The Times has had no proof whatever that this was not so, but is willing to take the word of one or two who denied it, not necessarily because they are essentially truthful but because the item was published largely in a jocular spirit, and if resented by Mr. Cushing's friends, it is too important to demand proof of.

There has been no beating around the bush by the paper. The editor has worked for the Conservative interests himself, and has not been afraid to throw the whole weight of the paper on the side he considered right. Theeditor of The Times isn't one of those creatures who hangs around the party caucuses willing to do any old thing, but bring his paper into the fight. The Times fights all its fights openly without fear or favor. The fact that a man is a subscriber or an advertiser does not bind the hands of The Times for a second. This fact the people are beginning to understand and a great part of The Times patronage is derived from Liberals as well as Conservatives—Liberals who are bigger than politics, men who can fight without smallness, who understand an honest opponent.

Speaking on this subject The Times is very glad to see that the local Liberals are good hearted, honest fighters almost to a man. Only two cancellations of the paper can be laid to politics—neither of which subscriptions are exactly necessary to The Times. None of us will suffer. Only one ad. was cancelled for political reasons. As the man who did it is just as ashamed of his act as he would be supposed to be, his name need not be given at present.

To all the other Liberals, here's the compliments of The Times for the good fight you put up.

COULD NOT GO TO WORK BACK WAS SO WEAK.

Backache is the primary cause of kidney trouble. When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are liable to become affected.

Heed the warning; check the Backache and dispose of any chances of further trouble.

If you don't, serious complications are very apt to arise and the first thing you know you will have Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, the three most deadly forms of Kidney Trouble.

Mr. James Bryant, Arichat, N.S., was troubled with his back and used Doan's Kidney Pills, he writes:—"I cannot say too much about the benefit I received after using three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. I was greatly troubled with an aching pain across the small of my back. I could not go to work and my back was so weak I would have to sit down. It would go away for a few days but would always return. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I must say they completely cured me."

LIVER COMPLAINT

The chief office of the liver is the secretion of bile, which is the natural regulator of the bowels.

Whenever the liver becomes deranged, and the bile ducts clogged, liver complaint is produced, and is manifested by the presence of constipation, pain under the right shoulder, sallow complexion, yellow eyes, slimy-coated tongue and headache, heartburn, jaundice, sour stomach, water brash, catarrh of the stomach, etc.

Liver Complaint may be cured by avoiding the above mentioned cause, keeping the bowels free, and arousing the sluggish liver with that grand liver regulator,

LAXA-LIVER PILLS

LIVER COMPLAINT.

Mr. Geo. Fawcett, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "Having suffered with liver complaint for years and tried all sorts of remedies, I was advised to try Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I must say, that after taking two vials of them, I feel quite a new man, and can strongly recommend them to anyone."

Heredity Triumphant

By Alice Leavitt Carson

Copyright, 1908, by E. C. Parcells

A shrill whistle echoed along the sunny avenue. Mary Dexter jumped from her seat on the porch, scattering embroidery silks in all directions. She waved her handkerchief in response. Then she ran into the house calling: "Aunt Linda! Where are you? Here's Dave Green to see you!"

Without waiting for a reply she returned to the porch just in time to greet the young man who came up the steps. "Glad to see me, Mary?" he asked as with a hasty glance around she put up her face for a kiss. Then the two sat down on the top step in earnest, subdued conversation. Mary Dexter was a maid of nineteen with a fresh peachblow complexion. Today, wearing a simple white frock, she looked her best—and knew it.

In a few minutes an elderly woman came out the front door. Her hair, worn as a coronet, was silvery white though she was only forty. Age had touched her face lightly, pressing in the wrinkles with loving fingers that left only sweetness in the expression. Rumor told a romantic tale of Linda Pennington's life, and for once rumor was right. A girlish engagement with a young army officer who fell in his first battle, a few years as a nurse in the war, interrupted by a marriage with Lyall Pennington, early widowhood and a subsequent life devoted to good work—these were among the incidents in her story. For many years all her plans had been for Mary, whom she had adopted long ago.

Mrs. Pennington had taken a great interest in Mary because she came from her own town, and the case of the child was particularly pitiful, for there were no near relatives to whom she could be sent.

Fresh from the sadness caused by the death of her husband, Linda found the child's companionship a great comfort. Mary had passed serenely through the stages of childhood and youth and now, at nineteen, under the training of private tutors, was prepared to enter

"ISN'T IT A BEAUTY, AUNT LINDA?"

Merton college in the fall. After graduation endless possibilities opened before her. This was the situation that July morning when Mrs. Pennington came out on the porch and greeted young David Green, one of Mary's admirers.

He was a manly fellow of twenty-one, son of a prosperous farmer of the rural district. He had lately been given a good sized tract of land by his father, with the instruction to "see what he could do with it," and he was doing well.

"You've just come back from New York, haven't you, David?" asked Mrs. Pennington.

"Yes," said Mary. "He's been away two whole days."

The sigh with which this was said brought a laugh from the other two. Mrs. Pennington seated herself in the rocker.

"Why, Mary," she said, "is this your embroidery on the floor? Pick it up before it gets dirty."

The girl leaned back comfortably against the railing. "You pick it up, Dave," she said indifferently. And the young man did so. But Linda bit her lip in vexation. It was a little thing, but characteristic of the way Mary made all her friends wait on her.

"Did you go away on business, David?" she asked hastily.

"No—yes—well, I don't know as you'd call it exactly business."

"I should," said Mary decidedly—"the most important business for you just now, Dave." The lad laughed, embarrassed.

"Dear me, this sounds very mysterious," said Mrs. Pennington, smiling. "What is it all about?"

"I went to get something for Mary," said David.

"And here it is," said the girl, holding out her left hand. "Isn't it a beauty, Aunt Linda?" A handsome solitaire flashed into view.

The significance of the stone did not enter Linda Pennington's mind, for it was many years since she had thought of such things. "Mary, you know you may not receive presents of jewelry from young men," she was beginning, but the words died on her lips. Mary and David, looking for some sign of approval, read in her face grief, disappointment and refusal.

"Aren't you pleased?" went on the girl. "We've been engaged since Christmas. Before I visited Florrie Tucker, Dave asked me and I said, 'I'd see.' Then while I was away he kept writing to me—and I always did like him best of any of the boys—so I just had to say 'yes.' He's so obstinate, Dave is, he wouldn't take 'no.'"

"Of course I am very much surprised," Linda said when she could trust herself to speak. "I think you are both too young to talk of such things. Besides, you are going to college soon, Mary, and I do not approve of indefinite engagements."

"But there's nothing indefinite about our engagement," replied the girl airily, twisting the ring on her finger. "We are to be married in September."

"What?"

"Oh, yes, it's all settled," nodding her head. "I wrote this morning to Merton canceling my application. I'm tired of study—what is the use of it? I know more now than any other girl—or boy almost—in Dorsettown. Just think, after September I'll never have to study any more!"

Mrs. Pennington rose in wrath from her chair. "Mary," she cried sharply, "you don't know what you're saying! You are giving up carelessly what I would give years of my life to have had when I was a girl—what you will always regret giving up. I don't often exercise my authority as your guardian, but when you act like a silly child I must. I ask you—no, I order you—to break this engagement!"

Mary sprang up and stamped her foot angrily. "Well, I won't!" she cried. "And you can't make me; I'm nineteen years old."

Linda sank back in the chair with trembling lips. The mother who had eloped was speaking through her daughter. "Mary, if you love me," she pleaded, but she knew it would be no use. The girl's heredity was showing, and she must bow to the inevitable.

Mary never would understand what a blow this was to her guardian's ambitions for her. College, then advanced work, or, if the girl preferred, art study in Paris or music in Germany—these the plans she had made. And this mad whim must overturn them all!

The girl's storm of fury spent itself in floods of tears. "Aunt Linda, I can't. Don't ask me to," she sobbed.

David drew his sweetheart toward him. He had been a silent, troubled witness of the scene. Now he spoke quietly.

"It's like this, Mrs. Pennington, we love each other, and we don't see the use of waiting. If we wait four years by then we'll have grown apart perhaps, and it will be harder to give in to each other. We want to be married at once. I am making a good living; my people are pleased, and we only want your consent."

But she shook her head impatiently. "I have nothing against you, David, but—it is impossible."

"Oh, no, Mrs. Pennington!" he cried. "Think—think—when you were young and in love. Don't you remember how it was then?"

How old memories can rise again! A vision of a boyish soldier, with pleading eyes and tender smile. And that parting—could she ever forget the sound of his voice, low and thrilling?

She gave a shuddering sigh and opened tear dimmed eyes. "I was only seventeen and he was twenty—and I never saw him again. His body could not be found. Ah!" Steadying her voice, she went on. "You are right, David. It was foolish and wrong to try to control Mary's life. She must work it out for herself. My plans were far different from this, but I can give them up, as I have given up others."

"Dear Mrs. Pennington," said David, grasping her hand.

Then, when Mary ran off to set the supper table and David followed, with awkward attempts to help, Linda Pennington drew forth an old locket and gazed long at the portrait within. "Once I thought that the shattering of my dreams would kill me," she murmured. "But I lived to thank God for other dreams and duties that came. So it will be now, I think."

"Supper is ready, Aunt Linda!" called Mary, and Mrs. Pennington turned from the sunset glow.

A Welsh Rip.

Every nation has a Rip Van Winkle of its own, but the Welsh story of Rip is unique. He is known as Taffy ap Sion. One morning Taffy heard a bird singing on a tree close by his path. Allured by the melody, he sat down until the music ceased. When he arose, what was his surprise at observing that the tree under which he had taken a seat had now become dead and withered! In the doorway of his home, which, to his amazement, had also suddenly grown older, he asked of a strange old man for his parents, whom he had left there, as he said, a few minutes before. Upon learning his name the old man said: "Alas, Taffy, I have often heard my grandfather, your father, speak of you, and it was said you were under the power of the fairies and would not be released until the last sap of that sycamore had dried up. Embrace me, my dear uncle—for you are my uncle—embrace your nephew." Welshmen do not always perceive the humor of this somewhat novel situation of a youth—for Taffy was still merely a boy—being hailed as uncle by a gentleman perhaps forty years his senior.

Fun For Him.

Askum—Who was that man who stopped to talk to you? Dubley—That's my old barber. Askum—Does he usually stop you on the street. Dubley—No, but he knows I'm shaving myself now and he just wanted to look at my face and gloat over me.—Atlanta Constitution.

that were presented in opposition to the Act at the time it was before Parliament, I feel that for me to go into any lengthy discussion in the matter, could not be but a reiteration of what has already been said relative to said Act. You will remember when discussing this Bill in the presence of the Right Honourable the Minister of Labor, one of the contentions we presented was that the Act would have a tendency of straining the relations between the Railway Officials and the employee.

The retaliatory feeling that very often displays itself by intemperate disciplines being imposed upon employees who are honestly representing their side of the case, and who are compelled to frequently, use arguments in order to properly represent their case to a public tribunal which has a tendency to create a determination in the minds of the Railway Officials to whom the employee may have reference in his argument to get even with that employee, although the employee does so without prejudice and in accordance with the conditions as they honestly exist; where, under the old principal of private conference these or more forcible arguments would have been forgotten when negotiations were completed and a settlement arrived at. We have evidences of this being so in several instances. While it is true the Hon. the Minister of Labor, may feel that the gentlemen conducting the investigation are in a position to provide against unjust disciplines being handed out to the employee, by the official, it may be so with some positions (?) but I can assure him, that it is not so with railway positions, in consideration of the fact that rules governing the operation of railways (as far as the employees are concerned) are of such a nature that it is impossible for the employee to, at all times, give strict adherence to the rules of the company and retain his position, the railway officials have at times admitted this themselves. There are numerous ways whereby a Railway Official can penalize the employee who takes an active part in the welfare of his fellow-employee, and none but those who are thoroughly acquainted with railway life are in a position to judge if said official has acted in accordance with the principles of even handed justice. Following this comes the additional expense, it is not the first expense that we are fearful of, but the expense incurred from the affects of the investigation, not necessarily monetary expenses but harsh disciplines, whereby innocent men and their families are oftimes compelled to suffer.

The Honourable, the Minister of Labor, cannot but agree when I say that at no time in this country, in the history of our organization, has the public been inconvenienced, to any extent, on account of a dispute between the Railway Companies and their employees. These conditions have been brought about by the adoption of a straight forward policy, administered in a frank, fair and impartial manner.

The railway men of this country have never displayed an inclination for a Labor War, what they court is industrial peace. I can assure you, if in any way either legal or extra-legal, the representatives of the railway organizations could avert a strike, they would do so, and the classes they represent would applaud them for so doing.

While it is true strikes are most unfortunate things it would be a more unfortunate thing if the thousands of men employed on Canadian Railways should be taught that they have absolutely no personal rights.

After eleven months consideration of the measure, and in which time the effects of said measure have not been lost sight; the same discontent displays itself among the railway men as did when the bill was before Parliament. I have travelled from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast, including all the railroads in Canada, hearing this matter discussed pro and con, and I can frankly say that while the railroad men, at all times, are law abiding citizens and have a desire to keep this law as well as others, they cannot but feel that they should not be included in the Act, 1907, when they are already amenable to the Railway Labor Disputes Act, 1903.

I did incline to believe that what prompted the passing of a measure such as the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907, was the trouble that had been expressed with some of the laboring classes, (not including the railway men) and who, I understand have from the inception of the Act, paid little or no attention to it.

I am unable to see where sufficient protection, for all, is not obtainable under the law as provided for in the Railway Disputes Act of 1903, and trust that Parliament will take this into consideration and relieve us from the operation of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, of 1907, and I am,

Yours fraternally.

(Signed.) S. N. BERRY,

Vice President, O. R. C.

New Haven, Conn., March 12.

Mr. J. H. Hall,

Legislative Representative,

Ottawa, Ontario.

Dear Sir and Brother,

Referring to the resolution adopted at the joint meeting of the several railway organizations on January 29th, 1908, wherein the representative members of these organizations, after almost one year's trial of the provisions of the Lemieux Bill, went on record as being opposed to the provisions of that bill, and also in compliance with the request contained in your letter of February 26th, to me, you will find below some of the objections to this measure as I view them.

It has been my good fortune to have had no personal experience with the application of this Law, but as a member of the Tainmens' Organization, and a Canadian citizen, I have watched closely and with great interest its operation, and have honestly endeavored to make this observation unbiased. In the several instances where the provisions of the measure have been invoked and applied to railway labor disputes since the inception of the Act, it has only apparently acted as anartificial means of obtaining a real result, leaving in its wake, I am confident, bitterness and a retaliatory spirit in the minds of the parties in dispute, which should not exist. Canadian railroad men as a whole, are law regarding and abiding citizens, and it appears to them that a law such as the Lemieux Act should have at least sufficient good intent in it escaped from the barracks last Reek to be respected, that is, viewing it from the standpoint of the railroad men. But the actual conditions, in respect to this measure as it appears to these railroad men, are that such a measure as the Lemieux Bill is a ridiculous farce, and if they were as arbitrarily obstinate in maintaining their beliefs and desires in reference to this measure, as the gentlemen were who placed such a law on the statutes books they could without question make of the measure as applicable to disputes in which they might be concerned, the farce mentioned above.

To explain further, it would only be necessary for the railroad organizations to present as formerly their demands to the Company, with no thought of modification or negotiation until such time as this measure had got in its work, when the railroad men and the companies with whom they might be negotiating would find themselves in identically the same position as if the law had never been made. A condition of this kind can certainly not have a good effect on the minds of the average individual railroad man, nor will such conditions suggest to him the respect for law and order, which is to be desired. Of course, I do not have any great hopes that the gentlemen who placed this law upon our statutes book will undertake to modify the law or eliminate it entirely, but I do sincerely hope that they will see the necessity of at least giving the railroad men the consideration that they have demonstrated that they are entitled to during the past number of years. That is, that the law which is meant to be so unfair as this measure, and which has caused already a great deal of unnecessary bad feeling between certain employers and employes, should be as far as the railroad organizations are concerned removed from the statute books, I remain,

Yours fraternally,

(Signed,) JAMES MURDOCK

Vice Grand Master,

Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

Ottawa, April 2nd, 1908.

My Dear Sir,

. . . . . .

With regard to the claim that the result of the various settlements under the Act in the case of Railway disputes has been to create ill feeling between the Companies and the employes I must point out that no investigation has occurred save where a strike was declared to be imminent so that whatever minor degree of ill feeling or friction may exist after a settlement it is obvious that this condition would have been infinitely more serious had a settlement not been effected, and had the threatened disturbance of industry been brought about. I have moreover, had so many assurances of the good effects of many of these settlements, that I cannot but believe you and the other gentlemen whose letters I am discussing are in a measure mistaken in the view taken as to the ill feeling created by the operation of the Act.

. . . . . .

With regard to the general question of relieving railway employes from the operation of the Act I can only say that the representations received by the Department on this subject do not appear to justify any departure at the present time from the position taken when the measure was before Parliament last year. That the act is not perfect I am fully aware, and when it is again before the House every suggestion looking to its improvement or modification will receive the most careful consideration, but it is not in the meantime, deemed desirable to make any changes until there has been further opportunity of observing the operation of the measure.

I remain,

Very truly yours,

(Signed.) RUDOLPHE LEMIEUX.

Minister of Labor.

J. Harvey Hall, Esq.,

Ottawa, Ont., April 4, '08.
Grand Union Hotel.

The Honorable Rodolphe Lemieux,
Minister of Labor,
Ottawa, Ont.

Dear Sir,—

This acknowledges yours of April 2nd, I desire, however, to express my regrets that the large amount of evidence that has been presented to you against the Industrial Disputes Act and its application to the railway men has apparently been misunderstood. I would also infer from your letter that you have been badly informed in respect to the application of the Act and the results, but I would suggest that if your information has been received from thesame source as that which is given to the public through the Labor Gazette, there is some excuse for the position you take. I have special reference to the report on page 1088 of that journal for the month of March. Information is conveyed to the public there that is wrong and is liable to imply a wrong inference as to the railway men and their principles of negotiation through their organizations.

You speak in your letter that in the several instances of investigation before a Board that a declaration was made that a strike would take place. I desire at this point to call your attention to Section 15 of the Act, which says, "A statutory declaration setting forth that, failing an adjustment of the dispute or a reference thereof by the Minister to a Board of Conciliation and Investigation under the Act, to the best of the knowledge and belief of the declarant, a lockout or strike, as the case may be, will be declared, and that the necessary authority to declare such a lockout or a strike has ben obtained." You will note with what slight pretence of the possibility of a strike that this declaration can be made. We claim that if the Industrial Disputes Act had not been on the Statutes Books that there would have been no necessity to have asked for an investigating Board; that negotiations should have gone on and settlements been concluded as were done prior to this Act becoming law. I feel that I am quite justified in saying that not in one single instance was a strike imminent prior to an investigation held under this law wherein train service men were concerned. I would point out to you that the law discourages the principles of negotiation and in order to bring about a finality in respect to the difference, and to bring the matter before a Board, a declaration must be made by some one. And to illustrate how far some will go in making this declaration I would call your attention to the application made by the Grand Trunk Railway Company, dated June 27th last. You will note that this application was made by the Company's officials. Did they make a declaration that they were going to lock their engineers out? You musta dmit they did not. Such an act being too ridiculous to comprehend. Then they must have made a declaration that their engineers were going on strike. This is even more ridiculous than the other, because at the time the Company made the application they had only received a schedule from the engineers setting forth wages and conditions of employment, which they asked the company to consider, and with no notice or suggestion from them that they would or contemplated going on strike but rather that the matter was one for discussion and negotiation.

I would be pleased indeed to know how and under what conditions the Grand Trunk Railway Company made this declaration, in order to bring the matter before a Board operating under the law.

We will next take the place of the telegraphers employed by the same Company. You will note that this application was also made by the Grand Trunk Company and the same argument applies as in the case of the engineers. No doubt the telegraphers would have made the application in the Company had not done so, believing that the settlement as recommended by the Board who investigated the differences of the Canadian Pacific Telegraphers would have been repeated in their case. In respect to the settlement made by the Grand Trunk Telegraphers you take issue with the statement made by Mr. Campbell that the Committee withdrew from the Board and settled their differences with the Company without their assistance. Let me point out to you that I have it from the committee themselves that they were so disappointed and disgusted with the treatment that they were receiving from the Board in respect to their claims that they withdrew their case and settled it themselves

In the case of the Canadian Pacific Telegraphers the negotiations did go on for a considerable time but were handicapped owing to this law. The Committee being continually invited by the officials to go to Ottawa and get this law put into force, believing that owing to the fact that they were paying higher salaries to their operators than any other road in Canada that they would have received judgment in their favor from a Board. But owing to the aggressiveness and the determination displayed by the C.P.R. Committee before the Board their demands were practically all granted. How different in the case of the Grand Trunk men, who had a better case than that of the C.P.R. and who were willing to leave it to the decision of the Board until they saw that they were not going to get fair treatment.

I would again call your attention to the report of references under the law on page 1088 of the labor Gazette, March number. I desire to say that there is no justification for the inferences conveyed there that strikes were averted, and I consider it will be a great misfortune if the public are given to understand that railwaymen are strikers. It is also a misfortune that the public should be made acquainted unnecessarily with differences that may exist between employer and employee. It cannot help but create a feeling of enmity in the end.

I regret very much the position you are taking on this question. You are doing a serious injustice to the railway employees of Canada and I repeat again that you are creating a condition that will have very serious results and I suggest that in the interest of peace and in the interest of fair adjustment of questions between companies and the employees that they be relieved from the application of this law. I make this last appeal in the hope that your last letter was not final in respect to our request.

Believe me,

Very truly yours,

(Signed.) J. HARVEY HALL.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

Is A Remedy Without An Equal For COUGHS, COLDS, And All Affections Of The THROAT and LUNGS.

Coughs and Colds do not call for a minute recital of symptoms as they are known to everyone, but their dangers are not understood so well. All the most serious affections of the throat, the lungs and the bronchial tubes, are, in the beginning, but coughs and colds.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the admonition to all persons affected by the insidious earlier stages of throat and lung disease, as failure to take hold at once will cause many years of suffering, and in the end that terrible scourge of "Consumption."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is not Sold as a Cure for Consumption but for affections tributary to, and that result in, that disease. It combines all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth, and is absolutely harmless, prompt and safe. So great has been the success of this wonderful remedy, it is only natural that numerous persons have tried to imitate it. Don't be humbugged into taking anything but "Dr. Wood's." Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

adian Pacific Telegraphers wouldhave been repeated in their case. In respect to the settlement made by the Grand Trunk Telegraphers you take issue with the statement made by Mr. Campbell that the Committee withdrew from the Board and settled their differences with the Company without their assistance. Let me point out to you that I have it from the committee themselves that they were so disappointed and disgusted with the treatment that they were receiving from the Board in respect to their claims that they withdrew their case and settled it themselves

In the case of the Canadian Pacific Telegraphers the negotiations did go on for a considerable time but were handicapped owing to this law. The Committee being continually invited by the officials to go to Ottawa and get this law put into force, believing that owing to the fact that theywere paying higher salaries to their operators than any other road in Canada that they would have received judgment in their favor from a Board But owing to the aggressiveness and the determination displayed by the C.P.R. Committee before the Board their demands were practically all granted. How different in the case of the Grand Trunk men, who had a better case than that of the C.P.R., and who were willing to leave it to the decision of the Board until they saw that they were not going to get fair treatment.

I would again call your attention to the report of references under the law on page 1088 of the labor Gazette, March number. I desire to say that there is no justification for the inferences conveyed there that strikes were averted, and I consider it will be a great misfortune if the public are given to understand that railwaymen are strikers. It is also a misfortune that the public should be made acquainted unnecessarily with differences that may exist between employer and employee. It cannot help but create a feeling of enmity in the end.

I regret very much the position you are taking on this question. You are doing a serious injustice to the railway employees of Canada and I repeat again that you are creating a condition that will have very serious results and I suggest that in the interest of peace and in the interest of fair adjustment of questions between companies and the employees that they be relieved from the application of this law. I make this last appeal in the hope that your last letter was not final in respect to our request.

Believe me,

Very truly yours,

(Signed,) J. HARVEY HALL.

Hallowe'en Novelties

In decorating rooms or tables for Hallowe'en parties autumn leaves play a most important part, and whether they be the genuine leaves or those of paper certainly no decoration is more attractive. The real leaves when sent from the florist's are, of course, an easy solution to the problem of Hallowe'en decoration but it adds infinitely more pleasure to the festival if they are gathered by the girls and boys who are to participate in the good time of the evening. For the girl who cannot gather her autumn leaves it is great fun to make them from paper, and one may turn out a great many branches of beautiful leaves without the expenditure of much time or an unusual amount of skill. The paper foliage, of course, has the great advantage of not wilting and drying up in heated rooms as does the natural foliage.

In making the paper foliage natural branches are used, and on these are wired the small branches of leaves. The leaves are cut from plain color on a table and hastily brushed over with vermilion yellow and green water color, and sometimes with a touch of gilt. The foundation color may be green, yellow or brown. The leaves are then allowed to dry and they will curl up a little in doing so, which makes them look more natural. Large branches of leaves are used to decorate the fireplace, mantle piece and window corners, while for the table there are separate leaves, crepe paper, which is spread out with stems bound with brownish green tissue paper or small branches laid around the central decoration. The leaves may also be cut from the Hallowe'en napkin drapery paper, etc. which comes especially for such uses during the festival. This is probably the easiest method of making the foliage, although it does not, of course, afford the same opportunity for the exercise of individual skill and taste.

Another favorite Hallowe'en decoration, that of the pumpkin vine, is also made of paper in two tones of green, with the rich pumpkins in natural colors gleaming from among the heavy dark foliage. The pumpkins are made of the crepe paper stuffed with cotton when they are to be merely decorative. Sometimes, however, a pumpkin vine is used as a means of storing away treasures which are to be distributed among the guests. The vine may be used to decorate a corner of the room, but is not hung too high for the guests to pluck the treasure pumpkins with ease. Each pumpkin is made over a box which contains a favor significant of the season. The outside of the box is surrounded by cotton so as to make a globe, which when covered with the yellow crepe paper will resemble a pumpkin. When it is preferred to have the pumpkin vine for a table decoration it is arranged in a circle in the centre, but near enough to the edge of the table for each guest to reach it with ease. The pumpkins are then so distributed that each guest has his portion of the fruits of the evening directly in front of his place.

Jack o' lanterns containing favors in the form of Hallowe'en fortunes or emblems, black cats, witches, bats, &c., are very popular and most effective for a party given in honor of the festival. They are made after plans with yellow ribbons extending the usual manner of Jack Horner from the Jack o' lantern, which is hung in the centre of the room, to each of the guests. The Jack is covered with pumpkin colored paper with dark green trimmings, and his features are most effectively carried out in black tissue paper cut to resemble his distinctly plebeian eyes, nose and mouth.

Most attractive witches, cats, bats, &c., which are a necessary part of the Hallowe'en decorations, may also be cut from the decorated paper unless one requires a very large size. A little ingenuity, even though skill in drawing be lacking, may envolve a witch as sizable as is desired from back paper, and nothing else. A silhouette witch is most effective and when armed with a paper broom adds a striking note to the Hallowe'en feast.

The witch is cut from crepe paper and mounted on a stiffer wrapping paper or other mat paper, which is first covered with black tissue paper. The witch's broom is made of a slender round stick wound withblack tissue paper, the broom part being made of strips of paper formed into a brush and tied around about three inches from the top with a paper cord. The handle of the broom is pasted to the back of the witch, being held in place by a strip of black paper. It is necessary to have both sidesof the witch black only in case she is to be suspended and there is danger of her revolving. If she is to be placed flat against the wall any color will do for the back.

For a large Hallowe'en party a good device is the distribution of fortunes from the witch's caldron. Any young girl may play the part of the witch, but the effect will be heightened if a girl with black or green eyes and a rather thin face be chosen. A round faced, blue eyed witch is a little disappointing. A small girl usually takes the part better than a large one.

The witch should be dressed in a long cloak, which may be made of paper, cheesecloth or silk, but should be black and should almost completely cover her, showing only her high heeled slippers. The capes are made very full, with gathered ruffs that stand up about the throat. The tall peaked witch's cap, decorated with appropriate symbols in white, red or yellow, complete the costume. The witch stands under branches of autumn foliage and stirs the brothwhich is supposed to be bubbling in the caldron. From time to time shebends down and pulls out of the pot a fortune, which is handed to the guest whose turn it is to visit the witch at that momert. The fortunes are in the form of favors—the pumpkins, carrots, cucumbers, apples, nuts, etc. —all of which are really little boxes, inside of which is corcealed the message which the witch has for each recipient of a fortune at her hands. The tiny objects so concealed should be of some significance considered as fortunes. To one, for instance, may go a silver ring, meaning a speedy engagement; to another a travelling bag, meaning a journey, etc. Each hostess will be able to evolve for herself a variety of fortunes suitable to her guests.

As a variation from the usual Hallowe'en games, a competition in making Jack-o'-lantern faces is amusing. Each guest is furnished with a flat wooden pie plate and some black tissue paper. Scissors and paste pot are conveniently placed. The object of the competition is to make Jack-o'-lantern faces on the pie plates. The features of the Jacks are cut from the black tissue paper. Prizes are given for the best faces orthose most interesting in expression. This idea may be varied by having the faces called for those of public men, for instance the President of the United States, &c. Most amusing caricatures are sometimes obtained in this manner. An even more seasonable competition would be that in which the faces were made on pumpkins, these being real or made of the yellowpaper. The pie plate competition is, however, less difficult of accomplishment.

Traditional Hallowe'en games are not usually omitted from a party given on that night, even when innovations are introduced, for after all there are always a new set of girls and boys coming on who have not become so familiar with the old games thatthey are tired of them. Themost ancient and enduring of these games are those in which apples and nuts are used. The apple games includethe throwing of the apple paring over the shoulder to see what initial it makes the resultant letter being the first of the future husband's or wife's name. Then there is bobbing for apples, which is a little wet, of course, and hardly the thing for a drawing room party, and is lots of fun for a schoolgirls' frolic at which there is no attempt at pretty frocks or formal manners.

Trying to catch the apple suspended from a cord with the teeth without touching it with the hands is more possible for more formal occasions. This will be one of the absurd figures in a Hallowe'en cotillion, the apples so caught containing a favor pairing with one that had already been distributed to a girl of the party. Only the young men who succeed incatching the apples are to dance in the figure. The apples in this case are, of course, apple boxes which open at the top.

Among the nut tricks belonging to Hallowe'en the burning of a group of nuts on the open hearth is the most interesting. One nut is named for a girl and the others for young men. Theyoung man nut who stays most loyally by the girl's side and does not hop and jump away from her as the burning proceeds is the one who is to be her future mate.

Among the favors which are used for Hallowe'en dances and other festivities are witches' caps and brooms. Black cat boxes, mirrors, in which to see the face of one's future husband at the mystic midnight hour, black cat, bat and witch pin cushions, ears of—corn of delicate green with silver tinsel filled with bonbons; horns made of tomatoes, pumpkins, lettuce and the most charming lettuce horns of varicolored greens. The lettuces, of crimped paper, are beautifully realistic, and besides holding horns, confetti and bonbons there are very popular ones with rubber pigs in the centre. The pigs do not show at first, but are blown un to surprising dimensions. They are the usual rubber pigs which may be bought at any toy store.

On Hallowe'en the Brownie must not be forgotten and he is to be found among the Hallowe'en favors. ice cups and decorations in paper mache principally, but in other materials as well. Brownies in airships are among this year's novelties. Brownie masques are most popular for the Hallowe'en revels, and a large Brownie policeman presiding over the Hallowe'en cake is an attractive table decoration. The Hallowe'en cake is not, of course, to be omittted from the least with propriety. Besides the usual ring, thimble and money, which predict respectively matrimony, spinsterhood and wealth, this year's cake will contain a great variety of possible futures—a ballot box, for instance, which means that the girl who receives it will become President of the United States when women are allowed to vote; a pair of motor goggles meaning she will have a car of her own during the next year, and a miniature rifle, meaning she will go in for a sportsman's career and hunt big game in the wilds.

THE GOVERNMENT AND ZAM-BUK.

Survey out From Fort William Takes This Wonderful Balm

Zam-Buk the favorite household balm is now adopted as "The Doctor" by leading parties in surveying various parts of the Dominion lands.

Mr. Henry Hall writing from Fort William says:—"Having proved how beneficial Zam-Buk is in cases of cuts skin injuries and diseases, I determined to keep a supply handy. Being engaged to go on a survey I thought it would be a most useful thing to take along. I obtained a supply in Fort William, and very well it was I did so. I may say that pretty nearly every day it was called into requisition by one or other of the party for cuts, bruises, burns, or some injury or other. It is wonderful how quickly Zam-Buk takes the soreness out of cuts, burns, bruises and injuries, and on our survey it earned golden opinions from all who had occasion to try it. I have found it very fine for skin disease, and I can strongly recommend it as a household balm."

Mr. Lascelles Scott, one of the leading Government analysts says:—"I have no hesitation in certifying the entire purity of Zam-Buk which in my opinion is excellently adapted for skin injuries and diseases."

Zam-Buk cures cuts, scalds, burns, bruises, eczema, scalp sores, ringworm, ulcers, abscesses, chapped places, cold sores, blood poisoning, chronic abscesses, etc. As an embrocation it relieves rheumatism, neuralgia, and sciatica. All Druggists and Stores sell it at fifty cents a box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, three boxes for $1.25. Send one cent stamp for dainty sample box.

The blizzard which began at dark on Monday evening, October 19th, and increased in fury during Tuesday and Wednesday, stopped all travel and traffic for a few days and the roads are still hard to travel as the drifts are piled high in many cases. The farmers are glad to see the heavy snow-fall, as it means water for the horses and cattle when the drifts have melted.

The Conservative political meetings in this neighborhood were cancelled on account of the storm.

Mr. Binder and Mr. Neumann working for the interests of the Liberal party, arrived in this district on Monday evening, and were detained until after the storm.

DERRICK AND RIGS DROP.

Houston, Tex., —The most remarkable blowout in the history of the Texas oil fields occurred at Hardy today.

The drill of a well had reached a depth of 1,130 feet, when gas came with such force as to tear up the ground and leave a hole into which dropped, beyond sight, the derrick, rig and engine. Hot water, oil and boulders continue to be blown into the air.

John W. Leonard, Pittsburg, is here, en route to Mexico, to develop 12,000 acres of oil near the immense burning well in which Steel City men and other Pennsylvanians are interested.

An eye-witness of the great Mexican oil fire who arrived here today declares that over two million barrels of oil already have been destroyed by the flames.

Not long ago somewhat sensational reports were spread abroad of the outburst of a volcano in the Santa Monica mountains, California. A visit to the spot where the eruption was said to be in progress was made on March 3 by Mr. H. R. Johnson of the geological survey. He found that the phenomena supposed to be volcanic were due to the ignition of petroleum exuding from shale rocks, caused either by lightning or spontaneous combustion. He found strong sulphurous fumes issuing from holes in the rock, and near these holes the shale was heated to a dull cherry red. The shale belongs to an oil-bearing stratum. Similar phenomena have heretofore been noted at points in Santa Barbara county.

HAD GIVEN UP ALL HOPE OF LIVING.

Heart Trouble Cured by MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

Mrs. Andrew Savoy, Grattan's, N.B., writes: In the year of 1905 I was taken sick and did not think I could live any length of time. My trouble was with my heart and people told me that nothing could be done for a case like mine. I consulted the very best doctors but they could do me no good. For seven weeks I could hardly cross the floor. I had no pain, but was so weak nobody in the world can believe how I felt. I had given up all hopes of living and had given my little girl to my sister-in-law.

One day a friend came to see me, and calling me by name, said, 'Lizzie, if I were you I would try a dose of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as they are good for heart trouble.' My husband got me a box, but for two days I was not feeling any better, but on the fourth day my husband said, 'I believe those pills are doing you good.' I was able to say 'Yes, I feel a good deal better this morning.' He said, 'Well, I will get you another box right away.' I took two boxes and three doses out of the third one, and I was perfectly well and have not been sick since then.

I will never be without them in my home for God knows if it had not been for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I would not have been alive now."

Price 50 cents per box. 3 boxes for $1.25.

McClary's "Caloric" Gas Range

The "Caloric" is substantially put together. For example, the oven walls are double, and the interior covered with fused aluminium. This fused aluminium is a wonderful resistant to rust, heat and acid—gives "Caloric" the ability to outlast two of the cheaper ranges. Then, when it comes to baking and roasting, you'll find the "Caloric" supreme. The double oven bottom, with air space between, prevents oven from becoming suddenly very hot and burning the article—a fault common to ordinary gas ranges. See this superior gas range at

Frozen on the Prairie

Sheep Rancher South of Hills Perishes

Two or three days ago word was received in the city of a terrible tragedy of last week's snow-storm. Duncan Cameron, a herder employed on the Shaw ranch south of the Cypress Hills was frozen to death while on duty, in spite of the heroic efforts of a fellow herdsman, Donald Fisher to carry his dying comrade to a place of safety.

Tuesday last, while the snow-storm was raging, Fisher and Cameron were working together out on the range, tending the sheep. Late in the night Cameron was overcome by the cold, and his condition became so serious that he decided to make for the nearest ranch. Accompanied by Fisher, he set off for the Jenkinson home, but soon lost control of his limbs and in a freezing condition he was carried the rest of the way by his comrade. Practically the last chance of saving the man was gone when it was found that the Jenkinson house was closed up, and it was necessary to leave Cameron in a shed while Fisher rode post haste for another ranch in the district. The Blue ranch is nearly twenty miles from Jenkinson's place, and here Donald Fisher brought the sad news. On the matter being reported to the police Dr. Lloyd was notified (word did not reach the city until Sunday morning). The body, it is understood is being carried to Mr. Ed. Shaw's home at Little Plume, and the doctor will probably leave today to conduct an examination. Shaw was a relative of the dead man.

Knox Church Bazaar

The Bazaar held by the Ladies Aid of Knox Church on the 22nd proved to be a decided success. The various tables presided over by the young ladies, were:

Apron Table by Miss E. Rae.

Handkerchief Table by Miss A. Fowler.

Doll Table by the Misses McNeily and McDougall.

The fancy work table by the Misses McLaren and Taylor.

The notion table by Miss G. McLaren.

An excellent dinner was also served which proved that the ladies were well up in the culinary art.

A profitable and amusing feature of the evening was the sun flower pie in connection with the candy table presided over by the Misses McEwen and La Londe.

Another feature was the sale of the Autograph Quilt, of which the workers have reason to feel proud, it having realized the handsome sum of about eighty dollars.

Supreme Court

Only One Conviction

Tuesday last, Mr. Justice Scott on the bench and the following criminal cases were tried:

Rex vs David Ross—The prisoner was charged with the theft of three calves, the property of Daniel McLean. The prosecution attempted to prove that Ross had stolen the animals and sold them to Robert Mitchell, butcher. After a number of witnesses for the prosecution had been examined, showing that Ross had sold to Mr. Mitchell, three calves which had formerly been seen on the range with cows belonging to Mr. McLean, Mr. White for the defendant moved to have the charge dismissed without calling defendant, on the ground that the evidence failed to identify the three calvessold by Ross with those claimed by McLean. Case dismissed and prisoner discharged.

W. A. Begg appeared for the crown. D. G. White for the defendant.

The case of Hassard vs. Robinson was allowed to stand over till the next court.

On Friday morning the first case to be taken up was that of Rex vs. Hassard. Hugh Hassard, the prisoner, was charged with committing perjury as a witness in the MacDougall trial at Irvine in May last. Witness had stated on oath, it was alleged in the afternoon of the 21st day of May, while on the stand that he had not taken intoxicating liquor that day. Henry Weiss, bartender of the Alberta Hotel, swore that he had served witness with rye whiskey at 7 a.m. of the day in question. A number of witnesses were called for the prosecution.

The prisoner made a statement in his own behalf, pointing out that if he had known that he had imbibed liquor on the morning of the hearing in question, there was no reason why he should have denied it. As a fact, when he was awakened at five minutes to three to attend the hearing before the magistrate, he was under the impression that it was morning. The previous night he had attended a little banquet.

Mr. Begg in asking for a conviction, drew the attention of the jury to the prevalence of perjury in this part of the country.

His Lordship instructing the jury, said that it had been proved that the prisoner had taken a drink on the morning in question. The matter to decide was whether or no the perjury was deliberate.

After ten minutes deliberation the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty."

The Bell case which took up a large part of the time of court on Thursday and Friday and the whole of Saturday, attracted large crowdsand in fact more interest was taken in this case locally than in any other on the docket. J. T. Bell, charged with cattle stealing, and Thomas Bell, charged with assisting in cattle stealing, were placed in the dock and the two cases tried together.

W. A. Begg prosecuted for the crown; P. J. Nolan and D. G. White appeared for the defence.

On Thursday the witness for the prosecution was Corporal Jenkyn, who deposed that on the 10th of May last while in the neighborhood of the Bell slaughter house, he noticed a blue steer. Suspecting this steer to be the property of another rancher, witness asked Tom Bell what he "was going to do with that blue stag?" Bell replied, "what blue stag?" and later said that "he guessed it was a beef steer." Frank Skidmore, Bell said, had turned the animal into the corral. Witness warned Bell not to kill the steer and the accused replied "if it isn't a circle 7 brand that's on it we won't kill it," otherwise the animal would be killed. While the Corporal was away the animal had been clipped, showing the brand, which was difficult to read At a quarter to five the following morning, witness noticed from the detachment window that someone was driving the blue roan muleysteer across the river. Giving chase, witness overtook Tom Bell who stated, when questioned, that he was "driving the steer back where you (Corporal Jenkyn) said it belonged." Witness had the animal immediately brought back and corralled in the yard of the barracks.

A. DesBrisay, rancher, deposed that the steer in question bore his brand, acquired from W. S. Currie, he thought in 1902, and afterwards transferred to Jas. L. Anderson. W. S. Currie also gave evidence corroborative of the previous witness. The court then adjourned.

Frank Skidmore was the first witness called on Friday afternoon when the case was resumed. Witness had assisted in the rounding up of Bell's cattle several times, and on one occasion had rounded up a bunch of twenty-five or thirty cattle among which was a big muley steer. J.T. Bell and Leslie Bell were with him. It appeared that witness was acquainted with two blue muley steers, one a natural mulley and the other a dehorned animal. The former he had seen rounded up for beef this fall, and the latter was the "police steer"

Witness received a letter at a certain time, which contained brand marks, and as he codld not read, the help of a man Simpson was called in and together the two deciphered the message. As a result of the letter, and a previous conversation with Tom Bell, witness gathered in the "police" steer.

The first witness called on Saturday morning was Ezra Pearson, a rancher living 7 miles from the Bell ranch. The "police" steer, he deposed, he had seen on the range and in his own pasture he took steps to his own pasture he took steps to find the proper owner, but did not advertise the animal. He had tried to decipher the brand at different times without success. Witness had been told by Corporal Jenkyn on the 16th of May last that the animal was in the Bell corral. On the following morning from his place he saw the steer being driven acrossthe river, and thinking it was being stolen reported the matter to the police.

W. A. Houton, cowboy, gave evidence that he had seen a blue muley steer for the first time in July or August of last year, in Pearce's pasture.

Mr. Begg:—"Was this an ordinary looking steer?"

Witness:—"As ordinary looking as any of the rest of them," (laughter).

Witness couldn't make out the brand when he saw the animal in Pearson's pasture. While he was in Pearson's employ he had seen another blue muley steer, taller and bigger than the other.

James Taylor deposed that he was dip inspector at the 1907 dip. He took down the brands of the cattle as far as he could, and his notes were afterwards sent on to the government. He could not swear that he has ever seen the "police" steer before he saw it in the police corral.

Albert Linquist had seen the "police" steer in March of the present year and the day previous to his going on the stand he had seen him in the police corral. He thought the brand was on the left rib of the steer. The animal was large a one as he had ever seen. On cross-examination witness stated that he had found the Bells good neighbors and highly respectable people.

Thos. Barefoot gave evidence of having seen the "police" steer at the Pearson ranch, at various times during the past two and a half years.

J. H. G. Bray, stock inspector, explained the custom of stockiren relative to the shipment of strays. The brands were taken down at point of shipment, checked off at Winnipeg and the price realized sent on to the owner. In this connection his lordship expressed the opinion that there were some very peculiar customs among the ranchers." Witness explained that the stock-growers agreed upon this system.

John Lyle, assistant recorder of brands, had seen a blue steer in a bunch of cattle one evening in May last. He saw it being driven past his house. It was a similar animal to that in the police corral.

The steer was much bigger than the rest of the cattle.

Mr. Nolan:—"You did not get an uninterrupted view? There were other cattle between you and the blue steer?"

"Yes."

"There was nothing to attractyour attention but the study of nature—interest in the fine large cattle which showed the progress and development of the Great West?" (laughter)

John Henry Bell, clerk at the brand office and a member of the firm also J. T. Bell said Tom deposed that he had clipped the steer in question on the 16th of May and found that the brand did not belong to the firm. He had not received any notice from the police about driving cattle over the bridge during the day time. The brand was on the right side of the blue muley steer. Corporal Jenkyn's reading of the brand was a different one to that of the witness.

Geo. Grieves, had paid a two days' visit to the Bell ranch. While there he had seen over two hundred different kinds of steers, but he paid no attention to them because it was none of his business. He thought he had seen a big blue steer with big horns. (laughter).

Mr. Nolan asked for a dismissal, claiming that there was no case. This view, was taken by his lordship. Mr. Begg submitted that under a section of the criminal code it was incumbent on the accused to prove (this is the case of J. T. Bell) that he did not know the animal which he had in his possession was not his property, and he should therefore be put on his defence.

The judge dismissed both cases, remarking enent the charge against Thomas Bell, that the accused, who brought the steer through the city in broad daylight, was evidently innocent of any intent to steal.

Rex vs. Jas Hassard—Charge of theft of team of horses made by Christian Gill and Emanuel Gill. The defence showed that the evidence in claiming that Henry Weiss was with Hassard at the time the alleged theft was committed was incorrect and contended that that the evidence might be incorrect in other respects. His Lordship held that the evidence for the prosecution had been satisfactorily contradicted. Prisoner acquitted. W. A. Begg appeared for the prosecution. D. G. White for defendant.

A. Olsen, charged with refusing to assist a constable of the R.N.W.M.P. in the execution of his duty in arresting Chris. Zimmerman at a dance at Seven Persons on May 15th last, was acquitted, it being shown that Constable Chalkley, the policeman concerned, was trying to eject Zimmerman from the dance hall and also trying to arrest him without a warrant, and that Olson in refusing to assist did not come within the provision of the code regarding the refusal to assist a peace officer, since Constable Chalkley was not then acting in the execution of his lawful duty. W. A. Begg prosecuted for the Crown. D. G. White defended.

Rex vs. Chris. Zimmerman, for resisting arrest. The facts were practically the same as in the previous case and as it was shown that the constable had no right to effect the arrest without a warrant, Zimmerman had not resisted his lawful apprehension. The prisoner was acquitted. W. A. Begg, appeared for the Crown. D. G. White for the defence.

Rex. vs. Robt. McCutcheon, Jr., charge of assault. Prisoner pleaded guilty and his counsel entered a plea for clemency. There being two previous convictions against the accused for the same offence, he was convicted and sentenced to two months hard labor in Lethbridge.

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE

COWPUNCHER ALMOST PERISHES

During the big snowstorm of a fortnight ago today, Mr. Ernest Howard, who is cow-punching on the Beatty ranch, Thirty Mile Sand Hills 65 miles north of the city, met with a terrible experience.

At noon on Tuesday, the 20th ult., Mr. Howard turned out in the saddle to see which way the cattle had drifted during the storm.

Out on the Thirty Mile Flat, eight miles from the Beatty home, hishorse caught a foot in a badger hole, and the rider was thrown violently to the ground, sustaining injuries to his hip and ankle. The horse wandered away before recapture was possible, and Howard was left eight miles from home, lame, and unable to see his way in the blinding snow storm. One hope lay in following the fire guard, and throughout the day the cowboy made his way slowly homeward, until a sand ridge spoiled the trail. His clothing, soaked with the wet snow which had fallen during the day now began to freeze and at nightfall when progress was made impossible the only course seemed to be to scoop out a hollow in one of the big snow banks and there seek warmth. Little comfort was to be obtained here, and when the snow ceased and the sky cleared up, an attempt to find the homeward trail by the light of the stars was made.

For the whole of the following day and night, however, Howard was lost on the prairie. With both feet frozen, crawling along as best he could, he reached home again at noon on Thursday.

At the ranch no one suspected that Howard had been lost, it was surmised that he had been staying at the Baker ranch, twelve miles away in the direction in which he had ridden, until the storm was over. His horse was found on Thursday morning.

Mr. Howard is still in the hospital almost recovered from the effects of his privations. As a result of the terrible exposure, however, he will probably lose a number of toes.

New Industries

Canneries and Roseries Getting Under Way

Mr. Flower, the new manager of the Canneries was in the city recently. He expects to have the plant running in the near future.

Mr. John Terrill called on the Mayor recently stating his willingness to take over the Roseries if he could obtain the land at $200 per acre. The matter was brought up at the last council meeting and favorably considered.

Another big industry has almost completed arrangements to start in the city.

Call any time through the week and inspect our safety razors. They go on sale Saturday morning at 75 cents each.

ERRATUM.

A typographical error has crept into the first editorial note. In the fifth line 97½ should read 97.

AN ELECTION SEQUEL.

Some over-enthusiastic Liberals are trying to take it out of the Conservatives by sending them post cards threatening them with the loss of their homesteads. Just how high in the ranks these threateners are is not known for sure as yet, but it is suspected that they know their power. A number of postcards have been received by local Conservatives and interest developments are looked for.

One card reads:

"You have a nice homestead at ——. Improvements very good. It will be watched closely. You will regret the 26th.

Another card read:

"You'll get your homestead patent like H——."

This is only another method the Liberal powers use to scare honest voters. The cards are hand printed but close enough guesses as to the source are being made to lead to identification before long.

Majority for Magrath 336

The Rev. Mr. Campbell, representing the British and Foreign Bible Society, preached in St. John's church on Sunday morning, and in the evening at the Baptist church.

"St. George's Church" the new building erected by the Evangelical Association, was dedicated on Sunday by the Rev. L. H. Wagner, presiding elder of the Northwest district assisted by the Rev. C. Finkbeiner of Didsbury. In the morning the service was conducted in the German tongue, and in the afternoon and evening in English. Special music was given by sister churches.

Last night a lecture was delivered in the church.

Lovie Zendt Purcell, the famous contralto of the Schubert Lady Quartette, has one of the deepest voices ever given to a woman, and is the only lady vocalist able to sing an octave below middle C in concert. Her voice is very powerful and yet so melodious that her strongest tone loses none of its sweetness. Hear her on November 24 at the Opera House.

BIG LEASE BOUGHT.

(Lethbridge News.)

The Conrad Circle Cattle Co. who for nearly, thirty years have ranged large herds of cattle in the country around Lethbridge but who have suffered considerable in the last few years from the contraction of the open range by close settlement, have purchased from R. E. Margesson of Medicine Hat the big lease, on both sides of the Red Deer River north of Medicine Hat, known as the Beresford lease. The lease comprises many thousands of acres. Several hundred head of cattle have also changed hands with the lease. The deal was put through in Great Falls, Montana about two weeks ago.

Messrs. Howell Harris, manager, and Baldy Buck foreman, of the Circle outfit are at present on the Red Deer taking over the cattle and the lease.

As many cattle of the five or six thousand that at present comprise the Circle herd, as can conveniently be gathered will be put across to the newly acquired range this fall; the remainder will be left until next summer, so that next year will see the Circle Co. passed from this neighborhood forever.

The particular section of the country covered by the Beresford lease is looked upon as a first class cattle district. The grass is good and water plentiful; the rolling hills are dotted with bluffs or clumps of small brush which afford excellent shelter for cattle in bad weather. In the same district a large herd of cattle, known as the Mexican herd, passed through the severe winter of 1906-07 with lighter losses than any other herd in Western Canada.

Foster's Forecast

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent Oct. 28 to Nov. 1, warm wave Oct. 27 to Oct. 31, cool wave Oct. 30 to Nov. 3. This disturbance was expected to be very severe on land and sea and to be followed by a great and severe cold wave.

The next disturbance will reach the Pacific coast about Nov. 2, great central valleys Nov. 2 to 6, eastern states Nov. 7. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about Nov. 2, great central valleys Nov. 4, eastern states Nov. 6, cool wave will cross Pacific slope about Nov. 5, great central valleys Nov. 7, eastern states Nov. 9.

The disturbance will not be of much importance. Very little rain willcome with it. The trend of temperature will be upward and Indian summer weather.

Thesecond disturbance of November will be the prevailing feature of the will reach the Pacific coast about November 7, cross the Pacific slope by the close of Nov. 5, great central valleys Nov. 9 to 11, eastern states Nov. 12. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about Nov. 7, great central valleys Nov. 9, eastern states November 13. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about Nov. 10, great central valleys Nov. 12, eastern states, November 14.

The important feature of this disturbance will be its great high temperature wave causing a change to warmer by about forty degrees above the low temperature of first part of the month. After the warm wave passes some rains will occur but before it begins to turn cooler Indian summer will be the prevailing feature.

About Nov. 11, all features of this disturbance will reinforce and move eastward with greater velocity. About Nov. 11 the cold wave will be east of Manitoba and will then begin to increase in fierceness. In front and southeast of the cold wave rains followed by snows and then blizzard features.

The ten days following Nov. 11 the storm will be fierce and thetrend of temperatures downward to a greater degree than the season would indicate. At the end of these fierce winter storms the temperatures will be low over the continent. My next bulletin will give more particulars of these early storms.

Mock Parliament

Y.M.C. Starts Interesting Entertainment

At a meeting held in the office of the Y.M.C. on Thursday evening, a Mock Parliament was formed. Mr. W. G. Rowe was called upon to form a cabinet and prepare a programme of legislation for the coming session. The Parliament will be opened on Friday next by the Governor General, when the evening will be taken up by the selection of a speaker and the speech from the throne. Mr. Hill will lead the cohorts of His Majesty's Opposition.

The session will be continued every other Friday evening throughout the winter in the Y.M.C. Aspiring parliamentarians are busy mastering the rules of procedure, while cabinet ministers are burning the midnight oil preparing a programme of legislation which shall prove the salvation of their country and the placing of themselves in the front rank of statesmen.

Mayor Cousins has consented to act as Governor-General and Mr. J. J. Mahaffy as speaker. The following is the cabinet selected by the premier.

Premier and Minister of Justice—W. C. Rowe.

THE MASQUERADE

Gay Incognitos Enjoy Themselves

The Y.M.C. was the scene of high revelry on Friday evening, when from eight o'clock until shortly before the hour of midnight, the Lord of Misrule held sway. Every one of the hundred and fifty members and friends appeared in masquerade or in costume, and the pageant presented as the revellers mingled in the room was gorgeous in the extreme. The grotesque, the historical, folk-lore, literature, the chivalry of a long-past age, all were represented. Here Hamlet [illegible] Tommoddy flirting with a maiden of the days of Good Queen Bess, there a dashing cavalier with all the bearing of a Jacobite, worshipping at the shrine of Miss Stars and Stripes or a bouncing college girl. A New England farmer such as Thoreau might well have portrayed, found himself assisting to coffee and sandwiches a coon lady from the cotton fields of Louisiana.

After a flashlight photograph had been taken a number of Martha's sons and daughters waited on the company with light refreshments, and at the conclusion of the repast, the results of the guessing competition were announced. Miss Eveline Rae, the winner, received a handsome volume of Milton's poems for first prize, and Mr. Norman Dixon distinguished himself by carrying off the booby.

The excellent, but all to short programme which followed was highly enjoyed. Pianoforte solos were contributed by Misses Worth and Hargrave, a couple of violin selections were given by Mr. Sansom, and recitations from Drummond by Mr. Ware.

The following ladies were elected as competitors in the membership competition.

Misses Isabel McDonald, Ruby Kennedy, Alma Worth, Eveline Rae, Bessie Sprague, V. Simpson, Ruby Patterson, I. Gallop, Amber Fowler, Martha Taylor.

At the end of two months a prize will be awarded to the competitor securing the largest number of new members.

The Reading Club are making arrangements for bringing Ethel Leland Van Spanckeren to Medicine Hat. Mrs. Van Spanckeren is an entertainer of exceptional ability, if we may believe the Lethbridge Herald's report of her appearance in Lethbridge. It says: "It is not extravagant to say that Mrs. Van Spanckeren excels any reader who has ever visited this city."

Jolly Old Uncle Josh

A Realistic Romance of Meadicine Hat

"Miss Summers—Polly—I—I—er—dare I—" But the speaker took a header over bashfulness, only to hear a sweet

"Yes, Charley."

"Can I aspire to—er—to—that —is"

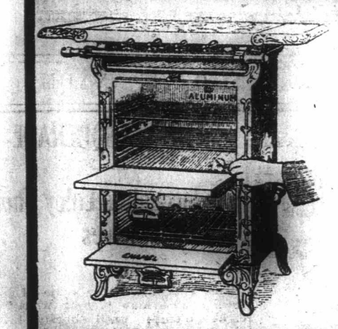
Again a lapse into silence, followed by an encouragirg

"Yes, Charley."

