While this accusation is true of many so-called sports it is a pleasure to know that in rifle shooting there is no question of professionalism. It remains and will continue to hold a pre-eminent place among amateur sports. Its merits are somany that one can hardly say too much in praise of rifle shooting, and it has the added significance of being useful. There is no sport more fascinating, no pastime can be prolonged into old age where great skill is necessary, like it. And even when time has dimmed the eye and the shaking hand betrays the decay of the nerve force, its votaries still with the fervour of youth enjoy being at the butts. It is a perfect recreation because it combines moderate exercise with absorbing interest, and pure air, it is devoid of the jealousies of most sports. Instead of an effort being made to have your opponent shoot badly the very opposite prevails and the winner is invariably the recipient of congratulations from the less fortunate. There is enough exposure and privation in rifle shooting to build up and maintain a manly self-reliance, and while it is in the greatest degree a benefit to the body, its pursuit develops the keenest traits of themental faculties, in a word it is a perfect exercise. Can anyone imagine a sport where there is morg real pleasure than a week's work) at the butts. For a Saturday afternoon (after a hard time the mind is completely absorbed in something entirely different from the usual vocation, the tired nerves are stimulated by the fresh air; with congenial companions, one is encouraged and congratulated if he shoots well and meets with sympathy in his failures, while bulls' eyes and jokes bring all ranks and conditions into good fellowship. Then when one finds himself at the festive board he brings an appetite that few sports could stimulate. There is no sport so friendly, none more absorbing and none more lasting than rifle shooting. Let it always be so.

Choice of a Rifle

I would recommend a private make of rifle for expert rifle shooting, because, although most of the barrels are made at Birmingham, or London, by the manufacturers, private makers are nearly all great rifle shots, and they only accept tested barrels, and are qualified to know the right article; besides, they give a better finish to them, and adjust the sights to order. The barrel is the important part of the weapon, but a comfortable feeling stock coming to your shoulder with the sights sitting up squarely to your eye, instead of that uncomfortable, out-of-plumb-looking article, is much to be desired. A perfectly seasoned, then oil-soaked stock, is best, as it is not apt to become warped by exposure. It is an open question whether the Enfield or Metford grooving gives the better results. I prefer the Enfield, because the grooving is very shallow, and the loads present a larger surface to the bullet than does the Metford, ensuring longer wear and being less liable to foul.

The foresight is a most important part of the rifle. It is generally conceded that a coarse barley-corn is best. In fact, I believe the time is rapidly approaching when (in open-sighted rifles) the foresight will be a square block, in place of the barley-corn, with the backsight a hollow corn, which would be filled by the foresight, thus presenting a straight bar with a centre or dot.

Having secured a first-class rifle, give it your greatest care. Never leave it with the fouling in for any length of time, but after each range is fired clean out with one of the many fluids sold for that purpose, before leaving the range run the brush through, and immediately on arrival at home give it a thorough clean out; then oil well with a good oil or vaseline. Don't spare the oil, but finish up with a rub all over, stock and all. Then put in cover and place carefully in a dry place. Handle your rifle often and see that no disease in the shape of rust has got a hold of it. Rust in the rifle is like consumption in the body, it means death when it secures a good hold.

If it be necessary to ensure good shooting, that one must take the greatest care of the rifle, how much more important it becomes to take care of the rifleman. The rifle has only the dual quality of perfection of material and mechanism, but man is a combination of qualities. He is not only a perfect organism, but is largely endowed with mental faculties such as perception, judgment, and will power. These faculties enable him, not only to become master of his rifle, but what is of far greater importance, he, by a careful application of these endowments, becomes master of himself. In some natures it takes nearly a lifetime to understand the great obligationthat is laid upon all, to so control and direct our thoughts that we are in reality the master of the situation. Without entering into the moral question, I would like to point out in no uncertain way that if you desire to become a first-class marksman, you must begin with yourself. You will find perception and judgment to go hand in hand. Applying them to rifle shooting, take a walk in the country—and walking you will find the best, as it is the most natural exercise—observe some object, mentally judge its distance, then prove it by stepping it. In a very short time one can learn to pace 36 inches. Observe the formation of the land, the valleys, trees, houses, etc., take a good field glass with you, and study the mirage, notice the effect of light winds, especially how they are affected by the obstacles they meet. This training of the perceptive faculty will soon become a habit, and you will not only have pleasure, but also profit from its cultivation. Decision and self control come under the greatest of our faculties, will power. Learn to say no, and stick to it. Be careful when you say yes, and mean it. Be not influenced by others in your judgment, but study the conditions for yourself, and when you are assured that you are right, stop thinking and go straight ahead. As an instance, when this may be applied, imagine yourself firing at six hundred yards in a sudden change of conditions. A shade comes over the target, the wind's direction is altered, a shower comes on. Now is the time to depend on yourself. Make up your mind without hesitation or doubt. Make the necessary alterations in your sights and fire a most careful shot. This is your opportunity; this is where the trained mind comes out ahead of the inexperienced shot. Remember, anyone could be a sailor if the wind was always favorable. So could the veriest tyro become a good shot in steady weather, it is the difficulties one meets, and overcomes, that make one successful in rifle shooting as it does in everything else worth while. In a short paper it is impossible to go deeply into a subject such as this, but enough is suggested to enable you to develop yourselves mentally for shooting purposes.

Training the Body.

But while I have touched upon a subject too much neglected by the votaries of our great art, there is another aspect of the case which deserves our most careful consideration, and that is the physical part of our training. Rifle shooting is neither for the strong nor the weak, but for the healthy. How are we to keep healthy, and as the saying goes "fit." I would say immediately and without hesitation, by moderation. It is impossible to form all alike in everything, but we can control our passions and our appetites. We can subdue and direct our tempers, and desires, else we are unfit to become marksmen in the true sense of the word. Keep the body clean outside and inside, the mind pure, live well, but be no gourmond. Avoid alcohol as a beverage, and especially never depend on it for help when on the range, it is destructive to the will power and nervous force. And I am certain of this fact, that the greatest rifle shots are strongly temperate. Of course a great deal might be said on this point, but it is my purpose to point out only what is actually necessary for good work at the butts.

At the Butts.

Having learned how to take care of yourself and rifle, you are now fitted to become a crack shot. For convenience imagine yourself at 500 yards with a fine weapon and first-class ammunition. Seek as level a place as possible, lie down comfortably, always be comfortable. Select a place for your elbows, take a sight at the target over your rifle, if the position is satisfactory lower your "gun" and mark the spots where your elbows rest so that you may select the same place for every shot, don't lie at too much of an angle, the face and eyes should be as square as possible to the target, adjust your eyes to the different ranges by drawing back or carrying forward the cheek on the stock, don't carry the strap to the upper band or if you do convey it through the middle band. When you have everything ready, take your field glass and have a good look at the conditions, especially the mirage. Having satisfied yourself, and made sure your sights are right, proceed to aim. If you shoot with the bar, take in all the barleycorn, if you prefer the V level the barley-corn—which should have a flat top—with the top of the V and gently raise the foresight till it hardly touches the bullseye, being careful to have your backsight level with the butt or line of targets and your dot or line perfectly in the centre, don't hurry, there are two great evils to be avoided here, too much haste, and too long an aim, both are bad. I know not which is worse. Now comes the critical moment, the "let off". No matter how good the aim, the value of the rifle, or the quality of the ammunition, should you lose for one fraction of a second, your self-control or nerve, your shot will be wasted, do not hesitate but with your forefinger between the first and second joint firmly on the trigger, your whole body braced, but not tense, slowly, firmly, and decisively close your right hand, your eye, hand and brain moving in perfect sympathy, and you may have perfect assurance of a good shot whatever happens, accident or otherwise, never fire more than the stated rounds of a match. One often notices a rifle man taking another shot for one in which his elbow slipped, or something touched him or some other lame excuse, don't do it, it is deadly to your success, never be discouraged by a poor shot, you build your successes on your failures more in shooting than in anything, and taking another shot, is like living in a fool's paradise, you accustom yourself to something that never occurs in a match, and render yourself liable to failure at the critical moment, let every shot fired in practice be done as in a match.

Use of the Rifle in War.

Whatever pleasure and benefit may be derived at the butts, there can be no doubt about the ultimate purpose of the rifle, its usefulness as a means of defence is the great end of rifle practice. It is not the object of this paper to speak either interms of praise or otherwise about war, but to any observer it is apparent that there must be occasions inwhich an armed conflict is not only honorable and just but an absolute necessity, and only by such means can the best and truest instincts of citizenship be manifested. It has been said that "war is hell," but history teaches that out of the strife and turmoil, and avarice and such kindred mixtures, has arises, the freedom and manhood, and patriotism that has made an earthly heaven. I believe that right mostly rises triumphantly, and although the path may be strewn with corpses it were better to be dead than live in ignominity and slavery. If "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty" it should be added that eternal preparedness is the price of peace.

The British Flag.

We live under a flag that means breaking the shackles of superstition to loose the bonds of slavery, to make every man equal before the law, to stamp our cruelty, to spread the beneficience of national life, to uplift humanity, and to tread under foot forever oppression, ignorance, and fear. In a word, our flag represents the highest type of civilization the world has yet seen and for that flag we ought at all times be ready and willing to fight.

From recent experiences it is evident that in a measure old ideas are giving place to new and better ones. What is needed in Canada is that every man from 18 years of age up should be a fighting unit. Why should we depend on the regular soldier to fight our battles. It isquite true they are necessary. We admire their precision at drill, their neatness on parade, and their courage and endurance in the field, but when we have only 50,000 to protect our coast and border, Canadians should be at their backs a million strong, every man well armed and a trained rifle shot, and with a high and noble love of country in his heart, and then if they are true Canadians, and understand and revere the grand old flag Canada need fear no foe athome or abroad.

The great range of the present rifle—which will yet be extended—will revolutionize the future style of warfare, until even the open prairie can be made impregnable against an advancing foe. Now what has been said in the earlier part of this paper is applicable to the use of the rifle in war, the care of the rifle, the development of the body, the cultivation of the mind, and the training at the butts, will fit the rifleman for effectiveness in the privations of the field, and adaptability in action,and the personal cleanliness and good health of every man, miminize the dangers of entaric fever, and other diseases of a kindred nature incamps One closing word, every man should not only be a common soldier but in a sense he should be a general, today the fighting unit must be a thinker, not as in the past a machine, then a man was not allowed to think but acted according to orders, today he must take the initiative, size up and grasp the situation, and do the greatest damage while suffering the least loss. All of course under the direction of the officercommanding. With a preparedness such as has been suggested in these ideas I think we would not only be in a position ready for war, but what is far better, we would be in a condition to command peace.

IRRIGATION.

The Department of Interior have recently published a report by Mr. John Stewart, Commissioner of Irrigation, dealing with the recent development of irrigation in Alberta and Saskatchewan. The Commissioner states that the benefit to be derived from irrigation has been demonstrated within the past few years and points to the fact that while five years ago there were 169 ditches in use, with a total length of 469 miles and capable of irrigating some 600,000 acres, there are now 272 ditches, with a total length of 922 miles and capable of irrigating some 3,000,000 acres.

Among the larger enterprises to which the Commissioner more particularly refers are the canal of the Alberta Railway and Irrigation Co. in Southern Alberta. This Company have constructed a canal system of over 100 miles, besides some thirty miles of laterals, and have expended over one million dollars and there have sprung up within the district watered by their system several prosperous towns, each of which is the centre of a considerable farming district which was formerly devoted solely to grazing. Particular reference is made to the beet-sugar industry which has been developed in the vicinity of Raymood, Alta., as a result of irrigation. A factory has been constructed at a cost of half a million dollars and some 33,000 tons of beets grown in the district were used in 1906, for which an average price of $5.00 per ton was paid.

Among the larger individual works constructed in the Province of Saskatchewan is the Enright andStrong ditch near East End. This system takes water from the Frenchman River and irrigates some 3000 acres and is reported by the Commissioner to be a model one to be built by a private enterprise.

Mention is also made of the Canadian Pacific Company's irrigation project for the reclamation of a considerable proportion of a tract of 3,000,000 acres lying along the line of their railway between Calgary and Medicine Hat. This land was a few years ago considered only fit for grazing, but by means of irrigation has been found to be well suited to agriculture. This is said to be the largest irrigation enterprise in the world, although perhaps not the most costly. The cost of the complete works is placed at something over $5,000,000.

There is printed with the report, in the form of an appendix, a report of the proceedings of the "First Irrigation Convention of Western Canada" held at Calgary in July, 1907, which contains much useful information concerning farming.

Watch the date, July 2nd, the day when the Campbell Brothers Consolidated Shows appear here. Each succeeding year new features are hunted up and added to this already famous circus—startling acts that play upon the imagination; hair-breath escapes in mid-air by daring acrobats and the various ring acts that never fail to amuse. Horses always take a prominent part in every circus, and this is no exception to the rule. Beautiful silky-coated horses with glittering trappings and mounted by a bevy of pretty girls in natty costumes, catch the eye on all sides; no matter where it is, in the parade, or under canvas, in the sawdust ring, horses reign supreme. Campbell Brothers are famous for their thoroughbred horses and the number and beauty of their circus horses this season are beyong comparison. Watch for the grand street parade at 10 a.m. and the big shows at 2 and 8 p.m. under the new water-proof tents, rain or shine.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

This department is given over to labor interests in Medicine Hat, to use as they see fit—discussions of labor subjects, notes of events in the labor world, and notices of meetings, etc. The editor does not assume the responsibility for the opinions expressed or the news sent in for publication, except in so far as he must eliminate libellous or personal discussions, and place some limit on the space used.)

Brantford, Ont., June 11.—The union moulders who are on strike at Buck Stove Works in this city have established their right to do picket duty. The strike opened early in April. The later part of the month the police at the request of the firm interfered with picketing done by the union in the vicinity of the works where the non-union men who had taken the places of the strikers were quartered. The union men were summoned for besetting the works and as a result one hundred of them were committed for trial waiving hearing before the police magistrate. At the trial yesterday before Judge Hardy, two cases were taken up. Evidence showed that the men had maintained pickets in the vicinity of the works but had not compelled anyone to cease working. The crown contended the case was difficult to prove, but held that by their act in besetting the works the men showed motive or desire to interfere with the strikebreakers. The defense claimed the picketing was only for the purpose of getting and giving information regarding the strike. Judge Hardy held that picketing was not illegal provided the men did not beset the works with a view to compelling others from abstaining from hoing lawful work. There was no evidence of restraint, he said, nor of compulsion. There are authorities to support this action and accordingly he dismissed the two cases in question and the remainder of the hundred were dropped. The strike is still on.

Considerable difference of opinion exists in Winnipeg as to the celebration of Labor Day. The Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners goes dead against the parade, but says: "Have better sports than ever with high class speakers in attendance to address the crowd, but no parade." The Railway Storemen are also against a parade, but suggest a torchlight procession in the evening. The Painters and Decorators want a picnic. Maintenance of Way employees and the Amalgamated Carpenters are hot on a parade. In the multitude of councillors there is wisdom!

The Miners of Great Britain have cast in their lot with the Labor party. This means that about sixteen members of the House who are today sitting with the Liberals will have to run as independent Labor candidates at the next election and if returned cross over to the Labor benches. Unless they agree to this other men will be put up by the unions to take their places.

The old delusion that Labor, to better its position, must work with the Liberal party is being rapidly dissipated.

The Amalgamated Society of Carpenters of Great Britain are using every endeavor to prevent their members emigrating to Canada till the state of the skilled labor market improves.

The Salvation Army has come in for trenchant criticism for continuing its immigration activities at the present juncture. Albert Chamberlain, president of the British Welcome League of Toronto, states that the Army will find employment only for immigrants, on whom they get a bonus. The unemployed who have been in the country for months are unable to get jobs, while the army is filling vacancies by new arrivals.

The street parade that will be given here July 2nd at 10 a.m. by the Campbell Brothers Consolidated Shows will be a brilliant spectacle, consisting as it does of hundreds of high-spirited horses with their natty trimmings; South American Gauchos and Australian boomerang throwers; bright-eyed senoritas from Mexico; desert-born Bedouin Arabs; Japanese athletes and Hindoo fakirs; detachments of cavalry troopers of many flags; master horsemen of the universe; Mexican, Indian and American bands and strange Oriental music, of many nations, funny clowns with their funny mules and ponies and the magnificent cages containing the wild beasts of the desert and trained animals. In fact it is a parade that is in itself a grand and beautiful show. Everyone be sure and see it at 10 a.m.

BASE RUNNING AS A SCIENCE AND ART.

Hughey Jennings, always one of the best base runners in the game and with hardly an equal in touching runners trying for second base when he was with the Baltimore Club, recently spoke of the science of base running and incidentally of the liability of a player being injured by spikes.

"Base sliding is not dangerous when the player knows how to do it, and spikes are not dangerous when the player knows how to handle the man that is coming in. The great success in saving yourself in base-running is to slide when you start to do it. Never hesitate. The man who starts a slide and trys to stop is a goner sure. If he doesn't break an ankle he is lucky. The base runner should throw all his strength into the slide and he won't get hurt.

"I recall that we always had a half dozen files in the Baltimore clubhouse to sharpen our spikes with.

"The diamond there was especially hard and rough and the spikes wore down easily, so we had to sharpen them often. But we did not let the opposing club know that was the reason.

"Two or three of them would come out of the clubhouse and they'd find the crowd sitting on the benches, filing away at their spikes, the rasping noise filling the room as though it were a machine shop.

"'Look out for us today' was always the admonition, and of course they went away pretty well determined to take no chances with us on the bases.

"As a matter of fact, there is hardly any chance of an in-fielder being spiked if he plays his game right and the runner is only trying to get to the base. No matter how a base runner goes into a bag, he cannot hurt the infielder if the latter is in the right position. McGraw, as often as every opponent on the field tried to spike him, was never spiked until Dick Harley handed it to him when he had no reason to do so. McGraw always made the base slider carry him into the bag.

"The only man who has a chance to be hurt by spikes in baseball, if he is playing the game the way he should, is the first sacker. He must keep his foot on the bag, and he is, therefore, bound to get spiked more or less.

"But nobody wants to hurt a first baseman. In present day baseball I don't know of one of them who is at all offensive. They are almost always, for some reason or other, good, big hearted chaps that nobody would purposely hurt. Of them all in the American league. I know of but one who would invite trobble, and that is Jiggs Donohue.

"Donohue and I had several rows last year and we told each other pretty plainly what we were thinking I guess. But Jiggs proved himself a man, every inch of him, after the season was over, when he came to our hotel after the world series was over, talked to the boys, advised and encouraged them. We buried the hatchet after that.

"Nobody wants to hurt a first baseman. It's a sort of unwritten law that as the poor chap must keep his foot there, it isn't fair to cut him. Matty McIntyre for instance, would have played all last season if he hadn't turned his ankle to save Bob Unglaub.

"King Kelley once offered to bet Jack Cooks five dollars that he could give him the ball, be ten feet away from the bag and make it without being touched. He was so clever in dodging one way when the fielder expected him to go the other, they couldn't touch him. Cooks declined to take the bet. He knew that Kelley could do it.

"Famous as Kelley was for his work on the bases, Ty Cobb is a better base runner, for Ty has more speed and is equally tricky in getting around the man with the ball. Kelley had a swing something like Cobb's only he used but his toe to touch the bag. Cobb doesn't take quite such a clean swing in going feet first, but when he goes head first he leaves but a hand for the fielder to touch, and going the way he does it is a mighty small target.

"Watching the guardian of the sack of course, is the great trick in base sliding. You can usually tell by the way he is standing which direction the ball is coming from, and it is your cue to go the opposite but even in this there is always the chance of being outguessed. It's an old trick of the fielder to hold his hands on his hips to pretend that the ball is not coming toward him. You go slow to your slide and he suddenly becomes animated, grabs the ball and tags you. Or he will lean in one direction for the ball and then dodge over and take it from another, and unless you can outguess him, he has you."

HOW TO BECOME A HIGH JUMPER

High jumping is one of the events in which the majority of college track teams are weakest. At the most, there are never more than two or three good high jumpers in a college at the same time. And yet it is one of the events which is the most easily practiced and which requires the least elaborate equipment.

It can be practiced readily in the back yard, all that is required being a plot of smooth, level ground, with enough room for a run before the take-off, a jumping stand—the home-made variety is very well adapted for practicing—and a pit which consists of loose earth broken up by a spade in order to have a soft spot on which to land.

Given these requisites, all that is needed is perseverance on the part of the boy in regular practice, and in paying attention to a few elementary rules.

Having measured the spot from which he proposes to take-off, the runner should mark it in some way—laying the sleeve of his sweater at the spot is as good as any—and should then from about 45 feet of the jumpers stand, jog slowly up to about 26 feet from the take-off. From here at a quickened pace he should take four even strides, getting his take-off on the fifth. The run should not be too fast, the man gath erhimself for the spring.

While running he should keep his eyes fixed on the ground under the bar. The object of this is to avoid spring too soon, which seizes a man if he has his eyes on the bar.

A jumper should take off with the foot which comes the most naturally to him. Let us suppose that he uses his left foot for that purpose. About the most important thing to be acquired by the jumper is to get his foot accurately on the take-off and time his spring to the instant upon his reaching the mark.

Just as he is taking off, the jumper should lean slightly backward and throw all his weight on the heel of his left foot, from which he springs.

Simultaneously with the spring, the body should be twisted slightly to the left, to aid the jumper in making his final turn as he crosses the bar.

While rising to the bar, the left arm should be kept low, while the right arm and leg, moving freely, are swung maintained until the jumper is at the highest point of his elevation, above, but not yet across the bar. At this point the right leg should be kicked outward and downward, while the left should be snapped quickly up.

The object in twisting the body in this way is to prevent the back and shoulders of the jumper from knocking the bar off, after he has crossed it.

The left leg is then shot swiftly downward, and the jumper alights crouching on the same leg from which he took off.

Too much emphasis cannot be laid on the importance of keeping the body clear of the bar after the jumper has actually succeeded in crossing it. Many a good jump has been ruined merely in hitting the cross-bar with his shoulder or arm at the last moment.

The Hound of the Baskervilles

Another Adventure of Sherlock Holmes.

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

Copyright (1902) by A. Conan Doyle.

He laughed at my bewildered expression.

"There is a delightful freshness about you, Watson, which makes it a pleasure to exercise any small powers which I possess at your expense. A gentleman goes forth on a showery and miry day. He returns immaculate in the evening with the gloss still on his hat and his boots. He has been a fixture therefore all day. He is not a man with intimate friends. Where, then, could he have been? Is it not obvious?"

"Well, it is rather obvious."

"The world is full of obvious things which nobody by any chance ever observes. Where do you think that I have been?"

"A fixture also."

"On the contrary, I have been to Devonshire."

"In spirit?"

"Exactly. My body has remained in this armchair, and has, I regret to observe, consumed in my absence two large pots of coffee and an incredible amount of tobacco. After you left I sent down to Stamford's for the Ordnance map of this portion of the moor, and my spirit has hovered over it all day. I flatter myself that I could find my way about."

"A large scale map, I presume?"

"Very large." He unrolled one section and held it over his knee. "Here you have the particular district which concerns us. That is Baskerville Hall in the middle."

"With a wood round it?"

"Exactly. I fancy the Yew Alley, though not marked under that name, must stretch along this line, with the moor, as you perceive, upon the right of it. This small clump of buildings here is the hamlet of Grimpen, where our friend Dr. Mortimer has his headquarters. Within a radius of five miles there are, as you see, only a very few scattered dwellings. Here is Lafter Hall, which was mentioned in the narrative. There is a house indicated here which may be the residence of the naturalist—Stapleton, if I remember right, was his name. Here are two moorland farm-houses, High Tor and Foulmire. Then fourteen miles away the great convict prison of Princetown. Between and around these scattered points extends the desolate, lifeless moor. This, then, is the stage upon which tragedy has been played, and upon which we may help to play it again."

"It must be a wild place."

"Yes, the setting is a worthy one. If the devil did desire to have a hand in the affairs of men——"

"Then you are yourself inclining to the supernatural explanation."

"The devil's agents may be of flesh and blood, may they not? There are two questions waiting for us at the outset. The one is whether any crime has been committed at all; the second is, what is the crime and how was it committed? Of course, if Dr. Mortimer's surmise should be correct, and we are dealing with forces outside the ordinary laws of Nature, there is an end of our investigation. But we are bound to exhaust all other hypotheses before falling back upon this one. I think we'll shut that window again, if you don't mind. It is a singular thing, but I find that a concentrated atmosphere helps a concentration of thought. I have not pushed it to the length of getting into a box to think, but that is the logical outcome of my convictions. Have you turned the case over in your mind?"

"Yes, I have thought a good deal of it in the course of the day."

"What do you make of it?"

"It is very bewildering."

"It has certainly a character of its own. There are points of distinction about it. That change in the footprints, for example. What do you make of that?"

"Mortimer said that the man had walked on tiptoe down that portion of the alley."

"He only repeated what some fool had said at the inquest. Why should a man walk on tiptoe down the alley?"

"What then?"

"He was running, Watson—running desperately, running for his life, running until he burst his heart and fell dead upon his face."

"Running from what?"

"There lies our problem. There are indications that the man was crazed with fear before ever he began to run."

"How can you say that?"

"I am presuming that the cause of his fears came to him across the moor. If that were so, and it seems most probable, only a man who had lost his wits would have run from the house instead of towards it. If the gipsy's evidence may be taken as true, he ran with cries for help in the direction where help was least likely to be. Then, again, whom was he waiting for that night, and why was he waiting for him in the Yew Alley rather than in his own house?"

"You think that he was waiting for someone?"

"The man was elderly and infirm. We can understand his taking an evening stroll, but the ground was damp and the night inclement. Is it natural that he should stand for five or ten minutes, as Dr. Mortimer, with more practical sense than I should have given him credit for, deduced from the cigar ash?"

"But he went out every evening."

"I think it unlikely that he waited at the moorgate every evening. On the contrary, the evidence is that he avoided the moor. That night he waited there. It was the night before he made his departure for London. The thing takes shape, Watson. It becomes coherent. Might I ask you to hand me my violin, and we will postpone all further thought upon this business until we have had the advantage of meeting Dr. Mortimer and Sir Henry Baskerville in the morning."

CHAPTER IV.

Our breakfast-table was cleared early, and Holmes waited in his dressing-gown for the promised interview. Our clients were punctual to their appointment, for the clock had just struck ten when Dr. Mortimer was shown up, followed by the young baronet. The latter was a small, alert, dark-eyed man about thirty years of age, very sturdily built, with thick black eyebrows and a strong, pugnacious face. He wore a ruddy-tinted tweed suit, and had the weather-beaten appearance of one who has spent most of his time in the open air, and yet there was something in his steady eye and the quiet assurance of his bearing which indicated the gentleman.

"This is Sir Henry Baskerville," said Dr. Mortimer.

"Why, yes," said he, "and the strange thing is, Mr. Sherlock Holmes, that if my friend here had not proposed coming round to you this morning I should have come on my own account. I understand that you think out little puzzles, and I've had one this morning which wants more thinking out than I am able to give to it."

"Pray take a seat," Sir Henry. Do I understand you to say that you have yourself had some remarkable experience since you arrived in London?"

"Nothing of much importance, Mr Holmes, Only a joke, as like as not. It was this letter, if you can call it a letter, which reached me this morning."

He laid an envelope upon the table and we all bent over it. It was of common quality, greyish in color. The address, 'Sir Henry Baskerville, Northumberland Hotel,' was printed in rough characters; the post-mark 'Charing Cross,' and the date of posting the preceding evening.

"Who knew that you were going to the Northumberland Hotel?" asked Holmes, glancing keenly across at our visitor.

"No one could have known. We only decided after I met Dr. Mortimer."

"But Dr. Mortimer was no doubt already stopping there?"

"No, I had been staying with a friend," said the doctor. "There was no possible indication that we intended to go to this hotel."

"Hum! Someone seems to be very deeply interested in your movements." Out of the envelope he took a half sheet of foolscap paper folded into four. This he opened and spread flat upon the table. Across the middle of it a single sentence had been formed by the expedient of pasting printed words upon it. It ran: "As you value your life or your reason keep away from the moor." The word "moor" only was printed in ink.

"Now," said Sir Henry Baskerville, "perhaps you will tell me, Mr. Holmes, what in thunder is the meaning of that, and what it has to do with my affairs?"

"What do you make of it, Dr. Mortimer? You must allow that there is nothing supernatural about this, at any rate?"

"No, sir, but it might very well come from someone who was convinced that the business is supernatural."

"What business?" asked Sir Henry sharply. "It seems to me that all you gentlemen know a great deal more than I do about my own affairs."

"You shall share our knowledge before you leave this room, Sir Henry. I promise you that," said Sherlock Holmes. "We will confine ourselves for the present with you permission to this very interesting document, which must have been put together and posted yesterday evening. Have you yesterday's Times, Watson?"

"It is here in the corner."

"Might I trouble you for it—the inside page, please, with the leading articles?" He glanced swiftly over it, running his eyes up and down the columns. "Capital article this on Free Trade. Permit me to give you an extract from it. 'You may be cajoled into imagining that your own special trade or your own industry will be encouraged by a protective tariff, but it stands to reason that such legislation must in the long run keep away wealth from the country, diminish the value of our imports, and lower the general conditions of life in this island.' What do you think of that, Watson?" cried Holmes, in high glee, rubbing his hands together with satisfaction. "Don't you think that is an admirable sentiment?"

Dr. Mortimer looked at Holmes with an air of professional interest, and Sir Henry Baskerville turned a pair of puzzled dark eyes upon me.

"I don't know much about the tariff and things of that kind," said he; "but it seems to me we've got a bit off the trail so far as that note is concerned."

"On the contrary, I think we are particularly hot upon the trail, Sir Henry. Watson here knows more about my methods than you do, but I fear that even he has not quite grasped the significance of this sentence."

"No, I confess that I see no connection."

"And yet, my dear Watson, there is so very close a connection that the one is extracted out of the other. 'You,' 'your,' 'your,' 'life,' 'reason,' 'value' 'keep away,' 'from the.' Don't you see now whence these words have been taken?"

"By thunder, you're right! Well, if that isn't smart!" cried Sir Henry.

"If any possible doubt remained it is settled by the fact that 'keep away' and 'from the' are cut out in one piece."

"Well, now—so it is!"

"Really, Mr. Holmes, this exceeds anything which I could have imagined," said Dr. Mortimer, gazing at my friend in amazement. "I could understand anyone saying that the words were from a newspaper; but that you should name which, and add that it came from the leading article, is really one of the most remarkable things which I have ever known. How did you do it?"

"I presume, doctor, that you could tell the skull of a negro from that of an Esquimaux?"

"Most certainly."

"But how?"

"Because that is my special hobby. The differences are obvious. The supra-orbital crest, the facial angle, the maxillary curve, the——"

"But this is my special hobby, and the differences are equally obvious. There is as much difference to my eyes between the leaded bourgeois type of a Times article and the slovenly print of an evening halfpenny paper as there could be between your negro and your Esquimaux. The detection of types is one of the most elementary branches of knowledge to the special expert in crime, though I confess that once when I was very young I confused the Leeds Mercury with the Western Morning News. But a Times leader is entirely distinctive, and these words could have been taken from nothing else. As it was done yesterday the strong probability was that we should find the words in yesterday's issue."

"So far as I can follow you, then, Mr. Holmes," said Sir Henry Baskerville, "someone cut out this message with a scissors——"

"Nail-scissors," said Holmes. "You can see that it was a very short-bladed scissors, since the cutter had to take two snips over 'keep away.'"

"That is so. Someone, then, cut out the message with a pair of short-bladed scissors, pasted it with paste——"

"Gum," said Holmes.

"With gum on to the paper. But I want to know why the word 'moor' should have been written?"

"Because he could not find it in print. The others words were all simple and might be found in any issue, but 'moor' would be less common."

"Why, of course, that would explain it. Have you read anything else in this message, Mr. Holmes?"

"There are one or two indications, and yet the utmost pains have been taken to remove all clues. The address, you observe, is printed in rough characters. But the Times is a paper which is seldom found in any hands but those of the highly educated. We may take it, therefore, that the letter was composed by an educated man who wished to pose as an uneducated one, and his effort to conceal his own writing suggests that that writing might be known, or come to be known, by you. Again, you will observe that the words are not gummed on in an accurate line, but that some are much higher than others. 'Life,' for example, is quite out of its proper place. That may point to carelessness or it may point to agitation and hurry upon the part of the cutter. On the whole I incline to the latter view, since the matter was evidently important, and it is unlikely that the composer of such a letter would be careless. If he were in a hurry it opens up the interesting question why he should be in a hurry since any letter posted up to early morning would reach Sir Henry before he would leave his hotel. Did the composer fear an interruption—and from whom?"

"We are coming now rather into the region of guess work," said Dr. Mortimer.

"Say, rather, into the region where we balance probabilities and choose the most likely. It is the scientific use of the imagination, but we have always some material basis on which to start our speculations. Now, you would call it a guess, no doubt, but I am almost certain that this address has been written in an hotel."

"How in the world can you say that?"

"If you examine it carefully you will see that both the pen and the ink have given the writer trouble. The pen has spluttered twice in a single word, and has run dry three times in a short address, showing that there was very little ink in the bottle. Now, a private pen or ink-bottle is seldom allowed to be in such a state, and the combination of the two must be quite rare. But you know the hotel ink and the hotel pen, where it is rare to get anything else. Yes, I have very little hesitation in saying that could we examine the waste-paper baskets of the hotels round Charing Cross until we found the remains of the mutilated Times leader we could lay our hands straight upon the person who sent this singular message. Halloa! Halloa! What's this?"

He was carefully examining the foolscap, upon which the words were pasted.

"Well?"

"Nothing," said he, throwing it down. "It is a blank half-sheet of paper, without even a watermark upon it. I think we have drawn as much as we can from this curious letter; and now, Sir Henry, has anything else of interest happened to you since you have been in London?"

"Why, no, Mr. Holmes. I think not."

"You have not observed anyone follow or watch you?"

"I seem to have walked right into the thick of a dime novel," said our visitor. "Why in thunder should anyone follow or watch me?"

"We are coming to that. You have nothing else to report to us before we go into this matter?"

"Well, it depends upon what you think worth reporting."

"I think anything out of the ordinary routine of life well worth reporting."

Sir Henry smiled.

"I don't know much of British life yet, for I have spent nearly all my time in the States and in Canada. But I hope that to lose one of your boots is not part of the ordinary routine of life over here."

"You have lost one of your boots?"

"My dear sir," cried Dr. Mortimer, "it is only mislaid. You will find it when you return to the hotel. What is the use of troubling Mr. Holmes with trifles of this kind?"

"Well, he asked me for anything outside the ordinary routine."

"Exactly," said Holmes, "however foolish the incident may seem. You have lost one of your boots, you say?"

"Well, mislaid it, anyhow. I put them both outside my door last night, and there was only one in the morning. I could get no sense out of the chap who cleans them. The worst of it is that I only bought the pair last night in the Strand, and I have never had them on."

(To be Continued.)

The City Fathers.

The adjourned meeting of the city council was held on 8th inst., in the city hall. Present, the Mayor, Alds. Baker, McKay, Morrow, Spencer, Forster, Tweed, and Huckvale.

Engineer's report with regard to the trouble at the power house, read at last regular meeting, was taken into consideration and discussed at some length. As regards the filter beds, the engineer stated that the city had not, as yet, been able to follow out the specifications of the firm and were therefore not in a position to say whether the plant came up to contract or no. When the water was not very muddy the filter worked well. When the water was as muddy as it was at present it was not so efficient.

Discussion followed on expense being occurred in engineer's office. Mr. Morrison stated that with a couple of months with his present assistance he could complete the arrears of work up to date, getting out new levels of streets and bringing his plans up-to-date. The Mayor thought the engineer should have had allthis done long ago. On Ald. Morrow's motion it was decided that Mr. Morrison retain his present help for a couple of months to get his work in connection with the taking of street levels finished up.

Petition was received asking that contractors for post office be required to put suitable sidewalks on that side of Main street. Referred to building inspector for immediate action. Solicitor wrote re C.P.R. property upon which the city had the right to levy taxes.

After a short discussion it was decided that the Mayor should attend the convention of Municipalities in Montreal and expenses paid. It was the general opinion of the council that Medicine Hat should be represented at th) Convention, more especially as it was to be held here next year.

Tenders for gas well piping and supplies were not accepted, but layed on the table for the present.

W. G. Rowe wrote re 4,500 feet of gas piping of the Alberta Brick Co. which were for sale. Notified council not in a position to make an offer for piping.

Board of Trade asked for $600 for the exhibit at Calgary. The Mayor explained that the reason Mr. Winters was asked to take the job was because he had more experienre along this line than any other man, he was a born talker, and just the man to be sent when advertisement was desired. Ald. Huckvale said no slight on the gas commissioner was intended. He had no idea that any city man was after the job.

Stewart and Tweed tender for coal oil was accepted at 38 cents per gallon.

Streets and sidewalks by-law with regard to barbed wire fences in city limits was amended, so as not to apply to fences already built where no sidewalk has been built orconstructed by the city.

Committee reported progress on by-law to raise $7,000 by debenture far construction of new fire hall.

Mr. B. Lean and the Revs. Morrow and Nicoll were appointed as board of health.

New lawn by-laws provides that water may be used for lawn services, window cleaning, etc., only between the hours of 6 and 9 a.m. and 6 and 10 p.m. No person may supply water for another's use, outside his premises. No lawn sprinkler or hose may be used unless the special lawn rate has been paid. The city is also given certain powers of limiting consumption.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

The following is from the Macleod notes of the Lethbridge Herald, and refers to a bank clerk who left this city a couple of months ago:

Mr. Black, the accountant, and Mr. White, the teller, of the Bank of Commerce staff here, had a narrow escape from a watery grave last evening. They were walking along the river bank, engrossed in the amusing occupation of "seeing if the bank would fall in if they stood on it" which as only could be expected happened, Mr. Black's ponderous body, combined with the weight of the over-hanging bank fell in with a splash. The catastrophe appeared to be so amusing to Mr. White that he could only lie down on his back and indulge in the most uproarious mirth When he recovered sufficiently to ascertain the extent of the disaster, he looked over the edge and from the midst of his senior officer's "auburn" locks a commanding voice issued, "White, you —— fool, I can't get out." However, Mr. White seeing that the matter was becoming serious, Mr. Black having fallen into the river, and was standing in water up to his shoulders. The current at that point being very swift, with great difficulty Mr. Black was hauled to the top, and the two set off for town. Mr. Black being quite convinced that an overhanging bank would probably fall in if he stood on it.

sell his goods. That was all. Absolutely nothing, whatever, from the department of justice or anything else to examine witnesses on oath. I refused to go into the investigation under such circumstances Do you blame me? (Applause and No!")

Refused to be Trapped

"I refused ta go into the investigation, I told Mr. Henderson so and sent a copy of my refusal to Mr. Oliver, Mr. Pugsley, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Governor-General. What was the answer? I was notified from the minister of the interior, 'I don't consider it necessary to make arrangements such as you suggest and if the charges are not substantiated, it will be your own fault, not mine.' I am going to just simply leave the matter with my brethren of the Presbyterian assembly. Whatever my wisdom or my unwisdom, whatever my imperfections, and I acknowledge that I have many imperfections, and I tell you that I have been passing my life under conditions which Ihave been living and breathing an atmosphere of corruption, I want you to believe what I say to you and if you think I am not worthy of belief, I say to you that I went to the minister, I went to the leader of my people at Ottawa and I asked them to clean these things up and they refused to do it.

Believed in Ottawa at First

"I went to the Yukon believing that the administration was good, as I said to an eastern gentleman whom I did not know in 1900, in a letter written without suspicion, but used in the interests of the party from one end of Canada to the other. It was a letter written to a man whom I did not know, but from whom I did not expect anything like that. He was from Pictou. I might have been more careful if he had come from the island, but he didn't.

Liquor Men Run Things

"In 1901 I was at Bonanza, I was travelling by the stage. The lower elenient travelled on the stage a good deal in those days. The stages were all crowded and they stopped at all the road houses. The liquor permit men ran the whole business and most of those roadhousss were houses of prostitution. There were deemed worthy to run the liquor six liquor men, six men who were business and some other things. I was not looking for anything wrong in the state of the Yukon, I believed the administration was good but I heard the names of officials and police and judicial officials and others in the mouths of prostitutes and "Macks," which is the name they give to pimps in the north. I heard them talking about men who were there to represent the administration, men whose duty it was to uphold the highest moral sense of the Canadian people, and I heard them talk about these men as if theywere lap dogs led around by a string by the prostitutes of the dance halls.

Prostitution Flourished

"The sergeant of the Mounted Police, who is now in the detective bureau in Toronto, told me in the city of Bonanza that 50 per cent of the road houses are houses of prostitution, and a Northern company salesman told me that at least 90 per cent of these houses are houses of prostitution. There is one, the Old Inn, near Dawson, and the woman who kept it was a noted prostitute named Maud Earl.

Protests to Commissioner

"I went to the commissioner myself and protested against it. Sergeant Smith and the corporal of the Mounted police testified under oath that she was a prostitute, and that her house was bad, and that they had to put a patrol on as the result of the complaints of decent people. They asked me if I had anything to say. I said: "It is not necessary, when the police who have no motive for telling the story, tell you that, to say anything.'

"But she got her license all the same, and a man working as a stenographer in the Mounted Police office told me all that was necessary for a man to get a license in that territory was that the police should report him or her. That is done so far as this is concerned. Thirty-six licensed houses on twelve miles of Bonanza Creek! Traps for decent men!

Dance Halls

"The next is the dance halls. There is a great deal said and written to make it appear as though this is ancient history. That is not so. It is modern history. The whole story, as far as I have told it, is not a year old yet. A year ago there were ninety women in bad houses on Front street, of a most dangerous class, as Senator Ross described them in the legislative council—"A most dangerous class of women." When he said anything, he meant it, and he said practically, 'This has to go,' and it went. But two months later, when he was lying at White Horse, the house was called together, and the motion emasculated, and it was no good. Dance halls! When I wrote the letter last March I was driven to it.

Many Sleepless Nights

"I have had many sleepless nights about it. I like being hammered in the papers no more than I like taking medicine. But one has to take it. I am getting callous about this hammering, and do not care what (snapping his fingers). They have made a pachyderm of me, and I do not care what they say. I kept house for nine years, that is in tent and cabin together, and was lying alone just opposite the Methodist church. In six weeks prior to writing that letter many passed through my house who represented losses in the dance halls of $9,000, and it was said in the Yukon council in support of amendments to ordinances They have not cut out the dance halls.

Are All Open Again

"What they have done, is they have cut them out from licensed premises, but they are right opposite the licensed premises, and the last thing I heard before I left Dawson was that as soon as I left they would all open again. The law has not cut them out. It is a lie, whoever says it. Major Wood, in his place, said one man lost $4,000 a few nights ago; another lost $1,700, another $208 and another 4800 in these dance halls. How do they do it? They are experts there. The women are brought in. They are exports; they are aliens. They come in sleigh loads in the spring, and their coming is advertised in the papers—"Thirty fresh women brought in on the ice." The megaphone on the streets announces that the dance halls are open, and women are there sitting half-naked on the sidewalks. Is it any wonder a minister speaks out? That is picture enough.

Fighting in the Open.

"You understand that in this movement I am in the open. This is not ancient history. It is a matter of today. If the government is converted, it has been a very sudden conversion! They must be Methodists. (Laughter.) It is a mighty sudden conversion.

"Just one word about other things I said there is just one immortality that we have in the Yukon. There are other immortalities, or at least there are other things that I think are immoralities. There is no personal resentment on my part against the men against whom I have made specific charges. I don't think I have spoken half an hour to the two men if all the talks I had with them were put together. We had no dealings whatever, and I have no personal feeling in the matter.

Has Learned Patience.

"I have learned to have a good deal of grace. When it is simply personal I think I could turn the other cheek. I don't know what I might do afterwards, but I would turn the other cheek (laughter). I think I could. But when the foundations of our homes, when our social and religious and political life are shaken by this immorality, I cannnot believe that men who see these tnings should keep quiet and say nothing. In the election of 1904 to my knowledge over 500 men were openly disfranchised in the fllondike district alone. A case for conspiracy was brought under the Election Act, brought against thirteen men. Over a hundred men came from the creeks to that trial and paid their own expenses to testify that they had been sworn and their names put on the list, but when they came to vote they were disfranchised, but the judge stopped the case and would allow it to proceed no further. In the election of 1900 there were 120 votes polled at Cariboo Crossing. I know Caribdo Srossing and I know there are not ten votes there.

Toughs Imported

"But then 120 polled. A trainload of Canadian and American toughs were brought from Skagway to Cariboo Crossing. They were all drunk and some of them voted as often as six times. I don't know whether this is immorality or not. I can't tell, but some of the brethren may be able to tell me. They may have more sensitive consciences from living in a more organized section of Canada than I have. Money stolen out of the public treasury, money spent in scattering handbills and paid for in road certificates, is this immorality? A man whom I know showed me one of the pay sheets of the superintendent of roads There were thirty-five men in King Joe's restaurant, sleeping and eating at his expense, and their names were on the pay sheets of the crown at a point on the road twenty-five miles away from where they were eating.

Why These Insults

"It has been said that decent women are not insulted on the streets of Dawson. How could they. There are 30 police there for 1700 people. If Toronto had as many police in proportion to population, it would have 9,600. Besides, why should a man who is lustful insult decent women on the street when there are professional houses in every second block.

"Now, I am through, just one word about myself. I am in the open now, and am going to stay. I may say, and say it with all respect Mr. Moderator, that neither church nor state will ever get behind the foe again. I am going to it.

Badly Battered But—

"I may be wrong in the view of some people; of course, I am wrong in the view of some people, andgreat influential people, but I am going to stay in the rough and tumble way Jesus of Nazareth did. I shall get through badly battered, I suppose, and get a deal of dirt upon me, no question about it. Already I know one lying affidavit has been sent abroad in Dawson City about me by the men who signed the petition for the retention of the dance halls. But I am not going to turn back. I am going out on the other side. I never take these matters much into the pulpit.

Principle in All

"I believe there is preaching the gospel in the pulpit, but I believe the gospel is intended to apply in principle to every department of life, private and public, and I shall so apply it henceforth in my ministry; the minister is a fool who makes his pulpit a place for the habitual denunciation even of vice. It is a mistake, an awful mistake, because people get callous if you go talking denunciation all the time to them. But I intend to keep right on.

Not in Trouble.

"The minister of another church came to me after the writ for libel was issued, and said, Dr. Pringle, I am sorry you are in trouble.' I said I am not in trouble; it is this other fellow who is introuble." He said 'It is difficult to know just how far a minister should go in a matter like this.' I said, Sir (it was in my own room), there is no question in my mind. I have settled it, and settled it, definitely once and for all. I have settled it this way.

"If I have grace, God giving me grace enough, and courage, the kind of courage the old saints had, I am going in the matter just as far as Jeremiah would have gone, and I think I shall be safe. They were political preachers. Their talk was about the righteousness and unrighteousness of public life. They demanded that in order that the nation should flourish and prosper and be content, that the foundation of national life should be laid in righteousness. Jesus of Nazareth was the ideal of charity. I have studied this question. I know my New Testament, and I see Jesus of Nazareth.

Has Learned His Lesson Well

"I know them a good deal better than I did in my life before. I have had Him in the trail, just walking by my side. I know my new testament, because I have had nothing but my revised new testament. I have sought and found that Jesus Christ believed in charity. That is love. That he was the incarnation of charity. But we do not put rose water on fever germs, we put carbolic acid on fever germs. (Loud applause. There is a place where charity ends and righteous indignation begins, and Jesus of Nazareth knew it, because he said to the political leader of his day, or rather he sent a message—"Go ye and tell that fox I cast out devils and cure today. Tomorrow and the third day I shall be perfect." He said "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how shall ye escape the damnation of hell?" (Loud applause.)

Preacher's Opinions

Rev. P. K. McRae, Forks Baddeck, C. B.: "I always count it a pleasure to recommend the Dr. Slocum Remedies to my parishioners. I believe there is nothing better for throat and lung troubles or weakness or run-down system. For speaker's sore throat I have found Psychine very beneficial."

Rev. W. H. Stevens, Paisley, Ont.: "Psychine seemed just the stimulant my system needed. I shall add my testimony as to its efficacy at every opportunity."

Rev. R. M. Browne, Amherst Head, N.S., "I have often recommended Psychine since taking it myself, for it is a cure for the troubles you specify."

Rev. Chas. Stirling, Bath, N.B.: "I have used Psychine in my family; the results were marvelous. I have visited people who state that they never used its equal. I strongly recommend it.

Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, Markdale, Ont.: "I have taken two bottles of Psychine and am pleased to say that I am greatly improved in health. I was troubled with my throat, but now I find it about restored to its normal condition. I find my work very much less taxing. I believe Psychine is all claimed for it."

These are earnest preachers of the gospel of Psychine. They know whereof they speak. Psychine cures all throat, lung and stomach troubles. It is a great voice strengthenor, acting directly on the vocal, respiratory and digestive organs, thus specially adapted to public speakers. At all druggists, 50c and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. The Baptists are arranging to make it as comfortable as possible for their friends during the Dominion Fair at Calgary. They willhave a good rest tent on the grounds, where friends may leave their wraps in safety and where they can find a seat and reading matter. There will be a large supply of literature for free distribution. Rev. C. C. McLaurin, Supt. of Missions for Alberta, will be there to meet friends from the country and all distant points, and render any help in his power. Dr. J. L. Campbell, of Boston, Mass., has been engaged to deliver a series of addresses on practical Christianity each night in the Baptist Church, beginning Sunday, July 5th. Special music is being secured for the occasion. This will afford the public an opportunity of listening to a noted speaker, who has conducted a Monday noon meeting in Boston all winter.

The Calgary News has issued a special Dominion Exhibition number consisting of 24 pages. It deals principally with the arrangements for the Exhibition and the advantages of Calgary City as a manufacturing and wholesale centre. The information is carefully collected and readably presented.

ERRATUM.

A laughable mistake crept into the editorial notes this week, which was not noticed until the run was finished. Dr. Reid is given as "Liberal" member for Grenville, instead of "Conservative" member. The fact of his being Liberal or Conservative matters nothing, as the thing is just as bad for one as for the other. The point intended was to show that there is no system in the various public works, as demonstrated by the fact that a member of parliament could use the governmentworks for his own private uses.

In evidence since it is stated that Dr. Reid paid for all this work, and that in fact the Government owes him.

Insurance Rates Reduced

At last the city is to secure the benefit of a good fire protection in the reduction of insurance rates. The following notice has been sent out by W. H. Birch, Sec.-Treas. of the Manitoba and Northwest Fire Underwriters' Association.

On account of the improved fire protection in Medicine Hat, a reduction of fifteen cents will be allowed from the published rates on Mercantile risks, such reduction to take effect on and after June 10th, 1908, until notice to the contrary be given.

This reduction does not apply to Special Hazards. Grain Elevators and risks eligible for triennial insurance.

No rebates shall be made on current policies on account of above change in rates.

No cancellations shall be allowed with a view of obtaining benefit of above reduction, unless short term rates be charged.

Simmons Stumping.

W. C. Simmons, the Liberal candidate for this constituency spent some days of last week addressing small meetings around Irvine and Josephsburg. At Irvine only about thirty were present. D. G. White, spoke first. Mr. Simmons' address was not enthusiastically received, even by the few present. As one German hearer said after the meeting: "That's what we always get—promises, nothing but promises, what we want is more of the privileges granted the Government favorites."

Mr. Simmons made a number of statements that will not bear the light of day, but these will be dealt with when the campaign is on seriously.

BUSINESS CHANGE.

Watson and Keynes (successors to Charles Watson) have bought out the Alberta Feed, Sale and Livery Stables. They have for hire a large number of stylish rigs. Both Chas. Watson and A. W. Keynes, the new proprietors of the stables, are well known in the city as livery men, and their names are a guarantee of prompt and efficient service.

There must be a reason why the Kilties Band has been able to Toot successfully and continuously for 8 years, and there is.

It proves that Band Music only—even of the best—will not suffice for continuous success under all conditions, and in the Picturesque Tartans—The Stalwart Bare-Kneed Scotts, headed by Two Giant Drum Majors, and inspired by the irresistible Bag Pipes, and the Wild Slogons of the Clans, is found the spell.

Add to that one of the greatest features of the world, The unsurpassed dancers of all nations, The Champion piper of the world, Soloist of renown and a Male Choir of twenty trained voices, and the result isclear as to why the Kilties continue their tours, year in and year out, and are greeted by unbounded enthusiasm.

Style and Value

Some men put correct style above everything else, when selecting Suits and Overcoats. Others demand wear.

It's the biggest "little thing" in Canada, because it stands for the best there is in tailoring.

BOARDS OF TRADE CONVENTION

Saskatchewan and Alberta Boards Meet Last Week

Many Important Matters Discussed

The convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada met int he city hall on Thursday morning last at 10:30 o'clock. A goodly number were in attendance, and these were augmented by the arrivals who came in on the noon and night train.

Mayor McAra of Regina, the president, took his seat on the platform. Mayor Cousins then delivered an address of welcome to the visitiog delegates:

Address of Welcome

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Associated Boards of Trade for the two great Provinces of Alberta and Satkatchewan. I welcome you in the name of Medicine Hat to this your Fifth Convention.

The citizens of Medicine Hat fully appreciate your presence here, and will endeavor to make your visit a pleasant one. There is no need of my offering you the key to the city, in fact, there is no key, we keep open house in Medicine Hat as they do on the ranches, all you have to do, is to pull the latch string, walk in, and help yourself. The only thing you have to be very careful of do not blow out the gas.

I know it is customary for the Mayor of any City where you hold your meetings, to deliver an address and if I were to allow you to proceed with this meeting, and not come forward and say something in the way of welcome, our people would be sorry that they had elected me as mayor, and I do not want them to be sorry. I feel bad enough about it myself for all concerned, therefore, I will take up only a little of your time and let you get at those matters of real importance, which you have gathered here to discuss and thresh out.

We expected to offer you a much more varied programme of attractions than we will be able to put on this occasion. A combination of circumstances has, to a certain extent cut into our calculations, and we have a number of things to apologize for, I will not mention them now, as I believe it is not good form to offer excuses for hospitality extended to our friends. I trust you will look kindly on our shortcomings and take it for granted that we are trying to do our best.

I will not attempt to touch upon any of the matters that will come before you at this meeting. They will be brought forward by the proper persons in their regular order, when, I am sure, they will have your consideration, ample discussion, and a conclusion reached, that will be of benefit to the country generally.

I cordially welcome the members of this convention in the name of Medicine Hat and trust that your meeting here will be pleasant and profitable.

On behalf of the Associated Boards of Trade, Mayor McAra heartily thanked the Mayor and citizens for their address of welcome. "Some of us note," he said, "a great improvement in Medicine Hat since our last visit. I was surprised at the high standard of buildings and here, as I had come to believe that Regina had something of a monopoly in this respect." Mayor McAra then went on to name committees on resolution and credentials, the following gentlemen being appointed.

Committee on Credentials:—J. A. Mcneal, Indian Head; Walter Huckvale, Medicine Hat; B. Chuff, Saskatoon; Dr. Cook, Milestone; R. P. Lewis, Strathcona.

Commissioner Hall, secretary of the convention, then read the correspondence. Letters had been received from Hon. Mr. Bulyea, Lieut-Governor; R. P. Motherwell, J. G. Rutherford, Provincial Premier; Premier Scott of Saskatoon; Hons. Attorney-General for Alberta; Hon. Albert Regina; W. Pitry, of the C.P.R.; C. W. Cooper, asst. passenger agent for the C.P.R.; Macpherson of the C.P.R.; Price, superintendent of the Western Division of the C.P.R.; E. H. Mann of Lethbridge, and the secretary of the Red Deer board of trade wrote regretting their inability to be represented at the convention.

Mr. McKellar of Moose Jaw proposed that the resolutions of last year should be looked into, and whatever corporate bodies or others had carried out the recommendations, a vote of thanks should be passed. The convention then adjourned till 2 o'clock.

In the afternoon at two o'clock the committee on resolutions presented its report certain resolutions being eliminated as superfluous, as coming within the scope of other resolutions on the list.

The President delivering his address said:

As the retiring President of the fifth convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada, I have herewith the honor to present to you the annual address.

The attendance at this convention must be a great source of satisfaction to those who have earnestly labored to make the work of the Convention a means of securing to the general interest of these two provinces the attention requisite to their welfare and development. I am confident that in this convention, as in past conventions the work done by the delegates will produce lasting benefits, and that the time devoted to the work will be time well spent.

It has been said that the Board of Trade have now convened at the four corners of the two provinces, meeting now in the City of Eternal Light we come to witness one of the hidden forms of nature brought into the service of development. True Kipling has lucidly described this basement of force. It will be our duty and pleasure to benefit as far as possible from the Eternal Light and keep out of the basement.

A brief review of conditions since our last Convention may not be out of place here. The ever sanguine expectations of the people of these two provinces were not quite fully realized in the year 1907. Under the somewhat unfavorable weather conditions the crop result revealed a shortage in quantity and quality, and yet it may be fairly stated that the money value of the crop was equal to that of 1906, but not equal to the expectations and needs of 1907, this fact created conditions that might have proven disastrous, the vigor of the people, the great resources of the country, the sane and temperate attitude of the business community generally have eliminated entirely panic features and have permitted normal conditions to continue. The careful scrutiny applied to business and business methods is bound to bring its own reward, and has already established sounder values generally.

Contrasting conditions this spring, as compared with conditions existing in 1907, the west has rarely had a more favorable spring, general reports proves the crop to be three to four weeks ahead of 1907, and the most recent reports record a continuance of these most favorable conditions. With an increase of land under crop of at least thirty per cent it would seem reasonable to predict a banner year for 1908. If the crop of 1907 had a value of $100,000,000 to the West the crop of 1908 should bring at least $125,000,000. That the crop of the West has become a factor in the commerce of the world goes without saying, were proof of this statement wanted it can be found in the widespread attention given by the east, the United States and in the older lands across the seas, to Western Canada.

Settlement conditions continue favourable, the very best class of settlers come to make their homes with us, and we have room for millions more.

The printed report of the proceedings of the fourth Convention, have, I hope, been carefully gone into. Beginning on page 31, the resolution dealt with appears, as well as the follow up work done by our retiring secretary, Mr. Wallace. It must be a source of satisfaction to the delegates to note the number of subjects on which definite action has been taken. Some of these may be renewed briefly here.

The resolution offered by Moose Jaw delegates re commission to investigate coal supply, as well as the resolution offered by Saskatoon delegates asking for Government control of fuel have been productive of wreat good, the coal supply of the past winter season was found to be in contrast to the supply in the winter of 1906, and 1907, large quantities were shipped and stored at different points throughout the West by the Coal Companies, special attention afforded by the Railway Companies in the matter of shipments, and the Government have directly interested themselves in the fuel Supply of the future.

The regulation of the tariffs charged by the express companies, as well as the tariffs charged by the telegraph companies is now possible by appeal to the Board of Railway Commissioners whose powers have been extended for this purpose.

Telephone System and Rates, the Government of the three Western Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba have taken vigorous hold of the question of Telephone System and rates and the result will, it is hoped provide a more efficient and cheaper service.

The question of hospitals seems to have been partially solved by different municipalities who have taken over or built hospitals, it is found however, that the burden of maintenance is not fairly distributed, and the programme for this session deals with this feature under a resolution offered by Calgary.

Most marked, however, is the improvement in the postal and mail service, this subject was introduced last session by Edmonton and the improved conditions of the service is most welcome.

The programme for consideration at this convention deals with many important subjects, some of these have been before past conventions, but their importance justifies the reintroduction.

In closing I wish to express appreciation of the able and consistent work done by our retiring secretary, Mr. B. E. Wallace of Prince Albert, the printed report shows to some extent the good work done by Mr. Wallace personally I am indebted to him for assistance always readily given in furthering the interests taken up by the Boards of Trade.

I trust gentlemen, that during my term of office as President, the high standard set by my predecessors in office has not in any way been lowered. I highly appreciate the honour conferred on me when elected as President of the Parliament of the Business Men of Western Canada, where matters affecting the West are dealt with purely from a standpoint of merit. I have also to thank the delegates for their kindly consideration at all times. The courteous consideration of all matters in past conventions will, I feel sure, continue to be the feature of this present convention, and the final outcome of this session will, I also feel sure, be productive of lasting benefits to the West.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Pres.—McKenzie of Edmonton.

1st Vice—Wm. Cousins, Medicine Hat.

Secretary Treasurer—John T. Hall, Medicine Hat.

Mr. McKellar of Moose Jaw proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Wallace of Prince Albert, the retiring secretary for his excellent work during the year. Mr. Hall in seconding the motion paid a warm tribute to his predecessor.

The new president took the chair, suggesting that the courtesy of the convention be extended to the visitors from Winnipeg and Brabdonand the gentlemen who represented the railroads. Messrs. Belcher and A. L. Johnson of Winnipeg, Mr. Cornell of Brandon, Geo. Shaw, traffic manager of the C.N.R.; W. B. Lanigan, and Mr. Halstead of the C.P.R. then took seats on the platform. Mr. Belcher on behalf of the Winnipeg board of trade expressed his pleasure at being able to participate in the gathering of Western Boards of Trade. In Winnipeg, he said, they felt themselves to be in the truest sense of the word, the West, and although there was a tendency in Saskatchewan and Alberta to grow that title to themselves, he believed that Winnipeg and Manitoba were entitled to it, or rather to the name.

The convention went on to deal with resolutions. The first five, presented by the Calgary Board of Trade, occupied the greater part of the afternoon. The first, urging the government guaranteeing of railway bonds, was reserved till Friday for discussion.

The next resolution, to memorialize the Dominion Government for the establishment of a National Consumptive park in the Rockies, gave rise to a long and interesting discussion. The mover, Mr. Hutchins of Calgary, said this was a problem which had been occupying the attention of the Calgary board for some time past. A deputation had waited upon Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior, pointing out the evils which resulted from bringing people affected with tuberculosis to our province and the Dominion Government promised to deal with the matter. Mr. Oliver promised that land should be granted for the purpose of establishing a park, stating that the first action should be taken by the provincial government. Mr. Cross of the Calgary Brewing Co., speaking of his experience in connection with the Calgary general hospital, in seconding the resolution, said that he had been impressed by the number of consumptive persons who arrived in that city destitute, their relatives dumping them upon the public without a penny, introducing in addition to the charge on the public purse, a grave danger to the community, since the disease was not only contagious but infectious. The question was a national question. People were coming from all over the Dominion, from all over the States and from Europe, and the problem could not, ought not to be dealt with provincially. Mr. Schlanders of Saskatoon urged that the proposed park should be for the use of Canadians only, as this country was not called upon to act as an asylum for the sick of foreign countries. Mr. Cross pointed out that we had the privilege of sending back patients who could not rightfully become a charge on the Canadian exchequer. Another speaker called attention to the fact that a tuberculosis sanitarium had been established in Ontario, and expressed doubt that the Ontario government would be willing to contribute to the support of a national consumptive park. He hardly thought the Federal Government were the proper people to appeal to. After some further discussion, in which Mr. Davis, a Crelk druggist, made a strong appeal for immediate action, the resolution was carried.

E. Bourgeois, The Watchmaker, is selling jewelery at the lowest prices, as he intends to do only a repairing business. Any kind of watches, and clocks and jewelery carefully repaired.

BOAT ENTIRE LOSS

CAPT. ROSS TO TAKE LEGAL PROCEEDINGS

(Saskatoon Phoenix)

The boilers have rolled out of the steamer City of Medicine Hat, which now lies such a complete wreck against one of the piers of the traffic bridge.

It is understood that the owner, Capt. Ross, will put a claim into the government for recoup him for his loss, as the river, it is held, has always been regarded as a navigable stream, in which case he will urge that the stream was blocked by low hanging wires and also by the bridge. His loss is put at about $30,000, which would be lessened if he is successful in saving the machinery. An attempt may be made later to get the boilers from the river.

Editor of The Times:

Enclosed find paragraph taken from an editorial in the "Medicine Hat News" of June 18th:

"Probably it is because the Aldermanic Board is so highly paid for its services that it becomes one of the duties to remain quiescent and peacefully calm under trying circumstances, and ingurgitate such hypercritical spastic and supercilious knocks as can be intruded into hebetate carpings which are extremely adumbrative in their relationship to the real conditions as they exist."

Would you be kind enough to parsphrase it? I have tried to find an expounder. I have despairingly failed. I have also tried to diagnose the case of its author. Confusion and defeat are my lot. Trust you have penetrated it.

I await your next issue.

PERPLEXED ONE.

Ed.—After vainly struggling with the above we have submitted the paragraph to Noah Webster, who wires back: "A crucifixion of English." The case of the author has been referred to Dr. Osler from whom a request came to wash for further symptoms and it has appeared to call in the services of a moral hygienist.

The elucidation of the adumbration of the above argillaceous diaphonancy is that the Aldermen are not requited with sufficient ascititious remuneration to endure the unctreumscriptible criticism and catechetical interrogations of the ochlocratically inclined with a chiticastical quiescence.

Any individual to whom the nudibranchiate, luciferous characteristics of our isographic metalepsy present any evidences of obscurantism must have a cranium of the brassica oleracea species.

Wouldn't that give you odontalgia?

Weddings

REED—HUTTON.

(Lethbridge News).

Another interesting wedding which took place this week was the marriage on Monday evening at Knox church of Job Reed one of Lethbridge's old timers and Miss Lilian Merial Hutton of Medicine Hat. Rev. A. M. Gordon performed the ceremony, which was a very quiet affair indeed. Besides Miss Blanche Hutton, sister of the bride who acted as bridesmaid and Mr. Geo. W. Reed brother of the groom, who acted as best man, there were present only three people, immediate relatives of the contracting parties. Mr. and Mrs. Reed left after the ceremony for Banff where they are spending the honey moon.

ENTERTAINED THE DELEGATES

The Board of Trade did well in securing the Y.M.C. quartette for an entertainment for the Board of Trade delegates. The boys put up a good performance and the delegates were delighted. All one side of the opera house was reserved for them and the house was well filled. Those who had not been the first exhibition wondered why they hadn't.

The dumb bell exercises by the boys and the wand drill by the ladies were greatly improved and scarcely a break was discernible. The seniors on the apparatus did their work well as usual, and Mr. Stewart with the clubs was accorded great applause.

The clowns—W. Frier as Signor A. La Gazazza and H. Nodding as Signor Spaghetti Au Gratin were hilariously funny. Both boys made fun without making fools of themselves and holding the attention from the other work. Both are fine athletes in addition to their laughter-provoking propensities, and their stunts on the bar, the table and the mat were features of the evening. The boxing match was a whirlwind and the blow that ended it, a cyclone.

The School Board

A special meeting of the school board was held last evening. Present, chairman W. J. Brotherton, trustees Milne, Kennedy, Colter, Niblock.

Tenders for the new temporary building were opened. These ranged from $2,796 to $1,872. Referred to building committee with power to act. The building is to be completed by August 15. A fine of $5 per day to be paid for every day beyond that date during which the work is not completed.

Moved by Mr. Brotherton, that the board advertise for tenders for building inspector to oversee the work. Applications to be in by 12 o'clock Saturday noon.

Committee appointed to look into the matter of salaries reported as follows:

To the Board of School Trustees:

Gentlemen,—Your committee appointed to enquire into the matter of Teachers salaries beg to report that they have considered the salaries of teachers throughout this province and find that the schedule is lower than the average. We recommend the following salaries be paid at the beginning of the next term.

Experienced public school teachers, (female):—1st year, $650; 2nd year, $700; 3rd year $750; 4th year $775; fifth year $800.

Those teachers who have been teaching in the city for four years or more will get the maximum under the new schedule right away.

C. W. Webb wrote that he was open for re-engagement at a salary of $1,200 a year. Mr. Milne said he had been discussing the matter and was satisfied that Mr. Webb was doing first-class work. He felt that rather than lose him the board would be well-advised to pay the higher figure. Mr. Webb was offered the position at salary requested.

Mr. Sanson said that under the new arrangement Mr. Ware would be assistant principal of Toronto St. school and would be glad if the council would take some definite action in the matter of salary. On Mr. Kennedy's motion, Mr. Ware was granted an increase of salary to $900 a year.

It was intimated that Miss McCannel did not desire re-engagement and that it would therefore be necessary to fill her place.

THE CITY FATHERS

The regular meeting of the council was held last night in the City Hall on the court of revision plan. There were present, the Mayor, Ald Baker McKay, Morrow, Spencer, Forster, Tweed, Huckvale.

Council went on to consideration of estimates.

Estimates for street grading were cut down to $1,000.

On questions of proportion of engineer's salary to be charged to the various departments. Ald. Baker said that the council passed last year a motion to the effect that the engineer take sole charge of gas and water. He understood now that the engineer was relieved of all authority at the pump-house and Mr. Jackson placed in charge. There was certainly something wrong and we were paying for it. This brought up the question of the water supply again. Ald. Baker explained that we could never hope to be free from trouble so long as the pumps were pumping direct into the mains. At present the same pipe served as inlet and outlet to the standpipe. This resulted in a continual churning in the water and was responsible for the trouble with air in the pipes. There should be two distinct pipes—an inlet and an outlet, so that the pumps would be working at a continuous pressure. Two connections should be provided, one for the town and one for the hill.

Item for street cleaning was reduced from $1,500 to $1,000.

A special meeting will be called to complete consideration of the estimates. The assessment roll has to be completed by July 2.

Andrew P. B. Richmond, driver on the chemical wagon, sent in his resignation. Accepted and the clerk authorized to advertise for a man to fill the vacancy.

Ald. Tweed brought up the matter of the opera house, and asked that the chief of police be authorized not to molest the lesses for the present. The owners had suggested mailing the seats together but not securing the... to the floor as the building was not a threatre proper, but was used for dances and other purposes. The Mayor thought the by-law was not worth anything unless the council were prepared to abide by it. Referred to fire, water and light committee to see that as far as possible the by-law was complied with. It was pointed out that if a rigid application of the by-laws were carried out some of the churches and church basements would be found wanting.

CALGARY WINS

IN THE FIRST HOME GAME

Before a fair-sized crowd, the Calgary lacrosse team took the local team in to the tune of 5—1. While the Calgary boys earned every goal, the general position of the ball was not in the proportion of the goals. In fact the Medicine Hat team had the ball in Calgary territory three fifths of the game, but their inability to shoot, combined with the great game put up by King the Calgary point and the entire defence, prevented the locals from finding the net more than once.

The local team, could, with practice, show their heels to the Calgary boys, but the latter have much better team play, and were better lasters. Their passing in front of goal was excellent, but apart from this the game was rather slow.

For the locals Vic Ready, Hatcher and Ritchie were the stars.

One thing that made more accurate work for the Calgary team was the brightness of their sweaters, and the ease with which the players could pick each other out.

The games were scored thus:

1st quarter.—Calgary 2; 2nd quarter, Calgary, 1; 3rd quarter, Calgary 2; 4th quarter, Medicine Hat (J. Halward) 1.

THE TIMES BASEBALL PRIZES.

To encourage good ball The Times offers any $2.00 shirt in the city to each of the following:

1. The player with the best batting average.
2. The player with the most extra bases to his credit.
3. The infield player with the best fielding average.
4. The outfielder with the best fielding average.

To allow the players time for striking their gate, scoring will count only from June 8th.

Players must play in three out of the five games played by their team.

The correct scoring, which appears in The Times, to be taken as final.

CITY VS. C. P. R.

The second game between the City and the C.P.R. was perhaps, the best game to look at, yet played. While the licking administered the City's was a bad one the game was full of bright clever plays and was interesting all the way. The City had signed a lot of new players, but there was terrible lack of practice evident and the batting was a horrible exhibition. While Andrews pitched good ball and struck out 18 men, allowing only 32 men to face him, he had a bunch of batters facing him that struck at balls a yard off the plate. A couple of the batters struck out every time up and every one of them struck out at least once. Seven men in succession fanned. The City base-running was dopy in parts.

The Barefoot brothers pitched, and while wild allowed only 7 hits, and struck out ten men, which to the heavy hitting C.P.R.'s is rather good. Lewis stopped a number of very hard ones on third and played a consistently good game in the field. Wright behind the bat gave the best exhibition of catching seen this year. His throws to second were major league style, and had Atkinson been able to hold himvery few steals would have been recorded. Although he fell down at the bat, he is sure of a position for his fielding ability.

Atkinson and Gallop were off color and Scott's cigarette smoking while coaching would explain any lack of condition he might show.

Deane for the C.P.R. won one of The Times $2.00 shirts, and added another home run before he was finished. The first one was clean; the second was a fieldable hit. Sinclair again shone at the bat with a couple of three baggers. The wholeteam played gilt edge ball and have lots of ginger, although their base running was of the rash, lucky kind.

Only two men were put out by the City in the 7th innings, for occult reasons.

The correct score:—

CITY VS. BACHELORS.

Another horrible exhibition of punk ball. For five innings the City vs. Bachelors game was good ball. In that time runs were scored in three halves only. In the 6th the Bachelors went up and when the seventh opened the score was 9 to 8 for the Bachelors. The seventh put the Bachelors to the fore 12 to 8. Then with Tom Barefoot pitching the City took a baloon, and they're up there yet. The Bachelors went to bat scored 11 runs with only one man out, and the City threw up the sponge. G. Barefoot had held the Bachelors down well save in the 1st innings, but his arm was out. Lewis was the best man on the City team. Navin batted well and should stay in the game.

SUMMARY

Home run—Finch; 3-base hits, W. Johnston; 2-base hits, Landis (2), Finch, Navin; stolen bases, by Bachelors 6; by City 3; bases on balls, off T. Barefoot 4; off Johnston 1; hit by ball, Taylor.

There is more talk of a game of baseball outside of the league teams. The "Has-Beens" will likely challenge the C. P. R. or any of the league teams, provided they can borrow a battery. Last year there were two games with scores of 2—1 and 1—0. This year they vary from 18—1 to 24 to 18.

A mixed bunch of Bachelors played a conglomeration of Fire Brigade boys an exhibition game on Thursday night for the benefit of the Board of Trade visitors. And it was an exhibition all right, all right. The score was steen to eleventy-three, in favor of no one. For obvious reasons the names of the players are kept out of print.

There appears to be much doubt as to the position of affairs when the Fire Brigade boys changed their batting order the other night. The rule reads: A batsman is out if he fail to take his position at the bat in the order in which his name appears on the batting list, unless the error be discovered and the proper batsman replace him before a time "at bat" is recorded. In the latter case the balls and strikes called must be counted in the time "at bat" of the proper batsman, Provided, this rule shall not be enforced unless the out be declared before the ball be delivered to the succeeding batsman."

The opinion has been expressed that the wrong batter (Taylor) would only have been out had the Bachelors complained while he was at bat. The rule, however, distinctly shows this to be wrong. Had the complaint been made then, the Fire Brigade could have replaced Yaylor by the proper batsman, his balls and strikes being counted against the latter. The complaint would have had to have been made between the finish of Taylor's time "at bat" and the first ball to the next (proper) batsman. However, in this case, as all the batsmen were out of order, the complaint could have been made any time, the Fire Brigade being able to save themselves only by having Johnston, the proper batsman, face the pitcher before the complaint was lodged.

THE HAT 13—MAPLE CREEK 3.

The Medicine Hat C.P.R. baseball team, accompanied by about twenty-five supporters, came down Monday morning and in the afternoon played the local nine. The above score is a fairly good indication of the playing of the two teams.

The Medicine Hat team also played their positions well. Some baseball teams are always "chewing the rag" not so with the C.P.R. team of Medicine Hat. When there is any talking to be done, the captain is the man that does it, not the whole team.

Semi-Arid Farming.

Professor Campbell Tells About It.

Every available seat in the council chamber was occupied and many had only standing room on the afternoon of the 15th, when Prof. Campbell delivered his lecture on scientific farming. From all over the district farmers had gathered to hear the famous agriculturist and the city-dwellers were in attendance in large numbers.

The system he advocated, said Professor Camubell was somewhat incorrectly termed "dry farming." Properly it was scientific soil culture, of almost universal application but it was for the lands in the semi-arid belt—vital. In sections of the country where the rainfall averaged only 10, 12 and 14 inches, in a year it was found advisable to grow crops every other year. If 160 acres were being farmed, 80 acres should be put under crop each year. Under these conditions, scientific principles being closely followed, less than 40½ bushels to the acre had never been cropped, and in Eastern Canada an average of 68½ bushels was [illegible] —this on land, which, under ordinary conditions, would yield from 5 to 14 bushel. The system had been proved by practical experience. A stock company had been organized, in which the railways were interested.

There were three important practices to be rigidly adhered to in order to insure success.

(a) Never plow when the soil is wet or dry, but only when moist.

(b) Maintain a loose surface always.

(c) The under-portion of the plowed land must be made solid.

It was a great mistake to allow weeds to grow on the fallow land. They absorbed from the soil all that moisture which in a dry climate it was necessary to conserve. To illustrate' A man in Nebraska, who had plowed a portion of his land under in the fall, had been called away for five weeks to attend the funeral of his father in another part of the country. When he returned the remainder of his land had grownweeds just as thick as they could stand. He plowed these under and followed with the sub-surface packer. The same night a drizzling rain came and in the morning he harrowed and sowed. When the crop was reaped the following year the land first plowed yielded 90 bushels to the acre; the rest yielded only 20. Here was the great big lesson. When the man started to plow the soil was in an ideal condition. Moist. When he plowed the second time, turning under the weeds, the ground was dry, the weeds had absorbed all the moisture and the soil broke into lumps, which, remained lumps; although small, when the work of the sub-surface packer had been completed. In consequence the soil carried too much air for the amount of water it contained.

The ideal condition was when a sharp division was marked where air and water met. In the case of post in the ground, there was no decomposition of the portion above the ground, or of the portion beneath the ground. Decomposition took place where air and water met. In the same way when the moist earth was well packed and a loose mulch formed on the top, decomposition took place in the sun's rays, and twenty per cent of nitrates were formed. And the more nitrate, the more humus.

Whenever a gentle rain came plow. A surface crust should never be allowed to form; this prevented the air from permeating to the moisture below and thus no humus was formed.

"Don't let the weeds grow," said the professor. "Keep up the cultivationthroughout the summer. Always have a loose blanket on the surface. Plow the latter part of June or early in July and follow with the sub-surface packer. If you have not a packer, follow with the disc-harrow. Harrow with the teeth set on the slant. The point is to get the land settled. It means dollars. When the soil is pulverized and contains all the water it can carry, it is just right for decomposition."

In climates such as he judged ours to be, the lecturer said, a month of dry weather was very likely to follow a month of rain, with disastrous results unless moisture was conserved. The water was not held in spaces, but in little tiny ducts round a pore, the smaller the pore the better.

In a fine and firm soil with water stored below, the ability of the plants to develop a complete root system was greatly increased, resulting in enormous crops. In Western Nebraska in 1904, when the crop almost entirely failed, 52 bushels to the acre were produced on scientifically cultivated land. In a year when the wheat crop on the Colorado border was an entire failure, 42½ bushels were reaped.

A common, every day example of the effect of soil packing was provided by the horse and cattle tracks. The wheat always stood higher and stooled out more thickly in these tracks than in any part of the field.

A Few Remarkable Results.

In Nebraska and Kansas, in 1901, when, beginning early in the spring, there were 100 consecutive days on which the temperature reached 103 degrees and above, and the rainfall throughout was practically nil, the professor, early in the spring advised one of the farmers to double disc. The man set out to follow his instructions but after he had been joshed and jollied by his neighbors, who considered the whole scheme a huge joke, he quit, not having much faith in the system and curious to see whether he could tell the difference between the disced and the undisced land. After the hot spell was over, when all the land around was parched, the piece treated rolled up as nice and moist as could be. Therefore the man treated his whole 100 acres in the same way. He raised 20 bushels to the acre, when no other farmer in the states mentioned cropped more than five.

Other cases were cited in which, though some features of the Campbell system were adopted, some farmers cultivated before the rain, some after. The man who cultivated after the rain, when the earth was moist, got double the crops obtained by those who cultivated before the rain.

Speaking of certain "hot-wind" districts in the states, Professor Campbell said, "It took a long time to induce the farmers to take up the system, but they are not scared of hot winds now." In one instance, 65 bushels of good sound corn to the acre was raised, and the general manager of the railroad issued 300 passes for men all over the state to see what great things were being done in these last days.

An interesting experiment had been performed by Prof. ing, showing the loss of moisture through capillary action in soil. By means of suitable apparatus measurements had been made of the quantities lost with the water at various depths below the soil surface. Over an area of 1 square foot, in ten days of normal summer weather, with the water level one foot below the surface of the soil, 20 quarts of water were lost. The experiment was repeated with the water at 2, 3 and 4 feet below the soil surface, and at the latter depth, 10 quarts were lost in 10 days.

From this it could easily be seen why in a hot, dry climate, it was so essential to pack the soil when moist, and for a loose blanket on the surface. "Take a piece when harvesting is through, double disc, don't cross, and you form a mulch that prevents evaporation." When the heavy rains came (here was another advantage of getting all the land under proper cultivation whenever the soil was moist), if there were a mulch of from 2½ inches to 3 inches, when the rain sank through theloose mulch and came in contact with the moist soil below, it went right down. Moist earth would always take up falling rain rapidly. Dry earth was less permeable. "Don't plow in the fall if the soil is dry."

At this point one of the audience asked leave to put a question. "What would you recommend in a season like the present one? We had norain here till the 15th or 20th of May "I should disc anyway."

The Professor here gave a very interesting account of the way in whic which he was first led to take up the study of scientific soil culture and was eventually convinced of the absolute necessity of a scientific system. In the summer of 1882, when he was farming in South Dakota, he took in the largest crop he had ever known up to that time. The season was ideal and the conditions perfect. 12,000 bushels were cropped from 300 acres. That year he had plowed in the spring, and after harvesting was over he plowed again. The following year's crop was no good, and he came to the conclusion that spring plowing was the only thing. Next year, with spring plowing the crop was again poor. He immediately set himself to the study of the conditions which could bring about these apparently contradictory results. It took years for him to find out. The explanation was this, in 1882 there had been no rain after threshing. Plowing resulted in the dry earth being broken up into lumps, allowing too much air to get in and the moisture, in the sun's rays being rapidly absorbed. In 1883 rain was plentiful in the fall and the winter was open. The ground had become dry when he started in on spring plowing. Hence the results mentioned.

A question was asked as to the best practice for the "tenderfoot," the man who found himself on the unbroken prairie with no experience. Professor Campbell advised breaking 3 inches deep. In the early days two inches was considered adequate, but the deeper cut was now considered the best practice. The newcomer who might have landed on the soil, say at this time or a little earlier, he would advise to plow in July; to cultivate, harrow and disc harrow. The ordinary harrow would not loosen up heavy soil.

"Don't let any man think for a moment that this system costs too much," said the lecturer. Suppose we get from 40½ bushels to 68½ and do that every other year. If we summer-till one year and sow the other, we can be sure, barring hail and rain storms, of raising bumper crops."

An interesting account of the methods of tree planting which would give the best results, was given by Professor Campbell in the course of his later remarks. The tree, he said, was an easy proposition—if only a rational system were adopted. Weeds should never be allowed to grow around the roots. It was true some farmers imagined that weeds were an advantage, but this was pure nonsense.

A tree should never be set without summer tilling first having been carried out, forming the valuable nitrates and bacteria. When the planting was being done, a pinnacle of earth should be formed at the bottom of the hole; on this the tree should be set, and the hole then filled in with earth till it slanted up from the level of the ground to the trunk of a tramping around with the foot to within 4 inches of the tree, and the pouring on of a couple of quarts of water (not more) completed the job. The soil surface should be thenceforward be kept constantly loose. If a crust were formed, shutting out the air, the result would be growth, practically nil.

A farmer in the audience differed from the lecturer as to the correct amount of seed to sow per acre. Professor Campbell had advised one-half bushel. The local man said his experience had been that one and one-half bushels was nearer the mark; if the latter quantity were sown he could harrow as much as he wanted and get twice the crop. The Professor-s experience had been that one-half bushel was the right quantity, but he admitted that on very sandy soil a greater quantity might be better.

A question was put as to growing flax on breaking. Prof. Campbell: "You evidently come from North Dakota" (laughter). Though growing of flax might be permissible in the case of the newcomer, who wished to turn over a few dollars the first year, yet this was not the best practice, and should be avoided whenever possible.

Another remarkable example of the results obtained under the Campbell system was krovided by Texas. In the Panhandle of Texas moisture conditions were similar to those of Southern Alberta, with, perhaps, a little more rain. Up to last July, this country was 6 inches short of the normal rainfall. And yet, on scientifically cultivated land, they would obtain 40 bushels to the acre.

Ald. Huckvale asked whether trouble from the blowing off of the dust blanket was not likely to be met with. Professor Campbell answered in the negative. The moisture of the packed soil below would hold the blanket. In Kansas, himself and others, who were trying to demonstrate to the farmers the advantages of the system, caused considerable amusement. Farmers in a certain district there had farmed 14 years and only had one crop. The plots taken up by the demonstrators sloped due south. And here was occasion for another sneer at the expense

After Webster

It will now and ... And now it's clear.

The citizens of Medicine Hat owe a deep debt of gratitude to the News for the following explanation of the present condition of the water service as explained ... last issue:

"Probably it is because the Aldermanic Board is so highly paid for its services that it becomes one of the duties to remain quiescent and peacefully calm under trying circumstances and endeavor to gitate [illegible] and superintelligible [illegible] intruded into bebetate carpings which are extremely adumbrative in their relation to existing conditions as they exist."

Anyone who would require further explanation is most inconsiderate.

The Water System.

Although the water supply has improved since last issue, the point of a council not considering it necessary to make explanations or immediate improvements is just as much a question as ever; especially when the citizens still know not at what hour their water service may ... and how long that ... three months.

The News, in its last issue, ... it resorted to the cowing intimation that whoever criticised the supply showed lack of information. This information was not offered, but we would have been glad with ... word, to sit still and take any old muddle without complaint. If anyone can explain the News, in its own bright way, says, he is "liable to commit the error of getting the cart before the horse and either having to turn around and back up before he gets upon the right track" which is a beautiful but tangled sort of metaphor.

The News speaks vaguely of extremes of nature—dry weather and a flood. It is hard to see what dry weather has to do with it, and the service was just as rotten before the flood as since. Worn-out machinery, too, is mentioned. How long should machinery last, anyway? Surely if it is worn out in the few years we have had waterworks, there is fault somewhere. It is said the council, two years ago was informed of the condition of the machinery. And how is it the machinery gave out so suddenly that one day we had water on the hill, and then for a month scarcely a drop. Someone must have gone at that engine with a sledge-hammer.

As a matter of fact, the ratepayers should take no excuse, as there is nothing that would justify a waterless section for weeks at a time. If you had a manager for your business and he was making a muddle of it, would you consider any excuse a justification. He is to see that these excuses do not exist; when they do, you fire him.

We suppose that would dismiss the subject if a fire occurred and a man had to see his house burn down for lack of water.

We suppose that would be sufficient to relieve the water commissioners and the Council of responsibility if a typhoid fever epidemic broke out and several deaths occurred. Fire and fevers will be laid at the door of a Council that will not shoulder the responsibility of laying the blame for one of the most serious conditof the scientific faddists. "Wait till out south winds come along and then see where Campbell's dust mulch goes to," was the remark made by the old-timers. The winds blew and beat upon that dust blanket, but it moved not. The dust was never raised. That was eight years ago and no talk was heard today of an antagonism between the south wind and Campbell's blankets.

The mulch was better of minute lumps, than of fine dust.

The Hon. W. T. Finlay rose at this juncture to ask whether any member of the audience who had tried the Campbell system was present, who could get up and say he had obtained good results. Two men, T. L. Corbett and A. McGillwray responded. Both farmers live within five miles of the city, south. Mr. Corbett has thirty acres in winter wheat and is this summer preparing another 160 acres. Mr. McGillwray raised 25 bushels to the acre last year on seven acres of the Campbell cultivated land. On the rest of his land he obtained only ten bushels. This year he has sixty-five acres under the system.

Going on to show what steps are being taken to educate the farmers in scientific farming, Professor Campbell said a monthly magazine was to be issued, beginning July 1, and in November a correspondence course would be instituted.

Discussing general principles, he said, when he began on this experimental and educational work fifteen years ago, people would say, "Oh, Pshaw! get on with your farming; there's nothing in it." Today the farmer had begun to find out that he could make money as well as the next man.

Upon the farmer depended the railway. every other professional or business man. Never had a higher price been obtained for farm productsthan at the present. Effectually had the "increasing yoield fallacy" been exploded—the theory that as the acreage in grain increased, a reduction in price, with harder work and smaller profits to the farmer, would be brought about. Now it was realized that when the yield was doubled it was necessary to have twice as many cars, almost twice as many men, working in the wheat country. And all had to have something to eat. In all branches of farming industry held good—dairying, in stock raising in wheat growing. But the increase had only just begun, and beforemany years the yield would be two or three times as large.

When Professor Campbell had concluded his talk, the Hon. W. T. Finlay rose to speak on the demonstration farm to be established in the district. A great quantity of literature, he said, had been circulated about the Campbell system. The Agricultural Society had talked the matter over with the government and made negotiations about starting a farm. A quarter section of land had been promised to the Society, but at this late date in the season they had not even picked out the land they wanted. The government had been asked for $700 and had granted $1,000. It was almost time something should be done in the matter.

Professor Campbell commenced the model farm idea. The soil, he said, seemed to get more fertile each year when put under scientific cultivation.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

The Winnipeg Telegram contains the following despatch from Toronto

Toronto, Ont., June 17.—O'Brien, of Medicine Hat, was arrested tonight on complaint of acting-Chief McKenzie, of Manitoba police. He was caarged with the theft of $980 in Winnipeg. He says he found it on the street, and has only $289 left. He has been in Vancouver and then came east.

One month ago, O'Brien, and an accomplice named Benyon stole $1,200 from A. Campbell, a Medicine Hat farmer. Benyon was caught and confessed to his share in the crime. The major portion of the blame, however, he laid on O'Brien, who was at that time believed by the police to be on the farther side of the boundary line. Benyon was sentensed to six months in the penitentiary, and the search for O'Brien was taken up with vigor. He will be brought here to stand trial.

Upon investigation it appears that "Neepawa" should take the place of "Medicine Hat.

TREES FREE TO FARMERS

Eleven Million Distributed by the Department of the Interior.

The Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior has issued a bulletin giving information as to the procedure to be followed to obtain trees under the co-operative scheme under which the Government of the Dominion undertakes to furnish to the farmers of the prairie provinces trees free of cost for planting shelter belts and wood lots.

The Department has up to the present distributed over eleven million trees under this scheme and has reached an average distribution of 2,000,000 trees per annum. That this work is appreciated is shown by the large number of applicants received by the Department from the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Anyone who has seen an unsheltered farm in the open, and the contrast between it and the beautiful, homelike appearance of a home sheltered by trees, must appreciate the value of the work which is being done by the Department. The illustrations, with which the bulletin is well supplied, show in a graphic and interesting way the results of the planting of trees on farms in the Western provinces, and any person who seesthem will be convinced that great good is being accomplished by this enterprise on the part of the Government.

The distributing station for this work is at Indian Head, and several illustrations show the development of the station from the bareness of the first year to a beautiful and attractive farm, a striking example of what can be done by careful and judicious planting of trees.

The thorough system of administration and inspection under which this scheme has been made a success and the procedure to obtain trees are set out in the bulletin, copies of which can be obtained by applying to the Superintendent of Forestry at Ottawa.

The repertoire of new ideas and novelties advanced by Campbell Brothers Big Consolidated Shows above the old stereotype circus is an innovation. The new attractions secured are the most unique and sensational, absolute from all others, and are receiving enthusiastic praise from press and public. Elaborate costumes prevail in all departments and each performance is a triumph, justifying the reports received in advance. They will appear here on July 2nd. A grand street parade will be given at 10 a.m. The two big shows will occur at 2 and 8 p. m. under the new water-proof tents, rain or shine.

PIMPLES AND BOILS.

Healed by Zam-Buk.

Mr. Joseph Arsnault resides at Cascumpec, P.E.I., and says:—"About five months ago sores broke out on my body. They came in the form of small pimples which discharged. These sores would grow until they got as large as a nickel. I used Carbolic Salves without effect. I saw Zam-Buk advertised in the papers and secured some, and daily applications of this healing balm for one week effected a permanent cure. Since then I have recommended Zam-Buk to my brother for boils on his knee, and also used it again myself for a poisoned finger, in both cases with marvellous results. I cannot recommend Zam-Buk too highly.

Zam-Buk, the great skin healer, can be obtained at any drug or general store for 50 cents a box, or postpaid from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

Resolution of Calgary Board of Trade that provincial governments be urged to pass legislation to compell all municipalities to reimburse city hospitals for treatment given patients in their district in all cases where patients do not themselves make payment, was introduced by Mr. McQueen, who said that 75 per cent of the outside patients in the Calgary general hospital, had no money to pay the charges. The discussion was continued by a number of delegates, including A. L. Johnson of Winnipeg, who gave the convention the benefit of his experience in dealing with the problem of patients from the country. Messrs. Bradshaw of Prince Albert, Hopkins of Moose Baw, and Fraser of Edmonton, and Cook of Prince Alberta, and others spoke further on the resolution, all agreeing with the principle involved. On Mr. Fraser's suggestion the matter was left over till an amendment could be prepared to overcome certain difficulties. Mr. Johnston of Winnipeg said he would depricate any legislation whichwould have the tendency to stifle the generosity of the public.

A resolution on the question of transference of Indian reserves to white settlers gave rise to a considerable difference of opinion, the main objection being to the wording of the last clause, in which the Dominion Government were asked to "exert strong influence with the Indians in securing their consent to the disposal to actual settlers of all such surplus territory as is not required or occupied by the Indians." Mr. Skinner, who moved the resolution, showed that the Indians now possessed 565,120 acres of land more than they were entitled to, representing 548 acres per family. Valued at $8 per acre this land would realize over five million dollars, sufficient, if invested in securities to provide an income of $241.67 per annum per Indian family. The land so thrown open for settlement would provide room for 12,305 white people. Mr. Shore of Edmonton thought it should be with very great care that business men should attempt to influence their governments to abrogate treaties with the Indians. Unless absolutely fair treatment could be secured to the latter, he thought no action should be taken. Mr. Cook of Strathcona thought the resolution worded too strongly. This was the Indians' country, and we had, by means which, were in some respects fair, dispossessed them. We condemned our neighbors to the south because we considered their treatment of the ancient inhabitants to have been abominable. Let us beware, then, of following in their footsteps. A Cardston delegatespoke of the Blood Indian Reserve, which included some of the best soil in the country, being only 95 feet from the town. Mr. McKellar of Moose Jaw surmised that the Indians were in the country before these people. He did not believe that Great Britain, that Canada would stand for any taking away of treaty rights. Mr. Bradshaw of Prince Albert thought some of the previous speakers were displaying a lack of confidence in the government. He had not the slightest doubt that if the government were asked to "use their influence" to bring about a transfer they would make such arrangements as would be for the benefit of the Indians themselves. "Of course," he added, "we can never just tell what a government influence may mean." (Laughter). Eventually the portion of the resolution which was considered too strongly worded, was amended to read "to treat with the Indians to secure their consent."

Resolution in regard to appointment of executive committee wasleft over till the time came for discussion of the dividing of the association into two bodies, one for each province.

Edmonton resolution asking for the passage of an effectual and comprehensive insolvency law and amendment to the Assignments Act to provide for the keeping by tenders of accurate and full records of all transactions, in particular of sales of property, further asking for the appointment of a judicial officer to hold enquiry in cases where the assignee shall find it impossible to prepare an adequate statement of the affairs of the insolvent was introduced by Mrs. Shore. There had, he said, been a great many instances of dishonest trading, and the present exemption ordinance was not arranged in a proper manner. A trader might hold a farm and also a city business and transfer values from his city business to his farm, leaving his creditors in the hole. Mr. Belcher of Winnipeg delivered himself on the subject, criticising certain details of the resolution. He pointed out, also, the direct interest which every business man's practices had in retaining honesty in commercial life, showing the manner in which credit is injured by a few men in a community whose practices are dishonest.

The next resolution, also by the Edmonton board, was introduced by Mr. Short. This demanded that contracts by the railroads in reference to the classification of goods should be submitted to the wholesalers before becoming effective, and also that a special board of arbitration similar to the Railway Commission should be appointed to determine all claims for damages against the road for breakage, loss in transit, shortage, overcharge, etc. Mr. Short claimed that the wholesalers were today frequently up against improper losses. Every common carrier was responsible for the proper care of the goods under his charge, but by the new regulations, the companies might smash a man's freight, and he had no recourse when freight was lost. No contract, no classification should be made which took away a common carrier's responsibility in this regard. Mr. Lanigan and Mr. Geo. Shaw replied to the allegation made against the railroads. Mr. Shaw pointed out that in all cases merchants had recourse under the common law where they thought they had a grievance. He had yet to learn of a single instance of a legitimate claim being turned down by either carrier. He did not think it would be wise or becoming for the convention to pass such a resolution as had been introduced, and would therefore ask the mover to withdraw. The question of making a classification, said Mr. Lanigan, was somewhat intricate. The classification of Canadian freight had been adopted to the especial needs of the country and had gone through many years of revision before assuming its present form. The companies, he contended, could not afford to deal unfairly with their patrons. He felt that the present resolution was not the result of the collective judgment of Edmonton business men. Mr. Short strongly took exception to the last remark, saying that he did not come to the convention to air his personal views. The resolution had been carefully prepared and had behind it the business community, especially the wholesale section. It was up to the carriers to provide a sufficient tariff in the case of fragile goods to cover all risks. He would leave the resolution to the Convention. Mr. Johnson said this matter had been considered to a considerable extent by the Winnipeg Board of Trade. He believed it was brought forward in actual good faith by the Edmonton delegates, but the matter was under consideration by the Railway Commission. The Commission had asked for a recommendation re bill of lading and the Board had in reply asked for a clean bill. Mr. Lanigan, in explanation, said he had no intention of casting aspersions on the good faith of Mr. Short's. Mr. Cousins thought the resolution would be all right if the second clause were eliminated. Speaking as a large shipper, Mr. Hutchings stated his belief that the resolution was quite unnecessary. After some farther discussion the vote was taken, the resolution being lost.

The discussion of the resolutions was continued on Friday morning, the first to be brought up being the amended form of the Calgary resolution relative to payment by municipalities for such outside patients in city hospitals, as do not themselves pay.

The clause as amended reads:

This convention of Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada respectfully urges the Governments of Alberta and Saskatchewan to pass such legislation at this next session as will lead to fully re-imbursing public hospitals for treatment given patients in all cases where patients have not made payment. This was moved by Mr. McQueen, seconded by Mr. McKellar.

C. W. Cross of Calgary then introduced the resolution asking for a government guarantee of railroad bonds, and the rest of the mornings session was taken up by a discussion of this important proposal. Mr. Cross in a long and illuminative speech presented the arguments in favor of immediate government action to secure railroad competition. Manitoba was represented as an example of the beneficial effects which a government guarantee had brought about. In the West today, the speaker said, we were in need of a great commercial forward movement. The remarkable development of the period of prosperity which culminated in 1906, had caused the business interests to invest in undertakings which in view of the reaction of 1907, had proved a little ahead of the times. In order to obtain profit on those investments, increased transportation was absolutely necessary. We were told that the railways would have to come some time. Personally the speaker did not wish to wait until his old age for this development. The railways and commercial development were needed now. So far as the C.P.R. were concerned (and he did not bear any animosity against that railway), they werevery slow in developing their system in the Calgary district. The G. T. P. were not accomplishing their work in anything like the time they should. It would be, he believed, years before they entered Calgary. As for the Dominion government doing anything to hasten things, he felt sure they would turn any proposal down which looked to the development of branch lines, until the new transcontinental had been completed. The duty then lay with the provincial governments. From the older and richer countries we wanted money, and in order to attract capital from Europe, from the States and Eastern Canada, we must convince them that a sure return on their money would be forthcoming. Objection was taken by some Westerners to following in Manitoba steps because of the troubles of that province had had in the matter of rates. The circumstances were altogether different. In those days there was no railway commission, today we had a body with absolute control of maximum freight rates. We had, moreover, competing roads, which was not the case at the time of Manitoba's agreement.

Taking a map, Mr. Cross went over various portions of the province where railways were needed, covering, as one of the delegates afterwards remarked, nearly every district represented at the Convention. The first line projected was from Butte, Montana, northwards through the coal regions to Calgary, about 75 miles. The second, south of Macleod to the International Boundary line, through a country of infinite agricultural possibilities, about fifty to sixty miles. Coming to Medicine Hat, there was a good piece of land between the Bow and the Belly Rivers, the western portion of which was becoming well settled and here railway accommodation was needed.

The next was from Medicine Hat to Edmonton. This line, said Mr. Cross might in time become one of the most important on the continent eventually connecting New Orleans with the Arctic Sea. Radiatingfrom Edmonton to Athabasca Landing was a fertile empire 4,000 miles square which required railroad development. A line from Calgary to Regina through new country was also highly desirable.

The introducer of the resolution was cut short by the president, as his description speech was becoming too lengthy. In consequence he had to leave out further discussuin of these railways of the future.

Mr. Sclanders of Saskatoon, in seconding the resolution, said that he could endorse the same in toto. The C.P.R. and the C.N.R. had both treated his city most generously.

Mr. Cook of Prince Albert thought the resolution should never have been introduced. It was a question of practical politics, and would meet with the disapproval of the majority of the electors. We needed schools, hospitals, asylums, penitentiaries, roads and other improvements and could not afford to render further financial aid to the railroads. The case of Manitoba was not parallel to ours. In Manitoba there was a monopoly while we had three competing roads. There the monopoly clause was grinding down the settlers and whatever they paid to obtain a competing line, we were not justified in following in their footsteps. To be profitable on great roads must have feeders and in their own interests construction would not long be delayed. Coming down from Prince Albert to the Convention, the speaker had not passed ten miles of country unfit for settlement and the crops were the finest he had ever seen. The Calgary scheme he considered a pretty good proposition for the railroad corporations!

"If we are going to furnish the security," he said, "we might as well retain the assets." To which a delegate retorted, "Inter-colonial."

The speaker was not afraid of the example of the Inter-Colonial. "Though it might not have shown much by way of dividends," he said, "it has been of the greatest advantage to Canada, as it has controlled the rates of the East."

Mr. Laird of Regina objected to the proposal on two grounds, the first was a question of principle, the second of economics. For the first, was an indiscriminate recommendation and went altogether too far. For the second, the mileage of the

"If you have never worn them, why did you put them out to be cleaned?"

"They were tan boots, and had never been varnished. That was why I put them out."

"Then I understand that on your arrival in London yesterday you went out at once and bought a pair of boots?"

"I did a good deal of shopping, Dr. Mortimer here went round with me. You see, if I am to be squire down there I must dress the part, and it has flurried me rather."

I was aware of a bushy black beard and a pair of piercing eyes turned upon us.

"I'll join you in a walk, with pleasure," said his companion.

"Then we meet again at two o'clock. Au revoir, and good morning!"

We heard the steps of our visitors descend the stair and the bang of the front door. In an instant Holmes had changed from the languid dreamer to the man of action.

"Your hat and boots, Watson, quick! Not a moment to lose!" He rushed into his room in his dressing-gown and was back again in a few seconds in a frock-coat. We hurried together down the stairs and into the street. Dr. Mortimer and Baskerville were still visible about two hundred yards ahead of us in the direction of Oxford Street.

"Shall I run on and stop them?"

"Not for the world my dear Watson. I am perfectly satisfied with your company if you will tolerate mine. Our friends are wise, for it is certainly a very fine morning for a walk."

He quickened his pace until we had decreased the distance which divided us by about half. Then still keeping a hundred yards behind, we followed into Oxford Street and so down Regent Street. Once our friends stopped and stared into a shop window, upon which Holmes did the same. An instant afterwards he gave a little cry of satisfaction, and following the direction of his eager eyes, I saw that a hansom cab with a man inside which had halted on the other side of the street was now walking slowly onwards again.

"There's our man, Watson! Come along! We'll have a good look at him, if we can do no more."

At that instant I was aware of a bushy black beard and a pair of piercing eyes turned upon us through the side window of the cab. Instantly the trap-door at the top flew up, something was screamed to the driver, and the cab flew madly off down Regent street. Holmes looked eagerly round for another, but no empty one was in sight. Then he dashed in wild pursuit amid the stream of the traffic, but the start was too great, and already the cab was out of sight.

"There now!" said Holmes, bitterly, as he emerged panting and white with vexation from the tide of vehicles. "Was ever such bad luck and such bad management, too? Watson, Watson, if you are an honest man you will record this also and set it against my successes!"

"Who was the man?"

"I have not an idea."

"A spy?"

"Well, it was evident from what we have heard that Baskerville has been very closely shadowed by someone since he has been in town. How else could it be known so quickly that it was the Northumberland Hotel which he had chosen? If they had followed him the first day I argued that they would follow him also the second. You may have observed that I twice strolled over to the window while Dr. Mortimer was reading his legend."

"Yes, I remember."

"I was looking out for loiterers in the street, but I saw none. We are dealing with a clever man, Watson. This matter cuts very deep, and though I have not finally made up my mind whether it is a benevolent or a malevolent agency which is in touch with us, I am conscious always of power and design. When our friends left I at once followed them in the hopes of marking down their invisible attendant. So wily was he that he had not trusted himself upon foot, but he had availed himself of a cab, so that he could loiter behind or dash past them and so escape their notice. His method had the additional advantage that if they were to take a cab he was all ready to follow them. It has, however, one obvious disadvantage."

"It puts him in the power of the cabman."

"Exactly."

"What a pity we did not get the number!"

"My dear Watson, clumsy as I have been, you surely do not seriously imagine that I neglected to get the number? 2704 is our man. But that is no use to us for the moment."

"I fail to see how you could have done more."

"On observing the cab I should have instantly turned and walked in the other direction. I should then at my leisure have hired a second cab and followed the first at a respectful distance, or, better still, have driven to the Northumberland Hotel and waited there. When our unknown had followed Baskerville home we should have had the opportunity of playing his own game upon himself, and seeing where he made for. As it is, by an indiscreet eagerness, which was taken advantage of with extraordinary quickness and energy by our opponent we have betrayed ourselves and lost our man."

We had been sauntering slowly down Regent Street during this conversation, and Dr. Mortimer, with his companion, had long vanished in front of us.

"There is no object in our following them," said Holmes. "The shadow has departed and will not return. We must see what further cards we have in our hands, and play them with decision. Could you swear to that man's face within the cab?"

"I could swear only to the beard."

"And so could I—from which I gather that in all probability it was a false one. A clever man upon so delicate an errand has no use for a beard save to conceal his features. Come in here, Watson!"

He turned into one of the district messenger offices where he was warmly greeted by the manager.

"Ah, Wilson, I see you have not forgotten the little case in which I had the good fortune to help you."

"No, sir, indeed I have not. You saved my good name, and perhaps my life."

"My dear fellow, you exaggerate. I have some recollection, Wilson, that you had among your boys a lad named Cartwright, who showed some ability during the investigation."

"Yes, sir, he is still with us."

"Could you ring him up?—thank you! And I should be glad to have change of this five-pound note."

A lad of fourteen, with a bright, keen face, had obeyed the summons of the manager. He stood now gazing with great reverence at the famous detective.

"Let me have the Hotel Directory," said Holmes. "Thank you! Now, Cartwright, there are the names of twenty-three hotels here, all in the immediate neighborhood of Charing Cross. Do you see?"

"Yes, sir."

"You will visit each of these in turn."

"Yes, sir."

"You will begin in each case by giving the outside porter one shilling. Here are twenty-three shillings."

"Yes, sir."

"You will tell him that you want to see the waste paper of yesterday. You will say that an important telegram has miscarried and that you are looking for it. You understand?"

"Yes, sir."

"But what you are really looking for is the centre page of the Times with some holes cut in it with scissors. Here is a copy of the Times. It is this page. You could easily recognize it, could you not?"

"Yes, sir."

"In each case the outside porter will send for the hall-porter, to whom also you will give a shilling. Here are twenty-three shillings. You will then learn in possibly twenty cases out of the twenty-three that the waste of the day before has been burned or removed. In the three other cases you will be shown a heap of paper and you will look for this page of the Times among it. The odds are enormously against your finding it. There are ten shillings over in case of emergencies. Let me have a report by wire at Baker Street before evening. And now, Watson, it only remains for us to find out by wire the identity of the cabman, No. 2704, and then we will drop into one of the Bond Street picture galleries and fill in the time until we are due at the hotel."

CHAPTER V.

Sherlock Holmes had, in a very remarkable degree, the power of detaching his mind at will. For two hours the strange business in which we had been involved appeared to be forgotten, and he was entirely absorbed in the pictures of the modern Belgian masters. He would talk of nothing but art, of which he had the crudest ideas, from our leaving the gallery until we found ourselves at the Northumberland Hotel.

"Sir Henry Baskerville is upstairs expecting you," said the clerk. "He asked me to show you up at once when you came."

"Have you any objection to my looking at your register?" said Holmes.

"Not in the least."

The book showed that two names had been added after that of Baskerville. One was Theophilus Johnson and family, of Newcastle; the other Mrs. Oldmore and maid, of High Lodge, Alton.

"Surely that must be the same Johnson whom I used to know," said Holmes to the porter. "A lawyer, is he not, grey-headed, and walks with a limp?"

"No, sir, this is Mr. Johnson, the coal-owner, a very active gentleman, not older than yourself."

"Surely you are mistaken about his trade?"

"No, sir; he has used this hotel for many years, and he is very well known to us."

"Ah, that settles it. Mrs. Oldmore, too! I seem to remember the name. Excuse my curiosity, but often in calling upon one friend one finds another."

"She is an invalid lady, sir. Her husband was once Mayor of Gloucester. She always comes to us when she is in town."

"Thank you; I am afraid I cannot claim her acquaintance. We have established a most important fact by these questions, Watson," he continued, in a low voice, as we went upstairs together. "We know now that the people who are so interested in our friend have not settled down in his own hotel. That means that while they are, as we have seen, very anxious to watch him they are equally anxious that he should not see them. Now, this is a most suggestive fact."

"What does it suggest?"

"It suggests—halloa, my dear fellow, what on earth is the matter?"

As we came round the top of the stairs we had run up against Sir Henry Baskerville himself. His face was flushed with anger, and he held an old and dusty boot in one of his hands. So furious was he that he was hardly articulate, and when he did speak it was in a much broader and more Western dialect than any which we had heard from him in the morning.

"Seems to me they are playing me for a sucker in this hotel," he cried. "They'll find they've started in to monkey with the wrong man unless they are careful. By thunder, if that chap can't find my missing boot there will be trouble. I can take a joke with the best, Mr. Holmes, but they've got a bit over the mark this time."

"Still looking for your boot?"

"Yes, sir, and mean to find it."

"But, surely, you said that it was a new brown boot?"

"So it was, sir. And now it's an old black one."

"What! you don't mean to say—"

"That's just what I do mean to say. I only had three pairs in the world—the new brown, the old black, and the patent leathers, which I am wearing. Last night they took one of my brown ones, and to-day they have sneaked one of the black. Well, have you got it? Speak out, man, and don't stand staring!"

An agitated German waiter had appeared upon the scene.

"No, sir; I have made inquiry all over the hotel, but I can hear no word of it."

"Well, either that boot comes back before sundown or I'll see the manager and tell him that I go right straight out of this hotel."

as advance charges or by draft on consignee. He will at once notify the agents along their north Montana line so that they will be prepared to take care of any Canadian shipments this fall. Duty will not be refunded on shipments sold for export on the markets in the United States. Export cattle can be shipped in bond, but when so billed such cattle must go for export.

One thing should not be overlooked and that is that shipments on the Canadian Pacific Railroad are charged at 20,000 lbs. minimum and after being transferred to the Soo of Great Northern Railway at point of entry the minimum is raised to 24,000 lbs. and that is charged either at St. Paul or Chicago, wherever the stock is sold. Parties making shipments should try to arrange to shrink the cars at point of entry, say at Portal, as it would save them considerable freight. Most of the shipments last season went into St. Paul loaded light on account of this 20,000 lbs after crossing the line.

A representative of our firm while at Malta recently understood from Dr. Tracy, who has charge of the government inspection work in Montana, that no Canadian shipments would be loaded at any point in Montana as clean cattle unless they had a certificate of inspection from the Canadian authorities that they were clean. Otherwise the shipments would be treated the same as exposed cattle. That it will be well to remember, but undoubtedly a certificate of health will not be difficult of attainment.

We do not hesitate to point out exactly what the conditions are. It would be folly to attempt to induce cattle shippers to come this way by misrepresentation. We give the expenses, etc., as they are.

There are difficulties in any undertaking. It is the results we must look at, and surely the Canadian cattlemen is willing to assume some annoyance in order that he may realize the best returns on his business; reach the market that promises the most satisfactory results from a monetary standpoint. At home he has one single bidder; here a score, competition is the life of trade, trite but true, and it is here that it is most strongly exemplified in the live stock business.

As said, above the prospect is very encouraging, presidential to the contrary notwithstanding. While many men are unemployed, many are returning to work—and to beef consumption—and with every indication of moderate supplies the splendid prices now prevailing for fat beeves should be well sustained.

In the past three weeks there have been some shipments of Canadian hay feds at Chicago. For their weight and quality it will be seen that they realize generally satisfactory rates. Some of these sales were as follows:

No.	Description.	Av.	Price
153	steers	1,313	$6.20
64	steers	1,122	6.20
78	steers	1,334	6.15
19	steers	1,248	5.90
11	tallings	1,199	5.45
20	tallings	1,164	5.40
21	tallings	1,050	5.40
67	cows and heifers	920	5.20
59	cows and heifers	901	5.20
12	cows	1,083	5.20
9	cows	1,164	5.15
1	bull	1,640	4.50

A distinct triumph for the Canadian cattle grower was the extension of the grazing limit on American cattle in Canada from six months to two years. In other words, American-raised cattle can be grazed in Canada for as long as two years and returned duty free. On this subject Murdo Mackenzie, of the Matador Land and Cattle Company, who shipped several trains of beeves from Saskatchewan to Chicago last fall, says:

"In the spring of last year we got an arrangement carried through the Treasury Department at Washington authorizing the bringing back to this country free of duty, cattle of American birth which may have been sent across the line to Canada for grazing purposes. In order that this may be done satisfactory proof must be given to the Custom House officers at the port of entry to the United States that the cattle were of American raising. In order that there should be no dispute about this all cattle leaving this country should be registered at the Custom House when being deported to Canada, and this can be used as a reference when the cattle are brought back again. If the proper proof is made the Custom House officers of the United States will admit the cattle to this country free of duty. When sending the cattle from this country to Canada no questions are asked except that a certificate of health must be supplied to the Custom House officials of the Canadian Government at the port of entry and a duty of 25 per cent paid on the ad valorem value of the cattle. This duty will not be refunded upon the cattle being returned to the United States. If the information given above is followed out no difficulty will be experienced in getting the cattle out from this country to Canada and from Canada to the United States again."

It is a well-known fact that exporters have been cancelling space rather than risk shipping high-priced beeves abroad. Latterly they have been losing money and it naturally means that they must buy the cattle lower. Canadian exporters are undoubtedly experiencing similar results, and can hardly afford to pay stronger rates. Here the demand for home slaughter is sufficiently strong to hold the market up, and with every prospect of continued moderate runs it indicates a good, active trade. The past week native beeves have sold up to $7.40. Clay, Robinson & Co. sold a load of 756 lb heifers at $6.80, and but lately a big string—112 head in fact—of 1,600-lbbranded Kansas beeves at $7.25. These sales are of themselves sufficient to indicate the strength of the demand on local, that is to say, packing and Eastern shipping, account, and that good cattle of practically all weights are selling at most excellent figures. Prospective moderate supplies should sustain the present high standard of values. The Canadian cattlemen should study the situation. There is food for reflection. We would say to him what has become a proverb here: "Keep your eye on Chicago."

DOMINION MAGAZINE Star Building, TORONTO, Canada

CHAMPIONS AFTER OLYMPIC HONORS

Sailing across the water today are several athletes who go to England to represent Canada in the Olympic games. They left the land of the maple leaf carrying with them the best wishes of the entire Dominion. Deep down in every man's breast is a heart-felt wish to carry back with him the coveted honor of being the champion of the world. How far the representatives chosen to do duty will prove successful time alone will tell but they have gone and there is no true Canadian sportsman, who will not hone to see the Canadians triumph in some of the events at least over the foemen selected to battle against all comers of Mother Earth.

As far as the west is concerned it will have to be content and pin faith on the one chosen representative, J. Fitzgerald, of Edmonton, and Art Burn, of Calgary. The Edmonton boy will figure in the five miles and two and a half miles, while the Calgary man, who will pay his own expenses will compete in the long distance race. It is of course, regretable that the province of Manitoba is without a representative but at no time did it appear as if a likely candidate would come into the limelight. The Olympic trials held in Winnipeg two weeks back did not receive the supportthey warranted; only one outsider putting in an appearance. It is somewhat difficult to explain how it happenad but the only reasonable excuse that is forthcoming is that the timecould not be found to train for the athletic events. The city of Winnipeg is growing at a pace almost phenomenal, and with its progress newclubs are being formed, sports of all kinds are flourishing and young athletes are gradually coming to the fore. There are at the present time several youngsters who promise to develop into coming champions and who may uphold the honor of the province in the next Olympic games. Young Harvey Orr, considering that he is at the present time a mere lad must surely have a great future before him. He caught a place at Montreal last Saturday where he arrived just before the race, being only just beaten and many who have watched him grow up, foretell that with a cool head he will one day make his mark in the athletic world The other two men who went fast are also young but the experience gained by competing against their older rivals will go a long way towards making them future representatives of the Dominion.

The Last Olympic Games

At the Olympic games at Athens two years ago the success of the American contingent was overwhelming, it is the general opinion that this was brought about only by the athletic bodies taking the trouble to organize a complete team. At least this is the reason of the English defeat as given out by the great athlete C. B. Fry.

Two years ago, England, Australia and Sweden proved to be America's greatest rivals. Such will not be the case this year. All nationalities will be strongly represented as the journey is not so far as Athens, where in 1906 the British athletes had a long journey to make and also to combat climatic conditions. They will be at home now with everything in their favor. London will suit the Swedes better than Athens. On the other hand the Americans are forced to make a long journey and then face adverse climatic conditions for it has been proven in the past that American runners are always at a disadvantage when competing in England, Some of the best men from the United States will not be able to make the trip on account of their business and the Englishman will have the chief advantage of being on the scene of action. The United States, however, has chosen a strong team but with these adverse conditions against her she will nevertheless capture a goodly portion of the events.

The 1906 Result.

Of the seventeen main events no less than eleven went to the Americans, who won the races about equivalent in metres to (1) the hundred yards: (2) the hurdles; (3) the quarter mile; (4) the half mile; and (5) the mile; and also (6) the standing long jump; (7) running long jump; (8) the standing high jump; (9) putting the weight; (10) throwing the discus; and (11) the mile walk.

England won the one event, the five miles (running), which was credited to H. C. Hawtry.

In all Great Britain and Greater Britain won four events, including the hop, step and jump, which is an event of no great standing! The continental nations won two events; America all the rest. That time it was "remainder, if any, to the Greeks," and there was none.

Canada's Representatives.

Though eleven Toronto men have been chosen by the Olympic committee Canadians will mostly pin their faith on the young sprinter from Hamilton, Robert Kerr, who has for three years been Canadian champion at 100 and 220 yards. Though a native of Ireland, having been born at Enniskillen, Kerr was only a baby when his parents emigrated to the Dominion and he is now twenty-five years of age. It was only six years ago that he commenced running, but he has already won over 200 prizes. Kerr was timed last year 9 4-5 seconds, which equals the English record and is a fifth slower than the world's record. In the 220 yards the Canadian has again the advantage, as J. P. George, the holder of the English amateur championship, has the time of 22 4-5 seconds, while the British record for the distance is two-fifths slower than the Canadian's time. The record of 21 1-5was made in America in 1896 by Weters.

It is authoritatively stated that Longboat will go to London, that he will sail on the Empress of Ireland and in spite of many rumors to the contrary will compete in the Marathon race. The Irish-Canadian Athletic club will pay the expenses of the Onondoga Indian, and should he prove successful it will be a credronto. Only a couple of years ago it to the sport-loving people of Tohe was unknown but he quickly the Hamilton roadrace in Toronto. He was a 100 to 1 shot in the betting, and his time was within 32 seconds of the course record. Five sprang into the limelight by winning miles of the course is over a stretch of heavy sandy road. Then the Indian jumped into the "road Marathon," a 10-mile road race at Toronto, and won it as he pleased over a course ankle-deep in mud. In 1907 he was, after much difficulty, got into condition for the Boston Marathon race, a 25-mile American road fixture. There he met 102 United States and Canadian runners, and after cooking them up with a hot clip in the first 15 miles waved them a laughing farewell, went on, and won all alone, doing the 25 miles in 2 hours, 24 minutes, 24 seconds. He won by nearly a mile breaking the record by 4 minutes 59 2-5 seconds. This wonderful race made the redskin famous, and all last season his career was one line of unbroken victory. He has won every race he ever entered with the exception of one, with consumate ease. The only time he was beaten was the first time he ever ran indoors, and by George V. Bonhag, the United States three-mile champion, who beat the Indian at his (Bonhag's) own favorite distance. The Indian was beaten by a foot and the record was broken by 4 seconds. Longboat is twenty-one years of age. He started running at 135 pounds, but now weighs 155 pounds. He is 5 ft. 11in. in height, a big, deep-chested fellow, with long, lean legs. He runs flat-footed. He smokes continually, and his training is decidedly spasmodic. He has all an Indian's obstinacy, and is a very unsatisfactory man to handle.

A feature of the trials at Toronto was the performance of Ed. Archibald, of the West End Y.M.C.A., in breaking the Canadian record in the pole vault. Archibald cleared 12 feet 5 inches, easily and tried for a world's record at 12 feet 8 inches, only missing it narrowly. His vault as it constitutes a world's record without a board take-off, and smashes all previous Canadian records by nearly half a foot. He should make a great showing at least in London as should also another Torontonian, in Bricker, who made a new Canadian mark in the jumps of 28 feet 8½ inches. This is, however, away below the record.

Uncle Sam's Men.