"Oh, if I might only hope to er—to—

Another failure of language. It was seemingly a hopeless case, and might have been, only for a demure

"Charley, I have said 'yes' twice, and if you mean it, I mean it, too, and—"



And to this day that young man will insist that he popped the question.

All this happened away "down east," and it wasn't long before there was a wedding. Not much longer before there was a letter from Polly's Uncle Josh, (Hon. Joshua Turner, an old pioneer of Medicine Hat) rich, generous and level headed, who wrote effusively of his delight at her exhibition of what he called "grit," and he proposed that if the young people would locate at Medicine Hat he would start them up in life, as a wedding gift, having fully explained that this is the best spot in the world for young married people to get a good start. Of course they accepted, and were soon bidding their friends adieu.

A few weeks subsequent to the above conversation a travel-stained couple arrived in Medicine Hat. Our friend Uncle Josh was in charge and he led the party straightway to the Alberta hotel. "We'll go to the Alberta," said he, "'cause that's the popular place and is strictly first-class. I have known the proprietor for years and is mine host after mine own heart; being endowed with that delightful intuition that makes a guest feel at home, comfortable, contented, and in mighty good luck. The house is one of convenience; the apartments are well furnished and the cuisine—well, that hotel is noted for its excellent table, so I have engaged rooms here until your own house is in readiness." With these remarks Uncle Josh graciously presented to Charles the deed of a cozy cottage.

"After breakfast is over," continued the old man. "I must take you for a little drive and then we'll proceed to buy your outfit. To expedite matters I'll just call up phone 85 and have Williamson and Nichol our enterprising livery men, send us around a rig." When the handsome carriage, with elaborate trappings and prancing horses drew up infront of the hotel Polly declared it to be a turnout fit for a queen. "Yes Siree," replied Uncle Josh, "that is a purty neat rig—the three S's, 'Speed, Safety and Style' are Williamson and Nichol's coat of arms, and best of all, the rates are mighty reasonable Their wedding, party and funeral equipments are unsurpassed. It was in a stylish turnout indeed that the rounds of the city were made.

"Having already provided a cage for the bird," said Uncle Josh, "now the first thing we'll look after will be the furnishings for it." Hereupon Polly energetically declared that she had heard so much about J. C. Beveridge, that she had decided to go there. The result was that theywere ushered into such a bewildering display that the girl was at first at a loss how to select. But she soon yielded to the seductiveness of a magnificent parlor suite, a bed room set in oak, golden finish that would do credit to old Mr. Klondyke him-

C.P.R. Liner Breaks Record

'Empress of Ireland' Crosses From Liverbool to Quebec in 6 Days 0 Hours. 25 Mins.

PREVIOUS RECORD WAS HELD BY HER SISTER SHIP THE 'EMPRESS OF BRITAIN.'

The C.P.R. 'Empress of Ireland' can now well be called the greyhound of the North Atlantic, for on her arrival at Quebec at 4 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, she clipped something like three hours off the record previously held by her sister ship, the 'Empress of Britain. The new record is 6 days, 25 minutes.

This season there has been the closest kind of rivalry between the respective captains and crews of both vessels as to who should hold the blue ribbon of the St. Lawrence route.

On July 30 the 'Empress of Britain' wrested the honor from the 'Empress of Ireland' by clippingsome two hours and a a quarter off her record. The record held good for over two months, until yesterday, when the 'Empress of Ireland,' being favored with fine weather across the Atlantic and by the tides while coming through the Gulf on this trip, easily made a new mark.

When she arrived at Quebec at four o'clock on Thursday afternoon, two special trains were backed on the side of the wharf waiting to transfer her passengers to Montreal and western points.

The merit of this performance may be guaged by the fact that the 'Empress of Ireland' left Liverpool last Friday evening, and yesterday some of her passengers had breakfast in Toronto and dinner in Chicago, just seven days after leaving Liverpool. This morning those going to Minneapolis and St. Paul will be attheir destination. By travelling on the transcontimental line, passengers who left on the 11.15 o'clock train from Windsor station on Thursday evening will be in Winnipeg at 9 o'clock this evening; thus the time between Liverpool and the prairie city would be eight days.

The 'Empresses' so far this season have not been delayed by the fog and smoke which hung over the river between Montreal and Quebec for almost two weeks. The C.P.R. liners have also wrestled a large share of the American tourist trade this season from the different United States ports, for on several occasions three-quarters of the passengers booked were Americans, all of which shows how popular the St. Lawrence route is getting to be with our friends across the border.

HEADACHE.

Burdock Blood Bitters.

If you are troubled with Headache do not hesitate to use B.B.B. It is no new product, of unknown value, but has an established reputation.

COULD NOT WORK.

Miss Murial Wright, Musiac, N.B., writes: "I was sick and run down, would have Headaches, a bitter taste in my mouth, floating specks before my eyes and pains in my back. I was not able to do any house work at all and could not sleep at night. Several doctors doctored me but I saw I was getting no help, and on the advice of a friend I got three bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters and they effected a complete cure.

Past Election's

The members of the House of Commons are elected for five years, unless parliament is dissolved sooner by the governor-general. They require no property qualification, but must be of the age of 21 years and a British subject not disqualified by law. Each member receives an allowance of $2,500 for a session of over thirty days with a deduction of $15 a day for the days he does not attend.

The Liberal party has been in power since 1896, a period of 12 years having in the election of 1904 received a majority of the popular vote of upwards of 50,000 votes. In that year the Liberals secured a majority of members in all the provinces with the exception of Ontario and Prince Edward Island.

In the House on Division the Liberals usually secured a majority of 54 to 55, running sometimes as high as 60, on important questions of policy, and although there were numerous by-elections during the four years existence of the late government, the standing of the partieswas practically unchanged at the end of the term, although the political complexion of some of the provinces was slightly altered.

Popular Vote.

The popular vote in the general election of 1904 was as follows:

Province	Lib.	Con.	Ind.
Ontario	213,388	217,829	2,652
Quebec	146,518	110,268	500

Totals	528,450	475,703	10,953

In what were formerly the North-West Territories, now the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, there will be seventeen members elected, ten in Saskatchewan and seven in Alberta in place of eleven members for the Territories as formerly. This is the only electoral change in the last contest.

The members of the House are elected by constituencies, the electors of which are supplied by franchise under the control of the various provincial governments. An act was passed in 1898 to that effect making provisions for a few limitations. From 1885 to 1886 the Dominion elections were held under a Dominion franchise act.

In 1905, when provision was made for the creation of the two new provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, a special clause was embodied in the act providing that the readjustment of seats would only take effect upon the dissolution of the late parliament.

There will be voting in 221 constituencies in the past contest as compared with 215 in 1904 but they will not all take place on the same date, some of the more remote constituencies requiring more time for the issuance of the writs owing to the distances to be travelled.

The method of voting for secret ballot is simple and expeditious, sometimes a zealous scrutineer, doubtful of a voters' identity or qualification, challenges his right to ballot and delays proceedings. But ordinarily it is the work of a few moments to mark the ballot, and see the returning officer drop it into the ballot box.

Following is the record of the past elections.

honorable in their dealings, but in 1860 they came to consider the payment of Northern creditors treasonable, if the Northerners happened to be abolitionists. They therefore shut down on them, and brought ruin to many a Northern merchant. Occasionally, however, a Northerner was more fortunate than he could have expected at the time, as the following incident proves:

A New York merchant was induced personally to go South to collect his outstanding accounts. As money was unobtainable, he took rosin, cotton or any commodity he could get instead, and, by a sloop chartered at Wilmington, N.C., he consigned this merchandise to New York with instructions to store on arrival. After his Southern claims were thus secured this ardent patriot stumped the Carolinas and Georgia for freedom, until he was himself deprived of it. Mistaken for a Northern spy, he lingered for some time in Southern dungeons. When finally liberated he returned to New York and found his Wilmington cargo in his Brooklyn warehouse. The rosin he accepted for $1 was worth $40, while Sea Island Cotton, which cost him twelve cents, was worth ninety cents a pound. Although these prices were paid in depreciated money, the small cargo realized a large fortune.

The Free Silver Cash.

War was "hell" for merchants as well as soldiers and their families, and at one time a third of the commercial buildings on Lower Broadway, in New York City, were to let, although the prediction made when Fort Sumter surrendered namely, that "grass would grow in Wall street," was not fulfilled. The next great crisis came in 1893, and was caused by the withdrawal of foreign capital, which had become scared by the agitation for free silver. The incident that precipitated the crash was the exposure of the fraud connected with the Old Coralage Company. The manager of this concern had incorporated at fictitious values one rope walk after another. Of the millions ostensibly paid to control the market, a slight portion was allotted for dividends made to establish a fictitious market for the stocks. What became of the rest of the money nobody ever discovered. Industrials began to tumble, and Mr. Windmuller relates that one day, having bein invited by a wealthy friend to lunch at the Lawyers' Club he found him pressed for margins he could not furnish. 'He received numerous messages through the club's waiters before the roast was served, and was harassed by a call to the 'phone after every glass of wine we raised to our lips."

Bankers as Burglars

Some bankers adopted original methods to restore "confidence" to alarmed depositors. A German brush maker drew $500 from a bank that was shaky, and safe deposit vaults being unknown, hid the money under his bed. Whereupon the banker organized a "fake" burglary, but the German was found on guard with a revolver. He sat up till morning, and then, still carrying his revolver, returned the money to the enterprising banker. Keen brokers watched the hoarders drawing this moneyfrom the banks and, following them home induced them to part with their savings in consideration of a premium. Some employers paid these sharks as much as four per cent. premium for their pay rolls. When the premium dwindled and finally disappeared many brokers lost more than they had previously gained. Speaking of the troubles that began in 1907, and which it is hoped, are about over, Mr. indmuller remarks: "The paucity of commercial failures in the face of compulsory retrenchment has demonstrated that America merchants who confine themselves to legitimate business are worthy of confidence. Of the security which the New York Clearing House accepted during the panic for certificates more than 70 per cent, consisted of commercial paper, which was all paid as it matured."

Financial Panics

In order to show them that their recent financial depression was not so bad as it might have been the people of the United States are being told about othe troubles in the past half century. A particularly readable article is contributed by Mr. Louis Windmuller, a New York merchant, to the Forum. In 1857 Mr. Windmuller went through his first panic, but having been "under fire" in the failure of the Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Co., he drew in current bills some money from a Williamsburg bank and $100 in gold from the Bank of New York, so that, when, subsequently, almost every financial institution this side of the Rockies closed its doors, the writer could play chess in his office with his clerk, while his distracted neighbors chased the fleeting shadows of ephemeral bankers."

The Wildcat Banks.

In 1857 wampum had been discarded and clearing house certificates had not been invented. Coin was scarce, and the circulating medium consisted of bank notes, some issued under a guarantee of a safety fund held by various States, and some were issued by what were called "free banks." The former passed at their face value, but the notes of the free banks, sometimes called "wildcats," were discounted at from one-half to ten per cent. The possibility of having to cash thesenotes never troubles the mind of some of the bankers, who stamped the new bills "Payable at President's counter," and set them in circulation. Mr. Windmuller relates that a New York broker who had become loaded with the bills of one of these free banks sent a clerk with a satchel full of the greenbacks to the Illinois town whence they had been issued. He found the bank in a log cabin on a prairie road, its only occupant a "cashier." This official examined the notes, but expressed his profound regret at being unable to cash them, the President having gone to Chicago, taking with him the cash box.

The Secession Panic.

Institutions of this sort had been wiped out when the depression of 1860—1 descended on the land. This was caused by the attempted secession of the Southern States. The merchants of the South had always been "slow pay," though generally

Writing Us Up.

BURLINGTON RECORD, KANSAS.

Medicine Hat is the natural gas town of Canada and is described by Rudyard Kipling as the town thatwas born lucky. Kipling also said "This part of the country seems to have all hell for a basement and the trap door appears to be at Medicine Hat." Consumers pay 13½ cents a thousand for gas and manufacturers 5c a 1,000. Live stock raising is a great industry here and with irrigation they raise some fine crops and fruit. The town has a population of about 8,000. Medicine Hat is the town where they say that most of the blizzards that reach Kansas originate but there seemed to be no particular reason why they should start there.

EAST HARTFORD GAZETTE, CONN.

Tuesday, September 1, found us at Medicine Hat, a city of great possibilities. We had but two hours to look over the city and it need not be said that the tourists did considerable humping to take in all possible in that time. After a siege on the newspaper plants, a walk was taken to the weather bureau station, from which place it is said that Medicine Hat furnishes the delicate points for Western Canada. Sending our souvenir postals was one of the great necessities.

But a word about the town. Would say that it is as lively as a youngster and a most desirable place in which to live. It has several thousand people, fine schools and churches and is a great wheat centre.

What Happened

Every newspaper in the Dominion now comes out with most profound comments and deductions from the results of the recent elections. It doesn't matter whether the papers were afraid to open their mouths on either side before the election—they now can tell us all about the why's and wherefore's of the situation. Not having been in the fray, nor having dared to study or diagnose either side, the outcome is as plain to them as the nose on one's face. It's wonderfully easy to talk about it all afterwards.

Naturally any election brings matters for consideration. But unfortunately the results of an election do not prove anything except that by hook or by crook one side beat the other. If you're beaten it is by crookedness; if you win it is by merit. Someone did wrong when you are beaten, but if you win it is an "unqualified endorsation" of something or other.

The fact that one man was beaten, or that one side won does not prove that the people honestly thought they should win or be beaten. If politics were honest the ballot box would be an honest expression of opinion. But everybody knows that more elections are won by bribery and crookedness than by the thoughtful decisions of the voters.

At any rate Laurier won. Naturally The Times regrets it, and considers it a mistake; but it is a fact that must be accepted. To explain it by charging lawlessness and bribery is easy, but, possessing nothing of originality, it is not worth repeating. Laurier had the great support of having administered during progressive times. He also has with him some able men, who hide much of the weakness of such men as Lemieux, Sir Frederick Borden, Pugsley and Brodeur. But Laurier's personality is perhaps the greatest factor in the victory. An eloquent speaker, a master at dramatic effect an open-handed friendly fellow, he pulls a solid Quebec of members of his own church and nationality. In Ontario, he has ever been popular personally, and it was his cleverness in confining himself to the latter province in his pre-election addresses that held him where he is.

Fortunately for both parties there were a number of undesirables cleaned out. Pope, Fowler, Lefurgey and two or three Ontario candidates are no loss to the Conservatives. The retirement of Burrows was a striking proof of what the peoplethought of Ames' exposures. But far more significant is the narrow escape of the great and only Sifton in Brandon. Although opposed by a man whose previous record in Parliament had alienated many votes, Sifton, the former Minister of the Interior, the most brainy man in the Liberal party was just pushed through. The Ames lectures certainly had a great effect in the West. Even the Sifton millions could not down the sentiment of his constituents. Had the fight in Brandon not been a three-cornered one, Sifton would now be travelling in the States for his health, as Hyman did.

But nothing could put out Sir Frederick Borden in his notoriously corrupt riding, or Pugsley, or Emmerson. They are still to be inflicted upon a decent country.

It is a matter of congratulation for the Opposition and one which has ever rankled with the Liberals that almost all the cities in Canada went strongly Conservative. In the cities and large centres, where the political questions are more thoroughly discussed, where there are fewer unjust means of influencing votes, the people show that they know the Liberal Government for what it is. St. John, Halifax, part of Montreal and Quebec (although French), Toronto, Hamilton, London, Winnipeg, Brandon, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria all went Conservative with no uncertain voice. In our own riding Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, Taber and Gleichen—all the larger centres of English people gave majorities for Magrath.

Some of the significant Conservatives victories were in Winnipeg, where Haggart made a record; in Calgary, where McCarthy beat out easily, in Victoria where a cabinet minister was defeated, in Colchester where the Baine charges were so rankly "cooked" as to return Stanfield, in Halifax where Borden turned a defeat at last election into a big majority now, and in Medicine Hat, where the workingmen's cry of the Liberal party was turned down by workingmen who do their own thinking.

The fight of the Socialist party for parliamentary recognition has received no support. Sherman, their strongest man loses his deposit in Calgary, and Hawthornthwaite, the Nanaimo M.P.P. was third in the race. Two or three other Socialists and Independents lose their deposits.

OUR OWN RIDING.

When it comes to our own riding the deductions are so evident that the Liberals would willingly avoid a discussion. It is a fact that almost every polling booth where the majority of voters were British went in favor of Magrath. Medicine Hat and Lethbridge, the two cities, returned Magrath with a combined majority of 323. In only one polling booth in both cities did Simmons get a majority and that was in the mining district of Lethbridge, where Poles, Austrians and Italians predominate. In our own district the German settlements mostly favored Simmons, the influences used being known to everyone. In the south the Mormons supported Simmons under similar conditions.

But most important was the whole hearted support given Magrath by the railwaymen. Perhaps no part of the electors have given politics such deep consideration as the railwaymen, to whom, the question of the party in power and the man elected has a more vita, interest than to the ordinary voter. ct it their very existence as free men that is affected, and they looked before they jumped.

The News in its nasty little way sees fit to call the men names for this. It is a very safe wager to say that the railwaymen and other workingmen knew a great deal more about the great questions than did The News with its cowardly avoidance of politics. And yet because they used their brains and decided in favor of Magrato, the high-and-mighty "thoughtful" News says they are "ungrateful" and "unthinking." The men will not be backward in showing The News that they are not going to let that paper do their thinking for them. It has just about come to the point where the men feel that if they go opposite to The News they will be observing their own best interests.

Surely the railwaymen and laboringmen of Medicine Hat know more about what is for their interests than does the News.

Too Mean to be Just

One can hardly believe it possible that a paper which hadn't the backbone before the elections to come out for its party, that tried to cater to both sides for fear of losing a subscription or an advertisement, that hadn't an opinion worth expressing regarding the elections, should appear after the elections with charges of "liberality in the provision of funds" and "the use of booze."

The News has a directorate made up entirely of prominent Liberals. Its editor is a great Liberal worker. And naturally one would expect that paper to have the courage of its convictions to the extent of openly supportiog the Liberal candidate. But no! There isn't enough sand or grit or backbone or courage in The News to do that. It waits until after the elections are over and then comes out with charges of bribery and booze. It is simply continuing its "little-dog" tactics. It waits until the danger seems past and then it snarls and snaps, ready to turn tail and slink out out of sight at the first sign of danger.

The News' side got beaten and, although it has no influence on the election it feels so sore that it comes out with the following' "liberality in the provision of funds, and the use among certain people of booze had an effect upon the result, and Mr. Simmons finds himself in the minority."

Were it not that some few misguided people might think that The News has some grounds for such snarling falsehoods, it would be better to treat it with the contempt it deserves.

Before the News gets down to these small after election accusations it had better look at what was done by its own side in this district The Times will not now, bring in any local examples, but The News must know the conduct of Binder the German Simmons brought to Irvine to do his work, both beforeand on election day. If it don't it might be told that the Conservatives have not yet decided not to take steps towards putting him behind the bars, and some local men in whom The News is very much interested are in the same precarious position.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The ratepayers have another thing to puzzle over. A representative of a debenture buying company interviewed the finance committee and made an offer of 97½ for the waterworks debentures. Without waiting to ascertain market values or giving any other firm a chance, the promise was given that the offer would be given consideration, or practically a promise of purchase was given. Right afterwards another firm offered 97½ and the Council felt it had to turn it down for the lower offer. What is the matter anyway? Why was any offer accepted until we had competitive bids. If the debentures were worth 97½ to the first firm then, they would offer at least the same when bids were asked, and the chances were always good for more. The bit of foolishness cost the city $75 in cold cash, but of course that's nothing.

Ald. Penhale considered he had a genuine squelcher when he asked in the Council chamber the other night why it was the typhoid had stopped. If Ald. Penahle took the trouble to consult a physician he would feel like kicking himself for asking such a silly question.

The News is trying to bring politics into civic affairs. Just because The Times mentioned a different list of Mayoralty possibilities from that mentioned in The News it was accused of political motives. Whenever you happen to disagree with the mighty News you must be crooked somehow. This is the kind of talk our worthy contemporary confines itself to, or is limited to for some reason. They call the railwaymen everything nasty becahse they didn't see things as The News thought they should and now The Times has incurred their displeasure. Horrible!

If The Times were working on political lines in the civic elections it would support three of the fivenames suggestedby The News. This paper is controlled only by considerations for the good of the city and it has not yet declared itself on a candidate. The News suggested some names: The Times mentioned four others who were talked of. It is not bound to support any one of those mentioned by it. One thing is certain that the motives that will ensure support from The Times in the coming election are higher than a desire to get an extended monopoly of the civic printing or to elect a man who will be engineered from this office.

However if The News is bound to bring politics into the civic elections it had better take a look at the local Magrath majority of 204 and hesitate.

By the way there are some revelations regarding the printing of the City Council, the Board of Trade the Agricultural Society and the School Board, which will bear the light of day, and will show the impelling thoughts in the usual selection of News candidates for office. This does not mean that all of The News list of mayoralty candidates are of this kind. The Newt suggests its own candidates. The Times merely mentions additional names talked of on the street and binds itself to no name on either list. But simply because any other person dare suggest a name unbacked by The News he is crooked.

Now get to work everyone and select a man you would like to see in for mayor. Select one who has no other motuve in being mayor than to do his best for the city. Select one above the petty influences a mayor can make use of, one who doesn't play favorites, one who will do his own thinking and not be twisted by outside forces, one who has no conoection with a clique, one who is fearless and honest. We want a good mayor next year. And with him must be a good Council.

It would be a fine move for the

BRONCHITIS

Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather, and is a very dangerous inflammatory affection of the bronchial tubes.

The Symptoms are tightness across the chest, sharp pains and a difficulty in breathing, and a secretion of thick phlegm, at first white, but later of a greenish or yellowish color. Neglected Bronchitis is one of the most general causes of Consumption.

Cure it at once by the use of

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine SYRUP

Mrs. D. D. Miller, Allandale, Ont., writes: "My husband got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for my little girl who had Bronchitis. She wheezed so badly you could hear her from one room to the other, but it was not long until we could see the effect your medicine had on her. That was last winter when we lived in Toronto.

"She had a bad cold this winter, but instead of getting another bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I tried a home made receipt which I got from a neighbor but found that her cold lasted about twice as long. My husband highly praises 'Dr. Wood's,' and says he will see that a bottle of it is always kept in the house."

The price of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 25 cents per bottle. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, so, be sure and accept none of the many substitutes of the original "Norway Pine Syrup."

present Council to resign in a body, as there is no uncertain dissatisfaction among the ratepayers. If the Council resigns there are two orthree who would be re-elected, and with them could be placed a half dozen good, strong men who would clean out the dead wood in the civic departments and give the people value for their money. Some ratepayers should start a petition asking for a general resignation. The aldermen who are worthy of a position would not resent it, and they cannot resign unless the rest do. Every man in town would sign such a petition.

A great civic election coup d'etat is planned for The Times and the ratepayers, in which The Times is a passive participant. The idea is to influence local elections, and it surely will, but rather differently from what the schemers reckon on. The Times welcomes the move as a means of bringing to light a lot of things which will show up what has been thought by many of the ratepayers. The investigation which will follow will be so thorough that some of the schemers will wish to leave this part of the country.

Bring it along. The Times doetn't say in the paper all it knows, but will take a very big hand in the game itself. The Times can count on the ratepayers and in this case nothing else matters.

The only dirty feature of the recent newspaper election campaign, apart from the soreness of The News after the election, was the manner in which the Lethbridge Herald, in which Simmons has stock, got after Mr. Magrath personally hurling the lgst ten days of the campaign.

C. A. Magrath, M. P.

One of the most amusing features of the election reports was the joke worked on the News about 4 o'clock on the day of the elections. Some local wag started the report that Borden had been defeated by over 400 in Halifax. The report was quickly carried to The News and a big bulletin was put out telling all about it.

For the Past year The Times has been quietly collecting information about the happenings in connection with civic affairs during the past four or five years. Necessarily this has developed along individual lines and unless opportunity affords the result of all this investigation cannot be made public without incurring the accusation of personal motives. However, as all of it is of the most vital importance to the ratepayers as giving an excellent idea of the character of some of the men who are handling affairs, it will be made public just as soon as an opportunity is given. Proofs have been collected, or are available for everything.

Water Debentures Sold

Arrangements with Canneries and Roseries

A special meeting of the City Council was held on Tuesday night at 8 o'clock, in place of the regular meeting of the previous week. There were present: The Mayor, Alds. McKay, Morrow, Tweed, Huckvale and Penhale.

Enquiries relative to the waterworks debentures were received from eight firms. The Trusts and Guarantee Co.; Montague, Aldous and Laine The British Canadian Securities Co.; Wood Gundy Co.; The Ontario Securities Co.; A. E. Ames & Co.; Geo. A. Stimson Co. These were filed.

Applications for water extensions by owners of Lot 19, Block U was referred to engineer for an estimate of cost, as was also an application for water and gas to lot 18, Block 85, Braemar.

The Willson Stationery Co. wrote asking that the city subscribe to the Western Municipal News, for the Mayor and Aldermen. Filed.

The Roberts Manufacturing Company wrote pressing for payment of their account. Ald. Penhale stated that the machinery did not fill the bill satisfactorily and moreover the engineer wanted specifications, showing method of working. The matter was referred to the clerk, to write the Roberts Co. for specifications required and to state the city's complaint.

The secretary of the band wrote asking permission to remove the lights from the band stand to the skating rink at their own expense. Permission granted.

H. C. Cooper wrote re continuing the Coleridge bus subsidy. Filed and Mr. Cooper notified that the council could not continue the bonus.

Mr. J. S. Damm wrote asking that the city refund taxes paid by Evangelical Association or lots on which the new church has been built. It was pointed out in the council that there was no church built on the land at the time the assessment was made. Referred to solicitor.

The Dominion Securities Co. wrote asking confirmation of the sale of the waterworks debentures. The Mayor in explanation of this said that the finance committee had met the representative of the company the previous week and had been made an offer of 96. Later the Dominion Securities Co. raised their offer to 97 and the finance committee promised to recommend to the council that this be accepted. A letter was read from Mr. James, in which an offer of Aemilius Jarvis Co. for 97½ with interest was made. The Mayor did not think it would be the straight thing to turn down the Dominion Securities Co., after the finance committee's recommendation. On Ald. Huckvale's motion the recommendation of the finance committee was accepted, and the clerk was instructed to write to Mr. James to say the bonds had been sold.

Auditor Krauss' report for the second quarter was read and filed.

Herbert Baker wrote that he was willing to assume the duties of poll tax collector for a 15 per cent. commission. The Mayor explained that Mr. Baker had been misinformed that the commission was ten per cent. Fifteen per cent. had previously been paid.

The secretary of the school board wrote asking for payment of the annual municipal grant, which, with interest from the time at which it was due, amounted to $10,500. Referred to finance committee with power to act.

The School Board Secretary also wrote regarding the resignation of Trustee Niblock. It was suggested that the council appoint a trustee to act till the end of the year, but it was pointed out that Mr. Niblock had another year to serve, before the term for which he was elected would expire; the council had power to appoint a trustee only for a period of less than four months. The letter was left on the table, and the election of a new trustee will be made at the civic elections next month.

The Mayor and trustees were authorized to borrow up to the amount of $15,000 from the Merchants Bank and the Bank of Montreal, and to pay the amount due to the School Board.

Medical health report for August and September, showed two cases of diphtheria, one of measles, thirty-eight of typhoid fever.

Throughout the evening Ald. Penhale delivered a running discourse in which he touched upon the expenditure at the pump-house and the remarkable disappearance of typhoid fever from the city. Each little sermonette ended with a reference or insinuation about "The Times" or "The Times man" and the Alderman appeared to have rankling in hismind some remarks made by the aforesaid paper. Ald. Penhale wanted to know how it was that the fever had disappeared though there was no difference in the water supplied. In a jocular manner he referred to the recent epidemics, remarking that "if we did murder four or five people we couldn't help that."

With regard to an application of Mr. Hopper and others for water connections, Ald. Huckvale stated that the water and finance committees recommended that the word be undertaken. Here was an occasion for another volley from Ald. Penhale, who thought that it was unwise to go in for any more expenditure in the water department. He believed that the water commissioners "had better resign in a body" (Ald. Tweed, "I second the motion.").

"Are we supposed to listen to a lecture from you or go or with business?" was the Mayor's query, provoked by another little speech of the chairman of the water commissioners. As a parting shot, Ald. Penhale remarked: "There is too much money being spent and no one knows where it is going. We had better shut up shop till spring."

The Mayor reported that the new manager of the Canneries was in town and wanted a fire alarm box put in in the neighborhood of the building. Attention had been drawn to the fact that the Canneries would pay a considerable sum in taxes and they were therefore entitled to all the protection possible. Referred to fire, water and light committee with power to act.

The waterworks by-law was read a third time.

Ald. Huckvale enquired re ambulance charges. He had been informed that so high a figure as $2.50 a day was sometimes charged. Ald. McKay stated that 90 cents had been the regular charge. Now Williamson and Nichol were running the ambulance. The clerk stated that this firm which has charge of the wagon, has been charging $2.00 a trip in some cases. Ald. McKay suggested that new tenders be called for.

The Mayor reported that Mr. Terrill, an Ontario gentleman, was thinking of purchasing the Roseries, and wished to know whether he might buy the land for the price paid bythe original firm, $200 an acre for five acres). In the contract made when the first Roseries Company located here, they were to employ at least 25 hands. Mr. Terrill said it would be impossible for him to carry so many employees. Ald. Morrowthought the clause should be dropped. The Mayor stated that he had written to Mr. Terrill to the effect that the majority of the council were in favor of agreeing to let him have the land on the conditions desired.

The question of paying the doctor's bill of a laborer injured at the power house was raised by Ald. Huckvale. When this matter came up at a recent council meeting, the man's request that his doctor's bill of $5 be paid was turned down, because the Compensation Act does not come into force until next year. Ald. Huckvale pointed out that it was not a question of the Compensation Acti but whether in all justice the bill ought not to be paid. The man had lost two day's work but all he claimed was the cost of medical attendance. The Alderman had advised the injured man to get the engineer to make a report.

The Council broke up rather earlier than usual, Ald. Penhale expressing disapproval of the early adjournment, as he'd "got to furnish about four columns every week for The Times."

self. To this she added an easy rocker for Uncle Josh, and didn't forget a most convenient and ornamental writing desk for "Hubby" Charles, having come to the conclusion that J. C. Beveridge's prices were below the very whisper of competition.

"But, say, uncle, aren't you about to forget one of the greatest essentials of our house furnishing?" asked Polly. "You haven't said a word about carpets, yet." "Jes so, jes so," replied Uncle Josh, "it does beat all how you wimmin folks can think of things, but I tell you it won't take me long to think of the store for carpets. Fact is, you're in it right now. Anything from linoleum for the kitchen to the most elegant Brussels or Axminster for the parlor, you can get 'em here, and J. C. Beveridge don't charge fancy prices in that department either."

"A pretty good start," said the old man," and now we'll go to the Marshall Hardware Co.'s big hardware and stove store where Polly's housewifely instincts will have full play in marvels of kitchen apparatus. There is not an establishment in the country that carries a more comprehensive stock of cooking machinery," remarked Uncle Josh. "Every possible piece of kitchen furniture from a tin dipper to a cooking range is here in all styles and variety." If Polly fails to accomplish wonders in the culinary art, it will not be for want of superior cooking utensils, for she purchased a Jewel range with all other equipments needed in a well regulated kitchen all of which Uncle Josh paid for with delight 'cause he knew the Marshall Hardware Co. had treated him all right, just as they treat everybody.

"Well, Scat my!" exclaimed Uncle Josh, with a David Harum accent, as they reached the street, "I must run over to the Merchants Bank of Canada and get another check book. Come along with me and get acquainted with Mr. James and staff, for of course you will do business with them and it is always more pleasant to be personally acquainted with the people you do business with. This bank is as solid as the base of the universe, is managed on safe conservativeness, and has a strong working capital. You will find them ever ready to extend any accommodation compatible with business principles."

"Guess I'll open an account with the Merchants Bank of Canada right away," replied Charles, and he did.

Again strolling down Main street, Polly cast some very wistful and eager glances into the Assiniboia Music Co. store, and with a coaxing smile she told Uncle Josh about her great love of music. Uncle Josh was noticed to examine his bank book rather lugubriously. "Well, I guess I can stand it," he said, "but what piano would you most prefer?" "I think I would like to have a Gerard Heintzman" she quickly answered "Several people have recommended it to me for its purity of tone, sympathy of touch, beauty of finish and a whole lot of other good points." "You couldn't choose a better instrument," replied the old man, "and sure enough the Assiniboia Music Co. are the very people to see about it." Polly selected the coveted Gerhard Heintzman while Uncle Josh wrote out a check, pleasantly too—'cause he knew the price was extremely reasonable.

"Let's see—I promised you a gold watch, didn't I?" queried Uncle Josh of Polly, "and Stoddart and Doonan are the men to give us theworth of our money." Entering the popular jewelery store the old man gallantly acquitted himself of the promise and then directed Polly's attention to the superior stock of silverware carried by the house. "There is no other such a house in town," said the old man, "and I will guarantee the quality to be the very best. Pick out your family clock while here," he added. Stoddart and Doonan carry a magnificent line. Don't forget another fact," he continued, "if ever you unfortunately need optical goods, this is the place to come to get your eyes scientifically tested and fitted free, and say, my boy, remember that Stoddart and Doonan are also expert doctors on sick watches.

"Oh me! Oh my!" ejaculated Polly as they halted before a show window, 'what a perfectly lovely slipper." "Yes," said Uncle Josh, Turpin Bros. stock can't be equalled in style and extent in this section. Go in, look it over and get acquainted Pick out what you want and I'll foot the bill." It might have been policy not to have extended that invitation, had not Uncle Josh known what wise economy it is to trade at Turpin Bros., for Polly found goods and prices so seductive that she purchased an outfit from a pretty slipper to a handsame walking boot. Charley invested in Slater gent's fine shoes, while Uncle Josh indulged in a stout boot, with rubbers for the crowd. No one needing footwear can resist the styles and prices offered by Turpin Bros.

"So far so good," sententiously remarked Uncle Josh and one thing suggests another. To make this personal decoration business complete Charley, you'll also need a new hat and a few other men's furnishings. Now this is the best store in town for men's furnishings." I know of no one who keeps so large or complete a line of good goods—in styles that are corect. There is no question about it, my boy, Turpin Bros. are in a position to supply the good dressers in more satisfactory styles and prices than anybody in town, and they're satisfied with a moderate profit, too. Charles invested in a complete outfit from a late style hat down to sox, and he declared that "if a man couldn't get satisfied at that store it'd be his own fault."

Returning from Turpin Bros. Charley intimated to Uncle Josh that he would like a dish of oysters. "All right, my boy. I was thinking about that myself and I'm glad you mentioned it, 'cause I must say that if there is any one thing on this earth in the category of food consumption that I'm particularly fond of, its oysters. The only place in town to get good oysters served up in any style is Mrs. Mac's, so we'll drop in and get some, and if you don't say that I took you to the proper place then your Uncle Josh is no prophet." Calling at Mrs. Mac's the trio regaled themselves in delicious bivalves, which Charley declared would surpass even the dream of an epicure, and he said that he guessed he'd drop into Mrs. Mac's pretty often.

Now children, there is just one more place in Medicine Hat that I must take you to, for your introduction must be complete. And I want to tell you that the Electric Theatre is one of the best picture shows in the country. They have one of the funniest pianos around here. Why bless me, I was watching a fellow play it the other night, when all at once he gets up, walks out in front and believe me, that darn thing went right on playing same as if the pianist was working the ivory. Found out after that it run by electricity. Ther, as they are going to have an illustrated song singer there this week we had better go and get the tickets right now, for the Electric Theatre always plays to good houses and we might not be able to get seats if we wait too long."

Woman like, Polly was discussing the matter of how she would arrange her new house and was interrupted by Uncle Josh. "And those house fixin's remind me," said he, "that you haven't got your dishes yet. Now, the most famous stock in town, for extent, quality and completeness is at H. W. Ireland's. There isn't positively, a thing in the china, crockery, glass or porcelain needed for use or ornament in any part of the house that can not be found at H. W. Ireland's, in definite variety and at wonderfully low prices." He also has a splendid stock of lamps of every description and decorated ware in abundance. Polly's big order suggested her thorough appreciation.

"Halt!" commanded Uncle Josh, as the party came in front of Pingle's Drug and Book Store. "Walk right in." "Why Uncle, we're not sick, and—" "Guess I know that," laughed the old man, but I suspect it won't be long before this young man begins to take an interest in matters of Paregoric and —" "U-n-c-l-e!" "We'll go in anyway and get acquainted, besides Polly may find some toilet articles she wants." Sure enough, before leaving he was loaded down with combs brushes, face powders and several bottles of fine purfumes. "Don't forget," added Uncle Josh "to come here with your prescriptions, as Pingle and his clerks are competent pharmacists who use none but pure and reliable drugs.

Yum, yum," laughingly escaped Polly's rosebud lips, as she glanced into Doty's attractive confectionery store. "Uncle Josh you know I've got a sweet tooth, and those home made candies look so nice I just can't resist the temptation to go in.' Charley here objected, 'cause he knew if Polly got into a confectionerystore there's where she'd likely want to stay. He relented, however, when Uncle Josh said, fruit my boy, fruit, so in they went, and after regaling themselves in delicious fruit the girl loaded up on chocolates and bon bons enough to make every tooth in the county ache. Polly was a splendid judge of sweetmeats, andshe indulged in a profuse compliment to what she found at Doty's.

"Now how about the plumber Uncle?" inquired Polly. "You remember you said you would see somebody for that." Jes so jes so, and we shan't have any botcher do the work either. I'll talk to Wm. Barrie about that. We've got to have water pipes put in, a hot water heater and a porcelain bath tub, besides some sanitary fixin's and Wm. Barrie is the very man to do the work. He observes closely all the hygenic laws guarding against dangers from sewer gas. You can always feel safe about the housewhen practical men, as I know Wm. Barrie to be, have done the work." The aforesaid plumber got the contract, did just what Uncle Josh said he would do, and won Polly's praise for his excelleot workmanship.

At this point, somewhat to the confusion of Charley, the old man indulged in a half serious criticism of his personal appearance. "You are decidedly off style for a townsman," said he, "and we'd better go see Geo. Howson about some new duds. That's an up-to-date place, where they understand the changing styles and are noted for good fits, and I bet you'll look more like a newly married man when you get togged out in a Geo. Howson suit."

Charley found a large stock of woolens to choose from and the prices so reasonable that he left his measure, and when his new suit was finished, he looked so stylish in it his wife declared she'd fallen in love with him much sooner nad he only been getting his clothes made by Geo. Howson, the popular tailor.

After this visit, Uncle Josh suggested a resort of some refreshment. At the refreshment table the old man waxed philosophical. "Never neglect the larder," said he. "That important adjunct to housekeeping controls masculine temper. To that end you must patronize a grocer on whom you can depend for honest goods. Through a long term of years I have found H. W. Ireland perfectly reliable. You will find him a careful man, always fully stocked with of stock can't be beat. They have staple and fancy groceries, fresh and first-class, no saeld-worn goods there while the prices are down to brass tacks. To keep peace in this family get all your groceries of H. W. Ireland."

"I declare, uncle," exclaimed Charley, "there goes a handsome buggy. I must have one like that for the girl." "Get it right up here," said the old man. "You see Doane and Son conduct a carriage repository here that for variety and excellence of stocp can't be beat. They mave surreys, carriages, buggies, phaetons, and wagons of all the leading styles and Doane and Son are satisfied with a moderate profit too. Polly was soon the possessor of a handsome carriage, but before they left Charley also got much interested in a road wagon. Uncle Josh saw what was up, so he quickly said, "I'll honor your draft for that too, my boy, 'cause I know that anything you get of Doan and Son is O.K."

"By the way," exclaimed Uncle Josh with a paternal air, "the next thing to look after is the lumber for those improvements which are absolutely necessary. Come with me and I'll introduce you to The Medicine Hat Lumber Co., who are the principal dealers in that line here, and they have a well equipped planing mill in connection. The Medicine Hat Lumber Co. carry the most complete line of building material in the country—everything, from the sills for the foundation to the shingles for the roof, including doors and windows, mouldings, etc., and don't want all the money a feller's got either. It is pleasant to deal with The Medicine Hat Lumber Co., for their greatest aim is to give satisfaction to every customer." And it didn't take Uncle Josh long to place "a right smart sized" order for building material.

"And another place I wish to take you, children, is to the Medicine Hat Milling Co. flour mill," remarked the old man. Your introduction to Medicine Hat would not be half complete without it. Talk about flour, why bless you there ain't no flour that can come up to Prairie Pride, made by this mill. All good housewives around this section won't use anything else but it. Ask your grocer for a sack. Then as to feed, this mill is headquarters for that. They handle everything from golden oats down to corn cobs and serve customers with promptness and dispatch. Ive been dealing with The Medicine Hat Milling Co. for a long time, and I tell you it is a good firm to tie with, and I always did believe in patronizing home industry."

"And now, young man, let me give you another pointer," remarked the generous old uncle. "Do not understand me to say that clothes make the man, but I do affirm that clean and spotless linen helps a heap. Now in this connection I am happy to inform you that the Steam Laundry is one of the best laundries in the state. Polly will want her lace curtains and shirt waists done up, it's a ticklish job you know, but the Steam Laundry is so very careful that the most delicate fabrics are washed without the slightest injury and I don't like a Chinaman nohow. Mr. Green, the proprietor, will see that your collars, cuffs and shirts are made white as snow unless they happen to be colored, but then you needn't be afraid of a fade for Mr. Green prides himself upon the proper care of colored garments."

"Law sakes!" suddenly exclaimed Uncle Josh, "all this trading 'round town has caused me to forget another one or two of the greatest essentials to future existence. Newly married folks can't live on love and scenery any more than anybody else—but bread; it's the 'staff of life,' you know. Polly must make the acquaintance of Mr. McKinnon of the City Bakery; his bread, pies and nick-nacks are conceded by all to be the finest on earth. Remember, Charley, there is no use of your 'ootsy tootsy' bothering herself much about baking, so long as there is a good bakery in town like the City Bakery. They made that elegantcake I sent to your weddin'." "Yes, and everybody said it was just lovely," eagerly responded Polly.

"Yes, and while we are on this important topic of gastronomics," continued Uncle Josh, "we must not forget meat. It goes hand in handwith bread. Now the next thing to do is to locate a good market where you can get fresh wholesome meats, poultry, etc., at all times, and according to my notion E. J. Hunt & Co. This is the boss meat market in the city and is popular with everybody are the only men to supply you who is particular to have the best. The reason for this is all because E. J. Hunt & Co. are very careful in the selection of stock, get the best of everything and keep it fresh on cold storage. To keep your 'hubby' in a good humor, Polly, trade at the E. J. Hunt meat market every time." Good advice.

"Now," cried the old gentleman, "now for a picture of this crowd. In good old country fashion we'll go to the photograph gallery, and my friend, Mr. Milne, has a good one. His pictures are wonderful in fidenity and finish. I want one full-size photo for my study and some small ones for my friends. Mr. Milne has the soul of an artist; all his work is labor of love, in which he will stop short of perfection. As he is famous for successful enlarging, I want to give you a life-size representation of "yours truly." (The pictures of Uncle Josh, Polly, and Charley may all be seen at Milne's studio any time the reader desires to call.)

En route to their home the party called at The Times office. "You'll want the news every week, remarked Uncle Josh, "and as this is the favorite local paper here I'll subscribe."

Upon summing up the wonderful events of the day Polly began to volubly express her thanks. You have bought us everything, she exclaimed.

"Only one thing," replied Uncle Josh, reflectively, "but I can remedy that. Beveridge the furniture man, always has a nice line of them and you can get one whenever you want it; I'll pay for the best."

"W-h-y," exclaimed Polly with great surprise, "Uncle, what can it be?"

"Well, it's a baby carriage, and—" But Polly had fainted.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

(From our own correspondents.)

What Wideawake and Reliable Correspondents throughout This District Find Worthy of Recording for Publication in their Home Paper.

Seven Persons

Mrs. Harry Henry, Miss Mabel Henry and Mr. Joseph Endersby, all of Winnipeg expect to spend two months at Mr. H. W. Foster's ranch, they arrived last Saturday.

School Inspector J. W. Brown is spending this week at Lethbridge and McLeod.

Mr. Edward Smith is building a house on his homestead.

Mr. and Mrs. Butzon of Whilta are weekly callers at Seven Persons.

Election day passed off at this place very quietly. Mr. Simmons receiving a majority of nine.

Another snow storm this week makes the wheat crop look promising Sleighs were the order of the day.

There is an extra gang of twelve men still repairing the track here.

Mr. A. W. Butler, operator here is on the sick list and a substitute is filling his place for a day or two.

Mrs. E. Weiss was a Hat visitor, returning last night.

The C.P.R. Co. would confer a great favor on Seven Persons people by putting in a new road crossing on the section line at this place.

A party of Indians camped herelast Wednesday.

After the storm in rounding up the cattle, Mr. Foster found 17 head in Bad Water Lake, but was only able to extricate one in six.

Mr. Murray passed through here Tuesday for the Hat, returning on Thursday.

Josephsburg

The mounted police detachment moved into their new quarters on October 31st.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Will and their daughter Mrs. Gottlieb Weiss have gone to Olds to visit Mrs. John Marz.

Mr. Limon Heather and the Misses Rose and Katherine Heather spent a few days last week in Medicine Hat.

Coleridge

The Molson place south west of the town has been sold to a syndicate from Lehigh, Iowa, and a large brick and tile works are being put in at the clay deposit there. A spur is being run down the the Bull's Head Valley into the junction to connect with the main line of the C.P.R. there. Mr. Ginther's well boring rig is now on the premises testing the depth of the clay bank.

The passenger train known as the Crow is running into Coleridge night and morning now and doing all transferring onto the main line trains at this point.

Mr. Lecieux, the Coleridge hotel man, informs us he will be ready to open on the 1st December.

There are two more stores going up as fast as they can be built.

Mr. Frank Logon and Mr. Folton are in Coleridge with a grading outfit finishing the Y at the west end of the town.

George Miller, Jerry Miller, George Harper, William Laurrison, and N. Cavan returned last week from many Island Lake were they had been shooting for a week. They were out in the storm of October 20th and 21st, and report having had an awful time, as the snow drifted right up the wall of their tent, and in the tent, food, beds, and in fact every place. They ran out of fire wood and the storm was so intense that they didn't dare leave the tent to find any for fear of getting lost in the blizzard. Below are a few items from a diary kept by one of the boy's.

October 19th.

5 p.m.—Starting to snow and getting very cold, game not moving very much.

8 p.m.—A real northwest blizzard is now blowing and the two Miller boys who took our horses down to Gaskill's, pasture have not returned yet, and we fear they are lost.

10 p.m.—Very cold and wet, snow falling; wind has swung from north east to north west.

October 20th.

6 a.m.—Our clothes, which were all wet last night are all frozen this morning. It is snowing harder than ever. Laurrison, in a vain attempt to get a pair of wet riding boots on got his temper slightly ruffled and has taken his knife and slit hisboots from the top right down to the toe it was awful cold, but owing to the language he used we had to get out in the snow until the boots were on.

12 a.m.—Two Miller boys have just arrived in a half frozen condition, having spent the night in a snowdrift. Our liquid refreshments are going down very fast this morning.

6 p.m.—Very cold to-night.

October 21st.

6.30 a.m.—Still snowing fast. Lakes are all freezing over and we fear the game will all leave.

12 a.m.—Still snowing but clouds are breaking in the west and it should clear in two hours.

6 p.m.—Stopped snowing now and sun is going down red. We think we will have nice day tomorrow.

October 22nd.

5 a.m.—Nice bright morning and we are all going out to shoot as all around us we can see grey geese, ducks and swan sitting on the ice, and if we can get them to flush we will have good shooting.

6 p.m.—Every one back in camp and are getting supper. A lot of ducks have been bagged today. Jerry Miller, Henry Cavan and George Miller all bagged swan today.

October 23rd.

6 a.m.—Chinooking this morning; snow going and laskes are breaking up. All hands going to west end of lake this morning as we can hear thousands of geese and swan up there

6 p.m.—All in camp again safely. After a good day. Henry Cavan shot seven swan, a grey goose and wavy today from the one position. George Harper also got a swan.

October 24th.

7 a.m.—Breaking camp this morning and pulling up to Chappie's lake.

9 p.m.—Just arrived at Chappie's Lake and have met Capt. Parker, Reg. Parker and Frank St. Denis, who have a nice bag and are pulling for home in the morning. We will follow them in.

CHURCH NOTES.

The seventh annual Sunday School Convention for Alberta opens in the city today and will be continued tomorrow and Thursday in the Presbyterian church. The principal figure of the Convention will be Mr. W. C. Pearce of Chicago, an able speaker and an expert in adult Bible class work. Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Muirhead and other experienced Sunday School workers will also take a prominent part in the proceedings. As the paper goes to press delegates have already began to arrive.

The anniversary services of the Century Methodist Church will be held on Sunday next. The pastor will conduct both services. The morning subject will be, "Our Anniversary—its meaning and Possibilities." and the subject for the evening, "Our Lord's Call." Special music for the day will be given. The church will be appropriately decorated by the Epworth League. On Monday evening, the annual supper will be given by the King's Helpers. Supper will be served from 6 to 8, after which an excellent programme will be rendered.

The regular Epworth League and prayer meeting services will be withdrawn this week on account of the Sunday School Convention.

Afflicted for years with a Diseased Liver.

Mr. L. R. Devitt, Berlin, Ont., better known, perhaps, as "Smallpox Ben," has used

MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

He has also used them for his patients when nursing them, and it is a well-known fact that small-pox sufferers must keep the bowels well regulated.

Read what he says:—"I have been afflicted for years with a diseased liver, and have tried all kinds of medicine, but of no avail until about four years ago I tried your Laxa-Liver Pills, and got instant relief. Since then I have nursed different patients afflicted with small-pox, and in each case I have used your valuable pills.

"My wishes are that all persons suffering with stomach or liver troubles will try Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I will advertise them whenever and wherever I have an opportunity and I hope that if at any time I cannot get the pills, I will be fortunate enough to get the formula."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25 cents per vial or 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers or will be mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MAKE THIS UP AT YOUR HOME.

What will appear very interesting to many people here is the article taken from a New York daily paper, giving a simple prescription which is said to be a positive remedy for backache or kidney or bladder derangement, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three take in teaspoonful doses after each ounces. Shake well in a bottle and meal and again at bedtime.

A well-known druggist here at home, when asked regarding this prescription, stated that the ingredients are all harmless, and can be obtained at a small cost from any good prescription pharmacy, or the mixture wodkl be put up if asked to do so. He further stated that while this prescription is often prescribed in rheumatic afflictions with splendid results, he could see no season why it would not be a splendid remedy for kidney and urinary troubles and backache, as it has a peculiar action upon the kidney structure, cleansing these most important organs and helping them to sift and filter from the blood the foul acids and waste matter which cause sickness and suffering. Those of our readers who suffer can make no mistake in giving it a trial.

YOUR DANGER BEGINS WHEN YOUR BACK ACHES.

It is the First and the Sure Sign of Kidney Disease.

Doan's Kidney Pills

cure the aching back by curing the aching kidneys beneath—for it is really the kidneys aching and not the back.

They act directly on the kidneys and make them strong and healthy, thereby causing pure blood to circulate throughout the whole system.

Mrs. Frank Foos, Woodside, N.B., writes:—"I was a great sufferer with backache for over a year, and could get nothing to relieve me until I took two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and now I do not feel any pain whatever, and can eat and sleep well; something I could not do before.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

Mr. J. McNeely was a visitor to Calgary last week.

Col. Steele is in the city today inspecting the school cadets.

Mrs. G. W. Elliott's mother has been visiting here for a few days on her way to her home in Calgary. Mrs. Elliott accompanied her to her home yesterday.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Milne, Stewart, Pingle, Cousins and Spencer met Superintendent Price last week and had an interview that means much to the city.

The third arbitrator has been decided upon for the case of Red Deer vs. Western General Electric Co. Mayor Cousins is one of the number, the other two being R. S. Kelen of Montana and Wilfrid Phillips, manager of the Electric Railway Co. Winnipeg.

Mr. C. C. Yamanaka, editor of the Canadian News, one of the two Japanese dailies of Vancouver was in the city yesterday, and called on The Times. Mr. Yamanaka has come this far east to study the conditions of his countrymen. He is an exceedingly intelligent little Jap and anxious to learn all he can about the country.

The Times is in receipt of copies of "Young Canada," "Every Boys Volume" and "The Child's Own Magazine." The first two partake of the Boy's Own Annual and are up to the standard set by that well-known paper. The stories are just the kind the boy's want and the bits of useful information imparted will help to fill many an idle hour. The "Child's Own" is for younger children, and includes more variety than usually enters into such reading. They are published by W. Bryce 489-491 Queen St., west, Toronto, Can.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Every Meeting Well Attended and Helpful Addresses Given

W. C. Pearce of Chicago the Principal Speaker

One of the most helpful conventions of Sunday School workers in the history of the Association was held in the city on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week. From first to last the addresses and discussions were of an intensely practical nature, and the convention gave promise of an aggressive campaign for the advancement among the youth of the province of the cause of the Christian churches and of Christian ideals.

Twenty-five Sunday Schools of the province were represented, and sixty-eight delegates were in attendance during the three days' session held in St. John's Presbyterian church.

On Tuesday evening at the opening meeting, Ald. Spencer gave an address of welcome, in the absence of the mayor from the city, the president of the Association, the Rev. A. C. Farrell, who occupied the chair, spoke in behalf of the churches and Mr. O. M. Fowler in behalf of the Sunday Schools.

The principal speaker of the convention was Mr. W. C. Pearce of Chicago, Superintendent of the Adult Department of the International Association, who delivered addresses on "The World's Greatest Syndicate," "Essentials in Successful Adult Bible Class," and other subjects of vital interest.

The first annual report, of the general secretary for Western Canada, Mr. Stuart Muirhead of Okotoks, showed a wonderful advancement during the last year. Mr. Muirhead, as secretary for the whole of Western Canada, had been able to devote only four months to Alberta. He had endeavored to complete the organization of the province with committees that the highest efficiency might be maintained. Fifteen county associations would eventually be formed. The following five departments of school work had been agreed upon, others to be added as work progresses:

Elementary—To include Cradle Roll Beginners, Primary and Junior.

Adult—To include all the work over sixteen years of age.

Educational—To include Teachers' Meetings, Teacher Training, International Reading Circle and Grading.

Extension—To include Home Department, Visitation and International Bible Reading Association.

Moral Reform—To include Total Abstinence, Social Purity and Good Citizenship.

Two other departments it was hoped would shortly be added—Intermediate and Missionary.

The total enrolment in the Sunday schools of the province during the past year was 20,872, of whom 2,163 were officers and teachers and 18,709 scholars.

Mr. Pearce's inspiring address on Tuesday evening, "The World's Greatest Syndicate," was one of the features of the convention. In graphic manner the panorama of Sunday school progress was unfolded from its early beginnings as a small group in Gloucester, England, down to the present day, when in every country of the world the leaven of the movement was at work. In even the so-called heathen countries conventions were being held. Japan and Korea were active in the work, the polyglot population of India studied the Bible each Sunday in fifty-two different languages. In America this great Syndicate numbered fifteen million souls banded together to advance the work of the Kingdom. Seventy-five million dollars was annually devoted by the people of this northern continent to the cause.

This vast syndicate for good knew no national boundaries. World wide in character, it was in commonwith the other holy bonds which bind the peoples of all races and tongues in brotherhood, hoing more for human solidarity than were commerce and international diplomacy combined.

Wednesday's Session.

"How the libraries can cultivate a taste for good literature," was the subject of an address by the Rev. A. D. Archibald on Wednesday morning. The speaker believed that the Sunday School library should consist of books whose aim was to build up the scholars in Christian character and inculcate Christian ideals. It was unwise for the Sunday school to duplicate books which might be found on the shelves of town and city libraries. The true function of the Sunday School library was to supply that class of religious literature which would be absent from the shelves of a public institution.

A most thoughtful and suggestive address was that of the Rev. Chas. H. Huestis of Red Deer. Mr. Huestis has made a deep study of the problems of youth and his address on "The Opportunity of the Sunday School in the Adolescent Period" was followed with marked interest. The period of adolescence, when life's elements were in a molton state, when the changes affecting the sexual life were taking place, was the deciding period of existence. Youth was a period of doubt, of rebellion against authority. The duty of the church was to lead from doubt the thoughtful mind. Repression would be of no avail. Doubt was not to be deplored, but to be overcome.

Thursday's Session.

Under the caption of Moral Reform two addresses were delivered on Thursday afternoon. The Rev. A. D. McDonald spoke on "The Place of The Sunday School in the Temperance Crusade." Drawing a comparison between the present-day temperance movement and the crusades of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, the speaker contended that the former was a crusade of by far the greater importance. It was a righteous war of world-wide extent. The insidious powers of evil were to be overcome on the moral plane, not by force of arms.

In the United States thirty-five million people were today enjoying the blessings of prohibition. The enthusiasm of Canadian reformers had been kindled, and, to her lasting credit, the Dominion now led the world in temperance legislation. Prince Edward Island was in the van of the Canadian temperance forces, and the movement was travelling westward.

In a peculiar way the Sunday school was interested in the temperance movement, for the reformers were trying to delegalize the traffic whose very existence was a menace to the home. The saloon was responsible for the terrible leakage of adult scholars from our Sabbath school. Seventy-seven per cent of the prisoners who passed through a prison in Leeds, England, were ex-Sunday School scholars, and those had been in most cases brought to crime through drink.

The speaker recommended the introduction into the Sunday school of distinctive temperance work. Pledges should be kept on hand and brought to the notice of the scholars. Preparations for temperance Sunday should be made, the teachers making special appeal along temperance lines.

The question might be asked "What is the use of all this if we are to have prohibition in Alberta in five years?" In the first place the speaker could hardly hope for the accomplishment of this revolution in so short a period, thoughthe temperance forces would work for it in so half-hearted manner. We must carry on educational work among the young. The only hope for prohibition lay in the voters of to-morrow. We should have to wait as Prince Edward Island has had to wait—until the boys we were educating today had grown to manhood before the great temperance reform could be carried.

The campaign must be carried on through the pulpit, through the press, through the Sunday School. The press today was rather a register of public events than a moulder of public opinion. It was of necessity run on business lines, and the temperance editor was severely handicapped if he attempted to advance his principles through his editorial columns. "We haven't the press we'd like to have," said Mr. McDonald, "but we are sure of the church."

An interesting address on "The Opportunity of the Sunday School in Promoting Good Citizenship," was given by the Rev. W. A. Lewis.

On Thursday evening the seventh and closing session of the conference took place. After a conference on Sunday School work and the service of prayer and praise, the Rev. A. Mahaffy spoke on "Character Building."

Nothing in this world, said the speaker, was so beautiful as noble, human character, the secret of all right relationships between men.

The party politician promised if we put our trust in him, that he would bring about right relationships, among men. The Socialist said that a revolution was necessary before a state of equity and justice could be brought about. But the only revolution that could succeed in thus idealizing human conditions was a revolution in human character. No theology could theorize away the truth that a man to enter Heaven must allow heaven to enter him. It required the Divine leaven to permeate human character before it could be brought about, that honesty in all the relations of life which, if the newspapers were correct, was so sorely needed at the present day—the divinity, beauty, sparkling glory of honor and honesty.

Another quality of true character was the homely virtue of industry—industry without mere thought of gain—high principled and altruistic.

Moral courage and sobriety, of appetite and mind, were requisite to the highest type of manhood. The speaker did not wish to see suppressed the natural and innocent joys of life But he was afraid that a timemight come—eternal vigilance alone could prevent its coming—when, as in the days of decadent Rome, we shouk desert the Forum for the Coliseum Perhaps we allowed our thoughts t dwell a little too much on baseball We needed to think more of th meaning of life, of the duties of citizenship.

But the keystone of the arch o character without which all othe qualities were of no avail, was mora purity. Moral purity was the great need of all the ages, the secret o all excellence in the make-up of man

To crown all, and in fact to make the nobler virtues possible, the new er that comes from on High, faith in the God of our fathers, was necessary.

Responsibility in the laying of th foundation of character lay with parents, with public school teachers and with the teachers in the Sabbath schools. Mr. Mahaffy expresse his firm belief in the transmission o soul qualities from the parent to the child, the higher the standard the former might reach, the easier was the attainment of moral excellence by his offspring.

Speaking of the influence of the public school, Mr. Mahaffy paid a glowing tribute to the influence the splendid quality of the public school teachers of Western Canada as he had found them.

The concluding address of the convention was then delivered by Mr. Pearce, whospoke of the one final goal towards which all the institutions of the church must work—the winning of souls to Christ.

The delegates and friends were afterwards entertained in the basement of the church, supper being provided by the ladies of St. John's church.

Mock Parliament

The Beginning of Important Laws

Under auspicious circumstances the Mock Parliament was launched on its legislative career on Friday evening. Members attended in large numbers, though not perhaps so large as the importance of the occasion would warrant, the opening day of a session from which the country has been led to expect so much. In extenuation it may be said that many members were unavoidably detained in their constituencies, the sudden call to public service having found them with private business still unsettled. The visitors' gallery was filled, a significant circumstance being the large number of the fair sex present at a period in our history when changes in the franchise of a radical nature are in contemplation. The Women's Social and Political Union was unrepresented, however, and cabinet ministers escaped from the chamber without serious maltreatment.

After the swearing in of the members by the clerk, it was moved that the honorable member for Streetaville, Mr. J. J. Mahaffy, do take the chair of the House as Speaker." The choice was made unanimous and the Speaker-elect being conducted to the chair by the proposer and seconder of the motion, returned his acknowledgements to the House for the great honor they had been pleased to confer upon him.

A moment later the Usher of the Blackrod announced His Excellency the Governor General, who entered while members stood uncovered, and took his seat upon the throne.

The speech read as follows:

Honorable Members of the Senate Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

It is with feelings of deepest pleasure and gratification, that, in summoning you at the opening of another session of the Parliament for the transaction of business, I am able to congratulate you on the great prosperity which has marked the year just closed, and on the favorable prospects for the period on which we are entering.

For the past two years the commercial world has felt the blighting effect, to some extent, of an unusual financial stringency, but Providence has blessed us with an unusually bountiful harvest, and, owing to the wise legislation which has marked the administration of last Session, in face of such restraint, our Dominion has prepariuuuuuuuu our Dominion has prospered to an unparalled degree.

The hope expressed by me when releasing you from your labors at the close of last session, that the legislation you had passed, would prove beneficial to this great Dominion of ours, has been fulfilled, as you will learn from the reports my Ministers will present to you.

During the session now open, you will be asked to consider many and varied questions of legislation, among which will be:—

A Revision of the Tariff.

Legislation regarding Labor Issues.

A continuation of a vigorous immigration policy with reference to desirable immigrants.

A bill for the Revision of Postal Savings Banks, to facilitate general banking, the present system being too cumbersome, and consequently unnecessary delay being experienced in withdrawal of deposits; let that sink into your brain and see if it is not possible to get a dollar when it is wanted.

A Bill for the Extension of Rural Free Mail Delivery System.

A Bill to Establish a Canadian Navy, and thereby place Canada in an important and influential position among the nations of the World.

A Bill providing for the Disfranchisement of all Civil Servants.

A Bill providing for the Abolition of Capital Punishment.

A Bill to simplify the terminology of certain Provincial Acts and Ordinances.

A Bill for the Construction, Operation and Permanent Control of a Railway from the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan to some point on the Hudson's Bay, and the provision of extensive shipping facilities at that point.

A Bill to further extend the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway from Edmonton to Dawson City, concerning which details will be given later.

A Bill to put under Government control all public facilities, more particularly those which will readily admit of such a step, as for example the Telephone Systems of the Dominion, as is already being done in the new and energetic young Province of Alberta.

Among other measures you will be asked to consider, will be those providing for the enactment of legislation for the extension of Franchise to Women: and a bill for the taxation of all women over twenty-five years of age, who at the end of each lean year are unmarried.

The estimates for the ensuing fiscal year which will be submitted to you, have been framed with due consideration for economy, consistent with the need for efficiency in every branch of administration essential to the further development of this great Dominion.

I trust that your deliberations will tend to advance the interests and prosperity of this Confederacy, and promote happiness, unity and concord among all classes and creeds, in all sections of the Dominion.

The Hudson's Bay railroad bill was given a first reading, and after some discussion, in which honorable members displayed a woeful ignorance of the rules of procedure giving an opportunity for reparies of which full advantage was taken, a committee was nominated by the cabinet forthe appointment of select and standing committees of the house.

The house then went into committee of the whole, to hear a distinguished visitor, Mr. W. C. Pearce, of Chicago, who delivered a splendid address on subjects appertaining to government, to the relations between the Anglo-Saxon peoples, and the absolute necessity of character in those who aspired to public office.

The date of the next meeting of the House was left in the hands of a committee nominated by the Premier, consisting of the members of the cabinet, and the leader and one member of the Opposition.

The debate on the speech from the throne will take place on Tuesday evening next.

It is stated on good authority that the bill relating to the taxation of "lady bachelors" is likely to create a disposition to lessen the number.

The next meeting of the House has been fixed for Friday evening next at eight o'clock, and every other Friday thereafter from 8 to 10.30.

The Assembly Club

At a meeting of the Quadrille club held on Wednesday evening it was decided to hold a dance on Thanksgiving night. The name of the Club was changed, and it will now be known as the Assembly Club.

The new officers are as follows:

Hon. Pres.—Hon. W. T. Finlay.

President—C. A. Krauss.

Secretary-Treasurer—W. B. Finlay

Standing Committee—W. C. Honiball, C. H. Sherwood, J. Dunham, W. H. Bragg and H. W. Ireland.

C. A. MAGRATH'S MAJORITY

The Returning Officer made the final declaration on Saturday and Magrath is declared elected by the big majority of 352. Simmons won out in forty-five polls, Magrath in 51. Even outside of the two cities, Magrath beat his opponent by 29.

FIRST STEPS TOWARD UNION.

Ottawa, Nov. 5.—After severaldays deliberation the Baptists of Canada have formed a central federal administrative body with a constitution and with certain well defined subjects coming under its purview. A report will be prepared by a committee and sent to the individual churches for discussion and action. Should the constitution be accepted the union will be organized next fall.

The subjects that will come under the jurisdiction of the union are: Home and Foreign Missions, publication, moral and social reform, Sunday School, Grande Ligne mission, and young people's work.

It was decided that the headquarters of the union should be in Toronto, and Canadian missions will be under the jurisdiction of a Dominion board with two secretaries and headquarters at Toronto.

The following committee was named to constitute a moral and social reform board: Hon. Geo. E. Foster, M.P.; F. L. Monk, M.P.; Dr. A. A. Cameron, Dr. Kierstead, Rev. C. K. Morse, H. Moyle, Principal Sawyer, Rev. I. A. Corbett, Rev. J. H. McDonald and Rev. Geo. R. White.

Sewer Pipe Manufactory

Big Industry Offers to Commence Here

The People Will Decide

The run of industries for the city of Medicine Hat seems to be started. The Cameries are beginning to talk business. The Reserves is in fair way to be taken over by a man who will extend its operations. And now there is nothing but the expressed wish of the people in the way of the establishment of a large sewer pipe manufactory.

A United States firm with three branches in the Western and Central States has been examining the clay of this district for several months. Working with one of the real estate men, the firm's representatives have thoroughly covered the clay indications and [illegible] west near Coleridge. The factory, however, to be established in the city on account of city conveniences for the employees and the plant, provided the citizens give what is desired. The company asks for forty acres of land, as this is required for their buildings and grounds, tax exemption for fifteen years, and a gas well. Mr. J. W. Drinnan has come forward and has offered free twenty acres of his property across the river, adjoining the railway track. Twenty acres more will have to be purchased. A spur line will run from Coleridge into the clay property and the clay will be hauled the five miles to the factory.

Should all this be done the company agrees to employ sixty hands all the year round and to build four good buildings, the entire outlay representing at least $150,000. One building will be 80x250 feet, four stories high, another 50x300 feet three stories high, another 80x80 it, and the fourth 18x40. In addition there will be a dozen kilns about thirty feet in diameter. The capacity of the factory will be two hundred tons of clay per day.

Before anything can be done the granting of the privileges to the company will have to be submitted to the people.

Although all this information was available for last week's issue of The Times it was considered wise to keep the matter from too great publicity at the time. Later developments made its publication permissable.

New Glass of Pictures

Mr. J. W. McDonald of the Star Theatre has concluded a contract with a new firm for his moving picture films. This will involve a change in the character of the pictures, and it is believed will make this well-known resort more popular than ever. In future three subjects only will be thrown during each performance, one of these being a complete theatrical piece. Three different plays each week will be presented.

Police Court Items.

Mike Ross, for drunkeness and disorderly conduct on the fourth inst., was fined three dollars.

Geo. McLeegan, for drunkeness and committing an indecent act, three dollars or fourteen days.

John Pricel, drunk and disorderly five dollars or one month. Pricell was enlisted in the army of the unemployed, but a philanthropic government has now found him a job at an institution provided for the benefit of his class.

Mounted Police Notes

Corporal Jenkyn, who came out of the hospital last week, is paying a visit to Lethbridge where he will take a short rest.

The mounted police are determined to put an end to the reckless shooting which is taking place in the neighborhood of Seven Persons Creek. A mare belonging to Frank St. Denis was killed by a stray bullet last week.

Robert McCauley, who has just completed a month's term in jail at Lethbridge was being brought back to Medicine Hat by Constable Freed of the Lethbridge division, when he effected his escape at six o'clock yesterday morning at the junction of the Crow line. The Mounted Police are prepared to pay a reasonable reward for his recapture or information that may lead to the same. McCauley was to be tried here on a charge of theft.

Red Deer News—Miss Lilly Smith left by the evening train Saturday for a visit with friends at Medicine Hat.

Miss Harrison of Lethbridge has been spending a few days in the city.

METHODIST ANNIVERSARY

SUNDAY SERVICES AND MONDAY SUPPER

EXCELLENT ADDRESS ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The Anniversary Services of the Century Methodist Church were conducted on Sunday last by the Rev. C. H. Huestis, M. A. of Red Deer, who preached to large congregations morning and evening. At the men's meetingin the afternoon, Mr. Huestis delivered one of the finest and most inspiring address that has ever been heard in this city.

Taking as his subject, "Contributions of Modern Science to Religion," the speaker boldly attacked the problem of the modern mind—the conflict between orthodoxy and the school of scientific thinkers from Darwin down to the present day—accepting the evolutionary principleand applying it to the moral and religious world.

God, said the speaker, manifested himself to his children in two ways—through the world as revealed by natural science, and by a direct appeal to the hearts of men. He who understood both science and religion recognized no real conflict between the two. Science was a pathway on the mountains for the feet of them that publish peace.

A clever Frenchman had said: "Man is incurably religious." Even when man most appeared to have forgotten God, or when the investigating mind searching for for scientific truth, came on a time when the divine verities were doubted, the religious principles remained. This principle was inherent in the race; it could never die.

One of the great truths of the universe which had been brought to light by natural science, was the law of the conservation of energy. A religious concept was now possible in which the energy of the material world, energy of thought, energy of love, all could be regarded as manifestations of our supreme energy. In cosmos were at work not many warring forces, but a great and mighty force. Herein had science brought about a marvellous advance upon the theology of the Old Testament prophets. "It is not Satan who is governing this world," said the speaker, "but God."

In science religion was indebted for knowledge of the unity of the universe in all of one piece; that in the most distant star are to be found the very elements of which our planet was composed. If these other worlds than ours were peopled, verily their denizens were, too, the children of one common Father.

But perhaps the greatest of all the gifts of science to religion was the message of evolution. The day had gone by when Darwin could be regarded as a destroyer of religion. Twenty years ago, Mr. Huestis said, when he first embraced this tenet of science, belief in evolution was considered among the orthodox, as almost synonymous with infidelity—or worse. Today the world was coming to realize the beauty of this principle. Its acceptance, more than any other one thing, had enabled the speaker to realize the imminence of God.

The message of evolution was twofold. From it we learnt that God was ever present in the world, he was not amoung the clouds, sweetly ordering all that is. Haley's conception of the universe as a watch of intricate design, made by the hands of the World Creator, was not acceptable today. Rather was the world's growth as the growth of a flower, unfolding ever more and more of its beauty and of its fragrance. The old conception was noble; the new conception nobler.

From science the religious world might learn of the wonderful patience of God. Down the long ages, down through the aeons of timeslace order was evolved from chaos, the all-wise Father had been preparing a home for His children. Gradually, surely the evil in the world was being overcome.

God was a God of truth. Modern science had revealed to us the constancy of law in the natural world. From this we might learn of God's truthfulness.

"Does science teach us of a God of love?" Back in the middle period of the nineteenth century, when the religious world was in a transition stage, the clash between religion and science seemed inevitable. The struggle for existence and the survival of the fittest seemed at variance with the Gospel of Love. Hence the travail of such soul's as Tennyson's, as heart and intellect strove togethe for peace. Modern science taught us of a law of struggle for others. Tennyson's Nature "red in tooth and claw," no longer represented the scientific view. An altruistic as well as an egoistic principle was involved. "As long as a man hates he is a savage," was the dictum of a distinguished savant.

Not directly, but by implication, science taught that mancannot live without religion. Without God man's soul was filled with unsatisfied yearnings, on the was restless.

At the conclusion of Mr. Huestis' address, a solo solo by Mr. Sansom, whose magnificent rendition of "The Flower Song," following as it did, upon Mr. Huestis' address, was one of the most inspiring events of the day. Mr. Sansom has a wonderful mastery of his instrument and the audience was carried away by the soul-stirring music.

In the evening Mr. Huestis preached on some aspects of the gospel, showing the large place occupied by the doctrine of love. Solos were beautifully rendered by Mrs. McCarter and Mr. Simmons.

Last evening the King's Helpers, held a supper and social in the basement of the church.

Burns Says He Will Win

San Francisco—Tommy Burns, who is resting from his exertions in beating Bill Squires and others of the Australian heavyweight pugilistic division, is spending his time in the mountains of New South Wales. In a letter to W. W. Naughton, sporting editor of the Examiner, he states that the battle with Jack Johnson for the world's championship is to be the farewell fight of his career.

Burns says that he has promised his wife that he will withdraw from the pugilistic game after his go with the big negro. Burns fully expects to defeat Johnson, and says that after a theatrical tour of the world he will probably settle down in Australia. His letter reads as follows:

I am enjoying a rest up in the mountains and embrace the opportunity of writing you a letter. I will stay here for a month, as I have been working very steadily during the last year. I have had my hands full with theatrical work and boxing and now, since the match with Jack Johnson is on, I think it best to put in some time where the air is good and pure. When I say I am taking a rest, it is only a rest from the city life and the hard work of training, for I am always out horseback riding and hunting. I have been offered a lot of theatrical engagements, but don't want them until after the Johnson fight. I am determined to beat him and silence all talk on the subject before I start in to the show business again.

Never Drew Color Line

I will surely be in shape for the nigger—better than I ever was—as it is the ambition of my life to beat him. It seems to me that some of the sport writers who have criticised me for my stand with Johnson have not been fair. They talk about my drawing the color line. I have never drawn the color line. There was never a champion before me gave a colored man a chance to win the title from him, and I simply named a good stiff price for my end of the match, I am getting it, too, as sure as you live, for I am to receive for my share six thousand pounds, win, lose or draw.

Another thing. Those who say that I was a very careful match maker want to remember that I am about the only world's champion who went clear around the world, meeting and beating my challengers in the countries they belonged in.

When I boxed Squires here the house drew thirteen thousand pounds, so you see, this country is some good. There were around seventeen thousand people present, and a fine crowd to box in front of. About eight thousand or nine thousand saw me defeat Lang ten days later. Of course, that was in Melbourne.

Sydney is the city of Australia, I think. And Melbourne is all right, too. It puts me in mind of San Francisco before the fire. Sydney is where I fight Johnson. Johnson left England yesterday—so the papers say I see Nelson is the kind of fighter that can beat Gans any day in the week. His style of boring in and giving his man no rest is the way I figured Gans could be beaten. No one was more pleased over Nelson's victory than I was, and now it is up to me to lace this nigger Johnson the same way.—I don't think Johnson will be any harder to beat than Gans was for Nelson, though, of course, that remains to be seen. We will not be left in doubt very long now. As I already said, I am to get six thousand pounds, or thirty thousand dollars for my end. Johnson is getting one thousand pounds, and one hundred pounds for his end of the pictures. That is, win or lose he will get five thousand five hundred dollars—and that is more than he ever got before. The same applies to me, of course, as I never got thirty thousand dollars in one bunch before.

The Australians are more like Americans than any country I have been in. There is as much difference between Australians and the English as between day and night. I like this country so much that I am liable to stay here. My wife likes it very much also. She was very sick when we left England but she is getting fat and strong now. She has gained twenty-six pounds since we arrived in Australia. There are six in our party, and we rough it a good deal, sometimes camping out at night in the mountains.

I have been watching Ketchel, and am waiting to see him hook up with some heavyweight, as they say he is getting big. I would like to hear of him matching with Kaufman or Sam Langford. I want to get a line on him, but only for the sake of information, as win or lose, I expect to retire after my fight with Johnson. This is to humor my wife. Most of her sickness has been caused through worrying over my fights, and as I have enough to keep both of us for the rest of our lives, I see no sense in continuing at the game. A fellow can't be a champion always, anyhow, and I may as well stop before I am beaten. I have travelled the world and beaten the best in every country; and while some of them may have been lemons that wasn't my fault. I'll tell you this much, though: There has been so much talk about Ketchel out here since you sent the account of his battles along that I would like to fight him after Johnson; but it is up to my wife to decide for me. I have given her my word that the Johnson affair will be the last unless she releases me from the promise; and with her my word is my bond.

I expect to do a lot of theatrical work after the Johnson fight if I am successful and will show both here and in America.

Many Women Suffer Untold Agony From Kidney Trouble.

Very often they think it is from so-called "female disease." There is less "female trouble" than they think.

Women suffer from backache, sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability and a dragging down feeling in the loins. So do men, and they do not have "female trouble."

Why, then, blame all your trouble to "female disease"?

Most of the so-called "female disorders" are no more or less than "kidney disorders," and can be easily and quickly cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. C. Dupuis, Belleview Village, N.B., writes: "I was unable to do my housework for two years on account of backache. I could not get up the stairs. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me permanently after doctors failed to even relieve the pain. I can highly recommend them to all sufferers from kidney trouble."

Gas Discussed

Roseries to Get It at 5 Cents

Complaintst Made about Relief Applicants

The regular meeting of the Council was held on Monday, November two, in the City hall. There were present the Mayor; Alds. Baker, Morrow, Spencer, Forster, Tweed, Penhale.

The Fernie Fire Relief Committee wrote enclosing a resolution expressing heartfelt gratitude for the assistance given by Medicine Hat to the victims of the disaster, and stating that the relief which had been so generously given would protect the sufferers against the rigors of winter.

The Standard Trusts Co. wrote offering facilities for the investment of sinking fund. They offered 4½ per cent. from date on which money should reach them, a guarantee being given for both principal and interest. Filed.

Colin C. Lamb wrote suggesting an outside water service to property held by him and Messrs. Brotherton, Treacy, Brown, Sharp and others. He was now compelled, he said, to carry water four hundred yards up the mountain side, and then he was asked to pay one dollar a month for the privilege. Referred to the water commissioners.

Commissioner Hall wrote asking whether the Board of Trade grant were now available. Referred to the finance committee.

The matter of the arrangements in connection with the use of the ambulance wagon was referred to the license, police and relief committee to confer with the hospital authorities.

Mr. Uberheim, manager of the Roseries, addressed the Council. He complained that he was now being charged fifteen cents a thousand for gas, whereas only fiae cents had been previously demanded. If the rate of fifteen cents were continued he would be compelled to advise the liquidators in Winnipeg to close down the Roseries for the winter, as the business would not stand the heavy charges. In the summer little gas was used, but in winter the amount must be very large to maintain an inside temperature of sixty when the outside temperature was very low. During October two hundred and fifty thousand feet had been used, and this would be enormously increased as winter closed in. Mr. Uberhein pointed out that considerable expense had recently been incurred in improving the plant. This would not have been done had it been anticipated that the price of gas would be raised. The clerk pointed out that a mistake had been made in the past in charging only five cents.

Mr. Uberhein said $300 had been expended in putting in a heating plant and the houses were full of stock. If they were closed for the winter there would be a large depreciation.

The Mayor said the council had no powers to give special conditions. It might be better to have the plant closed down as there was likely to be a difficulty in regard to the gas supply during the coming winter, since the new gas well would not be available.

Ald. Tweed thought that in view of the fact that the Roseries had gone to great expense not knowing that they would be charged the high rate for gas, they be allowed to keep on at the old rate during the winter. The city should give them all the encouragement possible, they would in all probability employ more hands in the spring and the advertising they would give the city was of some value. Ald. Baker said he took Ald. Tweed's view of the matter, but there was likely to be a shortage of gas during the winter. Pruitt's brick plant consumed half the supply from the city's big well.

The Mayor thought the contractors had not started to bore for the new well. Ald. Penhale had seen Mr. Grant half an hour before the meeting and had been informed that boring would be started that week.

As to the original contract with the Roseries it was pointed out that twenty-five hands must be employed before gas could be sold at the five cent rate. Other industries need only employ ten hands. Ald. Baker thought the council should have taken action in the matter when the company failed to keep their contract. The matter was referred to the gas committee for a report, it being suggested that they should not report till spring.

The engineer submitted a report on the stoppage of the sewer pipe at the Cosmopolitan hotel. It did not appear from the report who was actually responsible in the matter.

Ald. Spencer called attention to the large number of applicants for relief. In the last two weeks half a dozen families had been in the store asking for relief. Some of these had recently came out of the hospital, where they had been suffering from typhoid fever. If the city were to give relief to all who might apply the estimates would be in bad shape at the end of the year.

The case of a man Day was referred to. Mr. Porter had offered this man work on several occasions, but he wouldn't take a job. He had applied for free gas a short time ago. Ald. Morrow said there was plenty of work to be obtained in the city at the present time, and application should be made to Mr. Morrison.

Geo. Gardner addressed the council in regard to an application for water and gas extension made by him some time ago. The gas had been extended but there was no water there as yet. His cottage was almost complete and he wanted to sell. The Mayor stated that the application was not in at the time the estimates for extensions were drawn up, and in consequence it would have to wait till next year.

The following accounts were recommended for payment:

Quick Job Print	$15.00
E. M. Cawker	4.00
G. W. Elliott	50.00
Citizens Band	255.00
Alex. Eddy	4.00
J. H. G. Bray	2.00
H. T. W. Forster	5.00
F. S. Pingle	5.00
Herbert Baker	3.00
Geo. A. Luno	5.00
J. H. G. Bray	3.00
F. F. Fatt	5.00
R. G. McFarlane	3.00
H. C. Cooper	61.00
F. J. Conroy	4.00
Willson Stationery Co.	2.00
Marshall Hardware Co.	1.00

Applications for water and gas extensions were laid on the table.

A by-law appointing Herbert Baker poll tax collector at fifteen per cent. commission, was carried.

Ald. Penhale thought it would be too heavy an expense to put the fifters in operation at the present time. Samples of water should be analysed and compared with the samples taken during the epidemic. The Alderman did not want to bring another expert in, to operate the filters. The Mayor said that Dr. Boyd was sending up more water samples to Edmonton.

SOCIALISTS SMALL VOTE.

Chicago, Nov. 5.—The Socialist vote in Tuesday's election showed a great falling off from the record of 1904 in three principal cities of the country, where the Socialists are strongest.

Chicago Socialists who polled forty five thousand votes in 1904, were given less than nineteen thousand votes in the police returns, and the most sanguine do not expect that the revised totals will exceed twenty-one thousand votes for Mr. Debs. Cincinnati and Cleveland also listed as strong Socialist centres the total vote for Mr. Debs, it is estimated will not exceed five hundred thousand, in place of the million which was predicted by Socialists.

Bible Society Meeting

The Medicine Hat branch of the Canadian Bible Society met in St. John's Presbyterian Church on Monday evening last at eight o'clock, in the absence of the president, the Rev. Mr. Bryant acted as chairman and opened the meeting with prayer. The Rev. U. S. Campbell, District Secretary of the new Alberta Auxiliary was present and suggested that in view of the change enected last July in connection from the Upper Canada Bible Society to the Canadian Bible Society it would be proper for the Branch Society to formally adopt the following constitution:

I. This society entitled, "The Medicine Hat Branch Bible Society," is formed in connection with the Alberta Auxiliary of "The Canadian Bible Society Auxiliary to the British and Foreign Bible Society."

II. The sole object of the Society shall to be to encourage the wide circulation of the Bible without note or comment throughout Canada and to assist the British and Foreign Bible Society in this world-wide work.

III. All subscribers shall be considered members of the Society, and those subscribing twenty dollars at one time shall be life-members of the Branch Society.

IV. The business of the Society shall be conducted by the President, treasurer, secretary and a committee representative, so far as possible, of the different churches, consisting of not less than six other members, five to form a quorum.

V. Ministers of all christian communities who shall express themselves in symnathy with the society shall be additional members of the committee.

VI. The committee shall meet at the call of the officers of the Society or as the committee shall direct.

VII. The committee in order to secure funds for the objects of the Society, shall invite collections from Churches, appoint collectors, to solicit subscriptions and donations, or otherwise organize means for procuring contributions, which after incidental expenses have been met, shall be remitted to the Alberta auxiliary towards the translation and dissimination of the Scriptures both at home and abroad.

VIII. The committee shall ascertain whether individuals or families in the district are in need of Bibles and shall have power to supply them at reduced rates, or gratis, as cases shall require.

IX. An annual general meeting of the Society shall be held in the month of November or at such other time as the committee shall determine, when a report shall be presented, money voted and a committee appointed for the ensuing year.

X. No alteration shall be made in these rules except at a general meeting of the Society, after a months' notice by the secretary to members of the committee.

After some discussion of several of the details of the constitution, it was on motion unanimously adopted. Then the following officers and committees were elected.

President—Mr. Sanson.
Vice-Presidents—Mr. T. Reynolds and Mr. Rowe.
Secretary—Mr. Ware.
Treasurer—Isaac Cosens.
Committee—Resident Ministers, ex-officios, and Mr. W. Fleming, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. J. Kennedy, Mr. Fatt, Mr. Jas. Hargrave.

After some discussion of the affairs of the local depository and the matter of canvass for the year, the meeting was closed with prayer by the Rev. Mr. Morrow.

Considerable interest has been taken in Medicine Hat in the work of the Bible Society for quite a number of years, but with the Province of Alberta now erected into an auxiliary by itself, having a District Secretary of its own, and soon to have a large depository at some central point of its own, it is confidently expected that better things still will be done in this noble institution, which is world-wide in its scope and influence.

Weight Lost by Exertion

The loss of weight due to physical exertion is sometimes a little surprising even to those who have devoted attention to the matter. Mr. Eusace Miles once told an audience that he used to lose six pounds in playing a tenis match—a statement which was received with amusement. But, as a fact, he once lost asmuch as eight pounds, and several times seven pounds, though the exertion has more frequently taken from him from four pounds to six pounds.

Mr. Burgess could give some still more striking figures concerning the amount of tissue he has lost in attempting to swim the channel. Notwithstanding the large amount of food he took while in the water, he lost nearly one pound per hour.

Took Over 90,000 strokes.

One of his plucky efforts, which lasted a little more than fourteen hours, pulled thirteen pounds off him while another, extending over twelve hours, reduced his weight by twelve pounds.

Put baldly, this fact is a little staggering; but the loss is relatively small considering that even in his twelve hour swim he took more than twenty thousand strokes each of which brought into play the muscles of arms, legs, back chest and neck.

On the path, weight has been lost with much greater rapidity. Some years back a famous runner was carefully trained for an attack on Deerfoot's one-hour record, and as a result he had never been in better condition than when he started to lower that record.

He succeeded, but, splendidly fit as he was, he lost six pounds or seven pounds in his hour's run. Nor is this an absolutely isolated case in point, since another runner once lost five pounds in little more than half an hour, despite the care with which he had been trained.

Jockeys "Waste" Rapidly.

Even a degree of exertion within the capacity of well-nigh anybody is an important factor in reducing weight. It is easy to lose about two pounds by taking a turn at a home exerciser, while a brisk walk may involve a loss of three or four pounds.

Jockeys can rapidly "waste" by Walking in heavy sweaters to infuse perspiration. Arthur Nightingall tells us that he used to walk six miles out and six miles back—twelve in all—and so get off four pounds in the first spin. To keep it off more exercise was necessary coupled with extreme abstemiousness.

One of his stable companions had his diet cut down so low that he fell on his knees before his trainer and begged for a good dinner. Instead, he received a good hiding, which derived him of his appetite for several days, and so brought about all the "wasting" which was required.

Test Convict's Health.

A singular fact connected with the process, and one known to all jockeys, is that when weight is lost rapidly a single small glass of liquid will put on one or two pounds again.

Considerable variations in bodily weight may, therefore, take place in exceptional circumstances, and yet portend nothing that need cause the slightest alarm. It is only when certain limits—limits which in any given case can be discovered by a few experiments—are passed that the abnormal is indicated.

A proof of the importance of a real loss of weight is that in convict prisons, such loss is accepted as conclusive evidence that a man is ill.

Tillrecent years there was no infallible means of discovering whether he was so or not as malingerers, in their determination to "fetch" the farm" (get into the infirmary) were able to defeat all the known tests.

Watching them, giving them nauseous mixtures, applying the battery—these and all the other medical arts failed in some cases, the doctors discovering too late that they had been "done." But now a convictwho complains is put on the scales, and the result decides whether he returns to work or goes into the infirmary.

"Central Alberta will be to the Oil World what Cobalt has been to the Mining."

It is an assured reality, the oil is there in unlimited quantities. The field is situated about thirty-five miles southwest of Pincher Creek and is being energetically operated by the Canadian Northwest Oil Company.

The Oil too, is of the finest quality. Some idea of the value of the field and character of the oil may be had, when I tell you that a fifty barrell well of Alberta oil, would be equal in value to a five hundred barrel well of California oil, which, with a Government bounty of fifty-two cents and an import duty of $1.75 per barrel, would make it almost equal to a five thousand barrell well on the other side.

The Canadian Northwest Oil Company has been exceedingly fortunate in locating three thousand eight hundred and forty acres of land in the center of the oil district, lying between the proven coal fields on one side and the gas well of Medicine Hat on the other. This is well for we want to see our great resources developed by Canadians who will reap the benefit.

Canada's Growing Tax Burden

Canada's Growing Tax Burden.

According to the Public Accounts for the Dominion which have just been issued the taxes collected from the people of Canada during the nine months ending March 31st, 1907, amounted to $51,565,000. This means that for the full year of 12 months the burden of taxation is $68,753,000. It is important to contrast this huge demand upon the arnings of the people with the state of affairs which formerly prevailed. This can best be done by citing from the official records the figures of taxation in other years. The story told by the public Accounts is as follows:

1894-1895	25,446,000
1895 1896	27,709,000
1896 1897	28,648,000
1897-1898	29,576,000
1898-1899	34,958,000
1899-1900	38,242,000
1900-1901	38,742,000
1901-1902	43,389,000
1902 1903	49,015,600
1903-1904	53,661,000
1904-1905	54,020,000
1905 1906	60,074,000
1907 1908
9 months	51,565,000
or for 12 months	68,750,000

It will be observed that the taxes have been laid on with increasing severity year by year, until there was collected during nine months in 1490-1907 just twice as much as was taken from the people in the twelve months of 1894-95.

It is sometimes said that the taxes hahave doubled under the Laurier Government. But such a statement fails completely to do justice to the situation. By the year 1906—or after 8 years of office—the doubling process had been effected by the Administration, and to-day the taxes are not only twice what they once were, but $17,000,000 in addition. The bearing of the increased levy upon the individual and upon the family is a consideration that cannot be overlooked. In 1896—the last Conservative year—the taxes reached $27,759,000. This was a rate of $5.66 per head. In 1906-1907 the taxes were for the twelve months $68,750,000. This amount is equal to $10.34 per head. In 1895 the family of five was taxed $28 towards the conduct of national affairs. In 1906-1907 the family of five had to pay $51.70. This extortion is not warranted either by increased population or by increased services rendered to the people. It is to be attributed really to the waste and to the graft prevailing at Ottawa. One of its consequences is the withdrawal from the channels of trade the money which business purposes. In 1896 the taxes amounted to $27,759,000. Had that rate been adhered to during the past eleven years the Government would have taken from the people $305,000,000 for purposes of administration. But it was not adherred to. The taxes during the eleven years aggregated $498,000,000. This is $193,000,000 more than the old rate would have produced. From the people and from the business of the country has this extra amount been drawn, and the stringency of today is aggravated in consequence.

The country is punished twice over for its complacency in permitting the Laurier Government to rule. In the first place, every individual is taxed an additional $4.70 per annum for this blunder, which is equivalent to $23.50 for each family. In thenext place, business and industry suffer because all the extra taxation has been wasted, or stolen, or sunk in useless enterprises. It is impossible to destroy the capital of the people and at the same time to keep that capital in circulation. The terrible tax burden has been laid on by politicians who pledged themselves to make things easier for the people. Heavier and more oppressive this weight is bound to grow unless heroic measures be taken to secure relief.

CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA

As is well known, this troublesome complaint arises from overeating, the use of too much rich food, neglected constipation, lack of exercise, bad air, etc.

The food should be thoroughly chewed, and never bolted or swallowed in haste, stimulants must be avoided and exercise taken if possible.

A remedy which has rarely failed to give prompt relief and effect permanent cures, even in the most obstinate cases, is

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

It acts by regulating and toning the digestive organs, removing costiveness and increasing the appetite and restoring health and vigor to the system.

Mr. Amos Sawler, Gold River, N.S. writes:—"I was greatly troubled with dyspepsia, and after trying several doctors to no effect I commenced taking Burdock Blood Bitters and I think it is the best medicine there is for that complaint."

LIBEL CASE AT REGINA.

Regina, Sask., Nov. 5.—The Laird-Scott libel charge came before the court today and Judge Johnstone struck out the plea entered by Premier Scott that the court here had no jurisdiction to try the charge.

He said the charge was laid by the Attorney-General, and he could lay it anywhere in the province, the fact that the alleged offence was committed in Moose Jaw judicial district notwithstanding. Mr. Ross has taken the case of Scott, and pleaded that he had not time to file particulars of charge. The judge ordered him to file several pleas of justification tomorrow morning and gave Mr. Fanburn for Laird right to demur and ask for particulars immediately.

CALDER FOR SASKATOON.

Regina, Nov. 5.—The Leader today publishes the following despatch from Sasaatoon:

It is reported that before long another city and county election will be held here. The rumor is that the county member, W. C. Sutherland, is slated for the Senate or the bench, while the member for the city, Mr. A. P. McNab, will retire to make way for the Hon. J. A. Calder, who was defeated in Weyburn.

Rumor further adds that J. A. Aikins, of the Phoenix, will stand for the seat vacated by Mr. Sutherland, and that opposition candidates will be forthcoming to contest both the city and county. Dr. Munroe and Paul Summerfeldt being mentioned.

MANY A LAUGH.

Pleasing the people has been a trade with the Schubert Symphony Club and Lady Quartette, for many years, and their programme contains lots of fun of a refined nature, as well as a wealth of fine music. Hear them at the Opera House, Tuesday, November 24th.

NEW SERVICE.

Effective with the change in time November first, the Canadian Pacific has inaugurated a cafe service on the South Branch out of Calgary, the cars being attached to the afternoon train leaving Calgary at 16.45, and the morning train leaving Macleod at seven K. This should be a great convenience to the travelling public. The cafe car service on the North branch out of Calgary remains unchanged, the car being attached to all trains. All meals are served a la carte.

CANADA VOTES SOLID

There may be a difference of opinion amongst the voters of Canada regarding political matters, but when it comes to a question of a newspaper to suit the Canadian people the vote is solid for the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal. It is marvellous what popularity that paper enjoys. It is well deserved too, for it is beyond doubt the best dollar's worth to be had. Every home in Canada should receive that great weekly, when it can be had for one dollar a year. In this section it reaches almost every home, and not one of them would think of letting their subscriptions expire. The Family Herald and Weekly Star is too good to miss even a single copy.

DOCTORS SAID "CUT OFF!"

"The only thing I can do now is to take the finger completely off. It cannot otherwise be cured." So said one of the leading doctors of Toronto to Mr. W. C. Edwards, P.D.C.R.A.O.F., P.G.M.I.O.O.F., the well-known Friendly Society leader, of Peter Street, Toronto. Almost a year before, Mr. Edwards cut the middle finger of his left hand very badly and blood poison ensued. For two months the doctor had been treating him, but no good had resulted, and this was the final decision. A fifty-cent box of Zam-Buk saved Mr. Edwards from life-long mutilation which $500 would not have compensated him for. He says: "The blood poison from the finger spread up my hand and arm and caused me terrible agony. After months' treatment the doctor said there was no cure, and amputation would have to take place if I intended to save the arm. My hand, at that time, was all swollen up and discolored, and I had to carry it in a sling. I left that doctor and consulted another.

After a few weeks' treatment he also told me that operation would be necessary, and the finger would have to be opened so that the bone could be scraped.

I went away to consider when I would have the operation performed, and met a friend who advised me to try Zam-Buk. That night I bathed the wound and put on some Zam-Buk. I got a little sleep for the first time for many nights. In the morning the wound began to bleed instead of the foul discharging as in the past. This was a healthy sign so I went on with the Zam-Buk. Well, to cut a long story short, in a few days I put away the sling and in a few weeks the finger was healed completely. To-day that finger is as sound as a bell and I owe it to Zam-Buk."

A WORD TO WIVES

Wives and mothers should know that Zam-Buk is the finest, safest and surest healer yet known. It is a herbal balm which acts like magic in healing sores, cuts, poisoned wounds, cracked hands, chapped places, cold sores, eczema, ulcers, festering sores and all skin diseases. So pure is it that it can be applied to the delicate skin of babes, and yet so powerful that chronic wounds are closed and cured by it. It soothes the pain of piles and stops the bleeding. It is highly antiseptic. A box of Zam-Buk is as good as a medicine chest, so many uses it fulfils. All druggists and stores sell at 50c a box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Where Parsimony Kills

Canada's Western police force, the Royal North West Mounted Police has held the admiration of the world for many years. To a visitor this body of men is one of the most striking features of Western life. Every writer who attempts Western descriptions devotes almost as much space to the red-coated plain police as to the vast wheat fields and big profits of grain growing.

There was little of the spectacular in the attraction the Mounted Police had for all visitors. Red-coated men can be found in every British possession. It was a solid admiration for pluck, honesty and unswerving justice, for quiet but effective work, for the assurance it gave of perfect protection and unknown lawlessness. The Royal North West Mounted Police have deserved every good thing that has been said of them—and more. At the present day it has lost little of its efficiency, but even with more general recognition of law, the maintenance of the standard among the Mounted Police is a matter of daily increasing difficulty. And the reason is not hard to find.

To ensure a Mounted Police that will maintain its old-time reputation it must consist of the old-time class of men—fearless, honest, patient, able, intelligent, strong and clean. But it will drop very rapidly unless the inducements of enrolment are such as to attract that class of men. That they are not, is so well known as to draw forth little comment.

Within the past couple of years hundreds of fine young men whose position on the force meant all that was desired, have purchased their release or deserted. In our own local contingent we have seen these things happen within the past couple of months. When it is considered that the remuneratio for all the hardwork risk and limited future of a Mounted Policeman is about sixty cents a day it is no wonder a young man of ability will look elsewhere for his life's work. However good he may be, he rises very slowly, and reaches the limit of salary which is too small to be any attraction to-day. There are openings every day in business for the very young men we want in our police force, and the salaries are not to be compared. The risk of business is far less than what a Mounted Police man runs into every day; the work in commercial life is much less arduous. The attraction of a roving life with large power and lots of excitement is losing its power over the young man who is worth while. His ambitions are higher and they come too early in life to give his youthful instincts for police life a chance to control his career.

It is time the Government considered the Mounted Policeman's work worth more than the red coat on his back. Some say Mounted Police will not be necessary in their present organization, but until that time comes, they should have the remuneration that will ensure a good service.

EDITORIAL NOTES

(Calgary News.)

Now that Sir Frederick Borden has shown that he is sensitive about the personal attacks that have been made upon him, it's about time that he began prosecuting at the Calgary and whence the trouble emanated.

So long as he ignored the statements he had a perfect right to do so, but now that he has become active it is only right that he should fight the fight to a finish.

Failing to do so, he should step down and out from public life.

It is not the duty of a public man to lash every cur that barks at his heels, but if he goes into the cur-lashing business at all, it should be by lashing the meanest and mangiest cur in the pack.

Everybody is wondering what will happen to the Eyeopener. If McGillicuddy has put it out of business, it will be a God-send to Canada, although his method of doing it was not commendable. Of late several public bodies have taken up the question, why they didn't do so before seems strange. Dr. Chown's apology to the Eye Opener was not a great strengthener to that moral reformer in his work.

In the recounts the Opposition is winning out. Nipissing has been transferred from the Liberal side to the Conservative. Barnard's majority over Templeman has been increased from five to thirteen. In the postponed elections the Government will probably increase its majority.

There was quite a strong local interest in the United States election results, and the feeling seemed to be in favor of Taft. Roosevelt has been popular in Canada and Taft was his nominee, so that the Republican candidate drew a following which his unknown personality would never have affected.

Bryan has fought his third fight and came no nearer in the last one. His defeat means his permanent disappearance from Presidential fights. Three chances is sufficient for any man, and Bryan has failed to convince the people that he has any great mission to perform. His defeats have meant money to him, as he had been enabled to make more on the lecture platform than the position of President would beworth.

While on abstract principles the Roseries should pay thirteen and one half cents for their gas as they do not fulfil one tittle of the by-law for five cent gas, the mistake made at the city hall in charging them five cents only should protect the Roseries from a boost of price at the approach of winter. The city has been very lenient so far with the Roseries and a little more leniency under the circumstances might not be amiss. It will be time enough to close down on the firm next year if there is no sign of an attempt to fulfil the requirements. Of course the city cannot continue to make fish of one and flesh of another.

Alderman Spencer has had to voice a complaint that has been made all over the West. The prevalence of the financial stringency of the early half of the year has been taken advantage of by worthless beggars and lazy loafers, and while Medicine Hat has been remarkably free of them, the shutting down of the othertowns has driven some of them here. One man who has claimed charity has refused several offers of work on city jobs. For him a few weeks enforced hard labor would be a fitting reward. The city will be forced to exercise a more careful inspection of its charity donations or it will be taken advantage of by more men of this class.

A bit of news most interesting to the West comes from Ottawa, and although it is as yet unverified it looks very reasonable. The vacancy on the Railway Commission will enable the Government to get out of a difficult situation. The weakness of Hon. Frank Oliver has been a serious thing for the Government, and every session Oliver's unfitness for the position is becoming more marked. It is now thought that Oliver will succeed to the Railway Commission and Hon. Walter Scott will be made Minister of the Interior. Oliver's only qualification has been the certainty of his seat. His influence in Alberta has been proven to be very weak, whereas Scott carries almost a solid Saskatchewan. Oliver's refusal to show the original documents produced a fight which was a serious blow to the Government, and his heavy, uncompromising attitude in the House has made him a Medicine Hat is on the up road with a vengeance again. After a period of comparative quietnesswbich affected all America, the old days of rapid growth are upon us again. With the greater looseness in money Medicine Hat is bound to be one of the first places affected. Its natural advantages are such that no manufacturer contemplating an establishment in the West can pass us by. The big question of all—power—is solved here; and the solution is most attractive. It is a solution that carries with it a dozen additional advantages—reduced labor expenses, cheaper living, an unfailing supply not dependent upon coal mines and strikes.

The first of the industries for this fall is already before us. The first is the one we want. The first, is the one that will quickly bring a second. The big works, the number of men employed, the standing of the company, are sufficient to force a most earnest and favorable consideration from the people.

Let us get started and nothing can stop us.

And remember as we get the new industries there is still more to do. Our reception of the new-comer will determine our chances for more industries. Don't be so bound up in your own length of residence in the city that you resent a new arrival walking on the streets. Give him a hearty hand shake—don't just talk about it for the benefit of someone else.

HAVE YOU SEEN IT?

We have no recollection of so inviting a musical program as that of the Schubert Symphony Club and Lady Quartette which appears here on Tuesday, November 24th, having been offered our readers. Look over their programme carefully and you will agree with us that it is too inviting to miss attending.

Ganthony In Toronto

Robert Ganthony, one of the most favorably known of the character actors, received much unfavorable comment after his performance in Medicine Hat last year, and fared just as badly in most of the smaller towns in Alberta.

In Toronto the other day he gave almost the same concert and it is interesting to see how Mr. Charlesworth (Touchstone) the ablest critic in Toronto, or in Canada, for that matter, treats him. He says:

Theatre-goers are not in the habit of taking much notice of the author ship of plays which they witness, unless the dramatist happens to be one of the small group whose names serve as an advertisement, so that Robert Ganthony probably had little fame to assist him in drawing a crowd to his opening performance in Massey Hall last night. It is true that many Torontonians have pleasant memories of his pleasing comedy, "A Brace of Partridges," while still more will remember his brother's delightful stage sermon, "A Message from Mars," but probably the name of Ganthony is not recalled in connection with either of them. Whatever may have been the cause, the English dramatist was not greeted by as large a gathering as usually turns out to welcome an entertainer from across the water or as he deserves.

In appearance, Mr. Ganthony is more like a successful professional man than a humorist. This serves to add to his effectiveness, however, for he does not announce by his very manner of entry, "I am about to be funny. Watch me." He does his work quietly and without straining after laughs, but at all times he proves amusing. He differs from most entertainers in the fact that he is more a clever character actor than a skilful mimic and pianoforte acrobat. He does not suggest types by a few quick touches, but prefers to go into detail. That is the reason why the best feature of the programme was his travesty on a country person delivering a homily on "Little Bo-Peep." He has all the clerical mannerisms and the habit of dealing in platitudes, but makes the whole character a humorous one and not merely a caricature. The description of a village concert also offered him excellent scope for this variety of work. The entertainer gave imitations with his voice of mandolins and a cello, both of which were surprisingly accurate. By way of showing that his gifts varied, Mr. Ganthony did some amusing crayon drawing.

The programme included two sketches, which judging from the standard of playlets presented at the local theatres, were worth while. They were bright and contained enough wit to carry them along, but what was more important they gave Mr. Ganthony an opportunity to do excellent little bits of comedy acting. In these two sketches he was assisted by Miss Stanmore. On account of these playlets, Mr. Ganthony could not give all the concert as other English entertainers have done, although the audience would have been well satisfied if he had done so.

Historic Fakes and Frauds

About 1769 Baron Kempelen, of Hungary began to astonish the civilized worlds of Europe with his chess player. This was apparently a figure controlled by mechanical devices, and able, notwithstanding the fact that apparently no intelligence was concerned in its movements and decisions, generally to beat its human antagonists.

The cabinet connected with the automaton appeared entirely too small to contain a hidden operator. And yet, writes J. F. Springer in the Scientific American, it did conceal a man who was an expert chess player. He was a Polish patriot who had lost both of his legs—perhaps in the recent war over Poland. This man, Woronsky by name, was an expert. With him hidden in the cabinet the rest was easy.

The career of George Psalmanazar—as he called himself—was one of the most astonishing on record. This man was born in Switzerland or France, but during the time of his "fame" claimed to be a native of the island of Formosa. He had acquired a moderate education, but seemed indisposed to employ himself in any regular occupation. Instead he roamed over Europe, serving with the Dutch and with the German army. At one time he pretended to be an Irishman, at another an unconverted Japanese, at a third a converted Japanese.

In the last capacity he deceived the colonel of a British regiment at Sluys. The chaplain of the regiment—a man named Innes—however, did not seem to be deceived. He and Psalmanazar proceeded to England and there began a marvellous career. Psalmanazar masqueraded as a genuine native of Formosa, converted to Christianity. The clergy received him with open arms. He had an interview with the Archbishop of Canterbury, who, however, was unable to understand his Latin. But then who would expect a Formosan to speak Latin with perfection?

He published an invented Formosan alphabet, together with forged examples of the native language, accompanying them with translations. The Bishop of London seems to have believed implicitly in his claim to know the language of Formosa, for he employed Psalmanazar to translate the Church catechism into it. He was sent to the University of Oxford to finish his education. There he is said to have employed his waking hours in an idle way, but to have left a candle burning while he slept to bear witness of his zeal in scholastic pursuits. He wrote a treatise upon Formosa in Latin. When this was translated into English it had a very large success.

To corroborate his claim of being a native Formosan he would eat raw meat, roots and herbs. He was Honized, and was immensely successful. Although he carried on the deception with the greatest ingenuity deceiving great and small, he tripped at last. In an unwary moment he joined with some in exploiting a "white Formosan ware." This led to his downfall. Detection being imminent, he confessed. This is one account. Another has it that he became conscience stricken and voluntarily withdrew from the public gaze.

A self-educated man of humble origin of the name of Vrain Lucas, ignorant of both Greek and Latin, became the perpetrator of a fraud involving the preparation of twenty-seven thousand old forged documents many of them purporting to be letters written by celebrated historical personages. Although written in French, they purported to be letters from Sappho, Thales, Dante, Petrarch, Julius Caesar, Alexander the Great, St. Luke, Shakespeare, Lazarus, Newton, Pascal, Cleopatra and others.

M. Chasles, the great mathematician, was apparently ready to believe that all the ancients were proficient in this language, for he was completely fooled by Lucas. In 1867, among other documents, Lucas communicated to the Academie through Chasles two letters and four notes purporting to have been written by the celebrated French mathematician and thinker Blaise Pascal (1623-1662). If these letters had been genuine they would have proved him to have anticipated Newton (1641-1727) in his great discovery of the law of gravitation. Chasles was attacked, but stood his ground, even producing other letters to bear him out—from Pascal to the boy Newton. In 1869 the Academie made an official declaration in favor of the genuineness of the letters. France went wild. The people in the street cheered the name of Pascal.

But shortly afterward an official of the Observatory pointed out that sixteen of the Pascal letters were to be found in Saverien's "History of Modern Philosophers," which had appeared a century before. But M. Chasles claimed that Saverien had used them without acknowledging their source. And so it went. But Ye Verrier demolished the whole fabric of the fraud. Lucas was finally brought to trial, convicted and sent to prison for two years. He had realized about thirty thousand dollars from his activities.

Simonides was past master in the art of literary forgery. His performances belong to approximately the same period, but were accomplished on different soil. His great achievement was the forgery of a history of ancient Egypt written in Greek by Uranios. This he proposed to sell to the Germans for a great sum. In order to understand just what a marvelous piece of work he produced it will be necessary to understand some of the difficulties. He undertook to produce a palimpsest—that is, an old parchment manuscript which has been used again for a more modern work.

He took a manuscript of about the twelfth century and wrote his history on the same parchment. At this new writing was to masquerade as the older, he had to avoid getting a single line of the new upon any part of the old. This required wonderful care, as there was really but very little space. In addition he had to make the Greek letters he used agree with the style of the century they were supposed to represent. Of course the history itself and the character of the language had to correspond with the supposed period of composition. As Prof. Max Muller tells us, he followed Bunsen's "Egypt" and Lepsius' "Chronology." And so the finished fraud captivated Lepsius, great scholar that he was, for the dates were all correct—that was plain to be seen.

However, the manuscript had to undergo a very searching investigation which included chemical and microscopic tests. Diudorf, the great classical editor, was to edit it for publication, and the Clarendon Press of Oxford was to publish first specimens. In fact the fraud had almost been accomplished when unfavorable news began to be received in Germany—probably accounts of Simonides' previous doings. At anyrate a re-examination was made and inconsistencies in connection with the Greek letter M were found. In addition a single passage was discovered where the supposed older ink was in reality seen to have run across the twelfth century writing. This was conclusive.

One of the most astonishing examples of genius devoting itself to forgery was that of the Italian Bastianini. Born in 1830 in the midst of abject poverty, he had, properly speaking, no systematic education either literary or artistic. But he had real genius. An antiquarian of the name of Freppe employed him for two francs a day to produce "antiques" which might be sold at a good profit. So this began Bastianini's life work—the production of forgeries.

One of his most celebrated works is the bust of Savonarola. Convicted that here was a real fifteenth century, two public spirited gentlemen collected ten thousand francs and purchased it from Freppe to prevent its sale and exportation. One critic, Dupre, declared that he must assign it to Michael Angelo for its force and to Robbia for the exquisiteness of its treatment, regarding it as a wonderfully beautiful work of art. Sir Frederick Leighton, the noted English painter, having received a photograph, placed it, "like a sacred image, at the head of his bed." It is said that the Grand Grand Duchess Marie of Russia and expert seriously thought of building a temple to house this wonderful bit of art. But notwithstanding the plaudits of those who "knew" the bust was a fake.

Rumors having become current that the piece of terra cotta was not what it purported to be, one of the purchasers abruptly demanded of Bastianini one day at his workshop whether he was the creator of the bust, and he admitted that he was. But this was not the only great "success" of Bastianini. A terra cotta bust of Benevieni, a sixteenth century poet of Florence, was regarded as a contemporary work of art, and purchased by the Louvre for thirteen thousand francs and installed in a room containing work of Michael Angelo himself. But it was a fake for all that.

The Louvre in Paris is both the largest and finest collection of examples of art that exists anywhere in the world, and yet this great museum of art has been made within recent years the victim of a striking piece of forgery. There was submitted to its inspection and approval a wonderful example of the goldsmith's art. This was claimed to be the tiara of Saitapharnes and to have been dug up in southern Russia. The Louvre paid £4,000 for the headpiece.

Henri Rochefort, the noted editor of L'Intransigeant, branded the headpiece as a forgery. It is possible that he did not act entirely independently, although he is an expert in art matters. To support the allegation of fraud, there was brought to Paris a certain M. Koukhojovski, a goldsmith of Odessa. Arrived in Paris, he demonstrated that he could indeed execute work the equal of the tiara. The upshot of it all seems to be that the tiara was partly genuine, but otherwise the work of the accomplished M. Koukhojovski.