There is no doubt that hitherto the United States has been the only nation to organize representative teams for Olympic contests, and their success must in a great measure be attributed to this. In athletics proper, the championship of the world undoubtedly lies between Americaand England, Our Yankee cousins claim to have a lead pipe cinch on carrying off most of the honors, and have already selected seventy-six men to battle for the country. In J. B. Taylor, the United States will be represented by one of the greatest runners in the country, a negro of the Unikersity of Pennsylvania. If he is in condition the man who beats him will have to set up a new record. It is stated that his is the only known case of a negro who has the leg muscles of a white man and the sprinter's instep. At the intercollegiate championships, held at Harvard twelve months ago, he covered the quarter in 48 4-5, creating an international record which should certainly be hard to beat, and if anyone will do so he will certainly be a sprinter of quality. His record time was equalled by the English representative, W. Halswell, in 1906. The British amateur record stands at 48½ made just tweaty years ago, while the world's record of 47 1-5 was made in America in 1900 by Long. Coming to the half mile, Melvin W. Sheppard is undoubtedly the best runner that America has ever produced, and her chances of success here seem particularly good, while she has also Guy Haskins to carry her colors. Ever since the days when Shephard first put on a shoe, he has been breaking records. Four other events which the United States seem to have as a certainty are the 120 yards hurdles, pole vault and 16-lb. shot. No such trio of high hurdlers ever appeared in any country as Shaw, Smithson and Garrels, each with a recard of 15 1-5 seconds. McGrath and Flanagan are selected for the hammer throwing and their records of more than 170 feet overshadowed any old world thrower. S. P. Gillis who is now in Eogland, will be nominated as the third string. Roscue and Garrels, the men for the shot, have beaten 46 feet, a distance which will shut out all foreign opposition. England's best being away below this. With Dray, Gilbert and Nelson of Yale, in the pole vault, America has a mortgage on the points. The remarkable vault of 7 feet 4½ inches by A. C. Gilbert, of Yale, in the Olympic trials at Philadelphia, smashed all records ever made, and he should prove a strong card in London.

From the conference college meet at Chicago, a real good man was unearthed for the sprints in W. W. May of Illinois University. He ran the 100 yards in 9 3-5 seconds, and on form, is better than any man in the east.

It is a close bet that the United States will go very close in both the sprints, as she has N. J. Kartmell, of Pennsylvania, intercollegiate champion for two years; Huff, the Chicago winner at Jamestown; Dan Kelly, holder of the world's record; Charles Parms, of California; Archie Hahn, winner of the 100 metre race at St. Louis and Athens; Seitz, of the New York Athletic club, and scores of others. Every one ofthese men has run the 100 yard dash in even time. It is seldom that a Briton does better that 10 2-5 and 22 2-5 for the 200 yard dash.

The 1,500 metre race, corresponding to the mile, has always been England's strong point. But to uphold Uncle Sam there is Lightbody, of Chicago; the two-time winner of this championship, and a host of others. Guy Haskins ran in 4.20 3-5 at the intercollegiate championship, and is the fastest college man in the country. It should go to England, as G. Butterfield held the record in 1907 for the mile in a good many seconds better time. H. A. Wilson of the Hallamshire Harriers, in the English trials, beat the Olympic record in 3.59 2-5.

The next distance run on the Olympic programme after the mile is the five mile. Here, again, England should prove successful. For that race the United States will havesuch men as Fred Pellers, of the New York Athletic club, and George Bonang. The weakness of the Yankee is very apparent here, when they have to fall back upon the latter. So far this year he has not shown any form, nor did he run in the tryouts or show that he had claim last year to a first rater.

Another evenet which Britain may lose will be the standing high jump. Here the American athletes are far ahead. Moffett, of Pennsylvania, may prove the world's champion. He is by far the best man across the line at present, his record being 6 feet, 3½ inches, made last summer. Con. Leahy of Ireland, won the event at Jamestown with a jump of 6 feet 1 inch last summer. Ray Ewry will probably carry off the standing road jump as in the past. He is without a peer in these events.

Australia and Germany.

According to Australian journals, the money question is likely to handicap that country's representation. A fairly good team will, however, be got together but it is doubtful whether the men will be representative of Australia. Amongst those who will probably make the journey to London are W. F. Trembath, who hails from Otago, and has never yet been beaten in a half mile race. He is only twenty years old and has won over all distances. Earlier in the year, at Dunedin he covered the half mile in two minutes, against a heavy wind and on a grass track, which, of course, under such adverse conditions, is splendid time. In 1907 the time made by J. F. Crawford was 1 minute and 59 8-5 seconds, but this is away inferior to the 1.55 1-5 of M. W. Sheppard, of the United States. Another of the Australians will be L. M. McKay, who did 11 feet 1½ in the pole jump, and will certainly take some beating in London.

Germany will be strongly represented in a runner, Johannes Range, who is a school-master and the best runner of the country for medium distances. He was sent by the government to the Olympic games at St. Louis in 1904, and to Athens in 1906. At the former event he won the 800 yards handicap, with ten yards start. In the world's championship over 800 metres, he could, however, get fifth place, and in Athens in 1906 had no success at all, being out of form. In his own land he has not his equal, holding three German records. His time, however, does not compare very favorably with the English records. It is said he has been training hardand will be Germany's card at the Olymoic games.

Denmark and Sweden

There are probably no countries in the world where gymnastics and outdoor sports have progressed so much and become so popular as in Denmark, as in Sweden, yet it has made nations which are so fond of open air life and open air exercise as the Swedish. R. Anderson won his first prize at swimming five years ago. Three years later he won his first championship and since then haswon many trophes at various distances. He was first Finland, in August, of 1907. Although swimming in the international match at Holsingfors, up to a comoaratively recent period, hardly received the attention in Denmark, as in Fewden, yet it hasmade rapid strides and boasts of many of the best men in continental Europe. Hjalmar Saxtorph is the Danish one mile champion, and holds the 100 metres Danish record. He competed at the Olympic games at Athens, and although he was not then in the first fight, he was ahead of the other Swedish swimmers and has come on remarkably since then.

France

France has of late years become to be recognized as a great sporting country, and she will certainly figure prominently at the Stadium when the events start. In Jardin she will be represented by a splendid athlete, whose victories have been many. He is champion of France (open to all classes) in putting the weight since 1907; he won throwing the disc in 1901 and 1905; he captured the standing high jump in 1905, and was also champion at the Olympic games at Tourcoing in 1907. He excels, however, in the standing long jump, his best figure being ten feet ten inches. There is no official English equivalent. In the 1906 Olympian games the standing ju p was won by R. Ewry American, with the same height, so that Jardine will have to be reckoned with.

Ragueneau, the long distance runner, is a man who will surely finish in the front rank in the Marathon race. One of his peculiarities is that whatever fatigues he may undergo he is always in form. This little Lyonese (he was born in Lyons in 1881) is an untiring runner, who retainsall his powers not by skilful training, but by natural faculties. His performances are remarkable. He gained the cross-country championship in 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905 and 1906. Four times he made the record in time, his record being five miles, 398 yards within the hour. He was also the victor in the international "cross," contested a hotly-contested event at Glasgow, and has also gained the Goudant prize.

Belgium and Austria.

Belgium, like France, is another very sporting country. Athletics in this little spot of only 11,378 sq. miles, have progressed even more wonderfully than in the larger Germany. Austria and other countries in continental Europe. Here is found a splendid runner in Jean Konings, who is the champion at 100 yards. He has won numerous events all over Belgium, Holland, Germany and the north of France. He has covered the 100 yards in less than 10 seconds. From figures it would seem that he on a par with the Hamilton boy Kerr, and Morton, the English champion. Belgium will also be represented by Leon Dupont, the high jumping champion, whose best jump is 5 feet 10¼. In the capital at Brussels, swimming is one of the chief athletics, and they have progressed well, F. Feyerts is the pick of the many stars they can place in the water. He won the emperor's cup at Frankford in 1904. He has covered a mile in 36 minutes 24 seconds, and is the long distance champion of Belgium, having covered 5,000 metres in 48 minutes in the River Meuse, with the current. He intends to take his team of water poloists to the games in London.

Josef Steinbach, who is at present the most distinguished representative of athletics in Austria, weighs about eighteen stone and is the champion weight lifter. He is said to have remarkable strength. The Austrians are sending a strong bunch of athletes to the Olympic games, so that the fight for the honors should be keen and hard.

railways indicated would approximate 5,000 miles, and the guarantee in this case would involve a guarantee of approximately $150,000,000 The provinces had no assets, no lands (these being in the hands of the Dominion Government) to warrant them in undertaking so stupendous a responsibility. It was like an office clerk receiving from $65 to $70 a month going bond for many hundreds of thousands of dollars. Every dollar of current revenue we required for current expenses. If the governments were to undertake the guaranteeing of these $150,000,000 of bonds, it would result in the railways watering the stocks to the extent of a similar figure. We and our children would be saddled with an intolerable burden.

Resolved that the governments of Saskatchewan and Alberta be requested to proceed with the construction of such lines of railways as are more urgently required as government undertakings, said roads to be owned by the provinces and be leased for operating to existing railway companies on such conditions as to retain control of rates and interest on investment as will increase the protection of the interests of the public for all time to come.

Mr. Hutchings said he did not take the resolution to mean that the bonds of all these roads must be guaranteed. In point of fact, he did not believe the governments would have to any great extent to case of putting a whip into the government guarantee bonds. It was merely a case of putting a whip into the government hands. Owning and operating of railroads, as proposed by Mr. Cook, was, of course, an altogether impractical thing, as any business man would admit. This statement gave rise to a disclaimer from Mr. Cook, who denied having advocated government operation. Government ownership, with the roads leased to companies was his proposal. Mr. McKellar of moose Jaw thought the question was so wide that he doubted whether any of the boards, Calgary excepted, had taken it up intelligently. There was no country in the world, he said, with a population of 550,000 (the population of the two provinces) which had so great a mileage of railways. J. J. Hill had expressed his belief that without a dollar of public money, the railways would find the building of new lines highly profitable.

Mr. McAra thought the resolution embraced a vicious principle.

The discussion was continued at the afternoon's session, Mr. Bradshaw, the first speaker, moving that for sufficient consideration, the resolution be laid on the table fortwelve months. For his own part he did not think it would be wise to burden posterity with enormous financial obligation such as would be entailed. A seconder was found in Mr. Fraser of Edmonton. Mr. Cousins supported the original resolution. Mr. Belcher thought it hardly fair to quote the example of Manitoba as justified bond guaranteeing by Alberta and Saskatchewan. Eight or ten years ago conditions were entirely different. No such motion would stand a chance today in Manitoba. After some further discussion Mr. Hutchings suggested a committee to fix up a resolution to voice the sentiments of the entire convention. This embodied in the form of a resolution was lost. A solution to the difficulty was found by Mr. Mansell of Saskatoon, seconded by Mr. Lewis. The third and fourth classes in the preamble were struck out, and inp lace of the words in the original resolution calling for the government guaranteeing of bonds, words were substituted urging the two governments to adopt a policy to insure the early construction of colonization railroads in the said provinces." This was carried unanimously. Mr. Laird having withdrawn his government amendment.

Resolution from the Moose Jaw board of trade recommending that the provincial governments engage a freight expert who might devote his whole time to the question of freight rates, was introduced by Mr. McKellar, seconded by Mr. Cook of Milestone. Mr. Lanigan spoke very strongly against the resolution, who tended that a useless government official would be created who would come in between the companies and their patrons, with whom it was always preferable (from the standpoint of both client and road) to deal direct. Anyone had a right to demand from him or his subordinate any information on freight rates which he might desire. Mr. Hutchings also opposed the resolution, which was defeated on being put to the vote.

On behalf of Prince Albert board Mr. Cook introduced a resolution to memoralize the Federal Government in the matter of freight and express rates. Objection was taken to the companies' charging higher rates for haulage of freight over short than over long distances, to the charges being higher for travelling over distances on more than one line than was the case for similar distances over one line only, and to the carrying of freight over main lines more favorable terms than over branch lines. The government was asked to compel all railways which have received government aid to remove these anomalies. Mr. Shaw of the C.N.R. in opposing the resolution said that it was only reasonable referring to the third clause—to suppose that the carriers must charge more proportionately for carrying freight, say, from Medicine Hat to Dunmore than from the Hat to Moose Jaw, since the terminal expenses were the same in each case. The motion was carried.

Resolution to memorialize the Dominion government to compel the companies to issue single or return tickets between points on the railway system at a uniform rate as to milage and by such route as might suit the wish and convenience of the passenger, was introduced by Mr. Bradshaw of Prince Albert. Mr. Morton, the seconder, spoke of the inconvenience entailed by his having to purchase two tickets in order to travel to this city. Opposition from the railroad companies' representatives was met with, Mr. Shaw contending that it would be unfair to the transportation companies to compel them to give up business which was naturally theirs. The railways operated their lines in the interests of the most travelled routes. Mr. Lanigan pointed out that until the population per mile had increased cheap rates in the West could not be given. The great thing was to pump people into the country and then many of the problems, many of the differences between the roads and the commercial community would disappear. The service was increasing in speed and efficiency on both lines. There was not a road on the continent with a better and safer roadbed than that of the C.P.R. The resolution was withdrawn.

A resolution calling for government ownership of terminal elevators was introduced by the Regina board of trade and after some discussion withdrawn as unnecessary, as the Federal Government are supplanting certain of the elevator companies' men by government officials.

Moose Jaw's resolution calling for Boards of Trade for each province and of a Western Canada Associated Boards of Trade to ebrace Manitoba and British Columbia for dealing with the larger problems of the organization of an Associated Western Canada, was the next subject for discussion. This was introduced by E. Stuart-George.

At this point, Mr. Lanigan, who was, with Mr. Shaw and the Winnipeg gentlemen, unable to stay to the close of the Convention rose to express the thanks of the Railroads for courtesy extended to them by the Associated Boards of Trade, and also to thank the citizens of Medicine Hat for their hospitality. He made a plea for harmony between the railroads and the business men of the West. Both, he said were engaged in one common project—the building up of a great Empire. In 1900 the speaker could not have prophesied how wonderful would be the development of the next eight years. It had exceeded the most extravagant hopes of the Western men. What the future might hold in store for us it was dangerous to forecast—he believed the future would be greater than in our wildest enthusiasm we even thought of. And the greatest good would be accomplished, not in fighting together, but by recognizing that the mission of both great organizations of the Western country was one. Mr. Shaw briefly expressed himself as endorsing all that Mr. Lanigan had said. Mr. Belcher, speaking for the Winnipeg delegates, said they had felt while attending the Convention, not in any way spectators. The hospitality of their hosts had been boundless, and the visitors had felt truly that the town was theirs. Speaking of the proposed Associated Boards for the whole of the Western country Mr. Belcher opined that the loss of interest which was made evident by the smaller attendance this year, was due to the poor success that hadbeen met with in carrying out the resolutions. If each province would form an association and then combine into one greater organization, it would give greater weight to the deliberation of members, and perhaps more funds would be forth-coming. The speaker had no doubt that Manitoba would be glad to join, and even if the project of union was not carried out, Manitoba would be willing to assist in any matter which affected the joint West. B. C., while its inclusion in the larger association would be welcome, had not altogether the same needs, the same problems to face as had the prairie provinces.

Mr. McAra opposed the proposed formation of Associations for each province. He thought it would result in a shrinkage in the importance attached by the governments to resolutions passed.

Mr. Cross made a motion that Manitoba be asked to join with the other prairie provinces.

Mr. Cornell said the Brandonboard entertained the views on the subject expressed by Mr. Belcher.

Mr. Shore thought it would be a distinct mistake to cease organization between the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, as the effective work of the Convention was only just beginning. Mr. Mansell also thought the present arrangement the best, as Manitoba was in a very different stage of development to ours. Mr. Belcher urged that if there were any disagreement, that only intensified the necessity of getting together. Alberta and Saskatchewan were not the only Western Provinces and the name Associated Boards of Western Canada," was at present a misnomer. Mr. Fraser thought before action was taken the question should be submitted to the different boards.

Mr. McKellar moved that the subject be left to the approval of the boards of trade within the two provinces, the Manitoba boards be invited to join next year, and assist in forming a new constitution. The motion was carried.

A ballot was taken as to the place for next year's convention. Three cities had extended invitations—Saskatoon, Moose Jaw, Indian Head. The result was Saskatoon 20, Indian head 22, Moose Jaw 5. On a second ballot Saskatoon won out, receiving 25 votes to Indian Head's 22.

On Thursday night the Board of Trade gave a smoker for the delegates. Among those who took part were Messrs. Leonard, Frier and Waters in songs and instrumentuls. Several delegates told stories or made short addresses.

At the closing session on Saturday morning Mr. Fraser introduced a resolution by the Edmonton Board of Trade, calling for an Act to compel the railroad companies to make full settlement of the payment of compensation on purchase price of the lands affected by the registering of plans of survey within three months of the date of filing or registering the same, and that the rate of compensation or purchase price be fixed according to the value at the time of such settlement by a permanent Board of Arbitrators to be established for the express purpose of making prompt and satisfactory settlement in such cases.

The rate of compensation obtained from a company, it was explained, was fixed by the filling of a plan of survey of a line of railway, and the value of the property thus prevented from rising even where adjacent property continued to rise in price. Mr. Schlanders gave as an example of hardship inflicted, his experiencewith property at Saskatoon. His property had been tied up for two years. Resolution carried.

Resolution asking for provision for registration of agreements of sale in the same manner as transfers may now be registered, a nominal fee only being charged, also asking that a judge's order to the registrar be sufficient for cancellation of such registration, was introduced by Mr. Shore of Edmonton. It was, he said a step forward on the Torrens system. Nine-tenths of the land transactions during the past five years had not been registered, and the purchaser never knew what kind of a title he was getting. He had to take it as a rule on faith.

Some one said he wished all the Aldermen lived on the hill. Then we might have a waterworks investigation. More to be desired is more sand in the present lot, and there would be less mud and more water to the citizens.

How's this for more weirdnessfrom a Medicine Hat Correspondent of The Winnipeg Telegram: "The City of Medicine Hat" is 170 feet long and will carry one hundred passengers?"

The Calgary Board of Trade has recommended that the Government guarantee the bonds of railways running to Calgary. It is now up to the Medicine Hat real estate men to see that the government guarantee the payment of all purchases of property in this district.

A local man received the following letter from Regina: "I can't resist the temptation of sending you the enclosed clipping from the Regina Daily Leader with the suggestion that you have it printed in the local papers:

Several tradesmen were summoned yest)rday before the city magistrate at the instance of the health authorities for contravention of the health by-law in permitting loose paper from their establishments to litter the streets. In all instances fines were imposed ranging from $1 to $3, the delinquents also being called upon to pay the costs of the proceedings.—Regina Leader.

VOL. 5. No. 43. MEDICINE HAT, ALTA., CANADA, TUESDAY, JUNE 30, 1908. $1.50 PER ANNUM

RED CLIFF BRICK PLANT BURNT

Loss of $40,000

ENTIRE PLANT CONSUMED

WILL REBUILD IMMEDIATELY

A disastrous fire broke out on Sunday night in the dry shed of the Red Cliffe Brick Co.'s plant, resulting in the total destruction of the sheh and the plant. At about seven p.m., the fire was first noticed by some of the workmen. The outbreak was on the west side, and a still breeze blowing at the time, the flames were rapidly fanned into activity. Within a few minutes, before it had been possible to get a stream from the hydrants at play upon the building the light frame structure was totally enveloped. A good pressure was available from the 50,000 gallon tank installed for protection purposes. The 32 horse power breaking engine was at work upon the pumps (the repairs to the motor never having been completed since it was put out of commission by the flood). In spite of this provision, however, and of the strenuous work of the men, the fire-fiend refused to be balked of his prey, and within three quarters of an hour's time nothing remained but a mass of charred ruins and scrap iron. Thanks to the efforts of the fire-fighters, however, all the smaller buildings were saved from the flames.

During the first half hour or so the blaze was of enormous dimensions. From the hill it was plainly visible and some idea of its extent may be gathered from the fact that J. Tuggy, who was on his homestead nine miles to the south of Stonerville, noticed and was able to locate the scene of the fire.

The extent of the loss has not been accurately computed, but at a rough estimate, it will range from $35,000 to $40,000. About $25,000 of this is covered by insurance. It is the company's intention to install a new plant and get to work again in the near future.

The cause of the disaster is unknown.

Before the conflagration had burnt itself out a large number of citizens had made their way out to Stonerville by automobile or in the saddle.

The Kilties' Band

Play To Good Houses

Medicine Hat had been won last year when the Kilties paid their first visit to the city, and, in spite, of the oppressive heat of the day, citizens gathered in large numbers in the Opera House on Wednesday to hear the world-famed Canadian band.

The two concerts were thoroughly enjoyed, though the Kilties scarcely sustained their high reputation, and to such as anticipated a musical treat of the first order, some disappointment was inevitable.

The music rendered at the evening performance was of a certain "popular" variety hardly flattering of the taste of the audience, and the singing was rather weak.

Perhaps the dances were the strongest features of the programme. The sword dance by Master Willie Johnstone was very cleverly executed, as were the Scotch Reel and the Irish jig by the Johnstone troupe. Another pretty dance was the sailor's hornpipe by the same troupe.

One or two features in the second half of the programme were omitted and the performance brought to a somewhat abrupt conclusion on account of the Kilties' anxiety tocatch the Crow train at 10.15.

SUED THE C.P.R.

AWARDED $3000

(Calgary Herald, June 25.)

The case of Corish vs. the Canadian Pacific Railway company, is being heard at the supreme court this morning. The action is one to recover $10.000 for injuries claimed as being caused by the negligence of the company. J. P. Nolan for the plaintiff and R. B. Lennett for the defence.

The jury is composed of A. C. Samis, Fred Mapson, J. R. Miquelon, Thos. Beveridge, S. C. Christie, J. Rosen.

The time of the court was this morning taken up witn the examination of the plaintiff and the evidence brought out was of such a nature as to fully explain to the jury how the accident occurred. It is not probable that a decision will be reached today.

The accident occurred on the evening of Aug. 31 last year between Medicine Hat and Dunmore Junction. The operator being charged with issuing a wrong order, and at any rate two trains were allowed tocome together in a head-on collision in which Corish received such injuries to his leg that it had to be amputated above the knee. One other was killed outright, and the engineer and another brakeman died from injuries received.

LATER

Calgary, June 26.

The jury was out only half an hour at the conclusion of the arguments yesterday in the Corish-C. P. R. case. The company had admitted liability on account of negligence and jury assessed the amount of damages at $3,000. P. J. Nolan, K. C., represented the plaintiff, while R. B. Bennett, K. C., appeared for the company.

RUSTLERS ACTIVE IN THE SOUTH

Macleod, June 25.—It is reported here that Blake and Milles, well-known ranchers on the north fork of the Old Man river, had a valuable team of horses stolen from their stable one night last week. No trace of them whatever has been found.

Paisley, a Porcupine Hill settler, had a valuable horse taken from his bunch a day or two ago. For some time past that part of the country has been without police protection owing to the scarcity of men at the division head-quarters at Macleod, and it is thought that, knowing this, the rustlers are beginning to take advantage of the present opportunity.

There is a talk of the settlers organizing a vigilance committee, and if that move is made rustlers can look for mischief ahead.

Runaway Accident

Local Physician Injured

A rather serious runaway accident occurred on Sunday, as a result of which Dr. Smyth has been confined to his home for the last couple of days.

At about four o'clock in the afternoon Dr. Smyth, Dr. McKenzie of the Orthopaedic hospital, Toronto, and his nephew, Mr. Downey of this city were driving across the bridge in a covered rig. Just as they approached the farther bank the buckle of the reins became caught in the ring of the backband and seeing that Dr. Smyth had lost control of the team, the other two occupants of the carriage leapt out and rushed forward to seize the heads of the bolting team. The animals, however set off at a gallop and Mr. Downey and Dr. McKenzie were left behind. The bridge crossed the horses took a sharp turn to the left, making for the bank of the river at the place where the old ferry landing used to be in the pre-bridge days. The rig turned turtle, the doctor was thrown violently forward on the ground and sustained some very nasty bruises. The horses were badly scared and dashed forward till they became entangled in the barbed wire fence. Both horses were dangerously wounded in their wild attempt to escape.

Since the accident Dr. Smyth has been confined to the house, but is making excellent progress towards recovery.

The team and rig which were hired from the City Stables are both undergoing repairs, the former at the stables under veterinary supervision, the latter at Doane's carriage works.

The Orangemen will attend Divine service at St. John's church on Sunday, July 12th, and the annual celebration will be held on Monday, the 13th July.

The match or matches to be for $100 aside and to take place at the Agricultural Society's grounds in Lethbridge at or during the Lethbridge fair. Address Old Timer, News Office.

The Times apologizes for the size of this issue. For a week it has been up against the eccentricities of a Fairbanks-Morse engine—and that means something.

Before the arbitration board in Winnipeg, where the differences between the C.P.R. and its employees are being discussed. Mr. Grant Hall for the company, has been laying increased emphasis on two additional changes which they are applying for.

One of these is the abandonment of the present system of reducing hours of labor in slack times. The prevailing schedules provide for reducing to as low as seven hours per day. During the winter the menhave been working a short day and only five days to the week. Thus avoids discharging a good many men. It has always been understood thatthis system was perfectly agreeable to the company in that it retained competent men in the service, and the unions have agreed that its members should make a sacrifice for the benefit of the whole. It is now put forward that although the practice may be commendable on sympathetic grounds 'it is not business,' and the company wants to abolish the practice.

The other claim comes in the way of making classifications in the work The officials would have the chairman believe that each job can be subdivided, the skilled men doingthis piece and the less skilled that piece at a less wage, and so all along the line.

FOSTER'S FORECASTS

Washington, D.C., June 25.— The last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross the continent June 28 to July 2, warm wave June 27 to July 1, cool wave June 30 to July 4. The next disturbance will reach the Pacific coast about July 3, Cross Pacific slope by close of July 4, great central valleys July 5 to 7, eastern states July 8. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about July 6, great central valleys July 8, eastern states July 10.

The force of this disturbance will be greater than the usual average for July and that force will be expended in causing a great hot wave to pass across the continent, in making the drouth more severe in the southwest and in other sections where dry weather prevails, in causing heavy local rains in other places and probabilities favor severe local storms as the disturbance moves eastward.

Indications are that temperatures of July will average in the Red River valleys in Texas and generally southwest of the Missouri river; also from Iowa northeastward to the province of Quebec and Canada. Abundant rains are expected in all the states south of the Potomac and Ohio rivers and east of the Mississippi.

In northeastern states and western Canada about average crop-weather may be expected for July. Very low temperatures will cross the continent about July 14 to 20. The principal hot waves will cross the continent reaching meridian 90 not far from July 6 and 22. The last week of July and first week in August will bring great extremes of temperature and unusually severe weather.

About and immediately following July 27 a wave of unusually severe weather will cross the continent and will include extremes of temperature severe local storms, thunder storms, heavy rains covering small sections and drough will be intensified in the dry districts.

The period of May rains predicted for Texas continued longer than expected thereby postponing the predicted drouth for the southwest but while the flood and drouth periods are a little later than expected I have no doubt they will follow each other not far from the times foretold in these bulletins.

None Killed—70 Injured

Tottenham, Ont., June 28.— The West bound Winnipeg train leaving last night left the rails a mile and a half north of here. The train broke behind the baggage car, one car going down the east and five down dump, the tail of the train holding the west side of the twenty-foot the rail.

The cars, which included tourists and sleepers, were turned upsidedown and it was difficult to extricate the passengers, some two hundred having retired for the night.

None Killed.

It was then found that none were killed, although two cases are precarious, both being ladies from Parry Sound.

Some fifteen serious cases, comprising broken limbs and scalp wounds resulted. Some forty others have lesser injuries, although the railway officials place the number considerably less. There were 50 excursionists to the Guelph model farm and their car had the most victims.

The baby of Mrs. Morris, whose husband is a reporter on the Brandon Sun was thrown from her berth and not found for some 20 minutes, when its crying attracted attention. A relief train with three hospital cars from Toronto took all the hurt passengers back there.

At one o'clock this afternoon the passengers who wished to proceed were taken off on a special to the scene of the wreck and thence transferred to a train from Bala for the West. A train was also made up for Toronto.

A Mystery.

The accident is a mystery. Though the heavy train tore the track up badly there is nothing to show the track or the roadbed gave way. The rolling stock was first class and the train was not going particularly fast. Old hands wonder at the extent of the wreck without loss of life. Among the injured are: Mrs. Jam, chest crushed, internal injuries; W. F. Miller, aged 60, of Fort Will-J. E. Price, Regina, slight injuries to face; Mrs. H. Morris, Brandon, back and arm injured; Mrs. Riddell, Chapleau, ankle injured; Conductor Gillis, North Bay, cut on head and internal injuries.

SUMMARY

3-base hits—Krauss, Ardell; 2-base hits, Sinclair, Ardell; double play, McFarlane to Sinclair; struck out, by Andrews 8, by Ardell 1, by Fairman 3; hit by ball, by Andrews 2, by Fairman 4; bases on balls, off Ardell 2; stolen bases, C.P.R. 10, Fire Brigade 9.

C. P. R. VS. BACHELORS

How not to umpire was the outstanding feature of Friday night's game. Both Forberts and Gilroy were "off color," to put it mildly. The C.P.R. showed its superiority at every point of the game but when the decisions of the umpires were decidedly in their favor as well, it is surprising the score was not larger. The winners could have made it larger had they tried hard.

At one time the Bachelors left the field at a rank decision of Gilroy's and after the successions of decisions that had been dealt to them it was not to be wondered at. In this case Brette had knocked a little one close to third base line and had run to first. Forberts had apparently called it a fair hit, but Brette thought he said "foul" and after almost reaching second turned for the plate. The ball was fielded to Bennett who tagged Brette when the latter, discovering his mistake, ran back. Then Gilroy placed him safe on first by some rule not in baseball. It was Biette's place to wait for Forbert's signal; when he didn't it was his own fault. This decision had come soon after Gilroy had called a C.P.R. runner safe when Smith had touched him five feet from the bag and the runner admitted himself out by running right on for the plate, with the third base man holding the ball behind him. Forberts stood behind the pitcher, having no mask, and his decisions on balls and strikes were weird. Both pitchers did superbly but were robbed of many of their best and presented with others to take their place.

It is a serious thing for the game when the umpires go groggy and take the heart out of the players. Forberts gave a batter a base when he had swung viciously at a ball on the third strike and it had hit his body instead of his bat; a couple of innings later when the rule had come to his mind he called a batter out when he was hit by a ball, although he had not struck at it. Then he gave a batsman a base, when he jabbed his hand in front of a ball. And decisions like these went on all through the game. Gilroy called the game at the end of the eighth because it was punk ball; (or words to that effect) although the Bachelors protested.

Every umpire has his off nights, but when they are paid it is expected that they observe the rules laid down in cold type.

The Bachelors have protested the game.

Ardell pitched gilt edge ball and hit only two men, striking out 12 and allowing only 2hits. The Bachelors shifted the order of batting back one in the eighth. The score:

Home run—McFarlane; 3-base hits, Andrews, Lemieux; 2-base hit, Ardell. Stolen bases, C.P.R. 10, Bachelors 2; bases on balls, off Ardell 2; hit by ball, by Ardell 2, by Squance 1; struck out, by Ardell 12, by Squance 5.

The Kilties tried to play baseball with the C.P.R. last week, but the latter played rag with the skirted men. The score was several score.

On Dominion Day there will be baseball games at 10 a.m. and at 6.30 p.m. There will also be a lacrosse game in the afternoon between Medicine Hat and Lethbridge.

The C.P.R. team played the Maple Creek boys last night and after a good game came out victorious by 10—8. The Maple Creek battery played well, but were given poor support.

(From the Scottish Weekly Record, May 16th, 1908.)

There is no doubt whatever, says the Winnipeg Commercial, that there will be an unprecedented demand for labor in Canada this year. At least 35,000 men will be needed for railway construction work alone. The building operations in the towns and cities will also require a considerable number. The new union depot in Winnipeg will require 1,000 men and the massive parliament to be put up in Edmonton and Regina, a like number. Where the immensearmy of workers required for the harvest is to come from is a conundrum, as the railway construction will absorb the ordinary immigrants. Cheap excursions from the east will prevail, and that, combined with high wages, will possibly attract the 20,000 or 25,000 required by the farmers.

The publication of such "information" as is contained in the foregoing paragraph is a scandalous injustice, both to the workers in the old country who may have been influenced by it and to the thousands of idle men in this country. On the face of it does it not contravene the "false representation" clauses which were inserted in the British Shipping act. Wonder how it is that the Canadian Immigration commissioner in London has not been heard from in regard to it?—The Voice.

Mounted Police Notes.

A. J. Brower has been haking business troubles again. On Thursday, the 18th inst., Meabear and Loud Voice called on him to get a settlement in connection with a deal in woolens he had put through for them The Indians were oot satisfied with the way in which he had handled this business and told him so. Brower was displeased with their lack of confidence in his integrity and gave vent to his wrath by striking one of them on the shoulder with a revolver. He then backed up and pointed the revolver at their heads ordered them out of the shack. The bucks were unafraid of his threats and were preparing for a contest—they had slipped their coats off—when the interpreter, Mr. Harry Bray, intervened, and induced them to desist.

On Friday Loud Voice and Mebear laid information against the bottle man, and the case was brought up on Saturday before Inspector Parker and Mr. D. Milne. Bower was fined $15 and costs.

On Wednesday, the 24th, two ranchers of Josephsburg, were charged before Mr. D. Milne with standing an entire horse for gain contrary to the horse breeders ordinance, the animal not being registered with the department of agriculture. Both men pleaded guilty and were fined $1 and costs.

An interesting decision was given on Thursday last by Mr. D. Milne, in a case between two Bowell farmers. One of them had laid information on the 22nd against E. B. Oakley on a charge of having stolen a mare and colt on the previous Saturday.

At the preliminary hearing it appeared that the plaintiff had agreed to purchase the animals in question and had been allowed to take them away to his own farm. No payment being made, the defendant took it upon himself to drive the mare and colt back to his own land. Evidence of the informant and a neighbor, having been taken, the lawyers, D. G. White for the prosecutinn and J. J. Mahaffy for the defence, addressed the bench. Mr. Mahaffy pointed out that something tangible, either in cash or an equivalent, must change hands to bind a deal, and as this had not happened the mare and colt were still vested in defendant. The bench decided that the case was action, and dismissed the charge. one for civil rather than criminal Plaintiff paying costs of court.

On Saturday, A. E. Whiffin laid information against Brower for alleged theft, Brower had shipped an empty beer barrel to the Calgary Brewing Co, Mr. Whiffin has the sole handling of this company's liquors and it seemed apparent that the barrel had been stolen. The case was heard yeaterday morning when H. Schnett testified that he had found the barrel lying around his barn. Later he had dropped it off at Brower's place. The case was dismissed.

A NEW DISINFECTANT.

Our Public Schools are now equipped with an up-to-date and very effective disinfecting device. It is of a great credit to the school board who have ordered the installation of such a necessary article and these gentlemen deserve the praise of our population.

The good sanitary conditions of our schools, churches, public buildings, hotels and houses must be looked to with the utmost care.

These Blockettes answer the purpose admirably. They purify and sanitize the air; they ensure healthy homes and a pure, pleasant and beneficial atmosphere; and they are a safeguard against infectious diseases. They are also invaluable in the wardrobe, where they are a protection for the furs. The Blockettes are now in use in the schools, Cosmopolitan hotel, Merchant's Bank, St. Patrick's church, Union, Palace and King Edward Barber Shops, and several houses.

The agent will call at every house and it is to be hoped, that, in the interest of the public welfare, all our families will secure a few ofthese most useful and indispensable Blockettes.

Winnipeg, Man., June 25.—Themost important step that will be taken in the near future towards the social evil will be the summoning to court of all property owners who have rented their premises to disorderly women.

This morning Chief of Police McRae enquired of the prisoners who owned their premises, and thenames of all landlords were taken. They will be brought into court and dealt with under the criminal code provisions.

The climax of the campaign against the evil was reached today, when many representatives of the demi mode appeared in the police court and pleaded guilty. They were given a short time to leave the city.

It should be possible for the purchaser to go to the land titled office and get all information he wanted in regard to his title. There were men who considered it an insult that purchasers should take out a caveat. It should be obligatory to register agreements of sale, as was the case with transfers. The resolution was carried, with the last clause amended to read (in place of a judge's order) "that a judicial proceeding be necessary before the cancellation of rights." The idea was to provide a simple, effective, and if necessary, summary way of cancelling an agreements.

Mr. Harrison of Edmonton introduced a resolution asking the governments to compel all railway companies to provide traffic facilities on railway bridges. Mr. Shore pointed out the great saving which would be made possible by this means, the governments in the past frequently having had to duplicate bridges where one set of piers would have been adequate. The piers were the most expensive. Mr. Cook instanced the Prince Albert bridge as an example of the way in which a saving would be effected by the government insisting on such provision by the railroads. The cost of the traffic portion of that bridge had been only $100,000; had an entirely separate bridge been constructed it would have cost, at a modest estimate, $200,000. The resolution was passed in the amended form here given:

"In the opinion of this convention the railway companies on all bridges hereafter constructed, should whenever the same is necessary be required to provide traffic facilities across all streams and rivers, the additional cost and maintenance thereof to be borne by the local government or municipality under whose jurisdiction the same may be.

One of the most interesting discussions of the convention was that on commercial education introduced by the Edmonton Board. The mover, Mr. Harrison spoke on the shortage of men in these provinces with business training. The preamble of the resolution regretted the fact that most of the certificates given by the business colleges in the West were meaningless and often valueless. Mr. Lewis of Strathcona thought it was not good policy to raise a special kick against the business colleges, the efficiency of the training obtained depended almost entirely on the students' themselves. The resolution called for a more prominent place for commercial education in the curriculum of public and high schools. Mr. Harris of Cardston thought the public school should be struck out. Other speakers were emphatic on the necessity of increased commercial training, not only in the high school but in the public school also, since nineteen out of twenty pupils never got beyond the latter.

Mr. Schlanders of Saskatoon thought the carrying into effect of the recommendations would accentuate the tendency to educate western boys and girls away from the farm. In the maritime provinces the effects of over-education had been notable. Hundreds of acres had gone back to bush land and farmers were drawing on Ontario for their hired men. The deplorable state of domestic service in the west was also attributed to education. Mr. McAra said provision had been made in the Saskatchewan high schools for a course in agriculture.

Mr. Bradshaw was unable to accept Mr. Schlanders' view of commercial education. If we did not train our own children for a commercial life, it would be necessary to send elsewhere, to other countries. Mr. McKellar thought the day was past when it was considered that a farmer should be only half educated. Another speaker thought every man, no matter whether he intended to take up farming or not, should be taught the principles on which business was conducted. Mr. Rowley thought that a "lot of useless truck" was being taught in the schools, which might well give place to a little training in fundamentals. The children were not being taught to be honorable not being taught to be truthful, not being taught the first principles of morality. They did not learn how to spell even. The market was already overstocked with men seeking office work, and we were discouraging the immigration of these classes. It was folly to suppose that teachers who themselves knew nothing of commerce were competent to instruct the children in commercial subjects.

Resolution of thanks to provincial government was passed, for the way in which they have acted in regard to reciprocal demurrage.

At the conclusion of proceedings, Mr. Fraser moved a vote of thanks to the citizens of Medicine Hat for their hospitality, Mr. Bradshaw, in seconding made especial reference to the performance given in the Opera House by the Y.M.C. on Friday evening. The acrobatic exhibition in particular, had impressed him, and he could not speak too highly of the excellent work being done by those who had this splendid movement in hand.

Three cheers were given for Medicine Hat.

Mr. Cornell expressed appreciation the courtesy extended to him by the Boards of Trade and the hospitality of Medicine Hat people. If the time came when Manitoba was added in the Association, he could extend a hearty invitation to his city for a future convention.

A vote of thanks to the retiring president and officers was moved by Mr. Cook, seconded by Mr. McKellar.

The close of Friday afternoon's session found business somewhat in arrears, and accordingly a night sitting from 7 to 9 was held in the evening, at which the following resolutions were carried'

Reforestration—Introduced by Edmonton Board of Trade. This urged that concerted action be taken for the preservation and reforestration of tracts of land suitable or expedient to be used and it is therefore recommended:

(1) That timbered tracts of land should be set apart and the settlers prohibited from encroaching upon them while being used for timber areas.

(2) That during the spring and at least an active and adequate corps of fire rangers should be provided whose duty it should be to patrol incessantly the timber areas to prevent forest fires.

(3) That in addition to the natural reforestration of such areas active steps should be taken to promote the extension of timber therein. Carried.

Insurance and Stock Companies. Also by Edmonton Board.

Waste of Natural Gas.—Introduced by Medicine Hat board. This was passed last year but has hitherto been fruitless. It was re-enacted and the Dominion Government will again be memorialized on the subject, and urged to take immediate action to prevent the unnecessary and extravagant waste of this valuable commodity.

Resolution re Transportation via Hudson's Bay.

(Navigation of the Saskatchewan) by Prince Albert—This urged the Dominion Government to take steps to fully prove the economic possibilities of the Saskatchewan for navigation purposes; that a capable engineer be appointed to survey the river from a point 100 miles west of Edmonton down to Lake Winnipeg, and to make an estimate of cost. Carried.

Prairie Fires—Introduced by Moose Jaw, urged that something be done to warn newcomers when they acquired land. Copies of the Ordinance should be posted in a prominent place in all Dominion Land offices and post offices.

Western Man for Railway Commission.—By Regina Board. Carried.

Grazing Lands.—By Regina Board. Amended on motion of Messrs. Huckvale and White, to read as follows:

Be it Resolved that this Convention of Boards of Trade of Saskatchewan and Alberta memoralize the Dominion Government to grant leases for grazing purposes for a definite term of years, those areas in these Provinces that for the present, at any rate, are undoubtedly better adapted for grazing than for grain growing purposes.

Salvation Army Praise

"I feel it my duty to testify to the benefit I have received from the use of Psychine. While travelling in New Ontario conducting special meetings I contracted a very bad cold, which gradually developed into Bronchitis of the worst form. I was advised to try Psychine, which I did, and after using but a few bottles I was completely restored to health. I recommend this wonderful remedy to sufferers from Bronchitis and other troubles."

Later: "I wish to add that my voice, since using Psychine, is stronger and has much more carrying power than it had before I had bronchitis, and the vocal chords do not tire with speaking."

P. TILLER, Capt. Salv'n. Army.
Ann St., Toronto, Aug. 13, 1907.

HEAVES CAUSED BY HAY.

Noted Veterinarian Advises But One Feed of Hay Per Day.

A noted veterinarian of Canada says that one full feed per day of hay is enough for a horse; that because the work horses are busy in crop time they only get one full feed of hay every twenty-four hours, but in the winter are frequently allowed to stand and eat hay all day. He says that a horse to be in perfect health should have the stomach emptied of the previous meal for two or three hours before he is given another. If such is not the case, digestion will not take place in a perfect manner, and disease is likely to result. There is a remarkable sympathy between the stomach and the lungs, because of the fact that the same nerve trunk supplies new forces to both organs. When the stomach is deranged from improper feeding the lungs are liable to become sympathetically affected, and heaves often result. Care should also be taken that a horse should be fed no dust or musty hay. This dust is as light as air, and the horse in breathing draws it right into the lung tissue with every breath, and this substance being an irritant is very prone to develop the heaves. If no better hay can be obtained, the dust should be laid by sprinkling with water, when the horse will not breathe it, but will be swallowed with his feed probably do him no harm; but when at all possibly only bright, clean hay, free from dust, should be fed to horses. Again, no horse, is in fit condition for active service with a stomach distended with hay, because the stomach situated as it is right behind the lung space, if full, bulges forward into the chest to such an extent that the lungs have not room to properly expand, and cannot perform their functions properly; and anything that interfered with the functions of the lungs predisposes to heaves. In many cases if farmers would feed one-third less hay to idle horses in the winter months they would come out in the spring in better condition.

COUPLE OF DOSES CURED.

Mrs. W. J. Wilson, Tessier, Sask., tells of her experience in the following words:—"I wish to tell you of the good I have found in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. Last summer my little girl, aged two years, was taken ill with Summer Complaint, and as my mother always kept Dr. Fowler's in the house when I was a child, I seemed to follow her example as I always have it also. I at once gave it to my baby as directed and she was at once relieved, and after a couple of doses were taken was completely cured."

Water! Water!!

Yes The Times has "water" on the brain. If The Times had not to fight the battle alone, the residents of the city might have water on their hands and faces instead of only on the brain. The water situation is very little improved. To be sure the hill-climbers are getting moisture a little oftener, but it is off and on all the time—principally off.

And why?

The City Engineer does not tell us.

The water commissioners do not deign to bother their heads about what the people think of it.

And in the meantime there is nothing doing.

Here is half the city without the most important commodity and the Council and the Water Commissioners do not tell us why. One of the papers is edited by one of the Water Commissioners but it carefully abstains from any mention of the water muddle except in Websterian inanities. It openly declares that people who criticise the rankness of the water service are "without information," but, while it should know, does not think it worth while to tell the people why they have to suffer.

The Times ran a notice "To the Water Commissioners," which should have read as follows:

"If the Water Commissioners acknowledge themselves unable to cope with the present situation, let them resign. Two of them are old hands in the Council, and by the way it is most significant that these two men, who are allowing such a muddle in the water service were the only two who fought for the "salary-grab." It is just about a safe wager that if those two aldermen were relieved of their duties, the city would be relieved of the present disgraceful water situation. Mr. Huckvale is a new member of the Council, and naturally the word of the older members is most powerful.

If a fire or an epidemic breaks out it is not an hysterical utterance to say that should the sufferers go a-grinning at the expense of the Engineer, or the Water Commissioners or The Council, very few would blame them.

The Times has water on the brain because it works for the people, not to hoodwink them and to impose upon them unsupportable conditions.

Just To Think of It.

Here is the Board of Trade paying $2,500 a year for—a publicity commissioner, and about $1,500 for other expenses, all to boost our fair city. Here is every citizen a booster's club in himself to advertise Medicine Hat. Here are the newspapers supposed to be doing their best to help the work along.

And what happens?

Think of it.

Citizens who picked up last week's News rubbed their eyes and pinched themselves in amazement at seeing an eight page section PRINTED IN CALGARY BY THE CALGARY HERALD, every advertisement is which is for the merchants of other towns and cities, such as Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Regina, etc., and to cap the climax, CONTAINING THREE PAGES OF PURE UNADULTERATED BOOSTERS' CLUB BOOST FOR CALGARY. A RIVAL CITY.

and the Herald, must have laughed in their little sleeves at the innocence of The News in giving the city of Calgary all this advertising under the cloak of a "Dominion Exhibition Special!!! How the Medicine Hat Board of Trade must fumewhen its sees one of its local papers, which it would expect to advertise our city, containing three pages of the most spectacular boost for Calgary!

And now let the Board of Trade write to Calgary, just for the fun of it, and ask the Herald what it would charge to run three pages of boost for Medicine Hat, and eight pages of advertising space for its merchants.

The so-called Directory was bad enough, but this is the limit.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If no one else will take the matter up the Board of Health should draw the attention of the Council to the water we are forced to drink. That is part of its duties. There is more danger to public health in water than in any of the so-called nuisances.

All other local matters should be dropped until sufficient pressure is brought to bear upon the Council to force them to place the blame of the present water muddle on someone's shoulders and to place that someone where he can do no more harm to the city and draw no more salary. What commonsense would suggest as the first thing to do withsuch conditions in our water system would be to engage the services of an expert, or a man who understands pumps, to come and tell us how we can get water, without sitting down as the Council is doing, and saying: "Oh, it'll all come out all right."

DIFINFECTING THE POULTRY HOUSE.

Henhouses will become lousy and the birds will sometimes become infested with vermin in spite of the most strenuous efforts to keep the buildings free from the pests. In order always to be on the safe side, the hen house should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected each spring. Lime white wash is always good for giving the walls a coating, but that is not sufficient to destroy the vermin and their eggs that may be lodged here and there in the cracks and crevices of the building. There are several ways of disinfecting; there are different disinfectants that are effective for certain things.

In cleaning up a hen house it is not sufficient simply to kill the lice and mites, but their eggs must be destroyed as well, if it is expected to keep the flock in a thriving condition, for the eggs will hatch out as vigorous young lices with the parents dead as though they were alive. There may also be disease germs to destroy, and not all disenfectants that are all right for exterminating will kill disease germs. To be sure of thorough disinfection hydro-cyanic acid gas may always be depended on to do the joh. This gas is a deadly poison to man or animal and is very penetrating. It will not only kill lice but also their eggs. It will penetrate the cracks and crevices of the building, and, if the job is done rightly, there need be no fear but that particular hen house will be free from insects and vermin until some fresh ones are introduced.

The method of fumigating with hydro-cyranic gas is simple. The gas is formed by mixing potassium cyanide with sulphuric acid. As soon as the above two mentioned ingredients are brought together this gas is given off. It must be distinctly understood that it is a deadly poison, and the inhaling of only a comparatively small amount will cause death. This however, adds to its effectiveness. Tell your druggist what you want it for, measure the size of the building and he will give you the proper amounts of each ingredient. Commercial sulphuric acid will do equally aswell as the chemically pure, and it costs less.

All the cracks in the building must be stopped as tightly as possible, windows closed down tight and old sacks or carpets thrown in front of the doors. Have the windowsand doors so fastened that they can be opened from the outside, for it would be sure death to enter the building when full of gas to open the windows. If one knows what to do and how it is to be done, there need be no danger at all in this method.

An earthen jar is the best kind of ytensil in which to make the gas. Set it near the middle of the room. It is filled nearly full of the diluted sulphuric acid. The druggist will know how much of the acid will be required, and it should be diluted enough to nearly fill the jar. In dilluting the acid be sure to pour the acid into the water and not the water into the acid, as a great deal of heat would be generated the latter way, which would probably breakthe ar. Make the dilution gradually.

Now just above the jar have a hook or wire loop of some kind through which a strong string may be passed. One end of this string should pass out of the building through a small opening or crack, and on the other end, which hangs over the jar of sulphuric acid, should be suspended the potasium cyanide wrapped up securely in a piece of paper. In this way the cynaidemay be dropped into the sulphuric acid by a person holding the string on the outside of the building without a particle of dangur.

The chickens can roost elsewhere one night while their house is being fumigated. Start the gas to going in the building in the evening and let it go all night. During the night some of the gas will escape from the building, but it will do no harm out of doors and early in the morning the doors and windows can be thrown open. In the course of three or four hours the gas will all have passed out and there will be no danger in going into the building.

The only thing to bear in mind in handling this gas is that it is extremely poisonous. As soon as the cyanide and sulphuric acid come in contact the gas commences to form, to be sure you are on the outside of the building when the string is lowered into the jar. The acid will eat the paper and during the night the deadly work among the lice will be accomplished. If the chickens are all dipped now with some good dip they will be in a good way to keep healthy and free from lice. Whitewash the inside of the building, roosts and nest boxes and everything, and the poultry will be free from the lice until a fresh supply is introduced from outside sources.

Bumper Crops in The States.

Washington, June 22.—Mother Earth holds out this year the brightest promise for the American farmer. Never has there been promise of a bigger harvest. Every important crop in every section of the country except in the far west is in more flourishing condition than ever recorded.

Although corn is not well advanced the promise is for a crop of substantially 1,250,000,000 bushels, tostand against the crop of 1906, which resulted in 1,166,026,471 bushels. At going prices that crop is worth to the farmers $625,000,000.

The demand for money wherewith to move the crops is usually estimated at $250,000,000. This year the demand will easily rise to $275,000,000.

All the engines and freight cars in the country are not enough to load the corn crop at one time. Forty-six thousand pounds of corn on cob constitute a little more than an average carload. Twenty loaded cars constitute more than an average train load, but using twenty cars loaded with 46,000 pounds of corn as a train load, it is found that it will require 84,528 engines, an equal number of cabooses and 1,630,436 cars to take up the prospective corn crop.

More than twice as many men would be required to man thosetrains as were engaged in the battle of Gettysburg, the "high-water mark of the rebellion." Napoleon's army that invaded Russia would look small to comparison with the army of trainmen, because there would be 407,000 of them, an engine driver, fireman, one flagman, one brakeman, and one conductor being required for each train.

The Railroad Equipment

The equipment used in the transportation of the golden flood would be worth, new, $813,280,000 for the engines, and $904,348,800 for the cars and cabooses. The wages for the crews for one day would amount easily $1,922,800.

All the figures concerning movement of the trains required to load the corn ignore the fact that yardmen and yard engines, train masters train dispatchers, trackmen and telegraph operators are absolutely indispensable in the proper operation of a train.

But the corn crop is not the only one that promises to be large. There is promise of about 160,000,000 bushels of spring wheat to be compared with 153,897,000 produced in the bumper year, 1906; 339,440,000 bushels of winter wheat, which is considerably in excess of the 836,545,000 of two years ago; about 807,000,000 bushels of barley as against 606,209,000 for 1906; 20,000,000 of rye, an increase of 500,000 over the big year, and 78,823,000 of barley, 1,500,000 more than the high mark in that cereal.

Every crop except apples was June 1 in better condition than an average of ten-year conditions on that same day. The condition of the apple crop on that day was 66.0, as compared with a ten-year average of 71.9. Hemp, sugar cane and sugar beets, crops that appreciate much moisture, are the only crops that showed a better condition on June 1, 1907, than on the corresponding day of this year. But the difference in condition of those crops last year on June 1, and this year was so slight that it is not worth noting. They were in finecondition at this time and they are in fine condition now.

Bankers Ready for Crops.

That the bankers of the country have had premonitions of what to expect in the way of the amount of money that will be needed to get this bumper crop to market may be inferred from the decided fall in the amount of national bank notes retired during May as compared with April. Last month the retirement amounted to $8,698,700. The month before the retirements amounted to $6,214,000.

The drop in retirements from April to May indicates that the banks found work for their idle notes. No other assumption is possible. The probability is that the big crop in prospect is what caused a resumption of activity, as indicated by the failure of the banks to retire asmany of their notes during May as they thought they would be required by circumstances to retire.

Recipe for Rheumatics

Directions to Prepare Simple, Yet Remarkable Home Mixture.

There is so much Rheumatism here in our neighborhood now that the following advice by an eminent authority, who writes for readers of a large Eastern daily paper, will be highly appreciated by those who suffer:

Get from any good pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces of Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake these wall in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime; also drink plenty of good water.

It is claimed that there are few victims of this dread and tortuous disease who will fail to find ready relief in this simple home-made mixture and in most cases a permanent cure is the result.

This simple recipe is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys, so that they can filter and strain from the blood and system the poisons, acids and waste matter, which cause not only Rheumatism, but numerous other diseases. Every man or woman here who feels that their kidneys are not healthy and active, or who suffers from any urinary trouble whatever, should not hesitate to make up this mixture, as it is certain to do much good, and may save you from much misery and suffering later a while.

Our home druggists say they will either supply the ingredients or mix the prescription ready to take if our readers ask them.

It seem to mine, sir, I promise you that if you will have a little patience it will be found."

"Mind it is, for it's the last thing of mine that I'll lose in this den of thieves. Well, well, Mr. Holmes, you'll excuse my troubling you about such a trifle——"

"I think it's well worth troubling about."

"Why, you look very serious over it."

"How do you explain it?"

"I just don't attempt to explain it. It seems the very maddest, queerest thing that ever happened to me."

"The queerest perhaps——" said Holmes, thoughtfully.

"What do you make of it yourself?"

"Well, I don't profess to understand it yet. This case of yours is very complex, Sir Henry. When taken in conjunction with your uncle's death I am not sure that of all the five hundred cases of capital importance which I have handled there is one which cuts so deep. But we hold several threads in our hands, and the odds are that one or other of them guides us to the truth. We may waste time in following the wrong one, but sooner or later we must come upon the right."

We had a pleasant luncheon in which little was said of the business which had brought us together. It was in the private sitting-room to which we afterwards repaired that Holmes asked Baskerville what were his intentions.

"To go to Baskerville Hall."

"And when?"

"At the end of the week."

"On the whole," said Holmes, "I think that your decision is a wise one. I have ample evidence that you are being dogged in London, and amid the millions of this great city it is difficult to discover who these people are or what their object can be. If their intentions are evil they might do you a mischief, and we should be powerless to prevent it. You did not know, Dr. Mortimer, that you were followed this morning from my house?"

"His name," said the cabman, "was Mr. Sherlock Holmes."

Dr. Mortimer started violently.

"Followed! By whom?"

"That, unfortunately, is what I cannot tell you. Have you among your neighbors or acquaintances on Dartmoor any man with a black, full beard?"

"No—or, let me see—why, yes. Barrymore, Sir Charles's butler, is a man with a full, black beard."

"Ha! Where is Barrymore?"

"He is in charge of the Hall."

"We had best ascertain if he is really there, or if by any possibility he might be in London."

"How can you do that?"

"Give me a telegraph form. 'Is all ready for Sir Henry?' That will do. Address to Mr. Barrymore, Baskerville Hall. What is the nearest telegraph-office? Grimpen. Very good, we will send a second wire to the postmaster, Grimpen: 'Telegram to Mr. Barrymore, to be delivered into his own hand. If absent, please return wire to Sir Henry Baskerville, Northumberland Hotel.' That should let us know before evening whether Barrymore is at his post in Devonshire or not."

"That's so," said Baskerville. "By the way, Dr. Mortimer, who is this Barrymore, anyhow?"

"He is the son of the old caretaker, who is dead. They have looked after the Hall for four generations now. So far as I know, he and his wife are as respectable a couple as any in the country."

"At the same time," said Baskerville, "it's clear enough that so long as there are none of the family at the Hall these people have a mighty fine home and nothing to do."

"That is true."

"Did Barrymore profit at all by Sir Charles's will?" asked Holmes.

"He and his wife had five hundred pounds each."

"Ha! Did they know that they would receive this?"

"Yes; Sir Charles was very fond of talking about the provisions of his will."

"That is very interesting."

"I hope," said Dr. Mortimer, "that you do not look with suspicious eyes upon everyone who received a legacy from Sir Charles, for I also had a thousand pounds left to me."

"Indeed! And anyone else?"

There were many insignificant sums to individuals, and a large number of public charities. The residue all went to Sir Henry."

"And how much was the residue?"

"Seven hundred and forty thousand pounds."

Holmes raised his eyebrows in surprise. "I had no idea that so gigantic a sum was involved," said he.

"Sir Charles had the reputation of being rich, but we did not know how very rich he was until we came to examine his securities. The total value of the estate was close on to a million."

"Dear me! It is a stake for which a man might well play a desperate game. And one more question, Dr. Mortimer. Supposing that anything happened to our young friend here—you will forgive the unpleasant hypothesis!—who would inherit the estate?"

"Since Rodger Baskerville, Sir Charles's younger brother, died unmarried, the estate would descend to the Desmonds, who are distant cousins. James Desmond is an elderly clergyman in Westmorland."

"Thank you. These details are all of great interest. Have you met Mr. James Desmond?"

"Yes; he once came down to visit Sir Charles. He is a man of venerable appearance and of saintly life. I remember that he refused to accept any settlement from Sir Charles though he pressed it upon him."

"And this man of simple taste would be the heir to Sir Charles's thousands."

"He would be the heir to the estate, because that is entailed. He would also be the heir to the money unless it were willed otherwise by the present owner, who can, of course, do what he likes with it."

"And have you made your will, Sir Henry?"

"No, Mr. Holmes, I have not. I've had no time, for it was only yesterday that I learned how matters stood. But in any case I feel that the money should go with the title and estate. That was my poor uncle's idea. How is the owner going to restore the glories of the Baskervilles if he has not money enough to keep up the property? House, land, and dollars must go together."

"Quite so. Well, Sir Henry, I am of one mind with you as to the advisability of your going down to Devonshire without delay. There is only one provision which I must make. You certainly must not go alone."

"Dr. Mortimer returns with me."

"But Dr. Mortimer has his practice to attend to, and his house is miles away from yours. With all the good will in the world, he may be unable to help you. No, Sir Henry, you must take with you someone, a trusty man, who will be always by your side."

"Is it possible that you could come yourself, Mr. Holmes?"

"If matters came to a crisis I should endeavour to be present in person; but you can understand that, with my extensive consulting practice and with the constant appeals which reach me from many quarters, it is impossible for me to be absent from London for an indefinite time. At the present instant one of the most revered names in England is being besmirched by a blackmailer, and only I can stop a disastrous scandal. You will see how impossible it is for me to go to Dartmoor."

"Whom would you recommend, then?"

Holmes laid his hand upon my arm.

"If my friend would undertake it there is no man who is better worth having at your side when you are in a tight place. No one can say so more confidently than I."

The proposition took me completely by surprise, but before I had time to answer, Baskerville seized me by the hand and wrung it heartily.

"Well, now, that is real kind of you, Dr. Watson," said he. "You see how it is with me, and you know just as much about the matter as I do. If you will come down to Baskerville Hall and see me through I'll never forget it."

The promise of adventure had always a fascination for me, and I was complimented by the words of Holmes and by the eagerness with which the baronet hailed me as a companion.

"I will come, with pleasure," said I. "I do not know how I could employ my time better."

"And you will report very carefully to me," said Holmes. "When a crisis comes, as it will do, I will direct how you shall act. I suppose that by Saturday all might be ready?"

"Would that suit Dr. Watson?"

"Perfectly."

"Then on Saturday, unless you hear to the contrary, we shall meet at the 10.30 train from Paddington."

We had risen to depart when Baskerville gave a cry of triumph, and diving into one of the corners of the room he drew a brown boot from under a cabinet.

"My missing boot!" he cried.

"May all our difficulties vanish as easily!" said Sherlock Holmes.

"But it is a very singular thing," Dr. Mortimer remarked, "I searched this room carefully before lunch."

"And so did I," said Baskerville. "Every inch of it."

"There was certainly no boot in it then."

"In that case the waiter must have placed it there while we were lunching."

The German was sent for, but professed to know nothing of the matter, nor could any inquiry clear it up. Another item had been added to that constant and apparently purposeless series of small mysteries which had succeeded each other so rapidly. Setting aside the one whose grim shadow lay over Sir Charles's death, we had a line of inexplicable incidents all within the limits of two days, which included the receipts of the printed letter, the black-bearded spy in the hansom, the loss of the new brown boot, the loss of the old black boot, and now the return of the new brown boot. Holmes sat in silence in the cab as we drove back to Baker Street, and I knew from his drawn brows and keen face that his mind, like my own, was busy in endeavoring to frame some scheme into which all these strange and apparently disconnected episodes could be fitted. All afternoon and late into the evening he sat lost in tobacco and thought.

Just before dinner two telegrams were handed in. The first ran:—

"Have just heard that Barrymore is at the Hall.—Baskerville." The second:—

"Visited twenty-three hotels as directed, but sorry to report unable to trace cut sheet of Times.—Cartwright."

"There go two of my threads, Watson. There is nothing more stimulating than a case where everything goes against you. We must cast round for another scent."

"We have still the cabman who drove the spy."

"Exactly. I have wired to get his name and address from the Official Registry. I should not be surprised if this were an answer to my question."

The ring at the bell proved to be something even more satisfactory than an answer, however, for the door opened and a rough-looking fellow entered who was evidently the man himself.

"I got a message from the head office that a gent at this address had been inquiring for 2,704," said he. "I've driven my cab this seven years and never a word of complaint. I came here straight from the Yard to ask you to your face what you had against me."

"I have nothing in the world against you, my good man," said Holmes. "On the contrary, I have half a sovereign for you if you will give me a clear answer to my questions."

"Well, I've had a good day and no mistake," said the cabman, with a grin. "What was it you wanted to ask, sir?"

"First of all your name and address, in case I want you again."

Sherlock Holmes made a note of it.

"Now, Clayton, tell me all about the fare who came and watched this house at ten o'clock this morning and afterwards followed the two gentlemen down Regent Street."

The man looked surprised and a little embarrassed. "Why, there's no good my telling you things, for you seem to know as much as I do already," said he. "The truth is that the gentleman told me that he was a detective and that I was to say nothing about him to anyone."

"My good fellow, this is a very serious business, and you may find yourself in a pretty bad position if you try to hide anything from me. You say that your fare told you that he was a detective?"

"Yes, he did."

"When did he say this?"

"When he left me."

"Did he say anything more?"

"He mentioned his name."

Holmes cast a swift glance of triumph at me. "Oh, he mentioned his name, did he? That was imprudent. What was the name that he mentioned?"

"His name," said the cabman, "was Mr. Sherlock Holmes."

Never have I seen my friend more completely taken aback than by the cabman's reply. For an instant he sat in silent amazement. Then he burst into a hearty laugh.

"A touch, Watson—an undeniable touch!" said he. "I feel a foil as quick and supple as my own. He got home upon me very prettily that time. So his name was Sherlock Holmes, was it?"

"Yes, sir, that was the gentleman's name."

"Excellent! Tell me where you picked him up and all that occurred."

"He hailed me at half-past nine in Trafalgar Square. He said that he was a detective, and he offered me two guineas if I would do exactly what he wanted all day and ask no questions. I was glad enough to agree. First we drove down to the Northumberland Hotel and waited there until two gentlemen came out and took a cab from the rank. We followed their cab until it pulled up somewhere near here."

"This very door," said Holmes.

"Well, I couldn't be sure of that, but I daresay my fare knew all about it. We pulled up half-way down the street and waited an hour and a half. Then the two gentlemen passed us, walking, and we followed down Baker Street and along——"

"I know," said Holmes.

"Until we got three-quarters down Regent Street. Then my gentleman threw up the trap, and he cried that I should drive right away to Waterloo Station as hard as I could go. I whipped up the mare and we were there under the ten minutes. Then he paid up his two guineas, like a good one, and away he went into the station. Only just as he was leaving he turned round and he said: 'It might interest you to know that you have been driving Mr. Sherlock Holmes.' That's how I come to know the name."

"I see. And you saw no more of him?"

"Not after he went into the station."

The cabman scratched his head. "Well, he wasn't altogether such an easy gentleman to describe. I'd put him at forty years of age, and he was of middle height, two or three inches shorter than you, sir. He was dressed like a toff, and he had a black beard, cut square at the end, and a pale face. I don't know as I could say more than that."

"Color of his eyes?"

"No, I can't say that."

"Nothing more that you can remember?"

"No, sir; nothing."

"Well, then, here is your half-sovereign. There's another one waiting for you if you can bring any more information. Good night!"

"Good night, sir, and thank you!"

"Busy goes our cab in front, and we end where we began," said he. "The cunning rascal! He knew our number, knew that Sir Henry Baskerville had consulted me, spotted who I was in Regent Street, conjectured that I had got the number of the cab and would lay my hands on the driver, and so sent back this audacious message. I tell you, Watson, this time we have got a foeman who is worthy of our steel. I've been checkmated in London. I can only wish you better luck in Devonshire. But I'm not easy in my mind about it."

"About what?"

"About sending you. It's an ugly business, Watson, an ugly, dangerous business, and the more I see of it the less I like it. Yes, my dear fellow, you may laugh, but I give you my word that I shall be very glad to have you back safe and sound in Baker Street once more."

CHAPTER VI.

Sir Henry Baskerville and Dr. Mortimer were ready upon the appointed day, and we started as arranged for Devonshire. Mr. Sherlock Holmes drove with me to the station and gave me his last parting injunctions and advice.

"I will not bias your mind by suggesting theories or suspicions, Watson," said he; "I wish you simply to report facts in the fullest possible manner to me, and you can leave me to do the theorizing."

"What sort of facts?" I asked.

"Anything which may seem to have a bearing however indirect upon the case, and especially the relations between young Baskerville and his neighbors or any fresh particulars concerning the death of Sir Charles. I have made some inquiries myself in the last few days, but the results have, I fear, been negative. One thing only appears to be certain, and that is that Mr. James Desmond, who is the next heir, is an elderly gentleman of a very amiable disposition, so that this persecution does not arise from him. I really think that we may eliminate him entirely from our calculations. There remain the people who will actually surround Sir Henry Baskerville upon the moor."

"Would it not be well in the first place to get rid of this Barrymore couple?"

"By no means. You could not make a greater mistake. If they are innocent it would be a cruel injustice, and if they are guilty we should be giving up all chance of bringing it home to them. No, no, we will preserve them upon our list of suspects. Then there is a groom at the Hall, if I remember right. There are two moorland farmers. There is our friend Dr. Mortimer, whom I believe to be entirely honest, and there is his wife, of whom we know nothing. There is this naturalist Stapleton, and there is his sister, who is said to be a young lady of attractions. There is Mr. Frankland, of Lafter Hall, who is also an unknown factor, and there are one or two other neighbors. These are the folk who must be your very special study."

"I will do my best."

"You have arms, I suppose?"

"Yes, I thought it as well to take them."

"Most certainly. Keep your revolver near you night and day, and never relax your precautions."

Our friends had already secured a first-class carriage, and were waiting for us upon the platform.

"No, we have no news of any kind," said Dr. Mortimer, in answer to my friend's questions. "I can swear to one thing, and that is that we have not been shadowed during the last two days. We have never gone out without keeping a sharp watch, and no one could have escaped our notice."

"You have always kept together, I presume?"

"Except yesterday afternoon. I usually give up one day to pure amusement when I come to town, so I spent it at the Museum of the College of Surgeons."

"And I went to look at the folk in the park," said Baskerville. "But we had no trouble of any kind."

"It was imprudent, all the same," said Holmes, shaking his head and looking very grave. "I beg, Sir Henry that you will not go about alone. Some great misfortune will befall you if you do. Did you get your other boot?"

"No, sir, it is gone for ever."

"Indeed. That is very interesting. Well, good-bye," he added, as the train began to glide down the platform. "Bear in mind, Sir Henry, one of the phrases in that queer old legend which Dr. Mortimer has read to us, and avoid the moor in those hours of darkness when the powers of evil are exalted."

The journey was a swift and pleasant one, and I spent it in making the more intimate acquaintance of my two companions and in playing with Dr. Mortimer's spaniel. In a very few hours the brown earth had become ruddy, the brick had changed to granite, and red cows grazed in well-hedged fields where the lush grasses and more luxuriant vegetation spoke of a richer, if a damper, climate. Young Baskerville stared eagerly out of the window, and cried aloud with delight as he recognized the familiar features of the Devon scenery.

"I've been over a good part of the world since I left it, Dr. Watson," said he; "but I have never seen a place to compare with it."

"I never saw a Devonshire man who did not swear by his county," I remarked.

"It depends upon the breed of men quite as much as on the county," said Dr. Mortimer. "A glance at our friend here reveals the rounded head of the Celt, which carries inside it the Celtic enthusiasm and power of attachment. Poor Sir Charles's head was of a very rare type, half Gaelic, half Iverulian in its characteristics. But you were very young when you last saw Baskerville Hall, were you not?"

"I was a boy in my 'teens at the time of my father's death, and had never seen the Hall, for he lived in a little cottage on the South Coast. Thence I went straight to a friend in America. I tell you it is all as new to me as it is to Dr. Watson, and I'm as keen as possible to see the moor."

"Are you? Then your wish is easily granted, for there is your first sight of the moor," said Dr. Mortimer, pointing out of the carriage window.

"The sales of public lands of the Dominion should be to actual settlers only and not to speculators."—Liberal Platform, 1893.

Here is a definite statement of policy. Loud and long were the Liberal denunciations of the former Government because of alleged violation of such a policy.

Let us see how the Laurier Government has dealt with the matter.

The public domain of Canada is rich and varied. There are the vast agricultural lands of the North-West, hundreds of millions of acres to be disposed of as free homesteads or sold to farmers. There are the grazing lands, to be leased under proper conditions. There are the large coal areas and other mineral areas of great value. There are the timber areas—on which the incoming population is to depend for its supplies for fuel and building material. Of these the Laurier Government has been the trustee for the last twelve years. How has it administered the trust?

Let us remember these properties belong not to Sir Wilfrid nor to his Government, nor to his party. They belong to the people of Canada, to be administered in their interest and to be conserved for their future needs.

But the Laurier Government appears to look upon these great franchises as its own party property, to be used for party purposes, and parcelled out to party or personal favorites.

Millions of dollars worth of arable lands, of grazing lands, of lumber and coal lands have been sold for a song, or granted practically forever to adherents of ministers. Many princely fortunes have been founded lifted poverty to affluence.

A Saskatchewan Land Valley Deal.

About 1900, the rush of immigration and the demand for lands had set in with great force. Buyers were plenty and prices were advancing rapidly. Along the line of railway running from Regina to Prince Albert extended for 115 miles a tract of arable homestead lands. These had been favourably reported by the Government agent in 1902. Lands owned by railway companies of no better quality were selling in less eligible districts for $3.50 to $5 an acre in large blocks. Three months after the agent's report the Government, without public notice of competition, sold in May, 1902, 250,000 acres of these lands to a company of which A. J. Adamson, a political adherent and now M.P. for Humboldt, and other party friends were the promoters. The price was made $1.00 per acre—payable one half in script (worth probably 25c to 50c on the dollar), with five years to complete payments, and the Company had a range of 750,000 acres out of which to select. The Company was to settle 12 homesteaders on twelve quarter sections in each township of their grant. As these would at once become buyers of other land from the Company, this condition entailed no burden.

The Company possessed the great advantage of giving prospective purchasers a selection from 750,000 acres, or of one homestead out of three.

Though no lands were to be patented to the company until all the conditions were fulfilled, yet J. G. Turiff—a brother-in-law of Adamson, and then land commissioner at Ottawa—issued patents for 150,000 acres without warrant and before the Company was entitled to them. Company—the speculators—had sold these lands for from $6 to $12 an acre and made a probable average of $8 per acre. This shows the transaction:

The settlers buy from the speculators and pay them	2,000,000
The speculators divide as profits	1,750,000

Grazing Lease Deals.—A Slick Game.

Grazing leases were granted by order in council for a term of years at 2c per acre yearly rental.

They were revocable after two years' notice, and no part of the lands leased were sold to the lessees.

Mr. Sifton as minister made significant charges.

The power to grant leases was transferred from council and given to the minister.

The Minister took power to grant leases irrevocable for 21 years, and to give holders of leases absolute grants of one tenth of the acreage leased at $1.00 per acre, the lands to be selected out of the whole area leased.

One such lease was granted to A. T. Mackie of Pembroke, son of a Liberal member of parliament, on August 1st, 1902, comprising 41,288 acres. The practice was then discontinued for two years. Suddenly between April and August, 1905, the bars were thrown down and 21 year leases were given for 371,749 acres.

The Galway Deal—The Mysterious Brown.

On April 27th, 1902, an application for an irrevocable 21 years' grazing lease for 60,000 acres was handed in to the Governmeot signed by H. P. Brown, Montana, U.S., per J. D. M.

This was received in Ottawa just one day after it was dated in Montana! March 28rd, 1902, an order in council passed directing issue of lease and asking for rental, six months, $640.

Twice Brown was written to and no answer received.

December 24th, 1903, though one year and seven months had elapsed and Brown had made no payment and had not been heard from an order-in-council passed that Brown was entitled to a 21 year irrevocable lease on the ground "that since March, 1902 he had been in possession of said described lands."

On January 4th, 1904, Brown was again written to—no reply. In April and May he was written to again—no reply, no payment.

On January 7th, 1905, a sixth notice was sent Brown that rentwas overdue and that he must pay up.

All this time, nearly three years, this 60,000 acre tract was held up, though settlers petitioned and bona fide grazers were applying for lease.

In February Mr. Sifton resigned—there was an acting minister, and as Brown had neither answered nor paid, something had to be done.

Then the mysterious Brown appeared in the person of

A. J. Adamson, M.P. for Humboldt who on July 17th, 1905, wrote from his place in Parliament enclosing an assignment from H. P. Brown, dated Sept. 17th, 1903—22 months previously—said assignment being tothe Galway Horse and Cattle Co., though at this date no Galwayhorse and Cattle Co. had been incorporated.

At that date Brown (if he ever existed) had not signed any lease nor paid his rental nor answered the repeated calls of the Department.

What was done?

From the new minister Adamson got a revocable lease on condition that he need not pay the back rental. The Government lost the arrear, $2,415.

What next?

Adamson could not negotiate the revocable lease. So Mr. Adamson, M.P. (land commissioner when Brown was being hunted for) persuaded the minister to change the revocable into an irreyocable lease. With this added value it was sold directly for $20,000 more or less.

Timber License Deals

Before 1903 all timber land leases were subject to yearly revision of rental and royalty, were open to revocation for settlement, and adjacent settlers were allowed to cut fuel and building timber therefrom for their own use.

On April 4th, 1903, the Minister of the Interior changed all that. The leases were to be renewable year after year "whilst merchantable timber remains on the area licensed," and the privilege to settlers described above was rescinded.

This practically makes the lease irrevocable, and adds vastly to the value.

Since 1896, 6,400 square miles or 2,096,000 acres of timber leases have been granted, without proper puolic competition, the greater portion to speculators, mostly political supporters and favorites of the Government.

Gradually but surely the available future sources of supply through the North West have been given over to and tied up by the fortunate ones.

The Fortunate Burrows.

Theo. A. Burrows is a brother-in-law of Mr. Sifton, the late Minister of the Interior. He has had peculiar opportunities of becoming acquainted with timber areas and has been particularly fortunate in acquiring in his own name and in the names of others an immense estate in timber lands. The following is the list, all granted since the Laurier Government came into power.

Mr. Arthur Tennison, 88 London Street, Toronto, writes enthusiastically of the merits of Psychine for all stomach troubles.

"For seven years I have had indigestion and dyspepsia. I tried scores of remedies. My room resembled a drug store with nostrums which I had bought. Eventually I used Psychine, and every dose brought permanent relief."

All throat, lung and stomach troubles quickly cured by Psychine. It is the prescription of a great specialist. At all druggists, 50c and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, Toronto.

The total of the areas detailed is 478½ square miles, but Mr. Burrows holds in all 549 square miles, or 351,360 acres, besides his partnership interest.

A Fortunate Pulp Company.

To the Imperial Pulp Company (as certained with great difficulty to be composed of Sir Daniel McMillan, Lieutenant Governor of Manitoba, and T. A. Burrows, M.P., before mentioned) have been granted 268,870 acres of timber limits obtained without real competicion, selected in the best timber regions from Lake Winnipeg to the Rocky Mountains, and held for speculative purposes. Three lots which cost in the aggregate $12,500 are held and offered at $1,500,000.

To other land speculators (including A. W. Fraser, Ex-President of the Ottawa Liberal Association, Senator T. O. Davis, A. J. Adamson, M.P., Alexander Smith, formerly organizer of the Government party in Ontario, and certain joint stock companies whose composition is still square miles or 896,000 acres of concealed) have been granted 1,400 selected North-West timber. These grants with the others above mentioned comprise two-fifths of the whole of the timber supply in the West. The holders are not operating their limits but are keeping themfor speculative purposes.

The settlers are dependent upon them and will have to pay the price.

The Malcolm Mackenzie Deal.

The Blairmore Townsite transaction is startling in its way. Situated on the C.P.R. near Frank, with a now prosperous village upon it, and valued at from $100,000 to $200,000 this property is owned by Malcolm Mackenzie, an unsuccessful candidate for the Dominion in 1904, and now a Liberal, M.P.P. in the Alberta Legislature. This valuable property—was handed over to Mackenzie for 9480, on the basis of an assignment by an Italian who claimed to have squatted on it. Lyon, another former employee of the C.P.R., put in a claim to the property as a squatter. J. G. Turriff, then land commissioner, issued the patent to Mackenzie in the face of protests and evidence presented by Lyon as to the Italian's false claim.

Lyon got a flat from Hon. David Mills, Minister of Justice, and went before Justice Burbridge of the Exchequer Court to void the Italian's claim. The case was referred to Judge Whitmore, who reported that "statements fraudelently made with the Italian's claim was based on the intention of influencing theminds of the officials."

Judge Burbridge was ready to give judgment and cancel the patent. Then Mr. Sifton wrote the Minister of Justice, asking first for delay, then that the fiat be withdrawn, and finally stating that the Department did not wish to withdraw from the sale made to Mackenzie.

The Minister asked the court to dismiss the action without costs. Mackenzie holds the property.

The salient facts are:

1. The Italian's claim was false and fraudulent.
2. Lyon's claim was not upheldby the court.
3. Mackenzie's assignment from the Italian was worthless.
4. The land therefore belonged to the people of Canada.
5. Mr. Sifton, knowing all the facts, interfered with the process of the courts.
6. He then confirmed Mackenzie's title, based on a fraudulent assignment, and gave him for $480 a property worth at the time from $100,000 to $200,000.

Thus again does the country lose and the speculator thrive!

The Man on The Street

The Man on the Street.

Last week the police notified the hill climbers not to use the water on their lawns except during the proper hours. Ye gods! what irony! The hill climbers are studying photographs of rivers and lakes so they wouldn't forget what water looks like.

The News must be studying Liberal politics. Its defence of the present water service puts one in mind of the style of language used by Laurier, Brodeur, Fielding, etc., in defence of such side shows as the timber steals.

B. C. is supporting its divorce regulations, but who is regulating the support of divorcees.

Roosevelt received an applause of 45 minutes at the Republican Convention. But, oh pshaw! that's the use of getting the applause, while the other fellow gets the votes.

It is said that several people were almost drowned on the hill one day last week by the water being unexpectedly turned on. They did not recognize the liquid and before their friends could save them, they had a close shave.

One householder telephones down in a panic to a plumber to rush up and fix a water pipe in which there was a leak. Upon reaching the house, the plumber found a small stream trickling from an open tap.

Now that the Boards of Trade had decided upon those great questions, there is nothing for the government or anyone else to do.

A newspaper report says a man was "stabbed in the kitchen." It's easy to tell what part of his anatomy that would be.

A C.P.R. brakeman has been awarded $3,000 for injuries. If the bill is paid like other claims against the C.P.R., the money will only come in time for his heirs.

In Teheran, the other day, they hanged an editor and preacher together. That is about the only time an editor and a preacher pulled together. It was hard on both of them.

Calgary deserves everything they get. Any city that is cute enough to get a paper in a rival town to publish its boost stuff for it, deserves to grow.

Drowned in Banff

Charlie Moir Meets Death in the Baths

Carelessness of Officials

The message that arrived on Sunday announcing the drowning of Charlie Moir at Banff has made sad a large number of young friends in this city.

On Saturday night J. J. Hewitt, J. Reid and C. W. Moir left for Banff intending to spend a few days there and at Calgary before their return. Arriving at Banff at 8.30 a. m., they breakfasted and immediately went in for a bath. Not one of the young men could swim, but they imagined the sulphur baths were shallow and there was no sign or word to warn them of the danger. In a few minutes Moir went down, and although there was help on hand in a very short time, the efforts of two doctors for almost an hour were unsuccessful in bringing the young man around.

The body was shipped to Calgary on Sunday night and went through yesterday going east. The mother of deceased went to Calgary on Sunday night, and Geo. Worthy left to accompany the body east.

Weddings

HUTTS—PEEVER

A pretty wedding took place on Tuesday, June 30, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Spencer, Toronto Street, north, when Miss Helen Peever of this city was united in holy matrimony to Mr. Joseph J. Hutts of Indian Head, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. A. C. Farrell.

The spacious drawing rooms were very attractive with their decorations of sweet peas and fern. After the ceremony about twenty sat down to a daintily prepared and artistically served dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Hutts left on the east bound express amid showers of rice and good wishes.

McLEAN—BEATON

About 500 Orangemen will commemorate the battle of the Boyne in Medicine Hat on the 13th of the month. From Swift Current on the east to Taber on the Crow line, Orangemen will gather to do King William honor.

On Sunday the Orangemen will meet at the lodge and go in procession to the Presbyterian church, where a sermon will be preached by the Rev. J. W. Morrow.

A satisfactory arrangement regarding rates has not yet been reached with the railway company, but this matter, it is hoped, will be settled during the week.

The commissioner, a superintendent, a commissioner and thirty-six men will compose the bodyguard. From "K" division Constable Chalkley of Medicine Hat, and Constable Boylan of Lethbridge, have been chosen to attend. Constable Chalkley left the city on Friday evening on his way east. EYE INJURED BY TORPEDO

Narrow Escape for C.P.R. Brakeman

W. Moore had a very close call one day last week, and the wonder is that he did not lose his eye-sight. He was running on the Crow and at Kingsgate, while transferring his fire box noticed fire coming from it. He opened the box and attempted to put it out and a torpedo exploded, the powder and covering striking him in the eye. He was taken to Cranbrook hospital where it was feared he would lose thesight of one one eye.

The eye, however, rapidly recovering and no further fears are entertained.

Every one who saw the Medicine Hat booth, says it is the best at the Exhibition.

At the Dominion Exhibition Mrs. A. B. Harris secured first for carved tray, any style; and for child's linen frock; and second for crochet work, wool, and crochet work, cotton, Allan and VanCleave took first prize for pair of carriage horses, fifteen hands three inches and under; and third for their yearling Clyde stallion, Fitzroy.

THE CITY FATHERS

The Tax Rate Estimated at 16 Mills

Gas Delinpuents to be Cut Off.

A letter from J. J. Mahaffy accepted the position of city solicitor. Filed.

A. B. LeBlance wrote re garnishee on Vair's account. The clerk had paid the money into court, but the city treasurer was forced to pay it over in the wages. City solicitor said wages could be demanded if under $25. Filed.

Oakes and Everard wrote offering piping to city. City already selling piping. Referred to engineer.

Muir, Jephson and Adams of Calary urged payment of account of $758. Clerk stated that no account had been received. Firm then sent bill and suggested that Purmal, the plaintiff, be not forced to pay costs of appeal. Referred to Finance committee.

The city solicitor stated that the Council was morally bound to pay for the lumber in the grand stand at the athletic grounds, as A. P. Burns, the builder, had not placed lien on it upon assurance of Council that they would pay for it. After some discussion it was decided to lay the matter over until the second meeting so that a larger number could be present, including the Mayor who will be absent from the next meeting.

Report from Chief of Police of 14 arrests, and $1084.75 for licenses. Adopted.

City engineer handed in estimate for new sidewalks. Mayor said work could not be done until money was in sight. Referred to Public Works committee to report on how they thought the money should be raised for this purpose as no provision had been made in the estimates.

Parks and Market committee reported expenditures of $[illegible] in June for [illegible]. Adopted.

Gas committee reported expenditure of $124.93 for repairs of meters and mains. Adopted.

Ald. Baker reported on gas being cut off at John Paul's restaurant; that the owner wanted to pay by instalments. Mayor said he had been called upon by several who had been cut off. A considerable discussion on gas and water ensued and it was reported that some were turning on their own gas after it had been turned off. Ald. Spencer thought the by-law should be enforced or the Council would be forced to give way to a lot of people at every meeting.

Ald. Forster thought the same, also the Mayor, but the latter thought an arrangement should be made in this case. Moved by Alds. Spencer and Forster that instructions be carried out.

Report of water commissioners reported $1182 spent in repairs, leaks pump house, etc., in June. Ald. Baker said the money was spent and there was nothing to do but adopt it. Adopted.

Following accounts recommended:
G. Schmelzer $42.15.
R. E. Walton Co. $58.72.
H. C. Cooper $26.95.
Stewart and Tweed $7.50.
J. A. Conn, $7.80.
T. J. Shepherd $10.50.
T. J. Flenger $8.50.
James Rae $105.14.
James Fleming $73.00.
Chas. Sellens $4.00.
E. M. Cawker $3.70.
J. K. Drinnan $2.50.
S. T. Fawcett $1.60.
G. R. Kennedy $30.00.
Marshall Hardware Co. $1.00.
Quick Job Print $13.00.
News $30.57.

The finance committee brought in a report for the settling of a tax rate. The total expenditure for 1908 is set at $206,701.91, of which $58,754 will have to be raised by direct taxation. The rate therefore will be sixteen mills.

Ald. Forster gave notice of motion re rate of taxation.

Bylaw regarding issue of debentures for $10,000 was taken up and read a third time.

Ald. Tweed read application from Fire Brigade, A. Reid was recommended as new driver by the secretary of the brigade. Ald. Baker thought the Council should appoint the men and this was not allowing the council to do anything. Ald. Forster thought the letters should be referred to the fire water and light committee and should not have been given to the fire chief. Letters referred to committee with power to act.

Adjourned to next Monday night.

Irvine.

The past week has seen several small showers, but to put a good aspect on crops more rain is needed. Several sheafs of spring wheat have been brought into town the majority measure over 30 inches in height, the most of this is grown on Summer Fallow.

The Golden West hotel is very near completion, and we will when completed, have one of the finest hotels along the line, not omitting the line, exquisite finish that has been placed in the inside of all the rooms.

Several parties have of late been enquiring as to the values and prices of lands in this vicinity, and the real estate men report that if good crops are forthcoming that quite a quantity of land will be sold to incoming farmers this fall.

Now that Messrs. Fred. Weiss and Son own and control both stores (which it is understood will be run as one store in the very near future) Fred. Weiss and Son closing their old stand down to put a stock of furniture in and running same as a furniture store only), the fine alterations that are being made in the old Weiss and Company store will, when completed, give the new firm ample room to transact their large business in the future.

What about Le Grande hotel at Walsh.

The Alberta Pacific Elevator Company have closed down their elevator here for the summer. The shortness of the incoming grain has compelled them to suspend until the crops come in this fall.

It is understood that a new livery barn will soon be opened in the town the report of which is not yet confirmed.

According to official reports of the progress of the Irvine Agricultural Society obtained from some of the fficers of same, Irvine is to have one of the finest fall fairs that has ever been held west of the Great Lakes (of course taking into consideration the size of Irvine and its surrounding country). While bailing wool at the Sarnia Ranching Co. last week, Lorne Hughes had the misfortune to have his leg broken. Dr. Smith had him removed to Medicine Hat hospital, and we understand the patient is getting along very nicely.

It is said that the License Act is a model of strictness—but there's one part of it, which, to say the least, needs a thorough revision, and that is the enforcement portion. Maybe there is an inspector and then again, maybe there's not. Judging from appearances the latter is most probable. Or if there be one, he is not dead, only sleeping.

Major Cockburn returned on Friday from Medicine Hat and received a cordial welcome from his thourough bred fox hound.

Dipping has finished for the second time at the Stephenson place.

Arthur Trent had a very valuable horse killed by lightning on the 30th inst.

There is a rumor that Chief Detective Foy of the C.P.R. paid the town a visit last week under the guise of a well contractor.

Eagle Butte

Who said "crops"? We think we may congratulate ourselves that we have some of the finest looking crops in the province. Experimental farming is quite superfluous in this district.

The recent visit of Archdeacon Harding of Indian Head proved very successful from every point of view. The Archdeacon, a total stranger to almost all of us on his arrival, has gone away leaving behind him many firm friends. The essence of geniality in his manner and every day demeanor, and at the same time a devout and thorough churchman, he has won for himself the respect and admiration of all with whom he came in contact. His example both in and out of church, is one which we could not do better than follow. Archdeacon Harding, at all times a busy man was especially so during his all too short stay amongst us. On the 27th the ardour which he displayed at the preliminary practice at St. Margaret's church was by no means diminished by the strenuous efforts of the rain, as was that of the chorister who was literally "soaked to the skin," to whom all sympathy.

The services on the 28th were of a simple and therefore beautiful character. The morning celebration of the Holy Eucharist was well attended and the celebrant in the person of the Archdeacon preached an eloquent sermon on the reasons of attending at the most sacred and important of all services. The evensong at half past three was of a very bright nature and the enterprising choir deserve all congratulations or the very creditable way in which they rendered the beautiful music of the Festal services and Bunnett's Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in F. The chanting of the Psalms was an innovation which we hope will not be discontinued. It is probably not often the lot of an Archdeacon to perform the ceremony of opening a church, and therefore of selecting a suitable text, and the way in which the "Bishop's deputy" dealt with a portion of the fifteenth Psalm was in itself a study.

Mr. A. B. Hodges has proved himself a master builder and all credit is due to him for the splendid edifice which he has "built."

The untiring energy of Mr. Haviland is at last crowned with success, but we fear that the strain and responsibility of the position in which he found himself latterly proved almost too much for his already overwrought brain. However there's a silver lining to every cloud and our appy friend is covered with glory. "For this relief much thanks."

Bowell.

Messrs. Crawford and Mowat of Stratheona were in Bowell the 1st of the week on business connected with the Golvile ranch having purchased said ranch, their intention is to go in for an extensive horse ranch.

E. M. P. Butler is daily expecting Mrs. Butler from England.

Messrs. Oleson and Bell are erecting a large frame house on E. Oleson's homestead.

Mrs. Woolven seems to be doing a rushing livery business.

Our friends, the R.N.W.M.P. have been paying numerous visits to Bowell lately. What is it, the Milwaukee beer they are after or the Bowell ladies.

Messrs. Fletcher, Crawford and Mowat were thinking of returning on the 3rd and loading a car of horses.

FIRE BRIGADE VS. CITY

The game on Tuesday night between the Fire Brigade and City was a fair sample of ball. T. Finlay for the Fire Brigade did excellent work. The score.

C. P. R. VS. CITY

The leaders beat the tail enders on the morning of July 1 by 17—8, and could have made the difference greater. Dever pitched good ball for the city but had poor support, the City being no use at the bat as well. F. Pingle's three-bagger was a long right corner drive. Andrews had the City at his mercy, allowing only one hit to the sixth when he let up. All the C.P.R. boys hit as usual, all the league pitchers looking pretty much alike to them. Their fielding, too, was fine, the errors not being disastrous.

Gilroy handled the indicator and gave good satisfaction at both the morning and evening games. Fleming watched the bases without getting into difficulties.

The C.P.R. took advantage of the game to practice bunting.

Matheson went to bat in the seventh after he had finished his bat in the previous innings before the third man was out. The score:

BACHELORS VS. FIRE BRIGADE.

The game on the evening of Dominion Day between the Bachelors and the Fire Brigade was one of the best of the season. Both teams played without going badly to pieces, and that is a lot, Gilroy and Douglas umpired to the accompaniment of a lot of good-natured banter from the grand stand. Douglas was kept revived by copious supplies of cold water. Fairman was hit rather hard and walked his first men of the season. T. Finlay replaced him in the eighth. Switzer's home run was a big drive to right. There were five two-baggers and a three-bagger in addition. The score:

C.P.R. VS. CARON.

That the C.P.R. can play ball was well demonstrated on Friday night when they defeated Caron, Bask., a team that has had its own way in Saskatchewan by a score of 8 to 4.

The game was a rattling good one the Caron boys fighting every inch and playing almost errorless ball. Ardell was too much for them, giving them only 5 scattered hits and striking out seven men, besides a half dozen more which are credited catcher to 1st base. Caron's pitcher was a youngster who had a southpaw that could slant them over to the tune of striking out nine of the hard hitting C.P.R. And he was handled by the best playing catcher that has come to the city this year. The batting of the visitors was their weakest point, their fielding and baserunning being good, and their team work excelling by a great deal anything presented by local teams. They are a quiet, gentlemanly lot of players and can make most of them hustle.

The local boys hit well and ran bases to perfection and had only 4 errors of which three were forgivable. Snowden's home run from the first ball pitched rather took the heart out of the visitors for an innings. Later Ardell made a circle of the bases on a lost ball. Lemieux secured three hits from 4 times at bat, one of them a three-bagger. A wild pitch was directly responsible for one of the Caron runs and a bad throw of Ardell's to second brought in two more. Another wild pitch advanced the fourth run to third from which he scored. Apart from the home runs, only 2 of the C.P.R. runs were earned. The teams:

Caron—McDowell 2b., Thomas 1b, Ward c.f. s.s., Thorsen l.f., Hawthorne, c., Ingalls s.s., l.f., J. Thompson 3b., Martin p. W. Thompson, r.f.

The Maple Creek Signal blames the defeat of the Maple Creek team entirely on Gilroy, O'Hara, the C.P.R manager says he will give the Maple Creek boys another game at Irvine or Coleridge for the gate receipts.

By the way those Maple Creek fellows must be poor sports. They put up the same cry last winter in hockey. Caron beat them 9 to 8 and the C.P.R. beat Caron easily 8 to 4. Looks as if the C.P.R. weren't even drawn out by Maple Creek.

The C.P.R. baseball team has been deprived of the pleasure of another scalp. On Saturday morning at 4.30 they reached Calgary to play a C.P. R. team there. After being forced to walk the streets all night on account of the crowd, "Mike" got word that the game would be at 4 p.m. In the afternoon they went to the grounds to see a game between the Y.M.C.A.'S and Liberals, which was to commence at 2.30. At 3.45 the first ball was thrown and at 5.30 the boys were told there could be no game as the players had to go to work. Sothe boys had their trip for nothing. "Mike" has a few things to say, but they are not for print.

The Medicine Hat intermediate lacrosse team won from Maple Creek here yesterday afternoon, by a score of 6 to 5.

Editor of The Times:

May I use your valuable paper to ask how long we, on the hills, are to be kept without water. We pay high rents, high water rates, and why should we pay for what we do not get? We have been patient for six or eight weeks; but now we feel something should be done. Why should we during this intense heat have to drink water that has been drawn off for hours, or worst still drink from the dirty wagons that are sent to us? If the whole city suffered alike we would not mind so much, but when we look out in the morning and see our neighbors at the foot of the hill needlessly wasting the water, we turn our taps to find no water until perhaps nine or ten a.m. Then again, if we wish to take a bath, we must get up at midnight while our brethren at the foot of the hill saturate their lawns. Now why not cut off flawn service in the morning until the trouble is past? Why should we starve for a drink of cold water while it is needlessly wasted? Who is responsible for this mismanagement; and how long will it continue? Why should one halfthe city have double lawn service, while the other half never knows from one minute to the other whether the water is on or off? I am a wife and mother who has only been out twice in three weeks because I am kept so busy filling tubs each day so as to have enough water to last us until the water is on again. Then when the children come in they mustdrink ice water or luke-warm water that has stood around for hours. I hope I have not said too much, but I really cannot find words strong enough in the English language to express what I feel on this subject.

Yours respectfully,

A WEARY HOUSEKEEPER.

The Southern Alberta Land Company.

General Meeting in London, June 6th

(CANADA.)

Mr. A. M. Grenfell presided at the first ordinary general meeting of the Southern Alberta Land Company, Limited, which was held at Salisbury House, London, E.C., on Friday, June 5.

The Secretary (Mr. W. Challis, F.C.I.S.) having read the notice convening the meeting and the auditors' report,

The Chairman said: I regret to say that our chairman, Sir Ronald Lane has not been able to take the chair to-day, and especially sorry at the reason for it. By the death of General Sir Redvers Buller he has lost not only a lifelong friend but a gallant comrade. Together they faced the dangers and hardships of the early struggle in South Africa and Egypt, and, having served together through sunshine and storm, General Lane was especially anxious to pay the last honour to his old friend today. I told him I was certain the shareholders would quite appreciate his action, and that his absence today would be understood. (Hear, hear.) Before explaining the balance sheet I have to apologize for the delay in holding our meeting, but as this is our first balance-sheet, several items had to be referred to Canada before being finally adjusted, and considerable time given before the exact form of accounts was agreed upon. Another reason why we delayed was the desire to have the managing director (Mr. McGregor) present at our meeting. I am glad to say Mr. McGregor is here today, and I will ask him to give an account of our property and its prospects. Mr. McGregor's presence is urgently needed in Canada; so we decided not to postpone our meeting till after Whitsuntide, as he is anxious to sail tomorrow. No one knows more about the West of Canada than Mr. McGregor, and there are few men more capable of giving you an idea as to the greatpo tential value of lands, and especially irrigated lands, in Western Canada. I will ask you to turn to the balance-sheet, and will notice that our capital account now stands at £400,000 in shares of £1 each, less 15,000 shares which remained unissued at December 31, 1907. These had been retained from the vendors subject to certain conditions of sale being completed, and as everything has now been completed the shares have been issued, and our issued capital stands at £400,000. We have sundry creditors £4,000—this is mostly salaries and wages accrued but not paid at the date of the balance-sheet—and have an estimated, or, rather, contingent liability, in respect of 380,000 acres of land, of £221,000, which item I will now explain. The clause under the indenture between this company and the Government provides that the cost of works to be erected and established under the provisions of the North-West Irrigation Act, 1898 to irrigate the said tract, as approved by the Superintendent of Irrigation, shall be credited on account of the purchase money of the total number of acres of lands sold and purchased, but not so as to exceed an amount equal to $2 per acre of such total number of acres, that the payment of the purchase money be made in six equal annual instalments the first payment to become due on the first day of July, 1910.

A Contingent Liability

From this you will see that we have to pay $9 per acre on 380,000 acres, which, in round figures, amounts to $1,140,000 but that the Government will credit us with any amount, up to $2 per acre, which we shall expend on the estate for irrigation purposes. This will amount to $760,000, leaving a balance of $380,000, or £75,000 due to the Government, spread over five yearly instalments, the first of which is payable in 1910. As we have ample funds in hand, and have every intention of thoroughly developing these lands, I hope this explanation will be sufficient to show yoy that the item of £221,000 which appears in the balance-sheet is a contingent liability, and is not only an item which will gradually disappear till it is reduced to the minimum of about £75,000, but that it is an item which we can easily look after. You will notice that the whole of the London office and general expenses, directors' fees, etc., have been more than covered by interest on money lent. On the other side of the account the cost of property as defined in the prospectus stands at £300,000. Some shareholders have already raised the point with me, and say that this does not make the position quite clear, as £300,000 does not represent the cost of the property—that is to say, the whole of the property is not paid for; but, as I explained to you a few moments ago, the net cost of this property to us will probably be a further £75,000; so that, having expended our money on irrigation (and provided that we sold no land before 1916, the date when the debt of the Government had to be paid off, which I think you will agree with me is putting forward an impossible case), the cost of your property would be about £375,000, and for this you would have 380,000 acres of land, the greater part of which would be irrigated land, at a cost of about $6 an acre. This figure is sufficiently low to show you the great possibilities of profit that there are to this company. We have transferred to a separate account £80,000, being the stock and equipment of the Grand Forks Cattle Company. To this £80,000 we have added a sum of £89000, which represents further purchases of cattle, wages, expenses, etc., altogether making an item of £169,000. All these further purchases of cattle have been resold at a profit; but, owing to the severe winter of 1906-7, the losses among the cattle originally taken over were heavy, and the inventory at December 31 last showed a depreciation of £28,000 on the original purchase from the Grand Forks Cattle Company. I think it would be better if I deferred further explanation of this heading until I have concluded my remarks on the other items of the balance-sheet.

Results of the Bad Weather.

You will see that as regards cash and liquid assets our company is in an especially strong position. We have £136,000 made up of bills receivable and sundry debtors for stock sold (£14,000), cash on loan and deposit amounting to £71,000, and cattle and horses £51,000. This must be considered satisfactory, as we have spent £11,000 on irrigation and further equipments and improvements. As you know, we purchased the Grand Forks Cattle Company—lock, stock, and barrel—included amongst its assets being 10,000 acres [illegible] for some of which we have been offered $20 an acre), a valuable lease of further lands, and a head of cattle, horses, etc.

The quips and cranings of our We purchase these cattle in September, 1906, but unfortunately, the winter following proved the worst that Western Canada has experienced in the memory of man. Cattle died by thousands, and though part of our breeding stock was housed, and therefore well looked after, and the losses small, the range cattle died in great numbers—in some parts of the country 70 per cent. and 80 per cent. of the cattle were destroyed. We suffered to the extent of about 60 per cent., but this 60 per cent. was further reduced owing to our having made some good sales of horses and our having realised satisfactory prices for some of our cattle through a contract we have for shipping beef to certain railway contractors. Mr. McGregor reports, however, that he is now receiving information as regards cattle belonging to the company that strayed during the winter of 1906-7, and these, when collected, will of course still further reduce the losses. You will see from our report that Mr. McGregor is confident that this loss will be more than made good, and inasmuch as last winter was one of the best known for twenty years in Canada, we may expect that a great part of the loss has been already made up by the natural increase and by the good prices ruling In any case, our real business is that of a land and irrigation company, and it is our intention to realise all the cattle, horses, etc., as and when favorable opportunities occur; but we are in no hurry, and can be pretty sure of securing good prices. I must apologize for the length of my explanation; but as it is our first balance-sheet, I wished to make the position quite clear, and I hope that I have succeeded in doing so. You may have noticed that some comment was made in Canada on the favorable terms granted to us; but I think that people in Canada have hardly appreciated the magnitude of the work we have undertaken; neither did they appreciate the fact that our success though it may mean large profits for our shareholders, means much larger profits for Canada, and especially for the Province of Alberta. In according us fair and generous terms, the Government have in my opinion shown both foresight and business ability; at any rate, they have got us to put our shoulder to the wheel, and we may expect great and interesting developements before us.

The Development of the Irrigation Project.

As regards the development of our estate, shareholders may be disappointed that our progress has been so slow, but from my knowledge of irrigation generally I know it is very easy to make slight mistakes at the beginning, and such mistakes, perhaps amounting to an error, in surveying, of only a few feet, may mean such large penalties that your board have adopted the most difficult, but I am sure the safest and wisest policy in going slow and sure at the beginning, and in having all schemes and reports most carefully checked up. Mr. McGregor selected Mr. Grace, who has already made a great reputation as an irrigation engineer in Western America and in Canada, especially at the Alberta Irrigation Company's works, and I may say that the patience and thoroughness shown byboth Mr. McGregor and Mr. Grace have certainly won our confidence, and I am sure will equally win yours. It would have been much easier for them to have adopted one of the many schemes reported feasible and made a hurried start. Instead of this, however, as soon as they had more or less decided on a scheme, they set out to see if they could not improve on it, with the result that, though you have had to show patience (and on behalf of the board I must thank the shareholders for the patiencethey have shown), you may feel satisfied that the scheme at present before us is a great improvement on those originally considered, and one which should prove of great value to the company. After all, gentlemen, a great undertaking like this cannot be unduly hurried. We have a vast estate, situated in a district which which probably enjoys the best climate in Canada. We know that the land is extremely fertile, and that with irrigation it will give extraordinary results and command very great prices. When I say we know the land is fertile it is because, as Mr. McGregor will tell you, the company has been running an experimental farm with great success. We shall not need to tell farmers we think this or that can be done; we can show them the results that have actually been accomplished. There is no conjuring trick required to irrigatethese lands; it is merely a question of how much it will cost to put water on them, and the cheaper we can do it the greater will be our profit. Messrs. McGregor and Grace were therefore fully justified, in our opinion, in making quite certain of the cost, etc., before they embarked on the expenditure of the necessary sum. The size of our estate will probably surprise some shareholders. It is practically 600 square miles—more than twice the size of the whole county of Middlesex and nearly as large as the whole of Surrey. If you proposed to irrigate the county of Surrey the magnitude of your work would probably rather alarm you, and cause you to hesitate until you were quite certain, not merely that you had solved the problem, but that you had found thebest solution. Though our estate in Southern Alberta estate has practically not one. Yet, once it is irrigated, it can only be a question of time when hundreds and thousands will be settled on these lands, and towns and industries will spring up.

You will see from the homestead maps recently published that all the land adjoining ours has now been taken up by settlers. Natural gas and fair coal in fair quantities have been found on our property, and a fine, great river flows through our land, which is situated most favorably, not only for attracting incoming Americans, but also as a distributing centre for produce, both east and west, and probably north and south. I will not detain you longer, as Mr. McGregor can tell you about your prospects far better than I can. He will no doubt tell you about the satisfactory experiments made in sugar beets, and of the big price paid for Canadian Pacific irrigated lands. I think I am right in saying that irrigated lands under any good canal system in the Western States of America command a figure of from $40 to $200 an acre.

The Stability of Canadian Credit.

Just one more word about Canada before I conclude. The stability of Canadian credit institutions during the startling financial collapse in the United States, towards the close of 1907, is acknowledged to have been the highest possible tribute to the excellence and soundness of the monetary and banking system of the Dominion, no less than to the courage and foresight of the nation's financial guides. Like other nations, Canadians had been doing too large a business for the cash capital. For months in advance of the crisis the banks shortened sail, and prepared for trouble: land and mining speculation was checked, ambitious prospects postponed, overtrading discouraged, and reserves strengthened. When, therefore, the storm broke, no bank in Canada found itself unable to provide every legitimate accommodation for its customers. The greatest credit is due to Mr. Clouston and all Canadian banks. Thanks to their action, Canada has weathered the storm and has emerged little the worse; in fact, I think I may say that Canadian credit stands higher today than it has ever been. The crop exports received from all parts of Eastern and Western Canada are most encouraging, and, although it may be a little early to speak, experts expect that Canada is in for a record crop, and, in fact, everything points to a bumper harvest, and as the agricultural industry is the basis on which Canadian prosperity rests, a big crop means not only a large increase in seeding for the following year, but that the hub of industrial Canada will continue undisturbed. If it had not been for these wide precautions, the impetus of good crops would have been used up to make up the losses, whereas the whole weight of the impetus is available to impel Canada along the road of national greatness, which is here true destiny. Gentlemen, I have much gratification in asking you to adopt the report and balance-sheet, and have great pleasure in introducing Mr. McGregor to you. I have always told you that few men know the West as Mr. McGregor knows it. He has travelled from one end of America to another, and in spite of all he has seen, he has come back to Alberta, and we may congratulate ourselves that we have him to look after our interests. (Hear ,hear.) I will therefore ask Mr. McGreggor to second the resolution and after he has spoken I shall be happy to answer any questions.

The Company's Pumping Project

Mr. James D. McGregor, the managing director of the company in Canada, in seconding the adoption of the report, referred to the work which had been done on behalf of the company in Canada. He said: "The original scheme of irrigation had to be changed as we found the cost of the canal which had to be made would, on account of thecourse of the river, the height of the banks and many creeks flowing into it, be very much greater than the company could afford. The management then decided to investigate a pumping scheme which had been carried on in a number of other countries and particularly in Hawaii. After getting all the information they could the directors decided that the scheme was an improvement upon the earlier proposition and would cost much less. When I came to England I found I had come to the right place to obtain pumps, for I can get them here at a cost of two-thirds of that estimated when we were discussing the scheme. The proposition now isto divide the land into two blocks for easier irrigation. To find out whether this could be done a contour survey had to be made which took all last summer. This, it was found, could be done if the company can exchange a part of its property for a tract that will be easier to irrigate than that at present held. Negotiations to this end are proceeding with the Government.

"The company's agents have completed their survey and the Government's Irrigation Commissioner has just finished his trip over the property, undertaken to examine their surveys. When he (Mr. McGregor) returned to Canada he hoped to have the matter fixed up in a week or so. The land the company would thus obtain was exactly similar to that which they now held, but was superior in location for their purposes. The company was now in a much better position than a year ago, and the cause of the delay in the beginning of operation was explained. They could not order machinery before because they did not know whether they would require one or two plants. Besides, they were now doing the work for less money.

Coming to the consideration of the plant to be installed, Mr. McGregor pointed out that the water would be raised 220 feet above the river into areservoir which would hold a billion cubic feet of water. Another reservoir capable of holding three billion cubic feet of water also would be employed, and by pumping water for nine months of the year the company would be able to fulfil their contracts. In answer to a question made at this point Mr. McGregor said that the reservoirs in question were partly natural, but would need an expenditure of from $40,000 to $50,000 to make them capable of holding the amount of water he had indicated. He then went on to show how the company's ditches and canals would be disposed to serve the country under irrigation.

Continuing Mr. McGregor pointed out that if they had done anything hurriedly in connection with this matter they would have made a big mistake. As it now was, they would have water on the land in six months. When the company had spent $100,000 upon the development of their land they could, by their contract with the Government take up a title to 33,000 acres, which would then be ready for sale. He did not, however, suppose that this would be the course adopted, because it was not good policy so to do. The plan adopted with regard to the selling of the landswould be that usually followed in the west.

Real estate companies there confined themselves to dealing in one kind of land and the Southern Alberta Land Company would sell its land to one of these companieswhich dealt in irrigated lands. By this means some 50,000 acres might be disposed of at once, and with two or three such deals in a year the company would be doing considerable business. By this means the company did not sell all its good land at once, as the purchasing companies took the tracts as they came, including the good with the bad.

The Settlement of the District.

As to the settlement of the district around the company's lands, Mr. McGregor pointed out that every quarter section available for settlement had been taken up, and a good little town had sprung up within two miles of the home ranch. A large number of the immigrants came from the Western States and the company's lands were in the line to catch them. Last year, continued the speaker, he had received from a member of the company a few sugar beet seeds for the purpose of giving them a trial. He sowed the seeds and some of the beets were sent to Germany to be analysed, with the result that they were found to contain twenty per cent. of sugar. Sixteen per cent. was considered very high, and the large amount of saccharine matter found in the Southern Alberta beet was due to the long hours of sunshine enjoyed in the district. A beet sugar factory already existed some fifty miles from the company's lands, and it is hoped that shortly a factory will be erected on the company's property.

Mr. Riekmann,a shareholder, commenting upon the company's prospects, said that he had gone to the meeting to grumble at the delay which seemed to have taken place in beginning the work of the company, but he saw that the delay had been for the best.

A Shareholder's Appreciation.

Mr. W. Illingworth said he was one of the few shareholders, he thought, who had spent some time on the property, and therefore he considered it might not be out of place to tell those present what he thought of it. He held no brief for the company, and until he went out to Canada, last summer, his [illegible] hold ing in it was nil; but he [illegible] pressed with the prospects in the country, and most particularly with this property, that he had since not only taken up a considerable holding himself, but had also strongly recommended the shares to his friends some of whom had acquired very large interests. He spent several days actually on the company's ground. Mr. McGregor driving him over a portion of the estate. It was a very difficult thing for one like himself to form any conception what over of the vastness of the tract of land that the Southern Alberta Land Company had acquired. They could all, he thought, appreciate what 400 acres meant; but when onecame to think af almost 400,000 it was a very different matter. The land, to the ordinary visitor, was wonderful; one could be for weeks on virgin soil, in many parts of which they could drive a plow for miles without a stick or stone.

A Tribute to the Management.

Another point which he visited particularly to emphasize was the thorough and excellent manner in which the company's business was conducted. One had no conception of the amount of time and work that this demanded. Mr. McGregor, he knew, worked day and night in the company's interest. With regard to the company's irrigation engineer (Mr. Arthur Grace) he had made very careful inquiries, and in the judgment of some of the best-informed men, they had secured a first-class gentleman for their work, and one of the best in his profession. No man could do more work than he had man could do more work than he had done, and his interests were solely centred in the Southern Alberta Company's propositions; so much so that if he succeeded in the work he had in hand—and succeed he would—his name as an irrigation engineer would be known throughout the world. With regard to the fertility of the land, there was no guessing as to what could be done. Visitors were simply driven round the home farm, and without any further explanation could see for themselves what the unirrigated land could produce, and was producing. He was greatly astonished when he saw what was being done. He was told—and he had since verified the statement—that for some portions of the property $20 an acre had already been bid and refused, the directors knowing now much more valuable the property would become in the course of a year or two. He saw unirrigated land adjoining the property which in 1906 changed hands at from $5 to $7 an acre, selling in the latter half of 1907 at from $12 upwards an acre, and gwellings and farmhouses were now springing up in every direction where in 1906 not a single inhabitant was to be seen. In conclusion he wished to say to his fellow-shareholders that he was convinced they would realise a great profit out of this property, which was, without the shadow of a doubt one of the finest in Canada, and as long as the Dominion lasted they might take it that there would never be another company with the same possibilities as the one in which they were now so all interested.

Probable Sale Price of the Lands.

Mr. McGregor in answer to some questions which had been put, said that, as far as could be estimated, the price of the lands when sold would be about $35 an acre. The irrigated lands edjoining the company's property were being sold at from $20 to $40 an acre, and he had hegrd that last summer one company had withdrawn its land at that price, evidently in the hope of obtaining higher prices at a later date. He did not think that the $2 an acre granted by the government to cover the cost of irrigation, would be exceeded. With regard to the company's rights over the canals after the lands were sold, he said, that the company could demand $1.50 an acre yearly for the water rights, but they were considering the step of selling the lands and water-rights outright. It was impossible to irrigate all the land, but, in order to fulfill their contract with the Government they had to irrigate 25 per cent.

Lord Hindlip, who had also visited the property of the company, then spoke of the excellent prospectswhich lay before the shareholders. He added that he considered the directors were right in not rushing the sales, as if they had sold last autumn when the price had fallen a loss would have resulted. He thought Mr. McGregor was correct in estimating the price of the land per acre at about $35, as some of it might go for $5 and other parts rise as high as $100.

The report and accounts were adopted unanimously:

Mr. A. E. Hitchcock proposed that Messrs. Fred Baynes, Arthur M. Grenfell, W. H. Ellice and G. S. St. Aubyn be re-elected directors of the company. Mr. James D. McGregor seconded the resolution, which was passed.

Messrs. Price, Waterhouse and Co. were re-elected auditors.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the meeting.

The Crooked Politician

The serio-comic moralizing of the Liberal press on the continual exposure of personal graft among the Liberal favorites is well represented in the following from the Cranbrook Herald:

"Martin Burrell, in a recent speech, put up a great plea to the public to keep personal abuse out of politics. It is all very proper for judicious criticisms to be indulged in on public matters when it is in the interests of the general weal, but the personal abuse of the individual seems to be the favorite sort of campaign rather than fair and square criticism. Political differences should be, after all, simply differences in opinion upon public questions. When politics get to a point where one breaks friendship with his fellow man it is time to call a halt. The country, unfortunately, is full of narrow, bigoted men, who think there is nothing good except on their own side and that their opponents are all crooks and thieves. Bahish the thought. There are good, true and honest men on both sides of the political fence."

The exposures which have been made almost every day in the present and last sessions of the House by the Opposition are characterised by the Liberal press as "personal abuse."

A middleman pockets a profit of a few thousand per cent and expressed dissatisfaction as "personal abuse."

A member secures a few bridges, a couple of wharves where they are needed as much as coal in Medicine Hat, and remarke upon it are "personal abuse."

A Cabinet Minister, in whom is vested the control of millions, and of the government of the country, acts the part of rake and a profligate, and objection is "personal abuse."

Naturally the Liberal party resents the great work the Opposition is performing in bringing to light the schemes whereby the farmer, the merchant, the general taxpayer is handing over good money to purchase yachts and summer houses for the favorites, or whereby the few are quietly cornering all the gifts in the power of the Government. These exposures are meaning the loss of the country to the Liberal party, and the few "hide-bounds" and those who profit look on the exposures as disastrous to them.

They realize there is little defence for many of these exposures and endeavor to turn them off by moralizing on "personal abuse."

To defend the publicity of graft roquires no defence, as will appear at first glance. To some it may be irrelevant that an Emmerson or a Sir Frederick Borden commits acts of absolute indecency or makes a scandal of himself.

When an employer engages an employee, is it not most important that the moral character of the latter be enquired into, especially where great power and authority, where the control of large sums of money are to be vested in that employee? Would any man employ another for a position of responsibility when he discovered that the applicant was a moral degenerate, a thief, a rake?

Can it be possible that the Liberals consider that enquiry should not be made into the character of Cabinet Ministers—men whose characters must show in their work? Would any man consider it good for the country to place millions of money, the laws, the country's gifts, in the hands of men found guilty of the most despicable of acts?

Is it patriotic to hold in such important positions men who are a disgrace to themselves, men without morals, men who cannot be an honor to the country?

Is it not, then, the duty of any citizen to expose the disreputable acts of men in authority, and to endeavor by every means to wrest from them the power, which they can use to such undesirable ends?

EDITORIAL NOTES

The government has done well in deporting a spendthrift Englishman who has spent $4,000 in riotous living in a few months. That class of citizen is less desirable than the emigrant without money, but who is willing to work.

The correspondents for the Winnipeg Free Press and Telegram have given the city one of their weekly "knocks." In describing the Red Cliff Brick Company fire, they both say: "building operations in the city will be at a standstill for several months." Not only is the statement utterly false, but what end can be gained by saying that the city cannot advance for several months is difficult to see, even if "copy" only were desired, Medicine Hat has three other brick yards in active operation, and more than 60,000 brick a day can be supplied at their full capacity. As far as outward appearances go, building operations will go on just the same as ever, but Canada now thinks Medicine Hat is crippled and out of the running for several months.

It would be well if Medicine Hat could be a censor on such yarns,

All over the West the tax rate will be higher this year than last. This is rendered necessary by the low price for debentures, the big works commenced last year and the rapidly growing population without corresponding increase in land values since money became tighter. Edmonton, whose rate last year was 13 1-3 mills, will this year be 14½.

Saskatoon is proud of its railway pay roll of $28,000, most of which is spent for construction work, what would they say if they had Medicine Hat's pay roll of $70,000, when the full complement of men is engaged.

In Wales the more extensive use of the lash as punishment for crimes of violence has put an end to most of the outrages. In Canada, judges are giving the same treatment a trial, and with a further application of the punishment there will be fewer of a certain class of scoundrels.

Ald. Laker's suggestions to have one pump thoroughly overhauled and a good man appointed to look after them are good ones. The pump is no use as it is, except in spasms. The city might as well take the chances of little water for a few days, as to take chances for the next six weeks.

The fall wheat being raised this year in this district is going to demonstrate the folly of the men who knew it couldn't be raised but were unwilling to give it a chance. Our spring wheat beats the world; our fall wheat will do the same. Watch.

The Language of the Fan.

(Donald Dixie in Saturday Night.)

At a crisis of the game, then, with the home team fighting doggedly to overcome a lead of three runs, hear the voice of such a Fan as the visitors come to bat in the eighth. "Our" pitcher has "cut the plate" with each of his allowed five practice balls. The signals are working well. He seems to have everything". His "salary whip" is "there with the slants." The batter's up. Hearken ye, now, to the murmur of the Fan; a murmur likely audible, if the wind be right, at King and Yonge:

The Umpire—"Sss-turr-IKE."

The Fan—"P-H-A-T-'S the way, ThataBOY Bill. He can't see 'em. He don't know where you're standin' kid. Twist it round his face, Bill—"

Umpire—"Baw-WULL tuu-u-hh."

The Fan—"Why hello, Umps! When did yoy get here? Too bad about your poor eyes! Never mind Bill, that's just merely two. Two and one. Two and one, take y'time. T-a-k-e y'time. Slow him down, Jerry—WORK hard, All a' time a-workin' hard. ALLatime. GET this boob—"

The Umpire—"Str-rr-ike TUH."

The Fan—"Oh, kina' bad, hey? Kinda' wretched, what? That was a slow one, too. Just loh 'em up, kid—he wouldn't be here if he didn't need the money. Let him hit it just to show your heart's in the right place—"

The Umpire—"Ssssss-turr-ike thrrr-eeeeeee."

The Fan—"Wow-wow-wow-wow, Bill. THAT'S flingin' 'em some. That's gettin' 'em over. There's one death in the family. Here's another cripple. Work hard. Get this dope-chewer."

And now in the interests of comparative psychology and as study in the vocables of human emotion—whatever that is—listen (as, forsooth, you shall not avoid listening, being among those present) to the Fan when "our" team comes to bat. Then can we better appreciate the nice exactitude of that frayed bromidiom which declares that "it is all in the point of view." It is indeed. Your ears, please:

"HERE'S the lamming kid. Here's the boy that's got the 400 mark. Watch this lad, you near-winners. Get'tattim, Larry. YOU can do it. Show him where the fence is broken, bud. Hit a mile. Lose it, Lar—"

The umpire—"Starr-rIKE."

The Fan—"W-H-A-A-A-Y? Why, you—Oh, well! The blind hath to catch a living somehow, I s'pose. It wasn't over two feet outside the plate, anyway. NEVER mind, Larry. That's only one. Make 'm puttit-over. Wait for a good one—"

The Umpire—"Baw-willl wan."

The Fan—"Nice EYE, Larry. You got the Indian sign on that hasbeen He can's FIND the plate. Break it up kid—show him you can do-it—show—"

The Umpire—"Bawww-llll tu-u-uu-uh."

The Fan—"THATS the gamoosh kid THAT'S the eye—here's where you trudge, bo—stay with it. He won't letchoo hit it. (To the opposing pitcher): Go-wing UP? GO-wing up?"

Many players have said they are affectly greatly, at times, by the coaching of such Fans as this one; and certainly a team visibly "gingers up" when a few dozen such noise-makers are lungfully working for its success. The Fan is keenly partisan as a matter of course; but he is, also, keenly fair; and clever work by a player on the "other" side never fails to evoke his hearty plaudit, although a moment before he may have been objurgating that player with every weapon his tongue could wield.

Let us say now, that "Larry" abetted by the Fan, hits the next ball pitched for a clean-cut single dropped just out of the shortstop's reach—the sort of hit styled a "Texas Leaguerer." Perched on first base, his mentor in the grand stand turns a leaf in his First Aid to Coachers, and, in raucous tones he sounds the gamut from well-judged advice to wird yowlings intended, primarily, to "rattle" or dismay the opponents Our Fan's remarks now take this turn:

"(To the runner.) Take a lead now—git AWAY off—he dassent throw it—gitoffgitoffgitOFF—GO—WAN D-O-W-N. (To the pitcher) Why donchu sling it, you scream? Back to the lots for yours. Go on, try to nail him—we'll throw it back to you from the bleachers. (To the runner). Get away with his arm now, kid— that backstop can't throw out of the infield. Get on your toes—get flossy—gowan—goWAN—G-O- WAN. Now s-l-i-d-e!—slide, you ice-wagon!—S-L-I-D-E! (To the umpire). Uh, get up it's time for breakfast. Out? He wasn't out by a city block, Aw-ww, forGET it, (To himself, as one dully resigned to the unkind buffets of an unjust Fate). Gee, I s'pose we c-a-n beat ten men, if we have to let Umps play with the other team;"

You are to know, commisserated reader, that this is delivered without drawing a breath—or sounds so. Punctuate it with those thrilling roars of approval which greet a good play, those snarling gasps of disgust that herald an incident deserving derision; multiply it by the kindred continuous comments of other ardent vocalists encouraging or deltering the players; set your stage with a lush green field, neatly barbered, traversed by the yellow base-paths for your "dramatis personae" eighteen clean-limbed, alert, vimful, athletes, highly skilled in this earnest pastime; frame the whole with the thronged faces of eager thousands intent upon this modern gladiatorial scene; study, then, the direct vividity of the Fan's speech.

And isn't there something virile, potent, enlivening, in this Language of the Fan?

TELEPHONES FOR MAPLE CREEK.

Maple Creek—A five year permit for the erection of a telephone system in town was granted to Mr. G. W. Quick and Company on Monday evening by the town council. Arrangements will be made as soon as possible so that Mr. Quick can commence work at once. Mr. Quick has written to the Regina government for instructions which he expects at any time and as soon as they arrive he will be better able to say when the work will be completed.

The rates charged will be much the same as that charged in other towns the size of Maple Creek. They will be $15.00 a year for residence and $24.00 a year for business places.

Make It Yourself

Tells Our Readers How to Mix Best Rheumatism Cure.

A well-known authority on Rheumatism gives the readers of a large New York daily paper the following valuable, yet simple and harmless, prescription, which anyone can easily prepare at home:

Mix by shaking well in a bottle, and take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

He states that the ingredients can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost, and, being of vegetable extraction, are harmless to take.

This pleasant mixture, if taken regularly for a few days, is said to overcome almost any case of Rheumatism. The pain and swelling, if any, diminishes with each dose, until permanent results are obtained, and without injuring the stomach. While there are many so-called rheumatism remedies, patent medicines, etc., some of which do give relief, few really give permanent results, and the above will, no doubt, be greatly appreciated by many sufferers here at this time.

Inquiry at the drug stores of this neighborhood elicits the information that these drugs are harmless and can be bought separately, or the druggists here will mix the prescription for our readers, if asked to.

LACROSSE.

The second home game of the season was played on the afternoon of Dominion day before a large crowd. Lethbridge and Medicine Hat both put up a good game against the Calgary team and a keen contest was anticipated. From the spectators standpoint the game was somewhat disappointing, as from the start the inequality of the teams was evident, and after the first quarter, the result certain.

The first tally was to Lethbridge, by McCreary. Immediately after the face the ball was again in the Medicine Hat end and play was strenuous around the goal of the home team. Some good stops were made by Peard and the ball coming into possession of the Hat defence was passed quickly down the field, resulting in a tally by J. Halward. Ritchie came in for some pretty hard knocks in the first quarter and his bad luck kept up throughout the game. For the last five minutes of the first quarter Vanhorn adorned the fence and harrangued the grand stand. Medicine Hat's score was increased by two goals—to the credit of Ready and Neff—just before the calling of time.

In the second quarter the visitors tallied one goal by Kelly and The Hat's score was increased by a couple by Ready. Neff was showing fine form and in fact the home, who had the greater part of the play, worked well together. In shooting the home team was rather weak, three or four easy goals being talked in this quarter. Stewart, the Lethbridge first, home, spent five minutes on the fence. Skeith, the Lethbridge first defence made one or two good runs down the field, but generally the game was pretty slow for the Hat defence.

During the third quarter the Lethbridge defence went all to pieces. Play centred round their nets and Ritchie, Neff and Ready added four to the tally of the home team.

Interest in the game had reached vanishing point when the centres faced for the last quarter. Lethbridge had given up the fight and the home team took things easy. Gawley got up to the nets and made some long shots at goal but failed to add to the tally. Fraser and Kelly scored for Lethbridge and three more were added to the Medicine Hat total. Result, Medicine Hat 13, Lethbridge 4.

The Lethbridge—Calgary lacrosse game won two weeks ago by Calgary has been thrown out on account of the playing by Calgary of Tim Dunne. It will be played in Calgary.

Adorn each page,
And baseball players
Are the rage
The new phenoms
Are trotted out;
Old players, who
Have grown too stout,
Are training down:
And the small boy
Filled with the thought
Of coming joy,
Long since has
Gladly ambled hence
To the tall park
And in the fence
Found a knot-hole
And put his brand
Upon the same
With a steady hand;
Forgotten is
The pudgy runt
Who erstwhile
Did the football stunt
Forgotten is the Horse race,
Forgotten is the Golfing crew,
Forgotten every Thing; and all
The world waits for
The cry, "Play Ball!"

Royal Templars of Temperance

Successsul Silver Medal Contest held in the Methodist Church

On Thursday last, July 2nd, the Royal Templars of Temperance held another of their Silver Medal Contests in the Methodist church. Despite the other attractions in the City and at Calgary and the warm weather a goodly number were present and the general verdict after the contest ended was that it had been a success in every way. In addition to the recitations of the contestants, solos were rendered by Miss Sinclair and Mr. Lampman, and an anthem by the Methodist choir, all of which were appreciated very much by the audience, who heartily enjoyed the excellent singing. The medal was won by W. A. Fimbow, whose recitation, "The Convict's Soliloquy" was given with great dramatic effect.

The Royal Templars are now preparing for a Gold Medal contest under the auspices of the Maple Creek and Medicine Hat Councils which it is intended shall take place next month.

After the contest Mr. McF. Evans announced that on July 17th the City was to be favoured with a visit from Alderman Hales of Toronto, and that the Royal Templars were arranging for a public meeting to be addressed by that gentleman; place of meeting to be announced later. Alderman Hales holds a good record and was in charge of the resolution in the Toronto Council which reduced the number of public houses in that city by 34, but which was later quashed on a legal technicality, an uncertainty as to whether the year referred to in the resolution was a calendar year or a licensing year. Mr. Hales is a platform speaker of no mean ability and all should make a point of hearing him.

THE MEDICINE HAT BOOTH

(Calgary Albertan)

One of the most unique exhibits in the District Building is that of the City of Medicine Hat. The wonderful growth of the country and surrounding district is shown in samples of vegetables, which even at this early date are fully matured. But the principal part of the exhibit is natural gas produced from the Medicine Hat gas wells.

The City of Medicine Hat, with a population of 5,000, is in the centre of an immense gas area, 100 miles in length by 50 miles in width, and Kipling very tritely remarked, after spending a day examining the wonderful flow of gas from the wells, that he was under the impression that this part of the country had all hell for a basement.

The gas is brought from Medicine Hat in tanks, taken direct from the wells, and charged at 175 pounds to the square inch. The pressure at the well is about 600 pounds to the sq. inch.

The gas at the exhibit is in charge of R. S. Winter, gas inspector for the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and consists of a demonstration showing the gas in use in an ordinary cook stove, in lights and an engine. With the inflow of agricultural capital, more particularly from the United States, into agricultural channels in Western Canada, a corresponding flow of industrial capital will come, it will not be many years before the province of Alberta will be known as the manufacturing centre of the Great Last West, and it follows as amatter of course that that particular district having the most natural advantages to offer for manufacturing purposes, will become a great manufacturing centre.

(Calgary Herald.)

Medicine Hat, the city that was born lucky, has an exhibit in charge of J. T. Hall, publicity commissioner and R. S. Winter. The Hat shows a large range of manufactured goods such as brick, furnaces, flour, bread and numerous others, and these are all the products of mills operated by gas, which is sold to the manufacturer at a price of 5c per 1,000 less a discount. This thriving town also has a canning factory, lumber mills, and confectionery manufacturing establishment operating by the same power. The railroads also use gas to generate power for their shops.

WINNIPEG EXHIBITION.

On the eve of opening the Winnipeg Exhibition of July 11-17 we are assured of a display of exhibits that will surpass all others and of an attendance unequalled in the history of gatherings in the Western metropolis.

Winnipeg will, during Exhibition week, hold open house, business being to some extent subsidary to the great annual event of our Canadian West. Special trains at excursion rates and regular trains at reduced rates have been arranged for to accommodate the great numbers of people scattered throughout the length and breadth of the land who are anxious to participate in the Great Carnival of Pleasure and Productive Display.

The exhibits exceed this year by 70 per cent. those of last year, the musical features are extraordinarily good, with Innes' famous Orchestral Band and the 91st Highlanders' Band and the Great Band Competition.

The horse races, judging by the class and number of the entries and the splendid condition of the track, will be the best that the West has ever had.

People are coming in thousands and will contribute to make Winnipeg Exhibition, July 11-17, the Greatest Ever.

Among the great exhibitors in live stock are: J. Lloyd Jones, Bereford, Ont., in sheep; J. B. Hogate, Brandon, in horses; John Graham, Carberry, Man., horses; C. E. Clark, St. Cloud, cattle; W. IMPORTANT CHANGE IN NEW GRAIN ACT.

Ottawa, Ont., July 3.—The bill to amend the Manitoba Grain Inspection act was considered in committee of the senate and reported for a third reading. Senator Davis said there was a class of wheat in the west which would grade No. 1 if it did not contain a little smut, but had to be classed as rejected under this law. There was an elevator at Fort William at which this smut could be removed. However inspection, under present and proposed law, would have no power to grade it No. 1 hard or No. 1 northern or even No. 2, but by law had to grade it rejected or No. 3, no matter if entirely freed from smut after treatment, and the result was in many cases the prices would be thirtycents a bushel below what it should be, if given the grade it was entitled to.

He proposed an amendment to allow the inspector to place it in its proper grade after it had been cleaned. It was believed in the west that at present dealers bought this wheat at No. 3 price, but treated it and sold it to millers at a much higher grade and price. His proposal would give the farmer the opportunity to have his grain treated and graded, instead of leaving that opportunity to the dealer alone. It would be left to the inspector, in whom all classes had confidence, to grade the treated wheat No. 1, No. 2 or rejected.

Advised Against

Sir Richard Cartwright said the grain inspector had advised against the acceptance of this amendment, as it was important to keep Canada's No. 1 grade above reproach. The amendment by Senator Talbot was accepted. It provides another grade of oats as follows: "Extra No. 1 Feed oats shall be sound, except as to frost, shall not contain more than two per cent of wheat nor more than two per cent of other grain, shall be reasonably clean, and shall weigh not less than thirty-three pounds to the bushel."

DESPERATE HORSE THIEF

Indian Head, Sask., July 3.—Peter Daniels, against whom an information was taken out last week for horse stealing in the vicinity of File Hills, and whom the mounted police have been trying to locate eversince, was arrested tonight at Lake Kapip wa by a member of the police after a desperate struggle in which Daniels, who fired on the officer, was shot in the breast and leg so severely that he may die. Word was brought in this evening to Indian Head to Sergt. Dubuque, chief of staff of the Indian Head police district, who left at once for Katepwa, accompanied by Dr. Hunt. Daniels is a half breed with the reputation of being a desperate character.

SOME USES OF ICE.

A Goverament expert has devised a novel method of keeping a car or compartment comparatively warm in zero weather; not by fire but by the instilization of ice. A well insulated car is fitted at each end with four galvanized iron cylinders reaching from the floor to the top of the car. In summer these cylinders are filled with ice and salt to keep the car cool. In winter they are filled with ice to keep the contents of the car from freezing.

Ice is nominally at a temperature of 32 deg. Fahrenheit, and is a substance that changes temperature reluctantly being a poor conductor of heat or cold. Consequently, when zero weather prevails outside, the cylinders of relatively warm ice prevent the escape of heat, in other words, they maintain the temperature within the car.

Another method whereby ice is employed for protection against cold consists in throwing a plentiful stream of water on the cart when the temperature is near zero point, which freezes at once and forms a complete coat over the car. The action of this ice is the same as in the case of the cylinders filled with ice. A similar plan is frequently adopted in the transportation of bananas, a fruit particularly susceptible to cold.—National Provisioner.

The Hound of the Baskervilles

Another Adventure of Sherlock Holmes.

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

Copyright (1903) by A. Conan Doyle.

Over the green squares of the fields and the low curve of a wood there rose in the distance a grey, melancholy hill, with a strange jagged summit, dim and vague in the distance, like some fantastic landscape in a dream. Baskerville sat for a long time, his eyes fixed upon it, and I read upon his eager face how much it meant to him, this first sight of that strange spot where the men of his blood had held sway so long and left their mark so deep. There he sat, iver pointed with his whip. "Baskerville Hall," said he.

with his tweed suit and his American accent, in the corner of a prosaic railway-carriage, and yet as I looked at his dark and expressive face I felt more than ever how true a descendant he was of that long line of high-blooded, fiery, and masterful men. There were pride, valour, and strength in his thick brows, his sensitive nostrils, and his large hazel eyes. If on that forbidding moor a difficult and dangerous quest should lie before us, this was at least a comrade for whom one might venture to take a risk with the certainty that he would bravely share it.

The train pulled up at a small wayside station and we all descended. Outside, beyond the low, white fence, a wagonette with a pair of cobs was waiting. Our coming was evidently a great event, for stationmaster and porters clustered round us to carry out our luggage. It was a sweet, simple country spot, but I was surprised to observe that by the gate there stood two soldierly men in dark uniforms, who leaned upon their short rifles and glanced keenly at us as we passed. The coachman, a hard-faced gnarled little fellow, saluted Sir Henry Baskerville, and in a few minutes we were flying swiftly down the broad, white road. Rolling pasture lands curved upwards on either side of us, and old gabled houses peeped out from amid the thick green foliage, but behind the peaceful and sunlit country-side there rose ever, dark against the evening sky, the long, gloomy curve of the moor, broken by the jagged and sinister hills.

The wagonette swung round into a side road, and we curved upwards through deep lanes worn by centuries of wheels, high banks on either side, heavy with dripping moss and fleshy hart's-tongue ferns. Bronzing bracken and mottled bramble gleamed in the light of the sinking sun. Still steadily rising, we passed over a narrow granite bridge, and skirted a noisy stream which gushed swiftly down, foaming and roaring amid the grey boulders. Both road and stream wound up through a valley dense with scrub oak and fir. At every turning Baskerville gave an exclamation of delight, looking eagerly about him and asking countless questions. To his eyes all seemed beautiful, but to me a tinge of melancholy lay upon the countryside, which bore so clearly the mark of the waning year. Yellow leaves carpeted the lanes and fluttered down upon us as we passed. The rattle of our wheels died away as we drove through drifts of rotting vegetation—sad gifts, as it seemed to me, for Nature to throw before the carriage of the returning heir of the Baskervilles.

"Halloa!" cried Dr. Mortimer, "what is this?"

A steep curve of heath-clad land, an outlying spur of the moor, lay in front of us. On the summit, hard and clear like an equestrian statue upon its pedestal, was a mounted soldier, dark and stern, his rifle poised ready over his forearm. He was watching the road along which we traveled.

"What is this, Perkins?" asked Dr. Mortimer.

Our driver half turned in his seat.

"There's a convict escaped from Princetown, sir. He's been out three days now, and the warders watch every road and every station, but they've had no sight of him yet. The farmers about here don't like it, sir, and that's a fact."

"Well, I understand that they get five pounds if they can give information."

"Yes, sir, but the chance of five pounds is but a poor thing compared to the chance of having your throat cut. You see, it isn't like any ordinary convict. This is a man that would stick at nothing."

"Who is he, then?"

"It is Selden, the Notting Hill mur-derer.

I remembered the case well, for it was one in which Holmes had taken an interest on account of the peculiar ferocity of the crime and the wanton brutality which had marked all the actions of the assassin. The commutation of his death sentence had been due to some doubts as to his complete sanity, so atrocious was his conduct. Our wagonette had topped a rise and in front of us rose the huge expanse of the moor, mottled with gnarled and craggy cairns and tors. A cold wind swept down from it and set us shivering. Somewhere there, on that desolate plain, was lurking this fiendish man, hiding in a burrow like a wild beast, his heart full of malignancy against the whole race which had cast him out. It needed but this to complete the grim suggestiveness of the barren waste, the chilling wind and the darkening sky. Even Baskerville fell silent and pulled his overcoat more closely around him.

We had left the fertile country behind and beneath us. We looked back on it now, the slanting rays of a low sun turning the streams to threads of gold and glowing on the red earth new turned by the plough and the broad tangle of the woodlands. The road in front of us grew bleaker and wilder over huge russet and olive slopes, sprinkled with great boulders. Now and then we passed a moorland cottage, walled and roofed with stone, with no creeper to break its harsh outline. Suddenly we looked down into a cup-like depression, patched with stunted oaks and firs which had been twisted and bent by the fury of years of storm. Two high, narrow towers rose over the trees. The driver pointed with his whip.

"Baskerville Hall," said he.

Its master had risen and was staring with flushed cheeks and shining eyes. A few minutes later we had reach the lodge gates, a maze of fantastic tracery in wrought iron, with weather-bitten pillars on either side, blotched with lichens, and surmounted by the boars' heads of the Baskervilles. The lodge was a ruin of black granite and bared ribs of rafters, but facing it was a new building, half constructed, the first fruit of Sir Charles's South African gold.

Through the gateway we passed into the avenue, where the wheels were again hushed amid the leaves, and the old trees shot their branches in a sombre tunnel over our heads. Baskerville shuddered as he looked up the long, dark drive to where the house gleamed like a ghost at the farther end.

"Was it here?" he asked in a low voice.

"No, no, the New Abbey is on the other side."

The young heir glanced round with a gloomy face.

"It's no wonder my uncle felt as if trouble were coming on him in such a place as this," said he. "It's enough to scare any man. I'll have a row of electric lamps up here inside of six months, and you won't know it again, with a thousand candle-power Swan and Edison right here in front of the hall door."

The avenue opened into a broad expanse of turf, and the house lay before us. In the fading light I could see that the centre was a heavy block of building from which a porch projected. The whole front was draped in ivy, with a patch clipped bare here and there where a window or a coat-of-arms broke through the dark veil. From this central block rose the twin towers, ancient, crenelated, and pierced with many loopholes. To right and left of the turrets were more modern wings of black granite. A dull light shone through heavy mullioned windows, and from the high chimneys which rose from the steep, high-angled roof there sprang a single black column of smoke.

"Welcome, Sir Henry! Welcome, to Baskerville Hall!"

A tall man had stepped from the shadow of the porch to open the door of the wagonette. The figure of a woman was silhouetted against the yellow light of the hall. She came out and helped the man to hand down our bags.

"You don't mind my driving straight home, Sir Henry?" said Dr. Mortimer. "My wife is expecting me."

"Surely you will stay and have some dinner?"

"No, I must go. I shall probably find some work awaiting me. I would stay to show you over the house, but Barrymore will be a better guide than I. Good-bye, and never hesitate night or day to send for me if I can be of service."

The wheels died away down the drive while Sir Henry and I turned into the hall, and the door clanged heavily behind us. It was a fine apartment in which we found ourselves, large, lofty, and heavily raftered with huge balks of age-blackened oak. In the great old-fashioned fireplace behind the high iron dogs a log-fire crackled and snapped. Sir Henry and I held out our hands to it, for we were numb from our long drive. Then we gazed round us at the high, thin window of old stained glass, the oak panelling, the stags' heads, the coat-of-arms upon the walls, all dim and sombre in the subdued light of the central lamp.

"It's just as I imagined it," said Sir Henry. "Is it not the very picture of an old family home? To think that this should be the same hall in which for five hundred years my people have lived. It strikes me solemn to think of it."

I saw his dark face lit up with a boyish enthusiasm as he gazed about him. The light beat upon him where he stood, but long shadows trailed down the walls and hung like a black canopy above him. Barrymore had returned from taking our luggage to our rooms. He stood in front of us now with the subdued manner of a well-trained servant. He was a remarkable-looking man, tall, handsome, with a square black beard, and pale, distinguished features.

"Would you wish dinner to be served at once, sir?"

"Is it ready?"

"In a very few minutes, sir. You will find hot water in your rooms. My wife and I will be happy, Sir Henry, to stay with you until you have made your fresh arrangements, but you will understand that under the new conditions this house will require a considerable staff."

"What new conditions?"

"I only meant, sir, that Sir Charles led a very retired life, and we were able to look after his wants. You would, naturally, wish to have more company, and so you will need changes in your household."

"Do you mean that your wife and you wish to leave?"

"Only when it is quite convenient to you, sir."

"But your family have been with us for several generations, have they not? I should be sorry to begin my life here by breaking an old family connection."

I seem to discern some signs of emotion upon the butler's white face.

"I feel that also, sir, and so does my wife. But to tell the truth, sir, we were both very much attached to Sir Charles, and his death gave us a shock and made these surroundings very painful to us. I fear that we shall never again be easy in our minds at Baskerville Hall."

"But what do you intend to do?"

"I have no doubt, sir, that we shall succeed in establishing ourselves in some business. Sir Charles's generosity has given us the means to do so. And now, sir, perhaps I had best show you to your rooms."

A square balustraded gallery ran round the top of the old hall, approached by a double stair. From this central point two long corridors extended the whole length of the building, from which all the bedrooms opened. My own was in the same wing as Baskerville's and almost next door to it. These rooms appeared to be much more modern than the central part of the house, and the bright paper and numerous candles did something to remove the sombre impression which our arrival had left upon my mind.

But the dining-room which opened out of the hall was a place of shadow and gloom. It was a long chamber with a step separating the dais where the family sat from the lower portion reserved for their dependents. At one end a minstrel's gallery overlooked it. Black beams shot across above our heads, with a smoke-darkened ceiling beyond them. With rows of flaring torches to light it up, and the colour and rude hilarity of an old-time banquet, it might have softened; but now, when two black-clothed gentlemen sat in the little circle of light thrown by a shaded lamp, one's voice became hushed and one's spirit subdued. A dim line of ancestors, in every variety of dress, from the Elizabethan knight to the buck of the Regency, stared down upon us and daunted us by their silent company. We talked little, and I for one was glad when the meal was over and we were able to retire into the modern billiard-room and smoke a cigarette.

"My word, it isn't a very cheerful place," said Sir Henry. "I suppose one can tone down to it, but I feel a bit out of the picture at present. I don't wonder that my uncle got a little jumpy if he lived all alone in such a house as this. However, if it suits you, we will retire early to-night, and perhaps things may seem more cheerful in the morning."

I drew aside my curtains before I went to bed and looked out from my window. It opened upon the grassy space which lay in front of the hall door. Beyond, two copses of trees moaned and swung in a rising wind. A half moon broke through the rifts of racing clouds. In its cold light I saw beyond the trees a broken fringe of rocks, and the long, low curve of the melancholy moor. I closed the curtain, feeling that my last impression was in keeping with the rest.

And yet it was not quite the last. I found myself weary and yet wakeful, tossing restlessly from side to side, seeking for the sleep which would not come. Far away a chiming clock struck out the quarters of the hours, but otherwise a deathly silence lay upon the old house. And then suddenly, in the very dead of the night, there came a sound to my ears, clear, resonant, and unmistakable. It was the sob of a woman, the muffled, strangling gasp of one who is torn by an uncontrollable sorrow. I sat up in bed and listened intently. The noise could not have been far away and was certainly in the house. For half an hour I waited with every nerve on the alert, but there came no other sound save the chimney clock and the rustle of the ivy on the wall.

CHAPTER VII.

The fresh beauty of the following morning did something to efface from our minds the grim and grey impression which had been left upon both of us by our first experience of Baskerville Hall. As Sir Henry and I sat at breakfast the sunlight flooded in through the high mullioned windows, throwing watery patches of color from the coats of arms which covered them. The dark panelling glowed like bronze in the golden rays, and it was hard to realize that this was indeed the chamber which had struck such a gloom into our souls upon the evening before.

"I guess it is ourselves and not the house that we have to blame!" said the baronet. "We were tired with our journey and chilled by our drive, so we took a grey view of the place. Now we are fresh and well, so it is all cheerful once more."

"And yet it was not entirely a question of imagination," I answered. "Did you, for example, happen to hear someone, a woman I think, sobbing in the night?"

"That is curious, for I did when I was half asleep fancy that I heard something of the sort. I waited quite a time, but there was no more of it, so I concluded that it was all a dream."

"I heard it distinctly, and I am sure that it was really the sob of a woman."

"We must ask about this right away." He rang the bell and asked Barrymore whether he could account for our experience. It seemed to me that the pallid features of the butler turned a shade paler still as he listened to his master's question.

"There are only two women in the house, Sir Henry," he answered. "One is the scullery-maid, who sleeps in the other wing. The other is my wife, and I can answer for it that the sound could not have come from her."

And yet he lied as he said it, for it chanced that after breakfast I met Mrs. Barrymore in the long corridor with the sun full upon her face. She was a large, impassive, heavy-featured woman with a stern set expression of mouth. But her tell-tale eyes were red and glanced at me from between swollen lids. It was she, then, who wept in the night, and if she did so her husband must know it. Yet he had taken the obvious risk of discovery in declaring that it was not so. Why had he done this? And why did she weep so bitterly? Already round this pale-faced, handsome, black-bearded man there was gathering an atmosphere of mystery and of gloom. It was he who had been the first to discover the body of Sir Charles, and we had only his word for all the circumstances which led up to the old man's death. Was it possible that it was Barrymore after all whom we had seen in the cab in Regent Street? The beard might well have been the same. The cabman had described a somewhat shorter man, but such an impression might easily have been erroneous. How could I settle the point for ever? Obviously the first thing to do was to see the Grimpen postmaster, and find whether the test telegram had really been placed in Barrymore's own hands. Be the answer what it might, I should at least have something to report to Sherlock Holmes.

Sir Henry had numerous papers to examine after breakfast, so that the time was propitious for my excursion. It was a pleasant walk of four miles along the edge of the moor, leading me at last to a small grey hamlet, in which two larger buildings, which proved to be the inn and the house of Dr. Mortimer, stood high above the rest. The postmaster, who was also the village grocer, had a clear recollection of the telegram.

"Certainly, sir," said he, "I had the telegram delivered to Mr. Barrymore exactly as directed."

"Who delivered it?"

"My boy here, James, you delivered that telegram to Mr. Barrymore at the Hall last week, did you not?"

"Yes, father, I delivered it."

"Into his own hands?" I asked.

"Well, he was up in the loft at the time, so that I could not put it into his own hands, but I gave it into Mrs. Barrymore's hands, and she promised to deliver it at once."

"Did you see Mr. Barrymore?"

"No, sir; I tell you he was in the loft."

"If you didn't see him, how do you know he was in the loft?"

"Well, surely his own wife ought to know where he is," said the postmaster, testily. "Didn't he get the telegram? If there is any mistake it is for Mr. Barrymore himself to complain."

It seemed hopeless to pursue the inquiry any farther, but it was clear that in spite of Holmes's ruse we had no proof that Barrymore had not been in London all the time. Suppose that it were so—suppose that the same man had been the last who had seen Sir Charles alive, and the first to dog the new heir when he returned to England. What then? Was he the agent of others or had he some sinister design of his own? What interest could he have in persecuting the Baskerville family? I thought of the strange warning clipped out of the leading article of the Times. Was that his work or was it possibly the doing of someone who was bent upon counteracting his schemes? The only conceivable motive was that which had been suggested by Sir Henry, that if the family could be scared away a comfortable and permanent home would be secured for the Barrymores. But surely such an explanation as that would be quite inadequate to account for the deep and subtle scheming which seemed to be weaving an invisible net round the young baronet. Holmes himself had said that no more complex case had come to him in all the long series of his sensational investigations. I prayed, as I walked back along the grey, lonely road, that my friend might soon be freed from his preoccupations and able to come down to take this heavy burden of responsibility from my shoulders.

Suddenly my thoughts were interrupted by the sound of running feet behind me and by a voice which called me by name. I turned, expecting to see Dr. Mortimer, but to my surprise it was a stranger who was pursuing me. He was a small, slim, clean-shaven, prim-faced man, flaxen-haired and lean-jawed, between thirty and forty years of age, dressed in a grey suit and wearing a straw hat. A tin box for botanical specimens hung over his shoulder and he carried a green butterfly-net in one of his hands.

It was through one of your travelling agents that I was induced to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and after taking three boxes I am glad to relate it has been a number of years since I had a fainting spell and scarcely ever have a headache. THE CITY FATHERS

A special meeting of the council was held on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the city hall. (Present, the Mayor, Ald. Baker, McKay, Spencer, Tweed, Huckvale, Morrow, Forster.

The Mayor and treasurer were authorized to borrow money up to the amount of $35,000 from the Bank of Montreal to meet current expenses.

In view of the continued water famine on the hill, the Mayor suggested that a couple of night watchmen should be put on during such time as the trouble might last, to look out for fires. It would be five or six weeks before the two new pumps would be ready.

Ald. Baker thought that if one of the pumps could be relied on to supply the town for a week, the other might be taken out and thoroughly repaired. Then if there were a good man employed to look after the pumps, no further trouble should be met with. He would move that the clerk be instructed to write to the proper C.P.R. official to get a standing order that the city work be done in the shops as required Carried.

It was moved that two night watchmen be employed for one month or till such time as the pumps should be installed and in working order, the engagement of the men to be left in the hands of the license and police committee. Carried.

Ald. Tweed said he had been discussing the matter of a Medicine Hat delegate for the general convention of fire brigades, and thought the chief was the proper man to send.

Ald. Spencer brought up the matter of a convention of city solicitors to be held in Calgary during fair time. Ald. Huckvale, shouldn't there be a convention of city aldermen during fair time?" Ald. Tweed was unable to see why the city solicitors required a convention. Commonsense was all that they were hired for. (Laughter.)

Had Weak Back

Would Lie In Bed For Days And Was Scarcely Able to Turn

Liniments and Plasters Did No Good But DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS Cured

Mrs. Arch. Schnare, Black Point, N.B., writes:—For years I was troubled with weak back. Oftentimes I have lain in bed for days, being scarcely able to turn myself, and I have also been a great sufferer while trying to perform my household duties. I had doctors attending me without avail, and have tried liniments and plasters but nothing seem to do me any good. I was about to give up in depair when my husband induced me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and after using two boxes I am now well and able to do my work. I am positive Doan's Kidney Pills are all that you claim for them, and I would advise all kidney sufferers to give them a fair trial.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure all kinds of Kidney Trouble from Backache to Bright's Disease, and the price is only 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

This department is given over to labor interests in Medicine Hat, to use as they see fit—discussions of labor subjects, notes of events in the labor world, and notices of meetings, etc. The editor does not assume the responsibility for the opinions expressed or the news sent in for publication, except in so far as he must eliminate libellous or personal discussions, and place some limit on the space used.]

Edmonton, June 30.—The action for $12,000 for breach of contract brought by the United Mine Workers of America against the Strathcona Coal Co., was dismissed by Mr. Justice Stuart at the Supreme Court Monday. The judge held that the district union of the United Mine Workers had no right to sue or to be sued, as it was not incorporated or registered. With regard to the eighteen individual miners who were also plaintiffs in the action, the judge dismissed the case on the ground that their claims were different. They had no right to sue collectively, but should bring action individually. Aside from the technicality on which the case was dismissed the judge stated that the plaintiffs could not hope to succeed on the merits of the charge. H. A. MacKie appeared for the plaintiffs and J. R. Lavelle, of Strathcona for the defendant company. The action was installed by the plaintiffs under the Lemieux Act. The Judge held that this act only served for the purpose of keeping the parties in status quo until a thorough investigation is made of the case in dispute by a board of arbitration and does not produce and binding effect on either party.

Edmonton, Alta., June 30.—This morning some twenty miners in the employ of the United Collieries company stopped work as a result of a difficulty with the mine owners, over a question of wages. This action on the part of the men constituted a violation of the industrial disputes act, as that law provides that employes shall not quit work, or employers declare a lockout until after compel them to return to work until the disputed point has been submitted to arbitration. The employers will, therefore, have the right to till the question is decided by arbitration. If they refuse, a test case under the Lemieux act will probably be the outcome. This is said to be what they want. The difficulty between the men and the employers is that the company made a change in the pay day and the men refused to accept the change and quit work. It is understood the United Mine Workers of America are behind the action of the men. The strike was decided upon by the men as they felt they were being given no protection under the Lemieux act. They believe, as a result of the recent decision of Justice Stuart in the case of the United Mine workers vs. the Strathcona Coal Co., that the Lemieux act only provides for the arbitration of disputed points, and does not provide for the enforcement of any agreement signed as a result of arbitration.

The investigation under the Lemieux Act into the differences between the C.P.R. and its employees has been continued throughout the past week. All indications point to a most thorough investigation into all matters affecting the employment schedules and disputes in the shops at all points on the Western system for some years back.

Winnipeg Voice:—The action of the Master Plumbers of Winnipeg against the Journeymen Plumbers Union, in which $25,000 damages was asked and a perpetual injunction against the union or any of its members interfering with their respective businesses, was brought to a close at the end of last week, when Justice Mathers delivered judgment in favor of the plaintiffs.

The case arose out of the plumbers strike, which was entered upon July 2, 1906. Later on it precipitated a general strike of the building trades, which was closed up by means of an arbitration agreement. With the Builders Exchange, which, by the way, it has ever since been busy dodging clear of. The claims for damages rested on evidence to the effect that the members of the Union had persuaded and enticed non-union men to leave the employ of the plaintiffs, they thereby losing railway fares which had been advanced and the profits off their labor—general losses through stoppage of business. The men followed the usual course in like circumstances, meeting the trains and sending men along the line to meet the trains, that they might warn incoming plumbers that they were being imported to take the places of union men on strike. All the means taken to make the strike effective were the usual ones to the union policy, and the judgment rendered is most important on that account. A most searching inquiry failed to reveal a single overt act by any member of the Union throughout the lengthy struggle.

SOME INSIDE HISTORY

A "KNOCKER" DEFINED

And it came to pass that the Council met at the power house on Dominion Day.

The result of it was nothing practical, but one alderman now knows a few things he had never grasped before.

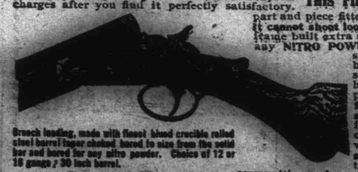
Ald. Baker, the only practical machinist and the only man on the Council who knows anything about the pumps, had informed the Council that he would guarantee to have the pumps in working order in a few days if given a chance. The engineer's department had failed and Ald. Baker had a keener sense of his responsibility to the hill-climbers than the water commissioners seem to have. So the Council took advantage of the holiday to look over things.

When Ald. Baker arrived at the power house and looked over things he found not a single bit of material on hand for repairs—not a relay part this side of Toronto. As it would take some weeks to get the parts here, and red flannel and hopes for the future scarcely seemed useful under the circumstances he gave up in disgust.

On the way out of the yard, one of the water commissioners sought to ease a troubled conscience by criticising the interference of the other aldermen with the water commissioners. (The record of the water commissioners is such a marvellous proud one, judging from conditions) and he took advantage of the opportunity to throw out some remarks about the "knocker" in the council.

And the Ald. Baker let loose with his full 190 pounds of pressure and an indignation that has been controlled for weeks and

"Yes," he said, and the worthy water commissioner cringed at the tone, "you call the man a knocker, who sees the rottenness of things and has the courage to say so. You think everybody is a knocker who doesn't agree with your small view of things. You would have every man in this town smother his common sense and believe that everything is just right. You want to control all the public opinion of this city. If you can't you try to get even by calling the man a knocker who does his own thinking, and refuses to let you turn him off."



"I can tell you this that you and Ald. ——— are largely responsible for this condition of the water service. You have the engineer right under your thumbs and you always have had, you force him to do everything you want. If you let him alone, and had let him alone earlier, the water service might not be what it is now. If you had let him use his own brains and not make a dependent of him the hill might be getting water."

And the few simple, homely truths hit home, and Ald. ——— hung his head. He had been told what most people have believed without saying. Ald. ——— will be careful of using the word "knocker" hereafter.

THE ALPINE CLUB FATALITY

Death of Miss Hatch as Witnessed by Times Representative

(From Our Own Correspondent.)
July 9th.

A gloom has been cast over the camp by the tragic occurrence of yesterday. All the climbs of the day were called off on the news reaching camp, the programme of social events has been suspended. Even the camp fire has lost its wonted cheerfulness.

Catastrophies in the Canadian Alps have been few in number and this is the first in the history of the club.

The sad accident occurred on the lower slopes of Mount Macdonald at 10 a.m. on Wednesday during the course of a descent. The slope was not a dangerous one, and the party had unroped, as the main snowfield and all treacherous parts of the mountain side were passed. At a point well below the timber line the guide turned and said, "Wait till I get down," at the same time stooping to remove a stone that the others might land comfortably, but Miss Hatch, ever confident, started to glissade down a small patch of snow, and losing her balance on reaching the bottom, fell forward and began to roll before the leader could spring to his feet to catch her. She rapidly gained momentum and, being unable to stop herself, fell over the edge of a rock below, striking her head and being instantly killed.

Miss Hatch was one of the best lady climbers of the Club, in which she graduated a year or two ago and she was absolutely fearless. This disaster, like the majority of such cases, both in the Swiss Alps and elsewhere, was due, not to any uncommon dangers of the mountain side but to that contempt of all risks which is bred by familiarity with the mountains.

According to experienced mountaineers, this temptation to recklessness is the one which of all tendencies they find the most difficulty to combat.

The writer, W. Norman Smith, of The Times staff goes on to say "One thing is beyond question. If the most ordinary precautions are taken and the directions of the guide followed, possibilities of accident in such climbs as that in which Miss Hatch was taking part, are very remote."

"On Tuesday and Wednesday, I was fortunate in being one of a party to ascend Rogers Peak, thereby graduating as an active member of the Club.

Terrible Wreck Within a Mile of Station---Seven LIVES LOST IN ONE CRASH

Some of the Best Known Local Railwaymen The Victims---Most of Them Married Men

The City Honors the Dead---Business Houses Close for Funerals

With a record of seven lives lost and several severely injured the wreck of last Thursday morning about a mile and a half east of the station goes down as not only by far the worst in this district, but one of the most disastrous in number of lives lost on the West.

That the list is not much longer and probably the longest in Canadian railway history is due to a simple piece of good fortune. Had No. 96 been another hour late, the transfer of passengers from the ill-fated Crow's Nest train to the east bound would have been made as usual at the Medicine Hat station. Running, however, only an hour late, or a little more, No. 96 reached Coleridge five miles east of this city, and the junction point of the Crow, before the regular train of the latter line. Here fifty passengers were transferred, fully a score of whom were in the tourist car which was smashed to pieces.

Where it Occurred.

The accident occurred at 8.20 a.m. about a mile and a half east of the station just at the foot of the long four mile grade from Coleridge. The engines met exactly on the crossing to Pruitt's brick yard just around the first hill curve, where the engines were out of sight of each other until they were only a few yards apart.

Engineer James Nicholson in engine No. 702 had received clearance papers to run to Coleridge with his engine light to take the Spokane flyer east to Swift Current. It happened that this run was to be taken by the Moose Jaw train crew, all the members of which were waiting at Coleridge. Had this not been so there would have been a complete crew on the front of the light engine and several more fatalities would have been recorded. Accompanied only by his fireman, Harry Thompson, Nicholson drew out from the yards and with a clear track, as he thought, his engine was working fast to take the grade without effort.

The Crash.

The Crow's Nest train, in charge of conductor Millett and engineer Towhey, delayed two hours, had left Coleridge on the steep down grade, with only a ten minutes' run to finish the day's work. As usual, the crew—conductor, brakeman, and baggageman—were gathered in the baggage car with everything ready to get off at the end of the run. The brakesman, Leonard Black, had just completed his tour of the cars announcing "Medicine Hat", "where all had to leave the train. The five car train on the steep grade, and the end of the run in sight meant a fast down grade coast, and when the last curve was reached the speed must have been great.

Just when the curve was fifty yards off, Engineer Towhey noticed a man on the opposite side of the track from the hill which hid the other side of the curve, waving wildly and shouting. In an instant he was leaning wide out of the cab straining ahead. Only an instant, and then like a flash he had leaped back into the cab and was working with the levers. A second later he was at the door just preparing to jump. Then just a fraction of a second too soon the crash came and the scene was clouded in a mass of escaping steam.

On Nicholson's engine the brakes had been applied as well, but too late. Thompson happened to be in a position where he could see the approaching accident in time to leap from the cab door, but not soon enough to escape the steam and flying wreckage.

The Wreckage

Nicholson's engine, having no cars behind it was not so badly wrecked. The whole front was torn from it, and it was thrown back off its trucks, the cab bursting over on the boiler; but the wheels never left the track. The crew engine, with the weight of the cars pressing on it at great speed seemed to double up; then it reeled to the left and fell, tender and all a mass of broken iron down an embankment about 8 feet high. Scarcely a recognizable piece of iron was left.

The first car—the express and mail car—either because it was stronger, or on account of its position was where sat the unfortunate train forced back through the baggage car where sat the unfortunate train crew. Then the two cars shot into the tourist car, so that the three cars were telescoped almost into the length of one. The next two cars, the first class and pullman, did not even leave the rails.

The Terrible Results

The few passengers who were uninjured, and those injured ones who were able, assisted by three or four who were near the scene at the time rushed to the assistance of the injured men. Amid hissing steam and the groans of the wounded they worked furiously and recklessly.

Engineer Nicholson was picked up lifeless lying beside the cylinder of his engine. It required only a glance to see that he was beyond pain. Engineer Towhey was lifted from amidst the wreck of his engine cab, his back broken and badly wounded, but still alive and conscious. He knew his fate but told only of his family. He lived only until noon. Poor Howard Grey, Towhey's fireman was pulled from under the tender of coal, killed instantly. W. J. Archambault, baggageman, Leonard Black, brakesman and conductor Millett were taken out of the wreckage of the baggage car. Archambault was dead; Black was thought to be dying, as he was bleeding profusely from mouth and nose, and his jaw and nose was terribly broken up. Millett seemed the least injured of all and was able to help himself to some bushes at the side of the track, where he took some brandy. He was taken to the hospital and died at 4.20 in the afternoon.

Back in the tourist car two men connected with the Southern Alberta Land Company's irrigation works at Bow Island had been sitting. They had been urged to go into the first class car by J. D. MacGregor, the manager of the company who was on board, but had refused. Duncan McEachren, who had formerly been engineer on the boat was taken out unconscious, with his face shattered, and died in a few minutes. James Shaw his fellow traveller was dead from back and internal injuries.

The three men in the front car came out without serious injuries C. J. Vickers, the express messenger, in his compartment immediately behind the tender was standing in front of the safe, preparing to leave the train. He was shot out, how, he does not know, and escaped with only a cut on the back of his hand. He remained on the scene, watching the remains of the car until he was relieved by the city agent, W.W. Peel and E. J. Dutton the two mail clerks in the rear half of the car, were even more fortunate. Both were dressed ready to leave the car, when the crash came. Peel saw light above him and scrambled out minus most of his clothes. Dutton was caught by both ankles by twisted pipes. He heard the escaping steam and fearing fire or steam wrenched himself loose skinning both ankles, and escaped.

The injured are:

Leonard Black, brakesman, face badly crushed, and internally injured.

Harry Thompson, fireman, scalded on legs, side and face.

C. J. Vickers, express messenger, back of hand cut.

H. C. Menge, rancher, Taber, back bruised and body scratched.

E. Dutton, mail clerk, ankles skinned.

Peel, mail clerk, bruised on legs.

The first intimation of the wreck to the city, was from a telephone message from Pruitt's brickyard. The despatcher's office immediately called up Dr. Smith, who collected the other doctors in automobiles, and was on the scene a few minutes after it happened.

THE DEAD

James Nicholson, engineer, aged 56 years

Robert I. Towhey, engineer, aged 37 years

Phillip Millett, conductor, aged 28 years

Howard H. Grey, fireman, aged 20 years

W. J. Archambault, baggageman, aged 22 years

Duncan McEachren, passenger, aged 30 years

James Shaw, passenger, aged 39 years

Statements of Witnesses and Passengers.

C. J. Vickers of Nelson, the express messenger:—"I was standing in front of the safe, when it happened, and the next I knew I was outside, thrown out someway—I don't know how. I received only this cut on my hand. Both the mail men, in the compartment behind me came out all right too. The first person I met after I had picked myself up was Thompson, the fireman on the other engine. He walked up to the wreck, and seemed to be pretty badly scalded. How I got off so easily is more than I can understand. I helped to take out two passengers, one with his face almost torn away and the other with his back and legs broken. A fire broke out in the baggage car then, and we had to put it out with water from the water cans in the cars. I saw a lady and gentleman who were sitting in the front of the first class car, get out all right."

F. V. Harksman—"I guess I was the only one who saw it all happen. I was coming along the road over there (pointing to the north side) when I heard the train, and then, as I was opposite the curve I saw the two engines coming towards each other at a fast speed. I knew something was going to happen. I saw the engineer of the Crow, and as I was nearest him, I yelled and waved my arms at him as I knew he could not see the other engine, he leaned out, evidently saw the light engine, jumped back and began to pull the levers. He had just got to the door to jump when the crash came and everything was blotted out by the steam. It was terrible. Three or four of us pulled out the dead and wounded, some of them terribly mutilated."

H. Lees—"I was on the scene just a moment after it happened and with Vickers and 3 or 4 others helped out the two passengers. One of them had his face badly shattered and the other seemed to have his back broken."

A. J. Grave—"I was working on top of the hill at Pruitt's brickyard. I had stopped to watch the Crow train pass and saw the engines meet. They were covered with steam as soon as the crash came, but I saw distinctly the express car smash into the baggage car and the latter split apart as it entered the tourist car. They all fell over against the telegraph pole. I ran down as fast as I could to help."

W. E. Cochrane, pullman conductor, car Kewenan—"There was no one in my car, all my passengers having been transferred at Coleridge. I was standing up when the crash came and was thrown over three or four seats. The porter was pitched against a glass and bruised his forehead. There were only a half dozen in the first class car, and I don't know how many in the tourist. I was only bruised on the leg."

In the first class car were, among others, J. D. MacGregor, E. H. Cuthbertson, an English gentleman, and his valet. They had boarded the train at Bow Island at about 1.30.

A passenger who desired his name to be withheld said:—"I was the first out of our car, and the first thing I saw was a man wounded in both legs lying beside the end of the tourist car. After the crash everything was as quiet as death in a few seconds. Then the fire broke out. There was not much groaning as almost all the unfortunate men were killed or unconscious. I helped to get almost all of them out—Grey, Archambault, and Millette and the two passengers. Everyone who was conscious, wegave brandy to. Millette did not seem so badly hurt as some of the others as he could help himself and drank some brandy.

Their Duty First.

After the excitement of the wreck the details come to one with startling revelations. Without a doubt both engineers could have saved themselves had they thought only of themselves. Towhey had time to have jumped and left his train, but instead he jumped back into his cab and put on every brake before he thought of himself. He died for his train, as the couple of seconds necessary for applying the brakes would have put him out of danger. Nicholson had almost the same chance as Thompson. Both engines, after the wreck showed all brakes applied. Both engineers died at their posts rather than jump to save themselves.

Thompson, although badly scalded refused help until he could stand it no longer. Millett, wounded to death sat in the bushes and watched the work of the rescuers, saying nothing to secure relief for himself. Towney, too badly cut up to be lifted from the waggon to a relief train, never made a groan, although perfectly conscious until in the handling the rescuers found it would be wiser to bring him to the city in the waggon in which he lay. Although none of the seriously injured had left the scene when The Times representative arrived there was not a groan heard to confuse the work.

Strange Coincidences

It was Conductor Millett's first run on a passenger train, his regular train being the Crow local. Conductor Grieves was the regular conductor, but he had taken the Spokane on this trip and arrived on the scene by hand car from Coleridge only an hour after the wreck.

Most of the crew were off their regular runs. Twohey is regularly on the pusher engine. In connection with Engineer Towhey, it is said he had his hand read four years ago in the east. The reader told him that he and all his crew would be killed four years from that date on May 10th. Towhey laid off all the month of May last, but survived the prediction by almost exactly two months only.

Engineer Nicholson had been unwell recently and had been asked by his friends not to take the run on Thursday. Another engineer was looked for, but he had gone to Calgary. Nicholson said he would rather take the run anyway.

The Sorrowing Families.

Engineer Nicholson leaves a wife and three daughters; Engineer Towhey, a wife and four children; Conductor Millett, a wife and one child; Duncan McEachren, a wife; James Shaw, Howard Grey and W. G. Archambault were single men.

The Funerals.

James Shaw was buried with Masonic honors on Friday evening at 5 p.m.

On Saturday afternoon all the stores closed to honor the funeral rites of Mr. Nicholson and Mr. Grey. The former was buried at 2 p.m. by the Independent Oddfellows, and the latter at 4 p.m. by the railway unions. The whole city turning out to the services. The remains of Mr. Towney were interred on Sunday afternoon. Duncan McEachren's body left for Fork River, Manitoba, on Sunday. Archambault's remains went to Gravelbourg, Sask. Conductor Millett's body was sent to Valcourt, Que., on Sunday morning.

The Inquest.

An inquest was held by Coroner Smyth on Thursday evening. Despatcher H. B. Ritchie, who had given out the clearance papers has disappeared. He went off duty at eight o'clock just a few minutes before the wreck, after a 12 hour shift. He was seen driving toward the scene of the wreck and to an engineer said he was going there. No report of him has since been received. The police wanted him for the inquest but he has either run away or hidden.

The only witnesses at the inquest were Chief Despatcher Mansfield and Despatcher Humphries, who took Ritchie's place shortly after 8. Mansfield deposed that engineer Nicholson should have looked up the register to see that No. 17 was in; also that the clearance paper given Nicholson did not warn him of No. 17.

Despatcher Humphries testified simply that he had completed the order given Nicholson but had nothing to do with the running of the two trains. Inquest was adjourned until July 16th at 8.30.

Ritchie has been here only a few weeks.

OTHER ACCIDENTS

Ill-Fortune Continues---Several Accidents on Railway Since Thursday

Every railway man believes that a bad wreck is followed by other smaller accidents. And the terrible calamity of Thursday is no exception.

The most serious locally is the accident to Brakeman Terry at Gull Lake, whereby he lost an arm. His hand was crushed in the couplers, and the doctors found it necessary to amputate at the elbow. Terry is at Maple Creek hospital.

At Strathmore on Friday night, a light engine from Calgary ran into the rear end of a freight train standing on the main line. Jack Moody was running in Evan's caboose, which was smashed up. No one was hurt.

On Saturday night an accident occurred 75 miles south on the Crow, Conductor Gough's caboose was thrown into the ditch and Gough badly shaken up.

The same night a broken wheel at Indian Head threw 10 freight cars loaded with valuable eastern stock on the way from the Dominion Exhibition to Winnipeg Exhibition, off the track.

Saturday night's train from the east did not arrive until Sunday night.

Woolchester

Mr. Johnson's garden is in excellent condition, showing the effect of scientific working, and irrigation. The trees are doing splendidly also.

Some of the young people around here took in the English Church dance at Mr. Macdonnell's. They report having a good time.

Mr. E. Bell was among the many who took a trip up to Calgary.

Rumors of a runaway match in the district are causing much talk among the folks, but perhaps the irate pa will round up the pair before they get tied up among the matrimonial fences.

All the grain around here is doing well, but everyone is hoping for more rain.

One of the children in the district was heard to say the other day that his father could not see anyone at Calgary because of the crowd. This is suspiciously like an Irish bull.

Mrs. Fenton got her quarter on the homestead fenced up last week. The Fenton boys are digging for water at Willow Lake.

Mr. McKenzie of Little Plume, has his sister and family from Brandon, as visitors.

Dipping cattle was carried out at the Petrified last week, by all the ranchers in the district.

H.B. AMES TO SPEAK

Man Who Exposed Timber Steals to Address an Audience Here.

The electors of this district will have an opportunity on Monday evening August 3rd, which few of them will care to miss.

H. B. Ames, the Conservative member of the Dominion House for Montreal, St. Antoine, the man whomade the famous timber-steal exposure at the beginning of this session, is coming west to speak. His first address will be given in this city in the opera house, on Monday, August 3rd. With him will be M. S. McCarthy, the strong representative for Calgary

Mr. Ames is a fine, powerful speaker, and has the timber-steal business at his fingers' ends. The bomb that was exploded on the Liberal party in The House, which disorganized their work for the entire session, which had such an effect on all the by-elections, will make a most interesting evening for those who hear him.

Bring your friends and get the truths about some of these great graft games.

EAGLE BUTTE GATHERING

The English church social which was held last Wednesday at G. H. Macdonell's place at Eagle Buttewas the greatest success. Over a hundred attended and the receipts will be a great help to the church. Dancing commenced at 8 p.m. and continued until 3 a.m. A sale of articles provided by the church people was held shortly after midnight. Mrs. Gobbett of Little Plume was a one happy. The house was beautigypsy fortune teller and made everygypsy fortune teller and made everyone happy. The house was beautifully decorated.

Among those present were Mesdames Musgrove, Clark, Dixon, Morrison and Vinter, and Misses Boulton, Musgrove, Johnstone, Bateman, Wilson, Hamilton, Sedges, Hankle and Mitchell, Messrs. Lindsay, Clark, Salmond and Garlough.

From Medicine Hat, Messrs. C. A. Magrath, Niblock, Spencer, J. H. Collier and Switzer took in the social evening and just arrived home in time for the next day's work.

Messrs. J. Anderson and H. Hamilton, violinists; and Mr. R. Wilson, cornettist, supplied the music.

SOLDIERS FOR TERCENTENARY

THREE LOCAL MEN GO

On Sunday night 32 soldiers in charge of Lieut. Meiklejohn passed through the city on their way to Quebec to attend the tercentenary ceremonies. Corp. A. R. B. Richmond, Pt. J. Fowler, and Pt. J. Marshall went from Medicine Hat.

The boys had their horses and special cars. They expressed themselves delighted with the meals and service provided by the C.P.R.

Does It Pay?

A men's furnisher told the Times last week that from his last advertisement he could trace directly a number of sales which a great deal more than paid for the ad.

L. Foster inserted a tent ad. last week in The Times, and had two sales of tents in less than two days.

The Times does not ask you to give your good money to advertising in it because it has a good circulation. It's circulation speaks for itself. But when direct results are shown as the basis—that is the true argument for advertising.

Coleridge Booming

Two new business places have opened up in Coleridge. Mrs. D. Cavin is running the City Restaurant, and Mr. H. N. Cavan has started a men's furnishings store. Coleridgites have great faith in their little village and are showing it by opening places of usiness.

PUMPS BEING INSTALLED.

One of the new pumps is being installed at the power-house. It is expected that the hill-climbers will have the benefit of it in about ten days. The Canada Foundry men is working 15 hours a day and are being paid by the city.

ATHLETICS

LACROSSE.

The senior lacrosse team must have eaten up the Calgary boys in their match on Wednesday. The Calgary Herald says:

Medicine Hat played chameleon colored rings around the Calgary outfit in the lacrosse game last night. That is they played rings around the locals that appeared black to the Calgarians, but they were bright and rosy to the Medicine Hat rooters, who were up in force.

Seven to nothing tells the tale of the match, but it does not tell why. The reason was that Medicine Hat played better than Calgary in every department. They had a superior goal tender, their defence was better, and their aggressive combination had the Calgary lads faded.

Calgary did not put up the game they played against Lethbridge. They could not mass in goal for defence, they could not draw out the Hat players, they failed in passing at critical times, and they shot poorly. Also more than once the Hat boys worked the ball within shooting distance when there was no one to protect the home goal but the long goal tender.

McDonnell played a splendid game as did Anderson. Dan McLeod, as usual, was there with the good work, but Tim Dunne was off, as were also the most of the new players.

Medicine Hat had us faded to a frazzle on the passing and checking, and the score shows it. Twice Ready tried for goal, and others of the team tried, a score of times more, but the massed defence of the gas players was too much, and could not be broken.

Ritchie, in the black sweater, scored first for the Hat. The second score was made by Vic Ready, and then he snapped in a third, all in the first quarter.

Neff, who played a splendid game for his team, scored the fourth tally, and tried again a few minutes later, but shot over the net. Three times this quarter Calgary had a chance, but shot poorly. The quarter ended with Dan McLeod and Collier wrestling on the ground.

A. Hallward passed over the fifth tally, Collier shot in the sixth, and Neff again came to the fore with the seventh and last count.

There was a fairly good crowd present, and they witnessed a splendid game. There were a few mixups, and once Stewart of Calgary, deliberately floored a Medicine Hatman who tried to cross-check him. Stewart roosted for seven minutes. The referee, E'mo Fraser, of Lethbridge, was strictly impartial, and this counterbalanced much of the work he overlooked. Calgary played hardest in the third quarter, but could make no impression on the Hat.

The teams lined us as follows:

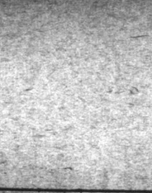
Medicine Hat—Goal, J. Peard; point, Hatcher; cover, W. Peard; defence, A. Peard, Preston and S. Taylor; centre, Collier; home field, A. Hallward, Neff and J. Hallward; outside, V. Ready, inside Ritchie.

Calgary—Goal, Tansey; point, Horrobin; cover, Reynolds; defence, Dunne, McLeod and McDonnelly; centre, Ross; home field, Melrose, Longfellow and Stewart; outside, Anderson; inside, J. Ready.

This was supposed to be the Calgary line-up, but many changes were made

(Calgary Albertaa.)

The battle went against us last night, and not in any casual way either, for the Calgary lacrosse team was routed, horse, foot and artillery and other things which go to make up a good lacrosse game. There was no saving grace, there was no evil eyed referee to cast the blame upon, there was no weakened team, for it couldn't be better, there was nothing to it but the demon warriors from the Hat, who played our men to a standstill, and having progressed thus far, proceeded still further and played our men off their feet.



There is an excuse, and though we, in Calgary, do not offer excuses for defeats very often, this is such a palpable one, and for all so little of an excuse, that no report of the game would be intelligible without it. There has been too much Dominion Fair and such things for the Calgary team. The boys have not had a stick in hand since the famous triumph in the gas town more than a week ago. The team had a comparatively easy thing of it in Medicine Hat, with the result that lacrosse work was neglected, with the result that practically the sameteam or probably a better team, which waded through the Hat team in Medicine Hat, right in the gasworks itself, fell down before the Hatters so deplorably last night.

The Hat team, which appeared in Calgary for the first time within the memory of man, last night, is a pretty nifty aggregation, and the team which makes a habit of trimming this outfit will be forced toarise early in the morning. The ancient William Hatcher, who learned the game with the original Indians shortly after Columbus made the American port, played last night like a colt, or hardly like a colt either. He played like a colt with years and years of very valuable experiences. Then the Peards, who have always been the works at Medicine Hat are right on the job. The goalkeeper Peard pulled off some fancy stunts that are not often seen upon a lacrosse field.

The team is pretty well balanced all through. Neff is a very fine lacrosse player, and Ritchie did some very good work with his shooting iron, and others who are not named right here were strong too.

This lacrosse game, like all lacrosse games, may be divided into four parts. These were invasion, consternation, blockade and disaster or rout. For the first half of the first period the Calgary team had much the better of the game, but unfortunately whenever the ballcame near the goal posts the ancient William Hatcher took after it and shooed it away to theother end, just as he was in the habit of doing in the early 70's, or if he happened to be engaged elsewhere, Mr. Goal Keeper Peard lifted the bulb to the storm clouds and got rid of danger that way.

We expected to pull off a few neat stunts in the third quarter, but the rock of ages backed up in the goal district, and wouldn't be enticed therefrom. During this spasm Goal Keeper Peard did some of the merriest work between the flags that has been pulled off in this burg. It was neat and gaudy, but it didn't count us any goals.

If you see a gang of cripples and physical wrecks being helped upfrom the baseball grounds some time within the next few days it won't be the remains of a Tipperary carnival. It will likely be the "Has-Beens" after their game with the would-Bes." While they are all under Bernard McFadden training it is not expected that they will be able to getdown to weight in time, in which case the game will go on, but bets will be called off unless the "Has-Beens" win.

The team which is doing nightly sprints and rub-downs and practising on high-balls and summer flies will be composed at latest reports of: E. Johnston c., Vogan 2b., O'Hara 1b., Tweed s.s., Binnings c.f., Amy r.f., C. S. Pingle l.f., J. Turpin 3b., Barefoot p., J. Fleming and Navin will be spares. The idea of two such strong men as spares is that the named team is to set the pace and wear out the C.P.R. and then when the first two drop off from exhaustion, the spares are to jump into the game, fresh and strong and walk over the railroad boys' collars. O'Hara is selected as manager of the C.P.R., and therefore with power to put on the weakest team they have. Special men are being signed in order to make it weak enough.

These inside twists in choice of players are exposed so that thecrowd may be encouraged to bet on the "Has-Beens."

The game will be tomorrow night at 6.45. Admission 25 cents to the grounds, 25 cents to grand stand. Ladies free to everything. Proceeds in aid of hospital.

The players are requested to report to O'Hara, when they will be given uniforms.

Ed. Johnston will catch for the Bachelors hereafter as Landis has left the City. A new man by the name of Jordan is holding down first.

The Calgary C.P.R. team is going to visit Medicine Hat soon to see if thev can't break the winning streak of the latter.

The game on Tuesday was supposed to be between the C.P.R. and the Bachelors. Instead it was between the City and Bachelors. As the papers were not informed of the game, it is evident that no report is desired. After the league game, which ran five innings, the Sloppy Weathers met the Dusty Roads in a swift game. The result was mud.

The City baseball team has disbanded, or fallen to pieces or disintegrated or got scared, or been bluffed out, or been drummed out. Anyway it is up the flue. The other teams will fight for the Elliott Shield.

The new schedule which includes games on every Tuesday and Friday nights as heretofore is as follows:

July 10—C.P.R. vs. Bachelors.
July 14—Bachelors vs. Fire Brigade.
July 17—C. P.R. vs. Fire Brigade.
July 21.—Bachelors vs. Fir Brigade.
July 24—Bachelors vs. C.P.R.
July 28—C.P.R. vs. Fire Brigade.
July 21—Bachelors vs. Fire Brigade.
Aug. 4—C. P. R. vs Bachelors.
Aug. 7—Bachelors vs. Fire Brigade.
Aug. 11—C.P.R. vs. Fire Brigade.
Aug. 14—Bachelors vs. C.P.R.
Aug. 18—Fire Brigade vs. C.P.R.

These ought to be fast games as the two weaker teams will strengthen up and put up a better argument with the fast C.P.R. boys.

COLLEGE RE-OPENING

The Garbutt Business College of Calgary will re-open for the registration and reception of new students for the fall term on Aug. 31st. This school employs a staff of six expert teachers. The courses are modern and the results produced are best shown in the success and satisfaction enjoyed by the graduates of this excellent school. Its beautiful prospectus has come to hand and is an excellent one. It is free to anyone who is interested in practical education.

The C. P. R. baseball team will meet the Swift Current boys on Thursday night at 6.30. Swift Current has beaten Maple Creek twice, so that the game should be fast.

The McCarthy Club of Calgary wanted to come here to play the C.P.R. boys some of these days and wanted all expenses guaranteed. As this was not done when the C.P.R. boys went to Calgary, Manager O'Hara refused. Then the Calgary boys wanted the C.P.R. boys to go there and their hotel and bus fares would be paid. Of course this was promptly turned down, too. So Calgary is not coming.

The game between the C.P.R. and Bachelors scheduled for Friday night was called off on account of the disastrous wreck of Thursday.

A Great Irrigation Dam

With the present development of irrigation in the West, the following from The Scientific American will be of interest:

The irrigation dam in construction on the Salt River in eastern Arizona is one of the greatest projects of its kind which has been as yet undertaken by the United States Board of Reclamation. The Roosevelt dam, which is to create the Tonto reservoir, will be with one exception the highest constructed by the Board's engineers, while effeceding all other of their works in other capacities. The dam, of which preliminary information was given in a previous issue, will form a storage basin holding sufficient water to flood 1,300,000 acres to an average depth of one foot. This quantity is much larger than the volume held in storage by the greatest Nile reservoir. The supply will be secured from the Verde and the Salt rivers, which drain a watershed of 6,260 square miles. The average yearly rainfall over this drainage basin is not over 20 inches The annual rainfall upon the territory to be irrigated ranges from 3 to 10 inches, and the rapid evaporation of moisture is indicated by the fact that the temperature in summer ranges as high as 120 degrees, although the elevation varies from 1,000 to 1,300 feet altitude. The dam will impound sufficient water to fully irrigate 270,000 acres of soil. This soil is known to be fertile when water in sufficient quantities is applied; the Department of Agriculture having tested a few experimental tracts, with the result that the crops have been remarkable for their quality and yield.

A feature of the undertaking is the power canal. Water power or electric current has before been secured from dams intended for irrigating purposes by utilizing the waste water. Such power, however, is only available when the flow of water into a reservoir is more than sufficient to fill it. The power at Roosevelt is obtained independently of the irrigating scheme, the canal being separate from the reservoir and one of the first works completed. The head of water secured by means of the canal actuates waterwheels connected to electric generators at present developing over 1,500 horsepower. From the power station extends a transmission line conveying current to the plant for the manufacture of cement, the stone-crushing plant, for lighting, operating the aerial railway and for other purposes. Under a head of 250 feet, hydraulic jets with nozzles of 11 inches have been used towash away the loose formation and accumulation of sump above the bedrock upon which the dam proper is being built, and have greatly facilitated progress. Much of the gravel thus secured has been utilized for construct on material. To remove the gravel, elevators have been placed in service.

This canal, which is twenty miles in length, is one of the permanent works. Most of it is lined with concrete, and it includes several extensive tunnels, aggregating nearly 10,000 feet in length. It is carried over gulches by concrete pipes. The dams used for diverting the water to the power canal represent a cost of $40,000, while the canal, including its pressure pipe and auxiliary structures, represents a total of nearly $1,000,000. When all of the generating sets to be installed are in service, it will develop no less than 4,400 horse-power, which will be used for pumping water for irrigation.

A cement mill has a capacity for manufacturing 10,000 barrels a month when the machinery is working to its complete capacity. Much of the raw material necessary for cement has been found in abundance locally, and cement is manufactured at a cost of $2.25 per barrel, less than half the cost of cement from the outside. The mill is operated entirely by electric power, as already intimated, the current being transmitted from the power house at the end of the canal.

Work upon the construction of the dam proper has been in progress only since September 20, 1906, owing to the immense amount of labor required in making the excavations to bedrock. When it is remembered that the height of the dam above the rock is 284 feet, the length at the top 1,080 feet, the time and labor required in preparing the site for the wall do not seem excessive. The work is what is technically known as a masonry dam with a gravity section arising from the foundation. It will range in thickness from nearly 175 feet at the bottom to 16 feet at the top—sufficient to provide a highway for vehicles.

As soon as the blocks of some are quarried, they are carried to the site and placed in position by boom derricks, while the aerial tramway conveys the cement in which they are set. An enormous quantity of rock, set in concrete, is required for filling in behind the face, and bowlders as large as can be handled are used. Nearly 400,000 cubic yards of masonry will be placed in position when the dam is completed, and the reservoir which it will create will form a lake 25¼ square miles in area. As soon as the dam is finished, the cement mill and other construction plant will be stripped of all machinery which can be profitably removed, and the buildings abandoned as they will be many feet under water when the reservoir fills.

An interesting feature of the work is an outlet, which has been constructed through the walls of the canyon a distance of 500 feet. This tunnel will not only carry off much of the surplus water, but also the silt which is brought down the channels in such large quantities during flood height. The question of removing this silt was solved by the engineers by planning the tunnell in question. The current through it will be so rapid, that it is believed the sediment will thus be removed without difficulty. The tunnel contains no less than six gates, which will be required to regulate the flow of the water. They are built to be operated under a pressure of 100 pounds to the square inch, and including their operating mechanism will weigh in the aggregate nearly 400 tons.

Considering the extent of the project, rapid progress has been made. On June 1 of last year three per cent of the construction had been completed. At the end of 1907, however, the great wall had reached a point nearly 20 feet above its base and extending from side to side of the canyon. This work has been accomplished in a climate where the temperature reaches 120 deg., and operations have been carried on during the intense heat of the summer.

The diversion dam to be constructed 30 miles from the main dam is almost as important a connection with the reclamation of this section of Arizona as the construction at Roosevelt. Work has been in progress upon this for over a year. It is intended to keep the water of the Salt and Verde rivers at a certain level, and will increase their depth to the extent of 15 feet over the present low-water average. An idea of the dimensions of this dam can be gained when it is stated that it will be nearly 1,300 feet long, and will require 40,000 cubic yards of concrete before it is completed. A distributing canal is being built in connection with regulating gates, which will have a flow of at least 2,000 feet per second. This is located upon the north side of the dam. Another canal with the capacity of 1,000 feet per second is being constructed on the south side. The site of this operation is at what is known as Granite Reef, about thirty milesfrom Phoenix. It will furnish the water which will be served by the electric pumps already referred to, the service covering 40,000 acres.

Western Real Estate Men Meet

(Winnipeg Saturday Post).

July 15 is the date. Get it distinctly marked on the tablet of your memory, for it will be a red letter day in the history of real estate operations in Western Canada. It will be the birthday of the "Western Federation of Real Estate brokers," an organization destined to entirely remodel the present methods of handling western property by individual effort. It will inaugurate a broader, saner, stronger system of manipulating the sale of the greatest area of undeveloped farm lands in the world.

The date was finally decided upon on June 18 by the executive of the Winnipeg Real Estate exchange who met for the special purpose of discussing the project, and was selected in order that advantage might be taken of the special railway rates offered at that time for the Winnipeg Industrial Fair. The executive of the Exchange, which is composed of the shrewdest and most conservative men on its membership roll, were unanimously in favor of promoting the scheme, and with commendable directness and energy took immediate steps to interest the real estate brokers throughout the west. A strongly worded circular, outlining the plan and laying particular stress upon the direct benefits to be obtained by all who are connected with it, was sent out to over two thousand western agents, together with an urgent invitation to attend, and nothing is being left undone to arouse interest and enthusiasm in the undertaking.

In order that the members of the local exchange might be apprised of the action of its executive and thoroughly informed of the objects of a Western Federation a midday luncheon was held at Manitoba hall on Thursday of this week, when the scheme was enthusiastically endorsed and it will, consequently, receive the support of the strongest body of real estate dealers in Canada.

A special feature of the great convention will be a banquet at which the western agents will meet for the first time in a social way, and by the programme already mapped out the gathering will in every way be one of the livest and most enthusiastic ever held in the west.

The movement to hold a real estate convention of western dealers in July and to organize a western federation is the outcome of a suggestion originated by the Saturday Post in the issue of May 23, and while the plan outlined at that time is not being carried out in its entirety, it is proposed to eventually organize a Real Estate Association embracing all Canada.

It is doubtful if throughout all of Northwest Canada there is any one body of men who are so closely affiliated with its development or so interested in promoting its growth than are the real estate brokers, and it is strange that in the face of the great work they have undertaken—that of interesting the world in the unparalleled investments of the west—that there has been no organized or concentrated action heretofore. The dealers have been working along the firing line as individual units in a great unorganized army, and have been combating the attractive array of investments throughout the world in such an aimless, weak and unsystematic fashion that it is not to be wondered that the breaches arebroad and innumerable. The realization is only coming now that it is time for concerted action, if the great last West is to be populated and settled with a speed commensurate with its worth. It is a well known fact that there are well organized forces in almost every line of trade throughout the west for mutual protection and co-operation, the implement Dealers' Association being a notable instance and trade journals are circulated weekly and monthly to keep the members in touch with each other, but the real estate operators have so far been content to fight their battles single-handed, and wait for the business to come rather than force an energetic campaign into the enemy's country.

The advantages of the proposed federation of brokers are many, in fact so many that it needs no stretch of the imagination to see the "great oak" slowly developing from the "little acorn" implanted at the first gathering on July 15.

The federation will mean the cultivation and extension of social acquaintance among the western dealers through the interchange of hospitalities, and the building up thereby of a strong esprit de corps will result in united thought and action upon the serious matters to be taken up, which shall make the influence of the association what it has a right to be. Where improved legislation is required the strength of the Western Association will be invaluable, and in matters concerning immigration and the disposition of government lands its influence will be strongly felt.

It is in exploiting western farm lands and city property throughout the world, however, that one of the chief uses of the association will be found. This line of work has been especially needed since the Western Canada Immigration Association suspended operations. The scope of efforts along these lines is practically unlimited, and the results to be obtained cannot be established. A publicity campaign could be inaugurated and the splendid work of the immigration association continued. Articles could be placed in various magazines and publications throughout the world, editorial writers invited to explore the resources of the West and in many other ways the name of Western Canada be kept prominently before the investing public. Perhaps, if finances would permit, a magazine similar to the Pacific Coast Monthly could be issued, dealing with articles exclusively western even as the coast magazine ably advertises the Western States of the Union.

It would take a lot of space to enumerate the many uses of a Western Federation and, as stated, its possibilities are practically unlimited.

Apart from the benefits of a real estate organization the activity displayed by the real estate interests—which have become recognized as the barometer of prosperity and depression—in promoting such a project will undoubtedly have its effect in restoring confidence in the West, not only among our own citizens but in Eastern Canada, Great Britain and the United States as well.

The movement is an ambitious one and is entirely feasible and, with the strong support of the Winnipeg brokers, its success is already assured.

Real estate auction sales are not new in Western Canada, but the success of John P. Day, New York's famous real estate auctioneer, as related in a recent number of "Printer's Ink," should be of interest to western dealers. The article says in part:

"In less than half a dozen years John P. Day, New York's famous real estate auctioneer, has come out from the ranks of his profession into a commanding position and, through constant advertising, he has made his name synonymous with real estate selling by competitive bids.

"I believe in any and all methods of advertising for real estate auction sales," said Mr. Day recently, "so long as it is not sensational. The day is past when you can start a man thinking about some piece of real estate advertised as the most beautiful spot in the world, with a bargain counter price tacked upon it. When an advertisement of real estate gets away from actual facts and figures, in my opinion good space is being wasted.

"The four vital points I always consider in conducting a real estate auctioneering campaign are as follows:

"(1) With careful thought I view the situation and location of the property to be sold; find out if the price the owner expects for the property is fair, and, if it is—

"(2) Annex to the thought galvanic energy and efforts; bring up the reserve force, by intelligent direction, the twenty-four finely trained and able assistants that I am fortunate in possessing; every one a star in himself, but all responding to the natural rhythm of a well-balanced office.

"(2) Use as a background and foundation a clear and dignified statement of honest facts, building up from any ingenious way of attracting the public's attention.

"(4) Having every faculty alive and keen, and big enough to understand the bidder's point of view, I feel that when asking for competitive bids that the value is there.

"I start advertising a sale between two and three weeks in advance of the selling day, changing copy frequently, and with the one object in view of driving into the minds of prospective buyers my arguments, one by one, in favor of the property to be sold.

"In a recent campaign I employed a plan which proved very satisfactory. The first copy started out by stating that I would sell, on a certain date, two hundred and sixty-six Long Island Lots in the heart of a built-up section of the city, and asking those interested to send for a booklet. Underneath this announcement, surrounded by plenty of white space, were two words, "Ocean Breezes." I said nothing whatever about the particular location of the lots, and people began to wonder where ocean breezes could be found in a built-up section of the city. The next day the words 'Belle Harbor' were added to the advertisement which settled the question of location. The third day the whole story was told, and by that time a lot of people were ready for the story."

Preacher's Opinions

Rev. P. K. McRae, Forks Baddeck, C. B.: "I always count it a pleasure to recommend the Dr. Slocum Remedies to my parishioners. I believe there is nothing better for throat and lung troubles or weakness or weakness generally. Two months ago I was threatened with lung trouble, but Psychine soon relieved me. Two months' use of it have found Psychine very beneficial."

Rev. W. H. Stevens, Paisley, Ont.: "Psychine seemed just the stimulant my system needed. I shall add my testimony as to its efficacy at every opportunity."

Rev. R. M. Brewer, Amherst Head, N.S., "I have often recommended Psychine since taking it myself, for it is a cure for the troubles you specify."

Rev. Chas. Stirling, Bath, N.B.: "I have used Psychine in my family; the results were marvelous. I have visited people who state that they never used its equal. I strongly recommend it.

Rev. J. & I. Wilson, Meaford, Ont.: "I have taken two bottles of Psychine and am pleased to say that I am greatly improved in health. I was troubled with my throat, but now I find it about restored to its normal condition. I find my work very much less taxing. I believe Psychine is all claimed for it."

These are earnest preachers of the gospel of Psychine. They know whereof they speak. Psychine cures all throat, lung and stomach troubles. It is a great voice strengthener, acting directly on the vocal, respiratory and digestive organs, thus specially adapted to public speakers. At all druggists, 50c and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. Those Fake Homesteads

On June 9th, following a discussion in the Board of Trade, The Times published an editorial entitled "Fake Homesteads." Using information that was taken as verified by the Publicity Commissioner, it was stated that there were few homesteads available within thirty miles. But the main argument was that while most of the homesteads were taken a very small proportion was being proved up.

...Under date of July 3rd, the Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior, writes The Times enclosing information that proves the paper wrong in its statement that scarcely any homesteads are open within thirty miles.

The letter states in part:

(1) There are over 2,000 homesteads available.

(2) Many under entry have not been patented for the reason that there has not been time since entry for the duties to be completed.

3. There may be a few homesteads "not touched," but it can safely be asserted that under present conditions no homestead of any value is likely to be very much beyond the six months without the filing of an application for cancellation against the entry.

(4) I hardly see how there can be any difficulty in taking proceedings against an entry that may be in default.

"With respect to the suggestion that additional inspectors should be appointed, I am of the opinion that it would be unwise to do so at present. Those we have only resumed their duties within the past two or three weeks, after having been employed all winter upon the seed grain distribution, and it is impossible to say whether or not additional inspectors are required until the present ones have made some progress in their regular work. I am inclined to think that, generally speaking, we have as many as we need."

Mr. Oliver inclosed maps showing the lands disposed of within thirty miles of Medicine Hat.

While we appreciate Mr. Oliver's desire to clear the department over which he has charge, and realizethat directly, Mr. Oliver may not be to blame for the present condition of homestead affairs, his letter and map do not refute the statement of The Times. The map shows, that running a straight line across the sixty mile circle from five miles north of Walsh in the east to Suffield in the west, cutting the circle a half dozen miles north of Medicine Hat, that portion of the circle to the south is practically solid red, which means it is all disposed of. To the north half or more, is still open for homesteading.

But the point aimed at in The Times editorial was that there were scores of homesteads within thirty miles that were taken up but either untouched or unimproved beyond a flimsy shack in which no one ever lived.

It would be safe to say that not one homestead in five in this district is being properly proved up. All that Mr. Oliver's department need do is to go up on the prairie and look around at any point where they might stand. If the homesteads are in accordance with the law, there will be a shack on every quarter section homesteaded. That this is not the case needs no comment.

For miles of that country, which, on the map is solidly taken up, there is not a shack in sight. Not one cent's worth of improvement has been done on that property.

And not only is this so, but within sight of this city there are shacks built merely as a bluff—shacks that are never occupied, but are merely placed there to give the outward appearance of conformity to the law.

But where the present conditions of homesteading touch Mr. Oliver's department directly is in the numerous instances that could be quoted of attempts to cancel homesteads which were balked by the most open violation of the laws by the department itself. Just one instance will be quoted here. A homestead within six miles of town was contested in June 1907 because no improvements had been made upon it. Two homesteads were contested on the same day by friends. An answer in the form of a notice to the homesteader came to one contestand in ten day's time. The other contestant did not receive the same attention for six weeks. (Their political leanings are different). Then sixty days passed and nothing further was done. The contestant wrote the Department and a month later or three months after the filing of the contest of claims, he was informed by the department that the cancellation proceedings were being held over until Oct. 15th, "by which date the homesteader should be in residence." In October another letter was received from the Department saying that the homesteaders time had been further extended to Dec. 1. In January a miserable little shack that is not decent for a rabbit was erected, with window place and door boarded up, and not a day's residence has been spent in it yet. Then in February the Department coolly wrote the contestant that the homesteader "should be in residence."

The appointment of inspectors to do more than investigate stated cases is the only solution of the problem. When it can be shown within six miles of Medicine Hat that a circle two miles in diameter will enclose seven unworked homesteads, something needs to be done. Theoretically it seems sufficient to say that any man can cancel an unworked homestead. Experience proves that he cannot, and when it takes some months at any time it is not the homesteader who wants to work the land who can bother with it. The man who wants to take up a homestead to work it should not be forced to spy upon the otherhomesteaders in order to get one to contest. Nine times out of ten he will not try to throw another man off his land. The government should not only pass the laws but see that they are lived up to. An unworked homestead should cancel itself automatically and an inspector should see that it does so. If an inspector rode out in this district even twice a year and reported every case of non-fulfillment of homesteading duties, the land would now be in the hands of men who would work it, instead of lying bare and uninviting purely for speculative reasons.

Of course politics enter largely into a consideration of homesteaders, but the question of an unbroken district is a serious one that affects every resident, of whatever political complexion he may be.

There are scores of men in this city who have entered for homesteads upon which theyhave done no work. Everyone knows that and the Department should appoint a travelling inspector who should keep it informed of this fact.

And these are a very few of the instances which show how badly the present homestead laws are carried out, and why this district is more thinly settled than it should be.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The terrible wreck of last Thursday whereby a number of our best citizens lost their lives stirred the whole city as nothing else that has ever happened here. At one blow a half dozen were swept into eternity without a word. The accident is not pleasant to dwell upon, for every man in town was a friend of some one of the unfortunate victims.

But the wreck calls to attention one of the most dangerous bits of road in the West. Being both part of the main line and a feeder line for the Crow's Nest, it is run over by trains and engines at all hours of the day. Engines run light up and down; oftentimes a dozen passenger trains a day pass over it, and freight trains in the busy season occupy a great part of the remainder of the time.

While there is an avoidable cause for every accident, conditions should be such as to make the risk as small as possible. It is common rumor that a number of accidents have been narrowly averted on this four miles of track, in addition to what have not been averted. It calls to mind that a fatal accident occurred near the same spot two years ago.

The double-tracking of this four miles seems the proper way to overcome the existing difficulties. One shudders to think of how muchworse the accident would have been had not the east passengers been transferred at Coleridge.

The Times does not consider that the newspaper that caters only to the advertiser and defends the water situated is filling the highest plane of a newspaper.

At the present time the new pumps are being installed and as this is as rapid a method of improving conditions as anything else that presents itself at the present time, The Times having done its duty in the fight for improvement, is content to await the developments with brightest hopes.

At the same time neither it nor the ratepayers will forget who was responsible for two months of the most serious situation that could face any city—a situation that Aldermen are elected and engineers engaged in order to prevent.

How is it Medicine Hat booth at the Dominion Fair secured no place in the prize list, although twenty-three districts are mentioned? In wheat, oats, barley, vegetables, fruit, manufactured articles, minerals and natural products, and in artistic display, we should have been able to compete with any of them. And yet with the first prize going to Granum with 566 points and the twenty-third to Vermillion with only 117, Medicine Hat booth did not get in between.

It is a source of gratification that slant writing has driven out that product of a weak brain—vertical writing. The new Alberta readers return to the old slant style.

What Some Railway Men Have Risen From

Someone has been enquiring into the history of prominent railway men, by way of furnishing an answer to the question whether the boy who has to depend upon himself has a fair chance in the world. The Answer fairly deducible from the facts discovered is that, in the railroad business at all events, the boy has things all his own way. All he has to do is to make good day by day, and success hunts him. Thirty seven years ago, according to a writer in Harper's Weekly, most of the big men in the railway world of today were in very humole positions. W. C. Brown, vice-president of the Vanderbilt system, was a section hand, allowed by an indulgent stationhand to learn telegraphy in his spare time Frederick D. Underwood, president of the Erie, was a freight brakeman. W. H. Truesdale, president of the Larkawanna, was a freight house clerk. W. H. Newman, president of the New York Central was a freight clerk. A. J. Earling, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul was a telegraph operator. Geo. B. Harris, president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy was a paymaster's clerk. Marvin Hughitt, president of the Chicago and Northern, was a train despatcher. J. T. Harrahan, president of the Illinois Central, was foreman of a construction gang. W. H. Garrett, president of the Seaboard Air Line, was a messenger boy. Theodore P. Shoonts president of the New York Interborough was a water boy. Oscar G. Murray, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, was a ticket agent. T. M. Emerson, president of the Atlantic Coast Line, was a freight clerk. Geo. W. Stevens, president of the Chesapeake and Ohio, was an office messenger. Lucius Tuttle, president of the Boston and Maine, was a ticket clerk. Samuel M. Felton, president of the Michigan Central, was a redman. J. A. Edson, president of the Kansas City and Southern, was a telegraph operator. Milton H. Smith, president of the Louisville and Nashville, was also an operator. L. E. Johnson, president of the Norfolk and Western, was a fireman. Frederick A. Delano president of the Wabash, was a journeyman machinist. That was thirty-seven years ago. If the nineteen of them together earned two hundred and fifty dollars a week, they would be doing pretty well. Now their combined yearly salaries make more than three quarters of a million—and they have probably saved a little.

To this interesting compilation might be added most of the great names in our Canadian railway world, for Sir William Van Horne, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, Mr. McNicholl, Mr. McGuigan, and practically all the rest of them, began at the bottom rung and had only their own brains and energy to keep them climbing. Mr. Hays is one of the few great railway men bred to the purple.

And the field is being continually enlarged. As one of these favorites of fortune put it, "There are more superintendents now than there were conductors when I started, and more general managers now than there were superintendents then."

On the other hand, the brilliant careers of men like Mr. Hays, who bring to their work intellects highly trained and capable of mastering large problems, have in them a most valuable lesson for the water boy, the brakeman, the ticket agent of today who means to be superintendent of a road at fifty. The problems of railroading are getting to be too big to be mastered altogether "on the job." Young men who are really ambitious must avail themselves of technical schools, and other courses of instruction, if they are going to compete for the places higher up. Some of the railways are actually paying the bills for some of the bright ones in their employ who take this method of adding to their reserves of strength.

Where the youth of today have the advantage over their predecessors of forty years ago is in the possession of facilities for obtaining the needed special knowledge.

BRYAN NOMINATED.

William Jennings Bryan received the unanimous nomination of the Democratic National Convention at Denver last week. In the first ballot he was overwhelmingly successful, and the nomination was then made unanimous. John Wo)th Kern of Indiana will run with him for vice president.

First Aldermen:—"Here's a fine-looking street."

Second Ditto:—"You're right. What's the best thing to do with it?

"Let's have it dug up for a sewer."

"But wouldn't it be proper to pave it first?"

"Of course, I thought you would understand that. Then, after it is paved and a sewer put in we'll have it repaved."

"All in readiness to be dug up again for the gas-pipe? I see you understand the principles of municipal economy. And after we have had it repaved for the second time, then what?"

"Well, then it will be ready for widening. There's nothing I admire so much as system in the care and improvement of our roadways."—Ex.

Fire on Tuesday in Uncompleted House

Just after 6 p.m. last Tuesday fire was seen in an unfinished house near the Road Allowance, belonging to Gardiner Bros. The alarm was rung in from box No. 14, but the number registered at the hall was 11, and as there is no such number the fire boys did not know where to go. It was several minutes before the location of the fire was ascertained and by that time the house was in full blaze.

The boys got to the fire as quickly as possible, but could do nothing and the building was a complete loss estimated at about $1,500.

No Disease is so Quiet and Stealthy in its Approach as Kidney Disease

That is why it is so dangerous. It may become deep-seated before you realize the danger.

It is therefore of great importance to recognize the early warning symptoms:—pain or dull ache in the back, bladder pains, smarting sensation when urinating, frequent or surpressed urination, sediment in the urine, etc., because in its early stage kidney disease is easily cured by DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Mr. Elgin Brisebois, Vernon, Ont., writes:—I was troubled a great deal with kidney trouble. I had to get up four or five times every night, my urine contained a thick brick-dust sediment, I had a pain in the small of my back, and could not sleep at night.

I commenced using Doan's Kidney Pills and in a very short time I was all right again. I am very thankful to have found a cure so speedy in its action.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c. per box or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

Statistics of the Fair.

Attendance and Expenses Larger Than Expected

The clerks have totalled up the attendance during the different days of the Dominion fair. This differs from the report of paid admissions at the gate and grand stand, inasmuch as a number of tickets were sold down town. The figures are:

Gate Admissions.

Wednesday, July 1, Dominion Day, 26,800.
Thursday, July 2, Alberta Day, 7,022.
Friday, July 3, Farmers' Day, 11,392.
Saturday, July 4, American Day, 24,188.
Monday, July 6, Ladies' Day, 6,345.
Tuesday, July 7, Citizens' Day, 9,226.
Wednesday, July 8, Ranchers' Day, 4,462.

Grand Stand Admissions

Wednesday, July 1, 10,000.
Thursday, July 2, 5,109.
Friday, July 3, 8,000.
Saturday, July 4, 20,000.
Monday, July 6, 3,785.
Tuesday, July 7, 6,168.
Wednesday, July 8, 2,353.
Total admissions at gate, 89,439; at grand stand, 52,635.

Finances.

Manager Richardson is unable as yet to give a statement as to the financial result of the exhibition. He confidently expects, however, that a balance on the right side will be shown. The expenses on the building and grounds was $10,000 to $12,000 more than expected, and the loss on the fitting up of the schools is more than was anticipated. The large attendances have, it is expected made up for these loses.

The gate attendance, at 25 cents a head, would mean receipts of $22,359.75, and the grand stand at the same (not allowing anything for reserved seats) would mean $13,158.75 Total receipts about $35,518.50. This, of course, does not include fees etc.

About 2,000 were accommodated in the schools, all told. The people of Calgary opened up their hames to a much greater extent than had been anticipated, and though there were more visitors than had been expected they were accommobated in the more usual manner in the homes of friends and others.

RESTORING REDUCED WAGES

Washington, July 7.—The restoration today of a recent 10 per cent. cut in wages by one of the great railroad systems is significant. The officers of this extensive property would scarcely take the risk of this voluntary increase in operating expenses unless they were sure of the outlook. That they are willing to take on the added burden is proof conclusive of their firm belief that conditions are mending. Incidentally, they reason, no doubt, that nothing helps the return of prosperity like a shove. There is no better nor more practical shove than an increase in wages. It is concrete and definite. It not only evinces confidence, but it begets confidence.

Throughout the depression of the past few months the most conspicuous feature has been the efforts of the large employers to keep their employes at work at standard wages. Some of the mills and factories have been forced to close down for various intervals, but in nearly every case they have given full pay for services while in operation. They have guarded the wage scale jealously.

Under the circumstances labor has fared pretty well. In numerous instances stockholders have gone without dividends in order that labor might receive full pay. Capitalstood aside and gave the workman the right of way. Recent experiences ought to make for more harmonious relations between the two in future.

The railroad in question was reluctant to make the reduction in the earnings of its employees, but apparently its managers could see no trick by which to avoid the expedient. We now witness with what promptness it restores the cut. Here and there, day by day, the signs of returning confidence appear.

The fact that the buying power of the wage-earner has been but slightly impaired ought to make it an easier matter for business impetus to be regained than might be possible otherwise. Soon the hum of industry through the land ought to resound as it did in the old times, which were good times.

EVERYBODY KNOWS IT.

(The Alberta Homestead.)

At the Board of Trade convention in Medicine Hat a resolution was carried calling for more stringent inspection of homestead land. Mr. Hall of Medicine Hat, who moved the resolution pointed out that land within fifteen miles of that city was all homesteaded, but that very little of it was under cultivation. This condition of things prevails in many other districts and no one can live in the west for any time without having numberless cases brought to his notice where homesteading is being done by men who have no idea of even cultivating the land but are making a pretence at doing so, simply as a matter of speculation. So much of this has been done that when the bona fide settler comes in, he is forced to go out long distances from the railway to secure good land as a government gift. With the supply of available homesteads diminishing rapidly, there is the greatest need for a general tightening up of the regulations and the Associated Boards of Trade have done well to place themselves on record.

LORD BERESFORD MAY RESIGN

Those who had the pleasure of a conversation with Lord Beresford, when he was in the city will not be surprised at the following:

London, July 6.—The Herald's naval correspondent writes: It seems very probable that before long Admiral Lord Charles Beresford will resign the command of the Channel fleet owing to the impossible situation which has been created by his having permitted his personal feelings to clash with that allegiance to the naval authorities and the government which his professional position demands.

It is notorious that the commander-in-chief has refused to hold any communication with the admiral commanding his cruiser squadron except in writing, and that he markedly omitted to invite Admiral Sir Percy Scott to the banquet on his flagship, given on the occasion of Sir Reginald Custance hauling down his flag.

It is also common knowledge that at a levee held by the King on May 11, Admiral Lord Charles, in the presence of His Majesty, turned his back on Sir John Fisher, and refused to take the hand of the First Sea Lord of the Admirality; while, still more recently, Admiral Lord Charles has displayed, it is reported, an indifference to, if not contemps, for the manifest wishes of the prime minister and the First Lord of the Admirality in regard to matters connected with naval manoeuvres.

Psychine Missionaries

A friend of Dr. Slocum Remedies writes: "Send a bottle of Psychine to Mrs. W. . They have a daughter in decline, and I believe it would help her. I have mentioned your remedies to the family, and also cited some of the miraculous cures accomplished inside the last 18 years, of which I have knowledge."

The Hound of the Baskervilles

Another Adventure of Sherlock Holmes.

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

Author of "The Green Flag" and "The Great Boer War"

Copyright (1902) by A. Conan Doyle.

"You will, I am sure, excuse my presumption, Dr. Watson," said he, as he came panting up to where I stood. "Here on the moor we are homely folk and do not wait for formal introductions. You may possibly have heard my name from our mutual friend, Mortimer. I am Stapleton, of Merripit House."

"Your net and box would have told me as much," said I, "for I knew that Mr. Stapleton was a naturalist. But how did you know me?"

"I have been calling on Mortimer, and he pointed you out to me from the window of his surgery as you passed. As our road lay the same way I thought that I would overtake you and introduce myself. I trust that Sir Henry is none the worse for his journey?"

"He is very well, thank you."

"We were all rather afraid that after the sad death of Sir Charles the new baronet might refuse to live here. It is asking much of a wealthy man to come and bury himself in a place of this kind, but I need not tell you that it means a very great deal to the countryside. Sir Henry has, I suppose, no superstitious fears in the matter?"

"I do not think that it is likely?"

"Of course you know the legend of the fiend dog which haunts the family?"

"I have heard it."

"It is extraordinary how credulous the peasants are about here! Any number of them are ready to swear that they have seen such a creature upon the moor." He spoke with a smile, but I seemed to read in his eyes that he took the matter more seriously. "The story took a great hold upon the imagination of Sir Charles, and I have no doubt that it led to his tragic end."

"But how?"

"His nerves were so worked up that the appearance of any dog might have had a fatal effect upon his diseased heart. I fancy that he really did see something of the kind upon that last night in the Yew Alley. I feared that some disaster might occur, for I was very fond of the old man, and I knew that his heart was weak."

"How did you know that?"

"My friend Mortimer told me."

"You think, then, that some dog pursued Sir Charles, and that he died of fright in consequence?"

"Have you any better explanation?"

"I have not come to any conclusion."

"Has Mr. Sherlock Holmes?"

The words took away my breath for an instant, but a glance at the placid face and steadfast eyes of my companion showed that no surprise was intended.

"It is useless for us to pretend that we do not know you, Dr. Watson," said he. "The records of your detective have reached us here, and you could not celebrate him without being known yourself. When Mortimer told me your name he could not deny your identity. If you are here, then it follows that Mr. Sherlock Holmes is interesting himself in the matter, and I am naturally curious to know what view he may take."

"I am afraid that I cannot answer that question."

"May I ask if he is going to honor us with a visit himself?"

"He cannot leave town at present. He has other cases which engage his attention."

"What a pity! He might throw some light on that which is so dark to us. But as to your own researches, if there is any possible way in which I can be of service to you I trust that you will command me. If I had any indication of the nature of your suspicions, or how you propose to investigate the case, I might perhaps even now give you some aid or advice."

"I assure you that I am simply here upon a visit to my friend Sir Henry, and that I need no help of any kind."

"Excellent!" said Stapleton. "You are perfectly right to be wary and discreet. I am justly reproved for what I feel was an unjustifiable intrusion, and I promise you that I will not mention the matter again."

We had come to a point where a narrow grassy path struck off from the road and wound away across the moor. A steep, boulder-sprinkled hill lay upon the right which had in bygone days been cut into a granite quarry. The face which was turned towards us formed a dark cliff, with ferns and brambles growing in its niches. From over a distant rise there floated a grey plume of smoke.

"A moderate walk along this moorpath brings us to Merripit House," said he. "Perhaps you will spare an hour that I may have the pleasure of introducing you to my sister."

My first thought was that I should be by Sir Henry's side. But when I remembered the pile of papers and bills with which his study table was littered. It was certain that I could not help him with those. And Holmes had expressly said that I should study the neighbors upon the moor. I accepted Stapleton's invitation, and we turned together down the path.

"It is a wonderful place, the moor," said he, looking round over the undulating downs, long green rollers, with crests of jagged granite foaming up into fantastic surges. "You never tire of the moor. You cannot think the wonderful secrets which it contains. It is so vast, and so barren, and so mysterious."

"You know it well, then?"

"I have only been here two years. The residents would call me a new comer. We came shortly after Sir Charles settled. But my tastes led me to explore every part of the country round, and I should think that there are few men who know it better than I do."

"Is it so hard to know?"

"Very hard. You see, for example this great plain to the north here, with the queer hills breaking out of it. Do you observe anything remarkable about that?"

"It would be a rare place for a gallop."

"You would naturally think so and the thought has cost several their lives before now. You notice those bright green spots scattered thickly over it?"

"Yes, they seem more fertile than the rest."

Stapleton laughed.

"That is the great Grimpen Mire," said he. "A false step yonder means death to man or beast. Only yesterday I saw one of the moor ponies wander into it. He never came out. I saw his head for quite a long time craning out of the bog-hole, but it sucked him down at last. Even in dry seasons it is a danger to cross it, but after these autumn rains it is an awful place. And yet I can find my way to the very heart of it and return alive. By George, there is another of those miserable ponies!"

Something brown was rolling and tossing among the green sedges. Then a long, agonized, writhing neck shot upwards and a dreadful cry echoed over the moor. It turned one cold with horror, but my companion's nerves seemed to be stronger than mine.

"It's gone!" said he. "The mire has him. Two in two days, and many more, perhaps, for they get into the way of going there in the dry weather, and never know the difference until the mire has them in its clutch. It's a bad place, the great Grimpen Mire."

"And you say you can penetrate it?"

"Yes, there are certain paths which a very active man can take. I have found them out."

"But why should you wish to go into so horrible a place?"

"Well, you see the hills beyond? They are really islands cut off on all sides by the impassable mire, which has crawled round them in the course of years. That is where the rare plants and the butterflies are, if you have the wit to reach them."

"I shall try my luck some day."

He looked at me with a surprised face.

"For God's sake put such an idea out of your mind," said he. "Your blood would be upon my head, I assure you that there would not be the least chance of your coming back alive. It is only by remembering certain complex landmarks that I am able to do it."

"Halloa!" I cried. "What is that?"

A long, low moan, indescribably sad, swept over the moor. It filled the whole air, and yet it was impossible to say whence it came. From a dull murmur it swelled into a deep roar, and then sank back into a melancholy, throbbing murmur once again. Stapleton looked at me with a curious expression in his face.

"Queer place, the moor!" said he.

"But what is it?"

"The peasants say it is the Hound of the Baskervilles calling for its prey. I've heard it once or twice before, but never quite so loud."

I looked round, with a chill of fear in my heart, at the huge swelling plain, mottled with the green patches of rushes. Nothing stirred over the vast expanse save a pair of ravens, which croaked loudly from a tor behind us.

"You are an educated man. You don't believe such nonsense as that?" said I. "What do you think is the cause of so strange a sound?"

"Bogs make queer noises sometimes. It's the mud settling, or the water rising, or something."

"No, no, that was a living voice."

"Well perhaps it was. Did you ever hear a bittern booming?"

"No, I never did."

"It's a very rare bird—practically extinct—in England now, but all things are possible upon the moor. Yes, I should not be surprised to learn that what we have heard is the cry of the last of the bitterns."

"It's the weirdest, strangest thing that ever I heard in my life."

"Yes, it's rather an uncanny place altogether. Look at the hill-side yonder. What do you make of those?"

The whole steep slope was covered with grey circular rings of stone, a score of them at least.

"What are they? Sheep-pens?"

"No, they are the homes of our worthy ancestors. Prehistoric man lived thickly on the moor, and as no one in particular has lived there since, we find all his little arrangements exactly as he left them. These are his wigwams with the roofs off. You can even see his hearth and his couch if you have the curiosity to go inside."

"But it is quite a town. When was it inhabited?"

"Neolithic man—no date."

"What did he do?"

"He grazed his cattle on these slopes, and he learned to dig for tin when the bronze sword began to supersede the stone axe. Look at the great trench in the opposite hill. That is his mark. Yes, you will find some very singular points about the moor, Dr. Watson. Oh, excuse me an instant! It is surely Cyclopides."

A small fly or moth had fluttered across our path, and in an instant Stapleton was rushing with extraordinary energy and speed in pursuit of it. To my dismay the creature flew straight for the great mire, and my acquaintance never paused for an instant, bounding from tuft to tuft behind it, his green net waving in the air. His grey clothes and jerky, zigzag, irregular progress made him not unlike some huge moth himself. I was standing watching his pursuit with a mixture of admiration for his extraordinary activity and fear lest he should lose his footing in the treacherous mire, when I heard the sound of steps, and turning round found a woman near me upon the path. She had come from the direction in which the plume of smoke indicated the position of Merripit House, but the dip of the moor had hid her until she was quite close.

I could not doubt that this was the Miss Stapleton of whom I had been told, since ladies of any sort must be few upon the moor, and I remembered that I had heard someone describe her as being a beauty. The woman who approached me was certainly that, and of a most uncommon type. There could not have been a greater contrast between brother and sister, for Stapleton was neutral tinted, with light hair and grey eyes, while she was darker than any brunette whom I have seen in England—slim, elegant, and tall. She had a proud, finely cut face, so regular that it might have seemed impassive were it not for the sensitive mouth and the beautiful dark, eager eyes. With her perfect figure and elegant dress she was, indeed, a strange apparition upon a lonely moorland path. Her eyes were on her brother as I turned, and then she quickened her pace towards me. I had raised my hat, and was about to make some explanatory remark when her own words turned all my thoughts into a new channel.

"Go back!" she said. "Go straight back to London, instantly."

I could only stare at her in stupid surprise. Her eyes blazed at me, and she tapped the ground impatiently with her foot.

"Why should I go back?" I asked.

"I cannot explain." She spoke in a low, eager voice, with a curious lisp in her utterance. "But for God's sake do what I ask you. Go back and never set foot upon the moor again."

"But I have only just come."

"Man, man!" she cried. "Can you not tell when a warning is for your own good? Go back to London! Start to-night! Get away from this place at all costs! Hush, my brother is coming! Not a word of what I have said. Would you mind getting that orchid for me among the mares-tails yonder? We are very rich in orchids on the moor, though, of course, you are rather late to see the beauties of the place."

Stapleton had abandoned the chase and came back to us breathing hard and flushed with his exertions.

"Halloa, Beryl!" said he, and it seemed to me that the tone of his greeting was not altogether a cordial one.

"Well, Jack, you are very hot."

"Yes, I was chasing a Cyclopides. He is very rare and seldom found in the late autumn. What a pity that I should have missed him!" He spoke unconcernedly, but his small light eyes glanced incessantly from the girl to me.

"You have introduced yourselves, I can see."

"Yes. I was telling Sir Henry that it was rather late for him to see the true beauties of the moor."

"Why, who do you think this is?"

"I imagine that it must be Sir Henry Baskerville."

"No, no," said I. "Only a humble commoner, but his friend. My name is Dr. Watson."

A flush of vexation passed over her expressive face. "We have been talking at cross purposes," said she.

"Why, you had not very much time for talk," her brother remarked, with the same questioning eyes.

"I talked as if Dr. Watson were a resident instead of being merely a visitor," said she. "It cannot much matter to him whether it is early or late for the orchids. But you will come on, will you not, and see Merripit House?"

A short walk brought us to it, a bleak moorland house, once the farm of some grazier in the old prosperous days, but now put into repair and turned into a modern dwelling. An orchard surrounded it, but the trees, as is usual upon the moor, were stunted and nipped, and the effect of the whole place was mean and melancholy. We were admitted by a strange wizened, rusty-coated old man, servant, who seemed in keeping with the house. Inside, however, there were large rooms furnished with an elegance in which I seemed to recognize the taste of the lady. As I looked from their window at the interminable granite-flecked moor rolling unbroken to the farthest horizon I could not but marvel at what could have brought this highly educated man and this beautiful woman to live in such a place.

"Queer spot to choose, is it not?" said he, as if in answer to my thought. "And yet we manage to make ourselves fairly happy, do we not, Beryl?"

"Quite happy," said she, but there was no ring of conviction in her words.

"I had a school," said Stapleton. "It was in the north country. The work to a man of my temperament was mechanical and uninteresting, but the privilege of living with youth, of helping to mould those young minds and of impressing them with one's own character and ideals, was very dear to me. However, the fates were against us. A serious epidemic broke out in the school and three of the boys died, it never recovered from the blow, and much of my capital was irretrievably swallowed up. And yet, if it were not for the loss of the charming companionship of the boys, I could rejoice over my own misfortune, for, with my strong tastes for botany and zoology, I find an unlimited field of work here, and my sister is as devoted to Nature as I am. All this, Dr. Watson, has been brought upon your head by your expression as you surveyed the moor out of our window."

"It certainly did cross my mind that it might be a little dull—less for you, perhaps, than for your sister."

"No, no, I am never dull," said she, quickly.

"We have books, we have our studies, and we have interesting neighbors. Dr. Mortimer is a most learned man in his own line. Poor Sir Charles was also an admirable companion. We knew him well, and miss him more than I can tell. Do you think that I should intrude if I were to call this afternoon and make the acquaintance of Sir Henry?"

"I am sure that he would be delighted."

"Then perhaps you would mention that I propose to do so. We may in our humble way do something to make things more easy for him until he becomes accustomed to his new surroundings. Will you come upstairs, Dr. Watson, and inspect my collection of lepidoptera? I think it is the most complete one in the south-west of England. By the time that you have looked through them lunch will be almost ready."

But I was eager to get back to my charge. The melancholy of the moor, the death of the unfortunate pony, the weird sound which had been associated with the grim legend of the Baskervilles, all these things tinged my thoughts with sadness. Then on the top of these more or less vague impressions there had come the definite and distinct warning of Miss Stapleton, delivered with such intense earnestness that I could not doubt that some grave and deep reason lay behind it. I resisted all pressure to stay for lunch, and I set off at once upon my return journey, taking the grass-grown path by which we had come.

It seems, however, that there must have been some short cut for those who knew it, for before I had reached the road I was astounded to see Miss Stapleton sitting upon a rock by the side of the track. Her face was beautifully flushed with her exertions, and she held her hand to her side.

"I have run all the way in order to cut you off, Dr. Watson," said she. "I had not even time to put on my hat. I must not stop, or my brother may miss me. I wanted to say to you how sorry I am about the stupid mistake I made in thinking that you were Sir Henry. Please forget the words I said, which have no application whatever to you."

"But I can't forget them, Miss Stapleton," said I. "I am Sir Henry's friend, and his welfare is a very close concern of mine. Tell me why it was that you were so eager that Sir Henry should return to London."

"A woman's whim, Dr. Watson. When you know me better you will understand that I cannot always give reasons for what I say or do."

"No, no. I remember the thrill in your voice. I remember the look in your eyes. Please, please, be frank with me, Miss Stapleton, for ever since I have been here I have been conscious of shadows all round me. Life has become like that great Grimpen Mire, with little green patches everywhere into which one may sink and with no guide to point the track. Tell me then what it was that you meant, and I will promise to convey your warning to Sir Henry."

An expression of irresolution passed for an instant over her face, but her eyes had hardened again when she answered me.

"You make too much of it, Dr. Watson," said she. "My brother and I were very much shocked by the death of Sir Charles. We knew him very intimately, for his favorite walk was over the moor to our house. He was deeply impressed with the curse which hung over his family, and when this tragedy came I naturally felt that there must be some grounds for the fears which he had expressed. I was distressed therefore when another member of the family came down to live here, and I felt that he should be warned of the danger which he will run. That was all which I intended to convey."

"But what is the danger?"

"You know the story of the hound?"

"I do not believe in such nonsense."

"But I do. If you have any influence with Sir Henry, take him away from a place which has always been fatal to his family. The world is wide. Why should he wish to live at the place of danger?"

"Because it is the place of danger. That is Sir Henry's nature. I fear that unless you can give me some more definite information than this it would be impossible to get him to move."

"I cannot say anything definite, for I do not know anything definite."

"I would ask you one more question, Miss Stapleton. If you meant no more than this when you first spoke to me, why should you not wish your brother to overhear what you said? There is nothing to which he, or anyone else, could object."

"My brother is very anxious to have the Hall inhabited, for he thinks that it is for the good of the poor folk upon the moor. He would be very angry if he knew that I had said anything which might induce Sir Henry to go away. But I have done my duty now and I will say no more. I must get back, or he will miss me and suspect that I have seen you. Good-bye!" She turned, and had disappeared in a few minutes among the scattered boulders, while I, with my soul full of vague fears, pursued my way to Baskerville Hall.

"Go back," she said, "go straight back to London instantly.

CHAPTER VIII.

From this point onwards I will follow the course of events by transcribing my own letters to Mr. Sherlock Holmes which lie before me on the table. One page is missing, but otherwise they are exactly as written, and show my feelings and suspicions of the moment more accurately than my memory, clear as it is upon these tragic events, can possibly do.

Baskerville Hall, October 13th.

My Dear Holmes,—My previous letters and telegrams have kept you pretty well up-to-date as to all that has occurred in this most God-forsaken corner of the world. The longer one stays here the more does the spirit of the moor sink into one's soul, its vastness, and also its grim charm. When you are once out upon its bosom you

Rev. Pringle Supported.

(Winnipeg Telegram.)

O. W. Rorke, of Dawson City, is in the city, having returned from a trip to Eastern Canada. To a Telegram representative Mr. Rorke spoke freely of conditions in the Yukon with particular reference to the charges made by Rev. John Pringle, which, he declared, were true in every respect.

"I have known Mr. Pringle for a long timei" he said, "and I am sure that I have the endorsation of ninety-nine out of a hundred men in the Yukon in declaring that the Yukon owes a great deal to this man. He came into the Yukon with an uphill fight before him. He has worked faithfully to put down vice. He has proved himself a genuine friend of the working miner. To a large number of the men he has been a veritable father, and I have no hesitation in saying that in his attack on the conditions that exist in the Yukon he has done the people, not only of the Yukon, but of Canada, a very great service. I have seen him hold an audience of 10,000 miners so that you could have heard a pin drop. It is because the people believe him, because they believe in his sincerity."

Awful Conditions

Referring to the conditions in the Yukon Mr. Rorke declared that they had not been overstated by Mr. Pingle.

"I have heard," he said, "since I came down here, that conditionshave some time ago, the immoralities of some time ago, the im...oralities of the place were of a most shocking character, there has been a pronounced change for the better. This, I absolutely deny. It is true that there has been some change in the manner in which these immoral placesare conducted, but there has been no decrease in the number of them., no decrease in the inmates and no decrease in the temptations which are thrown out before the young men of Dawson City. I have heard it stated also, that conditions of this kind are bound to exist in a new country like the Yukon.' Nothing can be further from the facts. The Atlin district is certainly as remote as the Yukon, as difficult of access and as difficult of administration, yet there are no such immoralities permitted there, no such gambling and no menace whatever to the community.

Easily Explained.

"Why is this true? Simply because the government of British Columbia, and Dr. Young in particular have administered the country with due regard for the interests of the people. There is no reason why the Yukon should not be administered just as well, and there is no reason why there should be any more immorality in Dawson City than exists in Atlin. I tell you that it is simply a question of administration, and to my mind, there will be no improvement in the conditions of the Yukon worth speaking of until there has been a change at Ottawa. The Dominion government and its officials have had every chance to remedy conditions up there, but they have permitted them to go on for years and the conditions today, as I have already stated, are no better than they were when they were at their worst. It is true that the dance hall proper has been closed down, But all the evils that went with the dance hall, all the notorious characters that kept it up are still doing business in Dawson City. There has been what you might call a change in form, but there has been nochange in the substance of the shocking immoralities which Dr. Pringle has spoken of and which are in existence today with the practical sanction of the Dominion government officials."

Mr. Rorke said he could give cases innumerable of most promising young men out there who have fallen victims to these conditions. It is not as if these young men had been guilty of purposely leading immoral lives, the temptations have literally been thrust before them, and the result is that they have fallen victims to immortalities which have made them bothmoral and financial wrecks.

A Pathetic Case.

"I recall one instance in particular. I was sitting in my cabin one day when an Indian runner came to the door with a telegram. He asked if it was for me. I told him it was not and I directed him to a place some forty miles further an where the man to whom the telegram was addressed lived. The telegram, it appears contained the information that the man's mother was dangerously ill as Butte, Montana. The next day this man passed my cabin, he had $600 in his pocket and was on his way to his mother's bedside. About two weeks later, I went to Dawson City and met this same man on the street. He asked me for fifty cents to buy a meal. He had been met on his arrival in Dawson by some of these notorious women who overrun the place and every cent of his money had been spent in dissipation.

"Oh, yes, I know that lots of people will say that it was this man's own fault, and if he had had flesh of iron and a heart of steel he would not have fallen into this trouble, but I repeat that the immoralities in the Yukon, as permitted and sanctioned Dominion government officials are so wide spread, so glaring, so audacious in fact, that it tests the strongest characters to resist them."

Mr. Rorke said he had read the addresses delivered by Rev. John Pringle before the Presbyterian General Assembly and at other places. "I am not surprised that a good many people think such terrible charges cannot be true, but I want to say right here that these charges, every one of them are true, and I canvouch for them from my own personal experience. It is a fact, as Dr. Pringle stated, that criers have stood at the doors of these dance halls and saloons with megaphones and have yelled that a consignment of fresh women had come in over the ice. It is true that the government officials in the Yukon live in luxury at the expense of the poor devils, who do the work. I cannot say personally, what has passed between Rev. Dr. Pringle and the Dominion government, I have read, however, all that he had stated in this respect, and from my knowledge of Dr. Pringle, dating over some years of close acquaintance, I am prepared to express my belief that everything he has said in this regard is true. I know Dr. Pingle to be a man of unquestioned truthfulness, a man of sincerity who has no axe to grind and can, therefore have no motive in misrepresenting conditions in the Yukon or misrepresenting his communications with the Dominion government. The simple fact remains that conditions in the Yukon are about as bad as they can be, Dr. Pringle could not very well make the mistake of exaggerating them, as they could not be exaggerated and yet be fit to print. The great body of men in the Yukon—I repeat the word 'men,' said Mr. Rorke, with emphasis, on the last word, "for I do not want to confound the men of the Yukon with the specimen of manhood that are living on graft and vice. These men, I am sure, will endorse everything that Rev. Dr. Pringle has said, and moreover, they will lay the blame exactly where Dr. Pringle has laid it, namely at the door of the Dominion government.

Only One Cure.

"They may change things about in the Yukon," concluded Mr. Rorke, "they may promise to do this and promise to do that. but speaking from my experience in the Yukon, I do not believe that conditions are being improved or that the officials out there are trying to make any improvement. The fact is that there are some overpowering interests in permitting these conditions to exist interests that are pretty closely related to graft and self-seeking, and there will be no change for the better until there is a change of government at Ottawa. I would like to say also that I have not told all, that Dr. Pringle has not told all that ought to be told of conditions in the Yukon. Almost any manwould hesitate to discuss for publication the revolting conditidns that most of us have witnessed, but these facts may yet have to come out."

CHEAP RATES TO QUEBEC.

Montreal, July 5.—The Canadian Pacific Railway company has completed arrangements for handling the large volume of passenger traffic which will flow Quebecward during the coming Tercentenary celebration. which commences Monday, July 20, Single fare for the round trip will prevail over the entire system, between St. John and Victoria, and similar rates have also been arranged for by the company with its American connections at Chicago, St. Paul and other American cities in the middle, western and north-western states. It has also made arrangements with its New Englandand New York connections by which reduced rates will be in force. The C. P.R. will, in addition to its regular service, run special trains daily between Montreal and Quebec, bywhich passengers from the west can make direct connections at Montreal for the ancient capital.

The plumbers are out on strike. They asked for 60 cents an hour, the present scale being 51½ cents. A compromise offer of 54 cents was made and Wm. Head's men are at work. Young & Burnett's, Miller's and some of the smaller shops are tied up. There isn't much work doing and the past winter has been one of the dullest on record. Just what will happen is not known but at present it is a case of stand pat.

The master plumbers have a grievance against the city. They claim that 23 licenses have been issued this year chiefly to men without shops or stock. They do jobbing and cut in on the trade and do not pay the heavy business tax of firms with regular establishments.

Winnipeg, July 8.—The last western witness was heard today before the C.P.R. conciliation board and there are no new developments.

On behalf of the company, Grant Hall pointed out that the immense crop would be moving in six weeks and voiced the company's anxiety for a speedy settlement and whatever decision regarding the termination of schedules as regards western lines, he was prepared to accept the board's decision.

Want to Settle All

McVety pressed for settlement of all questions and that the inquiry continue here with available witnesses and later sit elsewhere.

Hall, however, said the eastern lines would have no effect with him.

Finally the board adjourned to discuss and report, arranging to notify interested parties when again ready to meet them.

Montreal, July 6.—Several hundred workmen have been taken on at the Angus shops of the Canadian Pacific Railway within the past few days, and more will be added. The Canadian Pacific is looking for a bumper harvest in the great West, and preparing for the part they will have to play in moving it. A return to prosperity is beginning to show itself in many ways.

The Grand Trunk shops report no change. They have been working pretty steadily all summer, and have turned out a large amount of new rolling stock, as well as put into repair and overhauled a large number of day coaches on the different lines. There is plenty of work to do before the snow flies, particularly in overhauling cars, and the road does not expect to have any difficulty in finding work for all employes.

Pittsburg, July 6.—When whistle blew in the Pittsburg district today 50,000 men who have been idle for several months, answered the call to work. The Carnegie Steel Company which has been operating the Homestead, Edgar-Thomson, and Duquesne plants on half-time, placed thesemills on full time, giving work to several thousand men. Arrangements are also being made to blow in several additional blast furnaces owned by the company during the week.

The Jones and Laughlin Steel Company put 1,000 additional men at work today in its plant here, while the National Tube Works put as many more additional men at work. The Pressed Steel Car Company and the Standard Steel Car Company also placed many men at work today.

In the mining and coke districts several thousand men returned to labor. A remarkable condition exists in these districts. There is actually a shortage of workmen and operations are being hampered by inability to obtain sufficient men. Hundreds of foreigners went home last Winter and failed to return, and this has resulted in a great shortage of unskilled labor.

That the railroads are feeling the resumption of business is evidenced by the fact that all the lines making Pittsburg their headquarters have ordered their repair shops on double time. The sudden return of prosperity has caught many of the roads short of cars, and a big demand for them is expected when the crops start to move this Fall.

(The Voice.)

It is high time that all organizations in the west which can possibly manage it were taking the necessary steps for sending a delegate to the next gathering of the Trades and Labor Congress, which will meet in Halifax, N.S., on the third Monday in September next.

This is the first time that the congress has gone down to the Maritime provinces. The International labor movement had scarcely penetrated there three or four years ago. The Provincial Workmen's association, one of the oldest and strongly founded labor organizations of the Dominion, has been an independent and isolated organization and did not get into touch with the system of amalgamation which has swept the continent.

Last year the "National" Trades Congress, the wedge which was formulated and launched with the active assistance of those connectedwith the manufacturers association, left its native Quebec and held its session down by the sea. It made seige to the Provincial Workmen's association and after its adjournmentthat body decided to affiliate with it. Since that time the association seem to have noticed that it made a poor move, and quite a controversy has waged on the question of joining the United Mine Workers of America.