Natural Gas Industry of Medicine Hat.

ELGIN DAILY NEWS, ILLINOIS.

Coming east again we arrive at Medicine Hat, "the town that was born lucky and has all hell for a basement," as Kipling puts it, referring, no doubt, to its abundant and high-grade supply of natural gas. Natural gas is of course, the chief industry of Medicine Hat. The city is lighted by natural gas at a cost of 13¼ cents per thousand to consumers and five cents per one thousand to manufacturers. For heating purposes twenty thousand cubic feet of natural gas has the heating capacity of one ton of coal, and at 13¼ cents per thousand cubic feet equals coal at $2.70 per ton and at five cents beats coal at one dollar a ton. Medicine Hat has a population of five thousand, and has large railroad yards of the Canadian Pacific. The surrounding country is used chiefly for ranching. Medicine Hat is in the path of the warm "chinook" winds from the southwest and the Medicine Hatters heartily resent the question when we inquir for the location of the Medicine Hat strong box from which all our cold winter blasts in the central States are supposedly let loose and sent on their frigid way. Nevertheless it is an old-established and pleasant tradition to keep and we cannot forego it for the slight objections of a few people far distant, and moreover it is delightful to be able to lay the blame for some of our uncomfortable weather to a locality outside our boundary, and Medicine Hat, although only seventy miles from our boundary line, to all intents and purposes appears to be the logical place, considering that our prevailing winds come from that direction of the northwest.

Chapped Hands and Cold Sores

ZAM-BUK GIVES SPEEDY RELIEF.

Few women entirely escape the pain and annoyance of rough or chapped hands during the winter season, and most outdoor workers suffer more or less. If your hands are chapped, wash them at night in warm water; cleanse them thoroughly—using Zam-Buk balm. By next morning you will be pleased with the result. Zam-Buk gives almost instant ease, and speedily closes the cracks.

Mrs. Walker, of fourteen Manufacturer Street, Montreal, says: "My son Henry works with his shirt sleeves rolled up above his elbow, and passing from a warm room to the bitting cold, as he was obliged to do he got the worst case of chapped hands and arms I have ever seen. From his fingers to his elbows was one mass of raw flesh, with bad cracks here and there. Whenever he washed, it brought tears to his eyes; the pain was so acute.

"He tried several kinds of salve, but nothing relieved him really until he tried Zam-Buk. This took away the burning and smarting almost at once. The cracks began to heal, and a few applications of the balm cured him. His hands and arms are now smooth and soft.

"We have also used Zam-Buk for other emergencies. I sustained a burn on one of my fingers. Zam-Buk took the fire out and healed up the sore. It really is a wonderful household preparation."

Everybody says so who has tried Zam-Buk. Purely herbal, it is nature's own remedy. Eczema, ulcers, and chronic sores it heals and closes. Same with cuts, burns, and lacerated wounds. For children's injuries it is without equal. Rubbed on the chest it ends the aching and tightness due to cold. All druggists and stores sell it at fifty cents a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Quebec Contractor Gave Marine Agent a Rake-Off.

Quebec, Nov. 5.—At the enquiry into the affairs of the Marine Department by Judge Cassels yesterday afternoon, J. J. Murphy, cement butler and lumber merchant, Quebec, said he never made any tender for supplies to the Government, but according to his book from 1905 to March, 1908, he was favored by J. H. Gregory, marine agent, with orders for cement and lumber amounting to $45,429.48, and in order to get spot cash he drew on Gregory or got Gregory's cheque, by paying him a commission of five per cent. In all he had paid Gregory $3,-903.68, not to get trade, but his money right away, instead of waiting four or five months for it. He also had to pay some gratitudes to other members of Gregory's staff. Mr. Murphy said he used to charge the department not only retail prices but at least ten per cent. excess on regular retail price, and sometimes as much as twenty-five per cent. The commission paid Gregory was included in the price made or charged.

BETTER THAN EVER

Our readers when deciding on their reading matter for 1909, should not overlook "The Family Herald and Weekly Star" of Montreal. Of course you want your local paper for local news, but any home in Canada would be the better of receiving "The Family Herald and Weekly Star." It costs but one dollar a year, and is without doubt the greatest value in the newspaper line. It is a weekly newspaper, family magazine and an agricultural journal, all three in one. It should be in every Canadian home.

The great popularity of the Schubert Lady Quartette is not only their grand voices, but also because they study to please the people. All their encores are either amusing, or artistic arrangements of those sweet, old melodies so dear to all American hearts. Hear them at the Opera House on Tuesday, November 24th.

A Powerful Woman

The most powerful woman in the world is a slip of a girl only 22 years old. More than a queen is she in her vast domain; the destinies of two hundred thousand people are held in the hollow of her hand; kings emperors, potentates, have thought it not unworthy of them to pay her a need of reverence. The nobility, even the royalty of Europe sued for her hand in marriage; yet she mated with a poor man, a doctor and diplomat, raising him to a station almost imperial. Loved and respected she is, but never feared. Her tiny hand, powerful for weal or woe of her people, has a touch which is ever light; yet withal, she has the indomitable energy of a master of men, a powerful, far-seeing brain, a grasp of detail and the ability to rule, which attributes combine to make her the greatest business woman the world has perhaps everseen

This woman is Bertha Krupp, head of the vast Krupp iron industries in Germany.

It is estimated that her individual wealth reaches the sum of one hundred million dollars, while under her absolute control are perhaps two hundred millions more. Her annual income is in the neighborhood of three million dollars, or seven thousand dollars a day.

The establishments over which her mind and will are supreme consist of the great cast steel works at E— the Krupp steel works in Annen, the Gruson works at Buckau, four blast plants at Rheinhausen, Duisburg, Neuwied and Engers; four coal mines and interests in many others, numerous iron mines in Germany and Spain, a proving ground for cannon fifteen miles long, three ocean steamers, stone quarries, a shipyard and besides all these things the investments into which the surplus of the enormous Krupp income is placed.

Army of Employes.

In the Essen works alone 35,135 men are employed; the collieries give work to nine thousand more; 4,600 labor in the iron mines, and in the various other branches of the business about twenty thousand men sell their services. A recent census of the Krupp employes and their families showed that 182,000 memen and children derive their sustenance from the plants under Bertha Krupp's dominion.

A better idea of the magnitude of the Krupp industries will be had when it is said that the real estate belongine to the family in Essen and the surrounding territory is eight hundred and ninety acres in extent, and that one hundred and fifty three acres of this are covered with buildings.

From the Krupp iron mines 1,877 tons of ore are obtained every day; 3,738 tons of coal are delved from the coal mines each 24 hours, but the plants consume more than five thousand tons of coal daily. Nearly two hundred and fifty-three thousand pounds of refractory brick and stone and two thousand five hundred melting crucibles are made and used every day. The water consumption at Essen alone reaches the volume of five hundred and thirty million cubic feet per annum, which is as much as is consumed by Detroit, a city of four hundred thousand population. There are one hundred and seven miles of underground water pipes, and one hundred and six miles, in length, with twenty-six buildings. Gas to the amount of six hundred and seventy million cubic feet is used every twelve months and the Krupp gas works rank seventh in production of all in the German Empire. Three engine rooms generate electricity, feeding 977 arc lamps, 6,724 incandescent lights and one hundred and seventy-nine motors

The transportation of the cast steel works is provided for by a private railway system. This boasts of thirty-six miles of track, sixteen locomotives and tenders, and seven hundred and seven cars. There is also a narrow gauge railway twenty-six miles in length, with twenty-six locomotives and one thousand two hundred and nine cars. Fifty trains arrive and leave the three stations daily.

This, then is the empire of a girl of twenty-two years. Scarce out of her teens, Bertha Krupp is called upon to act as the head of her family, to carry on the work started by her forefathers to be the active managing power of all these intricate affairs.

The First Forge

In the year 1810 Frederick Krupp great grandfather of the present queen of the iron industry, founded a little forge in Essen. It was scarce more than a smithy. Two years later he produced a little cast steel. There were profits but these were husbanded with economy so that in 1818 Frederick was able to build a small plant consisting of eight melting furnaces, with one crucible apiece. After his death in 1826 his widow and son, Alfred, carried on the business, and it was under this regime that the Krupp works grew to their colossal proportions. In tribute to Alfred's genius he is always referred to as the "great Krupp." The plant continued to prosper under the hands of Bertha's father, Herr Frederick, and came into her hands the masterpiece of human business acumen, organization and energy that it is to-day.

Conditions do not change with rapidity in the Krupp works. The old ancestral home, a tiny cottage stands where it did in 1811. Alfred Krupp, the Great, ordered that it be preserved "in order," he said, "to give courage to the faint-hearted and help him to persevere, prevent him from despising small things,and preserve him from vanity." Every visitor who calls at the Krupp works is required to leave a card at the little home, as a mark of respect for the founder: and when the last Krupp died his remains were carried to the humble cottage, where they lay in state, and from whence they were carried to their last resting resting place with William, Emperor of the Germans, walking in the cortege.

Krupp Manufacturers

When the name Krupp is mentioned one at once thinks of cannon. The name of the family is indissolubly linked with the crashing of artillery, with battle and carnage, yet the manufacture of ordnance is but a part of their business. Armor plate, crucible nickel steel, Martin steel, puddled steel, Bessemer steel and hard steel and besides these, various allovs are produced. Armor-piercing shell, locomotives, engines and hosting machinery, armor plate rolls and mint rolls, tires, axles, and tool spring steel are amongtheir products. Railway rails, locomotive wheels, rudders and propellers are also placed in the market by the great firm of Krupp.

The Krupp outputs may be classed under two heads: War material and products of general industry.

Under the first head are guns, turrets, armored shields, disappearing carriages, hoisting and transporting machinery for ammunition, ordinance wagons, ammunition, rifle barrels and armor.

Under the second head come railway material, including wheels, tires axles, springs, boiler plates, press car frames, structural parts of locomotives, rails, switches, frogs, portable railroad plants, together with the requisite rolling stock; shipbuilding material, machinery parts, sheet steel and sheet iron rolls, tool steel, steel for motor-car building, hard steel for stone breakers, dredges and to forth, and steel bars of special qualities.

So much for the personality of the Krupp works, if such concerns may be said to have personality,but what of their young mistress?

Bertha Krupp was born on March 29, 1886, at Villa Huegal, where she and her younger sister, Barbara have spentthe greater part of their lives. She is the daughter of Baron Frederick Alfred Krupp, and, as there were no sons, became, on the death of her father, the head of the family.

When Baron Krupp found therewas no male issue to carry on his name and business, he did not despair.

A Genuine Krupp.

"Bertha is a Krupp," said he, "she shall take my place."

So, while she was yet very young, the baron began forming her for the great part she was to play in the world. He began educating this child to become the head of the great Krupp iron plants; to become the richest woman on the globe.

Bertha was given as fine an education as it was possible for ayoung man or woman to acquire. Studious and able, with a quick brain tograsp and a fine memory to hold, she soon became possessed of a store of knowledge and refinement that might well be envied. But her education did not stop here. It was not enough that she was accomplished in those ways which the world is pleased to term accomplishments. Hers was to be the life of a business man, of the headof a great enterprise, where intimate knowledge of a multitude of details, where technical knowledge of the affairs of the concern, where the ability to command men, to organize, to plan and to carry out plans, is more essential than any amount of things that can be taught in schools or colleges.

To the end that this future ruler might fill the part for which she was cast, her father took her into the Essen works with him. When only a child she began learning the routine of the business. With the systems of the office she became familiar; with the source of supplies, with the output, with the trade; with all that appertained to the business side of the Krupp interests she was familiarized. Then she was taken into the works themselves and taught the process by which steel of various kinds is made; she was instructed to the formulae, in the details af construction. This girl learned how to cast cannon, how to roll plate, so that today she could replace any man in her employ. She knows her business from the most lowly of its duties to the most responsible.

Her Responsibilities.

At the age of seventeen she was required to take up her burden, for her father was spared to her no longer. Left without his guidingband Bertha was put in the bic chair at the head of her advisory board, and required to be the court of resort. She was the owner it was to her those thousands of men looked for their daily employment. And she was not found wanting. At once she plunged into business with an activity and an ability that astonished the world, until today she is as much the power that guides the vast Krupp machine as her father and grandfather were before her.

Her tastes are simple. She is even more than simple. Possessed of more than ordinary beauty, she takes no pains to adorn it. Almost careless of her personal appearance, she excites comment wherever she goes by the cheapness, the lack of style, the provincialism of her clothing.

When she appeared at Kiel to attend the unveiling of the monument erected to her father by the German emperor, she wore a shabby straw hat, and a dress that was even shabbier, made of the cheapest cotton material. It was estimated by spectators that her whole outfit could have been purchased for five dollars. And during the whole week she was there she wore the same costume. Conspicuous she surely was among that throng which was composed of the wealth and nobility of the empire, where beautiful women scorned to wear the same dress in the morning that was to appear in the afternoon, and where the evening was graced by still another creation.

Her tastes for plainness extendsnot only to her dress but to the mode of her life. In Kiel she went to no magnificent hotel, she occupied no sumptuous apartments, but with her sister lived in the plainest of rooms on the top floor of the hostelry, without even a maid to wait upon her. Her diet is as simple as her clothes and correspondingly cheap.

Eleven months in the year she spends in her home near Essen. The remaining month is passed at some quiet watering place remote from the fashionable world. She loves her garden and out-of-door life, but wealth, show and position have no attractions for her.

Monday, October 15, 1906. Bertha was married to Lieut. Gustav von Bohlen und Halbach, a diplomat, whom she met and loved in Rome. He was a poor man, but Frauleln Krupp preferred him to the many glittering titles that had been laid at her feet. Since her marriage there has been no change in her quiet life. She rules in her domain without rancour, without noise. In her very real kingdom she is supreme, but there is not of the gilt and tinsel of courts. A hundred thousand men bow to her will; governments buyat her market, yet she remains a simple, lovable, unassuming girl.

CHAS. W. MORSE CONVICTED.

New York, Nov. 5.—Chas. W. Morse and Alfred H. Curtis were today convicted of violation of the federal banking laws in that they had misapplied the funds of the National Bank of North America, of which they had been officers, and had made false entries in the books of that institution. On the charge of conspiracy against the United States they were acquitted. Curtis was recommended to the mercy of the court.

The court absolutely refused to accept bail pending an appeal for a new trial. The law provides for each of the charges of which they have been found guilty, a penalty of not less than five years. It took the jury twenty-seven hours to arrive at a verdict.

It is a Fact

That the competition in Bread Baking at our local exhibition was the keenest of all the different classes, and it is very pleasing to note that the bread baked from PRAIRIE PRIDE PATENT FLOUR won the sweepstakes over all others. This is as good a guarantee as could be had that the Medicine Hat Flour cannot be excelled by any of the so called high grade flours that are imported in here, and you can also buy it cheaper because there is no freight to be paid on it. It is manufactured locally, and sold locally by all dealers.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

(From our own correspondents.)

What Widewake and Reliable Correspondents throughout This District Find Worthy of Recording for Publication in their Home Paper.

Seven Persons

Mr. H. J. Butzon of Whitta passed through here Tuesday on his way to The Hat, returning Thursday.

The section hands with the exception of one were laid off for the winter.

This place was alive again with land seekers this week. If only the land north and south of us were open for settlement, what a rush there would be here.

Wanted at this place, a hotel, creamery, lumber and coal yard and blacksmith shop.

Mrs. Charles Tonberg was quite sick this week necessitating a visit from the doctor, who was also called in to see Mr. A. W. Butler while here. Dr. Smith of The Hat was the attending physician.

Mr. Trome of Winnifred was here and took home a load of posts.

Messrs. Reed and Peterson were here taking home with them a load of slabs and one of coal.

Mr. H. H. Foster was here with three teams hauling to his ranch.

Our citizens here are hustling coal, so as not to be caught like they were two years ago.

Mr. W. Wells Williams of the J. A. Young ranch was here, reportin their sheep as having come through the great storm in good shape, with the loss of only one.

Mrs. Brown drove in to meet Mr. Brown Friday evening, returning Saturday morning to the ranch.

H. H. Foster and Rob. Endersby rode in Sunday for the purpose of taking back a bunch of cattle bought of Mr. Zimmerman.

Mr. David Cargill, who has been away for a week or so, has returned and is spending Sunday at this place.

Mr. and Mrs. George Murray and Miss Cargill were in town this week.

Josephsburg

Mrs. Peter H. Ashcroft of Lethbridge, with her young son, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Heather.

Mr. Percy Rumsey is to act as cook to the police detachment in their new quarters.

Coyote Coulee

The Chinook winds of the last few days has taken the snow away quickly.

Mr. Robert Armstrong spent a few days at Coleridge last week.

Mr. Manny Colter is plastering Mr. W. S. Johnston's new cottage. As Will has promised the boys a dance soon.

The neighbors are helping Mrs. Minzer build a new house on her homestead.

Mr. E. J. Smith drove some friends to town last week. Ha, ha! Eddie.

Mr. D. W. Hamilton is visiting his parents for a few weeks at the coal mine.

Mr. Reid Markwell has built an addition to his house and intends giving a dance soon.

Mr. S. B. Smith killed a fine hog last week that weighed six hundred pounds. That was one of the smallest of his bunch.

Tommy rode the ridge and also rode the range,
Many a time he wished for a change.
But he rode, and rode, and he rode so fast,
He rode till he got his horses at last.

HAPPY HOOLIGAN.

Red Cliffe

Potato digging is the order of the day in Red Cliffe now.

The Red Cliffe Company have been busy hauling coal over to Stair, from where it is shipped.

Gun shipping coal and the teams are

Jacob Kline left Sunday for his home in North Webster, Indiana, after a few months visit with Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Crouch.

Albert Brubaker is staying on his homestead near Bentink now.

Robert Warner had the misfortune to be thrown from a horse on Monday, but was not very seriously injured.

Mrs. Dickinson has been reported as being on the sick list.

Mrs. Ellijson and children of Stair called on Mrs. Crouch Tuesday.

Mr. Dodge and Mr. Dickinson were Medicine Hat visitors Wednesday.

Rev. Brubaker is in North Dakota on business this week.

SUPREME COURT

The following criminal cases came up at the Supreme Court after The Times went to press last week:

Rex vs. Scram—Laid over until next court as a civil action is now pending between Trimble and Schram. D. G. White appeared for the defendant.

Rex vs. J. Bowen-Davis.— Obtaining money under false pretenses. Laid over until next court.

WAS WEAK AND THIN

ONLY WEIGHED 73 POUNDS. NOW WEIGHS 113 POUNDS.

Had Heart Trouble and Shortness of Breath for Six Years.

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS cured Mrs. K. E. Bright, Burnley, Ont. She writes: "I was greatly troubled, for six years, with my heart and shortness of breath. I could not walk eighty rods without resting four or five times in that short distance. I got so weak and thin I only weighed seventy-three pounds. I decided at last to take some of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking eight boxes I gained in strength and weight, and now weigh one hundred and thirteen pounds, the most I ever weighed in my life. I feel well and can work as well as ever I did, and can heartily thank Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for it all."

Price 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

McClary's "Caloric" Gas Range

Burns Natural Gas

Burners Easily Taken Apart

"Caloric" Gas Burners are removed by merely lifting them out of place, and the upper part of burner rests (not screwed) on lower part. Can be instantly taken apart for cleaning.

No tools required. Notice that "cup" of lower half of burner is extra deep, so as to allow proper mixture of air and gas. Also that upper face of burner is corrugated. This causes a "current" of air to pass between corrugations, and gives a greater velocity to flame—makes a greater heat, and brings water to boiling point in less time. FELL FROM BRIDGE

WELL-KNOWN IRVINE MAN FOUND DEAD ON SUNDAY

NOT KNOWN EXACTLY HOW IT HAPPENED

Mr. Charles Calkins, the proprietor of the Alberta Hotel, Irvine, met his death on Saturday night last, falling a distance of forty feet from the C.P.R. bridge to the gravel on the left bank of the river.

The gruesome discovery was made on Sunday morning at about half past eleven, by Mr. M. G. Northan, who was taking a walk across the railroad bridge with his son. When the left bank had been almost reached, Mr. Northan's attention was suddenly attracted by the figure of a man lying limp and apparently lifeless almost directly under the first pier. Quickly a descent was made to the spot and as the first impression seemed to be borne out by the man's appearance, the matter was reported to the Mounted Police. Sergt. Hunsby and Constable Capstick who turned out to investigate, found that the man was quite dead, and his right leg was fractured. They accordingly notified the coroner and upon his arrival on the scene Dr. Boyd stated his belief that life had been extinct for some time and ordered the removal of thecorpse to Patterson's undertaking rooms.

Exactly how the accident occurred is not known. Calkins, who had been in town all day in connection with a legal matter in which he was concerned, went to the station at seven in the evening to entrain on No. 2 for Irvine. The train was late and did not come in till nine o'clock Calkins was next seen at the C.P.R. depot at 11 o'clock, about the time of the arrival of No. 97, and it is supposed that he boarded this train in mistake for No. 2. and that finding he was going west, he attempted to dismount while the train was passing over the bridge, with the fatal consequences described above. It is said that the deceased had been drinking rather heavily in the early part of the evening.

A Coroner's inquest was held at 8 o'clock this morning.

Special Council Meetings

Agreement with Sewer-Pipe Company Regular Meeting Last Night

At a special meeting of the council held on Tuesday night, notice was given by Ald. Spencer of the introduction at the next meeting of a by-law in connection with the holding of the Municipal elections. The chairman of the relief committeethen went on to make a report regarding a needy family which he considered should not be a charge upon the rates of the city. Less than a year ago the family came to Medicine Hat from New York state, and since coming here have suffered much from sickness. The head of the family died in the hospital of typhoid fever and his widow and six children were left practically destitute. Free passage back to New York state had been refused and the clerk was accordingly instructed to write the department in regard to deportation.

A special meeting of the Council was held on Thursday last at eight o'clock for the purpose of discussing the Sewer Pipe Manufactory proposition. There was a full attendance of members.

The mayor stated in opening that Mr. Overpack had been before a committee of the Board of Trade and council and the terms of an agreement had been discussed. This had now been drafted out and would be taken up clause by clause. The Mayor then read the agreementwhich was in the form of a contract to be entered into by the council and the company. It was pointed out that the council had no power to sign such a contract, as the proposition would have to go to the ratepayers as a by-law. Criticism was made by the Mayor of the clause by which the title deeds of the property would be made over to the company after one month's operation. The Mayor had supposed that it would be unnecessary to turn over the property for eight or ten years; as this would inflict no hardship upon the Company. Mr. Overpack pointed out that $15,000 would have to be spent on grading, etc., by the company, and it would not be to their interest to close down the plant after such an expenditure of money. The city solicitor suggested that a clause be inserted in any contract entered into, reserving an acre of landaround the gas well. In regard to this Mr. Overpack stated that the company would allow the use of the well by the city inthe event of the plant being shut down for more than a month, the city to ripe ten days' notice.

Mr. Stewart made a suggestion that a bonus of $10,000 be given to the company in place of the other concessions, as he thought this would be a simpler way of settling the matter. In regard to this Mr. Overpack pointed out that the company did not desire any bonus, but wished to have the encouragement and support of the city.

At 9.80 the Council adiourned for half an hour to enable Mr. White to redraft the agreement in such a way that the council could lawfully became signatories. At 10 o'clock Mr. White returned with a rough draft of the revised agreement.

Ald. Huckvale moved the following resolution: "This Council agrees to the proposition as made by Mr. D. G. White between the Council and the company, it further agrees to lay the matter before the ratepayers at as early a date as passible, using its best endeavors to secure the carrying of the by-law, that the mayor and city solicitor be a committee to see that the new agreement about to be drafted by Mr. White is in uniformity with the wishes of the council, and that authority is hereby given to the Mayor and clerk to sign the said agreement onbehalf of the city." This motion was seconded by Ald. Tweed and carried unanimously.

The agreement read as follows'

This agreement made in triplicate this 13th day of November, A.D., 1908. Between

The Municipal Corporation of the City of Medicine Hat, in the Province of Alberta, of the first part, and

M. E. Newell, of Fort Dodge, in the State of Iowa, an official of the Chicago and Great Western Railway Company; F. M. Reach of Lyle, in the State of Minnesota, Banker, and Warren Overpack, of Webster City in the State of Iowa, Manufacturer, of the second part.

Whereas the parties of the second part have located and purchased certain clay lands near Coleridge, in the Province of Alberta, and originally intended erecting a sewer pipe factory on the said lands, and in pursuance thereof, completed their surveys for a siding from the main line track of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company on to their property, but found it impossible to secure the necessary right-of-way over the South East Quarter of Section 3, Township 11, Range 5, West of the Fourth Meridian.

And Whereas certain inducements have been offered to the parties of the second part to have them erect their plant in or near the City of Medicine Hat, instead of at Coleridge. The parties hereto have therefore agreed as follows:—

(a) The parties of the first part hereby undertake and agree to use their best endeavors to secure and have donated to the parties of the second part, a portion of the north west quarter of section 36, in township 12, range 6, west of the fourth Meridian, containing at least forty acres, and extending from the river bank back to the C.P.R. track along the eastern boundary of the said quarter section, reserving right of way sixty-six feet (66 ft.) wide for a street if necessary.

(b) To sink a gas well at some point on the said forty acres, and to complete same as soon as possible.

(c) To use their best endeavors to secure the necessary rights of way for a spur line track running from the Canadian Pacific Railway, Company's main line track at Coleridge, to the clay be dsof the parties of the second part; and also from the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's main line to the Company's works on the aforesaid forty acres.

(d) That until the said gas well is completed, they will furnish gas to the parties of the second part at their said works free of charge. The parties of the second part agree to furnish and lay the pipes, if necessary. Provided that the parties of the first part will loan all available pipe they may have on hand for such purposes. The pipe belonging to each party to be returned on completion of the well.

(e) To submit all necessary by-laws to, and endeavor to have them carried by the Burgesses of the said City, authorising the carrying out of matters herein provided for, at as early a date as possible.

(f) To exempt all property of parties of second part from all taxation under their control for 15 years.

In consideration whereof, the said parties of the second part covenant, undertake and agree to and with the said City as follows:—

(a) To erect and operate their sewer pipe manufacturing plant on the aforesaid forty acres, which will consist of the following, amongst other buildings:—

Main drying building, 256x80 feet, four storeys, including basement.

Building for clay, and part machinery, 300x56 feet. A small portion for the machinery to be one storey high, and the balance three storeys high.

These buildings to be connected with another building about 40x60 feet, four storeys with basement.

(b) A battery of 12 kilns, 28 feet in diameter, inside measurement.

These dimensions are approximately correct, but it may be necessary to make certain changes for the accommodation of certain of the machinery.

On the City's securing the rights-of- way aforesaid, the parties of the second part will build at their own expense, the sidings from the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, to the properties mentioned.

After the plant has been in operation for one month, the City agrees to transfer and assign to the parties of the second part, a clear title to the said forty acres, and also to the said rights of ways for sidings at both Coleridge and Medicine Hat, and also the said Gas well.

The parties of the second part agree not to sell or supply any gas from the said well off the said premises.

If from any cause, whatever, the said factory shall cease operation or be shut down, and the said gas well shall not be in use for one month, the City shall be at liberty, after serving ten (10) days notice in writing on the parties of the secondpart to take peaceable possession of the gas well, and all necessary rights of way thereto and therefrom, and use the gas therefrom till such time as the parties of the second part shall again commence operations. Provided, however, that if for any reason the City may be unable to carry out its portion of this agreement, then this agreement shall be void at the option of the parties of the second part.

The plant will be a thoroughly substantial and up-to-date sewer pipe manufacturing plant, equipped throughout with the most modern machinery, employing from sixty to one hundred men, and using from eighty to two hundred tons of clay per day when the plant is in full operation. The estimated total cost of the plant as proposed to be erected is about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000.00.)

The parties of the second part also hereby agree to use the said forty acres, strictly for the purposes of their business only.

This agreement and everything herein contained shall respectfully ensure to the benefit of and be binding upon the parties hereto, its and their, heirs,executors, administrators, successors and assigns respectively.

In witness whereof, the said Corporation has hereto affixed its corporate seal and the hands of its Mayor and Clerk, and the parties hereto of the second part have hereunto set their hands and seals, the day and year first above written.

Sgd. WM. COUSINS,
Mayor.
Sgd. E. ROBERTS,
Clerk.
Sgd. WARREN OVERPACK.

Signed, sealed and delivered in the presence of,
Sgd. D. G. WHITE.

The regular meeting of the Council was held last night in the city hall. There were present: the Mayor, Alds. Baker, McKay, Morrow, Spencer, Forster, Tweed, Huckvale, Penhale. There was a long list of communications to be d alt with and these took up the greater part of the evening.

Before the minutes of the special meeting to discuss the sewer pipe factory were adopted, Ald. Baker made a statement to the effect that all the citizens he had met seemed to be in favor of the agreement drawn up, provided that a clause be inserted to the effect that white labor only be employed. Unless there was such a clause inserted to prevent Orientals from getting in there was likely to be opposition. The Mayor pointed out that this matter shouldbe brought up when the by-law was under discussion, remarking that he did not think that class of labor (Chinese or Japanese) was at all likely to be desired, unless it was for common laboring. Ald. Baker stated that yellow labor was now being employed in the C.P.R. camps the effect of keeping white men out.

Ald. J. Fewings wrote calling attention on behalf of the Cypress Club to the insufficiency of gas during the recent cold weather. The matter was referred to the gas commissioners. During the course of the discussion the Mayor drew attention to an escape of gas from around one of the wells, Ald. Baker stating in explanation that the gas had a tendency to come up around the pipes. To put a stop to this leakage would be an expensive process.

The solicitor wrote anent the application of the Evangelical Association for exemption from taxation that the church was liable for the time during which the edifice was under construction and until dedication. It was decided that the Association should be exempt for part year since dedication was performed.

The City Solicitor wrote advising the Council that the city was not liable in the matter of Watson and Keynes account for damages as the accident was not due to negligence on the part of the city.

Several recommendations were contained in a communication from the fire brigade. It was suggested that a permanent fire chief be appointed at a salary of $80 a month and uniform for the first year, and $100 a manth, uniform to be provided the second year. Further, the payment of $60 a month to permanent firemen was recommended, with $5 a month annual increase till $75 a month was reached, two weeks holiday with pay to be granted each year. Ald. Tweed, referring to this matter, said he had at first felt that it should be left over for the new Council to deal with, but as Chief Hatcher had been offered a position in Calgary to keep him there forthe lacrosse season, he had advised the fire boys to frame up a statement and get the Council to discuss it. Ald. Penhale found occasion here for a long and unconventional dissertation on many matters. In the course of his remarks he paid a compliment to the efficiency of the brigade, opposing on this ground any increase in the expenditure in this department. His query, "Mr. Tweed, will you be so kind as to tell us what the fire brigade cost last year?" gave rise to the retort, "yes, if you'll give us the total cost of the water department, (laughter). But this information was not supplied. Speaking about Sunday's fire, the Mayor said the brigade had made a splendid turnout—forty-five seconds after the alarm was rung in by himself. The remarkable thing was that a number of men stood round before thealarm was given, watching the building burn. The brigade's communication was left on the table for consideration by the new council.

O. W. Keal ..... Tweed ..... ering to accept $181.70 in settlement for damages sustained through Friday's runaway. Referred to the public works committee, the city engineer and the city solicitor.

Death of A. LeBlanc

Prominent Merchant Passes Away

The sudden death occured early last Wednesday of Mr. A. B. Le Blanc of Ottawa St. Mr. Le Blanc had not been in good health forsome time and as the result of a night's exposure with a hunting party shortly after the opening of the shooting season, the deceased had shown frequent signs of fatigue. It was however, little suspected that his call was so near at hand, and it was with a shock that his many friends learned on Wednesday morning of his death from haemorrhage. The previous day Mr. Le Blanc had shown the best of spirits and had spent the greater part of the evening at home in social enjoyment.

Antoine Berbe Le Blanc was born in Argentille County, Quebec, forty-nine years ago. For twenty-eight years he was railroading with the C.P.R., residing at Cypress River, LaSalle and Sydney, Man., whence he removed to Medicine Hat five years ago. Since coming to the city he has carried on a general store business at "The Fair." He was highly respected in town and the sympathy of his friends has gone out to his wife and family in their bereavement.

The funeral took place on Friday afternoon to the Hillside cemetery. A number of members of the Independent Order of Foresters, in which the deceased held a benefit, attended the funeral and acted as pall bearers.

The following is a list of the floral tributes.

"From his loving wife and children."

"With much sympathy from the Women's Auxiliary of St. Barnabas Church."

"With deepest sympathy from Misses Eddy and Eagles."

"With the sympathies of the manager and staff, Union Bank of Canada."

"Members of the Court Mewasin, I. O. F."

"With deepest sympathy from Companion Court Hiawatha, No. 704."

"With deepest sympathy from Mr. and Mrs. Brooks."

"With deepest sympathy from Geo. Worthy."

It is Mrs. LeBlanc's intention to carry on the business as heretofore.

THE R. N. W. N. P.

(Written for The Times.)

If you're out upon the prairie, in this country of the north,
Just a red speck in the distance you may see,
That resolves into a rider on his steed, as they come forth,
And he wears the R.N.W.M.P.

Like a burden that he bears,
On his shoulders broad, he wear,
Wears in gilt, the R.N.W.M.P.

With his trouser-stripes of yellow, and his soldier-coat of red,
And his broad-rimmed hat, I'm sure you will agree,
He's a picturesque young fellow, and care-free, —(don't be misled)
If he wears the R.N.W.M.P.

Heavy burdens he must bear,
When he takes the oath to wear
Wear the gilded R.N.W.M.P.

He must ride across the prairie, many miles by day and night,
And through cold and rain and snow-drifts make no stay,
For in all this level country, he it is maintains the right,
When he wears the R.N.W.M.P.

That's the burden that he bears
On his shoulders, as he wears,
Wears in gilt, the R.N.W.M.P.

For because he's in his saddle, and can ride both far and fast,
This great western land is safe for you and me,
All wrongs slink away in terror, where he rides, crime cannot last.
For it fears the R.N.W.M.P.

'Tis our safety that he bears
On his shoulders, as he wears,
Wears the gilded R.N.W.M.P.

E. Lucilla Payzant.

Boston, Mass.

Dr. Boyd reported that he hadsent up two samples of water for analysis recently and the latest report was that the water was free from germs. Speaking of Professor Edwards of the University the doctor said he understood that the Municipalities might acquire the former's services as a consulting engineer. Some feeswould have to be paid as the municipalities did not directly support the University.

Mrs. J. W. Seacoy's bill for attending on the Reynolds family was referred to health and relief committee for a report.

Appointments were made for the civic elections as follows:

Returning Officer—Edward Roberts
Deputy Returning Officers—F. S. Pingle, H. T. W. Forster, G. A. Luno and F. F. Fatt.

Nomination day is fixed for December 7, the elections to take place a week later, counting on the 15th prox.

The Mayor gave notice of introduction of a by-law at the next regular meeting to raise money for the purpose of the sewer pipe industry.

On motion of Alds. Penhale and Huckvale it was decided to take over the grand stand at a cost not exceeding $900.

Ald. Tweed moved that the building inspector be instructed to have removed the building opposite the firehall. Carried.

Referring to the progress on the new gas well, Ald. Baker said he understood that the men were now awaiting the arrival of a pressure gauge.

Ald. Morrow drew attention to cases in which gas costs had been charged against the property and wished to know if this were the regular practice. He was informed this this was the case, but enforcement had not always been carried out. Mr. Mulligan's position was brought up by Ald. Morrow, as an instance of hardship being inflicted. One of Mr. Mulligan's tenants had gone in arrears while the former was in the OldCountry and unaware that the gas would be charged against the property. The clerk suggested as a solution that a system of payment in advance might be adopted, as in vogue in the States. The Mayor thought the gas and water committee should bring in a report.

MOCK PARLIAMENT

The second sitting of the Mock Parliament was held last Friday night, when the speech from the throne was discussed. The principal speakers for the Government were the Minister of Finance, C. A. Kraus; the Minister of Agriculture, S. T. Hopper; the Minister of Customs, C. Sansom and the Minister of Public Works, D. R. Ware; and for the Opposition, the Leader, S. W. Hill; Messrs. Hall, Binns and Bryenton.

The next meeting is on Friday, November 27, and an interesting discussion is promised, the Hudson's Bay Railway Bill being on the tapis.

A Small Fire on Sunday

A fire broke out between the ceiling and the roof of the C.P.R. pump house shortly before noon on Sunday. The fire brigade made a smart turn-out. Some difficulty was experienced in getting at the fire, and it was found necessary to tear a hole in the roof before water could be brought to play upon the flames.

The fire was caused by the heat from the boiler smoke stack, and in order to eliminate the possibility of its recurrence larger clearance will be left on the new roof.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION.

At the local teachers convention to be held in the Toronto Street School on Friday, Nov. 20th, the program will be as follows:

History—Miss Fraser, 9 to 9.45.
Primary Reading—Miss Best, 9.45 to 10.15.
Intermission—10.15 to 10.30.
Literature—Mr. Ware, 10.30 to 11.15.
Writing—Mr. Hill, 11.15 to 12.
Grammar—Mr. Samsom, 1.30 to 2.30.
Spelling—Miss J. A. Morrison, 2.30 to 3.
Election of Officers.

Word was received yesterday that Dr. Tory would be unable to come and the evening meeting is accordingly called off.

Municipal Candidates

For Ward III there is going to be a fine lot of vacancies on the board this year. In Ward I. Alds. Tweed, W. Turpin and Mr. Hutchinson are mentioned. In Ward II. J. E. Collier will be sure to secure the honors, although Ald. Forster says he is willing to run. Ward III. has brought out P. Robertson and possibly H. Baker will again run. Ward IV. has no vacancies.

The best citizens see that only they can make the needed changes in civic government and they are going to do their best to right things.

A largely signed requisition was presented to Mr. Collier, containing the majority of names of the more prominent men in Ward II.

TWO RUNAWAYS.

There have been two rather serious runaways during the past week. The first occurred on Friday evening at about 5.30 as Fred. Charters accompanied by C. Robb was returning from his rounds with the Stewart & Tweed delivery wagon. As the teamster was attempting to turn the corner of Montreal Street and First Avenue (it was almost pitch dark as only a portion of the mantle of the nearest lamp remained) the horses fell into the ditch and the occupants of the rig were thrown violently forward, one falling in between the team and the other being thrown to one side. The animals took fright and set off at a gallop, the sequel being a badly damaged rig and one of the horses disabled with a broken leg. The animal had afterwards to be shot.

Mr. Robb has only recently come out of the hospital where he has suffered from typhoid fever and the effect of the bad shaking he received has been to confine him to his room for some days. Mr. Charters has also been temporarily disabled.

The spot where the accident took place is a particularly dangerousone for any rig driving along afterdark, as there is no culvert.

Th? other mishap, which occurred on Saturday night shortly after 11 o'clock, was also attributable to one of the lamps being out of business. Charlie Wingfield, J. T. Bell's driver, had just completed his last trip and was returning home, going his way rather by faith than by sight when at the corner of 5th Avenue and Main Street he suddenly felt the rig turning over into the ditch. He tried to pull out but was too late and the rig was overturned with Charlie underneath. Naturally the horse took fright and set off on a wild career down the hill. Eventually the animal was stopped by Mr. Souch.

Charlie came out with a few bad bruises. The rig, it is said, will make excellent kindling wood.

FINE VEGETABLES

Last week a couple of potatoes raised on the homestead of Mr. E. Roots, 24 miles east of the citywere brought into The Times office. One of them measured 17 inches around, and another freak potatoe, consisting of two joined together, was 21½ inches in circumference.

Mr. Roots, without any irrigation or even a well has raised 160 acres of vegetables, including fine watermelons, that cannot be beaten in any part of Canada. Strawberries are also being raised, and next year fruit trees are to be planted.

The potatoes were dug up only last week.

Daisies and Phlox were flowering last week in the gardens of the Methodist Parsonage.

Talking about weather, a local young man went in for a swim off Police Point a few days ago.

The School Board

The regular meeting of the School Board was held on Tuesday night last in the secretary-treasurer's office. There were present Chairman Brotherton, Trustees Colter, Milne, and Kennedy.

A prolonged discussion took place in connection with sums of money owing to sub-contractors by Mr. Sellens who built the Toronto St. school addition. Over $1,700 is due to them and the board is keeping back $739 of Seller's contract money. This would be sufficient to pay 41 per cent. and with $300 which the board decided to add, the proportion will be 60 per cent.

Mr. Kealy interviewed the board with regard to R. E. Walton's account for furnace in the new school building asking that the account be paid. He also spoke anent Mr. Leans account for Ajax cement. Matter left open for city solicitor to endeavor to come to some agreement.

Communications from Geo. G. MacBean, enclosing a list of natural history collections; from Carruthers, Round & Co., regarding school desatures from Agnes F.McKinley applying for a position on the staff, and from the secretary-treasurer giving a statement of accounts required until the end of the year, were filed.

The action of Mr. Milne in ordering "Belief Maps" from Atlas Supply was ratified by the board. The cost is $500.

A motion was passed to notify the Council of vacancies on the board of trustees. Mr. Kennedy is the only member who will stick to his guns during the coming year.

Mr. Samsom reported that a local teachers' convention was being held on the 20th of the month. Dr. Tory had been asked to be present and other prominent men would be asked to give addresses. The programme would be interspersed with musical numbers. The principal brought up the matter of expenditure. Since the invitation had been extended to Dr. Tory it had been discovered that the government would not bear any proportion of the expenditure on the doctor's visit to Macleod. The teachers would pay a fee of 50 cents each. The board decided to assist the teachers up to an amount not exceeding $25.

Police Court News

Oscar Erickson and Dan Cavan, made up the list of the city's drunk and disorderlies. The men were assessed $8 and $5 respectively and costs.

Leo St. Denis, whose love of chickens was greater than his regards for the rights of property, appeared before the Magistrate on Wednesday last. He was allowed out on suspended sentence.

Nellie Peasnell, of easy virtue, who drifted into town last week, was arrested on the street on Wednesday. She had been lingering around one of the hotels and later had put up at a boarding house during her visit here. The magistrate imposed a fine of $10 and costs and allowed the woman a short time to get out of town.

Mounted Police Notes

Nine very fine remounts have been purchased by Mr. Arthur Whitney on behalf of the Mounted Police, from the J. D. McGregor's ranch.

Two livery stables in the city were assessed $2 a piece last week by the Mounted Police for failing to comply with the N.W.T. ordinance respecting Livery, Board and Sale Stables. The ordinance requires two annual cleansings of livery premises according to certain regulations.

SUDDEN DEATH OF COWBOY.

Jas. Taylor, a cowbay well-known in this city and district died suddenly on Sunday in the Lethbridge Hospital. He had been working at the Southern Alberta Land Co.'s Camp south of Gleichen, and when taken sick was rushed to Lethbridge by Messrs Grace and Wallace, but the patient died the day after arrival after being given a glass of milk.

Taylor was an expert cowpuncher, one of the best in the country. He was 40 years old. His remains have been brought here for interment.

FATAL ACCIDENT

NEW AMERICAN FARMER KILLED BY HIS HORSES

RUNAWAY CAUSED BY BREAKDOWN OF WAGGON

An American settler who came into the Dominion early in the present month, met with a tragic death at Bow Island last week, while driving a team of horses.

On Monday, the 9th inst., William Isaac Schonert and his son Walter had been hauling lumber on to their land for buildingp urposes. In the evening as they returned home without a load, the father stood in the front of the wagon driving the team. The wagon box was of course not in use. Without the slightest warning the stirrup which bound the coupling and the back wheels to the reach, gave way. Immediately the latter sprang up and one of the horses being struck, the team set off at a wild pace, Mr. Schonert beingthrown to the ground and falling between the horses. When his son, Walter, who was driving a team some distance behind, came up to the spot his father was dead. On the right side of his skull a large wound was found from which a wad of grass was taken, making it apparent that the unfortunate man had been killed by a blow from the hoof of one of his horses. His left shoulder was fractured and left ear completely torn away.

The body, which was taken to the house of a Mr. Paisley, was later examined by Constable Coleridge of the R.N.W.M.P.

The Mounted Police authorities after investigating, decided that the death was purely accidental and that a coroner was not required. Dr. Leach of Taber having certified to the cause of death.

The day after her husband's death Mrs. Schonert and four children, arrived at Bow Island, and one of the saddest features of the tragedy was the brakins of the intelligence to them.

The Schonerts are among the class of well-to-do American farmers who are being attracted to the Canadian West in increased numbers each year. In addition to farm machinery, the deceased had brought with him a large number of horses and there was every prospect of his making good in the land which so recently he had adopted.

A BASE APPEAL

By every good citizen who thinks there is something in politics beyond partisanship, it will be regretted that appeals should have been made everywhere to constituencies to get next to the national treasury. Almost in so many words the people were told that a riding in opposition was a riding unrepresented in so far as public expenditures were concerned. When such views are everywhere promoted in a national campaign without causing any revolt of public opinion, need we be surprised if greed manifest itself in individuals who play the game of politics? If a riding is to be rewarded from the treasury for voting right, why need we be shocked if a party worker demands reward from the national resources for his services?—Toronto Saturday Night.

MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

work on the bowels gently and naturally without weakening the body, but, on the contrary, toning it, and they will if persevered in relieve and cure the worst cases of constipation.

Mrs. James King, Cornwall, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with sick headaches, constipation and catarrh of the stomach. I could get nothing to do me any good until I got a vial of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They did me more good than anything else I ever tried. I have no headaches or constipation, and the catarrh of the stomach is entirely gone. I feel like a new woman, thanks to Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I used in all about half a dozen vials."

ATHLETICS

The Ottawa Citizen published the following resume of the Olympic lacrosse team trip to England which gives an excellent story of the trip and is by far the best Daily News has yet seen.

Bringing home, after their very successful trip to the old country, the Canadian Olympic Lacrosse team, the Empress of Ireland reached Quebec yesterday afternoon, the big C.P.R. liner having made a record trip across the Atlantic.

Ald. William Foran, manager of the victorious lacrossists, returned to Ottawa this morning, accompanied by Tommy Gorman, the Capital representative on the team. The Olympic party dispersed at Montreal last night, all the players and officers being in the best of health. Captain Paddy Brennan, Henry Hoobin and Gus Dillion of the Shamrocks remained in England for a fortnight; also Mr. Frank Nelson, sporting editor of the Toronto Globe, who is member of the Olympic lacrosse committee. The Empress of Ireland had a delightful passage over, only a few of the lacrosse men being ill. Alex. Turnbull and George Rennie of New Westminster were laid up several days. Andy Mara of Toronto also being under the weather for a time. The others, however, stood the voyage well. The Canadians brought home many souvenirs of the English trip, their Olympic medals of course, being the most prized. The members of the team also received silver medals and diplomas from Lord Desborough, president of the Olympic council, and at Manchester and Stockport they were also made the recipients of handsome gifts which they value very highly.

Ald. Foran is well satisfied with the trip, the Canadians having made a splendid showing. In addition to the Olympic match at the Stadium, in which they defeated the pick of England by 14-10, carrying off the laurels which they went after, the Maple Leafs also played at Manchester, and Stockport, winning at both places, by 7—6 and 10—2 respectively. In all the Canadians scored 31 goals 18 being notched against them They played before an audience of 10,000 at the London Stadium, Lord Desborough, Lord Roberts and Rt. Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, ex-premier being amongst the distinguished onlookers. At Manchester 6,000 attended while the final appearance of the Canucks at Stockport was characterized by the attendance of 9,000.

Clean Play Feature

Great enthusiasm marked all three matches and whilst the stay at the Olympians in England was very short it is regarded as the most successful yet made by a Canadian team. The play in each of the three struggles was brilliant and fast, but the teams played lacrosse as it should be played, not a man on either side being sent to the fence. The referees were never called upon to stop play for infractions of the rules and not a man was injured. Undoubtedly, the games were mild as compared to those played in Canada last season, but they were just as spectacular and the Canadians, who were accustomed to more strenuous play, learned that Canada's national pastime may be introduced minus the rough tactics, and still be fast, exciting and spectacular. In fact, the clean, manly play of Ald. Foran's men was widely commented upon by the press of England.

"I am glad to see that you play with that true spirit of British Fair Play," remarked Lord Roberts, in addressing the Canadian players in their room after the match at the Stadium. "Lacrosse as you played it today is one of the greatest of sports it has ever been my pleasure to see. You left a favorable impression that will last for ever."

Lord Desborough also took occasion to congratulate the Canucks. First of all, he said, he admired the playing ability of the Maple Leafs, their speed and stick-handling, but he could not help lauding them for the true sportmanlike manner in which they had performed. Mr. Balfour also wrote Ald. Foran, expressing congratulations. At each of the banquets the Canucks were praised and what attested to their popularity, perhaps more than anything else, was the hearty send-off they were given at Manchester and Liverpool.

Success in North.

After the Olympic game in London the Canadians went to Manchester playing what proved their hardest match against the North of England. Henry Hoobin did not play in this game, having been injured in a collision with Dillion while practising. Duckett and Dixon also laid off, Fyan going in the nets and McLeod to the defence field, Mara holding down the draw position, while Turnbull moved to the home. The game was played at Fallowfield on Wednesday, Oct. 28, and after a stubborn struggle the Canucks won by 7-6. Most of the men who opposed them in the Olympic game were again in line, the North playing much faster than the English Olympians had done. The Canadians opened the scoring, but the Northern men evened up and were leading at half-time by 4-3. In the third quarter goals by Brennan and Gorman gave the Canucks a lead by 5-4. Turnbull and Gorman making it 7-4 in the fourth period. North of England finished strong, nevertheless, scoring twice. Play was mostly in favor of the Canadians, but by crowding around their nets, the Englishmen succeeded in holding down the score. In this match McLeod and Hamilton were the stars for Canada. Brennan and Broderick also shining. It was the narrowest escape which the wearers of the Maple Leaf had and the big crowd enthused wildly over the game. That evening the teams and their officers were banqueted at the Midland hotel, Mr. W. Batty, president of the English union, presided. Ald. Foran, Jimmie Murphy and Paddy Brennan being amongst the speakers. It was on this occasion that the players of both Olympic teams were presented with their commemorative medals.

Where Canucks Shone.

On the following day, Thursday Oct. 29th, the Canucks visited Stockport, winning from the representatives of Cheshire by 10-2, this being their easiest victory. They again presented a different line-up, Alex. Turnbull and George Rennie having gone on a flying trip to Edinburgh, Scotland. Hoobin was again unable to play owing to the injury to his side, so Charlie Ryan of the Shamrocks was taken from goal and placed at inside home. It was a long jump, but the youngster played a grand game. Dixon was in goal for Canada and Duckett at first defence. This line-up was supposed to be rather weak, but it proved exactly the reverse, outplaying the Cheshire men at all points. The work of the Canadian defence was steady and effective, while the home played first class combination. Undoubtedly, Cheshire were weaker than either the North of England or Olympics, but Ald. Foran's men, evidently, were learning to play together in better style. Paddy Brennan gave a magnificent exhibition at outside home as did Broderick in the field. Dixon proved his mettle in the flags and Dillion was easily the choice of the defencemen. The spectators again accorded the Canucks a rousing ovation, the Maple Leafs being surrounded at the finish and besieged for souvenirs. Many caps, gloves and sticks were carried off by the enthusiasts, the Canadians being lucky to escape with their sweaters.

Hearty Send-Offs

A farewell banquet was tendered the Canadians at Stockport that night, several hundred guests sitting down to a sumptuous spread. Councillor Sykes, whose guests the Canadians were while in Stockport, presided, Mr. Foran, Paddy Brennan, Joe Lally, Mr. Frank Nelson and Jimmie Murphy contributing to the toast list. Previous to the game, the Canadian party were shown through the mouster hat factory of Battys by and company, each carrying away a handsome piece of headgear as a souvenir of Stockton. The Canadians dined at the residence of Councillor Sykes. When they motored out of Stockport at eleven o'clock, hundreds of lacrosse enthusiasts turned out to bid them adieu. A week ago today Ald. Foran's party were given another send-off at Manchester. The station resounded with cheers as their train pulled out. The Maple Leafs had a special, while en route to Liverpool they presented each player with a handsome souvenir of Manchester city. Ald. Foran and Mr. Nelson thanked Mr. Batty and the members of the party intend reciprocating. Ald. Foran, as manager was a big success and in appreciation of his good work in their behalf, the players previous to their departure for home, presented him with a beautiful gold locket, suitably engraved.

Mr. Foran, speaking to a Citizen reporter today stated that he was well pleased with the way things had turned out. He was satisfied with the work of the team and had no cause for praise for the English exponents of the game.

"We went after the Olympic medals, diplomas and honors and we have captured them," said Ald. Foran to the Citizen. "The Olympic match was one of the finest lacrosse contests I have ever seen and the Canadians deserve all credit for winning. The English team were superior to our men in speed, and where we won out was with our staying power and aggressive tactics. The English team used excellent combination and their pluck was to be admired. But they lacked the finished passing and boring in ability of their Canadian cousins. Nevertheless both twelves played great lacrosse and for a time in the last quarter, when the score stood nine all, it was either country's victory. I cannot speak too highly of the English team, nor can I refrain from saying that the Canadians by their work at the Stadium and in their two exhibition games in the north have undoubtedly done a world of good for lacrosse in England."

Lol Solomon, Joe Lally and Jimmie Murphy also spoke of the English and Canadian teams, Joe Lally states that the speed of the English players was bewildering. Jimmie Murphy predicts that the next Canadian team to play in England will be defeated, while Lol Solomon endeavored to impress on the champion Tecumsehs a few of the English stars, including Jones of West London, Frank Johnston and Gerald Maso of Stockport and Norman Whitley of Manchester. There is a likelihood of an all-England team coming to Canada for a series of matches next year.

Farewell to Lacrosse.

Now that the trip is over and that the Olympic medals are safe in Canada a word may be added with regard to the men who comprised the team. The memorable match at the Stadium marked the close of the lacrosse records of such stars as Harry Hoobin, Paddy Brennan, Clarey McKerrow and Johnnie Broderick and it was only fitting that their careers on the field should be brought to such a creditable climax. The team from goal to inside home was remarkably strong, the wisdom of Ald. Foran's policy in trying out the men in trial games in Canada being demonstrated. Had the committee selected the first lot of candidates Canada would never have won out. Ryan and Dixon were both strong in the nets while Doc Campbell of Orangeville was perfectly steady and reliable at point. Dillen of the Rennie, McLeod and Duckett all proved well worthy of places in the defence field, McKerrow in particular scintillating. Alex. Turnbull, the New Westminster veteran, again showed his wonderful aggressiveness being much better on the home than at outside. Mara, though inexperienced, footed up splendidly at centre, and Broderick of Cornwall proved himself as tricky and as effective as of yore. Capt. Brennan and Gorman did most of the scoring as was to have been expected of the men "close in," but it is not always the scorer who does the work, the home field keeping the outside and inside home men fed continually. The goal-crease rule affected the Canadians to a large extent, but most of their points were notched from "flying shots." Brennan made a hit as captain, and besides directing the movements of the team found time to tear off brilliant work himself. Henry Hoobin was handicapped owing to his injured chest, but he did an immense amount of fielding and his shooting was great. One of the most effective of the Canadian players, however, and one whose fine work should not be overlooked is Ernie Hamilton of Montreal. Hamilton covered more ground than any man on the field, working like a beaver in each of the matches. The M.A.A.A. man is not a scorer for the simple reason that he seldom shoots, preferring to give the honor of notching a goal to somebody else, but he was responsible for many of the Canadian tallies, carrying the rubber through an opening and then transferring it to Turnbull, Broderick, Brennan, Hoobin or Brennan. Hamilton was really one of Canada's stars, his work reminding one of Sport Murton's style.

DEVELOPMENT OF NEW TALENT

To the moving picture theatre may be attributed the discovery and development of talent which would otherwise have remained in obscurity. Generally because of its inexpensiveness and because of the dearth of people, the moving picture theatre manager has been compelled to search his local field, especially for singing talent. Recently, in the west a most wonderful voice with an inherited talent was discovered by the employment of a singer at a five cent theatre. In addition to the discovery of new material, these theatres serve as preparatory schools for persons aspiring to the stage. They have further proven havens for many vaudeville artists who have utilized these popular and economic entertainment places for protection during the trying times of the past year.

R. DUNN.

C. P. R. Electrification

Just what the electrification of the Canadian Pacific Railway would mean were it undertaken—not at once, for that would be impossible—but within a measurable period of years, was the subject of an interesting talk with a very distinguished electrical authority, Dr. Charles Siemens, electrical engineer, a member of the great London and German house of that name, says the Winnipeg Free Press.

Dr. Siemens, who has had practical personal experience of the application of electricity to mountain railways in Switzerland, was here on his way home from Japan, where he has been employed in an advisory capacity by the Japanese government with regard to the introduction of electricity in the railways of Japan, where some of the lines which are owned by the government traverse mountainous country in which waterfalls and swift flowing mountain streams would supply abundant power.