At this stage then it is a wise move for the Trades Congress of Canada to go down to Halifax in order, they the members, may get knowledge of the far eastern conditions, and the Maritime province men may get in touch with the authentic organized labor movement of the Dominion.

Owing to the expense incident on sending a delegate so far, and the poor shape in which so many organizations are in to meet such an extra ordinary expenditure, it is feared that the representation from west of Lake Superior will be insignificant unless the problem of finance is immediately undertaken.

There is a prospect of there being some meetings of great importance to the labor men of Canada, which meetings will not be directly connected with the congress, Mr. Keir Hardie will be present, and some good foundation work ought to be done.

FOSTER'S FORECAST.

Washington, D. C., July 11.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent July 10 to 14, warm wave July 9 to 13, cool wave July 12 to 16. Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about July 14, cross Pacific slope by close of July 15, great central valley July 16, eastern states July 19. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about July 17, great central valleys July 19, eastern states July 21.

The most prominent feature of this disturbance will be the unusually low temperature of that week of which July 17 will be the central day. That cool wave will be followed by an unusually hot spell and the latter will hurt because of the preceeding cool spell.

This disturbance will be of unusually great force on north Pacific, on Pacific slope and generally in the Rockies country, becoming milder as it approaches meridian 90.

I am expecting unusually severe storms along and east of meridian 90 from July 12 to 15. Bad time for excursions; keep off the water at that time and keep an eye on the gathering of those elements that make up the storms. As predicted in these bulletins, 1908 has been a year of great storms and other unusual weather events and there are more to come.

The week centering on July 17 will bring more than the usual rainfall where dry weather has prevailed and less than usual rain where the heavy rains have been falling. I am expecting dry weather in the southwest, where the floods have been. I still believe that crops will be below the average this year.

Inquiries are coming in as to the 1909 crop weather, and I will soon know what the calculations will say about it.

Oats Without Husks

A practical experiment of vital interest to farmers, and, indeed, to the country generally, has just reached a most successful conclusion on some of the Norfolk farms in the neighborhood of Sandringham. A second experiment, perhaps more vital still is in progress, and will be open to the fullest test when the harvest ripens. The first experiment in wheat; the second in oats.

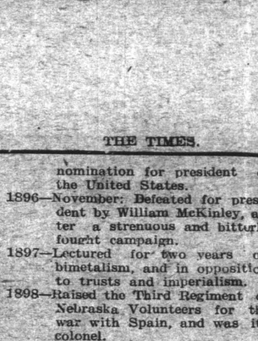
M. Vilmorin, most famous of all French seedsmen, has recently found and produced a series of wheats of exceptional quality. These, after the most careful and ingenious system of selection, have been developed in Norfolk by Mr. Charles Masters, of East Lynn, with surprising results.

At Burnham Overy is a large field of "Sensation"—a wheat now heard of in England for the first time—which has been in full ear for ten days or so. Whatever weather we get it will be ripe in six or seven weeks, a fortnight before English wheats sown at the same time under similar conditions. The straw is wonderfully strong and the ear full.

The experiments seem to have proved:

First, the fact of this early maturity, which may mean the salvation of a harvest. Secondly, that the transference of a grain from one country to another adds very largely to its quality.

Farmers in the north of France are repurchasing some of these Anglicised French wheats for seed purposes. They have visited Norfolk and seen with delight the success of his latest "Sensation." Even on late land the forwardness is astonishing. The kernel is very much larger than in the regular popular British wheats. The straw firmer and not too long, and the fact of the earlier maturity cannot be doubted.



The "Marvel" wheat, also from France, and the predecessor of the "Sensation," has another peculiar quality—it can be sown with as good results in the spring as in the autumn. One piece of twelve acres sown as late as March 23—an absurdly late date to sow wheat—was growing well on Mr. Overman's farm at Kipton. He farms nearly 4,000 acres in Norfolk, and firmly believes that the French wheats are going to do great things for the farmer. It is on his farm that the second experiment is in progress.

Two years ago Mr. Masters obtained 20lb. of a huskless oat, from China. From this he obtained forty-eight stone, all of which after selection was sown and is promising a good yield. Nothing like this oat has been seen here before. Except in shape, it resembles a wheat grain. It is entirely free from husk, andweighs some 30 per cent. more per bushel than "Abundance" or any other good oats.—London Daily Mail.

Ames' Meeting Postponed

Saskatchewan Elections Interfere

The public meeting which has been announced for Aug. 3, has been necessarily postponed until August 14th. Ames, whose revelations in the timber land steals are so feared by the Liberal party has decided to hold his Saskatchewan meetings at the first of his tour instead of at the last. This is on account of the hasty bringing on of the Saskatchewan elections.

Don't forget the change af date—Friday, August 14th.

Minnesota Editors Visit City for a few Hours

It was a great disappointment that Medicine Hat was allowed only 2 hours visit on the itinerary of the Minnesota Editorial Association. After a visit to Lethbridge on Friday evening, the editors, 120 in number, arrived here Saturday morning at about 6 o'clock. As no meals are served on the train most of the time here was occupied in getting dressed and securing breakfast. Afterwards a short time was spent in walking around the business part of the city.

Fully half the number were women, most of the editors having their wives and daughters. They have two baggage cars and three Great Northern pullmans. The trip lasts 12 days and coming by way of Winnipeg via C.N.R. to Edmonton, the return was made by way of Calgary, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, Moose Jaw and Winnipeg, with a run to Calgary from Calgary.

The editors express themselves as delighted with what they have seen of with the treatment they have received. They consider the country much ahead of what they had thought. Many of them were here ten years ago and they tell laughable stories about what they saw at that time.

Board's Finding Refused

Convention of Machinists Resists Change of Schedule

St. Paul, July 23.—Vigorous resistance, supported by all the resources of a powerful organization, will be offered by the Railway Machinists' Union, to the threatened attempt on the part of the Canadian Pacific railway to abrogate the existing agreement with machinists on that road or to reduce their wages. This was decided here yesterday by the fifteen delegates from the northwestern consolidated district of the union, who have been holding sessions since last Monday at the Boardman hotel. These represented upwards of six thousand machinists employed on all the thirty-six American railroads west of Chicago and north of the Union Pacific system.

The same stand was taken with reference to the Iowa Central railway, the machinists of which have been on strike since the company purogated its agreement with the men in an effort to reduce their wages.

Inasmuch as the trouble has already come to a climax on the Iowa Central, the union decided at once to give whatever financial aid might be necessary, and to maintain the struggle indefinitely.

Resist to Bitter End.

It was agreed that if any one road made a successful effort to reduce the wages or to otherwise change the present working conditions, other roads in the territory would be certain to undertake a like experiment. With the object, therefore, of presenting the strongest possible defence, delegates changed the bylaws of the consolidated district so as to authorize an executive board to levy such assessments as may be required for resisting, to the bitter end, any attempt whatsoever to change the present regulations. Conditions throughout the territory, and especially those that concern the Canadian Pacific and Iowa Central, were thoroughly discussed. Considerable improvement, it was thought, would soon be experienced in trade situation.

Officers Elected.

The delegates reported to place in the field a permanent secretary and treasurer. The officers elected were: President, Thomas Van Lear, Minneapolis, now business agent of the Union, Great Northern and Northern Pacific systems; first vice-president, J. H. McVety, Vancouver, representing the Canadian Pacific system; second vice-president, Frank Milligan, Dubuque, representing the Milwaukee system; secretary-treasurer, Louis Harthill, Elkhart, Indiana; members of executive committee, Gus Ziegler, Minneapolis, for the Soo line; J. Beaton, Chicago, Chicago and North Western system; H. T. Matteson, Livingston, Montana, Northern Pacific system.

The delegates will hold their last session tomorrow morning.

CARPENTERS ELECT OFFICERS.

The local of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, which has been in existence for some time, was strengthened by the visit of Mr. J. A. Kinny the Western organizer, a little over a week ago. A meeting was held on the evening of Friday the 17th inst. at which six new members joined the union one or two of them being the fruit of Mr. Kinney's canvassing in behalf of the organization.

Mr. Kinney has been making a tour of the Crow's Nest line as far as Cranbrook. New locals have been formed there and at Hosmer.

President—H. H. Manson.
Vice.-Pres.—A. McCarter.
Recf-Sec.—A. W. Bell.
Fin. Sec.—J. A. Landry.
Treas.—W. A. Finbow.
Conductor—Albert Olson.
Warden—Samuel Turner.
Trustees—E. Broad and Martin Zens.
Auditors—E. Broad, A. McCarter S. Turner.

THE INQUEST

Conclusion of Investigation

The adjourned inquest into the deaths of R. Towhey, W. J. Archambault, P. Millett, Jas. Shaw, Duncan McEachern and Howard Grey was held on Thursday evening last. This rough weather will be present as given at the previous sessions, no evidence as to the identification of the bodies being forthcoming. Inspector Parker stated that no trace of Ritchie had been found.

An adjournment was made to the hospital where evidence of Leonard Black, was taken. This was to the effect that Black was brakeman on No. 17 on the morning of the 6th inst., when the wreck took place. The crew consisted of Engineer Towhey, Conductor P. Millett, Fireman H. Grey, Baggageman W. J. Archambault, who were all on the train that morning. Duncan McEachern and Jas. Shaw got on the train at Bow Island, bound for Medicine Hat. They were on board the train on leaving Coleridge, and also after leaving Dunmore Junction.

That Robt. Towhey, W. J. Archambault, Jas. Shaw, Philip Millett, Duncan McEachren and Howard Grey came to their deaths through injuries received in a head-on collision of engine No. 702, with train No. 17 at a point on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway between Medicine Hat and Dunmore Junction on Thursday, July 9, 1908, and in our opinion the cause of the collision was the failure of operator Ritchie to note in his clearance paper to Engine No. 702 that train No. 17 had not arrived, and also that Engineer Nicholson failed to check the train register and ascertain for himself whether or not his clearance was correct. We find also that operator Ritchie had been working four hours overtime each day during the four days previous to the accident, and that he had been on duty for twelve hours previous to issuing said clearance.

(Signed) JOHN BENSON, Foreman.

C. P. R. Gardens

A Beauty Spot Right at the Threshold

The first thing the new arrival in Medicine Hat sees is an evidence of the fertility of the soil. The C.P.R. all over the country has gone to a great deal of expense and trouble to beautify their property with flower gardens and small parks. And here they have one of the healthiest, greenest spots on the system.

When Superintendent Lawrence arrived here last June he found the C.P.R. gardens gone to seed, so to speak. Through lack of attention the grass had disappeared, no flowers were planted, and even the trees looked forlorn. He immediately set to work and tried to raise grass and flowers but it was too late in the season to do more than freshen things up. This spring, however, his work began to tell.

Now the entire front hall of the gardens is covered with a fine growth of well kept grass, that, next year will be a perfect lawn. A cinder path extends from end to end through the centre, flanked by shady trees and beautiful flower beds. The back part of the gardens is a demonstration of what can be done with vegetables. Almost every ordinary vegetable is growing as it seldom grows. Every patch shows the best of condition, and what every householder in the city should do with a little care.

The cool greenness, the healthy vegetable growth, the smooth, well kept lawn, the shady trees provide a beautiful advertisement for the city, and to the railway company and the present Superintendent the city is grateful. The new gardens promise to rival the old ones of many years ago before the station was changed, when photographs of the company gardens at Medicine Hat were sent broadcast as one of the beauty spots of the C. P. R. system.

A DANIEL COME TO JUDGMENT

VALE-DWELLERS SOAKED WITH MORE THAN WATER

The combination of incompetent water commissioners, a water by-law enforced and a zealous police force resulted in a family gathering of prominent ratepayers at the police court on Saturday night. There were butchers, grocers, doctors, railway men, and even Aldermen in the bunch that faced a sedate tribunal, and everyone of them thought he had been badly used.

Down in the valley there were six who were allowing moisture to percolate among their cabbages and grass when it should have been climbing the long pipes to the upper regions. On the hill the water had come on "in the dead o' night," about the time "when graveyards yawn, etc." and like all reasonable men the householders were in bed. Also like reasonable hill-climbers they had left their taps turned on to get the little water that happens to hit the district in "the wee sma' hours" to quote rural dance notice.

Down in the lower regions (meaning no further than the town flats) the bad people were recklessly allowing troughs to overflow, and cabbage to be wattered and a wary policeman peeped around the corner, read the name on the door plate and went on to the next. On the hill those useful watchmen who are there to see that fires do not come until the engines are in, whose only function appears, at long range, to be to blow the fires out if they should appear (seem as they haven't water to put any out) did some detective stunts themselves. A man doesn't have to be a policeman to see water on the hill in fact a watchman is the right person for him, for he has to watch day and night to find it.

Well! anyway, a few men up there carelessly left their taps on on Friday night and along about 3 a.m. an honest watchman heard a noise, an unusual noise, a noise that should have wakened every hill-climber but didn't. The noise was not Niagara Falls-like, but it was watery and flowed to the ears of the astute watchman with the welcome notes of the [illegible] bird music.

Turning up his trousers he waded into the mystery.

After a close scrutiny, after some real Sherlock Holmes work, he found a trough. Out of it a drop appeared to trickle. Following the trickle back he found a tap and here is where his genius and adaptability to his position showed the wisdom of his choice.

He found a tap. With careful deliberation he struck a match, applied his finger to the tap and after waiting a full minute found unmistakable evidences of moisture on his finger. Ah! even more conclusive! the tap was turned on as shown by the fact that the handle ran parallel with the pipe.

A careful investigation and a half dozen names were on the list, written under the cold, dull light of the summer's moon.

Then came the police court, where 11 brave men and one woman lined up and received their sentence.

In most cases someone else had turned on the tap, or the entrusted worthy pumps had gone out of their road to burst a hose. Anyway Magistrate Kealy fined the poor vale dwellers who can get all the water they want, costs of the court, equal to $1.50 a piece. The hill climbers were let go. No man, not even a Magistrate could fine a man for using water when he could get it, if he couldn't get it more than about an hour in the dead of night. The City Solicitor wanted a conviction, but then the City Solicitor lives on a homestead where a pleasant stream ambles and a bath appears in more than the dictionary. "Daniel" Kealy wasn't to be "lawed" into breaking the laws of common sense.

Moral—Don't use the water on the hill out of hours if you can help it. But if you can't get water at the lawful hours don't get the Sanitary Inspector after you for neglecting to use it where you should.

Talking about water. A man on hill the other day was squeezing a few drops out of his hose to water some weather sick flowers, when a policeman hove in sight. With great presence of mind the man raised the nozzle a foot or two and there was not power enough to force the water the extra height. When the policeman looked the man was merely giving his garden a dry bath.

This morning again a number of citizens appeared in the police court for the same offence. Two of them paid the costs. V. Morrison refused [illegible] the costs and a distress warrant was ordered to be issued. A. Patterson also refused and swore that he had not turned the water on. After the watchman had sworn a nozzle was on the hose, Patterson swore he had no nozzle and said he could prove that Mooney the watchman, spent most of his time in the power house. He was assessed the costs but refused to pay and gave notice of appeal.

Just here it might be said that in the case of a prominent citizen it scarcely seems reasonable to suppose that he would swear to a falsehood to save a paltry $1.50. Patterson swears he did not turn the water on, that if it was on it was on, that it was probably Mooney turned it on, that someone left the tap open that night and let a cow in that destroyed $15 worth of vegetables, that Mooney was the only man he knew of who was in the yard after he went to bed.

In the cases of Saturday some of the citizens swore they had not turned the water on. If such a thing could happen that a watchman would turn it on himself, what protection would an honest citizen have?

C. P. R. LOSES TWO CASES.

The Privy Council has refused to give the C.P.R. right to appeal from the judgment entered against the company in an action by Mr. Hansen a milk dealer at Red Deer. Plaintiff secured $3,500 for the loss of a leg by being run over by a train. Later, on appeal by the defendant this was raised to $6,500.

In Lilly Toll vs. C.P.R. the company appealed from a judgment granting plaintiff $4,500 for the death of her husband in an accident near this city. The appeal was dismissed with costs and as it was unanimous no appeal is allowed.

Weddings

READY—SMITH.

The marriage of Miss Hazel Jean Smith, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Smith, North Railway St. to Mr. T. Victor Ready, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Ready took place at the residence of the bride's father Wednesday afternoon at 4.30. The bride was given away by her father and was attended by her sister Miss Gladys Smith. The groomsman was Mr. Lou Ready, brother of the groom. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. W. Morrow of St. John's church. The bride wore her travelling dress of brown broadcloth with coffee colored fillet net blouse, and the bridesmaid wore white point d'esprit.

After the ceremony the wedding breakfast was served in dining room, the table being centred by the wedding cake and bouquets of pink and white roses sent from Nelson by the bride's uncle Mr. F. H. Smith. Pink and white asters were used in the drawing room. Mr. and Mrs. Ready left on the evening train for an absence of six weeks, visiting Toronto and Buffalo.

Mr. Ready's present to the bride was a cheque, to the bridesmaid a five pearl ring and to the groomsman a pearl tiepin. The Saturday club and Mr. Ready's young men friends sent two heavy oak library chairs upholstered in leather.

The out of town guests were Mrs. Geo. L. Smith grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Clarke, Mrs. Kinnear, Mr. and Mrs. Pettit, Mr. and Mrs. Allott and Mr. G. L. Smith all of Calgary, Mrs. T. H. Smith and Miss Nita Smith of Nelson.

PUMP NEWS.

On Sunday the big pump broke down and had to be sent to the C.P.R. shops for repairs. Consequently those few individuals in the city who were fortunate enough to have a water supply received it at a very low pressure. It is expected that the pump will be set up and in running order today.

At the end of the week the authorities hope to have one of the new pumps running.

The cement in the bolt holes will have been filled in a couple of weeks on Friday—the time required by the contractor for drying before the nuts may be tightened and the engines set in motion. The fly wheel is being put on, and this will take several days.

One pump only will be running during the first week, but this it is said will be adequate for the town's needs.

Business Change

Mr. H. Storry has bought out the business of Storry and Gatenby on Toronto St. Mr. Percy Gatenby and Mr. Sudbury are leaving the city at the end of the week for the coast province. They will stop over at Revelstoke and Nelson and may then go through to Vancouver.

THE ALBERTAN APPLIES

In yesterday's Calgary Albertan, that paper continues its silly twaddle about the coming of Ames to the West. It is apparently well up in cow-show and circus parlance, having had a number of years of experience in that line.

Its latest demand is "why not get a trick buffalo and trained jackass?" The reason is obvious—there are none of the latter in the Conservative party. An advertisement for such a drawing card could bring no more suitable answer than the application of the Albertan. But apparently the Albertan is not even trained.

Union Picnic at Eagle Butte

A Pleasant Time on a Hot Day

Mr. Garlough's place was the scene of much stir last Wednesday, this being the first gathering of its kind in the Lodge, holiday-makers came from all parts, many coming over twenty miles numbering nearly two hundred in all. The grove selected for the picnic is an ideal place for an affair of this sort, situated on a slope of the hills, and thickly wooded with spruce, pine, and maple trees. Roads were cut through the bush, bearing names which suggested originality on the part of the bushmen. Near the foot of the grove a platform was erected, and adjoining this a booth where lemonade, ice-cream and candies were displayed to tempt the palate and empty the purse.

Further up, a clearing was made, and here seats and hammocks were found for weary limbs or love-sick swains.

Still ascending three swings were found, which were well patronized by the ladies, boys and girls. Near the top of the grove another table was placed, where all kinds of good things could be had.

As the day was very warm no sports were engaged in and most of the folks strolled around the trees and hills until evening, when dancing was entered upon with great zest. Lanterns were suspended from the trees and with the heavens as a covering, the mazy waltz and rollicking square dance went gaily ahead.

The booth was in charge of Mr. W. Geddes and J. Anderson, while Mr. Paul Hester called off the dances. Among those present, were:—Messdames Roth, Leslie, Musgrave, Swinburne, English, Hart, Weir, Garlough, Mickle, Dempster, Hamilton, Mitchell, O'Connor, Macdonnell, Hankle, Lindsay and Messrs. Anderson, Geddes, Dempster, Garlough, Fraser, Wallace, Haviland, Kuzaski, Matteson, Mitchell, Young, Waller, Kettlewell, Hester, Hassard, Murdie.

Incendiary Fire

An alarm was rung in by Police Officer Beaumont on Wednesday morning at 1 a.m., promptly upon his noticing that a shack at the back of the Royal Hotel had caught fire. When the boys reached the spot the flames were extinguished, a number of Celestials having got to work immediately with buckets of water. There was a strong odor of coal oil about and it is thought that the fire may have been the work of incendiaries.

Mr. McAskile is putting a coat of paint on the store, improving the looks of the place very much.

Quite a number of our boys are going West before long, harvesting.

Our school commenced again with Miss Good the teacher.

Coleridge

Mrs. Mott of Calgary was a Coleridge visitor during the latter end of the week.

Mr. Frank Lyon's grading outfit which have been working in the yards here for the past month pulled down their tent today and left for Medicine Hat.

Mr. H. G. Cavan took a run out west into the Bow Island Country for a couple of days in quest of horses this week. He was accompanied by Jerry Miller and George Harper.

Mr. Graham of Medicine Hat was a Coleridge visitor during the beginning of this week.

Mr. Mott locomotive foreman has received word that he is to be called to Calgary to assume his dutiesthere as foreman. It is also rumored that Chas. Porter is making a bid for the job as it is a good job for a man with a home.

Mr. D. Milne of Medicine Hat paid a flying visit here on Friday.

About one hundred and fifty men arrived here Saturday night to unload stock which is to be laid on the new tracks in the yard here.

THE CITY FATHERS

The adjourned meeting of the City Council was held last night in the City Hall. Present, the Mayor, Ald. Baker, McKay, Morrow, Spencer, Forster, Tweed, Penhale.

The by-law relating to the $70,000 issue of sewer debentures was considered in committee, and the 21st appointed as polling day.

Geo. A. Luno was appointed deputy returning officer for the polling booth at 399 Toronto Street, J. Benson at the court house, Herbert Baker at the corner of 3rd Avenue and Ottawa.

G. A. H. Grace wrote asking what inducements the city were prepared to offer, in the event of a wire fence industry locating here. The firm would employ from 15 to 25 men. Ald. Baker had heard from an outside source that all the men concerned in this project were good, practical men for the job. Ald. Tweed wanted to know why they could not have sent a man to interview the council. The matter was left in the hands of the mayor and clerk to give the information asked for. Gas could be given at 5 cents a thousand and exemption from taxation and a certain rate on water.

C. A. Krauss sent in auditors report for quarter ending March 31. Filed.

Wm. McNeilly and E. D. Bennett wrote asking for extension of water system to their residences. Referred to engineer for a report.

The mayor then briefly addressed the council on his visit to the Convention at Montreal. He had intended, he said, to write up a report of his visit, but an account of the warm weather he had put the matter off. He would prepare a written report to read at a future date.

The visit to Montreal, he went on, had given him a new idea of unions in general and of unions of municipalities in particular. This year the Union had been very active in regard to legislative measures. One instance of the good work they had accomplished would be enough. The Dominion Power Company had been seeking similar privileges to those granted the Bell Telephone Co. At one time it seemed probable that all the concessions asked for would be granted. The secretary of the union had been able to show the injustice which the giving of special privileges to a [illegible] power company would involve to municipalities, and this body of capitalists had failed to secure the passage of the enactment.

Among other benefits derived from the Union, was the education its members were enabled to gain from each other. One very interesting paper was read at the Montreal convention on the uniform system of municipal accounting — a system which would be adaptable to almost any city.

The matter of auditing had come up for discussion, and it was stated that the Manitoba government had been asked to provide legislation for the appointment of a provincial auditors.

The Building Record

An Evidence of Progress and a Still Better Outlook

Everything in Line for a Great Fall Business

"The amount of building going on in the city at the present moment is greater than ever before."

These are the words of a local man who is personally acquainted with building conditions here, a prominent man in local union circles in the building trade.

During the past few weeks labor conditions generally have shown a great improvement. With the railroad crews fully engaged, most of the remainder of the erstwhile unemployed absorbed by the building trade, every indication would appear to point to a busy and prosperous fall.

The work now under way in the city alone, is adequate to keep in employ the full number of men now engaged until the New Year," said the union man quoted above.

Among the buildings now under construction are the new post office; the Bell building the Mitchell building, Cosmopolitan extension, the Porter house, a number of houses on the hill value about $12,000, the temporary addition to the Toronto Street school, the new high school building to cost $36,000. Altogether an addition of from $150,000 to 175,000 in buildings will be made by the work now being carried out in the city.

The building permits issued since the new year to date total $128,200. For the year 1907 the permits totalled $244,500, a very large part of the work represented by that figure, of course, being carried out this year. On the basis of $128,000 for the first seven months of the year, this year's building total would come out at $220,000 a little lower than the total for 1907—the boom year. The armories which cost $20,000 are not included in the building permits, so that with this the total is likely to be greater than that of last year.

Ald. Baker reported that the gas committee had met to consider the tenders for gas work and also for piping. As to the former only one tender—that of Mr. Grant—was in order, and the committee had decided his should be accepted for a six inch well. The well is to be sunk to a depth of 1100 feet, if gas is not struck before that depth is reached. For deeper boring a fresh contract would be necessary. A clean, dry hole has to be provided and the cost is $5 per foot. Ald. Baker's motion it was decided to award the contract to Mr. J. A. Grant with certain changes in the wording. Notably the portion of the contract as at present drawn up, which gives power to the engineer to order the work stopped or to issue any orders to the contractor, is amended to read "the city council or its agents," in place of "engineer." This does not weaken the authority of the engineer as the city's agent.

Tenders for piping, mains and connections were as follows:

Jas. Rae, $8,204.
Fairbanks Co., $9,841.
National Supply Co. $8,762.
Jas. Rae's tender accepted.

Ald Tweed brought up the matter of the obstruction by the new post office, and it was decided that he see the building inspector with a view to getting this (the obstruction removed.

Considerable discussion took place on the proposal of the Mayor that a public holiday should be proclaimed for the next lacrosse match in the city against the Calgary team for the championship. Ald. Morrow wished to know if, when a public holiday was declared, its observance was compulsory. The Mayor replied that it was not compulsory on a business man but that his employees were entitled to the holiday. If they preferred to work, however, they might do sof Ald. Tweed complained that whenever a holiday was declared the contractors continued to work as usual, while the merchants were expected to loyally comply with the terms of the proclamation.

As the matter stands, a half holiday will probably be proclaimed for the next match in the city.

NEW BAND LEADER.

The band has made arrangements for a new leader. On Friday they secured the services of James Robertson of Kenora, Ont., who will arrive in afew days. Mr. Robertson has had about 18 years band experience in Canada and Scotland, and the boys expect to have the best band in the west in a few months.

It reminds one of the lost dog that was advertised in The Times and walked into the paper office right afterwards to give itself up.

ATHLETICS

BACHELORS VS. FIRE BRIGADE.

The game on Tuesday between the Bachelors and Fire Brigade was a hair-raiser for excitement. It was very warm, but the boys kept lots of ginger in the game. Lorden and McCulla, two new men with the Bachelors, the former at second and the latter in the field played good ball. Finlay went in to pitch and did quite well. G. Barefoot replaced him in the sixth and continued the good work.

The game zigzagged, now one team ahead, now the other. When the Bachelors last innings was over they had one run to the good, but the Fire Brigade, with two men out got the leading run by Trenary making a fine slide on a steal home.

O'Hara handled the battery play and Fleming the bases, and gave satisfaction.

C. P. R. VS. BACHELORS

Still another close game was played on Friday night. With the exception of two bad innings the Bachelors had the game cinched. However those bad innings have come to be an integral part of almost all the games. Outside those two innings in which 9 runs were scored, the Bachelors succeeded in holding the run-getting C.P.R.'s down to a solitary. On the other hand the boys without a chaperon tallied every innings but one.

Lorden, one of the Bachelors new men played the best game on the field. He shows up well at bat and as a run getter is most valuable. In field he gobbles everything, taking in a couple of very hard flies, and seriously attempting many others which some of the players merely try to give the impression of striving for. It might be well for some of the infielders to remember that touching the ball does not constitute an error. With that in their minds they may try a little harder and stop many of the runners. Lorden stopped many an extra base on Friday night by his honest efforts to play ball all the way.

Up to the fifth it looked Bachelors although it was going fast. McCulla, who had been pitching pretty good ball before this innings went up a little and his support went with him. The first man (Lemieux) drew a two bagger, the next reached first on McCulla's fumble, and Snowden then got a hit. After that a series of errors let in 5 runs putting the rail way boys 2 ahead. The Bachelors got one in their half on Snowden's drop of an easy fly from Lorden's bat. A few minutes later Snowden dropped another and Lorden romped in.

In the sixth the Bachelors continued in the clouds. McCulla and E. Johnstone being responsible directly for 3 of the 4 runs. McCulla was very wild, Johnston finding it hard to hold him, and then missing some that let in runners. The Bachelors got two runs in their half by an error of McFarlane's, a two bagger by Hood and a single by Ireland.

In the ninth W. Johnston went to catch, E. Johnston to 1st, Jordan to 3b and Squance to s.s. The chance was an improvement, and the C.P.R. was blanked. The Bachelors could only get one run in their time at bat and the game ended 10 to 8.

Fleming did the bases again, and Scott held the indicator. The latter was a little off, but was square and showed a desire to do the right thing. A little experience should make him all right. A pleasing trait was that he took time to think before a difficult decision was made. The only fault with the umpiring was the non-enforcement of coaching rules. Coachers stood on the lines and worked with no one on bases. All the coachers talked to the pitcher. Also the benches were yelling a lot of the time.

The rule reads:—"The coacher shall be restricted to coaching the base-runner only, and shall not address remarks except to the base runner and then only in words of assistance and direction in running bases."

On slippery grounds the New Westminster lacrosse boys took the first game of the series for the Minto Cup by defeating the Shamrocks 6 to 5. It was a hard fought game. Andrew Turnbull, the victors' 44 year old player was the star.

The second game is played today.

"Sis" Hopkins who played centre field with the Medicine Hat team last year is now playing with Duluth and making good.

O'Dea and Custer (alias Ford) of the Brandon baseball team are coming in for some sharp censure from the papers for rowdy work.

Hulen has sent Hollis to a summer resort to rest up for the last of the season. Hulen was out of his first game of the season on Wednesday. He suspended Kippert for several days for disputing his instructions.

Westcott has been sold by Spokane to Seattle. He is playing under the name of West.

As a difference in the style of managing in some of the American leagues, Spokane has seven pitchers. Medicine Hat never had more than three, principally for monetary reasons.

The next lacrosse game between Calgary and Medicine Hat will be played in Calgary on Mon., August 3rd at 3 p.m. It will be a hot game as both teams have been practising hard.

The Calgary Herald says:—Barney Collison, manager of the lacrosse team goes about the streets with a fateful smile on his face and with his hand on his pocket book. The cause of these mysterious actions is that Medicine Hat plays the local team one day this next week and Barney and his men are confident and assured of winning from their victors. All anyone has to say is: "You're going to get beaten again."

And then the manager pulls forth the husky pocketbook and inquires laconically,

"Bet?"

The Calgary boys are feeling that with their recent practices they will be able to give a much better account of themselves than in the former game, and Medicine Hat will have to work much harder to roll up the same score as they did last time.

In the Olympic Games, while Canada is capturing few firsts she is taking a good position, and having a much smaller number of athletes competing is doing remarkably well.

Kerr, the Hamilton short distance runner is making them all go. In the finals of the 100 metre he came third, being beaten by Walker of South Africa and Rector of the University of Virginia.

In the running broad jump Bricker secured third place with 23 feet 3 inches. Irons of Chicago went 24 ft. 6¼ in. and Kelly of the Irish American A. C. beat Bricker by only ¼ inch.

Kerr came into his own on Thursday, when he won the 220 metre race by nine inches in 22 2-5 seconds. Several Canadians broke through the ring of police and carried Kerr on their shoulders to his dressing room. Burns of Calgary had his scalp battered up by a policeman in the struggle.

Archibald of Toronto tied for 3rd place in the pole vault with 11 feet 9 inches.

It was a hard blow to Canada that Longboat did not make good in the Marathon. Every nation conceded him the race before it started; but events proved that it was not safe to trust to an Indian. There is not any doubt in most minds even now that Longboat would have won were he in the form of a year and a half ago. But Longboat is an Indian, which means that he will be governed by no set rules and will not take care of himself.

Durando of Italy came in first, but as he was helped over the line by officials, the second man, Hayes (American), was given first place with Hefferon of South Africa second, and Forreshaw (American) 3rd. Longboat gave up at the 20th mile after leading much of the way. He claimed an injured leg. Wood Simpson and Lawson, three Canadians, came in 4th, 5th and 6th, and Caffrey 11th, Goldsboro 16th, so that Canada has not much to be ashamed of. Burn of Calgary finished twenty-fourth. Sherring's record of 2 hours, 51 minutes, 28 3-5 seconds at Athens beats the latest race by more than 3 minutes.

ROSS RIFLES ABANDONED.

(Calgary Herald.)

The Ross rifle has had a very practical test at the recent matches and the report of all is to the effect that as far as being a target rifle is concerned it is not to be compared with the Enfield.

A number at the opening of the meet used the Ross and although they were the best shots fell down when it came to making even average scores. Upon discarding the Ross for the Lee-Enfield a very marked improvement was noticeable.

In the final matches there was not a Ross used and while the riflemen say that they have no faith in the gun for match tests they are free to admit that they cannot speak positively regarding it as a service rifle, not having been able to come to any conclusion on this score, not being in a position to give it a suitable test.

A complaint was also made in connection with the ammunition as furnished by the Canadian government, the nickel on the bullets is adhering to the barrels and a number of the guns were heated to a solution calculated to absorn all nickel that was on the barrel.

R. W. Fox, a veteran rifle shot of 24 years' experience had some things to say regarding the respective merits of the guns and according to his was good, the pull-off with long drag observations the barrel of the Ross was not satisfactory and the sights were too coarse for match shooting. The Ross rifle had a 3.00 calibre while the Lee-Enfield was bored 3.03 which was much more satisfactory for quick firing, the barrel not heating so rapidly.

Mr. Fox has shot with the Snider, Martin Henry, Martin Metford, Lee Metford, Lee-Enfield and Ross, but pins his faith to the Enfield.

Report of Arbitration Committee

In the matter of the Industrial Disputes Investigation act and certain of the employes of the Canadian Pacific railway company.

We, the members of the board of conciliation appointed to enquire into this matter, beg to report as follows:

Following the interim report of the board as originally constituted, Mr. G. F. Galt having been appointed by the honorable the minister of labor, under section 48 of the act to fill the vacancy constituted by the withdrawal of Mr. C. P. Fullerton, the board, as at present constituted, met on the third day of June, 1908, and on the fourth day of June, 1908, began the taking of evidence at Winnipeg upon the various questions before them.

At Moose Jaw.

On the twenty-second of June the board proceeded to Moose Jaw, Sask., to hear evidence there, returning and resuming its sittings at Winnipeg on the second day of July, the evidence being finally concluded on the eighth day of July.

After further negotiation and discussion the board is enabled to find as follows:

The dispute in question arose from the action of the Canadian Pacific Railway company notifying its employes in the mechanical department on the western division of its road of the termination of certain agreements which were then in force and which fully embraced the relations between the company and these particular employes.

In substitution therefor the company presented a set of rules for the government of its employes in the several trades.

Differences Between Agreements

The differences between the agreements in force and the rules proposed are as follows:

1. Rule as to the definition of the machinists and boilermakers.
2. Rule as to the method of dealing with grievances.
3. Rule as to the proportion of apprentices to journeymen in each trade.
4. Rule as to the method to be employed for reducing time in shops where a reduction in the amount of work to be done necessitates either the cutting down of the staff or the shortening of the hours of labor.
5. Rule as to the make-up of crews required in cases of wrecks.
6. Rule as to the hours of labor in roundhouses.
7. Rule regarding the duties of helpers to machinists.

Taking the questions in the above order the board finds:

1. That the definition of the machinists' trade should be altered by eliminating the clause "Drill presses, where a boring or facing tool is required, shall be operated on such work by apprectices or machinists."
2. For the old definition of a boilermaker the company submit the following:

"First class boilermakers to do testing, laying-out, fitting-up and patching.

"Second class boilermakers to do rivetting, caulking, staybolting and tender work.

"Tubers, front end and back end.

"Netting and ashpan men."

A Prized Cough Cure

"I have not been without a bottle of Coltsfoote Expectorant in the house for over nine years. At that time I procured it for a bad cold I had. It worked such wonders then that it has been a household remedy ever since, and we will have no other for coughs and colds—it is so pleasant to take, and all of my children look for it as soon as they get a cold at all. Nearly all of them have been subject to croup, and that's when I find Coltsfoote Expectorant useful. You are welcome to use this testimonial as you wish."

MRS. LEWIS HIGH.

Free Sample of Coltsfoote Expectorant will be sent to any person sending their name and address and naming this paper. It has established a wonderful record as a successful cure for coughs, colds, sore throat, croup, whooping cough, bronchitis and all irritated conditions of the throat and chest. It is the prescription of a great specialist in medicine. At all good druggists, 25c. Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, Toronto.

In Favor of Company

On this question the board finds in favor of the company. The result of this finding being to add a class, No. 2, to this trade, it becomes necessary to fix a rate therefor, and the board accordingly fixes such rate at forty cents per hour.

On the question of the disposition of grievances, the company at first claimed that no committees should be recognized but during the progress of the proceedings submitted that they would be satisfied to allow a clause similar to the provision in the agreement between the engineers and the company.

Entitled to Representation

The board finds that the men have abundantly proved that they are entitled to committee representation, and recommends the adoption of the following clause, as effective, fair and just:

"Employes having grievances either specific or of a general nature, may present the case to the proper officer. If investigation is desired the grieved party, or another employe representing him, may, during work hours, arrange with the foreman for same. Investigation to be held with in forty-eight hours after such application, and in case a satisfactory adjustment cannot be made, the case may be referred to the next higher officer of the department until the manager is approached. If, after investigation, the employe is found blameless, he will be paid for all time lost."

Apprentices One to Four.

In all the trades the proportion of apprentices to journeymen has been fixed at one to five and one for the shop. The evidence adduced before us shows that in all trades, excepting that of the machinists, there is no injustice being worked on either side, because the number of applicants for positions does not exceed the ratio provided.

In the case of the machinists the evidence is that a large number of applicants are prevented from learning this trade by reason of the limitation contained in this rule. Evidence was given to show that the work in the shops would not permit of a larger number of apprectices obtaining a proper knowledge of this trade. But this board is of the opinion that the proportion might be enlarged and made one to four, and one for the shop without injuring the education of such apprectices, and that the necessity for skilled labor and the desirability of retaining and developing the boys of the country, rather than importing foreign mechanics, are features which compel attention and justify the board in favoring this increase.

Reduction of Expenses.

The rule regarding the reduction of expenses, at present in force, provides for a reduction in time of the whole staff all the men being satisfied to accept a proportionate reduction of their earnings, ratherthan that any should be discharged.

The company wish to abolish this provision entirely, in order to permit of a reduction of the staff, but retaining the full day's work for those remaining in the employment.

This board recommends that no change be made in this rule.

By rule in the machinists schedule it is provided that in case of wrecks where it is necessary to disconnect or replace engines on track, two machinists shall accompany the wrecking crew. The company claim that this clause should be taken out, and on this point the board finds in favor of the company.

As to Working Hours

The company asked to have changed the rule with regard to the working hours as applied to round-house.

At present work begins at 7 a.m. and ends at 17 o'clock.

It is proposed that the men shall work in shifts, some beginning at 7 a.m., as at present and ending at 17 o'clock, and others commencing at 8 a.m. and ending at 18 o'clock. The object of this change is to secure continued work in the roundhouses, with a diminution in overtime, a similar arrangement to apply to the right men.

No good reason being advanced against this proposal, the board recommends that this change be made.

As to Helper's Tools

The company asked that helpers to machinists should be allowed to use tools, under the direction of the machinists. The board is not able to recommend this change.

It is the understanding of theboard that, except in so far as the present schedules are altered by the rulings as above, they shall continue in force.

At the time when this board was constituted the differences between the company and the employes on the eastern division of the road, as to the details of their schedules, had not been presented for consideration. Subsequently, the differences having reached a stage where the provisions of the act could be invoked, application was made to the department to have the board deal therewith, the minister of labor, by letter, referring the matter to the board, if, in its discretion the questions could properly be decided at the same time with those already under consideration.

Both East and West

The questions above reported upon are questions which are in dispute between the company and the men in the east equally with those on the Western division, and this board recommends that its findings should apply to the persons interested in the dispute in the east.

One other question remains for disposition, affecting only the employes of the Eastern division, that is, the question of the right to a nine-hour day, instead of a ten-hour day, with the rate of pay increased to makethe earning capacity of the men under the nine-hour day equivalent to that under the ten-hour day provisions.

No Increase of Wages

The position of the company, as presented to us on this question, is, that if the companies who are their competitors in business, grant the nine-hour day in the east, that they will raise no objection to granting this application of their men.

This statement of the company, coupled with the knowledge of the board, that the present conditions of business in this country are not such as to justify employers in increasing wages, enables this board to dispose of that question by refusing to recommend that the change asked for be allowed. But this board desires to express its confidence that the company will, as soon as they may, with out injustice to themselves, change the working hours of their men from ten to nine hours per day along the Eastern division of its road.

Framing of agreements

The question of the method to be adopted in the framing of agreements between his company and the men, whether the Eastern division and the Western division should be treated with at the same time, is one presented to the board for consideration. After thorough discussion it appeared that the wishes of the men were to deal by single committee with all trades at the same time and place.

The company have explained that they have no objection to dealing with the men through one committee but that on their part it will be necessary that this committee should meet with the officials of the company having to do with western interests, at Winnipeg, and with the officials of the company, having jurisdiction over its eastern matters, at Montreal.

Arrange Schedule.

The difference between the two parties to this reference, as above set forth, is so slight that the board feels justified in holding that the schedules should be arranged by negotiations at Winnipeg and Montreal to be consumated at a time agreed upon.

During the progress of the reference a further application was received from the car men, employes of the company to be included amongst the employes interested in these proceedings.

The question was referred by the minister of labor to the board for their consideration, it is considered that the car men are entitled to the benefit of the findings of the board as above.

Abolition of Flat Rate

The company, in the event of their position with regard to the abolition of the flat rate not being upheld, claim a decision of this board, that the flat rate should be reduced to the extent of two cents per hour, and they have given evidence showing that the rate at present paid by the company to their employes is higher than men outside the service of the company are able to obtain.

On the Sliding Scale.

However, in the answer of the company to the registrar it is stated that under the sliding scale proposed approximately ninety-five per cent. of the employes would receive the same wages as they are now receiving.

The board, therefore, does not feel called upon to give any recommendation for a reduction in rates.

It is recommended that the settlement should commence on the first day of August, A. D., 1908, and should continue until the first day of April, A.D., 190p.

(Signed) P. A. MACDONALD, Chairman.
G. F. GALT, Arbitrator.

Dated at Winnipeg, the province of Manitoba, this sixteenth day of April, A.D., 1909.

Full Minority Report

I, Jas. Somerville, being unable to agree to the finding of the board as submitted to the department, beg to report as follows:

1 (a). Taking the questions in the order set forth in the report, I submit that the operation of a boring bar in boring and turning on any kind of a machine, where sizing is to be done being recognized generally as machinist's work, no good purpose can be served by eliminating the specific clause. The evidence of the company has not shown any great advantage to be gained, while on the other hand unnecessary disputes may arise through the change.

Misleading the Public

The board finds against the sliding scale and against a reduction in wages, but the introduction of this classification effects both, and is therefore misleading to the public.

For instance: Taking the evidence of the company's witnesses, and type written exhibits, nineteen boilermakers out of thirty-six employed in the Winnipeg shops—over 50 per cent.—are reduced 3½ cents per hour immediately.

In the Winnipeg Shops

Actual practice under the proposed classification reduced the number of what is termed first-class boilmakers to eight in the Winnipeg shops, which means that at least 70 per cent. of the total employed can be reduced to the second class with a 3½ cent per hour cut in wages.

The evidence of the company went to prove that not more than four of the first class will be recognized in outside shops, such as Moose Jaw and Fort William.

At this ratio twenty-two of the thirty men employed between Fort William and Broadview in the boiler trade, or over 70 per cent. are cut 3½ cents per hour.

Between Broadview and Kamloops of the fifty-two men employed thirty eight or 70 per cent. are cut 5½ cts. per hour.

Kamloops to Vancouver where 11 men are at work 7 or approximately 70 per cent. are reduced 5½ cents per hour.

Means Sweeping Reductions

The same classifications carried into effect on the eastern lines as recommended by the board means a sweeping reduction among the boilermakers there.

The principle once admitted can be carried into any and all trades, destroying the men's earning powers through the lessening of the skill required to do a particular part of the boilerwork or a single part of what goes to make up what is recognized as a skilled trade. The all-round workman so much in demand at the present time will pass away entirely as he becomes less a man and more of a machine.

Says its Contradiction

The finding of the board in this respect is a contradiction to other findings in the report—absolutely unfair and misleading.

My report is against any change in the definition of a boilermaker.

Adjustment of Grievances.

I submit the following as fair and equitable:

Employes having grievances, either specific or of a general nature, may present their case to the proper officer. If investigation is desired, the aggrieved party, or the chairman of the shop committee may, during shop hours arrange with the foreman for a meeting with the shop committee. If immediate investigation is not desirable, the foreman will remove as far as possible the cause for dispute, pending the investigation which must be held within 24 hours after such application. If a satisfactory adjustment cannot be made, the case may be appealed to the highest officer.

Paid for Time Lost

If after an investigation, a man is found to have been unjustly discharged, he shall be re-instated and paid for time lost.

In connection with this article, there is one subject upon which the board is silent, and which in my judgment should be commented upon in no measured terms.

When a grievance or dispute arises

SUNSHINE FURNACE

And Coal Economy

COMBUSTION taking place in the dome or top chamber of furnace fire-pot is the result of air and heat mingling with fumes. This combustion produces heat-energy, which the radiating surfaces above and around fire-pot absorb or draw in and then deflect or throw off. Incoming cold air receives this heat-energy, the result being heated air. Now, if the combustion takes place at a faster rate than the radiating surfaces can absorb and deflect, the surplus heat-power will pass up the chimney or into cellar—a waste of coal.

There is no waste of coal in "Sunshine" Furnace. Circuit of radiator is so complete, and air-circulating space so large, that every bit of heat-energy is quickly absorbed and quickly deflected on the circulating cold air, which is thus quickly heated and ascends through the hot-air pipes to rooms above.

The check-draft of a furnace is situated on the smoke-pipe. When this draft is closed—especially on an "ordinary" furnace—heat particles can escape up chimney. When check-draft is opened the incoming cold air from the cellar drives all heat particles back into furnace proper. If the grates and fire-pot of furnace are not constructed properly, there's a clogging and gathering of ashes, and fire does not burn up readily. If no provision is made for gas escape, the check-draft must be left closed indefinitely—a waste of coal.

There is no waste of coal in "Sunshine" Furnace. No clogging can take place in the 4-piece grate, no ashes can gather on the straight fire-pot walls, and the Automatic Gas Damper makes every provision for the escape of gas; consequently, check-draft can be opened shortly after coaling and all heat-energy saved for radiation.

Loyalty of the Local Paper

(Printer and Publisher.)

There are but few editors in this province, says an exchange, who have not made a vigorous and contiouous fight against the mail order house. This has been done in the interest of the home merchant, and without money and without price. If the editors of the land had received regular advertising rates for all they have said against these enemies of the country merchant they could now be wearing diamonds. Now the department store man appreciates advertising space and is willing to take all the average country editor has for sale, and at a good price. What other class of business or professional men would refuse business to help their friends, especially as many of said friends never seem in theleast to return the compliment or even appreciate it?

EDITORIAL NOTES

While one cannot commend the action of the Dominion authorities in demanding fees from a pleasure party of Americans in Southern Saskatchewan, it will help to bring to the attention of the Washington authorities the injustice of the conduct of the officials at Niagara Falls. It has happened a score of times that Canadian visitors to the Falls, upon entering American territory have been forced to pay a head tax. Only a month ago a party of Toronto people was practically arrested at the end of the bridge and marched to the Customs officer, where all were held for a couple of hours until an American citizen vouched for them. If it comes to measures of this kind we have a hundred opportunities of being officious and ridiculously literal to one chance of the American authorities.

While the Hodgins charges of unjust classification in G.T.P. contracts fell through on technicalities, another well known Toronto engineer now comes forward and says Hodgins charges were founded on fact. That a Domidion commission decides against a charge does not necessarily mean there is nothing in it. He asserts that "the way things are being conducted on the Transcontinental railway is simply scandalous."

Nothing more has been heard of the curfew bell. And it is needed more than ever. A dozen merchants in town can testify to the window breaking that has gone on at nights and only the other night some small boys committed an act of robbery that would have sent them to penitentiary had they been older. Boys and girls under a certain age can receive nothing but harm from being on the streets late at night, and when it becomes a menace to property it is more than the simple protection of youthful morality by force of law.

Spakane is enforcing a curfew law after August 1, whereby all boys and girls under sixteen years of age found on the street after 9 o'clock will be taken in hand by the police unless they can satisfactorily explain their reasons for being out.

Friend Owen, the big Provincial sanitary engineer, he of the long interviews, has been visiting Lethbridge and Calgary since he was here and has received a rather bad mauling. In Calgary the water commissioner, who has occupied that position for two years never heard of him before and wants to know who he is. He says Owen is a "person having more authority vested in him than he appears to have of common sense." Judging by the interview published in our contemporary one is inclined to think Ald. Watson right.

It seems funny that Owen should make all his remarks in this city about other cities before he had even visited them on his rounds. Perhaps it was the heat that affected him.

The Calgary Albertan exerts itself itself to a physically dangerous point in an effort to be funny at the expense of Ames and his coming trip. Having nothing more definite towork on than its own fears of the results of the trip its facetiousness is woefully rambly and padded. It devotes three quarters of a column to some circus talk that is really good clown work, with the usual circus result—you laugh more at its efforts to be funny than at any inherent wit.

It is all good advertising for Ames, and as for McCarthy The Times is inclined to think that he is too solid in his own city to be troubled by trembling wit.

The Calgary Herald closes its remarks upon a meanness of the Albertan by saying: "It is incidents such as this that drag the profession of journalism in the mire." It is a cutting rebuke that is earned in more places than Calgary, and would be felt more than anything else by a real editor.

Whatever side of politics you are on you will want to hear W. B. Ames' address on Timber Land Steals on August 14th.

The Lethbridge Herald is catching up all the rumors it can that hit Medicine Hat. Just now it has the Coleridge microbe. A traveller who came through here the other day said Lethbridge was one of the dullest towns in Alberta for business. But we wouldn't think of publishing it on such a rumor.

That bus line to Coleridge is a good move until the plans of the C.P.R. are settled. A comfortable rig now brings and takes passengers over the five miles and it is better than it used to be. Now anyone can catch the Spokane. The city is bonussing the line for the carriage of railway men. The charge for passengers has been seventy-five cents. A fifty cent rate would be better and mean a good business for the bus.

Behold the great game! No fewer than one hundred and forty-eight harbors in Nova Scotia are being given aid. No one can pretend that all this is necessary. Fully three To a modified extent the same thing quarters of them are election bribes. To a modified extent the same thing goes on in Ontario. Wharves are being built which no boat will ever use. One wharf known personally to the writer is being built at a place on Lake Ontario where it is needed about as much as a penitentiary. It is run out in a spot where a boat could not stop except in the calmest weather; and after it was finished, two thousand dollars had to be added to the appropriation to raise it some feet as it could only be reached by a diver. About a mile away is another wharf built by the government four years ago. Since then thousands of dollars had to be spent on it for repairs and now it has almost disappeared. Everyone knows of instances of such useless, electioneering expenses.

These sentences are clipped from two Liberal papers and show how beautifully they agree:

The Medicine Hat News:—"As far as Medicine Hat is concerned we have no friend in M. S. McCarthy. His declaration is that the proper place for the barracks is in the City of Calgary."

Calgary Albertan: "The Medicine Hat people need not be alarmed by anything really important that M. S. McCarthy has ever done to get anything away from Medicine Hat for Calgary."

Now isn't that thoughtless of the Albertan? The News will have to find something else to spoil McCarthy's reception here.

The snap elections announced by Premier Scott of Saskatchewan, allowing only 16 days for preparation before nominations is on a par with the general policy of the Liberal party. It has got to be "any old thing to get in." Fortunately in this case the Provincial Righters were fairly well prepared and Haultain is going to make it hot for Scott.

ADVERTISING VS. CASH.

The Orangeville (Ont.) Sun believe in living up to its advertising rates and turns down all fake of imprudent propositions. In a late issue that paper pertinently observed:

For gall and nerve refer us to the press agent of amusement concerns. Monday morning's mail brought us a nice fat letter from the ressagent of a Toronto amusement enterprise and requested us to publish a reader setting out the benefit of this money-making resort as a place for any and all citizens to quickly separate themselves from their coin. And for all this the benevolent agent would greatly appreciate the courtesy." This amusement resort makes big money every summer and no person ever gets a look-in free of charge, and we believe the millionaires behind the enterprise are well able to pay for their advertising. The fools who used to run country newspapers are nearly all dead and their successors demand cash in exchange for advertising space. In country weeklies the cordwood and ticket stage has been passed and the boys who run up-to-date papers now want the cash, the whole cash and nothing but the cash. It takes cash to keep typesetting machines running, to liquidate with the hands on Saturday night, to pay taxes and paper bills and square the many other incidentals that enter into the production of a 20th century newspaper. Therefore, we pass all the free advertising stuff to the waste-basket, and we trust, nay, we do more, we praythat all our bretnren of the rural press will join with us in glorious and sensible procession.

Knights of Pythias Meet

Medicine Hat Man on Committee

The Grand Domain of Alberta of the Knights of Pythias has been formed at Calgary. A great number of the grand representatives of the order were present from practically all points in Alberta. The province has, in all, 23 lodges and 1,100 members, and the feeling of the gathering was that the order was only beginning to develop its field of usefulness.

The New Officers.

Grand chancellor, H. M. Vincent, Calgary.

Vice-grand chancellor, C. W. McInnes, Edmonton.

Form a K. of P. Home

The advisability of a Pythian home was taken up at length, and it was decided that an application would be made out for the incorporation ofthe Pythian Home association. The object of the home is to supply the needs of the widows and orphans of the order, and the plan, as outlined last night, was a very extensive one, and shows the progressive as well as charitable inclinations of the order. The following officers were elected in connection with the home:

President, J. G. Tipton, Strathcona.

Vice-president, J. Woodward, Calgary.

Secretary, W. G. Walford, Edmonton.

Treasurer, F. J. Green, Calgary.

Directors, S. J. Clark, Calgary; 5 years; J. Brown, Sedgewick, 4 years; J. C. F. Bowen, Edmonton, 3 years; Rev. James, Pincher Creek, 2 years; J. R. Tweedale, Wetaskiwin, 1 year.

The association will take up the question of ways and means during the year and report at the next meeting of grandlodge, which will be held in Edmonton, in July, 1909.

FAUST IS COMING

It will be welcome news to many theatre goers in the city, the announcement that the famous play of Goethe's immortal "Faust" will be presented here on Thursday, July 30, at the opera house, by the Porter J. White Co. No play written in many years has retained such a hold on the hearts of the public. It has proved to be far better than the book, for while the play has steadily held its popularity, the book is now almost forgotten. It was revived in New York City last spring and actually drew larger audiences than it did at the presentation of the original production years and years ago. This great play will continue to entertain as long as wehave laughters to reward wit, tears for the sorrowful, and sympathy for the fallen. It is still as fresh as the newly minted coin and has the fizz of the sparkling champagne.

CHAMPION BALLOONISTS STORY

Lieutenant Frank Lahm, who is now the world's champion balloonist, said an aeronaut in New York, is a young man with a musculine figure and a resolute face. He is remarkable in aeronautics for his skill and his prudence.

'I once heard an inventor describing to him a rather poor invention in the way of a safety anchor.

"'A safety anchor, eh?'" said Lahm "Well, with that anchor I should be about as frightened as the old lady in the skyscrapper hotel.

"This old lady, on being assigned to a room on the nineteenth floor, asked the bell boy nervously if the proprietor had taken any precaution against fire.

"'Yes, ma'am,'" said the bell boy, 'he has. The place is insured for three times its real value.'"—Chicago 'Chronicle.'

COUPLE OF DOSES CURED.

Mrs. W. J. Wilson, Tessier, Sask., tells of her experience in the following words:—"I wish to tell you of the good I have found in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. Last summer my little girl, aged two years, was taken ill with Summer Complaint, and as my mother always kept Dr. Fowler's in the house when I was a child, I seemed to follow her example as I always have it also. I at once gave it to my baby as directed and she was at once relieved, and after a couple of doses were taken was completely cured."

Lumber Combine Case

Court Decides there is Combine

The most interesting case heard before the recent sitting of the full court of Alberta was the appeal against the decision of Chief Justice Sifton, convicting E. W. Clarke of conspiracy in connection with the Alberta Lumber Dealers' association.

The argument was made for the plaintiff by R. B. Bennett, K. C., while S. B. Woods, deputy attorney-general, presented the case for the province.

The decision in this very important case was read this afternoon at 3 o'clock by Mr. Justice Harvey.

The decision of the trial judge was sustained in the judgment, being concurred in by Justices Scott and Beck.

Mr. Justice Stuart rendered another judgment which practically arrived at the same conclusion.

Guarding Bank of France

Like the Bank of England, the Bank of France is now guarded every night by soldiers. But within quite recent time the officials at the French bank resorted to a very novel method of protecting their bullion. This consisted in engaging masons to wall up the doors of the vaults in the cellar with hydraulic mortar as soon as the money was deposited each day in these receptacles. The water was then turned on and kept running until the whole cellar was flooded. A burglar would be obliged to work in a diving suit and break down a cement wall before he could even begin to plunder the vaults.

When the bank officials arrivednext morning the water was drawn off, the masonry torn down, and the vaults opened.—Strand Magazine.

A PROFESSIONAL JUDGMENT

One evening a physician was persuaded by his wife to attend a concert, although he had no knowledge of or interest in music. A number of musicians gave evidence of their skill but the doctor was extremely listless. However, when a certain lady came forward to sing, the physician seemed to brighten up.

'Who is that contralto?' he asked.

'Contralto! repeated his wife, surprised. 'Why, she hasn't a contralto voice—it is a high soprano.'

The doctor made no reply.

'Don't you like her voice?' inquired the wife.

'Well,' said the doctor after a pause, 'I really can't say much for her voice, but she has one of the finest bronchitises I've ever encountered!'

An old German woman became ill and was taken by her husband to a hospital for treatment. The first day she was there, when her husband called to enquire about her, the doctor said she was improving. On the second day, he was again told she was improving, and on the third and fourth days the assurance was the same. This was very encouraging to the old German, but when he called on the fifth day, he was told that his wife was dead.

"Vat's the matter," asked the sympathetic bartender noticing his customer's despondent condition.

"Ach! My wife iss dead," replied the German.

"So? Vat did she die of?" asked the bartender.

"Improvements," replied the bereaved husband, calling for another glass of beer.

Foster's Forecast.

Washington, D. C., July 25.—The last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent July 20 to 24, warm wave July 19 to 23, cool wave July 22 to 26. The next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about July 26, cross Pacific slope by close of July 27, great central valleys July 28 to 30, eastern states July 31. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about July 26, great central valleys July 28, eastern states July 30. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about July 29, great central valleys July 31, eastern states Aug. 2.

This disturbance will bring the most severe storms of the month and tempestual weather will be the rule, in many places of the continent from July 25 to August 3. This willmake ten days of boisterous weather.

This rough weather will be preceded by one of the hottest waves of the summer and the air will be so thoroughly stirred up by the storms that very cool weather will result and the ten days—July 25 to Aug. 3 average cooler than usual.

The electric and dangerous storms, predicted for the week centering on July 13 indicates that my calculations on severe storms are reliable.

First disturbance of August will be a northern storm and will cross British Columbia and the Pacific slope about Aug. 3, Manitoba Aug. 4, northern central valleys Aug. 5 to 7, eastern states Aug. 8. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about Aug. 3, great central valleys Aug. 5, eastern states Aug. 7. Cool wave will keep well to the north and will cross Pacific slope about Aug. 6, great central valleys Aug. 8, eastern states Aug. 10.

This disturbance will be most severe on the Pacific slope about Aug. 3. It will not be of much importance east of Rockies, temperatures will be low in northern sections, low in south till about Aug. 5 and then continuously warmer till about Aug. 12 when a series of disturbanceswill pass through southern states causing cooler weather.

Indications are that temperatures of August will average above normal east of that line. From Houston, Texas, to Quebec, Canada, and within 100 miles of that line rainfall of August is expected to be about nor-

$10,000 DAMAGES FOR RAILROADMAN.

Frank C. Street sued the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. for $15,000 as damages for injuries received while working for them as a brakeman. The case was heard before Chief Justice Howell and a special jury.

The verdict, which was for $10,000 is the largest amount ever awarded in the way of damages by either jury or court in Manitoba.

The plaintiff who was a brakeman in the employ of the C.P.R., was at work at Morden, and while attempting to cut off some cars from a train the lever to lift the coupling pin refused to work, and Street went in between the ends of the cars when the train was slowly moving in order to lift the pin with his hand. Almost immediately afterward his foot became caught fast in an unblocked frog, and the train passing along bore him down underneath it with the result that the greater part of his left foot and his left arm within three or four inches of the shoulder were cut off.

The plaintiff brought his action under what is known in legal circles as "The Common Law," and not under "The Workman's Compensation Act." Under the common law a larger amount could be claimed and awarded in such a case than under the compensation act. The claim was made for $15,000, while, if Street had been obliged to rely on the Workmen's compensation act, and to bring his suit under it, the jury could only have awarded him a sum which would amount to his earning power, or the amount he was getting from the defendant company as wages for three years. This would have amounted to a sum in the neighborhood of $3,120, and a verdict given for a larger amountwould have been bad.

The defendant company took the objection that the action could only lie under the act mentioned and that Street's claim was confined to the smaller sum. The chief justice did not agree with this view of the law, but for fear of a higher court deciding that he was wrong, in which event the whole of the evidence would have to be again gone over, he directed the jury to find, as it were, two verdicts. They did this, one, as stated, for $10,000, and the other for the smaller sum, and his lordship upon their findings, then entered judgment for the larger amount, with costs of the trial.

They Will Appeal.

The defendant company raised a large number of objections to the directions of the court to the jury, and the case will now be taken for review by the court of appeal, and may be carried further, even to the privy council of England.

A local of the Bricklayers and Masons International Union was organized a little over a week ago, during the visit of Jack Taylor of Hamilton, Ont., an old member from No. 1. The present membership is 18 and a substantial increase in numbers is looked for in the near future.

The following officers were elected:
President—Arthur Pearce.
Cor. Sec.—Ed. Dunham.
Fin. Sec.—Mr. Schmiter.
Treasurer—Harry Brooks.
Deputy—Fred Rickren.
Tyler—Geo. Proctor.

Meetings will be held in Cochran's Eagles' hall on dates to be set at the next meeting called for Friday of this week.

The Moose Jaw Trades and Labor Council has demanded from the President of the American Federation of Labor that E. Stephenson, a provincial organizer who has been working in Moose Jaw, be removed from his position. The council claimsthat he is not a member of any union, is not representative of organized labor in Moose Jaw, and is stirring up strife between the City Council and its contractors. Such independence of action on the part of the local Trades Council is to be commended.

As a result of agitation on the part of the Trades Council, the Lethbridge city aldermen have agreed to the insertion of a Fair Wage clause in the grading and paving contracts.

Washington, July 20.—A petition was filed in the supreme court of the district of Columbia this afternoon by Daniel Davenport, of Bridgeport, attorney for the Buck Stove and Range company of St. Louis, asking Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison to show cause why they should not be adjudged guilty of contempt in violating a decree of the court entered March 23 last, enjoining a threatened boycott against the plaintiff company. The petition is a lengthy one, but the gist is that the three men namedhave not obeyed the injunction which was issued by the district supreme court to prevent the boycotting or black listing of the Buck Stove and Range company. A number of specific instances of violation of the injunction are alleged.

Present indications are that the Irrigation Convention to be held in Vernon, B.C., during the week beginning August 10th, will be one of the most important gatherings of the kind that has ever been held in Western Canada. Among the notables, whose attendance will contribute to the prestige of the gathering are Lieutenant-Governor Bulyea of Alberta and Lieutenant-Governor Forget of Saskatchewan. Hon. F. J. Fulton, Chief commissioner of Lands and Works. It is expected also, that there will be a particularly strong representation of irrigation and forestry experts, officials, members of Land and Colonization organizations and others particularly interested in the important subjects of irrigation and water legislation.

It is to be hoped that local Irrigation and Irrigation Colonization Companies, agricultural, horticultural, forestry and live stock associations, municipal corporations, boards of trade and similar organizations, will lose no time in appointing the number of delegates to which such are entitled. There is scarcely a section of Canada which is not directly interested in problems connected with the distribution and consentration of water, forestry, etc., and all should make a point of taking advantage of their right of representation at this important Convention. Return trip to Vernon, the centre of Delegates and their wives make the the premium fruit growing district of British Columbia, for single fare.

District Court

The first case to be heard before His Honor, Judge Mitchell, on Wednesday was the appeal of Chris Zimmerman against a decision of the justice of the peace given in May. Zimmerman brought an action against David and John Schneller and Claud Edwards, for assault, alleged to have been made at a dance held in the Association Store building at Seven Persons on May 15. The case had been dismissed by the magistrate. D. G. White appeared for appellant; W. A. Begg for defendants.

Chris. Zimmerman, the appellant, was first placed on the stand. He deposed that on the night of the 15th of May last he was present at a dance held in the Association store building. He was a shareholder in the concern but his shares had not been paid for until May 16, when many others of the shareholdersmade their payments. Soon after his arrival at the building he was seen by David Schneller in the hall, and the latter, pointing his finger at the witness, said: "You're not wanted here, and I'll give you five minutes to get out." Witness took part in the dance and did not see Schneller until an interval in the programme, when the company were waiting for the violins to tune up. As witness was standing on the floor with a partner, Schneller came up to him with a club which he raised above his shoulder in a threatening attitude, at the same time remarking, "You get out of here or I'll knock you down and drag you out." Schneller thenstruck witness a blow, inflicting a wound on the right side of the face. Witness then clinched. In the scuffle which followed, John Schneller and Claude Edwards assailed witness and all three men tried to force him out of the building, eventually meeting with success.

Mr. White:—"Had you been making any disturbance before this occurred?"

Witness:—"No more than dancing."

"There will be quite a disturbance when you dance, I believe." (Laughter).

"Further examined by Mr. White witness said that Dave Schneller was just hired to do the labor on the building. The lumber was supplied by the company. At the dances in the Seven Persons district the whole neighborhood is in the habit of turning out. No regular invitations are issued. At the time of the dance in question no shares had been paid up by anybody; since then witness had paid all calls. He could not remember exactly what was the size of the club used in the affray, but it appeared to him to be about four foot long, 3 inches wide and an inch thick

Cross examined by Mr. Begg, witness admitted that he had clinched with Schneller in self-defence before the blow was struck.

"How long did it take the three men to put you out?"

"I don't know whether it was half an hour, five minutes or one minute, that it took to put me out."

Mr. Begg:—"That's pretty good."

Charles Wellington deposed that he had seen D. Schneller tell Zimmerman that he would give him five minutes to get out. The evidence of this witness was mainly corroborative of Zimmerman's story. He did not remember Schneller's words on the second occasion, just before the melee. From the position in which the club was held by Schneller he thought Zimmerman was justified in expecting to be struck. He didn't see any blow given but afterwards noticed a mark on the appellant's face. Claude Edwards did not join in the fray till the combatants had neared the door. Witness had heard Pettapiece say that the company were likely to have a good time but for Zimmerman's being there.

Daniel Boucher deposed that he was a director of the Association. All Schneller was supposed to do was to complete the work on the building. Witness thought Zimmerman was justified in clinching; he would have done the same himself. He thought Zimmerman had as much right to attend the dance as anyone else.

James Pettapiece gave evidencethat he was present at the dance and saw the struggle. Zimmerman had been behaving himself during the dance.

Ernest Weiss stated that when the appellant had been dragged as far as the door, Edwards shoved him out with his foot. Witness lived with Zimmerman. They had not had had any conversatio recently about the case.

Thos. Nesting stated as a member of the building committee that the contract for the labor on the job was let for $170, the building to be completed by June 1. Witness did not see Claud Edwards push Zimmerman out through the door with his foot. He was not aware as to who had organized the dance, but had heard that the young ladies got it up. Cross-examined by Mr. Begg, witness said he had gone to Schneller on a certain occasion and informed him that the ladies wanted a dance. Schneller said: "All right, but I don't want Chris. Zimmerman to come." Witness did not knowwho the aggressor was in the struggle between Zimmerman and Schneller.

Other witnesses for the appellant were not called as Mr. White said their evidence would be merely corroborative of his previous witnesses' evidence, and His Honor agreed that there could be no doubt all the evidence was along the same line.

Chris. Zimmerman, put on the stand, stated that he had never been told that his presence was undesired at the dance in question. He never knew that he was not wanted until Schneller spoke just before the dance commenced. He had been present at dances at Major Rich's and Wellington's places. No disturbances of any kind had occurred whilst he was there. Ernest Weiss one of the guests at the latter dance, but no quarrel had taken place between that gentleman and witness. Witness had missed about six dances in six years. (Laughter).

The next witness to be called for the defence was John Krupp, who deposed that a little dispute occurred at the dance at Major Rich's place, at which Zimmerman had made a threat against Charlie Sherman.

Julius Muratzky gave evidence that the first indication he saw of the quarrel at the Association store dance, was when David Schneller walked up to Zimmerman with a stick and told him to get out. Schneller raised the stick and Zimmerman grabbed for him. Schneller had told witness that everybody was welcome to the dance except Zimmerman.

David Schneller gave evidence that he had been given the contract for the labor on the store building at Seven Persons. He related the story of the first meeting with Zimmerman in the store building when the first warning was given. Witness saw Constable Chalkley of the Mounted Police immediately afterward, and discussed the question of removing Zimmerman. He then walked into the room where the dance was being held and ordered Zimmerman to get out. The latter jerked his coat back as though preparing for a contest, and it was only then that witness raised the stick.

Mr. Begg:—"Did you believe that you were justified in turning Zimmerman out of the building?"

Mr. White objected to the question saying that the case was not affected by anything which defendant believed or did not believe.

Under cross examination by Mr. White, witness admitted that his differences with the appellant was a purely personal one. Apart from witness' personal feeling in the matter, Zimmerman had as much right to attend the dance as had any other person. Witness did not himself dance, but attended for the purpose of protecting his building. When he went in to eject Zimmerman he took the stick as a bluff." Further questioned, he swore that the stick was intended for self protection. He didn't take it in to hit anyone. Constable Chalkley had authorized him to turn Zimmerman out. His brother John and Claud Edwards came to his assistance, and later "some one hollered to throw 'em all out."

In the afternoon Mr. Begg called Claud Edwards to the stand. Witness stated that he joined in the fracas in order to save the children who were lying near to where the struggle was going on and were in considerable danger.

Mr. White:—"Did you see anyblood in Schneller's eye when he came into the room?"

"I didn't just look in his eye."

"Was it necessary for Mr. Zimmerman to clinch in order to defend himself?"

"No, he could have run." (Laughter.)

"That was the only way of getting out of it?"

"No, I don't think Schnellerwould have struck him. I don't think he has nerve enough."

"What would you have done?"

"Probably I would have run."

Witness denied having used his foot in ejecting appellant. He pushedhim with his hands.

Peter Welch gave evidence along similar lines to the previous witnesses for the defence. He stated that the struggling men trampled over a couple of children, whereupon someone shouted, "Say, boys, this won't do," and there was a movement to throw the whole bunch out.

Mr. White:—"Who started all this row?"

Witness:—"Schneller."

Mr. Begg argued for the defence that David Schneller was justified in ejecting Zimmerman. As contractor for the building his position was analogous to that of a householder. A householder might turn a trespasser off his premises, and was justified in using sufficient violence to effect was necessary that a contractor that end. In the public interest it was necessary that a contractor should have the same right to protect property under his charge, as was given a householder.

Mr. White contended that it was all nonsense to talk of Schneller's claim on the building. Schneller was simply an employee. He had no more right to order Zimmerman off than had the speaker. Schneller stated that he attended the gathering to protect the property. There was no evidence that Zimmerman was going to damage the building, unless it were contended that a dancer of Zimmerman's proportions might cause some loosening of the foundations.

His Honor gave judgment on Thursday morning. There could be no doubt, he said, that Schneller was to a large extent the cause of the trouble. He could not stretch the law to mean that that defendant D. Schneller owned the property. All the interest he could have therein was in seeing that it was protected against damage. If Schneller objected to Zimmerman because he was a danger to the property (the only valid objection) it was his duty to make a complaint to the directors. This method of going about things was decidedly objectionable. In the case of David Schneller the Magistrate should have made a conviction. John Schneller and Claud Edwards did no more than their duty in view of the imminent danger to others in the room.

The magistrate's decision in the case of David Schneller was dismissed and a fine of $5 and costs imposed. Zimmerman being relieved of all his costs in this case.

John Schneller and Edwards were entitled to costs in both cases.

Zimmerman vs. Schneller.— Appeal against a decision arising out of the Seven Persons dance affray, in which John Schneller, the appellant, was fined $5 and costs for assault on Annie Zimmerman.

Called to the stand, plaintiff deposed that shortly after the first ejection of her father, Chris. Zimmerman, from the building, he had returned. John Schneller had seized him by both shoulders and was trying to turn him out. Putting her hand on appellant's shoulder she said, "You let my father alone." "Then," continued witness, "Schneller struck me a severe blow on the chest with his right fist. I staggered back to a seat against the wall."

Mr. White (counsel for the plaintiff)—"Did the blow hurt you at all?"

"Yes, I was in misery for days after."

Witness added that she consulted Dr. Woodland because of the pain resulting from the blow. She was standing about three feet from the wall at the time of assault. John Schneller was not assisting any policeman at the time. It was not until about twenty minutes later that the corporal came in.

Mr. Begg (for the appellant)—"You danced several times afterwards?"

"Yes, I danced before the constable came in."

Mrs. Pettapiece deposed that she saw John Schneller strike Miss Zimmerman on the occasion named. She put out her hand and he struck back. She staggered away and about a week after complained of a pain where she had received the blow. Witness thought the blow was given deliberately. Otherwise, he would have apologized for his action, but as it was he never proffered any apology to Miss Zimmerman.

Ole Torgeson was of the opinion that Schneller must have known whom he was striking. Witness did not think the man was helping the police at the time.

Daniel Bell Richard swore that Schneller turned round and looked at Miss Zimmerman. He seemed to intend to strike her. Witness heard the word "coward" from some women who were in the vicinity.

Henry Meyer gave similar evidence to that of the aforementioned witnesses.

Peter Welch was then called by Mr. Begg. He deposed that Constable Chalkley had called for assistance, saying, "Won't some of you assist me to take this man out?" Schneller responded to the policeman's request for aid, and while he was struggling with Zimmerman, Miss Zimmerman "came with a rush and ed on his shoulder." Schneller pushed her off and immediately a cry was raised, "Coward, coward, for striking a lady." Miss Zimmerman did not come in contact with the seat until she had regained her equilibrium. In coming to her father's aid she had caught Sheller by both arms.

In answer to Mr. White, witness stated that he went up to the hall in company with the policeman. Witness had not spoken to the Zimmerman family for two years. He had no special spite against them.

Claud Edwards deposed that there were three affrays with Zimmerman on the night in question. The first was when D. Schneller brought in a club to turn Zimmerman out of the dance hall; in the second Zimmerman struck Schneller with a club. In the third Chalkley was in the act of arresting Zimmerman. It was in this last that Annie Zimmerman attempted to rescue her father.

John Schneller was the only man to respond to the policeman's request for assistance.

Mr. White: "Why didn't you go yourself?"

"I didn't feel like it. I wasn't called upon particular."

David Schneller was positive the regrettable incident happened while a policeman was present. He didn't help Chalkley because the matter was out of his hands and in the hands of the police. He told his brother not to concern himself with the arresting of Zimmerman but to let the police take him. Witness swore that Miss Zimmerman took hold of his brother's arm with both hands. He took particular notice.

John Schneller, a powerful looking man, deposed that while he was engeged in a scuffle with Zimmerman, someone caught him by the right arm. He didn't know who it was. To release himself he pushed his assailant back. He did not draw his arm back to give the blow. If he had done so the girl would have went flat.

Mr. White: "Were you sorry for what you had done."

"Yes."

"Did you apologize?"

"No."

Witness added that he didn't know until he was told afterwards that the person was Annie Zimmerman. He would swear that he didn'tstrike her with his fist. She was a "light little girl and the least little shove would shove her back."

Thos. Nesting said that it was his suggestion that the police be called in. He went out with Dave Schneller and Claud Edwards to awaken Chalkley. There were altogether 4 scuffles with Zimmerman.

John Meyer, a young boy, was confident that Schneller had shoved Annie Zimmerman away before the policeman came into the room.

Chris. Zimmerman testified that he had not himself seen his daughter struck. Witness had been sent up for trial for resisting arrest.

His Honor held that an assault had been committed, probably only a technical one. There must have been same grounds for the word "coward" being used by many of the people present. He was bound to find that the assault took place before the police had intervened. Thus the plea of justification on the ground that Schneller was assisting a police officer was invalid. It was quite a proper thing under the circumstances for Annie Zimmerman to come up and tap her father's assailant on the shoulder.

The Hound of the Baskervilles

theory seemed to have something to support it. That opening of the door which I had heard after I had returned to my room might mean that he had gone out to keep some clandestine appointment. So I reasoned with myself in the morning, and I tell you the direction of my suspicions, however much the result may have shown that they were unfounded.

But whatever the true explanation of Barrymore's movements might be, I felt that the responsibility of keeping them to myself until I could explain them was more than I could bear. I had an interview with the baronet in his study after breakfast, and I told him all that I had seen. He was less surprised than I had expected.

"I knew that Barrymore walked about nights, and I had a mind to speak to him about it," said he. "Two or three times I have heard his steps in the passage, coming and going, just about the hour you name."

"Perhaps then he pays a visit every night to that particular window," I suggested.

"Perhaps he does. If so, we should be able to shadow him, and see what it is that he is after. I wonder what your friend Holmes would do, if he were here."

"I believe that he would do exactly what you now suggest," said I. "He would follow Barrymore and see what he did."

"Then we shall do it together."

"But surely he would hear us."

"The man is rather deaf, and in any case we must take our chance of that. We'll sit up in my room to-night, and wait until he passes." Sir Henry rubbed his hands with pleasure, and it was evident that he hailed the adventure as a relief to his somewhat quiet life upon the moor.

The baronet has been in communication with the architect who prepared the plans for Sir Charles, and with a contractor from London, so that we may expect great changes to begin here soon. There have been decorators and furnishers up from Plymouth, and it is evident that our friend has large ideas, and means to spare no pains or expense to restore the grandeur of his family. When the house is renovated and refurnished, all that he will need will be a wife to make it complete. Between ourselves there are pretty clear signs that this will not be wanting if the lady is willing, for I have seldom seen a man more infatuated with a woman than he is with our beautiful neighbor, Miss Stapleton. And yet the course of true love does not run quite as smoothly as one would under the circumstances expect. To-day, for example, its surface was broken by a very unexpected ripple, which has caused our friend considerable perplexity and annoyance.

After the conversation which I have quoted about Barrymore Sir Henry put on his hat and prepared to go out. As a matter of course I did the same.

"What, are you coming, Watson?" he asked looking at me in a curious way.

"That depends on whether you are going on the moor," said I.

"Yes, I am."

"Well, you know what my instructions are. I am sorry to intrude, but you heard how earnestly Holmes insisted that I should not leave you, and especially that you should not go alone upon the moor."

Sir Henry put his hand upon my shoulder, with a pleasant smile.

"My dear fellow," said he, "Holmes, with all his wisdom, did not foresee some things which have happened since I have been on the moor. You understand me? I am sure that you are the last man in the world who would wish to be a spoil-sport. I must go out alone."

It put me in a most awkward position. I was at a loss what to say or what to do, and before I had made up my mind he picked up his cane and was gone.

But when I came to think the matter over my conscience reproached me bitterly for having on any pretext allowed him to go out of my sight. I imagined what my feelings would be if I had to return to you and to confess that some misfortune had occurred through my disregard for your instructions. I assure you my cheeks flushed at the very thought. It might not even now be too late to overtake him, so I set off at once in the direction of Merripit House.

I hurried along the road at the top of my speed without seeing anything of Sir Henry, until I came to the point where the moor path branches off. There, fearing that perhaps I had come in the wrong direction after all, I mounted a hill from which I could command a view—the same hill which is cut into the dark quarry. Thence I saw him at once. He was on the moor path, about a quarter of a mile off, and a lady was by his side who could only be Miss Stapleton. It was clear that there was already an understanding between them and that they had met by appointment. They were walking slowly along in deep conversation, and I saw her making quick little movements of her hands as if she were very earnest in what she was saying, while he listened intently, and once or twice shook his head in strong dissent. I stood among the rocks watching them, very much puzzled as to what I should do next. To follow them and break into their intimate conversation seemed to be an outrage, and yet my clear duty was never for an instant to let him out of my sight. To act the spy upon a friend was a hateful task. Still, I could see no better course than to observe him from the hill, and to clear my conscience by confessing to him afterwards what I had done. It is true that if any sudden danger had threatened him I was too far away to be of use, and yet I am sure that you will agree with me that the position was very difficult, and that there was nothing more which I could do.

Our friend, Sir Henry, and the lady had halted on the path and were standing deeply absorbed in their conversation, when I was suddenly aware that I was not the only witness of their interview. A wisp of green floating in the air caught my eye, and another glance showed me that it was carried on a stick by a man who was moving among the broken ground. It was Stapleton with his butterfly-net. He was very much closer to the pair than I was, and he appeared to be moving in their direction. At this instant Sir Henry suddenly drew Miss Stapleton to his side. His arm was round her, but it seemed to me that she was straining away from him with her face averted. He stooped his head to hers, and she raised one hand as if in protest. Next moment I saw them spring apart and turn hurriedly round. Stapleton was the cause of the interruption. He was running wildly towards them, his absurd net dangling behind him. He gesticulated and almost danced with excitement in front of the lovers. What the scene meant I could not imagine, but it seemed to me that Stapleton was abusing Sir Henry, who offered explanations, which became more angry as the other refused to accept them. The lady stood by in haughty silence. Finally Stapleton turned upon his heel and beckoned in a peremptory way to his sister, who, after an irresolute glance at Sir Henry, walked off by the side of her brother. The naturalist's angry gestures showed that the lady was included in his displeasure. The baronet stood for a minute looking after them, and then he walked slowly back the way that he had come, his head hanging, the very picture of dejection.

What all this meant I could not imagine, but I was deeply ashamed to have witnessed so intimate a scene without my friend's knowledge. I ran down the hill therefore and met the baronet at the bottom. His face was flushed with anger and his brows were wrinkled, like one who is at his wits' ends what to do.

"Halloa, Watson! Where have you dropped from?" said he. "You don't mean to say that you came after me in spite of all?"

I explained everything to him: how I had found it impossible to remain behind, how I had followed him, and how I had witnessed all that had occurred. For an instant his eyes blazed at me, but my frankness disarmed his anger, and he broke at last into a rather rueful laugh.

"You would have thought the middle of that prairie a fairly safe place for a man to be private," said he, "but, by thunder, the whole country-side seems to have been out to see me do my wooing—and a mighty poor wooing at that! Where had you engaged a seat?"

"I was on that hill."

"Quite in the back row, eh? But her brother was well up to the front. Did you see him come out on us?"

"Yes, I did."

"Did he ever strike you as being crazy—this brother of hers?"

"I can't say that he ever did."

"I daresay not. I always thought him sane enough until to-day, but you can take it from me that either he or I ought to be in a strait-jacket. What's the matter with me, anyhow? You've lived near me for some weeks, Watson. Tell me straight, now! Is there anything that would prevent me from making a good husband to a woman that I loved?"

"I should say not."

"He can't object to my worldly position, so it must be myself that he has this down on. What has he against me? I never hurt man or woman in my life that I know of. And yet he would not so much as let me touch the tips of her fingers."

"Did he say so?"

"That, and a deal more. I tell you, Watson, I've only known her these few weeks, but from the first I just felt that she was made for me, and she, too—she was happy when she was with me, and that I'll swear. There's a light in a woman's eyes that speaks louder than words. But he has never let us get together, and it was only to-day for the first time that I saw a chance of having a few words with her alone. She was glad to meet me, but when she did, it was not love that she would talk about, and she wouldn't have let me talk about it either if she could have stopped it. She kept coming back to it that this was a place of danger, and that she would never be happy until I had left it. I told her that since I had seen her I was in no hurry to leave it, and that if she really wanted me to go the only way to work it was for her to arrange to go with me. With that I offered in as many words to marry her, but before she could answer down came this brother of hers, running at us with a face on him like a madman. He was just white with rage, and those light eyes of his were blazing with fury. What was I doing with the lady? How dared I offer her attentions which were distasteful to her? Did I think that because I was a baronet I could do what I liked? If he had not been her brother I should have known better how to answer him. As it was I told him that my feelings towards his sister were such as I was not ashamed of, and that I hoped that she might honor me by becoming my wife. That seemed to make the matter no better, so then I lost my temper too, and I answered him rather more hotly than I should perhaps, considering that she was standing by. So it ended by his going off with her, as you saw, and here am I as badly puzzled a man as any in this county. Just tell me what it all means, Watson, and I'll owe you more than ever I can hope to pay."

I tried one or two explanations, but, indeed, I was completely puzzled myself. Our friend's title, his fortune, his age, his character, and his appearance are all in his favor and I know nothing against him, unless it be this dark fate which runs in his family. That his advances should be rejected so brusquely without any reference to the lady's own wishes, and that the lady should accept the situation without protest is very amazing. However, our conjectures were set at rest by a visit from Stapleton himself that very afternoon. He had come to offer apologies for his rudeness of the morning, and after a long private interview with Sir Henry in his study, the upshot of their conversation was that the breach is quite healed, and that we are to dine at Merripit House next Friday as a sign of it.

"I don't say now that he isn't a crazy man," said Sir Henry; "I can't forget the look in his eyes when he ran at me this morning, but I must allow that no man could make a more handsome apology than he has done."

"Did he give any explanation of his conduct?"

"His sister is everything in his life, he says. That is natural enough, and I am glad that he should understand her value. They have always been together, and according to his account he has been a very lonely man with only her as a companion, so that the thought of losing her was really terrible to him. He had not understood, he said, that I was becoming attached to her, but when he saw with his own eyes that it was really so, and that she might be taken away from him, it gave him such a shock that for a time he was not responsible for what he said or did. He was very sorry for all that had passed, and he recognized how foolish and how selfish it was that he should imagine that he could hold a beautiful woman like his sister to himself for her whole life. If she had to leave him he had rather it was to a neighbor like myself than to anyone else. But in any case it was a blow to him, and it would take him some time before he could prepare himself to meet it. He would withdraw all opposition upon his part if I would promise for three months to let the matter rest and to be content with cultivating the lady's friendship during that time without claiming her love. This I promised, and so the matter rests."

So there is one of our small mysteries cleared up. It is something to have touched bottom anywhere in his bog in which we are floundering. We know now why Stapleton looked with disfavor upon his sister's suitor—even when that suitor was so eligible a one as Sir Henry. And now I pass on to another thread which I have extricated out of the tangled skein, the mystery of the sobs in the night, of the tear-stained face of Mrs. Barrymore, of the secret journey of the butler to the western lattice window. Congratulate me, my dear Holmes, and tell me that I have not disappointed you as an agent—that you do not regret the confidence which you showed in me when you sent me down. All these things have by one night's work been thoroughly cleared.

I have said "by one night's work, for on the first we drew entirely blank. I sat up with Sir Henry in his room until nearly three o'clock in the morning, but no sound of any sort did we hear except the chiming clock upon the stairs. It was a most melancholy vigil, and ended by each of us falling asleep in our chairs. Fortunately we were not discouraged, and we determined to try again. The next night we lowered the lamp, and sat smoking cigarettes, without making the least sound. It was incredible how slowly the hours crawled by, and yet we were helped through it by the same sort of patient interest which the hunter must feel as he watches the trap into which he hopes the game may wander. One struck, and two, and we had almost for the second time given it up in despair, when in an instant we both sat bolt upright in our chairs, with all our weary senses keenly on the alert once more. We had heard the creak of a step in the passage.

Very stealthily we heard it pass along until it died away in the distance. Then the baronet gently opened his door and we set out in pursuit. Already our man had gone along until we lery, and the corridor was all in darkness. Softly we stole along until we had come into the other wing. We were just in time to catch a glimpse of the tall, black-bearded figure, his shoulders rounded, as he tip-toed down the passage. Then he passed through the same door as before, and the light of the candle framed it in the darkness and shot one single yellow beam across the gloom of the corridor. We shuffled cautiously towards it, trying every plank before we dared to put our whole weight upon it. We had taken the precaution of leaving our boots behind us, but, even so, the old boards between a foreman and an employe under his charge, it is the practice for the foreman to first tell his story to his superior who afterwards hears what the aggrieved or committee has to say. The foreman is not called upon to face the accused or accuser as the case may be. The investigation thus becomes a farce.

To Protect Foreman.

Instances were given before the board of investigation being refused in order to protect the foreman from exposure.

This condition has continued to such a length that evidence taken before the board under oath charging a foreman with falsely maligning a man and actually tampered with his work for the purpose of discrediting him as a mechanic, is of no moment. That he should boast of the company upholding this nefarious practice, is a question not worthy of contradiction. That a master mechanic should repudiate an undertaking given over his signature in a statement to the men and then make a directly contradictory one to the board under oath is of so little consequence to those higher in authority that relationships continue unchanged.

No Refutation; No Comment

Nothing worthy of refutation was the reply of the company's representative. Nothing of moment.

If a proper relationship is to be established between the men and the company, this condition will have to be changed, and the evidence presented to the board places the onus on the company.

3. In the apportioning of the number of apprentices to the trades, as one to four, the board undertakes to upset off hand a general rule adopted throughout the North American continent in 1898—and recognized wherever an agreement is in existence with the trades today.

Not Competent to Judge

If the question was one of first principles—whether it is right to place any limitation or not—then I could understand the attitude assumed by the board, but I cannot concur in a finding arrived at without data or evidence. I submit the board is not competent to judge of the fairness or unfairness of one to four or one to five granted there should be any limitation.

6—Changing of working hours in roundhouses.

While the system of lapping of hours does not commend itself a trial of a few months will prove its effect or ineffectiveness as an eliminator of overtime, and without favoring the principle, I recommend that it be put in effect during the life of the proposed agreement.

Life of Agreement

Life of proposed agreement—I favor the usual 30 day clause for annulment, but if a longer period is desirable in the public interest, one year from date of acceptance would be reasonable.

On the other questions before the board I am in accord with its finding, except on the one schedule for the system proposition, and the application of the eastern men.

No evidence has been taken on either question, and the action of the company in holding out a compromise at this time is to my mind based on the principle of "Settle out of court before judgment is rendered," and its acceptance by the board prevents further exposure and a strengthening of the men's contention.

Not Justified in Refusing

The board in my opinion is not justified in refusing evidence on these two important questions, for the only justification possible is in the strong opposition advanced by the company to the procedure.

The men on the eastern lines have as much right to have their conditions investigated as the men in the west, and in this respect I dissent from the finding of the board.

Respectfully submitted.

JAMES SOMERVILLE.

What Will Filtration Do

The following letter to the Toronto Mail and Empire from a well-known engineer, dealing with filtration matters will be found of interest:

The question is being raised. Is there much benefit to be gained by filtering a water supply? The citizens of Toronto have passed a by-law authorizing a large expenditure for this purpose. It is now stated that water filtration is a fetich, and cannot be relied upon. In an issue of this paper, dated May 14th, 1908, dealing with the purification of the sewage, I wrote as follows:

"Now, what about those who say 'Filter the water supply, and let the sewage alone?' There is no practical method extant by which you can be certain of filtering out of a water supply typhoid germs if they are in it. Water carrying any risk of typhoid germs is not drinking water. Passed through large sand filters 30,000,000 gallons of lake water containing little or no organic matter, but just a little silt stirred up by certain winds, would be little freer from germs after the process of straining than before it. It would be simply a process of straining out organic matter in suspension or keeping back the silt, but would have scarcely any effect upon either organic matter in solution or the minute germs or spores, traceable to sewage contamination. Such a process of filtration would really be useful, where the water was very bad, that is, charged with organic matter to such an extent that it was liable to even undergo purefaction. Then it has been necessary to strain or filter water. In the case of a surface-collected water, especially from peat moors, as in the Midlands of England, it is quite necessary to filter out the peaty matter from the water."

The above was written with the purpose of showing the great importance of taking every precaution to keep a water supply source free from sewage contamination. This is practically the principle adopted in Europe at the present time in dealing with water supply questions. It is recognized, and quite understood, that no water containing pathogenic germs can be rendered a safe drinking water. It is recognized that a great proportion of the micro-organisms which are in contact with matter in suspension can be kept back by filtering or straining through a material fine enough to keep back the particles of matter. It is recognized that water can be clarified to a zero point, that is, have an absolutely pure appearance and precipitate no sediment after standing. Beyond this point the scientist will not go. This is the reason why in certain places in Europe where it has been the custom to drink filtered river water, it is now the vogue to supplant such sources with others of a biologically purer nature.

What Will Filtration Do for Toronto

(a) Filtration will clarify the water, that is, in future there will not be any of that objectionable sediment either in the bath or drinking glass.

(b) Filtration will remove the greater proportion of micro-organisms, practically all of which are in contract with organic particles of matter.

(c) Filtration will render the water more suitable for many manufacturing purposes.

For the above purposes filtration is resorted to, and will probably always be resorted to, until some better and cheaper method is discovered which at the present time does not exist.

What Filtration Will Not Do for Toronto.

If the water is contaminated with isolated typhoid germs or any other forms of micro-organisms of a pathogenic nature, filtration will not make it a safe drinking water.

This practically forms the crux of the whole matter in dispute. The Mail and Empire has understood this from the beginning, and great credit is due to you, sir, that you have at all times insisted on the great importance and duty of the city to take every precaution to keep out of the lake all matter than can possibly carry disease germs.

It has been felt by many to whom I have spoken that there has been a tendency in some quarters to magnify the benefits of water filtration, without giving proportionate weight to the main argument as to the benefits of prevention.

Let water filtration go on by all means—the benefits to be granted from it are beyond doubt. But, at the same time, let not those in authority persuade themselves that this is the end-all of the question. Legislation should be passed by the province and the Dominion for the keeping of our shore waters reasonably free from pollution, special attention being given to regulations as to shipping, to the Humber and Don River discharges, etc. The purification of the city's sewage, on the very best and most complete lines must have the first attention.

Yours etc.,

T. AIRD MURRAY, C. E.

Practical Demonstration in Weed Spraying

(Nor' West Farmer).

On a few occasions in the past we have referred to the subject of chemical spraying for the destruction of weeds in growing grain fields. This has mostly been in the way of quoting results obtained on experiment stations, etc., there never havingbeen anything practical in this line in our own Canadian West. In this issue, however, we are able to report results as seen with our own eyes in a real Manitoba wheat field and also present object lesson as picked up by the camera.

The work of which we write was done on the farm of Mr. D. Mansell, a large farm owner at Sanford, Man., and was examined by one of The Nor'-West Farmer staff on June 25th The wheat was very full of stink-weed and ordinary wild mustard; it contained a few Canada thistles, an occasional patch of perennial sow thistle, and also a few other minor weeds; but the mustard and stinkweed constituted more than nine-tenths of the weed growth present.

The work of spraying was practically under the direction of Dr. Horace E. Horton, Chemical Engineer for the American Steel and Wire Co., which company are very large manufacturers of sulphate of iron and therefore interested in increasing the demand for that chemical. As Dr. Horton has for years been doing trial and demonstrating work in spraying his experience naturally extends over a very much larger field than was covered in the work on Mr. Mansell's farm, and so we were able to gather some facts that naturally lay somewhat outside the limits of the present experiment.

Dr. Horton reached Mr. Mansell's place on June 15, and the spraying was begun in a day or two. This was rather too late to secure the very best results, as the crop was growing very fast, and the plants were rapidly pushing past the stage at which the spraying is most effective, which is just as the flower buds are beginning to form. But misfortune in this, as in many other cases, did not come singly. Had the weather been fine following the 15th, itwould have been possible to have gone right on and sprayed at such a rate as to soon cover a good many hundred acres; but instead of fine weather a very wet spell set in, with rain nearly every day during the next ten. This, of course, put work almost at a standstill as the sprayed grain should not have any rain for 24 hours, else the chemicals are likely to be washed off the foliage.

But, in spite of the perverseness of the weather man, some spraying was done, and the results were sufficiently in evidence to furnish some very interesting object lessons.

The best piece of work was a trip a few rods wide running down the side of a field three-quarters of a mile long. This had been covered nine days before our visit and the final results could be judged pretty accurately. The conditions had not been ideal as rain had fallen sixteen hours after spraying and the atmosphere had been damp in the interval. Dr. Horton, however, claimed that for some reason unknown to him the chemical seemed to work more rapidly in this atmosphere than almost anywhere else where he had made trial.

The effect of this spraying was marked as plainly as anything could be. Most of the mustard plants, as we have stated above, were rather past their most vulnerable age, but the stinkweed plants (which were really in the majority) seemed to be just right for spraying. The result was that the stinkweed was killed absolutely, and the mustard was almost eliminated. To show the thoroughness of the destruction, the writer marked off a square yard just at the edge of the sprayed grain and hand picked from it all the weed plants to be found. He then marked off another square yard immediately adjoining, which had not been sprayed, and picked the weeds from this area also. In the unsprayed portion there are many stinkweed plants with full sized pods on them In the other lot there are no stinkweed plants, as they had practically all been burned to a crisp, and there remained only a small, brown, leafless, dead stem. Some of the mustard plants, however, had remained, and these are those shown in the picture. The reader cannot realize from the picture, however, the difference in appearance between the unsprayed and sprayed mustard plants. The leaves showing on the sprayed plants are mostly dead leaves, and no doubt most of these plants would eventually die from the continued action of the sulphate. Their dwarfed size, in comparison with the others, shows that they had stopped growing as soon as sprayed, and more sickly looking plants it would be hard to find.

In 2 square feet of sprayed land 2 shrivelled mustard plants were found and, of course, about the same number of wheat plants as on the corresponding unsprayed area.

The solution used on this field was a 20 per cent. solution of sulphate of iron, that is to say 20 lbs. of Sulphate were dissolved in 80 lbs. of water. It was put on at the rate of 150 lbs. of sulphate to the acre, but the usual rate is 100 lbs. to the acre The spraying had been done under the difficulty of too much wind and a machine in which the spray boom was about a foot too high.

The cost of chemical was quoted to us by Dr.Horton as follows; Sacks of 100 lbs. each are sold at theirmill at Chicago at 55 cents each. The freight to Sanford was 56 cents per hundred pounds. Sacks of 200 lbs. are sold at 45 cents per cwt., and there is still 56 cents freight per cwt. No duty was charged, butmost of the freight accumulated between Minneapolis and Sanford. It will be seen from the above that the chemical used on each acre of Mr. Mansell's crop costs (if bought in 200 lb sacks) $1.51½. To this there must be added the cost of the spraying machine and the cost of doing the work.

(In connection with the cost of sulphate we may say that, from information received since the body of this article was written, it seems likely that in the future prices will be considerably reduced in Canada. No definite statement can now be made on the subject.—Editor.)

We were unable to make actual first hand observation on this point, but the statement of Dr. Horton is that the spraying machine used at Mr. Mansell's (the Binks Sprayer) will spray 75 acres in ten hours. This would require three men and six horses. One of the men is needed to drive the sprayer, one to prepare solution, and one to haul water. Four horses are driven on the spraying machine and two used on the water tank to bring water. It was believed that by improving facilities the area covered might be raised to 90 acres per day. Any farmer can figure out for himself the cost of labor. Reckoning on the delays of one sort and another, we should think that the labor would cost at least 15 cents per acre. As to the cost of the machine; this is a point upon which no definite statement can be made. The inefficiency of machines has been in the past a great difficulty in spraying. Most of those meant for field work have embodied only an adaption of garden sprayer ideas. However the manufacturer of the machine use on the Mansell farm is building a machine after a new model, and it is quite likely that a sprayer with the capacity and strength necessary for work in our large wheat fields will soon be built and eventually put upon the market. Our guess is that such a machine will cost about $250, but this is only a guess.

The question as to what weeds can be killed by spraying is still a matter of experiment. Of our western weeds wild mustard, stinkweed,great ragweed and dandelion are claimed to be all entirely destructible; Canada thistle can be injured, but loss readily and is under experiment. Wild oats belong to the grass family, as do our cereal crops, and spraying is of absolutely no value to eradicate them. Sulphate of iron has not been successful on perennial sow thistle, but it is hoped that by combining this chemical with sulphuric acid or arsenite of soda some results may be obtained. The Canada thistle requires to be sprayed later in the season than stinkweed or mustard, and a spraying to killthese latter two weeds would not likely kill the Canada thistles. The thistles require to be attacked just when coming into bloom. Ragweed goes right down if sprayed at the right stage to catch mustard.

Now as to the effect upon thegrain plants. Of course, these as well as the weeds, are sprayed with the solution. The first effect upon the wheat is to burn the leaves considerably, and a piece that we saw twenty-four hours after spraying showed quite a brown tinge. The wheat, however, rallies wonderfully well, and nine days after spraying showed almost no perceptible damage. It is claimed by Dr. Horton that the absorption of iron through the leaves eventually increases the plant's growth and productiveness. We offer no opinion on this point.

Ordinarily about 24 hours elapses after spraying before results will show, and another 48 hours is needed before the destruction can be said to be reasonably complete. In our climate the destruction of the weeds was more rapid than usual. To do good spraying there should be no rain inside 24 hours; good work was done here with 56 hours before rain.

We do not wish to be understood as advising farmers to spray for weeds. We are simply presenting as well as we can the facts up to date in the first trial of spraying in a Western Canadian grain field. We shall try to present further developments with the same carefulness as we have given these, and land owners can figure out the possible adaptability of the idea to their own individual circumstances. We may add, however, that although the process is as yet a matter of experiment it is gratifying to note the measure of success reached, and no doubt further discoveries will still add to the value of spraying as a process for weed eradication in fields of growing grain.

Predatory Wealth

In the probing of the Sanfrancisco municipal scandals it has been revealed, and proved to the hilt that misgovernment is due to the combined influence of devotees of vice and the wealthy operators of franchises serving the public, who are usually drawn from what we regard as the best element of society. In tracing the process of corruption through from its superficial manifestations to its hidden sources, this is what was discovered not only in San Francisco but in every corner of the continent where similar conditions warrant the observer in suspecting similar evils. Vice and wealth govern, through the medium of men who know how to prey upon both while serving both. It is not a state of things in which any of us can take much pride, but there it is, beyond a doubt, and in one form or another it underlies all the political problems of this continent in our day.

When the prosecutors got started in San Francisco, they first exposed the chiefs of the Labor party, beginning with Schmitz, and onding with the "supervisors," who had the power to grant favors or to withhold them, to enforce law or to relax it. It was plainly shown that these Labor leaders sold the public interest and put the price in their own pockets. Respectability, as we most of us understand respectability, sniffed openly, said "I told you so," and was ill-naturedly content. But the public prosecutors were not content. They had to have an explanation, and they found it in the existence of the boss, one Ruef. Ruef, with the aid of Schmitz, was able to select the party's candidates, and unless the candidate would promise to obey orders he wasn't named. He presently found that obeying orders went with receiving gifts of money. Then the prosecutors began to hunt for an explanation of Ruef, the boss; and where he got the money to divide with his tools. They found the explanation. Those in control of the various agencies of vice, which are numerous in all cities, knew they could make plenty of money if their operations were not forbidden by law, or, which was even better for those actually in the business, if the law were not enforced against them. Ruef, with his supervisors pledged to obey orders, was able to say whether the law would be enforced or not, and to name the price of complacency. He did name it That was where vice came into the combination. Wealth came in by the door across the corridor. Thesesame obedient nominees of Ruef's had the giving or withholding of franchises, the enforcement or non-enforcement of laws and contracts governing the relations between the people and the telephone companies, gas companies, electric light companies, street railway companies, all of them headed by the very best people in the city. He took money from these "best people," and passed on as much as was necessary to his humbler assistants. He was not proud; he would accept money from one set of applicants for a franchise, and then a larger sum from rival applicants. They both paid it. And there was a power that could make trouble for Ruef. The legislature, his own party in the legislature, could do that, unless he and his friends controlled it as they controlled the supervisors. So they got control of it, with the help of the wealthy people who had the largest interest in having the legislature allow them to do as they liked, the owners of the Southern Pacific Railway.

Thus the web was woven. From Schmitz and the supervisors,through Ruef, through the local purveyors of vice, through the wealthy investors in franchises through the legislature through the great local railway monopoly, up to Harriman, and so to Wall street, filled with Harriman's greater or lesser, each standing at the centre of some such web. Backwards, the threads are followed through illegal practices by the railways, railway lootings, stock watering, control of insurance funds, illegal rebates on which big and little Rockefellers get rich at the cost of their fellows, and all the other manufestations of predatory wealth. It is known and proved the existence of this condition of things, and the probable anger of the people at all who benefit by it, that affords the basis for whatever political uncertainty there is in the United States in this year of a Presidential election. Has "predatory wealth" a choice of candidates? And will the other candidates be able to command the support of those whowould enforce the dictates of common morality against vicious and wealthy alike? And are they few or many who would so condemn? This is what the contest will show.—Montreal Herald.

"Faust" never loses its attraction for theatre-goers, if one may judge by the large audiences that are greeting the performances all along the line. It is one of the stage classics, which, with the spectacular electrical features, makes it appeal strongly to all classes. One never tires of the sorrows of beautiful Marguerite or the weird fascination of "Mephisto." The play is too well known to need special description. An added feature en route this season with Porter J. White's "Faust" is a trained choir of seven voices for the great Cathedral scene. The performance will be given here on Thursday, July 30th at the Opera House.

Prince of Monaco Pays the Penalty

Nice, July 1.—It seems like an act of Nemesis that Prince Albert of Monaco, ruler of Monte Carlo, should now be suffering from insanity after being connected all these years with the gaming resort which has driven thousands of others to madness and suicide. As one of the largest shareholders in the Casino the Prince bears, with the rest of the management, an equal portion of the responsibility for those terrible tragedies of human frality which have so often shocked the civilized world. It is strange that the latter years of the Prince's life should be darkened by mental affliction; but perhaps it is well that he can no longer realize the full and cumulative enormity of the series of tragedies which take place at Monte Carlo year after year. For some time previous to the present disaster the prince had shown signs of a mental break-down. At the peace conference held at Rouen a few years ago, the Prince of Monaco entertained on his splendid yacht, and even then several of his friends remarked that he did not seem to be quite normal. On one occasion he started to make a speech but forgot his words, and several times used the wrong words in attempting to convey his ideas. These signs of aphasia—one of the first indications of mental derangement—were put down at the time to the usual eccentricities which princes seem privileged to show and no particular attention was paid to them. Recently however, on starting out for a cruise in the Mediterranean the prince gave such unmistakable signs of aberration that his physician had to interfere, and this trip came to a sudden end.

It has been said doubtless with kindly intention that the prince's present condition is the result of brooding over recent tragedies at Monte Carlo, especially the terrible Goold affair. But one of the friends of the prince declares that he does not believe events at Monte Carlo could have anything to do with his condition. "The Prince of Monaco is not that kind of a man," said this friend. "His vast yearly income at Monte Carlo has always been a source of pride to him, he has never given serious thought to the suicides and murders that take place there save in the light of attributing them to the individual failings of the persons who have plunged and lost."

Millionaire's Income

The general public has little conception of what Monte Carlo means to the Prince of Monaco. In the first place he derives a direct income from the Casino Company of $250,000 per annum. This is paid to him whether the Cassino has a good or bad year, and is entirely independent of business done." A few years ago, during a depressing season, the company found some difficulty in meeting this obligation on the exact date when it was due; and the shareholders proposed an extension of time. But the Prince of Monaco would not hear of this, and the sum was handed over to him at the agreed time. This tidy little revenue is paid to him for the "concession" which the Cassino Company holds for transacting business in his dominions, and is an inherited right from the father of the present prince who owns the land on which the Casino is built. Aside from this he holds five thousand shares in the Casino company. The founders of the Monte Carlo gambling company—Edmond and Camile Blanc—only held four thousand shares each in the original company. So it will be seen that the prince's interest predominates. In addition to the quarter of a million dollars which he gets for the "concession" every year his stock and perquisites bring him in $750,000. So he gets a million dollars a year paid out of the losses of the gamblers.

Protects Gambling Hell

But to the power he wields as land lord of, and a shareholder in, the gambling concern, must be added the fact that the Prince of Monaco constitutes in himself practically all the offices of state. He is head of the army, chief administrator of justice, controller of police—in fact, a veritable pooh-bah in modern governments combining in itself practically all important functions. To afford an instance of the prince's power in matters of mere detail, the case of the potposter-artist who tried to blackmail the Casino Company out of a large sum of money a few years ago might be mentioned. This artist had conceived a brilliant scheme of placing at the railway station several huge posters depicting curious scenes in the tragic history of Monte Carlo gambling. One of these showed the gardens of the Casino with the bodies of two suicides in the foreground; another portrayed a mother and her child in the attitude of delivering a curse upon the place while a third plainly depicted the Prince and Princess of Monaco sitting upon the throne, crowned with roulettes and receiving bags of gold and rolls of banknotes from the manager. The Casino company made every effort to get these posters removed, even offering the artist a large sum of money, but he demanded a million francs ($200,000). This the Casino could not pay owing to a bad season and so the posters remained much to the detriment of "business." However, the Prince at this point came to the rescue of the company. As the ground landlord of the site occupied by the posters he demanded their removal, and putting into operation the machinery of the law, soon had the obnoxious posters torn down.

Though the Prince of Monaco combines all the various state offices in his own person, it must not be forgotten that after all the Casino Co. pays expenses. It supports the "standing army" of 126 men which forms the Prince's bodyguard and attends his state functions. What the army lacks in numbers is made up in gorgeousness of uniform for it sports more real lace than any other military corps in Europe. The upkeep of this glorious force amounts to $70,000 per annum.

The prince also dispenses large sums of money by way of governmental "patronage." Through his hands pass the $200,000 a year which go to keep up the government and municipality of Monaco, with an additional sum of $15,000 for the courts of justice. Strange to the gambling company also contributes through the prince $60 000 a year to the support of the "bishops and clergy."

Hundreds of Suicides.

Despite all the glory attached to running a real kingdom, however, together with the substantial reward which accrues from the "winnings" of the bank, there is a reverse side of the picture which is anything but pleasant. Every year there takes place at the famous gambling resort an enormous number of suicides, and during recent years even murders are not unusual. Though the Casino authorities distribute to a subsidized press the enormous sum of $400,000 a year to keep these happenings out of the papers, the facts are becoming more and more known. The entire financial strength of the company could not hush up the Goold affair, and already the attendance at Monte Carlo has begun to drop off. Though the papers employed to "boom" Monte Carlo paint everything with rosate colors and attempt to minimize the number of suicides there is foundation for the statement that no less than two hundred now occur every year within the principality itself, while numberless others take place when the unfortunates have reached their homes, "assisted by the fund which the Casino provides for those whom it has cleaned out." The casino is quite willing to get rid of these people in order to avoid the "unpleasantness" of suicide in the grounds. This fund —to assist people on their way—is somewhat sacrilegiously termed the "Viaticum."

Most of the suicides at Monte Carlo take place in the garden immediately surrounding the Casino; though there have been several in the main room where the playing takes place. There is a table known as the "Suicide's Table"—the second on the right as you go into the saloon. It was at this table that the young Hungarian artist, Julian Kardoz, killed himself not long ago. Having lost all his money, the Casino manager, fearing a "Scene," offered Kardoz $200 to leave Monte Carlo. He refused, saying that he would soon have a return of luck. One of his friends lent him another $2,500 to continue the play and this he also lost. Kardoz had played this money with the utmost care, but the turn of the wheel was not in his favor and he had seen it go, piece after piece. Suddenly without rising from his seat, he placed the barrel of a revolver in mouth and fired. His body fell across a Frenchwoman sitting next to him. She fainted and a terrible scene of panic followed.

It is a singular fact that in all these terrible tragedies the Casino managers and the servants never exhibit the least sign of disturbance. They remain imperturbably calm. Even during a severe earthquake which occurred one night, the croupiers kept calling out their familiar phrase—'Faites vos jeur, messieurs; le jeu est fait—Make your bets gentlemen; the game is on."

Tragedies of the Tables

Suicide by pistol seems the favorite means by which men remove themselves from the scene, while women at the resort prefer either poison or throwing themselves over the high terrace which surrounds the outer gardens. The manner of death, however, is a matter of individuality. With most cases it is a sudden impulse with little premeditation, and consequently, the suicides at Monte Carlo have been described by a brutal connoisseur in such matters as "extremely inartistic." It is owing to the suddenness the violence of these acts, that the Casino authorities employ hosts of detectives to watch any case which exhibits elements of desperation. This durveillance does not take place throughany philanthropic motive, but simply to keep these "disagreeable "affairs" from getting noised abroad.

One of the saddest phases of these terrible affairs is the fate of newly married couples who find their luckless way to Monte Carlo on their honeymoon trips. One yound married couple who had lost all they possessed not long ago threw themselves in front of an express train at Monte Carlo station, and of course there was no "hushing up" of such an affair. There is one case on record of a young German couple who weretravelling in the north of Italy. They decided to take a run over to "Monte" for a few days, just to see the sights, and not to take part in the play. The husband had just collected for his firm $8000 which he was taking back to Germany. In order to place himself beyond temptation he handed the money over to his wife, taking only $20 with him to the Casino to try his luck. The husband and wife did not always go together. One night on returning to his hotel, he was told that his wife had not come home, and on making enquiries he found that she had played away the whole of the $8,000. Her desperation after the loss had attracted the attention of one of the "specials" employed at the Casino to watch suicides, but somehow the young woman eluded the vigilance and managed to throw herself over the cliff, where her lifeless body was picked up by her husband, who there upon killed himself.

Another case was that of a young American couple from Cincinnati, each of whom had a small amount of money. They visited Nice, quite close to Monte Carlo, and, unknown to each other paid secret visits to the gaming tables where both lost all the money they possessed. When absolutely penniless they committed suicide together in a room in their hotel.

Graveyard of Unfortunates

Another tragedy of recent times was that of young Harold Clarke of San Francisco, who killed himself in the Hotel Regina, Paris, immediately after a trip to Monte Carlo. He was a young law student with a brilliant future, but the roulette table brought about his ruin. In various parts of Europe, nearly every day or two, one reads of suicides from Monte Carlo losses and the number of human families wrecked by "play" every year if counted, would run into many thousands.

There is a gruesome little graveyard just at the foot of the mountains which border Monaco on the north and it is here that one can count hundreds of unknown graves. Little effort is made to communicate with relatives or friends in these cases and every possible attempt is made to keep the public from obtaining information. A few months a young Russian shot himself on the very steps of the Casino, but so quickly was all trace of the crime obliterated that five minutes afterwards persons passed in and out of the Casino, walking light-heartedly over the very spot where the man had died. If persons of prominence commit suicide at Monte Carlo, of course their friends are communicated with and all due respect is shown But this is simply to forestall disagreeable events.

Though the subsidized Monte Carlo papers state that the average number of suicides per day at the gambling resort is not more than six or seven a low average considering that Monaco has only 16,000 inhabitants and a yearly visiting population of 1,250,000, still these figures are a gross understatement of the fact. gross understatement of the fact. According to a carefully written book History of Suicides, it appears that not less than 3,000 suicides have taken place at Monte Carlo since the company was formed in 1863 to "exploit" the rights, privileges and concessions belonginging to his Serene Highness, Prince Charles of Monaco. Since that time these rights have certainly been "exploited" with a vengeance.

Zam-Buk Brought Relief.

At this time of the year children are liable to all kinds of torturing rashes and eruptions, and the advice of Mrs. F. Rowe of 1 Oxford Street, London (Ont.) is timely. She says: "A horrid rash broke out on my little boy's body. The child suffered acutely with the burning and itching and grew quite restless. A friend advised me to try Zam-Buk. I did so, and was surprised to see how quickly it cleared away the rash. The very first application seemed to cool and ease the burning and itching and making the child rest easier. In several days he was completely cured, not a mark remaining on the skin to show where the trouble had been. Zam-Buk is the best healing balm yet used."

THE CROPS OF THE DISTRICT

HOT WAVES DO DAMAGE BUT MANY GOOD FIELDS ARE SEEN

The general crop reports for the district are not as good as promised earlier in the season. The hot dry wave has done considerable damage, but mostly to fields that were poorly cultivated or improperly handled. The summer-fallowed fields all show well, and prove that until more land is broken, summer-fallowing will bring the best crops.

The Times has interviewed a large number of farmers and ranchers who have come into the city during the past few days, and all report the effects of hot winds, but that many fields are going to show up well. T. Corbett's field of fall wheat was threshed yesterday and was surprisingly good. More fall wheat will be raised hereafter in this district, as it was more or less of an experiment.

John Shaw has a good field of oats, and a field of alfalfa that was cut at the middle of July, after having been sown about July 6th. It could have been cut a week earlier to advantage. The land was freshly broken for it. Mr. Matheson in the same district, had a fair field of wheat and a better one of oats.

H. R. Grayson of Gros Ventre has a field of 70 acres of which a portion is good.

T. B. Jenkinson, south of the hills has a large field of fine oats.

J. Dempster's winter plowing method has not panned out as expected. His crops are but fair and not worth the trouble he took with his land compared with what others got. He has however, six acres of excellent potatoes.

Morris Clark at Eagle Butte has a good field of oats.

At Bull's Head Lake, Mr. Weir is going to reap a good wheat and oat crop.

Sid Smith of Woolchester will have a fine spring wheat crop off a field he summer-fallowed last year.

Karl Koeing near Josephsburg has a fairly good crop of oats.

Almost a Tragedy

Local Man Narrowly Escapes Terrible Fate

When a prominent business man is taken for a common Black Hand Italian, it doesn't necessarily mean that he resembles him. At least that is the consolation of a local merchant who is taking from an experience he had in British Columbia a few days ago.

After a year's hard toil this business man left the cares of a big business a couple of weeks ago to take a much needed holiday in Southern B. C. With a friend he was having the time of his life whipping in the sporty trout, and concocting yarns to tell his friends when he came back. The scene of his fishing was around Fernie and it will be remembered that five hardened Italian Black Hand specialists escaped from jail about this time. It is not hinted that our man was a friend of the "banana" men, or had anything to do with their escape. It is merely a coincidence, which had its effect on the pleasure jaunt and fishing expeditions.

One evening the two fishermen were returning on the railroad track to Fernie, after a fair day with the hook and line. Our friend was silent full of thoughts upon the number he would say he had caught when he came back to town. He had just about decided to limit the number to sixty-seven and the size of the largest to six and one-half pounds, when out of the woods in front of him sneaked a formidable looking man. with rifle in position for immediate action. Looking around for a rear fight, another be-rifled villain could be seen doing the Sherlock Holmes act on their trail. Above them on the mountain side a third man with a do-or-die look was stalking even with them.

Vivid thoughts of punishment for the stories he had prepared to tell flashed through our friend's mind. Then he wondered if there was a close season for trout, and was glad his friend was carrying them all. There seemed no escape. He was out of training for a sprint up a mountain side. He had never had sufficient experience on ties to make time on the railroad. A fishing pole didn't seem formidable against a rifle if it came to a hand to hand struggle.

Just when he began to wonder what message he would leave, one of the villians approached, recognized the friend of our friend and passed on.

It turned out that the "villians" were hunters for the escaped Black Handers, and were sure they were in for the reward until they recognized a citizen of Fernie.

THE END IN SIGHT.

There is a probability that the Post Office will be finished in a couple of months. The carpentering and plastering will be finished in six weeks. Already some of the floors are under way.

The mess at the front, complained of by Ald. Tweed, is being cleared up.

RELIEF WORK.

The Dominion Express Co. will carry free of charge any donation in the shape of food or clothing to the sufferers in Fernie and vicinity.

Fire Alarm

Little Damage from Explosion of Shingle Stain

Fire broke out on the roof of the new Toronto Street School addition on Wednesday afternoon, while the workmen were engaged in applying the shingle stain. Mr. Baldry and another man were working on the roof at the time and the former, in attempting to escape from the flames which spread very rapidly lost his balance and fell to the ground. Providentially there was a sand heap below which broke his fall and he escaped injury.

Before the arrival of the brigade the workmen had overcome the flames with a stream from the hose used by the builders, and no evidence of the recent fire remained, save in the patch of charred shingles.

None of the workmen had been smoking and the only possible explanation of the outbreak is that it was due to spontaneous combustion. Mr. Selleus, the contractor, has sent samples of the stain to Edmonton for analysis, as he believes it to contain abnormal quantities of gasoline and benzole, meanwhile he has substituted another brand.

The cost of repairing the charred shingles will be about $15.

Calgary Lacrosse Boys Won

In a Slow Game.

The Medicina Hat lacrosse team was forced to return this morning from Calgary with a defeat against them. The score was very small, 3—1, but the game was rather slow and lacked the ginger and bright spots of the last game. Curliss for Calgary was the best player on the winning team, and Hatcher shone for the local boys.

The team was:—J. Peard, goal; W. Peard, point; I. Preston, cover; Hatcher, 1st defence; A. Peard 2nd defence; S. Taylor, 3rd defence; A. Halward, centre; Gawley, 3rd home; J. Haviland, 2nd home; Neff, 1st home; McNabb, outside; Ritchie, inside.

The games were:—Calgary five minutes and six mutes, in the first quarter. Medicine Hat twelve minutes and six minutes, in the first second quarter.

It will be a hot game on the 10th to retrieve this defeat.

Crow's Nest Towns Wiped Out

Most Disastrous Conflagration in History of Canada

Hundreds of Lives Lost

A Score of Miles of the Pass District a Seething Furnace.--Terrific Winds foil all Efforts at Protection.--The Extent of the Calamity not yet Known Thousands Destitute.--Medicine Hat Sends Aid.

Since Saturday noon a fire has been raging in the Crow's Nest Pass that has been unprecedented in Canada not only for loss of property, but of life. Any estimate of this loss is mere guess work and will be for weeks; but the millions of dollars wiped out in property are nothing compared to the terrible loss of life that is known and guessed at.

The Start

At 2 p.m. Saturday, a stifling, hot day, Fernie lay as usual in the lap of the hills. Business was the business of a hot day, but no thought of approaching calamity troubled the townspeople. A few minutes later smoke was blowing over the town. Gradually the smoke got worse until in the valley it became so dark lights had to be used. An hour and a half after the first serious smoke was seen the fire reached the outskirts of the city and two hours later almost the entire city was left in ashes.

The origin of the fire is supposed to have been some camper's fire. A couple of weeks before this a fire had been put out, as the fighters thought at Cedar Valley mill, 3 miles west of Fernie. Twice it had broken out and twice had been fought down. On Saturday morning it is supposed to have re-started from some neglected ember, and, fanned by a fierce gale the forest was soon in a blaze. Under a terrific wind which kept increasing, the flames spread swiftly towards Fernie. A river was in the road, but rivers were no obstacles. The leap over the river meant the death-knell of the town. Without any seeming interruption, the near shore, was a mass of flames.

The Fight at Fernie

Then the town of Fernie woke to its danger. The fire brigade was stationed in the most advantageous spot, but nothing but a solid wall of water all around the town could save it. Thousands of blazing cinders fell all over the buildings and as many fires started. The brewery was the first to go. Then the buildings began to blaze up all over the west side. The brigade fought madly side by side with hundreds of half clad men and women struggling to save themselves and their all. Husband and wife worked side by side, singed, blackened, and dropping from the heat and the fatigue, unrecognizing each other but knowing that it was as bad as death to yield a foot.

The heat became unbearable, and more fires than workers started. The hose was burnt. Then, too late, the fighters realized that all that was left for them to do was to save what they could. The flames had everything. Men had discarded their hats their coats and vests, and many their shirts; women had only outer garments many barefooted. The fire got what they discarded and they had to fight for their lives with what bits of clothing they had on.

A few business men had time to lock up a few valuables in their safes before fleeing for safety.

In that town of Fernie all that remains is three cement buildings—the coal company's office, the Catholic parsonage, the Western Canada Wholesale Company's building—and two blocks of residences at the west end near the park. A man who came through the fire asserts that had the building of the Coal Company gone hundreds of people would have perished in it, as many of the people fled there when all else failed. The same building had afforded them protection in a previous fire. Now, panic-stricken, they had again fled there, and many of them would have died without a struggle had the building caught fire.

Saving the People.

When the C.P.R. and G.N.R. saw the seriousness of the affair, all trains were cancelled, and used to convey the townspeople to safety. A Great Northern train, loaded up with Fernie people and made a dash through the fire for Michel. The greater part of the fire was passed when a burnt bridge was reached. It looked like a hopeless case to the people on the train. It had been a big risk to get through the firewhich was now burning all around them; it was impossible to proceed and to remain was sure death. The conductor went back through the train of 800 people and explained the situation. The only escape was at best only a chance. A dash could be made back through the fire to Rock with a rocky clearing four miles east of Fernie. It was quite possible that the fire had twisted the rails or otherwise injured the roadbed. If that had happened it was death; if not there was safety. At any rate to stay was sure death. The run back was started and through the kindness of Providence safely was reached.

The C.P.R. rushed out of Fernie to the east. A thousand people on it reached Hosmer in safety and occupied the new coke ovens that had not been used.

On Sunday morning a long C.P.R. train carried 3,000 people to Cranbrook where they have been cared for. Hundreds sought shelter on sand bars and rocky tracts, where many of them perished, but most survived the heat and strain. In the excitement children and women were loaded onto the trains and separated. The only thought was for safety; re-union can take its time.

The patients in the hospital were carried out, some dying, many with broken limbs, and placed on the Cranbrook train. On the way to Cranbrook four children were born.

The jail was thrown open and all the prisoners but the Black Hand ruffians were allowed to escape. The latter they had to release as every man had to work.

The Spread of the Fire.

Fernie was only a spot in the track of the flames. Rushing west at a rate of twelve miles an hour, the fire consumed everything in its track. Lumber camps are dotted all over the Pass at this point and nothing could save them. The large Elk Lumber Co. was burned out andwith it is supposed to have been consumed fifty or sixty men whose escape would be cut off. Other lumber companies are Sandy McDougall and the Sparwood Lumber Co.

At the latter place Mr. Forster, a brother of H. T. W. Forster of this city, has a saw mill. For hours he and his wife and twenty men fought the flames to save the mill. Three of the men were killed and the mill was burnt.

At Hosmer dynamite was used and the town was still safe at midnight Sunday, with most of the fire past, but danger still lurking in the burning embers.

Late Sunday night Michel was in the midst of the flames but was still safe. At midnight a message arrived that the new town had burnt.

Medicine Hat Visitors

Mr. Clayton Wright, son of Mr. A. M. Wright of this city, arrived here on Monday morning's train, to join his wife who was visiting his parents. His jewelery store and beautiful residence in Fernie went with the rest, but he was successful in getting most of his precious stones into the safe. A traveller for M. Michelson and Son, wholesale handlers of precious stones, had three trunks of samples in the store. All were consumed. Mr. Wright had sought safety in Rock Cut.

Mr. Tom Whalen, proprietor of the Napanee Hotel at Fernie, also arrived yesterday morning, to meet his sister and her child who had come out to spend the summer with him. He had fortunately doubled the insurance on his hotel a couple of months ago when the rates were reduced, but will lose about $15,000. Upon his trying to cash a couple of Fernie checks here, he was refused by the banks on account of the uncertainty of Fernie credit after the disaster.

When the visitors left Fernie everything was over. The new court house and post office, the Trites-Wood store and other buildingswhich were supposed to be fireproof had disappeared. A dozen C.P.R. cars of lumber were consumed, only one wagron load of lumber being saved in the whhole town. A train of coal and coke was blazing on a side track. Mr. G. J. Lindsay, manager of the Coal Co., came to Michel on the same train to try and organize a fight in that town.

The Dead.

The number of dead is nothing but guesswork. It will run into the hundreds but until the district is cleared up nothing definite will be known.

Bodies lay all over. Along the railway many were passed, seven lying in one group. Little groups that sought shelter in spots that proved no shelter will come to light only in the weeks to come. People dropped from the heat as dead as if the flames had reached them. Scores of bodies will never be found as they will be entirely consumed or mixed up with the charred timber.

In Fernie the Superintendent of the G.N.R. is dead and several other bodies have already been recognized.

The Work of Relief.

On Sunday morning Mayor Tuttle of Fernie sent the following message to a dozen western towns:

Our city entirely burned out. Six thousand people homeless. We appeal to you for relief.

W. W. TUTTLE, Mayor.

A hurry-up meeting of the Council was called by Mayor Cousins on Sunday and a carload of provisions was despatched. Further assistance was promised as soon as the definite needs are discovered.

Cranbrook sent several cars of provisions and stoves. Lethbridge sent a car and offered one thousand dollars. Nelson despatched a car and then another, and had one thousand two hundred dollars collected in a few minutes. Calgary and Macleod also came to the front. The C.P.R. is rushing everything to the spot.

This is the third time Fernie has suffered disastrously from bush fires.

This morning's reports from the area are that Hosmer and Michel are safe, although some dynamiting was done in Hosmer. The fire is burning in spots all over the Pass, but, unless a strong wind rises there is little further danger.

The reports of deaths are thought to be greatly exaggerated. A Fernie minister says the Fernie deaths will not exceed a dozen. It is said that one of the injured miners taken from the recent mine accident was cremated in the hospital. No verification of the death of the G.N.R. official can be obtained.

The G.N.R. lost about 200 loaded coal and coke cars. The C. P. R. lost everything in Fernie, including buildings, coal chutes full of coal, and a large number of cars of coal and coke. Both Fernie papers were wiped out. Thousands are homeless, and none have more than what scanty clothing they have on their back Clothing is one of the great necessities and the Dominion Express Company will carry such supplies free.

Cranbrook's work for the sufferer's is highly praised. They provided a train load of provisions and are housing thousands of the homeless. The stores are giving them things free. Cranbrook itself, had a big fight on Sunday to save itself from another forest fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wilkes and Mr. and Mrs. Long, Fernie relatives of Mrs. I. Cousins of this city are safe, although their property is all consumed.

The loss of property is said to be close to $5,000,000, and the loss of life is estimated at all figures up to five hundred, but one hundredwill likely cover it all.

Mounted Police Notes.

David Ross of Red Rock appeared before Inspector Parker yesterday charged with the theft of three calves, the property of Dan McLean, and of a colt, owner unknown. Corporal Jenkyn prosecuted, the accused being defended by J. J. MaHaffy.

Apropos the first charge, Louis Pierre, and Mr. West of the C.P.R. deposed that they were in the pasture of the accused on the 10th ult., and saw there six head of McLean's cattle five cows, with five calves and one steer, three carrying the T track brand, and three the brand LFD. On the 14th Ross brought three live calves into town, these were unbranded when seen by West and Pierre. Geo. Hassard, rider for Mr. McLean, testified that he went to the Ross ranch, and, searching the pasture found five cows, with 2 calves. Three of the cows had very heavy bags.

Robert Mitchell deposed that he had purchased three red and white calves from accused. The animals were unbranded, but had earmarks.

Alex. Allen stated that he sometimes butchered cattle for Mr. Mitchell. He was present when the deal was made between Mitchell and the accused. The calves were not branded, but had fresh ear cuts.

Another butcher gave evidence corroborative of the last witness.

Constable Ash deposed that he had visited the Ross ranch and found there 13 head of cattle branded—D5, (the accused's brand) and eight unbranded calves. There were 118 all told.

Corporal Jenkyn deposed that, accused had told him that he possessed only fifteen calves.

Ross was committed for trial on this charge.

The second charge was then taken up.

Corporal Jenkyn stated that he had visited the Ross pasture on a certain day last month. He saw there a mare bearing the brand — over W7, followed by a colt with Ross' brand. Practically all of the animals were then corralled, and the mare aforementioned cut out before the colt. Immediately the mare ran round to the bottom end of the corrall whinnying, and the colt sidled up to that part of the corrall. The colt being then cut out joined the mare, and the two went up the coulee together. The animals were then brought into Medicine Hat and the accused was taken out and shown the mare was the mother of the colt knowledge. Being shown the colt he said the latter had been taken from another [illegible] witness believed that [illegible] the mother of the colt because she stuck to it. The animals were very similar in appearance.

Steven Best, rider for the Western Packing Co., and Frank St. Denis, gave evidence corroborative of the Corporal. Both stated that, with lifelong experience of horses, they were fully satisfied that the yearling colt belonged to the mare with which it was running—the mare branded W—7.

Nothing was said in defence of accused, who was committed for trial.

Fred Anderson of Bull Head Siding, appeared before the Magistrate on information laid by Constable Ashe who found in his possession a dapple grey horse carrying the Mounted Police brand. The animal had been missing for about a month, during which time the police had been searching for it. The halter, Constable Ash stated, had been hidden away. In course of conversationwith theConstable and Frank St. Denis, accused had admitted that he had been riding the horse which he had taken upon July 21st.

Anderson pleaded guilty in regard to the theft of the halter. Mr. MaHaffy defended accused against the charge of having, without consent of the owner, appropriated to his own the use the animal in question.

Anderson was committed for trial.

THE CITY FATHERS

Ald. Penhale was the only absentee from last night's regular meeting of the council.

Among the communications dealt with was a wire from Earl Roberts in reply to invitation to visit the city sent out by the Mayor:

"Many thanks for kind invitation. Regret impossibility to accept.

ROBERTS."

The case of Mrs. Koenig who wrote stating her inability to pay her gas account, was referred to the health and relief committee with power to act.

J. S. Lawrence wrote that the railway management had decided that the city repairs might be carried out in the C.P.R. shops provided permission were obtained from the management on each occasion on which such work was required to be done.

J. W. Jones wrote asking for an amendment to the by-law governing the impounding of dogs in the case of ranchers and settlers. Filed.

O. W. Kealy wrote in reference to thecase of Parmal vs. City, which the plaintiff lost his action for damages (loss of house and injury to a stable) through fire originating from a city gas well. A request was made that the city pay the costs of the case. Filed.

Health board wrote asking passage of a by-law to prohibit spitting on sidewalks and in public places, and also urging the necessity of a by-law regulating bake shops, butcher shops, and slaughter houses. Later in the evening notice of motion was given in reference to by-law covering these cases, which will be introduced at the next meeting.

The Board of Trade wrote enclosing account for assessment for 1908, $600. Referred to finance committee.

In reference to the tenders for valves and brass fittings for new gas well, the clerk stated that the time had been extended until Thursday next at request of the Walton Hardware Co., and Marshall Hardware Co.

Mr. Purmal complained that the gas pressure along his line was unsatisfactory. Referred to gas commissioners.

Committee appointed to go into the question of bonusing the bus, reported in favor of two dollars per day being paid for one month, and thatthe bus be advertised in the papers at Regina, Moose Jaw, Cranbrook, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge. Report adopted.

On Ald. Forster's motion, seconded by Ald. Morrow, it was decided to rebate three month's water rates to Mr. Babb who has been out of the city for the period named.

Newspaper Sediment.

The kind of journalistic dregs that appears in the Calgary Albertan is beneath the style of most other newspapers. It is no wonder such a daily has no influence upon current events. Here is a sample:

"The Mad Hatter News gives the details of a man being fined in that mad burgh for using water. What does a man want with water in a town like the Mad Hat?"

The Water Muddle

Has Been Worse Instead of Better.

Ratepayers Guessing at the Reason Pumps Were Not in Bad Shape

The new pumps were promised for Friday. On the strength of that promise The Times tried to relieve the anxiety of those who have been without water for eleven weeks. Imagine 11 weeks! ! !

Instead of the water coming on Friday there has scarcely been a drop half way up the hill since that day.

On Sunday the editor of The Times visited the power house and found both pumps rattling away like a discarded bicycle. The gas engines were partially in place but not a tap of work being done on them.

The Times has it on authority of an experienced machinist who has examined the old pump at the power house, that there is nothing wrong with the pump that could not be fixed up in a very few days if the required parts were on hand. He asserts (and he is not Ald. Baker) that the C.P.R. often fixes up worse pumps. He claims that no repairs are kept on hand, and that if they had been the people and the hill need not have been without water more than a few days; that there is absolutely no reason for the lack of water for the past 11 weeks.

All this lends color to the rumor that has pretty firmly settled in the minds of the ratepayers that two of the water commissioners may be doing all this to discredit the work of the Council during Mayor Cousin's term of office. It is known that they have not startlingly friendly feelings toward the Mayor and it is thought possible, that, as the Mayor usually has to bear the brunt of everything the Council does, he will suffer for this.

However, the ratepayers know full well that whatever Mayor Cousins may be guilty of, he is not at all responsible for the present muddle. THE WATER COMMISSIONERS MUST BEAR ALL THE BLAME, try as they may to squirm out of it.

The water-commissioners, if they were worthy of the most trifling position of the Council should know that nothing is an excuse for the water service we have had. If the pumps are as this machinist asserts (and he knows more about it than anybody) then it is either the rankest incompetence or a wilful desire to bring Mayor Cousin's regime into disrepute.

If the latter is proven to be the case The Times will have pleasure in publishing a few events that happened during the Mayoralty of one of the present water commissioners, facts that are not generally known to the ratepayers.

Surely seven Aldermen can defeat such conduct on the part of two Let's see them do it.

LOCAL MAN IN CALGARY

(Calgary Albertan.)

H. C. Cooper of Medicine Hat, is spending a few days in the city on his way home from a week's visit to Banff. This is his first visit to Calgary in eight years, and the change in the appearance of the city is greater than he ever expected to see. Mr. Cooper, was one of the first passenger engineers on the C.P.R., and for several years after the road was first opened had the run from Gleichen to Canmore, both of which at that time were dim dismal points so that when he first saw the site of the present city of Calgary there was only a very small village here. What he has seen on his present trip has indeed been a very agreeable surprise to him.

Yesterday he met engineer Bailey and the two old-timers spent several hours in reminiscences of the early days on the C.P.R. in Winnipeg.

Mr. Cooper entered the employ of the C.P.R. in Winnipeg in 1882, and continued steadily in its employ until about eight years ago, when he resigned to go into the transfer business in Medicine Hat.

He recalls the great flood of 1882, when Lake Manitoba rose so high as to flood the White Horse plains, through which the road passed.

At that time the engines were all wood burners and in passing over a piece of flooded track the water was so deep as to put out the fire and stall the engine.

He further recalled several incidents of the engineers' strike in January, 1884, when every engineer on the system in the west stepped off their footboards and would not touch a throttle until their demands were complied with. The efforts of the company to keep the trains moving were very amusing, but they were finally forced to come to terms, and have since been always agreeable and willing to discuss alleged grievances with the men who pull their trains.

In buggies and wagons the Alberta stables can show you what will suit you. They have the celebrated Brantford buggies and Lorne wagons.

ATHLETICS

BACHELORS VS. FIRE BRIGADE

On Friday night a six innings game was played between the above teams. The Bachelors winning out quite handily. The victors have a team together that should hustle the C.P.R. although the latter now has the lead cinched. Lorden and Smith the short stop and third baseman of the bachelors proved garbage can and demonstrated their superiority at their positions. Lorden accepted 7 chances without an error. His throwing to first of these two players is major-league style. Ireland distinguished himself by two double steals. Squance hewed his position as well as ever. The Bachelors played the cleanest game seen here this season. Only one error is recorded and that is a wild throw of W. Johnston's to second to catch a stealer.

The Fire Brigade went up in a couple of innings but otherwise played good ball. T. Barefoot was wild and was replaced in the third by F. Finlay who kept the scoring down better. Taylor was put in right field Buchanan caught his first game for the team and distinguished himself. He stopped three runs by fast work in recovering throws of his infielders. His errors were nor serious. The score:

Mrs. H. A. Pipper, Fesserton, Ont., writes:—I can certainly recommend your Doan's Kidney Pills. My husband had been troubled with his back for over twenty-five years. I got him every kind of medicine I could think of, but they did him no good. A friend advised him to get some of Doan's Kidney Pills, so he got two boxes and they cured him completely. He feels like a new man, so he says, and will never be without a box of Doan's Kidney Pills in the house.

The price of Doan's Kidney Pills is 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

The members of the Calgary team are practicing faithfully for their game with Medicine Hat here on Monday and are confident they can reverse the score which the Hat boys succeeded in making when last here. The Calgary team defeated the Hat in the gas city in June and are sure they can put it over them here on Monday.

The C.P.R. baseball team goes to Calgary tomorrow to play the Y.M.C.A. team of that city.

The Mayor has proclaimed the afternoon of Thursday, Aug. 13th, a civic holiday. The lacrosse match between Calgary and Medicine Hat will be played on that afternoon, so that a great crowd should be in attendance. The boys will be at great expense, but bound to win the championship.

The C.P.R. beat the Fire Brigade on Wednesday night by a score of 11 to 8.

A LEAP YEAR STORY.

"I know what's passing in your mind," suddenly said the maiden as the habitually silent caller stared at her. "I know, too, why you are calling here night after night, appropriating my time to yourself and keeping other nice young men away. You want me to marry you, don't you?"

"I—I do!" gasped the young man.

"I thought so. Very well; I will."

How the Minto Cup was Won

Montreal, Que., July 25.— The Minto cup, emblem of Canada's lacrosse championship, has gone on its first trip to the west, and is likely to remain there for a long time.

The New Westminster and Shamrock teams met in the second match for the trophy today, and the challengers were again victorious, winning out by a score of 6 to 2, making the score for the two matches 12 to 7.

With a lead of one goal to their credit from last Tuesday's match, when they took the field yesterday, the British Columbia team ran in three goals inside of seven minutes.

That practically settled the fate of the cup, for although the Shamrocks put up a stubborn fight right to the end of the match, and had a shade the best of the play in the second and third quarters, they never had a chance to catch the visitors.

Fast Field Work.

It was the fast work of their field that won the cup for the British Columbia team, for while the Shamrock defense was as strong as that of New Westminster, and their home was if any, a little better, the field was too fast for the Irishmen.

McIlwaine was the only one of the Shamrocks that could hold his own in the field, and Tom Rennie, Feeney and Spring had things pretty much their own way around centre. Munday did last week, and except in the third quarter was outplayed by Feeney and O'Reilly, although he tried hard was not fast enough for his cover. Tom Rennie, who is considered the speediest man on the New Westminster team.

Two Changes

There were two changes in the line up of the visitors, the Turnbull bros., Len and Bill, were off on account of injuries sustained in the last match. Their places were taken Spring and Latham, both of whom filled the bill. There was one Turnbull on the team, old man Alex. and it was he who started all the trouble for the Irishmen by notching the first goal for the visitors with a nice underhand shot, one of the old style moves which he must have learned when a boy.

Young Lynch played on Turnbull in the first half of the match, then McIlwane was put on the old man. The close score in the last two quarters can be accounted for by the factthat Turnbull was watched.

Not the Old Shamrorks

There was a remarkable difference in the Shamrock team of today, and that which defended the cup against the New Westminster team when they first came here for the cup. They lacked the speed, dash and spirit of the cup defenders of 1902. The field was not as fast as when Currie, Smith and Robinson were in line; the defence was not as strong nor the home as accurate or daring. There was a much larger crowd present than at the first match, but the weather had a great deal to do with that. The grand stand bleachers were comfortably filled, and among the lacrosse men present were: Joe Whyte Billy Findley, Billy Bradley, and Chaucer Elliott, of the Montreal club; Dave Reynolds, and Charlie Gorman, Ottawa; Jimmy Mu. Toronto; and Charlie Querrie, leader of the Tecumsehs, who angounced that the Indians would go west for the cup if they won thechampionship of the N.L.U. Mayor Bethune, of Vancouver, and Mayor Turcott, of St. Louis de Mile End, walked out on the field with the teams, the latter placing the rubber between the sticks of Munday and Feeney when they came together for the face.

Joe Lally and Dr. Irvine handled the match in good style, and although some of their penalties seemed severe in the opening quarter, they were no doubt imposed with a view to impressing the players that they intended to enforce the rules.

While the Shamrocks held their own inthe second, third and fourth quarters, and in fact had a shade the better of it in the third, it was plain from the start they were not strong enough to pull down the lead obtained by the visitors in the opening quarter. The feature of the match was the field work of the visitors.

Shamrocks Penalized

The Shamrocks lost twice as much time at the penalty bench as the visitors, but that was their own fault, and it was responsible for New Westminster scoring the two goals they got in the final quarter. In the second quarter, Dr. Irvine sent Rochford to the bench for 10 minutes for knocking out Wintermute, but as the player and penalty timekeeper thought he had been given 20 minutes, before the mistake was discovered.

The total penalties were New Westminster 30 minutes, Shamrocks, 61½ minutes. While the match was not near as exciting as other matches that have been played for the cup, the New Westminster contingent that came here with the team were not sure they had the trophy until within a few minutes of the finish.

Their Third Trip.

It was the third trip they had made for the cup and between $6,000 and $7,000 has been expended by the club in their efforts to capture it which have finally proven successful.

Not a Miracle But Medical Science

Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited,
Toronto, Ont.
Gentlemen:—

"Some time ago I began to lose flesh and failed every day until I had to quit work. My physicians and all my friends said I had contracted consumption. I failed from 165 pounds down to 119. I was advised to go to the Rockies or to the coast. I went to both places under heavy expense. I continued to fail, and was advised by the doctors to come home as nothing more could be done for me. Hope seemed to have left me.

"I tried Psychine and since starting its use I have gained from 119 to 141 pounds. I have used $10.00 worth of the medicine. I am a well man and I cannot say too much in praise of Psychine. The strongest recommendation would be weak in view of the fact that I believe it has saved my life. It is without doubt the best remedy for run-down conditions and weak lungs.

"I sincerely hope and trust that you will continue your good work of saving run down people and consumptive from the grave. Wishing you and Psychine continued success, I remain, one of Psychine's best friends."

ALEX. McCAE,
Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Almost every mail brings us letters like the above. Psychine will repeat this record in every case. It is the greatest medicine known. At all druggists, 50c and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, Toronto.

The Man on The Street

How in the world will Calgary entertain Lord Roberts when he arrives? The Exhibition is over and Burns is away. Perhaps they will show him around the Calgary district?—Medicine Hat, Edmonton, Lethbridge and Banff.

One cannot but feel joy and relief at the reprieve given the Standard Oil Co. Their fine of $29,000;00 has been reduced to $720,008. Any man would feel his life was saved.

"And a little child shall (b)lead him," sacriligeously said a Spokane theatre manager as he knocked Fitzsimmons out with a baby bottle.

The courts have decided that it is not necessary to go to Dakota to get a divorce. All you have to do is to step into B. C.

If three bandits in Boston could hold up 500 policemen, how much would it take to hold up enough water for the hill to get some.

Even if the water commissioners are willing to take Owen's word for it that the lack of water on the hill is not so serious, it doesn't look as if the people who live there will give Owen a certificate. 98 degrees in the shade without water is not to be pooh-hooched even by the sanitary inspector.

Honest now! If you had a whole battleship to yourself, a troop of N. W. M. P. to guard you and a bunch of K. C. M. C.'s in your pocket, would you sit all one hot day on a hot chair, under a hot awning, with a hot breeze fanning your face and heat and dust all around you, simply to see a lot of girls and men dressed in the styles of 300 years ago.

Everybody has something to say in favor of cold storage.

And now Rockefeller laughs again. Some months ago he had a decision amounting to $29,000,000 given against him, Standard Oil stock fell and scared out the wee men. Rocky bought at the low price, had the decision reversed and cleared $15,000,000 by the deal. No wonder he can't spend his money before he dies.

Most unfortuoately the De Beers diamond mine has closed. It is not fair to close up such a dispenser of utilities on such short notice.

Let's entertain Lord Roberts by showing him our Experimental Farm and Western Cameries and other industries brought by our publicity campaign, when he comes west. Or are the elections too far off.

Lethbridge is organizing a Wild-West show to advertise it. Just as though much organizing is needed.

$10,000 has strayed away from the Toronto Exhibition surplus. It won't be a lone traveller—it must have the company of thousands of its friends.

A German merchant has offered his son as husband for the spinster collecting the most coupons. There are advantages in large families after all.

Unless you go down and look at the old pumps rattling away, you mustn't kick about the water supply Everyone go down and help the water commissianers—look at them.

SUFFICIENT TO CAUSE IT.

(Calgary Albertan)

The Mad Hatter Times objects in strenuous and somewhat cute language to some comments made by the Albertan upon the Ames-McCarthy peep-show. The comment is directly below a reference to the fact that the Mad Hat town pump had broken down. which seems to explain everything that the Mad Hatter editor has written.

EXCURSIONS IN AUGUST

Winnipeg, July 31.—The first harvest excursion will start from the maritime provinces Aug. 10 against Aug. 29 last year. The C. P. R. ran five excursions, with 14 trains, while this year it will be 12, with possibly thirty trains.

Heading off a Risk

Gas is liable to puff out of the front door of any furnace unprovided for gas escape.

"Sunshine" Furnace has Automatic Gas Damper directly connected with smoke-pipe. Gas pressure sways damper sufficiently for it to escape up chimney (see illustration), but heat doesn't escape.

What does "Sunshine" Gas Damper mean to "Sunshine" Furnace? Means protection to the furnace parts against evil effects of gas.

What does "Sunshine" Gas Damper mean to "Sunshine" householder? Means furnace can be operated without fear as to "puffing" gas; furnace can be left without doubt as to whereabouts of gas.

What does "Sunshine" Gas Damper mean to "Sunshine" coal account? It means, instead of owner with "ordinary furnace" fear having to keep check-draft indefinitely closed to "let off" gas—when there's two-thirds parts of heat-energy to one part of gas passing up chimney—draft can with all safety be opened, and coal saved for another day's duty.

FOSTER'S FORECAST.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.— Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent 4 to 8, warm wave 3 to 7, cool wave 6 to 10. This was predicted to be a northern storm and was not expected to have much effect in the southern states.

Next disturbance will affect the southern states and will reach Pacific coast about 8, cross Pacific slope by close of 9, great central valleys 10 to 12, eastern states 13. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about 8, great central valleys 10, eastern states 12. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about 11, great central valleys 13, eastern states 15.

Immediately following Aug. 1 temperatures will be low in all parts of the country, but will steadily rise on meridian 90 till 6. These conditions will move eastward, reaching the eastern states from one to three days later.

About 6 the northern storm will have reached meridian 90, having passed over the country from the Pacific slope during the preceding three days and it will reach the Atlantic about 8 or 9. A cool wave will follow about one or two days behind this storm wave.

I will again warn my readers that the storm expected to cross Pacific slope near Aug. 3 will be severe and in a few localities will probably be dangerous about Aug. 2 or 5. Better be on the alert for that disturbance till it has passedyou.

In southern states the temperature will rise from Aug. 1 to 13. In extreme southwest temperatures will begin to go down about 11 and that cool wave will reach eastern states about 15. Not much rain in southern states. Aug. 6 to 12. Some rain in south first and last five days of month. Two cool waves will cross continent first half of August, one reaching meridian 90 about 3 and the other about 7, and these cool waves will be preceded by rains in northern states. Not much rain in northern states Aug. 8 to 14.

A northern disturbance will cross continent 11 to 15 and will be described in next bulletin.

I am expecting temperatures of the eastern states to average much lower for August than in the great central valleys. Rainfall will be greater for August in the eastern states than in great central valleys. Very low temperatures will cross Manitoba Aug. 17 to 23 and a cold dip will come down into the United States not far from Aug. 17. August will be excessively hot in the southern states from Georgia westward from 6 to 27. That month will be dry in southern states east of Mississippi river.

JUST LIKE A MAN

"My dear," remarked a gentleman opening the dining-room door, "the girl has left the vegetables on the hall-table."

"Don't be so stupid!" exclaimed his wife. "That's my new hat."

A PIONEER'S ADVICE

L. M. Gridley, a prominent and former real estate dealer, of Los Angeles, in an interview in the Examiner of that city, gives the following condensed advice to real estate men:—

"Advertise from the start. Besides making your property known it will help to create your own market."

"Keep your promises."

"Represent things exactly as they are. This begets confidence, and the confidence of your customers is one of the best assets you can have."

"Advertise judiciously."

"Write good advertisements. If you cannot write them yourself get somebody who can. Advertiseing is too expensive to waste good money on a poor job."

"When you get this point, advertise, and advertise, and then advertise again. Don't cut the printing bill. There is gold in every line of good advertising."

"Never stop hustling. Advertising makes your property known to the best possible advantage. It is up to you to do the rest."

An Unscrupulous Druggist Will Try and Sell You a Substitute for DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY Why?

Because "Dr. Fowler's" is the oldest and best known cure, having been on the market for 63 years, for DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY, COLIC, CRAMPS, PAIN IN THE STOMACH, CHOLERA INFANTUM, CHOLERA MORBUS, SUMMER COMPLAINT, SEA SICKNESS, AND ALL FLUXES OF THE BOWELS.

When they offer to sell you a preparation "just as good" they have not the welfare of your health at heart but that of their pocket. All honest druggists will give you what you ask for. Ask for "Dr. Fowler's" and get the best.

Mrs. Thomas Miller, Allandale, Ont., writes:—"I suffered terribly with diarrhœa and asked the druggist for something to cure it. He gave me a small bottle of medicine of his own manufacture, but I got no relief from it. A friend advised me to get Dr. Fowler's Ext. of Wild Strawberry and I was cured after taking a few doses.

The genuine is 35 cents, and manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Sewer Debentures

Soon the citizens will be asked to vote upon the issue of $75,000 for sewer debentures. Medicine Hat needs the sewers. The three or four blocks of sewers now in the business section have shown their convenience and the prevention they afford of disagreeable odors and unsanitary conditions.

This is too big a city to be without sewers.

But much more is Medicine Hat too big to allow a large portion of it to lie for two months without water. Yet that is exactly wnat has happened. Water is the first and foremost necessity of any city, and yet for more than two months hundreds of ratepayers have been without water almost entirely or have been able to secure it only by watching the tap and taking advantage of every minute the water commissioners were kind enough to give it to them.

Someone may say (although they have dwindled down in number by this time until they include only the responsible men) that the pumps gave out, that parts were worn out, etc., etc. It makes not the slightest difference to the ratepayers what happened at the power house, there is nothing that should mitigate the unreasonableness of lack of water. As a man remarked the other day: "Supposing those pumps had belongod to the C.P.R. Do you think they would have been without water more than a few days on that account?" And the query needs no answer.

The point is this—we have a council which allowed us to suffer all the dangers and inconveniences of no water for two months. How far should that Council be entrusted with the expenditure of $70,000 on sewers. Three of that Council are the men who allowed the water muddle to continue. Are the others strong enough to overpower this incompetence, to bring the best results rom any scheme for public sults from any scheme for public

During the month of June alone, this city expended no less than eleven hundred and eighty-two dollars on leaks and repairs. This cost for leaks for one month only amounts to almost one third of a mill of our tax rate. During the last month the water muddle cost the city treasury hundreds of dollars to enforced refunds for poor water service.

Is it possible that the Council will allow this terrible waste of money to continue without placing the responsibility? A third of a mill on our tax rate for one month's repairs only, hundreds of ratepayers without water for two months, dozens of other wastes of money in one department, and no investigation to fix the blame!

This is not the fault of all the members of the Council, but a few manipulate the entire municipal system of this city, and two or three others do not have backbone enough to come out as their better judgment directs. There is not another city in Canada, we think, that would stand it.

Come, come, Council! Let us see that you are not there merely to put in your time and find fault with no one. Be men and clean out the faults in the system. Shoulder your responsibilities and have the citizens consider you more than figureheads.

It is most unfortunate that two or three strong, honest-to-their-duty Aldermen have to take the blame that attaches to the Council as a body. Let each Alderman do his own thinking and not be handled around by some other Alderman who talks "experience" and runs things as he likes. A hundred years experience in the Council is not to be compared to common sense and some knowledge of municipal affairs in other towns and cities.

"Experience?" How amusing! The only two members of the Council who have had any previous "experience" worth mentioning are responsible for the water muddle.

With a Council that had shown itself competent, there should not be a dissenting voice on the sewer debenture question. But with the record of the water commissioners, the terrible waste of good money in the department that will put in the sewers, and some past sewer experiences, there are other questions enter into the sewer case than convenience and necessity.

The Decadence of Sport

The renewal of the Olympic games was hailed as the forerunner of a widespread return to the old, pure sport days—the days when men strove for the pleasure of the game or for the honor of their country. The tendencies of modern sport which were much less pronounced five years ago than they are now, were still strong enough to induce the straightforward athlete and the lover of honest sport to throw themselves into any scheme which promised the public a spectacle of pure competition.

It was naturally concluded that where the best athletes of every nation met the honor of nations, the honor of winning without valuable prizes, would confine the sports to legitimate fairly-fought, fairly-won struggles. But the conclusions were far from correct.

At the present day, the athlete who wins a position fit for Olympic competition must devote more time to his particular line of excellence than is good for the man. While the laurel is only for amateurs, the amateurs who are worthy to compete are very scarce. Semi-professionalism has to creep in as an inducement to the devotion of much time and training. With professionalism or its slightest touch comes the desire for the prize to the exclusion of the fun of the game, or the anxiety about the profits rather than the honor of winning. Even the brushing of amateur against professional leaves its taint on pure sport, until there is too much win-at-all-costs to allow Olympic games to change everything.

At the recent Olympic games in London, England, there has been a succession of protests and unpleasantnesses that will take much of the interest from coming Olympic sports. All the protests come from the United States and reports say that there was scarcely a contest in which protests from our cousins across the line had not to be considered. Every shade of doubt had to go to the United States athletes or a vigorous objection was made. Sometimes the managers of these athletes threatened to withdraw from the whole contest. In one case a United States runner "pocketted" an English runner and ran him off his course, as was testified not only by a judge at the course but by the footprints of the runners. When the judges refused to allow it, the United States withrew all its competitors.

In the Marathon the course officials exhibited a disregard of fairness by helping the Italian, Durando, to he post. This was done in the excitement of the moment, and the udges promptly gave the first prize to a United States runner who crossed the tape second.

The fact that the United States was the principal offender in the reach of pure sports for honest thletes, and was unwilling to acnowledge defeat gracefully supports the contention that it is the over-rominence given to sports that is he death of them. The United States universities devote much attention to their athletes hundreds of young men make their living by their superiority in games or athletic contests; and the result is that competitions are not carried out for the sport of them but for a definite end, which may be the prize or a bet or a side reward.

Betting was a big factor in th Olympic games. Professionalism wa there in its insidious form. The general tone of sports has become disgreeably selfish. Therefore the Olympic games will never, under presen ondition, be more than a big modern athletic event with all the evils of any other of its kind.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It will be a year before the city will realize what this water muddle as cost them. At the present it seems to most of us entirely a matter of indifference; but this is not ll by any means. We have struggled through so far without any hill fire (which is the purest luck); we have managed to scrape along in our efforts to get enough water to keep living, by making the women stay home to watch the tap or by the men trotting down to the flats with alls.

But the disastrous effects to the city and the growth will only be felt as time goes along. The Times has heard of a man who had the lumber and cement purchased for three new houses which he was going to erect on the hill. But as there was no water available for building he cancelled his orders and left the city for northern town.

There is even a much more serious result feared which will not be surely known for some months, and will therefore not be mentioned here. Should this occur the water commissioners should be forced to pay the lost money out of their own ockets.

At first glance it looked as if the establishment of the new pumps would end all the inconvenience and that, therefore, at the present time, it was wise to drop the whole matter. Now it looks as if the past inconvenience was but a part of the dire effects of incompetence to deal with the situation.

A glowing example of the mean methods that will be adopted in politics occurred at Taber a few weeks ago while Mr. Magrath, the Conservative nominee for this riding, was speaking. Mr. Magrath had paid for the use of the hall and yet while he was speakin- some Liberal workers in that district openly passed around he hall Liberal campaign literature. It seems unfortunate that the natural inclinations of some members of the party cannot be controlled to approach decency, by the more sane followers of Laurier.

The railway men can depend only upon the Conservative party to remedy the striking evils of the Railway Act which was brought into effect by the Laurier Government. Naturally a Government feels bound to defend its acts.

The other day, in the House of Commons, Mr. Boyce, Conservative member for Algoma called the attention of the Government to its omission to remedy the hardship under which railway trainmen now labor owing to section 415 of the Railway Act. That section makes them liable to fine and imprisonment or "wilfully or negligently" violating any by-law of the company. It also empowered the railway company to pay any fine imposed upon an employe and to recoup itself from his wages. The employe, in the meantime, was subject to the Criminal Code, and, unlike any other citizen, was liable to imprisonment for mere neglect.

The Talking Machine World of New York in referring to the agency for phono raph record company secured by the Assiniboia Music Co. here says: As is probably known the winters in Alberta are very severe, whereas the summer is short and inclined to be hot." When will the United States papers discover that Alberta, especially Southern Alberta, is not the Hudson Bay district?

The latest argument of our ingenous contemporary to make a softer pillow for the water commissioners is that no one has a right to criticise the water supply unless he visits the power house frequently "to see what is going on." So now you must keep quiet, hill-climbers.

The editor of The Times is glad o say that he has been at the power house but three times in the past two months. Presumably if we had gone oftener the water supply would have been better. Here is an interesting record of three visits.

First—Sunday, May 24th, 8 p.m., no water on hill all day. Found leak in intake pipe, gas engine pulled to pieces and left lying there until morning, no possibility of water till next day. Got to work with Ald. Penhale and three other citizens, fixed the gas engine by 1.30 a. m. Monday morning and had water on the hill right away.

Second—Sunday, June 7th. Still no water in hill. Found six feet of water in power house from flood.

Third—Date unknown. July. Still no water on hill. Found big pump idle, one boiler out of commission.

The record of the intervening dates is: sometimes from 1 a.m. to 5 a.m. p mp getting water to hill. Other ours no water.

However, had our contemporary told us that our presence at the power house would have made any difference to the water supply, we would have camped there and had our meals brought.

Alright News! Your apology in the last issue for your lapse of thought in that famous maiden political editorialof yours is accepted. McCarthy may now come to our city without serious danger.

Let's have another political editorial all your own, instead of quotations from the Courier or Colliers or The Globe.

The Lethbridge Herald says: "It is a caution the number of Conservatives who, twelve years after announce that they voted against their party in 1896. Why didn't they speak up like men in 1896?"

The Herald evidently advocates the thing honest men are forever fighting—speaking up but not voting. These Conservatives should be commended for voting as they thought right, instead of talking only. The Liberals would like to enforce the principal suggested by the Herald in order that from his own confession the powers that be could force him to vote with them.

Progress of Labor Party

Some remarkable figures have recently been presented to the public by the Labor party in the United Kingdom, showing the strides made by the organization during the years of the present century. Since 1900 there is shown a record of unbroken progress, both as to membership and the number of societies affiliated to the party. Financially, also, there has been the same forward movement, and it would almost appear as though the very highest point of success has been reached.

In 1900-1 there were forty-one trades unions affiliated with a total membership of 353,570. Added to this was a membership composed of local labor parties, Fabian Society members, etc., numbering 22,361, making a grand aggregate of 375,931. By 1900 the membership had unions and 75 kindred societies. In 1906, when the party met at Belfast, there were 176 trades unions and 85 miscellaneous societies, the membership aggregating 998,338. Since this time there has been a further surprising growth, the figures for 1907-08 being 181 trades unions having a membership of 1,049,673, 95 trades councils, local labor parties, and other organizations, numbering 22,267 members, or a grand total of 1,072,413. It is claimed by the report that the growth of the party is all the more remarkable and encouraging since it has happened during a year when the parliamentary contribution was increased from two cents to four cents per member.

Statistically, however, the result of the year's working has not been altogether unalloyed success, for while the membership has grown in so amazing a manner, the party has suffered a number of reverses both at municipal and parliamentary elections. The party nevertheless has a little army of forty members in the house of commons, fighting the battle of the workers. But, like Oliver Twist, they cry for more, and herein over-reach themselves. To the casual onlooker, it would appear that the time has arrived for crying a halt. The country is in no mood for more working men representatives until the fiscal question has been put for a straight vote and balloted upon, and unless the Labor party is prepared to help roll this stone, they will rather do harm than good by their election contests where this alone is the issue.

With regard to finances, the party is in a satisfactory position. At the beginning of the year the balance to the credit of the general fund was $2,500, and the accounts up to December, 1907, show a credit balance only a few dollars less. The affiliation fees were about $5,000 in 1906, and practically the same last year, so that if there has been no great gain in this fund there has been no serious loss, and the working balance is sufficiently substantial. The committee claim they have used their utmost endeavors to work as economically as possible, and remind members that is only by the most rigid practice of economies and care in expenditure that the work of the party can be carried on, and they modestly claim that no party doing the amount of work which they do imposes such light financial burdens upon its members."

Turning to the parliamentary fund there is reason for much greater congratulation. At the beginning of the year the credit to this fund amounted in round figures to $23,000, all of which, with the exception of some $2,000 or so, was in the form of parliamentary party maintenance. To start the new year there remains in $36,000, and upon how this is expended will depend the success of the next year.

Beef in England

Price Soaring Beyond Poor People

London, July 31.—The price of beef has gone up 2 cents per pound all round, and on the prime cuts—home killed—there is an increase of 4 cents per pound. Housewives are also faced with the unpleasant prospect of a future rise during the next few days. Decreased imports owing to the financial panic in America last autumn, the shortage of Canadian cattle, and the fact that English breeders are turning their attention to dairy-farming instead of cattle-breeding, are the causes of the advance in price.

"The supplies have been depleted through the financial crisis in America," said W. Payne, secretary of the National Federation of Meat Traders' associations, recently, "and I believe the increase will be much greater.

"For the present I am afraid there is nothing to relieve the blackness of the outlook. The prices speak for themselves.

"Today, for instance, best Scotch sirloin ribs cost the retail butcher 22 cents per pound. If he puts it on the market at 28 cents, it means that he is making practically nothing out of it. Town-killed beef, too, was 21 cents, and best American chilled 19 cents, prices which will necessitate an increased charge to the consumer.

"These prices are very much higher than those of some months ago, and, indeed, for nearly a year there has been a steady rise."

The increase in price is general, although not uniform. For example, in London the figures are 2 cents and 4 cents, in Manchester the advance is only a cent per pound, in Birmingham it is 2 cents, and also in Leeds, Bristol and Glasgow.

In many quarters there is a disposition to blame the American beef overcoming our present dependency trust for the shortage.

"Various remedies are suggested for overcoming our present dependency on America for our beef supplies.

Feed 9,000,000

"We are responsible for feeding about 9,000,000 of the population within a fifteen miles' radius of Greater London," said Mr. Payne, "and we say we ought to have facilities for increasing the supply. For instance, the embargo on American store cattle, which are not now allowed to be distributed through this country, but have to be slaughtered at the port of landing should be removed.

"Although the Argentine supplies is not been so much reduced, at present only the dead meat can be shipped from Argentina. No foreign imported meat can take the place of live cattle, as there are then no profitable by-products to deal with.

"How long the shortage will last it is impossible to say. The whole solution lies in obtaining new sources of supply.

"If the embargo were removed from the landing of Canadian cattle, which are the healthiest in the world, they could be distributed throughout England for fattening.

"At present the retailers are not getting from the consumer the prices that they have to pay for their meat to the wholesale dealers."

Another remedy proposed is the establishment in one of the Channel Islands of a foreign animals' wharf where the same business could be carried on as is now carried on at Antwerp.

Beef is likely to become a luxury to poor households, therefore, while the present state of things lasts careful wives will be searching for some other cheaper food to take the place of meat.

Even frozen meat has advanced, the beef being sold on Saturday at from 12 to 18 cents per pound, as against the previous day's highest price of 11 cents. It is expected that a further rise of a cent will occur.

Lethbridge is discussing the employment of a publicity commissioner at a salary of $1,200. An experienced newspaper and publicity man has offered himself at that price.

CORRESPONDENCE

(The editor is not responsible for the opinions of correspondents; nor does he always agree with them.)

To the Editor of The Times.

Medicine, Hat, Alberta,

In common with many old C.P.R. men throughout the United States and Canada, I read with sorrow the account of the wreck one mile east of The Hat, on July 19th. It had a peculiar and personal interest for me, inasmuch as from September, 1906, until April 1907, I was employed as second trick train order operator at The Hat, working at the very table whence Brother Moir went, the sudden end of his earthly career in Lake Louise and where Brother Ritchie wrote out the ill-fated terminal clearance, which, on account of the death-trap register-check clause contained therein, according to C.P.R. rules, led Brother Nicholson to make his tragic error.

This accident but confirms my previous opinion of the danger that lurks in that proviso of the C.P.R. terminal clearance. I have condemned it absolutely from the first time I read it and my judgment of its dangerous character has been most lamentably justified.

I have had about 18 years experience in railroad telegraph work on various roads and have never, other than on the C.P.R., worked on a road where there was in operation the insidiously dangerous, supposed-to-be-double register check system there prevailing.

So far as my knowledge goes, it is always, the duty of the trainman alone or the operator alone, to check the register. The responsibility is sharply defined in all cases and whoever is responsible, knows that he is solely responsible; that it is "up to him" and to him alone. Where two men are supposed to do the same thing of this nature the fatal hour will come when the first will make an error, not through a conscious relaxation of vigilance, but simply because, knowing the other man has to do that same work too, he is not, in spite of himself, always as keenly alert as he would be otherwise. On this same occasion, the other man, knowing the first is a careful and conscientious man and being himself in a hurry, will say to himself, "Oh yes, that's all right" and thus he overlooks the error the first man made. The double check is intended as an extra precaution, an additional safeguard, but on account of the peculiar make-up of the human mind, it does not so operate, but rather as a source of danger, thus defeating the very object of its existence.

I have read that in the construction of locomotives there is a certain length of piston-travel which cannot be advantageously exceeded or the engine will work against herself, her own force operating to retars instead of increasing her speed and pulling-power, whether this is true in mechanics, it is certainly true in psychology, for as surely as you multiply safety devices beyond a certain point you will nullify the very end you are endeavoring to achieve.

I have observed this on different railroads in various instances. I am not claiming this is as it should be. It we were all perfect we would not need these many devices to guard against our fallibility, but I am pointing out how and why certain devices that are intended for safety work in the exactly opposite direction because of the make-up of the mind of man.

The points on other roads where the operator alone is held responsible for a register check are such as the junction points of the Daysland Wetaskiwin branches where as a rule the operator has not so very much to do and there are only two or four trains in the 24 hours, or else some place where if there are many trains where he has no train orders but only switch levers to throw and the train register chock to attend to besides reporting trains as they pass.

But in heavy terminals such as the Hat where trains are made up, crews called, engines ordered, etc., etc., and the train order operator is the man to whom everybody has to look for vital information in regard to all this business, the checking of the register should never be done by any but the train men concerned. The operator should not be held in any way responsible for it.

Does it not stand to reason that the trainman who can confine his attention to the safety and protection of one train (his own) is the proper man to hold solely responsible for that train in the matter of checking up the arrival of overdue superior trains rather than the operator who has the conductors of perhaps three or four other trains standing waiting orders at that very time and who is besides that held accountable for keeping yard men, round house and callers posted as to progress of passenger trains and fast freights and other duties crowded upon him so that he is working at the highest nervous tension all the time and only hands one man his bunch of orders in hot haste to hurry back to the key and ask the despatcher to fix out someone of the others who are waiting orders.

Perhaps I take a prejudiced view of it but I have thought over it a great deal and I believe I am fair in the matter. It is not that I want to side with the operator, but it seems to me my position is backed up by the logic of the situation, even when viewed by an outsider who would be influenced only by considerations of safety, apart from any professional craft-sentiment that may be brought to bias my opinion.

It is strange that the keen-minded men who drew up the C.P.R. rules did not see the trap in that terminal clearance register check, for in many ways their rules are the clearest, best and nearest to the ideal of any I have ever worked under.

In this particular case the operator's liability to error was greatly increased by the fact that he had been working time-and-a-half every day since Brother Moir's death on July 5th.

In considering Mr. Mansfield's statement that he (Mr. Mansfield) did not think twelve hours too long a shift, we must not forget that he spoke probably in a Pickwickian sense. In other words he was expressing his "official" and not his private opinion on the subject. We all remember Wemmick in Dickens'. "Great Expectations" and how different were his "official" opinions, which he held while on duty in Mr. Jaggers' office from his personal opinions which he held while at his home in Walworth.

Shakespeare says "you take my life when you do take the means whereby I live" and how long would it be before the head of the official of any corporation rolled in the sawdust if that official expressed an "official" belief that 12 hours or 12 times 12 hours was too long on duty for any employe?

In this connection it would be interesting to know if 12 hours is not too long a shift at Medicine Hat, why the usual shift is eight hours; why a nine-hour law is in force in the United States applicable to all train order offices large or small that have continuous service, and why the continual growth of public sentiment is everywhere in favor of not in excess of 8-hours in any line of work?

Most assuredly no man is in proper condition to do his best work after more than eight hours on duty at the train order table at Medicine Hat and I worked there long enough to have abundant and abiding reason for the faith that is in me.

I wish I could have seen my way clearly to leave this letter unwritten but the inquest and the verdict of the Coroner's jury have seemed to me to go wide of the mark. The laymen did not thoroughly understand the situation and the railroad men failed to make it plain.

I write with sincere regret and with no personal animus against anyone For Mr. Mansfield and the other officials with whom I came in contact during my period on the road I have kindly feelings and remembrances. So far as my personal knowledge of them goes they are as kindly, humane, and just a set of men as their official positions, economic environment and trend of thought induced thereby will permit them to be, but as my fears of the disastrous consequences of the C.P.R. terminal-clearance train-check have been tragically realized, I write in the hope that, in the aroused state of public opinion induced by the disaster, the people when the matter is made plain to them, will take steps towards a change, either with the railroad company directly, or through the Minister of Railways at Ottawa. In any event I have cleared my conscience by writing.

Place your responsibility in this matter sharply and clearly. Do not put it up to two men or you will be ever courting disaster. Almost universal usage bears witness that cumulative experience has proven that one man alone, either trainman or operator, but not both, should be held responsible for the checking of a train register. Any danger that may lurk in the one-man check through oversight is increased a hundredfold in attempting to lessen it by putting it also up to another man snapped and greasy beneath our tread. Sometimes it seemed impossible that he should fail to hear our approach. However, the man is fortunately rather deaf, and he was entirely preoccupied in that which he was doing. When at last we reached the door and peeped through we found him crouching at the window, candle in hand, his white, intent face pressed against the pane, exactly as I had seen him two nights before.

We had arranged no plan of campaign but the baronet is a man to whom the most direct way is always the most natural. He walked into the room, and as he did so Barrymore sprang up from the window with a sharp hiss of his breath, and stood, livid and trembling, before us. His dark eyes, glaring out of the white mask of his face, were full of horror and astonishment as he gazed from Sir Henry to me.

"What are you doing here, Barrymore?"

"Nothing, sir." His agitation was so great that he could hardly speak, and the shadows sprang up and down from the shaking of his candle. "It was the window, sir. I go round at night to see that they are fastened."

"On the second floor?"

"Yes, sir, all the windows."

"Look here, Barrymore," said Sir Henry, sternly; "we have made up our minds to have the truth out of you, so it will save you trouble to tell it sooner rather than later. Come, now! No lies! What were you doing at that window?"

The fellow looked at us in a helpless way, and he wrung his hands together like one who is in the last extremity of doubt and misery.

"I was doing no harm, sir. I was holding a candle to the window."

"And why were you holding a candle to the window?"

"Don't ask me, Sir Henry—don't ask me! I give you my word, sir, that it is not my secret, and that I cannot tell it. If it concerned no one but myself I would not try to keep it from you."

A sudden idea occurred to me, and I took the candle from the trembling hand of the butler.

"He must have been holding it as a signal," said I. "Let us see if there is any answer." I held it as he had done, and stared out into the darkness of the night. Vaguely I could discern the black bank of the trees and the lighter expanse of the moor, for the moon was behind the clouds. And then I gave a cry of exultation, for a tiny pinpoint of yellow light had suddenly transfixed the dark veil, and glowed steadily in the centre of the black square framed by the window.

"There it is!" I cried.

"No, no, sir, it is nothing—nothing at all!" the butler broke in; "I assure you, sir——"

"Move your light across the window, Watson!" cried the baronet. "See, the other moves also! Now, you rascal, do you deny that it is a signal? Come, speak up! Who is your confederate out yonder, and what is this conspiracy that is going on?"

The man's face became openly defiant.

"It is my business, and not yours. I will not tell."

"Then you leave my employment right away."

"Very good, sir. If I must I must."

"And you go in disgrace. By thunder, you may well be ashamed of yourself. Your family has lived with mine for over a hundred years under this roof, and here I find you deep in some dark plot against me."

"No, no, sir; no, not against you!" it was a woman's voice, and Mrs. Barrymore, paler and more horrorstruck than her husband, was standing at the door. Her bulky figure in a shawl and skirt might have been comic were it not for the intensity of feeling upon her face.

"We have to go, Eliza. This is the end of it. You can pack our things," said the butler.

"Oh, John, John, have I brought you to this? It is my doing, Sir Henry—all mine. He has done nothing except for my sake, and because I asked him."

"Speak out, then! What does it mean?"

"My unhappy brother is starving on the moor. We cannot let him perish at our very gates. The light is a signal to him that food is ready for him, and his light out yonder is to show the spot to which to bring it."

"Then your brother is——"

"The escaped convict, sir—Selden, the criminal."

"That's the truth, sir," said Barrymore. "I said that it was not my secret and that I could not tell it to you. But now you have heard it, and you will see that if there was a plot it was not against you."

This, then, was the explanation of the stealthy expeditions at night and the light at the window. Sir Henry and I both stared at the woman in amazement. Was it possible that this stolidly respectable person was of the same blood as one of the most notorious criminals in the country?

"Yes, sir, my name was Selden, and he is my younger brother. We humored him too much when he was a lad, and gave him his own way in everything until he came to think that the world was made for his pleasure, and that he could do what he liked in it. Then, as he grew older, he met wicked companions, and the devil entered into him until he broke my mother's heart and dragged our name in the dirt. From crime to crime he sank lower and lower, until it is only the mercy of God which has snatched him from the scaffold; but to me, sir, he was always the little curly-headed boy that I had nursed and played with, as an elder sister would. That was why he broke prison, sir. He knew that I was here and that we could not refuse to help him. When he dragged himself here one night, weary and starving, with the warders hard at his heels, what could we do? We took him in and fed him and cared for him. Then you returned, sir, and my brother thought he would be safer on the moor than anywhere else until the hue and cry was over, so he lay in hiding there. But every second night we made sure if he was still there by putting a light in the window, and if there was an answer my husband took out some bread and meat to him. Every day we hoped that he was gone, but as long as he was there we could not desert him. That is the whole truth, as I am an honest Christian woman, and you will see that if there is blame in the matter it does not lie with my husband, but with me, for whose sake he has done all that he has."

The woman's words came with an intense earnestness which carried conviction with them.

"My God, what's that, Watson?"

"Is this true, Barrymore?"

"Yes, Sir Henry. Every word of it."

"Well, I cannot blame you for standing by your own wife. Forget what I have said. Go to your room, you two, and we shall talk further about this matter in the morning."

When they were gone we looked out of the window again. Sir Henry had flung it open, and the cold night wind beat in upon our faces. Far away in the black distance there still glowed that one tiny point of yellow light.

"I wonder he dares," said Sir Henry.

"It may be so placed as to be only visible from here."

"Very likely. How far do you think it is?"

"Out by the Cleft Tor, I think."

"Not more than a mile or two off."

"Hardly that."

"Well, it cannot be far if Barrymore had to carry out the food to it. And he is waiting, this villain, beside that candle. By thunder, Watson, I am going out to take that man!"

The same thought had crossed my own mind. It was not as if the Barrymores had taken us into their confidence. Their secret had been forced from them. The man was a danger to the community, an unmitigated scoundrel for whom there was neither pity nor excuse. We were only doing our duty in taking this chance of putting him back where he could do no harm. With his brutal and violent nature, others would have to pay the price if we held our hands. Any night, for example, our neighbors the Stapletons might be attacked by him, and it may have been the thought of this which made Sir Henry so keen upon the adventure.

"I will come," said I.

"Then get your revolver and put on your boots. The sooner we start the better, as the fellow may put out his light and be off."

In five minutes we were outside the door, starting upon our expedition. We hurried through the dark shrubbery, amid the dull moaning of the autumn wind and the rustle of the falling leaves. The night air was heavy with the smell of damp and decay. Now and again the moon peeped out for an instant, but clouds were driving over the face of the sky, and just as we came out on the moor a thin rain began to fall. The light still burned steadily in front.

"Are you armed?" I asked.

"I have a hunting-crop."

"We must close in on him rapidly, for he is said to be a desperate fellow. We shall take him by surprise, and have him at our mercy before he can resist."

"I say, Watson," said the baronet, "what would Holmes say to this? How about that hour of darkness in which the power of evil is exalted?"

As if in answer to his words there rose suddenly out of the vast gloom of the moor that strange cry which I had already heard upon the borders of the great Grimpen Mire. It came with the wind through the silence of the night, a long, deep mutter, then a rising howl, and then the sad moan in which it died away. Again and again it sounded, the whole air throbbing with it, strident, wild, and menacing. The baronet caught my sleeve and his face glimmered white through the darkness.

"My God, what's that, Watson?"

"I don't know. It's a sound they have on the moor. I heard it once before."

It died away, and an absolute silence closed in upon us, straining our ears, but nothing came.

"Watson," said the baronet, "it was the cry of a hound."

My blood ran cold in my veins, for there was a break in his voice which told of the sudden horror which had seized him.

"What do they call this sound?" he asked.

"Who?"

"The folk on the country-side?"

"Oh, they are ignorant people. Why should you mind what they call it?"

"Tell me, Watson. What do they say of it?"

I hesitated, but could not escape the question.

"They say it is the cry of the Hound of the Baskervilles."

He groaned, and was silent for a few moments.

"A hound it was," he said, at last, "but it seemed to come from miles away, over yonder, I think."

"It was hard to say whence it came."

"It rose and fell with the wind. Isn't that the direction of the great Grimpen Mire?"

"Yes, it is."

"Well, it was up there. Come now, Watson, didn't you think yourself that it was the cry of a hound? I am not a child. You need not fear to speak the truth."

"Stapleton was with me when I heard it last. He said that it might be the calling of a strange bird."

"No, no, it was a hound. My God, can there be some truth in all these stories? Is it possible that I am really in danger from so dark a cause? You don't believe it, do you, Watson?"

"No, no."

"And yet it was one thing to laugh about it in London, and it is another to stand out here in the darkness of the moor and to hear such a cry as that. And my uncle! There was the footprint of the hound beside him as he lay. It all fits together. I don't think that I am a coward, Watson, but that sound seemed to freeze my very blood. Feel my hand!"

It was as cold as a block of marble.

"You'll be all right to-morrow."

"I don't think I'll get that cry out of my head. What do you advise that we do now?"

"Shall we turn back?"

"No, by thunder; we have come to get our man, and we will do it. We after the convict, and a hell-hound, as likely as not, after us. Come on! We'll see it through if all the fiends of the pit were loose upon the moor."

We stumbled slowly along in the darkness, with the black loom of the craggy hills around us, and the yellow speck of light burning steadily in front. There is nothing so deceptive as the distance of a light upon a pitch-dark night, and sometimes the glimmer seemed to be far away upon the horizon and sometimes it might have been within a few yards of us. But at last we could see whence it came, and then we knew that we were indeed very close. A guttering candle was stuck in a crevice of the rocks which flanked it on each side so as to keep the wind from it, and also to prevent it from being visible, save in the direction of Baskerville Hall. A boulder of granite concealed our approach, and crouching behind it we gazed over it at the signal light. It was strange to see this single candle burning there in the middle of the moor, with no sign of life near it—just the one straight yellow flame and the gleam of the rock on each side of it.

"What shall we do now?" whispered Sir Henry.

"Wait here. He must be near his light. Let us see if we can get a glimpse of him."

The words were hardly out of my mouth when we both saw him. Over the rocks, in the crevice of which the candle burned, there was thrust out an evil yellow face, a terrible animal face, all seamed and scored with vile passions. Foul with mire, with a bristling beard, and hung with matted hair, it might well have belonged to one of those old savages who dwelt in the burrows on the hillsides. The light beneath him was reflected in his small, cunning eyes which peered fiercely to right and left through the darkness, like a crafty and savage animal who has heard the steps of the hunters.

Something had evidently aroused his suspicions. It may have been that Barrymore had some private signal which we had neglected to give, or the fellow may have had some other reason for thinking that all was not well, but I could read his fears upon his wicked face. Any instant he might dash out the light and vanish in the darkness. I sprang forward therefore, and Sir Henry did the same. At the same moment the convict screamed out a curse at us and hurled a rock which splintered up against the boulder which had sheltered us. I caught one glimpse of his short, squat, strongly-built figure as he sprang to his feet and turned to run. At the same moment by a lucky chance the moon broke through the clouds. We rushed over the brow of the hill, and there was our man running with great speed down the other side, springing over the stones in his way with the activity of a mountain goat. A lucky long shot of my revolver might have crippled him, but I had brought it only to defend myself if attacked, and not to shoot an unarmed man who was running away.

We were both swift runners and in fairly good training, but we soon found that we had no chance of overtaking him. We saw him for a long time in the moonlight until he was only a small speck moving swiftly among the boulders upon the side of a distant hill. We ran and ran until we were completely blown, but the space between us grew ever wider. Finally we stopped and sat panting on two rocks, while we watched him disappearing in the distance.

And it was at this moment that there occurred a most strange and unexpected thing. We had risen from our rocks and were turning to go home, having abandoned the hopeless chase. The moon was low upon the right, and the jagged pinnacle of a granite tor stood up against the lower curve of its silver disc. There, outlined as black as an ebony statue on that shining background, I saw the figure of a man upon the tor. Do not think that it was a delusion, Holmes. I assure you that I have never in my life seen anything more clearly. As far as I could judge, the figure was that of a tall, thin man. He stood with his legs a little separated, his arms folded, his head bowed, as if he were brooding over that enormous wilderness of peat and granite

PACKING PLANT AT EDMONTON.

Edmonton, July 28.—The J. Y. Griffin Co. stated this morning that the price paid for hogs to the farmers will rise as soon as the pork packing plant is in a position to commence operations. It is the intention of the company to insure a steady supply of hogs at the packing plant by making the raising of hogs more profitable to the farmers. The plant of the J. Y. Griffin Co. will be in operation by September 1st, according to the present expectations of M. Burkhart. It is the intention to kill 200 head of cattle, hogs and sheep per day from the start, if that much stock can be secured. The company has at present a number of buyers out on the road in the province arranging for supplies of stock.

A Great Endurance Race

When we come to talking about modern endurance races for sport or for pelf, the present riders can scarcely hold a candle to F. X. Aubrey, who used to do some great stunts on the roof of a bronco. In 1850 he made a bet that he could cover the distance from Santa Fee, N.M., to Independence, Mo., over the old trail in eight days. It is 765 miles between the two points as the freight caravans traveled it, and by that route on a wager of $1,000 Aubrey was to ride.

He succeeded in winning, making his destination, the Jones House in Independence, three hours before the expiration of that time. During this, his first ride, he killed a number of horses, the death of one, when within 25 miles of Council Grove, compelling him to walk to that place carrying his saddle on his back, where he obtained another animal.

This feat of Aubrey was regarded as the greatest ride ever made by anyone in ancient or modern times and he became the hero of the incipient border town, Independence, where he was feted and made the lion of the day. His fame spread throughout the entire west, including California, where he was well known.

Although people marvelled much at the wonderful endurance of the man and the remarkable time in which he had made the trip, still Aubrey himself was not at all satisfied with it. He determined to break the record and the following season made another wager of $5,000 in gold that he would do it. He accomplished his record-breaking dash across the great plains in the marvellous time of only five days and 13 hours.

His objective point was the same hotel to which he had ridden on his former trip. On this ride, when he reached the hostelry, he was perfectly exhausted and in fainting condition, his horse quivering from head to foot and white with foam. Aubrey was lifted from the back of the animal by his friends and carried into his room in the house, where he lay in a complete stupor for two days. Six horses, which previous to starting from Sante Fe, had been stationed at distances from 25 to 50 miles along the route, fell dead under him, so terribly fast had he forced them on. He possessed a beautiful mare, Nelly, a favorite animal, noted for speed and endurance, but she expired at the end of the first 150 miles. On his last great trip he rode day and night, stopping only long enough to leap from his tired animal and spring on to a fresh one. He made more than 200 miles every 24 hours, and all the sleep he took aggregated but three hours during the entire five days.—Denver Field and Farm.

As To Credit.

One of the goodthings for a retailer to bear in mind when granting credit is that it is much easier to charge goods than it is to collect accounts when due. When retail dealers realize that merchandise is cash and treat it as such, then will the retailer wake to the necessity of treating an application for credit on the same basis as he would treat an applicant for a cash loan.

Merchants who guard their cash carefully part with their stock-in-trade cheerfully, simply because at the moment it has lost its cash aspect. Terms of sentiment count little, either, with retailer or his customer. The "send it next time" application is accepted with cheerfulness, and the customer, having crossed the bar, soon gets out and into the ocean of debt.

As a matter of fact, the retailer who insists upon reference and security before opening a doubtful account and then insists on a settlement in accordance with the terms of the sale, not only commands the respect of the customer, but does that customer a real service. The merchant who is known as a strict collector gets his money first and in full, the easy fellow is the last paid, if at all, and this by reason of the knowledge that he has not backbone to insist on a settlement, through fear of loss of trade.

Look over your ledger some time and scan the accounts. Ask yourself the question, "How much of the money represented there could I get in twenty-four hours' notice if a sudden emergency arose which required the use of ready cash? How many of the names on the books could be used on notes for bank discounts?" The result doubtless would be surprising but beneficial.

Instead of laws for the collection of accounts we require a law to compel the retailer to accept the result of his own folly.

Every little while we go over lists of accounts of grocers and to repeated questions invariably receive the same answer, viz.: "They have nothing." And still these grocers count these dead accounts as assets. Better wipe them all off the books and start afresh than continue this practice of self-deception. Know where you stand.

WISE CALIFORNIA CROW.

Tales of the big gulls which accompany the army transports all the way in the long journey from San Francisco are not infrequent, but it has remained for a California crow to wear the laurels. If you pass Hornbrook any fine morning at 7.30 o'clock sharp and crane your neck out of the Pullman window up toward the sky you will observe a fine black devil of a crow sitting complacently in the topmost branches of an old pine, preening his feathers and apparently half asleep.

But he is far from being asleep. On the contrary, he is very much awake, for he is keeping a bright lookout for train No. 14, whose smoke is visible every morning at this hour as it comes tearing along the road. As the cars approach the tree there is a subdued, stately flutter of two black wings, Master Crow rises slowly into the air and picks up No. 14 with the abandon and ease of a crow hobo as it passes.

He drops to the roof of the car as if it were his rightful home, and though the engineer has tried every way to play a joke on him by tooting the whistle, ringing the bell madly and making a general racket, the crow solemnly refuses to be dislonged. He is an old friend now and the passengers on the 7.30 have learned to look for him as regularly as they do for their morning papers.

Appetizers are thrown at him all the way to Siskiyou, which is reached at 8.45 o'clock, where his ebony majesty enjoys a royal meal, to which his acumen and perseverance have fairly entitled him.—From the San Francisco Call.

Ottawa, July 29.—The department of labor has received a wire from William Whyte, second vice-president of the C.P.R., accepting on behalf of the C.P.R., the award of the board of conciliation. Mr. Whyte, who telegraphs from Banff, makes it clear he does not greatly like the finding. He states that while the report does not favor the company in regard to several of its contentions, and to that extent is not satisfactory to it, nevertheless, to assist in carrying out the spirit of the act, he accepts that portion of the decision relating to matters of western lines.

Port Arthur, Ont., July 29.— The city council has refused the request of the Trades and Labor Council to insert a fair wages clause in the civic contracts on the ground that it would tend to lower the standard of workmanship by placing indifferent and incompetent men in the same class with the good ones.

Washington, July 30.—"The report that I have said that I would or could deliver the labor vote to any political party is an infamous lie," said Samuel Gompers president of the American Federation of Labor today. "Organized labor is not only honest but intelligent enough to choose the party for its support which will best represent its interests."

London, July 30.—The judicial committee of the privy council today rendered a decision in the case of Jose and others vs. the Metallic Roofing Co. A new trial is ordered on the ground of misdirection by Judge McMahon in telling the jury that calling out men on strike by resolutions of unions if those resolutions cause the strike was an actionable wrong without regard to the motive and without regard to the conspiracy alleged. Respondents pay the costs.

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 1.—After an executive session that continued until this afternoon, the grievance board of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad switchmen issued an appeal to Chas. P. Neill, United States Commissioner of Labor, and Chairman Knapp of the Interstate Commerce Commission, under the provisions of Erdman law, asking for the intervention of President Roosevelt in the controversy between the switchmen and the company. This is the switchmen's last effort to preserve peace, and members of the grievance board say that if this appeal fails a strike will be orhered.

Keir Hardie will arrive at Quebec about Aug. 22. He will visit Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and Hamilton and then cross over into the States for a few days. He will get to Halifax by September 22 and remain there during the sessions of the Trades Congress.

He will not address meetings south of the line, notwithstanding the rumor that he would go on the stump for Debs. Meetings will probably be held in all the Canadian citieswhich he visits and conferences will be held preceding the more representative conference which it is hoped to hold in Halifax during congress week. Mr. Hardie will be accompanied by his wife and daughter on the trip.

FISHERMEN'S SUPERSTITIONS.

In British Columbia the Indians ceremoniously went to meet the first salmon, and in flattering voices tried to win their favor by calling them all chiefs.

Every Spring in California the Karaks used to dance for salmon. Meanwhile one of their number secluded himself in the mountains, and fasted for ten days. Upon his return he solemnly approached the river, took the first salmon of the catch, ate some of it and with the remainder lighted a sacrificial fire. Thesame Indians laboriously climbed to the mountain top after the poles for the spearing booth, being convinced that if they were gathered where the salmon were watching no fish would be caught.

Very widespread, in fact, is this native belief of the necessity of caution whenever Adam is on fishing bent.

In Japan among the primitive race of the Ainos even the women left at home are not allowed to talk lest the fish may hear and disapprove while the first fish is always brought in through a window instead of a door, so the other fish may not see.

The Eskimo women of Alaska never sew while the men are fishing, and should any mending be imperative they do it shut up in little tents out of sight of the sea.

Under no circumstances on the north-east coast of Scotland will a fisherman at sea mention certain objects on land, such as "minister," "kirk," "swine," "dog," etc., and the line will surely be lost if a pig is seen while baiting it. As on the land chickens must not be counted until they are hatched, so at sea, fish must not be counted until they are all caught. It is good luck to findmice nibbling among the nets; a horseshoe nailed to the mast will help, and a herring caught and salted down will produce wonders.

In the Shetland Islands a cat must not be mentioned before a man baiting his line, and among the Magyars of Hungary a fisherman will turn back and wait over a tide if he meets a woman wearing a white apron.

Every year the natives of the Duke of York Island decorate a canoe with flowers and fern, fill it with shell money and cast it adrift "to compensate the fish for their fellows caught and eaten."

It was always the custom of the Maoris, the primitive inhabitants of New Zealand, to put the first fish that they caught back into the sea "with a prayer that it might tempt other fish to come and be caught."

If the fish did not come soon enough in British Columbia the Indians used to employ a wizard, who made an image of a swimming fish and put it in the water to attract live fish to the bate.—Los Angeles Times

WAS IT BERT SHAUGHNESSY?

A despatch from Vancouver says that Bert Shaughnessy, who claimed to be a son of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, attempted suicide last week in Seattle by drinking poison, following his arrest on charges of forgery and passing worthless checks.

A Bert Shaughnessy, claims agent of the C.P.R., was in this city a few days after the wreck and called at the Times office.

CORRESPONDENCE

(The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents, nor does it necessarily agree with them.)

Editor of The Times,

I wish to draw the attention of the citizens of Medicine Hat to the cold deal they are getting in regard to meat prices here. I enclose a list of prices as compared with Calgary. I claim that we should have the same prices here as at Calgary. The same conditions prevail and stock is more easily and cheaply secured. The best beef cattle being shipped, we should have the privilege of consuming the old, decrepid and immany cases tuberculose cows, at a minimum price. Winnipeg prices are even lower than Calgary's and most of their cattle come from the West. The stock there is all inspected by good inspectors, so people know what they are eating.

Yours truly,
A CITIZEN.

Citizen encloses an advertisement in a Calgary paper which reads as follows:

Prime shoulder hams, 10c pound.
Prime rib roast, 10c pound.
Shoulder Roast, 8c pound.
Boiling ans stewing beef 5c pound.
Round steak 10c pound.
Shoulder steak, 3 lbs. for 25c.

RETIRED HERE.

Inspector Davidson, of the R.N.W.M.P., who has just retired from active service, is making his home with his family in this city, where he has bought a cottage on Ottawa Street.

Yesterday the Inspector completed a quarter of a century's service with the force. After the eventful life of the early days, he was stationed for some years as inspector at Pincher Creek, later moving to Maple Creek, where he has been stationed for two and a half years previous to his retirement. Before joining the police, Inspector Davidson was in the Imperial Army.

TOO DEAD FOR A FUNERAL.

Billy Martin, aged four, came to his mother and in great ecstacy exclaimed:—"Oh, mother! Louise and Carberry dound such a nice dead cat and they are going to have a funeral, and can I go?" Permission was given, and when Billy returned he was questioned as to the outcome of the funeral. "They did not have it at all." "And why not?" "Mother" was the answer, "the cat was too dead."

Mr. Lawson of Moose Jaw arrived here on Tuesday, to assume the duties of Mr. J. Mott, as locomotive foreman, who is leaving.

While a Galician was lowering a pail into the old Dixon well, on Thursday he heard a furious splashing in the bottom of the well and looking down perceived a dark body floundering in the water. He quickly ran across to the railway yards and informed Jim Atcheson, Moore and Colter who were quicyly on the scene, the well is 43 feet deep, so it was impossible to go down without a rope, which was quickly got by Jim Acheson (who in a case of that kind can certainly run). H. N. Cowan, Herman Robinson, Floyd Finch, and Chas. Baker then arrived and the work of rescue began in earnest. A running noose was made in the rope and after a good many attempts was put over his body and then all hands pulled to their utmost, and while all were standing pale-faced, they managed to get it up. Behold it was one of Mrs. Covan's calves.

Woolchester

What might have been a most disastrous fire occurred at Mr. Jas. Johnston's ranch last Tuesday.

About noon a spark from a pipe got under the floor of the barn, which blazed up, but was promptly extinguished with water, and thinking the danger past everyone retired for dimer; while the meal was in progress a member of the family caught sight of the building aflame again, but before anything could be done, the stable, with barn, pig-pens and corralls was burned to the ground.

Fortunately there was just enough time to rescue three valuable horses, but three pigs, as well as the grainery, grain, and harness, etc., were lost, owing to the rapidity with which the fire did its devastating work.

With the long spell of dry weather the wood was like tinder, and within ten minutes the buildings were demolished.

Help was soon had, and all efforts were directed to prevent the fire spreading, and after some difficulty this was successfully managed. The building was a fine one and was only built a little over a year ago.

The loss is estimated at about $500.

Mr. B. Wallace, the former Presbyterian missionary here, left on Monday for Spokane.

Police Court Items.

Two juvenile offenders appeared before Magistrate Kealy last week charged with breaking into the Boston Bazaar on Sunday evening and stealing a number of articles.

A crack in one of the windows had been taken advantage of, a small piece of glass in the lower corner being completely smashed through. The lads took bottles of perfume and other articles within an arm's length.

On account of the extreme youthfulness of the offenders, Mr. Kealy let them go with a warning.

This is only one of a series of petty thefts by boys during the last few weeks.

On the same day a much older youth was convicted of breaking Mr. Porter's window, Braemar Street east. He was allowed out on suspended sentence, his father putting up $500 security for his son's good behaviour for 12 months.

On the 29th inst. Joseph Sirr appeared in court and was charged with refusing to pay wages. An order was made for payment, to take effect Saturday, but on that date the defendant gave notification that the case would be appealed.

On Thursday Thos. Morgan was fined $5 and costs with the alternative of 15 days imprisonment for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. The fine was paid.

On Friday evening Robert Brady made himself objectionable by standing about near the flour mill using insulting language to women. His conduct led to his arrest by the police and the following morning he was given one month hard labor at Lethbridge.

The Conservative Campaign

Leaders to Visit the West

The Conservatives of Canada will carry on such an election campaign this year as has never been seen or heard of in Canada before. It is proposed that five of the leaders of Dominion politics shall make a tour of the whole country stopping at the the large cities and important centres from coast to coast, for the purpose of holding meetings and waging a war that will finally bring their party to victory.

The five statesmen who will make the trip are: R. L. Borden, Premier J. Douglas Hazen of New Brunswick; Premier J. P. Whitney of Ontario; Premier R. P. Roblin of Manitoba, and Premier Richard McBride British Columbia. Such a company of strong earnest speakers never started out on such a trip before. The first meeting will be held in Halifax on September 14 and up to the present time the dates and places arranged for are as follows: Halifax, Sept. 14; St. John, Sept. 15; Quebec, Sept. 18; Three Rivers, Sept. 19; Montreal, Sept. 20.

Besides these meetings others will be held at Toronto, London, Pembroke, Winnipeg, Regina and Calgary, but the dates have not been fixed.

This plan has been talked about for some time and was known that September was the month in which the campaign would take place, but up until this morning the dates were not make known officially and before leaving for the east on a trip for his health Premier Roblin gave out the above information.

May be a Strike

C.P.R. Employes Present Ultimatum

Winnipeg, Aug. 1.—Employes of the C.P.R., in all departments of eastern and western lines, have by a vote of 97.3 per cent decided to reject the majority of the report of the conciliation board.

T. W. McVety representative of the men, asked this morning what would be the result if the ultimatum incorporating the views of the men was presented to the head officials of the company and failed to receive a favorable reply within a reasonable time said:

"Well, the men will take a holiday."

"When will the holiday take place?"

"I cannot say," was the reply, and refused to commit himself further.

Rumor, however, is busy, and has it that a general strike will follow the refusal of the company to accept the demands of the men, and that a decision one way or the other will likely be reached within one week.

Montreal, Aug. 1.—It is learned here this morning that the men have handed in an ultimatum to the C.P.R. officials here demanding the acceptance of the main point of the minority report. If no satisfactory reply is received from headquarters before Tuesday, Aug. 4, it is confidently expected there will be a strike involving the whole C. P. R. system.

A Liberal on Ames

A Thorongn, Persevering Man

The Edmonton Saturday News, whose inclinations are decidedly Liberal, has the following to say about Ames, who is to speak here on Friday, August 14th:

Another politician who will visit the West this summer is Mr. H. B. Ames, M.P., of Montreal, whose meetings will be looked forward to with great interest, inasmuch as he represents a new type in our public life. He is a man of means, who after serving in the city council as a reform alderman with considerable distinction, became desirous of securing a place for himself on a larger stage. He brought to his election campaign the same thoroughness that had brought him success in his business. He had the electors of the Montreal division that he was contesting each looked after as carefully as if they were valued customers of his firm. His expenses, none of which were ever shown to be otherwise than legitimate, reached an extraordinarily large figure, and though the Liberal tide was running very strongly in that part of the country he was elected by a good majority. Since entering parliament, he has shown rare industry and perseverance and is undoubtedly one of the most useful men on the Opposition side.

The Star Theatre

The new Star Theatre opened on Main Street by Mr. J. W. McDonald is proving a most popular place of entertainment, the large houses obtained every evening bear witness. During the intensely warm weather there has been little falling off in the nightly attendance, and there is every prospect that the bi-weekly matinees which will be put on early in the fall will draw full houses!

J. W. McDONALD,
Proprietor of the Star Theatre.

The building which is the only one in Alberta built especially for the purposes of a moving picture entertainment, is constructed on the most up-to-date principles and the safeguards taken render an outbreak of fire practically an impossibility. The plant is of the most modern and efficient type.

Three changes of programme are given each week. The entertainment is clean, bright, and, in some of its features, of considerable educational value. A series of subjects for instance, were thrown on the screen last week illustrative of Australian life in many phases.

Little comedies of everyday life, laughably exaggerated, form an amusing feature of the programme, while the illustrated songs interspersed throughout the evenings show, are always provocative of applause.

If you have an idle hour, you might do worse than pass it at The Star Theatre.

Every housekeeper who has used Campbell's Varnish Stain is delighted with the results obtained. Nothing else like it they say. So easy to apply, and so durable. The Marshall Hardware Company carries a full line of this popular stain.

STRIKE DECLARED ON C.P.R.

Thousands of Carmen and Machinists Quit Work

Ninety Five Men in the Local Shops Lay Down Tools--Japs Take the Places of Some

Strike Cannot Last Many Days

A few minutes after ten o'clock on Wednesday morning the 95 men employed in the C.P.R. shops as machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, carmen, carpenters, and their helpers had dispersed quietly to their homes, and an army of little yellow men were at work in the roundhouse. The order had been given for men to quit work at ten, and all along the line from Halifax to Vancouver, men laid down their tools at that hour (railroad time), packed up their overalls, left their time at the time clerk's office, and went home.

Almost as the men left the shops, a number of Japanese were brought in and set to work wiping. The company had three carloads of Orients in reserve, brought in from extra gang work east of the city. A few white men remained in the shops —foremen, clerks and laborers.

In the afternoon a meeting of the men was held in Dominion hall. Interviewed later, the press committee had little to communicate.

"We're in to win" said an official when questioned later, on the situation, adding that he did not believe the fight would last many days. But the men were prepared to fight to a finish. No pickets would be put on, as the Canadian reading of the law was doubtful and the strikers were determined to keep the law. As to the Japs, "I do not think there are many machinists amongst them," facetiously remarked the chairman of the committee.

The main points at issue so far as the western men were concerned, were the questions of boilermakers' classification, of apprenticeships, and of the men's committees. The adoption of the recommendation of the majority report would involve a reduction of five cents an hour in all boilermakers' wages, west of Winnipeg. The men's committees had been of incalculable service in the past, in preventing abuses arising from personal spite in foremen. The committees had power to bring cases of such a nature up for discussion, and, if necessary, carry them above the foreman's head to the master mechanic, and if necessary, up to the general superintendent. This was a safeguard which the organization were determined to retain.

There was a little tenseness in the situation on Wednesday night as the trains pulled out, the first section of No. 97 being loaded with a gang of Japanese laborers, going west. The presence of half a dozen or so of plain clothes men drafted down from Calgary, who mingled with the crowd, was no doubt responsible for this. The officials appeared to be taking every safeguard to prevent a disturbance. There appeared to be no necessity for these precautions, as the strikers had not displayed a wish to bring about a breach of the peace. Picketing even, had not been thought of. As an official stated would be the case, the men throughout kept to a strict observance of the laws. Decisions in Canada on the question of picketing have been conflicting, some of the highest authorities interpreting the Canadian law in the spirit of the Taff-Vale decision in England, when peaceful picketing was declared illegal.

A representative of The Times interviewed Mr. J. S. Lawrence but the Superintendent would say nothing about the strike. Everything is being done from headquarters. With the men it is much the same. They are acting under orders and are not bothering about the details.

The first figures given out of 6,000 on strike appears to be exaggerated The detailed figures are much too high in the localities known of locally. The strike orders have, however, been well obeyed by the men, only St. John, Halifax and Saskatoon shopmen remaining at work, in addition to a few in some of the places, who refused to go out. Only one in the local shops remained at work. A small number of Japs were placed in the round house, but of course they cannot do the necessary repairs. On Friday a small accident occurred on the Crow's Nest, when a beam broke, due, the men say, to lack of inspection at Macleod.

There are many rumors going around about the plans of the men. It is said the trackmen are going out, and in some places the foremen have quit upon the introduction of Japanese. In Calgary a notice was posted asking all who have not worked since the 4th to call for their pay.

In Winnipeg a number of non-union men are being kept at the shops in sleeping and dining cars. The men are picketting there, but there has been no disturbance. The company has special constables on duty.

Montreal despatches say a thousand men applied for work, many wanting reinstatement.

The strike situation this morning is little changed though the bringing in of more "spotters" last night and the probability of more white strike-breakers being brought in have caused a little uneasiness. Too professional strike-breakers (mechanics) from Sante Fe' have been put to work in the roundhouse. It is regarded as probable that the Labor party in Winnipeg and the Eastern cities, will take action against the Company for breach of the law in importing alien labor.

In prominent places on railway premises, notices have been posted sent out from the head office in Calgary, warning against a breach of the criminal code in regard to intimidation. No trouble is anticipated in Medicine Hat, as the men have throughout avoided the very appearance of evil, nothing in the nature of picketing being done.

This morning's meeting of the men lasted until about noon, and is the longest since the strike broke out.

The Times was informed by one of the plain clothes men that thereware five specials looking after the interests of the company here, three of whom came in last night. By the man on the street this will be considered a very modest estimate.

The situation is not without its humorous side. Two ladies whowere standing on the platform the other evening were unexpectedly treated to a cold douche, administered accidentally by two Japs who were manipulating the hose on the top of a car. For the first few evenings it was one of the principal diversions of the crowds that assemble on the platform each night, to watch the amateur trainmen climb across the abyss which divided car from car, this feat being performed with an excess of caution which was decidedly funny. With a few days experience, the yellow trainmen are getting more confident.

The specials are all well armed. They are now moving from the Royal Hotel to special cars in the yards. It was rumored that the Japanese workmen also carried firearms but this is discredited.

The only act of violence recorded throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion, took place in Winnipeg on Sunday night, when all the windows in two passenger coaches were smashed by persons unknown

TWO STATEMENTS.

G. J. Bury, general manager of western lines: "Just state for me that the company, and myself in particular, prefer not to make a statement for the press at this time. You can readily see that it is impossible to say anything now."

J. H. McVety, representative of the mechanics, in charge of the strike said:

"The statement has been made several times that the officers are all ready to handle any amount of traffic, but during the winter months, the average number of hours worked by each man was only one hundred and forty per month, and the company, instead of getting their power into good shape, were apparently starving the men in the hope of making the move of April 1—that of abolishing the schedule—an effective one.

"The men, in taking the action that they have done, are merely protecting the concessions that they have been granted in years gone by, and the company are entirely responsible for the strike that has arisen. An attempt was made during the slackest time of the year to abolish conditions which had been existing for eight or nine years and the men recognize that it is merely a question of time until the entire agreements will be wiped out. The arbitration which we have had a taste of is at the best merely to continue asking for the entire abolition of the schedule, until they have gotten everything that they want and the men have correspondingly lost everything.

"If the railways of Canada are to be of any use to the people it would appear that it would be necessary for the government to take hold of them and operate them. The policy of waiting till the last minute before making preparations to meet traffic emergencies shows that the road is being operated for dividends rather than in the public interests.

"In the correspondence between the officers of the east and west lines, accepting the award of the arbitration board, it was clearly stated that the company were willing to put the finding into effect on their lines, although not agreeing with its substance. In an interview in Montreal, one of the officers of the company stated that they were determined to put the new schedule into force and these two contrary statements are incompatible.

"The award of the arbitration board was especially unfair where changes were made on eastern lines, based on decisions made in the west, without any request for such decision being made by the company and without any of the proffered evidence of the men from Montreal being accepted."

Killed by Lightning

Seven Persons Farmer Killed on Friday

Killed by Lightning.

The electric storm on Friday night was attended with one fatality. Although it was not serious in the city, the district was subjected to severe thunder and lightning.

At Seven Persons the storm was of special severity. Dan Boucher and his brother-in-law, Mr. Bell-Richard were returning from the harvest field with their horses. The latter was riding a few yards in front when a terrific thunder clap came. Looking around he saw something was wrong, and rushing his horses into a nearby barn he ran back. Mr. Boucher was found lying dead with his horse also killed. Clothing and quilts were on fire, but were soon extinguished. Assistance was got from the village and the body was taken there, from where it was shipped to Medicine Hat Saturday morning. It will be shipped to Mr. Boucher's old home in Wisconsin.

Mrs. Boucher has the sympathy of the neighborhood and of The Times.

Walking on a Wager

Across Continent Pedestrian Passes Through City

When a khaki-clad, sun-browned young man entered the Times office on Saturday morning, it was not on the hunt for charity or work. It was Charles King, a young man of about 25, who had tramped all the way from Montreal on the C.P.R. tracks and was on his way to Vancouver.

This little pleasure jaunt of 3000 miles was undertaken on a wager of $1,000. King left Montreal at noon on April 27th, and must reach Vancouver on September 25 to win his money. The distance must be covered in 150 days, about 20 miles a day. He must earn all the money for his expenses on the way, and must end up in Vancouver with $150 in his pocket. He must walk every step of the way and be booked in by an operator at every station on the line. The trip is being written up for a publishing house.

Of course Mr. King must have a permit from the C.P.R. to use their tracks. He also carries a letter to the Mounted Police, signed by an official which reads as follows:

"The bearer of this, Mr. Chas. King, is walking from Montreal to Vancouver along the C.P.R. track. He is not to be molested as he has authority so to do."

He is a mechanic by trade and has already worked 34 days on the road and says he will have the $150 all right at the end of the trip. He has filled five books with the names of operators and in Medicine Hat got the names of a number of men added to his collection.

While he has had no hair-breadth escapes on his trip he has a variety of interesting stories to tell. Near Schreiber he was faced by a moose, and had his tree picked when the moose decided he wasn't worth getting after. Near Savanne he met a bear, and hustling to a construction camp took the foreman out with him and bagged Mr. Bruin. When the passenger train sank in the soft spot near Gilbert a couple of months ago, King had laughingly told the conductor he would beat him to Kenora. And sure enough he did.

His worst experience was on the north shore of Lake Superior, where stations are so far apart and the country is extremely wild. Here he was forced to sleep in the open for seven nights. His longest day's walk of 57 miles was made here. He is forced to stop at night as the operators must sign his book. On the north shore it was too dangerous to walk after dark with all the high trestles and wide sleepers. On one occasion he fell between the sleepers on a threstle but saved himself by catching a sleeper. He has some amusing stories to tell of the operators in lonely spots. Dozens of these men are scattered along the line working in box cars and seeing only the trains go by.

The pedestrian reached Medicine Hat at 18.55 Friday night and left shortly after noon Saturday. He has his second pair of boots on, five soles having gone with the first pair, and his second now having its fourth sole.

Mr. R. Hoffman, manager of the Canadian Brick Co. has every reason to anticipate big success for his firm. Early in the spring the plant was burnt down when the first kiln was ready to open, from causes which have not been explained. The company immediately set to work however, and a new plant was installed.

At the beginning of last week the first kiln was opened and on Wednesday some samples were brought into town. Quite a number of builders examined them, including J. E. Lussier, C. Taylor and J. Everard, and they all pronounced them an A1 brick, very hard and of fair color—one of the best of its kind they had ever seen.

The brick kiln is situated about a mile and a half east of the city on Ross Creek.

The first kiln contained 1x0,000, the second, which was opened on Saturday, held 60,000. The capacity of the plant will soon be 25,000 a day. A new brick engine house is being built.

Sewer By--Law Withdrawn

Ratepayers Unanimous Against Expenditure

New By-Law Will be Submitted Later

Only about a score of citizens and three Aldermen attended the city hall meeting on Friday evening, when in the midst of a great storm the last rites were performed over the corpse of the sewer debenture by-law. Not a single voice was raised in the auditorium in its behalf, and the only matter which gave rise to any discussion was the question of ways and means of carrying out the funeral ceremony.

At eight o'clock, the time for which the meeting was called, there were about half a dozen ratepayers and one alderman present, and the first half hour was spent in watching the gathering storm.

At 8.30 the Mayor opened proceedings, referring at the outset to the burning question of the hour in Medicine Hat—the no-water question. He was pleased to be able to announce that at last one of the new pumps had been working. Six feet, four inches of water had been pumped into the tank in one hour and 11 minutes—at which rate the stand pipe would be filled twice in twenty-four hours (1000,000 gallons). The brasses unfortunately had become over-heated and a shut down had been found necessary to overhaul the pumps, which should be running again in the morning. The new pump appeared to be just what were needed; and he believed the city would have cause to be highly satisfied.

As to the question for the discussion of which the meeting was called, the whole sewerage system had been sanctioned by the provincial engineer, and it was because many prominent ratepayers were dissatisfied that the council had decided to withdraw the by-law if there were not some likelihood of its passing through. If there were any opposition at all it was well-nigh a certainty that the by-laws would not carry, as the speaker did not suppose anyone was working for it very hard. It would be the duty of the council to submit another by-law to pay the Merchants' Bank the money loaned, amounting to about $22,000.

Different reasons were given for the desire to have the by-law defeated. One was that the ratepayers had not confidence in the council. Another was that the present was inopportune time to sell. It was purely a matter of business and an expression of opinion was desired.

Mr. Ansley was the first rate-payer to speak. He would not desire, he said, to have a further financial burden placed upon the city's shoulders, if it were for the benefit of a few. He instanced a case where at the present time, in two blocks past which the sewer was carried, only five people were making use of it.

At this point the Mayor made the statement that later on peoplewould be compelled by the provincial authorities to use the sewers.

Mr. J. E. Howson said that he found the majority of the ratepayers against the by-law. The city already owed $375,000. As far as the council's ability and management were concerned—he had nothing to say. (Laughter). He had onlycome across two men in town who would vote for more money than the sum owing to the banks, etc. He agreed with Mr. Ansley, who had contended that to compel ratepayers to make use of the sewers just at the present time would be the infliction of a great hardship. He, himself, could not afford to spend money in this way, and there were others in the city, he believed, as greatly in need of money as he. (Laughter).

The Mayor explained here that the provincial authorities, not the council would compel the use of the sewers.

Ald. Morrow held that it would be unwise to spend a large amount of money at the present juncture.

Ald. Forster thought it an inopportune time to submit the by-law. Ninety-two was a poor price to get for debentures and as the sewers were not needed very badly, and the bond market would probably be more favorable in the spring, he was in favor of its withdrawal and the substitution therefore of a by-law to cover debts already incurred. He thought it necessary to submit a by-law for raising $26,000.

Mr. McCutcheon wished to know why, if the indebtedness was only $22,000, it was necessary to submit a by-law for raising $26,000.

Ald. Forster explained that it was necessary to issue for a sum equal to 8 or 10 per cent more than actually required on account of the low price obtainable for debentures.

A suggestion of Mr. McCutcheon's that the by-law (for the $26,000) should be submitted to the people at the elections in December, called forth the announcement by Mr. James that the banks were quite willing to wait until another by-law might be submitted, or until an election. (Applause.)

A motion was then made by Mr. Ansley that the by-law for raising the $70,000 be withdrawn. The motion was supported by Mr. Stewart, Ald. Spencer also speaking in its favor. It was decided to leave the time and manner of submitting a new by-law to the discretion of the council.

Sensation at Irvine

Prominent Rancher Arrested on a Serious Charge

A well known rancher living east of Irvine, whose name the Times withholds at present, was arrested yesterday by the Josephsburg detachment of the Mounted Police on a charge of rape. The prosecutrix lives at Josephsburg with her husband, to whom she was married nearly a year ago. The alleged crime was committed just before her marriage.

The accused appeared before Ferguson, J.P., yesterday at Irvine and was remanded in custody of the Mounted Police.

The greatest surprise and excitement has been occasioned by the arrest, in the neighborhood of Walsh, Irvine and Josephsburg as there was not the slightest inkling of anysuch charge up to the moment of arrest. The accused is a married man with no family. His wife is distracted at the terrible charge and feels her husband can clear himself. Nothing the unexpected arrest is being talked of in the district. Accused has relations living in this city.

Didn't Steal City Hall

'Cause He Didn't Think of It

A noted thief, one of the aristocracy of his profession, has stated that he owed his success to cool cheek, to pure brazenness, that his best operations were carried out under the eyes of his victims.

Wm. Hayes had embraced the tramp tradition as a part of his gospel of success, but, sad to relate, the attempt to put it into practice ended disastrously, and the accomplished trunk artist has been allowed two years in which to think over and revise his creed.

Several times of late Hayes has been noticed loading around the station platform, wandering among the trunks apparently in a very dejected frame of mind.

On the 27th ult., a trunk belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Leslie, which had been checked through to the East was missed. On the 3rd of this month, Wm. Eden, took a trunk down to be checked through to Lethbridge. Leaving the station for a while he returned to find that his property had been taken away. The loss was reported to the police.

The following day a clue to the identity of the culprit was discovered. Going down town Mr. Eden by chance met an acquaintance, Mr. Challen. Mr. Challen expressed surprise at the meeting, as he knew that it had been his intention to leave for Lethbridge the previous evening. On learning the cause of the delay, he stated that he had been requested by the man Hayes to assist in carrying a trunk from the station platform to his room above the City Dye Works, but had refused. The chief of police was advised in the matter, and immediately went round to Hay's place, and the little mystery was soon unravelled. many pictures from Mr. Leslie's trunk were found upon the walls. Hayes himself and the woman with whom he cohabited were wearing articles of apparel obtained from the same source.

On Wednesday morning Hayes was committed for trial by Magistrate Kealy. Electing a speedy trial, he was brought up before Judge Mitchell on Thursday and pleading guilty, was sentenced to two years imprisonment for each offence. The sentences will run concurrently, and if the prisoner behaves himself he will regain his freedom in eighteen months.

Hayes came down from Calgary in the spring. He has a bad previous record.

As illustrating the artlessness—the unsophisticated nature of the man (for an experienced hand espec ially) may be mentioned the fact that he tried to dispose of a pair of practically new patent leather boots from Mr. Leslie's trunk) at the Alberta Hotel. He told Mr. Challen, when requesting assistance with his heavy burden that he intended going out on the night train south, but had had trouble with the railway company about his baggage.

BIG MEETING ON FRIDAY

Prominent Conservative Speakers Will Appear

Ames' Stereopticon Proofs

When H. B. Ames appears in the Opera House on Friday night there is certain to be a big crowd. In Saskatchewan where he is speaking now his meetings have aroused much enthusiasm. Men who have previously looked on exposures as political moves only, have gone away convinced by a sight of the documents themselves.

Mr. Ames is a bright speaker, and has an interesting subject.

He is supported by M. S. McCarthy of Calgary, whose terror of coming to Medicine Hat has at last been overcome, and by Thos. W. Crothers of St. Thomas, one of the most eloquent speakers of the Conservative side.

Mr. Magrath, the Conservative candidate will likely be present as well.

Police Court Items.

John Draudson was am interdicted person, but nevertheless he was successful in obtaining in the city greater quantities of his favorite beverage than was good for him on Tuesday last. Getting into a hopelessly drunken condition he was arrested, brought before the Magistrate and fined $20 and costs.

John Gillespie, a common drunk and disorderly was fined $3.00 and costs.

On the same day Wm. Hayes was arrested. An account of his efforts will be found elsewhere.

On Wednesday last Dan Regan alias McCallum, who had been loafing round the city for some days, appeared before the Magistrate and penalized to the extent of $10 and costs for vagrancy. A friend paid up to save Regan from imprisonment.

Frank Schram appeared before Magistrate Kealy yesterday morning on a charge of tapping the city's gas supply. Mr. Craft testified to having found defendant's gas connected up though the meter was taken away.

Other evidence was given from which it appeared that defendant, who paid up his gas account in full the day after the cutting off of the supply, had been promised by several officials of the city that the gas would be turned on again. According to the city by-law, a fine of $1 must be paid by delinquents before this can be done. Of this Schram was unaware and was never informed by the city officials.

In view of the apparent difficulty experienced in getting information from the girls concerned, Magistrate Kealy said he would treat the defendant leniently. A fine of $5.00 and costs was imposed.

John Paul, who appeared for refusing to remove cesspool, was given till Wednesday to perform the necessary work.

P. C. Beaumont, after a hot chase on Saturday arrested Wm. Capewell charged with forging Mr. Dickenson's name to a check for $160. Capewell stated that he did not make out check intending to cash it, and will appear before Judge Mitchell. That he is thoroughly a bad one was shown by a conviction for stealing a watch for which he has been sent down for 3 months hard. Watson and Keynes also had a charge against him for stealing a horse and buggy which prisoner had hired and never returned. This was found later in a barn. This charge was withdrawn.

TORONTO STREET

A Low--Class Premier

The personalities in the Saskatchewan fight on both sides are a disgrace to Canada and to civilization. Scott, the Liberal premier seems to be the worst of all. The following is a sample of the style of undignified letters he is sending the press. These letters are addressed to Mr. Laird, the Provincial Rights candidate for Regina, but are always given the press by Scott for publication:

H. W. Laird, Esq., Regina.

Sir, It is pleaded in your nehalf that in 1905 I did not act in the McInnis bribery charge upon his platform statement. I did. Report of McInnis's Fillmore statements reached me at Swift Current early on Wednesday morning, 6th December. Immediately I wired instructions to Regina for legal action against McInnis. Was my-self at Estevan Wednesday night and at Milestone on Thursday, when and where report of McInnis' affidavit reached me; and I wired instructions for his arrest.

You dislike personal accusations. So do I. My friends and myself made none in 1905—absolutely none. Against my colleagues, my friends, myself, personal charges by your party made the air reek. Mr. Motherwell was branded a petty thief. Mr. Calder was charged with peddling whiskey. Hon. Mr. Lamont was held up as a betrayer of private correspondence. Have you forgotten the nasty story circulated in a barber shop when Hon. Mr. Sifton visited Regina? I was accused as a briber. I was falsely accused, and the false accusation is now put into use again, as a shareholder in the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company You and your friends stopped at nothing in your attempts to blacken us, and even after the end of the campaign, instead of ceasing these efforts, you redoubled them. On the 10th January, 1906, Mr. Haultain classed Mr. Calder with thugs and blackguards and blacklegs.

When Mr. Haultain and you opened the present campaign at Regina, on July 24th, you renewed these efforts to blacken us, and called us ballot thieves and robbers. Next day a vile story was put in circulation about the Liberal candidate in Regina City. My colleagues and friends are quite as respectable and are men of quite as sound integrity as are Mr. Haultain and his friends; yet as a consequence of your efforts people that I have met for the first time since 1905 have actually expressed wonder because my face did not carry on it the signs of villany—they had been led to believe that I was a hardened reprobate steeped in guilt. How long did you expect that I would stand such methods of warfare in silence? Are you, is your president, Mr. McInnis and is your leader, Mr. Haultain, so unspotted in character that I must forever bear your personal attacks against my colleagues and myself meekly?

At the first counterstroke you whimper. You ask something more than a platform statement, I therefore repeat herewith over my signature, the charge I say I have evidence that when in municipal office in Regina you grafted. You understand, and the public understand, the meaning of the term. If you are not guilty, as I declare I believe you to be guilty, it is open to you to cause me to be convicted of wronging you, and in that alone my punishment would be heavy, because in my life to date I have not wilfully traduced any man.

Three years ago I was anxious to have people's judgment on the autonomy issues, and did not wish those issues to be complicated by anything else. Many times I was appealed to to sanction retaliation by my friends, and who contended that I was foolish not to strike, or let them strike. Perhaps I was foolish. At all events in this 1908 campaign I am not going to mersanction retaliation by my friends characters to be slandered by a set of men who live in houses whose glass walls are as thin as those of J. K. McInnis.

F. W. Haultain and H. W. Laird.

ATHLETICS

C. P. R. VS. CALGARY.

(Calgary Albertan.)

The C.P.R. baseball team from Medicine Hat last night threw a decided jolt into the Y.M.C.A. team of this city, which team has been very active in doling out victories during the last few weeks. The Y.M.C.A. did not turn out to full strength. Lepper is away, and Davison is on the injured list, which rather put a kink in the infield. Kirkham, however, reinforced the infield to some extent.

But the Y.M.C.A. could not get started, and the errors were sad indeed. Weir, the home flinger, was in a trance, and the visitors picked a dozen clean swats, four of which were lofty two-sackers; and one was extended into a three bagger.

In the first innings, Floto Kelly Irving was smitten on the cords of the muscle with a fearful rap, and for a time it was thought that he would watch the game from the bench, but he was supplanted into outfield. In fact, for some reason or other every man on the team was somewhat off, with the exception of Burnett, who played a very nice game behind the bat, and had the wagon tongue with him when he faced the pitcher.

The most sensational feature of the evening was a tripple play, pulled off atan unusual uncertain time by the Medicine Hat team. Now a triple play is a bird of very rare and gaudy plumage, which does not visit a baseball field very often in one season. It floated gracefully and unexpectedly down in the second half of the third innings. Floto had just scored, Feidel was on third and Shackleton on second, and Goodwin on first, and none gone. In that happy period the Y.M.C.A. were only two joits in the rear, and the rooters were exhorting Burnett to lose the ball, and he tried. He shot one down the third base line, about six inches above the ground. McFarland reached it, and placing a hoof on third bag had both Burnett and Fridel, who had started homewards. He threw the ball to second, where Shackleton had taken unusual liberties, and the second sacker had Shack out so far that he didn't put up an argument. They could have landed Goodwin at first too, but the rules place the limit at three men at one time.

Now that was quite a difference from what had been planned.

The Medicine Hat team had it somewhat over Calgary in everything except base running, and our fellows had that down pretty fine.

Mr. Minkler refereed the game with much dignity and considerable eclat.

The attendance was extremely small. Mr. Minkler, fearing a cloudburst or an earthquake, called the game at the end of the eighth. The score was:

BACHELORS VS. FIRE BRIGADE

It was expected to be a close game on Friday night but there wasn't much but the Fire Brigade showing up. Terence Finlay held the Bachelors down to six hits in the five innings played before dark. The Bachelors tried three pitchers, Squance, Barker and Lorden, the latter having to go in to close the game. Something got into the Bachelors work and their hands didn't work right. Dan Barker was in several places at different times but a pet thumb he carried wouldn't kink properly.

There isn't much more worth saying about the game. The score:

That the New Westminster team did not meet the best team in the East when it won the Minto Cup is shown to everyone. The Shamrocks are second last in the league with only two wins out of six games played. On the way home the Minto Cup winners played the Tecumsehs the league leaders and were walloped 10 to 4. Such a game is, of course, no criterion of the ability of the two teams, but it shows that if the Tecumsehs come West this fall seeking the cup, they will give the holders a much harder battle than they had in Montreal.

TAKING IN THE TENDERFOOT.

Frank Ruch, the keeper of the buffalo herd in the national forest of Oklahoma is credited with this: "Once a Kansas farmer met on the hot, dusty road a homesteader pushing on excitedly for the Cheroke strip. 'Whar ye bound?' said the farmer. 'For a hundred and sixty acres o' free land in the strip,' was the reply. And the man vanished in the glitter of dust and sunshine. A month or two went by and on the same rusty road the Kansas farmer met the homesteader returning. 'Hello,' he said, 'what you done with them hundred and sixty acres?' The homesteader pointed his whip toward his mule team. 'Them mules?' he said. 'Well, I traded eighty acres of my claim for 'em.' 'What ye do with the other eighty?' 'Don't gimme away,'" was the reply 'but the feller was a tenderfoot, an' I run in the other eighty acres on him without his knowin' it.'"

WE'VE GOT A TELEPHONE.

By P. T.

We've got a telephone at last,
And wife is quite content.
She says the news comes in so fast
She hasn't spent a cent
For literature of any kind,—
She hears the neighbors tell
So much of things that're going on,
She listens for that bell.
And when some one begins to talk,
She takes receiver down,
And then she knows how every thing
Is going on in town.
I'd like to use the phone sometimes
And get the price of grain,
And call the Weather Bureau up,
And learn when it will rain.
But all the women on our line
They've got so much to say,
I wait and wait, while other men
Are drawing in their hay.
And then I say a word or two
And wish that telephone
Was anywhere but in my house
Or I'd a line alone.

Preacher's Opinions

Rev. P. K. McRae, Forks Baddeck, C. B.: "I always count it a pleasure to recommend the Dr. Slocum Remedies to my parishioners. I believe there is nothing better for throat and lung troubles or weakness or run-down system. For speaker's sore throat I have found Psychine very beneficial."

Rev. W. H. Stevens, Paisley, Ont.: "Psychine seemed just the stimulant my system needed. I shall add my testimony as to its efficacy at every opportunity."

Rev. R. M. Brown, Amherst Head, N.S., "I have often recommended Psychine since taking it myself, for it is a cure for the troubles you specify."

Rev. Chas. Stirling, Bath, N.B.: "I have used Psychine in my family; the results were marvelous. I have visited people who state that they never used its equal. I strongly recommend it."

Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, Markdale, Ont.: "I have taken two bottles of Psychine and am pleased to say that I am greatly improved in health. I was troubled with my throat, but now I find it about restored to its normal condition. I find my work very much less taxing. I believe Psychine is all claimed for it."

These are earnest preachers of the gospel of Psychine. They know whereof they speak. Psychine cures all throat, lung and stomach troubles. It is a great voice strengthener, acting directly on the vocal, respiratory and digestive organs, thus specially adapted to public speakers. At all druggists, 50c and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. Slocum, Ltd., Toronto.

Canadian Fairbanks Co. objected to the manner of letting the contract for gas well supplies. Three tenders had been submitted by each firm and the Fairbanks Co. were lower by $70 than the successful firm, in fittings. In explanation, Ald. Baker stated that he had understood that the whole was to be included in one tender at the time that the three different items given were all parts of one tender and not three separate ones. This he had understood from Mr. Morrison. In any case, he thought that had he known at the time the real situation he would still have recommended the same tenderer, as it was not wise to get supplies at a number of different places, and Jas. Rae's tenders made the lowest total. Communication filed.

Medical Health Officers repart was as follows:
Measles three cases.
Dyptheria five cases.
Chickenpox, one case.
Typhoid Fever 2 cases.
Erysipeles, two cases.
Houses fumigated, five.

At lengthy discussion took place on the matter of 200 gas accounts in arrears and the turning off of delinquents' supply. Ald. Baker thought notification should be given before the supply was cut off. A danger pointed out by Ald. Tweed, was further emphasized by the remarks of the clerk, namely, that newcomers, who were unaccustomed to gas, were liable to leave their jets open when the supply was suddenly shut off. It was decided that notification should be given before gas supply was stopped.

The eternal water question came in for a large share of the council's serious consideration. The mayor complained in the first place that no one seemed to have charge up at the pump house. It appeared to him that the council should formulate some plan now. If a question were asked up at the pump house nobody there knew anything. It had been stated by a C.P.R. mechanic that if the pumps had been given into the hands of the railroad skilled workmen, they would be running O:K. in a day or two.

A C.P.R. man had informed Ald. Spencer that there was no reason whatever why the small pumps should not be enough to supply the city.

The new pump was to have been ready to start the Sunday night previous, but the men were unable to set it going. The mayor thought the water commissioners should submit a plan to the council.

Application from a Cracbrook man was read, for the position of engineer in charge, at a salary of $125 per month, position to be guaranteed for two years. Ald. Spencer thought a competent man should be obtained and given full control. The question of appointinting the applicant was referred to the water commissioners.

Ald. Baker stated that the little gas engine had cost more in repairs since the spring than it was worth. He would guarantee it had cost $1,000 in repairs alone.

There were three men down at the pump house, said the mayor, none of whom considered himself responsible.

The usual discussion on hydro—dynamics and hydro-staics took up about a third of the council's time. The question at issue was —to have the engines pumping direct to the standpipe, with no connection between the pump-house and the town mains except through the standpipe —or to pump as at present, a connection being taken from the main pipe at Toronto Street. One of the main points at issue had reference to the pressure in the mains—whether this would be greater under the former on the latter system. It appeared to be the general opinion that if the water were pumped direct to the maines there was a danger of bursting the pipes—that the pressure was greater.

After about an hour's discussion, at the end of which none seemed to be any "forrander," the mayor remarked, "We don't seem to know where we're at, and the debate ended happily upon Ald. Spencer suggesting "We'll decide that things are all right."

It was also decided, on Ald. Spencer's suggestion, to hold a Praisa Service when the water system gets in working order.

A public meeting was decided upon for Friday evening, to discuss the sewer by-law.

How Longboat Failed.

Lou Marsh, who seconded Longboat in the Olympic marathon writes:

Because I could find no reasonable explanation for the defeat of the Canadian team in, the Marathon in the wretched time of 2.55.18, I delayed writing the story of the race until this morning, and even now I am beaten for an explanation.

I went to Billy Sherring, the coach but even he in his road-racing wisdom could not tell me more than the runners, who said:

"We simply could not run."

Now, let us look the situation over. Here is a race won by Dorando the Italian, who was disqualified afterwards—in 2.55. He beat Fred. Simpson, our Mississauga Indian, who a week before ran 20 miles in 1.58, a clip which would have brought him the full Marathon distance in 2.53, and yet the best Simpson could do was 3.04.28 1-2. Close behind Simpson the trial day ran Harry Lawson, who did 20 miles in two hours, or 2½ miles in about 2.40—Lawson who did 25 miles in the Canadian trial Marathon in 2.32 over desperate roads, on a scorching hot Canadian day, and finished it undistressed. Yet Harry Lawson was beaten and finished weak.

Then take Tom Longboat—the redoubtable redskin whose name was on every lip. Longboat, who could clip off those 26 miles in 2,30 if he were in his prime, went to the mark apparently in the pink of condition, yet he blew up and fell unconscious on the road, while apparently running well within himself though at that he had battled his way into second place.

And so on down the line.

Jack Caffery, the veteran, who saved himself, and did not let any early foolishness run away with his pace judgment, Eddie Cotter, and in fact all of them were beaten by some thing unknown—something strange and inexplicable. Canada's great team of long distance runners fell a victim to something—they know not what—and the only satisfaction they can draw is that they beat England's best on their own roads. They had to give place to Yankee runners, whom they had beaten time and again on their own continent.

The weather was not oppressively warm—at least we had not of the fierce July heat we have in Canada, the roads were smooth and hard, no loose stones to dodge, no dust orruts to gallop over. No leaping of ditches from sidewalk and back to sidepaths such as we get at home, nothing to do but run over these beautiful roads winding through quaint little villages and cool leafy lanes, yet the boys could not run with anything like their usual speed and courage. But to get back to the story of the race.

Fifty-five men started and only twenty-seven finished.

Whenthe pistol was fired Art Burn, the Calgary runner sprang to the front at a hot clip, but before two miles had been covered Jack Price, Lord and Duncan, the Englishmen, with Hefernon, the South African, and Dorando, the Italian who was thefirst to cro!s the tape, were leading. Jack in front was cutting off a pretty fair clip, having done the five miles under 36 minutes.

Tom Longboat was next up, 200 yards back and running strong Doc Morton, the Toronto cyclist, and I, who were his attendants, picked him up and away we went. The Indian was running his own race and we did not bother him. As we travelled on mile after mile. Morton kept to and from between the leaders and the Indian.

"They are running as if the devil himself were behind," he said, finally, and I pilgrimaged forward to see for myself.

Sure enough, there they were, running like terror-stricken men. I told Tom.

"I ketch 'em," he grunted, "I kil, them," and sure enough he did.

At nine miles Price fell by the wayside and we passed him as his attendants rubbed him down. Then Beale, the Englishman, came up from behind and joined Tom. Tom grinned and stuck like a leech when the Britisher urged by his friends, tried to leave him. Beale hung on for five miles, and during that time Jack Duncan, and Lord collapsed.

Hefferon, out in front, was setting a desperate pace, and at one time led Longboat by four minutes.

"You're whacked, Longboat!" was the incessant cry of the thousands along the route, but Tom only grinned and strode on.

Then around the bend the red pants of the Italian Dorando caught our eye. Tom watched him a while, then steadily cut him down. Twice the Italian came back, but at 18 miles the Indian had him well beaten, and Hefferon, tiring fast, was only 300 yards ahead.

"It's all over but the cheering," said Doc Morton, and Tom Flanagan had gone on to the Stadium, content that Longboat would win,when suddenly, with only a slight premonitory warning, the Indian staggered, threw up his head and fell senseless across my wheel.

We gave him champagne, and were busy bringing him around, when a Marathon medical officer arrived and refused to let him go on.

"He's dead beat, and I won't let him go on," he said, though he acknowledged that Tom's heart and pulse were strong.

Tom said afterwards that he suddenly lost all sense.

"I think it's the heat that got me, he said. He went to the Stadium in a car.

It was a tough blow to Flanagan and the Indian felt blue, but there wasn't anything to it. We allfelt thatthe Indian had gone back, but as the minutes rolled by, and we saw that England's best went down, and the others were walking no time we felt that it wasn't the Indian who had gone back, but that he had succumbed to strange weather conditions.

So much for Longboat, who followed the leaders, and experienced the hot early pace.

How about Bert Goldsboro, Harry Lawson and Fred Simpson, who laid back in the second brigade, and refusedto be dragged out at a hot clip? They fared no better. Before 15 miles had been covered they were stopping to walk. Even Simpson, cared for by so good a man as Billy Sherring, couldn't make a showing. He had no speed or ginger at all. Good old Harry Lawson clung on gamely, but he, too, weakened, and back behind them Jack Caffrey, Eddie Cotter, George Lister, and the rest of them were depending on stamina alone to give them a place, and were only running nine miles an hour, weakened just the same

W. H. Wood of Brantford, who got fifth place, was the only chap who could run at all, and it was sheer grit that pulled him through. He took it easy at first, battled off the attack of weakness without stopping to walk, and in the last ten miles started to come, but just when all the men in front were weak and he wanted to come on and win his legs cramped, and he could not do more than a dog trot. This Woods is a game chap. He didn't even stop to have his legs rubbed.

A New Game.

The organization of the Hip Lungs, a Chinese ball club in Chicago, has been heralded as the first Chinese team that ever was gotten together. This is a mistake. In 1896 San Francisco had a team called the Ah Foohs, which was one of the best ball teams among the amateurs of 'Frisco. The team was made up of walters at the Ah Fooh restaurant, and it had one star, a young almond eyed celestial named Sin Mul, who really ought to have been a major leaguer. Sin had it on all the ball players that ever stepped up to the plate, but he lost out the game just the same. The Ah Foohs joined the Saturday league that was made up of some of the best amateur teams in the city, and the way those Chinese would gamble was a caution. Sin was their best run-getter. He could hit and he was as fast as a streak of lightning. Finally they met the Welches, a team of Irish from south of Market, in a big game out in Golden Gate park. The Welches had not lost a game, and neither had the Ah Foohs, so the battle was for blood, and Sin, captain of the team, used all his celestial cunning. The first thing that the Irish noticed wasthat every one of Sin's team had unrolled their ouques and that puzzledthem until Guy Mol, the Chink second base an drew a pass on balls, and the moment he reached first he had laid the end of his queue on the base and walked ten feet off. A moment later he stole second. The Welchs' catcher threw him out by ten feet and the shortstop was waiting to touch the runner when Guy stopped, swung his head, dropped the end of his pigtail onto the base and walked up to it. The Irish made a big kick but the umpire decided that the pigtail was part of the player, andthat he was safe. The way those Chinks ran bases after that was a caution. The only chance the Irish had to put them out was to catch a queue whileit was flying through the air. Still the score was close, and seeing that he had to win by cunning Sin began tying an extra pigtail to the end ol each baserunner's queue so that he had about twelve feet of a handicap on the baserunner.

The runner would reach first, lay their pigtails on the base and walk a third of the way to second, then run 20 feet, throw the queue around, drop it onto the base and walk up to it, grinning. The ninth inning started with the score 9 to 8 in favor of the Welchs and three of the Chinamen reached bases before anyone was out. Sin was on third, or rather the end of his pigtail was, and he was a third of the way home grinning and waiting to score, when McGarrigle, who was playing third, made the play that won the game. The pitcher threw the ball to him, and McGarrigle, pulling a pair of scizzors out of his pocket, cut off three feet of Sin's queue and then touched him with the ball. The umpire called the runner out and the Irish won.

No Disease is so Quiet and Stealthy in its Approach as Kidney Disease

That is why it is so dangerous. It may become deep-seated before you realize the danger.

It is therefore of great importance to recognize the early warning symptoms: pain or dull ache in the back, bladder pains, smarting sensation when urinating, frequent or surpressed urination, sediment in the urine, etc., because in its early stage kidney disease is easily cured by DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Mr. Elgin Brisebois, Vernon, Ont., writes:—I was troubled a great deal with kidney trouble. I had to get up four or five times every night, my urine contained a thick brick-dust sediment, I had a pain in the small of my back, and could not sleep at night.