Mr. Siemens observed that as his mission to Japan was necessarily of a confidential character, he did not feel at liberty to discuss electrical progress in that country, but having on his way east from Vancouver made mental note of the physical features of the C.P.R., he had no objection to giving his views on the electrification of the Canadian Pacific as a practical proposition.

"When you speak of the electrification of the Canadian Pacific railway" said Dr. Siemens, "it must be understood that I do not postulate the introduction of electric power over all its ten thousand miles. I would not regard that as a practical proposal today, having regard to the cost it would entail and the vast amount of expensive equipment that it would throw out of service. Not $50,000,000, but hundreds of millions would have to be spent in new equipment or thrown away in the already existing rolling stock that would have to be discarded in order to make way for the electrical equipment which would have to be specially built—locomotives and cars of unique design.

"I am not surprised to find that it is the mountain section of the system that is spoken of as offering a possibly advantageous start for the introduction of electricity, for not only does the enormous quantity of water power running to waste offer an inviting prospect in the economic sense, but the operation of that part of the line by steam is of necessity extremely costly. The initial expenditure, supposing the whole of the mountain division were electrified, would on the lowest computation be very great, so great that it would have to be taken up in sections, assuming that the principal difficulty were overcome."

"And that difficulty is—"

"The difficulty—and it has to be faced at once—is the certainty of permanency of water supply in winter. Suppose the source of power in the mountains gets frozen up. The freezing up of all the waterfalls is impossible; but the waterfalls would not be the only source of power. There would be artificial dams across the rivers and other works of a structural character. The problem of the constancy of supply at high altitudes is certainly a grave one, probably the most serious that has to be encountered."

"But could it not be overcome by long-distance transmission?"

"That is what would have to be considered—the limit that would have to be assigned to distance. This would have to be subjected to economic as well as engineering tests. Then there is the application of the current to the purposes of traction."

"Wouldn't it be the trolley?"

"Oh, yes, it would have to be the trolley, but there is the question of whether it would be direct current, two-phase or three-phase alternating current. With a three-phase alternating current, which is the principle adopted by the New York Central with satisfactory results, I understand, there would have to be three wires, with two-phase four wires and with direct current two wires.

"The trouble with direct current as applied to long-distance traction is that safety necessitates a low voltage because there could be no transformer on the train. The transmission of the current at high voltage introduces elements of danger that you avoid with the alternating current. You have seen the sparks flying from the street cars during a rainstorm? That will illustrate what I mean. I mention these things just to show how little they know who talk about the electrification of the Canadian Pacific railway as if it were a thing that could be done in a day or even in a single generation."

"It is to be assumed that the electrification of the prairie section would be more difficult than the mountain?"

"More difficult in the practical sense, inasmuch as it would be the more costly to operate. If you are to rely on water power, it would have to be carried enormous distances, and you would have to depend upon that or manufacture the power from steam, which would mean that the coal would have to be mined in the mountains and hauled to the centres where you produce the power.

"One thing is sure, that if the company decides to electrify it will mean the creation of an enormous demand for electrical machinery, so that there will probably be great times ahead for the manufacturers of highly specialized electric equipment. It will mean this, even if carried out, as I think it would have to be by installments of comparatively small sections at a time."

A New Palace for the King

An incident which, in the opinion of "Ex-Attache," shows in a striking manner the popularity of King Edward is the very general expression of opinion that Buckingham Palace is not good enough for him, and that he should have a new official home. Not long ago it was announced that the exterior of the palace was to be cleaned an pointed, and beds of flowers put down where at present a vast expanse of gravel lies between the main entrance and the street railings. Some interior structural improvements were contemplated, in order to make it feasible for the palace to be thrown open to the public on certain days, and at the same time to preserve the privacy of the King and Queen.

An Unsightly Palace.

At once an outcry arose that it would be more sensible to have the unsightly block of buildings torn down at once, and a palace erected that would be more in keeping with the dignity of the ruler of the British Empire. Buckingham Palace, though it has an awesome sound, and though visitors may be impressed by what they presume to be its historical associations, is not admired by those who know it best. It is located where it fails to harmonize with the stately memorial to Queen Victoria, upon which, and its noble approaches, such vast sums of money have been spent. Were it possible to change the site of the palace, that surely would be done, for the mansion occupies low-lying ground. Its gardens are so beautiful and extensive, however, that the change is out of the question, especially since the erection of the Victoria memorial. The proposed new palace will remain in Pimlico; and though the Socialist-Labor party may be expected to vehemently oppose the spending of several million pounds on a new residence for the Royal family, there seems to be a general desire on the part of the public that ugly old Buckingham should be removed from the map.

Two Centuries Old.

Buckingham Palace, while far from venerable, is no springtly young palace, being something more than two centuries old. It was erected in 1703 on the former site of Arlington House in whose gardens was given the first tea party in England. As its name implies, the Duke of Buckingham built the palace—that Duke whose wife was the natural daughter of James II. The Duke did not occupy it long, and the next owner was George III., who paid $150,000 for the place, and settled it upon his consort. Here it was that all King George's children were born, except his eldest son. The insanity of the king, which made it necessary for him to be placed under restraint, deprived the palace of its Royal inmate, and for years it remained unoccupied. When George IV. came to the throne the place had become so neglected that the new King devised repairs and improvements on a truly Royal scale. The work was to have been carried out under the supervision of Nast, the architect, and had he been permitted to have his he might have done something worthwhile, even with such unpromising raw material.

A Sink-hole for $5,000,000

George IV., however, was continually insisting on an alteration of design, and when he died, in 1830 no less a sum than $5,000,000 had been spent on the palace and it remained uncompleted, and almost uninhabitable, the original red brick building of Buckingham's time having been lost in a mass of new buildings of stone and marble. It is recalled that in 1828, when the Duke of Wellington in the House of Lords was explaining the uses to which a new appropriation was to be put, he declared that "notwithstanding all the expense that has been incurred in connection with the palace, there is no sovereign in Europe—I may add, perhaps no private gentleman—who is so ill-lodged as the King of this country." When Queen Victoria came to the throne she chose Buckingham Palace because so many tragedies were associated with St. James' Palace, and because she did not wish to continue under her mother's wing at Kensington.

Modernizing Buckingham

So once more an army of carpenters, and masons, and decorators, swarmed over the Pimlico palace. In a few months its most glaring defects had been remedied, and the Queen took up her residence there, using St. James' Palace for all state functions. From time to time additions were made to the palace, such as another storey, an east wing, and the conversion of a conservatory into a chapel. At the time of the Crimean war the State ball-room was added. The Prince Consort, who was a clever landscape gardener, designing many improvements in the grounds. On the death of the Prince the Queen withdrew to Windsor, and for forty years Buckingham Palace remained closed. King Edward has spent some hundreds of thousands of pounds on the place, but it is a veritable sink-hole for money, and on the score of ultimate economy its destruction might be justified.

MRS. VAN SPACKEREN.

On Thursday night under the auspices of the Literary Club, Mrs. Van Spanckeren, of Lethbridge gave an elocution recital in the Methodist Church. "The Little Minister" as presented by the reader was one of the most pleasing entertainments of its kind that has been given in Medicine Hat. However one might differ from Mrs. Van Spanckeren's interpretation of certain details of the Gavin—Babbie scenes, she is a master of her art, and her pleasing appearance combined with a sweet, full voice made her evening's reading most acceptable to the audience.

Only those who suffer from piles can know the agony, the burning, throbbing, shooting, stabbing pains which this ailment causes and the way it wrecks the sufferer's life!

Zam-Buk is blessed by thousands who used to suffer from piles, but whom it has cured. One such grateful person is Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor of Greenwood Avenue, Toronto. She says: "For four long years I suffered acutely from bleeding piles. During that time I spent an immense amount of money on 'remedies' and doctor's prescriptions but I got no ease. Zam-Buk was different to everything else I had tried and it cured me. I am grateful for the cure, and as I have never had piles once since, I know the cure is permanent."

Another thankful woman is Mrs. A. E. Gardiner, of Catelina, Trinity Bay. She says: "In my case Zam-Buk effected a wonderful cure. For 12 years I had been troubled with blind, bleeding and protruding piles. I had been using various kinds of ointments, etc., but never came across anything to do me good until I tried Zam-Buk which cured me! That this may be the means of helping some sufferers from piles to try Zam-Buk is the wish of one who has found great relief."

Zam-Buk is a purely herbal balm and should be in every home! Cures cuts, burns, bruises, eczema, ulcers, blood-poisoning, itch, cold-sores, chapped hands and all diseases and injuries of the skin, etc. All druggists and stores at 50c box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

The Eye Opener Case

When Justice Beck delivered his opinion that the Eye-Opener "has been exercising a debasing and corrupting and demoralizing influence on the community," he struck a responsive chord in the heart of every decent Canadian. When he added that "the publisher of it is, in my opinion, entitled to very little consideration," he delivered a strong criticism on the manner in which the laws have been enforced.

When one stops to consider the terrible hold the Eye Opener was securing on the reading public, the seriousness of the situation was one that required drastic steps. Like a drug, the reading of filthy literature leads to a desire for more of the same kind and with the desire must come a looseness of morals that would work a slow but steady decadence in the life of the community. The man who read the Eye Opener was either ashamed of it or had a screw loose somewhere that would enable him to defend it.

There is no defence for such foulness as the Eye Opener presented in open form. Its best friends cannot assert that a filthy story can do any good. Even the exposures, true as they may have been, came from a source that deprived them of almost all their value. It would be ridiculous to accuse the Eye Opener of endeavoring to accomplish any real good by its exposures. The Eye Opener would never have the desire of good, upon its conscience, judging from the class of literature it fondled.

The Eye Opener, this election, happened to be favoring the Conservative party—far what reason only its editor himself knows. In the Provincial elections, it switched at the last moment for reasons which appear characteristic. But while it was working for the Opposition this election it is extremely doubtful if its support was of much benefit to the party. Not speaking for the party, but only for itself, The Times can say that it would prefer to lose with the opposition of The Eye Opener, than win through its assistance. Power thus acquired is of little value.

But with the Eye Opener practically out of existence, and a certain amount of credit coming to D. McGillicuddy of The Calgary News for his work, one can only hold out his hand after closing his eyes. McGillicuddy admitted in court having written the letter signed "Nemesis." And as The Times has said before, the man who would write the "Nemesis" letter, would make a prize-taking Eye Opener editor. The Times would be glad to openly shake McGillicuddy's hand over his work, but the same feeling that is shocked by the Eye Opener is sensitive to the "Nemesis" letter.

From the revelations at the trial the qualified congratulations to The Calgary News are still further diminished. That the attack on Edwards was largely an election dodge has become firmly fixed. This suspicion has existed from the beginning and no amount of explaining will dispel it. But when it is shown that fully 8,500 extra copies were sent out to Western cities, the details of the scheme appear simple enough.

A bunch of 1200 went to Edmonton, to an unknown man. Another lot of 500 went to Brandon to another unknown man. A later edition of 5000 went to Brandon, 1000 to Regina and 500 to Lethbridge. It is a significant commentary on the man whom the electors turned down in this riding, that Simmons was the Lethbridge man who received the 500 Lethbridge copies. If the name of Hon. F. Oliver were submitted for the unknown name in Edmonton, if the Brandon name were changed to "Sifton," if "Scott" appeared instead of the Regina name, would anyone be surprised? "Campbell" of Edmonton certainly did not secure 1,200 copies for his family to peruse; Fraser of Brandon scarcely needed 5,500 copies for file or reference. They were secured for the same reason that Simmons got his—and that is evident enough. And how was it that, if the letter emanated solely from the editorial office of The Calgary News, about 2,000 extra copies of it were sent to Brandon and Edmonton? Why should Edmonton want 1,200 copies of a certain date of a paper unless the buyer knew beforehand what was going to be in it?

McGillicuddy practically won on the decision. Had he written a more dignified, more sane, more reasonable letter over his own name, he would no doubt not only have secured the decision outright, but would now have the admiration and support of the whole West.

The Civic Elections

From the list of names suggested for next year's Council there promises to be one of the best administrative bodies that has ever sat in Medicine Hat. If the men suggested will sit there will be an end to the disturbing element that figures so largely in civic affairs, and just as important, there will be a practical revision of civic administration as carried on in the city hall offices.

Mr. Milne is, at present, the only aspirant for the Mayor's chair, and it is possible that he will secure the seat by acclamation. Mr. Milne has had experience and has many good ideas. Thus far Mr. Milne can fill the bill. Beyond this The Times will not go until another candidate whose qualifications appear to The Times as superior, presents himself. Mr. Milne's platform as published on another page, and as elaborated upon in conversation with The Times is commendable as far as it goes, and in that far the candidate has the support of this paper. At the same time The Times holds itself free at all times to support the candidate who, in its opinion, will best fill the bill. This can be said, that if Mr. Milne lives up to his experience and convictions as expressed, Medicine Hat will have little cause for complaint. With the improvements needed at the city hall, there is need for a lot of back bone in the Mayor, and Mr. Milne gives no evidence of unnecessary weakness.

His support on the Council will be as good as can be obtained—from present signs. Had a complete resignation of the Council been obtained civic affairs for 1909 would undoubtedly be handled by a fine lot of law makers. As it is there will probably be sufficient strong, honest workers to make their class of legislation prevail.

With Ald. Huckvale and W. Turpin or J. Howson from Ward 1, J. H. Collier and N. Spencer from Ward II. P. Robinson or H. Baker from Ward III., and Alds. Morrow and McKay from Ward IV., there will be a group of Aldermen who will handle the city's affairs as they have never been handled.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The C. P. R. is receiving a great deal of criticism for its policy of selling new stock at a cheaper price to old shareholders than to new. The Courier voices the general dissent in an argument that is most fallacious. It says that if it is wrong for the Government to give better prices to a supporter than a non-supporter it is equally wrong for the C.P.R. to do what it does.

There is, however, nothing analogous in the two examples. The Government is not considered as a party when it expends money, nor when it does anything as a Government. It is equally the servant and representative of the Conservative and Liberal and is under just as much obligation to one as the other. The C.P.R. is a private corporation and its shareholders are its special care.

Of course apart from this there are the strongest arguments against special prices to anyone, the most important of which is the fact that an agreement exists whereby the Dominion can control rates after the C.P.R. earns ten per cent.; and this special price creates watered stock.

The great freak of royalty, Emperor William has at last reached the point where he has been forced to sit down and look at himself. The stormy petrel of European politics has been brought up short by his own people. Things have been said and printed about him in Germany that will have a salutary effect upon his ideas of his omnipotence and responsibility. It may not be long until the self-satisfied emperor of Germany is raised from his throne and put down among the peoplewho have to obey, or at least be sensible.

Winnipeg is making a big blow about the "cheap" power they are to get. The Winnipeg Electric Railway Co. has offered to supply 10,00 horse power for ten years to city users for $18.30 per horse power per annum. If you figure out that Medicine Hat power costs about $2.25 per annum it is a matter of wonder how any manufacturer can look at $18.40 and be delighted.

The revelations of rake-off and graft in the Marine Department are just what was predicted by the Opposition six months ago. At that time a memorable 52 hour sitting was forced by the Opposition in order to secure some details of expenditure in this department. R. L. Borden knew there was waste, that someone was making money illegally and refused to allow certain estimates to go through without an accounting from Brodeur. By sheer pluck the Opposition secured what they wanted, and this investigation is the result.

It appears that Gregory, a department employe, has been receiving thousands of dollars every year in commissions. A dozen firms have reluctantly been forced to admit paying him five per cent. on the money they secured from the department. In some cases this amounted to $1,300 from one firm. This has been going on ever since Brodeur took hold of the department. To believe that the Minister knew nothing of it is to acknowledge his incompetence and unfitness for the position. A dozen of his employes were receiving a commission and the Opposition knew it before Brodeur, the head of the department. It is too much of a strain on one's imagination to believe Brodeur ignorant of the transactions. It places the Liberal party in another predicament. Like Sir Wilfrid, Brodeur must either be a rogue or a fool.

Surely the Liberals can take a lesson from the double defeat last week in B.C. Goodeve, the Conservative, almost doubled Curtis' vote in Kootenay, and in Yale-Cariboo Burrell gave Duncan Ross a most unmerciful beating, capturing every town in the constituency.

Hon. Frank Oliver and his little dog, Marshall, have been working both constituencies ever since October 26th, and it is a most touching comment on the style of campaign and men who tried to turn the vote to the Liberal side. It is also a public vote of censure on the petty style of campaign carried on by the Cranbrook Herald and the Liberal papers, whose strongest plea was to vote Liberal because the constituencies would then be able to pull the Government's leg for boodle or favors. Only in these two fights and in the Lethbridge Herald in the Medicine Hat constituency did such a contemptible style of campaign creep into print. Any paper that would use such an argument is a disgrace to journalism. It has entirely lost sight of its functions as a newspaper. All of these papers are sensible papers in the usual run, but elections will do about anything in the matter of influencing police.

Both these seats are Conservative gains.

Read how Mrs. T. G. Buck, Bracebridge, Ont., was cured (and also her little boy) by the use of

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

She writes: "I thought I would write and let you know the benefit I have received through the use of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A few years ago I was so badly troubled with my lungs people said I had Consumption and that I would not live through the fall. I had two doctors attending me and they were very much alarmed about me. I was in bed three months and when I got up I could not walk, so had to go on my hands and knees for three weeks, and my limbs seemed of no use to me. I gave up all hopes of ever getting better when I happened to see in B.B.B. Almanac that Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was good for weak lungs. I thought I would try a bottle and by the time I had used it I was a lot better, so got more and it made a complete cure. My little boy was also troubled with weak lungs and it cured him. I keep it in the house all the time and would not be without it for anything."

Price 25 cents at all dealers. Beware of imitations of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Ask for it and insist on getting the original. Put up in a yellow wrapper and three pine trees the trade mark.

In Labor Circles.

RESIGNATION OF HARDY AND MCVETY.

Winnipeg, Nov. 14.—As an aftermath of the recent Canadian Pacific mechanics strike, the union has demanded the resignation of Bell Hardy and J. H. McVety, the two men who arranged the settlement here by which the men returned to work. Much dissatisfaction was expressed at the time and since, the men claiming that it was a practical surrender and some of them accusing their leaders of having betrayed their interests.

Melbourne, Nov. 11.—Mr. Fisher, one of the radical labor leaders of Australia, will form the new Australian cabinet. The House defeated the Premier, Alfred Deakin, on a division. The laborites withdrew their support because the Government had not pushed labor measures radically enough to suit them. This will be the second time the Labor Party has been in power in the Australian Federal Parliament. J. G. Watson, another of the Labor leaders was Premier for a short time in 1904.

Denver, Col., Nov. 9.—Hearty applause greeted President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor today as he appeared before the delegates to the twenty-eighth annual convention of the Federation at the opening session. Cheers also followed the close of the report, which he read at the afternoon session. "The statement that there will be a big fight in the convention in regard to the action taken by President Gompers in the recent campaign will not be fulfilled," said John Mitchell, former president of the United Mine Workers of America, a delegate to the labor convention. "The action of Mr. Gompers was the result of instructions given him by the Federation at a previous convention, and he will have the support of the present convention. There may be a fight on the question of allowing the Federation to be brought into politics in the future, but I do not think that Mr. Gompers will be censured for the part he played in supporting Mr. Bryan."

Glenn Falls, New York.—Twenty-five striking paper makers of the Glenns Falls and Fort Edward's mills of the International Paper company returned to work yesterday By an almost unanimous vote the local branch of the paper maker's union decided last night to return to work in the International Paper company's mills at a reduction of five per cent. in wages.

Moncton, N.B.—The International Brotherhood of Railway Employees on the I.C.R. is no more, but the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Canadian Brotherhood of Railway employees has taken its place, and although the members of the former order are now members of the latter it is practically a new organizaton. A. R. Mosher, of Halifax, is now grand president, and M. M. McLean of Halifax, grand secretary-treasurer

London, Eng.—The firm of Sir Christopher Furness and company the greatest ship-building firm in England, will take its employees into partnership for one year, the employees accepting the alternative to end the long strife between them and the company. The world is watching the experiment with interest.

GOMPERS ON LABOR IN CANADA

Denver, Col., Nov. 9.—The annual report of President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor was read today.

Referring to the labor movement in Canada, Mr. Gompers says: "It is with much satisfaction that I can report the great growth in the labor movement among our co-workers in the Dominion of Canada. Those entrusted with the affairs of the movement both local and provincial in the Dominion are so earnest and loyal that they see to it that the interests of the workers are promoted both nationally and internationally.

"It is interesting to note that, despite the efforts of those who would sunder the reciprocal and beneficial international fraternal relation which exist among the workers of Canada, the United States and the entire continent of America, the bonds of unity and fraternity are constantly and more firmly cemented, the frequent intercourse of representative labor men with our fellows on both sides of the border, aided by our special organizer, Mr. John T. Flett, and the volunteer organizers' work of unification of the aims and aspirations of the workers are being beneficially, economically and materially fulfilled. The exercise of legislative and political rights must, of course, always be mutually recognized and conceded.

Labor Movement in Canada.

"In a report recently made by the secretary of the Dominion Trades and Labor congress, whom we honor and welcome with us today in the capacity of fraternal delegate to our conference, Mr. P. M. Draper says: "Without any exaggeration it can be said that never in the history of the labor movement in Canada has such progress been shown in the organization of the workers. The knowledge of its power when united has swept throughout the length and breadth of the country, and despite the old moth-eaten prejudice and self-interest; despite misrepresentation, persecution and coercion, the forces of labor have managed to unite. Today the organized workers in Canada breathe the same aspirations, harbor the same ambitions, the elevation and betterment of the struggle for the same end—name masses of toilers who suffer, not only from the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, but from the oppressive and unjust laws and their prejudiced administration, uncivilized conditions surrounding the every day worker, men women and children and more than the thousand and one ills that affect the flesh.

"Unbounded enthusiasm is the key-note of the movement in Canada. In every province throughout Canada. From British Columbia in the west to Nova Scotia in the east, the uplift has begun, the eyes of the toilers are at last opened to the futility of dependence upon others than themselves; they see the necessity for strong international organization. The urgency for sending their own representatives to the legislature to take part in making the laws which they must obey has appealed to them as never before, and a healthy optimism inspires the whole movement in such a way as to give promise of the most beneficial results.

Independent Political Action.

"The two strongest features of the labor movement in Canada at this juncture are:

"First, unswerving fidelity to the cause of international trade unionism; and, secondly, an equal loyalty to independent political action; support of the candidature of representatives of labor.'

The popularity of President Gompers was attested when he arose to call the convention to order, the delegates applauding Mr. Gompers for several minutes before he was allowed to make himself heard. In his address in response to the address of welcome, Mr. Gompers was frequently applauded.

TAKE THE HINT AND ACT NOW.

A new series of short stories is about to commence in The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal that are said to be the best ever offered to newspaper readers. A complete story will appear each week. The series alone is worth more than the whole year's subscription price, one dollar, and when one thinks of all the other good things that appear in that great weekly he can readily understand why the publishers so earnestly urge present subscribers to renew early and give them a chance to enter the thousands of new applications in December and January. It is safe to say that no person remitting a dollar for the Family Herald and Weekly Star for 1909 will regret it. Any farmer, particularly who is not a regular reader, is missing something he cannot afford to.

The Electoral College

The process of electing the president of an electoral college is one that it is perfectly amazing that the practical Americans have not got rid of long ago, says the Montreal Star. For generations the college has not even pretended to do the work for which it was founded. The theory was—as everyone knows—that the states would send their wisest citizens, irrespective of party, to an electoral college; and that these citizens, entirely unpledged beforehand, would there deliberate and pick out the one American best qualified to sit in the presidential chair. Of course, nothing of the sort happens. The members of the electoral college are merely counters in the game. Few people know who they are. They represent only so many republican or democratic votes for their respective states in favor of a definite set of candidates placed in nomination before they are chosen. Every man of them is bound in the most sacred way; and the nation would be outraged if they were to fail to elect the candidate to whom a majority of them were pledged.

But, while the collapse of the original plan is only grotesque, the result is the most unsatisfactory. New York, for example, has thirty-nine votes in the electoral college; and this tremendous block in a body consisting of only 488 members may be cast this way or that by 39 or even nine votes polled by individual electors. On the other hand, there are thirteen states which only total 39 votes in the college between them; and these votes may be divided against themselves, so as to affect nothing if the states possessing them go to different parties. Again, a very small majority may cast New York's 39 for the republicans, while a very large majority may cast the other 39 for the democrats. The result might be, of course, that the majority candidate would be seated—a result which was actually achieved in 1876.

Elections by constituencies, such as we have in this country, is open to the same objection; but to a very much lesser extent. Each constituency casts but one vote in our parliament, while New York casts 39, Pennsylvania 84, and Illinois 27. Thus the opportunities to kill a popular majority are multiplied in the American cities many fold. Then, again, a president is an officer who could easily be elected by a popular majority, Governors are elected that way; and they hold very analagous positions. The objection will be made that one state would not be willing to have its honest vote drowned out by what it would regard as a dishonest majority from another state; but this could be offset by splitting the states up into constituencies—say the congressional districts—and allowing them to choose only as many "electors" as these would furnish. This would have the advantage of dividing New York's 39 up and taking away from a small majority in that state so commanding a position in the contest.

Highclass Horses

Mr. D. Cargill of Seven Persons has brought some fine horses to Alberta. The description of these is as follows:

Colt Foal "Argaty" got by the celebrated breeding horse "Branson" the sire of the great champion "Oyama" and his dam was by the unbeaten champion "Hiawatha", his great dam was by the celebrated prize horse "Knight Errant" which as a yearling was unbeaten.

Colt Foal "Happy Boy" got by "Golden Gift" out of "Lady of the Border." This foals sire is out of the famous mare "Golden Queen" which was champion and Cobb Cup winner at the "Augus" Show and also champion at the "Royal Northern" show. His dam is by the H. and A. S. champion horse "Prince Thomas" and great dam by the first winner of the Cawdor Cup "Prince Alexander."

Colt Foal "Ben Turritt" got by the premium horse "Robin Hood" out of a mare by the prize horse "Lord Wolseley." This is an exceptionally promising colt and should be further heard of.

Colt Foal "Cromlix" got by "Baron Ruby" out of a mare by the first prize H. and A. S. great breeding horse "Rosedale." Great Dam by the Doune premium horse "McMaster" who was one of a short list of five for the Glasgow Premium in 1886.

Entire, 2 year old colt "Carse Blend" got by "Royal Blend" out of "Queen of Burnhead" who was got by "Rosedale." "Royal Blend" is full brother to Mr. Cargill's present stud horse, the well known "Favorite Blend."

Entire 2 year old colt "Carsbreck" got by "Royal Favorite" out of "Rosy of Carse of Trowan." Mr. Cargill has been fortunate in securing this colt as he is an exceptionally good one. He has plenty of size and stands on the best of legs and feet, and is sure to prove a breeder of horses suited to this country.

STOCKMEN INDIGNANT OVER YARDS.

(Winnipeg Telegram.)

The inadequacy of the Winnipeg stock yards was fully demonstrated yesterday when a complete blockade was witnessed and shippers were obliged to hold their stock penned u in the cars from twelve to fifteen hours before it could be unloaded. indignant and voiced their sentiments

The shippers and dealers were very indignant and voiced their sentiment most forcibly as to the want of more yard accommodation. Two trainloads arrived at 4 o'clock in the morning and it was five in the afternoon before they were unloaded. Two cars of sheep came all the way from Maple Creek and were held in their cars standing in the yards for eight hours after arriving. The buyers from off the M. & N. W. road were loudest in their complaints and they protested the conditions most strongly.

One and all claimed that something should be done to relieve the immediate congested condition and that it is almost impossible to follow business in the present quarters. It is claimed that the situation this year is graver than ever before and that while there has always been a rush every fall at the winding up of the season the stock heretofore was unloaded and fed waiting a few hours but this year the run is so heavy that the stock is held starving in the car for a greater length of time and the owners are powerless to remedy conditions. The fact is the west is every day paying more attention to live stock and if drovers where shrinkage deteriorates from their cattle subject to such conditions where shrinkage deteriorates from their profits they will not pay the farmer the price that he should receive. It is most evident that some immediate action should be taken to alleviate such deplorable conditions that at present confront stockmen.

NOW IS BEST TIME TO TAKE

A well-known authority on Rheumatism gives the following valuable, though simple and harmless, prescription, which any one can easily prepare at home:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.

Mix by shaking well in a bottle, and take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

He states that the ingredients can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost, and, being of vegetable extraction, are harmless to take.

This pleasant mixture, if taken regularly for a few days, is said to overcome almost any case of Rheumatism. The pain and swelling, if any, diminishes with each dose, until permanent results are obtained, and without injuring the stomach, while there are many so-called Rheumatism remedies, patent medicines, etc., some of which do give relief, few really give permanent results, and the above will, no doubt, be greatly appreciated by many sufferers here at this time.

Inquiry at the drug stores of this neighborhood elicits the information that these drugs are harmless and can be bought separately, or the druggists here will mix the prescription for our readers if asked to.

Mayoralty

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF MEDICINE HAT:—

I have been presented with a requisition signed by one hundred of my fellow citizens and ratepayers, requesting that I allow my name to be put in nomination for Mayor of our City for the year 1909. After due consideration I have decided to comply with the request.

If the City should express its trust in me, I shall keep in view the all-important necessity of keeping the Council in harmony with the City, so that it may be endowed with a vigor that will enable it to encourage our home industries and take full advantage of the many possibilities within our reach.

In selecting the various committees for the year it will be done with a view to have every ward properly represented, so that the needs of the city will receive attention. In regard to the sewerage system, I would favor building the septic tank and main trunk sewer connecting with the present system and afterwards extending as the rate-payers demanded.

I would also give special attention to improving and extending our water works and gas systems, so that they could be maintained in a high state of efficiency at a minimum of cost, with a view to a re-adjustment of water rates and taxation.

There has been some adverse criticism of the present system of Municipal book-keeping. If upon investigation, changes are necessary to keep the various accounts in such order that their actual condition can be ascertained at once, I would certainly support the reforms.

Indications point to a rapid development within our city in the near future, and our already extensive municipal enterprises, requiring more time than the Aldermen can devote to executive work, suggests that a system be adopted that will relieve them, and at the same time maintain a thorough system of supervision over the city's works. This question will have to be dealt with early in the year.

If elected my aim will be, with the assistance of a united Council and City, to make 1909 a banner year.

MISS LAUT'S DISCOVERY.

Montreal, Nov. 5.—Miss Agnes C. Laut, author and journalist, who has been spending some time in the West on a trip of exploration, has arrived in Montreal, en route to New York.

She has made a 1,500 mile canoe trip from Edmonton to Lake Winnipeg, one of her objects being to try and discover in the northern wilds a reed known to botanists as phragmates communis, which is of great interest and commercial value to certain manufacturers in the States. So far as had been known the only places where this reed grew was in Japan and China, but the United States government officials had reason to believe it might be found in Canada, and asked Miss Laut to look out for it.

Miss Laut claimed she has discovered this reed growing in Saskatchewan. She states that on her w- down the Saskatchewan river she saw a region two hundred miles east of Prince Albert, where the reed grows in profusion. In this particular spot the river jumps its bed and becomes a marsh seventy miles long. In wide strips which practically extend from Fort Cumberland to Lake Winnipeg, the reed abounds, growing sometimes as much as sixteen feet high. The Indians call it muskrat reed, because so many hundred of muskrats live in it. The presence of the reed gives a new value to what would otherwise be irreclaimable and waste land, and points the way to the development of a new and highly important industry.

The commercial value of the reed can be estimated, Miss Laut remarked, by the fact that about twenty million dollars' worth of matting are manufactured from it every year in the United States. An attempt has been made to grow the reed in Maine and the effort has been partially successful already. The aim of the United States government is to grow sufficient of this reed on the marsh lands—its natural home—to meet the needs of the manufacturer of matting. Hence the desire for information and specimens.

Miss Laut expresses an emphatic belief that it is the duty of the Canadian government to send experts to China and Japan to see how the reed is harvested and manufactured. In another dozen years it is probable that the United States will be producing its own reeds, but at present their markets are wide open for those reeds which are going to waste on the banks of the Saskatchewan.

THANKS.

Mrs. Af B. LeBlanc and family wish to express their thanks through the medium of The Times for the great kindness shown them during the recent bereavement. Especially thank the lady Foresters and brother Foresters for their kind help and sympathy.

Editor of The Times:

At a representative meeting of ladies last week, not called to discuss civic affairs, the question of the vacancies soon to be filled in Council and School Board was much to the fore. Those of us who aspire to fill the seats of the mighty may well be sighing—"Ah wad the power the giftie gie us." We're certainly out in the cold. For Mayor we are to have a man of size and distinction, and one lady thoughtfully added—"With Ideas". Consequently Mr. Drinnan, Mr. Niblock or Mr. Hawthorne would fill the bill. Surely we might have one of the three." "Yes, surely," came the echo.

The popular citizens to receive aldermanic honors are Mr. S. T. Hopper, Mr. Fatt, Mr. J. J. Mahaffy, Major Sissons and Mr. J. H. Collier. And then between the embroidery stitches the new School Board was elected. It grew too large and was finally reduced to proper dimensions. The following much-to-be-envied individuals remained on the list.

THAT "WISE OLD CITY."

Montgomery, Ala., was delighted with the performance of the Schubert Symphony Club and Lady Quartette, and from the collection of testimonials from the most excellent of people we clip the following, from that sterling gentleman and scholar, Rev. Dr. W. Dudley Powers, Rector of St. John's Chapel: "Your entertainment was very satisfactory to all who saw it, and has received warm compliments from all to whom I have spoken. I regard it as a refined, artistic and pleasant entertainment. To me your company gave exceptional pleasure, and I shall always be glad to give any word of commendation that may be of service to you." The best people are always the best pleased with the Schubert's. Your last chance to hear them here is at the Opera House on Tuesday, November 24th.

The Safe Range—Burns Natural Gas

McClary's "Caloric" Gas Range has A "Safety" Lighter

Nine out of ten women are afraid to light the oven burners of an ordinary gas range But the owner of a "Caloric" never hesitates to light the oven burners. "Caloric" has a "Safety" Lighter, which is directly connected with oven burners. Just place lighted match at Safety Lighter, and turn on oven burners. A small flame first appears at the "Safety," and this small flame is immediately carried to the oven burners which are lighted instantly. No accumulation of gas or possibility of explosion on the "Caloric." The "Caloric" is not an ordinary range, but is "different" in many ways, as you can see for yourself by calling at to grow sufficient of this reed on the marsh lands—its natural home— to meet the needs of the manufacturers of matting. Hence the desire for information and specimens.

Miss Laut expresses an emphatic belief that it is the duty of the Canadian government to send experts to China and Japan to see how the reed is harvested and manufactured. In another dozen years it is probable that the United States will be producing its own reeds, but at present their markets are wide open for those reeds which are going to waste on the banks of the Saskatchewan.

MANY DON'T KNOW
HEART AFFECTED.

More People Than are Aware of It Have Heart Disease.

"If examinations were made of everyone, people would be surprised at the number of persons walking about suffering from heart disease."

This startling statement was made by a doctor at a recent inquest. "I should not like to say that heart disease is as common as this would imply," said the expert, "but I am sure that the number of persons going about with weak hearts must be very large."

"Hundreds of people go about their daily work on the verge of death, and yet do not know it. It is only when the shock comes that kills them that the unsuspected weakness of the heart is made apparent."

"But undoubtedly heart weakness, not disease, is more prevalent nowadays. I should think that the stress of living, the wear and rush of modern business life, have a lot to do with heart trouble."

There is no doubt but that this is correct, and we would strongly advise any one suffering in any way from heart trouble to try a course of MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS.

Price 50 cts. per box or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A Bad Wreck

Ten Cars Smashed Near Bridge

Crews of Both Trains Escape Serious Injury

As the resdlt of the failure of the airbrake on an eastbound freight, a bad collision occurred early on Thursday morning between this train and a yard engine engaged in shunting in the local C.P.R. yards.

The freight, which was a heavily loaded train, pulled up before the descent of the grade began and the air brakes were tested in the customary way. The train was then allowed to drift, and all seemed well until at the mile board it was found that the brakes would not obey. The engineer, Walter Leveque, whistled for the hand brakes to be applied, but this was not carried out soon enough and the train crashed into the yard engine on the city side of the bridge. Ten of the freight cars were damaged, most of them being completely wrecked. The yard engine was smashed the cars behind it broke loose and were carried a considerable distance down the yard by the momentum imparted by the impact with the incoming train. The yard crew (Engineer Furois and Fireman C. Leveque) escaped without injury, having leaped from their engine when the impossibility of backing their train out of danger became apparent. A. Flynn, fireman of the freight train, was not so fortunate. He was down on the steps on the left side preparing to jump when his hands were trapped between collapsing parts of the engine. Water Leveque was caught between the seat box and the brake valve and sustained several leg bruises. These were the only men injured.

On Thursday morning large crowds gathered in the vicinity of the wreck while the gang were clearing the track. Shortly after noon the line was repaired and the trains which had been delayed several hours were able to pass through.

Lumber, cement and canned salmon were the principal contents of the wrecked cars. One car of lumber was consigned for the Revelstoke Lumber Co. The fish was passing through in bond to the States, and the loss in this will be considerable to the company. Quite a large number of cans were stolen.

The damage to rolling stock will amount to about $15,000 and when all claims are met the total loss will be in the neighborhood of 2025,000.

There were 39 cars on the freight train, five of these being empties. A couple of flat cars weretelescoped in the centre of the bridge, but no serious damage resulted here.

It is a somewhat remarkable coincidence that Engineer Leveque exly a year prior to last week's disaster was in a head-on collision w th a yard engine at Lethbridge.

Mountod Police Notes

Robert McAuley, who escaped from the custody of the Mounted Police at Coleridge a couple of weeks ago, while being brought up from Lethbridge to Medicine Hat to be tried for theft, was recaptured at Walsh by Constable Ashe on Tuesday last.

On Wednesday morning the accused appeared before Mr. Kealy, charged with the theft of four dinner knives 5 forks, 3 tea knives and other articles from Mrs. Allen of this city. McAuley was at the time working for Mr. Robt. Mitchell carting stones from A. P. Burns' place and doing odd jobs around the new house. Choosing a favorable moment, the man stepped into Mrs. Allan's house and hastily pocketed all the articles of value which he could lay hishands on. The goods were recovered from his shack at 109 Ross Street, on October 22.

McAuley had just completed a term in jail at Lethbridge for assault, and when he made his dash for liberty at Coleridge. He was sentenced to three months imprisonment by Mr. Kealy for the theft, and in the afternoon His Honor Judge Mitchell sentenced him to another couple of months for breaking jail.

Hugh Lynch was fined $3 on the 17th inst., for being drunk and incapable on the previous day. On the 18th J. J. Vance was fined $1 for being drunk and disorderly.

ELECTION CROOKEDNESS.

Brockville, Nov. 19.—John Derbyshire, son of Senator Derbyshire, was committed by Magistrate Dineen on a charge of bribery on election day. The case was begun last week, and today the magistrate refused to hear further evidence, although Derbyshire's counsel fought strenuously. Derbyshire was an active worker for Hon. G.P. Graham, and on the morning of the election two men in hiding at the home of John Etherington swore they overheard him offer to pay Etherington after the polls were closed if he voted for the minister o, railways.

The Liberals threaten to retaliate by prosecuting several prominent Conservatines against whom they claim to have charges of bribery and corruption, which will be pushed to the bitter end. 6

P. E. I. ELECTIONS

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Nov. 20.—Today's returns show the government apparently in the saddle, but with a majority of only two. Premier Hassard's majority of 192 is an increase of 122 over last election Sinclair's defeat in first Queen's is confirmed.

In Summerside McNeil, Conservative has a majority of 82 over Jardine and Wyatt, Conservative. 24 over Clark.

Captain Joseph Reid, Liberal, was defeated by 19.

The leader of the opposition has a majority of 42.

John Richards, who was elected by majority of nearly 500, will likely be the new commissioner for agriculture in place of Ker S.E. Rem.

The government will have a majority of one one and as some of the majoritigs are very small the tenure the government is none too secure.

The commissioner of pub,ic works has 30 majority and the attorney general 88.

DISTRICT COURT

At the district court last week the case of Mort vs. McMaster washeard before His Honor Judge Mitchell. Mort sued McMaster for the unpaid balance of $15 on a cow purchased for $80. Judgment for plaintiff, the value of cow set at $25. W. w. Begg appeared for plaintiff; D. G. White for defendant. The other four cases were left over till the next district court.

THE SCHUBERT CLUB

All along the line the reports of the Schubert Symphony Club concerts are most laudatory. Their musical programme has created an excellent impression and Medicine Hat people should not miss the concert to-morrow night.

Musical programmes are all too few here, and when one of such excellence is offered it should not be missed.

Teachers' Convention

WELL ATTENDED MEETINGS

OFFICERS ELECTED FOR COMING YEAR

Theeastern Alberta Teachers met in convention on Friday last in the Toronto St. school. The attendance was good and several teachers from the surrounding country came into the city for the occasion. Inspector J.W. Brown was present and made many valuable suggestions to the teachers throughout the day, and of the city pastors the Rev. Mr. and the Rev. Mr. Parrell attended the morning session and delivered interesting addresses.

The convention opened with a paper on History by Miss J. Fraser, who emphasized the importance of the culture side of this sub-ect and advocated more attention being given to Civics than has hitherto been done.

Miss Best followed with an excellent paper on primary reading. In this Miss Best proved herself a skiled teacher in phonetics.

After a short intermission an admirable paper on Literature was read by Mr. Ware who touched upon the importance of literature as a means of culture, and also spoke upon the aim and general method of teaching this subject.

In the afternoon Miss Morrison contributed a practical paper on spelling. The Assm was of opinio that greater attention should be given to the visual rather than to the auditory method.

One of the most interesting discussion of the convention was ar used by Mr. Hill's paper on Penmanship. Mr. Hill illustrated his method by a number of excellent examples of penmanship. The medial slant as illustrated was the system recommended. An effort was made to show the superiority of this over the Spencerian and vertical styles. Quite a lively discussion followed and the general unanimous opinion was that the medial slant is the best after all.

The closing paper on Grammar was contributed by Mr. Sanson, who laid stress on the importance of grammar as a means of developing the powers of the child.

Mr. Sanson showed further that the proper study of the subject would lead to language improvement.

Before the adjournment the election of officers took place with the following results:

Hon. President—Inspector Brown
President.—Mr. C. Sanson.
Sec.-Treas. Mr. D.R. Ware.
Committee.—Miss Taylor, Mr. Daykin and Mr. Kingley.

STOCKMEN TO MEET

The regular fall public meeting of the Central Alberta Stock Growers' Association will be held in Red Deer on Nov. 26t

The meeting is ohen to all and it is expected that there will be a very large attendance. There will be a specially prepared programme and large number of the best informe men in the province will take part. Among them wil be C. B. Phillips Asker; R. G. G. Matthews, Macleod; W.R.D. Robinson, Jumping Point; E. G. Palmer, Edmonton; T. M. Morgan, Medicine Hat; J. Fletcher, president A.F.A.; E.J. Fream, secretary A.F.A. and representatives of the provincial and Dominion governments.

:o:

Rev. J. W. Bell, of Maple Creek, will give a lecture to-night in the basement of the Methodist Church under the auspices of the Epworth League. The lecture is entitled "Hearts of Oak," or "Deeds that made the Empire."

Mr Hans Russum, of Bowell, was in the city on Monday.

Mr. Paul Lecieux and Mr. H. Robichand, of Coleridge, were in town on Saturday.

Two engines collided in the C.P.R. yard this morning about 8 o'clock in the neighborhood of the coal chute. Both engines (a yard engine and an engine just in from a run) were trying to make the switches at the same time, and both were running backwards. The side of the big engine was badly damaged at the front and the yard engine tender was broken up.

STANDING OF TWO PARTIES.

With the two deferred British Columbia elections over, there remains only one constituency yet without a member—the Yukon, where the elections will not take place for some time. The standing of the parties is now 86 Conservatives and 134 Liberals, giving the government a majority of 48, a reduction from the last house of 18, as 66 was the usual majority of Laurier. Ralph Smith and A. Verville, who are regarded as labor men, are placed in the Liberal column, as they generally vote with the government. West of the Lakes the parties have split even. There are thirty-four seats and seventeen are held by the Conservatives and seventeen by the Liberals. The following is the standing of the parties now:—

Masquerade Ball

A BRIGHT AFFAIR

A HUNDRED MASQUERADE IN GAY GARB

The fancy dress ball given in the Opera House last Thursday night by the Ladies Auxiliary of St. Barnabas Church, was a grand success. Although the preparation for it was hurried, and participation meant a lot of trouble and time, there was a large crowd of merry-makers and the evening was pronounced one of the most pleasant of the season.

About 80 to 100 were in costume and not one of them but showed thought and care. The prizes were carried off by Miss Frances Barrett as "Harold Nelson's Leading Lady," and Mr. Donovan as "Lo, the Poor Indian." Young men were there as women, women represented girls; actors, Indians, clowns, tramps, jesters, dancing girls, gypsies, and dozens of other standard characters were represented.

The proceeds were to be divided between St. Barnabas Church and the Hospital, and about a hundred dollars were netted.

The ladies of the Auxiliary of St. Barnabas Church appreciate the services of Dr. Smith in providing music for the douce.

The Children on the Prairie

The following poem was received by the secretary of the Teacher's Association last week bu, was unfortdnately too late to be read before the convention -

Little children of the North West
Trunging miles across the plain
To the school house on the prair
Through the gale and snow rain.

With your shawl around you fasteged,
Or your cap or muffler gay,
With your dinner pail and satchel,
You are gaining day by day.

Wisdom gathered through the ages,
Thoughts of great men, wise and true,
If you learb and use taem rightly,
What doors lie unlocked to you!

For this great and grand new country
Holding wealth and stretching far
Is yohr own to shape and fashion,
'Tis for you to make or mar.

Yes, you teachers of the North-West
You are guiding, hour by hour,
Minns that soon must guide this cohntry,
On to progress anb to pawer.

Then with patiebce lead them bnwarh,

The paper has been refused the mails and it is understood that the C. P. R. will refuse to allow it on their trains.

A HANGING AFFAIR.

The $3.00 fine which was levied on Frank Wells on Saturday morning, was a small price to pay for the service rendered by the chief of police On Friday evening Wells had been enjoying himself after his fashion, and after partaking so freely of various cordials he started out on a litle private excursion. He did not know exactly where he was going, but when the chief spotted him he was on his way across the railroad bridge. He had travelled as far as in his happy state he was able to toddle, and was hanging over the edge of the bridge, liable at any instant to fall to almost certaindeath below, when the Chief Meiklejohn overtook him and saved him from the perilous situation. He was rescued at precisely the same spot as that from which the unfortunate Charles Calkins fell only a few days before.

Spur Line Difficulties in First Agreement and Second Site More Suitable

A special meeting of the council was held on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock for the purpose of discussing certain changes in the agreement with the sewer pipe company in regard to location. There were present the Mayor, Alds. McKay, Spencer, Forster, Tweed, Hucpvale.

Mr. Overpack addressed the council in regard to the changes desired. He stated that he had been here four weeks trying to make an arrangement which he had expected to have completed in one week's time, and he would be compelled to leave the city that day. Several citizens had spoken about the substitution of a site in Industrial Place for the site mentioned in the first agreement and he would be willing to accept such a change the other conditions being as before. The Mayor pointed out that the city had arranged the question of a spur track to this property.

The matter of water supply was discussed at same length. Mr. Overpack stated that alkaline water would be useless for his purpose, but if water free from all alkali were obtainable from the springs it would be satisfactory. Otherwise he would asv the use of water from the city supply. Not more than one hundred barrels of water per day would be required.

Ald. Hucky said he was decidedly favorable to the substitution Ald. Tweed thought an omission had been made in the agreement (as he gathered from the newspaper agreement) in regarh to tae employment of a minimum of sixty men, and accordingly the solicitor brought up the agreement and read the covering clause. As a matter of fact both papers published this clause in full.

Ald. Spencer thought that it might appeal to the ratepayers more if the title to the property were to be left in the hands of the city for a longer period. The Mayor, however, did not thinu it necessary to mave such urovision as he bid not believe the company would put the amount of money they were investing in the ulant unless they intenden to run.

Mr. Overpack raised a point in connection with the road to the new site. He did not wish to make an addition to the agreement but would like the city to grade thi road. It was a very practicable grade.

There was some biscussion as to the right-of-way from block A to block B (the blocks chosen by Mr. Overpacn) as there is a row of track lots between the properties. The solicitor pointed out that the agreement with the city was to give the right-of-way right on to the property; this natural,y included the right.of-wa across these track lots.

The following, moved by Ald. Forster, seconded by Ald. Mc—ay carried unanimously;

Resived that clause "A" in agreement and dated 18th day of November, 1908, agd passed by the city council be altered (if foond necessary through inability to procure spur line to the ,and described in the said clanse "A" to apply to blocks A and B in Industrial Place, about 3 acres the same other conaitions to apply; the reasons for making the change in the proposed site being as stated by Mr. Overpack that he did not thinu his company could make suitable arrangements to procure trackage to property described in said clause "A" in the original agreeffient.

IRVINE DANCE.

The band boys and about a dozen other citizens went out to Irvinelast Thursday night to give a concert and dance. A big crowd had gathered at the hall, but on account of the lateness of the train, it was thought the boys were not coming and a large number went home.

However the concert commenced at 9.30 and was a big success as far as the program went. The Irvinites were well pleased and it was most unfortunate that many had left the hall.

ATHLETICS

Catcher Ford, drafted by the Athletics in 1907, but did not report, was expelled from organized baseball for playing with Brandon, of the Northern League, under an alias, while he belonged to the Philadelphia club. The Brandon club will be fined $250 for harboring him.

Ford was well known here, having played in 1906 with the local club. In 1907 he was the regular backstop of the Edmonton club.

Ford had a good future before him and it is hard to figure why he did not repast to Connie Mack's Athletics, and if he had not made good in the American league it is easy that he would have been loaned to a club paying bigger wages than Brandon could afford to do, besides a season with the Athletics would have taught Ford many things which go to make a great ball player. Ford played for Brandon under the name of Mills.—Calgary Albertan.

Alf. Fidler is again busy figuring out how Calgary can have good baseball next year. There is already a good live proposition on with President Lamb to form an all-Canadian league, but Fid's new proposition will place Calgary in the Northwestern league in Butt's place. Russ Hall, the owner of the Butte franchise, has stated that there will be no more ball in Butte as far as he is concerned, because ball in that city is not a paying proposition. Although the Butte finished their engagement in the Northwestern league last season, only twelve games were played at home, the balance of the games being played away from home through lack of support.

Alf. Fidler dopes it out that it would be a good paying proposition if Calgary could get into the league with such large cities as Spokane, Seattle and Vancouver. Calgary could hold her own at home for attendance, while on the road it would easily be a paying game, as all the cities are large and draw big gates. The distance Calgary would have to travel to Seattle, the farthest city in the league would be 860 miles, while there are stop-over cities en route, so that at most the distance is not so far as the proposed Canadian league, with Winnipeg and Brandon.

Alf. Fidler is in communication with Russ Hall, and will make a proposition to buy out his franchise or make him an offer to transfer his franchise to Calgary himself. Work Stops at Lethbridge.

Nelson, B.C.—Four crack hockey players of the champion Kenora team are coming west to play with the Nelson Hockey Club this winter, in an effort to bring the Stanley cup to this place. The Patrick Brothers, millionaire lumbermen, are back of the movement, which has been officially announced by G. H. Nelson, who played cover on the Nelsonteam last year.

The three men coming from Kenora are Tom Phillips, the greatest forward in the hockey world, and Si Griffiths and Beaudro; also Kennedy, of Winnipeg, all fast players. This quartette will form the backbone of the team, on which Frank Patrick, son of the lumber king, and last year captain of the Montreal Victorias, will also figure.

The Patricks are putting up $2,500 for the expenses of the team, and are also furnishing the lumber for the construction of a fine new rink, the largest west of Winnipeg. The team will be started eastward about the middle of January and will play exhibition games at Edmonton, Calgary, Brandon, Regina and Winnipeg and possibly Toronto and Ottawa.

The boys are trying to push the hockey league. The Cypress Club is formed and the Fire Brigade is talking of a team. The banks may also form one. If there is ice there will be a league.

Manager Fred Whitcroft, of the Edmonton hockey team, challengers for the Stanley cup, was in town yesterday with three of his players viz. Steve Vair, centre, formerly of Barrie and Renfrew; Harold Macnamara right wing, formesly of the Montreal Shamrocks, and Bert Lindsay, goalkeeper, formerly of Renfrew.

The four left for Edmonton last night. At Winnipeg they will be joined by Chas. Poulin, the sensational forward of last year's Manitoba League, and Hugh Ross, coverpoint of the Portage la Prairie team Franv Patrick of Nelton, B.C. is expected to play point.

The players will reach Edmonton on Sunday and will get on the ice on Monday for their first practice.

THE STODDART STOCK CO.

Beyond a doubt the Stoddart Stock Company is the superior of any similar organization that has visited Portage la Prairie this season. Their long run in Fort William is easily explained if slang is pardonable, in three words, "they made good." A house almost as large as that which greeted Teddy Webb in "The Toy maker" was deeply appreciative of Miss Stoddart, Mr. Stewart and their cauable company.

Mr. Stewart, in the title role displays a true and sympathetic knowledge of the character of Tom Moore Ireland's great poet. At times the tension was strained to the verge of breaking when just asthe handkerchief became evident, some thing happy was said or happened, and the tension was considerable lessned.

Individually the entire company scored a triumph, and beyond doubt large crowds will greet these able players during the remainder of the week.—Portage la Prairie Graphic.

The above company will open at Opera House for three nights starting Thursday, Nov. 26th, opening plat "Tom Moore."

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

Is A Remedy Without An Equal For COUGHS, COLDS, And All Affections Of The THROAT and LUNGS.

Coughs and Colds do not call for a minute recital of symptoms as they are known to everyone, but their dangers are not understood so well. All the most serious affections of the throat, the lungs and the bronchial tubes, are, in the beginning, but coughs and colds.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the admonition to all persons affected by the insidious earlier stages of throat and lung disease, as failure to take hold at once will cause many years of suffering, and in the and that terrible scourge of "Consumption."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is not Sold as a Cure for Consumption but for affections tributary to, and that result in, that disease. It combines all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth, and is absolutely harmless, prompt and safe. So great has been the success of this wonderful remedy, it is only natural that numerous persons have tried to imitate it. Don't be humbugged into taking anything but "Dr. Woods." Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

A FARMER'S WANT SUPPLIED

Some farmers are under the impression that they must have a purely agricultural paper to supply agricultural information, but they overlook the fact that there is a Canadian publication that not only furnishes the most reliable information pertaining to the farm but at the same time furnishes them with a newspaper giving the news of the world and a magazine every week as good as any of the English or American magazines in qdlaity and quantity of good wholesome family reading. The paper alluded to is The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal, which costs but one dollar a year and is the greatest value to be had. It is a weekly newspaper family magazine and agricultural paper combined—all three in one—and if any farmer after giving it a trial does not think it the best value on the market he can have his money back. No farm house in Canada can afford to be without Canada's great est paper—The Family Hearld and Weeuly Star of Montreal.

A WESTERN AUTHORESS.

Gertrude Balmer Watt, of Edmonton, who is responsible for "The Mirror" in The Edmonton Saturday News, has just issued a booklet entitled "Town and Trail," containing a selection of the "Mirror" writings published since "A Woman in the West" was given the public.

Mrs. Watt has an easy, natural expression in her writings that gives her a most prouninent position among Western writers. "Town and Trail" is not only a book of bigger ambitions than "A Woman in the West" but is of higher calibre throughout, and that implies something most pleasing. The book is valuable as giving a "glimpse of life in this part of the Dominion.

BRONCHITIS

Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather, and is a very dangerous inflammatory affection of the bronchial tubes.

The Symptoms are tightness across the chest, sharp pains and a difficulty in breathing, and a secretion of thick phlegm, at first white, but later of a greenish or yellowish color. Neglected Bronchitis is one of the most general causes of Consumption.

Cure it at once by the use of

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine SYRUP

Mrs. D. D. Miller, Allandale, Ont., writes; "My husband got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for my little girl who had Bronchitis. She whoosed so badly you could hear her from one room to the other, but it was not long until we could see the effect your medicine had on her. That was last winter when we lived in Toronto.

"She had a bad cold this winter, but instead of getting another bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I tried a home made receipt which I got from a neighbor but found that her cold lasted about twice as long. My husband highly praises 'Dr. Wood's,' and says he will see that a bottle of it is always kept in the house."

The price of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 25 cents per bottle. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, so, be sure and accept none of the many substitutes of the original "Norway Pine Syrup."

APPLES, THEIR VALUE—HOW TO PREPARE THEM.

By Mrs. C. W. Sim.

The apple, which is one of the most wholesome fruits we have, should be eaten freely in all families, especially at the season when it is abundantand cheap. It should often be used on the table as a desert.

Apples are considered wholesome, even when eaten raw.

One taken at breakfast every morning is supposed to be good for the complexion, and those who suffer from liver trouble or gout would do well to use them freely. The apple is an excellent brain food because it has more phosphoric acid in easily digestible shape than any other fruit or vegetable known. It excites the action of the liver, promotes sound and healthy sleep, and thoroughly disinfects the mouth.