I commenced using Doan's Kidney Pills and in a very short time I was all right again. I am very thankful to have found a cure so speedy in its action.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c. per box or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

Canadians How Have Won Places

How many Canadians have "made good" on the stage?

Did you ever go over the list Perhaps you think you can count them on your fingers. Well, you can't.

Few Canucks realize the big place in the theatrical world that the men and women of Canadian birth and breeding are filling at the present time. Canadians have distinguished themselves in all branches of dramatic and musical art all over America, and occasionally also on the other side of the pond.

Just take a glance down the list of the clever people who first saw light in Canada.

Perhaps the man who is looming largest in the theatrical world of America today is Henry Miller, a Canadian. He is heading what is known as the New Theatre movement in New York, and he has ideals. He is a clever, resourceful actor.

With him as co-star goes Miss Margaret Anglin, a member of one of the best-known families in Toronto society. She is one of the half-dozen great American actresses.

James K. Hackett, once a matinee idol, but now playing no more cloak and sword dramas, was born on Wolf island.

Miss Roselie Knott, so well-known here, is a Hamiltonian, and is married to Ernest Shipman, an old Toronto boy, who has developed into a successful theatrical manager.

Miss May Irwin, the great comedienne, and her clever sister, Flo, were born in Whitby.

Miss Marie Dressler, who has just had London's music hall crowds at her feet, is a Canadian girl.

Miss Viola Allen, though not born here, is practically a Torontonian, for Toronto was the home of her family, and she was educated here.

Robert Hilliard, who is drawing a big pay envelope in vaudeville, is a Canuck.

So is Andrew Robson, a popular leading man, who was born in Hamilton.

Reuban Fax, well-remembered as Posty in the "Bonnie Brier Bush," is a brother of our own Jim, and is now with David Warfield.

Catherine Proctor is a Toronto girl who is climbing into the ranks of stardom.

Cuyler Hastings, leading man with Blanche Bates, in the "Girl of the Golden West," was born at Parkhill, and studied law at Osgoode hall.

Edward Johnson, of Guelph, who began as a singer in a church choir is now the celebrated tenor in "A Waltz Dream."

Norman Hackett, here a few months ago with James O'Neill, and who is a finished actor, is a Canadian.

Grant Stewart, with Viola Allen in "Irme Wycherley," claims Canada, too.

There are many others who do not shine quite so brilliantly.

Grand Opera Stars.

Then, take the singers, Francis McLennan, tenor with the Savage Grand Opera company comes from Collingwood. His wife, Florence Easton, who made her debut in grand opera roles here, with the same company, is also Canadian.

Donald Brian, who has made much a hit as Prince Denilo in "The Merry Widow," is a son of Judge Brian of St. John, N.B.

Charles Meakins, who takes the baritone role in the same money-making comedy, is a Hamiltonian.

Albert Parr, who has been singing the title role in "Tom Jones" recently, is an old Torontp boy.

Eugene Cowles, the famous basso with Marie Cahill in "Marrying Mary" this season, is a native of Sherbrooke.

George Primrose, the great minstrel is a Londoner.

John B. Park, with Richard Carle at the Princess a few weeks ago, has already made his mark. He's a Toronto boy.

Arthur Deagon, starring in "The Time, the Place and the Girl," comes from Ayr, Ont. He had several brothers on the boards, too.

Who does not remember Joseph Miron, the big burly buffo bass, who sang "War is a Bountiful Jade" in "The Princess Chic"? He was born in Joliette, Que.

Albert Hart, a Montrealer, succeeded De Wolf Hopper in "Wang."

And so on, ad infinitum. But we can't spare the space.

A COW BARGAIN.

(Bill Nye.)

A Cowley County paper contains this advertisement of a cow for sale: "Some months ago I purchased from my friend, Hon. J. W. Irons, a pedigreed cow, I want to sell her owingto the rheumatism in my left leg, caused by her kicking at a fence post and striking me. When I first purchased her she was very wild, but I have succeeded in taming her sothat I can peep through the corral without her tearing the gate down. To a man who is a good Christian and does not fear death, she would be a valuable cow. But I want to sell her to some one who will treat her right. She is one-fourth southern, two-fourths hyena, and the balance just ordinary cow. She will be sold cheap for cash.—C. M. Scott, two and a half miles east of Arkansas City, Kan."

Mr. Dooley on the Subject of Work.

"Ye haven't struck yet, he?" said Mr. Dooley.

"Not yet," said Mr. Hennessy. "But th' dillygate was up at th' mills today an' we may be called out anny minyit now."

"Will ye go?" asked Mr. Dooley.

"Ye bet I will," said Mr. Hennessy "Ye just bet I will. I stand firm be union principles an' besides it's hot as blazes up there these days. I wudden't mind havin' a few weeks off."

"Ye'll do right to quit," said Mr. Dooley. "I have no sympathy with strikers. I have no sumpathy with thim anny more thin I have with people goin' off to a picnic. A strike is a wurrukin man's vacation. If I had to be wan iv thim horny handed sons iv toil, th' men that have made our country what it is an' creates th' wealth iv th' world an' sees it go off with a stranger—if I had to be wan iv thim pillars iv th' constitution, which thank Gawd I haven't 'tis strikin' I'd be all th' time durin th' heated term. I'd begin strikin' whin th' flowers begin to bloom in th' parks, an' I'd stay on sthrike till 'twas too cold to sit out on th' bleachers. Ye bet I wud.

"I've noticed that nearly all sthrikes occur in the summer time. Sthrikes come in th' summer time an' lockouts in th' winter. In th' summer whin th' soft, ye might almost say melted breezes, blows through shop an' factbry, fannin' th' cheeks iv th' artisan an' settin' fire to his whiskers, whin th' main guy is off at th' seashore bein' pinched f'r exceedin' the speed limit, whin 'tis comfortable to sleep out at nights an' th' Sox have started i a batting sthreak, th' son iv Marthy, as me frind Roodyard Kipling calls him, begins to think of th' rights iv labor. Th' more he looks out iv th' window th' more he thinks about his rights, an' wan warm day he heaves a couplin' pin at th' boss an' saunters away. Sthrikes are a great evil f'r the wurrukin man, but so are picnics an' he acts the same at both. There's th' same not gettin' up till ye want to, th' same meetin' ye'er frinds f'r th' first time in their good clothes an' the same thumpin' strangers over th' head with a brick. Afther awhile th' main guy comes home fr'm th' seaside, raises wages twinty per cent., fires th' boss an' takes in th' walkin' dillygate as a specyal partner.

"But in winter what Hogan calls another flower iv our industhreel system blooms. In th' winter it's warmer in the foundry thin in th' home. There is no hearth as ample in anny man's home as th' hearth th' Steel Comp ny does its cookin by. It is pleasant to see th' artizan aither th' rigors iv a night at home hurryin' to th' mills to toast his numoed limos in th' warm glow iv th' bessemer furnace. About this time the main guy takes a look at the thermometer an' chases th' specyal partner out iv th' office with th' annual report iv th' Civic Featheration. He thin summons his harzy assocyates about him an' says he: 'Boys, I will no longer stand f'r th' tyranny iv th' unions. Conditions has changed since last summer. It's grown mucn colder. I do not care for the money at stake, but there is a great principle involved. I cannot consint to have the business run byoutsiders at a cost of near thirty thousand dollars a year,' says he. An' there's a lockout.

"'Tis a matter iv th' seasons. So if ye strike ye'll not get me sympathy, I resarve that f'r me interryors. I'll keep me sympathy f'r th' poor fellow that has nobody to lure him away fr'm his toil an' that has to sweat through August with no chance iv gettin' a day in th' open on,ess th' millishy are ordhered out an thin whin he goes back to wurruk th' chances are somebody's got his job while th' strikin wurrukin' man returns with his pockets full iv cigars an' is hugged at th' dure be the main guy. If I were a son iv Marthy I'd be a bricklayer. They always sthrike durin' the buildin' season. They time it just right. They never quit wurruk. They thry not to meet it. It is what Hogan calls a pecoolyar fact that bricklayers always time their vacations f'r th' peeryod whin there is wurruk to be done.

"No, sir, don't ask me to weep over th' downthrodden wurrukin' man whin he's out on sthrike. Ye take these here tillygraft op'rators that have laid off wurruk f'r th' summer. Do they look as though they were sufferin'? Ye bet they don't. Th' tired tillgraft op'rator come home last week with a smile on his face. 'I have good news f'r ye, mother,' says he. 'Ye haven't sthruck?' says she, hope strugglin' with fear in her face. 'Ye've guessed,' says he. 'We weren't exactly ordered out. Th' signal f'r a sthrike was to be a series iv sharp whistles fr'm th' walkin' dillygate, but, whin that didn't come an' we were tired iv waitin' th' report iv th' baseball game come over th' wires an' we mistook that f'r a signal. Ye must get the children ready for a day in th' country. We can't tell how soon this tur-rble sthruggle again th' greed iv capital will be declared off an' we must make the most iv it while it lasts,' says he.

"Yes, sir, a sthrike is a turrible thing to thim that stays at wurruk. But it don't afflict th' jolly sthriker. I've niver seen ye in such spirits as whin ye aban oned ye're fruitful labors. Ye had a good time an' f'r th' first time in ye'er life ye were important enough to be talked 'about. If ye heaved a rock at somebody ye had a chanct to see ye'er pitcher in th' pa-apers. I know a tillygraft operator, wan iv thim knights iv th' key that has a nne job in a country depo. All he has to do is to be up in time to flag number eight at six o'clock an' wait till number thirty-two goes through at midnight, an' keep thrains fr'm bumpin' into each other, an' turn switches, an' put up th' simaphore an' clean the lamps an' hand out time tables an' sell tickets. For these dissypations he draws nown all th' way fr'm fifteen to twinty dollars a week. An' he wants to strike. An' th' pa-apers say if he does he'll tie up our impeeryal railroad systems. Think iv that. I niver had much iv an opinyon iv him. All he iver done f'r me was to misspell me name. He's a little thin man that cuddent's lift an eighth iv beer with both hands, but he's that important if he leaps his job we'll have to walk.

"I've often thought I'd like to have th' walkin' dillygate iv th' Liquor Dealers' Binivolint Association come around an' ordher me to lay down me lemon squeezer an' bung starter an' walk out. But nawthin' iv th' kind iver happens an' if it did happen no wan wud care a straw. Th' whole wurruld shudders at th' thought that me frind Ike Simpson may take a day off; but me or Pierpont Morgan might quit f'r a year an' no wan wud care. Supposin' Rockyfeller an Pierpont Morgan and Jim Hill an' Harriman shud form a union—th' Amalgamated Featheration iv Frenzier Financeers—an' shud demand a raise iv a million dollars a year, reduction in wurrukin time from two to one hour ivry week, th' closed shop, two apprentices f'r each bank an' no wan allowed to make money unless he cud show a union card? Whin th' strike comity waited on us we'd hoist our feet on th' kitchen table, light a seegar, polish our bone collar button with the sleeve iv our red flannel shirt and tell thim to to Bannagher. We'd say: "Ye'er demands are unreasonable an' we will not submit. F'r years we have run th' shop almost at a loss. There are plenty iv men to take ye'er places. They may not be as efficint at first but they'll soon larn. Ye'er demands are rayfused an' ye can bang th' dure afther ye.' A fine chanct a millyonaire wud have thryin' to persuade ye be peaceful means fr'm takin' his job. Think iv him on th' dead line thryin' to coax ye not to go in but to stand by him as he would sit on yor if you were in the same position. Th' stock exchange would go out in sympathy. Th' millishy wud be called out an' afther awhile th' financeers wud come back with their hats in their hands an' find their old places took be other men.

"No, sir, a sthrike iv financeers wudden't worry annyman. 'Tis a strange thing whin we come to think iv it that th' less money a man gets f'r his wurruk, th' more nicissary it is to th' wurruld that he shud go on wurrukin'. Ye'er boss can go to Paris on a combination wedding an' divoorce thrip an' no wan bother his head above him. But if ye shud go to Paris—excuse me f'r laughin' mesilf black in th' face—th' industhrees iv the counthry pines away. An' th' higher up a man regards his wurruk, th' less it amounts to. We cud manage to scrape along without electhrical injineers but we'd have a divvle iv a time without scavengers. Ye look down on th' fellow that dhrives th' dump cart, but if it wasn't f'r him ye'd niver be able to pursoo ye'er honorable mechanical profission iv pushin' th' barrow. With Andrehew Carnegie quit, ye wint on worrukin'; if ye quit wurruk, he'll have to come back. P'raps that's th' reason th' wurrukin' man don't get more iv thim little pictures iv a buffalo in his pay envelope iv a Saturday night. If he got more money he wud do less wurruk. He has to be kept in thrainin'.

"Th' way to make a man useful to th' wurruld is to give him a little money an' a lot iv wurruk. An' 'tis th' only way to make him happy, too. I don't mean coarse, mateeryal happiness like private yachts an' autymobills an' rich food an' other corrodin' pleasures. I mean something entirely different. I don't know what I mean but I see in th' pa'apers th' other day that th only road to happiness was hard wurruk. 'Tis a good theery. Some day I'm going to hire a hall an' preach it in Newport. I wudden't mintion it in Ar-rchy Road where wurruk abounds, I don't want to be run in f'r incitin' a riot. This pa'aper says th' farmer niver sthrikes. He hasn't got th' time to. He's too happy. A farmer is continted with his ten acre lot. There's nawthin' to take his mind off his wurruk. He sleeps at night with his nose against th' shingled roof in his litt'e framehouse an' dhreams iv cinch'ugs. While th' stars are still alight he walks in his sleep to wake th' cow that left th' call f'r four o'clock. Thin it's ho! f'r feedin' th' pigs an mendin th' reaper. The sun arises as usual in th' east an' bein' a keen student iv nature, he picks a cabbage leaf to put in his hat. Breakfast follows, a gay meal beginnin' at nine and endin' at nine-three. He sighs a little as he champs his last flapjack an th' thought that he has grown old an' th' hired man has beat him out be almost a minyit elapsed time. Thin it's off f'r th' fields where all day he sets on a bicycle seat an' reaps the Hessian fly, with nawthin' but his own thoughts an' couple iv horses to commune with. An' so he goes an' he's happy th' livelong day if ye don't get in earshot iv him. In winter he is employed keepin' th' cattle fr'm sufferin' his own fate an' writin' testimonials iv despepsia cures. A jolly life. 'Tis strange though I niver heard a farmer whistle except on Sunday.

"No, sir, ye can't tell me that a good deal iv wurruk is good f'r anny man. A little wurruk is not bad, a little wurruk for the stomach's sake an' to make ye sleep sound, a kind iv a night-cap, d'ye mind. But a gr-reat deal iv wurruk, especially in th' summer time, will hurt anny man that indulges in it. So, though I don't sympathize with sthrikers, I congratulate thim. Sthrike, says I, while the iron is hot an' ye'er most needed to pound it into a horseshoe. An' especially wud I advise everybody to sthrike whin the weather is hot."

"D'ye think th' financeers will ever sthrike?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"I don't know," said Mr. Dooley, "but judgin' be what I see in the papers a good many iv them just now are sufferin' fr'm a lockout."

The University of Alberta

We would call attention to the advertisement of the University of Alberta in our advertisement column. The University authorities are anxious to receive applications from intending students at the earliest possible moment so that all arrangements may be made for their accommodation.

Under the regulations made by the Senate, students who have passed Standard VII of the school course, with languages, will be admitted as undergraduates. Students who have not taken languages will be admitted as condition students and preliminary classes will be organized to enable them to make good deficiencies in those subjects. The same applies to the corresponding grades of the schools of the Eastern Provinces.

At the recent meeting of the Senate it was also decided to grant degrees, Ad Eundem Gradum, to all graduates who have registered as members of Convocation. This will be done at the approaching Convocation in October. It was also decided to grant similar degrees to University graduates who had failed to register, provided application was made, with certificates, in time to secure the approval of the Credentials Committee of the Senate before the Convocation. Application should be made to the President of the University before September 15. The application must be accompanied by a fee of $5.00.

The books purchased for the library are being put in and in a few days the University Office will be opened in Strathcona in the building in which the University will hold its classes until the University building proper is opened.

ADVERTISING SUPPLIES

(Bookseller and Stationer.)

The best kind of advertisement for photo supplies, as well as for almost everything else, is newspaper advertising. Consider for a moment the condition under which a newspaper advertisement reaches the man for whom it is intended. The reader of a small town daily or weekly usually reserves the perusal of his paper until such time as he can do so without being interrupted by something else. Most newspaper reading is done in the evenings, after supper, when the cares of daily toil have been for a short space set aside. It is read, as a rule, under the most comfortable circumstance; by the fireside in the winter and on the lawn or verandah in the summer.

Being comfortable and free from interuptions, the reader's mind is also receptive. And for this reason, items of news or advertisements, which would receive but scant courtesy in a hasty perusal, under such circumstances as have been above alluded to, receive a fair amount of attention. The newspaper advertiser therefore reaches the man he is after—the buyer—under the most favorable of conditions. It is even better than a personal interview for this reason. All persons—or pretty nearly all—are prone to argument, and if you apply personally to a man whose mind is neutralupon the subject of your interview, even though he has any amount of loisure at his disposal, he will argue the point and will take a mighty lot of convincing. Particularly is this the case when an attempt is being made to make a sale of an article in which the person canvassed is not interested already. If he is already interested the case assumes a different aspect, and a personal interview, properly conducted, is by no means without its effect.

In the matter of photo supplies, it is comparatively easy to interest those who are amateur photographers in your photo supply department A well worded announcement will, in most cases, do the trick. This much is evident from the fact that the amateur needing the goods only wants to find out where they may be had with the least amount of trouble and expense. But in getting after new devotees to the art of photography, and inculcating in them a desire to make photographs, a deal of thought must be given to advertising. The advertising must be of the kind known as "educative." For that kind of advertising nothing can surpass the newspaper. A man must be receptive if he is to be educated to anything, and the newspaper, in the majority of cases, is read at a time and under circumstances which render the readers peculiarly receptive.

Take a generous amount of space, and carry on a general plan of campaign. If it is possible, illustrate your copy with good cuts. Perhaps some of these may be obtained from the jobbers on loan, at the cost of postage or express. It may be possible to get an article written by some local enthusiast, telling of a holiday trip, the chief feature of which was snap-shooting. If no dealers' names are mentioned, and no allusion is made to the commercial side of the business, it would not be out of the way for the editor of your advertising medium to run this as a piece of legitimate and interesting reading matter. Contemporaneously with such an article, strong persuasive copy should be run in your regular advertising space. The effect of such a combined attack would be very strong indeed.

To make newspaper advertising really effective and well worth the money invested in it, there is nothing like having for a motto. "keep hammering." By this means, and frequent changes of copy, your name can become familiar to every reader, and yet every announcement read with interest. Introduce yourself to the newsreading public as a dealer in photo supplies, and—keep introduced!

An old gentleman walked up to the pretty girl attendant at the counting room of a daily newspaper office a few days ago and said:

"Miss, I would like to get copies of your paper for a week back."

"You had better get a porous plaster," she abstractedly replied. "You get them just across the street."—Exchange.

Springs in Sea Bed.

Bahrein Island, in the Persian Gulf is said to be the hottest place on earth. It is usual there to find the thermometer at 140 degrees Fahrenheit. On the coast of this island, where practically all the people live, there is no fresh water, which is needed above all things in so seething a temperature.

And it is to be had from the bottom of the sea. Here and there scattered over the floor of the harbor of Bahrein are springs well up through the sand to mingle with the salt water of the sea. It would seem a difficult task to find these threads of fresh water amid the ocean's volume but the thirsty islanders are thought to have found them ages ago and to have passed on their location from generation to generation.

A diver equips himself with a water bag made of skins, the mouth of which is closed, and descends to the bottom of the harbor at a point where one of the springs issues. The bag is carefully inverted over the current of fresh water as it flows up from the sand, the mouth is opened, the skin is filled, then the mouth is shut fast and she diver returns to the boat awaiting him on the surface.

One scientist gives it as his belief that at some period in the shadowy past that which is now the harbor's bottom was not touched by the sea. The springs were then on the shore and ready for the islanders' needs. Little by little the sea encroached on the land, but the location of the wonderful springs was not forgotten.—From the Chicago Tribune.

Crow's Nest Coal History

The name Crow's Nest Pass is the name given to the opening in the Canadian Rockies in the East Kootenan district, through which the Canadian Pacific pushed its MacLeod extension in order to get at the riches of Southern British Columbia. The Crow's Nest Sentinel Mountainmarks the opening and it is not more than fifty miles north of the boundary line, and it is on the line between British Columbia and Alberta. Only a few miles south-west of the pass is located the picturesque little city of Fernie, which is in the centre of the famous coal fields and which marks the northern limit of the American railway invasion into this territory.

From this point around which the Mission and Fernie ridges, and the Lizard Range of the Rockies raise their serrated tops from 5,000 to 10,000 feet in the air, is a coal deposit which is almost limitless, which is greater than any other in the world, with the possible exception of that in Alaska about which little is known and which is the most remarkable deposit in many respects ever discovered.

Geographically the Crow's Nest coal area does not exceed 280 square miles, containing 147,200 acres of land. The coal area is a long pointed triangle with its base to the south. Its greatest length is twenty five miles north and south, while its greatest width is thirteen miles. One coal company owns all this area and more, a total of 250,000 acres of coal lands.

Picture what it means to control 250,000 acres of coal lands filled with a deposit of the finest bituminous, semi-anthracite, cooking and black-smithing coals. Think for a moment of a single holding from which can be produced 10,000 tons of coal daily for 10,000 years, a possession which, assuming that not more than one-half of it could be mined, would produce 3,000,000 tons annually for a period of 5,000 years. Think of 250,000 acres of coal lands under numerous square miles of which there is an estimated deposit of more than 49,952,000 tons more than 80 seams of coal containing more than 22,000,000,000 tons. Think of a coal field an area of which has 100 feet of coal containing 153,480 tons of 2,240 pounds each, of 50,000 acres which would yield 7,674,000,000 of similar tons, of 147,000 acres containing 22,595,200,000 long tons of fine merchantable coal!

The history of the development of the Crow's Nest Pass fields dates back to 1887. During that year William Fernie, of Fort Steele, and Lieutenant-Colonel Baker, then a member of the Provincial Legislature decided to prospect some coal measures, of which they had been told by Michael Phillips, an old Hudson Bay Company employe. For eight or nine years Mr. Fernie took men with him every summer into the mountains of the Elk River district and pursued his investigations. In Victoria he succeeded in organizing a syndicate which was called the Jubilee Syndicate. The name was due to the fact that Fernie's discovery of coal deposits on Martin's Creek was made on the anniversary of the Queen's Jubilee. After many quarrels with the Government and with railway interests the Crow's Nest and Kootenan Lake Railway Company, the original organization was reorganized into the British Columbia Southern, in which the Hon. George A. Cox, Robert Jeffrey, C. G. S. Lindsey, K.C., and other prominent Canadians were interested.

This company secured from the Canadian government a grant of several thousand acres of land in return for constructing 450 miles of road into the Crow's Nest Pass country. Finally the syndicate disposed of its franchise to the Canadian Pacific for the construction of the Crow's Nest Railway. The syndicate in transferring its rights to the Canadian Pacific gave that company about 200,000 acres of land. The 250,000 acres which the syndicate retained is the cream of the Crow's Nest Pass deposits. Following this deal came the organization of the Kootenai Coal Company, of which the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company, Limited, was the successor.

The railway was completed in 1898 giving the coal an outlet to the east and north. The great markets, however, lay to the south and west across the American border, and with a view to securing an outlet in those directions. Mr. Lindsey secured a franchise to build the Crow's Nest Northern. The sequel of following events gave rise to the rumor that it was James J. Hill's hand which guided of the Crow's Nest from this period on. The Crow's Nest Southern had not long been organized before it began to be whispered that Mr. Hill was extending his American line of railway northward, and the rumor was confirmed into truth shortly before the completion of the road.

The coal company is capitalized for only $3,500,000, despite the factthat it owns untold buried riches. It nas paid, by common report, fully thirty per cent. dividends upon its stock, none of which is for sale at any price. This showing, it must be remembered, is being made with the company in the infancy of its development.

An idea is gained of the rate of development in the Crow's Nest when it is stated that during 1908, the first year of the company's organization, it produced 8,986 tons of coal and 361 tons of coke. During 1905 the output was about 742,210 tons of coal and about 393,000tons of coke. Over 132,000 tons of the coal found a market in the United States and over 109,000 tons of the coke was consumed in American furnaces.

The coke produced equals and excels in some respects the famous Connellsville coke, and the demand for it by the smelting interests is insistent. The company now has about 1,400 coke ovens, divided about equally between Fernie, Michel and Carbondale. The coke produced is of great strength and is admirably suited to smelting copper and lead ores. A great deal of the Fernie coke is consumed in the smelters of the Anaconda, the Black Eagle and other famous American mines.

The company is taking extraordinary pains to prevent any inferior coal from getting on the market. Periodical analysis is made of the coal taken from all the workings, and careful attention is given to the sorting and cleaning of the coal as it comes from the mine, all of it being passed over screens and picking tables before it is loaded into the cars for shipment.

The development of coal properties in the Crow's Nest has thus far been confined to three places. At Coal Creek six separate mines have been opened and five of them are at present producing coal at an average of 2,000 tons daily, but with a capacity easily double that. At Michel six mines have been opened. At the Carbondale Colliery five mines have been opened.

Moose Jaw, August 4.—A strike of laborers on the line north from Moose Jaw to the Elbow of the Saskatchewan has held up construction work for the past week. The strikers are mainly Galician laborers, who were brought from Winnipeg under contract for $1.50 a day. The men worked laying steel and claimed this was not extra gang work, as they were engaged for. To avoid trouble they were offered $1.75. The Galicians demanded $1.90, but some were willing to work at $1.75, others not. Those not working themselves refused to let the other men brought in go to work, using threats. Supt. Taylor took the Mounted Police out yesterday and the eight leaders were arrested. Brought before a magistrate seven were found guilty of desertion from employment, and one of intimidation. The seven were fined $10 and costs each or 20 days in jail, and the other thirty days in jail. All are going to Regina jail and were brought here in a box car. They are now in the lockup here, and will be taken the remainder of the distance tomorrow. The C.P.R. offered to transport to Moose Jaw all of the gang who did not wish to return to work. About seventy came and the remainder have gone to work. The building of the linenorth is very urgent to get out the crop of the settlers around it.

A commission is enquiring into the cotton workers' strike. Some of the evidence is interesting.

The first witness called was A. Ouilette, president of the Textile Workers of St. Hyacinthe. He deposed that from what he knew of the condition of textile workers, it was not good. The employes were poorly paid; he had been informed that in many cases the workers received very low wages. He was in constant touch with the employes, and he knew that since wages had been reduced, the lot of the employees had not been a happy one.

"Was it a fact," was asked, "that some men were only getting $8.00 a week."

I have been told so, was the reply. He had been informed that many men could not live on what they were getting. It was certain that the condition of the employes might be improved. The reason given for the reduction was that times were bad. According to reports, thestate reduction in pay was warranted. Witness thought that the companies had taken advantage of the employes, because of the approaching elections and other things. The reductions in pay that had been made, were most unreasonable.

Mr. Montgomery, speaking of the court, showed that the sales of cotton in Canada had fallen off enormously during the first four months of the present year. If reductions had been made in pay they were justified.

In further evidence witness said he had been informed that generally trade had been good this year. He was not aware that contractors were paying men twenty-five cents a day less this year than last.

In reply to questions put by Mr. Bumbray, witness said that the condition of the cotton workers was worse now than before the strike. In other words, the strike had not bettered the state of the workers. He had never worked in the cotton mills himself; his knowledge of the condition of the workers came from information he got from employes, and obtained in his capacity of president of a branch of the Textile Workers' Union. Before witness had voted with others for the strike he had seen officials of the cotton mills. The executive of the Textile Workhad decided to uphold the demand of the spinners that they should not submit to a ten per cent. reduction.

In further answers to Mr. Bumbray's questions, witness deposed that at a meeting in May last, a majority, representing the workers, decided not to go on strike; at a latter meeting however, a strike had been ordered. The fact was that a majority of the heads who had ordered the strike were not cotton workers; they had outside interests, and had been elected heads of the organizations formed to protect the employes.

The United Mine Workers Union at Bankhead at a meeting decided to vote one day's pay to the Fernie sufferers. As there are from five to seven hundred in the union earning from $2.25 to $7 a day the total will ma e a generous subscription. The citizens are also subscribing the list being circulated by Sam Laird and W. H. Dunlop.

It is said that the carpenters union at Fernie has demanded a special price since the fire. They have also demanded that every man who works on a building must pay $25 to join a union. Surely this cannot be true!

SORE, ACHING BLISTERED FEET

Farmers, farmers' wives, store girls, clerks, bricklayers, policemen and postmen—all who have to be on their feet all day, and suffer from sore feet, chafing, or blistering will find relief in Zam-Buk.

Mr. Wm. Ashley, 527 Seigneurs St., Montreal, says:—"I suffered cruelly from sore feet, which became raw and blistered. Some days I was hardly able to walk home from work, and others I had to leave off about 3 o'clock. Powders, salves and ointments of all kinds I tried in vain, sometimes actually working with them in my boots. I was advised to try Zam-Buk, and in a few hours it reduced the smarting and soreness. I kept on with it, putting a little on each night. In a few days the soreness was all gone.

The Hound of the Baskervilles

Another Adventure of Sherlock Holmes.

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

Author of "The Green Flag" and "The Great Boer War"

Copyright (1902) by A. Conan Doyle.

...ien lay before him. He might have been the very spirit of that terrible place. It was not the convict. This man was far from the place where the latter had disappeared. Besides, he was a much taller man. With a cry of surprise I pointed him out to the baronet, but in the instant during which I had turned to grasp his arm the man was gone. There was the sharp pinnacle of granite still cutting the lower edge of the moon, but its peak bore no trace of that silent and motionless figure.

I wished to go in that direction and to search the tor, but it was some distance away. The baronet's nerves were still quivering from that cry, which recalled the dark story of his family, and he was not in the mood for fresh adventures. He had not seen this lonely man upon the tor and could not feel the thrill which his strange presence and his commanding attitude had given to me. "A warder, no doubt," said he. "The moor has been thick with them since this fellow escaped." Well, perhaps his explanation may be the right one, but I should like to have some further proof of it. To-day we mean to communicate to the Princetown people where they should look for their missing man, but it is hard lines that we have not actually had the triumph of bringing him back as our own prisoner. Such are the adventures of last night, and you must acknowledge, my dear Holmes, that I have done you very well in the matter of a report. Much of what I tell you is no doubt quite irrelevant, but still I feel that it is best that I should let you have all the facts and leave you to select for yourself those which will be of some service to you in helping you to your conclusions. We are certainly making some progress. So far as the Barrymores go we have found the motive of their actions, and that has cleared up the situation very much. But the moor with its mysteries and its strange inhabitants remains as inscrutable as ever. Perhaps in my next I may be able to throw some light upon this also. Best of all would it be if you could come down to us. In any case you will hear from me again in the course of the next few days.

CHAPTER X.

So far I have been able to quote from the reports which I have forwarded during these early days to Sherlock Holmes. Now, however, I have arrived at a point in my narrative where I am compelled to abandon this method and to trust once more to my recollections, aided by the diary which I kept at the time. A few extracts from the latter will carry me on to those scenes which are indelibly fixed in every detail upon my memory. I proceed, then, from the morning which followed our abortive chase of the convict and our other strange experiences upon the moor.

October 16th.—A dull and foggy day with a drizzle of rain. The house is banked in with rolling clouds, which rise now and then to show the dreary curves of the moor, with thin, silvel veins upon the sides of the hills, and the distant boulders gleaming where the light strikes upon their wet faces. It is melancholy outside and in. The baronet is in a black reaction after the excitements of the night. I am conscious myself of a weight at my heart and a feeling of impending danger—ever present danger, which is the more terrible because I am unable to define it.

And have I not cause for such a feeling? Consider the long sequence of incidents which have all pointed to some sinister influence which is at work around us. There is the death of the last occupant of the Hall fulfilling so exactly the conditions of the family legend, and there are the repeated reports from peasants of the appearance of a strange creature upon the moor. Twice I have with my own ears heards the sound which resembled the distant baying of a hound. It is incredible, impossible, that it should really be outside the ordinary laws of nature. A spectral hound which leaves material footmarks and fills the air with its howling is surely not to be thought of. Stapleton may fall in with such a superstition, and Mortimer also; but if I have one quality upon earth it is common-sense, and nothing will persuade me to believe in such a thing. To do so would be to descend to the level of these poor peasants, who are not content with a mere fiend dog, but must needs describe him with hell-fire shooting from his mouth and eyes. Holmes would not listen to such fancies, and I am his agent. But facts are facts, and I have twice heard this crying upon the moor. Suppose that there were really some huge hound loose upon it; that would go far to explain everything. But where could such a hound lie concealed, where did it get its food, where did it come from, how was it that no one saw it by day? It must be confessed that the natural explanation offers almost as many difficulties as the other. And always, apart from the hound, there is the fact of the human agency in London, the man in the cab, and the letter which warned Sir Henry against the moor. This at least was real, but it might have been the work of a protecting friend as easily as of an enemy. Where is that friend or enemy now? Has he remained in London, or has he followed us down here? Could he—be the stranger whom I saw upon the Tor?

It is true that I have had only the one glance at him, and yet there are some things to which I am ready to swear. He is no one whom I have seen down here, and I have now met all the neighbors. The figure was far taller than that of Stapleton, far thinner than that of Frankland. Barrymore it might possibly have been, but we had left him behind us, and I am certain that he could not have followed us. A stranger then is still dogging us, just as a stranger dogged us in London. We have never shaken him off. If I could lay my hands upon that man, then at last we might find ourselves at the end of all our difficulties. To this one purpose I must now devote all my energies.

My first impulse was to tell Sir Henry all my plans. My second and wisest one is to play my own game and speak as little as possible to anyone. He is silent and distrait. His nerves have been strangely shaken by that sound upon the moor. I will say nothing to add to his anxieties, but I will take my own steps to attain my own end.

We had a small scene this morning after breakfast. Barrymore asked leave to speak with Sir Henry, and they were closeted in his study some little time. Sitting in the billiard-room I more than once heard the sound of voices raised, and I had a pretty good idea what the point was which was under discussion. After a time the baronet opened his door and called for me.

"Barrymore considers that he has a grievance," he said. "He thinks that it was unfair on our part to hunt his brother-in-law down when he, of his own free will, had told us the secret."

The butler was standing very pale but very collected before us.

"I may have spoken too warmly, sir," said he, "and if I have I am sure that I beg your pardon. At the same time, I was very much surprised when I heard you two gentlemen come back this morning and learned that you had been chasing Selden. The poor fellow has enough to fight against without my putting more upon his track."

"If you had told us of your own free will it would have been a different thing," said the baronet, "you only told us, or rather your wife only told us, when it was forced from you and you could not help yourself."

"I didn't think you would have taken advantage of it, Sir Henry—indeed I didn't."

"The man is a public danger. There are lonely houses scattered over the moor, and he is a fellow who would stick at nothing. You only want to get a glimpse of his face to see that. Look at Mr. Stapleton's house, for example, with no one but himself to defend it. There's no safety for anyone until he is under lock and key."

"He'll break into no house, sir. I give you my solemn word upon that. But he will never trouble anyone in this country again. I assure you, Sir Henry, that in a very few days the necessary arrangements will have been made and he will be on his way to South America. For God's sake, sir, I beg of you not to let the police know that he is still on the moor. They have given up the chase there, and he can lie quiet until the ship is ready for him. You can't tell on him without getting my wife and me into trouble. I beg you, sir, to say nothing to the police."

"What do you say, Watson?"

I shrugged my shoulders. "If he were safely out of the country it would relieve the tax-payer of a burden."

"But how about the chance of his holding someone up before he goes?"

"He would not do anything so mad, sir. We have provided him with all that he can want. To commit a crime would be to show where he was hiding."

"That is true," said Sir Henry. "Well, Barrymore——"

"God bless you, sir, and thank you from my heart! It would have killed my poor wife had he been taken again."

"I guess we are aiding and abetting a felony, Watson? But, after what we have heard, I don't feel as if I could give the man up, so there is an end of it. All right, Barrymore, you can go."

With a few broken words of gratitude the man turned, but he hesitated and then came back.

"You've been so kind to us, sir, that I should like to do the best I can for you in return. I know something, Sir Henry, and perhaps I should have said it before, but it was long after the inquest that I found it out. I've never breathed a word about it yet to mortal man. It's about poor Sir Charles's death."

The baronet and I were both upon our feet. "Do you know how he died?"

"No, sir, I don't know that."

"What then?"

"I know why he was at the gate at that hour. It was to meet a woman."

"To meet a woman! He?"

"Yes, sir."

"And the woman's name?"

"I can't give you the name, sir, but I can give you the initials. Her initials were L. L."

"How do you know this, Barrymore?"

"Well, Sir Henry, your uncle had a letter that morning. He had usually a great many letters, for he was a public man and well known for his kind heart, so that everyone who was in trouble was glad to turn to him. But that morning, as it chanced, there was only this one letter, so I took the more notice of it. It was from Coombe Tracey, and it was addressed in a woman's hand."

"Well?"

"Well, sir, I thought no more of the matter, and never would have done had it not been for my wife. Only a few weeks ago she was cleaning out Sir Charles's study—it had never been touched since his death—and she found the ashes of a burned letter in the back of the grate. The greater part of it was charred to pieces, but one little slip, the end of a page, hung together, and the writing could still be read, though it was grey on a black ground. It seemed to us to be a postscript at the end of the letter, and it said: 'Please, please, as you are a gentleman, burn this letter, and be at the gate by ten o'clock.' Beneath it were signed the initials L. L."

"Have you got that slip?"

"No, sir, it crumbled all to bits after we moved it."

"Had Sir Charles received any other letters in the same writing?"

"Well, sir, I took no particular notice of his letters. I should not have noticed this one only it happened to come alone."

"And you have no idea who L. L. is?"

"No, sir. No more than you have. But I expect if we could lay our hands upon that lady we should know more about Sir Charles's death."

"I cannot understand, Barrymore, how you came to conceal this important information."

"Well, sir, it was immediately after that our own trouble came to us. And then again, sir, we were both of us very fond of Sir Charles, as we well might be considering all that he has done for us. To rake this up couldn't help our poor master, and it's well to go carefully when there's a lady in the case. Even the best of us——"

"You thought it might injure his reputation?"

"Well, sir, I thought no good could come of it. But now you have been kind to us, and I feel as if it would be treating you unfairly not to tell you all that I know about the matter."

"Very good, Barrymore; you can go." When the butler had left us Sir Henry turned to me. "Well, Watson, what do you think of this new light?"

"It seems to leave the darkness rather blacker than before."

"So I think. But if we can only trace L. L. it should clear up the whole business. We have gained that much. We know that there is someone who has the facts if we can only find her. What do you think we should do?"

"Let Holmes know all about it at once. It will give him the clue for which he has been seeking. I am much mistaken if it does not bring him down."

I went at once to my room and drew up my report of the morning's conversation for Holmes. It was evident to me that he had been very busy of late, for the notes which I had from Baker Street were few and short, with no comments upon the information which I had supplied, and hardly any reference to my mission. No doubt his blackmailing case is absorbing all his faculties. And yet this new factor must surely arrest his attention and renew his interest. I wish that he were here.

October 17th.—All day to-day the rain poured down, rustling on the ivy and dripping from the eaves. I thought of the convict out upon the bleak, cold, shelterless moor. Poor devil! Whatever his crimes, he has suffered something to atone for them. And then I thought of that other one—the face in the cab, the figure against the moon. Was he also out in that deluge—the unseen watcher, the man of darkness? In the evening I put on my waterproof and I walked far upon the sodden moor, full of dark imaginings, the rain beating upon my face and the wind whistling about my ears. God help those who wander into the great mire now, for even the firm uplands are becoming a morass. I found the black tor upon which I had seen the solitary watcher, and from its craggy summit I looked out myself across the melancholy downs. Rain squalls drifted across their russet face, and the heavy, slate-colored clouds hung low over the landscape, trailing in grey wreaths down the sides of the fantastic hills. In the distant hollow on the left, half hidden by the mist, the two thin towers of Baskerville Hall rose above the trees. They were the only signs of human life which I could see, save only those prehistoric huts which lay thickly upon the slopes of the hills. Nowhere was there any trace of that lonely man whom I had seen on the same spot two night before.

"Well," said I, "has this precious relation of yours departed?"

As I walked back I was overtaken by Dr. Mortimer driving in his dog-cart over a rough moorland track, which led from the outlying farmhouse of Foulmire. He has been very attentive to us, and hardly a day has passed that he has not called at the Hall to see how we were getting on. He insisted upon my climbing into his dog-cart and he gave me a lift homewards. I found him much troubled over the disappearance of his little spaniel. It had wandered on to the moor and had never come back. I gave him such consolation as I might, but I thought of the pony on the Grimpen Mire, and I do not fancy that he will see his little dog again.

"By the way, Mortimer," said I, as we jolted along the rough road, "I suppose there are few people living within driving distance of this whom you do not know?"

"Hardly any, I think."

"Can you, then, tell me the name of any woman whose initials are L. L.?"

He thought for a few minutes.

"No," said he. "There are a few gipsies and laboring folk for whom I can't answer, but among the farmers or gentry there is no one whose

Casey at the Bat.

It looked extremely rocky
For the Mudville nine that day;
The score stood two to four
With but an inning left to play;
So when Cooney died at second,
And Burrows did the same,
A pallor wreathed the features
Of the patrons of the game.

The straggling few got up to go,
Leaving there the rest,
With that hope which springs eternal
Within the human breast,
For they thought, "If only Casey
Could get a hack at that."
They'd put up even money now,
With Casey at the bat.

But Flynn preceded Casey
And likewise so did Blake,
And the former was a puddin,
And the latter was a fake;
So on the stricken multitude
A death-like silence sat,
For there seemed but little chance
Of Casey's getting to the bat.

But Flynn let drive a "single,"
For the wonderment of all?
And the much-despised Blakey
"Tore the cover off the ball."
And when the dust had lifted,
And they saw what had occurred,
There was Blakey safe at second,
And Flynn a-huggin' third.

Then from the gladdened multitude
Went up a joyous yell,
It rumbled in the mountain tops,
It rattled in the dell;
It struck upon the hillside
And rebounded on the flat,
For Casey, mighty Casey,
Was advancing to the bat.

There was ease in Casey's manner
As he stepped into his place,
There was pride in Casey's bearing
And a smile on Casey's face;
And when responding to the cheers,
He lightly doffed his hat,
No stranger in the crowd could doubt
'Twas Casey at the bat.

Ten thousand eyes were on him
As he rubbed his hands with dirt,
Five thousand tongues applauded
When he wiped them on his shirt;
Then when the writhing pitcher,
Ground the ball into his hip
Defiance gleamed in Casey's eye
A sneer curled Casey's lip.

And now the leather-covered sphere
Came hurtling through the air,
And Casey stood a watchin' it
In mighty grandeur there;
Close by the sturdy batsman
The ball, unheeded, sped;
"That ain't me style," said Casey;
"Strike One," the umpire said.

From benches black with people,
There went a muffled roar
Like the beating of the storm waves
On the stern and distant shore;
"Kill him—Now, kill the Umpire,"
Shouted someone on the stand;
And it's likely they's have killed him
Had not Casey raised his hand.

With a smile of Christian charity
Great Casey's visage shone;
He stilled the rising tumult,
He made the game go on;
He signalled to the pitcher,
And once more the spheroid flew,
But Casey still ignored it,
And the Umpire said "Strike two."

"Fraud," cried the maddened thousands,
And the echo answered "Fraud";
But one scornful look from Casey
And the audience was awed;
They saw his face grow stern and cold,
They saw his muscles strain,
And they knew that Casey wouldnjt
Let the ball go by again.

The sneer is gone from Casey's lips
His teeth are clinched in hate;
He pounds with cruel vengeance
His bat upon the plate;
And now the pitcher holds the ball,
Andnow he lets it go,
And now the air is shattered
By the force of Casey's blow.

Oh, somewhere in this favored land,
The sun is shining bright,
The band is playing somewhere,
And somewhere hearts are light;
And somewhere men are laughing
And somewhere children shout,
But there's no joy in Mudville—
Mighty Casey has struck out.

THE MAN WHO FANNED CASEY.

I'm just an ordinary fan and don't count for very much,
But I'm for writing history with a true and honest touch,
It isn't often that I knock—I'll put you next to that—
But I must interpose a word on "Casey at the Bat."

Oh, yes, I'll have to come across, the poem is a beaut—
Been running through my thinker since our team got in the chute
I heard an actor fan recite it thirteen years ago,
He sort of introduced it in the progress of the show.

It made a hit from gallery down to parquette floor,
But now I've got to thinking, and that poem makes me sore.
I'd like to know why any fan should be so off his nut
About the "mighty" Casey, who proved himself a mutt.

The score, we're told was 4 to 2, one inning left to play,
Which proves the Frogtown twirler had things coming all his way,
So in the ninth, with two men gone, he loosened up a bit,
And Flynn snatched out a single, Blake let loose, a two-base hit.

Then up from stand and bleachers there arose a mighty roar;
They wanted just that little hit they knew would tie the score;
And there at bat was Casey, mighty Casey—Mudville's pride,
But was the Frogtown slabster sent balooning, terrified?

How in a pinch with two men down and Casey at the bat,
Most pitchers would have let him walk—we are all sure of that.
But Hagan was a hero; he was made of sterner stuff;
It's his kind gets the medals and the long newspaper puff.

He knew the time had come when he must play the leading role;
He heard the fans a-yelling, but 'twas music to his soul;
He saw the gleam of confidence in ... mighty Casey's eye;
And then resolved, "I'll strike him out—I'll do it or I'll die."

He stood alone and friendless in that wild and frenzied throng;
There wasn't even one kind word to boost his game along.
But back in Frogtown where they got the plays by special wire,
The fans were ready, if he won, to set the town on fire.

How Hagan twirls his body on the truest corkscrew plan,
And hurls a swift inshoot that cuts the corner of the pan.
But Casey thought the first one pitched would surely be a ball.
So didn't try to hit it to the great disgust of all.

Again the Frogtown wizard figured dope on Mudville's pride—
He thinks the next will be an out, and that it's going wide.
He just shot through a straight one to the centre of the plate,
And Casey waited for a curve until it was too late.

And now the mighty slugger was a-hanging on a string,
If another good one came across 'twas up to him to swing,
And Hagan saw the jaunty smile was fading from his face
And a look of straining agony was there to take its place.

A moment Hagan pauses, hides the ball behind his glove,
And then he drives it from him with a sweeping, full-armed shove.
And now, the air is rent in twain before the slugger's slit—
For Casey, mighty Casey, hadn't figured on the spit.

That night the bands were playing back in Frogtown-on-the-creek,
And frenzied fans were shouting "Micky Hagan turned the trick."
So why lament for Casey just because he couldn't clout?
Let's say, "Hurrah for Hagan, he who fanned the slugger out."

"SPARKUS."

SHE HAD HIM BEATEN.

He was engaging a new stenographer, and he bit off his words and hurled them at her in a way to frighten an ordinary girl out o her wits.

"Chew gum?" he asked.

"No, sir."

"Talk slang?"

"No, sir."

"Make goo-goo eyes at the fellows.

"No, sir."

"Know how to spell 'cat' and 'dog' correctly."

"Yes, sir."

"Chin through the tel...n h a dozen times a day?"

"No, sir."

"Usually tell the office force how much the firm owes and all the rest of the private business you learn?"

"No, sir."

He was thinking on something to ask her when she took a hand in the matter, and put a few queries.

"Smoke cheap cigars when you're dictating?" she asked.

"Why—er—no," he gasped, in astonishment.

"Take it out of the stenographer's hide when you've had a scrap at home and get the worst of it?"

"Cer—tainly not!"

"Slam things around and swear when business is bad?"

"N—never."

"Lay for your employees with a club when they get caught in a block some morning?"

"No, indeed."

"Think you know enough about grammar and punctuation to appreciate a good stenographer when you get one?"

"I—I think so."

"Want me to go to work, or is your time worth so little that—"

"You bet!" he broke in enthusiastically. "Kindly hang up your things and let's get at these letters."—New York Sun.

And the Country Suffers

At the time of writing the strike of the machinists, boilermakers, repairers and carmen is on. At any moment it may be ended, but already the country has lost four days of time that can never be won back.

The loss to the men has been about $25,000 a day in wages; the C.P.R.'s loss cannot be worked out in definite figures. But worst of all is the loss to the country—Our Canada, the country of C.P.R. and men alike.

The loss to the men and railway is a bagatelle compared to Canada's loss. After almost a year's business depression Canada has just begun to get back into her stride. Traffic on the railways was already at a point where every man was employed after short time for months. Ahead of us stands the necessarily speedy handling of our banner crop—a crop which was bound to lift us to the top of the wave of prosperity. Every thing was rosy for our old good times—good times for the men as well as for the C.P.R.

And now by the wilful act of someone, whether men or railway, an insuperable obstacle is being placed in our path to prosperity. It is a time where sentiment should not count. Someone must yield sooner or later. If sooner, then the country is saved. If the fight is prolonged it assuredly means that the country, that all of us, will suffer. What the C.P.R. or the men will gain by winning the fight will never compensate for the country's loss through enforced idleness in the hour of our necessity.

Who is right can be settled at leisure in some way, surely. Both contestants state that they are fighting for a principle. What about the principle of patriotism? of thinking of one's country instead of only of oneself?

Whoever yields, let them yield soon or they become violently abusiveand vehemently shriek that black is white and there is no grafting and no rake-off—that the public treasury is not being robbed.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Lethbridge has declares a tax rate of 15 mills—one mill less than our rate. When it is considered that our estimates allow us a revenue of $31,360, most of which is clear profit, a revenue Lethbridge is without, one wonders how they can figure on a lower rate than ours. Were we in the position of Lethbridge (without gas) our rate would have to be 24 mills. Might not it be well to find out where the difference lies.

The Lethbridge Herald in a front pager headed "MR. IVES' CHARGE EXPLODED" publishes a telegram from The Globe which asserts that the treasurer of Morang's says, the school books are all printed in a union shap in New York.

All this may be true enough; but the beautiful simplicity of the Herald in asking The Globe to ask the treasurer of Morang's is like a horse trader proving the virtues of ahorse by asking the owner.

(Winnipeg Tribune, Ind.)

The Liberal press of Canada is subsidized by the Government to the extent of nearly one million dollars a year.

For one million dollars a year the Liberal papers freely consent to become deaf, dumb and blind to the grafting, rake-off, robbery, thieving and rascality of which the people of Canada are the unfortunate victims,

Mr. Magrath is up against a bad proposition in Lethbridge in the form of an organizer of the American Federation of Labor who is nothing but a Liberal machine man. This man edits the "Labor World" in the Lethbridge Liberal paper, and on every occasion raps the Conservative and praises the Liberals.

This man, Thos. S. Harold, was promptly sat upon at Magrath's meeting in Lethbridge last week by his own fellow union man. According to his usual style he butted in every time Magrath ended a sentence At last the chairman of the meeting, the president of the Trades and Labor Council, ordered him to keep still. This did not produce the desired effect and Harold started the sentence, "I say you're a ——" when the union men hissed him down. Later the interruptions started again, when the chairman cut him short. If you say another word I'll have you put outside," he threw at Harold and that quieted the interrupter for the rest of the evening.

This same Liberal worker took advantage of every occasion to criticise Magrath for allowing a Conservative to appear on the platform withhim. And yet he himself was a prominent platform shouter at Simmons' meeting.

There are some funny things in the Saskatchewan elections. The map showing the new railways to which the Scott Government has pledged itself if elected would make any railroad man laugh. It show's a lot of short dashes of railroad splashed all over the country, running from nowhere to another place of the same name purposeless railways which would bankrupt any Government in five years. The Scott people know very well they can never build them.

Another laughable thing is that the same Liberal workers who deprecate most earnestly any attempt to bring the private life of Dominion cabinet ministers into the limelight, have founded their fight against Laird in Regina upon a "commission" he is alleged to have offered in a business deal. No personal exposures of the men who rule all Canada can be endured, but any old falsehood is permissable when a Conservative candidate is in view.

Gradually the dire effects of the water muddle are coming to light. The Times has already exposed some of them with its exposure of the incompetence of the water commissioners. In one hour last week, two men entered The Times office telling results of the lack of water on the hill. One man had lost the rent for two houses, (forty dollars a month) by the people moving where they could get water. The second man said: "I'm going to get out of this —hole as quickly as I can. I'm not going to have my wife breaking her back carrying water. Medicine Hat is the best place to live in for other conveniences, but the lack of water is the worst of all, and any Council that will allow eleven weeks of no-water isn't going to have me under its control any longer.

Medicine Hat saw no setback in building on account of hard times (this does not include building on the hill). At the present time the large edifices under construction are the Post Office, the Armories, the High School, two new brick business blocks where shacks were formerly, two extensive additions to hotels, and scores of new residences. We doubt if another city in the West of anything like our population can show such progress in building. Two hundred thousand dollars worth of building without including residences going on at the same time is something of which to be proud.

All The Times has to say in answer to The News editorial on the water situation is that it is delighted that the latter paper has at last realized that it is possible to answer this paper without making the reply a personal attack on the editor of The Times.

Congratulations News! We are delighted that you have discovered that to hand your editorial columes over to a reporter for personal diatribes is rather infra dig.

With this feeling of fellowship for a paper run by an editor we would quietly explain one point only. The News interpretation of The Times assertion that the water commissioners alone are to blame for the delay in starting the new pumps, was wrong. The Times said they were to blame for the lack of water, not for the delay in the new pumps.

Get the habit of reading the advertisements in The Times. You'll make money by it.

The work of the C.P.R. in leaving their cars to destruction and giving over their trains to the fugitives in the Pass fire is worthy of mention.

The response to the telegrams for help from the Mayor of Fernie, has been immediate all over Canada. The money contributions will amount to $75,000 or $100,000 before the lists are closed. Scores of cars of provisions were on the spot within two or three days after the fire. Several dray loads of clothing have gone from this city, the Mayor, the Methodist and Presbyterian churches being collecting agencies.

Duncan Marshall, the political carpet-bagger is in Saskatchewan trying to help Scott out of a hole. In Alberta we know about what that means as to the style of campaign, and the fear of the Liberals. "Thin Red-Line" Leach and Immigration Officer Speers are two more of the Liberal workers.

The latest elevation view of the Lemieux Act is a death blow to it. It has taken a lot of bolstering to keep the act out of the comic journal lists, and now when it comes to the only point which was supposed to show its excellence it falls down Lemieux seems to be a fine portrait for that Gallery of Notables — the Dominion Cabinet.

Quebec hotels raised their prices to anything as high as twenty-five dollars a day during the Tercentenary. The graft game is becoming too popular in Canada.

The silly circus-talk of the Albertan in its treatment of the Ames meetings is commented upon by the Edmonton News (Ind.-Lib.) as follows: "Criticism of this character is certain to help Messrs. Ames and McCarthy more in their campaign than columns of laudatory editorial matter in Conservative newspapers." As an example of editorial foolishness the Albertan has taken the medal in its comments of the coming of Ames. It has even dropped lower than its former level of editorial work—and that's going some.

A Store's advertisements tell the people what is "doing" at that store—what is new, what is inviting why today is a good time to visit the store. People look for the ads. to tell them these things just as naturally as they would look at a clock to tell the time.

Sometimes a clock does not run—sometimes a store's ad. does not. A "run-down" clock or ad. are about equally unsatisfactory, unserviceable, misleading.

Curious thing about it is that a merchant who would think it absurd to have a "run-down" or out-of-repair clock will, sometimes, deliberately let his ad. stop running. It's not wise, nor "good business," nor defensible on any known grounds —but, it's sometimes done.

It must be a lonesome feeling the Calgary Albertan has. Here are many of the papers in the Province rebuking it for its silly twaddle about Ames' coming meetings. It is the only paper out here that is lowering itself to that level. And naturally it feels pretty sore when The Times called it Journalistic Sediment. With that wonderful originality for which it is noted it suggests that the editor of The Times apply for a job in Ames' "peep-show circus brigade" (a beautiful literary effort that). Unfortunately we can claim the original rights to the suggestion that The Albertan apply for the position of "clown."

And the Albertan should be thankful to us for suggesting a job where its application would have such a "dead, cinch." Those editorials it has published are sufficient qualifications.

Anything flying Medicine Hat colors is meat for the Albertan. Both The News and The Times have come under its Billingsgate in the last few days. Guess we'll pull through No wonder the Liberals of Calgary are ashamed of their organ.

Read The Times special Birthday offer on the front page. There's money in it for you.

Don't forget Ames' timber steal exposure on Friday night, August 14th at 8 p.m., in the Opera House.

It is scarcely likely that the anti-spitting by-law proposed by the Board of Health will meet with any opposition in the Council. None can have any objection to it, and it is necessary both for cleanliness and health.

Was A Total Wreck From Heart Failure

In such cases the action of

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

in quieting the heart, restoring its normal beat and imparting tone to the nerve centres, is beyond all question, marvellous.

Mr. Darius Carr, Geary, N.B., writes: "It is with the greatest of pleasure I write you a few lines to let you know the great blessing your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been to me. I was a total wreck from heart failure and my wife advised me to take your pills. After using two boxes I was restored to perfect health. I am now 62 years old and feel almost as well as I did at 20."

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

(From our own correspondents.)

Josephsburg

Sunny Southern Alberta is sure keeping up her reputation in our district at least. So much so that unless the enquirer can break for home like a coyote or is speaking on the 'phone, it is really unsafe to indulge in that absurd and old-fashioned query: "Crops looking good?" The present ought to be an excelleot time for our scientific neighbor at Medicine Lodge to come forward and introduce his great irrigation scheme?

How can we keep ourselves cool this weather? Hush! We believe that the man on the sorrel, whose smile can be heard (on a quiet evening) at least three sections away, has the secret.

It is whispered with glee in Prohibition circles that large quantities of lime-juice are being shipped to the R.N.W.M.P. in our district. We await with apprehension the tidings of a slump in brewery stock.

It is rumored that the stork has just visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Heather (it's a bouncing boy). Congratulations Fred Many happy returns!

Surprise-party enthusiasts received a chilling reverse a few weeks ago. The proposed victim positively refusing to be surprised. In fact we understand that it was intimated that if the project was carried into effect, armed resistance might possibly result.

Names are suppressed by the censor.

Here's a chance for our police at last!

"The Assyrians came down like a wolf on the fold" of Mr. and Mrs. James Crawford on the 29th ult. But with the exception of our Corporal of police (who having breathed rather more heavily than usual upon his beautiful buttons, appeared in all the glory of full uniform and in all the glory of full uniform and his usual beaming countenance) there was not a whole lot of gleaming scarlet and gold among the cohorts of the invaders.

Among others who graced the occasion, we noticed Miss Calkin, Miss Heather, Miss Heffenar, Miss Frankie Crawford; Messrs. Ashe, Pollock Brothers and Weiss. In fact nearly the whole of the elite of Irvine and the adjacent neighborhood were present, fully intending to have a great time, which they certainly did.

Miss Calkin evidently was there with the intention of throwing as much spirit as possible into the enjoyment of the evening. Needless to say she was entirely successful, being in no small measure, assisted by the gallant Corporal who "called" the Quadrilles in his usual efficient manner; to have the privilege of hearing him, reminds one of nothing so much as the warbling of a drill sergeant in Gilbert and Sullivan opera.

Mr. Crawford was in great shape as violinist during the dancing, and subsequently we enjoyed an excellent supper, "on the house."

Mrs. Crawford earned the thanks and praise of us all for the kind and clever manner in which she performed the arduous duties of a surprise-party hostess. The fun waxed fast and furious until the "wee sma' hours," when we returned to our respective homes, tired, but happy.

Even the "Children of God" in Spring Coulee have their little family worries.

The Venerable House of Gill, which is already divided against itself in matters Spiritual, is now in tumult and tribulation over sundry matters, chiefly calves and fences.

Christian Gill's youthful cattlewere wandering aimlessly around apparently looking for trouble, and spying Michael Gill's luxuriant crops rushed the fence with bellows of delight, and were just having a perfect peach of a time, when the infurriated owner of the crops appeared, and with many "Himmels" and "Donnerwetters" and other soulful ejaculations chased them off. His mother who happened to be watching the entertainment, right there considered it about time to butt in, she therefore rebuked her son, as mother's will, and Michael, wanting somewhat in filial affection and respect, talked back vaguely and insinuatingly of bonfires and dark-nocturnal deeds. (For Michael differs in religious opinions from his parents and their somewhat startling doctrine.)

This "back chat" was so grievously taken to heart by his parents, that Michael subsequently appeared before Mr. James Robinson, J.P., charged with using insulting language. Nearly the whole of the Gill tribe were summoned for evidence on both sides, and some very lively and instructive lessons in colloquial German were the result. With the valuable assistance of Corporal Barschel who came to the rescue as interpreter, the somewhat perplexed Justice of the Peace, was at length able to gather sufficient information as to what was being said, to dismiss the case, and charge up the costs, amounting to $5.00 to the prosecution.

Up to the time of going to Press, we have not heard if the old gentleman in Dakota has written to his desciples expressing his views in the matter, but we are inclined to think that Gill senior is horribly vexed, to say the least, at the Magistrate's decision, which will probably provide an excellent text for future bursts of oratory at "Saturday meetings."

The police continue to scour the country with great zeal; why won't some obliging horse-thief do the handsome thing now, and be careless for once. Constable Harris is dashing around as usual with one eye on the landscape, the other on his horse. He is very fond of dogs. Const. Coleridge still disappears at intervals on long mysterious trips, and returns looking, we understand, hot and thirsty. He also is collecting dog feed. Corporal Barschel's movements are more difficult to keep track of. He is pretty cute is the Corporal, and we poor crooks are kept in a constant stat? of perspiration wondering what he is up to. He does not support a dog, but we hear he is passionately fond of hearing them bark at night, which is the next best thing of course.

Irvine people are still making flying trips to our locality. Why this popularity? We have no swimming baths, nor have we a brewery, yet. Of course we poor farmers are delighted to receive all visitors from the gay village, but until the hotel is built, we shall sometimes be kept busy discovering places to put them all. It has been decided at a recent meeting, to nail a list of charges for meals, beds, lamp oil, etc., behind the doors of our kitchens, which visitors will kindly inspect upon entering.

More trouble! The well known Peter Hauck seems to be doing his best to keep himself before the police and the public. Not that we do not appreciate the economic principle of the idea, but at the same time one cannot help thinking that it does not redound to the credit of our settlement, that an "old timer" like Peter, gives such constant trouble as to make it necessary to charge him for the fourth time with violent and disorderly behaviour.

Last Wednesday Peter Hauck appeared before Mr. James Robinson, J.P., to answer to a charge of common assault, preferred against him by Mrs. Kallenberger. Corporal Barschel appeared for the Crown. The Prosecutor (who bore marks of Hauck's violence upon her arm) and her husband proved the assault. The police proved three previous convictions against the defendant, the last two, viz.: Common assault, and using insulting language, having been made only a few weeks ago.

The J. P. after giving Hauck a severe lecture on his behavious, and warning him that he was liable to two months' imprisonment, inflicted the maximum fine of twenty dollars with the costs of the proceedings, viz.: Thirteen dollars and fifty cents This makes a total amount of a little more than sixty-five dollars that Peter has had to dig up within the last month or so.

We are sorry to hear that Mr. Charlie Jackson is leaving us very shortly. After about twelve months seeking health in Alberta, he is now compelled to return to the "Fleto" So long Charlie! Good luck! Remember us to the girls.

There was, we understand, a novel display of broncho-busting given on Thursday night, before a chosen and select few (fortunate enough to be qualified to witness the unique performance), when a well known and justly celebrated Police Corporal "rode the goat," at the local court of the C.O.F. The animal was guaranteed to be the fiercest and most untamable outlaw that ever roamed the desert plains of Josephsburg and Irvine. It is not disclosed as to what was the result. The strictist secrecy was, as usual in these matters, maintained. There is no doubt but that it was a sight for gods and men; we, personally, would have given the value of half our crop for the year (which by the way wouldn't be an enormous stake) to have been present.

On Thursday a prairie fire was started on Mr. Martin, J.P.'s land and before it could be got under control had burnt up nearly two hundred acres of excellent hay of three or four years growth upon the farms of Mr. Martin and W. F. Roth of Josephsburg. The fire was noticed at about two p.m., and a large number of people of theneighborhood were turned out by the police to fight it, and after a great deal of trouble it was finally extinguished, but not until an enormous amount of damage had been done.

Seven Persons

(Too late for last week.)

Messrs. Foster, Davis, McHugh and Kraft went to Medicine Hat Monday returning Tuesday.

Carlson's gang are here working on the track, they expect to put in a month here.

Misses Pearl and Jean Miller have returned from Pelican ranch and report a lovely time while there.

Mr. and Mrs. Butzon of Whitta were Seven Persons callers Saturday.

Mr. Chris. Anderson was in town this week and subscribed for The Times while there.

How nice it would be if the rest of the Bachelors would follow Mr. Butler's example—We would soon have a thriving town at this place.

Mrs. Brown, Miss Flanagan and Master Rex Brown were in town on Monday and Inspector Brown was a caller on Friday.

People here are complaining of their wells going dry. We are all hoping for rain.

Messrs. Reed, Butler, Strand, Hollick and Brand went to The Hat today.

Little Miss Shields of The Hat is a guest at the Meyer home during her holidays.

After a two weeks vacation and honeymoon, our operator resumed his work today.

Mr. J. H. Butler has secured the position of C.P.R. operator at Brooks, Alta.

Haying is over and harvesting commenced in this vicinity.

Mr. Clem Ullery, who went to the Hat to undergo an operation for appendicitis, is getting along nicely.

Seven Persons had a full fledged strike last week, when the extra gang laid up for higher wages, but after one days rest, they resumed work, their request being granted.

H. H. Foster, J. W. Brown and George Murray were Hat visitors this week.

Miss Ada Miller returned from the Hat Saturday evening.

We are sorry to hear that J. R. Huntley's little girl has to return to the Hat for another operation.

The whole neighborhood is in sympathy with Mrs. Dan Boucher over her sad and sudden bereavement, which occurred Friday evening. We are all sorry to lose Dan as he was called, he was one of our best and most respected citizens. He leaves a wife, two brothers-in-law and other relatives to mourn his loss.

Bowell.

Several homesteaders in this vicinity have left with their teams for Gleichen, to work on the irrigation ditch.

Quite a large prairie fire was raging west of Bowell on Wednesday night, but with prompt assistance it was soon extinguished, with very little damage.

Mr. Mansfield of Medicine Hat has been visiting his brother in Bowell.

Mrs. Woolven gave a musical to quite a number of her friends on Wednesday evening.

Haying seems to be abstracting the general attention in the meantime.

E. Woolven has returned for a two weeks vacation.

We are sorry to see Mr. Foss looking a little the worse after his tussel with the fire.

We are all looking forward to an auction again, whom we expect in a few days.

Miss K. Lemon of Medicine Hat, is spending her vacation with Mrs. A. Lemon of Bowell.

G. Simpson and family were visitors of Bowell last Tuesday.

CORRESPONDENCE

(The editor is not responsible for the opinions of correspondents; nor does he always agree with them.)

To the Editor of The Times.

Editor of The Times,

I see that citizens are kicking at the price of meat, and well they may.

The prices in Winnipeg and Calary average about 2½ cents to 3 cents less than they do here, and no doubt of much better quality as competition is much keener. The raw material for Winnipeg comes largely from this section of country, as witness the trainloads passing through here and also through Dunmore. The best of the stock being shipped out of the country we are left to feed on the culls and that at exhorbitant prices.

The old cows that we feed upon would not bring 2½ cents in Winnipeg or they would be shipped. Deducting freight charges and shrinkage we will place them at 2 cents a pound here. What does this mean but 4 cent beef to the butcher? Still we are charged 8 cents for boiling beef, 12½ cents for round steak and 15 cents for sirloin. Winnipeg prices are, boiling meat 5c, round steak 10 cents or 3 pounds for 25 cents, sirloin 12½ cents, or 2½ cents to 3 cents a pound less than we are paying here.

Surely there is some relief from these outrageous prices. There must be a remedy and that soon. We have been held up long enough.

CITIZEN.

Mounted Police Notes

As a sequel to a little social evening held across the river on Thursday last, Jasper Demerais (whose name will be familiar to readers of the Mounted Police notes) and some of his friends got into trouble, and yesterday had to foot the bill for the expensive luxury of a "scrap" with which they wound up the evening's programme.

Before Inspector Parker yesterday Jasper was charged with being drunk whilst an interdicted person. He was convicted and fined $5.00 and costs.

Clement Wells, who was responsible for supplying the fire-water, was fined $50 and costs.

Edward Cunningham was also charged with supplying liquor to Demerais, but this charge was dismissed. Cunningham was fined $2 and costs for drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

On Sunday morning it was reported to the police that a man was lurking up in the scrub, by Seven Persons Creek. Constable Mollison effected his arrest in the afternoon, and the prisoner appearing before Inspector Parker yesterday was given one month for vagrancy.

N. Allen, who was arrested across the river, drunk, was fined $1.00 and costs.

Laird, the Provincial Rights candidate for Regina has issued a writ against Premier Scott and the Regina Leader for $25,000. Criminal action is also to be taken.

Lord Roberts Physicians have ordered him to return home and not to risk a Western trip.

While the first half of the party were being conducted home in the rigs, the rest took shelter under one of the large dugouts for which this part of the valley is famous. The drive home was full of incident and water, and it is rumored that the brave youths who travelled home on shank's pony came out better than the rest in the contest with the elements....One of the results of this contest is said to be a new design in ladies' blouses, in variegated colors, and a sudden reversion to the merry widow hat.

In reference to the water situation the Mayor said that last night, though there was 26½ feet of water in the tank, water was not obtainable on the hill. This morning the level was lower, the water was available. Ald. Baker stated that so long as the water for the hill was taken so far below the standpipe, the supply would be unsatisfactory.

Speaking of the situation as regards special police, the Mayor said a complaint had been made that the city's policing was neglected, on account of one man being engaged in watching C.P.R. premises. Ald. Spencer stated that the police committee had met yesterday afternoon and decided to let matters stand for the present.

Ald. Baker contended that if the city police were to be employed on special work in connection with the strike it should be to watch the Company who were breaking the law by bringing in strike breakers from across the line. The C.P.R. had brought down a number of special constables since last night. They were getting new men into the shops, and the professional strike-breakers from Santa Fe were now working in the roundhouse as mechanics.

Some discussion followed on the problem of the hill-climbers and the water, in the course of which Ald. Baker stated that at a certain house on the hill which had had no supply for three months a small stream was now obtainable, this with 55 feet of water in the tank. There was something radically wrong.

The Mail and Empire in an editorial note makes some very laudatory remarks about the late John Ferguson, formerly M.P. for South Renfrew. Mr. Ferguson was the father of Mrs. J. R. Allan.

"One of the builders of Canada whose loss the country mourns is Mr. John Ferguson, formerly M.P. for South Renfrew. This public man, who was suddenly called away while visiting one of his lumber camps in New Ontario, sat for the constituency in which he lived, and represented it with distinction, from 1887 to 1900. He was a forceful member of the House, and was a friend of Sir John Macdonald and of Sir John Thompson. After his 13 years of service in parliament, Mr. Ferguson applied himself exclusively to his business, that of lumbering in which he was highly successful, and it was while directing the affairs of one of his camps that the summons came. As a business man, not less than a public man, Mr. Ferguson was one of the makers of this country, and he passes away honored by his fellow-citizens andmourned by those close to him."

Cypress Hills Forest Reservation

Mr. R. H. Campbell, Dominion Superintendent of Forestry and Irrigation, and Mr. A. Knechtel, inspector of Dominion Forest Reserves, spent last Wednesday and Thursday in the Cypress Hills Forest reserve. Mr. Knechtel was in Medicine Hat on Friday and for the space of half an hour talked interestingly with The Times representative on forestry matters.

Mr. Campbell and himself, he said, were much interested to find among the hills so good a growth of pine and spruce. This material, if properly protected from fire, will certainly grow into very valuable timber. Mr. Knechtel proposes to put a fireguard entirely around the reserve an undertaking which, as the country around the reserve is open, can be done very cheaply. He believes it will be possible to bring every part of the reserve under forest cover by planting seeds of the evergreen species now growing there. Next fall many bushels of pine and spruce combs will be collected from the trees the seeds will be extracted fromthese and next spring will be sown in places where there is now no timber.

The better the hills can be covered with trees, the better will be the protection of the streams that have their origin there; since the forest floor, with its moss and accumulation of leaves and twigs, acts as a sponge and holds back the water allowing it to drain off gradually into the streams. Moreover the snow in the woods melts in the spring of the year more slowly than in the open fold, and the roots of trees penetrating deep into the soil form channels which conduct into the earth the water that later flows in cool springs from the hillsides.

The forest should be managed in such a way that it will constantly improve. Of course, settlers must have timber, but this timber should be taken from parts of the forest where its removal will be a benefit rather than a detriment to the forest.

Interested in The Gas

Last week a visitor to the city, was Mr. Appleyard of Port Colborne. That town of 1,500, situated on Lake Erie in Ontario, is run by natural gas as is Medicine Hat, bdt the supply comes from private wells. The rate was formerly 20 cents a thousand but has recently been raised to 25 cents. The same firm supplies gas to Humberstone and Welland, and pipes it to Buffalo through two 8-inch pipes.

In Western Ontario the gas supply is in pockets in a certain strata, and if this is missed there is no gas. Our gas is purer and stronger in heat, and has none of the unaccountable fluctation in pressure which is felt there. Some days, Mr. Appleyard states, the well will register 75 pounds pressure and a couple of hours afterwards will show scarcely any pressure, but will be flowing full through the pipes.

REVELATION OF GRAFT

Undeniable Evidences of Dishonesty in Land Grants

Mr. Ames Speaks and Proves Statements

Mr. Ames, the man who has made himself famous through his exposures in the House of land grafts has left Medicine Hat and behind him rests the conviction among Liberals as well as Conservatives that the cases of dishonest tendering treated by him are undisputable. When a man quietly makes a statement and shows the documents that prove it, the doubter merely brands himself as unintelligent. It is scarcely probable that a single doubter can be found in the crowd that attended the lecture. So hard did it hit home to those Liberals who refuse to be convinced, that a number of them quietly tip-toed out when the proofs were thrown on the screen.

The views were very distinct and were thrown on in such a manner as to make no interruption of the speaker.

Unfortunately Mr. Ames was forced to catch No. 97 and had to cut his address down to little more than an hour. However, in the limited time at his disposal he accomplished his purpose—that of convincing his hearers that the Opposition had proofs for their allegations of graft, and that their refusal to grant supplies during the sitting of the House was demanded by the conditions.

Mr. Ames wasted no time on lengthy introductions but jumped into the practical part of his address at the start. The timber lands occupied all his time, the first reference being to the Cedar Lake and Moose Lake limits, showing how unjust was the method adopted in the advertising for tenders. The nearest point of the Cedar Lake limit is 100 miles from a railway and yet only 30 days in the winter time were allowed to cover the limits around the lake and get the tender back to Ottawa an impossibility in winter time. The Moose Lake limit was further away. For this the notorious Fraser, who had asked that the limits be put up for tender, bid $1,000, thinking he had it all his own way. However another tender came in later in the morning and then just before the close of the time Fraser put in a second tender less than $600 beyond the other tender, and signed it by the name of a man who swore he knew nothing of it.

The Imperial Pulp Company, one of Burrows' schemes, secured limits in a couple of instances by adding a second check to their tender. The first check invariably just exceeded the highest preceding tender, and the second check was just large enough to exceed any higher tender than would have beaten out their first tender. Several cases of this were mentioned, and copies of the tenders were thrown on the screen, showing that while there is an authorized form of tender which repeats the price of tender, the Pulp Co. merely said "enclosed find tender," and the checks were there to give the price. In this way the tender form did not have to be changed when it was found necessary to add a new check to secure the limit.

Burrow's success as a bidder was dwelt upon, as well as hisconnection with all the companies or names that were successful in bidding. The price paid for these limits was compared with the price they brought to Burrows and his agents.

In one case of lands offered north of Prince Albert, a huge tract of 7020 square miles of selection area was put up, without giving time for anyone to get even to the nearest corner of the area and back in time to tender. The Mayor and Board of Trade of Prince Albert objection formally but no attention was paid to their protests and some friends of Burrows got the tract 500 square miles at $12 a square mile or 2 cents an acre, although the Indian department secured $800 a square mile for a piece of timber limit immediately adjoining. The speaker was unable to deal with agricultural and grazing lands on account of lack of time.

Mr. Ames is a moderate and quiet speaker with none of the "stumper" about him. He talks as a man with a mission, one who knows he carries conviction and needs no oratorical flights or Marshallite yarns to influence his hearers or to switch them from a close analysis.

A full report of the speech he has prepared for his Western trip will be found on other pages of thisissue.

The returns of the Saskatchewan election were announced by Nelson Spencer at the end of Mr. Ames' address, but were incomplete and unsatisfactory all night.

T. Crothers, K.C. St. Thomas Ont., followed Mr. Ames. This is Mr. Crothers' first visit to the West, and his first appearance on the platform. He entertained the audience to an hour's talk on Dominion and Ontario politics showing the difference between Laurier's manner of handling the country's resources and that of Whitney in Ontario. Mr. Crothers witty remarks on the West Elgin elections, with Preston's share in them gave the crowd much enjoyment. The small revenue secured from the sale of Dominion lands, compared with Ontario's revenue from her resources was a revalation. Speaking of the reckless expenditure of the Laurier Government, Mr. Crothers showed that it costs as much to finance Canada with its 6,000,000 people as it did the United States when it had 40,000,000 people.

The speaker dwelt upon the claim of some Liberals, that, while there was undoubted graft in the Government, Laurier was not a party to it. This argument was thrown out by the statement that whether Laurier was in the actual grafting or not he knew of it from the same sources as were open to the Conservatives. It was he, too, who had strenuously resisted an investigation into the land grafts, when the opposition had tried to have a commission appointed. This alone was sufficient to stamp Laurier as an accessory.

In concluding Mr. Crothers reiterated Mr. Borden's promise, that if the Conservative party is returned to power, there will not only be a most searching investigation into the land steals, but those who have acquired their grants by dishonest or unfair metnods will be forced togive the land back to the people.

There was a quiet enthusiasm throughout the meeting that augurs well for Conservatives. There was little of the hilarious excitement that foreruns an election, but every bit of applause was intelligent.

Mr. Ames' illustrated address is going to convince thousands of western citizens of the way the resources of this part of Canada are being handed over to political favorites, and the votes will be polled accordingly.

THE CITY FATHERS

The regular meeting of the City Council was held last night in the city hall. Present: The Mayor, and Alds. Baker, Morrow, Spencer, Forster, Huckvale.

J. T. Hall wrote to say that a meeting of the executive committee of the Convention of Municipalities would shortly be held, and stating that it was desired to have names of delegates and list of subjects to be discussed in as soon as possible. The Meyor and Ald. Huckvale were appointed delegates, with Alds. Baker and Morrow as alternatives.

The rifle association wrote re contribution from the council, asking that a yearly trophy be provided for competition. Left in hands of parks and markets committee with power to act.

A number of persons petitioned the council with regard to a nuisance caused by the presence of herds of cattle on the corner of Balmoral and Road Allowance. It was stated that the chief of police had been unable to find a by-law to cover the case. Filed.

Canadian Foundry Co. wrote asking that 50 per cent. of the amount owing them for engines be paid. On Ald. Huckvale's motion the clerk was instructed to write to say that installation was not yet complete, and that a two week's test would be required.

City solicitor wrote suggestingthat Mayor and clerk be authorized to sign transfer of Armory site to the department of militia. A resolution to that effect was carried.

A report was submitted by the chief of police with regard to a question of maintenance arising out of the Hayes conviction. The woman with whom Hayes was living was left destitute on the hands of Mr. Davis, who brought his position before the notice of the police. The cost of room rent and board had been guaranteed. The chief had then written to the father of the woman who had since paid for her support.

Report of finance committee submitted by Ald. Forster showed that the city's account was overdrawn on the 15th inst by $3,728.33. The laying of an inch main on the hill was recommended, from the standpipe to connect directly with the present mains on the hill. For this the estimated cost with connections and specials, was $2,280. Expenditure of $2,730 at pumping plant was also recommended, to complete the work and provide a five-roomed cottage for the engineer. Certain other expenditure was advised, the total required being $9,190 plus the overdraft to meet expenditure to August 15, or a total of $1,291.33. After some discussion the report was adopted.

A misunderstanding had arisenwith regard to the commencement of work on the gas well. Ald. Baker had been waiting for two weeks to give instructions for a start to be made. He was waiting for the council to authorize the expenditure, and two weeks good work had then been lost. The Mayor stated that the gas committee, strictly speaking, should have been notified, but that he thought the decision reached on the day following the council meeting was well known. Work will now be commenced the gas well immediately.

The two months allowed the engineer for the bringing of plans up-to-date, and cleaning up other necessary work in his office was ended. He was instructed to dispense with the extra assistance which had been provided.

By-laws relating to bake and butcher shops regulation and to spitting in public places, were referred back to the board of health for certain alterations.

Notice was given of introduction of by-laws for raising $15,000 for waterworks and $27,000 for sewers, this latter in place of the $75,000 by-law withdrawn at previous meeting.

The question of the taking over of the grand stand was discussed at length, a petition having been received from the clubs using the athletic grounds. A motion by Ald. Huckvale, that the stand be taken over at a cost of $900 was withdrawn and instead it was decided to leave the matter over till the first full meeting of the council. A promise had been given by last year's council and it was desired to save the members of that council (Alds. Tweed, Penhale and McKay present, when the matter came up for discussion.

Tenders for brass fittings were referred to a committee composed of ferred to a committee composed of Alds. Baker, Penhale and Morrow, with power to act.

Police Court Items.

On Wednesday John Paul figured in the police court, for the second time last week, having been given two days to clean up his premises. He failed to carry out the cleansing operations and was fined $25 and costs, with the alternative of one month's imprisonment, under the health by-law. John's cesspool being full he had made an open ditch in his backyard, and the whole of the back premises were in a dirty state. This fine was paid.

Edward Conway, described as a professional bum, was given one month's hard for being drunk and for vagrancy. Conway had the nerve to go round begging for money to take him to Vancouver.

A Strike Sermon

On Sunday evening the local strikers attended the Methodist church in a body to hear a sermon by the Rev. A. C. Farrell. The church was crowded to the doors.

The preacher dwelt at length upon the problems of the individual life and of the community. Every individual life, he said, had its own problem; every community, every race, every nation. And with the advance of civilization these problems became more complex.

Our success or failure depended on our manner of facing them. They might be met blindly, brute force might be resorted to in an attempt to find a solution. But there was a third way. They might be forced in a rational spirit. Each step might be well thought out until some estimate had been formed as to its probable ultimate consequences.

Though there was no beaten track to be followed, no code of rules by which to test each problem which called for solution, there were a number of infallible principles at work in the world of whose existence history itself provided evidence.

One of these was that any cause essentially right was destined ultimately to succeed. There was manifest in our world a movement towards the realization of justice.

Of this the men before the preacher themselves were evidence. In the early days of industrialism in England the principle of collective bargaining was not recognized. The principle, which today was almost universally recognized, had had to be fought for, desperately. That greater freedom prevailed today was proof that the tendency of this world's life was upward and onward. The men gathered in the church that evening were living testimony to the triumph of the principle of justice, the leaven of which would permeate human life and institutions more and more as the race moved onward to a higher plane of existence. Men of succeeding generations would enjoy greater freedom because of the self-sacrifice, the struggling unward, of the men of today. They were makers of a chapter in the history of the race.

In conclusion Mr. Farrell expressed his pleasure in being able to look into the faces of the men present—if he said, only because he realized that they were makers of history, by whom as a class the destinies of the world would be influenced. If they were right in the present struggle ultimately they would win. In so far as there was anything right in their movement, that right would triumph.

Strike News

Men Still Out and Company Saying Nothing--A Few Disturbances Reported

All over the C.P.R. system the union men continue to wait and watch. Everything seems to be marking time, and neither side is saying much, the Company remaining absolutely quiet.

A few small disturbances have taken place at Winnipeg which resulted in broken car windows, but the Company still has a large number working in the shop, although none of the union men have deserted the ranks. On this division there has been nothing resembling disorder, save a stray stone at Lethbridge, which is now said to have been thrown at the new smoke stack by boys. The strikers in this division are maintaining perfect order, and will not stand for rowdyism even from sympathizers. The men are fighting fairly and there is no prospect of a resort to the tactics that will alienate the sympathy of the public. The men feel their strength as long as they are quiet and promise to carry their stand to the end. Locally the men engaged in the strike are good citizens, most of them property holders, and it will take a great deal of excitement to make them forget their standing in the community to the extent of destroying property or using violence in any way. They realize, without any prompting, that such methods are for a different class of men. The fair name of the city is as important to them as to any other prominent citizens, and their dignified stand meets with unqualified approval.

It is claimed that the C.P.R. is importing alien labor, and a protest has been sent from Winnipeg to Ottawa. This is being done because it is thought quicker results will follow than if the law was invoked.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy was rumored as a probably arbitrator, but there is likely nothing in this.

The C.P.R. continues to operate freight and passenger trains almost as usual as far as the outside observer can see but various rumors of interrupted service are common talk. That engines are needing repairs is undoubtedly true, but how numerous than usual is a matter of conjecture. How long they can stand the strain and shortage of help depend upon circumstances. It is said that Mr. McVety, the strike leader was out of Winnipeg on Friday, and it isthought he might be engaged in some scheme of settlement in the east.

It is also said complaints have been made to the Railway Commissioners about trains moving without proper inspection.

However there is so much talked of that is only hearsay that there seems nothing more important at present than the fact that both sides are still firm, and neither has shown signs of yielding or making a compromise.

Locally the company has been bringing in strike breakers, but many of them have left and difficulty is being experienced in replacing the strikers as the harvest fields are calling all available labor.

Nine men who were brought down on Sunday from Edmonton, claim that the company contracted for their labor at $1.95 per day to work on the section gangs, but that on reaching Medicine Hat they were offered $1.75 and informed theywould have to work in the roundhouse. They have gone into the harvest fields. Two union card mechanics from the States were in on Sunday. They had no intention of replacing strikers and have now left the city.

Professional Ball Next Year

Everybody Wants it Badly

48 games played in Medicine Hat last year was 12151 or 253 a game. On this attendance it is estimated that a team costing $1,000 a month could be maintained. Last year the limit was not kept down to that and there was a preliminary expense of over $3,000, which threw the shareholders in the hole. Last year was a year of tight money and with the increased attendance of better times and a city some thousands larger, there should be money in professional ball next year. Billy Hulen will

Will there be professional baseball in Medicine Hat next year? The Times would like to be able to answer in the affirmative. At present the prospects are bright for it, and league would surpass, and his manMedicine Hat would fit there are sufficient interested men in the city to see that we have a team.

The total paid admissions to the be available and would like to manare a team here. A good salary would be paid him, and with his knowledge of the players he could bring a bunch that would hold its own against any of them. He himself, is a player that none in the league would surpass, and his managerial ability is undoubted. As captain here last year and as captain this year of the Spokane team he has demonstrated his ability in that line. Benny did well, but Hulen is more strict and keeps the players in better shape. As a fielder at first or second, or even short, he is one of the most reliable, and his batting eye makes him a pitcher-buster. Bill always led off, and it was yellow gold to a clearing house certificate that he got to first somehow. For inspiring confidence in the players he was the top of last night's milk, and for rattling his opponents and jollying them out of their homestead patents, he was a silk-hatted, be-diamonded, smooth-talker with the gold brick.

Hulen tells on the q. t. that his strenuous kick in the first game here, when he was ruled up by the unsaintly umps with the churchy name, was indulged in only as a feeler. Most teams that are onto it, "feel" the dmps early in the season to see what effect kicking has and how far they dare go. It was not an expensive experiment so early in the season. And then it was only a game lost to the poor Calgary boys, one of the few they won during the season.

If Medicine Hat got Hulen as manager we could figure on coming inside the money. And there ought to be money in it. After this year's games which have served the purpose of keeping up the interest and remind one of the professional games because they are so different, we could figure on a scramble for seats, and a rush on the gate even by the fair sex.

Then the bleachers could be ofmuch more assistance to the team, because they have acquired a readier wit and knowledge of baseball repartee that will be invaluable in making a pitcher get tangled up in the signs and send an in-drop when a wide one was called to catch a stealer. It's a cinch that when the C.P.R. boys get going with their megaphones, a Works would wonder why they were calling him "scissors" and get caught five yarns off second.

In the Northern League there is imminent disruption. Fargo hasn't handed in the "yellow" and all games have been taken from that city. The other three teams have taken Fargo over and are dividing the profits and losses. There isn't much doubt that Winnipeg would jump at a good Western league, and our old friend Arty in Brandon will use his big stick in the same direction. Moose Jaw and Regina should be able to buy the board for dangerous nines and Calgary's pride would keep it in the game.

Edmonton is doubtful, but not because it wouldn't provide a team, but because it seems so far out of the world, don't you know. A straight line of Winnipeg, Brandon, Moose Jaw, Regina, Medicine Hat and Calgary would be a big class already and not on real bait. The mileage would be no greater than that existing for years in the Northern League and the jumps would be smaller.

Medicine Hat would only stipulate that Calgary didn't have the Presidency and hog the other positions as well.

What do you say to booming the game for next year?

Criminal Court

A number of criminal cases are being tried before His Honor Judge Mitchell at a special criminal court. Yesterday morning David Ross of Red Rock appeared on a charge of stealingca roan calf the property of Mr. McHugh. Ross (the evidence said) had had a cow and calf of McHugh's in his possession since last year's dip. The calf he had branded with his brand. Later he had branded a calf of his own for which he alleged he had mistaken McHugh's. At this year's dip McHugh noticed his calf was there, with Ross brand, and was about to get get an iron to vent the brand when Ross was arrested by Corporal Jenkyn.

The case took up the whole of the morning session and a portion of the afternoon. Prisoner was convicted, but sentence reserved.

Ross was then tried on a charge of stealing a colt, the property of Mrs. Wm. Crockford. This was another case in which an animal was alleged to have been falsely branded. The colt, which bore the Ross brand was sucking a mare bearing the T W brand—Mrs. Wm. Crockford's. Dismissed.

On a charge of stealing three calves from Daniel McLean Ross will be tried this afternoon. It will be remembered that prisoner appeared before Inspector Parker some few weeks ago, as the sequel to a series of investigations and arduous work by Corporal Jenkyn about the time of the Peigan Creek dip. Inspector Parker sent Ross up for trial.

As the paper goes to press thecourt is still in session.

Fred Anderson, who was sent up for trial for alleged fraud is in the dock. P. R. Fraser sent up by Mr. Kealy this morning on a charge of obtaining money from H. W. Ireland by false pretenses, will be tried this afternoon.

The special school board committee which had in hand the appointment of a successor to Mr. Hay met yesterday morning. Mr. S. W. Hill of Winchester, Ont., was appointed and still be in the city on the 20th inst. (Saturday next).

Mrs. Geo. Molson of Montreal, mother of Mr. J. D. A. Molson of Medicine Hat, died on the 29th July at Montreal.

SASKATCHEWAN ELECTIONS

SCOTT GOVERNMENT SUSTAINED

Cabinet Ministers Defeated

The returns of the Saskatchewan elections have come in very slowly, and all kinds of reports have been received over the wires. On account of the distance from the railway of many of the polls the first reports received could give only the leading candidate in all except the cities. This was of little use in determining the result.

However the latest reports now give Scott 26 seats and Haultain 14, although several protests are to be entered and the final result may be different. For instance Weyburn, which went Liberal, on account of the neglect to swear the deputy returning officer. In Lloydminster the successful government candidate is a few inches within Alberta. There are also many cases of corruption and irregularities.

Next to the party result is the defeat of two of the cabinet ministers —Calder and Motherwell. Turgeon was also defeated in Prince Albert but took Duck Lake. This is a severe blow to Scott and is the greatest satisfaction to the Provincial Righters. Every kind of scheme was adopted by the Scott followers to win and the short time allowed gave the Opposition little time to balk them. However the Opposition has reason to feel that they fought a good fight, since with a Government redistribution that brought in 15 new seats, the Haultain party secured 8 more constituencies.

The Government seats:—Arm River, North Battleford, Cannington, South Battleford, Canora, Duck Lake, Estevan, Francis, Hanley, Humboldt, Moose Jaw County, Moosomin, Regina City, Rosthern, Swift Current, Saskatoon City, Saskatoon County, Pelly, Redberry, Saltcoats, Weyburn, Touchwood, Wadena, Vonda, Yorkton, Lloydminster.

The Opposition seats:—Last Mountain, Milestone, Moose Jaw City, Maple Creek, Pleasant Hills, Pipestone, Prince Albert City, Prince Albert County, North Qu'Appelle, South Qu'Appelle, Regina County, County Souris, Moose Mountain, Kinistino.

Halts at Lethbridge

Another Continental Tourist Chooses Lethbridge

Since Charles King, the globe trotter passed through the district on his long tramp across the continent, the Mounted Police have been kept busy looking after a friend of his. Newell had been sent out for the purpose of watching the pedestrian on behalf of the other parties to the wager. Newell was to see that King did not take to the train at any part of the trip, that he didn't fall sick, and generally to act as a right hand man. At Irvine he was introduced as such to Mr. Alex. O'Hara, who brought him down to Medicine Hat and here kept him for a couple of days. Newell was stone-broke, and Mr. O'Hara's intention was to assist the man on his way.

On the morning of the 12th, Mr. O'Hara was working on a building in the city, Newell was with him and during the course of the morning O'Hara turned and said, "Go and fill my pipe; you'll find pipe and tobacco in my pocket (describing the pocket). It was alleged that Newell went, and, noticing a purse containing three ten dollar bills and one tw dollar bill, he took out the former leaving only $2. Newell handed the pipe to O'Hara and a little later pulled out of the city. The loss was noticed during the course of the day and reported to the Mounted Police, who judging that Newell was bona fide in regard to his connection with King, and that King travelling at his average pace would arrive in Calgary on the 14th, laid their plans accordingly. It was learned that one of the $10 bills had been tendered to a freight conductor in lieu of fare.

On the night of the 13th Sid alighted from his freight car at Calgary falling immediately into the arms of the law in the person of Sergt. J. Wilson of the Mounted Police.

On his arrival in the city on the 15th, prisoner was taken before Magistrate Kealy, and elected to be tried summarily. He was sentenced to one year's imprisonment. His charge will in consequence, have to complete the jaunt to the Pacific without the kindly offices of a guide, philosopher and friend. The maximum penalty for stealing from a house is 14 years.

It has developed that the paper which has the wager up against King is the Montreal Standard.

The Ladies of St. Patrick's church Altar Society will hold an ice cream social in the old Bijou Theatre this afternoon and evening.

From an attendance of one staff of one on the opening day of last September, to an enrollment of 50 and a staff of six, in less than a year, is the phenomenal record of success of the Garbett Business College of Calgary. ATHLETICS

CALGARY WINS.

When Calgary came to Medicine Hat to try conclusions in lacrosse, most of the local enthusiasts thought our boys would more than wipe out the defeat of last week. But it was not to be. Calgary not only won by a score of 4 to 1, but deserved it. From the face off, two things were clear to the spectators. With one or two exceptions, the local boys individually had it over the Calgary boys; but in combination and in heady playing they were inferior. And unfortunately it is the latter that wins games. Whenever a Medicine Hat boy met a royal blue sweater, he got the ball every time, but when Calgary secured the sphere their men were always where they were wanted and the goals were all scored on free plays and passes with only one exception.

Medicine Hat's weakness were of the kind that a little more steady practice and more consistent training would quickly overcome. In fact some faults were brand new ones. For instance Calgary found it very easy to draw out our players until only Hatcher and Peard blocked the way to the goal. In fact even Hatcher departed too much from the safer game and allowed himself to be enticed from the goal. One of the goals was scored with all our defence behind the goal and no one to defend the nets. In addition the Calgary men were not covered as they should have been, a condition that arose through a weak spot or two among the locals. The Calgary boys bored in on the goal and shot from close range, all their goals but one being shot within a half dozen yards. Our boys shot often at 30 yards, led into it by the yells of the Calgary defence or of the grand stand.

But the playing showed that the local team could be whipped into a shape that would put Calgary in the shade. And this is not taken any of the credit of the victory from the speedy visitors. They won on their merits.

For the locals the two Halwards were exceptionally fast and sure. Bill Hatcher was as steady as ever and never missed. Taylor and Neff also did well. Some of the others had two hard men to watch to allow them to shine. Horrobin shone on the Calgary defence, and there was not a weak spot on their teams.

The game started at 2.51 with a light wind blowing across the field, Medicine Hat playing east. In a couple of minutes Laing had to defend his goal twice. Then the ball went to Hat territory but Hatcher quickly relieved, and the game was stopped to appoint goal umpires. Ritchie got a good chance for a shot but the ball was blocked on hisstick and went over the fence. Calgary pressed hard on the local goal and made a side shot which went by Hatcher to the side. A Calgary man was hurt and the game stopped for 5 minutes. Upon renewal the two Halwards and Neff got in some fast passing that brought annlause but nothing else. During the next ten minutes Art Halward's speedy foot work was much in evidence but Calgary's defence was too strong. Then Calgary worked the ball down and in 18 minutes scored the first goal. The quarter ended with the ball in Calgary territory.

The second quarter started like the first. In the first few minutes McNab, Ritchie and Collier made some hot shots but none scored. Peard had to stop a couple,and the ball again went into Calgary Territory. After some wild passing Calgary secured and Hatcher had to relieve. The quarter was without score the whistle blowing with the play in the Medicine Hat end.

In the third quarter Calgary secured and carried for a shot but W. Peard stopped a neat one. Ritchie tried a shot from too far out and the ball bounded off a stick over the fence. A long skirmish tookplace around the Calgary goal but the ball was cleared. McNab tried a shot and several more followed in rapid succession but from too great a diseance to be dangerous. A Calgary man was laid out with the ball close in on the Calgary goal The ball was carried to the Medicine Hat goal and Hatcher stopped a swift one, but could not clear to his men. A mass of players tumbled over the ball behind the nets and a Calgary man securing tossed it in front of the goal and it was batted in without a man to oppose. Then followed a few minutes of very strenous playing. Art Halward and a Calgary man got into difficulties and were ruled off. Shortly afterwards Jack Halward had his arm injured and was forced to retire until the end of the quarter. Another Calgary man was ruled off but Calgary kept pressing and Hatchermade a beautiful stop.

The fourth quarter started and ended with Medicine Hat having all the best of it in number ofshots, but unable to find the net except for one that looked very doubtful from the grand stand. Calgary, however added two more to their list. Neff made the first try in three minutes and hit the rod. Calgary ran the ball up and in five minutes notched their third. A succession of shots on Calgary goal by McNab, Collier and Halward were unsuccessful, most of them being too far out or from the side. Again Calgary found the nets in 4 minutes. Medicine Hat kept up the bombardment and at last after a Neff to J. Halward to McNab, a goal was made in 2½ minutes. McNab and Halward kept shooting with only one or two Calgary tries, but the game ended 4 to 1.

C. P. R. VS. BACHELORS.

At last they've had to go without the big end of the game. On Friday the Bachelors beat the C.P.R. in every department of the game. They hit better, made fewer errors and got most runs. But the difference was so light that it was anybody's game to the last pitched ball. There wasn't a dull moment nor was there a bit of poor ball. When there wasmo other excitement the crowd was after Fleming for not giving all his decisions the way they wanted. O'Hara struck out ten men but was wild, giving seven charities. Andrews caught him and did well both behind the bat and with the willow. Ireland continued his batting streak of the night before, securing three hits out of as many times at bat, or 7 hits out of 9 times at bat. Smith relieved Squance in the third and has nine assists to his credit.

Switzer for the first time in the league kept the coachers in their places. Fleming's balls and strikes were as good as could be expected for an umpire standing behind the pitcher.

McFarlane's one handed catch and double play on it brought down the house. It was a warm game and shows what to expect when the picked team meets the C.P.R.

BACHELORS VS. FIRE BRIGADE

A postponed game was played on Thursday night and it was a walk away for the Bachelors. The latter had their batting duds on and drew 17 hits with 5 extra bases. In addition Terrence Finlay was wild passing 5 and making 3 wild pitches that means runs. But it wasn't by any means all Terrence's fault. Squance was relieved by Smith in the last and the latter's initial appearance was quite a success.

initials are L. L.—" he added, after a pause. "There is Laura Lyons—her initials are L. L.—but she lives in Coombe Tracey."

"Who is she?" I asked.

"She is Frankland's daughter."

"What! Old Frankland the crank?"

"Exactly. She married an artist named Lyons, who came sketching on the moor. He proved to be a blackguard and deserted her. The fault from what I hear may not have been entirely on one side. Her father refused to have anything to do with her, because she had married without his consent, and perhaps for one or two other reasons as well. So, between the old sinner and the young one the girl has had a pretty bad time."

"How does she live?"

"I fancy old Frankland allows her a pittance, but it cannot be more, for his own affairs are considerably involved. Whatever she may have deserved one could not allow her to go hopelessly to the bad. Her story got about, and several of the people here did something to enable her to earn an honest living. Stapleton did for one, and Sir Charles for another. I gave a trifle myself. It was to set her up in a typewriting business."

He wanted to know the object of my inquiries, but I managed to satisfy his curiosity without telling him too much, for there is no reason why we should take anyone into our confidence. Tomorrow morning I shall find my way to Coombe Tracey, and if I can see this Mrs. Laura Lyons, of equivocal reputation, a long step will have been made towards clearing one incident in this chain of mysteries. I am certainly developing the wisdom of the serpent, for when Mortimer pressed his questions to an inconvenient extent I asked him casually to what type Frankland's skull belonged, and so heard nothing but craniology for the rest of our drive. I have not lived for years with Sherlock Holmes for nothing.

I have only one other incident to record upon this tempestuous and melancholy day. This was my conversation with Barrymore just now, which gives me one more strong card which I can play in due time.

Mortimer had stayed to dinner, and he and the baronet played ecarte afterwards. The butler brought me my coffee into the library, and I took the chance to ask him a few questions.

"Well," said I, "has this precious relation of yours departed, or is he still lurking out yonder?"

"I don't know, sir. I hope to Heaven that he has gone, for he has brought nothing but trouble here! I've not heard of him since I left out food for him last, and that was three days ago."

"Did you see him then?"

"No, sir, but the food was gone when next I went that way."

"Then he was certainly there?"

"So you would think, sir, unless it was the other man who took it."

I sat with my coffee-cup half way to my lips and stared at Barrymore.

"You know that there is another man then?"

"Yes, sir; there is another man upon the moor."

"Have you seen him?"

"No, sir."

"How do you know of him then?"

"Selden told me of him, sir, a week ago or more. He's in hiding, too, but he's not a convict as far as I can make out. I don't like it, Dr. Watson—I tell you straight, sir, that I don't like it." He spoke with a sudden passion of earnestness.

"Now, listen to me, Barrymore! I have no interest in this matter but that of your master. I have come here with no object except to help him. Tell me, frankly, what it is that you don't like."

Barrymore hesitated for a moment, as if he regretted his outburst, or found it difficult to express his own feelings in words.

"It's all these goings-on, sir," he cried at last, waving his hand towards the rain-lashed window which faced the moor. "There's foul play somewhere, and there's black villainy brewing, to that I'll swear! Very glad I should be, sir, to see Sir Henry on his way back to London again!"

"But what is it that alarms you?"

"Look at Sir Charles's death! That was bad enough, for all that the coroner said. Look at the noises on the moor at night. There's not a man would cross it after sundown if he was paid for it. Look at this stranger hiding out yonder, and watching and waiting! What's he waiting for? What does it mean? It means no good to anyone of the name of Baskerville, and very glad I shall be to be quit of it all on the day that Sir Henry's new servants are ready to take over the Hall."

"But about this stranger," said I. "Can you tell me anything about him? What did Selden say? Did he find out where he hid, or what he was doing?"

"He saw him once or twice, but he is a deep one, and gives nothing away. At first he thought that he was the police, but soon he found that he had some lay of his own. A kind of gentleman he was, as far as he could see, but what he was doing he could not make out."

"And where did he say that he lived?"

"Among the old houses on the hillside—the stone huts where the old folk used to live."

"But how about his food?"

"Selden found out that he has got a lad who works for him and brings him all he needs. I daresay he goes to Coombe Tracey for what he wants."

"Very good, Barrymore. We may talk further of this some other time." When the butler had gone I walked over to the black window, and I looked through a blurred pane at the driving clouds and at the tossing outline of the wind-swept trees. It is a wild night indoors, and what must it be in a stone hut upon the moor. What passion of hatred can it be which leads a man to lurk in such a place at such a time! And what deep and earnest purpose can he have which calls for such a trial! There, in that hut upon the moor, seems to lie the very centre of that problem which has vexed me so sorely. I swear that another day shall not have passed before I have done all that man can do to reach the heart of the mystery.

CHAPTER XI.

The extract from my private diary which forms the last chapter has brought my narrative up to the 18th of October, a time when these strange events began to move swiftly towards their terrible conclusion. The incidents of the next few days are indelibly graven upon my recollection, and I can tell them without reference to the notes made at the time. I start then from the day which succeeded that upon which I had established two facts of great importance, the one that Mrs. Laura Lyons of Coombe Tracey had written to Sir Charles Baskerville and made an appointment with him at the very place and hour that he met his death, the other that the lurking man upon the moor was to be found among the stone huts upon the hill-side. With these two facts in my possession I felt that either my intelligence or my courage must be deficient if I could not throw some further light upon these dark places.

I had no opportunity to tell the baronet what I had learned about Mrs. Lyons upon the evening before, for Dr. Mortimer remained with him at cards until it was very late. At breakfast, however, I informed him about my discovery, and asked him whether he would care to accompany me to Coombe Tracey. At first he was very eager to come, but on second thoughts it seemed to both of us that if I went alone the results might be better. The more formal we made the visit the less information we might obtain. I left Sir Henry behind, therefore, not without some prickings of conscience, and drove off upon my new quest.

When I reached Coombe Tracey I told Perkins to put up the horses, and I made inquiries for the lady whom I had come to interrogate. I had no difficulty in finding her rooms, which were central and well appointed. A maid showed me in without ceremony, and as I entered the sitting-room a lady, who was sitting before a Remington typewriter, sprang up with a pleasant smile of welcome. Her face fell, however, when she saw that I was a stranger, and she sat down again and asked me the object of my visit.

The first impression left by Mrs. Lyons was one of extreme beauty. Her eyes and hair were of the same rich hazel color, and her cheeks, though considerably freckled, were flushed with the exquisite bloom of the brunette, the dainty pink which lurks at the heart of the sulphur rose. Admiration was, I repeat, the first impression. But the second was criticism. There was something subtly wrong with the face, some coarseness of expression, some hardness, perhaps, of eye, some looseness of lip which marred its perfect beauty. But these, of course, are after-thoughts. At the moment I was simply conscious that I was in the presence of a very handsome woman, and that she was asking me the reasons for my visit. I had not quite understood until that instant how delicate my mission was.

"I have the pleasure," said I, "of knowing your father."

It was a clumsy introduction, and the lady made me feel it.

"There is nothing in common between my father and me," she said. "I owe him nothing, and his friends are not mine. If it were not for the late Sir Charles Baskerville and some other kind hearts I might have starved for all that my father cared."

"It was about the late Sir Charles Baskerville that I have come here to see you."

The freckles started out on the lady's face.

"What can I tell you about him?" she asked, and her fingers played nervously over the stops of her typewriter.

"You knew him, did you not?"

"I have already said that I owe a great deal to his kindness. If I am able to support myself it is largely due to the interest which he took in my unhappy situation."

"Did you correspond with him?"

The lady looked quickly up with an angry gleam in her hazel eyes.

"What is the object of these questions?" she asked, sharply.

"The object is to avoid a public scandal. It is better that I should ask them here than that the matter should pass outside our control."

She was silent and her face was still very pale. At last she looked up with something reckless and defiant in her manner.

"Well I'll answer," she said. "What are your questions?"

"Did you correspond with Sir Charles?"

"I certainly wrote to him once or twice to acknowledge his delicacy and his generosity."

"Have you the dates of those letters?"

"No."

"Have you ever met him?"

"Yes, once or twice, when he came into Coombe Tracey. He was a very retiring man, and he preferred to do good by stealth."

"But if you saw him so seldom and wrote so seldom, how did he know enough about your affairs to be able to help you, as you say that he has done?"

She met my difficulty with the utmost readiness.

There were several gentlemen who knew my sad history and united to help me. One was Mr. Stapleton, a neighbor and intimate friend of Sir Charles's. He was exceedingly kind, and it was through him that Sir Charles learned about my affairs."

I knew that Sir Charles Baskerville had made Stapleton his almoner upon several occasions, so the lady's statement bore the impress of truth upon it.

"Did you ever write to Sir Charles asking him to meet you?" I continued.

Mrs. Lyons flushed with anger again.

"Really, sir, this is a very extraordinary question."

"I am sorry, Madame, but I must repeat it."

"Then I answer, certainly not."

"Not on the very day of Sir Charles's death?"

The flush had faded in an instant, and a deathly face was before me. Her dry lips could not speak the "No" which I saw rather than heard.

"Surely your memory deceives you," said I. "I could even quote a passage of your letter. It ran 'Please, please, as you are a gentleman, burn this letter, and be at the gate by ten o'clock.'"

I thought that she had fainted, but she recovered herself by a supreme effort.

"Is there no such thing as a gentleman?" she gasped.

"You do Sir Charles an injustice. He did burn the letter. But sometimes a letter may be legible even when burned. You acknowledge now that you wrote it."

"Yes, I did write it," she cried, pouring out her soul in a torrent of words. "I did write it. Why should I deny it? I have no reason to be ashamed of it. I wished him to help me. I believed that if I had an interview I could gain his help, so I asked him to meet me."

"But why at such an hour?"

"Because I had only just learned that he was going to London next day and might be away for months. There were reasons why I could not get there earlier."

"But why a rendezvous in the garden instead of a visit to the house?"

"Do you think a woman could go alone at that hour to a bachelor's house?"

"Well, what happened when you did get there?"

"I never went."

"Mrs. Lyons!"

"No, I swear it to you on all I hold sacred. I never went. Something intervened to prevent my going."

"What was that?"

"That is a private matter. I cannot tell it."

"You acknowledge then that you made an appointment with Sir Charles at the very hour and place at which he met his death, but you deny that you kept the appointment."

"That is the truth."

Again and again I cross-questioned her, but I could never get past that point.

"Mrs. Lyons," said I, as I rose from this long and inconclusive interview, "you are taking a very great responsibility and putting yourself in a very false position by not making an absolutely clean breast of all that you know. If I have to call in the aid of the police you will find how seriously you are compromised. If your position is innocent, why did you in the first instance deny having written to Sir Charles upon that date?"

"Because I feared that some false conclusion might be drawn from it, and that I might find myself involved in a scandal."

"And why were you so pressing that Sir Charles should destroy your letter?"

"If you have read the letter you will know."

"I did not say that I had read all the letter."

"You quoted some of it."

"I quoted the postscript. The letter had, as I said, been burned and it was not all legible. I ask you once again why it was that you were so pressing that Sir Charles should destroy this letter which he received on the day of his death."

"The matter is a very private one."

"The more reason why you avoid a public investigation."

"I will tell you, then. If you have heard anything of my unhappy history you will know that I made a rash marriage and had reason to regret it."

"I have heard so much."

"My life has been one incessant persecution from a husband whom I abhor. The law is upon his side, and every day I am faced by the possibility that he may force me to live with him. At the time that I wrote this letter to Sir Charles I had learned that there was a prospect of my regaining my freedom if certain expenses could be met. It meant everything to me—peace of mind, happiness, self-respect—everything. I knew Sir Charles's generosity, and I thought that if he heard the story from my own lips he would help me."

"Then how is it that you did not go?"

(To be Continued.)

Our Western Lands

Mr. Ames Exposure of the Land and Timber Steals

To us Canadians has been granted the task of opening up and developing "The Last Best West." With a knowledge of the successes and failures of our neighbors to the south of us and with their experiences of western conditions gained during the past fifty years, there is no sufficient excuse if we fail in this task. The Canadian people have a right to ask and to expect that any government, which seems their confidence, shall deal with this great question in a wise, honest and statesmanlike manner.

The Wealth of the West

The immense area between the eastern limit of the province of Manitoba and the Rocky Mountains is a country of diverse wealth. It may be roughly classified as comprising four great areas. On the north lies the great spruce forest stretching from Lake Winnipeg to the Mackenzie Basin, a belt of wooded land 300 miles in width, traversed by floatable rivers and containing considerable quantities of mercantile timber; between Winnipeg and Edmonton and east of the Rocky Mountains lies the prairie agricultural belt containing 100,000,000 acres of arable land; within and encircled by the agricultural belt lie the grazing areas. Just east of the Rocky Mountains in Southern Alberta is a district which has produced marvellous crops under cultivation by irrigation. Nor is this all. Along the foot-hills of the Rocky Mountains and still further eastwardthere are areas containing valuable coal deposits. The northern lakes are full of excellent food fish. Such is the natural wealth of the Canadian West.

What It Cost to Acquire.

In this great western heritage we, one and all, have a personal interest It has cost us vast sums to acquire and to develop. In 1870 we we bought out the interests of the Hudson Bay Company, giving them $1,500,000 and allowing them to retain one twentieth part of the land. Then in order to keep faith with the people of British Columbia and to open up the country we spent $65,000,000 in building a transcontinental railway. Besides this, in order to explore, survey, develop and govern and develop these territories, we have spent many millions more.

This is Our Great Investment.

We have taxed our pockets, we have strained our credit to accomplish this development. We have done this because we believed that in the west lay the hope of the Dominion. The lands of these new provinces represent opportunity for our sons, they are our best advertisement to desirable immigrants, they furnish, as population increases, a magnificent home market for our eastern manufactured products. For these reasons we have spent our money in developing the northwest.

How it Has Been Administered

The administration of these public lands rest in the hands of the Federal authorities at Ottawa. The government acts as trustee for the people of Canada. We, of the Conserpative opposition in the House of Commons, have criticised the Liberal party of the day on the ground that they have not properly managed these assets. We assert that they have permitted vast fortunes to be made at the expense of the public by favored individuals; that they neglected to consider the interest of the settler. This has been our contention. It is not mere assertion, we have produced proof and it is this proof which I propose to lay before you tonight.

We will now take up one by one the natural resources of this western land dealing with the timber, the agricultural and the grazing lands, the coal areas, the water powers, the fisheries of the Western Provinces, all of which are administered by the Ottawa government, and we will show why in our opinion the present administration should be condemned for their action in dealing with each of these.

Part 1.—The Timber Lands.

As is well known th? prairie for the most part is comparatively treeless. Here and there are small areas of poplar and spruce, but the trees are rarely of sufficient size or quality to furnish building material. The farmer must look elsewhere for the lumber with which he shall build.

Prior to 1900 little was known regarding the great northern forest. Manitoba's demand for lumber was supplied from western Ontario, the Alberta demand from the Rocky Mountains, and there were few settlers between. As the prairies began to fill with population a vast amount of timber was required for railway building and settlers houses. A line of railway had been pushed north to Prince Albert, and it was found that there existed immense areas of fine spruce timber in the regions drained by the North Saskatchewan river.

What Should Have Been Done.

Now the government should have explored and valued these areas before parting with them.

This is what you would have done had some relative unexpectedly left you [illegible] request a stretch of land of which you had no previous knowledge.

But the government parted with these timber lands before it had any idea as to their value and now that they are gone has cause to regret its negligence. These limits are today worth from $1,000 to $3,000 and in some instances $5,000 per mile, for the leases are practically perpetual. The men who have secured these areas for a bagatelle have become in consequrnce multi-millionaires.

How Much Timber Passed Into Private Hands.

It is customary for the defence of the present administration, when hard pushed to find an excuse for the present government's actionwith reference to the timber of the Northwest, to declare that under Conservative rule, prior to 1896, a large area was alienated, leaving the hearer to infer these areas passed permanently out of the control of the government of Canada. This was not the case. It is true the Conservatives leased extensive tracts of timber land, but they exacted such conditions of operation from the grantees that no less than 94 p.c. of the area came back to to Crown. Of all the areas granted prior to July, 1896, only 1720 miles were retained by the grantees, and, when the present Liberal administration came into office, there were but 1,860 sq. miles of timber under lease in the three provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. This did not, however, long continue. There are nearly 6,500 sq. miles under lease at the present time. A carefun analysis shows that about 30 p. c. of the area under lease is being actually cut over, that 20 p.c. is being held in reserve by bona fide lumber companies and that 50 p.c.

Simmons Talks

W. C. Simmons, the Liberal candidate for this constituency has addressed his second meeting of labor men in Lethbridge. Probably he will speak to them a dozen more times before the elections for very obvious reasons. Mr. Simmons knows that the conduct of the Liberal Government will need a lot of explaining to secure the Labor vote.

The labor unions, especially the railway unions, place the Liberal labor legislation pretty close to where it belongs. They recognize in it merely an attempt to pull the wool over their eyes without doing them any good or any other person any harm. And it is a pretty difficult matter to hoodwink the unions where their own interests are concerned. In addition the labor men resents most actively the turning over to a pampered few, of the great resources of the west. No labor man could secure the timber and ranch lands that have been given to the party-workers.

One of the most amusing details of Simmons' speech in Lethbridge is his anxiety to get after Magrath at the expense even of the government Simmons supports. He openly admitted that the Government had allowed grafting in the administration of public lands. This is the first known instance of such a declaration by a man who continues to support the government, a man who is running in its interests. It developed that Simmons admitted this only to enable him to say that the A.R. and I. had secured land in this way that they had no right to; and Magrath was connected with the company at the time. Simmons does not seem to grasp the fact that the blame of the loose handling of public lands does not attach to the man who gets the land but to the Government that allowed it. No one blames the men who secure the land, as long as the unfilled check and pre-knowledge of other bids do not figure.

It is most laughable to imagine Simmons seriously trying to lessen the blame attaching to the Dominion Government by attacking the recipients of land grants.

At one part of his address Simmons made some statements which Magrath, who was present, contradicted. The speaker is reported "to have accepted the contradictions for the present." Those who know Magrath will laugh at any reservation in the acceptance of the contradictions. As between Simmons and Magrath there is no doubt whose word the people will accept.

Simmons contrasts the labor legislation of the Conservative regime with that of the Liberal period. Considering that the Liberals have been in power eleven years, and comparative weakness of Labor interests a dozen years ago compared with now, the contrast is not very exciting. The candidate might almost as well have compared flying machine legislation of the Liberal Government compared with what it will be during the Conservative rule. What the Liberal Government has done they have been forced to do by a strong, intelligent body of men, who are able to enforce their demands.

The speaker also referred to the Civil Service Act of the present Parliament as a commendable thing since it takes the appointment of civil servants out of politics. And it took the Liberals eleven years to find it out, only making the move when forced to it by the exposures brought about by the Opposition, and by the demands of every honest Canadian. It is a fine thing to make virtue of necessity. All the offices are now filled with Liberal party-workers, and just when the Conservative party is about to step in, all these wonderful changes are made.

Mr. Simmons made much of Mr. Magrath's opposition to a labor law many years ago in the Territorial Government, at the same time acknowledging that only three years ago he, himself had opposed the introduction of the labor issue in the provincial house.

Mr. Simmons, although a very young legislator in the Parliament of a very young province, with the utmost self-confidence and egotism, said to the labor men: "My term as a legislator has been short but I am not afraid to place my record against any." Such bombast will bring its own reward.

The speaker was very careful not to say anything definite about the land grants and land grafts until after Ames passed through. He calmly admitted that he would refrain until then. The reason is easily understood.

But Mr. Simmons evidently is not sure of his party platform. He is unwilling to make his remarks suit the occasion, forgetting that the party he supports has made other remarks. Mr. Simmons said: "In only two instances has the Liberal Government followed the Conservative policy of giving the public lands away." And yet the only defence the Liberal Government and the Liberal paper have ever made of the Liberal land policy is that it follows the policy laid down by the Conservative Government.

In fact Mr. Simmons' whole address showed a woeful ignorance of public questions as treated by his party. So plain was this that a defence has been attempted for him by drawing attention to his independence. The people would like to see the supporter of the Liberal Government who dare be independent. Bourassa was the only and original of that kind and he could not remain Liberal very long. Simmons should have wit enough to know that there is mighty little independence in the man who will defend the Liberal land policy.

Mr. Magrath silenced him very effectively after the latter had been dilating upon the horrible gifts to the A.R. & I. with which Magrath used to be connected, by asking him why he did not get the Government to toe the mark and stop these evils.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The only way we can suggest out of it now is that The News re-publish that authentic interview with Owen, the sanitary inspector, in order to show the hill-climbers that our waterworks system continues to be the best ever, even though the residents on the hill get no water with 55 feet of it in the stand pipe.

Sure! This is the only system that was ever invented. The News says Owen says so.

Once more Lawson, of Frenzied finance fame, is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars to dupe the public. He admits his Yukon predictions did not come true, but this new one will. And the same old appeals are used to gull the same fool-public. Lawson has fooled more of the people more of the time than any other living man.

It might be well for the Council to examine into the report that married men are turned off city jobs and single men retained. The two classes of men being equal in their work it assuredly should be the married men who get the work. The merchants feel the necessity of this as they are forced to carry married men and their families. No verbal statement in Council is sufficient to settle this question. The books should be examined.

Of late the Times has received a number of letters with requests for publication, that show nothing but personal grudge. Such letters as these The Times will not publish even though they be directed against our esteemed contemporary. Correspondence, to merit a space, must deal with public questions and not be matters of personal interest to the writer only a few of his friends. Simply because The Times has seen fit to criticise The News on many recent occasions and probably the criticism will be mutual as long as they are in existence) does not mean that this paper is looking for attacks on that paper and its editor. Personal scraps are not going to be fought out in this paper.

Ames has come and gone with his illustrated lecture, and to every man in the house he carried conviction never before felt. No honest man, be he Conservative or Liberal, could doubt the graft and dishonesty exposed by facsimiles of the tenders for timber berths. So hard did it hit home to a few hide-bound Liberals that a number of them quietly left the meeting during the address. There was perfect order throughout and the government supporters proved themselves good listeners and desirous of giving the other side a fair show.

Somehow it reads different. The News, July 16th, report of interview with R. B. Owen:

"The man (who criticised the laying of the pipes to the stand pipe) might be a good mechanic, but he evidently knew nothing about laying pipes, as it was a well demonstrated fact in engineering that the pipe should be laid in just such a manner. Had the pipes been laid in a reverse manner to that in which they had been installed, he would have felt it was his duty to have called the attention of the City Engineer to the matter."