When a tickling sensation in your throat warns you of the coming of a cough, you would find a tablespoonful of the pulp of a roasted apple taken at night a great relief.

Dyspeptics are often ordered apples and, curiously enough, they are a preventive of jaundice.

The reason why apples are so much more wholesome and digestible when they are roasted, boiled or baked, is because the heat thus applied breaks down the cells and thus the acid and the sugar contained in them are more generally diffused through the apple, and the moisture is also dispersed.

The apple when fresh contains on an average 84.6 per cent of water, but when dried, only 26.1 per cent of water. When fresh one pound of apples has a fuel value per pound of only 200 calories while when dried it has 1,350.

"The apple is the cure all" of the fruit kingdom.

How to Prepare Them—A very nice way of cooking apples is to core and pare them and place them in a granite pan. Having filled the space left by the removal of the core with butter and white sugar, sprinkle sugar and bits of butter about between the apples in the [illegible] bake.

Apple and Orange Salad.—After removing skin and scraping off the pulp into a bowl, mix with the slices some apples cut into quarters or eighths, put plenty of sugar in between each layer and mix well, make about an hour before you need to use it.

Apple Jelly.—Pare and cut in thin slices three or four juicy, sour apples. Place a layer of the slices in a bowl sprinkle them liberally with sugar, put in another layer of apples and sugar, and so on until the apples are all used, having sugar on top. Place a cover over the dish and bake for two hours in a moderate oven. When this is cold it will turn out like a mould of jelly. Serve it with a nice boiled custard or whipped cream.

Spiced Apples.—Make a syrup of equal parts of sugar, water, and vinegar, adding a few whole cloves and a few pieces of stick cinnamon. When scalding hot put in firm tart apples peeled and quartered, and cook very gently until tender but not broken. remove them with a skimmer, boil the syrup down till it thickens and pour over the apples.—Ontario Women's Institute.

Hudson's Bay Railroad

The project of building a railway to Hudson Bay, from which port to ship the wheat of the Western prairies by a shorter route to the European markets, is now a matter of great public import, as the Federal Government have decided to begin construction. With the advantage which a water route from Fort Churchill to Liverpool will give tothe Canadian wheat farmer he will secure better prices for the wheat grown, and will have a more satisfactory means of shipment. The country to the north in the direction of Hudson Bay has been opening up steadily for the past twenty years, and now the railways traverse much of the land where wheat faeming is most profiwhere wheat farming is most profitably pursued. The wheat country is now at work producing its millions of bushels of grain, which at present goes mostly over the Great Lakes on its way to the Old Country. In this way it has to be carried from Fort William to the sea in lake boats,and is then transferred to the big ocean liners, which take it across the water. In shipping wheat out through Hudson Bay this transfer will be avoided from the fact that the ocean liners will be able to load from the cars at Fort Churchill or from the immense elevators at that point within the next few years. The water route from Fort William is 3,956 miles, from Fort Churchill to Liverpool is only 2,950, making a saving of more than 1,000 miles at the outset. Winnipeg is approximately 400 miles from the lakes and 900 miles from Fort Churchill so that even from the eastern part of the wheat field there will still be an advantage by the Bay route, From the wheat fields of Saskatchewan and Alberta the Bay route will give an advantage of fully 1,000 miles, in addition to the saving in freightrates caused ny facility of shipment on the Bay route. The West has been planning on the great northern water route for many years, but has never before had a Federal Government take the project in hand with a determination to prosecute it to a successful issue.

A Northern Visit

The railway to Hudson Bay, which is now assured, and the right of way for which is now being located by Government surveyors, is but a short stretch of line compared with several other railways in Canada. A part of the road has already been constructed by the Canadian Northern as far as the Saskatchewan River at The Pas Mission, which is distant in a straight line 480 miles from the Bayf The line to The Pas connects with the Prince line of the C.N.R. at Hudson Bay Junction, and runs in a north-easterly direction for 90 miles before reaching the Saskatchewan. Over thisline and through the surrounding country the writer recently made an excursion to see what was being done towards reaching the Bay. The country from which the Hudson Bay runs in Saskatchewan is a rich timber district, where mills are in operationand from which lumber is being daily sent to build up the prairie towns of the West. There is but one settlement on the Hudson Bay line, and that is the location of the Ruby Lake Lumber outfit six miles up the line on the lake of the same name. From there to The Pas there is no settlement, and the country immediately adjoining the road is of a character which precludes the possibility of ever being thickly populated. The timber is small, and there is a great deal of muskeg through which the road runs, and even though this be dry the timber growing upon it is scrubby, and will not be valuable commercially.

Hudson's Bay Junction.

Hudson Bay Junction, or Etiomami as the southern terminus of the road is called, is about two years of age, and has a population of well up to two hundred souls. Business is decidedly brisk during the fall and winter, when large gangs of men are employed in the surrounding lumber camps. The town boasts two good hotels, several general stores, a billiard room, hospital, mounted police barracks, and all that young town needs. The depot at this town is small, but plenty large enough for the present business needs. Along the line to The Pas the C.N.R. have constructed sidings every nine miles, and at every 18 miles they have erected a handsome depot. The depot on the Saskatchewan River is one which would be a credit to any town of 5,000 inhabitants in many parts of the West. It is evident that the builders had faith in the country judging by the investment they have already made and upon which they are still planning.

The 90 miles of the line to the Bay runs through a very level country, and it will be very easy to handle heavy loads over this line when the stream of wheat turns towards the great natural outlet at the north. Ballasting has already been completed over 22 miles of the road, and the gravel has been dumped on the line for ten miles further. The construction gangs left the road two months ago to continue work on the Goose Lake line, but returned last week,and will continue ballasting furthernorth. It is expected by the people at The Pas that the road will be operating as far as the Saskatchewan River before the end of the year. At present the chief mode of conveyance over the line is by hand cars anh jiggers (railway velocipedes), which run between Etiomami and The Pas. By means of these conveyances, even without a regular train running, the town at The Pas has been brought fully a month nearer to civilization than it has been for the past half century. Indians now load half a ton of freight on a hand car, and carry it northward to the river, and passengers go to and fro on thesame rigs. It is not the easiest mode of travelling, as the writer, who toiled for a couple of days at the pumping gear of a jigger, can testify.

The Pas Mission.

The Pas Mission has a most beautiful location on a bend of the Saskatchewan, at the junction of the Pasquia, where the river is naturally about 600 feet in width, but by the bend is widened to a quarter of a mile. Out this splendid expanse of water the townspeople have a magnificent view, which they fully appreciate. The town has a population of over 500 people, of whom 400 are Indians. Until two years ag, both sides of the river were included in the Indian reserve of the Northern or Swampy Crees. At that time the Indians surrendered 500 acres on the south side of the river to the Indian Department, and this was set aside as a town site when it was seen that the Hudson's Bay road was going through, and that there would be built up a fine town on the bank of the river. Since then the indians have all removed to the north bank of the river, where they have erected their dwellings and are making a prosperous living. Two or three months ago about 60 acres of the town site was disposed of by auction sale, and the lots, which are 66 feet frontage, brought as high as $375 each, indicating what the future is expected to have. This money derived from the sale of the town site is held by the Indian Department of Canada, and will be devoted entirely to the needs and benefit of the indians who surrendered the land to the Government when it was needed.

The Pas signifies The Pass in the Saskatchewan river alongside the town, where the banks are higherthan at other points, When there is high water, as has been the case in the past, and the country has been flooded in some parts, the water must pass through the high banks of the river. The Pasquia River, which enters the Saskatchewan at The Pas, is a long winding stream, which along its upper source crosses the Hudson's Bay road about 50 miles from Etiomami, making the longestbridge on the line, some 800 feet in length. To the east of the town and distant about 40 miles, runs the long range of the Pasqua Hills, or, as the old timers call them, the Pas mountains.

H. B. Company There.

The Pass is a Hudson's Bay Company's post more than 50 years old, which, however, would not make it an old post in the history of the company. Their store and big warehouse as well as the dwelling of Gideon Halcrowe, the trader in charge, are located directly at the conduence of the Pasquia and the Saskatchewan, and is eminently the most desirable location in the town. It never was a fortified post, as there was never any danger from the Indians, but the buildings all face the river, as it has always been from that direction that entrance has been made from boats, canoes, or steamers. The company's steamer Saskatchewan runs down the river and plies back and forth with freight and passengers. The store is a long building built more than 20 years ago; the big warehouse was erected but two years ago. Recently the company purchased a large lot at the rear of their buildings, upon which next summer there will be erected a large up-to-date store. The company recognizes that The Pas has at last come to be a place of importance, and, as has been their custom, they are preparing to hold the business they have. The Pas is at present only an ordinary trading post of the company under the chief factor at Prince Albert, but with the advent of an operating railway it is probable that it will be raised in importance, and that the business of a number of thenorthern posts will be directed from this point. John H. Gordon, a fur trader, has the next largest business establishment in the town, having been located there for the past ten years. There are several other stores owned by traders, either French, Scotch or Indians. The finest residence in the town is the private residence of Gideon Halcrowe, erected on the Pasquia, in the suburbs. Mr. Halcrowe has been in the employ of the Hudson's Bay Company for forty years, during which time he has always lived in thewoods of the north. He would not care to change his place of residence, where he has lived close to nature, for the hurry and bustle of the busy city life. Fred Fischer is the Indian agent in charge of The Pas agency, and has been located there for the past two years. Since 1879 he had been with the Indian Department, and has been at Fort Pelly, Edmonton, Fort Qu'Appelle, Onion Lake, and also has acted as relief agent at Moose Mountain and Touchwood Hills.

The Pas Indian Agency.

comprises the reserve at the Pas, where there are 413 Indians on 7,610 acres of land; Moose Lake reserve, 60 miles northeast, where there are 113 Indians; Chamamawin reserve, 70 miles down the Saskatchewan at Cedar Lake, where there are about 100 Indians; Shoal Lake reserve, 90 miles west, where there are 76 Indians, Red Earth reserve, 15 miles up the Carrot River from Shoal Lake, where there are 128 Indians, and the Cumberland band, with 141 Indians. The Indian agency offices at The Pas are located right in the centre of thetown site, with the agent's residence at one side and the agency doctor's residence at the other. Formerly the day school for the Indians was conducted in the office building but since the removal of the Indians to the north side of the river the school is conducted over there. Dr. Arthur La Rose is the medical officer attached to the agency, and has held officefor the past six years. The only school at The Pas is that maintained by the Anglican Mission, and which is attended by all the white children as well as the Indians. Rev. M. B. Edwards is the rector in charge of the mission. This residence is on what is called The Island, and is considered one of the most desirable sights on the river. The church is one of the old style and has been rebuilt and repaired several times. When the Franklins relief expedition went north nearly fifty years ago, a part of the company wintered at The Pas, and while there they madesome of the furniture now used in the Anglican church. Outside the church on a separate tower is the bell which calls the Indians and whites to service. The Indians in that country are all Christians—a tribute to the good work done by the missionaries during the past half century. At all of the reserves in the agency the established church maintain mission stations, with rectors in charge. These are the only missions on the reserve with the exception of at Fort Cumberland, where there is a Roman Catholic mission, in charge of Rev. Father Boissin. At all of the reserves there are posts of the Hudson's Bay Company, the largest ones being at Fort Cumberland and Cedar Lake. The school teachers at the reserve have in charge the supplies of the Indian Department, which are kept for destitute Indians. The Indian never makes any provision for old age, and when this time comes these wards of the Government are care for from the funds secured by the sale of the lands surrendered by the Indians in years gone by.

Our Rural Mails

And now the Government has to make some effort to fulfill its pre-election promises. How would you like to have the mail put in a nice little red box at your very door, with no more effort to you than to order the "man" down to the road to get it for you? Sounds nice, doesn't it?

Well you may be able to do that—and again you may not.

For some unscrutable reason, known only to the Government and the Machine, some Mr. Simmons (about whom nothing is known save that he tried to sit in Ottawa and someone pulled the chair from under him.) seems to have the deciding of whether you shall or not. At least the Honorable Rudolphe Alphonse Lemieux, Postmaster General, has written a long letter to this private citizen explaining the system whereby a postman drops a letter addressed to John Smith in a box bought by John Smith from the Government, in front of John Smith's place of residence. It is a very complicated procedure—at least it takes a newspaper column to describe it as Mr. Lemieux did to Mr. Simmons. In addition to all this detail of how the postman must hold his right hand as he lets go of a letter when the hand happens to be above a slot in a box where the letter addressed to John Smith should go (or words to that effect). Mr. Lemieux asks Mr. Simmons if he "will kindly inform me at your earliest convenience as to the stage routes in YOUR constituency on which, in your opinion, a rural mail service as described above might be first established in the public interest."

A valuable prize will be given to the first men who can give any intelligent reason why Mr. Simmons should be appealed to. There are a hundred men who know the country better than Mr. Simmons—one of them the sitting member. But no, Mr. Simmons' work did not stop on October 26th. Hereafter he is to be A. D. C. or general utility man for this constituency to H. M. most loyal Government.

But perhaps this letter was prepared when that $200,000 was sent to the west to buy the riding—and somebody swiped the money but left the letter.

Anyway Bowville (which gave Mr. Simmons a majority) is strutting around because it has been named as a delivery route. Possibly Newburg, Josephsburg, Seven Persons and Elkwater willget free delivery; but will Gros Ventre or Woolchester or Rutherfords or Graburn? Well, we'll wait and see.

But, mind you, the late Mr. Simmons is a force to be reckoned with—more powesful now than before the 26th, perhaps.

In the meantime, Bowville (which gave Simmons 20 majority) has a free delivery twice a week while all this district can get is any old delivery within ten miles once a week.

Beautiful thoughtfulness, beautiful impartiality, beautiful post office department—Bowville farmers, twice a week, delivered at their doors; Gros Ventre, Graburn, Woolchester etc., once a week in a post office somewhere!

The people chose Magrath, but the Government chooses Simmons—and the Government holds the collars.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The information comes that the Government intends to take vigorous action against the correspondents who have been sending exaggerated Reports from Winnipeg and Medicine Hat. Six months ago The Times took this matter up and showed how seriously this city is knocked by the rediculous reports that have been sent out by local correspondents at so much a column. Until the law gets after them, these correspondents are going to earn their money in the easiest way and that is by sending out sensational news. In the past couple of years some local correspondent has sent out those fables about the cattle dying on the streets two years ago, the abundance of eagles, the dryness of certain seasons, the risk of cattle raising, the financial conditions of the city and other blood-and-thunder silliness that means dollars to the correspondent but death to the city.

The other day Premier Rutherford "the first man in Alberta" gave an exhibition of ill-manners that must have been the result of too much bacon for breakfast or of crass ignorance. While a guest of the city of Calgary at the opening of a school, he gave utterance to this terrible censure on his hosts; "I believe that your mayor and aldermen have, in a sense, ceased to operate for the benefit of the community." The man whose instincts of good form are no more operative than to allow him to publicly censure his host is not the man to preside at the head of a government.

A Calgary man in writing to a Calgary paper concerning the best publicity of the city said that the two things necessary for the upbuilding of any city were cheap power and cheap living. We have the former in Medicine Hat as it is nowhere else. But have we the latter? The very cheapness of light and fuel should make the price of the necessities of life cheaper than elsewhere. Is this the case? If so what steps should be taken to prevent the sending out of the city of thousands of dollars every month?

The city has lost by the taking over of the telephone system by the Government. Not one cent of revenue comes in from taxation as Government property cannot be taxed. The city hall has to pay for every phone, instead of securing a number free as it did from the Bell Company. The newspaper offices pay double the rate they did to the Company. And yet there is no reduction in the rates. If the Company could run the phones at a price and make the profit they wanted, how is it the Government has to charge the same price when a Company profit is not required or desired? Government control has not improved the service in any way, but instead of that the different communities are losers. It is only in long distance connections that improvement has been made.

And speaking of long distance, we don't need to get in an uncomfortable sweat about the connections between here and Taber. The Government has long ago promised that for the first work next year.

The Edmonton News in commenting on the cheering that greeted Gov. Hughes of New York when he rose to speak, and in pushing its charge that Canadians cannot cheer asks: "When will Frank Oliver get a reception like that."

The Times can answer that he'll never get it on this earth. There's about as much resemblance between Oliver and Hughes as between—but the comparison would be odious.

The ratepayers will be asked to vote on the sewer pipe agreement in a short time. We want the industry and the voters will be able to decide the merits of the case. The council has agreed to give the title deed to the company (ratepayers permitting) after a month's work and the company according to the agreement will also own the right of way from the C.P.R. If Industrial Place is decided upon this is a matter for deep consideration. The 52 acres belong to the city for industrial purposes but 20 acres and the only approach will be turned over to the company.

The trials of the Western daily are many. There has been a number of cities whose heads were too big for their bodies and a daily was sprung. Several of these have gone up where unpaying propositions always go. The latest to cease publication is the Strathcona Chronicle, which goes back to semi-weekly. The daily that runs in small cities not only loses money but is no credit to the city—the dividends won't permit it to be.

The Slocan Mining Review published at New Denver, B.C. by J. J. Atherton, a well-known former Medicine Hatter, who was formerly employed On The Times is at hand. It is a special number of twelve pages and is a beautifully prepared edition, with excellent cuts of the district printed on book paper. "Jay, Jay" seems to have prepared a special that should appeal to his neighbors.

The Wainright Star is another new journalistic venture, published in a town of that name in northern Alberta. It is a 7-column, 4-pager well printed on good paper, and showing all the ear-marks of a valuable booster. Success to it!

Well, it looks as if Medicine Hat is doomed to be the only natural gas city in the West. Lethbridge has given up looking for it, after getting down 2,170 feet.

The best cure for insomnia—read the News municipal articles.

Among the other bright thingsthey say that the gas pays for the support of the schools. Which means nothing more when you get it than the revenue of the city is used to pay its expenditures. Thus the license that the City Bakery pays for its restaurant has paid for the last bale of hay the fire horses ate; that's the same thing.

And at last the awful revelation has been made. At last the people know where all their money goes. At last! It has cost the city the vast sum of $200 for a stipendiary magistrate. Horrible! When one thinks that that would have been sufficient to have mended a leak in the water service or done something else equally important, it is no wonder The Times rises to complain. The argument used is that last year the city made $685 out of its police magistrates fines, but this year so far only half that has come in. Moral—Go to, Mr. Kealy. Soak 'em' every time they come before you. Get the money for the city anyway. The News has struck the leak.

Just as a suggestion The Times might mention that a few remarks from The News about the $60,000 filter that hasn't been worth thirty cents yet, might be interesting. It might explain who was Mayor when this filtration plant was purchased, after a $13,000 plant had been submitted to the people. It might also tell of the big overdraft the Council of 1907 had to shoulder from the Council of 1906. And that's only two of the interesting things of 1906. One wouldn't go to sleep over these things.

THE NEWS, BELLE PLAINS, KAN.

Tuesday, Sept. 1st at 9 o'clock. This is one of the most promising cities we visited. It is situated onthe South Saskatchewan river at the intersection of the Crow's Nest R. R. which goes to Spokane, U.S.A., and the main line of the C.P.R., 660 miles west of Winnipeg, 220 miles east of the Rockories, 880 miles from Vancouver and 70 miles south of the state of Montana, U. S. Rudyard Kipling says of this place after one of his recent visits, it is "the town that was born lucky." It is the only natural gas town we saw enroute. The city is lighted by it at a cost of 13½ cents per thousand to consumers and manufacturers get a rate of 5c per thousand. For heating purposes 20,000 cubic feet of natural gas has the heating capacity of one ton of coal at 13½c per thousand cubic feet equals 2.70 per ton. Besides it is so much cheaper.

Medicine Hat is also richly supplied with large deposits of coal, which are being mined. Coal and gas are both cheap and plentiful. Perhaps the Standard Oil does not control the supply in Medicine Hat.

This city has a population of 5,000 and is situated in a district which has a population of 25,000. The people of this district are largely engaged in the raising of cattle and horses, besides wheat growing in those parts which have sufficient moisture, a problem which is being solved very rapidly by the introduction of irrigation plans throughout Southern Alberta.

Medicine Hat is also a great railroad centre. After laying in the usual supply of souvenir postals our party were soon on their way.

LIVER COMPLAINT

The chief office of the liver is the secretion of bile, which is the natural regulator of the bowels.

Whenever the liver becomes deranged and the bile ducts clogged, liver complaint is produced, and is manifested by the presence of constipation, pain under the right shoulder, sallow complexion, yellow eyes, slimy-coated tongue and headache, heartburn, jaundice, sour stomach, water brash, catarrh of the stomach, etc.

Liver Complaint may be cured by avoiding the above mentioned causes, keeping the bowels free, and arousing the sluggish liver with that grand liver regulator,

LAXA-LIVER PILLS

LIVER COMPLAINT.

Mr. Geo. Fawcett, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "Having suffered with liver complaint for years and tried all sorts of remedies, I was advised to try Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I must say, that after taking two vials of them, I feel quite a new man, and can strongly recommend them to anyone."

Surgeon Makes Dead Organs Live

Marvellous experiments which destroy all preconceived demarcations between life and death, were described Friday by Dr. Alexis Carrell of the Rockefeller Institute, at a meeting of the American Philosophical Society.

Dr. Carrel has succeeded in transplanting animal organs which have been detached and apparently dead for 60 days. He has interchanged the main artery and the jugular vein of a man with no deleterious results. He has replaced the kidneys of one cat with the similar organs of another. Within three weeks it was impossible to tell, according to the doctor that the cat was using a strange pair of kidneys.

As a climax to the series of experiments Dr. Carrel told how he had successfully grafted the leg of a dead fox terrier to the body of a living dog of the same variety. In three months' time the dog had complete control of the new limb, and the only indication of the operation was a slight scar.

At the close of the lecture Dr. Garrel said that there was no scientific obstacle to the application of these operations to the human species. He said:

"In fact, it would be easier to perform the same operations on a man because his organs are larger than those of a dog or cat, and the technique of the surgery would not be so fine or difficult.

"In fact, we have already begun the transplanting of organs of humans in the case of replacing arteries. It is only a question of time until we shall be sure enough in the substitution of such complicated organs as kidneys to be able to operate in this way on human beings."

The chief obstacle to the practical application of this new phase of surgery, as explained by Dr. W. W. Keen who presided at the meeting, would be to find a healthy kidney when wanted.

"Perhaps," said Dr. Keen, "while a healthy man is killed, or when a man dies of some disease which does not affect his kidneys, it will be possible to extract the kidneys immediately after death and keep them in cold storage until it is possible to operate upon some invalid suffering from some incurable kidney trouble.

"What has been done in the case of the kidney, it is reasonable to believe, will be found feasible in the case of other organs of the body. It is impossible to foretell the ultimate development of this wonderful new surgery of which Dr. Carrel is the leading exponent.

"Already the knee joint from the leg of a dead man has been used to replace the injured joint of a living person.

"A woman too weak to undergo a major operation, has had her arteries joined to those of her husband and with the added strength of her husband's circulation and heart action, has successfully undergone the shock of the surgeon's knife and survived an operation under which she would have otherwise died.

"A little baby was born withblood so thin and devitalized that the blood vessels would not contain it. It was a question of hours before the infant would bleed to death. Dr. Carrel, by his wonderful surgery, joined the arteries of the father to those of the child.

"There was no convalescence in this case. In an instant the pale form of the infant became revitalized as though by magic. The waxy skin became ruddy with the glow of health, the bleeding from mouth and nose ceased. Within a few hours the dying infant fell asleep, and awoke a healthy, normal child.

"These striking proofs of the correctness of Dr. Carrel's theories be has been too modest to recount to you. I speak of them to give you proof of the wonderful new era of medical science upon which we are dawning."

In Labor Circles.

Denver, Nov. 16.—President Samuel Gompers, at the afternoon session today of the convention of the American Federation of Labor, declared that if he were found guilty and fined in the contempt proceedings against him at Washington, he would go to jail before he would pay his fine, or before he would allow the federation to pay any fine for him.

The committee recommended that immediately following the adjournment of the convention the executive committee shall take up the proposition of placing of their funds where they may be removed from danger of attachment. The report brought out a political discussion, in which several members declared themselves in favor of the formation of an independent political party.

Treasurer John B. Lennon said that he had discussed the matter of state guarding the funds with good attorneys, and they alleged that it was impossible without resulting some time in some person's injury. Several suggestions were made from the floor, one being that the funds be deposited in Canada, and another that certificates of deposit be taken out in some other name than the treasurer.

Winnipeg, Nov. 16.—Action was filed this morning for $50,000 damages and resultant costs by Vulcan Iron works of this city against unions which ordered a strike in their plant in March, 1906. A perpetual injunction was also applied for against picketing. Interim injunction was granted. There are ninety-one defendants in the suit, among them being the International Brotherhood of Machinists, all local iron working unions and some eighty individuals.

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—The local board of conciliation which dealt with the dispute between the Canadian Northern and its engineers has reached an agreement which has been signed by D. B. Hanna on behalf of the company, and T. F. Best, of Winnipeg, on behalf of the men. The exact terms of the agreement have not been received here yet, but it is known that the engineers get a readjustment of hours and an increase in pay. The finding applies to the whole system.

Denver, Col., Nov. 18.— Today's session of the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor was devoted to the consideration of committee and reports of a number of other committees that had notyet been heard from. The report of the committee on President Gompers has made the special order of business for tomorrow morning. The election of officers may be reached Friday afternoon, and the installation Saturday morning after which the convention will adjourn. Toronto seems to have the lead over the other cities contending for the honor of the next convention though St. Louis is making a hard fight.

At the last meeting of the International Bureau held in Brussels in October, the British Independent Labor Party was formally admitted to the organization. The nations represented were France, Germany, Belgium, Switzerland, Bohemia, Poland, Hungary, Sweden, Denmark, Austria, Great Britain, Holland, and two newly reconstructed states —Turkey and Bulgaria.

J. Bruce Glasier of the "Labour Leader" acted as spokesman of the British party, which, he contended, was an essentially working-class organization.

H. M. Hyndman, the English millionaire stork-broker, who founded the Social Democratic Party, opposed the application, on the ground, he said, that the I. L. P. declared themselves for the class war at the Congress, and against the class war when they returned to England.

Vaillant, of France; Dr. Adler, leader of the Austrian Social Democratic Party; Molkenbuhr, who represented Germany in place of Bebel, and Kautsky spoke in favor of admission.

Mademoiselle Roussel, France and Roubanovitch, a noted professor of Paris who represented the Russian Social Revolutionists, and Avramoff, Bulgaria, were hostile to admission. The I. L. P.'s application was granted by a large majority.

New York, Nov. 17.—Love, liquor, gambling and improvements in automatic devices and signals were some of the things held responsible for many railroad accidents by speakers at the 18th annual meeting of the New York and New England Association of Railway Surgeons today. Dr. Owen, of Pueblo, told of a young engineer who through jealousy neglected his work, with the result that his train was wrecked. He told of another engineer who while worrying over the fact that the night before he had gambled away his pay cheque, backed his train into an excursion train. The speaker denied that railroads overwork their men by deliberate choice and that it would be decidedly false economy for them to do so. "Sometimes drink is mistaken for brain fag and overwork," said he. "The public has a right to demand from the railway systemthat employees be given sufficient rest, but that does not go far enough. The employees should take rest during the time alotted to them but when they do not then the employe who uses his recreation for gambling drinking and smoking to excess is not able for work any more than a man who has been on duty 18 or 20 hours."

A change of the signal systems now in use by the railways was advocated in a paper read by Prof. G. A. Martin of the University of California. "One hundred persons may be killed in an accident due to the color blindness of the present engineer," declared the president, "and time has come for a change for better safety to be made. The examinations of all employees should bemore closely conducted."

The U.S. navy system of signalling by night lights was urged for adoption by Prof. Stratton.

YOU MAY NOT NEED IT NOW

Here is a simple home-made mixture as given by an eminent authority on kidney diseases, who makes the statement that it will relieve almost any case of Kidney trouble if taken before the stage of Bright's disease. He states that such symptoms as lame back, pain in the side, frequent desire to urinate, especially at night; painful and discolored urination, are readily overcome. Here is the receipt. Try it:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bed time.

A well-known druggist here in town is authority that these ingredients are all harmless and easily mixed at home by shaking well in a bottle. This mixture has a peculiar healing and soothing effect upon the entire Kidney and Urinary structure, and often overcomes the worst forms of Rheumatism in just a little while. This mixture is said to remove all blood disorders and cure the Rheumatism by forcing the Kidneys to filter and strain from the blood and system all uric acid and foul, decomposed waste matter, which cause these afflictions. Try it if you aren't well. Save the prescription.

A GOOD STORY.

A good story that will make you laugh is better for you than five dollars worth of doctor's medicine. The first of "The Old Home House" series of eleven complete stories begins in the Family Herald and Weekly Star, of Montreal, this week. There will be one complete story each issue for the next three months, and that means many a good hearty laugh around the fireside during the winter evenings. A subscriber to that big weekly certainly gets value for his oney. The paper only costs one dollar a year, and the amount of sound information given in a year'sreading is marvellous. The stories alone could not be bought for twenty dollars. The agricultural columns of the paper are regarded as the best in America. The Family Herald and Weekly Star should not be missed in and Canadian home.

Work Stops at Lethbridge

(Lethbridge Herald.)

Operations have come to a permanent stop at the gas well and the borers, J. Peat & Sons, are giving up the hole although they have given the Electric Company no official notice of such action.

The hole is not being abandoned because of any impossible or impenetrable formation of rock but because there is a broken bit at the bottom of the hole which is now 2,170 feet deep, and it has been found impossible to get it out or to get past it in any way. In fact, the drillersay that the indications of gas are the best yet and there is no reason to give up the hole on that account.

The cost to the city of the hole and the piece of the broken bit is $8,700, which is made up of $3,000 for the hole which was paid to the Electric Company when the two thousand foot level was reached, and $5,700 for five hundred and seventy feet drilled at $10 a foot for drilling after the sixteen hundred foot level was passed. The Electric Company are out of the ten thousand they don't get from the city because the hole was not used to go down the twenty-five hundred feet.

There is street talk of a company organizing and endeavoring to secure a franchise from the city if they find gas.

Eczema and Piles Cured

MAGISTRATE AND SCHOOL COMMISSIONER HEALED BY ZAM-BUK.

Zam-Buk by its healing power has earned the praise of men and women in the highest stations of life. One of the latest prominent gentlemen to speak highly in Zam-Buk's favor is Mr. C. E. Sanford, of Weston, King's Co., N.S. Mr. Weston is a Justice of the Peace for the county, and a member of the Board of School Commissioners. He is also deacon of the Baptist Church in Berwick. Indeed, throughout the country it would be difficult to find a man more widely known and more highly respected.

Some time back he had occasion to test Zam-Buk, and here is his opinion of this great balm. He says: "I had a patch of eczema on my ankle, which had been there for over twenty years! Sometimes also the disease would break out on my shoulders. I had taken solution of arsenic, had applied various ointments, and triedall sorts of things to obtain a cure, but in vain. Zam-Buk, unlike all else i tried, proved highly satisfactory, and cured the ailment.

"I have also used Zam-Buk for itching piles, and it has cured them completely also. I take comfort in helping my brother man, and if the publication of my experience of Zam-Buk will lead other sufferers to try it, I should be glad. For the cure of piles or skin diseases, I know of nothing to equal Zam-Buk.

Zam-Buk also cures burns, cuts, ulcers, blood poisoning, ringworm, scalp sores, chapped hands, cold sores, and all spin injuries and diseases. Rubbed well on to the chest in cases of cold it relieves the tightness and aching. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 3 boxes for $1.25.

I HAD GIVEN UP ALL HOPE OF LIVING.
Heart Trouble Cured by MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS
Mrs. Andrew Savoy, Gratton's, N.B., writes: In the year of 1905 I was taken sick and did not think I could live any length of time. My trouble was with my heart and people told me that nothing could be done for a case like mine. I consulted the very best doctors but they could do me no good. For seven weeks I could hardly cross the floor. I had no pain, but was so weak nobody in the world can believe how I felt. I had given up all hopes of living and had given my little girl to my sister-in-law.
One day a friend came to see me, and calling me by name, said, 'Lizzie, if I were you I would try a dose of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as they are good for heart trouble.' My husband got me a box, but for two days I was not feeling any better, but on the fourth day my husband said, 'I believe those pills are doing you good.' I was able to say 'Yes, I feel a good deal better this morning.' He said, 'Well, I will get you another box right away.' I took two boxes and three doses out of the third one, and I was perfectly well and have not been sick since then.
I will never be without them in my home for God knows if it had not been for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I would not have been alive now."
Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25.

Indians Live Well.

The Indians at these Northern reserves made a good living and as a rule live in comfort on the proceeds of their own labor. In the winter the majority of them trap and sell their fur to the Hudson's Bay company or to the fur traders in the country. The only fur in that section of the country which produces much revenue is the muskrat, which this year is very plentiful. Around The Pas the year's crop of rat skins varies from 50,000 to 200,000 of rat skins, the latter number being a record year. Theyare made up in bales and shipped southward in boats in the spring. The Indians who are good boatmen are employed during the summer months occasionally to run to York boats with the company's supplies up to Reindeer Lake. In winter there is also of late years considerable fishing for the Northwest Fish Co., which has been securing fish in large quantities for thepast seven years from Cedar, Cormorant, Clearwater, Moose, Sturgeon and Cumberland lakes, The Indians also fish and hunt the year round for their own food. Since the Hudson's Bay road went through there are a number of Indians engaged in taking freight through on hand cars, and they furnish plenty of motive power for the work. In agricultural work the Indians have notdone very much as the land on the reserves is not easily prepared. It required a good deal of labor to prepare land, but many of them have good patches of potatoes for their own use and they are very fond of this vegetable. The trader in charge of the company's post at The Pas has demonstrated the success of raising garden stuff in that country, and his garden would be a credit to any place several hundred miles south. He has raised garden stuff at all the different posts where he has been stationed in the north, and is sure that there is no difficulty in the work. The Indians on the Red Earth reserve are the most intelligent and most self-reliant in the agency, and they are making good homes for themselves. At The Pas there is but one saw mill. It is owned and operated solely by the Indians, who cut the lumber for their own uses, selling but little. They have built good substantial houses, and are steadily progressing in civilization. At present there is no liquor allowed at The Pas, but with the growth of the country and the town it is feared that this bane will work its way in, and will undo some of the good work already accomplished.

The chief timber limits along the Saskatchewan in the vicinity of The Pas are along the Carrot River, and it is there that C. H. Smith, of Port Arthur, have big tracts. Their representative estimates the amount of timber on their lands at 1,200,000,000 feet. At the recent sale of the town site at The Pas three capitalists secured a desirable location for their mill. When there is a regular train operating to the town theirm intend to start a saw mill, which will furnish a good deal of material to be hauled out by a railway.

Surveyors Working

Early in September the surveyors of the Dominion Government arrived at The Pas by way of Prince Albert, and parties at once started north to locate the best right of way to the Bay. A survey had already been made for some miles north by the company at present there, but the Government surveyors are taking a different course. The two parties go north to the chain of lakes, andfrom there they will separate. Part of the surveyors will work northward to this Bay, and part will work back to The Pas. Old timers at The Pas who are familiar with the country to thenorth towards the Bay, say that the country for 100 miles north from The Pas is similar to that through which the present road passes. From that point to the Bay there is high and dry land, with considerable rocks. Prospectors consider that there are valuable minerals in this rocky land, and already there have been a number of prospecting parties up through the country searching for the hidden riches. When they return south there is no information to be obtained from them, and it is supposed that valuable claims have been located which will be operated with big profit as soon as the railway goes through to carry supplies. There is a great deal of enterprise north of the Saskatchewan, and even along that river, that is lying idle awaiting the Government's line, which will open up the great national waterway of the north.

BLACK HAND INVADES CALGARY.

It is now Calgary's turn to have a black hand mystery, and from police reports the case which the local men have in hand is one of theworst and most persistent ones that has ever come before the western police.

To follow his victim across the continent, trailing him for eight long months, is the work of one of the worst black hand society members.

The Italian now in the hands of the police, from all accounts, is named Frank Diparma, and is one of a black gang operating in the east. It appears that while at Vermillion bay, New Ontario, the society spotted Silvatore Rullo as a victim, and Diparma was the member to do the job. They tried to get Rullo to join the society, which would cost him $40, if not he would have to pay $100. Rullo did not want to join the society, but becoming scared he promised to do so, and paid $20, promising to come through with the balance at a future date. He then started out and came West, being afraid to stay round near any of the black hand members.

Finding their quarry escaped, they made up their minds to rope him in, and Diparma trailed his man over 8 months. He was located in Calgary through a letter sent east.

Rullo was stopped with a countryman named Mike Adelo on 6th avenue A few days ago Diparma showed up and soon located Rullo, and made ey. He made an engagement for Tuesday night. The blackhanderwas very hold and sure, and that was demand for the balance of the monwhat caused his downfall. Rullo kept the engagement but was assisted by policeman Ross. Then the blackhander was arrested.

From letters and articles found in his possession Chief English believes him to be a member of a strong gang, and no doubt now he is in the police charge more will be found against him.

Yesterday afternoon he wasbrought before the magistrates, but the case was postponed to get some Italian interpreter to translate the letters found in the prisoner's possession.

When he was arrested Diparma had on him one of the most murderous daggers one could wish to set eies on, and it looked as if Rullo by communicating with the police when he did saved a murder case, and his own life.

To show that Diparma was hot after his victim will be seen in Rullois statement which he gave under oath to the Magistrate.

COULD NOT GO TO WORK BACK WAS SO WEAK.

Backache is the primary cause of kidney trouble. When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are liable to become affected.

Heed the warning; check the Backache and dispose of any chances of further trouble.

If you don't, serious complications are very apt to arise and the first thing you know you will have Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, the three most deadly forms of Kidney Trouble.

Mr. James Bryant, Arichat, N.S., was troubled with his back and used Doan's Kidney Pills, he writes:—"I cannot say too much about the benefit I received after using three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. I was greatly troubled with an aching pain across the small of my back. I could not go to work and my back was so weak I would have to sit down. It would go away for a few days but would always return. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I must say they completely cured me."

Price 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

Mayoralty

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF MEDICINE HAT:—

I have been presented with a requisition signed by one hundred of my fellow citizens and ratepayers, requesting that I allow my name to be put in nomination for Mayor of our City for the year 1909. After due consideration I have decided to comply with the request.

If the City should express its trust in me, I shall keep in view the all-important necessity of keeping the Council in harmony with the City, so that it may be endowed with a vigor that will enable it to encourage our home industries and take full advantage of the many possibilities within our reach.

In selecting the various committees for the year it will be done with a view to have every ward properly represented, so that the needs of the city will receive attention. In regard to the sewerage system. I would favor building the septic tank and main trunk sewer connecting with the present system and afterwards extending as the rate-payers demanded.

I would also give special attention to improving and extending our water works and gas systems, so that they could be maintained in a high state of efficiency at a minimum of cost, with a view to a re-adjustment of water rates and taxation.

There has been some adverse criticism of the present system of Municipal book-keeping. If upon investigation, changes are necessary to keep the various accounts in such order that their actual condition can be ascertained at once, I would certainly support the reforms.

Indications point to a rapid development within our city in the near future, and our already extensive municipal enterprises, requiring more time than the Aldermen can devote to executive work, suggests that a system be adopted that will relieve them, and at the same time maintain a thorough system of supervision over the city's works. This question will have to be dealt with early in the year.

If elected my aim will be, with the assistance of a united Council and City, to make 1909 a banner year.

D. MILNE.

The Mock Parliament

Hudson's Bay Railroad under Discussion

An Interesting Debate Before a Filled Gallery

There waa a good attendance of members at Friday's sitting of the Mock Parliament, when the Hudson's Bay Railway bill came up for discussion. The Speaker, Mr. J. J. Mahaffy, was out of the city, and in his absence the Minister of the Interior, Mr. M. A Brown, was placed in the chair.

Practically the whole of the evening's sitting was taken up by the discussion in committee of the Hudson's Bay Railway bill, and the debate on this momentous project proved one of the most educative, as well as the breeziest of the session.

The Minister of Public Works, Railways and Canals in a brilliant speech, introduced his bill, enumerating the weighty arguments for the road, and for the principle of government ownership. The total cost he estimated at $45,000,000 at the extreme limit. The length of the line would be approximately 900 miles, or a cost of $50,000 a mile. Going on to to defend the Government's policy the hon. minister contended that not only was this road a public necessity but it was possible to see in the future great public benefit to be derived therefrom. As the C.P.R. and the C.N.R. had brought settlement and a large increase in population, as the G.T. P. was even now doing, so this new road would bring about a wonderful increase in the population and prosperity of the West. He might anticipate an argument of the Opposition. The hon. members on the other side would prooably oppose the principal of government ownership on the ground that the masses were unfit to control a business proposition. But he would point out that this railway would be controlled not BY the masses but for the BENEFIT of the masses. The management was to be on strictly business lines. But the principle of government ownership marked one further step in the advancement of the civilization of the world. The 20th century was to be the century of public ownership. As to the argument of the opponents of this principle, that it was impracticable in view of the state of our political life, it must be admitted that party politics figured too largely in government works at the present day. But in the case of this railroad the appointments would be beyond the control of the party politician. Merit would be the only consideration. Then the tariff rates would be adjusted not to grind out an enormous profit as was the custom of the private corporations, but for the benefit of the whole populace.

On Mr. Ward resuming his seat, the Leader of the Opposition obtained the floor and after complimenting the minister on his able and logical deliverance, proceeded to criticise it. Public ownership might be very well in Germany, it might be very well in Europe generally, but in America we had not reached such an advanced political stage as to make its success possible. The principal example on this continent of a Government owned road was the Intercolonial, and the corruption and abuses which had arisen in connection with this line were matters of common knowledge. The member for Vancouver proceeded to ridicule the figures quoted by the mover of the bill. The cost was to be $50,000 per mile as compared with $28,000 per mile, the average cost of railroad construction in this country. Mr. Hill insinuated that there was "something in" this scheme for the enrichment of the Government members. He then proceeded to move the following amendment;

Whereas the Great Northern Railway has applied for a charter from the Federal Government for the construction of a railroad from Fort Churchill to Shelby Junction, State of Montana, to touch in its course Prince Albert, Battleford, and Medicine Hat, and whereas, in connection therewith the Great Northern Railway has requested the Dominion Government to grant them a subsidy of $7,000 a mile,

Be it moved in amendment that the said charter and subsidy be granted to the Great Northern Railway.

This was intended as an amendment to clause 1 and 2 in the Government bill, but as the Premier refused to have the measure considered clause by clause and the Opposition could not obtain a ruling in their favor, Mr Hill's motion was put as an amendment to the bill as a whole.

The Minister of Railways charged the Opposition with falsehood, unwarranted and premeditated. So far as he knew no communication had been received from any corporation with regard to the building of a road to the Bay.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Mr. Nelson Spencer, expressed a hope that members of the Opposition would come out solidly for the bill, as the arguments of their leader were of little weight. A slighting reference had been made as regards government ownership in this country. He would draw the attention of the House to a speech recently made by Earl Roberts in the British House of Peers. In reference to the possibility of a German invasion Earl Roberts had pointed out that the government ownership of railways in the Fatherland would enable the Germans to transport their forces from all portions of the Empire secretly and in the shortest possible time.

The Member for Simcoe, Mr. A. Patterson, opposed the Government bill, subjecting to withering scorn the arguments put forward by its supporters. To adopt public ownership would be to perpetrate one of the greatest crimes in the calendar. We knew what Government ownership of telephones had led to in Alberta—the terrible mix up at Edmonton. Figures were given to show that the highest dividends were always declared by the corporation owned roads. A humorous reference to the previous speaker who had raised the question of the German war scare, as the "Minister of Fishes," brought down the house.

The Member for Hamilton, Mr. J. T. Hall, seconded the opposition amendment. He believed, he said, in government ownership but not in government operation. Hansard might be quoted to show that government owned railways in this country had never been paying propositions.

Mr. C. Sansom, the Minister of Customs and Inland Revenue, expressed surprise that at the last sitting of the House a member of the Opposition had described the Government's policy as one of Socialism. Though Socialism might include government ownership it was not a fact that Government ownership included Socialism. The whole trend of modern thought was towards government ownership, and it was of great importance that the principle should be adopted here before such a state of affairs as to-day prevailed in the United States was brought about in Canada also.

Mr. P. Bryenton (Prince Albert) as one membea who had charged the Government with Socialistic tendencies held that the previous speaker, however he might try to disown his political creed, had all the symptoms of a Socialist. Supporting the Opposition amendment, Mr. Bryenton pointed how great would be the advantage to this western country if the extension to Shelby were carried out. $65,000,000 worth of products shipped to Europe every year from the North Western States would go by this route.

After some further discussion during the course of which the leader of the Opposition stated that he would produce evidence to prove that the Great Northern proposition had been brought before the Government, the committee rose and reported progress, asking leave to sit again.

It was decided to continue the sittings on alternate Fridays during the pleasure of the House.

A levy of 50c was made on each member to defray expenses incurred to date.

Bowling League

Good scors made in Intal Game

A bowling league has recently been formed and the first matches were played off last Tuesday, between the Engineers and Fire Brigade, and the Beavers and Wanderers. The Engineers and Beavers each won two out of the three games played. The highest score was made by the Beavers—1821.

The games are being pulled off on Vic Ready's bowling alleys on South Railway street, the second set being played on Thursday last between Trainmen and Royals and Fire Brigade and Beavers, with the following results:

W. Scott, Royals, made the highest score for three games that has yet been obtained, 507, and for one game, 186.

In these games the highest score was made by G. Finlay, with 306 pins to his credit, and the highest total rolled since the league games began, 1859, was by the Beavers.

The bowling leafue looks like a big thing for the winter. Every young man is talking bowling and the ready's bowling alleys are always full.

The fire brigade includes an enthusiastic bunch of good sports. Last summer they had a baseball team. Now they have formed a bowling team, a curling rink and a hockey team They have a fineip equipped gymnasium, and Dr. Smith has been kind enough to offer to instruct them. The boys deserve all kinds of praise, not only for their interest in their fire work, but for their general interest in the city and its games. Here's to them!

The Pincher Creek Hockey Club is trying to form a league composed of Macleod, Piucher Creek and Lethbridge. The winners might come up and try conclusions with one of our city teams later on in the season.

THE SCHUBERT SYMPHONY CLUB.

Although only a small crowd attended the Symphony Club concert on Tuesday night, the programme was one of the most delightful that has been presented to a Medicine Hat audience. Every number was a treat and every performer an artist. The lady quartette captured the audience at every appearance. Their encores were especially good.

Miss Weatherington in her monologue was unaffected yet full of natural movements that lend life and reality to a reading. She had the rare good sense to make use of Miss Yoling, the first soprano, made her hit in her quartette and solo work. Her encore "Fishing" was very catchy.

Mr. Purcell was the star. His violin playing was of rare merit, and received applause accordingly. In his mandolin worh he excelled even to a greater extent. One selection in which he played a double part was even more difficult than it sounded.

The small attendan was only another example of the lack of appreciation of the best concerts.

Silver Medal Contest

The silver medal contest last night in the Bantist Church under the auspices of the R. T. of T. was a most gratifying success. The church was crowded and the programme thoroughly enjoyed.

Mr Chas. E. Neff was awarded the silver medal for his excellent rendering of "Rum and the Revenue." The other contestants were Miss Blake and Messrs H. Rodd, Mahon, Hannington, H. Lloyd. The judges were Rev. A. C. Farrell and Messrs. Ware and Brown. Mr. W. J. Brotherton acted as chairman.

The Royal Templars elect officers next Monday evening.

Baseball Meetting

Banquet to be Held To-morrow

The annual meeting of the Gas City Baseball League was held on Wednesday last in the parlor of the American hotel. The president, Mr. James Fleming, was in the chair and other members present were the secretary, Mr. W. F. Finlay, and Messrs. Elliott, McKay, Switzer, McLean, MacPherson, Dean.

The sec.-treasurer's report showed a very satisfactory season from a financial standpoint. The gate receipts amounted to $691.43, entrance fees gave $40.00 a total of $734.43. Expenditures totalled $693.03, leaving a balance on hand of $41.40. This sum will be divided between the three clubs. It was pointed out that had the City team been dropped out earlier in the season, in all probability over $200 more would have been realized.

Some discussion took place on the question of the presentation of the shields, and a banquet at which the winning teams shall receive their trophies seemed to be the most favored plan for bringing the season to a close. Mr. Switzer's motion, that a banquet be held at 9k on the evening of Wednesday December 2nd (to-morrow), in the dining room of the American hotel, was unanimously carried and the price of tickets fixed at $1.50, the number of guests to be limited to fifty. Messrs MacPehrson, Dean and Switzer were appointed a committee for the sale of tickets. During the course of the evening the shields will be presented to the the successful clubs. A musical programme will be provided and a very good time is anticipated. Every man will be expected to contribute something to the enjoyment of the evening—to sing, make a speech, or tell how he made that home run. The last item on the programme will be a duet by Messrs. McLean and Switzer.

President Fleming expressed his pleasure and satisfaction that the season had come to such a satisfactory wind-up the spirit shown thoughout gave promise of a successful season next year. He reserved his address for the banquet night.

Messrs McLean, Fleming and Turpin were appointed trustes for the shields, to see that they are given to the proper teams, etc.

Votes of thanks to the secretary and to the president and executive for their services during the season brought the proceedings to a close.

An Apology

The Times feels that an apology is due its readers for this issue and that of last week. The former monoline operator was called east on private buisness and a young man from Strathcona was engaged. This young man gave himself the highest recommendations but in a week's work set up only what a good man would do in a day.

Well he's gone.

As monoline operators are scarce The Times asks the forbearance of its readers until this temporary difficulty is past.

Electric Theatre

Last night the first vaudeville of the season was staged at the Star Electric Theatre and the filled house was evidence of the interest taken in the new venture.

"The City of Yesterdry," presented by Mr. Armand of Chicago, is probably the best thing in electrical effects that has been seen in this Western country. It is the first time that electrical effects of any kind have been seen in the Gas City. Mr. Armand explains each changing scene as the history of the phantom is revealed. The presentation is most realistic, from the subdued cloud effects at early dawn to the conflagration which follows the earthquake. The equivalent of 175 sixteen candle power lamps its employed in the production, in addition to the two big arc lamps, one for fire and one for cloud effects.

The School Board

A special meeting of the school board was held on last Monday in the secretary's office. There were present Chairman Brotherton, Trustees Colter, Milne and Kennedy.

Mr. Mahaffy stated that he had arranged with the lien holders in connection with the high school annex to accept the proposition of the board, the secreary-treasurer to ascertain the amount available for disposal. Some discussion took place on this matter and the following resolution was eventually framed up: "Resolved, that in order to avoid litigation in respect to the Sellenjs contracti a sum of $300 be added to the balance due Mr. Sellen's to cover all extras, and that the secretary-treasurer be instructed to pay said total to the boards solicitor to be diuided ratably amongst the lien holders after deducting such costs as said solicitor may be entitled to."

Referring to the matter of costs, Mr. Mahaffy stated that some provision should be made for these as

Referring to the matter of costs he was not ipse facto solicitor for the board and it was at his suggestion that it eRas decided to deduct these from the extra sum voted by the board. When Mr. Mahaffy was engaged by the council no mention was made of his acting for the school board; ifi he had known that this would be expected of him it was doubtful whether he would have accepted the position. Mr. Brotherton stated in regard to this that when Judge Mitchell was city solicito rthe board was not aware that his services were abailable and another man had been obtained. Judge Mitchell had strongly oviected to their doing this, as he claimed it as part of his work.

Mr Mahaffy: "Judge Mitchell must be fonder of work than some people I know."

The following resolution was carried: "Resolved, that in as much as Mr. Sellen had failed in the perforrance of his contract with the board, his sheque for $187.58 be forfeited to the board and credited to the building account, the same to be used for the benefit of lienholders."

It was decided that the school telephones should be cut out on the ground that the exsense incurred under the provincial government segulation was too great. The cost is sixty-four dollars per year.

To The Electors of Medicine Hat Constituency

Lethbridge, Alta., Nov. 26. 1608.

Gentlemen:-

Owing to the immensity of this Riding you will readily realize the difficulty which I, as your representative at Ottawa, will have in keeping in close touch with each seetion of the District.

Within the past few weeks I have given this matter some thought and the best solution apparently is for me to endeavor to take advantage in the rural sections of the machinery of the School Districts.

There are two subjects common to the entire Riding which should have close attention, namely:

(1) Railway development.
(2) Improved mail facilities.

In order to successftlly press our claims for railway extensions it is necessary for me to to be able to place my finger on each particular locality on a map and give correct information as to what development is taking place there and the possibility of further developmeet under proper transportation facilities.

The campaign through which I have passed has given me a general knowledge, but what I need is specific information from each locality, I would, therefore, be obliged if the Secretary-Treasurer in each School District would call a public meeting of the electors at an early date, this, I presume, can be done by a notice posted in the Post Office.

I still insist that I am in this political business for the people and to be able to work with some effect I need the fullest information as to the capabilities of each locality. Any Secretary-Treasurer who would like some idea as to the character of information which should be supplied, and will drop me a post card, I will gladly communicate with on the subject.

I take this opportunity of publicly thanking my friends for their generous efforts resulting in my election last month and I trust when the time arrives for me to retire from public life, be the time short or long, that they as well as the public in general will have reason to feel that I served them well and faithfully.

Yours Truly

British Dispose of American Charges

In reply to the reiterated charges of unfairness made by Americans against the British officials at the Olympic games at London, a full [illegible] E. Sullivan, president of the A.A.U. of the United States, and a third is Gustavus T. Kirby, one of the American members of the Comite L'Honneur. Mr. Kirby has written a pamphlet based on the subject of British unfairness and Hon. Mr. Maccabe, in the Boston Globe, made a number of specific charges.

"A DELIBERATE LIE."

The first Maccabe accusation is that in drawing for the preliminary heats a number of slips were drawn from a hat. The slips were of two colors, one green repeesenting the British athletes, and the other white representing the foreigners. The green slips were not put in the hat at all, and so every bye and walk-over went to the British athlete. The reply to this cahrge begins by explaining that the Americans were informed officially on two occasions as to the method of drawing heats and concludes, "No green slips were ever used, and the statement made is a deliberate lie." Charge No. two was that "some of the officials actually swore at our men," to which the answer is "This is absolutely untrue." In the famous four hundred metre race, which was the cause of more trouble than all the other contests combined, Hon. Mr. Maccabe alleged that "some of the Englishmen actually pulled Taylor on the track by force." The British assert that Taylor was not interferred with in any way and that he had nothing to do with the fouling of Halswelle by Carpenter.

"A DISGRACEDUL FALSEHOOD"

Mr. Maccabe alleged that officials struck Hayes, the Marathon winner, when he was coming to the tape. The answer is "This is a disgraceful falsehood." Re the tug-of-war in which the Brisish team pulled over the Americans as though they were "a lot of girls," as the despatch said, Mr. Maccabe declared that the British team wore "specially prepared shoes, which were not allowed under the rules. They had prongs at the toe, and heel plates like small horseshoes in the heel." The answer to this charge recites the rule in question, and concludes: "There were no prongs at the toes, and the boots worn absolutely complied with the conditions of the contest." Mr. Maccabe final charge was to the effect "Every Day" after the Marathon race the spectators would yell "Who won the Marathon" to which the answer would be "Doarando." Then the cry would come, "Who got the prize," And truth would compel the shouters to "America." The British officials note the phrase "every day," and point out that the Marathon took place on the last day but one of the games. They characterize this charge "as quite in keeping with the other unfair and untrue charges."

ONE FOR MR. SULLIVAN

Having disposed of Hon. Mr. Maccabe, the British officials take up Mr. Sullivan's statements to the effect that the British officials were the most unfair and prejudiced in the world. They say that "no protest or objection was made by any of the other twenty nations, but on the contrary very many letters have been received by the A.A.A. congratulating them on the success of the games, and on the efficient manner in which they were carried out and expressing thanks for "the generous treatment accorded the competitors." Next came the Kirby charges, the first one being against the entry of Longboat, and the answer to which is that the British Olympic Council approved the entry. Mr. Kirby said that Sherman was not allowed to compete in the broad jump because he was not present at roll call; but that he was actually running in a race when roll was called. The A.A.A. says that Sherman was told that if he had notified the jumping judges that he was competing [illegible] he would have been transferred to another section in the broad jump. Another charge was that for the pole vault a hole was not allowed. A hole is contrary to British rules and to those of other countries competing. The rest of Mr. Kirby's charges are of a trivial nature, hardly worth making, if true, and hardly worth denying if otherwise.

All the American accusers have had something to say as to the famous four hundred metre rase, in which Carpenter, one of the American runners, was disqualified for having fouled Halswelle, one of the British competitors. Carpenter, therefore, was not allowed to start in the final, which was won by Halswelle. The Americans insisted that Carpenter did not foul Halswelle. Here is the statement of Dr. Badger, vice-president of the A.A.A. and the umpire in the race question: "Robbins and Carpenter (both Americans by the wat) were in such a position as to compel Halswelle to run very wide all around the bend; and as they swung into the stretch Halswelle made a big effort and was gaining hard, but as they went up the stretch, the further they went the wider went Carpenter out from the verge, keeping his right shoulder sufficiently in front of Mr. Halswelle to prevent passing." The other officials confirm this view.