The News, Aug. 13th, reported R. B. Owen's letter to engineer.

"The usual engineering practice is to face them up-hill."

The local machinists, boilermakers, and carmen who are out on strike are conducting themselves, in such a way as to retain the respect of the public. There has been no local disturbance whatever, the men knowing well that strikes are won by peaceful methods. In this our men can teach Lethbridge a lesson. A quiet, dignified expression of disapproval of the finding of the arbitration committee is sure to carry stronger conviction that the men believe in the stand they have taken.

Is it not just possible that Mayor Tuttle of Fernie has allowed his enthusiasm and excitement to run away with his good judgment? The latest call for help from Mayor Tuttle has gone to London, Eng. The telegram sent out during the fire touched a tender spot in the hearts of Canadians. Almost every town and city in Canada was appealed to and responded. American cities sent contributions, until about $100,000 has been given for relief. Later another appeal was sent and even this was recognized as an urgent necessity. However, it would seem that an appeal going outside the country should go only from the Canadian Government, when the latter has acknowledged itself and the Canadian people as incapable of handling the situation. It almost comes on a Canadian as a slap that a fellow countryman should appeal abroad. There is such a thing as pride even in calamity. We Canadians like to feel we can protect our own people, and that we have national pride enough to bear our troubles without a public capitulation.

At the time of writing returns from Saskatchewan are so unreliable that remarks on the results would be premature. However it is certain that Haultain has made a good fight. The defeat of the Liberal cabinet ministers, which is assured, is almost as serious to the party as a party defeat.

Have You Suspected Your Kidneys as the Cause of Your Trouble

If you have backache, swelling of the feet and ankles, frequent or suppressed urine, painful sensation when urinating, specks floating before the eyes, great thirst, brick-dust deposit in the urine, or anything wrong with the urinary organs, then your kidneys are affected.

It is really not difficult to cure kidney trouble in its first stages. All you have to do is give DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS a trial. They are the most effective remedy to be had for all kidney and urinary troubles.

Mrs. Alfred LeBlanc, Black Cape, Que., writes:—I feel it my duty to say a word about your Doan's Kidney Pills. I suffered dreadful pain across my back so bad I could not stoop or bend. After having used two boxes I feel now most completely cured thanks to your pills. I highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills.

WATCH NEXT YEARS RUSH.

Chicago, August 3.—"Black rust worse than 1904. Crops simply burned up from heat."

The above, one of many telegrams received today from Minneapolis, helped to throw the Board of Trade into an uproar. The trading was sensational, and prices leaped skyward as the alarm increased over the damage to crops from continued dry weather and excessive heat in the corn belt, and the spread of the black rust in the wheat fields of the North-West. It was what brokers call an "old-fashioned" bull market, and the activity in the pits at times was hysterical, brokers loaded down with orders waving their hands and shouting frantically until forced to stop from sheer exhaustion.

The corn pit was especially wild. Reports from Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and other States said that the corn is firing and that it would suffer untold damage unless rains soon came to the relief of the situation. The farmers are thoroughly frightened over the outlook, and commission houses were swamped with buying orders from the country.

The Times for Job Printing

was at the office a few minutes before the tenders were opened. The tender was taken aside and in the meantime a conference took place and a blank cheque signed by Burrows was filled out. This made Burrows' total amount to $31,110, and so he got the berth." The figures may not be quite accurate, but it is plain that, rightly or wrongly, the Edmonton representative believed that his tender was tapped. Certainly the circumstantial evidence in regard to this transaction does not tend to remove that impression.

It is estimated that limit No. 1,031, of which we are speaking, will produce 75,000,000 feet of sawn lumber. All the timber lies close to the river. At a reasonable valuation this limit is worth today $250,000.

T. B. No. 1122.

On November 27, 1903, Burrows' timber cruiser, Archie McLean, made application to have seven widely separate tracks of selected timber, located on the McLeod and Pembina rivers, tributaries to the Athabasca, and aggregating in all 110 square miles put up for public competition. The department acted with great despatch. Advertisements were issued on the 15th of December, 1903, and bids were called for to be opened on the 27th of January 1904. Between the isles of the advertisement and the opening of the bids the gross time was 43 days but for anyone in Edmonton desirous of visiting the limits the time available was but a month. Now merely to make the tour of these seven widely separated tracts, passing from one to another and returning to Edmonton, would require a journey of 450 miles. This in itself would take a couple of months, allowing no time for examination. No condemnation can be too severe on the department for thus putting up so large an area in such scattered tracts in a single competition. It practically shut out the local Edmonton dealers from anything like a fair deal. The bids were opened on the 27th of January, 1904. They were as follows:

(a) McDonald & Frith, Ottawa, $1,220.

(b) J. H. Lamont, Prince Albert, $4,000.

(c) Kenneth A. McLeod, P.O. Box 175, Edmonton, $10,025.

(d) A. W. Fraser (Imperial Pulp Company) $11,000.

Handy Second Cheque

The offer of the Imperial Pulp Company was in the form of a letter written by Lawyer Fraser at Ottawa. Marginal notes on the originals indicate that two cheques were given—one for $5,000 and one for $6,000. Mr. Fraser under examination has stated that he wrote the letter and handed it in an unsealed envelope to Mr. Burrows. Mr. Finnie, Local Manager of the Bank of Ottawa, has testified that he gave Mr. Burrows two managers' cheques for these amounts on the morning of January 27, in exchange for deposit. The cheque for $5,000 was accepted first. It will be readily noticed that the $5,000 cheque would have been sufficient to have captured the limit over the Lamont bid, but that it required the combined cheques to exceed the McLeod offer. The limit was transferred the following day to the Imperial Pulp Company by whom it is held today. Again may I ask was this coincidence or design?

It has been the cause of many protests and numberless petitions from settlers several hundred of whom were for some years shut out from obtaining building material for local needs by the granting of track No. 1 of this berth, but what cares this government for the settler in comparison with its solicitude for the interests of those connected with the Imperial Pulp Company.

Imperial Corners Timber

And now to recapitulate. The Imperial Pulp Company has secured practically the whole reserve supply within 150 miles radius of Edmonton. Their holdings in this region cannot be worth today less than $750,000. They will probably realize far more than this if they continue to hold and sell when increased demand adds to present value. Their method of tendering was different in every particular from the recognized practice of the department. The public advertisement which invites tenders calls attention to the fact that the department is prepared to furnish on demand a printed form of tender. This form indicates that the bidder is expected to state the amount he offers as bonus and give the name of the bank upon which his accepted cheque is drawn. This form was generally used by its competitors, but never by the Imperial Pulp Company.

In their tenders the amount offered as bonus is rarely stated. Double cheques are often used. The margin of excess is perilously small, but never less than is required. All things considered—these unusual methods—this unvarying success—point to but one conclusion, that there must have been irregularity in the tendering.

The Prince Albert Deal.

The brother-in-law of the ex-Minister of the Interior was not content to secure limits for himself but he found it profitable to lend his influence for a consideration. No better illustration of this can be given than to repeat the story of the PrinceAlbert deal which discloses at the same time a betrayal of public trust without parallel even among these remarkable transactions.

This is the history of the Big River Lumber Company and of its satellite the Fraser-Munson combination On the 17th of January, 1903, Messrs. Urquhart, Richards & Pattinson, real estate agents, of Winnipeg and St. Paul, wrote to the department, on behalf of a syndicate of American financial men," making application for fifty blocks of timber of ten miles each at the headwaters of the Churchill river, indicating a selection area of 7,020 square miles, the southeastern corner of which would come within twenty-five miles of Prince Albert. It was a most unprecedented demand. The quantity of timber land and the area of selection were very much greater than that was ordinarily applied for. The department, however, appear to have had no hesitation in granting the request. With wonderful alacrity that is within less than a fortnight after receipt of this application, the advertisement was issued calling for bids.

Magnitude of the Proposition

It is difficult to realize the magnitude of this proposition. Fifty blocks averaging ten miles each, to be selected within an area of 7,020 square miles in extent. This means a strip of continuous woodland four miles wide stretching as far as from Montreal to Ottawa, selected from an area 100 miles in length by seventy miles wide. To secure this meant to possess a monopoly of Prince Albert's vast timber reserves.

The delay allowed for inspection was in inverse ratio to the magnitude of the proposition. Much longer time has frequently been granted to explore far smaller limits. It was advertised once in the Manitoba Free Press and once in the Prince Albert Advocate. The advertisement left Ottawa the 28th day of January and the bids were to be back in Ottawa the 7th of March. This meant thirty-eight days from Ottawa to Ottawa, it allotted less than one month for the lumbermen of Prince Albert, after learning of the proposal, to explore and bid.

Bunch of Protests.

No sooner did the news reach Prince Albert than there were protests galore. This enterprising northern town of Prince Albert, is the centre of the saw mill industry for western Saskatchewan. There are a number of lumber manufacturers at this point whose future supply it was realized was being threatened. The Board of Trade held a meeting and passed unanimously a strong condemnatory resolution. The mayor of Prince Albert also protested, forwarding to the Hon. Clifford Sifton the following telegram: People of Prince Albert protest against sale of timber berths north of river timber limits passing into the hand of speculators to the detriment of settlers. (Signed) J. F. Austull, Mayor."

The objections of these practical men were well founded "the area tendered for is too large," "few have capital sufficient to tender for so large a block;" "we protest against its passing into the hands of speculators to the detriment of settlers;" "we ask that the time for receiving tenders be extended for six months to enable lumbermen to examine the limits for themselves." Such were the reasonable demands of the people best acquainted with the facts of the case. "Put this area up in smaller blocks, and grant us longer time," said the "and we will tender." To all this Mr. Turriff made curt reply: "It is not thought advisable to make any change."

No Competition.

And so the bids were opened on the 7th of March, 1903. There was no competition worthy the name. The Prince Albert operators, deterred by the prospect of a large bonus being required, made no effort to bid. A. W. Fraser, K.C., of Ottawa, president of the Ottawa Liberal Club, using the name of Wm. Cowan, but acting on the instructions of T. A. Burrows, this latter gentleman likewise furnishing an unidentifiable manager's cheque exchanged for his own, put in one bid of $5,000 for first choice (1048), and likewise, writing a letter under the borrowed name of John McBain, put in another bid for $1,000 for (1,049) the second choice. So the whole 500 square miles, as was expected and from the first intended, were knocked down to the Ottawa lawyer and to those whom he represented for the insignificant sum of $6,000. When it is recalled to mind that during the two previous years the average bonus obtained by the department had been $150 per square mile, it will be seen how preposterous it was to let this vast area go for only $12 per mile. Two cents per acre for selected spruce covered timber land was the price accepted by the government

Burrows Unloaded.

Now these limits Nos. 1048 and 1049, though the former purported to be held by the Big River Lumber Company and the latter by lawyer A. W. Fraser, were really acquired by Burrows and his associates. Before the limit was explored, before the blocks were selected, Burrows sold his half interest in the Big River Lumber Company and Fraser's interest in the John McBain lease for $80,000 which sum he has been paid by the purchasers in cash. In a previous debate it was alleged that this limit had been secured by William Cowan of Prince Albert, and much political capital was made by pointing out that Mr. Cowan was a Conservative. Had Mr. Cowan, however, asked for this limit for himself he would never have succeeded in getting it. The co-operation of Burrows, et al., was the force that drove the deal through despite all protests. Before full ownership passed to Mr. Cowan's company, Burrows, the middleman, whose "pul," worked the department, pocketed $74,000 net cash for his influence. Had these berths been put up in blocks of fifty square miles at a time, as asked for by the Prince Albert Board of Trade, with six months given to prospective bidders in which to examine the timber, any one of the ten areas would have brought a bonus of $6,000 or more. The Prince Albert timber dealers—Cowan excepted and he had to pay the price—have been shut out of their natural rights; the country has been defrauded of its just return, in order that Brother-in-law Burrows might further add to his rapidly accumulating fortune.

Value of Timber When Properly Put Up.

As proof of the value of timber in this locality let me refer you to a transaction which took place shortly after in connection with lands controlled by the Indian department. In 1906 the timber surrounding Sturgeon lake, within the limit of Indian reserve No. 101, comprising an area of thirty-five square miles, was put up to auction. This belt lies about midway between the southeastern corner of the "Big River Lumber Company's" selection area and the town of Prince Albert. The sale was well advertised, notices being issued on the third of July and insertions appearing as follows:

Manitoba Free Press, six insertions consecutively.

The Times, Battleford, weekly, three insertions.

The Phoenix, Saskatoon, three insertions.

The Advocate, Prince Albert, three insertions.

Bids were opened on the 30th of August, 1906. The competition was keen. The following were the offers received.

(a) J. H. Sanderson, $21,300.

(b) Prince Albert Lumber Company, $27,609.

(c) Sturgeon Lake Lumber Company, $28,000.

It will be seen the limit brought $800 per square mile or $5.60 per thousand feet standing. When one considers the fact that only such timber may be cut as would measure 10 inches in diameter at a distance of three feet from the ground it will be seen what a limit in this part of the country, put up under proper conditions, may be expected to bring. What can be said of a government that permits 500 square miles of timber to be sold for $12 per square mile, when in another branch of the service, but a short time later, similar timber properly advertised in a continuous area brings $800 per square mile.

In view of these transactions, and there are many like them which may be quoted is it any wonder that His Majesty's Opposition in the House of Commons denounces the present administration for its action in respect of the western timber lands? Yet when these transactions are unearthed the member who has the hardihood to expose them in the House and country is at once characterized as a slanderer and a calumniator by the government supporters and by the Liberal party press. But the facts are there and cannot be denied. The Royal Commission on the Civil Service, although they were unable in their famous report to devote more than eight lines to the Department of the Interior, could not refrain from expressing the following opinion "The Commissioners regret extremely that with the short time at their disposal they were unable to visit the Northwest, much as they desired to see the land, and more especially, the timber sales are affected."

Restitution.

In the House of Commons the Opposition moved on the 19th of May, 1908, that a "full unrestricted investigation be made and such available proceedings taken as may be necessary to revest in the Crown any timber lands in respect of which fraud or imposition has been practised." We believed then as we believe now that in taking up this fight we were making a just demand not only for investigating but for restitution. If these timber areas have been acquired by fraud or imposition the holders of them are the possessors of stolen goods and should be made to relinquish them for the benefit of the state. If the Conservatives come into power there will be such an investigation and if, what we believe to be true can be proven, the people of this country will become richer by many millions through the recovery of natural wealth which has been wrongfully taken from them.

is in the hands of speculators. The government have leased practically all the good timber south of the watershed; and the reserves of Winnipeg, Prince Albert and Edmonton are in speculative hands.

How the Regulations Were Altered.

The regulations too have changed so as to greatly encourage the speculator. Prior to 1903 the Minister of the Interior was under no obligation to renew a license from year to year, if the land was required for settlement or other purposes, but Mr. Sifton altered this and by Order-in-Council of April 14, 1903, it was decreed that "so long as the licensee complies with the conditions of his license and of the regulations he shall be entitled to a renewal of his license from year to year while merchantable timber remains upon the area licensed." This change in the regulations makes the lease practically perpetual, adds greatly to the value of the berth and has doubtless stimulated speculation to a marked degree.

Who Have Profited.

Within the comparatively short period of three years and a half, between 1902 and 1905, more than three thousand square miles of selected timber, that is to say about one-half of the entire area under lease in the western provinces fell into the hands, not of operators but of speculators. One-half of this amount, comprising 25 p.c. of the timber of the three provinces, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta was acquired by a group, which may be called the Burrows-Fraser combination, of which the brother-in-law of the then Minister of the Interior, Mr. Sifton, was the central figure, under circumstances so peculiar as to have excited general comment.

An analysis of the holdings of this group shows T. A. Burrows as having secured 549 square miles, the Imperial Pulp Company, 417 square miles, the Big River Lumber Company 250 square miles, A. W. Fraser, alias John McBean, 250 square miles, A. W. Fraser, for himself, 120 square miles—in all 1,586 square miles of selected timber, only 109 square miles of which are being operated, the remainder held, presumably for speculation.

The extent of the holdings of this favored group may be illustrated: Were these selected blocks, nearly 250 in number, out of an area many times their size, placed end to end they would form a continuous strip of thick timber, one mile wide, stretching from Montreal to Winnipeg, or, putting it another way, they would be the equivalent of a strip half a mile in width clear across the continent.

Phenomenal Success in Tendering

In the acquisition of these limits, under the quasi form of competition then followed by this government, the members of the "Inner Circle" have been remarkably successful. T. A. Burrows, brother-in-law to the ex-Minister of the Interior, owned in 1901 three limits. Between June of 1902 and June of 1905 Mr. Burrows bid, directly or indirectly, nineteen times for timber berths. He succeeded eighteen times, he failed once.

Such success is quite out of the ordinary. For example, take the experience of Messrs. H. & K. McDonald, Mr. Burrows' most active competitors, who stand second on the list by way of extent of holdings. The McDonalds were shrewd bidders. Kenneth McDonald was a practical lumberman and explored the timbered regions of the West. Hector McDonald, his brother, looked after the Ottawa end of the timber speculation business. During the period of Mr. Burrows' wondrous success the McDonalds bid on thirty occasions. They were successful fourteen times; they failed sixteen times. For the limits which they secured they paid in the aggregate three times the next highest bidder; for the limits they lost they averaged 62 per cent. of highest bids. Burrows almost never failed, and when he cleared the jump he had but little to spare.

Was There Real Competition.

Whenever the holdings of the brother-in-law of the Ex-Minister of the Interior and of his associates are criticised, the argument is always advanced in defence that these limits were obtained at public competition, and that they went to the highest bidder. I propose, in order to test the validity of this defense, to give the history of some of the transactions which have been discussed in the House of Commons and to show that the so-called public competition was little better than a travesty. Not only was the system wholly bad, but there are strong grounds to believe that fraud and imposition were practiced, and the government in refusing to permit a parliamentary inquiry into this whole matter, has strengthened the belief, wellnigh universal, that these transactions could not bear the light. Let us then take up the stories of some of these berths. We will begin with that of the Cedar and Moose Lake limits, which are of special interest since it was in respect of these transactions that the war to seedre possession of the orignal documents was waged.

The Cedar Lake Limit

Just north of Lake Winnipegosis there lies a lake called Cedar Lake, on the shores and islands of which there is much valuable timber. In September, 1903, A. W. Fraser, an Ottawa lawyer, not long since President of the Ottawa Liberal Association, applied to have put up for sale a timber berth to include 60 square miles on this lake. His request was at once granted. The notices were issued on the 12th of October, calling for bids to be received and opened at Ottawa on the 2nd December. One advertisement and one only appeared in the Manitoba Free Press and in the Dauphin press. Now, Cedar Lake lies 100 miles north of the railroad. In order to reach it, one must take the train to Winnipegosis, from which point an occasional fishing tug can be taken for points at the northern end of that lake. But the steamer service comes to an end the latter part of October and the ice commences, early in November to form upon Lake Winnipegosis. Since the advertisements did not appear in the western papers before the 20th of October, it will be seen that it was quite impossible at that time of the year for anyone to visit the limit, examine the timber, put in a bid with a cash deposit and have the same reach Ottawa by the 2nd of December. Competition was impossible. It is reasonable to conclude that the authorities at Ottawa intended to make it so. As was no doubt expected there was but one bid, that of the applicant, Mr. Fraser, and this gentleman, offered the paltry sum of $500 and secured the limit. Shortly after its acquisition the area of the berth was increased to 90 sq. mile without additional bonus, so that Mr. Fraser secured his limit at the rate of $5.56 per sq. mile or at a little less than one cent an acre.

Now that limit, acquired for speculative purposes by Mr. Fraser, was placed for sale in the hands of certain Winnipeg agents. Their prospectus offering the property to a prospective buyer was read in the House of Commons. I have the original document issued by J. Hafner and Son, real estate agents, 367 Main street, Winnipeg, which reads as follows:—

"Cedar lake, which is situated on Saskatchewan waters is comprised of something over 100 square miles and is estimated at 250,000,000 feet. The timber on this berth would work to advantage in connection with the former berth. As you will notice by the accompanying plan there is one short portage to land the logs from Cedar Creek to Lake Winnipegosis, a distance of from two and a half to three miles. The waters in both lakes are of the same level and the country lying in between the two lakes isof a low flat nature. The timber is immediately surrounding the shores of the lake stated, for sixty square miles, together with the islands or portions of the islands that have been selected. The survey has been made, but up to the present I am not in possession of the plans. The timber is of good quality and fairly clean, more so than the timber in the Erwood and Red Deer districts, but not quite so large. The price for this block is $500,000.

Can anyone defend the government for permitting so valuable a concession to pass into a speculator's hand under such circumstances.

The Moose Lake Limit.

Just north of Cedar Lake lies a still larger sheet of water known as Moose Lake. This also drains into the Saskatchewan river. The lake is as large as Lake Nipissing and there is some very fine timber located nearby. Mr. Fraser applied for this limit also at the time that he asked for Cedar Lake. There was the same insufficiency of advertising and opportunity for competition. Mr. Fraser, apparently expecting to have it all his own way, put in a nominal bid of $1,000. But there was a surprise in store for him, for, late in the morning of the day on which the bids were to be opened, a tender reached the department from James Currie, associated with the McDonalds, who offered $6,420 for the limit. Then a third tender appeared in the name of W. H. Nolan, containing a $7,000 cheque and this last offer captured the limit.

The Original Documents

Now, these three tenders were the original documents over which there was so much discussion in the House The government furnished the Opposition with typewritten copies. These, however, did not carry all the information that was required. We demanded the originals and our demand was refused, after a two weeks struggle, the originals were brought down and what did they disclose! They showed that the tenders of A. W. Fraser and W. H. Nolan were in the same handwriting. Subsequently Mr. Fraser under oath admitted that he wrote them both. He stated that he had at first tendered on his own behalf, offering $1,000 for the limit, that during the morning Mr. Burrows, the brother-in law of the Minister, had called to see him, had asked him to prepare another tender and that he had used the name of W. H. Nolan as though it were his own. Mr. Fraser had handed the letter in an unsealed envelope to Mr. Burrows, and this latter gentleman had inclosed the $7,000 cheque which captured the limit with a little to spare. Now the conundrum to which there has been no satisfactory answer is this: How did Mr. Burrows know that $7,000 was the sum required to win the limit? This timber berth, even more valuable than the Cedar Lake limit, subsequently passed into the hands of a company known as The Imperial Pulp Company whose operations became the subject of investigation on the part of the Opposition.

The Imperial Pulp Company.

This organization seems to have been formed for the sole purpose of acquiring, holding and selling timber limits. It had no office, save a Winnipeg post box. Its officials were undisclosed. It was eventually learned that the Hon. D. H. McMillan, lieutenant-governor of Manitoba was president, that T. A. Burrows was managing director, and that a youth formerly typewriter to Mr. Burrows, was the secretary. Whether there were other shareholders we were unable to learn. The holdings of this company on the North Saskatchewan and on its branches above Edmonton are valued today at $750,000, while the Moose Lake limit, according to the prospectus issued by an authorized agent, is held at $500,000 more. Not a stick of timber has yet been cut by this company from any of these limits, although most of the areas have already been held for five years or more; nor has any saw mill been erected, or any activity shown which would entitle this company to be regarded as anything but a speculator in timber property.

The Imperial Pulp Company as a Bidder for Limits.

The Imperial Pulp Company appears upon the scene as a bidder for timber berths between December, 1902, and February, 1904. During these two years this company, under divers names, observing the greatest secrecy, bid upon nine limits. It never asked to have a limit put up, but it never failed to secure a limit upon which it bid. The total of its bids amounted to $54,975, the total of the next highest bidders in the nine cases amounted to $51,771, a difference of $3,204. In other words this company secured its limits by an average bid of but 6 p.c. above the next competitor. This mysterious company that possessed no domicile, whose home was a Winnipeg post office box, whose communications had to pass through an Ottawa lawyer or banker, acquired for less than $55,000 during these three years 417 square miles of timber limits that must have a value today exceeding $1,000,000.

Its Methods Illustrated.

T. B. No. 1031.

The first appearance of the Imperial Pulp Company on the records of the department is in reference to timber limit No. 1031. In the summer of 1902 a local Edmonton syndicate sent an exploration party to examine the timber along the upper waters of the North Saskatchewan river. In conformity with their report, appliration was made to the department to put up 118 square miles in eleven blocks. The applicants asked that there be no unnecessary delay as they wished to construct a saw mill and commence operations at once. The government, however, did not act with alacrity. A delay of two months and more ensued, during which time John Cameron, homestead inspector at Edmonton, was despatched to the upper waters to examine the timber and make report—a commendable proceeding and one that should have been followed in all cases. But—and mark this—it had the additional advantage of full information as to the value of these limits. Finally on the 19th of November, the notices were issued putting up the entire area far competition as a single proposition. Ib

Hurry-Up Sale.

Forty-two days were allowed from the issue of the notice to the date of opening bids. One advertisement appeared in the Edmonton Bulletin about December 1. This gave about four weeks to outsiders to acquire information on which to make competitive offers. That this length of time was wholly insufficient is shown by a letter on file from W. S. Dwinnell, who represents Minneapolis capitalists, and who had also a large interest in the Edmonton Lumber Company. Mr. Dwinnell in his letter says: "I have been endeavoring to secure information which would enable me to act intelligibly, but have not had sufficient time to do so. I would ask you to have this sale postponed for thirty or sixty days, preferably the latter, to the end that I may complete an examination and make a substantial bid for the property. I am satisfied that the interests of the Dominion government would be subserved there by, and that a much larger bid would be received than if the sale took place at this time. This tract, comprising as it does, 118 square miles, is so extensive, that the time given under the notice is altogether insufficient to permit any one to make proper examination thereof." It is the same story disclosed in connection with other transactions, "insufficient time," "tract too large." A further letter from Messrs. Crafts & Lee, of Edmonton, asks "Must the tenders be on each block separately, or in the whole" intimating that if so large an area be put up at one time there were few possessed of sufficient capital to bid upon it. It meant shutting out the small Edmonton manufacturer and granting every advantage to the wealthy Ottawa speculator.

Inside Circle Knew.

But the department did not postpone the sale as asked by Mr. Dwinnell. Presumably sufficient information was by this time in the possession of those in whose behalf information was desired. The bids were opened on December 31, 1902. They were as follows, omieting several smaller offerings:

(a) T. A. Burrows, $6,057.

(b) James Ross on behalf of the Edmonton syndicate, $17,010.

(c) H. & K. McDonald & Frith, $31,161.

(d) The Imperial Pulp Company $31,575.

The tender of the Imperial Pulp Company was a model of brevity. It read:

Toronto, December 29, 1902

To the Secretary, Department of the Interior, Ottawa:

Sir,—Enclosed please find tender for timber berth No. 1031.—Yours truly. (Signed) Imperial Pulp Co., Toronto.

The regular form of the department was not used. No amount as bonus was specified. Marginal notes on the original showed that there were two cheques, the first for $17,575 and the second for $14,000. It was brought out as evidence that these cheques were manager's cheques on the Ottawa office of the Bank of Ottawa, handed to T. A. Burrows in exchange for deposit. The letter purports to have come from Toronto, the cheques from Ottawa. Mr. Burrows seems to have been the instrument of their union. Now it will be noted that the larger of these cheques $17,575, slightly exceeds the bid of James Ross and the Edmonton syndicate. Just before 12 o'clock the tender of the McDonalds arrived for $31,161. The addition of the second cheque for $14,000 to the previous cheque of the Imperial Pulp Company for $17,575, would give a total of $31,575, sufficient by a small margin to exceed the McDonald bid. Is it any wonder the question is asked. "Was this coincidence or design?"

Burrows was Ahead.

Edmonton advices show that the local syndicate was represented in Ottawa on the day the tenders were opened by Frederick E. Moroney, who brought down the $17,010 Ross cheque. This party told on his return of his experience and impressions. You will find his story, as repeated by Dr. H. L. McInnis, in the Edmonton Weekly Journal of February 28, 1908. After stating that the Edmonton syndicate sent a man to Ottawa with a marked cheque the citation reads, "When the man got there a tender had been submitted by Burrows for $6,610. The man

Canadian Clearing House

The clearing house returns published every week in the daily press are a riddle to nine out of ten readers. The Monetary Times describes this modern banking institution in a clear way.

In the principal cities every bank in the country is represented by a branch or by a redemption agent, so practically everything in the way of bank notes can be cleared daily. Then, every day's mail and express fromthe branches and correspondents brings in a large number of cheques on other banks, and a number of parcels of other banks' notes. When everything has been sorted and the deposits for the other banks all prepared for sending out there will be, perhaps, twenty-five or mord parcels. Before the clearing house was instituted these parcels had to be sent, each one to the bank it was intended for, and each other bank would have to send its deposits in exchange; after the twenty-five exchanges were effected every bank would have to settle probably twenty-four differences per day with each of the other institutions. Under the clearing house system the parcels are all sent to the clearing house, or place appointed for the exchange of parcels. Each parcel will have pinned to it a ticket stating the amount of the contents and the name of the bank it is intended for. The clearing clerk sent out by the bank will bear with him a sheet containing a list of the amounts sent by his bank to the respective other banks, the name of each bank being set opposite its amount. These are added together; the total represents the bank's clearing for the day. Arrived at the clearing house, there will be seen a circular row of twenty-five compartments or boxes, each compartment bearing the name of a bank, and giving room for one man. The clearing clerks take possession of the compartments belonging to their respective banks, and the messengers or clerks sent to accompany them begin their rounds. Each one in succession calls at every compartment and delivers the parcel for that bank. As he does so, with each parcel he presents the clearing sheet, and takes upon it the initial of the clerk receiving it. When the clerk has gone the rounds he will have divested himself of all his parcels and will have on the clearing sheet the receipt of an accredited representative of each bank.

In the meantime the clearing clerk will have been receiving the parcels delivered by each one of the other banks. When all are received he enters the amount shown by the ticket attached to each one on another sheet, opposite the name of the bank from whom it was received. When all are entered, the items are added and the total represents what the bank must give credit for. The difference between this and the total of its clearing sheet represents the balance it will have to pay or receive at the clearing bank.

Thus economy is effected through using the clearing house. All the exchanges are made at the central place instead of being made separately with each institution.

After the sheets are balanced and the difference or balance which each bank hasto pay, or receive, arrived at, the sheets and slips are handed to the clearing house manager, and balanced. The total of the debit balances should balance with the total of the credit balances. Everything being found correct, the manager signs a slip for each bank, stating the amount of the debit or credit balance it has to pay, or receive, and the clearing is completed.

The messengers and clerks from each bank hurry home with the parcels they have received, and the clearing house sheets that contain the records of them. They are given to one of the tellers, and the contents of each parcel are carefully examined to see that the amount claimed to be there is actually there. There will be in each a list of cheques and bordeaux, with specification of cash. The cash is counted, and the cheques ticked off on the list. The ledger-keepers examine the cheques to see that the signatures are authentic, the endorsements in order, and that funds are held for them. If any item is missing, if there are any cheques in the lot for which there are not sufficient funds, or if there is a shortage in the cash of any parcel, and it has to send over cash to rectify the mistake. If it does not do so, the bank can, if it chooses, stop the settlement of balances at the clearing bank until its claim is satisfied. At a certain fixed time, usually from twelve o'clock to half-past twelve, the debtor banks must pay in their balances at the clearing bank. Then from half-past twelve till one, provided the clearings have not been stopped, and provided all the debtor banks have duly settled their balances, the creditor banks appear and draw what is coming to them.

It will be remembered that the panic in New York was precipitated by the fact becomingknown one day that the Mercantile National Bank of New York had been unable to meet its balance at the clearinghouse in that city. As failure to meet a balance promptly would be tantamount to a confession of inability to meet obligations, all the banks are most particular to be prompt in their payments. The operation of meeting these balances furnishes a daily test of the solvency and preparedness of every bank in Canada. In the event of any bank becoming straitened for cash, probably the first indications would be seen at the clearing house.

ADVERTISING A NECESSITY

(From the Canadian Grocer.)

There is only one cause—(of grocery business depression)—they do not advertise. They cannot hold the trade. The corner grocery is nearer to the people and they get a big share of the business. The only remedy for the grocer is to advertise. Tell the people about the freshgoods that are received every day. Suggest to them a new brand of pickles, a new kind of canned fruit, the cooked meats, fresh biscuits and the hundreds of other palatable things so much desired in the hot weather. The people want those things and would buy them if they only knew where to get them. The corner grocer does not carry them, and in warm weather a woman will nor run around the city looking for something to eat that is cool and refreshing. She has no time and less inclination. If she saw advertised that a certain store had what she wanted she would soon telephone an order or send for it.

CORRESPONDENCE

(The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents, nor does it necessarily agree with them.)

To the Editor of The Times:

I wish to draw the attention of the CityCouncil to the necessity of providing seats close to the bandstand. I have heard many people complaining about this matter. The cost would be very small and I believe there would be a larger attendance; as it is, people get tired standing and go away.

Yours truly,

A CITIZEN.

Boston, Aug. 11.—Favorable action on the appointment of a committee to investigate, report and remedy, if possible, the ravages of tuberculosis in so far as it vitally affected the members of the organization, and the defeat of a proposition for a convention every five years instead of annually was the feature to-day of the meeting of the International Typographical Union.

Edmonton, Aug. 12.—At a special meeting of the building trades committee last evening, matters of hours and rates of labor were discussed by a large gathering of members. The purpose of the unions is to arrange amicable relationships with fair contractors in order that the best interests of both employers and employees may be served. It was the unanimous opinion that the eight hour day should be preserved inviolate.

They agreed to assist each other in maintaining the schedule of wages and hours agreed on between the builders' exchange and the different labor organizations last spring. They are notifying architects and contractors in the city to this effect. The reason for this action is found in the fact thata number of contractors and members of the builders' exchange have taken contracts and have not maintained the hours and wages scheduled agreed upon.

Labor men, here is what the Typographical Journal says of the Moose Jaw readers:

"Behold, these are 'free' text books! If there is a spark of energy in our union men, the seats of Moose Jaw, Regina, Saskatoon, and Prince Albert, and Calgary, Edmonton and Medicine Hat, if not more will, by this contemptible chicanery, be lost to the politicians who steered it. To ship thousands of dollars worth of the people's money to American publishers is an insult that the Canadian printers will most effectively resent."

Notices are out for a big Labor Day celebration in Moose Jaw. There will be a grand parade and sports. The latter include running races for men and boys and girls, tugs of war between the C.P.R. team of Moose Jaw and the city unions, and between Regina and Moose Jaw. The latter two cities play baseball for a prize of $50.

London, Aug. 12.—Keir Hardie, who is going to Canada to attend the congress of the labor party at Halifax this fall and address a series of labor demonstrations, in addressing an Ayrshire meeting said there was a growing desire on the part of organized labor here and in the colonies to come closer together, and he is going to Canada as a labor missionary of the Empire to try and draw closer the bonds of the working class organization.

though the quantity of the land within the wheat belt was inexhaustible. As a matter of fact, within three years at the outside, if the present rate of settlement continues there will be few homesteads left in the prairie belt between Winnipeg and Edmonton. In view of the fact that the government must have known that the available homestead land was rapidly coming to an end, we have criticized them severely for their lavish generosity in connection with the public domain.

The criticism has centered on three features of their administration:—

1st, the lavish issue of scrip; 2nd, the toleration of fake homesteading; and 3rd, the sale of homestead land to speculators.

Half Breed Scrip.

The original idea of the government in issuing scrip to the half-breed was to cancel the aboriginal right to the land. The Indians were gathered together and, placed upon reservations, they became the wards of the government, but to each half-breed was given 240 acres of land, which he might select wherever he saw fit. Prior to 1896 the Conservative administration settled practically all the legitimate half-breed claims, but when the Liberal government came into power they re-opened this matter and admitted many demands, which had little valid foundation. They even went so far as to give scrip to many half-breeds living in the United States. Nearly 962,000 acres have been thus granted and located since 1896.

Thus there fell into the hands of speculators the right to acquire large tracts of homestead land and many a tract in the most desirable sections of the west is today covered with half-breed scrip, the present holders not tilling the land, but holding it until that which cost perhaps 50c. can be sold for $10 an acre.

This is a great drawback to the bona fide settler who is forced to go far from the railroad, because the land which should have been his is held by speculators.

Bogus Homesteading

We might dwell at some length upon the hardships endured by the homesteader who, for the sake of obtaining 160 acres of prairie land, is willing to perform the settlement duties which the regulations impose. When he has worked faithfully for three years the homesteader is certainly entitled to become the owner of his land, but, as land has grown more valuable, there have been many who have desired to possess it without working for it. These have blanketed homesteads and evaded the performance of their duties. Thus the development of large areas has been retarded. The government has winked at these abuses and their favorites have profited through their indulgence. During several years the Conservative Opposition in parliament has taken up the fight on behalf of the settler. We have demanded that the government should release the lands illegally held and should throw them open to bona fide homesteaders.

We pointed out that 15,000 entries stood upon the books as unaccounted for. We showed by reports from Dominion land agents, which had been garbled and suppressed by the government, that these agents realized the extent of the abuse and demanded their reformation.

The Minister of the Interior declared that there existed no just grounds for complaint. We proved the contrary, moving a resolution demanding an investigation. The resolution was voted down, but the west was with us and finally the Winnipeg Free Press, the organ of the Liberal party admitted in its editorial columns that we were right, publishing this statement:—"In some districts the homestead lands are all tied up. Behind the forms of law, a daring cold-blooded hold-up and swindle is being perpetrated." Then, at last, the government undertook a partial investigation and an inspection was made in four agencies and no less than 1,711 cases discovered where homesteads improperly held down, should be released. Thus was the right of the settler vindicated.

The Saskatchewan Valley Land Deal.

Th! Liberal party in 1893 held a convention at which a platform was drawn up. It contained many planks which were presented to the country as promises to be fulfilled if a Liberal government was returned to power. Among these pledges were to abolish the senate, to reduce taxation and expenditure, to cut down the public debt all of which have been broken. But one of the planks of the platform was the following:—"That in the opinion of this convention the sales of public lands of the Dominion should be to actual settlers only, and not to speculators." We contend that this promise also has been completely shattered. Nowhere is this more clearly demonstrated than in that transaction known as the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company's deal.

In the middle West, between Regina and Prince Albert, there lay a stretch of country which did not receive early settlement. It was regarded by some as semi-arid, but Dominion Colonization Agent Speers one of the best authorities in the west in his time, believed and said that this belt could support a thriving agricultural population. He reported his belief to the government and requested that he be given an opportunity to establish an experimental farm to show what could be done with the land. At that time Mr. Turiff was Land Commissioner of the government. He appears to have turned a deaf ear to Mr. Speers' request. But Mr. Turiff had a brother-in-law by the name of Adamson (they both have since become members of parliament), and Mr. Adamson formed a syndicate for the purpose of acquiring land in the Saskatchewan valley.

First of all the syndicate purchased from the Qu'Appelle Long Lake and Saskatchewan railway their right to select 800,000 acres of land. Now so long as the government had been dealing with it, this railway company had been compelled to select its land from among the areas refused by other railway companies, but, no sooner had Mr. Adamson and his friends purchased the railway right, than it was found that the area of selection had been altered so as to take in what was left of the belt previously reserved for the Manitoba and North Western Railway Company, where there was still available much excellent land, so that it became no longer difficult to satisfy the grant. This kind treatment by the government increased the value of the railway grant enormously.

Nor Was This All.

Mr. Adamson's Company next purchased from the government (brother-in-law Mr. Turiff being land commissioner at the time) 250,000 acres of intervening homestead land which was sold to them for only $1 enacre upon settlement conditions. With the altered area of selection for their railway grant and with the right to purchase homestead land in 63 townships at $1 an acre, Mr. Adamson's company, or as it was called the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company, had a concession of great value. They proceeded to sell the land which had cost them $1 an acre for from $6 to $10 an acre. Within two years all lands bought from the government had been sold and it is estimated that the profit of the company on this transaction reached $1,000,000. Had the homestead lands not been sold to the syndicate they could have passed directly into the hands of the settler. As it is the settler has had to pay from $8 to $10 an acre to the middleman. When the Conservative opposition asked this government how they could justify such a transaction and make it conform with the principle laid down in their convention platform they were silent. It was but one more of the repudiated promises.

THE GRAZING LEASES.

Turning now to an examination of the grazing leases we find a condition of affairs by no means different. It has been generally recognized that the business of ranching is of a more or less temporary character to be continued so long as the land is not required for the settler. Thus it is that the grazing area is gradually shrinking, since on all sides the advance posts of settlement are encroaching upon it. This condition of affairs was clearly recognized by the Conservative government when in power, and all leases by them granted to ranchers contained a clause permitting the government to revoke the grazing privilege upon two years' notice, if the lands were required for other purposes. This law was in force when the Liberals came into power. It was followed for the first few years by their administration. But Mr. Sifton, as Minister of the Interior, had all power placed in his own hands. He gradually acquired the right to decide the terms and conditions under which the public lands should be alienated. He secured power from the cabinet to grant leases from which the irrevokable clause might be cancelled and by which the rancher might be permitted to purchase at $1 an acre one-tenth of his lease-hold.

Then, like William the Conqueror, Mr. Sifton, after the election of 1904, sat down to parcel out his domain among the electoral barons who had rendered service in conquering the west at the ballot-box.

In the early months of 1905 eight grazing leases were granted, to the friends and supporters of the administration, from which was purposely omitted the "revocable" clause. These leases covered an aggregate area of 516 square miles, the rental being 2c per acre per annum.

Let us examine a few of these concessions. First there was a lease granted to C. E. Hall for 60,000 acres of grazing lands in the Milk River country. This lease almost immediately passed to the Milk River Cattle Company, an organization in which A. E. Philp, of Brandon, ex-law partner of Clifford Sifton, is the moving spirit. Another, the lease to the Glengary Ranch Company, was issued because its principal shareholder is a Liberal politician of note, recently nominated in Southern Alberta as a candidate for the Commons.

Story of the Galway Horse and Cattle Company.

Another lease was taken out in the name of H. P. Brown, of Great Falls, Montana, covering 60,000 acres, just west of the junction of the Bow and Belly rivers. The application of Mr. Brown appears to have sped from Montana to Ottawa in the course of a single night, as it is dated Great Falls, Montana, May 26th, and is stamped as received in Ottawa the following day. Immediately upon application the government granted Brown his lease. They then undertook to secure payment of the first half-year's rent. But although they appear to have searched diligently for upwards of two years for H. P. Brown, he never was found during all that time. The tract, however, was reserved for him. No settlers were permitted to enter thereon, although they petitioned for the right to do so. No rancher could graze his stock upon these acres and although no rent was paid the land was reserved for H. P. Brown.

At last, under criticism, the Department of the Interior appears to have concluded that Mr. Brown must be found or the lease cancelled. Then a strange thing happened. A. J. Adamson, M. P., called at the department the day after parliament had risen, and presented a transfer of the lease from H. P. Brown to the Galway Horse and Cattle Company, of which Adamson was practical owner, which transfer Adamson had held for more than a year and on which his company claimed the lease.

The whole upshot of the matter was this—Adamson, under the name of the Galway Horse and Cattle Company, was given an irrevocable closed grazing lease and was forgiven all the overdue rent. Now Adamson did not want the lease for himself. He was a timber merchant from Northern Saskatchewan. But, having acquired the lease he forthwith let it be known throughout southern Alberta that it was for sale to the highest bidder. He disposed of it in this way. A rancher by the name of John Cowdry came to Ottawa in person to obtain if possible, an irrevocable lease. But Cowdry was a Conservative and though he importuned the department for six long weeks, his prayer was in vain. He was finally forced to buy from Adamson, Liberal M.P., the lease which that worthy had no intention of using, for which Cowdry paid a sum exceeding $20,000.

THE IRRIGATION AREAS.

The irrigation area cal also furnish evidence of the carnival of graft existing under the present regime. Southern Alberta with its sunny climate and its mild winters is admirably adapted for agricultural purposes if only water is available for the land. But the individual farmer cannot undertake to bring water to his crop. This is an enterprise requiring co-operation. Hence irrigation works are either constructed by the state or undertaken by corporate enterprise. South of the border the American government has developed much of the land as a national undertaking and has sold it to the farmer at cost. We have rather inclined in this country towards the encouragement of private enterprise. The excellent irrigation law in force in Canada was passed in 1894 when Mr. Daly was Minister of the Interior. When the act was introduced the minister stated that it was "to encourage investment of capital while protecting the individual." This principle is sound—the investor is entitled to his profits but the tiller of the soil should not be compelled to pay an exorbitant price for the land he purchases.

Story of the Robins Irrigation Contract.

On the lines of Mr. Daly's maximum the Conservative opposition, during the session of 1906-7, strongly condemned a transaction put through by the present government known as the Robins irrigation contract. The circumstances were these: Guy Tracy Robins, an Englishman, visited this country in the fall of 1905. He secured from the government an irrigation contract whereby the company should obtain 380,000 acres of land at $1 an acre provided one-fourth thereof was put under irrigation. This tract included the Grand Forks Cattle Company leasehold, so this organization had to be brought into the deal, likewise Messrs. McGregor and Hitchcock. The next that was heard of this transaction was that the Southern Alberta Land Company—a London corporation, had purchased the Robins contract and the assets of the Grand Forks Cattle Company for $1,500,000. Upon examination we found that the Robins Irrigation Company consisted of Messrs. Hitchcock and McGregor, Mr. Sifton's familiar friends and that Guy Tracey Robins had no interest whatever.

This huge amount necessarily must be repaid by the sale of land. Had this irrigation proposition been floated on a business basis the capitalization of the company would only require sufficient money to buy the land from the government and to construct the irrigation works. Had such a course been pursued the land could have been sold to the settler and a handsome profit realized without advancing the price beyond $6 an acre.

As it is, with the great burden of the promoters profits, the land must be sold so as to realize $12 the acre, as the British investor will be disappointed if the lands are not sold at a sufficiently advanced figure to cover his outlay and repay the promoter's profits.

When the government several years ago granted 500,000 acres of land for irrigation purposes to the Canadian Northwest Irrigation Company they put a clause into that contract compelling the company to sell its land, exclusive of water right, at a price not exceeding $5 an acre, although the department officials recommended that such a course be followed in this case, no such clause was put into the contract with the Robins Irrigation Company. There is therefore no limit on the price which the farmer may be charged.

It was contended by the Liberals in support of this transaction that a large sum had to be allowed for promoters' profits in order to interest the British investor in Alberta lands. The Opposition took the stand that Canadians had faith in their country, that, if western land could not be rendered fit for agriculture except at such an enormous sacrifice, it was time that the government of Canada made the land cultivatable and resold to the farmer at actual cost.

THE COAL AREAS.

The Coal Regions and the Speculator.

The coal areas furnish similar evidence of improvidence, favoritism and graft. Although the law contemplated that not more than half a square mile of coal lands could be obtained by one person, Ottawa lawyers, using the names of stool-pigeons, secured and on small payments held for years, large areas, in some cases 50,000 acres and more at a time on behalf of speculative clients. Out of 312,000 acres of coal lands sold and leased not 40,000 acres are held by operative companies and not 10,000 acres are being worked.

Fully three-quarters of the coal belt is today held by speculators, who expect to be bought out by the bona fide coal companies of the future.

There was no excuse for letting these mineral lands of the people pass into private hands before they were accessible and before any attempt had been made to ascertain their value. The bulk of the coal bearing territory should have remained in the hands of the government, as trustees of the people, to be held as a guarantee against monopoly of this great necessity in the future.

The day will come when the short sighted policy that has permitted immense areas to prematurely pass into the hands of the friends of this administration will be roundly condemned by the millions of settlers who must depend on these great national fuel areas fo? their supply.

THE INLAND FISHERIES

Even if we go up to the far north, we find that the fishing of the large inland lakes has also been given away to speculators for a bagatelle.

F. H. Markey, a Montreal Liberal lawyer, secured by Order in Council a twenty-one year lease of extensive waters for a bagatelle. Listen to the list:—Nelson River to the Hudson Bay; Nelson River Bay, 100 miles of shore line; Hayes and Pigeon rivers, their entire length, and Great Slave Lake, a body of water with an area of 10,719 square miles—all this for $10 a year.

Today a large American corporation is shipping out fish from these lakes and rivers, and depleting the waters for the future.

J. M. McKenzie secured the fishing rights of Lake Athabasca with an area of 2,842 square miles, and of Lesser Slave Lake, covering 480 square miles—exclusive privileges for nine years renewable for 9 years more—at $10 per year; and there are other cases quite as disastrous.

The Blairmore Town Site

Did time permit, it would be possible to tell you of the Blairmore Townsite transaction, whereby a Liberal parliamentary candidate, acquired a title which in the first instance was obtained by untrue and fraudulent statements and thus became possessor of a $200,000 town site, in the enjoyment of which he was established by the fact that the Minister of the Interior would not allow the courts to proceed with the case to disprove his title.

CONCLUSION.

What Are You Going to do About It?

To every new nation comes its great opportunity. To the United States it came forty years ago when the rush to the west was in full swing. To us Canadians the awakening has come with the beginning of this new century. We had the experience of those south of the line with their mistakes clearly before us to guide those into whose hands the destiny of our west had been entrusted.

Up to 1900, the lands, forest, coal areas and fisheries of the Canadian west were still in the hands of the nation. The speculator came, saw and conquered.

Today the speculator holds large areas of our agricultural land waiting for his price:—

He holds 50 per cent. of all the timbered regions under lease in the three provinces, which he will not cut over, but which he will sell at many times the original cost.

He holds valuable closed irrevocable leases;

He has acquired irrigation contracts that afford no protection to the ultimate small purchaser;

He controls four-fifths of the coal of the future;

He has secured for nothing and resold for much, the right to exterminate the food fish on the inland lakes.

All this, and more, the speculator has obtained with the assistance and approval of a political party, that in opposition, preached "land for the settler." What are you going to do about it? Re-elect men who have so flagrantly violated their pledges? I hope not. It is time for a change. Put a new set of men in control with a mandate to recover for the people of Canada the lands and resources which through fraud or imposition have passed into the grafter's hands. Let Restitution be your watchword in the next campaign and do not stay your hands till this has been accomplished.

Advertise that property—just to show that you are in earnest about wanting to sell it.

You are paying more attention to something else than to your advertising. Is there a ghost of a "reason why?"

Are "circumstances" managing your store—your affairs; or are you?

Want to sell or buy anything? Say so in a Times classified ad.

Among the "ways" of securing good tenants, classified advertising is first. And it doesn't occur to us that there is any second best.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

(From our own correspondents.)

Josephsburg

Harvesting is now general through out the district. "Heading" machines are in great request. Of course it rains nearly every day, but never mind look at the potatoe crop we'll get.

Ludwig Meyer cut about 50 acres of good fall wheat a week or so ago. It stood about 30 inches high and ought to thresh out pretty well.

Jacob Will bored a hundred feet into the ground recently trying to strike water. Operations took about a month and he has now given up in despair, and will probably try elsewhere.

Who was the reckless cow puncher who rode the livery horse into the grave?

As a sequel to last week's prairie fire, Jacob Schrater was up before Doc. Ferguson last Tuesday charged with being the cause thereof. Const. Harris prosecuted. Poor Jacob was much upset about the business, and after pleading "guilty," and promising to be careful in future, was fined $1 and costs. Civil action will probably also be taken by F. W. Roth. Mr. Martin may also have something to say about it, if he ever comes back?

We are most of us cleaning up our shot guns in readiness for the twenty third, or rather, being law-abiding citizens (in spite of what the police boys say) for the twenty-fourth. Several parties are already being organized. Lord help the ducks.

Mrs. E. Lins was charged on Friday with practising surgery without possessing the necessary papers of registration. She was fined five dollars and costs by Doc. Ferguson, J. P.

Mr. George Mayberry took a string of horses to Irvine last Tuesday. His appearance certainly gave the lie to the rumor that he had been looking consumptive. He is not a bit thinner. He complains of being oppressed with loneliness very often. Go on George, try double harness, you ought to be a good teamster.

"Defence" is occasionally more successful than "defiance." "J. F. O." is still going around with a puzzled expression, wondering how on earth it was done. The case was such a cinch. It is a well known fact that a bull becomes infuriated on being shown anything red. The same effect may be obtained anywhere west of Spring Coulee by simply mentioning another colour—White for instance!

Our popular district jester, the school principal, is visiting at Mr. Crook's ranch on Friday night. The coming a literary scribe. He is being closely watched in consequence.

Mr. White, the lawyer, was down from Medicine Hat Wednesday. He certainly estAblished a reputation around here. No wonder he smiled all the way home.

Who was it who had such a narrow escape in Irvine the other day? They said he was growing horns and a beard and started to impound him as a stray. He got off by "lining up" the crowd at the nearest bar. Even there they opened the windows because they said there was such an odor of "goat". What a shame! Even suppose there was, they might have pretended not to notice it.

A genuine surprise party turned up about bed-time at Mr. and Mrs. Cook's ranch on Friday night. The usual quota of rigs and saddle horses filled the corral and stables. Business started with a man-hunt in the hay barn which was unsuccessful. "Oh lucky Jim." One person got a good sleep anyway. The men were in large numbers and included four policemen, led by the fair-haired Otto ——. There were only a comparatively small number of ladies. These were Miss Calkins, Miss Cairns Miss Heather, Miss Crawford, Miss Jean Calkins.

The trousered part of the entertainment included Messrs. Jim Crawford, C. and A. Pollock, Emil Weiss, Barchel, Harris, Coleridge and Ashe. Deakin Cairns Brothers, and Gray.

Mr. Deakin occupied the exalted position of chair manager. He is generally supposed to pack a note book of ancient and modern jokes, with which he occasionally refreshes his memory. On this night Mr. Deakin excelled himself and he certainly helped to make the evening the success it was. He wears very comfortable slippers by the way.

Dancing and cards were the order of the night, and Mr. Crawford provided music with his fiddle. Bert Gray operated the gramophone with great skill.

Unfortunately the one who is usually the prop and stay of these affairs, was for once moderately silent. We noticed from the start that he seemed unhappy and preoccupied. His usually beaming smile was shut off and his rosy complexion somewhat dulled. Subsequently the reason thereof was whispered to us. We are sure that our readers will agree that it is enough to make any fellow sad, when the damsel of hischoice for the evening, goes off to bed, instead of accepting his escort to a party. Never mind old man even if your manly voice did break with emotion once or twice, we understand. Of course evilly disposed persons might have said it was the choke-cherries, but we know.

Despite this little rift in the lute, we enjoyed ourselves thoroughly, and when at about one a.m. we tendered our thanks to Mr. Crooks, we meant what we said.

It is understood that the Irvine Cop will soon be numbered among the "Ashes of the past."

Seven Persons

Inspector of fireguards, Mr. Sam Carlsen returned home this morning.

Mr. Silander is the new section foreman till the 1st of October, when Mr. Sam Carlsen will resume his old position.

Mr. J. H. Butler, C.P.R. operator at Brooks, spent Sunday with his brother at this place.

Mrs. George Murray and Miss Cargill were in town Monday.

Miss Florence Eagles is a visitor at the Miller ranche.

The showers of the past week helped the appearance of the country very much.

Gros Ventre

The newly erected church edifice of the Evangelical Association was dedicated as Zion church, to the services of the Triune God, on August 9th. The day was all that could be desired and consequently the church was filled to the utmost capacity. Rev. L. H. Wagner P.E., of North West District preached in the morning and also the dedicatory sermon in the afternoon. Rev. J. S. Damm pastor in charge, addressed the congregation in the English language, while Rev. W. Wilhelm assistant pastor conducted the evening services.

The event proved most successful financially. The cost of the building which is valued at $1,500 has all been provided for, half of this amount having been raised during the dedication services, thus placing the congregation in a splendid financial condition.

Another Victim Found

Fernie Victim Relative of Local Man

Mr. C. W. Webb, who has been spending a short holiday at Mr. Huston's ranch at Gros Ventre, was brought back to the city on Friday by tragic news from Fernie, where his cousin, Mr. E. V. Lane was burnt to death. At the time of the outbreak Mr. Lane, who is a rancher but has been following the carpenter trade in Fernie for some time, was working on a building in the west city. His home was in the main part of the city and when the fire broke out Mrs. Lane had to leave with the other refugees who fled from their burning homes. For many days after the catastrophe it was a common thing for members of families to be separated from one another and it was thought by Mrs. Lane that her husband, who remained behind to fight the fire in West Fernie himself, would be safe.

After the heavy rain and hail of Tuesday last, when the smoke had cleared away, Mr. Lane's corpse was found in a shallow well whence he had evidently gone to escape from the flames. He had been suffocated, and his body was practically boiled, but was identified by Coroner Wilkes.

Mrs. Lane left Fernie for the ranch at Cowley on Tuesday night, and on Friday Mr. Webb went on to join his relatives there.

The Man on The Street

Ald. Spencer's suggestion to have a praise service when the water came on was a good one. It was not done on account of the doubt as to the qualifications of any alderman to lead such a service.

It is said the mayor can't sleep at nights for listening to see if the new engines are acting all right.

Another rumor is that as soon as the new pumps had forced sufficient water into the tank, the Mayor and Ald. Forster had a sprint to the standpipe to see if there was any chance of a bath. At any rate they were seen up there with a lantern in the darkness of the night.

When the Medicine Hat contribution reached Fernie a miner was heard to say that he didn't know the latest method of eating flour but he knew it wouldn't mix well with the Calgary contribution.

It was thoughtless of the C. P. R. not to lend Hayes a truck to wheel those trunks over to his house. Imagine a man of his ability having to work!

It is only since the enforced early closing of the bars that stories go around about hail as big as hens' eggs. It takes longer to get over prohibition liquor.

Now the papers say Rev. Hugh Grant of Fernie is the hero of one of Ralph Connor's books. Thought we had all his heroes places a dozen times long ago.

A. B. C. editor has an auto. Any advertiser who can't pay his bills any other way shouldn't advertise so there.

A young fool in London, Ont., tore down the American flag in front of the American consulate. A patriotic young hero gallantly climbed a flag pole in several American cities and tore down a Canadian flag, amid the plaudits of the onlookers. It's only a different way we have of looking at things.

Ald. Hales says Manitoba is going to give a big temperance majority. Wish he'd tell us if the post office is going to be finished in six weeks or not.

The Calgary papers have dropped out again with the name of Mr. Dingman, the man who didn't discover gas in Calgary. Now he's going to give them a Christmas present of gas. His first "discovery" was of much the same nature.

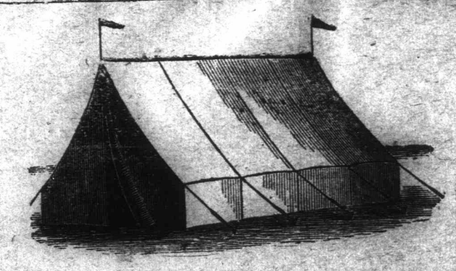
LOUIS MINKLER a Commissioner in and for Alberta

Did you notice at the lacrosse game how, when a player was injured the water pail was rushed down with a man on each side and all the excitement of an ambulance? Then did you notice a man with a little brown valise quietly stealing down the fence in the same direction but with all the secretiveness of a strike breaker eluding the pickets. If you had watched closely (which of course you didn't) you would have seen the water pail discarded carelessly at the back of the group and the little brown valise carried into the centre and swallowed up from view: Perhaps there was a gramophone in the valise or an electric massage brush—or perhaps there wasn't.

It's a pretty cheap sport who can see no plays worth applauding on the side opposed to the one in which he is interested. It is the same kind of a sport who roasts the umpire because every decision does not favor his side, and applauds decisions he honestly believes are wrong.



The lacrosse game won here last week by Calgary has been protested. Jack Ready one of the Calgary players left Calgary to reside in Edmonton some weeks ago, and was ineligible to play under the residence rule. As there is no doubt about the case, the game will likely have to be replayed here in the near future.

A team made up of the Bachelors and Fire Brigade will meet the C.P.R. team in a series of five games within the next two weeks. These ought to be rattling good games. The amalgamated team announce that they challenged the S.P.R. to play a week ago Monday, but were refused a game.

Hatcher was on the Calgary defence in its game with New Westminster and as usual held up his end of the game in a creditable manner. The game was the best ever seen in Calgary, report says, but the Minto Cup holders, although they went right from the train to the game had comparatively little difficulty in showing their superiority by a score of 6 to 2.

Sportsman Review.—Hollis and Graham, pitcher and second baseman, respectively, were last night released by the management of the Spokane team. Hollis is the pitcher brought from Syracuse who did such remarkable work in the Twilight league last year, but has been a fizzle for the Indians this year. Graham is a good second baseman, but now that Altman is here there is simply no place on the team for him.

Artie O'Dea's Brandon bunch have won the pennant in the Northern League. Last week Duluth and Fargo dropped out and that ended the league.

WONDERFUL how time alters things. About ten years ago, when we moved from South Railway Street to our present premises, one of our customers said—"What do you want to move up there for? Can't do business there—you're moving out of town."

Times have changed; conditions have changed; but our present location still remains about the centre of population; and while we would like to put up a sky-scraper in order to keep pace with the times, we have arrived at the conclusion that we will have to be satisfied with a new store front instead.

Mr. Magrath Speaks

Challenges Simmons to Prove His Statements

Simmons in a Tight Box

(Lethbridge News.)

Mr. C. A. Magrath, independent candidate for the House of Commons for this riding, on rising at the Ames meeting on Wednesday night was greeted by the large audience with a round of applause.

"Mr. Chairman and gentlemen," he said, "the speaker who has just sat down has said some kind words about me. I hardly know myself. The other day my opponent also made some laudatory remarks concerning me. He compliments me by insinuating that I am so capable a man as to go to the governments at Ottawa and Regina and flim-flam them into giving me everything I ask.

"You have heard Mr. Ames tonight. Now Mr. Simmons says he is going into the exposure business likewise. He says he is going to show where this company up here hasbeen grafting for 25 years and that I have been the chief figure in it all. He was good enough to say that I am a big enough man to go down to Ottawa and get everything I ask from the government; that I went down there and asked for an irrigation act and they immediately passed one on my representations.

"His statements are entirely without foundation or fact. Such charges are one of the miserable features one has to contend with when one enters political life. I did not go into this of my own seeking. I went into it, only at the earnest solicitation of my friends of years, who said I was doing nothing, I had severed my connection with the A.R. & I., and it was my duty to represent them. Now, no man, who pretends or professes to be a good citizen, who has the interests of the country at heart, can go through this world without facing its responsibilities and so I decided to come out in the interests of the people. Not myself! The people!

"And because of that it is insinuated that I am associated with a company I left eighteen months ago; that I can go to Ottawa and obtain all I want from Messrs. Sifton and Oliver. If some of these slanderers could do the same thing, then I say, 'God help the public domain of this country.'"

"Mr. Simmons undertook at Stirling last winter, to say that he would prove that the A.R. & I. Co., while I was land commissioner had grafted all their lands. Because I go into public life he traduces me and calls me a grafter, and all of thisbecause at the request of my fellow citizens I have stepped out and may possibly block the way of that gentleman so that he cannot be pitchforked any further ahead in the political preferment of this district.

"He is one of those patriotic individuals (a voice "He's a snake!") whose high sense of propriety allows him to sit idly by and allow these grafts to go on for years without saying one word about them, until I appear in opposition against him. And, Mr. Chairman, that gentleman will have to make good his statements.

"The hour is getting late and I'm not going into the matter very deeply tonight, Mr. Simmons, however, has charged that I, in collusionwith Mr. Dennis, was the means of the Irrigation Act being passed. Now, sir, I had no more to do with that irrigation act than any other person in this country. Why does this gentleman say what he does? He knows that there is a certain amount of friction between water users in the south country and the A.R. & I. Co., and he hopes that, by fixing the cause of the trouble on to me, he will make a political capital out of it. That is dirty, mean kind of politics.

"This same gentleman undertook, at a meeting of labor men the other night, as an intelligent lawyer, to interpret law. He stated that the new civil service act applied to the outside service and the post office as well as the inside service. Hearing him make that strange statement, I made a point of looking it up. There are two members of Parliament present, who I think will uphold me when I say that the act applies to the inside service alone. I am right, am I not, Mr. Ames?

Mr. Ames: "Yes, the act applies to the inside service alone."

"He also undertook," continued Mr. Magrath, "at the same meeting to declare to the eighteen men present, many of them drawing their wages from the A.R. & I. Co., that HE was not a corporation man, never was and never would be. No doubt. Corporations are getting mighty particular why they have in to their employ, even though they have the advantage of extradition treaties."

C. A. MAGRATH
Conservative Candidate for Medicine Hat Riding

The Challenge.

Mr. Magrath concluded his address by putting it up to Simmons to make good his charges or withdraw from the contest.

"Grafting in my opinion, is nothing more than sneak thieving. If Mr. Simmons can prove that there is any kind of wrong doing in that company by all means let him expose it; it this political ostrich who gives me credit for being one of the cleverest men in Canada, can make good any charges against me, it is his duty to do so; it is the duty also of the clergymen to uphold and maintain public morality. I am not going to stump around the country answering these 'charges' but—and I do not know the politics of any of the ministers in this city—if he will go before them as a commission and make good any of his charges against me, I have a thousand dollars for four of the churches in the city provided he agrees to withdraw from the contest if he cannot make good. (Cheers.)

"In conclusion, gentlemen, I am not after anything the government has got to give away. I'm in it entirely for the people and for the people alone. If I can serve the people, or the labor men, that's what I'm here for. I've always treated Mr. Simmons as a gentleman (A voice: 'He's not a gentleman, you shouldn't treat him as one)' and any dirty work or mud slinging is not of my seeking. There is a gentleman in this community giving out dense volumes of smoke, ready to burst into a flame of denunciation of me and my methods. Let him go ahead. I'm quite ready for him.

"It's up to you, gentlemen, you who have known me for twenty years you old timers, you who have asked me to represent you to get your necks into the collar and work for me and help me through this campaign.

"I'm quite prepared to stand by the vote of the people; if you don't want me to represent you and vote me down, I won't be sore at you; but I want you to remember that there are ways of keeping men out of parliament besides the vote of the people, and these methods we must be prepared for."

When Mr. Magrath sat down he was greeted with rounds of applause.

And here is the answer of a coward. This shows the weakness of the Liberal candidate, Simmons, the pigeon-hearted.

At a meeting in Taber on Saturday night Simmons arose and candidly admitted by his actions that he was unable to back up what he has been sputtering out at every opportunity. Magrath challenged him to prove his statements and poor, cowardly Simmons backed up and slunk off behind the statement that he "would let the electors decide."

Was there ever anything so grotesquely weak? Was there ever such an exhibition of fear and craven cowardliness? Did any candidate so quickly and eagerly eat his words? A man who lays claim to occupy the highest position we can give him cannot come out in this constituency with charges such as Simmons made against Magrath, and when he is challenged to prove them, slink away like a whipped cur with his tail between his legs, the picture of incompetence and cowardliness—such a man cannot represent us in the Legislative Assembly of the Dominion of Canada.

We want a MAN at least.

Even the members of his own party worth considering, hide their faces in shame at the thought of the man Oliver saddled on to them as a man to vote for.

If Simmons stays in the field after this lamentable weakness, it will not be by the wishes of the local Liberals, most of whom have manliness enough to treat with contempt such a candidate.

Natural Gas

New York Hardware Journal Talks of It

The Hardware Review of New York has published a six page article on natural gas of which a page is devoted to Medicine Hat. The remainder deals with the United States wells and the prospective wells in the Edmonton district. Although no gas is being used in the latter district, and the entire matter is one of hope only, a half page is devoted to what they hope will happen, with figures of the profits they hope will come. There are three Medicine Hat pictures, one of the city from across the river, another at R. A. Winters at a gauge, and the third of the burning C.P.R. well at Dunmore.

The article gives this district the credit of having the largest individual gas field in the world "which is destined before many years pass, to give birth to a giant industrial movement in Alberta Province." Natural gas is called the most perfect fuel that has ever been offered to mankind."

In 1888 the gas consumed in the United States took the place of 18,000,000 tons of coal, but only $22,630,000 was realized for it. In 1895 the value was only $13,000,000 on account of the decline in quantity. In 1906 by the discovery of new wells, and a more businesslike arrangement of prices the value was $46,878,982 for half the quantity consumed in 1888.

The vice president of the West Virginia Board of Trade in an address at Charleston W. Va., said he considered Virginia to have "the richest heritage that has ever been given to any State in the Union." A thousand feet of gas is equivalent to a bushel of coal.

The information about this district was furnished by the Board of Trade.

Y. M. C. Preparing

Plans Being Made for the Coming Season

Preparations are already underway for the coming season at the Y.M.C. The gymnasium floor is being re-oiled and waxed and certain alterations will be made before the opening on the 1st of October.

In the course of exercises the plan adopted last season will be largely followed, in most cases along more advanced lines, and it is Instructor Gawley's hope, that before the end of the winter a bunch of gymnasts normal to any in the West, will be turned out. Exhibitions will be given from time to time, which will form criteria by which the onward progress of the athletes can be judged.

Among the proposed changes is an important one in regard to ladies' night. Hitherto, only a portion of one evening a week has been given over to the ladies' class. In future it is intended to devote to this purpose the whole of the Wednesday evening.

The present membership is over 250, and with the opening of the winter season, a large enrollment of new members is anticipated.

Layman's Missionary Movement

The Executive committee met on Sabbath afternoon and formulated a plan of campaign to be followed in view of the proposed visit to this town, early in October, of the leaders in the movement.

They arranged to hold an afternoon convention and a banquet in the evening at both of which the visitors are expected to speak. We expect J. Campbell White and John R. Mott to be two of the speakers and those who have ever heard of these men and their work will look forward with a great deal of pleasure to personally seeing and hearing them.

A prominent ratepayer who rang up the Times early this morning suggested the formation of a Co-operative Society of water carriers, and the total abolition of the present water (?) system. In view of fact that during the first water-mix-up the water commissioners persistently sawed wood whenever the subject was discussed, it is deemed fitting that the ratepayers should take a turn as drawers of water. With properly organized corps the thing could be simplicity itself. The citizens could line up twice or thrice a day form a living chain from the river to the remotest houses in the city and pass the precious fluid along in pails. this would, moreover, be an excellent fire drill.

Here is a field in which the surplus energy of the C.P.R. machinists might be spent to advantage. If the strike officials and the officers of the C. M. R. could get together the thing might be done. Will anyone make a move?

A citizen of a literary turn of mind turned out this morning with rain-coat and umbrella mumbling to himself the passage from that famous poem "The Old Sailor" by the celebrated Coleridge (or was he a Medicine Hat man?) "Water, water everywhere, but not a drop of—coffee for breakfast."

MEDICINE HAT APPLE CROP

THIS CITY CENTRE OF FRUIT-GROWING DISTRICT

MORE GROWING EVERY YEAR

One of the judges at the successful Horticultural Exhibition held last week in Calgary, stated as his firm belief that the climate of Alberta was capable of producing better fruit than is today grown in British Columbia. He gave as his reason the fact that in this province there is more sunshine and in the irrigated districts there is no difficulty in regard to water supply.

That under proper conditions large quantities of luscious fruit might be raised in Eastern Alberta is amply demonstrated by the fine apple crops which now for several years have been obtained in some of the city gardens.

Especially in the orchard of Ald. McKay an example of what a little care and perseverance may do in this regard. For several years past Ald. McKay has been rewarded by large crops not only of crabs, but of the large varieties, such as the Russian and Transcendent, the Greening and the Duchess. Some of these trees while productive each year, are at their best each alternate season, and this year the crop obtained is probably the best ever grown. The branches of one of the crab trees which in the spring were high enough for a person of average height to pass beneath, are today literally weighted down to the ground. This tree alone is probably laden with two and three hundred pounds of fruit. All the other trees, with the exception of three new varieties planted this spring, are heavily laden.

The three new varieties—Mackintosh Red, Wealthy, and Ben Davis, were in the nature of an experiment as they are the first ever tried in this part of Canada. They have proved themselves capable of that adaptability which Western Canada requires of all who come to make their homes on her fertile plains and give promise of becoming in every sense of the word "desirable settlers." Of these the Wealthy has shown the best growth.

Many of the larger apples in Ald. McKay's trees are over 10 inches in circumference. Some of the best will be exhibited at the Agricultural Fair next month.

Among other citizens who have produced fine apples this season are Rev. A. C. Farrell, Mr. L. B. Cochran, Ald. Morrow, Mr. Porter, Mr. J. A. McDonald, Mr. A. Foster and Mr. J. C. Beveridge.

The Southern Alberta Land Co. has brought to town a quantity of muskmelons, watermelons and tomatoes which have been grown on their ranch at Bow Island.

There are bushels of ripe tomatoes being picked in city gardens during the past few weeks. Everybody is taking to the raising of vegetables, which were previously neglected. Watermelons, muskmelons, tomatoes with currants and berries are easily brought to perfection.

The Star Theatre weekly matinees will commence on Saturday afternoon next and will be continued throughout the fall and winter. Later in the season a bi-weekly matinee will be given, and Mr. McDonald hopes to obtain the services of a number of first class musicians and Vaudeville artists.

The London Exhibition forms one of the most interesting features of tonight's programme.

Our Birthday Week

A Big Paper Bargain to Celebrate

Aug. 31 to Sept. 5 The Times for $1

September 1 is our Fifth Birthday. For that week, beginning August 31st and lasting until September 5th, The Times will be given to every new subscriber for $1.00 a year or $2.00 for two years. Old subscribers must pay all arrears to Sept. 1, to secure this special offer.

In addition to this every fifth new subscriber will receive the paper free for one year, and every fifth old subscriber to order will secure a free subscription for a year to any address outside of the district.

Mail orders will receive the same attention as personal calls under the same conditions. If you want to see how long you owe look at the label on you paper; you owe from the date appearing with your name. City delivery papers are not addressed as yet, the work of a busy office interfering with this to date. However, if you have your paper delivered drop in the office and we will show you how much you owe.

Orders sent by mail from post offices of weekly service can be sent this week or next.

The Times is steadily improving its service, and this is the best $1.00 worth of newspaper in the west.

Help us celebrate.

The School Board

At a special meeting of the school board held last evening in the secretary's office, there were present: Chairman Brotherton, trustees Kennedy, Milne and Colter.

The offer of Aemilius Jarvis Co. of 96 and accrued interest for $20,000 debentures was accepted and the chairman and secretary were given power to issue debentures and fix denomination.

An application for a position on the staff from Mary Taylor, resident in the city was read. It was stated that at the present time there were no vacancies.

Report of the committee which selected Mr. S. W. Hill of Winchester, Ont., and Miss Kennedy to succeed Miss Walker, was read and adopted.

The chairman stated that a ratepayer had drawn his attention to the fact that one room had been dismissed, and had asked an explanation. It appeared that there had been a shortage of teachers for the first few days. At the opening day there were three classes for whom substitutes could not be obtained. The teachers had been unavoidably detained.

New school seats had arrived. These were costing $392.50.

There was a large attendance at last night's meeting of Amethyst Council, R.T. of T. Three new members were initiated, which is practically a weekly occurrence and the Order is being greatly strengthened here due to individual effort. Besides routine business being transacted a delightful programme was given by various members. Next Monday's session has been cancelled to allow the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way the use of the hall to entertain grand officers of the Brotherhoodwho are touring the West.

Police Court Items.

The preliminary hearing in the case of P. R. Fraser, charged with obtaining butter under false pretenses, was noted in last week's issue. The offense was alleged to have been committed last November, when Fraser obtained four pounds of butter from H. W. Ireland's store, stating that it was required for caboose No. 3019. As no evidence was brought forward to show (as was in fact the case) that a caboose bearing that number did not run on the Western division, His Honor dismissed the case.

Another charge preferred against the prisoner had reference to the theft of a pair of trousers from a case in the hands of the railway. It was brought out at the trial that the trousers had been taken from a case consigned to Mr. Johnston, a Fernie merchant (who himself gave evidence and identified the goods as belonging to the same consignment as others received by him) by Darling & Co. of Toronto. The trousers by which he was enabled to identify the stolen pair had been brought up from Fernie at the instance of the chief shortly before the fire. Had the goods been destroyed in the conflagration it is improbable that a conviction could have been made. As it was, he was given 18 months' hard in Lethbridge. He may have to appear again in connection with charges arising out of other goods alleged to have been stolen by him.

All these were found by the chief when the raid was made on Fraser's room in connection with the theft from C.P.R. cars. For this, it will be remembered, he paid an extended visit to Lethbridge at the expense of His Majesty's government, earlier in the year.

Strike News

Men Holding Concerts During Strike

Strike circles have been very quiet during the past week. Men have been brought in from time to time, a large number of these leaving on learning the state of affairs. Yesterday morning three men were brought in and conducted down to the shops by the detectives, and the tickets were unable to obtain an interview.

A big meeting of men connected with all the railroad organizations was held in the Eagles Hall with closed doors on Saturday. Simultaneously or on Friday night in some cases, meetings of railroaders were held at all the points of any importance along the C.P.R. system in Canada.

Meanwhile the local men are making the best possible use of their time. Yesterday a concert was organized and a choice programme rendered in St Barnabas church Sunday school. Tonight a meeting will be held to draw up plans for the Labor Day sports.

The Company maintain an attitude of reticence in regard to statements to the press.

MAGAZINE MEN

SPENT YESTERDAY IN CITY

ENTERTAINED AND ENTERTAIN

Yesterday afternoon 7 of the most prominent magazine writers and editors in the United States visited the city. On delayed No. 2, they arrived at 2.30 p.m., instead of 6.40 a.m., as timed, in the private car of Mr. Dennis, the irrigation officer of the C.P.R.

The party consisted of:

Robert R. Jones, managing editor of the Chicago Inter Ocean. Formerly Washington correspondent.

Richard Henry Little, Chicago Record Herald President of the Press Club of Chicago. War correspondent for the Record Herald in the Japanese—Russian, Phillipine and Chinese wars. Lecturer.

William Hard of Everybody's Magazine, formerly editorial writer for the Chicago Tribune. Political economist.

Hiram H. Greene, editorial writer, American-Press Association. Contributor to Saturday Evening Post and Everybody's. Author of "Frontier Stories" etc. For a number of years editor Bobbs-Merrill Co., publishers.

George D. Richards, associate editor The World To-day, of which publication he is one of the owners.

B. F. Barton, managing editor, Home Herald (weekly) and World's Events (monthly).

Elliott Flower, author of "The Spoilsman," etc. Magazine writer. On his present trip he will gather material for a series of articles for Pearson's Magazine.

Robert Vanderhoof, editor of Canada-West.

The trip was arranged by Mr. Vanderhoof in order to show the travelers the real truth about Canada. It is only one of a number of tours being arranged by the Canada West Magazine. The entire party express the keenest appreciation of Mr. Vanderhoof's work and entertainment.

While here they were entertained by an automobile trip around the city, the cars of Messrs. Tweed, C. S. Pingle, Jenkinson, Yuill and Mitchell being used. The car shops, waterworks and Club were visited and the visitors were delighted with what they saw. Elliott Flower is preparing a series of articles on the trip for Pearson's and the notes he took on what he saw should make a good article on this city.

A banquet was given the party in the American Hotel, at which about 60 sat down. The fare provided by mine host Fleming was a fitting conclusion to a hungry afternoon's sight seeing.

The party left on the east bound, to stop today in Regina.

(Calgary Albertan and Herald.)

The Hat lacrosse team has protested the last game played in Medicine Hat. The reason given is that John Ready, who played with the team, is not eligible.

Jack Ready, next to Allen McDonnell, has been one of the best boosters of the team for the last three years. A few weeks ago he packed his grip and went to Edmonton, not to play lacrosse, for there is no iacrosse team in Edmonton, but to work at his trade.

He found things a bit slack north, and returned, and when he came back, got into the game.

While away he joined no club,

The Hat club hasn't a leg to stand on in its protest.

The Calgary fellows would rather like the protect to go through, so that they would have another crack at the Hat team.

Through the enterprise of the Edmonton Tennis Club, there will be a Provincial Tennis Tournament in the Capital. This club was the original Tennis Club in Edmonton, having now been organized for two years, and has fine grounds with every convenience.

The latest undertaking is the providing of two cups, one being kindly donated by the Edmonton Brewing Co., and the other by Messrs. Blythe and Nash, two prominent members of the club, to be played for in the men's singles and doubles for the championship of Alberta.

The matches for this year will take place on the club's courts here, on Friday, Saturday and Monday, September 4th, 5th and 7th. These dates should be advantageous to all as Monday is a holiday being Labor Day.

The cups are open for competition to any person having resided in Alberta for three months, and application will be received up to August 31st by Geo. H. Adams, secretary, Edmonton Tennis Club, from whom any particulars may be obtained."

The C.P.R. team has lost Macfarlane their swift third baseman of triple play fame. He has gone to the coast.

The Times' suggestions of a professional baseball league for next year have been taken up widely. The Albertan of Calgary now proposes a league of Edmonton, Calgary, Brandon and Winnipeg. That would mean the substitution of Edmonton and Calgary for Duluth and Fargo in the Northern League. It's a safe wager that if such a league is contemplated, the Winnipeg and Brandon clubs will not miss the opportunity of taking in the three cities on the route—Regina, Moose Jaw and Medicine Hat. As a matter of fact, Edmonton would stand least chance of all, on account of its distance. That 700 mile jump from Brandon to Calgary would not be considered without a break. At any rate a city that ran so close to Calgary as did Medicine Hat in point of attendance would not be passed if it were willing to put up a team.

Arrangements have been commenced to have a baseball tournament here in September, and letters have been sent to Calgary, Red Deer, Edmonton, Taber, Lethbridge, Macleod, Nanton, Wetaskiwin, Strathcona, Caron, Swift Current and Maple Creek. Unfortunately cash prizes of $150 and $75 were offered. As this would professionalize the teams the secretary of the Alberta Amateur Athletic Association has issued a letter warning all teams that they will be out of amateur sports if they contend. Fidler has given out the word from Calgary that he doubts if he can come unless expenses are guaranteed. Naturally almost any team would come if they knew it would cost them nothing and as Fidler's team is not an essential factor probably enough of the others will come for the sport of it. It is possible that the prize may be changed from a cash to a value prize.

If the tournament comes off it will be the event of the season as all the teams invited have been putting up fine ball.

The protest of the lacrosse team against the playing of Ready on the Calgary team has been disallowed for some reason. Mr. C. E. Brougham was at the meeting at High River but could not put through the protest.

The Northern League closed on Saturday with two games in Winnipeg. The league has not been a success this year, Fargo and Duluth having to drop out through lack of support. Winnipeg is talking about joining the American Association, but it is certain that an effort will be made to bring them into a Western Canada League.

Mills of Brandon, who is Ford of last year's Edmonton team has been exchangod to Columbus of the American Association for Mencice.

The Medicine Hat Tennis Club is having the third court prepared for the tournament to be held on Labor Day. Mr. J. J. Lait is doing the work.

The C.P.R. baseball team with Lorden and Smith added leave tomorrow on a game trip through Saskatchewan.

NOTICE.

Odd Numbered Sections.

AS already publicly announced, odd numbered sections remaining vacant and undisposed of will become available for homestead entry on the coming into force of the Dominion Lands Act on the 1st September next.

As the records of only the even numbered sections have hitherto been kept in the books of the various land agencies in the western provinces, and the time having been very limited since the passing of the Act within which to transfer the records of all odd numbered sections from the head office at Ottawa to the local offices, it is possible that the transfer of records in some cases may not have been absolutely completed by the 1st September. In any case where the record of any quarter section has not been transferred, application will be accepted but will have to be forwarded to head office to be dealt with.

As it has been found impossible as yet to furnish sub-agencies with copies of the records of odd numbered sections, and in view of the large probable demand for entries, all applicants for entry upon odd numbered sections are strongly advised to make their applications in person at the office of the Dominions Lands Agent and not through a Sub Land Agent. Applications for even numbered sections may be dealt with through the Sub Land Agent as before if desired.

Commissioner of Dominion Lands

The Hound of the Baskervilles

Another Adventure of Sherlock Holmes.

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

Author of "The Green Flag" and "The Great Boer War"

because I received help in the interval from another source."

"Why, then, did you not write to Sir Charles and explain this?"

"So I should have done had I not seen his death in the paper next morning."

The woman's story hung coherently together, and all my questions were unable to shake it. I could only check it by finding if she had, indeed, instituted divorce proceedings against her husband at or about the time of the tragedy.

It was unlikely that she would dare to say that she had not been to Baskerville Hall if she really had been, for a trap would be necessary to take her there, and could not have returned to Coombe Tracey until the early hours of the morning. Such an excursion could not be kept secret. The probability was, therefore, that she was telling the truth, or, at least, a part of the truth. I came away baffled and disheartened. Once again I had reached that dead wall which seemed to be built across every path by which I tried to get at the object of my mission. And yet the more I thought of the lady's face and of her manner the more I felt that something was being held back from me. Why should she turn so pale? Why should she fight against every admission until it was forced from her? Why should she have been so reticent at the time of the tragedy? Surely the explanation of all this could not be as innocent as she would have me believe. For the moment I could proceed no farther in that direction, but must turn back to that other clue which was to be sought for among the stone huts upon the moor.

And that was a most vague direction. I realized it as I drove back and noted how hill after hill showed traces of the ancient people. Barrymore's only indication had been that the stranger lived in one of these abandoned huts, and many hundreds of them are scattered throughout the length and breadth of the moor. But I had my own experience for a guide since it had shown me the man himself standing upon the summit of the Black Tor. That then should be the centre of my search. From there I should explore every hut upon the moor until I lighted upon the right one. If this man were inside it I should find out from his own lips, at the point of my revolver if necessary, who he was and why he had dogged us so long. He might slip away from us in the crowd of Regent Street, but it would puzzle him to do so upon the lonely moor. On the other hand, if I should find the hut and its tenant should not be within it I must remain there however long the vigil, until he returned. Holmes had missed him in London. It would indeed be a triumph for me if I could run him to earth, where my master had failed.

Luck had been against us again and again in this inquiry, but now at last it came to my aid, and the messenger of good fortune was none other than Mr. Frankland, who was standing, grey whiskered and red-faced, outside the gate of his garden, which opened on to the high road along which I traveled.

"Good-day, Dr. Watson," cried he, with unwonted good humor, "you must really give your horses a rest, and come in to have a glass of wine and to congratulate me."

My feelings towards him were far from being friendly after what I had heard of his treatment of his daughter, but I was anxious to send Perkins and the waggonette home, and the opportunity was a good one. I alighted and sent a message to Sir Henry that I should walk over in time for dinner. Then I followed Frankland into his dining-room.

"It is a great day for me, sir—one of the red-letter days of my life," he cried, with many chuckles. "I have brought off a double event. I mean to teach them in these parts that law is law, and that there is a man here who does not fear to invoke it. I have established a right of way through the centre of old Middleton's park, slap across it, sir, within a hundred yards of his own front door. What do you think of that? We'll teach these magnates that they cannot ride rough shod over the rights of the commoners, confound them! And I've closed the wood where the Ferraworthy folk used to picnic. These infernal people seem to think that there are no rights of property, and that they can swarm where they like with their papers and their bottles. Both cases decided, Dr. Watson, and both in my favor. I haven't had such a day since I had Sir John Morland for trespass, because he shot in his own warren."

"How on earth did you do that?"

"Look it up in the books, sir. It will repay reading—Frankland v. Morland, Court of Queen's Bench. It cost me £200, but I got my verdict."

"Did it do you any good?"

"None, sir, none. I am proud to say that I had no interest in the matter. I act entirely from a sense of public duty. I have no doubt, for example, that the Ferraworthy people will burn me in effigy to-night. I told the police last time they did it that they should stop these disgraceful exhibitions. The County Constabulary is in a scandalous state, sir, and it has not afforded me the protection to which I am entitled. The case of Frankland v. Regina will bring the matter before the attention of the public. I told them that they would have occasion to regret their treatment of me, and already my words have come true."

"How so?" I asked.

The old man put on a very knowing expression.

"Because I could tell them what they are dying to know; but nothing would induce me to help the rascals in any way."

I had been casting round for some excuse by which I could get away from his gossip, but now I began to wish to hear more of it. I had seen enough of the contrary nature of the old sinner to understand that any strong sign of interest would be the surest way to stop his confidences.

"Some poaching case, no doubt?" said I, with an indifferent manner.

"Ha, ha, my boy, a very much more important matter than that! What about the convict on the moor?"

I started. "You don't mean that you know where he is?" said I.

"I may not know exactly where he is but I am quite sure that I could help the police to lay their hands on him. Has it never struck you that the way to catch that man was to find out where he got his food, and so trace it to him?"

He certainly seemed to be getting uncomfortably near the truth. "No doubt," said I; "but how do you know that he is anywhere upon the moor?"

"I know it because I have seen with my own eyes the messenger who takes him his food."

My heart sank for Barrymore. It was a serious thing to be in the power of this spiteful old busybody. But his next remark took a weight from my mind.

"You'll be surprised to hear that his food is taken to him by a child. I see him every day through my telescope upon the roof. He passes along the same path at the same hour, and to whom should he be going except to the convict?"

Here was luck indeed! And yet I suppressed all appearance of interest. A child! Barrymore had said that our unknown was supplied by a boy. It was on his track, and not upon the convict's, that Frankland had stumbled. If I could get his knowledge it might save me a long and weary hunt. But incredulity and indifference were evidently my strongest cards.

"I should say that it was much more likely that it was the son of one of the moorland shepherds taking out his father's dinner."

The least appearance of opposition struck fire out of the old autocrat. His eyes looked malignantly at me, and his grey whiskers bristled like those of an angry cat.

"Indeed, sir!" said he, pointing out over the wide-stretching moor. Do you see that Black Tor over yonder? Well, do you see the lower hill beyond with the thornbrush upon it? It is the stoniest part of the whole moor, is that a place where a shepherd would be likely to take his station? Your suggestion, sir, is a most absurd one."

I meekly answered that I had spoken without knowing all the facts. My submission pleased him and led him to further confidences.

"You may be sure, sir, that I have very good grounds before I come to an opinion. I have seen the boy again and again with his bundle. Every day, and sometimes twice a day, I have been able—but wait a moment, Dr. Watson. Do my eyes deceive me, or is there at the present moment something moving upon that hill-side?"

It was several miles off, but I could distinctly see a small dark dot against the dull green and grey.

"Come, sir, come!" cried Frankland, rushing upstairs. "You will see with your own eyes and judge for yourself."

The telescope, a formidable instrument mounted upon a tripod, stood upon the flat leads of the house. Frankland clapped his eye to it and gave a cry of satisfaction.

"Quick, Dr. Watson, quick, before he passes over the hill!"

There he was, sure enough, a small urchin with a little bundle upon his shoulder, toiling slowing up the hill. When he reached the crest I saw the ragged uncouth figure outlined for an instant against the cold blue sky. He looked round him, with a furtive and stealthy air, as one who dreads pursuit. Then he vanished over the hill.

"Well! Am I right?"

"Certainly, there is a boy who seems to have some secret errand."

"And what the errand is even a county constable could guess. But not one word shall they have from me, and I bind you in secrecy also, Dr. Watson. Not a word! You understand!"

"Just as you wish."

"They have treated me shamefully—shamefully. When the facts come out in Frankland v. Regina I venture to think that a thrill of indignation will run through the country. Nothing would induce me to help the police in any way. For all they cared it might have been me, instead of my effigy, which these rascals burned at the stake. Surely you are not going! You will help me to empty the decanter in honor of this great occasion!"

But I resisted all his solicitations and succeeded in dissuading him from his announced intention of walking home with me. I kept the road as long as his eye was on me, and then I struck off across the moor and made for the stony hill over which the boy had disappeared. Everything was working in my favor, and I swore that it should not be through lack of energy or perseverance that I should miss the chance which Fortune had thrown in my way.

The sun was already sinking when I reached the summit of the hill, and the long slopes beneath me were all golden-green on one side and grey shadow on the other. A haze lay low upon the farthest sky-line, out of which jutted the fantastic shapes of Belliver and Vixen Tor. Over the wide expanse there was no sound and no movement. One great grey bird, a gull or curlew, soared aloft in the blue Heaven. He and I seemed to be the only living things between the huge arch of the sky and the desert beneath it. The barren scene, the sense of loneliness, and the mystery and urgency of my task all struck a chill into my heart. The boy was nowhere to be seen. But down beneath me in a cleft of the hills there was a circle of the old stone huts, and in the middle of them there was one which retained sufficient roof to act as a screen against the weather. My heart leaped within me as I saw it. This must be the burrow where the stranger lurked. At last my foot was on the threshold of his hiding place—his secret was within my grasp.

As I approached the hut, walking as warily as Stapleton would do when with poised net he drew near the settled butterfly, I satisfied myself that the place had indeed been used as a habitation. A vague pathway among the boulders led to the dilapidated opening which served as a door. All was silent within. The unknown might be lurking there, or he might be prowling on the moor. My nerves tingled with the sense of adventure. Throwing aside my cigarette, I closed my hand upon the butt of my revolver and, walking swiftly up to the door, I looked in. The place was empty.

But there were ample signs that I had not come upon a false scent. This was certainly where the man lived. Some blankets rolled in a waterproof lay upon that very stone slab upon which neolithic man had once slumbered. The ashes of a fire were heaped in a rude grate. Beside it lay some cooking utensils and a bucket half-full of water. A litter of empty tins showed that the place had been occupied for some time, and I saw, as my eyes became accustomed to the chequered light, a pannikin and half-full bottle of spirits standing in the corner. In the middle of the hut a flat stone served the purpose of a table, and upon this stood a small cloth bundle—the same, no doubt, which I had seen through the telescope upon the shoulder of the boy. It contained a loaf of bread, a tinned tongue and two tins of preserved peaches. As I set it down again, after having examined it, my heart leaped to see that beneath it there lay a sheet of paper with writing upon it. I raised it, and this was what I read, roughly scrawled in pencil:—

"Dr. Watson has gone to Coombe Tracey."

For a minute I stood there with the paper in my hands thinking out the meaning of this curt message. It was I, then, and not Sir Henry, who was being dogged by this secret man. He had not followed me himself, but he had set an agent—the boy, perhaps—upon my track, and this was his report. Possibly I had taken no step since I had been upon the moor which had not been observed and repeated. Always there was this feeling of an unseen force, a fine net drawn round us with infinite skill and delicacy, holding us so lightly that it was only at some supreme moment that one realized that one was indeed entangled in its meshes.

If there was one report there might be others, so I looked round the hut in search of them. There was no trace, however, of anything of the kind, nor could I discover any sign which might indicate the character or intentions of the man who lived in this singular place, save that he must be of Spartan habits, and cared little for the comforts of life. When I thought of the heavy rains and looked at the gaping roof I understood how strong and immutable must be the purpose which had kept him in that inhospitable abode. Was he our malignant enemy, or was he by chance our guardian angel? I swore that I would not leave the hut until I knew.

Outside the sun was sinking low and the west was blazing with scarlet and gold. Its reflection was shot back in ruddy patches by the distant pools which lay amid the great Grimpen Mire. There were the two towers of Baskerville Hall, and there a distant blur of smoke which marked the village of Grimpen. Between the two, behind the hill, was the house of the Stapletons. All was sweet and mellow and peaceful in the golden evening light, and yet as I looked at them my soul shared none of the peace of nature, but quivered at the vagueness and the terror of that interview which every instant was bringing nearer. With tingling nerves, but a fixed purpose, I sat in the dark recess of the hut and waited with sombre patience for the coming of its tenant.

And then at last I heard him. Far away came the sharp clink of a boot striking a stone. Then another and yet another, coming nearer and nearer. I shrank back into the darkest corner, and cocked the pistol in my pocket, determined not to discover myself until I had an opportunity of seeing something of the stranger. There was a long pause which showed that he had stopped. Then once more the footsteps approached and a shadow fell across the opening of the hut.

C.P.A.

I shrank back into the darkest corner and cocked the pistol in my pocket.

"It is a lovely evening, my dear Watson," said a well-known voice. "I really think that you will be more comfortabe outside than in."

How People Meet Death.

(Chicago Inter Ocean.)

Students of human nature will find in the spectacle of the crew of the Gladiator going to their deaths with a song on their lips another proof of the fact that singing is the best outlet for human emotions in the time of great stress and fear. Here were over 100 men face to face with death; land was within 150 yards of them and they might have been excused had they broken ranks and dived into the sea. Instead of that, however, they stood shoulder to shoulder, singing the well-known song, "Sons of the Sea." Of course, the reason why human beings sing at such a moment as this is because it steadies the brain and prevents dangerous thinking. Many a time a song has saved hundreds of lives when nothing else could have done anything.

The Gladiator incident recalls in some features the great disaster of 1852, when the troopship Birkenhead in St. Simon's Bay, near Cape Town says London Chat. There were 635 persons on board, including the crew, several detachments of soldiers and women and children. Although it was quickly seen that the vast majority of those on board must perish, there was never the slightest approach to panic. At a word from their officers the troops assembled on deck as if on parade, and when the command was given to lower the boats for the women and children the soldiers sang "God Save the Queen," not with the object of staying their own fears, but merely to cheer up the passengers as they descended into the boats. Probably the world has never witnessed a more heroic episode than this—the passing of more than 400 heroes to a grave not away from the doomed ship she in the sea. Shortly after the boats sank, and out of a total of 638 lives only 184 were saved. England may well be proud when she can produce such men as there. They made the annals of their country richer by a story of almost superhuman courage.

A few years later discipline of the Birkenhead sort saved over three hundred lives. The ship was the Sarah Sands, and she set sail from ortsmouth with 300 soldiers and a large crew. Suddenly the cargo, part of which was ammunition took fire, nd it seemed impossible to overcome it. The officers, however, resolved to fight the flame, and there was no attempt to desert the ship The troops were assembled on deck, and from time to time detachments were called to help in the work. But it was a long battle. A barrel of gun-powder exploded, and no sooner were the flames beginning to tire than the ship experienced a terrible gale. Despite all this she reached the Mauritius without having lost a life, the improbability and stolidity of the troops having saved the vessel when the slightest of panics would have destroyed all chances of life.

The recent wreck of the Berlin provided another instance of the power of the human voice. All through the long night, when the ill-fated passengers were fighting against the tempest and the extreme cold, a lady who had just fulfilled an engagement at the Covent Garden Opera House, sang at intervals all the sweetest songs in her repertoire.

9 years ago a boat load of women and children listened amid darkness to one of their numbers who found in song the best solace for the dangers of the deep. They had been on the ill-fated Stella, and during their wanderings in the over-crowded boat helpless and in direst peril, they were cheered by the high-spirited girl who sang them back to courage and hope.

On the occasion of another shipwreck the chief distraction from the worries of brooding over a death was provided by a clergyman who sang comic songs and accompanied himself on the piano.

It is not often that anything humorous is chronicled concerning a shipwreck, but there is a story told of a certain actor who found himself in this unpleasant position. When the ship struck the rock his first thought inclined to prayer. But the only part of the prayer book that he knew was "a man may not marry his grandmother," and he kept repeating this until Providence in the shape of a tugboat arrived and took him off.

Mining disasters resemble shipwrecks in respect of the means employed to steady the nerves. Thus when 50 men were buried alive in a mine in the Rhondda Valley they sang "Lead, Kindly Light," until death claimed fi6 of them. Then at Hanstead, while the anxious crowds were waiting for news of brothers, sons and husbands in the pit below, they sang various hymns including "Abide With Me" and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." It was singing, singing all the way, until hope had to be abandoned and bitter tears replaced the half hopeful, half depressing hymns.

It is curious how seldom men cry when sentenced to death. Some curse a few grin, the majority remain passive, but they all go to the scaffold resigned to their fate. It is the other way with the judge, who generally feels more than the prisoner the terror of the moment. The late Lord Brampton, when Justice Hawkings, had the reputation of being a very hard man; yet he was more than once driven to tears when sending a man to execution.

There was a case about 12 years ago. The scene was the courthouse at Winchester; the time, Christmas eve. Just a few minutes before midnight the judge began to pass the sentence of death on the wretched creature in the dock. Strangely enough, the candles in the court began to go out, one by one, as each word dropped from the frozen lips of the presiding justice. Before the fatal words came the judge was shedding bitter tears of agony; the man in the dock was smilingly indifferent, having recovered his nerve in a wonderful short time.

One of the most terrible of problems is what to do when two or three persons are alone in a boat in the open sea, slowly starving to death. This was the puzzle set to three men and a boy who escaped from a wreck which occurred a little over three years ago. There had been no opportunity to collect provisions, and, as the boat was 1,500 miles from land, the quartet soon felt the pangs of hunger. They went without food for three days, and then the captain suggested that they should draw lots and kill one of their number.

The horrible plan was rejected by one of the survivors, but the captain went crazy from starvation, and one night he murdered the boy. The body had no sooner been eaten than a German ship picked up the three men and eventually landed them at Liverpool. The story of the crime leaked out, and two of them were placed on trial, found guilty, and sentenced to death. But there was no intention of carrying out the extreme sentence, and they paid for their mad act by undergoing six months' imprisonment without hard labor.

Those who have taken part in a battle have confessed that were it not for the shooting and the noise they would lose their nerve and run away. There is always an interval of cowardice in the soldier, but it is quickly overcome, and he fights grimly, unmindful of impending death. Bands were, of course, invented to raise the spirits of soldiers. Martial music has done a great deal in saving campaigners. Nobody can fight in a cold blooded manner, and in the excitement of a general engagement the most nervous of fighters recovers wonderfully.

Men win the Victoria cross by deeds they would not accomplish had they time to think. Lord Roberts is afraid of cats, and cannot stay in the same room with one, yet he won several V. C's. In the old days soldiers fought to the accompaniment of battle cries, such as "St. George and Merry England," and "For God and St. Denis," to give a specimen of English and French courage as they really were.

Arguments in Anticipation.

Its makes very interesting reading—the remarks of the Liberal paper before Ames holds his meetings, and the comment of the same paper after the meeting.

As a rule the Liberal paper in the town where Ames is to speak devotes several days' editorials to a pre-meeting discussion of what is going to take place at the meeting. Almost any old thing can be said then, since no one has heard the address, and almost any old thing is said. The stock arguments that have been handed out by Ottawa are repeated and the thing looks quite plausible—until Ames appears.

When Ames' stereopticon views come out, the weakness of these arguments is amusing. They are not to fit the case at all. The result is that most of the Government papers have no remarks whatever to make after the meeting, or they mumble and stutter and end by saying it is all scandal. Those who keep quiet give the best signs of intelligence. Those who attempt to show after the meeting that no corruption exists have their feelings further hurt by the laugh they raise.

Some of the stock anticipatory arguments are worth reviewing.

An attempt is made to rouse western sentiment by saying Ames, an Easterner, is trying to show Westerners that he knows more about Western lands than we do. Such a bit of pettiness shows in itself how weak the Liberal defence is. They refuse to discuss the question on its merits. However, the answer to this is only necessary to say that Ames does know a great deal more about Western timber lands that we do; and a great deal more about the Western timber land grafts. Is there one of us who knows anything about the timber, hundreds of miles north of Prince Albert or Edmonton? Ames has secured photographs of these and having spent a lot of time upon collection information about them is more in touch with their value than any of us are. That's surely reasonable. But Ames does not pose as knowing more about these lands, but as having found out more about the land grafts. Where is the grafting done, but in Ottawa, when Ames sits through the sessions that discuss the grants?

The same style of vituperative argument, and just as great evidence of weakness is the statement that Ames poses as an "apostle of purity." Strong argument, that!

Quite a lot is made of an article in the Boston Transcript from the pen of E. W. Thomson, a man who is simply repeating the same argument of the Government written by a man who probably never heard Ames' exposure in the House, and certainly never heard Ames' Western address. He says Burrows secured only nineteen out of twelve hundred limits put up for sale. But he forgets to add that Burrows secured nineteen out of twenty for which he bid. And he now owns 549 square miles of timber lands besides his interests in 1000 acres held by companies in which he is interested. Also the Imperial Pulp Co. secured every limit upon which it tendered.

Thomson wants to know how Burrows was enabled to bid higher by honest means and says that sometimes one method is suggested and sometimes another. He offers this as a proof that no dishonesty was there.

The Liberal papers says business procedure was followed every time. Would a business man put up for auction an article no body could see in the time given? Would he offer for sale an article upon which he knew only the seeker could have any idea of? Was it honest business to demand that tenders be made out in a certain form which includes the price twice, and then accept tenders which stated no price whatever but merely the checks?

They point out that certain Conservatives secured limits when their party was in power, and in some cases gave up as valueless the very limits now under discussion. When the Conservative Government was in power a grantee had to erect sawmills and work the limits. With railroads so distant this was found unprofitable to holders and the limits were given up or cancelled. As a matter of fact although 130,000 miles had been given out under the Conservative rule only 1700 miles were retained by the grantees and think of comparison of land values of fifteen years ago with now.

They want to know why other tenders didn't appear if the price was so low. If a man offered a gold mine for sale and allowed no one to see it, how much would he be offered for it? That's what happened in the timber limit cases.

They say methods of sale were similar in practically every respect as those of the Conservative Government. Simmons says the methods were different. As a matter of fact Sifton did change the regulations so that a grantee can hold his land just as long as there is timber on it, and that alteration is well known.

They say that the limits are being worked according to regulations and that this means lumber for the country, etc. The fact is that only thirty per cent. of it is being worked at all.

And they clinch it all by saying it is only slander, anyway. Sure thing! It's slander to find a man robbing your safe and to let him know you caught him. It is slander to attempt to prevent his getting into it again. Why certainly it is slander to speak of any of the doings of the Liberal Government in anything but the sweetest terms.

But it's on "slander" the Liberal Government is going to defeat. And Ames is one of the leading "slanderers" helping on to this defeat. Give us more Ames.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Lethbridge Council has instructed its Chief of Police to enforce the by-law that stipulates that awnings must be seven feet above the sidewalk. Walk down Toronto Street here on a sunny day and see how many awnings one has to dodge The same orders here would make a big improvement.

Every year a lawless gang of harvesters come west from the Maritime Provinces. Every year there hasbeen more or less rowdyism on board, but this year report makes it a disgrace to Canada. With the experience of this crowd which the C.P.R. has had they could have appointed constables who would have prevented most of it.

There is not another town or city in the West which has in proportion as much building going on at the present time as Medicine Hat. Three big store blocks, two hotels, two public buildings and a few score houses is a record that cannot be beaten. A visit to a neighboring city the other day showed the difference immediately. Medicine Hat is situated so favorably that financial stringency has the minimum of effect upon it. With the money tightness now almost over there will be a further increase in permits, although this will be limited on account of the lateness of the season. Next spring there will be another boom in this city that will only be surpassed by that of 1906 in that there will be more judgment used. Property will be bought with an eye to its real value, not with the thought only that some other fellow will be fool enough to pay more later on.

That kind of thing has had its death-blow; which is a good thing for the West. The foolish speculator with a little money is the man who was largely responsibly for the quiet spring.

The merchants are still interested in the cash system. Events of the past year have done more than any amount of argument could accomplish, to convince them that cash is not a matter of argument but of sound common and business sense. The exchange of money for goods is the only business idea. The purchaser should not receive without giving. That seems reasonable. If the merchant were doing a banking business, a regularly defined lending business, the exchange of goods for notes properly secured might be understood. But what other business gives value for promises only?

Why should the merchant, in all justice, give without receiving at the same time? Why should the merchant provide you or me with a living at our commands, when we have not provided for ourselves by having the cash on hand? Suppose the merchant came to us and ordered $50 in cash, for which at his future convenience he would give us goods! We'd rather squelch him. And yet it is precisely the same as we expect of him.

The poor Council! Some people seem to expect the Aldermen should bear the responsibility of every inconvenience in the city. Last week the support of a woman, one who had been living with a man who is now serving a term for stealing was brought up. Things are coming to a fine condition for creatures of this sort if they can openly live with men when times are good, and then when misfortune comes can depend upon the community giving them a living until times pick up.

Laurier is to tour rural Western Ontario during September, but will miss the cities. As Inwood, the Liberal general secretary says: "We could pack Massey Hall or a ten-acre field by bringing Laurier to Toronto, but what's the use."

That's what Toronto thinks of Laurier—an interesting man to listen to, but a bad man to vote for.

After the scheming and machine-work of the Saskatchewan Government it is a sign of the strength of the Opposition that Haultain secured as many seats as he did. Actually the Government pretends it has consolation in the fact that it has as large a proportion of the seats as in the last House. A Government that cannot increase its lead when it almost doubles the number of seats and re-distributes the whole Province to its liking, is on its last legs.

The Provincial Medical Association showed its sense by taking down the barriers that prevent a doctor practising in any of the Western Provinces. It would do a lot to dispel the idea existing in the minds of the public as to the pettiness of the Association rules if it took steps to opening all Canada to the medical profession of any province.

Simmons is into it heavily now. At a labor meeting the other day he rashly made some charges against Mr. Magrath. The dignity and self-control of the Conservative candidate led poor Simmons, the Liberal standard bearer, to allow his bad temper to get away with him, and he evidently thought Mr. Magrath would sit quietly under it. However, the latter has now come out with a challenge which Simmons dare not ignore or he will lose all the respect and confidence of the electors.

At the Ames meeting in Lethbridge Mr. Magrath offered $4,000 if Simmons can prove any charge of graft against him, the city clergymen to act as judges, the money to go to the churches. In addition if the charge is proven he will drop out of public life, and Simmons must drop out if he can't prove the charge.

Now Simmons, it's up to you. You've got to prove it or crawl in and show yourself the mean, cowardly accuser that you are. Medicine Hat constituency doesn't want a man who makes charges he is afraid to follow up.

This looks like old times. The Times had more enquiries for rooms and houses to rent, last week, than it has had for eight months.

The Dominion Government deserves credit for their evident desire to give publicity to the new homestead regulations. Conservatives as well as Liberal newspapers have received a short contract for advertising the odd numbered sections. The advertisement appears in this issue of The Times and should be carefully read.

The more one finds out about the waterworks system the more one wonders what Mr. Owen the sanitary engineer must have been taking before he gave a reported local interview saying that our system was simply perfection. In spite of it all the Council has found it necessary to order an expenditure of $2,300 to connect the hill-climbers directly with the stand pipe. Now it hasbeen found necessary also to change a six inch pipe to an eight inch in order to get water to the hill.

Did Owen say all he is said to have said?

Japanese want Longer Legs

The remarkable degree of thoroughness that Japan has determined to achieve in all things that pertain to her own efficiency and advantage as a nation is nowhere more conspicuously illustrated than in her unique efforts toward increasing the stature of the people.

Compared with Europeans or even Chinese the Japanese as a race are short and under weight. To account for this physical peculiarity various reasons have been advanced and as many corresponding antidotes suggested or prescribed to remedy the defect, until the movement has attracted the attention of the leading physiologists of the world.

Some of the best authorities among the Japanese themselves have ascribed the slight physical nature of their race to the sedentary habits that for ages have prevailed among them. Apart from those engaged in the more muscular forms of industrial activity the average Japanese performs his daily task in a sitting attitude, and this obtains even in the hours of rest, for in a Japanese house there are no chairs, the members of the family squat on their heels on the floor after the fashion of their ancestors from time immemorial.

The Japanese professional man and the man of business maintain this posture day after day and month after month through the years; many a merchant spends the greater portion of his life in this position, not rising even to wait on a customer, as he keeps a boy to hand him the goods in demand. And what is true of the commercial classes is equally true of the artisans and craftsmen that make up so large a proportion of the native population.

Though the agricultural classes naturally show a greater degree of muscular development, the nature of their labor is too much on a line with that of beasts of burden to allow of a properly developed stature.

In the opinion of other physiologists however, the deficiency in Japanese stature is to be attributed to some inherent characteristic of the race rather than to any effect of habit or environment, much as these may modify the original tendency.

It is argued that though the Italians, for example, are shorter than other Europeans, no one would think of attempting to account for it by instancing the domestic habits of the nation. Moreover, it requires no great familiarity with ethnological history to see that some races are evidently built upon a smaller model than others.

But it is quite consistently Japanese to discredit any theory that would ascribe race defect other than remedial causes. Pessimistic as the Japanese are in matters of philosophy and religion, when it comes to things material they always present a most optimistic attitude.

The Japanese avowedly holds that his slight stature is due to some cause over which he has control and that therefore by taking thought he can reverse the decree of Scripture and add the longed-for cubit to his stature. Accordingly the native physiologists who have given most attention to this subject acquiesce in the prevailing opinion that the national shortness of stature is the result of doing without chairs in the homes and without counters and desks in shops and counting houses, probably assisted by want of a proper attention to diet.

Legs the Main Deficiency.

To substantiate the results of this diagnosis attention is called to the fact that it requires only a superficial examination of the average Japanese physique to see that the main deficiency is in the length of the legs, the trunk always comparing favorably with that of the average native of Europe or America. Hence it is concluded that if the lack is only in the legs the cause must be attributed to a wrong use of these that they have become mere appendages only because they have been regarded as such for generations by a large part of the nation, and that if Japanese legs are but subjected to the same degree of exertion as that indulged in by foreigners they will attain an equal elongation in time.

Those most familiar with the physical characteristics of both races will readily admit that it is only when standing that the Japanese appears shorter than the average Anglo-Saxon; seated at a table or in an audience there seems to be no marked diversity in height. Nor is it contrary to the experience of men of science of human stature should be usually due to some abnormal condition of the lower limbs.

Among the giants of all races it is generally found that the extraordinary development is in the legs and feet. While a dwarfed condition of body is not always due to lack of leg development among foreigners it frequently is, and this is especially so among the Japanese.

This question of size was first taken up by the Japanese army surgeons, who were interested in securing recruits of suitable stature and development for the ranks. After a long experience of examining men for military service and a careful comparison of results with similar experiences abroad, the Japanese medical men became convinced of the necessity of making the matter a subject of national importance until now there is a well marked determination to leave no means untried to make the Japanese soldiers physically equal to the European regular.

Consequently the medical staff of the Japanese army has for some years been putting the native soldier through a strict course of gymnastic and dietary discipline insisting that the movement be carried into the homes of the people until all should be obsessed with the desire to grow tall or produce a progeny with this qualification for civilization.

Mothers and nurses are being advised not to carry their babies on their backs, as the custom is deemed sufficient to account for the prevalence of bandy legs among the Japanese. The nation is besought and the soldiers are required to sit on something higher than the floor. The kind and quality of the exercise and diet for the army and navy are carefully regulated to comply with foreign customs, in addition to the special expedients for increasing stature.

It is interesting to note that these experiments are regarded as on the whole satisfactory. The army surgeons aver that in the few years that they have been able to give proper attention to the subject the physical condition of the Japanese soldier has shown marked improvement and that even an appreciable increase of stature can be noticed.

This frank endeavor after so extraordinary an achievement as an increase of stature does much to dispel the impression that the Japanese are for the most part a nation of mere imitators, with a conspicuous lack of inventive power. If we except Dr. Shimose, who invented the famous explosive to the destructive effect of which Japan owed so much of her success in the late war, and the university professor who invented her secret system of wireless telegraphy, the nation has not shown any great talent in this direction.

Yet in all its uses of Western inventions are never exactly the same as in the process of adoption there is always a conspicuous tendency to adaptation, which in some cases amounts to marked improvements on the original device, if not a real invention.—Standard.

The City Fathers

A special meeting of the council was held at 8 o'clock on Friday evening. There were present: the Mayor; Alds. Baker, McKay, Morrow Forster, Tweed, Huckvale.

A resolution commending to the government the change of lands requested by the Southern Alberta Land Company was passed by unanimous vote of the members of the council present, and will be forwarded to the Minister of the Interior.

The question of the assistance in the treasurers and clerk's offices and storekeeping, came in for a lengthy debate. The Mayor said that the clerk at the present time was in great need of assistance in getting out the voters lists, but was unable to get any help as Mr. Charlton was doing stores work. At the time the extra help was acquired it was thought that Charlton would have time to do in addition, all the extra work in the offices. The offices expenses were now very heavy and still growing.

Another matter for investigation concerned the payment of the Canada Foundry workman by the city. In going over the city pay role it was found that 40 cents per hour was being looked up to this work. On enquiring the Mayor was told that this was being done at the instance of the water commissioners. The engineer had said that he was keeping the time separate, but it had nevertheless gone down on the pay roll. He thought the matter should be adjusted, either by a special committee or the water commissioners, and a thorough understanding in regard to payments arrived at.

Ald. Baker drew attention to the fact that the contract called for the installation of the engines by the company, and the running of the same by them for two weeks. If the man engaged on installation wanted help, he should have notified the company.

Ald. Huckvale: "Their representative must have asked for more men."

Ald. Baker: "That's what someone ought to know."

Ald. Huckvale stated that the engineer had informed him that the Canada Foundry Co. were being charged up for the men.

The matter of the office help and of the payments to the Canada Foundry Company's man and laborers was referred to a special committee consisting of the Mayor and Alds. Baker, Huckvale and Tweed.

The owner of the property next to the city hall had asked that some of the city's material be removed from the road. It had been said that it was intended to fence up the property, but the Mayor was informed that the only desire of the owner of the lot was that he should have more room for his stuff. If the property ever did come to be fenced up, however, it would be necessary for the city to get a new place for stables. The present situation was a bad one any way.

This led to a discussion of the pound question, and there were several suggestions as to its removal. The whole business was referred back to the license and police committee to report at the next regular council meeting.

At last an explanation was provided for the water anomaly, that while the stand pipe might be full the high hill dwellers were sometimes without a water supply, while at other times, when the stand pipe water level is low the hill supply of water is adequate. According to Ald. Huckvale's explanation the reason for this is that the six inch main now supplying the city is too small. The main from the pump house to the standpipe is ten inch, from this the 6 inch main is taken off at a point on Esplanade. In the morning before the lawn service hours expired, the demand was so great that the water never reached the houses at the points furthest from the source of supply. After lawn service hours the supply was good. An eight inch main now being put in to replace the smaller one would make the system satisfactory.

H. C. Cooper reported on the transportation of railway men on the Coleridge bus, that without the bonus of $2.00 per passenger he could not continue to carry the railway employees at present rates. The cost for the month during which the bonus was paid was $62. Referred to finance committee.

John McRae notified the council that as he was leaving the city next month he would have to resign his position. Matter of tenders for new team referred to fire, water and light committee.

Ald. McKay, brought up the matter of sidewalks which were to have been finished last year, notably those by the new post office. He wished to know if a loan of $3,000 could be arranged for at the bank and work carried on.

No definite action was taken.

Just write on a post-card, "Send Booklet A," and mail to nearest branch. The rest we'll gladly attend to.
—Just how correct principles say it should be constructed?
—Just why no other plan of construction will do?
—Just wherein lies its ability to be easy on fuel, quick in action, simple in operation?
The story is briefly told in a little booklet called "Furnace Facts." It's not an advertisement. No furnace name is mentioned, and you can read the whole story in 5 minutes.
To the party contemplating purchasing a furnace it points out the snags and pitfalls, and shows exactly what to demand of an architect, contractor or dealer, in furnace construction and installation.

Color-Blindness.

(Scientific American)

When you stand upon some mountain top gazing at the wonderful display of colors emblazoning the western horizon just after the fiery globe of the sun has sunk from sight, do you ever wonder whether the friend by your side sees precisely the same thing? When you see that stream of red in the sky, what does he see at the same time? Something beautiful, no doubt, and something he calls red? When he points admiringly to another point of the sky, and you join in his wonder and enjoyment, is it just the same sensation that is produced in both minds? These are questions that can not be answered with certainty now, and perhaps science may never be able to do so. Still, we continually assume that what one person sees or hears or smells, another perceives—the one sensation being the duplicate of the other. And there is a very great probability that this assumption is correct or approximately so.

But John Dalton, the celebrated originator of the atomic theory, had a vivid awakening on this subject in his boyhood. While he was watching a British military display, he wondered at the comments made on the gorgeous red coats of the soldiers. When he asked wherein the color of the coats differed from that of the grass, he was answered with derision. Then he awoke to the fact that his vision was different from that of others. He was what we now term color-blind. This was a new thing then. In fact, it was the researches of this same distinguished man that attracted the attention of the scientific world to the subject. He described his own case with great minuteness and care, and compared it with other cases. Pink appeared to him by daylight nearly equivalent to sky-blue. Crimson was muddy-blue.

The subject of color blindness has attracted a great heal of attention from Dalton's time to the present. This has been due in part to the fact that colored signal lights are in common use on shipboard and in railway service. Hence the subject has assumed a practical aspect.

It is interesting and rather curious to know that few women (less than one per cent) are color-blind. On the other hand, about three or four per cent of males have this defect of vision. Color-blind persons are not all affected in the same way. Thus Dalton was red-blind, while Prof. Nagel of Germany one of the principal investigators of this subject at the present time is green blind. These are instances of the two great classes constituting well nigh the whole number of those affected. There are in addition a very few cases of violet blindness and total color-blindness. Persons blind to one fundamental color are technically called dichromats. Those who have no color sense, but perceive merely differences of shading, are called monochromats.

There are numerous methods of testing for color-blindness. One of the most popular is the Holmgren test. In accordance with this method, the subject has placed before him a large number of skeins of worsted colored a great variety of shades. The person being examined is requested to sort the shades, placing those belonging to a dominant color together. If he is a typical red-blind person, he will put the red shades with the grays, unless they contain more or less yellow. The greens he will put with the yellows, unless they contain blue. If he is green-blind, he may be expected to have a tendency to put the greens with the grays and the reds with the yellows.

Such persons are evidently unfit for an engineer's position in the railway service. The railways accordingly seek men without these defects.

The subject is of importance to the traveler because the night signal for danger is a red light, and that for caution is a green one. As an engineer has a number of duties to perform in addition to watching for signals, and as the signals, moreover may appear under very unfavorable circumstances, it would seem to be the greatest of follies to put in charge of the engine a man who doesn't know red or doesn't know green when he sees it.

But is it enough merely to eliminate the man who is distinctly color-blind? Prof. Nagel has called attention in a very emphatic manner to the unsuitability of a class of persons intermediate between the normal and the color-blind. These would be able to pass the usual tests. At the same time, under unfavorable circumstances they are liable to make mistakes in distinguishing colors. Some of these unfavorable circumstances are precisely those which occur in practical railroading. Thus a very faint light or a number of differently colored lights shown simultaneously lead to errors. And Even when the correct decision is ultimately reached, there is frequently so much vacillation and hesitation that the swift and unhesitant decision that may become necessary at any moment in the engineer's job is something not to be depended upon. These abnormals (or color-weak persons) should not be employed in a position where lives may be lost through their inability to read the signals with quickness and certainty. In fact, when we consider that signals must often be read through smoke and rain, or hail, or snow, or mist, and that they are often obscured through discolored glasses and on account of dimly-burning flames, we feel that none but the very best of normal eyes should look through the windows of a cab.