NO RELATIONS TO SEVER

Particularly interesting and significant is the final paragraph of the British defense, which deals with the published threat of the A.A.U. to break of all relations with the A.A.A. of Great Britain. "To this it is sufficient to say that although the A.A.U. of America have repeatedly asked to enter into working agreement with the A.A.A. the latter body have always respectfully respectfully declined. There are there fore no athletic relations to break off."

THIRD AVENUE - 'PHONE 177

A Free India

The movement for a constitutional India is attracting widespread interest and the problem of Indian administration looms large in the columns of the English papers and reviews. The agitation in which Keir Hardie figured so prominently, the activity of the Indian "intellectuals' and of Anglo-Saxon members of the National Congress, such as Sir Henry Cotton have been followed by a promise contained in the jubilee message of the Emperor King of increased native representation in the councils of the Indian empire. Meanwhile, Lord Ma[illegible]ent of philosophic radicalism, whose writings have been largely formative of the new school of Indian thought, is seen as a determined bureaucrat resolved at all costs to keep down sedition and establish order.

The success of Japan, the constitutional movement in Persia and the peaceful resolution in Turkey have led to a broadening of the Indian demands, and the following article published recently in the Manchester Dispatch shows how radical in tendency is the New India movement. The writer, Virendranath Chattopadhyaya is described editorially "as a native of India and an ardent apostle of her freedom from British rule" "We do not, of coorse, endorse his views," says the editor, "but give as a frank exposition of the ambitions of the youny and revolutionary school in India."

The failure of the Indian Mutiny of 1857 was the beginning of a new era in the history of the Indian people. Partly by the heroism of the English, but chiefly by the aid received from the sagacious countrymen of the rebels, that rising was quelled and the British empire in India was established. And in order to show the magnanimous generosity with which the sins of the past were forgiven, the late Queen caused a great proclamation to be issued on November 2nd, 1858, which English statesmen and administrators have loudly and proudly declared to be the Magna Charta of the Indian people, and which the people of India themselves for nearly fifty years believed to be such.

But the sincerity of the promise is measured by the extent to which its fulifilment is attempted, and it is to be feared that when the "solemn pledges" of the proclamation (as Lord Lytton declared them to be) are placed side by side with the actual facts of half a century of British rule there is some justification for India to iturn her eyes away from British sincerity and justice in order to follow the vision on the near horizon.

For nearly thirty years after the great Mutiny the spirit of rebellion whose outward expression alone had been suppressed, maintained itself in a multitude of secret societies which were gaining in strength and substance until a wise and farseeing Englishman, moved by a genuinely liberal spirit, gathered up the revolutionary force and turned them into the open channells of constitutional agitation.

The Indian National Congress was not truly Indian, because its presidnts and advocates have often been Englishmen; nor was it truly national, because there was then practically no consciousness of national unity. It has, however, served for twenty-three years as a critic of the British-Indian bureaucracy, but its criticisms have been of the nature of monotonous formulas and mendicant resolutions.

And when in the historic failure of 1907 they were called upon to put swadeshi and svaraj upon their programme they foolishly endeavored to say that what they wanted was self government, such as is to be found in the colonies; they wanted to remain "within the empire' Sir Henry Cotton, a leading member of the British Committee of the Congress, stated that the Congress ideal of New India was a "United States of India" under the aegis of the Pax Britannica.

Very fine words in the mouth of of a Liberal Englishman but blatant hyprocisy when uttered by a responsible Indian. There can be no compromise between British rule and Indian independence, and even if Sir Henry Cotton and the Hon. Mr. Gorkhale are right in interpreting the ideal of "new India," they are certainly ignorant of the ideal of real India.

BRITAIN MUST GO

Why, it will be asked, should it be impossible to effect a compromise between British supremacy and svaraj (or independence) The answer can be brief, bcause it is decisive. It is to be found in the correct definition of the words loyalty and patriotism. We can be loyal to persons and institutions only so far as they symbolize our highest ideals, and the Indian people were loyal to the British government to the extent to which they believed that institution to bethe means by which their highest political and cultural ideals would be raised.

Their loyalty therefore did notrun counter to their patriotism. But they have now learned that it is absolutely impossible for one race to rule another without exterminating both. So in the conflict that has arisen between our loyalty and our patriotismwe have decided that Britain must go.

But we Nationalists do not talk about our grievances, because we have none that we ourselves cannot redress. We have determined that Britain shall be brought face to face with the will of the pople and if she will not have he foresight to listento our proposals for a peaceful revolution, why, then, the Arms Act of 1881, will not prevent the other kind of arbitration.

There is not a man of us who are not grateful to England for all that she has done for us; for she herself has meant well, though her sons have gone astray. There is not a man of us who hates England or Englishmen, for it is only imperialists who suffer from race animosities.

And on the very day when Edward VII sends his message to the people of India the people of India feel a larger and older message to mankind.

We have hitherto been pupils of England. We begin to know that we are destined to be tge teachers of humanity. That is the true inwardness of Indian nationalism, the deeper meaning of our conception of svaraj and of our spirit of bande mataram.

Huxley and Hunt in Canada.

One is sometimes disposed to consider "what might have been" in connection with Canada and Canadian institutions. For instance, Holman Hunt, the painter of that famous picture, "The Light of the World," once thought of coming to Canada to take up farming. Would Hunt have made Canada more artistic and have wrought out his great works here, or would he have become a poor farmer instead of a great painter; and done no good either for himself or for Canada. But an even more interesting speculation is that concerning Huxley, who once came near being a professor of Toronto University. Would the great scientist have been as successful as he was in England, or would the environment have cramped his energies? Would Huxley have been promoted and appreciated, or would he have been misunderstood and kept down, dwarfed for want of material and inspiration? In any event, it is in such men a nation lives and the more Canada can attract or develop the more rapid will be progress, the deeper and fuller her current of life.

Luxury For Paupers.

One of the members of the Epsom Board of Guardians, on the occasion of a recent visit to the workhouse, recorded his impressions in the visitors' book as follows: "I have inspected the house, and it seems to me the most comfortable dwelling-house in the town."

Afflicted for years with a Diseased Liver.

Mr. L. R. Devitt, Berlin, Ont., better known, perhaps, as "Smallpox Ben," has used

MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

He has also used them for his patients when nursing them, and it is a well-known fact that small-pox sufferers must keep the bowels well regulated.

Read what he says:—"I have been afflicted for years with a diseased liver, and have tried all kinds of medicine, but of no avail until about four years ago I tried your Laxa-Liver Pills, and got instant relief Since then I have nursed different patients afflicted with small-pox, and in each case I have used your valuable pills.

"My wishes are that all persons suffering with stomach or liver troubles will try Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I will advertise them whenever and wherever I have an opportunity and I hope that if at any time I cannot get the pills, I will be fortunate enough to get the formula."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25 cents per vial or 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers or will be mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Another evidence of how desirable a location Medicine Hat is for manufacturers! The Calgrry Natural Gas Company, a company that has no present prospects but only faith, wants to make an agreement with the city council of Calgary to supply power at a central station for fifty dollars per horse power per year if they strike gas. In Medicine Hat power costs about $2.25 per horse power per year. And Medicine Hat has the gas NOW, while Calgary is never likely to get it.

It should notrequire much talking to induce manufacturers to select the cheader rate, and save ialmost $48 per h.p. But it does. And why? Why is it that so many industries pass us by when thousands of dollars can be saved by establishing here? There are a number of answers that could be given, but the principal one is that Medicine Hat in the past has never welcomed new-comers. We are altogether too anxious to keep everything in the line of power or expression of opinion in the hands of a few who have lived here for many years.

The kind of service Medicine Hat is getting from her correspondents to outside papers is not giving her much advertising. Every town in Alberta gets more in the Winnipeg papers than does Medicine Hat. The most important events are omitted, and those that appear are so many days late to make them anything but news. For instance the Winnipeg Telegram of Nov. 19th contained the fatalaccident to a Bow Island man that occurred on the 9th. And the message commenced, "News has just been received etc" There is a lot of valuable publicity that can be secured free from correspondents, but Medicine Hat is missing much of it.

Premier Scott has again proved himself to be the man this district knows him. The cause of the Laird vs. Scott libel action was the statement of Scott that Laird has secured $5,000 graft off the waterworks contract. When particulars were ordered to be filed, Scott deserted his original charge entirely and made his details refer to a couple of entirely different matters. It is to be hoped that the courts will give him a lesson in honesty and ordinary justice.

The National Transcontinental Commission is mad. The London Times charged it with graft in the construction of the G.T.P. To vindicate their own honor, as well as the political morality of Canada they are "taking prompt steps." What a terribly momentous thing, the "political morality of Canada" becomes — at times!" These ebullitions of righteous indignation deceive nobody. After the graft that is being exposed every day in the government circles everyone laughs at such sudden interest in Canada's political morality. Even in connection with the G.T.P. itself all Canada knows how ridiculous the commission makes itself in resenting almost any charge of graft.

The News dares to touch on the printing question and makes it an excuse for making a lot of statements which are so much "rot" News feels pretty sure that The Times will not (except under great pressure) go into the details of the "hogging" it has done in printing it has done for public bodies on which the editor could exert a pull. The News did not give the figures on civic printing. The Times could but it will not do so just now. Re Board of Trade printing and soliciting from the city, the Times will contradict The News point blank, and in addition will merely remark that two-thirds i of the B. af T. printing; given to the Times was won by tender in one big job, whereas The News secured all its printing at regular prices. The Times could also give some particulars about the Associated Boards of Trade printing which would throw some light upon what to expect.

Perhaps The News would like to publish details of that great game The News served upon the council in the printing of the building by-laws. If it wishes to get i the tails copies of letters from every big printing office in the West, stating what it thinks of The News method of filling the order are open to the inspection of that great family journal.

Perhaps the News would like to have published now close to contract some of its tenders were fulfilled.

However, as more impartiality is shown in public printing The Times will say nothing further just as present. But it has the figures and proofs. The fact that the News News says it never solicited work from the council has nothing to do with the FACTS. Never mind! the people of the city are rapidly finding out the schemes of The News and its management and no more revelations are needed at present fromThe Times.

Did you wade through that last New's civic article? Those who did will be anxious to know if the writer survived the plunge towrite another. The list of charges o suspicions against aldermen will be largely news to the ratepayers. s what a vivid imagination can do. Thursday's article in The News will be entitled "How I Made Medicine Hat," or "Me The News and Go"

The latest announcement of the Alberta government regarding its active plan for railroad construction will mean a lot to Alberta if it does not end there. The Calgary Herald ican justly claim a great deal of credit for the policy announced.

When is the government going to show that its control of telephones means anything to the different cities. Apart from an extension of long distance serpice it is a loss to every city to have the system under the government. In Medicine Hat all the free phones in the city hal; are cut out, the newspapers pay more and there is not a cents reduction any place. After all the promises of the Hon. Mr. Cushing it appears to be orly of as much value as the ushal promises of politicians.

The Winnipeg Post sees fit to hand out a general defence of the Eye Opener which is made up largely made up of a "roast" for Canadian editors because they did not defend Edwards. In the process of article the Post says without qualification: "these very editors who

So ones could go on quoting case after case, and it is by working such cures that Zam-Buk has earned for itself its great reputation.

Now if you suffer from this terribly painful ailment just be guided by the foregoing cases!

For internal piles melt a little Zam-Buk and thoroughly soak a wad made of clean, old linen. Then apply to the parts. If the piles are external, application of Zam-Buk is still more simple. Do it upon retiring. Next morning you will be well satisfied.

Zam-Buk is a cure also for cold sores, and chapped, cracked hands, ulcers, festering sores, blood-poisoning, eczema, bad leg, ringworm, scalp sores, burns, scalds and all skin diseases and injuies.

Alldruggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c a box, or may be obtained post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price; three boxes for $1.25. You are warned, however against dangerous and cheap imitations sometimes offered as being just as good.

Cut This out and Save It

There is so much Rheumatism here in our neighborhood now that the following advice will be highly appreciated by those who suffer:

Get from any good pharmacy one half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake these well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime; also drink plenty of good water.

It is claimed there are few victims of this dread and torturous disease who will fail to find really relief in this simple home-made mixture and in most cases a permanent cure is the result.

This remedy is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the kidneys so that they can filter and strain from the blood and system the poisons, acids and waste matter, which cause not only Rheumatism, but numerous other diseases. Every man or woman here who feels that their kidneys are not healthy or active, or who suffers from any urinary trouble whatever, should not hesitate to make up this mixture, and it is certain to do much good, and may save you from much misery and suffering after while.

Our home druggists say they will either supply the ingredients or mix the prescription ready to take if our readers ask them.

:o:

Well I should say it does! Last week a Belmont merchant advertised fresh dairy butter for sale. The compositor substituted an "h" for a "d" and the ad. read, "Fresh Hairy Butter For Sale." A smart barber called up the grocer and offered to shave the butter at standard rates. The grocer got mad licked the barber, bending his nose, and otherwise disfiguring him so that he was compelled to call upon the doctor who charged him a tenner for services rendered. The next day the barber met the editor on the street and threw a brick at him giving him a close shave. In his effort to get away the pen pusher fell down, tearing his trousers on the west side so badly that he was necessitated to buy a new pair, also the editorial sheets which were in his hip pocket, penetrated his anatomym so that the services of a surgeon were required. And all the result of one little ad. Who asked, "Does it pay to advertise?"—Exchange.

ZAM-BUK AS A CURE FOR PILES

Impressive Cures of Women Sufferers Our Readers should note these cases

Wherever there is suffering from piles Zam-Buk should be applied. There are lots of reasons for this, but one of the best is that in practically all cases of piles where the use of Zam-Buk is persevered with complete cure—not mere relief—is the result.

Mrs. Wm. Hughes, of 253 Hochelaga Street, Hochelaga, Montreal, says "I suffered from iblind itching and protruding piles for years. Sometimes they were so bad that I could hardly bear to move about. The inflammation, the burning, smarting pain, the throbbing, the aching, the overpowering feeling of dullness and dark despair which this ailment always brings, the shooting spasms of agony—all were so terrible that only sufferers from this awful ailment can understand!"

Bad as this case was, Zam-Buk triumphed, and Mrs. Hughes suffers no longer. It needed a little perseverance with Zam-Buk certainly, but in the end it cured!

Mrs. E. Boxall, of Scott Street, St. Thomas, says:—"For For months without cessation I endured awful pain from bleeding piles. For as many months I tried everything which I thought would give me ease, but in the end disvirited and still suffering I gave in.

Then it wal she heard of Zam-Buk, and she adds, "Although I feared Zam-Buk would be like the ordinary remedies—useless—I am glad it was not. It soon proved itself to be very different. It rapidly gave me relief, and after a time cured me completely. I would like to let all sufferers from piles know what a grand thing Zam-Buk is."

YOUR DANGER BEGINS WHEN YOUR BACK ACHES.

It is the First and the Sure Sign of Kidney Disease.

Doan's Kidney Pills

cure the aching back by curing the aching kidneys beneath—for it is really the kidneys aching and not the back.

They act directly on the kidneys and make them strong and healthy, thereby causing pure blood to circulate throughout the whole system.

Mrs. Frank Foos, Woodside, N.B., writes:—"I was a great sufferer with backache for over a year, and could get nothing to relieve me until I took two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and now I do not feel any pain whatever, and can eat and sleep well; something I could not do before.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

did this disgraceful ducking seek to entertain their friends in clubs and bar rooms by retailing these very stories and worse." This shows the style of man who wrote the article. It is no sign of prudery or superciliousness to resent such a charge. There are scores of Canadian editors who are in such a different class from The Post editor that naturally he does not understand them and one can expect that his low ideas and habits will give utterance to such a nasty charge. In Alberta alone there are a dozen editors who would think it beneath them to retail the Eye Opener yarns and in Ontario there are many more. An editor or writer who would let himself say such a thing as The Post published will very naturally feel sore that these filthy yarns have been cut out of the Eye Opener.

Even to Edwards himself there must be given a superior standing to that given by the Post writer (we can't imagine it is The Post editor) for Edwards admits in his last issue: "the rider which the jury added to the verdict was O.K. and we frankly admit the justice of it." So that Edwards has a higher sense of decency than The Post writer who attempts to defend him.

The Lethbridge Board of Trade turned down The Herald's offer to hold a meeting in Lethbridge on the railway proposition because it did not see "the advisability of this board connecting itself with any movement which might be of a political aspect." Which means that the Lethbridge B. of T. is Liberal and will support Lnothing which starts in a Conservative newspader office. What the work of the Herald for railways for Alberta has to do with politics is put there only by the Lethbridge B. of T. If there is anything outside of politics it is better railroad communication for Alberta. If the Herald asked for the co-operation of Lethbridge in introducing a thousand-bushel variety of wheat, Lethbridge would probably turn it down as political.

HUSSIE GOT SIX MONTHS

(Lethbridge Herald)

Taber, Nov. 23.—The case of petty larceny charged against Charlie Hussie of Grassy Lake for the 13th inst was disposed of yesterday at 5 p.m. by Inspector West and Magistrate S.J. Layton.

Dr. W. R. Hawk, a veterinary surgeon being the first witness, said: "I live at Medicine Hat an was at Grassy Lake on the 13th of October I was staying at the Grassy Lake Hotel in room No. five. I left my grip in my room while I attended my business at the stock yards being away until evening. My grip was unlocked. On my return to Medicine Hat on the 14th I missed my revolver, six cartridges and a razor The articles exhibited "A" and "B" I recognize as those taken from my grip. The shells exhibit "C" are also similar to mine.

When I missed my revolver I wrote to Constable C.J. Coleridge, of Grassy Lake, informing him of my loss.

Constable Coleridge said: "On the 15th of October I received a communication from Dr. Hawk, stating that a .38 Colt revolver had been taken from his grip at the Grassy Lake hotel. He asked me to keep an eye open for it. I spoke to the night clerk, Warren Rosa, telling him to look out for this gun. The prisoner Charles Hussie arrived on the 12th from Taber. Rosa said Hussie tried to sell him a revolver describing his gun to him as .38 Colts revolver with six shells, all of which were cached in a hole in the ground, about a mile north of town by the side a ditch."

Warren Rosa being sworn said: "I was employed as night bartender. I knew the accused at Grassy Lake. He was staying in the hotel about the middle of October in the sitting room in the day time after Mr. Eli had discharged him. He told me he had a Colt's revolver .35 or .38 calibre. I told him there was no such thing as a .35.

He offered it to me for $5.00 and said it was north of the hotel in a ditch in a hole by the side of two roads, and he could find it. The accused and I went out next morning to look for the gun, but as the snow was so deep we could not find it. On our way out here he told me he brought the gun with him from the States, and for the second time remarked, "Don't let anybody see the gun."

"About Nov. 13 I was out riding near Maunsell's ranch. I noticed two stones along the ditch, looked into the hole and found the gun, as described by the accused."

Charlie Hussie, the accused, was then sworn an said: "I came to Grassy Lake, about the 13th of Oct and went to work for John Eli at the hotel. I was employed a few days, and just because I would not work just for my board he fired me. I didn't tell Rosa anytaing about the gun. When I was at the station I made al little money carrying grips to the station for gentlemen. Before I went to Grassy Lake I worked in the Duggin and Huntroid's mine at Taber over one month. Before that two months at the Royal Collieries Mines at Lethbridge before that six manths at Michel and have lived two years in Canada.

There being no question as to the guilt of the accused he was sentenced to serve a six months' term of imprisonment at hard labor at Lethbridge.

COULD NOT WORK.

Miss Murial Wright, Maniac, N.B., writes: "I was sick and run down, would have Headaches, a bitter taste in my mouth, floating specks before my eyes and pains in my back. I was not able to do any house work at all and could not sleep at night. Several doctors doctored me but I saw I was getting no help, and on the advice of a friend I got three bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters and they effected a complete cure.

Mayoralty

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF MEDICINE HAT:—

I have been presented with a requisition signed by one hundred of my fellow citizens and ratepayers, requesting that I allow my name to be put in nomination for Mayor of our City for the year 1909. After due consideration I have decided to comply with the request.

If the City should express its trust in me, I shall keep in view the all-important necessity of keeping the Council in harmony with the City, so that it may be endowed with a vigor that will enable it to encourage our home industries and take full advantage of the many possibilities within our reach.

In selecting the various committees for the year it will be done with a view to have every ward properly represented, so that the needs of the city will receive attention. In regard to the sewerage system. I would favor building the septic tank and main trunk sewer connecting with the present system and afterwards extending as the rate-payers demanded.

I would also give special attention to improving and extending our water works and gas systems, so that they could be maintained in a high state of efficiency at a minimum of cost, with a view to a re-adjustment of water rates and taxation.

There has been some adverse criticism of the present system of Municipal book-keeping. If upon investigation, changes are necessary to keep the various accounts in such order that their actual condition can be ascertained at once, I would certainly support the reforms.

Indications point to a rapid development within our city in the near future, and our already extensive municipal enterprises, requiring more time than the Aldermen can devote to executive work, suggests that a system be adopted that will relieve them, and at the same time maintain a thorough system of supervision over the city's works. This question will have to be dealt with early in the year.

If elected my aim will be, with the assistance of a united Council and City, to make 1909 a banner year.

D. MILNE.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

BIG UNION OF RAILWAY MEN.

Denver, Nov. 23.—It is announced today that there was born in Denver yesterday a powerful railway Employees Department in the American Federation of Labor with ten affiliated organizations as members. H.B. Ephram was elected chairman and John Flannery secretary. The object is to bring about a closer union of the railway employees and seek to affiliate all railway organizations with this one. The first convention is to be held in Denver, and it is thought one hundeed thousandi employees will be represented by the officers of the unions, which are as follows: Freight Handlers, Machinist, Car Workers, Blacksmiths Railway Clerks, Switchmen, Maintenance of Way Employees and Steam Fitting.

TO MEET AT TORONTO

Denver, COL. Nov. 22—At yesterday's meeting of the American Federation of Labor it was decided to hold next year's convention of the Federation at Toronto, Ont. Several American cities extended invitations but the Canadian city won on a vote being taken.

Sydney, Nov. 20. The mining trouble at Broken Hill, where a strike has been in progress to some time past is beginning to assume picturesque phases.

The New South Wales Premier Mr Wade was today burned in effigy The miners ex ed by ste ir cluding Tom Mann, the London agitator, are very defiant of authorit and declare they will ignorethe Industrial Disputes Act, which involves compulsory arbitration.

The men are further incensed by the arrival of a detachment of mounted police. There are reports that firearms are concealed in the mines, but the statements in the Federal Parliament that arms and munition had been smuggled by th? State Government through South Australia into Broken Hill are discredited.

The government sewrage employees are on strike in Sydney and some officials have been imprisoned for a breach of the arbitration law.

There is wide discontent in the extreme Socialist constituencies. The Labor Opposition in the New South Wales parliament walked out in a rom the chamber and intend holding indignation meetings throughout the country against the "czarism" of Mr. Wade.

TORONTO DELIGHTED

Toronto, Nov. 22.—The labor unons here are delighted over the se tion of Toronto for the next con ntion of the American Federation f Labor. Over twelve hundred dele ates and visitors are expected. The nions will apuoint a committee to se $5000 for the expenses.

SAMUELGOM PERS WINS

Denver, Nov. x1.—Samuel Gompers was this morning re-elected resident of th American Federation of Labor. Only one vote against was cast and that was by a delegat from Wisconsin state Federation. J. Duncan was re-elected vice-president by acclamation. John Witchell was elected second vice-president.

BRONCHITIS

Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather, and is a very dangerous inflammatory affection of the bronchial tubes.

The Symptoms are tightness across the chest, sharp pains and a difficulty in breathing, and a secretion of thick phlegm, at first white, but later of a greenish or yellowish color. Neglected Bronchitis is one of the most general causes of Consumption.

Cure it at once by the use of

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine SYRUP

Mrs. D. D. Miller, Allandale, Ont., writes: "My husband got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for my little girl who had Bronchitis. She wheezed so badly you could hear her from one room to the other, but it was not long until we could see the effect your medicine had on her. That was last winter when we lived in Toronto.

"She had a bad cold this winter, but instead of getting another bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I tried a home made receipt which I got from a neighbor but found that her cold lasted about twice as long. My husband highly praises 'Dr. Wood's,' and says he will see that a bottle is always kept in the house."

Price of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup 25 cents per bottle. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, so, be sure and accept none of the many substitutes of the original "Norway Pine Syrup."

NEW MANAGER OF CANNERIES.

Toronto, Dec. 2.—Shareholders of the Western Canneries met at the King Edward Hotel last night on the call of C. A. Flower, assistant manager, director. The shareholders present recommended that he be appointed managing director. Flower will go to the Regina meeting armed with this recommendation and several hundred proxies.

A. B. Barton, chairman of the meeting, said that the eastern shareholders believed the funds of the company had been expended recklessly. The plant of the company at Medicine Hat, Mr. Flower thought, was too expensive to be hurt by competition. Mr. Flower then lengthily discussed the proposed canning work to be carried on at their plant. It would take $150,000 to put the proposition on a business basis.

ALMOST ASPHYXIATED

[illegible] family of Mr. T. S. Halpin of Braden St. had a narrow escape from asphyxiation last Wednesday. During the course of the morning the kitchen stove been burning at full force, and, the damper having been closed supposedly by the children who were playing about the house, the fumes rapidly filled the rooms. The escape of the partially burnt gas was not detected until it had seriously affected the children and Mrs. Halpin. Mr. Halpin, who is employed on night work in the C. P. R. shops, was asleep in his room, and, as the fumes had begun to affect him also it was with difficulty that he was aroused. On being awakened he hurried down to Mrs. Glover's house to call in her aid and to Dr. Woodland for medical assistance. The mother and three children were found in a state of stupor. Fortunately the family recovered and have since felt few ill effects. Mrs. Halpin, who was the worst sufferer, is now almost recovered from the effects of her terrible experience.

THE REASON FOR IT.

This week The Times wishes to thank The News for its kindness in allowing the use of its monotone operator for a day. Had The News not helped us to this exient we would have been forced to present another mongied edition.

As explained last week, the trials of a newspaper are most exciting at times. We had engaged a man with all the self-conessed excellence of a natural gas supply for power, but after a week's trial The Times found it had only struck a pocket and a mighty small one at that. In fact the pressure from the beginning was so weak as to make no impression on the big branch of copy that has to be handled every week in The Times office.

Possibly the pressure had been expended in the recommendation despatched every other post to The Times by our performer of the Monotone keys. The only thing The Times liked about the star performer was his exit, and it would have increased its likings much more could it have kept the good week's check it had to sign for one day's work, or rather car ousal.

As a rule to see a thing in The Times is to know it's true (we dodged that one), but we must confess that is not necessarily correct because you see it in The Times that "ask" is spelled "asv" or "the" spelled "tae" or "them" is manipulated into "taem" or "country" disfigured int. "cotutry." "Trough" doesn't resemble "though" to any exciting extent, nor is any cuss word inserted when "necessay" is printed "nec—ay." Those are only the idiosyncrasies of Monotone operator who had not yet been awakened. It isn't even a myth of "the day after" when "patience has a 'b' for an 'n,' but it was the beginning of the end of our patience.

To those who wandered through the [illegible] meanderings of that manipulator's depths in the issue of two weeks ago deserve a medal—or condolences.

When Davison left town he took with him the secret to a unique method of spelling that would make Roosevelt resigne to keep up.

The Times lost both the man and the secret—thank goodness!

Just at this season of the year Medicine men dislike changing their positions as they miss their Christmas presents and spend money in transportation that would have gone to maintain sets for their "cousins." However, The Times pays the best wages going and will have the best man that is to be had. In the meantime the entire staff is working early and late so that the readers won't know that we "flit" at a proposition that had only itself as a guarantee.

Change of Business

Mr. J. J. Hewitt, formerly manger for the Marshall Hardware Co. has purchased the business of R. E. Walton & Co. on Main St. and opened up his new store this morning.

Mr. Hewitt takes into the business lots of experience and the best wishes of the Times and his many friends.

Be sure and read his advertisement next week.

Mrs. LeBlanc desires to express her thanks for the kindness shown her in her recent sorrow.

W. Hamilton has bought out A. Foster's interests in Foster & Hamilton, and will manage the business himself.

METHODIST BANQUET

METHODIST MEN MEET TO TALK

The great success of the banquet held in the basement of the Methodist church on Wednesday fully justified the new departure which had been made. New avenues by which the church may attain to a wider sphere of influence in the community were opened up, and the evening's gatherings gave promise of great things in the church's history.

About ninetr men sat down to the repast and after the guests had partaken of the many good things provided by the ladies of the church, the serious business of the evening, discussion of church affairs, was taken up. Throughout the evening musical numbers were interspersed between the addresses Messrs. Frost and Simmonds contributing to this part of the programme and adding much to the enjoyment of the gathering.

The first speaker to be called upon was Mr. Brotherton, who dwelt upon the aims of the church, showing how in its various departments of endeavor one end was in view—the building up of its members in vigorous Christian character.

Mr. J. Kennedy followed with an address on Sunday school work, appealing to his hearers to put a hand to the plow and interest themselves in this branch of church activity. The needs of the foreign field were also spoken of, and especial reference was made to the Laymen's Missionery Movement which aims at the evangelization of the world in the present generation.

An inspiring address was delivered by the pastor, the Rev. A. C. Farrell, who appealed for a virile, manly Christianity an everyday Christianity which shall be of influence in the civil and business life of the community.

After a few words by Ald. Spencer, the chairman, Mr. Patterson moved a vote of thanks to the ladies who had provided the banquet. He suggested that at an early date the men should give a banquet to the ladies. The motion was seconded by Mr. Benson and Mrs. Trimble suitably responded on behalf of the ladies.

The news has been received that the C. P. R. has moved to the superintendency at this point, C. S. Maharg, formerly of Saskatoon.

Mr. Lawrence is ordered to new duties and will leave the city as soon as the new superintant arrives, about the 15th of the month.

Mr. J. J. McKim has withdrawn in favor of Mr. Wm. Ansley.

The agency of the Hartford Fire Insurance Co. has been given to A. Patterson.

W. Cunningham Smith of Chappie's Lake was a visitor to the city last week.

Mr T. E. Patterson will not receive on the 14th of this month.

Mr and Mrs Jas. Porter have returned from a visit to Rochester, Minn., Winnipeg, and Regina. Mr Porter is much improved in health.

The Railway Meeting

A large number of citizens gathered in the City Hall on Monday evening the 30th ult. to hear Mr. J. H. Woods and Mr. Jess Dorman, of the Calgary Herald, speak on the railway needs of the province.

The meeting was called to order by Mayor Cousins, who introduced the speakers of the evening.

Mr. Woods, in opening, explained the object of the tour of the province organized by the Calgary Herald. Though it might well be thought that the adoption of this plan would be a good piece of newspaper business, he could give his assurance that solely a desire to do their share of what they considered a public duty had actuated himself and his associates in undertaking this work. The speaker then went on to describe the chain of circumstances which had eventually led to the Herald entering on its vigorous railroad propaganda. Mr. Dorman had first of all been sent out to obtain crop reports for Alberta on similar lines to those of the Manitoba Free Press. On his return, however, from viewing the wheat fields, not the crops, but the chances of moving the crops was the burden of his tale. Above everything else the railway question was paramount. The second tour was then projected, and the sequel was the series of letters on the need of railway development in all parts of the province which Mr. Dorman contributed to the papers. The correspondent was instructed to avoid riding in the train in any instance and to cover Alberta entirely on horseback.

The Herald did not wish to claim any inordinate share in the agitation for railways. ...Generous support had been given by both sides of politics. But at least one result had been accomplished—in obtaining the recent statement on railroad policy by the Aberta government, and in the creation of a new portfolio, between now and the next session of the Legislature was the time to get the province so aroused that the government might feel that the people were behind any vigorous railroad policy which might be adopted. Many people were inclined to the belief that political motives actuated the newspaper in this matter, but in railways they knew no politics. Neither could the policy be a sectional one. As much attention had been given to the north by Mr. Dorman as to the south. As to the method by which railroad development should be carried out—government building and operation, government building and leasing for operation to a company, or subsidizing or guaranteeing the bonds of a corporation—it had not seemed desirable to dictate to the government in this matter. The prime thing was to get the railways. Early next spring construction should begin, to continue until such time as the needs of the province are fully served. New roads were required to move next season's crop. Mr. Woods believed that the govt had some definite intention. If the right course were followed, in five years' time we might have in Alberta a population of 1,000,000 souls, instead of a paltry twenty per cent. increase. All that was necessary was to send across the line the information that two thousand miles of railroads would be put under immediate construction, to bring about an enormous influx of population from the States.

Mr. Jess Dorman, the staff correspondent whose articles in the Herald have attracted such wide attention, was next called upon. For about an hour's time he held the interest of his hearers as he drew a vivid picture of conditions all over the province, where the farmers, anticipating the advent of the railroad, had put their land under cultivation. Now they were finding that their crop could not be marketed profitably. Many instances were given of farmers thirty, forty or forty-five miles from a railroad who could only sell their grain at a loss. One man thirty-five miles east of Calgary, who had sold thirty thousand bushels to a Calgary firm, had been able to haul only two thousand bushels. He now announced his intention of going to California and not growing another bushel of grain until the railroad came along.

At the conclusion of Mr. Dorman's address, discussion was invited and a number of citizens spoke on various aspects of the railroad problem. Mayor Cousins remarked that he had been suspicious in regard to any scheme which emanated from Calgary, whose energetic people were regarded as being always "on the grab" for their city. But he realized that if Calgary obtained several lines and Medicine Hat only one as a result of this agitation, Medicine Hat would still be well repaid.

Mr. Hutchison emphasized the need of new main lines to relieve the congestion. One main line were to-day insufficient to move the crops of the West. They would be far less adequate for our needs when a great new network had been created.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Woods and Mr Dorman was moved by Alderman Hudvale, seconded by Mr. C. S. Pingle, and carried unanimously. Al few weeks, as in them will be found the best suggestions for Christmas presents. The merchants who advertise are the most reliable, as it proves confidence in the wares they have to sell. They feel that publicity will help their sales, and a great deal of worry is saved purchasers by patronizing them.

Alderman Penhale raised the question of finances for the new road, to which Mr. Woods retorted that there were "barrels of money in the money centres of the world."

A rush dispatch from Edmonton says that the street service was held up there by snow the other day. One hard snowball at one motorman would do that.

by the Councils of both 1907 and 1908. The grant to the Band could not be considered as extravagant, as a great deal of pleasure had been derived through the concerts by the citizens and the money all remained in the city. It had not been thought wise to go on with the market building, as a heavy loss would have been incurred in the sale of the debentures at a low price. By next spring, however, the debentures would realize par value when it was hoped a good market building would be erected.

The Mayor read the subjoined statement showing the standing of the hospital account for 11 months:

Grant to Gen. Hospital	1000.00
Amount appropriated	2270.00
Amount spent over appropriation	17.75

Mr. W. J. Brotherton, chairman of the School Board, was then called upon and presented the following statement:

Abstract statement of receipts and expenditures of Medicine Hat School District No. 76 of the Province of Alberta for eleven months ending November 30th, 1908:

	$11,570.03

Insurance.—The school buildings and contents belonging to the district are insured for $36,600.

Debenture indebtedness.—The debenture indebtedness of the district remaining unpaid is $51,375.

The total expenditures to date, Mr. Brotherton stated, was $22,825.98, and the estimated expenditure for December would bring this up to $23,979.15. As the amount originally estimated for the year was $23,000, this would leave a deficit of $979.15. Of this amount, however, $893.58 was owing the Board from the Building Account, and the net deficiency was, therefore, only $85.57—not a bad showing on an expenditure of $23,000 Mr. Brotherton then read the following extract from a report on the schools prepared by Princ.pal Sansom:

"The total attendance in the city schools during 1908 to the end of November was 796, the largest number during any year in the history of the schools. The number of pupils in actual attendance during the month of November just closed was 639, which was also the largest number of pupils actually present during any month in the history of the schools. In addition to this it might be stated that a considerable number of pupils have lately been refused admission to the lower forms through lack of accommodation. By crowding pupils on into the intermediate classes at Christmas it is hoped that at least the greater number of those seeking admission may be accommodated at that time.

"We have on our staff eighteen teachers, three of whom are in the high school. In the high school—standards 6, 7 and 8—there are 48 students in attendance, an increase of forty per cent. over last year. Every subject on the high school curriculum is now taught and any student who wishes may matriculate directly from the high school into second year university work."

Mr. Brotherton then went on to speak of the high schooll bylaw which had been turned down by the taxpayers. There was not a vacant seat in the school at the close of the summer term.

Mr. Brotherton concluded by announcing that he would offer himself for reelection.

If he were returned the high school matter would be brought up again at a early date.

If the conclusion of Mr. Brotherton's report as no discussion was offered the the Mayor declared the meeting closed

Many Women Suffer Untold Agony From Kidney Trouble.

Very often they think it is from so-called "female disease." There is less "female trouble" than they think.

Women suffer from backache, sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability and a dragging down feeling in the loins. So do men, and they do not have "female trouble."

Why, then, blame all your trouble to "female disease"?

Most of the so-called "female disorders" are no more or less than "kidney disorders," and can be easily and quickly cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. C. Dupuis, Belleview Village, N.B., writes: "I was unable to do my housework for two years on account of backache. I could not get up the stairs. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me permanently after doctors failed to even relieve the pain. I can highly recommend them to all sufferers from kidney trouble."

Price 50 cts. per box or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

Okanagan Valley FRUIT FARMS

NARAMATA lies in the very heart of the now world-famous Okanagan Valley of British Columbia, one hundred miles south of Sicamous Junction, and on the east side of Okanagan Lake, directly opposite Summerland, with which it is connected by a ferry service. It has one of the finest townsites on the lake, and is surrounded by about five thousand acres of the finest fruit growing soil on this planet, chiefly a warm sandy loam on a whitish clay silt, such as they have in the renowned San Joaquin Valley of California. C.P.R. Steamers call at the wharf, and water power and electric lights from near by sources are things of the near future.

Naramata is the Place for Homes

Because its uplands are broken up into five and ten acre fruit lots, and five acres under irrigation and intensive culture yield phenomenal returns. That means comforts and culture in the homes. Across the lake in Summerland is a splendid educational institution, Okanagan College, employing seven teachers and giving full courses in vocal and instrumental music. Give your children a chance.

Health.

The climate is a model of healthfulness and conceded to be better than California for northern born people. The winters are exceedingly mild. Large flocks of ducks feed on the lake all winter. Children play out doors all the year round. In fact, the place has been already selected as the sight for a modern, rest-cure sanitarium.

Wealth

A THIRD consideration is that five or ten acres of fruit land will produce, with first class care, some remarkable results in cold cash. Witness the following from similar soil elsewhere in the Valley:

Facts

CASE 1.—From twenty acres of twelve year old Northern Spy apples in 1905, sold two hundred tons at a net profit of $10,875.—Manager Ricardo, Lord Aberdeen's ranch, in Vernon, News, November 23, 1905.

CASE 2.—Gave attention to strawberries and sold crop of the Senator Dunlop variety, from a strip one yard wide and eighteen rods long, at the rate of $1,935 an acres in 1907. Other varieties yielded at the rate of over $1,000 per acre.—Mr. G. W. McLaren, Summerland.

CASE 3.—Had 210 peach trees among his apples. Sold the crop off them in 1906 for $800 Reckoning 165 trees to the acre, that is at the rate of $1,200 per acre.—Mr. J. R. Brown Summerland.

CASE 4.—Sold the peaches on his trees in the 5th year for $355 per acre, and the purchaser picked and shipped them. Won't take less than $10,000 for his ten acres.—Mr. John Gummow, Peachland.

CASE 5.—Bought ten acres in Peachland for $1000. Improved it to the extent of $3,000, and sold it this year for $10,000.—Dr. R. C. Lipsett, Summerland.

Get Your Grip On It Now

Ten thousand dollar an acre days for you are coming. Get your grip on things now while they're going. For a five or ten acre fruit lot in Naramata write the Summerland Trust Company, or J. M. Robinson. Price $200 per acre; or see our agent.

That Poll Tax

The poll tax collector is once more getting in his hand and the little dollars are flowing into the city treasury from a large number of disgruntled, disgusted, fighting-mad citizens. The duties of the collector are not pleasant since he has to take all the blame and hard words which should rightly be directed against the city charter—that wonderful charter of ours, which the Council considers it treason to alter in the smallest detail.

The Times does not dispute the right of the Council to exact a poll tax, although the payers have a certain amount of argument when they dispute it by saying that the money they spend in the city is surely sufficient recompence for the benefits they receive directly from civic institutions.

But the part that is not fair about the tax is that scores of men are forced to pay three dollars and have not the slightest word to say as to its use. The man who is considered responsible for the payment of a tax should have a vote. Especially is this true when it is considered that a great many men in this city pay a great deal less than three dollars in taxes and their votes count just as much as those of men with the highest taxes. It is unreasonable that a property holder can get off with a tax as low as thirty cents and register a vote, whereas the payer of three dollars secures no franchise privileges.

Again, it is not right that the city should be enabled by its charter to collect from the employer if the employee will not pay. The employee considers that he has rights and it is only in court that he should be convinced of his liability. As it is now the city decides whether the employee is liable and the latter has nothing to say about it since the employer is forced to deduct from his wages without giving him a chance to state his side. If a man refuses to pay his taxes or objects to the assessment there is a court where it is decided between the city and the property owner; but if the employee objects to paying his poll tax he has no recourse, no protection. The city, in this case, is the final judge, and the only thing the employee can do is to go to law with his employer, who is forced by the city into the responsibe position. The poll tax payer should have a vote and the employer should have nothing to do with the collection of the poll tax.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The paper read by the Mayor at the annual meeting was worth hearing. The Mayor touched on the most important subjects fearlessly, and answered a number of insinuations made against the Council of 1907 by the News, in a convincing manner.

His contrast between the methods of managing a private business and that of a city were true enough to merit the attention of next year's Council towards making a change. He said a man would fire an employee in his own business as soon as he found him unsuitable and keep on firing until he got the man he wanted. But in civic affairs an employee holds his position very often through his pull with certain Alderman.

The financial conditions prevailing were blamed largely on the expenses incurred by the Council of 1906—such expenses as the filtration plant, which has been only an expense for two years, the sewer pipe manufactory, which made miles of sewer pipe to be piled on the park, and the digging of the pipe trench to the stand pipe in winter, etc.

The Mayor candidly stated that in two important particulars his mind had changed since he had been in office. He was now not in favor of paying the Aldermen and his reasons were good. He was also in favor of a higher rate for gas.

Some stress was laid upon the advisability of the ratepayers attending the Council meetings, and the papers came in for their annual roast, which they have become accustomed to treat like the poor—necessary evils.

The citizens of Medicine Hat will exceedingly regret the removal of Superintendent Lawrence from Medicine Hat. In the year and a half that Mr. Lawrence has been the local C.P.R. official he has won the confidence of everyone. He was a hard-working painstaking official, and with all the worries of one of the most difficult districts under his charge he was uniformly courteous.

The Transcontinental Railway Commissioners have had their bluff called. They have threatened to make The London Times apologise for accusing them of graft. The Winnipeg Telegram says they needn't hang out a bluff on an English paper as it is willing to re-publish all The Times published and an opportunity will be given of litigation at home.

It is only another case of Sir Fred. Borden doing to an English magazine what he was afraid to try on a Canadian paper.

The Harvest Number of the Saskatoon Phoenix is to hand. It is a most carefully prepared, well printed special edition of thirty-two extra pages, profusely illustrated with 42 columns of illustrations. The number produced was 20,000 and five tons of paper was used. Mr. Aikens, the editor, has reason to be proud of the excellent advertisement for his district, that has been the result of much hard work and expense.

The Times would recommend a careful perusal of the special advertising in its issues of the next.

Where the Weather is Made

By Bruce Barton, in World's Events

All the world is divided into two classes—those who know that there really is such a town as Medicine Hat, and those who suppose it is only a joke. The latter predominate. The former, having seen the name printed on maps, are convinced that the town actually exists, but know it only as the place where the weather is made. Except for that it has no fame or reputation. Curses are regularly poured out in its direction whenever a cold wave comes, and the standard comment for the winter months is: "Pretty cold, eh, but think what it must be in Medicine Hat."

Naturally then, the hardy explorer whose steps carry him to the far-famed town, seeks first for the place where the weather is made. Sometimes he finds it; more often he does not. In either event the illusion which he has nurtured through long years of a care-free childhood is shattered for good. He goes with former, having seen the name printed large expectations. He looks for a observatory with towers and windows. On the top of countless minarets he pictures to himself weird instruments measuring the velocity of the wind and catching eagerly at every drop of passing moisture. Inside he can see clearly in his mind's eye all the uncanny paraphernalia by which thunder showers and trade winds are gathered together and sent forth to spread destruction in their paths.

Naturally then, the hardy explorer whose steps carry him to the far-famed town, seeks first for the place where the weather is made. Sometimes he finds it; more often he does not. In either event the illusion which he has nurtured through long years of a care-free childhood is shattered for good. He goes with former, having seen the name printed large expectations. He looks for a on maps, are convinced that the town great, impressive observatory with actually exists, but know it only as towers and windows. On the many towers and windows. On the top of countless minarets he pictures the place where the weather is made. to himself weird instruments measuring the velocity of the wind and catching eagerly at every drop of passing moisture. Inside he can see clearly in his mind's eye all the uncanny paraphernalia by which thunder showers and trade winds are gathered together and sent forth to spread destruction in their paths.

All this he looks for—and he sees instead, what? A rude board barrier, resembling the side of a hen-coop or a section of a baseball fence. One side is blank and forbidding and the other side supports a little cab met, not unlike a horse medicine chest in which are hidden away the thermometers which tell what the heat has done, and in front is a little glass globe, a sort of time clock for the sun, through which it shines and registers the fact that it has done a full day's work. And that is all. This is the weather factory; around this the mass of fable and legend has been built up. Approached only by a narrow board walk which runs across a treacherous moat, and surrounded by a villanous fence, it is well calculated to resist attack. It is solid, but it is disappointing. It is so little when one has expected so much.

At 5.30 o'clock, with a regularity that puts the sun to shame, the master of the weather bureau, Mr Walter Croskill, wends down his quiet way. With a quick sharp look, he glances at the record which the sun has made, takes the readings of the instruments in the medicine chest, and goes back to the telegraph office to make his predictions. Actually, he has nothing to do with making the weather at all, as even he himself admits. He simply tells you a few days in advance what it is going to be.

So much for the weather and the man who controls it. As one turns to look at the town he puts the subject behind him for the weather is a sore point with the good people of Medicine Hat. It is items of cold waves wired out from there, combined with its peculiar name, which have ruined the town. Not ruined it financially, for it was never more prosperous than it is today. But ruined it in reputation, in the minds of the populace, caused its name to become a byword among the nations, brought it about that the town is not mentioned except with a smile or its possibilities discussed in public only as the discussion is accompanied with a wink. This its people resent, and naturally so.

"This district seems to have all hell for a basement," was Kipling's comment on the town and surrounding territory when he made a visit to it last year. Which seems not to jibe very well with the public's idea about Medicine Hat and cold. But what he meant more particularly was the natural gas. There is gas and gas and gas. Down deep in the bowels of the earth, hidden for centuries from man, there are chambers filled full with gas, and no man knows how much there may be or how long it may last. Thus far it seems inexhaustible, and it follows the drill out with a rush and bursts into the air at a pressure of six hundred pounds to the square inch. Wheels turn, bricks are made, cars run, bread baked, and every operation of modern life in a very modern city is performed by the citizens of Medicine Hat by gas. And the lights burn all day long because it is cheaper to let them burn than to turn them off.

Nor is the gas its only asset. Around about it, in its streets and alleys and backyards is spread the rich black soil such as the world has never seen or heard of anywhere else. Soil which needs only to have the seed cast upon it to bring forth its golden produce—twenty, thirty, thirty-five, forty and sometimes fifty bushels of wheat to the acre. The soil which, as someone puts it, has "only to be tickled with a hoe to make it laugh with a harvest."

This is the real Medicine Hat, as distinguished from the one of our imagination and dreams. A bustling, sparkling little city, shining out on the broad expanse of prairie around it like a brilliant diamond on a clean shirt front. A town where one has only to touch a match to a hole in the ground to start an eternal conflagration. A place more richly endowed by nature than perhaps any similar place in the world, destined to become the manufacturing centre of the great Northwest.

Writing Us Up.

Before the special, touring the National Editorial Association reached Medicine Hat, on its way east from Calgary, there was considerable curiosity among the travellers regarding the appearance of the place that manufactured the weather for this part of the United States. To add to our interest in the place we learned that Kipling, after a visit to this locality, referred to Medicine Hat as a "town that was born lucky, and has all hell for a basement." Truly, a town that can let loose the blasts that we frequently get from the northwest, and has such a unique arrangement in its cellar, must be decidedly interesting. However, upon our arrival, we found it a beautiful city of about five thousand people. One rarely finds in a city of its size so many handsome homes and well kept lawns. Kipling's remark referred to its abundant and high grade supply of natural gas. Medicine Hat is perhaps the only city in the world that keeps its lamps lighted day and night, month after month, year after year, but the supply of gas is so abundant that the amount it takes to light the city is comparatively small, and it is cheaper to let it burn all the time than to pay a man to go about and put it out.

While ranching is carried on to a great extent in the surrounding country, the chief industry of Medicine Hat is natural gas. The city is lighted by gas at a cost of 13½ cents per thousand feet, to consumers, and five cents to manufacturers. It is so cheap as to be economical for heating purposes—20,000 cubic feet of natural gas has the heating capacity of one ton of coal, and at 13½ cents per thousand cubic feet equals coal at $2.70 per ton, and at 5 cents is better than coal at one dollar per ton. One can readily see that Medicine Hat is not affected by strikes or any other differences of opinion between the coal operators and the miners, neither is its lighting plant out out of business by thunder storms.

The Medicine Hats, or shall I say Medicine Hatters, or Hattites?—well, at any rate, they must get tired to death having the same old moth-eaten inquiry from tourists as to the place where all the cold blasts for the United States are kept. So the natives take the visitors around the corner, and point to a box eight by four feet on the hillside, where "weather for the States is made." However, in spite of the bad name the city has as a weather breeder, Medicine Hat has a delightful climate. It is in the path of the chinook winds, which makes it much milder in winter than most of the northwest towns.

CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA

As is well known, this troublesome complaint arises from over-eating, the use of too much rich food, neglected constipation, lack of exercise, bad air, etc.

The food should be thoroughly chewed, and never bolted or swallowed in haste, stimulants must be avoided and exercise taken if possible.

A remedy which has rarely failed to give prompt relief and effect permanent cures, even in the most obstinate cases, is

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

It acts by regulating and toning the digestive organs, removing costiveness and increasing the appetite and restoring health and vigor to the system.

Mr. Amos Sawler, Gold River, N.S., writes:—"I was greatly troubled with dyspepsia, and after trying several doctors to no effect I commenced taking Burdock Blood Bitters and I think it is the best medicine there is for that complaint."

KILLED HIS FUTURE.

John Peirano, speaking on the subject, says: "I find that Catcher Mills, whom I selected from the Brandon club of the Northern league, for the Columbus club, of which I am vice-president, is none other that Catcher Ford, lately declared ineligible by the national commission. Consequently Mills' isn't expected to show his paces here this spring. In picking out Mills, I believed I was getting the star of the Brandon club. If Mills is no other than Ford I am convinced I am right. Privilege of selecting a player was held by Columbus because Outfielder Sam Menece was allowed to go to Brandon last spring. When I went up to the northern country in August, I was commissioned to make enquiries and a recommendation. During an inspection of the Brandon team while at play, I was attracted by the speed of Mills, who was doing emergency duty as an outfielder. The Brandon manager recommended a pitcher, but I was looking closer, for catchers and so took Mills. This selection was reported to headquarters and duly filed with Secretary Farrell, of the National association, and Mills was almost forgotten until the announcement from Chicago that Catcher Ford, who had been drafted in 1907 by the Philadelphia Americans, had been suspended by the national commission for taking another name and playing during 1908 season with Brandon. That morsel of news set me thinking. I ran over the limited list of Brandon catchers and decided that my man Mills must be none other than Ford, who had out for a year on Connie Mack. The Brandon club must pay a fine of $25 for its part in the shady transaction."

I am going to DOTY'S

We want Factories here. Are we giving those already located our patronage? Ask your Grocer for DOTY'S Chocolates. Take no substitute; there are none just as good. Note the excuse he makes for not keeping fresh home-goods. Ask him if he will vote money to bring in new factories and refuse to buy from those already here.

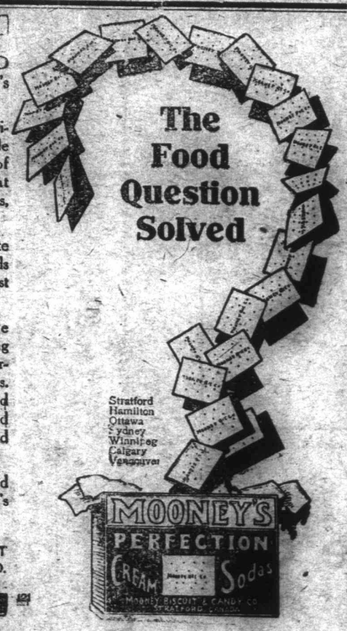
If it's a question of FOOD VALUE, get Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas.



They contain the nutriment—the bone and muscle building properties—of Canada's choicest wheat flour. They are substantials, like roast beef and bread.

Yet they are so delicate that children and invalids may make them the best part of every meal.

Mooney's Biscuits are packed as they come piping hot from the ovens, in air-tight, moisture-proof boxes. Thus, all the crispness and goodness of the freshly baked biscuits are caught and held until they reach you.

There is good food and good eating in Mooney's Biscuits.

THE MOONEY BISCUIT & CANDY CO. LIMITED.

WARM AND DRY TO STAY WELL

Now is the time when the doctor gets busy and the patent medicine manufacturers reap the harvest, unless great care is taken to dress warmly and keep the feet dry. This is the advice of the oldest eminent authority who says that rheumatism and kidney trouble is here, and also tells what to do in case of an attack.

Get from any good prescription pharmacy one half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Mix by shaking in a bottle and take a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime.

Just try this simple home-made mixture at the first sign of rheumatism, or if your back aches or you feel that the kidneys are not acting just right. This is said to be a splendid kidney regulator, and almost certain remedy for all forms of rheumatism, which is caused by uric acid in the blood, which the kidneys fail to filter out. Any one can easily prepare this at home and at small cost.

Druggists in this town and vicinity when shown the prescription stated that they can either supply these ingredients, or, if our readers prefer, they shall compound the misture for them.

Persons with weak eyes, perhaps never fully conscious of defective sight, see in a manner they never thought possible, by Dr. Harvey's skilful lens combination.

THE ALBERTA MOTOR CO.

While it is exceedingly gratifying to know that in the closing of the deal with the sewer pipe concern that will locate here shortly, the city has taken the first step that will eventually make it the Pittsburg of Canada, yet it is not to be forgotten that local enterprises, which have started in a small way, are steadily developing, and forging ahead—the Milling Co and the Planing Mill being two cases in point.

The latest industry that is branching out is the Alberta Motor Co. For a long time it has been difficult to get machine work done, there being only one local shop which is generally crowded with work beyond its capacity, and the C.P.R. having too much of their own work to do to undertake any outside jobs.

Recognizing this fact, and believing that a well-equipped machine shop would be a profitable enterprise as well as a decided convenience to those who had work to do, the Motor Co. is installing a plant that will be equal to anything west of Winnipeg. A Rahn Mayer Carpenter lathe is now being erected, and other tools necessary to complete the plant are on the way.

Mr. W. B. Cook, a machinist and electrician of experience will have charge of the machine work, and Mr. A. G. Peard will take care of the automobile and bicycle end of it.

C. H. Wagner, the city transfer man, can remove that furniture for you. Phone 245.

Dr. Harvey's important discoveries in the Science of Optics and the extensive clinic and laboratory of this institution will enable him to effect a great saving to those requiring glasses or optical help.

If you want that trunk up from the station, phone 245, (C. H. WAGNER), the city transfer man.

MACHINERY FOR HORSES AND CATTLE.

A. P. Burns is offering to exchange any of his big stock of change any of their big stock of Frost & Wood farm machinery, including binders, mowers, rakes, seeders, discs, plows, harrows, also the famous Larne wagons and the Brantford buggies for good horses and cattle.

Owing to the Demand for a Machine Shop

Where repair work can be reasonably done, we are installing a complete and up-to-the-minute plant, with competent mechanics in charge. We are prepared to execute anything in the way of lathe and general machine work, install and take care of electrical apparatus, dynamos and bells. We will do domestic repairs, set gas engines and bicycles in order, sharpen skates, and repair anything from a go-cart to an automobile, or an umbrella to an air-ship. We are agents for Ohio Gas Engines, Ford, Mitchell, and Maxwell Automobiles, and Cleveland Bicycles, each of which represents the best to be had in their class.

BLOOD DISEASES

Guaranteed Cured or No Pay.