Prof. Stratton of the Johns Hopkins University has been bringing a strong indictment against the lights themselves, even in the case of the normal eye. Thus, the light of safety is the so-called white light; that is, the ordinary house light uncolored. When such lights are out at locations on the road where they should be burning, the engineer should suspect something wrong. As this light is precisely the same as that used for ordinary household purposes, there is always present the danger that the safety light may in reality be out, but the engineer may think it is burning and that consequently all is clear because he sees some other light which in reality has nothing to do with the railway service. This is not merely a theoretical objection. Several cases of wrecks are cited due to this cause.

The green light—warning to be cautious—is very susceptible to the smoke. This constant incident of railroads has the effect of rendering green lights pale and sickly. They are then liable to be mistaken for white that is for a safety signal. The point is obvious.

The objections against the red light are peculiarly weighty. This is the danger signal. Accordingly, there should be nothing weak or uncertain about its note of warning. The color itself is good. When brilliant it is very effective. But, in order to get a red light, a piece of red glass is placed in front of a colorless light. The red glass arrests all the rays from the colorless flame except the red ones. These it permits to pass through. And thus the light appears to shine with a red glow. But this effect has been secured at the expense of a great loss of intensity. The rays which have been stopped and not allowed to pass are of course ineffectual in acting upon the eye. Only a remnant (that is to say the red rays) of the light proceeding from the flame actually reach the eye. It is calculated that the intensity should be about one-fifth. But actual tests show that the red was weaker than even this paltry amount. Apparently, the tests have been made with lights barely able to be discerned. Outside, where smoke favored the red, it was found necessary to increase the red to about fifteen times the intensity of the white light in order to render it visible, and in the laboratory to about eighteen times. But these are best results. On the average, about thirty to one is the ratio.

Prof. Stratton advocated discarding the color system in favor of signalling by a movement, of the light, or by showing signal lights which depend upon their form for their significance. The suggestion is made in connection with the latter to use the horizontal, the slant, and the vertical lines. With incandescent lines of considerable length and marked intensity, this would seem to yield a capital system.

How Grafting is Punished in England

Would it were so in Canada

Grafting is severely punished in England, as is evidenced by the sentences recently imposed on ten Mile End officials who were found guilty of conspiracy and corruption as guardians of the poor fund. This is the way justice was meted out to the offender:

Hirst—Fined £250, and to serve two years hard labor.

Warren—Fined £250, and to serve one years' imprisonment.

Gould—Fined £ 25, and to serve fifteen months' hard labor.

Gilder, Ridpath, Stammers, Loftus, Trot—Each fined £25, and to serve nine months' hard labor.

Gilson—Fined £250, no imprisonment.

The jury has been absent an hour and seventeen minutes in considering their verdict. They found the defendants all guilty generally, both of conspiracy and receiving gifts corruptly; but in the case of Gibson they recommended him to mercy.

Addressing the accused, Mr. Justice Phillimore said a great part of their punishment had already come to them in having their conduct held up to the scorn of their fellow citizens. "You must have suffered a great deal in this; but now the jury have sealed your shame, which is worse for you still. But I cannot let it rest there. It is time corrupt proceedings of this kind were stamped out with a firm and vigorous hand, and that when at enormous expense to the country ten men like you have been brought to justice you may not vindicatively be made examples of to deter others doing the like.

"First of all I shall order you all to forfeit your rights as citizens, and as the law allows I order that you shall not be elected or appointed to any further office for the next seven years. I also order you to forfeit any public office you may now hold.

"In the second place, I should like to order you to refund to the body you have defrauded all the money or rewards you have received; but I cannot do that, as the amount cannot be ascertained, and also if I did, it would ruin some of you past redemption. I shall, however, fine you and the way the fines will be enforced is this, that you will remain in prison till they are paid."

"The Tempter."

Dealing with the prisoners individually the judge addressed Gould. "You are," he said, "an old man, old enough to have known much better. I regard you as the tempter. Very likely but for you this young man (Calcutt) would never have been led into the trouble in which he has been led. But for your age I should give a long sentence. You will pay a fine of £25, and also be imprisoned and kept to hard labor for fifteen months.

"Kemp, you have followed a bad precedent, but your guilt is not so bad as that of the others. You will be fined £25, and imprisoned with hard labor for six months.

"Loftus, Ridpath, Stammers, Trott and Gilder, you will each be fined £25 and imprisoned with hard labor for nine months.

"You, Gilson, the jury have recommended to mercy, and I shall not in your case enforce imprisonment. You will be fined £250, and I understand you have the means to pay. You will however, remain in prison till the money is paid.

Hirst "Leader of the Ring."

"Hirst and Warren, you are old guardians, and you are leaders. I can find no excuse for you, Hirst. You have thrice been Mayor of Stepney, and, by virtue of your office, a magistrate; but you have taken a prominent part as a leader of the ring. I believe you have received great advantage from those proceedings, and I shrewdly suspect you have made advantages out of the other contractors and contracts. You will be imprisoned with hard labor for two years, and will pay a fine of £250

"I am very sorry for you Warren, after the character you have received from Mr. Corrie Grant, M.P., and others; but you were not only wicked yourself; but counselled others in your dangerous ways. You are a dangerous man, and have lent the sanction of your respectability to what has been going on. You will be imprisoned for one year, and will also pay a fine of £250.

Mr. Hawke asked leave to appeal in Hirst's case on the ground of misdirection by omission, and also against the sentence, but said there might be other grounds.

Mr. Justice Phillimore: That application I refuse.

The judge mentioned that he had received a letter from Hirst's son remarking that it was somewhat irregular for it to have been sent. He allowed Hirst's son to see his father.

The passing of these sentences was received, with two exceptions, in painful silence. As the judge passed sentence on Gould, saying that, but for his age, he would have had a longer sentence, the white head never moved. Quietly he passed to one side.

There was an attempt at applause when his lordship said that Gibson would be let off the imprisonment; but this was followed by some sensation when a fine of £250 was imposed, the defendant to stay in prison until it has been paid.

There was a cry like that of a wounded animal when Hirst was sent to prison. It came from one of defendant's sons, who was led stumbling out of court. Hirst looked stunned. As he was proceeding to the stairs he turned three times with the evident intention of speaking, but no word came forth.

The Old Gentleman—You're got a lot of nerve to come to me for assistance with your face all disfigured from fighting. Why, you're nothing but a bruiser.

DIDN'T NEED IT.

Dog Fancier—Let me sell you a watch dog.

The poet—Nothing doing. I keep the wolf at the door usually.

THE RABBIT

I dreamed one night that a Welch rabbit,
One ought to be one to love fun;
Yet I changed my mind when I woke up,
For I'd certainly hate to be one.

Deacon Hayrick—Niver mind, Miranday, the good Lord will provide.

Mrs. Hayrick—Yes; but Ezra, you waste too much time praying for provisions.

CORRESPONDENCE

(The editor is not responsible for the opinions of correspondents; nor does he always agree with them.)

To the Editor of The Times.

CANADIAN PHONETIC SOCIETY

Dear Sir,—Since residing in Canada, I have been much interested by correspondence with Phonographers writing Isaac Pitman's shorthand in England and the United States. I believe there are large numbers of Canadian settlers, who, in the old country, belonged to correspondence circles for the exchange of letters or post cards, using shorthand as the means of written communication. These circles keep alive the interest with those who practice the art in such a way that they do not forget the valuable study of earlier days. For those capable of writing shorthand, opportunities occur, when least expected, in a country such as ours. Many a young man, to my own knowledge, has found his first real success attributable to an unexpected opening occurring where his stenographic ability was the means of introduction.

In the thinly populated districts, a letter received is an event of the day. I have recollections of walking on the prairie several miles of an evening to the nearest post office, and remember the pleasure or disappointment that accompanied the receipt or non receipt of a letter from home or brother shorthand writer. Letters received by mail enliven the solitude of country life, while the settler can in reply tell his friends in distant parts of conditions which interest and often prove of greater value than merely interesting a correspondent by the recital of a story.

Again, in towns and villages, stenographess will receive a benefit by getting in touch with a wider world than their own, and may learn of more progressive centres of industry quite apart from the hobby side of shorthand writing, in their correspondence. Not Canada only, but England and All English speaking colonies may furnish their quota and so the choice open is very wide. With the means available, such as picture post cards and photography, there should be no difficulty in creating a chain of mutual interests which might lead to life friendships. I have for many years corresponded with phonographers I have never met, and to whom I feel as attached as if they were from my old home. Shorthand has been a hobby with me and has, further, been of inestimable profit as well.

I have now letters from a number of English speaking correspondents in England and other countries who would be pleased to correspond for mutual benefit and recreation with Canadians and Canadian settlers. Thus the idea of inaugurating the Canadian Phonetic Society originated. The first annual list of members will be published in a few weeks, and I should be glad if any Pitman writers interested would join us. The subscription is nominal, being only 25 cents per annum to cover cost of issuing and posting the annual list of members with their addresses and a half yearly issue containing changes of addresses and new members.

I trust you will be able to give publicity to this matter, which I believe will be of real value, and for which favor I offer you, in anticipation, my best thanks.

HARVEST HELP.

The Department of Agriculture is endeavoring to secure a share of the harvest help coming to the west this season. Arrangements have been made with the railway authorities to ticket a sufficient number of harvest hands to Alberta points to secure a safe harvesting of the crop. The Department has sent a representative to Winnipeg in order to see that the Province gets its fair quota of men and also to prevent a larger number going to any one point than is necessary to meet the demand. As these men will be only ticketed to the station, farmers requiring help should leave their name and location with their nearest railway agent or arrange with friends in town to secure and send out to them the help they need.

IN LABOR CIRCLES

This department is given over to labor interests in Medicine Hat, to use as they see fit—discussions of labor subjects, notes of events in the labor world, and notices of meetings, etc. The editor does not assume the responsibility for the opinions expressed or the news sent in for publication, except in so far as he must eliminate libellous or personal discussions, and place some limit on the space used.]

Winnipeg, Aug. 17.—An official statement of the attitude of the strikers in the Allied Trades against the C.P.R. has been made by J. H. McVety, secretary of the organization. The men consider it the clearest statement of their attitude that has yet been issued. It reads as follows:

The strike of the employees of the Canadian Pacific is the result of the attempt of the company to cancel agreements and to change rules in force for a period of ten years.

In order to comply with the law, the men asked for the appointment of a board under the Lemieux Act to investigate the demands of the company. When the board was first appointed, considerable delay occurred in considering whether the Eastern line questions should be considered by the board, and the decision being in favor of considering all questions whether east or west, the company withdrew their representative from the board.

Further delays occurred here, due to efforts of the Government to have the company suggest someone else as their representative, G. F. Galt finally being appointed by the Government, but in reality by the company, his name having been suggested by their officers as chairman of the board.

During the investigation of the western line questions every opportunity was given the men to place their evidence before the board, but the decisions were apparently made with an entire disregard of evidence, making the findings farcial and leaving the contestant in the same position as before the board was appointed.

The decision purports to be against a reduction of wages, but in reality 75 per cent. of the boilermakers employed are reduced 8½ per cent. by an apparently innocent clause, classifying the men. The evidence presented on this, as on the apprentice clause, was altogether against the finding, it being clearly shown that no precedent exists for classifying boilermakers, or for a ratio of apprentices. Long years of experience show that with this ratio the boys do not receive a proper grounding in the trades.

The western men have made no demands on the company and are engaged in trying to hold the schedules obtained during the past eight years. A policy of compromise had evidently been adopted by the board and their findings removed many of the rights conceded by the railway companies throughout the continent for a considerable number of years.

On the eastern lines the men had asked for a shorter work day with the same pay per day, but the policy of compromise vanished entirely when considering the question, the board ruling against the men although no evidence was heard, the board refusing to go to Montreal or to allow the men to bring witnesses from Eastern Canada to Winnipeg.

The company had asked no change in the East, but the board decided that the concessions made to the company in the West should also apply in the East, thereby reducing a large number of men on their own initiative.

If this legislation is to continue in force, the schedules of the men may be entirely wiped out in the course of a few years, merely the company asking for their total abolition and the boards' adopting a policy of compromise and taking away the important clauses, one or two at a time.

After the decision had been rendered the men attempted to open negotiations with the company, but their efforts have been unsuccessful, the company having decided to put the award into force at once.

Rather than accept the sweeping changes recommended the men decided by a vote of 99 per cent., to strike to maintain the existing conditions and the walkout has been very satisfactory to the committee in charge.

While the strike is a great national disaster, it has been undertaken not to obtain new conditions, or increase in wages, but to hold the present schedules, and in the interests of the public the committee hopes for a speedy settlement, one they can honorably accept.

Toronto, Aug. 17.—James Noonan vice-president of the plasterers' union was seriously stabbed by John Flynn, a plasterer's laborer, on York street today. The two had an argument in a York street saloon with unionism as the bone of contention. When Noonan came out of the hotel Flynn, who had previously been put out, knocked him down and stabbed him in the head, face and shoulders. Flynn was arrested and Noonan was taken to St. Michael's hospital. His injuries are serious.

Stettin, Germany, Aug. 20.—The 8,000 riveters who have been on strike in the Vulcan shipyard here for shorter hours and higher wages have decided to return to work. Thus is averted the general lockout threatened by the Associated Metal Industrialists of Germany, which would have thrown 60,000 men out of work and interfered with the Government's naval programme.

New York, Aug. 21.—A general strike of the members of the United States Brotherhood of Tailors was ordered at a meeting of the general executive board of the brotherhood held here tonight.

Michael Price, secretary of the board, announced that 30,000 tailors in various parts of the country would be idle within a week unless the demands of the men were granted.

Reduction of wages to a point where the men contend that it is impossible for them to earn a living is given as the cause of the strike order. The demand is for a 20 per cent. increase. Immediately following the issuance of the order, 1,000 workers in this city were called out. This will tie up 67 shops here, it was said

The Difference

What a Liberal Magistrate Will Do

The Saskatchewan elections have brought two libel suits in both of which Premier Scott plays a part Laird the defeated Haultain man in Regina is pushing a case against him for alleging graft when Laird was Mayor. Then Scott has an action against Macdonald the Provincial Rights organizer because the latter said Scott had shares in the Saskatchewan Valley Land Co.

Out of both of them Scott would now be glad to crawl, and the magistrate almost enabled him to do so. In the two cases the conduct of Scott and Macdonald as defendants and of Scott and Laird as plaintiffs is a revelation of the kind of man the premier is.

In the Laird case Scott's lawyer tried every means to get Scott off without trial. Even the magistrate said that no proof of publication had been made when all Scott did was writeout the telegram. He contended childishly that the operator was the publisher. Scott's lawyer took every advantage of this but was argued down by precedent. Other technicalities were tried but in spite of it all the magistrate was forced to send him up for trial. Scott had been talking loudly before the elections about wanting to be brought to court to prove his charges, but as soon as the elections were over, he tried every means to squirm out.

In the case of Scott vs Macdonald Scott's lawyer tried to postpone the case as he claimed he needed witnesses. Macdonald's lawyer, however, said no witnesses were necessary as his client acknowledged publication and again made the charges and would not hide behind any technicalities. Magistrate Trant, evidently a good Liberal, made some slighting remarks. Mr. Macdonalds lawyer insisted on repeating the charge and said his client was only desirous of proving it.

Altogether Scott seems in for a strenuous time of it.

THAT DROUTH

(Scientific Farmer.)

To anticipate a drouth and for a time to really feel that thousands of acres of wheat are being ruined is very heartrending; but to really realize that the drouth is on and the destruction of the crop is complete is even more serious, especially if the affected country covers considerable scope. The writer has been much interested in the newspaper comments and reports the past year in regard to this matter in different portions of the country. During the entire period since July 1907, there has been some portion of the semi-arid country facing a drouth and business has been more or less affected by the newspaper account and grain prices have fluctuated just in accordance with the crop prospects. The following paragraph from the Minneapolis Tribune of July 14th, followed big headlines which read, "Wheat Climbs as Rain Holds Off. No Rain in Sight."

"The critical situation that has developed in North Dakota west of the Red River valley was intensified further by weather predictions that failed to hold out any promised relief in the shape of rain. It is generally admitted that damage has resulted already, and every day that prolongs the drought impairs the condition of the standing grain. At the present time the area of serious damage is confined to sections around Jamestown and Devil's Lake, but the whole country west of the valley is dry, and apprehension has set speculation in a fine frenzy."

This is about North Dakota; but at one time just a little while ago, it was western Kansas and eastern Colorado, then Washington and Oregon. Early last spring the whole country from the Gulf coast up into Alberta, Canada, and the Pacific slope was watching and hoping for rain. Trade generally was waning. Then came the floods and all over the winter and spring wheat belt came rain in plenty, and this was followed by business revival in a great wave. Then just as suddenly the turn was too dry and hot. At each and every turn in the weather the business of the country was unbalanced.

Is it necessary that the farmers prosperity be thus affected and the business interests of the country be compelled to fluctuate as the barometer rises and falls? No; the balance wheel can be made to vibrate more evenly and the hour of seed time and harvest bemore regular and substantially equal and sure.

We have been for a number of years trying to prove to the farmers and the public generally that this system under which we have a wave of prosperity followed by one of depression filled with possible and sometimes horrifying, yea too often heartrending, disappointments, is really and truly the result of ignorance of the true principles of scientific soil culture.

The great movement now being promoted by the Campbell Soil Culture company cannot yet be more than meagerly appreciated by the public. We are not impatient because of the slowness of the people generally to grasp the true immensity and broadness of the enterprise, for we are aware that it is a revolution. It is in fact a new era for the farmers, yea more, it is the dawning of a morning that shall enable them to reach the high standard socially and financially that they are entitled to by virtue of their calling.

With the demonstration farms at intervals between the Gulf coast and Canada we will be able to show thousands by practical demonstrations and results, not only that much larger crops can be grown but that large yields of all crops can be got rain came at just the right time or rain came as just the right time or not. In short we will be able to show that man practically has control over the yielding powers of his soil.

With the Scientific Farmer we can detail the facts and information by both word and photograph; and then through the correspondence school the farms and their practical results again come in with facts and figures to prove the correctness of our teachings, aiding us to establish that because the semi-arid belt has less rainfall and somewhat more untimely some years it does not necessarily follow that the crops in such years must or will be anything like a failure.

A Colorado Experience.

A friend sends us a clipping from the Pueblo Chieftan of Pueblo, Colo., dated June 23 last, and calls our attention to what he regards as pretty positive proof that the Campbell system is a dead failure in the semi-arid regions of the country. The clipping tells of very hot and dry weather in southern Colorado during the month of June prior to date mentioned. It is stated in the article that for eight months, or from October 25, 1907 to June 23, 1908, there was no rainfall of any magnitude and the precipitation was but 30 per sent of the normal or average. The statement also contained this:

"The temperatures of the last few days, ranging at the maximum from 95 to 97 degrees, are not abnormal but the dryness is causing much loss and damage to crops. The amount of moisture in the air is surprisingly small and the result is that the streams which were not already dry are disappearing; farmers are having trouble in irrigating their crops where they have water, and the dry farmers in many instances are going out of business. The season so far has proved disastrous for the dry farmers and has, up to the present time, supported the contention of the department of agriculture that dry farming has not yet reached the scientific maturity which will guarantee crops in the very dry years, but that only in certain seasons can good results be obtained. Not all of the dry farmers will be driven out, however, as many of them, even if they do not succeed this year, will simply wait and try it again. A number of the most successful, in Pueblo county, have, however, given up hope for crops this summer. The farmers with water to irrigate their land are complaining loudly that the atmosphere is so dry that water turned into fields disappears as if by magic. Those who took advantage of the winter to thoroughly soak their ground before time to put in crops are getting the best results at present."

Need More Knowledge.

Our good friend who has furnished this as evidence that the method of farming the dry country as it is taught in scientific soil culture is a failure, has in fact furnished us with what we regard as the best evidence in the world of the great need of a study of scientific soil culture on the part of those who are trying to farm the dry lands of the country.

The distinction is in what is called "dry farming" and true scientific soil culture.

The conditions as found about Pueblo as related in a local paper in June are not exceptional. Such conditions are found frequently in all parts of the country. But the so called "dry farming" will not meet the conditions there. In fact it takes something more than that.

This is doubtless true that a great many persons have been engaged in the vicinity of Pueblo in what they call "dry farming." They have actually been doing good farming. They have spent more time and applied more labor to their farm operations than ever before. They have done just such farming as will bring results under the most favorable conditions. So long as they have had these most favorable conditions, they have been able to get good crops.

Then comes the drouth and they find that they are not prepared. If they could have prepared themselves as they might have done, by the thorough tillage of the soil with special reference to conserving the moisture, and thus have had stored deep down in the soil a quantity of moisture much greater than that found under normal conditions, they probably would have been able to tide over the drouth of June until the midsummer rains came.

Another Dakota Example.

Again we find, at a later time, the following newspaper special despatch dated Pierre, S.D., July 17, telling of conditions as found there:

"Farmers from the country north of this city estimate that wheat has been damaged probably 50 per cent. by the intense dry, hot weather of the last ten days. While there were good rains about the fourth of the month, at some places reaching over two inches, the weather has been such that it had little effect, only showing for a few days. Some of the estimates will not admit asmuch as 50 per cent. damage generally, but do admit that much in many fields, with others in better shape. Corn and flax, it is claimed, are not yet injured, but are at a point where they will need rains at an early date to bring them through to maturity. In the country west of the river the situation is not so bad as on this side of the river, but the whole of the central and western portions of the state are at a point where rain is needed to insure a crop for the year. Even with the heavy rains of ten days ago the intense heat since that time has cured the prairie grass to a point where it will burn, and a fire swept over a tract of country north of Capa."

After reading the above we feel like exclaiming, When will the farmers understand they can control the effect of such climatic conditions as are described here. Just think of a condition where in 12 days after a 2 inch rainfall the crops are again suffering from lack of moisture; this, too, in face of the fact that that abundant rains fell in the months of May and June!

Time to Know the Truth.

The conditions described are in accord with the expectations that naturally follow because of the idea literally forced into the minds of the people all over the west through circumstances that have been convincing; but is it not high time that the truth was known, especially when the truth means greater and surer crops and increased wealth to us individually and collectively.

If these American farmers had 250,000,000 bushels more of wheat and corn to export, they would receive this year about $180,000,000. Of this the railroads would get about $75,000,000 for hauling it to market. A very large portion of the $180,000,000 would be used by the farmers in improvements and the purchase of manufactured goods would help to pay many workmen, salesmen and other employes necessary in the manufacture and handling of these goods and implements. This increased number of employes, together with the increased number of railway employes necessary in the traffic and kindred labors in the handling and hauling of this grain would add still further to the home consumption of farm products as well as consuming more factory products. So we might go on to an almost unlimited chain of increased prosperity.

Profit to the Farmer.

There is also another side to this subject of increased average and certain yield of grain through knowledge of tilling principles. The greater the yield of grain per acre the cheaper is it produced per bushel and consequently the greater is the farmer's profit.

But, says the man who is not up to date in the science of soil culture, to do this would cost more in labor, and the profits would be eaten up. Even some of the representatives of the Department of Agriculture insist upon this point and to illustrate it they say thereis no advantage in getting gold dollars if they cost $1.05. This position is all wrong. The idea is actually holding down the average yield of the great prairie states and decreasing the farmers profit.

The great secret, if such it may be called, of scientific soil culture lies very much in doing what is done at the right time and in the correct manner than in the increased amount of work.

Follow the columns of Campbell's Scientific Farming through the year and see if we are not only correct but modest in our claims when we say that the average yield of the fields can be doubled by the crops grown in the most unfavorable seasons.

The condition referred to in the South Dakota dispatch should never occur and would not if the farmer was posted in physics and soil tillage. The average professional man would be run out of the country if he conducted his business with as little regard for science as the average farmer.

FALL WORK IN SOIL CULTURE

August is the month that the average farmer gives little attention to his soil. The crop has been practically grown for this year, therefore why spend any time on the fields now?

There is no month in the year that good tillage means any more than in August. If the work is done timely and intelligently many bushels can be added to next year's crop whether it be fall wheat or spring planted crops.

In a large portion of the semi-arid west we can almost invariably count on a good rain in this month. If the surface of the soil is loose when this rain comes so that the water will all readily soak down into the soil and then the surface is again loosened up as soon as the soil will permit, the farmer may be able to bring up the crop next spring and keep it growing healthy and rank until the May or June rains come, loosened up as soon after. The result is a big crop, while if no attention is given to the August tillage the rain will be lost, resulting in nearly if not quite failure of the crop.

This was especially true in much of the winter wheat belt in the autumn of 1900, 1903 and 1907. Where proper precaution was given to the fields in August and September of these three named years the crops of 1901, 1904, and 1908 were good when adjoining fields not thus treated were nearly or quite an entire failure.

Are you desirous of growing a good crop in 1909? Then begin now to make it possible.

Remember that the physical condition of your soil governs the yielding powers. As the time approaches for another crop think seriously, frequently and long of the following three fundamental principles if you expect a big crop:—

First—Soil must never be plowed when wet or dry but always when moist.

Don't say this is impossible, for it is quite possible. Just put your thinking machine to work as to how. It is one of the most vital questions you have.

Second—The lower portion of the newly plowed soil MUST be reduced to a fine and firm condition at the earliest possible time.

There are many reasons why this should be done. Think of it. Observe your fields and study why. Many a crop of both spring and fall wheat has been cut in the middle because the lowest part of the furrow slice is too loose. Why?

Third—The surface must always be kept loose. To this important fact are also attached many reasons, which will be detailed later on. Remember that the soil must be moist when plowed, the bottom firm and the top loose.

H. W. CAMPBELL.

SUMMER CULTURE.

(Scientific Farmer.)

During the writer's recent trip through the western portion of the Province of Alberta, Canada, we noted several fields where farmers were, as they supposed, following our plan of summer culture and yet were disappointed in the apparent possible results as compared with adjoining fields where they had put on lesslabor. The difficulty invariably was found to be a loose condition in the bottom or lower part of the soil. One field we were intensely interested in, as similar complaint had been made at several points. The various attempts were the result of our advice given in the lectures we gave them in June 1907.

In every instance where the work referred to had been undertaken they had not listened to our lecture of 1907 but had our 1907 Manual, in which we refer to the necessity of a fine firm under portion or bottom the plowed portion of the soil is nearly every chapter; and yet upon this point did they all fail.

In only two instances did the parties have a sub-surface packer, and the difficulty in one of these cases was largely due to omitting the roller when he [illegible] the breaking of his sod. The [illegible] was about three inches [illegible] one fairly early in 1907, [illegible] left just as the plow le[illegible] a month later it was [illegible] and 30 days later it w[illegible] or plowed a second tim[illegible]s deeper. At this plowing [illegible]ce packer was used eac[illegible]s the plowing was done [illegible]er followed with the ha[illegible]armer remarked that he [illegible] a nicer looking field; bu[illegible]ng crop was only fair, no[illegible]n on a field where the land [illegible]roken and then simply dou[illegible] and harrowed.

Where was the trou[illegible]n-tleman was agrieved. [illegible]ed he was following t[illegible] system. His neighbors we[illegible]ing his field and early in J[illegible] fields looked better than h[illegible] near the last of June all his neighbors were having fun at [illegible]pense.

Because he did not roll his h[illegible]ing he left the sod more or kinked. Wherever it was thus k[illegible]ed and laid up from the subsoil below it did not rot or decompose in the least. It had simply dried out. In the process of double-disking this dry hard soil was cut up into innumerable lumps the size of your fist down. Then in plowing a second time these lumps went to the bottom.

In the use of the packer these hard dry lumps of sod would not and could not be pulverized and made fine and firm, therefore at the very point where the roots should grow prolifically and obtain plant food in abundance the condition was all wrong. There was too much air for the amount of moisture and the soil could not carry sufficient moisture. The water came from the subsoil below very slowly because of the numerous large pores in the soil. A perfect root system could not be established.

In short, with all the extra work this farmer had still left the soil in such a physical condition that even a good crop was impossible without the most favorable season. When we showed the gentleman the real condition of his soil and why, he admitted the fault was his, but said his mind was on doing certain mechanical work but did not grasp the reason or importance of rolling the breaking.

Moral: Be sure you get that certain ideal condition of the soil and don't trust to the passible effect of certain mechanical work. The secret of success lies mainly in doing the right thing at the right time, be it little or much.

HOW ZAM-BUK SAVED A GIRL'S HAIR.

A Lesson to All Mothers.

When eczema, ulcers or ringworm break out on the scalp, generally the first thing the doctor orders is to have the hair cut off. Don't do it before trying Zam-Buk, which can cure without such a sacrifice. Mrs. J. Butler, of 5 Bannockburn Avenue Montreal, says:—

My daughter, Annie, caught eczema. It broke out on her face and scalp, and the disease was quickly transmitted to Herbert and Edith, and in their cases not only their heads but their hands and faces were covered with sores and scaly places.

I tried various blood-purifying remedies in vain and then consulted a doctor. He applied all kinds of lotions but the sores remained the same He next ordered that the hair be all shaven off from the girls' heads in order to get down to the disease on the scalp. They each had nice long hair and I thought it such a pity to cut it all off. I refused. He thereupon withdrew his services altogether.

After that I bought first one thing and then another,, but it was all no good until we got Zam-Buk. That proved equal to the case and in a few weeks it cleared every trace of skin disease from each child. With it in use there was no need to cut off the girls' hair or take any other extreme measure, it just went to work and healed the sores in fine shape.

Zam-Buk cures blood-poisoning, cuts, bruises, old wounds, running sores, ulcers, boils, eruptions, scalp sores, eczema, itch, barber's rash, burns, scalds, and all skin injuries and diseases. Best cure for piles yet known. All druggists and stores at 50c. a box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

In only two instances did the part es have a sub-surface packer, and he difficulty in one of these cases was largely due to omitting the roll- r when he the breaking of his od. The r was about three nches one fairly early in 907, left just as the low le a month later was and 30 days ter it w or plowed a econd tim s deeper. At his plowing ace packer as used eac s the plow- g was done er follow- d with the ha armer re- arked that he a nicer ooking field; bu ing crop as only fair, no on a ld where the land roken dthen simply dou and rrowed.

he was following t stem. His neighbors wa his field and early in J lds looked better than h ar the last of June all his ighbors were having fun at nse.

Because he did not roll his b he left the sod more or ked. Wherever it was thus k and laid up from the subsoil be w it did not rot or decompose in e least. It had simply dried out. the process of double-disking this y hard soil was cut up into in merable lumps the size of at down. Then in plowing a secon me these lumps went to the bot m.

In the use of the packer these rd dry lumps of sod would not d could not be pulverized and ade fine and firm, therefore at the y point where the roots should ow prolifically and obtain plant od in abundance the condition was wrong. There was too much air the amount of moisture and the il could not carry sufficient mois- re. The water came from the sub- il below very slowly because of the merous large pores in the soil. A rfect root system could not be es- blished.

In short, with all the extra work is farmer had still left the soil such a physical condition that ev- a good crop was impossible with- t the most favorable season. When showed the gentleman the real ndition of his soil and why, he ad- itted the fault was his, but said s mind was on doing certain mech- ical work but did not grasp the ason or importance of rolling the eaking.

Moral: Be sure you get that cer- in ideal condition of the soil and n't trust to the passible effect of rtain mechanical work. The sec- of success lies mainly in doing e right thing at the right time, it little or much.

The Man on The Street

It is said that the campaign button is passing away. With it should go the fire-crackers, the megaphone, and the election stumper.

Count Tolstoi took a bath recently and the veins in his foot swelled up. The hill climbers have swelled heads because they can take a bath—occasionally.

Upon special request The Times will publish the News authentic report of Owen's eulogy on our waterworks system, in order that the hill-climbers may not feel that it is any fault in the system that continues to deprive them of water.

Wonder of wonders! A Southern Alberta paper reports Duncan Marshall, the political mountebank to have given his hearers more than a lot of stale jokes in a recent speech at Magrath. Actually he talked a little politics!

Motherwell had those notorious election crooks "Bob" Emmis and "Doc" Robertson in to work for him in Saskatchewan, but was defeated. Evidently Liberal corruption is so disgusting that the money ceases to be an inducement.

Poor old Simmons! One cannot help but pity him in the present predicament of having to whine out his inability to prove what he says.

When Burns beats Squires he is called an American. Some day he will be whipped—then he'll be called what he is, a Canadian.

When duck shooting opens on a Sunday it is the Sunday that should give way.

If one only dare publish the duck yarns he hears!

There was no lack of men in the car shops the other day when the editors were there. And many good local Liberals, who ought to know all about "machines," were there too.

If we only got out all we shot we'd be feeding the city now.

If the scholars start school on Thursday and the teachers on the following Monday, when do the holidays cease? The correct solution deserves a prize.

The pupils of Toronto Streetschool will be able to pick old roses off the new addition all winter.

The Y.M.C. at Calgary is working towards the abolition of whiskey signs. It's the same ambition that makes a man eat peppermint lozenges before he goes home.

FOSTER'S FORECAST.

Foster's Forecast.

Washington, D.C., Aug. 22.— My last bulletin gave forecasts of a disturbance to cross the continent Aug. 24 to 28, warm wave 23 to 27, cool wave 26 to 30. That disturbance will cause high temperatures, as it progresses eastward, on all parts of the continent, and as the cool wave following it comes in, showers will be more general than usual. All the features of this disturbance will affect northern and southern parts of the continent about the same time.

Small disturbances will cross the continent reaching meridian 90 about August 31, but will be of no particular interest. The first disturbance of September, that claims particular attention, will reach the Pacific coast about 2 cross the Pacific slope close of 3, the great central valleys 4 to 6, eastern states 7. The warm wave will cross the Pacific slope about 2, great central valleys 4, eastern states 6. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about 5, great central valleys 7, eastern states 9.

This disturbance will take a mid-latitude path and will be so extensive as to affect the whole continent during its progressive movements. It will be rather mild on the Pacific slope, but will increase in tensities till about 10 when it will be out on the north Atlantic.

The warm wave will bring unusually hot weather and the storms will begin to grow fierce soon after it has crossed to the eastward of meridian 90 from Sept. 5 to 10—a day or two earlier west of that line and a day or two later east of it—and that cool wave will cause frost in northern sections.

September will have four general storm periods and a number of unimportant ones. Two severe storm periods will occur, one 7 to 11 and the other during the week of which 25 will be central day. During these two severe storm periods.

Tropical Storms

will probably develop on southern parts of the North Atlantic. These tropical storms are developed by planetary forces that reach earth through the North Atlantic high and the tropical hurricane are organized not far from the Azore Islands, which are near the centre of that north Atlantic high. They then move westward into and through the Caribbean sea, sometimes reaching the Gulf of Mexico. They gradually turn toward the northeastward and move with the gulf stream. These tropical storms cause a frost wave out in Western Canada about or northwest of Manitoba.

LABOR ORGANIZER

SPEAKS TO LARGE AUDIENCE IN TRAINMEN'S HALL

JAKES PROPOSALS FOR UNITING LABOR

The capacity of the Trainmen's hall was heavily taxed on Friday evening when R. P. Pettipiece, the able organizer of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada delivered an address on the problems of labor and unionism. The meeting was a public one, and, though the majority of those present were card men directly interested in the doings of their representatives at the Congress, there was a fair sprinkling of citizens, including at least one minister.

Ald. Baker, president of the Trades and Labor Council occupied the chair and in a few introductory remarks explained that them eeting was not called by the strikers, as had been the impression of many citizens, but was for the purpose of hearing Mr. Pettipiece on labor subjects in general. Two years ago in Victoria, the Congress had come to the conclusion that there was nothing for the workers to do but to combine in political action, to try to get together and enact laws for themselves, as the capitalists were now doing in their own selfish interests. The speaker of the evening was then introduced.

For slightly over an hour Mr. Pettipiece held the attention of his audience as in the incisive language of the Westerner he defined the position of present day labor as he saw it, and proposed a remedy.

As the representative of the Trades and Labor Congress, said the speaker, it was his purpose to explain something of the function and mission of that organized body, and also to deal with another matter which would present perhaps from a standpoint which would be a new one to many.

He had noticed that a protest was frequently made against "mud-slinging" in politics. There was at least one element in Canada which could discuss political issues on principles alone, which avoided personalities. That was the new, third party.

The speaker went on to trace the evolution of the Trades and Labor Congress from its inauguration to the present day. To Canada, that Congress was what the American Federation of Labor was to the States—with this important difference; that whereas the latter was a purely trade organization, the Canadian body was "the concrete expression of the advanced labor thought of Canada." Twenty-three years ago the American Federation of Labor used to send over representatives to Ottawa for the purpose of lobbying. At that time the Canadian workers began to think that they understood their own conditions best, and the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada sprang into existence. Ten or fifteen years ago, it began to dawn upon the workers of the West "that the chief function of it (the Congress) members seemed to be to work hard and get a good government job." They became, down east, "a sort of tail end to the Liberal Party kite." Then organized labor began to take some real interest in its own affairs, and two years ago, in Victoria, the West for the first time began to display interest in the deliberations of the Congress. After a week's debate the conclusion was reached that there was absolutely nothing more to be hoped for from the old political parties. At last year's Congress in Winnipeg the position was re-affirmed by the delegates, amongst whom the West was well represented.

Politics in the unions was not believed in, and the two phases of the Congress' work (which was analogous to that of the Trades Council in the localities) were kept separate and distinct.

Today there were 153,000 members affiliated to the organization and eighteen international unions. When this year's meeting took place in Halifax it would be found that more money had been spent in legislature work during the last year than during the ten preceeding ten. "The workers were beginning to realize the relation of the Congress to their meal ticket."

As to the political policy of that body. At the Victoria assembly a resolution was introduced stating that the ultimate aim of the Congress and of the Labor policy was the collective ownership of the collective means of production. It received six solitary votes. In Winnipeg last year it was defeated by only nine votes.

Mr. Pettipiece then went on to describe the processes which ha alleged had driven the workers to their present attitude. He would speak of British Columbia, but the same process was at work in Alberta. In B.C. was the mines, lumber, fishing, while in Alberta it was the railways and so forth in which the centralizing process had gone on.

When the speaker went to B. C., there were a large number of small manufacturers at the coast. At the present time that part of Canada was as highly developed in industrial organization as any part of Canada. The manufacturers had found it to their advantage to get together and now the three great industries—lumbering, coal, and fishing were monopolies. The lumber business was practically in the hands of Swift, Armour & Co., the coal was in the hands of Lieutenant-Governor Dunsmuir and (a small portion of it) the Crow's Nest Pass Co.; the fishing industry was controlled by the B. C. American corportation. In the canneries the process had been—whites displaced by Orientals, Orientals displaced by traps; then with the help of the Ottawa government hatcheries had been introduced, and practically all labor dispensed with. The introduction of machinery in all lines had increased the output three fold. Not a cent of the wealth thus produced went into the pockets of the workers; every last vestige went to capital.

The workers had been driven to adopt the tactics of their bosses, but had been slow to learn the lesson. They had been organizing for 40 years and only 15 per cent. of their number were yet in the movement, while 90 per cent. of the capitalists had combined within the last ten years.

And the workers had no one but themselves to blame. Year after year they had sent men to parliament to write the law, making it legally possible for these men to own the means of production and the product of their labor. They had elected their employers. The miners of Nanaimo had sent their boss, Dunsmuir, to legislate for them, and, as they might expect, Dunsmuir was given the legal right to own all their means of life. Then when a dispute arose, Dunsmuir was able to defy the workers in these words, "These mines are mine; can't I do as I like with my own?" Today he had 400 Orientals working underground, in defiance of the law.

The workers had learned the lesson. At the last election they returned two of their own class, who went into the legislature with a mandate. They were enabled to get up in the chamber, and instead of acting themselves in the position of beggars for favors as hitherto, to say, "We question your right to own these natural resources?" The wprkers had given and the workers would take away.

Among the benefits derived from working-class representation were the eight hour day in many industries, and the best compensation act on the American continent. This act had cost the Crow's Nest Co. an enormous amount, and, what was more valuable, all kinds of safety machines had been introduced. It now cost money to kill a working man.

The capitalists had resorted to new tactics in the importation of yellow labor. The speaker believed that the primary reason for this was that these men had no votes, that they might be used to make thewhite workers submit.

Going on to discuss the relations of the railroad and its employees, Mr. Pettipiece contended that the $14,000,000 net dividend declared by the C.P.R. on its year's working represented the amount which the workers earned but failed to take home with them when the whistle blew. The value reaped by the shareholders did not lie in their rolling stock. This stock merely represented the title deeds to the workers jobs. Without the hand of labor all these things would be useless. As union men the speaker believed his audience felt instinctively that they were entitled to a large share of the proceeds of their toil than they were getting. The owners of the means of transportation had no longer anything to do with the road's operation. If ten men or ten thousand men could own this great undertaking, then surely the whole 6,000,000 people of Canada could do so to advantage! (Applause). "We own everything in the country in which there is no money (laughter). Surely to goodness we might run the C.P.R. and these other jobs!" (Applause). We were all working cooperatively today; the next step was for us to own co-operatively.

The Salvation Army and other labor skinning agencies were the subject of caustic criticism. The only form of competition now to be found in any degree in this country was the competition among the workers for jobs. The government had assisted in increasing this competition. It was true (as claimed by its agents) that the Army had secured jobs for its proteges. But whose jobs were they? They were the jobs other men who lived in the country had had a year ago—taken at less money!

The railroad organizations had achieved a creditable success in that they had become federated. The four separate bodies of a few years ago were now as one. They realized the truth of the words of a great American at a great crisis in that nation's history: "If we don't hang together, we shall surely hang separately."

Mr. Pettipiece is well-known as a Socialist and though in his capacity as Trades Congress organizer he avoided as far as possible the use of Socialist phraseology it was evident that he regarded Socialism as the only possible ultimate solution of labor's problem; it was evident that his economic doctrine was the pure milk of the Marxian creed. The Socialist theory of panics was touched upon, in explanation of the commercial depression in the States. The "surplus values" piled up from year to year were used, must be used, in the exploitation of markets. The Napoleonic motto was, "More World's to Conquer," the commercial motto was, "More Markets to Conquer." Foreign countries had been thus armed with the means of disarming ourselves. The commercialization of the East had left the financial world with a scarcity of new markets for exploitation. Hence a panic through over-production. None of the old cities of the world was, according to the speaker, able to prescribe a remedy. "God knows," was Secretary Taft's reply when asked what could be done for the prevention of unemployment. This, Mr. Pettipiece contended, was typical of the nonpossumus attitude of the Liberals, as of the Conservatives of the world. The secret lay in the fact that the capitalist "could not get rid of the war" (surplus value) now that the era of foreign exploitation was drawing to a close. Capital was "that form of property used for the purpose of robbing labor." It mattered not how high might be the ideals how noble the aspirations of individuals connected with the old parties; if they stood for the upholding of the present system they stood for the robbery of the workers.

The speaker regretted that Medicine Hat had not seen fit to send a delegate to the congress at Halifax, but understood the difficult situation here.

He felt satisfied that a candidate would be placed in the field in the Medicine Hat riding, as in the other constituencies of the province, at the Dominion elections. The first thing to do was to get the reins of government—they must get busy politically.

One word of advice he would give to the strikers. In a few days or weeks' time they would be back in the shops. He would not advise them to pat themselves on the back and to say boastfully, "Look at us! We did it."

They had placed the government in the hands of corporate interests and had merely been getting what they voted for. He would advise them to spend next labor day in the discussion of labor questions, and next election day in voting for the substitution of collective for private production.

At the conclusion of the address discussion was invited.

A. Patterson was the first to respond. He had, he said, listened with very much pleasure to the excellent address given by Mr. Pettipiece. There were, undoubtedly, too many professional men in the Canadian legislatures today—too many lawyers, too many doctors. The example of Kier Hardie, who entering politics in the face of the sneers and slights of the orthodox, was now highly respected for the benefits he and his associates had been enabled to bring about for the working class was a worthy one to follow. The time had come for working men to study for themselves. They must see that their childrenw ere given sufficient training to enable them to compete with the children of lawyers and other professional men. For the realization of their hopes they must unite. Morally and spiritually union made better men.

Referring to a remark of Mr. Pettipiece, Mr. Patterson said he could speak feelingly on the subject, having been himself for many years a foreman on the railroad. He knew what it was for a man to get fired because the foreman came down in the morning with his stomach out of order. (Laughter).

Another speaker complained that the attitude of the Socialists on the liquor question was unsatisfactory; since they did not adopt prohibition in their platform. Mr. Pettipiece replied that the Socialist party was the only one which had any temperance policy. They would remove the profit from booze-selling, whichmeant the end of the booze evil. The barroom today was the working man's club. No other places for association and companionship were provided. His experience of Alberta in the old days was that prohibition did not prohibit. The only way to remove the evil was to remove the cause —private gain in the business.

The discussion along prohibition lines was continued for some length of time, Mr. Patterson stating his conviction that prohibition would prohibit, and the chairman himself a firm believer in prohibition pol... when—

Mr. Pettipiece intervened, saying that the meeting was called rather to discuss Trades Congress matters than prohibition or Socialism. He urged his hearers first of all to get possession of the reins of government, then to decide what course they would follow in regard to temperance or any similar issue.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the chairman announced that Mr. Pettipiece would again visit the city in six weeks time, on his return from Halifax.

New Business Blocks

The City Booming in Building Several New Blocks to Start

As The Times has frequently pointed out there is no sign of the past hard times in the buildingoperations going on in Medicine Hat. With three new business blocks and two hotels under way or completed there has been considrrable activity. But now two more new business blocks are about to be started.

On Main Street, near L. Foster's store, the old restaurant is being moved back to allow for the building of a brick store by Robt. Mitchell. What is to be done with the building is not yet made public. It will partially fill in the last vacant stretch of property in the business section of the city.

Ground is about to be broken for a store on Fourth Avenue. Here will be opened up one of the finest stores of its kind west of Winnipeg.

It is also rumored that two other store buildings are planned for the same street next spring.

A new jeweller, too, has made arrangements to open a store on Main Street by October 1st. This store will be run in conjunction with another owned by the same firm in the West.

Hard times are gone and with the revival of trade the gathering of the crops and the re-opening of confidence, Medicine Hat is going to beat them all. The next move in the not distant future is the extending of the business section west of Fourth Avenue.

Illicit Liquor Traced

Mounted Police Discover

A chain of illicit liquor selling has been unravelled by the Mounted Police during the past week. On the 25th Jim and Mary of the Indian encampment on the flats werebrought in for being in a state of intoxication. Tried before Inspector Parker and Mr. Milne, Jim was compelled to peel his wad to the extent of a $10 bill and Mary had to part with $5, the Indians also bearing the costs of the court. They stated that the firewater had been obtained from a squaw named The Skunk, and that lady was accordingly arrested by Constable Capstick and Mollison. She was tried for selling liquor to Indians and was fined $25 and costs.

The trouble was traced to its source, Patrice Ouillette, a half breed, who had sold the liquor to The Skunk and his arrest was affected by Constables Capstick and Meyrick. Pat was charged in his turn with selling liquor to Indians, found guilty and given free transportation to Lethbridge, board and lodging for a couple of months. No option was given in his case.

Important Store Change

Boston Bazaar Purchased by Mr. Curtis Hollinger

Curtis Hollinger has purchased the Boston Bazaar from E. W. Moore and took possession of it on Thursday morning of last week.

Mr. Hollinger is holding a sale for the next two weeks in order to make room for several new lines he intends to carry. The general line of business will be the same as heretofore, with a few additions and rearrangement of the stock. The store will be open during the evening for the next two weeks.

Mr. Hollinger has had a large experience in store keeping and is well liked locally, so that the new store is bound to have a large patronage.

E. W. Moore intends to open a branch millinery establishment in Fernie.

POLITICS

Ottawa, Aug. 25.—The Liberals of Wright county will meet in convention in Hull, Sept. 7, to nominate a candidate for the federal house. Messrs. E. B. Devlin, the present member, G. E. Fontaine, and ex-Ald. Ste. Marie, of Hull, will go before the convention with chances in favor of the nomination of Devlin.

Hensal, Aug. 26.—South Huron Conservatives nominated Geo. Clare, M.P.

Dresden, Aug. 26.—East Kent Conservatives will leave the nomination with the executive. They may not have a candidate.

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 25.— The Liberals in convention tonight nominated W. W. B. McInnes as their candidate for Vancouver, MacPherson having on his recent retirement been appointed postmaster here. The contest was keen, McInnes receiving a majority of only two votes of the 567 ballots cast. His vote was 289 W. W. Deh Farris, the defeated Liberal candidate for the city in the last provincial election, receiving 153 and Harry Senkler, K.C., receiving 134. The nomination of McInnes was made unanimous.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 25.—The largest Conservative convention ever held in Ottawa tonight nominated for the federal house Dr. Chabot by acclamation and Thomas Bickett, ex-M.P., on the first vote. The figures were Burkett, 450; P. D. Ross, 150; Fred Cook, 140. The nomination was unanimous and both candidates volunteered their heartiest support to the nominee of the convention.

Galt, Aug. 25.—South Waterloo Conservatives nominated Geo. Clare M.P.

Ottawa, Aug. 26.—Satisfactory reports as to the progress being made in getting the voters' list printed and ready for the coming general elections are being received by the Secretary of State Scott from the various points where the lists are now being printed.

It is now pretty well assured that everything will be in readiness for polling by the end of October and as already foreshadowed the election date will probably be either Oct. 28 or 29.

The lists to be used will be those of 1907, the lists for 1908 not yet being prepared.

In the case of Ontario, the lists to be used will be those of the recent provincial elections. The lists for the coming election will contain fully 250,000 more voters than the aggregate of lists of 1904.

Berlin, Ont., Aug. 24.—W. L. Mackenzie King is again mentioned as a federal candidate by the North Waterloo Liberals.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 23. — The Conservatives of Manitoba have now practically completed their organization for the Dominion election, and in each of the ten constituencies will have candidates in the field who are out to win. In Winnipeg, Brandon, and Dauphin, the standard-bearers have not been named, but it is believed that the Hon. Robert Rogers will be induced tostand in Winnipeg while Hon. T. Mayne Daly, formerly Minister of the Interior, will enter the lists against Clifford Sifton, in Brandon. Glen Campbell, the popular member for Gilbert Plains in the Provincial Legislature, will contest Dauphin against Brother-in-law Burrows, of timber limits fame, and will undoubtedly win hands down. In Portage, Arthur Meighen, a brilliant young lawyer, has undertaken to recover for the Conservatives the seat now held by Crawford, and to which he was elected by the operation of the "thin red line." Another sure winner is A. C. Lariviere, in Provencher. He was another victim of the "thin red line" outrage. Dr. Roche, in Marquette, Dr. Schaffner, in Souris, and W. D. Staples, in Macdonald, will retain their present seats with increased majorities, while W. H. Sharpe, who contests Lisgar, now held by Hon. Thomas Greenway, and Thos. Bradbury, the party nominee in Selkirk, can be depended upon to make good. The party prospects were never better, and the elections cannot be brought on too soon.

L. J. Frechette was selected as the Conservative candidate for Megantic county at the convention at Inverness.

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 27.—Joseph Martin, K.C., has arrived at Seattle on his way home from England. He says he will positively run as an Independent Liberal candidate in Vancouver.

In view of the fact that the World newspaper has not taken up Mr. McInnes' nomination with any enthusiasm and from other circumstances it is reported that C. D. Taylor, editor of the World will run as an independent labor candidate, perhaps assisted by the anti-Asiatic League.

It is regarded as practically certain that C. E. Tisdale will be the Conservative candidate. Hon. W. J. Bowser, the attorney general declined to run in the Conservative interests and will take little part in the Federal campaign.

Ottawa, Aug. 27.—R. L. Borden will leave for the maritime provinces to open his political tour on Saturday. He will not be back at the capital again until September 20, or in time to open the Ontario portion of his tour at Pembroke on September 21. Details of the tour subsequent to the rally on September 23, have not been arranged as yet.

Alexandria, Ont., Aug. 27.— The Glengarry Conservatives today nominated John F. McGregar, a produce dealer, for the Commons.

The Liberals of Queen's and Sunbury, N.B., will start the political ball rolling this week. They plan to hold a series of picnics and rallies at various points, to be addressed by a number of speakers, among them Hon. William Pugsley, minister of public works; Hon. H. R. Emmecson F. B. Carvell, M.P.; A. K. McLean, M.P.; E. M. McDonald, M.P.; A. B. Copp, M.P.P. and others.

The Conservatives having nominated John Newstead as their candidate for South Wellington, the Liberals have called a convention for September 12 to select a representative. There is but one name mentioned, that of Hugh Guthrie, and his election is taken as assured by the great majority.

The Liberals of Halton are reported to be anxious to get Mr. Harrison, a controller of Toronto, to contest the riding with the sitting Conservative member, David Henderson. J. D. McGregor, already nominated, has, for business reasons declined.

Conservatives of Carleton, N. B., have nominated B. F. Smith to oppose Mr. Carvell, the sitting member. Mr. Smith is the local member and a supporter of the Hazen "non-partisan" government.

Major Fraser, of Brantford, has declined to run against Hon. William Patterson, Liberal, in Brant, and Mayor Patterson, of Paris, is likely to be the Conservative candidate.

It is reported that J. R. Stratton formerly member of the Ross government, may be a federal Liberal candidate in East Peterborough.

The Conservative convention for the county of Rimouski, which met the other day, decided to offer the nomination to W. Price of Quebec.

Halifax, Aug. 26.—At the adjourned Conservative convention today Mayor A. B. Crosby signified his acceptance of the party nomination offered him a week ago. Mr. Borden has also accepted the nomination for the other seat.

Almonte, Ont., Aug. 28.— T. B. Caldwell, M.P., has been renominated for the Commons by North Lanark Liberals.

St. Thomas, Ont., Aug., 28.—West Elgin Conservatives have nominated F. W. Crothers, K.C., for the Commons.

Woodstock, N. B., Aug. 23.—There was not a polling district in Carleton County that was not represented at the Conservative convention Saturday, which chose B. Frank Smith, M.P.P., as the man to oppose F. B. Carvell, M.P., in the convention ever held in this country. The enthusiasm that prevailed coming elections. It was the largest showed the fighting spirit which

A Warning

At a regular meeting of the local Board of Health held in the City Hall Saturday p.m., it was deemed advisable in view of numerous cases of typhoid fever existing in different parts of the city to ask the public in general and especially owners of restaurants and hotels to be very particular in washing vessels containing milk or other food stuffs and above all, to protect their houses or kitchens from flies by proper screen doors and windows. It is a known fact that the common house fly after lighting on infected excreta may carry away hundreds of germs, on its legs, consequently the common house flies are now proven to be the greatest disseminators of typhoid fever. The Board of Health asks the public to do everything in their power to mitigate the spread of the disease and to protect themserves from infection in this manner.

Mr. Omand of Queen's College, Kingston, has been missionary at Bowell. Very good work has been done. A farewell social will be held at Bowell on Friday night, September 4th. All are invited. A collection will be taken.

The S. S. of Knox Church will picnic next Saturday afternoon. Conveyances will be at the church at 2 o'clock to convey children and parents to the grounds.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. Wm. H. Alcorn desires to extend her thanks to her friends and neighbors for their kindness, assistance and sympathy during the illness and death of her husband.

A tent with an attendant will be provided so that any one bringing their baskets, can put their name on same, and leave it in safe keeping with the attendant, whilst they are enjoying the sports on the grounds or strolling through the trees which go to make this one of the most enjoyable picnic grounds in the province..

Ice cream, Lemon ade, and light refreshments will be sold on the grounds at reasonable prices.

A platform will be erected amongst the trees, and a band provided, so that after the sports and tea, those who wish will be able to trip the light fantastic toe at the charge to your escort of three for 25 cents.

Conveyances will be provided to take picnicers to and from the grounds at a charge of fifteen cents each way. The rigs will start running from the Finlay bridge at 12.30 sharp.

Bring your little ones, the more the merrier. We might say the weather man, Mr. Foster, has been squared for the occasion.

Insp. Parker in kindly granting the use of Police Point, requests that all concerned will avoid damaging in any way, the trees, which go to make the enjoyment of all.

Coleridge Building

Work on the new hotel at Coleridge is to be put under way immediately. Paul Lecieux, the proprietor, was in the city this morning with A. J. Robichand and John M. Carroll, contractors for the building and excavation, respectively. They speak very optimistically of the prospects of their town.

The new hotel is to cost $5,000. It will be a handsome three storey brick building, 24 by 52. There will be twenty-four bedrooms, with bathroom and sitting room on the two upper floors. On the ground floor will be the bar-room, dining room, office, kitchen, etc.

A. J. Robichand has bought a number of lots in the town. Another general store is to be built right away and a butcher shop opened in the near future.

ATHLETICS

As foretold in last week's Times, the Secretary of the Alberta Amateur Athletic Association has written W. B. Finlay, as follows:

Upon instructions from the chairman of the Board of Governors of the above Association I am writing you in connection with the proposed Baseball Tournament to be held in your city during the month of September.

The A. A. A. A. desire to foster and protect all kinds of amateur sport in our Province and since the proposition you make in connection with the tournament, namely a purse of $150 and $75 is directly contrary to Amateurism we would respectfully call your attention to the danger incurred by any man participating in such a series of games. We believe that there are enough teams in the Province interested in the amateur spirit to make such a contest possible (if it is possible at all) without offering cash prizes and we would submit therefore for your consideration this phase of the matter with the hope that the sports interested in your city may decide to make any contest decided upon an amateur one.

Yours faithfully,
H. BALLANTYNE,
Secretary A.A.A.A.

As the idea was hastily worked out more to see what clubs would go in for a tournament, the cash prizes were not a serious part of the affair. These have been changed to a trophy and each club to get forty per cent. of the gate receipts.

The letter of the A.A.A.A. is nevertheless amusing. This organization that desires to foster and protect all kinds of amateur sport in our Province showed so little evidences of it at the start that it could well be ignored now. It started out making everyone an amateur. Such professional sports as Charlie Crist and a dozen more were thus made amateurs in spite of themselves. Amateur sport, for which this Association expresses so much concern, is not a provincial affair. Alberta doesn't make a man an amateur.

The following letter has been sent the baseball clubs interested, by W. B. Finlay, the secretary:

Since writing you last we have had considerable correspondence with the Alberta Amateur Athletic Association and at their request we are changing the cash prize to a trophy.

We have also arranged for each team to receive expense money. We will take the first $20.00 of the ceipts at each game and the balance will be divided equally between the two contending teams.

The date set for the tournament is Sept. [illegible] and will continue till all enteri[illegible]ns have competed. When we ha[illegible]ived all the entries there will [illegible] drawing and each team will be informed when they will play their first game.

We will also arrange for rates at the hotels, so that the expenses will be as light as possible.

We trust that this will be more satisfactory to you and that you will enter a team at an early date.

Awaiting your reply,
We Remain,
Medicine Hat B.B. Team,
Per W. B. Finlay.

Editor of Times:

For the benefit of the supporters of the Medicine Hat Lacrosse Club, I wish the results of the protest, of Medicine Hat vs. Calgary game, explained.

I wrote the following question to the Sporting Editor of the Winnipeg Telegram:

To the Sporting Editor, Telegram:

Would you please answer in your valuable paper the following question re protest between Medicine Hat and Calgary Lacrosse Clubs?

A player residing in Calgary gives up his situation and goes to Edmonton where he secures a similar position and remains five weeks. He then returns to Calgary again, but not to reside there for any length of time. He arrived in Calgary three days previous to the Lacrosse match between Medicine Hat and Calgary. He takes part in same and plays and the game is protested on Rule 4, Section 1, which reads as follows:

"All players shall be domiciled residents of the Municipality, village, town, city or vicinity in which the club for which they are playing is located for at least twenty days previous to any match in which they take part."

The protest was disallowed by the council who made these rules.

Their rights for so doing I dispute.

I remain, your's sincerely,
T. R.
Medicine Hat

The answer reads as follows:

The council is in the wrong. The player was ineligible.

Now I am of the opinion that to encourage interest in lacrosse, it is needful that men of fair dealings be out at the head of committees which I must say was not the case this year. For instance, Mr. Collison, the secretary of the Association, was manager of the Calgary Lacrosse Club, and it looks dark when you take his action in connection with the way he managed that great team of would-be amateur sports.

First, he played Horrobin inside of the twenty days required residence by rule, against Medicine Hat, and won their game. Second, he played Dunn against Lethbridge in the same way. Third, he played Ready against Medicine Hat in the last game played; which caused the protest, said protest being disallowed.

Does committees make rules just to break them or was Collison afraid to have his team beaten in another trial.

In summing up the actions of Dr. Stanley, president of the association if he knows no more about mixing pills than he seems to know about the rules he helped to make, then give all your sympathy to his patients.

As for Mr. Collison, it was his aim to have Calgary win no matter how crooked he had to be.

Trusting both those gentlemen have spirit enough to admit their mistake, I remain,

As ever a true sport,
T. R.

The protested man has not become domiciled in Calgary. He left Wednesday for Vancouver.

New Westminster, B.C., Aug. 25.—Because the senior lacrosse season extends until October 10, a meeting of the Westminster Lacrosse Club yesterday evening decided that no challenges for the Minto Cup would be entertained this year. A reply to this effect is being forwarded to the athletes of St. Catharines, who challenged a few days ago, for the championship. A ruling from P. D. Ross one of the trustees of the cup in Ottawa, some weeks ago, gives Westminster the option of refusing challenges this year. All the lacrosse players who made the trip east will be presented with handsome gold watches at a public meeting in the opera house on Monday evening. Alexander Turnbull, already the owner of a presentation watch, will be given a valuable shot gun instead.

The C.P.R. team consisting of Snowden, Sinclair, Andrews, Douglas, Smith, Lordon, Squance, Westcott, Lemieux and O'Hara returned to the city Saturday after a series of games in Swift Current and Caron While successful in only one of the three games the boys must have put up a great game as both Swift Current and Caron had several imported players.

The first game was played in Swift Current at 2 p.m., Thursday, with Andrews and Douglas the battery. Douglas had his finger broken and Andrews caught with Squance pitching. After nine innings the score was 10 to 5 in favor of Swift Current.

The second was played against the same team at 5 p.m. on the same day. Squance and Andrews again held the points and this time succeeded in trimming the Swift Currents 1—0. It was the best game ever seen in Swift Current, Squance allowing only two hits and the Medicine Hat boys making no errors.

The third game was played Friday in Caron, the latter having a Rouleau paid battery. No score was made until the third when Medicine Hat got one. Caron did not score until the eighth, and when the ninth came up the score was 1—1. In this innings Caron secured 2, making the result 3—1 in favor of Caron. Westcott pitched for Medicine Hat and Andrews caught. The latter was laid up in the last two games with fever, which developed into typhoid, so that he had to go to the hospital as soon as he returned to the city. He was so weak in the last game that he caught on his knees, and gamely stuck out the game as there was no one to replace him.

The boys speak very highly of their treatment in Caron but refuse to talk about Swift Current.

John Hen[illegible] Loch accompanied the team on the trip.

NOTICE.

Odd Numbered Sections.

AS already publicly announced, odd numbered sections remaining vacant and undisposed of will become available for homestead entry on the coming into force of the Dominion Lands Act on the 1st September next.

As the records of only the even numbered sections have hitherto been kept in the books of the various land agencies in the western provinces, and the time having been very limited since the passing of the Act within which to transfer the records of all odd numbered sections from the head office at Ottawa to the local offices, it is possible that the transfer of records in some cases may not have been absolutely completed by the 1st September. In any case where the record of any quarter section has not been transferred, application will be accepted but will have to be forwarded to head office to be dealt with.

As it has been found impossible as yet to furnish sub-agencies with copies of the records of odd numbered sections, and in view of the large probable demand for entries, all applicants for entry upon odd numbered sections are strongly advised to make their applications in person at the office of the Dominions Lands Agent and not through a Sub Land Agent. Applications for even numbered sections may be dealt with through the Sub Land Agent as before if desired.

LEADER OF RACE RIOTS COMMITS SUICIDE.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 25.— Mrs. Kate Howard, one of the leaders in the recent riot in this city, committed suicide today by swallowing acid soon after being placed under arrest.

Before the special grand jury now in session, many witnesses testified that Mrs. Howard was one of the ringleaders of the mob which wrecked Loper's restaurant and cafe. She was the first person indicted and was held on several counts in the sum of $10,000, which she furnished. When she was released she said she would never be arrested again.

Today, after another indictment was returned against her, charging murder in connection with the recent lynchings, Deputy Sheriff Krimer was sent to Mrs. Howard's rooms. Mrs. Howard received the officer at the door. She secretly swallowed a large dose of poison, then said: "I'm ready to go now."

She accompanied the deputy to the jail, two blocks away, and was just entering the door when she fell dead.

English Collie's Wonderful Work.

Three short, sharp whistles from the Westmoreland shepherd on the hilltop and the long-haired sheep dog at his heels raced away down the slope to round up three stupid, staring sheep and drive them through many obstacles to a pen a quarter of a mile away in six minutes.

It was at the agricultural show at Petworth, on the Sussex uplands, that this sheep dog trial took place. Six shepherds from the dales of Westmoreland had come to show their fellows on the South Downs how to drive sheep. They brought withthem twelve dogs—dogs that can do everything but speak, and can do thework of two men in shepherding.

The twelve courses were run first through a confined gap with a line of hurdles, then along a narrow flag-marked track. This was the way the sheep had to be driven. Three sheep went to each dog, the shepherd being roped to a stake in the centre and controlling his dog by whistles of differing length and quick gestures of the arms.

The result was marvelous. The dogs understood the language of whistles as well as a human being comprehends words. They dashed backward and forward behind the sheep, steered them through the gap and then round the sweep of the course until the finishing pen was reached.

One greybeard of a shepherd interpreted his whistles thus:

Three whistles, drive on.

One long, one short, run outside to sheep.

A long whistle, lie down and stop.

Two short whistles, drive straight.

"One man," said this old shepherd "with two good dogs can manage two thousand sheep. They are better shepherds than men. I have known one of our sheep dogs rescue a sheep from a bog when no man would venture. We train our dogs from puppies, and in sixteen months they are usually good at work. They are specially bred, and show an instinct for shepherding from the first. They are the best dogs in the world."

The fastest time for the quarter-mile was 4 1-2 minutes, and the next fastest 5 1-4 minutes. No sound of any kind was made by the dogs when running their trials.

TIMBER LIMIT IN DISPUTE

Ottawa, Aug. 24.—At the next sitting of the Superior Court, in Hull, A. W. Fraser, K.C., of Ottawa, and Liberal candidate for the city, will be called on to defend a writ issued by W. J. Conroy, of Aylmer, Que., in connection with a timber limit purchased from the Dominion Government. Conroy claims a two-thirds interest in the part, which is said to be still held by Fraser, and asks for a rendering of accounts.

It appears from the statement of claim that has been filed that in 1901 the government advertised a timber limit for sale in Saskatchewan. Joseph E. Woods, miner and contractor, who had an intimate knowledge of the berth, wrote W. J. Conroy, and his brother, Robert H. Conroy, since deceased, asking them to become financially interested, and to secure the aid of others in order to acquire the limit. The Conroys communicated with Fraser to interest him, and it is claimed he agreed to join, on condition that he would be allowed to interest another party. This was agreed to, and his father-in-law, one Brownie, of Pembroke, was taken in, and an agreement was made by the five.

Asks for Accounting.

Some time later, it is said, Fraser bought out the interest of Woods. The value of the land was estimated at $200,000, and it is claimed that $50,000 worth of timber has already been cut off them. Conroy alleges that Fraser has sold one-half of the berth for $50,000, and that the money was paid him in 1903, and that the remaining half of the berth is still in Fraser's possession, or held in trust for him by others, and that this remaining half is well worth $100,000. On behalf of himself and the estate of the deceased brother, Conroy claims a two-fifths share of the money said to be derived from the sale in 1903, and also an assignment of the two-fifths share of the remaining half. A full statement of accounts is also asked. Mr. Conroy, in his claim, says he is willing, and has always been, to bear his share of the cost of acquiring the lands and operating them.

Must Diversify.

(Fargo Forum.)

The people of North Dakota have a great illustration in the cropsthis year of the necessity of diversification. This plan of putting all the eggs in one basket will not work to any greater advantage in farming than in other things. No matter how high priced wheat may be, the uncertainty of the crop is such that it would be unwise to grow only that crop. By growing more variety of grains it is scarcely possible that all will fail in the same season. A still better method of insuring profit is to grow live stock. The drouth will not so quickly damage the crop of calves and colts and pigs. Neither the smut nor the red nor the black rust will hurt the fattening cattle. The hail may make some of the cattle hike for protection but it won't knock them down and shatter them in a hopeless waste all over the fields.

C. H. Wagner, the city transfer man, can remove that furniture for you. Phone 245.

Toronto, Ont., August 24.— The C.P.R. telegraphers are becoming impatient at the delay in the announcement from Ottawa of the award of the arbitration found regarding the case of Morrisette, the Megantic C.P.R. telegraph operator. The latest report from Ottawa is that the award is favorable to the telegraphers.

The majority report is known to have been sent in to the government some time ago. The company's representative might delay matters for a time by withholding his minority report, but a reasonable time is considered to have elapsed.

On the supposition that the report of the majority is favorable to the men, the friends of the strikers are anxious for it to be made public immediately, as it will test the C.P.R. company's good faith in claiming to be willing to abide by the rulings of arbitration boards. Moreover it is claimed that a systematic dismissal of active union members is being made by the C.P.R., which promises to be a boomerang in opening the way for the other branches to come out and thus tie up the C.P.R. service. On Friday the government was notified by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineman and Firemen that they had two cases to go before the board, for which they had applied. They are the wrongful dismissal of Engineman McGuiegal and MacAuley, of the Lake Superior division. The brotherhood has nominated J. G. O'Donoghue as their representative on the board. The C.P.R. has five days in which to name their arbitrator and two thus appointed five days more in which to select a third.

Toronto, August 23.—A special despatch from Bell Hardy, chairman of the Federated Trades, received from Montreal, says: "It has just been learned that special inducements have been offered officers of the district council of Amalgamated Society of Engineers, to break away from the Federation and fill theshops of the country with old country mechanics.

H. H. Vaughan, assistant to First Vice-President, and W. Cross, ex-assistant to the second vice-president, the latter an old member of the Amalgamated society, met the officers of the Montreal district council at the Engineers' club and offered these men first cabin passage to the old country, all expenses paid, and any position at the disposal of the company, if successful in their mission.

They were to have the strike called off by their executive council in London, sever all connection with the federation now on strike, and induce their members in the old land to come over and fill the shops of the Canadian Pacific. In other words, the Amalgamated Society of Engineers was to be turned into an organized body of strikebreakers. The officers left the club highly insulted, after having spurned the proposition.

Washington, Aug. 26.—Union Labor's campaign, and the plans that have been formulated by officers of the American Federation of Labor to swing the vote to Wm. J. Bryan, were subject matters of a series of conferences tonight between National Chairman N. E. Mack and Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; Secretary Morrison of the Federation, and President McCongell, of the Machinists' Union.

Chairman Mack announced before his departure for New York at midnight that he had approved the plans devised by Mr. Gompers and his associates to aid in Mr. Bryan's election, and that within a few days he would announce the chairman of the various labor bureaus which will be established in several of the larger cities and conducted under the general direction of the national committee and the American Federation of Labor.

Toronto, Aug. 25.—The Toronto District Trades and Labor Council have decided to entertain Keir Hardie, M. P., and family as their guests while in Toronto. The distinguished British politician is expected here on Aug. 31, and will remain for about four days.

The political element in labor circles expect that he will succeed in securing a working arrangement between the Independent Labor Party and the Socialists similar to that in England. The Dominion Trades Congress at Halifax is considered likely to take a day off to enable the Socialist and Labor party delegates to confer on this policy with Keir Hardie. If this plan is adopted the Labor party expect to poll a substantial increase in their vote in the Dominion elections, especially in B. C.

Five Years Old

To-day The Times is five years old.

It is with a great deal of pride that we point to what has been accomplished in those five years. Commencing five years ago in a small town, with a great deal of opposition, The Times had its fight for a couple of years, a fight that was prophesied to have a disastrous end.

But to-day we think our friends will bear us out in the statement that there is not a better, livelier, newsier, more independent weekly in the West, and that means in Canada.

The Times has always tried to give all the news worth giving, without fear or favor. The subscriber is the man catered to directly, for it is by observing his wants closely, that this paper has been made so valuable to the advertiser. Personal feeling is kept out of the pages as much as is possible for a human editor; and a clean, wholesome paper is the aim.

In the past two years the increase in circulation has been phenomenal. Since the present management took over the business a year and ten months ago, the number of papers sent out has increased more than fifty per cent, and new names are being added almost every day.

To be sure we have displeased some, but we think the people recognize that we have been honest at any rate. We are thankful for the appreciation shown.

It would be a most convincing proof that The Times meets the approval of the public if they take advantage of our Birthday Week subscription offer.

The Man Who Daren't

The Lethbridge Herald the other day said that Simmons was a fighter. That was before he crawled when Magrath challenged him. Even though Simmons is a shareholder in the Herald it will be some months before that well-edited paper dare risk such an assertion for the second time. Every force known to Liberalism will be used to endeavor to cover up Simmons' terrible lack of back bone in his refusal to take up Magrath's challenge.

That as little comment as possible will be made in Liberal papers goes without saying. When there is a scandal in the family it is hushed up as quickly as possible. Even Simmons' own paper makes no comment whatever.

Simmons only answer to the open challenge to prove what he has been using as campaign material is that he will leave the electors to decide. While it relieves a man of Simmons character of immediate action, the electors will undoubtedly decide that they want a MAN to represent them in Parliament.

Simmons' organ attempts to drag a herring across the trail by talking generally and vaguely of slanders, that Magrath started and Simmons fell into the habit. There are two vital differences in the cases. In one the charges are made and proven when made; Simmons makes charges without a word of proof to help him out. In fact it would be an insult even to a man like Simmons to say that he did not know that he had no proof.

The second difference in the cases is that whereas Magrath has attacked the Liberal government and had never said a word against Simmons personally, even to the present, the Liberal candidate commenced a campaign of personal insult to Magrath in his very first election speech at Stirling in the winter, and has continued it ever since. Possibly now when he has displayed his weakness so openly he may find it does not pay to slander a man like Magrath.

What Magrath says about the Liberal Government is not "slander" and every one knows it. Presumably the exposure of Liberal graft is not fit talk for a campaign. The Liberals, would, of course, cut out all exposure. They would have the Conservatives say: "here, vote for us, we're a jollier lot, we tell better stories, we dress more up-to-date, we should have our share" or some such argument easy to overcome. To show that millions of the people's money has been squandered is not supposed to come in platform talks.

Certainly the coming campaign will be one of "slander" if this is "slander" to try to drive out dishonesty.

What Simmons will do if he gets to Ottawa is easily worked out by thinking of the man who tried a bluff and failed—"The Man Who Daren't."

What The Globe Thinks of Ames.

(Reprinted from the Toronto Globe, Feb. 1, 1908.)

Rich men, as a rule, do not voluntarily come out from the easeful, quiet of their clubs to enter the storm and stress of public life with the definite objective of becoming a recognized force, either in municipal or national politics. The rich men who are in public life today have nearly all entered reluctantly at the behest of party politics. Mr. Herbert B. Ames, M.P., for the St. Antoine division of Montreal, is a conspicuous exception to the rule. H has, of his own free will, forsaken the ruby light of the quiet parlors of the rich for the glaring limelight of the politician. First, because he has the virtue of being ambitious, and, second, because he believes he can be of service to the public. As a young man he inherited an ample fortune from his father, who was the head of the Ames, Holden company of Montreal. His business interests have been all along sufficient tokeep him decidedly busy. But he has for the last ten or eleven years given a major portion of his time and energy to public life.

He began with that most thankless of tasks, the reforming of municipal politics. In order to become an alderman of Montreal, he learned the French language thoroughly, going to France for that purpose. In 1898 he was elected to the council, and with Mayor Laporte, conducted a vigorous campaign for the cleaning up of the municipal government of Montreal. His work brought him many enemies, but it was undoubtedly effective. After serving three years in the council he turned his attention to federal politics. The manner in which he organized his forces in the electoral riding which he now represents, the thorough canvass of voters and the elaborate detail with which every part of the campaign was worked out now serve as a model to political organizations. It was the campaign of a business man working on clean business principles and it resulted in a conspicuous victory.

Coming to the federal house in 1904, Mr. Ames has, as might be expected, been one of the most painstaking and diligent members, among the ranks of the Opposition. He believes in hard work and a definite objective. His special objective so far has been to make himself chief opposition critic of the Interior Department. The alleged scandals connected with western lands, etc., which have been ventilated in the Commons during the past two sessions, have emanated from Mr. Ames' microscopic scrutiny of every departmental action. In like manner he has undertaken lengthy journeys in Canada during recent summers for the purpose of personally inspecting public works under construction. His present prominence in the Commons, as the mover of the long-debated resolution calling on the government to acknowledge the absolute right of any member of the House to personally examine any public records in the departmental files, is the result of the unique activity in looking after the department of the opposition's work to which he has been assigned.

Mr. Ames is still well under fifty, and he is politically ambitious, persevering and energetic. He is by no means a magnetic speaker, and will never become a popular political leader. But he is unquestionably a force to be reckoned with in the public life of Canada.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It isn't much wonder the Liberals hate Ames so thoroughly. In addition to his timber steal exposures he brought Oliver out into the limelight in a most unfavorable light. There are those who have considered that however rotten the Liberal government may be, Oliver has kept himself pretty clean.

On June 12, 1906, John Harvey, editor of The Edmonton Bulletin, Oliver's paper, homesteaded a quarter section underlaid with coal, and close to the G.T.P. right of way. On October 30, 1906 he purchased it for $10 an acre. When Ames asked Oliver in the house, "Where is the residence and what the occupation of the present owner, Mr. Oliver replied, "The place of residence of John Hower appears to be Edmonton; his occupation has not been furnished."

Honest Frank!

If you don't stand in with the water commissioners or the pump house or somebody, you don't know when the water is going to be turned off. Some people got information about the water going off last week, in time to get some water. Other's didn't.

"Let Laurier finish his work," is quoted from the Montreal Herald. Seeing that the Herald has drawn no less a sum than $217,480 from the public treasury, it wouldn't take many years to "finish" the work.

Premier Rutherford says the school books will be printed in Canada if the proper plant is established. Seeing that the contract is alreadymade for ten years, Premier Rutherford must know that he hasn't anything to do with where they are printed. It's only political twaddle.

Magrath didn't ask Simmons to put up any money. He simply said you prove what you say and I'll give $4,000 to churches, the one who is wrong to resign. But Simmons would not risk his chance of running on such a plan. He could never get a nomination from his party again and he does love power so much.

The Conservatives would much rather see him continue in the fight as it makes their work much easier. But it doesn't give the Liberals a representative to be proud of.

At last the vale-dwellers can sympathize with the hill-climbers in what they had to endure for three months. But of course it is nobody's fault. Oh, no! It should be most interesting to know how much or how little Alds. Huckvale and Morrow have had to say in water affairs. Has one meeting of the water commissioners been called this year? Are there any minutes of the water commissioners, deliberations as demanded by charter, that a ratepayer can examine.

In order not to give too great publicity to certain conditions that affect the city. The Times will forbear to give in detail some very interesting particulars that all the ratepayers should know, but of which they are purposely kept ignorant.

The News says:

"So far as the newspapers are concerned, in all elections prior to this we have seen nothing but clean and gentlemanly references to the candidates of either party in the Province."

In all prior elections, then, The News must have been just as much afraid to touch politics as it is now. The Times experience with The News is that it is scarcely a judge of "cleanliness and gentlemanliness." However the sweetness of prior elections may be accounted for as above.

Again in all prior elections the candidates were undoubtedly of a different class to the candidate The News is pledged to support. Of course it doesn't matter that no newspaper in the riding said anything against Simmons until he came out with false accusations against the Conservative candidate. Oh, no! Simmons must be allowed to say any thing he likes but the newspapers must just say, "Now you stop that."

It is noticeable that even The News keenly as it can sympathize with Simmons in his present fear, says no word in his support. Are you ashamed of his conduct, too, News?

Come out and be "clean" in politics, News. Support some party. Do some of your work in the paper and not all of it on the side. The political comment of The News last week is the same as it has ever been, save in that memorable McCarthy maiden editorial; it confines itself to what Collier's says. Don't be afraid, News. Nobody's going to hurt you because you select the party you work for privately.

It is probable that the Southern Alberta Land Co. will secure the exchange of land which they desire. All local interests are unqualifiedly in favor of it. What irrigation has done for the Lethbridge and Calgary districts will be exceeded here, since without irrigation good crops result. To support the wishes of the irrigation company it is not necessary to say that the land concerned is absolutely useless without irrigation, as some local bad-publicity interests seem to think. But the work of the company will make this land so much more valuable than it is deserving of every encouragement. This is not a matter of politics locally, but one of the good of the district, and on this account there is no diversity of opinion. How the company got their land does not interest us locally, if they accomplish their work; and with the strong English support behind it, there is no reason why there should not be a most successful conclusion to the enterprise.

It is a big work, but its results will be bigger.

As one of the by-laws points out the height of awnings is the work of the engineer rather than of the police.

The Calgary Herald has commenced a big undertaking when it sends a representative on horseback through the parts of Alberta not touched by railroads. The idea is to give the Government and the people information that will lead to more railways in the Province. If it succeeds the Herald will receive the thanks of the people. Even in its attempt it deserves great credit.

If Stabfield was elected in N.S. by fraud, as claimed by the Liberal papers, he should receive no consideration. The Conservatives want no such elections.

Dry Farming in Semi-Arid Districts

(By W. Frank McClure, in Scientific American.)

A great deal of attention is being attracted at this time to a system of agriculture known as "dry farming," which is being successfully used in the semi-arid districts of Colorado and other Western States in advance of extensive schemes of irrigation. By "semi-arid" is meant a country in which the annual rainfall is less than twenty and more than eight inches. By dry farming many thousands of acres, which, on account of their location, could never be reached by irrigation ditches are reclaimed. Some of this acreage has long been styled "grazing lands" and considered useful for nothing else.

"Dry farming," briefly stated, consists in so preparing the soil in semi-arid regions that it will catch what little rainfall there is, and store it within reach of the roots of the plants to be grown. This, as might be supposed, requires a firm, solid foundation beneath the soil. The soil above is kept firm and loose and acts as a mulch, keeping the moisture from escaping into the atmosphere, much as a brick or plant keeps the ground directly under it moist even in a beating sun. With such preparation of the soil, grazing lands will often yield as high as 40 to 50 bushels to the acre, or more than the yield of the Eastern states, where the natural rainfall is adequate.

The last two years have witnessed the greatest progress in the new plan of reclamation. Not only is "dry farming" being extensively employed in Colorado, Kansas, and Nebraska, where it was first introduced, but in eastern Washington, Oregon, Wyoming, Idaho and Utah, where heretofore great tracts of prairie land could, in many instances be bought as low as fifty cents an acre.

The first experiments in this line date back more than a decade. The founder of the method is Prof. H. W. Campbell of Nebraska, under whose personal direction today are the large model farms in the West, illustrating the marvellous accomplishments of "dry farming." Five years ago the Department of Agriculture began to lend its assistance in the matter, carrying on investigations as to the localities in which "dry farming" will bring the best results. The department is also searching in many parts of the world for kinds of alfalfa and wheat and other plants which will yield the largest returns with a rainfall of less than twenty inches.

As to land, it must be stated that high plateaus or rolling hills afford a better supply of rain to be stored by "dry farming" methods than do the valleys, and they are therefore usually chosen first.

The accompanying photographs were made at Longmond, Colorado, where many thousands of acres are cultivated. This State is taking particular interest in development along these lines. Within the past year Gov. McDonald called together a congress of "dry farmers." Many ranches are being broken up to give place to the new system of farming, for it does not pay to raise cattle at the present prices at which this land is selling. In fact, much of the upland country is being turned into a veritable garden.

The first operation in the preparation of the soil is plowing. This must be deep. A disk or a moldboard plow may be used, depending on the character of the ground. One effect of the deep plowing is to provide an adequate reservoir for the storage of the rainfall. Gang plows with twelve or sixteen plowshares in each are a common sight. These plowsare drawn by traction engines, as shown in the photograph. Steam plowing helps out wonderfully in this work. In some of the Western States it would be out of the question to secure sufficient men and teams to accomplish the plowing of the hundreds of thousands of acres annually being reclaimed by "dry farming." Steam plowing costs less than half as much as plowing with teams. It is not unusual for one plowing outfit to turn 3,000 acres of sod into cultivated land in the season. Two men are needed to operate the engine, besides a teamster and team for hauling fuel.

A sub-surface packer follows the plow, drawn by the same traction engine as the plow. This packer is similar in shape to a disk plow, except that it has ten wheels. These wedge-shaped wheels or disks are 18 inches in diameter, and are arranged vertically on a shaft six inches a...

The object of the sub-surface packer is to firm the soil. A smooth roller if used for this purpose would have the effect of packing the surface soil rather than that of the sub-surface. The wheels of the packer, however, are so arranged that they firm the soil in the lower portions of the furrow, restoring capillarily where plowing has arrested it. A smoothing harrow next follows, leaving a pulverized layer on top, which prevents the moisture from below from reaching the surface and evaporating.

The constant care and working of the soil on which the crops are to be raised is said to be equally important with the rainfall itself. The pulverized ground must not be allowed to pack or break in any event. To avoid this, the harrow, is run over it after each rain. The working of the soil begins several months before seeding, and must also be continued after seeding.

A great many people cultivating their land under the new system, aim to raise but one crop from the same ...ound in two years. They divide this land into two equal parts, and use one part for crops one year, and the other the next. This admits of what is known as "summer culture" on the part not in use, and the storing of a season's rains in the soil reservoir. Again, it may be feasible to allow the land to produce crops for two years, and alternate one year of "summer culture." Where crops are planted every year, plowing must quickly follow the operation of harvesing, the aim being to save all possible moisture in the ground and simultaneously prepare the soil for the next rains.

It is confidently expected that the time will come when land on which but a ten-inch rainfall in now recorded will be made to blossom as the rose. This will be accomplished by further advances in scientific discovery. At present, districts having less that fourteen inches rainfall are not regarded as profitable. An educational movement for the scientific study of "dry farming" has already been talked of. Not all attempts at "dry farming" are a success, nor will be until the mass of the people using it understand the principles on which it must be carried out. The rainfall varies in different years, and this emergencymust be met in a scientific way. Conditions differ also in different localities.

The establishment experiment stations will greatly assist different sections. Several are to be established it is understood, this year. At Cheyenne, Wyoming, the Board of Trade not long ago established an experimental station, assisted by the government and the railroads. It was here found that, although Cheyenne is at an elevation of 6,000 feet above the sea level, wheat, rye, barley, oats, alfalfa, field peas, and sugar beets can be grown profitably. As a result of the experiments the ranchmen in Wyoming are buying thousands of dollars' worth of farming machinery, and are breaking up large acreages and sowing alfalfa and other grasses and grains. Ranches are also being sold for colonization purposes.

Horse Breeding.

Paper Read Before Annual Meeting of the North Dakota Live Stock Association.

To begin with, we may ask the question; does it pay the average farmer to raise horses? Like any other business, the horse breeding industry must be understood to make a success of it, and with the material to work from and the general environments of our North Dakota farmers it seems that this most important branch of agriculture looks very promising.

It is important that every farmer should understand the horse, and he cannot help but learn if he works in the right direction; and here we may say that one of the best starts that could be made is to send the boy to the Agricultural College, and together with this, subscribe for good agricultural and live stock papers.

A great many farmers put up the argument that it is too hard to get a start. But why? Like all other branches of farming, you cannot expect to start at the top notch, but do the best you can, and with a few years of intelligent management the harder part will be overcome. A certain number of horses are necessary on every farm according to the amount of ground under cultivation, and why not let some of them be brood mares? There is usually a break in the season after the crop is in, and it could be so arranged that foaling time would come during this period, say in June or July.

In choosing our material to start with, let us not pay so much attention to breed as to quality; but let it be understood here, that we are dealing with the work horse only. Like begets like, and in order to get the desired offspring, we must have the dam and sire as near perfect as we can. Of course, it is not practical to put too much stress on this regarding the dam, as the average farmer cannot afford to pay a fancy price for the pure bred mare; but get the best type you can of the breed you wish to follow. It is a common thing to find men who think that any old broken down, curbed, spavined and deformed mare will do to breed. This is a great mistake and to buy such an animal would be a poor investmenti because as we have said before, she should be able to do her share alongside the geldings nearly all year; so why not consider the importance of soundness for work purposes alone? However, we shall pay more attention to soundness when it comes to the sire.

The next question arises: Can we find suitable stallions. This is one of the greatest barriers to the breeding industry and one that can and only will be overcome by persistent work along the lines of intelligent breeding. By all means, breed to the highest type of a stallion obtainable, always aiming to mate your mares with horses of breeding nearest their own. That is, for example, if your mare is a Percheron breeding, mate her with a pure bred Percheron stallion.

In choosing a horse of good breeding we do not merely pick one that has a flashy certificate, but may regard the pedigree as a safeguard and guarantee that the required number of top crosses are there, but it would be much better to depend upon the honesty and reliability of the breeder and the sire's ancestry. Outside of pedigree the sire should be possessed of the desired individuality and conformation, and free from hereditary and communicable disease. A certain weakness of the sire may not show in the offspring, but the law of hereditary is so strong that the natural tendency would be for the young to develop a predisposition to the same unsoundness. As an example of hereditary, we may recall a case, applying to color that came under the observation of the writer. A certain grade Percheron stallion of un-known breeding, although gray in color, invariably got sorrel colts, regardless of the color of the dam. Had the breeding of this horse been known this sorrel color may have been traced back to some of his ancestors.

A great many of our farmers have good stallions of their own and no doubt they would be more plentiful if there were more good mares in thecountry. Thus, does it not stand to reason that if we do the best we can with the material at hand, we will, in a few years, be able to take our mares to some neighboring stallion or exchange with some neighbor in that vicinity? A great many more farmers might profitably invest in a young stallion; even though it be only a yearling, the cost of raising is so small that trouble and expense would be many times doubted in the increase in value after a couple of years' development.

To all those attempting breeding the care of the pregnant mare should be studied. It has been the experience of the writer that a mare in foal can work right along in the field, under the management of a careful hand, without the least danger. Let each mare be provided with a well bedded box stall, and for safety, in the way of preventing injury, she should have access to the stall some time before the foal is expected. Of course if the date of foaling is kept track of, as it should be, the mare is not too badly needed, she may be turned out to pasture, as there is no place betterthan the clean prairie grass. In case work is stopped and no pasture is available, by all means have a paddock where exercise can be taken at liberty; at any rate, see to it that the mare does not stand in idleness several days before foaling. It would be no more than humane to give the dam at least two weeks rest after foaling, and this can best be taken in the pasture. When you wish to start her to work again, take her in the box stall with the youngster, and by all means leave the colt there when the dam goes to the field. Of course she will be uneasy on the start, and the little fellow will fret more or less, but if there are two colts, let them run in a stall together, or perhaps some old gentle driver may be tied in sight of the colt, and this will be a great deal of company to him. On the start it would be well to let the colt nurse at least once before meal times, and then he may be given drinking water and small feeds of crushed oats while the dam is out. In a short time he will take enough nourishment this way so that he can easily wait until noon or evening for his mother. Later on he may be fitted with a halter and when the dam goes out, can be tied up a little while each day, and will become gentle, so that when breaking time comes the hardest part is over. It is well to have a paddock in connection with the box stalls where each day the colts may run and play at their leisure. After having considered the dam's side it may be well to talk over a few of the practical points concerning the sire.

The average man thinks because his stallion represents a large amount of money, he should be kept in idleness, and the chances are that when purchased the horse is loaded down with fat and on account of his being in a show condition it is the desire of the owner to keep him looking nice. This is decidedly wrong and, on the contrary, let him be in a good, solid condition and kept so by giving him work, then, if the horse is sound, you may expect to get his full percentage of foals. It is not always necessary that the stallion go into the field, as around the farm there are usually odd jobs, such as hauling manure, stones, etc. Should conditions be such that this kind of exercise is impossible, let him have four miles a day on the road. During the hot months this would be most beneficial in the cool of the morning. He should have a large, clean, box stall fitted with two doors. The one may be for convenience in leading him in and out, and may be in two sections so that the upper part may be left open during the daytime, and for safety a strong bar of 2x8 should be adjusted across at about the top of the bottom door. Let the other door open into a strong paddock, where he may run at his own free will, the door only being closed in cold or stormy weather. Let the feed consists of good, clean hay and sound oats with an addition of a handful of bran mixed in the feed. Many horses will relish a feed of good, crisp carrots once a week and they are beneficial in toning up the system and tend to keep the bowels in a healthy condition.

By each farmer doing a small amount of intelligent work along the lines of breeding, it should become a pleasant and profitable part of his agricultural interests.

SUNSHINE FURNACE
And Coal Economy

COMBUSTION taking place in the dome or top chamber of furnace fire-pot is the result of air and heat mingling with fumes. This combustion produces heat-energy, which the radiating surfaces above and around fire-pot absorb or draw in and then deflect or throw off. Incoming cold air receives this heat-energy, the result being heated air. Now, if the combustion takes place at a faster rate than the radiating surfaces can absorb and deflect, the surplus heat-power will pass up the chimney or into cellar—a waste of coal.

There is no waste of coal in "Sunshine" Furnace. Circuit of radiator is so complete, and air-circulating space so large, that every bit of heat-energy is quickly absorbed and quickly deflected on the circulating cold air, which is thus quickly heated and ascends through the hot-air pipes to rooms above.

The check-draft of a furnace is situated on the smoke-pipe. When this draft is closed—especially on an "ordinary" furnace—heat particles can escape up chimney. When check-draft is opened the incoming cold air from the cellar drives all heat particles back into furnace proper. If the grates and fire-pot of furnace are not constructed properly, there's a clogging and gathering of ashes, and fire does not burn up readily. If no provision is made for gas escape, the check-draft must be left closed indefinitely—a waste of coal.

There is no waste of coal in "Sunshine" Furnace. No clogging can take place in the 4-piece grate, no ashes can gather on the straight fire-pot walls, and the Automatic Gas Damper makes every provision for the escape of gas; consequently, check-draft can be opened shortly after coaling and all heat-energy saved for radiation.

The Times for Job Printing

Simply Patriotism

Naturally very small people cannot understand the stand of The Times in resenting an appeal abroad by private Canadians for relief. They feel relieved of all responsibility in the matter when they are informed that everything is not on the surface.

But that The Times has no monopoly on this higher patriotism is shown by the following editorial from the Calgary Herald dealing with the same subject:

"A recent issue of the weekly edition of the London Times contains another of those servile appeals for financial aid for Canada which are so objectionable to independent men in this country. This time the offender is the lord bishop of New Westminster, who happened to be in London attending the Lambeth conference when the Fernie fire took place. His lordship promptly "wrote to the Times" drawing attention of philanthropic England to Canada's need for aid. After reciting the statements in the cable report and the efforts being made on this side to relieve the sufferers the bishop proceeds: "But all the world knows that we are a poor, struggling community. And so I would also appeal for immediate help from the United Kingdom, which would be received with peculiar gratitude. I speak from personal knowledge of the leading men in Kootenay when I express my conviction that whatever is sent to them will be used wisely to the best advantage. In no part of the empire is love for the motherland stronger than it is in Canada. Wherever I go through my diocese I meet with men who did 'their duty' in South Africa."

"With all due respect to his lordship's position and good intentions he should be informed that he holds no begging brief for the people of Canada. This country is not a "poor struggling community." It is a wealthy and progressive country which is quite capable of looking after its own people. The spontaneous offers of aid which came from cities in other countries were welcomed in the spirit in which they were made, but no one has a right to solicit charity for this dominion. And, above all, Canada does not want England to give money to Fernie sufferers because Canadians did their "duty" in South Africa. The bishop's appeal was unwarranted in all respects but the reference to South Africa was in decidedly bad taste."

The Spectacle.

Again Calgary has discovered natural gas.

This is the only instance on record where anything can be discovered more than once. In fact this discovery has been a fortnightly occurrence in Calgary ever since Mr. Dingman the manager of the gas drilling company got his publicity genius working with his drills.

Just one month less than a year ago a full page heading in one of the Calgary papers read, "Natural Gas Discovered Yesterday Afternoon." Last week another announcement read, "Natural Gas Discovered Yesterday." So you see Calgary can discover gas any old time and keep the citizens interested. It is supposed that the heading is kept ready for such frequent emergencies as the discovery of natural gas. Calgary as a discoverer, is a bunch of Columbuses, Cartiers, Livingstones, Stanleys, etceteras, all rolled into one—with this advantage that Calgary (or rather the Calgary papers) can sit still and make its discoveries right off the reel, as soon as any dullness in the situation presents itself. Calgary's continuous vaudeville performance in the line of natural gas is one of the bright spots in its bright career.

Well, last September the Calgar announcements read in part: "It was after this careful and thorough examination that Mr. Dingman came to the conclusion that without any shadow of a doubt the long sought for prize had been discovered and they had really reached the natural gas. Although gas has been expected for the last few months the actual discovery came as a surprise. The discovery was made at about the distance Mr. Dingman expected to find the gas. Indicators at present point to a more successful flow of gas than at any well upon which he has worked. The wells are more productive than the Hat." And so it went along. There were whole columns of it. The price per light was worked out. Mr. Dingman came out in bold type and what he didn't know about natural gas, the natural facilities provided by Calgary atmosphere supplied through citizens who have passed through Medicine Hat on the cars.

And while all this excitement was at its height, while the newspapers all over America were heralding Calgary's good fortune, I, without laying any claim to cleverness announced it as a Lawsonian frost. Well, it was. There wasn't enough gas to keep burning until some of the duped visitors got out to the wells. Somebody even shut off the gas in the papers. The well was abandoned and a new one sunk.

Now the well is different. Don't confuse the discovery at the other 2,800 foot level with this one. This is no ordinary well. To be sure it is the same Mr. Dingman. It's not Smith or Jones—It's Dingman the publicity talker, the man who has to get the funds out of the shareholders of the company or stop his work. And just imagine what he would do without the steady job of discovering gas for Calgary. Yes, sir, this is a different well. Gas has been discovered at 600 feet and as one Calgary paper announced, "and plenty of it." But it's too bad, it had to have to announce that "drilling will be resumed as vigorously as ever." Why "resume" if there's "plenty of it." That is the story that will sound like music in the ears of the Calgary people," says the excited paper. Calgary must be Heaven, since this music is just about continuous. This time, too, "it was expected that gas would be encountered after that depth had been reached, but it was not expected that there would be such a flow of gas as turned out to be the case." And then innocently the article proceeds: "It startled the men for a moment. They had hardly expected it." But perhaps it means the newspapers had expected it but the drillers had not. The internal pressure of gas on the newspaper reporters would prepare them for the worst.

"And yet there it was coming up the big 18-inch drive pipe." From this it is to be understood that it came up in lumps and made life dangerous. The men no doubt cut off chunks to send to dear friends at home.

"They applied a match,"—now this is the crowning proof—"and the flames leaped to the air." There isn't any doubt but those flames haven't come down from their leap yet. It was the record high jump.

"A special providence must have hovered over the directors as they chose the location for the new well." Any hovering over that well would be dangerous with leaping flames and bounding hopes and high-flown descriptions. It must have been bad enough on the ground when those things lit again, without hovering around where you'd get 'em on the fly.

"A real gas-bearing strata has evidently been struck." This is no gold brick like the other; it is a real find, one that has the proper bite and ring. "Before long we will hear that gas has been found in paying commercial quantity." Mr. Dingman's "hopes are about to be realized." "The drilling will go ahead until the required depth is reached. In Calgary it is only a matter of depth not of gas. We are not told what the depth is, but, it is required anyway, whatever it is. Six hundred feet is too shallow a well to blow about, so it is to be continued to a depth befitting Calgary's solidity. Just between ourselves, it may be that the contamination of the surface gas is feared unless about 10,000 feet is gone downwards.

Then, oddly enough after all these expectations realized, the Herald says: Mr. Dingman "was more than surprised to find it." Mr. Dingman must have lost the thread of his story. But then that grand optimist repeats his words of a year ago; this gas indicates a flow large enough for commercial purpose, "as nearly as I can figure it out." Well Mr. Dingman's experience in figuring for natural gas gives him the right to talk as an expert by this time. And then a daring reporter got up on a fence post, turned his ass on the pipe end and asked in trembling excitement: "Is the gas still coming." Naturally he expected it to be out for lunch, or across the road looking at a traveller's samples, or playing hide and seek in the gravel bed below. But Mr. Dingman genially came to his rescue: "Yes, and the well may give off gas for a very long time." Now how dangerous! Of course the reporter saw the hopelessness of waiting for the gas eructations to stop immediately and went home leaving his telephone number. Mr. Dingman told the Herald, too, that they were going to the required depth. This, depth, naturally, he is keeping to himself, since Edmonton and Lethbridge would then know how far to go. Even Medicine Hat might "discover" the Calgary special brand of natural gas.

"The gas was lighted and allowed to burn for a considerable time and a large flame was the result." After a "considerable time" somebody (Mr. Dingman probably) blew it out so that there would be some left to show the directors as an inducement to more loose purse strings. The "large flame" is specific but indemnite in detail. Undoubtedly the reporter on the fence post could see it with his glasses or he wouldn't have said so. "In order not to interfere with the work the flame was smothered." What cowards these men must be!

There will be several more "discoveries" I'm inclined to think before the escape of gas will be dangerous to the climate. One will be that by the time gas is discovered in Calgary in large quantities the money spent in getting it will make the price of the "discovery" too high for ordinary use. A benevolent directorate, and a clever manager may continue the "discoveries" until there are no more spots left to make holes in.

Land Without Jails.

The people of Iceland are fully a thousand years behind the rest of the world in their customs. It is a quaint, old-time civilization that will be transformed and lost when the modern spirit enters. As everybody knows, the purest Teutonic tongue is spoken in Iceland, and the same isolation which has kept the language from contamination has preserved society in much of its pristine simplicity.

If the twentieth century finds men living as they did in the tenth anywhere in the world, it is in Iceland. The head of the family sees his sons and grandsons living around him, tilling the ancestral fields. Through the summer they till the hay fields together, and through the long, dark winter they feed their cattle and sheep and spin and knit, and read aloud. A journey to the nearest town is a serious matter, occupying several days.

But a journey in Iceland is one of the most picturesque of adventures. With no railways, all travel and transportation must be carried on by means of ponies. And every conceivable thing does the sturdy Iceland pony carry. You will see them linked together in groups of 20, each hidden by a heap of hay or bulging with great packs of dried fish.

Or you will see them on the homeward march from town bearing a stove or dragging beams of lumber. In fact, these little beasts frequently carry a load greater in bulk than themselves.

It is a sorry day for the traveller when he leaves his ship, and starts inland, on a pony. First, there is the rainy weather. A testy wanderer once asked his guide: "Does it rain here every day in the year?" "No," replied the honest guide, "some days it snows." Sooner or later every day you have to face a storm, and a drenching one. Then there is the gait of the ponies. Too shrewd to gallop over the rough, dangerous paths, the little beasts trot; and as they have no more resilence than milking stools, the first eight or ten hours leave one in a state of collapse. But homely comforts ends the day, for every farmhouse is the home of hospitality. Just when you feel you can stand it no longer and must "shoot" your pony and proceed on foot, you find yourself entering a peaceful vale.

Men and women in long rows are raking up the fragrant new-mown grass—it is the chief labor of the farm, for grass is the only forage crop—flocks and herds are coming home, ducks swim in the stream and chickens are scratching in the flower-besprinkled turf on the house roofs. But the farmer is never too busy to give you supper and a bed—and that of the best—brook trout and most excellent coffee.

One's first approach to an Iceland farmhouse is disconcerting. The building seems so tiny and dark; its few windows are so small and its stone and peat walls look so prison-like. One believes one's self to be entering a hovel and is surprised at the cleanliness and the evidence of culture presently to be disclosed. Indeed, it may be said that poverty is the mark of Iceland life that makes the deepest impression on the visitor.

Strange as it may seem the poverty of Iceland has not resulted in sloth or ignorance. In no country in the world is the percentage of illiteracy so low. Actually the whole population is educated—and well educated. Around the fires of the long winter nights the country's patriotic songs are repeated, the old tales retold and the old songs sung.

Every community boasts its poet or essayist. Thus the humble, pastoral life, so cramped by poverty, is not sordid or base, but full of romance and cultivation. It is not easy to say what is the exact relation between the study of literature and the state of morals. But a story they tell in Reykavik, the capital, sheds some light on the subject.

Many years ago, when modern ideas were being introduced by scholars who had travelled abroad, it was thought proper to erect a prison. So the jail was built—a large structure of stone. But year after year passed and the prison stood empty. There were no criminals to put in. Finally some practical person suggested putting it to some use. And the thing was made into a school for girls.

Crop Reports.

(Winnipeg Free Press.)

Wetaskiwin, Alta., Aug. 25.—From Langham to Edmonton, some 327 miles many varieties of crops were found and the conditions vary greatly. Half the mileage lies in Saskatchewan and half in Alberta. The former half is characterized by a lighter and earlier crop, while in the Alberta section the crop will average much heavier and is somewhat later. At the present time about half the crop is in the stook and 90 per cent of it will be there at the end of this week. The frost damage extends over all this territory but the sum total of the damage will not be very great and will not equal the decrease in yield through drought which the eastern portion suffered. A severe hail storm did considerable damage in a part of this territory destroying the crops on a narrow strip of country running east and west some 80 miles north of the railroad. The damage was heaviest in the vicinity of Innisfail, Alberta. I consider the crop dealt with in this summary had less to contend with last spring and suffered less from drought in July than that dealt with in my last summary so I anticipate a higher yield all round. The oats cover fully half the area dealt with and show a marked improvement. The wheat over this territory should average 22 bushels to the acre, oats 40 and barley 35. Some points will be much better than that. The sample will certainly be lowered by frost but not to the extent that many anticipate and the feed crop will show more damage than the wheat. If the whole value of the crop is lowered more than five cents a bushel by the frosts up here I shall be surprised and disappointed.

The Hound of the Baskervilles

Another Adventure of Sherlock Holmes.

For a moment or two I sat breathless, hardly able to believe my ears. Then my senses and my voice came back to me, while a crushing weight of responsibility seemed in an instant to be lifted from my soul. That cold, incisive, ironical voice could belong to but one man in all the world.

"Holmes!" I cried—"Holmes!"

"Come out," said he, "and please be careful with the revolver."

I stooped under the rude lintel, and there he sat upon a stone outside, his grey eyes dancing with amusement as they fell upon my astonished features. He was thin and worn, but clear and alert, his keen face bronzed by the sun and roughened by the wind. In his tweed suit and cloth cap he looked like any other tourist upon the moor, and he had contrived, with that catlike love of personal cleanliness which was one of his characteristics, that his chin should be as smooth and his linen as perfact as if he were in Baker Street.

"I never was more glad to see anyone in my life," said I, as I wrung him by the hand.

"Or more astonished, eh?"

"Well, I must confess to it."

"The surprise was not all on one side, I assure you. I had no idea that you had found my occasional retreat, still less that you were inside it, until I was within twenty paces of the door."

"My footprint, I presume?"

"No, Watson; I fear that I could not undertake to recognize your footprint amid all the footprints of the world. If you seriously desire to deceive me you must change your tobacconist; for when I see the stub of a cigarette marked Bradley, Oxford Street, I know that my friend Watson is in the neighborhood. You will see it there beside the path. You threw it down, no doubt, at that supreme moment when you charged into the empty hut."

"Exactly."

"I thought as much—and knowing your admirable tenacity I was convinced that you were sitting in ambush, a weapon within reach, waiting for the tenant to return. So you actually thought that I was the criminal?"

"I did not know who you were, but I was determined to find out."

"Excellent, Watson! And how did you localize me? You saw me, perhaps, on the night of the convict hunt, when I was so imprudent as to allow the moon to rise behind me?"

"Yes, I saw you then."

"And have no doubt searched all the huts until you came to this one?"

"No, your boy had been observed, and that gave me a guide where to look."

"The old gentleman with the telescope, no doubt. I could not make it out when first I saw the light flashing upon the lens." He rose and peeped into the hut. "Ha, I see that Cartwright has brought up some supplies. What's this paper? So you have been to Coombe Tracey, have you?"

"Yes."

"To see Mrs. Laura Lyons?"

"Exactly."

"Well done! Our researches have evidently been running on parallel lines, and when we unite our results I expect we shall have a fairly full knowledge of the case."

"Well, I am glad from my heart that you are here, for indeed the responsibility and the mystery were both becoming too much for my nerves. But how in the name of wonder did you come here, and what have you been doing? I thought that you were in Baker Street working out that case of blackmailing."

"That was what I wished you to think."

"Then you use me, and yet do not trust me!" I cried, with some bitterness. "I think that I have deserved better at your hands, Holmes."

"My dear fellow, you have been invaluable to me in this as in many other cases, and I beg that you will forgive me if I have seemed to play a trick upon you. In truth, it was partly for your own sake that I did it, and it was my appreciation of the danger which you ran which led me to come down and examine the matter for myself. Had I been with Sir Henry and you it is confident that my point of view would have been the same as yours, and my presence would have warned our very formidable opponents to be on their guard. As it is, I have been able to get about as I could not possibly have done had I been living in the Hall, and I remain an unknown factor in the business, ready to throw in all my weight at a critical moment."

"But why keep me in the dark?"

"For you to know could not have helped us, and might possibly have led to my discovery. You would have wished to tell me something, or in your kindness you would have brought me out some comfort or other, and so an unnecessary risk would be run. I brought Cartwright down with me—you remember the little chap at the Express Office—and he has seen after my simple wants; a loaf of bread and a clean collar. What does man want more? He has given me an extra pair of eyes upon a very active pair of feet, and both have been invaluable."

"Then my reports have all been wasted!"—My voice trembled as I recalled the pains and the pride with which I had composed them.

Holmes took a bundle of papers from his pocket.

"Here are your reports, my dear fellow, and very well thumbed, I assure you. I made excellent arrangements, and they are only delayed one day upon their way. I must compliment you exceedingly upon the zeal and the intelligence which you have shown over an extraordinary difficult case."

I was still rather raw over the deception which had been practised upon me, but the warmth of Holmes's praise drove my anger from my mind. I felt also in my heart that he was right in what he said and that it was really best for our purpose that I should not have known that he was upon the moor.

"That's better," said he, seeing the shadow rise from my face. "And now tell me the result of your visit to Mrs. Laura Lyons—it was not difficult for me to guess that it was to see her that you had gone, for I am already aware that she is the one person in Coombe Tracey who might be of service to us in the matter. In fact, if you had not gone to-day it is exceedingly probable that I should have gone to-morrow."

The sun had set and dusk was settling over the moor. The air had turned chill and we withdrew into the hut for warmth. There, sitting together in the twilight, I told Holmes of my conversation with the lady. So interested was he that I had to repeat some of it twice before he was satisfied.

"This is most important," said he, when I had concluded. "It fills up a gap which I had been unable to bridge, in this most complex affair. You are aware, perhaps, that a close intimacy exists between this lady and the man Stapleton?"

"I did not know of a close intimacy."

"There can be no doubt about the matter. They meet, they write, there is a complete understanding between them. Now, this puts a very powerful weapon into our hands. If I could only use it to detach his wife——"

"His wife?"

"I am giving you some information now, in return for all that you have given me. The lady who has passed here as Miss Stapleton is in reality his wife."

"Good heavens, Holmes! Are you sure of what you say? How could he have permitted Sir Henry to fall in love with her?"

"Sir Henry's falling in love could do no harm to anyone except Sir Henry. He took particular care that Sir Henry did not make love to her, as you have yourself observed. I repeat that the lady is his wife and not his sister."

"But why this elaborate deception?"

"Because he foresaw that she would be very much more useful to him in the character of a free woman."

All my unspoken instincts, my vague suspicions, suddenly took shape and centred upon the naturalist. In that impassive, colorless man, with his straw hat and his butterfly-net, I seemed to see something terrible—a creature of infinite patience and craft, with a smiling face and a murderous heart.

"It is he, then, who is our enemy—it is he who dogged us in London?"

"So I read the riddle."

"And the warning—it must have come from her!"

"Exactly."

The shape of some monstrous evil, half seen, half guessed, loomed through the darkness which had girt me so long.

"But are you sure of this Holmes? How do you know that the woman is his wife?"

"Because he so far forgot himself as to tell you a true piece of autobiography upon the occasion when he first met you, and I daresay he has many a time regretted it since. He was once a schoolmaster in the North of England. Now, there is no one more easy to trace than a schoolmaster. There are scholastic agencies by which one may identify any man who has been in the profession. A little investigation showed me that a school had come to grief under atrocious circumstances, and that the man who had owned it—the name was different—had disappeared with his wife. The descriptions agreed. When I learned that the missing man was devoted to entomology the identification was complete."

The darkness was rising, but much was still hidden by the shadows.

"If this woman is in truth his wife, where does Mrs. Laura Lyons come in?" I asked.

"That is one of the points upon which your own researches have shed a light. Your interview with the lady has cleared the situation very much. I did not know about a projected divorce between herself and her husband. In that case, regarding Stapleton as an unmarried man, she counted no doubt upon becoming his wife."

"And when she is undeceived?"

"Why, then we may find the lady of service. It must be our first duty to see her—both of us—to-morrow. Don't you think, Watson, that you are away from your charge rather long? Your place should be at Baskerville Hall."

The last red streaks had faded away in the west and night had settled upon the moor. A few faint stars were gleaming in a violet sky.

"One last question, Holmes," I said, as I rose. "Surely there is no need of secrecy between you and me. What is the meaning of it all? What is he after?"

Holmes's voice sank as he answered:—

"It is murder, Watson—refined, cold-blooded, deliberate murder. Do not ask me for particulars. My nets are closing upon him, even as his are upon Sir Henry, and with your help he is already almost at my mercy. There is but one danger which can threaten us. It is that he should strike before we are ready to do so. Another day—two at the most—and I have my case complete, but until then guard your charge as closely as ever a fond mother watched her ailing child. Your mission to-day has justified itself, and yet I could almost wish that you had not left his side—Hark!"

A terrible scream—a prolonged yell of horror and anguish burst out of the silence of the moor. That frightful cry turned the blood to ice in my veins.

"Oh, my God!" I gasped. "What is it? What does it mean?"

Holmes had sprung to his feet, and I saw his dark, athletic outline at the door of the hut, his shoulders stooping, his head thrust forward, his face peering into the darkness.

It was a prostrate man, face downwards.

"Hush!" he whispered. "Hush!"

The cry had been loud on account of its vehemence, but it had pealed out from somewhere far off on the shallowy plain. Now it burst upon our ears, nearer, louder, more urgent than before.

"Where is it?" Holmes whispered; and I knew from the thrill of his voice that he, the man of iron, was shaken to the soul. "Where is it, Watson?"

"There, I think." I pointed into the darkness.

"No, there!"

Again the agonized cry swept through the silent night, louder and much nearer than ever. And a new sound mingled with it, a deep, muttered rumble, musical and yet menacing, rising and falling like the low, constant murmur of the sea.

"The hound!" cried Holmes. "Come, Watson, come! Great heavens, if we are too late!"

He had started running swiftly over the moor, and I had followed at his heels. But now from somewhere among the broken ground immediately in front of us there came one last despairing yell, and then a dull, heavy thud. We halted and listened. Not another sound broke the heavy silence of the windless night.

I saw Holmes put his hand to his forehead like a man distracted. He stamped his feet upon the ground.

"He has beaten us, Watson. We are too late."

"No, no, surely not!"

"Fool that I was to hold my hand. And you Watson, see what comes of abandoning your charge! But, by Heaven, if the worst has happened, we'll avenge him!"

Blindly we ran through the gloom, blundering against boulders, forcing our way through gorse bushes, panting up hills and rushing down slopes, heading always in the direction whence those dreadful sounds had come. At every rise Holmes looked eagerly round him, but the shadows were thick upon the moor, and nothing moved upon its dreary face.

"Can you see anything?"

"Nothing."

"But, hark, what is that?"

A low moan had fallen upon our ears. There it was again upon our left! On that side a ridge of rocks ended in a sheer cliff which overlooked a stone-strewn slope. On its jagged face was spread-eagled some dark, irregular object. As we ran towards it the vague outline hardened into a definite shape. It was a prostrate man face downwards upon the ground, the head doubled under him at a horrible angle, the shoulders rounded and the body hunched together as if in the act of throwing a summersault. So grotesque was the attitude that I could not for the instant realize that that moan had been the passing of his soul. Not a whisper, not a rustle, rose now from the dark figure over which we stooped. Holmes laid his hand upon him, and held it up again, with an exclamation of horror. The gleam of the match which he struck shone upon his clotted fingers and upon the ghastly pool which widened slowly from the crushed skull of the victim. And it shone upon something else which turned our hearts sick and faint within us—the body of Sir Henry Baskerville!

There was no chance of either of us forgetting that peculiar ruddy tweed suit—the very one which he had worn on the first morning that we had seen him in Baker Street. We caught the one clear glimpse of it, and then the match flickered and went out, even as the hope had gone out of our souls. Holmes groaned, and his face glimmered white through the darkness.

"The brute! the brute!" I cried, with clenched hands. "Oh, Holmes, I shall never forgive myself for having left him to his fate."

"I am more to blame than you, Watson. In order to have my case well rounded and complete, I have thrown away the life of my client. It is the greatest blow which has befallen me in my career. But how could I know—how could I know—that he would risk his life alone upon the moor in the face of all my warnings?"

"That we should have heard his screams—my God, those screams!—and yet have been unable to save him! Where is this brute of a hound which drove him to his death? It may be lurking among these rocks at this instant. And Stapleton, where is he? He shall answer for this deed."

"He shall. I will see to that. Uncle and nephew have been murdered—the one frightened to death by the very sight of a beast which he thought to be supernatural, the other driven to his end in his wild flight to escape from it. But now we have to prove the connection between the man and the beast. Save from what we heard, we cannot even swear to the existence of the latter, since Sir Henry has evidently died from the fall. But, by heavens, cunning as he is, the fellow shall be in my power before another day is past!"

(To be Continued.)

Who Puts It Up?

Is the Government Supplying The Free Press.

(Winnipeg Telegram.)

In last week's issue of the Winnipeg Saturday Post there was an interesting article dealing with the circulation methods lately adopted by the Manitoba Free Press. This article, which The Telegram reprints in another column, showed that the Free Press, growing desperate from its loss of circulation in the city had been forced to offer its daily paper to the people of Saskatchewan, and to clergymen, secretaries of school districts, station agents and post masters throughout the west, for one dollar a year. As this price represented a loss of at least $1.25 for every subscriber taking advantage of the dollar offer, The Post concluded that the proposition was a violation of the mail privileges, which are intended only for a newspaper's bona fide circulation, and demanded that these privileges be withdrawn.

The Telegram thinks it can add a few important details to the Post's facts, and advance more tangible reasons for the dollar a year proposition than have yet been offered. In the first place, the offer of the daily Free Press for a dollar a year is not limited to the classes above stated. That was only the beginning of the barvain day campaign. It was disappointing, or else regarded as insufficient for the objects in view, and was promptly extended to cover a much wider area.

The Free Press has, within the past two or three years, offered its daily paper to the people of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia for one dollar a year. This is, without doubt, a most significant move. The standard price at which the Winnipeg daily newspapers have been sold, represented a very small margin over the cost of production. It is to be remembered also that within the past year the cost of producing a daily paper in Canada and the United States has been very materially increased. Wages in all the mechanical departments have been advanced, and news print has reached a price that adds enormously to the cost of producing a daily paper.

Many of the leading dailies have been obliged to increase their subscription price in order to meet the enhanced cost of production of their papers. The newspapers of Minneapolis and St. Paul co-operated to advance the cost of their papers to the subscriber. So did the newspaper publishers of Vancouver, and scores of other cities. And so this interesting question arises: If the great dailies of the United States, with their immense resources, have been forced to increase the subscription price of their paper, how is the Manitoba Free Press able to sell its daily paper at one dollar a year, or in other words, reduce the standard price of its morning paper by over eighty per cent.

To this interrogation there can be only one answer—some one or some interests are making good the loss from these dollar a year subscriptions.

As the public may well guess the person or persons who are footing the bill, must have a very strong motive for doing so. It requires no deep scrutiny to reveal the identity of these parties or the motive that inspires their generosity. The Free Press is the property of the Hon. Clifford Sifton. The fortunes of the Hon. Clifford Sifton and those of his brother-in-law, Theodore Burrows, are to a very large extent the product of the timber deals secured under the auspices of the Imperial Pulp company and by Mr. Burrows direct when Mr. Sifton was minister of the interior.

The position of these timber possessions is not just as secure as Mr. Sifton and Brother-in-law Burrows would like to have them. The papers in the transaction have, it is true, been signed, sealed and delivered, but of late some people in parliamentand out of parliament have demanded that the immense public resources fraudulently taken from the people shall be restored to the people. They have pointed out that as property stolen from an individual may be followed and reclaimed so should the millions of dollars of timber limits stolen from the public to enrich the Sifton-Burrows-Fraser combination, be restored to its rightful owners—the public.

The policy of restitution is now being proclaimed from one end of the country to the other. To the Sifton-Burrows-Fraser ring the cry has a sinister meaning. If it continues to gain strength and popularity, the private fortunes that are being realized at the expense of the public, will vanish into thin air. Hence the constant fusilade of abuse and ridicule that the Manitoba Free Press is aiming at H. B. Ames, M.P., the leading advocate of the Doctrine of Restitution. Hence the dollar a year rate, for which the Daily Free Press is being offered to the electors. The fortunes of the family circle have been rudely threatened. They must be saved at all hazards. The public must be urged day in and day out not to listen to this socialistic policy of Restitution. It must be assured that the vast timber possessions which have enriched the family compact were secured in the ordinary course of business, and that it was a mere co-incidence that the brother-in-law of the then minister of the interior chanced to get the lion's share.

This is the task that has been assigned to the Free Press. It is to get its paper in the hands of the people even if it has to give it away. The Dominion elections are at hand. A vote for a Conservative candidate is a vote for Restitution. Therefore the Conservative candidates must be defeated regardless of cost. What signifies the fifteen or twenty thousand dollars per annum the Free Press will lose in the process of supplying its daily paper for a dollar a year. The Free Press will not have to pay the piper. The amount will be made good by the beneficiaries of the Sifton-Burrows timber deals. To them it will be but a drop in the bucket of their profits, and they have the further satisfaction of knowing that it is not their property, but the public's, which is being bled. The Sifton-Burrows ring has figured out that the money they have to put up to enable the Free Press to circulate a dollar a year daily will be money well spent if it secures the return of the Laurier government, and incidentally preserves the profits they have earned from their timber deals.