If you ever had any contracted or hereditary blood disease, you are never safe until the virus or poison has been removed from the system. You may have had some disease years ago, but now and then some symptom alarms you. Some poison still lurks in your system. Can you afford to run the risk of more serious symptoms appearing as the poison multiplies? Beware of mercury or mineral drugs used indiscriminately—they may ruin the system. Twenty years experience in the treatment of these diseases enables us to prescribe specific remedies that will positively cure all blood diseases of the worst character, leaving no bad effects on the system. Our New Method Treatment will purify and enrich the blood, heal up all ulcers, clear the skin, remove bone pains, fallen out hair will grow in, and swollen glands will return to a normal condition, and the patient will feel and look like a different person. All cases we accept for treatment are guaranteed a complete cure if instructions are followed.

Reader if in doubt as to your condition, you can consult us FREE OF CHARGE. Beware of incompetent doctors who have no reputation or reliability. Drs. K. & K. have been established over 20 years.
WE CURE Nervous Debility, Varicocele, Stricture, Blood and Secret Diseases, Kidney and Bladder Complaints. Consultation Free.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

(From our own correspondents.)

What Wideawake and Reliable Correspondents throughout This District Find Worthy of Recording for Publication in their Home Paper.

Seven Persons

H. H Foster, Mrs Harley Henry, Miss Isabelle Henry, and Miss Vera Enders took the train here on Monday for the East.

A car load of sheep was unloaded here going south to the J. A. Young sheep ranch.

A large bunch of horses passed through here en route south.

Mr. David Cargill and Mr. Wells Williams were here, returning with two loads of oats.

Mrs. J. W. Brown and Miss Eleleen Flanagan gave us a pleasant call Saturday.

Mr and Mrs George Murray and son were shopping at this place Saturday. Mr Murray took the local for Calgary, and Mrs Murray returned to the ranch.

Homeseekers in every direction, afoot and alone, with single rigs and double rigs, and lumber wagons, and in bunches of 8 and 10, with no place to lay their head at night. It looks like good times for Seven Persons.

Wanted a lumber yard, a blacksmith shop, and a railroad crossing where the section line between 32 and 33 intersects the town here.

Mr W. G. Reid passed through here Sunday on his way home from the Hat.

Mrs T. O. Nesting and Mrs Carlson were Hat visitors.

The Misses Miller are entertaining friends from the Hat this week.

Mr J. W. Brown took the west bound train for Raymond and Lethbridge on official business.

A grand opening for a creamery here. Who'll be the lucky man to seize the opportunity? Never too dry for the cattle to feed on the prairie nor to raise fodder for their consumption at home.

(Too late for last week's issue.)

Mr. Wells Williams and Mr. Robb were in from the south on a business trip.

Mr. Herbert Lamb was hauling slabs this week for Mr. Atkinson.

Mrs. David Ross was here on business, going from here to the Hat.

The lumber supply at this place has run out, necessitating the shipping in from other places.

Slabs have sold like hot cakes. The supply is entirely gone, three customers turned down in one day, besides other applications.

Homeseekers are here in such numbers they cannot find a place to stay over night.

School closed last Friday for this year.

Presbyterian service in the schoolhouse was well attended, about forty being present.

Mr. and Mrs Carlson were Hat visitors this week.

A HARD DRY COUGH.

Mr. J. L. Purdy, Millvale, N.S., writes:—"I have been troubled with a hard, dry cough for a long time, especially at night, but after having used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, for a few weeks, I find my cough has left me. To any person, suffering as I did, I can say that this remedy is well worth a trial. I would not be without it in the house."

POSSIBLY A BIG FOUR IN ALBERTA NEXT YEAR.

(Calgary News.)

It is the intention of the rugby enthusiasts to have if possible a provincial union taking in at least three outside teams next year. Of course, this would require the co-operation of Edmonton, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge, or any other outside towns who could see their way clear to enter into the scheme. The Brackman-Ker Milling Company have signified their willingness to put up a championship trophy.

THIS MORTAL COIL

By Margaret Sutton Briscoe

Copyright, 1899, by Harper & Brothers. All rights reserved.

LONG ago, in aeons past, Nature, kneading an iron shore to suit her mood, twisted off a great careless lump of red rock and flung it into the ocean; then, as if by an afterthought, she tied it to dry land with a rope of knotted boulders. Thus created, Brace's Rock has stood for centuries in the blue waters, naked at first, but slowly clothing itself with a spare growth of golden-rod in its crevices, some stunted bay-bushes, and starved feathery grass.

There the gaunt rock stood on a certain September afternoon, the sweeping sea-line spread out before its face, while at its back, in a pond-like shelter, gathered hundreds of sea-gulls, looking like pads of white pond-lilies on the still cove's waters, or yet more lovely, flaunting and fluttering their white wings as, perched on the little brown rock islands, they fought the waves of the rising tide, white-tipped as they. In all Septembers this shore revels in colors that shade back from the gray sand-beach and the spring green of the sand-grass to moors warm and rich with color that seems to fairly dash up the sides of the gray-peaked inland rocks, splashing high among them red-leaved bushes and m[illegible] glowing brown or purple-pink grasses.

Lawrence Goodhue, on this Septembe[illegible] at on the topmost ledge of Brace's Rock, his elbo[illegible] on his knee, his chin in his hand, his artist eyes garnering the scene into the storehouse of his brain, and so absorbed was he in details of color that when at last his gaze dropped to a spot not ten feet from him he sat staring at it with a sense of confusion. What he saw was an artist's paint-rag, still wet and fresh with all the shaded colors of the landscape, but for the moment it was to him almost as if his vision had collected the widespread colors, as a prism might, and thrown them together on the rock.

Sending his eyes wandering again in search of the fellow-artist who must have preceded him, Goodhue finally discovered a figure climbing among the rocks below. It was plainly a woman, though as he peered down at her a large, mushroom-like hat concealed from him everything but a white skirt and an identifying artist's equipment hanging from the climber's shoulder.

Not an hour before, Goodhue had been over every inch of that lower ground, and he now watched the progress of another with peculiar interest. At what he felt to be the risk of life and limb, he had crawled down not only to the base of the rock itself, but under a jutting boulder overhanging the water, and there discovered a veritable jewel-casket.

The waters, lapping in and out twice daily between the crevices, had formed somehow a great oblong basin, and this the sea had filled with its own wonders. It had first draped the gray sides with long, weeping sea-weeds, or crusted them with tawny barnacles and black mussels dashed with silver. There spongy anemones of every soft tint stretched down thirsty necks, while the floor below was a rich mosaic formed of multi-colored snails, with here a blazing orange starfish, there another of pink or royal purple. The approach to this treasure-house lay down a sharp descent, slippery with wet weeds and black with barnacles, and it was a recollection of the difficulties of the climb, not unwillingness to see another share his discovery, that brought Goodhue to his feet and made him look down anxiously as the stranger artist paused above the overhanging rock. He realized that she, too, had found some evidence of what lay below as he watched her hesitate, step with her foot on the edge here and on the rocks there, then draw back, only to repeat the attempt at another point. Foiled, apparently by the real dangers of the descent, she seated herself at last on an overhanging rock, as Goodhue thought, wisely, for giving up the attempt. He fancied that a sketch of the pool was to be the next move in order, as he saw the girl take what looked like a sketch-book from her side, but by deliberate movements she poised the book with careful aim and flung it swiftly down under the rock, then, with only a moment's hesitation, she rose, plunged after it, and was lost to Goodhue's astonished sight.

Although he had found the descent difficult as well as dangerous, he remembered that both difficulty and danger had been doubled in the return, and decided, therefore, that he should at least be within call at hand in the event of accident, he made his way quickly down the side of the rock, and, reaching the top of the overhanging spur, waited there patiently.

It amused him, unseen and unsuspected as he knew he was, and knowing as he did every beauty that lay in that hidden aquarium of nature, to hear now and then half-uttered exclamations of delight coming from beneath the rock. It was long, and he did not wonder at the delay, before the sound of a foot cautiously scraping its way warned him that the reckless adventurer, having satisfied her artistic curiosity, had finally begun her ascent. He moved softly nearer to the jagged edge, and a moment later saw a woman's ungloved hand groping helplessly in air; but before Goodhue had decided whether he should or should not grasp it, the hand was clinging to a blunt projection, where the companion hand soon followed, creeping about the other side of the blunt spur. Small and white they were, the hands seemed capable and the wrists so strong that Goodhue waited to discover what plan their owner had for them before he interfered. Stooping down and crawling to the rock's ledge, he looked cautiously over to see that the climber was standing on the narrowest of ledges, with her body thrown back to gain the impetus which was to swing her about the rock's corner, using the spur as a bar, and her arms as ropes to drag her up to the top of the rock. There was no time for further hesitation. Goodhue grasped the girl's wrists, at the same time crying out a warning.

"Don't jump! It is dangerous. Have you kept your footing?"

"Yes," answered a voice from below.

He braced himself against the rock. "Then swing free now and I'll pull you up. Slowly! Slowly!" He felt the muscles of her wrists relax as her hands loosened from the spur and the weight of her body hung on his arms. In another moment he knew she must have gained some new footing, for the strain on his hands lessened in part, and the neat, mannish, mushroom hat was rising over the rock's edge, disclosing to his interested eyes, first a cloud of dark hair, next the white brow it surrounded, and then her eyes and those heavy-lashed blue eyes unlike any others he had ever known. Had the overhanging rock on which she knelt dropped into the pool beneath, it seemed to Goodhue that the crash could not have been more actual than was the meeting eye to eye. A moment, still poised as they were, both were held motionless, then, with a word of inarticulate exclamation, Goodhue dragged the girl's limp body up the face of the rock to the spot where he stood. With solid ground beneath her feet, her first motion was to stagger from Goodhue's support and lean weakly against the stone wall which rose high above them. But if her body was weak her fixed eyes could still ask the question her lips were unable to demand, and with an effort Goodhue answered her exactly as if she had spoken.

"Hester, on my honor, I did not know it was you! Your hat hid your face. I came to help you only as any man would go to any woman in danger."

Hester drew her trembling figure together against the rough rock to which she seemed to cling. Though she spoke, it was as if the wind caught her voice, blowing it from her lips, it came so faintly, so unnaturally.

"Not—not this man to this woman!"

"No," he replied, sadly, "you are right. We should never have met again; but indeed if one of these waves had caught us off the land somewhere and flung us together on this rock, our meeting should not have been more accidental."

"I believe you, and if I had had a moment of preparation"—she looked up at him, fully and proudly meeting his eyes—"I could have met you as any woman might meet any man."

As she ended she bent her head slightly and, crossing the small rocky platform, quickly disappeared behind the first jutting rocks. Before he realized that she was going, Goodhue found himself alone, but the little sketch-book, which he had seen her fling under the rock, lay where she had dropped it, forgotten, at his feet. Goodhue stooped and lifted the book. He hesitated a moment with it in his hand, then passed round the rock where Hester had vanished. As she heard his quick step she turned instantly with a look as if at bay, resolute, yet needing all her resolution. Goodhue at once held out the book toward her, advancing no farther than it was needful to do so.

"I doubted whether I ought to follow you with it," he said, constrainedly. "I saw you fling this away—but then I also saw you risk your life to recover it. I did not know—"

"I should have been sorry to lose it. I flung it away only because I was afraid to climb down under the rock; but I knew I should have to go down after the book was there. Thank you for bringing it to me. I should have thanked you also for your assistance, and I do now."

If they had never met before, her manner would have been perfect, keeping him at his distance, sufficiently grateful and explanatory and very simple; yet had they never met there could not have been in her eyes the veiled contempt he too plainly read there. As she ended it was as if she dismissed him, but though she held out her hand for the book, Goodhue did not give it to her. He was standing motionless, looking in her face so closely that despite her self-control her color rose slowly and hotly. As he saw it mounting to her throat, her cheek, her brow, he spoke, slowly:

"Hester, can't you forgive me?"

For a moment she did not reply, then answered, with effort, "I had forgiven you—until I saw you."

"I understand. I am going now. But one word, one moment first. It was, believe me, for your sake more than for my own that I acted as I did. I know you cannot judge, not knowing what I do."

She turned to him suddenly, hotly. "I can know that I am profoundly grateful to you for what you saved me from. I know now it would have been a living death to me. You saved me from that, and for that favor—but how can you think I should ever wish to see your face again?"

"I do not," he answered, gravely. "I am going now. But remember, I know nothing, I have heard not a word since we parted—not even that I spared you all I could. I told your father that you found the man of my letters, the man you had promised yourself to, not at all the man I was. Was it accepted?"

"If it gives you any comfort, it was accepted. You generously gave me the honors of war and I accepted them. But why should I play out the part with you, who know those honors were thrust upon me!"

Goodhue stood with bowed head, repudiating nothing. He half turned away, then looked back. "Before I go," he said, simply, "you need not prepare for what I am going to say. It seems very prosaic to mention this at all, but let me warn you, as I crossed the causeway from the mainland to this rock, I noticed the boulders scattered on the causeway were wave worn. This, with some other signs, made me sure that at high tide, whenever that may be, this rock would be cut off."

"Submerged?"

"Hardly," he answered, glancing with a smile at the craggy heights above. "A rise of tide that submerged this rock would flood all the mainland as well, but the causeway is much lower."

Hester glanced back at the water behind them. At that moment a wave, stronger than its fellows, swelled up and broke on the outer rocks, crushing down their serrated tops as though so many gate-ways, flooding the platform where they stood, and for a few moments before, and sobbing up almost to their feet in a trough of gleaming spray, and then. The seaweed clinging to the rocks was no longer a flat drapery, the waves were lifting it, and their dropping lends on strong crests to toss and tangle them roughly.

Hester turned again as she looked. "The tide is rising!"

"Yes," Goodhue answered, "it has been rising for some time. I am afraid high tide cannot be far off. It would really be wiser to make your escape good at once. The quickest way is up over the centre of the rock; only it is very steep. If you would let me help you"—he hesitated. Hester hurriedly took the hand he had half offered, and breathlessly toiled after him on the steep ascent which they at once began. In many places Goodhue had almost to drag her up the rock's sheer face, as he had done on their meeting at its base. There was no chance for speech, even had either desired it. Hester climbed with a feverish haste, and Goodhue, yielding to her mood, helped her as rapidly as he dared. Once, as he touched her arm to aid her, he felt that her whole body was trembling, and he looked up at her quickly.

"Are you afraid?" he asked. "I assure you there's no possibility of danger. Even if the tide has covered the causeway, the worst that can happen will be a short imprisonment. This rock could not possibly be submerged."

She glanced at him a moment and then turned away again, pressing forward faster. "Perhaps," she said, coldly, "I might prefer submersion."

Goodhue colored and drew back. "I beg your pardon—" he began.

But at that moment they reached the summit, which gave them the first glimpse of the causeway, last seen as a ridge of red rock strewn with boulders and bounded on either side by the sea. Now between them and dry land lay a stretch of unquiet waters, flecked with little wave-worn islands, some as close together as easy stepping-stones over a brook, but others more dubiously distant. Even as they looked, the rising waves, swimming in from the sea, were swallowing up these means of escape as rapidly as fishes devour crumbs of bread.

Goodhue turned to look at his companion. They had both paused shrunk.

"I shall attempt it," Hester said, decidedly, in answer to his look, and at once began the descent, much easier on this side than the ascent on the other. Goodhue was at her side when she reached the beach that lay at the foot of the rock, but she seemed almost unconscious of his presence. As she stood poised lightly on a stone at the water's edge, her eager blue eyes on the farther shore, her face flushed, her lips set, her dark hair blown back, her whole figure as a type of motion, but for the moment arrested, it seemed to Goodhue as great an impertinence to suggest danger to her as it would be to call to the sea-gulls fluttering on the outlying rocks, disputing their possession with the buffeting waves that constantly swept them aside. Yet, when she lifted her foot for the first rock to set it on the next, he quickly stepped forward and laid his hand on her arm, half speaking his thought:

"But you have no wings. It is impossible."

Her impatient movement was meant to shake off his detaining hand. "There is nothing to prevent my trying."

His hand still on her arm, he felt the forward spring of her body, and again deliberately resisted it, pushing with a sharp chirp from some crevice, flew past her, almost brushing her with its wings in its hurry to be off. Turning involuntarily to watch its dipping flight, her eyes caught a glimpse of Goodhue's figure standing on a rock far out in the yeasty waters.

Brace's heights rose solidly between her and the inland when she stopped again and stood looking out at the distant sea-line. The sun, now almost level with the world, was behind the rock, and cast the shadows of its peaks in longer and longer reflections at her feet. The deserted waste of waters lay cold and gray. Two finger-like lighthouses on a distant island were pointing upward, their straight lines already blurring and purpling in the withdrawing light. The air seemed suddenly cold, and Hester shivered involuntarily. As if seeking for warmth, she nestled down in one of the rock crevices, leaning close against the stone's rough side as she waited, watching the waves that came flashing in, throwing their spray almost to her feet. The roaring of the waves was so monotonous and continuous she heard nothing, until at last, at a step close behind her, she turned with a start to see Goodhue.

"You have not gone?" she cried, rising and facing him.

"You must not blame me," he answered. "After all, it proved impossible."

"The tide had risen too high?"

He paused a moment, then replied, with grave significance: "Yes, the tide had risen too high. I might play with words and still say that too truly. But I have come back solely because I love you and because I must tell you so."

She stood staring at him bewildered, and he repeated his last words.

"I must tell you so."

"No," she cried, rousing. "You could have left me, and have dared to come back for this! How have you ventured? Do you think you can once fling a woman's heart away and ever come back—"

He checked her with an earnest gesture. "Flung away! And you have thought there was no better reason than that kind of faithlessness? Then, indeed, you must hear me."

"Never. Never again!"

"You must. In justice to me, first you must listen, and, further—as you yourself decide. For a year I have let you judge me unheard, because I could not speak. Now I can, and claim a hearing. In common justice, you have no right to refuse."

"I do refuse. In common justice, I have some claims. I did love you. Why should I deny it?" She caught her breath for the moment, but went on. "I have at last reached the point I made up my mind I would reach the day we parted. I don't deny it was hard at first, but I have utterly ceased to care. I will not be troubled now. I have the right not to be."

He stood looking at her face, flushed and quivering, but decided—at the indignant violet eyes which she forced herself to raise to his, and at the curve of her quivering lips. Then he looked away from her again out over the waters about them.

"We are as if in a world quite apart for the time," he said, at last, quaintly. "I wish we could forget for these few moments that there's any other world to consider. When our souls meet in another world they will perhaps talk of all this freely together. Why shouldn't we speak now, as it may be we shall speak then? Our friends know nothing of this meeting—they need never know. All that is in our own hands. When we leave this little island for the earth again, you could take the path to the left, I to the right, and, if you so will it, all can be as if this talk had never been."

He turned toward her again, speaking less resolutely, more earnestly: "Can't you give me out of your whole lifetime these few moments—in this place so far out of the world? A few moments is all I ask."

Hester stood looking away from him at the ever-strengthening waves. Once she turned and glanced at him, and he saw she hesitated, but he would not urge her.

"If I could be sure," she began, slowly—"if I could be sure that the earthly would not enter—"

He interrupted her quickly. "In your hardest thoughts of me, have you ever accused me of deceiving you?"

"Not of deception."

"Then accept my promise. If you consent the earthly shall not enter."

She looked up at him again, and as he met her look fully and gravely, she turned as if to find a seat on the shelving rock behind them. Goodhue accepted the implied consent.

"But we shouldn't stop here," he said, practically. "The sun is so low on the other side of the rock, this side is growing too cold. If we climb to the top of the rock we can catch the warmth of the last rays, and we can watch the causeway, too, as it uncovers."

Hester let him help her to the heights, and sat down silently in the crevice he selected as yielding most comfort for her. Goodhue knew she was waiting for him to speak, but he was silent, looking down toward the causeway, wiped wholly out of existence by the sea.

"The tide is full, I think," he said, finally. "We have only to wait for it to fall."

Hester's eyes also were fixed in the distance, he believed on nothing.

Goodhue spoke abruptly. "Perhaps it will be easier to plunge in at once. When we parted, had you no idea of what parted us? Did you never"—his gaze dropped to her hands which lay clasped in her lap—"suspect another woman?" He saw her fingers tighten suddenly, and, glancing up, saw her quivering face, and bent toward her with a word of protest on his lips; but before it found utterance she had moved back, still facing him and meeting his eyes so fully and collectedly that he caught his breath.

"Go on," she answered simply. "It was the first cut only that hurt. I had suspected this among other things. Have you more to say?"

"Goodhue at once held out the book toward her, advancing no farther than it was needful to do so."

"Something I scarcely dare put into words. Do you remember nothing strange in our first letters?"

"Nothing," she answered, after a moment's thought.

"Because you have not the key yet. When I first wrote you from my Paris studio, you remember it was about some unimportant detail of color which we had discussed together. You recollect that?"

"Yes, and I replied, thanking you. It all seemed unimportant."

"Yet you couldn't know how your reply, short as it was, differed from anything I expected. There was nothing very marked in it, yet it was different. Later, when I had drawn another, and another letter from you, I did write you that I had scarcely dared hope for any answers whatever, because when we met you seemed so shy and inaccessible. A wood violet could not have been more retiring. Did you never wonder at my thinking that?"

"Why should I? You had met me in a crowded house-party for two days only. That was all. I saw you had gained a wrong impression of me, which I remember I attempted to dispel."

"It was done quickly and effectively, and forever. For days I did not know whether your letter of self-revelation most fascinated me or bewildered me. It was all so truthful, so delicate, so fantastic, yet so unlike my idea of what you were. First you condoled with me teasingly as a color-blind artist misasking a rose for a violet. Then you went on more seriously to tell me there were rose-women and violet-women born into the world differing as distinctly as the flowers, and the perfume of the rose was not the perfume of the violet. That was all, but it was enough to reveal you. Hester, when I laid your letter down, I could smell roses! Later, perhaps then, I knew I loved you, and when at last I wrote you so, you answered—you know what you answered." He paused as if waiting.

Goodhue laid his hands strongly on hers as they lay trembling on her knees.

"Try to listen calmly. It is hard to explain at best. And Anne—remember this is always—knew nothing at any time. When I first saw you both it was together, staying in the same house. I never spoke to you apart. You called each other 'Sister.' I only learned your Christian name when you signed it in your first letter to me. I thought Anne indisputably the older. She seems so in her repose. You are very unlike, and she is a violet, Hester. I addressed my first letter to her as the supposed elder, and you as the actual elder received it. I might have written to one as well as the other. You wore both artists. There was nothing to undo the error, and it was to Anne that I believed myself writing in all those months. It was Anne I thought I loved and courted—you who replied. This is the miserable story. You know the whole." He paused, then went on with a difficulty that grew always greater. "Do you remember, it was Anne who came in to me first when I was waiting for you? Can't you fancy my bewilderment when I saw her standing there in the doorway, warding me off with her outstretched palms—remember, I thought she was my promised wife! I heard her say she had only come to welcome 'a new brother,' and it seemed to me the world turned round, and then she laughed in my face and ran away suddenly because she heard another door at the end of the room opening slowly. You know who came in that door, Hester. I saw your glorious violet eyes, your vivid face, your lovely dark hair, and you came toward me—if I could only see you coming so now—both hands held out, half shy, all gracious—"

With a swift motion Hester cowered down where she sat, hiding her face in her hands. "And you let me!" she cried—"you let me!"

Goodhue bent toward her, clasping her wrists in his hands, speaking eagerly. "Hester, be just to me, now quickly, before you think of yourself. What could I do? If you suffer so in the thought that I played your lover for a few distracted days, try to think of what I saved you by refusing to play your husband. Think, too, of what I endured, loving the body of one woman, the soul of another. It was like acting out some horrible tragic farce. Day by day I had to see the body that I loved passing me, every graceful motion holding my gaze, and yet, when those dear, familiar lips moved to speak, they spoke a tongue I neither knew nor cared for. Could I have met Anne's soul alone, I knew I should never have recognized it. On the other side were your mind, your heart, your spirit, so familiar, so dear to me, but clothed in a strange body. Again and again, when you spoke to me of some lovely thoughts you had only written of before, I turned to you expecting to see the features I had called up so vividly when reading your written words, and then your unfamiliar face—can't you understand it?—would strike me as a blow. Hester, it is now the one face I care for, the one I was always seeing, always longing to see." He drew her hands from her face, and they lay so passively in his that his heart sank. "I have told you everything," he said, slowly. "I was almost mad when I let you see at last that there was some ugly knot. I let you cut it without telling you what it was. How could I tell you then? How could I tell myself what I felt? Have you nothing to say to me, Hester?"

She looked up at him with eyes from which the lustre had gone. "I can forgive you now," she said, wearily. "Of course, no one was to blame. It was an accident; that was all. There is nothing to forgive."

"I am asking more than forgiveness now," said Goodhue, slowly. He was speaking carefully, with well-controlled emotion. "Almost as soon as I left you, it came to me that, after all, it was you—your spirit—I had loved, not at all what I thought had clothed it, and then slowly your own beauty began to haunt me. Soon, too soon, I knew that the face I had seen as I read your letters, as I wrote to you, was never the face you could have worn. Your face, your eyes, yourself, began to fit your soul for me, and at last I knew you as you were, not as half another. Your own hands, your own eyes, the very way you sit as you listen, as you are sitting now, all grew clearer and clearer in my memory. It was not the soul only I wanted—but you, all of you, body and soul, as I learned to mate them. Hester, it was accident that parted us, but today hasn't an accident flung us together again? I have told you everything. Now I dare ask more than forgiveness. I ask you for all that a man can ask, all that a woman can give."

Her hands were still in his, and she made no effort to release them, but he knew it was for no tenderer reason than pity as she looked up and answered: "There is nothing to forgive you, but there isn't anything left to give, either. As I told you, all that is over and burned out. There is nothing here now—can be nothing but cold ashes."

She loosed one hand as she spoke, and laid it on her breast. Goodhue caught the hand back to him, urging her by pressure and voice.

"Hester, try to see it differently. Today, as I passed over the moor, I saw what you might have called a destroyed field of grass, burned out, nothing but cold ashes. Yet I knew because of that burning the verdure there will be doubled in the spring. We have both suffered cruelly, both been through the fire, can't we make that help us to a closer life?"

She moved restlessly, releasing both her hands. "No, the fire has been too fierce. It has destroyed. We can meet only for this hour in this world apart and on the terms we agreed upon. You are letting the earthly enter."

Goodhue's eyes turned to the causeway, forgotten in the nearer question. "Forgive me if I thought it the heavenly," he answered; "and my promise was that the earthly should not enter while we were in the world apart; you see we are not cut off now."

Hester's eyes followed his. The waters, receding as rapidly as they had risen, had uncovered the narrow, wet backbone of red-rock ridging across from the mainland, leaving a clear path to the shore.

"Do you mean that we are free to go?" she asked.

"We are no longer cut off, or, rather, you are cut off from nothing. For me—am I to live cut off from everything I care to live for, Hester? This is the last time I shall urge you. Dearest, you did love me—that love so close, so womanly in the past, I entreat you! You can recall it; trust me it can return richer, more ripe with promise than before."

He realized that she raised her eyes not to read his mind, but that he might read hers. When she spoke he knew already what the reply would be.

"That has all gone from me forever, not only for you, but for any one on earth. My hand offended me and I cut it off. My maiming is absolute and for life. That is all."

"You are deciding hastily."

"I am not deciding at all. Life has decided for me."

"Hester, see, I can gather your hands into mine, your eyes into mine. They belong there now as surely, as lovingly, as your soul was once gathered into my soul. You feel this. You are free to part them all forever, but can you?"

Hester shrank back, her hands, her eyes quivering from his hold.

"Oh, you only quicken me to suffer. I have decided. This must be the end."

She rose, turning from him to face the glowing western sky and the world between. A rim of the red, setting sun hung in the horizon for a moment, then dropped below the line. Down the coast the sunset cannon told the death of another day. A hush and gloom closed in with the falling echoes, and from the lighthouses on the distant island leaped the blaze of two leopard-like eyes. Hester started when Goodhue's voice again broke the silence. He spoke lightly, she knew, to veil emotion.

"So be it. Come, Hester, inexorable angel of the flaming sword! The gateway to earth is wide open again. I have lived in Paradise an hour. If it has been that of a fool, never mind. Only—let me leave it without waiting!"

On the mainland two little half-beaten paths rose from the causeway to run inland—the one to the right, the other to the left. The right-hand path runs in and out between golden-rod and red-berried rose trees, to be lost at times among the bay bushes that spread their heavy green leaves and gray aromatic berries above a yellow carpet of scented grass. The path to the left leads straight and uncompromisingly along the rocky coast. Goodhue glanced from one path to the other, as he helped Hester over the last stepping-stones, and they stood together on the mainland.

"There is your path," he said, "to the right, over the moors. That rocky way to the left, the steep, single path, is mine."

Hester looked up toward the crags of the right-hand path. "Mine is single also," she said, quickly. But Goodhue did not respond.

"Why do you make me seem so harsh?" she cried, suddenly, turning to him. "There has been too much suffering on both sides. At least we may think kindly of each other."

She held out her hand as she spoke, as if offering a friendly parting. Goodhue took her hand in his, holding it gently, as he replied, smiling:

"There was once a queen whose starving people cried to her for bread, and she asked why they didn't eat 'little cakes.' She was as innocent as you, Hester—but none the less cruel. Again he saw that she hesitated, and he waited patiently until she spoke, tremulously:

"We must part in peace."

"Forgive me if I seemed rude to you just now. But as you say you can be nothing to me, be nothing, I beg of you. Let it all end here. Let me go my way at once and you yours."

He saw her eyes turn from one path to the other, then out over the sea where the two great leopard eyes stared blazingly through the gathering darkness. Goodhue drew back a step, loosening his grasp on her hand, which she had left in his.

"Wait!" she cried, quickly. "Oh, wait a moment. If to part like this is so hard, then I must be able to think of something that will soften it."

"I will wait," he answered, "but you will think of nothing, as it cannot be all."

Again he watched her eyes turning to the diverging paths, following the narrow way of each so far as sight might carry her. When she at last looked up at him again he could no longer read her thoughts. Yet her altering face seemed to him as a book, fluttering open in his hand.

"If you will not take my peace," she began, "nor my kindness, then you will have to take my confusion. We have been talking as if we were soul to soul, I am still trying to speak so. My feet seem somehow to refuse my path, and yet—they refuse yours equally. I am standing here utterly unhappy either way I look."

The sad air was blowing in from the ocean seemed wrapping the gloom about them, the odors of the bay-leaves crushed beneath their feet rose in aromatic sweetness. Goodhue bent over the hand he held, pressing it to his lips, then laid it gently in his arm and turned toward the path on the moors.

"Come," he said, "I am very patient, Hester. Let me take your path for a while. Dear, I accept your kindness and your peace alone for the present, for so long as you shall wish, and for the future—"

"He was leaping from rock to rock out into the waters."

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

cured Mrs. K. E. Bright, Burnley, Ont. She writes: "I was greatly troubled, for six years, with my heart and shortness of breath. I could not walk eighty rods without resting four or five times in that short distance. I got so weak and thin I only weighed seventy-three pounds. I decided at last to take some of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking eight boxes I gained in strength and weight, and now weigh one hundred and thirteen pounds, the most I ever weighed in my life. I feel well and can work as well as ever I did, and can heartily thank Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for it all."

to see good work done and value given as can be expected from any men, but I am sorry to say that we have some of the other kind. One reason why we do not get as good service as a company gets is that there are too many bosses, and the responsibility for each department is not so arranged that results can be looked for or credited to individuals. Those of you who are readers of the Medicine Hat News, and I will say the Medicine Hat News is a fairly good paper; not the only good paper, but I have nothing against it, subscribe for it and read it because it is well printed and easy to read, and sometimes it is quite interesting reading. Those of you who have read the News for the past few weeks and have gone over the figures and comparisons made in the editorials, if you have no other information except what you get there, may be of the same opinion as the editor of that paper, namely, that our city's affairs are in first-class shape and could not be improved on; that all the mayors and councils of this city since it was a city or a town have been just about right except the mayor and council for 1907—the year the editor of the News was not in the council.

I am not going to dispute the figures quoted or give you a lot of figures to disprove what is contained in the editorials mentioned, do not think it is worth while, and do not want to get into a discussion with the editor of a newspaper as to the city's affairs, because I am going to try and do something for myself now that my term of office is nearly over. I would not have referred to the editor of the News at all but that he brought the matter up in his editorials. I am satisfied he feels quite secure in his position as a "Wielder of the Mighty Pen," and knows full well there is no powerful agent of the same kind to assist me in my contentions.

I am satisfied to leave the whole situation to be looked into by any ratepayer who can take the trouble to do so and let them form their own opinion. But for fear that you may be confused by the figures quoted and the comparisons made, I would like to call your attention to the old saying by Artemus Ward, "That you can prove anything by figures and that comparisons don't prove facts." The council of 1907 undertook no new work except for the fire alarm system and for the purchase of some lots on the north side of track where a new fire station could be built, and the chairman of the finance committee of that year was not extravagant or improvident as you might suppose from reading the News. His time, like most of my own was taken up by trying to beat the Devil around the bush, as it was called by one of our bankers. The necessity of beating this old boy around the bush arose from the council of 1906 not having provided for their large overdraft on account of sidewalks and sewers, and because they had entered into a contract with a firm in the United States to build a filter plant that cost nearly $30,000—those of you who are water-drinkers know how useful it has been. The council of 1906 and not the council of 1907 have the credit for that pile of sewer pipe which filled up our market place for so long and is now to be seen piled up near the bridge. The same council ordered the putting in of the water main from the power house to the stand pipe in the middle of winter when it could much better have been left until spring. If it had been left it would not have cost so much to keep in repairs since it was put in. If the council for the year 1906 was so bright as we are asked to believe it was they would have arranged to sell the sidewalks and sewer debentures when they would have sold at par and so on. This is just enough to show that there are two sides to the question. Are we dead sure we are dead right?

Then take the comparisons made with other places. Lethbridge is said to be away behind us in the matter of bookkeeping, and it is pointed out that we have a splendid set of books, a system established by Mr. Blythe, and efficiently carried out by Mr. Adsit. I am not a bookkeeper and am not prepared to dispute this point either, but as an ordinary business man I am not able to tell you that I consider my system of bookkeeping perfect that will let one of our city employes get $205 and keep for a $60 horse, and if you will look into it you will find that it took ten years to do it. For one of these years the editor of The News was mayor and in the other year he was chairman of finance. If this horse was used in the year 1907 the city only had to pay for its keep during that year for he did not appear on the pay roll.

We have a very efficient fire brigade in fact I believe it is the pride of the city and rightly so. They were able to get to a fire a short time ago in 45 seconds after the alarm was rung in, but they have been so used to getting everything they asked for in the way of equipment, etc., that they think now it is only necessary to put in an application and their requests will be granted, no matter how extravagant the request may be. If you want your taxes kept down and if the council for 1909 want to make a good showing in the way of reducing expenditure it will be well for them to take up the matter of the fire brigade and see if it would not be better to have a fully paid fire brigade. I know it is very unpopular to criticize the fire boys, but I don't expect to run for office again until the boys get to be the heavy taxpayers of the city. By that time they will be just as anxious as I am to keep down the rates.

Now, gentlemen, I have kept your attention long enough. I have not by any means said all there is to say but think perhaps I have said enough to interest you and trust it may do some good. I hope you will remember what I have said about attending council meetings. This council chamber was built with the people's money for the people. You have a perfect right to attend all meetings of the council if you behave yourselves. Your presence will encourage the Council in the efforts to do the right thing if that is what they want to do and will go a long way to prevent them from doing the wrong thing if they are so disposed. You will get your information at first hand and will know just what takes place. Actions often speak louder than words, and sometimes words are used to conceal thought; if you attend the meetings you will see how the councillors act as well as hear how they speak, and then it is up to you to use your vote at the proper time.

Before concluding I have another confession to make that I forgot to make in the proper place among the confessions, and it is to confess to having changed my mind regarding rates charged for gas. Before I was elected mayor I thought they should be lowered; I now think they should be raised, and that a sinking fund should be provided. We are selling gas too cheap as far as the actual consumer is concerned. It was not the consumer who raised the money to put in the gas plant; it was the property owners, and if anything should happen to the gas it would be the property owners who would have to stand the shot. I think the consumer should take a part in the chances.

Primarily this meeting is called for the purpose of hearing a statement as to the year's business, and the aldermen and the school trustees have their reports for you to hear. However, if there is any other matter in which the ratepayers are interested this is a good time to bring it up. Last evening we heard considerable from the gentlemen from Calgary regarding railways and the great need of more lines. In as far as Calgary is concerned it may be this is their most important consideration; but there is no doubt as to what Medicine Hat requires most or first. If we can get the C.P.R. to build their workshops here (and there is a good prospect that we can), and if we can get water on the surrounding lands to the south as well as north and west, it won't be long until the railways head here.

Our representative in the House of Commons, Mr. Magrath, has more practical knowledge of the irrigation situation than any man in Alberta. As commissioner for the A. R. & I. Co. he proposed a scheme to the government to take the waters of the St. Mary's River and put it on the land to the south of us; but his proposal was turned down and the scheme is dead as far as the A. R. & I. Co. is concerned; they do not want to take it up again. I saw Mr. Magrath about this the other day and asked him if there was any way of taking this up again and he said there was, if the government could be got to favor the scheme. Now, my idea is, that if we were to send our representative a petition signed by the people of Medicine Hat and all the people to the south of us calling attention to the importance of this work, Mr. Magrath could show in parliament or to the Minister of the Interior where a large amount of money could be made for Alberta and Medicine Hat district, and show that if one million dollars were spent in this way it would make at least fifteen millions. Surely the minister would consider Canada and Alberta and let get what Medicine Hat has been doing so lately. I know that Mr Magrath will give this and all other matters every attention, but it will strengthen his hands to have a petition.

If we had all these lakes and ponds to the south of us filled up with water all the year round and Seven Persons a running stream all the year round it would be quite as good, if not better for us than a railway at the present time. Of course we want the railways also.

There is another matter—the question of a street railway to Coleridge and on the streets of the city. There is no doubt that if we had an electric line from here to Coleridge it would be a great convenience, and if we had such a line there would be no business for a store or hotel there. We should advertise that we would grant a franchise to some company for say twenty years and we might get a company to take it up.

No. of meters put in, 71.

No. of street lamps put up 29—6 on the stand pipe, 6 on the bridge, 3 on the band stand and 14 on streets.

Final balance—$1352.68.

Gas mains laid on following streets—Four inch low pressure laid along lane between Toronto and Montreal Streets, 350 feet; four inch low pressure on lane between Third Ave. and N. Railway St., from Prince to Short Ave. 300 feet; four inch low pressure line on Braemar Streets, from west of 6th Ave. west 500 feet, four inch low pressure on lane between Road Allowance and Victoria, and from Mill St. southerly 330 feet; four inch low pressure line on lane from Athletic Grounds to Mr. Bray's, 1750 feet; 2½ inch high pressure line from main St. to New Edin.; 2½ inch high pressure line from Athletic Grounds to new well; 2½ inch high pressure line from Ilord well to market site, 1000 feet.

Proceeding, Ald. Baker stated that although the Mayor might be opposed to municipal ownership, yet there were few private companies which could have so managed the gas system as to hold the year's expenditure down to less than $4000, and after paying off all its debenture charges for the year show a profit of over $20,000. He thought the Medicine Hat gas system a very strong point in favor of municipal ownership. The gas profits of 1907 had also been in the neighborhood of $20,000, and as the system was paying such a revenue into the city for the reduction of taxes, he thought the present rates were amply sufficient. A new high pressure main would connect the Ilord well with a regulator on the market site for the purpose of increasing the pressure in the business part of the city which was only served with three-inch pipes and where the service was consequently not as good as it should be. The new gas well was now down to a depth of 150 feet. Operations had been impeded by the difficulty in securing pipe and supplies.

Ald. Huckvale, in presenting the report of the Water Commissioners, regretted the absence of Ald. Penhale, the chairman, the latter having been so closely identified with the system for so long a period and being in a better position to answer any criticisms. The figures were as appended:

Before the end of the year, Alderman Huckvale stated, the appropriation for waterworks would be somewhat exceeded, but this would not have been the case but for the trouble experienced during the summer with the flood and the trouble with the old steam pumps.

Ald. McKay, chairman of Public Works, presented the subjoined statement:

Ald. Spencer pointed out that out of this total expenditure of $10,786, all that had been drawn by the boys themselves had been $544.78. Considering the efficiency of the Brigade the cost could not be considered as excessive. Taking everything into consideration the Fire Department was 'one of which the city should be proud, and although some of the demands made by the boys were somewhat insistent, on the whole it was in the best interests of the city that these demands for extra equipment be granted. The Brigade had taken a determined stand on the question of having the pound removed from its location beneath the fire hall windows and had driven the Council to action, which was a very good thing, as the centre of the city was no place for such an unsanitary institution.

Ald. Huckvale, chairman of the Parks and Market Committee, read the appended figures from his committee:

Expenses.

	$1042.39
Amount appropriated	2500.00
Balance	-$1457.61

There is still $900 from this to pay for grand stand, leaving the balance of $557.61.

Ald. Huckvale explained that the Council had considered the grand stand a necessary complement to the Athletic Grounds and so had purchased it. The account had been passed

HELPLESS 3 WEEKS

HANDS COVERED WITH ECZEMA

AMPUTATION FEARED, BUT ZAM-BUK SAVED.

"For three long months I was not able to attend to my own needs; and for three weeks the eczema on my hands was so bad that I was unable to feed myself. I had to be fed as one feeds a baby, because I could not hold knife, fork, spoon or cup." So says Miss Violet McSorley, of 73, Gore Street, Sault Ste. Marie, in telling how Zam-Buk cured her of eczema. She adds: "Hands, wrists and arms up to the elbows were covered with eczema. The itching and the soreness were nigh unbearable. As the disease developed, the skin actually peeled off leaving raw sores. The palms, fingers, backs of my hands and wrists were all in this shocking state, and I was forced to sit in agony all the while."

"The raw sores were soon in a foul condition, and my finger nails all except two, fell off. During the different stages of my trouble, I sought the advice of three different doctors and received treatment, but although getting slight relief at first there was no cure. Amputation was at one time thought necessary but the timely introduction of Zam-Buk prevented this fearful ending."

"Zam-buk was recommended by a friend and we bought a supply. The first few applications gave me a little ease, but it was not until I had continued with it for some time that I felt a decided improvement. After that my cure went on quickly. Zam-Buk did what everything else had failed to do. Now my hands and arms are quite freed from the terrible eczema."

Are you suffering from skin disease? If so, take Miss McSorley's advice and try Zam-Buk.

Is Woman Growing More Bloodthirsty?

Recent Criminal Records Seem to Show Her a More Frequent Participant in Capital Crime.

Marie Schabara Coolly Shot Man on Crowded Street.

Baroness De Massy, Must Face Murder Charge.

Lizzie Halliday Five Times a Murderess.

Josephine Terranova, 17 Years Old, Slew Uncle and Aunt.

Mrs. Anna M. Bradley, Shot Ex-Senator Brown of Utah.

Goldie O'Neil, Charged with Stabbing Her Husband.

ARE the opening chapters of the new century to be made gory by the hand of woman? Is she becoming more bloodthirsty as the years roll on?

Beyond doubt, she is figuring more in the criminal annals of the day than ever before; more often are her hands turned to deeds which the law regards in the light of capital offenses.

During the last six months or so fully twoscore more or less sensational killings by women have been reported at greater or less length in the newspapers, while there have been a number of others to which less attention was paid, and which passed from the public mind as soon, perhaps, as the items were read.

In the majority of cases men have been the victims of women's homicidal fury. Either jealousy or a sense of wrong has prompted most of these. Few women slay for plunder or any of the baser motives.

ALL THE traditional fury of a woman scorned flamed up in the heart of Mrs. Anna M. Bradley, of Salt Lake City, when she sought out former Senator Arthur Brown, of Utah, in his Washington hotel a few weeks ago, and shot him to death.

It was a sad day for the brilliant and wealthy Utah lawyer when the fates first permitted his path to cross that of the woman who finally sent him to the grave.

For years she had been importuning him to marry her, in simple justice, she asserted, to her two young sons. When he failed to do what she considered his duty, she became a vengeful Nemesis, constantly dogging his footsteps.

Numerous and notorious were the love troubles of Senator Brown. When a young attorney at Kalamazoo, Mich., his wife became greatly incensed at his devotion to Miss Isabelle Cameron, and, it was reported, this infatuation narrowly escaped ending in a tragedy.

This condition of affairs ripened into a scandal that is remembered even now in that town. At last, finding himself cut by many of his friends, Brown went to Salt Lake City. He was followed by Isabelle Cameron, and, when he had been divorced from his wife, married her.

It seems the irony of fate that Mrs. Isabelle Cameron Brown introduced to her husband the woman who later took his life. Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Bradley were prominent clubwomen in Salt Lake, and had become acquainted through membership in the Poets' Round Table Club, a literary organization.

The introduction of Brown to Mrs. Bradley was made at St. Louis in 1896. Brown, accompanied by his wife, had gone to St. Louis as delegate to the Republican National Convention.

One result of the friendship thus begun was the separation of Mrs. Bradley from her husband and of Brown from his wife. Then opened a long series of scandalous and sensational events, which culminated in the killing of the former Senator by the woman who had charmed him, but of whom he later endeavored to rid himself.

At the time of his death, Senator Brown, it has been stated, was engaged to marry Mrs. Annie C. Adams, mother of Maude Adams, the actress, his second wife having died about two years before. It was the discovery of a letter from Mrs. Adams to Mr. Brown, speaking of an appointment to meet in New York, that precipitated the tragedy in the Washington hotel.

Jealousy, despair and an overwhelming sense of wrong seemed to have prompted this slaying, one of the most sensational of the year.

But what motive prompted Mrs. Margery Clark to lure Algernon S. Atwood from Denver to Boston, to kill him, and then commit suicide? Jealousy alone, perhaps.

The woman's claim that she and Atwood had been married was not borne out by the records in Boston. When he went West, she asserted that it was for the purpose of making a home for her.

Handsome and intelligent, young Atwood was received in excellent social circles in Denver, and on November 6 was married to the daughter of a wealthy widow. Six weeks later he was summoned to Boston by a telegram, which falsely stated that Mrs. Clark was dying.

When he entered the presence of the woman to whose call he had responded, she shot him, and then turned the revolver upon herself.

Mystery obscures the motive leading to the killing of Gustave Simon, a wealthy New York manufacturer, on November 11. Baroness de Massy, otherwise known as Anisia Louise de Vernon, was arrested, charged with this crime.

Simon, 66 years old, was proprietor of a waist factory on Broadway. On the day of the shooting the Baroness entered the establishment and walked through the crowded rooms to the office of Simon.

Shortly afterward the sound of quarreling was heard. Then the woman emerged, and Simon, immediately behind her, seemed to be pushing her from the room. After a little time she returned, and three shots were fired. Employes rushed in, to find Simon lying on the floor, mortally wounded.

"I did not shoot him," Baroness de Massy calmly declared when arrested. She asserted that the shooting was done by another person, who was lying in wait as she entered the office to collect money due her for work. It was asserted at the time that Simon, when dying, accused the woman of shooting him.

BARONESS OF ARISTOCRATIC LINEAGE

Baroness de Massy comes of the aristocratic family of de Vernon, prominent in one of the French provinces. Her husband, a friend of Count Boni de Castellane, died suddenly three years ago, and the Baroness suspected that he had been poisoned.

She took up the work of ferreting out the assassin, and her search, it is said, led her to America. For some time before the killing of Simon she had been working as a designer of shirtwaists.

About the middle of December Joseph O'Neil and his bride, "Goldie," formerly a well-known artist's model in New York, took a room at a hotel in Greenwich, Conn. Shortly afterward O'Neil was found dying from a stab wound under the eye, inflicted, the police say, with a nail file.

They also charge that Mrs. O'Neil was alone with him in the room at the time, and that is why she was arrested, accused of killing her husband.

Ten years ago the young woman married William H. Finley, a member of the New York police force, but separated from him later and became an artist's model.

Only a couple of years ago she was one of the best known models in New York, and had been employed by almost every artist of note. She was considered one of the most beautiful young women who frequented the studios, and was in demand to pose for paintings and sculpture work.

Then she was known as Kitty, or "Goldie," Bellau, a light-hearted girl, whose great mass of auburn hair was her principal attraction in the eyes of artists. Recently she married O'Neil, but, according to accounts, did not find her second matrimonial venture a happy one.

She asserts that he ill-treated her. Her few pieces of jewelry had been sold, and all the clothing she owned she wore.

The auburn-haired little woman stoutly denied her guilt. She asserted that her husband had been drinking heavily just before his death, and, in addition, had taken poison.

O'Neil was a steel worker, and it was a singular coincidence that the wife, accused of his murder, was locked in a cell at Greenwich which he had constructed.

Asserting to have suffered wrong at his hands, Marie Schabara, 22 years old, of Brooklyn, N. Y., coolly shot down Nicolo Ferrance within view of dozens of people in the street. The shooting occurred almost in front of the Tombs prison, New York, while the crowd was waiting to see some relative of Harry Thaw emerge from its doors.

When her victim fell after the first shot, the girl fired three more bullets into his body. She was the coolest person on the street and quietly handed the revolver to a policeman who came running up.

Committed to prison, she said she did not wish to employ a lawyer, being fully convinced of the justice of her bloody deed.

Widespread interest was manifest last summer in the case of Josephine Terranova, a 17-year-old Italian girl, of New York, who killed her uncle, Gaetano Reggio, and his wife by shooting and stabbing them.

Most unusual and pathetic was the girl's life story. It was shown at the trial that she had suffered unpardonable wrong at the hands of her uncle while living in his home. She asserted that the man's wife knew of and connived at these wrongs.

REVENGE OF OUTRAGED VIRTUE

Later Josephine married, happily, as she thought. For a time all went well, but her husband learned of the unfortunate chapter in her life's history and left her.

Then, with all her sense of outraged womanhood intensified by this last bitter blow, and thinking only of sure and speedy revenge, she invaded the home of her uncle and aunt and killed them both. A sympathetic jury, after a dramatic trial, acquitted her.

In Council Bluffs, Iowa, Frank K. Potts, formerly of Philadelphia, was shot to death in his room. Charged with the crime, Emma Ripkie, not yet 20 years old, was arrested.

That Potts was shot while asleep was the assertion of the police. The woman asserted that Potts failed to fulfil his promise to marry her.

The photograph of another young woman, together with correspondence which seemed to have originated in an advertisement by Potts, was found among his effects, and this led to the theory that once again ungovernable jealousy had played its part in a tragedy.

To its promptings, also, was charged the murder of William Robinson, of Terre Haute, Ind. His wife was accused of firing two bullets through his heart at the termination of a quarrel, resulting from the presence of the green-eyed monster.

When Mrs. Josephine Kelly returned to her home, in Baltimore, Md., one evening in November, she found her 19-year-old sister, Ida Goff, in company with her husband.

Accusing the sister of having taken her husband from her, Mrs. Kelly received a scornful reply. Miss Goff struck Mrs. Kelly with a piece of scantling, a fierce fight ensued, which ended when the married sister fired a bullet through the other's head.

A jury at Atlanta, Ga., acquitted Mrs. E. M. Standifer of the charge of murder. She acknowledged that she had slain her seventeen-year-old sister, whom she discovered, she declared, in an intrigue with her husband.

"It was not for that, however, that I killed her, but to wipe out the disgrace," she said to the jury. "I knew that my parents, were they living, would rather see her dead than disgraced."

THE "UNWRITTEN LAW"

The "unwritten law" was the defense of Mrs. Annie Birdsong, recently tried in Copia county, Mississippi, on the charge of killing Dr. Butler, while the jury that tried Mrs. Nannie Nuckols, of Richmond, Ky., upon the charge of killing Mrs. Viana Black at a college commencement, was influenced in her favor by a similar sentiment. Mrs. Black flaunted her success in winning the affections of Mrs. Nuckols' husband in the face of the maddened wife.

One day last fall a beautiful American woman, calling herself "Mrs. Stafford," killed an old Frenchman, named Muller, at a table in the Hotel Jungfrau, at Interlaken, Switzerland. No motive for the deed has ever been suggested or acknowledged.

Insanity prompted Mrs. V. Herbert, of Jersey City, to cut the throat of her younger daughter and then throw herself from the roof of her house. Mrs. Henry Knippen, of Columbus Grove, O., decapitated her children soon after being released from an insane asylum.

Mrs. Clarence Markham, of Andover, Mass., chased her seven children from room to room, through the yard and into the stable, slaying them one by one, and then killed herself. Insanity, beyond doubt, was the cause.

At Detroit Mrs. Rose Barron was arrested, charged with attempting to poison members of ten families.

One woman, Mrs. Mabel Rogers, was hanged in Vermont last year for the murder of her husband. Upon a similar charge Mrs. Kate Edwards, of Reading, Pa., Mrs. Agnes Myers, of Kansas City, Mo., and Mrs. Ada Valentina, of Lodi, N. J., spent the year behind the bars under sentence of death.

This sentence was commuted in the case of Mrs. Valentina, but Mrs. Myers and Mrs. Edwards began the New Year with impending doom still hanging over them.

Of all murderesses of recent times, however, Mrs. Lizzie Halliday deserves record place. At the Matteawan (N. Y.) State Hospital for Criminal Insane, she committed her fifth murder in September.

THE blase world has many different and sometimes strange ways of amusing itself. New games and sports are being devised continually.

It frequently happens, too, that a sport which entertains one nation vastly is voted slow and uninteresting by another.

"Tossing the caber," so popular in Scotland, finds few devotees on the Continent; pushball finds favor in England and rocketball in France and Germany. Other countries are very slow to appreciate the good points of America's own baseball game. The Australian works like a Trojan in his wood-chopping contests, and declares it great sport.

IF YOU find yourself abroad this year and visit any of the seaside resorts of France or the watering places of Germany, you will no doubt become familiar with rocketball. But learn it—no.

"It is a game Americans never learn, never," a pretty French woman was heard to remark last summer on the sands at Trouville. A group of American tourists stood by watching the game in progress.

Along the shore were a score of men and women, mostly women. Few men, it is said, have the patience to learn rocketball.

Success is acquired only after long practice and study. This is the reason, perhaps, that it appeals to the women of France as bridge whist does to their English and American sisters.

A pretty young woman took her stand on the base. She held two sticks, to each of which a long thread was attached. With a little laugh she threw a celluloid spool into the air, and suddenly wheeled into the field, jumped forward and backward and pirouetted in a bewildering maze of movements. She took little running steps backward and forward breathlessly, then, with a triumphant laugh, captured the spool by cleverly twisting the thread about it.

With a dexterous movement of the arms she brought the two sticks together—and the glittering spool went spinning over the neutral field to the opposite base. She had performed the feat.

The object of the game is to capture the spool with the string before it falls to the ground and, by a manipulation of the sticks, wind the string about it in such a way that it can be thrown to the desired goal.

To do this requires great agility and quickness of action, while practice of the game is said to strengthen the muscles and to give one a remarkable ease and grace of movement. The game permits many variations, and is said by enthusiasts to be more difficult and interesting than lawn tennis.

"Tossing the caber," so popular in Scotland, requires both muscle and brain. The average American does not care for a game in which the trunks of trees are tossed about as if they were quoits.

The "caber" is made of the trunk of a larch or pine tree, shaved smooth. It is usually fifteen feet in length and must weigh 200 pounds. One end is thicker than the other.

To play the game the tosser stands the caber upright on the smaller end. He is assisted in this. The greatest difficulty is to raise the pole from the ground unassisted and balance it in the palms of the hands.

Holding the pole in his hands, the tosser runs forward a short distance, raises the pole, and with a quick movement of the shoulders and arms throws the stick from him. Curving through the air, it strikes the ground on its larger end. If it turns over on its end and falls in a straight line from the tossers, he wins; if it falls in a backward direction toward him, he loses.

The game is usually played by a number of contestants, the prize going to him who throws the caber the greatest distance, completing the clearest circle, with a straight fall in the opposite direction.

The principal amusement of men in certain parts of Australia is engaging in wood chopping and sawing contests. Country fairs are popular in the interior districts, and the chief attraction of the show has come to be the tree-felling contest.

On the day of the contest the axemen gather at the fair, their axes, bright and keen, over their shoulders. Each is assigned the high stump of a tree, and as the spectators cluster around they begin work. The woodsmen work desperately, and to the man cutting through a stump in the shortest time and the most workmanlike manner the prize is awarded.

In another part of the grounds there may be a log-sawing contest in full swing, each long, sharp saw being wielded by two men. Australian woodsmen think it the best fun in the world to saw a thirty-six-inch ironbark log in a temperature of 120 degrees.

Within the last year many variations of the game of pushball have won favor in Germany and England. One of the most popular aquatic sports in England is water pushball.

The ball is usually made of rubber, and is three feet in diameter. The players are seated in canoes. As the ball skims over the water the players speed after it, some striking it and sending it onward, others endeavoring to catch it. Precautions must be taken in the mad race, or the canoe is likely to capsize. Of course, this adds zest to the game. Nearly all the boating clubs of England have chosen water pushball as their favorite sport.

Circus pushball is viewed with favor by the Germans, young women usually participating in the arena. An equal number of women are placed on opposite sides of a huge ball, and those on each side push and strain and exert every effort to roll the ball in the direction of their competitors.
